Story: A little four-year-old girl was hungry and here was nothing in the house to eat. She went into the hall bed-room, and knelt, and said, "Jesus, send me a slice of bread and butter." A friend of mine passing through the hall heard her, and sent a grocery boy with a basket of good things. The little girl stood on a chair as, one by one, they were taken out. The last, was a loaf of bread. The child clapped her hands and said, "Mama, wasn't Jesus good? He didn't stop to cut the slices, he sent the whole loaf."

Poem:

Praise God from Whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all we who surely know
That he supplies our every need.
Praise him who is our God indeed.

Prayer: Jesus, I do praise Thee, that Thou art so good.

October 7.

Memory Text: "While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Rom. 5:8.

Story: A little girl was naughty and said "I won't." Her mother said, "You love mama, do it for mama." "I won't do it for mama," she said. "You love you Sunday school teacher, do it for her." "I won't do it for her." "You love Jesus, do it for Jesus." She threw herself down on the floor and wept, and said, "Oh, I will do it for Jesus, because you see he bowed his head and died."

Poem:

Praise God for Jesus' matchless love,
Who came and died and lives above.
To intercede for you and me,
That we may ever like him be.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, help me to remember how Jesus suffered on the cross for me, so that I might love him and live with him forever.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just been reading some Bible stories and have some good news for the cousins. These Bible stories were written by Miss Eggermeyer. There are 233 in the book and they are as good stories as I have ever read. It is a beautiful book, bound in fine cloth, with a lovely picture stamped on the front in orange, blue and gold. With so many stories there have to be a lot of pages to make room for them all, so I looked to see and there are over six hundred pages; and at the end of the book there are 48 pages of questions about the stories that are not counted in the 600. The best part of it is the pictures. No matter how good a story may be some good pictures always make it better. There are over 175 illustrations in this book and fifteen of them are colored.

I haven't had time to read all of the stories but those I have read are fine. Miss Eggermeyer makes everything so plain. One of them that I have just finished is "How King Saul Lost His Throne," and I could understand it every bit just as easy.

I am wondering if some of the cousins would not like to have one of these books? If any of them would like to get one without it costing them one cent I think it can be done. All of the cousins that would like to have one of these fine story books write to me in care of The Pentecostal Herald, Louisville, Ky. Frank Morrison.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again. Have you forgotten me? We are having some nice summer weather here. About two weeks ago we had a revival meeting. Rev. Frank Baker and wife were here a week helping us out. We had a very good meeting.

I received my Testament for selling the Mottoes and thought it was nice. See if any of you cousins can guess my middle name? It begins with I and ends with E and has seven letters in it. How old was Jesus when he was crucified?

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am fourteen years old and am in the sixth grade at school. I am five feet, three inches tall, have red hair, blue eyes, and fair complexion. Margaret G. Williams, I guess your middle name to be Margaret Genevieve Williams; if so, don't forget your promise. I am taking The Herald and love to read it. I belong to the church and go to Sunday school every Sunday I can.

Annie Haywood.
Rt. 2, Mt. Pleasant, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just been reading some good letters in The Herald. Won't you please move over and let me into your pleasant corner? I enjoy reading page ten. Sometime I find some letter from our neighborhood. I sure like for us Kentucky folks to write our part of the letters. We are having a Nazarene meeting at the Methodist Church; a lady is doing the preaching. I like to go and hear her. I live one mile from church and school-house. I go to Sunday school nearly every Sunday. We have a good Sunday school. Some of our neighbors have left and we miss them in our school. Mrs. Ida Marshall was one of our good Sunday school teachers. She went to Ann Arbor, Mich. We would all be glad to have her back again. Mrs. Pollie Taylor is our Sunday school teacher and we all love her. Bro. Turner is our preacher again this year. My birthday is Sept. 7. I am eleven years old.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let another Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I love Jesus and I am trying to live a Christian life. I go to Rivermont Baptist Church. I heard Dr. Morrison at the Rivermont Ave. Methodist Church. He certainly is fine. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it. I want to know if I have a twin? I have brown hair and blue eyes. I am thirteen years of age and my birthday is November 5th. I want all of the boys and girls to write to me. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print.

Ruth Moser.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just been reading some good letters in The Herald. I live in West Virginia on a farm of three hundred acres. I am ten years old and in the sixth grade. I am four feet, eight inches tall. I have dark hair, blue eyes, and have a light complexion. I weigh eighty pounds. Katherine Hill, I guess your middle name to be Virginia. Am I right? If so, make your promise good. I will have to close hoping to hear from some of the boys and girls.

Marie Matlick.
Rt. 2, Newburg, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little West Virginia girl enter your happy band of boys and girls? I have brown eyes and brown curly hair. I am four feet and nine inches. I am nine years old. I go to church. I live on a farm. We have twenty-one acres. I wish some of the girls and boys could guess my first name; it starts with A and ends with A. I wish some of the children would answer my letter.

A. Garnet Summers.
Rt. 4, Box 302, Morgantown, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Louisiana girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is the second time I have written to The Herald. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I teach the primary class and enjoy it very much. I don't see many letters from Louisiana. Wake up, Louisiana girls and boys, and don't let the other states get ahead of us. Will close hoping to see this letter in print.

FALLEN ASLEEP

NEVELS.

The death angel visited the home of Rev. F. O. Nevels, Feb. 6, and claimed him for the home above, where he rests from his labors, but his works will follow him. He died near the church he had served for several years. He will be greatly missed by all who knew him. He loved his Bible and preached the gospel, pure and simple, as he found it in the Word. He was born in Elba, Ala., but his parents moved to Dale county where he was reared and married. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his departure. While we mourn our loss, yet if we are true to Jesus we shall meet him again where partings are no more.

Brother Nevels was 71 years of age last July. He gave his heart to God early in life and lived a consistent Christian. We laid him away in the cemetery at Isagora, his funeral being conducted by Rev. John Howell.

DISCIPLESHIP.

Paul C. Scott, A.M.

A young man came to Christ with running feet,
Seeking the way of eternal life to know;
Expecting some pious maxim to repeat,
Some liturgy, as homeward he would go.

"Keep the commandments!" Jesus began to say,

The young man spoke, "All these have I observed

From my youth up until this very day,
Neither one jot nor tittle have I swerved."

"One thing thou lackest," Jesus then replied,

"Sell that thou hast if thou wouldst perfect be;

Consecrate thy all whate'er betide,
Take up thy cross and come and follow me."

Sorrowful, the young man went away,
The disciples speak, "We have left all for thee!"

"And ye shall receive," I hear the Master say,

"A hundredfold in time and eternity."

THE BIBLE.

Rev. David Judson Starr, D.D.

This Bible's a star in every sky;
Its message gives hope to every man;
Its breath is a life that can never die;
It reveals to man the "Faultless Plan."

In its bed there flows the river of peace,
Whose water of life laves every shore;

It gives to the captive a sweet relief;
Its voice is a Psalm forever more.

It makes the desert a garden of love;
It makes the savage a man of God;
It puts in the lion the heart of a dove;
It gives to the king a righteous rod.

It welcomes the Magdalenes who come;

It offers a crown, when the race is run;

It gives the exile safe passage home;
It brings to the Father his prodigal son.

It quiets the fears of the raving wild;
It gives new strength to the weary and faint;

It blesses the life of the new-born child,

It pillows the head of a dying saint.

Made free from the love of sin, and earth,

Transformed by grace of the heavenly birth,

By its light we will walk through the land of the dead,

In a path that leads to Life's fountain head.

Go, bring in its stead, vain mortal who can,

Something of hope for a dying man;

But until you have something for men who die,

Strike not this sun from our noon-day sky.

The foregoing poem was presented to me by the author. He is now at Christ's Hospital, Cincinnati, Ohio, waiting for the happy summons of his Lord to come home and rest from his labors. Now up in the nineties, he has had a remarkable walk with God, having worked in his vineyard for over half a century. Though nearly blind and almost deaf, yet God is his daily comforter.

Dr. Starr is a friend of Asbury College, and has recently requested that a number of his books be given to our library. May the Lord bless these lines to the glory of his name.

GOOD MEETINGS.

The first two months and a half of our new Assembly year has been spent by the writer and wife on the Pittsburgh District. We held three revivals during this time, the first with our Church at Claytonia, Pa. Rev. C. F. Heald was the good pastor. Our crowds were splendid here, the best in the history of the church, it was said. God came on the scene and gave us around 40 seekers.

Our next meeting was a tent revival with our Butler, Pa., church, and was our second meeting there. The people had been without a pastor for some time, and some other hindering causes made it a hard battle, but God gave us a few seekers with 22 at the altar the last day of the meeting.

Our next meeting was a tent campaign at Ulrichsville, Ohio, church. Rev. Chas F. Whetsell is the wide-awake, hustling pastor. Bro. Whetsell is one of the best pastors we have ever worked with and had affairs in good shape for a revival. Our crowds were fine throughout the meeting, and it became necessary to procure extra chairs for the last week. The pastor is evangelistic and had started the meeting a few days before we arrived and God gave him seekers. Counting them as they came there were between 90 and 100 seekers during the meeting. Rev. and Mrs. Albright, pastors of the New Philadelphia, Ohio, church, and their good people attended and helped greatly. The pastor will get some members as will Bro. Albright. The folks stood right by us and unanimously invited us back for another revival. On with the battle. Pray for us.

WHAT'S IN A BOOK?

CONDUCTED BY

REV. Z. T. JOHNSON, A. B., B. O., M. A.

"The Fountain of wisdom flows through books."—Greek Proverb.

The Days of His Flesh, by Rev. David Smith, M.A., D.D. $2.00.

The author says, "The aim of this work is two-fold. In the introduction I have endeavored to vindicate the historicity of the evangelic records and adduce reason for believing . . . that they present Jesus as he actually lived among men, and not as he appeared to a later generation through a haze of reverence and superstition. . . . And in the subsequent chapters I have sought . . . to justify the Church's faith in him as the Lord from Heaven."

This history of Jesus is written in a scholarly manner. It is as complete as any history I ever read. It deals with the life of the Master in the manner one would write an authentic history of Napoleon, or Washington. The text is complete with reference notes. At the bottom of each page the references are noted. There are side notes with the text, showing the subject discussed in each paragraph. There are also Scripture references whenever a passage is referred to. If one wants a completely organized, authentic, chronological history of Christ, he will find it in this book. At the same time it is so written that the average reader will enjoy its pages.

It is a beautifully bound book of 540 pages, with a green cover and gold title. The paper is thin enough to make it not too heavy. I can highly recommend it. The fact that it has gone through fifteen editions shows that my judgment does not stand alone.

1001 Illustrations for Pulpit and Platform, by Rev. Aquilla Webb, D.D., LL.D. $3.00.

This is a companion book to the famous one by the same author, "One Thousand Evangelist Illustrations" that has had such a wide sale. It brings a fresh collection of new material, which assures the preacher of plenty of fuel for his fire.

The material is arranged alphabetically. In addition to this, there is a complete index of the fifty general subjects treated. There is also a topical index of the 1001 illustrations used. Thus one can easily find any kind of illustration he wants for sermon building. The stories used are not the stereotyped kind, but are fresh and instructive.

The book is worth the $3.00 as mere reading matter, but it is of inestimable worth to the public speaker who is seeking illustrations to drive home great truths.

Fathers and Sons, by Samuel S. Drury.

The watchword of this book is, "My boy is my business." It was written especially to "The man who wants to be a better father. It is built around the conviction that on the day the boy is born the father's travail begins and that from that day he has an inescapable job, compounded of pain and joy."

There are ten chapters covering the home, school, work, athletics, play, friends, religion, etc. They are well written, with an interesting style. I have never read a book with more sound advice in it than this one. You do not have to agree with the author in all he says in order to get great value from his writings. Every chapter is full of suggestive thought.

The work sells for $1.50, but it is worth many times that price to the man whose "best investment is his family," and whose "Boy is his business." It will make him a better father.

Sermons and Addresses, by Rev. John . . . Broadus, D.D., LL.D. $1.00.

Dr. Broadus became widely known through his book, "Preparation and Delivery of Sermons." He was a scholar, preacher and teacher of preachers.

These sixteen sermons and addresses were taken by stenographers at different places, and after revision were printed in book form. Some of the best are: "Worship," "Encouragement to Pray," "The Apostle Paul as a Preacher," "On Reading the Bible by Books," and "Education in Athens." Baptists will appreciate the chapter on "American Baptist Ministry in A. D. 1774."

The book is nicely bound and has 302 pages.

A People's Life of Christ, by Rev. J. Paterson Smyth, $1.50.

The book of which we write is the new pocket edition, bound in cloth, with round corners, with 502 pages, but printed on thin paper so it is less than an inch thick. The type is good clear book style. It was written "for the common people." This means that its style is simple, easy to follow, and practical.

Dr. James Moffatt says of it: "It makes the historical Jesus live before the reader's mind." Prof. Chas. R. Erdman says: "A vivid, fascinating, popular review of the earthly life of our Lord. The author shows no fear of the miraculous and writes with refreshing confidence . . . The effect can hardly be other than a new love and devotion to Christ."

The story of the life of Christ is treated under six general headings. The first tells of the "beginnings." Part II is written under the subject, "When Christ Came." Next is "The First Year." "Capernaum" is the heading of Book IV. The fifth part discusses "Memories of the Jerusalem Road." The last division centers around "Jerusalem." There are fifty-six chapters.

All of the books reviewed in these columns may be bought from The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson XII.—September 18, 1927.

Subject.—The Kingdom Divided. 1 Kings 12:12-20.

Golden Text.—Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall. Proverbs 16:18.

Time.—About B. C. 975.

Places.—Shechem and Jerusalem.

Introduction.—One may get a fair idea of the rise and fall of the Jews, if he will picture to himself a great mountain range. The foothills begin to show themselves above the level as far back as the days of Abraham; but the rise is far from steady. Like the rocky range, there are hills and valleys, slopes and plains; but all the while the sea-level is being left farther and farther below—each hill is higher than the last one, and the valleys do not drop so low. At last the highest point is reached at the dedication of Solomon's temple. For a time the nation seemed to live upon a great tableland; but this happy condition was short lived; for Solomon was destined to lead his people far down the slopes, into barren plains, and through deep, rugged canyons from which they would never be able to extricate themselves. There is nothing worse for a nation than bad rulers. The descending foothills were after an up-and-down fashion, much as had been the ascent on the opposite side of the mountain. At times the hilltops glowed in beautiful sunlight. Then came dark valleys, shut in by fogs and lowering clouds. The once great and proud nation stepped from the last plateau of their mountain life, not into a rich sunny plain with waving fields of grain and lowing herds of cattle and flocks of bleating sheep, but into the quicksands and quagmires of a galling slavery among the Ninevites and the Babylonians; and finally to be crushed by the cruel power of Rome, and scattered to the four corners of the earth. Read the golden text.

Sin divided the kingdom of Israel. Some contend that the rivalry between Ephraim and Judah, growing out of the jealousy of the former tribe, had much to do with the desertion of the ten tribes from the throne of David; but that is rather questionable. True, Ephraim had produced some great leaders, and it was but natural that she should be anxious to rule the nation; but Jehovah caused the division as a rebuke to the sins of Solomon, and of the sins of the whole nation; for they were a rebellious and backsliding people. God's law forbade the Israelites to intermarry with their heathen neighbors; and it is in this regard that we find the fearful sin of Solomon, for which the entire nation was made to suffer. Rulers cannot sin without cursing their people. When they sin, they lead their people into sin; and divine chastisement comes alike upon all. The secret of all this trouble is to be found in Solomon's harem of a thousand women—mostly the princesses of heathen nations. At this far distance, it is not easy to pass just judgment upon him; but Solomon seems to have lost sight of the well-being of Israel, in order to satisfy his unholy ambition, and to appease his vile beastliness. He sacrificed his kingdom and himself upon the altar of insatiable lust. The very soul of decency shudders at the thought of a harem of seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines. Jehovah would not stand it, but brought vengeance upon the house of Solomon.

It is somewhat remarkable that Jehovah would not bring this chastisement directly upon the head of Solomon because of his love for David. But before the sinful old ruler breathed his last, he knew what was in store for his throne. God sent the prophet Ahijah to Jeroboam to inform him that after Solomon's death he would be made king of ten of the tribes. This news reached Solomon's ears, and he made an attempt to slay Jeroboam, but he saved himself by fleeing into Egypt, remaining there until the death of Solomon.

Rehoboam, the only son that Solomon had, as far as we are aware, took the throne at the death of his father. Indications are that he was a worthless sort of a man, and utterly unfit to rule Israel. Shortly after he ascended the throne, Jeroboam with the heads of the people went to secure a promise from him that he would lighten the burdens which his father had heaped upon the nation. He first held a council with the older men of his kingdom, who advised him to grant the request of Jeroboam and his company; but discarding their advice, he called together the young men who were of his own stamp, and they advised him to increase the burdens and to chastise the people more severely than did his father. This entire history is deeply interesting and instructive. Solomon had done some great building around Jerusalem, but very little in the north; so that the people of that region were not very loyal to his throne, a thing that Rehoboam seems to have suspected when he went to Shechem to secure their endorsement of his kingship. He would curry favor by going to them on that occasion. It was here at Shechem that the matters in our lesson occurred.

Comments on the Lesson.

12. Come to me again the third day.—This was pursuant to the orders of Rehoboam made when Jeroboam and the people went to him with a request for the lightening of their burdens. He was expecting them, and they had a right to an answer from him.

13. The king answered the people roughly.—He was following, to his ruin, the advice of that gang of youngsters whom he had called together after the older heads had given him some sensible advice. Pity he could not have had sufficient good sense to heed their counsel. It may be well to state that Rehoboam is not the only young fool who has run into trouble in this way. There are several skeletons along the way.

14. My father made you yoke heavy, and I will add to your yoke: my father also chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions.—This is strictly oriental language. They love to deal in figures. Solomon had been cruel, but Rehoboam would be worse. Solomon had taxed them heavily and had conscripted multitudes of them into his service; but Rehoboam would outdo him on all sides. Poor consolation for a troubled nation.

15. In this verse we find the cause for the division of the kingdom. "The cause was from the Lord, that he might perform his saying, which the Lord spake by Ahijah the Shilonite unto Jeroboam the son of Nebat." Other things may have been contributory to the division, but this is the kernel. Because of Solomon's sin Jehovah's wrath had fallen upon the nation.

16. In this verse we hear the answer of an indignant people to a worthless tyrant: "What portion have we in David? neither have we inheritance in the son of Jesse: to your tents, O Israel: now see to thine own house, David." The house, or dynasty, of David is meant. Like many another tyrant, Rehoboam had gone too far to ever come back. Doom had fallen, ere he realized what he was doing. A few other rulers have done likewise. Julius Caesar, Napoleon and the dead Czar, could they come back to earth, might tell us something interesting just here. Call on the ex-Kaiser: he has information, if he will condescend to impart it.

17. As for the children.....of Judah, Rehoboam reigned over them.—We wonder why the tribe of Benjamin is not mentioned. It went with Judah under the crown of Rehoboam. Later on it is so mentioned.

18. Then king Rehoboam sent Adoram, who was over the tribute.—Rehobam is still "sans gumption"; but he will learn after awhile. He might have known that an indignant people would stone his tax-collector. Therefore king Rehoboam made speed to get him up to his chariot, to flee to Jerusalem.—He is learning some sense; albeit, he is getting it in the school of experience; but, as my dear old grandfather used to tell me when I refused to follow his advice and got into trouble, "Fools will learn in no other." All right, Rehoboam. Safety first. Your absence is better than your company.

19. So Israel rebelled against the house of David unto this day.—The time when this history was written. No date is given.

20. Here we have the crowning of Jeroboam to be king over the ten seceding tribes. For the future the nation will be under two kings, will be two nations. Sometimes the two kingdoms warred against each other.

Sometimes they drew together in a sort of friendly relation; but nothing could reconcile them. They had become so vile and so rebellious, that God had to select a mere handful of them out of which he would bring the Christ.

To a thinking man this history is inexpressibly sad, because of the fact that God has had to repeat it so often in dealing with our race. There are whole denominations of so-called church people who have not heard from Heaven in years. Like the Jews, they have a name to live, but are dead. They are God-forsaken, and wist not that such is true. And what is true of churches is also true of tens of thousands of individuals. They are dead, but know it not. They will never live again.

Rev. F. C. Brown, of the Nazarene Church, Ohio District, Box 144, Sciotoville, Ohio, is available for calls. He is willing to go anywhere the Lord may lead.

Dr. S. A. Danford, who has been pastor of a Methodist Church during the past year, will be available for meetings after September 1. He can be addressed at 1177 W. 11th St., Eugene, Ore.

S. S. Nelson: "The Lord gave victory in the Second Wesleyan Methodist Church, Roanoke, Va. The attendance increased from night to night and wave after wave of glory swept over the people until a number were saved and sanctified."

W. T. Lackey: "I have been reading The Pentecostal Herald for a number of years and feel it has been of great value to me. I searched for the light for many years, but while Brother Fred Tucker was holding a meeting for me he asked me to subscribe for The Herald, and thanks be to God, he has cleansed me from all

Rev. A. S. Beck: "We recently conducted a tent meeting in Howe. The first week the people did not back, but the second week the people would not hold the people. Conviction gripped the people and boys and men from 14 to 53 years were saved; girls from 16, and women up to 60 were converted at the altar of prayer. There were 19 converted and united with the Methodist Church. The church was about gone, but it is revived and I am invited back next year. Some of the leading men of the community were saved and came into the church. We had old-time shouting, praying and salvation."

F. P. McCall: "The meeting at Nashville, Ga., is now history; we had a good meeting in many ways. Crowds were forward for prayer and about two dozen offered themselves to the Lord anywhere he leads, and scores of others asked for prayers for the Spirit-filled life. I am sure that some real work was done that will yet tell for the kingdom. I was disappointed though, that we did not witness more results. I am at Hanson, Fla."

E. L. Sanford: "Our meeting closed at Bethel Ridge, Ky., with R. T. Wilson, Aug. 21. We had ninety-one to pray through at the altar, either for pardon or cleansing. The result of the meeting was all that could be expected by the pastor and the official members. To God be all the glory. We are now with Rev. M. G. Shelley at Gunn's Chapel in a good meeting. Some have found the way and many others are under conviction. We predict a great revival at this church."

Pastor A. Reilly Copeland, of Tabernacle Baptist Church, Waco, Tex., did the preaching for an old-fashioned brush arbor meeting in the town of Satin. Many people came from surrounding communities and more than 100 people responded to the invitations, half of whom were reclaimed, and many of the others united with the Baptist Church by baptism, letter and statement. The large baptismal service that was held on the Brazos river Sunday afternoon was attended by an immense crowd. The attendance and interest throughout meeting was said to be best of town's history. Rev. L. B. Arnold, of Waco, led the revival singing.

A. M. Martin: "We have just closed an old-fashioned Methodist revival at Pecan Island, La. Bro. Marvin Beadle, of Lafayette, La., a student for the ministry at Asbury College, helped us in the preaching. Our little Methodist Chapel was crowded every service. The folks were very busy with the cotton crop, but they came to our services faithfully. The last night about twenty-five came to the altar and the Lord answered our prayers in mighty power. During the terrible flood we were forced to move at Lafayette. The town of St. Martinville had from two to six feet of water, our church had eight inches of water on the floor. Some of our members have moved to California and things are rather serious since the overflow; however, the Lord is with us, the refugees have returned to their homes and we are receiving many invitations to preach the gospel all through the overflow section. The Parish of St. Martin is about 99 per cent Roman Catholic, and mostly French speaking people. We are glad to bring them the Bible, and the preaching of the Kingdom of heaven in their own language."

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON.

The Pierce County Holiness Camp Meeting, Tacoma, Washington for 1927, is now a matter of history. But there are real and tangible results that will abide as "an imperishable memorial when earthly monuments will have crumbled into dust."

Rev. Nettie Springer, evangelist, brought daily Gospel messages that were both soul-stirring and inspiring. No one could sit under her rich ministry and be the same afterward. Time and again the altars were well filled with seekers who had a heart need either for pardon or heart holiness, and many gave definite witness to having obtained the blessing sought.

Rev. Miss Inaz Batchelor was the evangelist for the children and young people. This young woman has a passion for her work that at times almost consumes her. This writer witnessed scenes that must have engaged the attention of the upper world. The long altars clear across the tabernacle were filled with children between the ages of 4 or 5 up to 14 or 15 years of age who were weeping or confessing their way through to the cross and afterwards with streaming eyes and shining faces gave clear testimony of having definitely found the Savior. I would unhesitatingly recommend these two workers who toil so faithfully and successfully for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of Christ and the perpetuation of true holiness in the earth.

The educational feature was also given its proper place. Prominent among these was Dr. C. H. Watson, President of Seattle Pacific College who, on invitation from the management of the camp delivered an address on Tuesday afternoon, "The Church and the Child." Other holiness schools were also represented at different times during the camp.

In many respects it was one of the best camp meetings it has been my privilege to attend for a long while.

575 SETS

$2.60 Value for $1.

Each one carries a great message in brief form

Gospel of the Body

REV. C. F. WIMBERLY.

The author tells in a most interesting way some of his recent discoveries of the majesty and artistic glory of the human body, and states that there are mysteries and wonders to be found in the body alone greater than the exploration of an unknown continent. There is not a dull sentence in the book. Price 15c.

The Mind of the Master

REV. WILL H. HUFF.

Two of Brother Huff's great sermons, the title of the second one being "Soul Rest." In the first sermon the author deals with the mind of Christ as to its spiritual consciousness, as to its characteristics, and as to the how of our fullest possession of it. The second sermon deals with "His Rest," the rest he has provided for the struggling believer. Price, 20c.

Scriptural Holiness

REV. B. A. CUNDIFF.

The author of this most excellent book enjoyed and preached the experience of entire sanctification thirty-nine years. The author gives chapters on the different theories of holiness, and closes with a chapter on the Bible view of this great theme. Price, 15c.

The Vision of a Popular Minister

COMPILED BY A. SIMS.

The experience of a minister who was satisfied and at ease in Zion, but when the Lord got hold of him he found that he was self-centered and unsaved. Price, 10c

Sin in Believers and Advice to Those Sanctified

JOHN WESLEY.

Two sermons. The first sermon is a point of utmost moment to every serious Christian, the resolving of which very nearly concerns both his present and eternal happiness. In the second, Mr. Wesley's first warning is to watch and pray continually against pride. There are five more warnings in this sermon which are vital to every Christian. Price, 15c.

Doing His Will or Going to Hell

REV. JAMES M. TAYLOR.

This book sets forth the doctrine of entire sanctification as taught in the Scriptures; also that it must be obtained here on earth. Price, 10c.

Malice

REV. J. B. CULPEPPER.

This is a most forceful writer and he handles this subject in a very interesting way. You will be thankful for the privilege of reading this book. Price, 15c.

Water Lily Money

ABBIE C. MORROW BROWN.

A thrilling story for young people; it will interest them as well as instruct and help them. Anyone will read it with pleasure and profit. Price, 15c.

I Want 'Er Go 'Ome

JAMES KNOTT MACKRELL.

A study of heaven, some of the things Jesus taught about heaven, its hope, its people, its certainty, its place, its rewards, its happiness and the way. Price 25c.

Baptism With the Holy Ghost

REV. JAMES M. TAYLOR.

This is a most excellent interpretation of what it is, of who is to receive it, and its effect upon the recipient. Price, 10c.

How to Reach the Masses

REV. JAMES M. TAYLOR.

This book deals with the problems now facing the churches, and points out God's method of doing it. Especially does this book emphasize the need of the blessing of entire sanctification to empower one for effective service in one's work for the Master. Price, 10c.

Heart Purity

REV. E. A. FERGUSON.

A sermon by one of the leading evangelists of his time. The author was very successful in leading thousands of souls into this experience. Price, 10c.

Dr. Fosdick Answered

REV. G. W. RIDOUT.

An expose of Christian liberalism, which is becoming so prevalent in the land, and one needs to be informed about it and how to combat it. This book will be very helpful. Price, 15c.

The Devil's Partners

REV. JAMES M. TAYLOR.

A sermon dealing with the real partners of the devil. The author handles the subject without gloves and starts the reader to thinking. Price, 10c.

Just for Children

REV. J. B. CULPEPPER.

The author writes a story of when and where he was converted in a style that is especially attractive to children. Price, 10c.

Sanctification

REV. J. H. COLLINS.

Dr. H. C. Morrison says this book is one of the clearest presentations of this subject he has ever read. Price, 15c.

A Whiskey Hatch

REV. J. B. CULPEPPER.

The sub title of this book is "Chickens will come Home to Roost." It is an interesting and awful story of the effects of whiskey. Price, 5c.

Little Nuggets for Little Folks

REV. JAMES M. TAYLOR.

A good book to place in the hands of a boy or girl—one that will interest them and teach them the way of salvation. Price, 10c.

Saved to Serve

REV. J. W. WELDON.

This is a life story of a business man who was saved, and afterwards gave his whole life to the service of the Lord. He has been instrumental in winning hundreds of souls to Christ. Price, 20c.

A Bottle of Tears

REV. J. B. CULPEPPER.

A salesman once said of this booklet, "If you will read it without both laughing and crying, you may have it for nothing." You will like it. Price, 5c.

My Dear Friends:

Allow me to introduce myself to you. I am a native Korean who has been molded by the Lord for nine long years in Asbury College.

In the fall of 1916, under Dr. H. C. Morrison's preaching, the Lord saved me; the following night he sanctified me in the basement of Asbury Administration Building. God called me to preach. Through his call, I came out to Korea and have been fighting in the battle line. The following are a few facts of happenings through my preaching:

The days since I left you friends in America have been filled with interesting and varied experiences; how I wish I could tell you in detail about the precious experiences that the Lord has given me and the wonderful way in which he has blessed and led in every meeting. I do praise him for his love and care and keeping power. He saves and sanctifies just now, praise his Name. There have been hard places and discouragements, but he has helped me to stand true. I love the Lord more than ever, and he has given me a greater love for the souls of lost men than I ever had. Pray for me.

I have been back in Korea only a few months and I have been kept busy going from one meeting to another. I have had many more calls than I could accept and many short meetings of only a few days when I was not able to stay longer. When I had been here less than six months, roughly counting, the number of those who testified to being blessed, saved, sanctified, or reclaimed numbered five thousand, nine hundred and fifty-five. To God be all the praise.

I have been under close police and detective observation since I came. In Japan there were many, many questions to answer and as I entered Korea, at our port City, Fusan, I was ushered to the police headquarters for more questions. But I felt that I could bear inspection, and before I left I asked that we have a word of prayer together. I dare say the first time prayer had been heard in that place, but they were very reverent and we parted as friends. In my childhood home town where we were holding a meeting, two detectives were sent to take notes on my sermons, but the Spirit of God got hold of those men, they were put under deep conviction for their sins, and one of the men cried for mercy and was beautifully saved. Their interest in the meetings caused them to forget the notes and after we had gone they went to the pastor and asked him to give them a few notes on my sermons.

The Korean people are hungry for the Gospel message and their faithfulness is shown on every hand. We were holding a meeting in North Korea. It was mid-winter, the snow was deep and the weather bad, but in spite of all this, numbers of people came from the surrounding country and stayed in the church which was a poorly built and poorly heated building. Some brought a little rice or other grain for their food, and some had very little to eat during those days, but they stayed right there and if they couldn't sleep at night, they would sing and pray and were always ready for the early morning prayer meetings at five o'clock.

In another place, I held a week's meeting with gracious results and the people begged me to stay longer, but I could not. Later these people heard that we were to hold meetings in a city some twenty-five miles away and about thirty of them came walking this distance bringing their rice, to attend the meetings, and how great was their disappointment when they found that other arrangements prevented our being there.

Many people are asking about the non-Christian influences that are at work in the East. Bolshevism and other isms are tainting the minds of some of our young people, and some troubles have arisen in the churches, but I am thankful to say that I have had no trouble at all in my meetings. In Seoul, our Capital city, we had a three-days' meeting with about thirty-five Christian workers and teachers. The first day I preached, one man came to me with a number of questions, but I would not answer him. I said, "Brother, you just wait; at the close of the meetings if you are not satisfied I will answer you then." The second day, questions and criticisms gave way to humbler spirits, heads and hearts were bowed and the third day, they were in tears. But the God of mercy hears every earnest prayer and our meeting closed with a beautiful testimony meeting in which practically every one took part. Many said that they had been in Christian work for years but had never had a real experience before.

In one of our big churches in Seoul, we might call it a center of our most intellectual people, we were told not to expect any great results. "You see these people are educated," they said. I said, "Well, let the educated ones come and the Lord will educate them," and he did. We had a gracious meeting; the church was filled and when we went from there to another church in the same city, these same educated people followed us and almost crowded the other people out. The church was filled and people stood clear out to the street. Hundreds of people testified to a work of grace wrought in their hearts in those meetings. It's the old-time religion that brings results and I am trying to bring the old truth.

I have seen the Lord work some gracious results in the lives of individuals and churches. In one church, which had been cold and indifferent, the Lord blessed mightily; 570 people were blessed; there were 110 new believers, 55 decided to become titheers, 49 family altars were erected, and 39 pledged themselves to do personal work. I have heard lately that whereas that congregation used to be but a handful, the church is now packed every Sunday and people go early to get a seat. In another place, some boy students had been in the habit of interfering with the services and calling out, "Stop," but the Lord got hold of them and put a stop to that. In another place, there were four school girls who were at outs and while I preached one got up and gathered the others about her and they cried and begged forgiveness and made up with shouts and singing. In that same meeting, there was a man whose sister had committed suicide because of some trouble with a missionary. Hate filled his heart and it was not until he had cried and prayed for three nights that he could testify, "I now have peace in my heart, and I hold nothing against anyone." He also testified to the fact that he felt called to preach.

Korean women are great smokers and the Lord has helped me to show many of them what a filthy habit it is and many have testified to how their tobacco has found its way out the back door.

I wish I might tell you more about

"THE METHODIST CRISIS"

Dr. Ridout has put into pamphlet form under above title the story of the fight for orthodoxy which took place on the floor of the New Jersey Conference, Asbury Park, N. J., last March, in which he and Dr. H. P. Sloan and others debated with Bishop Anderson and Dr. H. H. Meyer, Sunday School Editor, the issues of Modernism within Methodism.

In addition to Dr. Ridout's story there is a fine write-up of the affair by Rev. H. Decker who was present at the debate and whose story appeared in the "Essentialist."

Let every Methodist send and get a copy of this booklet. Every Methodist minister—North and South—should read the story. It will stir your blood. It will show you how Modernism is getting a terrific grip on Methodist Bishops, Editors and Leaders. It will also show you your duty to stand up and show your colors in the hour of peril.

Dr. Sloan, Dr. Ridout and others take the fight for orthodoxy right into their Annual Conferences and it is there the battle should be fought out.

my people. Through your help I have been able to carry on this work, and friends, I do not believe you can be sorry for what you have given. The Koreans are poor and their contributions are necessarily small. There are so many things we could do if we only had more funds. "A great many people could be reached if we had a tent for some of our meetings. Don't you want to help us get one? All you give goes directly into the work, and we will appreciate every gift, great or small. Send your contributions to Dr. F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky. He will forward to me accordingly.

PRAY FOR METHODISM.

By The Editor.

WE believe that almost any impartial student of the religious history of the world will admit that the rise and spread of Methodism marks one of the most remarkable revivals of religion in the history of the Christian era.

No doubt, Methodism has been a powerful evangelical force. It has dealt directly with the individual; it has insisted that there is salvation for every man, and that the individual human being must be born again. Methodism has taught that Jesus died for all, and has laid special emphasis upon the fact that the blood of Christ cleanseth from all sin.

Out of the Methodist revival have come all the blessings that logically follow as the fruits of a great spiritual awakening—missions, schools, orphanages, homes for the dependent old, hospitals, and a great aggressive force for prohibition, and many blessings that come into the economic life of a nation. Godly people are like salt and light in a community. There is a penetrating power, an illuminating grace in godliness that cannot be tabulated, which is invaluable in the spiritual, moral, social and industrial life of the people.

The Methodist revival, and the great church that has come out of it, has made a contribution to the salvation, welfare, progress and development of humanity which can only be reckoned up in eternity. There can be no question but that there has come a spiritual dearth in Methodism. Once her rules were strict against the various forms of worldliness, and they were enforced. These rules have been very largely removed from the Discipline of the Methodist Church, and the tides of worldliness have rolled in upon us. A dangerous brand of modern skepticism, which wears the disguise of religious devotion, is making fearful inroads upon the Methodist Church. It has gained a very firm foothold in our schools; it shows its pleasant and plausible face in our Sunday school conventions for teacher training; it stands up very boldly and speaks out its doubt in our Summer Schools for young preachers; it has gotten into our literature, it has crossed the ocean and appears in our mission fields.

These unscriptural teachings are having a paralyzing effect, and are most dangerous. It is time for God's people to rally about the cross of Christ and the standards of true Methodism. We must not sit still, but we must protest in most earnest fashion. In last week's issue, we suggested that we betake ourselves to prayer; that we call upon God to show his power in our midst. He can lay his hand upon false teachers; he can turn back the tide of worldliness; he can send down revivals upon the people; he can give us victory over every foe. Let a host of Methodists throughout the nation observe the first Friday morning in each month as a time of fasting and prayer. Let us call upon God unitedly to visit the people, to arouse the Methodists, to awaken a mighty protest against false teachers, and to give us a great revival of pure religion that will check the oncoming tide of unbelief, worldliness, lawlessness and anarchy. Remember that we are not asking for an organization, nor forming a society, but asking for united prayer. It is useless to attempt that in which God will not help. It were in vain to labor for a good cause without calling upon him for leadership and divine power.

An Open Letter to Another Young Preacher.

My dear Young Brother:

YOUR letter of recent date has been received and read with great interest. Your situation is not as unusual as you seem to think. We have many Methodist churches today where no revivals of religion have been held for many years. In these churches, many of them large and influential, in our cities, there are a generation of members who have grown up without seeing a revival of religion or any one graciously regenerated at their altars.

Most of the cities in every part of the nation have grown rapidly in the last twenty-five years. Thousands of church members have moved into these cities from towns, villages and country places and joined the city churches by letter. This, with the additions made from the Sunday schools on Decision Day, has kept up the congregation in many of our city churches and they have been able to keep and, in many instances, to increase their membership without the expense and annoyance of revivals of religion breaking into their regular schedule of euchre parties, dances, theatricals, pageants, church suppers and social rounds.

I note that you say the former pastor of this church was very much opposed to the evangelists and in fact to any form of revivals; that he insisted that the day for revivals had past and that his people have come to believe in his views on the subject. I note also that you say he was very generous in his attitude toward modern liberalism and made the impression that he was very broadminded and beautifully tolerant toward any and all sorts of religious teachers provided those teachers were not strong adherents to the inspiration of the Scriptures and the necessity of the supernatural in regenerating power and sanctifying grace.

I can understand how the ministry of a man of this type for a number of years would have a very deadening effect upon the congregation. I note what you say about the strong bias of your superintendent of the Sunday school toward liberal teaching and that with several of his teachers he insists that all the children need is careful training and bringing into the church on Decision Day when they are old enough to make a choice for themselves. I think this condition of things is far more common than you suspect.

I understand how that a young man like yourself, with your training, your devotion to the Bible doctrine as interpreted by Wesley and the early founders of Methodism, would be grieved over the situation in which you find yourself, and I am not surprised that you should say, "I scarcely know which way to turn or what to do." May I offer you a few suggestions?

First of all, do not undertake to do anything startling or radical for the present. Possess your soul with great patience; keep in close touch with the Lord; be a Christian gentleman; bring the people to feel that you are consecrated, that you walk with God, that you love them, that you are not a fault-finder, but that your one great desire is to help them forward in their religious life, the upbuilding of their church and the general good of the community.

Second, make it a point to visit and treat with great courtesy and Christian love all of the old people of your congregation. They feel a bit lonely; many of them are heart-hungry; and if you will visit and pray with them, it will be a great comfort to them and you will win their sympathy. They will love you and a consciousness of their love and confidence will be a real comfort and help to you.

Third, win your young people. Learn their names. Do not undertake to be too familiar with them. Preserve the dignity of a Christian minister, but take a real interest in them. Talk with them about their studies and find out what they are thinking about. Make them to feel that their pastor is their devoted friend and that if they have any problems or troubles you will be glad to render them any assistance in your power. Keep in mind always that you are paving the way for a gracious revival of religion and the winning of the souls of your people for Christ.

Fourth, win the respect of your official board. Do not undertake to break up and change their programs, but work with them, get their confidence, make them feel that you are a safe counsellor, that they can afford to listen to you and be guided by your advice and suggestion. This may take time, but you will remember that you are paving the way for a revival to win souls for all eternity.

Fifth, Remember that there is great power in the Gospel. Prepare yourself carefully and preach the Gospel. Preach it with authority, but be careful to speak the truth in love. Make the people to feel that you are acquainted with the Holy Scriptures, that you are acquainted with the God who gave the Scriptures, that you have the spirit of

SEVEN WONDERFUL YEARS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

WAY back in the years when I was a young preacher just beginning my ministry in the New Jersey Conference, there were a number of the old school holiness leaders prominent in the Conference sessions and pentecostal meetings. There was W. B. Osborn, the founder of Ocean Grove; W. B. Stockton, the "sweet singer of Israel"; Dr. O'Hanlon, the old man eloquent; W. N. Ogborn, Dr. Ballard, and others, but prominent among them with his silvery locks and his face with the glow of heaven upon it, was Dr. George Hughes, Editor of "The Guide to Holiness." Dr. Hughes was the leader of the Pentecostal Meetings held then in the afternoon and sometimes at night. Once I remember when Bishop Warren was presiding that, in the morning session Dr. Hughes took the floor and in the course of his speech he told his experience, and the old man was full of glory and of God as he praised God for sanctifying grace and pentecostal power. One of his daughters, since gone to heaven, sought the blessing of holiness in one of those Conference Pentecostal Meetings. Another of his daughters, Miss Jennie Hughes, has made history in connection with the work of God in China, and it is largely about her marvelous work there that this story is being written.

It will be remembered that Miss Hughes made a notable record as a missionary under the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church and had built up a great school at Kukiang, Central China. Time came when pressure was brought to bear upon her work there along modernistic lines; she could not subscribe to it and she resigned and she and Dr. Mary Stone went out "alone with God" not knowing what the future might bring. They had less than one hundred dollars between them when they resigned from the W. F. M. S., but, like Abraham, "they went out not knowing whither." They thrust themselves absolutely upon the Lord and the most miraculous things have occurred. They went back to China and started work at Shanghai and now after seven years they have property valued at approximately $700,000 and a mission work going on doing marvels for God.

From the beginning, I have always had the deepest interest in this great work and have sought to keep in touch with it all along the lines of its developments. Sometime ago I spent an evening with that dear man of God, Dr. A. F. Nast, of Cincinnati, whom the Lord strangely led to sponsor the work of Miss Hughes and Dr. Stone at the beginning. He and his good wife (who has since gone to heaven) went to China and spent a year there helping, encouraging and aiding the work in its foundation work. Dr. Nast, at the time of my visit, had in his home, two choice Chinese girl students, products of the work, who are taking their college work at Asbury College. It was truly delightful to hear Dr. Nast tell of the wondrous leadings of the Lord in the Shanghai Mission field.

Let me here stop to say a good word about Dr. Mary Stone. She is a Chinese woman who came to America and took her degree in Medicine in one of the foremost schools of medicine. She is a brilliant woman and an impassioned speaker; her English is perfect. It was a great morning for Foreign Missions at Asbury College last year when both Miss Hughes and Dr. Mary Stone took the chapel hour between them. Asbury College Volunteer Mission Band naturally took to the Chinese Mission Movement under Miss Hughes and Dr. Stone and as a result one of our choicest young women who had given herself to Foreign Missionary work, Miss Emily Haskins, went back to China with Miss

MISS JENNIE HUGHES.

Hughes and Dr. Stone in August, 1926, and worked with them till they were forced by the Revolutionists to leave China and go to Korea.

A few weeks ago we had a delightful interview with Miss Haskins in her mother's home at Binghamton, N. Y., during which she told us some thrilling stories of events which happened round about Bethel at Shanghai, while that great city was in the throes of the Revolution. But through the good mercy of God and his protecting hand the property and all its interests were preserved intact.

DR. MARY STONE.

Let it be remembered that "Bethel" which is the name given to Miss Hughes and Dr. Stone's great work at Shanghai, has now a plant consisting of The Tabernacle Church, Hospital, School, Boys' Dormitory, Girls' Dormitory, Nurses' Home, Teachers' Home, and other accessories, and all this came about without any Board or Society back of them—Faith and Prayer brought it all to pass.

While war raged round and about Shanghai, the Communists threatened Dr. Mary Stone's life if she did not put into her services the worship of some Chinese Deity; because she would not do this threatening letters became more terrible till at last she was doomed to die if she did not comply with conditions laid upon her by the Communists. It was such a common thing in those stormy days for undesirable people to be carried off and done away with, nobody knowing how, that Dr. Stone and her co-workers—Dr. Phoebe Stone, (sister) Miss Hughes, Miss Ernsberger, Miss Emily Haskins, Miss Huppert, Miss Mayo, Miss Fulmer, Miss Fuss, agreed that it was wisdom to leave and go to Korea till the storm was over; in the meanwhile the work would be left in the hands of good, consecrated Chinese workers. Let Miss Hughes herself tell what happened:

"Did you know that we went to Korea for two months? I tell you we found plenty to do over there. It is a pathetic land, for the people are under bondage too heavy for words to express, and though, of course, we could only work in the Korean missions and churches as we were invited to speak through an interpreter, we found another very needy field waiting for us. There are thousands of Chinese over there and here we found the work God has sent us to Korea to do. For several weeks we held evangelistic meetings in the little dead Chinese church. We found the pastor eager to have an awakening there, but he did not have enough of the fire in his own soul to kindle a flame, and so everything was smoldering. Our group of Bethel folks, Americans and Chinese, all plunged into the work there, holding out-of-door song service followed by the revival meetings inside the church. The latter was packed every night. Many people could not get in, but stood at the windows outside. The Lord gave us many souls, seventy of whom we know were gloriously saved. We organized Bible classes and left the work when we came away to be carried on by a little group of faithful evangelical missionaries from China who have taken refuge in that country.

"The first of June we returned to China. Many attempts while we were gone were made to take this property of Bethel. Do you know the hymn, 'He Rolled the Sea Away'?"

"When Israel out of bondage came,
A sea before them lay;
My Lord reached down His mighty hand,
And rolled the sea away.

CHORUS

"Then forward still, 'tis Jehovah's will,
Th' billows dash and spray;
With a conquering tread we will push ahead,
He'll roll the sea away."

"Well, this is what the heavenly Father, the Mighty God of Israel, has done for us over here in Bethel. For some reason he has stretched out his loving hand over this property, and while mission buildings and land amounting I presume to hundreds of thousands of dollars are wrecked, this property is intact today. We feel as though it were indeed sacred ground. It is God's place as never before and Mary and I have rededicated it all over, his land, buildings, equipment and folks, to God for God's use. We are living in Bethel!

"The arsenal is buzzing away day and night with the work of turning out ammunition. The commander of the troops in Shanghai is living in the 'Haunted House' next to Bethel where we first started our work. Thousands of troops are in buildings up and down this road. Many of them are buildings that have been unlawfully seized from the Chinese, and here we are in Bethel in the midst of it all, tucked away quiet and calm and peaceful. Soldiers come to our gates for a doctor when in need. Many of them come into the dispensary every day for treatment. Some of their wives and little ones are in our wards. At a nearby Gospel hall the soldiers attend the services every night. One of our new missionaries, Miss Fuss, who came to us from Philadelphia, and is now my secretary and gives her evenings for evangelistic work in the Gospel hall, has been teaching a Bible class Sundays with both soldiers and civilians in it and most profound interest and attention has been given her. She passes the soldiers along the streets at night as she walks with our little group of evangelistic workers and is unmolested. Is it not all wonderful?

"Our evangelistic meetings are going on in several halls. In one of the halls where I sang and spoke last night the place was simply packed. It is located right down in the slums of the city in the midst of what we call the 'worst element' and this 'worst element' is being won for Jesus Christ. The hall was simply overflowing with people. They seemed to be flowing in and out of every door and window in the place. It is only a cheap little hall, right on the street, but men, women and children, men with faces stained with sin, women of the same brand, and hosts of little children attend these meetings every night in the week. We opened this hall in February right in the midst of all of the war conditions here. It has never been closed one night. There is scarcely a night but what someone finds Jesus. Sometimes a dozen or fifteen or more in one night are brought to the Lord. And do they stand? Oh, I wish you could have heard the testimonies I heard last night. Men deep-dyed in sin a few weeks and months ago shouting Hallelujah with clean faces, clean clothes, working hard and rushing back to get to the meeting every night ushering in the people. The minute the unsaved come to the altar these new converts rush forward to get their arms around them to point them to their Jesus. They would have to do this work for we have not enough evangelists to go around.

"Our little group that has been here while we went to Korea we found utterly worn out and we are all trying to get under their burdens and pull along with them. I cannot make them stop working. I have had to threaten to lock one of our young pastors up in a hospital room if he did not stay away from the meetings for one week at least and rest. When I heard that he had fainted after preaching the other night I sent for him and I said: 'Andrew, you have got to stop this week.' He said: 'Just wait until this week of special meetings are over.' I said to him: 'Why, you have evangelistic meetings every night. You will never get through with them.' He answered me: 'Well, just this one more week.' Then when I showed him the danger of a permanent breakdown and that he must take his rest he looked at me as if I was sentencing him to the gallows, and with eyes swimming with tears and passion for souls vibrating through his earnest tone he said: 'Oh, Miss Hughes, let me preach just once more before I rest.'"

CHAPTER XXVI.

EDWARD MCKENDREE BOUNDS.

A story of continuity: David Brainerd, a missionary to the American Indians, kept a diary. After his death Jonathan Edwards published it; William Carey, a humble shoemaker, read it and went to India; Henry Martyn read it, and went to Persia; McCheyne read it, and went to the Jews; E. M. Bounds read it and went to his knees. He remained there until he solved the problem of intercessory prayer to a degree without a parallel in the history of Methodism. On that particular night, no lights shown in the little village except the flickering street lights. But "one other light glimmered through the shutters into the spacious enclosure of an old southern home. But the light was not all that shone there, it was indeed dim compared to the vision of the man who was now preparing for work of the day. Shortly after four o'clock, the watchers at Heaven's outposts flashed the message to headquarters: 'Behold he prayeth.'"

The vision was that of a practical mystic—a man of piercing black eyes, slight, spare figure. As he knelt, it was no mere whisper in which the prayer was breathed. Edward M. Bounds believed and practiced audible supplication. Perhaps few think it matters in what voice we pray. Few think to pray in a voice that moves. Dr. Bounds' praying voice possessed a confidence, an earnest assurance we have never heard reproduced. Dr. Bounds did not merely pray well, that he might write well about prayer; he prayed because the needs of the world were upon him. He prayed for long years upon subjects to which the easy-going Christian rarely gives a thought. He prayed for objects which men of less faith are always ready to call impossible. Yet, from these continued solitary prayer-vigils, year by year, there arose a gift of prayer-teaching equalled by few men in history. He wrote transcendently about prayer, because he was transcendent in its practice.

Edward McKendree Bounds was born in Shelby County, Mo., Aug. 15, 1835. He studied law, and was admitted to the bar soon after he was twenty-one years of age. He practiced law until he was called to preach, three years later, and was admitted into the traveling connection of the Missouri Conference, M. E. Church, South, and appointed to the Monticello charge. While serving the Brunswick circuit, war between the States was declared, and the young minister was made a prisoner of war because he would not take the oath of allegiance to the Federal Government. He was sent to St. Louis, and then to Memphis, Tenn., from which prison he soon secured his release. He traveled over one hundred miles on foot to join General Price's Command in Mississippi. He was at once promoted to a commission of Captain of the Fifth Missouri Regiment, a position which he held until the close of the war; but was captured and held a prisoner at Nashville, Tenn.

After the war closed Rev. E. M. Bounds served churches in Tennessee and Alabama. In 1875 he was transferred to the Missouri Conference and stationed at St. Paul's Church, St. Louis, Mo., and served there for four years. In 1876 he married Miss Emmie Barnett, of Eufaula, Ala., who died ten years later. In 1887 he married Mrs. Hattie Barnett, who passed away four months after her saintly husband, which occurred at Washington, Ga., August 24, 1913. There were born to Dr. Bounds two children by his first wife, and five by his second.

After serving several pastorates, he was sent to the First Methodist Church, at St. Louis, Mo., and then a second time at St. Paul's in the same city. His fine qualities soon became known to the church at large, whereupon he was appointed editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, and served in this field for nine years. His gifts were further recognized, and he was elected Associate Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, the organ of the M. E. Church, South.

As he devoted himself more and more to the deeper things of the Spirit, he felt a call to a ministry peculiarly his own, and to do this took evangelistic relation to his church; but spent the past two decades of his life with his family at Washington, Ga., and most of the time was used in the "Upper Room" as it were, and writing the "Bounds' Spiritual Life Books."

Dr. Bounds was the embodiment of humility; anything that smacked with the spirit of show-off, or pretence, was revolting to his sensitive soul. His life was "hid with Christ in God," with a seraphic devotion to his Lord and Savior. He was a Methodist of the John Wesley type, experiencing and proclaiming the blessed doctrine of entire sanctification as a second definite work of grace witnessed in the heart by the Holy Ghost. He had reached that altitude of spiritual vision and passion for a lost world, that self was entirely forgotten. It was no uncommon thing for his host, where he happened to be visiting, to find him alone in the church on his knees and in his room hours before dawn crying and pleading with God for a lost world. This is what he called the "Business of Prayer-ridge." It was when saturated with this Heavenly Ozone that he wrote his classics on prayer. Life with him was a struggle; but his ministry when living, overlooked and unappreciated by his church, is now coming into its own since his translation to the Glory. His books are now running into thousands, and are bringing peace and help to multitudes in this and in other countries, as they are translated into other languages.

Dr. A. C. Dixon was once preaching in Atlanta, and a copy of "Preacher and Prayer," by E. M. Bounds was given him by a friend. Then at Christmas, another copy was sent by another friend. That he should receive two copies of the same book, was a bit strange to him. Dr. Dixon said: "There must be something in this little book worthwhile, or two of my friends would not have selected the same book for me. So I read the first page until I came to the words: 'Man is looking for better methods; God is looking for better men. Man is God's method.' That was enough for me, and my appetite demanded more until the book was finished with pleasure and profit."

One of the most cultured and pious editors, some years ago, had this to say of the Spiritual Life Books:

"The books produced by Dr. E. M. Bounds, constitute one of the rarest types of literature with which we are acquainted. Reading Doctor Bounds' books is like experiencing a heavenly gale in a tropical clime. Especially is this the case with one who knew and loved him as did this writer. His style is of the highest order of striking, sententious elo-

GOD'S HUMAN MIRROR.

Rev. G. Whitefield Simonson, S. T. D.

"But we all, with unveiled faces reflecting as a mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord the Spirit." 2 Cor. 3:18.

YES, beloved Christian friend, that is what God made you "a new creation" for. He plans to hold you in the hands of his providence, and turn you about before the folks who see you so that they may see the "image" of the Divine Redeemer in your life and love and labor. O, it is a startling story—a wonderful love-story—that St. Paul is telling us, of God's purpose to make us reflectors of his life and love, by the power of the Holy Spirit.

Did you ever stop to think that all our likes and dislikes of folks are governed, very generally, by the impressions made upon us as we look into their faces? Impressions made otherwise are often changed, when we look into a person's face. A striking illustration of this is seen in the experience of Saul of Tarsus. He had formed a fixed opinion of Jesus of Nazareth, conceiving him to be an enemy of the pure religion of the Hebrews, and believing that his followers were so hopelessly gone bad that they were only fit to be arrested, imprisoned and killed. But something happened to Saul one day, as he was traveling from Jerusalem to Damascus, that stunned and blinded him for a while; and it also surprised and confounded his friends so thoroughly that they never seemed able to understand him after that; I mean those friends who shared with him the desire to do away with the followers of Jesus of Nazareth.

It was the power of the face of Jesus, into which Saul looked on that memorable day, that changed the whole substance and direction of his life. And so certain was he that he had received direct commission from the Divine Christ himself, that he did not hesitate to place himself on an equal footing with the Twelve who had known the Lord in the days of his flesh. Hear his testimony: "Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen the Lord? For I received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you."

O yes, my friends, St. Paul was sure that he had seen the face of Jesus Christ! So certain was he of that, that he fearlessly declared that he and every other believer possess in their own faces mirrors that will reflect the outline of the face of Jesus Christ. Listen to him! "But we all, with unveiled face reflecting as a mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord the Spirit."

The human face with all its defects is the mirror that God has chosen by which to discover himself anew to sinful men.

THE MOST WONDERFUL FACE WAS MARRED BY SIN.

The face of Christ was scarred by sin. No, not his own! No, no, no! It was for you and me that he was marked by sin for all eternity. "Himself bare our sins in his own body on the tree."

"It was my sins that nailed him there; My disobedience made him bleed."

Sin is the strangest stupidity of which man is guilty; it promises pleasures in a falsely painted paradise; it throws sand into the eyes of the soul, attempting to destroy the vision of him who stands at each heart's door pleading: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Who would feed sawdust to their fowls and expect them to live? What musician would undertake to render a symphony on pasteboard instruments with threads of cotton string? On tins and tubes that had not known the Master workman's touch? Yet this would be the veriest wisdom when compared with the attempt which men make to satisfy their soul's craving for holy harmony with God, without a personal vision of God. And it is the face of God that the heart of man is straining to see. As a gentleman said to his friend: "I start into Italy tomorrow to look upon her scenery and to walk through her galleries of art, more to see if I cannot find some picture which shall fulfill all my yearning and tearful feeling touching the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world; than for anything else. If I could anywhere find his face set forth in its whole mingled majesty and tenderness, so that which I feel I could also see, I should wish to abide by it forever and never go back to my country any more."

This is the cry of a soul that has seen Christ, and then feels that he would stay on the mount alone with Jesus. Peter felt that way on the Mount of Transfiguration. One of our hymn-writers has voiced the same sentiment:

"My willing soul would stay
In such a place as this;
And sit and sing itself away
To everlasting bliss."

And we must not carelessly criticize such a soul. O what a privilege to really see the transfigured face of Jesus in your heart! But Jesus wants to take us down from the Mount, and lead us among earth's sorely afflicted folks, and turning us among them, let them see himself reflected as in a mirror.

And Christ's face seen by the heart overcomes the power of sin. A Christian woman, delicate in body but devoted in her service for Christ and needy humanity, was called one night to the bedside of a dying girl in the slums of a city. She found the girl in a large room full of men and women, relations and associates; for the girl was very popular. The room was full of smoke. Under ordinary circumstances, this lady would have been unable to endure the tobacco-laden atmosphere. A Christian friend who accompanied her said: "I better clear the folks from the room." With a strange look she simply answered: "It is good for them to be here." She remained until the early hours of the morning, quietly ministering in Jesus' name, when the soul of the sufferer slipped away. With her tender hands she performed the last loving services to the poor body; and then walked home with her friend in the gray of the morning. "I thought every moment I should find you swooning because of the tobacco smoke," said the friend. With a strange look in her face she simply said: "Were they smoking? I only saw Christ." The fact was later revealed that some of those sinful folks discovered God anew in the face of that Christian woman; and gave themselves to Christ that night, to be saved from their sins.

The human face redeemed is God's appointed mirror to reflect the glory of the face of God. "The children of Israel saw the face of Moses, that the skin of Moses' face shone." And when St. Paul declared, "We all, with unveiled face reflecting as a mirror the glory of the Lord, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, even as from the Lord the Spirit," he wanted us to know that God's plan of salvation included the high privilege of redeemed mankind revealing the face of the Redeemer to their fellowmen.

Listen! God is speaking to us today, as his loyal, loving children, presenting his great family plan of featuring his love and service in our hearts and lives, by the power of his Holy Spirit working through us that which is well-pleasing in his sight. He waits for his children to speak their glad soul-sur-render to him.

Have we done so? Do we know his gracious abiding, by the indwelling of his Holy Spirit? May we not each one sing our absolute surrender to our heavenly Father, in the blessed words of Charles Wesley?

"Finish then Thy new creation,
Pure and spotless let us be;
Let us see Thy great salvation
Perfectly restored in Thee:
Changed from glory into glory,
Till in heaven we take our place,
Till we cast our crowns before Thee,
Lost in wonder, love and praise."

And Longfellow sings of the same wonderful truth in his "Image of God":
"Celestial King! O let Thy presence pass
Before my spirit, and an image fair
Shall meet that look of mercy from on high.
As the reflected image in a glass
Doth meet the look of him who seeks it there,
And owes its being to the gazer's eye."

THE FACE OF JESUS CHRIST REVEALS THE WISDOM AND LOVE OF GOD.

God's gracious plan was for a personal revelation. He showed himself to Abram and Lot, to Moses and Gideon, to John the Baptist and Saul of Tarsus, in terms of a human life. And he requires that every heart thus discovering him shall show forth the Divine presence from their lives. It may not be a very accurate picture of Christ which any human life reveals; but Christ will certainly be discovered if his image is impressed upon a human heart.

During the last half of the nineteenth century, it is likely that the best known face on earth was that of Queen Victoria. It was on every postage stamp in the British Isles, in India, Australasia, Canada, South Africa, and also on all English coins. On the west coast of Africa an inland chief, who was also a trader, came on one occasion to the port for trade. The merchant offered him a twenty-franc French gold coin. The black man turned it over and over, noting the eagle, then handed it back, saying: "Me no sabey dat bird; me sabey old woman's face." The French emblem meant nothing to him, but Victoria's face said "This is good money." So the Christian is to carry the stamp of Jesus Christ on his face, that men may see Christ's unselfishness and his earnest devotion to the welfare of men, in the lives of each one who bears Christ's name.

God has provided a spiritual instrument of divine illumination by which his Holy Spirit outlines the life of Christ upon the human life that earnestly seeks to know him. And the picture that is penciled by the divine light is as easily recognized in spite of all human defects, as is the photograph of a friend. In a story of the long ago, we read of a mirror endowed with properties so rare that, by looking into it, its possessor could discover any object that he wished to see, however distant; and might discover with equal ease any person he desired to see. In a very real sense, the blessed Word of God is such a mirror for us. In it we see the things that are invisible; and by its aid we get a view of the face of Christ.

So, in order to be of the largest value to our fellowmen; in order to make Christ most real as a Savior to others; we must reflect the divine Life from our lives. With Tennyson let us say: "My dearest wish is to have a clearer vision of God." And with the unknown writer of "Thy Face," let us sing:

"Show me Thy face—

One transient gleam
Of loveliness divine.

And I shall never think or dream
Of other love save Thine.

All lesser light will darken quite,
All lower glories wane;

The beautiful of earth will scarce
Seem beautiful again;

"Show me Thy face—

I shall forget

The weary days of yore;

The fretting ghosts of vain regret

Shall haunt my soul no more;

All doubts and fears for future years

In quiet rest subside,

And naught but blest content and calm Within my breast abide.

"Show me Thy face—

The heaviest cross

Will then seem light to bear;

There will be gain in every loss,

And peace with every care.

With such light feet

The years will fleet,

Life seem as brief as blest,

Till I have laid my burden down

And entered into rest."

And now, beloved, let us bow our hearts before him whom St. Paul has brought, unveiled, to our attention. Let us pray.

Our heavenly Father, we praise Thee for Thy great love revealed to us in the blessed human face of Jesus Christ our Savior. Sin had sealed our eyes so that the glory of Thy holy presence we could not behold. Then Thou didst look through the eyes of the divinely human lover of souls upon us poor sinners; and lo! our sins were consumed by the fervency of Thy holy affection. Thy love saved us. Then Thy Holy Spirit called us to surrender our souls and bodies to be mirrors of Thy mercy and might to our fellow-men. Our purged hearts flung themselves into Thy arms to be made more and more like Thee, in love and sacrifice, in sorrow and service, until the glory of heaven dissolves the glory of earth. Keep us, O Christ, face to face with Thee each day, serving, singing, saving, by the power of Thy Holy Spirit. We ask in the precious name of Jesus, our Divine Redeemer. Amen.

DR. RIDOUT IN HIS TRAVEL TALKS.

Dr. Ridout, during his European travels, will write for The Herald a series of Travel Sketches of unusual interest to our readers. This will be his fourth trip to Europe and he will sketch things from the standpoint of the Preacher, the Theologian, the Fundamentalist, the Holiness Evangelist and the Editor.

His first place of visitation will be Plymouth, England, close to Land's End where Wesley wrote his famous hymn:

"Lo! on a narrow neck of land,
Twixt two unbounded seas, I stand,
Secure, insensible:
A point of time, a moment's space,
Removes me to that heavenly place,
Or shuts me up in hell."

His first preaching will be in Bristol where he will visit George Muller's famous Orphanages. Oxford will be a point of interest, where John Wesley was educated and the Holy Club was organized. He will preach for the Holiness Mission in London, Sunday night, Sept. 18. Next, he will go to Paris where he will revive memories of the World War, when he saw Paris bombarded by the Germans. While in Paris he will get in touch with the McAll Mission and Dr. Sallien's great work for the Fundamentals of the Gospel. He will visit Chateau Thierry where he was in the midst of the battle July 15, 1918, with the Thirty-Eighth Regiment. It was here he came near being taken prisoner, as the Germans surrounded them. He will go to Brussels and then on to Cologne, Germany, and many other points, and take his ship homeward at Antwerp.

Dr. Ridout will write a series of articles on such subjects as the following, during his travels:

"There go the Ships, or Launching out into the Deep."

"The Land of Wesley and the Methodist Movement."

"Pilgrims to noted Shrines."

"Men and Movements Across the Sea."

"The Land of Reformation."

"Three Johns of Religious History."

"Battlefields and Battleaxes."

"Sunset and Evening Star."

"Cathedrals and Camp Meetings."

Rev. John Knapp, D.D., Enters The Evangelistic Field.

"An important venture and a valuable and timely addition to the work of Holiness Evangelism."

Such I esteem the announcement of John F. Knapp of his detachment from all else to give himself wholly to the work of an evangelist.

Brother Knapp, to begin with, has had a splendid inheritance to prepare and capitalize him for this great work. Son of that flaming fire-brand, Rev. Martin Wells Knapp, he is blessed with much of that burning, untiring, self-sacrificing zeal which laid the foundation of the great work in Cincinnati.

Identified with that work from his childhood, John Knapp is thoroughly conversant with all these three—the ministerial, the educational and the publishing interests of Holiness Evangelism of which the Cincinnati Camp Meeting, Bible School and Revivalist Publishing Company is one of the most practical, all-round producers and factors of the Movement in the land. Brother Knapp has had the schooling of active and responsible relation to all these departments.

And besides this, he has what is an inestimable qualification for an evangelist, an experience of several years in the actual pastorate, being pastor of a Methodist Episcopal Church right there in the city of Cincinnati. This, as will be seen, has given him the two-fold training of fellowship with the regular ministry and fraternal identification with the independent movement of Holiness.

Brother Knapp is in the early prime of life and with ample vigor and strength and outlook, together with ample educational equipment for a manhood ministry in the lines of aggressive, advancing evangelism. To this he has felt special, repeated and at length the imperative call of God, and in obedience hereto, he has announced his proposed release from all other occupations and his entire devotion to this one thing. Like the rest of us, he thus throws himself entirely upon his work and the promises of God for the maintenance of his very interesting and promising family, as well as for himself. Already God has set his seal upon his evangelism in the saving and sanctifying of many souls and doors are open before him to the right hand and to the left. I do unhesitatingly commend him to the churches, as well as the camp meetings and conventions throughout the land, and pray for him a national and international career. Brother Knapp's home address is 2326 Auburn Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

In Christ's love and service,
JOSEPH H. SMITH,
Pres. National Holiness Association.

An Endorsement.

A mass meeting of the citizens of Millersburg, Ky., and vicinity was held August 15, to welcome Dr. C. C. Fisher on his return to this community. Much enthusiasm and pleasure was manifested in the fact that he will again resume the presidency and control the future policy of the Millersburg College.

Dr. Fisher assures us that the school will be conducted as a fully accredited non-sectarian Christian school in accordance with the same high ideals of the past. A thoroughly competent faculty will be in charge, selected not only for its academic ability, but for its richness in personality and breadth of experience. The courses of study will include primary, grammar school and high school departments. The special departments of art, expression and music, including piano, voice, violin and pipe organ, will be maintained under the supervision of thoroughly competent teachers.

Dr. Fisher's successful administration as President for twenty-eight years gives positive assurance to all concerned that Millersburg College will continue to maintain the same high standards of scholarship in a safe and pleasant environment as in former years.

The school is heartily endorsed and recommended as a select boarding school for girls and young women by the M. C. Alumnae Association, the Women's Club of Millersburg, the Millersburg Rotary Club and the pastors and members of the four churches of the town.

The foregoing was prepared by the undersigned committee appointed at the mass meeting of August 15th.

At Kadesh Barnea.

"O, that I might at once go up;

No more on this side Jordan stop,

But now the land possess;

This moment end my legal years,

Sorrows and sins, and doubts and fears,

A howling wilderness."

Reader, God may have wrought in you a willingness to do his will. Yet I fear that, in one prominent regard, you may not be a worker together with God. He has brought you into a position where he no longer leaves it optional with yourself whether you will believe. I would not indulge in vain repetitions, yet I must say, though it be but a reiteration of sentiments urged on other occasions, that you have now come to a point, in your heavenly journey, from which you may not recede. The Israelites came to such a point. Led onward by the hand of God, until the borders of the promised land were reached, it was not left to their choice whether they would go over and possess the land. God commanded them to go over, assuring them that he would save them from the hand of their enemies; but, "they believed not God, and trusted not in his salvation."

quence. He grasps the central thought of great spiritual truths and expresses it with prodigious force and surprising spiritual glow. 'Ineffable Glory' treats of the resurrection. In this book he confines himself rigidly to the solitary theme of the resurrection and takes the old-time, evangelical position on all phases of the subject. His chapters are introduced with striking, classic extracts from the greatest writers on biblical and theological themes. As some reviewer said about one of his previous books, these introductory extracts from various authors are alone, worth more than the price of the book. His 'Preacher and Prayer' has already become the great modern classic on prayer. His 'Purpose in Prayer' is following close in the wake of the foregoing and the two recently added volumes are destined to reach the same enviable goal.

"Doctor Bounds' writings seem to be wrung out of his heart's core. They impress you as saturated with the blood and tears and heart throbs of a great martyr-prophet hurling back his dying testimonies from the tortures of the rack. No man can be the same after reading one of his books.

"As long as grief sighs for the divine and broken hearts feel after the healing balm; as long as famishing souls thirst for God and the converted hunger after righteousness; as long as saints aspire to climb amid the celestial heights of perfect love, Doctor Bounds' books will live to fan these holy aspirations and help souls by their mighty potencies, onward and upward amid the loftiest altitudes of grace and blessing."

A colporteur of wide experience has this to say of the "Spiritual Life Books":

"For thirty-five years as a holiness colporteur I have read everything that came on my table, and now I have about one dozen of the world's best holiness papers that we represent; but must say I have never found such green pastures in all of my reading upon this subject, 'Prayer.' I can never be the same person again. No, never. Pen will not describe and type fails."

A promoter of Dr. Bounds' books, introducing "Prayer and Praying Men," compares him with John Wesley in these words: "Wesley's piety and genius and popularity flowed from his early life like a majestic river. Bounds' has been dammed up, but now it is beginning to flow and sweep with resistless force, and ere long he will be the mighty Amazon of the devotional world."

Speaking further, he says: "God gave Bounds an enlargeness of heart and an insatiable desire to do service for him. To this end he enjoyed what I am pleased to term a transcendent inspiration, else he could never have brought out of his treasure things new and old far exceeding anything we have known or read in the last century. There has no man that has lived since the days of the Apostles that has surpassed him in depths of his marvelous research into the Life of Prayer."

"Possessed of a wonderful knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, a man of unswerving faith and mystical insight, Dr. Bounds writes with a certitude, a confidence and joyous anticipation of the life to come." A religious journal says: "In this age when our minds are full of material things, a book like this comes like a breath from a new, strange world, will bring a new hope to hearts which all but despair."

Until in age a feebleness extreme, Dr. Bounds did two things: he prayed from four o'clock every morning until seven; then drove his pen with a swiftness and power—not for himself—not for financial gain—but for a great barren, backslidden world, a lost world, a world—though nominally Christian, as ignorant of God as the heathen. He filled very few engagements as an evangelist; his ministry was so rare and so sublime, that few congregations could breathe in the heavenlies where he would lead them. He was so quiet, so modest, so unassuming, that one felt something akin to awe in his presence. We believe he was one of the most unearthly men we ever saw. Yes, unearthly, that is the word; no other could describe E. M. Bounds. He lived in the world, but was not of the world. We can best describe him in the language of Oliver Goldsmith's Deserted Village, as he told of the old minister:

"Like some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale and mid-way leaves the storm;

Though round its breast the rolling clouds
are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

That was E. M. Bounds; he knew and felt the storms; the blasts of a sordid world beat upon him, but he lived far up in the eternals, where sunshine never faded—where there were no dimming clouds. But best of all he has left for us the findings of his heavenly explorations. He was a pilgrim and a stranger here; "he sought a city that hath foundation whose builder and maker is God." Furthermore, he lived in daily expectancy for his Lord's return; he was a rapturous believer in the Blessed Hope; we are sure that he will have a full share in the glories of the First Resurrection. It has been truly said: "E. M. Bounds was not a luminary—he was a sun." We shall not see his like again.

THE GREAT SALVATION.

FLOSSIE RUTH.

ANY religionists make no distinction whatever between religion and salvation, but there is a vast difference. There are numerous religions; every race and class of people has some form of religion. It has been said, "Man is a religious creature; he has a God-given instinct to worship." While it is true that there are numerous religions, there is but one salvation. It alone is man's only hope of redemption from sin.

We know that the Christian religion offers a great salvation because God, its Author, is not only great, but he does great things. He has made a great universe, which he upholds by his mighty power. There is a great heaven above us, crowded with millions of stars and planets, upheld by his mighty power and wisdom. He is just as great in love, justice and mercy as in power, and we know that he could not have given us anything less than a great salvation.

Then, too, he has given us the greatest Book in the world. No other book has ever accomplished what this book has for the world. No other book has been so opposed, and no other book has been so triumphant. After 2000 years this book has never been worn out and is still the hope of the world. Only God could have made such a Book.

Again, we have a great Savior. No one questions the fact that he is the greatest character that the world has ever known. After 2000 years of criticism the world confesses his greatness. It is a source of great satisfaction that our salvation has been brought through one who stands unchallenged as the world's greatest character.

With such a great God, such a wonderful character as our Savior, and such a wonderful Book as the Bible, our salvation could not but be, not only great, but sufficient for our eternal needs.

This salvation is great because of the value of the soul. The soul of man is the most precious thing in this world next to God and angels. Jesus gave us a hint of its value when he said, "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" This means that the soul of one man is worth more than the whole world. This soul is of more value than the millions of worlds that roll through the skies. For the time will come when the sun shall refuse to give its light and the stars of heaven shall fall from their orbits, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat. But the soul of man will still live on. Its value, too, is seen to be great when we remember that it is made in the image of God. It is of the same nature as himself. Like him it has a free will and a moral nature.

Again, this soul has had a great fall from its original condition. This precious jewel, the work of the great Creator, has been defiled and tarnished by the fires of sin, and a great salvation must be given to save it. Not merely to save it from the everlasting destruction of hell—not merely to save it from eternal punishment, although that would be great—but to bring it back to its former purity. It is so far gone that human efforts can never accomplish this. Morality, good resolutions, human culture, all legislation, can never save it. From a human standpoint the case is hopeless. Man is like a building in ruins. Unless a power above himself comes to the rescue, the case is hopeless. He is dead in trespasses and sins. Unless some one has the power to speak the voice that wakes the dead, the case is too far gone. The soul is like Lazarus in the tomb—not only dead, but exceedingly corrupt.

Again, it is a great salvation because it is complete and proposes to remedy man's fallen condition. It is no wonder that the apostle calls it "so great salvation." For he says it proposes to go down to the very roots of the disease and eradicate it. He also says where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound. Jesus Christ proposes not merely to save men from hell, and that would be a "great salvation"; he proposes to save us from sin, the thing which makes hell possible. He proposes not merely to save man from the results of the disease, but he proposes to save from the disease of sin itself. He proposes not merely to raise the soul from death and give it new life, but he promises to give us that life more abundantly. This is the Bible teaching on the matter of salvation. How could it then be anything but a great salvation, when we remember who was its Author, and also that it saves man from sin which is the cause of all man's distress. None of us will ever know until we get to heaven, how much is included in those words: "He is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him."

Since these things are true, how we ought to prize this great salvation, and to press its claims upon all men! When we see the record of the Gospel, what wonderful things it has accomplished in the salvation of the worst types of character in the world, how can we doubt that it is a great salvation? This salvation that took a Mary Magdalene and made her fit to live among the angels; that made a crafty Zacchaeus into an honest man, and made a dying thief in one day fit to live in the bowers of Paradise, and is carrying on the same work still, can be called nothing less than great. There is no greater work going on in the world today. We hear much about the claims of Modernism, which is called "new religion," but is really no religion at all—but where has it produced like results?

Again, it is a great salvation, for it is eternal. It will last. Our time of probation will be over. Paul says he became the Author of eternal salvation. In Isaiah we read: "Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: for the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner: but my salvation shall be forever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished." The sad thing about earthly blessings is that they are so insecure. Some things are almost too good to last. Riches take to themselves wings. Reputations are tarnished. Loved ones are

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

SILVER LAKE CAMP MEETING, WILMINGTON, MASSACHUSETTS.

The twentieth annual encampment of the Silver Lake Camp Meeting Association, Wilmington, Mass., was held August 5-14 inclusive. In every respect this was the best meeting ever held at Silver Lake, so say those who have attended regularly.

The weather was ideal; the attendance was splendid; the dormitory was crowded and there were more tents than ever before. On Sundays the tabernacle was crowded. Great grace was upon the saints.

The sane, aggressive and intensely spiritual leadership of our beloved presiding elder, Rev. Thomas Laite, had much to do with the success of the meeting. He had urged preachers and people to come with the spirit of prayer and expectation. Never have we seen sweeter harmony in a camp meeting.

Brother Laite's initiative had made possible during the year, a splendid dining room, which added greatly to the comfort of the people. Rev. Gordon Edwards was superintendent of the dining hall and the food was abundant and most palatable.

The singing was a splendid feature of the camp. Miss Lula Barnard, of Lowell, assisted by cornetists Edwards and Laite, led the great chorus choir in triumphant song, such as only the blood-washed can produce. Mrs. Elsner, wife of the Evangelist, assisted the leader in many beautiful duets.

Rev. Theodore Elsner, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was the evangelist, and preached the word with clearness, unction and power. His morning Bible readings were rich and inspirational. His messages in the evening were pungent and soul-grIPPING. No definite count was kept of the seekers, but the number was large. Time and again the altar was filled with those who were seeking either pardon, restoration or holiness. Scenes of spiritual power occurred that reminded one of the early days of the Holiness Movement.

The closing Sunday was the crowning day. The evangelist brought a great message on "Divine Love" in the morning. In the afternoon Presiding Elder Laite preached a sermon of great power, that filled the altar and brought the glory down. In the evening great unction was on the message of the evangelist and fully twenty-five knelt at the altar seeking God, and many professed to pray through.

Finances came easily. Besides meeting the current expenses, five hundred dollars was subscribed to meet a note soon due. The people gave hilariously. Needless to say this glorious meeting means much for the cause of holiness in New England, especially to the Evangelical Church. Every pastor went back to his charge more fully determined than ever to push the battle for holiness, and every pastor thanks God for a true, sincere superior officer in Presiding Elder Laite, who will back him to the limit in pressing the battle for the Lord and will not pander to carnal, worldly official members who may happen to be well-to-do.

If the pastor is aggressive and hot enough he will stir carnality if it exists in a holiness church, and woe to that society when the district leader sides with the carnal crowd, backed by unsympathetic men, who may be exalted to official position. They can crush the man of God and seem to get by with it, but sooner or later its influence is felt to the ends of the district. The Holy Ghost is grieved and the banner of holiness trailed in the dust. Preachers lose their courage to deal with a carnal situation, resign rather than press the battle, for they have lost confidence in those higher up to back them in this issue, and so it comes to pass worse things are sometimes tolerated in holiness churches than are met in the so-called formal churches, for men's money and person are more highly regarded than the real cause of God. Thank God for men of courage and sincerity like Brother Laite.

MOXAHALA, OHIO, CAMP MEETING.

It has been my great pleasure to be engaged the past few weeks with Rev. E. T. Steele, pastor of the McLuney charge in an old-fashioned camp meeting. We had one of the Evangelical Methodist League tents and a fine plot of ground just outside the village of Moxahala, Ohio. Great interest was manifested from the first service until the last. People from all the surrounding country attended the services and on the last Sunday it was estimated that about two thousand people attended all three services.

Miss Marie Gray, of Elkhaville, Ill., and Miss Catherine Carr, of Erie, Pa., had charge of the special music and young people's services. Their work was very efficient and souls were saved in several of the young people's services. Bro. E. T. Steele, an old student of Taylor University, was the platform manager and proved to be a very capable manager. I have never been associated in the work of the Lord with a more congenial and Christian gentleman. From the beginning he let it be known that there were no strings on the evangelist and that we were there for business.

God wonderfully blessed our efforts with salvation from the first night. Many beautiful conversions and sanctifications were witnessed to by the Holy Spirit. About one hundred souls bowed at the altar and about 90 souls prayed through to victory. Among them were several young people prospective students for Asbury College. One man eighty-six years old, after many years of wandering and walking alone without God, bowed his soul at the foot of the cross and drops of mercy were poured upon his poor heart.

As the meeting drew near to a close the salvation tide was running so strong, especially on the last Sunday, that the writer questioned in his own mind as to the closing of the meeting. In prayer after the afternoon service the writer asked the Lord if it was his will for the meeting to go on another week to give 15 souls at the altar at the evening service. At the close of the service 23 souls were crying to God for pardon or purity. It was announced that the services would continue into the week. It was evident on the following nights that it was the will of the Lord, for 17 more souls bowed at the altar, among them some of the hardest sinners of the town. We closed Thursday night with seven at the altar.

Thirty-six subscribers to The Evangelical Methodist League were secured the fee to be collected at a later date by the pastor as the mine strike had made money a little tight. The camp voted that the meeting be made an annual affair and the evangelistic party were unanimously voted to return next year.

We are now in another campaign seven miles from Moxahala at McLuney, Ohio. The field is ripe for another of God's mighty outpourings. Praise God for full salvation and a mighty Christ to deliver from all sin.

GOSHEN, KENTUCKY.

The union tent meeting of two weeks' duration (July 24 to August 7), at Goshen, Ky., which was conducted by the Rev. Charles W. Welch, D.D., of the Fourth Ave. Presbyterian Church, Louisville, closed Sunday night with a very large attendance for the community. While only three persons accepted Christ by profession of faith during the meeting, the main purpose of it was more than accomplished; namely, the quickening of the spiritual life of the members of all churches participating and a closer fellowship between them. This was indicated by hearty co-operation of all denominations in the surrounding communities, by their presence throughout the entire series of services, by their liberal support financially, and by the numerous expressions of appreciation, indicating that all who came and opened their hearts received a blessing.

Dr. Welch preached in his usual inimitable way, not only presenting the gospel message with great simplicity and earnestness, but keeping ever in view the closer unity of God's people, and closing with a sermon on Christ's prayer that they might all be one. It was a most impressive service and discourse. He took occasion to say on the second night that the gospel tent of the Rev. H. C. Morrison, D.D., in which they were worshipping, reminded him that it was in a meeting of Dr. Morrison's years ago in Franklin, Ky., that he was converted as a mere boy. This tent was not only adequate but perfect in coolness and comfort for the large crowds attending, and much appreciation was expressed for its use.

The Rev. Mr. Seigler, pastor of Goshen Church, conducted the devotional services, and Mr. Robert Visey, of the Presbyterian Seminary, was pianist. The union choir of all the churches surrounding gave splendid devotional music throughout the meeting, and one evening the Leiderkrantz Society of Louisville furnished a chorus of most beautiful selections. The little folks were very active in passing the books and fans. Altogether this was one of the greatest meetings ever held in this community.

TWO MEETINGS IN KENTUCKY.

The meeting at Barterville in the Methodist Episcopal Church was a good meeting. We were there seven years ago, and we found quite a number who got through in that meeting true to God. We were there three years ago for only a few nights, and had another good time with them. These are as fine class of people as you will find; they are spiritual, hospitable, and liberal. Barterville has been the scene of many a glorious victory in holiness; it is the birthplace of holiness in that section. They had just finished a beautiful new church which we dedicated the last Sunday of the meeting. The good pastor, Rev. I. S. Pinuer, and the officers and building committee, turned the whole service, and money raising over to me. We raised every dollar in cash that was needed to cover the indebtedness and had $300 surplus. In the afternoon we had a wonderful dedication service, and at night a fine soul-saving time. We had basket dinner on the ground, and all had plenty of good things to eat. The Kentuckians cannot be surpassed for their hospitality. Mrs. McBride and I stayed in the home of the Asbury's and we have never been better entertained anywhere. Brother and Sister Richie, and daughter (Brother and Sister Asbury's children) moved over and stayed through the meeting; then with father and mother Barnett to help in the caring for the needs, we had a big happy family, and what a time we had in the Lord. We are always glad to go the Asbury home. God bless them. Tom Asbury has been like a brother to me for years. Brother Pinuer is from God's Bible School, and he and his good wife are as fine holiness people as you will meet. He is a very capable young man, and we anticipate the pleasure of being with him again in a meeting this fall, D. V.

Our next meeting was Mt. Olivet camp; we were there last year, but this was far the best meeting, and that old Mt. Olivet is on her way back to the front ranks in the holiness camps. We have not witnessed such manifestations of the Spirit in years as we witnessed at some of the services in this meeting. Preaching was dispensed with, and souls wept their way to God in the people's meeting. The old folks have an hour of singing followed by a praise service each morning, and they sing the songs of long ago, and then such testimonies and shouting one rarely sees in these days of coldness. How refreshing to see the Spirit work. Prof. and Mrs. Shank had charge of the singing, and they rendered fine service for the Lord. We have had several meetings in the past few years with Brother and Sister Shank, and the way they have improved, and grown spiritually is wonderful. They are among our best and most spiritual singers, and any church or camp meeting will do well to secure them for service. The crowds were fine in the week, and on Sundays very large; over twenty-five hundred for the record crowd. We enjoyed our labors very much with these good people the past two years. The pastors of the two Methodist churches of Mt. Olivet are both fine, sanctified men and stood right by the camp meeting. Both of them preached once this year, and they are both great preachers of the gospel of holiness. Rev. S. L. Moore is pastor of the Methodist Church, South, and Rev. O. J. Polley is pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and they work together like brothers. Rev. S. L. Moore, a graduate of Asbury College, can hold a few meetings or camps this coming year and any church or camp meeting committee in Kentucky, or anywhere else will be fortunate to secure his service. Write him at Mt. Olivet, Ky. Mrs. McBride rendered good service in these meetings. Brother Insko, pastor of the East Side Methodist Church in Maysville, was with us several days, and preached us a great sermon. Rev. Gordon Rainey and his good wife and fine little daughter was with us one day. They are our good friends, and he is a fine preacher of holiness. Our good old friend, Rev. Kendall and his good wife were with us a few times. God bless all these good preachers, and keep them true. There are many fine holiness people there, and we say, God bless them all.

J. B. McBride.

WACO, TEXAS, CAMP.

The thirty-sixth Waco Holiness Camp Meeting has just passed into history with a consensus of opinion that it was the best meeting in many years. The harmonious co-operation was something beautiful. Looked like every one tried to excel in Christian love.

The workers were Rev. Harry S. Allen, Macon, Ga., leader in the preaching, Rev. H. W. Galloway, University Park, Iowa, led in song, accompanied by his little son Charles at the piano. Bro. Galloway also brought a few good sermons. Bro. L. J. Derk, Bible man from Shamokin, Pa., was all round worker, Miss Catherine Hinde, Waco, had charge of the young people's and children's meetings and her work was well done. In fact, they each wrought well.

No effort was made at counting, but a number received pardon, restitution or purity. The saints were greatly refreshed. Truly the times of refreshing came from the presence of the Lord. Numbers shouted and rejoiced. Several new campers were on the grounds and some who had been gone many years came back.

Rev. B. F. Gassaway, Higgins, Tex., one of the surviving founders of this camp, and a promoter of Holiness for the past fifty years, was absent on account of feeble health and was greatly missed. He sent the following telegram to the board: "Sorry to inform the Board I am unable to attend Waco camp this year, on account of physical disability. My prayer to God is for a successful meeting. It is well with my soul. Don't give up the battle. Be faithful unto death. Then the crown. Love to the Camp." He also sent his check to head up the expense of the meeting. God bless him forever more. He has been a spiritual blessing to all who have known him. All things considered, we have scarcely had a sweeter or better meeting in years. We thank God and take courage to carry on. It was decided to hold another camp meeting next year the last Sunday in July and the first Sunday in August.

WAYNE TENT MEETING.

Our last meeting was at Wayne, a county seat town of about 2,000 population, beautifully situated among West Virginia hills, 20 miles south of Huntington. This meeting closed out in a blaze of victory. Fourteen were at the altar the last night and all but two prayed through to definite experiences.

We were favored with good crowds throughout the meeting, but our great difficulty was to get them to move. Consequently our number of professions was not so large, only fifty-five in all saved and sanctified.

Two pastors of the town stood by us loyally, Rev. Ikerd, of the M. E. C., S., and Rev. Boswell, of the Pilgrim Holiness Church. They are two splendid men of God. Then we were blessed with the presence of several visiting brethren. Rev. R. A. Young, just back from some of his western camps, who is engaged in a tent meeting for Eastwood M. E. C., S., of Huntington, together with the pastor, Rev. C. H. Ravle, also Rev. Newton King, financial agent for Asbury College, was with us for a day and made a splendid representation of the college.

Misses Monford and Quigg, two of Asbury's students who are visiting the camps in Asbury's interest, visited us and rendered help with their voices and harps.

We are now starting our tent campaign at Louisa, Ky. Prospects are somewhat discouraging, but we are praying and believing for a great revival. Herald family, hold us up to the throne.

the blessed, patient, loving Lord Jesus Christ. There are times when one sermon can arrest the tide of thought and direct it into safe, spiritual channels. May God help you to preach with great wisdom and power his Word which he has declared shall not return unto him void. In the beginning of your ministry in this difficult place, I do not believe it would be wise to spend the larger part of your morning discourses in a rage of denunciation against short skirts, bobbed hair and the many forms and fads of modern times which are certainly not a means of grace. But your object is to win souls for Christ and you are trusting in the Word of God, earnest preaching, and the Holy Ghost to apply the same in a way that will compel the people to think. I am sure you have intelligence and religion enough to be saved from suspecting that I am suggesting that you become a trimmer or a pussy-foot preacher. No, I am believing that you love the people to whom you have been sent as a minister and that your great desire is to save their souls.

Sixth, in your visitations you are almost sure to find some devout people, people who have been soundly regenerated, possibly some who have been graciously sanctified, who are sad and burdened over the situation. Take them into your confidence, ask them to join you in prayer and through them you may begin to circulate some good religious literature. "The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life" is a good book. It provokes thought, stirs up the soul, helps to create a hungering and thirsting for fellowship with the Holy Spirit. Try like a good physician of souls to find out something of the history of your people, of their secret thoughts and desires and inward struggles. I have been surprised and encouraged sometimes to find business men of great prominence in the affairs of life with very hungry hearts, and have found it a great help to me to sit down quietly, draw them out and listen to what they had to say. It has prepared me to minister to them in a way that I could not possibly have done had I not learned from their own lips their soul struggles and heart longings.

Seventh, remember all the while that everything you are doing is with an eye single to the conversion of sinners, the sanctification of believers, a gracious awakening and the lifting of your church back to the Bible, to God and the saving power of his dear Son and to gracious communion with the Holy Spirit. You cannot do this in a few days. This cannot be accomplished by a few fiery, denunciatory sermons. It will take time to win the confidence of the people so that you are prepared to lead them into the blessed secret of salvation. But this is so worthwhile that you can afford to take time, be patient, to work hard and as you go forward along the lines suggested you will begin to see fruit. Folks will be saying, "I am so thankful that we have a pastor who believes the Bible and preaches the real Gospel." They will begin to tell you how they have been deceived and put to sleep in carnal security. In your young people's services, some of them will be coming to you and saying that they have never had any change of heart and that they desire your prayers. By and by you will have revival services on Sunday evenings and will see a sinner converted occasionally and church members will come up and say to you, "This is something new in our church. I want you to pray for me."

Most of all, keep yourself saturated with Bible truths, drenched with prayer, intoxicated with the love of Christ. Be a man of God. Let your heart be warm with compassionate love for all the people. Visit the prisoners, the outcast. Get some of the young people to help you in a meeting in a rented room down among the most wretchedly lost. Go on with the good work and the gracious fire will begin to burn and you will be able to win souls, to arouse a desire in the hearts of your people for salvation and, under the leading of the Spirit, you will know when to undertake a revival meeting. It may take you several years to prepare the ground, but you are learning many lessons. You are getting close to many souls. You are growing in grace. You are getting the confidence of the people and all the while now and then some one is being converted. You are circulating good literature. You are not ranting, scolding, abusing, but you are standing up in the pulpit like a true man of God preaching with great boldness and authority and love the glorious Gospel. The whole temperature and atmosphere of your church is changing from zero in the far away north to the warm sunshine and beautiful flowers of Florida. The signs of life are putting forth. You have sown, you have cultivated, you have waited for the gracious rain of truth and the warmth of the Holy Ghost. The harvest is growing, ripening and you will have a gracious ingathering. Some of your strongest opposers will sicken and die suddenly. Some of your most worldly members who do not intend to be saved will move away into other cities. Some will quietly drop out and go and join a worldly congregation ministered to by a modern liberalist. But there are hungry souls in the city who will find out that there is a man of God in your pulpit and they will be coming into your church and through the patient, loving, courageous, sanctified ministry of the years you will be able to gather many stars for the crown of our blessed Master.

I am quite sure that some people will read this letter who will not be in sympathy with the above suggestions. They will feel that you should fall upon your worldly congregation like Samson upon the Philistines with the jaw-bone of an ass, that you should kill or capture, save or scatter, bring in or break up, in short order. Very well, may the Lord bless and guide you. In your prayers and thinking if the Spirit leads you differently from these suggestions do not hesitate for a moment. Disregard what I have said and follow the Holy Spirit.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

Walton and Helena Meetings.

Did you read Rev. T. P. Roberts' report of the revival meetings at Walton and Helena? The report thrilled my soul. That is old-time Methodism. Faithful preaching, earnest praying and keeping at it, brings down the divine power and brings people to Christ. The same means faithfully used throughout the land would bring like results in thousands of villages in these United States. If the preachers will get busy, go to it, hold on, pray and preach, and preach and pray, the people will come, God will answer, and it will prove there is not one word of truth in the slander being circulated on God that the day of revivals is passed. If the preachers prating about the day of revivals being passed, with the seat of their pants worn so slick that they almost slip off their easy chairs, will get out, wear out their shoe leather, and the knees of their pants at prayer, go to preaching a pure gospel, they will find that lack of revivals is not the fault of God or the people, but their own fault. The next time you hear a preacher saying the day of revivals is passed, if you will examine his pants, I'll guarantee that the seat of them need patching, and there is a good crease in the knees.

A Chapter from My Autobiography

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE OLD METHODIST.

ON my return to Frankfort from the meetings in Maysville, I went to Col. E. Polk Johnson, who was then public printer, and made a contract with him to print the paper. It was a modest beginning—four pages not much larger than foolscap, published once a month. The name of the paper was "The Old Methodist." To plead for the old doctrines, the old faith and the deep piety and ardent zeal and service of the fathers was my thought. There was no thought or desire for a conflict with authorities or ecclesiastics. But the paper was launched and the indelible ink was on my fingers. The five hundred copies of the first issue cost me $15.00—the income from them in advertisements and subscriptions was $14.50. I was out just fifty cents on the first issue.

The people received "The Old Methodist" kindly, but had no idea that it would live and grow; but I knew so well that it would both live and grow that I took no offense at ridicule, and felt no discouragement at the indifference of some from whom I expected sympathy and help. I had not the remotest dream of the strong opposition I was to meet with, and the constant toil involved, but I girded myself in his name for the conflict and went forward.

At the close of my pastorate in Frankfort, the paper was not quite two years old, and I was in debt on the venture $300.00. My publishers were kind to me, and after some months I was able to pay up the old account which I did, and received some kindly words of encouragement from those old newspaper men which I shall never forget. I was picking up some lessons in the meantime. I sent the paper to many of my acquaintances, some subscribed, others wrote me that they did not want the paper, but two men in whose homes I had been kindly entertained, and for whom I had a very high regard, wrote me most indignant letters, almost abusive. I had sent each of them the paper a year, and wrote if they liked it I would be glad if they would renew, and send me fifty cents for the year it had been coming to their homes. I was careful to see that these letters were not duns, but simply suggestions. They came back at me hard, and deeply impressed upon me the fact that a man does not know who his friends are. We may be entertained with much courtesy and imagine ourselves much beloved, when really we are only endured. Frequently I have followed evangelists who were severely criticised by the very people who had made quite a lot of fuss over them when they were with them. No doubt the same has been true in my own case. Well, let us be humble and careful not to presume upon our imagined popularity, and the devotion of the people to us.

There are few experiences more humiliating than to suddenly awake to the fact that some brother on whose devoted friendship you were counting with most restful confidence, really cares nothing for you, and would much prefer not to be bothered. The life of the newspaper man is full of interesting and painful discoveries. But all along the way you will find those of whom you had thought but little, praying for you, and ready to lend a helping hand.

When I located to evangelize, I changed "The Old Methodist" from a monthly to a weekly, enlarged it to eight pages, making the pages much larger than formerly, and named it "The Kentucky Methodist." I moved to Lexington and we published the paper on Main Street, almost opposite the post-office. I sold a one-half interest in the paper to Rev. C. F. Oney. We went to Cincinnati and bought a small outfit, enough to set up the paper, hauling the forms in a hand cart to the Transylvania Publishing Co., to have it pressed.

When we were setting up our office in Lexington, a young man whom I had met in revival meetings at Paris, Ky., presented himself and asked for employment. He was a practical printer and all around newspaper man. We put him in charge of the whole back office. He set most of the type, made up the forms, gave us many pointers about the practical workings of the mechanical part of a newspaper office, read proof, and in a modest way took general control of the office. His name is Thomas B. Talbot, one of the truest friends of a lifetime.

Bro. Oney and myself got down to business, wrote to our friends, sent out circulars and propositions, and sat at our little window, looked across the street at the post-office with as much solicitude as a small country boy waiting in the spring of the year for the first goose egg. How eagerly we watched for the mail to come in, and both went over full of hope to come back soberly reflecting over the fact that the common run of people are very slow in their appreciation of a good thing. But the post-office was a great comfort to us. Often we cast our eyes with pleading, affectionate glances at its cold stone towers, and when all else failed we went to the post-office and gazed furtively into our private box. Even when there was nothing in it, we learned to comfort ourselves with the optimistic conclusion that mails had missed connection, that the paper was making a good impression and that next mail would bring in a good batch of subscribers.

There is a scripture which says we are saved by hope. Hope is a great thing in starting a paper enterprise. But for hope, and the post-office, in those early days, we would have had a gloomy time of it. Yet down deep in my heart I rested in him who had led me into it, and had no fear. I expected a long battle but a final victory.

Be Not Conformed to This World.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE Bible is a great old Book. Great because it is true. Great because it contains all that we need in this world or the next. Great because of its Author, and great because, if followed in its precepts, we shall be safely steered across the sea of life to that City which hath foundations, whose Builder and Maker is God.

This same old Book tells us not to be "conformed to this world." Now there is a reason why this admonition was written; that people through all ages could take warning and flee this subtle enemy of spiritual development. Paul, in writing to Timothy, warns women especially, that they take heed to this seductive deceiver, when he says, "I will that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety, not with broidered hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly apparel; but which becometh women professing godliness, with good works."

We do not think the apostle meant that we should wear cheap clothing, but good material should be made modestly so as not to attract attention, either for its plainness or its extravagance. A good piece of material can be altered and made to serve one three times as long as a cheap piece, and in the long run is much more economical than a cheaper piece.

The Apostle Peter also touched upon this important point when he said, "Whose adorning, let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting of the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel. But let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

What is more beautiful than a meek and quiet spirit, either in man or woman? Lord Byron said, "Woman least adorned was most adorned." Modesty is woman's greatest asset, and if that be gone she is of all creatures most pitiable. In this connection we wish to say that no truly modest woman can wear the gauze waists that many wear, and not make an impression upon the world that she has sold out to fashion, even at the risk of forfeiting her modesty. No woman can be said to be truly modest who is willing to bare her bosom to the lustful gaze of every passer-by.

Then the short skirt is equally as suggestive as the low neck and thin waist. You meet young women, and even old women, on the streets whose skirts are so short that their limbs are exposed eighteen inches more than should be. One of the most disgusting sights I have ever seen is that of an old maid or an old married woman, with her cheeks painted in red spots, her hair crimped like an actress, and her breasts bare down to a most shocking distance, and her skirts short enough for a school-girl of twelve. She is surely the monstrosity of the Twentieth Century!

Now really, why do they dress this way? It is not because they cannot get clothes made decently. It is not that they look better in this mardigras outfit; they do it to attract the attention of men to their person which God intended, and decency intended, should be hidden from the gaze of the lustful and vicious. We have often been surprised at men who seemed to "know things," and who would be supposed to know when a woman is dressed decently, that they allow their wives to dress as they do. If they persisted in dressing like the "woman of the street" I would refuse to accompany them in public. I have as little respect for a man who will accompany his wife, who has on about one-third of the clothes she should wear, as the woman who will be bold enough to attire herself in this godless fashion. But enough! Think on these things!"

Charles G. Finney, in speaking of following the fashion says, we should shun it because it is directly opposed to the spirit of the gospel. It is minding earthly things, which we are positively forbidden to do. Then it is contrary to our profession, for when we as Methodists unite with the Church we promise "to renounce the vain pomp and glory of the world," and to follow Christ in our daily walk. But when we refuse to walk, even as he walked, we manifestly show that we love the praise of men more than the praise of God. This is the whole truth in a nutshell. I challenge anyone to show any other reason for this extravagant and foolish paraphernalia than that they covet the applause and admiration of men.

John 2:15 knocks the whole fashion business in the head, and buries it forever when he says: "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world: if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." Dear reader, does that knock you and me out of the ring? If so, let us hie away to our closets and ask God to so empty us of the world that we may be filled with his Holy Spirit. May God save everyone who reads this, from the goddess of fashion, and bring us to realize that we are to render an account of how we spend our money, how we use our influence, and how we care for the body—the Temple of the Holy Ghost.

Notice!

Dr. G. W. Ridout and Mrs. Ridout sailed on the S.S. Arabic, Sept. 2, for England and the Continent. Dr. Ridout will preach some in England having had a number of invitations to conventions there. He expects to preach in Bristol and London, Sunday, Sept. 18. They will spend a week in Paris and France during which time they will visit some of the battlefields where Dr. Ridout was engaged with the Third Division during the World War. They will spend a week traveling on the Continent and will visit Brussels, Cologne, and other points. They will return by S.S. Lapland from Antwerp, arriving in New York again about October 10. Dr. Ridout will write a number of Travel Sketches for his second page of THE HERALD beginning with the next issue.

taken away. Health decays. But God's salvation lasts beyond the tomb, and will last through the ages. The best of it is, that the best of all things, salvation, is promised forever.

"This earth shall soon dissolve like snow,
The sun refuse to shine,
But God who called me here below
Shall be forever mine."

Is it not a sin to neglect so great a salvation? We do not say it is merely a sin to reject it, but is it not an insult to our heavenly Father who has provided so great salvation, to neglect it in any way? Is it not trampling under foot the blood of the covenant, whereby we were sanctified, and calling it an unholy thing, by our carelessness or unwillingness to allow it to save us from all sin? And yet thousands are satisfied with a nominal religion. They care little for salvation as long as they profess religion. Neglect is just as fatal in many cases as actual suicide. A man above the falls of Niagara who refuses to ply the oars to escape, is just as truly a suicide as he who rows downstream. A sick man who refuses to take the medicine that would cure him is just as truly a destroyer of himself as though he took poison. A soul that refuses to let God do for him his best, just as truly destroys himself as an out-breaking sinner who never seeks salvation. Well may we say with the apostle, "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

DAILY TEXTS.

Mrs. Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

October 8.

Text: "This same Jesus . . . shall so come as ye have seen him go." Acts 1:11.

Story: They were talking, in the home, of how Jesus was coming back to earth for his loved ones, and they would love to see him. A darling little boy said, "I know I would love to see him, for when you talk about him, there is a cry in my eyes, just like there is when papa is away and I want him to come home."

Poem:

"Thou art coming! Thou art coming! We shall meet Thee on the way, We shall see Thee, we shall know Thee,

We shall bless Thee, we shall show Thee,

All our hearts could never say, What an anthem that will be, Ringing out our love to Thee, Jesus, Savior, once with Thee Oh, how blessed it will be."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, we thank Thee that Jesus went away to prepare a mansion for us and is coming back to take us to be with him.

October 9.

Text. "Be ye kind one to another." Eph. 4:32.

Story. One Christmas, my little five-year-old sister Jennie had a China doll given to her. One day, baby Lucy wanted to hold it and Jennie put her in the little rocker, and put the doll in her arms, and said, "You won't get up, will you?" Baby Lucy said, "Me not get up." But she forgot, and ran toward the fireplace, and fell, and the doll lay all broken to pieces. Baby cried. Jennie did not scold her, nor slap her. She picked her up, and put her arms around her, and kissed her, and said, "You didn't mean to do it, did you, Lucy?"

Poem Prayer:

Heavenly Father, "I ask Thee for a kindly love, By thoughtful watching wise, To meet the glad with joyful smiles, And wipe the weeping eyes, A heart at leisure from itself To soothe and sympathize."

October 10.

Text. "Prove me . . . bring ye all the tithes . . . I will pour you out a blessing." Malachi 3:10-12.

Story. One day my little Melva said, "Mama, Auntie Munson gave me a quarter to go to the park Saturday, but I can't tithe it because I want an ice cream, and to go on the Merry-go-round, and"—

"But Melva," I said, "if you will tithe it, Jesus will give you more." So she put 3 cents in her Jesus box. That night her father gave her a quarter and she had more than she needed and some left for another day at the park.

Poem.

Prove God, he will increase your store, Prove God, and he will give you more. Prove God, you will be happy, too; Because to him you have been true, And he has kept his word to you.

Prayer. Jesus, I will lay away my tithe for you. Help me to be true.

October 11.

Text. "I have found my sheep that was lost . . . joy shall be in heaven." Luke 15:3-7.

Story. One day I let my beautiful shepherd puppy follow me to the post-office and lost him. I walked over two miles hunting for him and found him. I carried him all the way home, in my arms. I did not mind that the day was hot, nor the way long, nor that he was heavy. I had found my pet. I thought I knew how happy Jesus was when he found the little lamb that was lost!

Poem.

There were ninety and nine that safely lay, In the shelter of the fold, But one was out on the hills far away Far off from the gates of gold.

"Lord, Thou hast here, Thy ninety and nine,

Are they not enough for Thee?" But the Shepherd made answer, "That is mine Who wandered away from me."

"But none of the ransomed ever knew How deep were the waters crossed, Nor how dark was the night that our Lord passed through, Ere he found his sheep that was lost.

"But all through the mountains, thunder riven, And up from the rocky steep, There arose a cry to the gates of heaven, Rejoice I have found my sheep."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, I thank Thee that Jesus has found me.

October 12.

Text. "Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him." Psalm 91:15.

Some wild lads tried to make a little boy, who loved Jesus, join them in a wrong act. He said, "I will not." They said, "We will make you! You are alone!" "I am not! There are two of us and the other One is always a match for those who come against him." "You will be used up before he gets here." "No, I shall not! He is here now! The other one is God!" The leader said, "Come on fellows. No use fooling with such a chap."

Poem.

"Be not dismayed, whate'er betide God will take care of you, Under his wings of love abide God will take care of you."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, I do love you! I thank Thee that Thou hast promised to deliver all those that set their love upon Thee.

October 13.

Text. "The Lord knows them that are his." 2 Tim. 2:19.

Story. A darling little boy had been taught to love Jesus. When he was five years old his mother cut off his long curls and told the family that at dinner they were all to take no notice of him, and pretend that they did not know him.

They forgot the Bible injunction, "Be ye kind." Eph. 4:32.

"The least unkindness, Is a great offence."

No one noticed him or gave him food. He passed his plate to his father who said, "What a strange little boy is this?" He said, "Why, papa, I am your own little boy." Cruelly, the father replied, "Our little boy had long curls." The little lad burst into tears and said, "Well, Jesus knows me anyhow." Then they repented and hugged him and kissed him.

Poem.

"Precious thought that Jesus knows! Careth for his child, Bids me nestle closer to him, When the storms beat wild, And though the tears may fall, He is my All in All."

Prayer. Jesus I thank Thee that Thou dost know and love Thy little ones and care for them.

October 14.

Text. "The blood shall be to you for a token." Exodus 12:13.

Story. A tiny boy was told the story of the Passover night, in Egypt, when the blood was sprinkled on the doors of Israel, that the death angel should not smite anyone in the house. Afterward, he was very ill and said to the one who told him the story, "I want the blood of Jesus on me." She prayed and the Lord healed him.

Poem.

"My Jesus, Thou the Loving One The bitter blood strokes bore That I, in sickness all undone, Might live to love Thee more."

Prayer. O Lord, help me to be more faithful to Thee, because Thou art so very good to me.

October 15.

Text. "Behold I come suddenly . . . even so come, Lord Jesus." Rev. 22:12, 20.

Story. A lad in the country was hired out to a grocer in the city. He was faithful to his duties, but he missed father and mother, the old gray horse, the chickens, the cow and the fresh milk. He grew pale and thin. A letter came saying his father would come for him. Every time he came to the window he looked down the road. At last, he saw the old gray horse, and ran out, and was soon in his father's arms, and at home.

Poem.

"Jesus is coming! sing the glad word, Coming for those he redeemed by his blood."

"O joy! oh, delight should we go without dying, No sickness, no sadness, no dread, and no crying."

Prayer. Lord, Jesus, help me to be ready for Thy coming.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I will try to write a few thoughts again to let you and the dear cousins know that I have survived the floods and am still alive to thank the dear Heavenly Father for his great mercy to his dependent children. I never felt more than now how much our lives, our comforts, our all are at his mercy. My home is not on a river to be overflowed but being in a lower part of the city a cyclone, or tornado struck the upper part and was followed by a cloudburst which sent torrents of water down on this part making a river of our streets and lakes in our gardens and yards, filling cellars, basements and even floors of some houses. I did not think of such a thing till the water was running into the house and neighbors carried me out to a surry which landed me with relatives where I stayed two days before I could come and see the devastation of my home. A friend asked me if I prayed. I said, "Yes, I prayed." What could those do who could not feel the "Everlasting Arms" beneath them? Dear cousins, be sure you make peace with the loving Father in heaven who is ever ready to help us in time of need, Yea, who is ready to help even before we ask. We are dependent on him every day and hour for life and all we have, for life and all the blessings we enjoy. With much love for all the cousins and dear Aunt Bettie, and the hope to meet you all in the Father's house he is preparing for us. Mary S. Hudson. Canton, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band? I am nine years old and in the sixth grade. My mother takes The Herald. I read page ten and like it fine. I have read the New Testament through. How many have my birthday? It is May 27. I am four feet tall. If any one has my birthday write to me. I hope to see my letter in print, for this is my first letter to The Herald.

Ruth Berkley. Spring Lick, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a reader of page ten, just come to join your circle. We have a fine church building. I go to the Methodist Church. The name of our church is Marella. Bro. McKneely is our pastor. We have a fine brick school building called Plainview. We're going to have high school down there next winter. I am eleven years old and am in the seventh grade. I live thirteen miles from our nearest railroad station, Keyes. We live twenty-five miles from Boice City. It is the county seat of Cinnarron county. I have two brothers and three sisters. My mother died when I was ten days old. Two sisters are married. My other sister and two brothers go to high school. All that can guess my middle name I will write them a letter. It is a Bible name, with four letters. Love to all the cousins and Aunt Bettie.

Audie Brown. Griggs, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a North Dakota girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it very much. I have never read any better paper. I am glad to see the letters from boys and girls saying they are Christians; would like to see many more. I belong to the Church of Christ; have been since I was fifteen. I hope to go to Asbury College in just a few years. We have no church around here but have Sunday school in our schoolhouse every Sunday. I go nearly every Sunday. Has anyone my birthday? I was nineteen August 2. Will some of you write to me? God bless you, Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Albertha M. Smalley. Rt. 1, Corinth, N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am surprised at the boys and girls of my state. I hardly ever see a Wisconsin letter on page ten. I am fifteen years old and of light complexion. I am small for my age, but these things are not nearly as important as the fact that I am trying to live as Christ would have me live. I have been attending evangelistic meetings at Boscobel, Wis. Lane Star, an American Indian, was the evangelist. He is a wonderful speaker as well as a very sweet singer. After hearing him speak and sing I can't understand how anyone could resist Christ. I am very anxious to receive letters from any of the cousins. My birthday is March 23. Have I a twin? Well I must cut this short as I believe Mr. W. B. is after the longest letters. Ruby Oleson. 822 Cleveland St., Beloit, Wis.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been a long time since I wrote my last letter, but I decided as I was reading some of the interesting letters this morning from the boys and girls that I would write again. I was converted April 29, 1927, at the Nazarene Assembly at Portales, New Mex., and was sanctified on June 29, in a revival meeting held here in my home town. I belong to the Nazarene Church and am determined to go through with Jesus. I will be sixteen years old Sept. 6. Who has my birthday? I have brown hair, blue eyes and rather dark complexion. We do not take The Pentecostal Herald now but my grandfather takes it and I sometimes get to read it. I would like to receive letters from some of the cousins who are near my age and are Christians. My address is Lorena Drake. Box 66, LaLande, N. Mex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will some one step by and let a little Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I do not see many letters from Virginia. Virginia girls and boys, let's see how many letters we can have on page ten next time. I live with my mother and father in Walters. I have four brothers and one sister. My oldest brother works in Franklin, and my next oldest brother works on the farm with my uncle. My other two brothers stay at home. Sister stays at home, too. I am twelve years old, weigh 84 pounds, my height is five feet. I have dark hair and dark complexion. Who has my birthday, March 5? Thelma Smith, I guess your middle name to be Amy. Katherine Hill, I guess your middle name to be Virginia. Margaret Williams, I guess your name to be Gertrude. Who was the weakest, strongest, oldest and meekest man in the Bible? Which is the longest and shortest book and chapter in the Bible? Who was the boy that was cast into the lion's den? What was the first miracle Jesus performed? Everybody write to me.

FALLEN ASLEEP

FAIN.

Rev. C. C. Fain was born April 13, 1857; departed this life March 15, 1927. Had he lived until April 13 he would have rounded out his three score and ten years. He was converted Dec. 17, 1889; one month and seventeen days after seeking a clean heart God sanctified him wholly, and a short time after he entered this experience God called him to preach the gospel.

Brother Fain was accidentally killed while attempting to cross the interurban track in front of his home on the Lexington and Park pike. He was struck by the interurban car about three o'clock in the afternoon and passed to his reward about six o'clock. He is sadly missed by his devoted family and many friends who feel keenly the loss of his departure. He cannot come back to us but we can go to him, for we know where to find him. In the language of the poet we can say:

"Our brother the haven hath gained,
Outflying the tempest and wind;
His rest he hath sooner obtained,
And left his companions behind,
Still tossed on a sea of distress,
Hard toiling to make the blest shore,

Where all is assurance and peace,
And sorrow and sin are no more."
George T. Fain.

ACTON CAMP MEETING.

On August 12, the 28th Camp Meeting begun at Acton, Ky., on the Mannsville charge and continued ten days. We were fortunate indeed to secure as evangelist Rev. Andrew Johnson, of Wilmore, Ky., to do the preaching both morning and evening. Bro. Johnson is one of the most consecrated, and sweetest spirited men we have ever met, and is considered by all who heard him to be one of the greatest men that has ever been to this camp. His messages were to the point, stirring the very soul of man. We have never met with one who held a higher standard of Christianity, and was more able to convince of such by his knowledge of the Bible, and oratorical manner of explaining the same.

We had with us Bro. W. C. Kinsey and wife of Richmond, Ind., who had charge of the music and singing. We are speaking in low terms when we say they did it well. They are real workers for a camp meeting. They rendered excellent service in song, and they believe in praying with, and instructing a penitent until he is fully saved. Their work among the young folk was highly appreciated, and was very helpful to our camp. We gladly recommend them to any one who needs real Christian spirited workers for revivals.

We had with us visiting brethren of the various districts of this Conference. The following brethren preached in the afternoon: Rev. W. T. Farmer, of Kentucky Conference, Rev. W. H. Cobb, Rev. Emory Pennycook, Superannuate of Highway, Ky., Rev. E. L. Williams, of Bradfordsville charge, Rev. J. R. Marrs, of Campbellsville charge, Rev. J. H. Epley, of Elkhorn, Rev. Burkley Allen, pastor of Casey Creek charge, and also the writer, of Mannsville charge. Also we had with us Rev. E. E. Smith, pastor of Gradyville charge, Rev. J. A. Oires, pastor of Smithland station, besides a number of Baptist ministers that were present.

We were blessed with the assistance of a number of good workers from other parts of the district. We consider this the best camp meeting at Acton camp for many years. There were about fifteen saved and reclaimed at the altar of prayer, besides many who came that were not fully persuaded to surrender. There were some few sanctified, and many who came as seekers that made known their determination to go on until they were fully satisfied.

The Lord was wonderfully good to us. We had the best of order, large crowds, and the finances were easily cared for. We are only looking forward to the time we can have these wonderful workers in our camp again.

We are now with Rev. E. L. Willingham, on Bradfordsville charge, at Kedron church. The prospects are fine for a great revival.

MICHIGAN MEETINGS.

The special evangelistic effort in Scotts, Mich., closed Sunday night, August 14, with an unusual service. During the twelve days, forty-five people rejoiced over sins forgiven or the blessing of entire sanctification. One of the encouraging features of the meetings was the fact that many of the young people went on into the second definite work of grace. We feel that this, backed by holiness preaching by the pastor there, will bring about a stable group of young Christian workers.

This party composed of Rev. Forest B. Willis, evangelist, Mrs. F. B. Willis, singer, Miss Roberta Naylor, soloist and song leader, and Mrs. Mabel Swearingen, pianist, held three meetings in Michigan during the summer. In all there were one hundred and seven souls either converted or sanctified.

We praise God for what he has already done, and for what he will do in the lives of these who have begun a walk with him.

Roberta Naylor.

ARMSTRONG COUNTY, PA., CAMP MEETING.

The Third Annual camp meeting of the Armstrong County Interdenominational Holiness Association held in the Armstrong grove three miles from Kittanning, Pa., which closed Sunday evening, July 24, was by far the best yet. The number rooming or tenting on the ground was more than double that of last year. People attended from most of the towns and cities within a radius of one hundred miles and there was always a goodly number taking part in the early morning prayer service. All of the day services were well attended and the large tabernacle tent was well filled every evening. Great crowds were present both Sundays and the glory of God was in the midst of the camp. One tent was used as a special prayer tent where many gathered for prayer at 6:30 in the evening preceding the evening service and many souls found God during the camp.

Rev. and Mrs. John Thomas, the evangelists, were truly God's messengers and each message they gave was freighted with the power and unction of the Holy Spirit. Mrs. Etta Foiles had charge of the singing and many were blessed under her inspiring solos. Rev. Paul Haines, a missionary on furlough from Korea, was present a few days and gave some inspiring missionary talks. Rev. and Mrs. Thomas have also spent ten years in Korea, and on Missionary Day Mrs. Thomas gave the special missionary address. Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Sloan, District Superintendent of the Pittsburgh District of the Church of the Nazarene, dropped in on us one afternoon and were very welcome guests. Mrs. Sloan gave us a very helpful talk.

A great many in attendance testified that upon entering the ground they sensed a wonderful presence of the Holy Spirit. There were many definite answers to prayer. One evening a father who had been praying for his daughter to become a Christian arose and came forward to kneel at the altar of prayer. His daughter came from another part of the tent and both knelt at the altar the same time, neither one knowing the other had come until later. Some were healed of physical diseases.—Mrs. Mark R. Smith, Cadogan, Pa.

MANVILLE HOLINESS CAMP.

The twelfth annual camp of the Manville Holiness Camp, located near Streator, Ill., was held June 26 to July 10. This is one of the newest but growing camps, a straight, clean-cut second blessing holiness association. H. N. Dickerson, Ashland, Ky., was the evangelist. He is a strong preacher with fire and glory, and God surely did use him. Great altar services. No one apparently kept count of the number of seekers but there were many.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sharrow, Wren, Ohio, had charge of the music and children's work. Their children's work was greatly appreciated. Quite a few preachers attended, and some of them preached in the day services. Rev. H. B. Jensen, Decatur, Ill., served as camp manager.

No small item was the splendid meals served in the dining hall, by Brother and Sister Tadlock. Three new cottages were erected. The management has decided to erect a two-story combination dining room and dormitory for the 1928 camp.

H. B. Jensen.

IOLA MEETING.

July 7-24, the writer was assisted in a great revival meeting at Iola, Ill., by the Lamp Evangelistic Party consisting of the Rev. W. E. Lamp, his wife, pianist, his son, the Rev. Cletus Lamp, song leader, and the daughter, Bonita, leader of meetings for the young people.

The meeting was said to be the best held in that town in about twenty years. Rev. Lamp was kind and brotherly and preached with sweetness and power; and he and the entire party found a large place for themselves in the affections of the people. With scarcely an exception, the seekers went forward without any personal solicitation; and the testimony meetings were hearty and strong.

Hungry souls were satisfied, the church was strengthened, the community was impressed and foundations were laid for future work. About forty or more professed to be converted or reclaimed and there was a large number of accessions. Bro. Lamp preached against sin and was well supported by his faithful company and we can say of him as it was said of one other, "He was a good man and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith and much people were added unto the Lord." O. Wright.

MARKED AN EPOCH IN HIS LIFE.

A few days ago one of the leading evangelists in the Holiness Movement, a man whose slate is always filled for a year in advance, was talking to a group of friends. They were speaking of the influence of the holiness papers and this evangelist spoke out, as follows:

"Fifteen years ago I was wandering through the south without any definite aim in life and as useless as could be. One night I happened to drop into a meeting where Dr. Morrison was preaching and the sermon gripped me, so I came back during the days that followed. It marked an epoch in my life. During that meeting I made a full and complete consecration and experienced the sanctifying power of God's grace. I was truly a babe in Christ and knew practically nothing about living a real life of victory.

"It was a fortunate thing that I decided to take Dr. Morrison's paper, The Pentecostal Herald, because from its pages each week I found a well-spring of gospel that gave me the light on the many problems and trials that I was continually confronting.

"From that time to this I have never been without The Herald, and I make it a point to get as many of the converts in my meetings to subscribe for it as I can, because I know what a help it proved to be to me. Having been over the road I know what they will run up against and I want to leave something with them that I know will prove a blessing and a help to them in times of trial and discouragement."

No one can calculate the amount of good you might accomplish by placing in the hands of some recent convert The Pentecostal Herald. It will be a constant reminder of the responsibility and the reward which go hand in hand with the life of complete submission to God's will.

Some young man or woman who came into the experience at one of the many holiness camp meetings this summer who is going away to school in a few weeks will need an anchor to hold them to the faith. Through the reading of The Herald the above mentioned evangelist was led into the ministry. You might be instrumental in God's calling some bright young person into his white harvest field in which the laborers are so few.

This presents one of the best opportunities to use a small portion of the tithe which has been entrusted to you, as one of his stewards, by the Master. The Herald costs only $1.50 for a full year. What a dividend the investment will pay!

There are several people in your community whom you know are not subscribers, merely because they have never been introduced to The Herald. Give them an introduction and get a blessing on your own soul; by so doing you help to spread full salvation to all men everywhere.

NOTICE!

If any one reading this notice has a copy of my booklet on "Sanctification," published by The Pentecostal Publishing Co., and will mail it to T. L. Adams, 25 N. Marquiritia Ave., Alhambra, Cal., I shall be grateful, as I have no copy left. Send bill and I will remit.

Dr. H. C. Morrison's New Book.

The title of this new book from the pen of its gifted author is not only very suggestive, but runs true to the title to the end. If any one has rejected the glorious doctrine of the pre-millennial coming of our Lord, because he thought it a pessimistic teaching, if he will read Dr. Morrison's new book, unbiased, he will find that the teaching of the pre-millennial coming of Jesus is the most optimistic view of life and the world held by any class of people.

There are some very thrilling, thought-provoking statements made in the last two chapters, and contrary to many books this one reaches its climax in the closing chapters. It is well worth the price, $1.00.

Very truly,
W. L. Clark.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson XIII.—September 25, 1927.
Subject.—Review. Reading Lesson.
—Psalm 68:26-35.

Golden Text.—The Lord hath prepared his throne in the heavens, and his kingdom ruleth over all.—Psalm 103:19.

Bishop A. G. Haygood, of the M. E. Church, South, what time he was President of Emory College, used to teach us boys some fine lessons from Old Testament history. He based his teachings on the fact that God never changes; and therefore what he did in Old Testament times he will do now. Eli, although a priest of the Lord, failed to rule well his own family, so that his sons, who also were priests, sinned greatly, and thereby brought reproach upon the services of God. As a result of Eli's carelessness in controlling his sons, the entire family was destroyed. The Doctor declared that this was not cruelty on Jehovah's part, but mercy; for had they been permitted to live, they would have gone on producing more bad priests in the house of God, seeing that the office was hereditary. But the lessons grew intense, almost furious, when the Doctor began to illustrate the awful truth by laying before us case after case of the same sort that had passed under his own observation.

Leaving individual cases, our college President would show how nations prospered as long as they obeyed God, but fell into ruin when they became disobedient. Those lessons linger with this writer to this good hour. Often since those happy college day has he seen family after family go to the very bottom through sin. Verily this would be true, if there were no punishment from God; "For whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Mr. Moody used to say: "Sow bar-rooms, and reap drunkards; sow houses of shame, and reap prostitutes of both sexes." We need no Bible to tell us that these things are true. "I am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generations of them that hate me; and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments." The great law of heredity is playing its part in human affairs, individual and national, so that we can judge the present and the future by the past. Sin is the father of ruin; righteousness is the father of prosperity. This will always be true.

What stupendous lessons we may learn from the history of Jehovah's dealings with the Jews between B. C. 1095 and B. C. 975. It was not a long period (about 120 years), but it was packed with facts that made history. The period began near the close of the righteous administration of Samuel, the last of Israel's Judges. In order to be like the surrounding heathen nations the people rejected their theocratic government, and demanded that Samuel appoint them a king. Jehovah directed Samuel to yield to their request, but to tell them plainly what the results would be. They might expect blessing, if they would obey their God and their king. If not, then cursing and trouble would come. All went well for a season; but disobedience came: the dark clouds began to gather.

King Saul was a fairly brave man, but when Goliath defied the armies of the living God, sin was already eating the heart out of him. He dared not face the giant himself; and his cowardice unnerved his entire army. The next move was Jehovah's. He sent David the shepherd lad down to the army to visit his brethren at the time when Goliath was doing his biggest boasting. God-sent? Of course he was. When Saul proved to be a failure, Jehovah selected David to take his place as the future leader of his people; and he had him on hand in the very nick of time. The slaying of the Philistine giant was the undoing of Saul in the eyes of the people; but it brought David to the front, and introduced him to Israel as their future leader. Jehovah has a wonderful way of accomplishing his purposes.

The friendship that developed between Jonathan and David played no small part in the working out of his marvelous historical drama. Jonathan, humanly speaking, was the rightful heir to the throne; but without a murmur and in the purest love, he gave way to his friend David. God was moving and ruling both of those young hearts for their own good and for the welfare of the nation. But Saul's soul was burning with wrath because of his jealousy toward David. And now we have a nation holding its own with fair success, while its head was sinking deeper and deeper into sin and its consequent ruin at every turn of his way. This, however, is not normal. Had it not been for an overruling Providence, the people would have gone down with their king. God loved Israel, and they were destined to see better days under the leadership of their sweet singer.

Had David followed the leadership of Satan and some of his over-hasty helpers, he could have had the throne of Israel long before it came to him; but he would not move a step, except as Jehovah opened the way. Most aspirants to the throne would have killed Saul in the cave and put on the crown at once, but while David followed God, he could not do that. Obedience to Jehovah was more to him than leadership of a nation. Wherefore, he could afford to spare Saul, and wait on God until his chosen time should arrive. And the waiting was good for the coming king. He was learning lessons that would stand him in good stead when he should be permitted to sit on the throne of his nation.

Do not mistake the source of David's prosperity. We are prone to set our eyes upon his awful sin, and to forget his glorious repentance. When Jerusalem was conquered and his throne was moved to that city, he brought up also the ark of the covenant of Jehovah, in order that his government might be established around the Mercy seat. God punished him sorely for his sin—punished him till his heart broke; but, all in all, his reign was filled with rich blessing for his beloved people. Had it not been for his direful sin, he might have had the exalted privilege of building a temple for the worship of Jehovah; but that was denied him. Nevertheless, he won from God the promise that his son Solomon should sit on his throne, and that he should build the temple. David's repentance was genuine, or it never would have brought forgiveness. One can scarcely keep from crying when he thinks of this one black sin in the splendid career of this great man; and yet, we are almost glad that he sinned. Because of that sin he taught the world of sinners how to repent; and his forgiveness has thrown a ray of hope down the years, that has enabled many a poor sinner to catch hold on God for salvation. Verily God "makes the wrath of man (and the sin of man) to praise him." I am not pleading for sin, but trying to show forth the wondrous mercy of our heavenly Father. There is no excuse for sinning: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." "He that committeth sin is of the devil." "No man can serve two masters; for either he will love the one, and hate the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." God's forgiveness of King David is more beautiful than a spotless lily blooming out of a mudhole. Let us not forget, however, that the terrible results of this sin followed David to the very end of his life. He reaped his own sowing, and found a full crop.

Solomon's life is one of the saddest things in all literature. Jehovah chose him to be king over Israel on the basis of what he was at the time of the choosing, just as he always deals with men. At that time Solomon had in him all the elements of good rulership that were common to a normal man; but he backslid, and God held him responsible for what he could have done, had he remained true to the right. He deals with us after the same pattern. Solomon's choice of wisdom to rule Israel was of the very highest order. Jehovah was pleased with the request, and granted it along with other rich gifts and blessings. But the great Solomon went down to his death in idolatry, and adultery with a host of heathen princesses. His kingdom was divided when his only son came to the throne. And now Solomon's name has become a sort of byword for uncontrollable lust. "He is a regular Solomon." Did you never hear it?

ing that what happened to sinning Israel will likewise happen to any sinning nation, or individual, in our day. We may not always understand it, but it is coming all the same. "God is still on the throne." He is helping men to write the history of the world today as he did in Israel's day. "Be not deceived: God is not mocked." Men and nations may deceive themselves; but he sees the end from the beginning. "All things are naked, and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do."

STORY OF LITTLE EVA.

By A. L. Hitchcock, 72 Elm St., New Britain, Conn. Price 25c.

A gripping, reminiscent story taken from the tender years of childhood of the author, expressing the honest outgoings of a simple child to one he loves.

The scene is laid on one of the old plantations in Dixie, though the events recorded took place after the terrible War of the Rebellion. It is a scathing arraignment of the conduct of a man going down in drink, and illustrates vividly the terrible consequences of sin.

Its purpose is to help parents to warn their children against such calamities. The author has contributed a number of times to Aunt Bettie's Department for Boys and Girls, interesting, instructive, and helpful letters, and has been active in Sunshine Work.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Aaron and Grace Hulse: "We have recently closed a good revival with Rev. E. O. Tapley and his people at Letonia, Ark. God was with us and many sought the Lord and found him precious to their souls. We are at Bradford, Ark., with the Nazarenes and are believing for a great meeting. We are enjoying the battle, and will be glad to go anywhere for free-will offerings. We may be addressed at 13 Plum St., Hutch'nson, Kan."

S. S. Nelson: "The Lord gave victory in the camp at Bloxom, Va. The meeting started off slowly but the saints prayed through and God crowned their faith with victory, as there were more saved and sanctified than at any previous camp. Brother Dixon was our collaborator. He is a rugged and fearless preacher of the gospel. Sisters Means and Parker blessed the people with their singing. Brother Vickers, the founder of the camp, was in charge of the camp and was used of the Lord in preaching and general oversight."

Mrs. S. C. Taylor: "The Cleveland, Miss., camp closed August 21. We had many difficulties, as the meeting came between two elections, and it rained the first of the meeting, then the farmers had to finish their crops. Brother McKeithen brought soul-stirring messages, and his son, E. E. McKeithen, led the singing. He is a splendid leader and has a wonderful voice. Miss Elsie Brinkler presided at the piano. Many renewed their vows to live for God, and we feel the work of the camp will not be void. We mean to keep it going as long as possible."

I. N. Hampe: "Rev. R. G. Flexon, of Shackleford, Va., and Rev. David E. Wilson, of Bangor, N. Y., were my co-workers at the Tri-State Camp this year, and they are certainly nice yoke-fellows to work with, as fine as I ever worked with in the last 30 years, and the fine spirit of the camp, and the wonderful work done will not soon be forgotten. Rev. L. W. King, President of the Association, and his fine Christian Board, did much to help the camp reach its great success. This is a new, and growing camp, and is sure to reach large proportions if it keeps working on the "Old Wesleyan Line" it is on now. We raised something like $4,000.00 in cash and pledges to pay for the fine new dining hall they have just completed—the expenses of the camp, and for needed improvements for next year."

Rev. J. H. Driskell: "The Callis Grove camp meeting closed Aug. 14. Rev. F. T. Howard did the preaching. It was one of the best camps we have had for 18 years. Brother Howard is sound on the doctrine of holiness and I recommend him to any camp meeting committee or pastor who wants a real revival in their camp or church."

R. T. Wilson: "We have just closed one of the greatest revivals in many years at Bethel Methodist Episcopal Church, Bethelridge, Ky., with the Rev. E. L. Sanford and wife, of Lexington, Ky., as the preachers. Brother Sanford preached the gospel in the old-fashioned way, and sinners came to the altar in great numbers and wept their way through to victory. The services were well attended even though we had several rains during the meeting. The visible results of the meeting were 57 conversions, 17 reclamations and 17 sanctifications, for which we give God the praise. The church was greatly revived. Mrs. Sanford rendered valuable assistance in her solos and with her cornet, also preaching several times. Any pastor needing help in revival effort will make no mistake in giving these servants of God a call."

HURRICANE CAMP, TOLU, KY.

The writer has just closed the 37th encampment of the old Hurricane Camp, near Tolu, Ky., Crittenden Co. The ten days run of three services, daily, were accompanied by interest and fellowship upon the part of many of the old campers who have been camping there for years. The word preached took hold upon the hearts of some earnest souls who prayed through to blessed victory, while there was by no means the break which should have accompanied the efforts.

Among those camping was J. J. Smith, who also did some of the preaching. He is now a man of seventy-nine years, but preaches with the clearness of mind and voice, of a man in the fifties. He is certainly held in loving esteem and appreciation by the people of Hurricane, where he has attended camp for 37 years. The local pastor, I. W. Napier, certainly proved loyal to the truth of full salvation, preaching a number of times during the camp, with the unction of the Spirit. He is much loved by the people of the Tolu charge, and under his ministry there has been growing spiritual results. This engagement closes my campaign of summer meetings. The writer will now be engaged with the Theological Department of Kingswood College until the last of next May, after which time he hopes to be in the field with an effective evangelistic party for the summer's run.

CRAB ORCHARD, KY., AND MORTONSVILLE, KY.

Since we sent in our last report we have held tent revival campaigns at Crab Orchard and Mortonsville, both in Kentucky. Rev. F. D. J. Wanson, of Wilmore, Ky., was the evangelist in both campaigns. The writer, also of Wilmore, Ky., assisted him as song leader at both places. At Crab Orchard we had several handicaps but God answered prayer and gave us souls for our hire in spite of Satan's efforts to hinder. All the roads to Crab Orchard were under repair and many were kept away who, we were told, were accustomed to attend the tent meetings there in other years. We were there two days short of three weeks, and the Lord gave us nine seekers, six of whom prayed through to salvation. Of these six, two pressed on into Canaan and claimed their inheritance.

At Mortonsville, which is near Versailles, Ky., the Lord gave us much better visible results. We were told that it was the first tent meeting ever held there. We were there the same length of time as at Crab Orchard, but the way had been prepared for us by a recent, wonderful revival at Clover Bottom, in the same county. There were thirty-two seekers, all of whom obtained from God the blessing which they were seeking. Out of this number, thirty obtained salvation, and two were sanctified wholly. Of the thirty, one lady pressed on and found God in his sanctifying power. This lady had been a seeker in the revival at Clover Bottom.

Gospel of the Body

REV. C. F. WIMBERLY.

The author tells in a most interesting way some of his recent discoveries of the majesty and artistic glory of the human body, and states that there are mysteries and wonders to be found in the body alone greater than the exploration of an unknown continent. There is not a dull sentence in the book. Price 15c.

The Mind of the Master

REV. WILL H. HUFF.

Two of Brother Huff's great sermons, the title of the second one being "Soul Rest." In the first sermon the author deals with the mind of Christ as to its spiritual consciousness, as to its characteristics, and as to the how of our fullest possession of it. The second sermon deals with "His Rest," the rest he has provided for the struggling believer. Price 20c.

Scriptural Holiness

REV. B. A. CUNDIFF.

The author of this most excellent book enjoyed and preached the experience of entire sanctification thirty-nine years. The author gives chapters on the different theories of holiness, and closes with a chapter on the Bible view of this great theme. Price 15c.

The Vision of a Popular Minister

COMPILED BY A. SIMS.

The experience of a minister who was satisfied and at ease in Zion, but the Lord got hold of him he found that he was self-centered and unsaved. Price 10c.

Sin in Believers and Advice to Those Sanctified

JOHN WESLEY.

Two sermons. The first sermon is a point of utmost moment to every serious Christian, the resolving of which very nearly concerns both his present and eternal happiness. In the second, Mr. Wesley's first warning is to watch and pray continually against pride. There are five more warnings in this sermon which are vital to every Christian. Price 15c.

Doing His Will or Going to Hell

REV. JAMES M. TAYLOR.

This book sets forth the doctrine of entire sanctification as taught in the Scriptures; also that it must be obtained here on earth. Price 10c.

Malice

REV. J. B. CULPEPPER.

This is a most forceful writer and he handles this subject in a very interesting way. You will be thankful for the privilege of reading this book. Price 15c.

"Hallelujah Jack," the life-story of Rev. Jack Linn, the well-known evangelist, is still one of the best sellers. Just recently a young man was converted by reading the book. He was a cartoonist and is now drawing pictures for God. In fact, he is preaching now. It was by reading the book that all this took place. Order a book from this office. Price, 50 cents.

NAZARENE CAMP MEETING— OHIO DISTRICT.

The 1927 Nazarene Camp Meeting, Ohio District, was one of the most gracious and blessed seasons of refreshing we have witnessed in a long time. This was the fourth year of the camp, the second on our new camp grounds. It showed a phenomenal growth in every particular over the previous camps. There was a record attendance. The fourteen cottages on the grounds were occupied, the new dormitory was full all the time, there were 55 small living tents on the grounds and they were filled besides two large dormitory tents which had a number of people in them. We have one of the best tabernacles in the country—60x100 without a post to obscure vision—but it proved inadequate for the Sunday crowds.

We were favored with as fine a corps of workers as could be found; Rev. Raymond Browning, Rev. Floyd W. Nease, Rev. and Mrs. B. D. Sutton and the Vaughan Radio Quartet, also Rev. F. M. Messenger and Dr. J. G. Morrison part of the time. These all co-ordinated their work beautifully and seemed to fit together as if they were made for that specific camp. Long will they remain in the memory of our 1927 campers.

The Divine blessing was on every service and at times the waves of heavenly glory rolled in upon us in such joyful tides that made heaven seem near, holiness beautiful, God a glorious reality, service delightful and sin more and more abhorrent. Sometimes the glory fell when the quartet sang, sometimes when Bro. and Sister Sutton sang, sometimes when the evangelist was preaching and sometimes it was repeatedly poured upon us as each of them gave their message. But always there was the consciousness of the Divine presence. I do not know if anyone kept a record of the seekers, but they were there. Some came the first service and at about every altar call after that; there were seekers the most at any one time being 30 or 35.

Our own efficient spiritually minded district superintendent, Chas. A. Gibson, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, presided on the platform and looked after raising the finances. He served well and an amount quite a bit larger than last year was raised in cash and pledges. Sufficient was given and pledged to cover the indebtedness carried over from last year, pay for the 49 new living tents purchased by the Board, cover the cost of other improvements and partly cover the cost of the new dormitory and dining room building.

The dining room, run on the cafeteria plan, served most excellent meals and did it expeditiously. The preachers and their wives were given free entertainment to the extent of sleeping place and $1.10 per day allowance for meals.

Everybody worked, prayed, believed God and helped to make it a great camp. Much credit is due Rev. C. J. Nease, pastor of First Church, Columbus, our treasurer, for getting the grounds in good shape for the camp. He was assisted by Miss Mellicent Klee, camp matron, in looking after the comfort of the campers. Space fails me to mention all who took an active part in making it a good meeting.

A large cottage building program is on for next year. Over fifty lot leases were granted or renewed, about forty of which call for a cottage to be built on them before next year's camp. That will give us over fifty cottages on the grounds, which, with the forty-nine tents 12x14, and the dormitory, ought to take care of 400 campers next year. W. R. Gilley, Sec'y.

KAMABAI, SIERRA LEONE, WEST AFRICA.

To my Many Friends Scattered Abroad, Greeting:

Since last reporting through the columns of this paper I have had many and varied experiences, but I am glad to report definite victory through the sanctifying grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Praise his holy name!

I have just had the privilege of assisting in two revival meetings, one at the Institute for Native Preachers and Teachers during the month of June at Kamabai, and the other in the town of Masumbo and at the Girls' School at that place, both of which have been graciously owned of the Holy Spirit.

At the Native Workers' Institute at Kamabai, I did practically all of the preaching for the last two weeks as well as teaching one class. I also had the privilege of preaching twice in meetings for women only. God gave us a good time in the Institute; one night we had a gracious visitation on the missionaries themselves. A number of confessions were made by the native men; one preacher confessed, although already married, that he was buying another young wife. Another preacher confessed that his people were negotiating for another wife for him although, he too, is married. Still another preacher confessed privately that he had a lover that practically took the place of a second wife to him. These were some of the things confessed, and in this country, where a man can have as many wives as he is able to buy, you can readily see that this is one of the chief sins that our native workers have to combat.

Many testified to being saved, and some seemed to get a real experience, but in this country one has to be very careful about measuring the results of a meeting by the testimonies, for it is very easy for the black man, to say fine words when his heart is not there. And it is also easy for him to follow the lead of some one else, especially if that person is a "bucke" (an older brother), great deference is paid to age in this country. Some, however, seemed to get real help from the Lord and one preacher testified to being sanctified.

In the women's meeting the Lord blessed our efforts there also, and nearly all of them were at the altar and a number professed to be saved, and we feel some at least received real salvation.

After the Institute we went to Masumbo for a ten-days' meeting, preaching in the town in the evenings and some of the time in the Girls' School in the mornings. We had an especially good meeting at the school; nearly all of the older girls professed to be saved and a number professed to be sanctified. Many confessions were made. If the tears that were shed had been bottled up I am sure that there would be a plenty, for they certainly did weep.

Our hearts were also greatly encouraged in the town meeting where at the very beginning of the meeting two young men, I should judge in their twenties, came to the altar and prayed and later professed salvation. They stood up and confessed salvation publicly before the people and told them they were leaving their sins. Both of these young men come from Mohammedan families and it

STORIES

Put the book in the hands of your children or read the stories to them. They can not escape the good influence which these stories have. The intensely interesting stories about God and his dealings with mankind will impress the plastic young minds and exert a strong force in guiding the boys and girls into the paths of righteousness through life.

THE BIBLE IN STORY

The Bible is completely covered with these unusually fresh and illuminating stories. The language is so simple yet dignified that it appeals alike to young and old. It will aid any one to get a better understanding of the Bible than he has ever had before. Sunday-school teachers have found this book a wonderful aid. It contains in addition to the many black and white pictures, fifteen beautiful full-page color pictures. You can not find better in any book.

means much for them to take a public stand such as they did.

A number of others professed during the meeting but all the results were not as definite as I would like to have seen them, but on the last night of the meeting three more, one of them a brother to one of the young men who professed the first night, and from a Mohammedan home, all sought and professed to have found, and all three testified clearly that they were accepting Christ, and that they believed he had saved them from their sins. Mrs. Cowan also had some children profess in Children's Meetings.

These are some of the first results I have seen, so definite, from among the raw natives, but even in these cases they live in a town where the mission has been for years and two of them were brothers to one of our preachers, and they have been under the influence of the mission nearly, if not all, their lives.

I have had several revival services in and around Makwi, where we are living. (We are about sixty miles from the railroad and from any of the other missionaries) but so far although we have had many seekers at the altar, and I have prayed and worked with them the same as you would at home, we have not seen any results that have been sufficiently definite that we were satisfied that they were really saved.

When they are not able to read, and Dr. Walker says, "The fact is fairly settled that, without aiding himself by a written language, man cannot ascend even to the first stages of civilization," I cannot help but feel that it is no easy task to get them to break with their heathenish practices and superstitious customs that have held them for centuries, but the blood is able, hallelujah! and we are preaching his word and trusting him to appoint the seed time and harvest others may have planted and we may continue to water, but he alone can give the increase.

Yours in his sanctifying grace,
J. E. B. Cowan.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

31 It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement:

32 But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery.

33 ¶ Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths:

34 But I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne:

35 Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jê-rû-sâ-lêm; for it is the city of the great King.

36 Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black.

37 But let your communication be, Yea, yea: Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.

38 ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

39 But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

40 And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloke also.

41 And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.

42 Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.

43 ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy.

44 But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you:

45 That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.

46 For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?

47 And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so?

48 Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

ST. MATTHEW, 6.

CHAPTER 6. 6

1 Sermon on the mount continued. 24 Serving God and mammon. 25 Exhortation to care little for worldly things. 33 Seeking the kingdom of God.

TAKE heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven.

2 Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

3 But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth:

4 That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly.

5 ¶ And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

6 But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

7 But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

11 Give us this day our daily bread.

12 And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

13 And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. A-mên.

14 For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you:

15 But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

16 ¶ Moreover when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their

WE ARE APPROACHING A CRISIS IN METHODISM.

By The Editor.

WE are firmly convinced that we are approaching a crisis in the history of Methodism in these United States, and for that matter, in the world. The Methodism in these United States sets the pace for the spiritual power of Methodism in her mission fields around the globe. If the Mother Church in the homeland preserves the spirit of a true faith, and a genuine evangelism, the same will be true of her far-flung line of missionary workers around the globe.

* * * *

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church meets in Kansas City next May. At that conference there will be an earnest effort to unhorse some of the leaders of modern liberalism, and to place in leadership men who represent the true faith of our fathers and founders. The modernists are shrewd ecclesiastical politicians; it will be difficult to remove them from their places of power and influence. They have been heard to boast that, while they are in the minority they control the machinery of the church. They are shrewd manipulators. The men who would overthrow them, restore Israel and bring the church back to a sound faith and old-time revival power, will need the help of God. They will need to begin their good task in the election of delegates to the General Conference. Let a mighty host of Methodists, north and south, pray God to help in this work. This is more important than the average reader appreciates. We have not prayed enough over the situation. The time has come for active effort and earnest prayer.

* * * *

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, meets two years from next May, and will be one of the most important conferences in the history of the church. Already, plans are being made for the election to the office of bishop some of our most dangerous modernists. If this should happen it would lead to great hurt to the church. There is a host of Southern Methodists who do not intend to support modernists in their high and important offices. We want to begin now at the throne of grace in earnest prayer, calling upon God to awaken the people, and we want to see to it that a body of preachers and laymen are sent to that General Conference who will see that the church is redeemed from the leadership and domination of modernists. God helps those who help themselves. Let us call on God, fasting and praying the first Friday morning of every month until the meetings of these General Conferences have passed.

* * * *

Let it be remembered that we are not organizing a prayer league, but we are calling on Methodist people, north and south, east and west, who stand for a whole Bible, a virgin-born, crucified and risen Christ, to pray to God to speak to his people, to buckle on the armor of the Lord, and to stand firmly and fearlessly for Methodism in its original purity and power. There is nothing finer in all the world, than to believe the truth, to love the truth, to rally about the cross and contend for the truth, to worship God and pray to him to send his Spirit down with power to vindicate the truth.

An Open Letter to My Dear Bishop

My Dear Bishop:

I am writing you this letter on an improvised table from one of the great camp meetings in Ohio. I have been attending and preaching in the camp meetings for something more than forty years.

For the past thirty-five years, I have spent the entire summers in camp meeting work, usually beginning early in June and closing out early in September. This would figure out something more than eight solid years on camp meeting grounds or enroute going and coming from the camps. This has meant much of hard travel on trains, steamboats, in buggies, two-horse wagons, or trucks, by automobile and many ways.

Camp meeting preaching is hard work—the crowd, the noise, the coming and going, the restlessness around the edges, the tramping up and down on the outside. The camp meeting preacher must throw himself into his work, soul, brain and body. He must make the multitude hear him. He must speak with a good degree of rapidity so that he will keep the attention of the people, and he must feel that intense desire for the salvation of souls that calls for all there is in him of unction, energy and earnestness. The camp meeting is no place for an easy-going preacher who is taking care of himself rather than winning the lost to Christ.

You are under a big shed or tabernacle, or it is a large tent or a brush arbor. The heat is intense. You are drenched with perspiration. The wind blows on you; you put out every pound of strength you have; you make the altar call; you pull hard upon those who are almost persuaded; you work at the altar for an hour, sometimes two hours. This is real labor, but oh, the blessedness of it! Sinners are cut to the heart; penitents are hurrying to the altar; backsliders are being reclaimed; seeking souls are being born again; believers are being sanctified. There is joy in heaven; the people are happy; mothers and fathers are embracing their children for whom they have prayed for years, who have come home to Christ; there is singing and shouting and handshaking. It is wonderful! Bishop, a great old-time camp meeting in full swing, with the power of the Holy Spirit upon the people, is the very next thing to heaven.

I suppose I have preached at least 2,500 times at camp meetings; a few times as many as fifty souls have been blessed at the altar of prayer after one of these sermons. Many, many times, five, ten, fifteen, twenty-five and thirty have been converted or sanctified at the altar after one of these camp meeting sermons. But if only one soul on an average has been saved for each sermon that I have preached at camp meetings that would make a goodly company. Of course, you understand that I am not so foolish as to suppose that I ever saved anybody, but it is a blessed thing if one should be used of the Holy Spirit in winning a soul to Christ.

Those who have not engaged in the work can have no comprehension of the physical, mental and spiritual strain and stress involved in a summer campaign of camp meeting work. Many a time I have closed out the camp meeting on Sunday night at half past ten or eleven o'clock, and have mounted some sort of vehicle, frequently a two-horse wagon, and have driven until dawn Monday morning in order to catch an early train to the next camp meeting. I have had some wonderful nightrides over rough roads, sometimes the horses at the gallop, and when we would hit a country bridge of loose planks across some creek we would make such a noise that all of the dogs in the neighborhood would wake up and with loud barking protest against such noisy disturbance. Sometimes we would have a lunch or a watermelon in our wagon and along about half past two o'clock we have gotten out, kindled a fire, eaten, rejoiced, refreshed ourselves and gone on our way. I have been wonderfully healthy and happy in it all. I have great cause to praise God. I had rather have been a camp meeting preacher of full salvation these past thirty-five years than to have occupied any other place, or been engaged in any other work, in all the wide world.

I am now past my seventieth birthday and suppose I should slow up a little, but I find that is hard to do. I never had more calls in my life for work than I am having now. I am invited to preach to the preachers at five annual conferences this fall and many churches are asking me for meetings, while camp meetings in every direction are calling for my services. Of course, I have to turn down many of these calls because of conflict of dates, but I assure you it is hard to say no when a fellow is feeling fine, and immortal souls are in danger of being lost, and you think, possibly, if you could get upon the scene of action and proclaim the blessed Gospel some who otherwise would spend eternity in outer darkness might be rescued for Christ and eternal life.

Well, I am glad I have been a Methodist, a full salvation, camp meeting preacher. I look back with deep regret that I have not been more worthy and more fruitful, but I place all the past under the atoning blood of Christ and press on in the battle for souls.

Bishop, you know I have been for many years what is termed a "holiness preacher." I hold to the Wesleyan interpretation of the

There Go the Ships---Or Launching Out Into the Deep.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

HE old Ocean has a thousand charms for me. My father, "Skipper Fred," lived most of his life afloat and when death came for him it was amid the howling tempests of the Northern Seas, the sea weeds wove his shroud, the winds sang his requiem, and the ocean became his grave. I was born upon the bosom of the great deep. My first house was the ship's cabin, and in a real sense my young life was "rocked in the cradle of the deep." No wonder that the ocean has a charm for me! Its waves sing to me; its winds and tempests speak, and to sail upon its mighty bosom is among the chief delights that can come to me. I can say in the language of another,

"O, thou great and wide sea! Mine eye is never sated with gazing upon thee; mine ear is never wearied with thy music; thou purgest my thought and createst my dreams anew; thou dost exalt my spirit to the Infinite and Invisible, whose creature thou art! Sing thy song of Eternity! Smite thy cymbal waves afar; shout thy raptures and chant thy dirges! Interpreter of our hearts; murmurer of love and of sorrows; winding sheet of our dead; beautiful reflector of the heavens; speak to us still in the language of our souls. One day thou shalt retire and uncover thy gulfs and abysses; dissolved into vapor by the fierce breath of universal fire it shall come to pass. There shall be no more sea!"

All my boyhood, from far vernal
Bournes of being, came to me
Dreamlike, plangent, and eternal
Memories of the plunging sea.

I can almost say with Carman:

"All my heart is in its verges,
And the sea-wind is my home."

As we sail upon the ocean vastness we think of the Infinities that surround us and the Eternity to which all we mortals sail. Wordsworth sang:

"In a season of calm weather,
Though inland far we be,
Our souls have sight of that immortal sea
Which brought us hither."

It was the great philosopher, Sir Isaac Newton who, as he viewed the vastness of the universe of Time, of Truth, said that he "felt like a little child picking up pebbles on the ocean shore."

Truth is vast! Religion is vast! Salvation is a great deep sea whose depths unfathomed no man knows, but thank God, we may launch out upon the ocean of God's love and fulness and find every need of the soul satisfied and every heart longing met in the boundless provisions of Divine grace.

We are reminded by the sea of the ebbs and flows that come to the soul.

Nothing is more disappointing than to go down to the shore when the tide has gone out. Everything looks so deserted, and despicable wreckage and debris and seaweed and refuse are the things witnessed, and boats high and dry with no power to move. There comes to the soul sometimes seasons when everything is high and dry, when nothing moves, when desolation seems to prevail, but how soon the scene changes when the tides come in and the floodtides sweep over the soul. Thank God, for the seasons of inspiration, for the heavenly vision; for the pulls heavenward that the saints receive. Very often stress and tumult come when all our plans and purposes seem to go to pieces, but the trusting soul keeps on believing and trusting and in the midst of apparent wreckage can say with Browning:

Ah! fragments of a whole, ordained to be Points in the life I waited! What are ye
But roundels of a ladder, which appeared Awhile the very platform it was reared to lift me on!"

JUST A WORD.

This is the first of my Travel Sketches which I have sent to The Herald as we put out to sea on the good ship S.S. Arabie from New York. This will be our seventh trip across the Atlantic, but the first as late in the season as this. We hope the great storms have spent themselves and that we might again experience the sea as peaceful as a lake—at least part of the way. Eight days, perhaps nine, lie before us on shipboard before we put in at Plymouth, England, where we disembark. We will be in the Land of Wesleys for a week where we will have many unusual opportunities of studying the old world, as well as preaching the gospel of the great Redemption. Then we go on to the Continent.

George W. Ridout.

The sea furthermore reminds us of the vastness of our privileges as believers and the extent of progress possible to the devout soul.

One has said, "What glories await the progressive soul that fearlessly, yet reverently, moves forward in the march of the spiritual life. How the horizon widens! New beauties appear at every step; tender, holier lights and shades play upon familiar objects of thought and feeling transfiguring them; a growing inclusiveness thrusts out the hardening, narrowing exclusiveness of the past and makes the heart great and wise and loving. Some harmonizing, unifying principle is at work within."

It has been said that "Life is an apprenticeship to truth." How much truer this should be of the believer's life and experience. The devout soul dedicated to God and the truth as it is in Jesus starts from the vantage ground of faith and privilege and ought therefore ever to be the leader in things divine helping those of dragging footsteps, reviving tired hearts and helping to quicken the latent powers of the timid into new. Let us remember that "perpetual growth and expansion can alone avert decay."

Furthermore, the sea reminds us of God's tides which bear us on to our destined duty and destiny.

Nothing is to be more dreaded next to sin itself, in the believer's life than the calamity of stagnation. To drop into a stereotyped form of religious life and there stay and sit, is a grave misfortune. This too often results in throwing off the armour, laying aside the weapons of warfare and resting satisfied in low standards and in an easy, good-for-nothing existence. "Stagnation hates nothing so much as progress, fearing lest its own self-satisfied repose be broken by the surge of human hearts pressing onwards."

Drummond said an apt thing when he said, "Nothing is more perilous to your own salvation, more unworthy of God, or more hurtful to your ordinary happiness, than being content to abide as you are. Our whole life is given us with the object of going boldly on toward the heavenly home. The world slips away like a deceitful shadow, and eternity draws near: why delay to push forward? While it is time, while your merciful Father lights up your path, make haste and seek his kingdom."

Again, the sea and its tumults instruct us as to life's difficulties and tempests. Life has its stormy Galilees and its tempestuous seas. Trials there are for all God's people; storms will blow, the ship tosses madly and wildly through the waves, but there is always the sweet consolation to the believer that Christ as our great Pilot is at the wheel.

"Unknown waves before me roll,
Hiding rocks and treacherous shoal;
Chart and compass come from Thee;
Jesus, Saviour, pilot me."

Fenelon has said truly that "the crosses actually laid upon us always bring their own special grace and consequent comfort with them; we see the hand of God when it is laid upon us. The crosses that we make for ourselves by over-anxiety as to the future are not Heaven-sent crosses. We tempt God by our false wisdom seeking to forestall his arrangements and struggling to supplement his providence by our own provisions."

In all life's trials, says one, "Our Father sends the means by which they may be endured:

"Remedies in sickness,
"Love in trouble,
"Devotion in privation,
"Comfort in weakness,
"Tears in sorrow."

Furthermore, the sea reminds us of the gospel plan in its tides and sweeps and the laws which govern all.

Cowper, that eminent evangelical poet of the 18th century, sang:

"Oh, how unlike the complex works of man,
Heaven's easy, artless, unencumbered plan!
No meretricious graces to beguile,
No clustering ornaments to clog the pile;
From ostentation as from weakness free,
It stands like the cerulean arch we see,
Majestic in its own simplicity
Inscribed above the portal from afar
Conspicuous as the brightness of a star
Legible only by the light they give,
Stand the soul-quickenings words—Believe and Live!"

When Christ said to the disciples, "Launch out into the deep," it required faith to do it. They had toiled all night and had caught nothing. Many there are who hesitate to launch out into the deep because of past failures. They avoid sanctification because others have made shipwreck; they avoid the deeper things of God because some have swung off into fanaticism. In the Science of Navigation there had to be heroic self-sacrificing leaders; they launched out and sailed on and sailed on! If Columbus had turned back America would have remained undiscovered, perhaps, for centuries. If Cabot and other daring mariners had not put out to sea and sailed the unknown and uncharted waters we never would have known the world as we do now. So in salvation; we must venture with Hope at the bow and Faith at the helm, and the Word of God as our compass, we shall not miss the blessing. Thank God, for those who ventured. Luther ventured and brought on the Reformation. Knox ventured and saved Protestantism in Scotland. Bunyan ventured and gave us that greatest of all books, "The Pilgrim's Progress." Wesley ventured and gave us Methodism and the great holiness revival. Moody ventured and brought on the great Revival after the Civil War. Inskip ventured and became the great evangelistic prophet and apostle of the modern Holiness Movement. If Livingstone had not ventured with the gospel into the very heart of Africa the Dark Continent would never have become so known to us, and Bishop Taylor would never have accomplished the great and mighty things of his missionary career. Livingstone said: "People talk of the sacrifice I have made in spending so much of my life in Africa. Away with the word! It is emphatically no sacrifice. Anxiety, sickness, suffering may cause the spirit to waver, but this is only for a moment. All are nothing when compared with the glory which shall be revealed in and for us."

Then lastly, the sea eventually breaks upon the shores of Home or our destined haven.

I have stood many a time upon the pier or the shore and saw the great ships come in. Once I stood at the dock in St. Malo, Brittany, France, and saw a vessel come home from a long voyage. The Captain and crew had been away from home nearly a year. Loved ones—mothers, wives, children, were there to greet the sailors as they came back after a long absence. What rejoicing! What happiness! When we came back from the war our ship sailed out of Marseilles and ploughed the waves of the classic Mediterranean; then we came into Gibraltar and next passed out into the stormy Atlantic. After many days of sailing and tossing we sighted the shores of the homeland. Then New York harbor, with the statue of Liberty, hove in sight. As we sailed up the Bay we were saluted by steam whistles and flags on every hand. Next, we saw a fine ship bear down upon us literally covered with flags. Upon the upper deck a brass band was playing and the bridge was crowded with men and women waving their handkerchiefs and shouting, Welcome Home! Welcome Home! To say the least we were happy! It was glorious to be back home again from battlefields and foreign shores to greet loved ones again and enter upon the joys of home again.

Bye and bye, we who travel upon life's boundless ocean will make the Port of Heaven if we are traveling upon the old ship of Zion. With Jesus as our Captain, some day we shall come in sight of the Land that is fairer than day. As we think of it we feel like singing,

"Land ahead its fruits are waving,
O'er a land of fadeless green,
And the living waters laving
Shores where heavenly forms are seen.

"Onward bark, the Cape I'm rounding;
See the blessed wave their hands,
Hear the harps of gold resounding
From the bright immortal bands."

MODERN APOSTLES OF FAITH.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

CHAPTER XXVII.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

THE law of cause and effect does not always operate in the affairs of men touching promotions, honors, etc.; the greatest men are not always chosen presidents of the nation; the ablest men are not always chosen to the episcopacy. These honors often come through conjuring of circumstances, and carefully worked out plans of organizations. "It is better to be right than to be president," is a well known saying, which was more surely exemplified in the life of William Jennings Bryan than of any other citizen in the history of our nation. With the personality, magnetism, and superior eloquence of this princely man, "all the kings' horses" could not have pulled him away from the White House, had he but lowered the standard of his convictions.

The second time he was nominated for president, one of the leading New York politicians spent several days with him at Lincoln, Neb., urging him to modify his views, but without success. He remained at home during the convention, and held up the proceedings for more than two days, in which time the platform committee wrestled with his demands. He literally forced that great body to "come over" to his ideas, before he would accept the nomination. This was never done by any other man, elected or defeated, before or since. This writer was in the convention hall, when the committee finally yielded, and brought in its report, and Mr. Bryan's doctrines announced. In anticipation of this, ten thousand small flags had been distributed among the delegates; a picture of Mr. Bryan, some ten feet square, between two gigantic flags unfolded before the vast audience, and for thirty-five minutes there was pandemonium, which was amplified by a band of some fifty instruments, with the waving of those flags. We doubt, if in the history of nations, there was ever a greater demonstration. We mention this to show the personal power and influence of a man in the presence of strong political enemies.

Before we discuss some of the more serious characteristics of Mr. Bryan, there is one more outstanding victory which should be mentioned. When Woodrow Wilson was nominated for president, the convention by a large majority had been instructed for another man. Mr. Bryan did not believe this other man suitable for the presidency and, to avoid a gigantic blunder on the part of a great nation, Mr. Bryan threw himself with all his powers before the onward rush of plans already fixed, and forced the convention to set aside pre-convention pledges and nominate Woodrow Wilson.

Now let us give a resume of Mr. Bryan's political triumphs, beginning with his first nomination, which swept the convention like wild-fire under the power of his eloquence. Until the Baltimore Convention, twenty years later, where he individually caused the nomination of Mr. Wilson, we find four national conventions absolutely dominated by this one man—W. J. Bryan. Three times nominated for the leadership of his party, the other one he controlled and brought victory to his party, and gave to the world, as the leader of a great crisis—Woodrow Wilson. We contend that, in the history of nations. Demosthenes, Cicero, Burke, Gladstone, Washington, Lincoln, et. al., no man has ever wielded such an influence in a great nation. This record has no duplicate in the history of men; a broad statement, but we challenge refutation from history.

We have mentioned the political career of Mr. Bryan as a prelude to the greater man, as he was greater than a political party, and a different perspective is necessary before the true majesty of his character is revealed. Mr. Bryan had political ambitions; no one can doubt this, but above and below this ambition burned a passion of soul so true and honest that it would not allow him to surrender one infinitesimal part of principle. He would not "stoop to conquer." Other men have virtually said: "Make your platform and I'll get on it." Mr. Bryan says: "I am on my platform, and you must accept it, or I get off."

William Jennings Bryan was born March 19, 1860, at Salem, Ill., the son of Silas L., and Maria E. Bryan. The parents were of the best Virginia stock, coming from Culpepper county. Silas Bryan was a lawyer, and a gentleman, and for many years was "Hon. Judge Bryan," a Presbyterian elder; notwithstanding he was active in local and state politics, he was known as a pious, Christian gentleman. Judge Bryan wisely placed his family on a farm near Salem so that his sons might have the clean, wholesome environment of pure air, and hard manual labor. William Jennings was taught the rudiments of education by his mother until he was ten years old; he then entered Whipple Academy, at Jacksonville, Illinois, where he remained two years, after which he entered Illinois College in the same city. While in college the young man took an active part in literary societies and gained a campus reputation as a speaker and debater.

Mr. Bryan graduated from Illinois College in 1880, with the highest honors, and was the valedictorian of his class. He attended Union Law School at Jacksonville, Ill., for two years, where he met Mary E. Baird, of Perry, Ill., the woman who afterwards became his wife; she was also a law student and was admitted to the bar with her husband. Mr. Bryan practiced law at Jacksonville, until 1887, in the law office of Lyman Trimble, a man of leadership, both in his profession, and in politics.

Mr. Bryan went to Lincoln, Neb., in 1887, and there as a rising young attorney and a local politician, began the career that was meteoric in its splendor. The young lawyer attracted more than a local attention by his eloquent speeches on Tariff Reform, and was offered the nomination of Lieutenant Governor of the state, but declined this honor. In 1880, he made the race for congress on the platform of free tariff on such commodities as wool, lumber, coal, sugar, and other necessities, and was elected in a district where the opposite party usually held the majority.

The average man is scarcely known in congress until he has served several terms; but that body of men soon found out that Mr. Bryan was there, and when he made his speech on the Wilson Tariff Bill they sat up and took notice. The highest compliment that can be given a member of congress is to be heard by his colleagues; usually they sit with their backs to the speaker, read papers, and pay absolutely no attention to what is being said. They listened to Mr. Bryan as he delivered his "maiden speech."

In 1896, Mr. Bryan was first nominated for president, but was defeated because his doctrines were believed to be revolutionary. When the Spanish-American War came on Mr. Bryan offered his services to his country and was given a commission of Colonel of a voluntary regiment. However, the war was of brief duration, and his command saw no actual service at the front.

We wish now to notice that other side of this superb character. Mr. Bryan did not wait until his political ambitions were silenced to become a Christian leader; religion claimed no small part of his life, even during the years of political leadership. He was a devout, clean, high-class Christian gentleman from the beginning. For more than thirty-five years he was in the limelight of publicity, and much of this time the object of severe and cruel criticism. But amid all this political slander and ridicule, not one word could ever be uttered against his personal character; and not one word of retaliation ever fell from his lips; he was too big to hit back, and perhaps no man was ever more provoked to do so. Mr. Bryan's private life was an open book, clean, and above reproach from any angle; his habits and conversation, in public and private, were as irreproachable as a cultured woman. At no time, with all the honors, which were world-wide, was he ever known to lower his standard of life and habits.

In the early days of his political career he delivered throughout the nation, his famous lecture on the "Prince of Peace," which was a masterpiece of eloquence, and an illuminating commentary on the God-Man Savior. Mr. Bryan believed the Bible with the simplicity of a child. Notwithstanding he was a careful student of all the deeper questions of life, at no point of his religious compass did he lose his bearings on the authenticity of God's inspired Word. On the teachings and faith of this book he fashioned his life. The truth of God's Word seemed to have been rooted and grounded in the soul fiber of Mr. Bryan by experience, which is the last word of controversy. We believe, as did Mr. Bryan, that an inexorable concomitant of faith that does not question the verities

HEART PURITY.

Rev. B. H. Bock.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."—Matt. 5:8.

WHILE sitting in my study meditating one day, my eyes by chance fell upon four words that were printed in large letters on a signboard just across the street, facing my study windows. It was the advertisement of a certain brand of tobacco put out by a certain firm in the country. The words were these: "Look at the stamp." From these words I received a new vision of the power of the gospel on the Christian.

The greatest stamp that God puts upon the individual is that of "heart purity." There never was such a time in the world's history in which heart purity was so much in demand than at the present time. Everything seems to be leading to impurity of heart and life. Even the secular press, magazines, and the atmosphere seems to be breathing its impurity everywhere. Vulgarity, obscenity, and licentiousness are seen and heard everywhere—on the street car, the automobile, the street corner, in the business houses, and as well in the church. We are living in awful days. We feel like raising up a prayer to God, saying, How long, O Lord, shall these things be? Our only hope is in God.

Is it no wonder that we are drifting, when they have taken away our Lord, and we know not where they have laid him? Verily, is not history repeating itself? They are crucifying afresh Jesus Christ, and are putting him to an open shame. The denial of his Divinity, the putting of his sacred blood in the same class as that of any other person, or as the blood of bulls and goats, is no small cause for God giving this country over to uncleanness and ungodliness. We are drifting toward an endless hell; and eternal woe, from whence no traveler ever returns. God wake us up! We are going to sleep while our children and the world are going to utter ruin and damnation.

The fact of the trend of the times, and the bold assaults made on the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ is sufficient to prove our dimness of the vision of God. The text says: "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

Under the old Mosaic law there were certain laws of cleansing and washings, which outwardly made the candidate pure. If they had touched the dead body of a man, then they must go through the process of washing and cleansing. Also they were separated from the clean a certain number of days. If he was a leper, he must be ostracized from society, and never to return to his own home. And if he professed to be clean he must first of all get permission from the priest who had the power to permit his return home. Is it not true that this old world has the disease of the leprosy of sin? Naught but Jesus' blood can make the vilest clean.

Then again, there is the natural heart of man. The Bible says, "The heart is very wicked, who can know it?" What a state of impurity is the natural heart of man? Gerald Chapman, the noted bandit and murderer, the two young University graduates of Chicago, who murdered the lad of but nine or ten years of age, and then to cover up their guilt by ramming the little form into a sewer, and just for a "thrill", and many other crimes, which are on the increase are only glimpses of the impurity of the natural heart. The wickedness of the antediluvian world, of Sodom and Gomorrah, and other cities which God destroyed because of their wickedness, are but faint pictures of the leadings of the natural heart of man without God. David said, "In sin did my mother conceive me." Again, "I was shapen in iniquity."

The need of a pure heart is seen in the importance that Jesus put on it. He said, "Except your righteousness shall exceed that of the Pharisees and the Scribes ye shall in no wise enter therein." They were clean on the outside, but inwardly they were full of dead men's bones. The outside of the platter was clean, but oh, the inside of it! They plotted to slay their Lord. They cried for his blood. They hooted his claim of Divinity. What depravity they had in their heart! Jesus put a premium on heart purity: "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

We need a pure heart because no sin will ever enter those beautiful gates of yonder city. There shall enter nothing that shall defile or maketh a lie. The devil tried his best to pollute that city, but God soon cast him out, together with his subjects who listened to his threats. Thank God there shall be no devil or sin in yonder city. All liars shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone. If I am to have a pure heart before getting to heaven, and must have it before seeing God, then I want to know how I can obtain the same, and who can receive it.

WHO ARE THE RECIPIENTS, AND HOW MAY I OBTAIN THIS BLESSING?

First, we wish to state that before we can receive a clean heart, which is effected by the baptism of the Holy Ghost, that I must be a child of God. God does not promise to cleanse the heart of the sinner, but he does promise to cleanse his outward life. God forgives the sinner of his many sins. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." This is God's gift to the world. There was no hope without the shedding of the blood of Jesus. When the sinner comes to the cross, all that he is most concerned about is that God may lift the burden of sin from his heart. His cry is not for "heart purity," he does not hunger for that, but he wants the wrath of God lifted. He wants the smile of an infinite God. His sin is ever before him. When God saved me, my heart cry was, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Oh, the load on my heart! Oh, the weight of my sin! Thank God, he came and rescued me from my burden of guilt. So will he do to every contrite heart. The recipient, then, must know that he is born again, and that God's Spirit bears witness with his that he has a new heart.

After we have a full knowledge of our sins forgiven then we are candidates for heart holiness. "Jesus, that he might sanctify the church with his own blood, suffered without the gate." "Husband, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify it with his own precious blood." "We are chosen to salvation through sanctification of the spirit." By faith are we purified. In order then that we might obtain this great and good blessing, we must come to him with clean, outward lives, with everything in the way of outward transgressions blotted out, and present ourselves on the altar of sacrifice for Jesus to sanctify us wholly. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins (conversion) and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (sanctification). Reader, if you have not as yet put everything on the altar, don't wait until later, but begin now to give God your all—time, money, friends, kinfolk, yourself, all that you know or don't know, and tell God to burn out the "root of evil," "the old man," "carnality," for all these are the traits and characteristics of an impure heart, and he, by his Holy Spirit, will make you as clean as heaven.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF A PURE HEART, AND ITS SIGNS.

No one can have a pure heart and not know it. This is the most knowable thing in all of the universe of God. To eat my dinner and not know it? To live in the world and not know it? Neither can I have a pure heart and not know it. This one thing I do know, that where once I was blind, impure and powerless, I am now made whole through the blood of Jesus.

To have a pure heart is to have the vision of God. "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." I see him whom my soul doth love. To see God means to enjoy him. I now can enjoy the old-fashion prayer meeting. He is with me when I am lonely. He helps me when I find the way so hard. What joy to be in his presence! I see God by faith in this present evil world. I see him through the workings of affliction. David said: "Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I understand his ways." I see God now in nature, in his Word, but I shall see him after life's battles have all been fought, and I lay down this tabernacle of clay, and put on immortality. Job was correct in theology when he uttered the words: "In my flesh I shall see God."

Again the pure in heart are sincere. They are sincere in their praying. They do not play religion, but they work at their job. They love to be with their Master in prayer. Their testimonies are sincere. They have the right ring and sound. If God has sanctified them wholly, they are not ashamed to tell it, either to the church or world. They are sincere in their attitude toward sin. They do not laugh at it, but abhor sin.

We want to notice that the pure in heart breathe after purity. They are dissatisfied with the scum of this old world. They want pure society. When I see or hear anybody who loves the society of worldlings and sinners I mark it down that their heart is foreign to that which is blessed, as God counts blessed. If you have lost that "first love" experience, which cherishes the prayer meeting, the love for the Word of God, and the love for the association with the children of God, you then need to go to your knees and renew your covenant with God. Yes, the pure in heart love the cause of Jesus Christ.

Finally, the pure in heart produce a pure life. Someone says: "Actions speak louder than words." "What you do, speaks louder than what you say." A little sin, an unkind word, a word out of season, and seeking the applause of men will hinder the soul's vision of God. Just as the grain of sand, or the small piece of steel in the eye is painful, and hinders the eye's vision, so will sin, the pride of life, and the lust of the flesh hinder the purity of heart and life.

The soul was made for the glory of God. Satan robbed God of the souls of men, but thank God, he had no sooner fallen, until there was a plan for his getting back to God. That plan is through the death of his Son Jesus Christ, and our approach to the cross of calvary, and faith in his blood.

"Blessed are the pure in heart," is intended for everyone who wants the blessing. If God put the hunger for heart purity in the heart, then he has made provision for it. Let him that readeth understand. Press your claim, dear reader, your Lord waits now to cleanse you from all sin, and perfect your heart in holiness in the fear of God. Let your prayer be, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." The answer comes back, "I will; be thou clean."

"O that it now from heaven might fall!
And all my sins consume!
Come, Holy Ghost! for Thee I call;
Spirit of burning come!

"Refining fire, go through my heart;
Illuminate my soul;
Scatter thy life through every part
And sanctify the whole.

"My steadfast soul, from falling free,
Shall then no longer move;
While Christ is all the world to me,
And all my heart is love."

Indian Spring—Junaluska—Closely Related.

JOHN B. CULPEPPER, SR.

I have spent five days at the Indian Springs Holiness Camp, where the crowds were great, orderly, serious. The most eager were among those who have been coming longest, but there were many new faces.

The preaching was done by Dr. Morrison, Dr. Brasher, and Dr. Butler, all able men, in their line. Of Dr. Morrison, I will simply say that any man who can fill the place of modern evangelist, of the holiness type, for forty years, run a great book concern, publish a great holiness newspaper, and conduct a great growing holiness school, where hundreds are being moulded for usefulness, traveled largely over the world, and wedge in a number of publications from his own pen, might well be considered as Providential a bestowment as Wesley or Asbury, for no mere genius, no mere self-directed man can do these things.

Dr. Butler, of whom I know little, to my shame, is a great expositor of the Book, and while new, on the grounds, he found his place quickly in the appreciation of the people. For be it said that holiness people read their Bibles and no people recognize mental and spiritual ability so soon. They flocked to his profound expositions.

Dr. Brasher is a general favorite at the camp. He is as modest as a woman, as stubborn as a cypress gate-post, which is always noted for staying put. He is an artist in the pulpit. Dr. Beecher said he always felt for common ground with his audience, and then retained it to the end of the hour. Dr. Brasher holds a patent on just kinder sucking you into himself and subject, quickly, seat you, and you go with him on a joy ride, nothing doubting.

Dr. Brasher would have made a success at recasting junk, and disposing of it as new. He could have made fine linen paper from old rags, or could beautify any old dress or house or town. Then, he is the best eraser I ever saw. You know it was an ancient custom, due to the scarcity of writing material, to write several times deep over the same space, so that to get to the original, an expert was called in. Dr. Brasher can rub off your views, and all other mere markings, and show you the meaning of the verse, without you catching him at it.

Many were reclaimed, converted and sanctified. If they were not, they thought they were and went out to live it. It don't hurt to think you are honest and practice it, to think you are truthful and practice it, to think you are on your way to heaven and practice it, to think you are clean and practice it.

Two things a trip to Indian Springs camp always does—takes down your head-high sign, and puts up one, which gives you a case of the perpendiculars to locate. I saw well up towards a hundred young men and women in and about the altar, surrendering for life service, and giving themselves, unreservedly to a thousand revivals—now to begin. I saw five hundred fathers and mothers jump to their feet saying God can get anything inside my yard, by naming it.

I saw my old Macon, Ga., friend, for the first time, as president of the camp, and director of the great army. Dick Burden always did make me wonder how some men make a perfect fit, the first time you try them, without any filing or filling in. You know everybody loves Dick Burden—just dry so.

Next time, I will tell you of Frank Benson and a dozen others, but now wish to say that I left Indian Springs, and autoed across to Junaluska, to find them all in very interesting talks about the coming revival. I started to jump up and tell them it was done on back where I came from. But it seems to have always been the case, that while good trailers are nosing the ground, holiness hounds take the scent on the air, cut across lots, and are soon in full cry—sometimes a full hundred years ahead of ordinary hunters.

At Junaluska they did some of the very best talking, and it all fit in nicely to a discussion about the coming revival, only they did not get the evangelist placed. We have only about fifty, but they are about to run the pastors crazy—just to know what to do with him—since they are pretty sure they can do without him. Br'er rabbit and I exchanged winks, when I thought of Dr. Morrison's thirty-three gospel tents, and boys, and he will have a hundred soon, and possibly more. This all explains the difference between a fox jumped, and hotfooting before an eager pack, and a group of men, out for a chase, if they can jump it. I heard a right smart about celebrated dogs, good hunting grounds, and the best tooting horns, some of which were sampled, and I liked it all—only I kept hearing shouting, Amens, Lord help, Glory, dinning across the spaces lying between the two hunting groups.

"The Lord is risen indeed;
He lives to die no more;
He lives the sinner's cause to plead,
Whose curse and shame he bore.

A Powerful Plea for Prayer for Revival.

DR. R. A. TORREY.

"Wilt thou not revive us again that thy people may rejoice in Thee?" (Psa. 85:6).

"It is time for thee, Lord, to work: for they have made void thy law." (Psa. 119:126).

One of the most insistent cries that goes up today from the heart of any one who loves the Lord Jesus Christ, and who is at the same time open-eyed as to the condition of affairs in the world today, is the cry of the Psalmist of old, "Wilt Thou not revive us again: that Thy people may rejoice in Thee?" The great need of the hour is revival—a true, God-sent revival; not a revival gotten up by man's machinery, but a revival sent down from God himself in answer to the prayers of people who know and meet the conditions of prevailing prayer.

The condition of the churches throughout our own land and other lands today would be appalling if we did not believe in a God who answers prayer—yes, if we did not know that God does answer prayer, and did not know from the Word of God itself and from the experience of the real Church throughout the centuries that God especially delights to answer prayer for revival.

As I travel from one end of this land to the other, and have opportunity to see for myself the condition of the churches; as I read the various religious periodicals of the various denominations; as I talk with men and women in positions of influence and power in the Church, my heart would be sick, yes nigh unto despair, if I did not know God and did not know that he answers prayer. The gross error that is being taught by many professedly orthodox ministers; the absence of the real, living Gospel from the preaching of many who do not preach error, but who are certainly not preaching the truth in its simplicity, in its fulness, and in the power of the Holy Ghost; the unconcern of apparently the great mass of the membership of our churches regarding the lost at home and abroad; the rapidly growing compromise with the world on the part of a very large proportion of the membership of our churches, the neglect of real prayer and the openly avowed disbelief in prayer on the part of not a few; the inactivity in real soul-winning work on the part of an overwhelming majority of the members of our evangelical churches today, cannot but fill any intelligent and properly instructed Christian with a sorrow that almost breaks the heart.

But while the state of the churches is bad enough, that of the outside world would, of course, be far more discouraging, disheartening and overwhelming if one did not believe in God who answers prayer. There is no time to go into details, nor do we need to, for the facts are well known, even though so many are deliberately shutting their eyes to them and loudly proclaiming their "optimism"—an optimism that has no basis in fact, but simply in the wishes of those who proclaim it. To mention only one of many things: Conditions in our universities, in our colleges, in our high schools and our grade schools, not merely the religious conditions, but the moral conditions, are terrible beyond expression. I could not put into print things that have come under my personal observation as to the slump, not only in the modesty, but in the moral decency, not only among our young men and boys, but among our young women and girls. These facts are brought to me wherever I go, east or west, north or south.

But shall we despair, or throw up our hands and say nothing can be done! No, not for one moment. God does answer pray-of revelation is an experience wrought in the soul by the impartation of the Holy Ghost. When the Holy Spirit operates on the heart he reveals Jesus, guides into all truth, and takes the things of Christ and shows them unto us. Mr. Bryan was a Christian; not school or university made, but by experience, which is the "white stone" for the individual in perplexing questions, and will be a Gibraltar amid satanic bombardment of destructive criticism.

After enjoying political honors and distinction in extent, perhaps awarded to no other man, Mr. Bryan became a champion of two great causes, one national prohibition, and he lived to see it triumph. Many regard prohibition as a failure, but the cause has not failed. Enforcement has failed because men are traitors to duty; but it can be said with pride, that our flag does not float over a legalized saloon. Up and down the land, Mr. Bryan's voice and pen sounded out the clarion call to national righteousness. His paper, "The Commoner", stood for two decades the champion of human rights, and against sin in high places. There was never an uncertain sound on issues between right and wrong. Mr. Bryan was a preacher of righteousness with a sincerity that could not be questioned; he believed his message. This was true when his "Cross of Gold" swept the nation with enthusiasm; he no more played to the galleries at the Chicago Convention in 1896, than when he was defending the Word of God, and the rights of the people, against the loud-mouthed atheistic fiasco at Dayton, Tenn.

In the death of William Jennings Bryan, our blinded, sin-burdened world suffered an irreparable loss. From this writer's limited viewpoint, he was never needed so much as now. The things he stood for are being defended by others; but the place he had won in the thinking of the world gave him a conspicuous position not occupied by any other man; he could speak with influence and authority. His voice and pen were supported by a life that had weathered every test, and when his sun sank away, there were no dimming clouds. Friend and foe alike agreed at this point.

When the life of William Jennings Bryan is studied from every angle, free from prejudice, we have no hesitancy in placing him among the world's greatest one hundred men—a citizen of America standing without a peer. He was primus inter pares as a writer, thinker, orator, leader of men, champion of righteousness, and with it all, a devout, humble believer and follower of Jesus Christ as Lord. Where can such a combination be duplicated? In our opinion, not among the men of this nation. We have had none like him, and it is doubtful if we shall ever see another—William Jennings Bryan.

As a fitting close to this sketch, we shall quote Goldsmith's description of the old minister, as exemplified in the life of Mr. Bryan.

"Like some tall cliff that lifts its awful form,
Swells from the vale, and mid-way leaves the storm;
Though 'round its breast the rolling clouds
are spread,
Eternal sunshine settles on its head."

Life's Lesson.

CLYDE EDWIN TUCK.

My soul, expanding with advancing years,
Sighs not for its lost springtime long ago,
But journeys toward the sunset's fading glow
Forgetful of its yesterdays of tears,
Forgetful too, of all its foolish fears,
Well knowing that life's aim is but to grow,
That nothing matters but Christ's love to know,

The love that evermore sustains and cheers.
My soul has learned life's lesson, and is calm;
It seeks the needs of others to supply,
A word of hope it gives to those who fall,
For others' woes it tries to find a balm,
And urges those who fall again to try—
God's boundless goodness is for each and all.

"LETTING CHRIST CONQUER."

REV. PERCY F. ASHER, B. D.

"If we let him alone, everybody will believe in him." John 11:48.

AN impenetrable gloom had suddenly descended upon the Bethany home for Lazarus was "sick unto death." Immediately a message was hurried to our Lord. Contrary to expectation he "abode two days still in the same place where he was" with the consequence that when he did eventually arrive at Bethany, Lazarus had been dead four days. Going to the tomb wherein the brother of Mary and Martha lay, he commanded Lazarus in the name of the God of all life, to "come forth"; whereupon he "that was dead came forth" and many of the Jews who stood by believed on our Lord. Upon the demonstration of such remarkable power by the "Man of Galilee" the High Priests and Pharisees plotted against Christ, for they said, "If we let him alone everybody will believe in him!" The enemies of Christ were more confident of the success of his cause than were his disciples! Strange, but true nevertheless! They recognized that there resides in Christ's own unaided personality power enough to win him entrance to all hearts.

"I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." These words confirm the opinion of the enemies of Christ. Our first and last responsibility is to present Christ to those that know him not. Not to argue about him, not to diminish his teachings, but to present the New Testament portrait of him in all its fullness and with all its pristine beauty. For the example and influence of his life are more potent than words. There is a story told of an occurrence in the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago. In one of the classes there was a girl of the poorest class who would not keep herself clean and tidy. Teacher after teacher took her in hand, but all failed to persuade her to cleanliness. They tried rebuke, they tried sarcasm, they tried commands and punishments; but she responded to none of them. Then a new teacher tried a new method. When the class assembled she produced from a wrapping a pure white lily, and placed it in a vase upon the table. The girl opened her eyes widely, stared at the flower, and then rushed from the classroom. Everybody was puzzled to know the reason for her hasty departure, but their perplexity only lasted for about twenty minutes, for in that time the girl returned with her face and hands spotlessly clean, her hair tidy, and her attire as spruce as she could make it. The spotless whiteness of the flower had been more potent than all the attempts of her teachers to compel her to cleanliness by precept. Thus it ever is with the life of Christ, and with his blessed example. "If we let him alone" and declare that life, and uphold for all the world to see its matchless purity, all men will be drawn unto him, "everybody will believe in him."

"Let him alone!" We need to be reminded of these words in this day and age when the seekers after sensationalism have invaded the realm of sacred truth. Biographers and "Lives" of Christ are multiplying at a rapid rate and we rejoice that this is so. But one disconcerting fact which we cannot evade is the distorted portraits of Christ which some of these modern "Lives of Christ" present. According to the writer of "The Man Nobody Knows," Jesus has joined the Rotary. He is now presented to the world at large as the Founder of modern business and as an executive: "He believed that the way to get faith out of men is to show that you have faith in them, and from that great principle of Executive Management he never wavered." They crucified Jesus. They did not crucify Mr. Barton's Jesus. They are still crucifying our Lord by trying to make him pleasant and popular, and we are compelled to cry out in the words of our text: "If we let him alone, everybody will believe in him."

Well might one ask, "Why don't we let Jesus alone in regard to his teaching? Why don't we take it as we find it without watering it down as Ghandi suggests?" Christ did not build the world to be outwitted in it. If we could only learn reverently and trustfully and above all obediently to let him alone. When shall we learn to take Christ at his word? We do not tamper with the works of Shakespeare, of Beethoven, of Milton, or Bach, trying to improve on them. Who would undertake to rewrite Shakespeare or Milton? These men have established for all time their superiority and we should yield to them our intellect, our emotions, and our love. The same is true about Christ. We are forever trying to improve things in our own ingenious little ways. Men have the idea that religion can be made effectual by compromise or watering down. Who would care to dilute the sermons of Beecher, or Brooks, or Parker, or Spurgeon, or Moody? Why then do we not, once for all, cease from the attempt to compromise or improve upon in a witless way, the teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ? If ever the world is to be won to Christ it will be won only by the presentation of a full Christ.

"If we let him alone, everybody will believe in him." This then is our message to the preacher or layman who would deface the historic portrait of Christ. This is our message to the social reformer who would transform the world with a less effective gospel. This then is our message to that great body of consecrated preachers and laymen who are seeking to take to those outside a "full gospel" portraying Christ in all the fullness of his power.

"If our love were but more simple,
We should take him at his word;
And our lives would be all sunshine
In the sweetness of our Lord."

A stranger wandered one evening into a Methodist Church. The brother who preached that night was having a good time. At the close of the service the visitor waited. He thanked the preacher for this and that, but ended up: "If there is any criticism of the service I should make, it would be that throughout there was an absence of stillness. Do we not recall how in the building of the Temple 'there was no sound of hammer while the Temple was in building?' 'Ah, my dear brother,' replied the other, not without a certain wistfulness, 'we are not building temples here; we are blasting rocks.'" We need today a full gospel in order to blast the rocks of skepticism, indifference, rationalism and blatant atheism!

A Tiny Testament.

This Testament is bound in leather, stamped in red ink, has a wonderfully clear, large type for a small book. The type is nonpareil. The size is 2½x4¼ in. thick, and the weight is 2 ozs. The regular price of this Testament is 75c. We are closing out 50 of them at 50c each, postpaid. Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

If You Want Something

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

DR. WIMBERLY IN RINGGOLD, LOUISIANA.

The impression in some religious circles that the old-time Methodist revival, such as thrilled the rural sections in pioneer days, being a thing of the past, has been refuted here in our little city. A revival has just closed conducted by Dr. C. F. Wimberly, of Charleston, S. C., a member of the South Carolina Conference, for the past thirteen days. The visible results was a class of fifty-three members received into the Methodist Church yesterday, and scores besides were wonderfully saved. The old-time altar of prayer was used in all of its old-time traditions, and men of all ages and professions—doctors, dentists, mature business men of all vocations were at the altar, praying through. The greatest crowds ever seen at a revival attended the services. All the business houses were closed for the day meetings, and the big new Methodist Church was filled to overflowing each night, and well filled every day. Dr. Wimberly is a marvelous preacher, with an evangelistic touch and power never excelled in this section. He held a successful revival here over six years ago, and our people have been wanting a return engagement ever since. We wish he could spend his time in our Louisiana country; he is an evangelist par-excellent.

Another by-product of the meeting was the organization of a camp meeting. The ground has been donated one mile from town—a beautiful pine grove with living springs of water. A large tabernacle will be built and the whole community is co-operating in the enterprise. Dr. Wimberly remained over on Monday night and delivered his great lecture on "The Radio in Prophecy."

THE MOOERS, NEW YORK CAMP MEETING.

The twenty-second annual camp meeting held near Mooers, Clinton Co., New York, commenced on Saturday night, July 30, 1927, and closed August 14th. There were three preaching services each day throughout and there was not a single fruitless altar call. On the last Sunday night after the splendid altar service and while farewells were being said and sung, three souls in different parts of the audience found their way to the Cross in personal salvation. In all more than 300 seekers bowed at the altar. The attendance was above the average. A beautiful spirit of harmony prevailed and there was absolute freedom in the Holy Spirit both for minister and laymen. No one had to be "sung down," or pushed forward. The workers, John and Emily Thomas, R. A. Zahniser, John Scoobe, Tillie Albright, J. F. Knapp and Arthur Gould (singer) were as a unit, meeting each day in an eight o'clock morning prayer meeting to plead for guidance and victory, and for a renewed spirit of prayer among the campers. Nearly $3,000 was raised in cash and pledges on the last Thursday of the camp to the missionary work of the National Association, a whole day being given to the consideration of this subject. The laymen at the head of the camp including Brothers Humphrey of Malone, Fitch of Mooers and Breckenburg of Champlain, are doing a marvelous work for God throughout Northeastern New York.

The children's meetings were a genuine blessing to the camp as led by Mrs. Emily Thomas. More than $22.00 was contributed by the children to Rev. and Mrs. Supernoir, National Missionaries from China, whose beautiful Christian spirit won the hearts of all. With C. W. Ruth, T. M. Anderson, as well as Arthur Gould and the writer as workers for next year, the Mooers camp should come to the very forefront as one of the great interdenominational holiness gatherings in the country.

The writer stated publicly that the camp in 1925 and 1927 had been worth more than $10,000 to him alone as it was here that God first definitely called him to the evangelistic field in 1926, and it was here at this year's camp that he decided immediately to leave the pastorate and school work (in God's Bible School, Cincinnati, Ohio) and enter upon a definite life work of Christian Holiness evangelism. He is now (Aug. 17-29) laboring with the M. E. pastor at Maineville, Ohio, and commences his fall evangelistic work on September 11 with Rev. F. E. Rundell, M. E. pastor, Russell, N. Y. The readers of The Pentecostal Herald are earnestly requested to pray that his appointments and fields of service may be ordered of the Lord.

INDIANA MEETINGS.

Since last reporting we have conducted meetings in Indiana churches at Ladoga, Franklin, and Indianapolis.

Miss Mertie Hooker is the pastor of the Church of the Nazarene at Ladoga. All acquainted with her know her to be a noble character and deeply consecrated. We have assisted her in a number of meetings at different places, but never had a more complete victory than this time. The meeting got the attention of the town, and was attended and favorably commented on by some of the most substantial citizens. A number prayed through to definite experiences of regeneration and sanctification, some of them hard cases. A gambler and boot-legger got right with God and went to work on the railroad. His testimony was a great help in the meeting. The last night we raised $100 in pledges for the pastor's salary. Misses Gertrude Sill and Pearl Richey rendered efficient and effective service in singing and young people's work.

The meeting at Franklin was practically a pioneer proposition. We did not see the break we had expected, but it was said to be the best meeting the church there has ever had. We had splendid co-operation from the citizens and other church people. The Sunday school reached 155. Rev. Austin Elmore has charge of the work at Franklin, and he is a princely young man. He recently refused an offer of $5,000 a year from the business world for his services, because he wants to preach holiness.

We were called to the South Side Church of the Nazarene at Indianapolis for a six-day's convention, more especially to the church. God gave us good services with seekers and finders. Rev. J. L. Bashmore, pastor of this church, is a good pastor and congenial collaborator.

We are now in a meeting at Columbus, Ind., which closes our labor for this assembly year. We have been constantly busy, having conducted twelve meetings and eight conventions since the last Indiana District Assembly. By the time this is in print we will be located at Olivet, Ill., where we will make our future home. All who desire my services in the evangelistic work should address me there.

P. P. Belew.

GOOD MEETINGS.

We thank the Lord for his continued presence in sanctifying and keeping power. Our meetings in churches and camps since January have been held in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Illinois, and Kentucky. We praise the Lord for all the victories, and trying times—the latter have given us renewed proofs of his faithfulness in answering prayer. We also give God the glory for all the souls that have found him in saving and sanctifying grace. Our fellowship with brother ministers and evangelists has been rich indeed and we rejoice to find some of God's true saints everywhere we have been.

We wish especially to mention the new camp at Wallingford, Ky. We were co-workers with Rev. R. D. Huston in this meeting. This is a beautiful location in a large grove of tall trees. A good substantial auditorium has been erected this year, also dining room and workers' rooms. The dedicatory service was held on the last Sunday afternoon. We had good attendance during the entire meeting in spite of the rainy weather and souls were saved and sanctified although the enemy tried hard to defeat us. We feel there is a great future for this camp. Any information concerning this place may be had by writing Mr. O. D. Lucas, Wallingford, Ky.

Yours in Jesus,

G. S. Pollock and Wife.

BENTLEYVILLE, PA., CAMP MEETING.

The sixtieth camp meeting on these historic grounds came to a close Sunday night, August 21. Because of the fact that for several years this camp meeting seemingly was going backward, the directors were greatly encouraged with the ten-days' meeting this year and have already begun to plan large things for next year. The weather most of the time was wet, cold and disagreeable, nevertheless quite a number of the cottages were inhabited and the lovers of holiness and old-fashioned preaching and singing and altar services, came from many distant places to take part and to enjoy the meetings.

Dr. W. B. King, pastor of Central M. E. Church, Charleston, W. Va., had been chosen as director of the camp. Associated with him were Rev. Edward D. Fellers, Evangelist, Wilmore, Ky., J. R. Basket, pastor, Fayetteville, W. Va., Attorney Life, of Charleston, W. Va., lawyer-evangelist, and Miss Thompson, who was the ever efficient children's worker of the camp.

The Camp Meeting Board has wholeheartedly invited the entire party of workers to come back next year.

Much improvement is contemplated about the tabernacle, cottages and spacious grounds. There are 20 acres included in this Bentleyville camp ground. Much of it is forested with virgin timber, many great oak trees over 200 years old. One feels he is walking on holy ground as he recalls the fact that most all of the great preachers of holiness in days gone by have heralded the eternal truths of God from the pulpit of this camp ground, and that many great preachers have come from its altars. Watch out for announcements next August of Bentleyville camp meeting.

Rev. Edward D. Fellers, Evangelist.

REPORT.

My reports to The Herald have been rather scarce this year, but it has been a very busy and happy year in the work of the Kingdom. It would take too long to mention the various meetings of the past several months, and the outstanding high lights of each, but I want my friends to know that I am still in the running.

My summer slate started in First Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., where it was a great privilege to preach to a fine people and fellowship with two royal personages, Rev. R. H. Wynn, the pastor, and his wife. Then I went to Lake Arthur, La., a great old camp with a fine tradition, and yoked up with Bro. Will H. Huff, whose ministry I enjoyed as never before.

Next, to Jackson, Tenn., in a union meeting of Methodism, with Dr. Chas. L. Goodell, of New York leading. His keynote is personal evangelism, and he has a great message. He preaches the power of the Holy Spirit as the only power and hope of the Church, and he believes in and boosts Asbury College with real enthusiasm. It was a pleasure to lead a chorus of 250 voices and a tremendous audience in wonderful song services.

Then on to a fine old-fashioned country camp meeting at Warnock Springs, near Magnolia, Ark. There I had the privilege of teaming up with Bro. R. F. Whitehurst, of Wilmore. It was a great meeting in many respects. The people back of the camp are "The blue blood of God's aristocracy."

Then I attended the Conference on Evangelism at the Methodist Assembly, Lake Junaluska, N. C., which was a mountaintop experience in more ways than one. The wonderful environment, together with the inspirational messages and fellowship of the brethren from all quarters of the country, combined to make a week of rich enjoyment. Dr. Akers gave us one of the most inspiring of all the messages and the Asbury Quartet did themselves proud.

By the time this reaches press I will have finished a meeting in Utica, Miss., with Rev. C. Y. Higginbotham, which promises interesting possibilities, and will be with my old friend Arthur Moore in a union meeting of Birmingham Methodism extending to Oct. 16. Bro. Moore is filling a great place in the Kingdom as he ministers to probably the largest congregation of all Southern Methodism, First Church, Birmingham.

James V. Reid.

BEEBE CAMP MEETING.

The Beebe Holiness camp meeting has come to a successful close. In spite of the rainy weather, mud and opposition, the night congregations were good and on the last Saturday night and Sunday we were greeted with throngs of people. The day messages were great which encouraged our hearts and boosted us on. The night messages were mighty and powerful descriptions of hell and the sinful life and the audience seemed fastened to the words of the eloquent preacher indited by the Holy Ghost.

Bro. Tucker was at his best in every way and went beyond himself of a year ago. Many souls found God in the good old-fashioned way.

Prof. Willard Davis can sing the glory down. His messages in song were great, especially his special with the accordion. These two evangelists should be kept busy. We had several visiting singers and a number of specials by different ones which helped a great deal in the song service. We were especially favored on the last Sunday evening by Profs. Webb and Farris who brought their singing classes and quartets and did some great singing.

Bro. Talkington brought a fine message to the young people at the three o'clock hour and a number of other preachers preached during the week days.

There was a very beautiful spirit throughout the meeting and the co-operation of the visiting preachers and pastors was the best for years. We had excellent attention and good behavior during the meeting. We believe the camp is on the best footing it has been for some time. To God be all the glory, for it was he that gave the victory. The climax was reached the last Sunday night when the saints shouted the preacher down and he made the altar call. The finances were sufficient to pay all the bills.

Rev. John Fleming and singer of national reputation came to us for 1928 and Prof. Davis comes back to us for 1929.

We enjoyed the presence of that grand old saint, Bro. Smith Claiborne, who is past 80 years and who has lived such a beautiful sanctified life these 35 years or more, which encourages our hearts and proves beyond a doubt that the sanctified life is not a failure; also Dr. Weir whose triumphant shout made the old Beebe camp seem natural, and whose sanctified life has encouraged us to pull the hill in the Christian life.

R. A. Dodson, Pres.

CAMDEN, DELAWARE.

It has been our privilege to preach on the old Camden Camp Ground. It was here on July 15, 1806, that a great camp meeting commenced. Seats were prepared for 6,000 people. There were 400 tents, wagons and carts on the grounds. The first night of that meeting there were 68 converted and 29 sanctified. The meeting continued all night on the second night of the meeting. There were 10,000 people present on Sunday. During the day there were 198 converted and 160 sanctified. The meeting ran all night and before sun up there were 127 more converted and 100 more sanctified. The Lord certainly visited this camp ground 121 years ago, but in years to come the fire went out and the camp meeting died. The Lord has permitted the holiness people to buy this beautiful and historic camp ground and they have revived the camp meeting and expect to keep it going until Jesus comes.

S. S. Nelson.

GREAT CAMP MEETING AT ACTON, KY.

We have just closed the Acton camp meeting near Campbellsville, Ky. The best meeting for years. A good number at the altar, conviction deep and some praved through to victory.

There were six thousand one hundred and thirty-three chapters of Scripture read by the people during the camp. The singing was a success and a blessing to the camp. It was conducted by W. C. Kinsey and wife from Richmond, Ind. Mr. F. E. Eades is the Secretary of the camp. He and the other members of the Board work hard in the interest of the camp.

Rev. Yancey, the pastor, is a fine man. He managed the camp well and stood by the workers. A number of preachers were present.

Scriptures on the subject of entire sanctification, that is, that the nature of sin remains in the regenerated and it can all be cleansed away by a sudden baptism with the Holy Spirit applying the all-atoning merit of the precious blood of Christ. There is not the shadow of a doubt in my mind on this subject. You know, it was the faith and teaching of our founders. It is in our history, theology, and hymnology; and, thank God, it is a gracious experience of many hearts. Those of us who believe and teach this full redemption here and now, by consecration and faith, are in good company. Have you noticed recently the statements of Watson, Pope and Miley? They were great scholars, devout saints and wrote very plainly on this subject. I am sure you will not object to a quotation from these famous Methodist writers. I am quite well aware that we have a class of men among us who look upon these men as back numbers and are wont to claim that if they lived today they would be entirely out of harmony with the thinking of the times. If so, so much the worse for the times and its shallow, irreverent and unscriptural thinking. But here is what they have to say on the subject of sanctification. Of course, this is not all they say, but simply a little sample of much they said on this great Bible doctrine as taught by the founders of the Methodist Church.

Watson says:

"The general promise that we shall receive all things whatsoever we ask in prayer, believing, comprehends, of course, all things suited to our case which God has engaged to bestow; and if the entire renewal of our nature be included in the number, without any limitation of time, except that in which we ask it in faith, then to this faith shall the promise of entire sanctification be given; which, in the nature of the case, supposes an instantaneous work immediately following upon our entire and unwavering faith."—(Institutes, Part 2, chap. 29).

Pope says:

"There is no restraint of time with the Holy Ghost. The preparations for an entire consecration to God may be long continued or they may be hastened. Whenever the seal of perfection is set on the work, whether in death or in life, it must be a critical and instantaneous act."—(Christian Theology, vol. 3, p. 44).

Miley says:

"The fulness of sanctification shall be instantly attained on the condition of faith, just as justification is attained; and there shall be a new experience of a great and gracious change, and just as consciously such as the experience of regeneration.  Through the divine agency the soul may be as quickly cleansed as the leper, as quickly purified in whole as in part. We admit an instant partial sanctification in regeneration, and therefore may admit the possibility of an instant entire sanctification. Such a view of sanctification does not mean that there need be no preparation for its attainment.  But there is really a necessary process of preparation for regeneration as for entire sanctification; and such preparation need require no more time in the latter case than in the former."—(Systematic Theology, vol. 2, pp. 369, 370).

It is a solemn thought to me that I have lived my three score and ten years. I feel now that I am liable to go at any time, but my powers seem to be well preserved and I may remain yet for a number of years. If I should, I shall continue to believe in and to preach full redemption from all sins committed and all sin inherited through the precious blood of the Lord Jesus Christ. I see my letter is becoming lengthy. I would not weary you. May the blessing of God abide with you graciously, giving you wisdom and grace for all good service.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

The special singing before each preaching service was conducted by T. F. Eden and sister, who greatly pleased the multitudes who listened to them with rapt and joyful attention.

Rev. John B. Culpepper, a faithful old warhorse in the evangelistic ranks, high up in the seventies, was on the ground, with head up and shoulders back, one of the straightest men of his age in the world, with nimble step, and warm, happy heart. No doubt he has seen fifty thousand sinners come to Christ in his revival meetings. He held a tent meeting on these consecrated grounds many years ago, in the very beginnings of Indian Spring camp meeting history.

Rev. Sam Hanes, one of the tallest trees in the evangelistic forest, whose presence is a blessing and inspiration anywhere, was with us with glad amens and happy shouts, faithful at the altar and the prayer meetings. Sam Hanes and Hamp Sewell make one of the strongest evangelistic teams in all the south. They have held some wonderful revivals in one of the big tents of The Evangelical Methodist League this summer. They expect to start southward when Jackfrost begins to appear, and go before the coming of the wild geese, into Florida for a great winter campaign in a big tent. Any city or community will be greatly blessed with their ministry.

Rev. H. H. McAfee, president of the Camp Meeting Board at Orlando, Fla., was present, with his family, and a great number of preachers and lay people from the state of sunshine and flowers were there. The Florida people are looking forward to, and arranging for, a great crop of tourists the coming season.

The managers of the Indian Spring camp never had greater faith and zeal for the up-building, enlargement and ongoing of this marvelous center of spiritual power, than at the present time. May God bless and guide them in all of their work.

One of the most impressive services at the camp was a memorial service held in memory of Rev. Robert Stewart, and Brother Jones, a famous layman who had taken a great interest in this camp. They had both passed away during the year. Robert Stewart was a brilliant preacher, a consecrated, devout, and saintly man. To know him, was to admire and love him. He held a high and warm place in the hearts of the Georgia people. Brother Jones was a commercial traveler; he sold goods and witnessed to the gracious power of Christ to save from sin. The memories of these two men will be cherished in the hearts of those who knew and loved them, as the years go by. A great company of God's dear children who loved Indian Spring camp, who were blessed there, are gathering about the Father's throne on high.

ONE OF MY GREAT DESIRES

CHAPTER V.

If we keep a pure, powerful, saving gospel in the world, we must educate and prepare the men to preach it. From the beginning of what is known as the "Holiness Movement," the revival of the preaching of the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification, the Lord in the camp meetings, conventions, and revivals held by the so-called "holiness" people, has called a host of young men into the ministry. It is said of the ministry of our Lord Jesus that, "the common people heard him gladly." It is a fact worthy of note that those who heard him gladly, received, and appropriated the benefits of his message, soon became very uncommon people. It is so today. The great common people hear the gospel of full salvation gladly, accept it, and out from among them God has called, and is calling, a host of fully saved young men to preach the gospel, and he is calling lay people of the Holiness Movement to fit and qualify these young men to carry the message of salvation to the people of this nation, and to the ends of the earth.

Do you realize that the only thing that prevents the conversion and sanctification of a million souls in this nation every twelve months, is faithful preachers to carry the gospel to the people, preached in its fulness and power? The tent work of The Evangelical Methodist League has revealed the fact that the people will come in crowds to hear, and fill the altar to seek for full salvation from sin. Give us a hundred of these tents, and we would preach full salvation to two hundred thousand people every week during the tent meeting season.

Come, holiness people, let us awake to our duty and privilege. Help us to arrange for the education and sending forth of an army of full salvation preachers. We have a splendid beginning for a great Theological Seminary at Asbury College. If we will double and treble the capacity God will send in the young men, and the school will be sending out a host of sanctified preachers to win the lost. In the name of a compassionate God and the millions of lost souls, help us in this, the greatest work that can claim the attention, prayers, money and help of Christian people. I am not asking for money now, but for your prayers, sympathy and deep and abiding interest in this greatest of all works.

Faithfully, your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

OUR GREATEST ASSET.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

THE question of gain seems to be the one important thing that absorbs the minds of most people nowadays. When a proposition is submitted to a man or woman they immediately inquire, What will be the gain? The fact is, only a very small percent of the people who inhabit this globe of ours see beyond the shores of time. They act as if this were the only world they would ever live in, consequently it is in accord with their view of things that they do not prepare for the life which is to come.

In First Timothy 6:6, we have a declaration of inspiration which should forever settle the fact of our choice for time and eternity. It reads thus, "But godliness with contentment is great gain." Now on the very face of this declaration we see the advantage to be derived from the possession of godliness, both in this world and the world to come. The one thing after which the human race is clamoring is contentment—in other words, happiness—for a contented soul is a happy soul.

What does it take to make one contented? Does it take wealth, popularity, education, friends, and all that goes to make up an all-round comfortable life? Let us have the opinion of the great Apostle as he sums up the matter in writing to Timothy, his son in the gospel: "And having food and raiment let us be therewith content." Food and raiment! My! how many of us are satisfied to stop at this! Yet the beautiful lily was cited as an example to us, that it neither toiled nor spun, and yet the richest man, and the wisest man in the world was not equal to its God-given attire.

If you will run down this chapter, you will find the real advantages of having only food and raiment. In the first place the rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, lusts which drown men in perdition. Then money is said to be the root of ALL evil, which while some coveted after, have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows.

Is it not strange that we are running after that which leads us into temptation, becomes a snare to us, drowns us in perdition, and pierces us through with many sorrows. Yet that is what the inspired apostle says riches will do, and we know from observation, if not experience, that such is the case.

Let us hear from this great Apostle once more. In writing to the Philippians, he professed to have attained to this high ideal as a Christian, when he wrote, "For I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." Can you beat this for a recipe for happiness! No matter where Paul was, or what the circumstances, whether in the deep, in perils of false brethren, in poverty, affliction, beaten, imprisoned—anything—yet he had the jewel of contentment hidden in his bosom which made him to rejoice in the Philippian jail at the midnight hour, and boldly declare in the midst of his enemies, that "these light afflictions which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory!" What an asset is this contented heart—this mind stayed on God—in the midst of life's perplexities and confusion.

With the above thoughts in mind shall we not venture the assertion that "Godliness" is the greatest asset one can have in this life, and surely in the one to come. If the world believed this, really and truly, instead of rushing after the mighty dollar they would be seeking to find the pearl of great price—a heart made clean through the blood of Jesus. Would you be rich in this world so far as contentment and satisfaction are concerned? Seek and obtain that godliness which comes by a complete abandonment of sin and a perfect trust in the merits of Jesus' blood. He is mighty to save and strong to deliver, and will grant unto us all that our faith claims.

Reader, is your heart restless? Seek the quieting power of the Holy Spirit. Are you troubled over the tomorrows? "Commit thy way unto the Lord, trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass." Would you know the sweet secret of contentment? Seek that godliness which makes you like the Master, and guarantees you a home where you shall be forever with the Lord.

"Fruit In Old Age."

REV. A. W. ORWIG.

Old age should not be a signal for inactivity or supineness. While it may involve a degree of mental and physical declension, it should not be considered a warrant for indolence, either as to business or religion. Both body and mind need proper exercise or employment in order to escape premature weakness and sometimes even death. And thus aged Christians need to be more or less active in the service of the Lord that they may maintain spiritual robustness and render general helpfulness to their fellow beings. Thank God that the Holy Scriptures declare they may "bring forth fruit in old age." And they will do so to the degree that they keep their hearts warm with the love of God and their minds alert for opportunities. Old age with the righteous is by no means a tragedy, but may be one of the happiest periods of life.

Dear aged Christian pilgrims, as surely as we keep "planted by the rivers of water" our spiritual "leaf shall not wither." We shall really desire to be engaged in some kind of work for him "who went about doing good." Indeed it will be our delight and joy thus to follow in his steps. On his eighty-fourth birthday John Wesley wrote:

"My remnant of days
I spend for his praise
Who died the whole world to redeem;
Be they many or few
My days are his due,
And they all are devoted to him."

I have heard some persons who have not reached the age of "three score and ten years," and in fairly good health, declare that their work was now done and that they were entitled to a good and long rest. I fear such persons have not a true conception of life's grand mission. We are not in the world for an indolent resting time, but for service in God's vineyard in some capacity as long as we live and according to the strength he bestows. To be unduly concerned about rest is very likely to bring on spiritual rust. And then may follow gloominess and sullenness. Oh, let us not lose the sunshine and holy fire out of our hearts, lest it tend to decay more rapidly than diligent and hearty toil in behalf of our fellow mortals. What though we have the badge of winter upon our heads, and our brows are not as fair as in earlier life, we may have spiritual springtime in our hearts, and continue to "bring forth fruit" to the glory of God. In former years I sometimes enjoyed Christian fellowship with a man eighty years of age, who once declared that his heart was like a watered garden, and that the Lord enabled him to bring forth fruit in old age. One of his chief employments was the distribution of tracts.

One of the most beautiful tributes to the constant usefulness and happiness of an aged man was that by his own wife. Some one wanted to know how he might recognize him at a railroad station as he returned from a trip. "Oh," said the happy wife, "look for a tall gentleman helping somebody." He was helping an infirm person down the steps of a railway car. Ah yes, even the aged should be "a pattern of good works," bringing "forth fruit" for the spiritual and physical good of others to the degree possible. "There is no discharge" from service in the warfare against sin and Satan. Nor should we desire it. Those who are truly obedient to the physical and spiritual laws of God have the promise of "long life and peace," and may hope to "come to the grave of a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in its season."

A very old preacher and missionary, who had toiled long and hard in the service of the Lord, was seen trying to teach a little Indian boy how to read. Some one said to him, "Why do you continue to exert yourself when you have done so much good? You ought to cease and to be resting." To this the happy old saint replied, "Oh, I thought if I could yet teach the boy to read, he might read God's word and be saved." Noble veteran of the cross, thinking and planning to get people saved to the end of his earthly pilgrimage! Would to God there were more like him!

Beloved in the Lord, old and young, let us esteem it a great honor to be permitted to be co-workers with God for the salvation of the unsaved. Let us not fear to work and to work hard, as God may enable us to do. (Eccl. 9:10.) Some one, with a grudge at an eminent Christian, wrote the latter that he hoped something would happen which would compel him to work hard all the remainder of his life. To this the good man replied that nothing more desirable could befall him. Ah, yes, the truly consecrated Christian craves work for God. It is his great joy. He would far rather "die in the harness" than in the easy chair, idly waiting to pass away. I trust all the silver-haired ones, as well as all others, can joyfully sing,

"We'll work till Jesus comes,
And we'll be gathered home."

Request.

We wish that anyone having the experience of Rev. M. P. Hunt which was published in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD along somewhere in 1913, 1914, or 1915, probably earlier or later, would do us the kindness to mail us the copy. A request has been made for this to be put into tract form, and the party who will kindly send us his or her copy containing this experience, will get some of the tracts for distribution. You need not send the whole paper, but only the part which gives Brother Hunt's experience.

Sincerely,
MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

A POWERFUL PLEA FOR PRAYER FOR REVIVAL.

er; that has been demonstrated time and time again throughout the centuries when conditions were in many ways as bad as they are today or worse, God has heard prayer, and he is just the same today. I know that God answers prayer for revival—deep, thorough, widespread, miracle-working revival, as well as I know that I exist. When Mr. Alexander and I started around the world in December, 1901, there were five thousand people who had covenanted to pray for us every day. When we reached Australia, ten thousand took it up and prayed for us every day. When we reached England, forty thousand people had taken it up, and God heard. All the way around the world wonders were wrought, not merely through us, but through a large number of others whom God raised up in answer to prayer, and I believe he will do like things, or far greater things, again.

Pray, pray, pray! Pray definitely; pray intensely; pray persistently; meet the conditions of prevailing prayer and be sure you pray through.

DAILY TEXTS.

Text: "Thou shalt not be afraid... there shall no evil befall thee." Psalm 91:5-10.

An express train was rushing on, at a terrible speed, carrying war news. The passengers were frightened. One little boy laughed. Someone said, "Are you not afraid?" "No, I'm not afraid, my papa is running this train."

Faith and fear never dwell in the same heart. When faith comes in, fear goes out.

Poem.

"God is running the train,
Be not afraid,
He is your safeguard
In sunshine and shade.

"He will take care of you,
When time is past,
Safe to his kingdom
Bringing you at last."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, I do believe you are caring for me and I will not be afraid.

October 17.

Text. "Thy will be done in earth, as it is done in heaven." Matt. 6:10.

Story. A little girl had looked forward for days to the Sunday school picnic. When the time came, none of the family could go. It was not best for her to go alone. She did not pout, nor tease, nor cry. She went to play, singing. Someone asked her how she could be happy instead of sorry. She said, "I've got the 'Thy will be done,' spirit in my heart."

The angels in heaven love the will of God and so did little Mary.

Poem.

"I worship thee, sweet will of God
And all thy ways adore,
And every day I live
I love thee more and more."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, teach me Thy will. May I love it "more and more."

October 18.

Text. "Understand what the will of the Lord is." Eph. 5:17.

A mother went away telling her little girl not to eat any of the candy, nor give baby brother any. The nurse found her crying and she said, "Brother wants some candy, and I'm all mixed up. The Bible says, 'Be kind' and 'mind your mother,' and I'm all mixed up." The nurse said, "It would not be kind to give brother candy when mother tells you not to, because it is not good to eat too much candy." She understood, and did not cry any more.

Prayer. Heavenly Father, help me to understand the Bible so I won't get mixed up like this little girl.

Poem.

"Sing them over again to me,
Wonderful words of life.
Let me more of their beauty see,
Wonderful words of life.
Words of life and beauty,
Teach me faith and duty,
Wonderful words, wonderful words,
Wonderful words of life."

October 19.

Text. "He took the five loaves, and looking up to heaven, he blessed them." Luke 9:16.

Little Opal went to take dinner at one of the neighbors. They passed the bread and she shook her head, the meat and the potatoes, but she shook her head. They knew she was fond of beans, but she would not take them. They said, "Opal, what is the matter?" She said, "You don't praise the Lord before you eat." They said, "You praise him." She looked up and said, "Jesus, I thank you for everything on this table, now I can eat some beans."

Prayer, poem.

We praise Thee, Lord, for all our food,
We praise Thee, that Thou art so good.

We praise Thee, for our Savior, dear,
Who daily careth for us here.

October 20.

Text. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow." Isaiah 1:18.

They were singing, "Whiter than the snow" in the infant class. Someone asked, "What can be whiter than snow?" One little girl said, "When the snow melts there are little black specks in it, but when Jesus makes my heart white, there are no little black specks in it."

Poem.

"O for a heart that is whiter than snow!
Kept, ever kept, neath the life-giving flow;
Cleansed from all passion, self-seeking, and pride,
Washed in the fountain of Calvary's tide."

Prayer.

"Savior Divine, to whom else can I go?
Thou, who didst die, loving me so,
Give me a heart that is whiter than snow."

October 21.

Text. "Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long." Exodus 20:12.

To honor is to obey. Ephesians 6:1. A mother and her little boy were walking down a strange, grassy hill. The little lad ran on ahead. The Spirit said to the mother, "Tell your boy to stop." She called out, "Stop." He never took another step. There right in front of him was a deep well, with sharp stones. If he had not obeyed he would have died.

Poem.

"Trust and obey
There is no other way
To be happy in Jesus,
But to trust and obey."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, I do not want to die, but to live 'till Jesus comes. Help me always to, "Trust and obey."

October 22.

Text. "We know in part and we prophesy in part." 1 Cor. 13.

Story. One hot, dusty day a baby on board the train was crying. The people were tired. The father was walking up and down the aisle with baby in his arms. A man said, sharply, "Take that baby to its mother and stop its voice!"

He said, "I can't, she is in her coffin in the baggage car."

They were sorry. They had not known baby was crying for his dead mother.

Poem.

We know in part,
We cannot see,
The bleeding heart,
So we should be,
Kind, with never an angry
dart.

Prayer. Heavenly Father, I want always to be thoughtful and kind.

My Dear Boys and Girls:

It seems that some of our contributors to the Boys and Girls' Page have a begging habit, and we learn from other parties that some are inclined to impose upon the generosity of those who are touched by such appeals. I wish to say that in the future I shall not print any letters that ask for help, as it is unfair to those who might be imposed upon. I have no doubt there are those who are needy, but we cannot let the Page devoted to our boys and girls' letters be given over to a begging proposition.

You will enjoy Mrs. Brown's Daily Readings, I am sure, for she always has something good for us to think about. It would be nice to tell her you enjoy them when you write to The Herald.

Wishing you the best in God's storehouse of mercy and grace, I am,
Devotedly,
Aunt Bettie.

Dear Aunt Bettie: My sister Beryl wrote a letter to The Herald and so far she received two letters, but her letter hasn't been printed very long. I thought maybe some of the boys and girls would write to me. I like to get letters from folks. I am now writing to a girl whom I went to school with last year. I have two little friends that I like real well. Their names are Ralph and Ruby. I am my daddy's water girl. When he is working out on the farm I carry him water. This week I have carried an awful lot of water for him and three other men have been putting up hay. Sometimes I get to ride the horses. I like to go to school real well. Our school is small. The oldest scholar last winter was thirteen. Next year I will be in the sixth grade. My teacher, Mrs. Holland, is very good to us and I like her very much. I have about one mile to go to school. Daddy takes me horseback sometimes. We have a pet groundhog. We call it "Fritz." It will play and stand up. Sometimes it sleeps on its back. We have a dog and two kittens. One cat is the cat's mother. I have an old hen and a few biddies. I am four feet, 7½ inches. I have light brown hair, light blue eyes and medium complexion. There is one thing I can cook and that is an egg omelet. I like it real well. I hope some of the cousins will write to me.

Beulah I. Lawson.

Rt. 1, Box 38, Little Falls, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please sit over and let a little girl from Union county come in? I'll sit with you by the big bay window where the gentle breeze may fan our brows and smell the sweet fragrance of flowers. I am only eleven years old, five feet tall, have light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, my birthday is Feb. 22. Have I a twin? If so, please write. I am not a Christian but hope to be soon. I humbly ask all those who are Christians to pray for me. I like to go to Church and Sunday school. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with O and ends with A, and has six letters in it.

Bettie O. Mungle.

Reynoldsville, Ill

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Ohio boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a Christian, am twelve years of age, 63 inches tall, have brown hair and black eyes. I go to a Baptist Church. I was baptized on my twelfth birthday and hope to make a preacher some day. My uncle takes The Herald. I like to read page ten. I don't believe in dancing or playing cards. Write me, cousins, and I will try to answer.

Ray Pepper.

Box 184, Fletcher, O.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and all the cousins? We enjoy the beautiful sunshine. I have not visited you all for a long time and would like to have a chat with you and the cousins. Our revival meeting closed last Sunday night. We had a good meeting. Rev. Delos Cassels from Glosster, Miss., was our preacher. I have made several trips since I wrote you all last, so I will tell about one of my trips. July 5, Tuesday morning, leaving in a Chevrolet car, Mr. T. W. Johnston, Rev. T. D. Perrott, Mr. R. M. Tuttle, of Ponchatouba, La., Miss Susanna Smith and I left for Summer, Ill.; also my daddy, niece, and two brothers-in-law. Finding bad roads we didn't make much time the first day; reached Memphis, Tenn., at dark, crossing the Missouri River on a bridge into Arkansas. We found good roads in Arkansas and Missouri. We crossed the Mississippi River where it joins the Ohio, in a ferry out of Missouri. We reached Mr. Maurice Schwartz in Lancaster, Ill., about 12 o'clock, July 6. They gave us all a kindly welcome. We went to Mr. C. E. Perrott's brothers; they also gave us a kindly welcome. We went to prayer meeting one night, they had what I call an old-fashioned prayer meeting. We went to Sunday school and my niece and I entertained them with some Southern songs. July 14, we bade our good friends good-bye, leaving West Salem at noon; came back through Indiana and Kentucky, saw the Blue Ridge Mountains and the trail of the lonesome pine. The round trip was 1,914 miles. I yet love the dear old Herald, but have not got to read it much this summer. Hoping to see this in print.

Your cousin,

Allie Johnston.

Summit, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second letter to your page and as I received so many nice letters I thought I would write again. I am sixteen years of age and am five feet tall. I have dark, wavy hair, blue eyes, and a fair complexion. I am looking forward to this fall as I am planning to enter either Olivet or Trevecca College. I feel like I have had the call to the evangelistic work as a pianist. I want the prayers of the cousins that I might get to go. I be-

Dear Aunt Bettie: As it has been so long since I wrote for page ten, and as I have just finished reading Bernyce Bagley's letter in the August 3rd issue, which I think fine, I feel encouraged to write again. I thank God that my heart is full to overflowing with his love. I was at the old Durley Free Methodist camp ground a few miles Northeast of Greenville, Ill., today. Brothers A. H. M. Zahniser, evangelist, and our district elder, Bro. John Mayhew, brought the messages. The M. E. brethren will hold their camp meeting on this same ground. Bishop Berry and Evangelist Guy Wilson will bring the messages for the M. E. brethren. Our elder, Bro. Mayhew, brought such a wonderful message from Malachi 4:2. Read it. Just to think of God's wonderful love to the children of men and his unsearchable riches. No wonder that the saints cried aloud to God and shouts of victory went up from all parts of the tabernacle. I wonder, Aunt Bettie, sometimes, why the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob has convicted me of use of tobacco, selling of milk on Sunday, Sabbath desecration, ice cream socials for benefit of church when the tithe should be used to meet the finances of the church, secret organizations, especially the Masonic or Free Masonry which I have cause to believe, when quoting or giving scripture that contains the name of the "Only Begotten of God" Jesus Christ, they omit it; then the circus and movie show and many other things, while he doesn't seem to convict lots of people who claim to be his true children; and yet I believe I know why. Well Aunt Bettie, we have never met personally, but some sweet day I expect to meet you as I expect you to keep the faith and fight the good fight until called home. I thank God for The Pentecostal Herald. I love it and when you leave us, God grant that your good work may be carried on and on and on by other soldiers of the cross. Am thankful that I was able to get seven subscribers for The Herald and I sure appreciate the books. Cousins, let's continue to try and place this holiness paper in homes, for "without holiness no man shall see the Lord."

REPORT OF EVANGELIST JOHN
E. HEWSON.

The Portage, Ohio, camp meeting for 1927 was one of the best that the writer has been in this summer. Portage is located in Wood Co., twenty-four miles south of Toledo, on the Toledo and Ohio Central Railroad, and also on the traction line running south from Toledo.

This camp meeting has a splendid equipment of thirteen acres of beautiful hickory and walnut trees with a fine well of cold, sparkling water. They have a tabernacle that will seat about two thousand, and three large dormitories, a good dining hall and a number of cottages. They were all filled this year. Too much cannot be said of the force of workers in the dining hall, consisting of Rev. H. C. Stimmel, who had charge, with his son Ray, also Mrs. Lola Crawford and Mrs. Bessie Atha, who did the cooking and most of the serving, also with several other good volunteer workers. They certainly do their best to make it pleasant for everybody, especially the workers.

Mr. H. E. Ickes of Helena, Ohio, is the very efficient president, and the Rev. E. K. Day, of Newark, Ohio, is the secretary. At this writing the name of the treasurer has slipped my mind, but he is a very fine brother. Rev. George B. Kulp, of Battle Creek, Mich., was my co-laborer in this camp, and we found him to be a great preacher of the gospel, a brother beloved, one of the best teammates that I have ever worked with. We have thanked God a thousand times that he was no "Pussy-Footer," but called things by their right names. We found this man of God one of the youngest men that we have ever worked with, although in his eighty-third year. May God bless dear Brother Kulp and give him many years yet to preach the gospel.

The congregations were good and there was not a barren service, the Lord giving us 240 at the altar, and they came without hiding behind a crowd or cutting across lots to get to the altar. The last Sunday there were nearly six thousand persons in the three services and over five hundred autos parked on the grounds.

During the ten days there were two healing services at which a number claimed to be healed of their bodily ailments. Thursday there was a great Missionary service with Mrs. Charles E. Cowman, of the Oriental Missionary Society of Japan, Korea and China, as the principal speaker, telling of the great work that society is doing in those countries. Rev. Fred T. Fuge, of Africa, told of their work over there; also Rev. Charles B. Kolb told of his work in the Cumberland Mountains in Southern Kentucky and Tennessee. There was a Memorial service held for four of the members of the Association who had gone to their reward during the past year; they were Rev. J. J. Spangler, of the Monroe Missionary Society, of Canton, China; Mrs. Martha Wotring, of Oak Harbor, Ohio, Mrs. Minnie Conrad, of Grand Rapids, Ohio, and Mrs. Rev. D. O. Tussing, of Findlay, Ohio. The services were conducted by the President and Secretary of the camp, with the Rev. Thornton Ingle, Rev. G. C. Lashley, Rev. G. S. Fraker and the Rev. H. C. Stimmel as the speakers.

The writer of this article and the Rev. Kulp were invited back for the 1929 camp. We give God all the glory for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost upon the people. I have some open time for this fall and winter—any one wishing my services may address me at 127 N. Chester Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

ELGIN, TENNESSEE.

These are encouraging days in Holiness Mountain Mission work in East Tennessee and Southern Kentucky. We have had sufficient force to keep three meetings going at once in the various sections of the mountains embracing three counties. Many are being converted and some sanctified, for which we praise the Lord and take courage, and press the battle. We are also greatly encouraged as we visit the various places where we preached years ago, and places where we have not been able to visit until this summer, but where our workers have held meetings in the past years, to find the people standing true to God and holiness. It is simply marvellous how they have held on to the real truths of salvation from all sin, with so little holiness preaching.

Dr. M. Vayhinger recently spent about three weeks with us and plans later in the summer to give more of his time preaching to these gospel-hungry, though neglected people. We have been able to look after the work in the various sections better during the past few months than ever before, because of the gift of an old Ford car, and a fine young man from one of our Holiness Bible Schools to drive it. We ask The Herald readers to remember us in prayer.

SCOTTSVILLE CAMP.

The fortieth annual holiness camp meeting of Scottsville, Texas, is now history, never to be forgotten by those who had the privilege of attending. Large crowds attended all evangelistic services; there were more campers on the ground than had been for several years and God was with us in mighty convicting power from the very first service. A large number of people (mostly young people) found God precious to their souls.

The workers, Rev. Fred H. Ross, Rev. Warren C. McIntyre, of Los Angeles, Calif., and Prof. C. P. Gossett, of Wilmore, Ky., are all consecrated and talented laborers in the Lord's great harvest field.

Bro. McIntyre's morning messages on prayer were both searching and soul-inspiring. Both Brothers Ross and McIntyre were at their best, although the heat was intense; their ministry is searching and constructive, and brought deep conviction upon many unsaved people and strengthened the children of God.

Thursday was celebrated as the fortieth anniversary of the camp; part of the evening service was given over to the charter members, some of them having been present at the very first camp.

Talks were given on the subjects of "First days at Scottsville" by Mrs. Sanders, of Shreveport, La.; "Preachers and Old Faces," by Mr. B. P. Wynn, of Marshall, Tex.; "The World Touch of Scottsville Camp," by Mrs. O. C. Hope, of Scottsville.

The camp has for a number of years supported a missionary in India, Miss Mattie Long, but God transplanted her from India to Heaven four years ago, so one year later the camp took the support of Mrs. A. B. Richards in China. She and her husband are doing a wonderful work there.

Rev. C. P. Hogle, Secretary of the National Holiness Association, was with us and spoke on the work being done in China today.

Sunday, Aug. 4th, was the closing day of the meeting. Bro. Ross brought the missionary message in the morning and in a few minutes secured in money and pledges Mrs. Richards' support for another year.

Several young people knelt at the altar consecrating their lives to the service of God. Bro. McIntyre brought the closing message and the camp closed with a mighty sweep of victory.

FLORIDA HOLINESS CAMP GROUNDS, Inc.

To the many friends of holiness and the Holiness Camp Meetings in the north who plan to spend your winter in Florida, please make your plans to attend the Florida Holiness Camp, Orlando, Fla., March 1st to 11th, 1928. Speakers, Dr. Morrison and Dr. C. H. Babcock. Also please pray that God will make this camp meeting the means of reaching the multitudes who live in Florida and who come to Florida for winter. For information write Mr. F. H. Trimble, Sec., Orlando, Fla.

HODGES CHAPEL REVIVAL.

The Lord gave us one of the greatest, if not the greatest, revival I ever held in my life. Great and pungent conviction was on the whole community. There were conversions in the very first service. The church worked better than any church I ever saw and more devoted young people than I ever met with. I believe many times there were one hundred prayers going up to the throne at once. People were saved at the altar, along the road, in the homes. Shouts were heard in every direction. They surpassed all in shouting and personal work and testimony.

We had the largest crowd ever attending a country church. The day services were well attended, some one said from 150 to 300 in the day time and 500 to 600 at night. Three Baptist churches and one Presbyterian church near, all fell in line and will get several members. One hundred and nineteen prayed through at the altar in old-fashioned way. About 40 had given names to join our church and a great many for other churches. Bro. Foster, one of the laymen, said we would finally have fifty to join our church.

Bro. L. C. Risen, the pastor and wife, had thoroughly prepared the way for a revival. They had everything done possible to open the way. They are devout and no one can surpass them in getting souls saved. The people have unbounded confidence in them. One young man was called to preach.

We stayed at one place at night, Bro. and Sister Foster's. They were as kind and good to us as they could be. We don't believe there is a better county than Green, and better community than Summersville, and a better church than Hodges Chapel. Several babies were baptized. It was 100 per cent revival. They ask us back next year. We go to Taylor's Chapel immediately after conference.

Yours in him,
Robert Johnson and Wife.

OUR HEAVENLY HOME!

I am thinking now as I older grow,
Of that home to which I know I may go;
Of my Father who has prepared that home,
And his Son who so much for me has done.
I think of that City that has no night,
Nor need of a sun, for God is the light;
Where the gates are pearl and the streets pure gold,
Where half of its beauty has not been told.
Its walls are of jasper with jewels rare,
And great multitudes are worshipping there;
Crying hosanna to God and the Lamb,
Giving all honor to the great I AM.
Those who have washed their robes and made them white,
May dwell in that city of pure delight;
Without any fear of sickness or pain,
With nothing to lose but all now to gain.
Sin and affliction cannot enter there,
All worry dispelled, no burdens to bear;
Time shall be no more, as we reckon time,
Eternity then shall go on sublime.
No other city can with it compare,
In size, in beauty, and in jewels rare;
Could we but measure the length, breadth and height,
We might find in it surprise and delight.
Twelve thousand furlongs, the distance each way,
Just how many stories we could not say;
In the midst will be found a great white throne,
Where angels give praise to the Holy One.
And blessed are they that do his commands,
They shall dwell in that house not made with hands,
That home which was prepared for you and me,
The home that shall last through eternity.
That holy city is not to my mind,
The only heavenly place we shall find;
The country around this city of light,
Shall be no less cause for charm and delight.
In building that city, it was God's will,
The city should be on his Holy Hill;
This holy city may only be one,
In that world to come, when this life is done.
Now if this city is built on a hill,
Think of the size of that world, if you will;
With plenty of room for you and for me,
And whoever will, through eternity.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson I.—October 2, 1927.

Subject.—Elijah on Mount Carmel.
1 Kings 18:30-39.

Golden Text.—Choose you this day whom ye will serve. Joshua 24:15.

Time.—About B. C. 905.

Place.—Mount Carmel.

Our lesson proper covers but ten verses, although in its full scope it covers years of Jewish history. It has been said that in China, with her hoary civilization, some luxuriant brambles, that seem as though they might have sprung into being in recent years, have their rootings in customs fixed millenniums ago. Israel's civilization was not so old, but still we shall not understand the wickedness of the reign of Ahab, and the tragedy of Carmel, unless we go back into a study of the history of the things that led up to the lesson before us.

Matters had never gone well with Israel. They would worship idols, no matter what Jehovah did for them. Notwithstanding his solemn commandments, they would intermarry with the surrounding heathen. Even king David had too many wives for decency's sake. King Solomon's matrimonial mixups were bad enough to disgust New York or Chicago. When he took a fancy to a new woman, there was an extra wedding at the king's palace; nor did it make any difference with Solomon where they came from. Jehovah said, "Marry Jewish women"; but Solomon said, "Bring them in from the four quarters of the earth." As far as royalty was concerned, Jerusalem was a sort of California Hollywood, except that Solomon bothered little about divorce.

The kingdom of Israel, the northern kingdom, never had a good king. There were nineteen of them all told, bad and worse. Ahab was about the vilest of the lot. He capped the climax by marrying Jezebel, a Zidonian princess, a heathen of the heathen. One almost feels sorry that God ever commanded his people not to marry sinners: "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers." I suppose that law is alive as far as God is concerned; but with most church people it is an old "scrap of paper." Ahab was a pretty tough sinner, but Jehovah's law forbade him to marry a heathen woman. He violated the law; and the dogs licked his blood in Naboth's vineyard. A Christian marries a sinner; and the minister says: "Those whom God hath joined together, let not man put asunder." Wonder of wonders: God sanctioning what he has already forbidden in the very strongest terms. Maybe so, but this scribe came from a land where people have to be shown.

If you wish to study the littleness of perverted royalty, watch king Ahab cry for Naboth's vineyard as a spoiled child cries for the moon. He was not "henpecked," but devil-pecked; and Jezebel had done the pecking. If he possessed a will of his own, it was to do her will. She had corrupted not only Ahab, but through him the entire kingdom. When he and his people lost respect for Jehovah and his laws, the national conscience died, just as Germany's conscience died when she adopted Rationalism and Evolution in the place of God and his law, just as our American national conscience is dying in proportion to our loss of reverence for these sacred things; for there can be no national conscience anywhere, except in so far as men reverence Almighty God and obey his laws.

That was a great day in Jezreel when Elijah met Ahab for the first time. The prophet swore a great oath: "As the Lord God of Israel liveth, before whom I stand, there shall not be dew nor rain these years, but according to my word." It would be interesting to know what Ahab told Jezebel about that hairy, sheep-skin-clothed intruder whom he had met in the palace grounds. But it would be more interesting to hear her reply. I dare say, that the queen flew into a rage, and demanded the prophet's blood; but Jehovah had sent him down to the brook Cherith where the ravens would feed him till further notice from Headquarters. Finally, when the drought became so severe that the brook dried up, God sent him to Zarephath in Jezebel's country to have a poor widow feed him out of an empty flour barrel and an empty oil cruse till the end of the famine. But that was no more wonderful than to make a bareful of wheat out of one grain, or to make a grain of wheat out of nothing. He is God Almighty!

When the day for the contest by fire on Mount Carmel was drawing near, there was solemn fun in Israel. If one has a fair sense of humor, he does not need to visit the theatre to have it gratified. There is something extremely ridiculous in seeing king Ahab and his right-hand man, Obadiah, out early in the morning hunting grass for the horses and mules, the king going in one direction and his servant in another. But who is that coming up the road yonder? It is Elijah, the Tishbite, from his hiding. He is a member of the drama; and he is meeting Obadiah, when the second act in the play will take place. The curtain is already up; and Obadiah is in a fit of stage-fright. Elijah orders him to run for his master, but he is afraid to go, lest the Spirit of the Lord should snatch the prophet away, and so cause Ahab to kill him. But Elijah swears again, that he will be on hand at the proper time. The curtain falls.

Yonder come Ahab and Obadiah from up the road, and the curtain rises for the next act. The king and the prophet snarl at each other like two bloodthirsty beasts from the jungle. Ahab growls: "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" All the pent-up fury in Elijah's soul burst loose: "I have not troubled Israel, but thou and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baalim." Then came the order to meet him on Carmel for the contest by fire. The act closes, and Elijah is gone again to some secret place for communion with Jehovah. Such little times for rest and prayer are great days for the man of God.

On the morning of the appointed day all Carmel's heights were astir. Ahab had arrived with 850 prophets of Baal clad in their rich priestly robes, ready, if possible, to pull down fire from heaven. All the chief men of the kingdom were there. Out on a rock at one side of the multitude stands a lone, gaunt figure. His long, black, unkempt hair sweeps below his sun-burnt shoulders. His beard reaches his waist-line. His old sheepskin is rather the worse for wear. His turban has seen better days. His sandals wore out on the road from Zarephath. Maybe he will get some new ones in the coming days. The curtain rises, and we are ready for the next act in the mighty drama.

At the command of Elijah, the priests of Baal built their altar, laid on the wood, and put the parts of the slain bullock in place. Then followed their great cry to Baal for fire to come down out of heaven and consume their sacrifice; but no fire came. They leaped upon the altar, and screamed till the noon hour, when Elijah made fun of them, mocked them, until in their folly and madness they cut themselves with knives and lancets until their blood gushed out and mingled with the blood of the dead bullock; but no fire came. Elijah burnt them with sarcasm: "Cry aloud; for he is a god: either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked." Solemn fun. They raved, but no fire came. The curtain falls again.

When the curtain rises again, we are looking upon the scene of our lesson being enacted before our faces. Elijah has come to the front. We see him gathering together the scattered stones of an old altar that had once been erected on that spot for the worship of Jehovah. The altar is rebuilt in due form, twelve stones representing the twelve tribes of Israel. The wood is cut and placed in order, with the sacrificial bullock cut in pieces and put upon the wood. Instead of fire, a trench is dug about the altar, and twelve barrels of water poured upon the sacrifice, running down till the entire trench is filled. Not much chance for deception there. If ever excitement reached the breaking point, it must have been that hour. The people gathered about the remade altar. The prophets of Baal had given up in despair, and were crowding about Jehovah's altar. What next? Elijah would pray: "Lord God of Abraham, Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word. Hear me, O Lord, hear me, that this people may know that thou art the Lord God, and that thou hast turned their back again." Now we have some fire. No time for Amen. See that blue flame darting out of the heavens. See! It is consuming the flesh of the sacrifice, the wood, the stones, the dust, the water in the trench. "And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces: and they said, The Lord, he is the God; the Lord, he is the God." They said: "Jehovah, he is the God; Jehovah, he is the God." Their language was proper, for this was a contest between Jehovah and Baal.

The curtain falls for the last time upon our lesson; but for those who will read on to the end of the chapter, it will rise one more time. The last act is a tragedy in which the prophets of Baal are slain on the banks of the little stream that trickled and splashed adown the mountain slopes on its way to the plain below. It is terrible when Jehovah lets loose the weapons of his wrath.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Thomas J. Folger: "Have just closed an evangelistic campaign for Brother, J. E. Hipp, pastor of the Bostic Circuit, Western N. C. Conference. We conducted four revivals with great results. The Lord wonderfully blessed the Christian people and there were a number of sinners who came to the altar and prayed through to victory; a few of the Christians received the baptism with the Holy Ghost. Many shouted the praises of God. I shall be glad to get in touch with anyone desiring my services."

Rev. Joseph H. Smith, President of the National Holiness Association, will conduct a three-day convention, Sept. 23-25, at the Ann Arbor Holiness Association Interdenominational Headquarters, 122 South Main St.

Rev. C. H. Babcock, the Quaker Evangelist, will visit old Trinity M. E. Church, Trenton, N. J., November 13-27, to conduct a pentecostal revival meeting with an all-day meeting each Thursday.

H. B. Hysell: "We pitched an Evangelical Methodist League tent in the city of Mt. Hope, W. Va., and began a revival August 3, continuing until August 28. We fought the powers of darkness for a few days before breaking through, but we held on in prayer and faith until the Lord answered by fire. Approximately 6,000 attended all services, hundreds requested prayer and some two hundred knelt at the altar as seekers. There were ninety converted and thirty sanctified, according to the report of our secretary, A. W. Townsend, Jr., who also led the singing and played special numbers on the piano. Mrs. Hysell was pianist and soloist, and the writer did the preaching and God gave the victory."

E. L. Slaughter: "Rev. Gray L. Liggan recently conducted revival services in our church at Forest, Va., for two weeks. It is but fair to say that this community has not been so stirred for a number of years. The crowds attended well, more than the capacity of the building would accommodate. The meeting closed with twenty additions to the Methodist Church on profession of faith, and six by letter. Several united with other churches. Brother Liggan preached full salvation from an unclipped Bible."

This will introduce Dr. J. F. Knapp, who has been for the past eight years the very acceptable pastor of the McKendree M. E. Church in Cincinnati. During these years he has been engaged in educational and evangelistic endeavors along with his pastorate. He now feels that his place is in the distinct field of evangelism in which he has had marked success. He is in every way worthy of the confidence of those with whom he may have to do.

Sincerely,

Arba Martin,

District Superintendent, Cincinnati District, M. E. Church.

Rev. Fred St. Clair: "The meeting with Rev. Floyd Johnston, Portland, Ore., was simply immense. He said it was the greatest revival he had witnessed since he was a boy over in Canada. There were fine congregations in the big tent each night, and many times the altar was full to overflowing. Rev. E. B. Galloway, an old-time soldier of the Cross, originally from Missouri, and Walter O'Harra, a genuinely sanctified Oregonian, were invaluable help in prayer, preaching and shouts of praise. They are unbeatable anywhere. The healing service was the greatest we ever witnessed; had one service given entirely to children under sixteen years of age, which was truly remarkable. We are now opening at LaGrande, Ore., what promises to be a great revival. These are the most awful days of satanic conflict, and days when the holiness people are toning down, more than this old world ever saw before. They all slumbered and slept when the cry came—'Behold the Bridegroom cometh!' God bless all of your hearts"

THE TEACHER.

There have been great teachers all down through the ages. There is no responsibility in the whole range of human life where training counts for more than in teaching. When the community employs a teacher, it is buying the moral and mental outlook of its children. It is buying ideals, attitudes and appreciations that will do more to determine the success of the children than mere mastery of the subject matter. Public sentiment is beginning to measure a man, not so much by his culture as by what he can do with his culture. It demands efficiency as well as scholastic acquirements, claiming that a learned fool is no better than an ignorant expert. It begins to look upon the eccentricities of genius as a matter of weakness, instead of mere oddity. Dickens, the greatest modern novelist, was distinguished quite as much for his business tact and skill as for his genius.

How careful the teacher should be! Very few realize their responsibility. They have an opportunity for one of the greatest works on earth. All who have studied psychology know that the actions of other people exert a two-fold influence: (1) that of stimuli to action (2) that of models by which the satisfactoriness of an act is judged. All we can do is to get the thought into the mind, and in an automatic manner the thought will suggest the action. Every movement of the teacher is a suggestion to the pupil. When she loves nature, and the beautiful, every suggestion is of their attraction, and she can carry the pupils over numberless obstacles by reason of their imitation of her enthusiasm. Such things are catching. The teacher should be very serious and very careful as to how she conducts herself around them, and it is a very serious and sad thing when she doesn't. Children are precious gifts handed down from God to us. Great is the teacher's responsibility. We should each live for something worthy of life, and its capabilities and opportunities for noble deeds and achievements. We are here to mold, purify and elevate the world; to lift it up to higher levels of enjoyment and progress; to make its hearts and homes brighter by devoting to the children our best thoughts, activities and influences. The reason that thousands fail in their work in life is the want of a specific plan in laying out energies; they work hard for nothing, because there is no actual result possible to their mode of action. The means are not adjusted to the end, hence failure is the inevitable result. A great action is always preceded by a grand purpose. History and daily work and also daily life are full of examples to show us that the measure of human achievements has always been proportional to the amount of human achievement, daring and doing. Discard the idea that little things are unimportant and the great occasions only are worthy of your best thoughts and endeavors. It is the little things of life that make up its happiness or misery, its joys or sorrows. A kind look is a little thing, but it may fall like a sunbeam on a sad heart, and chase all its sadness away. A pleasant word is a small thing, but it may brighten the spirits and revive the hopes of some poor despondent soul about to give up in despair before the conflicts and trials of life. Life is short, but short as it is, we can do glorious work within its narrow limits. If the sculptor's chisel can make impressions on marble within a few hours which distant ages shall speak the triumphs of mind a thousand years hence; then may the true teacher, alive to duty and obligations of existence, do infinitely more. Working on human hearts and destinies, it is his prerogative to do imperishable work, to build within life's fleeting hours, monuments that shall last forever. If such grand possibilities lie within reach of our personal action in the world, how important that we live for something every hour of our existence. When we think of the many good or bad suggestions we may give others, and too, when we think of our influence over others, good or evil, we should be very careful, for the product of the artist who labors in the field of education will speak by word and by act, and will exercise an influence for good or for evil as long as time shall last. Good deeds will shine as brightly as the stars of heaven.

"Work thou for pleasure; paint, or sing, or carve. The thing thou lovest, though the body starve. Who works for glory misses oft the goal; who works for money, coins his very soul. Work for the work's sake, then, and it may be that these things shall be added unto thee.

"I took a piece of plastic clay, and idly fashioned it one day; And as my fingers pressed it, still it moved and yielded to my will. I came again when days were past; the bit of clay was hard at last. The form I gave it still it bore, and I could change that form no more.

I took a piece of living clay, and gently formed it day by day, And molded with my power and art, a young child's soft and tender heart.

I came again when years were gone. It was a man, I looked upon. He still that early impress bore; and I could change him—never more."

Here is one great rule of all success; a guide to earthly happiness, and heavenly joy, that we aim high and well, and "keep at it."

NEW BOOK

The "Beauty of Holiness and Maxims of the Holy Life"

BY

REV. GEORGE W. RIDOUT, D.D.

This book is specially written for the holiness people and is designed to set forth True Holiness against the fictitious, the false and the fanatical. The book sets forth Holiness under the following aspects:

1. The Beauty of Holiness.
2. The Beauty of Consecration.
3. The Beauty of Perfect Love.
4. The Beauty of Humility.
5. The Beauty of Perfection.
6. The Beauty of Christlikeness.
7. The Beauty of Divine Union.

The book is written in the easy, readable illustrative style of Dr. Ridout's writings and is full of the best of things on the above subject.

"Hallelu'ah Jack," the life-story of Rev. Jack Linn, the well-known evangelist, is still one of the best sellers. Just recently a young man was converted by reading the book. He was a cartoonist and is now drawing pictures for God. In fact, he is preaching now. It was by reading the book that all this took place. Order a book from this office. Price, 50 cents.

EVOLUTION.

Oh, this evolution business,
If I believed in it myself,
I'd at least be honest about it
And put my Bible on the shelf.
For I'm convinced the two won't mix
God tells me in his Word,
That he man in his image made,
Your theory is absurd.
I know that you your learning get
In "higher branches" as monkeys do,

A relationship construe.
But please remember your belief
Attacks God's word rough shod
And all your worldly wisdom
Is foolishness with God.
What poor little excuse you'll have
When you before him stand,
On that great day of Judgment,
I cannot understand.
For you must believe that day will come

As what I read implies,
That you have not at any time
Said that our Maker lies.
But if perchance you've been misled,
Into this treacherous route,
Why not play safe and just give God
The benefit of the doubt.
Search his Word with prayer and fear
And seek that change of heart,
That makes our spiritual vision clear
And leaves for doubt no part.

GLORIOUS REVIVAL.
AT OMEGA, GA.

One of the greatest revivals ever brought here closed in a supreme victory August 7. This revival was sponsored by the Evangelical League of Louisville, Ky., Cochran Brothers, John and Leonard, of the ministerial student group of Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., doing the preaching. This revival was on the charge of Rev. H. L. Pearson, of Norman Park, and for the other denominational members that would come in and work in the cause of bringing souls to God. Bro. C. C. Smoak, of Omega, also a student at one time of Asbury, worked faithfully day by day, through the fifteen days; all the co-operative workers communed in the sweetness of prayer, and rose with faith that was victory.

The Cochran Brothers held four successful tent meetings in this section of Georgia and could not fill all demands to work in other calls as they only worked between the closing and opening dates of college work. The object of these meetings is to spread the Bible doctrine of regeneration, and entire sanctification, and for all a blessed union of all denominations who feel the need of a clean heart, a Christian life and a larger induement for service.

God has blessed those two preachers and our life standards are elevated, our minds more alert, owing to their coming to us. They have also worked for Asbury, the Christian college, for the Evangelical Methodist League of Louisville, Ky., and for the great Pentecostal Herald. They left here for Indian Spring camp meeting to spend ten days at the feast of souls.

Mrs. Rosa Belle Hooks.

SOUTH CAROLINA MEETINGS.

Our first tent meeting was held at a country schoolhouse about twelve miles from town. This locality is populated with a class of people who are very little about church, in fact, told us that they did not intend to come to church, and most of them stuck to it for two weeks. The last week the attendance was very good. There were about ten who professed conversion. All who attended were given the light, but few walked in it; however, there were some fine people in that community.

Our next meeting was held in Lynchburg, S. C., with Bro. Elkins. He is a fine pastor to work with, always jolly and in a good humor. At first no one was very enthusiastic about the meeting, which was a great drawback to its spiritual progress. There are some of as fine people in and around Lynchburg as we ever met. They were very courteous and polite, inviting us into their homes constantly, but when it came to repenting of sin, and exercising faith in Jesus Christ as their personal Savior, they were slow. There were a few conversions and all said that they were strengthened.

The meeting which we have just closed is at my home. This, I think, is the best meeting we have conducted the past two years. I attribute this to the fact that we conducted a meeting here last year. There was some genuine repentance among the people. I hesitate to say the number who experienced conversion or reclamation. Our vision is to establish a camp meeting here next year. I think it will be far enough advanced to organize and elect officers.

Our next meeting is at Jordan, S. C. Pray that God may pour out his Spirit on us in that meeting.

C. O. Dorn.

L. H. Seamons.

CAMP MEETING REPORT.

Not only the best camp meeting in the history of the Alabama Wesleyan Methodist Conference, but one of the best it has ever been the privilege of the writer to attend, recently came to a close at Birmingham, Ala. To fully appreciate this camp meeting one would have to have been at the services and witnessed the gracious manifestations of God's presence beginning with the early morning prayer service and lasting through the day. A goodly number were saved and sanctified and the people of God edified.

Rev. Rolla D. Wise, of Wabash, Ind., was the leading evangelist, assisted by preachers of the conference. Bro. Wise preaches the rugged truth with a tender, melting spirit that grips the hearts of the people. His messages will be long remembered in the hearts of those who heard him.

Mrs. Golden Young, of Topeka, Kan., was the song leader. Mrs. Young is undoubtedly one of the outstanding singing evangelists of the Holiness Movement, as she sings under the anointing and the saints are carried away in an ecstasy of joy while sinners are brought under conviction.

Some three years ago the conference trustees purchased this beautiful estate with its flowers, shrubbery and trees and converted it into a camp ground; since then a tabernacle and dining hall have been erected and other improvements made. Interest has been steadily growing in the annual camp meeting which will prove a great factor in the spreading of holiness in this section. We are giving God all the glory and looking up for still greater things.

MODERNISM!

What It Is

What It Does

Whence It Came

Its Relation to Evolution

BY J. M. STANFIELD

With an Introduction by Leander S. Keyser, A.M., D.D.

The author of this book has done a splendid work. Although a number of good books on Modernism and Evolution have recently appeared, Mr. Stanfield's book has merits of its own and presents the subject in an original way. The book is written in a kindly spirit and opponents are treated fairly. It should be widely read, as it is a clear statement of what Modernism really is.

Dr. H. C. Morrison's
New Book.

The title of this new book from the pen of its gifted author is not only very suggestive, but runs true to the title to the end. If any one has rejected the glorious doctrine of the pre-millennial coming of our Lord, because he thought it a pessimistic teaching, if he will read Dr. Morrison's new book, unbiased, he will find that the teaching of the pre-millennial coming of Jesus is the most optimistic view of life and the world held by any class of people.

There are some very thrilling, thought-provoking statements made in the last two chapters, and contrary to many books this one reaches its climax in the closing chapters. It is well worth the price, $1.00.

Very truly,
W. L. Clark.

Christ's sermon on the mount.

31 It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement:

32 But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery.

33 ¶ Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths:

34 But I say unto you, Swear not at all: neither by heaven; for it is God's throne:

35 Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jê-rû'sâ-lêm; for it is the city of the great King.

36 Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black.

37 But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.

38 ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:

39 But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

40 And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloke also.

41 And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.

42 Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.

43 ¶ Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy.

44 But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you:

45 That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.

46 For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?

47 And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so?

48 Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

ST. MATTHEW, 6.

CHAPTER 6. 6

1 Sermon on the mount continued. 24 Serving God and mammon. 25 Exhortation to care little for worldly things. 33 Seeking the kingdom of God.

TAKE heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven.

2 Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

3 But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth:

4 That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly.

5 ¶ And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

6 But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

7 But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.

10 Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.

11 Give us this day our daily bread.

12 And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

13 And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. A-mên.

14 For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you:

15 But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

16 ¶ Moreover when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their

DIVINE EQUIPMENT.

By The Editor.

THOUGHTFUL, serious people in all the evangelical churches are awaking to the fact that the greatest need of all the religious denominations is a pentecostal baptism of the Holy Ghost.

* * * *

We do not hear any one praying that sinners may receive the baptism with the Holy Spirit; it seems to be generally understood that this baptism is not for sinners, but for the people of God. Paul said to the disciples at Ephesus, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?"

* * * *

To give up the doctrine of the baptism with the Holy Ghost, would be to give up all vital godliness. To simply teach the doctrine and oppose and deny the experience, is a stupid inconsistency; to ask the Holy Spirit to come into the heart and make his abode there while sin remains, would be sacrilegious. When the Comforter comes he will thoroughly cleanse his temple. We shall have to give up the idea of receiving the baptism with the Spirit, or accept the truth of entire sanctification.

* * * *

Men may oppose, sneer and ridicule as much as they please, but there are a few great truths taught in the Scriptures, in such perfect harmony with corresponding facts in human experience and sound philosophy, that sooner or later, they will come to be commonly accepted by the best thinkers and teachers of all Christendom; that is, that impurity remains in the heart of regenerated believers; that there is promised in the Scriptures, to all of God's children, a baptism with the Holy Spirit; that this baptism is to be sought as earnestly and as definitely as was pardon, and that it is received as instantly as is the forgiveness of one's sins, and that this baptism purifies the heart from all sin, empowers for service and fits for heaven.

* * * *

The dispensation of the Spirit has come; he is in the world and cannot submit to ecclesiasticism, or take second place. He must lead, direct and control the things of the kingdom of heaven. The Holy Spirit who has been shut up in creeds, or to say the most, in sermons and exhortations, must be invited into the hearts of the people. All the keys must be turned over to him, and you may be sure when this is done, he will drive out all sin, put purity into the heart, joy into the soul and a glad testimony into the mouth. Men's prejudices must bow and submit themselves to the divine leadership. It was said of Herod and his followers, "They which sought the young child's life are dead." So will it be said of those who oppose the Holy Ghost in his person, work and manifestations, whether it be in the conviction of sinners, the conversion of penitents, or the sanctification of believers. The man or denomination who goes to war against the Holy Ghost must perish.

OUR TWENTY-FIVE CENT PROPOSITION

The war is on against the Bible. The enemy is bold, shrewd, aggressive, and evasive. He claims to be devoutly religious and a superior interpreter of the Word of God while, in fact, he is tearing the Scripture to pieces and destroying the faith of the people. Shall we sit still or shall we be up and doing? As never before The Herald will seek to become an aggressive defender of the faith, and we are asking you to help us sow it broadcast over the land. This TWENTY-FIVE CENT offer will make it possible for you to help us to put The Herald into thousands of new homes. Free samples will be sent to you on request. Get busy and send in a good list of subscribers on this 25 cent proposition, from Nov. 1st to Feb. 1st. A dollar of your tithe money could not be used to better advantage than that of sending The Herald to four of your friends on this 25 cent proposition. Let us hear from you and count on you to help us to put The Herald into 10,000 new homes by November first.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. Morrison.

Those who have watched the world movements, will note that the leaders have been men who have been filled with the Holy Ghost and recognized his office work in dealing with the children of men. The fullness of the Spirit made Wesley and his co-laborers irresistible; to oppose them was only to advertise them and increase their opportunity for doing good. Nothing but the indwelling presence of the Holy Spirit can supply a minister of the gospel with that courage which is necessary to preach the word so that it will destroy sin and make of men new creatures in Christ Jesus. That will be a happy day when the representatives of Jesus Christ grasp the fact that all power in heaven and earth is given unto him and that, without him we can do nothing. Let us remember, too, that through the inspired apostle, he commands us "to follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Oh, for a ministry so baptized with power from on high, that their meat and drink will be to do the will of him who suffered without the gate that he might sanctify the people with his own blood. In the language of Charles Wesley we would say,

"Jesus, the Truth and Power Divine,
Send forth these messengers of thine,
Their hands confirm, their hearts inspire,
And touch their lips with hallowed fire."

ONE OF MY GREAT DESIRES

CHAPTER VI.

I have been writing for some weeks in these columns with reference to the enlargement of the Theological Seminary at Asbury College. I am very glad that some of our friends are becoming interested in this all-important subject. I can think of nothing more imperative than that those of us who believe in the doctrine of full salvation from sin should do any and everything in our power to send forth well equipped ministers of the gospel to preach these glorious truths to the hungry multitudes. The tent work of The Evangelical Methodist League has shown how ready the people are to hear, and how gladly they respond. I am sure my Brother, Dr. Wimberly, will not object to my printing the following letter recently received from him.

H. C. M.

My Dear Brother Morrison:

I was tremendously interested in your recent article in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD relative to the big desire of your heart. In the midst of all your great labors and aspirations to further the Kingdom of God in the world, there is nothing so vital at the present hour as this very thing you have on your heart—the establishing of a school where the Bible will be taught as God's revealed Word, without any new approach, or new emphasis; in other words, a Theological Seminary where young ministers may become rooted and grounded in the faith of God, through Christ, by the impartation of the Holy Ghost.

Such is the crying need of the hour. There are over one hundred and fifty Theological Seminaries in the United States, and a gentleman told me, who has travel and scholarship, and a Bible teacher of renown, that of the whole number there were less than a half dozen genuinely orthodox. I have no doubt this is true. This is an appalling situation, and it is going to mean more lawlessness, more lifeless churches, and that revivals will finally be eliminated. There is no police power in the world that can beat the flood-tides of anarchy and crime under Red Rule, when the nation's god is force and intellectualism. Nothing can subdue base human passions when God is forgotten; and I mean the God of our Revelation.

The theological schools that raise questions of doubt, and undermine the faith of young ministers touching the old-time orthodox faith, so that their message is no longer virile and surcharged with the ipsi dixit of God—is doing more to damn the nation and turn it over to brute force and lechery than all the Red mobs that can assemble. The nation that forgets God will be turned into Hell—and this not all—Hell will be turned in upon that nation.

Germany lost God—and he was not lost among the common people—but in her institutions of learning. We cannot over-estimate the perils of tomorrow if our great schools, where the thinkers of the land are being educated, continue to set at naught the realities of personal salvation, the certainty of Heaven, Hell, and Eternal Retribution. If these great foundational truths are lost to the nation—and they are now being lost in a far greater degree than we suspect—they will be lost first in the seminaries where our young preachers get their inspiration for life.

OF ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

In the Land of Hymnology and Religious History.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

ENGLAND has back of it nearly two thousand years of history. Some of its churches and cathedrals date back a thousand years and more, Westminster Abbey, for instance. Some of the greatest men of history were British born; we in America are indebted to them for some of our greatest literature and, in religion, we owe to the English poets and preachers some of our greatest hymns and songs.

Notable among English writers of sacred song was Rev. John Keble, who was born at Fairford, Gloucester, in 1792, and died at Bournemouth in 1866. His father was a clergyman. At the early age of fifteen he entered Corpus Christi College, Oxford. After a brilliant career he was made a Fellow of Oriel, and had as contemporaries Whately, Arnold, Pusey, Newman, and Coleridge. Like his father he became a clergyman, and on his father's death was appointed to the living of Hursley, near Winchester. He refused many offers of very good livings, including an archdeaconry, and remained a country clergyman until his death. He held the lectureship of poetry at Oxford from 1831 to 1841, but this did not in any way interfere with his work at Hursley.

In 1833 he preached a sermon at Oxford on "National Apostasy," which led to the suppression of ten Irish bishoprics and which had not a little to do with Newman joining the Church of Rome. Newman looked upon Keble as the Father of the Oxford Movement, but most would say that Newman himself was the chief factor. We cannot but deplore these Ritualistic tendencies of so beautiful a character, for if anyone ever loved Jesus Christ it was John Keble. As a preacher he was not eloquent, but Scriptural and impressive. He had a wonderful magnetic power of attracting both old and young. It is characteristic of the genial type of his piety and his simple spirit that for thirty years he was scrupulous in his attendance upon the Sabbath school twice a day. Although he took such a deep interest in children, he was himself childless. Shortly after his death his friends and admirers raised a large sum of money and erected to his memory the beautiful structure of Keble College at Oxford.

John Keble's greatest book was "The Christian Year" published in 1827.

The first edition was five hundred copies. Between 1827 and 1873 when the copyright expired, a hundred and forty editions appeared and 305,500 copies were sold. During the following five years the original publishers alone sold 70,000 copies. The volume so well known and so widely used is imbued with a spirit of rare spiritual fervor, and whenever you take it up you will find on its perusal some new thought for reflection. It contains thoughts in verse for the Sundays and Holydays throughout the year, to which are added the Collects from the book of Common Prayer.

Many of the originals of the lyrics were written on the backs and edges of letters in old account books and copybooks.

There are those who still question the felicity of the diction and the carelessness of the forms of poetry, but we readily accept Professor Shairp's judgment: "Some of the poems are faultless after their kind, flowing from the first verse to the last, lucid in thought, vivid in diction, and harmonious in their pensive melody."

In the Methodist Hymn Book there are four hymns taken from the volume:

"There is a book who runs may read."

"When God of old came down from heaven."

"O timely happy, timely wise."

"Sun of my soul, Thou Savior dear."

In each, only some of the most suitable verses of the lyric, compose the hymn. As in the case of so many hymns, the part is greater than the whole. The verses universally selected are not improved by the addition of others. The greatest hymn that Keble ever wrote was on "Evening," and contains fourteen verses. The earlier verses are not suitable for a hymn-book, but the beauty of the later lines is only fully realized when they are remembered.

"Tis gone, that bright and orb'd blaze,
Fast fading from our wistful gaze;
Yon mantling cloud has hid from sight
The last faint pulse of quivering light.
In darkness and in weariness
The traveller on his way must press,
No gleam to watch on tree or tower,
Whiling away the lonesome hour!
Sun of My soul, Thou Saviour dear,
It is not night if Thou be near:
O may no earth-born cloud arise
To hide Thee from Thy servant's eyes."

In the Hymn Book of British Methodism there are many hymns which have come down through the years which are omitted in our American hymn books. Let me give a few lines from Wesley:

"Captain of Israel's host, and Guide
Of all who seek the land above,
Beneath Thy shadow we abide
The cloud of Thy protecting love;
Our strength, Thy grace; our rule. Thy word;
Our end, the glory of the Lord."

"My soul, through my Redeemer's care,
Saved from the second death I feel
My eyes from tears of dark despair,
My feet from falling into hell."

"Wherefore to Him my feet shall run,
My eyes on His perfections gaze,
My soul shall live for God alone
And all within me shout His praise."

Here is a good old-timer from across the seas. It can be sung to the tune of "Robin Adair."

"What though the tempest rage,
Heaven is my home;
Short is my pilgrimage;
Heaven is my home;
And time's wild, wintry blast
Soon will be overpassed;
I shall reach home at last,
Heaven is my home."

Among Charles Wesley's hymns I think the following both beautiful and expressive:

"All things are possible to him that can in Jesus' name believe;
Lord, I no more Thy name blaspheme, Thy truth I lovingly receive.
I can, I do believe in Thee; all things are possible to me."

"'Twas most impossible of all that here sin's reign in me should cease;
Yet shall it be, I know it shall; Jesus, I trust
Thy faithfulness!
If nothing is too hard for Thee, all things are possible to me."

"All things are possible to God; to Christ the power of God in me;
Now shed Thy mighty Self abroad, let me no longer live, but Thee;
Give me this hour in Thee to prove the sweet omnipotence of love."

Sing or read these lines in the light of those wonderful words of Dr. Handley Moule, late Bishop of Durham.

"It is possible, for those who will indeed draw on their Lord's power for deliverance and victory, to live a life—how shall I describe it?—a life in which God's facts and promises are taken as they stand and found to be true."

"It is possible to cast every care on him, daily, and to be at peace amid the pressure."

"It is possible to have the affections and imaginations purified through faith, in a profound and practical sense."

"It is possible to see the will of God in everything, and to find it no longer a sigh, but a song."

"It is possible, in the world of inner act and motion, to put away, to get put away, all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and evil speaking, daily and hourly."

"It is possible, by unreserved resort to divine power, to become strongest, through and through, at our weakest point; to find the thing which yesterday upset all our obligations to patience or to purity or to humility an occasion today (through him who loveth us and worketh in us) for a joyful consent to his will, and a delightful sense of his presence and sin-annulling power."

"These things are divinely possible. And because they are his work, the genuine experience of them will lay us, must lay us, only lower at his feet, and leave us only athirst for more."

A Fine Recruit in the Evangelistic Field.

My good friend, Rev. John Knapp, notifies me that he is entering the evangelistic field. I congratulate our people everywhere upon his decision to enter this field so white to the harvest. John Knapp is a man of unusual culture and devotion. He is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati. He is also a graduate of Lane Theological Seminary of Cincinnati. He has been in school work for some years and is an accomplished teacher. I do not know of a young man who can combine more fine qualities than John Knapp. He has been for a number of years pastor of a Methodist Church in Cincinnati and will bring into the field of evangelism a fine combination of knowledge, zeal and experience. He has promise of great usefulness. May God bless him most graciously.

H. C. MORRISON.

So Walk in Him.

"Looking unto Jesus."—Heb. 12:2.

"As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk in him." This, as you will observe implies ceaseless progression—"walk." Settle it in your mind, there is no standing still in religion. The Savior says, "He that gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad; he that is not with me, is against me." Much that passes for religion is nothing more than an empty profession. Though ye may be often much benefited in looking at the example of devoted Christians, for Christ says of such, "Ye are the light of the world," yet it is not safe to have your mind too much absorbed, even in the contemplation of this. At best they shine but in borrowed rays; and it is possible to have your vision so filled with these lesser lights, as to draw the attention from those believing views of Christ which are ever transforming. And then there is danger here. The best human beings are, at least, liable to err; and if your eye is on them, instead of being fixed on the Sun of righteousness, most disastrous consequences might ensue.

Thanksgiving.

Just for today may I not sing

For gratitude alone,

Nor interrupt my praise to bring

Petitions to the Throne?

I would be frugal of request

Till I have poured for Him

A full thanksgiving cup, down-pressed

And running o'er the brim.

—May Riley Smith.

MODERN APOSTLES OF FAITH.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

SOME CELEBRITIES IN THE FAITH.

SPACE forbids giving separate chapters to the great men we shall examine in this brief notice, however much they may deserve such recognition; but in making a resume of religious characters who have wrought in a large way for the truths of the gospel, we cannot overlook men whose ministry has touched the entire English-speaking world—and beyond.

There is not a student, preacher or teacher, interested in the deeper things of Christian living, who has not been greatly blessed and strengthened by a series of books which first began to appear in 1901. The author was unknown, except in Y. M. C. A. circles: the first book was entitled: "Quiet Talks on Power." The peculiar style and scriptural insight to the sources of divine power won for this book a wide reading. Nothing just like it had ever appeared; it flowed in quiet, unassuming currents, but forged into the deepest channels of divine things, so that the name—S. D. Gordon—became known in every household where men and women sought help and inspiration.

Samuel Dickey Gordon was born in Philadelphia, Aug. 12, 1859, and was educated in the public schools of that city. If he was college trained, there is no mention of it in the sources of information available. His first religious work was assistant secretary of the Philadelphia Y. M. C. A., where he began in 1884; after serving there for some time, he was called to the position of state secretary of the Ohio Y. M. C. A. He occupied this wider field for about ten years. In 1895 he began his career as public speaker; he traveled for four years in the Orient addressing student assemblies and religious gatherings. His peculiar style of public address gave him a distinctive field in Bible Conferences and Missionary Conventions. His messages had nothing to do with the big material problems of such assemblies, but strictly with the questions of personal religious experiences.

Dr. Gordon has published a series of the "Quiet Talks" viz., Power, Prayer, Service, Jesus' Personal Problems, World Winners, Home Ideals, About the Tempter, Our Lord's Return, Following Christ, About the Crowned Christ, The Deeper Meaning of the War, Life After Death, Simple Essentials, The Healing Christ, and The Crisis and After. Quiet Talks on all these themes will give the reader some idea of the wide scope of this unique author.

Dr. Gordon carries the idea of quietness in all his ministry; when he wishes to emphasize any sentence or reach a climax, it is by dropping his voice: "softly, softly" he declares. He is in much demand at various assemblies and watering places, where for weeks he will address the throngs, as he did recently in Atlantic City. His voice and pen ring true to our orthodox faith, and he is a staunch believer in the "Blessed Hope" and actually expects the return of Jesus before he dies.

We wish now to mention the great English divine, Dr. J. W. Jowett who, for many years occupied the pulpit of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, of New York City. He is now in England, whither he was urged to return by Lloyd George, who recognized him as such power and influence, that the country needed his messages for the readjustment following the World War. We once heard Bishop Hendrix remark, when speaking of Dr. Jowett's books, that he was the greatest Bible expositor in the world; that his messages were epoch making.

Dr. Jowett is a finished scholar; he clothes his messages with such classic English, that they are veritable gems on the printed page. His style has a charm scarcely found in religious literature—certainly never excelled. He serves as a pastor, but he is not a pastor; he leaves that for others to do. He is consecrated only to his public ministry; his throne is his pulpit, and his power-room his study—after that, the printed message for the world. He had published scores of books, and all of them have to do with Bible expositions and commentaries—or instruction for ministers. It is said of him, that he has been known to rewrite his sermons, or parts of them, as many as eleven times; polishing every sentence, eliminating every word for a better one, so that he gives out nothing but the "beaten oil of the sanctuary." We can understand that every line from the pen of Dr. J. W. Jowett is a classic; but it is not all made up of saying beautiful words and sentences; he gets to the very heart of Bible truth, and breaks the bread of life in every paragraph, until the reader is thrilled and blessed. Dr. Jowett is an apostle of Bible faith and revelation. There are many great preachers whose ministry reaches the multitude; but Dr. Jowett sends his spoken messages to the wide world; it has a charm of something human, artistic, romantic, but at the same time saturated with the divine element. So far as we have read him, there was not one note or inference other than scriptural and orthodox. While he was in New York, he preached every Sunday to the preachers of all creeds in and around the city. Fifth Avenue was a great religious forum. So long as men hunger for deeper spiritual truths, and the soul hungers for great spiritual leadership in the mysteries of godliness, the contributions of Dr. J. W. Jowett will be a source of inspiration. He is a world preacher, a student and writer of one theme—the revelation of Christ.

We call attention next to a man not generally known in religious circles, except those who are interested in Prophecy and the Blessed Hope. But all who are seeking to keep in touch with the great pulse of the world, as interpreted by Prophecy, there is no name standing higher than that of Dr. Arno C. Gabeline, of New York City. Dr. Gabeline was born in Germany, August 27, 1861, and came to America when a lad, received his education for gymnasium in the schools of this country. He came to America 1879. When a young man, at the age of twenty-four, he entered the ministry of the Methodist Church, and served in Baltimore, Hoboken, and around the city of New York for a long time. He took charge of "Hope Israel Mission" in connection with the City Mission of New York.

About forty years ago, he severed his connection with the Methodist Church and is now, we believe, a communicant of the Presbyterians. But these are all secondary matters; we mention them only as a prelude to the man's ministry. About thirty-five years ago he established a little magazine called "Our Hope" which has grown to be a world periodical. The beginning was very humble; but today "Our Hope" goes to the nations of the earth. Through this medium of expression, Dr. A. C. Gabeline has become an outstanding figure in religious thinking and scholarship. As a Bible teacher of Prophecy, we believe there is no greater among men; his education has been largely self-made; but his fund of information touching religious history through the centuries, is nothing short of marvelous. Through the columns of "Our Hope," Dr. Gabeline gives to the world each month, the best analysis of world problems that can be found in any periodical published. There is a kind of finality about all he says, both in books and editorials, that carries conviction of the truth of all he says. The movements of the religious machinery, the sayings and doings of men in religious authority, do not escape his eagle eye; as carefully as the engineer watches the rails in front of his engine, Dr. Gabeline watches the human make-believes of churchmen. We regard Dr. A. C. Gabeline as the greatest prophetic teacher of modern times. He is as orthodox as John Wesley, or the Apostle Paul; his books on Daniel and Revelation are the best we have ever read. He has published at least a score of books, many of them have been translated into other languages. Dr. Gabeline is a voice crying in the wilderness—"Prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight." We advise all who are interested in our Lord's Return to read the messages and books of Dr. Gabeline.

Our next sketch is G. Campbell Morgan, who was born at Tilbury, Gloucester, England, Dec. 12, 1863, but is now a resident of America. As a lad in his early teens he was converted and called to the ministry, and sought to enter the Methodist Church Conference; but his limited education barred him entrance into the itinerancy of the Wesleyan ministry. He succeeded, however, in securing admission into the Congregational Church, 1889, and served some humble charges; but in a short time rose to some of the commanding pulpits of England in that denomination, such as Birmingham and Cambridge. He was finally called and served several of their largest churches in London, where his extraordinary powers of Bible exposition soon attracted a nation-wide attention.

His first appearance in America was when he came to the Northfield Bible Conference, at the solicitation of Mr. Moody. From that time until the present hour his reputation has grown both in England and in America as a teacher and preacher of Bible truth. Without a doubt G. Campbell Morgan is one of the keenest intellects, and one of the most astute expounders of the Scriptures in this generation. His exegetical powers are without parallel among the great preachers of this age; his voice is as clear as a violin tone, and his use of language as he delivers his messages cannot be excelled.

The scores of religious books and commentaries from the pen of Dr. Morgan have been more widely read, than perhaps any other man within the past one hundred years, or any other century, for that matter. His books are all great in mastery of language, mastery of thought, and mastery of Bible interpretation. We are also glad to record that Dr. G. Campbell Morgan is a fundamentalist touching the faith of the Bible, and is an ardent believer in our Lord's Premillennial Coming. We have often wondered how that Methodist examining committee felt, after they learned that the lad who came before them was to be some day, and has become, the outstanding preacher of the times. Through their stupidity, this great man was lost to Methodism. There are legion of examining boards, college and seminary professors who, by measuring everything by their own standards of efficiency, never know what is before them in a classroom; however, G. Campbell Morgan belongs to the whole world.

Another name deserves an honored place among the Modern Apostles of Faith, and that man is Dr. R. A. Torrey, the man whom D. L. Moody selected to be his successor in carrying on his great work, to a large measure. Dr. Torrey is one of the great Bible teachers of the world, and for four decades he has been recognized throughout the world as one of the strongest defenders of God's truth. He has evangelized in every nation of the earth, and with remarkable success. He has given more religious books to the world than any other Bible scholar of the farmer's widow was trying to carry on. She knew little of farming. She was having trouble with her chickens, and decided to write to the Department of Agriculture in Washington. She wrote, "There is something the matter with my chickens. Every morning when I go out, I find two or three lying on their backs cold and stiff with their toes curled up. Please tell me what is the matter." She received a reply which said, "Dear Madam, your chickens are dead."

Singing at a Doodlebug's Hole.

Rev. R. H. Bennett.

The liquor traffic is dead—dead legally and dead largely actually. Doctor Irving Fisher, of Yale, social economist and statistician, in his book just from the press, "Prohibition At Its Worst," states that "the flow of alcohol down human throats in the United States is at present certainly less than 16 percent and probably less than 10 percent, and possibly less than 5 percent of pre-prohibition consumption." He says that on the economic side prohibition has been worth six billion dollars per year to the United States, "without counting any saving in the cost of jails, almshouses, asylums, etc., or any economic saving in the death rate."

What an overwhelming array of results! Drinking reduced between 84 and 95 percent, and six billion dollars gained. What a slogan! Yes, the liquor traffic is in the hands of the undertaker. But naturally a business that brought in to its masters two and a half billion dollars a year finds votaries that would attempt its resurrection.

Did you ever squat by the side of a doodlebug's hole in your childhood days and sing for him to come out? If you did not, you failed to live up to all your privileges as a small boy in those "days of real sport." It is a similar occupation which today engages the defenders of the moribund liquor traffic. And it is an occupation both puerile and futile. That doodlebug is dead. He is not coming out.

The friends of liquor do not seem to like the 18th Amendment. We gather that from their remarks. We conclude also from certain hints they let fall here and there that they are not entirely pleased with the Volstead Act. Naturally so.

"What wretch e'er felt the halter draw,

With good opinions of the law?"

And so they are blowing their loudest call to the doodlebug since 1918, when the Amendment was passed. Behind their song are vast sums of money, widespread organization and persistent planning. Their method seems to be that if a falsehood is told loud enough and often enough that men will finally believe it. Their plans include the most brazen and persistent statements that Prohibition is violation of personal liberty, that it breeds crime, cannot be enforced and shall not be enforced. Another note in their song is by reckless slander or ridicule upon our temperance leaders to attempt to undermine their influence and destroy the confidence of the public in them. Another factor in their program is to print in the big, wet dailies of the few wet centers ceaseless, clamorous, ever-repeated, well-nigh daily falsehoods, juggled statistics, untrue slants in facts, as to the failure of prohibition and the increasing opposition to prohibition, hoping to produce the impression that great changes or repeal of our temperance laws are at hand and that it is folly to oppose such changes any longer. Much of this stuff is no doubt written by intellectual prostitutes who sell their brains to any one with money and write up or down any side of any question. They would deceive if possible even the elect. And some of our dry papers being deceived pass on this false propaganda to their readers. The movies, the stage and too often private conversation pass on to thousands of our citizens these slanders and ridicule.

Listen to some notes in the song at the doodlebug hole. "Prohibition was sneaked over on us while we were in Europe fighting the war." "While we were in Europe fighting the war"—we, the brewers and distillers. How many brewers and distillers were in the trenches? Were they not saving their skins at home? Analyze the charge and not a vestige of truth is found in it. Who knows better than the liquor men that prohibition has been coming on this country for seventy-five years, ever since Maine adopted it? Prohibition had already been adopted by 33 out of 48 states before the 18th Amendment was passed. Before National Prohibition came, 75 percent of all cities, towns and villages. 85 percent of all counties, 68 percent of the population, 95 percent of the land area of the United States were under prohibition. And 66 out of 96 United States Senators and 70 percent of the members of the House of Representatives were from dry states and districts.

The majority for the adoption of the 18th Amendment was unparalleled in the history of the republic. The amendment had to have two-third majority. Of 531 members of Congress 33 Senators could have defeated it. The wets could not muster them. All of the 48 states in the Union except two ratified it. No other of all the Amendments to our Constitution was ever so widely and thoroughly discussed or adopted by such an overwhelming majority. Does this look like it "was sneaked over?" "Nor was it 'rushed through while our boys were in Europe fighting the war.'" For in the Congressional election of 1916 before the United States entered the War, the prohibition question was made a distinct, clear-cut issue in the campaign, and the Anti-Saloon League announced that the new Congress to assemble in March, 1917, would contain more than a two-thirds majority of both Houses in favor of the prohibition amendment. One of the first acts of this Congress was to insert in the Selective Draft Act for forming our army for the World War the unprecedented provision that there should be absolutely no sale anywhere of intoxicants to the soldiers of the United States Army. This was extended a few months later to the sailors of the Navy. And these acts were passed before any soldiers had gone to Europe. Moreover, in the summer and fall of 1917, before 150,000 soldiers all told had sailed for France, Congress by more than a two-thirds vote in both Houses passed the resolution submitting the prohibition amendment to the legislatures of the states, and the amendment was ratified before hardly any men had gone abroad. In fact, we never had in Europe during the War more than one-tenth of our voters.

So the amazing statement that Prohibition "was sneaked over on us while we were in Europe fighting the war" withers to a hollow puff ball and is blown away with a breath of truth and fact. Indeed, this is too big a country for anything to be sneaked over. And whatever may be said about the friends of liquor, no one has ever yet accused them of being caught napping. Prohibition was passed because the overwhelming majority of the citizens of the United States willed that it should be. And it will remain for the same reason.

Here's another vain note to a dead doodlebug. "The Prohibition Amendment was unjustly passed because it should have been submitted to a referendum of the people." Answer: Shamelessly false and consciously so, for the author of the statement knows that none of the seventeen other amendments to the Constitution were so submitted, and that our system of government makes no provision for such referendum.

Here's another: "Cut off from alcohol, our people have turned to dope." Answer: Manufactured out of the whole cloth, and without support in fact, the highest authorities in the nation being witness, viz., the Surgeon General of the United States, the United States Health Service and the Chief of the Narcotic Division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. There are a number of other notes in the song of the friends of liquor at the dead doodlebug's hole, but they must await another issue. My space is full. Only one more will be mentioned this time. And it is indeed a Saxophonic wail in the insectivorous chorus of diphthongs to the dead worm in the ground.

"Prohibition causes crime." Now there is an argument adapted to the thinking box of a doodlebug, the hookworm and the San Jose scale. For if it be true that Prohibition causes crime, then the Holy Bible is the cause of all the sin in the world, and the way to get rid of sin is to destroy every copy of the Bible—the way to stop murder is to repeal all laws against murder, the way to protect your property from thieves is to cancel all laws against theft. A man who tells me that Prohibition breeds crime reminds me of Minnie. He is in her class. Minnie was a half wit in a school for deficient children. The teachers thought they saw some gleams of intelligence in her but she failed on the test, and the other children said, "Minnie, she went to qualify to be an idiot, but she couldn't pass the examination."

And the above are samples of the stuff ceaselessly peddled about on trains, in hotels, on the golf links, at the clubs, in the newspapers, on the stage by the wet bore. He has no new ideas. He cannot talk on any other subject. His mind is a single track, laid out in a circle without switches, sidings or bumpers. The wear and tear on the ears of the great majority is trying. The only think he does not tell us is why he talks so much and does so little.

The Hell Hounds of Strong Temptation.

REV. H. W. HODGE.

When a young lad, on my father's farm in Lee County, Alabama, I remember how the boys—the colored boys—would go 'possum hunting with me in the fall, an adventure which was always undertaken only at night. We had two fierce dogs that always went with us. After searching for the opossum for a while, we would suddenly hear the dogs yelp, yelp—then we would run to the spot and find the little animal high up in a persimmon tree. He would have his tail wrapped around a limb and his face would wear a sardonic grin of defiance. But note the tactics of the hounds: springing for a horizontal limb, they fastened their teeth in the wood, and swung back and forth, their eyes glaring and their mouths slavering, just under their quarry. All the while they uttered a most lugubrious yowl that sounded the death-knell of the opossum.

This experience has many times reminded me of the hell hounds of Satan that get on our track. At times they have been on my track in ways that are too horrible to dwell upon. They will get on your track, too. Man! Man! Fight, night and day against the seductive allurements of expediency and ease. Your many activities will bury your spirituality in a grave too deep for resurrection. You must never quit your armor or loosen the cords of your spiritual corselet. You must never hesitate. On one particular occasion God permitted me to have a battle all alone, in which Satan's diabolically unseen forces were fighting to take my guerdon soul-saving gospel is the chief need of every generation. A recognition of this need and an effort on the part of John Wesley to supply it for his generation and his country brought Methodism into being. Bishop Wilson once said in an address at the close of the General Conference that there is need that we take up with renewed vigor the work of preaching the gospel of salvation to men, for it must be admitted that there is a whole lot of preaching among us that has not in it the power of convicting men of sin and bringing them to Christ. We Methodists have not fully obeyed the exhortation of the apostle: "Let no man take thy crown." Other denominations that once looked with contempt upon our revival methods have taken them up, and are prosecuting them more vigorously than we ourselves do. At the same time many of our strongest men, who ought to be leading the Church in a vigorous campaign of evangelism, steer entirely clear of this work, some being indifferent to it, and others treating it with contempt, as other denominations used to do before they learned a better way from us. There are some, sorry to relate, who began their ministry as soul-savers who have lost the power to preach the gospel so as to save men. The trouble is that the preacher has lost his gospel. Let us look a little while at this tragedy of a lost gospel, and it may be that we shall be able to find it to the joy of our own souls and the salvation of others.

A LOST GOSPEL.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

The writer suggests that it may not be a lost gospel so much as a lost man, which is a wise putting of it, as it would be casting a reproach upon the gospel to say it had suffered in its efficacy as the centuries have rolled by. The old gospel is still, and will ever be, the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth. Where then, lies the trouble? Why is it that a few words from some preachers strike terrific conviction to the hearts of the unsaved, while an hour-and-a-half discourse from others, fails to produce any effect whatever? We believe it is because the messenger is not filled with his message and cannot declare it from a burning, personal experience.

There was nothing in Paul's physical make-up, nor were his messages with enticing words of man's wisdom, but his power came from the fact that, "he knew whom he had believed" and "What we have felt and seen,

With confidence we tell,

And publish to the sons of men,

The signs infallible."

There is nothing so advertises a thing, as to know from personal experience, the merits of your remedy.

The keynote was struck by the inspired writer in Acts 1:8: "Ye shall receive power; after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." Look what happened in the afternoon of the day of Pentecost—Peter preached one sermon under the divine afflatus of the Holy Spirit, and as the fire burned and blazed in his own heart, the sparks flew through the crowd until three thousand souls were lit with the holy flame. Any candid person will have to admit that the power was not in the personality of Peter, for a short while before he had scinged before the accusation of a simple maid, and had yielded to the pressure of circumstances so far as to deny, with an oath, his Lord.

To our mind, one of the most important commands, one that means the most to the spread of Christ's kingdom among men, was when the Savior, in his parting message told the disciples to go back to Jerusalem and tarry until endued with power from on high.

This command was imperative, for the Master was going away and the machinery of his kingdom could not run unless linked to the power-house on high. "Without me, ye can do nothing," is as true today as when uttered, but Satan has deceived men into believing their education, culture and social prestige will carry them through, and it may from a worldly standpoint, but the preacher of the gospel, the ambassador of Christ, is not sowing the seeds of time but seeds, the fruit of which, is to be garnered in the storehouse on high. Souls are to be his hire.

We would do well to return to the "old paths," seek for the power that made our forefathers flames of fire. Is it possible that we have drifted so far from the path which Wesley, Fletcher, Carvosso, and others, whose lives burned through the hearts of men, that we do not feel the illuminating influence of those spiritual lights?

It would not be amiss for our ministers to get upon their knees, with their Bible before them opened at 2 Tim. 4:2, and read the charge Paul gave his son in the gospel. The doctrines as set forth by Wesley, Clarke and Watson are all right. The old gospel is still the power unto salvation, so the tarrying, preparatory to preaching the word, seems to be the next thing in order for those who are still plodding through the desert sands of the wilderness.

As one has said, "Let the Methodist preachers of America preach the gospel as it is believed among us, and Methodism will do for America in our day what it did for England in Wesley's day. If the leaders among us will lift up the ensign, the people will rally around it, the God of our fathers will come to our help. He will pour out such blessings upon us that our hearts will not be able to contain them. Then shall sinners come flocking into the churches 'like doves to the cotes in the wilderness.'"

The Kentucky Annual Conference.

This year the Kentucky Annual Conference met at London, Ky., Sept. 7-11. At the solicitation of the pastor, Rev. Eversole, I went up and preached several sermons beginning on the Sabbath preceding the meeting of the conference. Bro. Eversole is very much beloved by his people. He is a mountain man, born and raised in the highlands of Kentucky. He is a student, a man of remarkable native ability, a strong preacher with many attractive and charming social qualities.

London is a beautiful little city with many elegant homes. Many cultured people live in and about London. I was surprised and delighted to see its remarkable growth and improvement every way. A more open hearted, hospitable people cannot be found in the state than you will find in London. Some friends took me an automobile ride out as far as Rockcastle River and I was pleased to see the new homes and good farms along the highway. Thousands of tourists are now passing through this wonderfully attractive country. The farmers are prosperous; thousands of gallons of Jersey milk are shipped from London to Cincinnati. There is a fine train service and also an excellent bus service to Lexington, Corbin and surrounding towns.

Bishop Dickey presided over the conference. No bishop could be more courteous and brotherly as a presiding officer. There was a fine spirit of fellowship and harmony among the brethren. It was my privilege to preach each morning from eight to nine o'clock. We had fine and responsive congregations. From what I could learn there was a very general report of progress in the matter of revivals, conversions, sanctifications and collections. A considerable number of additions were made to the Church membership during the year.

The Sue Bennett Memorial School is located in London. Professor East is president of the school and we heard expressions of appreciation of his work on all sides. We were delighted to note the wonderful growth of this institution. It has been fostered by the Woman's Missionary Society, being established in 1896. It has a campus of 25 acres and a dairy farm of 35 acres. It has orchards, a garden and a poultry yard. The estimated value of the property is $350,000. The school has six departments: Junior College, High School, Accredited Normal School, Model School, Accredited Commercial School and Department of Music. Last year they enrolled five hundred and fifty-eight students. A large number of teachers in the rural schools of the mountains received their education at Sue Bennet Memorial. Special emphasis is placed on the religious training of the students. The plant consists of seven brick and seven frame buildings. We doubt if the Woman's Department of the Board of Missions has done a finer bit of work in all of its history than the planting of this great school at this little Athens in the mountains of Kentucky.

I believe that the preachers left the seat of the conference with their hearts set for a gracious year of soul winning. May the Lord bless them with grace and power to make this one of the greatest revival years in the history of Kentucky Methodism.

Conference Notes.

Bishop Darlington visited the conference, and delivered a stirring address in the interest of our Sunday school work, and gave us some very interesting reports of his work in Europe.

* * * *

Bishop Dickey's address at the opening of the conference was strong, clear and to the point, dwelling on the sinfulness of mankind, the great need of a Savior and the sufficiency of our Lord Jesus. It was listened to with profound interest. There was material in the address for a great revival sermon.

* * * *

Rev. Willard Cram, D.D., a beloved member of the Kentucky Conference, now our Missionary Secretary, was at the conference renewing old acquaintances and mingling with the brethren in good fellowship. He has a splendid record as a missionary, a Centenary worker, and is now rendering excellent service as our chief Missionary Secretary.

This writer was entertained in the home of Mr. J. C. McKee and wife, one of the most delightful in London, for that matter, in Kentucky. Mr. McKee has for many years been a sawmill and lumber man and has gathered through the years one of the finest private libraries in the State. He has ransacked England, Canada, and the old book stores of the United States for rare volumes. He has many books several hundred years old. Mr. Cannon, of Cynthiana, Mr. Smith, of Shelbyville, prominent laymen of the conference, Rev. W. E. Arnold, Dr. Fisher, Bro. Strother and myself were all delightfully entertained in the McKee home.

I am leaving this afternoon to preach a series of sermons at the Central Illinois Conference which convenes in Kewanee, Ill. Then a few days at Asbury College, then a sermon at the Louisville Conference, then a series of sermons to a Methodist Conference which meets in San Jose, Calif., then back to Arizona to preach at the conference which meets there, then back to California for a series of revival meetings. Please let me have an interest in your prayers.

MODERN APOSTLES OF FAITH.

last one hundred years. Dr. Torrey stands foursquare for Bible orthodoxy, and backs up his faith with a scholarly mind that the critics cannot gainsay.

He was reared as an Episcopalian, and while a student at Yale, was a social leader until he was graciously converted and called to the ministry. For many years he was pastor and president of the Moody Bible School of Chicago; then he became the president of the Bible Institute of Los Angeles, Cal. His name will hold an honored place among the world's spiritual leaders: as author, evangelist, Bible teacher, he is in the front rank.

There are many other names of men—great and near-great, who might be listed in our series of Modern Apostles; but we have selected only those who have a stamp peculiar, and powers which are different, that have placed them in a classification that cannot be doubted.

HEAVEN.

REV. HARVEY B. HYSSELL.

Text, John 14:2. "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

THESE words of comfort and consolation were spoken by Jesus to his disciples. Jesus knew their hearts would be troubled when he told them that he must go away. He said to them, "Let not your hearts be troubled." There are troubled hearts everywhere. There are those who have beautiful homes, fine automobiles and much of this world's goods but still they have troubled hearts. It is not the things of this world that can take away trouble from an aching heart. Jesus said, "Come unto me, and I will give you rest." The words of Jesus will encourage and comfort us when all other things have failed.

The text is the most encouraging and comforting words of the Bible. They were spoken to create a living hope in the hearts of his followers. They reveal to us a wonderful fact, the fact of Heaven. Some people think of heaven as being a state or a condition. The Bible very plainly reveals that heaven is a place. It is the dwelling place of God. (1 Kings 8:30). "Hear thou in heaven thy dwelling place." Jesus called it "His Father's house." It is a place of "many mansions." No doubt many of these "many mansions" were already occupied even before Jesus came to this world. Enoch and his family lived in one of them. Abraham and his family occupied several of them. The time would fail me to tell of many others who "Confessed they were pilgrims and strangers who sought a City, whose builder and maker was God." Jesus is telling his disciples that he is going to prepare a place for them. Evidently, he did not mean that he was going to make a new city. Heaven is the "Eternal City." He was going to "His Father's house" and prepare a place for them in it.

Heaven is a place where beauty is perfect. It is a land where the roses never fade. John gives us a description of its beauty in Rev. 21:18, 23: "And the building of the wall of it was of jasper: and the City was pure gold, like unto clear glass. And the foundations of the wall of the city were garnished with all manner of precious stones. And the twelve gates were twelve pearls: and the street of the City was pure gold as it were transparent glass. And I saw no temple therein: for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof."

Another thing of beauty about heaven is that it is untouched by the effects of sin. "There shall be no more curse." This world has been groaning under a curse ever since the fall of Adam. It has been noticed by Scientific men that every sound was in a minor key; the bleat of cattle, the moan of the wind, the rippling of the stream, that in spite of all that has been done for the world since the fall, it still shows the awful effects of sin. But the Prophet Isaiah says, "The ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and ever-lasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." (Isa. 35:10) "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain." Rev. 21:4.

In the next place, Heaven is the eternal home of the saints. "They shall reign forever and ever." Rev. 22:5. It is the land where we never grow old. Life in Heaven will be "Eternal life," "Immortal life." In this Eternal home the saints will share the society of the pious of all ages. They "shall come from the east and the west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of Heaven." Think how the disciples were thrilled on the Mount of Transfiguration when they saw Elijah and Moses in their glorified state with Christ. They wanted to build three tabernacles and stay there. What will be the emotions of the soul when it is ushered into his glorious presence to see the Lord "High and lifted up," and the redeemed of all ages waving their palms of victory and singing,

"All hail the power of Jesus' name,
Let angels prostrate fall.
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all."

In the next place, Heaven is a place where we shall meet all of our saved friends and loved ones that have gone on before. "Then shall I know," said the Apostle, "even as also I am known." 1 Cor. 13:12. It is not reasonable to think that we would know less in Heaven than we know here. Think how the heart of Jacob must have rejoiced when he once more met his beloved Joseph, whom he thought was dead. After he embraced him, "Israel said unto Joseph, now let me die, since I have seen thy face, because thou art yet alive." And what joy must have filled the heart of the father when the prodigal returned from his wanderings. But what will this be compared to the family reunions that will be held in heaven when friends and loved ones will meet around the throne of God. Greatest of all we will meet Jesus there. "We shall see him face to face." Every true Christian has a desire to see Christ, the one who shed his blood on the altar of sacrifice to redeem a lost world from sin. Then we shall see the "King in his beauty."

In the next place, Heaven is the goal of the Christian race. "I press toward the mark for the prize," said the Apostle. The "Narrow way" is the race track. It is not only a narrow way, it is a holy way. "No unclean thing shall pass over it." In order to make the run successful we must strip for the contest, "Lay aside every weight." The reason some do not make better progress in this race is they have too many "Hindrances" hanging on that hold them back. We cannot stop on the way. Many have started and run well for awhile, but threw up their hands in despair because of some difficulty. "In due season we shall reap, if we faint not." The prize is at the end of the road "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4:8.

Spiritual Annual Conferences.

A. W. ORWIG.

An annual conference is supposed to be held for the transaction of such business as shall promote the general and special welfare of the conference district. And that means not only its temporal interests, but especially the spiritual work within its bounds. More specifically stated, the salvation of the unsaved and the advancement of believers in holiness should lie at the foundation of all the proceedings of an annual conference. To this may be added that the stimulation of Christians should be sought for the best possible equipment in soul-winning work. A holy fire should be kindled anew in the hearts of the preachers and transmitted to the churches of which they are the spiritual guides.

I rejoice to believe that, on the whole, the annual conferences of our Church are spiritual conferences. They could hardly be otherwise under the supervision of our efficient bishops. I remember reading, a few years ago, what some one wrote in the Messenger, thus: "The conference session was characterized throughout by a deep spirituality and especially was this true of the devotional hours."

But there seems to be a conviction among not a few of our preachers that a still higher standard should obtain, both as to personal heart experience and efficiency in the holy calling of the Gospel ministry. In the so-called "Forward Movement" is doubtless included the highest possible type of spirituality among preachers and the laity. The annual conferences should very largely be the channels through which the copious blessings of God could be poured out upon the Church. Of course this applies to all the various subsidiary organizations.

I remember that a preacher friend of mine, of another denomination, wrote years ago, on what he termed "A Conference on Fire." That meant a truly spiritual conference, even in the face of much routine business, such as all conferences have. Another brother wrote concerning an annual conference that "its spirituality and blessedness reached the highest record." And still another thus wrote: "Cannot we enter into a solemn covenant to pray and work for a real spiritual conference at our approaching session? Let us by all means do so."

To me it appears that one of the chief agencies in securing a veritable spiritual conference is the frequent holding of evangelistic or revival services, each evening, if possible. The salvation of souls and the full sanctification of believers should be earnestly and definitely sought. While thus devoutly engaged in behalf of others, the preachers themselves would be greatly revived and be the more likely to go home as spiritual flaming fire-brands. To be unduly absorbed with arduous and more or less perplexing business matters may perhaps be somewhat detrimental to one's real spiritual life. And to "worry", or to harbor an arbitrary or antagonistic spirit, as to where one will be sent by the "stationing committee", is decidedly conducive to spiritual paralysis instead of peace and joy in the Holy Ghost.

At a conference (near my home city) of a sister Church a distinguished man made the following startling statement: "Some of the ministers will lose their religion if they do not get the appointments they desire, unless this conference is different from other conferences." Whether true or not, the caustic declaration may have served to quell the actual or supposed recalcitrant spirit of "some" of the preachers.

Oh why should not an annual or any other conference, composed of Christians, be free from all friction, in word or act, and be a veritable type of heaven itself! Concerning this need among all classes, Bishop S. P.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

FIRST DAY AT SYCHAR, 1927.

Wm. R. Chase.

Sychar's first service is always on Thursday evening, and the opening day Friday. This gives really eleven days in place of ten, for the encampment.

Brother E. Hilton Post preached the first sermon at 7:30 P. M. His text was taken from Hebrews 2:28, concerning the kingdom that cannot be moved. President Lewis was presiding and called on your scribe for the first prayer. Brother Mullett led the singing. The first song, by request of the President, was No. 37 in our new book—"New Songs of the Old Faith"—"This is like heaven to me." After singing "He Abides," "Since Jesus came into my heart," and "At the battle's front," Brother John Owen prayed. After this Bro. Lewis made his announcements and referred very feelingly to our good Brother Yates who has been promoted to sing with the hosts in heaven, and calling attention to how perfectly our Bro. Mullett fits in. He said, "I want to be low at Jesus' feet. God grant that this be a memorable meeting in the history of this camp." Bro. Mullett then sang a special number, "All that I want is in Jesus." Then came the sermon. "The author of this epistle," said Bro. Post, "understood contrast. There were those who were trying to lead back to the old Judaistic polity. Paul comes along and shows the superiority of the new gospel, but this is not to be limited to anything but the power of God in regeneration. I want to show you from this text the best I can, first, What is the nature of this kingdom; second, That it cannot be shaken; third, This kingdom is obtainable; fourth, How it affects our emotional nature. Not every one understands the nature of this kingdom. It is not a material kingdom that is referred to. Nor could this be separated from Jewish thought. The woman who wanted her sons to sit one on the right and the other on the left of the kingdom with Jesus was thinking of a material kingdom. She was asking for a political job for her sons. They thought the Messiah was to be a king of a material kingdom. But in its power and polity it was to be far more than this. The history of this world is of kingdoms coming up and going down, but as long as eternity rolls on this kingdom of Jesus will last on, go on and on.

"The kingdom of heaven is not meat and drink, not material, but righteousness, and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. That means that religion is two-thirds feeling. Peace and joy is feeling. Righteousness is a state. But joy and peace is emotion, feeling. The kingdom of heaven here is holy religion sent down from heaven to earth with which God intends to establish a counterpart of heaven right down here. Heaven is a condition as well as a place. To feel the pull of heaven you must have the condition of heaven within your breast. The reason you have a fear of death is that you have not that within which has the pull. You can never feel the pull until you have that which pulls. When on his deathbed the late Dr. Keen said, one day, that this full salvation never was so full as now. The way to die happy is to be happy before you die. This kingdom is a counterpart of the glory of heaven among men. If the kingdom of heaven is within you then you have here what they have there.

"Wherefore we receiving a kingdom we are the subjects of this kingdom. If converted and sanctified we can have what these above have. Many do not know who the subjects of this kingdom are. Are you one? Redeemed men are. As a man by name of B., of whom a policeman said to me, 'we all are proud of him.' He had been a common drunkard, but at this time, as the policeman said, 'he's got religion.' That was what made him so that policemen were proud of him. And what he had was given to him. We do not have to develop into it, it is given us. It does not come by the evolution route, nor by education, nor cultivation. These things do not give it to you. It is a gift from God. It is a bestowal by a divine hand. We cannot have this kingdom without a king. It is his presence that makes the kingdom real. And we can have it without any shaking. Anger shakes us. You are to have no shaking. The stirring of jealousy will shake you. Get it out. If it is in you it will stir on occasion. Envy, anger, jealousy will stir when given occasion. You can get settled at the mourner's bench. It is a fine place to get rid of these things that shake you. You never can be happy with any of these things stirring you."

He then called for silent prayer and it was a solemn occasion. Hearts were being moved. Two came to the altar. Brother Post sang, "Power in the blood of the Lamb." With the people gathered about the altar Sister Howard Sloane was called on to pray. She did it with great unction. Sychar's first service was defeat for Satan. These summer camp meetings, the more you consider them, the more you study them, the greater they are seen to be. Holiness camp meetings are doing for this country what no other agency is doing. They are one thing that we can ill afford to do without. It would be a deeper loss to the Church were they to stop than we care to think.

GOOD CAMP MEETINGS.

Since my last report I have had three camp meetings. The first at Letts, Ind., the camp for the Decatur County Holiness Association. It was one of the best in its history. The churches in the vicinity and at some distance were well represented, and many went home with a definite experience of salvation, which cannot but bless their churches, and we trust start a revival in their own town. The Brown County Camp Meeting people came in great numbers and greatly blessed the meeting. Through these representatives this camp meeting has had an unusually wide influence. If the people in the vicinity of a camp meeting could only appreciate the worth of these camps, they certainly would send a large delegation, and receive the blessings that the camp meeting is intended to give to its community. The Rev. J. R. Edwards, of Elmore, Ohio, was our co-worker, and he is a very strong and enthusiastic preacher. Rev. Peffley was the song leader. Mrs. Bertha Anthony, of Hartsville, Ind., was the very efficient pianist. They all rendered most valuable service, and there were very few barren services. Some were converted, some were sanctified and a number were healed. The Letts camp meeting is on the upgrade and is destined to wield a tremendous influence for the spread of holiness.

Our next meeting was Alexandria, Ind., where we substituted for Rev. Joseph H. Smith until he could reach the grounds. Our co-workers here were Rev. Howard Sweeten, of Illinois, and Evangelist C. D. Jester, of Indiana, as song leader, and Mrs. James Campbell, of Kokomo as pianist. This camp started off very well. There seemed to be great interest from the very start. Seekers were at the altar at nearly every service. In the first four days a number were saved, sanctified and healed. The secretary informed us that there were as many seekers in these first four days as there had been at the altars in ten days the previous year. This increase of interest has been noticeable in all the camps throughout the entire summer. No ground for discouragement, everything is looking up to the man who believes God. Brother Sweeten is a strong and effective preacher. Brother Jester is a prince of song leaders, and Mrs. Campbell is a most excellent pianist. I am sure the meeting went on with the same high tide the last six days as at the first four days. Alexandria is one of the old camps. It has wielded a great influence for the spread of scriptural holiness. It should be made more effective in the future than in the past. The Lord bless Alexandria.

Our next camp was Bryantsburg, Ind. Bryantsburg is twelve miles north of Madison, Ind. This camp is located in a most beautiful grove along highway 29. It was my privilege to serve this camp two consecutive years when it was first organized some fifteen or twenty years ago. It still runs on the same high tide of full salvation. The crowds at this camp on Sunday were the largest ever. Not half the people were able to be seated. The cold weather was against us, but in spite of this difficulty there was a deep undertone of prayer that carried the camp meeting to victory and many souls fell at the altar and were gloriously saved or sanctified or healed. Our co-workers were Sister Fannie Payne, of Texas, with Miss Pults, of Oklahoma, as song leader, and Miss Lucile Weekly of Columbus, Ind., as pianist. The co-operation of these workers was simply blessed.

Taking all the camp meetings through the summer, we were greatly encouraged for the outlook for the cause of Holiness. Our faith is greater than ever in the ultimate victory of the word of God in all of its fullness, and we trust that out of these camp meetings there may spring up numerous revivals all over the country, that will keep the work going throughout the year. Let us pray to this end. M. Vayhinger.

OUR SUMMER CAMPAIGN.

Our first summer meeting was held for Rev. Curtis Roach at Argo, Ill., with Rev. Elwood Taylor and Paul and Dora Giel as our co-laborers. This was a remarkable meeting in more than one respect: First, God gave us overflowing crowds every night, and secondly, because there was not a barren service during the meeting, and many seekers came each night to the altar.

After a meeting with Sam K. Moxley and his good people at Moberly, Mo., which was a hard pull at first, but which broke through toward the last and resulted in a glorious victory, we began our camp meetings. Our first camp was at Camp Roosevelt, L. I., with Brother John Owen as our associate preacher. God gave us a very gracious camp here, with good results. Thence we came to Hollow Rock, Ohio, camp with Brother C. H. Babcock and C. W. Ruth. This was another blessed victory, and we saw a number of souls pray through. We saw here what we believe to be the outstanding manifestation in all of our ministry, when a young lady was sanctified. Prof. Kenneth Wells and wife had charge of the music, and nothing more need be said concerning the success of the musical end of the camp.

From Hollow Rock we came to Alexandria, Ind., camp. We were delighted to again meet our Brother John Owen, also Joseph H. Smith. The camp officials pronounced this the best camp they have had in three years, with more seekers than they have had for several camps. Rev. James Campbell and his good wife were in charge of the music at this camp. It does not do them justice to say they are fine. Brother Campbell is an excellent leader and a great soloist, his wife an able accompanist.

We have just closed the last camp of the season at Circleville, Ohio. It was held on the Mount of Praise camp ground. It would not be far-fetched to say that it seemed that God gave the best at the last of the feast; for the meeting began and closed with victory. It was said that over eight hundred automobiles were on the ground, and about seven thousand people on Sundays, while the crowds were unusually large through the week. The long altar was lined with seekers at almost every call. This was our first time to be associated with the other workers at this camp, we surely hope it will not be the last. We greatly enjoyed the fellowship of Bros. T. P. Roberts, of Wilmore, Ky., and Mrs. L. Slater, of Kingswood, Ky., and God certainly did crown the camp with great victory.

We go next to Crawfordsville, Ind., to follow the Indiana Assembly of the Nazarene Church with a revival, with the pastor, Guy C. McHenry. Please pray for us. Howard W. Sweeten.

A GRACIOUS MEETING.

Since I have not reported a meeting for sometime will say we have been busy. Our last meeting was at Carter's Chapel with Bro. Tomlin, a pastor in the Kentucky Conference. We found the people wanting a meeting and they got in earnest and the fire fell. This is a church where they have had much gospel preaching and know the truth and a bit inclined to go on in their sins.

We ran for two weeks and the Lord blessed in a mighty way. At one of our morning services we tarried until about 2:30 in the afternoon. The Lord came down in power and one woman praying at the altar for sanctification fell prostrate, and when she came to herself no one doubted that she had the real thing. Oh it is wonderful to see how the Lord can come upon people as in past days. Some can't pray and testify in public, but let them get through like this lady and it will be hard to keep them still.

In all, we had a good meeting with quite a number praying through to victory, both in conversion and sanctification. The finances came easy and the people seemed to enjoy giving. We thank the Lord for victory while we keep pressing the battle. I have some open dates for the winter season I would be glad to give to those desiring help for their revival campaign.

BASIN, WYOMING.

A two-weeks' tent meeting at Basin, Wyo., closed Sunday evening, August 7. The workers were the Asbury Gospel Trio: James Hilke, Alston G. Field and Cyrus Hutcherson, and their ministry proved a great blessing to those who attended. The morning prayer meetings were times of refreshing, where the presence of the Spirit was specially felt.

Children's meetings were held each afternoon, followed by a preaching service. Each evening a good audience listened attentively to the inspiring messages given by these young men. Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians and Nazarenes worshipped together in beautiful harmony. About a dozen persons were definitely blessed at the altar and much good was accomplished in other ways.

At the close of the tent meeting in Basin, Wyo., the holiness people in attendance voted to organize a Holiness Association in order that holiness camp meetings might be held each year. Those who are interested in the organization of such an Association, and would like to become members, please write me. Grace White, Sec., Basin, Wyo.

PROTON, ONTARIO.

It was our privilege, July 1-10, to be in a camp meeting in Proton, Ont., with the Pilgrim Holiness folk. This is just a new camp but we believe it is a growing camp. They have a splendid company of folk there. They have as fine a crowd of young people as has been our privilege to labor with anywhere. They know God and have real salvation. How our souls were blest as the blessing of God fell on them. Bro. H. B. Jackson, who is in charge of the work, is a fine man, a man of God, we believe.

Evangelist Harry Hayes, of Beloit, Ohio, did the preaching. The Lord graciously owned and blest his ministry and we thank God for the privilege of knowing Bro. Hayes and being associated in the meeting with him. The Lord blest us as we brought the message in song. We thank him for the part he has given us in helping to win this poor lost world back to him.

Just now we are in a tent meeting in Riley, Kansas. We will be here until Sept. 5th. We covet your prayers that God will bless our efforts and give us souls.

In his service,
M. Ray and Jean Mackey Smith.

HEAVEN.

Spreng wrote an excellent article some time ago, on "Deepening of the Spiritual Life." It was, indeed, an important and timely message to the entire Church. As already intimated, from the annual conferences should radiate that spiritual power which will secure the rich blessings of God upon the people. And then, unitedly, they could work more harmoniously and successfully for the salvation of the unsaved and the general and special upbuilding of their own Church and the welfare of Zion at large.

You cannot devote your energies at this time to a more worthy, and a more needed enterprise, than establishing on a firm foundation this adjunct to Asbury College. I am glad that a Theological Seminary is already a fixture at the school; but we want to see it so established as to be freed from anxiety for the future. Nothing you have ever done in all your great and useful career is so important now, as the work you have set your head and heart to promote—a Theological Seminary, equal in curriculum to any in the land, a Seminary where the Christ of John Wesley, Francis Asbury, and Charles G. Finney will occupy the supreme place in the theology taught. The Seminary of Asbury College is doing exactly that line of work now, and may God bless and prosper your supreme ideal.

Faithfully yours,
C. F. WIMBERLY.

NOT GUILTY.

IN the August 31st issue of The Herald of Holiness, the beloved editor, Dr. J. B. Chapman, has an editorial under the caption of "Finding The Proper Church Home" from which we clip the following:

"Today a man told in our hearing of an outstanding leader in the holiness movement who said recently that he should have joined the Church of the Nazarene ten years ago; but that since he had put it off until he is now past seventy, he thought it inadvisable for him to join it at all. We do not presume to enter upon a discussion of the general merits of his case—we do not know whether he should have joined our church or not. But this much he himself admits—if he should have joined our church and did not do it, then the mistake, while not affecting his personal salvation, does affect his usefulness and will affect the rewards of his life."

The fact that the party above mentioned is seventy years of age and said to be somewhat prominent in the Holiness work has led some parties, as I am learning through correspondence, to believe that I am the party referred to. This is not the case. Some one else made the remark. No one has ever heard me make any such remark or any remark that could properly be twisted into any such statement.

I have loved the Nazarene Church and its people and wished them God's speed because of the great fundamental doctrines of our Christian religion for which they stand and earnestly preach. But I have believed through the years that I am in the church where God would have me to live and labor. No man of my abilities has been more highly honored in my church than I have. I was converted and sanctified under the teaching of Southern Methodist preachers. Four times I have been elected by the brethren of my conference to the General Conference. I was unanimously elected by the bishops of my church to membership in the Ecumenical Conference which met a few years ago in London, England. Twice I have been invited by bishops of the M. E. Church to deliver series of sermons at the General Conference of that church. For many years I have had more calls to preach at large churches in Southern Methodism than three or four men could possibly fill. This fall I have been asked to preach at six Annual Conferences, five in Southern Methodism. I cannot complain that I have not had a wide field for service. If it has not been improved and fruitful the fault is mine. I believe my ear has always been open and attentive to the Lord, ready to heed and obey his call. He has never at any time hinted to me that he would have me to leave the church in which I have lived and labored for fifty-seven years.

I think my friends, everywhere, will bear me witness that I have preached faithfully and unafraid, the great doctrine of entire sanctification, as taught by John Wesley. Had I left the Methodist Church I could not have made my World Tour of Evangelism, in which I had the privilege of preaching full salvation to thousands of native Christians, as well as to many missionaries. Had I left the Methodist Church I could have made no contribution to the building up of Asbury College, neither could I have founded, built up, and sent out through the columns of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD the doctrine of full salvation to some hundreds of thousands of Methodist people. It will be difficult to make me believe that I have made any mistake in holding steadfastly to the church I dearly love, and without sectarian prejudice, contributing what I could to the spread of scriptural holiness. I am by no means asking for the pity of any one, nor regretting the course I have pursued. I only wish that I could have been more fruitful in the field in which I have labored, and I have no faith for salvation in my own works, but trust alone in the precious blood of Christ.

There are some conditions in the M. E. Church, South, which I greatly regret and about which I shall speak and write most earnestly, but I certainly believe that I am in a great field of service and for the present I am where God wants me and where I can labor to best advantage. To save any useless correspondence I shall thank Dr. Chapman to say that I am not the man referred to in the paragraph printed here.

Blessing on the Nazarenes and all of the Lord's people everywhere. While I am a devoted Methodist I am by no means a narrow sectarian.

Faithfully,
H. C. MORRISON.

Evangelical Methodist League Conference Postponed.

After consulting with a number of the members of the Evangelical Methodist League we have decided not to hold the annual conference of the League until next spring, when we are making our arrangements for the summer campaign of tent work. We believe that will be a much better time when we can arrange dates, assign tents, and get everything in good shape for a very aggressive summer campaign.

We have great cause to praise God for the marvelous success of our tent workers during the summer. They preached the gospel to a multitude; no doubt something more than 200,000 people heard the doctrine of full salvation preached in our tents; many thousands were blessed; several thousand were either converted or sanctified. We shall have a number of meetings going on through the fall, and some meetings in the south throughout the winter. We wish every member of the League would try to secure one more member. Let all who have not paid their annual dues of one dollar, send in same, as we shall want to repair our tents this winter and we shall have to have a number of new tents made. Between this and the opening of the season next spring, we should double our membership. Two of our boys have just closed a tent campaign, came through Louisville this morning, and in their last meeting 185 souls were blessed at the altar. Quite a number were graciously sanctified. Let us praise God, take courage and rally to this good work with a holy enthusiasm.

Faithfully, your brother,
H. C. MORRISON, President.

Gaines Camp Meeting.

It was my happy privilege to be with the good people at the Holiness Camp Meeting located at Gaines, Mich., for six days. Rev. C. W. Ruth and myself were the special workers for this year. Bro. Ruth, as all of THE HERALD readers know, is one of the most clear and forceful preachers of entire sanctification in all of the land.

There was a very fine spirit in the meeting. There were seekers at the altar at most every service from the beginning. Many ministers of the gospel were present. On the Sabbath great crowds filled the large, comfortable tabernacle. The Gaines camp is growing in every way, the good work is spreading and people are coming in from many parts of Michigan and other states to enjoy the good work there.

Mrs. Williamson, who is the music teacher at the Cleveland Bible School, with a highly accomplished pianist, had charge of the music and gave most satisfactory and excellent service. There were some very gracious manifestations of the divine presence and power in the altar services.

Rev. C. W. Butler, D.D., President of the Cleveland Bible School, is president of this camp. He preached over this region of country for many years and is greatly beloved by the people. The camp is beautifully located with a large tabernacle, with good dormitories and an excellent kitchen and dining-room. The good roads reaching out in many directions make it easily accessible.

Brother Butler has associated with him a fine body of men and women of intelligence, devotion, liberality and zeal. The meetings promise growth and large usefulness. We met a great many ministers of the gospel of various churches who are deeply interested in the good work going on at the Gaines camp. May God bless and enlarge this camp and may many souls here find the pearl of great price, the Christ who is able to save to the uttermost.

Monthly Sermon.

FORGIVENESS.

Text: "But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you." Matt. 5:44.

Our text is taken from our Lord's Sermon on the Mount. In this teaching of our Lord we have much on the subject of non-resistance, forgiveness and love for our enemies. We are taught that anger against our brother has in it the nature and guilt of murder. We are taught that our offerings to the Lord are not acceptable if we are not reconciled to our brother. The "eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" doctrine is done away with and we are commanded not only that we are not to resist evil, but if smitten on one cheek we are to offer the other cheek to the smiter. If our enemy hails us to the court and takes away our coat we are to give him our cloak also; if he compels us to go with him one mile we are to go with him, of our own free will, an extra mile.

Thus our Lord comes up to the text: "I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you." And all of this in order "that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven." This is equal to saying that we cannot be the children of our Heavenly Father if this spirit of forbearance, forgiveness and love of our enemies is not in us.

This is a very high standard our Lord Jesus has set up. We shall have to let it stand. He gives great emphasis to it in his comment on the form of prayer he gave to his disciples who accompanied him, and for all of his followers through all time. We notice that in that form of prayer he taught us to forgive, and in his comment he says, "For if ye forgive not your enemies neither will your Father forgive you." There it is, unchangeable; this teaching of our Lord must abide. It thunders to us out of Heaven: "If ye forgive not, ye shall not be forgiven." We shall have to come to this if we expect an answer to prayer, or ever to enter the gates of glory. It is useless to begin explanations and excuses or reason why our peculiar case is different from the ordinary and therefore, we can get by this teaching of the Lord Jesus and get forgiveness for our sins without granting the same to those who have sinned against us.

This whole matter of forgiveness, non-resistance of evil, and loving our enemies, belongs to, and is a very essential part of, Christian life. There must be forgiveness in order to obtain forgiveness is the very initial of the Christian life. To get into this life, we must come through the door of pardon and we must drop all hatred outside of this door. Having been born of the Spirit, having been made in Christ Jesus new creatures, we are then to follow the teachings of our Lord on this very important subject, not only remembering that he has taught us that we must forgive, but also remembering that he has set the example of forgiveness. On the Cross, our Lord forgave those who nailed him there. Not only so, he prayed the Father to have mercy upon them. We read somewhere in the Holy Scriptures, "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." The Spirit of Christ must so enter into us that we shall be able to obey his commandments, practice his precepts, follow in his steps and, as the Apostle has exhorted, "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." We must so partake of his nature and get into our very being his disposition and attitude, that we can love our enemies and resist evil.

We have the assurance in the fifth chapter of Romans that the love of God may be shed abroad in our hearts by the gift of the Holy Ghost. When the Holy Ghost comes in his gracious baptism, shedding abroad in us the love of God, the very love that so loved the world that it gave an only Son to die, will enable us to love with something of the nature of that love that is above mere human affection or capability. Having had the love of God poured into us, we are enabled to love with God's love, and to forgive with the Spirit of the Christ who forgave and prayed for his enemies.

It occurs to us that no one has a right to claim to be a disciple of Christ who finds hatred or a spirit of unforgiveness in the heart toward any one. However unkind, unjust and provoking the treatment of that one may have been toward us, we not only are commanded to forgive, but Christ has so put his Spirit into us that we can forgive with joy. The Spirit of Christ is a spirit of humility, of kindness, of longsuffering, of generosity, of love and forgiveness, and we must remember that we are promised that he will so give us of his Spirit that we not only must, but we can with joy, exercise the spirit of forbearance, forgiveness and love to those who sin against us.

We see no Scripture or place in all the teachings of Jesus to base any hope for pardon and forgiveness if we fail to grant the same to our fellowbeings whatever the provocation or circumstances may be. We must have imparted to us, as promised by the Apostle Peter, something of the divine nature that enables us to forgive and love with, and in, the Spirit of Christ. There is nothing that will more certainly darken the clouds of our Christian faith and hinder the development of our Christian life than the spirit of envy, jealousy, resentment or revenge. These are sins from which we must be saved and must be kept if we would walk with the Master, if we would entertain any hope of entering into a state of eternal blessedness with our Lord.

You may rest well assured that there is a sense in which a commandment is equal to a promise. Nowhere in all the Holy Scriptures does God or his Son command the impossible; it has been demonstrated throughout the entire history of the church from the days of Christ that his true disciples have within them the spirit of forgiveness. Look at St. Stephen, praying in the midst of the shower of stones and the agonies of death, for those who hurled the stones upon him. In all of his many trials, we do not find a spirit of retaliation or revenge in St. Paul. The early Baptists were severely persecuted and bore with Christian heroism those testings. The early Methodists took joyfully the spoiling of their goods. They were hounded up and down the land but, like their great leader, the immortal John Wesley, they bore persecution with joy and praise and prayer for those who persecuted them. Only a few years ago, when the Boxer War was raging in China, thousands of Chinese Christians were persecuted, hacked to pieces, killed by slow processes of torture and to the praise of God they neither surrendered their faith, gave up their testimony, nor sought revenge upon those who tortured them. Their faith, their love, their patient suffering, their quiet forbearance, the steadfastness with which they clung to their Lord, gives them an honored place on earth and in Heaven with the finest Christian characters in the early history of the Church.

It must be remembered that the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost makes men in Christ new creatures; that the baptism with the Holy Ghost makes them pure in heart; that in this baptism the third person of the Trinity comes to indwell the disciples of our Lord and to bring into them the spirit of the Lord Jesus and enable them with joy to bear and forbear, to forgive and love, and to be true witnesses for the Christ; that he has not only set up high standards in his teachings, but he has imparted power for high living in his disciples. May we be saved from professing to be his disciples and, at the same time, fail to produce the fruits of true discipleship. I judge that here in this doctrine of forgiveness and the loving of our enemies is the acid test of our discipleship. If we cannot forgive we must not hope for forgiveness, and we ought not to claim to be the disciples of our Lord. It is in forgiveness and the refusal to resist evil that we most loudly proclaim ourselves the disciples of Christ, and the grace and power of Christ to grant unto us his own nature, to make us strong and true in the time of peculiar trial, go forward patiently in harmony with the teachings of our blessed Lord and Redeemer.

It is quite probable that no devout Christian will read this sermon who has not learned something of the sweetness and rest that come to the soul when we find ourselves able to forgive, to refuse to resist evil, to seek revenge or to rejoice over the misfortunes of those who have proven themselves our enemies. If we would enjoy fellowship with Christ we must walk with him in the spirit of forgiveness of those who sin against us, and love and kindness toward those who mistreat us. If we find this difficult or impossible let us hasten to prayer and refuse to leave the feet of our blessed Lord until he so imparts to us his own nature that we can live up to the high standards of his teaching in the Sermon on the Mount. He will undoubtedly grant us grace, wisdom and power to keep his commandments, to follow his example and enjoy something of the infinite, undisturbed peace which always dwelt in his unruffled and undisturbed bosom of love and mercy.

O, thou Christ, who hast died for us and set up for us these high standards, so pour the love of God into us, so enable us to partake of his divine nature that we can indeed forgive and exercise a true and holy love and solicitude for the salvation and welfare of those who have proven themselves to be, by uncharitable and unkind words and acts, our enemies! Enable us to triumph in thy power which thou hast so graciously imparted to us. So shed abroad the love of God within us by the gift and abiding of the Holy Ghost that we shall never fail, but always be able to manifest thy spirit and forgiveness toward our enemies. Amen.

THE HELL HOUNDS OF STRONG TEMPTATION.

from me and to tarnish my cuirass. But calling on God with faith and simplicity, I routed the foe, and believe that God received more glory out of that contest than out of twenty years of ordinary Christian life. These awful devils, in such terrible conflicts, know no pity, they show no mercy. They gripped my extremities until my breath came thick and fast; they gave me no quarter, no breathing space. The strife was utterly unequal, and they were mightier than I, but they failed. It was God. Praise his name!

"Yelp! Yelp!" Do you hear them, poor tempest-tossed soul? They are on your trail. Put your hand to your ear and listen! Listen quick! Yelp! Yelp! Lucifer's hell hounds are coming nearer and nearer. Entertain no doubts about the divinity of our blessed Lord Christ and his virgin birth. You must never quit your armor. They will pursue your doubting, hesitating soul to the gates of heaven, and when you enter they will leap to the bolts that secure the doors, and swinging to and fro will leave their slime on the very bars of the gates of glory.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Have you room for me again? I want to say a word about our testimony. I have been reading The Herald and I find on page ten so many testimonies from the dear cousins saying, "I am a Christian" or "I am saved" and "I am sanctified." All these are testimonies. And I am so glad to read of the cousins who care to tell us where they stand. I knew a young couple just married who went to the west to make their home with strangers all around them. When they went to the church there was a meeting for people to tell their experience of the Christian life and this young man gave his testimony. He said he knew he was weak and those not knowing him might try to lead him into ways which he might not think there were any harm in but might lead into a life of worldliness and wrong doing, and if they knew he was a Christian they would be less likely to tempt him from his principles in some way that he might not be able to resist. I thought that was a good thought and a way to do. Let the people know you are on the Lord's side and do nothing without you know it will meet his approval. There are so many things to lead the young into a life of frivolity which do not look wrong, but lead to an unseen evil, farther on. Trust in the Lord and let his Spirit guide you in all things. Love to all the cousins and to Aunt Bettie.

Yours in Jesus' name,
Mary S. Hudson.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and all the cousins? Grandmother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it. Who has my birthday, July 26? I am thirteen years of age. I am in the sixth grade. I have dark complexion, blue eyes, and black hair. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking his nap when this arrives. Ruth McAdoo, I would like to hear from you. Who can guess my first name? It begins with E and ends with H. The one who can guess it I would like to hear from them. It has four letters in it. I will close with lots of love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

E. Agnes Altom.
Box 11, Ellenton, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? My grandmother takes The Herald and I always read page ten. I am eleven years old. My birthday is March 9. I was born in 1916. I am four feet, eight inches tall, and have a fair complexion, light brown hair, with a few freckles across my nose. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My father and mother are Christians. I would like to hear from some of the girls. I will answer all letters received. I get lonesome as I have no one to play with. Florence Brown.
Monroeville, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a tiny little girl into a happy band of boys and girls? I am fourteen years old, weigh 122 pounds, have dark brown hair, black eyes and am five feet, three inches tall. I live on a farm of about 400 acres, go to country school and am in the seventh grade. My teacher is Miss Thelma Baker. She sure is a fine teacher. I have one brother nineteen years old, one sister sixteen. I have a half brother and sister married; they are living in Illinois. If any one sees this letter that is any relation to us would like to hear from them. My father's name is Ben Long. Would like to hear from other boys and girls near my age. I am a lover of books, flowers and music. We have a victrola and have several new records for it.

Ara Long.
Rt. 1, Peytonsburg, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie. Will you let a Virginia girl join your band for the second time? We do not take The Herald, but I read page ten every time I get a chance, and enjoy it very much. This is my second letter to The Herald so I hope to see it in print. Mabel Loy. I guess your name to be Elizabeth. If I am right I would like to hear from you. Stella Carson, I read your letter and enjoyed it because I have a sister named Stella, and also one named Edith. My birthday was July 20th. I was fifteen, and am ready for the third year high school next session. I will answer all letters I receive. I am corresponding with a girl in Mississippi that I met through The Herald. I think I have filled up the space you left for me. I hope Mr. W. B. is huckleberrying when this arrives.

Luray Edwards.
Elberon, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl from the Flower State join your happy band of boys and girls? I live near the water and can see large boats pass through the canal near our home. Verna Perkins, write to me again. I don't know why you have not answered my last letter. Write again, Dorothy Smith. Was glad to hear from you. Edna Myers, you have my birthday, March 28. Write to me, Hazel Thomas, write again; your letter was fine. Frank W. Pro, I guess your middle name to be Warner. Aunt Bettie, my father and mother were over to the camp meeting that was held in Orlando, Fla. They heard Dr. Morrison preach and thought he was a wonderful man. How many of you cousins like poetry? I do. Some was published in The Herald. The name was the "Pilgrim Band." I am thirteen years of age, wear glasses, have light complexion, and light hair. I am in the eighth grade at school. Let's all of the cousins and myself each time we write make our letter more interesting if possible. Cousins, what is your favorite musical instrument? Mine is nearly all of them. I play a ukulele and guitar. All of you cousins write me. Will try to answer all letters received. Well I hear Mr. W. B. tapping at the door, so will say good-bye.

Onie Mae Smith.
Allenhurst, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl from Texico, N. M. I haven't seen any New Mexico girls or boys writing. We take The Pentecostal Herald. I love to read it, especially page ten. How many of you cousins have heard Miss Essie Osborne preach? We have heard her several times this summer. She certainly is a fine preacher. She visited in our home more than a week. We sure do love her; she has gone to her home in Los Angeles, Cal. We hope to see her again soon. Stella M. Carson, I saw your letter in The Pentecostal Herald. I sure did enjoy reading it. Well I hope Mr. W. B. isn't peeping around the corner, for I want to surprise my Daddy, and I want Miss Essie Osborne to see it, too. I am like you, Stella M. Carson, I had better hop away and get in my box for if I wear my welcome out you cousins won't write to me.

Evelyn James.
Texico, N. M.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Since I saw my letter in print I thought I would write again. We have had a tent meeting going on here in Danville. Bro. W. T. Beeler was the preacher, Prof. P. G. Ervin was the singer. It was one of the gospel tents owned by Brother Morrison. He preached on Thursday night. Hope to see it in print.

Geneva Murrell Hall.
Danville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Tennessee boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am fifteen years of age. I would like to know who has my birthday, Feb. 7? I have black hair, brown eyes, dark complexion. I received my eighth grade certificate and am ready for high school. I sure enjoy reading pages ten and twelve. I live with my grandfather, Rev. H. E. Jenkins. When I was one year, one month and twenty-one days old my dear mother died. I became a Christian at the age of nine and one-half years. I go to Sunday school and preaching every Sunday. I belong to the M. E. Church. I belong to the League and am the treasurer of the Intermediate League. I go to prayer meeting every Wednesday night. I am six feet tall and weigh 125 pounds. My father owns an orchard and some ground and house and other small farm buildings. I enjoy reading the letters of the boys and girls. I am glad to hear of them being Christians. I have been going to meeting night and day for nearly four weeks.

Buton White.
Gleason, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl from North Carolina join your happy band of boys and girls? I hope to see my first letter in print. My mother takes The Herald, it is a good paper, especially page ten. I am eleven years old and in the sixth grade. I belong to the M. E. Church, South, and go every Sunday I can. I have light hair, gray eyes and I am four feet, seven inches high, and weigh sixty-five pounds. My birthday is January 4. I will write to any of the cousins if you will write to me. With much love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a girl from New York join your happy band? I have blue eyes and brown hair, am five feet and five and one-half inches short, weigh about 120 pounds, and was fifteen years old May 22. I have read page ten but can't find any one's birthday when mine is. My grandmother takes The Herald and I enjoy it very much. I haven't seen any letters from New York so I hope this will be printed. With best wishes to Aunt Bettie and cousins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little West Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school nearly every Sunday. I am four feet, eleven inches tall, weigh 97 pounds. I am thirteen years old. I didn't go to school last winter. I hope to see this in print because it is my first letter. Who has my birthday, June 9? If any one has write to me and I will answer.

Myrtle Dooley.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Virginia girl join your happy group of boys and girls? I am twelve years old and in the eighth grade. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with E and ends with H. It has nine letters. The one that guesses it I will write to them. This is my first letter to The Herald. My grandmother, Mrs. U. B. Crowe, of Ford, takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it very much. I don't see any letters from Virginia, but I hope that you will print this one. If I see it in print I'll write to you again. Hurry up, Virginia, don't let the other states beat us. With best love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I will try my luck at writing again. I have written but failed to see my letter. We take The Herald and I do enjoy reading it; it has so much food in it for the soul. I love to read page ten. Glad so many of the cousins are Christians. I am one myself. I was saved in the old-fashioned way, came through shouting the praise of God. He helped me to straighten up my back track and take the way of the cross. The way was not flowery but it brought the joy. We boys and girls who are saved when young do not know the pitfalls we miss. I was saved when sixteen years old and I have been saved six years. I was up and down in my experience until I was sanctified, now this experience keeps me steady. Let's pray for each other, cousins. Would love to hear from all the cousins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little North Dakota girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a Christian and belong to the Nazarene Church. Rev. W. S. Sadler is our preacher and he is a good preacher. I would like to hear from some of the cousins who would care to write to me. I am four feet, eight inches tall, and weigh 70 pounds; have dark complexion, blue eyes and dark brown hair. I am letting my hair grow out. Who has my birthday,

Dear Aunt Bettie. Here I come again. I wrote to the dear old Pentecostal Herald sometime ago and had about 20 letters from all over the U. S. A. Am glad to know there are lots of good Christian folks who read that wonderful paper, The Pentecostal Herald. I wish, also, to thank all you kind girls and the man who sent me those very interesting books to read. The girls wrote me some wonderful letters, of which I was very proud. I may have overlooked some of the letters. That is, may not have answered some of them, but I read each one twice. If I didn't answer some of them please excuse me, for I meant to answer each one. They came in so fast and I got so many that I got mixed up. Please, if I failed to answer anyone's letter take this for my reply and write to me again if you wish. I had about three or four letters in the mail at once several times. Good luck to all.

FALLEN ASLEEP

MOORE.

Mrs. Queen Victoria Moore was born May 20, 1854, and departed this life at her home, Waco, Texas, Sunday afternoon, Nov. 14, 1926. Her illness, the flu, lasted only one week and she was liberated from sorrow and suffering to be forever with the Lord. At the age of twelve she gave her heart to God and united with the Methodist Church at Mt. Zion, Meriweather Co., Ga., where she lived a beautiful Christian life for many years.

Dec. 9, 1877, she gave her hand in marriage to M. C. Moore, walking faithfully by his side for nigh on to forty-nine years. To this union were born six children, five of whom with the husband, survive her.

Moving with her husband to Texas, January, 1884, she was now in a new country with different environment, but she remained the same devout Christian and soon drew to herself a circle of admiring friends.

She sought and obtained the blessing of entire sanctification at the Waco Holiness Camp Meeting, August 26, 1899, and lived and adorned the profession to the end of the way. Always cheerful and appreciative of God's truth, when the Baptism with the Holy Ghost fell on her, a smile seemingly all her own played across her face, indicating the peaceful rest of faith. At times her countenance would light with a heavenly glow, becoming an inspiration to those around. She loved her church; its doctrines, Bible ministry and the children of God. She clung to her church devotedly, read her Bible daily, and befriended gospel ministers. The preaching of gospel truth always brought to her a feast of soul and an overflow of joy.

Her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Robinsonville, after her pastor, Rev. R. A. Langston, assisted by Rev. J. T. Upchurch, had held the funeral.

A good woman has gone from us. We shall miss her for awhile, but heaven will mean more to all who knew her. Wife, mother, friend, farewell for a time. We will meet you in the city of the New Jerusalem, when the saints come marching in.

"GIVE THE HOLY GHOST A CHANCE."

Rev. M. B. Mohn.

After Bishop Joyce died, other bishops had something to say about him. Bishop Foss stated that when Bishop Joyce returned home from holding conference in Europe he made his report to the Board of Bishops. In closing his report he urged us at the close of every sermon to invite sinners to accept Christ, and then with trembling lips he cried, "Give the Holy Ghost a chance."

Many times I thought of those words and wished I had always given the Holy Ghost a chance. As I now look back over my ministerial career of 51 years, I remember many times when I did not or did give the Holy Ghost a chance.

Once when holding a revival meeting there came few days in the meeting when it seemed to me that the meeting was at a perfect standstill. One evening I went into the pulpit thinking I would preach because the people expected it, but without the least interest in any text. I was troubled, I knelt in prayer. I had great liberty in prayer, the Lord came and said to me, not to preach, but simply to give the invitation. As I arose from prayer a brother started to sing. I stepped to the altar, motioned for the singing to stop. I then told the people what the Lord had said to me and at once invited the church to come forward and those who wanted to be saved to come and bow at the altar. I never saw the church move as they did then and penitents rushed to the altar. The Holy Ghost had his chance. How he fell upon the people and the seekers were swept into the kingdom. It is hard to describe that wonderful meeting. I am sure had I tried to preach it would have been a failure. How glad I am that I had sense enough to give the Holy Ghost a chance.

At another time I prepared a sermon on the theme, "Holiness unto the Lord." I was impressed to preach it the following Sabbath. I had a large congregation composed of different denominations. As I arose to preach the door opened and a man entered and took the first pew to his left. As he sat down he drew his head down between his shoulders like a turtle, and his elbow he let fly into the side of a man by his side. It seems to me now I can see him going through his antics. This man I knew well. He had been an eloquent, popular preacher, a great mixer, a fine singer and one that would draw a big crowd. But sin ruined him. He was known to go into a saloon and use crackers and wine to give communion to his pals. How low a preacher can fall into sin! Now I did not preach to sinners or backsliders but to believers on holiness. As the Holy Ghost had his way in the kind of truth preached, he came down upon the people, and that preacher, like others, was shot all to pieces. The next time he came to church he took the second seat in front of the pulpit instead of the first nearest the door. It is perfectly wonderful what the Holy Ghost can and will do when he has a chance.

But to diverge a little. I think many are somewhat discouraged because of the moral condition of the world. I would remind them that the evils of today existed in the past, sometimes under a new name or a new coat. Some days ago I became very much interested in what Tertullian, one of the church fathers, had to say about 1700 years ago. His writings give a picture of the religious life of the time. In one of his books, chapter one, "Time Changes Nation's Dresses, —Fortunes," we read, "Men of Carthage, ever princes of Africa, ennobled by ancient memories, blest with modern facilities, I rejoice that times are so prosperous with you that you have leisure to spend and pleasure to find in criticising dress. These are the piping times of peace and dress." Then he goes on and writes on the apparel of women—how they dress, fix up their hair, painted their faces, etc. He writes on modesty, monogamy, exhortation and chastity, etc. How many today are following the fashions 1700 years old? We too, are living in the "piping times of peace and dress."

All through my ministry I have formed the habit of clipping from papers, and these clipping and papers so accumulated that I find I must "clean house" often. I found a church paper 47 years old last January. In it I saw a long article by Rev. A. W. Orwig, I think the same brother whose name often appears in The Pentecostal Herald. In that article the brother described the condition of the churches, young people, etc. If you were to add dress and movies to those conditions the same description of the churches and young people would be up to date now. The trouble with us is we forget so the "unusual" is always coming about. I admit there have been many changes taken place. Many for the good of society and many for the worse. Joseph Parker, of London, in an address to Methodists, said, "You had better mangle your grammar than lose the fire." I presume that the sermons of today on the whole are better than they have ever been from an intellectual standpoint. There is but little of "mangling of grammar," but the fire has been lost. Some of the most ignorant men today can be found among the most highly educated University professors, editors, ministers, doctors, lawyers. I have known persons all the education they had was a little "readin', writin', rithmetic, all to the tune of the hickory stick," and yet they were a power in a revival. They had the fire.

God does not put a premium on ignorance, yet when he has a chance with men of ordinary natural and acquired ability, he uses them to build his kingdom. What a wonderful power for good those ignorant, intelligent men would be if they were right with God and let the Holy Ghost have a chance.

It "makes me tired" to hear that the day of revivals is past. It is true that it is much harder to have a revival today than it was years ago. We can have a genuine revival if we are willing to pay the price. The price to be paid is often high. Let the preacher preach on those lost words which are so seldom heard from the pulpit—repentance, regeneration or the new birth, adoption, witness of the Spirit, assurance, etc., and God will own his word. Jude gives us a good idea what to preach to some men. He says, "Of some have compassion," that is, preach on the love of God, the love side of the gospel. Then Jude says, "Making a difference." "Others save with fear," that is, present the "terror of the Lord," a little "hell fire and brimstone." You hear much about the love side of the gospel, scarcely ever a word about law. Every great soul winner always preaches on both so that sinners will be "snatched out of the fire." Oh let us "give the Holy Ghost a chance!"

SOWING BESIDE ALL WATERS.

Some years ago, up in a mountain town of eastern Kentucky, one of our holiness evangelists was holding a meeting. One night he saw at the altar a homely little woman very earnestly praying. The sincerity of the prayer attracted his attention and he watched the seeker until in a short while she "came through" with a shining face.

Before leaving the town the evangelist told the new converts about The Pentecostal Herald and recommended to them that they subscribe for it. This shining-faced little woman said she would like to but could not afford to do so. The evangelist insisted that she was better able to get along without other things than The Herald and she became a subscriber.

From week to week as she read The Herald and was strengthened in her experience by the rich truths of its articles she sent her copies to an unconverted uncle after having benefited by them herself.

In the course of time this sinful uncle fell under conviction and sought the pardon of his blighted soul. He went at it in earnest and before long God, for Christ's sake, blotted out his transgressions to be remembered against him no more forever. After his conversion he felt the need of spiritual guidance and became a regular subscriber to The Herald himself.

Through the great Gospel message which came into his home each week this sincere believer saw that God had yet more to add to his "river of joy" and he became a seeker after "that second rest." He studied the articles of The Herald each week and made constant reference to his Bible for more light on the passages to which he found reference in The Herald articles.

There were no holiness preachers in the neighborhood and he had to travel the pilgrim road all alone; but he had faith and perseverance and was content to be led by the Spirit; one day during his meditation and prayer he received the Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

In the true apostolic spirit he at once gave testimony to the great blessing that had come into his life. In the church, at the post office, wherever there was a public gathering, he was there telling of the wonderful Savior who had lifted him out of a life of sin into a life of victory.

This is not a great story in either plot or literary form, but it goes to show what a small bit of consecrated money can accomplish in a community. The little woman who found the blessing under the evangelist's ministry didn't think she was able to subscribe for The Herald but made the sacrifice of some material necessity in order to have it in her home. It was directly through reading The Herald that her worldly uncle was converted and later, led into the experience of sanctification and became a candle that could not be hid by a bushel, throwing a cheering beam of Christian light into the lives of a whole community of souls lost in the darkness of sin.

"Let your light so shine." There is some one in your own town who has recently had their sins forgiven and is starting out in the Christian life who needs the help and encouragement of The Herald each week. Send in $1.50 and their name, so we can get it to them regularly. It will bring a fresh blessing to your own soul.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson II.—October 9, 1927.

Subject.—Elijah Hears God's Voice.

1 Kings 19:9-18.

Golden Text.—Wait on the Lord; be of good courage. Psalm 27:14.

Time.—B. C. 905.

Place.—Mount Horeb.

Introduction.—After slaying the prophets of Baal, Elijah went to the top of Carmel to pray for rain. Did you note his strange position, sitting down with his face between his knees? He sent his servant to look for clouds, but none appeared. Elijah was not discouraged, but told the servant to "go again seven times." At the seventh look the servant reported: "Behold, there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea, like a man's hand." That was sufficient: the prophet's faith had won. "Go up, say unto Ahab, Prepare thy chariot, and get thee down, that the rain stop thee not." Hurry up, king Ahab, for the little cloud is covering the heavens with blackness, lightnings are flashing and thunders roaring; but he is running with all his might for Jezreel. Elijah's victory seems to have touched his very body; for he girds up his loins and outruns Ahab to the gates of Jezreel. Victories of faith cause men to do even physical exploits. But let us not forget that "Elijah was a man subject to like passions as we are," lest we become discouraged and cease to pray.

Elijah lingered in the neighborhood of Jezreel sufficiently long to get Jezebel's message of wrath: "So let the gods do to me, and more also, if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by tomorrow about this time." He made a straight run to "Beer-sheba, which belongeth to Judah, and left his servant there," while he went a day's journey into the wilderness. We shall not blame the weary prophet for his case of blues under the juniper tree. For a long time he had been keyed up to such a high pitch that reaction had to come. He was honest in thinking that he was the only faithful servant God had left in Israel; and, had that been true, the case would have been so nearly hopeless that no one could blame him for wishing to go to a better country. But it was not true. God always has a reserve that men know little about. Just now when the Church seems cold, and revival fires are burning low, he has a "little flock" to whom he will give the kingdom in due time.

Blessed sleep, the best thing that can come to tired, discouraged man, came to Elijah; and while he slept, and angel cooked his bread and brought his water. When dinner was ready the angel waked the prophet for his repast, after which he had another sweet nap. That juniper tree was a great place to deal with God and angels. Again the angel "touched him, and said, Arise and eat; because the journey is too great for thee." It must have been good bread, for he "went in the strength of it forty days and forty nights unto Horeb the mount of God." It must have been whole wheat with plenty of fresh butter.

Comments on the Lesson.

9. He came thither unto a cave, and lodged there.—Some suppose that this was the same cave in which Moses was hidden that he might see the glory of Jehovah. This is but a supposition; although Moses was in a cave somewhere in mount Horeb. What doest thou here, Elijah?—This lesson may help us to remember that God does not forsake us in our darkest hours. His eye was on Elijah, and his hand was over him.

10. Elijah throws his whole soul into this verse; and everything he said was true, except this one statement: "And I, even I only, am left." That was not true; but he thought it was. He did not lie; but he was so blue that he could not see clearly, and made a mistake. No doubt Israel was in a desperate condition, and that Jezebel was determined to take his life; but there were many good people scattered here and there throughout the nation, who were as far from Baal worship as was the prophet himself.

11. Go forth, and stand upon the mount before the Lord.—If one would see the glory of God, he must obey his voice. Picture for yourself Elijah, wrapped in his sheepskin, standing at the mouth of the cave. The entire scene is supernatural—wild, bursting rocks, earthquake, and fire recorded in verse twelve. Jehovah passed by, and those awful things followed in his train. It is true that he was not in those manifestations; but he produced them in order to inspire proper reverence in the prophet. But God was in the still, small voice. How often have we heard God's people pray as though they were storming heaven, until there came a quiet hush among them, when he walked through the assembly, and every one recognized his presence and blessing.

13. When Elijah heard it (the small voice), he wrapped his face in his mantle.—That was oriental. We uncover our heads in the presence of our superiors; but they cover theirs. This oriental custom may be seen in any Jewish synagogue, all the men wearing their hats out of respect to Jehovah. One custom is as good, per se, as the other. What doest thou here, Elijah?—God will have us account for ourselves. It is a good thing for us frequently to ask ourselves seriously: "What am I doing here?" No matter where one may be he cannot answer: "Nothing"; for he is killing time, if doing nothing more serious.

14. Jehovah had just repeated the question asked in verse nine; and Elijah makes the same reply that he had made in verse ten. God was moving slowly with the troubled prophet; but he was moving as fast as he could lead the prophet. God would show us wondrous things, if he could. He cannot show them, because we cannot see them; and we cannot see them because we have failed to master our lessons.

15. Go, return on thy way to the wilderness of Damascus.—There is no better remedy for a man in Elijah's condition than to set him to work. Men are dying with the blues because they spend all their time brooding over their troubles, and hatching out more; and nine times out of ten there is nothing worth worrying about. Anoint Hazael to be king over Syria.—This was going beyond the borders of Israel; but Jehovah had use for this heathen king. Leave him for a moment.

16. Jehu . . . Anoint to be king over Israel: and Elisha . . . shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room.—We cannot follow the order given here with reference to these three men. As far as we know Elijah did not personally anoint any one of them. He threw his mantle over the shoulders of Elisha, thereby signifying to him that Jehovah had called him to the prophetic office; but there is no record of his anointing him. The case of Hazael is not clear. Benhadad, king of Syria, was sick, and sent his servant Hazael to consult Elisha concerning the probability of his recovery. The prophet told him that he would be king over Syria, and wept because of the terrible things that he would do to Israel. But there is no mention of his being anointed. In 2 Kings 9:1-3 we read that Elisha sent "one of the children of the prophets" to anoint Jehu to be king over Israel. The spirit and the purpose of Jehovah's command to Elijah were fully accomplished, though not in the order given—not even by Elijah himself.

17. Here we find the purpose of God with these three men: He would use them as a scourge upon Israel because of her great sins. Elisha did not personally slay his people, as did Jehu and Hazael; but he stood as a reprobator and a prophet against all their idolatry and their moral uncleanness. Have you ever heard it intimated that God never changes, and that he is still chastising sinful nations?

18. I have left me seven thousand in Israel.—Seven is the perfect number in Scripture. It means a multitude with no reference to counting. All these had refused to worship Baal; and they had not kissed him. This piece of ancient toe-kissing business still lives in certain quarters. Somehow Satan never permits any of his devilment to die. It has been said that the images of some of the special saints (?) have had their toes kissed away by the faithful, but that changes neither earth nor heaven.

Must We Sin? by Howard W. Sweeten, treats this all-important subject in a clear, concise style. Every vital detail of this question is gone into thoroughly in this book. It sells for $1.25. It is an interesting book. Order of the Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

AYCOCK'S NEW BOOK

"THE CRIMSON STREAM."

A Devotional Sermon on the Blood

The first and perhaps the principal appeal of this new title is the fact that it fills a real need in our book list. No subject is of more vital importance, no tenet of orthodoxy is more assiduously assailed by the modernists than that of atonement by the blood of Christ.

Read the following excerpt.

"This splendid little book, 'The Crimson Stream,' is presenting to the lovers of truth, the believers in the fundamentals of the faith once delivered to the saints, a publication full of interest, light, and essential facts bearing upon a right attitude toward God, the Bible, and personal salvation. He has placed emphasis where it is most needed. It should be widely scattered and read by thousands of honest and earnest seekers after truth and righteousness such as will stand the test of time and eternity."

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. S. E. Polovina, (Methodist Sam) of Upland, Ind., is back in this country, and is making his fall slate for revivals and missionary messages; any church that desires either evangelistic service or a missionary mes-sage, may write to him at the above address. Sam has spent last year in his native country, Yugo-Slavia, in connection with our Methodist school, and he has a message that will be profitable for any church to hear it.

Rev. Clarence Williams: "We re-cently closed a meeting at Highlands, N. C. The preaching was done by Rev. Sam Maxwell, whose searching, uplifting sermons did much to bless and build up the church. The music was in charge of Rev. W. N. Vaughan and wife, who rendered very accepta-ble service. There were six conver-sions and the church greatly blessed. Wife and I have just closed a meet-ing at one of our other churches in which eight professed sanctification, and seventeen found the Lord in the forgiveness of their sins. The people gave us a nice donation of foodstuff and many useful articles. The Lord is blessing."

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Linn, the well known evangelists and singers, have two open dates between Nov. 1 and Dec. 18. They invite correspondence from any one who may desire their services. Address them as per slate, or Oregon, Wis.

Dr. S. A. Danford has some vacant dates for fall and winter and will be glad to correspond with any one want-ing help. Address him at 1177 West 11th St., Eugene, Oregon.

The prayer band at Keokuk, Iowa, have been holding cottage meetings for over two years; they have se-cured a hall and are opening up an Interdenominational Holiness Mission. We are located at 710½ Main St., in the upper room. We have engaged Rev. and Mrs. O. P. Brennehan for a meeting October 20-30. We earnestly solicit the prayers of God's people for this new undertaking. We are not many in number, but planning and fit-ting up a home for the interdenomi-national work. For particulars write Mrs. F. A. Oilar, 1027 Timea St., Keo-kuik, Iowa."

Rev. Wm. Kelley: "I just wanted to send in a report of the meeting at Oil Springs, Ky. The people said it was the best revival that ever had been in that community. We had 47 saved and 43 joined the Church. The people crowded in until we did not know where to put them. All worked together and we had an old-fashion revival. Rev. Smith is the pastor and is a consecrated man, and is a great Bible student. Am in a camp meeting near Louisa, Ky. I go from here to Germantown, Ky., beginning Sept. 27."

J. L. Carothers and Wife: "We have just returned from Western Washington where we have been hold-ing camp meetings and wound up our work there in the Arlington Park M. E. Church at Tacoma, where from the standpoint of power, we have never seen better. God was there in every service and at times we were unable to preach as the Spirit would come on the people in song or praise, and we would open up the altars and in-vite those that wanted to be saved to come, and again the call to those that

A BIBLE STUDY COURSE

It is highly desirable to read the Bible through from Genesis to Revelation.

A cumulative knowledge of the Scriptures, so valuable in education, is secured and a true perspective of religious history and truth is obtained.

The portions that consist entirely of names and subject matter, wholly devoid of interest to the average reader, are omitted from the Study Course.

The Course is divided into thirty-six lessons and gives both the beginning and ending of each lesson; also the beginning and ending of passages or portions to be read.

wanted to be sanctified, when the al-tar would fill up with earnest seekers. As near as we are able to say, there were about 16 that really had the wit-ness of the Spirit to heart cleansing. Rev. Hicks, the pastor, is certainly a man of God. He turned the evangel-ists loose and did all in his power to let the Holy Spirit have full right of way with his people. God alone knows how many souls were either reclaim-ed, converted or sanctified in this meeting. This has been the greatest year of our ministry and we trust the next year will be even greater. Address us, 1611 W. Pike's Peak, Col-orado Springs, Colo."

S. S. Nelson: "The Lord gave victory in the meeting on Chincoteague. The first night the audience numbered seven, the second night four, but we did our best and the Lord blessed and the crowds began to come until at the close of the meeting there were almost as many outside the house as there were inside. The meeting reached such a swing it was as hard to close the meeting as it was to get it started, therefore we continued the meeting one week longer than an-nounced. It has been a long time since we have heard such shouting and the singing was hard to beat. A number prayed through to definite victory in the services, and others gave evidence of a renewal of their salvation who did not come forward for prayer. It certainly was a great victory for full salvation. The writer is called back for another campaign next year."

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. J. T. W.: "Please to pray for my husband that he may be saved; and for me that my body may be healed."

Mrs. H. S. C.: "Please to pray that I may be healed of goitre."

D. F. H.: "Please to pray for my-self and wife. We have recently lost our home, and four children were burned to death. Remember to pray for us."

Mrs. M. E. L.: "Please to pray for a bed-ridden believer in Jesus' power to save, that I may be restored to health."

Mrs. R. E.: "Sick in bed with tu-bercular trouble, I desire the prayers of The Herald family in my behalf, that I may be healed, and that my husband may be saved."

M. S.: "Pray for the healing of my mother."

A mother requests prayer for her daughter that she may be sanctified and healed.

DAILY TEXT BOOKS

These most inspiring little pocket volumes bring a daily message chosen from the Bible and selected because of singular appropriateness to the day and season. Messages to fit every mood, to lift every gloomy cloud. In keeping with the passage from the Scripture are also great thoughts in verses.

The Bible texts are printed in red, the verses in blue. The cover is stamped in blue and gold. Here you have a Bible text for each day in the year. Under the day and month is also an appropriate short verse.

STOP! READ! ACT!

DO YOU KNOW that there are many people right in your own community who do not know that there is such a paper as THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, who would be glad to know of it?

DO YOU KNOW that THE HERALD is a weekly blessing to thousands of our less fortunate brothers and sisters who are unable to get out to church on Sunday as you and I do?

DO YOU KNOW that nearly every week THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD carries a holiness sermon to many people who never hear one preached from a pulpit?

DO YOU KNOW that there is not a better, more wholesome sixteen pages of holiness reading matter, for the whole family, than in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD?

DO YOU KNOW that if you, as one of the present great family of readers will send THE HERALD into four new homes it's influence will be increased fourfold?

DO YOU KNOW that it is your great privilege to join with us in the attempt we are making to preach scriptural holiness to all men everywhere?

DO YOU KNOW that you can send THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD to some friend for the next three months for 25c?

Why Circulate The Pentecostal Herald?

By The Editor.

WE are putting on a campaign to increase the circulation of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. We will send the paper to new subscribers from November 1 to February 1, for 25 cents. Are there any reasons why this paper should have a wider and more general circulation? We believe there are, and will mention some of them.

THE HERALD should have a wider circulation because it all the time sounds the experimental note. It lays special emphasis upon the importance of a clean heart and holy life. It seeks to deepen the devotion of its readers, and to bring them into close communion and fellowship with God. Nothing can be more important than that the church should be holy, separate from sin, and truly consecrated to Christ.

THE HERALD exalts the Lord Jesus. It always recognizes his Deity, his power to save from sin, the fulness of the atonement he has made for the sins of the world. It recognizes his right to reign in the hearts of men. It holds him up as able to draw all men unto himself, to destroy the works of the devil, to break the fascinating power of sin, to transform men into newness of life and enable them to triumph over Satan, to deliver them out of temptation and to walk with God in righteousness and true holiness all the days of their lives. THE HERALD crowns Jesus Lord of all.

THE HERALD fully recognizes the third Person of the Trinity. It strives to keep before its readers the fact that we are living in the dispensation of the Holy Ghost; that, although invisible, he is in our midst; that he is one and equal with the Father and the Son; that he administers the Kingdom of God in the world; that the Kingdom "is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost," and that that Kingdom is in the hearts of men. It points out the fact that, it is the privilege of every child of God to receive a definite baptism with the Spirit, to have his abiding, the comfort, the peace, the joy, and the power which his baptism and abiding alone can give. It is of the greatest importance that the essentials of our religion be constantly kept before the minds of our people.

THE HERALD lays great emphasis upon the fact of sin, the fall of the human race, the depravity and corruption of the human heart, the tendency of man to drift away from God and righteousness; his utter helplessness, without help from Christ, and his deep need of the atonement which Christ has made. It has no sympathy with the new theories of natural human purity, which would cover, instead of cleansing away, sin; which is striving to make it appear that man is naturally so innocent and pure that he needs no regeneration or sanctifying grace. THE HERALD confutes this most dangerous heresy and constantly warns the people against false and dangerous doctrines the tendency of which is to do away with the need of Christ and his atonement, and to exalt the conceit and pride of men, leaving them in their sins.

THE HERALD lays special emphasis upon the need of the new birth. It contends that no human culture, heredity, or environment, however helpful they may be, can do away with the necessity of the new birth. It seeks to keep constantly before the minds of its readers that great truth taught by our Lord Jesus: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God." THE HERALD also lays special emphasis on indwelling sin; that sin entailed upon the race by its fallen parents; that sin which does not constitute guilt because it is not a wilful act, but does constitute impurity because it is an inherited disease of the soul, hinders and hurts the development, the spiritual activity, and religious enjoyment of the Christian, and if neglected, and permitted to remain, breaks out in actual transgression, brings guilt, impotency, backsliding, and destruction. THE HERALD points out with great clearness and earnestness the necessity of entire sanctification from this carnal mind remaining in the regenerated. It exalts the cleansing blood of the Lord Jesus, and claims without hesitation or quibble, that the blood of Christ, in answer to the prayer of faith, can instantly purge away this carnal nature and bring in the baptism and abiding of the Holy Spirit.

THE HERALD insists on revivals of religion. It constantly pleads for the preaching of an evangelical gospel; it strongly advocates a pulpit on fire with holy zeal for souls. It stands for earnest, protracted efforts to arouse the church to a sense of her duty to win the lost, to attract and bring to repentance the neglected and hardened sinner, to lead to the altars of the church the very young and get them soundly saved by grace. To go into the highways and hedges and find the indifferent, the outcast and bring them into the kingdom through the ministry of great revivals of religion, when churches and communities turn away from the ordinary business of life, the pleasures and pastimes, and devote themselves to prayer and praise, to gathering at the house of God, to direct personal appeal, visiting the unconcerned and soliciting their presence at the sanctuary, warning them of the wrath to come, and entreating them to repent and seek salvation in the Lord Jesus.

THE HERALD is an earnest advocate of Missions. It makes a plea for those who sit in darkness, and insists that the gospel be speedily sent to the regions beyond. It claims that no Christian, however rich or poor, is meeting his or her obligation who is not contributing something to spread the gospel. It also stands for home missions, for the salting of the slum districts of the city with Christian solicitude and earnest effort to seek out and lift up the social outcasts. It is an earnest advocate of rescue work. It believes in a religion which seeks to help and bless the bodies as well as the souls of men. It advocates the godliness which has the promise of the life that now is, as well as the life which is to come. The people who read THE HERALD become sympathetic, active Christians. Some time ago the editor of THE HERALD was holding revival meetings in one of the large churches of the nation, and the pastor took occasion to publicly urge his people to subscribe for THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. He said, "I want you to take your church paper, that you may be posted with reference to all the business enterprises and movements of the church, but I want you also to take THE HERALD because it stirs, feeds, and promotes your spiritual life. I find that my people who read THE HERALD attend prayer meeting, bear witness in testimony, assist in work in the congregation and at the altar during the revival. I want its gracious influence in every family in my congregation."

THE HERALD stands for the spirit of true democracy in church government. One of the greatest hindrances to the progress of Christianity in the world has been the tendency of the church to head up into a closely organized ecclesiasticism. Ambitious men, sadly lacking in spirituality, have created offices and gotten themselves into those offices and devote much more time in controlling and dictating to the church than they do in rescuing the perishing. The church needs to constantly be on the alert, to protect herself against the rule of ambitious self-seekers who will buckle the harness of human laws so tightly about her that her spiritual circulation is cut off. She loses her freedom; her love is chilled, her heart becomes cold, and she makes and exalts her own traditions above the laws of God. She becomes a rigid ecclesiasticism instead of a holy evangelism. This was the condition of the church in the days of our Lord. The high ecclesiastics hated him because of his indifference to their claims and the empty dead things they exalted above God's love for the lost and the salvation of the souls of men. It was this that led them to hate Christ, to haunt his steps, to confute his teachings; they were never satisfied until they secured his arrest, mocked and ridiculed him as he hung dying upon the cross. THE HERALD seeks to exalt evangelism above ecclesiasticism. It stresses salvation of human souls. We must not be understood to oppose church organizations, or the officialism necessary to carry forward the work of the church, but we have no sympathy with the preponderance of machinery which is expensive and does not bring gracious results in the saving of sinners, and building up of the spiritual life of the church. Traveling about the nation we are surprised and delighted to find

SEVEN SEALS OF THE APOCALYPSE.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

THE Book of Revelation is considered by many as a kind of "No Man's Land," a hidden jumble of strange visions and figures. It is just the opposite; it is the unveiling of Jesus Christ, a marvelous record of the "last days."

The Book of Daniel gives the same message in the Old Testament as Revelation gives in the New. Rome had decreed that every Christian had to die, and the second terrible persecution had swept all the lands in her dominion; it had reached Ephesus, where the last one of the Apostles—the sainted John—was pastor. For some reason, which I shall never believe was cowardice, John fled from the city out into the Aegean sea, some fifty miles from Ephesus, to the barren, uninhabited island of Patmos, and it was while there, the veil was taken from the drama of the Son of God, and the things which seemed mysterious, were revealed. No doubt John felt that the whole scheme was in danger of failure, as he thought of the devilish program of Rome; how his little flock was to be destroyed, and he was powerless to help them. His Master was revealed to him in a new and wonderful way, showing him that, what he now could not understand, was but the development of a world order under the dominion of Satanic powers, and that God's plan for the ages was not, as he thought, the gospel triumphs and world redemption in the present age. This fact is still unknown to most Christian leaders of the present. John was made to see that the Day of the Lord was to be at the end and, that the One who walked among the golden candlesticks was to be "the King of kings, and Lord of lords."

"I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day" he tel's us, and mysteries, the wonders, and the things to come were opened to his astonished vision. The Seals were opened amid thunderings and awe-inspiring events and John was invited to "Come and see." It was the Lamb—the One he had seen with raiment of white and eyes of fire, and feet as burnished brass who opened the Seals, one by one, for his faithful saint to behold, and for the encouragement of the struggling church in these closing days of the dispensation.

The First Seal was opened, and John says: "I saw, and behold a white horse; and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him; and he went forth conquering, and to conquer."

When the marvelous truth of the white horse was made known unto the old saint, we are sure his perspective was changed; his horizon was moved out and beyond the dark picture of Roman persecution. The Rider was given a crown. He did not have it at first, but he went forth conquering. That was the symbol of the sacrificial Lamb in all his purity, and symbolized the Gospel of power and victory. The Rider of the white horse began conquering, of which the millions of martyrs are proof. He goes on through the centuries "conquering." Thank God, John saw a consummation of things when he would finally conquer. The present was dark, uncertain, filled with terror; but the Rider of the white horse is going forth in the divine order, and is to be the supreme Master—the Victor—before the curtains fall forever.

That John might have a clearer conception of the meaning of the present, and that we might, in these critical days of the twentieth century, also understand, the Second Seal was opened. "And there went out another horse that was Red; and power was given him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another; and there was given unto him a great sword." The wrath of Rome, the persecution of the martyrs, the continual program of war, the crimes, the cruelty and social degeneracy along the bloody path of the race, has been the march of the Red Horse. He takes peace from the earth, he kills, robs, destroys, hurls the nations into a gigantic program of annihilation. The sword that was given him was not the side arms of an officer, but a gigantic machine of destruction—the submarine, the machine gun, poison gas, the Big Bertha, the thousand pound projectile, capable of blowing a dreadnaught into atoms. The red horse is in full flower of authority today; never did he have more power. He ravages society, fills divorce courts, shouts triumphs over his desolation; mobs, rapists, lawlessness, prostitution, and prison bars are his play things. The red horse is the dominant figure of the hour; we feel his fetid breath, his footprints in blood. We hear the groans of dying thousands on battlefields, the wails of widows and orphans. The red horse will go on, and gather momentum until the end.

The Third Seal was broken open. "And I beheld, and lo, a black horse; and he that sat on him had a pair of balances in his hand." What was the significance of this strange apparition? These were God's agencies of destruction and waste. The type of famine, gaunt hunger, and droughts, and destroying beetles, and pests; floods, volcanoes, fires, storms, tidal waves, and all the forces of nature which could be called into action to humble the proud Nero and the Ahab's. Why should we be alarmed, and distressed, when God holds such forces in the palm of his hand. Rome's imperialism and her legions are as chaff before the storm when the black horse rides out to his task. God could conquer the world in a short time if he sent the black horse on his mission of devastation.

But the Lamb opened the Fourth Seal, and invited John to see. "And I looked, and behold a pale horse; and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell followed with him." The red horse may go on with his work of blood, and the black horse may come and go, but the pale horse is the final conqueror of them all. John saw the inevitable doom of God's enemies, and his power over all the world, and the various ways in which he proposes to do his work in meting out justice and victory over the ones who had ravaged the Church of God.

This pale horse does not serve as a figure of death for all; it is the death angel of vengeance on the wicked peace destroyers. Note, that the apparition called the rider was Death, followed by Hell. This pale horse will not trouble the saints of God, as they pass over into the great beyond. Hell followed this horseman. Here is the end of the Neros, the Herods, the Attalias, the monsters of pagan and Christian persecution. The Rome of Cæsar, and the Rome of Peter, will meet alike the pale horse and his rider, and the doom is Hell. The Ingersolls, the Paines, the modernists, who would today, take the crown from the glory of the Incarnation, and mock at the virgin birth of our Lord, and continue to destroy the faith of the people will meet one of these days, the pale horse and his rider.

But the Lamb opens the Fifth Seal. "I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the Word of God, and for the testimony which they held; and they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?"

John saw his martyred brethren; he heard the encouraging words spoken to them. "Just wait; wait until this devilish program is finished and the powers of hell have spent their force and then, vengeance would come.

But in the meantime, white robes were given unto each of them, and asked to be patient. How we look, and long, and wonder why God does not cut short the programs of the pit. Why does he suffer things to go on, and justice to be thwarted, and innocence suffer? Our heart cries out with the martyrs of the long ago, "How long, O Lord, how long!" But there is coming a finish, thank God. Waiting will some day be rewarded. John saw the day of vengeance.

"And I beheld when he had opened the Sixth Seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became as black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind. And the heaven departed as a scroll when it is rolled together; and every mountain and island were moved out of their places."

Now we meet the promoters of the red horse; now we begin to see the day of God's vengeance. Here they are, all of them! "And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every freeman, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks, Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?"

Here is the day of consternation which is coming upon the enemies of God and his church. They no longer boss, they are maniacs! They are crying for mountains to fall on them, and hide them. They are miserable beggars, and poverty stricken; their millions do them no good. They seek shelter far up in the dark, gloomy caverns of mountains. They pray, they cry out, but their day of wrath has come, and they cry out in vain.

Notice this strange language: "The wrath of the Lamb." That means the rejected, despised Christ, the Man who went about in compassion and love, but now, his face has assumed the terrible countenance of wrath. The wrath of Jesus! How strange, how unlike him! But there is a why to this. We ask what is the worst wrath this side of the bottomless pit? A little story will illustrate.

A proud, beautiful girl, reared in poverty, is wooed and won by a rich young man, because of her charm and personality. With him it was love; with her it was ambition. She is lifted from poverty to opulence. She at once assumes the queenly air, the extravagant gowns, the expensive entertainments. She spends her husband's money like water. Her poor head is turned, and she goes and spends, and entertains until he becomes a bankrupt, and can furnish no more. He begs her to change her life, stay at home, and he will soon rebuild his fortune. She spurns his appeal, leaves the house, goes upon the streets, and falls into company with a vile libertine, one of the sports she had met elsewhere. A friend calls the husband over the phone and tells what his wife is doing. He takes his revolver, hurries upon them, finds the couple laughing and refreshing themselves. When he enters, the poor woman falls on her knees, begins to beg and cry, but it is too late. She had come upon a day of wrath, and she saw it in his face; a face that always before was a countenance of love; now it is wrath. She was doomed, and her poor body was riddled with bullets sent by the heartbroken, ruined husband. So will it be to the despoilers of the earth; their day of wrath will come, and they will cry out for help and mercy, but like the Nobility brought before the Commune in the French Revolution. "There is no mercy at this court." When the day of wrath has come mercy will be forgotten.

The entire seventh chapter of Revelation is taken to describe the sealing process of God's own, and delivering them out of the Tribulation. We find the Seventh Seal in the beginning of the eighth chapter. "And when he had opened the Seventh Seal, there was silence in heaven about the space of half an hour." This is strange language; silence in heaven, where they shout continually the glory of God, and play on harps of rejoicing. What can such language mean?

We must now pass over to the final act of the human drama; the millennium is over, the Judgment Day is set. This is the last Judgment; this is when the dead, small and great, stand before the Throne. This is the day of final accounts. It is going to be a tremendous time: God will be there on his great white throne; Jesus will be there, the Holy Ghost will be there; the great of earth will be there. Angels, men, and devils will be there. All the intelligences of the universe will be there. Each of us will be there; our deeds will be there; our words, our thoughts will be there. Every secret thing will be there. Nothing but what will be brought out into the dazzling light of God's throne.

But the silence, what is it? A man has been tried for murder; the court has instructed the jury, after the long trial; lawyers have exhausted their ability for prosecution and defense. The jury goes to the room to say what the verdict will be. The court goes on with the docket; the day passes, and the next day, and finally, the jury marched out, and the verdict is given to the judge. "Is this your verdict, gentlemen?" he asked each of them. The big court room is crowded, but silence—O, the silence! Loved ones are on each side breathlessly awaiting the verdict. Everything is still, when the judge stands up to pronounce the verdict on the condemned man.

We now take our minds from this earthly court scene to the one mentioned in the Seventh Seal—the last Final Judgment. The cases are all tried; each one has had absolute justice; no bribing, no buying off judges; each man, woman, angel, and devil will be given this last final trial, and all will stand stripped of all pretence.

But what will cause the silence in the glory world? What will cause the shouting to cease, and harpers to lay down their harps? This is what will cause silence in heaven, the critical hour of the whole universe; the time when the curtain is about to drop forever on all the doings of time for eternity. The Books have been opened, and the world will have been judged; all the facts of all intelligences will be opened up for the assembled universe. The multitudes are divided; the sheep of God's pasture on the right hand, and the devil's goats on the left, and the God of all—the Worthy Judge Eternal—will from his great White Throne, say to those on the left, "Depart from me ye workers of iniquity, into outer darkness." Oh, the stillness of that hour. There will be silence: angels, archangels, and all the shining hosts of heaven will be still. "There was silence in heaven, about the space of half an hour."

There is but one more shift in the scene; one more event before the curtains falls forever on the Eternal World. He will say to them on the right hand: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." John saw down through the vista the whole program, and the plan, and thank God, we lift up our hearts today in anticipation of the glory that shall be revealed in that day.

A Bible Reading on The Second Coming of Christ.

Rev. C. W. Ruth, Evangelist.

WE will consider the return of our Lord under five divisions, as follows:

1. The Promise of his coming.
2. The Manner of his coming.
3. The signs of his coming.
4. The purpose of his coming.
5. The preparation for his coming.

I.

THE PROMISE OF HIS COMING.

a. Jesus himself said to his sorrowing disciples, "I go and prepare a place for you. I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14:3.

b. At the time of his ascension the promise of his return was repeated by the angels: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 2:11.

He went up personally; he is coming personally.

He went up visibly; he is coming visibly.

He went up unexpectedly; he is coming unexpectedly.

He went up suddenly; he is coming suddenly. "This same Jesus."

c. His second coming was foretold by Enoch, the seventh from Adam, and repeated by Jude: "And Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied of these saying, Behold the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints; to execute judgment upon all." Jude 1:14, 15. This could not refer to his incarnation, for at that time he did not come "with ten thousands of his saints," to "execute judgment."

d. In like manner, the apostles who were nearest to him,—Peter, James, and John,—by the spirit of inspiration, gave assurance of his coming, as follows:

Peter.—"When the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night." 1 Pet. 5:4; 2 Pet. 3:10, and foretelling the apostasy that would precede his coming, he says, "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." 2 Pet. 3:3, 4. Surely, these "scoffers" have "come."

James says, "Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. . . Be ye also patient; stablish your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." James 5:7, 8.

John, the beloved, declares, "Now are we the sons of God and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him: for we shall see him as he is." "Little children, it is the last time: and as ye have heard that antichrist shall come, even now are there many antichrists; whereby we know that it is the last time." 1 John 3:2; 2:18.

The Apostle Paul makes frequent reference in his epistles to our Lords' return, speaking of it as "that blessed hope," and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ." Titus 2:13. To the Thessalonians he says, "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord, wherefore comfort one another with these words." 1 Thess. 4:16-18.

II.

THE MANNER OF HIS COMING.

All Christians agree concerning the promise of his coming; but there are divergent views concerning the manner of his coming. Generally speaking, they are divided into two classes, known as Postmillennialists and Premillennialists; the former believing that his coming will be preceded by a thousand years of peace and righteousness—a millennium brought about by the preaching of the gospel and the evangelization of the world; while the latter believe that wickedness will increase until the rapture, when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout" and the bride shall suddenly be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. It is at this time that there will "be two in the field: the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill: the one shall be taken and the other left." Matt. 24:40, 41. They believe there will be a "first resurrection," after which they "shall reign with him a thousand years" before the general judgment. Rev. 20:4-6. They believe there is a difference between "the marriage" of Rev. 19:7, 8, and the Judgment of Rev. 20:12, 13. They believe the Lord must first come for his saints, according to 1 Thess. 4:16, 17, before he can come with his saints, according to Jude 1:14. They believe that the Lord is coming personally, as he went into heaven: according to the angels, "this same Jesus;" while some others would teach that he came in the person of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost; or through the preaching of his gospel; or in death; the premillennialists are looking for "the Lord himself" to "descend from heaven with a shout." We believe this is the correct view.

III.

THE SIGNS OF HIS COMING.

While his coming, to a sleeping world, will be "as a thief in the night"—unexpectedly—Paul said to the Thessalonians, "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." 1 Thess. 5:2-4. And Jesus said, "Learn a parable of the fig tree: when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors." Matt. 24:32, 33. "These things" referred to in particular, are the fourfold judgments that were to come upon the earth, as follows: "Wars, and rumors of wars," and, "famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places." Matt. 24:6, 7.

As a refutation of the postmillennial theory, and one of the unmistakable signs of the times, we would refer the reader to the Apostasy indicated in the following Scriptures:

a. "Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped." 2 Thess. 2:1-4.

b. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural

THE NECESSITY OF THE NEW BIRTH.

Rev. C. M. Griffeth.

Jno. 3:3. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

WHEN Nicodemus, a master of the religious education of his day, came by night to inquire of Jesus the secret of his power and his life, there met men of opposite positions in religious thought.

When we recall the background of the thought life of Nicodemus, his viewpoint, his training, his theology, we can appreciate the bewilderment of his mind at the startling statement of Jesus which forms our text this evening.

As a master in Israel, Nicodemus had been brought up on the theory that one had to work out his own salvation in good works, such as paying the tithe, long seasons of fasting and prayer and the strict enforcement of legalistic prohibitions.

But when Jesus declared unto him, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God," there came to Nicodemus a message from a world of religious thought and experience of which he was entirely unacquainted. It was a message from above. Jesus' statement was a startling one.

It is in this clear-cut statement of the text that Jesus has given not only to Nicodemus but to the world at large, his most fundamental dictum and requirement for entrance into the kingdom of God,—by the way of the New Birth.

But this startling statement of Jesus Christ is being challenged again today as it has been challenged before by men of worldly learning who assert that the New Birth is not necessary. Yet we must face the fact that if the New Birth is necessary, as Jesus declared it to be, then all other substitutions must be false and superfluous.

The more I hear these modern assertions, the more it is borne in upon me that if Jesus were right on this evening with Nicodemus, he must be right now.

However it may be with you to accept the assertions of the modernistic teachers of today, out of my own personal experience of having received the New Birth, I know beyond a shadow of a doubt that Jesus was right and that he is right, and that if one ever hopes to see the kingdom of God it will only be through the means of being born again!

When we are asked the question as to whether or not something else will do quite as well as the New Birth, we are brought face to face with the plain statement of Jesus Christ: "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again." In this statement Jesus uses the word "must," which in the Greek implies an absolute necessity. "Ye must" means nothing else but that. It is a word of finality.

Let us notice the background of this imperative "must," and we shall see the reason for the finality of Jesus' answer to the inquiring Nicodemus.

The purpose of God is not to make us religious. We are religious by nature. It is a remnant of the Fall. What God is purposed to do is to save us from the effects of the fall of Adam. I am going to make a strong statement, but it is a true one. The purpose of God in redemption is to redeem us utterly from every effect of the fall of Adam.

It is his purpose to wash away our past sins in a sufficient substitutionary atonement. It is his purpose to instill in us a part of his very being, the Holy Spirit, to empower us to live a life of victory over sin. It is his purpose to crucify from our natures the sinful tendency which we have inherited from our ancestors. It is his purpose to transform our sick and deformed bodies into a glorified body at the time of the rapture. It is his purpose to gather all such redeemed souls into one vast innumerable throng who shall fully inhabit and enjoy a new heaven and a new earth. This is the great purpose of God in the redemption of our souls.

Now when we have this background of redemption clearly in mind we can understand more perfectly why Jesus came. He came not to give us instruction in religion. We have instruction in religion in the Old Testament. He came not to instruct us but to lay the basic foundation for this great divinely pre-ordained redemption of men. And that foundation is the perpetual atonement made in his shed blood as a Lamb without spot when he freely gave himself for us on Calvary.

Knowing now the purpose of God and the relationship of Christ's coming to that purpose, we can then understand very clearly the fact that we become redeemed, saved, and therefore Christians, not when we relate ourselves in any way to the teachings of Jesus, but because we have submerged ourselves into the atoning blood of Christ.

The finality of Jesus' answer to Nicodemus declaring that we must experience the New Birth in order to be redeemed is not only evident from the fact that we must relate ourselves not to instruction but to atoning blood, but it is also evident when we consider the nature of the New Birth itself—that it is a new creation within, which only God himself can accomplish. The baptism of John which was one of repentance, while it brought to one the forgiveness of his sins, it failed to fortify him against a repetition of that sin. But the New Birth in addition to all this, creates within one a dynamic reinforcement that will enable him to successfully cope with sin in the future.

In the New Testament Greek Scriptures men are regarded as having not only a body, but also a soul or "psyche," as it is called; that is, the principle of life that dwells in the mind and controls the life of the body. In 1st Cor. 2:14, Paul says: "The 'psychicos' (natural) man receiveth not the things of the 'pneuma' (spirit) for they are 'pneumatikos' (spiritually) discerned." In other words, to be able to see the things that relate to the 'pneuma' we must first of all receive the 'pneuma' to do it with. And this 'pneuma' is something which the "psychicos" or natural man does not possess. It is something which no man possesses until it is breathed into him by the Spirit of God when such a man is born from above.

Now to take the position of Modernism and to substitute for the New Birth any form of religious education is to repudiate the teachings and the authority of Jesus Christ. It is to go back to the position already occupied by Nicodemus on that evening when he, with greater wisdom, came to Christ. Being dissatisfied with the possession of the greatest religious education which this world has ever seen, he came to Jesus to ascertain a better way.

But our modern Nicodemuses do not hesitate to question the teachings of Jesus Christ. In fact they boldly state that they know more than Jesus himself ever knew. "What did Jesus know of modern pedagogy, psychology and psychoanalysis, biology, and evolution?" they ask.

"This new birth that was taught by Jesus to Nicodemus, is quite unnecessary," declares Professor Modern Thought. "Quite so, indeed! All that is necessary," he declares with an impatient snap of his fingers, "is proper training!"

But the product of religious education is sadly lacking in the essential necessities. All that education can do is to mold and to fashion what a man already has. Religious education can never give to a man what he does not possess. Naturally then it cannot impart to him a divine nature. Nor can it transform his sinful nature. The best that religious education can do for a man in a moral way is to polish and restrain his base animal, selfish nature.

Religious education is a beautiful theory for those who have the money to pay for it. But it utterly fails when tested out in actual life, especially when men are being sucked down by the quicksands of sin and crime. Men, the products of religious education, come to realize the utter lack of a needed quickening and vitalizing power within. They come to realize that they cannot cope with their own nature. But not until owls love the sunshine and bats fly at high noon will a man by exercise of his will or by any religious training purge himself of the malice, hatred, envy, jealousy, fretfulness and anger that are a part of his very being. These traits are as natural to him as spots are to a leopard or the ebony skin is to an Ethiopian.

Nothing but the power of God who created us can change our nature from its tendency toward sin so that it will have a tendency toward God. How futile then is any attempt of religious education to transform one's nature.

Religious education is a process, but the New Birth is instantaneous. Religious education is an acquisition, but the New Birth is an experience. Religious education polishes the outside, but the New Birth transforms the inner nature. Religious education is the work of man, but the New Birth is the creation of God. Religious education may carry you through life, but the New Birth will carry you through death and the Judgment.

If this modern teaching is right then we do not need any New Birth, we do not need any change in our nature. We do not need any revivals. We do not need any evangelists. We do not need any churches. All we need is a schoolhouse!

If I can show you that a man who received the very best religious education that this world can offer, needed in addition to all his instruction and knowledge, the addition of the New Birth, I prove thereby the inadequacy of religious education and I demonstrate to you the necessity of the New Birth.

Have we such a case? We have no end of them. But I refer particularly to Saul of Tarsus. In Saul of Tarsus we have a product of the best system of religious education that this world has ever known. He was the product of the great Gamaliel. Under the impression that he was serving God, and fired with a selfish spirit of a zealous ambition and self-glory, he seized an opportunity to distinguish himself by becoming a persecutor of the Christians. That religious zeal started him out on a career of systematic and ruthless murder.

And then something happened to this product of religious education. Hastening along toward Damascus in pursuit of the blood of Christians he was suddenly prostrated by a blinding light with a result that instead of riding into Damascus as a proud and great leader, he was led in by the hand, blind and humbled and—changed!

Instead of seeking Christians to kill, he sought a man of God to give him sight. Instead of defaming the Gospel, he began to preach it. Instead of destroying the churches, he began to build them. Instead of pursuing Christians unto death, he himself began to bear about the marks of the Lord Jesus. Instead of seeking a name for the great Saul of Tarsus, he sought to be hid with Christ in God.

And what was the cause of this great change? It was the New Birth. And will every modern instructor have to face and answer this question: Is not the life of the Apostle Paul since the moment of his conversion on the way to Damascus, a thousand-fold greater blessing to the world than the great proud Saul of Tarsus could ever have been?

Answer that question honestly and you will admit that Jesus is right. "Ye must be born from above."

WILL A MAN ROB GOD?

Mal. 3:8.

LEILA M. CONWAY.

BEHOLD, the people of Israel in ancient times bringing the first fruits of their labor unto the Lord, for has he not blessed the work of their hands? The fertile soil for their crops, the warm sunshine, gentle dews from heaven, and he caused the rain to descend to water the earth that it might bring forth and bud and give seed to the sower and bread to the eater. Therefore the first fruits belong to God, as a little token of appreciation for mercies given. True, there have been droughts, parching winds, the enemy's work at periods during the year, "Nevertheless God left not himself without witness in that he did good, and gave us rain from heaven and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness," and so they bring the first of the corn, the first of the vine, of sheep's fleece, etc., to the great Giver, a long stream of heavily laden men and women wending their way to the courts of the Lord.

"The first of the first fruits of thy land thou shalt bring into the house of the Lord thy God." Exod. 23:19. What an increase for the mission cause, to bring the first fruits to God in this 20th century! The first basket of potatoes, the first bushel of wheat, the first calf, the first turkey, etc., thus acknowledging God as first in our lives. Oh, may the thought appeal to all of God's children. It is good to pay the debt that we owe, but higher still to "honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thy increase." Notice how God repays; "So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." Prov. 3:10. His measure is "pressed down, shaken together, and running over." This applies to spiritual blessings as well as to temporal, for many are lean in their soul because of neglected financial obligations.

Next in order is the tithe,—ten cents from the dollar, ten dollars from every hundred, etc.,—"for the tenth shall be holy unto the Lord," (Lev. 27:32) and to pay it is the duty of Christians in all professions. This would seem specially written to the farmer: "thou shalt surely tithe all the increase of thy seed, that the field bringeth forth year by year." For "all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord." Lev. 27:30. I seem to hear a voice, "Sister, the times are hard, my income is diminished by half, takes all that I can make to live." But don't let it be an excuse for not giving God his part, dear follower of his. Be just as faithful in rendering the little, for your tithe of $1 is as pleasing in the divine sight as the $100 tithe of your rich neighbor, besides, placing yourself in the position for God to fulfil his promise, "Give, and it shall be given you." You know the story of the widow who had "but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse," and "the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail." Also in 2 Cor. 8th chapter, we read that the churches of Macedonia were in sore straits, yet not downcast. God's well of water within kept springing up despite their great trial of affliction. Dire want proved but the channel for more joy and increased giving (a sweet secret of the Lord here), yes, these very necessities marvelously spelling the "how that" of God's supernatural power, whereby, "the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality." True that old adage of Solomon's, "There is that maketh himself poor,—yet hath great riches; there is that maketh himself rich—in worldly treasure,—yet hath nothing." Prov. 13:7.

Another voice is heard, "I am a poor woman with but a few fowls, surely it's not for me to give." Try, and see, dear heart. Set apart to God one of your ten eggs and the first downy chick from each brood. You would not miss your privilege, and God has been known to do wonders through a very tiny thing. Exclaims a hard working man: "My weekly wage is barely enough to support my family, I don't see for the life of me how ever I could do it." A test of faith, but you will not be any the worse off by remembering your Lord. Hand to him the tenth, not of necessity, but willingly and gladly, for "God loveth a cheerful giver." Ninety cents from a dollar for our part, and ten cents for God, really, what a little goes to his part, how could any Christian heart begrudge to give it? "A single dime is all that I have," says one in penury. Much depends upon the spirit, dear sister, for "if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." You can give a cent of it to Jesus—the poor widow's farthing was less than a cent—and trust him to increase it.

Some prosperous church official, his heart set on business—"I—I know it is right, but I do not see my way clear to spare tithes and offerings at this present time, for I'm just opening up a new concern and need all the money to get the thing started." Plausible excuse to human sight, but does it pass in heaven? Confronts such a one the question, "Will a man rob God?" Two opposites we find in Prov. 11:24, "There is that scattereth,—poor saints dispensing faithfully from their scant store—and yet increaseth." Not enough vessels can be found for the flowing oil! "And there is that withholdeth more than is meet,"—moneyed Christians keeping back some of the Lord's part—but it tendeth to poverty." Fortunes can vanish in a night, for "riches take unto themselves wings and fly away." Hear, O wealthy, the Word of the Lord: "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches . . . but be ready to distribute, willing to communicate, laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come (1 Tim. 6:17-19), and treasures above "where thieves cannot break through and steal." God has blessed with strength, clear faculties, business sagacity to successfully conduct your big enterprises, therefore it is such a privilege that his debt should first be paid, as all hinges on him "Who giveth us richly all things to enjoy." But hilt! "Yet ye have robbed Me," falls upon the ear in mournful strains. Who? Where? God's heart is grieved. Certain souls that perhaps, faithful along all other lines of duty, save in financial dues, or failing to render the full quota. "Lord, wherein have we robbed Thee?" astonishment in every word, as complacent visions of regular church attendance, faithful Sunday school service, etc., float before the mind. "In tithes and offerings," answers the Word. Conscience utters her accusing voice, too, as forgotten delinquencies spring to view. Yes, God wants the whole, let us gladly pay to the last cent.

Lastly, comes the free-will offering, not obligatory like the tithe, but as the name indicates, a voluntary gift of one's own choice and volition to the Lord God. "To stop at just paying what I owe? When O Lord, Thou art my all never, never, could I do without Thee. Heres' an offering, too, just a least expression of my heart's love, take and use it as Thou shalt choose." Come on, believers, "whosoever is of a willing mind" and make your offering unto the Lord as is your ability. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered,"—B. 25 cents; C. 50 cents; A. $1., etc.,—according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he hath given thee." I do not know that any are miserly rich Christians reading this message,—oh, ye of large means, dole not out mere pittance to the harvest work, for "he which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." 2 Cor. 9:6. Quite a bit depends too, on the manner accompanying the giving. In the Gospels we read that "Jesus sat over against the treasury, and beheld how the people cast money into the treasury; and many that were rich cast in much." Perchance, a wealthy man with pompous, ostentatious air, has just deposited one thousand dollars. "Look! Look!" nod the bystanders, "isn't it a big gift?" Methinks I see stealing up timidly behind him a certain little widow, head downcast and flushed cheeks, who quietly slips in two mites. "Such a least gift, Lord," rises from her heart, "but 'tis all I can do." Jesus turns to his disciples, "Verily, I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all." The rich had given out of their abundance and likely, scarce missing it from their many thousands, while she of her penury did cast in all that she had. Something akin to his own sacrifice, for he gave his all.

"I gave, I gave my life for thee;

What hast thou given for Me?"

A well-to-do brother is speaking: "My children are to educate, to start in business, affection, truce-breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away." "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived." 2 Tim. 3:1-5, 13. "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." 2 Tim. 4:3, 4.

c. Jesus said, "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying, and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." Matt. 24:37-39; Luke 17:28-30 "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold," (Matt. 24:12) until Jesus himself inquired, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Luke 18:8.

Surely this does not look as though the postmillennial view were correct; but rather, as though "Modernism," with its denial of the inspiration of the Bible, the virgin birth, the blood atonement, the miracles, and the bodily resurrection of Christ were the literal fulfillment of these scriptures.

AUTOMOBILES.

In like manner, we may find numerous infallible signs of his soon coming in the Old Testament, as follows: In Nahum 2:3, 4, "The chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings." The automobile is evidently the literal fulfillment of this prophecy.

FASHIONS OF THE DAY.

The prophet Isaiah tells us "It shall come to pass in the last days," that "the daughters of Zion are haughty, and walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes, walking and mincing as they go, and making a tinkling with their feet." May not the "stretched forth necks," due to the fashions of the day, be seen everywhere, even among "the daughters of Zion?"

MODERN TRAVEL, AND MEANS OF COMMUNICATION.

Daniel 12:3: "O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased." According to the Inter-State Commission the Railroads of America carried five hundred and seven million, four hundred and twenty-one thousand, three hundred and sixty-two passengers in 1895. But in 1914 they carried one billion, fifty-three million, one hundred and thirty-eight thousand, seven hundred and eighteen passengers. Surely this enormous increase in travel, and the increase of knowledge, by reason of the wireless, the telegraph, the telephone, and the radio, and the constant multiplication of institutions of learning, is all significant. "And when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished." Dan. 12:7.

THE PURPOSE OF HIS COMING.

a. To receive his own. John 14:3; 1 Thess. 4:16, 17.

- b. To Execute judgment. Jude 1:15.
- c. Punish the disobedient. 2 Thess. 1:9.
- d. Reward the faithful. 2 Tim. 4:8; 1 Pet. 5:4.
- e. To put an end to wickedness and sin. 2 Thess. 2:8; Rev. 20:10.
- f. Restitution of all things. Acts 3:21; Rom. 8:21.
- g. To reign forever. Dan. 7:14; 2 Tim. 2:12; Rev. 22:5.

THE NECESSARY PREPARATION FOR HIS COMING.

"Seeing that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness." 2 Pet. 3:11. John tells us that "every man that hath this hope in him" (of our Lord's return, and seeing him as he is), "purifieth himself, even as he is pure." 1 John 3:3. Paul admonishes that we should have hearts established "unblameable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." 1 Thess. 3:13. Certain it is, that no one is ready to meet the Lord so long as there is any sin, or impurity, in his heart or life. The correct attitude is that of being "ready." Matt. 22:44, having "oil" in both the lamp and the vessel, Matt. 25:4, and "watch," Matt. 24:42, "Looking for and hastening unto the coming of the day of God," 2 Pet. 3:12, and to "love his appearing." 2 Tim. 4:8. "Therefore, be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Matt. 24:44, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Rev. 22:20.

Getting to Heaven---Is That All?

REV. A. W. ORWIG.

GETTING to heaven,—is not that enough? Certainly it is more than any of us merit. But that is not God's full measure of our future happiness. How very true that his "thoughts" and his "ways" are so infinitely higher than ours! Not only in this life is he "able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think," but also in the life to come. And it is in the next life that the declaration just quoted will unquestionably find its fulfillment in an unspeakably greater degree than in the life here upon the earth. Oh, when once free from the terrestrial limitations to which we are now subjected, what inconceivably great and glorious things await us! Pertaining to the glorified state it may indeed be said, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him," although the words may primarily refer to spiritual revelations even in our present existence.

Oh no, merely getting to heaven should not satisfy us. And yet this seems to be the highest idea and ambition of not a few of God's children. Their feelings are expressed in a line of an old hymn which I used to hear in my boyhood days, namely,

"If I only get to heaven when I die."

The sentiment, however, seems to express a possible doubt of reaching heaven at all. At all events, it sounds like a complete satisfaction at the prospect of entering the holy place. Of course people generally understand that getting to heaven implies great blessedness, such as freedom from all sins, sickness, sorrow, death, etc. They may also include various kinds of spiritual exercises. But the great majority of Christians do not appear to grasp the fact of the special higher forms of bliss and exaltation that shall be the portion of the finally redeemed. And yet it must be remembered that the loftiest homes and employments will not be accorded to all alike. This does not mean, however, that all will not be perfectly happy. They surely will be.

But the Word of God teaches that there will be differences of rank and service among the mighty hosts of heaven. While there will absolutely be no partiality or caste in the future world of glory, there will be grades of position, according to each one's faithfulness on earth, as also his capacity or adaptation for certain stations. And these equitable assignments will doubtless be commenced at the second coming of Christ and continued through the millennium period, as also, of course, throughout the ages of an endless existence. Certainly immediately after death the righteous will be as happy as a disembodied spirit can possibly be; for it will be "to be with Christ." But just as certainly will the righteous be capable of greater enjoyment and service when the body and spirit are reunited after the resurrection.

The Bible very plainly sustains the view of various degrees of future royalty or dignity, employment and power by the saints of God. It uses different methods of conveying this truth. It declares, "There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars, . . . so also is the resurrection of the dead." And it is divinely declared, "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever." That is to say, they shall have a superior rank or reward to such Christians as have made little or no effort to bring souls to Christ. They shall far outshine those who were satisfied just to get to heaven and no more. After all, does not this imply selfishness, and a possible barrier to heaven itself? It certainly means a starless crown, to say the least. An old couplet says,

"Heaven's gate is closed to him who comes alone, Save thou a soul and it will save thine own."

The sentiment is surely worthy of serious reflection, and ought to lead to more exalted views of Christian duty and privilege than merely to get to heaven for one's self alone.

There is another very instructive and striking Scripture passage which teaches that our place or standing in heaven will be determined by our faithfulness and sincerity while here below. The character of some Christian's work is compared to "gold, silver, precious stones," while that of others is likened unto "wood, hay, stubble." A very significant difference! While the former implies true, solid service for God, the latter indicates more or less careless, superficial work, and not really or wholly for the glory of God. Getting to heaven, because of being God's children, is one thing, and being specially rewarded for genuine, holy work, is altogether a different thing. But let no one think he will reach heaven for his good works. Heaven will be attained only because of the infinite goodness and mercy of God and the atoning work of the Lord Jesus Christ. But Jesus himself holds out inducements for us to aim at the highest possible goal in the glory world. It is altogether unscriptural to think that all who reach heaven will be equally rewarded. Some will rule or reign over mightier realms than others. Some will shine more brightly than others. Some will be accorded a nearer place to God's dazzling throne than others. But all this because of a higher order of real spiritual service rendered during their earthly pilgrimage. Many men of great intellects and superlative oratorical powers, but who largely sought their own glory while on earth, and yet having repented of this before death, will doubtless occupy less conspicuous positions in heaven than some more truly humble and entirely consecrated persons. These latter will have laid up treasures in heaven, which, in a very important sense, is more than just getting to heaven.

Some one relates the story of a Christian woman of great wealth dreaming that she went to heaven and saw the construction of

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

SECOND DAY AT SYCHAR, 1927.

Wm. R. Chase.

This is Friday the first full day of the camp. The service of Thursday night is what is called in New Orleans, lagniappe. That means something thrown in with a purchase one has made, a small gift. Thursday night is thrown in extra to our campers. For the next ten days from six o'clock in the morning to ten at night these beautiful grounds will be in a quiver of spiritual delights, the voice of song and prayer and praise and sermons making the atmosphere that of heaven. Four services before the morning sermon, early prayer, the boys and girls' meeting, the children of eight years and under, the people's meeting of praise and testimony, give a good impetus for this forenoon sermon. Bro. John Owen was the preacher of the hour. Bro. Guiler led the singing. "God leads us along," No. 19, was sung. Then we had a special by Brother and Sister Guiler, "I will go with Jesus all the way," which set our hearts rejoicing. Bro. Freer prayed. "All hail the power of Jesus' Name" was sung and then Bro. Owen preached, taking verses 11 and 12 of Ephesians 4 as his text.

"We have here five of the divine orders of the apostolic ministry and all of them were for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry, the edifying of the body of Christ. We would get the impression that the great central purpose is for the perfecting of the saints, whatever that may include. No soul can come to that standard that is not regenerated and sanctified. There is nothing less in the New Testament but the full salvation of the children of God. God means for his saints to be perfected. Many think that the work of the evangelist is to get folks saved. That is an important part of his work, but that is not all. He has a ministry for the perfecting of the saints. Just as sure as there is an order in the apostolic ministry for evangelizing so sure is the perfecting of the saints. These statistics show that most of those who are regenerated are led into that experience by evangelists, and also most of those sanctified come into that experience under their efforts.

"The great Protestant churches should recognize the evangelist. There are those whose call is definitely to evangelizing for the conversion of sinners and the sanctifying of the saints. There is an order, evangelists. Paul was an evangelist, a pastor, and a teacher. He speaks of the care of all the churches being on him. Teaching, shepherding, preaching, are the heads under which I would consider with you the work. Paul taught an attainable perfection. Jesus said that those who hungered and thirsted after righteousness should be filled. Be perfect, he taught. Ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost. He sanctified himself that we also might be sanctified. In the New Testament the need of cleansing after regeneration is clearly and definitely taught. Jesus, you will remember, prayed, 'Sanctify them through my truth; thy word is truth.' This shows their need of being sanctified after becoming his. Paul recognized the same thing. I did not write unto you as spiritual, but as unto babes. This is emphasized all through the New Testament. The world cannot receive the Holy Ghost. But he is with you and shall be in you. The one way in which the Christian may become perfect is perfect in love. Herein is our love made perfect. We can live in such a way as to glorify God. But we cannot unless we have these fundamental doctrines of the New Testament. These are essential to such living.

"All the great revivals have come through the preaching and teaching of these great central truths, doctrinal truths of the New Testament. The great revival under Luther came when he had it break in on him that the just shall live by faith. Mr. Wesley taught that we were to know by divine assurance, by direct witness of the Spirit that we were to know of God. These were not new truths, but simply a recovery of them. So it is in our day that when we put emphasis on the necessity of the new birth and the cleansing of the heart that truth always blessed and always will. We need to emphasize these fundamental doctrines. There is no substitute for redemption, can be none. It takes the blood of Christ. At Samaria and at Ephesus they were shepherding them that had been taught. Cornelius needed shepherding and Peter was sent to him and his household. After hearing his testimony recognizing that these were children of God it was his privilege to lead them out and into the experience where God reveals the riches of his inheritance. This is the greatest of privileges. So I have felt it to be. It has been my privilege to lead the folks as far as I have gone and then point them up the road and tell them that it is better farther on. One who is thoroughly regenerated is hungry and thirsty for more. The Christian heart longs for the fullness and will so long as they are really Christian.

"Paul preached the truth of God and not about it, nor around it, but it. That man can preach the truth who has it in his own heart, has it there so that he feels he would die for it. That was the attitude of the apostolic Church. They never compromised. Nor is there any other way now than to be thoroughly uncompromising, faithful to the last degree in it. If we are afraid of the face of men we never will preach definitely so that folks will definitely get the blessing of entire sanctification. We should be more concerned about our standing with God than with our standing with men. We want the confidence and good will of our brethren, but the important thing is to have the seal of God. We must preach the fullness of the blessing. No man has any right to withhold it from men by not preaching it. Their message was one of life. Ours must be. Our generation needs to be born again. Our believers need to be sanctified wholly. And they will be when this gospel is thoroughly and honestly preached with uncton from above. Let us pray."

Brother Post preached at two P. M., from the incident of the healing of the woman who had been bound by Satan for eighteen years. Luke 13:11-17. Before taking his text he gave his own experience of being born again in a Sunday school at the close of a hot exhortation by the pastor who had a passion for souls, and then of being sanctified wholly in the dining room of a friend in Newark, N. J., in the year 1891. This was four years subsequent to his conversion. In his sermon he went on to show that the deformity of this woman represented a New Testament believer still troubled with carnality. Her deliverance was instantaneous and illustrates our deliverance. The attitude of the Pharisees represents the attitude of many of our preachers today. Her identity is proved by her birth. She was a Hebrew, one of the chosen people of God. Her parents were Jewish. I have heard folks speak of being half converted. That is an impossibility. When a child is born it is a member of the human family. When you are born again you belong to the heavenly family. There is no half way about it. Yet this woman who was of the chosen people of God was bound by Satan and needed to be loosed. Your regeneration determines your identity. You can talk the language of Christians, act like them, belong to Christ and yet have need of being loosed as was this poor woman. No man ever goes very far along in the Christian life but what feels this need. When this woman was loosed she immediately began to praise God. The Pharisees got mad. When you are loosed you too will begin to praise God, and if any one around gets mad the people will do as they did then, also will begin to rejoice as when that poor woman got the blessing. Have you got it? If not let's get down in the straw and seek it.

At 7:15 P. M., Bro. Dunaway preached. It was his first appearance before a Sychar audience, but God's people are never strange one to the other. He acted as if he always had known us and the audience listened as to an old friend. 1st John 3:51 was his text: Evidences of divine sonship and the fact that we must have a John Baptist revival before we can have a Holy Ghost revival was what he dwelt on. God gives his children the peace of God, a love for his law, a desire to keep his commandments and power to overcome the world. By apt illustrations and scripture proof his sermon was convincing.

Bro. Ebert, of Pasadena, Calif., leader of the holiness band of that city, led in the opening prayer of this service. He and his wife are here for the entire camp. Brother J. S. Taylor and wife of Grass Valley, Ore., arrived today. Last year at one of the services the people were asked to pray for a good sister in Oregon who was very sick. President Lewis at once called for prayer. Sister Taylor is the one for whom we were praying. As soon as she began to recover they began to make arrangements for Sychar and now are here for the entire meeting. The whole world sends of her folks here.

THE EPWORTH CAMP MEETING.

The camp meeting at Epworth, S. C., this year was one of unusual interest. It exceeded all former camps at least in one point, namely, the average attendance. The tabernacle was full three times each Sabbath.

The preachers for this season were Dr. E. P. Taylor of South Carolina, and John Paul, and Dan Ward Milan had charge of the music, and John Landrum, the well known pianist, was at his post.

Dr. Taylor was formerly in the practice of dentistry. He was quite successful in his line, but he had a remarkable experience with God in connection with his call to preach and when he left the dental parlor for the evangelistic field he went with considerable momentum. For four years he has been on the horizon as an evangelist in the State of South Carolina, having constantly more calls than he can fill. His soundness in the doctrines of the Gospel, his sensible methods and the simplicity with which he preaches the word of God will readily explain the secret of his success and the reason why he is in such large demand.

Knowing something of the peculiarity of our field we deferred to Dr. Taylor's policies in the matter of altar work. It is his custom to shell the woods for several days before saying anything about an altar service. People do not go to the altar much in this conservative South Carolina community. The appeal was not made until Friday night of the camp, but enough of people came forward that night to fill several of the front seats and the majority of those who came were definitely blessed. Brother Taylor has a strong faith in the efficiency of the word of God to get results and as we preached the word our faith seemed to be honored. Some very desirable work was accomplished in salvation and blessing.

For twenty-two years Epworth camp meeting has been one of the spiritual lighthouses in South Carolina. Much credit is due to the persistent faith and optimism of Rev. W. P. B. Kinard for maintaining this work against the odds of misunderstanding and discouragement. He is a man that will not be discouraged. In industry and sacrifice he is indomitable. His personal ministry in South Carolina has been worthy of financial support, but for it he has received very little support; yet he has gone forward maintaining the camp meeting with the aid of his friends, providing well for his family and rendering assistance to his fellowmen in many directions. Considering his resources, he has shown remarkable business ability along with his evangelizing power. When he finishes his work upon the earth, South Carolina is going to realize more than ever the large place he has filled.

Plans are going forward for next year's camp meeting with Rev. T. C. Henderson and Dr. J. L. Brasher in the lead. Backed by faith and prayer good things are expected in the future.

SUMMER CAMPAIGNS OF O. H. CALLIS.

It has been a long time since we reported our work through the columns of The Pentecostal Herald. It is not that we have been idle nor have we lost interest in The Herald and its great circle of readers. We have been busy and still find that The Herald is indispensable to the work of spreading scriptural holiness and the promotion of revivals.

In June we were at Carlisle, Ky., for three weeks in the Methodist Church with Rev. B. O. Beck, our pastor there. This was our third meeting with him and I believe the best. Beck is fine to work with. He stands by the evangelist from "call to collection." He puts no restrictions on his helpers, he prays, counsels with and proves himself a true yoke-fellow throughout. He stands for the old-time truths of Methodism and the Bible. The Lord gave us victory in Carlisle.

In July we were with Rev. T. A. Matthews at Bordeaux Church for the second time. Large crowds attended filling the tent to overflowing. Brother Matthews is spiritual, brotherly and tireless. He and his good people entertained Mrs. Callis and Laura Woodson along with us. It is fine of a people to provide occasionally for the evangelist to bring his family. Many were saved or sanctified in this meeting and about thirty added to the church.

August 4-14 found us at Hartselle, Ala., camp again for the sixth time. Brothers Joseph Owen, Harry Blackburn and Bennett were our co-laborers. Biggest crowds in any of our six years there and many seekers and finders at the altar. We return again next year, all but Brother Blackburn who on account of conflicting date could not accept. Brother Wiley Owen will take his place next year. Hartselle camp is destined to become the state camp of Alabama, it seems. Brother Joseph Owen said he had hopes of it being to Alabama what Indian Springs is to Georgia. The Committee at Hartselle are planning new buildings, a men's dormitory and other equipment for next year that will greatly enlarge possibilities for the cause of holiness at this center.

Aug. 19-29, we were at Kincaid, W. Va., camp once more, making our tenth time in fourteen years. This is a big little camp. Some of the cream of folk live there and promote the work. It is vitally related to the local Methodist Church there. All other denominations co-operate. Brother F. I. Peters, pastor of the Methodist Church there, was with us throughout and was one of the best pastor-helpers it has been our privilege to work with. Singing Evangelist G. P. Comer led the host triumphantly in singing, also had charge of young people's work. He is a good singer and one of the best workers with children and young people we have seen. Mrs. Callis was with us in these camps and rendered faithful service with her violin and in doing personal work.

We are now at Salem, Va., camp. The work here is small and has its handicaps. But no finer people can be found than the "faithful few" who are promoting and financing the work here. This is our last camp for the season. Beginning with October we return to church and union revivals. "Brethren pray for us."

GETTING TO HEAVEN—IS THAT ALL?

beautiful palaces, one of which, she learned, was for a poor but truly godly man in her employ, while a very insignificant building was intended for her. Expressing her surprise and disappointment, she was told that a building was erected for her just according to the material she had sent up. This at least illustrates the difference between reaching heaven as a place, and the great, special rewards conferred upon certain of God's children after heaven is gained. Dear reader, let us seek God's best now if we would have his best hereafter. But let the "love of Christ," and the love of souls constrain us more than the desire for special rewards.

If You Want Something

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

the very large number of ministers of the gospel who read THE HERALD and who say they find it most helpful. We are confident if they will place it in the homes of their people, directly, they will note gracious spiritual benefits among the people who read it. Let a host of our friends who have gotten help out of THE HERALD, sow it broadcast among the people on our very liberal offer of 25 CENTS FOR THREE MONTHS.

ONE OF MY GREAT DESIRES

CHAPTER VII.

I have another letter of the same character of that from Dr. Wimberly which appeared in THE HERALD last week. I want the readers of THE HERALD to share it with me. May God stir up the hearts of fifty thousand people who read THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD to give me a helping hand in this great good work. We have two great needs: First, we want a large loan fund so that we can help young preachers in securing their education, the money loaned to them to be returned to the fund after they get out in the ministry to be used to help other young men to prepare. Our second need is a large building for a club in which these young men can live at very small expense, do their own cooking and housekeeping. I can but believe that we have a host of people who would be glad to help us in this all-important work.

The following letter is from Rev. C. W. Ruth. I doubt if there is any one man on the American continent who has led more people into the experience of full salvation than Brother Ruth. You will read his letter with interest.

H. C. M.
Rev. H. C. Morrison, D.D.
Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.
My dear Brother:

"Go through, go through the gates: prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; Gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people." Isa. 62:10.

I have read with much interest, (and delight) your articles in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, with reference to the enlarging and making more permanent the Theological Seminary at Asbury. I am persuaded that the greatest need in this Nation is, well equipped, wholly sanctified preachers of full salvation, full of zeal for the salvation of sinners, and the sanctification of believers. And from whence can we possibly expect such preachers but from a Holiness Seminary?

As during a time of backsliding and declension in Israel God said, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," so at the present time, the same sad condition obtains, and the need is obvious and most urgent. Give us an army of Holiness preachers from the Theological Seminary at Asbury, to turn back the tides of worldliness and wickedness, and win the multitudes to Christ and a full salvation; and you may be sure we will not lack for students to fill the halls of Asbury College, nor money to support, enlarge, and carry forward that great need of the Institution.

Not only does the world need such men as have had their training in a holiness atmosphere, in a Holiness Seminary, but the Holiness Schools must fail if we do not have full salvation preachers to awaken the people and carry forward the Holiness Movement. May God give you wisdom and grace to carry forward the indispensable work of enlarging and thoroughly establishing the Theological Seminary at Asbury. You surely have never been engaged in a more worthy enterprise, or a work that is certain to bring such large returns for the kingdom, as the firm establishing of that Theological Seminary. Heaven will reward you.

With all best wishes, and sincere prayers for your success, I beg to remain,
In perfect love, all for Jesus,
C. W. RUTH.

Open Letter to a Young Preacher

My Dear Young Brother:

I am delighted to hear from you, and to know you had such a time of refreshing to your soul at the camp meeting. I am not surprised that you were a bit embarrassed on the afternoon you were invited to preach. I note that you say you did not do yourself nor your subject justice; that you did not have your usual liberty and unction in preaching. The contents of your letter indicate that you would like some criticism and suggestion with regard to your ministry at the camp next year.

I judge the committee thought better of your sermon than you did, or they would not have asked you back to preach at all of the afternoon services next year. Allow me to offer a few suggestions:

Get your notebook and begin at once to gather the material for those ten afternoon sermons. Remember it is at a holiness camp meeting; the camp ground was bought, the tabernacle built, the various buildings erected, and the outlay of many thousands of dollars, and much hard work, for the spread of scriptural holiness. Keep this fact in mind in the selection of your texts and the collecting and arranging of your sermon material.

I am well acquainted with the committee and surrounding country where that camp ground is located. The Wesleyan interpretation of the Bible doctrine of holiness is not preached in any of the churches in all that region; the doctrine of entire sanctification has been misrepresented, opposed and ridiculed all over that section of country.

This camp was built at heavy expense to a few faithful souls for the preaching and teaching of entire sanctification, and it is maintained for that purpose. When the hard-worked, self-sacrificing committee selects a preacher and brings him there, takes care of him and remunerates him for his services, it is his duty to render the service expected of him. The people, saint and sinner, come to hear the discussion of the doctrine and experience for which the camp stands, and is advertised to set forth.

You get my thought: You are engaged to preach at a holiness camp meeting, so prepare yourself accordingly. You may be sure that you cannot exhaust the subject. In collecting your material, I suggest that you read, mark, and make notes from the following books: "Tongue of Fire," Woods' "Perfect Love," Steele's "Half Hours with Saint Paul," Peck's "Central Idea of Christianity," Carradine's "Old Man," and those pamphlets by Wesley, Clarke, Watson and Fletcher on sanctification. Along with these, get an old Methodist Hymnbook and memorize a half dozen of Charles Wesley's hymns on sanctification.

In these studies you will find mental stimulation and spiritual refreshing and growth. These studies will send you to your Bible and make the Word of God more interesting and luminous, and your soul will thrive. These studies will instruct, chasten, refine, enlarge and ennoble your mind and Christian character. They will fire and increase your mental and spiritual hunger for God, and all that learning and knowledge that will make you wise and efficient in preaching that gospel which is the power of God unto salvation.

As you read, digest and think over the contents of the books I have recommended, sermon material will pile up, and you will find it shaping itself into logical order, and you will be eager for the Sabbath to come that you may pour out the truth that is burning in your heart and is clamoring for expression.

There are eleven months ahead of you before you begin your messages at the camp meeting; select your texts, prepare your sermons, preach them to your congregation, use them when you go out to help a brother pastor, and thus get them fixed in your brain, heart, faith and life; then it will be a delight to give expression to them in your messages at the camp meeting. Of course you will do much reading, other than what I have suggested, but these books I have commended for your consideration will help to prepare you for a fruitful ministry at your camp meeting next summer.

There are some other suggestions about this camp meeting preaching which you are looking forward to with so much concern, that I must offer, but this letter is growing long and my other suggestions will follow later. Remember you are very dear to me and I am deeply concerned that you become a spiritual preacher of the full salvation God offers to men through the atonement our Lord Jesus Christ made on the cross of Calvary.

With earnest prayer and much love, I am,
Your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

Special Notice.

I wish to call the attention of pastors, or evangelists needing a good song leader for meetings or revivals to the name of my young friend, Mr. Clayton Luce. He is a graduate of Asbury College, has taken special training in music. He is a young man of fine family, culture and piety. I can recommend him most highly to any pastor who desires assistance in revival meetings. He will make a fine worker among the young people in addition to leading the singing. Address him for the present at Wilmore, Ky.

Faithfully,
H. C. MORRISON.

A Worthy Man and Good Preacher.

Rev. J. L. Glascock, whom I have known for many years, and who once held a very gracious revival for us at Wilmore, Ky., is still in the evangelistic field, a man full of vigor and faith and zeal. His address is 1350 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio. There is many a village church languishing for a revival that could be mightily stirred under his ministry. We are not suggesting that he is competent for little churches only, but we are thinking of the spiritual desolation and dearth in so many places that could be quickened and blessed under the ministry of this earnest preacher. Keep him busy.

Faithfully yours,
H. C. MORRISON.

Our Revival Number.

We are preparing to bring out a great revival number of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD the last week in November. We want contributions from pastors, evangelists, and the laity, men and women, from all over the country, on the need of revivals and how to promote them. Get busy and send us in good material for this great issue of THE HERALD on revivals. We will be glad for pastors at some service in their church between now and the last week in November to ask how many people in their congregation have been saved in revivals; find out the percent of those who were converted and brought to Christ as the fruit of revivals and send us a statement of the facts. It is the object of this revival issue to awaken and stimulate and, as far as possible, help to bring about a great desire for a revival of religion and the salvation of a multitude of souls.

We Are Here To-day and There To-morrow.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

WHAT a strange, mysterious thing is life! We are here in a world of changing scenes, surging throngs, afflictions, disappointments, sickness, and death. We cannot escape these incidentals to mortality, nor can we hope to outlive them. They hound our steps to the grave, and haunt us in the night time. Oftentimes we grow weary of the way and our hearts look away to the beyond where we hope to lay aside the burdens, and toils, and disappointments of this mundane sphere, and dwell in a land of unclouded day.

In between this gap—between heaven and earth—the cross of Calvary appears with its bleeding Victim, inviting us to look unto him and be saved, yea, even all the ends of the earth. It is true we have been great sinners, great intruders upon the mercy of God, but we recall that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us, and that whosoever will may take of the water of life freely.

That was a fortunate thing for fallen man when God devised the plan of redemption whereby fallen and sinful man could be saved. Jesus Christ stretched his omnipotent shoulders all the way across the chasm between earth and heaven, that man might find a way of return to the Father's house. He did not leave one out, notwithstanding the fact that some so teach, but he tasted death for every man, and the iniquity of us all was laid upon him.

But how are we to get rid of this taint of sin, this bias to evil, that makes it hard for us to do the right? Thanks be to a merciful and forgiving Father, we find in the beloved Son an antidote for all sin. He was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil, and restore man to his original purity and oneness with the Father. If Jesus Christ cannot save from all sin, then Satan is greater than the Son of God. We have his word that, "Where sin abounded grace doth much more abound."

As we look upon the stooped form bent low under the powerful hand of sin, we remember that Christ has said that deeper down than sin has ever gone the power of his salvation can reach. David cried in his agony, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me." A clean heart is a heart free from sin, and if inspiration formulated this prayer upon the Psalmist's lips, and prompted it from his heart there must be such a thing possible. This same man prayed, "Purge me with hyssop and I shall be clean; wash me and I shall be whiter than snow." Whiter than snow means that all the specks of sin are purged out, and only the pure whiteness of a full salvation remains.

Instead of sitting down and whining about our difficulties, and the uncertainties of the future, let us seek to know him, whom to know is life eternal. Let us follow on to know the Lord, and as we trace his steps he will lead us to the heights of endless bliss where sorrow and sighing shall flee away, and all tears shall be wiped from our eyes.

Yes, we are here, but we are not to remain here always. There is a land of pure delight where saints immortal reign, infinite day excludes the night, and pleasures banish pain. Let us gird ourselves afresh for the race that is set before us, ever looking unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith, and then when we get to the end of the way, we shall find the heavenly Pilot at the river's brink to steer us safely across the silent stream of death, and land us on the shores of sweet deliverance, where we shall go no more out forever. We are here today, but in a little while we shall be there, forever with the Lord. Amen! So might it be!

A Remarkably Interesting Book.

I wish to call attention to a remarkably interesting book which has recently fallen into my hands. The title is "Alluring Arizona", from the facile pen of William Hamilton Nelson, Editor of the Pacific Methodist, published in San Francisco. The book gives a graphic description of Arizona, its prehistoric people, cliff dwellers, wandering tribes of Indians, the very remarkable remains of the old villages and temples of a people who lived in Arizona many years before Columbus discovered this continent. The book will have a large reading and be very interesting. It is beautifully bound, printed with clear type, on excellent paper and contains one hundred and thirty-three pages.

It can be had by addressing the author, Rev. W. H. Nelson, 307 Pacific Bldg., San Francisco, Calif.

A Saving For You.

A Southern publisher contracted for a large quantity of a specially made Bible at a low price, but they were unable to fulfil their contract, hence we bought a very large quantity of this stock and are giving you advantage of this saving.

The Bible has a large bourgeois type, is self-pronouncing, with chapter numbers in figures, references, concordance, subject index, questions and answers, and quite a number of very attractive Bible helps in the way of harmony of the Gospels, miracles, etc. It also has the words of Christ in red, a beautiful presentation page and family record, silk headbands and marker, red under gold edges, patent thumb index, bound in a beautiful smooth calf leather with overlapping edges. The size is 5½x8, a fraction over 1 inch thick, and the weight is 28 ozs. The Bible is very flexible. Published to sell at $8.00. We are offering them to you while they last at $3.95 each, postpaid.

You will possibly want several of these to give away at Christmas time, so we would suggest that you send in your order now, as the prospects are that the stock will soon be disposed of at this special price. In case you order one or more and are not more than pleased, you may return it and we will exchange it for something else, or we will refund your money, less the postage.

also I must lay up for a rainy day and old age." Certainly, brother, for "if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel." But while doing it, be careful to lay up what you can in the life beyond. Earth is uncertain, plans may miscarry, fond hopes crumble into ashes, but money prayerfully put into God's values is a sure investment. It will be there on the Glory shore, "when the heavens shall be rolled together as a scroll," when "the sun shall be turned into darkness," and "the kings of the earth" shall be calling to the mountains and rocks, "Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb."

God's call is ringing, "Bring ye all the tithes"—just as if his eye sees someone who is keeping back a part—"into the storehouse." And one of the strong reasons presenting itself as to the necessity of this duty,—"that there may be meat in mine house"—ample supply to feed the hungry of homeland, and a portion over to send to the starving of heathen countries. Ah, the multitudes of weary ones who would love to know our Christ, his power to save, to fill with the Spirit, to heal, to comfort hearts that mourn. Oh, the many who have not yet heard the news of our Lord's soon return. Isn't it an important matter, don't you think? Verily, more in it than what we know, for God throws down a challenge as it were, fairly entreates his followers to put to the test his words: "And prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Who is already fulfilling the desire of the Lord, haven't you found the promise true? A blessing descended, it overflowed, we wondered where it would stop. Glory be to Jesus! Nor, is the blessing alone for the spiritual, for hear again, "And I will rebuke the devourer (destroying worms, mildew, droughts, etc.) for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts." Neighbors will be wondering as to why it is that your crops are green and abundant, while theirs are scant or hurt by the "black rot," the blight, etc. The secret we learn from the words of the Lord, "them that honor me, I will honor." So let us one and all heed the command, "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse,"—first, laying in consecration our whole being upon God's altar—and the redeemed of "all nations shall call you blessed," the blest of the Lord, "for ye shall be a delightsome land," ("ye are God's husbandry," and God our Husbandman) saith the Lord of hosts.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS.

Mrs. Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

Text. "Give and it shall be given you, good measure." Luke 6:38.

Story. One fourth of July, Frankie said, "Mama, I can buy a flag for four cents and a beauty of a flag for seven cents." His mother put seven pennies in his hand and said, "Suppose you buy the four cent flag and put three pennies in your Jesus' Box?"

He stood in front of it a long time. Then he put on all the seven pennies and ran back to his mother, the happiest little boy. Afterward, a box of beautiful roses was given to him, and in it, a big "beauty of a flag," all silk. Wasn't that "good measure?"

Poem, Prayer.

"Heavenly Father, Earthly pleasure vainly call me, I would be like Jesus, Money never shall enthrall me, I would be like Jesus."

Be like Jesus, this my prayer, In the home, and everywhere, Be like Jesus, all day long, Be like Jesus, this my song.

Text. "Without Me ye can do nothing." John 15:5.

Story. A little girl said, "Mama, I am not going to pray any more. I can be good without Jesus." Her mother said, "If you will be good a whole week I will give you a dollar." "Oh, mama, that will be easy." But she was naughty every day. At the end of the week she said, "Mama, I will pray. There cannot anybody be good without Jesus, can they?"

Poem.

"I cannot be good alone, The waves run fast and high, And the fogs close chill around, And the light goes out in the sky, But I'll pray, and we two, Shall win by and by, Jesus and I."

Prayer.

Heavenly Father, I thank Thee Jesus will help me every day when I pray, to be good.

Text. "We know in part, and we prophesy in part." 1 Cor. 13:9.

Story. On a train, one hot day, a father was walking up and down the aisle with his baby who was crying. The passengers were weary and did not like it. One man spoke angrily, "Take that baby to its mother and stop its noise." "I can't take baby to her mother. She lies in her coffin in the baggage car." The man was sorry that he spoke cross. He did not know baby was crying for her dead mother.

Poem.

We know in part, we know in part, We cannot see, The weary, tired, and bleeding heart, So we should be, Kind, with never an angry dart.

Prayer.

Heavenly Father, I would be kind, and loving, and never speak a cross word to any one. Help me.

Text. "Behold the Lamb of God." John 1:29.

Story. A lad, sitting on a ladder was repairing the corner of a high building. The rope slipped and he fell. People ran, in horror, expecting to take up a mangled mass. But they found him unhurt. He fell on the body of a little lamb, grazing in the grass among the sharp stones. The lamb was crushed. It gave its little life for the lad. Jesus, the Lamb of God himself, laid down his life for us.

Poem.

The sinless Lamb upon the tree, Died to give himself for me; He took my place and once for all, Suffered that I might never fall.

Prayer.

"My life, my love, I give to Thee, Thou Lamb of God who died for me, O! may I ever faithful be, My Savior and my God!"

Text. "As one whom his mother comforteth so will I comfort you." Isa. 66:13.

Story. When I was a little girl, I had a beautiful puppy. But as he grew up, he was fierce; and a man came and dragged him away, to kill him. I wept. They laughed and made fun of me. I ran up to the top of the attic stairs and lay there angry and sobbing. Suddenly, my anger was gone, my tears were dried, and I ran down the stairs to my play. I did not know it then, but it was the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, that took away all my grief.

Poem.

"Joy of the desolate, light of the straying, Hope of the sorrowful, fadeless and pure, Here speaks the Comforter, tenderly saying, Earth hath no sorrow that Heaven cannot cure."

Prayer.

O boundless Love Divine, May this tongue of mine Tell to all those who pine, The Comforter is thine.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Illinois girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am in the seventh grade. I am twelve years old. My birthday is Feb. 16. I have one twin I found in reading The Pentecostal Herald. Have I another? My mother takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I belong to the M. E. Church lately. I have been going to the Christian Missionary Alliance. I am 58 inches tall, have brown hair, blue eyes and weigh 75 pounds. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with A and ends with E and has seven letters. I will send anybody my picture if they guess my middle name. If I have a twin please write to me. I will answer all letters. I will close now. Love to all.

Neva A. Green.

245 N. Rosewood, Kankakee, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Can't all you nice people move over a wee bit more so as I may stay with you a while? I promise to be real nice. I'm just another person who tries to love and be friends with every one, which I know all that belong to this club does, don't you? I have blue eyes, light brown wavy hair, fair complexion; do not know my exact weight and height, but it's not on the extreme either way. If some one would like to have the pleasure of corresponding with me, all right. There is lots of real fun in corresponding with some one far from you, and at places you know nothing about. Don't you all think so? How sad I feel when I see no letters from my state! Yes! the dear old state of Georgia, where the peaches and watermelons grow, how every one eats them here! All of you—Mary, Bertha, Virginia, John, Marvin, Jimmie, come on over and help us. There's plenty. There was a train wreck here August 10, about two miles from my home; everyone was excited over it and many people stayed up there late in the night waiting and watching the wreckers lift the trains and get them out of the way. All you that guess my second name I promise a letter. It begins with C and ends with R, has five letters in it. See who guesses right! There's lots of things I could tell you about our town and the things around it, but will save it for those that write me. My age is between fourteen and eighteen. Every one that writes will get an answer. Good by till the next time.

Rose Spink, Austell, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit a fourteen-year-old Kentucky girl into your happy band of boys and girls? I have been reading this paper for about a month and find it the most enjoyable spare-time amusement. Three years ago. I was saved in a revival meeting near here, and July 3, 1927, I joined the Methodist Church. I certainly have found joy and happiness in my life since I found Jesus and my advice to the unsaved is to get saved and see if you don't feel better, too. I think it is a mighty fine thing for the boys and girls to praise God by publishing it in our good paper. If we start while we're young we will come nearer to our Maker every day. I have red hair, grayish-blue eyes, fair complexion, and am rather large to my age. My birthday is July 6. Who's my twin? Write to me if you are the one. Who can guess my name? It begins with D and ends with Y, and has five letters. I will write a long letter to the person who guesses it. Ruth Shumway, I guess your name to be Anna. Am I correct? Boys and girls, let's wake up. Do you realize that The Pentecostal Herald is a paper from our own dear state? Send in your letters, Kentuckians. I would be glad to correspond with any of you boys and girls. I will answer all the letters I receive. With love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Dimple Ellis, Hustonville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an old Kentucky girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I enjoy reading the tenth page of The Herald. I have been reading it for quite a while. This is my first letter to The Herald. I will be in the eighth grade when school begins. I have blue eyes, amber hair, fair complexion and am fourteen years old. I have one sister and two brothers. My birthday is on the 23rd of December. Have I a twin? I would like to hear from all the cousins. I hope Mr. W. B. is out on a hike when this arrives.

Aleathia Dennison, Paris, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been a silent reader of page ten for a long time, but if the cousins will move over a bit I would like to join them this afternoon. I enjoy reading The Herald very much, especially page ten. I have been attending a tent meeting conducted by three of the Asbury boys. Their names were Lambert, Scott and Wilson. They closed the meeting Sunday night. Bessie, Foner, I certainly enjoyed reading your letter in The Herald of July 27. As I do not want to take up too much space I will close my letter. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Beatrice Austin, Eagle Rock, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Pentecostal Herald. I am thirteen years old and have brown eyes, brown hair, am five feet, two inches tall, and my weight 105 pounds. My birthday is Aug. 26. Have I a twin? My school began August 31. My mother takes The Pentecostal Herald. I like to read it, especially page ten. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with F and ends with S, and has seven letters in it. Hazel Abbott, I guess your age to be eighteen. If I am right please do not forget your promise. Mildred Ham, I guess your middle name to be Irene. I have the housework to do, for my mother has been in the hospital and my sister is at work. If this is printed I will write again and tell you cousins about the town I live in. I hope to hear from some of the cousins.

Edna F. Duke, 1309 Lawrence St., Old Hickory, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you please let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. My aunt takes The Herald. She is sick in bed all of the time. I am sure she would be glad if the Christian folks would remember her in their prayers. I am fourteen years of age, a freshman in high school. I am just now seeing the need of letters from Kentucky boys and girls. In next week's print I hope to see more letters from Kentucky, because I live in Kentucky. I am a member of the M. E. Church. Write me, cousins.

Mary J. Mitchell, Dumas, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I desire space in your columns, that I may testify to the goodness of our Savior. Ten years ago God wonderfully saved me from all sin; he took out the carnal mind that made me want to do wrong. From that day until now his grace has enabled me to live above sin. He gives me peace in my soul, that the world can't disturb. My soul feels like it is out on the ocean of God's love. I'm the mother of four children, all living. I'm thirty-two years old. In the morning I take my Bible and read and pray with the children. I think if we mothers would read and pray more with our children we would save ourselves lots of trouble and worry. I enjoy reading The Herald; the sermons are fine. I like a pure, clean

Mrs. C. M. Wadfield, Rt. 2, Danville, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wonder if you will let a girl from Iowa join your happy band of boys and girls? Wake up, Iowa boys and girls. We have taken The Herald for three and a half years, and surely like it. I was fifteen June 22. Who is my twin? I am a Sophomore in high school. I was converted in a camp meeting held in this city this summer. I surely thank God for it. I hope Mr. W. B. is riding with Mr. Broomstick when this letter arrives. With love to Aunt Bettie and all cousins.

Mary Louise Jahnke,

1122 N. Dodge St., Iowa City, Ia.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have read several of the letters and find them interesting and enjoyable. I am glad that so many of the cousins are Christians. I am inspired to higher and nobler ideals by some of the letters written by the cousins. I am fourteen years of age, have light hair and gray eyes, am about five feet tall and weigh eighty-five pounds. I am in the ninth grade. My birthday is November 18. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I am pleased to find that some of the cousins are fond of music, as I am. My mother gives me piano lessons and I take violin at Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C. My father is a Methodist minister. I have been keeping house for over a week, as my mother is sick with nervous trouble, but I think she will soon be up again. I shall appreciate all letters I receive and will try and answer them.

FALLEN ASLEEP

JARRETT.

Mrs. Maggie Jarrett, wife of Vernon Jarrett, of Pinch, W. Va., was born Dec. 25, 1852, and departed this life Sept. 11, 1927. She was the daughter of Rev. Darlington, a pioneer minister of the West Virginia Conference; a noble wife and mother of Christian character, having given her life to God in early girlhood, and lived a consistent Christian until God called her home. She was ill only a few hours, having had a second stroke of paralysis, which rendered one arm and limb helpless.

She leaves to mourn their loss a husband and five children, V. R. Jarrett and Era Cline, of Pinch, W. Va., B. J. Jarrett, of Phoenix, Ariz., Mrs. Ludie Melton, Eklview, W. Va., Mrs. Myrtle Thumm, Charleston, W. Va., a sister, Miss Ada Darlington, Charleston, W. Va., 27 grandchildren, 7 great-grandchildren, besides a host of friends.

The chair we know is vacant.
Her voice is hushed and still;
A place is vacant in the home,
Which never can be filled.

She has gone, yes, gone and left us;
Gone to that eternal home;
Where no sorrow, pain nor sickness,
Death and heartache cannot come.

"Farewell, friends, and my dear loved ones,
I can here no longer stay;
Let your life be spent for Jesus,
Then we'll meet again some day."
A Friend.

SISTER S. L. C. COWARD.

Sister Dora Jackson Coward, wife of Rev. S. L. C. Coward, of the Louisville Conference, died in Atlanta, Ga., August 19, 1927. Sister Coward was born in Rockvale, Tenn., Jan. 15, 1864. She was reared in a lovely Christian home. At the early age of seven, she was converted in her own home through the influence of her devoted parents. She was married to the Rev. S. L. C. Coward, October 16, 1889, by Rev. J. W. Cullom. She came as a bride to the parsonage at Canmer, Ky., where her husband had just been appointed by the Conference.

Soon after her marriage she saw it was her privilege to be wholly consecrated to the Lord and be filled with the Holy Spirit. She entered this experience and during her thirty-eight years in the ranks of the itinerant ministry she never wavered from the doctrine or experience. She was usually president of the Missionary Society in the church her husband served, teacher in the Sunday school and deeply concerned about the spiritual interests of the congregation.

At the conference last year, her husband took the superannuate relation and shortly afterwards they moved to Green Cove Springs, Fla., and occupied one of the houses so generously provided by Mr. Penny. It was generally believed that the mild climate would help her. However, she grew weaker. Notwithstanding, her failing strength, she joined the church in St. Augustine and was sent as a delegate to the District Conference. She loved the flowers and the calm breezes of that charming land.

On August 6, they went to Macon, Ga., and the doctor there having recommended the water of Indian Springs, they proceeded to that place, where she showed signs of improvement and was able to attend some of the services of the Camp Meeting. On August 17, she had a stroke of paralysis and was rushed to the Wesley Hospital, Atlanta, where she had the best of nursing and medical attention. Though she was conscious, she never spoke a word after the first stroke and she calmly fell to sleep and passed to her father in heaven on the morning of the 19th. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by the pastor of our church in Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Rev. Thomas Lackey. She was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery not many miles from the place of her birth.

Sister Coward had the mother's instinct, although providence never blessed her home with children of her own, she was rarely without someone who shared her motherly attentions.

She raised two orphan children from infancy. The girl died when she had come to womanhood, the boy, Andrew Coward, is now a prosperous real estate agent in Chicago. She and Brother Coward partially supported and helped to direct the education of seventeen young people. She came into my life when I was a small lad during her first year in the Louisville Conference. Since that time I have been in her home many times and sometimes had the benediction of her presence in my own home. She was one of the most unselfish persons that I have ever known. She literally gave her life for others. She was true to her husband, loyal to her church, devoted to her Savior and for thirty-eight years she traveled with her husband, she magnified her position and brought honor to that long line of uncrowned queens who have presided over our parsonage homes.

TAPS!

For Ex-Confederate son of Kentucky.
At his home, Wedington, Ark., John Peden Harris, Company A, the Fourth Kentucky, answered the last roll call Saturday evening at 9:30 o'clock.

Soon after his four years in the war—where he could often have reached out and gathered his cap full of bullets—Mr. Harris adopted the state of Arkansas, coming to the little border town of Cincinnati. But for the past forty years he has lived at the present home in Wedington, where he was a blacksmith until age prevented further work.

A charter member of the Masonic lodge there, and honorary member of the Order, he was laid to rest by that fraternity, Sunday afternoon, in the little family cemetery near Cincinnati; there to await "Reveille" of "The Great Day," when he will answer to the first call.

Mr. Harris, eighty-six and a half years of age, leaves his wife, Ophelia O. Harris, son, Earle W. Harris, of Jackson, Wyo., daughter, Myne Harris, and one brother, D. W. Harris, of San Dimas, Calif.

THOUGHTS FOR THINKERS.

Robert L. Selle, D.D.

It is better to break a bad promise than keep it. Think!

Some people look natural when they are acting silly. Think!

You will be blown away if you follow "every wind of doctrine." Think!

Some people are in bad company when they are alone with themselves. Think!

Disbelieving the Bible does not affect the truth which it contains. Think!

You may be better than some church members and then not have much to brag on. Think!

Some people never know how mean they are until they see their own disposition develop in their children. Think!

Your record will be as crooked as "a barrel of snakes" if you follow the way of least resistance persistently. Think!

Every bench in some churches ought to be a "mourner's bench" in use all the time by some members of the church. Think!

Daniel was safer in a den of lions than the King on his bed of ivory in the Royal Palace guarded by an army of soldiers. Think!

If bees could know that it would kill them to sting people, the stinging business would stop in short order in self defense. Think!

If Christian people would unite on earth as they will in heaven, the earth would be more like heaven and heaven more like the earth. Think!

If the modernist descended from a lower order of beings, as he says he did, it would be of interest to know how low the lowest of his ancestors were and how far below them he has descended. Think!

The Eighteenth Amendment will be the best observed and most respected plank in the platform of our Republic as soon as the booze buyer and drinker is given an equal penalty, with the maker and peddler, without pardon or parole. Think!

"PRIMITIVE" AND "MODERN."

What do you mean by "Primitive?"

And "Modern" will you tell?

And say, what is a "Radical,"

And "Supernatural"?

Tell me too, please, will you, what's one

You call a "Liberal"?

You may as well, while at it, tell,

What's meant by "heaven" and "hell."

Not that I think myself in clouds,

I think I know what's meant

By all these terms when used by men

Beginning some tenet,

But thousands of inquirers may

Be found where'er one go,

Who're trying hard to compass things

That they don't seem to know.

If I correctly understand

What's held by these two schools,

Of Commentators on God's Word,

Each calling 'tother fools;

'Tis this: One interprets the same

From his view-point forsooth,

Declaring there's no other way,

To make lucid the Truth.

In all ages, Truth has been Truth,

Same yesterday; today,

Forever it will be the same,

No changes mark its way.

But all of Truth has not been found,

Thus it may ever be,

Long as th's old world swings around

New sides of Truth we'll see.

The men of brains uncover some

New fact, 'most each fortnight;

Although the last one always was

It's just been brought to light.

Truth in the "Supernatural" realm

Is not solved on the one

Platform where "Natural" problems are;

That never can be done.

I should not be condemned because

I accept what I can

Not demonstrate in the same way,

I do a "Natural" plan.

All "Supernatural" facts must rest

On what the Great God saith,

One cannot demonstrate these things,

Must be taken by faith.

Fact is, all of this friction is Produced by different ways

Of reaching just exactly what

God's Book really conveys;

When all these harmonizers quit

And speculations cease,

And all this war of words shall end

We'll then have Christian peace.

A THRILLING BOOK.

It is an established fact that the training that a child receives in its very young years has a greater influence over his after life than any other period of his training.

Even a casual observer in religious circles will vouch for the fact that the truly evangelical spirit and the fervid missionary spirit go hand in hand. If you can arouse an interest in missions in a young person you have gone a long way towards fixing his faith in the evangelical gospel of the Christ.

One of the best ways to get a child interested in missions is to supply him with the story of some brave consecrated missionary who gave his life in the foreign field.

The life of John G. Paton has been read with interest by many hundreds of young people. He was fearless, going into fields which he knew abounded with danger. He was sincere, living a life of sacrifice among the inhabitants of the South Sea Islands. He was loving, and kind, continually answering the call of the needy brother in trouble. He was utterly consecrated, placing his life upon the altar of God's service in a remote part of the earth.

The stories of his many hair-breadth escapes from the treachery of the natives among whom he worked are extremely thrilling. They are concrete examples of God's answer to prayer. In recounting the many incidents of fidelity of the natives who were converted under his ministry we are impressed with the power of God in changing the whole nature of a human being. Wherever there are children they should have the Life of John G. Paton. It will inspire them to better lives. It will impress them with the need of the mission fields. It will draw them closer to God.

Send one new subscription to The Pentecostal Herald at the regular price of $1.50, and 25c extra to cover the cost of packing and postage, and we will send you a copy of "John G. Paton, Hero of the South Seas." The Herald and the book do not have to go to the same address.

The price of the book is 75c and can be had from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

Dr. H. C. Morrison's New Book.

The title of this new book from the pen of its gifted author is not only very suggestive, but runs true to the title to the end. If any one has rejected the glorious doctrine of the pre-millennial coming of our Lord, because he thought it a pessimistic teaching, if he will read Dr. Morrison's new book, unbiased, he will find that the teaching of the pre-millennial coming of Jesus is the most optimistic view of life and the world held by any class of people.

There are some very thrilling, thought-provoking statements made in the last two chapters, and contrary to many books this one reaches its climax in the closing chapters. It is well worth the price, $1.00.

Very truly,

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson III.—October 16, 1927.

Subject.—Elijah in Naboth's Vineyard. 1 Kings 21:5-10, 16-20.

Golden Text.—Be sure your sin will find you out. Numbers 32:23.

Time.—About B. C. 900.

Place.—Ahab's palace in Jezreel, and Naboth's vineyard nearby.

Introduction.—As far as Elijah is concerned, we need no introduction to this lesson; for we lose sight of him after he throws his mantle over the shoulders of Elisha, until we enter into the 21st chapter where we find our lesson today. It will be well, however, for us to keep up with the movements of Ahab. Benhadad king of Syria attempted twice to make war against Israel, but was divinely defeated in both instances. A prophet, his name is not given, told Ahab to number the young men of the princes of the people to lead out against the Syrians; and while Benhadad and his officers were drinking themselves drunk, these chosen young men lead the army of Israel to battle, and completely routed the Syrians. The same prophet warned Ahab to get ready for a second battle; for, said he, "at the return of the year the king of Syria will come up against thee" again. Again the Syrian army was completely routed; but Ahab compromised, and spared the life of Benhadad; for which cause Jehovah sent another prophet to him with this stern message: "Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man whom I appointed to utter destruction, therefore thy life shall go for his life, and thy people for his people." Of course, Ahab went home "heavy and displeased." Wherefore we may remember that for every disobedience there is a commensurate punishment.

Ahab's effort to buy Naboth's vineyard, as recorded in the first four verses of chapter twenty-one, is a bit amusing. There was nothing wrong in his wishing to purchase the property, or to trade another vineyard for it; and Naboth was perfectly justifiable in his family pride in not wishing to part with the estate left him by his father; but when Ahab went home pouting and crying like a spoiled child, the matter grew ridiculous. Just look at him: "He laid him down upon his bed, and turned away his face, and would eat no bread." Too bad that such a worthless little imp should be king over a great people. Maybe they did not bury him deep enough when he died, for it is certain that there have been some more very small, trashy rulers since his funeral.

Comments on the Lesson.

5. Jezebel to the rescue. Why is thy spirit so sad, that thou eatest no bread?—He hung down his lower lip, and would have no dinner; wherefore Jezebel wished to know what he was pouting about. One needs no dignity in studying the case; for the entire transaction is low, ridiculous and immensely dirty. Ahab needed what some one terms a "Pout-house."

6. Because I spake unto Naboth the Jezreelite, and said unto him, Give me thy vineyard for money; or else, if it please thee, I will give thee another vineyard for it. "Boo-hoo!" I wish I had a little of Dr. H. C. Morrison's faculty of portrayal; for I would like to paint a picture of Whining Ahab and angry Jezebel. "What did he say that has hurt you so much?" "He answered, I will not give thee my vineyard."

7. Jezebel goads him. Dost thou now govern the kingdom of Israel?—He certainly did not look much like a king. Arise, and eat bread, and let thine heart be merry: I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite. —Satan owned and controlled Jezebel from her head to her heels. She was thoroughly bad, and ready to do his bidding at a moment's notice. Note how quickly she decides, or determines, what to do with Naboth.

8. So she wrote letters in Ahab's name, and sealed them with his seal. —Now the transaction becomes double. When he permits her to use his name and the royal seal, he becomes as guilty of murder as she was. She sent these letters to Naboth's most prominent neighbors, commanding them to carry out her orders written in the name of the king.

9. Proclaim a fast.—Thus declaring that something terrible is taking place among the people. Set Naboth on high among the people.—Charge him with crime, and bring him to a public trial for his life.

10. Set two men, sons of Belial before him, to bear witness against him. —The witnesses must be such as would not scruple to lie; and their testimony was taught them beforehand. They were to swear: "Thou didst blaspheme God and the king." Here we see the utter devilry of this woman. She despised Jehovah and his law; but in order to destroy Naboth, she invokes the commandment given to Moses (Deut. 17:2-7), as though she were a true follower of Jehovah, and has two lying idolaters swear away his life. She and the devil combined could not have made the crime any worse. And then, in obedience to the law of Moses, the two lying witnesses had to be the first to cast stones at him.

The omitted verses (11-15) tell how Jezebel's orders were carried out to the very letter; and when the report was brought to her, she said to the sulking Ahab: "Arise, take possession of the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, which he refused to give thee for money: for Naboth is not alive, but dead."

16. That pleased Ahab; so he went "down to the vineyard of Naboth the Jezreelite, to take possession of it." No money needed now, and no need to swap another vineyard for it—just take it, and rob the family. Crime never grows better, but worse.

17. The word of the Lord came unto Elijah the Tishbite.—He did not stop Jezebel from slaying innocent Naboth; but he is going to make her and Ahab suffer for the diabolical crime. He will require Naboth's blood at their hands. "God is not mocked."

18. Arise, go down to meet Ahab king of Israel.—Some have charged Elijah with cowardice; but he never failed to move when Jehovah commanded him. He met Ahab in Naboth's vineyard, according to God's appointment.

19. Thus saith the Lord, Hast thou killed, and also taken possession?—Note that God charges Ahab with murder, just as though he had shed Naboth's blood with his own hands. He could not hide behind Jezebel, but was as guilty as she was. Thus saith the Lord, In the place where dogs licked the blood of Naboth shall dogs lick thy blood, even thine.—All right, Ahab; you have had your day of sin and shame. Jehovah's sentence has gone forth against you; and when the appointed hour arrives, the pariah dogs will be on hand ready for blood.

20. And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O mine enemy?—But Elijah was not his enemy. He would have been his best friend, if he could have led him to repentance and righteousness. The prophet was God's messenger of warning to a sinning king, just as Nathan was to king David. Elijah answers tersely: "I have found thee." Then, because Ahab had sold himself to do evil in the sight of God, Elijah delivers his message: "Behold, I will bring evil upon thee, and will take away thy posterity.... and will make thy house like the house of Jeroboam the son of Nebat...for the provocation wherewith thou hast provoked me to anger, and made Israel to sin." But what of Jezebel? "The dogs shall eat Jezebel by the wall of Jezreel." How far shall this punishment go? "Him that dieth of Ahab in the city the dogs shall eat; and him that dieth in the field shall the fowls of the air eat." That is complete, fully rounded out. Ahab, meet thy doom; and rest assured that Jezebel and all thy posterity will meet theirs in full. Sin pays, but the coin is bad. "The wages of sin is death."

YELLVILLE, ARKANSAS.

Since my last regular report of our good camp at Warnock Springs Camp, Magnolia, Ark., August 4-14, I have been with the Congregational Methodist folk at Yellville, Ark., in an eighteen-days' meeting.

The M. E., South and Baptist churches failed to lend any co-operation to these Congregational Methodist folk who stand foursquare for the blessing of entire sanctification as a work of grace subsequent to regeneration. We will in no way attempt to swell this report and make any false statements relative to a great meeting for there was no great meeting at this time. A few souls were blessed. One dear sister who had been seeking sanctification for years entered into this beautiful experience, and out of the meeting have come such developments that will mean an established Holiness Undenominational Camp Meeting Association to spread Scriptural Holiness in this great northern section of Arkansas

"THE CRIMSON STREAM."

A Devotional Sermon on the Blood

The first and perhaps the principal appeal of this new title is the fact that it fills a real need in our book list. No subject is of more vital importance, no tenet of orthodoxy is more assiduously assailed by the modernists than that of atonement by the blood of Christ.

Read the following excerpt.

"This splendid little book, 'The Crimson Stream,' is presenting to the lovers of truth, the believers in the fundamentals of the faith once delivered to the saints, a publication full of interest, light, and essential facts bearing upon a right attitude toward God, the Bible, and personal salvation. He has placed emphasis where it is most needed. It should be widely scattered and read by thousands of honest and earnest seekers after truth and righteousness such as will stand the test of time and eternity." —R. T. Williams.

This booklet is unusually attractive, bound in buff colored, imitation leather cover with two-color design.

32 pages; large, easy-to-read print.

among these beautiful Ozarks. Let all the dear people pray for this, and for me, that I may be divinely guided in the perfecting such plans and the securing such workers for next summer that will result in the anticipated plan at the close of the next meeting.

I am now arranging my slate for fall and winter meetings. If you are, as pastors or officials, desiring full salvation revivals running from two to four weeks, and desire my services I will be glad to hear from you. The editors of this paper can vouch for me. My terms are the Golden Rule.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Otto R. Eggers: "I want to get in touch with an evangelist who requires the services of a musician playing a slide trombone and leading singing. I have been playing in church and Sunday school orchestra and have had experience in band and orchestra work. Best of references can be furnished, if desired. My address is 906 Government St., Baton Rouge, La."

A. S. and R. S. Beck: "We moved our tent from Edmonson County to Metcalf County. This was our third meeting at this place and the tent was full from the beginning. We preached to over 10,000 people during the meeting and had some old-time shouting, conviction and conversions. We were invited back next year. We are now at Campbellsville, Ky., in a meeting and the crowds and interest are increasing. We take courage and press on. God has rewarded our labors in the salvation of many precious souls."

Our Southeast Holiness camp meeting was held July 15-24, with Rev. K. H. Bird as leader in the preaching, and Prof. Peacock as song leader. This was our third camp and we are encouraged to believe that it is firmly established and has a bright future. The preaching and singing were good and highly appreciated. A number were at the altar and we had some refreshing seasons from the Lord. Our superintendent, Rev. P. N. Green, rendered valuable service. Our workers for next year are Rev. John F. Owen, Rev. Bird, K. H. Peacock; the date of meeting is July 16-25. We are planning for a winter camp, the announcement of which will appear later.

E. L. Zachman: "September 20th, a revival meeting of two weeks was closed at Wellsville, Ohio, which brought new life into the church, and meant much to the good of the community. Seventy-six souls bowed at the altar either to be saved or sanctified. The meetings were well attended as a whole, seven united with the church with others to follow. Edna Beougher, the girl evangelist of Logan, Ohio, preached the old-fashioned gospel in demonstration of the Spirit. Presiding Elder W. H. McLaughlin, of Canton District, rendered excellent service for several nights in the meeting. To God be all the praise."

W. A. Grogg: "The West Virginia Conference closed Sept. 26. I have been appointed Conference Evangelist for this year. I am now making up my slate. Any brother who wants an old-time revival can communicate with me. My address is 605½ 11th St. West, Huntington, W. Va."

A BIBLE STUDY COURSE

It is highly desirable to read the Bible through from Genesis to Revelation.

A cumulative knowledge of the Scriptures, so valuable in education, is secured and a true perspective of religious history and truth is obtained.

The portions that consist entirely of names and subject matter, wholly devoid of interest to the average reader, are omitted from the Study Course.

The Course is divided into thirty-six lessons and gives both the beginning and ending of each lesson; also the beginning and ending of passages or portions to be read.

SUMMER ITINERARY.

Just a little report in order to let my friends know of my activities in the work of the Lord. I was with Rev. C. C. Tanner, of Clay City, Ky., in July in which the Lord was with us in saving and sanctifying power. Several prayed through and nine souls united with the church.

From Clay City I ran over to Central Holiness Camp for one day and heard some great messages from Dr. Wimberly, Dr. Morrison, and others; then over to Riverside camp, at Robinson, Maine. This camp is run by The Reformed Baptist Conference of Maine, Nova Scotia, N. B., and other provinces of Canada. A fine lot of holiness people. It is very helpful to our evangelists to preach twice a day for ten days to a whole conference of preachers, realizing they are noticing very keenly every sentence and illustration, and then when the fire falls to see the preachers rise to their feet with the glory on their faces, and the altar filled with hungry souls. That's what happened. It was a glorious camp.

At the close of the camp, in company with Bro. S. B. Charlton, of West Somerville, and Rev. John Goal, of the Eastern Nazarene College, we had a fine automobile trip to Boston, a distance of four hundred miles. On the following day we took in the historical high spots in and around Boston and left late in the day by Ocean Steamer for New York City. I stayed there six hours, then took the train for Washington, one of the most beautiful cities in the world. I took great delight in seeing the wonderful things of this city again. I was amazed to see the government employees at the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, running off paper money at the rate of eight millions per day. It really looked cheap, but I tell you it does not look cheap when a hard-pressed evangelist tries to pull a hundred or two out of a tight-fisted church or camp meeting crowd.

From Washington I went down to old Forest Lawn Camp in North Carolina. The camp is situated in a beautiful grove of tall pines from which some tar is extracted, but not in sufficient quantities to keep the heel from slipping, because we had several backsliders to deal with; but by the grace of God they got back and are now on their way rejoicing. The Lord gave us a great camp. At the close of the camp we made a fast run for London, Ky., to meet the Kentucky Conference in annual session. It was said this was the most harmonious and best conference held for years in old Kentucky.

I am at home for two days, then I go to Rev. Simcox in Grinnell, Ia., Sept. 15-30. I have October open for some church, wherever God chooses.

STOP! READ! ACT!

DO YOU KNOW that there are many people right in your own community who do not know that there is such a paper as THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, who would be glad to know of it?

DO YOU KNOW that THE HERALD is a weekly blessing to thousands of our less fortunate brothers and sisters who are unable to get out to church on Sunday as you and I do?

DO YOU KNOW that nearly every week THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD carries a holiness sermon to many people who never hear one preached from a pulpit?

DO YOU KNOW that there is not a better, more wholesome sixteen pages of holiness reading matter, for the whole family, than in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD?

DO YOU KNOW that if you, as one of the present great family of readers will send THE HERALD into four new homes it's influence will be increased fourfold?

DO YOU KNOW that it is your great privilege to join with us in the attempt we are making to preach scriptural holiness to all men everywhere?

DO YOU KNOW that you can send THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD to some friend for the next three months for 25c?

EVANGELIZING A GENERATION.

By The Editor.

MEN can no more inherit religion than they can inherit an education. The son of a university president, born upon the campus, must learn his A. B. C.'s like the son of a peasant, born in a hut, whose parents cannot read. No doubt there is much in good environment, but salvation is a personal matter. Each individual must be born again, must come into personal contact with the Saviour and experience a change of heart, of nature, so radical that our Lord Jesus can find no better figure of speech than to say "Ye must be born again."

* * * *

Each generation needs the presence, teaching and ministry of preachers of the Gospel who believe the Bible, who love the souls of men, who have implicit faith in the Lord Jesus and his power to save; men who are not hungering and thirsting after ecclesiastical office or mere scholarship for selfish motives, but who have found the Lord and who long for souls and who are willing to take time to teach the people the things of God, the truths of the Bible, the necessity of repentance and saving faith in Jesus Christ.

* * * *

However pious a passing generation may have been, however devout the parents, however religious the atmosphere of the home, the children cannot inherit from their parents a state of salvation. They need to be carefully taught, prayerfully catechized and instructed in the things of God. Above all, they must be brought to personal repentance and saving faith in the Lord Jesus; they must know him in the forgiveness of their sins, the regeneration of their souls and the witness of the Spirit. We must not suppose for a moment that the children of pious parents do not need careful instruction in the fundamentals of the religion of the Lord Jesus, a personal faith in him and a personal knowledge of the forgiveness of sins.

* * * *

One of the greatest needs of any generation is a holy, consecrated, fearless ministry who, filled with love for God and human souls, will not only preach the Gospel, but will teach with great care and kindness the central truths of our holy Christianity. Generation after generation, as the centuries go forward, must be taught to fear God, to keep his commandments, to seek the salvation of the Lord and to find in Christ a personal Saviour. Under no circumstances must we permit ourselves to suppose that the best of families can hand down to their posterity saving grace. No, the individual must know the truth and seek the Lord and find Jesus as a personal Saviour. We must not permit ourselves to get the notion that, in what is called good society and among the educated, mere human culture can take the place of regenerating power. We must stand firmly by the teaching of our Lord and Saviour for he declares that men must individually be born again and that, without holiness no man shall see the Lord. The faith and experience of the preacher grow as he communes with God, and his own soul is refreshed as he proclaims and inculcates these great Bible truths.

SPEAKING OF THAT REVIVAL ISSUE OF THE HERALD.

We desire very much to have contributions from our most successful evangelists, north and south, east and west, Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Nazarenes, Pilgrims—anybody and everybody that loves God and delights in revivals of religion that arouse the spiritual life of the church and bring immortal souls to Christ. Get busy and send us in a contribution, tell us how you have wrought successfully in revival work. Tell us what the preacher ought to preach about, how the people should pray, what the young people of the church should do, how the women members should co-operate. Tell us about the advantages of cottage prayer meetings. Help us to bring out a great Revival Issue that will instruct, enthuse, and stir the people up on the subject of revivals that shall lead to an awakening and the salvation of souls.

H. C. Morrison.

An Open Letter to Uncle Sam.

Uncle Sam,
Washington, D. C.
My dear Uncle:

I do not believe you have a nephew in all these United States who thinks more of you and is more loyal to you in every way than myself. I sometimes find myself a little disposed to find fault with you about a few matters, but then try to restrain myself, remembering that you have a great family of nephews and nieces to look after and that on the whole you are busily engaged directing the affairs of the greatest and best government in all the world.

But I am wondering if you are doing your whole duty in the enforcement of our Prohibition laws? It seems to me you are a bit too quiet. There is a fearful state of lawlessness in the land and I doubt if we are able to restore respectable order until you bring to bear the full force of your powers in the apprehending and punishing of the entire bootleg fraternity from those who are connected with the largest deals to the hip pocket flask. I do not want to appear censorious, but I can't believe that you are anywhere in the neighborhood of doing your very best. I clipped from the daily press recently a statement by Mr. Thompson, which I wish you to read. This clipping dates back to December 5th of last year, but the conditions described here have not been bettered:

"Captain Jesse L. Thompson, recent Prohibition Administrator of New Jersey, who was transferred on his own request, to a Western district, is quoted in the current number of the Outlook as having said that it was impossible for him to stop bootlegging in New Jersey, because he 'couldn't get past the higher-ups.'

"Captain Thompson had sixteen agents and could trust only three, he said. The others, he told his superiors, 'were under the control and domination of the wet forces of New Jersey, and were receiving their orders from that organization rather than from the officials of the Prohibition Department, and in addition to that, certain emoluments and remuneration.'

"The former administrator wrote Commissioner Roy A. Haynes that agents were used by political parties as a 'lever' to collect campaign funds, and that they destroyed evidence, gave warnings of impending raids and aided in beer shipments. He said he asked for dismissal of these men, but nothing was done.

"When I came to New Jersey,' he said, 'there were 4,000 cases untried. I had them all nollod pros. Now another 5,000 have mounted up. If a case is made today under present procedure, it will not be reached on the docket before 1929.'

Do you believe that a condition of this kind can be permitted to exist, that droves of criminals can be dismissed without trial, sentence or punishment, without encouraging crime of every kind? Does this not look like a breakdown of the administration of justice? Is the government not surrendering to the most worthless, lawless, dangerous element in society when thousands of criminals, who trample upon the federal and state laws, can be turned loose to laugh in the face of justice and the representatives of the law. My dear Uncle, to my mind these are matters for most serious consideration, and I believe that you should feel yourself responsible to God, the world, and the nation for this condition of things and bestir yourself to enforce law, to punish criminals and to give assurance to the people that you are able, efficient and determined to bring the guilty to justice and to see that the violators of the Prohibition law are made to feel the strong hand of authority.

I have been wondering if you saw an editorial in Ford's magazine, "The Dearborn Independent"? For fear it escaped your notice, I am printing it here:

THE ANDREWS ATTITUDE?

"It is impossible, of course, to know whether Mrs. Lincoln C. Andrews speaks officially for her husband. That is largely a matter for them to determine. When, however, Mrs. Andrews in a newspaper interview, expresses certain views as being those of her husband, then the matter becomes one of public importance. Particularly is this so when the statements expressed are of so extraordinary a nature as those attributed to Mrs. Andrews by the Chicago Tribune. She is quoted by that newspaper as declaring:

NOTES ON AN OCEAN VOYAGE.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

AILING the seas is not what it used to be. When Wesley and Asbury came across the Atlantic it was a matter of a month or more. Now one can go across in fast ships in five days.

We always prefer the slower ships as we love the ocean and the nine or ten days we spend on shipboard are none too long for us.

The S.S. Arabic in which we sailed is a ship of 16,786 tons and 590 feet in length and we have on board nearly 500 passengers, besides the 350 or more constituting the crew. A goodly number of the officers are Belgians. The executive officers are mostly British. The ship has accommodations for over one thousand passengers but the immigration laws have so reduced the steerage trade of the ocean liners that it is seldom a ship is full to capacity of passengers.

A large percentage of our passengers are American Legion delegates to the Paris Convention which takes place Sept. 19-24. Ten years ago the U. S. A. entered the World War. This the Tenth Anniversary, is being made the occasion of a pilgrimage back to France and Flanders by the soldier boys and their wives and relatives. Many of them go back to visit their old battlefields; some go to visit the graves of buddies who made the supreme sacrifice for flag and country. Paris will be seen by a vast crowd of Americans during this Convention. Some of us who have been in Paris many times before will note vast differences between the city now and in 1918 during the War. We had often read of "Gay Paree" but it was not so when we were there in 1918-1919. Gloom and fear and suspense filled the atmosphere till November, 1918. At night everything was darkened because of the night bombing by the Germans. We were in the city one night when the bombing was going on. We witnessed some distressing scenes. At one time the Germans were within 25 miles of the city and the Government headquarters were moved to Bordeaux on the Coast. We recall when our Division (the Third) was on the way to the front in June, 1918, we were side-tracked for a while and it looked as though we were to go to the defense of Paris in that terrific June drive which was Germany's last great effort to beat the Allies. Orders, however, changed and we were ordered to the Marne sector where my Regiment (the 38th) won that famous tribute from General Pershing in his official write-up of the Battle of Chateau Thierry.

Our second day at sea was Sunday. The weather from the beginning was just glorious for a sea voyage—the ocean was as quiet as a pond. The Sunday morning service was a striking Church of England Episcopal affair and consisted entirely of liturgy without a sermon. It was not without real merit, however, as the hymns sung and the Te Deum and prayer and psalms recited had at least a worshipful effect and reminded the people that it was the Sabbath Day and a day of worship.

Some religious services, however are so very formal and so void of spirit that we are reminded of little Mary who went to church with her grandmother. The preliminaries were very dull and uninteresting to the child; finally, came the morning offering. Mary put in the penny her grandmother gave her for the collection, but after she had done so she whispered to her granny: "Grandma, what do we get for our money?"

On Sunday afternoon we held a Memorial Service on deck. We were called upon to preside and make the introductory address. It was rather unique to find a Methodist preacher, an Episcopal Rector and a Roman Catholic Priest on the program of a Sunday afternoon service. It was nothing new to us, however, because in the Army and on the battlefields we frequently had a Catholic Priest as our coadjutor in our Regiment. It was, indeed, a rather odd circumstance when I was serving the Seventh Regiment in Germany that one Sunday my appointments to preach were made by a Catholic priest who was at that time chief chaplain of the Regiment. In the Army we get used to all kinds of conditions and circumstances.

To return again to our Memorial Service. It was held in memory of our soldiers and sailors who died during the War. After the address some of the ladies scattered flowers upon the ocean waves as a token of our loving remembrance of those who gave their lives in the War. On Sunday night we held a song service and an address was given by Mrs. Frazier, of the Tennessee Legislature.

Referring again to the boys who died in the war there will be a large number of visitors to the American cemeteries in France during the time of the Paris Convention. Of the 78,734 who died, 46,284 were returned to U. S. A. for reburial; some were sent to other countries and about 30,592 lie buried in France, England, and Belgium. The cemeteries are at the following places: Romagne, Mountfaucon 14,134 graves. This cemetery is about 23 miles from Verdun. 4,143 soldiers are buried at St. Mihiel cemetery, west of Thiaucourt about 20 miles from Nancy. At Fere-En-Tardenois cemetery about 18 miles from Chateau Thierry, there are 5,962 graves. Near Belleau, 6 miles northwest of Chateau Thierry, are 2,212 graves. At or near Bony, 11 miles from St. Quentin, are 1,830 graves (mostly 27th and 30th Division men). At Suresnes, near Paris, are 1,507 graves. At Waergem, Belgium, are 367 graves, where men of the 37th, 91st, 27th and 30th Divisions fell when fighting in Flanders. At Brookwood, England, 28 miles from London, is another cemetery where 437 lie buried. Later on after a visit to some of those cemeteries I will refer to this subject again. Suffice to say at this time that these graves are taken care of in a most beautiful and perfect manner by the American Graves Registration Service in connection with the Quartermasters Corps, United States Army.

To return again to the ship and the voyage, we have been fortunate in having most delightful weather keeping most all the passengers in good condition to enjoy the ocean. Often the monotony is broken by a distant sail heaving in sight. The other morning the "Majestic" came in view. She is reputed to be the largest ship afloat. This morning a school of porpoises tried to keep up with our ship. This morning the radio told of the airship bearing three passengers which left America for Rome sending out the S.O.S. calls. We are wondering at this writing if some ship picked them up. The Atlantic Ocean is a big affair, but when we think that scores of ships are passing Eastward and Westward upon its bosom night and day it seems sad that aeroplanes in distress cannot be picked up before doom settles down upon them.

The regularity and order aboard an ocean liner is wonderful. Yesterday at an unlikely hour the bugle blowed. When we came out of our stateroom we saw the stewards lined up with life belts on and with fire hose in position. We asked the meaning and were told it was fire drill and boat drill. In case of fire or accident every man has his place, every boat has its assignments of crew and passengers. How different though to some of us who sailed during the war. It was that terrible winter of 1917-18. For several days as we approached the Irish coast we had to wear life belts night and day and were not allowed to undress at night. The terrible submarine was then the menace of the seas and night and day we were to stand ready for every and any emergency.

The safety and security of ocean travel now is surprisingly safe and some steamship lines have a record of the most exceptional success and safety for its ships for many decades. There is a striking difference though in American ships and European ships. On the American ships there are no bars and no liquor is sold. On the British and other European and Asiatic ships they still run the wretched liquor business on board and as soon as they get outside of the usual limits of United States territory the bar is opened up and drinking begins. Of course great numbers of Americans who fight Prohibition at home are glad to take advantage of the bar on board and for the first few days they fill up to everybody's disgust. The novelty of the thing though soon works off and they straighten up.

To travel on an ocean liner for ten days gives one an opportunity to study in various fields. Strange what people one meets with, from what ends of the earth people come and to what extremes of the globe they are going. As we meet the different ones from all corners of the globe we are reminded of Shakespeare's words:

"All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players;
They have their exits and their entrances;
And one man in his time plays
Many parts."

Very naturally fellowships pick up aboard ship, in a sense you are one big, large family eating at the same table and enjoying things generally as members of one immense household. Conversation becomes easy and it is not hard to find out where folks are from and whither going.

I was talking to little Frances the other day. She is only six years of age and she was telling me she had been in Singapore and Manila and was now on her way from Washington to Belgium and next to Paris to spend the winter. A Scotch lady and Mrs. Ridout spend much time together. She has the real Scotch accent and pronunciation. She is just now completing a trip around the world. Here is another little girl of mine, Patsy, who is going with her parents to the Belgian Congo, Africa. Here is a Catholic priest with black whiskers; he is very quiet and retiring, yet in conversation very affable; he is of the Franciscan order and is on his way to missionary work in India. Here is an orthodox Jew, with the orthodox whiskers and hat and he is very earnest in going through his devotions out of his Hebrew book. Here is an idiosyncrasy from Kansas; he came aboard with a big wig such as Indian medicine men are apt to use, and fixed to the wig a big sunflower. Next he appears like a respectable citizen, minus wig and sunflower, but filled up with all manner of decorations. They say he is a Convention tramp. This time he goes to England then to Paris and finally winds up in Germany to hunt up his forefathers. He has everything down very exactly even the geographical bearings of his great-grandfather's house. Here is a business man from Tennessee who showed a keen interest in the fire drill the other day because he is Captain of the fire brigade in his own town; and by the way, he comes from some town which with a population of 3,000 people, has a hundred thousand dollar hotel, has its own power and light plant and can sell electricity to housewives as low as two cents! We have a host of Doctors on board, including a Major of the Medical Corps U. S. Army.

A great many of the states are represented. Florida, with its yellow decorations; Kansas, with its sunflower; Connecticut, with its Yankees; Pennsylvania, with its Dutch; New York, with its jazz; Boston, with its vivacity; Indiana, with its seriousness; Kentucky, with its religion and wit; Nevada, with its far-away look; North Carolina, with its mountain looks. Indeed, as we meet the men and women on board from the various states we think of Cobb's description of some of them: Louisiana, reminding you of the magnolia; South Carolina, the Tea rose; California, the hollyhock; New Hampshire, the peony; Vermont, the rock pink; Arizona, the cactus; Wyoming, a clump of sage.

We are now at an extreme point of geographical and financial interest. As the end of the journey hastens on everybody is studying maps and time tables and changing their American money into pounds, shillings and pence of English currency and into francs of France. Our ship stops at Plymouth, England, Cherbourg, France, and Antwerp, Belgium. A great many disembark at Plymouth to tour England and especially to visit London. Here we leave the ship to spend a few days in Bristol and Clifton (where the famous George Muller Faith Orphanage is). Then some of the passengers will get off at Cherbourg and go direct to Paris; others will leave ship at Antwerp and spend some days in Belgium visiting Brussels, Waterloo and points in Germany.

Europe is a small country compared to the United States. The whole of the British Isles could be put into one of our average States, and all of Europe could be put in a state of lesser dimensions than Texas. The distance from London to Paris is only about 210 miles; from Paris to Brussels 192 miles; from Brussels to Cologne (Germany) 114 miles; from Paris to Milan 400 miles; from Paris to Madrid less than 1,000 miles; from London to Shakespeare's country, (Stratford on Avon) is less than 100 miles; and to Oxford only 85 miles.

As I write night has thrown her mantle over ocean and ship. Away from the port side of the ship is seen a silvery radiance upon the horizon. cast there by the moon which is struggling through clouds to make splendid the whole of the horizon. A ship appears with bright lights at the mast top and a striking red from the side. At once communication is set up by light signalling. The two ships are talking to one another. To those of us who are looking on, the blinking of the lights means mystery; we do not understand; but the men on the bridge know exactly what the lights are saying. Maybe the ship yonder has no radio and they are asking, 'What's the news!' It is astonishing now the ease with which one can get in touch with the ends of the earth on board a regular liner. Standing at the purser's window yesterday a young woman appeared and asked if there was a telegram for her. Yes, there was. The wireless had done it. Now every morning we have posted up the main points of news from all parts of the world. Truly we are in an age of marvels. Shakespeare in his "Midsummer Nights Dream," makes one of his characters say, "I'll put a girdle round the earth in forty minutes." Assuredly the radio has done it. What the poets dreamed and sang about men of science have brought to pass as realities; and thank God, some of the scientists, Dr. Michael Pupin, for instance—are seeing God behind all the mysteries and marvels of that thing we call science.

I must now conclude this sketch. As I sit in the Red Room writing I can feel the mighty heart beat of the mighty engines whose energy is driving the great ship along. We have traveled on the average 360 miles a day. Yesterday we made 379; in another thirty-six hours we shall be sighting land and then we shall be for a week or more in King George's domain of old England, living under the Union Jack of the British Empire.

A DEFENSE OF JONAH.

Rev. P. F. Asher, B. D.

IMMEDIATELY the Smith family arrived home from church on Sunday morning, the mother was asked by Molly, aged 8, "Mother, why do we go to church?" For the moment dear Mrs. Smith was non-plussed, but, after getting her breath, she replied very sweetly, "To hear about Jesus, of course, my dear." "Well," rejoined Molly, "we don't hear much about him do we, mamma?" Truly "out of the mouth of babes and sucklings" proceedeth great wisdom, but alas, that it should be possible for a man who claims to be "called of God" to be indicted in this manner, by one of the sweetly reasonable little children whom our Lord blessed. I imagine that had we been present at the service of the church in question we should probably have heard a so-called sermon (the text conspicuous by its absence) on "Bobbie Burns," "Honor the flapper" or "What kind of shoes do you wear." These subjects are alright for street conversation, but we do not go to church to hear discourses about Burns, flappers, or shoes.

Do you feel the sacred flame within you being fanned or quenched as you read these titles, friendly reader? Realize then the impression made upon a church-member's mind as he or she reads these subjects, which I have actually seen advertised. Such topics may be good food for lectures, but they certainly are not worth the dignified name of sermon. When will the voice of the pulpit be heard once more announcing salvation through Jesus Christ our Lord and Redeemer? When will preachers stop preaching and reading such sacrilegious junk? Only I suggest when they learn to love their Bibles more, and seek diligently therein for its "pearls of great price."

WHY IGNORE JONAH?

Previous to my entering the ministry, I was a lay preacher. The past months have only served to strengthen a conviction that I entered the sacred ministry with, i. e., that the Bible is not used enough by preachers. I indict the ministry of preaching for ignoring certain parts of the word of God. Never in my life have I heard a sermon explaining or based on the Book of Jonah. Is it any wonder, therefore, that this book is being treated by our church-members and so-called Christians with increasing cynicism and unrestrained ridicule? In other words, the laity have interpreted the silence of the preachers on this book as undisputable evidence of its untrustworthiness. Professor William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, a gentleman who writes beautiful English literature, in a volume entitled, "Human Nature in the Bible," absolutely ignores the Book of Jonah. Mr. Basil King, in a recent volume named, (unwisely) "The Bible and Common Sense," states that the writer of the Book of Jonah "in the free inventive spirit invokes the marvelous." Sorry, Mr. King, but these words of yours certainly do not appeal to my common-sense, nor to that of others, I fear. Why is so much silly sport made of this book by writers and others? Whether there be higher or lower criticism, or both, I believe unreservedly in the truth of this book. Let me give my reasons for such a seemingly rash or unjustified statement.

ITS COMPARATIVE VALUE.

Yielding to habits formed whilst an official in the Law Courts of England, I first put the test of comparative value, by weighing the merits of the three varied accounts of Jonah's experiences which are still extant. To Sir John Frazer's "Folk Lore in the Old Testament" we must turn for the first version. He states (Vol. 3, Chapter 18) that there is a less artistic but equally veracious story told by the natives of Windesi, on the northern coast of Dutch New Guinea. They say that the inhabitants of the Island of Jop formerly dwelt at Batewaar. One day five of them rowed in a canoe across to Warepen to fetch sage. On the high sea a whale swallowed them, canoe and all, and they sank with the fish to the bottom. As they sat in the fish's belly they cut slices of its liver and guts, hacked the canoe in pieces, and lighting a fire, roasted the liver and guts and ate them. Thus mangled, the fish died and drifted to shore. Thereupon the men heard the cry of the hornbill. They opened the fish's mouth, they saw that it was land, and they went forth. The bird came to them and said, "I did it; go now home, fetch your people, and dwell on this island." They went, fetched their people, and took up their abode on the island. That is why the inhabitants of the island of Jop do not eat any hornbills!

In the second place rationalists claim that Jonah was rescued from the sea by the mariners of a ship named "The Whale," which ship they assert had painted on its sides likenesses of the whale.

Our Bible contains the third and final account. Compared with the other two, the Bible versions appeal to any logical or reasonable mind as being the most straightforward and most feasible version.

ITS SCIENTIFIC VALUE.

As to the possibility of the occurrence let Science come to our witness. Those who prefer natural explanations to spiritual ones may feel more at home with this statement. "Sailors in the northern regions tell us that at certain periods of the year, the female whales, and some species of the shark also, when danger is near, open their mouths and swallow their young, ejecting them again when all is safe." (Methodist Recorder). Is it unreasonable, therefore, to believe that a female fish was under a wrong impression when she accommodated Jonah? Critics seem to forget that extraordinary things do actually happen in real life, as well as in the dime novel.

It must be disconcerting for those who make merry over Jonah's "uncomfortable lodgings" to find no less a person and no less an authority than the President of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, finds little difficulty in believing in the possibility of a man remaining alive in an environment similar to Jonah's. Lecturing before the delegates of the Inter-State Post-Graduate Assembly of America, in London, on "The Psychology of Animals swallowed alive" Sir John Bland Sutton said that for some time he had been under the impression that the story of Jonah and the "great fish" stood practically by itself. Last year, however, he had learned of an interesting account of how some whalers were at work in the South Seas and came across a whale which turned round and bit their boat in two. One of the men, said the Lecturer, named Marshall Jenkins, sank with the whale but soon afterwards the whale reappeared, and vomited the man, who was a bit astonished, on to the wreckage of the boat.

Sir John specially referred to sharks as being able to swallow fish of quite extraordinary size and shape, and exhibited drawings to convey some idea of the great capacity of

HEART PURITY OR CHRIST OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Rev. B. C. Dewey.

PART I.

"Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." (Matt. 5:8).

"He showed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb." (Rev. 22:1).

HE Lord Jesus Christ, having just closed the ministry of healing the multitudes, retired to a mountain and there he "who dwelt in the bosom of the Father before the world was," "opened his mouth and taught" most wonderful truths. Hear him!

"Blessed are the poor in spirit"—"They that mourn"—"the meek"—"they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness" and "the pure in heart."

Is he pronouncing blessing on conditions of human hearts that did not exist, or could not exist, until the dying hour, or his coming again? If we put one of these off, why not all? "Blessed are they which do hunger," or the "poor in spirit."

While lexicons support all we contend for, yet it is not necessary to consult them to find the meaning of the Greek word translated "pure" in these two texts. The relation it sustains to "the river of living water," and to qualifying us to see God, gives it its highest meaning. Pure, how glorious in a world of sin, the thought. How inspiring to all who have struggled with corruption is the prospect. How the bells of freedom ring over the dominion of man's soul, who has struggled with the rebellious tyrant within. Pure, how fresh the air and sweet the perfume, and glorious the hope of dwelling with God forever.

Jesus is not pronouncing blessing on states we cannot attain. He uttered no idle words, nor did he tantalize us with visions of freedom, or create in us a "hunger and thirst after righteousness," without assuring us that we could be filled with that for which he created the hunger and thirst, namely, "Righteousness." This furnishes us with a basis of faith that cannot be gainsaid.

God loves purity. Dirt or uncleanness is "matter out of place." The flower garden kept free from weeds is clean, but if the earth in which the flowers grew was smeared on a white dress it would be counted unclean, for it is matter out of place. Everything in our hearts not in harmony with the will of God is "matter out of place," and that makes the heart unclean. Now if any condition, call it "evil"—"law of sin" or by any other name, exists in our hearts because God wants it there, then it is in its proper place, fulfilling God's will, hence does not defile us in the least. If, however, the "evil"—"law of sin," or any condition is there contrary to God's will, he wants it removed. If he leaves it there, it is because either he has no power to remove it, or we will not meet the conditions he has established for its removal. We know he has made provision in Christ for our full redemption and that he has power to fully save us for he has so stated, and promised that he will do so, when we meet the conditions he has established for our deliverance.

If God has not power to remove all sin now, all that is contrary to his will, as soon as we meet the conditions, he never will have the power, and we are doomed to have an impure heart forever; and if he takes us to heaven he must do it with that in our hearts contrary to his will, and forever look upon those things in us that are offensive to him. We know this is absurd and contrary to his word. (Rev. 21:27).

If, it is argued, that he has power to take out of our hearts all that is impure, but he will not do it till death or at the Second Coming of Christ, I answer, then all things he leaves in our hearts till then are there by his choice or will, and are in divine order, and hence are not sin or unclean and do not defile us. Sin is the transgression of law, and if it is the Lord who has ordered all that is in our hearts to be there until he comes, that is his law to us, hence all is right within and in harmony with his will.

All we are concerned about in the matter is to have God's perfect will done in us. That is purity. But we know that this evil, self-will, anger, strife, hatred, lust, pride, impatience, jealousy, unbelief, are not his will and are out of line with his law of love, hence we know out of harmony with his will and can be removed.

Finally, it is argued, God has the power but we can only partially meet conditions he has imposed, and it will take a long time, perhaps years, to be able to do so. Will an all-wise Being defeat himself in securing what he wants and wills for us to be by imposing conditions on us which he knows, when he imposes them, we cannot meet? Is it not strange that an all-wise, heavenly Father, would give his Son to die for our freedom from all sin and uncleanness, and desire our purity and issue commands to us saying, "Be ye holy" and "See that ye love one another with a pure heart," and "the Lord thy God with all thy heart," and "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord," then promises "The Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart and the heart of thy seed to love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live." (Deut. 30:6). "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean from all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you." (Ezek. 36:25). And then impose conditions on us for the accomplishment of all of this we cannot meet, and yet declare, "Behold, now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation." (2 Cor. 6:2), "Now"—"Be ye" rings from the voice of inspiration, and who has the authority to make it a future proposition, because of his own or others' failures to meet conditions.

When God takes an oath, that we can "serve him in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life," (Luke 1:7), that includes today and every day. When Jesus says (Matt. 4:10) "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve," it does not mean I must serve sin awhile, but, that I must worship God in the "beauty of holiness," all the time and not serve Satan a moment. Why cannot we meet satisfactory to God, the conditions he in wisdom has chosen for us to meet, of repentance, confession, consecration and faith, when we remember that he has given to us the Holy Spirit to convict us, and help our infirmities, and to sanctify us, and flow out of us in "rivers of living water."

Of course if we obtain and retain the experience of a clean heart we must co-operate with him in the work of purification by separating ourselves from all that defiles us, all God hates and forbids. We must take our stand and put to death all evil indulgences.

PURITY AND SEPARATION.

We read, "Mortify" (Gr. put to death) therefore your members which are on the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affections, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry. (Col. 3:5).

The goal God has set before us, of being joint heirs with Jesus Christ, including endless ages of bliss in the Holy City with the redeemed is so great, and the wreckage is so fearful if we lose our soul, we cannot afford to take any chances on sin or anything that leads to it. We are repeatedly warned to separate ourselves from all evil, and exhorted to mortify (put to death) everything within us out of harmony with God's will. We are distinctly commanded "to love not the world, neither the things that are in the world," then told why. "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and pride of life, is not of the Father, but of the world." Then this heart searching statement is inserted in the midst of this warning. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2:15.

If we would be pure in heart we must separate ourselves from everything that defiles the heart. We must take no chances on sin, or anything that leads to sin, or is doubtful. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life." (Prov. 4:23). This separation must go deeper than an outward separation. The heart's affection must be taken from the world. The command is "love not". Jesus "loved righteousness, and hated iniquity." (Heb. 1:9).

It is the magnetic pull of this world we must resist. It is "our members on the earth" that are ordered "executed." Here is the "death route" to holiness, the final death blow to "our old man." "Covetousness" which is idolatry, which Paul said killed him, and is the closing item named. We must stifle that cursed thing, put it out of our hearts and lives by seeking only God's will. We must follow it to its den, as the hunter does his game. It means to take the warning of the Spirit against all evil and put away all doubtful things. It means a separation from all indulgences of the mind, every mental craving to read papers, books, or to attend any meetings or lectures poisoned by error that tend to endanger the soul or lower our spirituality. It is refusing to allow our minds to dwell in any way upon the opposite sex that has a dangerous tendency or downward pull, or is in any way unlawful.

The secret motives of our hearts, our thoughts and actions should be so pure that we are ready to have all the world know them, and the flaming eye of God see them. It means shunning of all doubtful places of amusement, or the following of any corrupt fashion because it is the rage, standing against all immodest attire, and staying away from all bathing resorts where immodesty prevails. It is taking no chances on anything doubtful for pleasure or gain. A pure heart finds its home, pleasures, and success in God. It means a turning from every association to which I am not bound by ties of nature or held by lawful union in business with, where it lessens my spirit of prayer. It means the engaging in no business schemes, money making, blue-sky, get-rich-quick-proposition that is questionable or that the Spirit warns against, or that we have reason to believe will dampen our zeal for souls, or interfere with our worship of God in the beauty of holiness. It means we cannot cherish any hard feeling toward others. We treat them coldly or brood over injustice or differences of opinion, or opposition, for the command is clear, "love thine enemy, and thy neighbor as thyself." "See that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently"—with a love at white heat.

True separation from sin means separation unto God. Love, service, adoration and worship of him are the objectives of the goal. Without this all is cold legalism. Here is its power.

THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

This New Testament standard of holiness of heart, or perfect love, is not a cold legalistic affair. It is not our self-righteousness, but the righteousness of God in us. It is not something independent of God that he requires us to manufacture with our will power out of our infirmities, something we can praise ourselves for, or seek the applause of others. No, here is the Devil's Waterloo—where critics and opponents ground their arms. This is the ground of our hope and faith, which we can have and live, (Phil. 3:8) "That I may win Christ and be found in him, not having my own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith."

Any testimony to holiness of heart that favors of self-sufficiency, or self-righteousness is, of course, dishonoring to God, and offensive to hear. Also, any opposition or criticism to a humble testimony that declares that Christ has done in fully saving them and becoming their righteousness, is a fling at Christ, is a Satanic scheme to rob him of the glory due him. A clear, humble, burning testimony may stir the carnal mind in some, but it will encourage hungry souls to seek and find deliverance.

This New Testament heart purity and perfect love is a glorious possibility and reality. It is "Christ in us" meeting through his precious blood the deepest need of the soul. It is the Creator and upholder of all worlds, healing our infirmities by the Holy Ghost. It is the Lily of the Valley, the Rose of Sharon, shedding the aroma of his love through our affections. It is the "light of the world," the Sun of Righteousness, rising with healing in his beams, sending the beaming rays of his countenance to the uttermost part of our heart, dispelling all moral darkness. It is the Holy Son of God, as "King of kings, and Lord of lords," stamping our souls with such worth, by virtue of his presence, purifying our motives, and raising our thoughts, words and deeds into that place of moral worth that they receive the approval of God, because divine love is the foundation from which they flow. It is the "Prince of Life," sending forth "rivers of living water." It is that "liveth and was dead," "the mystery which hath been hid from the ages, which is Christ in you the hope of glory." (Col. 3:27). The hope of Glory—driving all the carnal despair and gloom from our spiritual life, and giving us an "anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast." (Heb. 6:19).

Yes, it is Christ, the "Lamb of God," in all his immaculate purity and atoning sacrifice, and the "Lion of the tribe of Judah," in all his mighty power reigning within, destroying the "works of the devil," (1 John 3:8), and overruling all our mistakes, making them work for our good and the advancement of the Kingdom of God. Thus we are enabled to meet the demands of the law and receive the smile of our Heavenly Father.

THE WEEPING PROPHET.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

JEREMIAH has been called the "weeping prophet" because of his lamentations over the sins of Israel. At one time he gave vent to his heart anguish by crying out, "O that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people."

Listen to some of the things they were guilty of: "For they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men. And they bend their tongues like their bow for lies: but they are not valiant for the truth upon the earth; for they proceed from evil to evil, and they know me not, saith the Lord." What an array of accusations! Adulterers, treacherous, liars, unfaithful to the truth, going from bad to worse, and of course, being such characters, they did not "know the Lord."

This faithful old prophet wrote these denunciations of his people hundreds of years before the Savior of men came to this earth to redeem it from sin. Israel was much like many of today who claim that they have to be always sinning and repenting, repenting and sinning, and that this is the best that can be expected in the Christian life. But not so! The Ten Commandments were given for the standard of living for the Israelites, and when they failed to observe them they were guilty before God.

But in writing of these people—backslidden Israel—it sounds much like the Twentieth Century, only we are held more responsible as we have sinned against so much light. Later on, God says, "Shall I not visit them for those things? Shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?" Shall we tell you what the curse was God pronounced upon this wicked and adulterous people? Hear! "Behold, I will feed them, even this people, with wormwood, and give them water of gall to drink. . . . I will send a sword after them, till I have consumed them. . . . Even the carcasses of men shall fall as dung upon the open field, and as the handful after the harvest man, and none shall gather them."

If such were the judgments of God upon wicked Israel, what shall be the doom of people who live in the noonday light of gospel privileges as purchased by the death of our Lord Jesus Christ! Luke tells us what the end shall be of the servant who knew his Lord's will and refused to do it. "He shall be beaten with many stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required."

With these startling scriptures what shall we expect from the hand of the Lord for the way we, as a nation, have sinned against him! We are certainly in the "last days" spoken of by the Apostle Paul when "men shall heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears." And they are getting the kind of teachers they are looking for. But what shall become of the teachers who are thus pleasing the fastidious and worldly church members? What kind of shepherds are they who will fleece the flock to clothe themselves? We shall let the Lord declare their fate: "Woe to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock." What a picture of some of our churches today who are fed on the husks of higher criticism, evolution, and things which do not pertain to spirituality at all.

Shall we picture this false pastor, or shepherd a little farther? "The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them." You have but to listen to the lamentation and heart cry of the people all over the country to know that we are meeting with the same conditions today as in the days of Ezekiel, whose 34th chapter records this sickening picture.

If you will carefully read this chapter you will find that God promises to seek out his sheep, but not a comforting word does he say about the shepherd. God pity the man who poses as a shepherd and yet leaves the flock to wander in the fields of skepticism and unbelief, dying for the gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation.

Listen to the words of denunciation: "Thus saith the Lord God! Behold, I am against the shepherds; and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them."

This latter applies to those preachers who are thinking more of the financial part of the meeting than the souls of lost men. We have a perfect contempt for preachers who begin to plan and scheme as soon as they get to a place, to see how much they can rake in for the few days they have labored, not the labor, mind you, that comes from earnest work for the lost, but laboring to get all they can, financially. There are persons who misrepresent their finances to strangers in order to work upon their sympathy and get a big haul. God be merciful to such!

We know an evangelist who has been preaching for years, and if he has ever said anything to a committee or board of stewards, save as they asked him, we are not aware of it. Yet the Lord has always seen that he had sufficient to eat and wear. We could write more along this line, but a hint to the wise is sufficient. O, Lord, save us all from ourselves!

The Brooklyn Holiness Convention.

The Twelfth Annual Interdenominational Holiness Convention will be held (D. V.,) Nov. 4th through the 13th, at the Warren Street M. E. Church. The evangelists are Rev. John Thomas, of Wilmore, Ky., Rev. A. L. Whitcomb, of California, Rev. C. W. Ruth, of Indiana, and Rev. Paul Rees, of Kansas. The musical director, Mr. Kenneth Wells, of Indiana, assisted by Mrs. Wells, Mrs. G. C. Miller, and others. Special workers, Rev. W. R. Chase, Mrs. John Thomas, Rev. W. J. Wishart, Mrs. M. Magee, Rev. J. Dunster Thomas, Mrs. L. Henderson.

Open air meetings led every evening by Mr. Chas. MacLean.

It is a keen disappointment to every one that our beloved Brother Morrison, who has been one of the greatest helpers to make this Annual, under God, what it has become adown the years, will not be able to be with us this year, on account of an engagment of long standing materializing Convention time. This does not alter the fact that his engagement for the Brooklyn Convention has been renewed, to stand, until Jesus comes.

Will THE HERALD readers please pray mightily for a genuine Pentecost during the Convention? The Committee will secure rooms reasonably for any requiring them. Meals served in the Church. For particulars address, Mrs. C. H. Cooke, Westminster Hall, 850 St. Marks Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

A DEFENCE OF JONAH.

these monsters of the ocean. There is therefore nothing incredible in a sea monster following a ship ready to swallow a man should one be thrown overboard. The Bible story is often spoken of as the story of "Jonah and the Whale," but it is well to bear in mind that the Hebrew word used is of wide import. Our translations of the Old Testament call it "a great fish"; it is in the New Testament that it is called "a whale."

Eminent scientists have on other occasions recognized the possibility of an occurrence similar to that referred to by Sir John Bland Sutton. Thirty years ago a writer in the report of a scientific expedition said, "The discoveries of the Prince of Monaco (a well-known naturalist) were such as to relieve me of all difficulty in believing the Bible story that a whale swallowed Jonah." And another writer in the "Academy of Sciences" publication says, "A sperm whale can easily swallow an animal taller and heavier than a man." And he adds, "The animals when swallowed, can keep alive some time in the whale's stomach."

It is surprising that Sir John should have been under the impression that the story of Jonah and the whale was something that stood practically by itself. Dr. E. B. Fairfield mentions that, in the Literary Digest, an account was given of the launching of two whale-boats to capture a whale some distance away. They succeeded, after a short chase, in harpooning their victim, inflicting what proved to be a deadly wound. Following up their advantage, they came so near that one of the boats was struck and shattered. All the men were, of course, thrown into the sea; but all save two were rescued by the other boat. Of the two, one's dead body was recovered, the other was given up as lost; but on opening the captured whales the next day, the remaining man—James Bartley—was found inside of one of them, still alive but unconscious. He was recovered and himself tells the story. He had been in the whale's stomach twenty-four hours after the cutting up began.

It is quite reasonable to object that the foregoing events, along with others that might be cited, are not actually on "all fours" with Jonah's experiences. But they must be accepted as well-authenticated instances, and not fishy stories by a romancer, or sailor's yarns incapable of verification. They certainly prove the possibility of preserving human life in just such an environment as Jonah's.

Is it not interesting to note that "the impossible story of Jonah and the whale"—which the man in the street hilariously regards as the creation of a fabulous age—should be seriously referred to in a gathering that was representative of the most eminent medical scientists in the whole wide world?

ITS SPIRITUAL VALUE.

Twice does our Lord allude to incidents recorded in the Book of Jonah. In reply to the Pharisees asking for "a sign from heaven," he gives them a sign from beneath, and declares that the swallowing up of Jonah by the sea monster and his restoration to life after apparently certain destruction was a figure of his own resurrection from the grave (Matt. 12:40; 16:4). He also declares that the repentant Ninevites shall stand up in the judgment and condemn "the children of the kingdom" who had so many privileges and used them not (Matt. 12:41).

This manner therefore in which our Lord refers to the Book of Jonah would indicate that the book sets forth historical facts, and is not an allegory as many suppose. Much of the misunderstanding regarding this Book of the Bible, and the consequent failure of folks to understand it, is due to neglect of the Book. Neglect not only on the part of the laity, but also on the part of preachers. If only we will read Jonah more often, with the prayer that the Lord increase our faith, we shall find revealed many of its hidden and precious truths. Mr. Wesley said, "Read five hours a day." It would not hurt preachers or laity to read the Book of Jonah five times a month.

"RELIGIOUS EDUCATION"

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

HE "religious education" regime, as it is now being exploited, especially in the Methodist Episcopal Church, is the offspring of evolutionary Modernism and is a false beacon, a delusive signal, a deceptive sign-board. It points to a "detour" from the true gospel highway, and is leading the rising generation astray. It ignores or rejects the truth of revelation and the verdict of universal experience, that man is naturally a fallen, sinful, corrupt being; and must have Divine regeneration and cleansing. It assumes, wholly without warrant, that human nature is progressing upward, is evolving from the beast toward the Divine, by its own inherent power. It speaks of sin as "unripe goodness," "missing the mark," etc., and sees nothing in it that is deadly. It affirms that, with correct ideals placed before them, and right information given them, children will normally grow up clean and good; and affirms that, despite common experience to the contrary.

The "religious education" idea claims to stand on the Bible, and yet it repudiates as antiquated, the plain teaching of the Bible as to man's moral state by nature. Such as: "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." "In sin did my mother conceive me." "Out of the heart proceedeth evil thoughts, murders, adulteries," etc. "Can a clean thing come out of an unclean?" "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?" "Doth a fountain give forth salt water and fresh?" "The carnal mind is enmity against God." "Except one be born anew, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." "The sin that dwelleth in me."

Formerly, we had Christian education, but not "religious education." There are many religions, but only one Christianity. Which religion is this, seeing it departs from the Bible? It cannot be the true Christian religion. Christian education used to be understood as acquiring an education at a Christian school, under Christian influences, amid Christian environment. It was not supposed that students became Christian in the process of being educated, or because of the education; but that their Christian experience was fostered by the Christian example and influences about them in school; or, if they were not already Christians, they might be led to Christ by the same example and influences. There are still a few colleges of which this is true, colleges which major on religion in education; but commonly, the atmosphere of colleges is detrimental to a vital Christian experience.

But, "religious education" today does not pertain especially to regular schools. It is more a function of the local church or community. It aims to teach religion to children and young people. Too generally, the church and the ministry, instead of preaching "repentance unto remission of sins in My Name" as Christ explicitly commanded, thus getting souls converted by the work of the Holy Spirit, and then educating them consistently with that—too commonly, people are told that they are naturally all right, and are put into schools or classes to teach them "religion," whatever that may be. And so each Methodist Episcopal congregation is supposed to have "A director of religious education."

We need but look at the sin, vice and crime among students, from high school up; look at the many suicides of boys and girls in high and other schools; look at the irreverence of many students—we need but look at these to know that education does not make them Christian. And a review of the boys and girls under the curriculum of "religious education" demonstrates that however much "religion" they may have, they are not Christian in the New Testament sense—have not been born anew, born of the Spirit.

This modern program of "religious education" would substitute psychology for the Holy Spirit, pedagogy for pardon, resolution for regeneration, will-power for the power of God. It glosses over, covers up, conceals such things as envy, pride, selfishness, etc., whitewashes the outside of the sepulcher and leaves the foulness within. It is training up a generation who, like the Athenians, are "very religious"; and to whom, like them, God is unknown. It indeed teaches all to speak of God as "our heavenly Father," though they are doing the works of the devil; until, in many minds, "God" is but word, an abstraction. A noted man says: "The word, 'God' means nothing to me"; and that is too largely true of many under the regime of "religious education." Let this sort of thing run its course, and we will be where the Greeks were two or three thousand years ago.

Some of the champions of religious education are busy declaring that young people of this day are not worse than those of former generations; which is strictly true. The children of today are naturally born carnal, just as their parents and grandparents were. The difference is that in the youth of the forebears, the church and the ministry emphasized the necessity of the new birth by the Holy Spirit, and not only were many thus definitely regenerated and made new creatures in Christ; but also, there was the preaching and testimony of the church then, a power of restraint on the ungodly. Under the modern regime, all that is absent hence the increase of crime among the young people of today.

The One Condition.

One condition which may be readily apprehended by an individual who is seeking to be wholly sanctified, is recorded in 2 Cor. 6:17: "Come out from among them, and be ye separate; touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." Take this in connection with the first verse of the next chapter, and you will find a clear exposition of the process by which the soul is sanctified. Are you willing to comply with the conditions? Alas! I fear your mind is resting on this and the other beloved object. Your heart may be saying, in view of some cherished idol, "Alas! I indeed called to sacrifice this object, which surpasses all others in desirableness?" What, this, probably, is precisely the object which God intends to dethrone. You know he is a jealous God, and will have no other gods before him. But perhaps you may say, "It is not an idol—it is but, one of the precious gifts of God; and can he now require that I should resign it?" Why, if it is indeed a gift from God, that is a conclusive reason why you should give it up, at the bidding of the Giver.

DR. WIMBERLY AT CHESTER, S. C.

For the past ten days the revival at St. James M. E. Church at the Baldwin Mills has been in progress. The congregations have been large from the beginning, and at times, the house would not accommodate them; extra chairs have been placed in the aisles, and in every bit of available space. For the third night, there have been visible results, a often the long altar has been crowded with penitent seekers. Dr. Wimberly preaches the old-time gospel according to the traditions of the Methodist Church, and seeks not to induce people to become members of the church, but to seek a definite, personal salvation by genuine repentance and faith in Jesus Christ. At one service there were thirty-seven seekers at the altar, and last Tuesday night a service was made for all who had been saved during the services, and a number of perhaps fifty lined up front of the altar, and many had been saved who were not present that night. Nearly one hundred have knelt at the altar professing to have been definitely blessed.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

SOME OBSERVATIONS AT THE RICHLAND CAMP.

Although asked by no one to write this report, yet I feel moved by the Spirit of God to give my impressions of this camp. We have attended this camp meeting for six years and must say, each one seems to have been better than the one previous. This year's camp appears to have been the crowning one in many respects.

First of all, we were privileged to sit under the most searching and fearless preaching and teaching of the brethren Suffield, Whitcomb, Reid, Dr. D. F. Brooks and others. They have unconsciously uncovered one of the great dangers now threatening the Holiness Movement. In the church and in all religious circles there seems to be the inkling for bigness. The danger is, that Mr. Bighead is secured and Bro. Stoutheart left in the rear. Now it is evident, that no man is capable of preaching and teaching holiness anywhere, be it in camp meetings, conventions or an all-day meeting unless he himself is a possessor of this experience. Thank God, for wholly sanctified preachers and teachers, for they alone are able to preach and teach this truth fearlessly and straight. They are no respecter of persons, nor must they be such if they wish to be used by the Holy Ghost. Catering to anybody because of financial or social or ecclesiastical standing is bound to work havoc in the work of holiness. John Wesley once said that the greatest danger to the spreading of this truth of holiness is an educated ministry void of the blessing. The sole measure ought to be—are they men full of the Holy Ghost and faith.

The second outstanding feature which made this camp so successful was the straightness and clearness of doctrinal preaching. I believe we are in danger of assuming too much. We read in Hos. 4:6, "My people are destroyed for the lack of knowledge." A German proverb says: "What I do not know does not make me hot or stir me." Dr. D. F. Brooks advises us to feed and teach the sheep rather than to scold them. Truly, people have a general idea of a baptism of the Holy Ghost or a deeper work of grace or of more religion, but unless they are clearly indoctrinated they will be dragged into all sorts of errors and isms. The issue ought to be clear. There is a second work of grace. This deals with the casting out of carnality, this all the truly holy people of God know, but if the people in general are not intelligently taught, they will never know the reason why a second work of grace nor will many be able to give a reasonable account of their hope that is within them. Hundreds of preachers deny the possibility or the necessity of a second work of grace—they may go so far as to teach a victorious life, but never the destruction of the old man. Consequently people are all bewildered, they are perplexed and bound. It is up to the preachers and holiness teachers to loose them and let them go. One of the leading holiness evangelists made the remark to the writer, lest we watch out, we will soon become suppressionists. No careful observer and listener has failed to know the truth of this statement. It was however, thank God, quite the contrary in Richland. We were stirred, fed and indoctrinated, praise God and consequently many were loosed. Hallelujah!

Again another outstanding feature was the altar work, the way the seekers were dealt with. Yes, thank God, there were seekers and very many of them became true finders. Sinners were saved, backsliders restored and believers sanctified in the old-fashioned way. They were not talked into it, nor pushed into it, nor reasoned into it. My, what a danger lies right here in dealing with the seekers. Things must be done in the hurry in these days, and consequently many are railroaded through to God, but they do not get there. Would to God the day may dawn all over the country when we have more Holy Ghost taught altar workers. Surely we know that men are pardoned, they are cleansed by faith, but to reason men through will bring nothing but a mental salvation, whereas God wants an experimental salvation. We must give God time to deal with men and we must give men time to settle their accounts with God. Does not the countenance betray the man. Lest the heavenly light of God's redeeming grace break through the countenance of the seekers, be careful lest we help souls to deceive themselves. They will leave the camp with a mental salvation that never reached the heart, and they know they never truly paid the price and consequently they shall never be able to live the life and get discouraged and give up. There is a death, a struggle connected with the crucifixion of the old man; men do not come to a picnic when they come to the altar, but they go to a funeral to get sanctified. It is not smile, smile, smile, but die, die, die. We have seen God highly magnified in the deliverance of souls. There were demonstrations that thrilled the soul and convicted the sinners. Glory to God for old-time religion that believes in thoroughness.

All this was to a great extent brought about by mighty prayer. The 6:30 prayer meeting as well as the prayer gathering after supper were outstanding features. Seldom have we heard such praying, felt such power and seen such harmony. Who can forget that Thursday night of the second week, when one sister broke out in triumphant shout on the camp ground repeating over and over again: "The city is ours! The city is ours!" Thank God, it proved to be true. The heavens were charged with grace and glory that night and a mighty cloudburst fell on the people, Hallelujah to God forever! What flowing together did we not experience in the men's prayer meeting that last Sunday night. We believe that only the gathering up yonder can exceed that. Remember, prayer, mighty prevailing prayer, was at the basis of this very successful camp. To God from whom all blessings flow, be all the glory.

Rev. Alfred Lenzer.

Pastor of the North St. M. E. Church, Rochester, N. Y.

OIL CITY, PENNSYLVANIA.

The tent meeting scheduled in The Pentecostal Herald under date of August 11th to September 3rd, Oil City, Pa., was, to say the least, a decided success. Messrs. Lambert, Scott and Wilson labored faithfully and energetically under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost to the salvation of precious souls. Upwards of fifty to seventy-five souls bowed at the altar for prayer and wept their way through into the kingdom of God. The beautiful part of this meeting was that the majority of the seekers were young folk ranging in years from about ten to twenty-five. While there were a great many counter attractions and the evenings were quite cold the attendance was very good throughout.

A very special feature of these services was the song service in charge of Mr. Wilbur Wilson, of Toledo, Ohio. We would say this young man has a great future in this field. Toward the close of these meetings a standing vote was taken in which it was unanimous for the return of these young men for next year. Asbury College should be congratulated to have such a good class of Spirit-filled young men as these.

HALLELUJAH CAMP.

The 1927 Hallelujah Camp Meeting is now history. But it is good history. It is history that will count for all eternity. Praise God!

The camp closed Sunday night, Aug. 14. I cannot say it closed in a wave of glory, for I do not know just what that means. But I can say it closed with the sweet blessing of God upon us, and an altar full of souls that prayed through to good victory. It was by far the greatest Camp we have ever had.

God blessed us in choice workers. We had Rev. T. H. Gaddis as the evangelist. He was wonderfully saved to God a little over ten years ago. He closed out his plumbing business when the call of God came to evangelize, and has been used mightily of the Lord since. He is a fearless preacher of the Full Gospel. He is sweet but frank, and is especially gifted in getting people to a place of prayer. He proved God's man in God's place in God's time.

Rev. F. T. Briggs, a missionary from China under furlough, working with the Oriental Missionary Society, was with us the full time, and in addition to giving missionary addresses, augmented in the preaching. He is a Bible man with the blessings of God upon his soul.

The Musical Moser Sisters had charge of the music, and were wonderfully used to the glory of God. They not only sing and play, but they pray and do personal work and stay at the altar services till the very end. They left a trail of Christ behind them.

Miss Imogene Quinn had charge of the children's meetings in the Big Tent, and genuine good was done. God has a place in his big heart for the little ones and so has the Hallelujah Camp.

The attendance this year was much better than ever before. People came from five states: Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota, and Iowa. About twenty towns and cities in Wisconsin were represented in the services. On the last Sunday afternoon, by actual count, there were in the congregation representatives of fifteen different denominations. On the grounds were parked 65 autos on this same day.

The Lord was good to us in the finance this year. He cared for the bills in capital shape. Of course, we could not pay our workers as we should have liked and as they deserved, but they went away satisfied.

The Hallelujah Camp from its beginning has stressed missions, and this year under God we were able to raise in cash and pledges something over $900.00. When it is taken into consideration that we are a missionary camp—that is, we are depending on sources outside for help—it can be seen that God surely was with us in the missionary endeavor. I have always said that any church or camp that has not the missionary spirit is not altogether in God's plan.

Now, the best part of the camp is this. Coming to the altar for definite blessings were over 100 different ones. Some prayed through to glorious victory, and we trust all were helped. Many people were blessed and edified who did not come to the altar.

We had several healing services, and quite a few sick people were anointed. God undertook for bodies and many were healed. One man testified to the fact that he had been partially deaf for fifteen years and God healed him instantly when we laid hands upon him.

One service was given over to the ones who had been called for active Christian service. Three of our young people testified in this service and plan to go into some portion of God's vineyard.

It was spoken on all sides that the Hallelujah Camp Ground was the prettiest place that they had ever seen for a camp. With the grounds all landscaped, and the shrubs and flowers and trees in their glory, and sidewalks and drives and fountains and pergolas, and the pretty white buildings all conspiring to add to the beauty, an atmosphere for rest and worship was created that was blessed of God.

The large dining-room with provision to seat 110 at one time came in for much commendation. My own mother had charge of the kitchen, and the meals were of the highest order, and the campers and visitors were well pleased.

Too much cannot be said of Mother and Father Linn for the beauty of the place, its cleanliness, its order, and the delicious meals. God sent along splendid help to assist in the work, and everything went in harmony and delight.

Plans are on foot for needed improvements and added beautifications. Among other things that shall be installed, God willing, will be a baptismal pool and new equipment on the children's playgrounds. We want the little ones to know of God, and we are doing what we can to encourage their hearts. Next year's camp, God willing, will be from Aug. 3 to the 19th. Begin to pray and plan to come.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

Since last reporting I have been permitted to work in two good camps; the first was at Warsaw, Ohio, under the auspices of The Warsaw Holiness Association. This Association is made up of some of the choicest saints I ever met. They also have one of the most convenient and commodious tabernacles I ever labored in. Rev. W. H. McLaughlin, D.D., of Canton, Ohio, was my preaching partner. His sermons were edifying and rang true to the doctrine of regeneration for the sinner and sanctification for the believer. Rev. C. C. Chatfield had charge of the singing. On account of illness, Mrs. Chatfield could not be at the camp, so the music was in charge of a young lady of Warsaw, whose name I am sorry to say I cannot recall, but she did very efficient work. Rev. Chatfield also preached once with unction and good results at the altar. While we did not have the altar and front seats crowded with seekers, yet we had a number of earnest seekers, and the most of them prayed through to a happy experience. This was my second consecutive year at this camp, and I have been invited to come back in 1928, and I shall be happy to go, if the Lord permits.

My last camp was at Des Arc, Mo. Here, too, they have a large tabernacle, and a commodious dormitory on their beautiful Campus. Rev. Millicent Klee, of Ironton, Ohio, had charge of the singing, and God greatly blessed this talented young woman in singing. She also preached twice, with the blessing of the Lord on her. Mrs. Wanda Duncan, the fine wife of Pastor J. A. Duncan, of Piedmont, Mo., ably presided at the piano. This camp is under the auspices of The Church of The Nazarene, and is the District Camp of the Missouri District. Rev. J. W. Irwin, the local pastor, and Rev. J. A. Williams, District Superintendent, with many other preachers and laymen, helped push the battle with their prayers, personal work, etc. We had a goodly number of seekers in this camp, and the most of them prayed through to definite victory. The District Assembly followed the camp, and we stayed for part of it, and enjoyed preaching once to the Nazarene Young People's Society. They had their District Convention on Monday and Tuesday preceding the Assembly.

Our slate is filling up nicely for autumn and winter; but we have a few open dates which we will be glad to give any church, mission or pioneer work desiring our services. My address is London, Ohio.

W. W. Loveless.

BALD KNOB TENT MEETING.

Feeling directly led of the Lord we secured one of the League tents the first of August and pitched it near Bald Knob High School, a point near the center of our work and about seven miles from Frankfort on the Pleasureville road. The meeting had been well advertised through the community and the people had been looking forward to it with great interest, and started off at a high pitch. We were fortunate in securing as our help in the meeting Rev. W. P. Hopkins and wife from Chaplin, Bro. Hopkins doing most of the preaching and Mrs. Hopkins playing the piano. The other workers in the meeting were Mrs. R. P. Richmond, of Aberdeen, Ohio, who greatly blessed the meeting with her special songs, and the pastor and his wife. The very first services started off with a shout of victory and a mighty manifestation of the Holy Spirit in power on the workers and Christian people. Sinners soon began to get under deep conviction for sin, and to pray through to victory, backsliders to get reclaimed and believers sanctified; this continued from day to day throughout the two weeks the meeting lasted. There was not a single service, after we got started, that we did not have shouting in the camp, and several times there would be as many as fifteen or twenty shouting at once. Sinners got under such conviction for sin that they got saved in the homes and in the fields, and some were so convicted that they prayed all night. During the meeting something like forty people came as seekers to the altar and at least thirty-five of these were either saved or sanctified. The crowds were the largest we ever had to attend a meeting regularly, the tent which holds about five hundred being full every night and some nights enough to fill it twice. In the two weeks of the meeting at least ten thousand people heard the old-time gospel that saves from sin. Thank God, we can still have victory.

Yours in His service,
Marvin H. Richardson.

"Neither Mr. Andrews nor myself was eager for prohibition. While in office he will enforce the law as long as it remains a law. When the people prove they no longer want it Mr. Andrews will gladly step down. His has been a thankless job from the first.

"Vicious rings of bootleggers are the staunchest supporters of prohibition and make repeal of the act ever more difficult. The richer and more powerful they grow, the harder it becomes to get rid of Volsteadism. Neither myself, my husband, nor our son has touched liquor since the law became effective, but that does not mean we would not welcome the day when actually non-intoxicating beverages could be brought into our own home without fear of breaking some law."

"Prohibition enforcement from the very outset has been in unfriendly hands. Prohibition has been given no fair trial. If it has failed in any particular, it is because it has not had the sincere sympathy of those charged with its observance."

You will note that the editor of this magazine makes this comment on what Mrs. Andrews is supposed to have said: "Prohibition enforcement, from the very outset, has been in unfriendly hands. Prohibition has been given no fair trial." My dear Uncle, I hope you will not regard it as impudence on my part to ask you who is responsible for this law being in unfriendly hands? What about the head of the nation employing men friendly to the liquor traffic and unfriendly to Prohibition to look after the enforcement of the law? I do not think it has ever occurred to the authorities to appoint bank robbers as inspectors of national banks. Why not? It would give them an excellent opportunity to know where the money is and the best means of appropriating same with least resistance. Why should people who have made their millions out of the liquor traffic and who themselves are opposed to the law and have the audacity to tell the public that if the law were set aside they would like to have strong drink in their homes,—why should such people be appointed to enforce the law? It will be very generally admitted that they have largely failed; when we consider who they are, we must expect failure.

Prohibition has accomplished great good in spite of the indifference or prejudice of those who are supposed to enforce the laws. There are no figures with which we can calculate the advantage of sobriety, industry and economy over drunkenness, idleness and waste. There are a few millions of sober, intelligent, patriotic American people in this nation who would like to see an honest effort to enforce a law prohibiting drunkenness and the waste of human life, character and property which drunkenness brings.

Nobody wants to deposit his money with a banker who drinks intoxicants. Nobody wants to ride on a train drawn by an engineer who drinks intoxicants. Nobody wants to be treated by a physician who drinks intoxicants. Nobody wants to employ a chauffeur who drinks intoxicants. Nobody wants his daughter to marry a man who drinks intoxicants. Nobody wants a bookkeeper, stenographer, clerk, porter or any one else who drinks intoxicants and who is liable, in a drunken stupor, to steal, burn up property, murder a family and jeopardize any business of any kind in which he may be engaged. The whole liquor traffic is evil from first to last. It ought to be prohibited. We have laws for its prohibition and from the President of the United States to the humblest policeman there ought to be determined resolution and honest effort to punish the violators of prohibition laws.

If you would say some very strong things to the next Congress with reference to this laxity of enforcing law and insist on shipping out of this country all aliens found engaged in the liquor traffic, and severe punishment to all citizens engaged in the liquor traffic both in fines, imprisonments, and in confiscation of property, and then if you should employ able, determined men who hate the traffic, who are lovers of humanity, and prohibitionists from principle, you would render a tremendous service to the country and all the better people of the nation would give you most hearty and deserved approval. If there is not an improvement in the enforcement of law and if you do not manifest indignation against this laxness you will find yourself under very severe censure, and lawlessness along all lines will continue to increase and floods of wickedness will sweep the land, not only to our great financial hurt, but to moral and spiritual losses beyond the possibilities of estimation. The law prohibiting the liquor traffic has been in unfriendly hands and while there are many men honest and true engaged in enforcing the law they ought to feel and know that at the fountain-head they not only have sympathy but most resolute and determined support.

ONE OF MY GREAT DESIRES

CHAPTER VIII.

I am very thankful to find that the articles I am writing on the subject of the enlargement of the Theological Seminary at Asbury College are awakening considerable interest. I have received quite a number of letters from various parts of the country from persons who are in very full sympathy with my desire to build up and enlarge the school.

One of the very first and most important items of this work is a large loan fund for students. The average student preparing for the ministry is in need of financial help. School people everywhere will tell you that it is far better for a young man preparing for the ministry to receive a loan than to receive a gift. We have a loan fund at Asbury College but it is not at all sufficient to meet our needs.

We let students have this money at 4 percent interest. After they leave school and get into work they repay the loan as soon as possible and in this way the same money constantly turned over with this small percent of interest can assist a number of students as the years go by. We have found it a very excellent plan.

Some brother or sister puts one hundred, five hundred, or a thousand dollars into this loan fund and through the succeeding years, long after they have passed to their reward, this money is helping to educate students to preach a full gospel. What better use could possibly be made of any money the Lord's people have to invest for the advancement of his kingdom in the world.

Let it be remembered that very small sums are gratefully received for this good work. Our Lord Jesus did not despise the widow's mite, but taught us that the approval and blessing of God rests upon those who give but little if they give to the limit of their capacity. We cannot believe that anything just now is more important than the education of Spirit-filled young men to preach full salvation to the people. Letters which come to me and conversations which I have with men from some of the theological seminaries amaze me at what's going on in many places where young men are being prepared for the ministry.

I have received several letters recently, some with small amounts of money and others with pledges to help build up this loan fund. I believe that there are certain parties who will give us larger help on the building which has been suggested. Just now we make an earnest appeal to our readers for help in the building up of our loan fund for our young ministers.

In our tent meetings, holiness camp meetings, and revivals, a number of young men are being powerfully saved and called to the ministry. Let's respond to this call of God by building up a great seminary at Asbury College that shall stand as a beacon light through the years as a pledge to God and humanity for a Spirit-filled, well educated, zealous ministry, going out to preach a full gospel to a lost world. Let me hear from you with a gift or a pledge for help in this good work.

Faithfully, your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

Don't Fail to Read Them.

Dr. Ridout's sketches of his European travels will be in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD for several weeks to come. They will be vividly drawn and will be of great interest to our readers. His sketches of Muller's famous Faith Orphanage; of London and John Wesley's historic home and chapel; of Paris and Brussels and Germany, the land of the Reformation, will be full of vital information and suggestions, also his visit to the battlefields where he served during the war, and where Alvin York, the saved and sanctified soldier, endured as seeing him who is invisible—all will be told in stories of thrilling interest to our readers.

Gone on a Western Tour.

Rev. H. C. Morrison, D.D., left the night of September 28 for a tour of evangelism on the Pacific Coast. He will preach for the Pacific Conference, which met October 5, then back to Tucson, Arizona, to preach at that conference, October 12, after which, he will conduct a series of revival meetings in Phoenix, Arizona in the Methodist Church of that city. Beginning November 6, Dr. Morrison will assist Rev. Bob Shuler in a meeting, then for a meeting in Berkeley, Calif., with Rev. N. H. Melbert, pastor of the Methodist Church. There are other meetings which have not been definitely arranged, but the prospects are that Dr. Morrison will remain on the Coast for some time. Let the readers of THE HERALD pray that his ministry may be blessed to the upbuilding of the churches and the salvation of many souls.

A Splendid Opening at Asbury College.

BEING absent from Kentucky preaching at an annual conference up in Illinois, it was impossible for me to be present at the opening of Asbury College, Sept. 14th, but I hurried up to the school after finishing my work at said Conference, arriving in Wilmore on the evening of September 21st in time to preach to a great audience which packed the College Chapel to its capacity. I have never faced a finer looking body of students and I have never known a better spiritual atmosphere in the school.

Dean Hughes tells me that the enrollment, with others coming in, will bring the Freshman Class up to 200. I do not believe we have ever received a finer class of new students than those enrolling this year. A very large percent of them are devout Christians. So far as I have been able to see and hear there appears to be almost no objectionable ones in this great body of new and splendid young life. One of our student preachers had brought a message the evening before my coming and some twenty students had gathered about the altar and most of them had prayed through to gracious victory. At the close of my first sermon some twenty-five students came forward, most all of whom were blessed. It was my privilege to give some five messages, four to the College and one to the Academy. The response was most encouraging. There is an excellent spirit of faith and prayer and harmonious fellowship. Dr. Akers has been able to add several very fine men to the faculty and the outlook for the school year is certainly very encouraging.

Rumors come to me that I have lost interest in the College, that I am no more closely allied with its work. These are false rumors. There never has been a time when I so keenly felt the need of such an institution as we have here and was more closely allied with the building up of this gracious work of God. Of course, I am more especially interested in the theological work of the institution. I asked all the young men who are preparing for the ministry and young ladies who were preparing for the mission field, or to give themselves for some line of constant Christian service to stand. As they arose, it looked like an annual conference. The theological training of this great body of students preparing for the ministry and mission field is under the care and instruction of the professors of our Theological Seminary. They are scholarly men. They have large experience and every one of them is clearly and devotedly Wesleyan on the subject of saving faith, the new birth, the witness of the Spirit, entire sanctification, holy living, growth in grace, and devoted service to God and fellowmen. There is not, in this Seminary, the taint of a hint of Modernism. They are men of the schools, of wide reading, of travel. They have a firm and intelligent grip upon Bible truth, world history and human needs. I do not believe there is a safer place on the American continent, in fact, in all the wide world, for young people to prepare themselves for an evangelical ministry than here in the Theological Seminary connected with Asbury College. If the people who believe in a whole Bible and a full Gospel for the whole world will help us with their prayers and money, in a few years we will have the equipment to take care of a great student body and we will gather here four or five hundred young people, wholly consecrated, graciously sanctified, preparing to go forth with a message of full salvation to a lost world. We beg you for God and humanity, for the sake of the Christ who died for us, to give us a helping hand. Perish the thought that I have lost interest in this school or that I have permitted myself to become a mere figure. I am wide-awake to the necessity of this institution, its great opportunities and I want every friend of mine and lover of our common Lord to take this matter upon your hearts and give us practical help that we may go forward to larger things for the advancement of the Kingdom of our blessed Lord and Master in the building up of this Theological department. Write me soon in care of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, Louisville, Ky.

Your brother for larger things in the preparation of a consecrated, Spirit-filled ministry.

An Interesting Incident at Gaines Camp Meeting.

While Brother Ruth and I were preaching at Gaines Camp Meeting, a presiding elder came to the meeting. He and Brother Ruth met for the first time in many years; it turned out that this man had been converted under the ministry of Brother Ruth some thirty odd years ago. Brother Ruth had held a meeting in a small country church in which this man had been converted and sanctified. He soon entered the ministry, and has been a man of large influence, great soul winner and is now the presiding elder of a large district in his denomination.

In talking over the meeting in which this man was saved it developed that one other man saved in this same revival, entered the ministry and had been a successful minister of the gospel. A woman saved in the same revival had gone into successful missionary work in Turkey, where she still labors for the salvation of souls. Another woman sanctified in the same meeting has raised up and trained two sons who are now missionaries in China. The brethren were not able to trace all the outcome of this wonderful meeting held in that country church, but these were some of the gracious results.

There is no seed which spreads, grows, abides and reproduces itself like full salvation seed. It really is wonderful how God blesses the straight, earnest, faithful preaching of full salvation. No man can faithfully and systematically preach full salvation without preaching all the fundamental doctrines of the Bible. Leading up to the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost, he must preach the fall of man, his depravity, repentance, faith, regeneration, witness of the Spirit, consecration, the personality and baptism with the Holy Ghost in his divine cleansing and abiding. Then he must insist on a consistent life of righteousness and service. No people are so well posted on the essential Bible doctrines of salvation as the holiness people, and you will find no people who are more steadfast in their faith in the inspiration of the Scriptures and the Godhead of Christ, the full atonement made in his precious blood, and the personal work of the Holy Ghost in salvation.

The end is not yet. This little meeting held by Brother Ruth in a humble country church will continue to spread its gracious influence abroad in the world until the Lord appears in the clouds in his glory.

A Remarkable Ministry.

Rev. J. L. Glascock, 1350 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio, has been a man of remarkable usefulness in the Master's vineyard. His work has taken him into every state of the Union but four, and into four Provinces in Canada. He has traveled 354,800 miles, which is equal to more than fourteen times around the Globe, and more than 118 times across the Pacific. He has held 584 revival and camp meetings, labored in some of the largest camps and churches in the country. He has conducted 10,928 religious services, and delivered as many sermons and addresses; 26,900 people have testified to having been regenerated, reclaimed or wholly sanctified in meetings which he has conducted. This is a record, unusual in its scope and results. Brother Glascock is still very active and will be glad to correspond with anyone desiring his services. He is orthodox to the core, and preaches a John-the-Baptist gospel.

In The Vale.

How do you like to go down low in the vale, quite aside from the higher walks of men, and hide away in the shade to work? It is not pleasant to nature to be hidden away from the observations of the mighty and noble, is it? But, with a sufficiency of grace, and led by the hand of the all-powerful and lowly Savior, we may find it even pleasant to get down low—very low. And here, do we not only find the low, sunken and lost, but sometimes we find the underpinning of some great superstructure of error. And here, in lowly toil, unseen by the great and wise, in omnipotent strength, may we look away at the deep-laid foundations of error till the loud cry is heard from above, The superstructure is fallen—fallen to rise no more! It matters not, as the note of victory ascends, that he who gave the successful blow is hidden away from human applause. Some shining name may have taken the praise. But it matters not. The lowly Savior was present when the work was done. O, it is indeed good and pleasant to get down to pick up gems, and knock away underpinnings.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

No. 1.

Text. "How sweet are Thy words unto my taste." Psa. 119:103.

Story. A little Catholic boy went to a Christian Mission and learned to love the Bible. He had a chance to buy one by paying 3 cents a week. The price was only 25c, and he was happy. After three weeks, when he was in the Catholic Sunday school, the priest asked, "Why did God send the flood?" He said, "The people were awful wicked." The priest said, "How do you know?" Now, the priest had told them that an angel came every night and told him what questions to ask. So the little boy said, "An angel came last night and told me." The priest was angry, and knew he had a Bible, so made him go and bring his Bible. His little heart ached with longing for it. When the man who sold it found why he did not bring the three cents he went to the priest and demanded the Book, telling him he had stolen it. So the boy was happy again with his Bible and he learned about Jesus and never told another lie.

Poem.

"O how I love the blessed Book,
My Guide Book all my earthly way,
The lamp that cheers my darkest night,

The sunshine of my brightest day."

Prayer. I thank Thee, Lord, for the Bible that tells me how to be good, and happy, and useful.

No. 2.

Text. "The Lord appeared to Solomon in a dream." 1 Kings 3:5.

Story. When Catherine Lois was about four years old the family went to meeting and left her alone. She thought she ought to give her heart to God. She got out of bed, knelt, wept and prayed until she knew God had heard her. When they came back she told them how happy she was. The next day she told them she dreamed that Jesus came and took her by the hand up into heaven. The street was gold and the flowers most beautiful, and the angels said, "How do you do, Catherine." Jesus led her around heaven and took a dress all white and gold and put it on her, and on it was written in pretty letters, "Jesus loves little children." Her little face shone as she told her dream. She loves Jesus and tries each day to do what pleases him, and tells her dream to others.

Poem.

"Hast thou had a precious treasure?

Pass it on.

Hast thou some peculiar pleasure?

Pass it on.

Would you double every blessing?

Pass it on."

Prayer. Father, I thank Thee, that Jesus loves the children and he loves me.

No. 3.

Text. "As Christ hath loved us and hath given himself for us." Eph. 5:2.

Story. A primary teacher asked, "What is love?" A little girl of six years threw her arms round the teacher's neck, gave her a good hug and said, "That is love." "Yes," said the teacher, and smiled. "That is love. But show me something more love is." The little girl put the chairs in place, and cleaned the blackboard, and said, "Love is helping people, too." Yes, Jesus-love is helping people. He fed the people, opened their eyes, unstopped their ears, healed the sick and forgave the sinful. When we help anyone we are like Jesus.

Prayer. Heavenly Father, help me to remember how Jesus loved so that I can be like him.

No. 4.

Text. "There shall be showers of blessings." Ezek. 34:36.

Story.

"Bettie said,
Rain! rain! rain!
Beating against the window pane,
I don't like the rain!
Mother said,
'Rain! rain! rain!'
It makes the corn grow,
It makes the flowers blow
It gives us water to drink
It is a blessing, I think,

So, I like the rain.

"Bettie said,
All mother says is true,
So I like the rain, too."

Poem.

"All that God blesses is most good,
When it is his sweet will."

Prayer. Jesus, I will like the rain because it is a blessing as well as the sunshine.

No. 5.

Text. "Be kind and tender-hearted one to another." Eph. 4:32.

Story. Ten-year-old Janie was a child of the slums. A man gave her a penny for picking up his hat. She ran to buy a stick of candy. A poor little lame girl met her and begged for a bite. Janie felt sorry for her and said, "Take it all. You can't scoot after hats and earn pennies, and I can. And if I earn another penny I'll give it to you to buy anything you want."

Poem.

"One smile can glorify a day,
Kindness new hope impart,
Not even a little child need say,
I have nothing to give away,
If love be in the heart."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, help me always to be kind and tender-hearted, like little Janie.

No. 6.

Text. "Overcome evil with good." Rom. 12:21.

Story. Little Sarah, showing her mother some plums, said, "A lady gave me more but I gave some of them away." "Who to?" "A little girl that pushes me and makes faces at me." "Why did you give them to her?" "I wanted her to know I love her. Maybe she will love me." The bad girl was not mean any more. She came to love Sarah and then to love Jesus.

Poem.

Soon our trials will be o'er.
When we reach the glory shore,
We shall sorrow never more,
Be glad we have overcome.

Prayer. Jesus, please teach me how I can overcome evil with good.

No. 7.

Text. A full reward shall be given thee." Ruth 2:12.

Story. "Mama, may I have a blackberry pie for my birthday?" "Yes, dear, if you will pick the berries." Edna took her dog Tim, and went and filled her basket. In the lot was a poor boy picking berries to sell so as to buy a birthday present for his mother. Tim frolicked and upset all the poor boy's berries. Edna knew she ought to give him hers. So she did. But they had a big blackberry pie for supper. Aunt Sarah had sent her a large basket of blackberries. Edna went to her room and knelt. This was her prayer: "O Lord Jesus, I thank you so much for the berries. And I am glad you did not let me be mean when Tim knocked over that little boy's basket."

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit a girl from the old North State to join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother takes The Herald and I like to read it very much. This is my first letter and I hope to see it in print. I live in a village by the sea. I am sixteen years old. Mother and I live alone. I have two brothers and one sister. Jan. 30, 1927, the death angel took away my dear father. He was one of the best men in the world. He was a Christian and happy all the time. I go to church and Sunday school every Sunday. All you cousins pray for me that I may live better in the future than I have in the past. The Lord bless you all.

Carethia Mae Midgette.
Rodanthe, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you scoot down and let a little Virginia girl have a seat right in the middle of your happy band? I won't stay long. I have never written to The Herald and would love to see this in print. I go to Sunday school every Sunday morning, church every Sunday night, and prayer meeting every Wednesday night. My school began Sept. 13th. I am in first year high school. I love to go to school and wouldn't care if I could go always. I wonder if I have a twin? I am fourteen years of age and my birthday is April 20. If I have a twin please write to me. I weigh 83 pounds, have light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion and am five feet, two inches short. Do any of you cousins play any kind of music? I play the piano and love to hear all kinds of music. Can any of you guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with Y, with four letters in it. There, I bet you have already guessed it. Well, as I am chatting too long I must close and give some one else a chance, hoping Mr. W. B. is taking his evening nap when this arrives.

Marian L. Moran.

Rt. 1, Box 187, Salem, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school and church every Sunday I can. I attend the Salem Baptist Church. Our pastor is Rev. Jno. K. Goode. I have coal black hair, rather fair complexion, and weigh 55 pounds. I go to school and am in the fifth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Edith Maxey. She is a real good teacher. I had my tonsils removed last Tuesday, so I haven't got well yet. I would love to hear from all the cousins. I am eight years of age. My birthday is Sept. 18. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I have four sisters and two brothers. My oldest sister is twenty-one years old and my youngest sister is five years old. Well, I must close, hoping Mr. W. B. is playing.

Elizabeth Moran.

Rt. 1, Box 187, Salem, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Ohio girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I will be nine years old Sept. 24. I have light hair and brown eyes. Have I a twin? I go to the U. B. Church. I am visiting my grandmother. I like to read page ten. My first name is Vida. Whoever guesses my middle name I will write them. It starts with L and ends with E, has six letters. I hope to see it in print.

Vida Stevens.

Hamden, Oh'.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a young girl between thirteen and eighteen years of age. I am five feet and two inches tall. I have dark brown hair, (bobbed), and blue eyes, and weigh 132 pounds. I would be glad to hear from some of you girls and boys. I will answer all letters received.

Olene O. Snow.

Red Boiling Springs, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. My grandma takes The Herald and gives it to me and I enjoy reading page ten. I am eleven years old and in the fifth grade. I go to church and Sunday school most every Sunday. I have long red hair, brown eyes and fair complexion. I hope Mr. W. B. is out when this arrives.

Eddie Letterman.

Day Book, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I hope that you will permit me to join your happy band of boys and girls. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. We have just received three copies of The Herald as we have just begun taking it. I certainly do enjoy it and most of all page ten. I am a girl fifteen years of age, have blue eyes, brown hair, am five feet and four inches tall. My birthday is December 24. Who has my birthday? I belong to the M. E. Church, but there isn't a church of that denomination in our community so I go to the Church of Christ as almost every one at Lost Creek belong to that church. I would love to get letters from all who care to write. I will answer all I can, but I'm a very busy girl now as I do nearly all the housework. M. Florence Owens, we named my baby brother, who was born July 14, 1927, Owen Thomas Lewis, so he has part of your name, and part of Hazel Thomas'. I am afraid my letter is so lengthy that Mr. W. B. will get me, so I'll close with best wishes to all.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will some of you Tennessee girls move over and give me a space? Our meeting closed last week. Bro. B. A. Standfill did the preaching. We all think he is a grand man. We had a good meeting and several found the Lord. I think everyone should be a Christian and be a worker for the Lord. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I am still blessed with my dear sweet mother. My father has been dead nine years. Mother is a Christian and trying to raise us up to work and live for the Lord. I have two sisters and five brothers. I have one sister married and two brothers. I am thirteen years old and in the sixth grade. Come on, Tennessee boys and girls, let's get ahead of the other States. I belong to the M. E. Church. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. I do not believe in going swimming on Sunday. Pray for me that I may live a Christian life. I will ring off for this time. Hand me my sun-hat, Mildred Jones, and I will be going.

Rt. 1, Montezuma, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit a Chicagoan into your happy band of boys and girls? Since we have been taking The Herald I have never seen a letter from Chicago, so I thought I would write. A very dear friend, Mrs. W. Carnduff, sends us The Herald, which I like very much. I wait so anxiously for it each week. I am a girl fifteen years old, and am 55 inches tall. I have brown hair with a reddish tinge and hazel brown eyes. When I was seven years old I got infantile paralysis. I now wear two braces, a plaster paris corset, and I walk with two crutches. My mother and two brothers are dead, but I have a father and sister, Louise, living. I live with a dear aunt who has taken very good care of me since I was three and a half years old. What I like to do the most is read, write, crochet, and make other little fancy-work. I am in my second year of high school, am taking French for my language. If any of the cousins can read or write French would be very glad to hear from you. If any of you can guess my middle name I shall write to you. It begins with G and ends with E and has nine letters in it. I am taking piano lessons and enjoy it very much.

Mattie M. Burgess, I guess your name to be Marie. Bertha F. McCulley, I guess your name to be Fae. Please do not forget your promises if I am right. Dear cousins, won't you all please write to me? As I cannot go outside and play, I like to sit in the house and read books, letters and papers. I would like very much to receive a letter from every state. I will answer every letter I receive whether from young or old, boy or girl. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking his piano lesson when this arrives.

DR. RIDOUT ON DRESS QUESTION.

At last the holiness people are going to have a real, outspoken, frank, powerful booklet on the Dress Question. Dr. Ridout has written it. Title is, "The Dress Question and Modern Abominations." Price will be 15c. Send in your order and read this book and get your friends to read it.

MT. ZION CAMP MEETING.

The Seventeenth Annual Camp Meeting of the Ozark Holiness Association, which meets at Mt. Zion, has come with hopeful anticipation and gone with blessed memories. It can be truly said that it was one of the best camps we have ever had. The weather was fine, the crowds were unusually large and after the first day or so there was hardly a barren service held during the entire camp. There was no count made of the number blessed at the altar services, which often lingered to a late hour, but perhaps fifty people received definite help from the Lord. One family who has recently moved to Mt. Zion, that they might get the advantages of Ozark Holiness Academy, are rejoicing in the fact that all five of their children were either saved or sanctified during the camp meeting services.

Rev. and Mrs. A. P. Breneman, of University Park, Iowa, were the evangelists in charge of the meeting. Their preaching was characterized by sanity and unction and it burned its way into the hearts of the needy present. Perhaps the crowning service of the entire camp was that of the last Saturday evening when Sister Breneman told of her wonderful work in the state prisons of Iowa. The large congregation was moved to tears again and again as she related how many of these poor, dejected inmates were being won to Christ and established in Christian character.

Our pastor, Rev. C. E. Woodson, who has recently come to us from Hope, Kan., was untiring in his many duties in the management of the camp. He preached once a day with clearness and power. Brother Woodson is also President of Ozark Holiness Academy and has supervision of the entire work at Mt. Zion. Under his efficient leadership the outlook for the work for the future is quite promising.

The children's meetings which met each day at nine o'clock were a special feature of the camp this year. These services were under the direction of Sister Breneman and I am sure that the parents of Mt. Zion vicinity feel they owe her a debt of gratitude for her efficient services in this regard. A demonstration of what was being done in this work toward the close of the camp showed that it was equal to a Daily Vacation Bible School in results. And it was, no doubt, through the influence of these meetings that a number of the children were brought to Christ.

FALLEN ASLEEP

TEAGUE.

Leman Teague, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Teague, of Falkville, Ala., departed this life Sept. 1, being twenty years of age. He gave his heart to God several years ago under the preaching of Rev. Kendall, but wandered away from the Lord for a time, but a short time before his death returned to the Lord. He told his father he was going home to live with God. He was a boy who always stood for the right. Pray for his brothers that they may give their hearts to the Lord.

His father,
H. C. Teague.

CULPEPPER.

Marvin M. Culpepper, son of the Rev. J. B. and Melvina Harper Culpepper, was born in a parsonage at Macon, Ga., Nov. 20, 1877. He departed this life in Monroe, La., Sept. 19, 1927. In the order of his birth, he was the second in a family of nine children. When a boy of eight years, while the congregation was singing, "Tis so sweet to trust in Jesus," he was born again—born of the Spirit. He received his early education in the public schools of Georgia, later took advanced work in the "Georgia Tech" University, attended Asbury College in Wilmore, Ky., and graduated from the department of Law in Northwestern University, Chicago, Ill.

He practiced law in Chicago for a short time then answered the call of God to preach the Gospel, and joined the Kansas Conference of the M. E. Church. After successful pastorates in Topeka, Junction City, Leavenworth, and Olathe, Kansas, he transferred to the St. Louis Conference and was appointed to Oakley M. E. Church in Kansas City. Here he suffered a severe attack of "flu," and asked to be sent South to a lower altitude. He served at Stuttgart, Ark., for four years, then became pastor of the First M. E. Church in Little Rock, and still declining in health was appointed to Trinity M. E. Church, San Antonio, Texas. Still failing in strength, he took a leave of absence and went to Monroe, La., to try out the ideal climatic conditions there. But his malady overmastered him and in six months he reached the end of the earthly pilgrimage.

On April 29, 1903, in Flemingsburg, Ky., he was united in marriage to Miss Daisy Ross, a consecrated and talented young lady, who has been a worthy and faithful helpmeet through all the years since. To this happy home three children came to bring their smiles and cheer and gladness. They are: Charles Ross, Sue Louise, and Melvina May; the daughters are at home with their mother.

Throughout his tedious and oftentimes painful affliction, Dr. Culpepper was patient, musing upon the goodness and mercy of God, searching out the deep things of both the Word and the Spirit, and preaching and teaching things both new and old to those who were near him.

Dr. Culpepper was a true man of God. In his preaching he was fearless, aggressive, and persuasive. He carefully prepared his sermons, and put into each one of them a clarion evangelistic note. He preached with a view to results, and God signally honored the message with the tokens of his presence and power.

The funeral services were held in the First M. E. Church, South, in West Monroe, La., and were attended by a goodly company of sympathizing friends. The pastor of the Church, the Rev. A. S. Lutz, was in charge, and Rev. D. W. Britton, of Carthage, Mo., and Rev. V. C. Clark, of Stuttgart, Ark., gave messages of comfort and hope. The choir of the local church led in the music, and Miss Dorothy Lu Cason, of Monroe, sang as a solo, "Crossing the Bar." The floral tributes were profuse and beautiful and represented the sympathy of congregations in Topeka, Leavenworth, Kansas City, etc., where the deceased had once been pastor.

In his going, Dr. Culpepper leaves his aged parents, two brothers, Burke Culpepper of Memphis, Tenn., and J. B. Culpepper, Jr., of New Smyrna, Fla., both distinguished evangelists; also three sisters, Mrs. E. C. Shannon, Monroe, La.; Mrs. Wilbur Park, Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. J. G. Mackey, Tampa, Fla. These, with the bereaved wife and children abide to mourn his early going. He did not live long, but he lived well, and crowded into less than a half century such constructive evangelism that he left the world much better than he found it. After the obsequies, the body was taken to the beautiful cemetery in Flemingsburg, Ky., and tenderly laid to rest in the family lot there.

If "your boy is your business" you ought, by all means to read "Fathers and Sons," by Samuel S. Drury. It will make you a better father. Only $1.50. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. I. J. S.: "Please to pray that I may be filled with the Holy Ghost, and that my body be healed."

W. T. D.: "Please to pray for a woman whose husband has mistreated her, that she may have grace sufficient for every trial."

A sister who has suffered long desires the prayers of The Herald readers that she may be healed, and that she may have victory over the last enemy.

S. J. C.: "Pray that my boy may be saved and sanctified."

Mrs. M. B. P.: "I desire the prayers of The Herald family that I may be healed of a malignant tumor."

A Holiness Convention will be held in the West End M. E. Church by the United Holiness Association of Pittsburgh, Oct. 7 to 16, with Rev. E. L. Hyde as the evangelist.

"The Girl Who Found Herself," the thrilling story of a society girl's redemption, by Rev. Jack Linn, the evangelist. A recent letter tells how a man in Ohio prayed through to good victory after reading the book, and his wife saw such a change in him that she prayed through also. One of the best books for a young man or woman. Price 50 cents. Order from this office.

FAITH, OBEDIENCE, VICTORY.

Joshua 3:5.

"Sanctify yourselves," I read
These wondrous words one day,
"Tomorrow I'll do wonders,
I'll cast the tides away."

"And ye shall pass unto a land
Not bought with price of money,
Ye shall possess a goodly land
Which flows with milk and honey."

"This blessing will I give to thee
For which ye labored not,
And it shall be divided Unto the tribes by lot."

"And when thou hast possessed it
Remember this: thy God
Hast given all into your hand
Whereon thy foot doth tread."

"Praise God! I took him at his word
And stepped into the brim
Of the rushing, mighty waters,
But my faith was stayed in him.

Forgetting all save with my Lord
Forever to abide,
I sanctified myself and crossed
Unto the other side.

O, may we trust his promises,
Obey his e'er command;
Then great shall be our portion,— Eternal Canaan's Land.

New Books for Preachers

FAMILIAR FAILURES.

By Rev. Clovis Chappell, D.D. Author of Sermons on Biblical Characters.

With that rare ability for character analysis which has distinguished his other books on Bible characters, Dr. Chappell here depicts the Idler, the Slave of the Second Best, the Distant Disciple, the Successful Failure, and other types of men who in Bible times and in our own day have made a failure of the business of life. He presents the person and the type engagingly, shows the factors operative in each failure, and how dangerously common to all are the mistakes of each. The book is an excellent addition to that fine series of character studies which has given the author a wide and alert audience.

Price $1.60.

THINKING THROUGH THE SCRIPTURES.

By William Parker White, M.A., D.D. Member of Extension Department of the Moody Bible Institute.

A brief syllabus of the Bible by books, written by a man of wide practical experience in teaching the Scriptures. It is designed to provoke individual Bible study as well as to afford a standard conservative textbook for Sunday school teaching courses. By dividing the books of the Bible up into eight groups and placing questions of great pertinence after each group, the author accomplishes a plan which will prove immensely helpful to the reader in private devotions and to the group bent upon a fuller understanding and appreciation of the divine message.

Price $1.75.

THE CHRISTIANITY OF THE EPISTLES.

By Arthur W. Robinson, D.D.

In a lively, readable style, and with a profound interest in the historical, Canon Robinson gives the gist of each Epistle, the circumstances which led to its writing, and the heart of the message it contains for the modern mind. The book will prove surprisingly informing and inspiring to youth, and to all those who would understand the Epistles, and their relation to the Christian life of ancient days and modern times.

Price $1.25.

THE PROPHETS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

By Alexander R. Gordon, D.D.

Ever since this book was first issued its worth has been amply attested in England, Canada and America. It is at once delightful and profound, combining the results of wide research and authoritative scholarship with the attractiveness of poetic expression. Dr. Gordon discusses the purposes and messages of the Prophets, but he devotes particular attention to the character of the Prophets. The book serves well to instruct the reader in matters of Biblical history and to inspire him by contact with the outstanding leaders of Israel's history.

Price $2.00.

FAST HOLD ON FAITH, and other Sermons.

By Rev. Henry Howard, Minister of Fourth Ave. Presbyterian Church, New York City.

Here Dr. Howard deals with the august facts of Christian experience in a manner which cannot but inspire fortitude in an age of timid thought and compromising action. The sure foundation of the Christian truth.

Price $2.00.

REPRESENTATIVE CHURCHMEN OF TWENTY CENTURIES.

A Cross-section of Christian History and Endeavor. By Hugh Watt, D.D.

Beginning in the first century with Paul this book traces Christianity through the ages. For each century the author picks out one man; the one who stands out above all in his time. Anyone who longs for a short biographical sketch of such men as Constantine, Augustine, Charlemagne, Francis of Assisi, and many others, will particularly appreciate this book for it makes possible a general knowledge of all these men without having to dig through hundreds of volumes.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson IV.—October 23, 1927.

Subject.—The Call of the Prophet.
I Kings 19:19,20; Amos 7:14,15; Isaiah 6:1-8.

Golden Text.—Also I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me. Isaiah 6:8.

Time.—Elisha's call, 906; Amos' call, 787; Isaiah's call, 760. We do not claim that these dates are accurate; but they are as nearly correct as we can get them.

Places.—Abel-meholah, Tekoa, Bethel and Jerusalem.

Introduction.—Before discussing the call of these three men to the prophetic office, it may be helpful to some for us to state that ministers of the gospel are antitypes of Old Testament prophets, and not of Jewish priests. Jesus Christ was, and is, the complete fulfillment of the Jewish high priesthood; and, inasmuch as he is our High Priest forever, there can never be any other high priest taken from among men. He offered the last sacrifice that can ever be made for sin. We say this in the face of the fact that Romish priests make a pretence of offering up Jesus Christ anew in the celebration of the mass. They cannot do it. The entire ceremony is sacrilegious. The priests (so called) may be perfectly sincere when they celebrate the mass; but, inasmuch as they have no semblance of scriptural authority therefore, they are distressingly mistaken. And yet, in a very true and beautiful sense, every genuine Christian is a priest whose duty and privilege it is to offer up spiritual sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving to God. But let us remember that we can add nothing to the offering that Christ made for sin when he by the grace of God tasted death for every man, and cried it is finished.

The Call of Elisha.—While Elisha was called from his plow to the prophetic office, he must have been a well-to-do farmer of that day. He had twelve yoke of oxen; and we suppose that he was using eleven hired men to help him with his plowing. He was a good man, for God does not call bad men to this high office—if they get in, they must steal in; but if he had any intimation through the Divine Spirit of his call previous to Elijah's visit, we are not informed of it. The call was sublime in its simplicity. Picture to yourself the plowman following his oxen. There was nothing remarkable in his appearance to differentiate him from his hired men. Elijah the Tishbite passed by in his journey, and simply threw his prophet's mantle over Elisha. That was a wee bit strange, perhaps, to ordinary folk; but Elisha understood its full import—he was called to be a prophet of Jehovah. Elijah passed on, but the plowman ran after him, crying, 'Let me, I pray thee, kiss my father and my mother, and then will I follow thee.' He wished to say good bye to his parents, and to have a sacrificial feast for the entire household before leaving; and that was all right and becoming; but Elijah seems to have been afraid that the new prophet would miss the significance of his call. This came out when "he said unto him, Go back again: for what have I done to thee?" In other words, he did not wish Elisha to think that he had called him to the office of a prophet by throwing his mantle over him. What he had done was but a sign: the real call was from Jehovah, who not only called Jewish men to the prophetic office, but who also calls every Christian minister to his life's work. The Christian ministry is not a career, but a calling. If a man lack this, he may do some very learned talking, but he can never preach. I may remind my readers again, that no man can preach without the unction of the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, as Peter puts it.

The Call of Amos.—This prophet came likewise from what some call the lower walks of life. He says of himself, that he was "among the herdmen of Tekoa," a small village 12 miles south of Jerusalem in the bounds of the tribe of Judah, to which tribe he belonged. For some reason he did not exercise his office in his native town; may be it was because a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country and among his own kindred. His field of labor was at Bethel, a place noted for its idolatry. As far as we can learn, the place was rather given over to sin; but Amos, although a peasant, denounced sinners and sin of every sort and at close quarters. He seemed rather to delight in his humble origin, for in our lesson we find him telling Amaziah: "I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was an herdman, and a gatherer of sycomore fruit," a sort of inferior variety of figs. He goes on to tell Amaziah: "The LORD took me as I followed the flock, and the LORD said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel." God is still calling his preachers from the humble walks of life. We are prone to think those from the higher walks would be an improvement on his method; but I make bold to say that he cannot use the latter class. Perchance they would not heed, were he to call them, because the world is offering them too many inducements to follow its ways. God is no respecter of persons; and he would use the wellborn, if he could.

The Call of Isaiah.—Our lesson portion is taken from the sixth chapter of his prophecy. Here we meet a man from high position—well educated, and associating with the very highest classes in Jerusalem, even with royalty. God calls such men when he can get them to answer. Would that multitudes of them would obey as did Isaiah.

This sixth chapter has been a battle ground between holiness advocates and holiness opposers. That live coal from the altar, that touched Isaiah's lips, and purified his heart, has been the puzzle. One class of teachers tells us that he was a good man before that hour, and that Jehovah sanctified him wholly; while the other class makes bold to declare that he was regenerated at that time, and that this was his call to the prophetic office. I am inclined to believe that he was about the best man there was in all the kingdom that morning when he went into the temple to pray. Of course, the fight is against a second blessing. People are willing to claim any number of blessings, provided they can escape the second. However, some things are manifest from the lesson before us.

I. While it is not definitely so stated, I think it can be clearly inferred that Isaiah was a good man before the experience recorded in this sixth chapter. He certainly was a devout, prayerful man who walked with God according to the light given him; and such men are accepted with God.

II. The first verse of his first chapter shows that this was not the first time he had met Jehovah; for he had spiritual visions "concerning Judah and Jerusalem in the days of Uzziah"; but the experience recorded in the sixth chapter occurred "in the year that king Uzziah died." Commentators tell us that the inference is, that he saw the Lord in the temple after the death of Uzziah. How long he prophesied before the king's death is not revealed.

III. His vision of Jehovah and the worshipping seraphim put him on his face, and showed him the condition of his own heart. It was unclean, and the trouble had broken out on his lips: he was indulging in foul words; and his people among whom he dwelt were in a similar condition. A vision of God always brings this twofold vision to the heart of a true preacher, unless he and his people have been wholly sanctified through the blood.

IV. While he did not ask for it, as far as we are informed, Jehovah commanded one of the seraphim to take a coal "from off the altar," and lay it upon Isaiah's mouth. This live coal was a type of the purifying fire of the Holy Ghost; wherefore the seraph said to him: "Lo, this hath touched thy lips; and thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." It was done for the purpose of spiritual purification.

V. When this purification had taken place, Isaiah says: "I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then said I, Here am I; send me." I have noticed for some years, that when people get wholly sanctified, this experience of the prophet is repeated. If our preachers and people had what came to Isaiah on that wonderful day, we would take the world for Christ—there would be revivals everywhere.

AYCOCK'S NEW BOOK

"THE CRIMSON STREAM."

A Devotional Sermon on the Blood

The first and perhaps the principal appeal of this new title is the fact that it fills a real need in our book list. No subject is of more vital importance, no tenet of orthodoxy is more assiduously assailed by the modernists than that of atonement by the blood of Christ.

Read the following excerpt.

"This splendid little book, 'The Crimson Stream,' is presenting to the lovers of truth, the believers in the fundamentals of the faith once delivered to the saints, a publication full of interest, light, and essential facts bearing upon a right attitude toward God, the Bible, and personal salvation. He has placed emphasis where it is most needed. It should be widely scattered and read by thousands of honest and earnest seekers after truth and righteousness such as will stand the test of time and eternity."
—R. T. Williams.

This booklet is unusually attractive, bound in buff colored, imitation leather cover with two-color design.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Herbert J. McNeese: "My Providence, R. I., meeting having been cancelled due to financial condition there, I have an open date at once. We preach the Wesleyan doctrines, and try to do a thorough rather than a big work. We hold testimonials from Nazarene Evangelists and Salvation Army Officer. Completed two courses from one of America's best Bible Schools. Write us at New Brighton, Pa."

Rev. H. M. Smart: "We leave Stambaugh, Mich., this week for our new home, 1409 West Washington St., Ann Arbor. I am open for work along pentecostal lines and shall be glad to hear from persons desiring my service."

C. O. Brooks: "A two-weeks' meeting at Asbury Chapel, Drexel, Mo., Rev. J. Johnson, preacher, recently closed. Brother Johnson holds to the old-time faith and, like Paul, preaches those things which he hath both seen and heard. A number prayed through and the church was greatly revived."

Mrs. Lutie Cantril: "God answered prayer in sending some holy men to conduct a meeting in Milton, Ia., lasting four weeks. I was wonderfully healed of cancer of the nose. I thank God for the manifestation of his presence and the good that was accomplished."

Rev. John E. Hewson, 127 N. Chester Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., has some open dates that he will be glad to give anyone desiring evangelistic services. Brother Hewson is one of our most earnest evangelists and will be a blessing to any community.

Joseph H. Lewis, conference evangelist of the Kentucky Conference, is making up his slate and desires to hear from pastors and people who could use him in revival work. He preaches a full gospel. Brother Lewis is a graduate of Asbury College and has had much experience in revival work. He is O. K. from every standpoint. His address is 508 N. Lexington Ave., Wilmore, Ky.

S. H. Golden: "Sister Mattie Melton held a meeting in Oak Grove Church which was well attended and much interest manifested. We ask the prayers of The Herald family that our work may prosper and God be glorified."

F. M. C. Eads: "September 18 we closed a fine two-weeks' meeting at Greensboro, Fla., in which much good was done. Six persons united with the church on profession of faith at a previous meeting in March. In both meetings the preaching was done by Rev. R. J. Haskew, of Dothan, Ala. He is one of our general evangelists and I wish to recommend him as a cultured, consecrated and fearless preacher of the whole gospel. He holds his congregations with ever increasing interest. His financial methods are above criticism. He turns everything to the pastor's interest, getting up the claims, and yet is well taken care of himself. If you need a helper who leads his own singing, and who has no objectionable parts, secure R. J. Haskew."

Dr. H. C. Morrison's New Book.

The title of this new book from the pen of its gifted author is not only very suggestive, but runs true to the title to the end. If any one has rejected the glorious doctrine of the pre-millennial coming of our Lord, because he thought it a pessimistic teaching, if he will read Dr. Morrison's new book, unbiased, he will find that the teaching of the pre-millennial coming of Jesus is the most optimistic view of life and the world held by any class of people.

There are some very thrilling, thought-provoking statements made in the last two chapters, and contrary to many books this one reaches its climax in the closing chapters. It is well worth the price, $1.00.

STOP! READ! ACT!

DO YOU KNOW that there are many people right in your own community who do not know that there is such a paper as THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, who would be glad to know of it?

DO YOU KNOW that THE HERALD is a weekly blessing to thousands of our less fortunate brothers and sisters who are unable to get out to church on Sunday as you and I do?

DO YOU KNOW that nearly every week THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD carries a holiness sermon to many people who never hear one preached from a pulpit?

DO YOU KNOW that there is not a better, more wholesome sixteen pages of holiness reading matter, for the whole family, than in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD?

DO YOU KNOW that if you, as one of the present great family of readers will send THE HERALD into four new homes it's influence will be increased fourfold?

DO YOU KNOW that it is your great privilege to join with us in the attempt we are making to preach scriptural holiness to all men everywhere?

DO YOU KNOW that you can send THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD to some friend for the next three months for 25c?

KEEP THE CONSCIENCE TENDER.

By The Editor.

At tender, good conscience is of great value. The conscience is a God-given guard. It is most unfortunate to give it an education out of harmony with the teachings and will of God. If properly instructed and well taken care of, it may be trusted as almost infallible with reference to its warning voice against any line of conduct. When the conscience says, "No" it is very dangerous to ignore the protest of conscience and listen to the voice of appetite or will that says "Yes" in contradiction to the "No" of conscience.

* * * * *

This inward voice that insists upon right doing, that condemns wicked actions, that produces a sense of burden and remorse when wicked deeds are performed, that gives peace and comfort when one acts in harmony with this inward voice and things that are good, is invaluable. Let the reader be careful and very slow to violate the decisions and persuasions of this inward voice.

* * * * *

Keep a good conscience, a conscience void of offense, a conscience that will let you sleep in peace. When tempted to do wrong, listen to this inward monitor, this faithful, old, appellate judge, who sits quietly on his seat within the breast and renders his decisions. You may ignore him until his voice becomes very quiet. You may so wound and stab him with the dagger of indifference and wickedness that he seems to be dead, that he appears to cease to protest, but he is alive and by and by like the smoldering fires in a volcano he will rise in his might and there will be an eruption. The conscience will cry out and awaken remorse and the torturing sense of guilt.

* * * * *

Judas Iscariot loved money. He coveted it. He kept the sacred coin for his own use. If conscience protested, which no doubt it did, he ignored its warning voice and went on in his sin until he could carry forward his wicked transactions with little thought beyond his guilty sins. He wanted money. He loved it. He stole and secreted it. He longed for more of it. He sold his Master, the Son of God and the Redeemer of men for thirty pieces of silver. He betrayed him with a kiss. He was so absorbed with his money-getting that he drowned the inner voice or refused to listen to its protest until by and by the guilty deed done, the inner voice would have its way. It broke loose from its captivity. It lashed him with the hot scorpions of remorse. It drove him beyond the confines of hope. It hurried him on to the rope, the noose, the awful suicide. An outraged conscience becomes an inward furnace of the quenchless fires of torment. Let us keep a good conscience. Listen carefully to the voice within the breast. Never ignore its warnings. Never refuse to listen to its pleadings. Encourage its whisperings with obedience to its suggestions, warnings and commands. Make it tender and lively with Bible truth, with a spirit of prayer and obedience to the

REFERRING AGAIN TO OUR REVIVAL NUMBER OF THE HERALD.

It is to be published the last week in November. We want to distribute a large number of these papers among the people; several thousands of our subscribers who are interested should order twenty-five, fifty, a hundred or two hundred copies of this issue and sow them broadcast among the people. It is very well to complain about the unbelief, the worldliness, the wickedness that is breaking in upon the church, but it is far better to do something to counteract these evil influences. We believe that we are preparing an issue of The Pentecostal Herald that will be of real value in helping to awaken the people to the need and stirring them up to pray and work for a true revival of religion. Send us in some matter for this issue and place your order for as many copies of The Herald as you can distribute in your community. These copies will be sold very cheap and they will not only be equal to a tract, but to a good large book on the subject of revivals. Let us hear from you at once.

H. C. M.

Word and will of God. Such a conscience will never deceive you, but will always join with the Word and Spirit and your own good will and you will find peace and rest within your soul.

Open Letter to a Young Preacher.

My Dear Young Brother:

IN my letter to you last week, I promised some further suggestions with reference to your preaching at the camp meeting next summer.

Let us suppose you are now on the ground. You have your sermons prepared. You have written them out on the typewriter. You have them in full, or at least copious notes that give you confidence. You will go over them carefully on your knees in prayer before going to the pulpit. I hope you will preach without manuscript before you. It is better still not to have notes. Remember you are at camp meeting. You must preach camp meeting sermons. Don't hold your Bible in your hand. You might do that at prayer meeting, in your church at home. You are not giving a Bible reading now, but you are preaching at camp meeting.

The afternoon is a trying hour. It is hot. The people are a bit drowsy. The preliminaries are lengthy. The announcements have attached to them exhortations. The people are somewhat bored. Announcements hardly ever can be made interesting, but they can be made a real provoking trial and hindrance to a meeting. But they are a necessary evil. They should take three minutes; they often take a quarter of an hour, sometimes twenty minutes. The people are a bit restless before you get a chance at them. I beg you not to get up and read a long lesson. Please don't. This is camp meeting. Don't say, "I know this is a hot, sleepy hour." Have some sense. Don't scold if some one gets up and goes out. Don't stand there silent and glare at them as if they committed an unpardonable sin. Shoot! Read your text, a short text. Don't scream or mumble. Make the people hear you, but give your voice a chance to rise and fall. Guard against a clatter of words. Words with no clear meaning are useless and offensive to a very ordinary intelligence. Keep your head up and shoulders back so you can breathe well into your lungs. That is healthful and will help you to be deliberate, clear and positive.

I have a friend who is a good camp meeting preacher, but he will go from text to Amen without a pause or period. It becomes tiresome. Words, words, words beat upon your brain and nerves until you feel you are bound to have relief. You do wish he would come to a full stop, straighten up, get a good long breath, and give you a chance to grip what he has said. You should come to a climax at the close of each division of your sermon, reach a full period, straighten up, throw your shoulders back, take a deep breath, let the people get what you have said and fasten upon the truth you have uttered. Pigeon-hole it in their minds so to speak, then on you go, the people with you. Be friendly with your audience, let them feel that the man speaking to them is deeply concerned for their happiness here and hereafter. Illustrate your main points clearly and forcibly, but not too many illustrations for one point. Always illustrate a sermon but do not flood, wash away or obscure your sermon with illustrations. Put yourself into your message, get the iron of your thought hot and strike, strike it quick and hard, strike it again and again. Rivet the truth into the minds of your hearers. Now call for seekers.

You must have a good moving song. The song has much to do with the fruitfulness of your sermon. It would not hurt if you should suggest a song to the song leader before you preach. It would save the leader from constantly turning the leaves of his song book searching for an appropriate song while you are preaching. The leader of the singing will not object to your indicating to him what you wish him to sing. Most of our camp meeting song leaders are very quick and wise in the selection of appropriate hymns, but they will not object if you indicate to them what you wish to have sung after you have concluded your sermon and made the call for seeking souls. Make your invitation to the altar of prayer very clear, but do not go too much into detail and explanation about whom you wish to come until the tide of feeling has run down and you fail to strike the moment for action.

Be careful in those afternoon sermons not to preach too long. Guard at this point. I speak from long experience and many mistakes I have made at this point. It is well known that this has been an unfortunate fault of mine. I often preach too long. It is dangerous to tire the people out, to have

MEN AND MOVEMENTS ACROSS THE SEA.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

HIS article is being written in the old City of Bristol England, one of the chief cities of the realm of nearly half million people. It is famous for many things, but to religious people it has a big interest because George Muller's Orphanage is here; and to Methodists it is a center of attraction because here Charles Wesley lived for over twenty years; here John Wesley built one of his first meeting houses, and here it was after St. Phillip's Church closed its doors against him that he went outside and, as he put it in his diary, became "even more vile" and preached for the first time in the open air; here also he had his first school for preachers. This morning, through the kindness of Rev. A. J. Broadbelt, of the great Central Mission, we had the privilege of visiting all these points. The old chapel which served John Wesley for preaching purposes, for his theological school, and where he held his second conference attended by seven preachers, is now in the slum district of the city, and is in the hands of the Calvinistic Methodists, a small body of people. The old building possibly could be bought for a couple of thousands of dollars, and it would be a good thing if it could be preserved as a Memorial of Methodism. Also we visited the house where Charles Wesley lived from 1749 to 1791. A tablet on this building situated in a very congested tenement section of the city bears this record:

"Rev. Charles Wesley, M.A., resided here for 22 years, 1749-1771. His hymns are the possession of the Christian Church. Born 1707; died 1788."

Some of Charles Wesley's greatest hymns were written in Bristol and no doubt it was here he wrote that greatest of all his hymns, "Jesus, Lover of my Soul." This house seems to be in a good state of preservation and could possibly be bought for a thousand dollars. It would be a fine thing if this house could be purchased by some good Methodist and the building preserved as a Memorial and Museum of Methodist Hymnology. It would be an ideal place in which to house relics of the greatest poet of Methodism.

Bristol is a city of churches. The Baptists have a great many churches here and a college; the Congregationalists likewise. The Plymouth Brethren have a large number of chapels. The Church of England have a vast number of churches and a great Cathedral, and the Methodists have forty or fifty churches and chapels. Possibly the greatest of Methodist centers is the Central Mission in Old Market Street which draws a Sunday night congregation of over 2,000 people.

It was our privilege to give the message at Central last night. It was our first service in England and was positively most inspiring. On my left, sat a group of young men reminding me very much of our boys at Asbury College. The atmosphere was charged with the spirit of prayer; the singing of such hymns as "Arise, my soul, arise," "Draw me nearer," etc., was soul inspiring. It was easy to preach and we had a good time unfolding the message from 1 Cor. 2:10.

The History of Bristol Central Mission is full of the miraculous answers to prayer. When Rev. J. A. Broadbelt was sent here by Wesleyan Conference in 1922 he discovered a new version of Exodus 14:15: "Speak unto the church at Old Market Street that it go forward." The congregation at that time was in the fifties and hundreds only. Mr. Broadbelt (who by the way received his initial training and inspiration for this kind of work under Rev. J. Gregory Mantle, when he was running his great Wesleyan London Mission) adopted as his motto for the Mission the following:

"Have Faith in God!

Faith that receives from God,
Faith that reckons upon God,
Faith that risks for God,
Faith that rejoices in God."

Bristol is a city of 385,000 people and being largely industrial this great mass of people has naturally a great percent of working people. This type of city always responds to real gospel effort. Mr. Broadbelt had a vision and faith in God. As he told us the story of the great building, not yet six years old, which they built at a cost of over $200,000, and dedicated it practically free of debt, he said that at the outset he called his workers together and said to them, "There are four things we must form a League of Prayer for:

1. "That the word of the Lord may run and be glorified.

2. "That new workers may be raised up; men and women full of faith and the Holy Spirit.

3. "That the church may be spiritual, evangelistic, missionary.

4. "That God will undertake all financial burdens for us, and that the Hall may be opened free of debt."

Another slogan adopted by the Mission was:

"Pray about everything,
Always expect something,
Be thankful for anything,
Grumble about nothing."

British Methodism may give American Methodism some valuable lessons along certain lines, particularly in the matter of establishing great evangelistic centers in the chief cities. In such cities as London, Leeds, Manchester, Hull, Birmingham, New Castle, etc., there are great "Central Missions," as they call them, and generally men are put in charge of this kind of work who have the evangelistic note. Such men as Hugh Price Hughes, Collier, Wiseman, Chadwick, Mantle, etc., have carried on these enterprises. They are men of high intellectual attainments, great preachers and well up in the art of soul winning. How different our American Methodism! We build million dollar skyscrapers, rent out stores and offices to pay the expenses, have an auditorium for the church services and that is about as far as we go. Why should we not have in such cities as Philadelphia, New York, Louisville, San Francisco, Chattanooga, Boston, etc., great evangelistic centers gathering thousands to gospel services as well as running an institution which can serve the community or city along various useful, social and philanthropic lines.

It was our high privilege recently to visit George Muller's famous Orphanages. They are situated in a suburb of Bristol—Ashley Downs. Mr. Muller died in 1898, at the age of 93 years. During his life of prayer he had about six millions of dollars come to him for his orphans in answer to prayer. He was never known to have asked any man for a shilling for his work. He made known his needs to God only. Indeed Mr. Muller was led to start the orphanage work in an unbelieving and agnostic age (1836) to demonstrate the fact that God answers prayer. He wrote his purpose in the following words:

"I long to have something to point to as a visible proof that our God and Father is the same faithful God as he ever was. It needed to be something that could be seen even by the natural eye. Now if I, a poor man, simply by prayer and faith, obtained, without asking any individual, the means for establishing and carrying on an Orphans' Home, there would be something which, with the Lord's blessing might be a testimony to the consciences of the unconverted of the reality of the things of God."

Dr. Bergin, the present Director of the Institution, gave us an hour of his time during our visit to answer our many questions, to explain the work, and to show us around some of the buildings. He gave us one of the mottoes of the Orphanage. It has George Muller's own words on it. They are these:

"GOD IS STILL THE LIVING GOD AND NOW AS WELL AS THOUSANDS OF YEARS AGO, HE LISTENS TO THE PRAYERS OF HIS CHILDREN AND HELPS THOSE WHO TRUST IN HIM."

In passing let me note this fact, that it was the reading of Mr. Muller's narrative by James McQuilken, of Ireland in 1856, that indirectly led to the Irish Revival which broke out in 1859. Mr. McQuilken said as he read of Muller: "See what Mr. Muller obtains simply by prayer. Thus may I obtain blessing by prayer." A stream of prayer followed by McQuilken, McNeely and others, and the Irish Revival broke out in Belfast and swept all through the country.

A visit to Bath was a matter of keenest interest to us. Here are the hot Baths originated by the Romans in the days of Julius Caesar. Here we saw Roman masonry, sculpture, plumbing, etc. Even as late as a few years ago excavations disclosed other important Roman works. Bath will be remembered by readers of Methodist history as the city of Beau Nash who opposed John Wesley and who, at one time, tried to bring on a riot while Wesley was preaching in the open air. It was unfortunate for Nash; John Wesley knew some disagreeable facts about his character and silenced him with some of the most incisive words ever said in public to a dude or dandy.

In Bath Abbey, which is a Church of Cathedral importance, and in fact, is second only to Westminster Abbey, in the number of tablets and monuments to noted people, there are inscribed on one of the more modern tablets some words by John Wesley. Now it is well to remember that though Wesley originated the Methodist Society, he never left the Established Church of England. Evidently the Rector of the Abbey wanted to advertise the fact so on the tablet giving the "succession" of the Bishops he adds these words of Wesley uttered in 1790: "I dare not separate from the church. I believe it would be a sin so to do." Then fifteen months before he died he said: "I declare once more, I live and die a member of the Church of England and that those who regard my judgment or advice will never separate from it." John Wesley died in 1791; his memory is enshrined in Westminster Abbey in a simple tablet put there by Dean Stanley. In our next letter we shall write a few things about Westminster. We shall be in London in a few days and our next will be after our visit there.

"Beautiful Girlhood"

The book was written by Mable Hale, price $1.00 may be purchased through The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

This book, delightfully written for girls is one of the most inspiring for character building to be read. It takes a vision into the depths of womanhood to create in others the desire to live up to an ideal. Mable Hale has given in her book facts which will help girls understand themselves as well as others, in thoughts, attitudes and expressions of development. This book will inspire girls to a greater effort of living true, sincere lives, if they would be all that the title, "Beautiful Girlhood" implies.

The above is an unsolicited testimonial written by Miss Aileene Lewis, director of young people's work, The Kentucky Council of Religious Education.

THE POWER OF STILLNESS.

Rev. A. B. Simpson.

"A Still Small Voice." 1 Kings 19:12.
"Be Still, and know that I am God." Ps.
46:10.

It was "a still small voice" or the "sound of a gentle stillness." Is there any note of music in all the chorus as mighty as the emphatic pause? Is there any word in all the Psalter more eloquent than the one word, Selah (Pause)? Is there anything more thrilling and awful than the hush that comes before the bursting of the tempest, and the strange quiet that seems to fall upon all nature before some preternatural phenomenon or convulsion? Is there anything that can so touch our hearts as the power of stillness?

The sweetest blessing that Christ brings us is the Sabbath rest of the soul, of which the Sabbath of creation was the type. There is, for the heart that will cease from itself, "the peace of God that passeth all understanding;" a quietness and confidence, which is the source of all strength; a sweet peace, "which nothing can offend." There is, in the deepest center of the believer's soul, a chamber of peace where God dwells, and where, if we will only enter in and hush every other sound, we can hear his "still small voice."

A score of years ago a friend placed in my hands a little book, which became one of the turning points in my life. It was called "True Peace," and was an old mediaeval message. It had but one thought, and it was this—that God was waiting in the depths of my being to talk to me if I would only get still enough to hear his voice.

I thought this would be a very easy matter, and so I began to get still. But I had no sooner commenced than a pandemonium of voices reached my ears, a thousand clamoring notes from without and within, until I could hear nothing but their noise and din. Some of them were my own questions, some of them my own cares and some were my very prayers. Others were the suggestions of the tempter and the voices from the world's turmoil. Never before did there seem so many things to be done, to be said, to be thought. In every direction I was pushed and pulled, and greeted with noisy acclamations and unspeakable unrest. It seemed necessary for me to listen to some of them and to answer; but God said, "Be still, and know that I am God."

Then came the conflict of thoughts for the morrow, with its duties and cares. But God said: "Be still." And as I listened, and slowly learned to obey, and shut my ears to every sound, I found after a while, that when the other voices ceased, or I ceased to hear and heed them, there was a still, small voice in the depths of my being that began to speak with an inexpressible tenderness, power, and comfort. As I listened it became to me the voice of prayer, and the voice of wisdom, and the voice of duty, and I did not need to think so hard, but that "still, small voice" of the Holy Spirit in my heart was God's prayer in my secret soul; was God's answer to all my questions; was God's life and strength for soul and body, and became the substance of all knowledge, and all prayer, and all blessing; for it was the living GOD himself as my life and my all.

We cannot go through life strong and fresh on constant express trains, with ten minutes for lunch; but we must have quiet hours, secret places of the Most High, times of waiting upon the Lord, when we renew our strength, and learn to mount up on wings as eagles, and then come back to run and not be weary, and to walk and not faint.

The best thing about this stillness is that it gives God a chance to work. "He that is entered into his rest hath ceased from his own works, even as God did from his." When we cease from our works, God works in us; when we cease from our thoughts, God's thoughts come into us; when we get still from our restless activity, "God worketh in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure," and we have but to work it out.

Beloved! let us take his stillness; let us dwell in "the secret place of the Most High;" let us enter into God and his eternal rest; let us silence the other sounds, and then we can hear "the still, small voice."

Then there is another kind of stillness: the stillness that lets God work for us, and we hold our peace; the stillness that ceases from controversy, and self-vindication, and expediencies of wisdom and forethought, and lets God provide and answer the unkind word, and the cruel blow, in his own unfailing, faithful love. How often we lose God's interposition by taking up our own cause and striking for our own defence.

There is no spectacle in all the Bible so sublime as the silent Saviour answering not a word to the men that were maligning him, and whom he could have laid prostrate at his feet by one look of Divine power, or one word of fiery rebuke. But he let them do their worst and he stood in the power of stillness—God's holy, silent Lamb.

God give to us this silent power, this mighty self-surrender, this conquered spirit, which will make us "more than conquerors through him that loved us." Let our voice and our life speak like "the still, small voice" of Horeb, and as the "sound of a gentle stillness." Then after the heat and strife of earth are over, men will remember us as we remember the morning dew, the mellow light and sunshine, the evening breeze, the Lamb of Calvary, and the gentle, Holy, Heavenly Dove.

Here, There and Everywhere.

RAYMOND BROWNING.

SOME time ago in a South Carolina town an old lady remarked to a friend, "Your pastor preached a mighty fine sermon last Sunday." "What did he preach about?" the other inquired. "Well, just one thing and then another." That's the way this letter is going to be written and for a beginning point I will start at Charleston, W. Va., where for two weeks beginning June 19, it was our privilege to do most of the preaching for the Kanawha Valley Holiness camp meeting of which that princely layman, Fred Morris, is president. Dr. Westfall, a former pastor, and Dr. King, the present pastor of the Methodist Church that sponsors this camp meeting, both assisted in the services. The singing was conducted by Miss Luella Dadisman, recently graduated from Asbury College, and her work was such as reflects credit on that school. The weather was very warm and the street cars noisy but souls were saved and sanctified and the committee seemed pleased with the services. They really need a camp meeting ground outside the city in those beautiful green mountains where the holiness people will come from all over West Virginia. About the finest thing some community could do would be to offer the trustees a twelve acre grove for a camp meeting ground.

After leaving Charleston I started for Washburn, N. D. and en route I met Dr. John Brasher at St. Paul and we traveled on together. It was wonderful to see that broad, rolling country covered with endless fields of hay and grain and flax. Abundant rains had come this year and the outlook for the farmer was rosy. One afternoon we saw the most brilliant rainbow and later, the most gorgeous sunset, it has ever been my privilege to witness. It made me happy to think that a holiness preacher conducted himself so faithfully that God set the bow in the heavens as a continual reminder of a certain promise. However, I must leave the scriptural gold at the end of this rainbow and hasten on to tell you that it was nearly ten o'clock before the last bit of the sunset faded from the sky, and by that time we were arriving at the capital city where we spent the night and went on to Washburn next day. Brother John Bibelheimer, president of the Association, welcomed us. We liked everything out there except the mosquitoes. They were there by the uncounted millions. I say uncounted because they kept us so busy fighting that there wasn't time to even make an estimate. The camp meeting ground is well located on the bank of the great Missouri River. Before we left the camp about twenty-five hundred dollars had been subscribed to build a tabernacle for next year's meetings and the folks intend to screen it to protect the folks in case there should be another wet year and an accompanying scourge of mosquitoes. No matter if they bit Dr. Brasher he just rolled along like a smooth-running auto and never missed a point in his preaching. I understand that he is invited to conduct our revival at Wilmore next spring and I am delighted over the prospect. Prof. Slagg led the singing, his wife played the piano, and the Asbury College Quartet came and gave us a lift on the singing and it all went fine. There were blessed scenes around the altar as folks prayed through to victory. The pastor of the Methodist Church, Brother McAdams, is an Asbury College product and is running true to form. He was tireless in his efforts to make every feature of the camp meeting a success and deserves more commendation than space will allow.

After leaving North Dakota I took a long jump of about seventeen hundred miles and landed near West Asheville, N. C., where my dear brother, the unique and lovable Bob Self, has a camp meeting which is just two years old and yet is well equipped and growing, and has the most beautiful location of any camp I have ever seen. My wife and mother and our four children camped on the ridge just above where the big tent was pitched. We had our auto-trailer and a small tent so that our little family had a degree of privacy so unusual in camp meetings. Out in front of the tent we kept a smoldering fire. We didn't really need the fire but the blue smoke looked so pretty as it climbed lazily upward. Then, too, we roasted some fine sweet potatoes in the ashes and that's the real way to cook a potato. As we sat around the campfire we could see Asheville in the distance and the wonderful Vanderbilt home and the beautiful mountain peaks melting away into the blue of the distance. It's a great place to preach and pray and to commune with God. There was something new in that camp meeting, and that was Dr. Hodges, a Baptist preacher, pastor of the big tabernacle at New Bern, N. C. He was preaching holiness as clear as a silver trumpet and he and I just ran together like sugar and coffee,—if you understand that mixed metaphor. His church is one of the few in the state of North Carolina that will not keep a person in its membership if he plays cards, dances, or goes to the movies. This church suggests Elijah's altar where the fire lapped up the water. Sister Mattie Perry was with us and blessed us with her messages, and Brother Jim Green came in for

HEART PURITY OR CHRIST OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.

Rev. B. C. Dewey.

PART II.

"Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." (Matt. 5:8.)

"Now the end of the commandment is love out of a pure heart and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned." (1 Tim. 1:5).

"See that ye love one another with a pure heart, fervently." (1 Pet. 1:22).

HEART PURITY OR CLEANSING UP TO LIGHT.

IF we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John 1:7).

"If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." (John 8:36). What victory and joy are here indicated? What purity, freedom and light are we here offered through Christ? A privilege to be cleansed from all sin, to have our past blotted out and our soul cleansed from all inward defilement, fitting us to be companions of angels and to worship—hold fellowship with, and gaze on the beauty and splendor of the great God and his Son Jesus Christ forever.

As the Bible sets forth heart purity and perfect love as a privilege and duty, it is important that we know what constitutes a pure heart, and the evidence of its possession. It is unreasonable that God would require that which we could neither obtain or know when we had obtained it, especially as heart purity is necessary in order to see God, and have boldness in the day of judgment.

"Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment." (1 John 4:17). The heart is the moral nature of man, the seat of the affections and will, and the most wonderful product of the Creator's wisdom and power below the skies, and perhaps nothing greater in all the universe of God, as redeemed saints are to constitute the bride of Christ, which is not spoken of angels. In the fall of man the heart became polluted, diseased and enslaved, the home of every unclean thing, the resident of evil thoughts and demons. Man finds a downward pull, a "law of sin," warring within him, against the perfect moral law of God, which requires him to love God with all his heart, and his neighbor as himself. It is not necessary to discuss theological terms and differences of opinion about this law or state of heart. Man is conscious of this state, this downward drift, this antagonistic force, with its attending results of condemnation and corruption. No theories or religious beliefs can save him from this consciousness—he feels and knows it when it moves and acts.

As man draws near to God and his holy law which says, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself," and it is pressed home upon him by the Holy Spirit, he becomes painfully conscious that he does not do it, and as he struggles to do so, he finds the gravitation downward baffles his will power and brings him into captivity, till in the language of Paul he declares, "I find a law that when I would do good, evil is present with me." (Rom. 7:21)

And when he struggles and fails he says, "It is no more I that do it, but sin, that dwelleth in me." Again, "I see another law in my members warring against the law of the mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members." Then in his struggle for freedom he cries, "O, wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death." (Rom. 7:24).

Paul felt the power of something within him he distinctly called sin, not sin as a past act, but sin that dwelleth in me. Sin that acted so certain, so uniformly, and true to its nature, that he called it "the law of sin." It was so obnoxious to his higher judgment, and so polluting in its operation, and offensive in its odor and certainty of ruin that he called it the "Body of death." Yet in view of the fact that man has all this within the heart, we are required to love God with all our heart, and one another with a "pure heart," and that, "fervently." But thanks be unto God, we are not left to ourselves in this matter. Paul found deliverance and shouted, "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the law of sin and death." (Rom. 8:2).

I am not concerned now over the controversy as to whether Paul is picturing a Jew trying to keep the law, and yet falling a captive to its power, or a converted man under grace struggling against indwelling sin, or the law of sin, and occasionally overcome. I am only concerned that such a condition existed in human hearts and that from this "law of sin" there is deliverance through Christ. It matters little about theories, as long as this "law of sin" within is a menace to our purity and freedom. As long as it exists at all it retains its deadly nature, and tends to the same end, even if held in check by pardoning grace, and it will make its presence felt at times, as long as it exists, no matter if we claim to "get it all at once," at conversion, or if we profess Holiness that will not tame the Cobra, or destroy the reptile. As long as we are conscious of an indwelling "evil," of a predisposition to sin, with its downward pull that flares up at holy law, we need deliverance. The eminent and pious of all ages have had this consciousness, and the theory that we are cleansed from all corruption within at conversion, has had but little weight. The one question that has concerned believers has been, can we ever be delivered before death.

We drop all controversy over degrees of perfection and simply want to know what constitutes a "pure heart," or "love out of a pure heart," which is the end of the commandment, hence required. As the will and affections constitute the controlling forces of the heart, when these are set right and are conformed to the will of God, all else will be right. It is on these the "law of sin" has its grip.

We will look at both the human and divine side. The will is first to be considered on the human side. All our salvation hinges on the will. If we take care of the will, God will take care of the affections. No man can force himself by a direct act of love, but he can concentrate his mind on objects that will arouse his affections. He can take the attitude of love by thinking and acting kindly, according to the law of love. We are told "Love not the world," (John 2:15) and (Col. 2:2). "Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth." This is an appeal to the will to focus the powers of the mind on that which is good and holy. We are held accountable if we focus the mind, the eye or imagination on that which is forbidden of God; that which corrupts the affections. "Whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." (Phil. 4:8).

The part our will plays in rising from a state of sin and corruption to that of purity is first its relation to repentance and confession of sin, that through faith brings pardon for all the past, and the divine life to the soul, passing it from death to life; from being children of wrath (Eph. 2:3) to becoming sons and daughters of God, receiving the Spirit that we are "born again" and are the children of God. This constitutes a large part of heart purity.

Second, it is necessary that there be a discovery of the remaining corruption, the "law of sin," that still exists within, by the Spirit, Word and Providences of God, and a frank confession to him of our need of cleansing from this painfully disturbing element.

It is held by some that inasmuch as light on sin is necessary to cleansing, that therefore we can only be cleansed up to light—partly purified—but God's word demands purity, not as we see it, but as he sees it. He says, "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." When he pronounces it cleansed from all unrighteousness, who has authority to say it is not. Certainly the Holy God who created all the suns, and floods our earth with light can flood our hearts with spiritual light. The argument advanced is that we must co-operate with God in our salvation as we receive light, and that it will take us years to see all the depths of our depravity, and we are only cleansed up to light.

While it is true we are fearfully and wonderfully made, and have a profound and mysterious spiritual nature that has been dreadfully warped, yet God knows its depths. (Jer. 17:9) says, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked; and who can know it." God answers, "I, the Lord search the heart, I try the reins." Now God is a being of infinite light, and he can reveal all in a short length of time. It is true, generally some time is allowed for light as we are slow to walk in light, and it is true we should ask for God to search us, and not hasten over any doubtful thing in order to get through quick and save ourselves from some painful discovery or confession. To think that as some teach, it must be a process of years because of lack of light to co-operate with God, is not in harmony with what Jesus said when he declared, "I am the light of the world, he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." (John 8:12).

And we are told, "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John 1:7). Dr. Daniel Steele says regarding this point, "I am shocked at such a conception of God as represents him as holy and hating all traces and stains of sin, yet withholding from man that knowledge of his own depravity to secure his co-operation in its complete purification." The very justice and holiness of God, that hate sin will not allow you to be deceived if you honestly desire and sincerely seek for him to reveal all sin in your heart. If all would pray through and be purified up to the light, that would be fine, but to hold it as a theory and yet fight over the same battles and contend with the same inherent manifestations of depravity for years is not being purified up to light, and then advancing to new discoveries of our need.

What a glorious thing it would be if all the church members were walking in the light and saved up to all their light. Yes, and if all believers and professors of holiness were saved from all the sin, lukewarmness and corruption they ever had light on, until it disappears from consciousness, and they had to wait for more light. But to hide behind this theory, and retain the same carnal manifestations for years is inconsistent.

Here is a basis for faith: If God hates sin and it exists in the heart contrary to his will and he lets light in on us till it is painful to us, creating a longing and hunger for its removal, is he doing that to torment us, or to deliver us? Let Christ answer, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled." Let us all be sure to be saved up to the light and may we have light enough to see our privilege to be fully saved.

To have a pure heart then means the right poise of the will, first in confession and renunciation of all outward and inward sin as revealed to us. Second, in the renunciation of all self-will, also as regards that which is good, such as the choosing of our own way, work or pleasures. It is the presenting of our bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God. As the body is the earthward outlet to the mind and heart it sweeps the deck of all worldly and selfish gratifications, for all our bodily powers now are devoted to God and his glory and can fully say, "Thy will be done." We will then carry out the next verse, "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and perfect, and acceptable will of God." (Rom. 12:1-2).

This means that our will is fixed and resting on the will of God. That is, we deliberately choose the will of God in all things, and that our motives and intentions are all pure—no matter what mistakes we make. By a pure motive we mean that the eye is single to God's glory down to the smallest details of our life, as set forth by the Holy Ghost in (Col. 3:25), "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as unto the Lord, and not to men." "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Cor. 19:31). How searching is this when fully understood and carried out.

Finally, there is one more attitude of the will that is all important. It brings, maintains and indicates a clean heart. It is the attitude of faith. While faith is present in our seeking, yet there is a final grip and position taken toward the precious blood that is purifying. It is that appropriating act of faith that receives Christ as our righteousness and sanctification, and trusts his precious blood to cleanse us from all sin and unrighteousness.

God's word says, "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." (Rev. 22:12). Taking freely, covers not only pardon and regenerating life, but purity and the "life" more abundant. (John 10:10). In (1 Cor. 1:30) we are distinctly told Christ is made of God unto us "righteousness and sanctification," and God would not have made him to be what we are not able to receive him for, hence we are commanded to (take) a mighty and marvelous word, if receiving him" as recorded in (John 1:12), gives us regenerating life and makes us sons, when we were sinners, will not receiving him as our sanctification to the limit of our need and the divine requirement make us pure? He himself is then our sanctification, dwelling within, cleansing our hearts by his blood, and meeting the full demands of God's righteous law. (See Phil. 3:9).

It is that position of faith that counts God "faithful and just" when he says, "If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins." (1 John 1:9). Having prayed, "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way of everlasting." (Ps. 139:23, 24), and having accepted light from any source, person or providence, and confessed all that God has revealed that was wrong, faith dares to trust the faithfulness of God. Faith induces that fixed attitude of the will that obeys orders, as God issues them in (Rom. 6:11) "Reckon ye also, yourselves to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Regardless of all feeling, not trusting in our consecration or confession, but beholding our "old man" crucified with him on Calvary, and hearing by faith's ear the cry, "It is finished," seeing our sins and sinful self expire with him, we count ourselves dead to sin and risen with Christ—forever free—by his cross and blood.

We have spoken of the human side. God will take care of his side, and by the Holy Spirit apply to us the cleansing blood, and keep us clean, as we walk in the light. He sees us offer our Isaac of self, and looks on our faith in Christ as he did on Abraham, "who believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness." "Now it was not written for his sake alone that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead." (Rom. 4:24) it will be imputed to us.

This faith is purifying and necessary and must be maintained. If we do not believe in the possibilities of being purified, sanctified wholly, how can we furnish the necessary faith. Here is where false teaching, prejudice, limiting God is dangerous, and a menace to our highest spiritual welfare. If we believe in it, yet do not offer up our Isaac and exercise and maintain appropriating faith how can we secure it? Against your will and faith Satan will hurl his forces to block your way or rob you of your possessions. To have your heart cleansed, your moral nature purified, fix your faith on this for the time being, rather than endowment of power. Let God bestow what he may with it. Entire sanctification is more than gifts, revelations, healings, trances, anointings of the Spirit, tongues or raptures of joy. Faith for some other things does not bring purity, and faith for purity does not necessarily bring other things. "According to your faith, be it unto you," is the rule. It always brings love and rest and involves the indwelling and a gracious measure of the Holy Spirit's presence.

Amazing Grace.

"Amazing Grace" is one of Dr. Ridout's latest and best books. It contains the cream of his writings and study of twenty-five years. For the Holiness people it is a book to instruct, inspire and set the soul on fire. Price $1.00. Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

Wonders of Telepotence and Prayer The Bible and Science Series.

W. M. YOUNG, A.M., Sc.D.

HE word telepotence is so new that you may not find it in your dictionary; it is a hybrid word coming from the Greek root "tele," meaning at a distance, or far off, and the Latin root "potens," powerful; man is beginning to exercise physical control at a distance through the directed energies of the intangible essences of the universe. This is a great extension of the dominion of life. The power of physical control at a distance through the agency of electricity and the ether of space marks the highest present attainment of man in the physical world. With the telescope we see objects which are immeasurably distant in space but by the telescope we acquire no control of them.

Through the agency of electricity with telegraph instruments and wires we write our messages at great distances exercising distant control over ponderable matter. Wireless telegraphy involves control over ponderable matter with nothing intervening that is available for moving matter except the ether and electricity. We instantly communicate our thoughts across thousands of miles intervening.

WIRELESS ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

Through the agency of the so-called wireless, experimental boats have been guided in various maneuvers, thus affording a distinct instance of the distant control of ponderable matter. All this is telepotence, and humanity has become telepotent in such a manner as to suggest the somewhat startling thought that only a slight extension of this power could place even worlds under human control.

SCIENCE SUPPORTS FAITH.

It seems strange that in an age in which things which once were considered impossible are becoming scientific demonstrations, there should arise a floodtide of unbelief and skepticism. Religious teachers are everywhere telling us that the New Testament miracles are impossible and contrary to the laws of nature, while at the same time we are continually discovering laws of nature which give illuminating hints as to how Christian faith works in the realm of the physical. Is it not strange that the same science which reveals such wonders in the physical realm should deny them in the spiritual?

Is it not strange to think that the air around us is continuously filled with human voices, some talking, some preaching, some lecturing, some singing, and some entertaining? While we are lying down at night sleeping, all kinds of messages and of music are streaming over us through the night sky, like the quiet passing of birds in the night. And all we need to hear them is the right kind of receiving instrument, and then tune in.

Why should it be thought fanatical to believe that the world is full of voices from the spiritual world? Why should it be thought unscientific to believe that God is speaking everywhere in nature, and that faith and love are the instruments by which we may "tune in" and receive his meaning?

Faithful and obedient believers everywhere testify that even in the midst of sorrow and trial, all at once, a veritable breeze from the heavenly world has swept in upon them bringing blessedness, peace, rest, and assurance.

Is it illogical to believe that we may be surrounded by holy atmospheres and heavenly presences, or to think that heaven is in one service and warmed our ears with a rich and helpful sermon. Camp View is a good place to get blessed. As Bob Self remarked one day, "If Moses was here he'd be a carrying his shoes around in his hand." The days slipped by all too fast for me because I had all my family with me and that is a wonderful privilege for an evangelist. Finally, I had to take down the little brown tent and pack our stuff into the trailer and hook it to the car and roll down the road to our little shack at Hendersonville. That is where our home burned and the family is camping for the summer in a two room building that used to be a small barn. It looks pretty rough but it is beautifully furnished with contentment and happiness and the laughter of children. As soon as I got the folks unloaded and we had two meals together, I told them goodbye and left for the Nazarene camp meeting at Columbus, O.

When I arrived in Columbus I phoned Bro. Elford and he and his family took me right out to the camp ground. It was a revelation to me. Here was a large new tabernacle, hotel and dining room, lots of cottages, and long rows of neat, new tents, and all of these things have been put there within two years. There was great preaching by Dr. Chapman, Prof. Willingham, Dr. J. G. Morrison, and especially did I enjoy the messages of my co-laborer, Brother Floyd Nease, who is president of the Eastern Nazarene College of Boston, Mass. He is one of the young men of the Holiness Movement of whom much may be expected in the coming years. It was my privilege also to meet for the first time Brothers Pace, Barnard, Walburt, and McCoy who compose the Vaughan Radio Quartet of Lawrenceburg, Tenn. They really ought to be called the Sanctified Mockingbirds. How they did bless us with their messages in song. They got me stirred up and I wrote a little poem for them called "The Home-Coming Week." Within a few hours Brother Pace set it to music and the quartet sang it, and they have been singing it ever since. The chorus is this:

"When we're inside the gates of pearl
We'll learn a lot of things.

We'll have a harp that's made of gold,—
Perhaps a thousand strings.

We'll sing and shout and dance about,
The Lamb will dry our tears,

We'll have a grand home-coming week
The first ten thousand years."

Then, too, we had Brother Ben Sutton and his wife, and that old Kentucky boy can sing until a presiding elder would get happy. If he happens to need any extra sweetening for the song his good wife at the piano can always bring it on just at the right time. I know he has the blessing too, because one night when he was in the midst of a great song and the folks were shouting a crank hopped up on the rostrum and hooked one arm around Ben's neck and waved the Stars and Stripes with the other hand. Ben turned red but he smiled and sang on the best he could. I've still got the blessing too, but I took the old fellow by the arm and told him kindly to take his little flag and sit down on the end of the bench. I was afraid somebody would think that the Holiness Movement and the Ku Klux Klan were having a joint session. Best of all were the bright conversions and the clear sanctifications at almost every service. On the last night of the camp meeting a big, generous brother named Dobson, took me and part of the quartet to his home and gave us an early breakfast next morning so we could be on our way. It was a wonderful ride I had that day in the car with three of the Vaughan Quartet. They were going through to Lawrenceburg, Tenn., and they carried me all the way to Silver Heights camp meeting at New Albany, Ind., and delivered me, baggage and all, right at the big tabernacle.

Now Silver Heights camp meeting is something different. It has long and blessed history. When a novice in camp meeting work, like I am, looks at the long roll of holiness giants who have wrought under that stately old tabernacle on that beautiful hill-top overlooking Louisville, the effect is certainly humbling and well-nigh discouraging. I gathered a little hope from the fact I am somewhat older than the other preachers on the program, Brothers Virgil Moore and Paul Rees, but that faded after I heard them preach. However, I must say that our congregations were large and sympathetic and made us feel that our efforts were deeply appreciated. The brethren were kind to us, entertained us splendidly, and treated us generously. The Asbury Quartet had charge of the singing and an Asbury girl did fine work at the big grand piano. We had plenty of willing workers to pray with the seekers around the altar and the folks on the hill said it was the best and most helpful camp meeting for many years. Here's just a little word to the wise. Be it known unto any who may hereafter preach at Silver Heights that the electric car leaves the hill at nine fifteen in the evening and most of the crowd wouldn't remain longer than five minutes past nine if Paul were there preaching and Silas directing the singing. I would suggest to our successors to cut off the front yard and the front porch from their sermons and then cut off the back yard and the sleeping porch and then begin in the living room and stop at the kitchen stove. One of the outstanding memories of this camp meeting was a brief visit by Brother Seth Rees whom I had never met. He preached a wonderful sermon from the text, "And the iron did swim." A young man just can't preach a sermon like that one. It takes age and experience and suffering and tears and disappointments and triumphs and lots of things that youth doesn't have. Now Paul Rees is a real preacher viewed from any angle. How I reveled in his preaching. If it were not for fear of spoiling my younger brother in the ministry I would say all that is in my heart to say about him.

This brings me to my trip to Aspen Hill, where I was reared and where I just finished a revival in the Methodist Church, and to Lawrenceburg, where I am now conducting a tent meeting for the Nazarenes. I may write of these later. Our services here are being broadcast over W.O.A.N. This radio business puzzles me. I've been preaching into this one for ten days and haven't heard but two or three faint echoes from it. THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD suits me better. Over a third of a million people tune in on it every week. It's a little slower than radio but you do hear from it once in a while.

Dr. Hargett and Evangelism.

BY DR. ROBERT L. SELLE.

At this moment I am attending the 66th session of the St. Louis Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Mountain Grove, Mo. Great Conference! Great session! Great men! The St. Louis Conference covers the south half of Missouri, including the cities of St. Louis and Kansas City, and the state of Arkansas.

Bishop Charles Edward Locke, nationally known as a preacher and a brotherly spirited man, is presiding. He measures fully in every way to the expectations of the 250 preachers who make up the Conference.

Delegates to the General Conference have just been elected, among whom, the readers of THE HERALD will be glad to know, is the Rev. I. M. Hargett, D.D., pastor of the great Grand Avenue Temple in Kansas City. THE HERALD family has followed him with their prayers and best wishes for an outstanding record as a soul winner from the day he left Asbury College with his diploma to the present time, and that interest has been deepened on many an occasion when they have heard of the unusual manner in which God has used him to win the lost to the Savior. Probably no man in Methodism at this hour has a bigger opportunity for usefulness or a firmer grip upon it than this man. At 4 o'clock daily during the session of the Conference he brings a great evangelistic message, clear, strong, orthodox, which moves the people as in the days of our fathers. Many will want to see him elected Bishop at the General Conference at Kansas City, Mo., next May.

"A Good Fight."

A. W. ORWIG.

Among the apostle Paul's last words was the statement that he had fought "a good fight." It was not a vain boast, but a Holy Ghost inspired utterance. He had now come to the close of a valiant conflict with all the powers of evil that had beset his pathway. Noble warrior of the Cross! Nothing had ever intimidated him in the holy warfare for truth and righteousness. Even the unjust and violent death that he knew soon awaited him did not for a moment cause him to regret the glorious course he had pursued, nor did it in any degree abate his heavenly joy. But most triumphantly the scarred veteran of many hard-fought battles declared, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Would to God every professed ambassador of the Lord Jesus Christ could truthfully say the same at the end of his career!

But all true children of God, as they are about to lay down the divine armor, will be able to say what Paul said. From a thousand considerations they will realize that the fight in which they engaged was "a good fight." While, as Christians, we shall sometimes be subjected to severe temptations and trials, yet a divine peace and joy may flood our hearts. Added to this will be the certain and blissful prospect of "a crown of righteousness" that awaits us. Then be not weary in fighting the "good fight of faith."

How many of us, dear readers, are truly in the glorious conflict under consideration? Are we always undaunted in the same? Do we cheerfully "endure hardness" as good soldiers of Jesus Christ? Oh let us never waver, no matter what the opposition from earth or hell! Keeping our eyes on the glittering crown, and especially upon Jesus, we shall indeed finish our course triumphantly.

Many and subtle are the snares of Satan and the allurements of the world that often confront young Christians. But let them not be disheartened or falter in the pilgrimage to the celestial city on high. They may also have personal besetting sins, but these too, may be overcome by the mighty grace of God. All should remember that the entire Christian life is a life of warfare; but, thank God, there may be victory all along the line, even at the moment of seeming defeat. But, certainly, we need to have on the whole armor of God. Success is not promised without it. And we should fully familiarize ourselves with every part of the armor. None may be discarded with impunity. And "the shield of faith" is of supreme importance. "The just shall live by faith." And oh how constantly we need the two-edged "sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." Ever let us have a firm grasp upon it. The Lord enable us always to heed the apostle's ringing battle-cry, "Fight the good fight of faith; lay hold on eternal life."

Seven Deadly Fallacies.

Dr. Ridout has conferred a real favor on all pastors and busy Christian workers in getting out in such convenient form a series of neat booklets packed with just the right information as to the harmful fallacies of these seven blighting "isms" which are causing so much havoc among many well-meaning people. These booklets should have the widest possible circulation. It would do much toward steadying faith in the old-time religion.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

EVANGELICAL METHODIST LEAGUE TENT REPORTS.

The following are some of the reports of meetings held by groups of tent workers. It will thrill the hearts of those who have contributed to this great work to read of the souls that have found the Lord in these revivals. There are many whose reports we do not have at this time, but as they come in we shall be glad to give them to our readers.

Asbury Gospel Trio labored in the far west where they held meetings in Vernon, Colo., resulting in 50 salvations; one in Slater, Wyo., resulting in 60 salvations; one in Basin, Wyo., in which 15 were saved, and one in Meeteetee, Wyo., in which 15 were blessed. Wyoming is the pioneer state in church work and is a fine place for missionary work. A Holiness Association was organized that will prosecute the work through the year.

Asbury Gospel Team.

The above team is composed of Victor Moore, orchestra leader, Howard Garrett, song leader, Virgil Kirkpatrick and Ben DuVal evangelists. They held meetings in New York and Pennsylvania and preached to approximately 30,000 people, and had nearly 400 professions of conversion and sanctification. The people want them back next summer.

Grant Brothers' Meetings.

These brothers labored in Illinois and Missouri. They held a meeting in Montier, Mo., continuing for three weeks and had 90 salvations. They held one in their home city of Mt. Vernon, Ill., which lasted six weeks and had 185 people blessed at an altar of prayer. Several were called to the mission field and the ministry.

McClure and Smith.

These two soul winners held forth in the state of Iowa, the first being at Wellman, Ia., then at Moravia, Avery and Ollie. Their meetings resulted in the salvation of about 120 being definitely blessed.

Tent Meetings in Kentucky and Mississippi.

Rev. Walter Cross as evangelist, and Norris Loper song leader, held a meeting in Ellisburg, Ky., resulting in fifty being saved and 12 sanctified. Then a meeting in Adelle, Miss., in which 110 were saved and 22 sanctified. A meeting at Silver Creek, Miss., resulted in 35 salvations and 15 sanctifications; and one at Stratton, Miss., resulting in 81 being saved and 12 sanctified. At Piedmont, Ala., Brothers Cross and Carnes were the workers and some 75 were saved and sanctified.

Ohio Meetings.

The gospel team which worked in Ohio was composed of Paul Pappas, Dwight A. Lawson and Byron F. Roberts. The first revival was in Wapakoneta, and from there to Waldo, and two in Dayton. It is estimated they preached to 12,000 people and had about 260 conversions and sanctifications. They have asked for a tent next summer.

Cochran Brothers.

The Cochran boys labored in the state of Georgia and had wonderful meetings, which the following figures will show. Attendance, 33,800, services held 181, number at altar 466, number converted 315, sanctified 29, additions to the church 22, members secured for League 60. These people plan to erect a tabernacle and have their annual meetings. These young men have accomplished a wonderful work, and the people clamor for their return.

W. E. Lamp Party.

This party consisted of Rev. W. E. and Mrs. Lamp, their daughter Bonita and son Cletus. They held four tent meetings in Illinois, the first at East St. Louis, second at Iola, third at Louisville, and the fourth at Xenia. The Lord gave them 217 souls either saved or sanctified. They calculated that they preached to 12,066 souls during the campaign.

Harold M. Hilliard's Report.

At the close of summer school at Asbury, I joined Rev. Alex Reid in a meeting at South Somerset, Ky. Bro. Reid had just closed a splendid meeting at Science Hill, Ky., with Rev. Virgil Moore as evangelist. The meeting at Somerset was with the shop workers and railroad men, in a community that has been sadly neglected by the church. The Roy family and other faithful workers have kept the little Mission open and have done great work in that needy field. God blessed the ministry of the Word and a number found the Lord in purity and pardon.

From Somerset we took the tent to Tefft, Indiana. Brother Reid's home community. A fine farming section with some splendid people who are standing for full salvation. The spiritual life of that whole area has suffered greatly from modernistic preaching. God has used the Reid family to bring Asbury boys into Tefft from time to time and many have turned to the old-time religion. However, we found that modernism had done its deadly work in many hearts and many in the community were either cold and indifferent or in flagrant sin. Brother Reid did most of the preaching, Brother Horace Booker, the blind musician, played and sang for the people. I assisted in song, personal work and preaching. About 30 were saved or sanctified. The Holy Spirit was with us in mighty power and conviction was deep.

At the close of the Tefft meeting Brother Reid went to Ferguson, Ky., for a meeting with Rev. Moore. The Lord put it on our hearts to take the tent to Wheatfield, Ind., a small town a few miles from Tefft. Here we met a strange situation. The church members fought the meeting and the sinners asked us to come in and preach the gospel. Wheatfield is a town where modernism has had full sway for many years. The result has been dying churches bossed by worldly church members, much open sin, card playing, dancing, Sunday night picture shows, utter disregard of the Lord's day, and a great hunger for real spiritual preaching even among the sinners. "Soft soap, soup and sunshine" may sound all right to some people, but that kind of a program will kill any church and give the devil full sway in any community. Brother Booker played and sang, I did the preaching and all of us spent much time in prayer. I have never been in a meeting where I felt so clearly the leading of the Holy Spirit. As usual the devil and his crowd didn't like to hear sanctification preached, but the more they opposed the more God blessed the full gospel. God honored his Word, a number prayed through and on the closing Sunday night the fire fell and the altar was filled. Praise God for a real, old-time manifestation of his mighty power! There is a great need of a camp meeting in Northern Indiana. People are hungry and are begging for more meetings next summer. If the League could put two tents in that field for the summer, and unite the two parties for a closing meeting at Tefft, I believe a camp meeting could be founded. A strong camp would help win many back from sin and modernism and would drive out much of the unbelief that follows modernistic teaching. Over 24,000 total attendance in our meetings and about 120 found God in purity and pardon.

James and Irma Mackrell's Report.

The Texas tent of the League has been busy all summer, and some good work has been done. The first meeting was at Daisetta, Texas, Rev. E. A. Peterson, pastor. Here the tent was filled each night except two. A good local orchestra furnished music and Prof. John W. Davis led the choir. This was a union meeting, both churches attended and were blessed; both pastors received a good pounding, and the workers were cared for in fine shape; a liberal offering was given both workers and for the work.

From Daisetta, our next meeting was in the new oil-field of Spindle-Top. This church at one time was a station, but in the fifteen years it had dwindled to an afternoon Sunday school. Thanks due to Bro. W. J. Philip, a splendid layman of Beaumont, who has kept the spark alive these years by going out to Spindle-Top each Sunday afternoon. Here we had a good meeting, good crowds, many chapters read every day, eight additions. I forget to say that at Daisetta there were twelve additions and ten tithers added to the churches.

From Spindle-Top we had a hard fought battle at South Park, Beaumont. For three weeks we did the best we could. Eight additions to the church, and three hundred dollars raised on a church debt was the extent of the visible results. We sold over a hundred pamphlets, such as "Wesley's Plain Account of Christian Perfection," "Bud Robinson's Hospital Experience," "Baptism with the Holy Ghost," by Bro. Morrison, etc. It is our desire that those in whose hands this good literature found its way may find their way into the fullness of the blessing.

Our next meeting was in many ways our best. We went to Pecan Grove, Texas, an isolated community of one hundred and ten homes, all comfortable bungalows, but without any religious activities. We had a glorious time. Good crowds and splendid help and co-operation. There were sixteen adult additions, and many professions. The Sunday after our tent was moved 76 came out under the tree, without shelter, seats or any equipment for the first Sunday school. The good men of the community are busy, and our last report was that something over a thousand dollars has already been raised and a new church is to go up at once.

Irma and I are open for winter dates, and we try, under the leadership of the Holy Spirit, to preach a full gospel, urging upon the folks to tithe and consecrate all to the Master's service. We have one more meeting at Burkeville, Texas, before conference. We humbly give thanks to him to whom all thanks is due for the Evangelical Methodist League in Texas, and pray that next year may see several more tents in the field.

HOLLOW ROCK CAMP MEETING.

Another great camp meeting has passed into history which assembled at the historic camp grounds at Hollow Rock, Ohio, July 28 to August 7th.

Hollow Rock is one of the old camps situated among the beautiful hills of the Ohio valley, out from the noise of the city, and where quietude prevails. Heavy rains were common during the season, but the people came, the preachers preached, and God was there in saving and sanctifying power. This camp is one place in this day, where the gospel is preached in its fullness and the side issues that are sidetracking so many from the main line of holiness are not given place on its program. Yet a deeper spirit of divine power and glory will not be found greater anywhere. The very atmosphere seems charged with the Spirit of God. One can but feel he is treading upon holy ground as he goes about the camp, which has been ringing true to the gospel call for over a century.

The camp was blessed with a strong team of workers this year. Such preaching has seldom been heard, in a long time. Dr. C. H. Babcock seemed to be at his best and day after day brought messages full of the unction of the Spirit. Rev. Howard Sweeten, a new man at Hollow Rock, who soon found his way into the hearts of the people, preached straight and close to the mark, but the type that is needed so much today. One could not describe it better, than in his own words, "This is not big preaching, but it is good preaching." May we have more of it. Bro. Sweeten will be back with us again next year. Rev. C. W. Ruth, known and beloved by the holiness people everywhere, brought many helpful Bible Readings in the morning hour which were edifying to the Christian people and thus were made stronger in the grace of God. Prof. Wells and wife had charge of the service in song, and their singing was a joy and blessing to all. Mrs. Mishey conducted the children and young people's services and endeared herself to them. Miss Finnona Wilson presided at the piano. Numerous colleges and Bible Schools sent their representatives, and the camp was additionally blessed by the presence of a number of visiting preachers and evangelists. Missionaries representing numerous fields had charge of the Friday afternoon service. One of the most touching services of the camp was on Thursday afternoon when an entire group of fifty or more children from a nearby Children's Home came to the altar and wept their way to the Savior. During the entire meeting over two hundred souls found the Christ in either saving or sanctifying power. To God be the glory.

A good subscription was made to the camp and Hollow Rock continues to enlarge, attract and interest more people each year. The grounds were crowded to their capacity on the last Sunday when several thousand gathered there and overflow meetings had to be arranged. A good team of workers has been arranged for next year, among whom will be Dr. H. C. Morrison. Make your plans now to come. Join us in prayer for God's continued blessings upon this camp and for a still greater meeting for the camp of 1928. Reporter.

FROM THE FIRING LINE IN NORTH CAROLINA.

With gladness we report that God's grace still abounds toward us and he is saving the people. Since our last annual conference we have been in seventeen meetings, preached 384 times, seen hundreds blessed and the work continues. Amen.

We are now closing a very great meeting at White Oak in Bladen county. Tent filled, near 140 blessed, others seeking, and the end is not yet.

The Lord gave us a great camp meeting at Camp Free in August. One of the greatest victories ever seen there. During the year we have seen some good meetings at Greensboro, East Marion, Sunshine, Williamson's Chapel, Triplett, Camp Free and White Oak. In these hundreds of souls were converted and a few sanctified. Some of the other meetings were good and had very good results. In two meetings there were no visible results, not a profession, but praise God he has been faithful and glorious have been the scenes of his grace this year.

The Old Book is true, and Jesus saves and the Holy Ghost honors the blood. We are so glad we are in the battle for souls. We like the "Firing Line." No time for vacations. After he comes will be time enough to rest.

Our next engagement is West Asheville (Wesleyan Church) Oct. 16-30. We are ready to begin making slate for fall and winter meetings following Oct. 30. Any who feel led to call us address us, Box 200, Connelly Springs, N. C.

Jim H. Green.

AVONDALE, PENNSYLVANIA.

I returned from Madison, Fla., where the Lord gave us a great meeting with Rev. Jackson, pastor. He is not afraid of holiness. I preached at home for Brother Evans Sunday night and the floodgates of heaven opened; fifty came to the altar. I continued a week and from 30 to 60 were at the altar every service. The sunrise prayer meeting was attended by people thirty miles distant. The power of the Lord was so manifested that we started on the fourth week. The dance hall had done much harm in the community so I called on the Lord's people to pray that the curse might be removed. The dancing master sent word that he was going on and expected to have the biggest dance on Thursday night, but on Thursday noon he was arrested by the sheriff; next day there was a truck backed up to the dance hall and the furniture taken out and a notice posted that there would be no more dances. Now the hall has been offered me to preach holiness in, and I say Amen!

There were more young men and women saved in this meeting than I have seen for years. I hurried home, packed my suitcase and in thirty hours was in Philadelphia where I preached on Sunday morning to the real Pennsylvania Dutch. The altar was filled, and how they did pray through! In the evening I preached in a church that I built 45 years ago. There were 45 at the altar weeping their hearts out to God. Well, prayer changes things. Amen!

I am in Avondale for ten days, the fire is burning and there is a shaking among the dry bones. I then return to old Florida where the flowers bloom forever, and the songs of the birds will never die. Hallelujah for the old gospel that saves and sanctifies, as a second work of grace.

Yours in the fight, and victory is sure.

them wishing you would stop, to get a bit provoked at you, sweat and swelter in the heat and wonder why you do not close your message, make your exhortation and call for penitents. In the early history of the Holiness Movement there was so much ignorance and opposition in the church and in the world on the subject of entire sanctification that it required time to explain, to go back into history, to read from the Scriptures, from Wesley, Watson, Fletcher, Adam Clarke, Asbury, McKendree and the great men who led the hosts of Methodism in the early days of the church and prove that this was a Methodist doctrine as well as a great central Bible teaching. Those of us who were prominent in the work in those days got into the habit of preaching long sermons and once the habit is formed it is not easily broken.

I am very glad that you have been asked to preach these afternoon sermons at the camp meeting next summer and I have written to you at some length because I am eager for you to become a successful camp meeting preacher. The camps are growing and it is not easy to find good camp meeting preachers. Be filled with the Holy Spirit; be filled with your message. Do not permit yourself to be frightened. Feel the dignity and blessedness of your position, of your divine call, of the greatness of your God and the salvation that has been provided in the sacrificial death and triumphant resurrection of the Lord Jesus. Get your whole being saturated with the thought of the immortality of human souls, that you may be used as an instrument under the power of the blessed Trinity to bring souls to Christ and Heaven and all that the development, progress, growth and happiness of a human being means through an endless eternity. Fire your message with the keen, clear crack of a rifle and let it strike the target with the impact of a cannon shot and there will be good fruit and you will have entered upon a larger life and greater usefulness in your ministry.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

ONE OF MY GREAT DESIRES

CHAPTER IX.

My heart was thrilled while up at Asbury to see the very large number of young men preparing for the ministry, and a great number of young women preparing for the mission field. I thank God that these young people are under influences that will build up and strengthen rather than tear down and destroy their faith.

One of the best courses of study in the preparation of these young men is the Evangelistic Tent Course. It would have thrilled your hearts to have heard the reports of these young men who have been out in the tent work during the summer. About one-third of our tent workers were present at the testimony meeting and they reported something over twenty-seven hundred conversions and sanctifications. God has wrought graciously in the tent work this summer.

I have such a fine letter from my good friend, Rev. R. A. Young, an old Asbury boy, and one of our most fruitful evangelists, that I must print it here. I would love to hear from a number of our readers who are eager to see the enterprise go forward for the enlargement and building up of The Asbury Theological Seminary.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

Dear Dr. Morrison:

I am deeply interested in your articles, "One of my Great Desires" concerning the future extension of the Theological Seminary at Asbury College.

The first reason which demands my interest, and that of thousands likewise, is that you are the President of this great Institution which is so vital to the growth and development of Asbury College Seminary. Your first article not only reveals your "fatherly" interest, but the travail of your soul. Having proved the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ, in life and ministry, it is but natural that you desire a place to perpetuate the training of young men to proclaim the "faith of our fathers."

We agree with you that the greatest need of this age is an educated, sanctified, Spirit-filled ministry. It is evident that a very large percent of the Theological Seminaries are sending out young men not only skeptical and with a shattered faith, but worldly minded, conceited and boastful of their present-day scholarship.

Without question your plans for the building-up of the Theological Seminary at Asbury College, are God-inspired. There are people who love the Bible; the church of Jesus Christ, especially the holiness people who will rally to your urgent call. It is a known fact that many young men who have a call to Christian Service are held back because of financial conditions which make it impossible to attend College and take Seminary work. Asbury Seminary needs a building where the young men can live, do their cooking and cut down living expenses. Your excellent plan challenges the faithful people of God. We believe they will make it possible for you to carry out your desires in this worthy undertaking. In this hour of theological controversy and spiritual dearth we have confidence in the holiness people and believe they will sacrifice, give and pray, and build this structure for the glory of God in the housing of young men who are training for the Christian ministry.

Sincerely, your brother,

R. A. YOUNG.

Notice!

The Board of Asbury College has employed Rev. E. C. Wills to represent the College in the field, and we shall take it as a personal favor if our friends, especially those interested in the great work Asbury College is doing, if they will lend him any assistance possible in this great work which has been committed to him. To invest in Asbury College where young men and women are being trained for the needy fields at home and abroad, is surely casting your bread upon the waters to be gathered in after years through the ministry of these consecrated Christian workers as they garner souls for the Master's Kingdom. We shall consider any courtesy shown Brother Wills as a personal favor.

Respectfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

The Central Illinois Conference.

I was invited to preach a series of sermons at the Central Illinois Conference which recently held its annual session at Kewanee, Ill., a beautiful little city of some twenty thousand population. Rev. Virgil Thompson is the pastor of the M. E. Church in that city. He, with his people, have recently built a beautiful and commodious church costing some $200,000 in which the conference was held. Dr. Thompson has served this church several years and is in great favor with his people.

Bishop Edwin Hughes presided over the conference. He is well known as one of the most brilliant men in the college of bishops of the M. E. Church, a fine presiding officer, a brilliant thinker and a most attractive speaker. He delivered very practical and suggestive addresses to the conference each morning. In these addresses, he made special reference to intercessory prayer. "Your altars will never be wet with the tears of broken-hearted and penitent sinners until they have been sprinkled with the tears of burdened pastors in intercessory prayer for the lost." He insisted especially that pastors should keep in close touch with the children and young people of their churches, that the young people must be saved for Christ and the church. His addresses were heard with great interest and it is to be hoped with real profit.

My messages were delivered at the four o'clock hour to large congregations who seemed to be in the most receptive and appreciative mood. I stressed the spiritual life of the minister, the importance of "Thus saith the Lord" messages, and of insistence and perseverance for genuine revivals of religion. I declared that I did not believe that any minister of the Gospel had discharged his duty and obligation to the people until he faithfully taught them "that God is holy and that he wants his people to be holy, and has made ample provision through vicarious sufferings of Jesus Christ to make his people holy." I spoke four afternoons to great gatherings of people and preached to a large overflow congregation in the Sunday school room of the great new church Sabbath morning. I left Monday morning before the appointments were read. Many friends expressed to me their desire and purpose to come into closer fellowship with Christ and to lay themselves out with great zeal for a gracious revival of pure religion. It was my privilege to speak to the same conference for a number of days at their annual session eight years ago. I was glad of an opportunity to renew my acquaintance with a number of the brethren and cultivate the friendships formed at that time. Some of the brethren said that they hoped to have me back again. If I should get the invitation it would give me pleasure to visit them again in the ministry of the Word. May the blessing of God rest graciously upon the preachers and people of the Central Illinois Conference.

THE FATHERS OF OLD TIME

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

SOMEONE in speaking of the heroes mentioned in the 11th chapter of Hebrews, calls them 'The Fathers of Old Time.' One cannot read this list of Old Testament worthies without receiving an inspiration to their faith, and a deep desire to take hold of the promises of God with firmer grip and persistency than ever before.

Reader, if you are like the writer, you find it more difficult to withdraw from the crowd, to "steal away with Jesus," as the colored people so pathetically sing, than ever before. This has been denominated an 'age of speed,' and it well deserves this discrimination, for everything seems to be moving with lightning velocity, and if you cannot keep pace with the fast-moving procession you are lost in the race.

But, as we contemplate and meditate upon the saints of old who have run the race that was set before them, although they did not have an automobile, nor an airship to travel in, yet they reached that City which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God, in due time. We are moving too rapidly to halt at the secret place of prayer. We almost forget to grace our meals, and there is some important duty awaiting us just after we are through eating. We are kept up so late at night with the crowding, pressing duties of the day that we languidly kneel for a few moments of prayer before retiring. In the morning the phone is calling us to urgent tasks, and we hardly have time to think of, much less perform the act of morning worship.

Just so the world moves on, and we, if we are not very careful, will move with it, much more rapidly than it is best for us to go. "Take time to be holy," is an injunction that we would do well to heed at this fast-moving period in the world's history. God is a jealous God, and wants us to give him the first golden moments of our new days. These are fast days, days full of happenings, startling and surprising, and if there ever was a time when we needed to halt on the threshold of each new day and ask for guidance and grace for that day, it is now.

I often think of that old saying, "We do not know what a day may bring forth." I have felt such strange and strong drawings to the mercy seat these last months, before I ventured upon the duties and responsibilities of each day, that I prayed that God would make me sufficient for whatever that day might hold for me. Sometimes there would come a strong test of my patience, a coolness from a friend, a misunderstanding where I least expected it, a disappointment that crushed the heart, a sad letter telling of the home-going of a loved one, of wrecks, accidents, sickness, and the many things that go into the making up of one's life.

O, if we only knew what was behind the curtain for us! How we should wait before him, who alone can make us sufficient for these things. I recall that one day I was subjected to very insulting remarks and accusations that I never dreamed would come my way, and which were wholly without foundation, and all the while the Lord kept me as calm and sweet in my soul as if I had just arisen from my secret prayer. I rejoiced for the grace that God let flow into my heart in this time of need, and really found out that I had that sufficiency that caused me to triumph in the moment of unexpected trial and false accusation.

What is the secret? That faith that we read of in Hebrews 11, of the worthies "who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens," and made their way to the city where they now rejoice before the throne, saying, "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, the whole earth is full of Thy glory." Are you a sufferer for Jesus' sake? In the language of Peter I would remind you to "commit the keeping of your soul to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator." "Be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer," for the end of all things is at hand.

WONDERS OF TELEPOTENCE

continuous communication with earth? Are we to believe that there is anything improbable in the record that Elijah heard God's still small voice speaking to him at the mouth of the mountain cave? Countless thousands of people all over the world, many of whom are too poor to buy a radio outfit, have in their private closet a sending and receiving station by which they keep in touch with the Lord of all the earth.

A widow who had a wayward son, wandering somewhere on the face of the earth, sent up a wireless message to God. At that very moment her son, who was sailing on a ship on the other side of the earth, on the China Sea, received a radio message from God which touched his heart which brought him out of his darkness and disobedience into the favor and love of God and into reconciliation with his mother.

BELIEF IN PRAYER SCIENTIFIC.

A minister of the gospel who was afflicted with cancer, went to a famous old surgeon in one of our cities, and was cured. After he was cured, he went to this brusque old doctor and said to him: "Doctor, I have not received my bill as yet." The doctor replied: "You have not received your bill, eh? No, and you never will. You believe in prayer, don't you?" And the minister replied, "Yes. I am a man of prayer." Then the doctor said, "That is your business and this is mine." Then he told the preacher this interesting story. He said:

"My wife and I have a cabin in the northern woods of Wisconsin far away from human habitation. When we went up there last summer, we took our radio outfit with us, and one evening after supper, we tuned in to a concert from the East, I think it was Buffalo. And sitting there in the woods by ourselves, we heard the concert perfectly. When it was over, I went out of doors and looked up at the great tall pines, silhouetted against the starry night sky and thought of the wonder of things.

"There were no wires, no visible means of communication, and yet we heard perfectly that beautiful concert. That stream of music had risen out of Buffalo and leaped across the Great Lakes and into the woods of Northern Wisconsin and came in through the closed doors and windows. I went back into the cabin and said to my wife: 'Wife, the man who doesn't believe in prayer is a fool.'"

And who will say that the old doctor was not right? A man who doesn't believe in prayer in these days of wireless telegraphy and radio can hardly claim to be scientific. Instead of science being considered an enemy of faith, it ought to be thought of as one of our strongest allies.

Good Testimony.

"Sweeter also than honey and the honey-comb."

"Let me tell you one of the sweetest things I ever told you in all my life. Jesus has washed my heart in his own most precious blood, and he has beautified it, and he has come and brought his Father with him to abide with me." So said a lovely Christian lady, whose very countenance seemed to bespeak the indwelling of the blessed Trinity. What a glorious experience! And yet not more glorious than is guaranteed by the will of our Father to everyone of his children. Our Father has no favorites, his will runs alike to all. The sweet experience of the lovely Christian referred to will surely be desired by all who read these lines. Then why not claim it? It is embraced in the will of your Father, precious child of Jesus! Open the will of your Father. Read John 14:23: "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." When you search the Scriptures, search them as the records of your Father's will.

Crossing the Deadline.

This booklet is one of the most interesting and suggestive of present day conditions of anything written by our editor, Dr. Morrison. It sounds the note of warning that ought to be heeded by a reckless multitude who are losing their faith in the Bible, and at the same time, their reverence for God, their respect for law, and a disregard of all things sacred. Send for this book; get a number of copies and scatter them about over your town and community. Make the people think, and then you may be able to lead them to repentance and salvation. The price is only 25 cents and may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

No. 1.

Text. "I will keep it night and day." Isa. 27:3.

Story. The lamp had been put out, and the little girl was afraid of the dark. Presently she saw the bright moon, and asked her mother, "Is the moon God's light?" "Yes," the mother said. "The moon and stars are all God's lights." "Will God blow out his light and go to sleep, too?" "No, my child. God's lights are always burning." "Well, mother, while God's awake I am not afraid."

Poem, prayer.

Dear Jesus, I am not afraid
Thou wilt keep me night and day,
Thou wilt keep me all the way.
So, Jesus I am not afraid.

No. 2.

Text. "The Lord will provide." Gen. 22:8.

Story. All the family had been sick. The father was out of work. The next day was Christmas but there was no money and no food. At family prayers the father said, "Edwin, see what the Lord has for us today." The boy read, "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches." Phil. 4:19. "He has never failed us yet," the father said. Then he went down town with the market basket. He came back with it full of good things for Christmas. They shouted and asked where he got the money. "I met a man who bought the wagon that I had given up all hope of selling." They never had such a happy Christmas as that provided by God, according to his riches.

Poem.

"Come, soul of mine, to God repair,
For he has never failed to answer prayer;

It matters not what may befall,
His love will surely conquer all.
Never despair, never despair,
God cannot fail to answer prayer."
Prayer. Heavenly Father, Thou hast promised to supply all my need. In any time of trial help me never to worry but always to pray and trust Thee.

No. 3.

Text. "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me." John 4:34.

Story. Louis was his real name, but his pet name was, "I will," given to him when he was four years old. By this name he was always called, afterward. If mother said, "Darling, bring me my glasses," or father said, "Dear, get me my knife," he always said, brightly, "I will, I will," and ran quickly. He is a man now, but it rejoices the heart of his mother when she recalls the little laddie, who never once said, "I can't," or "I won't," but always sweetly, "I will."

Poem.

"Mother says I help her so,
I am four and strong, you know.
Lots of things for me to do—
She needs me the long day through.
Mother always understands
I'm her little, Willing Hands."

Prayer:

"Father, lead me day by day,
Ever in Thine own sweet way,
Teach me to be kind and true,
Loving all I ought to do."

No. 4.

Text. "God . . . giveth us all things richly to enjoy." 1 Timothy 6:17.

Story. Little Hettie loved to set up her model town. One day her father said, "What kind of a town is it?" "Oh, a Christian town." "What if it were a heathen town?" "I should have to take out the church." "Yes, and the public school, the library, and the hospital." "Father, don't they have any hospitals over there?" "No, dear, Jesus first taught us to care for the sick." "Then I must take out the Old Ladies' Home and the Orphans' Home," said Hettie, sadly. "Then there is not one good thing left. I would not live in such a town for anything." "For having Jesus we have all things to make us happy and make others happy," said father.

Poem, prayer.

O God, Thou giver of every good,
Help me to love Thee, as I should,

And save some pennies for children small,
Who never heard of Jesus at all.

No. 5.

Text. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Heb. 11:1.

To believe is to receive that for which we believe. "When faith goes to market she always carries a basket, and never brings it home empty."

Story. Two little boys, five and seven, whose father was a Faith Missionary, prayed one Tuesday afternoon for "a new wagon with rubber tires." There was almost no money in the purse and no hope of any until Sunday. Wednesday evening a friend sent $25.00, and Thursday the wagon was bought and the boys were happy as they hauled the baby organ to the jail and hospital.

Poem.

"Faith looks afar and always gives
To things hoped for. It always lives
With strong convictions. Firmly clings,
Gives evidence to unseen things."

Prayer.

Lord Jesus, teach me how to pray,
And keep me trusting Thee, each day,
And show me what to ask Thee for,
And I shall daily love Thee more.

No. 6.

Text. "Listen unto me, and hearken." Isa. 49:1.

Story. Ruby was a faithful dog, who loved his mistress. One day she was pounding meat on the floor when the bell rang. She said, "Ruby, don't you dare touch that meat." She knew how he liked it. But when she returned there he sat with his back to the temptation. She petted him, praised him, and gave him a big piece of meat. He wagged his tail, one way in which a dog says, "Thank you," when he is rewarded.

Poem.

Hush, my dear, be still and listen,
To the Christ that speaks to thee,
He will reward if you will obey,
Always does he reward me.

Prayer. Heavenly Father, I always mean to be as faithful to my mother as that little dog was to his mistress.

No. 7.

Text. "If ye will obey my voice . . . ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me." Exodus 19:5.

Story. One night, when I was a girl, the largest theatre in the city was burned and only one little boy escaped. He was there for the first time and his conscience troubled him. Then the Lord said to him, in his heart, "Go home." He ran out. There was a cry of "fire." The people rushed for the doors but they fell over each other and every one perished, as the rotten, wooden building was burned to the ground. The little lad was glad that he had heard and obeyed the voice of Jesus.

Poem.

"Trust and obey, trust and obey"
For the only way,
To be a treasure to Jesus,
"Is to trust and obey."

Prayer.

"Jesus, guide me,
For I know not what harm may betide me,
Though weak I be,
Always, everywhere I will obey Thee,
As thou dost help me."

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been a constant reader of The Herald for some time and though my childhood days are past I enjoy reading page ten. What would you do if you should go to sleep some winter night and the morning found you unconscious and spring had come, and the trees were getting green before you remembered things, and then you found yourself in a strange, silent world, a world that was to be silent for you for the rest of your natural life? This was what happened to me when only nine years of age. God has blessed me wonderfully, and I am able to read the lips of those around me and seldom meet anyone I cannot understand. Long ago I surrendered my life to Jesus and find it so sweet to trust him and he is such a dear sympathizing friend. The illness referred to was caused by meningitis. I was passionately fond of music and it almost broke my heart when I realized I could no longer enjoy it. But when I reach my home in heaven I think for me the music will be sweeter for not hearing the music here in all those years. I am glad so many of you say you are Christians; the Christian life is the only life worth living. Time is short, eternity long. I will stop for fear my letter is too lengthy.

Cornelia Robertson.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your band of boys and girls just for a little while? I'll promise not to stay long. My daddy takes The Herald and I certainly do enjoy the Boys and Girls' Page. I think the letters are just wonderful. I have written to "Our Page" before, but as it has been so long ago, I don't guess there is any one that remembers me. I'm just a little girl of 22 summers, have dark brown, wavy hair, which is bobbed and dark brown eyes and a medium complexion. Yes, I'm just a little brunette, that's all. Cousins, last week I attended a revival meeting about five miles from my home, wish you all could have been there. We sure had a wonderful meeting. Estell Mixon, I guess your middle name is Fanny. Am I right? Rose Spink, I thought your letter real good. I wonder what has become of all the Kentucky boys and girls? I don't see many letters from old Kentucky. Hope they soon wake up and start writing letters to The Herald. Dear Aunt Bettie, I hope you won't let the W. B. get my letter. I believe you will print this for me, because you surely have the kindest heart ever. Now listen! I would be glad to get letters from all you boys and girls near my age. I sure like to get letters and answer them, too. I cannot make this letter too long, 'cause I promised Aunt Bettie that I would not stay long, so send your letters right on to a little Kentucky girl that will appreciate them.

Jewel Turner.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please let a little Fairfax girl join your happy band of boys and girls. I like to read The Herald, especially page ten. I am ten years old and in the fifth grade at school. This is my first letter to The Herald. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking a nap.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wrote a letter to The Herald and saw it in print, so I decided to write again. I am now in the seventh grade at school. We live in Bradenton, Fla. I enjoy reading The Herald, especially page ten, and "Modern Apostles of Faith." I have a pretty white leghorn rooster. I got him for starting an account with the First National Bank. I have written some questions, and to each one that answers them I will either write a letter or send a few picture post cards, or food of Florida. 1. What does David say about idols? 2. Who was Israel's greatest enemy at the time of the taking of the Ark? 3. How was the Ark received? I will try to answer all letters written me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I used to think that because I couldn't dance, play cards and smoke I couldn't have a good time, but at a meeting of The First Church of the Nazarene at Moberly, Mo., last December, I found that at the age of sixteen I could have a glorious experience in being converted, and later sanctified. This is my first letter and hope to write many more if this is printed. I have a talent for writing poetry, stories, and speaking. Pray for me that I may use these talents to the glory of God. Love to hear from Rev. N. J. Hepburn, formerly of New York City.

want to get acquainted with all of you. My! the nice letters I have been reading! I've written once to The Herald, though I failed to see it in print. Aunt Bettie, please publish this, for I'm very anxious to receive some letters. Cousins, if I see this letter in print I'll be looking for lots of letters. I was converted this last June, during a meeting that preacher Dunaway and song evangelist Alma L. Budman were conducting. Many lost souls in our town were saved, and I'm so thankful I was. The Christian life is much happier than the sinful. I am thirteen years old, have blue eyes, fair complexion, and black hair. I'll send a photo of myself to any one who writes to me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? We take The Pentecostal Herald, and I always like to read page ten. I am a little girl nine years old. I have golden hair, fair complexion and blue eyes. I will be glad when school begins. I will be in the fourth grade. I live about ten miles from a high school. We have a beautiful brick building situated in the village of Oddville. I have two brothers going to school. I also have a sweet, little curly-headed brother. He is four years old. He says he is going to be a preacher. I live real close to an M. E. Church of which I am a member. We have a good pastor; his name is J. S. Pineur. We have been having good revival meetings. I am taking music lessons. I sometimes sing solos at church. I would be glad if the one who sent words of "The Dying Girl's Farewell" to the Boys and Girls' Page would send me the music if it is possible.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Canadian girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have two sisters; when I wrote to The Herald before I only had one sister. Mabel is the baby. I have dark complexion, dark hair, brown eyes, am four feet, ten inches tall, and am eleven years old. Who has my birthday, March 23? Nexie Brown, please write to me. Gladys Puffenbarger, I guess your middle name to be Fannie. Dear cousins, what does Mo. stand for?

H. N. P.: "Kindly request The Herald to pray for my daughter and grandchild to be restored to health and spend their lives in God's service."

L. M. P.: "Pray earnestly for a sister who has wandered from God, and now wants to get back and have full assurance of her acceptance with him."

A DAY OF FASTING AND PRAYER FOR CHINA.

I view of the fact that China, containing a quarter of the earth's inhabitants, is being torn by civil, political and military strife, entailing untold suffering upon her people;

In view also of the fact that God has made of one blood all races of mankind; and that Christians in all lands have a deep concern for the material, social, political, and above all the spiritual welfare of China;

In view further of the fact that more than 5,000 missionaries in China have been compelled to evacuate their stations;

In view also of the intense anti-Christian agitation which has resulted in severe persecution of the Christians, desecration of churches, and destruction of mission property;

In view further of the great results that have been brought to pass by the observance of days of fasting and prayer in the history of this and other lands;

It is hereby suggested that Armistice Day, Friday, November 11, 1927, should be observed as a day of Fasting and Prayer on behalf of China.

It is suggested that prayer should be offered, in connection with the observance of the day; for those in authority in civil, military and political affairs in China; for the missionaries still in China, and for those in the homelands; for the Chinese pastors and Christians; for divine wisdom in the conduct of churches and mission schools; for the spread of the Word of God; and for a great revival throughout the land.

It is further suggested that this call should be given as wide publicity as possible in the press and pulpit, and that suitable arrangements should be made in each community for the proper observance of the day.

Must We Sin? by Howard W. Sweeten, treats this all-important subject in a clear, concise style. Every vital detail of this question is gone into thoroughly in this book. It sells for $1.25. It is an interesting book. Order of the Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

FALLEN ASLEEP

NORTON.

Mrs. Maggie E. Norton entered into eternal rest at 3:45 P. M., Wednesday, September 28, at her home on Silver Heights Camp Grounds, aged 69 years and a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Norton moved to the camp grounds to become custodian of same twenty-two years ago and during these years Mrs. Norton had attended to the business duties connected with the position.

She had endeared herself to a large number of friends who affectionately called her "Aunt Maggie," and she was devoted and loyal to her friends. She was faithful in testimony and life to the great experience of entire sanctification which she entered into in 1888 at Silver Heights camp.

She was a member of Centenary M. E. Church of New Albany and had been a teacher of a class of women in the Sunday school which she organized seventeen years ago when the members were small girls. Here she manifested her steadfast spirit and was very devoted to the class. In all her religious life this spirit of steadfastness predominated, and those who were associated with her in religious work knew she could be depended upon.

Silver Heights and the Holiness Movement have lost a loyal friend and worker, and The Pentecostal Herald a constant reader for many years.

She is survived by her husband, Robert B. Norton, (Uncle Bob) and two sisters, Mrs. Catherine Applegate, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Lizzie Brandenburg, of Halsted, Kan.

YATES.

After an illness of several months, Rev. W. B. Yates, one of the best known singing evangelists of the Methodist Church, South, passed into the Great Beyond at his home in Marion, Ky., Sunday afternoon, July 31, at fifteen minutes until four o'clock. At the bedside at the time of his death were the members of his own family, together with his brothers and his sisters, with the exception of Mrs. Neimier of Colorado who had recently visited him.

"Billie Yates," as he was well and lovingly known to his countless friends, came home from his work last November a very sick man. From the first his physician realized that his condition was serious and soon after his return home he was taken to an Evansville hospital where specialists told the family that he was suffering from a type of heart trouble which was incurable and that his life would be only a matter of days. In January he was brought back to Marion to his home—a home pleasant and comfortable and happy, a home which he loved and which with joy and eager anticipation he always looked to as a haven of rest and of refuge from the arduous tasks of his work, because in that home he knew full well that he would ever find the loving and sincere welcome of a devoted wife and of loving children. And of the countless thousands that will miss the sunshine of his smile and the joyousness of his lovable spirit, his devoted wife will miss him more than all the others. During all their years of married life she had been more than wife to him. She had been friend and companion, lover and mother,—one who stood by him and encouraged him in sunshine and in shadow,—one who was ever faithful and loving and kind and true. During the eight long, terrible months of his illness when nothing but hope and the love and sympathy of good friends were left to bring encouragement and strength, she was constantly at his side, even as he walked through the valley of the shadow of death, to bring comfort and good cheer to him.

William Brown Yates was born August 14, 1856. He was married on Dec. 22, 1889 to Miss Addie Stallions who died in May, 1895. To this union was born one son, E. H. Yates, of Evansville, Ind., who was at his father's bedside at the time of his death. W. B. Yates was married on Sept. 13, 1898, to Miss Cora Daughtrey who survives him. To this union two children were born. These children who were also with their father during his last illness and death are Mrs. C. A. Taylor, who traveled with her father for some time as pianist, and William Yates, Jr., a student at the University of Kentucky. Besides his wife and the three children named above he is survived by three brothers, T. R. Yates, of Madisonville, Ky., George W. Yates, and L. E. Yates, of Marion, and two sisters, Mrs. Lummie Clark, of Marion, and Mrs. Margaret Neimier, of Manitou, Colo.

It seems hard to realize that Billie Yates is gone. During the last quarter of a century and more he has delighted thousands in all parts of the United States with his singing. He has literally sung his way into the hearts of people in all sections of the country and today there are thousands who will regret to learn of the passing of one so gifted, so lovable and so wholeheartedly devoted to a noble cause and calling as was Billie Yates.

Billie Yates was a man who loved his home. Though success came to Billie Yates, as it comes to but few men, his home and his loved ones which that home sheltered were first in his thoughts. He was a man who loved his town and his community. No one ever had to guess as to where he stood on propositions which had to do with a better community. Billie Yates will be missed in Marion. His home town appreciates the fact that it is the poorer by his passing. His neighbors loved him and to know the way in which those same, splendid neighbors ministered to him and sought to bring good cheer and pleasure and joy to him in sickness and in health, and to show sympathy and love to his heart-broken family in their bereavement, speaks in unmistakable terms of the high esteem and of the love which these same friends and neighbors had for him.

Billie Yates loved his church, and the Marion church which appreciated him as a gifted son and as dependable worker realize that they have lost one whose place will not soon be taken. Many, many times in years gone by he has come home from his work worn out and exhausted but with that devotion to the Master's cause which was so characteristic of him, the services of his home church at Marion always found him in his place, ready to do his part and then more, if need be, in the cause of the Master in whose service he took such delight and found such joy.

Billie Yates was an optimist. He believed in looking on the bright side of things. He found much of joy and much of happiness in the world and as "he went about doing good" he made the world richer and better by the happy, cheerful and abundant life which he lived.

The funeral was held from the Marion Methodist Church Tuesday afternoon, August 2, at 2:30, and was conducted by Rev. L. K. May, pastor of the Marion Church, assisted by Rev. John Brasher, of University Park, Iowa, who preached the funeral sermon, Rev. J. B. Adams, Presiding Elder of the Henderson District, Rev. G. P. Dillon, Presiding Elder of the Hopkinsville Church, and Rev. J. T. Rushing, pastor of the church at Princeton, Ky.

The pall bearers were T. J. Yandell, C. S. Nunn, T. H. Cochran, Hollis C. Franklin, Levi Cook and L. E. Crider. Honorary pall bearers were Rev. J. C. Lilly, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Dr. Jas. F. Price, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Rev. F. L. McDowell, pastor of the Cumberland Church, Rev. Mack Harper, pastor of the Marion Circuit and Rev. C. T. Boucher of the Cumberland Church.

New Books for Preachers

By Rev. Clovis Chappell, D.D. Author of Sermons on Biblical Characters.

With that rare ability for character analysis which has distinguished his other books on Bible characters, Dr. Chappell here depicts the Idler, the Slave of the Second Best, the Distant Disciple, the Successful Failure, and other types of men who in Bible times and in our own day have made a failure of the business of life. He presents the person and the type engagingly, shows the factors operative in each failure, and how dangerously common to all are the mistakes of each. The book is an excellent addition to that fine series of character studies which has given the author a wide and alert audience.

THINKING THROUGH THE SCRIPTURES.

By William Parker White, M.A., D.D. Member of Extension Department of the Moody Bible Institute.

A brief syllabus of the Bible by books, written by a man of wide practical experience in teaching the Scriptures. It is designed to provoke individual Bible study as well as to afford a standard conservative textbook for Sunday school teaching courses. By dividing the books of the Bible up into eight groups and placing questions of great pertinence after each group, the author accomplishes a plan which will prove immensely helpful to the reader in private devotions and to the group bent upon a fuller understanding and appreciation of the divine message.

Price $1.75.

THE CHRISTIANITY OF THE EPISTLES.

By Arthur W. Robinson, D.D.

In a lively, readable style, and with a profound interest in the historical, Canon Robinson gives the gist of each Epistle, the circumstances which led to its writing, and the heart of the message it contains for the modern mind. The book will prove surprisingly informing and inspiring to youth, and to all those who would understand the Epistles, and their relation to the Christian life of ancient days and modern times.

Price $1.25.

THE PROPHETS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

By Alexander R. Gordon, D.D.

Ever since this book was first issued its worth has been amply attested in England, Canada and America. It is at once delightful and profound, combining the results of wide research and authoritative scholarship with the attractiveness of poetic expression. Dr. Gordon discusses the purposes and messages of the Prophets, but he devotes particular attention to the character of the Prophets. The book serves well to instruct the reader in matters of Biblical history and to inspire him by contact with the outstanding leaders of Israel's history.

Price $2.00.

FAST HOLD ON FAITH, and other Sermons.

By Rev. Henry Howard, Minister of Fourth Ave. Presbyterian Church, New York City.

Here Dr. Howard deals with the august facts of Christian experience in a manner which cannot but inspire fortitude in an age of timid thought and compromising action. The sure foundation of the Christian truth.

REPRESENTATIVE CHURCHMEN OF TWENTY CENTURIES.

A Cross-section of Christian History and Endeavor. By Hugh Watt, D.D.

Beginning in the first century with Paul this book traces Christianity through the ages. For each century the author picks out one man; the one who stands out above all in his time. Anyone who longs for a short biographical sketch of such men as Constantine, Augustine, Charlemagne, Francis of Assisi, and many others, will particularly appreciate this book for it makes possible a general knowledge of all these men without having to dig through hundreds of volumes.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson V.—October 30, 1927.

Subject.—Amos Denounces Sin. (World's Temperance Lesson.) Amos 2:4-12.

Golden Text. Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live; and so the Lord, the God of hosts, shall be with you, as ye have spoken. Amos 5:14.

Time.—B. C. 750.

Place.—Bethel.

Introduction.—In our last lesson we studied the call of Amos to the prophetic office. We found that he was "among the herdsmen of Tekoa," a small village twelve miles south of Jerusalem; that is, he was a hired shepherd there at the time of his call. It is by no means certain that he was born there, or that he was reared in that neighborhood. After his call he did his preaching at Bethel, a town twelve miles north of Jerusalem.

We find some difficulty in fixing the time of his prophecy. Dr. Adam Clarke dates his ministry B. C. 787. Arnold's Notes puts it 750. Some regard him as the earliest of the minor prophets. Others say not. Dr. Clarke puts Jonah about B. C. 862, nearly a century ahead of Amos. The exact date matters very little in a case of this sort. The fact that Amos lived and prophesied nearly 800 years before the birth of our Lord, is the important matter.

To understand a preacher one must know his audience and his message. Nothing is more pitiable than to see a timid, time-serving preacher, with a sickly grin on his face, dealing out thread-bare ecclesiastical platitudes to a congregation of intelligent, respectable sinners. Such people need a manly preacher who will declare to them the whole counsel of God. Amos was just such a preacher to just such a congregation of sinners. He lived in the time of Uzziah and Jeroboam II. Both kingdoms, Judah and Israel, were in a prosperous condition; but they had almost forgotten all obligation to Jehovah. Idolatry was rampant everywhere. Bethel, where Amos preached, was desperately wicked. The charges he makes against the community are sickening. Oppression, dishonesty and moral corruption ruled the day. The rich oppressed the poor, and lived in luxury and wantonness. It was at Bethel that the people worshipped the golden calves. They had been set up by Jeroboam the elder; and Jeroboam the second had made Amaziah, the idolatrous priest, to be chief priest in Bethel in their worship. Against all this wickedness the message of Amos was direct and terrible. He did not mince his words, but brought rich and poor, high and low to the bar and laid their sins bare. He told them plainly of the wrath of Jehovah that was even then falling upon them, and declared in unmistakable terms the utter destruction that was about to fall upon the entire kingdom because of the sins of the people.

Amaziah the false prophet became incensed against Amos because of his severe preaching, and accused him to king Jeroboam: "Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel: the land is not able to bear all his words. For this Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land." That was a fairly truthful report of what Amos had said. Maybe we need some of the straight-forward preaching of Amos in our day; but the multitudes will not hear it now any more than in those days.

Then Amaziah turned upon Amos personally: "O thou seer, go, flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there; but prophesy not again any more at Bethel; for it is the king's chapel, and it is the king's court." The preaching was too severe: the king and his grandees simply would not stand it any longer. Amos had told the whole truth on them; and they were vexed "good and proper." But Amos was no coward; so he meets Amaziah squarely: "I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was an herdsman, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit. And the Lord took me as I followed the flock; and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel. Now, therefore, hear thou the word of the Lord; thou sayest, Prophecy not against Israel, and drop not thy word against the house of Isaac. Therefore thus saith the Lord, Thy wife shall be an harlot in the city, and thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die in a polluted land, and Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land." Some commentators tell us that after this the prophet retired into the land of Judah, and that he prophesied there. Where and when he died we are not informed. The most general opinion is, that he suffered a violent death because of his uncompromising preaching against the sins of his people; but it was better for him to die than to compromise his message.

This is termed "The World's Temperance Lesson"; but it would be better to broaden the caption, and study Jehovah's dealings with sinners. Somehow, we cannot believe that he feels towards us as he did towards Israel. Perhaps he will deal more strictly with us than he did with the Jews in those bygone days. "The times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." "If the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward; how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" God changes not. He is just as severe in his dealings with unrepentant sinners now as he was twenty-five hundred years ago; and he is just as merciful towards repentant sinners. America needs to learn a lesson from the ruin of Israel. She must repent, and turn unto the Lord; or he will turn against her, and curse her for her terrible sins; for, mark you, we can duplicate nearly every sin of which Israel was guilty, and some that were not even thought of in that day.

The lesson proper for today is so simple, that it needs but little direct comment. The first charge was against Judah. The prophet's form of expression, "For three transgressions of Judah, and for four," is simply emphatic. It may be that he is using the form to express seven, the perfect number of Scripture. Then he pronounces her doom: "I will send a fire (war) upon Judah, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem." This did not come until the time of Jehoiakim, several years later, when Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon besieged the city, and carried away a multitude of captives.

Next the prophet turned upon the kingdom of Israel, and laid bare her sins to the very core. She was greedy for money, so greedy that she had sold the "poor for a pair of shoes." She was guilty of the vilest immoralities. The picture in the eighth verse is terrible. If a poor man had pledged his cloak or his bed, the law of God demanded that it be restored to him before sundown; but those miserable sinners violated the law, and left the poor to freeze. It was the custom to give a criminal who was about to be executed a certain amount of wine to mitigate his sufferings; but they stole the wine, and drank it themselves. They had no mercy.

The prophet reminds them of Jehovah's mercy to the nation: "Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them, whose height was like the height of the cedars, and he was strong as the oak; Yet I destroyed his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath." The nation had lost all sense of gratitude for past mercies. But Amos went further: "Also I brought you up from the land of Egypt, and led you forty years through the wilderness, to possess the land of the Amorite." Surely he will arouse some gratitude. Long years before that time Joshua had called the people to Schechem, and delivered to them a very similar address; and they repented, and turned back to the Lord, but the people are dead now, so dead that nothing can move them. How Jehovah yearns over them: "I raised up of your sons for prophets, and of your young men for Nazarites. Is it not even thus, O ye children of Israel? saith the Lord." But what had they done in view of all this kindness? It was against the law for a Nazirite to drink wine; "but ye gave the Nazarites wine to drink." Jehovah sent his prophets to declare his message to the people; but they "commanded the prophets, saying, Prophecy not." So they had treated Amos. So they treated many others of God's prophets. They would have none of his reproof, for they had sold themselves to work iniquity; and their national doom was sealed for ever. Pray for a revival in America. Maybe it is not yet too late.

Dr. H. C. Morrison's New Book.

The title of this new book from the pen of its gifted author is not only very suggestive, but runs true to the title to the end. If any one has rejected the glorious doctrine of the pre-millennial coming of our Lord, because he thought it a pessimistic teaching, if he will read Dr. Morrison's new book, unbiased, he will find that the teaching of the pre-millennial coming of Jesus is the most optimistic view of life and the world held by any class of people.

There are some very thrilling, thought-provoking statements made in the last two chapters, and contrary to many books this one reaches its climax in the closing chapters. It is well worth the price, $1.00.

AYCOCK'S NEW BOOK

"THE CRIMSON STREAM."

A Devotional Sermon on the Blood

The first and perhaps the principal appeal of this new title is the fact that it fills a real need in our book list. No subject is of more vital importance, no tenet of orthodoxy is more assiduously assailed by the modernists than that of atonement by the blood of Christ.

Read the following excerpt.

"This splendid little book, 'The Crimson Stream,' is presenting to the lovers of truth, the believers in the fundamentals of the faith once delivered to the saints, a publication full of interest, light, and essential facts bearing upon a right attitude toward God, the Bible, and personal salvation. He has placed emphasis where it is most needed. It should be widely scattered and read by thousands of honest and earnest seekers after truth and righteousness such as will stand the test of time and eternity."—R. T. Williams.

This booklet is unusually attractive, bound in buff colored, imitation leather cover with two-color design.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. W. Austin Vandersall is soon to start westward on another evangelistic itinerary and will be pleased to assist any one, anywhere, on full salvation lines. He may be addressed 1208 North Cory St., Findlay, Ohio.

Rev. and Mrs. Jack Linn, evangelists and singers, have two open dates, one in November and one in December. Address them at Oregon, Wis.

R. L. Hatter: "Rev. Fred J. Johnson, of Baldwin, Kan., one of the old-time holiness M. E. preachers, recently closed a very successful meeting at the Immanuel M. E. Church, of Alta Vista, Kan. People attended from an area of 60 miles. Rev. Johnson is a revivalist of very remarkable and unusual ability. During the meeting 5,706 chapters of the Bible were read, and 16 souls came to the altar, some being converted and others sanctified. The church and community have been blessed in having this man of God in their midst."

"The Defenders of the Christian Faith," an organization with headquarters in Wichita, Kan., will hold its annual convention in Lindsborg, Kan., Nov. 16-18. This movement was launched two years ago under the leadership of Gerald B. Winrod, nationally known lecturer and conservative religious leader. They expect not less than 1,000 delegates to attend. The speakers will be Dr. W. B. Riley, President of World's Christian Fundamental Association, Rev. Paul W. Rood, President Bryan Bible League, and Dr. I. R. Dean, of Toronto, Can. The Defenders are said to have about 3,000 members in Kansas alone. They publish a magazine called "The Defender."

W. D. Hughes: "My dear old mother and I have been enjoying the articles written by Dr. Morrison in The Pentecostal Herald, the greatest paper that comes into our home, yes, greater than all the others put together, because of the light it carries that Jesus died upon the cross that men might be saved, not from hell in the hereafter, but that all men might be free from all sin while in this present life."

Friday is to be observed as a day of fasting and prayer, in accordance with a call issued by the Rev. B. A. Few, pastor of the Capitol View Methodist Church, Little Rock, Ark.

Denominational lines are obliterated by the call, which is as follows:

"The more spiritually minded women of my church with their friends and all Christians, regardless of denominational lines of like faith, will observe Friday, October 7, as a Day of Fasting and Prayer for a nation wide revival of Old Time Religion and Power. They will meet at the Church, corner Third and Pulaski streets, at 10 o'clock in the morning and spend the time in prayer together until 3 in the afternoon.

"They invite all serious minded persons who believe in prevailing prayer, and a Father—God who is Almighty, to meet with them. No doxies to be aired, no controversies, no contention, but for the faith, just unceasing prayer for the victory over sin and the enemies of Christ."

"The Twelve," by E. A. George is a history of the lives of the Twelve Disciples. It is worth many times the selling price of $1.00. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

HE ENJOYS THE HERALD.

I am a careful and interested reader of The Herald. This paper will remain in our home as long as we remain in this life. The Herald's message is always clear in all of its teachings so far as I have been able to see. I am glad to note the two moves you have in view now concerning Methodism. First, that in a series of sermons you are intending to discuss the question as to whether, because of the hold the Modernist teaching and conditions resulting from this teaching will in the end cause a division in the Methodist Church. I am glad you have concluded to cover this question at further length. I know that many are seeing this just as I am.

My mother's people were converted as young people. The husband and wife in a camp meeting in Pennsylvania in 1780; from that time down the line has remained unbroken. With this as far back as my recollection goes the family altar has been in the home, with the exception of a very few years in my early married life. I am now in my 75th year.

My grandfather was Enoch Hoffman, a Methodist class-leader all his days. After conversion in early manhood, he with my sainted grandmother, a cripple on crutches all the time I knew her, made their home "The Preacher's home." On quarterly meeting occasions these meetings held then for a period of days, perhaps a week, should the occasion require. These meetings were not as now, but were for the saving of souls as well as for the sins of the church.

There were crowds then; there were crowds in my years in attendance at revival meetings in Southern Ohio. The Gospel was preached in all its fullness and Holy Ghost conviction came upon the people, settled upon them, and God had his way. Seekers prayed through and old brothers and sisters were with us to help with prayer and instruction. The power of God was felt and understood as being the Holy Ghost whose presence upon great occasions was upon, and with his people and his word.

I wish now to volunteer as one who will have in mind and on my heart your call to prayer and fasting the morning of the first Friday of each month for Methodism. This, in a different sense, has been on my heart for several years, viz., that God burden the hearts of his people with prayer for a revival which shall extend to the ends of the earth; in which men shall again seek and find Jesus in the old way; in which the Bible shall again be accepted as the Word of God to man, and again to be preached in all its fullness as of old to a fallen world; in which Jesus shall again be raised before the people that they may again see him as he gave himself upon Calvary for you and me; that sinners again be warned to flee from the wrath to come; that sinners may again be called to repentance instead of to membership.

My heart was glad when I came in touch with The Herald. By the way, we have it pretty well distributed here in our little community. We are in the country despite the fact that our mail has a town delivery. The Sunday school lesson by Bro. Mingle-dorff is so direct, all explanations made from a scriptural viewpoint.

The Herald family, the faculty and student body of Asbury College, the membership of The Methodist Evangelical League, their preachers and helpers and The Pentecostal Herald as it enters the homes of our land carrying its message of full salvation, are on my heart. Whether by day or night when my mind is from other things diverted, these come immediately to mind and are presented before a throne of grace and each morning after fires are made, I take 15 to 20 minutes alone before God for this purpose. I have been helped to a closer walk with God through your ministry as it comes to me through The Herald.

May God's blessing continue with you, likewise, his strength continue to be your strength.

Faithfully yours,
Thos. Bragg.

A CHINESE PUZZLE.

E. A. Kilbourne.

A political "Chinese puzzle" which involves 450,000,000 people is no small affair even although the rest of the world shows a very nominal interest, comparatively. For fourteen years they have been trying to create a Republic of China while 90 percent or 95 percent of the people are ignorant and know nothing, and care little of what a republic means. So strenuous and all absorbing is the struggle for a bare existence that politics do not enter into the life thought of but a very few of the people and these latter are involved for what they can make out of it, it is their living. Among them there seems to be very few real patriots apart from the boisterous student class and the professional politician, if they can be so classed. China's political soil does not seem to be producing many great men although the times call loudly for them.

The men who tackle that "Chinese puzzle" of political, social and religious chaos are face to face with the greatest tragedy imaginable for these millions are being cut adrift from all their millennium-old moorings and torn by Bolshevism, civil war, brigandage, famine and flood and the anti-Christian and labor movements.

While we are not so much interested in China politically as we are in China religiously nevertheless the situation is so distressing that it demands much prayer upon the part of the Christian world which is seeking to bring the Gospel to those millions of unreached souls. Let us pray much for them. We believe that God has his hand upon the whole situation and that he does things in answer to prayer—prayer changes things.

The evangelization of China is not a "Chinese puzzle," nor is it an American or English puzzle. In fact it is not a puzzle at all, it is just something that ought to be done, can be done and must and shall be done. It was commanded and is therefore possible. We can have no controversy on that point, God's word settles that forever, ours is but to obey. If we find a chaotic condition that hinders our way, it does not mean that we are to call off the forces and quit, but it does mean a call to prayer for the forces at home and abroad, and while we pray we should be moving forward.

China is not closed to the Chinese and our great business is to pray the Lord of the harvest to thrust forth Chinese laborers into that ripe harvest field, and do all we can to create a force of Chinese workers. Even if China is mostly closed to the foreign missionary this can still be done for there are coast cities still open to us where this work can go forward. We feel the great need of an army of "laborers" for China's millions and by his grace we hope to do our part in Shandhai Cowman Memorial Bible Institute.

Your part in this work beloved is to pray much and take up the support of a Bible School student if possible. Write us about it.

SERMON OUTLINES

BY REV. U. G. FOOTE, D.D.

The late Col. George W. Bain said of this preacher, that "Dr. Foote is the best all the year round preacher I ever heard."

The Western Recorder says: "The method by which the author develops his sermon outlines is attractive. Each sermon is composed of several divisions, and under those divisions he has simply written down key thoughts, a thought to a line. The simplicity of this is winning. Also the outlines represent the preaching of a thoroughly evangelical minister and evangelist."

The Record of Christian Work says: "The plan is good, and the material prolific of points."

STOP! READ! ACT!

DO YOU KNOW that there are many people right in your own community who do not know that there is such a paper as THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, who would be glad to know of it?

DO YOU KNOW that THE HERALD is a weekly blessing to thousands of our less fortunate brothers and sisters who are unable to get out to church on Sunday as you and I do?

DO YOU KNOW that nearly every week THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD carries a holiness sermon to many people who never hear one preached from a pulpit?

DO YOU KNOW that there is not a better, more wholesome sixteen pages of holiness reading matter, for the whole family, than in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD?

DO YOU KNOW that if you, as one of the present great family of readers will send THE HERALD into four new homes its influence will be increased fourfold?

DO YOU KNOW that it is your great privilege to join with us in the attempt we are making to preach scriptural holiness to all men everywhere?

DO YOU KNOW that you can send THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD to some friend for the next three months for 25c?

THE GREAT NEED OF A TRUE REVIVAL.

By The Editor.

THERE is very general discussion throughout the country on the necessity of a great spiritual awakening. Many intelligent and serious men in the business world are telling us that the greatest need of the time is a revival of Bible religion, that it is the only thing that can meet the exigencies of the hour and save the home, the church and the nation.

* * * *

We saw this situation thirty-nine years and nine months ago when we commenced the publication of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. For nearly four decades we have been sounding the note of warning, trying to emphasize the one great fact that can save the individual soul, salt, protect, illuminate, and preserve society from wreck and decay. That one and only saving power is the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Gospel has power to save; nothing else has. We believe in education, moral and political reforms, scientific and practical progress, but all of these must grow out of, and be permeated by, the power of the Gospel of Christ and a serious, sound spirit of Bible religion or, in the end, we are doomed to failure.

* * * *

We believe that the same Bible truths preached by John Wesley and his coadjutors will produce the same results today that they produced in the days of Mr. Wesley. We are not insistent on certain words and phrases, but on certain great Bible truths. The faithful preaching of full and free salvation by consecrated, Spirit-filled men, is the great need of the hour. Such preaching will bring a genuine revival; almost all classes of society will be touched and blessed. The early Methodists preached on the fall and depravity of the human race, the importance of repentance, regenerating grace and sanctifying power. Those early preachers appealed to the head and heart and needs of men and it mightily moved the people. Revivals broke out everywhere; tens and hundreds of thousands were brought to repentance and saving grace.

* * * *

Notwithstanding the worldliness, wickedness, and unbelief on every hand, there is a very large class of people in this nation who are hungry and thirsting after God, who are not at all satisfied with their present spiritual state. They have been brought into the church, many of them, on Decision Day or Easter Sunday round-ups. They have had no profound conviction for sin, no regenerating grace, no witness of the Holy Spirit that they have been born again and are indeed and in truth the children of God. They have not hungered and thirsted after righteousness; they have not been filled with the Holy Ghost. Their souls are sad and weary. Many of them are wandering about in sin and trying to find something in the pleasures and pastimes of the world to comfort their weary hearts.

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE.

Is the organization of another Methodist Church ahead of us?

Is modernistic opposition to the inspiration of the Bible, regeneration, and sanctification, going to force the organization of a new Methodist Church?

It is to be hoped not, but God must be considered. What will God do about it? He stands for his Word, regenerating grace and sanctifying power. God cannot go back on his Word, the shed blood of his Son, or the Person, power, and work of the Holy Ghost.

Read Dr. Morrison's articles on this subject, beginning in this paper in November.

How gladly this multitude would hear the Gospel trumpet sound the note of a great revival of true salvation. How eagerly they would press to the altars of the church to find in Jesus a real Savior. Shall we not awaken? Will not the ministers of the Gospel bring the glad tidings of salvation to these hungry multitudes? Shall we let them go thus into eternity without saving faith in Christ? Let every minister arouse his people, awaken them, stir up their hearts with a great longing for a revival of religion and the salvation of their children and their neighbors. We must have a gracious revival in this nation or multitudes of our people will go into eternity unsaved.

Monthly Sermon.

AN EXHORTATION AND PROMISE.

Text: "Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3:2, 3, 4.

The exhortation and promise contained in the text are very comprehensive. It goes to the very root of Christian life, and the glorious hope of the coming of our Lord, and the reward which is vouchsafed to those who are dead to the world, and are living the life hid with Christ in God.

The Apostle would guard those who have entered into the mysteries of this blessed life against becoming entangled with the things of the world, of coming to love the things of time,—material things—rather than the things of the Spirit, which are eternal. We appreciate the importance of the exhortation when we remember that, however devout, consecrated, and separated from the world we may be, yet we have a physical life, a body which must have food, clothing, a place of residence, means of conveyance from place to place, provisions for education and intellectual development.

If men live long, there comes a time when they are not productive; often they are afflicted with disease and in need of nursing and care in their old age. In view of these facts, it is quite natural for them to wish to lay by something of material things for the emergencies of life; it is also quite natural for them to desire to make some provision for their families, in case of death before their children are of age and competent to provide for themselves. Any man is solicitous for the comfort of his wife if he should, because of infirmities or death, cease to be able to supply her material wants.

All of this calls for industry, economy and wise investment. With a large percent of the human race, life is an almost unending battle for bread. It is remarkable the number of good, industrious people in the world who, if deprived of labor for sixty days, by sickness, a strike or lock-out, would be in actual distress for the simplest necessities of life.

This physical life, with its natural wants, becomes urgent and complicated. It of necessity raises questions of political economy, governmental policies, treaties with neighboring nations, traffic and trade, manufacturing, transportation and distribution. The whole question of labor and capital enters into the matter of food, clothing, and housing in a very practical way. There is danger here that the devout Christian have his mind drawn away to material things, his attention absorbed with the matter of physical life, and neglect the culture of his soul and watchful care that his affections are not set upon temporal things.

The possibility and hope for the luxuries of wealth on the one hand, and the fear of meager poverty and want on the other, comes to disturb the minds of men. They become intensely interested with the economic problems of life; the hope for wealth and the fear of poverty often develops in them a covetous spirit and they become schemers, money lovers, exacting, dishonest, hard masters and bad payers. The Apostle understood the danger to which Christians are subject; he realized that the physical man must soon perish, that directly we shall have no need of temporal things; that the spiritual man will live forever; the real man can never die; that his needs must go with him into the eternal world. Hence the exhortation, "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth."

In this material age, we have great need of caution at this point. Perhaps there has never been a time in the history of the human race when there was more widespread and eager desire for money, and those things which it will secure, than at the present time. A high state of civilization is fraught with peculiar dangers. The savage was content to dwell in a cave or a hut made of bark and thatched with brush. He lived by the

PILGRIMS TO NOTED SHRINES.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

WE have had four or five of the most unusual and exceptional experiences. On our way to London we stopped off at Oxford where we were so fortunate as to fall into the good hands of Rev. C. W. Hickman, the Wesleyan Methodist pastor. He and his good wife treated their American visitors with the rarest kindness. We had often read and dreamed of Oxford, the classic city—the city famous for its colleges—the Oxford of John Wycliffe, John Wesley, John Henry Newman; Oxford, where Cranmer and Latimer were tried and burned at the stake; Oxford of the Holy Club, where Methodism had its rise among such devout students as John and Charles Wesley, George Whitefield, Morgan, Hervey, and others.

Now let the reader remember that Oxford is a generic term; it is not one great college, but a group of colleges such as Magdalen, Christ, Balliol, Lincoln, Merton, etc. Of course, its graduates always become known as Oxford men no matter what college they have studied in; then, furthermore, students have the privilege of attending lectures in as many schools as they desire in connection with their particular fields of study or research. Here at Oxford is the Bodleian Library—the greatest in Europe—with the possible exception of the British Museum in London.

With the aid of Mr. Hickman, who knows Oxford from Dan to Beersheba, we were taken around the various colleges and spent sometime, especially in Christ College and Lincoln College where Wesley attended. We stood in the Holy Club room and in John Wesley's room. On the outside wall of the room is a bust of John Wesley which was unveiled a few years ago with a beautiful ceremony in which one or more of our American Bishops took part. The Holy Club room is now to be oak panelled at the expense of some American Methodists. The Church of Mary the Virgin where Wesley preached quite a few of his "Fifty-three" sermons is a church of great antiquity; here also the trial of Latimer and Cranmer took place; here, also was where John Henry Newman preached many of his great sermons to packed audiences. It was at Oxford that Newman and Pusey had the battle which gave rise to the Oxford movement which eventuated in Newman going over to Rome and finally becoming the English Cardinal. The reader will remember that it was when Newman was heading towards Rome that he wrote, "Lead Kindly Light." It was with a pang of regret we left Oxford. Mrs. Ridout and Mrs. Hickman became so chummy that they acted as though they had been old-time friends. Mr. Hickman has done a notable work for Oxford Methodism and, though a very busy man, yet he gave us the whole of the afternoon in showing us around. He was indeed a brother beloved. When we parted at the station we felt that we were saying good bye to old friends.

We arrived in London at night, but fortunately did not have to hunt up hotel as we were being entertained over the week end at the delightful home of David Thomas, a London merchant, and President of the International Holiness Mission which has branches scattered in many parts of the kingdom. We had been in London several times before but we saw more of London this trip than ever before. It is a city of seven millions of people and one of the most historic cities of Europe. It abounds in matters of historic interest. A few places visitors to London seldom forget to visit, namely: The Tower, Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral; and Methodists all want to see City Road, John Wesley's old church, the house where he lived, and his grave in the churchyard of City Road.

Our visit to the Tower helped to revive again our knowledge of English history. We stood in the room where the two young princes were murdered at the command of the Duke of Gloucester, afterwards Richard III. We saw the awful instruments of torture used in days gone by. It is sad to think of such a place as the Tower being the residence for years of such a fine character as Sir Walter Raleigh. So many big men of history and women, too, were imprisoned in the Tower. They went in never to come out alive again.

The Jewel Room is a place of astonishing interest. There is a glass case surrounded by iron bars and well guarded by "beefeaters" (the official guards and guides of the Tower) in which are the Crown Jewels of England. Here are crowns and coronets, sceptres and swords, gold and precious stones descending from sovereign to sovereign. The crown of King George is there, also of Queen Mary. Some jewelled swords are to be seen, the sword of Justice and the sword of Mercy, the latter being short and pointless. We were fortunate enough to get into Westminster Abbey for evensong. The great organ was played and the celebrated choir of trained boys and men sang. The service was of course ritualistic but nevertheless the singing and the music and the chanting were not without helpfulness to the devout heart. Readers of John Wesley's Journals will frequently read of Mr. Wesley going to hear the anthems. Indeed, when he was under conviction and just close to the kingdom, he went to St. Paul's Cathedral and the anthems spoke to his soul.

After the service we visited the various Naves and Chapels of the Abbey and stood beside the graves of Kings and Queens, Potentates and Royalty. The most interesting chapel is that of Edward the Confessor, who promised the Pope that he would build an Abbey—Westminster is the result, though the beginning of Westminster dates back prior to Edward. To Methodists, the Poet's Corner always has a keen interest because of the Tablet put there by Dean Stanley in honor of John and Charles Wesley. It is a beautiful piece of work and the finely cut profiles of John and Charles one would never weary beholding. Inscribed on the Tablet are Wesley's noted words: "The world is my parish," and, "God buries his workmen but carries on his work." Another noted monument is that of David Livingstone which is right close to the grave of the unknown soldier in one of the main aisles of the Abbey. On his tombstone are the words, "For thirty years his life was spent in an effort to evangelize the natives races, to explore the undiscovered secrets, to abolish the devastating slave trade of Central Africa." Then with his last words he wrote, "All I can add in my solitude is, may Heaven's rich blessing come down on every one, American, English, or Turk, who will help to heal this open sore of the world."

Sunday was a day of blessing in London. It had been raining during the week but good weather favored us on the Lord's day. We were scheduled for a full day of work at the Battersea Tabernacle of the Holiness Mission, of which Mr. David Thomas is President. They have a splendid organization in London. The audiences were large all day, made up of business men and women and a splendid band of young people. We enjoyed preaching the gospel of holiness to the Londoners. The singing was the heartiest we ever listened to. In the afternoon Mrs. Ridout addressed the young people which filled the house. At night another full house greeted us and the Spirit of the Lord was there in blessing and power. Then again, Monday night wife and I took the service between us and we had the joy of seeing souls seeking the Lord.

On Monday morning we went into the large business establishment bearing the name of "David Thomas," and now managed by Mr. Dunning, who, also, is the Superintendent of the Sunday school and leads the singing at the Tabernacle. The business is a large dry goods or "drapery" concern, and it is a practice every morning at 10 o'clock for the heads of the department to meet in the manager's office for prayer. We dropped in after ten o'clock when the praying was over, but they requested that we offer prayer which both wife and I did. It was a beautiful sight to see a large mercantile business in London have prayer every morning.

After this we went to that mecca of Methodism in London—City Road—John Wesley's famous church and house. The old church has been renovated and put in the most beautiful condition. The same mahogany pulpit from which John Wesley preached is cut down a few feet in the matter of height, the galleries stand as of old, but now are supported by handsome pillars, the gift of overseas Methodists. The windows are beautiful, some of them the gift of Americans. I have visited City Road three times before but never have I seen the old church in such a wonderful state of preservation. The present pastor, Rev. McNeal, is very energetic and City Road has become more than a Museum—it is a live center.

John Wesley's house is in a state of fine preservation. Rev. Mr. Stewart, a retired minister, now lives in the house and evidently he takes great delight in showing visitors around. We were in the room where Wesley died; then in the little prayer room where he used to spend the first hour of the morning in prayer and devotion. Next, we went to the graveyard in the rear of the church and stood at Wesley's grave; also at Adam Clarke's. On John Wesley's tombstone there are these significant words:

"This great Light arose by the Singular Providence of God
To enlighten the nations,
And Revive, Enforce and Defend
The Pure Apostolical Doctrines of the Primitive Church
By his writings and his labors
For more than half a century."

Across from City Road is Bunhill's Cemetery where John Bunyan lies buried, also Susannah Wesley. This cemetery is situated in what is now a great factory section and it was rather singular to see the girls sitting on the tombstones eating their lunches. Not far from City Road is the financial center of London, and the Bank of England, which has been for centuries the financial arbiter of the world. Some say the financial world now heads up in New York, but the Englishman still clings to his conviction that London still holds the supremacy. I have noticed since being in England that the average Britisher thinks that we take too much credit upon ourselves for winning the war. They insist that we made millions and millions before we entered the war and therefore, could have afforded to cancel the European debts. This is an open question, of course.

We bade farewell to London and went down to Herne Bay to see that Brother, beloved of British Methodism, Rev. Samuel Chadwick, President of Cliff College, a school very much on the order of Asbury College in the matter of orthodoxy and evangelistic activities. Dr. Chadwick has been ill for some weeks past and was resting at this beautiful

City by the Sea. There are few men in England today who have done for evangelism and vital Christianity what Bro. Chadwick has done. For sixteen years he had the great Central Mission at Leeds. A few years ago he was President of the British Conference. He is one of the great preachers and leaders of Evangelical Methodism of Great Britain. We had four hours together and felt blessed while in the presence of such a man of God.

THE ART OF SOUL-WINNING.

Rev. Florence Schleicher, B.A., E.Th.B.

EVANGELISM, or soul-winning, or the harvesting of souls, is an art,—a fine art—indeed if one may be so daring to say it—the finest of the arts. It is first of all the precipitation of salvation. The carrying of the gospel message is the means used and necessary to the attainment of that end, but the winning of souls is the objective end and result desired.

In this work of soul-winning praying is the primary factor involved. In studying the life of Christ we find that he inculcated and employed prayer as the chief means of his ministry. The night before he commissioned his disciples he spent the whole night in prayer; and later he enjoined them to "pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest." Prayer was the only factor in evidence in that great fourth-of-Acts Revival, and it was the chief factor also in the notable Welsh Revival. So we believe in the cultivation of this art of soul-winning prayer heads the list of essentials.

It seems needless for us to say that the soul-winner must be a pray-er; he must be able, willing, desirous, and impelled to pray for others; for mere perfunctory prayer for, or with, souls needing the touch and taste of the divine in their lives will be futile: it will miss the mark—the soul or souls will not be landed. And we might say right here that there are degrees, (for there are degrees of development and attainment to be attained in the spiritual life as well as in the intellectual and educational) in petition for ourselves, in supplication for conditions, in intercession for the souls of others in which few of us have ever mastered. We as ministers, if some of us have not already done so, should, yea, must, matriculate in such a course for the enriching and enlarging of our own spiritual life and for the expansion and extension of the ministry of Evangelism in the world.

To be concrete: besides the personal prayers of the people prior to the Revival we note four other avenues:

(1) The praying of the evangelist or pastor himself—not for the message but the man—not for the sermon but for the soul.

(2) The praying of the people for the pastor or evangelist.

(3) The praying of the pastor and people in hearty accent and accord for all the interests of the people.

(4) The praying of the penitents and seekers for their own soul sickness and need.

Prayer is the arrow—death to sin and life to souls—the bull's eye.

Prayer is the Power House of the soul that sends forth currents of evangelism into all fields and in all directions energizing and electrifying all touched thereby.

Prayer is not a dynamo exploding in a temporary evangelism, but a continuous current imparting shocks on contact. (And faith is the medium necessary for the contact).

Prayer is the battery (kept charged and surcharged) which sends forth evangelistic truths composing the radio message which is carried by the waves of love, and arrows of conviction, and currents of energy to the hearts of men.

The author of many texts on soul-winning does not stress (doubtless because of space) the significance of prayer as one of the elements of qualification of the soul-winner, which is of tremendous importance. Some of us have found we often win our souls on our knees long before the altar services where visible results were obtained. The life of habitual prayer tends more and more to evangelism; and praying in the Holy Ghost equips one evangelistically.

We began by stating that soul-winning is an art. So it is. We commonly think of music as an art. And we all are cognizant of the fact that a musical career necessitates training under true and tried masters, for hours, months, and years of tireless effort and practice on the part of the student. Just so, "He that winneth souls is wise." And best of all Christ has promised "I will make you fishers of men." No matter what human power may do, and how far the incandescent light of man's mentality may go, these all have their limitations. Man's extremity is God's opportunity." When the schools have graduated us "then will the Lord take us up." And we heed his invitation, "learn of me." But some feel no obligation along this line and seem to think the Christian ministry is a 'snap' or a 'pipe course.' Their attitude reminds one of the man (a singer) who was called to the ministry who said, "When my voice is gone, I'll preach." A farmer might as well say—"When rheumatism overtakes me I'll enlist in the army."

Holiness evangelism is truth—not extreme or fanatical: it is the standard of God's book, and his ministers can afford to be as extreme as his book, and, since he has given us the message, he will also equip us with the prayer means and methods of propagating and promulgating the same. To be a soul-winner one must be the very personification of goodness, kindness, and gentleness; then he will manifest interest in and concern for others. These elements will issue in a life of true service to souls.

There must be true sincerity. A superficial, religious worker is easily distinguished from a sincerely, sane, substantial, spiritual man; here professional evangelists need to guard themselves very closely, for many become mechanical in their ministry and souls detect their superficiality.

Sincerity leads to solicitude and sympathy. The writer is reminded of the man by the pool of Bethesda. Christ sympathized with him, he had solicitude for him, when he asked, "Wilt thou be made whole?" And he had a sympathy that could succor—"Immediately the man was made whole." To achieve results—to win souls—one must be spiritually strong and truly lowly in spirit. Even as Christ was here—sift and sort out individuals. It's not altars full, or entire congregations, but the individuals composing them we seek. To win them one must be willing to be one with folks, to get next to them—or to be thoroughly scriptural—"mind not high things but condescend to men of low estate."

In all of the work, tact is necessary. "Talent is the ability; tact is the knowing how." There are some folks one must first approach with white gloves on. Before a bride is won she is wooed; before a horse is driven it is drawn or led from its place of shelter and safety. Even so must delicacy be employed and discretion demonstrated in this art of soul-winning.

Now to really attain the end faith is necessary, faith in men as well as in God. The soul-winner believes in God because of the evidence of his work in his own life and Christian experience. He believes in the gospel, or the seed, and in Christ the Son of man or the chief sower, and in himself as one of the assistant sowers. Faith such as this fortifies him and allays all fears. Faith for victory in this soul-saving business inspires confidence and insures results. God will not let his word return unto him void, and if we sow the seed, and 'seek to save that which is lost' we will land some sheep and feed the lambs.

Christ, the master soul-winner, adopted different methods for different persons, i. e., his approach to the woman of Samaria differed from that to Nicodemus the high church man. In the former I see four high points marking advance by degrees in her case:

(1) "How is it that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? For the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans."

(2) "Art thou greater than our father Jacob . . . ?"

(3) "Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet."

(4) "I know that Messiah cometh"—and this climax was met by Christ "I that speak unto thee am he." And his later manifested omniscience convinced her and immediately she begun soul-winning.

He met Nicodemus on his level but had the same message. And folks in power and position have a capacity for spiritual things if they will but divest themselves of the temporal and physical and material and be imbued with the spiritual.

We conclude that soul-winning, or evangelism, is beauty itself, blessedness of life and balm to the restless; it supplies a ballast and a barrier against the blights, blows, blasts, and breaks in the life of men. It requires purity of motive, and Perseverance, of which patience is the backbone, and faith which spells success in soul saving.

THE SURE FOUNDATION.

W. J. EPPERSON.

IT would be difficult to support the foundation of our Government and of society if the faith in the Bible is lost, as it is the only Book that gives the authentic history of our creation. I can conceive of no instruction of the right kind that can doubt the truth contained in its pages, for there is where we get all our inspiration and comfort, and hope of eternal life. The Bible has been proven true as we all know it has brought comfort in the greatest ordeal that comes to a human being—death. Many have faced it with fortitude; even our soldier boys away from home in a strange land could sacrifice their lives having faith in God and believing they would see their loved ones again in "that city not made with hands eternal in the heavens."

My mother's last words were, "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness." History gives us the last words of many of the greatest men and women of this world who testified in their last hours that their faith was well founded and they were satisfied that God in whom they had believed, had

Some Prophetic Glimpses of Israel's Restoration.

Rev. Ira C. Grabill.

AMONG the great and momentous events that cluster about our Lord's appearing, none is more deeply interesting than Israel's restoration, not only to his ancient home in Palestine, but especially to his own peculiar place in the divine favor. The prophets have given special attention to the subject and Isaiah in particular has waxed eloquent and written largely and sublimely of the coming glory. They rose above the troublous times in which they lived and caught glimpses of the glorious restoration in the dim and far away future, and passed on to us the accounts of the visions they saw.

The pen pictures drawn by them resemble so closely what we have been taught to expect in Christ's glorious millennial kingdom that we do not hesitate to affirm that they were writing of that very kingdom and time. St. Paul foresaw the time when the Gentile branches would be broken off of the good olive tree and the Jews be grafted in again, and tells us about it in that marvelous three chapter argument found in the 9th, 10th and 11th chapters of his epistle to the Romans.

The references immediately following will all be from Isaiah's prophecy. In chapter 2:2-4, the language is very plain and unmistakable in its meaning and the latter part speaks of our Lord's universal rule and of abiding peace among all nations. Both the first and second appearances of our Lord are referred to in the eleventh chapter, especially his judgment of the wicked at his second coming, and the marks of the lifted curse are seen among the lower animals, and finally the triumphant return of wandering Israel to his own land. And in the twelfth chapter is heard a grand hallelujah chorus of rejoicing at the glad consummation. In the first part of the fourteenth chapter the return of Israel to his own land is expressly promised, and in the latter part of the 24th and all through the 25th, 26th and 27th chapters the subject dearest to the heart of the prophet is more or less openly discussed and again plainly spoken of. In the 30th chapter, beginning with the 18th verse and continuing to the 26th, are some truly comforting words, ending with a very remarkable statement concerning the increased light of the sun and moon, timed so as to appear "in the day that the Lord bindeth up the breach of his people and healeth the stroke of their wound."

Again, in the 33rd chapter and beginning at the 20th verse, are some lofty and beautiful words, closing with these in the 24th verse, showing the radically changed conditions in that glad time, "And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick." In the 34th chapter is a fearful and terrible account of judgment and slaughter which the prophet tells us in the 8th verse, "is the day of the Lord's vengeance and the year of recompenses for the controversy of Zion." The account is carried over into the 35th chapter where a climax is reached in the 8th, 9th and 10th verses as the prophet soars aloft in one of the sublimest strains in any language or time in setting forth the same grand theme of Israel's return. While it is not so clearly stated in the 49th chapter, yet to those who have eyes to see and ears to hear it is there, and in very striking language, too. In the 51st chapter is another luminous passage beginning with the 4th and ending with a climax at the 11th verse, in almost the identical language found in the latter part of the 35th chapter. And so on through the greater part of the 52nd, the 54th and all of the 60th, 61st and 63rd, and parts of the 65th and 66th chapters; but time and space fail us when we attempt to tell in detail all the wonderful words used in these chapters touching the subject in hand.

Then Jeremiah takes up the strain and has not a little to say in the 30th, 31st and 32nd chapters of his prophecy. Hastening on to Ezekiel and beginning at the 34th chapter and 22nd verse, he foretells the recovery of Israel and their permanent and peaceful settlement in Canaan. And again in the 36th chapter and beginning with the 24th verse is a full and beautiful statement showing the changed conditions after their backslidings shall all have been fully and finally healed. Ezekiel's valley of dry bones and their transformation before his eyes into a vast living army is but another of the vivid prophetic pictures of which we have been speaking. This prophet makes one more reference to the subject uppermost in the prophetic mind in the latter part of his 39th chapter. Daniel is not so specific as those heretofore mentioned. In his visions he saw in one vast sweep the history of all the world, including that of the Jews, clear down to the end of the present age and on into the next. But in the beginning of his 12th chapter he is clearly speaking of the same wonderful events under consideration, namely, the recovery of the Jews, the first resurrection, etc.

In Hosea 2:14-23 is language that shows clearly that the prophet had clear vision of Israel's coming glory and full restoration; and what he says of the covenant for Israel with the beasts of the field, the fowls of heaven and with the creeping things of the ground, and further, about breaking the bow and the sword, and the battle out of the earth sounds very much like the time of the lifted curse and the millennial kingdom. In the last two verses of his 3rd chapter he speaks of Israel remaining many days without a king, a prince or a sacrifice, and adds, "Afterward shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days." Doubtless David here is Hosea's name for Christ. In chapter 14 and verses 4 to 7 inclusive, the prophet becomes highly poetic and his language reminds one of the Song of Solomon as he sees Israel settled again in his own land, healed of his backslidings and walking before God in holiness and righteousness like Zacharias and Elizabeth. See Luke 1:5, 6.

Joel speaks of bringing again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem and of a peaceful and prosperous settlement in Canaan, and later he sees a great and terrible armed conflict in the valley of Jehoshaphat, and speaks of it as "Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision." His language is very stirring where he says, Chap. 3:9, 10, "Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near, . . . beat your plowshares into swords and your pruning-hooks into spears," etc. Found in such a setting it looks and sounds very much like a picture of the great battle of Armageddon. But at the last we hear him uttering a triumphant note in these words, "But Judah shall dwell forever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation," etc.

Not till Amos reaches the 8th verse of his last chapter does he begin to see hope for Israel and that in the latter days; but he sees the same vision of full restoration with attendant peace and prosperity and permanent settlement in Canaan that all the other prophets have seen. Likewise, though his recorded prophecy is very brief, Obadiah does not omit to mention the favorite subject. Jonah, of all the prophets thus far noticed, has no testimony to offer in support of our contention. But Micah in his 4th chapter speaks expressly of the latter days of the supremacy of the Jews, of the universal reign of our Lord and of the end of the war in the earth. In the 8th verse of this chapter we find a new expression, "the first dominion," and it is promised to the daughter of Jerusalem. Zephaniah is the next prophet to record his vision of the last days. He calls upon Zion to sing and the daughter of Jerusalem to be glad and rejoice in view of the glowing prospect. See Zeph. 3:14-20.

Zechariah, like Isaiah, writes a much fuller account of the same precious truth so dear to them all. In the last four verses of his 2nd chapter he feels like singing and exhorts the daughter of Jerusalem to sing of her coming Lord. Again in his tenth chapter and 5th verse he records an account of another vision of Israel's home coming. In his 12th chapter is a picture of the same time and scenes depicted in his 14th chapter, where all nations are gathered against Jerusalem to battle, and in the 8th verse he tells how the strength of the inhabitants of Jerusalem is mightily increased to meet the demand. In the 10th verse is a prophecy of Israel's penitence at sight of their returning Lord, whom they now receive after two thousand years of rejection. His 13th chapter is nearly all a prophecy of that same time, including the first verse, but especially the last two verses where it is expressly stated just what proportion of the Jews shall receive Christ and what part shall be destroyed for their persistent rebellion.

In the first part of his last chapter is a picture of the great and final battle of Armageddon with its fearful and terrible results to Jerusalem and its people. In the third verse we see our Lord appearing on the awful scene, which, however, is more fully described in Rev. 19:11-21. The next verse tells of some of the mighty physical changes in and about Jerusalem and speaks especially of living waters proceeding out of the city, a thing hitherto unknown. The 9th verse is so plain that he may run that readeth it. Beginning with the 12th verse is a detailed description of how the alien armies were destroyed when the Lord appeared. In Isa. 11:4 it is stated, "With the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked." In 2 Thess. 1:8 the language is, "in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God," etc. In Rev. 19:21 we read, "And the remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth." But Zechariah tells us just how living men and beasts were affected and how suddenly death overtook them.

Ezekiel tells us that seven months were occupied in burning the dead after the beasts and birds of prey had had their fill, and also from the weapons of war left upon the field Israel was supplied with fuel for the next seven years. See Ezek. 39:9-16. Zechariah next informs us that all the nations shall make annual pilgrimage to Jerusalem "to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts," and failing in this the same plague shall be visited upon them as upon their armies when fighting against Jerusalem. In the last two verses we are told what is to be the universal standard of conduct in the earth during the millennium, even "Holiness unto the Lord." With Christ as chief ruler and his glorified saints governing under his direction, holiness everywhere and for everybody would be the most natural outcome.

Malachi, the last of the prophets, catches a glimpse of the doings in the last days, and a brief account of what he saw is recorded in the 3rd and 4th chapters of his prophecy. In the first verse of the 3rd chapter the reference is doubtless to John the Baptist, but in the 3rd, 4th and 5th verses the prophet is evidently giving us a view of the last days.

Also the last verses of the chapter speak of the same and likewise the whole of the last chapter. Here is the promise of Elijah's return to earth "before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord."

ASBURY COLLEGE AND THE NEW YEAR.

PRESIDENT L. R. AKERS, D.D., LL.D.

ASBURY College began its thirty-eighth year with the opening on September 14th. The first two or three days were given up to Freshman activities. This was the first time we have observed Freshman Week, and it was a pronounced success. The Freshman Class of 200, the largest in our history, with representatives from thirty-five states and several foreign countries, entered eagerly into the business of becoming true Asburians.

In addition to the Address of Welcome by the President, lectures were given by the various professors and every effort made to make the young people feel thoroughly at home and adjust themselves to their new college life amid the Blue Grass fields of old Kentucky. A more earnest and thorough business-like body of students we have never seen.

Following Registration, the beloved President Emeritus, Dr. H. C. Morrison, spoke during the Chapel hour and made several evening addresses which were greatly appreciated and resulted in scores being definitely blessed at the altars of prayer. Following the custom of several years, a ten-days' series of evangelistic services were held with Rev. Raymond Browning, evangelist, as preacher. The revival which was already under way in Dr. Morrison's services broke out anew and swept over the entire student body and throughout the community. The present Senior Class, numbering close to 100, reports only two unsaved and one of these a seeker at the altar. So widespread was the gracious work of salvation that it seemed almost as if the entire student body testified to the saving or sanctifying power of Jesus Christ.

Brother Browning's meeting in the church some months ago was notable in its far-reaching results and in the large numbers who were definitely blessed. His return engagement was no less successful. Sweet of spirit, kind and sympathetic of approach, and yet tremendously incisive and direct in his preaching of full salvation, he has won for himself a place in the hearts of both College and town and eternity alone will reveal the extent of the splendid work done through his ministry.

The ringing testimonies at the Chapel services and the fine spirit of unity pervading both faculty and student body bespeaks a propitious year for this World School. Pealing from the newly erected belfry upon the Administration Building are the sweet Deagan Bell Tower Ten Tone Chimes, the splendid gift of the Class of '28, ringing out their message of full salvation to the entire community round about. The Morrison Memorial Library is the constant delight of all who live upon the campus. Beautifully appointed with the splendid equipment given by the Class of '27, it is serving an indispensable place in the college life, contributing much to the spirit of study and research which is putting its stamp upon Asbury College students intellectually as well as spiritually. And it is here that I am reminded of the approving statement of a prominent West Virginia ban'er who said, regarding our institution, "What a wonderful combination you have in Asbury College: the finest spiritual life coupled up with thorough intellectual training"; and also of the testimony of Dr.

Clarence True Wilson in "The Voice" of Washington, D. C., who says: "Asbury College is an institution where rigid adherence to high scholastic standards is not compromised by unique evangelistic zeal."

Everywhere, throughout the nation, thoughtful and consecrated people are coming to the conclusion that the hope of tomorrow lies in Christian institutions such as Asbury College where the faith of the young people will be strengthened and conserved instead of weakened or destroyed, where an experiential knowledge of the saving power of Jesus Christ is the rule rather than the exception, where a passion for souls becomes a marked characteristic of practically every Christian worker who leaves its doors.

Asbury College is unique in providing for a three-fold present day need: Bethel Academy, a standard "AA" high school, a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, and chartered under Asbury College, is doing a valuable work in training those who have been called to special service and have not had adequate high school training. Then the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences provides a standard four-year course with an A.B. degree universally recognized as A-grade throughout our nation. Then in the Theological Seminary there is a three-year course provided for graduate students, leading to the Bachelor of Divinity degree, as well as certificate and diploma courses for undergraduates which insure a thorough indoctrination of the sound principles and Christian essentials of our faith. Hence, it is possible for one who aspires to be a trained worker either as missionary, pastor, or evangelist, to begin with the high school and complete his course with the graduate theological degree, ready for life service, having done all this work in a deeply spiritual atmosphere and under safe, sane, and consecrated instructors. Such institutions become a vital necessity to Kingdom progress and merit the heartiest support of God's people everywhere.

In a peculiar sense, Asbury College belongs to the Holiness people of America. It is from their prayers and from their purses that its progress must be largely gauged. No taint of Modernism is found within its walls. No element of compromise is manifested in its administration or faculty. It stands unflinchingly for the whole Bible, for a world-wide spread of Scriptural Holiness and the clear-cut preaching of full redemption from all sin.

Great are the responsibilities of those who seek to direct the policies of this school. Great is the need of the prayers of those who believe in and look to Asbury College as a lighthouse amid widespread moral darkness.

Let it be remembered that no student pays his way through school, that student fees provide approximately only one-half of the expenses required, that the school cannot receive and properly care for those who knock at its doors unless its patrons and friends remember it and its needs by devoting a portion of their tithe to its enlargement. May we not ask and expect the readers of THE HERALD and our patrons and friends everywhere to remember Asbury College first of all in their prayers and then to assist in whatever financial way possible toward its larger development?

We look forward to the new year with gratitude to God for his many mercies in the past, for the gracious outpouring of his Spirit upon us in the opening days of the school; and through his sustaining power we shall "carry on" for him and the spread of Scriptural Holiness throughout the entire world.

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00. PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING Co., Louisville, Ky.

The Modernistic Mind.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

Jesus chose to perfect religion as the agency for the redemption and highest welfare of man—the complete fulfillment of human life. He might have chosen science." The above is quoted from the leading editorial in an official Advocate of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Bible says: "We are redeemed by the precious blood of Christ." "Thou hast redeemed us unto God by Thy blood." Which is it by which we are redeemed? Is it by "religion," or by the blood of Christ? And, what is redemption? Is it merely the perfecting of human evolution—"the complete fulfillment of human life"; or is it an atonement, an expiation for man's sin? And, what is this "religion" which is an alternative for science, "as the agency for the redemption and highest welfare of man"?—"He might have chosen science."

The same editorial also says that Jesus "did not give himself to scientific research." The Bible says: "All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made. . . . The world was made by him." "His Son, by whom also he made the worlds." "Science" is God's truth in nature, in the things he created and made; as the Bible is his truth by revelation as to spiritual things. Imagine Jesus, the Creator of all things, the Author of all science, doing "scientific research" work!

The foregoing quotations are a sample of the attitude of the Modernistic mind toward Jesus and his work. They eulogize "Jesus," and their "Jesus" is a man who chose between various possible agencies for the perfecting of human evolution, and decided upon "religion"; a man who, had he selected "science" instead of "religion," must have "devoted himself to scientific research"! They do not think of Christ in the scriptural way, the Methodist way, as the Creator of all things, as the atoning Lamb of God, dying vicariously. They think of him as but a limited, errant, fallible man; an example, a teacher, a model, a leader, a martyr to his ideals. They see him in the same category with Buddha, Zoroaster, Mohammed, etc. This accounts for the at once great success and complete failure of foreign missions under the Modernistic regime—multitudes of baptisms, but no conversions.

A modernly trained Methodist(?) preacher, speaking of the wedding at Cana, said that Jesus was excusable for making wine, since he did not know the scientific effects of alcohol, and prohibition was not an issue.

Under such teaching from the pulpit and press, whither is Methodism drifting? Even when they say good things, as they usually do—there is much in this editorial that is good—there is "death in the pot", it is poisoned with some of this kind of thing. It is part and parcel of the Modernistic mind, and is inevitable while we have that type of mind among us.

The Spirit of Kindness

Should be instilled into the heart and mind of every child. In doing this people often overlook the fact that the dumb animals respond to kindness with almost as much gratitude as a human being. We do not know of a better way to help create this spirit of tenderness and kindness than to place in the hands of the growing boy or girl a copy of "Black Beauty," which is a most thrilling story of a horse. A grown-up cannot read this book without purposing in his or her heart to be kind to animals, and it increases one's desire to be kind to humanity.

You could not give a young person a book for Christmas that would be read with any more pleasure and profit, and at this time we have a most attractive edition that we are offering for 50c, postpaid. Try giving the book and see if you aren't more than gratified with the results of this gift.

provided for them a mansion. Did he not promise he would prepare many mansions, enough for all who believed in his name?

My parents could appropriate in life and in death the sentiment so beautifully expressed in the hymn:

"How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord,
Is laid for your faith in his excellent word!
What more can he say, than to you he hath said,
To you who for refuge to Jesus have fled."

I prize the life my parents lived before me as the best heritage they could have left. It is true I inherited my belief in the Bible, but I believe had I not had pious parents and had an opportunity to read the Bible, I would have faith in its teachings, for we all want the truth, and anyone reading the prophecies made centuries before Christ came, cannot reasonably doubt the Bible is an inspired Book. A guide for us to live by and, if we heed its teachings, we shall have no fear of death.

It has been said, and I think truthfully, when we have the privilege to decide a problem, to decide in favor of what is most reasonable and has the firmest foundation. I believe that God is the Ruler of the world and his word is true, that man is the only creature having or possessing immortality. If human beings have immortal souls and are accountable for their acts here to God who is all-wise and powerful, is it not pleasant, as well as wise, to believe on his Son whom he sent? Does not the Bible teach we shall be rewarded in the world to come for our right living here? It is true man must have faith in himself to accomplish anything, and he must have faith in some being with greater wisdom than any human possesses and realize with the Psalmist that "Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night sheweth knowledge." The sun and moon are never tardy a minute. Who, but God, could so control them?

Where does man get his divine attributes to invent? Is it not a fact that all inventions worth while for the pleasure, comfort and happiness were invented by citizens of countries that accept the Bible as true? For the laws of such countries, criminal and civil, are based on the teachings of the Bible? Can any of God's creatures fathom, plan, execute, except man? Have not all the great men of the past, whose memory we revere, believed in the Bible, and in the immortality of man?

Is not the Bible valuable from a literary standpoint, and is it not the foundation of all culture, aside from religious teachings? It is a Book applicable to all ages and, while old, it is ever new. Where it is read and observed the standard of living is raised and our relationship one to another is more pleasant. Who but Christ could have said so much in as few words as is contained in the "Golden Rule?"

I am a layman and have not time from my daily work to write or enter into any discussion or controversy with the critics of the Bible, but I believe the critics are wrong, and that in weakening the faith of the youth in the Bible is the cause of so many suicides among them. I believe a large percent of the college and university students come from homes of believers in the Bible. The young people love their parents and believe in them. When they hear lectures in which the Bible is criticised as being untrue, rather than disagree with their parents when they return home, and taking into account that if the first part of the Bible is untrue probably the latter part is, they see nothing in the future for them and they end life by committing suicide. There is certainly a fundamental cause, for every one knows the parents of the college students are, as a rule, well fixed financially, that it cannot be on that account they commit suicide. We find the boys who have but little money and live near to nature and believe in God refrain from taking their own lives.

I am inclined to believe that the skeptics and those who want to disbelieve the Bible forget that its author is perfect and its teaching cannot be improved; it contains all wisdom. As David expressed it, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandments of the Lord are pure, enlightening the eyes. The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired than gold, yea, than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb. Moreover by them is thy servant warned; and in keeping of them there is great reward."

The young think of the future oftener than many realize. They plan what they will do and endeavor to follow the pursuit chosen, and to make a success they must have implicit faith in themselves and in the Bible, as all civilized nations acknowledge the Bible as true. Have any of God's creatures except man ever built hospitals, churches, asylums and orphanages? Can any but man reason, execute, manufacture? Can any but man plan for the future comfort of his offspring? To put man on a level with the lower animals takes from youth all aspiration, ambition and incentive to right living to merit a reward, and life will not be pleasant to them, but dark and gloomy, as they will conclude, if there is no reward for a life well spent, why spend it well? It makes one sad to know that some of our boys are becoming criminals and it should awake the people of this country to find the cause. Would it not be well for the teachers to remember the Bible text "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap?" Would it not be wise to teach lofty, spiritual, moral, cultural ideals? Teach purity, spiritual progress and worthy achievements of immortal beings. In this material age is it not a fact there should be more expended upon the development of the finer and deeper truths of life? A comprehension of them will increase the faith of the young people in the good things of life, and will cause them to realize their obligations to society and their country, and make a success of life, as has been done by stalwart believers in the Bible.

STUDIES OF EVANGELISM.

MRS. JULIA A. SHELHAMER.

THAT PECULIAR TRIAL.

VARIED and peculiar are the trials incident to a life of soul-winning. So keen are the assaults of Satan that one is often tempted to desert the work in order to secure a little peace of mind. The more successful the revival the more one suffers. Occasionally we have a hard field and few conversions. Again, more success attends our humble efforts. At these times spiritual pride is kindly kept from us by the peculiar trials that always accompany such success.

I shall not soon forget an experience on a Canadian camp ground. It was cold and rainy. Toward evening Satan approached and whispered, "Now tonight is your turn to preach. It is too bad it is raining. It does look as though the Lord might clear up the weather after all the fasting and praying you have done for souls. That's all he cares about you anyway. What about that text he gave you for tonight? It is for sinners and this weather, there will hardly be a sinner out. That's all you know about the leadings of the Lord. Besides, the camp meeting committee have made it very hard for you by letting it be known that you would speak every other night and the alternate afternoons, for now people will stay away when they know you are to take the service."

I was not sure all these suggestions were from Satan. His presence affected me in a way I cannot describe. My head grew hot and my scalp dry. The clamps of hell were being forced down upon my trembling spirit until I felt I was being crushed into nonentity and yet I had to exist a living failure and suffer the ignominy of it.

Satan did not leave, but followed me into my room and very economically improved his time by talking thus, while in my distraction I was trying to decide what dress to wear and what to do about the meeting. It was almost time for service but I could not hurry. Satan would not let me. He took special delight in making little things go wrong. I could not get my hair arranged. I think I took it down eight times before I could make it look presentable. I was nearly exhausted.

It was now past time to go. Crushed under the depressing influence of the tempter, and accompanied by him I walked slowly over to the Tabernacle and knelt in silent prayer. I could not touch Jesus. He seemed to be a million miles away. The preliminaries would soon be over when I must arise and try to speak, and without a definite message. I was distracted beyond measure. My hands became cold and a perspiration which savored of death or something infernal came upon me. The more I prayed and tried to decide upon a new message the more muddled my brain became. Since God would not help me I wanted to confide my feelings to someone else, but dared not; for sad experience had taught me that this only makes matters worse. So I kept still while the pressure increased with every passing moment.

"Aha," said Satan, "They have sent for you almost across the continent and you are going to make a complete failure tonight. How do you feel now? Do you like soul-winning work?"

By this time I felt utterly unfit physically, mentally, or spiritually to address any audience, great or small, on any subject. I wanted to weep but could not. The tempter continued:

"I would give it up. You are half back-slidden anyway. You have no Holy Ghost power and blessing. Don't try tonight at all."

Compelled by the lateness of the hour, I arose from my knees in a daze, not knowing what to do. To my happy surprise the crowd had gathered. I arose and took the text to sinners the Lord had given me in the first place and in a few moments after the closing appeal had been given the air was filled with the sobs and prayers of sinners who were weeping their way to Jesus. Praise his Name! Among the seekers was a school teacher, who had broken her parents' hearts by her worldliness, and there she was praying with hands uplifted for God to have mercy on her soul.

Though the devil proved himself to be a liar, yet he told the truth in saying that I had the rainy nights for thus it often happened; but notwithstanding this, the people came and crowded in until they had to stand in the aisles. More than this the Holy Spirit was so present that sinners crowded the altar and the front seats so full that we could scarcely get to them to pray for them. Our Christ gets the glory.

This and similar experiences have taught me that when the nagging of Satan is particularly annoying and the pressure from hell is especially hard, there is no need of being tried at all. While this does not save us from feeling the infernal suffering which results, yet it has enabled me, I trust, to hold steady with a little more patience than before.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

WICHITA CAMP.

The Wichita camp meeting for 1927, in many ways, was an epochal period. A truly wonderful time. The experience of any genuine interdenominational camp meeting association is like that of an individual, namely, made up of variety. However, none of us anticipated the high water phase of it in the month of August, and especially where it was never known to be but twice in forty or fifty years. This necessarily caused perplexity and extra expense. But regardless of the flood, plus, (and let no one surmise Satan or his emissaries were dead, or had taken a vacation, or gone off on an excursion) the Lord demonstrated his matchless ability to overcome all obstacles and did it in such manner that honored his cause for time and eternity. But few people could get into the park because of high water at the entrance to our ground, hence, we were compelled to conduct the services the first three days and nights in the Salvation Army Hall, a commodious building, yet by far too small to accommodate our people. On Saturday afternoon our camp manager, Bro. Orndoff and his corps of faithful assistants erected a foot bridge from the South end of Water Street to our ground (a distance of approximately 200 yards) and to our surprise there were possibly 2,500 people present for the first Sunday morning service. From that time until the close of the final service the spiritual tide was pronounced. The common expression during and also after the camp was, "We never saw so many great altar services one after another." This writer can say the same thing. It is doubtful if our camp was ever more highly favored with a Bible type of preaching than by Bros. Babcock, Shelhamer and Anderson. We positively know they are all diggers, but also these men of God were anointed for giving us instruction how to be overcomers in the battles of life.

The characteristic singing of Brother and Sister B. D. Sutton, together with two pianos, the orchestra, and singing of the great congregation—(who can describe it?)—what an indispensable asset for pentecostal results at an old-fashioned camp meeting. The spirit of effectual, fervent praying pervaded the atmosphere all about us.

The children's services were ably handled by Mrs. E. D. Bartlett, who gave such unusual satisfaction and had the seal of the Lord so unmistakably on the altar services that she was called back to have charge next year. Sister Bartlett is a returned missionary and is especially qualified to handle children's and young people's meetings.

The bookstand did a remarkable business, while all other departments were truly honored of the Lord. We are grateful to him for his protection, his many manifestations and his timely encouragement and we are constrained to exclaim, if Jesus tarries the Kansas State Holiness Association expects to press the battle harder against sin and all manner of worldliness through the agency of the Wichita camp next year than we ever have, and relentlessly keep it up until we translate. Hallelujah!

CHICAGO HOLINESS CONVENTION.

The Illinois State Holiness Association held a very gracious convention in Chicago at the Central Free Methodist Church, which is located on the West Side of the city. The convention was of eleven days' duration, beginning August 25. The special workers were the nationally known evangelists, Rev. T. C. Henderson and Rev. Guy Wilson. Rev. B. A. Nelson, the President of the Association, was chairman and also led the singing.

Rev. Nelson preached the opening sermon on Thursday night to an appreciative audience and from the very first service down throughout the days until the closing hour, the blessing of God attended each message and many hearts were strangely warmed by the unctuous preaching of the Word. The convention was well attended and people came from far and near with several states represented. The holiness people from the different churches were well represented; among those taking part in the services were the Rev. Mrs. Iva D. Vennard, President of The Chicago Evangelistic Institute; Rev. W. G. Schurman, pastor of First Nazarene Church of Chicago; Rev. R. L. Wesler and Rev. Bone, the District Superintendent of the Free Methodist Church. We were also delighted to have Rev. Joseph Smith, President of National Holiness Association with us. Bro. Smith led the host in unctuous prayer and God answered by pouring out his spirit upon Bro. Wilson, who was the preacher at the Sunday morning service. It was a message filled with tenderness and melted hearts throughout the audience. Among those at the altar for prayer was a visiting preacher from Iowa who was gloriously sanctified and who went back to his church filled with the Spirit. Their convention was indeed a great spiritual uplift to all who had the privilege of attending. The evangelists were at their best and much good has been accomplished.

Bro. Henderson brought a great message on the Judgment which stirred many hearts and several came forward to pray and found victory. We are indeed grateful to God for this convention as it brought back many happy recollections of the glorious days of the past when such men as Dr. Carradine, Dr. Fowler, Dr. McLaughlin and many other heroes of the cross thundered out God's messages of full salvation in the churches of Chicago.

Many new members have united with the Association as a result of this meeting and it was very evident that new interest gripped the people which gives us hope for greater things in the future.

We are planning to hold monthly all-day meetings, beginning with October, and we believe this will greatly help to spread scriptural holiness throughout the city.

The Association members were so delighted with the good work of the evangelists that at their annual business meeting a unanimous call was extended to Bro. Wilson and Bro. Henderson to be with us again next year. We are glad to announce their acceptance and will look forward to a wonderful time at our next convention. Bro. B. A. Nelson was again elected the President of the Association for the coming year. We lift our hearts in praise and thanksgiving to our heavenly Father for the blessed fellowship of these eleven days. We shall not forget the closing message by Bro. Henderson, which was followed by the audience rising and singing, "God be with you till we meet again." All present seemed deeply moved and many eyes glistened with tears as the words of the song died away and Bro. Wilson closed the meeting with a tender and gracious prayer to God that his love and mercy may rest upon us all until we shall meet where the storms of life are over just inside the Eastern Gate, so shall we ever be with the Lord. Thus ended a gracious and blessed session to the glory of our God.

Mrs. Charlotte Nelson.
Secretary.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

Even if you have been reading so many good reports from camp meetings recently, yet, knowing so well the "appetite" of the most of you I am sure you will be glad to hear from one of our camps right here near Atlanta, Mount Gilead, which was held Aug. 4-14. We put the date earlier than usual so that those who wished to attend Indian Spring could do so getting the last week of that meeting which many of us feel like we cannot afford to miss. It was impossible for me to get there this year as I had another meeting at Fayetteville, Ga., with my pastor immediately following Mt. Gilead.

This camp ground within a few miles of Atlanta, was established more than ninety years ago. Last year it was placed in the hands of a larger committee with Judge John D. Humphries chairman. This committee has wrought well and they are determined to keep up the pace that was set this year, securing the very best talent. We had as our leading preacher, Dr. John C. Patty, of Chattanooga, who delighted the largest congregations ever in attendance. He is a marvelous preacher, safe and sane in his ministry. Our singing—congregational and chorus—was the best they ever had and it seemed to me the best I have ever heard.

Since we now have the camp ground well lighted from the main Georgia Light and Power Co., and since the place is so easy of access to Atlanta, we predict a wonderful future for it. Keep us on your prayer list.

Pastors who may read this will please keep in mind that in my evangelistic work I do both the preaching and singing and am not above filling small places. God is honoring my simple message in sermon and song.

In him and his service,
Charlie D. Tillman.

PENHOOK, VIRGINIA.

We have just closed one of the most blessed meetings we have ever been privileged to attend. The folk here say this was the best camp ever held at this place. Five years ago while Bro. Craddock was pastor of this Circuit this camp was organized with the help of Dr. Adams. In all my travels I have never met a more faithful, humble, sweet-spirited man than Bro. J. W. Craddock now living at Syria, Va. This is an undenominational Holiness Camp Meeting but I found that Brother Craddock had been such an old-fashioned Methodist Gospel preacher, that the other denominations paid the highest respect to him as a spiritual leader. God give us more like him.

This camp is ideally situated high up in the Blue Ridge Mountains in Franklin county, Va. The climate is perfectly healthful; this is one of the most ideal resort locations in the country. Go once and you will receive such hospitable treatment and spiritual inspiration that you will go every year. The large, 100x120 foot tabernacle is in the center of a beautiful grove. Some cottages are already surrounding it and others are being built for next year. Make your plans now to attend the last three Sundays in July of 1928.

The meeting went hard at first but we held on to God, fasted and spent two nights in prayer until the people began to feel the burden; 38 definitely sought and found the Lord. Every one wept their way through to victory, not a dry-eyed professor among the number. Boys and girls, men and women, preachers, preachers' daughters, and many others were among the number. Amen.

Brother and Sister Sam Davis, of Norfolk, had charge of the music. Rev. W. S. Brown, the Methodist pastor, was a blessed co-worker. Many ministers visited us, among whom were Rev. Banks and his son, also a minister, Rev. Coates, Rev. Poteat, Dr. Beechum, and many others worthy of mention.

We are looking for you next year. You need to get your lungs full of this pure air, and your heart full of the love of God. Write Dr. G. O. Giles, Penhook, Va., for information. Rev. Jas. V. Roberts, of Mineral, Va., did the preaching. Rev. Roberts is a consecrated, strong and forceful preacher. He preaches Scriptural Holiness with no uncertain sound. He is sane, sound, and delivers his messages most convincingly. You will make no mistake by engaging him.

Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Craddock.

CONNEAUTVILLE CAMP.

The Conneautville camp was unusually good this year. From the first God manifested his presence and scores of souls received definite help at the altar. Dr. J. L. Brasher preached five times with his usual unction and power. This was Dr. Brasher's fifth visit to the camp. Rev. Thomas C. Henderson who has a large place in the heart of all Peniel folk, and Rev. Frank Arthur, who was with us for the first time this year, were the other preachers. Sinners were not only reached but believers were sanctified, and saints were built up by their earnest preaching.

Rev. Woodford Taylor, Superintendent of China Missions under the National Holiness Association, spoke on Sunday afternoon; and Miss Fern Tillman, a nurse from the same mission, spoke on Thursday afternoon. Their messages and fellowship for the few days they were at camp was a blessing to all.

For the first three days the Taylor University Quartet, composed of the three Atchison Sisters and Miss Root, had charge of the music. Prof. and Mrs. Kenneth Wells came on Monday. The sweet singing and splendid leading of the Quartet and the Wells (not forgetting dear little Erma Jean) were a real uplift to all and did much to make the camp a success. A fine orchestra under the leadership of Adj. C. Lockwood gave much service. Com. Henshaw, of Greenville, brought the Salvation Army bands of Sharon and Greenville over for the last Saturday and helped in the Young People's and Ring meetings besides holding two street meetings in town.

The Young People's meetings were well attended. The camp has more young people than some of the larger camps. Among them is a group of remarkable, Spirit-filled young Christians who can be depended upon to help anywhere. Two Children's Meetings were held daily and a goodly number of children and young people were saved and sanctified.

It was a pleasure to have Mrs. Henderson and James at the camp, also Dr. Griffith. Miss Boyer, a missionary on furlough, and her little adopted Chinese girl, Esther Leta, and a large number of other ministers and Christian workers. They gave valuable help in the Young People's Meetings and praise services.

This report would not be complete without mentioning Mr. H. C. Miller the president, Mr. J. L. Hanna, secretary, who are both consecrated business men, Bro. L. Gough, vice president, who does almost everything, Adj. and Mrs. Lockwood, who have charge of the office, Mrs. King, our pianist, Mr. and Mrs. Adrian who have charge of the dining hall, Mrs. Iva Darling and Mr. Beemish who care for the rooms, and Mrs. Winters and Miss Stambach who have the bookstands. They all work very hard to make every one comfortable and to make the camp a success.

The officers were all re-elected and expenses were all met. We are believing for even larger things from God for next year. Pray for the camp.

STANTON, KENTUCKY.

This meeting was arranged for by Mrs. A. M. Holmes, who secured a Christian church for the meeting as the Methodists have no church in that town. This was a very peculiar meeting from the very beginning. Our crowds were surprisingly large even from the very first service, and toward the last there was a good number at every service who had to stand or return home.

To say that these people were not accustomed to the way we conducted our services is understood very easily when you remember they do not use the altar at all. We started preaching, not to antagonize, but to lift up him who said, "If I be lifted up" men will leave their sins to follow me. It was quite hard for some of those people who had been working in the church to realize it was necessary to be born again, but thank the Lord just that thing happened before the meeting closed.

The climax of the meeting came on what some people have designated as "Blue Monday." On Monday night a large crowd gathered. The people joyously sang the praises of God then followed a testimony meeting for those who had been definitely blessed during the meeting. Mrs. Parker, who was with me, arose to testify and the glory of the Lord broke upon us. When she finished her testimony we began to sing and one broke to the altar, soon others followed, until some twenty or more were at the altar. Without any preaching that night a score or more souls were at the altar that had been so ridiculed during the services. In all, some seventy-five prayed through to either pardon or purity, a large number joining the churches. "They shall call his name Jesus because he shall save his people from their sins" is true today. Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory.

chase, could eat the flesh of his wild kill raw. If game failed him, he could exist on roots, nuts and berries. He clothed himself with the skins of the animals he killed for food. When he traveled, he walked, rode his pony or his ox. He paid no rent, no fire insurance, no taxes; he received no bills from the butcher, grocer or dry-goods man. He received no note from the tailor or laundry man asking him to drop in and settle account. There was no threat to cut off the gas, turn off the electricity or come and take the telephone out of his house. The changes in the styles, high prices for spring, summer, autumn and winter hats were unknown to him and his family. Silk stockings had not been discovered. He was not out a nickel a year for newspapers, magazines, schoolbooks, the latest novels, or the recent translation and abridgements of the New Testament. When there was a death in his family there was no doctor's bill to settle. He bought no lot in the cemetery. He had no daughters in high-priced colleges. He paid no fines for drunken, rollicking sons, in order to keep them out of prison and save the respectable name of his family. He was at no extra expense for the entertainment of aristocratic week-end visitors. He had no temptation to mortgage his bark hut in order to buy a finer automobile on a credit than that owned by his brother-in-law. All of these things come in unending procession and ever-increasing numbers with advanced civilization.

The civilized man wants a house, if possible, a mansion. He wants food, the best of it, in vast variety, gathered from many countries and climes. He wants clothing, comfortable, elegant, and changes for a variety of temperature and occasion. He wants his table covered with papers, magazines, illustrated weeklies, and the latest books. He wants a library filled with thousands of volumes. He wants his house decorated with art. There must be expensive furniture, soft carpets, beautiful grounds ornamented with shrubbery and flowers.

The civilized man wants to educate his children to the best advantage. He wants to travel; if possible, must see the world. He is not satisfied with the supply of his needs. He has intense desires for things he does not need. He is in great danger of becoming corrupted with ambitious and extravagant desires. He would have a winter home in southern climes radiant with sunshine, and a summer home in high mountains, in northern regions. Heavy expenses pile up for the civilized man. Bills flow in upon him in great numbers at the first of every month. Much of the time he is driven like a slave with the lash of his desires and those of his family. He gets his heart and thought fixed on things on the earth. He has no time for meditation, for prayer, for hiding away in communion with his Lord. He hurries from his home to places of business, from his business to places of pleasure, from plenty to extravagance, extravagance to luxury, from luxury to intemperance, from intemperance to dishonesty, and on and on to the strangling of every spiritual impulse. He is swallowed up with worldly longings and lusts.

OUR REVIVAL ISSUE OF THE HERALD. No. IV.

We are calling frequent attention to this issue because we are believing and hoping to make it a very valuable issue. We are firmly of the opinion that the greatest need of the times in which we are living is a gracious revival. We want to sow the seeds of this faith broadcast among the people and we want you to help us. Nothing can be so important as quickening the spiritual life of the church, and stirring her membership up to seeking the souls of the lost, bringing in the sheaves into the great garner of our Lord. Send us in some matter for this special issue, and send in your order for a number of copies so we shall know the number that should be printed. Here is an opportunity to use some of your tithe money to good advantage and to help sow broadcast the good seed of the Kingdom. Come along with your contributions and your order for a number of copies of this special Revival Issue of The Pentecostal Herald. All the material for this issue should be at The Herald office in Louisville, Ky., by November 12.

H. C. Morrison.

He may have made a profession of religion. He may be a churchmember. He perhaps makes contributions, possibly large contributions, for the support of the church, but he knows nothing of the life hid with Christ in God. His affections are set upon the things of the world. If he was ever converted, the holy fires which once burned upon the altars of his heart are extinguished. He walks in darkness. He becomes a doubter. He is the easy victim of false teachers. He is glad to give up the old faith in the Bible that called for a righteous life. He listens with eager attention to those who deny the Virgin Birth of Christ. He is glad to believe that he is evolved from the animal and is on his way up to something larger and better than that, somewhere in the distant millenniums or millions of years, his posterity may attain to a wonderful state of unselfish goodness. He rejoices when you tell him there is no Hell, he need not fear death; there is no Holiness, he need not hunger and thirst after righteousness; that there is in him no old man of sin to be crucified, no new man of regeneration to be sought with all his heart. He becomes dead in trespasses and in sins and his dead conscience makes little or no protest against selfishness, covetousness, the trickery of trade and commerce, the overreaching of his fellows, the grinding of the poor, the mad race for wealth and its false promises of contentment.

Is it not strange that in a world like this even ministers of the Gospel should become ambitious for place and power in the church, large salaries, high sounding degrees and to love to be greeted as Rabbi in the market places? They, too, with all others in the Christian Church who are seeking to make their way to heaven, need to be exhorted to set their affections on things above, not on things on the earth. The Apostle uses strong language here, and most suggestive. He says, "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." This is a very strong figure of speech. They were not physically dead. They still lived and moved among men, but they were supposed to have crucified worldly ambitions, inordinate desires for wealth, luxury, and all those temporal things which administer to appetites, and passions which govern the carnally-minded.

They had passed through a strange and gracious process which destroys sin, and of course with it sinful ambitions and desires for those things that administer to the gratification of a sinful nature. They were living a hidden life. They were sheltered in the cleft of the Rock of Ages. Their longings and desires went out to their Lord. He was their desire, the delight of their souls. The Apostle says, "He is our life." He calls attention to the fact that Christ will appear in glory, that he will come again in great triumph and that those who are dead to sin, whose lives are hid in him will appear with him in his glory. He calls our attention to a most gracious Christian experience—dead to the world, its passions, its desires, its pursuits. They are industrious, to be sure, economical, thrifty, but all the time recognizing their stewardship, that we are laboring, not with selfish and carnal motives, but for our Christ and our fellowbeings, and that we are kept separated from the world and on the tiptoe of a joyful hope and anticipation of that greatest of all days, and most glorious of all hours, when our Lord shall appear and we shall appear with him in his triumph and glory.

We do not believe that there is any greater stimulant to a whole-hearted consecration, a life of self-sacrifice and devotion, of separation from every phase of worldliness that is tainted with wickedness, than that we should stimulate our enthusiasm, strengthen our faith, and fan the fires of holy love within our hearts with the thought of the great fact that our Lord Jesus shall re-appear on earth; that he will surely come, that he will come in glory and power, and if he should tarry until we have experienced the great change called death, we shall come with him. If he should come before our physical dissolution, we shall be changed and caught up to meet him.

Faith in these coming events, and the hopes and joys which they inspire, wield a powerful influence to draw us away from the desires and affections for the things which perish, the mere material, and tremendously influence us to set our affections on things above, to hide ourselves more completely from the turmoil and strife of the world and the snares of the wicked one. It is our privilege to have Christ indwell us and, by faith, to dwell in him, and to wait with earnest prayer and joyful service until the temporal things shall perish and the eternal things—the treasures which have been laid up in Heaven—shall be brought out into undiminished joyful uses, while the ceaseless ages roll. Let us heed the Apostle and set our affections on the high things, things entirely above and outside of those things that perish with the using, that cannot administer to the satisfaction of the soul or bring us into closer and more intimate fellowship with him in whom our lives are hid, until we have the inexpressible joy of appearing with him in his glory.

Notice!

We are glad to announce that Rev. E. C. Wills, of Wilmore, Ky., has been elected as one of the financial secretaries for Asbury College and from now on will travel in the interest of the school. Any friends of Brother Wills, or friends of the school, who may be interested in placing their funds where they will count most for the spreading of scriptural holiness over these lands, and would like information and facts, will please write him at Wilmore, Ky., and all mail will be promptly forwarded and given prompt attention. His travels will be largely in the Southern States. THE HERALD will appreciate any courtesies and help extended to Bro. Wills.

Don't Forget Fast Day First Friday in November.

I have most encouraging reports of the fasting and prayer for Methodism on the first Friday in October. We are praying for a nation-wide revival in the Methodisms of the United States. We are praying for God to deliver Methodism from the blight of Modern Liberalism, and the influence and leadership of Modernists. We are praying God to powerfully guide the deliberations of the coming General Conference of the two Sister Methodisms. May God, for Christ's sake, for the people for whom he died, rebuke and put to confusion the destroyers of saving faith in our Lord Jesus. Don't forget to fast and pray the first Friday in November.

San Jose Annual Conference.

Through the kind invitation of Bishop Hay I came out to preach at the California Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South. The conference met in San Jose, in the commodious and beautiful church. This is a city of some sixty thousand people, on the Southern Pacific Railroad, some fifty miles from San Francisco.

The weather was beautiful, clear as a crystal, cool nights, comfortably warm days, but most of the time a light overcoat added to one's comfort. San Jose is a beautiful city, clean streets, fine parks, great palm trees, and flowers everywhere. The markets are full of varieties of vegetables, melons, and delicious fruits.

Bishop Hay, who presided over the conference, is very popular on the Pacific Coast, and much beloved by the preachers and people. Before reading the appointments, he made a most practical address to the conference; among other things, he said, "I make it a rule to move just as few preachers as possible. It takes time for a pastor to develop and build up a work. We have in this conference one hundred and one preachers and I have made only nineteen changes."

This was interesting and encouraging. The conference has prospered the past year and had considerable net gain in membership. Rev. Bob Shuler, D.D., the celebrated pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Los Angeles, reported 3,500 members in his church; the plate collections in his church average over $1,000 every Sabbath during the year.

During the session of the conference it was my privilege to preach each day at three o'clock, and at seven-thirty in the evening. The afternoon congregations were large, and the congregations in the evening filled floor, gallery and side room. I have never preached to more appreciative audiences.

The Bishop had me deliver an address to the conference at a morning session on "What a Methodist Preacher ought to be." He also had me preach for him on Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour, to a vast congregation of people.

I have never been treated with greater courtesy and brotherly love than at this conference. I have had calls enough to keep me busy on the Coast for six months, and have accepted a few of them. We start in the morning for the annual conference at Tucson, Arizona. The Lord is blessing me, soul and body, for which I give him praise. Please to pray for me.

H. C. MORRISON.

SATAN'S MESSENGERS.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE old Book, called the Bible, is remarkably true to life. A man who had never read the Bible was graciously saved, and after reading the Word of God said he knew it was true because it "corroborated his experience." And is this not true of each of us who have gone the way of conviction, repentance, faith, and glorious deliverance from sin, so clearly portrayed in its teachings!

While in prayer this morning that Scripture came so forcefully to me,—"the messengers of Satan to buffet me"—and it occurred to me that we, as children of God, had the same subtle enemy to battle against as did the saintly Paul. We are taught by this Scripture that Satan has his messengers who will tantalize, and buffet the followers of the Lord, and make the Christian path just as hard to tarvel as possible.

But we must remind ourselves that there was the "sufficient grace" that came along with the buffeting messengers. Let us remember that when the enemy attacks us the strongest, that our vessels of endurance must be filled anew with the "sufficient grace" that will enable us to "go over the top," and put the buffeting messengers to a hasty retreat.

Paul was indeed a philosopher—a Christian philosopher—taught and led of the Holy Spirit, and when he came to the narrow ways in life he halted to know the mind of the Spirit, and seek direction for his plans and work. Just as Satan has specific work for his agents to perform, and just as he knows when and where to attack the child of God to the best advantage, just so the heavenly Paraclete is by our sides to strengthen and lift us over and out of the wire entanglements of the enemy of our souls. In the midst of the torture of Satan's testings God whispered to Paul: "My grace is sufficient for thee; My strength is made perfect in weakness."

Let us take a step backward and see why this messenger was sent to Paul at this time. God has a purpose in allowing Satan to test him—for he does not afflict willingly—and the soldierly Christian tells us frankly and unhesitatingly, that it was to prevent undue exaltation, "lest he be exalted above measure."

Now if Paul had been like a great many of us he would have whined and chafed under the chastisement, and said he wondered why the Lord should allow him to have a harder time than anyone else. But with submissive heart, triumphant faith, and radiant countenance, he exclaimed, "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me." Yea, he goes still farther and makes it an occasion of rejoicing, in that he was counted worthy of the test, and his glad heart cries out from the hilltop of victory, "Therefore I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake."

Take a look at the old soldiers of the Cross as they wave the banner of triumph from the hilltop of deliverance—not deliverance from the messengers of Satan, but deliverance from defeat. Who are those brave, courageous, undaunted heroes standing by Paul's side! One of them is whispering to him, and smiling as he looks down upon the defeated foe. O yes, I see clearly now! It is Job, that patient sufferer who went down to the grave's mouth and saw the worms that should eventually destroy his body, but he cried out, "Yet in my flesh shall I see God! And that for myself, and not for another."

But there is another whom we have read about, and read after, who seems to be a close companion of Paul—the Satan-buffed victim! He does not have the appearance of greatness; a plain, unassuming, humble follower of Jesus, but he has reached the hilltop and smiles at his enemy in retreat. It is Bunyan, the prisoner for the truth of Christ; he who warned them that if they turned him out of prison today, he would preach Christ again tomorrow. He would rather, he said, "let the moss grow on his eyebrows, and be in prison with Christ than out of prison without Christ."

O, there is a great host of witnesses to the defeated enemy, but I notice a man, small of stature, but large head and placid countenance, as he leans forward and whispers to the old Apostle, "The best of all, God is with us," and I immediately recognize Wesley, the scholar and saint, that great evangelist of the sixteenth century.

Nor are these all the victors who are waving the banner of triumph. There is a host of saints who lived in the caves and dens of the earth; a multitude of those who "had trial of cruel mockings, and scourgings, moreover of bonds and imprisonment; They were stoned, they were sawn asunder; tempted; they were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheepskins and goat skins, being destitute, afflicted, tormented, of whom the world was not worthy." But what of the final outcome! "These all obtained a good report through faith."

As I turn from this array of suffering, yet triumphant, heroes, I bow my heart in humility and shame that I have ever complained of the petty annoyances and trials that have come my way. What are our very worst afflictions and trials compared to the crown of thorns, the spittle and blood, the scourge and derision that were borne by the "Man of Sorrows" for me!

"Oh what are all my sufferings here,
If Lord, Thou count me meet
With that enraptured host to appear,
And worship at Thy feet."

Of General Interest.

Did you ever expect something, look forward to its arrival and meet with disappointment when it didn't show up at the appointed time? Occasionally we get a letter from a subscriber who has failed to get his copy of THE HERALD. So we get on the track of the trouble and very often we find that it is all because the subscriber moved and did not send us the new address.

Sometimes the postmaster sends us a notice of the change but more often he does not, so we have to depend on our readers to keep us informed of their whereabouts. When we get a notice from the Postoffice Department to stop sending THE HERALD to a certain address because the subscriber is no longer there, we have to obey orders. Uncle Sam does a mighty good job of carrying the mails, when we think of what a lot of it he has to handle, and we have agreed to help all we can by doing what he tells us to do.

When you sent us the money to pay for your subscription we assumed the obligation to get THE HERALD to you each week for a certain length of time. So when we can't send it to you because we do not know your correct address it grieves us to think that we are being paid for something that we are not delivering. Of course it isn't our fault, but we want you to get your HERALD any way. When you send us your change of address be sure to tell us what the old address was. It will save us time and a great deal of trouble if you will help us this way.

Being human we sometimes make mistakes here in the office. Look at the label on your HERALD and see if we have your name spelled right, the street or rural route number correct, and any other marks just as they ought to be. Should there be a mistake notify us of it at once. It will help us and insure your getting THE HERALD each week.

You will be the loser if you fail to order extra copies of our Special Revival Issue.

No. 1.

Text. "Do all things without murmuring." Phil. 2:14.

Story. Herbert's special duty was to keep the woodbox filled with wood. He hated it. One day going to get the wood, he thought, "Oh, dear, seems as if the wood box is always empty. I hate chores. When winter comes there will be more. And, oh, dear, I wish I could have a new sled." He heard a faint sound, and said, gleefully, "Turkeys." There were ten. When he told his mother she said, "Yes, dear, they are for you to raise and sell for a new sled. My boy is so good to fill the wood box without grumbling." Herbert threw his arms about his mother's neck and said, "Mother, I did grumble inside, but I will not any more; I shall be too busy filling the box and tending turkeys."

Poem.

I will not murmur or complain over my daily task.

God is so very good to give me all I ever ask.

Heavenly Father, help me to remember all you are doing for me, And make me glad to do what I ought to do for Thee.

No. 2.

Text.. "Watch and pray." Mark 14:38.

Story. In Australia the doors to the electric open when the cars stop, and close when they start. One day my friend went to enter one as it was starting and was thrown down and broke her leg. She wrote, "I do not understand it. I prayed so earnestly to be kept from accident." When I asked the Lord about it, he said, "She prayed but did not watch. She should not have tried to enter when the car had started."

Poem, Prayer.

"Lord, help me to ever watch and pray,

In all my work and in all my play, And in going out from day to day, Thus walking with Thee in wisdom's way."

No. 3.

Text. "Preach the gospel." Mark 16:15.

Gospel means "glad tidings." That is what the angels said the day the baby Jesus was born. Luke 2:8-12.

Story. Little Mary was happy. She was to go with her mother to the Mission. Before they left she prayed, "Dear Jesus, I am so glad you love me and I love you. Let me do something for you tonight." The minister's sermon was about the wedding to be by and by. Rev. 19:7-9. In the pew beside Mary was a man who wept. Mary knew he had never said "yes" to God or he would be happy. She asked her mother if she might speak to him. Then she moved close to him and asked him if he would not say "yes" to God, for she was going to the wedding and wanted him to go too. He let her lead him to the altar. In a few moments with his face shining he rose and said, "God used a little child to bring me to Jesus. I did not see her but my little girl who died three years ago. I know now that some day I shall take my child in my arms again in the presence of Jesus."

Poem.

"A heart-felt smile, a gentle tone, A thoughtful word, a tender touch, A passing act of kindness done, For Jesus, O it is so much."

Prayer.

Heavenly Father, please show me how I can do something for Jesus.

No. 4.

Text. "They helped everyone his neighbor." Isa. 41:6.

Story. Two beautiful dogs were neighbors and the best of friends. One day, out together, they came to a watering trough and stopped to take a drink. They were not tall enough to reach the water. They stopped and talked a moment, then one dog put himself under the edge of the trough and the other one put his fore-feet on his friend's back and took a good drink. When he was satisfied he seemed to tell his friend that the water was good and put himself under the trough, and when he had drank they turned and went home to tell another dog how they helped each other to a drink of cool water.

Prayer. Lord Jesus, as I remember how these doggies helped each other may I help my little playmates.

No. 5.

Text. "Your sorrow shall be turned into joy." John 16:20.

Story. Little Willie said, "Mother, can't I have some new shoes? My toes are all out and it is so cold." "I hope so, soon, dear." But days went by and the holes grew bigger. Then Willie prayed, "O God, father drinks. My feet are cold. Please send me some shoes for Jesus' sake."

Every day he asked for the shoes and would say, "They will come, mama, when God gets them ready." In a week a lady, who loved the child, took him out walking. She said, "Why Willie, look at your shoes." "Yes, they are all I have, but God is going to send me a new pair." She bought him a pair. Reaching home he said, "Look, mother, God has sent my shoes." Then he knelt and this was his prayer: "Jesus, I thank you for my new shoes. Please make me a good boy and take care of mother."

Poem.

"Faint heart, hope on, nor cease to pray,

Blessings delayed are on the way; Your prayers have yet some part to fill

In working out God's blessed will.

Never despair, never despair,

For there is no unanswered prayer."

Prayer.

Heavenly Father, I know it is true, what they tell me, "Prayer changes things."

No. 6.

Text. "Confess your faults." Jas. 5:16.

Story. Donie loved chocolates and there they were on the dining-room table. The family rule was that they should only eat them at mealtime. As he stood looking at them he said, "Dust one." A voice seemed to say, "Better not." But he stood looking and then one went into his mouth. Then the voice seemed to say, "So sorry." Then his sister saw him and said, "Donie, what have you been doing?" She left him alone all the afternoon and told him to think it over. The clock seemed to say, "So sorry—so sorry." At night he laid his head in his mother's lap and sobbed, "I so sorry." Mother said, "Ask Jesus to forgive you." He did and was happy again.

Poem, Prayer.

"Father, help me confess and begin anew,

With happy heart,

Believe that thou hast forgiven. Thy part,

Thou who most faithful art."

Dear Aunt Bettie: Could you move over just a little bit more and let a girl from Georgia join your happy band of boys and girls? I will be ten years old the 10th of November, and in the 5th grade. I have never written before although we have taken The Pentecostal Herald for sometime, and I am a constant reader of it. I am glad to know that so many of the cousins are Christians, and certainly do wish all of them were. I hope Mr. Waste Basket has already had his dinner so that my letter won't be on his plate. Who can guess my first name? It starts with E and ends with R, with six letters in it, and is a Bible name. I will answer all letters received.

E. Faith Stewart.
Ashburn, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been a reader of The Pentecostal Herald for some time. I certainly enjoy reading it. It is food to the soul. I enjoy reading page ten. I am glad to think of the younger boys and girls starting out in the Christian life. If we will only stop and think for awhile, we can see the great need of Christian homes. I feel sometime maybe some of our ministers do not fight sin as hard as they should. I can't understand why a Christian has any desire to go to dances, swimming pools, movies, and lots of other places where there is sin. I have no desire for them, and I praise the Lord for it. He is a wonderful Savior to me. As I read Mrs. Ethel Moore's letter it carried my mind back to 1904. I once had a home, but the Lord saw fit to take my husband, and so our home was broken up. A few months ago it was broken up again. My father was taken from my mother and me so we were left alone. The longer I try to live a Christian the more I feel the need of it. I am so glad the good Lord will help us bear all our troubles.

Mrs. Hattie Meadows.
Rt. 1, Walnut Cove, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a little Ohio girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Walk up, Ohio boys and girls, don't let the other states beat us. I was twelve years old Nov. 5. I go to the Presbyterian Church. The one who guesses my second name I will write to you. It starts with M and ends with T, and has eight letters in it. My grandmother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I have brown eyes, brown hair and dark complexion.

Louise Evans.
Rt. 3, Wellston, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have written once before and saw it in print. I have received three letters. Estell Mixon, I guess your middle name to be Fanny. Helen Ludlow, I guess your middle name to be Lessie. If I am right don't forget your promise. Our school began Sept. 12. I like to go to school. Wake up, North Carolina girls and boys, don't let the other girls and boys beat you. I do not see any letters from North Carolina. H. C. Cobb, my teacher has your birthday. Florence Sharp, I guess your middle name to be Laura. My name is Florence, too. My middle name begins with E and ends with H and has nine letters in it.

Florence E. Chappell.
Rt. 2, Box 165, Tyner, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to you. My name is Ruby Phillips. I am a girl of eleven years, and I am in the sixth grade. I live on Hog Island. We go bathing and fishing during our vacation. I like to go to school, and also Sunday school. I have four sisters and two brothers.

Ruby Phillips.
Broadwater, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Ohio girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I am four feet, four inches tall. I have brown eyes and dark brown hair. I have two brothers and two sisters. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Who can guess my first name? It begins with B and ends with E and has six letters in it.

Juanita Evans.
Norwich, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band? I am ten years old and in the sixth grade. This is my second letter to The Herald, but Mr. W. B. got the other one so I thought I would try again. Hope he will be taking his nap when this arrives. I live on a farm and like it fine. I have brown hair, brown eyes and fair complexion. We go to U. B. Church. I love to go to church and Sunday school. We also attend Camp Sychar and sure enjoy it. We don't take The Herald but grandma does and we get to read it. I think it is a good paper.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a jolly girl from Georgia enter your happy band of boys and girls? I have been a silent reader of The Herald for some time and think it a fine paper. I like to read of so many boys and girls living for God. I am trying each day to do the Lord's will. I am a member of the M. E. Church. Our pastor's name is Rev. J. I. Scoville. We like him fine. We have prayer meeting every Saturday night. We also have Sunday school every Sunday afternoon. We have a class of 41 girls and boys. My great uncle is our teacher. His name is Mr. O. R. Sheppard. He is a man loved by all who know him. I wish all you cousins could visit our Sunday school. I am quite sure you would have a fine time.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Arlington girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old and in the fourth grade. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to Sunday school. Estell Mixon, I guess your middle name to be Fanny. If I am right don't forget your promise. Alys A. Bateman, I guess your middle name to be Eunice.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Thanks for printing my other letter. I enjoy asking Bible questions and also answering them. I hope you cousins will agree with me. Please let us ask more and make page ten more interesting. Mary Hudson, the boy's name was David who cared for his father's sheep and killed the giant with a stone in his sling. After killing the giant he became King of Israel. Before he became king he spared the life of King Saul, his enemy, who was going to kill him. David hid himself in the wilderness. He came upon Saul one night when he was asleep but would not kill him. He taught the children of Israel to trust in God, and led them through many battles. Most of his life is found in the first and second Books of Samuel, in the Old Testament. There were ten virgins who were waiting for the bridegroom. Why were five left out, while the other five went in with him when he came? What two chapters of the Bible are alike? What verse in the Bible contains all the letters in the alphabet with the exception of J? Will write to all who answer.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl join your band? Who can guess my middle name? The first letter is T and the last letter is S, and has six letters in it. I am six years old.

FALLEN ASLEEP

THE DYING SOLDIER.

Raymond Browning.

(In memory of Rev. E. T. Adams.)

Rest from thy warfare, the battle is over,
Hang up the armor, the victory is won,
Hear the sweet trumpet that calls thee to glory,
Join the glad hosts 'neath the unsetting sun.

Chorus.

Glory awaits thee, O brave Christian soldier,
Glory, such glory as heart never knew,
Glory unending increasing in splendor,
Glory that God has reserved for the true.

Dull grows the sound of the loved ones now weeping,
Tears fall unnoticed on hands that grow cold,
Earth is receding and heaven's approaching,
Soon shall thy feet touch the sands that are gold.

Holy and white is the robe that shall clothe thee,
Bright is thy crown in the Savior's own hand,
Sweet is the smile on the face of thy Father,
Glorious the joys of that wonderful land.

Bravely march down through the valley of shadows,
Jesus will guide thee along the dark way,
Swift is the journey and then in the morning
Heaven and home and the unending day.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. S. F. B.: "I am asking that you pray for my daughter who is in the hospital now, that she may be restored to us once more. We are firm believers in prayer."

Mrs. J. W. T.: "Please to pray for our pastor that he may be healed of throat trouble."

L. B.: "Please to pray for my healing, if it be God's will."

W. N. L.: "Will the readers of The Herald please pray for my wife to be healed."

Mrs. M. McK.: "Pray for me especially, as I am going through a testing time, and for my husband that he may be healed and filled with the Spirit."

Mrs. A. J. B.: "Please to remember me and my daughter in prayer that we may be restored to health."

Pray for a young man that he may overcome the drink habit.

Mrs. F. B.: "Pray for my sister-in-law that she may be healed of cancer."

DYING OUT TO THE WORLD.

On April, 1927, I was given up to die. I promised God if he spared me I would testify through The Herald to the many blessings he has bestowed upon me. In these days of discouragements, afflictions and tribulations there are many who feel at times that the struggles of this life are becoming more than they can stand, but let me say to such who may read this, do not let the devil defeat you, but hold on to your faith in God and he will take you through, for his grace is sufficient.

Twenty-nine years ago I was ushered into this world, a tiny bit of humanity; the spark of life in my body was so feeble the doctor had no idea I would live. I had a praying mother who was standing on the promises of God, and he heard and answered.

When I was six years of age I was cut down with diphtheria and membranous croup and lay almost lifeless, until the doctor said there was no hope for my recovery. Leaving me one night, he called my father aside and informed him that he could do no more for me and the end would come before morning. Scarcely had he gone when I was seized with a violent coughing spell and I coughed up a membranous tube from my windpipe which had been gradually closing and choking me to death. With a loud, clear voice I spoke the one word, "mama." Oh, the shout of joy that went up from mother and father, and what a surprised doctor there was at my bedside the next morning. Nothing but a miracle could have saved me, and God wrought the miracle.

About eight years later, the doctor gave me up to die with typhoid fever, and for the third time God healed me. Praise his Holy Name! As space is limited I can't give a full account of the years following, but one of the heart-breaking sorrows was seeing my dear father sweep through the pearly gates into the Glory Land. A little sister six years younger than I, a very weakly mother, and myself, a frail lad of fourteen, were left to battle with this world. One winter we were all down at one time with measles and I got up from bed, went to milk and feed our cows through a downpour of sleet and rain, but God watched over me and I didn't even take cold from the exposure.

At sixteen, God distinctly called me to surrender my heart to him and I rejected his call. Later I had a joint disease to lay hold of me and for four years God only knows the agony I suffered; many times I was at death's door. Again God spared my life, but I have never walked natural since. Today my hips and kneejoints are grown in a stiff sitting position, and I believe had I not rejected the call of God I would have been walking today. Afflictions are the rewards of serving the Devil and when God has his eye on you he will let the devil almost kill you in order to get you to turn to him.

In the fall of 1925, I was in an automobile accident, got both legs broken, a shoulder dislocated and for ten days I lay in a hospital. So sure were they this time that I would die, they didn't even set my bones for several days. In April, 1927, my long suffering in body and soul caused me to have a general breakdown at that time and there was no chance of recovery except through the mercy of our Divine Master, and he had shown me plainly that I must give him my heart to obtain mercy.

I had acidosis stomach, leaking heart, nervous breakdown, inflamed appendix, a wisdom tooth trying to grow under the corner of its neighbor molar and other afflictions in general. I was bedfast, couldn't eat anything, and my tooth was so painful that it alone was terrible. The doctor said I was so weak and near gone they could not do a thing for me. The dentist came but refused to pull my tooth as I was too weak to stand the shock. They all advised my mother to take care of me the best she could until the end came and that is the last they did for me. But God had not left me and now after years of chastening and suffering I turned to him. How like us poor unworthy servants to put him off until there is no other refuge. While praying, God gave me a vision of a beautiful City. I could see a wonderfully paved street laid through an archway of the most perfect shade trees I ever saw. The most glorious sunlight bursting through the foliage in little broken spots seem to sprinkle the street with a beautiful array of precious jewels. Lawns as though they were of green velvet bordered each side of the street. Extending far into the background I could see large rolling hills of the same rich green grass while here and there was standing one of those beautiful trees. Flowing peacefully through a wide, smooth valley between two of the hills was a wonderful, large river of crystal clear water. Oh for words to describe it and how I wanted to close my eyes and fall asleep beneath one of those beautiful trees, pillow my head on that gorgeous carpet of grass and let the balmy air cool my burning brow while I rested in peace for ever more. The vision passed and before my eyes came the words, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and all this will be added unto you." There and then I gave up to God and he gloriously converted my soul. I then begun to seek sanctification and just ten days later I died out to this old world and came near dying out to this old withered tabernacle of clay. I had swallowed a little food and was praying when a nervous attack seized me and my heart went into a nervous, spasmodic action. My pulse soon became very weak and I could scarcely speak above a whisper. Cold sweats broke out on my brow and there wasn't a doubt that death had struck my body. My loved ones had gathered around my bed and were praying for God to spare me long enough to see me sanctified and willing to go; then they could give me up more easily. Suddenly God touched me, my strength and voice came back; taking up my Bible I begged him to lead me to a chapter that would give me the witness that he had sanctified me. Opening his Book, my eyes fell on Revelation 22nd chapter, where I found a description of my vision when I was converted. God assured me that my name was written in the Lamb's Book of life. I then asked him if it was his will, to take me home and let my soul have a rest; if not his will, to lift me up again from my bed of afflictions. Dear readers, I have never had another bad heart attack, no more toothache and today I can eat three square meals a day, am up going anywhere I want to, and testifying to the saving and healing power of my Savior and Physician. Brothers and sisters, if you are weary with struggles and afflictions of this life, lay your burdens at the feet of Jesus and let him cover them with the blood. Life's journey will soon be ended and if we lose the hope of "Life Eternal" in that beautiful City, we have lost all.

New Books for Preachers

FAMILIAR FAILURES.

By Rev. Clovis Chappell, D.D. Author of Sermons on Biblical Characters.

With that rare ability for character analysis which has distinguished his other books on Bible characters, Dr. Chappell here depicts the Idler, the Slave of the Second Best, the Distant Disciple, the Successful Failure, and other types of men who in Bible times and in our own day have made a failure of the business of life. He presents the person and the type engagingly, shows the factors operative in each failure, and how dangerously common to all are the mistakes of each. The book is an excellent addition to that fine series of character studies which has given the author a wide and alert audience.

THINKING THROUGH THE SCRIPTURES.

By William Parker White, M.A., D.D. Member of Extension Department of the Moody Bible Institute.

A brief syllabus of the Bible by books, written by a man of wide practical experience in teaching the Scriptures. It is designed to provoke individual Bible study as well as to afford a standard conservative textbook for Sunday school teaching courses. By dividing the books of the Bible up into eight groups and placing questions of great pertinence after each group, the author accomplishes a plan which will prove immensely helpful to the reader in private devotions and to the group bent upon a fuller understanding and appreciation of the divine message.

THE CHRISTIANITY OF THE

EPISTLES. By Arthur W. Robinson, D.D.

In a lively, readable style, and with a profound interest in the historical, Canon Robinson gives the gist of each Epistle, the circumstances which led to its writing, and the heart of the message it contains for the modern mind. The book will prove surprisingly informing and inspiring to youth, and to all those who would understand the Epistles, and their relation to the Christian life of ancient days and modern times.

THE PROPHETS OF THE OLD

TESTAMENT. By Alexander R. Gordon, D.D.

Ever since this book was first issued its worth has been amply attested in England, Canada and America. It is at once delightful and profound, combining the results of wide research and authoritative scholarship with the attractiveness of poetic expression. Dr. Gordon discusses the purposes and messages of the Prophets, but he devotes particular attention to the character of the Prophets. The book serves well to instruct the reader in matters of Biblical history and to inspire him by contact with the outstanding leaders of Israel's history.

FAST HOLD ON FAITH, and other

Sermons. By Rev. Henry Howard, Minister of Fourth Ave. Presbyterian Church, New York City.

Here Dr. Howard deals with the august facts of Christian experience in a manner which cannot but inspire fortitude in an age of timid thought and compromising action. The sure foundation of the Christian truth.

REPRESENTATIVE CHURCHMEN OF TWENTY CENTURIES.

A Cross-section of Christian History and Endeavor. By Hugh Watt, D.D.

Beginning in the first century with Paul this book traces Christianity through the ages. For each century the author picks out one man; the one who stands out above all in his time. Anyone who longs for a short biographical sketch of such men as Constantine, Augustine, Charlemagne, Francis of Assisi, and many others, will particularly appreciate this book for it makes possible a general knowledge of all these men without having to dig through hundreds of volumes.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson VI.—November 6, 1927.

Subject.—Amos Pleads for Justice.
Amos 5:1,2, 10-15, 21-24.

Golden Text.—But let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream. Amos 5:24.

Time.—About 750 B. C.
Place.—Bethel.

Introduction.—One vibrates between pessimism and optimism as he reads the Old Testament history of the Jews, and meditates upon the goodness and longsuffering of Jehovah toward them. They seemed bent on everlasting ruin; while he did all that was possible to infinite love and mercy to save them. Nor was the contest a mere spurt on either side. It had continued for centuries, as restless and as changeable as the waves of the sea on its human side, and as changeless on its divine side as the nature of Jehovah with whom there is "no variableness neither shadow of turning."

This contest had reached its breaking point when Amos was called to prophesy at Bethel. Jehovah had done his best, and had failed, because Israel would not obey him. Israel had done her worst, and had sunken to a pitiable degradation. Like Rome when she had lost her great middle class (what Sam Jones used to call the good fruit in the human pie), fell an easy prey to barbarian hordes, Israel had lost her middle class and found herself hopeless; for there were none left in the nation, save the rich who had amassed their wealth by cheating and swindling, and the very poor who had lost their all through the grinding greed of the rich. They would sell a poor man into slavery for the price of a pair of sandals. They would drive a poor man into debt, and then rob him of his cloak wherein he slept at night. Their immorality was so vile that they had lost all respect for chastity. Religiously, they were below the bottom. Led by their false priest, Amaziah, they tried to worship Jehovah and the golden calves at the same altar; but such worship would not mix—however, it is still going on in certain quarters. Some modernists are guilty of the same sort of sin when they declare that it makes little difference what one believes, just so he is sincere in his belief; and that one religion is about as good as another.

When Israel had fallen to this awful depth of sin and depravity, Jehovah was making his last call, and was enforcing it with a fearful warning of coming doom. Would they repent? Not as a nation; but a few might be saved, and that would be worth the effort. Amos prophesied their national destruction in the plainest words, and begged them to repent, hoping against hope that there might still be hope for his sinning nation; but they ordered him to quit preaching to them, and to return to Tekoa. Notwithstanding the bigness of Jehovah's mercy toward them, they had gone too far to come back—they had crossed the dead line; for he had already called for the Assyrian armies to trample upon them, and to lead them away into a captivity from which they would never recover. Ever and anon God's wrath breaks over nations in fearful fury. Our Methodist fathers used to preach quite frequently about the wrath of God; but their children have grown too spineless to endure such preaching. They want a soft gospel, sprinkled liberally with rose water. The fathers talked about eternal damnation in a literal hell; but the children have abolished hell. O no, hell is still there; and it is just as terrible as it was when Asbury thundered upon and down our Atlantic coast. O that we might recognize the day of our visitation, and repent in sackcloth and ashes at the mercy seat, ere God's wrath falls upon us for our "mighty" national and personal sins, as it fell upon Israel when they rejected the preaching of Amos. Great God of our fathers, send us a revival of old-time Bible religion that will forever sweep away our scepticism, our infidelity, our atheism, our sins, our God-forgetfulness, and bring us back into the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. Brethren, let us pray with all our might for a nation-wide revival. "I am not a pessimist; neither am I a fool," as Bishop Kilgo used to say of himself. "I am not a prophet; nor am I a prophet's son," as Amos would say of himself. But I declare unto you that the signs of the times point to terrible things. Hear me, beloved brethren of the Church of Almighty God, America must have a speedy, sweeping revival, or Ichabod will be written over our doorways. We are near the breaking point, and none but God can help us.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Hear ye this word. . . . even a lamentation, O house of Israel.—The prophet had delivered against his people warning after warning; but now he is growing desperate—his message is a lamentation. They would not hear him. One of our great bishops used to say that one of the hardest things that he had to deal with in his ministry was the fact that he knew that multitudes of his hearers would go to hell in spite of all that God and man could do to save them.

2. The virgin of Israel is fallen.—He pictures Israel under the figure of a virgin, once pure, but now fallen and despised. She shall rise no more.—Terrible words; but they were true. There is none to raise her up.—She had forsaken Jehovah; and he had forsaken her, and no one else could deliver her from coming ruin.

10.—They hate him that rebuketh in the gate.—Amos was perhaps referring to the treatment that he had received at their hands. Any people is ready to perish when it hates and abhors the man who preaches the truth.

11. Your treading is upon the poor.—We have already referred to their treatment of the poor. Ye take from him burdens of wheat.—They made rents and taxes excessively burdensome, that they might grow rich on graft. Ye have built houses of hewn stone.—They made large display of their ill-gotten gains, just as many rich people are prone to do now. But ye shall not dwell in them. They would change to slave huts in Assyrian captivity—not so inviting, but God-planned. Ye have planted pleasant vineyards, but ye shall not drink the wine of them.—Their sun is fast going down to rise no more. Jehovah has spoken; and he changes not.

12. For I know your manifold transgressions, and your mighty sins, —Jehovah had a reason for what he was about to do; and Israel must know it. They afflict the just.—They had no respect for even a good man. They take a bribe.—Woe unto a nation when money can buy its courts. The rich can have what they wish; but the poor cannot obtain justice. The following words show that this was the case in Israel: "They turn aside the poor in the gate from their right." Court was held in the gate of the city.

13. The prudent shall keep silence . . . for it is an evil time.—Conditions are desperate when a prudent man must keep his lips closed to save himself from the cruelty of his rulers. Alas! there have been other sinners besides Israel. Even preachers have to be silent sometimes in the midst of wrong doing, in order to save themselves and their families from suffering.

14 and 15. Here the prophet turns to exhortation. "Seek good and not evil, that ye may live." "Establish judgment in the gate: it may be that the LORD God of hosts will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph." Possibly he may spare a few of you. Too late, Amos; they will never repent.

21. Jehovah speaks now: "I hate, I despise your feast days, and I will not smell in your solemn assemblies." The best worship they had to offer was a stench in the nostrils of the Almighty.

22. Burnt offerings and meat had to do especially with sins; but God would have nothing to do with them. Peace offerings had to do with worship; but they were malodorous in his presence, because of their sins.

23. Take away from me the noise of thy songs.—Unless people's hearts are right, their singing is but a grating noise in God's ears; and so with the melody of their instruments.

24. Our golden text. Our need. Israel's need. The need of all nations. Floodtides of the waters of salvation, and mighty streams of righteousness, washing away both personal and national sins. Such blessings did not come to Israel, because she would not receive them on Jehovah's terms.

AYCOCK'S NEW BOOK

"THE CRIMSON STREAM."

A Devotional Sermon on the Blood

The first and perhaps the principal appeal of this new title is the fact that it fills a real need in our book list. No subject is of more vital importance, no tenet of orthodoxy is more assiduously assailed by the modernists than that of atonement by the blood of Christ.

Read the following excerpt.

"This splendid little book, 'The Crimson Stream,' is presenting to the lovers of truth, the believers in the fundamentals of the faith once delivered to the saints, a publication full of interest, light, and essential facts bearing upon a right attitude toward God, the Bible, and personal salvation. He has placed emphasis where it is most needed. It should be widely scattered and read by thousands of honest and earnest seekers after truth and righteousness such as will stand the test of time and eternity."—R. T. Williams.

This booklet is unusually attractive, bound in buff colored, imitation leather cover with two-color design.

ville, Indiana. It's a real revival, too. Not a mere protracted meetin'. The church-life of the town is stirred and penitents are seeking and finding God. Forty were at the altar last night. The altar is not yet a bad place to repent. Men will come there, too, when convicted enough to be saved.

A preacher asked me at one of these conferences if we would have a revival when the churches were depopulated and famine was upon us. I said no, we will have a revival when the churches are filled to hear preachers preach repentance and the power of God's Spirit. It is all rot that folks won't go to hear a preacher preach straight.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. I. B. Manly, of Houston, Tex., has been seriously ill of fever for six weeks, but is improving slowly.

Rev. W. G. Bennett is in a meeting at Lima, O. He says he has plenty of dates for winter meetings. His permanent address is 2923 Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo.

Rev. Fred St Clair: "After a hand-to-hand conflict with the enemy God gave us a signal victory at La Grande, Ore. The last week was tremendous on account of the manifested presence of God. Lester Long, the splendid Sunday School superintendent, was a great asset in prayer. He and his wife never wavered. We have had a fine start in Pocatello, Idaho. Our next battle is at Oak Harbor, Wash."

Owing to the cancellation of a meeting because of unavoidable circumstances, Rev. Clifford E. Kays has an open date from Nov. 16 to Dec. 4, and is anxious to give this time to some one, preferably, in Pennsylvania. His permanent address is Mohn-ton, Pa.

P. P. Belew: "Following a meeting in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, which closes Dec. 4, I have a date that I would like to give to some church in that section or between there and my home, but will go anywhere. Interested persons may communicate with me as per my evangelistic slate or at my home address, Olivet, Ill."

Rev. Fred G. Williams: "After two years of waiting and prayer am at last able to return to the work that I love and enjoy. I hold a union meeting of the Presbyterian and Disciple Churches at Hanoverton, Ohio, October 16th to Nov 6th inclusive. Am open to calls from this time forward. Address me 11916 Beulah Avenue, N. E., Cleveland, O.

A pastor writes of evangelist Sharp and says that he is a clear, thoughtful, gospel preacher with a constructive message, and will give good service anywhere. He was in a wonderful revival in which the whole community felt the impress that a man of God was in their midst. He will go anywhere, City, town, or open country. Terms: Transportation, entertainment and offering. Address Rev. L. B. Sharp, Berne, Ind.

Being appointed again as Conference Evangelist I am now making up my slate for another year. For 16 consecutive years wife and I have been almost constantly engaged in revival work with our motto "Holiness unto the Lord" everywhere and all the time. We solicit the prayers of The Herald family in pushing the battle for souls, and invite calls to needy fields for church, tent or camp-meetings. Have some open dates we should like to fill.

Address: H. T. Heironimus, 303 N. Walnut Ave., Wilmore, Ky.

T. F. Waller: "I am writing you a brief account about our revival services which came to a close last Sunday night at Morrison Memorial Methodist Church, Macon, Ga. The church is wonderfully built up. There was the old fashioned ring, characteristic in a real revival. Rev. H. L. Ezell, the railroad conductor evangelist, of Lakeland, Fla., was in charge. Bro. Ezell knows the blighting effects of sin and does not hesitate to preach his convictions and is a firm believer in the Bible. Any preacher desiring to use him need not fear if they want an old fashioned, sky-blue revival. His manner is sweet and the people fell in love with him. Many souls found the way to eternal life. The testimony meetings were refreshing. W.J. Eitelgeorge, of Ohio, led the singing for the first week. He endeared himself to the people with his Christianlike manner. As a gospel singer, the pastor has seen none better."

Miss Florence Schleicher, daughter of the late Frederick Schleicher and Mrs. Schleicher of West Liberty St., was ordained local deacon, Sunday Sept., 18, by Bishop Berry, who presided at the Detroit conference of the Methodist Episcopal church which convened last week at Port Huron.

Miss Schleicher has been a licensed preacher for four years. She received her A. B. degree from University of Michigan in 1926 with Phi Beta Kappa honors and the degrees of bachelor of evangelistic theology from the Chicago Evangelistic institute in June, 1927. Miss Schleicher is the first woman to be ordained by Bishop Berry.

W. R. Cain: "It gives me pleasure to recommend for evangelistic meetings anywhere in the United States, Rev. J. H. Vance, 627 So. Glenn Ave., Wichita, Kansas. Bro. Vance has recently re-entered the evangelistic field. He was at one time a railroad conductor on the M. K. & T. R'y. Later he felt the call to preach and has served efficiently as both pastor and evangelist for years. He is a man of God and a splendid preacher of FULL salvation and hopes to be kept busy. I am saying these things without his knowledge and trust his services will be in demand."

THE LIGHTHOUSE MISSION.

While sitting in my home the roof was blown off and all the windows were blown in; broken glass, sand and dirt covered the floor and furniture. When that dreadful tornado struck St. Louis, September 29, at 1 P. M., I rejoiced in my salvation. My neighborhood, and for six square miles, there was nothing but destruction and desolation; houses destroyed, lives lost, and the shrieking of children. It was beyond description, yet in all this we can say with St. Paul, "In everything give thanks." Praise the Lord.

O, it is wonderful to know it is well with my soul. I thank God for The Herald that comes to our home and cheers us and brings us good tidings. While the scene of desolation all around is heart breaking I thank God that I can say "The Lord is my Shepherd", the blood is all my plea.

Mrs. S. C. Box.

PADEN CITY, WEST VIRGINIA.

I should like a few lines to report the meeting just held in the Church of the Nazarene here. While we only had a half dozen seekers at the altar during the two weeks, we still feel it is a memorable meeting, and desire to give God glory for it. This has been a difficult place for the spread of the Nazarene Church. We rejoice because God has evidently used this meeting to break down much prejudice. Brother Lawrence Reed preached some great sermons. I have never heard a preacher who gripped me more. He preached the most rugged truths, yet with great unction and tenderness. Miss Alma Budman had charge of the singing, as well as of children's work. She was a great blessing to us. Both these workers ought to be kept busy. They are of the cream of the land. Then too I have some of the most loyal and self-sacrificing people I have ever met. They work and pray in beautiful unity, and God is going to honor their faithfulness and faith with a remarkable revival, I believe. Pray for us.

T. H. Kampman, Pastor.

HAMERSVILLE, OHIO.

It has been a long time since we reported through The Pentecostal Herald. We are just beginning our second year on Hamersville Charge. We had a good time last year. To God be all the glory! One Sunday School, Fesburg, increased over 100 per cent in attendance at the beginning of this year as compared with the beginning of last year. Two whole families found a home in the Church. One man over forty years of age that had never made any profession led in prayer the next night after he was at the altar.

Please allow us to make two requests; First let every reader attempt to GET ONE NEW SUBSCRIBER FOR THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, THREE MONTHS FOR 25 cents, beginning Nov. 1st. Second, LET EVERY READER PLEASE "PRAY FOR US."

E. S. Cummings and Wife.

"HE BEING DEAD YET SPEAK-ETH."

A few days ago the following letter came to our office from the pastor of a church in one of the middle western states:

"Dear Brother Morrison.

"A dear old brother, who has since gone to Heaven, subscribed for The Pentecostal Herald for me several years ago and I have been taking it ever since. I think a gift of this kind too fine for words to tell. He is gone on but every Herald calls to mind that dear old man who sat on the front porch and repeated scripture as I read it. His reward is the front row up there now."

Many such letters as this come into the office, and when I read them it makes me think. This brother no longer has to sing, "Will there be any stars in my crown?" He has found them there. And while he has passed on, his influence still lives in the message of this paper to one whom he offered a helping hand.

What advantage are we taking of our opportunities? Does your pastor get The Herald every week? We go from week to week to the church and listen to his sermons and carry away with us the spiritual food that keeps our experience alive. But do we ever give him anything? I don't mean material things. It is our duty to support him, but we must remember that "man shall not live by bread alone." Are we a continual drain on the spiritual vigor of our pastor and never giving anything in return?

The Dead Sea is avoided by all of the living things of nature. There are no fish in it, no beautiful wild flowers are to be found making a gorgeous fringe on its banks, never does a thirsty animal slake his thirst from its saline waters, and all because it drinks in and in from the Jordan, the Jabbock, the Arnan, and the other streams but never gives out a drop.

Here is a practical application of Christ's teaching that, "it is more blessed to give than to receive." He who is constantly receiving but never gives out will eventually become dead in his spiritual life. The giving our life, for the Master's sake, carries the promise of a new life which is better than the one given away.

Help your pastor by giving him the inspiration of your presence at the services of the church. Hold up his hands in Christian brotherhood, furnish him with spiritual food in return for what he is giving you. See that his name is added to the mailing list of The Pentecostal Herald if he is not already a subscriber. Remember that the more you put into a thing the more you get out of it.

"The Twelve," by E. A. George is a history of the lives of the Twelve Disciples. It is worth many times the selling price of $1.00. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

SERMON OUTLINES

BY REV. U. G. FOOTE, D.D.

The late Col. George W. Bain said of this preacher, that "Dr. Foote is the best all the year round preacher I ever heard."

The Western Recorder says: "The method by which the author develops his sermon outlines is attractive. Each sermon is composed of several divisions, and under those divisions he has simply written down key thoughts, a thought to a line. The simplicity of this is winning. Also the outlines represent the preaching of a thoroughly evangelical minister and evangelist."

The Record of Christian Work says: "The plan is good, and the material prolific of points."

THESE OUTLINES ARE COMPLETE. Suitable for all Occasions

"THE METHODIST CRISIS"

Dr. Ridout has put into pamphlet form under above title the story of the fight for orthodoxy which took place on the floor of the New Jersey Conference, Asbury Park, N. J., last March, in which he and Dr. H. P. Sloan and others debated with Bishop Anderson and Dr. H. H. Meyer, Sunday School Editor, the issues of Modernism within Methodism.

In addition to Dr. Ridout's story there is a fine write-up of the affair by Rev. H. Decker who was present at the debate and whose story appeared in the "Essentialist."

Let every Methodist send and get a copy of this booklet. Every Methodist minister—North and South—should read the story. It will stir your blood. It will show you how Modernism is getting a terrific grip on Methodist Bishops, Editors and Leaders. It will also show you your duty to stand up and show your colors in the hour of peril.

Dr. Sloan, Dr. Ridout and others take the fight for orthodoxy right into their Annual Conferences and it is there the battle should be fought out.

Price 15c, or 7 for $1.00.

"Hallelujah Jack," the life-story of Rev. Jack Linn, the well-known evangelist, is still one of the best sellers. Just recently a young man was converted by reading the book. He was a cartoonist and is now drawing pictures for God. In fact, he is preaching now. It was by reading the book that all this took place. Order a book from this office. Price, 50 cents.

Every Christian wants to know how to be a better soul winner. Dr. Scarborough has given us a fine study of the methods of Jesus in this great task in his book, "How Jesus Won Men." It sells for $2.00. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

STOP! READ! ACT!

DO YOU KNOW that there are many people right in your own community who do not know that there is such a paper as THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, who would be glad to know of it?

DO YOU KNOW that THE HERALD is a weekly blessing to thousands of our less fortunate brothers and sisters who are unable to get out to church on Sunday as you and I do?

DO YOU KNOW that nearly every week THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD carries a holiness sermon to many people who never hear one preached from a pulpit?

DO YOU KNOW that there is not a better, more wholesome sixteen pages of holiness reading matter, for the whole family, than in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD?

DO YOU KNOW that if you, as one of the present great family of readers will send THE HERALD into four new homes its influence will be increased fourfold?

DO YOU KNOW that it is your great privilege to join with us in the attempt we are making to preach scriptural holiness to all men everywhere?

DO YOU KNOW that you can send THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD to some friend for the next three months for 25c?

A LIVING ISSUE.

By The Editor.

RECALL that when that wonderful man, Sam P. Jones, first preached at High Bridge, Ky., during one of the summer camp meetings at that place, while he sat upon the root of a tree and a group of us gathered about him, one of the brethren said, "Brother Jones, do you ever meet with any of these sanctified people?" Jones looked up at him and said, "Oh, yes, I frequently meet with the sanctified people." "What do you think of them?" queried the preacher. Jones replied, "My brother, wherever I find sanctification, I find agitation, and where there is agitation, there is salvation; where there is no sanctification, there is stagnation, and stagnation is the last station on the road to damnation."

This saying of the inimicable Sam Jones made a profound impression upon me. Sanctification is a living issue. It has friends and foes. A sermon against the doctrine of sanctification, as taught in the Scriptures and by John Wesley, will arouse interest. It may not produce conviction or lead to the development of spiritual hungering and thirsting after righteousness, but it will be listened to with interest. A sermon on the subject of entire sanctification as the will of God and wrought out in the atonement of Christ, to be accepted by faith, and witnessed to by the Holy Ghost, is almost certain to create a stir, to lead to more or less controversy. Some who hear the message will search the Scriptures, hunger and thirst after righteousness and are quite likely to be led into the experience of a gracious deliverance from all sin.

We believe that the preachers ought to bring into their pulpits the discussion of living issues, vital subjects; something of importance, something that will provoke thought, arouse discussion, send people to the Word of God for information and their prayer closets for help. There is nothing quite so interesting as a lively, earnest preacher, full of a great theme, pouring out of his heart and experience a message of essential gospel truth. We are not suggesting here that the preacher must confine himself to any one doctrine of the Bible or subject of vital interest. He must be a man wide-awake. His mind must be well stored with Bible truth and quick to discover a situation—the psychological hour—and a message that is appropriate for any and every occasion. He must prepare himself to inform the people on a vital subject, to awaken interest, to fill their minds with the truth on the subject under discussion and send them away with mental quickening and spiritual stimulus to think, to talk, to discuss, to reason, to get down the Bible and to inquire prayerfully into the subject they have heard the minister discuss.

The question in the mind of the true minister of the Gospel is not, what do the people want, but what do they need? Not, what will soothe the conscience of the lukewarm, the backslidden or the sinner, but what will arouse the conscience, break the heart and bring repentance? Not, what will flatter the devout believer, but what will cause him to groan after purity of heart and righteousness of life? Not, what will make me popular as a minister of the gospel, but what will make me useful in winning lost souls to Christ? Nothing can be more interesting than a preacher on fire with a great message, thoroughly in love with human souls, full of kindness and Christian courtesy and, at the same time, eager to bring the lost to the Master, the Christians into closer communion and sweeter fellowship with their Lord.

Open Letter to a Young Preacher.

My dear Young Brother:

AT one of our large camp meetings some years ago, I was asked to address the preachers on some of the practical phases of the preacher's life and work; it was in a convenient tent at an hour when none of the public services was going on; and for five days I had a great group of preachers before me for a forty minutes' message. There were present at these meetings from fifty to seventy-five preachers.

The first address was founded on the words of Paul to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." 2 Tim. 2:15.

First, study not to show thyself approved a profound scholar, a great organizer of a variety of "drives," a brilliant orator, or a shrewd manipulator of ecclesiastical politics, but a God-approved workman, a man who understands and loves the truth of God as revealed in his Word and applicable to Christian experience and the various duties, obligations, privileges and opportunities of Christian life.

Second, we pointed out the charm and fascination of books and the danger of the minister giving himself too constantly to his library. He must not study for his own gratification. He must not permit himself to be so tied down to books that he doesn't take time to cultivate his spiritual life, to visit among his people, to be a brother among his fellows, to seek the lost sheep, to comfort the sorrowing, administer to the poor, help to lift up the thought and faith of the dying to the Christ who is so willing and able to save. We exhorted a bit right here showing how a man can become so interested in charming books of history, of travel, of biography, of fiction, of philosophy, that he may neglect THE BOOK, and neglect the souls of men; that a man may become so bookish that he has little or no thought of his own, but uses borrowed thought, thought that has become a bit stale. We insisted that a man must not let the books he reads master him, but he must master the books, that he must learn as the disciples did when they went fishing, to take out the good and cast the bad away. We suggested that a man could read destructive criticism in order to answer it until he becomes so saturated with it that almost unconsciously he preaches it, loses the note of divine authority and the spirit of evangelism; that a man must study with the thought of divine approval, of successful workmanship, with a view to building up the saints in the holy faith and bringing the impenitent to Christ.

I recall that after one of these addresses one of the most prominent and scholarly preachers of the conference who was present, came to me in tears and said, that he had read so much of destructive criticism with the thought of preparing himself to answer the critics that he had lost his evangelistic zeal, damaged his own faith and, whereas in other years he was a successful soul winner, he had not had a conversion under his ministry for many years. He was in great sorrow of heart and seemed to feel that his day of usefulness had passed.

We called attention to the fact that the people are very fond of oratory, of the graceful and eloquent preacher, and the great danger seeking simply to please and win the applause of men for himself rather than winning them away from sin to Christ and holy living.

Third, we insisted that the minister of the Gospel must be a student of the Word of God; that no man can teach mathematics who does not know the multiplication table, that whatever the minister may lack in other realms of learning, he must saturate his mind and heart with the truths of the Bible; to know the truth will not only set him free in his own soul, but will enable him to bring the truth of freedom to his fellowbeings; that in his studies he must constantly keep in mind the one great end, the approval of God upon himself and his ministry; that he must be a fisherman of men who is not ashamed to stand before his fellows, to make his appeal and to have the joy and charm of being a soul winner.

We insisted that the preacher who does not win souls in all this world so full of the unsaved, who will listen to reason, who can be persuaded, whose consciences can be aroused, ought to be ashamed. We said that the winning of immortal souls from sin to Christ is the greatest work ever committed to men. "He that winneth souls is wise," and "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever."

On the second afternoon, our text was, "Take heed to thyself and unto the doctrine. Continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." 1 Tim. 4:16.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

COMING across the English Channel from Dover to Calais is only a boat ride of one hour; the sea is a trifle rough at times—this is my second time across the channel. Nine years ago I crossed from Southampton to LaHavre in the winter time; then the channel was lined with ships on watch for German submarines.

There is a tremendous continental travel business carried on between England and France, and our boat was well crowded with English-speaking people from all parts of the world. I had a chat with a man from South Africa who was born there of British parents, and who is very pronounced in his opinion that South Africa should be allowed to run its own affairs and not be ruled from London; that is to say, he is satisfied to have South Africa a part of the British Empire but in its internal affairs run its own government.

Coming up from Calais to Paris was a run of about three hours bringing us into Paris at eleven at night. We had no difficulty in securing a suitable hotel; then in the morning we looked up a hotel in the center of things and were very fortunate in securing just what we wanted right close to the Church of the Madeleine. This church was begun in 1764 but remained unfinished and was continued by Napoleon I, who intended it to become a Temple of Victory. It was completed in 1842, and measures 354 feet long, 141 feet wide and 98 feet high. In the tympanum of the facade is to be seen the Last Judgment by Lemaire. It is visited greatly by tourists because of its unique history and architecture. The peculiarity of the Madeleine is that it has no windows; all its light comes from above. This has always been very suggestive to me regarding the church of God—its light should come, not from around, or about, but from above.

Everything in Paris just now centers in the American Legion Convention which met in Paris this year because this is the tenth anniversary of our entering the World War. They all say that the parade on Monday was the greatest ever witnessed in Paris from many viewpoints. Both French and Americans joined together. Foch and Pershing were the conspicuous leaders. No doubt our readers have read about this famous Monday Parade in Paris. We were engaged in preaching in London and did not reach Paris till Tuesday night.

Paris, the capital of France and seat of the Government, has a population of upwards of 3,000,000 and covers an area of 19,274 acres. It is situated on both banks of the Seine and in this way, is divided into two parts known as the Right Bank (Montmartre quarters and the great Boulevards) and the Left Bank, (University quarter). In the middle of the river, in the form of ship, lies the Ile de la Cite, the antique Lutece of Roman times, and once inhabited by the small Gallic tribe of the Parisii, the cradle of Paris on which the celebrated metropolitan church of Notre-Dame holds high its magnificent towers, centuries old. Close by the Ile de la Cite can be seen the Ile Saint-Louis.

At the present time, the town is divided off into twenty arrondissements each with its own Town Hall.

Paris is the City of Monuments. No city in the world abounds so in great works of sculpture and art as does Paris.

At this writing Americans seem to dominate the city. The American flag and the French flag are to be seen everywhere. The city is illuminated at night to the full. The French government has shown every courtesy possible to the many thousand American ex-soldiers who have made this their Convention City for 1927. I am glad to record too, that in going about the city a great deal I have witnessed no behavior or misbehavior any more than could be seen in the average American city.

At the Convention the opening day the President of France, Marshall Foch, Minister of War, and others gave the Americans, headed by General Pershing and Commander Savage, a most unusual reception.

When Marshall Foch began his address by saying, "Let me first salute your Star-Spangled Banner" the Legionnaires burst into shouts and applause which lasted for nearly a minute.

CITES HISTORIC NAMES.

Then the commander of France's war armies went on: "After one has lived through those tragic hours, aware of the number of battalions and standards in the battle, one cannot help remembering with emotion the names of Cantigny, Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, Argonne, Woivre, Champagne and Flanders—all of which sounded the approach of victory.

"Today when the American Legion comes here to Paris to hold its national convention among its brothers-in-arms of nine years ago, it holds up to us a great example, one of fidelity, of remembrance and an absolute proof of friendship—and finally it brings a lesson in morale.

"Yes, your victorious army of fighters wants liberty to continue, wants peace in the world maintained and desires the improvement of humanity's conditions through work. This is in keeping with your splendid program here.

UNITED FOR PEACE.

"It is in order to maintain law and order, to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation, to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses, to promote peace and goodwill upon earth, to make right the master of might; it is for all these that the American Legion has united.

"That is what you bring to us, you, the victorious soldiers of yesterday, who have become the free citizens of a free Republic. With that sense of realization that men of action have, you have taken from our walls the words Liberty and Fraternity, to make with them a practical form of a true democracy, opening to everyone through work and peace the largest horizons."

The address of the Minister of War brought to my own mind the awful experiences we passed through in France in the winter of 1918. We were then "carrying on" at Gievers when news came of the crushing blow the enemy was dealing on the English front in March of 1918. I shall never forget that dark day of March 28th. Things looked hopeless. If Amiens fell then it would be Calais for the enemy and Paris ultimately. It was upon that occasion that General Pershing wrote that famous letter which Minister of War read in his speech.

"March 28th, 1918.

"I write to say that the American nation would hold it as a great honor if our troops were to take part in the present battle. I ask it of you in their name and mine. Nothing counts now but fighting. Infantry, Artillery, Aviation, all that we have is yours. Make use of it as you like.

"More will come still, as many as will be required. I am here on purpose to tell you that the American Nation is proud to be engaged in the greatest battle of History."

"J. J. PERSHING."

"Gentlemen, you may search in all records, through the lives of all illustrious men: you will find no document that honors more the nation and commander who signed it, I could almost say, that honors the Nation and Commander who received it, and whose memory more deserves to be piously kept. I wish that letter were learnt by heart by our school boys and girls. It would suffice to add: at Cantigny, on the Marne, at Saint-Mihiel, at Montfaucon, American soldiers proved worthy of such a letter written in her name."

On Wednesday morning the President of France received Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army. She afterwards addressed the Convention in a very eloquent speech.

Miss Booth concluded her address with an appeal for world peace, saying that while there are still clouds upon the horizon of world politics, "yet the long rows of white crosses that stand pointing heavenward all the way from the English Channel to the Adriatic, make one demand of us—peace for the world. I am convinced that the most valuable legacy of the war has left us is a universal requisition for peace, and am confident that this insatiable thirst for world peace found in the breasts of tens of millions will never be appeased until the standards of justice, happiness, and of hope be transmitted to the banners of all peoples of the earth, and there is not a remnant of a nation left to chafe and bruise beneath the galling yoke of unjust oppression, and until disagreements and differences and political controversies be amicably settled by other measures than the mutilation and destruction of the best thing God has made—Man—the masterpiece of God's creations."

Yesterday we went to Notre Dame Cathedral, famous for its architecture and beautiful windows, also famous because it was here Napoleon crowned himself and Josephine; famous also from the fact that during the Revolution the Infidels of France who controlled things brought an actress to this church, put her on a throne and deified her as the Goddess of Reason. They had repudiated God, the Bible and all religion and now set up the human intellect and unaided reason as the ruling factors in human government.

Paris is famous for many eventful things in history. To us Protestants it is shocking to think of the massacre of the Huguenots on St. Bartholomew's day, August 24, 1572. The chief agents in this bloody deed was Catherine de Medici, who had gained great influence and power at the French Court, and whose intrigues eventuated in getting King Charles IX. to consent to a general massacre of the Protestants. The terrible work began with the ringing of the church bells. Admiral Coligny, the Huguenot leader, was killed by a detail sent to his house in charge of the Duke of Guise. The King in giving his consent to the killing of Coligny said: "Kill all the Huguenots in France that there may not be one left to reproach me." Throughout the city the terrible murder went on all through that night, and that week it continued; the massacre extended beyond Paris and it is estimated that over 20,000 Protestants met their death. A most horrible sequel attended this; a solemn service of thanksgiving was held at St. Peters in Rome for "this great victory of the church."

As one passes the church where the signal was given to begin this frightful massacre one is led to contemplate with sadness the awful uses which the church is sometimes put to. We were pleased today to see the great church which now stands near the Louvre dedicated to the Reformers, and in front of it a magnificent monument to the memory of Coligny, with inscription ending up in references to Psalm 112:6. Hebrews 11:27.

Protestantism is not very strong in France, but it has the advantage today of enjoying the utmost freedom in carrying on its work, and since the war if the Protestants had gone in more for real soul-saving and evangelistic work than for merely social and welfare service it might have accomplished great things. If the Methodist Episcopal Church in its work in France had sent a live, vital evangelistic man to head up its work in the way the M. E. Church, South, had done in Central Europe, it would have had revivals of religion and seen salvation in the same manner. France needs more than ecclesiastical supervision; it needs salvation and a live gospel and Spirit-baptized preachers and leaders. France is truly a Land of Cathedrals and Monuments.

Permit me to conclude this article with the following lines of the Poet which seem to impress me more than common in view of the many ancient as well as modern temples I have visited:

"Souls are built as temples are—
Sunken deep, unseen, unknown
Lies the sure foundation stone,
Then the courses framed to bear
Lift the cloisters pillared fair,
Last of all the airy spire,
Soaring heavenward, higher and higher,
Nearest sun and nearest star.

"Souls are built as temples are—
Inch by inch in gradual rise
Mount the layered masonries.
Warring questions have their day,
Kings arise and pass away,
Laborers vanish one by one,

Still the temple is not done,
Still completion seems afar.

"Souls are built as temples are—
Here a carving rich and quaint,
There the image of a saint;
Here a deep-hued pane to tell
Sacred truth or miracle;
Every little helps the much,
Every careful, careless touch
Adds a charm or leaves a scar.

"Souls are built as temples are—
Based on Truth's eternal law,
Sure and steadfast, without flaw.
Through the sunshine, through the snows,
Up and on the building goes;
Every fair thing finds its place,
Every hard thing lends a grace,
Every hand may make or mar."

Advancing Atheism an Ear-mark of Present Apostasy.

Rev. John F. Knapp, D.D.

IN 1911 Dr. David James Burrell, pastor of the Marble Collegiate (Reformed) Church of New York, wrote as follows in The Christian Herald, (N. Y.) under the title, "The Coming of the King."

"The world has never seen a more wonderful year than the one we are living in. The Peace Palace is nearing its completion. The nations are conferring as to the wisdom of settling all disputes by arbitration. . . . When swords are beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning-hooks, it will be time to listen again for the angel's song, 'Glory to God in the highest! Peace on earth and good will toward men?' Signs of his near approach! The silencing of open and avowed infidelity. (Italics ours.) At the beginning of the last century the air was rent with the vociferations of Thomas Paine and Jean Jacques Rousseau. There was not a nation in the world which did not have its brave cohort of infidels who stood forth impudently shaking their clenched fists at God. . . . They have gone their way. . . . But have they? The same writer thought that war had been slain little realizing that we were on the verge of the greatest international catastrophe that the world ever saw.

Recently the whole country has been stirred over the revelations in the World's Work of the activities of organized Atheism. Referring to this the other night in an address on the Second Coming of the Lord, the next day the writer received anonymously through the mail tracts and other literature bearing the publication address, "The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, Inc." Words fail to convey the horror with which I examined this spume of hell coming to me through the United States mails. No comments that I could make are adequate to express the actual cold-blooded attitude of this organization. One announcement in particular ought to be burned into the hearts of all the Christian parents of America. It is a bid for membership in the "Junior Atheistic League" "For boys and girls from seven to seventeen." (And yet some so-called orthodox preachers are saying that the age of accountability is not reached until twenty-one! Let the words of this announcement sear your soul:

"In response to many requests for increased activity among young people, the Junior Atheist League is established. Godless children shall have an opportunity to emancipate their companions from unreasonable religion. . . . The League will remove boys and girls from the evil influence of the clergy. The magical, animistic, and phallic, or sexual origins of religion will be explained in simple language. The attainment of happiness in this world . . . shall be taught the rising generation as the chief end of man. . . . The League will free sons and daughters from the fear of hell and the hope of heaven. . . . The increasing number of Atheists with the consequent demand for trained workers, makes the League a necessity. Locals will be formed wherever an organizer can be secured. . . . Stress will be made upon forming branches in high schools, as these will prepare students to serve as organizers of damned souls societies during college years. . . . Clean and healthful good times will take the place of stultifying Sunday schools. Morality based on the findings of modern science will supersede belief based . . . on theology. . . . Miss Christine Walker, a sixteen-year-old Atheist of exceptional ability (as National Secretary) is waiting to hear from young Atheists and their parents."

At the bottom of this sheet which bears the attractive picture of Miss Walker, is a blank for the "Juniors" to sign. They not only enclose dues and give their name and address but they are asked, "Do parents approve?" "Will you organize local?" Just what success this organization is having among the youth of the nation it is impossible for an outsider to know but certain it is that anything sensational and more or less blasphemous will have an almost irresistible appeal to the eager youth of today. Parents, guard your children from this propaganda as you would from a rattlesnake, a bootlegger or a prostitute.

Among the other circulars enclosed was an article purporting to be from "The Masonic Digest." That there should be any league between this organization and the atheistic corporation is unthinkable, and yet this tract is going forth accompanied by literature which is directly subversive of Christian morals and hence of all religion and government and the tract itself states that the Bible "inculcates in the mind of the young, superstitious beliefs unworthy of the lofty intellectual development of a twentieth century civilization." The Bible, this writer states, cannot be read in the public schools "without violating a fundamental principle of our national existence." "Many who, according to the Bible, were honored with God's blessing but are unworthy the respect of mankind and should not have their indecent transactions imposed upon the pliable minds of growing or adolescent children." "If the Bible is ever to be respected as a venerable volume replete with interesting folk-lore and anthropological information it must be denuded of its supernatural tradition and its halo of superstition." I confess to something of a shock in finding these words under the imprint of Masonry which I had always been told by its members was "founded" upon the Bible. To say the least it is a shrewd attempt on the part of the Atheists to make it appear that their devilish propaganda has the backing of the Masonic Order.

Atheism heretofore has been largely contented to be considered a philosophy rather than a program of regulated and practical living. Now the blasphemers are bringing to their aid the pencil of the cartoonist, the pen of the poet and ridicule of the wit. A series of "Portraits of Bible Characters" was enclosed. Adam was "a miserable coward;" Noah, "the first drunkard," Abraham, "tries to murder his son;" Lot "piously assists his own daughter in their incestuous depravity;" Moses, "saves all young girls for immoral purposes;" Joshua, "with no more mercy in his nature than an Apache Indian;" David, "owing to his unbridled lust afflicted with a nameless disease;" etc., etc., ad nauseum. In the "New Doxology" we read:

"Praise God from whom all cyclones blow,
Praise Him when rivers overflow,
Praise Him who whirls down houses and steeple,

Who sinks the ship and drowns the people."
On November 16, 1925, Justice John Ford of the Supreme Court of New York approved the certificate of incorporation of the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism. Had an Association of Bootleggers or Prostitutes or Gamblers been incorporated it could not begin to contain within itself the possibilities of lawlessness, banditry and immorality germinant in this Association. The temple of law thus becomes a house divided against itself—demanding respect for the Constitution on one hand and with the other lending succor to an organization that will ultimately trample it in the dust, and attempt to legalize the abrogation of Christian morals. Here is their own statement: "The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, however, is not primarily a secular, or a libertarian, or an anti-blue law organization. Going deeper . . . its main purpose is to wage war upon religion itself. . . . We will not compromise, after the contemptible manner of Modernists and Liberals, by using religious terms in a new sense of our own. . . . The decadent philosophy of the New Testament, with its unnatural ethics and insane sex ideas, debasing the race, fills the world with the unfit. . . . The morality lie will be refuted. . . . There is nothing so deadening to the moral sense as religion."

It will thus be seen that real objective of attack is not so much the belief in God as the results which flow from that belief in the shape of moral restraints upon unregenerate human conduct. It may freely be said that

THE IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL.

Rev. J. B. Seay.

"I go to prepare a place for you." John 14:2.

IN the study of this great subject it is important that we establish the fact, if possible, that there is a heaven somewhere according to the Scriptures. Jesus declared that he was going to prepare a place for those that love him and keep his commandments. Jesus says also that he is coming back. "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14:3. From every point of reason, Jesus makes it plain to his disciples that there is certainly a heaven. Hear him: "And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven." John 3:13. Nicodemus declares plainly his belief in Jesus as not of this world, but that he had come from some real place where God (existed) was. John 3:2. "We know that thou art a teacher come from God. For no man can do these (things) miracles, that thou doest, except God be with him."

It appears that from the most ancient times all nations had their belief that the good will have a place of rest after death; it may be an Elysian field, a Paradise, or a Heaven, a place of rest for good men who pass from this place of change and trial of rewards for the good. This idea has existed from the beginning of time. The Chinese have no such word as death in their language, but when one of their people pass away they say, "he has returned to his family." What a pleasing thought, was ever in the teaching of Confucius, that is, that "The spirits of the good were permitted to visit their ancient habitations on the earth, or such ancestral halls or places as were appointed by their descendants, to receive homage and confer benefactions. It was duty to observe these rites in such places, if they wished to be blessed in coming ages. Immortality was plainly taught by the Egyptians, although bound up with it was the idea of preservation of the body, to which they attached great importance, as a condition of the soul's continued life, and hence they built vast tombs, and embalmed their bodies, as if to last forever."

The first trace of a belief in a future existence, of the soul, we find in Homer's Iliad (XXIII, 103 sq.), where he represents that Achilles first became convinced that souls and shadowy forms have a real existence in the shades (Hades) by the appearance to him of the dead Patroclus in a dream. This great thought is seen in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. Luke 16:27, "Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house."

After all it must be admitted by all thoughtful men and students of history from the earliest times, that "Achilles, the ideal hero, declared that he had rather till the ground than live in pale Elysium." We find that, with the progress of Hellenic thought, a higher idea of the future is found to characterize both the poetry and philosophy of Greece, till, in the Platonic Socrates, the conception of immortality shines forth with a clearness and precision truly impressive. "For we must remember, O men," said Socrates, in his last speech, before he drained the poison cup, "that it depend upon the immortality of the soul, whether we have to live to it and care for it or not. For the danger seems fearfully great of not caring for it." Locke says, "But now, since the soul shows itself to us immortal, there can be for it no refuge from evil, and no other salvation than to become as good and intelligible as possible." More clearly are his views set forth in the Apology and the Phaedo, in language at once rich in faith and beauty. "The soul, the immaterial part, being of a nature so superior to the body, can it, he asks in the Phaedo, as soon as it is separated from the body, be dispersed into nothing, and perish? Oh, far otherwise. Oh, men there never was a time when the past leaders of all ages did not in some unmistakable way believe in the continuance of the soul. Plato considered the soul as having existed already eternally, the present life being only a moment in our career; he looked forward with an undoubting faith to the changes through which we must hereafter go."—"Drapeer, Intellectual Development of Europe."

It is plain to be seen that Moses and Confucius did not in so many words teach that the soul was immortal but from what they say, we are bound to believe that they believed it fully. Thus Moses in speaking of the tree of life in Paradise warns the man that if he ate of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil he would die. Gen. 2:17. It seems that he referred to the human body, but Moses tells us, about the soul in the same chapter at the 22nd verse, when they were driven out of the garden, lest they might return and eat of the tree of life and live forever. Gen. 2:22 seems to make a difference between the soul and the body. God made the soul like himself immortal, and if the body of the man ate of the tree of life it would live forever and be immortal in its sins; to prevent this he did not allow them to go back into the garden. Moses also strongly intimates his faith in the future life by what he says of this that we call death, in Ex. 3:6, "I am the God of thy father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob." Abraham had been dead for more than 400 years at this time. So Matt. 22:32 says, in referring to the subject of the future life, "I am the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and the God of Jacob. God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." If Abraham at the time God spoke to Moses in the words recorded in Ex. 3:6, was living it settles the question and assures the fact that the Old Testament as well as the New Testament teaches the immortality of the soul. Even Confucius in some respects avoids all mention of the future life, yet enjoins honors to be paid to departed spirits (thus assuming their life after death). At the time of Moses the Jews strongly believed in the immortality of the soul as a doctrine self-evident, and by them universally acknowledged and received; the reason for this, is, the Jews had lived among the Egyptians, a people who had cherished this faith from the remotest age, (Comp. Herodotus 2:123,) who assert that they were the first who entertained such an idea. The laws of Moses against necromancy, or the invocation of the dead, which was a thing practiced by the Canaanites (Deut. 18:9-12) and was prevalent among the Jews at the time of Saul (1 Sam. 28). Think of it a moment; how could the witch call up the spirit of Samuel unless there was a future world where they lived after the death of the body? (1 Sam. 28:11).

Again, the doctrine of the immortality of the soul is certainly recognized by Moses, but he seems to say that God had not given the power to any one to call up the departed spirits as that would be explained by him, that Moses said, in Deut. 18:15, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him (Jesus) ye shall hearken." Here is where Moses points to Christ who would make known the secrets of the future life. Jesus comes and takes the matter up just at this point and continues the doctrine of the immortal life. Hear what he says, at John 8:12, "I am the light of the world." And Paul says in 2 Tim. 1:10, "But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." Now if Jesus taught that there is a future life, he was only doing what Moses left for him to explain, and said to his brethren, "Unto him ye shall hearken." Deut. 18:15. In John 14:2, "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you: I go to prepare a place for you." These are the words of our Lord. Where was he going? To a place. Again we ask, did not Moses confess his belief and faith in the future life in what he declares took place in the case of Enoch who lived a pious life? Gen. 5:24, "And Enoch walked with God: and was not; for God took him."

I do not know but that this lesson of Enoch is to remind us that God does take note of the life we live in this world, and that he will reward the good, "but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." 1 Tim. 4:8.

The life beyond is fully illustrated in the words or promise to Abraham when he had that great vision, Gen. 15:15. "And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age." We ask how could they be gathered to his people after death, unless they still lived. Gen. 25:8. "Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people."

We call attention to this fact, to wit: Abraham's people or a part of them were buried at Ur of the Chaldees, and his father, Terah, was buried at Haran, for he died there, at the age of two hundred and five years; but Abraham was buried in the cave of Machpelah. Gen. 25:9. So it is seen that Abraham was not, in the human sense, buried with his fathers. It must mean that he was gathered to them in the spirit world where they were still living after the death of the body. If you will read Gen. 47:9, you will see that Paul bases his great argument on the language of Jacob, "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years," etc., and similar passages that he likens this life to a journey as Jacob and the rest of the patriarchs all believed in, and expected a life after death. Heb. 11:13, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth." ver. 15. "For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country." Ver. 16. "But now they desire a better country, that is, an Heavenly, wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city."

Again, we call attention to the fact that Solomon must have believed in the immortality of the soul, for he says, Eccl. 12:7, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Also note the following passages, Ps. 73:24, "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory." Ver. 26. "My flesh and my heart faileth: but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever." Again I call attention to the statement of Professor Munk, the late celebrated Jewish savant who regards as one of the strongest evidences which the Old Testament affords for the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, the expression, "He was gathered unto his people." This is an expression that means they were buried in the same region or plot of ground, but not so with Abraham, for he was buried in the cave of Machpelah where only Sarah had been buried up to this time. It cannot mean that Abraham was buried in the same place as his father, for his father and people were buried in Chaldaea and not in Canaan. The statement that is made in Gen. 49:33, cannot refer to the burial of the patriarch Jacob because after his death we learn that his sons in the next chapter had his body embalmed and he was carried to Canaan and placed in the cave of Machpelah where the ashes of Abraham and Isaac repose. You will note that when the death of Jacob took place and he was buried, it says, when speaking of this matter, or the actual burial of Jacob took place, he uses a very different term, he simply says, "And Joseph went up to bury his father." Gen. 50:7. The expression, "he was gathered unto his people," cannot refer to the burial of the patriarch, but the departure of the soul to be with his people in the spirit world. The same words are spoken of Aaron, "Aaron shall be gathered unto his people," etc., for he was buried where no other one of his people were buried, on Mount Hor; and still it is said of Aaron, "He was gathered to his people." Certainly this means his soul was gathered to his people in heaven, or the place of their spirits. Num. 20:24-28. Again, I give one more instance. In Deut. 32:50, "And die in the mount whither thou goest up, and be gathered unto thy people." This certainly cannot mean that Moses was to be gathered in the grave with any of his people. The Hebrew lawgiver died on Mount Abarim; and the Scripture testifies "that no one ever knew of the place of his sepulchre;" and still the term, to be gathered to his people, is used.

That there is to be a future life, Jesus makes plain in all his works while here on the earth, according to Paul at 2 Tim. 1:10, "But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." If we carefully read the Scriptures that speak of God rewarding his people for a faithful life as Paul puts it, you will surely conclude that it will be fully completed in the life to come. Rom. 2:6, "Who will render to every man according to his deeds: To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life." The original for eternal life here used (aphtharsia) denotes nothing else than the immortality of the soul, or a continuation of the substantial being, of a man's person, of the ego, after death, by the destruction of the body. (Comp. Matt. 10:28; Luke 12:4).

And yet "in spite of all philosophical or theological tenets the belief in a future life is almost universally prevalent." Among the degraded savages, as in Central Africa, it takes the form of demonology, or belief in spectres or ghosts. Egypt is especially noted as the country where great stress was laid on the doctrine of immortality. The temples, sphinxes, statutes, and pyramids, all had some suggestion of the future life of the soul. The soul's cycle is set at 3,000 years, after which it returns from its wanderings, to the body again. Hence the care with which the Egyptians preserved the body by embalming it, and extravagant outlay of human labor on the Pyramids as tombs of the kings and symbols of their faith. Immortality, with Greece and Rome, assumed a definite shape, elevated far above the Oriental conception, inasmuch as it eliminated the principle of transmigration.

The proofs of immortality are numerous and of varying degrees of strictness. Among those most relied upon by the popular mind are the following: 1. The return or resurrection from the dead. 2. General belief in the existence of the soul after death; the probability that such general beliefs of mankind are well founded. 3. General desire of man to live for ever, and his horror at annihilation. 4. That it is contrary to the course of nature or the Divine character to endow a being with capacities never to be developed. 5. The fact that perfect justice is not dispensed in this life; the good suffer and the wicked triumph; necessity of future retribution to justify God's government.—Johnson's Universal Cyclopaedia.

In all our sorrows let us ever keep before us that the life of toil that now faces us, is but the pathway that leads to glory and beyond this is an eternity of bliss, and we know that though we walk amid the briar and the thorn we are traveling the way, beyond which are the delectable mountains of God, where weeping and sorrow are no more; and we shall see then as we never saw the meaning of the words, "I go to prepare a place for you." Let us remember that the seed we sow in this generation will bloom and bear fruit all along the future ages, long after we have finished our task, and produce successive harvest until the world is redeemed, and Jesus Christ becomes Lord of lords, and King of kings, and the earth is filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the seas.

"My Father's house is built on high:
Far, far above the starry sky;
When from this earthly prison free,
That heavenly mansion mine shall be.

"Let others seek a home below,
Which flames devour, or waves o'erflow,
Be mine a happier lot, to own
A heavenly mansion near the throne.

"Then fall this earth, let stars decline,
The sun and moon refuse to shine,
All nature sink and cease to be,
That heavenly mansion stands for me."

Our Inestimable Privilege.

ANDREW MURRAY.

"But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." Matt. 6:6.

Our Lord had spoken of the prayer of the hypocrites who desire to be seen of men, and also of the prayer of the heathen who trust in the multitude of their words. They do not understand that prayer has no value except it is addressed to a personal God who sees and hears. In the text our Lord teaches us a wonderful lesson concerning the inestimable blessing which the Christian may have in his Inner Chamber. If we would understand the lesson aright we must notice the light that the Inner Chamber sheds on—

1. The Wonderful Love of God.—Think of God, his greatness, his holiness, his unspeakable glory, and then on the inestimable privilege to which he invites his children, that each one of them, however sinful or feeble he may be, every hour of the day, may have access to him, and hold converse with him as long as he wishes. If he enters his Inner Chamber, then God is ready to meet him, to have fellowship with him, to give him the joy and strength which he needs with the living assurance in his heart that he is with him and will undertake for him in everything. In addition he promises that he will enrich him in his outward life and work with those things which he has asked for in secret. Ought we not to cry out with joy? What an honor! What a salvation! What an overflowing supply for every need!

One may be in the greatest distress, or may have fallen into the deepest sin, or may in the ordinary course of life desire temporal or spiritual blessing; he may desire to pray for himself or for those belonging to him, or for his congregation or Church; he may even become an intercessor for the whole world—the promise for the Inner Chamber covers all: "Pray to thy Father which is in secret; he will reward thee openly."

We might well suppose that there would be no place on earth so attractive to the child of God as the Inner Chamber with the presence of God promised, where he may have unhindered intercourse with the Father. The happiness of a child on earth if he enjoys the love of his father; the happiness of a friend as he meets a beloved benefactor; the happiness of a subject who has free access to his king and may stay with him as long as he wishes; these are as nothing compared with this heavenly promise. In the Inner Chamber you can converse with your God as long and as intimately as you desire, you can rely on his presence and fellowship.

Oh, the wonderful love of God in the gift of an Inner Chamber sanctified by such a promise! Let us thank God every day of our lives for it as the gift of his wonderful love. In this sinful world he could devise nothing more suitable for our needs, as a fountain of unspeakable blessing.

II. The Deep Sinfulness of Man.—We might have thought that every child of God would have availed himself with joy of such an invitation. But, see! what is the response? There comes a cry from all lands that prayer in the Inner Chamber is, as a general rule, neglected by those who call themselves believers. Many make no use of it; they go to church, they confess Christ, but they know little of personal intercourse with God. Many make a little use of it, but in a spirit of haste, and more as a matter of custom, or for the erasing of conscience, so that they cannot speak of any joy or blessing in it. And, what is more sad, many who know something of its blessedness confess that they know little about faithful, regular, and happy fellowship with the Father, all the day, as something which is as necessary as their daily bread.

since it is the avowed purpose of this Organization to align all college students as damned souls, it is their ulterior purpose to so break down the restraints of Christian morality that the whole nation and finally the world shall become a veritable hell.

Not the least revolting of the aims recorded by this Association (which is so paternally anxious to prevent the younger generation from being contaminated (?) and debased (?) by the Bible) is what the President of it describes as "the artificial hybridization of the human and anthropoid species, to support the doctrine of evolution, by establishing close kinship between man and the apes." This simply means the attempt to cross man and animal and produce a hybrid offspring. One hundred thousand dollars is needed at once for this of which ten thousand dollars has been granted by the Bolshevik government of Russia. The orang is to be crossed with the yellow race, the gorilla with the black race and the chimpanzee with the white race. Not satisfied with breaking down the Christian system of morality between man and woman it proposes the production of a new type of offspring as we read, "All three hybrids will reproduce themselves." Fire from heaven was rained down upon those benighted pagans who practiced the sin of sodomy; what then should be the penalty for those who are soliciting funds in a so-called Christian land for the reproduction of a race of animal-like men presumably with the instincts of the beasts and the appearance and faculties of human beings? In one word these strange militant Atheists decry Old Testament immorality and in the next they proceed to lengths of inhuman degeneracy beyond the practices of cannibal or criminal.

"There are in America millions of Atheists, whom agitation will precipitate into militancy." If this be true then here is a phase of apostasy corroborated in Scripture and destined to be one of the leading corollaries of antichrist, beast and false prophet. "In the last days men shall be . . . blasphemers, without natural affection . . . incontinent . . . despisers of those that are good." (2 Tim. 3). "Mockers in the last time, who should walk after their own ungodly lusts." (Jude 18). "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine . . . but after their own lusts . . . shall turn away their ears from the truth." (2 Tim. 4:3, 4). "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils . . . having their conscience seared with a hot iron." (1 Tim. 4:1, 2).

The Christ of the Creeds.

A notable book recently coming from the press is that from the pen of Bishop Warren A. Candler, D.D., LL.D., one of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The title is suggestive of the contents of the book. It deals in a faithful manner with the Christ of the creeds. Clearly it is shown that the creed of the Church has sprung out of the life of the church. The Creed, therefore, is factual, rather than speculative, vital rather than domatic, though its statement is positive. The chapters on the Virgin Birth, and the Resurrection of Jesus are well worth the price of the book. The emphasis of the Bishop on the permanent fact of Incarnation made clear in the chapter on the Resurrection of Jesus is a profound and enriching thought. Christ took up the body laid down, and his incarnation in man's likeness is an abiding fact. Just as pronounced is the Bishop's emphasis on the necessity for Christ in order to Christian living. In fact, the whole book is robust in thinking, terse in utterance, and vital in truth content. The book is well printed, splendidly bound, and can be had from The Pentecostal Publishing Company at the modest price of $1.25. Get it and read it.

Faithfully yours,

GOD-MAN OR MERELY MAN.

ERNEST WESLEY, Litt.D.

WE must prayerfully and diligently guard ourselves against all error, especially against all error regarding the person of our Lord. Heart and intellect belief in the truth concerning Jesus Christ means salvation: false belief means condemnation.

In order to believe the truth about our Lord we must know it; in order to know it we must reject all merely human opinions, no matter by whom offered. Such men as Fosdick, Darrow, etc., are not competent to tell us about the Christ of God: to know the truth we must receive and believe the record of Scripture. (Isa. 6:20).

Let us therefore examine the Word of God, paying no attention to human opinions, whether our own or that of others, except as they agree with the Word. Our review will, for want of space, be brief but the writer hopes it will be thorough.

First let us open the Old Testament. Gen. 3:15. "The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." Note: the seed of the woman not of the man. Heb. 10:5. Gen. 12:3. "In thee shall all the kindreds of the earth be blessed." A promise often repeated.

Deut. 18:18. "A prophet shall the Lord thy God raise up like unto thee," etc.

Isa. 6:1-13. Compare with Rev. 1:12, 13, and John 17:5.

Isa. 9:6. Perhaps the first word is an adjective.

Isa. 7:14. "A virgin, perhaps 'the virgin' shall conceive, and thou shalt call his name Immanuel," God with us. Matt. 1:23.

Dan. 2:14 and 7:13. Both of these are undoubted references to our Lord.

Micah 5:2. "Out of thee, Bethlehem Ephrata; shall he come forth who shall be ruler (prince) in Israel, whose goings forth have been of old, from everlasting."

Let us now open the New Testament. Here the difficulty is to make a selection among the abounding number of direct and indirect references. Matt. 1:21. "He shall save his people from their sins." We may well pause to ask:—Who has ever saved one sinner from his sins except Jesus Christ, and who can do this except God?

John 1:1-5. "The Word was from the beginning, was with God, was God."

John 3:13. "The Son of man who is in heaven." A mysterious expression but undoubtedly the statement of our Lord "IS IN HEAVEN," implies Deity and agrees with many other statements.

John 6:33. "The bread of God is he who cometh down from heaven." Compare John 16:22, and many similar statements, implying pre-existence.

John 8:58. "Before Abraham was born I existed"; this is the literal meaning of our Lord's words.

John 10:30. "I and my father are one." Can there be "oneness" apart from Deity in any case?

John 19:7. "He made himself the Son of God." Compare Matt. 26:63.

John 14:9. "He who hath seen me hath seen the Father."

John 20:28. "My Lord and my God"! Not a sudden ejaculation but the conclusion of deliberation.

Acts 20:28. There is little question regarding these words:—"The Church of God purchased with his own blood."

2 Cor. 5:10. "God was in Christ," etc.

Eph. 5:5. "The kingdom of Christ and of God." Up to end of twelfth century all writers refer these words to one person. More than 1,000 references in Greek fathers to this effect.

Rom. 9:5. "Who is over all, God blessed for ever" or "the Christ who is over all, God blessed for ever."

Phil. 2:6. "Who being in the form of God," etc. A better rendering. "Who continuing to be," etc.

Col. 2:9. "In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead."

Col. 1:16. "By him were all things created and he is before all things."

1 Tim. 3:16. "God was manifest in the flesh." The Greek contraction for God is here used.

Titus 2:13. "The appearance in glory of our great God and Saviour Jesus Christ." Greek construction shows the two names to mean one.

1 Peter 3:15. "Sanctify the Lord as God in your hearts." The correct reading.

2 Peter 1:1; 1 Peter 3:15; 1 John 5:20, and the often repeated use of Jesus Christ and God, showing equality in Revelation and other books declares the oneness of the Son of God with the Father, equality; also the testimony of God himself of Peter, the apostles, Martha, Thomas, not omitting the many statements of the demons, answer the question we have asked. To all who believe the Bible to be "God-breathed" or as Luke states it, Luke 1:3 (a correct translation) "received from above" there will be found no difficulty in learning and believing the ever blessed Son is "the only True God and eternal life."

Confession.

O, I am sure, if the blessed Savior should now say to you, as to a disciple of former days,—“Dost thou now believe?” you would not dare say, No! Surely, in view of the faith of which you have already been made the recipient, you would not withhold the glory due to his name, The Author and Finisher of your faith is now waiting to hear the confession of your mouth. O, give, give to God the glory due to his name. You are “compassed about by a cloud of witnesses.” Shall they now hear an acknowledgment of your faith? In heart you now believe, and with your lips, I trust, will henceforth say—

“Faith in Thy name Thou seest I have,
For Thou that faith hast wrought;
Dead souls Thou callest from the grave,
And speakest worlds from nought;

The thing surpasses all my thought,
Yet faithful is my Lord;
Through unbelief I stagger not,
For God hath spoke the word.

’Tis done, Thou dost this moment save,
With full salvation bless;
Redemption through Thy blood I have,
And spotless love and peace.”

Brother, your town needs a revival! You can put three hundred of the Special Revival Issue of THE HERALD into three hundred homes for the small price of $5.00. This number will be printed Nov. 30. Order a supply today.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

THIRD DAY AT SYCHAR, 1927.

Wm. R. Chase.

At the early morning prayer meeting when the leader called for all to come and kneel at the altar, there knelt at the end a large, fine looking man who, quietly and unobserved, save by two of the brethren who were kneeling near him, received Jesus as his sanctified. Later, your scribe saw him at the same place rejoicing in the victory he had gotten at the morning hour. The Spirit is at work; as quietly and unobserved as this brother received Jesus as his sanctifier many do at Sychar's altars. From all quarters of the globe the Spirit leads folk here to find the "Pearl of great price."

It looked for a time as if there might be no preaching this Saturday morning. Our young people's leader, Miss McGhie, had offered a prayer that brought heaven very near. This was followed by a special song by Brother Guiler and wife, "Keep my next step faithful," than which we have had no better ever, and then Brother Post, who was the preacher of the hour, sang the chorus of that song, "He'll take you through," and then a line of it and this raised such a shout as not often heard at this place where shouting is always in order. That hour we knew what it was to be 'seated together in the heavenlies in Christ.' Our souls were blessed. Phil. 3:10, 11 was taken as a text. St. Augustine said there were three things he wished he had seen; Rome in all its glory; Paul in his preaching; Christ in the flesh. I have seen, said the speaker, Rome and it made me no holier, nor happier. Paul wished for seven things: To know Christ, to win Christ, to magnify Christ, to be conformed to Christ, to be found in Christ, to rejoice in his day, to be forever with Christ. How superior the aspirations of Paul to that of the ancient great of his day. These ancient people little understood that the foundation of understanding self was to know God. They had over the door of their temples, 'Know thyself.' Isaiah well knew that to know himself he must first know God. We never can know ourselves until we know God, and the better we know him the better we shall know self. Don't, for one moment discount education, but God will bless the ministry of the uneducated man if he does not boast of it. Paul had the very best of educational advantages, took his degrees at the feet of Gamaliel; it was on his head that God put his hand, drew him out, and by him we have the classical epistles of Paul. Yet, of himself, he says, "I determined to know nothing among you, save Jesus Christ and him crucified."

It is to three things, that Paul wanted to know, that I would specially direct your attention. First, he wanted to know Christ. Second, he wanted to know the fellowship of his sufferings. Third, he wanted to know the power of his resurrection. Clarke says he wanted to know him as the Messiah. The knowledge he desired was experimental. We have but a limited number these days who speak of experimental knowledge. We are lacking tremendously the consciousness of experience. What we need is the consciousness of a personal experience. The poor woman who came up behind the Master and touched him received a personal, private experience. The more they tried to get the blind man to keep quiet the more fuss he made. Jesus stopped and called him to him and the man got what he wanted. You never will have a conscious personal experience until you get in touch with Jesus. The woman knew that the virtue that had gone out of him had come into her. When you get the experience the more they scrape and rub you the more and brighter you will shine. The little petty annoyances that come into your life will not dull, but brighten you. That is what real experience will do for you. But look out for the one who talks about the historic Christ, no matter how beautifully they may talk. To talk of him as the "historic Christ" is to leave him but a man. You may know him as more than that. You may know him as the Son of God, and your heart will be "strangely warmed." Wesley so found him. He never got over his contact with those Moravian brethren who had an experience. To know Christ is more than the knowledge of a doctrine. You may be thoroughly indoctrinated, be graduated in catechetical knowledge and yet not know Christ. You become a new creature when you come in contact with Jesus. A good, old-fashioned experience is worth having. Until you know him you never will know the other two—the power of his assurance of justification was what Paul was wanting, not as Clarke says, simply the resurrection of the body. To be raised from the deadness of sin and have the full assurance of your justification is entire sanctification. I have the assurance when converted but to become conscious of a full, clear, restful assurance I need to hear him speak the second time, "Be clean." I need to have my inbred sin healed. There is full, clear, restful assurance in sanctification. When you say that you have it and are not satisfied you better sit down. When you are sanctified you have what Paul prayed for the Thessalonian brethren, 'I pray God that your whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless.' He gave me eradication under the preaching of suppression. God always does things right. To know the fellowship of his sufferings has no reference to what he suffered in his atonement for us, but in real pain. Fellows on the same ship is the meaning of fellowship. Partnership with him in his persecutions and in being misunderstood, such is to be our relation to him. If you are a real human you will feel it when misunderstood. It is painful to be. Jesus felt this. Suffering for lack of sympathy, and mental suffering will be yours. It made Jesus sweat as it were drops of blood. You can master any situation if you lean on Jesus. The reason why Paul wanted this was that, if by any means he might attain to the resurrection from among the dead. He wanted to meet Jesus in the skies.

Brother Dunaway took for text, Rom. 14:17, and Matt. 6:33. That God would care for his own, for all their needs was his emphasis. God certainly will care for his intelligent creatures which are of so much more worth than the fowls of the air. The meaning of kingdom, as here used, is not heaven, nor the Church, nor the kingdom that is to be set up here by our Lord Jesus, but it is the kingdom that is within you. We get this kingdom in regeneration which fixes your feet so that you will walk right. So far as your outward life is concerned you will so walk as if you were sanctified. It fixes your feet and hands and your tongues. Regenerated ones will walk right, do right, talk right and the world will not know but that you have all that one can have.

Brother Owen preached on the more abundant life from John 10:10. Said he, "We love life and we shrink from death. We love the springtime when new life begins to show itself and shrink from the manifestations of death. The last enemy that is to be destroyed is death. But as much as we love life and shrink from death this life is but brief, swifter than a weavers shuttle, is as a tale that is told. A man's life is as water spilled on the ground, that cannot be gathered. When we reflect on the brevity of life we should rejoice that we have a life beyond the grave, life and immortality brought to light by Jesus Christ. The life spoken of in our text is spiritual life, eternal life. This is the life that Jesus came to bring us. He says this is life eternal to know me. In Jesus Christ we have one who is sufficient for every need of the human race. I like to emphasize the power of Jesus. We find in him a satisfying portion. All my springs are in him. He is the lily of the valley, the rose of Sharon. A happy Christian life depends on him. We cannot fathom what is eternal life yet, we have the promise of it in Jesus Christ. It is provided by him. We are to live forever. When we reflect on this we should forget our little things here for they are unimportant in the face of eternal life. A Christian is in vital life, is alive unto God, has life in Jesus and more abundant life through the Spirit.

AT ASBURY COLLEGE.

The crisp, cool days of fall are here but there are flowers yet blooming and the campus of Asbury College is still a lovely carpet under trees that are yet green. The sweet voices and the merry laughter of hundreds of students flowing in and out of the class rooms give to this hallowed place that perennial freshness and charm that makes it so tenderly loved by the multiplied thousands of friends scattered throughout this sombre, sin-polluted world. Somehow there comes a feeling that I have missed something, something that I hope my children may enjoy, and that is the privilege of being students in this college, a college where there is simple living and high thinking; where the atmosphere is unsullied by tobacco or profanity; where godliness is so natural that it seems natural to be godly; where there is mirth without lewdness and humor without sarcasm; where scholarship is adorned with beautiful simplicity; where music and science and art and literature conspire to produce holy young men and women of whom it may be truly said "the joy of the Lord is your strength."

GOOD MEETINGS.

My last report was from Mooers, N. Y. From there I went back to Ohio and assisted the pastor of the Methodist Church, Rev. O. W. Robbins, in a gracious revival at Mainville. Between fifty and a hundred sought the Lord either for pardon or purity and a nice class of twenty was received into the Church. After the great tri-conference which Bishop Henderson conducted at Delaware, my companion, James Jones, a former Bible school student, and myself opened in the town hall at Russell, N. Y. This was a most interesting battle. Being the first revival meeting that I ever conducted after definitely entering the evangelistic field I felt that it embodied most of the difficulties that I could possibly strike anywhere. Our names were cast out as evil and there was a persistent indifference on the part of the community as a whole which was beyond anything I ever before experienced. However, the last week light broke upon us from above. We moved the afternoon services into the Baptist Church and the evening services into the Methodist Church. Special men's and women's services were well attended. There were about thirty seekers on the last Sunday, fifteen were baptized by the Methodist Pastor and eleven were taken into the church with more to follow. Since the meeting closed, the pastor, Rev. F. E. Rundell, than whom no evangelist ever worked with a more loyal brother, has completed arrangements whereby the Baptist congregation has united with the Methodists, using their own church once a month and worshipping with the Methodists the balance of the time. We preached old-fashioned, red-hot, full salvation, the Holy Ghost honoring the Word and yet they say "Holiness splits the church!" We are now at the "White" Mission in Ogdens-burg just across the St. Lawrence from Ontario. Some souls are getting to God already. Last Sunday I preached to a good congregation in the splendid M. E. Church of which Dr. Johnson is the able pastor. Tomorrow morning I will be there again. The doors of this church have been hospitably opened to us but we feel that the Mission is God's place for us this time. From here we open the last Sunday in October in the Plattsburgh Methodist Church under the auspices of the Clinton County Holiness Association. This is a great church of nine hundred members and we ask your prayers that definite work may be done for God and holiness.

REPORT.

Our last meeting was held in a tent at Lansing, Mich., with Bro. R. V. Starr, pastor. The meeting lasted ten days, and commenced with a fair attendance. This soon increased until many were compelled to stand without the tent. The spiritual atmosphere was a trifle cool in the beginning, but a real break occurred on Thursday night and continued through till Sunday night. Sixty-three different persons came to the altar on the last Sunday. More than a hundred persons were at the altar during the meetings for either pardon or sanctification.

Mrs. Lytle and two children accompanied us to Lansing and we were royally entertained in the home of Brother and Sister Hurry. We had a delightful time.

We are now with Brother and Sister Ralph Rice at Richland Center, Wis., and are having a great battle. A more loyal praying band we have never seen. We are confident of final victory. We are open for calls.

MISFORTUNE PROVES A BLESSING.

Buddy Jeff Smith, the blind evangelist, began a revival campaign in Pine Bluff, Ark., at the Hawley Memorial Methodist Church last Sunday night. The crowds have so increased that the pastor is debating in his own mind if it will not be wise to move to a larger auditorium.

Buddy Jeff, as he is everywhere called, lost his eyesight at the age of six when cutting a rope from around the neck of his dog—the knife glanced upward striking the right eye which shortly afterwards affected the other eye. But despite this handicap he finished Southern Methodist University at the age of twenty-one.

The ease with which he steps around in the pulpit makes his audience forget that he is without sight. "I had rather be darkened in eyes than never to hear the joybells of heaven," said Bro. Smith. Some people have far-seeing eyes but their heart and soul have never seen the things beyond this world.

The beautiful vocal duets which Bro. Smith and his young bride are rendering to the people have already stirred them to a higher and better life. The experiences which Mrs. Smith underwent in China, as a missionary, have proven a great source of interest to the thousands of Pine Bluff.

Pine Bluff is fortunate to have these two young people in our midst; the throngs that come each evening is a testimony as to the amount of good that is being done. Already fifty names have been given for membership.

Buddy Jeff Smith wishes to announce that he has the first two weeks of November open and the first two weeks of December. He and his wife will be glad to assist anyone in a soul-stirring and soul-saving campaign. He may be reached at 1641 South Adams St., Ft. Worth, Texas. Buddy Jeff Smith is Conference Evangelist for the Little Rock Conference, M. E. Church, South.

IOWA HOLINESS ASSOCIATION.

Monroe County, Iowa, Holiness Association closed their annual tabernacle meeting held again this year at Lovilia, Iowa, Sept. 11-25, 1927, with Rev. F. W. and Mrs. Kittie Suffield, leaders in charge. The first week of the meeting the weather was exceedingly warm, then came rain bringing weather almost too cool for comfort, followed by more rain, especially the last Sabbath. We were expecting a great day, but it rained almost continuously, which kept many people away, but God was there and we had three splendid services. Our evangelists were much appreciated workers. Brother Suffield is one of the strong and true preachers of the old-time gospel. Every message was one of the best, full of searching, convicting truth. Mrs. Suffield is a sweet singer of Israel, backing up her messages in song, by the witness of the Spirit that it was definitely true in her own heart and life.

This County Association feels like going on and pressing the battle for souls until Jesus comes, or until he says it is enough; come up higher.

First, attention was called to the importance of doctrinal preaching, not controversy with reference to the teachings of various Christian denominations, not debate over the non-essentials, not ridicule or sarcastic flings at the dogmas of various denominations and sects of believers, but that every true minister should lay great emphasis on the doctrine of sin, the atonement, the necessity of the new birth, of a clean heart and righteous living; that we can no more build up a denomination of evangelical Christians who preserve and preach the truth, who are salt and light in the world to permeate society with righteousness and illuminate the word with divine truth, without a foundation of clearly stated Bible doctrine, than we can build an enduring skyscraper on a bank of sand.

Second, we suggested that much of the preaching of our times is entirely too general in its character. It is without point and direct force. It is firing in the air rather than shooting at the target. It is not the clear and positive setting forth of great Bible truth. It seems to have no specific object and fails to accomplish the great end of preaching, the saving of sinners and the building up of the saints in the Word of the Lord. We pointed out that the Apostle suggests that Timothy should save himself by the preaching of the great doctrines of the Bible and that others also would be saved; and we believed that a man would be lost in the pulpit by drifting about in an indefinite way with no "Thus saith the Lord" in his heart and on his lips; that if we would keep our own faith and keep the holy fires of divine love burning in our own hearts we must be believers and preachers of divine truth; that we must hold tenaciously to the Word of God and be able to say in all of our ministry, "Thus saith the Lord."

May I suggest to you that you lay these things to heart? I am not for a moment supposing that there is anything new here to you, but your pure mind may be stirred up by remembering these things. May the Lord guide and bless you in all of your work and make you a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth, remembering that there is gracious power in the Word of God; that the Holy Spirit attends the Word of God and makes it a sword to divide and separate the souls of men from sin, bring them to salvation and blessed fellowship with the Holy Trinity. Let me beg you not to be content without seeing souls brought to Christ. Do not permit yourself to conclude that you are simply a pastor, preacher, collector of monies, repairer of parsonages, but that you are sent of God to find his lost sheep and bring them back to the fold. This you can do. This you must do if you would have the divine approval and know one of the sweetest joys that can come to a human soul.

Faithfully, your brother,

ONE OF MY GREAT DESIRES

CHAPTER X.

AN EARNEST WORD TO THE HOLINESS PEOPLE.

For some weeks I have been calling the attention of the readers of this paper to the fact that we have a Theological Seminary at Asbury College. This Seminary has one excellent building, a small loan fund, an excellent faculty and splendid body of students. There is great need for enlarging and making permanent this training school for young preachers.

First, we need a largely increased Loan Fund for the assistance of young men who have been called to the ministry, and who are not able, financially, to enter the seminary. These young men who have received the blessing of entire sanctification and are called to preach ought to receive their theological training from professors who believe in the Bible doctrines of holiness, and will root and ground their students in this faith and carefully instruct them how to preach and teach all the fundamental doctrines of our holy Christianity, and will, above all things, keep burning in their hearts the holy fires of evangelism.

One of the greatest needs of this nation today, is a Theological Seminary in spirit and teaching in harmony with that of the Wesleys and the fathers and founders of early Methodism. We have just such a school in Asbury Theological Seminary. Will not the holiness people of this nation join us to make this seminary a great success? It is absolutely necessary that we have a largely increased Loan Fund by which we shall be able to assist young men who are preparing for the ministry who are not able to meet the expenses of their theological training. Our plan is to lend this money to the young preachers at the low rate of 4 percent, and when they get out into the work pay the money back so it may be loaned to some other young man, thus going on through the years assisting worthy young men in their preparation for the great work of soul winning. We know of no better investment one can make of the Lord's money. The past three summers a number of young preachers have been out holding revival meetings in tents and have had marvelous success. This good work can be increased an hundredfold.

Will not the sanctified people of this nation join with us in raising an adequate Loan Fund for the education of young ministers? Those of you who believe in full redemption from sin, who feel that entire cleansing from sin through Jesus' blood should be preached in all the land, won't you give us a helping hand? We have set Thanksgiving Day for a thankoffering to our Lord Jesus Christ for his marvelous blessings to us. Will you not join us in prayer for this offering on that day? Give something, much or little, on Thanksgiving Day for this Loan Fund for young preachers. Send to H. C. Morrison, care PENTECOSTAL HERALD, Louisville, Ky.

Faithfully your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

IMPERFECT SACRIFICES.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

MANY seekers of holiness or entire sanctification never obtain that experience, not because God is not willing and able to do the work, but they do not bring "the best" they have. Malachi tells us of persons who sought the Lord with earnest, tearful entreaties, but their seeking was only answered with this denunciation: "And this ye have done, covering the altar of the Lord with tears, with weeping and crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more. Ye have wearied the Lord with your words."

We have often heard people who tarried long with seekers at the altar say, "I wonder why they do not believe! Why do they not get through?" Suppose we let the Lord answer their inquiries in words unmistakable: "Because ye offer the lame, and the torn, and the sick. Ye offer polluted bread upon my altar. Cursed be the deceiver which voweth and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing." It is impossible for such seekers to "believe" for sanctification, for to believe—if such a thing were possible under such conditions—would be to make God a liar, for the promise is only to those who "bring all the tithes into the storehouse"—who keep back no part of the price, but who lay their possessions, great or small, upon God's altar. Then we have the assurance that "the altar sanctifieth the gift."

The following taken from Mrs. Palmer, comes in most fittingly here:

"I have occasionally heard with grief, the remark, from persons whom I have regarded as entirely sincere, 'Only believe you have it, and you have got it.' This has been said when there was apparently an entire unfitness in the individual addressed for the reception of such an exhortation.

"The phraseology is not Scriptural, and is liable to a construction wholly unauthorized by the passage of which it claims to be a version. But there are those who fix on some given point, relative to which frequent prayer has been made, and attempts are made in vain to exercise faith; but in fruitlessness of result they have turned despairingly away, conscious that the things desired had not been granted. Such may, on examination, find that they started from a wrong point. The thing desired may have been according to the will of God, but the petitioner may not have possessed the qualifications which entitled him to a hearing."

"A lady, who might by some have been called a star in the fashionable world, was wholly sanctified. About three months before, she had been converted. But, in looking upon her, and observing how light was gradually brought to her mind as she became better able to endure it, I thought of the Savior's words to the disciples—'I have many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now.' Her influence had been considerable, in view of the many who, more recently than herself, had been brought to Christ. And, oh! how I longed that she, in all things, might be an example to believers! She had, by degrees, been parting with her relics of worldliness, till I really hoped she had parted with the last one. That one had given me uneasiness, and I asked her if she would not give it up. 'I will,' said she. Shortly afterward, she came to the social meeting, adorned as a woman professing godliness. 'Have you given up all?' I asked. 'Yes, all,' she replied. She appropriated the promises by faith and was fully saved."

"Listen to God, dear friend: 'We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat who serve the tabernacle.' Is your spirit asking whether it is an 'altar most holy?' sufficient to warrant the expectation that the altar will sanctify the gift which you lay upon it? Let the Holy Spirit answer: 'We are sanctified through the offering of the body of Christ, once for all.' (Heb. 14:14)."

"The ancient altar was sanctified by modes of purification prescribed by the law; and now, 'if the blood of bulls and goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who, through the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God?' Christ speaks: 'For their sakes I sanctify myself, that they may be sanctified through the truth.' (John 17:19). Who can portray the guilt of that unbeliever which prompts the offerer at the Christian's altar to doubt whether, when he lays his offering upon the altar, it will be sanctified?"

The reader will note that I have given right of way to the above quotations as they are much better than anything I could give you of my own thought. We have this challenge to offer anyone who reads these lines who has not yet entered into the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ: Sell out unreservedly to the Lord, count naught that you have as your own, "reckon yourself to be dead indeed unto sin and alive unto God," and the fire which consumed Elijah's sacrifice will as surely consume your offering, and you will know without a doubt that the "Altar sanctifies the gift," for his Word can never fail. "According to your faith, it will be done unto you."

THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE.

W. M. YOUNG, A.M., Sc.D.

EVOLUTION AND MIRACLES.

HE far-reaching implication of evolution as it is commonly taught in colleges and universities are well understood by the students, and because of these implications, the faith of many is shaken.

Now, truth is that which we are after; if the evolutionist has any dynamite that can blast the Rock of Ages, let him produce it. If he has any telescope that can dissolve the Star of Bethlehem, let him bring it out. We are out for eternity, and if the Christian religion be simply an old raft where fares are collected, and that gets us nowhere, why not tear it up? After nineteen centuries of testing, we know that it is perfectly safe to make such a challenge, for the greater the tests, the more durable the Rock of Ages is seen to be, and the more powerful the telescope, the larger and more beautiful the Star of Bethlehem will appear; the heavier the load put upon the raft, the greater its carrying capacity will be seen to be.

A questionnaire was sent out to presidents of universities concerning the teaching of evolution, and many different answers were received; for there is little agreement even among scientific leaders. There seems to be as many interpretations of nature as there are of religion.

PROFESSOR HADLEY ON EVOLUTION.

Ex-President Author T. Hadley, of Yale University, was asked: "Is the scientific doctrine of evolution consistent with the miracles commonly attributed to Christ in the New Testament?" He answered, "Evolution, or orderly growth, is the antithesis of miracles or sudden arrests of natural laws. The development of a belief in evolution, therefore, makes people more critical of the testimony in support of miracles. But beware of assuming that there is any such thing as a scientific doctrine of evolution. Different theories of evolution have been held during the last twenty-five hundred years, and it would be premature to characterize any one of them as a scientific doctrine."

Ex-President Hadley says: "Evolution, or orderly growth, is the antithesis of miracles or sudden arrests of natural laws." In other words, commonly accepted teachings of evolution would eliminate the miracles of the New Testament and the Old. This is a fair statement of prevalent views; and this is why the miraculous element in the Bible is being so severely attacked; but, according to the view of those who accept the Deity of Christ, which includes the overwhelming mass of the Catholic and Protestant religions, the foregoing view repudiates Christ by denying his miracles. It makes him only an erring man; denies a physical resurrection of his body; makes impossible his ascension, for without the miraculous resurrection, he could not ascend; it also makes impossible the "kingdom of heaven," over which he is to be the "eternal King."

From the foregoing, it will be seen how any high school boy or girl can clearly see the far-reaching implications of the ordinary teachings of evolution. Evolution is the basis of the great modern conflict between so-called Fundamentalists and Modernists. It is shaking the faith of thousands concerning the statements of the Bible, and the effects upon the morals of the rising generation must prove immensely disastrous in the years to come; for our civilization is founded in the ethics and faith of Christ.

MIND A DOMINANT POWER.

Mind is a dominant power over force in its various manifestations. Forces are the tools with which mind works to bring to pass its purposes in the world. The relation between mind and force is of supreme importance. Mind is more than mechanical force. There is no genetic relation between any psychological manifestation and the forces of the inorganic world. Feeling, reason, instinct, conscience, self-consciousness, universal love, and all mental powers are entirely beyond the reign of the various manifestations of force in the inorganic world. By controlling the forces of nature man is able to perform what might be called human miracles.

BOTH MAN AND GOD MIRACLE-WORKERS.

There is every evidence that we live in a kind of plastic world where superior wisdom and power of mind can control certain natural laws to produce given results. The great mistake that cosmic evolution makes is its claim that the forces manifested in the inorganic world are the sum total of the forces that exist in the universe, and that, consequently, out of their action or matter sprang all things.

"With humanity in the saddle, with mind everywhere in action, with freedom of the will, there is no predetermined goal for human events, no fixed channel in which history runs. There can be none while man is a free moral agent. The miracles and revelations of the Bible are no more wonderful than the natural processes going on everywhere in nature, but naturalism seeks to eliminate them because she cannot bring them within her processes," says Dr. Fairhurst.

Nature's processes are carried on by perpetual conflict of opposing forces, each acting according to its own methods. Nature does not do her work by harmony of forces, but by conflict, in which the strongest gains the victory.

We are sure of the existence of certain kinds of matter, of some forces in nature, and some psychological phenomena. Chemistry, heat, light, electricity, magnetism, gravitation, are some of the forces that exist. Certain forces do mechanical work on matter, giving it various kinds of motion. Without the action of force the matter of the universe would remain stationary. Forces produce results by acting in conflict with each other, the stronger force overcomes the weaker. In some sense it may be granted that God usually works according to fixed laws, both in the physical world and the spiritual. Some modern writers, however, would put God into a straight-jacket by an improper conception of what law is. Laws in the physical world are simply the methods according to which forces usually produce results. The chemist is certain that, when two volumes of hydrogen and one volume of oxygen are mixed and caused to unite by the introduction of a spark, water will be produced. He is certain that they always unite in the same proportion to form water. Pass a current of electricity through the water, and it may be separated into its two constituent elements—hydrogen and oxygen. The electricity has undone the work of the chemical force by shaking apart the united atoms. It does this according to the laws of electricity. The law of the action of hydrogen and oxygen upon each other, and the law as to the effect of electricity upon water are equally fixed and unchangeable, but one law annihilated another law. Electricity overcame chemistry. Do we mean to say that God is less free than we are? Are we, the creatures, in so large a measure masters of law-abiding forces, and he the Creator, a slave to them? Are the universal powers plastic and usable in our hands, and in his hands stiff and rigid? The whole analogy of human experience suggests that the world is not governed by law; that it is governed by God according to law. He providentially uses, manipulates, and combines his own invariable laws to serve his own eternal purposes.

Oh, what is it, then, that makes the Inner Chamber so powerless? Is it not the deep sinfulness of man, and the aversion of his fallen nature from God, which make the world with its fellowship more attractive than being alone with the Heavenly Father? Is it not that Christians do not believe the Word of God, where that Word declares that "the flesh" which is in them, "is enmity against God," and that they walk too much after "the flesh," so that the Spirit cannot strengthen them for prayer? Is it not that Christians allow themselves to be deprived by Satan of the use of the weapon of prayer, so that they are powerless to overcome him? Oh, the deep sinfulness of man! We have no greater proof of it than this despite that is done to the unspeakable love which has given us the Inner Chamber.

III. The Glorious Grace of Christ Jesus.—Is there, then, no hope of a change? Must it be always thus? Or is there a means of recovery? Thank God! there is.

The Man through whom God has made known to us the message of the Inner Chamber is no other than our Lord Jesus Christ, who saves us from our sins. He is able and willing to deliver us from this sin, and will deliver. He has not undertaken to redeem us from all our other sins, and left us to deal with the sin of prayerlessness in our own strength. No, in this also we may come to him and cry out, "Lord, if thou wilt thou canst make me clean." "Lord, I believe, help thou mine unbelief."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS.
Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

No. 1.

Text. "How much more shall the Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." Luke 11:13.

Story. A little boy went to the altar and was brightly saved and went home happy in Jesus. But the next day he became angry. That night he threw himself down by the altar and burst into tears and said, "Can't Jesus save me, so I won't get mad?"

The leader told him to ask the Holy Spirit to come into his heart and cleanse it with the blood of Jesus, and take out everything that was bad. He asked, and believed the Holy Spirit came. He never got mad any more.

Poem, Prayer.

"Holy Spirit, from on high,
Bend o'er me a pitying eye,
And now cleanse my drooping heart
Bid the power of sin depart,
Now the Savior's blood reveal,
And my broken spirit heal."

No. 2.

Text. "Let your light so shine . . . that they may glorify your Father in heaven." Matt. 5:16.

Story. During the Boxer persecution, in China, a missionary was commanded to lie down and have her head cut off. She did so with no fear or anger. She looked up to the man who had the ax, and smiled. His face changed, he turned and left her. She rose, and the leader said, "You cannot die, you are immortal." Her smile saved her life and the lives of two other missionaries. Afterward, she said, "I did not know I smiled." To smile is to shine for Jesus.

Poem.

"Jesus bids us shine,
With a clean, pure light,
Like a little candle,
Burning in the night,
In this world of darkness, we must shine,

You in your small corner, I in mine."
Prayer. Heavenly Father, keep the sunshine of thy love in my heart and let me show it in my face.

No. 3.

Text. "Comfort one another." 1 Thess. 4:18.

Story. The train was late. A man with a look of intense anguish was walking up and down the platform. A baby girl ran up to him and said, "Man, me solly for oo." She took his hand, walked with him, and talked sweetly to him. The sad look left his face, and when her mother came for her he said, "Your little one has taken all my sorrow away."

Poem.

Through a tiny child, though weak,
God can whisper words of comfort
That no older voice could speak.

Prayer.

Heavenly Father,
"When other helpers fail,
And comforts flee
Thou help of the helpless,
Abide with me
That I to those in pain, Comfort may be."

No. 4.

Text. "Sing unto the Lord, O ye saints." Psa. 30:4.

Story. A friend of mine received a telegram saying her husband had died, in a distant city, and she must come and bury him. That night she lay, in a hotel, beside her two sleeping babies, sobbing bitterly. Suddenly, there was a sound of sweet singing. She opened the window and listened as a strong, sweet voice poured out a song. It soothed her. She slept, and the next day she went home comforted. The song was this:

Poem.

"Be not dismayed, whate'er betide,
God will take care of you,
Beneath his wings of love abide,
God will take care of you.

"No matter what may be the test,
God will take care of you,
Lean, weary one, upon his breast,

Prayer. Heavenly Father, make me a comfort to the sorrowful.

No. 5.

Text. "He ever liveth to make intercession for them." Heb. 7:25.

Story. A father was suffering with a headache and had not been able to get relief through prayer. His little five-year-old boy laid his hand on his head and prayed silently and said, "Papa, is it gone?" "No, dear." He prayed again. The pain did not go. But the moment the little hand touched his forehead the third time the pain left. The father said, "What did you pray the last time?" "I said, Jesus, you pray for papa."

Poem.
"Five bleeding wounds he bears,
Received on Calvary.
They pour effectual prayers
They strongly plead for me."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, help me to remember when there is no one else to pray for me, that Jesus will pray for me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I visited you by paper about six years ago and then a little over a year ago but may need to be introduced again. I don't like to bother with non-essentials and it doesn't matter to you what color of skin, hair, eyes, etc., I have, but will merely say I am twenty years of age and seven of those years I have been living for Jesus. This is my third and I hope last year of teaching school. Not because I dislike it but I expect to go to Asbury College next year and then after sufficient post-graduate training, go to Africa where God wants me to work for him. By the way, Aunt Bettie, I am very eager to actually get on the field and to work, but sometimes I wonder if a Nurse's Training Course increases one's efficiency and opportunities to such an extent that it would be worthwhile to take it before going as a missionary. Please give me your opinion. It may interest you cousins to know that I spent the summer in Kentucky. I was connected with Mount Carmel, the school you have read of in The Herald. I helped in the out-station work—the Lord certainly blessed my soul in that work. I learned many things about absolute trust in God, about some of the wonderful things he does for us when we tarry before him in prayer. Praise his precious name. I found real joy in telling the "old, old story of Jesus' love." Somehow, I think all these Trans-Oceanic Flights, production of the Vitaphone, superspeed cars sink into insignificance when we realize that there are so many persons existing in this world and passing out without ever knowing the sweetness of sins forgiven through the merits of Jesus' blood. And when we realize that many so-called Christians are not seemingly interested in winning souls for Jesus. I think we should all realize more and more that we are saved to serve. Pearl Waldrep and Roy Griffin, what has become of you that you never write any more? Let me hear from you again. I would like to hear from some of you other cousins twenty or twenty-one years old. Letter writing is my favorite pastime. I will look for many letters and try to answer all of them. God bless and keep you and help you all to work for him.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I was glad to see my first letter in print, and hope to see this letter. We went to camp meeting and heard two good sermons. My school began Sept. 12. I have to go two miles to school. I had a good trip down in Oklahoma this summer and saw the big oil fields.

Rt. 3, Kingman, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again. I saw my letter in print and decided to write again. I am the same Illinois girl I was when I wrote last. Most of the cousins do not recognize me, so I will introduce myself by saying I am a girl of eighteen years, completed high school and looking forward to going to college next year. I have light brown hair, brown eyes, fair complexion, weigh 100 pounds and am five feet, two inches tall. I belong to the Nazarene Church. I have a class of eleven small girls, and I enjoy teaching them, but I had rather be taught for I need to learn more of the Bible. I will not take up too much room, so the other cousins may have some. I hope to receive letters from any girls and boys who would like to write to me. Will try and answer all letters received.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wrote one letter to The Herald but I haven't seen it in print. My mother takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I go to the Methodist Church. I was seventeen years old July 4. I have one brother and three sisters. One of my sisters is married.

Edward Morris.
Rt. 3, San Bonito, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Texas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old. I have blue eyes, brown hair, am four feet, eight inches high, and weigh sixty-eight pounds. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My Sunday school teacher is Mrs. Lupton. Our preacher is Rev. H. B. Bay. I have two pets, a dog and a cat.

Murrie Morris.
Rt. 3, San Benito, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: First, I want to thank you for printing my other letter. In it I asked for prayers that I might be sanctified. Now I'm writing to tell you and the cousins that last Sunday morning before breakfast I took God at his word and he sanctified me. Praise his Name! I am so happy! I feel that I cannot thank him enough for what he has done for me. It is wonderful! I enjoy reading The Herald very much, especially the pieces by Dr. Morrison. I received some very interesting and helpful letters from readers of page ten. Would be glad to hear from others if there are any who care to write.

Thelma Williams.
Beebe, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading the letters on page ten and have seen none from Hinsdale, so I thought I would write. How are all the boys and girls? I wish they would write me and say they are Christians. I used to go to the F. M. E. Church in Oak Park, but now that I have moved to Hinsdale I go to the Union Church of Hinsdale. I was out at the camp grounds at Desplaines, Ill., for two Sundays. I heard Bishop Waldors. He preached a wonderful sermon. I enjoyed him immensely. I will be 12 Nov. 14. This is my first letter to The Herald, because we have only taken it a month. I enjoy it very much. When I finish College I want to become a missionary. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with F and ends with S.

Ruth F. Benson.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you and the cousins move over and let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I enjoy reading page ten. I am fifteen years of age. My hair is a light brown, my eyes blue, my complexion fair. I weigh 118 pounds. I go to the Methodist Sunday school. There were so many letters from Kentucky last week I do not feel like a stranger although there are none closer than Harrodsburg. I enjoyed reading the letters from the Pennebaker Home girls. I would like to hear from any of the cousins and I assure you an answer.

Ella May Hill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just been reading some good letters in The Herald. Please let me into your pleasant corner. I especially enjoy page ten. I live on a farm four miles from town. I have to cross one river before I get to town. I go to Sunday school and go to meeting first Sunday of every month. I have brown hair, brown eyes, light complexion, and am four and one-half feet tall, and weigh 90 pounds. I have two brothers. I have one brother dead. I am thirteen years old. My birthday is Feb. 2. I go to school every day and am in the seventh grade. My teacher is Jesus helps me day by day,

In my path of life,
And he helps me win my way
Through this world of strife.

He is ever at my side
When at work or play,
He is there to help and guide
As I go my way.

When sometimes I sin and fall
He always helps me back;

And forgets about my lack.

When sometimes things all go wrong,
I'm very, very sad;
He sends some sunshine in my path
And makes me very glad.

Dr. H. C. Morrison's New Book.

The title of this new book from the pen of its gifted author is not only very suggestive, but runs true to the title to the end. If any one has rejected the glorious doctrine of the pre-millennial coming of our Lord, because he thought it a pessimistic teaching, if he will read Dr. Morrison's new book, unbiased, he will find that the teaching of the pre-millennial coming of Jesus is the most optimistic view of life and the world held by any class of people.

There are some very thrilling, thought-provoking statements made in the last two chapters, and contrary to many books this one reaches its climax in the closing chapters. It is well worth the price, $1.00.

In your last issue your printer makes me say about Rev. R. J. Has-kew, "Six persons united with the church on profession of faith at a previous meeting in March." What I really said was, At our recent meeting in September six persons united with the church on profession of faith. At a previous meeting in March there were forty-six who joined the church. Both meetings were at the same place. F. M. C. Eads, P. C.

SHANGHAI, CHINA.

Recently I was in a room where a Bible class, for our Shanghai defenders was being held. Some statements made as to the first two chapters of Genesis and the creation of the world and the origin of man almost made my hair stand on end. How they did try to explain away the clear teachings of the Word of God! The thought came into my mind that the Chinese teachings could "go them one better" in several respects, and you might like to know what the Chinese say about the creation.

The male and female principles, "yang" and "yin" gave birth to Pan-Ku, the first man, how none knows. Faith must accept that. He had two horns and was a short, stubby fellow; but endowed with the ability to grow. He proceeded to grow. He grew six feet every day and as he lived 18,000 years, you can see how big he got. He, in some way, got possession of an axe and with that he managed to "kai-pih tien di," hew out the universe. This was seemingly out of nothing or at least out of chaos. He was eighteen thousand years doing the work, and in order to complete it all he had to die. His head is said to have become "the mountains, his breath the winds and clouds, his voice the thunder, his limbs the four quarters of the earth, his blood the rivers, his flesh the soil, his beard the constellations, his skin and hair the herbs and trees; his teeth, bones and marrow became the metals, rocks and precious stones, his sweat the rain," and, most suggestive of all to evolutionists! "the insects creeping over his body became human beings!" I hope we are proud of our ancestry! Chinese speak of three kinds of insects that delight in man's "fellowship," the "crawlers, the jumpers, and the smellers." I asked a Chinese to which race he belonged. He said he did not know but that the "foreigners must belong to the crawlers for they are white!" The picture I send shows Pan-Ku and his apron of leaves and his ax. In his hands he holds up the sun (red) and moon. He failed to put them in their proper places and they went away into the Han (sea) and the people were left in darkness. A messenger was sent to ask them to go into the sky and give light. They refused. Pan-Ku was called and at Buddha's direction wrote the character "zeh," sun, in one hand and "yuih," moon, in the other and going to the sea, he stretched out his hands and called the sun and moon repeating a charm devoutly seven times, when they ascended into the sky and gave light day and night. There are many more things told of Pan-Ku; but I cannot tell all in one letter. In the creation he made 51 stories. Of these 33 were for heaven and 18 were for hell below the earth. The heavens were graded for good men and the floors below the earth were for bad men. If one is the very best of all he can go to the 33rd heaven and be worshipped as god. If one be very bad he'll go down to the 18th hell.

Even in 18,000 years the work of creation was not completed; but a cavity was left through which many fell to the bottom. After a long time a koman, Nu-Ku, was born and she took stone and blocked up the hole and so finished the work of creation. They say, though the body of Pan-Ku died, his soul lives and will live forever. Just after the beginning of the Chinese Republic the "Philosophers" said that a revelation had come from heaven saying that the king of the gods had asked Pan-Ku to build a new heaven for him—the thirty-fourth. This was done and the king of gods with his retinue moved into this. How this revelation came is not told.

These are some of the teachings of Chinese Doctors. They teach the children in the schools and insist on the little ones taking all in without a doubt. We teach, not these myths, but the dear old infallible Bible, God's own letter, to our little Brownies and they take it in and it transforms their lives and wins their souls, saving them through faith in the blood of the Lamb slain for all believers. Pray for them.

Yours in Christ's glad service.

Rev. H. G. C. Hallock.

BOUND, BUT FREE.

They put John Bunyan in jail to stop his mouth from preaching. He was just a tinker making an honest living by patching up the broken household utensils of his home town. Uneducated and rough in his way, yet he knew God and by merely putting him behind prison bars his testimony could not be muffled.

A man must have leisure in order to do any great thinking. Great thoughts are the material from which great sermons and books are made. So while John Bunyan lay in Bedford jail he let his mind dwell on the essential meaning of life, and he brought forth a book that has probably never been equalled in its field.

Pilgrim's Progress is a book for the young, old, and middle-aged; a book for the ignorant, the educated, and the great middle classes of average thinkers; a book for the rich, the poor, and all of the rest of us. Thousands have found help and encouragement from its pages. Bunyan plowed into the story, with the point of his pen, fundamental truths that fasten themselves in one's mind in a way that they are not gotten by other means.

Give the children a copy of Pilgrim's Progress to read during the evenings between the time they finish their lessons and go to bed. It will mean much to them in after years when they are out on life's battle-line.

THE DAYS GONE BY.

Rev. Walter E. Isenhour.

You may regret the days gone by,
And o'er them weep and mourn and sigh;
And still with all your sad regret
You've never called one back as yet.

If God has pardoned all your sin,
And Jesus Christ's enthroned within,
Look up and thank him from your heart,
Then live henceforth to do your part.

The past is gone, and gone to stay,
Regret it as you will and may;
You cannot live it o'er again,
So why repeat your sad refrain?

The present now is yours to own,
And with great privileges is sown;
Then grasp them as a precious gem,
And make the world a better realm.

Just live to bless as best you can
The lives of all your fellowman
With whom you fellowship and deal,
Till they your godliness shall feel.

Look up to him in whom we live,
Who unto all will freely give
His goodness, mercy, grace and love
From his great treasure-house above.

Seek to impart as you receive
That which will hearts and souls relieve
Of sin and sickness, pain and sorrow,
Both today and on tomorrow.

Make of the best your future years
Whate'er they be of joy and tears;
Go bearing precious seed along
And sow them with a prayer and song.

If you will always give your best,
Although with wealth you're not possessed,
Remember, in a blessed way,
It will return to you some day.

Oh, love and lift and pray and smile,
And brighten every weary mile,
For pilgrim feet to travel o'er
From earth to heaven's blissful shore!

Waste not your time o'er misspent years;
Let Jesus banish all your fears;
Live now to do his will divine,
And peace will be forever mine.

Our Lord has set for us a goal,
And if we reach it with our soul Kept pure and clean from sin and strife,
He'll give to us a "crown of life."

Then let us run with patience true
This solemn race of life clear through,
And when we reach the heavenly shore
We'll sing with angels evermore.

New Books for Preachers

FAMILIAR FAILURES.

By Rev. Clovis Chappell, D.D. Author of Sermons on Biblical Characters.

With that rare ability for character analysis which has distinguished his other books on Bible characters, Dr. Chappell here depicts the Idler, the Slave of the Second Best, the Distant Disciple, the Successful Failure, and other types of men who in Bible times and in our own day have made a failure of the business of life. He presents the person and the type engagingly, shows the factors operative in each failure, and how dangerously common to all are the mistakes of each. The book is an excellent addition to that fine series of character studies which has given the author a wide and alert audience.

THINKING THROUGH THE SCRIPTURES.

By William Parker White, M.A., D.D. Member of Extension Department of the Moody Bible Institute.

A brief syllabus of the Bible by books, written by a man of wide practical experience in teaching the Scriptures. It is designed to provoke individual Bible study as well as to afford a standard conservative textbook for Sunday school teaching courses. By dividing the books of the Bible up into eight groups and placing questions of great pertinence after each group, the author accomplishes a plan which will prove immensely helpful to the reader in private devotions and to the group bent upon a fuller understanding and appreciation of the divine message.

THE CHRISTIANITY OF THE

EPISTLES. By Arthur W. Robinson, D.D.

In a lively, readable style, and with a profound interest in the historical, Canon Robinson gives the gist of each Epistle, the circumstances which led to its writing, and the heart of the message it contains for the modern mind. The book will prove surprisingly informing and inspiring to youth, and to all those who would understand the Epistles, and their relation to the Christian life of ancient days and modern times.

THE PROPHETS OF THE OLD

TESTAMENT. By Alexander R. Gordon, D.D.

Ever since this book was first issued its worth has been amply attested in England, Canada and America. It is at once delightful and profound, combining the results of wide research and authoritative scholarship with the attractiveness of poetic expression. Dr. Gordon discusses the purposes and messages of the Prophets, but he devotes particular attention to the character of the Prophets. The book serves well to instruct the reader in matters of Biblical history and to inspire him by contact with the outstanding leaders of Israel's history.

REPRESENTATIVE CHURCHMEN OF TWENTY CENTURIES.

A Cross-section of Christian History and Endeavor. By Hugh Watt, D.D.

Beginning in the first century with Paul this book traces Christianity through the ages. For each century the author picks out one man; the one who stands out above all in his time. Anyone who longs for a short biographical sketch of such men as Constantine, Augustine, Charlemagne, Francis of Assisi, and many others, will particularly appreciate this book for it makes possible a general knowledge of all these men without having to dig through hundreds of volumes.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson VII.—November 13, 1927.

Subject.—Hosea Preaches God's Love. Hosea 11:1-4, 8, 9; 14:4-8.

Golden Text.—For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings. Hosea 6:6.

Time.—About B. C. 785.

Place.—No special place is mentioned; but Hosea was a prophet to the kingdom of Israel.

Introduction.—I confess some difficulty in getting this lesson before my readers. Our subject is, "Hosea Preaches God's Love"; but as we read the entire book, we find him to be one of the severest of all the minor prophets. He denounces the sins of his people in fearful terms, but tempers his message with promises of the abundant mercies of God, if Israel would repent. Most of his message was delivered to the kingdom of Samaria; but ever and anon he has a word for the kingdom of Judah. Israel would go into Assyrian captivity, with no promise of ever returning; but Judah would be carried away into Babylonian captivity, from which some day they would be delivered. With bitterness he tells Israel of her idols at Dan, Bethel, Samaria, Gilgal, Sichem, Beer-sheba, on Tabor's heights and upon the mountains of Gilgal. Their sins were crying to Heaven for vengeance; but still Jehovah would be merciful, if Israel would repent. His declaration of God's love is made all the stronger by his terrible portrayal of the sins of the people.

It is quite impossible for us to obtain a clear knowledge of the first verse in Hosea's prophecy. The record says: "The word of the Lord that came unto Hosea, the son of Beeri, in the day of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel." If we are to take this literally, Hosea prophesied over a period of more than a hundred years. Besides, it seems a bit strange, that while he belonged to the kingdom of Israel over which Jeroboam the second reigned, his prophecy should be dated under the reigns of four kings of Judah. Dr. Adam Clarke thinks that the book should begin at the second verse: "The beginning of the word of the Lord by Hosea"; and that the introduction contained in the first verse is an interpolation. If we take that view of it, the difficulty disappears. There is no doubt that Hosea prophesied towards the end of Jeroboam's reign, but the length of time is involved in some obscurity.

The account of the prophet's marriage given in the first chapter is terrible, because it is a picture of Israel. He was to take a wife of whoredoms; "for the land hath committed great whoredom, in departing from the Lord." Although Gomér, the wife taken, had reformed, because of her previous lewdness her very children would be accursed. Look at their names: Jezreel, God will disperse; Lo-ruhamah, without mercy; Lo-ammi, not my people. This was direful for the kingdom of Israel; but just here Hosea injects a glorious promise for Judah: "But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the Lord their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen." Their salvation was to come through Jesus Christ who was to be born of the tribe of Judah. But the future of Israel was pictured by the prophet's foul marriage with Gomér, and the depravity and curse of the offspring. It is hard to stop the ravages of sin.

In some passages the pathos of the prophet is fine. After berating Ephraim for her terrible sins, he represents Jehovah as crying: "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? How shall I deliver thee, Israel? . . . Mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together. I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger, I will not return to destroy Ephraim: for I am God, and not man; the Holy One in the midst of thee." Again Jehovah cries: "O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; but in me is thine help." But we desist. The contrasts between the prophet's denunciations of sin and Jehovah's wooing, bewildering love grow sublime on every page.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. When Israel was a child.—When the nation was yet young. Then I loved him.—From their earliest days the seed of Abraham had been the object of Jehovah's peculiar love. And called my son out of Egypt.—When they were brought out of Egyptian slavery by Moses. This verse is especially interesting, because Israel is here made a type of Jesus Christ. In Matthew 2:15 we have these words from Hosea, "Out of Egypt have I called my Son," quoted as applying to the call of Jesus out of Egypt after the death of king Herod, in order that the words spoken of the Lord by the prophet might be fulfilled.

2. As they called them, so they went from them.—These words are very obscure. I find no satisfactory explanation of them, unless we make them refer to the idolatry of the people: "They sacrifice unto Baalim, and burned incense to graven images."

3. I taught Ephraim also to go, taking them by their arms.—This is a reference to a mother teaching her baby to walk; and like a babe, they were too ignorant to know that their healing came from God.

4. The figures in this verse are so completely different, that it might well have been divided into two verses. The first part represents Jehovah leading Israel by a string as mothers often lead their little ones when teaching them to walk alone. The second half represents him as a plowman pulling forward the yoke or collar from the shoulders of his oxen, that the cool air may circulate over the hot surface to prevent scalding; and then giving the tired animals a bite of food to encourage them. The picture is beautiful, displaying Jehovah's kindness to his people.

8. How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? How shall I deliver thee, Israel?—Read the intervening verses, and see how Jehovah admonishes them for their sins. Then read chapter 6:4. God is speaking as a man. His heart is turned within him. When the people sinned, Justice called for punishment but when they repented, Mercy demanded forgiveness. Jehovah represents himself as being "in a strait betwixt two," as St. Paul puts it. Re-

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. Russell E. Heiney, Thompsonville, Ill., wishes to get in touch with an evangelist who is full of fire, saved and sanctified, has had experience with young people, who will come to him for a freewill offering. Anyone interested may address Rev. Heiney as above.

Rev. Harry Webb is assisting in a revival at Liberty Church, located about four miles from Klemme, Ia. It is the first revival they have had for six years, and it is desired that the readers of The Herald pray for this meeting that God may save many souls.

Rev. Ural T. Hollenback has changed his address from Indiana to 400 F Ave., Cedar Rapids, Ia.

The East Allegheny M. E. Church will hold its Holiness Convention, Nov. 5 to 13, inclusive. Rev. O. G. Mingledorff, D.D., Hammell Shipp, Md., Edward Sheldon, Md., Howard Shipp, Princeton student, will be the workers, with the music in charge of Thomas and Ethel Eden. Preaching will be on Sunday at 10:30, 3:45 and 8:00 o'clock, and through the week at 2:30 and 7:30. Take a Frankford L going east on Market, get off at Allegheny Ave., and walk east two blocks to the church. For information, write Harry Wiest, 3210 Oxford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Prof. C. C. Crammond, song leader, and Margaret Crammond, evangelist, have an open date the first two weeks in December. Write or wire, 815 Allegan St., Lansing, Mich.

The author of "Science and Religion, or Evolution Unmasked" has mastered the facts and principles involved in the world-wide controversy on this vital subject. In the fewest words but by cogent reasoning Mr. Cooke has penetrated to the core of this mysterious problem. He has clearly proven that the boasted theory of Evolution is a foolish humbug. Christian theologians should not be deceived or frightened by it. A careful reading of the book is a tonic to faith. Every Christian minister should have the book. Students who are perplexed by the conflicting theories of modern scholarship would be set on the right track of thought by mastering the contents of this able essay.

THE ANVIL OF GOD'S WORD.

Last eve I paused beside a blacksmith's door,
And heard the anvil ring the vesper chime;
Then looking in, I saw upon the floor,
Old hammers worn with beating years of time.

"How many anvils have you had," said I,
"To wear and batter all these hammers so?"

"Just one," said he, and then with twinkling eye,
"The anvil wears the hammers out, you know."

"And so," I thought, "The Anvil of God's Word
For ages skeptic blows have beat upon,
Yet, though the noise of falling blows was heard,
The Anvil is unharmed, the hammers GONE."

Every Christian wants to know how to be a better soul winner. Dr. Scarborough has given us a fine study of the methods of Jesus in this great task in his book, "How Jesus Won Men." It sells for $2.00. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

TWO SPECIALS FOR NOVEMBER ONLY

SPECIAL NO. 1.

By chance we secured a few hundred copies of the Precious Promise Bible, which is sold exclusively through agents at a net retail price of $7.75. The publishers of this special Bible have refused to sell us any more, hence we are closing out what we have left of this edition, during the month of November only, at the very special price of $4.50, postpaid, or with the patent thumb index for $5.00.

This Bible would make a wonderfully attractive gift to most any one, as all of God's promises (which comprise about one-tenth of the entire Bible) are underscored and indexed.

There are possibly 50 references to "Worry," more than 250 references to "Victory over troubles;" over 200 references as to "The prosperity of the upright"—nearly 2,000 promises in all on various subjects. Besides, this Bible contains an encyclopedic concordance, which is a concordance and dictionary and encyclopedia combined.

It is the King James Version, large clear long primer type, is self-pronouncing, 40,000 references, bound in genuine leather with overlapping edges, extra fine thin Bible paper, chapter headings in figures, red under gold edges, size 5 1/2 x 8 x 1 1/2 inches thick. It is really a wonderful Bible, a beautiful book, and is well worth the agent's price of 7.75, but you can buy one or more of them, while they last, during this month, at the prices mentioned above, postpaid.

SPECIAL NO. 2.

One of the large motto manufacturers went out of business recently, and we bought a very large quantity of some of the most popular styles. We are offering them to you during the month of November, while they last, at the rate of three for $1.00, postpaid, or 10 for $2.50, postpaid. The following titles are the ones offered in this November sale:

No. 4014. Size 10x13. 50c.

A Prayer for Our Home. That Thine eyes may be upon this house day and night.

No. 4018. Size 10x13 inches. 50c.

Christ is the Head of this House, the Unseen Guest at every meal, the Silent Listener to every conversation.

No. 4003—Rules For Today.

A Motto that will command attention at once, and stimulate one to live as a Christian should.
Size 10x13 inches. 40c.

No. 4008. Size 10x18 inches. 50c.

Be ye kind, tenderhearted, forgiving others as God forgave you.

No. 4011—The Ten Commandments

No. 4010—The Twenty-third Psalm

Familiar Failures

REV. CLOVIS G. CHAPPELL, D.D.

Applying that same fine ability for analysis which has distinguished his other volumes, Dr. Chappell in this book turns his attention to 'The Drifter, The Trifler, the man who is too busy, and other well-known types who make a failure of the business of life. He presents the type in a most engaging manner, and then shows the factors operative in each individual failure. An excellent addition to the fine series of character studies which have already given Dr. Chappell a wide and alert audience.

THE FASHIONS OF THE WORLD.

By The Editor.

IN speaking of the fashions of the world, we have in mind the customs, pleasures, dress, pastimes and rounds of enjoyments of that unregenerated mass of humanity, that vast aggregation of human beings who are in rebellion against God, who trample upon his commandments, reject the Christ who has offered them salvation, who live in sin, who delude and entertain themselves on their way to death and judgment with those things which bring them a degree of amusement and pastime as they hurry forward unprepared to eternity.

Just at this time there is no one thing in which the worldly spirit asserts itself more constantly and more objectionably to the Lord's people than in the matter of indecent and suggestive dress. There has not been a time in the history of this nation when dress has reached such a high tide of extravagance and immodesty as at the present time. It is singular that the Church of God should permit a godless, extravagant and immodest world to dictate to it in the matter of dress.

* * *

No person can enter Heaven without Holiness, and no holy man or woman can be fashioned in the sense that they pattern after the vanity and indecency that characterize our times in the matter of dress. We are sometimes surprised and grieved to see mothers who are supposed to be Christians, intelligent and God-fearing, surrendering to the fashions and dressing their daughters with the indecency that once was entirely relegated to fallen and outcast women. Not infrequently we find women claiming a high state of grace and, at the same time, dressing in extreme, fashionable and extravagant manner, not only so, but certainly at least suggestive of immodesty.

* * *

We have been surprised and grieved the past few summers at the number of women attending the holiness camp meetings who were dressed more like the denizens of places of shame rather than devout Christians cleansed from sin and filled with the Holy Ghost. For one, I do not believe that any sanctified woman can keep peace with Christ, the comfort and witness of the Holy Ghost in her heart, and at the same time undertake to keep up with the present-day indecent fashions. I find some preachers who seem to think that dress is too small a matter to be discussed in their messages to the people. Nothing is too small that involves decency, modesty and a proper adjustment to the will of God and the good taste of high-toned Christian society. I very well understand that this is a large and difficult problem, nevertheless, faithful men and women must give a word of warning, leave the issues with God and hope that there may come back to the world the spirit of true modesty and reverence for God and the human body.

Arizona Annual Conference.

IN response to the kind invitation of Bishop Hay and Rev. J. C. McPheeters, pastor of the University M. E. Church, South, I came to Tucson, Arizona, to preach at the session of the annual conference. This is a young, but aggressive and growing annual conference. For the past four months Bishop Hay, accompanied by his wife, has traveled over this great western field visiting the brethren, preaching in the churches and becoming most intimately acquainted with this vast field and its needs.

This is Bishop Hay's second year in this episcopal district and much of that time has been spent on the Coast; four months prior to this conference the Bishop and his wife had not seen their home. That is real episcopal supervision. Bishop and his wife are in great favor with the people.

Among other things Bishop Hay said was: "Brethren, see your presiding elders and talk with them freely. Come to see me, if there are any matters you wish to lay before me before the appointments are made. I am your brother and will be glad to confer with you."

Before reading the appointments the Bishop said, "I wish to say I have made just as few changes as possible. I do not believe in this constant changing of preachers. It takes time for a preacher to acquaint himself with the people and their needs, and lay out a program to do constructive work. I believe in the preachers staying on their charges and building them up."

It was a great pleasure to meet Brother Crutchfield, who was pastor of my people some years ago at Perryville, Ky. He is doing fine work out here. Brother Stump, an Asbury boy of a few years ago, is located on the Mexican border and doing great work among the Mexican people. We had some good fellowship together. He hopes to come with his wife to Asbury Commencement next May.

The preachers and people gave me a wonderfully warm welcome and a good hearing. I preached twice each day, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 7:30 in the evening. The Bishop who wanted the conference permeated with an evangelistic atmosphere, had me preach Sunday morning and evening the closing day of the conference. We had a gracious time. The first sermon I preached a woman came up to me and said I received her into the church at Danville, Ky., when she was a little girl.

On Saturday the Epworth Leaguers came from all over the conference in their automobiles and on trains for a big rally on Saturday evening. They had their meeting at 6, with much speaking and hand-clapping and a good time. They gave me a great audience to preach to at the evening service. I never saw a finer body of young Methodists.

During the conference we went out to the laying of the foundation of a great Southern Methodist Hospital, located in Tucson. This is said to be one of the healthiest spots on the globe; high, dry, and almost constant sunshine the entire year, with delightfully cool nights. People suffering with T. B. come here from all about the nation and foreign countries. The cures are many and wonderful. The church was most fortunate in selecting this spot for the erection of a hospital. Five years ago Southern Methodism had nothing in this city, no members, no buildings; now she has a hospital valued at $150,000, a University Church where the conference was held, costing $80,000, with a membership of 750. During the conference year just closed, 215 new members were added to the roll.

Rev. J. C. McPheeters, the remarkable young pastor, has served four years and the Bishop returned him for the fifth year. McPheeters is a product of Meridian College at its high tide, when Joseph Smith, John Paul, and Dr. Harrison were teaching the preachers what to believe and how to think and what to preach. He is a true Wesleyan in experience and message. He takes his Bible, goes into the homes of the people, explains, exhorts, prays and gets people saved. He has been assisted in revivals by those two excellent evangelists, Bridgers and Coale. His church is located within two blocks of the State University and he attracts the young people to his services.

This conference has thirty-five or forty preachers, and I think there were only six or seven changes. My soul was blessed in the ministry of the word and in fellowship with the brethren. If you want to know something of the hospital at Tucson, write Rev. J. C. McPheeters and he will put you in touch with those who will give you full information. May God graciously bless the preachers and people of this Arizona Conference.

BATTLE FIELDS AND BATTLE AXES.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

HE past few days have been spent in the region of our old battlefields; today we passed the little town on the Marne and near the exact point where our Regiment—the 38th of the Third Division—had that terrific battle of July 14, 15, 1918, where we were under the most frightful bombardment for ten hours, and where for quite a while we were surrounded by the enemy and it looked very much like a case of some of us being captured and carried off prisoners into Germany, but fortunately our lines held and we were delivered. I have often used that text in Psalm 140:7 as being very significant in my experience: "Thou hast covered my head in the day of battle."

Sunday, Sep. 25th, we spent in Chateau Thierry. What a difference between this past Sunday and Sunday, July 14, 1918! Chateau Thierry was one of the great war centers on the American front. We held the Bridge head there from June till we were moved on to St. Mihiel and the Argonne. The marks of war are not seen here at Chateau Thierry in the way they are seen at Rheims. To a large extent Chateau Thierry has recovered from her wounds and new buildings are to be seen everywhere.

We attended church in the morning in the beautiful new Eglise Reformed Church (Protestant). This church has been erected by American friends of the Reformed Church and is beautifully equipped in every way. The service was in French but we enjoyed it and felt it was good to be there. We really found it easier to sing in French than to speak it. The sermon was based on Galatians 5:9, 10. We sat with Dr. Wadsworth and his workers of the Methodist Memorial of Chateau Thierry. This is a unique piece of work which Dr. Wadsworth, of New England Conference, developed as a result of his war work and welfare work in France. It is a beautiful Memorial also to the American spirit and ideals and no American in Europe has put over a finer piece of welfare and community work than Dr. Wadsworth has done. Chateau Thierry is only about twenty-five miles from Paris and any of my readers who should go to France must not fail to visit this unique institution.

Right across from the Methodist Memorial, and close to the new bridge which takes the place of the one our troops had to destroy in June, 1918, so as to cut off the enemy from crossing the Marne, is the Monument of the Third Division. In the afternoon we went over to the American Cemetery at Belleau Woods where over two thousand of our soldiers lie buried. It was a beautiful afternoon and the cemetery with its wonderful green field and its 2,000 white crosses looked more a thing of beauty than a place of bereavement. The U. S. A. Army certainly takes the most exquisite care of its sleeping soldiers. Every grave is marked with the name and rank of the soldier dead. I was greatly surprised though, to find so many crosses bearing the simple mark. "Unknown U. S. Soldier." Many boys could not be identified, and had to be buried as "unknown." On some of the graves were fresh flowers and wreaths indicating that some friends had recently visited the resting place of some beloved soldier boy. The grave of Quentin Roosevelt lies by itself in the field where he fell. It seems to have been the wish of Mr. Roosevelt that his son should lie just where he fell. The Germans first gave him a military funeral, afterwards he was removed to a permanent grave and vault and a beautiful monument marks his resting place.

Coming back again to Chateau Thierry we put up at a hotel which was a wreck during the war. It is now a splendid hostelry carried on by an English lady. Right close to the Bridge on one of the important streets of Chateau Thierry there is an ancient statue to Fontaine erected in the reign of Louis XV. During the bombarding of the city the statue got hit and one of the knees of Fontaine was hit by a shell. As we looked at that we thought how often it is that the Devil's artillery hits many a believer in the knee and he loses out in his prayer life.

After Chateau Thierry we visited Rheims, the city which of all cities along the Marne, bears the most cruel marks of savage war. It was pitiable to behold the devastations wrought by the enemy in this great ancient city. The Rheims Cathedral is unquestionably one of the most famous of all cathedrals. It is pathetic to see the havoc wrought to that edifice. It is a poem in stone, shattered, battered, torn and mutilated. Its wonderful windows of priceless value were smashed and crashed and ruined. Its exquisite carvings are as if some terrible bludgeon in the hands of a monster of gigantic strength had gone over them to demolish and destroy. There is little wonder that all the world felt the pain when Rheims was mutilated and destroyed. This famous cathedral is one of the most historic buildings on the Continent. It was here that all the Kings of France were crowned, and it was here that Joan of Arc consummated her great work of deliverance when she assisted at the coronation of the dauphin, King Charles the Fifth. The story goes that after he had been crowned that Joan of Arc fell at his feet and said, "And now, O king, the will of God has been accomplished. Let me now return to my father's house and to my flocks." But the king said, "No, no, there are other battles to be fought and victory won." Joan went into another battle, then to be captured and eventually burned at Rouen.

In the Pantheon of Paris I looked at four wonderful paintings setting forth Joan of Arc's matchless career. Picture 1, Joan attending the flocks and hearing the voice of God. Picture 2, Joan riding her white horse going forth to meet the king and join the army. Picture 3, Joan at the Battle of Orleans, where she won a great victory over the English. Picture 4, Joan of Arc being burned at the stake in Rouen.

It is lamentable to think that when Joan of Arc was in prison, falsely accused, and condemned to die, that the king whom she saved and eventually had crowned at Rheims, never lifted his little finger to help her. How different was the great heart of King George, the present King of Great Britain, of whom the following incident speaks—it happened during the war.

A soldier shot through the spine lay dying. Daily his wife and seven children visited him and the trained nurses could scarce endure unmoved the air of patient yet hopeless misery they bore as they stood around the bed. As the end approached the doctor asked him if there was anything he wished particularly.

"Yes," he replied. "The day I was wounded I was recommended for the Distinguished Conduct Medal. I would like to get it so that I can give it to my wife before I 'go west.'"

It was evening and the doctor then wrote the request to the King detailing the circumstances. The letter was sent by special messenger to Buckingham Palace. Within the hour came back a message: "His Majesty the King will be in attendance at the hospital early tomorrow morning."

The wife and children were advised to arrive in time and early next morning the King came. In silence that could be felt he walked down the long ward until he came to the bed.

Speaking so that all could hear, the King said that the spirit shown by this man was of the kind that was needed in the land. He had come to give this well-earned reward with his own hands, and it was an honor to himself to pin the medal upon the soldier's breast.

The silence broke. The doctor and the nurse and patient, pain-wracked men in the other beds wept undisguisedly. Only one did not weep. He had on his face an expression as of one who sees visions and dreams—a look which never left him until on the midnight following he passed away.

This, adds Mr. Hope, is a true story and a noble one. It was told by one who had seen men and cities, agony and death in all parts of the world, a great physician who is no sentimentalist at all and yet was not ashamed to confess that in that hour he also shed tears with the rest.

Speaking again of Rheims it is simply marvelous how the city is being rebuilt. Certain sections of the city are absolutely new. We drove through a beautiful new section where every building, even the church and schoolhouse, were all built of a style of architecture to make the whole thing look picturesque and poetical and beautiful and the flowers so richly cultivated in all the front yards made a picture of beauty and sweetness.

After Rheims we came into Verdun that city which stood the most continuous and persistent bombardment of any city in the whole history of the war. It was here the French showed the endurance and resistance which marks them for all time as the greatest soldiers of the World War. It is in this section they lost men by the thousand but they saved this one of France's important bulwarks. Close to here also is the Argonne where we lost most of our men, and where 14,000 lie buried in the American Cemetery at Romagne near Montfaucon.

Wherever we go we see monuments dedicated to soldiers and heroes and country. Writing of this one has said:

"Nobody has counted, probably, all the memorial monuments growing out of the World War that have been erected in France, but the principal ones number a score. In addition to them there are numerous markers put up by post-war divisional associations, indicating the spots at which they went into their most formidable engagements. The Second and the Fifth have done most of this type of memorial work."

"The American Battle Monuments Commission, headed by General Pershing, created to supervise and control the erection of monuments throughout France so that a semblance of propriety in their sizes and prominence might be maintained, has viewed the territory in which American troops fought and decided on a program, the preliminary steps of which have been taken. Roundly a dozen monuments, along with some commemorative tablets, are planned, according to the commission's report, to be put up at storm centers of the American front such as Blanc Mont Ridge, Montfaucon, Montsec, etc."

In our Revival Issue that will come out the last week in November, Dr. Wimberly has an article on "A Revival—The Paramount Need," in which he deals with the various kinds of revivals; he also gives seven reasons why a revival is the crying need of the hour. If you wish to create an interest in your community concerning a revival of true religion, send for a supply of this Special Number and scatter them broadcast over the community. Some Signs of Our Lord's Near Coming.

Rev. L. L. Pickett.

No. I.

I am often asked what I think may be considered special signs that indicate the near Coming of the Lord. There are many of these signs. None of them indicate the exact time of our Lord's return, but many point to its near approach. I might dwell on a number of scriptural signs such as, intense wickedness and criminality among all nations. The Master told us that the world at the time of his return would be as it was in the days of Noah, and the days of Lot. Those were times of lawlessness, criminality, moral and spiritual decay. They may be seen now on every hand.

We might also refer to the increased missionary activity of the present generation. It is remarkable that these two conditions coincide. Universal wickedness and widespread apostasy on the one side, while to offset this we discover the greatest missionary activity since the days of the Apostles. It seems remarkably strange that the increase of missionary work should be seen at the same time of universal wickedness and widespread apostasy, even in the church. But Jesus told us in a single breath that both these conditions would prevail in the end-time. He said, "Because iniquity shall abound, the love of the many (the masses), shall wax cold," . . . and then immediately added, "And this gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations; then shall the end come." (Matt. 24:12, 14). Who but the All-wise would have been able to foresee this juxtaposition of intense wickedness and well-nigh universal activity in missionary service. It is a characteristic of no other time save the time of the End.

I could point out the marvelous inventions of our age by which men travel everywhere, and knowledge is greatly increased. This is specifically named by Daniel as a feature of the End. It is really a remarkable sign of the age in which we live, as that in which the rulership of the Gentiles shall terminate. It foretells the near-coming of Earth's righteous King, our Lord Jesus.

The Holiness Movement is also given by the same prophet as a sign of our Lord's near-coming. The prophet said, "Go thy way, Daniel: For the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall be purified, (sanctified, made holy), and made white and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." (Dan. 12:9, 10). This is a very clear and manifest sign of the Times. The Holiness Movement began under the Wesleys and began to take on a more intense and interdenominational character, some forty to fifty years ago. It is now known, to a greater or less extent, around the world wherever the gospel is preached. Its lovers, professors and friends are increasing, and may be literally counted by millions in many lands and languages.

Let the reader observe also, that "the wise," the students of the Bible and lovers of dispensational truth are aware of the glorious fact of our Lord's soon coming. But "the Wicked," both in the church and out, are utterly indifferent to the great pre-millennial truth. As a result, they cannot read the signs of the Times or understand the finger-prints of prophecy. But men and women of consecration and of a prevailing faith are accepting the prophetic delineation of a great and important truth that our Lord draweth nigh. Numerous prophecies might be pointed out similar to those I have given. Each is in itself, a strong sign of the Glorious Truth of which we have spoken.

But I wish to add a remarkable passage from the words of our Lord. He is speaking concerning the Jews, and gives utterance to the following words: "They shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: And Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled." Reader, have you thought what that expression, "the times of the Gentiles" means? It has no reference to salvation; does not put upon them a limitation to grace, but refers to their governing of the world. The times of the Gentiles began in the days of Daniel under Nebuchadnezzar, the great old Babylonian monarch, who overthrew the Jews' government, and brought them into subjection to his own authority. At that period the Jewish Dominion, their government, came to an end, and the rulership of the world by Divine Appointment, passed to the Gentiles. Thenceforth, till the return of our Lord, the world has known and will know no Israelitish King or Queen. The Gentiles fell heir to the rulership of the world, while the Jews lost all kingly authority, and national life and existence. This will continue until our Lord's glorious return. He will set up a kingdom of power and authority over all the earth. The apostle James calls this a rebuilding of the tabernacle of David "which is fallen down." (Acts 15:15, 16). This tabernacle has not yet then been rebuilt; it still remains "fallen"; but the time of its rebuilding draweth very near. Any student of present day conditions in Palestine can readily see that the Gentile "treading-down" of Jerusalem is already at the point of termination.

Since the days of dominion passed from the Jews to the Gentiles through the victories of Nebuchadnezzar, the Israelites have been oppressed, persecuted and trodden underfoot in the order named, by the Pagans, the Papist, and the Moslems? The last of these persecutors have been the Mohammedans. For centuries they have made life miserable for the Jews in Palestine, the land of their fathers. But the power of the Turk is now broken in Palestine. The land which was given by title deed from God to the descendants of Israel, has but recently passed under the control of Great Britain, one of the mightiest governments of the world, and they are among the best of friends of the children of Israel. They do not oppress the Jewish people, but rather defend and befriend them. They are beginning the restoration of Palestine. When they took over the control of that country, their first move was to appoint Sir Samuel Isaac, a Jew, as its governor. And the rejuvenation of Palestine has been steadily progressing. Since the heel of the tyrant has been lifted we see the blossoming of the fig tree, and know that the spring is dawning for the descendants of Father Abraham.

My reader may not have noticed that chemical analysis has shown that the waters of the Dead Sea are equivalent to a marvelous gold-mine. Some of the greatest scientists of the world, under the direction of the British Government, have reported chemical values in that marvelous inland sea of greater estimated values than the supposed valuation of the entire United States. These chemists report that the fertilizer and other chemical values held in liquid form in this peculiar body of water exceed $1,200,000,000. Did you notice, reader, that I did not say millions; I said billions. Those fertilizers can make the whole of Palestine like the garden of Eden, and reduce the cost to the farmers of the world by one-half. Palestine, will as in former times, become like the "Garden of Eden." And this was prophesied by Ezekiel (36:34, 35). The Jews under this Zionist Movement are already returning to their ancient land, and under their progressive leaders and great industry, will become the greatest of nations in a short time. Jesus will make Jerusalem under his own direction, the capital of the world. And then the desert "shall blossom as the rose." Isaiah foretold this when he said, "The ransomed of the Lord shall return, and shall come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." (Isaiah 35:10).

RED SUNSETS.

BY R. H. BENNETT.

READERS of Dan Crawford's "Thinking Black" will recall the chapter "Red Sunsets." Crawford says, "King Chona lay dying in Africa. Being a king he must not pass out alone. It would be unkingly. So from the moment he breathed his last breath, human blood began to flow. Every footstep of those who bore the corpse was over ground sodden with blood. The body was lowered into a grave aglow with the same crimson flood. And then all was over and the king was buried, the grave was moulded over with plaster made of earth and not water, but human blood."

We are burying King Alcohol in America, and it looks like his misguided followers are determined that he shall have a similar interment. Well-nigh every morning's paper tells of men slain for enforcing the Constitution of the United States. A faithful police officer is murdered in Atlanta because he holds his oath sacred to obey the law and keep his trust. An Ohio editor is assassinated in his own yard because he tries to purify polluted politics and divorce the city government from a foul crime ring. A Kentucky preacher is shot dead in his pulpit while leading a hymn (strangely enough entitled, "When the roll is called up yonder, I'll be there") because he preached against the vile crime of making and selling intoxicating liquor in violation of the law. Men are being slain by pistol, dynamite and bludgeon.

These martyred victims are called to die for the cause of righteousness; your part and mine, my reader, is much easier. We are called to give our words in moulding public opinion against the flood of wet propaganda now being poured upon the public, and which would deceive, if possible, even the elect. We are called to give our vote always and everywhere for law and against lawlessness, at every ballot box. We are called to give of our means to sustain the forces of righteousness in this best of wars.

The liquor forces of this land are combined in a desperate death struggle to overthrow the best, wisest and most productive reform in the history of humanity. Let all patriotic Americans unite to resist every effort to ridicule, weaken, modify, or repeal any of our temperance laws. How easy our part compared to the martyrs mentioned above!

Even if the thought of any retreat for our nation in this matter were possible, here is a rugged old verse of scripture standing in the way. We will never set up the saloon again even under the disguise of "light wines and beers," because the overwhelming majority of the people of America do not propose to have that verse written over the door of our beloved country, "The dog is

THE EFFECTUAL PRAYER.

Rev. O. L. Markman, D. D.

"The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."—James 5:16.

JAMES was a man of prayer. It is said that after his death his knees were found calloused from much praying. That was the secret of the success of those early ministers; they were men of prayer.

In this brief epistle James gives some very practical directions concerning prayer. He speaks of several kinds of prayer. There is the doubtful, wavering prayer, like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed (1:6,7). Such prayer may be nicely worded and eloquently expressed, but it brings no answer. Then there is the selfish prayer (4:3). The things asked for may be good and within the range of God's promises; but the motive is selfish, one's own pleasure, hence it is not answered. And then there is the effectual prayer, the prayer that receives an answer and brings the desired blessing, the prayer that effects its purpose.

Let us notice more carefully this setting forth of the effectual prayer. May the Holy Spirit direct us and apply the truths to our own hearts.

I. And first of all, we have to consider the nature of effectual prayer. It is fervent—"the fervent prayer."

1. Now the word fervent suggests the idea of warmth. Fervent prayer is the welling up of the desires of a heart aglow with divine love. John Knox was noted for his remarkable power in prayer. His heart was deeply stirred by the spiritual desolation of his native land. It is said that he would stand on his knees or lie prostrate on his face for hours at a time in prayer to God for the salvation of his people, and in seasons of soul-agony he would cry out: "Oh, God, give me Scotland or I die!" It was said of Xavier, the great missionary evangelist, that he prayed with such fervor that it seemed he would do violence to heaven. This does not necessarily imply great physical energy or loudness or length. One may have all these and not pray fervently. It means that there must be heart in our prayers. Our prayers are often too heartless.

2. Fervency also implies definiteness. We cannot pray fervently for a variety of objects at once. The mind of man is so constituted that he cannot fasten its desire upon a diversity of things at the same time. We must be definite.

All instances of effectual prayer recorded in the Bible were of this kind. Recall Elijah's prayer on Mount Carmel. It consisted of but two sentences and was right to the point. (1 Kings 18:36, 37). The solely afflicted leper in coming to Christ did not spend any time in idle formalities, but cried out: "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." (Matt. 8:2). The Syrophenician woman poured out the anguish of her heart, saying: "Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil." (Matt. 15:22). The publican smote upon his breast and cried:

"God be merciful to me a sinner." (Luke 18:13). And the thief on the cross expressed the deep yearning of his soul, saying: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." (Luke 23:42). This is equally true concerning the more lengthy prayers, recorded in the Word of God. Wherever it is found that the blessing sought for was obtained it will be found also that the prayer offered was for the definite purpose.

Too many of our prayers are mere form, offered at random, without any thought of present needs. We must be definite. Let us search out our deeper heart needs and concerns and present them definitely and fervently at the throne of divine grace.

3. Yet again, to pray fervently means that we do all within our power to effect that for which we pray. It is of little use to pray for the salvation of our friends and loved ones if we never put forth an effort to win them for Christ. It is useless to pray for the upbuilding of the church or a revival of religion and then do nothing to bring it about. A noted Christian worker once said: "Before I engage in any new undertaking I pray as though all depended upon God, and then I work as though all depended upon me." That is fervent prayer. The fervency that is enkindled by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit will not only lead us to pray but it will impel us to go out and do our utmost to aid in accomplishing the thing for which we pray. That is effectual prayer.

II. Secondly, we come to notice the results of effectual prayer. It "availeth much." No mortal can comprehend the full possibilities of prayer as set forth in that little word "much."

1. For one thing, prayer brings great blessing to the individual soul. Nothing so purifies character and strengthens the inner man and develops the various Christian graces as heart-to-heart communion with God. The great moral heroes of the past, those known for sublimity of courage and beauty of character have been men and women noted for their fervency in prayer. If you would become stronger for God and be more useful in his service begin a life of prayer.

2. Moreover, fervent prayer is a most effective means for the salvation of the unsaved. It avails when everything else seems to fail. You remember the story of the saintly Monica and her wandering son; how faithfully she reared and taught the boy; how she tried to point out to him the error of his way. But it all came to nothing. Her boy wandered farther and farther into sin and became enmeshed in false philosophy. And then to get away from his mother's admonitions he took ship unbeknownst to her, and sailed to a foreign land. All poor Monica could do was to pray. And then one day her son, hundreds of miles away, was sitting out in a garden, far from God in sin and in philosophical vagaries, and Monica was holding on to God in prayer, when the Holy Spirit smote the heart of that wandering boy, and transformed him into Saint Augustine, one of the mightiest men in the history of the church of Jesus Christ. How true the promise: "Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and show thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not." (Jer. 33:3).

When good old Dr. Backus, of Hamilton College was nearing his departure, the physician whispered to Mrs. Backus, saying: "Dr. Backus is dying." The old man heard, looked up with a smile and asked: "Did I understand you to say I am dying?" Sadly the physician said: "Yes, I am sorry, but you have no more than a half hour to live." Dr. Backus smiled again, saying: "It will soon be over." Then he said: "Take me out of bed and put me on my knees. I want to die praying for the students of Hamilton College." They lifted him out and he knelt down, covered his face with his transparent hands, and prayed: "O God, save the students of Hamilton College." After a time they lifted him back upon the bed. Still his lips moved: "O God, save—" Then the light of his life went out and he finished the prayer in the presence of the Lord Jesus. Fervent prayer can reach into the deepest depths of sin, and by the Spirit of God, penetrate unto the farthest corner of the earth, and get hold of the unsaved and awaken them to their need of salvation.

3. Then, fervent prayer will bring great blessing to the church. It will do more to remove misunderstandings and divisions in a local church or in the church at large than all the delegations that were ever appointed; it will do more to bring down a revival than all the machinery that men can set up. The first great revival at Pentecost was the result of a ten days' prayer meeting. The Reformation was born in Luther's prayer closet. Early Methodists often spent whole nights in prayer, and they witnessed what is conceded to have been the greatest religious awakening of modern times. Every soul-winning revival has had its origin in fervent prayer.

This is forcibly illustrated by an incident in the life of Dwight L. Moody. The great Chicago fire destroyed his old tabernacle, and while the new building was being erected his friends persuaded him to go to England. It was not his intention to preach; he went to rest and learn what he could by listening to others. But he was prevailed to speak morning and evening one Sunday in a church in London. At the morning service his church was crowded, but Mr. Moody had no liberty. Everything seemed perfectly dead. He regretted that he had promised to speak at night, and tried to get out of it; but he could not. When he arrived for the evening service the church was crowded to the doors. And as he arose to preach he was painfully conscious of the same frigid atmosphere that had pervaded the morning service. The people sat there "as though they had been carved out of stone." But when about half way through there was a change. The powers of the unseen world seemed to have fallen upon the audience. As he drew to the close he felt impressed to give an invitation and the people arose in groups. Thinking they had misunderstood him, he explained what he meant, making the conditions more drastic than before, and asked all who wanted to yield their hearts to Christ to pass into an adjoining room. They crowded in until the room was packed. A service was announced for the next evening, and within the following ten days more than four hundred people were brought to Christ and added to the churches in that part of the city.

Now what was the secret of that marvelous awakening? It was not the faith of the humble lay-evangelist or the pastor, for they both were utterly surprised. There was a woman in the city who had read of Mr. Moody's work in Chicago and had been praying that God would send him to London. Her sister said: "We had a new preacher this morning." "Who?" asked the shut-in. "Mr. Moody from America." The sick woman turned pale and said: "What, Mr. Moody from Chicago? I read about him some time ago in a paper that a friend brought in, and I have been praying God to send him to London and to our church. Now, sister, go out of the room, close the door, send me no dinner; no matter who comes, don't let them see me. I am going to spend the whole afternoon and evening in prayer." And while Mr. Moody stood in the pulpit where all was chill and death in the morning, that bedridden saint was holding him in prayer before God. And God who delights to answer prayer poured out his Spirit and not only saved hundreds of souls in that local church but gave Dwight L. Moody his commission as an international evangelist and inaugurated a religious awakening that swept around the world. Earth has never yet seen how much may be accomplished by fervent prayer.

III. Thirdly, it remains for us to consider who may thus offer the effectual prayer. Not any and every person regardless of their relationship to God. It is the prayer "of a righteous man" that "availeth much."

1. Unrighteousness makes prayer unavailing by destroying its effect upon the unsaved. The world is ever alert to detect flaws in the life and character of a professed Christian. The man who knowingly does that which is not right, whether against God or his fellowmen, destroys the influence of his prayers with those who are away from Christ.

2. Cherished unrighteousness will make our prayers unavailing because it severs our spiritual touch with God. David says: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." (Psa. 66:18). Sin cherished in the heart keeps prayer from reaching the throne above and keeps God's power out of the soul. Do our prayers bring blessing to ourselves and others? If not, why not? Let us ask God to search out the hidden cause and help us to put it aside.

Have you been living a prayerless life? Do your prayers lack fervency? Ask God to rekindle in your heart a true spiritual fervor and help you to begin a life of prayer. For the sake of our own soul as well as the unsaved about us, and for the sake of the Christ who died to redeem us, let us give ourselves anew to fervent prayer.

"The Optimism of Pre-Millennialism," a happy title of a truthful volume; a volume worthy of the genuine and scholarly ability of a widely-known author. A complete and convincing answer to the thoughtless criticism of Post-Millennialism advocates. Every believer in the Pre-Millennial coming of the Lord should read and distribute this modest little volume. It is unanswerable.

Sincerely,

Separation Necessary to Holiness.

CHAS. V. FAIRBAIRN.

LOVE not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." (1 John 2:15, 16). (Digest of Sermon by John Wesley).

To love is to regard with affection, to be fond of, or to delight in. Two utterly irreconcilable forces are here presented to view, the Father and the world. The world hated Jesus; and he assures us that it will also hate those who love him. (John 15:18). "The world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world" (John 17:14). The world loves its own. Christ's own "love the brethren." The world lieth in the wicked one; we are of God. This "love not the world" is very emphatic: let us fear God and keep his commandments; for this is our whole duty.

Now, he tells us to "love our neighbor"; "honor all men"; that we are to use friend and foe equally well; yea, even to love our very enemies. Yet, here he says, "Love not the world." What kind of love, then, is forbidden? Not that we utterly avoid converse with those around us. Not that we entirely shun their company and avoid their persons. Business demands intercourse. Courtesy requires a certain amount of converse. When we have a reasonable hope of doing them good, intercourse with them is proper. But we must be careful lest the brand that has been plucked from the burning fall back into the fire. A chumminess, a getting thick with them, is forbidden. Be careful lest you slide into a too close attachment to them, lest your well-intended friendliness prove a deadly snare to you, lest you contract a delight in the company of those who love not the Lord, lest you drop into needless conversation, from that into "the using many words"; and since "in many words there wanteth not sin," trouble for you will follow. The Psalmist could say, "All my delight is in the saints that are upon the earth." His delight was not in those who hated his Lord.

What a lesson we can learn from King Jehoshaphat. Ahab provoked the Lord with his outrageous sins and by marrying Jezebel, the daughter of the heathen Zidonian king. This wrought havoc in Israel. Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, ought to have profited by observing the result of Ahab's sins. But he did not. He allowed his son to marry Athaliah, Ahab and Jezebel's daughter; and Jehoram, this young man, "walked as did the house of Ahab: for the daughter of Ahab was his wife; and he did evil in the sight of the Lord." (2 Kings 8:18). As if this were not enough, Jehoshaphat made a league with Ahab and said, "I am as thou art, my people as thy people, my horses as thy horses." (1 Kings 22:4). Moreover, Jehoshaphat "after this did join himself with Ahaziah (Ahab's son), who did very wickedly: and he joined himself with him to make ships to go to Tarshish: and they made the ships at Ezion-gaber." (2 Chron. 20:35, 36). Let us see the outcome. Many of Judah's soldiers fell in battle, fighting in Ahab's behalf; God's men dying in Satan's cause. Jehoshaphat, tricked by Ahab, nearly lost his life in this battle by wearing his royal robes. God's hand was against him, as he always is against compromisers. "Then Eliezer prophesied saying, Because thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah the Lord hath broken thy works. And the ships were broken that they were not able to go to Tarshish." (2 Chron. 20:37). Nor was even that all. When Jehoshaphat died, Jehoram succeeded him.

He led Judah to do evil as Ahab led Israel to do evil. All that averted God's wrath and saved Jehoshaphat's house from utter extinction was God's covenant with David. The young king led Judah into idolatry. He was rebuked by Elijah for this. He was cursed by the Lord. He was smitten with an incurable disease. He died a most miserable death, unlamented by his people, who refused to bury him with their kings. His son reigned a while and then was murdered. Athaliah, the queen-mother, massacred all the seed royal. Sin, rebukes, curses, disease, ruin, murder, butchery, all because Jehoshaphat did not listen to God and yoked up with the unbelievers.

Why must we not love the world? (1) It is sin to do so, since God forbids it. (2) It is spiritual adultery. God says, "Give me thy heart." People try to "draw near with their lips; but their hearts are far from him." (3) To do so is to yield to carnality. "The friendship of the world is enmity with God." (Jas. 4:4). "The carnal mind is enmity against God." (Rom. 8:7). Therefore, to be friendly with the world reveals the presence of the carnal mind. (4) It tends to entangle you again with the yoke of bondage. (5) You will become partakers of other men's sins along with their results. (6) It opens the heart to omissions, such as omitting secret, family, and public prayer. It tends to silence your testimony; for it is hard to rebuke a bosom friend. (7) You will be drawn into evil speaking, by listening (and you are bound to, if you associate with the world), then assenting, then engaging therein. (8) Your heart will again become corrupted and you will feel all out of harmony with God.

To court the world, or be courted by it, in the face of God's plain command, lets in the lust of the flesh. You will humor your appetites, passions, and desire for worldly pleasures. It brings contact which inflames these fleshly desires. You will get to love the creature more than the Creator. Yea, you do so now, else you would obey God. It lets in the lust of the eyes. You will envy the wicked and covet his treasures, rich possessions, dress, furniture, equipage, etc. You will take steps to secure the same, all to gratify a vain mind. It will inspire the pride of life. You will crave honor from men. You will love to be praised. You will shrink from dispraise. Fear of man will crawl into your heart.

To thus love the world will bring down upon your head dire and eternal consequences. Only "he that doeth the will of God will abide forever." (1 John 2:17). You are now the enemy of God. You cannot serve God and mammon. You break the Father-son relation established between you and God when you first separated from the world. (2 Cor. 6:14-18). You will be separated from God for ever unless you repent. Repent now. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." Amen, and amen.

An Ideal Gift Book.

Holidays are coming on, and Christmas presents are already being bought. Let us suggest a wonderful little book for the holiness people. It is Dr. Ridout's newest book, "The Beauty of Holiness." returned to his vomit and the sow to her wallowing in the mire."

Gallant Wolfe on the Heights of Abraham smitten with his death wound as he led his hosts to victory, heard the cry, "They fly! They fly!" "Who fly?" said he, opening his fast closing eyes. "The enemy." "Then I die happy." The Christian people of the United States do not need to die to see the enemy fly. They have already seen it. They have already overwhelmingly routed him by the greatest majority in the history of the republic. But it is the history of many reforms that the defeated enemy sometimes rallies for a temporary but futile return. The mighty majority of American citizens sent that vile and filthy tyrant, the liquor traffic, to Elba. He is trying to stage a come back of a hundred days. We are now en route to meet him at Waterloo and send him to St. Helena for life. There will be no return after this. All we need to do is to keep up the firm, sane, resolute and irresistible work of the Anti-Saloon League to forever drive the comparatively small, illegal and criminal liquor traffic where the far larger legal liquor traffic (liquor drinking in our country has been reduced ninety per cent by prohibition) has already gone; into the gutter and into the sewer where it belongs.

The Kind Of Girls Men Admire.

MRS. JULIA A. SHELHAMER.

NOW, girls, shall we have a little private talk together? Draw your chairs up close and let someone close the door so we may discuss a matter that has occupied your minds, somewhat, though you may have been too modest to say anything about it to anyone. Here it is, "What is it that makes girls attractive?" By this question we do not mean to infer that you girls are of the stamp who desire to attract married men, or single men of a low character, for such motives always bring due punishment in this life and in the next. But rather, what is it that will enable an unattractive girl to find her mate? In answering this question we shall state a few facts gathered from nine works on Psychology which we have recently perused.

Men are sometimes attracted to a different style of girls than are women. Occasionally when a man marries, some ladies are wont to remark, "I don't see what he sees in that girl. Why she's as ugly as a rail fence." Shall we explain? There is a little secret here. It is this, men choose—

1. A cheerful disposition. They admire one who can smile and laugh away trouble—one who is not cross, grouchy, or pessimistic—one who has the ability to scatter sunshine in her own home, particularly on wash day, when the sink is full of dishes and mother is worn out from sitting up all night with a sick baby. Men quietly and keenly watch these little things, for a patient, cheerful, womanly disposition is greatly admired by them, and has a serious bearing upon the future. If these attributes are not natural to you, they may be cultivated. Divine grace can change the heart, mind and the disposition, remove grouchiness, touchiness and pessimism and give smiles and sunshine.

However, you will have to use your will in this matter by casting aside every unhappy thought and substituting a pleasant one. Refuse to allow your mind to dwell on bitter ideas, envy, revenge and jealousy and you will find that your appearance and your disposition are much improved.

2. Another characteristic men admire is chastity. No man respects vice though he himself may be a demon incarnate. This is one proof of the divinity of Christ and of the existence of heaven, i. e., that virtue demands respect even from vice itself. One popular author says, "Though you may see men attracted by many women who do not have a good character or a sweet disposition, you may depend upon it, that they seem to have these attributes in the adorer's eyes. The fact that lovers can see in each other, qualities that are invisible to others has given rise to the notion that 'love is blind.'"

Thackeray and Hugo are not alone in thinking that in order to be attractive, a woman must have a beautiful character and a sweet disposition. No man who really adores a woman can conceive of her as anything but an angel—the very essence of goodness and purity. May we quote now from an unknown author? "That these qualities are necessary to true womanly attractiveness has been insisted upon by every poet and lover that ever lived."

Victor Hugo says, "A young minister addresses the object of his affection thus. There is for me but one woman upon earth. It is you. I think of you as a prayer . . . you are like a glory in my eyes. To me you are holy innocence . . . you are the living form of a benediction."

3. Tenderness is essential to womanly attractiveness. Along with this quality must go childlikeness, trustfulness, confidence and dependence of spirit.

It is sometimes disappointing to business girls and masculine women to find that they do not readily find life companions. They are well fitted for home makers and yet are not sought. One great psychologist declares that the reason for this is that they do not have that simplicity and helplessness that appeals to the strength of a man, whose God appointed calling is to shield some frail little creature from the world's chilly blasts. This author adds that if such women desire to be noticed they must lose their masculine independence and masculine manner of dressing. No man admires a mere ape of himself and a woman should avoid all styles which are at all mannish, and should cultivate a sweet, modest tenderness of spirit.

BEAUTY NOT ESSENTIAL.

I am now going to say something that may surprise you, but, according to man's ideal, beauty is not always essential in this game. It is certainly a help and yet business and professional men assert that what attracts them most is a fine character. Indeed one man who knew more about pretty girls than perhaps any other one in the United States went so far as to assert that the pretty girls' heads were all empty. That was Mr. ———, director of beauty contests for twenty years.

4. Good health is essential to attractiveness. The robust girl has taken the place that the simpering little invalid used to occupy. Rouge and lipstick cannot be substituted for nature's roses. A certain newspaper gave free directions for using rouge, viz., to buy a box and walk two miles into the country and bury it. Walk back. Every morning walk out and dig up the box and rebury it, without opening it and in a short time you will have rosy cheeks. A daily bath, outdoor exercises, and a diet of plenty of green vegetables, fruit and graham bread, will keep the average person in such good health that she will not need to resort to artificial beauty.

A Whole Family Converted in One Night.

A. W. ORWIG.

In a certain city and its suburbs several devoted missionaries preached Jesus. And for so doing two of them were violently seized, falsely accused, beaten with many stripes and thrust into prison. Here they were subjected to further indignities and even to torture. And all this without a trial!

But he who sent them forth witnessed the entire transaction. And as they lay in their dark and lonely cell he filled their hearts with joy and gladness. Soon it broke forth in cheerful, holy song, and was heard throughout the prison. They were so unspeakably happy that they seemed to forget their lacerated and bleeding backs and tortured limbs. The place, though dismal, and reeking with impurity, became a veritable palace because of the presence of Jesus.

But hark! there is another sound. It rises above the loud and joyous notes of the two happy men. A mighty shaking is heard. The prison walls tremble. The very foundations move. Excitement and consternation seize the other prisoners and the keeper of the jail. Heavy and bolted doors creak on their hinges and fly open untouched by man. Every prisoner's band snaps asunder. The jailer, in mortal fear that his prisoners had escaped, draws his sword to take his own life. But the voice of the chief of the two strange prisoners rings out clear and strong, "Do thyself no harm, for we are all here." Believing the statement, the jailer calls for a light amid the midnight gloom and uproar. A few bounds, and he tremblingly prostrates himself at the feet of the two whom he had so shamefully treated but a few hours before. Hastily and gladly he leads them forth from the inner prison.

But now a scene transpires at which the joy of the two holy men reaches its climax. A soul is in the throes of conviction for sin. From the depths of his heart he cries out, "Sir, what must I do to be saved?" Oh, what music this is to the two saintly heroes just released from their chains! Heaven itself is moved to exultation. And hell dolefully mutters its disappointment. A once loyal subject is now about to be lost. Instantly the earnest question of the jailer is answered, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." And now the insignia of the prince of darkness is resolutely and forever cast aside. The glorious banner of the King of kings takes its place. At once "the word of the Lord" is further proclaimed to the jailer and his family. In that "same hour of the night" they all believe the truth, forsake sin, accept Jesus, and receive the rite of baptism.

Blessed, happy household, all rejoicing in the Lord of life and glory! And this, too, a heathen family, having doubtless hitherto heard but little, if any, about the true way of salvation. Possibly all they knew about it was what they learned during the visit of the missionaries to their city. It may be imagined that while the jailer inflicted the cruel punishment upon the two itinerant preachers, they endeavored to win him for the blessed Master. The Holy Spirit doubtless used the tragic occurrences in the jail to impress the jailer's mind and the minds of his family with the truthfulness of the message of these "servants of the most high God." But, at all events, the time intervening between their first hearing the divine message and their acceptance of it, was very brief. Without doubt they accepted Christ as their Savior at the first real opportunity they had.

How the promptness of that heathen family, in responding to the call of salvation, should put to shame the multitudes in Christian lands who have heard and rejected that same call all their lives! And what a fearful responsibility they assume! Verily, their damnation will be all the greater. And, verily, it does not take God long to save a soul when the conditions of salvation are complied with. True repentance and faith will bring salvation at any time. The Holy Spirit will always assist in the exercise of both when an honest attempt is made to do so.

In our Revival Number of THE HERALD, November 30, we shall discuss every phase of revival work. Do not fail to order a number of extra copies to distribute among your friends, that a revival atmosphere may be kindled in your community and church.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

EVANGELIST LAWRENCE REED.

As it has been some time since I have reported through the columns of our holiness papers I want to assure you it is not because I have not been busy for the Master, as I have been on the go continually since the early part of June. My first camp was at Coshocton, Ohio, with the Bethel Camp Association. My co-laborer was Brother T. M. Anderson, from Wilmore, and that is enough to let you know we had some good preaching. The singing was in charge of Rev. A. H. Johnston and wife, of Akron, Ohio, and I never heard any better. The long altar was lined time after time, and the fire fell. We were both invited back for the year 1929, when they expect to be in their new tabernacle, as we raised about seven thousand dollars the last Sunday to apply on the new grounds and tabernacle. They surely have a great crowd of Spirit-filled laymen at Coshocton. May God bless them richly.

I went next to New Philadelphia with Brother J. C. Albright, pastor of the Nazarene Church, for a tent meeting. Brother Albright is one of the greatest pastors I ever worked with. He had everything in shape, and there wasn't much to do but shake the tree. We did that, and over a hundred plunged into the fountain. Brothers Haas and Anderson of Eastern Nazarene College, had charge of the singing, and it surely was of a high order.

Our next meeting was Sebring Camp Meeting, where we were with some of the best men in the world. God gave us a great camp, the altars being filled time after time, and God's blessing resting upon us.

I then hastened to New York, where I was engaged for two camps, the first one being at Cohoes, N. Y., and known as Seven Oaks Camp. My co-laborer there was Brother Fred Suffield, and we fell in love with each other at once and stood shoulder to shoulder. They said it was the best camp in the history of the camp meeting. The singing was in charge of Mrs. Suffield and Mrs. G. N. Miller, and was a great blessing to the camp. They have some great laymen at Seven Oaks. They invited the entire company of workers back for next year, and of course we are going. We then went to Richland Camp, and it surely was a great camp. The workers were Brother Whitcomb, Dr. D. F. Brooks, Brother Suffield, and this poor scribe. I surely had to "scratch gravel" to keep up with that crowd. This was a sixteen-day camp, and some days the long altar was well filled three times, and the power of God was manifested. I would not forget to state that Sister Tillie Albright was there, and you who know Tillie know that that meant there would be some life in the meeting. The sweet fellowship and harmony was like Heaven.

I am still in the battle since the camp season. I am in my second church meeting: one at Cumberland, Md., where God gave us a fine meeting with the Nazarene Church, of which Brother Bashan is pastor. The last day we had a baptismal service and took nineteen members into the church. I am now at Paden City, W. Va., in a meeting and God is blessing. Remember me in prayer.

A GOOD MEETING IN THE KENTUCKY MOUNTAINS.

It is a good thing for one to visit his native hearth and to walk the hills his childish feet have climbed. We spent our early childhood days on old Terrill's Creek, Jackson county. We moved down into the famous "Blue Grass Region" when fourteen years of age. We have a love for our old friends and relatives in the Terrill's Creek community and are therefore, endeavoring to build a Tabernacle where we can hold annual camp meetings, conduct religious services, organize and run a Sunday school for the benefit of the children. Last September a year ago we had a fine tent meeting in that community. Bro. Pollock led the singing, greatly enjoyed his visit and did much for the cause. This year the writer conducted a week's meeting and perfected plans for the building of the Tabernacle. The meeting was well attended. People came on foot, horse-back, mule-back, and in wagons. I think there were two automobiles during the entire meeting. The roads are very rough, hence the sight of an auto is an unusual thing over most of those mountain roads. If they only had good roads the people of that section would soon be "ahead of the hounds" on all lines of progress and improvement. During the last four days of the meeting there were fifteen hundred and sixteen chapters of the Bible read. Alfred Bowling's boy read one hundred and six chapters in one day.

The meeting was held in a big tobacco barn, cleaned out, fitted up, seated and prepared for the services. Much good was accomplished. Many rushed forward for prayers and the religious tone of the whole community was greatly elevated and strengthened.

The last Sunday afternoon of the revival we gathered on a beautiful hill overlooking the valley to lay the corner-stone for the future Tabernacle. Our sister, Mrs. W. F. Phillips, of Wilmore, Ky., had the honor of officially laying the corner-stone. The hill, high and dry and beautiful for location and an ideal place for a church or tabernacle will be deeded to the Camp Meeting Association Committee by my cousin, Mr. Powell Johnson, an industrious farmer and very useful citizen in the community. Let all my friends to whom I have preached the gospel for these years throughout the United States pray for this noble work and worthy enterprise, and if possible send me some of the Lord's money to help build the Tabernacle which will be the means of doing untold good for the Kingdom of God in this world and in the world to come.

Tallula, Illinois.
For two weeks we held forth the Word of Life and proclaimed the unsearchable riches of the glorious gospel of free salvation in the old historical town of Tallula, Ill. The meeting was conducted in the Union Mission of which Rev. Geo. W. Eads is Superintendent. Many obstacles and peculiar conditions made the fight difficult, nevertheless good crowds attended and some real salvation work was accomplished. We were royally entertained in the hospitable home of Bro. Eads.

During our sojourn in that section of the country we visited the old home town of Abraham Lincoln which is only a few miles from Tallula, near the present town of Petersburg. We saw many of the relics and souvenirs of the great Emancipator. The old store of Berry and Lincoln is reproduced in the form of a log cabin and also the famous old Rutledge Hotel where Lincoln boarded for five years. The noted Peter Cartwright, the old pioneer Methodist preacher, used to travel through this section of Illinois. He is buried at Pleasant Plains not so very far from the town of Tallula.

We preached three times for Rev. H. E. Burge of Odin, Ill., and delivered a lecture against Evolution.

We visited the famous old holiness war-horse, Rev. W. A. Ashbrook and his good wife at Springfield, Ill. Bro. Ashbrook is the president of the Normal Holiness Camp Meeting and is one of the best presiding officers in the entire Holiness Movement. I also had the privilege of meeting the young Nazarene pastor at Tallula, Rev. Sheridan Hughes. He is a fine young man.

Andrew Johnson.

OUR SUMMER CAMPAIGN.

Our summer campaign as members of the Methodist Evangelical League began with a tent meeting in East Columbus, May 29. The members of the Methodist Church, with their pastor, Bro. McNeillan, gave us very good support in every way and about seventy-five souls were definitely blessed. The children and young people's work was most successful with Bro. Roscoe Bancroft as leader.

Our next tent meeting was in Trenton, N. J., and this was also owned and blessed of the Lord in the salvation of souls. Bro. Bancroft left us after this meeting to attend the summer sessions at Winona Lake.

The Camp Meeting Association of Groveville, N. J., had engaged us for our next meeting which was held in the beautiful grove at Groveville. This was a ten-day meeting and, although the enemy tried very hard to defeat the meeting and also the prospects of any more camp meetings being held there in the future, the Lord brought us out victorious and another camp will be held there next year.

From this camp we went to another camp meeting as two of the evangelists engaged for the Kricktown, Pa., camp. Our co-workers were Brother and Sister Elsner from New York. We indeed enjoyed their fine spirit and co-operation and God blessed this camp in a marvelous way. The people at this camp believe in the old-time religion that saves and sanctifies and sets you free. They are not afraid to shout the praises of God when the Lord blesses them. A goodly number of people were either saved or sanctified during this meeting, for which God gets all the glory.

The tabernacle meeting in Lewistown, Pa., under the auspices of the Evangelical Church, was our next stopping place. Here the pastor, Brother Fletcher, and his members certainly did pray the fire down. Many of the folk there were merely professors of religion but after a few days of holding on to God victory came in tremendous conviction settling down upon the hearts of the cold and lukewarm and such confessing and repenting as was seen there reminded us of the reports of the meetings of fifty years ago. There were seekers at every service. From the third service on the altar was crowded to its fullest capacity and the brethren brought in two other long benches to serve as altars and these were filled with folk weeping and begging God for mercy. Even the altars were not sufficient to accommodate all, as folk in the audience called upon God at their seats for deliverance. The good work which the Lord accomplished here resulted in a Holiness Association being formed which meets every Saturday night.

We now took the tent for our next meeting in Eccles, W. Va., a large mining town and we found the people anxious to hear the gospel. Large crowds gathered at the tent every night. At the last Sunday night service the tent was packed to its limit and we were told that more than a hundred people were turned away. Souls were saved, reclaimed, sanctified, and strengthened. The Methodist Church and their pastor, Bro. Shelton, helped nobly.

The last of our tent meetings was held in Chillicothe, Ohio. Here the Church of Christ in Christian Union helped us greatly and we certainly did appreciate and enjoy their testimonies, songs and shouts of praise. They know the Lord and also know how to pray. They believe in storming the fort and God does answer their prayers. At this meeting also folk dug through and found either salvation or sanctification.

We have found that tent work certainly does more good than many people realize. There are a great number of people who will not go to a church but will go to a tent. Tent work breaks down denominational prejudice.

We heard the Presbyterians say "Amen," the Methodists say "Praise the Lord," the Evangelicals say, "Glory," the Baptists say "Amen," the Church of Christ in Christian Union say "Hallelujah," and we can't go on mentioning all the rest of the denominations who met together as one mass of Christian brothers and sisters, glad to pray for, and with, souls and giving God all the praise for what he accomplished through his children. No matter of what denomination we find this rule always holds out—when people get real salvation it makes them genuinely happy.

In summing up the work for the summer, the Lord permitted us to be in seven meetings resulting in the salvation and sanctification of about six hundred souls, a good percentage of whom had never known the Lord before. Last, but not least, we were able to secure quite a number of subscriptions for The Pentecostal Herald.

We beg that The Herald family pray for us as we enter our fall and winter campaigns in the churches. We submit this report saying, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, Bless his Holy Name."

REPORT.

As I haven't reported for some time, people are inquiring as to why, but you know some think we ought to report and others think that we ought not to report, and all seem to be good people, and since we find it impossible to please all the people we have been pushing ahead working day and night, doing our best to get all the people we can saved and sanctified and in the church.

My first meeting for this report starts with Rev. Benedum, of East Liverpool, Ohio. I consider this church second to none in this nation. They have a great building, a great choir of seventy-five, all well saved, a great pastor and a great people. Such praying in the basement before services I have never heard, and it is no wonder the long altar and front seats were filled with seekers, with seventy-five uniting with the church the last Sunday. This church never has to have a drive for money. Rev. Benedum leads his own choir and he sure knows how to lead; they have life and fire in the singing. He has been here six years; they have over three hundred young people that work like legion and wished to get others into the experience.

Leaving a great church and meeting like this, we went over into Iowa to a little country church ten miles from the railroad. It rained every day until the last Sunday and up to that time we never had more than forty out to service. The people were good but the roads were so muddy they could not get to church. We had a few seekers but not many. We tried not to kill the good folk who did come in order to get seekers. We will not take time to go into detail as to the late spring and summer camps, but the Lord has given us some of the greatest meetings of our life, and has proven that old-time revivals are not all of the past, but we have also had proof that old-time tests and trials and hard meetings are not all of the past. We have had some real pulls, but we try not to unchristianize and kill the good people during these times of testing.

We have never worked with better pastors and have had absolute confidence in all with whom we have labored; if there was a cross in any way we did not know or feel it.

We have just returned from Shreveport, La., where Brother and Sister Achan are building a great church and where the Lord gave us a gracious revival; we took some of the finest people in the city in the church; when we left there must have been fifty people at the altar praying as if the world was on fire. We are now on our way to First Church of the Nazarene, Chicago. May God bless the pastors and evangelists scattered abroad. I read your reports with interest and covet an interest in your prayers.

Bona Fleming.

PADEN CITY, WEST VIRGINIA, REVIVAL.

I just returned to my home in Pennsylvania after having been engaged in a two-weeks' revival in the hills of West Virginia with the Nazarenes. Bro. Lawrence Reed was the evangelist. His ministry was rich and food to our souls. He expounded the Word clearly and backed up his statements by "thus saith the Lord."

Bro. T. H. Kampman is the shepherd of the flock. God is blessing his ministry. His congregation appreciates his animated zeal for the lost and his consecrated and Spirit-filled life. Occasionally, there was a good old-fashioned shout and the blessing of the Lord fell. Some prayed through to victory, either for pardon or purity. The church was encouraged and has taken new ground.

I shall never forget the 9:30 morning prayer meetings in the James Parker home. God graciously blessed our hearts and poured out fresh unction on our souls for the battle. Mrs. Parker can surely pray the glory down and heaven seemed near.

Am thankful that it was my privilege to labor in this new field with these splendid men and women of God. Am glad God has given me a part in the ministry of song. God's way and his will are delightful to me.

much travel. But he was interested in things about him, read, thought and talked of what he read and what he was thinking about. He believed the Bible, feared God and trusted implicitly in Christ for salvation. In all matters, he sought to associate with the best people on the right side of every question. He did not jump to conclusions, could not be easily persuaded, but if you could show him God's side of any issue he would take his stand there and nothing could force him to budge.

Thus far, he was like the average, well-meaning, commonplace, Christian man, but now I mention the characteristics that made him count for much more in his community than many men of his class about him. He was aggressive; he spoke his convictions clearly and positively and insisted on things that he believed to be right and of importance. He became an active force in his community for righteousness. He was never neutral when good and evil were arrayed against each other. His activity in standing up against wickedness and for righteousness made him think and read. It also brought him in touch and fellowship with men of far better education and larger capacity than himself.

These associations had a very gracious and enlarging effect upon him. It led to more reading, to travel and intercourse with distinguished persons. Gradually, without any sort of ambition, he became a leader in his community and a tower of strength. Later in life, he wrote frequently for the community press. Parts of his articles were quoted and commented on favorably in the city papers. By and by he was called upon to speak on important occasions. He had a fine physique, a strong voice, commanding appearance. He spoke with deliberation and emphasis that secured the close attention of any group or crowd he addressed. His influence spread abroad. He became known far and near as a most useful citizen. Evil men feared him, good men loved and followed him. With comparatively small capital of natural abilities, he so wrought that he produced a large income of valuable service among his fellowmen and started going influences that counted large for the betterment of his community, county and state.

The success and usefulness of this man lead us to say, "Go thou and do likewise." Read, think, speak, align yourself with every good cause. Do not sit about with your hands in your lap and your tongue silent in your mouth when you ought to be up and doing, condemning the wrong and pleading for the right. Men's gifts and abilities develop and increase as they use them wisely in the service of God and their fellowbeings.

Philadelphia Holiness Convention.

The Annual Holiness Convention of Philadelphia Holiness Association will be held Nov. 5-12 at East Allegheny Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. G. W. Ridout, of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, and Rev. O. G. Minglehoff, will be the special workers. The Eden singers will have charge of the music. HERALD readers in New Jersey, Philadelphia and Delaware are requested to pray for this Convention and attend it as far as possible.

If your subscription is due for renewal, and you have not renewed it, do not delay another day, if you desire to help us in a great undertaking. When will those who believe in holiness, be as zealous in this direction as those who believe in Eddyism?

HEART FOREMOST.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

It is a wise provision of the Father that the heart should be the main avenue of entrance into the experience of the religion of Jesus Christ. The Bible declares that the way is so plain that a wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein.

Someone has truly said that, "Every man gets to Jesus heart foremost, not head foremost." It is "with the heart man believeth unto righteousness." It is through the heart that the Holy Spirit makes us to feel our need of a Savior, and through the heart we are led to repent of our sins, and it is through this same medium that we are to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ to the saving of the soul.

Then it is through the heart that we maintain unbroken our communion with the Father. On one occasion Jesus lifted up his eyes to heaven and said, "Father, I thank thee that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." It is the simple, trusting heart that gains access to the throne of grace; it is the simple faith of the childish heart that knows best how to draw upon the divine resources for help and blessing.

What a poor chance some of us, yea the majority of us would have, if salvation came by reasoning. If the conditions of salvation were dependent upon the head, upon brain assets, how few would find rest from their restless longings within; but praise be to the Infinite One, he has said that we must even become as a little child before we can enter into the Kingdom. It is the humble, child-like simplicity that counts with the Father of mercy, and it is in this spirit that everyone must come who would find the pardoning grace, or sanctifying power.

After all, the heart, with its desires and longings, is the magnet which attracts the attention of the Divine One. He sees and knows our inner motives as plainly as he sees our outer actions, and when the heart reaches out its tendrils of faith, Mercy is there ready to respond with the kiss of divine forgiveness. This is why it is so easy for children to find the Savior; they do not know enough to doubt; and they do not have to look back upon a long life of sin which nurtures doubt, and makes the hardened sinner to wonder if, after all their sin and neglect of divine mercy, God can still be gracious.

There are many who do not attach much importance to the conversion of children, because they are so easily led into the light of God's forgiving love, but they fail to remember that a child does not have so much to repent of, and so many crooked ways to make straight as the man or woman who has lived long in sin, and trampled upon the mercy of God with open defiance of divine grace and justice.

It is the simplicity of faith which causes so many to doubt. They, like the man of old, think they have to do some great thing, and in some way merit salvation. But to the humble, trusting heart, that counts all things but loss that it may win Christ; that looks away from self to the Crucified One, there comes speedy and full deliverance from all sin. This one point should be emphasized in all our altar work and instruction to seeking ones—that they are to let the heart play the largest part in the matter of salvation, remembering that when the heart gets the experience of divine grace and love, the head will say Amen to all that has transpired. It is God's plan that we believe him, solely upon the authority of his Word; then he rewards us with the fullness of his love, which is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. Let us see to it that we have heart religion, then the outer righteousness will take care of itself.

"O, for a heart to praise my God,

A heart from sin set free;

A heart that always feels thy Blood,
So freely spilt for me."

Asbury College a Citadel of Faith.

PRESIDENT LEWIS ROBESON AKERS.

As previously announced in the columns of THE HERALD, Asbury College began its thirty-eighth year with a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit in the evangelistic services under the Rev. Raymond Browning. The altars were crowded with seekers and almost the entire student body definitely blessed in regenerating and sanctifying grace.

Special attention is given to the Chapel hour which is one of the greatest features of Asbury College life. From 8:15 to 9:00 o'clock A. M., five days in the week, messages are brought to the students to strengthen and conserve their faith. Asbury College is particularly fortunate in having frequent visits from evangelists and outstanding pastors of our country who bring their words of encouragement and spiritual admonition.

A series of ten addresses by various members of the faculty has just been completed. Doubtless those who carry Asbury College in their thought would be interested in knowing the nature of the addresses that are given from time to time from the platform. The series just closing was as follows:

President L. R. Akers, "Humanity's Hope, the Full Gospel."

Prof. H. J. Hervey, "How to Meet Temptation."

Prof. H. M. Hilliard, "The Nature of the Holy Spirit."

Prof. W. O. Allen, "The Nature of the Devil."

Dr. H. E. Rosenberger, "Self-hood."

Dr. W. D. Akers, "The Value of Prayer."

Prof. W. D. Turkington, "The Value of Bible Reading."

Dr. F. M. Essig, "The Value of Testimony."

Prof. S. A. Maxwell, "Experiences Common to Young Christians."

Dr. W. E. Harrison, "How to Keep Sanctified."

Highest appreciation of the series has been voiced by the students and friends, each speaker having presented some different aspect of Christian experience and also revealed an interesting variety of individuality in the nature of the addresses brought.

Every student is under the personal supervision of a faculty advisor who is ready to give counsel on any problems, whether they be scholastic or spiritual, while safeguards are continually being placed about the student body by the administration.

The Chapel is handicapped by the lack of space, the student body having outgrown the room provided some years ago. This is the acute need of the present moment and both faculty and student body have covenanted together to pray for the provision of this imperative need.

In a recent test made from the platform, about fifty percent of the student body testified to preparation for special Christian service. There are enough young preachers now enrolled in Asbury College and Seminary to make a large annual conference, and, best of all, every one experiences and will preach clearly the Bible and Wesleyan doctrines of Regeneration and Entire Sanctification.

In an hour when the world seems groping in a fog and floundering miserably in the swamps of sordidness and materialism this type of preaching will be indeed good news to discouraged souls. An investment in the young life of Asbury College will pay dividends for all time. To grapple with and overcome the flagrant evils of today, only the preaching of a full gospel will suffice. To meet this tremendous need, Asbury Theological Seminary was founded, and it should receive the hearty support of all holiness people. Its growth would be larger were it not for the fact that we have been unable thus far to grant free scholarships such as other institutions of like nature give throughout our nation. One way to overcome this difficulty would be for Christian people who realize the need of a full gospel to invest a portion of their tithe in these scholarships. $400 will provide a scholarship covering all expenses for a young preacher for one year in the Theological School. Those who have means can thus become evangelists by proxy in sending out flaming heralds of a great gospel who otherwise could not enter the field. Dr. Morrison's presentation of this great need is clear and forceful and merits the heartiest support of all who desire to meet the moral apostasy and spiritual dearth of the present hour.

Asbury College is "carrying on" valiantly and heroically with its standard of Holiness flung to the breeze and a victorious life proclaimed in every classroom as well as from the Chapel platform. The prayers and material support of the faithful are requested that this institution may go on from victory to greater victories.

The Tri-Conference.

The Tri-Conference held at Delaware, O., Sept. 6-12, was a wonderful gathering. Bishops Wilson, Berry, McDowell, Hughes and Henderson were present, the first three presiding over the Ohio, West Ohio and North East Ohio Conferences. Time would fail us to tell of the delightful entertainment of the whole city; of the perfect organization in its management; of the spacious buildings of Ohio Wesleyan University, including Gray Chapel which seats 3,000 people; of the success of the program committee; of the report of Dr. W. B. Armington, spokesman for the District Superintendents; of the Memorials to the General Conference; of the election of the delegates to the same; of the interest in the appointments, etc.

To us, there were four great events: The first was Dr. Ralph Diffendorfer's speech, describing his trip to China, India and the Philippines in the interest of Foreign Missions. We wish all objecters to Foreign Missions could have heard this illuminating and inspiring address.

The second touching scene took place at the close of the Conference when Drs. Jester and Alton retired as District Superintendents. Being instructed by Bishop McDowell, they led forward Drs. McCarty and Hess to take their places. The Bishop then laid his hands upon their heads and talked to them and prayed for them, until tears came into their eyes, as they realized their responsibility.

The third scene we shall never forget! The Superannuates were all called forward and as these "veterans of the Cross" faced the congregation, the song, "Come, we that love the Lord," was sung, while Bishop McDowell shook hands with them and tears flowed freely and lips trembled and such a melting time we never saw before. God bless these "veterans of the Cross"! There is a fellowship among ministers unfelt among any other group of men.

We have purposely left until the last what we considered the climax of the Tri-Conference. We refer to Bishop Joseph Berry's sermon on Sunday morning to an attentive audience of 3,000 in Gray Chapel, another thousand being turned away. The Bishop's venerable appearance added to his message, he being 79 years of age. "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory," was his text.

Who can describe the eagle in its flight; the majestic ocean stirred by a storm; the beauty of the sunset, as the golden sun sinks into the sea? Who can describe the snow-capped Alps; the splendor of the Niagara Falls; or imagine the glories of heaven? Let him do justice to this sermon; 3,000 people were moved to tears, and then to shouts and gladness as he unfolded the truth of life and immortality, such as moved St. Paul to take the course of procedure that he did. No, Methodism is not dead! The fire still burns upon the altars of many hearts. God bless Bishop Joseph Berry! The Tri-Conference was a great success.

REV. W. M. ZIMMERMAN.

Bishop Candler's Book, "The Christ and the Creed."

Everything that Bishop Candler says and writes is worth while. He is one of the great Bishops of Southern Methodism, remarkable for his scholarship, his piety, his fidelity to the Bible and essential Methodism. The Bishop's last book contains his Lectures delivered before Emory University in connection with the Jarrell Lectureship. The Lectures deal with the vital theological questions now so much under discussion. No man sets forth the importance of the Creed and its relation to faith and practice more powerfully and eloquently than Bishop Candler. It is a complete answer to the specious cry of Modernism. "It is not creed we want but character."

This is a great book to read now that the holidays are coming on. It deals with the Virgin Birth and kindred subjects. Let a thousand preachers read this book and I venture to say that a thousand great sermons will be preached as a consequence.

Send to Pentecostal Publishing Company for the book, "The Christ and the Creed," by Bishop Candler. Price, $1.25.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

No. 1.

Text. "Men ought always to pray." Luke 18:1.

Story. The father of a little five-year-old boy was brought home dying. The darling went to his closet where he always prayed when there was trouble. His mother found him and said, "Come to mama, darling."

"I can't come yet mama. I've done praying for papa, but I'm waiting for the evidence." After a long time he ran to his mother and said, "I've got the evidence." His father opened his eyes and was soon well and went out to tell how God heard his darling boy's prayer.

Poem.

"What a friend is Jesus in this world of woe!
Oh, how sweet to trust him and his power to know!
This Friend of mine."

Prayer.

Heavenly Father, "I'll keep on praying till I pray through,
All thy promises are always true."

No. 2.

Text. "Make no mourning for the dead." Ezek. 24:17.

Story. A little girl's father died. At night, about to say her prayer, she began, "God bless mama and ——" She wept and said, "Oh, mama, I can't pray for papa any more." Her mother said, "Don't cry, darling, praise Jesus for a good papa so kind and loving. Think of his spirit up in heaven with God, so bright and happy. And how happy we shall be when we see him again." After that when she prayed for mama she thanked Jesus for papa.

Poem.

"E'en for the dead I will not bind
My soul to grief.
Death can but hide,
It can't divide.
For is it not as though
The rose that climbed my garden wall
Had blossomed on the other side?"

Prayer. Heavenly Father, I thank thee that all who have loved Jesus and have passed away are happy with him.

No. 3.

Text. "Thou hast holden me by thy right hand." Psa. 73:23.

Story. A little boy and his mother were on a train that was going through a dark tunnel. The baby cried out, "Is oo there, mama?" She took his hand and held it and baby was not afraid any more.

Poem, Prayer.

Heavenly Father,
"Though days be dark and I seek in vain
Thy face of Love Divine;
And though darkness press
Thou art here to bless,
By the touch of Thy hand on mine.
There is peace and power,
In the trying hour,
In the touch of Thy hand on mine."

No. 4.

Text. "Hath made of one blood all nations." Acts 17:26.

Story. William had four beautiful bunnies. The mother had died. So William fed them warm milk, and loved them. They would hop over him and cuddle up to his neck.

Sicily had four white kittens hidden in the hay loft. The next day they were missing. His father said they had gone down the river. William did not understand but knew they were not to be his. The next day his four bunnies were gone. Where do you think they were? Up in the hay loft. Sicily had stolen them. The beautiful cat took the best of care of them. She was puzzled because they would not eat mice but loved vegetables. If there are any foreign children in your school, think of Sicily and be kind to them.

Poem.

Jesus loves the little children,
Whether they are white or black,
So I must always love them too,
And not let them think they lack.

Prayer. Jesus help me to remember that you died for the little heathen children as well as for me.

No. 5.

Text. "Laborers together with God." 1 Cor. 3:9.

Story. The basket of blocks was on the ground, and three little faces looked down at it. "It's too heavy for me," said Jimmy. "Well, you're big as I am, 'cause we're twins," said Nellie. "I won't carry it," said the little cousin. Mama said, "One day three little birds wanted a stick carried somewhere, but it was too large for any one of them to carry. What do you think they did?" "We don't know," said the twins. "They all took hold of it together, then they could fly with it." The children laughed. Then they all took hold of the basket together, and it was easy to carry.

Poem.

"Ready to help, ready to bear.
Ready to stand the test,
Ready to go where others are,
Ready to do my best."

Prayer. Father, I would like to be a helper and not a hinderer.

No. 6.

Text. "Love never faileth." 1 Cor. 13:8.

Story. A lady met a little girl carrying her brother. She said, "That burden is too heavy for you."

The darling said, "He ain't no burden, I love my brother." A little boy was carrying some pillows upstairs. A man said, "They are too heavy for you." "Oh, no, my father knows how much I can carry."

Poem, Prayer.

Heavenly Father,
Thou seest what is best for me,
No burden it can ever be,
To do what thou dost ask of me,
For with all my heart I love thee.

No. 7.

Text. "Who his own self bare our sins." 1 Peter 2:24.

Story. A little boy was naughty. He knew he ought to be punished. His teacher told him she would take the blow, and brought the ruler down on her own hands. It left a long red mark. The lad wept. She told him how Jesus bore his sins. They knelt and prayed and he was saved.

Poem.

My Savior on his cross,
My sins in love he bore.
I may not suffer loss,
But love him ever more.
Prayer. Dear Jesus, I love Thee for bearing my sins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This time I pass over small particulars about myself, and write something of much more importance than my little self. I know of a father giving this advice to his boy, and I think it very good: "My boy, treat everybody with politeness, even those who are rude to you; for remember that you show courtesy to others not because they are gentlemen but because you are one." Mr. Moody once said to a friend, "That man must have been in the army or in a military school." He answered, "Yes; how do you know?" "By the way he walks." We can tell that some people have been with Jesus by their walk. "He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." The Lord always keeps his promises to us and we should keep our promises to one another, and "answer every letter received." (Some here have not, as I know). Willie Curran.
Rt. 9, Box 239, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been some time since I have written to your page. First of all, let me tell you how much I appreciated the many letters I received from the cousins. They were over 50 in number and from 20 states, Canada and some foreign countries. I have just returned from a wonderful trip through the East and Canada. I visited Niagara Falls, Quebec, New York City, Washington, D. C., and many other places of interest. My trip was almost perfect as to weather conditions and covered some 3000 miles. While we found most of the country to be wonderful, let me say to those who read this from New York state that you have one of the finest states in the U. S. The highways were superb and especially The Honeymoon Trail from Niagara Falls to Rochester and the Storm King Highway near New York City. One cannot comprehend the beauty and grandeur of these highways until they have once been over them. I would not forget the famous Mohawk Trail from Greenfield to North Adams, Mass. It is unsurpassed in beauty. It was certainly the hand of God that made this wonderful country and it was his hand that guided the men who made possible these marvelous highways. Quebec is indeed a wonderful city. One could spend weeks there, seeing its wonderful places of historic interest. The Canadian churches are marvelous. One would never forget the churches once they visited Canada. At this time there is being dedicated in Cincinnati, and as you may know I live in Greater Cincinnati, a wonderful new church. It is the Hyde Park Community M. E. Church. It is said to be one of the finest churches in America. It is very unique in many ways. It is being erected with the hope that all creeds will come and worship there. The beautiful front window will represent the three great religions. The center pane will represent the Protestant Church, on one side will be the scroll of Laws of the Jewish church and on the other side will be the Sacred Heart of the Catholic Church. The leaders of the greatest churches throughout the country will speak at the dedicatory services. How I wish all the cousins could attend. As my letter is growing somewhat long I shall bring it to a close. Let me again thank you who wrote me in response to my last letter. I certainly did appreciate them all and am sure that I have gained a number of new friends through them. I shall be glad to hear from anyone who cares to write. I am not quite twenty-one years old, almost six feet tall, weigh 155 pounds and you can guess how I look. Best wishes to all.

Dwight C. Yelton.

425 Russell Ave., Covington, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a nephew and cousin from the Vale of Paradise in grand old Florida, the sunshine state. I am nine summers young. I attend Sunday school every Sunday and church every time I can. Hoping to see this in print, with much love, Cecil H. Anchors.
Riceville, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you move over and give me a seat? I am a little boy twelve years old. I have one brother sixteen. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. Our pastor is Brother Grant. I go to the M. E. Church. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with C and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. I am in the seventh grade. I hope Mr. W. B. is mowing the yard when my letter arrives. With love to the cousins I will close.

James Wright.
Madisonville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Arkansas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I sure enjoy the Boys and Girls' Page. I am an orphan girl. I will be sixteen years old March 22. I have a good home. My father and mother are Christians, and so am I. We take The Herald; I think it is a wonderful paper. I belong to the M. E. Church, South. I have dark brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion and weigh 139 pounds. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with B and ends with E and has eight letters in it.

Ola Higdon.
Box 73, Altus, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I love to read the letters in The Herald and I've decided to write too. I thought T. Richardson Gray's letter about the "pencil and eraser" was good. He is right, you can't undo a sin, after it's done, although you can get peace and forgiveness for it. I liked Ethel Mae Stone's letter: she is just a little older than I. Her birthday is in May, mine is July 7th. I was fifteen then. I am the youngest in the family of nine children I had a half sister. Daddy was married twice; my half sister is dead, and my oldest brother is dead also. I guess you think I am spoiled 'cause I am the baby. Oh well, I am not going to tell you if I am or not! We all belong to the Methodist Church. I joined in September, 1924. Rev. W. S. Ezzel was holding a revival meeting. We all thought Bro Ezzel a wonderful preacher. We have had three different preachers since then. Our pastor is Rev. George J Steinman; he hasn't been preaching very long, but he preaches well. I will be going a year to Sunday school without missing a Sunday the last of September. I am working for a gold pin. I am the only one in my class that hasn't missed. Our teacher is Mrs. H. I. Barnett. She is a wonderful Christian woman, I love her very much. She is going to California on a visit in a few days. I surely will miss her, but I know she will have a good time. My sister gave me the book, "Beautiful Girlhood." I have read some of it, and like it fine. I am like Isabel Hall. I don't believe the boys and girls should write so much about themselves. There are so many other things to write about. Nora Swanson, I think your middle name is "Lurline." If I am right send your picture. Spofford isn't a large place; we only have two stores and three churches. I go sometimes to hear the Baptist preacher; he seems to be a good man. I don't see very many letters from Texas.

Sallie Eva Vincent.
Spofford, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am very sorry to say but I can hardly ever see a letter from New York state no matter how hard I look. So I will write and if New York state letters are accepted I shall expect to see this printed. I wrote once before to The Herald but it was about a year, so I think I had better be introduced again. I have light hair (long), light complexion and gray eyes. I am thirteen years old, and am in the eighth grade in the St. John Ave. School, Binghamton, N. Y. I had a nice vacation last summer. I visited my aunt's farm at Conklin, N. Y., and had a nice time as I do not visit a farm often. I live in the city. I took a trip to Syracuse, Lake Ontario, and many other lakes. I have also attended four camp meetings; so I have had a full summer. I like to write letters so I assure you of an answer if you write to me.

Prayers for Girls

Prayers for Boys

TWO BOOKS

BY ELIZABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL.

It is with the ideal of helping the boy and girl to face life with God, and to teach them to give true expression to their devotion, that these little books are sent out upon their mission. They enter into the inner sanctuary of the heart, and enable them to give utterance to longings and hopes which heretofore he or she may have been unable or unwilling to speak in the presence of God. A prayer for Courage, for Cheerfulness, for Fortitude under Failure, in Perplexity, in Sorrow, in Disappointment—these few titles show the wideness of the little books' range, and the depth of their understanding and sympathy. It is the ideal gift for every boy and girl in the Sunday Schools and Bible Classes of our churches. We have long needed just such books as these.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson VIII.—November 20, 1927.

Subject.—Micah Champions the Oppressed. Micah 2:1-3; 6:1-13.

Golden Text.—He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? Micah 6:8.

Time.—About B. C. 710.

Place.—The kingdom of Judah.

Introduction.—Micah calls himself the Morasthite, meaning an inhabitant of the town of Moresa situated in the southern part of Judah. He was a contemporary of Isaiah, and lived during the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah, kings of Judah. He is supposed to have exercised the prophetic office for about fifty years.

Micah's prophecy is a close parallel to that of Isaiah. Some have supposed that this similarity arose from the kindred topics concerning which they prophesied; but this position hardly seems tenable. Others have contended that he copied from Isaiah, which is possibly true. Living and prophesying at the same time, and both belonging to the kingdom of Judah, we may well suppose that they had no little conversation about the condition of their people, and concerning the sort of preaching and prophesying that needed to be done. They were kindred spirits, and would naturally be drawn together in their work.

Micah's prophecy covered a wide range of subjects. He foretold the destruction of Samaria, which occurred in the sixth year of the reign of king Hezekiah. He also prophesied of the troubles that would befall Judah—troubles that came from Babylon under Sennacherib. But his prophecy was not without solid foundation. He denounced sinners and their sins because they were destroying the two kingdoms. He spared no one, high or low, but declaimed against magistrates, judges, princes, priests and false prophets, telling them of their lying, their injustice and their greed. Like Amos and Hosea, he warned them that the wrath of Jehovah would certainly fall upon them unless they repented and turned again to him for mercy and pardon.

Micah is rich in prophecies concerning the coming of our Lord. In chapter 5:2 he says: "But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." When king Herod demanded of the chief priests and scribes where Jesus should be born, they said: "In Bethlehem of Judaea: for thus it is written by the prophet, And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Note the slight change of words, which often occurs in quotations from the Old Testament to the New. The sense is clear, however. He prophesied also, that the dominion of this ruler should extend even unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

Good Hebrew scholars tell us of the beautiful diction of this prophet. They compare his style with that of the loftiness of Isaiah. The Lord's controversy with his people, given in today's lesson can hardly be surpassed in sublimity. In strength of expression he equals Amos and Isaiah. In chapter 2:4 he grows pathetic: "In that day shall one take up a parable against you, and lament with a doleful lamentation, and say, We be utterly spoiled: he hath changed the portion of my people: how hath he removed it from me; turning away he hath divided our fields."

Micah's prophecy confirms the preaching of his contemporaries. Both kingdoms were involved in desperate wickedness. The rich had won their ill-gotten gains by trampling upon the rights of the poor. They were revelling in wealth, while the victims of their oppression were starving in their poverty; but the rich had no pity nor any mercy. They continued to grind their downtrodden neighbors into the dust. Our lesson represents Micah as the champion of these stricken ones.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Woe to them that devise iniquity.—"Who lay schemes and plans for transgressions; who make it their study to find out new modes of sinning; and make these things their nocturnal meditations, that, having fixed their plan, they may begin to execute it as soon as it is light in the morning." Because it is in the power of their hand.—Wicked men do not hesitate to do evil when they are in authority.

2. They covet fields, and take them by violence.—Just as Jezebel had Naboth killed, in order to get his vineyard for Ahab. Greedy men still lay all sorts of schemes to rob the poor man of his heritage. There is no viler sin than covetousness, except unbelief in the God of the Bible.

3. Against this family do I devise an evil, from which ye shall not remove your necks.—"This family" means the kingdom of Israel. They had sold themselves to sin; there was neither justice nor mercy left among them. The rich had robbed the poor, and the poor had become debauched along with their oppressors. Now Jehovah takes a hand, and devises sore punishment for the entire kingdom. Tiglath-pileser conquered the kingdom, and carried the people into captivity into Assyria before the death of Micah.

6:1. The first seven verses of this chapter set forth a dialogue between Jehovah and the people. In the first five verses Micah represents God as speaking to them in such language as would tend to bring them under conviction for their sins. God calls upon the mountains and the "strong foundations of the earth" to bear witness to the fact that he has a controversy with his people. Once he cries: "O my people," and reminds them of his goodness towards them. Again he cries: "O my people," and calls upon them to remember his deliverances from enemies, that they "might know the righteousness of the Lord." God was speaking through the prophet; and, had the people repented, he would have heard their cry; but they were not moved in their hearts to return unto him.

6 and 7. Where with shall I come before the Lord, and bow myself before the high God?—It is hardly to be supposed that the people really uttered these words. It is probably Micah's speech wherein he was endeavoring to help them to see their

Two Paramount Christmas Specials.

The Best Christmas Story, a Christmas play, and The Story That Never Grows Old, a Christmas pageant. It has always been our aim to offer only such plays, pageants, and other feature specials, as might be possible of presentation in any Church or School, whether large or small. Both the play and the pageant in this book are of this kind, and either of them can be given as printed, elaborated upon, or abbreviated. Both are splendid and well adapted for a successful Christmas program.

utter ruin; and, perchance, to lead them to repentance. Burnt offerings and calves of the stall meant nothing to Jehovah as long as the people worshipped idols. They might offer up to God thousands of rams and pour out "rivers of oil"; but, as long as their hearts were set in them to do evil, their worship was not acceptable to him. Yea, they might have sacrificed their children for the sins of their souls, but it would have been as a stench in the presence of Jehovah. They had crossed the deadline.

One is tempted to moralize a bit just here. What was true of Israel is true of men today. A thinking, praying man must be uneasy about our pleasure-mad, money-crazy American people. A day of divine wrath is coming upon us as surely as there is "no variability neither shadow of turning" with Almighty God. We are saying much about having a nationwide revival of "old-time Christianity"; but there are no present tokens of its coming. Nothing but such a revival can save this nation from ruin.

Beginning with the eighth verse, the prophet turns upon his people in unmeasured terms. But he begins by giving them the beautiful words of our golden text to show them the reasonableness of the Almighty. He did not require of them any strange or hard thing: "His commandments are not grievous." Thence on to the end of the chapter Micah delivers one of the severest tirades against sin to be found in the entire Bible. Their scant measure, their wicked balances, their deceitful weights, their violence and their common lying stood out before God as an abomination. Then follows a harrowing description of the sudden and terrible destruction that

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Floyd Ware: "I am desirous of getting in touch with an evangelist who needs a gospel singer. I have had experience in this work, using the guitar and cornet; also do personal work at the altar and in the audience. If any one reading this notice is in need of such help please to let me hear from them. Address me, Piketon, Ohio.

Mrs. Kate Bailey who has been in the Ohio Valley Hospital for some time, is recovering and will join Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Frey in their evangelistic work in the spring, giving Bible readings and doing personal work.

The Gaddis-Moser evangelistic party will begin revival meetings in the Holiness Mission, New Boston, O., December 2, closing Dec. 19. Prayer is requested for this meeting.

Rev. Jesse Uhler, Clearwater, Kan., has some open dates for fall and winter which he would be glad to give to any one desiring his assistance in revival meetings.

Mrs. S. H. Tucker: "Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Bishop, has just closed a revival campaign with Dr. Odom as the evangelist. There were a number professed faith in Christ; a number transferred by letter, making 46 that have been added to our church since last March. We heard Brother Bud Robinson preach a glorious sermon at the U. B. Church."

The annual meeting of the Ohio State Camp Meeting Association (Camp Sychar) was held Tuesday at 1 o'clock at the home of the president, the Rev. C. L. Lewis, at Camp Sychar. All members were present with the exception of Mr. O. F. Skeen, who is spending the winter in California. Reports were given by the officers and the association was greatly encouraged by the prompt payment of many pledges to the new dormitory fund. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—The Rev. C. L. Lewis, Camp Sychar, Mt. Vernon.

Vice president—The Rev. H. E. Williamson, Marion.

Secretary—The Rev. E. E. Shiltz, Shadyside.

Assistant Secretary—The Rev. J. J. Adams, Sycamore.

Treasurer—William Kathary, Macksburg.

Auditor—The Rev. Clare T. Goodwin, Wooster.

Superintendent of Grounds—O. F. Skeen, Mt. Vernon.

Assistant Superintendent of Grounds—H. E. Oberholtzer, Mt. Vernon.

Executive Committee—The Rev. C. L. Lewis, the Rev. H. E. Williamson, and the Rev. Clare T. Goodwin.

Book-Store Committee—The Rev. H. E. Williamson and the Rev. J. J. Adams.

Trustees—O. F. Skeen, William Kathary and H. E. Oberholtzer.

Purchasing Committee—O. F. Skeen, William Kathary and the Rev. E. E. Shiltz.

The dates for the 1928 camp were set for August 9-19. Workers for the 1928 camp are as follows: The Rev. Joseph Owen, the Rev. E. W. Pethcord, the Rev. C. M. Dunaway, with Prof. Kenneth Wells and Mrs. Wells as song leaders. Miss Anna McGhie will be young people's worker with the Rev. W. L. Mullett as song leader. Miss Mae C. Gorsuch and Miss Ollie Tanner will be the boys and girls' workers.

TWO SPECIALS FOR NOVEMBER ONLY

By chance we secured a few hundred copies of the Precious Promise Bible, which is sold exclusively through agents at a net retail price of $7.75. The publishers of this special Bible have refused to sell us any more, hence we are closing out what we have left of this edition, during the month of November only, at the very special price of $4.50, postpaid, or with the patent thumb index for $5.00.

This Bible would make a wonderfully attractive gift to most any one, as all of God's promises (which comprise about one-tenth of the entire Bible) are underscored and indexed.

There are possibly 50 references to "Worry," more than 250 references to "Victory over troubles," over 200 references as to "The prosperity of the upright"—nearly 2,000 promises in all on various subjects. Besides, this Bible contains an encyclopedic concordance, which is a concordance and dictionary and encyclopedia combined.

It is the King James Version, large clear long primer type, is self-pronouncing, 40,000 references, bound in genuine leather with overlapping edges, extra fine thin Bible paper, chapter headings in figures, red under gold edges, size 5 1/2 x 8 x 1 1/4 inches thick. It is really a wonderful Bible, a beautiful book, and is well worth the agent's price of 7.75, but you can buy one or more of them, while they last, during this month, at the prices mentioned above, postpaid.

SPECIAL NO. 2.

One of the large motto manufacturers went out of business recently, and we bought a very large quantity of some of the most popular styles. We are offering them to you during the month of November, while they last, at the rate of three for $1.00, postpaid, or 10 for $2.50, postpaid. The following titles are the ones offered in this November sale:

No. 4014. Size 10x13. 50c.

A Prayer for Our Home. That Thine eyes may be upon this house day and night.

No. 4018. Size 10x13 inches. 50c.

Familiar Failures

REV. CLOVIS G. CHAPPELL, D.D.

Applying that same fine ability for analysis which has distinguished his other volumes, Dr. Chappell in this book turns his attention to The Drifter, The Trifler, the man who is too busy, and other well-known types who make a failure of the business of life. He presents the type in a most engaging manner, and then shows the factors operative in each individual failure. An excellent addition to the fine series of character studies which have already given Dr. Chappell a wide and alert audience.

THINK ON THESE THINGS.

By The Editor.

IT is high time for a general rebellion and holy war to be declared against false teaching in schools and pulpits with reference to the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, the godhead of Christ, the blood atonement he made upon the cross, his resurrection, ascension and intercession for the redemption of men.

* * * *

The queer religious infidelity that has gotten into the church, worked itself into leadership, which is denying the necessity of regeneration, the need or possibility of sanctification, the sinfulness and need of humanity—and almost everything connected with the fundamental teachings of our Lord Jesus, I say, that a faithful ministry and devout laity need to arise and speak out in no uncertain sound against this clamor of false teaching touching evangelical religion.

* * * *

Quite recently I have heard of several Methodist preachers who said that they knew nothing about a spiritual crisis in their religious history, or of what is commonly called regeneration, or a new birth; that they grew up in religious homes, were trained to live decent lives, and chose to go into the ministry. This sort of talk is not in harmony with Methodism and does not meet the requirements of the Bible. Jesus Christ has said that we must be born again; that the new birth is the only door into the Kingdom of God. We cannot afford to give up the teachings of the Lord Jesus for the chatter of religious skeptics who, while they eat the bread of the church, destroy the faith of the people in the Church.

* * * *

False teaching is the forerunner of immoral conduct. Destroy the faith of the people in the Word of God, take a wholesome reverence and godly fear out of their hearts, and you have broken down the dikes that God in his wisdom has built up against the floods of sin that will pour in upon us; we shall have an inundation of wickedness. No Methodist preacher should permit any one to come into his district or church disseminating false doctrine without most earnest protest on his part. No preacher or layman, for that matter, is under any obligation to any one to sit quietly and let any official, or any one sent out by an official, teach the people that regeneration is unnecessary. It is criminal to keep quiet and permit such unscriptural and unmethodistic teaching to be paraded and disseminated in our Sunday school training schools. Such teachers are striking at the very foundation of the whole superstructure of the Christian Church.

* * * *

Fill your church with an unregenerated people and you will have to resort to methods of entertainment and teaching entirely out of harmony with the Word of God in order to hold those people. Neither can you preach to them the plain truths of the Bible with authority. They know nothing of God;

THAT THANKOFFERING.

Say, Brother, Sister, can't you do something, large or small, for our Preachers' Loan Fund on Thanksgiving Day? We are building up a great Theological Seminary at Asbury College and covet your support. There is not, there cannot be, no greater work than the training and sending forth a body of Spirit-filled young men to preach a full gospel to the world.

We have a Loan Fund, but not one fifth as large as our work demands. Send us a donation on Thanksgiving Day. Don't fail to give something for this work of the Lord so sorely needed in these days of unbelief and skepticism.

Send to H. C. Morrison, care Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

Faithfully, your brother,
H. C. Morrison.

they are strangers to his grace. They will not submit to a searching Bible Gospel. Nothing can be more destructive to the spiritual life of the church and lead more suddenly to immorals, lawlessness, and the final destruction of human souls than the teaching now being promulgated that the regeneration of the individual is unnecessary. Let us be faithful to Christ and his teachings, and be bold as lions in the cause of God and the defense of scriptural truth.

Monthly Sermon.

THE MINISTRY OF AFFLICTION.

Text: "Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterwards it yielded the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." (Heb. 12:11.)

The mystery and ministry of human suffering is one of the profound problems that presents itself for the consideration of the thoughtful Christian. It is a problem, however, which will thrust itself upon our attention. It seems impossible to live even for a short time in this world and escape suffering.

The introduction of sin into the world brought with it an endless trail of sorrow and a vast river running through the ages made up of the blood and tears of suffering humanity. To live means to suffer. The palaces of the rich and the huts of the poor are alike the abodes of sorrow. All men from the most learned and conspicuous to the most illiterate and obscure carry their burdens of disappointments, shattered hopes, and heartache.

Human plans, however well laid, often miscarry. It is impossible to fortify against the encroachments of old age, decay, and the sorrows which attend sickness, disease, and death. However thick the walls of your house, however secure windows, and however strong doors, sorrows will enter, and sooner or later the black crepe of mourning must hang upon the door-knob of every home where human beings dwell, sicken, suffer, and die. Who has not been deeply puzzled with this problem of suffering? We have seen innocent little children prostrated with disease, suffering beyond words to express, lifting up their helpless little hands for help which could not possibly reach them. We have seen mothers stricken down with their little ones about them clinging tenaciously to life, not for selfish motives, but for love of those who would be left motherless and buffeted by an unkind world if she who gave them birth should pass away, and yet in the midst of her longing and her prayers she has been compelled to embrace and kiss her weeping children so soon to be left motherless and go into the great beyond. We have seen the loving husband and father, who is giving himself to toil to provide for those he loves, stricken down and going out to leave a family unprovided for, to fight their hard battles with evil men more hungry for the pitiful little sum of money and worse still the destruction of the character of those left to mourn unprotected. We have seen the preacher in the strength of his manhood, aflame with evangelistic fire, hang his silent trumpet upon the wall, draw the drapery of his couch about him, and fall into silent sleep to awake in another world. And as we have looked upon these scenes we have been compelled to ask questions that no one can answer. Why is it so? Why this suffering, this disease, and this untimely death? In these hours of darkness many poor hearts under the temptation of the ever-ready enemy have cried out against God and complained that his judgments were severe. Not unfrequently under such trying circumstances those who have known and rejoiced in the light of a living faith have fallen into doubt and turned back into darkness.

Left to ourselves, no human philosophy can solve this problem of human suffering and bring us a satisfactory answer. Life is so vast. Its reaches are so extended that we are quite unable to understand all that goes into this problem of sorrow, tears and death. We should never undertake to philosophize on the subject unmindful of the fact that this life in the body is a mere introduction into life, a short period of probation and preparation for the real life that extends into what we call eternity. If in this life only we have hope, we would indeed be as the inspired apostle has declared "of all men most miserable." In our thinking on this subject we must always remember that the grand realities that embrace the ceaseless ages await us beyond the confine of years, beyond the vale of tears, beyond the little things of time in the vast and ceaseless ages of eternity.

OF ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

In The Land of Luther and The Reformation.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

HE Christian Church is greatly indebted to Germany. She it was who gave us the Reformation. She gave us Luther the mighty, Melancthon the scholar and man of God, Tholuck the evangelical theologian, Christlieb the fundamentalist. Methodism is greatly indebted to Germany because it was the Moravians who led John Wesley into saving faith, and to Germany he went to see Christian perfection exemplified among the pietists there. Then some of the sublimest hymns in the Hymn Book are translations from the German. John Wesley did a fine work for Hymnology when he translated some of those choice hymns. Indeed, John Wesley's greatest contributions to the Hymn Book were these splendid translations from the German into the English.

Germany, unlike Italy and France and Spain and Portugal, is strongly Protestant. Protestantism and Progress seem to go hand in hand, hence Germany was in a fair way to become one of the greatest nations of modern history had not the cruel World War broken out and brought defeat and disaster to her. One thing strikes us particularly in Germany as we travel through the country, there are no devastated cities or towns or provinces like you meet with in France. We went from Rheims and Verdun into Germany. What a difference! German cities unhurt, unscathed by war, great buildings, great palaces, great churches and cathedrals, great business houses, great highways without a war scratch upon them! How different from Rheims and Chateau Thierry and Verdun, etc.! The most cruelly butchered city it seems to us was Rheims and its magnificent Cathedral! Oh it was a crime against art and beauty and religion the way that massive poem in stone was pounded and hammered and pelted and spoiled and ruined! They are trying to restore it but its original beauty and charm are incapable of restoration!

It is evident on every hand that Germany is fast recovering herself. Her big cities seem to be doing a great business; her hotels are massive and the restaurants look prosperous. We had a humorous time in Cologne one night as we dropped in for a cup of tea and some pastry. Our German was very limited and we had to use considerable of the sign language. We enjoyed the refreshment all the more because of the good laugh we all had over the affair. Germany is a Republic as a result of the War; her President recently passed his eightieth birthday! (Let folks who talk about being old at 65 and 70 take notice). The Press gives the following about the President's birthday:

"President Hindenburg of the German Republic celebrated his eightieth birthday on Sunday. Forty thousand school-children and eighty thousand adults cheered the aged German leader as he was driven through five miles of Berlin streets until weary. The only period of relaxation the President had was when the schoolkids ignored their discipline and crowded around the President's automobile to get a closer view of their hero. After the President's car came a gigantic parade in which the brilliance of the countryside peasant costumes rivalled the military display of the steel-helmeted troops."

We have a notion that Protestantism in Germany is like its great Cologne Cathedral—very dignified and very cold. There were some signs a few years ago of a revival of religion but we hear nothing of it at this time. We think, however, that Germany is war weary. We talked with a business man in a German train; when he found out that we were Legionnaires he suggested that it would be a good thing if we would forget war and that possibly those international gatherings, like the Legion had in Paris, might have a tendency to keep war memories alive and the war spirit! Possibly so! One thing, however, is in Germany's favor, financially, today. The Treaty of Versailles forbade her having any standing Army or Navy. This saves Germany an immense sum of money every year. She is thus assisted by this saving to pay her war indemnities and make reparations to France and England and Belgium.

My purpose in this article, however, is not to discuss Germany, so much, as Luther, Melancthon and other brave, heroic souls who brought us the Reformation.

In the City of Prague there is an old book containing the ancient liturgy of the Hussites. It is richly illuminated with pictures depicting Wicliffe at the top of the page kindling a spark. Just below is Huss blowing the spark into a flame, and finally, underneath Huss stands Luther brandishing a lighted torch. Wicliffe has been called the "Morning Star of the Reformation." He was an Oxford man. "A Doctor in Theology, the most eminent of his day; in philosophy second to none; in scholastic discipline incomparable. He soared far above others in the subtlety of his genius, and surpassed them in the profundity of his knowledge."

Next to Wicliffe was Huss of Bohemia. His pulpit in Bethlehem Chapel, Prague, built by two wealthy citizens that the Gospel might be preached independently became a place of power and protest. A Jesuit speaking of Bethlehem Chapel said: "Its pulpit is John Huss' triumphal chariot, and the paintings upon the walls are the blazonry of his armor." Huss lived in the days of two Popes—one at Rome, the other at Avignon, France; then as the result of the quarrel a third was elected, Alexander the Fifth, who at once issues a bull which arouses the fighting ire of Huss. He reforges Wicliffe's old bolts and hurls them right and left with tremendous effect. The priests call him an incarnate devil—a heretic—they have a bonfire of all of Wicliffe's and Jerome's and Huss' books. The archbishop forbade Huss preaching in Bethlehem Chapel but he keeps on preaching; his words are thunderbolts and the common people hear him gladly. Next, the Council of Constance is called, attended by 30 Cardinals, 20 Archbishops, 150 Bishops, 4,000 priests, while thousands of servants and soldiers are present. The Council lasts four years. Many ecclesiastical questions are handled and finally, Huss, the heretic, is brought before the Council. The demand made of Huss is Recant! Recant! but Huss said: "Convict me of heresy by the teachings of Christ and his apostles and I will cheerfully recant. But as yet there is nothing to recant. I cannot abjure errors that have been imputed to me by false witnesses." But at length they consign Huss to be burned at the stake. Amid the smoke and flame he is heard to exclaim: "Glory be to God on high, and on earth, peace and good will towards men. We praise Thee! We bless Thee! We give thanks to Thee for Thy great glory!"

When we think of Luther we cannot avoid thinking of Erasmus and Melancthon—strange the leadings of God in great epochs of church history! To Luther, God gave Melancthon; to Wesley, he gave Whitefield; to Moody he gave Sankey!

Melancthon played no unimportant part in the history of the Reformation! At fourteen years of age Melancthon is Bachelor of Arts, at seventeen he is Master of Arts. Erasmus wrote of him, "He is equally eminent in Latin and Greek. What acuteness in argument! What quickness of invention! What purity of diction! What vastness of memory! What variety of reading! What modesty and gracefulness of behavior! And what a princely mind." Writing to another friend he said: "I am persuaded that Christ designs this youth to excel us all; he will totally eclipse Erasmus." And so it happened.

Luther, writing of Melancthon said, "I, Martin Luther, am born to be forever fighting with opponents, and with the devil himself, which gives a controversial and warlike cast to all my works. I clear the ground of stumps and trees, root up thorns and briars; fill up ditches, raise causeways and smooth the road through the woods; but to Philip Melancthon it belongs, by the grace of God, to perform a milder and more grateful labor; to build, to plant, to sow, to water, to please by elegance and taste." But theologically it is entirely impossible to separate Melancthon from Luther; they each have their place in the great work of the Reformation. They constitute the centripetal and centrifugal forces in this great moral movement. Luther was bold and fearlessly executive. Melancthon was judicial. Luther saw a single point, Melancthon saw many and the remoter consequences. Luther saw the pernicious nature of error. Melancthon the beauty of truth and goodness. But in the long run it took a Luther to project the Reformation. Melancthon never would have done the daring things Luther did; in great epochs it takes rough men and unafraid and courageous men to bring things to pass.

The Reformation did not break all at once. There were many things leading up to that consummation. Dr. John Duncan has stated it this way:

"The progressive landmarks of theology might be determined by selecting typical texts of scripture to describe the points made emphatic by the principal teachers of the church."

Thus one may connect Athanasius with the words: "Go ye into all the world, teaching and baptizing in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost."

Augustine with the words: "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God. Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost which he shed on us abundantly."

Anselme with the words: "Christ suffered for our sins, the just for the unjust that he might bring us to God."

Remigius: "I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." "My sheep hear my voice and I know them and they follow me."

Luther: "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even as we have believed in Jesus Christ that we might be justified by the faith of Christ and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified."

Calvin: "Blessed be God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world that we should be holy and without blame before him in love."

I will add to the above another one for Wesley: "Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ let us go on to Perfection."

In closing this sketch let me advert to one feature of the Reformation which came near ruining it if it had not been for the strong hand of Luther. It is only a case of history and human nature repeating itself, however, as it appears that in all moral movements and religious revivals there will always arise fanatics and fanaticism. In Luther's day it arose out among a handful of ignorant enthusiasts from Zwicken—Zwicken prophets they were called. They claimed the illumination and inspiration of the Holy Ghost. They accepted Luther's teachings and claimed equal authority. They boasted direct revelations from God, prophetic visions, dreams, and familiar conversations with the Deity. Scripture was a thing of secondary importance. For communion and intercourse with God, they looked not to faith but a mystic process of self-abstractation from everything external, sensual and finite, until the soul becomes immovably centered in the one Divine Being. This spirit seemingly so elevated and pure, broke out nevertheless into fanaticism of the wildest kind by demanding a general revolution, the slaying of the priests and all godless men, the setting up of a community of goods and a new kingdom of God. Melancthon was no match for this situation; he was disposed to regard their claims with a degree of favor. Not so with Luther; he hastened to where they were and, like an enraged lion, quelled and quenched the disturbing fanaticism.

Some Signs of Our Lord's Near Coming.

Rev. L. L. Pickett.

(No. 2.)

IN the conclusion of our former article, we were studying our Lord's Word concerning the Jews. From this we learned that the "times of the Gentiles" are undoubtedly approaching the end. No longer is Jerusalem being "trodden under foot," by the brutal Turk. The day of their oppression of Israel is at an end. Already God's ancient people have passed from the control of the oppressor. to the protection of their friends, the British Government.

Passing from Jerusalem, the Master gives us a more extensive view of world conditions. Not only is this world involved according to the Master's word, but even other worlds or empires are involved. Hear him: "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexities: the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." (Luke 21:25, 26). Look at the breadth of this statement, see how it involves the earth, with sundry and varying nations. Also observe that the sun, the moon, and the stars are affected.

Look about you, reader, behold the "perplexity of nations." There is the spirit of dread upon them all, a spirit of fear, of anxiety, is manifest among the nations. Have you thought of the relation of our Lord's return to the confusion and dread of the nations? What untoward things have happened! During the past fifteen months many terrible and alarming things have occurred. This short period will cover the great storm in Florida in which many lives were lost, and many homes were destroyed; hundreds were maimed, many of them for life, and property running into the multiplied millions was swept away. Scarcely had the tempest passed from Florida till it fell in great fury upon Alabama and Mississippi. Only a short time had elapsed until it reached the southern hemisphere and there wrought great destruction upon many people. Only a few weeks more and it returned in redoubled fury upon Cuba, and wrought great havoc upon this island.

Again early in this year the great flood swept across seven of our southern states. The loss of life would have been terrific but for a national grappling with difficulties by which the lives of many were saved and the preservation of much property effected. However, the destruction and the maiming of life was unprecedented. A vast territory reaching out into several states lay helpless before the encroachments of the devastating flood. Hundreds of thousands were left hungry and desolate. Such a scourge from the hand of Nature was never before visited upon our fair land. Homes were swept away, horses and cattle were drowned, thousands of people were rendered homeless, helpless, and but for the aid of a great government, they would have been left hopeless. It is estimated that more than five hundred millions of dollars will be necessary to restore the lands, the homes, and the families to their former state. Nothing less than a national movement can meet the issue and restore the land from the effects of the great scourge. No single county or state can solve the great problem. It demands the forces and the wealth of the nation.

Before relief had reached the flood-stricken sections of the South, a storm in Missouri swept the city of Poplar Bluff. Reports say that some three hundred lives were lost and more than seven hundred were more or less seriously injured. The property loss aggregated vast sums. While the nation was yet grappling with the Southern problem and Missouri with the Poplar Bluff, Kentucky was visited in her Eastern mountains. More than a hundred lives were lost, many people were wounded and otherwise damaged in their bodies, while property was swept away, passing far beyond the million dollar line.

Only a few weeks ago a monster tornado swept across the splendid city of St. Louis. Houses were leveled to the ground, others lost their roofs, or whole sides were shaved off by this monster storm. The dead and injured reached a total of nearly one thousand lives, while millions of dollars were destroyed in a few minutes. Many lost the accumulations of a busy life, inside of twenty minutes. Truly these are scourges.

Crossing the ocean, we learn of one of the greatest earthquakes of history in the very farthest northern reaches of China, in a section without railroads, without telegraphs, or telephones with no means of communicating with the outside world a mighty earthquake destroyed the foundations and swept away homes and hordes of people. It seems that there was no means of securing an accurate report, because of the great distance from the rest of the world. But rumors have reached us that perhaps a hundred thousand people were destroyed or injured. These scourges are fulfilling the prophecy of our Lord. The nations are in confusion. They know not any place of refuge, because they know not God. People of wealth are as helpless as the poor. Millionaires in the midst of storms and earthquakes are as defenseless as paupers. There is no refuge but in God, and men have forgotten him. When death and destruction stalk through the land, only God can furnish a refuge that bringeth repentance to victims of the scourge. But men who do not seek God in peace and prosperity, can seldom find him in storm, scourge, and disaster. Oh, that men would seek him now! that he might be the refuge of the poor of all time.

The Bible speaks of intense and overwhelming wickedness and lawlessness in the last days. Paul tells us that men will prefer pleasure to piety; that they will forget God in their prosperity, and will repudiate his law and authority. He tells us that they will "have the form of godliness but will deny the power thereof." Jesus says, "Iniquity shall abound and the love of the many shall wax cold."

There is a post-millennial fallacy that men will bring the world to God and will prepare them in righteousness for the end. There is no scripture to encourage this idea and no truth in it. For the world will be at the end-time in a state of intense and increasing wickedness. St. John informs us that "when he cometh with clouds every eye shall see him;" then, "all nations shall wail because of him."

Now it is in the midst of these storms and scourges that the Master gives us the picture of his own approach in these words: "Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with power and great glory." (Luke 21:27). The Russellites tell us that Jesus has already come back to the earth. This cannot be true, for when he cometh with clouds every eye shall see him. He has not yet been seen, but the time of this open manifestation of his glory certainly draweth nigh. He will not climb over the back fence or slip into the earth in some other way; he will swing down through starry spaces, in magnificent glory and great splendor. To his saints, Jesus said, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."

Holy Consistency.

The object of Christ's mission to earth was, to save souls. And can a Christian have a calling which may not, in its first aims, include this? Not to ministers alone, but to Christians of every order, does Christ say, "Ye are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." If the Christian does not, to the observation of the world, make his secular calling subservient to his holy calling as a Christian, he has no right to take upon himself the Christian name; for, surely, he is not Christ-like. The worldling knows that the Christian, by virtue of his profession, ought to differ greatly from the mere secular man; and, though he may sometimes scoff, yet his conscience approves and honors that man who, by earnest outward exhibitions, proves the sincerity of his heart. And, though he may not feel any pain inflicted by a reproving conscience while in the company of that professor whose aims in life appear no higher than his own, yet, in heart, he chides his inconsistency, and says, "What do ye more than others?" A pointed question indeed.

The Spirit of Kindness

Should be instilled into the heart and mind of every child. In doing this people often overlook the fact that the dumb animals respond to kindness with almost as much gratitude as a human being. We do not know of a better way to help create this spirit of tenderness and kindness than to place in the hands of the growing boy or girl a copy of "Black Beauty," which is a most thrilling story of a horse. A grown-up cannot read this book without purposing in his or her heart to be kind to animals, and it increases one's desire to be kind to humanity.

You could not give a young person a book for Christmas that would be read with any more pleasure and profit, and at this time we have a most attractive edition that we are offering for 50c, postpaid. Try giving the book and see if you aren't more than gratified with the results of this gift.

"If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and the sinner appear?" 1 Peter 4:18.

Modernism's Fraudulent, Fictitious, Uninspired Bible.

Rev. Basil W. Miller, S. T. M., Ph. D.

HE degenerate, outworn, soulless Bible of modernism is a series of fables, an assemblage of myths, a group of legends, interwoven with erroneous historical statements, doubtful allegories, ungrounded in facts, illuminated with fictitious names and imaginary heroes and colored with fraudulent statements of truths.

Modernists affirm that it was written by man uncontrolled, untouched and unfired by God. It was prepared for a race, by a class of people, a clan, a tribe separated from other nations, dwelling in desert lands, with a limited vision of life and the deep mysteries of truth. It is untrue in its scientific statements and without a fact of historical certitude until 800 B. C. They aver that the story of creation is a myth, written to answer such questions as, What is the source of the sun, moon and stars? How did we come to have fish? etc. The science of this story they assert base-mindedly is contradicted by every known law of modern science. Man through the ages was slowly evolved from lower animals until he emerged from brutedom half ape and half man; cycles passed and he was transmuted into a savage brute-man.

According to the "cunningly devised fables" of criticism there was no creation; never did God call a world into being, nor did he speak light into existence. All facts recorded in these earlier chapters of the Bible are untrue and unfounded in reality, without God and the supernatural. The story of the long years of the antediluvians, as retold by modernists, lost to shame, dead to honor, is the concoction of savage man wildly seeking to glorify his ancestors. The traditions of the flood found in all early nations are the result of the melting of the great glaciers of the Glacial Period. The great stories of the Patriarchs are revolved by these lampooners of God's Word into the vain inventions of story tellers with imaginations fired with the wonders of Syrian, and Babylonian heavens studded with the sparkling gems of the night. Gradually names such as Abraham and Jacob were substituted for those of clans, which gave rise to the traditions.

Such is the rot of these fables of hell! Double-tongued, false-hearted, scabby-souled must be the imps of damnation's army that will seek to destroy "the faith of our fathers" with such teachings! Through the insidious perfidy of the knavery of liberalism we have lost the rock foundation of science as given in the first chapter of Genesis. With mental rougery they have torn from God's dealings with men the great fact that the Israelites were ever in the land of Egypt. Thus the foundation of all the noble superstructure of the Christian system is wrecked by the villainy of modernism. With slander against God they deny that God revealed the Commandments to Moses on Mount Sinai. They advocate, foul-mouthed, that the Commandments were adapted from the Code of Hammurabi.

Abusive of the direct testimony of the Bible, criticism affirms that there is no authentic history given in the Book until after the eighth century before Christ. They infamously deny the history of the rise of religion as given by revelation. Undermining the foundations of our faith, venal in corrupting the beliefs of our youths, they assert that when man began to evolve from the stage of brutedom, he saw "doubles," dreamed dreams, thought on the origin of life, and thus formed an idea of the soul. Deriding the voice of inspiration, they teach that magic arose as man tried to appease the wrath of the storm. Ideas of gods, of sun, rain, storm, battle, etc., arose. And finally these bespatters of revelation would have us think that priests came, and from this evolved the origin of religion.

Modern defaming witnesses against the Bible, villifying God, ranting wildly against his Oracles, with a mask of cynicism declare that the god of early Hebrews was a local tribal god, ferocious and untamed. Dean Bade writes, "Jahveh is the God of Palestine only. . . . He is therefore a national deity." He is spoken of as a "partisan deity", a "clan god." Liberalists assert that as a "clan god" the Revealer of the Bible had no existence, and was no more powerful than other "clan gods." Finally man dropped his anthropomorphic draperies for God, and clothed him not in human form, with passions and hatreds, but thought of him as the exalted Deity of the prophets.

Modernists taunt and hiss in derision at the thought of predictive prophecy. They hoot at the idea of there being one prophecy of the coming of Christ in the Old Testament. Brazenly, disparagingly they picture the prophets as no more than merely the writers of their age, unlettered in the art of reading the future, and uninspired by God. Fables and fictitious names and legends make up the bulk of the Old Testament. Writing under assumed names in later ages, critics insultingly tell us, that the men who prepared the Old Testament palmed this off on their respective ages as the work of Moses and other leading traditional heroes of past history! To think of such folly is absurd! It must require great boldness combined with mental instability to cause a critic to state that any man living in an age capable of producing such literature as that of the Bible would even dare to hoodwink his fellows into believing that such was the writings of men known to have lived centuries before their day!

The New Testament fares but little better at the hands of the disrespectful liberalists than the Old. First modernists dared but question the Pentateuch, afterwards with increased hardness of soul they denied the supernatural in any part of the Old Testament. The remaining step in mental assassination was taken by the bold critics of the twentieth century, and the New Testament is now treated as but legends and traditions gathering around the life of some imaginary hero, called Jesus, in later centuries.

Disrespectful of Jesus, they believe that the wondrous story of his miraculous conception and birth is an accretion from a much later date than the other parts of the Gospels. The open tomb gave birth to the story of the resurrection. At first traditions of the life of Jesus existed, finally parts of this were written, and from this the present four Gospels were developed. The authorship of the fourth Gospel is denied John, and Paul is affirmed not to have written the flaming Epistles ascribed to his pen. The Book of Revelation is thought to be a form of Hebrew apocalypticism, containing no inspiration nor any revelation of future events. They burlesque the idea of the supernatural origin of the religion of Paul, affirming that his code of religion and that of Jesus are contradictory. With scurrility liberalists jibe at the idea of Jesus revealing to the disciples his plan for the redemption of the universe.

After the critic has finished with the Bible, with his audacity, ridicule, mental smoke, sarcasm, chiding, evil-speaking, castigation and ranting, there is nothing left!

His denunciations, innuendoes, hyper-criticisms, insinuations, disesteem and disparagement, the liberalist would have take the place of the miraculous in Revelation.

They frown upon the finality of the New Testament religion and doctrine. They accuse and stigmatize, and hold up to reprobation the trained conservative scholar who defends the truths of "the grand old Book." They ostracise every one who would be bold enough to oppose their so-called scholarship. In their teachings and writings they are satirical, sarcastic and cynical. In speaking against the Bible they are cutting, critical, censorious, captious and carping. At the shrine of every man who will dare doubt God's Word, its inerrancy and historicity, they burn incense.

There is thus no truthfulness in the Bible. They attach no credibility to historical statement, names, and even authors. The Gospels and Acts are not accounted as historical for they are interwoven with supernatural elements and contain a mixture of miracle and history. Liberalists have eliminated the supernatural of the Book, its inerrancy, finality, inspiration. Modern heretics have fablized the "Book of the Ages." We have lost all predictive prophecy. With assinnity of the boldest type, these fablizers of God's Word, thunder against the thought of Jesus prophesying of the future. They are satanic enough to assert that his prophecies of the destruction of Jerusalem were written after the events came to pass! Basic to liberalism is the conception that Jesus could not prophesy an event forty years in the future any more than we could. We thus are unable to depend on the truths of the Bible, its statements, its commandments, its precepts and its warnings. Its God, so the wisdom of modernism asserts, is non-existent, its Savior is a man, touched with human passions. The promises are worthless. There is no divine regeneration.

The Book is a fake, a fraud, a series of deceptions, man-made, and more worthless than much that man has written. The divine unity is lost; no golden chain of prophecy binds together its sacred parts. The scarlet thread of the blood of Christ is blotted out. We have no picture of God, nor of Christ. From it beams no heavenly light. Not a moral ray shines from the celestial city, not a beam of glory from eternity! We are hopeless, without a chart, a north star of hope! No anchor for the soul steadfast and sure! No "Rock of Ages" on which to abide! No home of the soul beyond the river death! None to raise the feet from the miry clay of sin!

If this be true, there needs to be no hell; for this is hell enough!

But such fakery of modernism will not stand the test. The Bible affirms that it is divine. If the critic is right and the Bible is folklore, inaccurate and unreliable history, traditions of early ages, then Jesus was a fraud, an hypocrite, and an unmitigated liar! But such is unthinkable. Jesus quoted those portions of the Old Testament most doubted by modernists. With one voice of praise history proclaims the Bible to be the inerrant Word of God. The Bible has stood the attempts of every age to destroy it. The Bible towers above the wrecks of time as an eternal emblem of divine revelation.

Human philosophies have failed and have been buried in the cemeteries of the fleeting centuries. Kingdoms and empires have crumbled into dust. Literature and civilization are lost in the archives of the dead-forgotten past. Sciences have flourished but they now silently sleep in that lifeless eternity of the past from which never a sound comes. But the Word of the Lord glows with the fire of literatures, burns with the inexorable logic of divine philosophies. With its impetus to science it lays bare the hidden secrets of nature. God's Oracles, permanent as the ages, unmovable as time, will remain while dying stars and constellations are carried out to burial amid the funeral torches of burning worlds!

The spade of the archæologist has unearthed verifications of the truth of the Bible. Geology affirms its truthfulness. Biology in its broad outlines confirms the statements of creation as given in Genesis. The history of the Old Testament is in accord with the contemporary history of surrounding nations. Astronomy has not found one misrepresented fact in its sacred pages. Modern science must bow to the truths as revealed by inspiration and in their broad outlines confirm its statements.

The Greatest Blessing That Can Come to a Man.

D. L. MOODY.

I was twenty years old before I heard a sermon on Regeneration, or the New Birth. I was always told to be good, but you might as well tell a black man to be white. You might tell a slave to be free, but that would not make him free. Christ not only tells us to be free, but he frees us. In the third chapter of Genesis we read how man lost life. In the third chapter of John we find how to get it back again.

We are a bad lot, the whole of us, by nature. It is astonishing how the devil blinds us, and makes us think we are so naturally good. Suppose that our sins could all be stamped on our foreheads, do you not think there would be a stampede? Suppose a photographer could take a photograph of the heart, do you think he could find anyone willing to have such a photograph taken? Ladies arrange their hair and put on their best clothes, and men dress up and have their pictures taken; and if the photographer flatters them and makes them look ten years younger, they say, "You are the first man to do me justice," and they order a number of photographs and send them to their friends. But is that your real self? Suppose he took a photograph of your heart, would you send those around? You would break the plate and abuse the artist. Don't talk to me about people being naturally good and angelic. We are naturally bad, the whole of us (Rom. 3:9-16.) The first man born of a woman was a murderer. Sin leaped into the world full-grown, and the whole race has been bad all the way down. Man is naturally bad.

Man has lost the image of God. Just take one description that Christ gives of the human heart: "Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies; these are the things which defile a man." (Matt. 15: 19). Now, I want to ask you, How in the world can you get a pure stream when you have such an impure fountain? The trouble with people is that they are trying to make that stream good while the fountain is bad. It isn't patching up the old man that is needed, but it is cutting off the tree and putting a new graft in. It is an entire change—a new creation.

I have heard of reform, until I am tired and sick of the whole thing. It is regeneration—a new life and a new nature—by the power of the Holy Ghost, that we need. It is not that men have come a little short of the glory of God, and if they apply a little whiewash they will be all right. You may whitewash a pest-house, but it will be a pest-house still. A man was told the water in his well was bad. "Well," said he, "I'll see to it," and he painted the pump. There are a lot of people trying to make the well all right by painting the pump. What you want is to go to the source. Make the fountain good and the stream will be good. Let the heart be right and the life will be right, the hand be right and the foot will be right. The seat of trouble is the heart: what man needs is a new birth, a new creation. (John 3:3-7).

Good resolutions are not new birth. Turning over a new leaf, making promises, or making vows—that isn't new birth at all. Perhaps some of you ask, "What is it?" Well, listen: Christ "came unto his own, and his own received him not. But many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name; which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God" (John 1:11-13). When I was born of my mother I got a life from her; but in Boston, seventeen years afterwards, I was "born from above." I got life from God then—a new life, distinct from the natural life. How did I get it? By receiving the Word of God into my heart. Christ says: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life" (John 6:63). You take the Word of God into your heart, and there is the germ, there is the life. If I should take my watch and plant it, I wouldn't get any little watches, would I? Why? Because the germ isn't there. If I should plant a bushel of gravel, I wouldn't get any more gravel, would I? But let me get seed-corn, and put it into the ground in the month of May, and let the dews of heaven come upon the land, and the rain and the sun, and out of this seed-corn will come new life and fruit.

Culture is all right in its place, but to talk about culture before a man is born of God, before he has received this incorruptible seed into his heart, is madness. Suppose I commence on the first day of May and plough an acre of ground, crosswise, then lengthwise, every day in the week, all through May and June and July. Once in a while I put in a cultivator, and cultivate and harrow it too, and roll it. I have been harrowing, rolling and cultivating for months, and you come along and say: "Moody, what are you doing?" "Doing! I am cultivating this acre of land." "Well, I should say so! I was around here last May, and you were ploughing that acre of land. Been at it ever since?" "Yes." "What are you going to put in?" "Well, I am not going to put anything in it, but I believe in a high state of culture." You would say I was a first-class lunatic! But that is what is going on all the while in spiritual things. Put the seed in, and then pray God that the dew of heaven may rest upon it, and you will have some results. There is no sower that goes forth and sows that kind of seed but there are results.

To become a partaker of the Divine nature (2 Peter 1:4) is the greatest blessing that can come to any man. God has been very, very good to me. I can't begin to tell you the goodness of God. But there is one blessing that just towers high above them all. You go to Washington, and you will see there a monument high above everything else—George Washington's monument. One blessing came to me that night in Boston. It was in a shoe store. I never go to Boston but that I go and take a look at that place where God met and imparted to me a new nature. Old things passed away that night; a new life dawned upon me, and that is the greatest blessing that has ever come to me this side of heaven (2 Cor. 5:17, 18). I got a new nature from God—distinct and separate from the old nature. All the infidels that have come to me these forty years, and tried to take it from me, might as well have tried to move Gibraltar. Don't I know there came a marvelous change in my life that night? I would as soon doubt my existence.

If you are not sure that you have become a partaker of the Divine nature, don't eat, drink or sleep until you are. And when you get that new nature it is easy to serve God: "His yoke is easy, his burden is light" (Matt. 11:29). O man, woman, you may be deceived about ten thousand things, but do not be deceived on this one thing. Make sure that you have been born from above, born of God—a life distinct and separate from the natural life—a new life, a new creation.

Read the third chapter of John's Gospel quite through; do not dwell alone upon its earlier sentences. The third verse runs thus: "Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

Then the 14th, 15th and 16th verses clearly reveal how this new life from God is given: "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." What a wonderful, what a delightful message to dying men!

This is an awful solemn question. Put it now to yourselves: "Have I been born again? Have I received the gift of God, which is eternal life?" Father, mother, perhaps you have not a hope in Jesus Christ. That little child that left you a few months ago lived long enough to twine itself around your heart: then death came and took that little child into a brighter and better world; you will never see that child again except you are born of God. O man, woman, be wise, be wise and make sure you get into the kingdom of God!

Nature and Faith.

REV. P. F. ASHER.

We wept—'twas Nature wept—but Faith Can pierce beyond the gloom of death, And in yon world so fair and bright Behold thee in refulgent light; We miss thee here, yet Faith would rather Know thou art with thy Heavenly Father.

Nature sees the body dead—
Faith beholds the spirit fled;

Nature stops at Jordan's tide—
Faith beholds the other side;

That but hears farewell, and sighs—
This, thy welcome in the skies;

Nature mourns a cruel blow—
Faith assures it is not so;

Nature never sees thee more—
Faith but sees thee gone before;

Nature tells a dismal story—
Faith has visions full of glory;

Nature views the change with sadness—
Faith contemplates it with gladness;

Nature murmurs—Faith gives meekness,
Strength is perfected in weakness;

Nature writhes, and hates the rod—
Faith looks up and blesses God;

Sense looks downwards—Faith above;
That sees hardness—This sees love.

Oh! let Faith victorious be—
Let it reign triumphantly!

But thou art gone! not lost, but flown;
Shall I then ask thee back my own?

Back—and leave thy spirit's brightness?
Back—and leave thy robes of whiteness?
Back—and leave the Lamb who feeds thee?
Back—from founts to which he leads thee?
Back—and leave thy Heavenly Father?
Back to earth and sin?—nay, rather
Would I live in solitude!
I would not ask thee if I could;
But patient wait the high decree,
That calls my spirit home to Thee!

Amazing Grace.

"Amazing Grace" is one of Dr. Ridout's latest and best books. It contains the cream of his writings and study of twenty-five years. For the Holiness people it is a book to instruct, inspire and set the soul on fire. Price $1.00. Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

THIS JAZZ AGE.

RICHARD W. LEWIS, D.D.

It is only natural that our pride should lead us to ingeniously defend our national life. Self-respect is essential to command the respect of others. Our nation has a name to maintain.

We have a world-wide reputation to uphold. And no task suits an American better than that of praising self!

But we are going too far with our boosting of the nation. In looking at our good qualities we have come to overlook our weak ones. Our eyes for seeing evil have gone out from disuse, as the fish of the Mammoth Cave are sightless from not seeing. Thus it has come about that masses of our men and women are really blind to the dangers that actually threaten our civilization. They do not mean to minimize our sins, nor to magnify our virtues, yet they do both.

The writer recently visited "Coin Harvey" in his Arkansas home and talked with him. Mr. Harvey knows more than money. He is a student of men and measures. He is familiar with the history of nations. He knows that other civilizations have thriven, waned, decayed and died; and he knows exactly why they died. As a traveler, student, author and keen observer he knows America. So, he draws his own conclusion that our civilization is doomed, hence he is now erecting a monument 40 feet square at the base, and over 100 feet high, of the best concrete; and into the base of this monument he is to place a full statement of the rise and fall of our civilization, hermetically sealed, so that some conqueror of America in the future may break into this storehouse of history and ascertain the exact reasons for our civilization failing.

It was that distinguished Italian historian, Dr. G. Ferrero of Rome, who visited South America and wrote so wisely about it that President Roosevelt invited him to become his guest at the White House in order that this great historian might study our civilization and write about it. The outcome of this visit to America was a highly valuable book entitled, "Ancient Rome and Modern America." To read this scholarly, sedate, sound statement of our case written by a conservative historian, is to see the dire danger America is in at the present time. One of the most recent books published on our civilization is entitled "If America Fail!", and was written by Samuel Zane Battem. Here again our nation is warned. Our dangers are pointed out. Facts are placed before us. In addition to these warnings the literature of our times literally teems with suggestions and predictions of our national degeneracy, degradation and doom—at the rate we are now going!

But it is always hard to warn men. God told Adam and Eve "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die," yet they ate and died! Noah preached over 100 years in pleading with the men of his day to give up sin and get ready to meet God, but they heeded him not, and the awful death-dealing flood came, and their civilization went down. Lot, a preacher of righteousness, had his soul vexed with the vile conduct of his fellow townsmen, and he warned them for God, but they sat still supinely until death and destruction rained down from somewhere in the air. The old prophets called and cried in the name of the Lord, but Judaism went to pieces on the rocks of self-centeredism and idolatry. Jesus taught, performed miracles, cautioned, warned, and then outlined the horrors of inattention to warnings in his memorable lament, "O, Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathers her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. Behold, your house is left unto you desolate."

The Jews lost their superb opportunity, and their civilization went down! Instead of heeding the Christ, they crucified him, and with his crucifixion they crucified their own interests.

Will America forget God? Indeed, has she not already forgotten him? Is there any power that can make America stop and think and act for her own preservation?

But why are we in this jazzy condition that portends our ruin? There are reasons. Of course the late war had its effects on our young men. Let a man face not only death, but an awful earthly hell of horrible warfare, and soon he fears nothing—there is nothing worse to dread!

Gradually the nation absorbed the spirit our boys imbibed in war. We became indifferent to old convictions and customs; we grew reckless and regardless of our higher interests, and those of others. So, we have reached our present deplorable state of affairs.

But there are other causes of this jazzy age. When prices went soaring sky-high, and the farmer got rich over night; when money flowed freely in the hands of those who had long been economizing, there was a distinct reaction in our national life. People considered godly dressed up and went to dances! Those who were credited with gentleness generally let loose the worldly spirit long pent up within, and went wild! Great savers became big spenders! Silk shirts and stockings now cost as much as a dozen used to cost, and soon became the rage! But what use of silk stockings under cover? Somebody must see such finery, and soon everybody did see them—knee-high! Old Queen Fashion dictated dress abbreviation, and immediately woman's modesty which we thought was innate and inalienable went to the winds over night!

But, worst of all, men discovered that she whom they had adored for her retiring spirit and modest mien was ready for almost any display of her person, so long as Dame Style demanded it—as demonstrated in simply indecent and outrageous so-called "Bathing Reviews." Perhaps one other shock to men was even worse than this last, if possible, due to the fact that men now discovered how far mothers were willing to go in consenting to such conduct on the part of their daughters—yea, approving, yea, even defending their daughters in all this jazzy conduct! Indeed, many of the mothers are now actually participating with their daughters in the jazzy life of our times!

The undue familiarity of the sexes has undoubtedly led to women taking up the crime against our civilization of cigarette smoking. Naturally enough this coarse habit has been accompanied by that vulgar practice of profane language. Even on the elevators today one will hear a girl say "I'll swear," just as glibly as any man says it. You may hear it in the corridors, and on the streets.

Passing from the girls, let us look at the boys for a moment. Last September the press dispatches reported that a fifteen-year-old boy up in Wisconsin had beaten his own grandmother to death with a hammer! Two months later the daily papers told of a Michigan boy seven years old shooting his sister for calling him a monkey! About the same time, if we can believe the daily press, another boy under fifteen years of age, living in Pennsylvania, murdered his grandmother. A still more horrible crime is credited to a Florida boy who is said to have murdered his parents and two of his sisters. Somewhat similar juvenile crimes are reported from Missouri, Iowa and Kentucky.

Those of us who have read the daily papers for the last 25 years know that these crimes committed by small boys of young and tender years were not heard of a quarter of a century ago, or at least they were most rare then, while awfully common now. Undoubtedly crime in general is on the increase, and it looks very much as if the "perilous times" had arrived.

Beside the war's evil influence, some other causes must be charged with producing this jazzy age.

1. The home most certainly has ceased to train children by the Bible. When people get too good, too kind, too merciful to follow God's "cruel" (?) plan of applying the "rod," we need not be surprised that children beat the brains of their parents and grandparents out with hammers, and murder them otherwise. The home-life of America is far too loose. Children are no longer made to mind—the parents must do that! The boys and girls of this age are indulged too much. They have too much spare time and too much money to spend. Sacrifice, discipline and something to do—obedience, these are the essential elements that contribute to strong character.

2. The "movies" have thoroughly demoralized our boys and girls, and before we knew it! Much meanness goes on in them when the lights are turned low! Then they are suggestive. All sorts of vile, vulgar and sinful escapades are presented night after night with a vividness peculiar to the picture show. They thrill, and cultivate in the young a taste and a thirst for more thrills. The boys and girls of today have been so often thrilled that they count life tame and insipid without some kind of a "kick" in it! The "movies" are damning our daughters and sacrificing our sons. The climax of their crime is the open desecration of the Lord's day.

3. Our institutions that lend educational values to the lives of the young, such as the pulpit, the public school and the press, have gone off at a tangent after "modernism," and daily they are instilling false and vitiating principles into the plastic hearts of the young.

4. The age has lost its conscience. We are no longer conscientious. We have grown slack in keeping our word; we are irreverent; we have little sense of the sacred; self is so assertive that delicate regard for others is now painfully lacking.

5. The masses are no longer serious—a condition that always goes before the fall of a civilization. A gay, giddy spirit abounds; levity leads in the average group; a speaker who cannot tickle an audience is taboo; shallow thinking is general; so, our conditions are not taken at all seriously; hence, our dangers are unrealized, and the warnings of the wise are dismissed as pitiable pessimism!

If the remedy is sought, that is simple: Turn to God and acknowledge him in all our ways. Back to the Bible as our guide. Return to home discipline and tighten the reins of parental authority. Reject "evolution" and "science falsely so called," and declare the whole counsel of God under the leadings of the Holy Spirit—it is this, or it is death to our exalted civilization.

I have read with interest and amazement that wonderful book, "Modernism," by J. M. Stanfield. While I have read very considerably upon the subject I was amazed by his marvelous presentation of the subject. It is decidedly the strongest I have read. May I urge every preacher to read and assist in its circulation. L. L. PICKETT.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

NORRISTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA.

Praise the Lord for his glorious salvation! He has given us victory again in a hard-fought battle. Just closed a meeting with the Church of the Nazarene at Norristown, Pa. Rev. Monroe Hand is the pastor of this fine flock and is a man of God, humble, kind and true. He has some of the finest people in the world and they are going ahead for God. About two years ago they were in a little old room and unknown, but now they have moved into larger quarters in the Orthodox Quaker meeting house on a fine corner. They have the use of the church except Sunday mornings when a funeral is held each week.

This battle was hard fought, not because of the strength of the people of Satan but because of their scarcity in the audience. This old conservative borough is a hard place to get anyone inside the church building. Nevertheless there were several seekers and happy finders for pardon and holiness, and four united with the church. The Norristown people are a loyal people to God, holiness and their church. May God bless them. Rev. Ryder and his good people from Lansdale gave us a boost several nights, which was much appreciated.

The Hoosier Hawkeye.

BILLY SUNDAY IN DETROIT.

Thousands were unable to gain admittance in an auditorium which holds 7,000 people normally, but on this occasion there must have been another thousand squeezed in. The writer traveled more than sixty miles to be present, and though he had a minister's box reservation his chances of getting in looked very small long after eight, notwithstanding the fact that he tried every door; however he did find a resting place at last sitting on the floor holding his heavy overcoat and bag in his lap. Billy Sunday is a reporter's nightmare, for he speaks at such a rate that few can make any kind of a note of what he is saying.

Bishop Thomas Nicholson, resident Bishop of Detroit, introduced Billy. Sunday spoke of the great wealth of America saying, "No people in the world are better paid or have more prosperity than the people of the U. S. A." He said that the Ford Hospital is now where the old ball field used to be where he used to play ball, and he mentioned many of the old players of those days with some very touching and telling stories which brought tears to many eyes. Of one old player he said that, at one time or another, every bone in the man's body had been broken by reason of the roughness of the game in those days; of another, a fine fellow who said after Sunday's conversion, "Well, Bill, religion is not my long suit, but if ever you need a friend I'll be that friend."

Another time when in Chicago when passing the place where he was converted more than thirty years ago (Billy, by the way is 65 today) he took off his hat and bowed his head, and a policeman asked him if he were sick and, on Billy telling him that that was the place where he was converted tears came into the burly policeman's eyes and the officer said, "You pray as long as you want and I'll keep the gang away from you."

Some of Billy's Sayings.

People are looking for roses on the face of death. In a few years at this rate we will all be in the bug-house. Wealth and fame and pleasure fail to satisfy. When the great Vanderbilt lay dying he asked his minister to recite, "Come, ye sinners, poor and needy." Some one said the next day, on change, "Have you heard the news? Vanderbilt is dead." "No," said the other, "How much did he leave?" "He left everything," was the reply.

Christian people have a reason for the hope that is in them. Lord Byron, Poe, and Burns, died broken and bankrupt. They found at an early age that their lives were in the yellow leaf; they needed a Savior. Burns, the pride of Scotland, drank himself to death. Some men live just to make one more for the census.

Does Fame Satisfy?

Where, today, are the big five leaders of the recent World War? Read the story of the fall of Lady Hamilton for, at the height of her fame, she was worshipped by Nelson, the greatest of the great, yet died in a bare garret begging for a bit of meat a person had bought for a dog.

The virgin birth and the resurrection of Jesus are the Waterloo and the Rock of Gibraltar of the Christian faith. Creation is the lattice work through which I can see Providence. There are vast thousands unreached by the Christian churches or Sunday schools in this land. Crime cost us in this country last year 15 billion dollars. The Bible ought to be taught in our schools. Jesus Christ ought to have as good a chance as Darwin. I want to continue to preach Christ; there shall be no half way house for me. I believe in Heaven and Hell, and that every man is headed for either one place or the other. How can we save the world from war? A regenerated heart is needed as well as an educated mind. Crime is threatening our very existence. The Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount will save civilization. Morality rests on religion.

Billy said he was a graduate from the school of hard knocks. He had eaten peas with his knife. He spoke of people whose faces had long since turned to dust. Speaking of the late famous ball player, John Clark, he said that when a ball passed you that he had anything to do with, the thermometer fell two degrees. When one old-time ball player was not long for this world they told him, "It won't be long till the umpire calls you out."

Use the Bible for the purpose for which it was written. Use a collar for the purpose of a collar. The Bible was not written to be a text-book on science. If you go to the bank to borrow money you don't state the terms; so when you go to God for salvation you take it on his terms. Backslider, you come back through repentance and faith. It is Jesus Christ or nothing. God said to Noah, "I'm disgusted with that crowd; I'm going to turn the hose on them."

In closing, Sunday asked the prayers of all as he was facing one of the most interesting tasks of his career. He is going to West Frankfort, Ill., in the heart of the Herrin coal mine district, to carry a militant religion to the miners, and he confidently expects to reform them—and make the region one of the most peaceful in America.

FROM THE BATTLEFIELD.

The year of 1927 has been one of the greatest and most fruitful in the Lord's service that we have witnessed in many years. We have held nineteen revivals and camp meetings during the year. Our God has poured out the Holy Ghost upon the word, upon the people and brought things to pass in the salvation of multitudes of souls, hundreds have been sanctified wholly and scores have come into the church. It has been a great pleasure to labor with pastors, churches and camp meeting committees and their holy constituency.

It is a fair estimate when we say we have witnessed about three thousand seekers at the altar during the year, and the larger portion of these have been soundly converted and wholly sanctified. We have witnessed the power of God to heal many sick folk during the year. Our labors have taken us to Yukon, El Reno, Guthrie, Sapulpa, Henryetta, Tulsa, Shawnee, and Thomas, Okla.; to North Little Rock, Ark., Jasper, Ala., El Paso, Tex., Millport, Ala., Olive Hill, Mt. Hope Camp, Ky. We have labored with great and effective preachers and song leaders. Our time has been well slated and our humble services well received by pastors and churches, also by every camp. This has been a great salvation time during the entire year. Most of these camps called us back, some many as for the fifth and tenth time. We never loved God better, appreciated Bible Holiness, held higher regard for the church and its ministry and laity as now.

We are out in the old-time line and type of holy evangelism to win souls, push holiness, build the church, do constructive work for God and the church. Our slate is filling for another year. Our terms are entertainment, freewill offering and full and free co-operation by pastor, church and camp meeting committee and people.

Any one desiring our services for church or camp meetings will kindly address us at Box 918, Bethany, Okla. God bless our holiness papers, our holiness schools, our holiness associations and churches and all departments of the work of God in all the earth. Evangelists Allie Irick and Wife.

BUSY IN THE LORD'S WORK.

Since it has been some time between reports I can still say that I am busy for God and his cause. Since our last report we have worked in four revivals, Bloomington, Ind., Yuma, Colo., Somerton, Ariz., and Long Beach, Calif. We can say that in each place God blessed and souls were saved and sanctified. Bro. C. E. Pendry has a great church at Bloomington, Ind., and has proven we can have a large work and that they can be kept spiritual. He has done wonders at Bloomington. We closed up fine there.

Our camp at Yuma, Colo., with L. N. Fogg as co-laborer, and Mrs. Fisher Peck as singer was rather a hard pull. The preachers who were responsible for the camp are a loyal bunch and we enjoyed fellowship with everyone. Bro. Davis and wife, Dist. Supt., and wife were with us and lifted their heart for the camp. We drove through to California and located our family for winter and went right on to Somerton, Ariz., for Pastor C. E. Tony and wife. They stood by me nobly and God wonderfully blessed. Many found God, among them some very sinful men. Jones and Scroggin sang for me here, and there is no better advance men for gospel singing. Toney has done well on the district, while his wife kept the church on the go. We sure enjoyed their fellowship.

Our last campaign was with Bro. L. A. Reed, at First Church, Long Beach, Calif. I suppose the finest church building in our movement. Bro. Reed stood by us like a prince and we had a good revival. We closed with a good break on outside with some 35 to 45 at altar last night. God bless the good people at Long Beach. We are determined to preach old-fashioned holiness. The battle is ours. We are here till May, then back in Central States for camps and fall revivals.

BATTLES AND VICTORIES.

We have just closed a meeting in the Nazarene Tabernacle at Richland Center, Wis. It began raining in the afternoon of the first day of the meeting, and rained almost continuously for three weeks.

Many of the roads became impassable to automobiles, which kept many of the good people of the church from the meetings until the last week, but we went right on preaching the gospel to those who did come.

Now this is the first meeting of the kind we have ever been in. The little church, the pastor and his wife, Brother and Sister Ralph Rice, were having a great battle. There were enemies without and there were enemies within, and of course, the enemies within, or those who had once been within, (for some of them had been relieved of their membership by the church board), were the most bitter. Suffice it to say, we never saw any organization have so many different kinds of enemies; in fact, we are unable to think of a single species not represented. They were outspoken. Old hardened, gray headed sinners, nearing the end of their earthly career, would occasionally voice their disapproval during services, and it became necessary to call them. This proved effective. Not so, however, with some of the younger generation, who seemed to think that the little holiness church a playhouse, in which they were privileged to have a great time. But the juvenile judge of the county requested a private interview with some of these frolicsome youngsters, which proved most salutary, for, as between the stern old judge and the mourners' bench, the ringleaders chose the latter. We saw one of them inviting others to the altar. Marvelous is the power of Jesus!

The pastor of the Nazarene Church at Richland Center is the right man in the right place. He is possessed of a good supply of courage and commonsense. He is extremely fortunate in having a helpmeet also possessed with courage and commonsense, and is a power in prayer. They, together with a few saints, assisted mightily by their prayers and personal work in bringing the revival on. Victory came, and fifty came to the altar, a number of whom were sanctified. The great majority of those who came to the altar were young people. To God be all the glory!

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

Here we come again with a good report. In September we thought we would take a much needed rest after a strenuous summer of revival work, but our good brother, Rev. Washington Sherman, pastor of the Central Church of The Nazarene in Cincinnati, Ohio, learning that we were at home, called up over long distance telephone, and asked us to come and give his church a week-end revival. Feeling that it was God's will for us to go, we went, trusting God to recuperate our tired body and mind while we worked. The very first service was owned of God with precious souls finding deliverance from sin. When the week-end was up the tide was running so high, that both pastor and church would not hear to us stopping, so we stayed a few days longer. During the nine days we had a continual harvest of souls with not one barren altar service. Some of the most beautiful and definite cases of regeneration and sanctification I ever saw. Among them was one cultured Chinese lady who was both saved and sanctified. Rev. Sherman and his good wife, and their son-in-law, Rev. Harvey Galloway and his wife are surely doing a good work in Cincinnati. They have a wonderful band of God's choicest saints standing back of them. By unanimous vote of the church we were invited back for another campaign at our first open date. God willing, we intend to go.

We hastened from Cincinnati to Columbus, Ohio, to engage in a two-weeks' campaign with Third Street Holiness Rescue Mission. Here, too, we had seekers almost every service, with many happy and definite finders. Among those who were beautifully saved was a young Catholic girl, and an old lady whose life had nearly been wrecked by following after spiritualism. Old Third Street Mission has been running continuously for fourteen years, and folks who ought to know tell me that more souls have found God at its altar than any other place in the city of Columbus. This was my fifth campaign with this Mission, and God willing, we expect to be with them again in October, 1928.

Last night we began in Marion, Ohio, with the Wesleyan Methodists. Their house is small and it was packed full. Such praying and singing as they did. If an evangelist can't preach here with such backing, he had better quit. Three at the altar with two saved the first service. Will report this revival in my next.

There are some comforting words in the twelfth chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews that ought to bring assurance to our hearts in the days of sorrow. "My son, despise not thou the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art rebuked by him; for whom he loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not? But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons. Furthermore we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us, and we gave them reverence: shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the father of spirits, and live? For they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but he for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness. Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous: nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." (Heb. 12:5-11).

This scripture opens a window through which a gracious light falls upon this intricate and difficult problem of suffering. It is well understood that a loving parent never chastises a child out of any desire to see the child suffer, but there are times when the most affectionate parent will chastise a child in order to purge out disobedience, falsehood, dishonesty, or other evils that left alone would prove the inevitable ruin of the child. The process is very painful to the parent, but he realizes that something must be done to warn and restrain the child from evil or inevitable ruin must come. The rod wisely applied betimes may save the child from an extravagant and dishonest conduct, from theft and the prisoner's cell, from murder and the gallows or electric chair. It is well understood that the parent has no pleasure in the suffering of the child, but is full of tenderest solicitude and is seeking to correct evil tendencies, bring the child into obedience, honest, truthful and industrious habits which will secure the development of good character, usefulness and happiness.

We learn from the Scriptures just quoted that God chastises all of his children and that the great end in view is their holiness. He would correct their evil tendencies, their drift away from himself. He would bring them to repentance. He would remind them of the shortness of life, of how transient and uncertain are the things that contribute to our peace and happiness here. He would lift our minds from the things of mere time to the things of eternity. He would bring us on into fellowship with himself. He would break the grip of sin upon us and lead us into the beauty of holiness.

The apostle teaches us that, grievous as chastening may be, if we are submissive and kiss the hand that smites us there will come into our minds and hearts the "peaceable fruits of righteousness." Who can calculate how many parents have been led to repentance and brought to saving faith in Christ through the ministry of suffering in the sickness and death of a beloved child? I recall that when we were making our evangelistic tour of the world we preached a week in Port Said, Egypt. An Englishman, a high official, and his wife were persuaded to attend our meetings. They were graciously converted at the altar of prayer. We were invited to supper in their home, and the woman with tears of joy told us how worldly they had been, how they had given their evenings to card parties, dances, theaters, and other diversions that closed their minds to the whispers of the Holy Spirit and opened them wide to the call of the world. She said: "We had a little girl about four years of age. She was bright and beautiful. She was the delight of our hearts and home. Everybody loved her, natives and foreigners. She attracted attention in every place she visited. She was taken sick. She suffered greatly, and in spite of all our efforts she died. Our hearts were broken. We were left in desolation. We were in despair. Had you visited this place with your evangelistic meetings while she lived, we would have been dancing, playing cards, and running away with the world. No doubt we would have trained her up to be as worldly and sinful as we were ourselves. But now we understand. God rescued her from us and the world into which we would have carried her, broke our poor hearts with sorrow, and we came to your meeting in great distress, hoping we could find some sort of comfort. Now, thank God, we have found Jesus in salvation. Now, we can understand that the hand that smote us was the hand of him who loved us."

The testimony of this chastened woman could easily be the testimony of countless thousands reaching across the entire history of the human race. It was the psalmist David who declared: "It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes." What multitudes of lukewarm or backslidden Christians have felt the smiting of God's chastening rod of love and have turned away from the world and sin and found consolation and comfort at the feet of Jesus!

I have sometimes thought that this problem of suffering could be solved to some extent by the experience of Job and of the young man born blind whose eyes were opened by the Lord Jesus. In the case of Job God was demonstrating to men and devils that under the most severe affliction and sore trials his devoted servant could keep a triumphant faith and answer in the face of all opposition, when wife forsook him and friends deserted, and the devil turned loose all his forces against him: "I will trust in him, though he slay me." Job did not understand that there had been made an arrangement between his God and Satan that his property should be destroyed, his children slain, and his own body most severely afflicted as a test. He was fighting out his battle in ignorance of all this arrangement, but he was on the witness stand for all time to come that the true man of God may lose property, children, wife, friends, and health and yet may shout in triumph: "I know that my Redeemer liveth." We have no way to calculate what this record of Job has been worth to untold millions of God's children in their time of property loss and bodily affliction when they have remembered that when everything else was gone Job rejoiced in the fact of the resurrection and held fast his faith in God and his own integrity.

In the case of the man born blind whom our Lord healed it will be remembered that the disciples stupidly asked the Master, "Who did sin, this man or his parents, that he was born blind?" Our Lord answered at once that neither the man nor his parents had sinned, but that this affliction was in order that the glory of God might be revealed. No doubt the parents of the child had wondered why this affliction had been sent upon them and grieved over it. It may be that they had charged God with being unmerciful, but later they found that it was a divine mercy. It was to give Christ an opportunity to demonstrate his Godhead and true Messiahship.

The cases of Job and this blind man should give us caution against accusing our afflicted friends of being sinners and of being punished for their sins in the afflictions that come upon them. Neither Job nor the blind man had sinned, but they went through great trial that God might prove himself able to keep, to bless and use human beings, to demonstrate his power, and to reveal the fact that men may be brought into such relationships with himself that their faith and devotion does not depend upon prosperity or health or any temporal, visible thing, but that they may fasten their faith upon Almighty God and whatever of chastening and affliction comes they may triumph in the thought of the final resurrection and eternal blessedness which awaits the faithful.

When we cannot understand our chastisements, the afflictions that come upon us, we can comfort ourselves with the thought that it may be that God may in some way get glory out of our sorrow and that if in the midst of loss and suffering we give him glory we only prove that it is quite possible for God to become supreme in our thought, desire, and devotion and that when stripped of all things else we can continue to trust him and wait for the resurrection in which we shall have eternal triumph over all those sorrows that seem to be unavoidable in a life and world like this. Then let us learn to suffer patiently, to declare our faith in God, and to rejoice in the thought of the resurrection morn when all these things of sorrow, tears, and blood shall have passed away forever and we shall enter upon eternity of ever-ascending blessedness and joy in the presence of the blessed Trinity where with the saints and angels we shall render eternal praise to him who hath loved us and redeemed us with his own blood.—Christian Advocate.

SEED THOUGHTS.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

IN rummaging through my papers the other night I came across some fine things written by that saint of days ago, Phoebe Palmer, and wishing to share every good that comes my way, it occurred to me to pass these seed thoughts on to the readers of THE HERALD. It may be that a number of our dear ones will be reading these lines at the same time, and I pray the Holy Spirit may interpret the truths to each heart, and lift them into a higher realm of Christian experience than they have hitherto enjoyed.

In speaking of the importance of young converts going on to sanctification, Mrs. Palmer says:

"Young converts ought to be urged onward to the speedy attainment of the grace of entire holiness. Unless their bent to backsliding is taken away, and the soul wholly renewed, roots of bitterness will spring up and trouble them. I fear it is because young converts are not more earnestly admonished to go on to perfection, that so many lose their first love,—backslide in heart, and, by their half-heartedness, and worldly-minded professions, become clogs to the chariot wheels of the Church. I wonder that Mr. Wesley's sentiments on this subject are not oftener brought out before the people. He seems to delight in bringing up instances of entire sanctification, which occurred but a short time after the conversion of the recipients. Among many others, he speaks of S. H., who resided at Maclesfield. He observes of her: 'I have seldom known so devoted a soul. She was sanctified within nine days after she was convinced of sin. She was then twelve years old, and, I believe, was never afterwards known to speak an improper word, or known to do an improper thing.'"

Then she answers that much discussed question, "Where does justification end, and sanctification begin?" in a very frank and plain manner:

"I cannot, for the life of me, see where justification ends and sanctification begins." So said a friend, in rather an earnest, though not very devotional mood. He might with as much propriety have said, 'I cannot, for the life of me, see where a person leaves off the use of letters and reads well.' A state of sanctification cannot be obtained or retained, but in connection with a state of justification; as necessarily so as the letters of the alphabet stand in connection with reading. The way to leave the principles of the doctrine of Christ is, not to forget them, just as we do not forget the elementary branches in literature for the pursuit of higher studies. We could no more go on in sanctification without justification, than we could go on perfecting ourselves in reading, after we had forgotten our letters. And yet how many, like the dear friend above mentioned, fail to understand this. How many idle away their time in a vain endeavor to separate these two states!"

There is a diversity of opinion as to when this important work takes place. All creeds teach that inbred sin must be disposed of at some time, but the Methodists were the first to teach that it might take place instantaneously, so soon as the consecration was complete, and faith was exercised to believe the work done. In this connection we quote Mrs. Palmer again, which is the experience of every one who has paid the price and trusted for the perfect cleansing.

"Now is God's time! Will you choose any future period? If so, you take your own time. And is not this exceedingly perilous? Do you say, 'It is but meet that I should count the cost?' Well, dear friend, begin just now to make the calculation, and let it be with the decision fixed irrevocably, that you will abide by the reckoning. I entreat you, in the name of the Lord Jesus, to pause, and now bring this matter to an issue. Do you find aught but what already belongs to God? Ah! the obligation, implied in the demand of your Redeemer, settles the claim with unquestionable certainty: 'Ye are not your own, for ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body and spirit, which are God's.' Will you not now begin to render back your whole existence to God? There must be a point in your experience when this is done, if you are ever numbered with that blood-washed company, of whom it is said, 'These are they that have come up out of great tribulation, having washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.'"

Notwithstanding the fact that many are convinced that now is God's time, yet many hesitate to meet the conditions, and are thus content to live at a poor dying rate while the resources of God are inexhaustible. To such we would advise that you ponder the following:

"If you delay presenting the sacrifice, from any cause whatever, you make food for repentance. God demands present holiness. Every earthly consideration dwindles into insignificance in comparison with this. Resolve, beloved, from this moment, that this command of your God shall be met. Say to every minor object, 'Let the dead bury their dead.' Remember, the offering must touch the altar before it can be sanctified. This is God's unalterable decree. With him there is neither variableness nor shadow of turning. The act, on your part, must necessarily induce the promised result on the part of God. But do not forget that all is not laid upon the altar, until that will that requires signs and wonders preparatory to believing is also resigned. This seems to be the last point about which the heart lingers. Trust the matter with God, and he will give you just the amount and kind of emotion that will best fit you to glorify his exalted name; and this is all that you are now to live for. Your God is now saying to you, 'Bring all the tithes into the storehouse, and prove me herewith.'"

"The Beauty of Holiness."

REV. A. W. ORWIG.

Holiness is beautiful even in theory or as a doctrine. For it contemplates the removal of all that is not beautiful or lovely in the Christian life. Its design is the elimination of all outward and inward unholiness or impurity. It is intended to extend to the minutest details of our whole life, not only as it relates to real sin, either actual or inherent, but also to all phases of our disposition—our thoughts, moods, words, actions, or anything else that may be included in our general make-up. Real Christian or Bible holiness has more or less of a beauty that charms and wins more than any other characteristic or attainment which one may possess. It often leads men of the world to exclaim, "There is a man or a woman in whom I believe; he or she has the genuine thing."

Beautiful, indeed, are many things in nature, as the work of our heavenly Father, and we enjoy them. They fill us with gratitude and praise and wonder. But a truly holy man or woman transcends them all in real beauty, especially to those who are intent on seeing God's noblest workmanship. God himself delights more in seeing moral and spiritual beauty than in all the combined beauties of the material universe. Many of these latter often disappear as the various seasons come and go. Others may cease as the ravages of time or the convulsions of nature affect them. But the soul of man, cleansed by the all-atoning blood of Jesus, and beautified under the blessed tutelage of the Holy Spirit, never need lose any of its beauty. On the contrary, it may constantly increase in beauty, shining "more and more unto the perfect day."

"The beauty of holiness" ought to be exhibited in all the experiences and avocations of life. It certainly should find expression in God's own house, of which the Psalmist says, "Holiness becometh thine house, O Lord, forever." If this principle were always adhered to, how many things that now dishonor and defile God's house would be excluded! Among these are often the veriest worldly concerts, humorous lectures, mercenary merchandizing, incipient theaters, etc. Even some preaching is far from harmonizing with the foregoing motto. Men in the sacred desk apologize for unholiness, or even assail the Bible doctrine of salvation from all sin, and their own carnal views are brazenly flaunted before the people. Oh, if the Lord Jesus should attempt a cleansing of some modern temples, professedly dedicated to his service, he would be obliged to begin in the pulpit itself. The clowns, mountebanks, hirelings, mere lecturers and boastful higher critics would be driven out. May the day speedily appear when "there shall be no more Canaanites in the house of the Lord of hosts"! To "worship God in the beauty of holiness" means something infinitely higher than a great deal often done in both pulpit and pew.

"The beauty of holiness" should also be manifested in business and governmental affairs. Thank God for the good men that we have in these relations! But how many others there are who trample under unhallowed feet every principle of righteousness in their selfish and unholy pursuit of gold or official power! Greed, graft, bribery, and every form of dishonesty and plunder have prevailed, and do yet prevail, despite the detection and punishment of many unhung scoundrels. God hasten the time when "there shall be upon the bells of the horses holiness unto the Lord!"

And in social and home life should "the beauty of holiness" shine forth. But in an appalling degree does society reek with unholiness and moral rottenness. And only the existence of a measure of righteousness prevents a Sodom and Gomorrah disaster. Of all places on earth the professed Christian home, as also the church, should unfurl the banner of holiness. Both should be real types of heaven. Each member of the family should constantly aim to be able to say, with the Psalmist, "I will walk within my house with a perfect heart." Real holiness in the home will make holiness easy everywhere else. There, pre-eminently, should the solid foundation for morality and holiness be laid which will make every relation in life ennobling and sacred.

"The beauty of holiness" should adorn the individual life. We should be able to say, with the apostle Paul, "Ye are witnesses, and God also, how holily and justly and unblameably we behaved ourselves." We should be true representatives of the "holy, harmless, undefiled" Lord Jesus Christ. Holiness should be seen in all our actions, heard in the tones of our voice, and glow in our very countenances. A man, after having professed to have received perfect love, spoke to his horse as he often had previously done, in a somewhat harsh and impatient tone. Instantly, however, he recovered himself, as well as rebuked himself, by saying, "Is that the tone of perfect love?" A good old man, now in glory, often used to pray, "O Lord, let not my face dishonor thee."

Ah, what we all need is that "the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us." Clothed or embellished with this divine comeliness, our lives will be a benediction to all about us. Holiness is not only necessary to enter heaven, but also to beautify and enrich our lives on earth, to make religion attractive to the unsaved, and to draw them to God. The Lord give all of us this kind of holiness!

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

No. 1.

Text. "Thy words were found... thy Word was unto me the joy... of my heart." Jer. 15:16.

Story. A Bible was offered to an infidel. He tore out the leaves to do up his small groceries. A little boy read them, and went to him and asked for more. The grocer said, "Begone, I hate the Book." Little Josie went to a Mission and was given a Bible. "Oh," he said, "it is like the wrappers, about Paul and Jesus. Oh, I would like to have the book awhile." "You may have it forever." He read how Jesus said, when he was twelve, that he must be about his Father's business. So he took the book and read it to others and they came to want one, and to love it.

Poem.

"When quiet in my house I sit,
The Bible, my companion still,
My joy its precepts to fulfill."

Prayer.

Heavenly Father,
"Help me to sing my Savior's praise,
That I may publish all the days,
Thy precious, boundless, word of grace,
Lived always in both words and ways."

No. 2.

Text. "Blessed are the peacemakers." Matt. 5:9.

Story. Two little girls, and a doll, stopped a war between Indians and the United States. A little Indian girl was lost and taken to a U. S. fort. She cried pitifully until the little daughter of the officer gave her her beautiful doll. Soldiers took her back to her father's wigwam. The next day her mother took the doll back and was told, "That is a present from our little girl to your little girl." The Indians never fought any more and went back to their lands. Truly, the little doll-giver was "blessed."

Poem.

"Peace, peace, wonderful peace,
Cometh down from the Father above,
Sweeps over my spirit forever, and now,
In fathomless billows of love."

Prayer. Blessed Lord, teach me how to be a peacemaker, by being willing to give, even to my enemies.

No. 3.

Text. "Shine . . . as the stars forever and ever." Dan. 12:3.

Story. A minister preached from the text, "He made the stars also," Gen. 1:16. One little girl seeing the stars, the first time, said, "They are gimlet holes to let the glory of heaven through." Another one said, "If the wrong side of heaven is so beautiful what must the right side be."

Poem.

"We must shine,
You in your small corner,
I in mine."

Prayer. Jesus, help me to be so bright, and cheerful, and happy, that I may shine like the stars.

No. 4.

Text. "Whatsoever things are lovely . . . think on these things." Phil. 4:8.

Story. A little girl was suffering and had to have an operation but could not take anything to keep her from feeling the pain. The doctor gave her a half dollar to keep and said, "I must hurt you a little, but keep looking at the silver."

When it was over he said, "You are a brave little girl. Tell me what you thought." "Of the words at the top, 'In God we trust.' I never saw a half dollar before. But it is lovely to have the words there so the folks who have half dollars can think of them all the time."

Poem.

Fix your thought upon Jesus,
And look full in his lovely face,
And the pain of earth will grow
strangely dim,
"In the light of his glory and grace."

Prayer. Heavenly Father, keep me looking unto Jesus, the one altogether lovely.

No. 5.

Text. "Christ came into the world to save sinners." 1 Tim. 1:15.

Story. A little boy was much troubled over his sins but did not know how to believe that Jesus died for him. Someone said, "You believe you can travel free on the cars because there is a sign, that children under six travel free." "Yes," he said, "It says so." The Bible says, "Jesus came to save sinners. Are you a sinner?" "Oh yes." "Then Jesus came to save you." The boy was brightly happy and never doubted afterward.

Poem.

"Jesus died on Calvary,
And he died to set me free,
He died to make me happy,
For I know he died for me."

Prayer. Father, I praise thee that I know Jesus died for me because he died for sinners.

No. 6.

Text. "The tithes I have given." Num. 18:24.

Story. Nannie had a bright silver dollar given her. She asked her papa to change it into dimes. "What for, dear?" "So I can get the Lord's part out of it." When Sunday came, she went to the box in the church and dropped in two dimes. "Why," said her father, "I thought you gave one-tenth to the Lord?" "One-tenth belongs to him, and I can't give to the Lord what is his own. So, if I give him anything, I have to give him what is mine."

Poem.

"Be true! be true;
Let the holy watchword ring,
Be true to your trust,
Be true to your glorious King."

Prayer.

"Jesus, I crown thee lord of my life,
In all my heart today,
I give to thee my love and thy tithe,
My thought, my will, my way."

No. 7.

Text. "Count me therefore a partner." Philomel 17.

Story. "Me an' the King's pardners." It was Bob the newsboy talking. "I was out in the country and I heard about the King and how we could be pardners. How'll I do it," I says. "Do the things he did. He cured sick folks," said my teacher. "I can't do that." "Yes, There's lots o' sick hearts. Help other little chaps." "I'll do it. But how'll he know I want to go into partnership?" "Tell him." "I went to the orchard alone and said, 'Lord, I want to be your pardner. And the King and me has been pardners for more'n a year. When I see a little fellow needing help I give him a lift as Jesus would.'"

Poem, Prayer.

Heavenly Father,
"O, what can little hearts do,
To please thee, King of heaven?"
"Little hearts can kindness lend,
To a troubled little friend."
"Such grace to me be given."

Dear Aunt Bettie: In reading page ten I find a letter from Mr. H. C. Cobb saying his birthday is March 31, and that he has never found another cousin's birthday on that day. So here is one, I was ten years old the 31st of March, 1927. I am a little girl, I have a brother older than I am and a sister younger. I enjoyed reading Mr. Cobb's letter and hope he will notice my letter and write me.

Frances Brown Geurin.

Rt. 1, Almo, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I just finished reading page ten in The Herald. I always enjoy reading that page much better than any other page. I was seventeen years old the second of August. Have any of the cousins the same birthday? I have deep blue eyes, long curly brown hair and fair complexion. I am saved, sanctified, and satisfied with the Lord. He means everything to me. Jesus has called me to preach his gospel. I have preached six times already in a small mission here in town. The Lord surely helped me wonderfully. I feel so unworthy of this special calling. The first night I preached a man was sanctified. And the second night a girl about my age was saved. It really pays to serve God. The gilded toys of this old world look cheap to anyone who gets in touch with the Savior. I said to Jesus when I was thirteen years old, "I will go where you want me to go; I will say what you want me to say, and I will be what you want me to be." These vows I have kept from that day until this. I am a member of The Church of the Nazarene in Fort Wayne, and am secretary of our Sunday school class. I would like to hear from any of the cousins who would care to write to me. Anyone who writes to me I will assure them an answer and my picture if it is wanted.

Irma Foster.

1704 Hale Ave., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Some weeks ago I wrote to you about some fine Bible Story books and mentioned that some of the cousins might get one without it costing them a cent.

Some of the cousins wrote to me and asked me to send them one right away. It is plain enough that I could not just give them away or I would have to soon go out of business. What I said in the other letter was that if any of the cousins would write to me I would tell them how to get one of the books without it costing them any money.

I got quite a number of letters and tried to answer every one of them. I told the cousins to send me three new subscriptions to The Pentecostal Herald, of one year each, at the regular price, and for doing that much for me I would have one of the books sent to them at once.

If any of the other cousins want to take me up on that kind of an offer all they have to do is to write to me and ask for some sample copies of The Herald and get to work.

I don't want this to get in the waste basket so I will stop.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you cousins move over and let a Buckingham girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I live on the farm. I have no father. I like the farm. I have thirty little chicks, four cats and two calves for pets. I have sandy hair, gray eyes, light complexion. I was ten years old October 8. Who has my birthday? Grandma takes The Pentecostal Herald. I love to read page ten.

Mary Dolan.

Dillings, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit a lonesome boy into your circle of boys and girls? I am about four feet, ten inches tall, red hair and a very good appearance. I am just starting my first year of high school. I will leave my age for you to guess. I have been very lonesome since mother died Sept. 4, 1927. She was sick only a short time until she passed away. My birthday is March 22. Have I a twin? If I have, please write to me and I will try to answer. I hope some of the boys and girls of the circle will write me an encouraging letter so I will not be so lonesome. We do not take The Herald but I received a copy from another family, and so I was inspired to write this letter. I wish you would print this so the boys and girls of the circle may read it. I close with a sad heart on account of the death of mother.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a North Carolina girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I haven't seen a letter from North Carolina. I am fourteen years of age, have dark complexion, dark brown eyes, and black hair. I am five feet, eight inches tall, and weigh 137 pounds. My birthday is Nov. 12. If any of you have my birthday write to me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. My father takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. My birthday is April 7. I have dark hair. With love to all the cousins.

Prayers for Girls Prayers for Boys

TWO BOOKS

BY ELIZABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL.

It is with the ideal of helping the boy and girl to face life with God, and to teach them to give true expression to their devotion, that these little books are sent out upon their mission. They enter into the inner sanctuary of the heart, and enable them to give utterance to longings and hopes which heretofore he or she may have been unable or unwilling to speak in the presence of God. A prayer for Courage, for Cheerfulness, for Fortitude under Failure, in Perplexity, in Sorrow, in Disappointment—these few titles show the wideness of the little books' range, and the depth of their understanding and sympathy. It is the ideal gift for every boy and girl in the Sunday Schools and Bible Classes of our churches. We have long needed just such books as these.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson IX.—November 27, 1927.

Subject.—Isaiah Teaches True Worship. Isa. 1:10-20.

Golden Text.—Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart. Psal. 24:3, 4.

Time.—About B. C. 760.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—In the olden times of Jewish history prophets were seers, or the seeing ones. Samuel was so called. Later the name was changed to prophets. In order to understand such a prophet as Isaiah, we must view him from a double standpoint: First, he was a preacher of righteousness whose field took in the every day living of the people of his day, the political government of the nation, and the worship of Jehovah; second, he was a foreteller of future events—not a mere dreamer, but one who was in touch with God in such manner as to receive from him the knowledge of things to come. Some in our times criticize preachers for dealing with the politics of the people from the sacred desk; but, using the Bible for his guide, the modern preacher must arraign political sinners, high and low, before the bar of public opinion; and they must be made to answer for their crimes before God and the people. Herein the American pulpit has been weak; consequently public sentiment against crime has become so spineless that the courts find it impossible to execute the law. This nation needs some of the Sinaiic lightning of such men as Moses, Isaiah, Savonarola, Martin Luther, and John Wesley. We need a revival that will once more give our people faith in the inspiration of the Bible, in order that they may have some conscience concerning sin.

Isaiah appears in the Old Testament as the first of the major prophets. We know little of his family, or of his origin. He says that he was the son of Amoz, but tells nothing more about his parentage. Amoz must not be confounded with Amos who was one of the minor prophets, as they were different men. Some have supposed that Isaiah was connected with the royal family; but historical evidence is lacking. We judge, however, from his writings that he did have access to the court, and that he associated on familiar terms with royalty. That he was a man of letters we learn from the fact that he wrote an account of the reign of king Uzziah:—2 Chron. 26:22: "Now the rest of the acts of Uzziah first and last did Isaiah the son of Amoz the prophet write." Scholars tell us that his Hebrew diction is almost perfect. Many of his figures and illustrations are very bold; while in many places his style touches the limits of the sublime.

We need not bother ourselves yet awhile about what the critics call a deuterio, or second, Isaiah who they contend wrote chapters 40 to 66. The notion is based largely on conjecture, there not being historical evidence sufficient to support it. Besides, what they term evidence is of such a nature that one must be thoroughly learned in Hebrew and ancient history, in order to comprehend it. To the average reader the evidence is just as clear as mud.

Our lesson proper begins with verse ten and ends with verse twenty; but we need to make a close study of the first nine verses of the chapter, in order to understand the remainder of it. In the first verse Isaiah gives some idea of the length of time wherein he prophesied: from the reign of king Uzziah to that of Hezekiah—a period of some sixty years. It is supposed that he began to prophesy during the closing years of the reign of Uzziah; and that he continued into the early part of the reign of Manasseh who placed him in a hollow mulberry tree and sawed him asunder. This, however, is but tradition, there being no historical proof.

The first chapter of the book is an introduction, or foreword, to the entire prophecy. Read it carefully, and it will give you an insight to what follows. In the first nine verses Isaiah portrays in no uncertain terms the awful sins of the people, their helpless condition, and the certain doom that awaited all of them except a very small remnant. He calls the heavens to witness that "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." They were a "sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil-doers, children that are corrupters." He declares that, "they had forsaken the Lord, and provoked the Holy One of Israel to anger." His accusation is terrible: "From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores." The figurative language is nauseating. Their country was desolate, and their cities burned by strangers. All these things had not yet come, but were in Jehovah's program for that backslidden people. Isaiah is using what is called the "prophetic tense."

Comments on the Lesson.

10. Ye rulers of Sodom.—Because of her fearful corruption, the prophet compares Jerusalem to Sodom and Gomorrah, foreshadowing her doom.

11. To what purpose is the multitude of our sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord.—They had continued to offer up rams and the fat of fed beasts; but their hearts were not right. Jehovah warned them that he "delighted not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats." Unless our hearts be right, he will have none of our worship, even though it be given with stately forms and ceremonies.

12. Who hath required this at your hand to tread my courts?—When hardened sinners presume to worship God in his sacred temples, it is a terrible sin of presumption. There is but one way for them to please God: Repent, and cry for mercy and pardon.

13. Bring no more vain oblations.—I have no words to describe my feelings as I read this verse. We are prone to think our case different from that of these sinful Jews; but it is not. Unless we come with sincere hearts and morally clean hands, our worship will be just as great an abomination in Jehovah's presence as was theirs.

14. Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth.—Too many religious days and seasons are a bit dangerous to spiritual life. It is not well to pledge ourselves to pray for a certain length of time each day; for we may find ourselves watching the clock on the mantle too much for the best praying. Better go down on one's knees, and pray through to victory. Too many of these feast days have hurt the Church in all ages.

15. When ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you.—Lifting up the hands in prayer has been common in all the history of religion; but that will not move God, unless the heart be right. Your hands are full of blood.—Maybe they had not murdered any one outright; but they had rung blood out of the hearts of poverty stricken neighbors. Some years ago the writer took occasion to visit some of the homes of croppers on the farms of a rich cotton planter, but he came away with a bleeding heart. The season had been bad for cropping; but the rich man had exacted his full rent. Little children were almost naked in cold weather; while their poor little bodies showed unmistakable marks of serious starvation. That man had human gore on his hands and on his soul.

16. Wash you, make you clean.—Here the prophet changes the tone of his preaching. It is no longer accusation, but exhortation. Wash you no doubt refers to the custom of the Jews to sprinkle the people when they repented, as John the Baptist did. They were to put away their evil doings, cease to do evil, and make their lives clean. That was the only way for them to get to Jehovah. Read the Golden Text. Servants of God must be clean in heart and life.

17. I would like to recommend this verse to all seekers of salvation. It is especially good for those who have salvation, and wish to retain it.

18. Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord.—Jehovah has the profoundest respect for a human being. Men have tried to force others to be religious; but he never does that. If men think his demands reasonable, he declares: "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." Thank God! The world offers nothing like that to lost men.

19. If ye be willing and obedient, he shall eat the good of the land.—Wonder of all wonders! Jehovah, sinned against, betrayed, forsaken of his chosen people, and about to send them away into a terrible captivity to a heathen nation, still offers them not only mercy, but the good of the land. And he is just the same God today that he was in that day. It is almost too good to be true; but it is true.

20. But if ye refuse and rebel.—Exhortation, promise, and warning are all jumbled together by the great preacher. Ye shall be devoured by the sword.—There is nothing more terrible than the wrath of God toward an unrepentant sinner; it "abideth on him." Be sure to read the next verse, and on to the end of the chapter.

AN INVESTMENT PAYING LARGE DIVIDENDS.

Rev. Kenichi Tsuchiya, a Japanese student, having just been graduated at Asbury College and then at the Seminary, has now been accepted in the graduate department at Southern Baptist Seminary at Louisville, Ky., as an eligible candidate for D.Th. degree, requiring a two years' course of study. Mr. Tsuchiya is making this final preparation in his education so as to go back to his own people fully equipped for evangelistic work among them. EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. W. A. Grogg: "I started my evangelistic work after conference in September. My first meeting was with Rev. Hill, Elkins, W. Va. Many were saved and filled with the Holy Spirit, and a number added to the church. I next went to Beverly to assist Brother Shomo. The Lord heard prayer and many found peace with the Lord. My address is 605½ 11th St., West, Huntington, W. Va."

The recent report of Penhook, Va., was not sent in by W. J. Craddock and wife as indicated. This correction is made that Brother Craddock and wife may not be given credit for the report.

Rev. Fred G. Williams, 11916 Beulah Ave., N. E., Cleveland, Ohio, has open dates for November. Let those interested please to take note.

W. B. Dunkum: "We have just finished five years of holiness evangelism in which we have traveled thousands of miles in fourteen states, preaching full salvation. With God's blessing, we have seen hundreds reclaimed, saved and sanctified. We are available for meetings, and will go anywhere we are allowed to get sinners saved, backsliders reclaimed, and believers sanctified. Address us, 1353 Hemlock St., Louisville, Ky."

The Herald readers are requested to pray for a revival to be conducted in Syracuse, N. Y., by Rev. Lawrence Reed. This announcement comes from Major C. E. Ernst, of The Volunteers of America, Syracuse, N. Y. The revival begins Nov. 20, continuing for two weeks. Don't fail to pray earnestly for this meeting.

C. Warren Jones, Pastor: "Revival meeting and Dedication, Cleveland, O., beginning Wednesday, Nov. 23rd, and continuing over Sunday, Dec. 4th. Evangelists Jarrette and Dell Aycock will conduct a revival campaign in the First Church of the Nazarene, and on Sunday the last day, Dr. R. T. Williams will be present to dedicate the new $80,000.00 church. Arrange to come."

Asbury College— A World Institution

"In the Heart of the far-famed Blue Grass"

LEWIS ROBESON AKERS, M.A., D.D., President

A STANDARD COSMOPOLITAN "A" GRADE COLLEGE enrolling students from forty states and ten foreign countries. One hundred and ten A. B. graduates in the class of '27. Recognized as "A" grade by the University of Kentucky and the Kentucky Department of Education. Member Association of Kentucky Colleges and Universities. Member Association of American Colleges.

A DYNAMIC CENTER OF SPIRITUAL POWER for those contemplating Christian service at home or abroad, but furnishing basic courses for the regular professions of life. Asbury College is noted throughout the nation for its fidelity to Methodist standards. Its good fellowship and spiritual atmosphere are unusual.

THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS provides fourteen majors leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree, in Classics, French and German, Spanish, English, Education, History, Philosophy, Political and Social Science, Biology, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Fine Arts, and Religious Education.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION supervised by accomplished and experienced teachers, master pupils of Percy Grainger and Joseph LeVhinnne.

ART DEPARTMENT. Vivian May Norris, Director. Member of the Art Students' League, A. M. I., an illustrator of America's leading periodicals.

EDUCATION. Special attention given to this Department by two highly trained Graduate teachers, with a view to meeting various state requirements.

HOME ECONOMICS. Splendidly equipped quarters with latest scientific electric apparatus.

EQUIPMENT. One of the latest and best equipped colleges in the State. Commodious brick buildings including three dormitories for young men, one of the finest Memorial Halls in the South housing three hundred young women. New water system, electrical conveniences, beautiful campus lighted by a "white way," New Memorial Library of 40,000 volume capacity just completed.

ENVIRONMENT. Sixteen miles south of Lexington on main line of Southern Railway and near L. & N. main lines. Altitude 1,000 feet. One of the most healthful towns of the State, population, 2,000, with no pool rooms, moving pictures, or other demoralizing influences. Total expenses for the school year $400.00.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

BETHEL ACADEMY.

(Chartered under Asbury College)

Bethel Academy is a fully accredited four year high school, recognized as "A" grade by the Association of Kentucky Colleges and is a member of Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

An Ideal Book for Girls.

A BEAUTIFUL GIFT BOOK.

It is dedicated to the growing girl, the girl who has problems, heartaches, and disappointments. It is written by a mother who understands girls, and who out of her mother-heart has longed to help them, and who is a successful worker of long experience among girls. So well does the author understand girls that she writes as though she were their big sister.

The girl's heart takes fresh courage as this book companion helps lift her over the hard places and guides her through the valleys.

Some of the Treasures.

Character Building, Making Herself Beautiful, A Sunny Disposition, Sincerity, Ideals, Ambitions, Power of Purpose, When a Girl Goes Out, The Quiet Hour, Choosing a Life-Work, The Full-Blown Rose.

Hero Stories For Young People

Human Stories About Human Beings, With a Heart-Throb in Each Book

JOHN WESLEY—The Christian Hero EGERMEIER.

A beautiful story narrating the life of a great reformer. It covers his eventful career remarkably well. The smooth running and appealing literary style of this author makes this a most refreshing story to read. Cloth bound, and illustrated 132 pages. Price 75c.

JOHN G. PATON—Hero of the South Seas BYRUM.

Full of action from the start. An absorbing story of Christian heroism among savage cannibals. It gives the life of one of the world's most fearless missionaries. Cloth bound, and illustrated. 127 pages. Price 75c.

MARTIN LUTHER—The Lion-Hearted Reformer.

MORRISON.

Every Christian, young or old, ought to read about this great sixteenth-century reformer. This book shows you the condition of the religious world and why and how Luther "broke off" relations with the Pope. Interesting and thrilling. Cloth bound, and illustrated. 115 pages. Price 75c.

JAMES HUDSON TAYLOR—Pioneer Missionary of Inland China.

HUNNEX.

The life story of a fearless missionary who dared to take Christ to a dangerous, threatening people. How God led, directed and protected him is a story worth any one's time to read. Cloth bound, and illustrated. 154 pages. Price 75c.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE—Missionary Explorer of Africa.

KLEEGERGER.

Many thrilling encounters with wild beasts and savage natives did this Christian explorer have in the jungles of Africa. Read how he won these natives to Christ and of the loyalty they showed Livingstone in his time of need. Cloth bound, and illustrated. 159 pages. Price 75c.

CHARLES H. SPURGEON—Prince of Preachers.

ADCOCK.

A mighty preacher who swayed thousands. Before he was 21 years of age his popularity was soaring. You will understand why he attracted such immense throngs when you read this account of his life. Cloth bound, and illustrated. 116 pages. Price 75c.

ADONIRAM JUDSON—Apostle of Burma. PERCY.

Faith, courage, conviction, sacrifice—in these four words are summed up the life of that heroic missionary of the cross of Jesus. Cloth bound, and illustrated. 128 pages. Price 75c.

The First Soprano

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The underlying motive of this excellent piece of Christian fiction, into which is woven a fascinating love story, is the consecration of life and talent to God. It peers through the superficiality of mere profession, and the hypocrisy of certain features of Church life and appeals strongly for reality in Christian experience.

You will find it one of the most interesting stories you have ever read. Price, $1.00.

The Children's Big Bible Story Book

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD.

In words of easy reading, illustrated with fifty world-famous masterpieces of sacred art, in many colors. The book is beautifully bound in cloth, stamped in gold with an illustrated jacket printed in many colors. The size is 7½x9½x1½ in. thick.

The Bible stories are printed in extra large bold type and they cover the Old and New Testaments. It is a book that would ordinarily sell for $3.00, but on account of the very large edition printed, we are enabled to sell them at $1.25 each, postpaid.

Possibilities

BY McCLURE.

We know of no book on the market so suggestive to young people. The following from the table of contents will give the reader an idea of the richness of these pages: "Finding our Possibilities," "Protecting our Possibilities," "Developing our Possibilities," "The Possibility of Our Time," "The Power for Good of one Person," etc. Neatly bound in cloth, 160 pages, a regular $1.00 value that we are selling for 60c.

Familiar Failures

REV. CLOVIS G. CHAPPELL, D.D.

Applying that same fine ability for analysis which has distinguished his other volumes, Dr. Chappell in this book turns his attention to The Drifter, The Trifler, the man who is too busy, and other well-known types who make a failure of the business of life. He presents the type in a most engaging manner, and then shows the factors operative in each individual failure. An excellent addition to the fine series of character studies which have already given Dr. Chappell a wide and alert audience.

Net, $1.60.

OTHER BOOKS BY DR. CHAPPELL.

The Optimism of Premillennialism

H. C. MORRISON.

Our Lord Jesus, while on earth, plainly and repeatedly taught that he would come again, personally, into the world, and on account of this, this doctrine is very precious to this author. If you have an open mind to know what the Bible teaches on the second coming, you will be delighted with the contents of this book.

Cloth, Price $1.00.

The Red Road to Royalty

BY AKERS.

Dr. Akers very forcibly calls attention to the inevitable road, and makes it very plain that every personality, nation and race which hopes to arrive at the true goal of character, happiness and service, must take the road that Christ pointed out two thousand years ago. Ten sermons.

Cloth binding. Price $1.50.

Fox's Book of Martyrs

A history of the lives, sufferings and triumphant deaths of the early Christian and Protestant martyrs. It tells the story of some of the most thrilling periods in Christian history when "a noble army, men and boys, the matron and the maid," "climbed the steep ascent of heaven," "mid peril, toil and pain." It is thrilling and convincing. 370 large pages. Good clear type, beautifully printed and bound.

Price $1.50.

A Little Kit of Teachers' Tools

HOWARD.

If you want to make a gift to a teacher friend that will be helpful, and at the same time appreciated, we know of no little book that is so suggestive of how to study your pupils, get their attention, and secure their co-operation as this book. Neatly bound in cloth and the price is 75c.

What to Teach and How to Reach the Young

BY GOODMAN.

A spiritual handbook for all workers among young people on preparing an address, best forms of address, examples of story telling, teaching by parables and proverbs, etc. 117 chapters in all, with a complete index.

Cloth bound. Price $1.25.

Turn But A Stone

Addresses to Children.

BY ALEXANDER.

The author tried these addresses out in his own congregation before putting them in book form. There are 50 very attractive subjects, with a scripture text to each one, and a wonderfully interesting story to illustrate each text. This book will be of untold value to anyone interested in teaching young people in the home, church or Sunday school. It has had a large sale at $1.60. Our special price, $1.00.

Under the Grey Olives

The story of a pilgrimage to the Holy Land wherein "we make acquaintance with the soul of that land where so much that is strange and memorable has come to pass." Illustrated. Net, $2.00.

Morning Faces

BY HUNTER.

The art of the story-teller is here finely blended with the art of preaching to children. These stories appeal to the child's sense of wonder and deal with the vital interests of the child's world.

This book has been so highly commended by some of our constituency, that we do not hesitate to recommend it. 219 pages, cloth bound, regular price $1.25. Our special price $1.00.

Pulpit Germs

BY W. W. WHYTE.

GIVE THANKS UNTO THE LORD.

By The Editor.

WE have again come to that period of the year when we are called upon by the chief executive of the nation to set apart a day of thanksgiving to God for his many blessings, both spiritual and temporal. We need to be constantly reminded that God is, and that he is the giver of every good and perfect gift, and that we are entirely dependent upon him for life and all the blessings that come to us.

We should often stop and remind ourselves of the constant stream of mercies flowing from the throne of divine grace. It has been our privilege to be born in the greatest land beneath the sun; the variety of climate, the diversity of products, and the wonderful climatic conditions that enable one to have almost perpetual summer, and at the same time, offers high mountainous regions of protection from excessive heat, with the wonderful and varied resources of the country, is cause for constant gratitude and praise to God for the privilege of living in this wondrous land under the best flag that has ever floated over a people.

It is sometimes wise for us to contrast our country and conditions with that of multitudes of our fellowbeings who have been less fortunate in place of their birth and the conditions which surround them. Of course, we all recognize the fact that our government is not perfect, that much is not as it should be in this goodly land; and yet, contrasting our nation with other nations, and our conditions with other peoples, we have great reason for gratitude to God that our lot has been cast on this continent and that we are permitted to work out our life problems under conditions which exist in great, good, glorious America.

We are living in a great age. Methuselah lived something over 900 years, but he had nothing on us. We can live more in ten years than he lived in nine hundred years. I came down from New York City to Cincinnati a few days ago in twenty-one hours. It would have taken Methuselah a good long stretch of that long life of his to have made this trip. I doubt if in the more than nine hundred years of his life, he covered the distance that I covered in twenty-one hours. We, in one year's time, can travel more miles, see more world, touch more people, get acquainted with more books, look upon more beautiful art and splendid architecture than Methuselah could in the more than nine hundred years of his life. The person who lives right, who is wide-awake and active, can live a great deal in ten years today. We ought to be profoundly grateful that we were born in this country, and that we are permitted to live in this age, so crowded with opportunities for development and for service.

Let us never forget to give God praise. Let

Do not forget the thankoffering for the Loan Fund for young men preparing for the ministry in the Asbury Theological Seminary. All of you sanctified people, how glad you are that some one brought you the message of full redemption from sin. It has meant so much to you, will you not express your gratitude in a practical and substantial way on November 24? After you have enjoyed your Thanksgiving dinner, sit down and write a check for this good work of preparing and sending forth an army of well equipped young men to preach a full salvation to the people. Every cent you send in will go into this Loan Fund. Send your offering to H. C. Morrison, care Pentecostal Herald, Louisville, Ky.

us teach our hearts the sweet lesson of gratitude. Let us receive and enjoy every good thing as a gift from God, as a token of his boundless love and infinite mercy. Above all things, let us constantly remind ourselves of the unspeakable Gift—the Lord Jesus—who gave himself for us to redeem us from our sins, to bring to our souls peace and love and joy. How wonderful it all is! And then, there is eternity! What a stretch of endless ages opens up before us. In it there is unceasing growth and wondrous discovery, ever advancing, always enlarging, getting better views of our Creator and Redeemer and untold marvels of his wisdom, his power, and his love. Long as eternity is, it will not be long enough for us to express the gratitude and gladness of our hearts for the unspeakable Gift of God. Let every day be a thanksgiving day. Let the train of life go up to the grand central depot of the universe loaded down with gratitude, praise, thanksgiving, and consecrated service to him from whom comes every good we enjoy.

SHOULD A ROMAN CATHOLIC BE PRESIDENT?

SOME one sends me a clipping from one of the daily papers of Detroit, Mich., in which Rev. Lynn Harold Hough, the brilliant pastor of the Central M. E. Church of Detroit, is represented as saying that the time has come when a Roman Catholic should be elected President of these United States.

The Reverend gentleman is quoted as saying: "Men of good will in the Protestant group ought to be eager that Catholics should have a share in public office in proportion to their percentage of population."

If I am not mistaken, this is the same Dr. Hough who said in a Commencement Address at the University of Michigan that "Democracy has been overworked in this nation, and the time had come for the establishing of an educated caste." If I am properly informed this same Dr. Hough is quite modernistic in his views and trend of thinking; but for this fact I should be surprised at his anxiety for the election to the Presidency of this nation a Roman Catholic.

In the first place, this generous preacher need not give himself any worry about Roman Catholics having their share of public office and political pie. The Roman Catholic Church is, and always has been, one of the most powerful political organizations in the world. It has not failed to put its strong hand upon the politics of these United States. It has its governors, senators, congressmen, mayors and countless thousands of state and county officials. Always, and everywhere, these officials are the loyal and devoted children of the Holy Father at Rome, Italy.

Has Rev. Hough forgotten, or does he sympathize with, the action of the Pope who refused Mr. Roosevelt an audience because he dared to be entertained by Methodist missionaries at Rome? Is he acquainted with the attitude of Roman Catholics toward Methodist work in Rome? Is Mr. Hough acquainted with conditions in those countries that have been for centuries under the religious, educational and political domination of Romanism? The war with Spain lifted the curtain over the fearful state of ignorance, and moral degradation in Cuba and the Philippines where Rome, for centuries, had enjoyed most remarkable opportunity to show her capacity to lift up and elevate a people.

Look at poor Mexico today struggling to break the power of a church that has bound her hand and foot in ignorance and poverty for centuries. Our Lord Jesus Christ taught us to judge a tree by its fruit. The Romish tree has borne the fruit of oppression, persecution, ignorance, superstition and poverty throughout its history. Logically, this modernistic Methodist preacher is saying Al Smith should be elected president of these United States. He is the only Catholic thought of for the place; in other words, he tells the Republicans of the nation that the next president should be a democrat. He tells the Democrats that they should elect Al Smith. He tells the Protestants that they should elect a Roman Catholic to the presidency of this nation. He tells the churches and ministers and the great business men, and all the moral forces of this great republic that have united to put the saloon, with all of its curse of disease, poverty, waste, ruin and murder, that they should call off their great moral and economic battle for prohibition and sobriety and elect to the presidency of this nation a man who got his political education from a bar-keeper in a saloon, and who has ever been from shoe heel to hat band the stalwart friend of the liquor traffic.

He tells the intelligent Christian men and women of this great nation that the time has come for them to go to the polls and elect for

STOPPING TO SING THE DOXOLOGY.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

THIS is what Paul does in Romans 11:33-36. This is what the American nation does once a year on its Thanksgiving Day. Thank God that in all our rush and hurry and bustle we are called by our good President to stop and sing the Doxology for God's goodness to us, his Providences over us, and for the bounties he has so graciously bestowed upon us during another year!

In England they have their Harvest Home services in all the churches and the people crowd in to them to offer thanks. My good brother, Rev. A. J. Broadbelt, of Bristol, England, told me that on his Harvest Home Sunday night he has to preach to two audiences of 2,000 each. He will preach to one crowd, and send them home, then 2,000 more will crowd in to the second service. A splendid sight, truly.

However, Thanksgiving Day is a peculiar institution of the United States and we thank God for the day and for the spirit of Thanksgiving which prevails at that time.

Now let us return to Paul in Romans again. Here is a case when Paul stops his argument to shout. He is so full of his subject he sees the day coming when "There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob, and all Israel shall be saved." He rejoices so that God hath not turned away his people Israel, that he winds up his great argument with these words of praise:

"O the depth of the riches
Both of the wisdom and knowledge of God!
How unsearchable are his judgments,
And his ways past finding out!
For who hath known the mind of the Lord?
Or who hath been his counsellor?
Or who hath first given to him
And it shall be recompensed unto him again?
For of him, and through him, and for him,
Are all things:
To whom be glory forever. Amen."

Now these words are so sublime and glorious that I almost wish I was a musician so that I could put these wonderful words to music. Let some of our sweet singers of Israel take the hint and in revivals and summer camp meetings let them be sung.

As we sing our Doxology this Thanksgiving what a multitude of things have we for which to praise our God.

1. Our thanks should go up to God for our National Blessings. God has been so bountiful to us in domain and privilege. America and Canada! What an immense territory! I went once across the continent by way of the Canadian Rockies. They have talked to me about the Alps. Once I was close to Mount Blanc, but I thought that in the Canadian Rockies there is everything in mountain peaks to surpass the Alps. What a wonderful exhibition of beautiful spirit is witnessed in the fact that in all the stretch of boundary line between the U. S. A. and Canada there is not a single regiment or company of soldiers from either Nation to guard the frontier.

God has given us domain and plenty. Peace and prosperity have been singularly ours during the year. From fields and mountains, from mines and sea, we have taken with lavish hand the good things of God's providence.

2. Our Thanksgiving should be expressed for Prohibition and other social mercies. I have met many Americans in my European travels who stood ready at any moment to utter a tirade against Prohibition. As soon as our ship got outside American waters and

THE PILGRIMS AND THANKSGIVING.

The Pilgrims brought with them the ideas of civil laws based upon the general principles of the Bible. The outstanding illustrations were their laws concerning blasphemy, profanity, speaking the truth under oath, the Sabbath Day and chastity.

That in one or two instances in another colony, these laws, especially the Sabbath laws, were made rather more particular and stringent than seems wise to us is readily granted. This was the work of the second generation and more especially of those which came directly from England. The Pilgrims themselves, broadened by contact with Dutch culture and possessing, many of them, a fairly liberal education, established a code of laws that with slight adaptations, would not be considered either narrow or harsh today, except by the anti-Christian, radical element of the population. The narrowness and severity, came with the cramping by frontier conditions. Isolation of pioneers always has that tendency at first.

They brought with them their ideas of a State religion. It was not the establishment of a church, or any form of organic union between Church and State, but the idea that the State as one of God's ordinances should be religious in its relation to God in the exercise of its functions. In embodying this idea, they opened their town meetings with prayer and asked their ministers to instruct them in the Biblical principles of civil government. Their judges and magistrates either offered prayers at the opening of Court, or legislative bodies, or invited their ministers to do so. They established civic thanksgiving and fast days.

Their first Thanksgiving was appointed for and held on February 22d, 1621. It was planned as a day of fasting and prayer but the opportune arrival of a ship loaded with provisions caused the change. But the appointment and the change were neither of them made by the church, but by the civic body under the action of Governor Bradford. This has grown into our universal, national, annual Thanksgiving Day held by proclamation of the President.—Christian Statesman.

"O Lord of heaven and earth and sea,
To Thee all praise and glory be;
How shall we show our love to Thee
Who givest all?"

"Whatever Lord, we lend to Thee,
Repaid a thousand fold will be;
Then gladly will we give to Thee
Who givest all?"

"For Peaceful homes and healthful days,
For all the blessings earth displays,
We owe Thee thankfulness and praise,
Who givest all?"

the bar was open they took to drinking and got drunk. I was thankful many times that the great question of Prohibition did not have to be settled by that type of American.

3. Our Thanksgiving should go to God for life's sunsets and evening stars. Some may be disposed to think this is too near the end of things to be joyful for. Oh no! What is more glorious than golden sunsets? I saw one at sea just a while ago. It looked as though the sun was being borne in a majestic chariot decked with all the colors of the rainbow, by fleecy, snow-white horses harnessed by streamers of crimson and gold, and the sun itself was golden and all nature was one immense symphony in which the breezes were singing their evening lullaby, the ocean waves sang an evensong, and the angels of the night sang the doxology.

I remember when Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" came out. It thrilled me. I think it is one of Tennyson's sublimest poems. It reflects so sweetly the Christian's view of life's evening and passing away.

Let me quote the words again:

"Sunset and Evening Star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar
When I put out to sea.

"But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep Turns again home.

"Twilight and Evening Bell
And after that the dark;
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

"For though from out our bourne of Time and Place,

The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crossed the bar."

I am thinking of two saints of the Lord who have "crossed the bar" in the recent past. How their lives impressed me! their saintliness! their Christlikeness! their quiet but mighty influences touching great multitudes. I refer to Rev. E. D. Whiteside, of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, Pittsburgh, and Rev. Thos. E. Stephens, of The Great Commission Prayer League of Chicago. Bro. Whiteside was a benediction wherever he went and he seemed to sanctify everything he touched. Rev. Thos. E. Stephens was the man of God in the prayer room of the Moody Institute carrying on that Great Commission Prayer League by which he touched the ends of the earth.

I can say about Bro. Whiteside and Bro. Stephens what Paul said of the Philippian Church, "I thank my God upon every remembrance of you."

4. Let our Doxology of praise go forth because of the Bible and its triumphs.

When in London I wrote an article for one of the London papers in which I said that the moral ideals of Great Britain and their effect upon the Empire, and the rise and progress of America, were due to the old Book we call the Bible. Years ago Tom Paine wrote in his Age of Reason: "Fifty years from now the Bible will be obsolete and forgotten"; but, after Paine had crawled to a despairing drunkard's grace, the very printing press, which was used to print his Age of Reason, began to be used to circulate the Bible. In the very room in which Robert G. Ingersoll wrote his Mistakes of Moses (a book, which the world hailed with delight as the end of Moses), a group of men met together, and said: "Let us put up in this city a great monument to Jesus Christ." This was done, and there that monument stands today.

5. Let us thank God for his boundless grace so full and so free. Some very suggestive writer has put this state of grace in the following unique way:

"The happy man was born in the city Regeneration, in the parish of Repentance unto life; he was educated in the school of Obedience, and lives now in Perseverance; he works at the trade of Diligence, notwithstanding he has a large estate in the county of Christian Contentment and many a time does jobs of self-denial; he wears the plain garments of Humility, and has a better suit to put on when he goes to court, called the robe of righteousness; he often walks in the valley of self-abasement, and sometimes climbs the mountains of heavenly-mindedness; he breakfasts every morning in Spiritual Prayer, and sups every evening on the same; he has meat to eat which the world knows nothing of; and his drink is the sincere milk of the Word of God, and the new wine of the Kingdom.

"Thus happy he lives and happy he dies. Happy is he who has gospel submission in his will; due order in his affections; sound peace in his conscience; sanctifying grace in his soul; real divinity in his breast; the Redeemer's yoke on his neck; a vain world under his feet, and a crown of glory over his head. Happy is the life of such a man; to obtain which, believe firmly, work abundantly, live holy, die daily, watch your heart, guard your senses, redeem your time, love Christ and long for the glory."

THANKSGIVING.

Rev. W. S. Bowden.

THANKSGIVING is our annual time for saying grace at the table of eternal goodness. We are reminded by the date on the calendar and by the issuing of the Thanksgiving Proclamation by the President of the United States that we are at another Thanksgiving Day. While at the public services of worship held on Thanksgiving Day the emphasis is properly put upon our national blessings it is well to pause to read some of the great thanksgiving passages of the Bible from the Psalms and other portions. These words written by the apostle Paul suggest a number of phases of the general subject of thanksgiving: "Giving thanks always for all things in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ to God, even the Father." Eph. 5:20.

THE NATURE AND DUTY OF THANKSGIVING.

Definitions may seem dry, but are sometimes quite helpful. I look into the dictionary and the best commentaries and find such statements as the following: "Thanksgiving is an expression of gratitude, and one of the first and highest tokens of a noble nature." "The act of rendering thanks, or expressing gratitude for favors and mercies." "Thanksgiving is such a sense of favors received from, and of obligations due to, a benefactor, as disposes us to make suitable acknowledgments and returns." Long ago, Xenophon said: "The sweetest of all our sounds is praise."

The highest form of gratitude is that directed to God. Thanksgiving is supremely due to God. Indeed, there can be no true thanksgiving without belief in a personal God. "It is he that hath made us and not we ourselves." M. H. Hissey in writing of God's inalienable rights, rights which cannot be disputed, illustrates by referring to the watch-maker and the architect. The watch-maker has a right to his watch, the architect to control his plans, the poet to copyright his poems. So God has certain rights. Because of what he is and does, thanksgiving is supremely due unto him. Too often man enjoys the gift but forgets the Giver. There are three things in every gift—the gift, the giver, and the affection in which it was given. Our relation to God is not that alone of self-preservation. We should not have a commercial idea of God's dealing. To thank a benefactor simply to get more is not thanksgiving; he who does so is trying to make a bargain with Deity for his own private ends. Thankfulness is the measure of the moral advancement of men.

"That man may last but never lives,
Who much receives but nothing gives;
Whom none can love, whom none can thank,
Creation's blot, creation's blank."

H. Melville once wrote: "It would seem to have been determined in every age and by every nation, that ingratitude is so execrable a thing, that to be unmindful of benefits demonstrates an unworthiness which disqualifies for all the intercourses of life. Yet, strange as it is, we have the spectacle forced on us continually, of men who would blush to be thought ungrateful to their fellows, utterly unconscious that they owe anything to God, and untouched by the numberless benefits which they are every moment receiving at his hands." We'll never understand the duty of thanksgiving until we recognize a personal God, the great giver of every good and perfect gift.

FOR WHAT SHOULD WE BE THANKFUL?

"For all things." This answer is best understood in the light of these other words used by Paul: "In everything give thanks."

We have much for which to be thankful in the national history of the year. A people so blessed of Providence as we have been should shout the harvest home. Shame on the Christian people of the United States that they are not more thankful. We are the most favored of all the nations in the world. We are the most prosperous. We are the most independent. We live in a land of open Bibles. We have the privilege of worshipping God according to the dictates of our own conscience. We are comparatively free from such political alliances as bother some peoples. We have fine American institutions. Crops have been good. Where is there a people better fed, better clothed and better sheltered than the people of the United States? We are prone to think too much of discouraging local conditions instead of thinking of the general prosperity. A distinguished foreigner, on returning home from a visit to this country, said: "The only fault I have to find with the Americans is that they are so beastly prosperous." We are a prosperous people. As a nation we can appropriately use these words: "Thou hast not dealt so with any people." "Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness."

There are personal as well as national blessings. We should not forget these. We should be thankful for material and spiritual blessings, temporal and eternal. We should remember both the ordinary and the extraordinary blessings, the mercies both old and new. Both the sweet and the bitter experiences of life call for thanksgiving. There are so many things for which to thank God that it is impossible to enumerate them. We may endeavor to count our blessings one by one, but we'll not get to the end of the count.

While not ignoring the sunshine, and rain, and air, and health and strength and clothing and shelter and food and the innumerable things which are so common that we do not appreciate them, let us be especially thankful for the spiritual blessings which come alone through Jesus Christ our Lord. Let us give thanks that the coming of our Lord draws near. The best is yet to come. Beyond the present we have the ever brightening hope of the soon coming of earth's rightful King. We are called upon to lift up our heads and rejoice because of the signs of his coming. Belgium rejoiced greatly when Albert came back, but he had only been away four years. Alsace-Lorraine shouted for joy when the invader was driven out. Soon earth's Redeemer will come; the invader will be driven out. Then there will be a grand, eternal Thanksgiving Day.

WHEN SHOULD WE BE THANKFUL?

"Always." It is easy to centralize our thanksgiving in one season of the year, but we need to remember that God's blessings are not limited to any one season of the year. They are new every morning. They fill every day. We should be thankful to God "always."

Hear the Word of the Lord!

"We give thanks to God always." 1 Thess. 1:2; 2 Thess. 1:3.

"I will bless the Lord at all times: his praise shall continually be in my mouth."

"Every day will I bless Thee."

"So we, Thy people, and the sheep of Thy pasture, will give Thee thanks forever."

"I will praise Thy name forever and ever."

When should we give thanks unto Jehovah? There is a whole sermon in this little Bible reading on the subject.

(1) In private worship. Dan. 6:10.

(2) In public worship. Neh. 9:5; Psa. 35:18, 8.

(3) When we eat. Acts 27:35.

(4) When we pray. Phil. 4:6; Col. 4:2.

While we may give special thanks to God upon one certain day of the year we should not let a day go by without giving thanks unto our Heavenly Father.

"Whether in darkness or daylight,

Whether in tempest or calm,
There is something for which to be thankful,
That should waken a grateful psalm.

"Whether in health or in sickness,

Whether in sorrow or joy,
We may still give thanks to our Father,
And his praise should our lips employ."

THE MANNER OR MEANS OF THANKSGIVING.

"In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." Here we touch upon a point which is too often overlooked. The spirit, the manner, the name in which things are done largely determine their character. The virtue of good deeds is nearly destroyed when they are performed for the purpose of accomplishing selfish plans or sounding out our own fame. There is only one way to thank our bountiful Father in heaven. Jesus Christ is the approach to God. To ignore Jesus Christ is to fail to render acceptable thanksgiving. Peter says: "Offer spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God through Jesus Christ." Paul chimes in: "Let us offer by him the sacrifices of God continually, that is, the fruit of our lips, giving thanks to his name."

The man who is not a Christian may give mental assent to the fact that he is indebted to God, he may in some measure appreciate what God has done for him, but his thanksgiving is very imperfect. One must sustain the relationship of a child to God the Father through Jesus Christ his Son before acceptable thanksgiving can be rendered to God. Thank God that there are so many who have the consciousness of this sacred relationship.

"What shall I render unto Jehovah for all his benefits to me? I will take the cup of salvation, and call upon the name of Jehovah."

There is a legend in poem form which tells of two angels which were once sent to earth to gather up the prayers of men. One was to fill his basket with the petitions of mankind and the other was to gather their thanksgiving. Ere many days they wended their way back to Father's house, one with his basket heaped and running over and heavy with the innumerable petitions of men, the other with sad and heavy heart, but light and well-nigh empty basket, for the thanksgiving of men was but seldom heard by the angel, diligent though his search had been. The story certainly emphasizes very forcibly the sad lack there is in the human heart of true gratitude to God for his manifold gifts and mercies.

"Come, Thou Fount of every blessing,

Tune my heart to sing Thy praise;
Streams of mercy, never ceasing,
Call for songs of loudest praise."

The Spirit of Kindness

Should be instilled into the heart and mind of every child. In doing this people often overlook the fact that the dumb animals respond to kindness with almost as much gratitude as a human being. We do not know of a better way to help create this spirit of tenderness and kindness than to place in the hands of the growing boy or girl a copy of "Black Beauty," which is a most thrilling story of a horse. A grown-up cannot read this book without purposing in his or her heart to be kind to animals, and it increases one's desire to be kind to humanity.

You could not give a young person a book for Christmas that would be read with any more pleasure and profit, and at this time we have a most attractive edition that we are offering for 50c, postpaid. Try giving the book and see if you aren't more than gratified with the results of this gift.

THANKSGIVING SERMON.

Dr. W. B. Hinson.

"Enter into His gates with thanksgiving, and into His courts with praise."—Ps. 100:4.

IN the Episcopal prayer book, there is written a sentence I desire to quote. "We thank thee for our creation, preservation, and for all the blessings of this life. But most of all, for thine inestimable love in the redemption of the world by Jesus Christ, our Lord; and for the means of grace and the hope of glory." "We thank thee for our creation." We thank thee that we are alive; that unto us there has been given the marvelous privilege of existence; that whereas we once were not, we now are. We live. The greatest gift of our God outside Jesus Christ, is life. For without life, all other gifts could never come to us. The greatest thing in the world is not love. It may be the greatest, and it doubtless is, of the three wonderful possessions of faith and hope and love. But God's greatest gift outside his Son, is life. And the wonderfulness of the gift argues the divineness of the Giver. "How noble in reason is man, how infinite in faculty, in form and moving, how express and admirable, in action how like an angel, in apprehension, how like a God. Thou hast made man a little lower than God; and crowned him with glory and honor. Think, if you will, of the marvelous house God has provided for us to live in; the house we call the body. These eyes that scan the starry vault in a moment; these ears into which come the blended sweetness of all musical sounds, from rippling brooks and meadow larks, the song of childhood's joy, the expression of woman's tender speech, the solemn roll of the thunder, and the great sea psalm storm rendered. And the faculty of telling out the things of the mind and heart, and the aspirations of the soul, which we possess in the sense of speech! And the perfume of the violet, and the odor of the rose, and all the tender reminiscences that cluster around and associate with those perfumes that come to us through the sense of smell. And the fact of touch; that we can see with our finger tips, and make computations regarding size and shape, even when the eyes are closed. What a wonderful house in which to enshrine the marvelous spirit of man!

And what faculties of the mind! How we can imagine the pearly gates, the jasper walls, the golden pavements, the thrones, the harps, the palm branches of the New Jerusalem, and make them appear real to our souls. The memory a store-house, in which we lock treasures day by day, as we journey along the highway of life; and that wonderful faculty by which after long years those same treasures are brought to us from their hiding places with no conscious effort of our own at all. The wonderful judgment that gives poise and stability to all the visions of the imagination, and all the treasures of the memory, and all the facts of life.

And then the marvelous spirit, by which I can believe God lives; by which I can believe God loves; by which I can believe God saves;

by which I can believe God holds communion with me day by day. And those instincts of the soul that move out after communication with the Eternal, and fellowship with the Unseen Holy; and this instinct of immortality that says, "The ship may sink, but there is that in me that pertains to God and which no ocean can drown."

How God has blessed and safe-guarded this wonderful nation; the parallel of which is to be found nowhere in the annals of history, save in the story of God's own peculiar people, the ancient Jews. And today let us say with bated breath, and yet with genuine thankfulness, and a heartfelt sympathy for all the afflicted, "How gracious is God in his preservation of the American nation." May God himself cause us all to remember that our privilege is the measure and gauge of our responsibility. For our safeguarding is only that we may exercise our God-given opportunity. So let us pour out of our abundance, and thus minister unto the wants of those who lack. Let hearts grow more sympathetic than they ever were before. Let our hands be open, that every blessing we possess may roll off our thankful palms to the enriching of those destitute. Let us lay hold of God with prayer and supplication, as we have never done before in all our history; and let us remember that God in his providence has so preserved and safe-guarded this nation, that it may stand as a great proof of human sympathy; as a great expression of our common humanitarianism; as an ideal to all the nations of the earth; and perchance in his providence, as a controlling arbiter in the days that are to come.

Then may I turn to things more personal, even to those that are individual? How God has preserved us! What a year this has been! How your neighbor sickened, and you remained well; how you sickened, but are well today; how the little coffin passed out from your neighbor's dwelling, and your children will all be around the table when you dine today; and how to your neighbor you were privileged to say, "My child is in my house below; but your child is in the Father's house up above." How good God has been in preserving us! Did you ever thank God for your reason? I have some qualification for asking that question. For I was over twenty years old before I ever thanked God once that he had retained to me the use of every faculty of the mind. But I passed through an asylum and when with the doctor I emerged to where the green grass smiled up at the blue sky, I knelt and thanked God for reason. And those awful moral lapses that have cursed and spoiled other lives have not been suffered to overtake you. And those terrible failures have not approached your doors. And those fallings away from the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the recognized sovereignty of our God, have not characterized you.

What a marvelous thing is our twentieth century civilization, this great lake into which all the generations gone have been pouring their affluence and their blessing.

Surely we are the heirs of all the ages. For us the Hebrew people struggled until it produced these songs, and wonderful visions of the Eternal, that are for the establishment of our faith today. For us the Romans wrought; for us the old Greek thought out his theory; for us the continent of Europe was shaped, and slowly evolved into its present condition. For us Columbus cried, "Sail on, sail on, sail on!" O how we are privileged with the blessings of this life. And you know, my constant fear is that we may fail to remember that other men labored, and we have entered into their labors; and that begets in our lives the responsibility of so laboring in our day and generation, that the coming generation may be benefited by the lives we now live.

Most of all, we bless God for his inestimable love.

Some people say they are surprised that God loves us. But I should be surprised if he did not love us. For God to create man, was for God to provide for man. And he could not provide for man without loving him. And he could not love man without seeking to recover him. And he could not cease his quest for man, until in Christ he died to recover man. God is love! Yes, I hold that to be at the very anchorage of my soul's fate. It is inestimable love, and it is incarnated in the redemption. The inestimable love of God in the redemption of the world. I know you can go to an Ararat and behold the greatness of God. I know Sinai tells you about the holiness of God. I know Carmel reveals the jealousy of God. I know Olivet reveals the graciousness of God. But the hill of Calvary reveals more of the attributes of our God than all the other hills of the world put together. For God had all his former works outdone, in the redemption of the world by Jesus Christ our Lord. Ah! let those who have a cheap gospel come and tell us simply to look to the cross, and then sit down with a self-satisfied soul. But I tell you, sirs, the existence of Jesus as your Saviour means the handing over of your entire life to Jesus Christ, the Lord. Does it mean to give him one day out of seven? No, seven days out of the week! Does it mean one-tenth of all you possess, he may place his hand upon? No, but he says, everything you possess, you must hold in subjection to him! And thank our God for the means of grace, and the hope of glory.

Let us thank God for the hymns that lift us above the materialistic philosophy of the passing day, and introduce us to the spiritualities that are eternal. Let us thank God for the old Book that still remains—the one Book for our soul's sustentation and life. Let us thank God that we possess these psalms, these visions, these prophecies, these gospels, these epistles, and that unveiling of the truths of God in the mysterious Book that we call Revelation. Let us thank God that the Bible is still the means of grace. Let us thank God for the instruction of the Sunday school; for all good books; for all holy poems; for all inspiring songs; for everything that enters into the domain of the soul in things spiritual and eternal. We thank thee for the means of grace, and for the hope of glory. Too much I think has that faded from my vision, and I fear from yours. For life is so full of manifold activities. And we are so engrossed in the duties of the present, that so often I fear from my study I crowd out the hope of glory. But I am sure we shall better perform the duties of the day, if we have an eye on the glories of tomorrow, the hope of glory.

An old gentleman came into my study a few years ago, and he told me he was in the sunset period of his life. And I said, "Will you allow a younger man to contradict you, if he does it with kindness? My brother, you are approaching the sunset land. You are drawing nearer to the sunrise. Let a whole world of agnosticism and uncertainty talk about our going down the hill; but we Christian folk, who have the hope of glory, will talk about going up the hill. Not unto evening twilight. O no, rather are we walking in that morning twilight that heralds the dawn, the hope of glory. I wish I could go into every hospital of this world, and to every single patient say, that the hope of glory is heaven. I wish I could go into the orphanages, where the little children have no mother's love and no father's tender pity, and tell them about the hope of glory. I wish I could go into every jail of the land, and tell every poor prisoner of the hope of glory. I wish I could go right into your heart this morning, and tell you who know what it is to have sin and sorrow and deprivation. I wish I could tell you about the hope of glory. Let us in the august declaration of that great historic church, say, Above all, let us thank God for his inestimable love, manifested and revealed in Jesus Christ, who has brought within our reach the means of grace, and who himself is to us the hope of glory."

THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

Dr. L. R. Akers, President of Asbury College.

ASBURY College, for its enrollment, is probably the most cosmopolitan institution of its kind to be found within the borders of our country. While the average school draws more or less from a local constituency, usually within a hundred miles, this institution draws from almost every state of the Union and many foreign countries as well. Hence, it is truly called, "A World School."

Because of this, the President of this College has many calls for services, particularly over the week-ends, in many states. This gives an opportunity to appraise the spiritual condition of the country at large.

Our observation is that the same spiritual barrenness is evident in all sections of America. Wherever we go, we find the Gospel minister having a hard fight to keep his congregations mindful of the eternal verities and attendant upon the appointed means of grace. From this standpoint it is a discouraging outlook, but history reveals the fact that throughout the centuries there has been a spiritual waxing and waning and that revivals are born of a great necessity, and that in the time of spiritual dearth God's people have been able to pray down a mighty awakening from the skies.

Surely this is an hour when God's children need to pray and not faint, an hour when men are thinking and living in a material realm while their souls grow lean and atrophied. We are profoundly convinced that this is an hour for the beginning of a nation-wide revival which will bring our people back from their worldly wanderings to the path of righteousness, which leads to life eternal. Indeed, the crying need of the present moment should be but a compelling challenge to every one who desires to see the Kingdom of God advanced among men.

The promises are clear and plain. Prayer does things. Prayer changes things. The united, fervent prayers of God's people can put to rout the hosts of darkness and thoroughly defeat the great enemy of men's souls.

Because we lack faith in God and in men there are miracles of grace undone that otherwise would bless and surprise the world. It must be a sad God who looks down upon his unsaved ones knowing that if his saved had faith multitudes would be recovered for the Kingdom.

Let us not get away from this outstanding fact,—that the need of the present moment is the regenerating and sanctifying power of the Holy Spirit working mightily in the lives of men. Our church is lamentably lame at this point. She is apparently eager for her material prosperity and influence when the vital need is for spiritual power which can change and transform the hearts of men. There is no greater painted harlot than a love of temporal power. Would to God our church might cry for spiritual power instead. This she must have if she would lead men, not only to admire, but to practice righteousness. She needs this power, first, to convince men of their sin, then point them to the source of power which would give them victory over sin.

There is a popular notion at the present hour that the chief work of the church is educational. In our various services we are offering the latest results of modern scholarship as if through this influence men could be transformed from hoodlums to philanthropists, from sinners to saints, while we look with not a little suspicion upon any effort to secure the immediate conversion or sanctification of men or the speedy overthrow of evil apart from this educative process. Let us rest assured that men can never be educated into righteousness. The greatest menace is not that of the low brow, but of the high brow whose thinking is tainted by sinful processes. Some one has said you cannot find any great piece of rascality without certain university graduates being mixed up in it. Indeed, a complete faculty for some great institution of learning could easily be secured from inmates of Sing Sing Prison alone. A rascal who speaks a dozen languages is no less a rascal because of his acquirements. Not even religious education is sufficient to save the world. Only supernatural and divine power can accomplish this result.

Now we see the strange anomaly of a church whose only hope is to go forward on its knees and through the power of the living God, a church to whom has been promised infinite power, and yet a church that is at this moment tragically powerless to achieve great spiritual results or to hold in check a generation which at present seems hurtling forward toward a godless oblivion.

We are compelled to believe that while the source of infinite power is at our command there is a great deal of practical unbelief in the Holy Spirit evident in the church of today. We exalt Christ and in a manner worship God and endeavor to conquer the world for our Lord by various activities and organized agencies, but the direct, supernatural efficiency of the Holy Spirit is relegated to a small class of disciples often regarded as extremists or fanatics. Alas, the spiritual men of almost any community are characterized as "peculiar." They are looked upon as excellent men and women, but impractical and radical religionists.

But why is this? Is it because they hold unscriptural views? Have they mistaken the message of the Gospel or wrongly interpreted the Word of God, or do they have mistaken notions of duty and privilege? No, few, if any, would accuse them of these things, but the church as a whole does not apparently believe in the power of the Holy Spirit which Jesus promised and which a few have accepted and used in his service. Their peculiarity is but the peculiarity of Pentecost. Their extreme views are simply the views of Jesus, the views which he taught while here on earth and which he expected all his disciples to accept and adopt, for the promise is to all that, "Ye shall receive power when the Holy Spirit is come upon you."

"Ye shall receive power" was the direct promise of Jesus Christ. This did not mean the development of an occasional St. Cecilia or St. Francis, but was the promise for all Christians, everywhere, then and now. And the hope for the appalling present day conditions of worldliness and sinful practices, which have almost come to assume the guise of respectability, is for God's people to meet the pre-pentecostal conditions and to tarry until another Pentecost breaks upon men's spiritual consciousness.

Churches which ignore the Holy Spirit are but mausoleums or dead piety. They may claim to be orthodox, but the devil laughs at dead orthodoxy as much as he rejoices over live heterodoxy. Some of our orthodox churches are like sign posts miles and miles away from the place they represent, having the form of godliness but lacking the power thereof. The truth is there are multitudes who are only distant disciples. They profess to admire religion but they do not press on and appropriate it. How vigorous would be their protest if they were compelled to live on half rations; yet the larger part of the church is doing this spiritually. So many people are afraid of too much religion and are continually miserable because of too little. Yet a whole-hearted surrender to the Holy Spirit would mean a doubling, yea a quadrupling, of one's power and effectiveness.

We can give no legitimate excuse for meager experience and only partially efficient lives when power without measure is promised to those who will in humility seek it and by faith appropriate it. The supreme question before the church is still, "Have ye received the Holy Spirit since ye believed?"

Men everywhere are tempest-tossed, heart-sick and sin-sick. Men on the street are under the devil's delusion that age-long sins must of necessity continue through ages to come, but this is but satanic sophistry. The Son of God was manifested that he might destroy the works of the devil. "Where sin abounded grace doth much more abound." If sin appears to be a Mediterranean Sea, grace is a Pacific Ocean. He that the Son sets free is free indeed. There is one mighty to save and strong to deliver, and this is the message that the minister of God should by all means proclaim constantly, fearlessly, earnestly.

Again, we are compelled to register our belief that a great part of present day apostasy is due to the ministers of the Gospel who have lost their note of authority and who have become hirelings instead of prophets. Well does Ezekiel say to the preachers of today: "So thou, O Son of Man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he does not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul. Therefore, O thou son of man, say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel?" Ezekiel 33:7-11.

Tremendous is the responsibility resting upon God's messenger. He must declare, not a piece-meal Gospel, but a full and complete

"Forget Not All His Benefits."

REV. J. THOMAS PRICE, B. D.

A THANKSGIVING MESSAGE.

IT has long been the custom of our people to turn to God, in the Autumn season, after the crops have been gathered, and observe a day, throughout the nation, in which to praise "Him for his great goodness and for his wonderful works to the children of men."

And as we approach this National Thanksgiving Day our hearts express a deep gratitude to Almighty God for his love, and care and blessings which have surely been manifest toward us this year, both as a nation and as individuals, and in the words of the Psalmist our hearts cry out:

"Bless the Lord, O my soul,
And forget not all his benefits."

The mercies of the Lord are more than the sands of the sea. Truly he has dealt bountifully with us; and yet man, the most intelligent of all his creatures, does not seem to be impressed by the mercies and blessings of God as he should be. He too often receives what God sees fit to bestow upon him as though he was entitled to it all, and more. And in many cases he wickedly abuses the blessings of the Lord, using them selfishly and soon forgets them.

Losses and afflictions generally make deep impressions on men while the blessings of God are soon forgotten. We remember the famine and complain bitterly of it, but the years of plenty are soon forgotten. On this day some will see cause for gratitude only in the material benefits which have come to us. Millions of dollars are pouring into our country by the nations fighting for their very existence. Their gold is coming to us, and our country is fast becoming the center of commercial activity and financial strength. There is danger in all this unless the Almighty hand of the Omnipotent God direct the destiny of our nation.

And so this Thanksgiving Day should serve to awaken within us a sense of humiliation on account of our sins, and of gratitude to God for all his benefits.

"Awake, my soul, in thankful lays,
And sing thy great Creator's praise;
He justly claims a song from thee;
His loving-kindness, O, how free."

I would suggest that first of all we should lift our hearts to him in deepest gratitude for:—

THE GIFT OF HIS SON.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son" to be our Savior, and Jesus Christ came not only to redeem our souls but to redeem the earth, from the curse of sin.

Men do not realize it, but the world rolls on today with her seasons and her harvests, her fruits and her flowers, all for the sake of Christ. We have, as individuals, and as a race, forfeited every right to a single temporal mercy by our transgressions. It is not for our sakes that the earth yields her increase, but for Christ's sake who kept the law. What have we done to merit anything from God through nature? Faithless in our stewardship justice is ever crying out for our ejection and banishment. It is for Christ's sake that the world rolls on through space, the sun shines, the winds waft our ships and cool our cheeks, the valleys laugh with corn, the cattle roam on a thousand hills, and the fruit drops from the laden bough.

How few seem to realize these things. Jesus did not come into this world primarily for the purpose of living a good life and thereby becoming an example or pattern for the world to follow. He came to die. He came to shed his blood, "And he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the whole world." O friends, we are living today because Christ died for us, and may there go up from our souls, a shout of praise on this Thanksgiving Day to God, for the gift of his Son.

I think the next blessed truth, in importance, for which our hearts should be lifted in praise is:—

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY GHOST.

I never come to a Thanksgiving service but that I head my list of blessings with the gift of God's blessed Son, Jesus, to be my Savior, and I always follow this with the next great gift of the Holy Spirit who has done so much to bring light, and peace, and victory, and blessing, to my poor needy soul. These two gifts give value to all other gifts, and without these, I am of all creatures most helpless, and lost, and undone, no matter what other blessings may be mine.

Jesus says: "I will pray the Father and he will send you another Comforter." . . . "Tarry ye until ye be endued with power from on high." . . . "When he, the Holy Ghost, is come ye shall receive power, and direction, and discernment; . . . and ye shall be witnesses for me." You cannot receive the Holy Spirit until you have first accepted Jesus as your personal Savior. You cannot keep the smile and favor of Jesus your Lord, if you refuse to obey his command to tarry; thereby rejecting the Holy Spirit.

The Jews lost God when they rejected and killed his Son, and they have had no God since that awful tragedy. And you lose Christ as your Savior, when you reject the Holy Spirit who comes, at the prayer of Jesus, to represent him among men. Bishop Berry has well said: "When he is come unto you, to you pastor, to you Sunday school teacher, to you member of the official board, to you father, mother, you will become a storm center of a new and mighty evangelism, and all the forces of hell will not be able to keep back the incoming tides of saving grace."

I think that the next great blessing that should go down on our list, at this time, and for which we should lift our hearts in praise and thanksgiving to God, is:—

OUR HERITAGE OF AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS.

God said to Abraham, "If you will come out from the people and follow me I will make of thee a great nation." And Abraham obeyed. When the appointed time had come God led the Israelites from Egypt into the wilderness, gave them the law and ordinances, and set up a model civilization and practically said to the world, "Behold my ideal of a civilization." And possibly had America in mind at the time.

Our fathers too, heard the call of God to follow him. They crossed the ocean and landing on the bleak New England shores they planted the Cross and sang praises to God, as did Israel, of old, after crossing the Red Sea.

"And amid the storm they sang,
And the stars heard and the sea;
And the echo of the dim woods rang
With anthems of the free.

"Yea call it holy ground,
The land where first they trod;
They left unstained what there they found—
Freedom to worship God."

In time God took the thirteen weak, selfish and quarreling states and amalgamated them into a national unit and our laws, constitution, and our system of Government was taken largely from the model that God set up in the Wilderness. And God turned our poverty into wealth, discord into unity, distrust into love, and local pride into patriotism. God saw and heard Washington, on his knees, at Valley Forge. He heard the prayers of Lincoln while the battle of Gettysburg raged, and out of it all has come the greatest Nation on the face of the earth. There is no tale so charming, no fiction so strange, no epic so sublime, as the story of our country.

I love my country. I believe that God has a great destiny for her, if she will only prove worthy.

There are things abroad in the land that make for our downfall. "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord. . . . But sin is a reproach to any people." Never before in our history have the forces of evil been so arrayed against the right, as today. Never before have the fundamental truths of our holy Christianity been so ruthlessly attacked in high places and low. A coterie of men, mostly in our educational institutions, have formulated and are promulgating a propaganda that denies the integrity, infallibility and authority of the Bible. The precious Word of God is being robbed of the sacred truths which have been the solace and comfort of our fathers and mothers in years gone by. High men in the churches are tapping the fountain of inspiration, and by a steady and constant leakage, the life-giving stream of our Christianity is becoming shallow and dry.

The only hope for the Nation is in the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ. We must return to the old-fashioned faith in the Bible. On this Thanksgiving Day let us thank God for our great country and pray earnestly that in her wealth, and glory, and power, she may not forget the Almighty God who has made her great, lest, in forgetting him, she go upon the rocks as the great nations of the past have done.

GOD'S GUIDING LOVE AND CARE.

God holds the destiny of nations and of individuals. He guided Israel, so Divine revelation declares. He has guided America, so we have learned and so we believe. And as for the individual, David declares: "Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel and afterward receive me to glory." He guided Abraham from the shadowy East to the hills of Palestine and the hills of Glory. He guided Moses from the ark of bulrushes and the river Nile to the River that flows from the Throne of God. He guided Joseph from the envy of his brethren to the throne of the Pharaohs, and the Throne of God. He guided John from his fishing smack on the Galilee to the City with its streets of pure gold and its walls of jasper, and its illumination without sun or moon. He guided John Wesley in his escape from the burning Epworth Rectory to the Palace in the skies which is never in danger of conflagration.

Reader, will you listen to the voice of Jesus as he calls you to open the door of your heart, this Thanksgiving Day, and let him come in? Will you accept his leadership? Will you go the way of the Cross? It will mean that you will walk life's pathway with peace in your heart and victory in your soul. Sorrowful, perhaps, but always rejoicing. Poor, but making many rich. Misunderstood, perhaps, by many of your friends and loved ones, but enjoying unbroken friendship and fellowship with Jesus, the King of kings.

And if we walk with him here, in humbleness of heart, we shall walk with him some day, in all his glory, on the streets of gold.

An Ideal Gift Book.

Holidays are coming on, and Christmas presents are already being bought. Let us suggest a wonderful little book for the holiness people. It is Dr. Ridout's newest book, "The Beauty of Holiness." This is one of the best books in print teaching you how to live the Holy Life after you get it. For holiness young people, for preachers, etc., and as one of the very best little holiness gift books we commend it. It is richly bound in blue and red with gilt lettering. Price, 75c. Nothing better to send to your friends.

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00. PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING CO., Louisville, Ky.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

MEMORIAL DAY AT SYCHAR, 1927.

After the rising bell the first thing your scribe heard on this Monday morning was the notes of that great old hymn, "O Happy Day That Fixed My Choice," being sung as an opening hymn at the early prayer meeting. Sunday at Sychar became a happy day to many a soul who found Jesus either in forgiveness or cleansing. The first Monday of the camp the morning hour for preaching is a memorial service for those of our campers who have during the year been promoted to heaven. Bro. Owen was asked to deliver the memorial address; this he did, taking John 11:25, 26 as his text. On request, he handed your scribe the following outline of his address:

First, Jesus' visit to the home of Mary and Martha at the time of the death of their brother Lazarus. Second, his conversation with Martha regarding the resurrection of her brother. Third, his raising of Lazarus from the dead. Theme derived from the text: "The Gains and Conservations of the Christian Life."

First. Redemption expressed in the Word of God in terms of life and in terms of personal relation. Regeneration, the new birth, the being born of the Spirit. Regeneration, a resurrection unto spiritual life, the soul dead in trespasses and in sins is made alive unto God. Regeneration, the gift of spiritual and eternal life in terms of personal relation. Regeneration, "This is life eternal that they might know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." "I am the vine and ye are the branches."

Second. Entire sanctification, expressed in terms of life. "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Entire sanctification in terms of personal relation. "Be filled with the Spirit." "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God."

Third. Glorification, expressed in terms of life. "I give unto them eternal life." "He that believeth on me shall never die." Glorification expressed in terms of personal relation. "I will that they may be with me where I am." "So shall we ever be with the Lord."

Fourth. The gains and conservations of the Christian life for this world. 1. Redemption, eternal life gained in Christ. This redemption the answer of God to man's spiritual capacity and need. Through this redemption there is a conservation of human character, and a preservation and an enrichment of that that is highest and finest in human personality.

Contrast.

The conservation of human character through redemption in Christ contrasted with the destruction of human character through sin. There is the gain of moral and spiritual achievement. Co-laborers with Christ for the redemption of man.

The gains and conservations of the Christian life for the world to come. Gains: First, the eternal redemption of the soul. "I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish." What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Second, the eternal redemption of the body. "This mortal shall put on immortality."

Conservations.

First. The eternal conservation and preservation of a holy, godlike human character.

Second. The eternal conservation of the fruits and rewards of moral and spiritual conquest and achievement. "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." This is the reward of our sainted dead.

Sychar's Memorial Day service never takes on any of the funeral, but is a crowning day among us. And following what we feel our sainted dead would have us do there always is an altar call. It is made a soul-saving occasion. Brother Owen's description of what our sainted ones now were enjoying was an uplift that brought amens and shouts and hallelujahs. Those who have been called up higher of our number during the year are: Mrs. Allen, Mt. Vernon; Mrs. Lee Adams, Westerville; Miss Naomi Edna Bengel, Jelloway; John Cutnaw, Butler; Perry Crowther, Nelle; Martha Hess, Mt. Vernon; A. B. Jones, Mt. Vernon; Mrs. Dugan Linn, Millersburg; P. S. Maston, Trinway; Rev. Wm. G. Nixon, D.D., Detroit; Wm. Newstetter, Wooster; Mrs. Emma Pendleton, Hebron; Mrs. Cott Rutter, Westerville; Mrs. Mary Kratzer Shannon, Franklin, Pa.; Prof. W. B. Yates, Marion, Ky.

These all died in the faith and have gone to their reward. From now on they are singing with the redeemed in the glory land.

I wish all might have heard the singing at Sychar this year. It always is fine, but this year it—well maybe I was in better tune to hear—but this year it seemed to have a note of heavenly sweetness unusual even for a holiness camp. You may not know it, but singers galore always are at Sychar. The best of soloists, duets, trios, quartettes sing from this platform. As songbirds come North in the springtime so specialists in song come here in camp time. And how they do help! Every year they come here from almost everywhere, sing for us, warm our hearts, and give the preacher of the hour a good backing. For the first time we had a Sychar Quartette and the hilarious dozen, all men, and they "sure did" fan the fire whenever they sang. Our two leaders, Bro. Mullett and Bro. Campbell, are both fine soloists. Two visiting evangelistic singers, Bro. Wilder and Bro. Reed, also did some good solo work. Then there was the duet singing of Miss Quigg and Miss Morford, of Asbury College, who not only sang from the platform but also in the dining room several times at the dinner hour. The Ladies Quartette from Taylor University, the Misses Atkinson and Rupp, the Chicago Evangelistic Institute trio, Messrs. Vennard, Taylor and Oberhaltzer, the duet from Cleveland Bible Institute of Misses Wilcox and Essex, the duet from Canton, Ohio, of Messrs. Marsh and Lautenschlager, Bro. Guiler and wife, and Bro. Poulson and wife both of whom are our regular campers. Miss Pearl Wilcox and Mrs. Davidson (nee Cornell) who when they travelled from the Cleveland Bible School always sang for us when present, were here this year. And last, and far from being the least popular, our own Harry Fagan, who is blind and an evangelist singer of Shelby, who was a great favorite with Brother Yates, sang. These all honored God by singing in the Spirit and with the understanding as do all holiness camp meeting singers. When you want to hear singing that is the real thing you will have to come to Sychar.

There were by actual count two hundred and six at the early morning prayer service this morning at six o'clock. All through the day Memorial Day was of spiritual power. Wm. R. Chase.

DR. ROBERT L. SELLE IN ARKANSAS.

For a year I have been serving First Methodist Church, of Rogers, Ark., as pastor. My health for some time has not permitted me to do continuous evangelistic work. I am tarrying here in the Ozarks, beautiful, healthful section, in the Northwest corner of the State. Rogers is a neat, clean, business town of 5,000 population on the Frisco Railway, main line from St. Louis to Texas.

We have good church and parsonage property, valued at $75,000 and no debts. We have a good growing church and congregation, founded, maintained and being promoted on fundamental, orthodox, Bible doctrines. The perennial revival spirit prevails.

The church membership for the most part is made up of devout, earnest, praying people. Card parties and dancing are not known in the church. Conversations at regular services. Much personal work by the men and women is being done.

The church is well organized in Sunday school and Epworth Leagues with all officers, teachers and leaders devout Christian people, leaders who are leading the people in safe, satisfactory, useful, holy ways. It is wonderful. Many feel that the development of the work here is marvelous if not miraculous. So it is. I have not had the strength to do much myself but God has had charge. He is in control. The membership has more than doubled during the year, the Sunday school trebled in attendance and the congregation quadrupled.

No appeals for money to run the church. Tithes and offerings are brought in by the happy congregation every Sunday. The year has been the easiest financially that the church has ever had and yet every current bill has been met with a surprisingly large sum for the benevolences.

I am happy with these people because God is here and his work is going on. The fundamental doctrines of the church in the clear Wesleyan light are being fully maintained to the delight of the church and appreciation of the city.

GRINNELL, IOWA.

The Friends Church of Grinnell, Iowa, has recently closed a revival that was in charge of Rev. L. E. Williams, of Wilmore, Ky. The Spirit of the Lord was present throughout the meetings. The weather was rainy which interfered considerably with the attendance, but in spite of this God wonderfully blessed the work of Brother Williams. Some of the converts that have been reclaimed are being used of the Lord, by doing personal work in the homes. They are meeting with success and blessing others by their earnest zeal and faithful living. Most every night there were seekers, both for pardon and sanctification. We are trusting that the results of the meeting will be preserved and each convert will let God have control of their life. Praise him from whence cometh all our hope.

We pray for his abiding presence in the hearts of his people and that our lives may show forth the fruit of the Spirit. We solicit the prayers of the Christian people that the abiding presence of the Holy Ghost may show forth in the lives of each seeker. Brother Williams came to us as a stranger, but God wonderfully used him in bringing the gospel truth that brought conviction to every unsaved heart. His personal work, prayers and preaching will remain in the hearts of the people. May God bless him and give him many souls for his hire. Mrs. G. W. Richards.

OHIO MEETINGS.

We are glad to report victory in the following meetings in which we were the engaged singers. Our first meeting for the summer was at Arcanum, Ohio, with Rev. G. Arnold Hodgins as evangelist. He gave some wonderful sermons and there were a number of souls at the altar. This is an annual tent meeting which has been held for several years. Wife and I had the privilege of being its first singers, and this year was our third engagement.

Our next meeting was at Beulah Grove Camp near Mendon, Ohio. Here they have a large tabernacle in a wonderful grove, a good dining hall and sleeping quarters. Rev. W. L. Surbrook did the preaching. He is a very earnest and able preacher of the gospel. We had a number of souls to seek God.

Our last camp was Acton, near Campbellsville, Ky., an old established Methodist camp, this being the 28th year. The evangelist was Rev. Andrew Johnson. This was our second meeting with this man of God and how we did enjoy his masterly preaching. His messages were full of interest and spiritual power. He is one of the truly great preachers of the day. The attendance was good, and on the last Sunday the crowd was estimated about 3,000. Quite a number of souls sought to be saved or sanctified. The Lord blessed our singing to many hearts. The above evangelists were highly educated men yet deeply spiritual. What a benediction. We have just finished two meetings this fall and are beginning a meeting at the Riverside United Brethren Church, Muncie, Ind. Mrs. Kinsey, who is an excellent pianist, assists me in the music. Those interested in our services address 450 So. West 2nd St., Richmond, Ind. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kinsey.

ILLINOIS MEETINGS.

We have not reported for a while, but have been constantly busy. My last two meetings were at Franklin and Gorham, Ill. They had been without a pastor at Franklin for some time, and the church was not flourishing. But despite this and the small attendance caused by the heavy rains—which prohibited preaching at all five nights the last week—God was with us. A number sought the Lord and some were happy finders. Bro. Joseph Medd, a lovable brother from Auburn, Illinois, had charge of the singing. There are some fine people in Franklin, and they treated the evangelist royally. God bless them.

Gorham had also been without a pastor for a while, and the beginning of the meeting was small. But the attendance and interest rose steadily until the seats were comfortably filled and a gracious revival was on. Souls prayed through in the old-fashioned way and a class was taken into the church the last day.

Rev. B. Orwill Donaldson and wife, of Chicago, had charge of the singing and did it well. At the close of this meeting Bro. and Sister Donaldson accepted the pastorate at Gorham. They are fine young people, and their church is in love with them. May God bless them.

We began a revival at Midland, Mich., yesterday with seekers. Remember me at the throne.

P. P. Belew.

LYNCH, KENTUCKY.

At the recent session of the Kentucky Conference, I was returned to the Lynch charge for the third year. We were cordially welcomed upon our return by the church and community. On Sunday, Sept. 25th, we launched a revival effort, which proved to be a revival indeed. Some thirty-five were definitely blessed, saved, reclaimed or sanctified at an altar of prayer, praying through according to Methodist fashion. Rev. Virgil L. Moore, pastor of our church at Ferguson, did the preaching, and let me say here, I have never had better help. He is a strong preacher, logical thinker, a kind spirit and friendly brother. He completely captured the hearts of our people while here. The singing was conducted by Prof. M. V. Lewis, who gives full time to evangelistic singing. Bro. Lewis led the hosts of God to victory in song, having splendid responses in congregational singing, and the solos many times melted the hearts of the people, thoroughly preparing them for the message to follow. Bro. Lewis is spiritual, sane, and untiring in his efforts to reach the lost. We were delighted to have him with us. We have had 28 accessions to the church since Conference, and the church has taken on added spiritual life.

I have just returned from a revival meeting with Bro. J. M. Matthews at the Hopewell Church on Milton charge. This was one of the greatest revivals I have ever witnessed. It was estimated at least 50 people were definitely blessed, converted, reclaimed or sanctified about the altar of prayer, and 30 united with the church. Bro. Matthews is a splendid brother with whom to labor and the Hopewell people are a loyal, consecrated group. Upon our return home, we find splendid reports of the church, an intense spiritual fervor being manifest on the part of our people. Evidences about us indicate that this will be the best of the three years spent with this people. Warner P. Davis.

"The Optimism of Pre-Millennialism," a happy title of a truthful volume; a volume worthy of the genuine and scholarly ability of a widely-known author. A complete and convincing answer to the thoughtless criticism of Post-Millennialism advocates. Every believer in the Pre-Millennial coming of the Lord should read and distribute this modest little volume. It is unanswerable.

Sincerely,

W. E. BIEDERWOLF.

their president the product and highest representative of Tammany Hall, the most corrupt and defiant organization that has for years been the menace and shame of New York, and now would become the menace and shame of the nation.

The modernist tree is beginning to bear its fruit. You cannot find a fundamentalist in this nation who wants a Romanist for president. If the Democrats are blind and foolish enough to nominate Al Smith for the presidency, and the Republicans are wise enough to nominate Mr. Hoover, the solid South will be broken, and Democratic leaders will find that the intelligent men and women of the South will not pluck a flower, however beautiful and attractive, for the presidency, which has its roots in the moral rottenness of Tammany Hall.

H. C. MORRISON.

My First Sunday With Bob Shuler

Trinity M. E. Church, South, Los Angeles, Cal., in the last few years, has become one of the most conspicuous and noted churches on the continent. This has been brought to pass by its present pastor, the inimitable, inexhaustible, unafraid, sincere, loving-hearted, up-to-date, old-time Methodist preacher, Bob Shuler.

Shuler is not ashamed of the gospel. He believes the Bible, he believes in the Christ of the prophets, gospels and epistles. He preaches the word of God with unction and power, and the people throng his church, coming by thousands. He has a membership of 3,500, and his church is like a human beehive. People of other churches, and of no churches, flock to hear him.

But speaking of my first Sunday in his church—the crowd was great! The evening congregation filled the church and vast gallery, the Sunday school room was opened up and filled; not because I was there, it always is, beside the thousands who hear him over the radio and send in their contributions to meet the radio expenses.

But when I picked up my pen I was thinking of some I saw in church. There was Ed Fogg. Dear old Ed! How we loved him in old Kentucky. He was the first man to play a cornet in church, and he could make it talk and say, "Jesus is calling for thee." He led the singing for scores of revivals in Kentucky; he went to Chicago and led the choir in old Grace Methodist Church when Dr., afterwards, Bishop McIntyre, was thundering out the gospel in that wicked city. How glad I was to see Ed Fogg! He is now 75 years of age, looking well, although he has been quite sick.

There was Dr. McLaughlin; beautiful saint he is! For almost half a century he has borne aloft the banner of holiness. The years are beginning to show on him, but there is immortal youth in his soul. He is a member of Dr. Shuler's church.

There was Dr. G. Campbell Morgan. What a man is Morgan! His pen is a fountain of truth. He has written enough books to make a small library. He has a wonderful knowledge of the Bible, believes it, and exalts Jesus Christ, high over all. He is a man with a great white soul standing as a tower of strength for evangelical religion.

And there is Dr. G. W. Wilson, one of the greatest preachers of the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification I ever heard. He is scholarly, eloquent, fearless, devout, and was a mighty winner of souls in his younger days. There were people present to whom I had preached in Old St. George Methodist Church in Philadelphia, some who had heard me at Mountain Lake Park, Md., and at Detroit, Romeo, Peniel, Texas, and at the great old Waco Camp Meeting, and all about Kentucky. I believe I shook hands with a hundred people from Kentucky.

I must not forget Rev. B. S. Taylor. What a mighty man B. S. has been in the mission field, camp meetings and revivals. Enough marvelous things have come into his life to fill a book, yes, several of them. I met so many old friends who gripped my hand until my arm ached. It made me think of getting home to heaven and meeting the hosts up there whom we have known, loved, preached to, and labored with down here in the great harvest field. Praise God, it is a wonderful thing to be a Christian and to serve the Lord and help people and have them help you on the way to glory.

It was a gracious day. The altar place was packed with people and we made no altar call, but many held up their hands for prayer. May God bless and save them. I am heavenward bound. Amen!

H. C. MORRISON.

Giving Thanks Always For All Things.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

WE are grateful that Thanksgiving is a distinctively American holiday, and what nation has greater cause for gratitude than our own land of the free and home of the brave? Ever since the Pilgrim Fathers held their Harvest Festival in 1621, following the ingathering of their harvest which saved the little colony from destitution and starvation, the custom has spread until it is now observed as a national holiday proclaimed by the President and re-proclaimed by the Governor of each State, and observed annually on the last Thursday of November.

We are inclined to make Thanksgiving Day a time of feasting instead of a time of worship. If we could only realize it, the greatest need of our country today is a revival of pure and undefiled religion; a turning back to the God who guided the Pilgrim Fathers across the deep to a country where they could worship him with freedom of conscience. A visitation of divine grace to our beloved America would solve many of the disturbing problems which now confront us and bring us nearer to the stable conditions which characterized American communities in olden times.

The following taken from suggestions by the American Bar Association will give an idea of the opinion of men who serve as ex-cutors of the law.

"Thoughtful public-spirited men have repeatedly pointed out in recent times the fact that while man has conquered in large measure the material universe, while wonderful advances have and are being made in utilizing the forces of nature and making them serve more and more our material comfort and prosperity—while man has conquered inanimate objects—he has as yet failed to conquer himself. Patriotic writers and thinkers are therefore properly insisting that less stress be placed upon our material development and more on those spiritual forces without which mere material development may be a curse rather than a blessing. Look at Germany. In 1914 her people were highly educated, cultured, prosperous, but her national rulers at that time regarded her most sacred obligations and treaties as mere scraps of paper. Today she lies wrecked, ruined, impotent and withal impenitent, a horrible example of the reverse of the scriptural injunction that 'righteousness exalteth a nation.'

"Let us, then, have a real renaissance of true religion in America. Thankful as we are this day for the religious influences which have animated our patriots and shaped our policies in the past, let us show our gratitude by a penitent return to divine inspiration and guidance. Only by so doing can we make America worthy of the ideals of our fathers and worthy of our own dreams. A self-governing Democracy cannot thrive—nor in fact long exist—on merely material things and activities. If our Nation is to be blessed with an endless life as we hope and pray, it must have the spirit which alone is immortal. Our healing must come, not through this or that social or political theory, not through violent and ill-considered changes in our form of government, not in the storm and the whirlwind, but rather in the still small voice that speaks to the conscience and the heart, impelling our citizens to a higher patriotism and wider and wiser humanity.

"Thanksgiving and praise, then, be to our Creator for the race that carried to this Continent the idea of self-government; for the mighty men who were makers of our American Government; for the written Constitution which has guided and protected us throughout our miraculous history, and for the unexcelled opportunities and the joy of service that are open to every American citizen through the cultivation and practice of Christian Citizenship.

"For the homes that with purest affection are blest,
For the season of plenty and well deserved rest,

For our country extending from sea unto sea,
The land that is known as the 'Land of the Free'—

Thanksgiving! Thanksgiving!"

A Correction.

A good brother in New Jersey calls my attention to some geographical errors which I made in my travel article of Oct. 12. I wrote the sketch on board ship where I had no books for reference and failed to use some qualifying words such as, "most of Europe," etc. I find, however, in looking matters up since, that England with its 50,874 square miles is not as large as Michigan which has 57,480 square miles. That Ireland, Scotland and England are not as large as New Mexico; that the German Empire (that was) could be put in the single state of Texas, and there would be room to spare; in other words, the state of Texas could take in "most of Europe," except Russia, France and Germany.

Notice!

Rev. G. W. Ridout and Mrs. Ridout have returned from their European trip and are at home at Wilmore, Ky. Write him at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., if you desire his services.

Thanksgiving and Wonder

REV. HENRY OSTROM, D.D.

NOT until the element of wonder is in your experience can you know the out-pouring, the heart-giving thanksgiving. As children wonder in the presence of vast mountain heights or the beauties of flower gardens or exhibits of skill and prowess, largely because all this is so above and beyond them; so the element of wonder in the presence of God's dealings with the Christian suggests the child-like spirit before him. Humility and wonder thus live together.

When we credit self-sufficiency, human genius, human toil, and refuse to recognize God as the giver of food and clothing and shelter, the child-like spirit before "God and the Father" is surely wanting. Wonder lies dead in the presence of self-sufficiency. The spirit of self-sufficiency must vacate before the song of praise can live in the heart. Too great in one's own estimation is to be too small to praise.

Do you want to sing? I mean, do you want that poor, tired, tempted heart of yours to sing? You would require to be childlike before the Lord, or the melody cannot be yours. O, how men's minds stretch and climb, when, far from customary scenes, they view the mountain peaks or the chasms or the waves or the more noticeable contrivances of men. But they would remain dozing were it not for the element of wonder. It is when they wonder that they exclaim. And thanksgiving so demands expression that over and over again in the Psalms we have "O"! "O"! "that men would praise the Lord."

But now notice that element of wonder in the messages of God's Word. "God SO loved"! "So great salvation"! "His name shall be called WONDERFUL"! "That glorious hope"! "O, how love I thy law"! "Thy commandment is EXCEEDING broad." "We were eye-witnesses of his MAJESTY"! "The Altogether Lovely." Thus it runs, a strain of wonderment, a succession of astonishments. Yet, many a child in the "household of faith" seems not to have reached the stage of wonderment. He is not as he was. He is glad of the change. He aims in the right-direction. But, O, if he would only see what grace does for him! If he would see how costly the investment on the Cross to save him, how constant, too, the thought of God concerning him, and (realizing the imperative necessity of God keeping him) how God "gets him by" when temptation is strong and subtle, until he would just marvel, as if to say, "Lord, how didst thou do it"?

Ah, the grace of God is his free gift without terms of barter or purchase to prompt it. Yes, and it is not only free, it is exceedingly great. The measure of it is like its Giver. "Great grace was upon them all." We must be lifted until we wonder at it all. We must come where we exclaim "how" as well as "sure." "How great is thy loving-kindness towards the children of men!" How could it be that he loves me so? And saves me so! No longer that tame and dull view of the goodness of God! In its stead, realization, appreciation, and (shall we not say it?) exclamation. Yes, let us say it, for songs of praise buried down in the heart may, like rockets, go God-ward but songs of praise sent forth over the lips, like air-ships may carry others there. Paintings and dummies in store windows serve not to exclaim. But men, redeemed men saved, men who have accepted Calvary's blood, men of the fullness of God, living men with life abundant, these can sing of the goodness of the Lord. Still, all is spoiled if it be a mere music-box grind. The soul must thrill with wonder, it positively must before it can overflow with sweetest praise. Native to that soul will be the words, "O, how marvelous, O, how wonderful is my Saviour's love to me!"

Borne along in the atmosphere of strangeness, the Christian's faith is continuously witnessed to as a miracle. Instead of sinking into the cold materialism that denies all miracle, it mounts and proves all its attainments a miracle. It is not one score against one score but it is rather all scores against one. Not that it bids for the freakish and the absurd, nor that it would display a wonder-work just to be wondered at. But it is, it is a surprise. Even those works of healing done by our Lord Jesus, causing the people to say "we have seen strange things today," are eclipsed outright by the wonders of grace in the soul following Calvary and Pentecost.

If we go back to the old Jewish Covenant and join in their great Psalm (the 107th) we find its breath of divine power carries over into the New Covenant. First, that Psalm has a bit of Israel's history and it is all so wonderful that the call goes forth, "O, that men would praise the Lord!" Then here follows (as if it were one other great breathful of Israel's history) statements of the Lord's wonderful providing and dealing with them, only to be succeeded with, "O, that men would praise the Lord!" Then we have a dissertation on God's "healing" of foolish men with the out-burst again, "O, that men would praise the Lord!" Then there is the description of the sailor and the vast sea, and God's accomplishing his home-coming, only to be followed with the acclaim, "O, that men would praise the Lord!" And then comes the comments about God restoring the land and crowning it with plenty, together with a comprehensive summary of his marvelous providences until, "all iniquity shall stop her mouth"; and here, the "O, that men would praise the Lord," is now added; as if to say, surely you are now so filled with wonder, you would not need to be exhorted to praise. You just must do it. "Whoso is wise and will observe these things, even they shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord." And all that sung under the Old Covenant. O, Christian, because of the glory that excelleth, praise ye the Lord.

redemption from all sin. He must tell those who are discouraged and sin-shackled that they can overcome both the natural and the supernatural forces through a Power greater than themselves, namely, the coming of the Holy Spirit. To them, the Great Captain encouragingly calls, "Sin shall not have dominion over you." "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even your faith."

Let us then cease to be engrossed by the world's mechanics and find life's emancipation through heaven's dynamics. The coveted power may be ours if we meet the conditions, but self-sufficiency must give way to a sense of self-need and to the act of self-surrender. It is exceedingly difficult for us who are the inheritors of the wisdom, experience and culture of the centuries, to lay aside our requirements and become as little children—humble, teachable and obedient. The gift of the Holy Spirit involves a great deal in the way of personal consecration, self-sacrifice and arduous service. It is not simply an ecstasy to be enjoyed, but a power to be used. "In this gift lies the only power for fruitful service and for vigorous spiritual growth. To receive this gift changes the life of a disciple from an unhappy to a happy one. Without the gift of the Spirit, the services rendered, words spoken, and sacrifices made for Christ may often be crosses. With this gift, all service—yes, and all sacrifice and suffering and self-denial, however great—is only joy."

New Men in the Asbury College Family.

To assist in providing for the enlarged needs of Asbury College, additional field men have been secured for the college force whom we desire to introduce to THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD family:

The Rev. Henry D. Gough, a minister of the South Dakota Conference, M. E. Church.

The Rev. J. M. Literal and the Rev. Newton King, Jr., of the Kentucky Conference.

The Rev. George W. Fuller, of Florida.

The Rev. E. C. Wills, formerly of Georgia.

These brethren have all been good and useful ministers of Jesus Christ and can fill acceptably pulpits almost anywhere and at any time. We bespeak for them a kind and sympathetic reception on the part of THE HERALD subscribers whom they may meet from time to time. Any assistance given to these men of God will be greatly appreciated by the entire administrative force of Asbury College.

Watch for this Heart-Throbbing Story.

Beginning in an early issue of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD will be the above story from the pen of Dr. C. F. Wimberly. This author is known all over America as a writer of books, articles, and stories. His work in the line of religious fiction is well known. The above is the title of the story soon to begin, and it is going to be in the language of today, a "thriller." The scene will be laid for a beginning, in the fastnesses of the Kentucky mountains, and is the stirring story of a moonshiner's son in his struggles, heartaches, and triumphs. In every page there will be a center, and that center the power of personal salvation and its by-products. It will carry all the enthusiasm of the modern school, college and university life with its athletics, Modernism, Fundamentalism, and the evils of society. It will be an eye-opener on modern ideas of religion, and church life, in general. Don't miss the first chapter. Anything Dr. Wimberly writes is worth reading, and this will be some of his best work.

Text. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself." Matt. 16:24.
Story. Mother gave Robbie a nickel. "I buy me a stick of candy," he said. "Is that the best?" said mother. "Yes, 'cause I want it." Mother watched her little boy as he stopped often and looked at his nickel; then stood a long time before the candy store. Finally, he turned and ran home and said, "Mama, the heathen have beat." "How, Robbie?" "The heathen kept saying, 'Give us a nickel to help us. We want Bibles.'" And Robbie went away happy to play.

Poem.

Blessed are they who give and blessed are they who take,
For then they love each other, all for Jesus' sake.

Prayer. Show me, heavenly Father, anything you would like to have me deny myself for Jesus' sake.

No. 2.

Text. "If I allow sin in my heart the Lord will not hear me." Psa. 66:18.

Story. One morning a little boy was joining the family in the Lord's prayer. When they came to, "Forgive" he stopped and burst into tears. The father said, "What is the matter, my boy?" "I told teacher a lie yesterday." "Tell her as soon as you get to school." "I will." Then they finished the prayer and the little lad was happy.

Poem.

God will forgive us when we pray,
He will wash every sin away
If we confess.

Prayer.

"Lord, I confess to Thee,
Sadly my sin,
All I have been.
Purge my sin away,
Wash my heart this day,
And make me clean."

No. 3.

Text. "Give me thine heart." Prov. 23:26.

Story. "Father, why does Jesus want me to give him my heart?" "Why do you think I asked you for your purse the other day?" "You wanted to put something in it." "Yes, dear, and God wants our hearts to put himself into them and then give us everything we ask him to make us holy and happy."

Poem, Prayer.

"O Lord of life and love,
Come to my heart today,
And bring a blessing from above,
That cannot pass away."

No. 4.

Text. "A little child shall lead them." Isa. 11:6.

Story. "Limpy! limpy! go home." A lame man staggering home heard little Mary speak and said angrily, "I won't be called names by anybody." "I was driving home my lame chicken. His name is Limpy. Ain't you Mr. French?" "Yes, what of it?" "Please don't drink any more." "What do you care? I'm nothing to you." "I want you to be good so God will take you to heaven. Don't you want to go there?" "Yes, child. If you care perhaps God has not forsaken me." The old man never drank any more and when he died he blessed the child that led him to Jesus and heaven.

Poem.

"If I knew that a word of mine
A word most kind and true,
Would leave its trace
On someone's face,
I'd speak it, would not you?"

Prayer.

"Lord, may I do the good I know,
And be Thy loving child below,
Then at last, go home to Thee,
Evermore Thine own to be."

No. 5.

Text. "Jesus said, Murmur not." John 6:43.

Story. John was cross. Nothing pleased him. His mother said, "Go up stairs and take off all your clothes." Then put them on wrong side out." He did not like it but he did it and cried. Then his mother said, "That is the way you have been doing all day, showing the wrong side of your life. Do you like it? No, he did not and he stopped murmuring.

Poem.

"The inner side of every cloud
Is bright and shining,
I therefore turn my clouds about
And always wear them inside out,
To show the lining."

Prayer. Father, help me never to be cross, but always live in the sunshine of the love of Jesus.

No. 6.

Text. "Comfort one another." 1 Thess. 4:18.

Story. A father was passing through great trouble. His little daughter could not have understood, but knew he was suffering. She climbed up into his lap and said, "Me comfort oo." "How?" said papa. She kissed him and said, "Me love oo." She did comfort him, better than she knew, for it made him think that God loved him, and all would be right.

Poem.

"The kitchen is clean and cozy,
And bright with sunbeams gay,
And little Miss Comfort, for mother's sake,

Is busily working away.

"For mama is sick and sleeping,
And baby is quiet at last,
And papa'll be wanting his supper soon,

The minutes are flying so fast.

"Oh, she knows he will kiss her and love her,
And call her his busy bee,
But his sweet pet name is dearest of all,

For papa's dear Comfort is she."

Prayer. Dear Jesus, help me to be a comfort in my home.

No. 7.

Text. "Open the door, I will come in." Rev. 3:20.

Story. A little boy heard a sermon from this text. Afterward some one seeing his heart was touched said, "Robert, what would you say if, any one you wanted to see, knocked at your door?" "Come in." "Then say, 'Lord Jesus, come in.'"

The next morning he was most happy and said, "Mama, I woke up in the night and Jesus knocked, and I asked him to come in, and he came in."

Poem.

"What a wonderful change,
In my life has been wrought,
Since Jesus came into my heart.
I have light in my soul,
For which I long sought,
Since Jesus came into my heart."

Prayer. Father, I thank thee that Jesus loves to come into the heart of a child.

My Dear Boys and Girls:

By the time you get this issue of The Herald we shall be in the midst of Thanksgiving season. How many of you have paused to "count your blessings" to see what God has done for you the past year? We are inclined to complain if everything does not go just as we wish it, but if we were to offset everything that does not please us with one of the blessings that we are the constant recipients of, we should find that God is always ahead. And if our kind heavenly Father should bestow his mercies and blessings according to our worthiness and deserts, how far short would we come of having as many as we do. Fortunate for us, that our kind Father in heaven does not bestow his gifts of love upon us in the measure of our deserts, but according to this indulgent love and patient forbearance. When your parents think of the long, cold winter that is coming, and of the need of clothing for your body, they do not remember the many times you have disobeyed them, or whether they shall buy according to your gratitude and loyalty to them. No, they forget all about your failures in remembering the bare feet, the little forms that may shiver in the cold, and the warm bed that shall have to be supplied for the objects of their love. This reminds us that our heavenly Father has said that, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him."

Although Thanksgiving may have passed when you shall have read this letter, pause to render unto your kind, heavenly Father the thanks due him for his manifold mercies during the past year. It might be well to put in one "Thank you" for "what might have been" of sorrow and trouble that many others have been called to pass through. Children, my own dear boys and girls, let's cultivate the spirit of true gratitude, for the grateful heart is always a praiseworthy heart, and a praiseworthy heart is poor battleground for the Devil. A Happy Thanksgiving to one and all! Lovingly, Aunt Bettie.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? Papa takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I am eleven years old and am dark complected and have dark hair. My middle name begins with G and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. The one that guesses my middle name I will write to them. I am a Christian. Alva G. Holman.
Houston, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Tennessee girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I am fourteen years old. My birthday is May 2. I am in the sixth grade at school. I have light complexion, blue eyes and black hair (bobbed). My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking his nap when this letter arrives. Ara Long, I would like to hear from you. This is my second letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. Lillian V. Sims.
Rt. 2, Mt. Pleasant, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been almost a year since I wrote you. I received a number of good letters from the cousins. Miss Bonita McDaniel and I are planning on going to school to prepare for the evangelistic field. I feel that I have been called to the field as an evangelistic singer. I am five feet and three inches tall, I have light, long, wavy hair, blue eyes, and fair complexion. I am out and out for Christ. I am a member of the Nazarene Church. I teach a class of little boys about eight to twelve years. I am also the President of the Nazarene Young People's Society. I would like to hear from some of the cousins about my age, twenty-two and over.

Gene Broadfoote.

708 37th St., Cairo, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little boy nine years old. I want to join your happy band of boys and girls. Grandma takes The Herald and I like it very much. I belong to the church and want to make a useful man and do something for Jesus. Remember me in your prayers.

Robert Glen Evans.

Rt. 2, Box 20, Potts Camp, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Won't some of you cousins please move over and let me sit by the fire as I have come quite a distance and I am cold? I am a girl fourteen years of age, hazel eyes, brown hair, bobbed, fair complexion. I am five feet, two inches tall and weigh 101 pounds. As this is my first letter I will make it short. Won't some of you cousins write me? A friend longing for more friends.

Margie Lowe.

3664 Elm St., Cairo, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come, a Wes Virginia girl, asking to join your happy band of boys and girls. I wrote once before and you were kind enough to print it so I decided to write again. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading the interesting letters of the cousins. My father is a Methodist minister. He preaches at five different churches, so you see he is busy most of the time. We live in the little city of Spencer. We have lived here almost a year. I like country life best. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with A and has four letters in it. I am seventeen years old, have black hair, brown eyes and fair complexion; am five feet, two inches high, weigh 105 pounds. I don't have my hair bobbed. I think it is all right if anyone wants their hair bobbed, but I never cared much about it. Who has my birthday, Jan. 4th? Dimple Ellis. I guess your middle name is Daisy. Am I right? If so, don't forget that long letter. Edna F. Duke. I guess your name is Frances. Is that correct? I have three sisters and two brothers. My sister is writing to The Herald. Mary Hudson, I enjoy reading your letters.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson X.—December 4, 1927.

Subject.—Isaiah Teaches Right Living. Isaiah 5:1-12.

Golden Text.—Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. James 1:27.

Time.—About B. C. 758.

Place.—Judah.

Introduction.—In the preceding chapters Isaiah draws some pictures of the sins of his people, and of Jehovah's dealings with them. The people had become very sinful. Doom was fast closing in on the northern kingdom. They would go into captivity with little hope of deliverance. Perhaps God bore with the southern kingdom longer than with the kingdom of Israel, because out of it was to come the promised Messiah; but it too must go into captivity. Nevertheless, the prophet tells of a time when "the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it." Dark as the picture was, the day would come when the people would say: "Come ye, let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord." Glad day yet to come. The prophet is referring to the coming of Messiah's reign upon the earth. He is painting the glories of the "glad millennial day" when our Lord shall reign from the rivers even unto the ends of the earth. Would God that we might soon behold its blessed dawning.

Isaiah is giving a heart-rending contrast between the sinfulness of the Jews and the astounding mercy of Jehovah. Therefore he turns from the beautiful promises given in the foregoing paragraph to a scathing rebuke of the people. They had forsaken Jehovah, and had become sooth-sayers like the Philistines. Their land was full of silver and gold, and of kindred treasures. Their horses and chariots were endless. But in the midst of all their wealth, they were worshipping idols made with men's hands, and with their own fingers. Not only had they forsaken God: he had forsaken them. The day would come when they would cast their idols to "the moles and to the bats." They would "go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth."

The prophet rebukes the women in fearful terms for their vanity and love of dress. With slight change his words might be applied to the women of our times. When the money spent for cosmetics and in beauty parlors amounts to the tremendous sum of $1,825,000,000 annually in America, while millions of people are suffering for bread in this and other lands, it is time for some serious thought. I keep wondering if we are dealing with the same unchanging God with whom Isaiah and his people had to deal. If so, it might be well for our American people to read carefully and prayerfully the fourth chapter of this great book of prophecy.

As we study this lesson concerning right living, we must not suffer ourselves to become entangled with the modern teaching, that living is all; for there can be no right living, unless one be born from above. That must precede all our living: "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again," said Jesus unto Nicodemus. Multitudes of our people have become so enamored of the goddess of Social Service, that they have completely forgotten the necessity of the New Birth. There is just now a great cry against doctrinal and creedal preaching; but there was never a time when such preaching was more sorely needed. People can no more live spiritually on the froth of what is commonly termed "topical preaching" than they can thrive physically on sillabub in place of bread and meat. The Gospel is doctrine, and creeds are as necessary as prayers.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Now will I sing to my beloved a song of my beloved.—The form is a bit awkward. Scholars change it slightly: "Let me sing a song of loves." My beloved and my well-beloved in this verse refer, of course, to God. Hath a vineyard in a fruitful hill.—The vineyard is Israel, the fruitful hill being their own hilly land. It was rich for growing grapes.

2. This verse is wholly figurative, descriptive of the care of a vineyard. The tower was a sort of house for the keeping of tools, etc. Some suppose that it was also used as a watch-tower for the care-taker who had to keep an eye on the grapes when ripe. The word used for winepress seems rather to mean the stone vat into which the sweet juice ran after being pressed from the grapes. Brought forth wild grapes.—Poisonous berries. Jehovah expected righteousness in Israel, but found wickedness.

3. Judge . . . betwixt me and my vineyard.—This was Jehovah's request made to the inhabitants of Jerusalem and the men of Judah. It was rather a challenge against themselves, somewhat in the nature of the question put to a condemned criminal by the judge who is about to pass sentence upon him: "Have you anything to say for yourself before I pass sentence upon you?" The challenge betokened nothing good for sinful Israel.

4. What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done to it?—There is no question that God has done all that he can do for the best interest and the final salvation of men. The trouble among men arises from their failure to co-operate with him. Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?—Speaking after the manner of men, Jehovah was sorely disappointed in the Jews; but it is doubtless true that the same statement could be made concerning most of us human beings. Crowds of us are as wild grapes, poisonous berries, in his eyes.

5. Now go to.—This is an interjection used to call attention. God deals in figures of the vineyard again. He will take away the hedge, that the vines may be eaten by beasts, and break down the wall, that they may trample upon it. It marks Judah's ruin.

6. I will lay it waste.—The curse was dreadful. There would be no caretakers to prune and dig the vineyard; and he himself would forbid the rain to fall upon it. Remember that the vineyard was Israel; and the armies of heathen Babylon would be the beasts that would do the trampling.

7. He looked for judgment, but behold oppression.—The former part of the verse tells what God thought of Israel at one time; the latter part breathes his disappointment. When he looked for righteousness, he heard the cry of the oppressed.

8. Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field.—Will land-grabbing never cease? All lands have suffered fearfully in this regard. A few years ago the cry in troubled Mexico was: "La Tierra!" Rich men had possession of the land; and the poor were crying for a chance to earn a living. In our own nation high rents in both city and country are frequently grinding the life out of multitudes of poor people. That they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth!—What inhuman greed! Maybe there is no harm in riches; but few can gain great wealth, and escape covetousness in this world and hell in the next.

9. Many houses shall be desolate, even great and fair, without inhabitant.—Many who heard these fearful words from Jehovah through the lips of Isaiah doubtless lived to see them fulfilled; for both kingdoms were soon laid waste by heathen hordes from Nineveh and Babylon.

10. Ten acres of vineyard shall yield one bath.—Not quite eight gallons of wine. The seed of an homer shall yield an ephah.—But a tenth part of the seed sown. "The wages of sin is death."

11. Woe to them that follow strong drink.—The term used, Sidera, includes liquors containing a large amount of alcohol. They drank from early morning till night, till they were inflamed with their wines. The curse of Jehovah has gone forth against all drinking of alcohol. Its victims cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven.

12. Times do not change largely the customs of sin. As then, so now, viols, tabrets, pipes, harps and wine—music and strong drink characterize the revels of the ungodly, unless the law of the land prevent it. "They regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider the operations of his hands." Satan holds high carnival in all the feasts of the wicked. Go not with them, lest thou be partaker of the sins.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, one of our conference evangelists, is assisting Rev. C. C. Jones, pastor of Highland Methodist Church, this city, in a revival meeting. The meeting will continue for two or three weeks. Brother Thomas has just come from an evangelistic itinerary in Louisiana and Texas.

Rev. L. E. Williams, Wilmore, Ky., has some open dates which he is desirous of giving to parties in need of evangelistic assistance. Bro. Williams only asks a freewill offering. He will go anywhere, but would like some IMPORTANT!

I have in stock about 4,000 copies of Mr. John T. Benson's new song book, "Songs of Rapture," which I am offering for sale at the exceedingly low rate of only $12.50 per 100, or $2.00 per dozen. Mr. Benson considers this song book the best that he has issued. More than two million copies of his publications have been sold! meetings in the south, preferably Florida. Brother Williams is conference evangelist of the Kentucky Conference.

Rev. W. P. Hopkins has been released from the pastorate and will engage in evangelistic work. His address is 142 French Ave., Winchester, Ky.

Rev. D. F. Walton has changed his residence, and his address is now Maceo, Ky., instead of Lewisburg. Let those interested please to make note of this change.

Evangelist W. R. Quinton and wife, the singing evangelists, sing and preach full salvation, have open dates December 28 to February 1. Twenty-two years' experience. Go anywhere, any church, and accept calls only for freewill offerings. Address, Chipley, Florida.

Rev. and Mrs. Jack Linn, with Prof. Edson Crosby, will conduct a full gospel meeting at the Headquarters of the Volunteers of America, 2841 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill. The date is Nov. 20-Dec. 4. Divine healing services will be held. Prayer is requested for this meeting.

Prof. C. C. Crammond, song leader, and Margaret Crammond, evangelist, have an open date Dec. 4-18. Write or wire them at Big Rapids, Mich., 574 East Maple St.

John J. Hunt: "My engagement as superintendent of Detroit Holiness Tabernacle began September 1 and terminates Dec. 31. Subsequent to that date I will again be open for evangelistic calls to churches, conventions and camp meetings. Address me, Media, Pa., Rt. 3. Present address, Detroit Holiness Tabernacle, Detroit, Mich."

Rev. Paul Rees, Pasadena, Calif., will hold a revival campaign at Battle Creek, Mich., in the Immanuel (Pilgrim) Holiness Church, Carlyle and Jackson streets, Dec. 7-18. Fervent prayers are coveted from the readers of The Herald for a mighty outpouring of the Spirit in this strong Seven-Day-Adventist town.

Rev. Oscar B. Lyon: "Having been appointed conference evangelist of the Oklahoma Annual Conference I am ready to accept calls for revival meetings in churches, tabernacles, union revivals and camp meetings. I have had thirteen years' experience as evangelist and pastor in which time God has saved and cleansed hundreds of souls. I have a very efficient leader of song traveling with me, D. T. Huscher, who is an asset to any church service. We preach and sing a full gospel. Our terms are: traveling expenses, entertainment and freewill offering at the close of meeting. Address us at Elk City, Okla."

H. P. Thomas: "We have just closed a meeting at the West Eldred Free Methodist Church, and we are praising God for victories won. The meeting lasted for 13 nights, and while the crowds were only fair, yet they were far better than they have been in the habit of having there. Quite a number prayed through in the meeting, and we closed with a full altar several of whom went through. From here we go to Emporium, Pa., and then to Duke Center, Pa. Calls are coming in and we can truly say that the fields are white unto harvest. Pray for us."

Rev. A. S. Beck: "We have recently conducted nine tent meetings in which thousands attended, hundreds were blessed and many added to the church. Calls are coming in for 1928. Address me, 1019 S. 4th St., Louisville, Ky."

Aura C. Watkins: "Evangelist Chas. H. Stalker, of Columbus, Ohio, has just closed a most successful meeting with the Church of God, Kansas City. His characteristic preaching of the need of the Holy Ghost in his sanctifying power, hours of prayer and co-operation of the church brought crowded houses and full altars. About 175 seekers were at the altar. Quite a number were men who never had been saved before. It was our greatest revival and puts the work of holiness as represented by this church leagues ahead. Folk came from different parts of Missouri and Kansas to this meeting, and many declared it the most helpful one they ever attended. This was Bro. Stalker's second meeting with us and he endeared himself to us."

Romie R. Marshall who has been associated with the Horn-Marshall Evangelistic Party, is open for engagements during November, December and January as young people's worker. He plays the piano, preaches, sings and plays the accordion and trombone. His sermons are illustrated by colored cartoons which are drawn while speaking. This open date is occasioned by closed season for tent work. Address Brother Marshall, Lewisburg, Ky.

Special Assortment of Christmas Cards

We have made up a limited number of packages of assorted Christmas cards with envelopes. There are at least twenty-two cards in each assortment, and many of the envelopes are lined with colored tissue. The sentiment on the cards carries a real Christmas message. The designs are varied and attractive—holly, snow scenes, wise men, shepherds in fields, and Madonnas. This assortment is well worth $1.50, but our special postpaid price is only $1.00. When ordering ask for Assortment No. 211. PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING COMPANY Louisville, Kentucky.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

THE Scripture Text Calendar

FOR 1928.

Better -- Finer -- More Complete than Ever Before!

THE 1928 Scripture Text Calendars are ready. Thousands of Churches and Agents will this year want more than ever before. In addition to the 13 beautiful Sacred Pictures, the daily Scripture Verse, the Sunday School Lesson, and other regular features, are added this year four new features listed below. The 1928 Calendars Selling Scripture Text Calendars is a dignified way of raising money. Pastors of Selling Scripture Text Calendars is a dignified way of raising money. Pastors of leading Churches the country over endorse and recommend our many sales plans. For 15 years Churches and Agents the country over have raised money following our successful selling plans—making from $25 to $500.

FOUR NEW EXCLUSIVE FEATURES

1. How to read the Bible through in a year with an assignment for each day's reading morning and night.
2. Three Months Calendar on each page. Added to our monthly calendar with the big figures and Scripture Text for each day are two small monthly calendars for the month preceding and following the current month.
3. A full description of each beautiful picture—of great value to young and old.
4. The phases of the moon are shown on the day they occur.

Spreading God's Word

By placing the 1928 Scripture Text Calendar in every home in the community, you are performing a truly great work—paying you big dividends both morally and financially.

We Show You How to Sell

Our many successful selling plans and campaigns that have been used so successfully for years will help you sell to practically every home in your community. Plans for Sunday School classes, Ladies' Aid, Young People's Society, etc.

13 Famous Paintings

The 13 famous Sacred Paintings, beautifully reproduced in many colors, alone are worth many times the low cost of the calendar. They represent what is best and most refined in Sacred Art.

Wonderful Values

Were it not for the fact that Scripture Text Calendars are produced in million lots, they would have to sell at much higher prices. Think of getting so much for only 30 cents—you can readily see why everybody is so well pleased.

1928 Calendars Ready— Place Your Order Now

"Don't wait! Place your order for a full supply. Our experience has been that the greater portion of Calendars are sold in advance of the New Year. Hundreds of Churches and Agents have found that the demand grows greater from year to year, and as our supply is limited, we urge you to estimate how many you can sell and rush your order.

Special Prices

See how you can profit by placing the Gospel in every home in your community.

Quantity.	Cost	Sell for	Profit
100 Calendars	$17.00	$30.00	$13.00
200 Calendars	32.00	60.00	28.00

Do You Know?

1. Why are Holman Bibles desirable? Because the publishers are specialists in Bible making.
2. How long have they been making Bibles? Between fifty and sixty years, in Philadelphia.
3. What advantage does this bring to me? Philadelphia has been the home of American Bible making since 1776 to the practical exclusion of other American cities.
4. Did the founders have prior experience? Yes; they succeeded Bible publishers, who in turn succeeded others back to A. D. 1798.
5. Does this mean better Bibles? Yes. Artisans have been trained for generations in this particular field. Bibles are admittedly the best printed and have the best bindings and most attractive appearance of all books.
6. What advantage is there in a Holman binding? First, in the leathers which are purposely tanned; second, in the covers which are reinforced where the strain is greatest, and, third, they always retain their shape and neat appearance.
7. Is it necessary to reinforce the binding of a Bible? Yes, if it is used. The ordinary book is read two or three times at most, but a Bible is presumed to be referred to, at least, every Sunday.
8. Is the paper in a Holman Bible better than in ordinary books? Yes. The highest grades of imported Bible papers are used.
9. Is the printing any better? It must be because of the thinness of the paper and here again the accumulated experience of generations comes in good stead.
10. What other reasons are there for using a Holman Bible? No other house in the U. S. has the same knowledge and experience in printing thin papers (Bible and India), or in binding leather books.
11. What impression has a Holman Bible made on the Bible reading public? It has popularized Pronouncing Bibles. The Holman concern originated the pronouncing feature in Teachers' Bibles.

Good Stories from the Good Book

Illustrated With Mystical Pictures
Three Booklets of Different Stories

The life of Jesus Christ, re-told in an exceptionally interesting way.

Five Mystic Pictures illustrate each booklet, whose beauty remains mysteriously veiled until they are viewed through bi-colored, gelatinous nose glasses, one pair of which is furnished free with each set of booklets. These glasses bring to view two pictures out of each confused one, a different picture responding to the gaze of each eye.

Three booklets of 16 pages each, wire stitched, in illustrated covers, size 4½ x 6 inches and enclosed in attractive envelope. Price 30c.

Their use makes these books usable as individual gifts.

JUST OUT!
STORY OF LITTLE EVA

BY A. L. HITCHCOCK.
72 Elm St., New Britain Ct.

A gripping, reminiscent story taken from the tender years of childhood of the author, expressing the honest outgoings of a simple child to the one he loves. Scene is laid on one of the old plantations of Dixie. Story is of commanding interest, and good for the Christmas fire-side.

Price 25 cents.

See review in Pentecostal Herald, Louisville, Ky., of September 14.

The First Soprano

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The underlying motive of this excellent piece of Christian fiction, into which is woven a fascinating love story, is the consecration of life and talent to God. It peers through the superficiality of mere profession, and the hypocrisy of certain features of Church life and appeals strongly for reality in Christian experience.

You will find it one of the most interesting stories you have ever read. Price, $1.00.

The Children's Big Bible Story Book

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD.

In words of easy reading, illustrated with fifty world-famous masterpieces of sacred art, in many colors. The book is beautifully bound in cloth, stamped in gold with an illustrated jacket printed in many colors. The size is 7½x9½x1½ in. thick.

The Bible stories are printed in extra large bold type and they cover the Old and New Testaments. It is a book that would ordinarily sell for $3.00, but on account of the very large edition printed, we are enabled to sell them at $1.25 each, postpaid.

Possibilities

Prayers for Girls Prayers for Boys

TWO BOOKS

BY ELIZABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL.

It is with the ideal of helping the boy and girl to face life with God, and to teach them to give true expression to their devotion, that these little books are sent out upon their mission. They enter into the inner sanctuary of the heart, and enable them to give utterance to longings and hopes which heretofore have been unable or unwilling to speak in the presence of God. A prayer for Courage, for Cheerfulness, for Fortitude under Failure, in Perplexity, in Sorrow, in Disappointment—these few titles show the wideness of the little books' range, and the depth of their understanding and sympathy. It is the ideal gift for every boy and girl in the Sunday Schools and Bible Classes of our churches. We have long needed just such books as these.

THE GREATEST NEED OF THE HOUR.

By The Editor.

UNDoubtedly the greatest need of the hour is a nationwide revival of true Bible religion. The unbelief in the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, the doubt being disseminated with reference to the godhead, sacrificial death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, the extravagant living, the Sabbath desecration, the immorality, indecency and lawlessness of our times, can only be met and the tide of sin turned back with a great revival of true religion.

We need a revival of the John Wesley type that will touch the mighty masses of the common people, that will kindle holy fires of spiritual life among the sinners, among the countless thousands of men employed in the great foundries and factories. We need a revival that will spread among the reckless, wicked masses of humanity in the neglected districts of our great cities where lawlessness carries a high head and a defiant spirit, where the underworld is breaking all bounds and becoming a godless and lawless world. We need a revival that will touch the very lowest strata of society and work up through all grades of people, reaching the most highly educated and wealthy.

The power of God is a transforming power. If we will take the Gospel net and drag it about the mouth of the coal pit, the foundry, the factory and in the districts of drunkenness, lewdness and lawlessness, we will catch multitudes of men and women who will become shining lights and great spiritual factors in the Kingdom of God. We are not classing miners and the laboring men of the nation with the outcasts of society, but we are simply thinking of how little is being done, comparatively, with either one of these classes of humanity that number into millions, that ought to be brought to Christ, and must be brought to Christ, if we preserve the integrity of our nation and nurture and go forward with a progressive civilization.

As for those people who are telling us that the days for revivals have passed we will not take up time to debate or argue with them. They are utterly wrong. Their mouths ought to be shut. They have neither the faith in God, the love for humanity or the zeal for souls that should characterize ministers of the Gospel or a lay people fit for church membership. There are countless thousands of lost souls about us everywhere that never can or will be saved without strenuous revival efforts. There must be the rallying of the church membership, a degree of postponement of business, entertainments and all the legitimate work of housekeeping, farming and merchandise that can be curtailed for a time, and the gathering of the people in the sanctuary. There must be earnest praying, evangelistic preaching and stirring singing to attract and impress the Sin separates men from God and unfits them for heaven. The Scriptures plainly teach that Christ was given, came, suffered, died, arose from the grave, to separate men from sin, to save them from the guilt and power, the taint and corruption of sin, and to fit them for heaven.

H. C. Morrison.

people. We must arouse the community. We must pray down the power of God. We must have an awakening. We must bring the lost to Christ.

We need a revival in this nation of the Charles Finney type. He preached about God, his law, his will, his right to reign and rule in his universe. He preached of God's holiness, his presence, his displeasure with sin, his unspeakable gift of his Son, the authority of his Word, the presence of his Holy Spirit. He preached these great truths until men awoke to the fact that God was in the midst of them, that he knew them, their deeds, their thoughts, their sins, their neglect of prayer, their neglect of the Bible, their neglect of family religion, their profanity, their dishonesty, their impurity. They awoke to the fact that a holy God had his eye on them, that their only hope was repentance, speedy, deep and genuine. We need to have the pulpits of this land thunder out with authority against unbelief and wickedness, Sabbath desecration and sin of every kind. We should not be hesitating and waiting for somebody to appear, some woman, some girl in short dresses, or some twelve-year-old boy to attract attention and draw the multitude out of curiosity. But what we need is that the preachers of all denominations in their pastorates, everywhere, awake to a sense of their responsibility, to realize that God is going to hold them accountable for the souls that sit under their ministry, that they must appear at the Judgment Seat and that God will not hold them guiltless if they have let the time pass, collected money, erected churches and given entertainments and failed to warn the sinful and win the lost to Jesus. May God arouse the ministry to go to believing, preaching and praying for a mighty spiritual awakening. God can give us a revival. He loved us well enough to give his Son to redeem us. He wants us redeemed. Heaven has millions of souls that were saved in revival meetings. He has set the seal of his Spirit with power upon revivals throughout the history of the church and he will do so again. Let us go to praying and holding meetings, winning souls, defeating men and devils and having victory in the salvation of our fellowbeings, regardless of all opposition.

When the soul is in sore straits there is no solace and no cure comparable to prayer. Let me take the wings of a dove and fly away and be at rest,—not in neglect of my appointed tasks, but in communion with my Lord.

Will the Organization of Another Methodist Church Become A Necessity?

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY DEAR BISHOP.

No. I.

My Dear Bishop:

SOMETIME ago I promised the readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD to write an article on the following subject, "Will the Opposition to the Old Methodist Doctrine of Sanctification and the propaganda of Modern Liberalism in Methodism Make the Organization of another Methodist Church a Necessity?"

Bishop, as I think on this subject, I am burdened and pained with the fear of such a possibility. It seems to me that if such become necessary it would be a real calamity; not the organization of such a church, but the necessity for such organization. It does look like the world is burdened with churches. I mean by the organization of separate bodies of Christians where altar is often built against altar. There is nothing more distasteful to the devout and serious mind than that various bodies of orthodox Christians should be at war with each other, seeking to proselyte members from one church to another rather than winning lost souls to saving faith in Christ.

You may be sure that I have no desire to see another Methodist Church organized. We now have the M. E. Church, the M. E. Church, South, the Free Methodist Church, the Congregational Methodist Church, the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the Protestant Methodist Church, the United Brethren, which is, as I understand, Methodist in doctrine and largely Methodist in polity. Then there is the Evangelical Church, an excellent body of people, but so far as I know it is Wesleyan in doctrine. There is the Nazarene Church which, in doctrine and government, is Methodist. Now there has sprung up the Pilgrim Church that is thoroughly Methodist in all of its teaching. It would seem that out of all these organizations most any one who is an orthodox Methodist—by this I mean those who are untainted with Modern Liberalism—could find a home with congenial fellowship and doctrinal teaching that would meet with his approval and satisfy the demands of his spiritual nature.

I am quite sure there are enough people in all the organizations mentioned who are thoroughly Wesleyan in their faith, who accept the Bible as the Word of God, who believe in the Virgin Birth, the blood atonement, the resurrection and intercessions of our Lord, to make a powerful and very aggressive evangelical organization.

SOME REVIVALS OF THE PAST.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

ABAKKUK 3:2: "O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known, in wrath remember mercy."

Revivals are now the subject of thought and prayer and effort. Oh, for a real revival power! Finney had that power. In the noted revival held by him in Rome, N. Y., under his first sermon there, a young man swooned away and the next morning crowds came to the hotel to an enquiry meeting. The power of the Spirit was so abundant that strong men had to be taken home by their friends. A physician undertook to examine the pulse of one of them when he, too, was obliged to grasp a pillar in order to keep himself in an upright position. Five hundred conversions were reported in this meeting. Often there was no need of preaching—just a few words would cause some soul to writhe as though in an agony.

Think of the movement known as "The Great Awakening" in Jonathan Edwards' days. Writing of this great revival of 1735 Edwards says:

"This work of God, as it was carried on, and the number of true saints multiplied, soon made a glorious alteration in the town; so that in the spring and summer following, Anno 1735, the town seemed to be full of the presence of God; it was never so full of love nor so full of joy, and yet so full of distress, as it was then. There were remarkable tokens of God's presence in almost every house. It was a time of joy in families on the account of salvation's being brought to them; parents rejoicing over their children as newborn, and husbands over their wives, and wives over their husbands. The goings of God were then seen in his sanctuary, God's day was a delight, and his tabernacles were amiable. Our public assemblies were then beautiful; the congregation was alive in God's service, everyone earnestly intent on the public worship, every hearer eager to drink in the words of the minister as they came from his mouth; the assembly in general were, from time to time, in tears while the word was preached; some weeping with sorrow and distress, others with joy and love, others with pity and concern for the souls of their neighbors.

"Our public praises were then greatly enlivened; God was then served in our psalmody, in some measure, in the beauty of holiness. It has been observable that there has been scarce any part of divine worship, wherein good men among us have had grace so drawn forth, and their hearts so lifted up in the ways of God, as in singing his praises; our congregation excelled all that ever I knew in the external part of the duty before, the men generally carrying regularly and well three parts of music, and the women a part by themselves; but now they were evidently wont to sing with unusual elevation of heart and voice, which made the duty pleasant indeed.

"In all companies on other days, on whatever occasions persons met together, Christ was to be heard of and seen in the midst of them. Our young people, when they met, were wont to spend the time in talking of the excellency and dying love of Jesus Christ; the gloriousness of the way of salvation; the wonderful, free and sovereign grace of God; his glorious work in the conversion of a soul; the truth and certainty of the great things of God's word; the sweetness of the views of his perfections, etc.; and even at weddings, which formerly were merely occasions of mirth and jollity, there was now no discourse of anything but the things of religion, and no appearance of any but spiritual mirth."

Now put over against Edwards' awaken-

WHY PRAY FOR REVIVAL?

1. Because of Heaven's Down-stretched Hands.

SO EAGER IS THE WORLD ABOVE for human salvation that there is joy in heaven "over ONE SINNER THAT REPENTETH, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance" (Luke 15:7). What then would be heaven's joy if "ALL MEN EVERYWHERE" would repent, as they are commanded (Acts 17:30), and as multitudes would do—IF THE CHURCH WERE REVIVED!

2. Because of Humanity's Out-stretched Hands.

SO EAGER IS HUMANITY for deliverance from sin that, says The Sunday School Times of Philadelphia, March 12, 1927: "Men are hungering for salvation as never before, even though they may not know it; and this means that all who know Christ as Saviour and Lord have such an opportunity as has not been since the world began to tell out the Good News and bring men from death into life." A REVIVED Church is a WITNESSING, and a SOUL-WINNING Church!

3. Because of Hell's Up-stretched Hands.

UPSTRETCHED IN DEVOURING GREED! For so eager is the world below to people its domain that sheol never cries "Enough" (Prov. 30:15, 16, R. V.). "Hell and destruction are never full" (Prov. 27:20). So SURE is "the wages of sin" that the souls of the unrepentant (for whose salvation Christ died, but for whose salvation the Church seems little concerned)—"THESE SHALL GO AWAY INTO EVERLASTING PUNISHMENT" (Matt. 25:46), but their blood will be required of a Church which sits with hands neither down-stretched, nor out-stretched, nor up-stretched—WHICH ALONE SITS WITH HANDS EN-FOLDED—all but unmoved by the pleas of Heaven, the desolations of Earth, the insatiety of HELL! Oh, intercessor, PRAY FOR THE CHURCH'S REVIVAL!

ing the following account of an Ohio Revival published in the New York Christian Advocate 30 years ago:

HOW THE BALLROOM WAS EMPTIED INTO THE CHURCH.

"There is a town within the limits of Ohio Conference whose population is of the mining type. If any difference, they are more intense in their social and mental activity than the free, outdoor, farming communities. In February, 1898, a series of hops were organized, which found some stimulus from the extract of the vine named hop—the only twining vine of which I know in nature that circles from left to right in climbing. Is this ominous of its intended fate in the beer keg? There were in the town 1,400 people, fourteen saloons, and two churches. The pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church was the Rev. W. C. Rogers, a man who wears worthily the patronymic of the celebrated martyr, John Rogers. His diffidence would lead him to protest against this compliment. Were all pulpit men of his type sensationalism in the pulpit would die.

"He appointed a series of revival meetings. The saloons did likewise. His in the church, theirs in a hall across the way. His every night, theirs alternate nights, since the dancers needed every other one to gather strength wasted till the previous midnight hours. (Dancing is so wholesome!) The church meetings were small. The faithful few were growing tired. Those of the opposition were large, and drew on the church members. Having few, if any, Disciplines, they forgot their vows in baptism, communion, church union, the General Rules, and ¶248, as well as the hymn of the same number.

"A citizen asked the pastor if he knew why more people did not attend the church meetings. Said Rogers, 'Because they do not wish to do so.' 'No,' replied the other, 'the saloon keepers have entered into an agreement to keep up the dances as long as the meetings continue, and, if necessary to do so, to incur financial loss.'

"A strange impression was borne in upon the pastor that he ought to attend one of the dances and look into the situation. It seemed preposterous, but haunted him through the night. He conferred with his wife. She replied, 'If I felt as you do about it I should go.' He replied, 'It is easy to advise, but not to practice.' The next day he drove a journey of nine miles to a neighboring town, with no business to call him. He wanted to wear off the impression and somehow solve his perplexity. All that day he was not far from the motive that impelled Jonah's flight. It was a day of aimless loitering and discomfort. He returned home barely in time to attend evening service. In attempting to preach he got badly 'brushed,' and could not even remember his text. Turning to a layman present, he committed the meeting to his care, with instructions to announce another for the following night. He retired by a back door and appeared in the ballroom. Half a dozen couples were waltzing. The first young lady was one of his church members. She threw up her hands with an exclamation not suitable to quote, saying, 'Here's the preacher!' She had frequently defended with her pastor the harmlessness of dancing. 'If there is no harm,' he said, 'why should not I attend?' But she, with her partner, at once sat down. The other sets followed suit.

"He then asked the managers, who were also musicians and saloon men, for five minutes to pray. This was answered by one of them saying, 'Will you allow me to come to your church tomorrow night and dance on the platform for five minutes?' 'Yes, on condition that the Christians pray for you during the exercises.'

"Rogers then asked for three minutes' time in which to explain his presence. This granted, he mounted a beer keg (both were in their place); then flashed into his mind for a text, 'The great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?' Ere he had spoken two minutes all but four persons had left the room—the two managers, himself, and a mother of twins trying to get her babies off the shelf where she had laid them.

"Next day, uncertain of the results of his rashness, he stayed indoors till church time. The saloon men started their music early in the evening, and did their best to rally the stampeded crowd. Only seven came. When he went to church he found it packed with the people, with a solemn awe pervading. This precluded much preaching or singing. Without urging, two young men, leaders of the dance, came deliberately to the front and, depositing their overcoats and hats, bowed at the altar. Soon the front rail was crowded. Fifteen were saved that night. The great revival had come. The results were permanent. The traditions of that victory will pass down through the generations. Rogers had answered the Spirit's call and entered the open door. The Holy Spirit had renewed the command, 'Come ye out from among them, and be ye separate, and I will be your God, and ye all be My people.'

Let us hope that in the coming revival meetings many sinners will cry to God in the language of the old hymn.

I'll go to Jesus, though my sins
Like mountains round me close;
I know his courts, I'll enter in,
Whatever may oppose.

"I can but perish if I go;
I am resolved to try;
For if I stay away, I know
I must forever die."

Our little acts of kindness may be unremembered by our friends and neighbors, yet they are never forgotten by God.

A REVIVAL---THE PARAMOUNT NEED.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

RF the church was not a divine institution, and the issues of her message without eternal significance, the human psychology of its enterprise would demand a revival. There is no human organization that can overcome the lethargy of continuous routine. The energy necessary to success must be generated by seasons of rally, get-together plans, and arouse enthusiasm. Our spiritual natures are equally prone to lose the watchfulness and zeal necessary to run a victorious race against subtle and invisible enemies—"dark rulers of this world," "spiritual wickedness in high places."

There are revivals and revivals; some good, others, we fear, almost harmful. We have observed some five distinct types of revivals operating in the church. First, and generally the most popular, is the revival of interest in material things, such as church building, or working for other material improvements. We do not imply that such causes are not worthy and often necessary, attended by a spirit of sacrifice and hard work. But we do say that such a revival has no direct connection with spiritual life and salvation. The darkest religious period of history was a regime of church building. The fine old cathedrals scattered throughout Europe were built at a time when men and women who knew God were sent to the stake. Church building and the Inquisition went hand in hand. Our country is now enjoying a great boom in fine church architecture; perhaps there has never been known such zeal in fine church buildings, but we repeat that it means nothing directly in the salvation of men.

Another type of revival is that of a denominational pride. It brings out all the material resources. Such a revival is often brought about through sectarian persecution or opposition, and dogmatic bigotry. We once helped to separate two pugnacious contenders for their particular brand of denominational faith. It is easier to fight for one's church, than to bow at an altar of prayer. This type also, has nothing to do with personal salvation.

Then we have the revival of popular evangelism. Crowd psychology is the leading factor; big crowds, enthusiasm, everybody happy, and in a good humor. Chorus leader a master of assemblies, and the preaching per se of a high order; but the Spirit that reaches the heart in searching conviction has little chance in such hubbub. Many no doubt find God; but we doubt seriously the lasting good of such revivalism.

Again, there is the revival that deals only in emotionalism; the whole service pitched on a high key of sentimental explosives. There is such stress placed upon the "rousements," that a kind of emotional insanity is often seen in such meetings: jerks, tongues, physical contortions, and swooning "under the power." The fertile soil for this kind of revivalism is usually among the simple-minded and illiterate. No one will question their sincerity; but the Spirit is not the author of confusion and fanaticism, but rather the reverse.

Then lastly, there is the revival founded on the faithful preaching of the Word, with the unction of the Holy Spirit, evidenced by deep conviction for sin, superinduced by a godly sorrow which worketh repentance. Such a revival has a fruitage of regenerated souls, lives transformed and adjusted to the law of God. This is the scriptural revival, and may be attended by the demonstration of the Spirit with great grief and also great rejoicing. It requires more than "moonlight-on-my-mother's-grave" gospel, pathetic stories, etc., but messages on the sinfulness of sin and its eternal consequences. Such a revival will take care of all the causes of the church, and it was never more needed than now.

SEVEN REASONS WHY IT IS THE CRYING NEED OF THE HOUR.

First, the world, or that part of it which will believe, must be reached by the preaching of the Word. It is God's method to awaken lost men and stir them to repentance. Man seeks to redeem and reform by the coercion of law, education, and uplift programs; but such methods are always a failure in the last analysis. The proclamation of the truth is God's method of redemption; it is an expression of infinite wisdom and cannot be improved upon. "If they believe not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead." Palliative programs are being worked over-time these days; but they are doing about as much to establish righteousness in the earth, as an ocean tide being swept back by the vigorous use of a broom.

Twelve million young men in our country, who have no connection whatever with the church, or religion of any character. Twenty-five million young people and children receiving no religious training in Christian America. Our crime bill reached the staggering figures of ten billions of dollars last year; one hundred and eighteen thousand murderers running at large. Sabbath desecration, as wild and reckless as ever characterized Europe, happens continually. This condition cannot be remedied except by placing the supreme emphasis on the majesty and authority of God. Law and law enforcement will not awaken men; God must be brought back to the thinking of society.

A second reason for this much needed revival is that the Church, or denomination that does not make its major activity a definite evangelistic message to its constituency is not functioning in the divine order. The minister—the mouthpiece of the church—who does not seek the salvation of men by explicitly preaching the cardinal doctrines touching human redemption, is not a New Testament evangel. Ministers have a multitude of duties, but however good, necessary, and worthy they may be, they are secondary to the main objective. Christ came to seek and to save that which was lost, and he who is in the "Apostolic Succession" must be seeking and saving the lost. When a church, or a denomination ceases to put supreme emphasis on the evangelism which looks upon the unsaved and impenitent as lost, and fails to place her resources upon the altar to bring men to Christ, by turning away from sin and accepting him as the only hope, are repudiating the supreme command given by our Lord.

A third reason is that the church of tomorrow will be a dead ecclesiasticism if the human material for the building is not quickened, rejuvenated and regenerated by the Holy Ghost. Churches as organizations will live on, build stately structures for communicants, but as a saving agency will be "thrice dead and plucked up." Most of the evangelical denominations were founded by the inspiration of a revival. Methodism was founded by a sweeping revival. For over one hundred years her membership was sustained by men and women who knew God by personal experience. What do we find today? One of the most saintly bishops of Methodism said twenty-five years ago, that not more than ten percent of the church had a Bible experience. It is even worse today, as our ranks are being supplied by easy, popular methods. The definite experience of salvation has almost disappeared from among us. If it was necessary for men to be "born again" in the days of Christ, and in the early days of Protestantism, it is necessary now. This lack of experimental salvation is due to the passing of scriptural evangelism. The evidences of this are obvious: worldliness is rampant, the line of demarkation is gone and discipline is a joke. This is now true of all Protestantism. When in the memory of those living, any way, of recent years, was a member brought to account for anything? Nothing will restore this glory and power but a Revival—not in one church or denomination—but a nation-wide awakening, so that sinners by the thousands in the church, and out, will be brought in humble knowledge of Christ's Lordship by repentance and faith. The churches need redemptive restoration; but it must come in God's way. "If the salt has lost its savor, wherewith shall it (the earth) be salted?" It is a revival for America or Ichabod.

A fourth reason is the Home. There is no more appalling situation confronting us than the disintegration of the home. Not only has it ceased to be a religious institution, but it is losing its moral fiber. There are legions of causes entering into this phase of our American life, but we are only calling attention to that phase which pertains to a revival. The religious and moral life of a church cannot rise higher than what is in the home; but we believe the moral power of the home is too far spent now to redeem the situation. Economic conditions, new liberties for women, the amusement craze, the utter decadence of home piety and authority, facilities for Sabbath desecration by the automobile all combine to make the home impossible as a regenerating unit. The home once gave stability to the church, but now the dynamics must revert to the home from elsewhere. Civilization for the future is impossible unless the home is restored to its God-ordained position, and we believe, that it is going to require a nation-wide, Holy Ghost-inspired revival to save the home. Where once the fires of faith and piety burned on the altars of home, now is found discord, ambition, infidelity, and extravagant living. Two million divorced couples in America! Our nation would doubtless be torn to shreds if all the causes for divorce were fully known. The pustule is there even if it is covered with the plaster of social conventionalities. God must come to the American home but he can only come through his own method—the Gospel—and its saving power.

A fifth reason is the Program of the Church. The Church has a task, stupendous, overwhelming; its task is to carry the Gospel to an unsaved world. Oh, the demands that are upon us. People will not feel and respond to these causes when the fires of faith and experience burn low. Some will do and pay from principle; their honor is at stake; but support for the great causes must have the help of all. Think of what six million Methodists could do if they were saved and thrilled with a zeal of holy inspiration. The big task of the Church could be done if her membership had the pentecostal vision. We can scarcely dream of such a glorious period; but we can hope and pray for a revival that will save our homes and our churches from dry rot and apostasy. Our causes will continue to languish—and the worst is not yet—unless we can pray down a revival. Drives, big conventions, set up meetings, inspirational addresses, books, literature and all will not do the job. The "valley of dry bones" must stand up a mighty army.

A sixth reason. Unless we can bring about a sweeping revival millions of souls for whom Christ died, will be lost forever. Sixty percent of Americans have no religious affiliation whatever. Think of millions of pro-

METHODISM was conceived by the Holy Ghost and born of a virgin, divine passion to bring this world to God. She was not brought into the world to Methodize it, but to vitalize it,—to Christianize it. She has only one right to claim the world for her parish: not her years nor continents she spans, nor her millions, nor doctrines, nor stars which she has placed in the diadem of her Lord; she has only one thing, and that is the measure in which the passion that gave her birth inspires her still. When she loses that, she will die, and she ought to die. That passion is the very quintessence of the love and kingdom of God. The church may not hope to be triumphant until it is first militant. Only a going church is a growing church. Only a saving church is worth saving. No church can claim the future by virtue of a great past. There is no protection tomorrow because of service rendered yesterday. The fact that Rome was once the mistress of the world does not change the fact that she is a third-rate city today. The church of today wrought not the glorious past; she simply inherited it. As in the case of the individual, only by continually losing her life can the church perpetuate its existence. The organ that ceases to perform its function dies. The immutable law of God in nature is "Use or Lose" and God is just as mercifully merciless toward his church as toward nature. "Give us this day our daily bread" is the prayer which Christ would have us pray every day. The manna of yesterday is useless for today's needs.

Let us consider the essential basis of a successful revival. First, God was the original Great Revivalist and he is still busy with this task. The Psalmist declares, "All power belongeth unto God" and the burden of the message of the divinely ordained Zechariah was, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." After all, Emerson was correct in saying that "life is a search after power," and human events are significant only as they affect power. The measure of manhood is in units of power. All wealth is the off-spring of power. All happiness is power enjoyed. All progress is power moving on to perfection. The school is but a mental power house. Churches should be centers of moral power, fountains of restraining, inspiring and converting influences. Christianity is the religion of power. Jesus is declared to be "the Son of God with power." The supreme need of the church today is the need of power,—we have everything else. Never was the church so well equipped as today, never so wealthy in culture, never was there a greater intelligent activity of its membership than today. From an intellectual standpoint, the preaching is the best the world has ever heard. Her services are attractive and unimpeachable. Her organization is well nigh perfect, but what of results?

Dr. Carroll, authority on church statistics, in his last report, speaks of an alarming decrease in membership and revival effort. We ask, why? and echo answers why? Because, with all her equipment of wealth, culture, and prestige, the fact remains that there is not sufficient power in the church to make these effective. Our churches are like factories: splendidly built, furnished with the most perfect machinery,—but lacking the dynamo. And that dynamo is found, not in human programs, but in power from above.

Let us go back, then, to fundamentals, and as a church draw on the resources placed at our disposal. "Appropriation" rather than "expectation" should be our motto. The dynamite of God is ours for the asking. "Ye shall receive power" is the promise of Jesus, and this power is not from human skill, wisdom, energy, educational programs, or by any sort of propaganda, but the one all-pervading, all-controlling, all-achieving force in the Kingdom of God is the Holy Spirit. This power is outside of and above us. One has well said, "The reason that the church of today never wins any great victories is because it never quite gets to that extremity which is God's opportunity. It is always able to think of one more expedient to try before it throws itself helplessly upon God. If a fire does not fall from Heaven upon our sacrifice, somebody always has a match. We are often like the well-digger who let himself down by a rope to the end of the line. He couldn't climb up again and was afraid to drop, until at last through exhaustion he let go and dropped—only three inches to the bottom. There is help, solid help, much nearer than we suppose, but we cannot stand on the Rock until we let go of the rope; and the church has invented so many ropes that it is able to hold on a very long time before falling into the Everlasting Arms. The Holy Spirit is the only explanation of the power of the apostolic church.

To grapple with, and successfully overcome, the highly organized and deeply entrenched evils of today, only the preaching of a full and complete redemption will suffice. There was a time when the conflict raged about the teaching of Entire Sanctification as a second work of grace subsequent to regeneration,—a work of cleansing which not only removes the guilt of sin, but breaks its power as well. The fight now, however, has become more general, and the storm center would seem to be about the personality of Jesus Christ as a World Redeemer. At present, the efficacy of his Atonement, his Virgin Birth, his Resurrection, his Deity—all these essentials of the Christian faith—are being attacked by a rationalistic and skeptical force under the leadership of men who have long ago lost their prophetic vision and their passion for souls, and whose fetish is now a superficial scholarship or a pseudo-scientific assumption of superior knowledge with an ethical philosophy which, they imply, transcends the tenets and teachings of historic Christianity.

Our hope is to return to a supernatural

Book and a supernatural religion. When we were not ashamed of miracles we saw wonders. Now we hear revivals mentioned as "emotional outbursts" while religious excitement is derided. The true revival must be more than emotionalism and yet no revival is gripping and lasting without stirring the emotions of men to the very depths. A revival that is wholly emotional means fanaticism. A revival by cold intellectual processes alone is barren and fruitless. Our Methodist fathers may not have possessed the degree of Master of Arts, but almost every itinerant was a Master of the art of revivalism. They preached to men's hearts by way of their heads. There was a "heart-felt religion" but with it went intelligence also.

The mighty preachers of our yesterdays were characterized by certain qualities which are absolutely essential to successful evangelism today: First, there was a holy, uncompromising, and relentless declaration as to the fact and the nature of sin. The first step in a campaign for the salvation of the lost was to rouse the community to the fact of its sin. A lost man in a lost world, eternally doomed without help or hope outside the shed blood of the world's Redeemer,—this was the burden of the message for the first half of the revival season. Again, there was a positive note in the preaching of Methodist preachers of yesterday that is sadly lacking in the preaching of today. There was no uncertainty in their proclamations. They not only knew the God in whom they believed, but they spoke with the definiteness and clear assurance of the prophets of old. Little was said about the findings of science and the consensus of scholarship, but back of their passionate utterances was the ringing and authoritative declaration, "Thus saith the Lord," which was the final and indisputable authority of the message.

Again, the preachers of yesterday stood out boldly against the evil trinity—"The world, the flesh, and the devil." They hedged not. They were willing to risk their popularity upon the issue involved. They declared far and wide that a truly Christian people should be a peculiar people, separated from the world, whose daily walk and conversation would ever designate them as children of the living God.

Those heroic pioneers of Christ were continually exalting the Cross of Calvary with the shed blood of the Redeemer as the one and only remedy. No Methodist preacher of yesterday would have hinted at any way save the way of the Cross which leads home to God. They were men of child-like faith and the Word of God was indeed the very Word of God. There was no hesitant note in the preaching of a supernatural work of a supernatural God. The early preachers, in that period when Methodism was spreading over states and sections like fire in stubble, proclaimed without hesitation holiness of heart and life, and the experience of Entire Sanctification which was Methodism's pre-eminent message to a sin-sick and despairing world. They should know the church gains nothing by softening the spiritual truth with which she has been entrusted, nor by lowering her standards, nor relaxing her discipline; that our attitude toward an inferior spiritual life must be one of uncompromising hostility; there must be no adulterous contact with sin, no divided heart, if we must claim life's highest prize. There must be not a nod in the house of Rimmon; nor the burning of a grain of incense on the altar of Mammon. The pure gold of perfect love must not be alloyed with any base mixtures of worldly philosophy or mediocre attainment.

Early Methodism made her spectacular rise to spiritual leadership in the world by way of the altar and the mourner's bench. Nine-tenths of the preaching of early Methodism was evangelistic and the other one-tenth had to do with the development of the spiritual life and the strengthening of the faith of the saints. Moral reform, social service, and humanitarian methods were magnified only as the fruits and graces of a genuinely transformed life, proceeding from a heart from sin set free.

Our beloved Methodism was born amid the shouts of new-born souls and she has made herself a world evangel through her mighty spiritual revival awakening. She has always fostered Christian education, but, during the years that have passed, she never made this necessary measure a substitute for the supernatural works of the Holy Spirit in human hearts.

Had we then the resources, membership, equipment and educated leaders which we now possess, with the passion for the salvation of men which burned within the breasts of the early preachers, the accomplishments in those crude days would have swept the world with a divine conflagration of spiritual power, the results of which cannot be imagined. Had we today that divine passion for bringing a lost world to the feet of our crucified Saviour, that passion which animated the heroic hearts of Asbury, Whitefield, Wesley, Coke, Whatcoat, and others, we could easily change the disheartening and alarming report of a stagnated church without an increase in converts and members, to the glorious announcement of the addition of a million souls for Methodism throughout the world.

It is high time that we realize the futility of man-made programs and return to the only source of power, namely, the guidance of the Holy Spirit and a recognition of his leadership as the head of this dispensation. Would that our bishops and leaders might issue a world call for a convocation of God's ministers which would mean a tarrying before him in humility, contrition, and a genuine sorrow for the spiritual barrenness and desert life that is so widely evident in the present day pulpit,—a tarrying that should endure until the long withheld Pentecost should again descend, tipping the tongues of God's evangelists with the sacred fire of the skies, and creating anew a ministry of John the Apostle, and Paul the evangelist.

The insistent cry of every one who loves the Lord Jesus Christ should be that of the Psalmist of old, "Wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?" This is the supreme need of the hour: a God-sent revival, not a man-made revival, a prayed-down revival in answer to the prayers of people who know how to meet the conditions of prevailing prayer. This is no hour for a muffled Gospel, but the glorious truth of full salvation, which comprehends the regeneration of the human heart, and its sanctification or cleansing from all sin; this complete cure, bringing with it the largest measure of growth in grace and consciousness of a victorious life—this, and this alone, will suffice for present day needs and give humanity a surcease from its sorrow and sin.

Liberty is one thing, license another. Liberty is of the Spirit, license is of the flesh.—A. W. Robinson.

Holiness Preaching Essential to a Deep and Abiding Revival.

REV. C. W. RUTH, Evangelist.

WE believe Mr. Wesley was right when he said, "Where Christian perfection is not strongly and explicitly preached, there is seldom any remarkable blessing from God; and consequently little addition to the society, and little life in the members of it. . . Till you press the believers to expect full salvation now, you must not look for any revival." Vol. 6, p. 721. Again he wrote, "Indeed, this I always observe,—wherever a work of sanctification breaks out, the whole work of God prospers. Some are convinced of sin, others justified, and all stirred up to greater earnestness for salvation." Journal, Aug., 1775.

In writing to Rev. John Baxendale, in 1775, he said, "Indeed, his work will flourish in every place where full sanctification is clearly and strongly preached." Works, Vol. 6, p. 172. John Wesley was neither a ranter, nor a dreamer; mark you, he said, "I always observe": he was simply stating what he had personally "observed," and knew to be the facts in the case.

Jesus prayed for his church, "Sanctify them . . . that they all may be one. . . that the world may believe." John 17:17-21. Here Jesus conditioned the salvation of the world on the sanctification and unity of his people. And the sanctification of one hundred and twenty believers by the baptism with the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost, instantly precipitated a revival such as the world had never witnessed, resulting in the conversion of "about three thousand souls" the first day.

In giving the promise of this "second blessing,"—the gift of the Holy Ghost, to his disciples, Jesus said, "If I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come (unto you, who are already converted) he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness and of judgment." John 16:7, 8. Instead of praying for the Holy Ghost, in order that he might do our bidding, believers need to be so utterly abandoned, and filled with the Holy Ghost that he can use them. Generally speaking, Christians lack this purifying, sanctifying baptism of the Spirit, and consequently there is no conviction for sin, and no real revival. The Holy Spirit does the work of conviction most generally through the overflow of Christian hearts.

Under the preaching of holiness every one becomes convicted who is living beneath that standard. It is by way of contrast that we are often made to see our true condition. A man may never realize his own poverty until he stands by the side of some real wealthy person; nor how ignorant he is until he comes in contact with those who are far advanced along intellectual lines, and are greatly his superiors; just so a man may never fully realize how sinful he is until he has a glimpse of God's holiness. It was when Isaiah had a vision of the holiness of God that he began to cry out, "Unclean," saying, "I am undone." In magnifying the holiness of God men will more fully realize the necessity of themselves being holy, if they would go to a holy heaven, and dwell with a holy God. It is by reason of this contrast men are made to see and feel the exceeding sinfulness of sin.

Ofttimes preachers will excuse themselves from preaching Holiness by saying, "The people are not ready for holiness," but we have found the only way to get the people ready for holiness is to preach holiness. It might as well be said, "Sinners are not ready for regeneration, or the new birth"; and neither they are, until they quit sin, and repent; but the only way to bring them to salvation, is to preach salvation: and then they will repent and find salvation. When God sent Moses down into Egypt to lead the children of Israel into the promised land, he did not tell him to first preach to them, and start them for the crossing of the Red Sea, and the wilderness of Zin, and then afterward tell them about Canaan: no, he started them at once for Canaan, though it required two crossings to reach that goodly land. Where there is the preaching of an emasculated gospel, there is certain to be shallow and shoddy experience, and a superficial revival. Deep Christian experience can only take place as the result of deep plowing, in the preaching of a full gospel.

One great advantage in the definite preaching of holiness is due to the fact that it always strengthens and stimulates the church; and stirs professing Christians up to diligent heart searchings and consequent calling upon God. Thus the revival begins where a true revival must always begin. And whenever the children of God get out into the tides of full salvation and have the real joy and freedom that result from the experience of heart holiness, sinners are invariably convicted and converted. In preaching holiness, and seeing believers sanctified wholly, this writer has seen a hundred sinners converted without a single sermon being especially addressed to them. In fact, in forty-two years of Holiness evangelism, we have never known it to fail, even as Mr. Wesley observed, that when believers are sanctified wholly, sinners will be convicted and converted, and "the whole work of God prospers." Preacher, why not try it?

Not only is the preaching of holiness the sure and scriptural way of precipitating a revival, but it is the condition, and pledge of permanency of the work done. This second work of grace is spoken of as the "grace wherein we stand." (Rom. 5:2). First, "the very God of peace sanctify you wholly," and then, "be preserved blameless." 1 Thess. 5:23. Carnality in the heart is unquestionably the most prolific source of backsliding. Even though the soul has been genuinely converted, it will soon discover the presence of this "something"—called, inbred, or original sin,—which is at variance with the new life: and this dual nature, occasioning a constant struggle, and inward conflict, frequently opening the door to temptation, is sure to weary and imperil the spiritual life of the young convert, and thus become the occasion of backsliding. Hence, in order to have abiding results in a revival, there is need of the preaching of holiness, so that men may know, and find deliverance from this inward foe.

The exhortation is, "Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand," and "having done all to stand." Eph. 6:11-13. The inference is, that it requires the "whole armour" in order "to stand": and that if they will not "put on the whole armour" they will not stand. And what is the "whole armour of God," but the full provisions of the gospel, in a full salvation? Unless they are cleansed and delivered from the roots of carnality, the "tares" will soon choke the good seed, and they will become barren and unfruitful. And, seeing God has said, "Holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord," (Heb. 12:14) why should not all men, everywhere, be told about it?

So we see that from every viewpoint,—for the salvation of the sinner, for the quickening and qualifying of the church, for the stability and steadfastness of the young convert, and for the conservation and preservation of the whole work of God holiness preaching is essential to a deep and abiding revival. When shall it once be?

He overcomes the world who refuses to be embittered by it. When the heart is soured the world has won. To lose the happy loving childlike heart is a confession that the world has benten us.—G. H. Morrison.

fessed religionists who have no salvation, and are as ignorant of God as the heathen; and, worst of all, they are living in the presence of light—churches scattered everywhere. They tell us we have one hundred thousand churches in the United States that ought to be junked, that are not functioning. If we could have a revival just in the membership, and get them on a going-to-church basis we would need double the number of churches we now have to accommodate our membership.

If the Master knew the value of a soul—that it is worth more than the whole world—think of the riches scattered all about us. Not "Acres of Diamonds," but continents of them, precious soul jewels that can be reached only by a revival.

Then we give as a seventh reason—the salvation of the nation as well as the individual. Nations cannot be saved by armies and navies; God's method is through prophets of righteousness, crying out like a voice in the wilderness, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord," leveling mountains of sin and arrogance; bringing up the valleys of suffering and hopelessness. God has no promise to the nation that forgets him. If our land is ever redeemed to a God-fearing country, where his laws are obeyed and his commandments observed, it must come through the messages of his prophets—ministers of the Gospel—preaching righteousness from center to circumference. Nothing else will meet the present approaching crisis. But as matters now stand, "Judgment must begin at the house of God." We cannot move without, until we move within.

A Fact—A Question—An Answer.

ARTHUR J. MOORE,

First Methodist Church, Birmingham, Ala.

A FACT.

WHEN writing or speaking concerning evil conditions of our day, it is not necessary or wise to turn pessimist and paint the picture in only dark colors. Some modern day prophets would have us believe that everything is wrong, that all the tendencies of society are downward and that civilization is sweeping to sure and inevitable destruction. It is easy to make a wild guess and label it as a fact. We must not forget the many promising movements in the world today or fail to remember the millions of devout people who are giving Christ their loyal and earnest support.

We are all agreed, however, that God has privileged us to live in one of the most significant and critical hours of the world's life. History has been full of crises. We are the subjects of strain and stress. Such a period is now upon us. Life for us is no longer quiet and uneventful. Instead of a placid pool it has suddenly become a roaring Niagara. Days and weeks have the fullness and significance of years and decades. Every hour is charged with responsibility and opportunity. One had declared, "We live at both the end and the beginning of an age."

There is much to drive the most faithful and optimistic among us to prayer and self-examination. We are compelled to face facts. The isolation is gone, and with it our ignorance of our brothers who are thronged with misery, want and sin. There are many sore spots in society to be healed. Innumerable foes are in full array against the teachings of Christ. The very air is filled with ominous and discordant sounds, causing one to wonder if our boasted civilization is in danger of collapse. Has our spirituality been too shallow and our Christian living too superficial? In the hour when we should be unfurling the flag of our allegiance and challenging the forces of evil to the fiercest battle of the centuries, why are we hesitant and uncertain?

A QUESTION.

To my own heart I have gone with such questions as these: Does the Church know the way out of this critical situation? Does Christianity have a message of personal and social redemption for all men in all centuries? Can sin, slavery, skepticism, superstition and hatred be rounded up and destroyed? Can the fires which are about to consume the world be put out? Can this world, crazed with lust for power and mad with pleasure and vice, be brought back to sanity? Do we know some one who can still this wild storm of hate and suspicion? Do we have a message that will bring peace to our disturbed world, dispel the darkness and make the world safe, friendly and happy?

My heart joins the mighty army of believers in the certain answer, "Of course, we do"! Jesus is adequate for all the needs of all men in all centuries. We join in St. Paul's triumphant declaration that "the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation." We declare Jesus to be the great Physician who has yet to find an incurable. The way out of sin, misery and war is over an old-fashioned hill called Calvary. But as we affirm our faith in the adequacy and power of the Gospel, these questions persist.

If the Church has the one message for a torn and distracted world, why is it hesitant and uncertain at the hour of its supreme opportunity? Why are we beset by unrest and why is our faith disturbed? Why are our Mission Boards facing a depleted treasury and a diminishing income at the very zero hour of our advance? Why do we allow the very fundamental reason for our existence—our world objective—to become lost among the multitudes of minor matters? Why do we have to struggle to understand what is the paramount duty and most sacred vocation of the Church of God? Are we losing the spirit of sacrifice for the redemption of the lost? Are we arresting God's grace in Mid-career and using it only for our own comfort and salvation? Has prosperity been our undoing? Has luxury blighted us? Are we suffering the plague of plenty? Are we talking hard times and living good times? Is the Cross a mere symbol, or is it a decoration or an incarnation?

These questions bring us squarely up to the genuineness of our devotion and the force of our faith. The credentials of a Christian are not Sabbath observance, church membership, etc. These, of course, have their place and value, but one may do all these and not be Christ's. The tone, temper and motive of our lives must be akin to that of the Great Shepherd who gave his life for the sheep. His aims, ideals and spirit must hold sway over all we are and have. We must bear in our bodies the marks of the Lord Jesus Christ. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye love one another."

AN ANSWER.

Yes, there is a way out. However bad the conditions of the world we do not despair. We recognize the Church's Opportunity. The gospel is one adequate remedy. We must dare to follow the adventurous Christ. We must have a correct theology, a dignified ritualism and a reasonable amount of emotion but only to assist us in our contact with the lost. The Christ of Compassion must have such undisputed sway over us that we will be stripped of foolish pride, low ideals and mean ambitions and brought to such an enlistment of life and property as to compel us to leave our comfortable security and plunge forth to face danger and death with Jesus as he goes on his terrible mission of bringing the world back to goodness and God.

One of the ways into the great Revival for which so many of us long, is for the Church to come again with singleness of purpose to this "main business." If Methodism is Christianity in earnest, then we must bring to our missionary program "strong minds, brave hearts, true faith and ready hands." The bugle sounds, the army advances, Christ goes before! Dare we be slow to follow?

During an Indian mutiny at Delhi, the English general ordered his men to prepare for an attack. A regimental doctor was examining his men to see how many were strong enough to bear arms. He passed the cot of one sick lad and marked him too ill for battle, when the lad replied, "For God's sake, sir, don't say I am not fit for duty. It is only a touch of fever and the sound of the bugle will make me well."

HINDRANCES TO A REVIVAL.

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

Text. "Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?" Ps. 85:6. "O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy." Hab. 3:2.

FROM these passages we conclude that God is anxious to revive his work. May we not ask then, why do we not see greater manifestations in the work of soul saving? There can be but one answer—Hindrances. What are some hindrances to a revival? There are many, but we will give but three.

I. Prejudice.

What is prejudice? Divide the word and you have it—pre-judging. Many people are prejudiced and do not know it. You may be prejudiced and not be aware of it. Yea, you may be prejudiced to your own hurt; and this is a hindrance to God in his workings. A broad-minded man may become prejudiced, but upon investigation immediately changes his attitude. It is the little, narrow man who retains a biased feeling. Sad to say, there are many of them. Without saying a word, one can sit back and send forth mental waves of hate, or good will. This affects not only individuals but entire congregations.

You may be prejudiced against the speaker. You have heard or read something, and gotten an impression that will make it hard for him to help you. You may be prejudiced against the singer, or the song books used; you may be prejudiced against the method of altar work, or carrying on the meeting. You hear someone pray or speak, against whom you are prejudiced, and immediately you cease to fellowship and co-operate; hence you bring about a jar, a coldness, and thus instead of being a blessing and help yourself, you are a hindrance in the meeting. There are multitudes of good people in this fix. Is there any wonder that it is sometimes days and weeks before the "break" comes? It was when the disciples were with "one accord" that the Holy Ghost fell upon them. It seemed to require at least ten days. We can hurry up, or hinder the outpouring of the Spirit.

Prejudice is like the flaw in a window pane; a ray of sunlight may travel 97,000,000 miles in a straight direction, but when it reaches that little flaw, it is diverted and falls obliquely upon the floor. In like manner, the truth of God may have traveled from the eternal throne of God and passed down through the preacher's mind and heart; but when it reaches a prejudiced mind it is diverted and hardens rather than softens. It is an awful thing to have a biased, or prejudiced mind. You cannot afford to hinder yourself, or others. Better for you had you been born a heathen, than to be held responsible for hindering others.

II. Unconfessed Sin.

Now we come to another hindrance, more serious than that of prejudice. We read, "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whoso confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy." (Prov. 28:13).

A person who comes into a Gospel meeting with unconfessed sin in his past life will be like a 200 pound cake of ice in a baby's crib—the baby is bound to be affected thereby. He is like a water-soaked log which will not burn itself, nor let others burn and produce heat. He may pretend to be all right; he may assent to the truth; yea, he may take active part in the meeting, but if there is crookedness, or deception in his back life he will be a hindrance, rather than a help.

We were in a great camp meeting in Michigan. Five days had passed without a break. We became desperate and preached on confession and restitution. A preacher's wife sat beside her husband in the audience, and when the truth of God began to come like hail stones, she became uneasy, trying to find a place to hide. But she was overtaken by conviction and succeeded in getting her husband to retire to their tent, where she made the confession of her life. She told him that she had at various times felt she ought to make the acknowledgment, but upon feeling a little relief of conscience, concluded this was sufficient, and later doubted the importance of making an open confession. This is a trick of the devil. Remember, nothing is made right until it is made right! It is not enough while at the altar, or on a sick bed, or at the sacramental rail, to promise yourself that you will make certain things right; and then, as time passes and you feel less compunction of heart, conclude that after all, perhaps it is not necessary to make a detailed confession. Right here is where Satan has gained many a victory. And right here is where many a person has gone insane. He trifled with convictions and backed down from light until he got into despair. Then reason toppled from its throne and he went mad. Do not blame this on religion. The grace of God causes no one to go mad. It is for the want of grace that many lose their minds.

This woman's confession was about as follows: "Husband, I do not know what you will think of me. It may take all you have and all your father has, and all that my father has to make it right, but I can stand it no longer! Years ago when I was a young girl, another lady and I kept a millinery store. We did well and made money until the panic came, when we commenced to get behind and saw that we were going into bankruptcy. We had a nice stock of goods, but could not dispose of them. We had them insured and one dark night with my own wicked hand (after many attempts to resist the temptation), I finally yielded and struck the match that did the work, then hastily left the small building. In just a little while the place was in flames and, notwithstanding all the efforts put forth on the part of the townsmen everything went up in smoke. But the fire did not stop there, for the wind arose and two entire blocks were burned, thousands of dollars being involved. The people were very sorry for the two girls, and the insurance company came forward without a word and paid what our policy called for. That was years ago and I have been a most guilty wretch ever since. I frequently tried to make myself believe, (when overpowered by the Spirit), that all was well, but every time I hear red hot truth I get uneasy. This is my confession and a great load has rolled off my mind and heart."

It is needless to say that this one confession, though not made in public, brought so much of the presence and power of God upon that camp ground that other awful confessions were made. Backsliders, hypocrites and unconverted church members rushed to the altar in great numbers. Yes, unconfessed sin will hinder a revival.

Not only unconfessed sins, but unconfessed faults may hinder a revival. James says, "Confess your faults one to another that ye may be healed,"—in soul, mind, or body. There is much in this. We have known many cases where a humble confession of faults, brought both healing and salvation.

Faults in themselves may not be sinful, but when purposely covered up and defended, they may lead to sin. We are satisfied that many unsaved children would be brought to Christ if one, or both parents could only humble themselves and confess. For instance: confess your harshness, your scolding around the home, your being overbearing and over-exacting, your lack of tears and tenderness when you are reproving. We knew a preacher who gave his boy an awful beating because he smoked cigarettes. The boy left home and for many years has not been heard from. Had the father done some weeping back there, perhaps he and his wife would not be heart-broken now.

III. Bondage.

A spirit of bondage will hinder the operation of the Holy Spirit. Many times when a meeting is about to close, we hear a timid soul pray through and finally leap to his feet declaring, "I will not be in bondage any longer." For days he was in bondage to the evangelist, or his neighbor, or some visiting relative, but at last he flings the opinion of others to the winds and declares his freedom in God. Now, it was too bad that he did not get free at the beginning of the revival and thus many others would have been saved or helped by his example. If God wants you to give expression by an uplifted hand, or "Amen," the announcing of a hymn, or in any other way, do not quench the Spirit. "For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father," (Rom. 8:15).

These are some ways of hindering a revival, or camp meeting. Next week we shall give some helps to a revival.

$60,000,000.

GEO. H. MEANS, D.D.

R. H. C. Morrison requested me to write an article for THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD on the "Necessity for a Revival." I consented because it is an easy task; and a self-evident obligation, when we see millions madly and blindly running riot through a ruined world.

To mention the many reasons for the necessity for a revival would be a tedious and endless task. I will only give one outstanding reason—for every Christian to get into vital touch with God. Everything sacred in this world is involved in the issue. The Bible, the church, the school, the home, the country, all alike are threatened, and something must be done speedily to save, even civilization from a cyclone or disaster. I will only give one all-sufficient reason, which of itself, calls loud and long for a change of heart, a change of purpose, and a change of custom, and conduct.

Mr. Grantland Rice, the well-known Newspaper Correspondent, writing of that disgraceful affair, called the Battle of the Centuries, says that by a cursory estimate that fistic combat cost, at least $20,000,000. It cannot be claimed that Mr. Rice is a sensationalist; and it can be reasonably conjectured, if not demonstrated that his estimate is not excessive.

What are the items to be tabulated? Railway fare, hotel bills, admittance fee, radio expenditures, gambling losses, drinking bouts, to say nothing of the nameless forms of vice that cursed the occasion.

But this affair was only one out of four others they have "pulled off" during the year 1927. Counting these four at ten millions each, only half of the one already mentioned, and the whole, and we have the enormous total of $60,000,000 that was spent in one year for this brutal pastime!

And for what? Thirty minutes of savage glee for each. One hundred and twenty minutes of entertainment akin to the Death Dance around a tortured captive. What a record for a civilized country! What a comment on Christian influence! The Christians of this country could ring the curtain down on such scenes as these before the first act begins! Knowing the apathy of the churches, one of the actors in this diabolical play has the audacity to take God in partnership and claims that he was foreordained to be a bruiser, and predestined to win. How can Christians reconcile their consciences with these horrible facts, knowing that they could have killed this disgraceful evil in the bud, but took no concerted effort to do it?

Millions of men are without work, and their families without bread; the sick without comfort or care, and little babes clinging to the shrivelled breasts of want. How many hungry would sixty millions of dollars have fed! How many desolate homes made happy, and how many thanks would have been heard from the hollow voice of suffering, for a single meal?

How long would it take to raise $60,000,000, for the denizens of poverty? The flood sufferers of the South and the Kentucky mountains did not receive one-tenth of that amount, as they wandered homeless and hungry, shelterless and forlorn, in the maze of despair.

We may prate as we please about such an exhibition being "big business," "a national Industry," and that it puts money into circulation. But we know too, that any evil under the sun does the same thing. What do the money grabbers care for human woe? There are men, no doubt, in this country, and not a few, who for a few dollars, would import a leper colony into a community, if they knew that their own families would become infected with the curse. And it is the "Big Business" that too often appeals to the professed Christian, and catches them in its net. And if a revival of religion doesn't cure these misguided souls nothing will, or can; for it is the only power that even professes to do it. Nothing else holds out such a promise.

Suppose that they who aided and abetted, or even sympathized with that Chicago horror, should that night have been confronted with the visible form of Christ and he should have asked the assembled multitude: "Shall I give these millions to the Bruisers, or to the poor?" With one acclaim and one voice they would have shouted, "Give it to the poor." If men would be thus honest with God, they ought to be as candid with themselves, knowing that, at a greater assemblage they must meet that God and give an account of their stewardship.

Do you want further proof of the necessity for a revival? Look around you. See the carelessness of mothers; the disobedience of children, the heresy of teachers, the degrading customs and costumes; "spiritual wickedness in high places" and the sordid worldliness everywhere. If anything can cure this cancerous sore but a revival of religion, some genius should give us the remedy; by so doing he would render his name immortal.

Science does not even profess to give a cure for sin. Every moral code falls short of the mark. No theory known to man promises salvation from sin. The Eastern Cults, "With their fables of fancy, and legends of glory," can promise pardon for the act, but not deliverance from sin's guilt and power.

The religion of Christ is the only cure; and a revival of it is the world's only hope. In the great lazarretto of life where each infects others with his own sores, the one great Physician has the one great and only remedy for an epidemic that has cursed the world since the days of Adam.

As you know, I am an old man. I dearly love my church. While I am without narrow sectarian prejudices, I am a very thorough Methodist, and I desire to write on this subject as a sort of bystander, looking on the procession of current history and philosophizing a bit with reference to the drift, the thinking and action of the times and trying, if possible, to penetrate into the future and ask myself—with my friends—what may we expect?

Is there any probability that the smaller denominations with Methodist doctrine and polity, people that have branched off from, or been produced by, the root and life of the original Methodist revival under the Wesleys and their co-workers, might unite into one great evangelistic body? It does seem like such a union ought to be possible. If the Free Methodists, the Wesleyan Methodists, the Protestant Methodists, the United Brethren, the Evangelicals, the Nazarenes and the Pilgrims should unite into the UNITED METHODIST CHURCH OF CHRIST, or choosing whatever name most acceptable, they would become a powerful evangelical force in this nation and around the world. Such a union of churches would bring together a large body of evangelical Christians. These bodies mentioned are wonderfully free from modern skepticism. The small per cent. of modern liberals among them could join the Unitarian Church, or find a home among other bodies that are so liberal in their views and teachings that they could furnish shelter for almost any kind of skeptic.

If such an organization should take place, and our two great Methodist bodies should continue to drift toward modernism, with the teachings of evolution and a strong undercurrent of opposition toward evangelism, revivals, and emphasis upon those Christian experiences out of which Methodism was born, no doubt multitudes of people would flow into such an organization from both of our great sister churches.

I can but believe there would be great economy and possibilities in such a union. At the same time, I do not believe that we can expect any such union. Men become set in their ways and, whatever our Christianity may be, there is quite a bit of sectarian pride and prejudice in our religion. I never have been inclined to insist upon mere denominational union. The best and highest union is that union which comes when we are baptized by one Spirit into one body, regardless of denominational affiliation.

History teaches us that God has had a hard time dealing with great ecclesiasticisms. As denominations become large and wealthy they build magnificent cathedral churches which separate them from that great mass of humanity where the Gospel is most acceptable and makes most of its triumphs in the winning and nurture of souls. It seems to have been overlooked, in fact, almost forgotten, that our Lord said, "How hardly shall a rich man enter the kingdom of heaven." The struggle for wealth, both in and out of the church, would lead one to suppose that our Lord had said "How hardly shall a poor man enter the kingdom of heaven." Great ecclesiasticisms build institutions, create offices, breed ecclesiastic politics and men are in danger of ceasing to seek the power that comes down from God and give themselves up to seeking place and power over their fellowbeings. I suppose with our present state of civilization and spiritual attainment, with a dangerous per cent of men in a great ecclesiastical organization who seek after power rather than after souls, who so control and manipulate the affairs of the church, that we can not hope for a general union of the churches, or any great benefit if such should occur. I judge that we are not going to have an ideal state of things in this dispensation, but I wish to come closer to the subject I have in mind in a letter to you in next week's issue of this paper.

Faithfully yours,
H. C. MORRISON.

OUR NEED OF A REVIVAL.

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

THE supreme need of the United States at this time is a great revival of religion. It is needed to purify the social and civil life of the nation and to promote the progress of the kingdom of our Lord to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Edmund Burke said that "religion is the basis of civil society, and the fruitful source of all blessing and comfort in human intercourse." And such indeed is the case.

The life of a nation is feeble when its faith becomes faint. When religion withers, all things else begin to die, as if the dew of heaven had failed and the former and latter rain had not fallen on the parched earth.

Evangelical Christianity has been the inspiration of American institutions and the vital breath of the nation.

The colonizing movements out of which the thirteen original commonwealths sprang were pre-eminently religious in the motives and purposes which gave rise to them. M. de Tocqueville said most truly: "Religion gave birth to Anglo-American society."

Ours is a nation founded by faith and nourished by the bread of heaven.

The first settlers came to the shores of the New World out of great revivals in the British Isles, and their successors have been reinvigorated in strength and renewed in life by marvelous visitations of heavenly grace.

"The Great Awakening," which began in the latter part of December, 1734, had a vital relation to the birth of the Federal Union. Dr. Leonard Woolsey Bacon, in his "History of American Christianity," says with reference to the effect of that blessed revival: "The quickened sense of a common religious life and duty and destiny was no small part of the preparation for the birth of the future nation."

"The Wesleyan Revival," which prevailed in Great Britain about the same time, overflowed upon the American colonies and augmented the refreshing forces which, under the ministry of Edwards, the Tennents, and Whitefield, were renewing the spiritual life of the people. Of the benign results of that remarkable movement under the Wesleys and their helpers, W. E. H. Lecky, the skeptical historian, says in his "England in the Eighteenth Century":

"Although the career of the elder Pitt, and the splendid victories by land and sea that were won during his ministry, form unquestionably the most dazzling episodes in the reign of George II, they must yield, I think, in real importance to that religious revolution which shortly before had begun in England by the preaching of the Wesleys and Whitefield. The creation of a large, powerful, and active sect, extending over both hemispheres and numbering many millions of souls, was but one of its consequences. It also exercised a profound and lasting influence upon the spirit of the Established Church, upon the amount and distribution of the moral forces of the nation, and even upon the course of its political history."

In the year 1800, while the new republic was in its infancy, most fortunately came what has been called the "Great Revival of 1800," of which Dr. Heman Humphrey, one of the ablest presidents of Amherst College, declared: "It was the opening of a new revival epoch which has lasted now more than half a century with but short and partial interruptions—and, blessed be God, the end is not yet."

Dr. Robert Baird, in his interesting treatise entitled "Religion in America," says: "From this period it is unnecessary, and, indeed, impossible, to trace distinctly the progress of our revivals. They have become, if I may so speak, a constituent part of the religious system of our country. . . . So that he who would oppose himself to revivals, as such, would be regarded by most of our evangelical Christians as ipso facto an enemy to spiritual religion itself."

Revival fires burned, as Dr. Humphrey and Dr. Baird show, with greater or less frequency and fervency in our country during the first fifty years of the nineteenth century; and in 1858 the holy flame burst out in a blaze which lightened and warmed the whole nation.

Again, in the days of Moody and Sankey, during the seventies, a great work of grace abounded throughout our country and spread to the British Isles and Canada. Since then we have had no revival of religion which has attained to national extension. We have had no revival of continental width. Not for nearly two hundred years have the people of our country gone so long without such a blessed baptism from on high.

Local showers, which are not to be undervalued, have fallen here and there. But now we need far more than such limited revivals. We need a revival of religion that will encompass within its benign power the entire nation.

From the nature of Christianity arises the necessity for periodic revivals. It is such a lofty religion that under it alone is backsliding possible. There are no backsliders among Buddhists, Mohammedans, or any other pagan cult; they start at the bottom and remain, in spiritual inertia and degrada-

Prayers for Girls Prayers for Boys

TWO BOOKS

BY ELIZABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL.

It is with the ideal of helping the boy and girl to face life with God and to teach them to give true expression to their devotion, that these little books are sent out upon their mission. They enter into the inner sanctuary of the heart, and enable them to give utterance to longings and hopes which heretofore he or she may have been unable or unwilling to speak in the presence of God. A prayer for Courage, for Cheerfulness, for Fortitude under Failure, in Perplexity, in Sorrow, in Disappointment—these few titles show the wideness of the little books' range, and the depth of their understanding and sympathy. It is the ideal gift for every boy and girl in the Sunday Schools and Bible Classes of our churches. We have long needed just such books as these.

Familiar Failures

REV. CLOVIS G. CHAPPELL, D.D.

Applying that same fine ability for analysis which has distinguished his other volumes, Dr. Chappell in this book turns his attention to The Drifter, The Trifler, the man who is too busy, and other well-known types who make a failure of the business of life. He presents the type in a most engaging manner, and then shows the factors operative in each individual failure. An excellent addition to the fine series of character studies which have already given Dr. Chappell a wide and alert audience.

The Optimism of Premillennialism

H. C. MORRISON.

Our Lord Jesus, while on earth, plainly and repeatedly taught that he would come again, personally, into the world, and on account of this, this doctrine is very precious to this author. If you have an open mind to know what the Bible teaches on the second coming, you will be delighted with the contents of this book.

Cloth, Price $1.00.

The Red Road to Royalty

BY AKERS.

Dr. Akers very forcibly calls attention to the inevitable road, and makes it very plain that every personality, nation and race which hopes to arrive at the true goal of character, happiness and service, must take the road that Christ pointed out two thousand years ago. Ten sermons.

Cloth binding. Price $1.50.

Fox's Book of Martyrs

A history of the lives, sufferings and triumphant deaths of the early Christian and Protestant martyrs. It tells the story of some of the most thrilling periods in Christian history when "a noble army, men and boys, the matron and the maid," "climbed the steep ascent of heaven, 'mid peril, toil and pain.'" It is thrilling and convicting. 370 large pages. Good clear type, beautifully printed and bound.

Dying Testimonies of Saved and Unsaved

BY S. B. SHAW.

Multitudes have gone to heaven by giving heed to the testimonies and example of the righteous. This book records those bright shining examples of departing Christians who leave on record something to guide the pilgrim through life. On the other hand the dying testimonies of the wicked reveal in a startling way the "wages of sin" and the end of a misspent life. This book may be used effectively by ministers and gospel workers.

Doran's Minister's Manual for 1928

BY REV. G. B. F. HALLOCK, D.D.

The third annual edition of a book which has proven indispensable to thousands of ministers in the preparation and delivery of sermons. Its purpose is to give perspective to the whole year's program. It begins with the first Sunday in January, and includes sermon outlines, suggested prayers, illustrations, helps for the Sunday School lesson, plans for the Wednesday evening service, and innumerable seeds for thought and discussion upon themes related to parish life. The acclaim with which it has been met, both in the press and in the ministry, has now established it beyond question in the publishing field.

An Ideal Book for Girls.

A BEAUTIFUL GIFT BOOK.

It is dedicated to the growing girl, the girl who has problems, heartaches, and disappointments. It is written by a mother who understands girls, and who out of her mother-heart has longed to help them, and who is a successful worker of long experience among girls. So well does the author understand girls that she writes as though she were their big sister.

The girl's heart takes fresh courage as this book companion helps lift her over the hard places and guides her through the valleys.

The First Soprano

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The underlying motive of this excellent piece of Christian fiction, into which is woven a fascinating love story, is the consecration of life and talent to God. It peers through the superficiality of mere profession, and the hypocrisy of certain features of Church life and appeals strongly for reality in Christian experience.

You will find it one of the most interesting stories you have ever read. Price, $1.00.

The Children's Big Bible Story Book

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD.

In words of easy reading, illustrated with fifty world-famous masterpieces of sacred art, in many colors. The book is beautifully bound in cloth, stamped in gold with an illustrated jacket printed in many colors. The size is 7½x9½x1½ in. thick.

The Bible stories are printed in extra large bold type and they cover the Old and New Testaments. It is a book that would ordinarily sell for $3.00, but on account of the very large edition printed, we are enabled to sell them at $1.25 each, postpaid.

Possibilities

BY MCCLURE.

We know of no book on the market so suggestive to young people. The following from the table of contents will give the reader an idea of the richness of these pages: "Finding our Possibilities," "Protecting our Possibilities," "Developing our Possibilities," "The Possibility of Our Time," "The Power for Good of One Person," etc. Neatly bound in cloth, 160 pages, a regular $1.00 value that we are selling for 60c.

OUR NEED OF A REVIVAL.

tion, at the bottom. But the Christian religion ever calls backsliders to return from their waywardness and incites all saints to rise to higher ground. For a Church or a nation to go without a revival for any extended period means widespread backsliding and a general decline in true Scriptural piety.

Such is the condition of our country after an almost revivalless period extending over nearly or quite fifty years.

Let prayers ascend to heaven that this parched period may soon end in a "time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." (Acts 3:19).

To this end the nation must be called to genuine repentance and brought back to God. The people have gone far from him in a period of unexampled prosperity and extravagant worldliness.

"O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy." (Hab. 3:2).—The Missionary Voice.

GOSPEL SINGING.

PROF. HAMP SEWELL.

We read in the Bible that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation, therefore we wish to speak of the importance of gospel singing.

The word "music" is a Greek term which includes all the learning of the Muses. Of all the fine arts music is the most comprehensive. The majesty of the Architect, the pictures of the painter, the rhythm of the poet, the form of the sculptor, and the theme of all these belongs to the Musician, whether he sits at the instrument or pours out his soul in vocal melodies.

A fable tells of Mercury stretching strings of dried skin across a shell and striking them with his fingers, invented the Lyre. The bow as an instrument was probably first used by the Warrior who, as he described his successes in battle unconsciously twanged the string of his bow. It was later discovered that the bow when drawn across certain hollow objects produced a pleasing sound; from that the lute and violin were invented.

Music is the universal language. You may not understand a man's speech but you will his music. It is a means of communication between men. Whatever the clime that has given them birth the most responsive of all the arts, the most human. It most nearly breathes and feels, yea even sees and interprets all the varying emotions of the soul. Through it we breathe our love, tell of our disappointments and sorrows, express our desires and ambitions, give voice to our joy and pleasure, sing our praise, unite friendship and worship God.

We are told that when the foundations of the earth were laid the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy. From that moment in creation when the brooks went singing down the hillsides of Eden, and the birds made glad the dawn of time with their thrilling melodies, to the time when St. John heard the heavenly strains in the Holy City, and throughout eternity, music has had and will have an indisputable place in the mind, heart, and soul of man. In the birth of Christianity music played a great part. Mary sang in the wonderful measures of the Magnificat, Angels sang their jubilant hallelujah chorus, Shepherds sang in strains of devout ecstasy and the church has been singing ever since. Christianity has done more for music than any one force in the world. Paganism does not sing; it laments; but every Christian church, however humble, is a Conservatory of sweetest music, and the noble service of the great historic church set to the majestic tunes created for the purpose, is the one most inspiring factor in the life of humanity. John the beloved had a foretaste of the beauty of Heaven when an exile on Patmos. In the midst of the boundless sea there was given to him, in his awful loneliness and isolation, a vision of the New Jerusalem, such as never before nor since has been granted to living man. And he heard that sublime music as the voice of many waters, as recorded in the text.

When Handel was writing his Hallelujah Chorus he said, "I saw all Heaven open before me and the great God himself appeared." The music opened the windows of his soul to see the wonders of another world bring the two worlds so close by the great composition that the Master was entranced by the strains of his own masterpiece.

But I speak now more distinctly of gospel singing as a great means of grace in the salvation of men. Gospel singing is singing the gospel, whether as a soloist or a general song director. Gospel singing occupies a more distinct place and is a larger service in all church and revival efforts today than ever before. Twenty-five years of experience in directing gospel singing has taught me some important things as a song leader. First, a real gospel song leader must be a man of God and have the Holy Spirit to guide and empower him for his work. Musicianship and voice culture mean much but

AN OVERFLOW.

There have been so many who are interested in our Revival Number of The Pentecostal Herald, and who have been kind enough to send us articles on this all-important subject, that we shall have good things along this line in later issues of The Herald. We appreciate, genuinely, the splendid and most opportune articles we have received and will promise the authors to give them a place in The Herald columns at an early date. We can conceive of no more important subject upon which to dwell at this time, than that of true revivals of religion which are so ably discussed by our consecrated contributors. So we would ask you to look out for something good in the issues to follow, until we have given you the cream of thought along this line.

cannot take the place of the Holy Spirit's leadership in gospel singing. Much depends on the selection of the hymns for the meeting. A real song leader prays and makes a study of moving the people and preparing their hearts for the reception of the word of God. A good foundational hymn in the beginning, and then a gospel song lifting the people from time to time until the congregation is stilled and hearts are in a condition to hear the word of God. A gospel singer is to sing and get the people singing. Do not talk the service to death between the verses of the song, you have no time to teach a singing school and no one cares to hear you exploit your knowledge or play the jokes during the song service. I have seen many good meetings almost ruined by such carrying on. Usually the less a man knows the more of this outside freight he hitches on.

Again revival efforts are sometimes hindered by the selection of invitation hymns. You must study conditions and have a hymn ready. Too much lapse of time between the given invitation and the singing hurts the service. Be sure your selection is an invitation hymn and adopted. "Just as I am without one plea" is a great invitation hymn if the Spirit is manifestly moving on the people, but for a cold, dragging service this will not do. God must lead in these matters.

The gospel solo before the sermon or at the close is a great means of grace if properly done. "It was the gospel solo that reached me last night; it brought conviction to my heart and was the means of leading me to accept the Lord Jesus Christ as my personal Savior." Many a time we have heard such testimonies and because of this we are convinced that there is a large place for the gospel solo in the Christian service. Anthems and the heavier works in music should also have careful attention. Many altar services are greatly hindered by injudicious singing and buzzy talking in the ears of the penitents. Give the penitents time to pray and trust God to lead you in your altar singing.

Let me urge the singing of the old church hymns occasionally, such as "Amazing Grace", to the tune Pisgah, "How firm a foundation," "There is a Fountain filled with blood," "A charge to keep I have," "Come, humble sinner," and many others when sung in the Spirit stir the emotions and prepare the hearts for the preached word. Finally, let the Holy Spirit lead and direct you in all your work, thereby making gospel singing, as intended, a means of grace in redeeming a lost world back to God.

Notice!

We wish to announce that Rev. E. L. Eaton, former field representative of Asbury College, is no longer solicitor for that institution, and all monies subscribed through him for Asbury College should be sent to the Business Manager, Mr. C. A. Lovejoy, Wilmore, Ky. In order that confusion may be avoided and monies promptly receipted, let all friends of Asbury College who wish to pay on their subscriptions send their checks direct to Mr. Lovejoy.

Let's Make This a Book Christmas.

Friends, money is a gift from the Lord which we are expected to use for his glory as much as we are expected to use our talents for his glory. For this reason, if for no other, not to say anything of the seed that may be sown, and the good that may be done, let us buy Christmas gifts for our friends and loved ones that will last through the year, yea, through the years, all the while bearing fruit in holy living and worthy ambitions.

Send to The Pentecostal Publishing Company for a catalog of their books, if you do not find what you wish in the splendid books, Bibles and Mottoes advertised in its columns. Money invested in a good book is truly "bread cast upon the waters, that shall be gathered many days hence." Send your orders early, that delay may be avoided.

Yours, wishing for you the best.

THREE BIBLE EXHORTATIONS OR THREE PROMISES FOR A REVIVAL.

Rev. A. D. Houglin.

This is an age of progress. Scientifically and educationally the world is progressing as never before. It needs an aeroplane and a radio to keep up with the movements of the day. We are living in an age when society has lost her chastity, politics her statesman, and religion her moral conviction, sanctity and grace. It is true we are very religious; as much so as the idol worshippers at Athens. We worship many gods; the goddess of fashion, the gods of lust, pride, money, worldly schemes and modern devices out of harmony with the word of God. All over the land there is the cry of the form of godliness without the power thereof.

"Religion without God!" A serious accusation. Like a baby playing with a dollar or some little toy we are only apprentices in religion. We are only imitating true religion. Many modern preachers are a fulfilment of New Testament prophecy; seducers crept in unawares, mockers of the faith once for all delivered to the saints, doubters breeding unbelief, ravening wolves in sheep's clothing, stealing money from the pockets of the people while they withhold from them the bread of life. They have taken the fire out of hell, the gold out of heaven, the inspiration out of the Scriptures, the deity out of Christ, the blood out of the atonement, and the rewards and promises out of sacrificial living.

H. G. Wells says: "That unless the modern civilization slackens its pace it is coming to self-destruction."

In the face of the above facts is there any hope of a revival that will counteract and overcome the present tendencies? The Book of books gives a thorough and complete answer: 2 Chron. 7:14 says, "If my people who are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sins, and heal their land." Another assurance is given in the words of the prophet Hosea, (10:12) "Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy; break up your fallow ground; for it is time to seek the Lord, till he come and rain righteousness upon you."

The prophecy of Malachi to apostate Israel is not without the exhortation and promise; (Mal. 3:10-12). "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before her time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed; for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts."

To read of the mighty revival awakening now taking place in China is enough to stir the heart of any believer with inspiration and hope. In answer to the question of the text: "Wilt thou not revive us again; that thy people may rejoice in thee," be fully assured that if the people of God will meet God's conditions—to pray, to humble themselves, to sow to themselves in righteousness, to bring all the tithes into the storehouse; the time is not far distant when the Lord will come and open the windows of heaven and rain righteousness until there shall not be room enough to receive it. Amen! Even so, Lord Jesus.

TRAINING YOUTH FOR EVANGELISM.

Mrs. J. M. Glenn.

Volumes could be written regarding the work with the young people in an evangelistic campaign. It is indeed the most important phase of this great work inasmuch as ninety-five percent of all who ever join the church, do so before the age of twenty-five and those thus won have a lifetime of service to offer their Lord, with life still plastic to his touch.

There are some revivals that seem to fall short of their highest service to the church in this important field, not because they do not place proper emphasis on conversion, but because they fail to do what might be accomplished in establishing the youth of the church in right habits of Christian living. Some may reply that the revival campaign is too brief a period to attempt much along this line, or that the work of Christian nurture belongs peculiarly to the pastor after the revival closes. It is true that the pastor and his co-workers must "carry on" afterwards, but very worthwhile results can be secured in establishing these groups in right habits and in leaving them in a frame of mind to couple up quickly and effectively with the church activities. Undoubtedly the best time for this is while these young lives are still aglow with the joy of their new found experiences in grace. The Young People's Worker needs to undertake every step of the work in closest co-operation with the pastor and his associates in the organized work of the church, Sunday school, League and Missionary Society. In these days the church is rightly laying the emphasis on the importance of training schools. Why not make the work with the young people in the evangelistic campaign a training school in the most important essentials of effective Christian living? What are some of the things the Young Christian worker most needs to learn?

Shall we not answer, first of all to understand what it means to become a Christian, second to acquire a love for Bible reading, third to learn what it is to sit at the Master's feet in a "School of Prayer," to use Andrew Murray's fine phrase; then to appreciate their responsibilities in church attendance, stewardship and loyalty to the high ideals of the church in "keeping oneself unspotted from the world"; to acquire a zeal for soul winning, and above all, to so enter their inheritance in the sanctified life, that they can truly say with Paul, "For me to live is Christ."

Young people are needing to find their way into God's plan for their life work and to realize the necessity for proper preparation for all successful achievement. Vocational guidance is one of the youth's most urgent needs, as mistakes at this point are back of so many wasted lives. This work offers rare chances to make vivid the opportunities for service in the ministry, mission fields, both at home and abroad, medicine, teaching, business, etc., and to show the relation of these callings to the coming of Christ's kingdom.

A half hour, or better still, a forty minute young people's service, just preceding the night preaching service can, under the right leadership, accomplish much along these important lines. If all these truths are properly proclaimed in the main preaching services, the emphasis on them in dealing with these age groups in their own services will wonderfully help to crystallize their thinking into purpose and action. I say age groups, for it will usually be wise, especially in the larger churches, to separate the children from the young people.

If the Epworth League can be made to feel the responsibility for enlisting the young people to attend these meetings, it will be found in far better shape spiritually and numerically at the close of the revival. The League's motto, "All for Christ" and its great covenants, the Quiet Hour Covenant, the Stewardship Covenant, the Life Service Covenant, dovetail admirably with the special work of this young people's meeting, as outlined above.

It is well at the very beginning to ask some of the young people themselves to make as complete lists as possible of those who should attend these services, those in high school looking after their number, those in business after theirs. Let them check the names of those who are not members of any church. A canvass of the business section will reveal the names of many young people in stores, offices, garages and shops who are seldom if ever invited to a religious service. The young people should assist in making this canvass. Have them notice who are absent the first few services and call the names of eight or ten absentees each night asking those who will invite them, to raise the hand as each name is called. If you have wide-awake young people handling the lists this will not consume much time and the young people will be interested and enlisted in personal work without making it embarrassing to anyone.

As we have stated above, one of our most urgent needs is to cultivate a love for Bible reading. Very, very few have ever read the entire New Testament. A surprisingly large number have never even read an entire Gospel. Such young people become an easy prey to the skeptical teachings they encounter on every hand, in school, magazine, and the movie of the day. They are right in the period of life when most reading is done, yet the Bible is neglected. It has been found quite easy to get at least ten or twelve out of a group of forty or fifty to try the experiment of sitting down some evening and reading a gospel straight through as they would any other story book. The Bible becomes a new book to them. They come from such an experience with a zest that sometimes carries them through all four gospels and Acts before the meeting closes. Bible study has become a delight rather than a chore. The memorizing of outstanding scripture passages for ease in personal work, increases their love for the very wording of the Book of books. Beautiful Bible prayers, such as Psa. 139:23, 24; 19:14; 51:10; Jude 24, 25 may be used as opening and closing prayers, repeated in unison. These great utterances of the soul's need that have come to us out of the past, will greatly enrich the spiritual life. In the quiet of their own services, under the heart-searchings that come with the revival, the young people make marked progress in expressing their needs in prayer. With heads bowed and eyes closed even the most timid will lift the hand requesting the leader to remember them in prayer, thus making a beginning in the right direction. When stories, scriptures, posters have been used illustrating what it means to become a Christian and to know further the sanctifying presence of the Holy Spirit in the surrendered heart, it will be well to ask each one present to write a little note expressing the individual's religious needs, the notes to be used as a basis for private, intercessory prayer on the part of the leader. In the midst of a spiritual battle like that of a revival campaign we need to remember in our praying, St. Paul's words, "So fight I as not beating the air." The last ten minutes of some service about midway in the revival period can be used for this note writing. The leader should be provided with small sheets of paper and pencils to facilitate the writing. In this way many gladly open their hearts who are otherwise extremely difficult to reach. The notes open the way for very effective personal work. Following this, the leader can ask certain ones to remain for a few minutes of personal counsel, while the others go in, and very often the needy ones can be led to a prayer of surrender that might be missed in the general service and this personal help will precipitate a public confession there.

If the whole series of brief services be built upon the thought of soul winning, using stories, memory verses, striking instances and definite assignments, through personal interviews, it is almost always possible to secure and train a small inner circle of workers who are on fire with the joy of winning their friends to Christ. These groups sometimes become permanent soul winning bands, helping the pastor to follow up the work and secure further evangelistic results after the close of the meeting.

To make the Bible study more fruitful, a brief Bible Study Course, consisting of five lessons on "Full Salvation" has been prepared by the writer and effectively used in this work. Each lesson centers in a Bible story and is reinforced with some of the most important verses to be used in personal work. These booklets on Full Salvation for the use of the young people, may be secured from The Pentecostal Publishing Company, at a nominal price.

In this age when so many worldly and skeptical influences are undermining the spiritual life of our young people, let us redouble our efforts for their salvation.

A GREAT REVIVAL IN JERUSALEM.

Herman C. Jones.

In the book of Nehemiah we have an account of a revival in the city of Jerusalem, which took place something over four hundred years before the Christian era. This revival, like the one in Wesley's day, was far-reaching in its influence and saved the Jewish nation from annihilation. No doubt the kingdom of Judah would have met the fate of the Ten Tribes had it not been for this religious awakening. Not only this, but in all probability the revelation which God had entrusted to the Jewish nation would have been lost and the world left in total darkness so far as spiritual truth is concerned, but for this outpouring of God's Spirit upon his people. How wonderful is the providence of God in that he has always raised up some man in every crisis of the world's history to lead his people out of darkness into light just at the moment when it seemed that the cause of religion must go down in defeat.

Now this Jerusalem revival had its birth in the heart of a layman who was born in a heathen city more than a thousand miles from Jerusalem, and who in all probability had never seen the Holy City. This layman was Nehemiah, the son of Hachaliah, who, though a descendant of the Jewish captives who were carried to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar when Jerusalem was burned, because of his splendid character and marked ability had risen to a position of great honor in the Persian court. He is one of the greatest characters in Bible history and deserves a place among the world's greatest patriots.

He was a man of deep piety, great courage, a born leader, possessed marked ability as an organizer, was a man of great determination, patience, prudence, humility and unselfishness. He possessed great wealth and used it to better the condition of his people. He was cup bearer to Artaxerxes, King of Persia, and was greatly beloved by this heathen king. One is impressed in reading an account of this Jerusalem revival with the radical, almost revolutionary, changes which were wrought in the economic, social and religious life of the Jewish exiles, who had returned after the Babylonian captivity, to Jerusalem.

Revivals after this fashion are not the offspring of chance. There are great fundamental principles which underlie every outstanding religious awakening which has come to bless the world. If we can discover these principles we will have found the laws which govern revivals of religion. A careful study of this Jerusalem revival under the leadership of Nehemiah, will reveal to us these fundamental principles.

Much Know Conditions.

First of all Nehemiah sought information concerning conditions in Jerusalem. There is no hope of arousing a church, community, state or nation, so long as your leaders shut their eyes to conditions and cry peace, peace, when there is no peace.

What did Nehemiah's investigation reveal?

1. The walls of the city had been broken down.
2. The temple was all but deserted and was in ill repair.
3. The study of God's word was neglected.
4. There was but little regard for the laws of God.
5. The Holy Sabbath was desecrated.
6. The leaders of the people had married heathen wives.
7. The priesthood was time-serving.
8. The rich were idle, self-indulgent and oppressive.
9. The poor had mortgaged their lands and homes and many of them had been forced to sell their sons and daughters into bondage.
10. The tithe for the support of the church was withheld and public worship had fallen into decay.

Now compare conditions as Nehemiah found them in that ancient city with present day conditions, and what do you find? The thoughtless, pleasure-mad multitudes go on their way heedless of the National and worldwide perils which confront us and threaten to destroy us. Witness the unrest and bitterness among European nations. The atheism in Russia, the revolution in China, the rebellion in Mexico. The walls which protect our civilization are in danger of being broken down and we are in great peril. Our homes are threatened with destruction by commercialism on the one hand and infidelity to the marriage vow on the other. The church is being shorn of her strength through worldliness. Family altars are almost a thing of the past. God's word is neglected by the masses and German rationalism has found its way into many of our American colleges and universities. There is but little regard for the Sabbath and many of our people absent themselves from the house of prayer. Profiteers and gamblers in the necessities of life have made living among the poor almost intolerable.

Deep Concern, Fasting, Prayer, Confession.

In the second place, when Nehemiah has looked the facts squarely in the face and realizes the awful distress of his people in Palestine and how greatly they are afflicted he is deeply moved and for nearly four months weeps and mourns over Jerusalem and gives himself to fasting, prayer and confession. Only men of great strength of character are capable of such emotion in times of public calamity. When our hearts are broken because of the sins of the people and we give ourselves to fasting, prayer and confession the revival fires will begin to burn. John Knox cried, "Give me Scotland or I die," and God gave him Scotland. David Brainerd was in such an agony of prayer for the Indians that he all but sweat drops of blood, and a great revival followed. Prayer changes things. God hears the prayer of Nehemiah and gives him access to the heart of a heathen king and opens up the way for him to go to Jerusalem.

Obstacles that were insurmountable were removed and the impossible was made possible through prayer. Prayer is not a way in which we get God to do our work, but a way in which God gets us to do his work. If the church could only learn this lesson the revival we have been talking about would become a reality.

Must Organize for Work.

After a long and wearisome journey of over a thousand miles the expedition under the leadership of Nehemiah arrived at Jerusalem. Nehemiah made a careful survey of the ruins that he might decide just what should be done, and organized his forces accordingly. Every man is given a task to perform. Every man is expected to build the wall over against his own home.

Must Meet and Overcome Opposition.

Then enemies ridicule, threaten and resort to open violence. Nehemiah arms his workmen and commands them to fight if necessary. Watch, pray, work, fight—this was his program. He was invited to talk the matter over with his enemies and he answered, "I am engaged in a great work and can't come down." No time to argue with the devil. An attempt was made at blackmail. God's servant must have a clean record. They sought to frighten him. Perfect love casts out all fear. Prayer was the principal weapon in this campaign. If the church would go forward with a great evangelistic campaign she will have to advance on her knees.

By the Foolishness of Preaching.

"It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." For the first time in the history of the Jewish nation preaching takes the place of ritualistic forms and ceremonies. Ezra, the priest, standing upon a pulpit of wood, which had been set up in a public square, reads the law of Moses to the people and explains it to them.

The great revival under Wesley was due to the fact that he preached the Word to the common people. The Gospel of Jesus Christ is still the power of God unto salvation and the same great truths that made Felix tremble will bring conviction to the hearts of men today. O, that every pastor might realize this, and preach the Word. Nothing less than this will bring a revival.

Having declared the whole counsel of God unto the people, Ezra calls upon them to turn from their sins and do works meet for repentance. Nehemiah deals with flagrant violators of the law and gives them to understand that unless they reform they will be punished according to law. Some wholesome discipline just at this time would have a salutary effect.

In brief outline we have considered the program of Nehemiah in promoting this revival at Jerusalem and I think we have discovered the fundamental principles which underlie every genuine revival of religion. God honored the faith and zeal of this earnest layman, Nehemiah, and poured out of his Spirit upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem. The fire fell, the people were convicted of sin, the refreshing showers of God's grace came, the thirsty land was refreshed and the revival becomes a reality. By way of emphasis let me repeat what has already been said:

The revival will not come until we lift up our eyes and look on the fields. We must know conditions.

The revival will not come until

"Lord, I Believe."

BY ROBERT G. LEE.

With a faith altogether disarming in its depth and eloquence, this distinguished pastor shows the credibility of the most miraculous events recorded in the Bible. He never attempts to hedge or compromise; resting his case upon the postulate that God is the sovereign and not the slave of the universe, he finds the marvels of modern science and the incredible works of man adequate grounds for his belief in miracles. These he presents with cumulative effect, and the contagion of his faith as well as the force of his argument will make his book an inspiration of extraordinary character. Price $1.50.

there is a greater passion for souls. When we fast and pray and confess, the fire will begin to burn. There must be deep concern.

The revival will not come while three-fourths of the members of the church stand idle in the market place. There is work for every one. Let us pray that God will send laborers into the harvest field. We must organize for work.

The revival will not come so long as the church flirts with the world, and compromises with the devil. We must meet and overcome opposition.

The revival will not come so long as we substitute other things, however popular they may be, for the preaching of the word. It is God's plan that men shall be saved by The foolishness of preaching. When these five fundamental principles are observed the revival will come.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson XI.—December 11, 1927.

Subject.—Isaiah Counsels Rulers. Isaiah 37:5-11, 14-20.

Golden Text.—Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is staid on thee; because he trusteth in thee. Isaiah 26:3.

Time.—About B. C. 700.

Place.—Judah.

Introduction.—Our lesson today covers too much territory for us to do more than give a bird's-eye view of it. It reaches out far beyond the limits in the printed lesson, and takes in other rulers as well as other times in the history of Isaiah's people. The lesson first deals with king Ahaz in the 7th chapter. Here we have a dramatic scene. Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, have determined to make war against Ahaz, king of Judah. Ahaz becomes desperately frightened. Turning to 2 Kings 16:7, we find that he sent messengers to Tiglathpilezer, king of Assyria, saying, I am thy servant, and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and out of the hand of the king of Israel, which rise up against me." Then he robbed the house of Jehovah of all its silver and gold, and took the silver and gold from his own house, and sent it all as a present to the king of Assyria to induce him to come to his help. At this juncture Isaiah appeared on the scene, and warned Ahaz not to do this thing. God would destroy their enemies, and deliver his people from their combined foes. The prophet went so far as to deliver his wonderful prophecy recorded in verse 14: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." But nothing that he could say was sufficient to encourage the frightened king. Maybe he was a bit stubborn—frightened men often are hard to turn from their course. Isaiah told him what the consequences would be, and left him to himself. God warns men; but they must act for themselves, or perish.

The next section of the lesson takes us into the 31st chapter of Isaiah's prophecy. Again Judah is sending for help. Forsaking the help of Jehovah, they are calling upon the Egyptians for assistance against their enemies. Again Isaiah comes forward with another warning: "Now the Egyptians are men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit. When the Lord shall stretch forth his hand, both he that helpeth shall fall, and he that is holpen shall fall down, and they all shall fail together." Sending to Egypt for horses and soldiers cannot win Jehovah's battles; for he will not divide honors with his enemies. When we employ all sorts of worldly means to carry on the work of the Church, I wonder if we are not sending to Egypt for men and horses?

Moving on into the 37th chapter of the book of Isaiah, we come to a study that parallels in some measure the two cases already mentioned. The king of Assyria decided to make war against Hezekiah, king of Judah and sent his servant Rabshakeh to deliver his ultimatum. Rabshakeh was very boastful. He warned the Jews to pay no attention to anything that Hezekiah might say or do. While his master conquered and crushed other nations, their gods had been powerless to deliver them out of his hand; and he warned the people of Judah not to put any trust in Jehovah, that he would not assist them in battle against the hosts of the king of Assyria.

When Eliakim, Sheba and Joah brought to Hezekiah the news that Rabshakeh, the servant of the king of Assyria, had come to declare war against Judah, his mind was quite different from that of Ahaz when Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, were about to make war upon the Jews. Instead of calling upon a heathen king for aid, Hezekiah "rent his clothes, and covered himself with sackcloth, and went into the house of the Lord." That was the proper thing to do; for when trouble was threatening his kingdom, it meant that the people had sinned against Jehovah; and he as head of the nation was the one who should lead them in repentance. He also clothed Eliakim, Sheba and the elders of the priests with sackcloth, and sent them to the prophet Isaiah with a message concerning the boastful words of "Rabshakeh, whom the king of Assyria his master hath sent to reproach the living God." He requested Isaiah to pray for the remnant that was left in the land. This was the right and sensible thing to do, as the lesson will show.

Comments on the Lesson.

6. When the servants of Hezekiah came to Isaiah, and laid the case before him, he directed them to tell their master: "Thus saith the Lord. Be not afraid of the words that thou hast heard—wherewith the servants of the king of Assyria hath blasphemed me." The prophet heard from Heaven: he could speak definitely. It is a fine thing when one is on God's side in any issue. President Lincoln never said a finer thing than when he stated that he was not concerned as to whether God was on the side of the Union army, but that he was much concerned as to whether the Union army was on God's side. It makes a big difference whether or not we are on God's side.

7. Behold, I will send a blast upon him, and he shall hear a rumor, and return to his own land.—How easily God can thwart our worst enemies. He needs but to speak, and Satan runs from the weakest saint. I will cause him to fall by the sword in his own land.—He could not leave so much as his dead body on the soil of Judah. Jehovah would drive him away in a storm, and have a secret enemy finish the work hard by his throne.

8. Rabshakeh returned.—After delivering his message, he does not seem to have waited for an answer from Hezekiah, but returned immediately to his master. Found the king of Assyria warring against Libnah.—Libnah was a desert stronghold of the Israelites. The army of the Assyrian king was attacking this stronghold of the Jews when Rabshakeh returned to the armies along the Mediterranean.

9. Other troubles were coming against Assyria. News reached the heathen king that "Tirhakah king of Ethiopia" had come forth for war against him. This stirred him to quick action; for he did not wish this piece of news to reach the ears of Hezekiah, thinking it might give him courage to resist his demands. Wherefore he sent messengers to Jerusalem post haste.

10. Let not thy God, in whom thou trustest, deceive thee, saying, Jerusalem shall not be given into the hand of the king of Assyria.—Little did he know about the power of Jehovah; or if he knew, he made a desperate effort to shake the faith of Hezekiah. One word from Jehovah meant more than all his boasting.

11. Thou hast heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all lands by destroying them utterly.—The horrible brutality of ungodly rulers has surpassed that of the beasts of the jungles. They have had no mercy. We skip some verses wherein we have the boasting of the Assyrian king of the fact that none of the gods of the heathen nations had been able to defend their people against his armies.

14. Hezekiah received the letter and spread it before the Lord.—This was the written demand brought by Rabshakeh. He took it to the proper place. Take your troubles to God, and leave them with him: he will see to them.

15. Hezekiah prayed unto the Lord. That was good. A clean, praying ruler is worth a whole army of cursing ones. They bless their people; but "when the wicked rule, the people mourn."

16 to 20. I see no reason why I should quote this beautiful prayer, or why I should make any effort to explain it. It is so simple that a little child can understand it. Will you take time to look into the dignity of it. Hezekiah's attitude before Jehovah is with deepest reverence. It does not remind us of much of the flippant praying we sometimes hear in this day. Read with care verse 16: "O Lord of hosts, God of Israel, that dwellest between the cherubims, thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth: thou hast made heaven and earth." There is neither soul nor brains enough in the modernistic evolutionist to pray such a prayer as that. O that our prayers might once more take on the awful dignity and sublimity of the prayers of the old-time saints. Maybe God would lend an attentive ear.

JUST TO TELL YOU

That I know of a man who is preaching in the Mountains of Kentucky, with a large family, and scarcely any income, who would be glad to get any cast-off clothing that any one may have to send them. Don't bother about age or size—anything you have can be used—if not for themselves, for the needy ones about them. Whatever the Lord may lay on your heart to send them address it to Rev. Charles A. REVIVALS AND PERSONAL WORK.

Rev. Jack Linn.

In the apple country they tell me that the hand-picked fruit is the best. It brings the best prices. This is true, in a great measure, in revivals. Personal work is likened unto hand-picked fruit. Many times when the appeals of the Gospel will not reach the heart, a personal word from a consecrated personal worker will bring the desired results.

Heaven alone will reveal the many souls that have been saved through personal work. A warm handshake, a kind word, a verse of Scripture, a smile, and tender urging has brought many a soul to the place of prayer. The Bible says the angels rejoice over one sinner that repents, and sometimes I think that means the one that is brought to God by the personal touch.

Maybe I am a bit prejudiced in favor of personal work, because it was through this method that I was brought to God. A kind lady came from the choir down to the seat, away back near the door, where I was sitting, and asked me to come up into the choir loft. A general appeal would not have caused me to leave my seat, but her personal invitation moved me. And then the preacher preached, and he preached good. He exhorted in due time, and gave an invitation in a general way. Of course, I did not think he meant me. Although my heart was hungry and I wanted the invitation, yet for some reason I thought it was for everybody but me.

They were singing the last song. It was "Softly and Tenderly Jesus Is Calling." It was the last verse. The meeting would soon close. And yet it did not seem to dawn on my convicted heart that the invitation was for me. My eyes were full of tears, a great lump was in my throat. I wanted to go, but surely they did not mean me. And just as the song was in the last lines of the chorus, the evangelist came to me, and sweetly and personally invited me to the altar. I dropped my book, and rushed to the place of prayer. Oh, how glad I was for that personal invitation. They did mean me after all. I found God that night. He has been with me ever since. Is it any wonder that I believe in personal work?

I confess that, to my mind, personal work is the most difficult work. The devil fights it. I suppose he knows that it pays the biggest dividends, and thus he puts himself in the strategic place against it. Comparatively, it is much easier to pray in public or testify or sing a solo, or make a talk. One can easily shout, "Praise the Lord," or "Glory to God!" and say the meeting is in liberty and freedom, and the Spirit is moving, and yet when opportunity is given for personal work, the same one seems glued to his seat.

Good folk say, "If I felt led I would go out and do personal work." (I am talking now about personal work in the congregation when conviction is on the people and an invitation has been given for the unsaved to accept Jesus as Savior.) "If they felt led." Well, why do they not feel led? Who is it that would keep them in their seat when doubtless many souls are halting between two opinions? Is it the Spirit of God that tells them not to move? Or is it the enemy?

I do not want to be misunderstood, but the spirit that keeps a sinner in his seat when God is speaking, is the same spirit in most cases that keeps a Christian from doing personal work. Of course, God does not usually call a name in the Christian's ear and tell him to go out in the congregation and speak to that person. First, the leading to do personal work is general, and then as the Christian moves to obey the spirit the leading is more definite and specific.

For instance, the invitation is given and conviction is on the unsaved. I do not know to whom I should go. But I get out of my seat and walk up and down the aisle and around. I am praying silently as I move for God to impress upon me to whom I should speak. I carefully note the faces of the people. Soon God's Spirit will point out to me the one to whom I am to speak. The person may not always heed my words. They may refuse and make excuse. But I have the consciousness that I have been led of the Spirit and that I am speaking in the Spirit. This will leave an indelible impression upon the sinner to whom I have spoken, and God will doubtless use my words to bring about salvation.

When there are those in the congregation who will do personal work, it makes it much easier for the minister or evangelist to give the invitation and continue exhorting. When no one moves to help him, it is more difficult to prolong the invitation, and only God knows how many meetings have been dismissed when some were about ready to yield.

We have so much long preaching and fine singing, and so little exhorting and pulling the net. Sometimes the sermon goes over time, and to get the meeting through, no invitation is given. We need more exhortation and more personal work, and I dare say less long preaching. There was a time when we had God-called exhorters, but that seems to have passed away. I wonder why?

Sometimes it is possible to organize personal workers' classes and instruct them in methods of personal work. This is well and good, provided those in the classes would have done personal work whether they were instructed or not. There must be the desire in the heart and a love for souls first and then pointers here and there can be given.

I make this suggestion about personal workers. If, when they come into the meeting, they would come a bit early and try to meet strangers and visitors and especially the unsaved, and in that way by friendliness get a point of contact, it would prepare them for personal work in the after-meeting. Then, instead of taking seats in the front, if the personal workers would seat themselves so as they could see the congregation and watch the faces of their prospects, and note the effect of the message upon them, they would have special leadings. No wonder so many do not feel led to move from their seats to do personal work when they are so seated that they cannot see the effect of the sermon upon the congregation.

Oftentimes it could be understood between the evangelist or preacher and the personal workers that the preacher would call for hands of those who would like prayer. Instead of the personal work workers bowing their heads with the others they could watch for uplifted hands. This would give them opportunity to go to those that are interested.

It is an inspiration to any minister and any meeting when the invitation is given if a number of personal workers would begin to move about the congregation in quest of souls.

I know the argument is many times given that if we go to people it will drive them away. This may be so if we go to them out of the spirit, but if we go to them in love and Spirit-power, God will tender their hearts. Anyway, if one or two or even more are driven away, as the objectors to personal work claim, it is a proved fact that ninety per cent of those who come to the altars in revival meetings come in answer to the personal work. Should we neglect the greater number in order to please the few. While one is driven away many come by the personal word.

I want to give now a few suggestions for personal workers. Many more could be given, but these are the most important. Of course, it is to be borne in mind that a soul-winner must first be well-saved himself. Be constantly in the spirit of prayer.

Approach the unsaved on common ground.

Use Godly tact and wisdom. Never argue or lose self-control. Answer objections with Scripture. Avoid denominational differences. Don't try to force your own views. With love in your heart, give the Word and the Spirit full right of way. Be in earnest. Immortal souls are at stake. It is said of Mr. Moody that he was desperately in earnest.

Press for and expect an immediate decision. It may be that soul's last opportunity, or it may be yours.

Surely, it is understood that there are other forms of personal work than that which takes place in the congregation during a revival. Personal work can be done by mail, or by house-to-house visitation, or on the street, train, or bus. Little cards advertising the meeting can be distributed and a kindly word spoken. God says that the bread we cast upon the waters will return.

But, to my mind, the most effective and most important form of personal work is in the congregation when by prayer, testimony, song, and sermon, an atmosphere has been created where conviction is pungent and God is on the scene. Then it is that the iron is hot. And the time to strike is in the heat.

I am not unmindful of the many foolish and hurtful things that are done in the name of personal work. But this does not detract from the real work. The fruit should not be plucked before it is ripe, nor should it hang until it is rotten.

A WORD CONCERNING REVIVALS.

Rev. L. L. Pickett.

I am glad to see that the Editor is preparing a special issue of The Herald on Revivals. There never was a time in this generation when they were more absolutely needed. Wick- edness is rampant on every hand. Scarcely a daily paper appears that the front page is not largely given over to records of crime. Murders abound; gangsters run at large; banditry prevails in the cities and even in villages. The churches have lost the old-time gospel, and hunger for soul-winning. Many pastors ridicule evangelists and charge them with being "out for money only."

Now suppose this were true. Suppose evangelists were not true to their profession and their calling. Suppose they only sought filthy lucre; what about the pastors themselves? Do they carry a burden of soul for the lost? Are they themselves cultivating the revival spirit, and diligently engaged in the effort to win the lost to God? Souls are perishing. Ought not all pastors as well as all evangelists to be greatly stirred in their souls over this sad condition? Shall we give unanimous consent to a state so sad and so unworthy of the ministry? Revivals are in the divine order. God the Father, and his Christ our Lord, long for the salvation of souls. God's skies are full of Pentecosts. A burdened church and a weeping ministry may have pentecosts for the wholesome, hearty asking. Shall this opportunity be lost? Shall the church die for lack of spiritual endue- ments?

In conversation recently with a very useful and fruitful evangelist, I asked if he were kept busy in the work. He said, "No; I have very few calls." And he said that he knew this to be true of many other evangelists. He said that most pastors have given up holding revival meetings; that they were falling back on the Sunday school and decision days.

This statement alarmed me. It is not the apostolic order. Peter and other co-workers held a seven days' prayer meeting, and from it there came forth the early church, born in a revival. The Sunday school, if properly used, has a place, and does great good. But if it is to supplant revivals and merely lead a bunch of children into the church on Decision Sunday it will become a cause of stumbling rather than a source of power. Teaching either from the pulpit or from the Sunday school cannot take the place of weeping prophets, pleading with sinners to repent with broken hearts and turn to God. That is the program of Modernism, and is destructive of the spiritual life of the church. A church that is built up by a mere organization and human teaching can never grapple with the powers of hell that are abroad in the land.

If it is true that evangelists have lost the spiritual urge, and are in the field for revenue, then our problem is doubly difficult. While evangelists should, as others must, live from their toil, and as preachers should be supported by their converts, yet I, for one, with a record of forty-two years in evangelism, can have no respect for money-loving preachers, either in the pastorate or the evangelistic field. One sign that Jesus offered as a proof that he came forth from the Father was that "the poor have the gospel preached unto them."

I have never received large remun- eration for my work, nor have I ever sought it. I asked a preacher's wife in a western state if a certain evangelist, who had recently been in their church, had led them in a good meeting. She replied, "It was good for him; the church paid him $900 for the meeting." I asked, "What did the church get out of it?" She replied, "Three members." These members came high; if they are not exceptionally good, I am afraid they will not be worth what they cost, $300 apiece. I am frank to say that in my estimate very few evangelists are worth anywhere like $900 per meeting. Of course if the church is large, and the members well-to-do, they might, out of their loving hearts, make an offering like this. But the evangelist who is "out for money" is an offence to his Lord, and a stumbling-block to souls. I have succeeded through the years in keeping poor, rather inconveniently so; but no pastor or people can charge me with demanding my price, or insisting on "big pay."

Oh, for a revival! Oh, for a church burdened for the lost! Oh, for a ministry that weeps between the porch and the altar and cries mightily to God for the salvation of sinners! I cannot do the work, physically, that I could when younger, but my heart longs for the old-time, gully-washing, tornado-empowered, revival. The days are passing! The Master is coming! The judgment draweth nigh! God pity the careless ones! Brethren, wake up, rise up, spring forth to battle! May God Almighty give us the needed revival throughout the length and breadth of the land.

FALLEN ASLEEP

AMJETT.

Our daughter Iler was born October 8, 1910, and departed this life September 1, 1927. Iler had not made a profession of faith in Christ until after she took sick, when she gave her heart to the Lord and bore testimony to her acceptance with her Savior. She was operated on for appendicitis at the Sanitarium at Searcy, Ark., from which she never recovered. She said her only regret was that she could not go back home to talk to her sisters and other young people among whom she had lived for the past seven and a half years.

Since Iler went away it is very lonely for us, but we bow in submission to the Father's will and live so as to meet her again. Like Job, we can say, "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Her remains were laid to rest in the Providence Cemetery, the funeral services being conducted by the pastor of that church. The floral offerings were highly appreciated. Iler's sweet face will never more greet us, but we look forward to the time when we shall meet again and walk the golden streets.

Her father,
J. L. Amjett.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A GENUINE AND A SPURIOUS REVIVAL.

Rev. W. G. Bennett.

First: There may be very little difference, so far as emotionalism is concerned. You may have a great revival with very small display of pyrotechnics. In Mr. Finney's revivals emotionalism was always discouraged. If he found prostrations occurring under his preaching he modulated his voice. Men were tremendously wrought upon, but were never encouraged to give vent to their emotions. On the other hand, under Whitefield's preaching the wildest excitement frequently prevailed, and while he remonstrated with Mr. Wesley because of the frequent occurrences of prostrations and what appeared to be hysteria, he soon discovered the same manifestations occurring under his own ministry, so that not infrequently the green sward upon which his vast congregations assembled was strewn with people prostrate, like men slain in battle. Generally great revivals have been accompanied by manifestations confusing to the critical, and that filled the throngs with fear and awe, extorting the exclamation: "We have seen strange things this day." However, you may have a great deal of excitement and very little spiritual power, and the converse of that may be true also. A pert young schoolteacher very wisely suggested to me in my early ministry that it was lightning that killed, and not thunder.

There will be this marked difference between the manifestations in a genuine and a spurious revival: In the former they come down. They are not the result of the manipulations of a performer; they are spiritual "dynamics"; they usually follow seasons of fasting and prayer. The difference is always discernable to deeply spiritual people; the real produces conviction, the spurious only excites merriment and conveys the impression that the performance is a huge joke.

Second: The difference in preaching. We have the example of Jesus, and the direct command of Paul to "Preach the Word." "The seed is the word of God." The Prophet Isaiah gives a direct promise that the preaching of the word will bear fruit. Jesus called into use the birds, the flowers, the grass, the husbandman, the wandering boy, the forces of nature. He used parable, simile, sarcasm, and word pictures to illustrate the great truths of the Gospel, but wherever our modern evangelists secured the sanction for the use of slang, silly, and sometimes questionable, stories that make congregations laugh until their sides ache, I do not know. It is quite certain that they did not secure that idea, either from prophet, Jesus, or the Apostles. I am not condemning it wholesale, I am hinting that, generally speaking, it is a very poor substitute for clear, clean-cut, wholesome, beautifully illustrated serious preaching of the word by a serious, Spirit-filled man of God. This latter will produce conviction that make men beat their breasts and cry: "What shall we do?" The former may win the approval of the congregation, and some may hit the sawdust trail: very few under these conditions will take the death route.

Third: The results of a spurious revival are spasmodic and shallow. The work is that of a manipulator. Seekers are manipulated to the altar, and then manipulated through. The congregations and Sunday school are raised to floodtide. Enthusiasm is boundless. Praise for the workers is flattering. Money is abundant. Why not! This evangelist is putting the thing over the top while a congregation shouts him on, and pays the bills, and are eager for him, or one like him, to return in order that they may feel that they are accomplishing something at a really low cost of effort. But, the reaction is fearful, because this process demands an expert. It is an axiomatic truth that "every effect must have an adequate cause," and now the cause has left town. Enthusiasm falls, likely below the normal, and so does the congregation.

On the other hand, a genuine revival is prayed down. Prayer and fasting have produced a deep, heartfelt concern for lost souls. Parents have labored for, and with, children; young people have become concerned for their companions; children for their playmates. There have been heart-searching confessions and restitution. The entire church has been advanced to new territory. The Holy Ghost has kindled anew the flame of passionate holy love for the lost. The revival did not come on the train with the evangelist, neither will it go out on the train he leaves on. He is loved, honored, cared for, and paid, as a servant of Christ should be, but Christ has been exalted, the Holy Ghost has been magnified, the revival has been local, the church strengthened, the converts have been largely won by those who remain to care for and nurture them during that period that is always trying to new born souls; consequently, the results are abiding. Some seed doubtless has fallen by the wayside, some upon stony ground, other will be choked by the thorns, but much has fallen upon cultivated and fertilized soil to bring forth an abundant harvest.

Fourth: A spurious revival is never fruitful in raising up agencies for the propagation of the Gospel of evangelization. The converts must be urged to testify and then usually dodge the issue when it comes to direct testimony. They must be constantly dragged into giving, praying, and general religious activity. They have no innate, inborn desire for these things. If they cling to the church at all, some kind of social or literary program must be instituted by the pastor to hold them. They have no constitutional desire for spiritual things.

On the other hand, a pentecostal revival always raises up agencies for its propagation. "Your sons and your daughters shall prophecy; young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams." Those gifted as exponents of vital truth, those that get visions of far-off heathen, and of souls dying at our doors, either want to go or consecrate their faculties to make money to send, while all have a passionate desire for prayer to the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into the harvest. They are just waiting for a chance to mount the witness stand and declare to all what Christ has done for them.

Finally: A genuine revival is permanent and far-reaching in its results. So-called "burned over districts" are not the result of real revivals, but of the spurious kind. A real revival produces converts so wonderfully changed that gainsayers and slanderers are rebuked; converts so holy that their lives cast a reflection on sinners, that makes sin appear what it really is—an awful crime. The currents of society are purified, and great moral reforms are instituted. "And they continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people." Praise God I am not discouraged. While I am writing the fire burns. I hope to see revivals and converts as real and as glorious as those in Apostolic days. Why not? I believe in the Holy Ghost.

AN ANCIENT AND A MODERN REVIVAL.

Rev. Robert L. Selle, D.D.

With but a single hope,
The world is in a lurch;
That one and only hope.
Is in a Christ-like Church.

The world never needed a revival more than it does now. God was never more willing to give to the world what it needed than he is now. The appalling need of the hour and God's abundant supply of resources to meet that need face each other squarely at this moment.

One of the greatest revivals of which we read was that of Nineveh, in Old Testament times, when that messenger of God delivered that simple discourse, "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown" on the busy streets of that wicked city. The time had fully come in their history for a halt. God chose Jonah and gave him a message to be the preacher of the hour. God was in his message and that message reached the ears of the King. Something happened.

The city was in prayer and fasting for days paving the way for repentance which followed immediately and the city was spared.

Suppose the Senior Bishops of all the Episcopal Churches and Moderators of all the Congregational Churches of the United States, representing our Protestantism, together with President Coolidge, should meet together for counsel and prayer, looking present conditions in the face with no other desire but to get God and the people together; and suppose they should issue a joint call for a week or ten days of fasting and prayer, suspending business, closing schools, all cars to remain in their garages—the week to be given wholly to fasting, prayer and repentance—not in the interest of any one church but in the interest of the Kingdom of God and the salvation of man—what would be the result?

If Nineveh could have a revival the United States can have one. God needed and used both the preacher and king to bring about that Ninevan revival. How can he save America? Are we ready to follow where he leads?

We have some excellent articles left over which, on account of lack of space, we could not use in our Revival Issue, but will run later. They are: "Revivals—Possible Today," by Rev. John Thomas; "The Old-Fashioned Revival Needed," by Rev. Joseph L. O'Brien; "Salvation Revivals," by Rev. A. S. Hunter; "The Need of a Revival," by Rev. W. E. Isenhour; "A Soul-Winner in Action," by Rev. Raymond Browning; and a most comprehensive article on "Revivals of Religion" by Rev. J. L. Glascock. The writers of these articles are men of wide experience and what they say is worth while. Don't fail to read them.

A GOD-SENT REVIVAL—GREATLY NEEDED.

Rev. John Norberry.

There is nothing that the Church of God needs more today than a Heaven-born, Holy Ghost, God-sent revival. Such a revival of "old time religion" will not only save her, and keep herself unspotted from the world, but will result in the salvation of many lost souls! Such a God-sent revival would enable the church to solve all her social, financial and her spiritual problems. This great need is not confined to one church, or to one denomination only, but to all churches, of all denominations. Such a Holy Ghost revival would not only awaken and save our own church membership, but would send them out into the highways and hedges, compelling the unsaved to come in, that God's house may be filled. Would to God we had such a revival during the winter months! "And let all the people say Amen!"

I. Some Things That Indicate the Need of a Revival. In these "last days" and "perilous times" of this "Laodicean Age," when the love of many are waxing cold, and so many in the church are lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, who have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof, among both preachers and people, surely indicates the need of a great awakening. The appalling apathy, and awful indifference, as is seen everywhere, and the lack of soul passion on the part of God's professed people, show to us the great need of a revival in this twentieth century. The broken-down family altars, the lack of family religion, in the so-called Christian homes, and the passing away of the Methodist Class meetings and Love Feasts, are also indications of a needed revival. "Oh that it now from Heaven might fall,

And all our dross consume;
Come Holy Ghost, for Thee, we call,
Spirit of burning come."

II. The Kind of a Revival Needed.—The kind of a revival needed today is not a hand-shaking, card-signing, saw-dust trailing, or church-joining revival, as is seen in many places, without any deep conviction for sin, or any change of heart and life. But, the kind of revival we need today is the kind that God gave the early Apostles, received in the upper room at Jerusalem, which not only saved and sanctified their own souls, but sent them down into the streets of the city, as flaming evangelists, proclaiming a full and free salvation for a lost and perishing world. Holy Ghost conviction so gripped the people that they cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do to be saved?" They repented of their sins and believed on the Lord Jesus Christ to the saving of their souls. This is the kind of a revival that we need these days. A revival that transforms people's lives, making new creatures in Christ Jesus, whereby "old things pass away and all things become new." We need a revival in these days, not only to make them "church joiners," but have them born into the Church of the living God. Not only to have their names on our church records, but have their names written in the Lamb's Book of Life. We need a revival of old-time religion, that will make the Church of God the most attractive place on earth, where God's people will "return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads." Where the house of God will be to them a "House of Prayer," and not a house of merchandise and frolic. A revival that will kindle and keep the fires burning upon the altars of our churches 52 Sundays a year, so that many of our young men and women will hear the call of God for Home and Foreign Missions, and under the fiery baptism with the Holy Ghost, will answer, "Here am I; send me!" A revival that will call many of our young people out of their comfortable homes, and from their good-salaried business positions to go to our holiness schools and colleges to prepare themselves for their future ministry. We need a revival that will bring a joyous shout in the camp below, as well as the rejoicing among the angels in heaven, over a new born soul saved in the kingdom of God. One that will enable all of God's children to live and practice the "Golden Rule" and that will restore the "first love" to many who have lost it. That will act to a fallen brother as Paul recommended in Galatians 6:1, and that which will remove an unforgiving spirit, so that they can forgive each other as God for Christ's sake forgave them. May the Lord send us this kind of a revival during the winter of 1927 and 1928.

III. How to Promote This Kind of a Revival. No doubt there are fifty things that we could suggest that would help to promote such a revival, such as in 2 Chron. 7:14, and Mal. 3:10. But we will confine ourselves to one great and unfailing remedy to bring about a revival, namely, Prayer! Prayer!! Prevailing Prayer!!! How true it is that "Praying changes things," and that "Prayer moves the hand that moves the world." I do not mean the ordinary prayer that is offered at our church services, but the "Prayer of Faith" that brings things to pass. That "effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." How seldom do we hear such a prayer offered in our regular church services? We need to be aroused from our lethargy and bestir ourselves to prayer. O, for a John the Baptist crying in the churches, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord." O, that we had another evangelistic prophet, sent from God, crying out to preachers and people, "Awake, awake O Zion, put on thy beautiful garments O Jerusalem"; and that, being aroused, we would pray, as he did, "O that thou wouldst rend the heavens and come down, that the mountains might flow down at thy presence." O, that we had more heart-burdened and weeping prophets, as was Jeremiah, who cried out, "The harvest is passed, the summer is ended, and we are not saved. For the hurt of my daughter of my people am I hurt. Is there no balm in Gilead; is there no physician there? Why then is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered? Oh, that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people." Such praying would bring a great travail of soul among the people of God, who would weep between the porch and the altar, saying, "Spare thy people O Lord, and give not thy heritage to reproach." Then "as soon as Zion did travail" she would bring forth souls into the kingdom of God. O that we could cry out as John Knox, "Give me Scotland or I die." Oh to be burdened for backslidden souls, as was Moses, who told God that if he would not forgive the sins of his ancient backslidden people to blot his name out of the book of Life. (Ex. 32:32). We think, also, we would see a revival among our kin-folk if we were burdened for their souls as was Paul, who exclaimed, "I have a great heaviness and a continual sorrow in my heart. For I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." (Rom. 9:3). Wake up, ye people of God! O that God would put upon the Christian Church such a burden of souls, that we would cry day and night, in the language of the Psalmist, "Wilt not thou revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in Thee?" "Revive us again, fill each heart with thy love, May each soul be rekindled with fire from above. Hallelujah, Thine the glory; Hallelujah, Amen. Hallelujah, Thine the glory; Revive us again." Keep on praying and keep on believing.

Life Annuity Bonds

Of Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky.

There are many Christians who have something laid by which they would like to have used in the work of training a thoroughly consecrated and sanctified ministry at Asbury College at their death. However, they need the income of it while they live, and so feel that the best they can do is to leave it to us in their wills. Too often, unfortunately, these wills are successfully contested and the wishes of the deceased are thwarted.

This difficulty is overcome in an Annuity Contract, for the donor is his own executor. Our Annuity Bonds are secured by the entire assets of Asbury College. The investment is SAFE, the returns are CERTAIN.

Scores of our friends have already invested their funds with us in this manner, and during the more than fifteen years that Asbury College has been issuing LIFE ANNUITY CONTRACTS it has never defaulted on an annuity payment; our friends, moreover, have given us assurance that they have never had occasion to regret their investment in this form of gift to Asbury College.

LIFE ANNUITY BONDS can be written for amounts of $100 and over. Simply write us your age and the amount you desire to invest on Annuity Contract, and we will forward to you at once the Annuity Bond made out to you for your inspection and approval, or you may send us your check with your application, and the bond will be dated back to the day you wrote the check, from which date the annuity payments will be calculated.

A CALL TO OLD-TIME FASTING AND PRAYER VICARIOUSLY EXERCISED TO BRING ABOUT A REVIVAL.

Rev. Homer W. Hodge.

In that beautiful Southland away back in 1903 in a large city among the people that are said to "Come down the primrose path of dalliance lured by the languor of the land of the locust" I was called for one spring morning and asked to speak to the prisoners of the City Stockade. Imagine my discomfit, and surprise to be ushered into a large, dark room filled with four hundred colored men and fifty colored women, with fifty white men and half dozen white women, sitting on long, low benches. The effluvia arising from that mass of unwashed humanity made me hold my nose when praying for them at the improvised altar.

Permission was given to Brother G and myself to speak to them at 9:30 A. M. for one hour. Think of the punishment of want; no available baths for the great number of people, poorly cooked food, soiled and dirty mattresses. The men slept in one large room with no covering except the clothes they wore during the day.

A drummer who so far forgot himself as to become drunk and lose his money was sent up for thirty days, no opportunity to notify his house. He was compelled to work soon and late on the rock pile, no change of clothes, his garments soiled, his linen worn; when dismissed he was a pitiful looking vagabond, and when his sentence ended he would depart down a back street to keep from rearrest for vagrancy.

Five years this went on while we labored with them on the Sabbath and would take their scraps of paper with the address of their friends and write a line for the unfortunates. At last we became so wrought up over the condition of the prisoners at this stockade that we had the boldness to approach the city superintendent of Jails and Prisons. We begged him to join us in asking appropriations of ten thousand from the councilmen and aldermen of the great city for baths, clothes, mattresses, better food, etc. He listened for a few moments and then angrily informed me that I was meddling with his business and to get out of his office. I left with a sad heart, and then and there decided to go straight to the aldermen and councilmen and make my appeal. Few listened with a bored look. Few said they (the drunk) deserved what they got. We left defeated and only one route left: to go to God with intercession, and wait upon him for relief that the city officials would not give. We kept up the intercession, early in the morning, crying and presenting our petition then backing it up with many pleas until one morning at 5:15 God said to our spiritual mind, "Be it unto thee according to thy desire." "This is the confidence we have in him if we ask anything according to his will he heareth us, and if we know he heareth us we know we have the petitions we asked of him." We knew he heard us and that the request would be granted: but when? we supposed the next week. God takes plenty of time. We saw no change except many of the prisoners were saved in the next two years, but the conditions became worse and worse. We had preached and prayed for them seven years without one cent of pay.

God works in a mysterious way his wonders to perform!

One afternoon about four o'clock the cry from the newsboys rang out: Extra! Extra! Extra! All about the City Stockade. It seems that a reporter found a colored man whipped seriously on the side of the road and found that a whipping boss had administered the stripes until the poor man was unconscious. The reporter left no stone unturned until all the facts came out and when another great Daily sent out their reporter to the stockade he went through and through the building and when he wrote the citizens became outraged at the awful and appalling conditions among the prisoners. A great lawyer was employed as a prosecutor, witnesses were served with notice to appear, the trial came off and we sat day after day and heard it all, the trial ended and the superintendent and whipping bosses were fired, and new officials were put in to serve the City Stockade. We were coming East soon and had gone to a tent meeting for quite a month or more and returning to the city we went for a good-bye to the stockade, and wonder upon wonders, as we entered, the dining room we were introduced to a professional chef in charge, the colored women helpers were neatly dressed, the food had a delightful smell. We felt like sitting with them to a delightful meal. A little farther on we found shower baths, upstairs in the men's sleeping rooms we found nice new mattresses, bed covering galore; they must have spent twenty thousand instead of ten. We could only say, "What hath God wrought." We gave God all the glory and departed with thanksgiving.

Praying for a Revival.

There are numbers of instances in the New Testament of prayer and faith vicariously exercised for souls, and these souls were healed and some saved without their own volition. To bring on a revival there must be human agents intensely interested in the salvation of the people where the meeting is to be held. One should make themselves conversant with the sin of that neighborhood, the lust, the uncleanness, the Sabbath breaking, drinking, card playing, petting parties. The father in Mark 9:14, 29, prevailed for his child. The Greek woman in Matthew 15:21, 28, for her daughter. The curse of sin is despair. Unless holy men and women go down on their knees for their communities and pray through for them, hell will be full to overflowing. Let's bring the devil-possessed in their sins to God. He will break down the gates of brass and cut asunder the bars of iron and God will give us the treasures of darkness and the hidden riches of secret places. He will open the two-leaved gates for us as he did for Cyrus.

Lastly, organize three or four good women and men who will stay with the altar seekers until the breaking of the day to get them through. We rise up much too early. We want few veterans that will remain until the convicted soul will surrender their will, body, spirit, all to God. Why not all night prayer for the souls of the lost and unsanctified? Let's get out of the ruts. Let's do something worthwhile. After a few nights of these prolonged prayer meetings around the altar full of seekers, God will make bare his great right arm, the heavens will break, souls will come through shouting and heaven will rejoice.

"Science and Religion, or Evolution Unmasked," by Rev. George A. Cooke, is an able essay that goes to the heart of the subject. Every student of religion in its relation to Science should read this little book. That Mr. Cooke is a scientist as well as a theologian no one will dispute, who reads the book with care. He demonstrates beyond question the atheistic philosophy that underlies the doctrine of biological evolution. He also proves the fraudulent character of this dangerous but widespread heresy. The true Christian will read what he has to say with pleasure and profit.

The Best Christmas Story, a Christmas play, and The Story That Never Grows Old, a Christmas pageant. It has always been our aim to offer only such plays, pageants, and other feature specials, as might be possible of presentation in any Church or School, whether large or small. Both the play and the pageant in this book are of this kind, and either of them can be given as printed, elaborated upon, or abbreviated. Both are splendid and well adapted for a successful Christmas program.

AYCOCK'S NEW BOOK

"THE CRIMSON STREAM."

A Devotional Sermon on the Blood

The first and perhaps the principal appeal of this new title is the fact that it fills a real need in our book list. No subject is of more vital importance, no tenet of orthodoxy is more assiduously assailed by the modernists than that of atonement by the blood of Christ.

Read the following excerpt.

"This splendid little book, 'The Crimson Stream,' is presenting to the lovers of truth, the believers in the fundamentals of the faith once delivered to the saints, a publication full of interest, light, and essential facts bearing upon a right attitude toward God, the Bible, and personal salvation. He has placed emphasis where it is most needed. It should be widely scattered and read by thousands of honest and earnest seekers after truth and righteousness such as will stand the test of time and eternity."—R. T. Williams.

This booklet is unusually attractive, bound in buff colored, imitation leather cover with two-color design.

32 pages; large, easy-to-read print.

NOTE THE CONTRAST.

By The Editor.

THERE is a wide contrast between those persons professing entire sanctification who isolate themselves from their fellow-beings, find fault with conditions about them, contribute little or nothing to the betterment of those conditions, and those sanctified people who are full of holy enthusiasm, warm-hearted, great lovers of their fellows, patient with those who know but little of God and who move slowly in the right direction, but are ever ready to seize an opportunity and push forward every good work.

I knew a brother who professed the experience of full salvation. He was sound in doctrine and zealous for the truth. I have no doubt he had experienced the blessing of full salvation from sin. He had grieved at the coldness in the church; had protested in his soul against the wicked conditions around him, all of which was reasonable and right; but so much of his time was spent in thinking, talking and feeling righteous indignation on the subject that he had neither time nor heart left for anything else. He became grouchy. He lost his joy, drew away from his fellowbeings, shut himself up from sympathy and fellowship with his neighbors and it came to pass that no one desired what he claimed to have.

* * *

I knew another brother, who claimed to be wholly sanctified. His life harmonized with his testimony. His heart was full of faith and sweetness. His life was full of hopeful labor. He was always ready to lay hold of every good work with cheerful perseverance and press on to victory. He kept in close touch with his pastor, sat close up to the front in all religious services, beamed with joy and knew just when to put in an unctuous "Amen." His face was so bright, his heart so happy, his spirit so genial and kind that whatever people may have thought of his doctrine they believed that his heart was pure and full of holy love for his brethren. Many persons wished they might come into possession of what he had. Go thou and do likewise.

* * *

We have held meetings into which people came from far to hear the doctrine of full salvation which we loved to preach, but sometimes their presence was not helpful. They were impatient and faultfinding. They seemed to be eager to have those who were known to oppose this blessed doctrine thoroughly browbeaten by the preacher. If you called on them to pray they would never say, "Lord, help us. Grant us thy blessing. Bring us into closer communion with thee." But they would say, "Lord, have mercy on these people. Show them their sin. Make them to feel their wickedness. Show them the folly and falseness of their views on sanctification," and in this and other ways they would create resentment against themselves, against the preacher, and against the doctrine he preached, and the experience we in-

PENTECOSTAL HERALD BILL OF FARE FOR 1928.

We wish to say to our readers that we are prepared to give them the most interesting and helpful paper for the coming year we have ever sent out. Among the very excellent features will be one sermon each week by some able minister of the gospel. These fifty sermons printed in book form would make two large volumes which would sell rapidly for one dollar and fifty cents for one volume.

During the year we will issue a number of Specials. One will be:

The Pastor's Issue devoted to the work of the pastor.

Another will be the Layman's Issue, pointing out the various services and rights of the laymen.

A third will be a Camp Meeting Issue. This will be very interesting and will come out just before the summer camp meetings begin.

There will be a Revival Issue, which will be very interesting and helpful.

There will be an Evangelical Issue devoted to the interest of evangelism, especially to the Evangelist and his work.

There will be a Prophetic Issue which will cover prophetic grounds and will be full of interesting matter on the subject of prophecy.

Dr. Morrison will give us his monthly sermon. He will also continue the chapters of his autobiography. We will have a great list of interesting writers from all parts of the country, among others, H. C. Morrison, G. W. Ridout, C. F. Wimberly, C. W. Ruth, Jos. H. Smith, I. M. Hargett, Bud Robinson, Joseph Owen, John Owen, Geo. H. Means, M. P. Hunt, J. L. Brasher, Raymond Browning, Arthur C. Zepp, C. H. Babcock, John F. Knapp, J. E. Aycock, E. E. Shelhamer, J. E. Savage, L. R. Akers, Col. S. L. Brengle, E. O. Chalfant.

We will have a splendid series of contributions on important themes from the professors of our holiness schools. They will deal with some of the fundamental doctrines of the Christian faith. The Herald will continue to carry the banner of Christian Holiness, entire sanctification as God's great solution of the sin problem.

"Aunt Bettie" is going to make her Children's Page wonderfully interesting to the children of The Herald family.

Dr. C. F. Wimberly is writing a great story which ought to be read by fifty thousand young people. He will put important truth in a fascinating and attractive manner.

See that The Herald comes into your home and that your young people get interested in this story. Do not fail to renew your subscription at once, and induce your neighbor to subscribe.

Faithfully yours,

Another brother comes along and puts himself in with the people. He says, "Lord, bless us. Show us our faults. Lead us into the fullness of love." He is an "us" man instead of a "them" man. His heart kindles, his soul fires up, he rejoices; his face is illuminated, and after the benediction the people gather round him and say, "Brother, I wish you would pray for me. I wish I was as happy as you look to be. How did you get this wonderful experience that keeps you in such peace?" There is all the difference between the grouchy man and the glad, happy man. We must not be misunderstood. The holy man must and will be in a state of protest against wickedness, but there must be love and sweetness in the souls of those who would commend the blessing of perfect love.

Those of us who claim the wonderful blessing of full salvation must cultivate the spirit of brotherly love. Let us be ready to help in every good word and work. We may be sure that we will never be able to have everything just like it ought to be in this old world until Jesus comes. Let us be prompt and active church members, sympathetic and helpful neighbors, always on the alert to give the helping hand to any one about us, and let us be sure to keep the spirit of gladness in our souls. Love is a wonderful magnet. Kindness wins; patience wears out resentment and opposition. May God grant us grace to manifest in every-day life the spirit and teachings of the thirteenth chapter of 1st Corinthians.

Will the Organization of Another Methodist Church Become A Necessity?

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY DEAR BISHOP.

SECOND LETTER.

My Dear Bishop:

IN last week's letter, I had something to say about the possibility of the union of all those smaller churches who are Wesleyan in teaching and practically Wesleyan in polity. I really believe it would be a very great blessing to humanity, and would largely advance the cause of Christ and spiritual evangelism, if such a union could take place, but I fear that we may have little hope for such a union.

It does seem to me, as an old man quitting the stage of action and looking forward into the coming years, that it is only a question of time when the two great sister Methodist churches will unite. Had we held on strictly to old Methodist doctrine and experience, the two churches would have united some years ago. Had we kept the doctrine of entire sanctification in our pulpits, schools, literature and hearts this strong bond of perfect love would have swept away all old prejudices and brought us together into one great, aggressive, evangelistic force throughout the world. If these two great bodies of Methodism should ever swing back to our original doctrines, experiences and enthusiasm for the salvation of souls, union will be inevitable. There are no indications, that I can see, of such a returning to original Methodism.

It will be remembered that in the recent agitation on the subject of union the modern liberals, North and South, I think with but few exceptions, were enthusiastic for the union of the two churches, and I am confident that but for the fact of the very strong drift toward modernistic teaching in the M. E. Church the union would have taken place.

FACTORS IN SOUL CRISIS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I have been reading recently the life and history of John Tauler, the great mystic whose life ranged between 1290—1361. The mystics were among God's people who prepared the way of the Lord in the great Reformation. Tauler in a very special sense was a forerunner of Luther. He was born in Strasburg, 1290. He took to religion when he was eighteen and went to Paris, which was then the great centre of Christian learning and where professors were expounding to thousands of students the philosophy of Aristotle and the speculation of the Schoolmen. The study of the Christian faith from these standpoints did not amount to much for a devout soul as Christianity was regarded more as a mere objective phenomenon to be looked at and studied as a movement of history.

Tauler was not satisfied; his soul longed more for life than logic; he longed for an open vision. Years afterwards, looking back upon his Paris experiences as a student, he said: "Those great masters at Paris do read vast books and turn over the leaves with great diligence, which is a very good thing, but spiritually enlightened men read the true loving Book wherein all things live; they turn over the pages of the heavens and the earth and read therein the mighty and admirable wonders of God." The influence of Eckart had a powerful effect in forming Tauler's religious experience and life. Eckart taught that outward rites and observances are not necessary to the essence of piety—the measure with which we shall be measured is the faculty of love in the soul.

The great crisis in John Tauler's life came about in a most unusual manner in 1340, when he was 50 years of age. There appeared one day in his audience a stranger who heard Tauler preach. (Let the story be told in the language of Dr. Herrick in his Lecture on Tauler).

"When the sermon was through he desired to make confession and receive absolution. This he did several times. At length the layman requested, to the doctor's surprise, that he would preach a sermon setting forth the highest spiritual attainment and how it may be reached. The sermon was preached, and it is still extant, setting forth, in four and twenty articles, the highest spiritual attainment. But the godly layman was not satisfied. He plainly told the preacher that, while preaching to others, he had not yet discovered the sinfulness of his own heart, that he had never yet made a complete surrender of his own will to God, and that he had come thirty leagues, not so much to hear him preach as to warn him against deceiving himself. A flush of indignation for a moment spread itself over Doctor Tauler's face, that a layman should dare to address him thus; but instantly he recognized it as the faithful wound of a friend, and took the reproof with the utmost humility and sweetness of spirit. The word, like a flash of lightning, had illumined the depths of his nature, had detected in him a lurking pride and self-sufficiency of which he had been all unaware, and, deeply humbled and mortified, he embraced the layman, saying, 'Thou hast been the first to tell me of my fault. Oh, stay with me, and show me how I may overcome it. Thou shalt be my spiritual father, and I will be thy poor, sinful son.' Now this was not morbidness, but downright honesty. It was the fifty-first Psalm, translated into the German of the Middle Ages. It was the cry of the self-recognized and self-condemned publican, 'God be merciful to me a sinner.' So humbled in this new degree of self-knowledge did the poor friar become, that for two years his lips were sealed in shame. He did not dare to preach. The agony of his spirit wasted his body and reduced his physical strength as if a disease were upon him. He was taunted by his enemies for his silence, and even his friends suspected and forsook him. His fellow-monks ridiculed him for being stricken with a sorrow that they could not understand. Even the mercy of God, which he had preached so freely to others, he felt too wicked and too unworthy to claim for himself. But out of this furnace he was to come forth as gold that has been tried in the fire. The night of weeping was to be followed by a morning of joy. As he lay one day upon his couch there came into his thought the recollection of the sufferings and love of his Lord, and of his own ungratefulness, and there welled up out of his heart and overflowed from his lips these words, 'O merciful God, have mercy upon me a poor sinner; have mercy in thine infinite compassion, for I am not worthy to live upon the face of the earth!' And as a mother hears the cry and runs to the succor of her child, God came to him with abundant comfort. Emptied of himself, he was filled with the peace that passeth understanding, and with peace came power. 'Now,' said his faithful friend, 'thou knowest the power of God's grace. Now thou wilt understand the Scripture as never before, and be able to show thy fellow-Christians the way to eternal life. Now one of thy sermons will bring more fruit than a hundred aforetime, coming, as it will, from a simple, loving, humbled heart; and much as the people have set thee at naught, they will now far more love and prize thee. But a man with great treasure must guard against thieves. See to it that thou hold fast thy humility, by which thou wilt best keep thy riches.'"

From this time Tauler became a new preacher of the gospel; he preached with marvelous power and grace and he became known as "Doctor Illuminatus"—the Doctor upon whom a great light hath shined. It was the prayer of Savonarola, "O Lord, make known to me the way in which I am to guide my soul!"

Now put over against this story of John Tauler the history of John Wesley's soul experience and crisis. A few weeks ago I was at Oxford and stood in the room of the Holy Club. How this arose is told in the following words: "In November, 1729, four young gentlemen of the University of Oxford—Mr. John Wesley, Fellow of Lincoln College, Mr. Charles Wesley, student of Christ Church (College), Mr. Morgan Commoner, of Christ Church, and Mr. Kirkham, of Merton College, began to spend some evenings in a week together in reading, chiefly the Greek Testament."

Wesley went from the Holy Club to make advances in soul knowledge until the notable night of May 24, 1738, when he felt his heart strangely warmed by the power of real converting grace; then he went on from grace to grace till he became the greatest exponent of Christian Perfection and Perfect Love. After reading Thomas a' Kempis' "Imitation of Christ," he said "The nature and extent of inward religion—the religion of the heart—appeared to me in a stronger light than ever it had done before. I saw that giving even my life all to God would profit me nothing, unless I gave my heart, yea, all my heart, to him. I saw that simplicity of intention and purity of affection, one design in all we speak and do, and one desire ruling all our tempers, are indeed the things of the soul, without which she can never ascend to God."

John Wesley's statement of the "Plan of Salvation" as experienced in Justification and Holiness is stated by him in the following language:

"Justification means present forgiveness, pardon of sins, and acceptance with God. The condition of this is faith. I mean not only that without faith we cannot be justified, but also that as soon as any one has true faith, in that moment he is justified. Good works follow this faith, but cannot go before it, much less can sanctification, which implies a continued course of good works springing from holiness of heart.

"Repentance must go before faith, and fruits meet for it if there be opportunity. By repentance I mean conviction of sin, producing real desires and sincere resolutions of amendment; and by fruits meet for repentance, I mean forgiving our brother, ceasing from evil, and doing good, using the ordinances of God, and in general obeying him according to the measure of grace which we have received. But these I cannot as yet term good works, because they do not spring from faith and the love of God.

"By salvation I mean, not barely deliverance from hell or going to heaven, but a present deliverance from sin, a restoration of the soul to its primitive health, its original purity, a recovery of the divine nature, the renewal of our souls after the image of God in righteousness and true holiness, in justice, and mercy, and truth. This implies all holy and heavenly tempers, and, by consequence, all holiness of conversation."

In conclusion, let me give this from Wesley as to how the Blessing of Free Salvation is to be received. He says: "I believe this perfection is always wrought in the soul by a simple act of faith, consequently, in an instant. Look for it every day, every hour every moment. Why not this hour, this moment? Certainly you may look for it now if you believe it is by faith, and by this token you may surely know whether you seek it by faith or by works. If by works, you want something to be done first, before you are sanctified. You think, I must be or do thus and thus; then you are seeking by works unto this day. If you seek it by faith, you expect it as you are, and if as you are, then expect it now. It is important to observe that there is an inseparable connection between these three points—expect it by faith, expect it as you are, and expect it now. To deny one is to deny them all."

The Western Recorder says of "The Optimism of Pre-Millennialism," by H. C. Morrison, D.D., Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. 147 pages. Price $1.00.

"Dr. H. C. Morrison, of Louisville, is an outstanding Methodist minister. Anything he writes, or anywhere he goes to preach among a large clientele of the best people in the South, Dr. Morrison is sure of a glad hearing. The Doctor is of course an eloquent voice of Fundamentalism. The subject of the present work is arresting. Modernists and some extreme Post-millennialists have objected to Pre-millennialism that it is a gospel of pessimism. In ten chapters Dr. Morrison develops the Gospel of Pre-millennialism in a way that will be edifying regardless of the reader's particular predilection on the subject. As he does this he is informed of the purpose of showing that the charge of pessimism made against pre-millennialism is an unwarranted charge. The work is a significant addition to the abounding millennialism literature of the times."

REVIVALS OF RELIGION.

Rev. J. L. Glascock.

THIS writer has spent his whole life in promoting revivals of religion, ten years in the pastorate, and many years in the work of a special evangelist, and has written a book on revivals of religion. He has had the advantage of laboring in many revival meetings and camp meetings with many of the ablest and most successful evangelists in the country, thus giving him the wider vision of the work of salvation, in view of this, one writing a single article on a subject so pregnant with thought as revivals of religion, will need strictly to apply the law of selection, in order to stress the most important phases of the subject in proper space.

It is our purpose to treat the subject under only three heads as follows: First, the different kinds of revivals. Second, the imperative need of revivals. Third, how to promote them and some of the results of their promotion.

First, there are federated efforts along revival lines, in which the pastors and their people of a whole city unite in the work. A noted evangelist is employed, who is assisted by an efficient singer, and other workers of various kinds. The old-fashioned mourner's bench is eliminated, and there is substituted for it handshaking with the evangelist on the part of the people, who are strongly urged by the ushers to press their way to the front and shake hands with the evangelist, thus making this performance a substitute for the scriptural process of obtaining salvation, such as repentance, confession, restitution, faith in Jesus Christ, and the rest. It were a wonder if some people were not led into a Christian experience with all the pressure brought to bear upon them in such services, but the results in real soul-saving have been so meager, and the expense so enormous, that pastors and people who have functioned in such movements have expressed themselves unfavorable to them, and regard them as very poor substitutes for a real revival of religion, though many thousands are reported saved through these processes.

Another sort of revival is of more recent time, in which committees, led by captains, are sent out to the homes of the people to solicit them to unite with the church at an appointed time set for the reception of members. Some of the highest officials of the church have gone on record urging this method. They declare that the people are not attending church services, and that the church members must go after them and bring them in, that the day of the congregation revival has passed. If this is all that is contemplated in a revival of religion, it is so contrary to the Bible methods, and the means employed in the past by the church, that it needs no argument to prove its falsity. The statistics show that people brought into the church through this method give no evidence of having received a Christian experience, and in most cases are no more faithful in attending the services of the church than before they united with it. They can neither pray in the prayer meeting nor testify in the experience meeting, or perform any other service characteristic of a Christian. There is but one sort of real revival of religion, and that is the kind described in the Bible, and that has been propagated through the ages by God's people, and that has brought a satisfactory Christian experience to every one of its recipients, but we will more fully treat this phase of the subject as we proceed with the discussion.

That there is an imperative need of a widespread revival of religion along Bible and old-fashioned lines, is apparent to every one who has given the subject but a cursory consideration. It needs to begin in not a few of the pulpits of churches, supposed to be orthodox, throughout the country. Too many preachers are decrying old-fashioned revivals, and hence putting forth no effort to promote them. They declare that the time of such revivals has passed. They are substituting education for regeneration, teaching that every child is born into the Kingdom of God when he is born into the world, and that all that is necessary is proper environment and right education to keep him in the Kingdom. With one stroke they have eliminated the necessity of the new birth, as declared by Jesus Christ, when he stated, "Ye must be born again," (margin reading), "born from above." As a result of this erroneous teaching the spiritual life of the church has run to a low ebb, and is in danger of running entirely out, if it has not already done so. Many of its members are indulging in the pleasures and practices of the world. As a result their children are not reached and saved, but the rather are forming wicked habits, and are associating with worldly, wicked companions, who, alas, in too many cases have led them into the committing of desperate crimes.

Many of the people of the outside world are losing respect for the Bible and the church, and not a few of them have gone into the most veritable infidelity, and among some, atheism is being organized and propagated. Our space is far too limited to catalogue all of the disastrous results that emanate from the spiritual decline and dearth in the church, and the need of revivals of religion. Sin is rampant. The situation is heart-rending to every child of God.

We are to consider in the last place how to promote revivals of religion on Bible lines and what will be the results of such revivals. It is still true that judgment must begin at the house of God. Pastors and people alike must humble themselves under the mighty hand of God. Both classes must betake themselves to deep heart-searching and humiliation before God, and persistent and importunate prayer and fasting. All of the revivals that have ever blessed mankind have been sent through the medium of prayer. This was true of the revival sent upon the Apostles on the day of Pentecost. Through prayer the Wesleyan revival was sent, as was the Welsh revival, and all revivals. In every case the people waited on God till the fire fell.

Another indispensable prerequisite to a revival of religion, and one closely allied to prayer, is the preaching of the whole Gospel under the anointing and power of the Holy Ghost, and with authority and faith. Preach seeing no man save Jesus only. "It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Preach Jesus, not something about Jesus, but Jesus. Jesus miraculously conceived by the Holy Ghost. Jesus born of the Virgin Mary, Jesus the Son of God, Jesus the miracle-worker, Jesus crucified on the cross, Jesus risen from the dead, Jesus ascended to Heaven, Jesus interceding at the right hand of the Father, Jesus' return to earth to receive his ready bride.

Preach holiness, not something about holiness, but holiness. Preach it as a Bible doctrine, not as a theory, but as an experience to be had in this life, preach it as a life to be lived and enjoyed on earth; preach the ethics of holiness, preach it as the only thing that will enable men to live lives acceptable to God, preach it as the one and only preparation for Heaven.

Preach sin, its condemnation, its degradation, its pollution. Preach repentance, confession, restitution, pardon, regeneration, the witness of the Spirit, entire sanctification, heaven as the reward of the finally faithful, and hell the doom of the finally impenitent. Preach the whole Word of God.

Such preaching will result in the pardon of sinners, the restoration of backsliders, the entire sanctification of Christians, the general quickening of the church. It will clarify the moral atmosphere of the community, and bring in a better day for all the people who have been brought under its influence, and the conserving of the spirituality of the church.

If such a revival would break upon the world at once it would come none too soon. Then we would have a different sort of officials in the church. We are not choosing such officials as the Apostolic church chose. They sought out men full of faith and the Holy Ghost and set them apart for their work by prayer and the imposition of hands. But the officials in the church in our day are too often those who have the most prestige, socially, financially, and professionally, whereas they should be the most influential, spiritually, promoting the work of God along spiritual lines, instead of social and recreational lines.

If the revival that we have been describing should come, it would change the spiritual condition of the young people of the church. Instead of their societies being fairly well sustained literary societies or sparking clubs, they would become instruments in soul-saving work, and instead of a hue and cry of what can be done for the entertainment of our young people their hands and hearts would be so full of the work of the Lord in soul-saving that they would have neither time nor disposition for fun and frolic, amusement and entertainment, but would be satisfied with the things relating to the Kingdom.

The Sunday school instead of being a sort of a kindergarten affair would prove to be a soul-saving institution. Each child when he had arrived at the state of accountability would experience the pardon of his sins, and by the time he was in his early teens he would be led into the fountain of cleansing. Such a revival would settle every vexed question of the church not excepting the perplexing question of the financial budget.

A genuine, widespread revival of religion will not only prove the salvation of souls, and whatever else we have stated concerning it, but it is the only thing that will conserve civilization. The Wesleyan revival saved England from a worse revolution than the French Revolution. The revival promoted by Martin Luther made Germany Protestant rather than Roman Catholic, while the revival in North Ireland produced a similar result for that part of that nation.

The responsibility that is upon Christian people in the perilous times in which we are living is beyond all comprehension. May God help his children to stand true and ring clear in this time of dire need, and leave no possible effort untried to build the Kingdom of Jesus Christ upon the earth.

An Ideal Gift Book.

Holidays are coming on, and Christmas presents are already being bought. Let us suggest a wonderful little book for the holiness people. It is Dr. Ridout's newest book, "The Beauty of Holiness." This is one of the best books in print teaching you how to live the Holy Life after you get it. For holiness young people, for preachers, etc., and as one of the very best little holiness gift books we commend it. It is richly bound in blue and red with gilt lettering. Price, 75c. Nothing better to send to your friends.

Mail your Christmas order NOW in order to avoid the rush that will come later. Do not delay.

The Place of Holiness in Our Preaching and Ministry.

Joseph H. Smith.

1 Tim. 1:1, 2.

"Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the commandment of God our Savior, and Lord Jesus Christ, which is our hope; unto Timothy, my own son in the faith: Grace, mercy, and peace, from God our Father and Jesus Christ our Lord."

I used to have difficulty and would get into quandaries about the omission of reference to the Holy Spirit in some of the apostolic benedictions and doxologies. In some instances reference to the Spirit does occur, but perhaps in more cases, as here, there is reference to God the Father and Jesus Christ our Lord. However, the whole thing has opened up to me—the Spirit is involved in all of those benedictions and doxologies, because grace, and mercy, and peace from God the Father and Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior can only come to us and minister unto us by the Holy Spirit; and too frequent reference would be tautology. Grace, mercy, and peace are products of the Holy Spirit's office work; and so he is implied, and the Spirit is involved with the other two persons of the Trinity in those other benedictions and doxologies.

"As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine." There is such a thing as becoming too tolerant of heresy, too charitable to wrong doctrines and wrong teachings. There is such a thing as becoming too peaceable with the traitors and the alien enemies of our Lord. When Paul said, "I have kept the faith," he not only kept it in his heart, but in the church, and he drove out error. When there creeps into your Sunday school class literature, something that has a question mark about the new birth, the virgin birth, or the inspiration of the Scriptures, you are not to be mealy-mouthed, but put it out.

"Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do." There are two classes of errors in heresies: superstition and scholarship. The scholars of that time interested themselves deeply and greatly in tracing out genealogies, tracing their parentage all the way back to Abraham, and the like. That was no small item in the curriculum. Many of our heresies come in lines of fanaticism and in lines of so-called learning. You and I want to have anointed ears in order that we might sense the approach of error, whether from high intellectual sources or from seeming great spiritual sources, for some superstitions and fanaticisms take on the semblance of high spirituality. Distinguish between spiritualism and things of the Holy Spirit; and so he says, "Neither give heed—" Paul teaches us to not be good mixers. That is a modernistic slogan that we are to repudiate. Read the epistles more closely, and do not give heed to such things. You and I had better learn to be impolite to the devil; learn to be discourteous to antichrist. They say,

"You are so narrow," but I must be that, for I am to go through a narrow gate.

You must not, if you are to be of any account, be running around to every religious circus. You must not frequent every hippodrome under pretense of hearing new doctrine, some wonder, or supernatural performance. We are to be content with the old, old story. As John Wesley says—and I believe he quoted from some author two hundred years before him—"Anything essentially new in religion is essentially false." With all the progress of science and learning—and there has been great learning in these lines—no one new truth essential to salvation has been discovered since the day of the apostles. Back to the old paths. No revival has ever resulted from, nor in the discovery of, any new doctrine; but every great revival that has ever been has resulted from, or in the recovery of, some lost doctrine. Beware of the itching for novelty, the itching after something new that scientists have discovered, that philosophers have evolved. The old, old story of Jesus and his love is what you and I are sent to proclaim and promulgate.

For my text I shall take the next verse: "Now the end of the commandment is holiness." Paul analyzes holiness in this text—"The end of the commandment is charity (or perfect love) out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned." If I were to preach on this text, I should break it into three pieces: "A pure heart, the receptacle of perfect love; a good conscience, as the meter for the outpouring of streams of holy living; unfeigned faith, as the bedrock base upon which this vessel stands that holds charity from a pure heart, flowing out in streams of holy living."

I am simply going to arrest your attention on the fact that Paul says that the end of the commandment, which is a synonym for the law, is exactly the same as the end of the gospel. When Jesus was asked by the Bible lawyer which was the first and greatest commandment, Jesus told him holiness: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: and the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Paul crystallizes that here. The objective end of God's legislature in this and every dispensation is "charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned."

The burden of our message is the place of holiness in our ministry. The end, or the objective, is perfect love out of a pure heart, "from which some having swerved have turned aside unto vain jangling." The reason that some holiness meetings have gone to seed and have been closed up (and some had better be closed up), is because they have swerved from the objective of getting people sanctified and are jangling about remote questions. If we are to be of any account in spreading holiness, we want to keep our objective constantly before us. Get man's heart purified so that God's love may fill it, and so that the streams of life may be marked by pureness. Paul claims the quality of pureness to all conversation and conduct, that out of the heart streams of pureness may flow. We must know that the objective is not the defense of doctrine, but the sanctification of souls; not the instruction of the head, for that is only the means to an end, but the objective is to get men's hearts purified so that all that flows out of the channels of life may be metered from a pure conscience to God and man. Some have swerved and turned aside to vain jangling. Let us be saved from mere jangling about holiness.

Though I have now entered upon a second half century of a ministry of holiness and have been on the watchtower of this ministry, I do not think to this day I have ever been in a controversy about holiness. I have an innate disinclination for controversy, to begin with. I am quite content to let other folk have the last word when I know that they are wrong. This is a luxury that you don't get outside of Canaan—the luxury of having the other fellow have the last word even when you know he is wrong. Fighting for the mere terms or words is not fidelity. You don't have to be brutish to be brave.

Paul had to deal with the vain jangling in regard to circumcision, which is exactly the same as this jangling about Seventh Day Sabbatarianism, and Baptism, and other matters. It is all vain jangling about the law, and Paul says that they don't know, "Understanding neither what they say." They have lost sight of holiness, of a pure heart flowing out in a holy life.

I was once conducting a series of meetings in St. Louis, in a Methodist Church, South, and it happened through the goodness of God that on the first Sabbath we had some sixty conversions. The pastor had been criticised a week or two before for inviting a holiness preacher. At a meeting of the pastors the next day, he was so glad to tell them that there had been sixty conversions yesterday. Of course the brethren seemed pleased. They called on me to speak. I said, "It would be untrue to my Lord and unfaithfulness to you not to tell you that these conversions all occurred under preaching of the second work of grace." This brought on the subject of sanctification, and many gave their views. Towards the close one brother got up and said, "Brother Smith, we all preach holiness, we all stand up for Mr. Wesley and defend the doctrine of Methodism." The president called on me to speak for five minutes. I said, "If this brother has correctly represented you, it has cleared the atmosphere for me. I wanted to know what the difference between you and me was. He says that you preach holiness to stand up for Mr. Wesley. I don't defend Mr. Wesley; he stood before I crept. I never apologize for preaching the doctrine of entire sanctification. I don't preach to defend, I preach to get people sanctified." That is the place that holiness should have in our ministry. The effect was that twenty preachers, two presiding elders and one bishop came to see how it worked. God honored the meeting by sanctifying a few and by converting a bunch.

GOOD BOOKS.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

SCARCELY any influence for good in our lives exceeds that of the right kind of books. The social chat with congenial friends is pleasant, and may be profitable, but how often it counts for little in making us wiser, stronger or better. The lecture, the sermon, the address are entertaining, and may be instructive, but frequently we forget them forthwith.

But a good book—how its truths thrill us, and in the silence of our own thoughts, fancy and imagination clothe them into living beings and realities and fasten them on memory's walls to be looked at and enjoyed over and over. In meditation we feel the subtle influence of the thoughts of the great and good in their silent eloquence or plain homeliness inspiring us to nobler efforts and higher ideals; or pointing out to us some fault or lack which with tremendous purpose we determine to overcome.

Good books! Who can estimate their value. Read! Read yourself! Read to the children! Read to the family! Read with the friends! Encourage others to read. There are some books that I value as highly as I do friends. A true friend is one whom to be with makes me long to be better, to be larger. Do not my books also do this? Then you do not blame me if I love them?

There has never been a book of this character come into my hands that I have not longed to share it with others. Anything good seems that much better to me, if some one else enjoys it with me. May I tell you of some of these books that you, too, may feel the pleasure and benefit they have given me? Like great deep wells in the sandy desert or the summer sun, whose crystal waters, sparkling and cool, delight, refresh and strengthen the weary traveler, so these books along life's lonely, dusty pathway have given me fresh courage, renewed purpose, higher aims, and have shown me how better to draw from Jesus the Fountain of Life, grace in time of need. They have enabled me to see and understand my Lord and his great plan of redemption far better. Here they are. 'Tis sweet to pass them on to you.

"The Prince of the House of David," 35c, by Dr. Ingraham. Have you read it? No? Well then there is a rich treat in store for you. How graphically the author pictures the life of our Lord so as to charm and fill one with worship and adoration. It will fascinate old or young. Your boy or girl would be delighted with it.

For your boys in their teens, let me suggest lives of such men as Spurgeon, John G. Peyton, Martin Luther, Hudson Taylor, each of which sells for 75c. For your teen-age girl you will never regret buying her Dairyman's Daughter, $1.00; Beautiful Girlhood, $1.00; Stepping Heavenward, 50c, and Everybody's Birthright, 50c.

For us more mature Christians let me suggest as real spiritual tonics, With Christ in the School of Prayer, by Andrew Murray, 75c. Nothing can be better for a Sunday school teacher than Arnold's Practical Commentary on the Sunday school lessons, price $1.00. Everybody knows, or has heard about that wonderful book, The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life, which has comforted and helped to untangle many spiritual problems for the discouraged and distressed souls seeking the light. Price $1.00.

The children! They must not be forgotten. Provide something for them. The long winter evenings are just ahead and mother you can read by the hour to the little tots and fill their empty, eager little minds with gospel truth in striking form. Put the word of life into their little hearts now. Who can tell whereunto it will grow! Aunt Char- lotte's Bible Stories, $1.00, or Hurlbut's Story of the Bible, $2.00, either of them will entertain, instruct, and delight them. It is excellent to put in Sunday afternoon with.

Let's make this a Book Christmas, and by so doing we shall be sowing seed that will bring forth fruit of spiritual culture and devotion to the things that are highest and best.

HOW TO HELP A REVIVAL.

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

I. Co-operation.

WHAT is co-operation? It is simply everybody at it and always at it. If you think the evangelist has brought a revival in his suitcase, and as soon as he opens it, the revival will fly all over the community, you are sadly mistaken. Everyone has a part and lot in this matter, and you can help in various ways. For instance: You can use a telephone, write post-cards, hand out announcements, talk on the street, at the post-office and everywhere you go—you can agitate the subject of the meeting. Little things make big things. The Brooklyn suspension bridge started with one tiny wire, then others and then wire cables, and finally the great mechanical structure was completed; and now millions of tons pass over it every twenty-four hours.

We read, "Not by might, nor by power," (Marginal, not by might, nor by armies), "but, by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

Everyone can speak to his neighbor and perhaps pray with that neighbor; loan a good book, give out some tracts, get subscriptions to a holiness paper and thus start the leaven to working in his community. Do not say you cannot do it! Susanna Wesley, the mother of nineteen children, felt irrepressible longings and requested her husband that she might start mid-week prayer meetings for the ladies. He reluctantly consented. The attendance increased from time to time until the house did not hold them. He remonstrated that she was getting out of her place, but later felt rebuked and gave his consent; and a great work for God broke out. Yes, you can help by co-operation to bring on a gracious revival.

II. Self-sacrifice.

There is something beautiful about self-sacrifice. It pleases God and almost compels his recognition and assistance. One reason the old-time Methodists had such great revivals, was that they counted it a privilege to walk ten, or fifteen miles, sleep on the floor and share their last crust of bread to help entertain others. Where is God working now-a-days? Not in big churches, but in mission halls, tent and camp meetings, and mission fields where there is a lot of self-sacrifice and self-denial being practiced; and you can help along this line! Use that automobile to bring in two or three loads; that horse and buggy, or bob-sled; go out in the highways and byways and bring in the maimed, the halt, the blind! Write to some of your friends, or relatives to come and make you a visit and thus get them under the influence of the meeting; bring your hired help along with you to the meeting! Do not say, "It will cost too much to entertain, or take the man out of the field. Wife is nervous and we cannot have a crowd around us." I tell you it will cost you more not to do something! The majority of the people, yea good people are everlastingly taking in, but never giving out unless squeezed. They have sponge religion. They can sing, pray, or shout, but cannot fast, give liberally, or wrestle in secret prayer until something happens.

Now brother, if you would be a blessing to others, forget ease and fleshly desires and see what God will do. He can humble and bring down your loved ones who are proud and self-willed, but it may mean some midnight praying on your part. What of it! Would you not rather lose a little sleep, or a few pounds of flesh and see a revival, than drift along like others and finally weep bitter tears over the downfall, or damnation of those who might have been saved had you laid yourself out full length for God?

III. Prevailing Prayer.

Singing may be good, preaching may be fair, but nothing will make a meeting go, like prevailing prayer. A half dozen pray-ers are worth more than a score of payers. Somebody had to prevail with God for your soul and for mine, and now in return we must prevail for others. John Wesley made a startling, but true statement when he said that, "Jesus Christ is not now interceding for a lost world, but rather for his saints, and he has left the intercession for a lost world to his saints." If this be true—and we believe it is, what tremendous responsibility is upon us. The salvation of a lost world, simply for our asking, for our interceding, for our refusing to be satisfied with anything else! This is no place for dry eyes, or making a show in the flesh. If we would see a revival, it will take all that is in us. We cannot bring it about ourselves, but we can beseech the God of all grace to pour upon the community a mighty awakening.

The following is a remarkable case of prevailing prayer: A man who had an only son, had taught this boy to drink, gamble and visit vile places. At the age of forty-five the father was wonderfully converted, but now the boy had grown to manhood and was a profligate. The father deeply regretted his example and pleaded with the son to reform, but to no avail. Again and again he tried to persuade him to attend the house of God, but the billiard hall and the theatre had more attraction for the young man. At last the father became desperate and told his wife to leave an empty chair at the head of the table every supper-time, as a testimony to his son that he was fasting and praying for his salvation. At first when the young man was apprised of the fact, he threw back his head and laughed, declaring, "Dad will get tired of that; this will give me more to eat," and other light remarks. The empty chair continued to testify, not only for one week, but two weeks, and three weeks. The son began to show signs of seriousness. Between conversation, when everything was quiet, the voice of the father could be heard in an undertone, pleading for the salvation of his boy. Finally the fasting started into the fourth week, and the boy declared to himself, "If this does not stop I must either get saved or leave home." The fifth week began and the father was not at the table, whereupon hearing the voice of his father pleading and weeping, the son suddenly pushed his chair from the table! The mother was a little alarmed lest he was angry and planned to go down town and drown his conviction. But instead, up the stairs he went, taking two or three steps at a leap, and throwing himself upon the carpet said, "Father, I know now that you love my soul more than something good to eat, and I must have this same salvation."

Yes, if you prevail with God, it may mean fasting, sleepless nights and many tears, but it is a good investment. O Lord, "wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?" Who then is willing to pray, "Lord revive Thy work, and let it begin in my heart and my home!"

"Revive thy work oh Lord,
Thy mighty arm make bare;
Speak with the voice that wakes the dead
And makes the people hear.

"Revive thy work, revive thy work,
And send refreshing showers;
The glory shall be all thine own,
The blessing shall be ours."

REVIVALS—POSSIBLE TODAY

REV. JOHN THOMAS.

HE word "Revival" means "to live again"; therefore a revival presupposes deadness, barrenness and lukewarmness among the people of God. Our hearts have been stirred as we have read of old-time revivals in England under the Wesleys and Whitefield, and also in Wales under Christmas Evans and John Elias; the revivals under Finney in America, the Irish revival in 1859, and the revivals in the early days of the Salvation Army under the late General Booth.

It was my privilege to be present at the Welsh Revival under Evan Roberts. I was in one service at Llansamlet from two o'clock in the afternoon until 1:00 A. M. the next morning, when the power of the Holy Ghost was so manifest that there was not a moment during the eleven hours that the holy unction did not rest upon the whole audience. There were five people sitting in the pew with me; not one understood the Welsh language, but as I translated the testimonies, writing them on little notes, and passing them along to the friends to read, they wept and praised God. There were many who said that the Welsh Revival was only a passing blessing, but my dear friend, Rev. Elvet Lewis, pastor of the Welsh Tabernacle, London, told me that he could put his hand on 70,000 who did not backslide, and this was four years afterwards!

It has also been my joy and privilege to see something of the workings of the Holy Ghost in Korea, Japan, and other countries, and I am convinced that the days of Revivals are not over. God's power is not lessened by time; what he did once he can do again. I have a letter before me from the Rev. Juji Nakada, of Japan, which reads as follows: "God is working in this country in a mighty way. In my native city, Hirosaki, an open air meeting has been held every day for a week, and during the time 713 people decided; few weeks ago I baptized 54 of them. It is really a revival. We are expecting to baptize about 2,000 people very soon. Nothing is impossible for God. Pray for us."

There are many preachers who have discarded the old-time revival meeting. They have removed the altars of the Lord, taken away the penitent form, and have substituted a campaign to bring into the church a crowd of unsaved people, promising them a church home. The community is canvassed systematically and a "plate supper" arranged, with a "get-acquainted meeting" in the basement of the church, at which those who have talents of any kind are quickly initiated into some form of church activity. The subject of repentance, restitution, and the New Birth are not even hinted at on this occasion. This can hardly be called a Revival. On the other hand,

REVIVALS ARE POSSIBLE TODAY.

ITS WARRANT. God's promises have never been known to fail. They are exceeding great and precious promises. "I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground." "Call upon me, and I will answer thee and show thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not." "Behold, I will do a new thing; now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it? I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert." "And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh." Men forget that there is one thing God cannot do; he can create a world, he can send a revival, but he "cannot lie."

THE METHOD. There must come a burden of prayer upon the church, or upon a group of faithful saints, or upon the minister, or someone through whom the Lord can work. We held a series of meetings in a town in Cornwall, England, and over fifty young men were converted. The minister asked me to visit an old lady and when I entered her room, she said, "I knew it would come! I knew it would come! I just knew it would come!" It dawned upon me who was really conducting the Revival. There must be power with God for men, before we can have power with men for God. A revival is possible anywhere, if there is prevailing prayer. "Break up the fallow ground," with prayers of real intercession.

"Gather the people, blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly." Let a man of God be called, and it must be remembered that God is very particular whom he uses. He must be a vessel meet for the Master's use, prepared and fitted by the Holy Ghost. The description of a man whom God uses is seen in Exodus 18:21.

1. He must be an able man, not a novice, able to preach the Word of God, able to apply the Word of God. He must be a reaper, rather than a sower.

2. He must fear God, love him with all his heart, unafraid of men or devils.

3. He must be a man of truth, sincere, sanctified, and full of the Holy Ghost.

4. Hating covetousness, saved from the love of money, able to trust God for his supplies.

THE REVIVAL SHOULD BEGIN WITH THE PEOPLE OF GOD.

The unsaved masses can only be reached when the church is revived, and this is ever the scriptural order. "The heathen (the unsaved) shall know that I am the Lord, saith the Lord God, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes." Ezek. 36:23. Then let the saints go forth to invite the unsaved to the meetings; cottage prayer-meetings should be arranged, personal work encouraged. There are thousands all around, sick of their sin, tired of the world's pleasures, bound by the devil's chains, and driven by his taskmasters, who only need a loving invitation coupled with a personal testimony to the power of the precious blood to save and cleanse, to get them to yield themselves to God. Let no one despair. Revivals are possible today! Do not wait for a world-wide revival, but ask God to revive your locality, your church, your home, and your own soul.

Asbury Theological Seminary.

DEAN F. H. LARABEE.

Robert South, far-famed in the historic galaxy of preachers, a preacher than whom in many respects there was no greater, once said "that a blind man in a chimney corner is pardonable, but sitting at the helm is intolerable." The preacher is the guiding star of any community. He is the maker of its ideals. As the preacher directs, the common people follow.

Since the preacher is the key man to the community life, his training and preparation for the task is all important, for he should be a skilled workman. During the past twenty-five years, the cultural average of our congregations has been steadily increasing. It is no uncommon thing to find in these days, scores of laymen in the pews of a single congregation, who are college-bred men and women. They will no longer tolerate an illy prepared preacher in the pulpit. He must be well-trained.

With the present specialized status of education, it is next to an impossibility to get an adequate preparation for preaching the gospel out of any college curriculum in the country. In the days of Harvard's early history, it was not so, for among the decreed purposes of that early organization, there was expressed a dread "to leave an illiterate ministry to the churches when our present ministry shall lie in the dust." Harvard's early aim was to make preachers. Where in the world is there a college now so motivated? Yes, there is one. It is Asbury College. There may be a few others, but they are scarce. So, if preachers are made, if prophets are encouraged and inspired, the college of today does not and will not satisfy this demand; this is the good and sufficient reason for the theological seminary. The preacher should be as well prepared technically for his task as should the physician for his task, or the lawyer for his task. Young men choosing these two latter professions do not pretend to get a satisfactory training for these responsibilities out of the ordinary college curriculum. They pass on to the professional school. Should men following these professions be more highly trained and efficiently prepared for their task than the prophet of the Lord, whose ministry is as immortal as the souls of men?

The question will be asked, "What kind of a seminary should be sought in these days? The seminaries are teaching all sorts of theories of life. What is the true theory of life? Where may it be found? The true theory of life can be found nowhere except in God's Revelation to men, so the proper kind of a seminary for the training of young prophets and preachers must be; that seminary whose curriculum is occupied with the task of promulgating the gospel of Jesus Christ; the seminary most containing those characteristics that cultivate, nourish and feed a vital piety in the hearts of its students; that builds up a high moral and spiritual life. An unregenerate preacher in the pulpit is a travesty on the social life of the community over which he is set to build its spiritual welfare.

Asbury Theological Seminary interprets the Word of God according to the Wesleyan faith. Her students become pronounced and positive in the assurances and beliefs of the Sacred Word and of their faith in Jesus Christ. They go out in the world to preach a positive gospel, and, from the preaching of this positive gospel, everywhere gracious and beneficent results are achieved in the salvation and sanctification of the people.

The Spirit of Kindness

Should be instilled into the heart and mind of every child. In doing this people often overlook the fact that the dumb animals respond to kindness with almost as much gratitude as a human being. We do not know of a better way to help create this spirit of tenderness and kindness than to place in the hands of the growing boy or girl a copy of "Black Beauty," which is a most thrilling story of a horse. A grown-up cannot read this book without purposing in his or her heart to be kind to animals, and it increases one's desire to be kind to humanity.

You could not give a young person a book for Christmas that would be read with any more pleasure and profit, and at this time we have a most attractive edition that we are offering for 50c, postpaid. Try giving the book and see if you aren't more than gratified with the results of this gift.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

ASBURY COLLEGE CHAPEL SERVICE.

On Tuesday morning, November 15, the chapel hour at Asbury College was occupied with a praise service, led by the Business Manager, Mr. C. A. Lovejoy, who has not only led many such college services in the past, but also will be remembered by the attendants at Camp Sychar as having led the great praise services at that camp.

Before testimonies were given, a brass quintet rendered a medley of Billy Sunday's great successes with genuine spiritual fervor. The music was a blessing to those who heard it. Then Brother Lovejoy led in the singing of a number of camp meeting choruses, introducing some of them with appropriate remarks. The first stanza of "Amazing Grace" was sung, followed by portions of "I'm Glad Salvation's Free," "Turn to the Lord," "He'll Carry You Through," "I'll Go Every Step of the Way," "There's a Highway There and a Way," "The Way is Very Narrow But I'll Follow," "Holiness Forevermore," "When I've Gone the Last Mile of the Way," "Oh, That Will Be Glory," and "I Will Praise Him."

The last twenty or twenty-five minutes of the meeting were devoted to testimonies, interspersed with more choruses. During this time sixty persons, representing twenty-three states and two foreign countries, testified to what the Lord had done for them. The following are some of the expressions which were heard in the meeting:

A girl from Kentucky said, "I am glad I said yes to his whole will. I am learning new lessons daily, and walking alone with him." Another, from Pennsylvania said, "I am praising him for the lessons he has given me. His grace is all-sufficient." Another, from Ohio, said the songs that had just been sung resounded in her soul like the sweet music of heaven. A Georgia boy said he had victory over the world, the flesh, and the devil. A boy from New York said he had new found strength and joy in the Lord. A girl from California said joyfully, "The way is growing brighter and brighter." An Oklahoma boy praised the Lord for answered prayer. An Indiana boy said, "I praise God for the privilege to live for Jesus who died for me. My ambitions are in the will of God." A North Carolina girl said, "One thing I know—that whereas once I was blind, now I see." A professor said that just as consciously as the Holy Ghost entered into his life sixteen years ago, so he abides today. A lady professor said, "He is helping me to buckle on the whole armour of Christ. He is my Savior, my Keeper, my Coming King."

Naturally, those who testified were comparatively few in proportion to all who might have done so, and this fact led many of the professors to open their classes with words of testimony. Throughout the day the spirit of praise was observed in the various classrooms. Thus was felt the influence of a single Chapel service.

MANCHESTER, GEORGIA.

A Union Revival that is reaching hundreds in our city is being held at the North Side Baptist Church. A number of the members from the different churches of the city prayed for months that we might have a meeting to reach the unsaved hundreds of Manchester. It was first planned to have Evangelist Harry S. Allen, of Macon, Ga., come with his big tent for the revival, but the time he could give was so late in the year it was feared it would be too cold; so the first week of the revival was held in the Methodist Church and this week at the Baptist Church. Evangelist Allen is preaching to crowded houses at times scores being turned away for lack of room.

One of the most efficient song leaders the writer has ever known is in charge of the singing, Mr. M. L. Lifsey, of Macon, Ga. He is also gifted in working with the young people. Many say this is the most far-reaching revival ever held in Manchester. Nearly one hundred have already professed conversion and united with the different churches of the city. We are praying that these men may come back to our city to hold a great tent campaign. Evangelist Allen goes to Tarpon Springs, Fla., to conduct a great Union Tent Revival beginning Nov. 20th.

REPORT.

For the past nine months I have been associated with Luther A. Horn in the Horn-Marshall Evangelistic Party. During these nine months we have conducted nineteen revivals in Alabama and Florida. We have gone from the smallest country communities to the most aristocratic church in old Mobile and have found everywhere a people hungry for the old-time gospel. There is very little difference in folks when they seek God and there is considerably less when they really find him.

During the year Bro. Horn organized the Healing Springs Camp Meeting and we held the first annual meeting the first of July. Two thousand people were on the grounds the last Sunday. We are expecting greater things next year.

The outlook for evangelism is not as good this year as it has been. So many evangelists seem to have left a bad taste in the mouths of the people, so that many doors are being closed to those who are sincerely trying to do good. However, this has not affected the South to any great extent, particularly Alabama and Georgia. Our party has had more calls than we can handle for the next season. We have disbanded for the winter and each of the three members of the party is taking separate meetings during the cold season. Contrary to northern custom the South does not hold many large revival campaigns in the Fall and Winter, and of course, even in Alabama, the weather is too cool for our big tent. Meanwhile, I have several open dates during November, December and January that I would be glad to fill with meetings in the North or Florida. I have specialized for the past nine years in young people's revivals and God has blessed my efforts.

Sincerely,

Rev. R. P. Marshall.

A GOOD MEETING.

A splendid revival meeting just closed a few days ago in the Springfield Church of the Nazarene, Ellet, Ohio, with C. C. Chatfield and wife as the evangelists. We had a number of seekers at our altar, and several of these praying through in old-fashioned style. The meeting, especially, did the church a great blessing. Folks received light that they had not had before. While the weekly crowds were not as good as we had anticipated, the Sunday crowds were up to our expectation.

This village, in the neighborhood of two thousand heard some old-fashion singing and preaching. The Chatfields did their own singing, and the glory came down upon the saints. Mrs. Chatfield with her "chart-talk" to little and big children on the closing Sunday morning had its effect when about nineteen or twenty children knelt at the altar of prayer for pardon and forgiveness. The church is forging ahead on spiritual lines, and we are going in for one of the greatest times we have ever had in all of our lives. Our folks are taking on a greater vision for God and holiness, and there seems to be a better spirit of prayer upon the people since the meeting. To God be all the glory.

Our next meeting is dated for Feb. 22 to March 4 with our old-time faithful brother and evangelist, C. B. Fugett. If you are near and about Akron, O., come and pay us a visit. On with the battle!

B. H. Pocock, Pastor.

REVIVAL CAMPAIGN.

Sunday night, Nov. 13, marked the close of a very successful revival meeting at the Darling Run Church of the Nazarene, near Warsaw, Ohio. Evangelist D. M. Peffley preached a full gospel, uncovering sin, showing the need of repentance; also insisting on the need of being sanctified as a second definite work of grace. Brother Peffley is a faithful friend of the pastor; wherever he preaches he strives to bind pastor and people together. The altars were lined nearly every night during the two weeks' campaign. Many backsliders were reclaimed and believers sanctified, as well as a number from surrounding churches received definite victory. Five additions were made to the church. God was on the scene. To him we give all the glory. I feel the church is considerably strengthened at the close of these special services.

REVIVAL AND CAMP MEETING AT BELSANO, PENNSYLVANIA.

About five years ago this fall the Pittsburgh M. E. Conference sent into our midst an old-time Methodist preacher as pastor of the Belsano charge, Rev. Charles H. Porter, whom we found to be a strong preacher of holiness of heart and life a doctrine which had not been preached in the community for at least a generation. Brother Porter served the charge faithfully and successfully for two years and then had to retire from active work on account of ill health and then bought and settled in our little village. The pastorate was then filled by a young man who possesses great talent as an evangelist; he also is a strong holiness preacher, having been saved and sanctified in the old-fashioned way after being raised in the German Lutheran Church, but turned to the Methodist after his conversion. Bro. Siess, who was now serving his first pastorate had one of the greatest, if not the greatest, revivals that was ever known for miles around that first winter he served the charge. It was in this revival that the writer, a young teacher in the public schools, first received the witness of the Spirit to the pardoning of his sins, to later become a local preacher in the local M. E. Church.

The effects of that revival have been felt all over Cambria county and the city of Johnstown though it is twenty miles away from the city.

Out of this Revival sprang a strong Holiness Camp Meeting with an association of over fifty members which has been bringing in to the community for the past three years some of the nation's strongest holiness workers, such as Dr. Ridout, of Wilmore, Ky.; Rev. and Mrs. Rufus H. Gleason; Rev. H. J. Tedder; Mrs. Ella Boyer and Sister, Mrs. Cora Hurt, and others. Everyone feels the camp is large for its age and one of the most promising in Western Pennsylvania. Last Spring the Association bought nine acres of woodland near Belsano and erected on it a tabernacle 70x90 in which it holds its meetings. Dr. G. W. Ridout and Mrs. Ella Boyer were the evangelists in charge of the 1927 meeting, with Misses Magdalene A. DeBoer and Florence Hall as song evangelists and young people's workers, all of whom were found to be untiring workers in the Kingdom, blessing all who heard them by their spiritual messages. The Association is especially indebted to Dr. Ridout for his very excellent advice in helping to get the Association organized, suggesting amendments and recommending for adoption a Constitution, Rules and By-laws, for the Association which was framed largely by the pen of Rev. Porter who was the first President of the Association and still holds a position on the executive board. We now feel that we not only have an organization well established in the community, but one that is going to be true to old-time Bible Holiness, preaching it from the platform yearly and sending out from its altars young men who have been filled with the Holy Ghost to carry the message of salvation all over the land and into the mission field.

The workers secured for next year are Dr. Peter B. Wiseman, President of a Holiness School in Canada, and Rev. C. E. Zike, a Wesleyan Methodist Evangelist of Cadillac, Mich.

EVANGELISTIC REPORT.

On September 2, we closed a meeting at Mt. Nebo, W. Va. This was my fifteenth revival for the conference year, also the fourth meeting at this place. A little over a year ago, God gave me the vision of a holiness camp at Mt. Nebo. During the year the burden increased and the vision became more clear, so at the close of this last meeting a permanent holiness camp was organized, to be held the last two weeks in August of each year. It was wonderful the way the Lord took it over the top. The land was given by Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Hughes (better known as Uncle "Bub" and Aunt "Ebie," besides a generous offering on the tabernacle fund. A large tabernacle will be built for the camp meeting next year. I have never worked among a more loyal people than we found in Nicholas county. I want to ask the readers of the Herald to pray for this new camp. Mrs. Esther Brown Darnell ably assisted in this meeting with her beautiful songs. Bro. Harvey Hysell was with us two days and preached some excellent sermons.

November 5 we closed a three-weeks' meeting at the Centenary Church on the Brandonville, W. Va., charge. This was my first meeting since conference, and I consider it one of the greatest meetings I have ever been in. Old-time conviction settled down upon the people and night after night the altars were filled with souls crying out to God for pardon, reclamation or purity. How they did dig down, pray through and shout the victory. Family altars were erected and many promised to tithe. We cannot praise the Lord enough for the great manifestation of his power. Brother S. E. Ryan is the pastor, he has the blessing of full salvation and wants to see his people converted and then go on and get sanctified. I am glad to report complete victory in my own soul and I am determined to go through.

REPORT.

Our revival in the Quaker Church at Grinnell, Ia., with Rev. Simcox was a decided success. The meeting had not been advertised extensively but as the revival progressed in spiritual power the news of the meeting gained in momentum. On account of some conditions our crowds were not large but it looked at times all the unsaved were going to the altar. It was said that some of the hardest cases in the city found the Lord. A doctor who had backslid found his way back to God; another man of strong personality, an old student of Moody Bible School, had lost his hold on God, was wonderfully reclaimed and sanctified and became the most ardent worker for souls before the close of the meeting. One young man who had been called to preach and backed down was reclaimed and started in his studies at John Fletcher College before the close of the revival. The pastor has the respect of the city and is much loved by his people. Mrs. Simcox is highly respected by all. Mr. G. W. Richards, the outstanding official of the church, is one of the most consecrated men I have ever known. We were entertained in the home of this brother and wife. With the exception of five services out of seventeen days, some found God in saving or sanctifying grace. I have some open dates which I wish to give to some church. My terms are a free-will offering. I have some camp dates for next summer open.

I have read with interest and amazement that wonderful book, "Modernism," by J. M. Stanfield. While I have read very considerably upon the subject I was amazed by his marvelous presentation of the subject. It is decidedly the strongest I have read. May I urge every preacher to read and assist in its circulation.

Devout men all through the South would have been glad to have seen a union, but they looked with fear upon the course of study in the M. E. Church and felt quite sure that the union of the two denominations would place the publishing interests, and the educational institutions in the hands of modernists who have little or no sympathy with the doctrines and experiences so tenaciously held, earnestly preached and graciously experienced by the fathers and founders of Methodism.

One of the most interesting features of the debate and conflict which went on during the discussion of Unification, up to the time of the meeting of the last General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, was the fact that almost, without exception, the men in the Southern Church who wear the brand of modernistic teaching were so enthusiastic for Unification that they seemed perfectly willing, not only to make a great breach, but almost to go to any length, which would all but wreck their own church in order to Unification. It is generally believed that modernists are very shrewd in the manipulation of ecclesiastical politics, that they stand very close together, and that they know how to place their leaders in official positions, to get hold of the Publishing Interests and the control of the institutions of learning. Devout men all over the South who would have been glad to see Methodism welded into one great body of consecrated, evangelical Christians, laboring zealously for the conversion of the world, were afraid to risk the destinies of the church and the cause of God and humanity in the hands, and under the direction and leadership of modernistic teachers.

This spirit of modern skepticism in the church is becoming very general and is spreading rapidly. We see no evidence of a receding tide in the propagation of unbelief in the church, and rapid, aggressive, blasphemous, infidelity outside of the church. If the modernists continue to control the theological seminaries and inculcate into the rising generation of preachers their false teachings, and if the colleges and universities continue to teach evolution and what logically follows, it will not be many decades until the two Methodisms will become so thoroughly saturated with this spirit of unbelief and, at the same time eagerness for great numbers and large collections of money for social service and world uplift, that they are quite likely to come together.

So you see, as an old man who has roamed all over the nation and through and through Methodism, North and South, I am prophesying the final union of the two great Methodist churches.

If, under God, there should come a great evangelistic movement, a powerful revival of true spiritual religion, if our people should turn back to our original doctrines and the holy fire of God should fall upon us, if such a revival should be widespread and bring into leadership bishops, editors, college presidents, and place in the pulpits of the great churches mighty preachers of a pure Gospel, saturating the great body of the laity with the spirit and power of Christianity on fire, this union of hearts, faith, sympathy and purpose, would certainly bring about a union of the two great branches of Methodism into one body which, under the power of God, could shake the kingdom of darkness and bring untold millions to repentance and saving faith in Jesus Christ in this and all other nations.

I regret that I see no indications of such a revival. The teachings of the modernists cannot bring a revival. In fact, the modernists do not believe in revivals. One would think their program is to let the adult people of the world go to the devil while they lay hold upon "the church in the cradle" and the young people in the schools and teach them to doubt the inspiration of the Old Testament, to question the authority of the New Testament, to have all sorts of opinions and notions about the Lord Jesus, and to cultivate a sort of religious fraternity among the various nations and races of the earth looking to good breeding, and the laws of hygiene to develop some sort of a superman.

Doubt is of the devil, and your modernist is busy sowing the seeds of unbelief broadcast, everywhere. I cannot have the slightest hope that the teachings of our modern liberals will bring in anything short of a revival of unbelief, of wickedness, lawlessness and the wreck and ruin of society, and everything that promises good to humanity and the glory of our Christ. But if it continues to move forward at the pace which has characterized it for the last decade, within twenty years there is not a doubt in my mind but it will bring about the union of the two great branches of Methodism, and it will then be the most powerful organization of unbelief and the most dangerous brand of skepticism that the world has ever known. If this union should take place then the devout orthodox people in the two churches, uniting, would withdraw and organize an orthodox Methodist Church. I think this would certainly come to pass.

Bishop, it is a startling fact that we have a great host of preachers in large and influential churches, North and South, who do not have revivals in their churches and do not hesitate to say that they do not believe in revivals. They have found that they can keep up their membership and organization by using decision day and the Easter gatherings, so they let that vast multitude of humanity that can be attracted, impressed, put under conviction and led to Christ in great revival meetings, absolutely alone to go on their way to ever-increasing wickedness, and finally to outer darkness. A large percent of the young criminals who are now committing most diabolical crimes come out of that great class of the common people into which original Methodism moved with the mighty power of God and captured for stalwart laymen and preachers of great power, a boyhood and young manhood who, otherwise, would have become criminals. I haven't a doubt but if the great Methodist churches in Chicago had been ablaze with revival fire for the last twenty-five years, Chicago would be so salted and illuminated with the spiritual life of these great churches that the bootlegging and machine-gun firing, the horrible war which is now going on in that city, would have been impossible and unheard of. These churches that are standing idle so far as genuine, Holy Ghost revivals of religion are concerned, are unconsciously the aiders and abettors of all evil, and are turning perdition loose on the earth. I believe these skeptical preachers in our great cities who seem to be content, who let the vast mass of humanity of the middle and lower classes, who are no more wicked at heart than the wealthy and educated, go unevangelized and out to eternal death, will be found dripping with the blood of lost souls in the great Day of Judgment.

Please remember that I am making no plea for the organization of another Methodist Church. No man loves the Methodism of this nation better than I do, so far as my capacity enables me to love it. But what about God? Is he pleased with the situation? Has he surrendered his church to these unbelievers? If he so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son to die for its redemption, doesn't he want the world to know it? Is he willing to be confined to cathedral and pipe organ churches with their half-naked, squealing, squalling choirs? Isn't God still interested in humanity? Isn't the Christ who lived and walked among the poor, the common and outcast people, still deeply concerned for their salvation? Doesn't God want his people, at certain periods, to quit, neglect and forsake other matters and unite themselves in earnest prayer for the salvation of the lost multitude? Are there not untold thousands, yes, millions of immortal souls around the Throne in glory who were saved in religious revivals? What is God going to do about these things? I believe he purposes to keep a church in the world that believes in the inspiration of the Scriptures, believes in the Virgin Birth and Deity of Jesus Christ, believes in the Atonement he made upon the Cross, believes that the Holy Ghost is now in the world, moving among men, believes in repentance, the new birth, the cleansing and sanctification of the heart and righteous living among men and believers in revivals of religion. If God does not desire this, he evidently is not the God revealed in the Holy Scriptures.

May we not expect the same God who raised up Methodism when the Episcopal Church had lost the evangelistic spirit, and was letting the world drift into darkness, to come upon the scene again in great power and raise up for himself a people who will stand for the Bible and the salvation of a lost and ruined world. A very large percent of our preachers in Methodism, North and South, are sound at heart, but what about our leaders?

I beg your pardon, Bishop, but as I become a sort of by-stander, watching the procession march into the future, I can but look after them and ask myself what the future holds, what movement a compassionate God who loves lost men may set on foot, and what the outcome will be. I must confess that I feel deep concern and a bit of curiosity with reference to the future. But, believe me, there is going to be some tremendous things happening within the next two decades. I have some further thoughts on the subject for next week.

Faithfully yours,
H. C. MORRISON.

Two Weeks in Phoenix, Arizona.

T the close of the conference at Tucson I went to assist Dr. Gray in revival meetings in Central Methodist Church, South, in Phoenix, Arizona, a city of some fifty thousand people, located in one of the broad valleys of the sunlit plains of Arizona, make a beautiful oasis of alfalfa fields, orange groves and gardens by the waters of Salt River from the great Roosevelt Dam.

At Phoenix you have almost year-round sunshine. It is a city of churches and winter tourists. In addition to Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Nazarenes, and Roman Catholics, there are Christian Scientists, Mormons, and three or four churches of the Apostolic, or tongues people, who have divided and separated until I was told they have four preaching places.

When I entered the beautiful new church a fine, handsome usher met me with a cordial grip, saying, "Brother Morrison, I was converted under your ministry and you took me into the church when I was a boy in Stanford, Ky." Greenberry Bright is his name, the son of my old friend, George Bright, of Stanford, and grandson of James Harris, for whom the new Methodist Church in Stanford is named. We took long rides together and talked over old times. Brother Bright is a prosperous business man and a zealous Methodist, with fine family. I was in his house to dinner and it was like close kinsfolk. John heard I was there and came to see me. Who is John? Brother Bright took a little orphan colored boy out of the county poorhouse and raised him more like a son than a servant. I knew the little fellow well, as I went often to Brother Bright's. When he grew to manhood he joined the U. S. Army and remained a soldier for twenty-five years, fought through two or three wars, became a commissioned officer, and when he left the army he came back to Stanford and one of his first questions was, "Where is Mr. Greenberry Bright?" "Out at Phoenix, Arizona," was the reply. John took the train for Phoenix at once and hunted up his first love. They had grown up boys together. John gets a pension and he and his wife have a prosperous business. It was a real pleasure to meet him. What faithful friends are these old-time brothers bound up in black.

Ernest Roberts, pastor of the Nazarene Church in Phoenix, converted under my ministry many years ago, and very dear to me, is a faithful man and a great soul-winner. One night we had "Kentucky night" and the Kentuckians filled one great block of pews. Brother Gray had them all sit together, and we had quite a time.

There were a number at the altar, and twenty united with the two Methodist churches, fifteen at Central and five at one of the other Methodist churches. Brother and Sister Gray had me at the parsonage for dinner often and comforted me with their kindness more than they can ever know. The new presiding elder, Brother Powers, had just come up from Texas and was with us most helpfully. Brother Johnson, of Washington Street Church, doing a great work was with us often, and from first to last, many preachers came into the meetings.

The Mormons are very strong in this region. They had an immense gathering of Mormons from many parts of the country at the dedication of a million dollar temple in the village near Phoenix, while our meetings were in progress.

Arizona is a great state, coming into marvelous productiveness and a most promising field for Methodism. The brethren on that battle front ought to have the sympathy and support of the church. Phoenix needs and should have help from the Boards to become a powerful center of Methodist influence and evangelism.

Preparation For a Revival.

W. E. ARNOLD.

REVIVALS are neither all human nor all divine. They are the result of co-operation between the two. Wonder if we will ever learn the full significance of that inspired statement, "We are laborers together with God." We know it well enough in the physical world. We never expect a harvest until some Paul has planted and some Apollos has watered, even though we fully understand that God must give the increase. Paul would be helpless and Apollos useless without God; yet God gives a harvest only in collaboration with Paul and Apollos or other human workers.

As in nature so in grace. Religion itself is the result of co-operation between the Divine and human. If either element is wanting, there can be no religion. Whatever else it may be it is not religion. So also with a revival. It is the result of a union of effort on the part of God and man in behalf of souls. If either element is absent there is no revival. While we must not overemphasize the human element, we must give it its proper place in the economy of salvation.

The divine element in a revival is a constant element. Supply the human conditions and the supernatural never fails. We can rely upon it. The human element is variable and uncertain, but the divine is always ready to co-operate when proper conditions are met. The wires may be broken and the carbon wrongly placed, but put these in proper adjustment and the Divine Dynamo always sends forth its light and power! God always does his part in a revival. To say that he capriciously withholds his blessing is almost a blasphemy. The "set time" to favor Zion is whenever Zion is ready to be favored. To "pray down" a revival means only to pray up the people into harmony with God's will. To neglect the human side of a revival, then cry to God to pour out his blessing in spite of our neglect and failure, is pure folly. God will do his work whenever we do ours.

Hence the necessity of preparation for a revival—of getting ready the human elements which enter into it. The ministry of this writer has been blessed with several sweeping revivals, but not one has ever come without thorough preparation for it. These gracious outpourings have never been by chance, nor have they come as a surprise, or by quick and easy process. They have always been the result of deliberate plan and purpose, in answer to expectant longing, and after weeks, or even months, of work on the conditions necessary to a harvest of souls.

A revival deals with conditions in the church and community, and must have material to work on. To get these conditions favorable and to get this material ready is the work of the pastor. Sometimes the preacher himself is not ready. Ask the experienced evangelist and he will tell you that he sometimes finds the greatest obstacle in the way of a meeting is the preacher; things just will not move because of his attitude or state of heart. Sometimes the difficulty is in the church. Formal, unconverted church members, ignorant of spiritual things, and neither knowing nor caring for their high privileges in Christ Jesus, are themselves subjects for the revival, and until saved, are poor media through which to communicate the Spirit's power to others. They must first be enlightened and brought to believe in, and long for, the regenerating and sanctifying power of the Spirit. To indoctrinate a people and beget this desire in their hearts is not easy, and often cannot be done in a few days. The pastor should do this and not the evangelist. A revival ought to be a high school rather than a kindergarten of the spiritual life.

Then if the revival reaches the community, there must be material to work on. To locate this material and get it ready before the revival begins is the surest way to have a revival. More than once has the writer gone carefully through his church and community, making a list of the unconverted of his own membership, and of those out of the church. Then taking this list, he has sought out those whose names were on it, and made a personal, private appeal to each one. In one instance more than half a hundred professed to be saved in the meeting which followed, and more than two-thirds of these had been talked with privately before hand. When the meeting began there was material ready. No man is ever too rich, or too big, or too little, or too wicked to be talked to about his soul. Where this method is faithfully and tactfully followed, there is always material ready when the revival begins.

The writer has written from the pastor's viewpoint. He has been a pastor. He is familiar with many sorts of revivals. He knows how deceptive and disappointing some of them are. A quick work, brought on by high pressure methods, without previous preparation will disappear almost as quickly as it was brought on. He is convinced that a revival should never be used as a substitute for careful, prayerful, painstaking pastoral work. It should be the culmination of such work; the harvest time, following the period of seed sowing and cultivation of the soil. A lazy man, or one who is too cowardly to face a sinner and talk to him about his personal salvation, finds it easy to resort to a so-called revival in order to make up for his want of fidelity to his sacred calling. Preparing for a revival is hard work; often it is not appreciated and secures no applause, but it counts for much in the end.

An Interested Friend.

My Dear Dr. Morrison:

I have been reading with much interest the series of articles you have been writing under the heading "One of my great desires" which relates to the need of a well housed and equipped Theological Seminary at Asbury College.

In this time of spiritual decline, and the tendency toward Modernism in the greater number of our State and Church Colleges I am sure that the need for the enlarged Seminary at Asbury College is imperative, and should receive the hearty endorsement and support of all lovers of the Bible, and those who believe in and experience the blessing of Holiness of Heart and Life. We need one Seminary where the graduates of our Holiness Colleges can go for their advanced study and preparation for the Ministry, Evangelism, and Missionary training, where they will be free from the spirit of infidelity and unbelief that permeates the most of our larger Seminaries, and where they may become thoroughly established in the Word of God, and in the Fundamentals of our Holy Faith which will make of them flaming evangelists of the gospel of a Full Salvation.

In talking with several friends about your "One great desire" I find a sympathetic expression, and we are hopeful that you will soon have your plans in hand for this enlargement program, and we will support you to the best of our ability in making permanent at Asbury College this Seminary which is the hope of the world, as I see it.

Yours for the spread of Scriptural Holiness,
A HERALD SUBSCRIBER.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS
Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

No. 1.

Text.. "If thy heart be wise, my heart shall rejoice."—Prov. 23:15.

Story. A friend of mine sent her boy to Germany to school. He promised never to touch a drop of wine. When he came home she wondered if he had kept his word, but did not ask. Opening his trunk, he showed her a picture of the boys, and every one seemed to have a mug of beer in his hand, but her boy had a glass of soda. Do you not think she was glad?

Poem.

When her children are bad,
The dear mother is sad,
When her children are good,
The dear mother is glad.
I like to think your mother true,
Is always glad because of you.
Prayer. Dear Jesus, help me always to make my mother glad, because I am good

No. 2.

Text. "Every day will I bless Thee." 145:2.

Story. A little boy who saw the sun rise for the first time ran to his mother and shouted, "Mama, get up the sun has come out."

Poem.

"Another day is dawning,
Dear Jesus, may it be,
In working or in playing,
Another day with Thee.
"Another day of leaning,
Upon Thy loving breast,
Another day of trusting,
Thou doest what is best."

No. 3.

Text. "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you." Isa. 65:24.

Story. Her brother had fire-crackers and little Julia wanted some, but mother said, "No." She had a few cents and slyly went to the little store and bought some. It was not much fun as she thought it would be, and as she came near home she put the fire-crackers and the lighted punk in her pocket. Soon they began to go off and she ran to her mother crying. Her mother put some salve on the little burns and hugged her and kissed her. And the dear child learned that mama knew best.

Poem.

In a mother's love I see,
Jesus' tender love for me,
That silent, loving pain was borne,
The day he wore for me the thorn."

Prayer.

Dear Jesus, I love mother and I love Thee
You always know what is the best for me.

No. 4.

Text.. "Give us this day our daily bread." Matt. 6:11.

Story. Johnnie was ill but he was hungry. He asked for a slice of bread but mama and Aunt Alice and Aunt Kate all said, "No," fearing it would make him worse. He did not whine, or cry, but folded his little hands and said, "Dear Jesus, your little boy is starving. Please give him a piece of bread." Then grandma came in and said, "Why, we can give him a glass of milk." After he drank it he lifted his eyes arnd said, "Thank you, Jesus, it went to the part what hurted."

Poem.

"Never a trial that He is not there,
Never a burden that He doth not bear,
Never a sorrow that He doth not share,
Moment by moment, I'm under His care."

Prayer.

"Be thou near me,
Guide and cheer me,
Keep me lowly,
Meek and holy."

No. 5.

Text. "We love him because he first loved us." 1 John 4:19.

Story. A little girl was tired playing with her doll and her mother took her on her lap. She said, "I get tired loving dolly cause she never loves me back." "Is that why you love mama?" "One why, but the best why I love you is because you loved me when I was too little to love you back."

Poem.

Jesus called and loved and won me,
His love so great I can't repay,
But I can love him day by day.

Prayer.

"My Jesus, I love Thee,
I love Thee for wearing the thorns on Thy brow,
If ever I loved Thee, my Jesus, 'tis now."

No. 6.

Text. "The Sun of righteousness shall arise with healing." Mal. 4:2.

Story. A lad lay dying in a hospital. A nurse said, "Can I do anything for you?" "Put me in that bed over there in the sunshine." I think he must have prayed, for Jesus healed him."

Poem.

Always live in the light,
Love the sunshine,
Be patient in the night,
Love the sunshine,
This is right.

Prayer.

I love Jesus who gives us the sunshine to live in.

No. 7.

Text. "They straightway left their nets and followed Him." Matt. 4:20.

Story. Whenever anyone asked Dora to do anything, she would say, "In a minute." One day her mother said, "Dora, shut the door or the cat will come in and get your bird." "In a minute, mother." But Kittie did not wait. Dora wept over her dead bird, but she learned her lesson.

Poem.

One glory of life,
Is to ever be true,
Then to do quickly
All that we ought to do.

Prayer.

Heavenly Father, by thy grace I will not say, "In a minute."

Dear Aunt Bettie: Good morning! It is certainly a fine morning in Corpus, spring like and the bay is so calm it looks like a big mirror, face upwards, for the firmament above to look down into, to see the beauty the great Master of the Universe has given it for the enjoyment of mankind. Just at this point in my letter a little flapper, flopper, or flipper just passed and apparently unconscious of the beauties of nature took out a little mirror, rag and box, looked at herself, powdered her face, painted her cheeks and moved on. They said "That is a girl, one of the coming women of the future, if she is permitted to live and can be fortunate enough to get powder, paint and such like to keep her as pretty as she looked like she thought she was as she passed out of sight to mingle with others, leaving us to wonder what the final outcome will be." It was not our purpose when we began, to be thus sidetracked. When the Nov. 16th Herald reached us this morning we were so startled to see our name on page ten in a letter from a little ten-year-old last March 31st young lady, in the person of Miss Frances Brown Geurin, of Almo, Ky., who read my letter in The Herald sometime since, that the 31st day of March is also my birthday and she hoped I would notice her letter and write her. Now isn't it nice to have this opportunity of getting acquainted with my little ten-year-old Kentucky birthday sweetheart? While we are 69 years apart I am sure it will be real nice for us on that day to think we got acquainted through our Boys and Girls' Page in The Herald. I certainly wish her a real happy, useful life as she journeys on toward the home of eternal happiness. I am sure if every boy and girl who writes to Aunt Bettie through page ten of The Herald will live up to the teaching of the dear old Herald we will know each other in the sweet bye and bye and perhaps talk of having such a good Aunt who gave us page ten in The Herald to get acquainted, through the oracles of penmanship. As little fish had better keep close to shore I will make for shore. Good-bye. Success, peace and happiness to all who read. I did not intend for my letter to convey the idea I had never found any one whose birthday was March 31st; but had never found one among the writers on page ten where so many tell their age. I have found one man who was born on the 31st day of March, 1849, which is my birthday, and since my letter, this is the second young lady who has informed me her birthday is March 31st, but not so far back as 1849.

H. C. Cobb,
Corpus Christi, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Even though I've never written you and all my dear cousins before I do feel as though I am "one of you." I like The Herald. Among all the magazines, papers, and pamphlets I read it is my favorite. It is a great source of inspiration to me; for it is full of sound doctrine, prepared by America's foremost men and women in the religious world. I love my home here in the great southland, for its beauty, the ever agreeable climate, but above all, because God has given this part of the country to us to work in and win souls for him. My father is a minister of the M. E. Church. Although he does the chief labor, we all, with God's help, stand behind him. A great desire of mine is to travel. I can just think of all the things God has created that are so wonderful, and I want to see them for myself. A great deal of my time is spent in practicing my music. I am studying the piano, have been for quite a while. I don't know whether I will confine myself to the study of the piano alone or take up another instrument. I am very fond of music, especially sacred and classics. Jazz isn't music to me. I'm going to attend Asbury for my college education. I would never think of spending my time in a school that was not founded on truth and did not stand for the fundamentals. To me, Asbury fills all the requirements of a safe and perfect school. We all enjoy Mrs. Brown's lessons on page ten. They each contain a new lesson for us. We appreciate them very much, Mrs. Brown. For my age I am about normal in weight and height—probably a little slender. I have almost bronze colored hair, blue eyes, fair complexion. I like to read very much. Also to write. If any of the cousins care to write to me I'll be only too glad to answer their letters. So write me. Tell me what you do. I like to hear about your work for God. We are all laboring in some way, let's do it for him. I'm a lover of Nature and spend a lot of time working with flowers and things. I can send you folks some pictures of Florida scenes if you will tell me you would like for me to. All you boys and girls, men and women, write me.

Lovingly, a new Cousin,
Dorothy Luella Tipton, Cottage Hill, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been a long time since I wrote to the cousins. My mother takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I am the little boy who wrote a letter to The Herald last year about the lighthouse. My father is the first keeper. I guess you remember my sister; her name was Sadie. She is dead now. She was at Virginia Beach last month, was in bathing and had a fit and died. We all miss her so much. She was fifteen years of age. She belonged to the Baptist Church and Sunday school. She taught a class and went every Sunday. I am ten years of age and I go to school. I am in the fourth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Margaret Smith. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. Who will guess my middle name? I will write them a letter about the lighthouse. It begins with G and ends with L, and it has six letters.

Alison Johnson,
Corolla, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a North Carolina girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I do not see any letters from North Carolina. Say, N. C. boys and girls, let's wake up and see how many letters we can have on page ten next time. I have brown hair, gray eyes and dark complexion. I am a Christian girl and go to Sunday school every Sunday morning. I belong to the P. H. Church, Brother Farmer is our pastor. My mother is dead but my father is still living. I want all the cousins and Aunt Bettie to pray for him and my brother that they may be brought into the ark of safety. I enjoy reading page ten. Hope Mr. W. B. will be off on a visit when this arrives for I do want to see one letter from North Carolina in print. My birthday is July 23. Do I have a twin? Audie Brown. I guess your middle name to be Ruth. A Book Worth Reading

This is what many able preachers say of Rev. M. E. Shelhamer's late book, "Sermons that Search the Soul":

Dr. H. C. Morrison: "These sermons well deserve the title under which they are published. Any preacher who makes a study of this book will be enriched in thinking and experience for the preparation of spiritual messages for his flock. We recommend it most heartily."

Rev. Paul S. Rees: "Here are sermons that in structure, incisiveness and Scripturalness, remind one constantly of Chas. G. Finney. I have been made to think. Many eyes have been turned inward—and upward."

A fine present to anyone. Nicely bound and stamped in gold. 228 pages. $1.00. Order of

Rt. 3, Aulander, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl from Texas join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother takes The Herald. It is a fine paper, especially page ten. I am eleven years old, and I am in the 5th grade. I belong to the C. M. Church, and go to Sunday school almost every Sunday. I have dark brown hair, gray eyes and am about four feet and ten inches tall, and weigh 84 pounds. I found my girl twin in the September paper, it was Lillie Mae Deaton. Lillie Mae, your birthday is the same as mine. If you will write to me I will answer it; also send me one of your pictures, if you have one, and I will send you one of mine.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson XII.—December 18, 1927.

Subject.—Review of Lessons in the Prophets.

Reading Lesson.—Isaiah 61:1-10.

Golden Text.—God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son. Hebrews 1:1, 2.

Time.—From about 930 to 700, from Elijah to Isaiah.

Places.—The two kingdoms of Judah and Israel.

I do not care to write a review of the lessons of the past quarter, but prefer a heart-to-heart talk with the teachers and pupils who read my notes. Perchance it may be possible for me to stimulate you to take higher ground in studying, teaching and living. If so, the labor of writing will be well repaid.

Once more I find myself in the evangelistic field after my enforced idleness incident to my illness of a year ago. There are some movements in the field that are worthy of careful study.

1. Loose living and down-right wickedness among our young people is undoubtedly increasing at a rapid rate in some quarters. This is especially true in college life and city life. In some places the sins of city life are fast invading the rural districts. In order to bring this matter squarely before you, I shall have to give you some plain facts in very plain words. I quote here from The Methodist, a paper published by Dr. L. W. Munhall, of Philadelphia, Pa. Take Dr. Munhall's editorial at full length, and do your own thinking.

"Is Anything Horrible Enough to Arouse Parents?"

"Our colleges are overcrowded with young people as never before in human history. A small group of these colleges have just organized to maintain moral and Christian standards. But the hundreds of other colleges, church colleges and State colleges, are drifting into grossest teachings of behaviorist psychology, shocking immoralities resulting, religious services abandoned, ruined girls sent home a score at a time, young men suicides and wildest orgies in societies at some of them. Discount all that apologists have brought forward in extenuation, for surely we want to be just and want to believe all the best, yet unquestioned facts and vile teachings are abundant enough to start a country-wide revolt of a million parents at once to stop the fearful devilishness. Will these parents, mothers especially, who are more to blame than girls for present indecent dressing, be aroused to the awful conditions into which they are calmly sending their precious young people?"

"Behaviorist psychology, which is now about universally taught in all colleges, except in the strictly Christian very few, openly suggests sexual looseness and unrestrained gratifying of all desires. Here is a questionnaire which Rev. John W. Walker, headmaster of the Protestant Episcopal School of Meadowbrook, Pa., discovered in use in one of the supposed most moral young women's colleges and other colleges, three of the greatest of which he publicly named in a Synod of his church, and published in daily papers. He named the college.

"This questionnaire was issued to the Senior Class of that great woman's college, Rev. Mr. Walker declared.

"Which do you prefer for yourself: A—Companionate without marriage? B—Companionate with marriage? C—Marriage with children? D—Children without marriage?"

"Do you think women who are able to support themselves should be permitted to have children without marriage?"

"Do you think it an advantage or a disadvantage for a woman to have sex experience before marriage?"

"Should girls have more freedom to seek sex experience before marriage than is now generally approved?"

"Would you use this freedom under favorable circumstances? Have you had such experience? Once? Occasionally? Frequently?"

"This reaches the bottom of horrors of suggested lust. But many teachings and facts like it have been published without denial by these colleges and upon unquestioned reports of students and investigators. It is really unbelievable, but only too true. But the more amazing fact is the indifference of our professing Christian parents! Is there nothing so devilish and destructive of soul and body of their children that they care at all?"

"But why wonder at these mothers' blindness and callousness of conscience when you have before you all the time the indecencies of their own dress and the legs, legs, legs everywhere so disgusting and shocking both of mothers and daughters? A policeman ordered a man to tell his wife to pull her dress, up over her knees, down. The man got angry and the policeman threatened to arrest both if he did not at once do what he was told.

"Does nobody care for purity? Is the man who protests against silly mothers and shameless girls to be a lone voice in our land? Choirs, right up in front of our church, how shocking! The Sunday school's exhibition of lustful dressing once seen only in worse bawdy houses! Half-naked women everywhere you go!"

"Is there nothing to make good women stop and think what the next generation will become with all this horrible lust and vileness rampant? The Canaanites were destroyed utterly because they were so rotten sexually; Sodom and Gomorrah went down under the fire of God for their lusts. So Rome perished for it. How can America escape, headed just that same way and going horribly fast?"

2. Thinking must come first; but we must not spend all our time thinking. The time has come for ACTION! Parents must awake to the dangers attendant upon the education of their children. The downward trend is growing out of the teaching of evolution and its logical child, modernism. It is rife, not only in the schools, colleges, seminaries and universities of the nation, but in the Sunday schools. The literature being sent out by some of our church publishing houses is badly tainted. Sunday school superintendents and teachers should be aroused everywhere. If the literature sent to you is tainted, reject it at once. Either order your literature from a clean publishing house, or use the Bible alone as did our parents in bygone days. I am not sure but that it would be a good thing to bring back the old Book into the Sunday school, and let much of our modern stuff go into the discard.

3. I may be mistaken, but it seems to me that there has never been a time in all the history of Sunday schools when there was such dire need for genuinely spiritual teachers. They must know God in the salvation of their souls; they must be sound in the doctrines of Christianity; they must be apt to teach, as the fathers used to say. Above all, our teachers should be doers of the Word. Their job is immense. Time was when most of our church children attended the preaching services, and heard the Gospel from the lips of God's divinely appointed men; but that time is no more. If our children and young people hear the message of salvation now, they must hear it from the lips of parents and Sunday school teachers. This means that these teachers must in some measure be ministers of the Word. They must live and preach the Gospel to their pupils.

4. In some measure we are fighting against vile literature; but it is coming with a fearful rush. Nothing nastier has hit this nation in a long time than "The President's Daughter." It is not a novel, but a beastly portrayal of the immoral conduct of the late President Harding. This is the limit of all that I have seen from the press. The very dirt of it makes it sell for five dollars per copy. I found it so nauseating that I did not read it in full, but sketched it, that I might be able to warn others against it. Its effect on this nation will be simply diabolical. This is no time for the teaching of modernism to our youth. If we are to stem the Niagara of filth that is being poured upon this nation, our Sunday schools and all educational institutions must be cleaned out. Investigators tell us that about seventy-five per cent of all the magazines offered for sale at the newsstands are too vile to pass through the mails. These things scattered abroad over the land, vast numbers of salacious novels, and the dirty movies make one tremble for the safety of our young people.

5. Amid all the evil tendencies of the hour, there are some hopeful signs. There is in the hearts of the rank and file of our church people a great hunger for God. While many of the clerical leaders are crying out against revivals, calling them religious spasms, the common people are begging and praying for them in many quarters of the land. There is a general disgust against the so-called "whoop-em-up" meetings, but there is a burning desire for an evangelism that will really bring conviction and salvation to the people. Although it will have to come over the heads, and in spite of the protests, of many bullheaded leaders, I am hoping and praying that God will send it upon the Church speedily. This is a time for every faithful Sunday school teacher and every godly preacher to buckle on the armor afresh, and fight with might and main for the salvation of the youth of this nation. We must have a speedy revival, or we are gone. Pray for it; work for it; fight for it with all your might.

NOTICE!

We wish to call attention to the fact that Rev. W. W. McCord, of Sale City, Ga., raises a few paper shell pecans which he says are dedicated to the spreading of scriptural holiness,

IMPORTANT!

I have in stock about 4,000 copies of Mr. John T. Benson's new song book, "Songs of Rapture," which I am offering for sale at the exceedingly low rate of only $12.50 per 100, or $2.00 per dozen. Mr. Benson considers this song book the best that he has issued. More than two million copies of his publications have been sold! This special price applies only on the 4,000 copies which we have on hand. Order at once before the supply is exhausted. Send 25c for a sample copy. M. HOMER CUMMINGS, Publisher Box 390 WHEELING, W. VA.

and he will supply them at 70 cents a pound, delivered anywhere. We have sampled Brother McCord's pecans and can testify to their worth. I do not think I have ever eaten better than those he has sent us.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Otis W. Spinks, 300 Lexington Rd., Wilmore, Ky., has some open dates that he will be glad to give any one needing evangelistic assistance.

Mrs. Laura Crouch: "On Nov. 6, we closed a meeting in the Ebenezer Church on the Golden Gate circuit, in which there were some clear cases of salvation. Brother Ben Cravens, the pastor, is a sacrificing preacher who carries a burden for souls. God has wonderfully blessed in singing and preaching during these services."

Thomas F. Eden and sister, evangelistic singers, of 116 Creston Ave., Audubon, N. J., formerly associated with Rev. C. M. Dunaway, have some open dates in January and February.

C. S. Clarke: "We recently closed a fine meeting at Pretty Prairie, Kan., in which the Presbyterians and Methodist churches united. About seventy souls claimed victory and the churches were left in splendid working condition. The attendance was good, much interest was manifested and conviction rested upon the people in every service."

Rev. L. E. Williams, Wilmore, Ky., one of our most faithful evangelists, is available for meetings anywhere the people need him. He only asks for a freewill offering and entertainment during the meeting.

Rev. F. W. Cox: "After a nine-months' evangelistic tour of the West, and with calls enough to keep us here several months more, we will return to our home in the east, Lisbon, O., by Dec. 21st, and will be open for calls for churches or camps from January 1st and all the year. If interested write us."

Prayers for Girls Prayers for Boys

TWO BOOKS

BY ELIZABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL.

It is with the ideal of helping the boy and girl to face life with God, and to teach them to give true expression to their devotion, that these little books are sent out upon their mission. They enter into the inner sanctuary of the heart, and enable them to give utterance to longings and hopes which heretofore he or she may have been unable or unwilling to speak in the presence of God. A prayer for Courage, for Cheerfulness, for Fortitude under Failure, in Perplexity, in Sorrow, in Disappointment—these few titles show the wideness of the little books' range, and the depth of their understanding and sympathy. It is the ideal gift for every boy and girl in the Sunday Schools and Bible Classes of our churches. We have long needed just such books as these.

Life Annuity Bonds

Of Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky.

There are many Christians who have something laid by which they would like to have used in the work of training a thoroughly consecrated and sanctified ministry at Asbury College at their death. However, they need the income of it while they live, and so feel that the best they can do is to leave it to us in their wills. Too often, unfortunately, these wills are successfully contested and the wishes of the deceased are thwarted.

This difficulty is overcome in an Annuity Contract, for the donor is his own executor. Our Annuity Bonds are secured by the entire assets of Asbury College. The investment is SAFE, the returns are CERTAIN.

Scores of our friends have already invested their funds with us in this manner, and during the more than fifteen years that Asbury College has been issuing LIFE ANNUITY CONTRACTS it has never defaulted on an annuity payment; our friends, moreover, have given us assurance that they have never had occasion to regret their investment in this form of gift to Asbury College.

LIFE ANNUITY BONDS can be written for amounts of $100 and over. Simply write us your age and the amount you desire to invest on Annuity Contract, and we will forward to you at once the Annuity Bond made out to you for your inspection and approval, or you may send us your check with your application, and the bond will be dated back to the day you wrote the check, from which date the annuity payments will be calculated.

Familiar Failures

REV. CLOVIS G. CHAPPELL, D.D.

Applying that same fine ability for analysis which has distinguished his other volumes, Dr. Chappell in this book turns his attention to The Drifter, The Trifler, the man who is too busy, and other well-known types who make a failure of the business of life. He presents the type in a most engaging manner, and then shows the factors operative in each individual failure. An excellent addition to the fine series of character studies which have already given Dr. Chappell a wide and alert audience.

Dying Testimonies of Saved and Unsaved

BY S. B. SHAW.

Multitudes have gone to heaven by giving heed to the testimonies and example of the righteous. This book records those bright shining examples of departing Christians who leave on record something to guide the pilgrim through life. On the other hand the dying testimonies of the wicked reveal in a stark way the "wages of sin" and the end of a misspent life. This book may be used effectively by ministers and gospel workers.

214 pages. Size 5x7 1/4. Cloth, $1.25.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life

HANNAH WHITHALL SMITH.

A whole generation has felt its power and been stimulated by its wholesome faith. THE GOSPEL IS POWER.

By The Editor.

THE Apostle Paul tells us that he is "not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." Men who have felt the power of the Gospel, who have experienced its saving efficacy, who have preached it in its purity, and seen its effect upon others, have implicit faith in the Gospel to accomplish the great ends for which it was ordained, and they are not ashamed of it.

* * * *

The Gospel covers a wide range of truth and teaching. It reveals the fact that man is a depraved being, corrupt in his nature as well as sinful in his conduct. It insists on repentance, faith in Christ, regeneration, the sanctifying power of Jesus' blood, and a holy life. Earnest and faithful preaching of these fundamental Bible truths by a man who believes them with all his heart, and feels their power in his soul, will work moral miracles among men.—Men under the preaching of the Gospel will be transformed, they will be made in Christ new creatures. Sin will lose its charm, and holiness will become their delight.

* * * *

Men who are seeking after new inventions, who want to fill their churches up with shows and amusements to attract the thoughtless throng for a few hours of entertainment, then to go away in their sins to serve Satan and be lost at last, do not know the power of the Gospel. They have no heart cry like the Apostle Paul when he said, "Woe is me if I preach not the Gospel!" They are not wrestling with God in prayer through the night hours for the salvation of souls. They know no deep yearnings to bring men to worship the Lord Jesus Christ in the beauty of holiness. They have turned from the power of God's truth of which they know nothing, to entertainments, amusements, and a thousand fads and fancies to draw the godless crowd about them, to cover up their own leanness and the fruitlessness of their ministry. The people who are deceived by them will finally turn from these deceivers of the people, who if left to do their worthless work, will produce a civilization by and by, which will turn upon the false teachers of a spurious religion and tear them in pieces.

* * * *

The only way to save society from sinking into wickedness, into brutality, rioting, destruction of life and property, is to salt and saturate society with the truths of God's word, to preach with earnestness and authority against sin, to warn men of coming judgment, to point out to them the fearful doom which awaits the impenitent, to bring men by the preaching of the truth, to fear God and keep his commandments. The most dangerous enemy to society, to good civil government, to prosperous trade, the development of science, the preservation of good health and good morals, the uplift and progress of the human race, is the false preacher—the man claiming to be a minister of

THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD FOR THE YEAR 1928.

We wish to say to our old and faithful friends, as well as our new trial subscribers, that we are prepared to give our readers a most interesting and helpful paper the coming year. If variety is the spice of life you will have the "spice."

First of all, we shall give you FIFTY SERMONS by a group of consecrated gospel preachers who will treat many of the fundamental doctrines of the Christian faith. These sermons alone will be worth many times the yearly price of the paper.

There will be a number of sermons from our Editor in Chief which, if put into book form, would sell for the price of The Herald for one year. The chapters of Dr. Morrison's Autobiography will be continued.

There will be an excellent series of articles on important themes by the Professors of Asbury College Theological Seminary.

There will be a strong discussion of Evolution.

We have some able contributors on the Inspiration of the Scriptures.

There will be some interesting and helpful contributions on "Prophecy Fulfilled."

There will be an extended discussion of the Church Question.

There will be able articles on the Second Coming of Christ, and many illuminating and helpful articles on the doctrine and experience of Entire Sanctification.

Laborers in the Master's whitened Harvest Field will speak to us from week to week of their Revivals, Camp Meetings and Conventions. Our readers will get much information about the most important events going on about us.

There will be unrelenting opposition to the skeptical teachings of Modern Liberalism, with a constant plea for revivals and the salvation of human souls.

Words of Comfort for Troubled Souls.

We find many people who are in serious trouble; their troubles arise from many causes. The coming year of 1928 we shall often have under the above heading, a column devoted to those who are in trouble and need counsel and comfort.

We shall have a Serial Story from the fascinating pen of Dr. C. F. Wimberly that ought to be read by thousands of young people whose receptive minds would be influenced by the truths contained therein. It will have a deep spiritual lesson inculcating in the minds of the young in an attractive manner, the essential Bible truths so necessary to the building of strong Christian character.

We want, and need, your help in the war being waged for the saving faith of the Gospel. Renew your subscription in time to get the first issue of the New Year.

God's Gospel—who substitutes the Word of the Lord with his notions, conceits and whims; who would make the Church of God in place of a house of prayer, of repentance, salvation and praise, a place for fun and frolic, for pastime and amusements. May God in his mercy deliver us from such men.

It is not enough that those who believe the Word of God, and the necessity of personal salvation through the atonement of Christ, shall grieve because of the unbelief and worldliness which are creeping into the church; we must speak out plainly. We must preach unsparingly against sin. We must protest against the wickedness about us with great vigor. We must have Bible conferences, holiness conventions, camp meetings, and great gatherings to fan the fire of true revival, to press the work of genuine evangelism. There are many thousands of people in dead and worldly churches whose souls have hungered and starved under the preaching of human philosophies, who are longing for the truth. We must strive to bring them the truth. We must dare and do, press the battle regardless of opposition, criticism, and persecution. We must agitate and arouse the minds of the people who have not yet become infatuated, or stupefied with false teaching. May God mightily stir his people! Who knows but what God might do some mighty things in the earth. He might reveal himself so as to confound the wicked. He might visit judgment upon those who would delude and rob the people of his saving power and truth. We would that THE HERALD family learn to cry to God day and night for a great spiritual awakening.

Will the Organization of Another Methodist Church Become A Necessity?

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY DEAR BISHOP.

THIRD LETTER.

My dear Bishop:

FOLLOWING up the subject discussed in my preceding letters to you, it occurs to me that it is going to be absolutely impossible to ever unite in Christian fellowship those Methodists who hold tenaciously to the Bible as an inspired Book, and the Lord Jesus as the Son of God, offering himself as an atonement; who, in a word believe the old Methodist doctrines and methods, who believe in revivals of religion, in the necessity of the new birth, in the regeneration of the individual, and the going on to Christian perfection, that is, to the entire sanctification of the hearts of believers by a special baptism with the Holy Ghost, and that large element in the church who are avowed modern liberals, who do not believe in revivals, who are teaching broadcast everywhere through the church that children do not need regeneration, who very generally oppose the old Bible Methodist doctrine of entire sanctification, and who seem to be constantly drifting farther and farther away from all fundamental Christian doctrine, and to be coming into closer agreement and sympathy with Unitarianism or even a blasphemous infidelity.

My dear Bishop, infidelity is abroad in the land. Most all of our state and other great universities are centers of unbelief. A very large percent of the professors in the schools of this nation are open and avowed skeptics. A very large percent of those who do not parade their skepticism are thoroughly unfriendly to anything approaching an evan-

TRAVEL NOTES AND BIBLE LESSONS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I shall gather together in this article a number of notes and illustrations which I have picked up in my travels in Europe during the summer. They will all illustrate some scriptural truth and give point to some gospel message.

SALVATION FULL AND FREE. ISA. 55:1.

When in the city of Bath, England, we visited the Roman Baths which were discovered as the Romans left them about 1754. Since then, Bath became famous for its health-giving waters. On one of the tablets there are these words:

"These healing waters have flowed on from time undated to this day. Their virtue unimpaired; their volume unabated; their heat undiminished."

How these waters illustrate the waters of salvation of Isaiah 55 and Ezekiel 47.

1. The waters of salvation have flowed on from time undated.

2. The waters of salvation are never impaired by time or age; in every age they are the same.

3. The waters of salvation have suffered no lack; there is enough for each and enough for all.

A further inscription has these lines:

"The spring from whence these waters flow

In the deep rock lies hid below,
So let thy bounty hidden be,
And only God the giving see."

THE BIBLE AND CRITICISM. HEB. 4:12.

In the Bristol Cathedral we stood at the monument of Bishop Joseph Butler, author of "Butler's Analogy," a wonderful work on Christian Evidences. There is a quotation from Origen on the tablet with these words: "He who believes the Scriptures to have proceeded from Him who is the Author of Nature may well expect to find the same sort of difficulties in it as are found in the Constitution of Nature."

Then there is this tribute to Bishop Butler:

"Others had established the historical and prophetic grounds of the Christian Religion and that sure testimony of its truth which is found in its perfect adaptation to the heart of man. It was reserved for him to develop its analogy to the constitution and course of nature, and laying his strong foundation in the depth of that great argument; then to construct another and irrefragable proof thus rendering philosophy subservient to faith and finding in outward and visible things the type and evidence of those within the veil."

Bishop Butler's great work has played no unimportant part in the theological training of ministers. In our age, however, our modernistic professors and preachers are repudiating Butler and his argument and accepting Darwin instead of Butler on Nature, and following Fosdick, Rall, and others for their theology.

A GREAT LIGHT. 2 TIM. 4:1-3.

We stood on a September morning at the tomb of John Wesley in the churchyard at City Road, London. On the monument there are those remarkable words about Wesley:

"This great Light arose by the singular Providence of God to enlighten the Nations and to Revive, Enforce and Defend the Pure Apostolical doctrines of the Primitive Church."

This is a good designation of early and essential Methodism. Its great object was to revive Bible Religion, to enforce the teachings of the New Testament and to defend the Christian Faith against all erroneous and false doctrines. This we take it is a good designation of every true Gospel minister.

GOD IS LOVE. 1 JOHN 4:8.

We went over on a September morning in a London omnibus to Spurgeon's Tabernacle, made famous by the greatest gospel preacher of modern times. Spurgeon is gone, but his great work goes on and his sermons are still printed and circulated all over the world.

It is related of the great preacher, that on one occasion he went down into the country to visit a friend who had built a new barn, and on the barn was a cupola, upon which they put a weathervane with this text of Scripture on it, "God is love." Spurgeon said to the man: "What do you mean by putting that text of Scripture on the weather vane? Do you mean that God's love is as changeable as the wind?" "Oh, no," was the reply, "I mean to say that God is love which ever way the wind blows!" It will be well to remember this when the next gale of adversity sweeps down upon you.

A minister in England was invited to visit a dying woman. He found her to be a happy Christian. Inquiring how she had come to know the Savior, she presented a piece of paper torn from an American newspaper which contained a part of a sermon from Spurgeon. The scrap had been wound round a package sent to her from Australia. She read the part of the sermon and was converted. Think of it! A sermon preached in England, printed in America, in some way coming to Australia, a part of it used as wrapping paper there, coming back to England and being the means of converting this woman.

EAGLE'S WINGS. ISA. 40:31.

"They shall mount up on wings like eagles." Rev. W. L. Watkinson, one of the most eloquent of British Methodist ministers, has the following in one of his sermons:

"A writer on the London Zoological Gardens refers to the 'spacious aviary' provided for the eagles. Spacious aviary! One would like to know what the eagles think of that. Surely the amplest artificial horizon is narrow, and the loftiest dome mean, to creatures born to range the skies and seek the sun. So the world and the things of the world painfully cramp the creature in whose heart God has set eternity; his cage is narrow even when the stars are its gilded wires. It is said that a bird of the North, confined in a yard, and longing for his Arctic haunts, has been known in spring to migrate from the southern to the northern side of his narrow confines. And however men doom themselves to the straitened life of sense, the instinct of eternity pathetically asserts itself within absurd limits and distracts the soul with morbid repinings."

INDWELLING SIN. ROM. 6:1-7.

At Wesley's Chapel, City Road, London, (John Wesley's own famous church) they have done a work of renovation which, running into years, has made the building not only a thing of antiquity, but also beauty and perfection. Rev. G. H. McNeal, the superintendent-minister, in his report, said:

"The Wesley's Chapel Renovation and Endowment Funds have been completed during the year. But when we speak of the completion of our renovation and endowment efforts, that word is a comparative term. We are at the end of another stage. There can be no finality in the case of an old historic building like this. During the last few weeks we have unexpectedly discovered 'Death Watch Beetle' trouble in the roof of the chapel, between the ceiling and the slates."

It is the "Death Watch Beetle" of inbred sin which handicaps so many professing Christians in the church today.

CONFESSING CHRIST. LUKE 22:14-20.

Quite close to the Louvre, Paris, is a Huguenot church and, in front of it, a wonderful monument to Admiral Coligny who was slain in the St. Bartholomew Massacre of Paris of August 24, 1572, when seventy thousand Protestants perished. We copied from his tomb these words: "1517-1572, Joublerai Bien Volontiers Toutes choses qui ne toucheroient que mon particulier sort D'injures et D'outrages pourvu qu'en ce qui touche la gloire De Dieu et le Repos public il y puisse avoir surete," which, being interpreted, means "I would readily forget everything concerning myself, either injuries or outrages providing that in everything God's glory and Public peace might be forever."

The following incident tells when and how Coligny took his stand for the Church and Christ:

"One day the good knight of Chatillon and his wife were in the little Huguenot congregation in the neighborhood when the Lord's Supper was to be celebrated. As the service was about to begin Coligny arose, and said, 'I beseech the congregation not to take offense at my weakness, but to believe me sincere and pray for me, when I ask the minister to explain the Lord's Supper a little more fully.'"

"All were astonished. The minister, in a few simple words, responded to the request; and the great admiral, never before so great as now, when clothed with the simplicity of a little child, arose again, and said:

"Permit me, brethren, to return thanks to God for this instruction, and to the pastor who has given it so patiently. God sparing me, I shall seek to receive the communion on the first day hereafter when it is administered in my parish."

"Why not now?" said the pastor.

"I have not made yet so public a profession of my faith as I ought."

"You are making it now. Do you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ as the only Savior and Intercessor for fallen man? Do you agree with us in the doctrines which the Scriptures teach, as far as you know them?"

"Most sincerely I do," said the admiral.

"Then, in the name of my Lord and my brethren, I invite you to this table, unless the elders think that our usual rules should be strictly observed."

"By no means let us debar one of the Lord's disciples, for it is his table, and not ours," said a venerable elder. "Where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty."

"And so the great Admiral Coligny crowned the best honors that his king could bestow by becoming a Huguenot, and taking to himself the higher allegiance to the King of kings,—an allegiance in which he was as brave and true a knight, as unflinching a soldier, as stainless in his spiritual honor, as he had ever been in the service of Francis or of Henry."

"From this time Coligny became inevitably the head of the Huguenots and was the first to die in the Massacre of 1572."

Notice!

The Rev. E. L. Eaton, who has for several years been Life Service Secretary of Asbury College, has received a call to the presidency of The Intercollegiate Bible Institute of Washington and has begun his work there. Brother Eaton has rendered valuable service to our college and he goes to the new field with the best wishes of the Asbury College force. In his place, Mr. C. A. Lovejoy has been temporarily appointed Life Service Secretary and all pledges or contributions made to the Life Service Department of Asbury College should be forwarded to Mr. Lovejoy.

THE MILLS OF THE GODS.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

CHAPTER ONE.

A MOUNTAIN FUNERAL.

HE pine box coffin had been lowered into the shallow, ragged grave; old Cy Deets, the gravedigger of Possum Trot neighborhood, had rounded the yellow mound, and the silent spectators began to scatter in various directions. A lad of about fifteen led a stooped, sad-eyed woman from the scene to a rickety old wagon, to which was hitched a bony gray mule. The look on the woman's face did not portray the grief usually manifested at "a burying" in the mountains, but rather a dull, expressionless grief of one accustomed to sorrow and disappointments.

There were no words of sympathy by the "nabers" who had assisted, as best they could, in the funeral; mountain people are not very demonstrative in such matters; in fact, no one felt any special regret that the "revenuer" had got Jabe Hargit, while he was trying to defend his still across Lost Creek.

Jabe Hargit had a long record of lawlessness; he was known throughout the mountains and to the authorities as "Bad Jabe." He boldly prosecuted his moonshine business, and woe be to any one who dared to squeal on him, or interfere. It was generally believed that he was responsible for more than one victim of his deadly aim; but so shrewd were his movements that nothing could be proven against him. No doubt many could have told enough to have sent him to the gallows, but men feared him. Thus, for more than a dozen years, he had ruled, not only Possum Trot, but the Lost Creek section for miles around.

Jabe was a physical giant and in every way a dangerous man; it was well known that his hands were stained with human blood in promoting his nefarious business. Others would have been in the moonshine business, but they dared not be in competition with Jabe Hargit. A fearless young officer came upon him, one who knew well his antagonist, and took no chances.

The story of the tragedy spread like wildfire through the mountains: "The Revenuer got Jabe Hargit." It happened this way: The officer came upon him so suddenly that he was taken by surprise. He always kept a trusty on guard at the mouth of the hollow, and for once the guard was caught dozing, and before he knew anything, the bright steel barrel of a six-shooter was flashed into his face. The watchman was securely tied and gagged, with the understanding that the slightest noise on his part meant death. So the chapter of a wicked life closed, when the deadly aim of the officer did its work as Jabe was drawing his pistol. This ended his reign over the people of Lost Creek.

As the family of Jabe Hargit, the mountain desperado, figures prominently in our story, the readers should know the background leading up to the burying on the mountainside. Many years before, a beautiful girl named Bessie Carmichael heard a message from a mountain preacher telling of the great need and the illiteracy of the Kentucky Highlands. She at once became fired with a zeal to do something for them; whereupon she bravely left her cultured home in the Bluegrass, where as an orphan she had been reared by a generous friend of her father. Bessie was a successful school-teacher, but left it all for the mountain fastnesses. By the aid of a mountain evangelist who belonged to that region, she gathered some children into a school. Through the influence of her foster father, a small appropriation was secured from the State Board of Education to help her in the mission school she tried to open, which was not very successful. This will explain how it all began. Jabe Hargit, then a wild, rather handsome bully of the community, at once sought the attention of the timid young schoolmarm. It was believed that she married him because she was afraid to refuse him. He had the reputation of getting whatever he wanted.

It was not long before the tragic mistake was evident. Very soon the coarse romance became a dull monotony, and the poor girl lost all trace of personality and freedom of life itself. She was a slave to his brutality and drunken whims. A child was born to them and he, likewise, suffered the cruelty of his father's vicious disposition. The lad was a bright, healthy young animal and, in the absence of Jabe, was taught many of the nobler qualities of life. The boy soon became devoted to his mother, and years before the opening of our story, he was able to contrast the difference between his parents.

At the age of fifteen Wallace (Wally) Hargit was a muscular, big-boned chap. Once three or four boys taunted him about being "Ole Jabe Hargit's boy," and like a tornado of wrath he flew at them, knocking them down right and left.

"I got an onory ole Pop, I know," he said to his mother when he got home, "but he's my Pop, an' I ain't lowin' no Burks to pester me 'bout it."

His mother had taught him never to fight, except in self-defense, or to protect his honor. Bessie Hargit lost all interest in life, but her love and passion for her boy. There grew between mother and son an unspoken sympathy and understanding which Jabe detected and, because of it, life became harder for both of them; this condition continued until the fatal tragedy which closed his lawless career at Possum Trot.

"Now, I gotter be a man, sence Pop's gone," "Wally" said to his silent mother, as the mule slowly drew the wagon up the rocky hill to their cabin, "but I ain't a-goin' to be no man like Pop. I kin go to the mountain school now, and we kin go to preachin', can't we, mom?"

"Yes, my boy, and we can have Brother Dobson come to see us now." Bro. Dobson was the circuit-rider who preached once a month in Possum Trot to the few who would attend.

We are attempting to sketch briefly the background in the life of Wally Hargit, with the lights and shadows which were woven into his dramatic career. A close-up will bring into perspective realism, the mountain lad whose tears and triumphs will be followed through the subsequent chapters of our story. He was a boy fifteen years old, physically perfect, and large beyond his age. His eyes were almost jet black, and when stirred with anger literally blazed with wrath.

Once, when Jabe returned home from a drunken spree at a "turkey raffle," he ordered his supper at once, "an' no foolin'" he roared.

"I've only just started the fire, Jabe," said his wife meekly, "if you will be patient—"

"Shut up yer gab," he thundered, and struck at her with all his might, but she dodged the blow by almost falling. At this moment Wally came in from the backyard and, like a young panther, he sprang between them, holding a stick of stove wood from the load he had just thrown down.

"Pop, yer hain't no cause to hit Mom, and yer my Pop, but ef ye ever hit Mom, I'll kill ye," he said in not a very loud voice, but behind the words were flashing eyes. The enraged man made a lunge at the boy with clinched fists; but the lad sprang to one side, and tripped the half-drunken demon and he tumbled to the floor. With the big stick raised over the bewildered man, he hissed at him, "Now Pop, I'll lam ye to death if ye make any other move." The jar somewhat sobered Jabe, and he saw the fury in his son's eyes, enough so, that he turned it off with a guttural laugh.

"My, my, but yer mighty spunky. Don't hit yer Pop; I wus'n't meanin' nuthin'. Yer shore one of the Hargits I'se proud of. You've got the Hargit blood in ye, Ha! Ha! Ha! He! He! He! He!" he chuckled.

Wally Hargit was not at all quarrelsome, but every boy in Possum Trot knew better than to impose on his seeming peaceful disposition. He knew no such thing as fear, and had almost abnormal strength with which to back up his courage. Once when he saw Lijah Ligon, an eighteen-year-old bully, teasing Widow Shanks' little boys who were out hunting, and had killed some squirrels and Lige had taken them from the boys, and they were crying, Wally happened along on his way home from the mill, and asked the boys why they were crying.

"He took our squirrels from us, and won't give 'em back," said the oldest.

"Guess he will give 'em back," said Wally.

"Wat ye got to say about it—yer nothing! I kin whoop ye with one han' tied 'hind me."

"Mayby ye kin, Lige; but yer givin' them squirrels back," he said, putting down the bag of meal he was carrying.

"I won't low none of Ole Jabe Hargit's trash to tell me what I'll do—Do ye git me?" snarled Lige. Wally walked right up to him looking him in the eyes. Lige held the game in his left hand behind him, and growled out: "Ef ye come 'nuther step I'll beef ye."

Wally walked right up to the big boy without the least sign of fear. Lige made a furious swing with his clinched fist, aimed at his foe's head, but Wally ducked so quickly that the blow went wild; before Lige realized that he had missed his opponent a swift upper-cut with full impact landed on his throat and chin which crumpled him to the ground. When he struck the ground, the squirrels bounced from his hand and rolled several feet away. Without waiting to learn the final results of the battle, the little boys grabbed their treasures, which they had proudly brought down from the tall tree, and ran away as fast as their legs could carry them.

Wally stood over his big foe with a menacing gleam in his eyes, ready to deal another fatal jab, if Lige showed any further resistance. "Now git up, ye big coward, or I'll smear ye face till yer Mom won't know ye." Lige was evidently convinced that Wally Hargit was able to do what he said; whereupon he scrambled to his feet and hurried away, but when he was at a safe distance, he turned and shook his fist at Wally, and hissed: "I'll git even with ye fur this, see ef I don't."

When Wally reached his cabin home that night he showed signs of depression, boy as he was. He sat a long time looking into the "fat pine" blaze on the hearth.

"Wisht we didn't live here, Mom."

"Why, son, what makes you feel that way?" said the mother with a show of interest.

"Cause evr'body's so mean and low down, that's why. All they keer fur is to jist drink and fight, an' tote pistols."

"Well, you do not have to do such things, even if they do," she said trying to comfort him.

"But wat kin ye do when they try to run over ye?"

"Just go on and attend to your own business; they know you are not a coward, and all will come right in the end."

So it was, Mrs. Hargit and her brave boy took up the tangled skein of life, and sought earnestly to carry on against all odds. The little hill farm with some twenty acres clear-

SHALL AMERICA GO BACK?

(Address of Commander Evangeline Booth at Anti-Saloon League Convention.)

THE title of my address is—'Shall America Go Back?' and I want, for a little while, to discuss that important question. For it is a question of immeasurable magnitude—a question that is, perhaps of all, most vital to universal righteousness—to which cause our prayers and our powers are dedicated—for among the formidable foes of human weal there is none so insidious, so implacable, so utterly inexorable as intoxicating drink.

"Whilst we mingle our voices in the shout of victory of what will ever be the world's greatest moral triumph, we are still upon the field. Not with our swords in their scabbards, but drawn to drive the remainder of the enemy beyond our gates, and to keep him there.

"The enemy's line has, indeed, crumbled, and his citadel has been captured, but the discredited outlaw still essays a guerilla warfare, and I am quite sure that you will agree we must attack, and then attack again, until the outlaw, drink, with all its nefarious traffic, is denied toleration by men and women wherever reason and truth and feeling prevail.

"With whatever false reasoning some may delude themselves, our experience with all classes of society proves that with the ousting of the saloon, nine-tenths of the drunkenness of the country disappeared. Of all welfare workers none were in closer touch with those who were afflicted with this burning thirst than my faithful officers and people, and their uniform and irrefutable testimony clearly shows that the chief source of former debaucheries is gone. One of my principal officers, an unimpeachable witness, said to me only a few days ago: 'In former days I usually had eight to ten drunken men in my meetings. Since prohibition came I have only seen two men so conditioned in all my meetings throughout the country. Commander, something has happened!'

"Yes, something has happened. The drink-sodden wretch who formerly was the despair of law and almost the despair of the Gospel, is found in only rare instances. Those who are working for the repeal or the nullification of the Prohibition Amendment should solemnly ask themselves whether they are prepared again to expose those fellow-men to this terrible temptation and peril.

"Yes, something has happened. Our Women's Rescue Officers bear testimony to the effects of Prohibition upon the broken hearts of our city streets. These experienced workers cannot be deceived regarding the relation of strong drink or light wine to the social evil. They have a greatly simplified problem with the drink factor eliminated. Whereas in the past hundreds came to the refuge of our Homes as victims of wine-room or saloon-parlor seductions, today drink cases are rarely found, and from the different calibre of cases coming under our care it would seem that the baser forms of the monster's subtle designs cannot be sustained without the stimulus of intoxicating drink.

"Yes, something has happened, for the whole force of our Industrial Home Managers bear witness that the old type of needy man is no more. There is need, but need begotten through drink is practically wiped out, whereas formerly it was one of the most prolific causes of poverty. Our Relief Department and Labor Bureau contribute the same evidence, and every phase of Salvation Army activity unites in extolling the Prohibition Law as beneficent in its results.

"Since Prohibition many of the inmates of our Industrial Homes have banking accounts.

"Shall we temporize, shall we compromise, and thereby jeopardize all for which we have fought for God and home and land? America with the eye of the world upon her has accomplished this thing by the votes of free men and free women. She has erected a new Statue of Liberty with which to enlighten and lead the peoples of every land. Is there one with hand ruthless enough, or with eyes blind enough, or with heart selfish enough, to dare the attempt to extinguish that light and bring this noblest monument low? From the advanced moral standard taken among the nations, shall America go back? All the vile foes that have ever trailed their bloody tracks across street, or vale, or plain; all the cruel instruments of war, ancient and modern, that have drawn blood, torn flesh, maimed bodies, and destroyed life; all the destructive powers that have ever sunk ships, devastated cities, plundered homes, brought down kingdoms—all in their massed aggregate have never occasioned one-half of the sorrow, the breakage, the ruin, the self-destruction and the death that has poured from the cauldron of this red-eyed, fire-mouthed, gory-handed, hydra-headed, diabolical monster—Alcohol!

"Drink has drained more blood, hung more crepes, sold more homes, plunged more people into bankruptcy, armed more villains, slain more children, snapped more wedding rings, defiled more innocence, blinded more eyes, twisted more limbs, dethroned more intellects, wrecked more manhood, dishonored more womanhood, broken more hearts, blasted more lives, driven more to suicide and dug more graves than any other poisoned scourge that ever swept its death-dealing waves across the world.

"Can it be that men and women are so bemused by selfishness, and beset by appetite, that they will take again into their national life, into the bosom of their homes, this baneful, loathsome, reeking, wrecking abomination?

"Let me ask you to step back to the days of the wide-swung doors of the saloon. Let me tear the film from the eyes of men who are blinded by mercenary gains and selfish appetite. Let me persuade mothers and fathers of every status of life for one brief moment to blot out every other consideration while here today we look to the handwriting on the wall of the nation, and read what is written there. Such trembling strokes—such weak, shaky characters—such long spaces between the words; words ill-formed—words ill-spelled—words ill-placed. Such simple little sentences, but vastly comprehensive—such faint impress, but never to be obliterated. Whose are the fingers that have wielded the trembling pen—the thin fingers—the misshapen fingers—the twisted fingers? Whose is the writing? Why it is the children's—the handwriting of the children, across the wall of the nation—stretching from sea to sea!

"Ah! You can hush every other voice of national and individual complaint; you may silence every other tongue, even those of mothers of destroyed sons and daughters, of wives of profligate husbands; but let the children speak—the little children, the wronged children, the crippled children, the abused children, the blind children, the imbecile children, the nameless children, the starved children, the deserted children, the beaten children, the dead children! O my God, this army of little children! Let their weak voices, faint with oppression, cold and hunger, be heard! Let their little faces, pinched by want of gladness, be heeded! Let their challenge—though made by small forms, too mighty for estimate—be reckoned with! Let their writing upon the wall of the nation—although traced by tiny fingers, as stupendous as eternity—be correctly interpreted and read, that the awful robbery of the lawful heritage of their little bodies, minds and souls is laid at the brazen gate of Alcohol!"

THE NEED OF A REVIVAL.

REV. W. E. ISENHOUR.

HAT a gracious revival of old-time religion is needed throughout the nation surely cannot be doubted. To my way of beholding conditions it is the crying need of the day. We are facing serious times, and the outlook is that worse is coming unless the tide turns. The Holy Bible is being attacked and criticised as we have never known before in the history of our country; false sciences are taking hold upon the minds of our youth which are contrary to the Scriptures; the Sabbath is becoming more and more a day of commercialism and pleasure-seeking; the art, literature and fashions of the day are highly suggestive of adultery and fornication; the idea and doctrine of no-hellism is fast taking hold upon the people; the belief that the blood of Jesus Christ is not necessary to cleanse from all sin seems to be gaining ground; the old-time, old-fashioned "mourner's bench" has largely and deplorably been set aside; the church is coming so far short of her opportunities until multitudes of souls are lost all about us, therefore let me repeat, The crying need of the day is a genuine revival of old-time, Holy Ghost religion. Nothing else can save us. Education won't and can't, or else we would be gaining ground gloriously, since we are making great progress educationally as a nation.

Sometime ago I made statement from the pulpit that our emphasis is wrong. Our educators and leaders, even in denominational schools to a very lamentable extent, are laying greater emphasis upon education than they are upon salvation. You know what we emphasize and stress most is what we bend our energies toward most. It is what we pull for, labor, toil and strive to attain. What we need to do is to lay the greater emphasis upon repentance from all sin, regeneration and sanctification; seeking God with all the heart, mind, soul and strength and endeavoring to do his will in all things. I'm not saying that we need less education; we need more of the genuine, and I pray that we may have it; but first and foremost, over and far above that we need more of the religion of Jesus Christ. So instead of laying the emphasis so strongly upon education and so loosely and lightly upon full salvation, it would be well to stop and consider a little, and shift our emphasis in a large measure. I'm sure we could not lose anything good and great, but we would gain. We would not only go far beyond our present spiritual standing as a church, a country and a nation, but our educational program would advance in like manner. We need God in our schools and our education just as we need him in everything else, and until such comes to pass I cannot see that we are going to gain ground. Nay, but we are going to lose. I would to God that we had a thousand schools today scattered over this country like Asbury College, which would turn out multitudes of young men and women full of the fire of God and educated and prepared to fill every place of trustworthiness and responsibility our country offers. This school is one of the few that stands for the Bible in its entirety, that keeps alive and aflame the revival fire, consequently her pupils are going out with the stamp and blessing of godliness upon them to win souls for Jesus Christ, to preach a full Gospel, to fill important places in life, and to let the world know they have been with Jesus, even while receiving their education.

If we are to have an awakening in Methodism that shall bring us back to the Wesleyan doctrine of genuine holiness we are going to have some cleaning up to do. There is going to take place, or shall have to, the removal of lots of books and literature from our midst that is tremendously affected with the modernistic taint; there is going to be removed, or shall have to be, some leaders who are bent on our education instead of our salvation; who no longer hold to genuine repentance with a godly sorrow from the heart for sin; who reject most hurtfully sanctification as a second definite work of grace. Perhaps the only way possible for a cleaning up in Methodism, if indeed it is possible, would be for all God's children in her ranks to get under a burden of prayer and fast and intercede mightily with him. Yes, education is not going to save us, because we can plainly see that we are growing less spiritual as we advance educationally. I fear we are traveling the same road Germany traveled before the great World War. She let up religiously and spiritually, doted upon education, trained her youth in war, forsook the altar and forgot God, then said, "Might is right." If Germany had held on to her genuine heartfelt religion, had kept humble and godly, and had let God control her, then all the nations of earth could not have defeated her. God will always take care of the nation that puts her whole trust in him. And nothing short of divine love, grace, mercy, purity and the fullness of God in the human heart shall ever bring about peace. We are only going to be at peace with each other as we are at peace with God and his eternal truth.

This country—perhaps including every religious denomination—needs to come before God just like the king of Nineveh did when he heard the preaching of Jonah. I want to call your attention to just what happened, both to the king and his people. In the first place he believed God; second, he proclaimed a fast; third, they put on sackcloth; fourth, the king sat in ashes; fifth, they cried mightily unto God; sixth, they turned every one from his evil; seventh, which is the act of God: "And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not."

Such a move on the part of the king and his people even moved God to the extent that he spared the city and her inhabitants. Talk about meeting conditions, but those people met them honestly, earnestly, sincerely, repenting with a godly sorrow from their very hearts and souls, and turning from their wickedness. No doubt that was the greatest revival old Nineveh had ever had. It reached from the heart of man to the heart of God: it reached from earth to heaven; it reached up to the king on his throne and down to every subject in his kingdom. They brought forth fruit meet for repentance and a genuine revival of godly salvation. It came by believing God, fasting, putting on sackcloth, sitting in ashes, crying mightily unto God, and turning from their evil ways. Such a move on the part of the church and our nation today will bring about similar results. And I know of nothing so important! We have got to meet conditions. God has got to know that we mean it. We must be sincere. Ministers need to preach unflinchingly and with ungloved hands against all sin, cry unto the people to repent like John the Baptist, point unto Calvary and the Lamb of God as the only means of pardon and regeneration, and to the blessed Holy Ghost for the one great, important, essential, effective, saving and keeping baptism. May God help us to meet conditions! Unless our pride is cast from us, our pomp and vain-glory; unless we look up from our education and realize that it is not saving us, and never will, and that we need God above everything else; unless we humble ourselves like David of old and cry, "Have mercy upon me, O God, according to the multitude of thy tender mercies; and create within me a clean heart, and renew within me a right spirit," I cannot see but that we have reached the climax as a nation, and our downfall is certain. We have become wealthy, proud, ungodly and unthankful, therefore we are going to have to come down in the dust of contrition before God or we shall be abased. God has told us in no uncertain words, "Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall." Yes, we sorely need an old-time, sin-convicting, soul-saving, soul-purging, Holy Ghost, Pentecostal revival. God grant it!

Revivals.

BY D. ROGERS.

Revivals of religion are an imperative necessity. They are essential to the maintenance of sound doctrine, the progress of moral reforms, the conversion of sinners, the sanctification of believers and the perpetuity of the Church.

The term revival is derived from revivere—again, and vivo to make to live, literally to make live again that which was dead or dormant. Thus vegetation is revived in the springtime. Business is said to be revived, when, after a season of depression prosperity is re-established. So also the Church is revived after a period of spiritual declension when she is quickened into a new life and impelled to nobler activities in her mission of love and blessing to the world.

One method to promote a revival is to develop spirituality in the church. "Judgment must begin at the house of God." It must begin at the end of the church where the pulpit stands:

"Let the priests themselves believe
And put salvation on."

Then our official members—the standard bearers in the army of Christ—must be fully committed to the spiritual interests of the church, and the rank and file seek higher attainments in Christian experience. The ordinary type of piety does not meet the demands of an extraordinary revival of religion. A stream cannot rise higher than its source. The ruddy shepherd boy could never have slain the mighty Goliath without the hand of his God upon him. Samson could not have carried the gates of Gaza to the top of the hill before Hebron, with shorn locks and sightless eyes. "It is not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

"O may his sacred glowing light
In every breast burn higher,
Until believers all shall be
One flame of living fire."

Evangelistic Conference.

The General Evangelists of the M. E. Church, South, will hold their regular annual meeting at Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 20-21. These conventions are great occasions. They bring together the representative, authorized and accredited evangelists of the Southern Methodist Church. There is always a great program given. Vital questions are discussed. A number of the pastors and other high officers of the church are usually in attendance. The evangelists enjoy a feast of fat things and good fellowship. The revival spirit prevails, songs ring out, prayers ascend, strong sermons are preached, plans are laid for spreading the revival fires throughout Methodism. Men and ministers of other churches have declared that the M. E. Church, South, has the strongest group of evangelists in the U. S.

Dr. H. C. Morrison, the Editor of THE HERALD, is one of the number and is generally on hand speaking and inspiring the evangelists to hew to the line and to stick to the great fundamental doctrines of the Bible. Rev. Burke Culpepper, the Secretary, is always present to put pep and snap into the convention. Rev. Luther Bridgers is on the scene to lead the songs and to help steer the bark. Rev. John E. Brown, the spirited leader and founder of the Siloam Springs Institution, is frequently in attendance. His very presence suggests the thought of an intense evangelistic campaign. The inimitable Bob Jones, the "Billy Sunday of the South," is usually on the premises ready to speak on any proposition before the house. Rev. H. W. Bromley is a faithful representative of the body and is always ready to contribute something to the success of the convention. The venerable dean of the evangelists, the heroic and indomitable John B. Culpepper, occasionally shows up at the big convention. He always has something worth while to give the boys. He is greatly honored and esteemed by all the evangelists.

Special Assortment of Christmas Cards.

We have made up a limited number of packages of Assorted Christmas Cards, with envelopes. There are at least twenty-two cards in each assortment, and many of the envelopes are lined with colored tissue.

The sentiment on the cards carries a real Christmas Message. The designs are varied and attractive—holly, snow scenes, wise men, shepherds in fields, and Madonnas. This assortment is well worth $1.50, but our special postpaid price is only $1.00. When ordering ask for Assortment No. 211.

Time would fail to tell of Lovick Pierce Law, John B. Andrews, Albert Fisher, Swift, Swope, Carter, Kendall, and others who add to the interest of the occasion.

A number of song evangelists are always present to cheer the audiences and to furnish special songs as a flavor to the many-sided convention. All told, this is a unique, composite, compelling, potential and significant body. The eyes of Southern Methodism are turned toward this convention of the conquering crusaders of the cause of the kingdom of Christ. Let us pray that a great revival may sweep through the whole church. Dr. J. W. Perry, the honored Chairman of the Convention, takes a great interest in the welfare of the evangelists and exerts his power and influence to make the meeting a great success. Let all pray for this forthcoming convention.

Yours in Christ,
ANDREW JOHNSON.

The Almost Christian.

HERBERT J. MCNEESE.

"Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." Acts 26:28.

There are a great many people who are almost a Christian. They pay their tithe, care for the poor, attend God's house three or four times every week, yet not saved. Do you know, it is a sad thing to see such people outside the fold, yet we evangelists see this in most every meeting. And why are they outside the fold? Some through ignorance of the way into the fold, some through procrastination, others because they think that is all God asks of them, just to do about as near right as I can. To the first class I want to say, seek God, confess your need and your sins, repent, and God will save. To the second class, I give the words of the Bible: "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." To the last class, I say, God wants you, dear heart, and not merely your money and gifts.

Can you not picture yourself, if you are in this class, so near Heaven, and yet—the words of this song be true, "Sad, sad, sad would it be, no room in Heaven for thee, no room, no room, no room in Heaven for thee."

It is a fine thing to subscribe to good holiness papers like THE HERALD, but my friend you may be lost reading a Herald, because you did not obey its wonderful teachings. I appeal to your conscience, dear friend, and I plead with you in Jesus' name, be ye reconciled to God this hour while you have time and opportunity.

ed, the old mule, a few chickens, and an old cow, represented their entire resources; but in a way, the two were happy; just why, they could not themselves understand.

It was the close of a beautiful autumn day; the sun had cast a lazy spell over the silent mountains; every color of the rainbow was etched against the near-by forests; the early frosts had shown their biting visitations and given them the touch of a master artist. The sun was sinking behind the pine-covered peak which towered in the distant west. The boy was returning from the woods with some choice game he had bagged, as he was a skillful marksman. He had been schooled in the use of fire-arms, as the cabin had always been well supplied and, with this qualification, the table was never without plenty of wholesome food—as well as fish from Lost Creek, as Wally Hargit was quite an expert in dealing with the finny and furry tribes.

"Wat de ye think, Mom? I saw some fine dressed strangers looking over our back field, as I was comin' home. Wonder wat they're after?"

The mission of the strangers was a mystery for many days.

A Visit to Bryan's Birthplace.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

The world from time immemorial has honored its heroic dead. Pilgrimages have lined the pathway to towering monuments and mausoleums that mark the high points of human history in its march across the centuries.

The late William Jennings Bryan merits a place among the truly great men of the American nation. For more than thirty years he was a prominent figure in the lime-light of political events. He advocated a number of needed reforms and moulded public sentiment on many moral questions. Vast multitudes on numerous occasions were touched and moved by the matchless oratory of the peerless leader. As one of his many admirers we could not afford to pass so near his old home without making a visit to the famous historical spot where he first saw the light of day. The little city of Salem in Southern Illinois holds the high honor of being the birth-place of this noble man of whom we write.

During our visit to Salem we lectured on "Evolution Outlawed by Science" in the Presbyterian Church of which he was once a member. The pulpit of this church was presented to the congregation by him. From that sacred desk we propounded the old-time doctrine of divine creation as recorded in Genesis and defended with all our might the cause which was so near the heart of the great Commoner. We pointed out the twelve Fatal Gaps in Darwin's theory, an unproved hypothesis, now being discarded by science itself.

The very fact that we stood in the foot-prints of that powerful champion of reform inspired us to renewed efforts in the fight for the faith of our fathers. There before us sat the old school-mates and life-time friends of Bryan drinking in every word that fell from our lips and ready to applaud us as we put the crown of honor and praise upon the splendid career of their former townsman and first citizen. Dr. Thomas, the pastor, presided at the meeting. When the lecture was over among those who rushed forward to shake the hand of the speaker was Mrs. Chance, who said with religious fervor: "Your Bible reads just like mine."

The next day Rev. H. E. Burge, Mr. C. E. Chance, a leading citizen and a staunch friend of Bryan and the writer, went around the Bryan home and had our pictures taken in the front of the building. We stood there as a representative trio—pastor, laymen and evangelist—for the grand old historical faith of the Bible for which Bryan so valiantly and faithfully fought.

Then the camera was turned on the writer alone as he stood with bared head and up-lifted hand, affirming his allegiance to the cause which W. J. Bryan loved and swearing eternal vengeance on the destructive modernism of the day.

From a Western Editor.

Rev. W. H. Nelson, D.D., Editor of the Pacific Methodist, in speaking of the recent annual conference held at San Jose, has this to say of Dr. Morrison's ministry, in the Nashville Christian Advocate:

"But the Conference lived up to its name at San Jose. It was not only pacific, but it came pretty nigh being religious, and there was a reason. Dr. H. C. Morrison, of Louisville, Ky., preached twice a day. Dr. Morrison is without doubt one of the greatest men in our Church; of commanding presence, he has grown old not only gracefully but handsomely. He not only looks like a preacher, but he dresses like one; and when he stands in the pulpit he looks exactly as you would like to have your preacher look behind that throne of power, the pulpit. We had never heard Dr. Morrison preach before. Of course we have always loved him and admired him and expected a great deal from him. He lived up to his advance notices, and then some. Dr. Morrison does not preach short sermons; but if every preacher who preached long sermons preached as well as he does, there would be no complaint as to length. He knows the Word of God and how to interpret it; he knows doctrine, and he preaches with cogency of argument and strong logic. The thing that surprised us most was his sense of humor; it is spontaneous, natural, and scintillating; but finally the secret came out: he has a good deal of Irish in him. But the best thing about Dr. Morrison is that his sermons are intensely spiritual, and, believe us, he had the preachers and the laymen of the Pacific Conference on their knees many a time. Bishop Hay said on Sunday night in the closing session that the marvelous spirit of the meeting was due to the sermons of Dr. Morrison, and his presence among us was a heavenly benediction. Dr. Morrison goes to the Arizona Conference and will spend three months on the Coast holding meetings in some of our largest churches."

"The Beauty of Holiness."

EDWARD SEARLE.

It is strange to what lengths some preachers will go to avoid plain scriptural truths and yet, not neglect them altogether. I attended a church in Cleveland not long ago where the minister made the above words the subject of his discourse. Seemingly knowing nothing of the true spiritual meaning of the words, he spent the time pointing out the beautiful adornments of religion, such as John's description of Heaven or magnificent edifices, expensively adorned—of the beauty of the church service in its symmetry and euphoniousness, ridiculing extemporaneous prayer as inadequate in dress and uncouth in sound, etc. He used as his argument that God had made everything beautiful and therefore man should do his part in the arrangement of worshipping such a God. His platitudes were quite plausible from his point of view, but to one who has been "born again" and become a "new creature in Christ Jesus," they were far from satisfying or to a hungry heart panting like David of old, after God and true holiness.

This morning I passed a church that is the mother of modernistic ideas and saw the announcements for the Sabbath on the bulletin board where the sermon subject was given as "The Holiness of Beauty." Such a travesty upon plain Bible words, but then, what can you expect of "Blind leading the blind!"

I could not afford to take the time to hear that sermon.

There is, however, a "Beauty of Holiness" that is far more wonderful than externals could ever make, and this beauty is noticed by the saved and unsaved whenever they come in contact with it. It takes place in the heart and it shows in the voice as well as in the words spoken. It shows in a holy calmness displayed under stress—patience in tribulation, in a mighty faith in God—and a perfect trustfulness in his care and guidance; in perfect love toward God and mankind, even to that of loving your enemies. But, "this isn't natural," someone says. To be sure it is not. It is supernatural—as are all things pertaining to the grace of God.

When the modernist or the scientist take the supernatural from religion they rob it of its divine origin and power and it immediately becomes a man-made affair. Until we can convince the world that the common acceptance of religion is not the religion of the Bible, but is man-made, we will not be able to convert it to God.

Bishop Candler at His Best.

The year 1927 marked the issue of a small volume under the name of Bishop Warren A. Candler which we think represents a climax in the splendid constructive thinking of this good man. The book is entitled "The Christ And The Creed," and it originated in the Jarrell Lectures at Emory University last spring.

Bishop Candler starts his series of deliverances with the quotation from Grotius that "incredulity has in it something voluntary." He makes a wonderful case for the Christian faith.

An intelligent presentation of the Christ of the New Testament is the theme of the hour. We are fortunate to have a man of Bishop Candler's scholarship and, more important, his intellectual power, come forth and present this theme as it is presented in this book, free from the artificial theology of the middle ages and sound in its adherence to historic Christianity. Bishop Candler's book, "The Christ And The Creed" is alive and up to date in its treatment of the issues involved. Price, $1.25. Order of Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

JOHN PAUL.

What Shall I Buy For Christmas?

Very soon all over the land the question, "What shall I buy for Christmas?" will be demanding a solution. Among the many articles which you may be considering, may we suggest the peculiar suitability of the Bible? Holding as it does so important a place in the Christian experience surely nothing could be more suitable as a gift to a member of the Christian fellowship.

It is true that the Bible is already very extensively used for Christmas gift purposes, but it is remarkable to find, however, how many Sunday school children are still without a Bible of their own. There are multitudes of older folks who are still trying to read Bibles with fine print they had purchased or had given to them years ago when their eyes were younger and keener. To such, a large print edition would certainly be a comfort, and a most appreciated gift.

There are many Sunday school teachers who are trying to get along with a Bible that is altogether inadequate to their needs. How much they would enjoy an edition which has teachers' helps that would make their Sunday school work a joy instead of a drudgery.

Just as a reminder, therefore, we suggest that you include the Bible on your Christmas gift list.

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

MT. CARMEL HOLINESS CAMP MEETING IN THE MOUNTAINS OF KENTUCKY.

The Third Annual Holiness Camp Meeting under the auspices of Mt. Carmel Church and High School, Lawson, Ky., was held at the school grounds August 21-31. This camp, under direction of the president, Miss Lela G. McConnell, has been graciously sealed by the mighty presence of the Holy Ghost. During the entire ten days the Shekinah glory rested on the meeting. Each day brought forth new surprises as the Spirit of the Lord continued to manifest his control over each service. Rev. W. B. Weaver of Bethlehem Methodist Church, Detroit, President of Romeo Camp Meeting, was the evangelist. He is a faithful preacher of the doctrine of entire sanctification and as he proclaimed day by day the beauties of holiness, the Lord honored the word by convicting souls for their need of regeneration and entire sanctification. Sister Weaver was also a great blessing to the camp through her heartfelt interest and her grip of faith as she caught the vision of the great task of evangelizing these sturdy mountain people. The stirring music by the Mt. Carmel Quartet brought much blessing in the services.

Among those who sought the Lord in his saving or sanctifying power was a precious woman, a near neighbor to the school, who was gloriously sanctified wholly, and shouted the praises of God as she felt the bondage of years drop away and the emancipation of her soul accomplished. Two morning services of the camp were devoted to the reports from the workers of the out-post stations, a part of the evangelistic program of Miss McConnell for the spread of scriptural holiness in the mountains. These services were filled with the voice of praise from the willing and faithful workers as they told of their experiences in answered prayer, the presence and power of God upon their work and of the souls who found salvation through their word, out in the front-line trenches of this Gospel warfare. Seventeen of these stations were maintained throughout the summer and nine of them will continue through the winter.

The guests came from far and near. Some walked long distances; others came on mule back along the steep mountain trails, and in wagons over the ridges. Two parties came through in cars from other states. Other guests came from the immediate and adjoining counties. The two dormitories were ample for the entertainment. A precious spirit of Christian fellowship prevailed and the home-like atmosphere was enjoyed as the guests took part in the simple duties about the dining room and kitchen. Through the new light given through souls being convinced of the reality of full salvation and through the melting away of old prejudices, we feel this third annual holiness camp meeting to be a long and decided step toward the fulfillment of the promise God gave Miss McConnell in the beginning of the work. Josh. 17:18—"But the mountain shall be thine; for it is a wood, and thou shalt cut it down; and the outgoings of it shall be thine: for thou shalt drive out the Canaanites, though they have iron chariots, and though they be strong."

Miss Mary Vandiver, Sec.

HAPPY AND PROFITABLE YEAR.

To my good friends throughout the country I want to say that I have just closed the happiest and most profitable year of my evangelistic career. God has been unusually gracious in blessing my efforts, which have been devoted more particularly to helping the youth of our churches come to definite knowledge of a very real Christ in the heart. There is no more wonderful work than with the young people. To my mind there is a portentous awakening among them throughout the land as they are seeking the serious realities of the Christian religion.

I would like to call attention especially to my last three conventions held in south Louisiana, in the Lake Charles district. The young people had held prayer groups and made special preparation for these meetings for weeks, so when the opening hour came there was a fine spiritual atmosphere and a high degree of enthusiasm.

The first convention was five days in the small town of Roanoke. Young people attended from a radius of fifty miles. Out of this came thirteen dedicating themselves to life service in the work of the Kingdom. Next point was at Edgerly, another village, for three nights, in which two young women were converted. The high pinnacle of the series came at Longville the last week-end. Delegations came from many points. It was a wonderful sight to see these consecrated young people gathered here and there through Sunday in prayer groups and doing personal work. Each service was an epoch, but in the closing night service God's spirit swept the place. Sixteen of the choicest young men and young women were converted, and six gave themselves for full time life service. There was weeping and rejoicing until a late hour.

Much credit for leadership among these young folk is due to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weber, Mr. and Mrs. Seaman Mayo and "Uncle Ben" Mosier. Laymen of Lake Charles, who literally gave themselves without stint, almost at the sacrifice of their own personal interest, to keep these young people active. With house parties, camp fires and various social events they keep them welded together, but always with the spiritual note in the foreground. It was a wonderful sight to see a Halloween camp fire on the Weber farm close out with an impressive prayer service, after singing hymns and having personal testimonies. We attributed the success of the last Sunday to the fact that in a house-party Saturday night between twelve and one o'clock a group of these young folk were on their knees in earnest prayer for their comrades and friends.

May God grant to our young people in the Epworth Leagues and other organizations a new conception of the joys in holy living and personal service.

ROYALTON, MICHIGAN.

The Evangelical Church of Royalton, Mich., was indeed happy to have Miss Imogene Quinn, well known "Hoosier Evangelist" of Indianapolis, return to us for a two-weeks' revival campaign after conducting a successful revival here seven months ago.

Miss Quinn again so fearlessly preached the word and with such simplicity and power that sinners were converted, believers sought the'r Pentecost, and the entire church and community were greatly blessed. A goodly number of adults were baptized and united with the church in the closing service.

The evangelist remained over one night and gave her "Life Story" to a very large, appreciative audience. That this service was most interesting and fruitful was proved when at the close of the message a splendid group of young people publicly dedicated their lives for whatever service God might call them.

Besides the free-will offering given Miss Quinn for her services here, the congregation also presented her with an extra purse with which to increase her fund for a trip to the Holy Land which she contemplates in the near future. Our prayers and love will follow our little lady preacher wherever she may go.

REVIVAL AT LANGDON M. E. CHURCH, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Langdon M. E. Church is located in a suburban resident section of Washington, D. C. It is a family church with about 140 names on the church records. Rev. Fred Ronald Barnes has been the pastor of this church now for two years. Two brothers, Rev. E. Richard and Rev. Harold R., have adjoining circuit charges in Northern Pennsylvania in a part of the Central New York Conference of the M. E. Church.

Several months ago the Official Board of the Langdon church extended an invitation to the pastor's two brothers to assist in a revival effort, and they were granted leave of absence to accept this invitation. The pastor and people prepared the way for this special effort of revival by several cottage prayer meetings each week preceding the time set, October 28th to November 13th. There is a loyal group of lay folk in this little church who are in earnest about making their church a real soul-saving institution, and are standing by and upholding their pastor in his faithful leadership in this endeavor.

The meetings were opened at the regular worship service on Sunday morning, October 28th. The preaching was merely the plain Gospel on such subjects as Sin, Repentance, Confession, etc. On Wednesday evening the Christians were called to the altar in a consecration and prayer service, and on Thursday evening the first call was given for seekers. Six responded to the invitation to come and seek Christ as their Savior. Interest and attendance increased throughout the time of the meetings. The meetings closed on Sunday night, the 13th, with a Spirit-filled service from start to finish. There was the largest response to the altar invitation of any time during the revival. Including about 20 children on children's night there were about 60 seekers at the altar of prayer during the entire time. There were several parents who came forward on Home Night to pledge the establishment or continuation of Family Altars. It is the feeling of the pastor and people of Langdon church that this special effort is to be only a beginning of a continuous program of soul winning the year round.

This is the first time that these three brothers have labored together in this way, but they feel that this is only a beginning of a Life-Ministry of evangelistic efforts. During the revival at Langdon, the pastor, Rev. F. Ronald, took charge of the music, Rev. E. Richard took charge of the children's work and preached on "Booster-Home" night when the children sang their Booster songs. Rev. Harold R. did the preaching, outside of this one night.

REPORT.

I am writing this report to inform you I have not backslid or gone out of business for my King or his kingdom. It has been sometime since I reported my work, but I have been busy about the Master's work. I was one of the preachers in my two last camp meetings. Hillcrest, Ill., camp was a good one, my co-workers being Rev. Montgomery, of St. Louis, a most godly man and a good preacher. Prof. R. A. Shank and wife had charge of the singing and there are no better singers in the field. I enjoyed working with them and the good people of Hillcrest. They said it was the best camp they had had in years. The altar was full a number of times and many were blessed. In all we had a good camp. I had to leave on Thursday before the closing Sunday in order to meet my engagement at Circleville, Ohio, camp. This camp started in a bloom and ended in a glorious climax and victory. The long altar was lined almost every service. This was one of the greatest camps I have been in for years. But why? Howard Sweeten was my co-laborer and a better one cannot be found in the movement. Rev. Charles Slater had charge of the singing and to say it was well done is putting it mildly. Old Slater is a wonder, three in one, a number one singer, a great preacher and a missionary all over. My! how I enjoyed laboring with these good, true servants of our Lord. This camp meeting board is one of the greatest I have ever been with.

After closing this camp I hurried on to London, Ky., to the seat of our conference; here we met all our brethren and had a good time. We had a number one conference in every way. When the appointments were read I was read out for Carter's Chapel and Berry. Thanks to the powers that be for this appointment. When they ask me where I was sent I tell them to two of the best churches in the Kentucky Conference, but as we have told them, there is great room for improvement. God is blessing us in our new field of labor. Berry gave us a glad surprise at the close of our last Sunday evening services with a nice and needy donation and assured us there was more to follow, and we heard it whispered at Carter's that they were fixing to pound some more life into the Roberts family. My presiding elder assured me I would be taken care of by these good congregations and they are proving it every time I am with them. They, with my good Bishop and presiding elder, have placed me under great obligations. Pray for me, brethren, that I may be able to administer unto them in spiritual things and be true to the great task the church has entrusted to me. We are planning to have a revival in each church. Just closed a good meeting with Brother Ishmael at Rockbridge Church, a number blessed. If we could have gone on another week I believe we could have had a great revival. Bro. and Sister Ishmael had charge of the music. Blessing on our good editor, paper and readers.

T. P. Roberts.

EVANGELIST EARL E. CURTIS' REPORT.

Sunday night, November 6, I closed a series of meetings with the Nazarene Church at Beacon, N. Y., Rev. Paul Moore, pastor. God was with us in mighty power from the very beginning; some beautiful cases of salvation and sanctification. The last night fifteen came to God and the Lord favored us with a wonderful altar service.

Paul Moore is one of the greatest pastors in the world, and I am sure his church will bear me out in this statement. God is literally working miracles through him and his splendid people in that place. I am not acquainted with a pastor who spends as much time in prayer as Paul Moore does. A number came over from Spring Valley two Sundays and God made them a real asset to the services. Clifford Smith, of Spring Valley, is one of the most wonderful, from every standpoint of view, laymen in the world. Several attended regularly from Poughkeepsie. The last Saturday an old friend of mine drove three hundred miles to be with us the closing day. There was no pull nor tug for finances, and besides taking good care of the evangelist, $160 was given the pastor as a love-offering. The evangelist was unanimously called back for next year. I sincerely believe that a God-called, God-fearing evangelist can have a revival anywhere top of dirt with the co-operation of such a pastor as Paul Moore. The Lord bless his people everywhere.

Yours seeking the old paths,
Earl E. Curtis.

BROTHER PICKETT REPORTS.

I have preached this year in Kentucky, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, New Jersey, New York, District of Columbia, Illinois, Pennsylvania. Among other lines of work I visited eight camp meetings in the interest of a Protestant movement. I have also brought out the past year three books: "Why I am a Pre-millennialist," "Al Smith and the Presidency," and "The Antichrist." This last is a subject on which a vast lot of nonsense is being talked. People ask me, "Don't you think Mussolini will be the antichrist?" No, no more than I think you will go to heaven in an airplane. The antichrist is a great religious leader. St. John says, "All the world worshipped him," etc. Who would worship Mussolini? Not even a crazy Italian. A man said to me recently, "But you know the antichrist is to be a Jew." No, I don't; I know he is not to be a Jew. The antichrist is to be a world king. And this is the "time of the Gentiles," the time when the Gentiles rule the world. The Jews will have no king till Jesus returns. Study Hosea 3:4, 5, Ezek. 21:25-27. The next king of the Jews will be the king of glory. Read my book, "The Antichrist," and let it settle all this nonsense about a Jew, or Mussolini being Antichrist. Order of Pentecostal Publishing Co. $1.50.

But I started to say, that I will be glad to make dates with churches for from two to six or eight of my Bible expository sermons. Southern dates preferable for winter. I have been a Bible student 62 years, a Christian 57, a preacher 51. Praise God I know, believe and love the old Book.

Amazing Grace.

"Amazing Grace" is one of Dr. Ridout's latest and best books. It contains the cream of his writings and study of twenty-five years. For the Holiness people it is a book to instruct, inspire and set the soul on fire. Price $1.00. Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

gelical vital faith which insists on the regeneration of the individual. The church is swarming with teachers in summer schools and Sunday school training schools who speak lightly of that great change of heart that our Lord Jesus Christ calls being "born again" and declares is absolutely essential in order to entrance into the Kingdom of God.

I think it will be generally agreed that men must be sincere in matters of religion. Their souls' salvation depends upon their sincerity. Saul of Tarsus was wrong, but he verily thought he did the will of God and believing this he persecuted the church. His sincerity, the honesty of his soul in the matter, opened the way for the Lord Jesus to appear to him in gracious saving power. Hypocrisy, in the very nature of things, is hateful to God, and blocks the way of any possible approach. The sincere man, if he is wrong, offers fruitful soil for the sowing of the seeds of truth. Men in matters of religion must have a good conscience. They cannot afford to hush the voice of conscience, to trample upon their own firm beliefs, to give up what they believe to be essential, saving gospel truth, and accept that which contradicts their Bible as they understand it, and is in direct opposition to the religious experiences that they have enjoyed and find so necessary to peace of mind and rest of soul, and follow the leadership and contribute to the support of what they firmly believe to be false and dangerous teachings which must lead to the destruction of human souls. Can any honest man, bishop, editor, church secretary, district superintendent, presiding elder, pastor or lay leader demand of their fellows that they shall surrender their belief in the teachings of our fathers who set on foot and carried forward the greatest revival known in the church since the days of the apostles? Shall they tear out of their hearts by the roots the faith that is in them, repudiate the experiences that have been wrought by the Holy Ghost, and give themselves over to negations, to denials of all these essentials of our Christianity and follow some will-o'-the-wisp, hide-and-seek teaching that absolutely contradicts the Holy Scriptures, their belief in them, and the experiences that they have found by believing the Bible and trusting in the Christ of the Bible? My dear sir, it seems impossible that sane men, Christians or otherwise, should make any such demand.

I am positively confident that any true Christian, yielding to such demands, would forfeit not only his faith, but his Christian experience. He would turn back from following his Lord and in the end would recrucify the Lord who has bought him in the agonies of the Cross. For one, I believe that godly men and women throughout the church, North and South, should rise up in rebellion against every phase of modernistic teaching and leadership. I believe that the teaching of the modernists is a menace to all spiritual life; that it is undermining the faith, breaking up the authority and sacredness of the home; that it is polluting society, corrupting politics and lifting the floodgates of sin and crime on every hand. Destroy the belief of men in the Bible, weaken or take away their trust in Jesus Christ as a Savior, pluck a wholesome fear of God out of their hearts and you have brought in the wreck and ruin of all things sacred. You have prepared men for the sowing of the seeds of all sorts of unbelief and lawlessness. You have gotten men ready for a most dangerous brand of socialism, the ignoring of authority of every kind, the bringing in of Bolshevism, the wreck of nations, the turning back of the wheels of all true progress, the tearing of our beautiful flag from the pole and the destruction of our nation. We must fear God and keep his commandments if we expect the blessing and leadership which are so necessary to our individual salvation, the sacredness and happiness of our homes, the preservation of high ideals in our society, the safety of our nation and everything that means the progress of civilization, the uplift and betterment of mankind.

Is it at all probable that the modernists will ever confess their wrong and come back to faith in the Bible, their belief in regeneration, the deity of our Lord and the Atonement he has made upon the Cross? But we must continue this discussion next week.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

Eight Great Days With Dr. Shuler.

Spent eight days, covering two Sundays, with the famous Bob Shuler, D.D., pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, South, Twelfth and Flower Streets, Los Angeles, Calif. They were great days! Shuler is one of the most interesting men one will meet in a lifetime. He is perfectly frank, perfectly honest, perfectly fearless, and absolutely for the Word of God from lid to lid.

He has somehow gotten the notion that the preachers of the Gospel ought to cry out against sin in high places and low, in the church and in the world. He exalts the gospel above all things—men, devils, sin, everything. Jesus is the center of his message, and the people flock to hear him by the thousands. Church, gallery, Sunday school room, chairs, pulpit platform are filled with people. If his church held five thousand no doubt it would be filled. He has a great Radio audience and not only broadcasts all of his sermons, but several messages each week to a great audience of people scattered over the state.

Los Angeles, with its more than a million inhabitants, is one of the most interesting cities in the nation. It is surrounded with other cities of teeming population, with ocean in front, and the snow-capped mountains for a background, and an occasional tremor for variety. On the night of my arrival I slept on the seventh story of the Angelus Hotel. The next morning on awaking, I found my bed rocking under me with a peculiar sensation. I looked at my door and saw the leather tag on my key swinging like the pendulum of a clock. "Earthquake," I exclaimed! I arose at once and, on looking out from my window, the buildings about me seemed to be quiet and unmoved. The tremor was over in a few seconds.

We had services at Trinity at 3 in the afternoon and at 7:30 in the evening. We had splendid afternoon congregations and great crowds at night. Frequently the long altar was filled with people seeking pardon or perfect love, and quite a number were blessed. I have not found a church in twenty years more ready to enter into a revival meeting. It was generally supposed if the meetings could have continued three or four weeks that hundreds of souls would have been saved, but I had other engagements and other work was scheduled for the city. I was asked to return in the future for a longer stay, and if the Lord wills I shall be glad to do so.

Some people have an idea that Dr. Shuler is a sensationalist. This is not at all true. He does discuss moral issues and civic righteousness, but the thing about him that draws the crowds and holds them is his earnest preaching of the old, powerful gospel of Christ.

He publishes a monthly magazine which has a wide circulation and sells at the Magazine stores. It is a literary live wire. Write to 12th and Flower Sts., and get a copy. If you read one you are almost sure to become a yearly subscriber.

While at Trinity I had the pleasure of meeting a number of old Asbury boys, among them Donald Householder who is doing a fine work with the young people at Trinity; Claude Young, who graduated last year at Asbury, is assistant pastor of a large church in Pasadena, and is attending the University of Southern California. He had me down for dinner and an address at a large gathering of graduate students, with a number of professors. Bob Young is taking a degree at the University and serving as pastor of an excellent church at $2,500 a year, and a beautiful new parsonage. I had the pleasure of taking dinner with Bob and his wife, both of them much loved Asbury graduates. They have two as fine little boys as I ever saw, both of them facing toward Asbury College. Brother Young will not let his school work keep him out of his full salvation camp meetings next summer.

I went over and preached at the Bible Conference and Holiness Convention in the Free Methodist College, to a wonderful audience and we had a gracious meeting.

Let THE HERALD family pray for God's blessing to be upon Bob Shuler, Trinity Church, and the great work going on there. When you go to Los Angeles go to Trinity Church, corner 12th and Flower Streets,

Monthly Sermon.

A WHOLESOME FEAR OF HELL.

Text: "And these shall go away into everlasting punishment." Matt. 25:46.

The fear of punishment has a powerful restraining effect upon those who are criminally inclined. If a group of young men planning a bank robbery should become convinced that if they carry out their plans they will be captured and shut up in prison for a period of twenty-five years, they would quickly decide not to undertake the robbery. If a man planning the murder of his fellowman should be made to feel sure that if he committed the murder he would dangle at the end of a rope or be strapped in an electric chair and the current turned on he would hesitate long and seriously before committing the murderous deed; in fact, he would not commit the murder. The few murders committed in Great Britain, and the quickness and regularity with which murderers are punished by the British Government, is positive proof of the truth of my statement.

Criminals in planning crimes always plan a way of escape. They time their wicked action when they think detection is most unlikely. They take advantage of the darkest hour, wear disguises, creep stealthily upon their victims and in every possible way seek to escape detection and merited punishment for their criminal deeds.

We have a high tide of lawlessness in this nation because we have a low tide of law enforcement and the prompt and adequate punishment of criminals. There are such combinations of the bad element of the country that witnesses are afraid to appear upon the witness stand and tell the truth about those on trial. Jurymen are hard to find who cannot be tampered with. Great criminal lawyers are aiders and abettors in crime because of their skill in hindering the prosecution of criminals and law enforcement.

In this nation there is murder about us everywhere in every class of society because the violators of law expect to escape punishment. There are postponements of trial until the public loses interest in the case; witnesses die, move away or are bought by those who would be damaged by their testimony. The edge of prosecution is dull, and not unfrequently there are financial considerations that hinder the moving of the wheels of justice and so, as I have said, we have a high tide of crime because we have a low tide of the enforcement of law and the punishment of criminals.

I might also mention the fact that pardoning power is used in this country in a most shocking way. It is entirely overworked and because of all these hindrances to prosecution and punishment, the criminally inclined feel that they can rob, murder, burn and destroy and by some means go unwhipped of justice and become more bold in crime, while an army of youth growing up and observing conditions in this particular, believe they can enjoy the loot of their robberies with little probability of punishment; so the criminal class is constantly increased to a vast army that jeopardizes life and property throughout the land.

There is much complaint of the breaking down of home discipline; that the mass of the rising generation is growing up without parental restraint and guidance, running at will and doing as they please. You cannot have a well governed home without regulation for the order, peace and happiness of the family. Children must learn obedience even if it calls for punishment. We understand that punishment is quite out of fashion these days, but the Bible speaks plainly of the advantage of the wise use of the rod. The child who does not obey its parents will not obey its teachers, and the child who does not obey its teachers will not obey the police, and the child who has grown up to disobey parents, teachers and the officers of the law, will not obey God; thus we have come to have a riot of sin in the home, a lamentable condition of disobedience and wickedness in the school, of lawlessness in the land, a general rebellion against God, and a rising tide of unbelief and wickedness which threatens the very foundations of our great republic. This spirit spreads throughout the world in a spirit of communism and anarchy which seeks to tear the very foundations from beneath the whole superstructure of civil government and well ordered society. There was a time in the memory of this preacher when the ministers of the evangelical churches of this country did not fear to stand in their pulpits and preach faithfully to the people the Bible doctrine of future punishment, of a hell of torment awaiting the wicked and impenitent who trampled upon divine law and rejected divine mercy. There was cultivated in the minds of the people a wholesome fear of hell and it had a wholesome restraining effect upon the minds of those who were inclined to run rough-shod over the laws of God and man and devote themselves to lives of wickedness.

The teachings of our Lord Jesus are very plain on this subject. He does not hesitate to warn men that there is a place of future punishment, a lake of fire, a place of torment, of weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth. We do not understand the mental condition of those religious teachers who ignore the teaching of Christ on this subject and yet claim that he is the Son of God, the Saviour of men, a trustworthy and reliable teacher on other subjects. If Jesus cannot be trusted to speak truthfully with reference to the future punishment of the wicked, he cannot be trusted to speak truthfully with reference to the future rewards of the righteous. If Jesus spoke in ignorance or with wilful deception on the subject of the place of punishment for those who live in sin and refuse mercy then, as a matter of course, he is untrustworthy in the whole body of his teachings. This way of religious teachers dividing up the words of our Lord and claiming that on some subjects he is trustworthy and on others he is not to be trusted, is illogical, unscriptural and confusing. No man claiming to be a religious teacher has any right to discount the teachings of the Lord Jesus on any subject. We fully believe that Jesus was the Son of God, that he was the source and fountain of truth, that all he said came out of divine wisdom, unlimited and absolute knowledge of the subject on which he spoke. With reference to Hell as a place of fearful torment there is no question in our mind but that our Lord spoke the truth. He knew, he loved men; he came to seek and to save them and he uttered faithful warning to those who refused to be saved.

God has implanted in the human breast mercifully and wisely a fear of punishment. This is a part of man's intelligence and a very important part. The fear of suffering guards and restrains intelligent people from the indulgence of appetite and propensities which would destroy their health, break down their morals, and disqualify them for usefulness and happiness in the world. Parents warn their children to keep away from the fire lest they suffer the torture of burning their limbs. They warn them to keep out of deep water lest they drown. They appeal to their fears, to their love of life and happiness. It would be strange if we did not have some teaching from our Lord Jesus with reference to the final fruits of a godless life. It is in perfect harmony with these instructions from our Lord that the Apostle has written, "The wages of sin is death." This does not mean extinction, but it does mean that sin is a dagger which stabs to death all capacity for happiness and life in its fullest and most blessed realization.

There are those who will tell us that Jesus, when he spoke of a pit of torment, of a lake of fire, of weeping and wailing, was using figures of speech. Very well, suppose he was. Could Jesus possibly use figures of speech that exaggerated the facts? Impossible! If Jesus used figures of speech when he spoke of a lake of fire burning with brimstone, what must the facts be? It is unthinkable that our Lord would exaggerate or overestimate the facts. If he should do so, he would be guilty of gross deception. So let it be understood that the figures which Jesus used to convey adequate conceptions to our mind were always in harmony with the facts; they were never exaggerations.

We are hearing much said of the importance of a great revival of religion; of the wickedness and lawlessness of the rising generation; of the great need of turning back the tide of unbelief and anarchy that is spreading through the nation and around the world. If we would have a revival that is so necessary, we must warn men of the final fruits of wickedness. We must call their attention to the teachings of our Lord with reference to the future state of the impenitent who die in their sins, regardless of the criticism and objection of skeptical people. We must tell men that a fearful doom awaits those who live in wickedness and die impenitent without the benefit of a crucified and risen Saviour.

If the preachers of this nation on Sunday morning and evening would stand up in their pulpits and earnestly proclaim the teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ and the inspired apostles on the subject of the future punishment of the wicked; if, without apology and with great earnestness, they would warn men of the hell that awaits the sinful, there will no doubt be protest and objection, but men will be compelled to think, the Holy Spirit will attend the Word, impress the truth, and there will be a turning away from sin. There will be an accumulation of influences that will lead to repentance which will lead on to saving faith, and there will come back to the world a wholesome fear of Hell and a revival that will be deep and lasting and blessed. Let the ministers of the Gospel be true to the teachings of Christ and we may certainly hope to see a blessed outcome as the result of a faithful proclamation of the Word of God on this subject of the future punishment of the wicked. Our Lord has provided salvation. If men reject his mercy, and choose to live in sin, their own choosing fixes their character and their character fixes their place of abode in the eternal hereafter.

The Spirit of Kindness

Should be instilled into the heart and mind of every child. In doing this people often overlook the fact that the dumb animals respond to kindness with almost as much gratitude as a human being. We do not know of a better way to help create this spirit of tenderness and kindness than to place in the hands of the growing boy or girl a copy of "Black Beauty," which is a most thrilling story of a horse. A grown-up cannot read this book without purposing in his or her heart to be kind to animals, and it increases one's desire to be kind to humanity.

You could not give a young person a book for Christmas that would be read with any more pleasure and profit, and at this time we have a most attractive edition that we are offering for 50c, postpaid. Try giving the book and see if you aren't more than gratified with the results of this gift.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

No. 1.

Text. "He touched her hand, and the fever left her." Matt. 8:15.

Story. A little girl fell seven feet from a slide, at school, and broke her arm in several places. The doctor could hardly set it and it pained her terribly. They took her to a meeting of prayer for the sick. After prayer, she said, "Mama, when sister prayed, Jesus touched my arm and made it well. I love him." She began to tear off the bandage. Her mother was frightened but the little arm was well.

Poem.

The pain left when he touched her hand,
He loves to have us understand,
He's the best doctor in the land,
For this will make us brave and bold,
To trust him as they did of old.

Prayer. Father, I thank Thee for Jesus, the Great Physician.

No. 2.

Text. "I am he that blotteth out thy transgressions." Isa. 43:25.

A girl who had not been taught to love Jesus ran away from home. One night she went to a Mission, and was saved.

She went home to her mother and said, "O mama, mama, God has blotted out all my transgressions." She was always loving and obedient afterward and that led her mother to Jesus to have all her sins blotted out.

Poem.

"Oh, hark, do you hear the Savior's loud cry,
He shouted that day on the tree,
'Tis finished,' he cried, bowed his head and then died,
And they who receive him are free.

"Take God at his word and believe on the Lord,
And know that your sins then shall be,
As God has declared, in his own blessed word,
Blotted out forever for thee."

Prayer. Father, I do believe that Jesus has blotted out all my sins.

No. 3.

Text. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Eccl. 9:10.

Story. A lad went to a wharf and asked, "Have you a place on your ship? I want to earn something." "What can you do?" "I do my best whatever I am put to." "What have you done?" "Chopped wood." "What have you not done?" "I have not whispered once in school for a whole year." He was given a good place.

Poem.

"It is not beauty, health or fame,
That gives to any one a name,
'Tis humble worth, 'tis duty done,
A course with cheerful patience run,
By these the heavenly crown is won."

Prayer. Lord Jesus, help me to be faithful to each daily duty.

No. 4.

Text. "It is a glory to pass over a transgression." Prov. 19:11.

Story. A little girl had been badly treated by one of her schoolmates. A friend said to her, "I would never speak to her again, I would be mad with her as long as I lived." "O no," said the other, "I am going to forget as soon as I can."

Poem.

"If you were busy being kind,
Before you knew it you would find,
You'd soon forget to think 'twas true
That some one was unkind to you.

"If you were busy being glad,
And cheering people who are sad,
Although your heart might ache a bit,
You'd soon forget to notice it."

Prayer. Dear Jesus, help me to forgive and forget.

No. 5.

Text. "He will give his angels charge over thee, To keep thee in all thy ways." Ps. 91:11.

Story. A friend told me that she saw her little girl run over by a car. She ran out, in terror, but the little one was unhurt and said, "Mama, an angel lifted the wheels."

Poem.

"The city is noisy and crowded, and
The traffic will never go slow,
But in all our comings and goings, we should never fear failure, or foe,

For God puts us in charge of his angels to guard us wherever we go."

Prayer.

"Praise God for the angels sent down from above,
To care for and comfort the child of his love."

No. 6.

Text. "Men see not the bright light which is in the clouds." Job 37:21.

Story. "Look, Robbie! the sun has come out," Bertha said. Robbie said, crossly, "There are a lot of clouds yet, I don't call that much sunshine." Bertha looked at the golden sunshine on the floor and said, "Well, Robbie, it's a good deal of sunshine if you sit in it."

Poem.

"Just a little ray of sunshine
Will dispel the deepest gloom,
If the heart be full of sunshine,
For sadness there is never room."

Prayer.

Father, let me always be a sunbeam,
In my home, or in my school.

No. 7.

Text. "He will not forsake thee." Deut. 4:31.

Story. Little Lotus Bloom went to a Mission school and was baptized. Her father was angry because she would not worship the idols and put her in a dark cave and every day asked her to give up Jesus. But in the darkness, and cold, and hunger, she was firm in her faith. When they took her out she seemed to be dying. Her father was sorry and sent for the medical missionary who saved her life.

Poem.

"God will not forsake thee, though friends may falter,
He is thy steadfast Friend, thy loving Guide,
Be faithful for his love can never alter,

To help thee, he is ever at thy side."

Prayer. Father, help me to be faithful in my small trials, as this little girl was in her great trial.

Dear Aunt Bettie: A year ago I wrote to page ten in The Herald and asked the cousins to join me in a "linen shower" for Mt. Carmel School at Lawson, Ky. They responded and we raised $22.50 which I sent to Miss McConnell to buy linen for the school. I feel like it would be pleasing to the Lord for us to have another "shower" for the school. So I am going to ask the cousins to join me in this work for the school. Let us raise what we can to buy dishes and cooking utensils, as a token of our appreciation for the great work being done for the Lord at this place. You can have a part in this even if you only have a small amount to give. Jesus can take it and add his blessing upon it and no doubt it will reach to the uttermost parts of the earth. Last year I asked the cousins to send as much as ten cents each and what they raised was such a blessing to the school. For the benefit of those who have never read of the school will say that it is in the mountains of Kentucky in an isolated part of the county and their banner is "Holiness unto the Lord," and what you put into this work will be as treasures laid up in heaven. You may send money to me, which will all be forwarded to the school for the purpose of buying dishes and cooking utensils. I want to get this to the school for Christmas.

Mrs. Alma Hurst.
Yellville, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am wondering if you will let me join your happy band of boys and girls so soon again? It seems I should have said the girls' happy band, for there are not many boys who write to the page. You may think I am coming back too soon but I have been asked by several to write to page ten again. I don't know why for there are cousins who can write a better letter than I. How many read a chapter or more in their Bibles each day? I have made it a rule to read some in my Bible every day. I want The Herald family to pray for me that I may be a shining light in this old world, and do my Master's will. When we get The Pentecostal Herald I always turn to page ten to see if there is anyone whom I know, then when I have looked at all the names and the states they are from, I read all the letters first. I begin on page one and read through the entire paper. We sure have some fine sermons in The Herald each week; to read them is almost like going to church and hear them preached from the pulpit. I wish every one in the Union and foreign countries could have it to read each week. Mama is sending in her subscription for a renewal. We could not do without it; it has been coming in our home for a good many years. Boys, you that smoke, are you ashamed for the preacher of the gospel to see you smoking? or even see you with a sack of tobacco? I know a boy who is ashamed for the preacher to see him smoke for he hid it to keep him from seeing him with it. Now, girls, it looks bad enough for boys to smoke, and I hope there isn't one who reads this that smoke. I have known a few girls who smoke, but they didn't have any respect for themselves or the ones they were with.

Our revival meeting closed the fifth Sunday in July. The preacher was Rev. H. D. Sudam. I thank each and every one who wrote me on my birthday. I always try to answer all letters I receive. How many of the cousins do fancy work? I do, and enjoy it. I have several tatted baby caps to sell, price $1.25 prepaid, cash with order. The first letter I ever had printed I sold a lot of my tatted. Aunt Bettie, please print this for me and I will promise not to come again till next year. If I were close enough I would give you a big hug and a kiss to print this for me.

Ruby Alma Dixon.
Rt. 2, Sweatman, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As my mother is renewing her subscription to The Pentecostal Herald I asked her to write a letter for me to the cousins. I'm a little West Virginia boy six years old. I go to Dawes M. E. Sunday school. I have a sister Katie five years old and a brother Robert nine months old. I'm anxious to see my letter in print. I also wish to hear from some of The Herald cousins. Will close with love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

John Edward Richards.
Miami, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a little Georgia boy. My birthday is Sept. 11. Have I a twin? My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I live near Clark's Mill. Wake up, Georgia boys and girls, don't let other states get ahead of us. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this letter arrives. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Edell Harden.
Rt. 1, Louisville, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Tollesboro girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have been reading The Herald some time and sure enjoy page ten. I am saved and sanctified and on my way to heaven. I ask interest in all the cousins who know the worth of prayer to pray for me that I may do more for Jesus. My age is between sixteen and twenty. The one that guesses it I will write to you. I am a member of the M. E. C., South. I am about five feet tall, have black hair, dark complexion, weigh 103 pounds. I go to Sunday school every Sunday.

Vivian Simpson.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl from New Jersey. I know the Lord and know the Lord will guide. When Dr. Ridout and his dear wife were preaching at our little church he asked me if I had ever written to page ten. I always read it but had never written. But now since Dr. Ridout said to write I am. We have a nice church and Sunday school and most of my friends go there. Isn't it wonderful, boys and girls, to know Jesus will keep us along life's way if we will trust and obey. He answers my prayers and helps me with my school work. I am ten years old and want to serve him always. I will close for this time as I fear I have written too much.

A Book Worth Reading

This is what many able preachers say of Rev. E. E. Shelhamer's late book, "Sermons that Search the Soul." Dr. H. C. Morrison: "These sermons well deserve the title under which they are published. Any preacher who makes a study of this book will be enriched in thinking and experience for the preparation of spiritual messages for his flock. We recommend it most heartily."

Rev. Paul S. Rees: "Here are sermons that in structure, incisiveness and Scripturalness, remind one constantly of Chas. C. Finney. I have been made to think. My eyes have been turned inward—and upward."

Dear Aunt Bettie: I guess my last letter was not printed, but my motto is, try, try again. I have not read The Herald for two years, so I don't know what is going on among the cousins. I sure would love to read The Herald again. I think it is a wonderful paper. The warm days are still here and I hope will be for a while yet. I suppose the cousins have all forgotten me, as my first letter was in print two years ago. Does anyone know the name of the man that wrote Home Sweet Home? My age is between twenty-two and twenty-five. Well I hope W. B. is on his vacation. You know why. He sure likes my letters. Cousins, all write to me and I will give you a speedy reply. So long.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson XIII.—December 25, 1927.
Subject.—Christmas Lesson. Luke 2:1-20.

Golden Text.—Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins. Matt. 1:21.

Time.—B. C. 5.

Place.—Bethlehem.

Introduction.—Seeing that we do not know the month in which our Lord was born in human flesh, if we are going to celebrate any day as his birthday, Dec. 25th is as good as any. Unquestionably he was born in the summer time while the shepherds were in the fields at night with their flocks. The important thing is not the particular day, but the manner in which it is kept. The day is much more sacredly kept in the northern part of our land than it is in the southern. In truth, the South celebrates Christmas much as the North celebrates the fourth of July, with fire crackers and big frolics. It is wrong, and should be remedied. The world will have its own way; but Christians should make it a time of rejoicing in spiritual things. The poor should be remembered with substantial blessings. It should be a great time for meditation, prayer, and much preaching concerning his coming to save the lost world.

We would expect that such an event as the coming of the only begotten Son of God to our world would be heralded by prophets, God-appointed messengers, long before the time of his arrival. And such we find to be the case. In Genesis 3:15 we read the promises of God to Adam and Eve, that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. This is a remarkable prophecy. Children are usually spoken of in the Bible as being the seed of their fathers, but here it is reversed. Jesus was to have no earthly father, but was to be begotten of the Holy Ghost—his mother was to be a virgin at the time of his birth. How completely this agrees with the New Testament account of that event.

Abraham, "the friend of God," was apprised of the human coming of our Lord: Genesis 22:18, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." St. Paul calls attention to the fact that Jehovah did not say "seeds as of many," but that this use of the singular, seed, made direct reference to Jesus Christ.

Jacob blessed his children just before leaving the world, and in his blessing to Judah left to the world a glorious prophecy concerning the coming of Jesus out of the tribe of Judah: "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be." In its spiritual sense this was literally fulfilled. Jehovah kept his eye on the tribe of Judah, and kept the high-priestly office alive, until Jesus the everlasting High Priest was initiated into the office by his baptism at the Jordan and his anointing with the Holy Spirit.

Isaiah is especially rich in prophecies concerning our Lord's coming. He tells of the virgin birth, chapter 7:14: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel." He tells us, also, that he would be born of the family of Jesse, thereby connecting him with the royal line of King David. Isaiah's entire fifty-third chapter is a perfect picture of the life and death of the Christ, from the manger to the grave. It reads as though the prophet had seen the entire history enacted, as a learned Chinese declared when it was read to him.

Nothing can be clearer than Micah's prophecy, chapter 5:2: "Thou, Bethlehem-Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." When king Herod inquired of the wise men where Jesus should be born, with no hesitation, they quoted this passage from Micah. And the sacred record says he was born in Bethlehem of Judah.

In the statements in the New Testament concerning the birth of our Lord every item of Old Testament prophecy was so completely fulfilled, that no unprejudiced mind can for a moment doubt the truth of the story. Story, did I say? History would be a far better word. So perfectly do prophecy and history dovetail into each other concerning these sacred matters, that I am persuaded there is no better weapon with which to fight the follies of modernism than a clear statement of these unanswerable facts. Ground our people in the Word of God, and we can win the day against all the high-browed foolishness of this age.

The first chapter of the Gospel according to St. John is a glorious statement of the Deity of our Lord. With what grandeur and sublimity he moves off in the first verse: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." In the fourteenth verse we learn that "the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us . . . full of grace and truth." Nothing can surpass the eighteenth verse as given in the most ancient Greek versions: "No one hath seen God at any time; the only begotten God, the one being in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him."

It is perhaps useless to enter into the discussion of the error in our calendar. I have dated the birth of Jesus B. C. 5, that being the usual way of dating it. It occurred in the fifth year B. C. In fact, our chronology as we now have it, is about four years off. You may correct it in any date for yourself.

Comments on the Lesson.

Matthew and Luke give us nearly all that we know from the New Testament concerning the birth of our Lord. Matthew's account is short, but clear. He writes somewhat as a book-keeper setting down accounts in his ledger. Everything of importance is given; but there is no semblance of sentiment or poetry. Luke is different. He does not write poetry, but he had a poet's soul. He weaves around the birth of our Lord a setting that is as sweet as the love song of an angel. In words so delicate that they would not bring a blush to the cheek of the most modest maiden, he tells the story of the expectant young mother on her journey to Bethlehem, and the coming of the Holy Babe that made his cradle in a manger. The story is sacred and so beautiful, that every human mother with normal instincts longs to look into that rude cradle upon the Babe that was wrapped in swaddling clothes.

It is wonderful how God sent his singing angels to break the glorious news to the shepherds as they watched their flocks in the fields by night. The kings of the earth and the great ones got no sky-born message; but the glory of God shone round the waiting shepherds. To them the angels brought good tidings of great joy for all people: "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." That was the gladdest news that old earth had ever heard since the morning stars sang together for joy in the morning of creation.

The sign that would be given them was so simple that a little one could not misread it: "Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger." He was just the dearest babe that men had ever seen—no foolish halo about his head, as the artists would have us believe. But listen! "Suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God." But what strange words of praise they uttered: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace toward men of good will." O they were praising God because of his goodness toward men.

No wonder the shepherds set out for Bethlehem as soon as the angel songsters departed for heaven. Who could have kept away from that sacred place after hearing such glorious news? "They came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger." Blessed finding! They could not keep to themselves the song of the visiting angels, but told all that they heard from heaven concerning that child. The wondrous story was new to those who heard it that eventful night; but it has been just as new and just as entrancing to every generation to whom it has been told since that glorious hour.

Maybe we can ponder these things in our hearts as did Mary, and glorify God as did the wondering shepherds. It would be glorious, could we so tell the blessed news during the coming holidays that sinful men would stop to listen. The Christmas season should be a great soul-winning time. Give some Christmas presents, if you can; but let them be reminders of the Father's gift to the world because he so loved us. Catch the music of the angel choir, and let songs and anthems of praise ring out from your joyful hearts till listening angels shall wonder and join with earthly saints in swelling songs of praise to Father, Son and Holy Ghost, the eternal triune God. Amen! "Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee."

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. A. N. Burris: "I am in a revival at Granite City, Ill. Will The Herald readers please to pray for this meeting. We recently held a good meeting at Worden, Ill., in which 61 were converted and 44 added to the church."

Rev. L. Reep: "I take pleasure in recommending Rev. F. P. Cashidy, N. Sharpshire St., Lexington, Ky., as an old-fashioned evangelist who can help pray down the power of God and get sinners to the altar of prayer."

V. O. Horney: "A heaven-sent revival came to the Bethel M. E. Church on the Centerview Charge, Kan., in which over fifty were saved or sanctified. Humble confessions were made, wrongs righted, many family altars erected, and a number pledged to tithe. A number were added to the church membership. I was assisted by Clara A. Meeker, of Enid, Okla."

Mr. Oscar H. Stitt, of Ford City, Pa., is now open for evangelistic engagements. He has been in revival work as a layman for some years past and has had the most unusual results, seeing hundreds seeking the Lord. Dr. G. W. Ridout has been in several meetings with Bro. Stitt and regards him as one of the most successful evangelistic workers. He is different from the average. God enables him to bring things to pass.

Andrew Johnson: "We are now in a revival at Salyersville, Ky. Large crowds and good interest. We are expecting souls to be saved. We need a revival nation-wide, heaven-high and as deep as the needs of humanity. Let us pray for God to spread the revival fires. The church is gone if a revival does not visit this country."

Rev. Irvin B. Manly will go anywhere for union or interdenominational revivals. Young people will respond. We had better help them. No pressing collections. People pay as they care and can. Pastor-evangelist in Southern Methodist Church for a number of years. Member of Texas conference. Address, 401 Cosmos St., Houston, Texas.

Brother Horace A. Booker, a young blind evangelist and musician, has his slate open for tent meetings in Florida after January first. Brother Booker plays and sings with both piano and guitar as well as other musical instruments and will do most of the preaching. He will probably have two other gospel workers with him to assist in song leading, putting up tent and other things. Bro. Booker is a graduate of Asbury College, and although he has not had the advantage of his eyesight he has worked his way through Asbury by means of a reader and paid his own way while there by means of his piano tuning and other work. You may write him, in care of Gilbert Seegrift, Route 1, Tefft, Ind.

F. N. Bradley: "Oct. 2, we closed our fall revival meetings with songs of victory and the Pentecostal power manifested. It surely was a glorious nine days of feasting on the precious Word, with Rev. Preston Kennedy as the evangelist. There were many seekers at the altar and God's blessing was upon every service. Best of all the revival spirit did not cease but is felt in the meetings and the lives of the members. On Thursday the Lord gave us a most blessed all-day meeting. Seekers lined the altar for either pardon or purity at every service of the day. Many denominations were represented and a number of preachers were present at the afternoon service. We praise and adore the matchless name of Jesus for all of the blessings that are ours at Wesley Chapel."

Prayers for Girls Prayers for Boys

TWO BOOKS

BY ELIZABETH ROBINSON SCOVIL.

It is with the ideal of helping the boy and girl to face life with God, and to teach them to give true expression to their devotion, that these little books are sent out upon their mission. They enter into the inner sanctuary of the heart, and enable them to give utterance to longings and hopes which heretofore he or she may have been unable or unwilling to speak in the presence of God. A prayer for Courage, for Cheerfulness, for Fortitude under Failure, in Perplexity, in Sorrow, in Disappointment—these few titles show the wideness of the little books' range, and the depth of their understanding and sympathy. It is the ideal gift for every boy and girl in the Sunday Schools and Bible Classes of our churches. We have long needed just such books as these.

CONSISTENCY A JEWEL.

It is hard for most people when looking at the other fellow, to deal justly with him. I knew a man who said that a wife should be so obedient to her husband that if he bade her sin she should do so. He had the idea that she was responsible to him and not to God. That man posed to be a teacher in Israel. He further said a wife should obey her husband far better than the children did. That same individual would do everything he could to trouble his wife.

He took her from a pure Christian home, and though he had much of this world's goods, he would not buy butter when the children were not at home. He was very extravagant in buying for the children and would let his wife go a whole spring and summer and never permit her to buy one dress, although she was helping to make every cent that was spent, not only in cooking, washing, and keeping home, but in the chosen calling he was filling. He would talk to his children privately and make them think ill of the consecrated wife, as he was so jealous of the affection of his children.

Once in life he professed sanctification and would say he believed in holiness, but took care to never testify to it, and would often explain because his wife testified to it, and she possessed what she professed, as all believed who knew her. He would give way to his temper and say it was his nerves, that others caused him to do wrong. I believe when one loses his experience of holiness and will not confess it, they are the hardest cases to deal with. Sometimes when they are thrown in a holiness meeting and the Spirit is poured out in abundance, they appear mellowed up, but soon fall back to their unkind, fault-finding way. They will not make acknowledgment and pay the price to be reinstated, but go on in their unhappy state. Such people are unhappy and make others unhappy. They would find fault with an angel from heaven, I believe.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

Life Annuity Bonds Of Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky.

There are many Christians who have something laid by which they would like to have used in the work of training a thoroughly consecrated and sanctified ministry at Asbury College at their death. However, they need the income of it while they live, and so feel that the best they can do is to leave it to us in their wills. Too often, unfortunately, these wills are successfully contested and the wishes of the deceased are thwarted.

This difficulty is overcome in an Annuity Contract, for the donor is his own executor. Our Annuity Bonds are secured by the entire assets of Asbury College. The investment is SAFE, the returns are CERTAIN.

Scores of our friends have already invested their funds with us in this manner, and during the more than fifteen years that Asbury College has been issuing LIFE ANNUITY CONTRACTS it has never defaulted on an annuity payment; our friends, moreover, have given us assurance that they have never had occasion to regret their investment in this form of gift to Asbury College.

LIFE ANNUITY BONDS can be written for amounts of $100 and over. Simply write us your age and the amount you desire to invest on Annuity Contract, and we will forward to you at once the Annuity Bond made out to you for your inspection and approval, or you may send us your check with your application, and the bond will be dated back to the day you wrote the check, from which date the annuity payments will be calculated.

Familiar Failures

REV. CLOVIS G. CHAPPELL, D.D.

Applying that same fine ability for analysis which has distinguished his other volumes, Dr. Chappell in this book turns his attention to The Drifter, The Trifler, the man who is too busy, and other well-known types who make a failure of the business of life. He presents the type in a most engaging manner, and then shows the factors operative in each individual failure. An excellent addition to the fine series of character studies which have already given Dr. Chappell a wide and alert audience.

The Optimism of Premillennialism

H. C. MORRISON.

Our Lord Jesus, while on earth, plainly and repeatedly taught that he would come again, personally, into the world, and on account of this, this doctrine is very precious to this author. If you have an open mind to know what the Bible teaches on the second coming, you will be delighted with the contents of this book.

Cloth, Price $1.00.

The Red Road to Royalty

BY AKERS.

Dr. Akers very forcibly calls attention to the inevitable road, and makes it very plain that every personality, nation and race which hopes to arrive at the true goal of character, happiness and service, must take the road that Christ pointed out two thousand years ago. Ten sermons.

Cloth binding. Price $1.50.

Fox's Book of Martyrs

A history of the lives, sufferings and triumphant deaths of the early Christian and Protestant martyrs. It tells the story of some of the most thrilling periods in Christian history when "a noble army, men and boys, the matron and the maid," "climbed the steep ascent of heaven, 'mid peril, toil and pain.'" It is thrilling and convicting. 370 large pages. Good clear type, beautifully printed and bound.

Dying Testimonies of Saved and Unsaved

BY S. B. SHAW.

Multitudes have gone to heaven by giving heed to the testimonies and example of the righteous. This book records those bright shining examples of departing Christians who leave on record something to guide the pilgrim through life. On the other hand the dying testimonies of the wicked reveal in a startling way the "wages of sin" and the end of a misspent life. This book may be used effectively by ministers and gospel workers.

THE WORLD'S CHRISTMAS GIFT.

By The Editor.

WE are coming again to that period when the Christian Church everywhere celebrates the birth of the Lord Jesus Christ, the most wonderful event in all history. How marvelous that God should manifest himself in the flesh, that the Builder and Ruler of the universe should come down and dwell among men.

Our Lord during his earthly ministry uttered no more remarkable saying than that recorded in John 14, when he said to Philip, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." Had Christ not come to earth we never could have understood the Father. Men knew that God was omnipotent and omnipresent, but they did not know of his infinite love, of his marvelous capacity for condescension. It had not occurred to them that he would descend to the earth and receive sinners and eat with them.

Men knew that God was surrounded by the angelic hosts; that Seraphim and Cherubim worshipped before his throne, but they did not know that he would permit a poor harlot to wash his feet with the tears of her broken-hearted sorrow and wipe them with her hair. They did not know that he had in him a pity, a love, and a forgiveness which would say to a thief, hanging over the pits of perdition, with the mountainous weights of his sins upon him, "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise."

Jesus hath said, "No man knoweth the Father save the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him." We never could have known the Father had he not come, lived among us, labored with us, wept over us, healed us by the touch of his hand, opened our blinded eyes with the ointment made of clay, with the healing saliva from his mouth; fed us with the multiplying loaves from his creative hands; raised our dead with his divine authority and victory over the grave; stilled the tempest at his command, and taught us in all his words and works and ways that God is love, and that "He so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Jesus came into the world to seek and to save that which was lost. He came to destroy the works of the devil. He came to heal the broken-hearted, to give beauty for ashes, and joy for heaviness; to break the power of sin and death and set free the captives led by Satan at his will. Jesus came to suffer without the gate that he might sanctify the people with his own blood. He came to bear our sins in his own body on the cross, by suffering in our place and stead, to make it possible for God to be just in the justification of the ungodly. O, it is wonderful! blest be his Name!

A CHRISTMAS HYMN.

By Ernest Wesley.

I.
O Morn of morns the dearest,
The world has ever known;
When heaven to earth came nearest,
And God's great love was shown:
When to the Virgin's keeping,
God trusted His Own Son;
Then in that sweet Babe, sleeping,
Redemption was begun.

II.
O Morn of morns most holy,
When angels came to earth,
And told Salvation's story,
Of Incarnation's birth.
With them we sing with gladness:—
"To men good will and peace"
Thus banish tears and sadness,
From fear to give release.

III.
O Morn of morns whose glory
Extends from shore to shore;
We love to hear thy story—
Which raptures more and more.
Its radiance ever streaming—
Brings light and love and peace,
With God's own mercy beaming
Doth cause all sighs to cease.

IV.
O Morn of morns most glorious—
For which men waited long;
O'er sin to be victorious—
Glad news of heaven's song;
We bring Christ gifts unmeasured,
Most worthy He of all,
Our best and choicest treasures
As at His feet we fall.

Jesus Christ is the wonder of all the ages. The very thought of him overwhelms us with astonishment, gratitude, and praise! He combines in himself the human and Divine. He is a marvelous combination of God and man. He has the humanity which enables him to sympathize with us, to suffer for us, to be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, "tempted in every point like we ourselves are tempted, yet without sin," a sympathetic High Priest. He also embraces in himself the Deity that enables him to save us; to save us to the uttermost, to cleanse us from all sin. Yes, we are weak; we are unworthy; we are sinful, fallen, desperately wicked, but Christ is almighty. He is more than equal to all of our needs; hence, it is written, "Where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound." Where there is a twig of sin there is a tall tree of grace; where there is a molehill of sin there is a mountain of grace; where there is a puddle of sin there is an ocean of grace; and we do not mean by these comparisons that sin is by any means a small matter, but we do mean that Jesus Christ is an infinitely great Savior; that though "our sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." All glory and honor to Jesus! Let us celebrate his birth with joy and gladness.

Will the Organization of Another Methodist Church Become A Necessity?

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY DEAR BISHOP.
FOURTH LETTER.

My dear Bishop:

IT is well understood that the leaders of modernistic liberalism, so fatal to evangelical faith, are educated men. No doubt among them some who may properly be called profound scholars. This is evidently true of quite a number of the great German destructive critics who have sown broadcast the seed which has produced modern liberalism.

You will of course understand that in the use of the word "modern" we would not indicate that there is anything new among the skeptics; that they have made any discoveries, or found out any truth, or have been able to produce and propagate any false teaching that is new. Destructive unbelief is as old as saving faith. The only thing modern about the skepticism spreading through the church is the fact that the infidelity that was once discussed, championed and propagated in the backrooms of bar-rooms, now is finding an acceptable place and earnest advocates in pulpits and church schools. It has become intensely religious, —not Christian, to be sure, but religious. It is bold, sneering, makes the highest claims for its scholarship and intellectuality; it looks with contempt and ridicule upon all those who do not accept its teachings, surrender the old saving faith of the early Methodists and lay hold upon its unscriptural teachings and shallow philosophies.

The only way for the orthodox people of Methodism, North and South, to work harmoniously with the modernists is for them to surrender their faith in the inspiration of the Scriptures, in much of the prophecies of the Old Testament, and much of the teachings of Jesus. Let it be remembered that Jesus taught there was a devil. Your well ripened modernist denies that there is any such person. Jesus taught that there is a hell. Your mature modernist laughs at this teaching and denies that there is any such place. Jesus taught in most positive fashion the necessity of the new birth, a very pronounced and radical change of heart. Your modernist objects to any such teaching and insists that such a change is unnecessary. We might go still further, but the only way for our devout, believing people to live in peace and harmony with our modernists is to surrender the faith of our fathers, the belief of our hearts and the gracious experiences that this belief has brought to us and

CHRISTMAS AND RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

"Could we with ink the ocean fill,
Were the whole world of parchment made
And every blade of grass a quill
And every man a scribe by trade,
To tell the love of God to man
Would drain that ocean dry,
Nor could that scroll contain the whole
Though spread from sky to sky."

It has been said that philosophy composes poems but not hymns; and a writer on sacred song has said:

"Religion is the mother of music. Even the Holy Spirit is put under the figure of music when it says, 'Thou hearest the sound thereof.' There are commands to sing as well as pray. 'Sing ye to God all ye kingdoms of the earth, sing ye to God.' Paul exhorts us to 'admonish one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs.'

"The loftiest book of music ever given to the world was given to us by David, the sweet singer of Israel. His 150 psalms are 150 songs. The first book printed in America was a psalm-book. The religious world has more than 400,000 hymns. The New Testament church, the Scotch church, the early Methodist church was a triumphant church because a singing church. The great musical productions have been religious productions; Mendelssohn's 'Elijah,' Haydn's 'Creation,' Beethoven's 'Mount of Olives,' Bach's 'Ascension,' Spohr's 'Last Judgment.' When Spurgeon has been forgotten, and Beecher's name is mildewed, and Luther's sermons are out of print, Wesley, Toplady, Perronet, and Adams will live on through their 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul,' 'Rock of Ages,' 'Coronation,' and 'Nearer, my God, to Thee.' A chronometer can measure time, a cyclometer can measure distance, but nothing can measure the power of sacred music."

Luke's Gospel abounds in glorious song and thrilling scenes as the writer tells the charming and wonderful story of the Nativity. In Luke's Gospel there are three great religious hymns:

1. The Gloria in Excelsis. Luke 1:14.
2. The Nunc Dimittis. Luke 2:29.
3. The Magnificat. Luke 1:46.

At this Christmas time it would be well for us to heed the admonition of the poet when he sings:

"O hush the noise ye men of strife;
And hear the angels sing.
For lo! the days are hastening on
By prophet bards foretold,
When with the ever circling years,
Comes round the age of gold,
When Peace shall over all the earth,
Its ancient splendors fling,
And the whole world gives back the song
Which now the angels sing."

Luke's Gospel not only abounds in sweet song and angelic music, but it has some wonderful precious settings of the Gospel in its richness and fulness.

A HYMN OF SALVATION.

Such may we designate the song and prophecy of Zacharias in Luke 1:67-79. In this wonderful passage of scripture we have set before us the following:

1. Redemption: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel: for he hath visited and redeemed his people.
2. Saving Grace: "To give knowledge of salvation unto his people by the remission of their sins."
3. Sanctifying Grace: "That we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, might serve him without fear in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life."
4. Enabling Grace: "That we should be saved from our enemies and from the hand of all that hate us."

Let us keep to the forefront at this Christmas Season the great purpose for which CHRIST!

Johann von Muller, a skeptical historian, accidentally taking up the New Testament, and finding Christ the explanation of history, wrote, "In all my study of the ancient times, I have always felt the want of something, and it was not until I knew our Lord that all was clear to me; with him there is nothing that I am not able to solve."

"WHAT THINK YE OF CHRIST?"

Pharisee, with what have ye to reproach Jesus?

"He eateth with publicans and sinners."

Is that all?

"Yes."

And you, Caiaphas, what say you of him?

"He is guilty, he is a blasphemer because he said, 'Hereafter ye shall see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven.'"

Pilate, what is your opinion?

"I find no fault in him."

And you, Judas, who have sold your Master for silver, have you some fearful charge to hurl against him?

"I have sinned in that I have betrayed innocent blood."

And you centurions and soldiers, who led him to the cross, what have you to say against him?

"Truly, this was the Son of God."

John, the Baptist, what think you of Christ?

"Behold the Lamb of God."

And you, John, the apostle?

"He is the bright and Morning Star."

"Peter, what say you?"

"Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

And Thomas?

"My Lord and my God."

Paul, you have persecuted him, what say you of him?

"I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord."

Angels of heaven, what think you of Jesus?

"Unto you is born a Savior which is Christ, the Lord."

And Thou, Father in heaven, who knowest all things?

"This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased."

Beloved readers, what think ye of Christ?—Sel.

Christ came to earth. He did not come as Reformer, or Martyr, as a great Exemplar, as a great sage and religious leader, but he came as Saviour.

Jesus came to save, sanctify and satisfy. In pardon he removes the burden and guilt and condemnation of sin and bestows the joy of reconciliation. In sanctification he removes the last and least remains of sin, fills the soul with perfect love and satisfies its longings. Psalm 109:9. Hear the following witnesses to his sanctifying and satisfying power: Rev. William Bramwell tells of his sanctification in the following words: "The Lord, for whom I had waited, came suddenly to the temple of my heart. My soul was all wonder, love and praise." And for twenty-six years he walked in this glorious liberty.

Dr. Upham, one of the noble saints of God on earth, says of his sanctification: "I was distinctly conscious when I reached it. I was redeemed by a mighty power, and filled with the blessing of perfect love."

Mrs. Phoebe Palmer, who during her life led twelve thousand souls to Christ for pardon, and thousands over into the land of perfect love, in speaking of her sanctification, says: "I rejoice in the assurance that I was wholly sanctified throughout body, soul and spirit. O, with what triumph did my soul expatiate on the infinitude of the atonement! I saw its unbounded efficacy as sufficiency to cleanse a world of sinners, and present them faultless before the throne. I felt that I was enabled to plunge and lose myself in this ocean of purity. Yes,

'Plunged in the Godhead's deepest sea,
And lost in love's immensity.'

Rev. Henry Smith, for many years a prominent preacher in the Baltimore Conference, says: "After a long and painful struggle, my soul, by simple believing, stepped into liberty. I am happy, solidly happy, in the enjoyment of perfect love." The high plane of perfect love is not reached by any without a hard struggle; but when reached, the believer is rewarded a thousand-fold.

Mrs. Edwards, wife of President Edwards, sought and obtained what she called "the full assurance of faith," and what Methodists call "perfect love," or "holiness," and then gives her glowing experience in the following language: "I cannot find language to express how certain the everlasting love of God appeared; the everlasting mountains and hills were but shadows to it. My safety and happiness, and eternal enjoyment of God's immutable love seemed as durable and unchangeable as God himself . . . My soul remained in a heavenly elysium. It was a pure delight which fed and satisfied my soul."

A suggestive putting of Philipians has been given by a certain writer setting forth what Christ is to the Believer. Let me insert it here. It reminds us again of the preciousness of Jesus to those who believe.

"Chapter 1. Christ is the believer's existence, enabling him to rejoice in suffering (1:21).

"Chapter 2. Christ is the believer's example, enabling him to rejoice in service (2:5).

"Chapter 3. Christ is the believer's expectation, enabling him to rejoice in hope (3:20).

"Chapter 4. Christ is the believer's experience, enabling him to rejoice in the Lord (4:13)."

The following story is told by Amanda Smith when she was in India:

"Dr. George F. Pentecost, under the auspices of the American Alliance, was lecturing to the intelligent Brahmins on the Deity of Jesus Christ. She was present, and, to her surprise, Dr. Pentecost introduced her to the audience as one well acquainted with Jesus, and could tell them what Jesus had done for her. 'My word! but I was frightened, to follow a preacher like Dr. Pentecost, and to a crowd of intelligent scholars who hated Jesus.' 'What did you do, Amanda?' 'Do? I only had a second to do anything in. I put my hands on the arms of my chair, and, pushing myself up, breathed a prayer: O Lord, don't let Mandy flutter! I got on my feet, told my experience, then sung 'A Little More Faith in Jesus,' and, my word, they were only grasshoppers—I was free. I declare if there had been a mourners' bench handy I would have called for seekers. I had as good a time as if in a holiness camp meeting.'"

In these days of controversy and dispute about the Virgin Birth, the Deity of Jesus, and kindred themes, the one thing we all need is "a little more faith in Jesus."

Ring Out! Ring In!

Ring out the old life, dear sinner,

Enter the new life just now;

Tired, burdened soul, seek the Savior,

At his dear feet come and bow.

Ring out the "old man," believer,

Yield to the Master your all;

Just now allow all his fullness

On your hungry spirit to fall.

Ring out the old year, God's servants,

Ring in the new year, and pray

With greater devotion to serve him,

And ever let him have his way.

THE MILLS OF THE GODS.

CHAPTER II.

THE TIDE TURNS.

IT was the following summer; the "craps were laid by" in Possum Trot; it was the one season of the year when the men and boys of the neighborhood loafed, or the more industrious hunted and fished. Lost Creek emptied into the Kentucky river not far from Possum Trot and, like all the tributaries, it abounded with fish coming up from the big river.

During the Civil War a bad feeling was generated among the old settlers, as both sides had strong sympathizers and, because of this, there were many bloody feuds in which scores of men were killed during the various Clan uprisings. The Clan spirit inherited from Scotch ancestry continues and has never lost its potency. Jabe Hargit was one of the survivors who had participated in killings, and there was no assurance that hostilities would not break out at any time, until the leaders on both sides were either killed, or died during a smallpox epidemic.

Many efforts had been made to establish religion in the community; at times it would seem to prosper, but something seemed to always happen among the feudists to stir up old animosities. Rev. Paton Dobson had come to this mountain circuit of which Possum Trot was a part, and once a month he would preach to the few who would attend. With the passing of Jabe Hargit, the one barrier, or at least, the greatest one, was removed. An announcement was posted on the store door, which building was also a postoffice, that a meeting would be held soon; it would be a "Grove Meeting" held in Jim Ward's woods pasture, to begin the first Sunday in August.

Jim Ward was the one nucleus of respectability and Sabbath observance. Some years before he came there and bought a large tract of land. He had waited for such a time, as he felt sure would come, when the mountainsides would give up untold wealth. Now that the roughest and most dangerous element against such things was out of the way, he set about to encourage education and religion. A Moonlight School had been conducted for months by a young lady from the Bluegrass and had lived in his home without any charge for board. Miss Mason found in Mrs. Hargit an efficient helper, and she also found in her son, Wallace Hargit, whom we call "Wally," as before, one of her brightest pupils. This lad was not illiterate, as most of the boys and girls were, for at such times as it was safe to do so, in the absence of Jabe, the mother had taught her boy the rudiments of education.

For some days Mr. Ward and Brother Dobson had worked getting the grove in shape for the meeting. Rough lumber had been secured from the sawmill, rude seats were made, and a platform for the pulpit. All previous efforts for a spiritual awakening had been a failure, as before mentioned; no lasting impression was ever made on the uncouth community. Rev. Dobson was a young man fresh from a college where spirituality was given supreme emphasis. Besides a passion for lost men born of a sanctified experience, he felt the extra burden for the almost heathenish condition that prevailed among the people. Their ancestors of pure English and Scotch blood had pressed over the mountains from New England and Virginia at the close of the Revolutionary War and, being cut off from all civilization, the inevitable followed—moral and spiritual degeneracy.

"Let's not miss any of Brother Dobson's meetings," said Wally to his mother, on hearing of the Grove Meeting announcement. "I just know I'm a-goin' ter like him—he's so nice lookin', and not like us folks. I want ter some time have things on as will look like his'n."

"I am so glad to hear you talk like that, and we can go twice every day, and nothing will hinder us; it is wonderful to have a young man like Brother Dobson among us."

In the mother's heart was still a lingering memory of a time long ago when, as a girl, she knelt at an altar of prayer and a gracious peace filled her heart. Years of suffering and abuse had all but removed any trace of its realities; but she was quite sure that the fountain would still be opened for which she had hungered so long; in fact, she felt that God had fully restored her when she knelt beside her bed seeking his help and guidance on the first lonely night after her husband had been laid away. But her soul cried out for spiritual food; she yearned for the Grove Meeting with almost childish zeal. It was not so much for her own needs as a longing she felt for her boy.

It was a motley crowd that swarmed into the wooded pasture that first Sunday morning. They came on foot, riding on mules, in ox-carts, and in single-horse wagons; men, women and children of all ages, and all appearances; between three and four hundred people were there; all the rude seats were filled, and scores were squatting about on the ground. Sawdust had been sprinkled all about the altar and among the seats.

Big Joe Ball had been sworn in as "marshall," and when they saw his star and big stick, and a pistol belted to him, none doubted his ability to fully function. The preacher had objected to such precautionary methods on Saturday evening, but Mr. Ward overruled the objection. "You know how to preach," he told him, "but you do not know what will be coming on these grounds by tomorrow night. I heard today, that a bunch was coming over from the Bend and take charge of the meeting, and ride the preacher on a rail; but when they see Big Joe, I think they will change their minds."

Promptly at ten-thirty Sunday morning the young minister stepped upon the platform and announced a song. He brought some song-books and scattered them about to all who would use them. A strange stillness settled over the crowd when he began to sing with a clear, sweet voice, "Amazing Grace"; only two or three could join in the singing. Mrs. Hargit in her younger days had enjoyed the reputation of having a fine voice, and it was not entirely gone. Many lonely hours she had softened her bitter fate by singing some plaintive melody learned in her girlhood days. At the close of the song the minister asked them to bow their heads while he led the prayer. After a few sentences a tender unction came upon him, as he pleaded for a visitation of divine power and grace. The prayer was comprehensive; all classes were remembered—even the men who had taken human life; the men who had broken the laws of the land making whiskey, and those who carried vengeance in their hearts. With a clear, ringing voice the preacher began his sermon amid a stillness that was profound.

"My dear friends, all that you see about, and what is now going on, may seem a bit strange to you, but I am here representing a great King. When your governor came through here recently you all came from far and near to see and hear him. Now the King I mention has sent me here to tell you some great and wonderful things. You know, dear friends, that since the days of your grandfathers, these beautiful mountainsides have echoed with the crack of the Winchester rifle, and the sharp, keen report of the pistol, sending some human being into eternity, no doubt, unprepared to meet

God. Your fertile soil has been made red with bleeding victims, often shot from a secret hiding place. All such must never be again; I am here to speak for the great King, and he wants no more blood shed in these mountains; he wants you to learn how to love each other.

"My message is a love story. The King will forgive all that is past in the life of every one, if you will seek his love and salvation; then you will kill no more. Listen, my beloved friends, the King sent me to tell you of his love and how he wants to save everybody and fill their hearts with love and peace. But remember, he will bring every sinner who refuses his love, and will not seek his pardon, to a Judgment where witnesses and judges are not afraid to deal justice. You that have broken the laws of the land, and broken God's laws, remember he will call every one to answer as surely as the sun is shining over us today. God is a holy Being, and he will not allow one person to wrong another without dealing full justice to that one. Some of you have hatred in your hearts. Do you know that he who hates is a murderer, and no murderer can enter Heaven. The great Kings says: 'We must love our enemies.' Now you say this is out of the question; no one can do that. You are right; no one can do it alone, but this King, who is Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who came all the way from Heaven and died on the Cross for us, can so change your very life until you will actually love your enemies. You can love the man who shot your father or brother, years ago.

"I know you do not believe this, and you cannot understand how it can be done. Oh, my dear people, it can be done, and that is the wonderful story I came here to tell you."

Before the minister had finished half of his sermon the people sat in amazement, with open-mouthed wonder. They were caught as with a mesmeric spell. No such things had ever been spoken before in Possum Trot; there was such a sweet, persuasive tone in all the preacher said, that all seemed to somehow believe he was speaking the truth; there was an unusual power resting on the man which could not be understood; it was the gracious unction of the Holy Spirit, and they could not understand it. He preached for about fifty minutes, and even the little children were quiet. Rough-bearded men who knew only the law of vengeance, and whose lives, some of them, were calloused by repeated crimes, sat under the spell of the sermon. When he had closed, he again asked them not only to bow their heads, but to get on their knees, while he pleaded with God for their salvation, and for all the poor sinners of the Lost Creek country. Scarcely a word was spoken after the benediction; they moved away quietly, and it was evident that, for once, a gospel message had been heard beneath the shadows of those towering hills.

Mrs. Hargit had, on the day before, prepared the best dinner possible from her meager stores, and planned to ask the minister to their home. She alone pressed forward to grasp his hand and extend the invitation, and she rejoiced when he accepted it so gladly. Wally did not know exactly how to act in the presence of the wonderful young man; but he was careful to do nothing offensive.

The boy was thrilled during the dinner hour, and scarcely spoke at all, but just sat and looked at the minister, and noticed how nicely he ate, and how easy he seemed to do everything. It was a humble table, but the guest was as courteous and as complimentary as if he had been dining with a king. It was an hour never to be forgotten in the

Where God and Man Meet---A Christmas Message.

Dr. W. B. Hinson.

"Let us go now even to Bethlehem." Luke 2:15.

IN the first place let us go to Bethlehem—that we may find—God! It was no new thought that came to me today, yet it was a thought I prized very much and have been helped by it, that a God who could come down and become a baby in a stable, and sleep in a manger—disturbed for aught I know by the lowing of the oxen and the noises incident to so public a place—a God who could do that is after all the kind of God who makes a very tender and very urgent appeal to my soul. I know that "great is the mystery of godliness—God manifest in the flesh" in a Bethlehem stable; but I also know that great is the mercy of that manifestation of God.

I once had the privilege of talking to a man who knew so much that it seemed to me he could never possibly know any more; but when I told him this story, of which he was ignorant—the story of Christ the God-man, the Wonderful, the Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace—the man's imagination was seized and his heart was touched, and he who had been known for forty years as a skeptic shed tears and thanked me for telling him the story and praying that it might do him good.

I have wished a thousand times in my life that when I was only a boy some one had told me of this Bethlehem God—this God in Christ—but no one ever did; and therefore I grew up ignorant of the sublime music, the wonderful imagery, and the marvelous Christ of the Gospel. And you know, I go halting all my days because I lacked that sort of instruction, which I hope you are giving to your children, else you are among their worst enemies. Let us go to Bethlehem to find God!

BUT ALSO LET US GO TO BETHLEHEM TO FIND MAN.

Oh, how my soul revolts when I hear the disparagers of man making their fling at men and women! I suddenly recall a man whom I had in my first church, and his favorite introduction when he got up to speak was, "Man is half beast and half devil." And I hushed him one night by telling him to speak for himself; that I did not thank him for saying I was half beast and half devil, for it was a lie! Oh no! If you go to Bethlehem and see God incarnated in a human form, you will know there is something in man that is neither beast nor devil; there is something of such value to God that he did not deem it unwise to give his own Son to die for man.

Now use your logic a moment. If man could only be saved by the coming, and the dying, and the rising again of the Son of God, how greatly must that man have sinned! And of what turpitude must his wrong-doing consist!

So let us go to Bethlehem that we may find man!

LET US GO TO BETHLEHEM THAT WE MAY FIND GOD AND MAN!

For you know the story of which that

Bethlehem scene is only the commencing chapter—you know how Jesus grew up; how he played the games with other lads; how he thought the long, long thoughts of childhood; how he toiled at the carpenter's bench among the fragrant shavings; how he went out into public life, three years of which men put up with and then murdered him—you know the story. Well, the story that began down there when God and man came together in that incarnation is the story that had its last chapter, so far as that earthly ministry was concerned, when on the Cross Jesus took hold of man and God and brought the two together.

Do you know the story of the lad who had angered his father? The father said: "You get out of this house and nevermore darken its door." And the son said: "I will do it," and he went out. He wrote to his mother. The mother grew strangely ill, and the man of medicine said that he could not understand what was the matter with her. She had what I fear a good many mothers in this land have—an aching and breaking heart. And one day the doctor said he was not coming back, because he could do her no good. She heard it, and calling to her husband said: "Will you do one thing for me?" And he said: "I will." She said: "Write and tell the boy to come home." He replied: "I cannot." Then she said: "Bring me a pencil and a piece of paper," which he did. And she asked to be propped up that she might write; and she wrote: "My boy, come home; I am dying.—Your mother."

In a far-off city he received that note with its scrawling writing, and hurried home. He arrived after dark; but how familiar was the creak of the old garden gate, and what emotions were his as he walked the path between the flower-beds, where he had often seen his mother. He opened the door and went in, and on up the stairs, and entered his mother's room. There stood the father by the side of the dying woman, and with the old animosity still in his heart, the boy deliberately walked around to the other side of the bed and kept the mother between himself and his father.

I have often thought of the mystery that enables people to live until they attain something they desire. That woman had kept on living, in spite of the fact that she was dying, until she saw the boy; but she had very little strength and could say but little. She looked her greeting. And then she took the hand of the boy and the hand of the father, while she lay there on the bed, dying, the two men on either side; and moving first the one and then the other she began to pull those hands towards each other. Of course they knew what she was doing, but they knew too that she was dying. And ever she drew them nearer and nearer until at last those two hands touched, and then that woman died.

Let us go to Bethlehem that we may see God and man brought together by the One who was born as a babe and cradled in a manger. For you see we had sinned, and God had to look after not only the sinner, but he had to look after himself; and he must be careful—may I say it with bated breath, with deep humility and with solemn reverence—God must be careful lest he compromise himself in the way he forgives sin. Many of us down here in the world have ruined our children by slurring over things that we ought to have settled, and by treating wrong and evil as though they were trivial things. God must not make that mistake. What will he do? He will have to provide a Substitute for the sinner. And there are two or three things about that Substitute that are self-evident. He must be worth all the sinners in moral value. And where will God find such an one? Only in heaven; and that is why Christ had to come to Bethlehem, there to offer up a sacrifice that was worth all the lives of all who were created by God.

And he must bear the penalty too, and that is why he had to go to the Cross; and that is why when you take the Cross out of the Christian doctrine, you have taken the sun out of the sky. God had attached a penalty to sin; if he is righteous, he never has to change; and if he never has to change, then that penalty stands. And when his own Son said, "I come to do Thy will, and save these people," then his own Son had to get underneath the penalty of sin. And that Substitute must be acceptable to the justice of God. And God raised up Christ from the dead as a testimony of his acceptance of Jesus Christ as your Savior and mine.

Now what is in our way? Only one thing; but that is the strongest thing on earth! What? The human will! Here is my Savior, my Substitute, infinite in worth, bearing the penalty of my sin, and acceptable to the great God against whom I have sinned; what is in the way of my salvation? Nothing in the world except my will! He can stand, holding forgiveness in one of his nail-pierced hands, and eternal life in the other nail-pierced hand, and he can ask me to be saved, and I can say: "I won't."

You must believe me in this, because when he was on the earth he said to his own city: "O Jerusalem, I would have gathered you as a hen gathered her brood under her wing"—I would—"but ye would not." And the "would not" of Jerusalem overcame the "would" of the Lord Jesus Christ himself.

Then let us go to Bethlehem and settle this thing; let us go to the Christ who said: "Come unto me and I will give you rest"; let us go to the Christ who said: "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." You church members,—you need to come, just as I need to come, and ask him to do a greater work in us than he has ever yet done. Oh, put your hand in his hand and give over the responsibility of your life as well as of your sin to Jesus Christ! Will you not do it?

You are nearing the end of the year, and it has not been a good year with some of you spiritually. I was wondering whether I should say this—it may be that it would have been better for your soul if you had died at the beginning of this year, instead of being allowed to live and drift away from the moorings that were yours when the year commenced. Do you not think it is about time for you to come back?

And perhaps some of you never did know Christ as your Savior. Oh, I wish I could hand you as a Christmas gift—the consciousness of your salvation! And I wish I could prevail on you to give my Lord a Christmas gift—even the gift of your life! Let us go to Bethlehem! Let us go there now! Let us go in united prayer! Let us all pray!

The Meaning of Christmas.

DAVID S. KENNEDY, D.D.

AS Christians, we may well rejoice because of the humanitarianism, the spirit of good-will that finds expression in connection with Christmas. It is a mistake, however, to suppose that this thing is exclusively Christian, and hence, that its presence is any necessary indication of the dominance of Christianity over the lives of men. The most we are warranted in saying is that the absence of this thing means that men are strangers to vital Christianity. Humanitarianism, the brotherhood of man, as this phrase is usually understood, existed before Christianity. But while Stoicism taught that all men are brothers because of their common possession of human nature, Christianity seeks to make all men brothers by bringing them into common connection with Jesus Christ. It is to be feared that most of the humanitarianism of our age is Stoic rather than Christian. But while Christianity is not to be identified with mere humanitarianism, ancient or modern, yet it inculcates with unrivaled earnestness charity toward all, whether Christian or non-Christian. Hence, as Christians, we are able, without overlooking the fundamental difference between a brotherhood grounded only in human nature and one grounded also in Jesus Christ, to rejoice at every expression of "peace on earth and good will among men." We never forget, however, that the relation we sustain to those who are "brothers in Christ" is quite different and infinitely richer than that which we sustain to those who are not so related.

But while Christmas has a varied meaning, it is all but universally regarded as a commemoration of the birthday of Jesus Christ. As a result, the meaning it has for people who think about the matter at all is largely determined by their understanding of the nature of the event known as the birth of Christ. Was that event the first appearance of the greatest religious genius, of the greatest moral teacher and example, of the one ideal man of which our race can boast? Was Jesus the first of that long line of believers we call Christians whose influence has been so beneficent? Or was that event the first appearance of a person infinitely more important even than that? Was it the first appearance of one of whom John could truthfully say: "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us—and we beheld his glory, glory as of the only begotten of the Father—full of grace and truth?" Was it the first appearance of one to whom the Baptist could rightfully point and say, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world?"

The meaning Christmas has for us is largely determined by the answer we give to these questions. While there are ample reasons for commemorating the birth of Christ, whichever explanation we accept, yet, it seems to us, it is only those who see in Jesus Christ one whose rank in the scale of being places him alongside of God, and who by his death on the cross accomplished their salvation, who can adequately appreciate the meaning of Christmas day. Even from the viewpoint of those who think that Jesus can be enclosed in human moulds, if there are good reasons for commemorating the birthday of any great man, there are better reasons for commemorating the birthday of Jesus Christ. For he is the great man beyond compare. For us, however, Christmas Day commemorates not so much the birth of a unique man whose life was uniquely beneficent to mankind as a momentous event in the eternal life of God himself, motivated by redeeming love and culminating on the cross of Golgotha. The cradle of Bethlehem, even though it contain the Son of God incarnate, must be interpreted in the light of what happened on the cross on Golgotha if we are to adequately realize why the sight of it led the heavenly host to praise God, saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," and one of their number to say to the shepherds, "I bring you tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people; for there is born unto you this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord." We believe the day is coming when men shall dwell together in peace and amity, when love shall be the law, and happiness the universal condition, but that day will not have fully come until he who was born as a babe in Bethlehem, and who died as a sacrificial lamb on Golgotha, working only as God can work, shall have fully realized his purposes.

Otherwise expressed, the meaning of Christmas, even among those calling themselves Christians, is radically different, according as they regard Christ as the subject or the object of religion. Modern liberalism sees in Jesus merely a subject of religion—not one who offered himself as an object of religious trust, but rather one who urged men to have faith in God like his faith. It is not thus, however, that he is pictured in the New Testament, or that he has been conceived by the church of the ages. In the New Testament and by the church of the ages, Christ has been regarded as an object of religion, because his status is that of God. What is more, in the New Testament and by the church of the ages, he has been regarded as one who wrought redemption for mankind by an expiatory death on the cross. In the nature of the case, Christmas cannot mean the same for those who see in Jesus merely a religious model as it does for those who see in him an object of worship who is qualified to save them from the guilt and pollution and power of sin. Bethlehem as well as Golgotha finds its explanation in the salvation of sinners. Hence only the redeemed can fully appreciate the meaning of Christmas, the occasion it affords for joy and rejoicing.—The Bible Champion.

Asbury College Annuity Bonds.

PRESIDENT L. R. AKERS.

ANY people do not understand what annuity bonds are. An Asbury College annuity bond means that, in exchange for a certain sum invested, the institution binds itself by a sacred and legal bond to pay to generous patrons who need an income a certain sum every year, which sum is called an "annuity." While "annuity" literally means "every year," Asbury College agrees to pay the donor his annuity interest in semi-annual installments.

Friends of our school may be interested to learn that none of our colleges is self-supporting through student fees alone. Statistics reveal that in the colleges of the North Central Association the average student fees pay about 50% of the cost of education. This means that if the institution is to expand and adequately provide for the needs of the ever-increasing army of those who desire educational training it must rely upon the good will and generosity of its friends and patrons. Asbury College does not receive a penny from the State nor from any church conference or religious organization. All that she has secured has been given her by appreciative students or generous, far-seeing, God-fearing patrons largely from the ranks of the Holiness Movement.

Of course the perfect gift is the gift without a string to it. However, some friends have the will to give, but fear they cannot cut into their principal because they might have need in the uncertain future. To meet such situations, Asbury College issues annuity bonds guaranteeing to the purchaser a certain fixed income for life. The amount of income depends of course upon the amount invested and upon the age of the donor. In general, the rate of interest is fixed at ten percent of the age of the donor; that is, if the person investing money in an annuity bond is fifty years old the rate would be 5%, if 55 years old, the rate would be 5½%; if 60 years old, 6%; if 65 years old, 6½%; if 70 years old, 7%; and so on.

The person receiving the bond is called an "annuitant." Annuitants proverbially live long and happy lives. This is because they have an assured income, lose nothing from re-investment or from idle money, have laid up their treasure "where thieves cannot break through and steal," and have the satisfaction that they are devoting their means, or a part of it, to the cause of training the finest youth from our homes and churches into consecrated, safe and wise Christian leaders for the great tomorrow.

No annuitant of Asbury College has ever been dissatisfied. The College is happy, the donor is happy, and the relationship is most cordial.

"Gifts perish. Institutions survive." Asbury College, since its founding, has never closed its doors; though it has passed through difficult and trying periods, it has withstood the shock of financial panics, the World War, and other crises. The school has back of her many loyal alumni and former students and a host of faithful friends, to whom the welfare and continuance of this institution has become one of the vital factors of their lives. Today, Asbury College is in truth a "World School," known better around the globe, because of her unflinching stand for the highest spiritual ideals, than perhaps any other college of similar enrollment.

Those who pray for, cherish and love Asbury College, can render a valuable service, while protecting themselves, by investing in annuity bonds. We want more gifts on the annuity plan. Think about it, pray about it, write us about it. Any of our school's representatives will be glad to explain more fully the advantages of purchasing annuity bonds from Asbury College.

For additional information, address Mr. C. A. Lovejoy, Business Manager, Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.

No Paper Next Week.

As next week is Christmas week we shall not have an issue of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, as we always reserve this week as a time of vacation for our HERALD force. The first issue in the New Year will be Jan. 4, so look out for a most interesting number at that time. We wish for all of our readers a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Had You Thought About

Sending THE HERALD to your pastor, relative or friend as a New Year Gift? If not, you will thank me for reminding you that there is no better way to scatter your wishes for the New Year than by sending THE HERALD with its weekly messages of sound gospel truth. We receive letters from our readers telling of how THE HERALD blesses their lives. Don't you want to bless some one? THE HERALD only costs $1.50 a year, or 3 cents a week. Let us hear from you.

THE MILLS OF THE GODS.

life of the boy who was a product of the hills. It was an hour when he began to dream dreams and see visions. He felt himself coming out from a long blinding stupor, but was unable to analyze his emotions. The wise mother opened up lines of conversation that her son had never heard of before, and her knowledge of things astonished her son. He never knew before what a wonderful mother he had; he seemed to see her as belonging to the outside world, and he did not know such knowledge was possible.

The crowd at night was double the morning congregation. News of the strange sermon and the gripping personality of the preacher spread over a wide area that afternoon; they came from far up Lost Creek. Not a few were intoxicated, and came with a view of making trouble, but the first intimation of any loud talk was soon silenced by the stalwart marshall, whose steel gray eyes, and his star, backed up by his big stick, put an absolute silence on every would-be disturber.

The altar filled with seekers at the first call, and among them was Wally Hargit. His boyish heart was so stirred by the ideal young preacher that he wanted to do anything and everything the minister requested. It was not long until the mountain boy found peace and salvation by the simple words of instruction from the lips of the preacher. All the wonderful emotions of his young heart were thrilled by the new-found experience. The big officer also, was converted while kneeling near the boy. When he arose he walked up and down the aisle shouting for joy. The conversion of Joe Ball was the turning point of the revival. From that night it swept the community, and an ever-widening circle was touched by the power of the Gospel. There were about one hundred and fifty saved during the three weeks following and several pressed into the experience of "full salvation."

(To be Continued)

"THE TWIN STARS."

DR. A. HAMILTON.

ALLED by the voice of God, Three Wise Men met on the sands of the desert. The first to arrive was Melchior, a Hindoo, traveling from the East; then from the South, Bethazar, an Egyptian came into view.

When the Hindoo and the Egyptian met, the Hindoo exclaimed: "God only is good!" And the Egyptian answered: "And blessed are they that serve him."

While these two exchanged salutations they looked toward the North, and in the distance a small object came into view, silhouetted against the horizon. Nearer it came until another man was clearly seen, riding on a white dromedary as the other two had done. And Caspar, a Greek, dismounted and addressing the Hindoo, he said: "Peace to you, O my brother." And Melchior replied: "God's will be done."

Then seating themselves around the food which had been prepared by the Hindoo, each speaking a language which had never before been heard by the other, said: "Father of all—God, what we have here is of Thee. Take our thanks and bless us, that we may continue to do Thy will."

And they understood each the other, although the language was foreign to them. Truly God was there and gave them understanding.

Then Caspar, the Greek, being the last to arrive, but the first to express his mission, declared his message to be one of "Faith." Faith in God and his Son, Jesus.

Then Melchior, the Hindoo, gave a report of his mission, which was a message of "Love." Love for God, love for the Christ and love for all mankind.

Then Bethazar, the Egyptian, declared his mission was to bring the gospel of "Good Works."

Each of these Wise Men had been given a vision. To the one, Faith, to another Love, to another, Good Works—Faith, Love, and Good Works, being the ladder by which heaven is reached. That is, we must have faith in Christ, we must love him and we must be ready to work for him if we ever gain heaven.

Having delivered their message, each to the other, these Wise Men with an expression of expectancy on their faces stepped out of the tent in which they had dined, and looked to the heavens. And suddenly a brilliant light which took on the form of a dazzling star, was seen, and in unison they cried: "The Star, the Star!"

The very brief outline given here is an outline of the meeting of the "Three Wise Men" as described in "Ben Hur" the wonderful book of General Lew Wallace.

Almost two thousand years ago, over in the Eastern heavens, a star appeared. By the light of that star which went before them, Wise Men were led to the feet of a little babe who was sleeping in a manger, on a bed of straw, with the sheep, the horses and the cattle for companions. There had been no room at the Inn for the Christ Child. No downy bed upon which the little body could lie. No fluffy little comforter to spread over the sleeping babe whose mission to earth was the salvation of men. No electric chandelier dispelled the gloom of night. Just a manger for a cradle, straw for a bed, and an old lantern to dispel the gloom. But God placed in the heavens a bright light, a wonderful star to guide the "Wise Men" to this manger cradle.

A meaning of great import is surely contained within these two words, "Wise Men." All so-called great men are not wise. Some men who think themselves very great are very foolish. Some supposedly great men never glance at the Star of Bethlehem, to follow its guiding light.

There were two stars in Bethlehem that night. One was hovering over the path of the "Wise Men" and showing them the way to the Savior, while the other one was filling that old barn with a wonderful glory, as it began shining out bright and clear to show the world the way to eternal salvation. "And wise men follow that light."

A great many so-called great men have forgotten Christ and have grasped the world. But way back yonder almost two thousand years ago, a little Babe, a wonderful star of light, brought to the world the dazzling, beautiful beams of the star of hope by which weary, heart-hungry, despairing souls may find a way to peace, and joy and love.

At the midnight hour, with darkness all around, the shepherds way out on the plain in the vicinity of Bethlehem, were startled by a wonderful light as the heavens were flooded with a great glory, and they saw and heard the holy angels sing: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will to men."

Two stars were shining: One the transient star which directed the feet of the "Wise Men"; the other an eternal star, with a wonderful light which has been shining bright and clear through the intervening centuries and by its beautiful beams of dazzling purity, guiding the souls of men to the throne of God.

Have we room for Christ in our hearts? Or are we doing as the Innkeepers of Bethlehem, turning him away?

Oh, if this old sin-cursed world could just remember the glorious light of that little manger cradle, which the cruel jests of sinners, the crackling scourge and the horror of old Calvary could not dim. A light which has withstood the jeers of the Infidel, and is today shining bright and clear all around the earth. May the beautiful beams of that light penetrate the hearts of men and guide them to that city whose gates are pearl streets of gold, and whose light is derived from the smiling face of God.

Wise Men are looking for that Light. Ingersol was what the world called a great man, but most decidedly he was not wise. Jesus asks us: "For what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Would it be wise to do so? Dear reader, you answer. And while you answer, look to the eternal Star of Bethlehem, and by its beams of light, allow your feet to be guided into the paths of peace, and joy and love.

Plenty of Power

C. W. SHUTE.

"O for one more sweep of that tremendous flail!" wrote some one of the mighty evangelist Charles G. Finney. And many hearts today whose memories do not reach back to the ministry of that prophet of God are crying out in their inmost souls, "Lord, send back the time of mighty, community-shaking, Spirit-endued revivals."

The ways of God in the affairs of men are too wonderful to understand. Spiritual refreshings do not come continuously. Drought and then flood-tide seems to be the rule. We cannot understand all the reasons; doubtless the purpose of God does run down through the course of centuries unchanged; and yet the will of man enters the drama as a great determining force.

I believe that back of every revival is some one soul or some group of souls, large or small, who tarried before God night and day, and as the widow of Christ's parable, simply would not be denied. "Command me," says the Almighty Owner of the universe. What a glorious privilege for his devoted children to "command" their Father to accomplish the things that his great loving heart is yearning to do!

Suppose that Christ should awaken you some night and say, "My child, I am going to take you home with me tonight. But before we go you may ask for anything that your heart desires." I wonder what our petitions would be! I am not sure what I should say, but it might be something like this. "O my Father, as Elisha of old prayed for his young friend, open the eyes of thy children. Let them see the broad floods of unsaved humanity whirling over the rapids to endless damnation; open their eyes to the vast resources of Divine power waiting to be released upon their faith; open their eyes to the absolute necessity of perfect consecration and holiness in their lives hour by hour if they are to 'abide' in thee and so be able to tap these great stores."

"O for one more sweep of that tremendous flail!" A noble desire. But let us tarry before God with a Heaven-sent determination until there shall be not one flail but many sweeping through the church and thence to the world. O for men who will lay themselves out and really pray! Reader, will you be such a one?

REPORTS FROM SOUL WINNERS

FIRST SUNDAY 1927 AT SYCHAR.

Wm. R. Chase.

At a holiness camp you never hear the exhortation 'now shake hands with one another.' It is a spontaneous custom here at Sychar. I held out my hand at one of the services yesterday and said "good morning" and the instant response was, "Oh, I am praising the Lord in my soul." That shows the spirit and thought of the meeting. To your greeting you are about as liable to get a shout as anything else. Sychar is one of the heavenlies in Christ of which Paul speaks. Come and see. You will be convinced. Already folks are here from California, Oregon, Nebraska, Missouri, Minnesota, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, New Jersey, New York, Georgia, Florida, every corner of Ohio and six from China. The preachers of the day were Miss Gorsuch, Mrs. Griffith, Miss McGhie, Revs. Bush, Winland, Dunaway, Owen and Post. Everybody had opportunity to hear.

The morning sermon was by Bro. Dunaway. He read the 3rd chapter of 1st Corinthians for a lesson and took for text, Eph. 5:18. To be filled with the Spirit is the great need of the Church today. That means they need entire sanctification. A study of the Church at Corinth and the Church of today reveals the fact that they are much alike in their lack of spiritual life. Christians in their babyhood were a bane then and are now. There are thousands in our churches who never have been born again. Numbers there who have backslid, who have lost out and are in darkness. Others there are who have been saved, have gone on in a way, but still are in the babyhood stage. We have those three classes in the Church, but thanks be to God there are those who have not backslid, have been born again, are not in a babyhood state and who are having a good time in the kingdom.

Paul speaks of a time when he spoke as a child, but the time comes when we should leave our toys and be men. You know that for this reason the devil can pull off most anything in our churches today. It should not be so. We should keep off the devil's ground. There never was a time that we needed more to stand and having done all stand than just now. Our business is to put on the whole armor of God. The Christian's life is a man's job. Our business is to stand true to God in our home community. We have those who do, they stand for something and the folk at home know it. The Lord raise up thousands who will keep their faces to the enemy. What we need is some real Christianity, not folks who can take their S. S. classes out to a marshmallow roast and can't be gotten within ten miles of a revival. We need folks who can fight. Babies can't. It takes men panoplied from heaven to fight. I never got impatient with my baby, of which I had to take much of the care, but I do wonder if I am as patient as I should be with these old babies in the church. We need revivals not to get more folks into the church, but to get men saved, and to get those who are in their babyhood up to strong men and women in the church. A better quality is the need. A backdoor revival is needed; to get a lot out who are in would be gain. With a great pleasure-seeking crowd in our churches it is not strange that we seemingly can have no revival these days. It used to be that we turned out those who would not obey the rules, but now they turn the preachers out. Had we a membership of one-third the number who were clean we'd have a revival. To catch the fish is one thing, but as Bro. Bud says, "to clean them is another. And if you don't clean them," he says, "they will soon spoil on your hands." We need a gracious revival. Our cradle roll is already full. We are in need of those who can take care of the babies now in the Church. I've gone into some places and shot into that big tree that was full of owls and eagles and elks and my, my what fun I did have in shooting them down. They will tell you when you shoot up where some of them live, and are hitting them, that now, "don't you think it is time to quit such foolishness and get to preaching?" They'll tell you as they told the old colored preacher, "You've quit preaching and gone to meddlin'." But it takes some preaching that to some seems like "meddlin'" to do them any good.

You know they call us Doctor now. Well, if I am to be a doctor I want to be a specialist, a baby specialist. We have car loads of them in our churches and they all need attention. There are those for which nothing can be done, but one who is a real spiritual babe, a babe in Christ, can be helped. There is a cure for them, a never failing remedy. Many men and women in the church, the average of them, don't want anything that is very strong. But if they will not stand for the gospel as preached down here by us little folks what will they do when they stand before God? I know of folks who profess everything there is in the New Testament, but who don't want anything that is very strong. They want the cream off the milk, let alone taking of the strong meat of the gospel. I cannot close without asking you, do you not want to be converted, reclaimed, sanctified, or get out of your babyhood? If so, come to the altar. We will meet you here and pray with you. Come and let's pray together.

At two P. M. Bro. Owen preached from John 14:16. "We have come to the time," said he, "when it is the privilege of every child of God to be filled with the Spirit as was Peter, James and John. Nor can we do the work that is to be done without the gift of the Holy Spirit any more than could they. We need the gift just as much as they. No sinner can come to God unless moved by the Holy Ghost. The foundation of the Christian Church is the new birth which delivers us from the power of the devil. It is by the power of the Holy Spirit that we are made Christian. It is through the direct testimony of the Holy Spirit that we know we are the sons of God. 'Another comforter' shows that they had one already, and they did in Jesus, but now that he was going away they needed another one. Only a Christian can receive the Comforter. The coming of the Comforter is not the beginning of the Christian life. He came to the Disciples after they were disciples. Christ was not baptized with fire because he had no sin to be cleansed from. But he was baptized with the Holy Ghost. Since Jesus waited for the filling and the anointing before he began his work how much more must we be filled and anointed with the Holy Spirit. The Spirit is the divine source of all power. I do not understand about how it can be that we can be indwelt but we can experience it, can know it by experience. How the Infinite can come down and dwell in us, I cannot understand, but bless God we can know it."

At the evening hour Brother Post took for his text, Matt. 11:28, 29. "These are the best words in the world," said he, "a slave's text, a queen's text, and an ancient bishop's text, and maybe yours. The world never has had any such words written. The people to whom Jesus was talking were burdened by the rites of Moses, and the scribes and Pharisees were making it harder for them. It was to these that Jesus was speaking. It is unpopular today to speak of sinners. We all have joined the Christian Scientists who say there is no sin, we all are good, but sin is rife. Don't you come around here and tell me there are no sinners. If you do I will tell you that you are either very dull or perverting. This text is for sinners to come to Jesus and find immediate relief. But there is no promise held out to any self-satisfied soul. Oh what we need is a time when again folks will come and wake up the preacher for relief from their sins. I have had them come. There are those who are sleeping the sleep of death that the preacher should wake up. It is our business to make the sinner feel tremendously bad about his sins. This text has also relief for the believer who is troubled about his carnality. This text covers every need of humanity."

Sunday was full of preaching and full of seeking. It was, all told, a full day. The grounds were full of people who were as quiet and attentive as at their own home church. Sychar crowds are always well behaved.

TWO MEETINGS.

We have held two meetings since reporting our work for publication in the holiness papers. The first one was at Troy, Ohio, in the City Mission, when we dedicated their elegant new brick hall, one of the very finest we have ever seen, and of commodious size. It was a short meeting but a very excellent one. We preached to a good sized congregation Friday night, November 4, and the Spirit was consciously present despite the fact that the rain poured about the time people could be starting to the meeting. The next night we preached to a large congregation and some were saved. Sunday morning we administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and after that preached. Sunday afternoon we dedicated the building to the worship of Almighty God, and the Spirit's presence was very manifest.

There was a debt of some three thousand dollars on the building, and only six hundred dollars in the treasury. We were asked to take an offering to be applied on the debt, and in a short time more than fifteen hundred dollars was contributed in cash and subscriptions, and considerably more was added at the evening service without any public appeal, which, with what they had on hand, will about clear the building of debt. Every one was delighted that the finances came so quickly and liberally. The Mission is in fine repute with the best and most influential people of the town, and is doing a world of good. Sunday night we preached again and some were saved, and the revival spirit was upon the people who regretted that the services could not have been continued longer. They expressed the desire to have us return to them for a longer meeting which we hope to be able to do later. Brother M. S. Wagner is the efficient Superintendent of the Mission, and is assisted in the work by a number of devoted men and women.

November 13 to 27 we held a meeting in Aroma Park, Ill., the Rev. V. C. Stump, pastor. There had been held a campaign to clean up the town, and good resulted from it, but there was a division between the people of the town which reached to the church. After the first day people began to be saved, and except two rainy nights the work of salvation continued up to the very close, people being at the altar as seekers of regeneration or entire sanctification in nearly every service. The conviction was most pungent, and the people came through victoriously. There were some very remarkable cases of salvation. The last night of the meeting a goodly number presented themselves at the altar as seekers of salvation, and there was great rejoicing among the people as a mother saw a son pray through and a wife behold her husband converted for the first time, and for whom earnest prayer had been offered. After the meeting had been dismissed, and the people were about to start home, two men, whose wives and children had been praying earnestly for them, came to the altar, and after praying earnestly, testified that the Lord had pardoned their sins. This was the signal for another outburst of rejoicing. We found it difficult to get away from the meeting to take a midnight train for home. On every hand there were expressions of regret that the meeting could not have been continued longer, but we had engaged to be in another meeting December 4, to be continued over December 18, at Lowville, N. Y. After closing that meeting we will spend Christmas at home, and then will be afeld again.

We have some vacant dates, and persons desiring to correspond with us relative to dates should address us 1350 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

REPORT FROM M. V. LEWIS.

My dear Herald readers: Greetings to you in the name of Jesus.

For some time have intended giving a brief report of my summer's work, so will attempt it now. In the beginning will say that the Lord has been gracious unto me and with his help, have stood the strenuous work of the season much better than ever before.

My last report was of the Duquoin, Ill., meeting in June. From there I went to Ghent, Ky., with Bro. DeArmond, pastor. I put in two very prosperous weeks in song, exhortation and praise. The people are of the highest type and God greatly honored my labors. May the Lord bless them and their congenial pastor while he leads them in the paths of right.

Glyndon Grove Camp Meeting, Springfield, Ohio, was my next place of battle. This camp was turned over to Asbury College and was under the leadership of Rev. E. L. Eaton. Before the encampment was over, a great corps of workers had assisted in bringing souls to Christ. Dr. Morrison, Tilden F. Gaddis and the Moser sisters were present some of the time while Miss Daisy Dean Gray, Bro. Eaton and myself were privileged to assist throughout the entire time. We certainly had a revival. The first Sunday night there were twenty-two professions, and from that night on, the fire burned. Never have I seen greater work done. God was with the workers. Dr. Morrison poured out his soul to us in a marvelous way. Pray that the Lord may spare him for many years with his message. Bro. Gaddis took up the torch and held it high, and under the influence of his wonderful Spirit-filled messages the altars were filled every night, the last night the number being about thirty. How the Lord did use him and his party to preach and sing. God bless them. If you have not heard this party of consecrated workers, you have something coming your way. Miss Gray conducted a school of prayer which was one of the most appreciated features of the meeting. All the young people who attended her services were saved or sanctified. To associate with her is to know Christ better. The music was good.

From Glyndon Grove I went to Fig, N. C., my home camp, which the Lord helped my brother, W. H., and me to establish some years ago. The camp being in my home community, makes me very much interested in its progress. C. M. Dunaway and my brother had charge of the preaching, Miss Daisy Dean Gray, the women's work, Miss Minnie Carmichael the children's work, while Mrs. Lewis and I conducted the music. The sweetest fellowship existed among the workers. Each knew his or her field of labor, abounding more and more in the grace of the Lord.

We had people to visit us from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Louisiana, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, and Kansas. Should you desire to spend some time in the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina during the hot days of August we will be glad to have you spend them with us. You can build a nice cottage with very little expense. Come, refresh your soul, drink from the mountain springs and help us build up the kingdom of God.

Yours in song,

M. V. Lewis.

CALIFORNIA MEETINGS.

Praise God for these good days to my soul, and for his blessing upon my ministry. We have just closed a five-Sunday revival campaign with the Upland Church of the Nazarene, Upland, Calif. God came upon us and gave the victory. Souls are rejoicing in the liberty which Christ gives. God helped me to preach the old rugged gospel with the same liberty and freedom and power with which I began under brush arbors in the Sunny South eighteen years ago.

I am engaged to begin at San Bernardino next Sunday. The only time I was ever arrested in my life was at the above place about six years ago. God came on the meeting with great power, and sinners came falling at the altar of the tent, and praying as if they were going to hell alive. There was much stir, much noise and blessed victory which remains until this day. It was too much for the devil and we were arrested for disturbing the peace. But God was with us, the Judge was kind, and we were permitted to continue the meeting.

From San Bernardino we plan to go to Cornoa, Calif. We desire the prayers of the saints everywhere that God will put his mighty power on the revivals and deliver souls from the bondage of Satan. Under the precious cleansing blood, filled with the Holy Ghost.

follow their leadership in putting out revival fires, quenching the spirit of aggressive evangelism and devote our time to gathering money to place in their hands to spread their abominable heresies in mission fields at home and abroad.

There is no likelihood that your modernists will ever come back to the faith. They are set in their ways. They are vain in their conceit. They are fixed in their purpose. Such men do not repent. In the nature of things they cannot become as little children and open their hearts to the gracious influences of the Holy Ghost. Their pride and contempt for their brethren who hold to the old saving Gospel truth is of a character that makes it as impossible for them to exercise and develop saving faith in Christ as it is for orange trees to grow, bloom, and fruit on the icy mountains of Greenland. They will grow worse and worse. Their children will go farther down the road of destructive criticism and unbelief than their parents. The unregenerated multitudes that they are bringing into the church will become the easy victims of a more bold and destructive criticism than they themselves believe and teach. The second and third generations of these false teachers will be rank and dangerous infidels, hating the Bible, dethroning God, and even more blasphemous against the Lord Jesus than these men who deny his pre-existence, his Virgin Birth and the miracles attributed to him which are written down in the New Testament.

Unbelief of the Scriptures, and the great fundamental truths of our holy Christianity revealed in the Bible, is always facing toward the far country and will always produce a harvest of skepticism, atheism and a riot of wickedness. The faithful, devout people in Methodism who cling to the Bible and teachings of Mr. Wesley on the fall of man, the sinfulness of the race, the necessity of repentance, salvation by faith, remaining sin, entire sanctification as a subsequent, instantaneous work of grace, and growth in grace, separation from worldliness, and lives of righteousness,—these people, I say, are as far separated from the modern liberalists in our churches as the poles. They have nothing in common. They can never agree. Neither side of these separate bodies will surrender. If they live together it will be in confusion, debate and strife.

I am well aware that your modern liberalist is constantly insisting that we must not bother our heads about theology and doctrine, but that we must practice the teachings of Jesus. They would have us tear away the foundations of the whole structure of Christianity and keep the building hanging up in the air without support. This is impossible. We cannot have a creedless church. We must believe something, believe it definitely, preach it positively, insist on the sinfulness of mankind, the necessity of repentance and the belief of certain great fundamental truths. We are taught in the Scriptures that we shall believe the truth and the truth shall make us free. Our Lord Jesus was a great teacher. He would have us believe his teaching, as well as follow him in the practice of every day life.

The Bible, in the very nature of things, furnishes the foundation for the whole superstructure of Christianity. God in his wisdom did not send Jesus Christ into the world until he had prepared the way by the inspiration and proclamation of his holy prophets. The prophets must come first and build the impregnable structure upon which Jesus was exalted. The prophecies, the construction of the temple, the whole system of sacrifices, was all a systematic preparation for the revelation of Jesus, and to build a stalwart, intelligent Christianity, we must hold tenaciously to the entire Bible, teach these inspired Scriptures to the people and thus not only bring them to saving faith in Christ, but so fortify them in this faith that they will be proof against all destructive teaching, either by skeptics in the church or infidels out of the church.

I believe, with all my heart, that God wants a Methodism in the world that stands for the whole Bible; that is neither afraid nor ashamed in the homeland or foreign field to contend for its inspiration, teach its profound and significant meaning, and bring men under the power of his inspired truth to see their sins and be led of the Holy Ghost unto repentance and saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE OPTIMISM OF PREMILLENNIALISM.

All modern liberalists who deny the inspiration of the Scriptures and the virgin birth of our Lord, will dislike and oppose this new book on the Second Coming of Christ. Send $1.00 to The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky., and get this book. It will give you some new thought on a vital subject.

Please remember in all my thinking on this subject, I keep constantly in mind the thought of God, his love for men, his honor for his Word, his Son, and the Holy Ghost, and that he is deeply concerned for the salvation of our lost race. I believe that the old faith has in it power to save men, and these new skeptical teachings are from beneath and have in them the power to blight and destroy the souls of men.

I am praying God to raise up and baptize with the Holy Ghost a mighty host of people who will become true protestants against all this false teaching and stand immovable to witness for Christ and against the delusive and destructive propaganda of modern liberalists. May the great God give us heroic courage to suffer, if need be, to hand down to our children of the rising generation evangelical truth that shall kindle revival fires and bring untold multitudes to saving faith in the precious blood of Christ.

In next week's issue, I want to call your attention to some of the teachings of modernistic Methodists; why we cannot harmonize them with the fundamental doctrines of the Bible and evangelical Christian faith, and why we will not submit to such leadership or contribute our means to advance the propaganda of this soul-destroying skepticism.

Faithfully yours,
H. C. MORRISON.

The Last Chapter of 1927.

WE are coming to the close of a tragic year in history. All years are tragic. Every period has its vital issues; the tides of civilization and progress rise and fall. There is enough of failure to sadden us, enough of success to encourage us, and all those who trust in God and have their eyes set on the golden future which is sure to come, can keep singing in the midst of the conflict. Looking backward over the year our hearts are filled with gratitude, our faith holds secure, and we praise God and take courage.

The past has been one of the greatest years in the history of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. Letters come to us from every quarter and people of all evangelical churches laden with words of approval and appreciation for the service THE HERALD is rendering in defence of the evangelical faith. There is not a two-horse wagon bed in the state of Kentucky that could hold the letters we have received through the years from people who, by reading THE HERALD, have been convicted, converted, wholly sanctified, or greatly helped and blessed in their spiritual lives.

Like the old builders of the walls in Jerusalem, we have been laboring with the trowel in one hand and the sword in the other; the trowel for the upbuilding of the kingdom, and the sword in the defence of the truth. We have no sympathy with those placid, easy-going people who insist that the truth needs no defence; that the Bible will take care of itself. Of course, the truth is mighty and will prevail; it cannot die, but it lives and moves and saves by getting itself into the brain and hearts and on the lips of people who believe the truth and will preach and propagate it. The Word of God is infallible. The earth may pass away, but the Bible never. But what about the people? They must believe the Word of God. It must be explained, defended, proclaimed and by earnest presentation sent home to the hearts and minds of men in order that they may be brought to Christ.

The doctrine of salvation by faith was shut up in the Bible while the people perished in untold thousands; but Martin Luther arose; he proclaimed the truth; it met opposition, debate, strife, war, but it also meant a new age and a spiritual awakening which touched all Europe. There were Bibles all about England, but the masses knew little of what they contained, of the gospel truths shut up in them; and John Wesley came. He sounded the gospel note and awoke the spiritually dead. It also awoke the bitterest antagonism. There has rarely been more bitter prejudice, misrepresentation and ridicule than that heaped upon the early Methodists. They were imprisoned, conscripted into the army, mobbed, their furniture destroyed, their bodies beaten and bruised; but heroically they went forward, their hearts on fire. Nothing could prevent their witnessing to saving faith in Jesus, and the sanctifying power of his precious blood. The fire spread, the nations felt the throb of a new spiritual life, and the whole world has been powerfully influenced by the great Methodist awakening; untold millions have gone up triumphantly into heaven, and the end is not yet.

There are no mathematics with which to calculate the far-reaching and powerful effect of the revival fire kindled by that quartette of holy men—John and Charles Wesley, John Fletcher and Adam Clarke. All of them believed and taught, lived and witnessed, to the sanctifying power of Jesus' precious blood. With patience they bore reproach, with courage they contended for the faith, with joy in their hearts they proclaimed full redemption in Jesus, and God took care of the results.

The same God lives and reigns today. The same truths are vital and powerful. The need of the times is faithful preachers and joyful witnesses who cannot be deterred into silence or ridiculed out of their experience, but who with holy living and glad testimony, will recommend Jesus Christ to the people everywhere as one mighty to save to the uttermost. The world is in distress; there is confusion, doubt of God, of his Word, unbelief in men, selfishness and strife on every hand. But there are multiplied millions of hungry hearts, of sorrowing people who would be glad to know their sins forgiven, who would rejoice to experience a baptism with the Holy Spirit purging their hearts from all uncleanness. The people are tired of signing cards, making resolutions, marching up aisles, getting baptized, joining churches, and struggling on under the burden of their sins. They want salvation. They want to know that Jesus saves them, that their names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life, that their hearts are pure. They want to be able to sing with joy the songs of a full and free redemption.

Thanking God for all the blessings that have come to us during the past year, let us gird ourselves afresh for glorious battle in the year 1928, and go forward with an unconquerable faith and zeal. Let's determine to win souls. Let's resolve to preach, to pray, to witness, to sing, to stir the community, to thrill the states, to arouse the nation. Let's storm the mercy seat of heaven with mighty cries to God day and night. Let's wrestle like Jacob of old, crying out, "I will not let thee go." Let's mention to God the fact that multitudes are perishing for whom Jesus died. Let's entreat him, cling to the skirts of his garments, and refuse to be denied. Oh, God, give us a revival!

There is a rumor that I am growing old. When I look into the glass and see a very white head I am compelled to believe there is some truth in the rumor; meanwhile I feel the thrill of immortal youth within my breast. I ask for your prayers. I beg for your sympathy. Renew your subscription to THE HERALD, pick us up a subscriber, and help us to send the good news of a free and full redemption into thousands of homes. Let us make 1928 the greatest year in the history of the revival of the Bible doctrine of Holiness, as interpreted by Mr. Wesley and the founders of Methodism.

Christmas Gifts.

"Thou hast received gifts for men."
Psa. 68:18.

Christmas gifts for thee,
Fair and free!
Precious things from the heavenly store,
Filling thy casket more and more;
Golden love in divinest chain,
That never can be untwined again;
Silvery carols of joy that swell
Sweetest of all in the heart's lone cell;
Pearls of peace that were sought for thee
In the terrible depths of a fiery sea;
Diamond promises sparkling bright,
Flashing in farthest reaching light.

Christmas gifts for thee,

Grand and free!
Christmas gifts from the King of love,
Brought from His royal home above;
Brought to thee in the far-off land,
Brought to thee by His own dear hand.
Promises held by Christ for thee,
Peace as a river flowing free,
Joy that in His own joy must live,
And that Infinite love can give.
Surely thy heart of hearts uplifts
Carols of praise for such Christmas gifts!
—Frances Ridley Havergal.

THE GIFT OF INFINITE LOVE.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE very word Christmas suggests gifts, as it has been a time when we remembered the other fellow with tokens of our love and friendship. The Wise Men who came in search of the infant Child Jesus, presented unto him gold, frankincense and myrrh, as an expression of their joy in finding him, and their love for him.

The birth of this wondrous world Gift was announced by Isaiah as he proclaimed to the people, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace."

Then the prophet goes on to tell us the nature of his mission and kingdom when he wrote: "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever."

What a wonderful Being this was to be—a King whose government was to have no end. The kingdoms of this world are uncertain, but the kingdom of the world's Redeemer is to be an everlasting kingdom and justice and judgment shall be the ruling elements.

But why is Jesus the world's great Gift? It is because he is the only one who could take the load of sin off the shoulders and heart of the bruised old world, after it had been cursed as a result of the fall of our first parents. Jesus came to restore the prodigal world to its place of love and fellowship with the Father. He came to be a propitiation for our sins, that we might look into our injured Father's face without being ashamed. He tasted death for every man, that whosoever will might come and taste of his pardoning love and share the wondrous blessings purchased on Calvary's cruel tree.

He is the world's great Gift because he gave himself for the world, not for a few persons, but all the ends of the earth may come unto him and find rest. God so loved the world that he gave his Son for it, and his Son loved the world so much that he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross. He was the Gift of the Father, and he was his own Gift in that he volunteered to come down to this sin-cursed earth and take upon himself the form of a servant, that he might lift us back to the bosom of the tender, loving Father whose mercy we had spurned, and whose love we had refused.

Can we imagine what the world would be without this Gift of Infinite Love? Think of the heathen lands where the name of Jesus is not known, where the loving parents have not the joy of preparing gifts for the children, and little ones do not know the expectancy of Christmas Day with its extra good things to eat, along with the toys and other gifts that make them joyous and happy. But this is not all! What a dark and dreary world this would be if Jesus were not in it in the person of his Holy Spirit to comfort.

guide, and lead us on to the land of unclouded day! We are reminded of the beautiful couplet which runs thus:

"O, Thou Who driest the mourner's tear,
How dark this world would be;
If, when deceived and wounded here,
We could not fly to Thee."

Jesus is the panacea for the world's ills, and the balm for every crushed and wounded heart. He is the liberator of the soul from the fetters of sin, and the Guide of the pilgrim as he travels the rugged paths of time. What would you do without Jesus! Who could take his place as the burden-bearer of earth's sorrows and disappointments! Let us do homage to him this glad Christmas time—glad because of him—and as he gave himself for us, let us give ourselves for the uplift and betterment of our fellowbeings who are fighting out their battles just as we are, only more bitter and frequent the struggle often is for them.

The world is in consternation, unrest, and strife, and the "powers that be" seem unable to adjust the situation; but we, as children of the Babe of Bethlehem, in whom all power is vested, may look unto him, who has promised never to leave us nor forsake us; then come what will, the world's great Christmas Gift will be with us to safely steer us into the haven of eternal rest, where we shall go no more out forever. Children of the Highest, let us sing heartily,

"Joy to the world, the Lord is come,
Let earth receive her King.
Let every heart prepare Him room
And heaven and nature sing!"

From Bethlehem to Calvary.

REV. ROBERT L. SELLE, D.D.

It was from Bethlehem to Calvary,
In all the ways of life, he went for me.
There was no sorrow that he did not feel,
Nor any sickness that he did not heal.
There was no burden that he did not bear,
And none was left without his tender care.
There was no hill too steep for him to climb,
That he might find and save the lost on time;
No tears too scalding for his eyes to weep,
In ceaseless searchings for his long lost sheep.

There was no day too long for him to fast,
To bring us bread in quantities to last;
No trail too long or rocky for his feet,
And yet he was for all The Way complete;
No storm too fierce for him to brave and stand,

To make an endless calm for all the land.
No waters were too deep, or wide, or cold,
For him to cross to make secure The Fold.
His garden was Gethsemane; O, night;
What darkness he endured to give us light!
There was no gall too bitter for his lips,
For us, nor was he spared the keenest whips.
There was no cross whose weight he did not bear,

That he might lift the fallen from despair;
No death too tortuous for him to die,
That he might give to others life on high.
There was no sword too sharp to pierce his side—

The Prince of Life, and too, The Crucified!
There was no grave too deep to lay him in—
The One who came to save the world from sin!

The angels sang for joy when he was born;
But when he died, the wicked hissed with scorn!

* * * * *

The resurrection glow was not too bright;
It was a gleam of heaven's morning light,
Which pierced the long and death-like night of gloom,
To light the world through Joseph's open tomb!

The silences of Jesus are as eloquent as his speech, and may be a sign not of his disapproval, but of his approval and of a deep purpose of blessing for you,

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

GITS FOR THE KING.

B. N. H.

The wise men sought the King of kings,
To lay at his feet their offerings;
Gold for the Royal Child they brought,
Inlaid with gems and cunningly wrought.

And frankincense, that rich perfume,
With incense filled the humble room;
Nor would their gifts have been complete,
Without the myrrh, the bitter-sweet.

Oh, where are the wise who today will bring Their gifts to lay at the feet of the King?

This King to whom all power is given,
On earth and in the courts of Heaven.

"What, then, shall we bring to this King," you say?
(How foolish the worldly-wise today!)
For all your boasted wisdom and art,
You know not the way to the King's great heart.

The heart that was pierced that ye might live,
And yet ye ask, "What shall we give?"
Bring him your heart, your life, your ALL!
E'en then, tis a gift exceeding small.

Compared with his gift of love to thee,
Life and joy for eternity!
Come lay thy gifts at his feet and know
The joy that giving can bestow.

And let that joy burst forth in song.
To him all worship and praise belong!
Thou Prince of Peace, thou Ancient of Days
To thee be glory and honor and praise!

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

The wheel of time has brought us to another Christmas season, the time when we celebrate the birth of our blessed Christ. It is the celebration of the greatest event in all history, for on this day was born the world's Redeemer.

Had you ever thought of how lovely was the coming of our Saviour? He did not come in pomp, splendor, and with uniformed attendants; but he came where one would least expect him—in the Manger at Bethlehem—because the hotels were crowded and there was no room for him in the Inn.

It looks like a shame that the Saviour should so come, but it is more shameful that, after he has come, that any one of us should refuse to give him place in the chamber of our heart. That was why he came—that he might find way into the hearts of the people for whom he gave his life.

While we are remembering our friends with gifts, let us not fail to remember our Saviour with the gift that, of all others, he desire most—a loving heart that beats in harmony with his will, and longs to please him in all it does. I am giving you a poem that tells of gifts we may bring the King of kings and Lord of lords! Read the poem at the head of this column carefully and don't fail to give Jesus YOUR HEART.

With best wishes for a Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year,
I am, lovingly,

Aunt Bettie.

ILLUSTRATED TEXTS. Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

No. 1.

Text. "I will surely shew thee kindness." 2 Sam. 9:7.

Story. Four year old Johnnie never teased his little pet dog, Brownie, but petted him. If Johnnie was ill the puppy got close to him and never ate a morsel until his lover was well. He would take from the pile of soiled clothing every bit that belonged to Johnnie and put it in a corner and lie down on it. How lovely if every child would shew to their little friends the kindness of a faithful puppy!

Poem:

"If no one was kind, and no one was loving, and no one thought about me,
And we all stood alone in the battle of life, surely it sad would be."

Prayer.

"If any little love of mine,
May make a life the sweeter,
If any little help of mine
Bring joy to any other,
God, give me lovingkindness,
To cheer my little brother."

No. 2.

Text: "Laid him in a manger." Luke 2:7.

Story. A poor four-year-old little girl slept in a trundle bed that made a loud noise as it was pulled out at night. The kindergarten Missionary told the story of the baby Jesus. Soon it thundered. Anna said, "Miss Lea, was that God pulling out Jesus' trundle bed?"

Story.

"There's a tumult of joy o'er the wonderful birth,
For the Virgin's sweet Boy is the Lord of the earth,
Ay, the Star rains its fire, and the Beautiful sing,
For the Manger of Bethlehem cradles a King."

Poem Prayer. Heavenly Father,
"We rejoice in the light, and we echo the song,
That comes down through the night from the heavenly throng.
Ay, we shout to the lovely evangel they bring
As we greet in His cradle our Saviour and King."

No. 3.

Text. "They presented to him gifts." Matt. 2:11.

Story. Mama was packing a Christmas box for some poor children and was about to put in little Eddie's tin kitchen, when he said, "Mama, I think a lot of my tin kitchen." They prayed and he was glad to send it.

Poem Prayer.

"We'll bring the little duties
We have to do each day,
We'll try our best to please him
At home, at school, at play.
And better are these treasures,
To offer to our King,
Than richest gifts without them,—
Yet these a child may bring."

No. 4.

Text. "I will fill the treasures of those that love Me." Prov. 8:21.

Story. It was a cold, rainy Christmas eve. The poor Missionaries wept beside the cot of their little darling. She had prayed for a coat for papa, a dress for mama and a dollie and goodies. And there was nothing. Then came a knock. A neighbor thrust in a box. The hammering woke the child. All was joy as they took out a coat, a dress, a doll, goodies and much more.

Poem.

"The Christ comes with soft, glad feet,
To touch earth's paths and make them sweet.

Where'er those shining footsteps fall,
New life and hope are over all,
And he who follows where they go,
Tastes a deep joy no others know."

Prayer. Father, I thank Thee for all the good Christmas things Jesus has given me.

No. 5.

Text. "Jesus . . . perfect through suffering." Heb. 2:9, 10.

Story. A friend loves to fill Christmas stockings for poor children. Early she had been left an orphan. Her aunt was unkind. Christmas morning Nannie jumped from her bed to look into her stocking. It was empty. No, there was one round thing at the bottom. An apple? An orange? Only a potato! She sat down and cried. Can you think why afterward she loved to fill big Christmas stockings for little children?

Poem Prayer.

Heavenly Father, what words can I borrow,
To thank Thee
For Thy grace in turning every sorrow,
Into joy for those who love Thee.

No. 6.

Text. "The babe lying in a manger." Luke 2:16.

Story. A little girl whose parents were wealthy, and who had a beautiful room, was taken to Sunday school and heard the story of the Holy Babe. Going home she said, "Mama, when God sent Jesus down to be a baby what made him let him be born in a stable? Why didn't he buy him a pretty brass bedstead just like mine?"

Poem.

"Fear not," that night the angel said,
Glad tidings of great joy I bring,
The baby in a manger laid,
One day shall be the Saviour King.

Prayer.

Father in heaven, I thank Thee,
For Jesus who came to save me,
May heart, and hands, and lips unite,
To serve my Saviour with delight.

No. 7.

Text. "The poor always ye have with you." John 12:8.

Story. Little Freddie heard about some poor heathen children who did not have enough to eat. He laid away, with his joys, bits of cake, candy and fruit to go in a box across the sea. He wept when mother told him they could not go. "I want them awful bad," he said. Then sister gave him the dollar to buy things to send, that she had saved up for Christ and he was happy.

Poem Prayer.

Father, I fain would give to some that are sad,
When cometh the Christmas day,
Either song, or gift, or prayer to make them glad,
And cheer them on their way.

Dear Boys and Girls and Aunt Bettie: There is something I want to write to you about this morning, and that is Thanksgiving. I hope every one of you who are reading page ten has a heart as full of thankfulness as I have. First of all, the dear Heavenly Father's love that has given us all the good things we have to enjoy. I thank him for giving me life in this world where there is so much to enjoy, even though there is so much to overcome that we may attain the best of our lives here. I thank him for giving me a home in the land where we have freedom to worship the true and living God. Our great U. S. of 48 states has within its limits every kind of climate on a planet, which may produce all varieties of fruits, vegetables, cereals and plants within its borders for our use for food or clothing. Our laws framed by men who feared God, and grant the privilege of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness to all who do right and obey them. I hope all the boys and girls will learn to love our country and obey its laws. I am so glad to read in the letters on page ten that so many are starting on a life service for God. Let us all study our Guide Book and try at all times to follow its teachings. I am thankful for the gift of the Holy Spirit to lead us into the ways of right living. Let us pray for his guidance, daily. With a heart of love to you all, I am truly yours.

Mary Hudson.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little Georgia girl and I want to get acquainted with you and the cousins. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it. I have long dark hair and fair complexion. My birthday is August 12. Have I a twin? I don't wear bobbed hair or short dresses, for I don't think it is right. I have never seen a bathing pond, a dance hall, or a moving picture show. I live on a farm near Louisville, Ga. I like farm life. It is so pleasant out in the country. I have one sister and five brothers. We have family prayer every night and morning.

Bessie Bell Harden.

Louisville, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wrote to The Herald over two months ago. I thank the kind friends for sending me so many tracts and kind letters. Please print this one on page ten so the friends will know that I thank them. I thank the lady for sending me the Christian Home Magazine. I have received three. I sure love to read Mrs. Brown's pieces on page ten. The Herald is a fine paper.

Mrs. M. Peters.

Pittsburg, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let me come in and have a seat among The Herald readers? This makes my second visit, though it has been quite a long time since I was here. I believe I remember a few of the dear friends that I met through page ten. Since I last wrote to The Pentecostal Herald, I have had quite a time waiting upon my dear mother who has been sick for nine weeks. Mother has been in the hospital at Orangeburg, S. C., five weeks and wasn't expected to live, but thanks be to God, who has taken

AYCOCK'S NEW BOOK

"THE CRIMSON STREAM."

A Devotional Sermon on the Blood

The first and perhaps the principal appeal of this new title is the fact that it fills a real need in our book list. No subject is of more vital importance, no tenet of orthodoxy is more assiduously assailed by the modernists than that of atonement by the blood of Christ.

Read the following excerpt.

"This splendid little book, 'The Crimson Stream,' is presenting to the lovers of truth, the believers in the fundamentals of the faith once delivered to the saints, a publication full of interest, light, and essential facts bearing upon a right attitude toward God, the Bible, and personal salvation. He has placed emphasis where it is most needed. It should be widely scattered and read by thousands of honest and earnest seekers after truth and righteousness such as will stand the test of time and eternity."

—R. T. Williams.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl from Kentucky join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school nearly every Sunday. Father takes The Pentecostal Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald so I hope to see it in print. I am a lover of flowers, books and music. I am thirteen years old and in the eighth grade. I am five feet, three inches, have light hair, blue eyes, and weigh 100 pounds. The one who can guess my middle name I will write to them. It starts with S and ends with A, and has five letters in it. Annie E. Ellis, I guess your name to be Elizabeth. I had better close before I wear my welcome out. Good luck to all.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am fourteen years of age. I have brown hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, and am five feet, four inches tall, and weigh 102 pounds. Have any of the cousins got my birthday, April 6? I have heard Dr. Morrison preach at Indian Springs, Ga. I think he is a fine preacher. I want every one of you cousins to write me and I will try to answer all I get.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

E. D. E.: "Kindly pray for brother, who is unsaved and who is suffering with nervous trouble, that he may be healed and be everything that the Lord wants him to be."

Mrs. C. E. H. desires prayer that she may be restored to health; also for her brother who feels called to preach.

Mrs. B. S. W.: "Please to pray that I may be healed of a distressing nerve trouble. Pray earnestly for one in distress."

PORTLAND, OREGON.

We are now in a revival at Albany, Oregon, with Pastor Lanner of the Evangelical Church. Fifty came to the altar one night, and eight the next. God has saved and sanctified some precious souls. Among the seekers was a local Presbyterian minister. Wife and I have been in this western evangelistic tour for about nine months. We have seen some of the clearest cases of salvation of all our life on this trip. Praise the Lord! Some fine people have come out clear in real holiness, among them a number of school teachers, stenographers, and people of splendid material and intelligence. The work was thorough from the facts as follows: Some five, matured young ladies have become very active workers for souls. They meet for prayer and Bible study. They are planning a tract campaign, and are working for souls in the churches and missions. They have refused the hand in marriage from unsaved friends, and turned down diamond rings, a purple robe, and other things offered in compromise by unsaved friends.

I thank God for such a thorough work. Rev. J. H. Smith will come here shortly after I close, and give them a six days' convention. I have held some fine meetings in Nebraska, Kansas, Oregon, etc. I could stay west for seven or eight more meetings, but feel led to return east to my family for the holidays. God has helped us in some hard battles, and has given us some blessed victories on this trip. We are open for calls from January 1, 1928, all the year for churches or camps. Any one interested write us. Yours in perfect love and for souls.

Upon receiving Bishop Candler's "The Christ and the Creed," I went right to reading it. It is the best short doctrinal treatise I have found, and will form a basis for a series of doctrinal sermons. Price, $1.25. Pentecostal Publishing Company.

FALLEN ASLEEP

IN MEMORY OF LITTLE ERNEST MALCOLM SHATTLES

Who died Monday, Oct. 10, 1927, age 4 years, 7 months and 2 days.

Composed by his Mother.

Our precious little darling has gone up above,
To the land all glorious in sunshine and love;

But oh how we miss the little voice so sweet
For he has, in Jesus, fallen sweetly asleep.

Oh how it grieves us to see the empty chair
With no little finger-prints here nor there;

Oh, how we miss the little cherub, so sweet
And the pitter-patter-pat of busy little feet.

His frail little life was so sweet and tender
Many fond memories we'll cherish and remember;
His shining little face shines out so bright,
From far above the sky, both day and night.

With angels now he's singing all the time
Sweet heavenly music and songs sublime;
Beckoning us bereaved ones to come on high
To God's great mansion, far above the sky.

But sometimes I find myself chasing around Wondering where Little Boy may be found;
When it sweeps o'er me in a sickening pain,
I'll ne'er see my Little Boy on earth again.

For our precious Darling has now gone away
To live with the angels, both night and day;
Yet, still I hear his little voice so plain;
And feel the clasp of his little arms again.

I still feel the kiss of his tender caress
That I'm sure all the heavenly hosts did bless;
Blessed Sweet Memories—to forget, I ne'er will Although God sweetly comforts and whispers, 'Be still.'

For we will meet our Darling again some day
If only we hold out faithfully and pray;
We will see our Precious on the other shore
Where sorrow and weeping and pain are no more.

For now Heaven is sweeter since he is there
In the arms of Jesus—our Lamb so fair;
'Tis a thought that soothes our hearts so sore,
'Tis a tie that binds us to Heaven evermore.

His mother,
Mrs. Mattie Maddocks Shattles.

McKINNEY.

W. R. McKinney departed this life August 23, 1927. He was born May 4, 1854. He resided at Pierce, Ky., where he had spent the most of his life. He leaves his devoted wife, one son, and host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. His wife, son and friends did all they could until the end came. He professed faith in Christ early in life and united with the United Baptist Church at Tramel Creek. Later in life he joined the Baptist Church at Little Barren, where he remained a faithful and devoted member until death. He was always ready to help in any good cause. He was a good neighbor. He delighted to talk of God's word and believed the promises of God. His funeral was conducted at the family burying ground by his pastor, Rev. A. A. Banta, after which his remains were laid to rest to await the Resurrection morn.

His friend and neighbor,
C. B. Carter.

THE JOURNEY.

By the shaded spring at noonday
We may linger and find rest,
Sipping from its bubbling fountain
As we revel, and are blest.

For we cannot long continue—
We are transients here today,
But with progress are rejoicing
Over victory on the way.

Well we know the path is rugged,
But it leadeth to the goal,
Where our joy shall be made perfect—
In the Homeland of the soul.

GREENSBORO, N. C.

Just closed a four-weeks' revival in the M. E. Church, ten miles South of here. The Holy Ghost was present at every service from first to last. The house was filled each night; I never saw greater conviction on a meeting in my life. There were about fifty souls definitely blessed, and a number of bootleggers gloriously converted; praise the Lord! We organized a gospel team of about forty members, which meets at private homes every Thursday night, which are doing good work. The people tell us it was the best revival meeting in this country for twenty-five years. Amen!

I am now in a revival campaign in Greensboro, at the Nazarene Tabernacle; the battle is hot but conviction is on the people, the devil is stirred, and the Holy Ghost is blessing the truth. Two souls at the altar last night and prayed through to victory. This is a hard fight but our God is able, and we are looking to him to give a great victory. Will spend part of this winter in evangelistic work in the Southern States. These are among my best days in the ministry, both soul and body. I love the fight. Remember me when you pray.

HILL STREET CHURCH SECURES NEW LOCATION.

On December 2, 1927, the called Quarterly Conference of the Hill Street M. E. Church, South, took action on the purchase of a splendid piece of property on Sixth Street between Hill Street and Central Park. This property had a nine-room residence on it, sitting far enough back on the lot to build a splendid church auditorium on the front, which will then be a well-equipped church with eight splendid Sunday school rooms. They also took action in naming the new church Calvary Methodist Church, South, of Louisville, Ky. This is a splendid residential community near beautiful Central Park, with a bright outlook for a future church. The same Quarterly Conference ordered the old property of the former church site and parsonage to be sold and the money used in the new enterprise. Since fire destroyed the Hill Street Methodist Church the Bethlehem Evangelical Church, Sixth and Hill, invited the Hill Street congregation to hold all their services in their church, beginning Dec. 11, with Sunday school at 1 P. M., preaching at 2 P. M., Junior and Senior Epworth Leagues 6:30 P. M., preaching at 7:30 P. M., prayer meeting 7:30 P. M., Wednesday. Rev. B. F. Atkinson was sent to this church as pastor at the recent annual conference.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

(As there will be no paper next week, we are giving two Sunday school lessons).

Lesson 1.—January 1, 1928.

Subject.—John the Baptist and Jesus. Mark 1:1-13.

Golden Text.—He must increase, but I must decrease. John 3:30.

Time.—About the end of A. D. 26. Place.—Near the Jordan River.

Introduction.—We do not know a great deal about Mark, or John Mark, as he is sometimes called. Jerusalem must have been his birthplace, and his home in later years. He was a nephew of Barnabas. Readers will remember that he went with Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary journey, but left them during the early part of their labors. Paul lost confidence in him, but Barnabas took him on a second missionary journey wherein he must have proved faithful, for Paul afterwards received him as brother beloved, and trusted him greatly. The Gospel he has left us is so much like Simon Peter, that some have called it the "Gospel according to St. Peter." Evidently the two men must have associated together no little.

We have four Gospels, all telling us about Jesus Christ—what he said and what he did; but no one of them tells the entire story of him. However, if we take all that each one has said of him, and put it in its proper place, we have the most beautiful mosaic that men have ever seen. Well might the French infidel Renan declare him to be the only perfect character that has ever appeared among men. Matthew and Luke tell us of the birth of Jesus. They both make plain that he was born of the virgin Mary. Matthew writes for Jews, and portrays him as their king. Luke portrays him as the God-man. He seems to write more particularly for Gentiles. John is sublime. The Christ concerning whom he writes is the eternal Logos, the only begotten Son of the Father. He calls him the "only begotten God." Mark says nothing about his birth, but deals with his public ministry. He was charmed by the miracles of our Lord. It is well we have these four accounts of our Savior—all so much alike, and yet all so utterly different. While the Holy Spirit helped them all to tell the simple truth, he left each one free to tell the beautiful story in his own style and in his own words. They do not contradict, but supplement each other.

The coming of John the Baptist as the forerunner of Jesus Christ is clearly foretold in the Old Testament. Isaiah (40:3) says: "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Malachi (3:1) says: "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me." In another place he is spoken of as coming as the antitype of Elijah. All these prophecies are fully indorsed by both John and Jesus in the New Testament. John the Baptist and Jesus were second cousins on their mother's side, John being about six months the older. His father was a regularly ordained priest, "of the course of Abia," who officiated in the temple as often as his turn came to do so. His wife, also, was of the "daughters of Aaron." They were devout people who walked in all the ordinances of God blameless. By a special intervention of God John was born to them in their old age. His birth was miraculous; and it is said of him by the angel who announced his coming, that he would be "filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb."

John's ministry was limited to about six months, at the end of which time king Herod had him beheaded because he preached too straight for big sinners. The most important act in all his ministry, the central purpose of his official life, was the baptism of Jesus, which was followed by the anointing with the Holy Ghost, whereby our Lord was initiated into his everlasting High Priesthood which was after the order of Melchizedek. Jesus came to fulfill the last jot and tittle of the ceremonial law, and so had to pass through this initial ceremony in order to begin his ministry of salvation for men. Before that hour he was Jesus; but after that hour he was, through the anointing with the Holy Spirit, Christ Jesus, or the anointed Savior. He was not baptized with the Holy Ghost. That is for us. He was anointed with the Holy Ghost. Be careful in the use of these words, lest you become blasphemous in accusing our Lord of being carnal.

I would that I had space to deal somewhat at length with the dual nature and the single personality of our Lord; but I am too limited here for such extensive work. To lose sight of his essential humanity pushes him so far away from us that we lose sight of his sympathy. To lose sight of his Deity robs him of his saving power and leaves us forever in sin. But when we find the Divine Nature and the human nature forever locked in glorious embrace by the Divine-human personality, the chasm blasted out by sin is everlastingly bridged, so that by faith we can find the way back into the very heart of the eternal Father. Without the Incarnation God could suffer for us: with the Incarnation, God can suffer with us. Without the Incarnation, we could have no feeling for God; with the Incarnation, we can enter into the fellowship of all his heartaches for our lost race. Most of us are only beginning to learn what Christ Jesus means to us and to the world of lost men. "In him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily, and ye are complete in him."

Comments on the Lesson.

John makes no reference to our Lord's virgin birth, but is careful to call him "The Son of God." He begins with the preaching of Jesus, but takes time to mention the coming and the baptism of John the Baptist. He tells of his preaching, and of his baptizing the Jewish multitudes "for the remission of sins." He tells, also, that John baptized Jesus; but he is far from being explicit as to the how of it. Matthew does not even mention that Jesus went down into the water; and his Greek is very clear that he did not come up out of the water, but from it. Mark leaves us in doubt. His Greek may just as well be translated at the Jordan as in the Jordan, from the water or out of the water, just as you please. Wherefore, since this is about all the Bible has to say about our Lord's baptism, it may be well for us to attend to important matters, and quit fussing about trivial things. That our blessed High Priest entered his sacred office through baptism and the anointing with the Holy Ghost is certain. Thank God, the foundation is so sure that we need not to fret about the amount of water.

John Mark was concerned about the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the word Gospel meaning the good news of salvation through the shed blood of the only begotten Son of the Father. John says that the prophets wrote about this thing. He quotes Isaiah, describes John the Baptist dressed in his robe of camel's hair with the leathern girdle about his waist, and his ration of locusts and wild honey. When God needs real men he has to rear them amid the raw elements of nature. Too much coddling destroys the fiber of manhood. They must have sunshine and fresh air. One cannot rear giants on strained soup and denatured bread in hot houses. It is better to eat locusts and honey, and meet the devil in single combat. For the most part, God has brought up his great ones on coarse foods and rough weather. They come forth from swinging shovels and pitchforks, grubbing hoes and sledgehammers—and many of them, like Elisha, have walked out from between the plow-handles. So do not worry about John's roughness. He was God's man, prepared for his God-appointed job in life.

One is struck with the humility of John as it comes out in our Golden Text and in the seventh verse of our lesson. Of course, any self-assertion would have ruined his ministry forever, but his humility is almost unhuman: "There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose." We cannot improve on that by comment.

The baptism with the Holy Ghost, spoken of in the 8th verse, is something that most modern Christians seem either unable, or unwilling, to understand. Jesus makes it plain in John 14:17 that this baptism with the Holy Spirit is for converted people, and for no one else. According to his teaching it is impossible for any one to receive the baptism with the Spirit at the moment of his regeneration. This is Jesus Christ's coronation gift to his Church, and not to the world. This is the Church's source of power. If she would receive it, she could turn the world upside down. If she will not receive it, she must forever fail. God has no other plan; at least, there is no other plan revealed in his Word. See John 16:7-11.

The last three verses of the lesson are taken up with the baptism and the anointing of our Lord, of which we wrote at some length in our introductory remarks. The last verse is filled with glorious truth. Here we have the doctrine of the Trinity. The Father baptizes the Son with the Spirit. Both Spirit and Son must be co-eternal and co-equal with the Father, or we cannot have a loving Father in the heavens. How blessed to hear the Father bear witness to his Son: "Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

Lesson II.—January 8, 1928.

Subject.—Jesus and the Sick.—Mark 1:21-34.

Golden Text.—He hath done all things well; he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.—Mark 7:37.

Time.—Spring of A. D. 28.

Places.—Regions and towns of Galilee, especially Capernaum.

Introduction.—As Mark says but little concerning the first year of our Lord's ministry, it may be well for us to give just sufficient to keep up the connection. Immediately following our last lesson Mark says that the Holy Spirit thrust Jesus into the desert to be tempted of the devil. Satan did not entrust this work to a demon, but undertook it himself, it being too important but for the archfiend. The temptation came, as far as we can discover, at the end of the Lord's forty days of fasting. I suppose that the devil concluded that he would be weak, and therefore easily overthrown at such a time; but he was completely foiled, the Master being easily more than a match for all his onslaughts.

We have some account of the work of our Lord during the first year of his ministry, not given by Mark, but by the other evangelists. His first miracle was wrought in Cana of Galilee where he turned the water into wine at the wedding feast. Thence he went to Jerusalem where he healed some sick people, cleansed the temple for the first time, and had his memorable conversation with Nicodemus concerning the new birth. Next we find him in Samaria on his way to Galilee. He was tired, and "sat thus" at Jacob's well while he preached to the sinful woman who went into the city of Samaria and called her people to hear him. Her strange question was: "Is not this the Christ?" Going forward, he came to Nazareth, his own city. Entering into the synagogue on the Sabbath day, the ruler of the synagogue invited him to address the people; but he so preached that they cast him out, and tried to kill him. As the first year was closing the multitudes who had heard of him were crowding him, both to hear his gracious words and to be healed of their divers diseases.

The sympathy of Jesus with suffering humanity is beautiful. I say "is," because he is "the same yesterday, and today, and forever." No sick one ever approached him with sufficient faith who was not healed of whatever disease he had. Helpless, demonized lunatics, who did not have sufficient sense to ask for his help, were made whole instantly. While healing is not in the Atonement in the same sense that salvation is in it, we do know that a certain ministry of healing was committed to the early disciples, and we are persuaded would be entrusted to us if we had faith to claim it. "Howbeit, this kind goeth not out, but by prayer and fasting." Perhaps most of us would be ruined by such a gift, seeing we are prone to be puffed up and, withal, boastful of our deeds. God cannot trust us with many gifts of the Spirit. If you possess such a gift, use it for the glory of God, and boast not of yourself.

Mark deals very largely with the miracles of our Lord. Not for one moment did he question the sincerity of Jesus or the truth of his wonderful works. What he saw and heard attested the Deity of his Master, so that there were no disputings in his heart. It is also interesting in this connection to note the confidence with which Jesus referred to Old Testament miracles. It was no stretch of faith for him to believe that the Jews were miraculously led out of Egypt under Moses, nor that Jehovah fed them with manna in the wilderness. To him it was a fact, not a story, that Elijah the prophet raised the widow's son from the dead, and restored him to his mother. He even confirmed that wonderful statement concerning Jonah and the great fish that Jehovah prepared to swallow him. But how can we expect of him anything else, when he himself is Jehovah, and all those miracles had been done through his own almighty power?

Comments on the Lesson.

21. They went into Capernaum.—Who were they? Jesus and his disciples. In some sense, Capernaum became his adopted city after he was cast out of Nazareth, his home city. Straightway means immediately, at once. Most of the Jewish towns and cities had synagogues where the people assembled on the Sabbath day for worship. And as persons of importance were usually invited to speak to the congregations thus brought together, Jesus was accustomed to make use of these opportunities to preach the gospel of the kingdom.

22. They were astonished at his doctrine.—They had good reason for this. The scribes piddled out threadbare platitudes, and told the hungry multitudes what had been said by the great rabbis; but Jesus spoke out of his own heart as one having authority.

23. A man with an unclean spirit.—He was demon-possessed. There is no scariness of such people today, not even in America. He cried out.—The evil spirit forced the man to say what he himself wanted to say. Men who curse and swear are usually under the dominion of demons.

24. Let us alone.—There must have been more than one; for he speaks in the plural. I know thee....the Holy One of God.—The demons were desperately afraid of Jesus; for they knew him, and knew that when he so ordained the day of their final doom would come. Strange that demons and the devil knew Jesus, but men failed to recognize him.

25. Hold thy peace.—Jesus would not so much as permit a demon to testify to his Deity. He will have no testimony from traitors, be they men or devils. Come out of him.—And he came out. Such words of authority move all creatures in all worlds.

26. When the unclean spirit had torn him.—I am at a loss as to the meaning of torn, but suppose that the demon subjected his victim to some severe bodily torture, maybe a spasm. The loud crying was from the man's lips; but it was forced from him by the demon, so that it was really the demon's utterance.

27. They were all amazed.—The multitude of Jews in the synagogue. For one to drive out unclean spirits with mere words was new to them. They saw many suffering lunatics, but none of their great teachers had any authority or power to help them. The spirits were the masters.

29. Forthwith.—Immediately. His fame was being scattered abroad so fast that he and his disciples rushed at once into the "house of Simon (Peter) and Andrew, to avoid the crush of the multitude that was crowding after them. One may become too popular to accomplish the work of life.

30. Simons wife's mother lay sick of a fever.—Malarial fever was no doubt common in that land, owing to the swamps that bred mosquitoes. Nor had the Jews learned of the danger of their bites. As Palestine comes back into civilization, science will exterminate these pests and render the land healthy. We are moving ahead in some things.

31. Jesus took her by the hand and lifted her up.—We stand in awe in the presence of such a physician. He made no effort to impress people with his greatness, but simply lived out his Deity before their faces. His very touch healed the sick woman immediately. Some of us have been thrilled by that same divine touch.

32. When the sun was set.—As the Jewish Sabbath closed at sunset, they brought their sick ones to Jesus at that late hour, because they were not allowed to carry so much as a bed on that sacred day. Neither the Bible nor Jesus commanded such a thing; but the prohibition came from the elders of the people. It was their tradition that set at naught the Word of God.

33. All the city was gathered together.—This is possibly what is called a Hebraism; for it is hardly possible that every citizen in the town was at Simon Peter's door. It is a vast majority put for the whole.

34. He healed many.—No question but all were healed who had sufficient faith to be healed. His great, sympathetic heart would not have suffered a sick one to depart without his blessing.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. L. E. Williams: "Our revival with Rev. John Abernathy, of Galatia, Ill., was truly a time of refreshing from the Lord. The church was aroused and swung into line, while others sought the Lord at the altar. A number of young people prayed through to victory, which encouraged the pastor and members. I have some open dates through the winter. May reach me at Wilmore, Ky."

H. P. Thomas: "Closed a meeting at Emporium, Pa., in which some thirty were blessed. We met souls there whom we expect to meet on the sands of light."

F. M. C. Eads: "We recently closed a good meeting on the Greensboro, Fla., charge, resulting in forty-two additions to the church on profession of faith. Rev. R. J. Haskew did the preaching. He is a safe man in the pulpit and preaches a full gospel; he is a man who draws and holds the congregations."

Rev. Thomas B. Johnson desires to assist in revival meetings anywhere the people need him; or he is willing to serve as pastor. His address is 2341 N. Garnet St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Frank Hopkins: "I am in a meeting at Pineville, Mo. I have an open date after the holidays. Write or wire me 417 N. Stewart St., Norman, Okla."

A. R. Ronshausen: "God is signally manifesting himself at our Mission in Sioux City, Ia. Many are wrestling with God for a city-wide revival, and we are asking the readers of The Herald to join with us in prayer for a visitation of the Holy Ghost in Sioux City."

THE NEW BIBLICAL GUIDE By Prof. John Urquhart

At last Higher Criticism has met its Waterloo! In these eight big volumes every point of criticism advanced against the Bible under the guise of Science is met fairly and squarely, and scientifically refuted.

Has your belief in Genesis or the Miracles of the Old Testament which many critics describe as "fold-lore" ever been assailed? Here you will find your faith corroborated. They are given scientific standing through archaeological research and other indisputable evidence. From cover to cover the entire contents of the "Book of Books" is scientifically defended as the infallibly inspired word of God—a revelation given directly to its inspired writers.

DO YOU KNOW—

—how people lived before the flood?
—about the Documents written at the time of Abraham?
—that the Egyptian Alphabet was a scientific mode of writing?
—why the Barbers of Egypt were very busy men?
—how the Gold Mines of Egypt were worked?
—that the Ancients burned designs on leather?
—about the Birthday Customs of the Pharaohs?
—about the Royal School at Babylon?
—about the wonders of the Babylonian Libraries?
—how many different species of whales could swallow Jonah?
All these questions and hundreds of others are answered in accordance with the findings of Scientific Research which verify Bible Records.

W. E. Hudnall: "I am engaged in a meeting at Wichita Falls, Tex., and God is pouring out his Spirit; men and women, boys and girls, are praying through at the altar. Rev. Jesse Decamp is singing for me and is doing splendid work. We are working together and will be glad to hear from any one desiring our assistance. Conway, Ark., will reach us."

Rev. J. A. Romine: "We had a great conference at Tusculumbia, Ala. I was returned to New Bethel charge, and in addition to preaching, am principal of the Junior High School. We are believing for a good year. Our precious boy who has been teaching, came home very sick, and we request The Herald readers to pray that he may be restored to health and called into God's service. Pray earnestly for him."

Rev. W. A. Vandersall, Findlay, Ohio, is available for meetings. He recently closed a good meeting at Yates Center, Kan., and is now touring Nebraska and South Dakota. Those desiring his services may address him at his home, Shickley, Neb.

P. D. Woodall: "Rev. W. R. Quinton and wife of Chipley, Fla., have been with me in a ten-days' meeting in one of my country churches. Brother Quinton is a powerful preacher of the gospel, doing evangelistic work. His denunciation of sin is terrific. His preaching so far as vision is concerned reminds me of one of the prophets of the Old Testament. He has the fervor and zeal of an apostle. He impresses one with his deep piety and consecration. Every community needs the truth such as he preaches. While there was not a large number of accessions to the church, the church life was quickened with a good many dead church members re-consecrating themselves. His singing together with his good wife is beautiful. They both make a strong team. If any preacher wants an evangelist who will do stirring preaching such as the world needs today he will do well to get Rev. W. R. Quinton. His address is Chipley, Florida."

A SUCCESSFUL EVANGELIST.

Dr. J. W. Mahood, a most successful evangelist, and an author of note, desires to hold some meetings in the South. The following letter from a pastor whom he assisted gives an idea of the kind of work he does. His home address is Pacific Palisades, Cal.

B. H. Hart: "Dr. J. W. Mahood has just closed a four-weeks' evangelistic campaign in the Pine Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Williamsport, Pa. In these busy days, when the overworked pastor feels the need of competent help for his special services, it becomes a pleasure to recommend a man of the type of Dr. Mahood. In doing so I know I am rendering a service to the pastor and the Kingdom, rather than to Dr. Mahood, personally. If you are looking for a helper of the type of the average evangelist, Dr. Mahood will not do. If it is a man with theological notions, or with a few pet hobbies to be exploited—a fanatic—a rantor or raver—one who sees in every public service an opportunity to berate the preacher and the church, don't send for Mahood. He won't do. But if it is a true helper you are looking for, I unhesitatingly say that a more efficient one cannot be found. He never scolds or rants. Sound on all the great fundamentals of the Scriptures, he never makes a hobby either. Abuse is foreign to his nature. He exalts the church and magnifies the office of the ministry. He makes it easier for the pastor—never harder. Dr. Mahood is a powerful preacher—not that he can use a lot of beautiful meaningless phrases—but in that he knows God's word and with a pleasing persuasive personality gets men to believe the great truths therein set forth. He is never offensive in dealing with sin, nevertheless he fearlessly wields a polished blade. He leaves no sores to be healed after he is gone. Dr. Mahood is greatly blessed in the assistance given him by his daughter, Miss Etta Mahood. Her afternoon talks to the women on Health Culture and her Bible class work were thoroughly enjoyable and helpful. Her sensible and tactful work in the congregation when an appeal is made to the unsaved commends itself to the thoughtful pastor. It is a genuine pleasure to recommend such efficient servants of the Church."

DR. RIDOUT ON DRESS QUESTION.

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. M. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

Life Annuity Bonds Of Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky.

There are many Christians who have something laid by which they would like to have used in the work of training a thoroughly consecrated and sanctified ministry at Asbury College at their death. However, they need the income of it while they live, and so feel that the best they can do is to leave it to us in their wills. Too often, unfortunately, these wills are successfully contested and the wishes of the deceased are thwarted.

This difficulty is overcome in an Annuity Contract, for the donor is his own executor. Our Annuity Bonds are secured by the entire assets of Asbury College. The investment is SAFE, the returns are CERTAIN.

Scores of our friends have already invested their funds with us in this manner, and during the more than fifteen years that Asbury College has been issuing LIFE ANNUITY CONTRACTS it has never defaulted on an annuity payment; our friends, moreover, have given us assurance that they have never had occasion to regret their investment in this form of gift to Asbury College.

LIFE ANNUITY BONDS can be written for amounts of $100 and over. Simply write us your age and the amount you desire to invest on Annuity Contract, and we will forward to you at once the Annuity Bond made out to you for your inspection and approval, or you may send us your check with your application, and the bond will be dated back to the day you wrote the check, from which date the annuity payments will be calculated.

Doran's Minister's Manual for 1928

BY REV. G. B. F. HALLOCK, D.D.
The third annual edition of a book which has proven indispensable to thousands of ministers in the preparation and delivery of sermons. Its purpose is to give perspective to the whole year's program. It begins with the first Sunday in January, and includes sermon outlines, suggested prayers, illustrations, helps for the Sunday School lesson, plans for the Wednesday evening service, and innumerable seeds for thought and discussion upon themes related to parish life. The acclaim with which it has been met, both in the press and in the ministry, has now established it beyond question in the publishing field.

"Science and Religion, or Evolution Unmasked," by Rev. George A. Cooke, is an able essay that goes to the heart of the subject. Every student of religion in its relation to Science should read this little book. That Mr. Cooke is a scientist as well as a theologian no one will dispute, who reads the book with care. He demonstrates beyond question the atheistic philosophy that underlies the doctrine of biological evolution. He also proves the fraudulent character of this dangerous but widespread heresy. The true Christian will read what he has to say with pleasure and profit.

THE SOUL'S SOLILOQUY.

Will O. Scott.

What will it profit thee, O my soul,
To gain the whole world from pole to pole.

With all of its riches vast;
The priceless treasures of Mother Earth,
The boast of wealth and the pride of birth,

Tell me, how much will it all be worth
If thou wilt be lost at last?

Is it worth while, O my Soul, to sell
Thy birthright for pottage with sav'ry smell,

And blessings beyond recall;
To revel in pleasures with loud acclaim,

To gamble with Satan a losing game,
And see just over against thy name
The handwriting on the wall?

What wilt thou give, O my Soul, in exchange

For all that reach and immortal range
Of talents so rich and grand—
Those marvelous, matchless powers of thine,

God's richest redemptive gifts divine,
That will the noon-day sun outshine
In Heaven's summer-land?

A TIMELY EXHORTATION.

May I attempt to make clear through your paper the real issue that exists regarding the Kentucky Race Track Gambling, or so called Pari-Mutuel law? There seems to be a lack of clear understanding of this issue. In fact, the Race Track Gambling people are eagerly seeking to have the voters of Kentucky believe that the Kentucky Anti-Race-Track Gambling Commission is trying to destroy horse racing as a sport, and they say the "Kentucky Derby will be destroyed," etc.

If the people of Kentucky are made to understand the real issue, they certainly will not allow the present law to stand on the Statute books of Kentucky. Kentucky has a most excellent gambling law. (Ky. Statute, 1960). It recounts the great evil of gambling, forbids it, and declares "Anathema" against persons who gamble, consigns them to the penitentiary, and takes from them their right to vote or hold public office. At the end of this excellent law are about two lines, added by the Legislature of 1886, after a stiff fight about it, and with a majority of only two votes. Those two lines, added at the demand of the Race Track gamblers, say, "Nor shall its provisions apply to persons who sell combinations, or French pools, on any regular race track during the races thereon" (Ky. Statutes. Sec. 1961).

In other words, even though gambling is condemned as evil, and a gambler must go to the penitentiary, and have his or her right to vote taken from them, even though a person who gambles has "anathema" (which is probably the highest form of denunciation) declared against him, these two lines, added by the Race Track Gambling crowd, permit in Kentucky, by the use of the Pari-Mutuel machine, upon our race tracks, gambling upon horse races. And, furthermore, to permit this unholy thing, this glaring inconsistency in a good law, the Kentucky Legislature, has created a Racing Commission appointed by the Governor to fix the dates, protect the racing, etc.

Surely one of two procedures should

THE Scripture Text Calendar

FOR 1928.

Better -- Finer -- More Complete than Ever Before!

THE 1928 Scripture Text Calendars are ready. Thousands of Churches and Agents will this year want more than ever before. In addition to the 13 beautiful Sacred Pictures, the daily Scripture Verse, the Sunday School Lesson, and other regular features, are added this year four new features listed below. The 1928 Calendars Selling Scripture Text Calendars is a dignified way of raising money. Pastors of leading Churches the country over endorse and recommend our many sales plans. For 15 years Churches and Agents the country over have raised money following our successful selling plans—making from $25 to $500.

FOUR NEW EXCLUSIVE FEATURES

1. How to read the Bible through in a year with an assignment for each day's reading.
2. Three Months Calendar on each page. Added to our monthly calendar with the big figures and Scripture Text for each day are two small monthly calendars for the month preceding and following the current month.
3. A full description of each beautiful picture—of great value to young and old.
4. The phases of the moon are shown on the day they occur.

Spreading God's Word

By placing the 1928 Scripture Text Calendar in every home in the community, you are performing a truly great work—paying you big dividends both morally and financially.

We Show You How to Sell

Our many successful selling plans and campaigns that have been used so successfully for years will help you sell to practically every home in your community. Plans for Sunday School classes, Ladies' Aid, Young People's Society, etc.

13 Famous Paintings

The 13 famous Sacred Paintings, beautifully reproduced in many colors, alone are worth many times the low cost of the calendar. They represent what is best and most refined in Sacred Art.

Wonderful Values

Were it not for the fact that Scripture Text Calendars are produced in million lots, they would have to sell at much higher prices. Think of getting so much for only 30 cents—you can readily see why everybody is so well pleased.

1928 Calendars Ready— Place Your Order Now

Don't wait! Place your order for a full supply. Our experience has been that the greater portion of Calendars are sold in advance of the New Year. Hundreds of Churches and Agents have found that the demand grows greater from year to year, and as our supply is limited, we urge you to estimate how many you can sell and rush your order.

Special Prices

See how you can profit by placing the Gospel in every home in your community.

Quantity.	Cost	Sell for	Profit
100 Calendars	$17.00	$30.00	$13.00
200 Calendars	32.00	60.00	28.00
250 Calendars	40.00	75.00	35.00

be insisted upon from our Kentucky Legislators:

1. Either the whole gambling law should be removed from our Statute books, or,

2. We should wipe out the two lines, added by the Race Track gamblers in 1886, which gives them the privilege of gambling—when it is condemned in all other cases.

How can we expect our children to grow up with respect and reverence for our laws, if we will allow gamblers to make our laws both ridiculous and inconsistent? If we must have Race Track gambling in Kentucky, let us have it in spite of the law but not by consent of the law—when gambling is condemned by that law.

They say if we do not have Race

Track gambling by the Pari-Mutuel system, then we will have gambling by handbooks. Everybody that knows anything about it, knows that we have just as much handbook gambling now as before. At any rate, Kentucky cannot legalize crime and maintain its honor, and the law says gambling is a crime.

Yours for a better Kentucky.
