Catalogue Description

Symbols, stories, rites, ceremonies, and other aspects of a variety of religious traditions provide insight and, in some cases, models for the task of Christian discipling. Students will construct their own structures for the discipling task based upon these insights and models. Three hours.

Human Religion and the Discipling Task

The religious dimension of a culture provides its people with conceptions of reality and the means for maintaining the force and relevance of those conceptions. Features of a culture’s repertoire such as story, scripture, rites of passage, pilgrimages, worship traditions, social organizations, and other symbolic activities shape the worldview of its people. The cross-cultural study of religion examines the religious dimension of culture with a view to understanding its nature and function. The course assumes that religiousness is a universal aspect of human identity. It also assumes the tools and results of religious studies offer much to Christian discipling. Based on these assumptions, the course explores the relevance of some of the non-verbal forms typical of human religion for the process of discipling. Discipling here means forming persons as individuals and members of communities of faith into the image of God’s son. The course deals almost exclusively with non-verbal forms of discipling.

Goals

1. The student will be able to represent accurately in responses to readings the following concepts:
   1.1 the function of religion in culture according to Zahniser (1997).
   1.2 The meaning of Mircea Eliade’s (1959) homo religiosus and the way in which, according to him, humans sanctify space, time, natural phenomena, and other processes and stages of living; and
   1.3 The meaning of the ritual process as presented by Victor Turner (1971), including the concepts “rites of passage,” “liminality,” and “communitas. ”
   1.4 Dimensions of Mathias Zahniser’s (1997) case for the use of non-verbal means in Christian formation and disciple making such as traditional religious societies, modern theists, divine intimacy and ultimacy, cross-cultural discipling, split-level Christianity, the excluded middle, bonding to meaning, and syncretism.
2. Students will be able to analyze a phenomenon of their own choosing according to one or more of these concepts.

3. Students will gain insight into the relation of discipling with syncretism and community development.

4. Students will gain confidence in their ability to apply this analysis to the task of discipling.

Note: The instructor hopes students will feel free to deal with the materials of the course critically. The analysis and application can be thought of in dialectical terms: the material examined in the seminar may be used to stimulate a more effective discipling process.

Reading Packet

4-MAT Reflections
You will prepare on 4-MAT Reflection for each assigned reading even when more than one chapter or more than one author is assigned. See the document 4mat780.doc posted with this syllabus for specific guidelines for preparing these reflections. With the exception of the first day when it will be due by 5:00 p.m. on that day, your 4-MAT Reflection will be due at the beginning of the class session for which the readings you are reflecting on are assigned. This syllabus indicates in the schedule of class periods when readings are assigned to be discussed.
Class Presentation
Each student will be responsible for a thirty-minute presentation of a discipling procedure or event. This event or process will be the subject of the research paper identified in the following paragraph. Ideally, the student will involve the class in acting out an important part of the discipling procedure.

A Research Paper
Each student or team of students will produce a standard research paper between 20 and 25 pages including notes and bibliography. The paper will present a proposal for a discipling event or process making use of a model growing out of the seminar. Careful attention will be given in the evaluation to form, following the standards set in Slade, 11th Ed. (1999) or any later edition of Slade. Structure will also be important with attention given to thesis statement, use of sources, and the organization of the argument. Papers will be due by 5:00 p.m. on Wednesday, January 30, 2002. The evaluation of the in-class presentation will be averaged with the evaluation of the final paper to equal half of the final grade. In the case of team presentations, all members of the team will receive the grade assigned to the paper and the presentation.

Evaluation
Grades for the course will be based on written responses to the reading assignments (50%), the oral report in class, and the research paper (50%). Late assignments will result in a grade reduction and little or not feedback from the instructor.

Class Schedule by Days
Classes meet daily from January 14 through 25 from 8:00-12:00. It is assumed that students are not taking other classes or independent studies during the time of this class. All assignments, unless otherwise indicated, are to be read before the date on which they are listed in this syllabus. These represent the theoretical meat of the course.

1. Introduction to Discipling with Symbols and Ceremonies

2. Learning from Human Religion

3. The Nature and Function of Symbols

4. The Rite of Passage Ceremony: The Bonding Potential of Liminality

5. The Discipling Potential of Periodic Festivals and Pilgrimage
   Friday 17: The application of the rite of passage structure to space and time. Turner 1995, chapter 5; Roach 1988; Zahniser 1997, chapters 9 and 10.

6. Monday 20: Classes will not meet. This is to Honor Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., martyr for the liberation of his people. We will find a way to make up for these four missed hours.
7. A Theology of discipling with Symbol and Ceremony

8. Student presentations.
   Wednesday-Friday January 22-24: Each student, or student team, will present a cross-cultural discipling method and model to the class. Examples of religious structures relevant to cross-cultural discipling include Qur’an Recitation (Islam), The Village as Microcosm and Macrocosm (the Dogon of W. Africa), Mandala (Buddhist meditative diagram), Messianic Synagogue (Contextualized discipling), and Ashram (Hindu retreats).

9. Bibliography: The bibliography in Zahniser (1997:221-230) will serve as a bibliography for the course. Other bibliography will be provided in connection with lectures and presentations.
