This is a prayerless age, and I am so sorry preachers have not always lingered long and often in fasting and earnest prayer over the character and nature of the message. Pray until God plainly points out the very message for that hour. He knows the needs. I do not. I am human; he is divine, hence he must direct. I must say after years in the evangelistic field, he has never failed once. The other day a preacher said, "I can preach with ten minute's notice." I said, "You may preach, but what about the anointing? What about the fruits?" I tell you, we preachers must get back to our knees, back to fasting, back to God's leadership. I enjoy counsel. I like to conference with my brethren, but then go to my knees and wrestle with God in earnest prayer. God hears and answers today as in Daniel's time. Has the glorious gospel lost any of its saving power? Has it lost its teeth? Has it lost its charm? The same power that was manifested at Pentecost will come upon us when conditions are met. That most awful conviction will fall upon sinners, until they will run to an altar and cry out, "What must I do to be saved?" You don't have to go out and drag them to an altar when there has been faithful preparations. A prayerless preacher and church always will have fruitless services. Pay the real earnest price and watch the altars fill.

God is the same. He has not lost any of his power. He is the very same God and has the very same power which tumbled Paul. The trouble is on our side and to cover our failures to fast, pray, lose sleep, weeping, wrestling over lost souls. We say "things have changed." "You can't have real, old-fashioned revivals today. It is impossible." Preachers said at Lake Arthur camp, "My, the power!" Some fasted three days, some prayed three nights. We can't fail when we get his directions. Last winter a faithful pastor came across the State and had a long, honest heart chat with us and said, "What about my city church?" We went and my, what a real soul-saving revival! We are now slating for fall and winter.

God has always kept us filled full. Our hands find plenty to do. If you need us, write us.

Prof. Jim Reid, Ft. Worth, Texas, was the song leader. This was his fourth year and called back next year with this scribe. Reid is in a class by himself. Wideawake, has a catchy program for the young. They follow his sane, safe leadership in droves. He is a lovely character, tender, patient, kind, running over with sympathy. The young folks love and honor him. He is one among the very best I have had with the young and the young men follow him by the dozen. I like his type of work.

President Howell is on the job. He has a vision and is working hard and putting his money into this great camp. He has greater plans for this tremendous camp. The camp is thirty-two years old, but is growing fast. It has beautiful grounds, great shade trees, with that charming long flowing moss. The grand old Pentecostal Herald has many warm-hearted friends. Prof Reid looked well after its interests.

Wilmore Camp was delighted to have our beloved Dr. Henry Clay Morrison with us for two days. He is coming back to health. He can electrify camp meetings. He is tender, full of the Spirit. Praise God for giving this saint back his health.

Let us slate you for a real old-fashion, soul-saving revival right away. Write us Wilmore, Ky. If you want to know more about us, write our good friend Dr. Morrison. Never felt better. God is with us.

CROOKSVILLE, OHIO.

July 28, we closed a very gracious revival meeting at Oakfield, O., in one of the League's tents with Rev. Fred Alexander as evangelist and Rev. Fred Shiltz as song leader. I am safe in saying that from the first sermon on Thursday night, until the closing sermon Sunday evening, the Holy Ghost was present. The churches were greatly benefited. Bro. Alexander is a man after God's own heart, a searching preacher. His messages were owned of God, for he spent much time in prayer alone with God. We feel God sent him to us for this very meeting. I did not count heads, but the last week many were at the altars seeking forgiveness of sins, reclamation and sanctification.

The closing day was a great day in Zion. Rev. Fred Shiltz brought the message at 10:30 A. M. We were led close to God by this message which seemed to pave the way for the other two services. At 2:30 we reassembled in the tent after a rousing song service led by Rev. Shiltz. The pastor called Sam Pettit, an Asbury boy of last year, to lead in prayer; then the pastor spoke of God's leading in behalf of Miss Glenna Sheline whom the patrons of the tent meeting are going to support in Asbury next year.

Brother Alexander brought a very heart-searching missionary message the result of which some thirty or more souls bowed at the altar of prayer in reclamation, conversion, reclamation, and a number sanctified. At the evening service seven or eight hundred people came to hear the closing message; several were at the altar and all but one prayed through to victory. We feel this was the best meeting of our three years' experience with tent meetings on this work. Praise God for the work of the Methodist Evangelical League and Asbury College and Revs. Alexander and Shiltz.

A fine offering was given the League for its work and the upkeep of the tents. Anyone wishing help in revival work in camp or church I can heartily recommend Rev. Fred Alexander as a safe and sane preacher, as fine a young man as Asbury ever turned out.

CAMP MEETING AT MISENHEIMER, N. C.

This is the birth-place of Rev. Robert L. Selle; where he was converted fifty years ago this August, and where he began his life's ministry. He has repeatedly held revivals in the old camp ground, and was engaged to hold one this season, but his failing health prevented his making the trip this year from his home in Rogers, Arkansas.

His son, Rev. Robert Mallalieu Selle, pastor of Riverside Park Methodist Episcopal Church, Indianapolis, Ind., was chosen to take his father's place. The pastor of the local Methodist Episcopal Church at Misenheimer, Rev. Lowell C. Stevens, under date of August 5th, makes the following report to Brother Selle of the meeting, which he forwards to The Herald:

"For nine days and nights, July 26th to August 4th, the town of Misenheimer in Stanley county, has been at the crest of a mighty wave of old-time revival fire. The meetings in the large tent have come to a close, but it does not take a prophet to see that the revival is not ended. Various observers have in substance classified the meeting as 'a tremendous union effort to make Christ real in the hearts of a great number of people throughout this strategic center of Protestantism in the Piedmont section of the beautiful Southland.' From first to last it was a veritable storm center of earnest and sane gospel preaching, praying, shouting, singing and creative evangelism. The demonstrations of the Spirit's power were many and varied, yet there was little extravagance. What beautiful harmony and brotherly love prevailed! Many of the older people said that it reminded them of the old brush arbor meetings held forty years ago. Family religion was stressed, also there was a very definite emphasis on entire sanctification, and clean, wholesome living.

"There was no selfish sectarianism. Members and pastors of the neighboring churches, Methodist Episcopal, Lutheran, Baptist, Pilgrim Holiness and M. E., South, co-operated in holding up the hands of the one who did the preaching—your beloved son. It was so easy to love that young man! Multitudes extended him the invitation to come back again next year, at the same time expressing their sincere regret that you were not able to be with us, and stating that they hope to see you again in these parts.

"The beauty of it all is that God has started such a general and powerful influence of brotherly love and genuine heart-felt religion here that it is certain to vibrate on and on, being continuously caught up by the various churches all over this section of the country and utilized in glorious, soul winning evangelism. I think they have found the proper wave length sent from the Celestial Station.

"Your brother in Christ,

"Lowell C. Stevens."

REVIVAL AT CURRY CHURCH.

Our revival at Curry closed out on Sunday night, July 21st. Our presiding elder, W. S. Maxwell, was our helper. God's power was wonderfully manifest at many services and some visible results. Especially do I mention one young man who was brightly reclaimed, saying God had called him to preach the gospel which he expected to do. The people of God were led out to a richer experience and to a greater field of usefulness under the preaching of Bro. Maxwell, who especially at the day services went deep into the Scripture and plainly brought out wonderful truths that were real soul food. Surely the word of God has never been more ably handled and thoroughly explained than did Bro. Maxwell to us at Curry. We feel very sure that no church or camp could secure better help to teach or preach the gospel at day services than Bro. Maxwell. The revival has left our church in much better working order for which we give God the praise.

Our pastor, Rev. G. W. Hoffman, is a true and faithful leader and is doing splendid work on the Benson and Curry charge.

REPORT.

The second annual camp meeting of the Upper Peninsular Holiness Association of Iron Mountain, Michigan was held in the City Park. The tabernacle and the kitchen equipment were donated by the City of Iron Mountain, and nicely managed by the President of the Local Association, Rev. Wm. Combella, pastor of the M. E. Church.

This camp meeting was under the direction of the Michigan Association for the Promotion of Holiness and managed by Rev. L. M. Blakely, pastor of the Asbury M. E. Church, Detroit, Michigan. Rev. A. L. Spann, President of the Iowa Holiness Association, was the noble assistant, of the Rev. Blakely. Mrs. L. M. Blakely was in charge of the children's work, and Mrs. G. B. Heneks was the pianist, and had the directing of the music.

The first service was conducted by the Rev. J. Dutton of Marquette, Mich., and started on time, and from the beginning to the close of the camp God was there in saving and sanctifying power. Three meetings were held daily, and the young people's meetings were held at 3 P. M. each day. At every meeting the attendance and interest were fine and through the heat of the days the Cousin Jacks were there to pray all to victory who came to the Lord. And there was work for them at all the meetings excepting a few of the morning services which were Bible Readings.

God was in the City Park of Iron Mountain and hungry hearts felt his presence, and those with needs found his promises true, that he would supply their needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus. The young people were there as many as fifty at a meeting and were faithfully dealt with by Mrs. L. M. Blakely; many of the children were saved and reclaimed.

Iron Mountain will long remember the searching sermons of Miss Spann and Rev. Blakely, their patience, faithful and thorough dealings with all who came to the altar. Conviction was deep, and in several cases the workers were called out at night to deal with people who could not find rest until they called upon the Lord, and in every case they were saved or sanctified.

The Upper Peninsular Holiness Association were happy to have such a meeting and were strengthened and encouraged to press the battle and spread scriptural holiness through that part of the state.

The election of officers of the local association was held during these meetings and the Rev. Wm. Combella was re-elected president, and the membership doubled. There were six states represented, and twelve different denominations present at the Sunday meeting. It was a great camp meeting for God and holiness.

fears there shall come glorious realities, that God shall be glorified and peace shall reign among men.

Preacher, brother, do you wish to make Christ a glorious, living Person to the people? Do you wish to cheer and stir the hearts of oppressed Christian men and women? Do you wish to awaken sinners to their danger and the importance of making haste to repent and come to Christ for salvation? Then preach on the Second Coming of Jesus. Point out what he has said on the subject, what the apostles have written of the great glory of his coming, and of what is necessary in order to behold him with joy, and your people will listen with attention; they will go home thinking of what you said; they will talk about your sermon at the dinner table. They will get down their Bibles and read a bit in the afternoon; they will tarry longer upon their knees at their bedside at night, thinking serious thoughts and offering earnest prayer.

My dear brethren of the ministry, I have preached far and wide for fifty years; it has been a passion with me, a great joy, a healthful exercise, a blessed means of grace, the highest privilege possible to man, to be the messenger of the Lord. During these long nine months of sickness I have not complained, but I long to be restored that I might again enter into the great privilege and joy of preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ to my fellowbeings. I regret that my ministry has not been of a better order and more fruitful, and I trust it will not excite the prejudice of any of you that have health and strength to go up into the sacred desk, that I should urge you to preach on these vital subjects, to put your very soul at white heat, kindled by the fires of divine love, into urgent messages of great essential gospel truth. Do not allow yourselves to go to your pulpits with emptiness or uncertainty, or regret that the time has come for you to speak to the people, but go burdened with the truth; go with a holy eagerness to pour out the pent-up message of God in your hearts to needy people. Go with a holy courage that there is an invisible Person with you who will give vitality, who will make the words you proclaim the sword of the Spirit and the mighty power of God to bring the lost to Jesus. Go into the pulpit feeling that you are God's messenger, that your office is the highest, your duties the most sacred, your services the most needed, and that the gospel which you proclaim cannot, and will not, return void. Oh, the high and holy honor of being a minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ! Oh, the unutterable joy of winning a lost soul to a mighty Savior, who loved sinners so well that he was willing to go upon the cross and die for them.

I am old, worn with sickness and suffering, and I will not complain whatever my gracious Lord does with me, but I am longing to get back into the pulpit and proclaim the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation. Amen!

A great work by an Asbury Professor.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Professor of Evangelism in the Theological Seminary of Asbury College, has for some months been engaged in evangelistic meetings in China. He has been receiving hearty welcome, both from the missionaries of various denominations, and the native Christians. Those who have followed his evangelistic tours as reported in the columns of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD have received much information with reference to evangelistic work in that great mission field. Dr. Ridout is accompanied by his wife; they are both doing labors abundant, and have been wonderfully used of the Lord, especially in bringing Christians into the gracious experience of perfect love.

Dr. Ridout is extending his labors into other fields. He will visit India and travel extensively there before returning to the United States. This evangelistic tour of Dr. Ridout and his wife and the marvelous success the Lord has given them, is one of the very gracious contributions Asbury College is making to true evangelism in the vast mission fields. We commend these dear people to our friends, everywhere, and ask for the earnest prayers of the Lord's people in their behalf. Faithfully,

H. C. MORRISON,
Pres. Theological Seminary, Asbury College.

Bishop Cannon under Fire.

For many years Bishop Cannon has been one of the most aggressive, tireless antagonists of the liquor traffic. He is one of those men that does not know what it is to cease incessant, aggressive work on any task in which he is engaged. We doubt if any one man had larger influence, and did more for the defeat of Al Smith in the last presidential election than Bishop Cannon. As might have been expected, this has arrayed against him the bitterest opposition of all the elements connected with the liquor traffic.

The liquor traffic rests upon two things: one is, an insatiate thirst for gold which cannot be gratified, but the more it gets the more rapacious it becomes. The other is, a thirst for strong drink which will drive men to any and every extreme for its gratification. The liquor habit, the cultivated and burning thirst for drink, is one of the most powerful, seductive and destructive appetites possible to a human being. The man who comes under this demon thirst will go to any extremes to get it. He will spend his money to the last copper. He will rob his wife of her clothing and his children of their shoes in the winter time. Driven on by this demon he becomes frantic and helpless of restraint.

The liquor traffic, the men who make and traffic in strong drink, are well acquainted with this fact and it is their business to take advantage of their fellowbeings, to entice them to the cultivation of this appetite, to lead them on so that they may become their complete masters, and take from them their money, their will power—their all, and leave their debauched bodies and ruined souls to drift into outer darkness. Enriched by these robberies they control politicians, dictate laws, and ride roughshod over everything that is good and pure and true for the wreck and ruin of humanity.

It is unthinkable that men of this kind would have anything but the bitterest hatred against a man of the character of Bishop Cannon. But they are wasting their time. He will continue to champion the cause of sobriety, righteousness and the peace and happiness of the homes of the people. He will continue to have a powerful influence for the upholding of prohibition, as we have it in our constitution, and the vigorous enforcement of the law against the liquor traffic.

One is appalled at the work of those daily papers of this country, with their wide circulation, read by millions of our people, that are completely under the influence of the liquor interests. There is no more dangerous foe to the peace, happiness and prosperity of our American people than the wet press of the nation which is using its influence to break down law, to encourage crime, and to demoralize the moral and civil life of our country. Our people, ministers and lay, of all churches ought to rally tremendously for the enforcement of law, and in opposition to all candidates for any office anywhere who are in sympathy with the liquor traffic.

H. C. MORRISON.

"ABRAHAM BELIEVED GOD."

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

ONLY three words! And it does not seem a hard thing to do—believe God! Yet is it not a fact that, with many of us, this is the weak point. To verify this fact we have only to look about us and see the poverty of soul, even among those who rank as "leading members" of the church.

To believe God is to be rich for time and eternity. God put down Abraham's faith on the account of his righteousness, and what is a greater commodity for time and eternity than rightness? To believe God is to have the weakness of humanity reinforced by the strength of Divinity. It is to lay hold upon the invisible, the intangible, the unreal, so to speak, and make them minister to our present necessities. Yes, it is to have access to all things necessary for our well being in this life and that which is to come, for hath not the Lord declared, "All things are possible to him that believeth."

From such statements from the pen of inspiration, is it any wonder that, believing God, we are rich in two worlds—not necessarily rich in this world's goods, but rich in faith, the leverage which lifts one out of the realm of things earthly into the realm of things eternal.

What did it mean for Abraham to believe God? We have only to begin with him as he was called out of his own country into a land that he knew not, and to see how he met the tests of obedience, faith and consecration, then to see the glorious closing of a life that had walked so close to God that he was called "the friend of God." Abraham gave his all and received God's all. He laid down everything he counted dear at the feet of his Lord and took away with him the divine furnishing that enabled him to walk through this vale of tears a conqueror over sin and its consequences. What a wonderful passport was that of Abraham from earth to heaven, because he believed God!

There are depths to God's storehouse of supplies that we have never dreamed of; heights of privilege to which our faith has not ascended; lengths and breadths to the wideness of his mercy that would stagger us could we but get a glimpse of them. Paul calls these limitless resources "The unsearchable riches of Christ," or as Rendell Harris has translated it, "The unexplorable wealth of Christ."

The late J. H. Jowett relates an incident of Mr. Spurgeon when he was going to preach on Joseph. He had drawn a picture of the colossal stores of corn in Egypt, every granary bursting with the abundance. There was a supply for seven years. And there, in the midst of his vivid conception, Spurgeon saw a little mouse in one corner of a granary, worrying itself to skin and bone in the fear that there wasn't enough to live on!

Dr. Jowett goes on to make the application, saying, "But I am afraid that believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, who have obtained access by faith into the granaries of grace, are often found worrying in the uncertainty as to whether the resources of grace are adequate to carry them through. 'Shall I be able to stand?' they ask themselves in fear. 'Can my sinful inclination be really conquered?' 'Shall I be perfect at last?' It is the fear of the mouse. Yes, there's corn enough in the granary! 'Where sin abounds grace doth much more abound'; and there is enough for all eternity. 'Having loved his own he loved them unto the end.' We shall never outlive a Savior's love! It is a world which will never give up its last secret; it is the 'unexplorable wealth of Christ.'"

Reader, let's resolve in our hearts that, come what may, be the clouds ever so lowering, be the hosts of Pharaoh behind and the Red Sea before us, we shall trust and not be afraid. Let us have the faith that laughs at impossibilities, and cries, It shall be done! Let us always remember what a rich heritage was Abraham's because he dared to believe God.

filled their whole horizon. He had had an influence in their lives; now he was their controlling inspiration. They had trusted him to some extent; now they had lost confidence in themselves, and they trusted him fully. They loved him before; now they had been wooed and won; their love was made perfect. He was their friend and their Savior before; but now he was their abiding Guest. 'This same Jesus,' with whom they had associated for three years, and from whom they had parted on the hill of Olivet, had returned in the person of the Comforter, to abide with them for ever.

One of Wesley's preachers gives this testimony of his experience after his own baptism with the Holy Ghost: "My soul was filled with such faith as I never felt before. My love to Christ was like fire, and I had such views of him as my life, my portion, my all, as swallowed me up. And oh, how I longed to be with him! A change passed upon all the powers of my soul. I may say with humility, it was as though I was emptied of all evil and filled with heaven and God." The Rev. William Hunter had a fuller, deeper experience, but it was of the 'same Jesus.'

We cannot leave this scripture without an obvious teaching concerning another phase of 'this same Jesus.' It is too obvious, too plain to need comment. The angels told the disciples: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go." They knew he had gone; they knew how he had gone, for they had seen him go. They were thus made to understand very clearly by the heavenly visitors the manner in which he would return. We might use an argument which we heard from Mr. Sherwood Eddy, as he addressed a congregation of several thousand men in New York City one Sunday afternoon. He said: "Some of you men may not believe in the day of Judgment, but that will probably make more difference to you than to the day of judgment." We would not say that of the coming again of Christ. It may be that by our faith and loyalty we might hasten that coming. It would be sad if he came and found us faithless and unbelieving or that we had obstructed his plan.

"Are you happy?" said a visitor to a young girl in the hospital. "Yes," she said, "quite happy." Pointing to the Bible on a table at her bedside, she said, "I have Christ in there." (Luke 24:27). Laying her hand upon her heart, she said, "And I have Christ here." (Eph. 3:17). And again pointing heavenwards where her faith, hopes and affections were all centered, she repeated, "And I have Christ up there." (Col. 3:4).

Another young woman lay ill, and we asked her, "Are you trusting in Jesus"? She was too ill to speak and she nodded her head to say, yes! By morning she had reached the land that is very far off, and yet so near; her waking eyes beheld the King in all his beauty,—this same Jesus, our Friend, our Savior, our baptizer with the Holy Ghost and our Teacher.

"He comes again; O Zion, ere thou meet him,
Make known to every heart his saving grace;

Let none whom he hath ransomed fail to greet him,

Though thy neglect, unfit to see his face.

"Publish glad tidings;

Tidings of peace;

Tidings of Jesus,

Redemption and release."

NORMAL EDUCATION.

REV. HENRY T. SCHOLL, D. D.

OW we look at things depends largely upon whether we have our eyes opened; and when we reckon up the number of our eyes correctly they sum up six.

There is one pair each of physical, mental and spiritual eyes. Normal education is designed to open our eyes. In all normal education pupils from kindergarten up are taught to think, and to think correctly. Etymologically a man is one who thinks, and what he depends largely upon what he clearly and intelligently sees.

Education as the word itself indicates, is a method of drawing out; not, however, the mere drawing out of what has been previously put there. The normally educated boy or girl is not of like ilk with a squirt gun, into which something has been drawn, and then, for the most part, forced out. Neither you nor I are properly educating pupils by simply getting out of them, by a series of questions, what we have previously put in them, as so much information. Correct education is not the transformation of the pupil into a fixed record that, under proper adjustment, will reproduce the words of the instructor, or the identical language of the text book. A pupil may be able to pass regents year after year till the high school course is completed, and to pass with an average of 90%, which is low enough for any really ambitious scholar, and still come far short of a commendable education.

The man who has his physical eyes and his mental eyes workably opened, lives on a higher plane than the one who looks forth on things seen and temporal with physical eyes only. Withal, the enjoyment of each, whatsoever its degree, comes deplorably short of what is highest and most enduring. Men of superb intellectual attainments have passed out of this life with fleshly mind, and at enmity against God. "Though I understand all mysteries, and all knowledge, and have not love, I am nothing."

Athens could make her boast of the mighty orator, Demosthenes, of her far-famed philosophers, Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle; of her poets, Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides; and of her architect and sculptor, Phidias; but Athens, when visited by Paul, was "full of idols," and the rival philosophies of his day were the Stoic and the Epicurean. The first was pantheistic and prideful. The other gave lax rein to pleasure; and conceived of the gods as remote from men, and unconcerned with their words and works.

Intellectual culture is assuredly desirable and, if rightly exploited, may be widely serviceable; but the combination of a well developed brain, and an unregenerate heart is not likely to add aught of spiritual asset to a community. The liberally educated man who is not normally righteous becomes increasingly a menace to his community as his intellectual culture broadens and deepens. Knowledge is power, but the knowledge of the unregenerate is power used against Christ; for himself has said, "He that is not with me is against me."

It is reported that certain Greeks came to Philip with the expressed desire:—"Sir, we would see Jesus." Pupils in public schools, and in our church schools should be taught and encouraged to see, and to love Jesus; very Man and very God. It is a great pity when the conduct and the character of teacher does not help the pupil to a clearer vision of Jesus, and to a correct conception of spiritual values and spiritual assets. It is a great pity when instruction in our public schools is concentrated entirely, or even mainly on things of the earth, earthly.

To those who are open-eyed to the perception of real values in education, the highest rating is placed upon spiritual assets. Godliness only is "profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come." Only as our righteousness exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees, are we graced to enter into the kingdom of heaven. (Matt. 5:20). Only as we are credibly rich in good works are we graced to lay hold upon the life which is life indeed. (1 Tim. 6:17, 18). To be truly happy, we must be really holy. "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. 12:14).

The New President of the Baptist Seminary.

We are glad to see that Dr. Sampey has been elected President of the Baptist Seminary in Louisville. We do not believe the official board of that great school could have found a safer and more efficient man in all the church than Rev. John Richard Sampey, D.D., LL.D.

Dr. Sampey is the son of a Baptist minister. He was converted when thirteen years of age in his native state of Alabama. He was superintendent of a Sunday school when sixteen years of age; soon afterward was licensed to preach. He was educated at Howard College. He graduated from the Baptist Seminary in Louisville and has been a teacher of Hebrew in that school nearly forty years. He is a man of profound scholarship, deep devotion and a most courteous, sweet-spirited Christian gentleman. We congratulate the Baptist Church on his selection, also the students who shall come under his influence, and we earnestly pray that the Holy Spirit will give him grace and guidance in this very important field of service. He is following in the footsteps of some of the greatest Christian men of our times, and we are believing that he will be able, with the blessing of the Lord, to prove himself worthy of the high position to which he has been elevated by his brethren.

H. C. MORRISON.

An Apology.

In the Asbury College issue of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD this writer made the somewhat daring assertion that Asbury Theological Seminary was the only Seminary of the Wesleyan group, granting the B.D. degree, now holding to the Wesleyan tenets of faith. This statement was not designedly a challenge, but when written was believed to be a fact. Since then, Marion College of Marion, Indiana, has challenged the statement, with the information that she grants the B.D. degree, and that she is true to Wesleyanism.

We take pleasure in apologizing to Marion College.
F. H. LARABEE, Dean.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just finished reading your articles on "Cigarettes," which were found in the July issue of The Herald. They were very interesting. It is alarming to note the number of young men and women who are using cigarettes to quiet their nerves, and to strengthen them in a time of distress. They have become so addicted to the habit that it is almost an impossible thing to stop using tobacco. If they could only realize how bad nicotine hurts their bodies, mind, and soul and could visualize a weak body, mind and soul as their own, surely they would abstain! I fear, Aunt Bettie, some of your little nieces and nephews are guilty.

I used camels, etc., when I first started to going to high school because other boys, who were much larger than I, used them; I thought it was very manly; however, I did this on the sly; i. e., without my teachers knowing it—a very cowardly act! I gave my life to Christ and have never "pulled" another cigarette. My physiology teacher told us that in 60 years not a single Harvard student addicted to tobacco and cigarettes had graduated at the head of his class. The president of one of our great business schools says that cigarettes cause shattered nerves, stunted growth, and physical and mental deterioration.

Doctors have told me that cigarettes have damaged my vocal organs and although I have been in the evangelistic work for six weeks straight, without any weakness noticed, apparently, from others, I can feel it. I have had a large group of boys to promise me to "swear off" forever; some do, while others do not. In one of the revival meetings 91 persons were converted or reclaimed. This did me much good, as I have only been in the work since school was out this past spring. Although I have finished high school I feel my need of a college education. I appreciated very much the work of Mr. Henry W. Bromley, "Value of a College Education to Those Preparing for the Ministry." I certainly do thank him, as it has created a desire for a college education.

I hope that you shall continue to stress the evils of tobacco, Aunt Bettie, for young men and women who adopt the cigarette habit later in life become addicted to other evil habits. If you will persuade young men to quit I know that you shall surely receive your reward. Here's the strangest part of it all: the greatest number of smokers are not found among the middle class, but among the very wealthy and the very poor. The wealthy have money to invest in safer indulgences, yet, do not; the poor have no money to spend at all for such things, still, they do!

Thanking you for your inspirational talks, and wishing you much success in your work accompanied by the blessings of God, I remain, Edwin Hartz. Evangelist.

Puxico, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Arkansas girl join your circle? I have been reading the Boys and Girls' Page of The Herald several years. I am sixteen years old. I have blue eyes, chestnut brown hair and fair complexion. I am a freshman in Beebe High School. Hope Mr. W. B. is visiting and this is in print. I would like to receive letters from some of the cousins.

Marguerite Price.
Box 55, Beebe, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again to have a short talk with you all. How are you all? Catherine Anders, I guess your middle name to be Mary. Arie B. Reeves, I guess your middle name to be Belle. Elizabeth M. Burnett, I guess your middle name to be Marie. If I am right, don't forget your promise. Who can guess my first name? It starts with M, and ends with Y. It has four letters in it. I see Ethel Miller has a few questions to answer and I am going to try to answer them. The kingdom of God is in Heaven. All of our wealth and everything we have comes from the kingdom of God. Religion comes from the Bible and the Bible comes from religion. Cain was the first child. I hope Mr. W. B. is filling a date when my letter arrives.

Bernice Strickland.
Millry, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is our first letter to The Herald. We go to the Mission S. S. in Wilmore, Ky. All of our class is writing to The Herald. We are in the first and second grades at school. Our teacher reads The Herald to us. We hope to see this letter in print.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Illinois girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter, and I hope to see it in print. I will be thirteen March 29. I am in the seventh grade. I have blue eyes and brown hair. My father is the pastor of the M. E. Church. I have two brothers. I like to read and I also like music. I read page ten, and also enjoy the article, "The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston." I hope Mr. W. B. is out looking for fall when this letter arrives.

Helen Margaret Harper.
St. Francisville, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a boy from Kentucky join your happy band of boys and girls? I am fourteen years of age, and I am in the eighth grade. I belong to the Methodist Church. I go to Sunday school almost every Sunday. I am a Christian and am walking with God every day.

Clyde Fannin.
Fullerton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have come to ask for admittance to your happy band of boys and girls. I live in Kentucky on a farm of about fifty acres. I have black hair, dark eyes and dark complexion. I am five feet and three inches tall. I was converted in a revival that was held at Fullerton this winter; the evangelists were Miss Edna Mae Franklin and Mrs. Elizabeth Young. I am determined, by God's help, to go on as a soldier for our Master. I hope that Mr. W. B. is out fishing when this arrives. Will write to any boy or girl who cares to write. Will close, hoping to see this in print.

Minnie Fannin.
Box 75, Fullerton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am just a little girl from North Dakota. I am eight years old. I have never written to you before. I just love to read the letters from the cousins. I love my Savior and I love Sunday school. My papa is superintendent of the Sunday school. Mama teaches the primary class. I hope I have not taken up too much space.

Bernice Elevera Carlson.
Douglas, N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a ten-year-old girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. My father takes The Herald and I love to read the letters on page ten. I am glad to say I am trying to be a Christian. Today is the Lord's day and I am trying to do Christian things. I hope to see my letter on page ten. My father said he would like to see my letter on page ten, too. Tell your cousins to write to me. Tell your cousins to try and guess my middle name; it begins with M and ends with E. If any one of them guess it tell them to write me. I am in the fifth grade and live in the country. I like my teacher; her name is Miss Martha Tahtinew. Well, I don't want to make this letter any longer.

Leola McInnis.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I suppose I had better describe myself. I am four feet, nine inches tall, have red hair, and blue eyes. I am thirteen years old. My birthday is October 4th. If your birthday is close to mine, please write to me. I would like to correspond with some one near my age. Catherine Anders, I guess your first name to be Mary. If I am right don't forget your promise. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I will answer all letters received. Hope Mr. W. B. is building a fire when my letter arrives.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am just a lonely, blue-eyed girl of eighteen, tall and slender, with dark red hair and fair complexion, seeking new friends. So please won't you let me join your band of happy writers? I attend the R. H. School. I am just a little bit of an artist, a poet and an author. But writing is the goal I have set to study for. I have traveled some and hope to travel more in the future. I have many friends in Rockport all of whom I dearly love. But friends, my restless spirit grows weary with the same friends day after day and I long for friends from various states. Please won't some one catch a glimpse of my longing and write to me?

Imogene Hartley.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of girls and boys? I have never seen a letter from Iowa in The Herald. I like to read page ten. I am a Christian. I belong to the Presbyterian Church. I am eleven years old and am in the sixth grade. I go to the South School. My teacher's name is Miss Lula Christenson. I have dark brown hair, dark brown eyes, and dark complexion. My birthday is Nov. 17. Have I a twin? If I have I wish they would write to me. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking his sweetheart to the show when this letter arrives. If any one can guess my middle name I will write them a nice letter. It has five letters in it, and begins with M and ends with E.

Donna M. Wessman.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I want to correspond with some boys and girls in your happy club, and I want you to publish the following letter in The Pentecostal Herald real soon. Boys and girls come on and write to a lonely girl. I can answer any letters you write me and will be delighted to do so. I am eighteen years old, have blonde curly hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am five feet, four inches tall. I am a junior in high school. I love all kinds of sports. I am going to take art, as I want to be an artist, but will tell you all about myself as soon as I get some letters. Every one that writes gets a picture of myself. Come on and guess my middle name and then sit down and write to me. My middle name begins with M and ends with E, and has three letters in it. Won't you answer to my call? A lonesome girl.

Virginia M. Tilford.
Rockport, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you permit an Arkansas girl to join your happy band of boys and girls? We take the dear old Pentecostal Herald. I enjoy reading it best of all papers published. I am a member of the Methodist Church. I go to church and Sunday school every time I have an opportunity. I am very glad to know there are still some young folks that are Christians to lead the way in the Lord's work after the older Christian generation is gone to their reward. I believe it pays to be a Christian. My heart's desire is to live a true Christian life for Christ who purchased my pardon on Calvary's tree. I care nothing about going to dances, parties, movies or anything pertaining to evil. The Bible tells us to abstain from all appearance of evil. 1 Thess. 5:22. I believe there is evil in such things. The Bible also says no man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. Matt. 6:24. I don't believe anyone can be a true Christian and attend such evil things. But let us live for the Lord's second coming and I believe we will not regret it at the judgment day when we shall be chosen. The Bible is my favorite author of all books. I greatly enjoy reading God's word and learn more about what he would have me to do. I will be eighteen years old June 22. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print. I close with love and best wishes to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

FALLEN ASLEEP

GOLDEN.

The spirit of Mrs. Addie McDonald Golden, sixty-two years of age, faithful wife and mother, departed this life July 24, 1929, at Vaughan, Miss., forsaking the "earthly house of this tabernacle" to take up her abode in "a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." She was born in Leake county, Miss., on Nov. 14, 1867, and was deprived of both parents when she was quite a young girl, after which she lived with relatives in Yaboo county, Miss.

Just before she was eighteen, she married, on Nov. 11, 1884, Henry Lafayette Golden, who was one year her senior. It was only a few months after this when she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Fletcher's Chapel, in Yazoo county, Rev. E. T. Adams being the pastor of the church at that time. It was at a morning service during a revival when she joined, and her husband followed her into the church that night. Thus early was she influential in leading to Christ her husband, who later became a minister of the Methodist Protestant Church.

Nine children were born to this union, they being the following: A. H. Golden, Vaughan, Miss.; Ernest Golden, deceased; Mrs. M. L. Brister, Vaughan, Miss.; J. Claude Golden, Vaughan, Miss.; Mrs. Maude E. Knott, Vaughan, Miss.; E. L. Golden, deceased; J. P. Golden, Marie, Ark.; M. C. Golden, Frenchman Bayou, Ark.; and Mrs. Mattie Mae Mason, Benton, Miss.

As a wife and mother she was faithful to her duties, and her life proved a blessing to many. She was a loving companion to her husband and cheerfully entered into the opportunities and sacrifices of his ministry. She made her home in Mississippi and Arkansas while her husband was proclaiming the unsearchable riches of God in Mississippi, Arkansas, Tennessee, Alabama and Missouri. She was ready to go with him or ready to stay at home with the children, as opportunity or necessity dictated.

She liked to read devotional and religious books and papers, and took great interest in their contents. She continually read The Pentecostal Herald, The Herald of Holiness, and The Christian Witness. Her husband, who survives her, testifies to the fact that as long as she was able she read a passage of Scripture every day to her edification.

She loved life and wanted to live, resisting disease one hundred and five days in her last illness before the end finally came. She suffered much, but did not murmur nor complain, always saying, "Let the Lord's will be done." When she died she was a member, together with her husband, of the Harmonia Methodist Protestant Church, near Sallis, Attala county, Miss. She was buried from Fletcher's Chapel, the church of her first love, at noon on Thursday, July 25, 1929, with Revs. H. S. Westbrook and Geo. H. Jones, of the M. E. Church, South, officiating. The church building was filled with relatives and friends who regret the passing of this good woman.

Who can estimate the influence of a Christian mother?

"Her children rise up and call her blessed;

Her husband also, and he praiseth her. Favor is deceitful, and beauty is vain; But a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised."

Prov. 31:28-30.
H. L. Golden.

THE KING'S HIGHWAY.

There's a rare old road where kind words are sown,
Where hate and selfishness are all unknown,

For love and sweet content lines all the way,
Not for fixed or set days, is God's highway
But a walk for you, and for me, each day.

Mrs. Caroline Fuller Jones.

PASTORS

Here is an extraordinary offer!

The publishers find that they have an overstock of Doran's Minister's Manual and are offering these books to dealers so that they may be sold at $1.00 each, plus postage. The regular price is $2.00. We have taken fifty copies. After these are sold no more will be available. Many of our pastors now are using this Minister's Manual. It is arranged for the calendar year but its suggestions and sermon material are of great value at any time. We are going to share the cost of mailing and are offering the book at $1.00.

Planned for the busy pastor. Not a mere book of sermon outlines, but a veritable mine of the very best available sermon material for the modern preacher. The 1929 manual covers the calendar year, with a complete new collection of illustrations, poems, outlines, suggestive texts, children's sermons, invocations and other features which make it indispensable to the busy pastor. Topical and scriptural indices make each item immediately available.

A $2.00 book for $1.00.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Please to pray for an unsaved sick man, that he may be saved and healed of his sickness.

A reader asks prayer for her community that they may have a revival of religion, and for her that her health may improve.

A wife requests prayer for her husband that he may be delivered from the tobacco habit.

A young man just entering the ministry asks prayers of The Herald family that he may be blessed in his work.

A husband asks prayer for his wife who has had a nervous breakdown, that she may be healed.

WANTED!

The name and address of one or more young preachers to whom we can send The Pentecostal Herald. If in sending these to us you want the privilege of paying for them, you may do so on our 50c proposition. Or, if you have some money to invest and haven't the names, we shall be glad to supply them.

Of some friend or loved one who needs salvation, then invest 50c in the interest of their soul and send them The Herald until January, 1930.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson X.—September 8, 1929.

Subject.—Nehemiah Rebuilding the wall of Jerusalem. Nehemiah 4:6; Nehemiah 4:15-21.

Golden Text.—The people had a mind to work. Neh. 4:6.

Time.—B. C. 446.

Places.—Babylon and Jerusalem.

Introduction.—Few great things are done in a day. It required decades to make an ocean liner. The first automobile was a mere toy, compared with the splendid machines now covering the entire globe. The first air ship could barely rise from the earth: now they fly as eagles. It was a long step from the old-fashioned reap-hook to a modern combination mowing machine that cuts, thrashes and sacks the wheat from forty acres in a day.

All things move after this fashion. The Jews could not rehabilitate Jerusalem all at once. It was almost a hundred years after the fall of Belshazzar (B. C. 538) that Nehemiah made his way to the old city to repair the walls. Zerubbabel had returned with a company of exiled Jews shortly after the fall of Babylon; and under his leadership the temple had been rebuilt between B. C. 536 and B. C. 516. Ezra, the ready scribe, had led back another company about B. C. 458, and had set himself to teach his people the laws and judgments of Jehovah. Twelve years later (B. C. 446) Nehemiah returned for the purpose of repairing the wall of the city.

Nehemiah says that he received news of the utter ruin of Jerusalem from Hanani in the twentieth year of king Artaxerxes, Hanani having just returned to Babylonia after visiting the sacred city. Nehemiah's prayer for his people and their city is pathetic. I suppose he had never seen Jerusalem; but he had heard much about it through the traditions of his people. Now his heart breaks because the city of his ancestors is in ruins. He cries to the God of his fathers, and is heard. He must see the king about it; but it would be at the risk of his life, for he was sad, and it was dangerous for the king's cup-bearer to enter the royal presence with a sad countenance. But Nehemiah was determined, and decided to make the effort. Jehovah was with him; and although the king asked the cause of his sadness, he made bold to declare the whole truth, and won the day. God always blesses beyond our expectation. In Nehemiah's case he so moved on the heart of the heathen ruler that he granted him liberty to go, and ordered his sub-rulers to give him full protection in his undertaking.

Nehemiah was a man of great wealth. Having good business capacity, he had taken advantage of his opportunities in Shushan, and had accumulated a fortune. But he was not a stingy money lover. During the twelve years of his stay in Jerusalem while he was personally supervising the repairs that were being made, he fed one hundred and fifty at his own table, besides entertaining many distinguished visitors to the city.

Comments on the Lesson.

It will be needful to read the preceding verses of the chapter, in order to get a clear understanding of the work. Note the wrath and opposition of Sanballat and Tobiah the Ammorite. But in all their sarcastic raillery they overlooked the fact that the hand of Jehovah was with Nehemiah and his builders. To put it after Mr. Lincoln's style, they were on God's side.

6. All the wall was joined together.—Some parts of the old wall were still standing. In such places it was necessary only to repair, and to unite the parts until the wall was completed around the entire city. Unto the half thereof.—The words are somewhat ambiguous, but perhaps mean that the wall was erected only half its previous height. The people had a mind to work.—The Golden Text. Things always succeed when God's people have a mind to work. Dilly-dallying never accomplishes very much of anything.

15. When our enemies heard that it was known to us.—Sanballat and his fellows had formed a secret plot to pounce upon the Jews unawares, and to murder them, in order to stop the work on the wall. Jealousy will do anything to gain its ends. But Jehovah was with his people; and the work went on in spite of their enemies.

16. The half of my servants.—This must have been a special band that belonged to Nehemiah personally. Half of them held the implements of war while the other half worked on the wall. If you can do no better, fight the devil with one hand, and work for God with the other. The rulers were behind all the house of Judah.—The leading men were encouraging and assisting the workmen all along the wall.

17. This is simply a sort of comment on the preceding verses. He that sounded the trumpet was by me.—Nehemiah kept this man at his side, so that in case their enemies came against them, he could sound an alarm, and call the people from work to battle.

19. The work is great and large.—The workmen were scattered all along the wall around the entire city; and caution was needed.

20. Resort ye thither unto us.—Nehemiah kept his eye on the enemy lurking about the hills. If a rush was made, he would have the trumpeter so sound his trumpet as to tell the people at what point on the wall they were needed.

21. From the rising of the morning till the stars appeared.—A pretty long work day; but they were working by the job—not by the day. They meant business. God was with them. The work was finished on time.

NOTICE!

After September 1st, the home address of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Shank will be Pasadena College, Pasadena, Calif.

The Rev. Percy F. Asher has drawn our attention to the fact that he has been incorrectly listed among our contributors as Rev. P. F. Asher, D.D., and much embarrassment has been caused him thereby. We have gladly adjusted the matter at Mr. Asher's request.

Rev. Thomas C. Henderson, of Oberlin, Ohio, will conduct an interdenominal holiness meeting in Grandfield, Okla., Sept. 4-16, in the city auditorium. We trust that many who read this announcement will avail themselves of the gracious opportunity of hearing this man of God, and of helping to promote the gospel of full salvation. Everything possible will be done for the comfort of those who attend. A large crowd is expected.

Lesley Jurey.

THE "DOUBLE CURE."

Will O. Scott.

Legend and fable afford a wonderful means of insight into the minds and hearts of men and women.

Out of the mysterious depths of the subconscious mind some strange and fascinating figures, symbols of things hidden in mental dungeons and brought to light by the power of imagination.

From the far East comes the wonderful story of "Sindbad the Sailor and his Seven Voyages"; the best known of his thrilling adventures being his encounter with "The Old Man of the Sea."

On the banks of a river, Sindbad saw a little old man who seemed to be very weak and feeble who begged Sindbad to carry him on his back across the stream. Thinking him to be a proper subject for help, Sindbad complied with his request. But upon reaching the opposite bank the lazy beggar, leach-like, refused to release his hold and dismount.

Sindbad was immediately filled with surprise and terror when he realized the awful plight in which he found himself placed. Night and day, in sunshine and showers, he was forced to carry the villainous old reprobate, who gripped him so tightly as almost to strangle him.

Driven almost insane by his horrible burden, Sindbad staggered about, hither and thither at the direction of the old man, until, at length, by means of a clever ruse he succeeded in casting him off and, with a large stone, put an end to his life.

There are men and women, I dare say, whom you pass daily on the street or with whom you mingle in a social or business relation, who, in one form or another, are ridden by an "Old Man of the Sea," carrying burdens of debt, disappointment, disease and mental hallucinations firmly seated on their shoulders who, unless they find some desperate means to dislodge, must stagger on under the crushing weight until they fall headlong into dishonored graves.

I, too, have a story to relate, coming to us from a most reliable source and antedates the anonymous "Arabian Nights' Entertainment," from which the foregoing is taken.

If I am not badly mistaken, the figure of the "Old Man of the Sea," like most all the striking bits of literature thrown off from the pens of many brilliant writers, all adown the centuries, was borrowed from Holy Writ. Who that has followed Dr. H. C. Morrison in his word-painting, descriptive of "Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde" has failed to see the "two works of grace," especially recognizing the silent and insidious workings of the carnal mind throughout?

Stevenson, author of the above named story, may have written wiser than he knew but fancy that he never dreamed, during his short earthly life, that his two heroes would find their most appropriate impersonation among the ranks of the Holiness Movement.

Even Mr. Tennyson brought out the hidden meaning in his well-known couplet—

"O for a man to arise in me,
That the man that is may cease to be!"

Go with me, if you will, to the inspired Word and 'listen in' while St. Paul gives his version of this important theme:

"I find then a law, that, when I would do good, evil is present with me.

"For I delight in the law of God after the inward man.

"But I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members.

"O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Rom. 7:21-24.

"That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts.

"And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Gal. 4:22-24.

The "modernist" has no specific for the infection of carnality injected into the human race by the "old man of sin."

Neither does he propose any way to dislodge this hateful, hereditary vampire that has fastened upon the vitals and is sucking the lifeblood from every vein, with a strangle-hold upon every son and daughter of Adam's race, while he rides rough-shod down through the ages, making all who are in this sin-ridden state of nature feel the cruel effect of spur, whip, saddle and bridle.

Thank God, there is answer to Jeremiah the "weeping prophet," "Is there balm in Gilead?" Jer. 8:22.

John, "the beloved disciple," assures us—"If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1:9.

Notice what Augustus Toplady, the Calvinist, pronounced in opposition to Methodism and its founder, says in that celebrated hymn Christianity will not let die—"Rock of Ages:"

"Let the water and the blood,
From thy wounded side which flowed,
Be of sin the double cure,
Save from wrath and make me pure."

HOPE, IDAHO.

In the Herald of the 17th, under the head, "An old-fashioned revival," I noticed the statement, "There seemed to be a feeling among all that the meeting should have continued at least another week." This leads me to offer the following in my experience hoping it may be helpful to our workers in such meetings, as I believe serious mistakes are often made at this point. When the Lord called me to preach, and said woe if I did not, I thought he meant for me to win souls for him, and as I had been converted at the altar in a red-hot meeting and afterward saw many others, I preached, prayed and urged our people to that end, saw revivals in all my charges, some not very great but others veritable pentecosts. I was often fearful that I made mistakes in management and closing these meetings, so cried to the Lord about it, until finally I prayed Abraham's prayer, "Lord God whereby shall I know," and he brought to my mind a possibility and I said, "Do that Lord and then I will know." He did it and from that on I began to use fleeces; although Satan fought me furiously I held on and today that is one way that God answers me so that I have no question concerning my course when the answer is given. I now give two out of a number of instances in which the Lord led me in closing revival meetings.

In my pastorate at Colfax, Wash., after a two-weeks' meeting in which a number professed pardon or purity, the meeting seemed to check and it was thought the work was done, so I put out this test as there had been no response for a couple of nights, "Lord, if the work is done let no one come to the altar, but if you want it to go on send some one to the altar. That will be your answer." After the sermon the call was made and a young man came forward followed by another younger man, and that week proved to be the most resultful in conversions than any previous.

The second occasion to which I refer was at a meeting in Hartline, Wash., Rev. C. C. Curry, pastor. In 1900 I had so broken in health that I was compelled to cease the active work and for about five years was in a noneffective condition, save a little local work. I then asked the Lord if I should return to the effective relation and he said No. Then I said, "Do you want me to help my brethren in their revival work, if so, let some one invite me and give us a pentecostal time." Brother Curry came to me at the close of the next Conference and said he thought he would like me to help him at Hartline. I said, we will pray about it and if that is the Lord's will I will be there. As everything was favorable we began the meeting on Saturday and the meeting swept forward under such power that the next week saw something over 50 professions of either pardon or purity. The meeting seemed to check and the question of closing arose and Brother Curry hesitated lest the interest should cease. After preaching Sunday night, he made the call to which there was no response; then I turned to the pastor and said, "Will you go on?" "I hardly know," was his reply. I then said, "Let us ask the Lord to give us a conversion if you continue." "All right," was his reply. I turned and renewed the invitation when a young man came forward and in a few moments was converted. The meeting continued, and that week not only were there several conversions, but an infidel, and one counted hard-boiled, was converted and had to go 200 miles to recover his parents to their Christian faith whom he had turned away from it. My helping in other meetings resulted in some 300 conversions and sanctifications before I had to quit, so that the meeting was a blessed answer to my call to that work. This has been to me the means of certain action in life, giving certain assurance and leading to achievements that I never would have accomplished; and believe, if our Spirit-filled men would use it they would find it an additional power in their work.

It is so clearly biblical as seen in the history of the different chapters of the Word, that it is a wonder to me that it has not been more definitely dealt with. Consider Moses, Joshua, Samuel, David, Abraham, Jacob, Jonathan, Elijah and Elisha, Gideon, Hezekiah, Isaiah, Christ and much that follows.

GAINES, MICH., CAMP.

The twentieth annual camp meeting of the Central Michigan Holiness Association will be held at Gaines, Mich., August 23 to September 1, 1929.

Workers: Rev. George Bennard, of Hermosa Beach, Calif., well known evangelist and hymn writer, will be present the first four days. Rev. Paul Rees, of Detroit, young and effective preacher, will be with us the last six days. Dr. C. W. Butler, our beloved president. Rev. Clara G. Ford, young people's worker. Rev. Ira E. Miller, of Lynn, Mass., will be welcomed again as leader in song. Mrs. Grace B. Heneks, pianist.

Young people's rally and Christian workers' conference, Friday and Saturday, August 23 and 24, 1929.

Special workers will be A. Marion Pratt, Rev. Hugh Townley and Rev. Florence S. Teed.

Services: The first service will be at 10:00 A. M. on Friday, and daily following at 10:30, 2:30 and 7:30 Eastern Standard time. A young people's service daily. Missionary hour, Friday, August 30, 2:30 P. M.

Gaines is easily reached by good roads, being only six miles southeast of Durand in Genesee County. For information or posters write Mrs. Grace Millard, 614 W. Michigan Ave., East Lansing, Michigan.

WEDOWEE, ALABAMA.

Dr. Morrison, I greatly enjoyed your address at the Alabama Conference of the M. E. Church at Tarrant City, last fall, and followed you to the street where we had a short talk and you requested me to write you, stating where I had met you. I have been a happy reader of your paper for several years and I know of no paper nor book next to the Bible that so reaches my deep spiritual needs and satisfies. How utterly vain and disappointing are the tons of religious literature coming to our homes that are not only useless but positively misleading. Vain philosophy and science falsely so-called, written apparently for the college bred only, dressed in the occult phraseology of the modernistic schools and as unintelligible to the vast majority of the common people as if it were written in Greek. How helpful when we open the pages of The Herald to see the blessed gospel written in the "language wherein we were born." Then The Herald is clear and true on the doctrine of our beloved Methodism.

When thirty or forty years ago we began a systematic study of the doctrines of our church we were expected to read and pass on Wesley's sermons, Plain Account of Christian Perfection, Fletcher's Checks, Watson's Institutes and numbers of others of like character written and preached by those spiritually endued heroes of the cross under whose power sinners were slain and laid at the foot of the cross till they were notified by the Holy Spirit that their sins were all forgiven, their habit chains loosed and their souls washed in the blood of the Lamb.

John Wesley is seldom referred to today except on education, but The Herald is not ashamed to quote him on conviction, regeneration, witness of the Spirit and sanctification. Our people are hungry for the blessed bread of life, not the vague husks of philosophy that they cannot understand.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

SUFFERING SAVIOR.

O suffering Savior on the Cross,
My soul bends low in love to Thee,
I kneel in adoration—lost
To see Thee there in pain for me.

O dying Christ, I worship Thee,
What shame and anguish Thou hast known,
Thy hands and feet were pierced for
me,
That for my sins Thou might'st atone.

'Tis finished now the Christ hath died,
The Sacrifice for sin is slain,
The Son of God is crucified, Redemption's won through Jesus'
name.

O Savior, Jesus, Wondrous Lord,
Redeemer, Prophet, Priest and King,
Let all the earth Thy name adore
Thy praises and Thy glory sing.

How may I thank Thee gracious Lord,
For suffering thus upon the tree
With tongue of fire I'll preach Thy Word,
Thou Son of man who died for me.
Rev. C. B. Keast, S.T.B.

DELIVERED FROM THE POWERS OF DARKNESS.
"O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together. I sought the Lord, and he heard me, and delivered me from all my fears."
(Ps. 34:3, 4). In the first text of scripture the attitude of the heart towards God is revealed and in the second scripture the reason for thanksgiving is made known. The Psalmist sought the Lord and experienced a gracious deliverance, and in these heights of ecstasy cries out for others to unite with him in praising God.

My object in writing this testimony is that those who have shared my burdens and sorrows may now rejoice in my glorious deliverance which God alone has wrought.

About twenty years ago I came in touch with the Christian and Missionary Alliance through Rev. and Mrs.
R. A. Forrest, of Toccoa, Ga., and Miss Lucy Jones of South China, while they were conducting a missionary convention in Lumberton, N. C. Although a score of years has passed, I have never forgotten their happy faces and their deep abounding joy.
Though converted only a short time,
still I had a heaven-born desire to enter the Lord's service. In 1912 the Lord opened the way for me to attend
the Toccoa Falls Institute, Toccoa, Ga., in 1913-14 the Boone Biblical College, Boone, Ia., and in 1915, Nyack, N. Y. For the past thirteen and one-half years I have had the joy of laboring in the eastern district of the Christian and Missionary Alliance under Rev. G. V. Brown, District Superintendent. During this period of time
I failed to observe the Master's words,
"Come apart and rest awhile." Allow me to give a word of warning to ministers and Christian workers: I believe the Lord intended that we should rest one day a week. A year or so before the break came I was very nervous and had I obeyed and used good judgment, I might have saved myself untold suffering. Last August I completely collapsed and was affected in body, soul and mind.
After a few week's suffering both mentally and spiritually at home, I was admitted to a hospital where I remained for six months and gradually grew worse. In the first stage of the attack I questioned my sanctification, and later my conversion. Awful darkness prevailed, and the joy of the Lord which had been mine for twenty years left me; his face was hidden, his voice was silent. For many weeks I sat with my face to the wall and communed with my heart and at last decided, saved or lost, heaven or hell, I would praise the Lord. Gathering a number of the patients about me, we began singing gospel songs. Many Christians were praying for me to be cured, although I was considered one of the worst cases of the hundreds in the hospital. The doctors held out little or no hope of my recovery. In Acts 10:38 we read, "God anointed
Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Ghost and power; who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the Devil; for God was with him." The Lord is still healing and delivering from the enemy's power. "Jesus was manifested that he might destroy the works of the Devil."
Praise his name. I trust this word of testimony will be used to glorify our heavenly Father; will encourage Christians everywhere to pray more earnestly for the oppressed, and also will help the oppressed ones to still trust the Lord in their most difficult trials. Since returning home on March 6th, I have had the joy of again proclaiming the unsearchable riches of Christ. If desired, I will be glad to visit any church and tell more fully what God hath wrought.

Mrs. Broadwell joins with me in thanking all those who have shared our burdens by prayer and gifts.
A few days before leaving the hospital, at the close of a season of prayer, the joy of the Lord flooded my soul, the Holy Ghost began singing in my heart, and without any effort on my part the words and melody for a new song were inspired within me.

Taking my pencil I jotted it down.
"Speaking to yourselves in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." (Eph. 5:19).

Mr. Broadwell.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga,
with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."
—Basil Matthews
in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast
from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and
His saving power in the lives of men."
Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen
Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

There is just one Bud Robinson—
no one like him or even akin to him.
There is not another "Life Story" like his or similar to it. His recent book,
"My Life's Story" is, as he puts it,
"loaded to the water line with the activities of forty-seven years of labor in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Jesus Christ." The chapter on his call to preach is worth the price of the book and more. Get it and read it. It has 217 pages, but when you start reading it you will not want to stop until you have finished. It sells at the remarkably low price of $1.00.
Don't fail to get your copy. You will

THE PRINCE OF THE HOUSE OF DAVID

By Ingraham.

A story of the life and times of our Lord as told by an eye witness in letters to her father. The narrative is beautifully and forcefully unfolded.
Because of its unusual style it will be read by many who would not read the
New Testament.

Anyone who reads this book is brought face to face with the fact that Jesus is truly "The Prince of the House of David" and the Savior of the world.

A book that the young people will read and enjoy. It will hold their attention clear to the last page.

We have 240 copies of a pocket edition of this book, bound in blue cloth, that we are selling at 30c each or 2 for 50c.

A NEW BOOK

Dr. Arthur T. O'Rear has written a book,
"The Nativity of the Holy Spirit," which is a distinct contribution to the more recent literature on this subject. The book is introduced by Bishop Sam Hay.

Dr. O'Rear couples theological soundness with a new method of approach. The discussion is very comprehensive, providing a kind of education in spiritual things that is greatly needed. While his book is constructive and positive, it deals negatively with false movements and modern errors regarding the Holy Spirit and furnishes new light under this head.

LET US MAGNIFY THE PASTORATE.

By The Editor.

MUCH depends upon the pastorate. Give us intelligent, devout, evangelistic, aggressive pastors who know the will of God as revealed in his word, who love the sheep, and in their pastoral visitations will rebuke, encourage and pray; their lives will so permeate the church, and the church will so permeate society that all the best interests of humanity will be conserved and advanced. A godly pastor is the salt of the earth and the light of the world.

* * * *

The pastor should be a man of vision and great freedom in the Lord. He should so fear God that he would have no fear of men. Let him be a man in authority who stands on his feet, with head up, and speaks the message of the Lord without fear or favor. A church government which belittles the pastor, binds, and intimidates him is out of harmony with the teachings of Jesus and the spirit of the gospel. Woe be to the shepherd who leaves the sheep to be rent by the wolves of heresy, the bears of worldliness, and the devils of wickedness. The wild beasts of sin will haunt the pastor and invade the folds of the sheep of the Lord, and it will take a wise, strong, consecrated man to pasture and protect them.

* * * *

Let us magnify the pastorate. We have been prone to place too much authority in the hands of the few, which hinders growth, freedom, independence and aggressiveness on the part of the pastor. We are in danger of trusting in plans and methods of organization because they are old and have once been useful. It would be a stupid farmer who would plow a field of last year's cornstalks; however well he might cultivate them they would never produce roasting ears or fodder for the cattle, but simply rattle and decay in the midst of cultivation. We are in danger of cultivating dead and dry institutions and methods until we jog along in ruts with little interest in what we are doing.

* * * *

We are glad to note an awakening among our lay people. They are becoming interested and having something to say. This writer has been in the pastorate and knows something of the eagerness, entreaty and pleadings of the pastor with the brethren to become active in church work, but now the layman is indulging in much talk and, in eloquent earnestness, is begging the pastor to give him something to do. This is a good sign. No doubt pastors will find a job for the zealous brother. The fact is, some of our preachers take things so easy, and have been so long in the ruts, that they can hardly keep step with the aggressive laymen. Personally, I should be glad to have lay representatives in the bishop's cabinet. Why not? Our laymen are as intelligent, loyal and pious as our ministry. They furnish the finance; why not give ourselves the benefit of their practical wisdom and godly counsel in making the appointments?

SUBMISSION TO GOD.

(Written by Albert of Brandenburg, while suffering in exile, in 1586.)

Whate'er God wills, let that be done;
His will is ever wisest;
His grace will all thy hope outrun.
Who to that faith arisest.
The gracious Lord
Will help afford;
He chastens with forbearing;
Who God believes,
And to Him cleaves,
Shall not be left despairing.

My God is my sure confidence,
My light, and my existence;
His counsel is beyond my sense,
But stirs no weak resistance;
His Word declares
The very hairs
Upon my head are numbered;
His mercy large
Holds me in charge
With care that never slumbered.

There comes a day when at His will
The pulse of nature ceases.
I think upon it, and am still,
Let come whate'er He pleases.
To Him I trust
My soul, my dust,
When flesh and spirit sever;
The Christ we sing
Has plucked the sting
Away from death for ever.

Monthly Sermon.

THE PROBLEM OF HUMAN LIFE.

Text: Because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy. 1 Peter 1:16.

St. Peter here refers to a scripture in Leviticus 11:44, "For I am the Lord your God, ye shall be holy: for I am holy."

The problem of human life, here and hereafter, is one of the most interesting subjects that can command the attention of the human mind. When we contemplate all that was involved in the creation of a free, responsible being like man, with the power to reproduce the species, with the possibility of falling into sin, and all of the sorrows of war, bloodshed, disease, famine, and the untold suffering that has come to the human race, we can but ask the question, Why was man created? We ask this question, not in the spirit of irreverence or curiosity, but in thoughtful, reverent inquiry into the reason of things.

When we see a man making an excavation, laying a deep and broad foundation, and erecting a beautiful mansion, with many spacious rooms covered with soft carpets, filled with elegant furniture, with beautiful pictures on the walls, and a large number of well selected books on the shelves, we feel sure he is making provision for his family; he has a wife, or he contemplates marriage, and a family of children. We see at once, by the size, convenience and beauty of the building, and the luxuriance of its furniture, that the man is thinking of, and making provision for, some one other than himself; in a word, the man is in love.

The same is true of the universe. It is so vast, so harmonious, its products are so varied, so abundant and so adaptable to the wants of mankind, the mountains so grand, draped with clouds, and capped with snow, its plains so broad and fertile and their products so bountiful, there is such a variety of cereals, fruits, vegetables, and such a profusion of flowers, with all their mingling of beautiful colors and fragrant odors; the fountains of water so many and so refreshing, the brooks singing with such gurgling joy, the rivers so broad and deep, the lakes so placid, the oceans so vast, the sunshine sheds such light and warmth, the moon such a mellow glow, the stars so countless and so brilliant, that we are forced to the conclusion that the Builder of this vast universe is not building for himself alone, but from the dawn of creation he is thinking of others than himself. We feel quite sure that this material creation is not an end, but is being prepared as a residence. It tells us, with its inexhaustible resources and beauty, that God is in love; he is building his great house of many mansions for the habitation of his family—mankind.

May we not believe that the nature of God called for a creature like man? That there would have been a void, an incompleteness in the universe without man's creation? God could not be satisfied with mere animal creation. He could take pleasure in the fish of the sea, the birds of the air, and the animals of forest and field, making provision for their wants, but that was not enough; he must have a being in his own image, one like unto himself, one upon whom he could pour the vast Niagara of his love; a being who could reason, appreciate, and somewhat respond to his Fatherly affection.

Let me illustrate my thought: You fodder your sheep and they bleat after you. You give your favorite saddle horse an apple and he rubs his nose fondly in your hand. You pat your dog upon the head and he wags his tail in response, but they cannot enter into your higher intellectual enjoyments, or sympathize with you in your sorrows. You stand upon the mountain peak at the end of a day and watch the sunset turn the ocean into fire and gold, your dog at your side turns from the gorgeous scene to pursue a woodmouse. You long for the presence of those you love, for the fellowship of intelligence; your joys are increased and your sorrows are softened by the presence of those who are capable of entering into sympathy with you, who can appreciate the grandeur of the scene upon which you gaze, or who can go with you down into the deep sorrows you suffer.

No man can come into his own, can be his best, without a wife and children to love. A man to be great must be an unselfish lover.

MEDITATIONS AND NOTES FROM THE BATTLEFIELD.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

This morning as I think of the way the Lord has led during the past twelve months in China, Japan and Korea, as I recall the gracious victories, the outpourings of the Spirit in many revivals, the unusual opportunities in churches, colleges, Bible schools, high schools and Missions and Conferences of publishing and preaching the Great Redemption, I think of those lines of Charles Wesley set to peculiar metre:

"O the goodness of God,
Employing a clod,
His tributes of glory to raise;
His standard to bear,
And with triumph declare
His unspeakable riches of Grace.

"In a rapture of joy
My life to employ,
The God of my life to proclaim,
'Tis worth living for this,
To administer bliss
And salvation in Jesus' name."

At this time of writing we are again in Shanghai. Sunday, June 24th, was a great day at Bethel. It was the Sunday prior to Commencement and was a busy day for Dr. Mary Stone and Miss Jennie V. Hughes and their workers. It was a kind of ingathering day and culmination of work done at Bethel Tabernacle and the City Missions conducted by Bethel workers. Over one hundred were baptized, including nurses, teachers, students, working people, coolies and others. Many of these were converted from raw heathenism while many others had enjoyed good religious background and had been trained in Bethel schools.

Bethel operates, besides the Tabernacle and the schools, a number of Gospel Missions; these are open every night of the year and are carried on by Bethel workers. Hundreds of souls are led to Jesus by means of these services and at the baptismal services at Bethel which occur two or three times a year, the converts are baptized in the faith. At the conclusion of the baptisms we made an appeal and gave an invitation to the unsaved and others and in a few minutes the altar was nearly filled with those seeking pardon and others seeking sanctification, and the blessing of the Lord came down on seeking souls. Missionaries of Methodist and Presbyterian boards from various sections of China were present and shared in the blessings of the meeting. We would mention especially Miss Dodds, of the Presbyterian Mission in Shantung. She had come down with forty-two orphans from the famine districts. Bethel's method in aiding the famine sufferers is having a big batch of them sent down to them, they take them in, clothe, feed and educate them, get them saved, all with the idea of sending them forth in the future as workers in the kingdom and soul winners.

As I write graduation exercises are on and this afternoon we give the address to a large class of nurses, Bible school graduates and from the high school.

Bethel is now looked upon as one of the outstanding cases of independent mission work in China. While Dr. Stone and Miss Hughes are Methodists in their theology and teaching, yet Bethel holds no official relation to any Mission Board. It is a faith work absolutely from its beginning eight years ago to the present day.

Many there are who think missionary work to be effective and abiding must be connected up with some of the big denominations, but all along the history of the church God has put his seal upon real faith and faithful movements for the spread of the gospel and the salvation of souls.

"While ye sit idle, do you think
The Lord's great work sits idle too?
That light dares not o'erleap the brink
Of morn, because 'tis dark with you?
Though yet your valleys skulk in night,
In God's ripe field the day is cried,
And reapers with their sickles bright
Troop, singing down the mountain-side."

ORDINATION SERVICE.

We were called upon this week to participate in the ordination of five young Chinese preachers at the Cowman Bible Training School of Shanghai. We were led to give our message from John 15:16: "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain." Our thoughts ran on this wise:

1. The church of Christ should always be careful whom it ordains to the sacred ministry. It is required that they shall be fully saved and trained in the right schools for this gospel ministry.

2. Ordination does not give power, but it bestows a certain amount of authority to the ministry, especially in regard to the sacraments of the church and other ordinances. Power for the work of the ministry must come from the Spirit of God. Acts 1:8. Without this power our ministry will be a failure; but if ordination bestows authority we should take care to use this becomingly. Let there be no strut or pomposity or pride because of this bestowment. We are not to use this unfaithfully or to further our own interests.

3. The ordained minister of the gospel should be a preacher of the Word and not a server of tables. Acts 6:2. Make it your holy ambition to be powerful preachers of the gospel. Too many there are who preach things other than the gospel—politics, social programs, modernism, etc. I have found in preaching in many parts of China many churches have gone dead because the preacher failed to preach the gospel of the grace of God. The great need of today is a race of preachers thoroughly consecrated to God and mighty as preachers of the gospel.

4. The ordained man should never put a price upon his office and attainments. Jesus in Matt. 10, is seen sending forth the twelve and he warns them against money. Many preachers put a price upon their training and ordination. They think because they are graduates they should get more money, enjoy higher positions and receive more honors. This is false to the gospel idea of the ministry. When we put the price of money upon our labors we shall go dead in our souls, and our power will depart from us. Then the temptation will be to join business up with the ministry and try to make money; this thing is never done, without a sad loss to the minister's soul as well as to the souls of his people.

5. Jesus in the words of the text, shows that our business is to bear fruit and the kind of fruit which shall abide. Let us see to it that people are converted to God and not converted to us. Let us build the church up in real holiness and our fruit shall remain. Let us follow this brief outline of our message with a few fragmentary thoughts upon the ministry.

Thomas Boston, that eminent Puritan of two hundred years ago, records in his Diary these words: "Reading in secret, my heart was touched with these words, 'Thou shalt catch men.' My soul cried out for their accomplishing in me and I was very desirous how I might follow Christ so as to be a fisher of men, and for my own instruction I addressed myself to the consideration of that point."

Dr. F. B. Meyer calls attention to the Greek of 2 Tim. 2:26, which makes it read: "Thou shalt catch in order to keep alive."

Touching the power bestowed upon the ministry, Dr. Meyer has the following significant thoughts:

1. We must refuse to employ Divine Power for selfish uses. Then we may be trusted with it on behalf of others and God will see to our needs.

2. True Rulership is won, not by conflict or arms, but by service, sacrifice and suffering unto death.

3. Divine Power is granted, never for purposes of vain glory or ostentation, but for the help and blessing of others.

4. When our Lord is about to fashion a vessel unto honor, meet for his use, whether it be of gold and silver or of wood and earth, he has to establish his absolute authority and right to command.

Let me add to the above that perhaps the most tragic things to be witnessed today are preachers and missionaries who have lost the vision and the power. The following from a vigorous writer illustrates the thought very powerfully:

"Balzac, the great French novelist, built himself a wonderful mansion, but when it was completed he found that he had no money left with which to furnish it. So he furnished it with labels. Here a label represented a precious vase, there another one stood for a costly table, that label nailed upon the wall bears the name of a priceless picture, and the dozen labels in yonder empty room bid you imagine furniture fit for a king's palace. The tragedy of it! When men have lost the reality and try to live by appearances. When they have lost the power of godliness and hold to the form, when the golden shields have gone and we have to make shields of brass. So many of us lose our souls and know that we have lost them, then try to content our hearts by saying, 'Well, at least I have been successful.' Making shields of brass because we have lost the shields of gold." 2 Chron. 12:9, 10.

A LITTLE CHILD SHALL LEAD THEM.

That good Presbyterian Missionary, Charles Ernest Scott, of Tsingtan, tells some thrilling things in his book, "China from Within," published by The Sunday School Times of Philadelphia. One of his most touching sketches is about a Communion service which began with a distinct disappointment and closed up in a triumph. The service was held in a primitive church in the house packed full of people.

On the table, covered by a dirty towel, was a foreign beef bottle containing native wine, plates with whole Chinese biscuits upon them, and several dirty and cracked bowls. The minister groaned inside. Here was not the time or place to remove the bottle or to rebuke the elders. So with a prayer for grace the minister began his sermon. In the midst of it some naked boys, standing just in front of the communion table, called the preacher's attention to a big-lettered poster in English and Chinese which hung across the paper panes of the window sash—"Pabst Beer Is Always Pure!"

Another episode broke in upon the service when a patriarch in years and in the faith, who had come a long way and walked laboriously, but who wanted to be there to meet the Lord, tottered in. All—boys and girls, men and women—arose to receive him, and the preacher stopped preaching till he had seated the old man directly in front of him. He was an interesting study—bronzed, wrinkled, and bent, his face placid and benignant.

A little bright-eyed lad attracted the attention of the preacher. Though only six years old, he listened intently, occasionally looking wistfully at the elements on the table.

As I dwelt upon the love and pity of Christ, the boy's face filled with distress, and soon he left the room in tears. One elder followed him outside to learn what was the trouble. He answered: "I love Jesus, and want to be baptized and join the church!"

Thinking this a mere childish whim, the elder questioned and prayed with him, and counselled him to keep on learning the Doctrine so that he might enter the church when older. Then the lad returned to his backless stool, to sit there not many more minutes listening before he began to weep, this time more intensely. The elder took him outside, talked and prayed with him a second time, and comforted his heart by promising that he would at once tell the Session.

When I had finished speaking the elder arose, and with trembling lips told the audience how smitten he had felt that no adult was willing to confess Christ, and none even of the schoolboys; and that this lad, a Chinese Samuel, had arisen—a rebuke to himself and to them all—stedfast in his conviction to confess Jesus before all. What should be done? His conscience troubled him till he had spoken out this matter. Could the lad so young be received into the church at once? Was there reason for it? Certainly this was not according to custom!

After a solemn silence the other elder, a big, dignified man, a mission-school teacher of many years' experience arose. He was one of the few Christian leaders who, on a black day, denied his Lord and recanted under Boxer torture. Now, in a husky voice he said: "Let the Session here and now examine this little one!" Then, by way of proof he turned to passages in the New Testament, and read them slowly and distinctly, that all might hear and understand.

SHOULD HE BE RECEIVED?

As the lad was put on a stool in front of all the people, a hush fell upon the room—and remained. Fearlessly he stood there, eager for the examination, his big black eyes lustrous with love to Jesus. His mother was a school-teacher, young and pretty and neatly dressed, who had been deserted by her bright and educated husband for becoming a Christian. It seemed natural for the mother, quietly and unbidden, to come from the rear and stand with her arm about him, a mist of joy in her eyes. Then his older sister, a baptized communicant, also came and stood on his other side.

But it did not end there. Seven large schoolboys arose and confessed Christ, and were examined; also the wife of the boys' teacher; also four big girls in the girls' school. They were out of heathen homes, but made a good witness, and knew what they were doing and what it involved of persecution. The Holy Spirit manifestly worked. Then a man got up whom I had hoped would meet with the Session earlier in the evening. He was illiterate, but influential. More than a year before I had taught him the Lord's Prayer. He was repentant and desirous to learn, but in his ignorance had lacked courage. He feared his family. Having money, they could make it especially hard for him.

All these were that night received by the Session. It was a blessed communion. So grateful to God were some of the women for what they experienced that night, that after the celebration of the Supper they did what we had long been powerless to persuade them, unwilling, to do. They had no money, so they brought their most prized earthly possessions: ear-rings, bracelets, rings—big, cheap, and for the most part crude and ugly gewgaws, of little intrinsic value, but the best they had—and laid them on the altar toward the salary of a Bible woman, fearfully needed in their midst. This so stirred the men that they subscribed the balance needed.

The people had not wanted special services nor a revival. Now they wanted both; and this Spirit-refreshing opened the way for a series of tent meetings, resulting in a blessing to church and heathen.

LEARNING TO TRUST GOD.

Rev. Abraham Lawrence.

WE will never learn to trust God until we trust him. We do not mean by this that we are to start out by asking him to remove "the mountain." Neither do we mean that we are to ask him to do some wonderful thing so that he may teach us to trust him by answering our prayer. Prayer is great, and something that very few of us do enough of, but there is this abiding trust that pleases our Father better.

God loves for his children to come to him with their sorrows and their pleasures, just as much as we love for our children to come to us with theirs. Many a time has a little one had some one to tear down its mud man, and with a breaking heart it comes to us with its sorrow. We take the little fellow in our arms, kiss away its tears, speak some comforting word into its waiting ears, and then give it some other toy to play with. It goes away happy—even forgetting it ever had a mud man. That is just the way that God does us when we go to him with our troubles. He always gives us something so much better than we lost that our troubles soon vanish.

Why don't we trust our Heavenly Parent as much for our needs, as our children trust us? Listen: He says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest . . . And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. . . . Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted. . . . To comfort all that mourn; To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness. . . . But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. . . . Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed. Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart. Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass."

Some morning we get up with a burden on our heart for something or for someone. We go to the Father, telling him our desire.

While yet on our knees we get the assurance that the thing is granted. We arise from there with a praise on our lips, and a joy in our heart that he has heard and answered our prayer. This is not trusting God. There is no need of trust here; we have the assurance—we know that the thing will come to pass just as we desired. Trusting God is to take him at his word, without any feeling, without any witness of the Spirit, and when everything is going contrary to what we expected.

Let us illustrate in a mother's own words: Our little child was just ready to start to school. He was in the very best of health. We had great hopes of him becoming a help to sorrowing mankind. He was exceedingly smart. He had learned so fast at home that he could take up the second-year work at school. But alas! on the first morning of school he awakes with a fever. But on second thought we said "that will not amount to much, it is only five o'clock, and there is no need of starting until half past eight." We will just tell Jesus about it as we have been in the habit of doing, go on about our breakfast, and have everything ready for him to start on time. When breakfast was ready the temperature is just a little higher. We didn't say anything about it to husband, as he had to work, and we did not want to give him any extra anxiety. We didn't eat much breakfast. After the meal was over, we both went in and knelt by the bedside and prayed to the Father, telling him about the child's sickness. We arose from our knees, fully expecting that he would be able to go to school. As husband leaves, he assures us that everything will be all right. I watch him as he passes on down the walk and out at the gate. He turns and waves me a farewell. I turn and go back to my child, fully expecting him to be able to start to school on time. But not so, instead of him being able to get up and dress, he is worse. I washed no dishes that morning; I made no beds; I swept no floors; I ate no dinner; I wept, prayed, and watched my darling child grow worse. Husband comes in from work and asks, "How did Jack get along at school?" Before I had time to answer, he noticed the child on the bed. Neither of us ate any supper. Things like this are hard to bear. He had been sick before, but only for a few hours. Surely he will be well in a few days. But no, not so. All that night we did all we could; all that human hands and human minds could do, was done; but to no avail. As he would look up into my face, with swollen eyes, and place his little hot hands on my cheeks—friends, if you have never gone through this, I can't begin to tell you the agony of what we suffered that night. He left us. He was placed in that box. He was carried out and lowered into the grave. As he was covered over with the earth, my hopes died. Husband led me back to what had been home. As we entered the gate, there was his wagon by the side of the walk. There was the swing dangling from the limb of the old elm tree, and his cap lying at its root. The mud man was just beginning to crumble. But Jack wasn't to be seen. As we entered the house, there were the prints of his dirty fingers on the door, but no prattling feet, no outstretched arms, no voice was heard—all was still. Friends, hours like this are dark. No wonder we human beings fail!

Things like this are real; we all have them to meet. None of us stay here long; soon or late we all go the same way—the way of death. Only one thing matters—are we ready to go? If no children died, there would be no children in heaven. What would heaven be without children? At one time this mother went down on her knees promising God that this child should be left completely in his care. When the child was sick, she trusted him for its healing. When it began to learn, she trusted him for its education. When it was out of her sight, she trusted him for its safety, but is she trusting him now? It is easy to trust when we can see or feel that things are going our way. But when all is dark, as in this woman's case, can we trust him then? Listen to what Job says: "Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord." In the verse before this it says: "Then Job arose, and rent his mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down upon the ground, and worshipped." Are we worshipping God and thanking him for the disappointments, or are we just crying like the child did over the

CHRIST'S MASTER PRAYER.

Evangelist H. O. Jacobsen.

JOHN 17TH CHAPTER.

WE draw near to the Master with deep reverence as we listen to the most remarkable and marvelous prayer that ever fell from his immaculate lips. It was a fitting close-up to his last address to his disciples recorded in the 14th, 15th and 16th chapters of John's Gospel.

Jesus spoke these words and lifted up his eyes unto heaven and said, "Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify Thee." The Master's upward look was commonplace with him. His gaze was ever heavenward. It was fitting that he should now turn his whole attention to prayer; to the ministry of intercession; for he is now entering upon his high priestly position as the Son of God.

Prayer is always the fitting preparation for all the hardships of life. Prayer changes things; prayer strengthens, empowers, releases the pressure of life's burdens, elevates and visualizes. It was the need of the hour that gave birth to this most wonderful prayer. He must pray for himself; he must pray for his disciples with whom he had lived, labored and suffered these more than three years. He must also pray for all the saints of all coming generations. This prayer is orderly, calm, sublime, definite and reaches down to the very depths of the heart's needs.

Father! What a world of meaning in this one word! Not everyone can address God as such. He is the Creator of the universe, but he is only the Father of those whom he has begotten. It takes the experience of regeneration to be able to pray the Lord's prayer correctly.

Christ was dependent on the Father as we are. In view of the fact that he was God incarnate in the flesh, yet he leans upon the Father for all power and strength to do all his mighty works. Every miracle performed, every word spoken, every kind deed done, was through the power of the Father. How precious was the name of Father to Jesus. Unto him he carried the tasks laid upon his shoulders; unto him he sought refuge when the waves beat high. He lived in the heavenlies; he breathed the ozone of that other world; he spent many a cold, dark and lonely night on the mountain heights in communion with his Father.

THE HOUR HAS COME.

What hour? The Hour. The supreme hour, the tragical hour, the hour of suffering, agony, shame, blackness and hellishness; the hour of all hours, when the forces of heaven and hell would collide; when the conquest of all ages would be fought out, when the supreme sacrifice for the sins of the whole world would take place. The hour when Isaiah's prophecy would be fulfilled; the hour when Satan should forever be a conquered foe. When Christ said, "It is finished," he meant that all previous oblations and blood sacrifices were forever put aside; that a new and living way had been opened into the holiest of all. Every sin could now be pardoned, every heart could be cleansed and purified. Christ had paid the supreme price for the sins of the human race and all who will could be saved.

Christ's sufferings were finished; the plan of redemption was completed; the sin question was settled. There is therefore no stone unturned; there is nothing left for man to do but to exercise faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, for the salvation of the soul, through the merits of the atoning blood.

GLORIFY THY SON.

In these opening verses of John 17th chapter, Jesus is engaged in praying for himself. To be fitted to serve others we must get qualified ourselves. This prayer—"Glorify thy Son"—has a very deep meaning. In the first place, it teaches us that we can never truly glorify ourselves. There is a world of difference in glorifying ourselves and letting the Lord do it. In the next place, there is an absolute unselfishness in this prayer, as Christ adds, "that thy Son may glorify thee." If Jesus needed this glory from the Father, do not we, as his children, need it much more? It is only as we possess this glory that we are enabled to glorify the Father. We might well pray, save me, that I may save others; sanctify me, that I may see others sanctified; enlighten me, that I may be able to enlighten others; inspire me, that I may inspire others.

The word glorify, means to illuminate, to magnify, to reflect. In the body of Christ's humiliation we do not see his glory; his glory is veiled, but when we see him on the Mount of Transfiguration we see God pulling aside the curtain of his humanity and giving us a glimpse of his real glory. In the Isle of Patmos John gets another glimpse of the same glory and he falls prostrate at this marvelous revelation. And who would not? No one is satisfied with inferiority who has had superiority. Christ longs for his former heavenly glory which he enjoyed before his humiliation, hence he prays, "Glorify thy Son."

Before we consider the character of his heavenly glory let us prayerfully meditate for a moment on one phase of his glory of which I believe his cruel suffering and death are a part. Did not the Father glorify his Son on that shameful, rugged cross? Where in all the history of mankind can we find such a marvelous display of divine glory as illuminated that dark scene? Here shines the diamond of love in all its splendor. He prays for his crucifiers; here we have the glory of forgiveness; the glory of innocent suffering, the glory of sacrifice. Yes, his prayer was heard; the Father did really glorify his Son on the cross. No words could more adequately picture to us the radiant glory of the cross than the words of the poet when he sings:

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime.

"When the woes of life o'ertake me,
Hopes deceive and fears annoy,
Never shall the cross forsake me,
Lo! it glows with peace and joy.

"When the sun of bliss is beaming
Light and love upon my way,
From the cross the radiance streaming,
Adds more luster to the day."

"Bane and blessing, pain and pleasure,
By the cross are sanctified;
Peace is there that knows no measure,
Joys that through all time abide."

In verses two and three Jesus speaks of the power given to him by the Father over all flesh; that he might give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. This does not teach predestination, as many would have us believe; it merely gives us to understand that no one can come to the Son except the Father draweth him. Every converted man and woman is the Father's gift to the Son. In the ninth verse, we find this same thought expressed when Jesus says, "I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me; for they are thine."

Jesus pauses abruptly in his prayer to explain the secret of eternal life. "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." To know God in the true sense of the word, is to be saved. "Hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments." (1 John 2:3).

I HAVE GLORIFIED THEE ON THE EARTH.

What individual has ever lived in this world who has put such a display of glory into the world as Jesus? His footprints across the sands of time are footprints of Divine glory.

Jesus glorified the very soil he trod upon. He immortalized every city, village and hamlet he ever visited. His followers by the hundreds of thousands have, during the past centuries, flocked to tread upon the very spots which he glorified with his presence. He glorified the Word by living it before men. He was God's word incarnated in the flesh. He glorified the Father by revealing the great Father's heart of love to a sinful world. He could truly say, "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father."

He glorified childhood by lifting a little child up in their midst saying, "Except ye be converted and become as a little child, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven."

He glorified the Father by stilling the angry waves of Galilee; by rebuking the evil spirits; by healing the sick, by raising the dead; by speaking as no man ever spake; by saving the souls of men which, after all, was the greatest of all his marvelous works. What a testimony to give in the closing hours of his human life, to be able to say, "I have glorified thee on the earth." Can you and I say it, even though we must do it in a less degree? His divine mission to the world was to glorify the Father. Can ours be any less?

Am I glorifying the Father by a life dedicated to God and my fellowmen? No life that is not cleansed from sin can truly glorify him. No soul that is not shining for Jesus is glorifying him, for Jesus commanded, let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and thereby glorify your Father which is in heaven. (Matt. 5:16.)

The Approach of Antichrist.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

World-rule or world-government is coming, and is not so far off, is the opinion of a titled and wealthy English woman, Margaret Haig Thomas, according to a press dispatch. She cites the dictum of the oil kings in raising the price of oil, and she anticipates that the thing will spread to magnates in other lines. That can easily be. The nations and various parts of the world are now so inter-related as to numerous common necessities, that a few men can dictate prices and supply. Rubber is an example. Directly another Mussolini may appear and take all the lines of control into his own hands, including banking and finance. The Bible name for him is Antichrist. John saw him nearly two thousand years before this woman imagined world-rule. He is on the way, his time unknown, and she may be a true prognosticator of how he will obtain his world-wide control. When he comes, he will be anti-Christ, against Christ, exactly the opposite of God-with-us, the Prince of peace. Then woe to such as are not "ready," with oil in their vessels with their lamps, to ascend when the trumpet call of the Bridegroom sounds through the skies! The tribulation of the Jews at the fall of Jerusalem, A. D. 70, was tame beside the world-wide tribulation under the iron hand of Antichrist! "Watch ye, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of man cometh. . . . And what I say unto you, I say unto all, 'Watch'!"

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

A MIRACLE IN BLACK.

REV. C. F. WIMBERLY, D. D.

HE religion of Jesus Christ faces many problems in this age of reckless, thoughtless, pleasure-crazed extravagance. But if we can interpret, in any degree, the signs and movements now in progress, the supreme crux of our day is humanization, if such a word is intelligible. To be more exact, it is an effort to eliminate the supernatural, and abandon all the processes, so long believed in as experiences wrought by the Holy Ghost, such as conviction for sin, repentance, faith, pardon, witness of the Spirit, heart purity, etc. We are handling the most sacred truths of revelation as the surgeon handles his scalpel on diseased tissues, or as the scientist examines the euglena under his microscope. All the joyous emotions of the soul are being explained by the new psychology—whatever that may mean. Then, of course, God's word as to revelation, inspiration, and the truth as it is in Christ must, of necessity, come under the same analysis and dissection.

With these preliminary thoughts before us, we shall tell a little story, and would like to offer it for the scalpel of the inteligencia who may condescend to read these lines. It is a true story that did not find its way into "True Story Magazine." Furthermore, it is not a story told "on good authority," second or third hand, but one of which this writer has personal knowledge of the facts set forth. We saw, we heard, but we did not comprehend. We want some one who is wise "above that which is written" to explain this story.

The writer was conducting a revival in a large southern city, and was being entertained at the parsonage. At this parsonage there was employed as cook, a faithful old darkey of the old regime—loyal, devout, and with simple childlike faith. From time to time, Aunt Sophia, as we shall call her, told us of a little black child who "preached." She said so much about this wonderful child that we urged her to bring her to the parsonage, that we might hear her preach. This she did one Sunday evening.

It will be necessary just here to give the readers a history of this little black tot, or "pickaninny," as they are better known. A very young colored girl became a mother, a thing not uncommon among those people who know little, except the law of primitive instinct. This little black waif was left with an old colored woman living next door to Aunt Sophia, the minister's cook. The child was left with promises to pay for her support, but the mother disappeared and left this old darkey with the burden of this illegitimate child, and her mother was never heard of again.

At our invitation, the old auntie brought the child to the parsonage, two other ministers being present. We asked the old woman the child's age. "Dat chile am 'xactly two yers and nine months ole, kas I had 'er eber sence she am bon."

Close scrutiny revealed the fact that the old woman spoke the truth; she could not have been older. Just a little black child, that normally could not have talked very distinctly, much less carry on a conversation. We have known bright white children that could scarcely articulate at that age. Little "Ruby" spoke her words as distinctly as an adult. Then her old guardian said: "Ruby, de white gemine want ter hyar ye preach fur 'em." Until that moment the child had not spoken a word, but sat in the corner with her hands folded. She arose and walked to the center of the room, and began: "Dear friends, I am going to preach to you from the fourteenth chapter of John." She did not read this wonderful chapter, but she literally preached it, and with emphasis, her black eyes shining, looking us straight in the eyes, and stamping her little feet. Her body seemed transfigured, as she quoted down through the chapter—most of it. Readers, keep in mind, she was but two years and nine months old.

When she came to a stop, she said: "Now everybody sing," and she began one of those lifting negro spirituals, as her little body swayed in perfect rhythm. Then, she began again: "I am now going to preach to you the twenty-third Psalm." And she delivered it in the same enthusiastic manner, quoting it accurately, and swinging her arms in graceful gestures. Two or three other Bible lessons were preached in the same way.

All hands then asked her questions. "Ruby, who taught you how to preach?" She would reply with all her powers: "Jesus told me how." "Where did you learn so much Bible, Ruby?" "Jesus learned it to me." The next move was to question the old auntie as to her teaching Ruby. She replied in explosive language, "Na, suh, I aint tellin' that chile nothin'—I do' know dat Bible, mysef. Dat air chile, she scare me." "Are you sure," we asked her, "that you have not been teaching her to do this preaching?" and she denied it vehemently.

We found out some further mysteries about Ruby. Nearly every morning she would bound out of bed, and call to her auntie, and say: "Jesus give me some more Bible last night," then get out onto the floor and deliver it. She would then beg until the old woman would get a Bible and find it to see if it was right, as the chapters and verse would always be given. Sometimes she would have difficulty in finding it, but when she did, it was always correct. Ruby never missed the reference. Several times those in the room gave her pieces of money, and she took it over and gave it to the old woman, and said: "God will bless you, and I will pray for you." God will bless you, and I will pray for you—think of it—two years and nine months old.

Mention was then made about a dream the child had a few nights before. "Tell the white folks yer dream, Ruby," said the auntie. This is what Ruby told us: "Dreamed that Jesus gave me three brooms, and said, 'Sweep clean, Ruby, for I am coming soon.' I told Jesus I would sweep clean."

A few nights before this interview, the negroes had a lodge gathering in a hall not far away, and they asked to have this little child come and speak for them. The old lady said she asked her what she was going to tell them, and the child said she did not know. They went to the hall; Ruby sat in a chair in a corner with her head bowed to her lap until her name was called. She went at once to the platform and began her speech. She told them: "You will find my sermon in some chapter in Leviticus" (naming the chapter.) It was God saying: "You are my people, and I will be your God, and you shall love and serve me, and I will bless you." She then delivered the same message for us. There was no way possible for this to have been faked, and nothing short of a strange, unexplainable mystery, that this little black child could do what she did. We do not believe a white child can be found in this land who could even be taught—at such an age—to do what this illegitimate waif did. Explain it, somebody.

We were told by Ruby's foster mother that she never played with other children of her own age; she would go with the old woman who cooked for a white family, and sit out on the back steps all day long and amuse herself, but made no trouble for any one. She never asked for anything, but took what was given her, ate it, and said nothing.

Let us pause a moment, for argument, and say that she had been taught all this extraordinary manifestation. Who taught her? Was it this old illiterate cook—a woman who worked every day in a kitchen with, perhaps, one-half day off each week, and Sunday evenings. How could she find the time, if such a scheme should enter her mind? Then let us assume that she was taught, coached, trained to repeat and preach those messages from God's word. Even then, you have a miracle beyond the ken of human mind to fathom. It is a miracle for which there is no human explanation. We challenge any white family who may read these lines to train their own children or grand-children, two years and nine months old, to stand out in the floor and recite the fourteenth chapter of John, or any other chapter. Let them try to teach one of such an age to quote it correctly, and say any of the things this little black child said.

No, it cannot be done. At that age they are only beginning to prattle little words, and many cannot do that with clear articulation. They might be taught to chatter some Mother Goose Rhymes, and they will not get very far with them, either. Let every parent test their own children—all of whom, of course, are unusually bright at the age of little Ruby; teach them to stand out in the floor and recite correctly large parts of several chapters of the Bible, and see how far they will get. We contend that Ruby was a miracle, viewed from any angle.

So in this age of materialism, when every fact of things sacred is being reduced to human interpretation, we find here an exemplification of the words of the Psalmist: "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings, thou hast ordained strength, because of thine enemies." Yes, enemies that seek to explain God, explain Revelation, Salvation and the Blood Atonement, as coming from folklore, traditions and heathen mythologies. The blatant, blaspheming infidel who spurns God and ridicules the Bible, is not in a class with the well paid, high-salaried teacher or preacher who eats the bread of the church, and with the pretence of higher scholarship, quietly and suavely cuts the spinal cord of our faith by raising doubts as to the truth of it all, destroying our faith by humanizing the whole superstructure.

But back to the little negro girl: We want some scholastic to come forward and explain little Ruby and tell us how it happened. Give us the rationale—that is the big word, I think. Some may say to the writer, "Well, what do you say or think about it?" This writer has no explanation, other than the words given by Ruby herself: "Jesus told me. Jesus learned me to preach."

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00.

I Have Been Greatly Impressed,

Says Rev. Arthur Sellers, while reading "Perfect Love," by Rev. J. A. Wood, and believe it the best, clearest, most authoritative for the Methodist doctrine, clearing all doubts and arguments against holiness, than any other book I have found. Indeed, I am impressed to have as many of my members have it as possible.

Brother Sellers' statements are not in the least overdrawn. If you haven't a copy of this book, get it and read it. Price, $1.50.

loss of the mud man? One says "the mud man did not amount to much." That mud man was real to that child; it was his own creation. It is gone now, and the child has something better in its place. This mother had a child who might have stood with the great men of earth, but she has a jewel now who stands with Jesus and the angels of heaven.

Had that child lived, it would have been subject to all the ills and temptations that we come in contact with while here on earth. It is safe now. It will never be sick again; it will have no sorrows; it will never bring any disgrace upon the heads of its parents; neither will it die any more. It will not be away from us long; we will soon go to where it is. Ought not we rejoice instead of weep? In the 22nd verse it says, "In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." Read the first chapter of Job. In the twelfth chapter of second Samuel, we find this: "Then David arose from the earth, and washed and anointed himself, and changed his apparel, and came into the house of the Lord, and worshipped; . . . And he said, While the child was yet alive, I fasted and wept: for I said, Who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live? But now he is dead, wherefore should I fast? can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me."

If we want to be able to fully trust God, we must make sure of one thing: Are we his child? If we are sure of this, we can trust him in everything. He is under obligations to take care of us. In first Peter 5:7, it reads—I expect we had better read the sixth verse, also: "Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time: Casting all your care upon him; For he careth for you." That is what David did. "Let your conversation be without covetousness; and be content with such things as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee. So that we may boldly say, The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me." Heb. 13:5, 6. There are many just such passages, but we will give but one more, which you will find in Romans 8:28: "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." With all these promises, and these are only a part, can't we trust God? But I hear you say "My trials are so great." Well, he is a great God. Paul says, "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us." That is just exactly it, Paul. The suffering that we do here is only fitting us for the kingdom. We want to say again: God knows what is best for his children, and he is not going to allow anything to come upon them that is not for their good, and his glory.

Now, let us search out ourselves: Are we really wanting to serve our Maker, or, are we just wanting to have an easy time and slip into heaven? Christ suffered, and Peter says for us to arm ourselves with the same mind. We don't want to talk so much about suffering, as we want to lay a foundation for our faith to rest on, so that we will be able to trust him when these hard trials come, for they are sure to come: "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you." 1 Peter 4:12. Isn't that plain? We are going to have trials—not only trials, but trials like going through fire. We don't get everything our way any more than a child gets everything its way. The child doesn't know what it needs, neither do we. Let us read the next verse before we quit. "But rejoice"—O my! how can I? Well, that is what the Word says, we did not put it there. We are just trying to get a foundation built so that we can trust God. Let's finish the verse. "But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." Why do we have those hard trials? "That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter 1:7.

Let us dig down a little deeper and see if we can find out what it is to really trust God. Is it when we are in need of something, and go to God telling him our needs, then go on believing that we will get just what we ask for? No. That is not what we mean by trusting God. That is faith, all right. But the trust that we are talking about goes deeper than that. It is trusting him when we fail to get the things which we ask for. It is trusting him while we watch our home burn—it is seeing him in the ashes. Is it trusting when we kneel in prayer and commit the keeping of our husband or son to his care as they go off to the army where thousands of men are falling at the front? No. It is trusting God when we see their mangled forms lowered into the grave, and then be able to say, "Lord, thy will be done, thou knowest best." Old Abraham trusted God. You remember that God told him that in Isaac his seed should be blessed. You also remember that God told him to offer Isaac as a sacrifice. Abraham did not argue the case with God, but did just what he was told. That is trusting God. Then there were the Hebrew children: They did not know whether they would be delivered or not, but they didn't fail God. Daniel knew that lions would eat people. He also knew that he would be thrown into the den of lions if he continued his prayers. He prayed three times a day, and prayed where folks could see him. Many a man and many a woman, yes, little children have trusted in our Lord, even when they knew it meant death. Let us drop this one thought, and give you these few verses, and we are through. Sometimes our Disappointment is his Appointment. If you will notice, we have to change one letter and we have the very thing we need. Disappointment. Change D to H, and we have His-appointment.

Disappointment—His-appointment,
Change one letter, then I see
That the thwarting of my purpose
Is God's better choice for me.

His appointment must be blessing
Though it may come in disguise,
For the end from the beginning
Open to his vision lies.

Disappointment—His-appointment,
Whose? The Lord's who loves me best,
Understands and knows me fully
Who my faith and love would test;

For, like loving earthly parents,
He rejoices when he knows
That his child accepts unquestioned
ALL that from his wisdom flows.

Disappointment—His-appointment,
No good thing will he withhold.
From denials oft we gather
Treasures of his love untold.

Well he knows each broken purpose
Leads to fuller, deeper trust;
And the end of all his dealings
Proves our God is wise and just.

Disappointment—His-appointment,
Lord, I take it then as such,
Like the clay in hands of potter
Yielding wholly to his touch.

All my life's plan in his molding,
Not one single choice be mine.
Let me answer, unrepining
Father, not my will, but THINE.

Jesus Christ our Endowment Fund.

A. W. ORWIG.

There are a considerable number of Scripture passages which warrant our speaking of the Lord Jesus Christ as our endowment fund. Nor are these passages limited to the needs of our spiritual nature. But even if they were thus limited the fact would be glorious indeed. Since, however, it is very evident that the Word teaches us that Jesus may and ought to be appropriated for the needs of the entire man, how great should be our joy and gratitude!

The first of several Bible passages, which I quote as sustaining this view in question, is the one which declares that "Christ is all and in all." He certainly is such as it relates to our spiritual salvation. But in order to be really "all and in all," to us, he must be accessible and available for the needs of our three-fold nature, spirit, soul and body. The apostle Paul's comprehensive prayer that we may be sanctified wholly, and that our whole spirit, soul and body may be preserved blameless, etc., seems to me to be indisputable evidence that we may draw on the Lord, so to speak, for the necessities of our entire being.

Another passage showing that the Lord may be claimed as our endowment fund is: "But my God shall supply all your needs according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." In view of the fact that Paul had just been speaking of physical or temporal blessings, it is very clear that he refers to bodily as well as spiritual necessities. The words indeed make Christ a most blessed and inexhaustible endowment fund for every conceivable need.

Again it is declared that Christ "is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." Surely that takes in the needs of mind, heart and body. For we are not only to have spiritual redemption, but redemption also in a good degree for the body. Nor need we wait until the resurrection day to feel quickening power of Jesus in our bodies. Some of his children are constantly drawing on him as their endowment fund for the various ills of the body. Many Scriptures and many of Christ's own acts warrant them in doing so. He is indeed "a very present help in trouble."

Another very precious passage is: "Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ?" And how can our bodies be members of Christ's body without his life more or less flowing into and quickening our bodies, especially if our faith claims such a result? In Romans 8:11 we read, "If the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Many can testify to the fact that with the incoming of the Holy Spirit they have received new vigor for the body. Others have received actual healing from some special physical malady.

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible" for God to give his children an earnest or foretaste of the resurrection rapture and power long before the resurrection itself, just as he sometimes gives them a blissful foretaste of heaven? Then let us draw on the great Supply for our soul's deepest and constant need. Jesus himself encourages us to do so by many precious invitations and promises. Let him indeed be our Endowment Fund for both our spiritual and temporal actual needs as may be in accordance with his will.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

BEULAH PARK CAMP, ELDORADO, ILLINOIS.

August 11th brought to a close one of the greatest ten-days' camp we have seen for several years. It was great in attendance, of both ministers and laymen. It was great in its high quality of preaching and singing and praying through. We had Brothers Brasher and Rees as preachers, and they gave us their best. The board slated them for 1934 camp. Brother C. C. Rinebarger led the singing, and did a good job of it. He said that the choir did the best he ever saw them do there, and he has been with us several times. Many lasting friends were won for the camp, both ministers and laity. People came many miles from several different states to camp. Some came over 500 miles. This is a strictly interdenominational camp. The writer was re-elected president for third year.

REPORT OF REV. AND MRS. R. P. MARSHALL.

Since our last report we have been busy all the time except for a week at home, the first in four months. We spent the last three weeks in June in a city-wide tabernacle revival in Birmingham, Ala. Rev. Glenn V. Tingley, Radio Chaplain, WBRG, was in charge. When we left at the end of this period, there had been sixty conversions. Since then we learn that the revival has continued for over two months with splendid results.

From Birmingham we went to the little town of Coffeetown, Ala., where we assisted the pastor, Rev. O. H. Vanlandingham, an Asbury boy of good standing. The results were not what we had hoped for, but many testified to a renewed interest in the things of the Kingdom.

After a week at Lewisburg, we drove over to the beautiful Kuttawa Camp Ground near Kuttawa, Ky. Here we were associated with Bishop H. M. DuBose, and Rev. R. L. Sleamaker in a two-weeks' campaign. The Bishop was with us only four days, but in that time delivered eight great gospel messages. It was a great privilege to hear him.

We came directly to Drakesboro, Ky., where another Asbury boy, Rev. Herschel Russell, had pitched a splendid tent and with the aid of Rev. H. H. Jones, our pastor at Central City, and one of the outstanding evangelistic preachers of the state, was beginning the battle. In two days the revival fires were kindled and Friday night saw four gloriously, shoutingly saved and fifty or more hands raised for prayer. Brother Jones is intensely fervent and deeply religious. We are expecting a great revival here.

We have open dates in September and October that we would like to fill in the North or West.

MT. LOOKOUT CAMP MEETING.

The people of Lima and vicinity have been greatly blessed and helped because of the camp meeting at Mt. Lookout, August 1-11. In this age of modernistic thinking, one does not often hear such messages as were delivered by Rev. Andrew Johnson, of Wilmore, Ky., and Rev. E. E. Shelhamer, of Los Angeles, Calif. We had old-time, Holy Ghost preaching that stirred hearts and brought conviction, deep and pungent, to the hearts of many. A number of people, both young and old, were truly awakened, some sanctified, and some reclaimed.

Mrs. Julia Shelhamer led the music. She is faithful to the old hymns that are filled with real burning lines. Brother Johnson cannot preach without soaring to the skies and taking the saints with him. Brother Shelhamer, his co-worker, is a great digger and he succeeded by God's grace in cutting people to the heart. Thank God for such preachers, who hate nothing but sin, who stir the Devil, and who pour out their souls in behalf of sinners. Truly this has been a time of refreshing.

NATIONAL CONVOCATION FOR PRAYER.

Sunday was a great day of victory at the National Convocation for Prayer, August 7-8, Salem Park Camp Grounds, Indianapolis. Evangelist Shaw preached in the morning. Mrs. Mattie McDaniels, conference evangelist of the Free Methodist Church, Terre Haute, brought a message in the afternoon on prevailing prayer. Many were so helped that they praised God aloud. Others wept for joy. At night Mr. Shaw preached on "The Sweeping Revival at Nineveh," and told how wonderfully God used the prophet Jonah in stirring the inhabitants of Nineveh to humble themselves with sackcloth and ashes, and plead for a similar revival in Indianapolis. He stated that if the people of Indianapolis could realize the deplorable condition of our city, they would call for days of fasting and prayer. Mr. Shaw will preach every night this week. Other preachers and evangelists will speak during the day meetings, at 2:30 and 10:30.

The half day and half night of prayer, Saturday afternoon and evening, was a time of great victory. Among the prominent speakers were Rev. E. A. Fidler, returned missionary from India, Rev. M. E. Baker, pastor of the Morris Street M. E. Church, and Rev. C. M. Croft, pastor of the West Michigan M. E. Church.

The following covenant of prayer was unanimously endorsed:

Believing it to be the will of God that the love of Christians, notwithstanding their differences, should be so manifested that all men should be compelled to say of them, "Behold, how these love one another."

Therefore, we do covenant together to call upon God continuously for a more abundant fulfillment of His promises for the outpourings of the Holy Spirit than has yet been witnessed among us, and for a deep general revival of pure and undefiled religion.

At the Monday morning session the following was unanimously endorsed:

Believing that clothing should be modest, and for comfort and health, and for the glory of God, and not to please this ungodly world:

Therefore we do earnestly covenant together to protest against the immodest dress of women, such as short skirts, low necks, and no sleeves, which appeals to the depravity of men, and is doing great harm, and does not please God or his most devoted people.

BROTHER WILLEY'S LETTER.

At nine the next morning we headed for Huanca, a distance of four leagues. There we found about the same conditions existing without a priest or religious service, wide open doors for the Gospel. That evening in Huanca I was taken sick owing to the bad food. The following morning we started again with ten leagues before us. We made a start at four in the morning and rode on through the dark. Then just at the break of day we reached an old Inca trail which led us straight up the mountain on a spiral stairway. This trail leads from the central of Peru to Quito, Ecuador. Suddenly we came out upon a great pampa, table-land about five miles wide and eight long. There we saw the palace of the Inca kings, the foundations of a great structure, the stones in perfect condition, so perfectly smooth and close fitted that it was impossible to insert the blade of a knife between them. How they placed them we may never know. They are a monument to the ingenuity of a great people.

We left the plains and began to rise higher on the level of the snow line of the Andes. Then I began to get sick properly. My weakened condition from the sickness of the day before combined with a real case of seroche made me one sick man. I prayed and suffered. O! that the next rise would be the last! The higher we rose the sicker we became. Late in the afternoon we began to drop. By 5 o'clock, we had reached the pueblo of Banos where we were kindly received and I crawled off the mule and turned into bed at once. The Feasta of Santa Rosa was on in the town so most of the men were drunk but in spite of that we were kindly received. The marvel was we were in the heart of Catholic country expecting fanaticism when it turned out to be just the opposite. We, the first missionaries, to pass through the valley were received with open arms and the cries of "Felicidades!" "Felicidades!" rang in our ears as we left town. I had a talk with a tailor and his wife, both Indians. I told them that perhaps we would be back sometime to preach to them. They at once expressed themselves by saying, "Ojale!" (Would God). The man who gave us the room for the night was a bar-rocha, drunkard. His wife when she heard that we might come back, said, "Perhaps they might stop drinking if you come."

Leaving Banos we started for Margus, the last town on our trip. Again we rose high in the altums, by this time I was feeling fine. We rode all day over some wild but beautiful country, reaching Margus after duskfall. We stopped on the edge of the town when we heard the cries of men and the screams of women. The town was in the midst of a drunken debauchery. Both women and men dancing and crying, celebrating the Feasta of Santa Rosa.

On reaching the dwelling of the Governor, the soldiers were too drunk to understand what we wanted. Finally, we were led into the presence of the Governor and found that he too, could barely manage the duties of his office. He received us kindly, not knowing that we were evangelists. We learned that the town had been the base for a great bandit operation, three years ago. A traveller took his life in hand when he crossed those passes of Margus. At one time there were over six hundred bandits imprisoned in the town. This governor had completely cleaned the surrounding country of banditry. We were glad to find a place to rest our weary bodies that night after riding ten leagues.

Three o'clock the next morning we were out again on our way home, to Huenuco with twelve leagues before us, six to the ranch of our friend where we arrived at 2:10 o'clock in the afternoon and were received with open arms while the servants ran in all directions preparing for our comforts.

We were a rough, dust covered company of missionaries with faces burned a deep red, and our noses blistered by the cold winds of the alturas and hot sun; but "the trials of the road did seem nothing when we got to the end of the way." Realizing the great opportunity of a mission field where from all sides they are calling, "Come over and help us," "Vivan los Evagelistas," "Baje con el cura," our hearts were constrained with compassion for these people without a pastor to lead them in this valley where the feet of missionaries have never trod, other than the Frilles, Franciscan monks.

The first day out we sold all our Bibles. We could have sold a mule load easily so hungry were they for the Word of God. Thus ended our trip into the field over which I hope to ride in the years to come, as rode the great Francis Asbury in the early days of our own country. I am living in anticipation of many souls, great souls coming up from the land of the Incas to lay their crown down with rejoicing before the great King of kings. He Who alone can right their wrongs wrought upon them by conquerors, he the Christ of the Inca Pass.

This letter shall give you an idea of our needs there. First, the mastery of the language, then, I need a lantern and slides covering the life of Christ. Then, too, I need the price of an Indian pony. Pray with me for these things that the Lord might put it on the heart of someone to respond.

Not many weeks hence I go again to the Jungle to relieve those who have been laboring so faithfully these past months. In all our Father has been wonderfully kind and mindful of our every need. We have a sure promise, "Our God is able."

Thomas Willey.

TRI-STATE HOLINESS ASSOCIATION CAMP, Clinton, Pennsylvania.

The fifth annual encampment of The Tri-State Holiness Association Camp came to a close Sunday night, August 11th. These indeed were great days of rejoicing over the presence of the Lord.

The workers for the present year were Eddie E. Patzsch of East Liverpool, Ohio, Chorister; Rev. M. F. Early, of Charlotte, Mich., speaker in The School of The Prophets; Rev. Lawrence Reed of Damascus, Ohio, and the writer, evangelists. Besides these there were as many as thirty visiting and camping ministers giving their prayers and Christian influence toward the success of the camp.

This camp is comparatively a new one, but is largely attended by the people of the surrounding towns and community, some driving in from many miles distance and camping for the entire time. Upon a given test it was found that there were as many as fifteen different religious denominations represented. The camp is situated on a beautiful fifteen acre woodland with towering oaks furnishing ample shade. The earth beneath these majestic oaks, all covered with a carpet of green in the well set grass affords that natural splendor of a landscape view so very attractive to those who have a taste of nature's beauties. Once a camper upon these grounds, you want to come again.

In the many years of evangelistic service, I have never witnessed more clear-cut, definite salvation work being done than was witnessed at this camp. There were numbers of services when the front was filled with penitent souls crying through to victory. It is claimed that perhaps as many as two hundred and fifty souls were definitely saved or sanctified during the ten days. On the Friday night of the camp, there were people praying through at the altar until after three o'clock in the morning. Some who had retired at their tents arose and returned to the services and fell at the altar and prayed through. A special message given under the inspiration of the Spirit was delivered by Evangelist Reed at the 2:30 hour of the morning and seventeen souls responded at the altar and prayed through to blessed victory. The scenes of this night will long be remembered and commented upon by those in attendance.

At the closing Sabbath afternoon service, just preceding a message on "The Bridehood of Christ," given by the writer, an old indebtedness against the dormitory, of $910.00 was raised, then, furthermore, a subscription of $3,000.00 was immediately taken toward the erection of a commodious tabernacle which will seat fifteen hundred, the work to begin next May. One man of Pittsburg, whose dear mother lives and rejoices in the faith of full salvation, pledged the last one thousand.

I shall not soon forget these glorious days of refreshment, the sweet Christian fellowship among the different nationalities and religious denominations, and the bright, shining faces of those bounding from an altar of prayer with such clear evidence of victory over sin.

The writer is now engaged for a twelve-days' campaign in The Robinson Memorial Tabernacle on Bedford Ave., Pittsburg, Pa., with Eddie Patzsch, chorus director. From here we go to Colliers, W. Va., for a ten-days' engagement. We have some open dates for the Autumn months. Please let us hear from any desiring the message of a full gospel.

Fielding T. Howard, Evangelist,

GLOSTER, MISSISSIPPI.

We are happy to report one of the greatest revivals at New Hope Church, near Gloster, Miss., that your humble servant has ever been privileged to be in. It seems that the old spirit that was once manifested there through Dr. Morrison and other great preachers was resurrected. Praise God for such a meeting. We preached to over 2,000 people, and the love of Jesus was abounding. We cannot begin to say approximately the number saved or sanctified, there were so many. The altar filled almost every service. One service every person but a four-year-old boy was in the altar. We had old-fashioned grove prayer meetings and men and women came out of the woods shouting and praising God, and would to God we could find words to express the greatness of the meeting. Mountains of sin were brought low, men seventy years old said they had never seen the like. Why was it? Sometime I would visit homes and members of the family would say, "Go ahead to dinner, I am not eating today." This case not only happened once but many times. Praise God for the old-fashioned salvation that saves and sanctifies.

To love one's family, to love one's neighbors, community, state and nation, to love humanity and to love God lifts man into greatness. No man can be truly great who is not a great lover.

God is Love. The oceans are too shallow, the mountains are too low, the leaves upon all the trees and all the grains of sand upon all the shores, of all the seas, and all the stars in all the great stretches of space, are too few to illustrate the love that is in God. That love must express itself; it must have an object for its outlet, hence that splendid, intellectual, moral, immortal, God-like creature called man. God created him to love him, to have fellowship with him, to endow him with power, to place him in rulership over the lower creations, to bring him into co-operation with himself in working out his eternal purposes of righteousness and glory.

God created man a holy being, that is, morally pure; created him free to choose for himself, thus made it possible for him to sin. He must create him free if he would make him great, an agent rather than a mere instrument; but he made in Christ a provision for man's redemption and restoration to holiness in case he should sin. Says St. Paul, in Ephesians 1:4: "According as he hath chosen us in him (Christ) before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love."

Sin is not an essential part of man; all the sin can be taken out of him and the entire man left as God created him. The whole of creation and redemption was to give to a God of omnipotent power, infinite wisdom and boundless love, a creature for comradeship in the government and enjoyment of a boundless universe throughout an endless eternity. The motive and end was not selfish on the part of God, but it was a love in God which must manifest itself in the blessings, the enjoyment, the love, and the glory of a high order of intelligent, immortal, God-like beings.

God has an objective and is moving forward in co-operation with mankind to a redeemed race, a warless, saloonless world, where there are no drunkards, no naked, hungry children, no broken-hearted women; where diseases are conquered, plagues are unknown, destructive storms disappear, where Tammany Halls are impossible, outside of perdition, and men live in righteousness and holy fellowship. There is a golden age ahead, a time "when the knowledge of the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

God has a program and he is constantly moving forward. He planted the Hebrews in the center of the Orient to reveal him, his laws and his love to the Old World. They failed to accomplish their God-given task and his judgments fell upon them. The wasted plains of Palestine became a vast cemetery, and the barren mountains stood like tombstones over a dead nation that refused to co-operate with God in world redemption.

God lifted up the British Isles, inhabited them with a hearty, sea-going people, broke the yoke of the Roman Catholic Church from their necks, gave them an open Bible, and made them a great Protestant people; made their Island so small that they must sail all seas and touch all shores in order to sell their products and secure their food. He made them the great colonizers of the world. Great Britain has performed a splendid part in the World Program, but now Roman Catholicism has cast the shadows of her superstition and idolatries over England. She has cursed Ireland for centuries. The British Empire is rapidly approaching a crisis and possible disintegration.

God has always made arrangements for such emergencies. After the Hebrews had performed a great part in the plan of world redemption and apostatized, God brought out all the good of their service and made Great Britain headquarters for a working out of his program of mercy and love. If the British fail to preserve an open Bible, an evangelical faith and a saving gospel, he has provided for such an emergency in the building of this vast continent and kept hidden its mountains of iron, its beds of coal, its lakes of oil, its tons of copper, silver and gold, its boundless forests, its vast plains, its countless resources, and its unlimited water power.

Someone has said, "North America is God's last chance with man." The thought is, if, in this country the Church becomes cold, formal, if Civil Government becomes corrupt; if the spirit of selfishness and greed prevails, the natural resources of the land are seized upon and utilized for the enrichment of the few, while the multitudes sink into poverty, ignorance, disease and vice, the history of other nations will be repeated in America; in a word, if civilization fails here in the midst of provisions so abundant and opportunities so great, upon what grounds can we base reasonable expectations for the success of the race in some future age and in some other country.

God created this vast continent and fenced it in with an expanse of ocean waves, and kept it in reservation throughout the centuries waiting for the development of a people loving and demanding civil and religious liberty. He evidently desired a place in which he could grow a larger and better manhood and womanhood than it is possible to produce under the shadow of kings and popes. God created this country for an open Bible, for the evangelical faith, for a larger and better freedom than mankind had known in the history of the world. It was his plan that Christopher Columbus should be born before John Wesley. He discovered this vast and goodly land, and as it began to be peopled with a free, liberty-loving people, John Wesley with his message of a free and full salvation, was to kindle the flame of spiritual awakening and revival fire; and God would warm the heart of the American people, which would create a spiritual light to illuminate the entire world.

In the nature of things God wants man to be holy, cleansed from sin and from selfishness, delivered from all forms of superstition and idolatry. He wants to raise up in this nation a manhood and womanhood who, in their faith and love, will embrace, evangelize, illuminate and bring into righteousness and true holiness all peoples in all the wide circles on the globe.

God calls us to holiness through the atoning merit of Christ, to righteous living and heroic self-sacrificing in these days of imminent peril. Let us stand up and stand together for a great nation wide revival; for the redemption from sin of the vast millions of our fellow-beings; for the spread of scriptural holiness over these lands.

The Bootleggers' Journal.

It is quite true that the bootleggers of the country have many true and tried friends among the editors of the wet press, but would it not be wise for them to gather with them the lawless gang that aids and abets them in violation of the law, the murder of officials, the robbery and ruin of their fellowbeings, and begin the publication of a paper entirely their own. There are any number of suggestive names they might give to such a publication.

They might call their paper, "The Lawless Herald," or "The Criminal's Defender," "The Advocate of Crime" would be suitable; or they might name it "The Devil's Daily." Any one of these names would be suggestive and appropriate for such publication. It has occurred to me that "The Bootleggers' Journal" would be the most suggestive and classic name for such a paper.

In order to attract attention to the inauguration of such a sheet they ought to claim to be deeply interested in the welfare of our republic. They should insist that they belong to no party, and no church, that their motives are unselfish, pure and patriotic; that their great aim is to fight the Methodist Church and hinder it in its purpose to rob the people of their liberty, to protect the young from the seductive influence of the liquor traffic and the cigarette, to bridle, saddle, and bring into subjection to the bootlegging element of this country the Methodist Church, and force her to keep quiet and attend to her business and let the great world of immorality and wickedness supinely alone. It would be a good idea for them to insist that they proposed to protect and defend the poor, downtrodden, persecuted Catholics of this country; that they intended to carry their war to the bitter end against Protestantism until one man by the name of "Smith" be elected to the presidency.

Why should the great lawless bootlegging element leave their interests in the hands of the overworked editors of the wet press, instead of rising in the might of their patriotic enthusiasm and saving this country from the blight of prohibition, Protestantism and prosperity.

There might be the possibility of failure in such an enterprise. In the first place, there are a great many intelligent, patriotic Catholic people in this country who would not want to place the interests of their church and people in the hands of a lawless bootlegging fraternity, and they might insist that they objected to any such publication. We can't believe that the bishops and priests of the Catholic Church have any desire to bring on a conflict between the Catholic and Protestant churches of this country under the leadership of the bootleggers of the nation.

There is another matter to be considered: The entire Protestant press might ignore such a publication and refuse to give it any sort of notice. Silent contempt would be a tremendous disadvantage to such a journal, and it is quite probable that the great Protestant press of the nation would go forward with its fine work for sobriety, peace and happiness among the people, and utterly ignore such a firebrand of lawlessness, thus letting it burn itself out for lack of fuel.

It is to be hoped if such a paper should appear that the church press will ignore it. I could easily conceive of the highest authority in the Catholic Church of this country issuing a bull against such a publication. I think that is what they call it. A bull would mean that the Catholic people would absolutely discount any such publication as undertook to stir up strife and hatred among the Protestant and Catholic people of this nation.

SEED TIME AND HARVEST.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

THE task of preparing the ground for the seed and sowing the grain is not so thrilling as that of the reaping time. The one is faith in action, putting the seed into the soil believing that God's sunshine and rain will come in due time and the glad harvesting will roll around by and by.

But, ere we shall have the delight of harvest we must go through the toil of plowing the soil, throwing out the stones, keeping the noxious weeds cleaned out, which is always an irksome task, nevertheless very necessary, in fact, the only condition on which we may base our hope for a good yield at harvest time.

After the long, toilsome days what a joy it is to go out and reap the bounteous harvest of grain. We forget the arduous toil of the weeks and months that preceded the time of reaping in the joy that comes to the happy toiler as he sees the fruit of his labor so abundantly rewarded.

While this is true in nature, it is also true in grace. We cannot hope for much fruitage in our Christian life unless we are sowing beside all waters, instant in season and out of season in scattering broadcast the seeds by precept and example that will mature, by and by, in some life we have touched as we traveled the highway of life.

We are told by Paul in Galatians 6:9, that "in due season we shall reap, if we faint not." There is the difficulty! We grow weary and become faint-hearted as we wait for the seed to germinate, grow and mature. We are often tempted to be impatient with that boy or girl because they do not do just as we think they should; we expect them to be as we are, without giving them time to grow the Christian graces that we have been developing through the years. Let us remember that we are to give them line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little, until they finally bloom out into young manhood and womanhood, all the result of the seed that we sow into their hearts when they are tender and the soil is fertile, with the credulity of childhood that has been taught that God is good and merciful and that he deserves their love and adoration.

Yes, it is the waiting time that wears us out, that tests our faith and calls for all of our patience and courage and trust to endure as seeing him who is invisible, believing that in due time we shall see the desires of our hearts in a golden harvest of matured grain.

How many mothers, and fathers, too, have prayed and prayed for the prodigal sons and daughters, and Satan has tempted them to give up, saying, "It's no use," but something caused them to hold on and on until, finally the harvest time came and they saw their loved ones garnered into the fold of Christ. Did it not pay to wait patiently on the Lord, and to bide his time to order you to thrust in the sickle and reap? Surely, his promise never fails, though it seems sometimes to tarry long in its fulfillment.

We are admonished in this same letter to the Galatians "not to be weary in well doing," for just out before us is the golden harvest beckoning us to reap the reward of our well doing. Don't give up hope for that boy or girl, that loved one for whom you have been praying so long—nothing is to be gained by this—but remember that,

"Though seed lie buried long in dust,
"Twill not deceive our hope;
The precious grain can ne'er be lost,
For grace insures the crop."

ARE YOU CONVERTED?

J. F. KNAPP, D. D.

THE Rev. W. Percy Hicks, D.D., writing quite recently in The Christian Herald of London, the most widely circulated religious paper abroad, makes this ominous statement: "Plenty of churches can be found where there have been no known conversions for years, and, indeed, in some cases, where such evidence of divine operation is not expected."

Having been engaged in revival work almost exclusively for the past fifteen months, holding meetings among more than fifteen different sections of the Protestant Churches of this Continent, I have come in contact at first hand with instances which verify the conclusion of the Anglican divine just quoted.

I have labored in churches where no seekers' meetings had ever been held before in the whole existence of the society; in others where almost the entire membership refused to stand by the sanest and least sensational of revival movements. One pastor told me of the church in which he had labored for three years. He said that during the time of his incumbency dances were held in the basement of the sanctuary and young people resorted to this amusement armed with their flasks of booze. "Smokers," "little theaters" and other questionable adjuncts definitely allied with the world are now so frequently run in connection with Protestant and evangelical churches that they scarcely cause any comment.

The question at the head of this article arises from this reflection, If the masses of church members were genuinely converted would such worldliness be tolerated in the professed church? For answer we must turn to the Word of God. The Text-book of conversion or the new birth is found in the First Epistle of John where a variety of evidences of regeneration are given. I will recite a few of them:

"Hereby we know that we know him if we keep his commandments.

"He that abideth in him ought himself also so to walk even as he walked.

"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world.

"Therefore the world knoweth us not because it knew him not.

"Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin.

"Marvel not my brethren if the world hate you.

"For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world."

Are dancing, card-playing, theater-going, and other amusements and pleasures of like character, of the "world"? If so, it is evident that those who engage in them are not overcoming the world and hence are not born again.

What does it mean to be converted? Briefly, to have a new life in the soul; in the words of Dr. Doddridge, "such a sense of God in the soul, and such a conviction of our obligation to him, and of our dependence upon him, as shall engage us to make it our great care to conduct ourselves in a manner which we have reason to believe will be pleasing to him." The touch-stone of our deeds ceases to be, Will this proposed action please or profit me and becomes, instead, Will my conduct in this particular please or profit my Divine Master? It is obvious that any one who fails to conscientiously and sincerely apply this test cannot be a converted person.

How are we converted? Through repentance and faith

(1) Repentance. This is what we do. One of the finest outlines of this truth is found in a book once largely circulated, "The Anxious Enquirer," by John Angell James. He says, "Repentance signifies an entire change of men's views, disposition, and conduct, with respect to sin." It includes:

1. Conviction of sin. "No man knows what sin is, and how sinful he is, who does not clearly see that he has deserved to be cast into 'the lake that burneth with fire.'"

2. Self-condemnation. "As long as a person indulges a self-justifying spirit, and is disposed, if not to defend his sins, yet to excuse them, he is not only impenitent, he is not indeed convinced of sin."

3. Sorrow for sin. "Nor let thy sorrow be selfish; mourn more for thy sins as committed against God, than against thyself," or, he might have truthfully added, thy neighbor.

4. Hatred of sin, forsaking of it, and a determination not to repeat it. "The penitent regards sin as the viper that has stung him, and will ever after hate it, dread it, and watch against it."

To the above outline by James the Scriptures require that we add as a part of repentance:

5. Confession of sin and restitution for sin. Only, "If we confess our sins" is Christ "faithful and just to forgive us our sins." Jesus approved with his presence and blessing the conduct of Zacchaeus the publican when he said, "If I have taken anything from any man by false accusation I restore him fourfold."

(2) Faith. Repentance looks upon ourselves in our sinfulness but faith looks up to God in his willingness because of the merits of Jesus' blood, to save a guilty sinner not in his sins but from both the guilt and power of sin.

A Fatal Fallacy. Much is being said and preached concerning "accepting Christ." Many of those who propagate the "acceptance theory" also maintain what is known as "eternal security" which simply means that once having "accepted" Christ no backsliding or sin on our part can change our supposed relationship to God as our Redeeming and Eternal Father. It is bad enough to get a seeker into a false experience but to then impose further upon his credulity and his everlasting safety by telling him that now he has it he cannot lose it, seems to this writer, the shrewdest and most dangerous trap that the devil has ever invented. This is the more dangerous in that it is often set forth by persons who call themselves "fundamentalists" and boast of their orthodoxy upon every occasion. It cannot be too often repeated that without a genuine repentance, as briefly outlined above, there is absolutely no basis for saving faith which resulted in the witness of the Spirit to the new life.

A false experience, ministered by general ignorance of Bible conditions of salvation and through a modernistic or time-serving pulpit, is the supreme danger of the day. It is well enough for every reader, no matter what his profession, to ask himself calmly and in the light of God's truth, "Am I converted?"

Love never goes out of fashion. It is never cast aside like an antiquated robe. It is fit and beautiful in every time and season. It adds some light to the light of childhood. It adorns life's prime. It beautifies old age. We may take it with us through "the valley of the shadow," and we may wear it on the resurrection morning. It is always in fashion. "Love never faileth."—J. H. Jowett.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

WHAT A YOUNG MAN LOST DURING HIS VACATION.

A. W. Orwig.

Howard L— was a member of a certain church in the town of S—, as also of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of that church. He was looked upon as at least a fair sample of a Christian young man.

Howard's parents owned a beautiful cottage in a finely shaded park, where scores of other handsome cottages had been erected. It was a place where religious meetings were annually held. Howard had been to these meetings during one or two summers, and had received considerable profit. It was a very attractive place, and the whole family usually spent a part of each summer there.

During the early part of a certain summer it was proposed, as usual, that the entire family again attend the meetings. There was but one dissenting voice, and that was Howard's.

"Why, Howard," asked his mother, "will you not go with us this year?"

"I have made arrangements to go elsewhere," was his reply.

"But, Howard, do you think it best to have done so just when the meeting is held?"

"Perhaps not, mother; but all the boys in the office begged me to go with them." None of them were Christians except Howard, and he had not yet acquired that strength of Christian character which enabled him to say "no" to the siren voice of the tempter. He knew, moreover, that there would be dancing, card-playing, and the drinking of intoxicants at the place. But he said to himself that he would not indulge in any of these.

Howard supplied himself with various paraphernalia with which to amuse and enjoy himself. His two large valises were well filled with changes of clothing, toilet articles, a few books and the like. Just as he had about finished packing his valises, his mother went to his room, where he was, and saw his Bible lying on the table.

"Are you not going to take this along?" she asked solicitously, holding the Bible in her hand.

"I had intended to, mother, but my valises are both so full that I could not possibly get it in either of them."

"Please let me try," said Howard's mother. And seeing two or three other books in one of the valises, which she thought he did not need as greatly as he needed his Bible, she suggested that he leave one or two of them at home, and take his Bible along.

To this Howard readily consented, but said: "I thought, mother, as I was going to stay only a few weeks, a small Testament and Psalms would answer, and this I had intended to put into my pocket. At this remark Howard's mother's face assumed an increased look of sadness. His seeming indifference to the Word of God really pained her. Besides this, the other books he had put into one of his valises were more or less of a light character,—something merely to amuse, but not to instruct and edify.

Howard and his companions from the office of the large manufacturing establishment, where he and they were employed as book-keepers and stenographers, arrived at the popular summer resort somewhat late in the evening. The place was brilliantly illuminated, and throngs of people were gaily promenading in every direction. The very atmosphere was rife with mirth and hilarity. Bewitching strains of music, boisterous songs, and loud laughter rang out upon the air. In the distance, under a large wooden pavilion, could be seen the gay and excited dancers.

When these six young men retired the first night it was amid considerable boisterous joking. Howard, however, was not as demonstrative as the rest. But certainly he was at a disadvantage for enjoyable and profitable devotions. At home he was accustomed to pray in secret when retiring at night and arising in the morning. To this he added Bible reading. Now he felt he was in a sort of dilemma.

Besides, about two or three hours spent in gaiety did by no means contribute to a devotional spirit or beget a relish for the Word of God. Nor had he the courage to take his Bible out of his valise before the boys. When all of them had gotten into bed, but still talking and laughing loudly, Howard sat on a chair and dropped his head upon a small table and tried to pray. Poor boy, it was at best only saying prayers. Was not his lack of courage to kneel, as also to take his Bible from his valise and read it in the presence of his worldly companions, indeed a loss? But other losses quickly followed.

When Howard professed Christianity and joined the church, he nobly gave up using tobacco. He had been quite a smoker, but felt that he could no longer defile himself with the weed, and spend his money for it. But before his vacation was over, his moral perceptions had been so greatly toned down, that he returned to the filthy practice. Surely this was a loss in Christian stamina and in personal purity.

Of course those young men resolved to make the best of their outing—the best from their standpoint. It was five against one in the battle between right and wrong. Howard did not really mean to compromise with evil; but disregarding the earnest pleas of a noble Christian mother, as well as grieving the Holy Spirit, he was no match against the enticements that surrounded him.

It was not long, however, until Howard found himself taking part in dancing. At first he declined the invitation to do so. But the plea, especially by the young ladies, of "having just a little fun," caused Howard to put his scruples aside. Again and again he yielded to the bewitching whirl, and again there was a drop to a lower spiritual plane. Certainly here was another loss.

On a certain evening some of Howard's companions proposed a few innocent(?) games of cards. But he pleaded ignorance of card-playing as an excuse for refusing. "Oh, we'll teach you how to play in a short time," said one of the company.

"I don't care to learn," was Howard's reply and he really escaped from the snare that evening.

But there was a certain young lady at the resort whose beauty and accomplishments had captivated Howard. She was accordingly invited to a card party by his friends, and before the evening closed he became her pupil in the fascinating game. "With her much fair speech she caused him to yield," (Prov. 7:21). And it is almost needless to say that other evenings found him similarly engaged.

On another occasion some of Howard's associates proposed a visit to a hall beautifully decorated, but where intoxicating liquors were kept in those days. This invitation he promptly declined. The radical things he had so often heard and read against the liquor traffic enabled him to resist the temptation. But the absence of all religious meetings and influences, and the indulgence in one continual round of worldly pleasure had a very marked effect upon Howard's spiritual life. He went home smitten with great barrenness of soul. His attendance at the church services were very irregular; and when he occasionally took part in prayer or personal testimony, there was a painful absence of the Spirit in it.

"Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned? Can one go upon hot coals, and his feet not be burned?" (Prov. 6:27, 28).

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and all the cousins? My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Last week I saw a letter in The Herald from a little girl from Cortez, Colo., and as I used to live there I answered it. I am eleven years old, am in the seventh grade. My birthday is Dec. 24. I like my teacher; he is Mr. Raymond Weekley. Who can guess my first name? It begins with L and ends with N, and has seven letters in it. I would like to hear from some of the cousins. I live on a farm and I live close to a church and I am a member of the M. E. Church. I live close to school. I went to Colorado two years ago to visit my grandma and certainly had a wonderful trip. My uncle used to be a student of Wilmore College. Hope Mr. W. B. is out milking the cows when this letter arrives for I hope to see it in print.

L. Rowena Rowley.

Rt. 2, Ravenswood, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I'm ten years of age and am writing you a few lines to let you know my grandma takes The Pentecostal Herald and also the Christian Herald, both of them are good papers. I want the children to guess my middle name, it begins with M and ends with E. It has five letters. If anybody guesses it I will be glad to write to them. I hope Mr. W. B. is eating his dinner so he won't get this letter. I have four sisters. I think that is pretty fine, don't you? So many letters are in The Pentecostal Herald, I want the children to write to me. I live in College Corner, Ohio, and I suspect I'll always live there.

Gladys McNair.
College Corner, O.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My father is a minister of the gospel. I have a sister larger than myself. I am ten years old and in the sixth grade. I go to Ashburn public school. I have brown eyes, fair complexion, light hair, and am about four feet and three inches tall. My birthday is October 8th. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I can draw a little, and play the piano, and sometimes I write poetry and stories. I am sending you a copy of one of my poems which I wish to see published. It reads as follows:

They Are Needing You and Me.

Away, far over the wide, wide sea,
The people are needing you and me;
Some child away, far over the sea,
Needs some help from you and me.

If you can't go to that far off land,
You can give a little, and help all you can,
You can send your pennies far over the sea,
Where they need help from you and me.

Some poor little child in that heathen land,
Will appreciate the pennies that you hand

Down to them from across the sea,
They are still needing you and me.

A penny isn't much in this rich land,
But over there on that long strand,
Some child would be glad to have in hand

A small, bright penny in that dark land.

Some poor little child that bows down to stone,

Might be taught to worship God alone,
If you would send far over the sea,
The help they are needing from you and me.

I wonder who can guess my first name; it begins with E and ends with E. It is a Bible name and has six letters in it. If you can guess it, please write to me. I hope Mr. W. B. is snoring when my letter arrives as it is my first letter and I wouldn't care for him to read it any way. I want all the cousins to write to me and I will answer all the letters I receive.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have entered this door—the door to the House of Happiness—before, but here I come again, bringing as my excuse for coming again merely this fact: this really is a House of Happiness. (And who doesn't like to enter such a house). I will describe myself again for the benefit(?) of the new cousins. I am just another one of Mississippi's brunettes—black curly hair, dark eyes, and medium complexion. I am sixteen years' old and a Sophomore in high school. But ho! that isn't a description. Here are the things I love to do: watch the coming of spring with her renewal of hopes and aims; look at flowers and pictures and listen to music, three things which help to bring out the best there is in us; read good books that teach me something new and interesting; (of all the little and cheap things of life I think the cheapest is to write or read a book or an article of any kind that lowers the moral standard). I love to read the books of Proverbs and St. John; I love to read Shakespeare's works—but this is getting deep—I love to go to socials and weiner roasts and eat peanuts! And oh, yes, my dream is to visit every state in the Union and then the Hawaiian Islands. Aunt Bettie, if you will permit me to I will tell the cousins about a little incident that happened not long ago. There was an Indian Chief passing through town and was persuaded to visit our school. He spoke our language quite well so he spoke before the whole school. He told of Indian life—work-a-day, social, and religious—finally ending with this: "There be one thing which an Indian sees that The Great Spirit cannot see." You may imagine our astonishment at such talk. The old Chief paused and as no one spoke, went on, "The Spirit cannot see his equal while an Indian, or a pale face can see his equal." I must close. Good-bye and love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

P. S.—I'll promise to write some poetry for our page soon. Yes, I scribble a little as well as eat peanuts!

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit me into your happy band of boys and girls? I love to read letters very much, especially if they are written to me. Do you cousins hunt wild flowers? I hunt them lots of times. We have violets and daisies in the woods. I belong to the M. E. Church at Mount Carmel. We have a small church there, but it is fixed very nice. We have an excellent pastor, Bro. Vickers. I hope Mr. W. B. isn't watching so close when my letter gets there.

FALLEN ASLEEP

VAN VALKENBURGH.

Mrs. Ellen Thomson Van Valkenburgh, wife of the late Rev. Francis Dwight Van Valkenburgh, slipped away to the Glory Land on Wednesday, July 24th, 1929. She was married to Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh on the Seashore Camp Grounds, July 25th, 1888. She at once took up the task of rearing to manhood and womanhood a large family of seven children, and the career of this family fully justifies her noble self-sacrifice. Her husband was a minister of some ability, and early joined the ranks of the Holiness Movement. He gave himself in great abandon to the spread of scriptural holiness. Mrs. Van Valkenburgh, as his wife, made large sacrifices in order to see her husband and family properly clothed and cared for. She endured the hardships of an itinerant minister's home, as seeing him who sees the life of his children, and rewards accordingly. She was born in Carick Macross, Ireland, and came to America when only 13 years of age. The funeral services were held in the Eighth St. Methodist Episcopal Church, in New Orleans, La. The funeral sermon was delivered by Dr. H. W. Knight, and she was laid to rest by her husband in Biloxi, Miss. B. W. V. V.

MARCUM.

Mr. E. B. Marcum, 57 years old, departed this life four months ago. He was wounded at the L. & N. Railroad yards in Paris, Tenn. While he was doing some inspection work a cut of cars, unseen by him, struck the cars he was inspecting, knocking him underneath the wheels. He was taken to the hospital where he lived two hours and fifteen minutes. Then the angels came and took him to join his friends, relatives and Jesus. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Eugenia Marcum, two sons, two daughters and a host of friends and relatives; among them are two brothers, T. N. Marcum, Marion Marcum, and three sisters, Mrs. E. J. King, Mrs. R. A. Montgomery and Mrs. M. J. Scanlon. He was a devoted Christian, and we sadly regret giving him up, but realize our loss is Heaven's gain. We miss him, but God had a better place for him, and some day we expect to meet him where partings are no more.

There are loved ones in the Glory,
Whose dear forms we often miss,
When you close your earthly story,
Will you join them in the bliss?

You can picture happy gatherings,
Round the fireside long ago,
And you think of tearful partings
When they left you here below.

One by one their seats are emptied,
One by one they are going away.
Now the family is parted,
Will it be complete some day?

His Cousin,
Mrs. Annie Higdon.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

D. C.: "For over a month I have been in a run-down, mental condition, a spirit of depression and melancholy which is very distressing and discouraging. Will you pray for me that I may be brought out of this distressing condition soon."

A reader of The Herald earnestly desires the prayers of its readers for her son and his family, that they may be blessed spiritually, and that he may get work to support his family. Also, that her 15-year-old son may be a real Christian worker for the Lord.

Mrs. W. E. F.: "Please to pray for my husband, that he may know he has been born again."

Mrs. A. M. R.: "Will the readers of The Herald pray for my body to be healed?"

Adam Clarke---Great Commentary

Dr. Clarke was one of a long succession of men who, in every age of the Christian Church, have applied the best energies of their intellect and heart to the study and interpretation of the Scriptures. The seven gifts which, according to Augustine, the true expositor of Scripture must possess—reverence, piety, science, fortitude, prudence, cleanness of heart, and heavenly wisdom—were his portions.

The studies of his earlier years always had a bearing on this great work. From the beginning he felt the need of being taught by God to understand his own word. Referring to this, he says: "No man ever taught me the doctrine I embrace; I received it singly by reading the Bible."

Sufficiently critical to aid the inquiries of the more serious student, and yet sufficiently popular to serve the purpose of general edification.

He gives a lucid view of the several books of Scripture, as to their dates and authors, their scope and connection; he expounds the original text in a manner adapted to the deficiencies of the reader; he elucidates difficulties in chronology, history, and oriental manners; he develops the grand doctrines of revelation, and applies the whole to the great concerns of human salvation and duty.

One leading feature in its character is independence in thinking. While he availed himself of the labors of others, the great number of his expositions are emphatically his own.

Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary on the Bible is one of the noblest works of the class in the entire domain of sacred literature. It is a thesaurus of general learning.

Its luminous expositions of the Law and the Gospel; its earnest and forcible appeals to the conscience of the sinner and the unbeliever; its rich counsels for the well-understood wants of the Christian; its inner life; its endless exhibitions of general knowledge; and its valuable aids to the students of those holy tongues in which revelation took its first recorded forms—all will render this book the companion and the counselor of multitudes as long as the English language may endure. The man who accomplished it achieved immortality, his name having become identified with an indestructible monument of learning and religion.

We commend it as the most spiritual commentary published. 6 large volumes, good paper, good binding, new type.

A NEW BOOK

Dr. Arthur T. O'Rear has written a book, "The Activity of the Holy Spirit," which is a distinct contribution to the more recent literature on this subject. The book is introduced by Bishop Sam Hay.

Dr. O'Rear couples theological soundness with a new method of approach. The discussion is very comprehensive, providing a kind of education in spiritual things that is greatly needed. While his book is constructive and positive, it deals negatively with false movements and modern errors regarding the Holy Spirit and furnishes new light under this head.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XI.—September 15, 1929.

Subject.—Teaching the Law of God. Nehemiah 8:1-18.

Golden Text.—The entrance of thy words giveth light. Psalm 119:130.

Time.—About B. C. 445.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—God's Law is the basis of all good law. When Moses inspired by the Divine Spirit, wrote the Pentateuch, he was writing the foundation principles of all civil government for all peoples, and for all ages. He wrote that which theocratic civilization must have, that, without which, it cannot exist. Do away with the Divine Law given in the Old Testament, and men have nothing left but heathenism. Modernism, with all its boasting, is only heathenism. Since it denies the inspiration of our Holy Bible, its own highest claims will not put it beyond a sort of educated paganism. Eddyism makes big claims, but it is only the Hindooism of India with the name "Christian Science" plastered on it to fool the people. Its devotees are only refined heathen.

It is proper to state here that men are not only under obligation to obey divine law, but human law also. St. Paul settles that matter in Rom. 13: "Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there is no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation."

Our nation is in a peculiar condition. Our law books are overloaded. We have laws almost beyond number, and yet we are making more every passing year. One is reminded of the ancient Jews. The traditions of the elders outnumbered and outweighed the laws of God. We write our constitutions, and then make laws to enforce our constitutions, and then some more laws to enforce the laws we make to enforce our constitutions. Our national law against narcotics, if properly enforced, would eliminate the entire drug habit from opium to nicotine; but we have some loopholes through which the devil plays his game to the curse of our people. America has one need that mounts above all her other needs: Obedience to law!

Our people need instruction concerning law—both national and state. Multitudes of them have never even read the Federal Constitution. The teaching forces of the nation, from school-room to pulpit, should stress this important matter.

We are in need of a conscience in regard to the Dignity of Law. Our courts have grown so lax in the enforcement of law, that they have become a "laughing stock." Thank God for every upright judge and for every honest lawyer in the land; but when one has written those words he must cry to Heaven for a moral revolution that will clean up our courts and send a gang of little legal scamps to the bow-wows, or maybe to the plow-handles or the coal-pits.

Do not imagine for one moment that I am off my subject. The laws of God and the laws of men must stand or fall together. He who will not obey the one will not obey the other. All good men obey both. He who would annul human law is a bad citizen and a traitor to his country. He who disobeys God's law is a sinner and a traitor against the Divine Government.

All honor to President Hoover in his stand for law enforcement. Every good citizen in the entire nation is backing him. Some of our big newspapers need enough boycotting to give them a thrill—maybe a chill would be better. One blushes for shame as he reads their slurs at the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act. And what shall one say about their constant lying concerning prohibition? They should be builders of strong sentiment in favor of law and order; but their present purpose seems to be to cultivate hotbeds of anarchy and crime.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. All the people.—This verse needs little comment; but I call attention to the eagerness of the people to have God's law read to them. We have before remarked that the people had but few copies of the law.

2. Ezra the Priest. We have dealt with him before. He, like Nehemiah, had come out of Babylonia, being a descendant of some Hebrew captive. Note that the law was read to both sexes. And those that could hear with understanding.—Children who were old enough to understand.

3. One thought here needs to be specially noted: "The ears of all the people were attentive unto the book of the law." Careless hearers are a nuisance.

5. Opened the book.—Unrolled it. Above the people.—Standing on a sort of pulpit. All the people stood up.—A mark of respect among the Jews toward the Word of God.

8. Blessed the LORD.—Praised the Lord. Amen!—Be it so. Lifting up their hands.—An act of worship that seems to be instinctive. Here we have true Oriental form of worship.

8. Read . . . and gave the sense.—Any other sort of reading is nonsense. Some preachers should read this verse at least twice every day till they comprehend its meaning.

9. Tirshatha.—Nehemiah's title as governor of the province. The people wept when they heard the reading of the law, because they felt condemned on account of their sins; but Nehemiah and Ezra comforted them. They really knew almost nothing about God's law, having been shut off from it during the long captivity and their stay in Babylon after their release.

10. Just one thought here: "For the joy of the LORD is your strength." That is a blessed word. The joy of the world profits little; but the soul that is filled with the joy of the Lord can run through a troop of the enemy.

11. Hold your peace.—Do not weep.

12. How happy they were. Notwithstanding all their sinfulness, Jehovah had nothing against them. They were forgiven.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

E. C. Milby, song evangelist, Greensburg, Ky., who recently led the great choir and congregation at Indian Spring Camp Meeting to the delight of all present.

Rev. J. B. McBride has had to change his date for Mahaska, Kan., September 15-29, and has that date open for any one who may desire the services of this untiring worker for the Lord. He writes that "Some one will want it, for the Lord never lets me be idle." Brother McBride is one of our best and most successful evangelists. He may be reached by letter or wire at Beech Grove, Ark., care W. P. Breckenridge.

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister and his song leader, Ralph L. Morris, are in a meeting at the First Baptist Church, Safford, Arizona, and request The Herald readers to remember them in prayer.

Rev. C. H. Babcock will conduct a revival in the Church of the Nazarene, corner of Moreland and Kirkwood Avenues, Atlanta, Ga., September 30 to October 14. E. C. Milby, of Greensburg, Ky., will have charge of the music. For particulars, address Rev. Oscar Hudson, pastor, 125 Moreland Ave., Atlanta, Ga.

G. A. Cave: "I was born in the Blue Ridge Mountains of old Virginia 45 years ago. I lived in the church without salvation until I was 28 years of age; then the Holy Spirit showed me my lost condition and I began to pray and seek for the forgiveness of my sins. I went out into the mountains and made an altar of an old Chestnut log and there gave my heart to the Lord. I was a slave to cigarettes and tobacco from which I was wonderfully delivered. I was called to preach which I have been doing the best I could the past fifteen years. I travel over the mountains on foot to carry the gospel to the poor people. I ask the prayers of The Herald readers, and if any of you have old clothing to spare we would be glad to receive it. My address is Stanley, Va."

The Illinois State Holiness Association will hold their annual convention in Chicago, Ill., beginning Sept. 5 to 15, inclusive. We have secured the large White City Tabernacle for this date. The Tabernacle is located on South Park Ave., near 63rd St. It is just across the street from the White City Amusement Park which is located on the Southside of the city. Rev. John E. Hewson, from Indianapolis, Ind., will be the evangelist. Special

Mrs. VanLear, Sec.

Miss Daisy Beatty, of Eddyville, Ky., wishes to announce that she is available for Evangelistic singing. She has a trained voice, is ready for Solo work and song leading. For reference, inquire of Bro. Frank Cox of Crofton, Ky., where she helped in a revival; also Bro. Bandy, Shepherdsville, Ky., or her pastor, Rev. R. L. Sleamaker, Eddyville, Ky.

O. L. Forrester: "Evangelist H. J. Ranton, from Yakima, Wash., was with us for a series of meetings in four different places connected with our work in this community, for about four months. Brother Ranton has proved himself a real brother indeed—enthusiastic, zealous, with a consuming love for souls, praying day and night, and working all the time for the salvation of souls and the building up of God's people. He preaches fearlessly, pungently and with Holy Ghost power, so sinners are brought under conviction, and saved, and backslidden Christians are brought back to God. He invariably gets the Christians to a higher experience, and sets a higher standard for the Christian life. Some young people got the vision for service, others got a new experience, and the church was generally toned up. There were also some remarkable cases of healing in answer to prayer.

Brother Ranton dealt also in a striking way with such public questions as marriage and the home, and the evils of the public dance. Any church which runs at a low level will do well to get the assistance of Brother Ranton, and he will, under God, help to revive it all along the line. He is most loyal to the pastor and the highest interests of the church. He works purely for the glory of God, and the highest spiritual good of his fellowmen. God bless him good, and the church that engages his assistance."

A NEW BULLETIN IDEA FOR PASTORS.

The Layman Company is now putting out its Tithing Pamphlets in four-page Bulletin form, printed on two inside pages only, other two pages blank, for local material. The cost will give a saving of at least $5 per week to any pastor who uses four-page bulletins in his Sunday services. A good opportunity for five or ten weeks of tithe education without expense or special distribution. Twenty subjects to choose from. Send for free samples and price list.

Please give your denomination, also mention The Pentecostal Herald.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

June 19 was the Golden Wedding anniversary of Rev. Jerry Clevenger and wife, of Kansas City, Mo. They had decided not to have any demonstration on this anniversary but their youngest daughter, Mrs. Minassian, who also resides in Kansas City, invited the family to her home on June 23, the following being present: Mr. Carl Minassian, wife, and son, Mrs. Carrie Haggard, son and daughter, of Canon City, Colo., her niece, Miss Bernice Moody, of Mulberry, Kan., Mr. James Wagoner, wife and two daughters. One daughter, Ellen, was not present; D. E. Clevenger, wife and two sons, and Jerry Clevenger, the youngest child, all gathered around the table, and as Rev. Clevenger and wife stood at the head of the table, he prayed as follows:

"Dear Lord, our heavenly Father, we thank thee for this good day and the privilege of being here together. Make it a good day to our hearts because of the harmony and love that shall prevail. Bless these grown-up children of ours, for their kindness to us as we feel the weight of years and the frailties of age coming upon us. Be with them as they face the temptations and allurements of this sin-cursed world and help them to be always able to choose the side of righteousness. Bless our grandchildren and may they grow up to be young people of noble character and sterling worth, that they shall be real spiritual assets in the world. Bless the young woman who is visiting us; bless the aged woman who has stood by us for fifty years in sunshine and shadow, in joy and sorrow. She has played well her part in the drama of life as a faithful wife and loving mother, and now as her cheeks pale and her hair whitens for the change that is soon coming, may we all love and appreciate her more than ever; and as our days are numbered may we walk down into the valley of death together and be able to look up and see the city of gold with open gates coming into view. Bless this ample meal that has been provided by kind hands, and may it give us strength of body, vigor of mind and spiritual stamina to stand true to God and the Bible and old-time religion in this awful age, and finally bring us to that glorious home above where there will be no separations and no good-byes spoken. All this we ask in Jesus' name. Amen!"

THE PRESENT NEED.

Eugene L. McClure.

As the evening shadows gather

At the close of setting day,
In the homes without a Saviour,
Who'll be there to read and pray?

Don't you see, my Christian brother,
There's a work for you to do;
Souls with burden, sin and sorrow,
Would receive the Christ from you.

Will you not then go and labor
In the harvest field today,
Jesus waits their sins to cover,
Why stand ye idly by?

You'll prepare to serve your Master
In a great white field, you say,
Why not then, become a worker
In the harvest field today?

Souls in darkness round you living,
Blinded by the sin and strife—
Will you take your Saviour to them—
Take to them the Bread of Life?

A CLASS MEETING ON PAPER.

Thank God, the "class-meeting" is not entirely extinct, even if some persons do consider it "out of date." However, whether conducted as a separate service, or in conjunction with the regular weekly prayer meeting, some Christians still enjoy the "testimonies," and "take part" without constraint. But my present purpose is to give, in condensed form, some of the "witnessing" for God.

"I praise God for his forgiving and cleansing power. And I know he will keep me to the end; according to his promise."

"After seeking God for some days, I found him precious to my soul. All love for anything wrong is completely gone."

"I magnify the grace of God for a free and full salvation. Abiding peace and joy flow like a river through my soul."

"When Jesus sanctified me he took all the bad and the sad out of me, including any inclination for tobacco of any kind."

"Hallelujah! I am going through with Jesus at any cost. And when he comes I expect to meet him with a shout."

"I praise the Lord for giving me a clean heart at the morning preaching service. His glory fills my soul."

"I rejoice in the blessed assurance that God sanctifies me wholly, spirit, soul and body."

"The deep of God's love swallowed me up, and all its waves and billows rolled over me."

"God emptied me of sin and self, and filled me with the Holy Ghost. I have the abiding witness within."

"When God baptized me with the Holy Spirit I could scarcely refrain from leaping with transports of joy."

"Sinking into Christ I lose myself, and prove a life of fellowship with the Deity, so divinely sweet that I would not relinquish it for a thousand worlds."

"Through the infinite mercy and love of God I can say I am saved from all outward and inward sin. Glory to Jesus."

A lady said, "Night before last I could not sleep because sin was in my heart, so great was my sorrow. Last night I could not sleep because sin was out of my heart, so great was my joy. Hallelujah for the atoning blood of Jesus Christ."

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

AFRICA.

To begin with let us glance at Africa as a continent. Some people do not know that it is the second largest continent on the globe, with a coast line of sixteen thousand miles. One gentleman after traveling a thousand miles or more in South Africa was careless enough to make the statement that there were no forests in Africa. The same man making a trip through the central part of Africa might be inclined to say that all of Africa is one big forest. Some of us have read of the Kalahari Desert in South Africa. When Livingstone was told he could not possibly cross it, he not only crossed it but recrossed it with only half civilized natives to help him. Though it covers several thousand square miles you can cross it today very comfortably on an up-to-date modern passenger train. It was my privilege to cross it on my way to the homeland last March. A great deal of this land has been made productive by irrigation. Mostly by boring wells and using big windmills. It was very interesting to me to notice every few miles along the railroad the English had built small settlements. At some of these places they were carrying on the truck farming, but at most of the places the English and South African Dutch are in the cattle business. They have been hit hard for the past three years, there having been so little rain-fall.

In the Southern part of the continent also is located those wonderfully rich diamond mines and gold mines. The richest diamond mine so far discovered is at Kimberly. They do not try to produce as many as they are capable of producing, for if they did they would flood the market. The richest gold mine is at Johannesburg, where they have a mine capable of producing much more than they are now producing.

The Southern part also is very productive of fruits. Such as peaches, pears, apples, and grapes. These were introduced by Cecil Rhodes more than twenty-five or thirty years ago. These are found most altogether in the extreme southern part. Mind you, none of this fruit ever reaches us in the Belgian Congo, for we are some two thousand miles and more from Cape Town. However, we are not left out altogether when it comes to fruit. There in the Congo we are well supplied with the tropical fruits, such as bananas, plantons, pineapples, mangoes, oranges, limes, and grapefruit. What we miss most in the Congo is the green vegetables.

Though the Southern part of the Continent is very rich, it by no means contains all the wealth. In the Congo we have two diamond mines which have been doing a big business for the past ten or twelve years. It is rumored that near Elizabethville in the southeast of the Congo they have found one of the largest copper reserves in the world. We were told by a missionary near that place that there is a syndicate that is putting up a plant for smelting copper which will cost eighty millions of francs, or something over two million dollars. This concern is already sending copper out of the Congo to Belgium at a very rapid rate. It has been surprising to me to note the enormous quantity of elephant ivory shipped out of the Congo every year. Month after month and year after year they ship tons and tons of ivory to Belgium. I had an opportunity at Stanleyville one day, standing on the boat, to count eighty large tusks. Of course these represented forty elephants. In some parts the elephants are still in large numbers. There are perhaps some in that great equatorial forest that no human eye has ever seen. There are some places in that great jungle where no human has ever yet set foot. Though a great deal of it has been traversed.

Another great source of wealth found in the Congo is that of the palm nuts. These trees are found pretty much all over the Congo. There are hundreds and thousands of tons of these nuts shipped out every year. From these are made oil and soaps of different kinds.

To the northwest of the Congo we have the French Congo, which is reported to be a very rich section of Africa. To the northeast is two or three sections of country belonging to England. Among which, one of the most promising is Uganda. The English missionaries are very well established in those parts with a great church building approximating fifty thousand dollars. There is at least one thing we can say for the English, they build well when they build. Especially is this true of the British Baptist Missionary Society. They have about ninety missionaries at work in the Belgian Congo at eight stations. The Southern Methodist Church has twenty-eight missionaries and three stations and one steamboat. Proceeding north from the mouth of the Congo river, along the west coast of Africa we have those comparatively small sections of territories known as the Gold Coast, and the Ivory Coast, also Liberia, and then in that great north-west portion of the Continent we have that immense desert known as the Sahara.

Now the part we are interested in most is the Belgian Congo. And drawing the lines still closer the Tribe known to us as the Otetela Tribe. To most people the Congo is little more than a name, a square block of territory extending across the map of Africa. Ever since its borders were staked off by Stanley more than a half century ago its name has been associated with that of cannibals and savages, sleeping sickness and fevers, and Hottentots. Though a great deal of leopards and hyenas, scorching sun of the land is low and covered with swamps, it is not all bad. We would say that perhaps two-thirds of it is table land. The equator runs through the Congo little to the north of the center. Our Mission is located almost in the very center of the Congo. We are only four degrees south of the equator. Our Otetela Tribe covers about as much territory as the state of Alabama or Georgia. So you can readily see that we have a big job before us to evangelize and reach all the people covering that big a territory. It is an impossibility with only twenty-eight missionaries. We ought to have a hundred missionaries.

The running of a tropical colony, as Sir Arthur Conan Doyle once remarked, is of all tests the most searching to which the nation that attempts it can be subjected; to hold great power and not to abuse it; to see great wealth and not to seize it; to rule the helpless natives without oppressing them; to meet difficulties, discouragements and dangers without yielding to them; to keep a cool head under a hot sun—these are the acid tests of a nation or an individual character.

There is one other thing I overlooked in this general view of Africa, that is those wonderful Victoria Falls. One of the seven wonders of the world. These Falls were discovered by Livingston in November, 1855. The native name of Moscoa-Tunya (which means "The Smoke which sounds") is most appropriate. It is said that the huge column of spray has been seen at a distance of twenty-eight miles from the Falls, and the roar heard sixteen miles away. The Falls extend for one and a quarter miles from end to end, and the drop from the brink is of a height of three hundred and fifty feet, falling into an immense chasm. The outlet from this chasm is about three quarters of a mile from the western end, and through this outlet the entire volume of water from the Falls rushes at a terrific rate, passing in its route to the boiling pot, the knife Edge and Danger Point, and rushing beneath the great Zambesi Bridge on its long journey to the sea, through a gorge extending for forty-five miles from the Falls. That great cantilever steel bridge measuring six hundred and fifty feet, is one of the marvels of modern engineering. I stood on the brink of this tremendous gorge looking over and an old Pennsylvania railroad surgeon said to me, "Don't get too close, it makes me nervous."

J. J. Davis,
Methodist Missionary to Africa.

JUST ONE IN THE WHOLE WORLD.

There is just one Bud Robinson—no one like him or even akin to him. There is not another "Life Story" like his or similar to it. His recent book, "My Life's Story" is, as he puts it, "loaded to the water line with the activities of forty-seven years of labor in the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ." The chapter on his call to preach is worth the price of the book and more. Get it and read it. It has 217 pages, but when you start reading it you will not want to stop until you have finished. It sells at the remarkably low price of $1.00. Don't fail to get your copy. You will weep and you will rejoice as you read it.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

—Basil Mathews
in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and His saving power in the lives of men." Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

The Opportunity Is Swiftly Passing!

Don't let it go by without your having placed THE HERALD in some home. It may be the means of salvation to the entire household.

Every soul, some time, somewhere, longs to know God, and this may be your opportunity to help some one into a saving knowledge of Him. We have known instances where persons were not approachable in the interest of their souls, but the Holy Spirit has spoken to them in the quiet of the reading hour.

We pass this way but once, so let's make our time and efforts count for God and souls. Try to induce some one to subscribe on the special 50c offer till January. Invest 50c of the Lord's money and send the paper to some one; then pray God to bless the message THE HERALD carries to the good of that soul.

Dear HERALD readers, what we do must be done quickly. The special subscription period is rapidly slipping away, souls are passing into eternity, many of them lost, and it behooves us to get desperately in earnest to offer the Bread of Life to as many as will receive it.

Think NOW of some loved one or friend who needs soul food, and either ask them to subscribe or send them the paper until January. Seemingly small things count for much in the service of the King.

"GET BUSY SOCIETY."

By The Editor.

IF every one will mend one, all will soon be mended." I have forgotten the author of this statement, but it is evidently true. The thought is, if every Christian would begin an earnest effort to bring some one else to Jesus, and press the effort successfully, directly we would be able to capture the hosts of the enemy, and he would be without forces in the field. It must be understood that the author of the above quotation had in mind the thought that every Christian, by divine help, could mend a crippled soul; could win some one to Christ.

Let us, without organization, president, secretary or treasurer, have a "Get Busy Society." Let every sanctified man, woman and child who shall read these lines, determine to camp on the trail of some friend; to begin at once with prayer and friendship and courteous solicitude to win a Christian friend, and lead him or her into the experience of full salvation. Subscribe for a paper; give them a book; speak a courteous word about a deeper and larger Christian life. Arouse an interest; put some one to thinking on this subject. Take time and use it wisely and earnestly, praying and trusting God for best results.

There are thousands of good people professing a high state of grace who are not putting forth very much personal effort. They ought to get busy, remembering that a high obligation rests upon every sincere Christian to try to bring some one else to Christ. After all is said and done, winning souls from sin to Christ is the greatest work in this world or any other world. To lose one's soul; to live in sin here and outer darkness forever, is the most fearful calamity that could be thought of. Let us feel the burden of this. Let us contemplate the unutterable tragedy of a lost soul, and set ourselves to win some one to Christ.

We see accounts of conventions, get-together meetings, lectures and talks on many subjects, with but little reference to the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of believers. Many who are busy with church work seem to almost forget that men have souls, and that countless thousands are on the brink of eternity and entirely unprepared to meet God at the judgment bar. Why can't we arouse a great enthusiasm on soul winning, on the regeneration of sinners, and the baptism with the Holy Ghost in sanctifying power on Christians, cleansing them and, at the same time, enduing them with power for service in soul winning.

Let's join the "Get Busy Society" by counting ourself a member and going to work wherever we are, with what we have in hand. Get a tent, hold a meeting, send out literature, visit a neglected home, bring the blessed gospel of Christ immediately home to the soul. Say something that the Holy Spirit can bless in the awakening of a sinner and

THE TRUE BREAD.

Horatius Bonar.

The bread of life, in pitying mercy given,
Long famished souls to strengthen and to feed;
Christ Jesus, Son of God, true Bread of heaven,
Thy flesh is meat, Thy blood is drink indeed.

I cannot famish, though this earth should fail,
Tho' life through all its fields should pine and die;
Though the sweet verdure should forsake each vale,
And every stream of every land run dry.

True Tree of Life! Of Thee I eat and live;
Who eateth of thy fruit shall never die;
'Tis Thine the everlasting health to give,
The youth and bloom of immortality.

Feeding on Thee all weakness turns to power,
This sickly soul revives like earth in spring;
Strength floweth onward in each buoyant hour,
This being seems all energy, all wing.

Jesus our dying, buried, risen Head,
Thy Church's Life, and Lord Immanuel!
At Thy dear cross we find the eternal bread,
And in Thy empty tomb the living well.

the arousing of a lukewarm believer. Now is the accepted time for service. Now is the day for God's children to bring salvation right over the threshold of the neglected homes and hearts of the lost.

The Kings' business requireth haste. Life is too short, souls are too precious and the possibilities are too great for idleness on the part of God's workers in the white harvest field of lost souls. Many of them can be won to Jesus. Some will refuse to repent, some will resent every kind effort to lead them to Jesus, but many will respond and will give their hearts to Christ. What if you should die and go up to heaven, and some one should be awaiting you there, and cry out as you approach, "There comes a brother or sister who led me to Jesus; who made it possible for me to enter into the Kingdom of God." That would be better than crowns, and palms and harps. Let's at once count ourselves members of the "Get Busy Society," and bring some one to Christ.

The Coming General Conference.

THE General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, meets in Dallas, Texas, next May. The General Conference is the law-making body of the church, but the thing of largest interest, and that which tells most for the future of the church, is the election of bishops, secretaries, and the various officers of the church. The organization of the church is such that its chief pastors and officials have tremendous power and wield a great influence in the direction of all the work, growth, development, spiritual life and progress of the church.

Apart from the Roman Catholic Church there is no other church so tremendously dominated and guided in its life as the Methodist Church. Methodism is connectional and, in the very nature of things, it is so closely bound together in its organization, law and life that those in high office have great influence. This is a big advantage if her leaders who control the appointment of her ministers and the direction of her forces are mighty men of God filled with the Holy Ghost, separated and free from all selfish motives and laboring with zeal for the glory of the Christ and the salvation of the lost.

If, however, men should be elevated to high office in our Methodism who are unsound in doctrine, who are friendly to the spread and propaganda of modern liberalism, who are selfish in administration and the direction of the vast financial and religious interests and forces of the church, our organization is such that it gives to such men a marvelous influence for evil and hurt of the spiritual life of the church, and therefore, the moral life and best interests of our nation.

The thing of first importance in any church claiming to be Christian, is her doctrine. If she would be recognized as a branch of the true Church of God she must have a system of doctrine resting firmly upon the plain teachings of the Holy Bible. She must preach and teach the fundamental truths plainly written in the Word of God for the salvation of human souls. No organization has any right to claim to be a Church of God that does not implicitly believe and with holy zeal press the teachings of Jesus Christ and the apostles for the salvation of sinners, the building up and perfecting of Christian character.

The doctrines of Methodism make a powerful appeal, both to the intelligence and the spiritual needs of men. The Wesleys and those saintly fellows who, with them, organized and laid the foundation for a great spiritual awakening, and a mighty church, emphasized the fall of man, his utter sinfulness, the atonement of Christ, and those vital Bible truths which so plainly teach that he tasted death for every man, that all men may be saved, and that they may be saved from all sin, that a new, holy life may come into them by the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost, and that an old sinful life may be crucified and eradicated from them by the power of the Holy Ghost. These are glorious truths clearly taught in the Holy Scriptures. They embrace all the fundamental doctrines of the Bible, Old and New Testaments; when faithfully preached, they awaken and stir the consciences of men. They lead to repentance, saving faith, hungering and thirsting after righteousness and the coming of the Holy Ghost to cleanse and take up his abode in the temple of the soul.

The rank and file of Methodist preachers, up to the present time, have very largely been loyal to the doctrines of our church, and they have it in their power to greatly protect the church from the inroads of false modernistic teachings that paralyze evan-

BIBLE NOTES AND MEDITATIONS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

The Bible is the Book of books. "Bring the Book," said Sir Walter Scott, when dying. "What Book?" was the question.

"The Book—the Bible; there is only one Book!"

It has been beautifully said by a good writer:

"Our Bible is the Word of God, Supernatural in Origin,
Eternal in Duration,
Inexpressible in Value,
Infinite in scope,
Regenerative in power,
Infallible in authority,
Universal in interest,
Personal in application,
Inspired in totality."

In these days when the Bible is being reduced by irreverent scholarship down to the level of a human book, it is well to recall those words of the great Augustine:

"I have learned to render to the inspired Scriptures alone, the homage of a firm belief that they have never erred; as to others I do not believe in the things they teach simply because it is they who teach them."

From my Bible I shall select a few subjects for consideration in this article.

I. The Wonders of Sanctification. Joshua 3:5. I preached on this text in The Christian and Missionary Alliance Tabernacle, Shanghai, and I was led to name the seven wonders of sanctification thus:

1. It is a deeper work of grace.
2. Brings us into accord with the will of God.
3. Brings heart purity.
4. Brings Liberty and Freedom of Soul.
5. Secret of Power and Victory.
6. Saves from worldliness and backsliding.
7. Fits for service here and Heaven hereafter.

II. The Question of the Holy Ghost. Acts 19.

In preaching upon this subject before an English-speaking audience, Missionaries and others, in Shanghai, our outline was somewhat like this:

We need the Holy Ghost,

- (a) To deliver us from our limitations.
- (b) To deliver us from a false theology.
- (c) To deliver us from an enfeebling prejudice.
- (d) Bring us back to first principles.
- (e) Give us a new language.
- (f) Make us heralds and instruments of a revival.

III. The Holy Spirit in John's Gospel.

1. Born of the Spirit. John 3:5-8.
2. Indwelt by the Spirit. John 4:14.
3. Communicating the Spirit. John 7:38, 39.
4. Taught by the Spirit. John 14:26.
5. Guided by the Spirit. John 16:13.

IV. Worldliness. 2 Cor. 4:4.

Some one has said that the world is society organizing itself against God. Wordsworth has said:

"The world is too much with us; late and soon,

Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers;

Little we see in nature that is ours;

We have given our hearts away, a sordid boom."

When we are of the world we shall think as the world and be absorbed in its interests and prejudices, its choices and its program. It was said of Cromwell that: "Religion was laid into his soul with the hammer and the fire," hence it was that Cromwell refused to conform to the godless world about him and became mighty through God.

REVIVAL TIDINGS.

From the China Christian Advocate, published in Shanghai, we quote the following about the revival carried on by Dr. Ridout and the Bethel Band in South China.

Showers in Blessings in Sienyu.

The revival Movement continues to be the outstanding feature of the work here. The stream grows deeper and wider as it flows on. During the last twelve days of March we had with us Dr. and Mrs. George W. Ridout, of Asbury College, Rev. Andrew Gih, who was with us in the Bethel Party last year, Mr. Lin, a gospel singer and Miss Grace Hwang, Bible teacher, the latter two also from the Bethel Mission, Shanghai.

Our Sienyu preachers, a large number of the Bible women and selected delegates, both men and women from every station, were in attendance. Dr. Ridout, together with Mrs. Ridout, preached the simple gospel of regeneration and sanctification and they preached it with power. Dr. Ridout often had to get up from his bed of sickness to go to the church and preach, returning to it again after the service. His burning zeal for the Chinese made a deep impression upon them all. There was always a quick response to every altar call. The altar was crowded with earnest seekers. The meetings resulted in many workers being brought into a new and deeper experience. Some were rescued from lives of sin and made over into new men and women and went back to their charges to begin in earnest the work of rescuing souls. From these meetings groups of revived church members, chiefly official members, have been sent back to form a nucleus in almost every church. The series of meetings gave unquestionable evidence of the presence of the Holy Spirit and resulted in the transformation of many lives.

Growing out of this revival movement there is a movement among the laity to shoulder responsibility in carrying on the work of the church. Hitherto this has been left chiefly to the paid workers.

After the series of meetings at Sienyu City the Ridout Party went to Hinghwa City for a series there. A great blessing resulted to the church there. "Koh Sang" our young official who was greatly blest at Sienyu went on to Hinghwa and did some very effective witnessing in Hinghwa resulting in quite a stir among the teachers and students of the Guthrie Memorial High School.

W. B. Cole, M. E. Missionary.

V. Revivals of Religion. Psalms 85:6.

I believe in revivals of religion in the Foreign Fields and in the homeland. When I was in Korea they were telling me of the great revival of 1907 when the Methodists increased in numbers from 7,796 to 24,244, and the Presbyterians from 9,756 to 19,654. Yet there are crowds of ministers and missionaries who are opposed to revival meetings today; they have no place in their program for the mourner's bench or the excitement of the revival meetings. I came across an old book on revivals by Albert Barnes, and in this book it is said: "There is not upon the earth a more interesting phenomenon than a revival of religion. The subject is developed under the following heads:

1. The Theory of Revivals,
2. The Vindication of Revivals,
3. The Importance of Revivals,
4. The Desirableness of Revivals,
5. The Hindrances to Revivals.

VI. A Happy Reunion. Gen. 46:29-30.

When I was preaching in Japan at the Osaka Theological School of the Free Methodists my interpreter was Professor T. Tsuchiyama. The Lord had given him some wonderful experiences in America where he became converted and sanctified and educated for the ministry; he holds degrees from the Nazarene University, from Drew and also from Princeton. He tells an interesting story of his return to his father's house after thirteen years' absence. He says:

"According to a Japanese custom, kneeling and bowing, I said to him, 'Father, I have now returned.'

"Then he replied, 'Oh, I have waited for you so long.'

"Then I said, 'Father, I am very sorry that I could not bring money home, but I have brought three diplomas.' Holding these, he smiled. Then I continued, 'Father, I have brought you a still better present, which is the best present not only for you, but for all the people in Japan.' Taking a Bible from my pocket I testified before my father and the relatives and friends who had assembled around his sick bed, telling them how God had saved me and kept me in the midst of difficulties, trials, temptations, sickness and poverty for so many years in the foreign land. My father was deeply impressed and said to me, 'Son, I do not want a present. You have brought me indeed the best present.' It was truly a glorious time and a great blessing came upon the company, whose hearts were melted to tears.

"About two o'clock on the third morning after my return, my father said to me, 'I feel as if I cannot live until daybreak. If I die this morning, where will my soul go? Please tell me about a future life.' It was indeed a sad but joyful time. I trusted that this was the hour when my prayers would be answered. I replied to him, 'Father, repent of your sins before God and simply trust in Jesus Christ. Then, though you may die even now, you will go to heaven where some day we will meet you.' He asked me, 'Why is it so easy to go to heaven?' I then preached to him about the Cross of Calvary. His question was, 'Did Jesus die for me? Does he love me so much?' While I was praying for the salvation of this struggling soul, God certainly came to him. With many tears he said to me, 'I will believe in Jesus.' My mother also wept and accepted Jesus. What a glorious morning that was."

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

Just now the Chinese Government is putting heavy pressure to bear on the Christian Schools to register. This means, substantially, putting the Bible out of the curriculum and striking religion off the school-room's program. One of the Anglican Chinese Bishops said to me, "That if we cannot teach Bible and religion in our schools we will close them up." Another requirement, if they register, is that the picture of Sun Yat Sen, the father of the Republic, must be hung up in the school and every Monday morning it must be bowed to three times. I was told of one school called after one of the great men of the church, who was noted for his orthodoxy and his stand for holiness. This school elected a president of very modernistic training and registered. In advertising for students its ad said that no religion was taught there.

I was invited to address Chapel service in one of the colleges where everything was put upon a voluntary basis—chapel attendance was not compulsory. The school has a constituency of over 400. The chapel service had about 20 students present. I was told that at this Institution they had much trouble; students would strike every now and then and it was a hard matter to control things. Well it seemed to me they were reaping what they had sown. When religion and Bible go out Communism comes in and schools become a problem. In fact, I have seen so many of these school problems that if more of our Christian schools register and bow down to Baal it becomes a very grave question as to the wisdom of continuing to them the support of consecrated Christian people who give their money to foreign missions with the idea that it goes to the support of real gospel work.

At this writing the Bethel Bible Conference at Shanghai opens. Delegates from many parts of China are coming by boat and trains. Many are coming from the revival meetings we have held and other Bethel Bands in various parts of China.

Rev. C. W. Troxel, of the N. H. A. Missions in Shantung, is due for the Bible Conference. He reports in his last letter gracious revival seasons in connection with special services recently held on the Mission assisted by evangelistic workers from Bethel.

Rev. E. R. Munroe, of South China Mission, is in Shanghai, making arrangements with Mr. Kilbourne of the Oriental Missionary Society, to transfer the Bible Training School over to the O. M. S. This will give them their second Bible Training School in China, this one being in Canton, South China.

Paul Rader comes to China in August. He will have great crowds to hear him provided he can hold steady enough in preaching to be interpreted. Orators and eloquent preachers from America can do no star shooting in China. All their flowers go to waste and eloquent speech is not understood; and pity the poor fellow who tries to be witty and crack jokes. It is a waste of words and time. No use here to get out any Irish jokes, etc. Preachers of the gospel preaching through interpreters have to be simple, concrete and earnest; must not depend on the inspiration of the occasion because when you say a sentence and then have to break off to let another voice take that sentence through to the audience, you are in danger of losing your fire unless you have the fire of the Holy Ghost burning in your own heart. No manuscript preaching or star shooting, only the simple message of the Gospel in the power of the Spirit, will carry a preacher through the Orient.

HALF A MAN.

Rev. William E. Schubert.

METHODISM made a gain of one half of one percent last year. That means that each hundred Methodists won just half a man to the Church and the Kingdom. There is more truth than poetry to that statement, for it is a fact that for several years now most of those added to the church have been only half-converted, half-believing, half-hearted Christians, which is one reason why we lag behind several other evangelical denominations in this matter which is a measure of vitality.

Many of our people are only half-converted. They are still of this world, they are not other-worldly; the natural bulks large in their eyes, they hardly know there is a supernatural world; as Bowne would say, their minds live in the phenomenal, rather than in the ontological realities; they are proselytes, not converts. One pastor (I am not saying whether in Asia or America) told me that of a hundred who signed cards in a series of meetings only eight remained after a short time, though he called on them time and again and organized training classes. One year after another series of meetings, where hundreds of cards were signed, only one of these "converts" could be found in the church. Evidently people's hearts are not changed by signing cards, or even by mere religious instruction afterward. How different from the results in early Methodism when men were told they must be born again, and when they sought until they found. One complaint against the early Methodists was that they taught that men could know, and should know, that they were accepted of God and their sins forgiven.

Our people are only half-believing; someone has said that there are believers, half-believers, make believers, and un-believers. We fear that the great majority must be half-believers, else it would not take two hundred Methodists to win one member. It is because we only half believe in God, half believe in sin, half believe in the Saviour. How different we are from the people who used to sing:

"A bleeding Savior seen by faith, a sense of pardoning love,

A hope that triumphs over death—give joys like that above.

"To take a glimpse within the veil, to know that God is mine—

Are springs of joy that never fail, unspeakable, divine."

As a result, we are only half-hearted. God says, "Give me thy heart," and we say, "Here's half." We are half-hearted in our prayers, we never shake the gates of hell, sinners do not tremble, angels do not rejoice, God is not pleased; there are no Elijahs, so there are no showers of blessing, for that demands effectual, fervent praying. We are half-hearted in our praise; our singing is half-hearted, and formal; as to an Amen corner, that means the lower right hand corner of the hymnal; and we save our shouts for football games. Our giving is half-hearted, so precious time and space is used for the cares of this World Service, and the decadence of riches, which we figured on, but didn't get, chokes the word, and men who might have been spiritual leaders become money raisers. You cannot win the youth of America in this half-hearted way, nor the youth of revolutionary China, nor the youth of India, whose Ghandi has given all.

There are some things which are necessary if we would pull out of this rut, and get alive again. I may have omitted some, but these occur to me, and if we do these, the others will follow:

We must be honest with ourselves, we must face the facts, we must take our ostrich heads out of the hole of theory, and recognize conditions as they are. We must rid ourselves of our priori prejudices and stubbornness and take a truly scientific attitude, which considers cause and effect. We must not call ourselves progressive unless we are making progress, and a falling percentage of increase should show us (if we are half alive) that something is lacking in the new methods which promise so much and achieve so little.

We must aim at conversions, real conversions, when men are changed, and know it. People are hungry for real religion; even at Columbia University, the subject assigned to Stanley Jones was "My Personal Religious Experience." He says, "I discovered that we were just folks, that mechanistic philosophy or psychology had not gone so deep that it uprooted those things that are elemental, for before we are psychologists, we are people, and sometimes we survive the psychology and remain people." People want it, people need it, just as much as they ever did. So we should expect conversions and we should use any method by which men can really touch God. When so many bear witness that they found God at the old-fashioned mourners' bench or Methodist altar, why discard it? But use any method that will get the results. The Michigan Christian Advocate gives an account of a revival experienced some years ago in one of the Michigan churches, led by the Union Holiness Band, a group of laymen and lay women:

"The phenomenal thing was that there were no sermons preached, except the regular Sunday sermons. Each night the band came together for prayer and testimony. One of the leaders would take a Scripture lesson and give a short exposition of it. During the day the workers went from house to house, two by two, talking to men and women about the salvation that is in Christ. The new converts were invited to come in at night and give their testimony of the joy of the new life. Men, women and children came for miles around to these simple evening services to hear the testimony of the Christian people. In all there were about one hundred who made decisions." Some years later the same church had a stirring revival when "through plain and powerful preaching and teaching on holiness" many were born into the kingdom."

We must discard the unbeliefs and half-beliefs of modernism. I have been through it, and while I did not accept it because of the sneering snobbery of its advocates (that "wiser than thou" attitude) yet enough of it got across to neutralize my effectiveness as a soul-winner, until a short time ago I realized my unfruitfulness, while listening to an "old timer" preach in a way that made eternal things real. I can never be satisfied to wait years for converts, as we were told we must in China, for I saw heaven in a young man's face. Rev. B. H. Bruner says, "When the Church moves out of an atmosphere of uncertainty and doubt, and often downright pessimism, into an atmosphere of real expectancy, it will be in a position to receive the power which the risen Lord has for it." ("Pentecost, a Renewal of Power," quoted by the Christian Advocate, New York.)

We must be willing to go all the way with God. Make a full surrender, not in words, but in reality. Do something to prove it, not something rash, but something constructive. Hold a revival meeting. Line yourself up with the wholehearted, fully believing, praying people of your church. Use your tongue to encourage them, rather than to "damn them with faint praise." Give God a chance to make Pentecost real in your life. Don't wait until 1930—have a personal Pentecost now. Welcome the Holy Guest. Don't be ashamed of him; share him with others. This will solve the problems of the church, if enough individuals do this. John Wesley said of one of his societies, "Christian perfection has been little insisted on; and wherever this is not done, be the preachers ever so eloquent, there is little increase, either in number or in the grace of the hearers." But of another, a live society, he said, "I always observe, wherever a work of sanctification breaks out, the whole work of God prospers." And this true in 1929 too.

THE WILL OF GOD.

TILDEN H. GADDIS.

THE end of carnality is rebellion against the will of God. It is the chief work of Satan to get men to disobey God. Here is the battle of wills—God's will, Satan's will and my will. The carnal mind is not subject to the will of God. Eve disobeyed then followed the succession of Cain, Israel, Saul, etc. Disobedience is "The deeds of the Old Man." All else is a result. To obey God is to live pure and holy, for walking in the light will lead you into Canaan and keep you healthy while living there.

Jesus gave us an example: "In the volume of the book it is written of me, I come to do thy will, O God." If I have his mind I will to do God's will. I do not quibble and argue and get the victory over God's will and leadings. But I gladly and cheerfully do as the voice of the Spirit commands. The desire of the newborn soul is to know the will of God.

Every backslider can trace his downfall to the place where, on some line or another, he disobeyed God. If every soul who is genu-

THE SWORD OF THE LORD AND OF GIDEON.

Rev. Joseph H. Smith.

Text: "Time would fail me to tell of Gideon."—(Heb. 11).

HERE is nothing I can tell of Gideon's early history save that, with all else of Israel, he shared the rigors of the Midianitish oppression and must pursue his rural task in hiding, to try and save food for his household and cattle. His father's place was a stronghold of idolatry—the very idolatry that had incurred the wrath of God in the permission of the Midianitish scourge. Whether when, in answer to the people's cry of distress, the Lord sent a prophet to awaken them and reprove them of their sins, this Gideon was one of those who heard and heeded and repented, I cannot tell. It seems probable. Otherwise it is not easy to account for God's choosing him and endowing and blessing him for the deliverance of the people, excepting, only, we will remember that in God's program some are chosen from their mother's womb for such special missions. Maybe both of these figured in the case of Gideon.

Israel's afflictions were due to Israel's apostasy. As a retribution for their forgetting the God of their fathers, they were left under the oppressors' heels for seven years, driven to the caves and the canyons of the mountains for hiding. What they sowed was devastated by their enemies, so that they lacked feed for their cattle and food for themselves. God seemed to have utterly forsaken them. The history of the miracles and wonders he had wrought for them of yore only now mocked them in their gloom. Even from Gideon's own complaint of it their situation was most desolate and their outlook most hopeless.

Let us remember, beloved, that "these things were our examples and they are written for our admonition." Think you, the present famine of the Word of God has no retributive element in it at all? These modern Midianites that are now oppressing and driving the Israel of God into hiding places, could never have grown so arrogant, so tyrannical, so abusive of Israel, and so bent upon the destruction of the faith of the fathers, had not God's restraining hand been withdrawn. (And even yet, as with these Midianites of old, we may hope their time is limited). The history of Israel with its recurring backslidings and its returnings to God in times of distress, has successive repetitions in the history of the Christian Church. Revivals are never discoveries but recoveries of truths, and returnings to the true worship of God in Spirit and in truth. The modern Midianites have already devastated the church's heritage, distressed and defiled the homes of the people, and driven Israel into hiding and into scarcity.

How much the rejection of holiness by her rulers in the generations past has to account for in the devastation of destructive criticism, so called Modernism, but rightfully named apostasy and anti-christ—in this generation, with the whole trail of infidelity, the idolatry of covetousness and the lust of the flesh that prevails upon every hand, who can tell? For like idolatries and slighting of the Holy Spirit, and the forgetting of the mighty hand of God in their behalf, the Lord had turned Israel over to the Midianites for seven years. And since carnality is ever the same, and God's righteous judgments never change, like distresses—but of a spiritual nature—fall upon a backsliding and God-forgetting church today. "These things are written for our admonition."

But here is the turning point in this history and the index finger that will point us to Gideon. "The people cried unto the Lord." The only swivel upon which God turns from his wrath to his mercy is the altar of prayer. There will be no change in the condition of the church or of the times until the people feel deeply enough their distress to humble themselves and cry unto the Lord. So had they cried from their Egyptian bondage! And later again from their Babylonish captivity! So said Malachi of the degenerate age in which he prophesied: "They sought the Lord." And here, under the pricks and thorns of the Midianitish torment, "they cried unto the Lord." Gideon is God's answer to that cry.

But the way must be prepared. First, he sent to them a prophet to awaken the people and remind and rebuke them of their sins. Will he not do so in our own time? There can be no recovery, or restoration, nor deliverance without repentance! The thunders of Sinai must be heeded before we can hear the chimes and mercy peals of Zion. No use preaching salvation to men slumbering in sin. Let the Church of God examine herself and see how far she has declined from the Word of God! Her people that have gone lusting for the fleshpots of Egypt. Her leaders that are dancing before the golden calf. Her prophets that have gone greedily in the way of Baalim. Her priests that have opened the way to the idolatry of worldly wisdom to the dethronement of the Word of God. How his Sabbaths are desecrated! And his name they have so profaned as to call his only begotten Son the son of Joseph! His institution of the home and of marriage are broken down by the adulterers and fornicators and whoremongers in God-forbidden divorces. Their shrieks directly under the scourings of the Midianites are but the echoes of their own blasphemies against God.

What John the Baptist was to the ministry of Jesus, this prophet in a lesser measure, yet in a typical light, was to that of Gideon. And the holiness ministry will not neglect its message on the sins of the people. Nor must we stop with outward manifestations. There is a sinful nature beneath all these apostasies, else they could not recur in all generations and all lands and among all classes and conditions of men. The hurt of God's people must not be healed too slightly. There is a dread cancer and gangrene beneath the present departure from the faith of the fathers. We are dealing with a racial problem when we are dealing with the modernism that would turn homes into harems, and schools into dancing halls and places of ill-fame, and churches into playhouses, and church endowed colleges into hotbeds of infidelity and temples of the anti-christ. We must prophesy to an exposure of the "old man" or the "corruption that is in the world through lust." And no repentance will meet the case that stops short of the cry:

"Break off the yoke of inbred sin;

And fully set my spirit free."

Confession of sin must precede the Revelation of Holiness,

There were four stages in the ministry or life of Gideon as a Deliverer:

(1) That when the angel appeared unto him at the threshing floor.

(2) That when the Lord called and commissioned him to clean up his own father's premises.

(3) That of the decimation of his army, at God's command, to the famous "300," and of his confusing of the camp of the Midianites.

(4) That of his pursuit of and destruction to their kings to a full and final triumph of the Lord and for his people. Interspersed with these are some half-dozen significant incidents, and at their close, his forty years' administration as Judge of Israel.

All admit there is a progression in all of God's dealings with his people, both as individuals and collectively; but the rapid succession in which all of these followed one upon the other illustrates the truth that to be gradual needs not to be slow. We have no doubt that there is order and progression even in a flash of lightning. This point may be noted here that progression, whether in grace or in nature, in Providence or in Judgment, of nations or of individuals, is not automatic. God himself and that, personally, "worketh all things after the counsel of his own will." Confining ourselves to these four high points in the narrative of Gideon, we shall find each furnishes lessons of faith for ourselves, for "these things were written for our learning."

To the angel, Gideon protested his unworthiness and his insufficiency for such a trust. His father's house was lowly and he was the least of them all. It does seem that God has a liking for "men of low estate." "The things that are highly esteemed among men are an abomination in the sight of God." "God hath chosen the weak things of this world to confound the mighty." "Not many wise men, not many rich nor noble are called." Moses and Solomon and Paul have each and all, like Gideon, plead their insufficiency before the Lord. But to all this the Lord said: "Surely I will be with thee." That settled matters to the faith of Gideon. God's almightiness linked to his own nothingness he esteemed enough. But he must seal his faith with an offering of sacrifice, and God and he through the ministry of the angel would enter into covenant, a covenant sealed and symbolized by fire. The angel consented to give him time to prepare his gift. This he did, and when it was laid upon the rocks, the angel touched it and there came fire out of the rock, so that from the very beginning of this his career in God's service, Gideon had both the word of the Lord, and the demonstration. This latter, however, came unsought, and doubtless as a surprising reward of his faith and response to his sacrifice. Thus faith with sacrifice leads to certain manifestations of God.

Soon, the Lord himself more directly speaks unto Gideon. An emergency is on and God's afflicted people are crying unto him for relief. Events may follow in rapid succession where there is a praying people and an obedient servant. Gideon's first charge is to clean up the idolatry about his father's premises. Charity begins at home. Cleansed lepers are sent to give their testimony to the priests. A man freed of devils or disease is sent to his own home to tell what great things the Lord had done for him. We once heard a layman evangelist, of great note and wonderful success relate that before going out to the nation wide and to England as well, God first had him bring the hundreds of men that worked in his factory to himself for salvation.

Gideon's faith and courage in obeying the Lord do not suspend his prudence. He destroys the idol and cuts down the trees at night for fear of the people's rage and their interference if he attempts it by day. For what can stand before the frenzy of religious bigotry? He makes however a clean sweep of it; and at the dawn of day the uproar follows. They locate the iconoclast; they demand his life at his father's hand. But Gideon's faith and fidelity have greatly impressed the old man. His father is converted, at last, to his side. He challenges them to let Baal rise and speak for himself. Gideon gets a new name—a name that announces his relation and attitude towards God's enemies. "Jerubaal,"—which means "Let Baal plead."

We men of faith today must be pronounced in our derision of the idolatries of our times. We cannot be namby-pamby. We will abhor that which is evil. We allow for no league with "Comparative Religions." We have no toleration of "Modernism." Our face is set against the worldly policies of man-pleasing administration of the church's affairs. The name of Holiness should be understood as that of disavowal and defiance of the usurpation of the prerogatives of the Church of God, by the Science (falsely so-called) of the world; and the bowing down of priests and prophets to the idols and shrines of worldly unions and combines and clans and lodges. Holiness means war on sin in high places.

Doubtless, the news of this and the new name of Gideon had been heralded far and wide; and the slogan of the "Sword of the Lord and of Gideon" has been sounded alike in Israel and in all the domain of the Midianites, and the enemy rallies its forces for a great onslaught. The lesson to us is that Israel must be cleansed of Baal before it can be freed of Hidian. Our troubles have but begun unless our sins cease. The worship of Baal cannot go alongside by side with the worship of Jehovah. God himself must be allowed to monopolize our being.

New anointings came upon Gideon as the great conflict is faced. There is no such thing, beloved, as a final endowment or a last bestowal of the Spirit's gifts and power. Fixed and final birth of the Spirit there is, and full and forever baptism; but of blessings and anointings and endowments and manifestations of himself there are as many as occasion may arise to make demand, and God's servant is found faithful and ready at his post. "The Spirit of the Lord came upon Gideon." And in the power and courage of this anointing, Gideon assumed command and "blew a trumpet" to the rallying of the scattered bands of God's people to the fray. "The fight is on!"

Nor will we censure nor criticize Gideon for casting out his fleece that night to seek assurance of certain victory. God did not chide him; but responded. No, this was not a wavering of faith nor a doubting of God's word. This was really progression in the scale of faith. There is such a thing as assurance, not only as to general states, and that one is in the divine order,—Gideon had that,—but also of certain victory in specific conflict, or success in particular meeting or effort. Gideon sought that. He would go forth with the confidence of conquest. And God granted him that. Just as there are pre-assurances of answer to prayer; so there are pre-assurances of victory in the warfare of faith. Satan has counterfeits of all these; and the stirrings of one's own sanguine or over-confident mind may deceive; but when God is thus sought in prayer, and unmistakable tokens are thus granted the soldier of the Cross, the servant of the most High goes forth with a valor which nothing can deceive.

But Gideon's army is too big for God. We suspect the bigness of some churches today is really in their way of winning victories over God's enemies. Seems rather dropsical rather than healthful. Proceeds from heart disease rather than from spiritual vigor. Needs tapping rather than exhibiting. The two tests God would have Gideon apply may be quite serviceable in our own day. The first eliminated the fearful and fainthearted. The second dismissed such as had less ardor for the fray, then care for comfort. It is a serious mistake to suppose we must meet the world's big numbers or big fortunes or big learning or big leaders with like bigness of our own. Saul's armor was in the way of David and unless he had put it off he could never have killed Goliath. Later than this lesson when Israel would have a King to be like the other nations, she began to write the history of her greatest defeats and sorrows. The fisherman unlearned (as to the schools) who had been with Jesus did more for Christ's kingdom on earth than all the Ph.D's. are doing now. Hear the word of the Lord to Gideon: "By the three hundred men that lapped will I save you and deliver the Midianites into thine hand." And Gideon's faith did not stagger.

And though he was the Lord's vicegerent, his sort of brigadier-general, yet the Lord himself directed the campaign. God's war tactics are marvelous in our eyes. See this specimen! He bids Gideon with his aid, go and listen to what he can hear in Midian's camp. He lets an heathen soldier have a dream, and has a chum of his to interpret it for him. Gideon hears both the dream told and the interpretation given, and this, as a voice from God, stirs his heart to courage for the advance. Thus we see that the Spirit's gifts, whether they be miracles, or healings, or tongues, or visions, or dreams, or interpretations, do not prove character or relationship with God on the part of the dreamer any more than the speaking with a man's voice proved that Baalim's ass was religious. Though this interpretation of the dream was true, and by the sword of Gideon God hath delivered Midian and all his host, still it proved nothing at all as to the truthness of the heathen soldier that said it. And though from this act on Gideon must be most in our view, yet we have seen here that God has taken charge and is directing his servant at every stage of the fray. Faith in God will assure us of divine guidance and control and help in all our work for Him. "The Battle is the Lord's."

We might pursue it in its three chief stages:

(1) The confusing of the camp of the Midianites to their own destruction of themselves by the simple means of a trumpet, a pitcher, and a lamp.

(2) The pursuit of the kings, their capture and, at length, their slaying at the hands of Gideon.

(3) And the memorializing of the victory with an ephod made of the gold ornaments they had stripped from their enemies' necks and ears, (Though this ephod finally became a snare to Gideon and his house.) Then the country was in quiet for some forty years with Gideon as the Judge of Israel. But all this is only as a scanning glimpse: for "Time would fail me to tell of Gideon."

SOME OBSERVATIONS.

BY COMMISSIONER SAMUEL BRENGLÉ.

RECENTLY a letter came to me from a corps cadet, a fellow-soldier of mine in the corps of which I am a member. She was hungering for holiness, but knew not what holiness is, nor how it is obtained.

I replied to her letter, but she got the blessing before my letter reached her, and yesterday I received her testimony. It is so definite, so in harmony with the Bible and with my own experience and with the experience of all the saints of whom I have read, that I want to pass it on to other seeking, hungry souls. Here it is:

"For months I struggled. I was hungry for the Blessing. But last Sunday I just gave my all to God and ceased struggling, and, O the peace! It passeth all understanding. It just seemed that God was so very near me all this past week that really I have been different in every way.

"I truly wish every one who hasn't this blessing would seek it and enjoy it as I have. It is wonderful.

"Yesterday I got this promise from my 'Promise Box,' 'Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.' That is what I am determined to do; to seek Christ more and more, and I will obey him at all costs. I want him to move in me and through me. I want him to make me a channel of blessing to all with whom I come into contact. I want to be a soul-winner for Christ!"

And a channel of blessing and a soul-winner she shall be, if she continues as she has begun.

Observe first, she says, "For months I struggled." This was unnecessary. And yet but few receive the Blessing without first having passed through a great struggle; but like the struggles of a drowning man it is useless, unless it be to make plain to us our utter need of help from outside ourselves, and that our help and hope are in God. "My soul, wait thou only upon God," wrote the Psalmist, "for my expectation is from him." (Psalm 62:5).

Second, "I was hungry for the Blessing," she writes. Now she is on the right road. This hunger is necessary. It is according to the Word of Jesus: "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."

People who run to the movies, listen over the radio to prize fights, read all sorts of novels, follow hard after the fashions, pleasures, and business of the world, and spend but little time in prayer, in meditation and Bible reading, do not have this hunger. They nibble at so many other things that they spoil their appetite for God, the things of God and for Jesus, the Bread of Life. And not having this hunger they do not seek with all their hearts and so never find the Blessing. Their hearts are not cleansed from sin and they miss the way and are never filled with the Spirit.

One of the greatest preachers and teachers of holiness that I have ever known has written: "Many enquiries come to me verbally and by letter, asking, 'How may I get the Blessing? How may I obtain the fulness of the Gospel? How shall I receive sanctifying power?' To all such, I would say, find the answer from the lips of our Lord, 'Hunger and thirst.' Divert the attention from other things; center the thought and desire on this one thing. Seek him, worship him, trust in him, cling to him. Remind him of inely saved would obey the promptings and the checks of the Spirit they would sooner or later find themselves on the borders of Canaan; and if they would obey they could enter and go on to the coming of Jesus without a break. We have the privilege of living in God's will every day and moment till the Rapture. "The steps of a good man are ordered of the Lord." "The meek will be guide in judgment."

Every check of the Spirit is reminding us of God's will, and if we do not heed it we grieve the Spirit. The slightest disobedience to the promptings or checks of the Spirit is punished by the loss of the peace of God in the soul. If I refuse the plan that God lays out for me, even if it is full of hardship and suffering, and take any other road, even though it may be a good one, I will lose the peace of God. Some of us have suffered enough to have learned this; even Jesus learned obedience through the things which he suffered.

When you are talking, and you feel the Spirit check you and tell you you have talked enough; when you are starting to speak of some one's faults and you hear a voice telling you that you had best not; when you see a need and the voice tells you to give so much, to refuse to heed is to break the seal of God on your soul and to feel poor and dry. Your peace is lost. If we do not cry for forgiveness we will find ourselves wandering in the wilderness.

People say, "I do not seem to have faith." You can't believe out of God's will. All this trying to believe and struggle to believe came from being out of God's will. If a seeker at the altar will mind God they can soon pray through, and if they continue to obey God they will have faith.

Here is where prayer fails. You can't pray out of God's will. You will not feel like praying if you are out of God's will. The relish is lost and the life becomes prayerless. All prayerless professors are out of God's will. Joy is lacking in many who once had it because they are out of God's will. This is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you, that ye rejoice evermore. In the center of God's will is joy. Many cannot be healed of their physical infirmities because they are out of the will of God. Not that we would mean that all who are not healed are disobedient, but if some would start to minding God they could be healed.

Temptation succeeds on the soul that is out of God's will. To mind God is to build a wall against the devil's assaults. Thus temptations become lessons in the school of Christ. Trying to crawl out of tests or to murmur against them, or to fail to go through them for the glory of God is to make of them sore trials, instead of spiritual lessons. The thing you did not want was the thing that you needed most. If you would seek for the will of God instead of an easier way, God would school you in patience and you would come to see the lesson instead of the hardship. When the Cross of Jesus Christ has done its final work in our hearts the power of temptation is broken.

Temptation has a peculiar charm to the soul that is out of God's will. The start of a downfall, spiritually, is a slight disobedience, then the way is laid open to a greater disobedience, then the peace is lost, the joy is gone and faith wrecked, prayer becomes distasteful, the moral dikes are submerged and the reaction is liable to bring what it brought in the case of Balaam or Saul or Judas. The start may be a little compromise with the world, but the world cannot give peace, and if you keep separated from it, it will not be able to take your peace away.

"Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts, and see if there be any wicked way in me (any rebellious way, and carnal way, any way of my own, any way out of God's will) and lead me in the way everlasting." Lead me out of any way not in keeping with thy way, into the way of thy choosing. The way of God's choosing is the only everlasting way. All other ways are short-lived and soon over. Jesus conquered Satan by a life of obedience, and left us the example of an obedient life that we may know how to gain the victory.

Seven-fold Aspect of Enduring Ambitions.

REV. J. T. LARSEN.

AMBITION is a good thing if one is ambitious along right purposes and occupations. Too many people have wrong ambitions, and some have too many ambitions. Having too many ambitions is like having too many irons in the fire at one time. Like some gardens, which have plants growing too close together, these many ambitions need to be thinned out to only a few, or sometimes only one. What were some of the great Bible characters and what seemed to be their outstanding ambition?

I. David the Psalmist's Ambition. "One thing have I desired . . . to dwell in the house of the Lord, . . . to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in his temple." (Ps. 27:4). David had many different abilities, and works to perform; but he desired to single out the real ambition of his life. It was a holy, worthy, and spiritual ambition. It was one which everyone of us might happily desire. He had tried about everything in the line of pleasures, sports, warfare, in domestic relationships, and in national life; but they did not seem to satisfy. He coveted one thing,—to dwell in the house of the Lord, to behold his beauty, and to wait for him in his temple, to learn of him. Perhaps he realized that this was the highest purpose of man—"to glorify God and enjoy his fellowship forever."

II. John the Baptist's Ambition. This was clearly that of bearing witness to the Christ, as the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. And, John also fulfilled the prophecy of "making straight the way of the Lord, preparing his way." Surely he had the greatest privilege of announcing the one whom all the prophets proclaimed as coming.

How closely John adhered to his commission and to introducing the Christ as the Messiah, the King and the Baptizer of the Spirit! He preached repentance, confession of sins, and faith in the present Christ who would take full possession of the scene, for "I must decrease and he must increase," admitted John.

III. The Samaritan Woman's Ambition, after her conversion through the faith in Christ's revelation of himself, was to witness for Christ to the whole city, saying, "Come, see, a man, who told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?" The result of her single ambition was that Christ was believed on by many, saying: "Now we believe, not because of thy speaking: for we have heard for ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Savior of the world." Contrast this passion for faith and confession of Christ, with that of the rich young ruler, who went away sorrowful, for he had many possessions. His ambitions and desires were divided, and material prosperity and success overmastered and stifled any desires for spiritual and holy possessions in Christ.

IV. The "one thing needful" for both Mary and Martha, showed that Christ has singled out the highest good for all in salvation, attentiveness to his word, and teachings. Not that Christ abolished all interest for material things which were necessary, but that he desired to show that some might be too concerned about material things, and place them first, when we should "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things would be added unto you." (Matt. 6:33). Christ said to Martha that "Mary had chosen that good part which shall not be taken away from her." He intimated that if we have chosen one single and enduring ambition, which is in his will and plan for us, that it shall not be taken away from us.

V. The Lord Jesus Christ himself had single ambitions. "To do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work. I have glorified thee on earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. I do always the things that please him. To this end was I born . . . that I should bear witness unto the truth." (John 4:34, 17:4, 8:29, 18:37). Note the harmony between these passages and see his main ambition was to finish the work of manifesting God-likeness to men in his person, and revealing the love and truth of God, besides the atoning for the sins of the whole race, even as ambitious John the Baptist had announced. True, Christ accomplished many other things,—teaching, healing, overcoming Satan and temptations,—but his main work was to reveal the Father in love, in truth, in teaching, and in his death on the Cross for us all. Truly "the servant is not greater than his Lord," and if we would follow him we ought also to be willing to lay down our lives for the world's salvation and for one another, besides seeking to minister to men even as he.

VI. The Apostle Paul had enduring Ambitions. To preach Christ,—his teachings, his death, his resurrection, and his coming again in power and great glory—that was Paul's commission and single ambition. Yea, to "preach Christ where he was not named," was included in the ambition. "This one thing I do," he said, "forgetting the things which are behind and pressing on toward the things which are before, I press on toward the mark (goal) unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 3:14).

Paul had ambitions, revelations, a commission, a calling, and a sure destiny, and he pressed onward toward the fulfillment of it, that he might gain the sure reward of the victor who had been faithful to him to the end. To be sure, in the thirty-odd years that Paul preached, he "hewed close to the line," and won many souls, and gained many victories for the Christ and the Father whom he loved and served.

VII. The Early Christians' Single Ambitions. It is said of them when they were scattered after the persecution, after the stoning of Stephen, that "they went everywhere preaching the word (Acts 8:4)." They perhaps had had other ambitions prior to this time but now they had one aim and objective in life—to preach Christ everywhere.

In fact, it seemed to be the ambition of most of the Christians in the first two or three centuries to proclaim the glad news of the redemption of lost sinners, everywhere. Has the Church lost the passion, and this single and worthy ambition?

There is such a complexity of life today in commercial life, in social life, in domestic life, in political life, and in the customs and regulations of modern life, that it is by no means easy to maintain a single ambition of being a gospel proclaimer for him. The interest, passion, and zeal for this main work is sadly lacking in many lives.

We need to get back to the Psalmist's desire of worship, the Baptist's desire of announcing Christ to a sin-cursed world, the love and faith of the Samaritan woman, the one thing needful of learning from Jesus how to live the single and enduring life, and to not forget the Martha side of practical action when that time comes. We need to learn of our Lord Jesus to finish the work the Father has given us to do, and not be "side-tracked" by Satan, sin, self, or any of the allurements of the world. We need to learn

BEULAH PARK CAMP.

The twenty-sixth annual camp meeting of the Beulah Park Holiness Association closed Sunday night, after a ten-days' session of one of the biggest and best meetings in the history of the association. There were quite a number of converts and several sanctified. All the cottages and the hotel, which was in charge of Mrs. Harvey Pickering, were filled with out-of-town people who camped during the entire meet.

Preaching services were in charge of Rev. J. L. Brasher of Alabama and Paul S. Rees of Detroit, Mich. Several missionaries and prominent church workers were present and spoke at various meetings. Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Rinebarger very ably conducted the song services with Mrs. B. E. Skelton of this city at the piano. E. E. Montgomery and Rev. Roscoe Hulis were in charge of the young people's work.

An executive meeting was held Thursday at which the following officers were elected: Rev. T. E. Harper of St. Francisville, president; Rev. B. E. Montgomery of Cartersville, vice president; M. Keasler of Omaha, corresponding secretary; Rev. T. E. Harper, assistant; W. T. Westbrook, Eldorado, recording secretary; B. E. Skelton, Eldorado, treasurer, and J. W. Ludlow, also of this city, superintendent of grounds.

The executive committee is composed of nine members, three going out each year and three elected for a period of three years. The new committee members are: Mrs. Iona Brown, Will Naves and Frank Dornier of Norris City. Old members are W. L. Hughes, Henry Bradley, Lorenzo Latimer, R. N. Tate, W. T. Westbrook and J. W. Ludlow. W. H. Blake and Clal Johnson were elected to the advisory committee.

The workers for the 1930 camp meeting are, preachers, Rev. C. M. Dunaway of Decatur, Ga., and Rev. J. F. Knapp of Cincinnati, Ohio. Rev. Dunaway will perhaps be remembered by Eldorado people as he conducted a revival meeting at the Methodist Church in this city a few years ago. B. D. Sutton and wife will be in charge of the song services.

GOUVERNEUR, NEW YORK.

The regular monthly Nazarene meeting of Northern New York region was held at Gouverneur, Aug. 14 and 16. Attendance was good at each service, especially in the evenings was the church well filled, mostly with local people. There were some seekers, one being a backslider who was delivered from the tobacco habit. About one hundred and twenty-five dollars was pledged and mostly paid at the time to assist the local church in paying outstanding bills.

Most of our northern preachers were in attendance and laymen from various churches. We were glad to have with us Sister Curry, of Ellenburgh, a good Methodist with a full salvation testimony, who is entering the ministry and expects to attend our Eastern Nazarene College this fall. She was a blessing in song and testimony. The preaching was well done by Revs. Burns, Babcock, Weightman and Hollenback. The local church was encouraged and visiting Nazarenes were impressed with the good future our church in this flourishing little city has before it. The spirit of co-operation between pastors in the north was never better and we expect the Spirit of God to work greatly because of this, and solicit the prayers of our friends that God will bring many souls in this year and that churches may be established in this great needy region where so many towns of largely Protestant population and American origin are without worship. We have a bunch of preachers who have caught the home mission vision. Watch the north.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

I have not reported for some time; but not because I have nothing to report, for this has been about the busiest year I ever had in the field. I have been privileged to engage in ten revival campaigns since January 5th, and we have seen Satan and his hosts defeated, and souls saved in every revival.

We will report the last three engagements, as the others have been already reported. The last ten days of June we spent in Pittsburgh, Pa., in a big Missionary Convention with the colored people of that city. Rev. Charles Slater, and Miss Bolden, who have both spent many years in Africa were our co-laborers.

My, what a time we had preaching to these fine folks! It was nothing unusual for us to stop preaching while the folks shouted the praises of God. Here was one place in which collections and offerings were very frequent, but did not hurt the spirit of the meeting. They would take about three every service, and seemed to do it so gladly. The Missionary offerings amounted to near a thousand dollars during the convention, all expenses were met, and the workers well paid.

We found Rev. J. W. Hart, the pastor, and his assistant, Rev. C. G. Britton wonderful men of God, and they have a wonderful people to preach to. The writer received a hearty invitation to come back, and we certainly will be glad to do so.

Our next engagement was in Celina, Ohio, with the Nazarene Church. Rev. Robert Goodwin is their good pastor. This was a tent meeting. God gave us some good fruit in this campaign. They have no church building in Celina, but have their lots to build on. During our campaign something like $500.00 was pledged and given toward a new church, and as soon as the tent came down they started to put in their foundation for their new church. Celina is having a struggle but we feel sure that they will win out.

Our last meeting was in a tent in Middleport, Ohio. Rev. C. T. Moore is the good pastor there. Here we had big crowds. We did not lack for "Amens," and shouts of praise in this meeting. Here too, God gave us some souls at the altar that were brightly saved, and before we left Rev. Moore received five new members into the church.

We were looking for a great closing out day, on the last Sunday, but I received a telegram that my dear old father had suffered a stroke of paralysis, so I hastened to my home on Saturday, and stayed by his bedside until Monday, when without a struggle he slipped off to heaven.

I have not heard how the revival closed up, but I feel sure that Brother Moore and his good people closed the campaign on Sunday night with victory.

I am resting a day or so since father's funeral, and then I will go to Chillicothe, Ohio, to give our new Nazarene Church there a short meeting before our District Assembly, which convenes on August 28th.

The fields are "white for harvest," and it seems to me that every one, "that has a mind to work," can find plenty to do. I am expecting to keep busy "about my Father's business," until Jesus comes back again, or death calls me home.

MOUNT PLEASANT, MICHIGAN.

The first annual camp meeting of the Isabella County Holiness Association, held at Mount Pleasant, Michigan, July 26 to August 4, under the direction of the Michigan Association for the Promotion of Holiness, will go down in history as a great camp meeting for God and holiness.

The meeting was a blessing and inspiration to all who attended. In the very first service hands went up for prayers and in every service souls were found at the altar, until seventy-five precious souls found their way to God.

The preachers were Rev. L. M. Blakely, pastor of the Asbury M. E. Church, Detroit, Mich., and President of the State Association; Rev. J. S. Wood, superintendent of the Mennonite Church of the Pontiac District. Their work was honored of God as they gave themselves to the truth of holiness, and their splendid messages and labor were rewarded by a gracious time of salvation.

Mrs. L. M. Blakely had charge of the Young People's work, and a gracious work it was. She is a faithful minister's wife and an earnest worker. Mrs. Grace B. Heneks at the piano and Mrs. T. U. Fuller leading the singing, with Miss S. M. Walsh her assistant, made the musical end of the camp very interesting.

Mrs. B. C. Beasley, representative of the National Holiness Prayer Bands, was also present and led in some of the morning meetings. An offering was taken for her work and the folks seemed pleased to contribute. Everything done was done in the Spirit, God was pleased and the people were blessed.

A few of the special cases at the altar was the salvation of a Catholic young man who was attracted to the meeting through our open-air meeting, and the sanctification of a returned missionary from South Africa. A number of Indians from the Indian School in the city were saved, and prayed and sang in their own tongue around the altar helping each other to get through to God. We held a meeting at the prisoners' camp, just outside the city, where one hundred and fifty attended; at the close fifty of them held up their hands for prayer. Please remember these dear men when you pray.

The meetings were largely attended and the interest and attention the best, in spite of the oil boom that was on in the vicinity. There were two wells came in while we were there.

Eighteen different denominations and six states were represented in our last Sunday meeting and, best of all, God was in our midst and holiness had a big lift in Mount Pleasant, Michigan.

CAMP SYCHAR REPORT.

On Sunday evening, Aug. 18, Rev. T. M. Anderson, of Wilmore, Ky., brought the message which marked the closing of Camp Sychar for its fifty-ninth annual session. This was perhaps the most fruitful meeting in many years. About 500 persons knelt at the altars during the ten days and many very definite victories were won. Souls were saved, believers were sanctified, several felt the healing touch upon their bodies, and all were instructed in the deeper truths of Christian life and experience.

Many who have attended Sychar regularly for many years remarked upon the unusually fine spirit which prevailed at Sychar this year. Complete harmony prevailed everywhere in all departments of the work of the camp. The whole camp from the very beginning to the end was as one great family enjoying a great feast together. And in reality that is what it was. Denominational lines faded away. The people met together from all parts of the state and from many other states and associated together in the bonds of Christian fellowship and love, devoted to the common cause of building up the kingdom of God upon earth. There is nothing that will unite folks like the love of God in the heart, and the picture of Christian fellowship and love as seen exemplified in the spirit of Sychar this year is but a feeble representation of what heaven will be.

The preaching and the singing were of the usual high order and were a great source of blessing and inspiration to all who were privileged to enjoy them. Many remarked upon the completeness of the preaching force at Sychar this year. Men of differing personalities, unlike each other in their manner of presenting gospel truth, yet each one presenting the same old gospel, and each one emphasizing the same vital points of doctrine, each supplementing the others gave us a trio of preachers hard to equal and impossible to surpass in ability to present and enforce the truth.

Rev. T. M. Anderson was with us for the first time this year, and so impressed his hearers with the depth and forcefulness of his messages that it was with gladness that the people learned that the management had been successful in retaining Rev. Anderson for next year. Rev. E. W. Pettitcord was at his best, and for another year held the interest and commanded the admiration of the people by the power and force of his messages. Rev. C. M. Dunaway in his inimitable way—a way all his own—again impressed the people with his messages which he never fails to get through to his hearers.

All in all it was a great camp. As the campers said reluctant good-byes and separated for their homes it was with the feeling that the camp had been a decided success, and many already planning for next year. Many tents and rooms have already been reserved for next year, workers have been retained and announced, and people, while gratefully remembering the blessings and the inspiration of the camp of 1929, are planning and praying for 1930.

The annual Memorial service this year honored the memory of twenty-five Sychar attendants who passed to their eternal reward during the year. The last name on this list was that of O. F. Skeen, one of the best known and most highly esteemed of Sychar attendants, who suddenly and without warning passed away at his home on the camp grounds the first Friday of the camp. For twenty-nine years this man of God had superintended or assisted in setting up the camp, having just successfully accomplished this work this year. His sudden passing away came as a shock to the people as the news was spread about the camp grounds. His funeral was held from the main tabernacle at the hour for the annual Memorial service and was very impressive.

It was fitting that this service should be held where so many times he had enjoyed the blessing of God upon his soul, and where upon the evening preceding his death he gave such a ringing testimony to the saving, sanctifying, healing, and keeping power of God, that it was a topic of conversation among the people even before his passing away. This his last public testimony will be cherished by those who heard it, as a blessed memory through the years.

The missionary program at the two o'clock hour Wednesday was an occasion long to be remembered. The chief speaker at this service was Miss L. Leona Aggola a returned missionary from China and representing the work of the National Holiness Association. At the close of this service thirty-two young people came forward to the altar dedicating themselves definitely to foreign missionary service. It was truly an impressive, inspiring scene.

"And what shall I more say?" For the time and space would fail me to tell of it all. The altar scenes, the times of great manifestations of the presence and power of God, of the inspirational singing, the unctuous prayers and testimonies, the wonderful sermons, the successful work among the young people, the financial successes, the blessed fellowship, the many details of these blessed services which must be reserved for a fuller description later on. Just now we must summarize all these blessings in their effects upon our hearts and lives in the language of those disciples who journeyed to Emmaus following the Resurrection, "Did not our hearts burn within us as he talked with us by the way?" as we enjoyed these blessed ten days? And we reverently give unceasing thanks to God for giving us the advantages and the privileges of Camp Sychar for the season of 1929.

from Paul the power of a life given over wholly to God, for sacrifice, suffering, service, and the salvation of others. We need to come back once more to the time where the Apostolic Church "so preached that great multitudes believed."

But How? By prayer, sincere desire, separation to God from the world, by determination to let other things go and serve him first of all. By a ready mind and heart to worship him, learn of him, follow him, and faithfully minister before him. Begin at home, in the home church, and then around the nearby villages, towns, and cities, reaching out into nearby counties and states, arriving, if he so calls, even in foreign lands, bearing witness of him who loved us and gave himself for us.

gelical faith. This fall it is their high privilege and duty to elect men to the General Conference who will stand for Methodism, her doctrines in their purity, for revivals, for the salvation of souls, and for the up-building of a church filled and guided by the Holy Ghost. There is great power vested in that class of ministers who are not seeking office, or expecting large places of remuneration or officialism. They have it in their power to elect the delegates to the General Conference who will elect the officials, the men who will dictate, control and guide the church in her future activities and influence. May the Holy Spirit guide these men in the selection of their brethren who will go to Dallas and elect the officials who, for a number of years, will guide the affairs and powerfully influence the spiritual life and activities of the M. E. Church, South.

There is a host in Southern Methodism who do not intend to support or be under the administration and direction of any man or class of men who deny the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, who question the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus Christ, his vicarious and redemptive sufferings upon the cross, and his bodily resurrection. We not only have convictions, but we have faith, a restful faith, which has been established and fixed beyond question in gracious experiences attested by the Holy Spirit. To surrender would be to grieve the Holy Spirit, to forfeit communion and assurance and to lose our souls. We have become established and rooted in certain fundamental truths and by the grace of God and the blessing of the Holy Trinity we cannot, we will not, surrender. We cannot, and will not, remain inactive or silent. We must, when it becomes necessary, protest, pray and preach the truths of the Holy Bible that bring salvation to the lost souls of men.

Rumors Come to Me.

While recuperating here at our quiet place in the country, many rumors come floating to me: among other things, I am told in a sort of indefinite way, that at one of the summer schools of a conference in the M. E. Church, South, a very prominent Methodist preacher undertakes in his lectures to do away with the Virgin Birth of our Lord Jesus, his bodily resurrection, the fall of man, and his great need of redemptive grace, and much else of modernistic liberalism which is entirely destructive to evangelical teaching and saving faith.

I find it difficult for me to believe that a group of preachers in Southern Methodism would sit quietly under such teaching. My curiosity is aroused. More than that, my interest in the church is far beyond mere curiosity. We certainly cannot afford to have any such teaching as this in our summer schools for young preachers. The Virgin Birth of our Lord Jesus, the claims he made for himself, the credentials he gave of his Godhead in the performance of miracles, his redemptive suffering upon the cross, his bodily resurrection and ascension into glory are the fundamentals of our Christian faith, and no Methodist preacher must attack these doctrines and be allowed to pass without severe censure and general protest.

I should really like to know if there was any such teaching in any of our summer schools. During these nine months passed I have had some opportunity to read the church papers, and I have found nothing of this sort of thing in any of them. I have not read them all, but a very large number of them, and I have not read all that any of them contains, but I hardly believe there is any paper in the M. E. Church, South, that would make an open attack against the Virgin Birth, vicarious suffering and bodily resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. These doctrines are so clearly taught in the New Testament that to contradict them would be open and defiant infidelity to divinely-inspired truth.

I would be ignorant indeed, if I were not aware of the fact that modernism is making very serious inroads in Methodism in all parts of the nation. It seems to be generally understood that there is more or less modernistic teaching in practically all of our schools, teaching that is entirely out of harmony with Bible truth and Methodist standards of doctrine, and that such teaching is very destructive to spiritual life, to the faith that carries with it evangelistic power and fire to illuminate and save the lost. This state of things is most lamentable and deserves severe protest. But if any man in the church dares to stand up in the summer schools for young ministers and deny the Virgin Birth, redemptive suffering and resurrection of Jesus Christ, he is not a Methodist; he is not a Christian: he is an apostate. He is an infidel with reference to the most precious truths of our holy Christianity. He has no right to be in a school or pulpit supported by Methodist people, and there ought to be such general, loud and prolonged protest against such a man that he would be compelled to seek fellowship elsewhere than in the Methodist Church.

Why He Got Mad at the Preacher.

Some time ago Evangelist Will Harney was preaching in a revival meeting in a county seat and one of the citizens of some prominence got indignant against the evangelist. When asked for the cause of his objection to the preacher he said, "A few evenings ago wife and I went around to hear him preach and he preached on the future punishment of the wicked, and it disturbed my wife so that she could not sleep."

It seems that his wife was quite a society woman, chasing around to the card parties, theaters and dances. There is very little comfort for such people under Will Harney's preaching. It is entirely probable that there was some other matters of even a more serious character in the hidden life of this man's wife. At all events, when Harney shells the woods on sin and the certainty that those who fail to repent, will go down into a hell of torment, she was greatly perturbed, and instead of repenting and seeking the Lord, she spent a wakeful night abusing the preacher, and sent her husband out the next day to say and do what he could to hinder the good work of the revival.

Brother Harney's sermons on hell and the certainty that those who violate the laws of God, and reject the mercies of God will be punished, are of a character to bring people to repentance, or to disturb their sleep. I am old-fashioned enough to believe that one of the greatest needs of the times is preaching that will produce an awakening, that will bring sinners to the altar, or give them sleepless nights of tossing upon a pillow that gives them no rest or consolation.

Some time ago, in a city of several hundred thousand population a very intelligent and thoughtful man said to me, "We have finely educated preachers in this city in our pulpits, several orators, but we are not having any preaching that makes the people afraid to commit sin, that warns the sinner that he is going straight toward a lake of burning torment. Repentance and conversions are almost unknown." Any pastor who has a church in a county seat where sin is rampant, and the people are indifferent and asleep to their danger, who will turn Harney loose on them for about three weeks, will find that there is a phase of gospel truth that will awaken and stir the people, that will disqualify them for comfortable sleep. One of the greatest needs of our times is a tidal wave of conviction for sin, a great cry to God, from lost, penitent souls for mercy and forgiveness in the name of Christ. We are not going to have the revival that we sorely need, and that there is much talk about, without some very plain, earnest preaching on sin and its final punishment. May God stir up a host of preachers to arouse the people, to drive sleep from their eyes, and fill the eyes with tears of penitence. The wickedness of the times in which we are living calls for earnest preaching, deep repentance, and mighty cries to God for mercy.

H. C. MORRISON.

What Time I Am Afraid—I Will Trust.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

TRUST in God is good for emergencies. Then it is that man's extremity meets God's opportunity. David declared that, "What time I am afraid I will trust in the Lord." It was when Peter was sinking beneath the angry waves that he cried out, "Lord, save, or I perish." It was when the ruler of the synagogue was informed that his daughter was dead, and that he need not trouble the Master any longer, when he had reached the limit of human assistance and was in torturing despair, that Jesus, on hearing the sad news being broken to the disconsolate father, came to the rescue and said, "Be not afraid, only believe."

It is wonderfully in the favor of broken-hearted humanity that Jesus comes along just at the right time. He "listens in" and hears the discouraging news that comes to each of us, and he knows that it is his opportunity to pour in the oil and wine of consolation, and never fails to come on schedule time. Before you can bend your knee at the mercy seat to pour out your heart's anguish, he is there to open the fountain of his compassionate mercy and heal your wounded heart.

I recall when my dear father was suffering excruciating pain, and his groans were so piteous at times, that I fled into the yard to find relief—for how could he suffer and I not suffer with him! I looked up into the blue-vaulted heavens, and it seemed the stars blinked in sympathy with my grief, and beyond the stars there was their Maker who seemed to speak through the silence of the night, "My child, be not afraid, only believe."

Last winter when Dr. Morrison was sick

very ill, and we were trying to get him strong enough to make the trip to Florida, the doctors said it was a great risk, and did not know what the consequences would be, that I fell upon my knees before the Lord—my heavenly Father—and told him I must have relief, that I could not endure the suspense and anxiety any longer, that he gave me the assurance that he would make the trip alright, and that he would begin to improve. It was so assuring that when the doctor seemed distressed and doubtful as to the advisability of making the trip, that I said, "I feel he is going to make it alright," and felt really happy in my heart. And who dares to say that God does not answer prayer! Those who say such things bear witness that they have not had the sweet comfort of having had prayer answered.

I started out by saying that "Trust in God is good for emergencies," and I say this from experience. Have there not been times in your life when it seemed the battle was bound to be lost, when every human prop had been knocked from under you, when lo! the Comforter came and brought reinforcement from the skies, and in the face of defeat you won the victory? Friend, don't forget that in the midst of life's emergencies and perplexities that trust is the open door to victory. It is easy to lay hold upon God when all else fails, and he is not insulted that you have left him to the last, but speedily comes to the rescue and brings sweet deliverance. The doctor who knows he has a cure that no other doctor has, is glad to step in when all others have failed and show what he can do! We have the Great Physician who never found a disease, nor a heartache, that he could not cure.

A friend of Dr. Morrison's died some time ago, and in his Bible they found the following beautiful poem, which bears out the thought I have been trying so poorly to bring to you. But remember that "Trust in God is good for emergencies!"

THE HEART'S STORY.

"I will not doubt, though all my ships at sea
Come drifting home with broken masts and sails,

I will believe the hand which never fails,
From seeming evil worketh good for me;

And though I weep because those sails are tattered,

Still will I cry while my best hopes are shattered.

"I trust in Thee."

"I will not doubt, though all my prayers return Unanswered from the still white realm above;

I will believe it is an all-wise love
Which has refused these things for which I yearn;

And though at times I cannot keep from grieving,

Yet the pure ardor of my fixed believing
Undimmed shall burn.

"I will not doubt, though sorrows fall like rain,
And troubles swarm like bees about to hive;

I will believe the heights for which I strive
Are only reached by anguish and by pain,
And though I groan and writhe beneath
my crosses,

I yet shall see through my severest losses
The greater gain.

"I will not doubt. Well anchored in this faith, Like some stanch ship, my soul braves
every gale;

So strong its courage will not quail
To breast the mighty unknown sea of death.
Oh! may I cry, when body parts with spirit,

'I do not doubt,' so listening worlds may hear it,
With my last breath!"

his promise; refuse to be content with anything less than the fulness of salvation. He will keep his promise. He cannot fail. The heavens and earth may pass away, but his Word abideth forever.

Three thousand years ago, the old Hebrew Psalmist proved the truth of what my friend above wrote. Listen to the music and strong confidence of his words ringing down the long corridors of thirty centuries: "He satisfieth the longing soul; and filleth the hungry soul with goodness." (Psalm 107:9). And my little comrade, this corps cadet, adds her brave, glad Amen!

The soul full of other things loathes the heavenly food, but the hungry soul longs for it, relishes it and, finding it, is satisfied. Blessed Mary in her Psalm of jubilation over her Baby Jesus, said, "He hath filled the hungry with good things; and the rich he hath sent empty away." (Luke 1:53).

This corps cadet was so hungry for righteousness and holiness that the Heavenly Father's heart was moved toward her with love and compassion even as the heart of a mother toward her hungry babe, and when in utter self-despair she trusted and gave her little all to him, he satisfied her. Hallelujah!

Third, "Last Sunday I just gave God my all and ceased struggling, and O the peace! It passeth understanding," writes this lassie. "If you wish to be assured of the truth of Christianity, try it," wrote Samuel Coleridge. And this is what the corps cadet did when she gave God her all and ceased struggling. That is the way into God's treasure house of blessing and there is no other way. That is the strait gate, and the narrow way that leads to life, the life of God in the soul, of which Jesus spoke, and in that way the heart finds the fulness of God and the "peace which passeth all understanding."

What is holiness? It is wholeness. "I just gave God my all." That is wholeness. And when God has the whole of a man or woman, a boy or girl, he purifies the nature, the affections, the thoughts, and fills to overflowing the soul with himself. And "love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance" are the fruit of his indwelling.

Holiness is purity of heart, singleness of eye, healthy tenderness of conscience.

Holiness is perfect loyalty to Christ.

Observe: "I am determined to seek Christ more and more," writes this corps cadet, "and I will obey him at all costs." That is loyalty to Jesus. It is Heavenly Patriotism. "Our citizenship is in Heaven," wrote Paul, (Phil. 3:20, Revised Version.) The Kingdom of Heaven is the Fatherland of the Christian. Heaven is the Homeland of the soul, and Jesus is its Light, its Sun, its King, and to him this cadet gives her loyalty, her love, her glad obedience and her full confidence.

Holiness is freedom—freedom from sin. If we sin, we are not free. No declaration of the Rights of man, no Federal Constitution can make the sinner free. "He that committeth sin is the servant of sin," is the eternal Word of the Lord. He is sin's bond-slave, and the law, the law of God, the moral law within us, protests, condemns us, and we are no longer free, when we sin. We enter into bondage, bondage to guilt, bondage to fear, to temper, to pride, or lust, or falsehood, to sin in any or all of its hydra-headed forms; and only the Son of God can make us free. No forms, no ceremonies, no priestly rites, no ecclesiastical membership can free us. "Whom the Son maketh free is free indeed," and this freedom is holiness and holiness is this freedom. No law opposes, nothing within us protests when the heart is pure, when the whole soul is gladly set to do the whole will of God, to "obey Jesus at all costs."

Thank God for this corps cadet's testimony to such a sweet, God-honoring, soul-satisfying experience; She is in the way of holiness; the way that leads Home; the way the saints and martyrs and soldiers following Jesus through the long ages have trod, the way into which he calls you and me; the way into which I entered over forty-three years ago in exactly the same way this corps cadet entered, and the way you, oh my brother, my sister, may now, just now, enter, if you will.

This is the "High Way" of which John Oxenham wrote:

"To every man there openeth
A Way, and Ways, and a Way,
And the high soul climbs the High Way,
And the low soul gropes the Low,
And in between on the misty flats,
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
A High Way and a Low,
And every man decideth
The Way his soul shall go."

This corps cadet has joined the company of "High Souls," and is climbing the "High Way." If she turns not back, but marches straight on, she will some day, some glad, wondrous day, pass through the gates of pearl to find herself treading the streets of gold in the City which lieth foursquare, the City where there is no night, no tears, no sorrow nor crying, no pain and no death, and where she shall "See the King in his beauty." Hallelujah! Will you join her, dear reader? If so, drop on your knees just now and tell Jesus so. Stop struggling and believe.

THE TIDE IS SURE TO WIN.

On the far reef the breakers
Recoil in shattered foam,
Yet still the sea behind them
Urges its forces home;
Its chant of triumph surges
Through all the thunderous din—
The wave may break in failure,
But the tide is sure to win.

O mighty sea! thy message
In clanging spray is cast;
Within God's plan of progress
The tide shall win at last.
How wide the shores of evil,
How strong the reefs of sin—
The wave may be defeated
But the tide is sure to win.

Ideals for Earnest Youth.

Ideals for Earnest Youth is a charming book for young people of both sexes. It is neatly bound, excellent paper, good, clear print, 224 pages, short chapters, sometimes only two pages, frequently not more than three pages. This enables the young reader to catch up the book at a few spare moments, read a chapter and go to work, or on a journey, with something to think about. Let me give you a few of the chapters:

Self Respect, Self Mastery, The Joy of Living, Your Ideals, Courtship and Marriage, Take Care of Your Mind, The School of Struggles, Backbone vs. Wishbone, Team Work, Recreation.

Send a dollar to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for a copy of Ideals for Earnest Youth, and surprise one of your children or young friends with a bright smile and a beautiful gift.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

I have been giving you some good stories on Page Ten, thinking you would welcome a change from the regular routine. I find that many of your letters were written many months ago and are out of date, so I shall ask you to allow me to feed them to Mr. W. B. before they are too stale for him to digest. School is now opening for most of you and it will be interesting to have you write and tell us something of your studies, your teacher and what you plan to make of yourself. I have suggested before that we leave off telling the color of our hair, our height, age, letters in our name and such news, and confine ourselves to our community, and any interesting happenings that you think the cousins would enjoy. Some of you write very interesting letters, and I trust each of you who come to visit our Page may see what an enjoyable time you can make of it.

I hope each of you has had a good vacation, and that you will enter school with a determination to make it the best year of your school life, so far.

Lovingly,

AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just finished reading the Boys and Girls' Page and decided I would write you a note. I have been a subscriber to The Herald for some time and it surely is a fine paper. I always read it from cover to cover. As I am a shut-in it sure helps. I have been in bed almost ten months with T. B. I like it fine here, but get lonely for my family. They live in Arkansas. I am not a Christian but want to be and ask the prayers of every Christian to pray for me. I like Christian literature, and that's about all I read. This is a long, deary life when you are confined to your bed. But I am trying to trust in God. I must close as my letter is long and uninteresting, but hope to see it in print. Mrs. E. Merritt.

Hendricks Laws San, El Paso, Tex.

Dear Girls and Boys: I am going to tell you a true story of a little boy seven years old. It was New Year's day and his mother, father, grandmother and sister ten years old were going to visit an uncle and eat New Year's dinner. Richard said, "If you would as lieve I would go and stay with grandpa." They said, "All right, stay there till we come home in the evening."

So they left him to stay till they came back. But they never came back and I will tell you why. When the visit was over they started home and a cloud came up and a mist made it too dark to see the Railroad track they were to cross. A woman living near said to her men folks, "I see the lights of a car so near I don't think they can get across till the train passes, for I can't see the lights any more. You go see if they got over." They went and found the train had crushed the auto and all in it were killed. They called an undertaker who gathered the dead bodies, took them to his "Home" and a crowd gathered, but no one knew who they were, but one man said, "I think they were people I saw at a home near me and I will go see them." He found the man in his basement fixing his furnace for the night and asked, "Did you have company today?" "Yes." "Were there four of them?" "Yes." "Did they leave at 4 o'clock?" "Yes; why do you ask?" "There was a wreck"—but got no further for the man rushed out and went as fast as he could and came to the crossing to find the bodies taken from the wreck, and went to the Funeral Home but there had been such crowds there that they refused to let any more in till the man said, "I must get in if I break the door down." The undertaker seeing he was in such a rage said, "Of course, you can come in." And sure enough his mother, wife, brother and little girl were all laid out dead. He went to the telegraph office and called his sister, who is a pastor's wife, and she took the first train for the awful scene. She went to her mother's home and had to take care of all the bodies for burial. None of the family were left but Richard, who was left behind to await their coming home. The poor child was left alone, but an aunt who has no boy, is caring for him and giving him a good home, but he is so lonely for his loved ones.

The pastor's wife says her greatest comfort is, they were all saved in Christ's kingdom, even the little girl was a follower of the Lord Jesus.

Dear children, I hope all of you who read this story, will be ready when you are called to leave this life; will be ready as this fairly was, to meet the Lord. Get all your sins wiped out in the blood of Jesus to meet him in glory.

With love for you all.

Mary Hudson.

Dearest Aunt Bettie: Well, it has been a long time since I came in to have a little chat with you and the cousins. First of all I want to thank all the boys and girls for their nice letters to me and am sorry to say I have lost some of the addresses, so you know why I haven't written you, but I enjoy your letters so much when I am shut in. I pray that God may see a way for me to go home soon, for I have been here eighteen months now. Won't you all pray for me that I may go home? Now cousins, I promised to tell you a little about this place. Well, it is a very large place, the Hospital alone has 200 patients in it; they have cows; they milk them three times a day, that is, they have different bunches but don't get enough milk to run the patients. There are about five hundred patients here. It is a nice place, but a person soon gets tired when you stay here so long. The street car goes through here every hour. They have nice big buildings here; they have their laundry and also their own light plant. This place is run by the State. They have chickens and hogs, but not enough to furnish the place. Well, as my letter is getting rather long and I am taking up too much space, hope Mr. W. B. will be out hunting rabbits when this arrives. Hoping to hear from the cousins, of how they liked this, and I may write a little more sometime.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Some unknown friend has been sending my mother The Pentecostal Herald for several years. She certainly does appreciate it and enjoys reading it. She wishes to thank her friend through the paper. I enjoy reading page ten and always look for Tennessee letters. I am a member of the Presbyterian Church. Our Young People's Christian Endeavor Society was asked to exchange programs with a church in England. We put on a special program two weeks ago using Andrew Johnson's article on Plan of Salvation, published in The Pentecostal Herald, our subject being How to Become a Christian, working it in with songs, prayers and talks by two of our young people. It made a very interesting program. Thanks, Mr. Johnson, for the article. We are to have in exchange a program given by young people of some English church. When we get their program will have it published in The Pentecost Herald that it may be reproduced by young people's societies who are readers of The Herald. If Aunt Bettie thinks this letter worthy of print will write again. I was fifteen March 5. Would like to hear from young people near my age. Will answer all letters.

Dear Aunt Bettie: The cousins seem to write to you from every State in the Union, but this cousin is writing to you from the state of Grace, away up in the hill country of Canaan, where the air is so pure and invigorating that the one who lives up here becomes healthy, fat, and flourishing. Praise the Lord. It is so much better to live up here than down in the lowlands, where the insects of doubts and fears try to sting the inhabitants so as to cause their death. Occasionally a few of those insects venture up here in the hill country, but as David said in the 118th Psalm, "They compassed me about . . . but in the name of the Lord will I destroy them." The way to destroy them is with the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, as Jesus did, so we can do. He overcame the foe by saying, It is written. Now if any of you cousins are living in the lowlands, or near the border, may you start for the hill country, and do according to the words of that old song, the first verse:

"My eyes are on the mountain-top,
I'm running for my life,
I've left old Sodom to the flames,
With all its sin and strife."

Come up here and see what wonderful things God has provided for the inhabitants of this country. I am enjoying the scenery. We can enjoy North, South, East, and West, and upward, for our gaze for the coming of the Son of God. I trust that W. B. will not get sight of this letter, for I desire all the cousins and Aunt Bettie the best place you can find up here in the hill country until Jesus calls for you to come on Home to Heaven. My other address is Lisbon, Ohio, 245 Water Street. Charley H. Faulk.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am almost seventeen years old, five feet, five inches tall, have auburn hair and grey eyes. Who has my birthday, May 28? I would love to correspond with the people about my age, (16-22). Beatrice Collins, I guess your name to be Helen. I don't want to take up too much space so I will close.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am from the state of old Kentucky. I am twelve years of age. I professed when I was eleven years old. I have brown hair and brown eyes. I am four feet, ten inches. I am in the fifth grade at school. I have two sisters; one had a stroke of paralysis a year ago and it left her a cripple. All of you cousins pray for her. Well, as this is my first letter to the dear old Herald I will close and write again soon. Hope to see this letter in print. Lenora Rickford.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I live with uncle and aunt. Mother has been dead for five years, father is in the old country, so really I am an orphan. My uncle takes The Herald and I sure enjoy reading page ten. I learn that so many are Christians. I am glad to know that we girls and boys are fleeing from the paths of sin into the paths of righteousness. As this is my first letter to the dear old Herald I will quit and leave more room for others.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please move over and let an Oklahoma girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Thank the good Lord, I am saved and sanctified and belong to the Nazarene Church. Our pastor is Bro. Edgar Pierce. I sure do like him; they have four children. I have a brother thirteen and one seven, and a sister eleven. I am fourteen years old. I have been called to be a missionary and go to Japan. I sure will be glad when I finish school so I can go. I am in the eighth grade. Pray for all of us. Wanda-Douthitt.

Rt. 1, Duncan, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again. This is my third letter I have written to The Herald and I saw one of them in print. I sure do hope you will print this one. I am twelve years of age, have blue eyes and light hair, and am in the fifth grade. Our school began in July. I weigh 87 pounds. I am 4 feet, 6 inches tall. They have a new road through here. My birthday is Dec. 17. I have six sisters and six brothers and my two oldest brothers are in Indiana and my oldest one is married. Marian M. Burris, I guess your middle name to be Minnie, and if I am right don't forget your promise. My youngest sister is a little baby, and she is growing fast and is so cute. Her name is Ninna Christine. Hello Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little thirteen-year-old girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Rosella Koehler, I guess your middle name to be May. This is my first time to guess at any one's name. I live only a short distance from Church. I went to Sunday school every Sunday this year, but one Sunday it rained in the winter. I take music from one of my cousins and enjoy it very well. I wonder if I have a twin? My birthday is Feb. 5. I am thinking of Miss Ione Joplins. I write to her and a few more girls. I would like for all girls to write to me and I will try to answer all letters I can. Pray that I may be one of God's children.

FALLEN ASLEEP

OUR LOVED ONE.

(In memory of papa who went to heaven May 16, 1929.)

There is an humble, lonely grave,
Just beyond a large oak tree;
And what lies in its bosom,
Is, oh! so dear to me.

In the grave so peacefully sleeping,
Lies his body now at rest,
While his soul has gone to Jesus,
With the ransomed and the blest.

The days are sad and lonely,
Without you, papa dear;
You always brought us gladness,
With this, a word of cheer.

Our home is not as happy now
For there is your vacant chair;
Yet, papa, you deserve your rest—
We would not call you back here.

The burden of your absence is heavy,
How we miss you none can tell,
Oh! so hard has been the parting,
But we know in heaven you dwell.

Yes, you rest from honest labor,
Your earthly task is done;
No more pain, no more worry,
Your noble life is run.

The greatest treasure we have left,
Is our precious mama, dear;
She is gentle, kind and good,
Just as you were here.

Dear papa, you have left us,
But we will be true to thee;
Always as brave and honest,
As you would have us be.

We hope to meet you later,
And hold thy blessed hand,
Then all will be together,
And all will understand.

Sleep on, darling papa,
'Til the resurrection morn,
Then, we hope to meet you
Where parting is unknown.

Dora and Lil Tanner.

HUFFMAN.

J. R. Huffman was born in Giles County, Va., June 11, 1854, and died August 4, 1929. Brother Huffman was converted about 32 years ago in a meeting held by the writer, in the St. John M. E. Church, Monroe Co., W. Va. He immediately united with the M. E. Church, of which he remained a faithful member until his death. Soon after his conversion he professed entire sanctification, in a meeting held by the writer. He was a faithful and an untiring witness through the years, to this great salvation.

Brother Huffman was united in marriage to Mary Sue Sibold, of Giles County, Va., in the year 1876, who departed this life about one year ago. To this union was born 8 children, two of whom died in infancy. One daughter, Mrs. Lula Kessenger, died about 26 years ago.

Brother Huffman dearly loved The Pentecostal Herald and was a continuous subscriber for 30 years or more.

He died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clinton Smith, of Ballard, Monroe County, W. Va. I visited him a few days before his death, and though he was then walking "Through the valley of the shadow of death," he "feared no evil." His nurse said to the writer, "He was the most religious person I ever knew. His last conscious act was to call me by name and lift his hand heavenward."

The writer preached his funeral from the words, "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord." He was laid to rest by the side of his wife in the old home cemetery, Clover Hollow, Giles County, Va. P. H. Clark.

SHORT.

Mrs. Tillie S. Short, wife of D. E. Short, Sr., of Depoy, Ky., was born April 19, 1861; quietly passed away Sunday morning, Aug. 11, 1929. She had been confined to her bed for a little over nine months, and in the Protestant Hospital at Nashville, Tenn., for eight months. She was the mother of eight children: C. L. Short, D. E. Short, Jr., and Miss Stella E. Short, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. S. J. Larkins, of Princeton, Ky.; Mrs. F. E.

Brewer, Mrs. Jess Danner, E. F. Short and Sam Short, of Depoy, Ky. Also thirteen grandchildren, all survive her. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. J. R. Laswell, of Owensboro, Ky.

She was a kind mother and grandmother, a devoted wife and a true friend. She was loved by all who knew her. She professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, at 12 years of age, in which she remained a faithful member until death. She loved to talk of her Christ and his saving power. She was also a member of The Herald family and loved its weekly visits.

Funeral services were conducted by her former pastor, Rev. J. F. Hill, of Cadiz, Ky. Interment was made at the Vernal Grove Cemetery near her home.

It is hard to give our dear mother up, but "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." May we all meet her in the sweet bye and bye.

The flowers we lay upon your grave,
May wither and decay,
But the love we have for you, dear mother,
Will never fade away.

A Daughter.

Adam Clarke---Great Commentary

Dr. Clarke was one of a long succession of men who, in every age of the Christian Church, have applied the best energies of their intellect and heart to the study and interpretation of the Scriptures. The seven gifts which, according to Augustine, the true expositor of Scripture must possess—reverence, piety, science, fortitude, prudence, cleanness of heart, and heavenly wisdom—were his portions.

The studies of his earlier years always had a bearing on this great work. From the beginning he felt the need of being taught by God to understand his own word. Referring to this, he says: "No man ever taught me the doctrine I embrace; I received it singly by reading the Bible."

Sufficiently critical to aid the inquiries of the more serious student, and yet sufficiently popular to serve the purpose of general edification.

He gives a lucid view of the several books of Scripture, as to their dates and authors, their scope and connection; he expounds the original text in a manner adapted to the deficiencies of the reader; he elucidates difficulties in chronology, history, and oriental manners; he develops the grand doctrines of revelation, and applies the whole to the great concerns of human salvation and duty.

One leading feature in its character is independence in thinking. While he availed himself of the labors of others, the great number of his expositions are emphatically his own.

Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary on the Bible is one of the noblest works of the class in the entire domain of sacred literature. It is a thesaurus of general learning. Its luminous expositions of the Law and the Gospel; its earnest and forcible appeals to the conscience of the sinner and the unbeliever; its rich counsels for the well-understood wants of the Christian; its endless exhibitions of general knowledge; and its valuable aids to the students of those holy tongues in which revelation took its first recorded forms—all will render this book the companion and the counselor of multitudes as long as the English language may endure. The man who accomplished it achieved immortality, his name having become identified with an indestructible monument of learning and religion.

We commend it as the most spiritual commentary published. 6 large volumes, good paper, good binding, new type.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XII.—September 22, 1929.

Subject.—Malachi Foretells a New Day. Malachi 3:1-12.

Golden Text.—Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me. Mal. 3:1.

Time.—About B. C. 433.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—Malachi was the last of the Old Testament prophets. He prophesied in Jerusalem about the time when Nehemiah returned to the city after his return to Babylon. Notwithstanding their captivity the Jews were again fast turning away from the service of Jehovah. They were far from being obedient to His word. At this juncture Malachi arose among them full of warning, but with a message rich in promise.

When Malachi closed his ministry, for some reason, God decided to send them no more prophets for a period of about 400 years; or, at least, we know of none. The nation seemed almost God-forsaken. But during that long, dark period the nation did, in some measure, hold on to God; but better still, God held on to them. The great mass of the people were very untrue; but there were at all times some pure, saintly people among them. God never leaves himself without witnesses. The traditions of the elders might mean more to the masses than the Word of God; but some were always faithful.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. I will send my messenger.—Jehovah was speaking through the prophet. "My messenger" was to be John the Baptist. He would not come till 400 years had come and gone, but never mind, God would keep his promise. He shall prepare the way before me.—Ah! then, Jesus himself is here speaking. Kings sent messengers before them for this purpose, and our King sent his messenger. The Lord . . . the Messenger of the covenant. —That is, Jesus himself, the Jehovah of the Old Testament.

2. Here is a solemn warning in the form of questions: "Who may abide the day of his coming? And who shall stand when he appeareth?" "Refiners fire" and "fullers' soap" are terrific figures of speech. Only pure gold can stand the former, and good cloth the latter. The process in both cases is severe. The gold is purified, and the cloth is shrunken and made durable.

3. He shall purify the sons of Levi.—I suppose these sons of Levi represent converted people in the modern Church, who need to be "purged that they may bring forth more fruit." That they may appear unto the LORD an offering in righteousness.—Here we have the purpose for this purification. The dross must be removed from the precious metal before it can be wrought into vessels fit for the Master's use.

4. Then shall the offering . . . be pleasant unto the LORD.—I suppose the word pleasant means acceptable. Much of our worship is too full of self. In the former years.—When Israel was true to Jehovah's laws.

5. This verse is terrific. Jesus did not come to this world to do a weakling's job. I fear we do not understand him. To a repenting, trusting sinner he is all mercy and love; but to an impenitent, gainsaying, unbelieving sinner he is the personified embodiment of God's wrath. "He that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." What terrible warning is here for all who are unjust or oppressive in dealing with their fellow beings!

6. For.—Mark this word. It is the turning point in the argument. I am Jehovah.—This is the original form; note that the word LORD is all in capitals. I change not.—Herein lies our hope. No one could trust a changing God. Note the closing words of the verse: "Therefore (for this reason) ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Thank God, "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, and today, and forever."

7. From the days of your fathers.—When was it that God did not have trouble with his chosen people? They were scarcely free from Egyptian bondage before they began to complain against him and his orders. The golden calf came along pretty close to the passage of the Red Sea. They were forever sinning, and it was often almost, and sometimes quite, impossible to induce them to repent and return to God. Sometimes I fear we are doing but little better in our day of grace. Return unto me, and I will return unto you.—Herein is God's plan for saving men. He will furnish "preventive grace," and conviction for sin through the Holy Ghost, but men must repent and believe—return unto him. God saves no one against his will; nor does he save any one who does not meet their conditions of salvation; but, thank God, no one can meet his conditions and fail to be saved.

8. Will a man rob God?—That question cuts. The entire Jewish people had robbed God in "tithes and offerings;" and for that reason they were "cursed with a curse." Let us forget the Jews for a few moments, and apply this fearful teaching to America. Are we less guilty than the Jews were? I think not. When one thinks of the vast sums spent in our nation for sin and foolishness, and then of the pittance spent for the advancement of God's cause, he must blush for shame. It will be well to remember that God will hold the un-Christian part of the nation just as responsible as he will the best saints among us.

10. Bring all the tithes.—That is the minimum. There must be free will offerings. Those who make large amounts must give largely, or suffer God's rebuke. Pour you out a blessing. Many of us are poor in purse and heart because we are continually robbing God. "God is not mocked." Men cannot circumvent him. Obedience brings blessing; disobedience brings cursing.

As long as Israel obeyed God, they had fruitful seasons. The locusts and the caterpillars did not devour their crops. They and their cattle were healthy. The blessing of Jehovah was continually upon the nation. But when they disobeyed God, there came drought, and famine, and disease.

Jehovah is the same God that he was 2500 years ago. As he dealt with the Jews so is he dealing with America and other modern nations. This nation must repent in sackcloth and ashes, or meet the wrath of God. Think as we may, and say what we please about it, but this nation cannot go much longer as she is now going, and not meet trouble. But if she will repent and turn to God with all her heart, she can have his richest blessings as portrayed in the last two verses of our lesson.

A PAGEANT OF REWARDS.

A throne of regal splendor stands aloft.

Rich, silken hangings, purple-dyed and rare,

From golden rings fall loose and gracefully,

While on the arched ceiling tapestries Of orient pattern ravish every eye.

Beneath the feet white marble gleams in quaint,

Mosaic pattern. Pilasters all set With precious stones adorn the cedar walls

And hold hand-beaten candlesticks of brass

With branches bearing cups of flame, which sheds

A brilliancy of splendor o'er the scene.

Upon the throne the crowned monarch sits

In robes of gorgeous colorings. Beside Him stands the queen. She comes, impetuous,

To bring, not her request, but her command;

For though in name he holds the sceptre, she

Is Ruler of the country and the king.

He hastily obeys her stern demands. Gives her a house for Baal and a grove;

Builds her a palace grand of ivory And cities many for their sumptuous reign.

A neighbor'ing vineyard, tempting to the eye,

Through cruel murder soon becomes their own.

Into this scene of splendor enters oft, Like blot upon a picture fair to see—

The form of one with flowing beard and hair;

In goatskin garment, loose and roughly made;

His sandaled feet with brown and sturdy limbs

Protruding from beneath the homely garb.

In strong and fearless tones he boldly speaks

To these who rule the land. By word of God

He prophesies that sin and greed shall bring

A sad and sure destruction to them both.

From their fierce anger he departs in haste.

A fugitive and weary of his life.

And thus the years pass on—the king and queen

Living in all the glory of their realm, While he, the lonely prophet, wanders on—

Now fed by God's own ravens at a brook,

Now by a widow from her meager store;

Ever obeying God's commands; through faith

Attempting, doing great things for the Lord;

Receiving witness by the fire from Heaven,

Which falls, consuming all his sacrifice,

That his Jehovah is the Lord of all.

But as the haughty queen, still unconvinced,

Assuming that his life is in her hands, In anger warns him to beware, he flees

The Beauty of Holiness

This little book by Dr. Ridout was written with the idea of helping people live the Holy Life. It shows the Beauty of Consecration, the Beauty of Purity, of Humility, etc. It makes a beautiful Devotional Book to read frequently for spiritual culture and growth.

Bishop Nakada, of Tokyo, Japan, had it translated into Japanese and it has had a wide sale. It has been translated into Chinese and through "Bethels" agency it has had in various parts of China a wide sale. It is beautifully bound in blue and red and gold. Price 75 cents.

PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING COMPANY

And rests not till the wilderness is gained.

Then, as beneath the juniper he sleeps, An angel bakes a cake on coals of fire,

Laying a cruse of water at his head And bids him eat and drink, and with this strength

He travels forty days to Horeb's mount.

There God reveals himself with still, small voice,

And gives his word that seven thousand men

Have never yet to Baal bowed the knee

Nor kissed his stony form. Encouraged he Goes on to live and bear the queen's reproach.

One day the king in disobedience goes To war with Syria. A bow is drawn,

The arrow finds its way into his side, And sitting in his chariot, he d'es

And dogs lick up his blood when evening comes.

Likewise the haughty queen in shame is thrown

To death by warriors bold, and hungry dogs

Feed on her flesh, at Jezreel by a wall.

With dauntless zeal the prophet meets the years

That come and go, his fight of faith well fought;

Until, one day, high Heaven opens wide

And downward sweeps a chariot of fire To earth conveyed by horses shining bright.

They halt—the aged prophet steps within,

And upward they ascend, until they reach

The realms ethereal, where dwell the blest

Of God, who rise triumphant over wrong.

The curtain falls, but rises once again Upon a wondrous scene on mountain height:

Beside three drowsy men a figure gleams

In raiment glistening, exceeding white.

And by Him stands the prophet, glorified,

Who, weary once, earth's rugged pathway trod;

And in companionship with other friends

Converses with the very Son of God.

Then high upon the background flash these words,

Burning their truth with flaming brilliancy:

"He hath put down the princes from their throne

And hath exalted men of low degree."

The lights now change and other words take form

Emblazoning this saying of our Lord:

"Who gives a cup of water in my name Shall never fail to reap his just reward."

THE SECOND WORK OF GRACE.

Peter Wiseman.

St. Paul discovered the need of a second work of grace when he discovered another law in his members (Romans 7:23). "The sin that dwelleth in me," "the body of death," the principle of sin in our fallen nature, "the carnal mind which is enmity against God:" such a condition surely reveals the need of a deeper work of grace in the soul. Read Romans 7:20, 24; 8:7.

Sin exists in the soul under a twofold aspect, in act and in principle; effect and cause. "The wages of sin is death," and "to be carnally minded is death." God forgives an act but not a principle; a principle or condition of being necessitates cleansing or destruction. That is exactly God's order. "Wash me. . . . cleanse me." "I acknowledge my transgression and my sin is ever before me."

To further illustrate the difference between regeneration and entire sanctification let us note that in regeneration sin is dethroned; in entire sanctification it is cast out. In regeneration sin is suspended and subdued; in entire sanctification sin is removed. In regeneration all carnal desires, such as anger, pride, envy, unbelief, etc. are controlled; in entire sanctification they are entirely destroyed. In regeneration sin is suspended and subdued; in entire sanctification sin is removed. In regeneration all carnal desires, such as anger, pride, envy, unbelief, etc. are controlled; in entire sanctification they are entirely destroyed. In regeneration the old man is crucified; in entire sanctification he is dead. In regeneration sin does not reign; in entire sanctification it does not exist. In regeneration the strongman is bound; in entire sanctification he is cast out and his goods spoiled. In regeneration God deals with the effect; in entire sanctification he deals with the cause. Regeneration cleans up; entire sanctification cleans us out. Regeneration removes the guilt of sin; entire sanctification, the principle of sin. Regeneration is forgiveness for sin; entire sanctification cleanses from sin. Regeneration is a birth; entire sanctification a death. Regeneration means life, entire sanctification "life more abundant." Regeneration brings the favour of God; entire sanctification to the moral image of likeness of God in righteousness and true holiness. Regeneration is love; entire sanctification "perfect love." Regeneration gives us a title to heaven; entire sanctification a fitness for heaven.

The twofold work of grace are also seen from a different angle as in the following:

Twofold call of Abraham: To move out of his country (Gen. 12:1); to perfection (Gen. 17:1), signified by the rite of circumcision (Gen. 17:11, 12).

Twofold aspect of Israel's History: God brought them out of Egypt that he might bring them into Canaan.

Twofold way: There is a highway, and a way within the highway which is the way of holiness (Isa. 35:8).

Twofold admission in prayer: "I acknowledge my transgressions, and my sin is ever before me. Blot out my transgressions, cleanse me from my sin" (Ps. 51).

Twofold offering: The trespass offering and the sin offering.

The latter finding its significance in Heb. 13:11-13. The burnt offering simply signified that the life of the worshipper is poured out in service to God.

Twofold nature of sin: Sin as an act (Rom. 3:23), and as a nature or condition (Ps. 51:5).

Twofold source of spiritual death: From wrong doing, "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23), and from a wrong condition of being, "to be carnally minded is death" (Rom. 8:6).

Twofold commission: "To preach forgiveness of sins" "And inheritance among them that are sanctified" (Acts 26:18).

Twofold expression of divine love: The love of God toward the sinner (John 3:15), and the love of Christ toward the church (Eph. 5:25-27).

Twofold purpose in Christ's death: To save sinners (Rom. 5:8), and to sanctify the church (Heb. 13:12).

Twofold call of God: To repentance (Matt. 9:13), and to holiness (I Thess. 4:7,8).

Twofold invitation of Christ: Rest from the burden of sin by coming to Christ and a deeper rest by taking his yoke and learning of him (Matt. 11:28-30).

Twofold prayer of Christ: For the forgiveness of sinners (Luke 23:24), and for the sanctification of believers (John 17).

Twofold requirement: Confession of sins for pardon and walking in the light for cleansing (1 John 1:7-9).

Twofold work of the Holy Spirit: Born of the Spirit (John 3:5) and "sanctification of the spirit" (I Thess. 2:13).

Twofold step of faith: For justification (Rom. 5:1) and for sanctification (Acts 26:18).

Twofold witness of the Spirit: To pardon (Rom. 5:1) and to entire sanctification (2 Cor. 1:22).

BEFORE THE FIGHT AND AFTER.

Mrs. J. A. Taylor.

I want to sound a word of praise to my great Redeemer who took my feet out of the miry clay over nine years ago. I was married Dec. 31, 1909. God gave me three boys, Ernest, Willie and Travis. My health began failing in 1912. I went to hospital twice and underwent two serious operations. I gave up all hopes of ever being well again. I had tried five different doctors, and one told my cousin that I had T. B. I had so many different troubles I can't tell no one what I suffered. I had all faith in doctors, and never thought of God healing me. I was full of the world and foolishness; all I cared for was fine dressing and a big time. God let me have my way until 1919, then he put me under such convictions I could not eat or sleep. Everything I ever said or did came up before me like a great mountain. I joined the church, thinking I would relieve my conscience and I thought I was as good as the rest of the church members. I would go to the church, sing in the choir, pay my church dues, but God who knows every secret thought knew I was nothing but a poor, lost sinner and on my road to hell.

One night Bro. Sheba Williams was having a revival at Fairview Church. I was under deep conviction and tried three times to go to the altar but the devil was fighting me hard. For the first time in my life I went to the altar. I began to call on God and I was truly converted. While I was talking to the pastor God wonderfully sanctified me. I danced under the mighty power of God and praised him aloud. Then the fight began. They blew out the lights and ran out of the church thinking I had lost my mind. But thank God, there was a light burning in my soul that night that has never been blown out by the scorns and scoffers of this world. I am healed of T. B. and everything else I had. I have been trusting God absolutely for everything since that night. I promised God if he would heal me I would testify to every one I met. When I was a church member I was ashamed to talk about holy things, but I have found out there is a lot of difference in being a church member and a Christian. Paul calls it the "old man," the "root of bitterness," the "carnal mind." The thing that rises in your heart and causes you to get mad, that is why people live such an up and down life; they need to be cleansed from all sin and filled with the Holy Ghost.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

BETHEL ACADEMY

(Chartered under Asbury College)

Bethel Academy is a fully accredited four year high school, recognized as "A" grade by the Association of Kentucky Colleges and is a member of Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. N. G.: "Please to pray that I may overcome a trouble that I have,
and that I may conquer my enemy."

Mrs. E. C.: "Please to pray for my daughter who is seriously afflicted, that she may soon be healed;
also for a sister who has eye trouble,
and my two sons."

A reader of The Herald requests prayer that she may be divinely healed, and that her brother's health may be restored.

Mrs. E. T.: "Please to pray for a neighbor of mine to be healed. I have been afflicted for about nineteen years; the Lord has taken the pain away, but I am crippled from the effects of rheumatism. Pray for my two daughters and for our little city."

Mrs. R. L. U.: "I request The Herald family to pray that my father, mother and two sisters may be saved."

SIT IN THE GATE, KING DAVID.

11 Sam. 19:1-8.

Manie Payne Ferguson.

Sit in the gate, King David,
Tho' thy heart is breaking.
Thou art the servant of the rest,
They do not feel thy riven breast,
Thy presence may to them be blest.
Sit in the gate, King David.

Pour out thy song—sweet birdie,
Lovely nest lies scattered.
Yet this world needs that little throat.
A ring of cheer in every note.
The ache is hid 'neath feathered coat,
Pour out thy song, sweet birdie.

Wear well thy mask, lost mourner,
While the heart keeps bleeding;
For others have their sorrows, too,
No time to sympathize with you,
The lonely way will soon be through.
Wear well thy mask, lost mourner.

Keep smiling on, dear mother,
When the loved are failing.
Keep smiling on thy little brood,
Nor let one blast of care intrude,
Weep to thyself in solitude.
Keep smiling on, dear mother.

Finish thy task, tired worker,
Tho' thou art so weary.
None knows but God the panting
breast,
With cares and burdens long oppressed,
With Him in heaven thou shalt rest,
Finish thy task, tired worker.

THE SHOCKING IMMODESTY OF THIS AGE.

By Elnora Row.

For the purpose of proving to some who might think with my mind I live in 1888 or thereabouts, I wish to say I'm not a grandmother and my oldest and only child is thirteen. Neither did I come out of Noah's Ark, but I grew up when women weren't shocked to hear the word "modesty," but loved it and practiced it. Not only women, but young women, girls and little girls, for little girls were taught it.

Now little girls appear in public with almost all of their limbs bared and not much on the rest of their bodies. Mother used to say, "Daughter, keep your dress down." No use for mothers to give that instruction now. A daughter couldn't, if she wanted to. Whenever I see a little girl dressed like that I say inwardly,
'Barbarian.' Call me old-fashioned, insane or whatever else you please,
but when I see such things I can't help but receive a shock. That's been going on for a number of years. No wonder the young ladies can appear before the men folks almost stark naked. It's not done in a corner either. I saw a picture in a newspaper of a number of college girls giving a May Pole dance on the campus. The trunk of the body was covered. The rest entirely naked. I wonder if their mothers were proud of their nakedness. Not only their nakedness but their positions while dancing.

When I was a young woman if any woman had appeared in public like that they would have been run out of town. If they wanted company they would have been compelled to seek it in the Red Light district. What they did in the Red Light district then, they do in the open now. Mothers consent to such things and then wonder why their girls go wrong. Not only do they consent, but many times lead the way. The young ladies now were girls when the mothers first began to appear in Peek-a-boo waists.

Now they have shortened their skirts until married women appear in public with their skirts so short they scarcely deserve the name of a skirt. Where are the modest ladies? They don't raise their voices against such things!
Doesn't any one ever get shocked any more? The only time they seem to is when the word "modesty" is mentioned and then they are shocked to the point of anger.

My father was as strict as mother.
One time we two girls were in the wagon (for we lived on a farm). The wind was blowing a terrific gale causing our skirts to be balloon shaped as we bent over the edge of the wagon box. Father happened around the corner just then and we didn't do that any more. Fathers don't seem to care now whether daughters appear in im-modest dress or in actions.

I remember one certain young lady who attended the same college I did.
She began smoking cigarettes and laughed about it. That's the spirit of so many now. They have no shame and do not blush to be caught at such things. They ought to be treated like that young lady. She lost all of her friends and the next year didn't return to that school.

Mothers and fathers love to have their sons and daughters go in the best of society and the best society must have plenty of the "root of all evil," which in turn brings the latest styles which is—I mean which is not —as much of a covering as pictures
I have seen some of the heathen women of Africa wear. Beside this they sip long at the cup and while the smoke curls upward from their cigarettes, they dream of more immodest things to do to make them happy.

Most every one blames the "kids," as they call them. But I can't help blaming the parents as well as the high schools and colleges. They let down the standard of modesty and taught the young to follow. They taught them to follow the styles, even if they were vulgar. They put young men and young women in the same class and taught them the things concerning themselves. If one blushed it was called "false modesty." Now the great majority don't know what modesty is. Some people may think this too plain talk but the women who do such things as I have spoken about are not ashamed to appear that way.
I challenge the women of America to organize a society and pledge themselves that they will not wear clothing that gives them an immodest appearance. That they will encourage their daughters likewise and, if necessary, to do so they will create their own styles. That they will send out propaganda to educate women against appearing in public nearly naked and having their pictures appear in papers that way. Well, why not?

COMPANIONSHIP WITH GOD.

Dr. T. L. Hulse, retiring editor of the Central Methodist has published a book of four sermons under the title of "Companionship With God." The author is not only one of our deep thinkers, but his balanced judgment and lucid diction make what he has to say on any subject well worth reading. The title of the book is also the subject of the first sermon and is one of the greatest deliverances on that subject that I have read in many a day.
The subjects treated in the other sermons are as follows: "Six Reasons Why I Am a Christian," "The Holy Spirit—His Nature and Mission," and "The Stewardship of Life."
I happened to know that these sermons have been put into printed form because of the urgent request of the author's friends whose lives have been blessed under the deliverances of these great messages. The author's loyalty to the great fundamentals of Christianity and his capacity for stating these doctrines are facts well known by all the brethren who have read the Central Methodist or who have heard him preach. An appropriate preface has been written by that veteran of a thousand battles in the interest of vital Christianity or the abundant life in the fulness of the Spirit, Dr. H. C. Morrison.

The book is published by The Herald
Press and may be had from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. Price,

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga,
with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

—Basil Mathews

in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast
from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and
His saving power in the lives of men."
Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with
and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen
Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

The Opportunity Is Swiftly Passing!

Don't let it go by without your having placed THE HERALD in some home. It may be the means of salvation to the entire household.

Every soul, some time, somewhere, longs to know God, and this may be your opportunity to help some one into a saving knowledge of Him. We have known instances where persons were not approachable in the interest of their souls, but the Holy Spirit has spoken to them in the quiet of the reading hour.

We pass this way but once, so let's make our time and efforts count for God and souls. Try to induce some one to subscribe on the special 50c offer till January. Invest 50c of the Lord's money and send the paper to some one; then pray God to bless the message THE HERALD carries to the good of that soul.

Dear HERALD readers, what we do must be done quickly. The special subscription period is rapidly slipping away, souls are passing into eternity, many of them lost, and it behooves us to get desperately in earnest to offer the Bread of Life to as many as will receive it.

Think NOW of some loved one or friend who needs soul food, and either ask them to subscribe or send them the paper until January. Seemingly small things count for much in the service of the King.

TRUE COURAGE NEEDED.

By The Editor.

DEEP religious conviction arising out of genuine faith in Bible truth, corroborated by a true experience of the supernatural power of Christ in personal salvation, is always attended by true courage; under such circumstances a person has firm ground upon which to stand, and in the nature of things, must have very clear and positive convictions of truth, and by the same law, must have both zeal and courage for the propagation and defense of the truth.

* * * *

The men who have counted in the illumination, salvation, and uplift of the race have always had profound convictions, a fixed and abiding faith, and courage to stand for, and defend the truths in which they have believed, and which have brought to them experiences of the grace and power of the Lord Jesus to free their souls from the bondage and guilt of sin.

* * * *

It was the courage of his convictions that made Moses to "choose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of reward." There was nothing of the maudlin sentiment and loose liberality in the creed of Moses that looked after his self-interest, and was ready to compromise truth and sacrifice the cause of right in order to have the compliments of those liberals who have no fixed faith and no deep conviction.

* * * *

It was courage of conviction that sent Paul to jail, and the joy of salvation which made him to sing at midnight and start a revival before daylight. It was courage of conviction that shut John Bunyan up in Bedford jail until he had time and opportunity to write the wonderful allegory of Pilgrim's Progress, a book which has illuminated the pathway of untold millions towards the celestial city.

* * * *

It was the courage of conviction that sent John Wesley out of the pulpits of the Established Church of England to preach the gospel of full salvation from the tombstone of his father, and kindle the fires of a revival of religion that has swept across the world for more than a century and brought millions of immortal souls to our Lord Jesus, and landed them safe in heaven. It was the courage of conviction that led the sainted General Booth to walk out of a Methodist Conference into the streets and slums of the cities and organize an army of salvation which has brought its tens of thousands of bums and harlots washed in the blood of the world's Redeemer, and robed in the whiteness of holiness, safe to the Father's house.

* * * *

Some time ago a Y. M. C. A. secretary in one of our cities came out with the declaration of his unbeliefs, denying the virgin birth, miracles, and blood atonement of Je-

HIS RESTING PLACE.

"Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head."

Birds have their quiet nest,
Foxes their holes, and man his peaceful bed;
All creatures have their rest,—
But Jesus had not where to lay His head.

Winds have their hour of calm,
And waves to slumber on the voiceless deep;
Eve hath its breath of balm,
To hush all scenes and sounds to sleep.

The wild deer hath its lair,
The homeward flocks the shelter of their shed;
All have their rest from care,—
But Jesus had not where to lay His head.

And yet He came to give
The weary, heavy-laden, rest;
To bid the sinner live,
And soothe our griefs to slumber, on His breast.

What then, am I, my God,
Permitted thus the path of peace to tread?
Peace purchased by the blood
Of Him who had not where to lay His head.

I, who once made Him grieve,
I, who once bid His gentle spirit mourn,
Whose hand assayed to weave,
For His meek brow, the cruel crown of thorn.

Oh, why should I have peace,
Why, but for that unchanged, undying love,
Which could not rest nor cease
Until it made me heir of joys above?

Yes, but for pardoning grace,
I know I never should in glory see
The brightness of that face,
That once was pale and agonized for me.

Let the birds seek their nests,
Foxes their holes, and men their peaceful bed;
Come, Saviour, on my breast
Deign to repose Thine oft-rejected head.

Come, give me rest, and take
The only rest on earth Thou lov'st; within
A heart that for Thy sake
Lies bleeding, broken, penitent for sin.

J. B. Monsell, D.D.

sus. A layman of one of the churches in the city met his pastor on the street and asked him why he had made no answer to this attack upon the faith by a man who was supported by the churches, to which the minister replied, "Well, when I came to this city he received me very kindly; he has shown me great courtesy. He has been my friend and I do not like to take issue with him." Such a preacher has neither conviction nor courage. He knows nothing of the spirit of St. Paul who declares that he "knows no man after the flesh." He places his human friendships above his loyalty to the truth of the Bible, the person, and teachings of the Lord Jesus. Such a man is not a true watcher on Zion's walls. If the wolf of modern liberalism happens to be his personal friend he will permit him, without rebuke and undisturbed, to rend, devour, and scatter the Lord's sheep. There are no circumstances under which I would contribute to the support of so unworthy a preacher.

The times are in great need of preachers and lay people who believe something definitely and positively; who have experiences, who have had the truth of the Bible, the deity and power of Christ, demonstrated within their hearts; who "know whom they have believed;" who have found Christ such a Saviour, and the truth of the Holy Scriptures so true, that nothing can intimidate them, or prevent them giving their testimony to the things they know beyond all doubt to be true. There is nothing which will so confound and put to rout your modern doubters and disseminators of falsehood, as a true, courageous ministry and the brave, resolute, unfaltering laity who have convictions, who have come into an actual experience, who have no fear of men or devils, and who will speak the truth fearlessly, bear witness for their Lord gladly, and if need be, cheerfully suffer the most dire consequences. The great need of the hour is men and women with the courage of their convictions.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

I have received a letter this morning from a very elderly minister in the Methodist Church that is suggestive of serious thought. This man is near eighty years of age, has been a Methodist from early boyhood, preached for many years and, notwithstanding the fact he has been a supernummate for a number of years, his vitality has been preserved and he has been quite capable of wide observation of what is going on in the religious world.

This friend of mine is by no means a pessimist, but I find from his letter that he is in a very serious state of mind; in fact, he is a bit alarmed at the organization and aggressiveness of the forces of evil. He calls my attention to the organization of the Atheistic Society and its haughty, defiant spirit against God, the Bible, and the Church of the Lord Jesus; and the, shall I say, kindred spirit to this organization which reveals itself in the modernistic teachings widespread in Protestantism. My friend is quite justified in his serious thinking on this subject and he very naturally feels that the church should become aroused and gird herself for tremendous battle against these foes of God and humanity. In this he is correct; and this battle should be fought out along the lines of the Charles Finney conflict against the blatant infidelity that was blighting the country in his day.

It will be remembered that infidelity was rife, aggressive and boastful in the Eastern and Middle States of the North in Finney's time. He did not so much inaugurate a war of a literary type against this skepticism which was blighting the spiritual and moral life of the nation, but went to God in a great consecration and prevailing prayer, and went to the people with a powerful gospel. He kindled revival fires that burned up unbelief and skepticism like chaff. The power

LEAVES FROM A MISSIONARY DIARY.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

When Raphael was once asked how he painted such wonderful pictures he said: "I dream dreams and see visions; and then I paint my dreams and my visions." One of the results of the Holy Spirit's fullness as stated by Peter in Acts 2:17 is that its recipients should see visions and dream dreams. One cannot visit the mission fields of the great East without being stirred to holy vision and noble dreams. And yet we must not forget the "quiet resting places," after days of battle and periods of stress.

"Christ never asks of us such busy labor,

As leaves no time for resting at his feet:

The waiting attitude of expectation,

He often counts a service most complete.
God loves Patience! Souls that dwell in stillness,

Doing the little things or resting quiet,
May just as perfectly fulfill their mission,
Be just as useful in the Father's sight."

In this sketch I shall put down a few notes gathered from the many-sided life one lives in the Orient.

July 4. The people are gathering from various provinces for the Bible Conference at Bethel, Shanghai. Preached at 4 P. M. on Jacob at Peniel. Text: "I will not let Thee go except thou bless me." "And he blessed him there." Gen. 32:26-29. Considered what was the blessing that Jacob received at Peniel and how he received it.

(a) It was not the blessing of conversion—he received that at Bethel.

(b) It was a second distinct work of grace by which he experienced the death of the Old Man of sin and he received a new name.

(c) It was the blessing of "No more Jacob"—verse 28. How Jacob received the blessing.

(1) Through getting alone with God—separation and consecration.

(2) Through wrestling and importunity till the morning broke and the blessing came.

July 5. Among the workers at the Conference this year is Rev. James H. Taylor, of the Free Methodists, Kaifeng, Honan. He is a grandson of J. Hudson Taylor, the great, godly founder of the China Inland Mission. Bro. Taylor worked at first with the C. I. M., but went to America and trained in one of the Free Methodist schools. He speaks excellent Mandarin and is fluent in the language, but best of all speaks the language of Canaan and is very much devoted to the doctrine of Christian holiness. He has a booklet on "The Believer's Heritage in Christ," in which he covers very fully the sin question. His message on this subject is on this wise:

"We find then that when one is born again his past iniquities are forgiven and the power of Christ within gives him present victory over acts of sin. There still remains, however, that impure condition in his nature which is responsible for the conflict spoken of in Galatians 5:17, and which results in humiliating lapses if the child of God does not watch and pray. This sinful condition must be put to death or crucified. So we read, 'They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh.' Gal. 5:24. When sin is thus destroyed from the heart of the believer he is made holy. God's command, 'Be ye holy; for I am holy', is definitely fulfilled. The believer is freed from sin (Rom. 6:18-22) in a far deeper sense than was the case when he was born of God. The strong man of sin is then not only bound, as was the case in regeneration, but is actually cast out by the Almighty Son of God. Then, and then only, is the believer's emancipation from sin through simple faith in our Lord Jesus Christ complete.

"Behold, we fall before Thy face;

Our only refuge is Thy grace;

No outward forms can make us clean;

The leprosy lies deep within.

"Jesus, Thy blood, Thy blood alone,

Hath power sufficient to atone;

Thy blood can make us white as snow;

No Jewish types could cleanse us so."

Another worker is Rev. C. W. Troxel of the National Holiness Association work in Shantung Province, (Tungchangfu City). He is one of the most experienced of Missionaries; often his Chinese is so perfect and natural that he is taken for a native. He is so well known in Shantung Province that sometimes he is made the spokesman between the people and the Government officials. He is so trusted by both sides that even bandits respect him. Just a while ago when the bandit robbers held the city and took certain young people in captivity to await possibly a horrible fate, Mr. Troxel went to the bandit chief and pled for the release of the captives; the result was eighteen were set free.

I had tried to get to Shantung previously but war conditions were such that it was impossible. Now the way seemed clear to go after the conference with Bro. Troxel and spend ten days visiting the work at the various points and I was looking forward with a good deal of interest to going, but something happened which will be told later.

Bro. Troxel did considerable preaching during the Conference and his messages all rang true on the great truths of full salvation. He preached entirely in Mandarin so that it is impossible for me to give any notes on his messages.

July 10th. Felt I did not want to leave China without an interview with two of China's most veteran missionaries, Rev. J. Walter Lowrie, D.D., of the Presbyterians, and Mr. D. E. Hoste, Chief Director of the China Inland Mission. Today had the opportunity of meeting both. Took dinner with Dr. Lowrie at the Missionary Home and then talked over many matters relative to Chinese Missions. Dr. Lowrie has spent over forty years in China. He never married but lived with his mother as his housekeeper all through the years till she went to Heaven. Through all the changing policies and doctrines of the modern period, Dr. Lowrie has never changed an iota from his devotion to God, to his Bible and the great doctrines of grace. He was one of the leaders of the "Bible Union of China," which started some years ago as a testimony against the Modernism that has struck such a blow at real Christianity in China.

Together we went to the China Inland Mission Compound where we met Mr. D. E. Hoste, who now directs that great work in China. I remember when a Sunday school boy reading of the "Cambridge Seven" who, through the preaching of Mr. Moody, were so stirred with missionary zeal that they offered themselves to the China Inland Mission in 1885. They were C. T. Studd, Stanley Smith, W. W. Cassels (afterward Bishop Cassels), Mr. M. Beauchamp, C. H. and A. T. Pollitt-Turner, and Mr. D. E. Hoste, who was then an officer in the Royal Artillery. The farewell meeting in Exeter Hall, London, Feb. 4, 1885, was an event in missionary history. I never thought that it would be my privilege to sit down with one of these Cambridge Seven and let him talk to me about the great work of evangelizing China. One thing that struck me at the very first about Mr. Hoste was his language; it was full of scripture and faith. Here was a missionary Secretary and Superintendent who had nearly a thousand missionaries under him who, amid all the business and perplexities and responsibilities of office, never gave up the language of faith and prayer and Bible for the modern language of the average secretary of today. Two or three things impressed me. First, the simplicity of the C. I. M. Movement. They do not advocate big compounds, etc.; they prefer their workers living amid humble surroundings identifying themselves with the Chinese people from the very beginning. After six months of language work they aim to despatch their young missionaries to some inland town, there to live and have their being right among the people and derive actual touch at once. (The more modern method is for young missionaries to give them a year or two studying the language in language school, during which they are too apt to lose that passion for souls with which they came out at first).

Another thing Mr. Hoste said, "We much prefer that God should give the donors and that we do not seek them by worldly methods." (The C. I. M. people refuse collections in their meetings. Hudson Taylor has been known to make it one of the conditions upon which he would speak in the home churches that no collections should be taken.)

After our conversation I expressed a wish to see the book store of the C. I. M., and there I bought several books. Seeing the new life of Bishop Cassels on the shelf I expressed delight at seeing it and at once Mr. Hoste said: "Do you desire that work; if so I want to present you with a copy." So I have now this precious book of nearly 400 pages entitled, "W. W. Cassels, First Bishop in Western China, by Marshall Broomhall, M.A." Bishop Cassels was such a saintly missionary character that I feel like commending this book to the readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. Order book from THE HERALD office.

July 13. Telegram received from Woodford Taylor, Shantung, reads as follows:

"Wang occupies Tungchang. Governors' representatives in conference, outcome uncertain—serious."

This telegram shuts us out the second time from our contemplated visit to the N. H. A. work in Shantung Province. The meaning of the telegram is that Wang is the leader bandit and he has come down with his force and captured the city, and it is impossible to tell how long or how short he may hold it. In the meanwhile strangers and foreigners would be running into trouble to attempt to reach that city while the robbers have it. We deeply sympathized with Bro. Troxel whose family is in the besieged city, and Bro. Taylor and his family and the other missionaries who are there. Fortunately the bandits in many instances leave the missionaries alone, and Brother Troxel being so well known there it is not at all improbable that he will reach his family in safety.

July 14. Bible Conference closed today. Brother Troxel preached morning message in Chinese. The afternoon was a great missionary meeting with the Bethel Evangelistic Band on the platform. Ten Provinces has shared in the evangelistic labors of the season and in six of these wife and I had shared in the labors. Bethel has become a great missionary evangelistic center. Its farthest away mission station is Yunnau, where Miss Morgan and her Bethel Band are working. Already they have increased fourfold within less than a year—four stations instead of one, and the call has come for two nurses and a Doctor. Dr. Stone rejoices that two of her nurses have offered and also one of the doctors of her hospital has placed herself upon the altar of consecration. It is believed she will go.

July 15. Reading the life of Marshall Feng, the man who has been discussed so much of late in the newspapers of China, many have been asking: "Is Feng a Christian now?" Well, there have been many answers but certain signs seem significant. In his contemplated trip abroad to America and England he has requested Dr. Goforth, the veteran missionary, to accompany him as his interpreter. This is a good sign because Mr. Goforth is a great soul winner. In the story as Feng, as written by Mr. Broomhall of the China Inland Mission, we learn the following facts:

When he was eighteen years of age he joined the Army; he never had much schooling, he was in the midst of the Boxer uprising and saw how the missionaries endured persecution and death. He was greatly impressed though not converted at that time, as it is so frequently said in America. It was not till 1913 in the Mott meetings in Peking that Feng, then a Major, made the definite decision to follow Christ. He next joined the Methodist Church and was baptized. From the time of his conversion on for many years General Feng was a wonderful Christian and a force for righteousness wherever he went. His ideals of soldiery were Oliver Cromwell and Chinese Gordon. His soldiers are never allowed to be idle. They must all engage in some trade or activity in peace time, chair making, knitting, building, road work, etc. They must all attend school and learn to read and write. Religious instruction was very extensive, Bibles were everywhere and the religious services were attended by thousands. Often the General took a text and preached himself.

He was made Governor of a Province after a rascal corrupt Governor who had impoverished the people was dismissed. He at once adopted simplicity as his motto. He did not set himself up in a big Yamen, as governors do, but lived with his men. He closed all the bad houses in the city. He dislikes show. There is a story told of one of his officers whom he saluted. This officer was fond of finery. Expressing surprise that his General should salute him, he said, "I did not salute you, I saluted your shoes." When he was appointed Governor General of Honan one of his first public acts was to attend a joint service of welcome and thanksgiving in the Canadian Cathedral. He took James 4:17, as a text and then told of his conversion and next exhorted the people concerning their duty to God. He once attended a great public gathering in the Y. M. C. A. and rode there on a bicycle! The usual way for the governor to travel was by official chair, with special guards, streets lined with soldiers and a lot of pomp and show. Not so with Feng. His life was a sermon in humbleness and simplicity.

At one great anniversary gathering attended by twenty thousand men, General Feng, as one of the speakers, gave praise to God for the favors he had extended to China and then, with tears flowing down his cheeks, trembling with emotion, he pled with the people to forsake their sins and accept Christ as their Saviour.

At the present time many questions arise as to where Feng is now as a Christian, but many who know him best claim that while he is not as zealous as in other days, he is still a Christian and they urge that Christians everywhere pray that God may make General Feng a Daniel in these days of China's great need of Christian leadership.

July 18. Reading today in The Indian Witness the following: "The Indian Messenger, a Brahmo Samaj paper published in Calcutta, takes Dr. Stanley Jones to task for telling an audience in Great Britain that the next step for the preacher of Christ in India is to prove that Christ is 'not only a way, but the way.'"

The Editor, Rev. J. Waskom Pickett, very fittingly answers the Brahmo Editor in the following words:

"It is strange that any one who has read the Gospels would try to quote Jesus against the teaching that he 'is not only a way, but the way.' The Gospel of St. John is in large part a refutation of the position taken by The Indian Messenger. It should be sufficient to quote John 14:6: 'Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.' But there are many other verses in which our Lord is quoted as teaching that his position is different from that of others. He never suggests that he is one of a group of great men of religion, or that there are others to whom the heart of man can turn with equal or comparable benefit. 'I am the bread of life,' John 6:35, 'I am the door,' John 10:9, 'I am the good shepherd,' John 10:11 and 10:14, 'I am the true vine,' John 15:1, and 'Without me, ye can do nothing,' John 15:5.

"Does our learned contemporary believe that a Christian who would see no danger in Christ being given a place in the Hindu pantheon would more worthily represent Christianity than one who seeks to prove that Christ is not only a way, but the way? Would it have been possible for Jesus to have made it clearer than he has done that he does not and cannot accept a position as one among a number in a pantheon? Jesus does require a unique position in the hearts of men, and will not agree to share his position with others. He could not do so without doing violence to his character and mission."

Let me add to this by saying that it is becoming quite a habit now in the mission field by men of modernistic trend to set Christianity up as one of the great religions and Christ as one of the great religious leaders and teachers of the ages. This inevitably tends to reduce Christ to the stature of a man and Christianity to one of equality with other world religions. No man at home or abroad can save souls unless he has it settled down deep in his soul that Christianity is an absolute and final religion and Jesus Christ is the world's only Redeemer and Saviour.

WHY SO FEW REVIVALS?

Rev. Charles G. Finney.

I am rejoiced to perceive that the inquiry is beginning to agitate the Church, "Why are there not more revivals, as well as why is their character so changed?" The inquiry is also made, "What can be done to promote them, and to promote them under a desirable and permanent type?"

Now, my dear brethren, I hope and trust that you will not be offended with me if I speak my mind on this subject with great plainness. The circumstances of the Church, the decline of revivals, and the whole aspect of the Christian world, demand it.

I have seen in the public papers various reasons assigned for this declension of revivals, this absence of revival influence, this powerless preaching of the Gospel. Now it does appear to me that we who are ministers, instead of looking abroad and searching for the fundamental difficulty beyond and out of ourselves, should see that whatever else may be an occasion of the great falling off and decline in revivals, our own spiritual state is certainly one, if not the primary and fundamental, reason of this decline. Want of personal holiness, unction, power in prayer, and in preaching the Word, the want of holy living and consecration to the work, of self-denial, and energetic effort in the ministry—these, no doubt, are the principal reasons why revivals are so few and far between, and of so superficial character at the present day.

The fact is, ministers have turned aside, in a great degree, to vain jangling; have given up their attention to church politics, church government, and ecclesiastical proceedings of various kinds. The ministers have been diverted, to an alarming and most injurious extent, from promoting revivals of religion out of the Church and holiness in the Church.

I appeal to you, my brethren, of all denominations, if it is not a fact in your own experience and observation, that ministers have, to a great and alarming extent, suffered themselves to be diverted from the direct work of promoting the conversion of sinners and sanctification of the Church. This is too notorious to need any proof. The journals of the day, the movements of ecclesiastical bodies, the doctrinal collisions, and—shall I say?—ambitious projects, that have come up and figured before the public within the last few years, bear no dubious testimony to the fact that the great mass of ministers are turned aside from promoting revivals and the holiness and entire consecration of the Church.

Now, my beloved brethren, while this is so, does it not become us to take this home, confess it, bewail it, and, first of all, understand that whatever else needs to be corrected and set aright, we must ourselves repent and receive a new unction for the work?

Beloved brethren, it is of no use for us to go abroad and search for reasons, while the principal of all the reasons lies at our own door. While our hearts are cold, our zeal in revivals abated; while we are turned aside, and running here and there to attend conventions, councils, ecclesiastical bodies; while we are engaged in reading the vituperative publications of the day, and entering into church politics and jangling about church government and all these things—it is no wonder that both the Church and the world are asleep on the subject of revivals.

Until the leaders enter into the work, until the ministry are baptized with the Holy Spirit until we are awake and in the field with our armor on, and our souls anointed with the Holy Spirit, it certainly ill becomes us to be looking around at a distance for the cause of the decline of revivals.

I have no doubt that there are many causes which, the Lord willing, we will search out. But this is the first, the greatest; the most God-dishonoring of all—that the ministry are not in the work, that the shepherds have in a measure forsaken their flock; that is, they are not leading them into the green pastures and beside the still waters, are not themselves so anointed and full of faith and power as to be instrumental in leading the Church into the field for the promotion of revivals.

What shall we say, brethren? Are we not greatly in fault? Have not the ministry, to a great extent, lost the spirit of revivals? Is there not a great lack of unction and power amongst us? And have we not suffered ourselves to be greatly and criminally diverted from this great work?

If so, my dear brethren, shall we not return? Shall we not see our fault, confess it to the churches, to the world, and return, and, in the name of the Lord, lift up our banner?

Now, dearly beloved brethren, unless there is a spirit of revival in the ministry, it is in vain to expect it in the Church. The proper place for the shepherd is before or in advance of the sheep. The sheep will follow him whithersoever he goes; but if he attempt to drive them before him, he will scatter them

GOD GIVES MAN A WONDERFUL LAMP.

Rev. G. Whitefield Simonson, S. T. D.

Text: "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Psalm 119:105.

PART I.

WE Christian folks are under the necessity of making known to the people about us that God lives today in the light of his Holy Word. We are responsible for keeping the light shining from God's Wonderful Lamp. Human demonstrators of the Divine Light will prompt other people to go to its pages for spiritual illumination. But are not too many of us too busy to keep the straight, strong stream of spiritual light shining clearly?

That Lamp is the container of God's Life and Light which we are to learn and experience for ourselves. It is not enough to hold its precious form and declare that we believe in it as God's Word of the long-ago. We are to tap its inexhaustible oil supply, and allow the Holy Spirit to tip our souls with the same flame that convinced the Apostles in the Upper Room that Jesus Christ was with them to give soul-winning grace as they went about among the sinful and the doubting.

We seem to be growing a generation of people who know nothing about this Wonderful Lamp—The Holy Bible—the most enduring and universal Book, yet it is unknown to numbers of intelligent people; or its contents practically unknown. Numbers of Christian people only see its story of the Light of a long-ago; yet the light of this Lamp is so woven into our civilization that we must make it more evident, or civilization will suffer.

No book in the world has ever been studied as much as the Bible; no literature has been so generally utilized to weave its spirit into nations' laws, to enhance man's morals, to beautify secular speech and writing as the Sacred Scripture. New interest in the Holy Bible, as to its origin and authority was awakened not long ago by the offer of a prominent Christian woman to give a prize of one thousand dollars to the person writing the best thesis on the history of the King James' and Douay versions of the Holy Scriptures.

Yet today we are confronted with the startling fact that ignorance of the Bible is widespread among even the cultured and educated classes. As a proof of this statement, I quote to you the words of Dr. Butler, president of Columbia University, delivered in an address before the National Educational Association in Minneapolis; speaking of the need of the Bible as a text-book in our schools, on the ground of its literary worth, he said: "I recently read the first twelve lines in 'Paradise Lost' before a group of college men. I then asked for an explanation of the lines, and I am ashamed to say that not one man could give it. I dare say that not half the men one meets in business every day could explain these biblical references." Another instance in point is found in the article written by President Thwing of the Western Reserve University, and published in the Century Magazine, entitled "Significant Ignorance About The Bible."

Dr. Thwing had selected from Tennyson's works twenty-two passages containing Bible allusions and submitted these in examination papers to eighty-five students in two different colleges. A quarter of them knew nothing of the crown of thorns or the manna; about thirty could not explain the striking of the rock, or the angel that wrestled with Israel, or Jacob's ladder; about forty could not recall the story of Esau, or that of Ruth or the mark of Cain, or the angel seated in the vacant tomb. However, all the girls but three could tell about Lot's wife, and all but ten about the serpent; twenty-four knew nothing of either. Hezekiah's shadow was unknown to seventy-five of them; Jonah's gourd had grown in vain for sixty-six of them; and sixty of the eighty-five students had never seen Joshua's moon, or Peter's sheet. This might all be considered as very amusing if it were not that great and serious consequences are involved.

Dr. Huntington, rector of Grace Church, New York City, tells us that it has been stated on high authority that less than one-half of the people of this country acknowledge allegiance today to any form of organized Christianity. And the Superintendent of Schools of one of our largest cities was quoted as having said that in the municipality which he represented, there were more than a hundred thousand children of school age who did not know of the existence of such a book as the Bible. Did you imagine such a fact possible in this God-blessed nation?

FROM WHENCE CAME THE LAMP?

Let us look back and see. In the second century, Tertullian, warning Christians against the false teachers of his day, said: "If you are willing to exercise your curiosity profitably in the business of your salvation, visit the apostolic churches, in which the very chairs of the apostles still preside in their places; in which their very authentic letters are recited sounding forth the voice and representing the countenance of every one of them. Is Achaia near you? You have Corinth. If you are not far from Macedonia you have Philippi and Thessalonica; if you can go to Asia you have Ephesus, but if you are near Italy you have Rome."

These "authentic letters" to which Tertullian refers are none other than the epistles and the gospels as we have them now substantially in our New Testament. Yet some one rises up every once in a while and declares that the Bible is a mass of uncertain material, gathered from no one knows where, and imposed upon the world by the deceitful manipulations of men in the centuries after the apostles died. Why, one infidel wrote an article for a Massachusetts paper, in which he made the statement that the New Testament was compiled by the Council of Nice, in 325 A. D. And he declared that his authority for that statement was Papias, one of the early Christian bishops.

The awful side to such things is that so many people will read and accept such brazen-faced falsehood as fact, not seeming to care to know the truth; and it does not take any great effort to discover that those statements are false. First, look up his authority; we find that Papias was a disciple of the apostle John; and that he suffered martyrdom not later than 165 A. D. Hence the pretended foundation for his statement is gone; for a man who died in 165 A. D. could hardly be taking notes at the Council of Nice in 325 A. D.

Now the truth about the New Testament is that every one of its books, substantially as we have them today, must have existed in the second and third centuries of the Christian era. To prove that statement true I want to quote to you the conversation between a Dr. Buchanan and Lord Hales, in London. The Doctor and the nobleman were at a gathering when some one asked this question: "If every copy of the New Testament had been destroyed at the end of the third century, could these Scriptures have been recovered from extracts made from them in the works of the fathers in the second and third centuries?" Some time later these men met, and Lord Hales said to Dr. Buchanan: "Do you remember the strange question about the fathers and the New Testament, which was put by one of the company at Mr. Abercrombie's two months ago? As I possess all the extant fathers of the second and third centuries, I commenced the search; and up to the present time I have found the entire New Testament, all but eleven verses."

Think of that! All the New Testament, as we have it now, was in the hands of the Christian teachers and leaders who lived in the generation just following the apostles. And the people of those days could not have been fooled into believing that something written by men of their time was the product of people that lived in the days of their grandfathers, any more than we could be made to believe that some strange writings appearing now for the first time were the letters and biographies of the Wesleys and the reformers before them.

THE LIVING LAMP WAS JESUS CHRIST.

Thank God! The New Testament was written by men who had seen and known the Living Word of God as it was incarnated in Jesus of Nazareth and his apostles. And the Gospel of Jesus Christ was transcribed by those who realized that the wicked world would only hate them for their work and words, completing their hatred by actual murder. Yet they fearlessly wrote, because the Almighty and infinitely loving God had said to them: "Write."

Jesus Christ is the One Central Figure of the New Testament. On the strength and authority of his life and teachings it was written as the word of God to man. So with the conviction that what Jesus said about the Old Testament is sufficient to warrant us in accepting it as the earlier expression of God's love to man, and the revelation of the Divine purpose to provide a plan of salvation for the sinner, we declare without any doubt that the Holy Bible is the message of the Holy God to a sinful race, telling of forgiveness, restoration and eternal life as the privilege of every penitent person. And as a supplement to the written record he sent forth his Holy Spirit into the world to convince men of the truth. So the promise of the Bible that the sin of the soul can be cleansed away by the Blood of Christ may be proven by the individual, through the operation and witness of the Holy Spirit.

The late Dr. Joseph Parker, that great London preacher, once said: "The Bible is not a book containing a revelation; it is a Revelation accepting the risks and limits of a Book. Man is not a body containing a spirit, he is a spirit inhabiting a body. In both instances I think the distinction of vital importance." And when Dr. Cadman was asked in one of his Easter Sunday afternoon men's meetings: "How do you know the Bible is true?" he shot this conclusive answer back: "Read it, and see how often it hits you."

The Bible is a living Book. It has kept step with the advance of the ages, always being several paces in the lead. The science of the world has time and again been written down as truth to guide men in the work of their lives; but after twenty years the utterances of the books have been discovered to be worthless, because they were made on false foundations; then those well made, scientific books were only good to be sold as waste paper, at so much a pound. When I was a lad, I got hold of a book, entitled, "Fourteen Weeks in Physics," which I thought I would study. So taking it to an educated friend of mine, I told him what I wanted to do, and asked his direction. You cannot imagine my surprise at hearing him say, after looking at the volume, "That book is no good; it is fifteen years old." And I could buy it along with other worthless books for half a cent a pound as waste paper. But say, did you ever see a Bible, well bound and in good condition, sold as waste paper? No you didn't. And one of the reasons why is that the latest observations of scientific truth are not able to make it obsolete. While the Bible is not a scientific treatise, yet its message is not contrary to scientific truth.

SOME TRY TO EXTINGUISH THE LIGHT.

Voltaire, in France, used his brilliant mind and its powers to overthrow the Bible; but the French infidel died, while the Holy Bible lived on. Thomas Paine wrote "The Age of Reason" against the Christian faith, thinking to overthrow the Bible with his sceptical questions; but Paine, we are told, died a poor drunkard, while the dear old Bible lived on to show many another drunkard the way and means of escape from the clutches of the drink-devil.

Today some theologians, masquerading under the cloak of Christianity, are presenting these outlived, infidel questions as the results of modern theological science; and they ask us to accept those old, musty questions, dressed in modern style, whose echo had died away years ago unanswered, instead of the plain affirmatives of the Holy Bible which may be personally tested. But the heart and head of needy men will not do it. A few years hence, and these modern doubters will be dead; but the Sacred Record of God's Word will live right on, pointing the sinner to Christ, comforting the sorrowing, causing the dying to triumph over death, and multiplying the members of the Church of God who can sweetly sing:

"The Bible is my chart; by it the seas I know;
I cannot with it part; it rocks and sand-bars show;
It is my chart and compass too;
Its needle points forever true."

The Bible record covers thousands of years; it was written by many men, in places and times widely separated from one another. Some of the writers were poor and some of them were rich; some were highly educated and some were not; some of them were from among the nobility—even the kings—and some were of the very lowly, being shepherds and fishermen.

But the marvelous fact about the Bible is that through all its books runs the same story of Divine Love appealing to sinful man to forsake his sins; and pointing to the One Great Hero whose help would enable men to succeed; who carried our sins to his Cross and conquered death for us.

In Genesis the promise is given to the mother of our race that "her Seed" shall conquer Satan. The great leader of ancient Israel declared to his people that Jehovah would raise up "a prophet" like himself, i. e., a deliverer and law-giver. The psalmist sings of "the King" whose "name shall be continued as long as the sun; and men shall be blessed in him: all nations shall call him blessed." Again we hear him sing, and the strain is: "Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations." The prophets see "the Redeemer" and "the Sun of Righteousness." The apostles declared that "Jesus of Nazareth," although he had been "crucified and slain," was the long promised "Prince of Life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses." And the beloved John, bosom friend of the Divine Son from the Holy Father's heart, tells us that in that last long look into the eternities of God, given to him for the encouragement of the faithful, he saw his loving Master in glorious, regal power, riding on as "King of kings and Lord of lords."

Now let me ask you a question. If we were to see one hundred men come to our town from as many different parts of the world, each bearing a beautiful picture of his native place; and, after drawing our attention to his painting, each one were to hang his picture up beside those of his fellows; and then if we saw standing out before us in that great composite picture the figure of a man, wonderful in his proportions, the original of which at that moment stepped out beside the picture, would we not declare that some wonderful Gardener had arranged each landscape with the purpose that in this great art display the figure of the Man might be seen?

And that is just what the Almighty God has done for us in the sacred picture gallery of the Holy Bible. Men from many places and at different times have painted in vivid colors the sins, the sorrows, the hopes, the fears, the pleasures, the pains, the heart-cries for, and the expectations of, salvation; these formed the views before each of them. But when we put them all together, there stands out clearly to our view one great figure—the Savior of men!

THE LAST CROSSING.

REV. E. W. FRAZEE, ON HIS 88TH BIRTHDAY.

HERE are a number of us who are now lined up at the "last crossing." We are standing where Moses stood, the "narrow sea divides" and "Jordan is rolling between us and Canaan." You are my companions in the tribulation that all must pass through before we come to "the beautiful river" where we lay our burdens down, and where, "Grace our spirits shall deliver, and provide a robe and crown."

A year ago on my 87th birthday our subject was, "An Adequate Remedy for Suffering, Sin and Death." It was so near the end that we might easily think it might be the last and it was a fitting thing that an old man should leave it behind him as his last sermon. The kind Providence which had brought me through all these years has graciously added another before requiring me, who had tried this remedy in suffering and sin, to try what it would do in death.

It has been—

"One more year's work for Jesus,

One less of life for me,
But Heaven is nearer and Christ is dearer
Than yesterday to me."

We have not reached these years by any merit or sufficiency of our own and were never more utterly and absolutely dependent upon the merits of the "Divine Son of God" than we are this hour.

A Scotch idiot wanted to join the church, and when being examined in his theology he had only one answer, which he gave to every question, "I'm a poor sinner and nothing at all, and Jesus Christ is my all and in all."

Richard Watson, the Sir Isaac Newton of Methodist Theology, said, "I am like a worm crawling into the sunlight of Deity." They meant the same thing. Whether you are an idiot or a philosopher it is the only thing for you to say. You have only the one answer for every question. When they ask, "Are you a modernist?" say, "I'm a poor sinner and nothing at all, and Jesus Christ is my all and in all." When they ask—"Are you a Fundamentalist?" say, "I'm a poor sinner and nothing at all, and Jesus Christ is my all and in all," and you will be speaking more truth than you usually speak. If you say anything else it will not be true. There is nothing else for you to say whether you are idiot or philosopher. If the philosopher does not say it he is more foolish than the idiot. "Men may live fools, but fools they cannot die."

One of the strongest intellects I ever knew was a woman high in social life. She was President of the Womans' Club, the City Library; a leader in the music, art and literary circles and in the educational and civic life of the city. She met with an accident that two years later terminated in death. She sent for me to talk with her about a future life. She said, "You see me lying here in a helpless condition from which I never expect to get up. I have time to think and I have an unsatisfied feeling about a future life. There are many figurative and poetical descriptions of Heaven and they are very beautiful, but is there not something more plain and solid, more like geometry or mathematics that you may trust in. You cannot trust much to figurative expressions when you come to a dying hour." I answered: "Let not your heart be troubled. Ye believe in God believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions. If it were not so I would have told you."

He would not leave them in such a fatal mistake. There is nothing figurative or poetical about that. It is plain and strong as any geometry, and solid as a rock, and it is the best description of Heaven our language affords and gives us the best title. She accepted the beautiful poetic imagery of the word of God, but trusted in and "built her house upon the rock."

The funeral was held in the large family home and nothing was spared in making the services an example of elegance and propriety. The best musical talent in the two adjoining cities had been engaged to sing at the funeral, but she would have no music except two hymns and had selected them herself. The first one to open the service was, "Rock of Ages Cleft for me," and the second one to close with was, "Safe in the arms of Jesus."

We are all either "saints" or "sinners," and a saint is only a sinner saved by grace. The only time he tells you to "go away from him" is when he says, "go and sin no more."

Daniel Webster, whose massive intellect still remains unsurpassed, chose to be sung to him when on his dying bed—

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins,
And sinners plunged beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains."

It is not a strong mind that refuses to yield to its Saviour and its God, but a weak mind, that yields to the devil. The strong-

Limiting God.

Psalm 78:41.

MANIE PAYNE FERGERTSON.

When man does work, he has to measure,
And plan resources, strength, and treasure,
And count the cost, and not the pleasure,
So limited is he.

When God is working, He has all things—
A universe of great and small things,
And out of nothing he can call things,
Cause what is not, to be.

But oft, when with Him we are dealing,
We walk by sight and grope by feeling
With small idea of His healing
For body or for soul.

His promises are all unfailing;
The blood of Christ is all-availing,
And faith can shout where doubt was wailing
And God will make us whole.

Dear trembling heart for Jesus yearning,
You do not know, but should be learning
That nothing comes of all your earning.
Thy soul on mercy cast.

You'll find an ocean full, unbounded,
That angel mind has never sounded,
Where you can say, "My soul has found it,
Sweet peace with God at last."

Redeemer, Kinsman, Saviour, Brother,
He paid the price—God wants no other.
'Tis Christ Himself, and not another
Must save and set us free.

He bids thee now from sin to sever,
Yield all, and trust, and leave Him never,
And thou shalt be His own forever
To all eternity.

"Be Ye Ready."

REV. A. W. ORWIG.

Ready for what? Ready for any duty in the providence of God assigned us. Ready to respond to the divine call, "Go work in my vineyard." Ready to face any danger connected with his holy service. Like Jesus, ready to die in fulfilling life's great mission. Are we thus ready?

"Be ye ready" is the solemn language of the Lord Jesus Christ. But he added, "For in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Evidently this is not a warning to be ready for death, and yet such warning is very proper sometimes, and perhaps not uttered often enough. But the words in question cannot be legitimately diverted from the real meaning Christ intended to convey.

Some years ago a certain bishop in referring to the duty of preaching on "repentance, conversion and holiness," likewise included, "And a call to be ready for Christ's coming." While he stressed the great importance of proclaiming salvation from its incipency to the highest degree, he recognized also the need of urging believers always to be ready to meet the coming Lord in the skies, as it was possible for him to come before death overtook them.

It will be observed that Christ's solemn admonition was addressed to his disciples. And the same counsel or warning is intended for all his professed followers. It will also be noticed that to some who claimed to be his, and who gave at least outward evidence of being such, they having "done many wonderful works" in Jesus' name, he rejected them. Is not this a plain inference that even some preachers will not be truly ready to meet Christ at his next advent? And were not one-half of the ten virgins, all professed believers, set aside because not inwardly ready to meet the heavenly Bridegroom? Thus many in the Church, having only the "form of godliness" (some not even that respectably), will certainly not enjoy the rapture of meeting Jesus when "the trump of God" announces his coming. Many church members will be found spiritually untidy and flirting with the world, and will be subjected to the horrors of the "great tribulation" on the earth.

A preacher who asked another preacher to fill his pulpit on Sunday expressed the hope that he would preach about the Lord's coming, saying that he did so sometimes. But he added, "Do you know, if Christ should really come I think I would be awfully scared!" What a strange remark! And with such improper conceptions of how one may and ought to feel when Christ comes, does it not seem that he was not ready? Concerning the divine declaration of Christ's coming, the Apostle Paul says we should "comfort one another with these words." And Jesus himself said we should "rejoice." In a church of a few hundred members, the pastor asked how many were ready to meet Christ. Less than a dozen persons arose! If we indeed sustain right relations to the Lord Jesus at all times, we shall not be afraid when he comes. The Apostle John says, "And now, little children, abide in him that, when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." Ah, if we truly abide in Jesus we will not dread his coming, but will welcome it.

Many years ago I heard a prominent official layman declare that he had not received a blessing for a long time! Could such a man be ready for Christ's coming? And there are others of the same sort, having left their "first love." Verily we are living in a time of a great "falling away." A wealthy church member was heard to say that he hoped Jesus would not come soon, as it would spoil all his plans for future money-making projects. Certainly he was not ready for the Lord's coming. Many are there in the Church to whom the divine rebuke is applicable, "Remember from whence thou art fallen and repent," or be rejected.

Oh how very deeply solicitous is the Lord Jesus that his professed people be ready for his coming, when he exhorts them to "take heed, lest your hearts be overcharged with the cares of this life, and so that day (his advent) come upon you unawares," unexpectedly and unprepared.

WHY SO FEW REVIVALS?

in every direction. If the shepherd fall away from a revival spirit, the sheep will naturally decline also. If he advance in the work of the Lord, they will almost as a thing of course follow him.

My brethren, believe me, I speak not this censoriously, or in the spirit of fault-finding; it is the full and deliberate conviction of my own mind—an opinion formed, not hastily, but from protracted observation, and from an intimate acquaintance with great numbers of the ministers of Christ of different denominations.

While the ministers of Christ are filled with the Spirit of God, the Church, as a general thing will not backslide. I say as a general thing. There may, in some instances, be influences brought to bear on the churches that will divert them from the promotion of holiness in their own hearts and the conversion of the impenitent, in spite of all that the most wakeful and vigilant ministry can do. Great political excitements, great commercial embarrassments, great depressions or elevations in the business and pecuniary state of the Church or the world, ay, in a great measure, divert the mass of professors of religion for a time from deep spirituality, although the ministers may be awake. And yet it is my deliberate opinion that a thoroughly wakeful, prayerful, energetic ministry, by their influence, would generally, if not universally, prevent all the calamities and disturbances, by so deeply engaging the Church and the community in general on religious subjects, that war, great political excitements, great commercial excitements, speculations, or embarrassments, would not be likely to occur. However this may be, I cannot believe it to be otherwise than a general truth, that if the ministry are baptized with the Holy Spirit, and deeply anointed with the revival influence, so the Church will be—"Like priest, like people."

And now, brethren, it does seem to me that when we ourselves are thoroughly in a revival spirit, our call to the churches to arise and engage in the general promotion of revivals will be immediately responded to on the part of the Church. Let the ministry only come out in the true spirit of revivals, and I doubt whether any minister in the land can preach for three Sabbaths to his Church, in the Spirit, without finding the spirit of revival waking up in the Church. Let this experiment once be tried; let us wake up to the importance of this subject, confess and forsake our own sins, and cry aloud to the Church, and spare not; let us lift up our voice like a trumpet, and rally the hosts of God's elect; and if they are deaf to the call, then let us inquire most earnestly what is next to be done. But until we are anointed to the work, do not let us tempt the Lord or abuse the Church, by looking out for ourselves and away from ourselves for the cause of decline in revivals.

Do not misunderstand me. I know that the Church is in a state of decline, and needs greatly to be quickened and aroused; but I am confident that the prime cause of this decline in the Church is to be found in the fact that the ministers have been diverted from their appointed work. And I am also confident that the only remedy for this state of things is, first and foremost of all, for ministers to come into a deeply spiritual and revised state of mind. And as soon as this comes to pass, there will be a general revival. And I am not looking for it to come unless ministers do thoroughly wake up to their own state and the state of the Church.

An Indian Giving Evidence of a New Heart.

In the year of 1900 I heard an address by a man who had been a missionary to an Indian tribe. He related that after he had once preached on a new heart, one of the Indians asked permission to speak, when being freely given, the Indian said, substantially: "Long time ago me feel very bad in here (putting his hand over his heart). Often me go out in forest and say, O Great Spirit, me very bad. Me want to be good. But no peace came. Me keep on going to the forest saying, O Great Spirit, me want to know you,—me want to know you. Still me have no peace. One day me go far into the woods, and kneel long time on snow, and cry, O Great Spirit, me must know you; me never be happy till me know you. All at once I feel so happy,—no more sad in here (hand on heart). Me go home and tell my people. Me no more get drunk or quarrel. Me be good and kind to everybody. Me love everybody. Everything look so nice. Now, Mr. Missionary, is that a new heart?" The Missionary assured the Indian that it was; for the sadness had been turned into peace and joy, and the blessed graces of the Holy Spirit were indeed manifest.

This beautiful incident reminds me of what a little boy said to his mother about a little girl, who, in the eyes of the boy, gave evidence that she had a new heart. "Mother," said he, "Alice must be a Christian, for she plays like one." Dear reader, may God enable us to prove by our lives that we indeed have a new heart and a right spirit.

I Have Been Greatly Impressed,

Says Rev. Arthur Sellers, while reading "Perfect Love," by Rev. J. A. Wood, and believe it the best, clearest, most authoritative for the Methodist doctrine, clearing all doubts and arguments against holiness, than any other book I have found. Indeed, I am impressed to have as many of my members have it as possible.

Brother Sellers' statements are not in the least overdrawn. If you haven't a copy of this book, get it and read it. Price, $1.50.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

ELLWOOD CITY, PENNSYLVANIA.

Closed one of our best meetings here August 18, in Park Gate Baptist Church. Preached definitely on holiness. The break came last Friday, after five met to "pray through." And they did. That night seven came in a group to the altar. Such praying and weeping, I seldom see any more. All prayed through to pardon, to be reclaimed, or for holiness. Two more sought pardon last Sunday. One girl said, "I'm not allowed to get saved." But, she finally came, and was gloriously saved. Hallelujah! Some drove twenty miles one way to meetings. One brother walked two miles each way to get to meetings. Sunday school superintendent said the meeting was God-sent, and that she knows the church will grow now as never before. People accepted teaching fine, and now want a strong preacher who will preach deep.

MT. LOOKOUT CAMP MEETING.

The 1929 Mt. Lookout Camp Meeting is a matter of history. God was with us in great power. The evangelists were Rev. Andrew Johnson, of Kentucky, and Rev. E. E. Shelhamer and wife of California. Sister Shelhamer had charge of the music and the children's meetings. Camp opened with a splendid crowd for the first night. Great audience Sabbath; the long altar was filled Sabbath eve, and many were saved, reclaimed or sanctified. The power and crowds increased as the days went by. A number of sick were at the altar for healing. The people were pleased with all the evangelists and the work was thorough. The finances came easy and the bills were about all met. The camp meeting Board gave the evangelists a strong invitation to return in 1930. If the Lord tarries, the camp next year will be about August 15 to 25.

Our new president, Rev. Ray Dutson, is making us a fine leader. He is a young man full of faith and the Holy Ghost. Our bookstand was very well patronized, yet we would have been glad if the people would have bought more. Sister S. W. Miller had charge of the bookstand. She knows just how to sell books as well as to pray and testify. Sister Irwin was our efficient pianist. A friend bought and paid for our piano and gave it to the camp meeting board. Our boarding house was well handled by Sister Burdard and Sister Branamen. We are praying for God to bless all the people that prayed for and helped to make the camp a success. E. T. Bowdle.

EATON RAPIDS CAMP MEETING.

Again a splendid camp meeting, held on the beautiful grounds near Eaton Rapids, Mich., has become history. Many who have known the camp the longest agreed that, in both numbers and fruitage, this was the greatest camp ever held on these grounds. Almost every cottage and room were taken before the camp began, many churches obtaining cottages for their young people. The crowds on Sundays were such that it was difficult to even stand near enough the tabernacle to be able to hear. Twenty lunch tables have been provided on the grounds by the association for use of those bringing their lunch. Besides the groups at the tables, ninety-six groups were counted the first Sunday, picnicing on the grounds. At the same time, the large dining hall was caring for a capacity crowd.

But the thing that makes the camp of so great value to the churches and communities of the state is not that the crowd is there, primarily, but that in the crowd the Spirit of God is working, leading men from sin to holiness. From practically the first service the altars were filled with souls seeking and finding God in the good old way, enabling them to settle some life principles and find a satisfying experience of God in the soul. No record was kept of numbers, but after a most satisfactory week, it was estimated that there were at least 150 seekers at the altar the last Saturday night and Sunday. The Spirit of God was outpoured in unusual measure. Many found pardon and purity; and many young lives were dedicated to God, some of whom will go forth to join that large company of representatives of Eaton Rapids Camp, now laboring for God around the world.

The preaching this year was of the highest type of sane, definite expounding of Scriptural Holiness, as could be judged by the splendid corps of workers, including Rev. Paul Rees, a most talented and used young man, with us for the first time this year; Rev. Jos. H. Smith, Rev. Raymond Browning, Commissioner Brengle, of the Salvation Army, Rev. Geo. Bennard, Rev. Jos. Owen, President of John Fletcher College; and others well known in this camp. Mrs. Vennard, president of the Chicago Evangelistic Institute, was in charge of the Young People, who filled Epworth Chapel daily, and of the Missionary Service, with Miss Mary Vennard working most acceptably with the children. One of the great features of the camp has, for years, been the high order of music, in charge of Rev. L. H. Nixon with Prof. H. M. Skinner, artist accompanist, at the piano. This year was no exception. Such music brings great inspiration to any service.

The finances were raised this year with the expenditure of the least time and effort of any year, sufficient money coming in to clear the camp of every dollar of indebtedness and run it on a cash basis through the year, besides a generous missionary offering, and the establishment of a splendid fund, through gifts by will or annuities, for permanent improvements. Rev. H. D. Skinner, of Muskegon, was re-elected president, and was in charge throughout the camp. He is glad to be able to announce the return next year of at least part of this year's workers, including Rev. Jos. H. Smith and Rev. Paul Rees, and Miss Mary Vennard for the children, with the addition of Dr. J. L. Brasher, former president of John Fletcher College, and Miss D. Willia Caffray, Missionary Evangelist to South America and India, for the young people, and others. Fern Wheeler.

MT. VERNON, VIRGINIA, CAMP.

The eighteenth annual camp meeting held at Mt. Vernon, Va., on what was formerly a part of the estate of George Washington, was one of the most successful ever held there. Earnest and inspiring messages, spiritual singing, pleasant unity of spirit and finances that were cheerfully met, all combined to make the meeting one long to be remembered. The congregations were better than for several years past and the number of campers larger than usual. Our hearts were gladdened by seeing a number of seekers for pardon or purity pray through to victory. There was the pleasing impression too, that foundations had been laid for greater spiritual results in future years.

Rev. Fred M. Ross, of San Pedro, Calif., did the greater part of the preaching and the Lord certainly blessed him and his message. The people not only esteem him highly for this work's sake, but for his genial manner and friendly disposition. Bro. Alvin Young of New York, proved himself to be a splendid soloist, cornetist and song leader and a good preacher also. In fact, Bro. Ross insisted that Bro. Young should preach more and more often. We were also blessed by some fine messages from Rev. Milson Thomas and the young people responded willingly to the leadership of Miss Bertha Munro.

One of the most inspiring meetings of the whole series was on Sunday afternoon, August 11th, when, in behalf of the Board of Directors of the Mt. Vernon Camp Meeting Association, Dr. J. H. Shrader presented to the president, Rev. H. H. Hoyt, a fine, new, commodious tabernacle for dedication. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Ross, and it was a heart-stirring message indeed. An offering in cash was made, which reduced the indebtedness more than one-half. Then pledges were taken to cover the remainder. After the formal dedication by the president, participated in by the officials and members of the association, it was found that the amount needed had been oversubscribed to such an extent as to assure a new electric lighting plant for next year. How hearts did thrill as the doxology was twice repeated and the services closed with the apostolic benediction.

A great future seems assured for Mt. Vernon Camp. It has always been maintained as an interdenominational work and the various denominations represented work delightfully together. Justification and sanctification, without frills or fancies, and freed of fanaticism has been the main line of doctrine taught and a deep spiritual atmosphere is sought for. It is the aim of those who have the work at heart to keep to the forefront the Christian ideals cherished by its sainted founder, Rev. H. B. Hosley, who some years ago was called to his final rest. The grounds are delightful, the accommodations adequate and the place of meeting accessible by all lines of travel."

H. H. Hoyt.

MT. LAKE PARK CAMP MEETING.

Mt. Lake Park Camp Meeting is now history, but those who were privileged to attend the fragrance and the blessings of those ten days with God lingers with us still. We were told by many that it was the best camp on the mountain top in nineteen years. Some ask what made it the best. We shall try and tell you. First, the prayer meetings were wonderful. It was not uncommon to hear the voice of supplication ascending from hotel and cottage. The day commenced with prayer. Bros. Hood, Lovejoy and Castle came to the headquarters every morning for prayer with Dr. Paul, Brother Dunaway and Dr. Heslop and many a victory was won for the day right here as well; the unity on the platform was great and of course the congregation and the holy atmosphere emanating therefrom.

It was not uncommon to see Brother Dunaway hugging Brother Heslop and Brother Heslop hugging Brother Hood or Brother Castle, hand in hand with Dr. Paul or others, indicating the appreciation and beautiful spirit amongst workers and committee. What shall we say then about our beloved president Brother Hood. He has a wonderful way in getting things done midst heavenly fragrance that only a Spirit-filled man can accomplish. He has a great spiritual vision for Mountain Lake Park, and we feel as though the Lord will soon give him the desire of his heart. Personally, we feel richer in our experience because of our being in contact and fellowship with this man of God and leader in Israel. Brother Castle did splendid work on the platform as manager and often reminded us that one could not tell the difference between Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Nazarenes or Baptists. Surely we were on the mount of blessing and glory.

Brother Lovejoy of course, was right on his job every time finance was mentioned; he was there with his smiles. He made you feel like you would lose the blessing if you did not pay up. (I am rather inclined to think that myself). Brother Lovejoy is just a blessed man of God and believes that all things work together for good. What can we say now about the workers. Three of the choicest found anywhere in the land, they made a fine team. Dr. John Paul with his logic and powerful messages on the Second Blessing, Heart Purity and Holiness, a state wherein we may stand. Then Brother Dunaway plowed up the fallow ground, preaching on dress, or the lack of it, amongst holiness people, on card playing, and movies; in fact, he just preached the old-fashioned gospel of real repentance, confession and restitution that is so refreshing to hear in these days of lukewarmness and apostasy.

What shall we say about that little preacher Heslop? We thought he had preached just about everything in the Bible every time he preached, but next day he would come again with another pitcher full and pour it out till we wondered and marvelled at the rich truths hidden away in the blessed Book. We feel like we have learned much about God and his love, his Christ and his salvation and his Holy city that's coming down out of heaven. Many of the altar services were divinely marked by the Holy Ghost coming and indwelling the temple and the recipients arising with tears of joy flowing, others jumping, some shouting and laughing.

Brother Andy Dolbow is always a blessing to any camp. He had charge of the early morning prayer meeting, the attendance being from 70 to 125; he also had charge of the ring meeting under the oaks and often he would have four hundred in attendance and the fire often fell whilst Brother Andy exhorted. I said he led the prayer meetings. Sometimes, I ought to have said, for many mornings he lost control and the Holy Spirit had his way and such praying, and shouting and jumping. Some wept, some laughed, some walked around singing and rejoicing in the Lord for the victory of the day. After such prayer meetings it was easy for Sister Heslop to organize a woman's personal workers' league with about 35 women, young and old. Immediately after the altar call was given, these women would silently move out into the aisles and many precious souls went to the altar and prayed, because with smiles or tears they pleaded with young and old to make their peace with God. Dr. Paul said he felt proud of a woman who would single herself out and walk down the aisles to do personal work. We thank God for those elect ladies who helped make the camp a success. May our God increase our number. Miss Minnie Shay, that untiring worker of love for little children, had charge of the children's meetings, many of whom found Jesus and gave their lives to serve whosoever he may lead them. Mrs. Block did splendid work with the young people; many yielded to her entreaties to get saved and sanctified. How valuable young people's work in these days. It is refreshing to see and know that some are leaving all to follow Jesus.

Our hearts were helped as we listened to several missionaries give accounts of some of their work amongst Chinese, Japanese and Koreans. We felt like we would never be the same again. We must pray more, give more and go more into the darkness of heathendom and rescue the perishing. God was there in a special way to reveal the great need in our own land, in the Kentucky Mountains. May he loosen bank books these days for we have a host of young people who are ready to go, but God's money is withheld.

Many colleges were represented. We thank the Lord for places of education where our youth may be kept out of the world. Dr. Paul represented Taylor University, Dr. Heslop Olivet College, Brother Kirkpatrick Eastern Nazarene College, Wollston, Mass., Brother Vennard Chicago Evangelistic Institute and the Asbury Quartet, who sang for us many times with the blessing of the Lord upon them. They were a very good recommendation for Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. Last but not least, we must give him all the glory, who sent to us Professor and Mrs. Kenneth Wells, the sweetest singers in Israel. Many were the beautiful songs so inspiringly rendered that great crowds time after time listened with open ears, eyes and hearts until they sometimes felt they were in another world. It surely made it easy for the preachers to preach. May the Lord lengthen their days to sing his praise and to be a great blessing to the poor songless world. Surely a song about our Christ makes us forget all our burdens and cares and our beloved Brother and Sister Wells surely sing you heavenward, not only in the main meetings but are splendid altar workers, too.

The crowds were wonderful. They came from many states and mountains round about, to hear old-fashioned singing and preaching proclaimed. What a privilege to meet all these saints. If fellowship here is so sweet and Christlike, what will it be when we all get to heaven. May President Hood and his faithful corps of workers be spared to tarry with us many years to carry on this great work of holiness unto the Lord.

MT. LOOKOUT CAMP.

Mt. Lookout Camp Meeting held a very inspiring and profitable session August 1 to 11. The principal speakers were Dr. Andrew Johnson and Rev. E. E. Shelhamer. They are "true yokefellows," very different in manner but both are uncompromising in their demand for a deep, thorough and unmistakable cleansing of heart from sin and self.

On Monday evening at the tabernacle in Lima, Dr. Johnson gave his great lecture on "Evolution Outlawed by Science." It was a masterly address, and delighted the hundreds who heard it. Dr. Johnson is doing a great work, both for science and for religion.

of God in the salvation of human souls turned back the tides of unbelief and put to flight the armies of Satan. No one can compute the great spiritual and moral good that came to the country through the revivals held and promoted by Charles G. Finney.

A great revival of true religion is what we need today: a revival in which the Holy Ghost is so manifestly dealing with the people that the most skeptical will be compelled to acknowledge that God is in our midst, that the Bible is true, that Jesus Christ has risen from the dead and is walking among men.

The revival we need is possible. It is not necessary to call a convention and elect a chairman, secretary and treasurer, skylark around for a day or two, attend the baseball game and wind up with a dollar-a-plate dinner at some hotel. That sort of thing does not produce a spiritual awakening. If the ministry of the Protestant churches of this nation will for a while dismiss other matters and concentrate on a tremendous life-and-death effort to bring the people to repentance and saving faith in Christ, we can have a revival.

The gospel is the power of God unto salvation. God has declared that his word shall not return unto him void. If we do not have a great revival, the turning back of the hosts of sin, immorality and lawlessness, the responsibilities will rest upon the Protestant pastors of these United States. The people are hungry; nothing attracts them more than a man on fire in the pulpit. They will come to hear a man through whom the Holy Ghost is speaking the gospel of Jesus Christ. They will repent, believe and be saved. If this generation is lost, the generation just beginning to turn grey, and the generation in its teens, if they are lost, if they wake up in hell in the great judgment day, their blood will be upon the skirts of the pastors of Protestantism in these United States who failed to preach and pray, and pray and preach, until God, in his glorious power gave us the most remarkable revival in the history of the Christian Church. What will the pastors do about it?

"Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth forever. And this is the Word which by the Gospel is preached unto you."—1 Pet. 1:23-25.

STOPPED-UP WELLS.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

We read in Genesis 26:18, where Isaac digged again the wells of water which they had digged in the days of Abraham his father; for the Philistines had stopped them after the death of Abraham."

This is a significant verse of Scripture, and may well be applied to the experiences of today; the wells of salvation which once flowed freely have been so filled up with the rubbish of the passing days, months, and years that the refreshing, life-giving streams have ceased to flow and the soul has consequently dried up and lost the juice and sweetness of former days.

This was the condition of affairs when Luther appeared in Germany, but God led him to dig down through the debris of tradition until he struck the life-giving stream of justification by faith, which has not ceased its flow from that day to this; however, in some parts of this land this gracious experience is being neglected in the pulpit and the people are not urged to repentance and faith which are indispensable to such a state of grace. From conditions all over the country, we fear the well of regeneration is being filled up by the Philistines of destructive criticism who do not deem it necessary to insist upon the supernatural in religion. If a preacher should earnestly proclaim this doctrine he would, in many places, be deemed a fanatic. The trend today is to simply transfer the children from the Sunday school into church membership without having known the depth of contrition for sin, or faith in Jesus for pardon. There are those who get a bit nervous when the matter of seeking Christ at an altar of prayer is stressed. Is this not filling up the wells of salvation from which flow the life-giving streams for which the sin-sick soul thirsts?

Wesley was called of God to unstop the well of full salvation which had been lost sight of and covered up by the tradition of centuries. No matter how ancient man's views may be, the word of God is older than all, and he who brings to light the neglected truths of Holy Writ may be considered a genuine benefactor to the human race. It was by studying the Scriptures that Wesley and the Holy Club saw that "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord," and he proceeded to seek and make known the gracious experience to others.

But what are these wells to us? Have we ever drank from their cool, refreshing streams? When you were converted, do you recall how your soul drank of the water of life, and how it changed the whole plan of your being? Not only was it a new life, but a "well of water springing up to everlasting life." How is it today? Have the Philistines of the "cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things" choked up that well that once flowed so freely? If this be the case, seek the closet of prayer and there tarry until you have "digged again" the well of a joyous Christian experience.

It may be you once enjoyed the experience of full deliverance from sin, but because you were not willing to testify to it, or bear the reproach or it may be a great sorrow has choked up the well, and today the salvation well is not flowing as it once did; if not, wait upon the Lord, and with the pick of faith and a complete consecration, dig again the well of full salvation and know once more the joy of abiding in the Lord and the strength which comes from a full dependence upon him.

These are days when the Philistines—the enemies of our souls—are busy filling up the wells of salvation with the stones and rubbish of worldliness, selfishness and unbelief, and if we do not, by prayer and faith, dig down beneath all this and strike the experimental note of a full deliverance from all sin, our souls will dry up and, in the end we shall go out into the darkness of eternal night. While men are wavering, the tide of unbelief is rising, and the truths of the Bible are being discarded, let us fly to the Rock of Ages and hide beneath his sheltering wings until the storm of life is past and we are safe evermore. May each of us be able to sing:

"Well of water, ever springing,
Bread of life so rich and free;
Untold wealth that never faileth,
My Redeemer is to me."

The Outlook for a Great Year at Asbury College.

L. R. AKERS, President.

Reports from all quarters indicate a great year for Asbury College. Here is a school which offers what any "A" grade institution furnishes, but in addition gives a spiritual atmosphere and a fine "camaraderie" which in this secular age is quite exceptional.

Asbury College students know "whom they believe" and they Believe. It is the desire of all who labor in this institution to send out the finest type of youth to be found anywhere, students who think clearly but who at the same time have found themselves religiously, who not only believe in, but experience a full and complete redemption.

The opening ten day revival which is an established custom begins September 22nd with that prince of preachers, Dr. Henry Clay Morrison as the speaker. Throughout the year, the most eminent Christian leaders of America will be heard from the platform of the great new Auditorium—a dream at last come true.

Students desiring music, expression, or fine arts will find exceptional opportunity for the finest work the coming year.

The great four manual Austin organ will be presided over by Mrs. Era Wilder Penniston just back from Fontaineblau, France, having studied under the world's greatest pipe organists such as Vidor of Notre Dame and others. A two manual Estey practice organ will also be used for those desiring to master the "king of all musical instruments."

Fine Arts under Miss Vivian May Norris means the best in art. She is now internationally famous, a member of the Royal Scottish Academy, the International Arts League, and with her own productions exhibited in the Metropolitan Museum of New York and in Scotland and Paris as well.

The Expression students under Misses Gray and Corley, who hold their Master's degrees from Michigan and Wisconsin, are to be congratulated indeed. Their students have won many honors.

Then the regular students of the Liberal Arts course will find in their teachers the rare combination of scholarship and piety, men abreast of the times, yet filled with the Holy Spirit.

This summer seven members of the faculty were touring or studying in Europe.

There will be a few cancellations of rooms at the eleventh hour as always. Wire your reservations at once and join the happy Asbury College family on September 18th.

An Earnest Appeal.

During the last five years Asbury College has carried on an extensive and unusual building program for a non-denominational, unsubsidized, independent, holiness institution. By the descriptives employed I mean that Asbury gets no financial help from any of the church boards, or from any of the foundations established by men of great wealth such as have been set up by Andrew Carnegie and John D. Rockefeller. I do mean that Asbury College as a holiness institution stands as a monument to the sacrificial giving of thousands of friends of small to moderate means, who love, believe in, and sacrifice willingly for the maintenance of a college wholly committed to the Gospel of full salvation for all men from all sin and the sending out especially of young men and young women prepared to propagate that Gospel.

During the last five years three new buildings and an enlargement to a fourth have appeared on the campus of Asbury College: Glide-Crawford Hall for girls; Morrison Memorial Library; Hughes Memorial Auditorium; and the enlarged Dining Hall and Kitchen. The cost of all of these buildings was largely provided for by subscriptions. But, as always happens when enterprises are carried on on this basis, quite a number of these subscriptions have not been paid—some because of financial losses, some through death, others because of an over-enthusiastic estimation of ability to pay. Thus the College has faced the necessity of paying the contractors by borrowing and by drawing on such general funds as were available.

Asbury College stands in need of $50,000 of immediate help. I am appealing to the great regular family of HERALD readers and others who read this appeal to join us in lifting this burden by sending in from one to ten dollars each. Do not send less than one dollar, or more than ten dollars unless you feel specially led of the Lord and are financially able to make a larger gift. Send your check or cash to the Business Manager of Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., or to Mrs. H. C. Morrison, in care of THE HERALD office.

P. S.—Quite a number of chairs in the new Auditorium at $50 each remain unsold. Those subscribing for chairs will have their names affixed upon a plate and fastened to the back of the chair.

Rev. E. E. Montgomery Enters the Evangelistic Field.

Rev. E. E. Montgomery, of Cartersville, Ill., plans to enter the evangelistic field. I have known "Ed" for twenty years and have assisted him in a number of meetings during that time. He is "all wool and a yard wide" and will be a valuable addition to the evangelistic force in the great field of revival activity. He has been a pastor for twenty years and knows the problems of the church. He has also had wide experience as an evangelist. He is a strong preacher, a good singer, a fine mixer and a great soul-winner. May God graciously bless him in the promotion of many sweeping revivals. Those desiring evangelistic help may reach him at Cartersville, Ill. ANDREW JOHNSON.

THE LAST CROSSING.

est intellects are the first to recognize and yield themselves to their Creator, and to humbly bow at the cross of Jesus Christ. "Your highest place is lying low and helpless at your Redeemer's feet." If you ever have a crown in Heaven the first thing you will do with it will be to "cast it down, like the angels do, at the feet of Jesus." The highest intellectual attainment possible to a created being, either in earth or Heaven is to have "the mind which was also in Christ Jesus."

There are three philosophies of life—"Life without Christ in it," "Life with Christ in it," and "Life in Christ without any philosophy." And this the most scientific and philosophical of all. You may let the young people know that the intellect of the world is on the side of Jesus Christ. There are two prime sources of infidelity in this present evil world; the "hardening of the heart" and the "softening of the brain."

At the Transfiguration on Mount Hermon,

Moses and Elias came from the Heavenly world to converse with him about the decrease he should accomplish at Jerusalem. There was no one on earth he could talk with about these deep things of God. He tried to talk about them with his disciples, but Peter rebuked him and would have ruined all. He said, "Lord, this shall not be unto thee." But it was "unto him"—Peter could not help it. He had now taken Peter, James and John with him to the mountain and they were overwhelmed with glory, and when they recovered from their celestial dream the heavenly visitors had departed and "they saw Jesus only."

You have come to your "last transfiguration." You have been on many a mountain top and many celestial messengers have come to you in these passing years. You have been with Peter, James and John and had high experiences of bewildering joy, but more than ever as you draw near the end "You dare not trust your sweetest fame, but wholly lean on Jesus' name." Like Moses and Elias, these moments of extreme and supreme brightness will depart. They have gone back to the Heaven they came from and you "see Jesus only."

Sir Isaac Newton will forget the law of gravitation, Edison will forget all his "electrical discoveries," kings will forget all about their "crowns," but sinners like you and me will never forget or cease to fix our eyes and our hearts on "Jesus only." You will forget the exulting fancies and the fervent raptures of your religion and trust only in the "solid rock." You will forget the "Angel Bands" and forget all about the "snowy wings" and turn to the "wounds of Jesus for your sin."

After 88 years of this mortal life, 73 years as boy and man, preaching the gospel of Christ and a knowledge of Christ as my personal Saviour since the age of 13, I know that Jesus Christ is the first, last, best hope of every human life. It is proper for me to now say a few words to the goodly number of 80 years and more, who are lined up with me on the bank of the river that all must cross, waiting for the "unseen boatman" and "the muffled oar." "Only one more river to cross" and we have come to it today.

After preaching the Gospel of Christ for 75 years there is nothing else for me to preach now, and if I am happy enough to so "hide behind the cross" and "set him forth before your eyes, evidently crucified among you," that you may "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," and have your own sins taken away it will not be in vain that I have lived so long, even though so unworthy.

Our text today is a "three days' notice" that you are "going to die." It means that next Wednesday night when the brethren have assembled for prayer you will be in Heaven, over in "the land which the Lord your God giveth you to possess it."

If I was now preaching anything that was not pure gospel, and if the posts of my pulpit were not sprinkled with the blood of Christ, I would be afraid the destroying angel would strike me dead where I stand. It is today a matter of life and death how I preach, and how you hear. "Three days" is a short notice, but it was once said to a man who had forgotten God, "this night thy soul shall be required of thee." A man who may be dead tomorrow had better give his heart to God today. Your "notice" came in early life. Mine came to me when I saw my father making a coffin for my little cousin.

When I was a boy my grandmother wrote me a letter on her 88th birthday and quoted the old hymn that used to be bound up in the back part of the Bible.

"The time of my departure is come,

I hear the voice that calls me home."

I loved my grandmother and when four years old learned my letters from the large family Bible as it lay open on her knee. I am now as old as she was when she wrote me the letter and I hear the same voice calling me.

Sixty years later I stood at her grave in the old churchyard, and when I went into the church the pastor asked me to preach. It was the time of the Coronation of King Edward VII of Great Britain. I took for my text, "Seek first the Kingdom of God and his Righteousness," and told them "The crown my grandmother was wearing in Heaven" was a far greater one than any crown they could put on the head of King Edward here on earth; that the meanest subject in the Kingdom of Heaven is greater than any earthly King.

When Charles Wesley was 84 years old he sat bolstered up in bed and wrote—

"In age and feebleness extreme,

Who can a sinful worm redeem,

Jesus, my only hope thou art,

Strength of my failing flesh and heart,

O, could I catch a smile from Thee,

And drop into eternity."

He "caught a smile and dropped into eternity," and was caught in the "everlasting arms." The words he wrote were printed in the old church hymn book as they were written in the crooked, straggling hand-writing of the dying, and reaching all the way across the page.

When John Wesley was not quite 88 he sang on his death bed—

"I'll praise my Maker while I've breath,

And when my voice is lost in death,

Praise shall employ my nobler powers."

But he broke down—his breath was gone, his "voice was lost in death" and he went over to continue it in Heaven forever, where they don't need any breath, and left us his last word to succeeding generations—"The best of all is that God is with us." That is the best now—better than breath—"Better than Life." When we part in this life and want to say to the friends we love the best thing that can be said to a friend, we say, "God be with you till we meet again."

Hungers of The Heart.

BY H. B. HARDY.

This volume contains inspiring chapters on The Hunger for God, Happiness, Knowledge, Social Life, Love and Immortality. The author deals with the different phases of heart hunger in a most helpful way and makes it very plain that real satisfaction for every hunger is found in Christ. Don't fail to get a copy and feed your soul on these rich truths. The book was published at $1.00. We have a limited number of copies that we are closing out at 60c each, postpaid. Order a copy today. If more convenient, stamps will be acceptable. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

Ideals for Earnest Youth.

Ideals for Earnest Youth is a charming book for young people of both sexes. It is neatly bound, excellent paper, good, clear print, 224 pages, short chapters, sometimes only two pages, frequently not more than three pages. This enables the young reader to catch up the book at a few spare moments, read a chapter and go to work, or on a journey, with something to think about. Let me give you a few of the chapters:

Self Respect, Self Mastery, The Joy of Living, Your Ideals, Courtship and Marriage, Take Care of Your Mind, The School of Struggles, Backbone vs. Wishbone, Team Work, Recreation.

Send a dollar to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for a copy of Ideals for Earnest Youth, and surprise one of your children or young friends with a bright smile and a beautiful gift.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

LITTL CARL.

Little Carl was a child-friend we had in one of our early pastorates. We do not remember how our acquaintance first began, for he did not reside near us, but made occasional visits to our town, and when he did, one of the first places that he would ask permission to call, was at the parsonage.

The bell would ring, and the little visitor, at first not more than five years of age, would take off his hat as he asked if the pastor was at home and if he were engaged. When invited within he would say that his mother had said that he could only remain a little while. The pastor would then ask what he wanted. He would usually reply, "I want you to tell me a story." "What kind of a story?" he was asked. He would answer, "One about Jesus." In this way through his occasional calls, which covered a period of several years, he learned most of the Bible stories, and, we believe, became truly acquainted with our Lord Jesus Christ.

His belief in the omnipresence of Jesus was witnessed to by a most practical faith. He was told that Jesus is everywhere, in the dark as well as in the light. He remarked that there was a dark hole in their cellar which always made him afraid, and then said, "I will not be afraid of that dark hole any more." He was naturally a timid child and someone always sat by him, when he was put to bed, till he fell asleep. That very night he said, "Jesus is everywhere, Jesus is in the dark as well as in the light. Jesus is here, I am not afraid. You need not stay with me." From that day he never feared the darkness, for Jesus was truly with him.

The lesson went deeper, for he became a little preacher. He entered a friend's office one day after this, and the friend looked at him saying, "There are just two of us here." Little Carl replied, "There are three of us here." The friend responded and said, "Only two,—you, that is one, and I, that makes two." Little Carl answered, "There are three,—you, I and God." The friend was surprised, but persisted still that there were only two, and that if God were there, he would see him. Upon this, Carl advanced toward a beautiful flower that was growing in the office, and pointing at it, said, "Look at this! If we cannot see God here, we cannot see him anywhere."

On another occasion when he was very young, too young to read, he was taken out for a drive by some men who were attracted by his unusual intelligence. While out with them their horse became somewhat hard to manage and the driver had evidently used language that was not proper. Little Carl had not seemed to notice it at the time, but his tender conscience had been aroused. After the party had reached their destination and were seated at the table, he slipped quietly down and finding a book that looked very much like a Bible, he brought it to the table. Having opened it he put his finger on the page and looking into the face of one of the men, quietly said: "You must not say bad words." Only those who had been present on the drive understood. The driver said that he had never before had such a rebuke in his life and would profit by it. We could repeat many such incidents concerning our little friend, but enough has been said to show that Carl's mind and heart had been taught of God, and that in many ways God used his little life.

He is no longer with us; after a brief illness, while yet but a child, he fell asleep in Jesus, but his memory is still green and many lives were touched for God by him and we trust that this little sketch may touch others. Especially may parents and loved ones learn to believe for the conversion and for the spiritual life of their children and so instruct them and pray for and with them, that they may be taught of God and trained for him in the days of their childhood and youth.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a

West Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My father takes The Herald and I sure enjoy page ten. I have never written to The Herald before so I would like to see my letter in print. I have red hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am sixteen years old. My birthday is Nov. 14. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with A and ends with A, and has seven letters. The one who guesses my middle name I will write to them. Let's hear from more of you West Virginia boys and girls.
Genevieve O'Dell.
Bruce, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Texas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? We take The Herald and I sure enjoy reading page ten. I am four feet, eleven inches tall, have dark complexion, brown eyes and hair. My birthday is March 28. Have I a twin? If so please write me and I will answer it. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with an A and ends with an E, and has six letters in it. Who guesses it I will write to them. As this is my first letter to The Herald, I hope to see it in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is out catching potato bugs.
Francis A. Crump.
Cunningham, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little South Carolina girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twelve years old and have one brother and he is eighteen years old, and I have no sister. My birthday is 22nd of February. It is George Washington's birthday. My father died when I was three years old. My mother is living and we live with our grandma. My mother takes The Herald. I like to read page ten. I have an uncle and aunt that are missionaries. My uncle is in Africa, and my aunt was in China for ten years, but she is in homeland now. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with A and ends with N, and has three letters in it. Whoever writes to me I will answer every letter. I hope to see this in print for this is my first letter.
Alice Williams.
Rt. 2, Box 4, Central, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Missouri girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My birthday is Nov. 10. Have I a twin? If so please write to me. I am nine years old. My father is a Methodist minister. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I have one sister. Can any one guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with A, and has four letters. Pattie R. Trevathan, I guess your middle name to be Ruth. I hope Mr. W. B. is out on a hike, for I would like to see my letter in print.
Esther L. Rathert.
Rt. 2, Box 17, Granger, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a girl from the State of Missouri join your happy band of boys and girls? My grandmother takes The Herald and she lets me have it to read and I sure enjoy reading it, especially page ten. I go to the M. E. Church, South. My birthday is June 4th. Have I a twin? I will soon be twenty-four years of age. I would like to receive letters from some boys and girls near my age. I hope to see my letter in print.
Marguerite Lyman.
Holt, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just been reading page ten of The Herald and I thought I'd write again. This is my third letter to The Herald. Thanks to Aunt Bettie for printing my other letters. The Pentecostal Herald is certainly a wonderful paper. I enjoyed reading the story of The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston and also Dr. Morrison's sermons. We do not have any church here but we have Sunday school in the schoolhouse. It has been almost five years since we had revival meetings here and I hope we can have a revival meeting again soon, as we surely need it. Mae Evelyn Whitworth, you have my mother's birthday. Sarah E. Atchley, I guess your middle name to be Eva. I have just received a diploma for reading the Bible through from cover to cover. If any of you cousins wish to get a diploma free for reading the Bible through, write to me and I will tell you where and how to get one. All those who can, send a stamped envelope then I can answer right away. Perhaps you cousins are wondering who I am. I am a North Dakota girl twenty-one years of age Aug. 2. I will close and leave room for the rest of the cousins, and maybe I can write again sometime. I hope to see this letter in print. If any of you cousins care to write, I will be glad to hear from you. I will answer every letter I receive. Luella Waller, why don't you write to me? May God bless and keep you all. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Albertha Mabel Smalley.
Rt. 1, Corinth N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school about every Sunday and I am a Christian. I was fourteen August 15. I have one brother and no sisters. This is my first letter. I will answer all letters received.
Prentice Teets.
Rt. 1, Box 49, Terra Alta, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Mississippi girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My birthday is May 6. Have I a twin? If so, please write me. I am thirteen years old and in the ninth grade. I was converted in the revival meeting last June. I enjoy living for the Lord because he gives me such great joy and peace and so many blessings. My only joy and happiness is to go to prayer meeting, Sunday school and preaching. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. This is my first time to write to The Pentecostal Herald. I must bring it to a close and I hope to see it in print.
Dorothy Floyd.
Rosetta, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you and the cousins kindly move over a little space and let me enter into your happy band? As this is my first time to call I'll promise not to stay long. I am sweet sixteen, have light (bobbed) hair and blue eyes. My birthday is July 20. Have I a twin? If so won't you please write to me. Suppose you cousins go to Sunday school. I have a class of little boys and girls. All you cousins write to me and send a photo.
Pauline Carpenter.
Rt. 1, Reedy, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl from Poole, Ky., join your happy band of boys and girls? I read The Herald when I can and enjoy page ten. I am twelve years of age and weigh seventy-one pounds. I have blue eyes, blond hair, and a fair complexion. I am in the seventh grade and I go to Sunday school nearly every Sunday. Elsie Meads, I guess your middle name to be May. Am I right? If I am don't forget your promise. I hope Mr. W. B. is reading an interesting book. This is my first letter and I want to see it in print. Dorothy Armstrong, I guess your middle name to be Isabel. Write to me. I will close hoping to hear from some of the cousins.
Bessie B. Todd.
Poole, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Won't you please let me enter into your happy band? It is my first time to write to The Herald. I think it is a fine paper. I live in West Virginia. I do not live in town for I'd rather live in the country where the flowers bloom so pretty and the bird's sing so sweetly. Flowers and birds are my favorites. How many of you cousins like to go to Sunday school? I do for one. Please write to me. I don't know whether I could answer all letters or not for I have to go to school.
Oshel Carpenter.

living for Jesus ever since last June. I found him a wonderful Savior one night in a revival meeting. When I went to the altar my heart was so burdened with sin but his love came shining through and all my burdens were lifted. I sure have been happy ever since. I attend two Sunday schools each Sunday and teach a class at both. I teach the Primaries at our Methodist Sunday school on Sunday mornings and the Card Class at our International Sunday school at our schoolhouse every Sunday evening. I sure do enjoy teaching the little children because I feel I am pleasing Jesus greatly then. This is my first letter to The Herald and hope Mr. W. B. doesn't get it.

FALLEN ASLEEP

KULP.

Anna R. Kulp was born May 11, 1850. Was translated Aug. 13, 1929. She was married to the Rev. George B. Kulp, March 6, 1869. Was converted to Christ January 7, 1871, and gloriously sanctified January 16, 1898. For many years Sister Kulp had been in poor health suffering from cancer and other physical troubles. Very few people knew how intense her pain was because she preferred not to burden other people with her troubles. The writer had the privilege of being her pastor for about four years when her suffering was the greatest. She was the greatest woman in prayer that I have ever known and an outstanding example in self-denial. Through her years of suffering and loneliness I never heard her complain or find fault with the Lord's dealings with her. During thirty-four years of Brother Kulp's pastoral work she stood nobly by his side and fought in every battle. For the last sixteen years her work has altogether been the ministry of prayer. While her husband was in the evangelistic work she was practically a shut-in and while Brother Kulp would be preaching she would be on her knees the same hour praying that God would give him souls. She laid claim on half of the converts and no doubt in the day of rewards she will not be forgotten. Her humility was the outstanding fruit of the Spirit in her noble Christian life. Fulfilling her "ministry of prayer" she carried burdens of people throughout the world. Missionaries, Christian workers and invalids, all were on her daily prayer list. If she had kept a record of her "Answered Prayers" no doubt it would make a good size book. Very few people knew how much she prayed, how often she fasted, and what she sacrificed for the Kingdom of God. "A ministering angel in the world and the world knew it not." She has hundreds of friends who have been impressed by her holy life. Her Coronation services were held in the Immanuel Church, Battle Creek, of which she had been a member for 29 years. Her body lies in Oakhill Cemetery waiting for the morning of the Resurrection while she is with God. She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, two daughters, two sons, and several grandchildren.

Rev. Warren E. Posey.

JACKSON.

Blanch Evelyn Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jackson, was born Sept. 19, 1927, and died July 23, 1929. After ten days of severe suffering and pain the death angel came quietly in and took her sweet spirit back to the God who gave it. The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord. Funeral services were held in the home; sweet words of consolation were spoken to the grief-stricken parents by Brother Harrell, of Omega, Ga., reminding them of the meeting again with their precious baby, where no more good-byes will ever have to be spoken in that beautiful home of the soul. No more on earth will we hear the sound of her sweet voice, or the patter of little feet, as she would run to meet "Daddy" when he came in from his work, but we are assured that she will be always waiting with angel baby hands outstretched, in glory, for mama, daddy and little sister.

While our hearts are veiled in sadness at the passing away of dear little Blanch, we know her suffering and pain are over, and our heavenly Father had need of her in a better world.

We will only think of her as safe in the arms of Jesus and her going will only enhance all the raptures of heaven, and help us to live closer to God, and mold our lives purer and better, so that we can have the sweet assurance of meeting our darling again in the land where we'll never grow old. Beautiful babe, thy work all done. Precious soul into glory gone. Beautiful life with its crown now won. God giveth thee rest.

Interment was in old Sandis cemetery, Colquitt Co., Ga.

One who loved her,
Linnie Hammer.

COMPANIONSHIP WITH GOD.

Dr. T. L. Hulise, retiring editor of the Central Methodist has published a book of four sermons under the title of "Companionship With God." The author is not only one of our deep thinkers, but his balanced judgment and lucid diction make what he has to say on any subject well worth reading. The title of the book is also the subject of the first sermon and is one of the greatest deliverances on that subject that I have read in many a day. The subjects treated in the other sermons are as follows: "Six Reasons Why I Am a Christian," "The Holy Spirit—His Nature and Mission," and "The Stewardship of Life."

I happened to know that these sermons have been put into printed form because of the urgent request of the author's friends whose lives have been blessed under the deliverances of these great messages. The author's loyalty to the great fundamentals of Christianity and his capacity for stating these doctrines are facts well known by all the brethren who have read the Central Methodist or who have heard him preach. An appropriate preface has been written by that veteran of a thousand battles in the interest of vital Christianity or the abundant life in the fullness of the Spirit, Dr. H. H. Morrison. The book is published by The Herald Press and may be had from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. Price, 35 cents.

Adam Clarke---Great Commentary

Dr. Clarke was one of a long succession of men who, in every age of the Christian Church, have applied the best energies of their intellect and heart to the study and interpretation of the Scriptures. The seven gifts which, according to Augustine, the true expositor of Scripture must possess—reverence, piety, science, fortitude, prudence, cleanness of heart, and heavenly wisdom—were his portions.

The studies of his earlier years always had a bearing on this great work. From the beginning he felt the need of being taught by God to understand his own word. Referring to this, he says: "No man ever taught me the doctrine I embrace; I received it singly by reading the Bible."

Sufficiently critical to aid the inquiries of the more serious student, and yet sufficiently popular to serve the purpose of general edification. Its luminous expositions of the Law and the Gospel; its earnest and forcible appeals to the conscience of the sinner and the unbeliever; its rich counsels for the well-understood wants of the Christian's inner life; its endless exhibitions of general knowledge; and its valuable aids to the students of those holy tongues in which revelation took its first recorded forms—all will render this book the companion and the counselor of multitudes as long as the English language may endure. The man who accomplished it achieved immortality, his name having become indelibly identified with an indelible monument of learning and religion.

He gives a lucid view of the several books of Scripture, as to their dates and authors, the deficiencies of the reader; he elucidates difficulties in chronology, history, and oriental manners; he develops the grand doctrines of revelation, and applies the whole to the great concerns of human salvation and duty.

One leading feature in its character is independence in thinking. While he availed himself of the labors of others, the great number of his expositions are emphatically his own.

Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary on the Bible is one of the noblest works of the class in the entire domain of sacred literature. It is a thesaurus of general learning. Its luminous expositions of the Law and the Gospel; its earnest and forcible appeals to the conscience of the sinner and the unbeliever; its rich counsels for the well-understood wants of the Christian's inner life; its endless exhibitions of general knowledge; and its valuable aids to the students of those holy tongues in which revelation took its first recorded forms—all will render this book the companion and the counselor of multitudes as long as the English language may endure. The man who accomplished it achieved immortality, his name having become indelibly identified with an indelible monument of learning and religion.

We commend it as the most spiritual commentary published. 6 large volumes, good paper, good binding, new type.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XIII.—September 29, 1929.

Subject.—Review.

Reading Lesson.—Romans 11:1-12.

Golden Text.—The mercy of the LORD is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children. Psalm 103:17.

Time.—B. C. 595 to B. C. 397.

Introduction.—I am persuaded that it will be more profitable to make some study of our reading lesson than to enter into a review of the quarter's work. You may make that review for yourself, or you may go into this advance study. It is all about God's dealings with the Jews.

After the death of Malachi the Jews seem to have been almost without prophets for several hundred years. Simeon who was about the temple when Jesus was born, was a prophet, or teacher; but he left no writings. Anna was, in some sense, a prophet. Fearful darkness had settled upon Israel when John the Baptist began preaching, but day was breaking after the long night of spiritual gloom.

When Jesus Christ was anointed with the Holy Ghost on the bank of the river Jordan it was the beginning of a new dispensation of grace in the Church; for, mark you, God has never had but one church, nor will he ever have another. His church is composed of all good people, whether they ever belong to a man-made denomination or not. It is this church against which the gates of hell shall never prevail.

When the Holy Spirit was poured out on the day of Pentecost, he was Christ's coronation gift to his church. He had always been with the church, but on that memorable day he came in his baptismal office. He was in no sense a new Spirit, but came in a new office. He did not, could not, come in that office to the world; that is, to the unregenerate, because they could not receive him in that office. No one can be saved and baptized with the Holy Ghost at the same time; and Jesus Christ is my authority for the statement.

The coming of the Holy Spirit in his baptismal office completed the plan of human salvation. The first call went to the Jews, as was proper, on the day of Pentecost, and for some time thereafter. But when they rejected it, God turned away from them to the Gentiles, and for more than 1800 years the Jews have been passing through the most terrible spiritual darkness in all their long history. But, thank God, the night will, ere long, be passed, and the morning of a new day will come to Jehovah's chosen people; but, better still, it will be a new day for the entire world. Keep your eye upon the Jews, for they are God's index finger pointing forward to the day of his coming glory. God has not utterly forsaken his Israel.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Hath God cast away his people.—Certainly not. This question opens the way to a better day for Israel. God forbid.—The expression in the original Greek is "be it not." I also am an Israelite.—Paul was ever careful to identify himself with his beloved people. A fine trait.

2. Wot.—An old word meaning "known." Elias is the Greek form of the name Elijah. The fine old prophet grew pessimistic, and concluded that all men, except himself, had forsaken Jehovah.—rather a common feeling among certain cults even at this day; but God has thousands of faithful followers among men.

3. They have killed thy prophets.—That was true: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee." Yes, they had "dugged down" God's altars, but Elijah was mistaken in feeling that he was "left alone." His was the common mistake of trying to live by feeling instead of by faith. The prophet was in a great strait—they were seeking to kill him. He got "blue," and I do not blame him.

4. The answer of God.—I do not suppose that God meant to rebuke his despondent servant, but rather to encourage him. Seven thousand were not very many out of the whole nation, but it was seedcorn for a future planting. They had "not bowed the knee to Baal." Let us be glad in this day when thousands are bowing down to the Baal of modernism, thank God there is a great multitude that will never go down to that idol. Hallelujah!

5. A remnant according to the election of grace.—Some Jews, even in Paul's day, did accept salvation by faith. They came in by grace, and not by works of law.

6. Here Paul makes a contrast, showing that one cannot be saved from sin by both grace and works. He does not contradict James. Paul writes of the initial of salvation: James of what a saved man must do, in order to keep saved.

7. Israel hath not obtained.—The day had past for works of the law. Men must seek salvation by faith only. Those of Israel who had refused salvation by faith in God's grace had become spiritually blind—their hearts were hardened.

8. God hath given.—Why? Because they had stiffened their necks and hardened their hearts, lest they should repent and be converted. God never forsakes men until they forsake him.

9. David saith.—Turn to Psalms 69:22-25. It is a free quotation, and not verbatim. This is common in the New Testament, showing that the Divine Spirit in inspiring the Word was more concerned about truth than he was about mere words. As we read these fearful words in both Testaments, we realize that Israel had so trampled upon the law of God—had so "frustrated the grace of God," as Paul puts it, that God had "given them over to a reprobate mind." Their day of doom came because they would have nothing else. When men will not have God's best, they must accept God's worst.

11. Stumbled that they should fall? God forbid.—Paul is referring to the Jewish people, and not to individuals. Jews who die without accepting Jesus Christ are as surely lost as are sinful Gentiles; but the day will come when the Jews then living will accept Christ. Through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles.—This is one of Paul's hard sentences. You will recall that Peter refers to some of them. Just why the fall of the Jews should bring salvation to the Gentiles, is not definitely stated, but

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

we do know that when the spiritual times of the Jews closed, the spiritual times of the Gentiles began. It was then that the second call to the marriage supper went forth.

12. How much more their fulness.—There is a glorious time ahead for Israel. They will have another call to salvation; and they will accept it. The time is coming when they will cry: "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Then we shall "see a nation born in a day." But, as Paul intimates, it will also be a gracious day for all men. May God speed the coming of that blessed day of salvation.

THE BASIS OF NATIONAL GROWTH.

No victory can long endure

Whose genesis is not above,
The soul that breathes the life impure
Cannot express the law of love.

The chains imposed through cruel hate,

Justice decrees shall lose their hold,
And tyrants vile bewail their fate
As into bondage they are sold.

'Tis not by pillage nations grow

To the full stature God desires;
The greed of gain, the seed they sow,
Consumes them with eternal fires.

One family the races are

With their respective spheres assigned,

Whose progress hinges not on war,
But Christly love for all mankind.

W. C. Carter.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

M. H. Russell: "We are glad to report victory through our Savior. Four years ago we left the mountains and took up pastoral work in Zanesville, Ohio, where we remained for three years, then back to Lawrenceburg, Ind., for a year. We are taking up our work again in Tennessee; our post office is Jamestown, Tenn. There is a revival here in charge of a young man by the name of Bernell. The prospects are good for a revival. This is the home of the World War hero, Alvin York, who was saved and sanctified in a meeting we held here a number of years ago. He and I raised the money with which to build this church."

S. J. W.: "The Asbury College Foreign Missionary Team, composed of Eugene Erny, Virgil Kirkpatrick and Byron Crouse, members of the class of '25, began a series of missionary rallies in Washington, D. C., prior to their sailing for Korea about Nov. 1st. The first missionary rally was held Thursday night, Sept. 5, at the Metropolitan Memorial M. E. Church at the invitation of Gordon Barnes, a former student of Asbury, who is the president of the Epworth League of that church. After a tour of the cities on the eastern coast the Asbury College Foreign Missionary Team will be open for dates along their route of travel from Chicago to San Francisco. Sailing for Korea, equipped with a huge canvas tent purchased by the class of '25, the boys will join Robert Chung, a classmate who is seeing thousands brought to Christ under his ministry in his native land."

Sam Maxwell: "The revival at Oak Forest Methodist Church in Morganton, N. C., closed last night. During the meeting 104 were at the altar and professed faith in Christ. Of this number 41 were adults and 63 were children and youth. Among those joining were many substantial citizens who will be a great asset to the spiritual forces of the community. Brother Lewis and his good wife are doing a great work in Morganton. My next meeting will be at Vanceboro, N. C., instead of at Wentworth."

P. P. Belew: "The writer has just closed his work for the assembly year, and it has been the best year of his life. God has been very gracious and my life and Christian experience have been preceptibly broadened and deepened. I have traveled nearly nine thousand miles, conducted seventeen meetings and two conventions, and have seen many precious souls find God. My last meeting was with Rev. Laurence H. Howe and his church at Harvey, Ill. We had a good meeting there last year, but a better one this year both in attendance and results. Brother Howe has been pastor of this church for seven years and is recalled for the eighth. He needs no further recommendation; his church contains some of the salt of the earth. We very much enjoyed laboring with this fine pastor and people. Besides caring for all the expenses of the meeting, they paid the evangelist well, and gave the pastor's wife a nice offering. We face the future with faith in God for the greatest victories of life."

J. J. Smith: "I am at Hurricane camp meeting with Brother Howell and Brother J. H. Cox, and W. C. Kinsey, song leader. The meeting is starting well and we are praying for a great meeting."

I want to get in touch with a congregation of Christians, anywhere, who would like to have a revival meeting, or regular preaching, who are weak financially. I preach only Christ Jesus and his gospel of heartfelt religion. I care not about the money end; all I desire is to have folks come and hear me preach and sing the gospel. I must be about the Master's business. If you are in anyway interested, to help God and a true servant of his, then write Evangelist O. L. Winters, 936 New York St., Lawrence, Kan.

Rev. J. H. Schleucher: "I feel that God would have me go out as an evangelist. I was ordained by the 'World Faith Missionary Association' in 1923. The late Rev. C. S. Hanley, founder of this organization, together with eleven other preachers of various denominations, conducted the ordination services. I feel especially called to preach to the unsaved, emphasizing the New Birth and Future Punishment. I am an old-fashioned preacher with an eternal, everlasting hatred for sin and worldliness. The preacher that invites me need not feel discouraged if the crowd is small, as I will preach with the same fire and zeal as if the building was crowded. God has called me to preach the gospel, and not to provide entertainment for a crowd of people. My financial plan is to take what the folks give, thank God for it, and keep my mouth closed about it to the people. I am asking God to make me a soul winner and not to let me become a gold digger. Address me 19 S. W. 8th St., Miami, Fla."

A gospel tent meeting began at Vanlue, Ohio, Sept. 1, with Rev. W. A. Vandersall, evangelist, and Rev. Gilbert Goins and wife leaders in song. Kindly pray for a gracious old-time revival.

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister, who closed an eight-weeks' revival at Jamestown, Ohio, is now in a meeting at Safford, Arizona. He will spend this fall and winter on the Western coast. Churches can reach him at Safford.

Leonard Cochran: "You have heard nothing from me this summer, but I am in the thick of the battle. I have been preaching constantly since the middle of June. I have just closed a good meeting with Bro. Walter Cross, and am with him in a second meeting. God blessed us with victory to several in saving and sanctifying power in the last meeting."

George Lester Edie: "I have just completed a very busy summer in the Lord's vineyard. The work has been rich in personal experiences and results. My last camp was at Conneautville, Pa., with Rev. H. Sweeten, Rev. Geo. Bennard, Dr. John Paul, and Commissioner S. L. Brengle, and a Girls' Quartet from Taylor University as special singers. Many souls have been saved and sanctified in this summer's work. I am booking for the summer of 1930 and on but my time is completely taken until June, 1930. I will be glad to correspond with those desiring a song leader and soloist in church meetings and camps. I have one camp on Long Island, N. Y., for 1930 in July, and will be glad to book meetings between Ohio and East both before and after that date. I am a graduate with B.Mus., from Taylor University, Upland, Ind."

I hope that this paragraph falls under the eye of some camp meeting committee which needs some good workers to fill out its list of evangelists for next summer. Rev. and Mrs. Thomas Davies, Angola, Ind., are available for both preaching and singing in at least two camp meetings each summer. Brother Davies is pastor of the First M. E. Church in Angola, and is known far and wide for his strong evangelistic preaching. Mrs. Davies is a great Welsh singer. She has served several years at the great Brooklyn, N. Y. convention. They are graduates of Asbury College and have taught in both Asbury and Taylor University. With Mrs. Davies' work in singing and with the children and young folk they will make an attractive and strong team for some camp meeting. Write to them as above. Thomas C. Henderson, Oberlin, Ohio.

THE BLOOD OF CHRIST.

A. H. Dixon.

Scripture Reading—Exodus 3:23;
Heb. 9:13, 14; 1 John 1:9, 8:7.

We hardly ever hear a word preached about the Blood of Jesus and I am wondering why. Of course Modernism has no use for Christ and we are not surprised at them for denying the Virgin Birth, the Atonement, the Miracles, and in fact every other truth upon which our faith is founded, but among so-called fundamentalists we hardly ever hear the statement, "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin."

A Crimson Salvation is the only salvation, and these folks that are too dignified and aristocratic to honor the Blood of Jesus will surely have to answer for it. When Adam and Eve sinned in the Garden there was blood shed to make a covering for them, and it is God's plan for our Redemption that our sins will be covered by the Blood of Christ. Abel shed blood for an offering to God and God was pleased with Abel's offering, but Cain brought an offering of the first fruits and God was not pleased, neither is God pleased when we talk of the sinless life of Jesus and never say a word about the Blood that atones and covers our sins.

Moses was a mediator at Mt. Sinai when he stood between the wrath of God and the Israelitish people. He pleaded with God to spare them, and even asked God to blot him out of the book if the Israelites were not spared; but Jesus went far beyond this at Calvary. His body stepped in between the holy wrath of God against sin on one side and the awful rebellion and impurity of the world on the other side. He stepped in and shed his precious blood without a murmur. "The Blood, the Blood, is all my plea; Hallelujah, it cleanseth me."

The blood of Abel cried from the ground and the cry was for justice and righteousness which was lawful, but the Blood of Jesus cried for Mercy and Compassion, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do."

Abel's blood was shed as a martyr or a witness, while Jesus' Blood was shed to atone, it was shed in love, hence it speaks better things than the blood of Abel.

"What can wash away my sins, Nothing but the Blood of Jesus."

What became of Jesus' Blood? The Roman church teaches (falsely) that after Jesus arose he assumed all of the blood back into his body and that every time the priest consecrates mass, the Blood is shed afresh every time in the mass, (doctrine of Transubstantiation) but we know the above is false for 'He shed his blood once for ALL.' His Blood satisfies all the claims and demands of Divine Justice. It secures our justification, and the Blood imparted to our hearts washing and purging the depraved soul by the Holy Ghost secures our sanctification. So we should be glad and rejoice that "A Fountain was opened up in the house of King David for our sin and uncleanness, and that we can plunge in and be made whole."

Let us give praise unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own Blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father, to him be glory and dominion forever. John was wondering about the white robes of the saints and where they came from and he found out that, "these are they that have come out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb."

Peter says, "For as much as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious Blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without blemish and without spot."

"The dying thief rejoiced to see

The Fountain in his day;
And there may I, tho' vile as he,
Wash all my sins away."

"If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the Blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." "Without the shedding of Blood there is no remission of sin."

Thank God for the Blood.

THE PULL OF THE LINES.

How proud I felt at the age of five or six years, as, standing up in my father's deep wagon bed, and holding the lines, I drove the big team of horses. What boy can ever forget this thrill? Steering a car does not compare with it. How well I recall every sensation of that unforgettable experience,—the feel of the heavy lines, the swerving of the team under my guiding hand, the almost total lack of impression my jerks had on the hard mouths in my attempts to stop them, and most distinctly do I remember that when the team needed to be turned sharply to right or left, I could feel the strong pull of the lines through my little hands by my father who, standing behind me, retained hold of the ends of the lines. This illustrates how the youth need the oversight, the strong pull of parents, home, church, to guide and hold in check each boy and girl, to whom the world is full of the new and untried. And this brings me to another experience, that of the Pencil and Eraser.

On my fifth birthday a good woman made me a present of a lead pencil without an eraser. In trying to draw and write I made many blunders, mistakes and crude markings. I procured a rubber eraser which fitted over the end of the pencil, and in a short time wore out the rubber erasing my scrawls, but every mark erased meant improvement. I prized both pencil and eraser, and made steady progress, as I did in learning to drive the team. But in morals we often progress downward; so I still use an eraser for

I still make mistakes. But the mistakes I most regret, will not rub out,—words, missteps, neglect, habits, deeds, acquired as we grow out of childhood. What tears of remorse these caused me. Jesus forgave my sins, but even this does not erase the memory of them; I cannot forget, nor can I go back to undo the past. Well it would be, if we heeded St. John's admonition—"Little children, I write unto you that ye sin not;" for sin leaves tears and sorrow, but righteousness brings peace and gladness. Young readers, watch your step, your thought, your aim,—their marks will not rub out: give heed to the Pull of The Home.

It seems inevitable that youth must leave home: the world is full of broken up homes. It furnished the basis for the Saviour's tenderly compelling account of the Prodigal Son. Leaving home need not result in sin, if one "keep the home-fires burning" in the heart. But many break from its moorings, associations, and familiar scenes, to try new experiences of city life, leave off good habits, and easily contract bad ones. Riches and adventure lured the prodigal from home, want and misery drove him back. But hungry and destitute as he was, his first thought was, "I have sinned." The Prince of Wales recently visiting British Collories, was touched at sight of deplorable poverty of miners' families, and with deep emotion said, "Absolutely the Bed-rock of Misery." True as this was, it is only an approach to the greater misery of sin—"I have sinned." A deeper hunger tugged mightily at his heart; it was the pull of the home, "I will arise and go to my Father." A teacher once related a story to us, how that during a blizzard, a lad was sent out to procure a back-log for the fire-place, "It's going to be a cold night," remarked his father. But the boy did not return and a search and inquiry revealed that he had joined a crew and shipped out of port, expecting to soon return home. That was the beginning of twenty years' wandering. At length he began to tire of travel; the longing for home grew strong upon him. "Do they miss me at home," he asked himself. He pictured the changes about the old home-stead.

"And today as I draw near, the old home I loved so dear,
A stranger comes to meet me at the door."

Were his parents alive, moved away, or the place sold?
"Round the place there's many a change, and the faces all Seem strange, not a loved one there to greet me as of yore."

Approaching the home of his boyhood, and recalling the errand of twenty years before, he halted at the old wood-yard, lifted a back-log to his shoulder, walked to the back door and knocked. There he met again the old folks, gray-haired, older grown, but with unspeakable joy at the son's return, though after such lapse of time, "Well son, you've been a long time bringing in that back-log."

The Pull of the Church.

While still in youth I found myself in the city amid its thrills and distractions such as any youth experiences, but its sights, sounds, and lures failed to satisfy. I grew lonely, with heart hunger. The city grated on my rural nature. I hummed the hymns which in the past I had sung with childish voice. In an amusement park, full of alluring attractions, harsh music, dancing, man-made entertainments; while sitting on a bench, I was surprised at hearing soft Voices singing, during a lull, "Rock of Ages" by a little company of church women, who had chosen the park for holding a meeting. The contrast of it all had a soothing effect upon me, which still endures. Walking down a business street on which were numerous theaters and attractions, I was again impressed by a placard in front of a down-town church which read, "Young men's prayer meeting, come in." On entering I found the prayer room full of young men, all enthusiastic, spiritual, eagerly engaged in the service. Every one had passed by amusement places to get to this humble meeting. Here was something familiar, comforting, satisfying. Had I been steered into an amusement game, or coaxed with a spoon, it would have been lost upon me. These meetings had a strong pull, and needless to say that many times thereafter I resorted thither for strength and spiritual help. I have thanked God for the "Pull of the lines," the home, the church. To those needing strength, I will send an helpful card free.

MY LIFE'S STORY

The Autobiography of Bud Robinson

This is the book for which thousands have been waiting. It is years since "Uncle Buddy" has written a book dealing with his life and experiences. Now we have this volume, his autobiography, giving an intimate recital of his experiences from early childhood to the present time. Pathos, humor, optimism, scathing rebuke, with an amazing memory of detail unite to give this volume the peculiar charm that characterizes all of Bud Robinson's writings. Just as there is only one Bud Robinson so this is the only volume giving the complete story of his life up to the present.

LET'S STICK TO THE OLD LANDMARKS.

By The Editor.

JUDE, in his general epistle, third verse, says: "It was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints." This was in the early history of the gospel dispensation, but from the first there have always been those who claimed to be the servants of God, who have opposed the plain teachings of the Word of God.

* * * *

If it was needful that Jude, in those days, urge the followers of Christ to "earnestly contend for the faith," how much more needful at the present time. It is comparatively easy to contend against those open and avowed infidels who do not hesitate to speak against God and his Word. They are bold and defiant; they stand out in the open; their brand of infidelity is so unreasonable and so profane that they stand self-condemned. People of ordinary intelligence will resent, as well as resist, their teaching.

* * * *

The dangerous skeptics today are the skeptics within the church. They are the Judas Iscariots who betray the Master with a kiss. They deny his virgin birth, the miracles which were the proof of his Godhead, and the blood atonement he made for the lost, while they heap their compliments upon him. You will find no group of men saying so many beautiful things about our Lord as the modern liberalist. Jesus Christ cares nothing for their compliments. "Why call ye me good?" God only is good. If I am not the Son of God, the express image of the Father, his manifested love to men coming down out of heaven from him, I am not good. Jesus cannot, and will not, consent to be accepted as a good man, merely, as an example, only; he declares himself the light of the world, the resurrection and the life, the forgiver of sins, one to be sought as a Saviour, trusted in as a Redeemer, and worshipped as a Lord.

I learn from my friends that I am severely criticized, called narrow, unbrotherly, and unreasonable, because I contend for the plainly written word of God, for the deity and atoning merit, saving power, and coming glory of our blessed Lord and Saviour. I am perfectly indifferent to such criticism. I confess, without hesitation, that I am devoid of that "open-mindedness" of which so many are boasting these days. My mind is fixed when it comes to the fact of my own sinfulness, the repentance which the Holy Spirit wrought in me, the atoning merit of Jesus, the regenerating and sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost. When an old forty-niner got to California, dug into the side of the mountain, found the gold and was digging out hundreds, and sometimes thousands, of dollars worth of gold per day, it was useless for any sort of a skeptical geologist to come along and try to prove to him that the formation of the ledges of stone in the mountain proved that there could be no gold there. His mind was not open to such argument; he had found the gold, was digging it, and enriching himself with every stroke of his pick. His mind was closed against all arguments intended to prove to him that there was no gold there. He was digging the rich metal out of the earth, and filling his pockets. His mind was wide open to suggestion of how he could find a richer lode, or some better method of mining, but it was a waste of time on the part of any man to undertake to prove to him that there was no gold there.

* * * *

My mind is closed to the fact that the sun is shining at twelve o'clock on a clear day in August, but is quite open to further information on the subject of astronomy. The Lord Jesus Christ is the greatest fact in history; the one all-comprehensive personality to those who have found him. It is not worth while to undertake to produce any argument to induce us to close our eyes to the fact of his existence, his Godhead, his atoning death and resurrection and his saving power, but we are ready and eager to learn more of him, to discover him more fully, to come into closer and more blessed fellowship. I would modestly suggest to those men who proclaim themselves open-minded truth seekers, to seek Jesus Christ himself. If they should find him they would be happy; they would be content. They will no longer have an open mind with reference to the deity and saving power of Jesus Christ. That matter will be satisfactorily and forever settled. I would remind those who have sought and found Christ, who know him as a personal Saviour, that it will be well for them to be very firm in their faith; that they do not hesitate to give their testimony, and to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. We have a class of people who seem more concerned about their intellectual standing than they do about their saving faith in Christ. Many of them are selling their spiritual birthright for a mere mess of pottage. The time has come when we should not only be followers of our Lord, but true soldiers as well.

Dr. Morrison in Hospital Again.

We regret to announce that Dr. Morrison has had a serious relapse and is again in the hospital for treatment. His asthma seems to be the cause of his great suffering, along with other troubles. He is under the care of splendid physicians who are doing what they can for his comfort and recovery. His sufferings this time have been by far, the greatest he has known since his first illness, ten months ago. We shall appreciate the prayers of all of his friends, that he may be spared for years of service in the Master's kingdom. Will keep the readers of THE HERALD posted as to his progress toward health.

Monthly Sermon.

THE DEVELOPMENT OF CHRISTIAN CHARACTER.

"As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings; so the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him." Deut. 32:11, 12.

The text is taken from a song of Moses. The time of his departure was at hand; he was full of solicitude for his people, and in this song he reminds them of the gracious deliverance, care and guidance of God. The song abounds in figures; the text is one of the most beautiful and suggestive. He is singing of God's dealings with Jacob, who represents Israel. Through these figures he is conveying to the people ideas of God and his method of directing, developing and strengthening character.

We must keep in mind the fact that God's great objective is the development of genuine Christian character. He desires to fix men so they can stand all the tests and never become unfixed. Salvation is by faith; regeneration is a powerful act of the Holy Ghost, but it is an initiation into a new life, an introduction into a new spiritual world. It is the beginning of a succession of processes, building and development into sainthood, into strength and preparation for service, into fitness for heaven.

The wheat must pass under flail in order to separation from the straw and chaff; the gold must go through the fire if you would purify it and bring it into service. It is so in the development of Christian character. Perhaps all of us are ready to say, "Let me die the death of the righteous," but are we willing to pass through the processes that purge out all impurity, that takes away every passion, that brings strength out of weakness, wisdom out of ignorance, patience out of petulance, destroys resentment and pride, and fills us with the spirit of humility and forgiveness.

There are auspicious moments in the lives of men, times when great issues hang on a word, a step, a decision, turning points that seal destiny. This was true of Moses when he chose to "suffer affliction with the people of God, rather than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." When he preferred, with a shepherd's crook, to guide a few sheep in the mountains rather than wield a scepter over a nation. It is true of Jacob, when he wrestled with a strange and mighty Being through the night crying out, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me."

GOSPEL ECHOES AND EXAMPLES.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

It has been well said that: "Experience is one of the chief elements of evangelical power. All jurists tell us that one word of authentic evidence outweighs ten thousand words of professional pleading." The saved soul can say:

"Down from on high the Blessed Dove
Did come into my breast,
To witness God's eternal love—
This is my constant feast."

A TRIUMPH OF GRACE.

I shall in this article set forth a few instances of saving and sanctifying grace as I have seen it in these far away mission fields, and add one or more from the home land.

In our revival meetings in South China a young Chinese Government official came constantly to our meetings and at nearly every altar call he came forward. He was a graduate of one of the mission schools and had secured this very fine position with the provincial government, but he nevertheless was a hungry soul for real salvation. At the altar he seemed to be full of prayer. At last his soul got satisfied as he made a complete surrender and entered into the blessing of full salvation. Then he became greatly burdened for souls and in subsequent meetings he was always in a state of intercession and concern for souls. One night, instead of preaching, we put him up to tell his experience. He took half an hour or more to tell it. A great many students from the schools came out that night to hear him and at the close of his testimony as we gave the invitation upwards of forty of the young men and boy students came out for Christ. At a later meeting of the ministers he was invited to give an address. I was told that he spent considerable time in prayer that day. On one occasion he was sent for on official duty to go out to a village and settle a serious quarrel which had broken out. The people of course expected that like all other officials they would have to make up quite a sum of money to pay him, but they were greatly surprised at his way of settling their quarrels. He told them what they wanted was Jesus Christ, and he opened up a meeting and preached Jesus to them, and over one hundred of them professed religion, and at the close they agreed to build a church, and instead of his taking any of their money he gave them a hundred dollars towards their new church. Some missionaries told me recently that he is proving to be one of the greatest forces for righteousness and revivals that is to be found in that section of China. Praise God the old, old gospel of Full Salvation pays and prospers. What a great privilege to preach a gospel that is the power of God all around the world. This young Government official with his wonderful gift of intercession well illustrates the power of those lines of Adelaide Pollard:

"There is a place where thou canst touch the eyes

Of blinded men to instant perfect sight;
There is a place where thou canst say,
'Arise!'

To dying captive, bound in chains of night;
There is a place where thou canst reach the store

Of hoarded gold and free it for the Lord;
There is a place—upon some distant shore—
Where thou canst send the worker or the Word.

"There is a place where Heaven's resistless power

Responsive moves to thine insistent plea;
There is a place—a silent, trysting hour—
Where God Himself descends and fights for thee.

Where is that blessed place—dost thou ask 'Where?'

O, Soul, it is the secret place of prayer."

AN EXTRAORDINARY CASE.

When in South China I had heard about, and later met, an evangelist and Chinese scholar who has had the most extraordinary experience reminding one of Saul of Tarsus, of John the Divine at Patmos, of John Bunyan in Bedford. This young man came to America and studied at one of the Methodist Universities, majoring in Science, and finally getting his Ph.D. degree. He was such a student and scholar that he became a member of Phi Beta Kappa chapter denoting of course, the highest degrees in scholarship. His studies in Science had brought him to a place where his professors predicted great things of him and they fully expected that upon his return to China he would rank among the ablest of his class—but sad to relate, though becoming eminent in Science he lost his faith, he had no experience of salvation and he felt that if he went back to his church in China that way they would be bitterly disappointed, so he resolved before returning to China he would get a little Theology, and entered Union Theological Seminary of New York (the most modern of them all). While there he had a most wonderful visitation of the Spirit of God—a something almost indefinable and unexplainable. For days and weeks he was in an agony of soul and could find no one to help him in his soul struggles. (Evidently in the average Theological Seminary they mostly forget that students have souls to be saved; about all they do for them is along intellectual lines). At length light broke upon him and he would frequently be found walking the halls saying Hallelujah! Now this was so extraordinary a thing to happen at Union that they began to question the young man's sanity, and the next thing that happened they had him put into one of the State Institutions for the insane. There he did little else than study his Bible. He was detained there for a period of seven months during which he read through his Bible several times. He often refers to this period as his Arabia; when he came out he brought with him notes from his Bible forming a good sized substantial commentary. Ever since he has been a great Bible teacher wherever he goes.

When he came back to China he resolved to give himself to preaching the gospel; he joined one of the M. E. Conferences and he was appointed an evangelist at the monthly salary of $80 a month—the equivalent of $40 in U. S. A. money. He goes through the Conference dressed in the most simple Chinese garb as he doesn't want to parade the fact that he is a Ph.D. His sacrifice of money, position, emolument, etc., is such that some have nicknamed him the crazy Ph.D. But he is doing a great work among the Chinese people and his work goes deep. He wants real repentance and real surrender to God in all his meetings. He keeps busy going from one district to another preaching Christ.

CONFESSION AND TESTIMONY.

Turning from the Foreign field to the homeland, Dr. Daniel Steele, in "Love Enthroned," says in the preface that it was his purpose in those writings to "testify unto the Gospel of the grace of God" and then proceeds to make the following confession:

"It is with much sorrow of heart that the writer confesses one undeniable similarity to the apostle to the Gentiles, in the fact that he now preaches that part of the Gospel which he once destroyed. Before his eyes were anointed he saw not, in the provisions of the atonement, the blessing of the fulness as a sharply defined transition in Christian experience—an instantaneous work of the Spirit by faith only, as taught by Wesley. Embracing the plausible theory of a gradual unfolding of the spiritual life without any sudden uplift by the power of the Spirit, he criticized, without charity that is kind, the professors of this grace, magnifying their imperfections stigmatizing them as fanatics and "pluperfects" and judging them all by an occasional glaring hypocrisy or by the extravagances of some unbalanced mind. Thus he ran into the shallow fallacy of those sinners who feast on the failings of the saints—ex uno disce omnes—who from one learn the character of all."

It was truly a triumphant act of divine grace which transformed Dr. Steele, the Greek Professor from a critic of holiness to one of its greatest examples, exponents and exegetes. I have often thought that Daniel Steele was to the modern Holiness Movement what John Fletcher was to it in Wesley's day.

Strange that it was a Baptist evangelist who led Dr. Steele into holiness. He said: "Rev. Mr. Earle spent four days here a month ago. The spirit of his preaching and his success and his remarks at his farewell on what he styles the 'Rest of Faith' set me thinking and praying and confessing the coldness of my heart. I began to pray for the baptism of the Spirit to enable me to carry on the revival which broke out in the village. God answered my prayer most graciously. I am at times so overwhelmed with the love of God that I cannot stand the pressure on the earthen vessel and have to beg God to stay his hand. The joy is indescribable. I am a free man in Christ Jesus—free indeed—free from the fear of men. I can approach any person anywhere. I am free in my utterance. My mouth is opened, my heart is enlarged towards sinners. I can't help preaching. Everybody is astonished at the complete and wonderful transformation through which I have passed."

Dr. Steele in his article on "The Fruits of Perfect Love," quotes these very appropriate lines which voice the experience of every soul who has died out to sin and self.

"Thy gifts I clamor for no more,
Nor selfishly thy grace require,
An evil heart to vanish o'er
Jesus the Giver, I desire;
After the flesh no longer known
Father, thy only will be done."

HISTORY REPEATING ITSELF.

We are in perilous days truly. It is a popular thing now for preachers as well as people to deny the great cardinal truths and doctrines of Redemption. The situation within Methodism is truly tragic if figures are to be believed. I was reading in Shanghai recently a review of Professor Betts' book, "The Beliefs of 700 Ministers," published by Methodist Book Concern. Twenty denominations are represented. It was shown that the most orthodox church is the Lutheran, while the Methodist church was away down in the scale. Over forty percent of Methodist preachers answering the Questionnaire doubted the Trinity, the Atonement, and the Virgin Birth. This lack of soundness of doctrine and looseness of faith is shown also in the Church statistics showing that Methodism, with nearly ten million adherents, gained only 45,144 during the year. That means less than one convert to each church in Methodism for a whole year.

Truly the days are evil! But in a sense it is only history repeating itself. In the days long ago—about 70 years ago—in the Memoirs of Hewitson we read these words:

"The church of Christ as it is visible in the world, exhibits nowadays much of the aspect worn by the nation of the Jews in the time of our Saviour; there is, with an almost universal profession of Christianity, much Sadducean infidelity and licentiousness, as well as much Pharasaic display and outside godliness. It is only a few who, in hope of being like the Lord at his appearing, are now purifying themselves as he is pure. There has been a great falling away from the faith—from the living, world conquering faith. The nutshell of orthodoxy remains, but the kernel of vital godliness has shrunk almost into a thing of naught. Individuals and local revivals testify that the gift of the Spirit has not been withdrawn from the church; but the gift was made to the church as a whole and has not the church as a whole resisted and grieved and well-nigh quenched the Spirit?"

These things were written many years ago but we see the same conditions today. We are truly in days when the Holy Spirit is grieved and resisted and in many places well nigh quenched by the unbelief, the worldliness and apostasy that is prevailing. Let us remember in these days those remarkable words of Bishop Ryle of Liverpool, when he said,

"Our chief medicine for the spiritual diseases of the Century is a bold and unhesitating enquiry for the old paths, the old doctrine and the faith of the days that are past."

POPULARIZING THE GOSPEL.

Rev. C. W. Ruth.

Y the caption of this article we refer to the effort that is frequently made by ministers to present the gospel in such a pleasing manner as to make it inoffensive and acceptable to all who may hear them; this being done under the plea of tactfulness and prudence. It is urged that if ministers were more judicious and tactful in presenting the truth they would not arouse the opposition and persecutions that frequently attend the preaching of the gospel. But surely Christ taught plainly the utter impossibility of thus avoiding offense, and it is exceedingly doubtful that either he or any of the Apostles ever preached a single sermon that did not give offense to some one, and result in a storm of persecution. We need to be reminded that it is the duty of the gospel minister to "reprove" and "rebuke," as well as to "teach" and "exhort."

The command is, "Cry aloud and spare not: show my people their transgressions, and the house of Jacob their sins." And whoever does this, must expect that some one will object to, and likely resist such preaching. Not only so, but the preaching of the Cross is foolishness to them that believe not; and "the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit because they are foolishness to him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." Hence the more deeply spiritual a man is the more unworldly he becomes, and the less will he be appreciated and understood by the worldly wise. A Spirit-filled man is ever an enigma to the world.

It is urged that times have changed, and that the world has become more enlightened and therefore the offence of the cross has ceased; that where proper judgment and tact are used in the proclamation of the gospel there will not be the opposition and persecution of former days. While it is doubtless true that the world has become more enlightened and times have changed in some respects, the human heart is just the same, and "the carnal mind" is still "enmity against God," as it ever has been. Satan has not yet been converted—nor even reformed. While he may change his tactics at times, he is nevertheless just the same devil he has ever been; nor will light and darkness commingle any more readily than in former periods of the world's history.

Holiness means not simply freedom from sin, but antagonism to sin. For a minister to undertake to preach holiness in such a discreet and tactful manner as to win the endorsement and approval of the "carnally minded," simply means that he has not yet cut his eye-teeth so as to really understand the situation, or else that he is a compromiser, preaching an emasculated, milk-and-water gospel, loving "the praise of men more than the praise of God."

While gospel ministers are exhorted to be "wise as serpents, and harmless as doves," and should not give needless offence, they will nevertheless find that the proclamation of the plain, unvarnished, uncompromising gospel which reproves and uncovers sin in heart and life, will invariably arouse opposition and persecution. It has ever been so, and always will be so, while the emissaries of evil are in our midst. "They hate him that rebuketh in the gate." Amos 5:10. Jesus said, "Because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you." "If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?"

The divine order is, "first pure, then peaceable." While a holy man is at peace with everything that is pure, he is at variance and at war with everything that is impure. "The fear of the Lord is to hate evil"; and there is absolutely no way of popularizing and presenting the gospel so that men and women whose hearts and lives are impure will approve of the same. To court the favor of the ungodly is to dishonor Christ, and prove traitor to the interests of his kingdom. Jesus said, "Think not that I am come to send peace on the earth. I came not to send peace, but a sword." Matt. 10:34.

Hence it may be generally observed that he who has become so "prudent" and "wise" and "tactful" in preaching holiness as not to arouse antagonism and persecution, has never been known to precipitate a revival, and definitely lead any one into the experience. This doubtless explains the failure on the part of many a pastor who has sought, and in many instances, obtained—the experience of entire sanctification at our altars during the annual camp meetings and conventions, but who has failed to lead his congregation into the experience: they have not necessarily meant to be untrue, but under the plea of expediency and prudence they have hesitated to bring on the battle, rather courting the favor of the church "boss" in the person of "Brother Money-bags," or "Sister Dish-rattler," or some high church official, and as a consequence proceeded with so great "prudence" and "caution," that no one suspected them of preaching the despised doctrine of entire sanctification; and of course there was no opposition, and no one obtained the experience. And saddest of all, the beautiful experience of perfect love had soon leaked out of the heart of the pastor himself, and the light that was in him became darkness,—and how great is the darkness!

Such a pastor may still be successful in pulling down "the old meeting house" and building a larger, and more modern, up-to-date church edifice, and raise the church benevolences, and secure some "joiners," but the spiritualities of his church as manifested in the prayer meeting and class meeting, and soul-saving revival scenes, will grow less and less, and he will either settle down to simply making the rounds, and "draw his breath and draw his salary," or, perchance, become known and distinguished as a holiness fighter. He no longer has the unspeakable joy of seeing sinners converted and believers wholly sanctified under his personal ministry.

Nor is this suggestion and temptation to "prudence" and "expediency" confined to the pulpit, but comes just as certainly to the pew. How many sad confessions on the part of the laity, to the loss of this beautiful experience of entire sanctification have we heard, because of a lack of definite testimony. By trying to round off the corners and thus escape the frown and criticism of the pastor, or some one who did not seem to be in sympathy with the doctrine and experience of entire sanctification, they have called it "the higher life," "a deeper work of grace," "this great blessing," and other polite terms that appeared to be less offensive, to find soon that "the song bird" had flown, and that their testimony was not only not offensive, but worst of all, not effective; that while no one was displeased, no one was especially helped and blest, and so had lost their opportunity of helping others into the experience. While there was no sin or break in the outward life, God had seen the spirit of compromise and disloyalty creeping into the heart, the Spirit was grieved, and the glory departed.

We do not mean that any one should deal in personalities, and become pugilistic and abusive, setting in judgment and passing sentence upon any one who might disagree with them:—far from it. But to maintain the experience of entire sanctification there must be unswerving fidelity and heart-loyalty to Jesus, and a willingness to suffer reproach and persecution rather than to grieve the Spirit in the effort to please men. Whether men will smile or frown; whether it be popular or unpopular; whether men approve or disapprove, there must be an humble, uncompromising, straight-forward declaration and confession of the whole truth without fear or favor, regardless of friend or foe, as to what God has wrought in the soul.

Hear it, oh, ye saints of God! "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution;" and any suggestion to "prudence," and to a "tactfulness" that would escape the "offence of the cross," and carry favor with carnally minded professors, and worldlings, must ever be regarded as of Satanic origin. "That which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God." "Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets." Luke 16:15; 6:26.

SCRIPTURAL WITNESSES.

BY J. F. HARVEY.

PART I.

HE Scriptures are very clear in their statements concerning the privilege, the nature and the necessity of Christian testimony. "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord." Jesus said to his disciples, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." (Acts 1:8).

After Pentecost the disciples lost no opportunity to speak about Jesus and his power to save. When commanded to not speak in his name Peter said, "We ought to obey God rather than man," and, "We cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard." Paul declares, "With the heart man believeth

GOD GIVES MAN A WONDERFUL LAMP.

Rev. G. Whitefield Simonson, S. T. D.

PART II.

JOHN BAPTIST FIRST POINTED TO THE LIGHT

THAT wonderful preacher of the wilderness, John Baptist, who united in his own life and mission the message of the prophetic Old Testament and the manifestation of the fulfillment with which the New Testament glows,—when he stepped forth and pointed to the Living Counterpart of that great composite figure, exclaiming: "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," then sin burdened men saw the Light. And pressing to our hearts the Holy Bible, and finding the power of its pictured Redeemer a living reality, thankful souls breathe out joyfully the song:

"Thou, O Christ, art all I want;
More than all in Thee I find."

We know the Savior as the human expression of the Divine Father's love simply because the Holy Bible tells us that true love story. And read where we will, from Genesis to Revelation, the same affectionate purpose of the Almighty God is evident, namely, he means to impart to every penitent sinner his own holy nature of love, and thus make him, indeed, a child of God. The late Bishop Foster has beautifully abbreviated this thought as expressed in the Bible. Says he: "It breathes in the prophecy, thunders in the law, murmurs in the narrative, whispers in the promises, supplicates in the prayers, resounds in the songs, sparkles in the poetry, shines in the types, glows in the imagery, and burns in the spirit of the whole scheme, from its alpha to its omega—its beginning to its end. Holiness. Holiness indeed. Holiness required. Holiness offered. Holiness attainable. Holiness a present duty, a present privilege, a present enjoyment, is the progress and completeness of its wonderful theme. It is the truth glowing all over and voicing all through revelation; singing and shouting in all its history, and biography, and poetry, and prophecy, and precept, and promise, and prayer; the great central truth of the system; the truth to elucidate which the system exists. If God has spoken at all it is to aid men to be holy. The wonder is, that all do not see, that any rise up to question a truth so conspicuous, so glorious, so full of comfort."

The Bible is "a lamp" that reveals man's sinful self, and it very plainly says concerning the natural man, untouched by divine grace: "There is none righteous, no, not one." But that has never been an acceptable statement to self-conceited human nature. So, many modern philosophers and theologians are saying that they believe that everybody is born good; that sin is only an evil development of the individual will; that the Bible cannot be taken to mean what it so clearly says in this matter, because they have discovered this "new truth," namely, that everybody is born righteous, therefore there cannot be any natural or inborn depravity.

But when we stumble upon that very proposition among the mouldy classics of the Chinese, it makes us believe that same old Satan who duped the yellow man thousands of years ago, by vain flattery, has succeeded in deceiving the wise, white man of today by the same blandiloquence. And the strange irony of fact is that this newly-discovered, modern(?) truth(?), which has required the mental energy of our advanced philosophers to find, is put by the Chinese into their primer of learning. So the Chinese children learn among their first lessons:

"Man at birth,
By nature good,
In instinct similar,
In practice diverging."

The Bible is "a lamp" that shows the names of stubborn sinners in high places, but casts kindly shadows about the unfortunate and penitent transgressors in lowly life. It may be startling when we first have our attention directed to the fact that the name of the penitent thief on the cross has never been made known to a curious world, while the despotic David is dragged from his throne and set down under sackcloth and ashes, humiliated before the whole world, because he broke the Tenth and Seventh Commandments. High society may well refuse to be governed by The Book whose Author steps into the palaces of kings, and then publishes broadcast the facts that queen Jezebel is a murderess, fit only to be eaten by the dogs; that queen Herodias was both an adulteress and a murderess, and her daughter, a princess, nothing more than an indecent ballet-dancer; while the poor outcast from society, whose broken heart brought her to Jesus' feet upon which she poured her penitential tears, never had her name divulged to the gossiping world; but she did hear the joy-giving word: "Thy sins are forgiven."

Indeed, this Great Book is wholly unlike the productions of human authors. Men magnify the shortcomings of the poor and lowly; but cover up the wickedness and disgrace of the rich and the high. But God shows himself the author of the Holy Bible by calling sin, sin, wherever it is found, and offering pardon and restoration to all who truly repent of, and turn from, their transgressions; making these divine mercies apply just as fully to the poor and ignorant as to the rich and wise. "For whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, that we, through patience and comfort of the Scriptures, might have hope."

"Thy Word, Almighty God,
Where'er it enters in,
Is sharper than a two-edged sword,
To slay the man of sin.

"Then let our hearts obey
The Gospel's glorious sound;
And all its fruits, from day to day,
Be in us and abound."

GREAT MEN RECOMMEND THE LAMP.

Some great men of the world have paid the highest tribute to the Holy Bible as the Word of God to man. Let us hear some of them.

Dr. Horatius Bonar once said: "I should like to avow solemnly in these days, that after fifty years' study of prophetic subjects I feel a vastly greater certainty, as years roll on, with regard to the Divine authority and verbal inspiration of the Word of God."

John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States, says: "I speak as a man of the world to men of the world; and I say to you, 'Search the Scriptures.' The Bible is the Book of all others to be read at all ages and in all conditions of human life; not to be read once or twice or thrice through, and laid aside, but to be read in small portions of one or two chapters every day, and never to be intermitted unless by some overruling necessity."

Abraham Lincoln, we are told, built up his entire reading upon his early study of the Bible. Gladstone, the great English Commoner, was a reverent student of, and a profound believer in, the Bible. And of Rufus Choate, one of this nation's greatest lawyers and statesmen, it is said: "This Book, so early absorbed and never forgotten, saturated his mind and spirit more than any other, more than all other books combined. It was at his tongue's end, at his fingers' ends—always close at hand until those last languid hours at Halifax, when it solaced his dying meditations. You can hardly find speech, argument, or lecture of his, from first to last, that is not sprinkled and studded with biblical ideas and pictures, and biblical words and phrases. And upon this solid rock of the Scriptures he built a magnificent structure of knowledge and acquirement, to which few men in America have ever attained."

Robert Burns pays a glowing tribute to God and his Word. In his "commonplace book" he writes: "If ever any young man in the vestibule of the world chance to throw his eyes over these pages, let him pay a warm attention to the following observations, as I assure him they are the fruit of a poor devil's dear-bought experience. I have literally, like that great poet, and great gallant, and by consequence great fool, Solomon, turned my eyes to behold madness and folly; nay, I have with all the ardor of a lively, fanciful, and whimsical imagination, shaken hands with their intoxicating friendship. In the first place let my pupil, as he values his own peace, keep up a regular and warm intercourse with the Deity." And he later wrote in a letter to a friend: "I have taken tooth and nail to the Bible. I have got through the five books of Moses, and half way through Joshua. It is really a glorious book."

The Bible is a winsome Book. Some one has said that the Bible is a sad book. But he is not a competent witness. No one who reads the Bible intelligently, constantly, and honestly can entertain such an opinion.

"Several cultivated but skeptical men were engaged in conversation concerning literature, when this question was propounded: 'If you were to be limited to one book for a long period of time, what book would you choose for your companion?' One said Shakespeare; another selected some other great English work, but the third unhesitatingly declared in favor of the Bible, giving as a reason that 'the Bible is no end of a book.' Its resources are inexhaustible. It has something for every condition of man and every state of mind.

"A well known and powerful writer has said that one evidence of the supernatural origin and character of the Bible is seen in the fact that it finds men as no other book does. It not only finds men; it also wins them, and always wins them to something better."

"Some teachers who seem to be zealous for the right admonish us not to use the Bible as a fetish. They charge us not to have too much reverence for the Bible as a fortune book. In one sense the Bible is the best fortune book in the world. Some persons have a habit of opening the Bible with a prayer that they may be guided to the particular verse they need. In perplexity and doubt many Christians have put the Bible to the test in this way. They have accepted the passage on which their eyes first fell when the book was opened at random as a message from God for that occasion. This method of searching the Scriptures is not to be commended. To make it a rule to look for the will of God in this way is not wise. There are better ways of searching the Scriptures. But the Bible is the one Book which may be opened at random without danger of failing to find a message from God, because every passage is a message from him. The word on which the eye falls by accident is God's word. Let this book fall open at random, let the eye fall on any passage, and lo! God hath spoken."

TWO GREAT AMERICANS HOLD UP THE LAMP.

Of the great men of our day who honor the Bible as the Word of God, I bring you the words of but two: Mr. Joseph H. Choate, formerly ambassador of this government to the English court, was the orator at the fiftieth anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. Richard S. Storrs, in Brooklyn, New York.

At the close of a wonderful passage, in which he had mentioned all the literary luminaries of the English language as making the foundation for the great preacher to build upon, he referred to the King James' version of the Bible as "that matchless Book—the only Book for thinkers, readers, scholars, speakers, men, women and children." And then he cried out "If we can have but one book—O save us that!"

The second great American whom I mention is the late Theodore Roosevelt. Says he: "Every thinking man, when he thinks, realizes what a very large number of people tend to forget that the teachings of the Bible are so interwoven and entwined with our whole civic and social life that it would be literally impossible for us to figure to ourselves what that life would be if these teachings were removed. We would lose almost all the standards by which we now judge both public and private morals; all the standards towards which we, with more or less resolutions, strive to raise ourselves. Almost every man who has, by his life-work, added to the sum of human achievement of which the race is proud—almost every such man has based his life-work largely upon the teachings of the Bible."

"I plead, not merely for training of the mind, but for the moral and spiritual training of the home and the Church; the moral and spiritual training that has always been found in, and that has ever accompanied the study of this Book; this Book, which, in almost every civilized tongue, can be described as 'The Book,' with the certainty of all understanding you when you so describe it."

"If we read the Bible aright we read a Book which teaches us to go forth and do the work of the Lord; to do the work of the Lord in the world as we find it; to try to make things better in this world, even if only a little better, because we have lived in it. That kind of work can be done only by the man who is neither a weakling nor a coward, by the man who, in the fullest use of the word, is a true Christian—like Great Heart, Bunyan's hero. We plead for a closer and wider and deeper study of the Bible, so that our people may be in fact as well as in theory 'doers of the word, and not hearers only.'"

Surely then, if what these men say is true, to neglect the Bible is certain to result in the forfeit of life's best blessings. As a matter of fact, the Jewish nation was carried into captivity, when it had allowed the lamp of God's word to burn low. And no declaration of independence will be able to keep free those people who forget the words of him who said: "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

We cannot help but recall the fact that the glorious revivals and wonderful conversions which have been witnessed took place where the Bible was accepted as the word of God, and its promises were proven to be "the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believed."

THE POWER OF THE LAMP IN HUMAN LIFE.

And now let us notice some of the wonderful effects of the Bible message upon mankind.

In 1838, John Hunt, a Wesleyan Methodist preacher, sailed from England for the Fiji Islands, to carry to those cannibals the blessed Bible and its message of salvation. The history of that young minister's life and work among those savages reads more like fiction than facts. The power of the Gospel of God literally transformed those cannibals into Christians, so that they are spoken of as a nation of Wesleyan Christians. The man who succeeded John Hunt as a missionary to those people told a friend of mine, Rev. E. S. Best, (he died at 103 years of age) that he had seen fifty thousand cannibals converted to God by the power of the old Gospel, recorded in the dear old Bible.

But the effect of the Bible message is the same when it takes hold of the civilized and cultured. Indeed, its supernatural character is seen in the fact that it finds the conscience and heart of man wherever it meets him. A young man in New Hampshire, the son of godly parents, was going off one Sunday for a day's pleasure in the woods. A Christian woman on her way to church met him, and with real Christlike tenderness quoted from the old Bible these words: "Rejoice, O young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart cheer thee in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thine heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: but know thou, that for all these things God will bring thee into judgment." That message from God's living Book changed the course of that young man's life, and he became an active, useful Christian.

An Ohio lawyer was found by the message of the Bible, gave his heart to Christ, and then went home and said to his wife: "Wife, I have been converted, let us put up the family altar." His wife told him that there were three lawyers in the parlor waiting to see him, and suggested that they go into the kitchen to have prayers. But instead of doing that, he walked bravely into the parlor where his fellow lawyers were, and immediately confessed Christ before them. That young man was John McLean, who became Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

O, the Bible is a "lamp" indeed! It shows man his great sin and reveals to him a greater Savior. It flashes light along the path of life so that "the wayfaring man, though a fool, need not err therein." By its comforting rays, disappointments and adversity are seen to be only school-teachers sent by a loving Heavenly Father to instruct us not to set our affections upon the things of time, which must soon pass away. Its shining beams of divine promises dispel the clouds which gather around sickness. And death is robbed of its gloom when the light of Christ's words, "I am the resurrection and the life," gleams into the grave. But its most glorious illumination is seen, when reflecting from jasper walls, and gates of pearl, and streets of gold, and robes of white, and crowns of glory, and faces of the redeemed, and the presence of him who is "like unto the Son of Man," the light of God's Holy Word reveals the eternal secret, and ushers in that day without a cloud or evening, that world without sickness, sorrow or sin.

My friend, will you accept this lamp of life? Will you use it to make the paths of time bright with the truths and love of God? Will you turn its intense glow upon your feet—that is, upon the ways that you are going and living? If you will, your heart shall know, the best joy, and the light will take you home.

A man had spent the evening with some friends, reading to them. As he was about to start for his home, two miles away through the woods, his friend handed him a torch of light wood or "pitch pine." The man objected, saying it was too small, for it only weighed about half a pound.

"It will light you home," answered the friend.

"The wind may blow it out," argued the man.

The friend replied: "It will light you home."

Then the man asked: "But if it should rain?"

"It will light you home," the friend insisted.

And contrary to the man's fears, that torch gave an abundance of light all the way home.

So to the person who has objections to the Bible, we can say: "It will light you home, if you take it as a lamp to your feet." And to the one who says that there are things in the Bible that you cannot understand, we will say: "It will light you home, if you will make it the guide of your life." And to the one whose heart is hurt by the mysteries and mazes of this life, we say: "It will light you home, if you will use it for yourself and walk in its brightness."

"There is a lamp whose steady light
Guides the poor traveller in the night:—
'Tis God's own word! Its beaming ray
Can turn a midnight into day.

"There is a storehouse of rich fare,
Supplied with plenty and to spare:—
'Tis God's own Word! There, there is found Directions for the homeward bound.

"There is a tree whose leaves impart
Health to the burdened, contrite heart:—
'Tis God's own word! It cures of sin,
And makes the guilty conscience clean.

"Give me this lamp to light my road;
This storehouse for my daily food;
Give me this chart for life's rough sea;
These healing leaves, this heavenly tree."

REFLECTIONS OF GOD.

REV. PERCY F. ASHER.

IT means something to be a Christian. It makes all the difference, both to the man himself, and to the world in which he lives. That is what our Lord meant when he made the profound statement that Christians are to be "the light of the world" (Matt. 5:14). He is not thinking, of course, of the man who is just religious, and nothing more. As has often been pointed out, there are many people who are 'religious'; but the very last word you would say about them is that they are Christian. We can all recall meeting people who were fanatically sectarian, narrowminded, and narrow-hearted people; and if diligent observance of all ceremonial is the ultimate standard of measurement, then these folk are, like the people of Athens, "in all things very religious." But you can be religious—aye, very religious—without being Christian. Christians are the only sort of people who are pronounced blessed in the beatitudes. The poor in spirit, the meek, the merciful, the pure in heart, they who hunger and thirst after righteousness. No others really have any right to the name. And where these virtues are found in the life of the individual there is immediately a change of climate. The atmosphere is sweetened. There is a new influence abroad making for righteousness. Light breaks through! And the world sees the actual image of God in the godly.

The German Goethe died crying, "Light, more light!" And the cry of Goethe is the voice of humanity crying in the wilderness. For the darkness of evil still exists in many places. When the Divine life was temporarily extinguished on the Cross the historian records that "there was darkness over all the land." Despite the light renewed in the world by the Risen Christ, the darkness still persists in almost every sphere of life. So that the demand for light, far from being superseded, is still most urgent. As the leading character in a recent story says: "There's some universal thing that's wanting. I tell you that plumb down in the crypt and abyss of every man's heart is a hunger, a craving for other food than this earthly rubbish. Dancing and picture shows and life's a jolly good thing . . . and singing music-hall songs and dancing jazz—there's nothing in all that to lift a man to God. Light—light. Man wants light!"

"Ye are the light of the world." For Christian people there can be no evasion of this rigorous teaching with all its implications. There is a present-day scientific doctrine that "light has an absolute velocity." Einstein says that nothing can go faster than light. It is the fastest runner in the universe, and has the most terrific speed. Christianity is light, and has the highest moral velocity that we can conceive of. The unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." (Rom. 10:10).

A witness is one who knows something and is therefore competent to give evidence. In the full sense of the term he is one who both knows and speaks. Personal and verbal testimony are both necessary to produce a scriptural witness; in other words, a holy life and a holy testimony is the divine plan. The work of salvation from sin, wrought in the heart and life by the Holy Spirit, is represented in the Scriptures as having the two-fold result of spiritual fruit and spiritual confession. These two hath God joined together, therefore let man beware how he puts them asunder. "And upon the hem of the high priest's robe thou shalt make pomegranates of blue, and purple, and scarlet, round about the hem thereof: and bells of gold between them round about. A golden bell and a pomegranate, upon the hem of the robe round about." (Ex. 28:33).

Here in symbol is taught the equality of fruit and testimony. There is not to be all fruit and no sound, nor all sound and no fruit. When Aaron went inside the veil to minister before the Lord the people heard the sound of the bells, and they knew that he was alive. "His sound shall be heard when he goeth into the holy place before the Lord, and when he cometh out, that he die not."

If the people did not hear the sound of the bells they knew that the high priest was dead. Likewise, today where the sound of spiritual testimony is not heard there is spiritual death. David truly said:—"The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." (Ps. 115:17). The unregenerate has no testimony, neither has the backslider. "The living, the living, he shall praise thee." (Isa. 38:19).

When God's salvation comes into the heart, and the soul is made alive by the power of the Holy Ghost, the lips begin to praise the Lord. Dear Dr. Godbey characteristically said: "Fallen churches are dumb like graveyards. Pentecostal churches are vocal like graveyards on the resurrection morn, when tombs are bursting and saints leaping into the air with roaring shouts of victory. Dumb religion is the devil's counterfeit. God's religion opens the mouth and keeps it open."

We should always bear in mind that verbal testimony and an exemplary life are both necessary to produce a competent witness. The words of the mouth must be supported and made effective by the rectitude of the life. He who testifies to holiness must back his testimony by a life that will commend itself to his family, his friends and his associates. He must not only ring the bells of testimony, but he must display the fruit unto holiness.

Then, again, a competent witness tells exactly what God has done for him. He thus honors God and gives unto him the praise due unto his name. David said: "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he has done for my soul." (Ps. 66:16). To the man out of whom he had cast a legion of devils Jesus said: "Go home to thy friends and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee. And he departed and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him; and all men did marvel." (Mark 5:19, 20). Here is a splendid illustration of what a scriptural testimony should be.

We should be definite as to what God has done for us. Never shun God's terms or words. God names his own works, and we are to confess his words and not be ashamed of them. If we are ashamed of his words he will be ashamed of us. (Mark 8:38). Definite testimony is the best testimony. We are to ring the bells with no uncertain sound, and also display the pomegranates. Seeing the fruit and hearing the glad, sweet sound of the golden bells arouses hunger in other souls. This is God's plan for the spread of his gospel and the salvation of souls. Some are called to be evangelists, pastors and teachers, but all God's children are called to be witnesses.

Not so many people can understand sermon descriptions, or follow the logic of argument, but all can understand a personal testimony that is backed by the power of a holy life. When Dr. George Peck told his sanctified mother that many noted men did not believe in holiness as an experience in this life, she replied, 'But your old mother has it.' She gave the same answer to all his future arguments. Her godly life and testimony convinced him and led him into the experience of holiness, and he became a great writer and preacher of full salvation.

We notice further that the outward conduct of life can never be a substitute for verbal testimony, for it cannot report the inner work wrought in the heart. God is fully glorified only when with the mouth confession is made of salvation, and when the tongue ascribes that salvation unto him. "He that is our God is the God of salvation."

A scriptural testimony is one that honors God as the author of salvation, the blood of Jesus Christ as the meritorious cause of salvation, and the Holy Spirit as the efficient cause working that salvation in the human heart. All such testimony honors the triune God, and is a blessing to other souls.

Jesus as Savior of the Soul and Healer of the Body.

A. W. ORWIG.

"Himself took our infirmities and bare our sicknesses." Matt. 8:17.

There came to Jesus, while on earth,
Those seeking pardon from all sin,
And such as had diseases, too,
Or having demons vile within.

At Jesus' feet a woman bowed,
And from her sins she sought release;
And while she solely wept, He said:
"Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace."

A leper sought the healing touch
Of the Divine, Almighty One,
And by a word from His blest lips
The cleansing was most quickly done.

To one with palsy stricken down
The blessed Savior kindly said:
"Thy sins be all forgiven thee,"
And, too, "Arise, take up thy bed."

The mother of Saint Peter's wife
With burning fever helpless lay,
But when Christ merely touched her hand,
She rose at once and went her way.

The two blind men who cried aloud
That Jesus might restore their sight
Received answer to their prayer
And joyfully beheld the light.

And to the Lord a man was brought,
With deafness, and with speech not right,
Whom, when the gracious Savior touched,
Both clearly heard and spoke aright.

A woman with a dread disease,
Which lasted twelve long, weary years,
Just touched the garments of the Lord,
And was made whole, with no more fears.

Before the Lord a woman fell,
And of His pow'r she had no doubt,
And for her daughter sought release;
He cast the evil spirit out.

A father asked the Lord to heal
His son, a lunatic, and, too,
The devil often vexed him sore,
But Jesus cured him at first view.

A man with unclean spirits ran
To meet the Lord and sought relief;
The mighty word went forth, "Come out;"
The man was saved from all his grief.

And thus from time to time the Lord
Wrought deeds of mercy, love and pow'r;
He's just the same most gracious One,
And He can save and heal this hour.

"Come unto Me," He sweetly says,
Ye heavy-laden souls, for rest,
Oh, happy they who heed His words;
They'll surely be supremely blest.

Then come to Him, ye needy ones,
With all your sins and every ill;
But come with penitence and faith,
That He His promise may fulfill.

Prayer and Importunity.

I knew a pious man six years ago, who gave me this description of his battle with the powers of the unseen world, and his importunity in prayer. The following is his story:

"On the 27th of March, 1923, having been free from any marital relations for twenty-five years, and through the mercy and providence of God had enjoyed the mastery over every corruption of the flesh for this length of time, I lay down to sleep in the "Y" Hanson Place, Brooklyn, New York. Around four o'clock next morning, half asleep and dreaming, Satan suggested to my subjective mind the most diabolical, vulgar, lascivious leadings that could only originate from the abysmal depths of hell. I awoke with a feeling of fright and abject terror at my physical condition. Springing from the cot, it seemed my room was filled with demons, unseen, but their presence ever apparent. They seemed nearer to me than hands or feet, yelling at the door of my will, 'Satisfy your passions.' Conscience and judgment were shouting, 'No! No!' With physical sufferings, with tears and groans, with prayers and faith in God, I was on the floor, then up again, then crying to God through my Christ Jesus, by the power of the Holy Ghost, until 5:15 A. M., when God came to my assistance and the victory was won. I still believe now, as then, that God permitted the battle of the fourth watch that lonely morning, and that Satan's diabolical, unseen forces fighting against the powers of the heavenlies were determined to capture my guerdon and tarnish my cuirass. 'To God be all the glory.'"

I think it is apparent that God received more glory from this good man's fight that March morning in 1923 for one hour and fifteen minutes, than in twenty years of the man's ordinary Christian life.

REV. HOMER W. HODGE.

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00.

I Have Been Greatly Impressed,

Says Rev. Arthur Sellers, while reading "Perfect Love," by Rev. J. A. Wood, and believe it the best, clearest, most authoritative for the Methodist doctrine, clearing all doubts and arguments against holiness, than any other book I have found. Indeed, I am impressed to have as many of my members have it as possible.

Brother Sellers' statements are not in the least overdrawn. If you haven't a copy of this book, get it and read it. Price, $1.50.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

LEOPOLDVILLE, EST.

Dear Friends and Loved Ones:

I wrote a great many of you while crossing the Atlantic on the S.S. "Lapland" but for the benefit of those to whom neither of us got a letter written, I will say that we had smooth sailing all the way across and delightful weather. On landing in Antwerp, we found that we had a week to stay there before our Congo boat would sail, so of course that suited us very well as there are always so many things to do while there.

Mrs. Hughlett, the wife of our Doctor, caught cold just before we reached Antwerp and being the mother of a young baby we all thought it wise for them to go to Queen's Hotel, which is English speaking and more comfortable, while we went to a smaller and much cheaper one. Mr. Wilson's rooms were all full because of previous arrangements by the Presbyterian party, who crossed on the same boat with us. Mrs. Hughlett was in bed for several days and I was sorry not to be able to do more to help her but our hotels were not so far apart, so I went and did what little I could at times, and did a little shopping for her also.

We arrived in Antwerp on Monday, June 24th, and were due to sail on Tuesday, July 2nd. On Sunday morning before the Tuesday we were to sail our little Clara slipped on the floor of our room and fell against the bed and broke her collar bone. Mr. Davis and Dr. Hughlett had gone to Brussels to attend services at our Mission but this happened before they had arrived there, though they had left Antwerp. I phoned Mr. Wilson to get in touch with them through Dr. Twynham. Then Mr. Wilson, and also Mr. Cleveland of the Presbyterian Mission, came to my hotel and advised me to have a Belgian Doctor, as we, of course, did not know the trouble. I knew she turned very sick at the time and my first suspicion was the collar bone broken. I had the Doctor at once and he bound it up and said he did not think there was a break but that he would make arrangements for us to have an X-ray picture on Monday morning. We did this, taking Dr. Hughlett with us, and the X-ray doctor found that the bone was broken, but Dr. Hughlett saw the plate and both of them said she could come on on Tuesday. She was in bed Sunday all day, but after that she was able to be about even though she suffered quite a bit whenever we had to move her, especially in the taxicabs over those cobble stone streets. Of course she suffered physical pain, but I doubt if her sufferings were much worse than those of her mother. We were so very thankful to our Heavenly Father that the break was not a bad one and that we could come on with our Doctor and the Presbyterian party. It makes a big difference to have such pleasant traveling companions. Clara seemed to improve every day under the watchful care of Doctor Hughlett, and she is using her arm now, though it is not normally strong yet.

We arrived in Matadi Friday morning and after a day of hurrying and scurrying about to get lunches for train trip and our husbands looking after baggage, we boarded the train Friday night and came straight through by traveling all night and all day, arriving here yesterday afternoon at four o'clock. We managed to make beds for our children, Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland have four, but we grown ups had to do our napping in chairs. Of course we were all ready for a good night's rest last night. On arriving here we found that our agents had made reservations for us on a boat leaving tomorrow to go up the river. It may mean leaving a few pieces of our baggage behind, but as this is the dry season we would have to wait two or maybe three weeks before we can get another.

On arriving here we received a letter from Miss Helen Farrier telling us to "grow wings" and come as fast as possible. She has been sick herself and is at Wembo Nyama without a Doctor to help her. She is our nurse there. This boat we are going on goes only to Elabo, the mouth of the Sankuaru River, but we shall probably be able to catch a smaller boat from there to Lusambo. From Lusambo we shall go on to our stations by truck or auto. This boat is a fast one and we hope to get to Elabo in ten days; however, that is some distance from Lusambo.

Afternoon: Just at this juncture I had to go to church, or at least I did go to church and heard a good sermon. We came back and ate dinner and while we were at the dinner table a great tragedy happened. Mrs. Hughlett left her three and a half months' old baby on the bed and he rolled off, catching his head between the rounds in the back of the chair, which she had turned to the bed, and when they returned from dinner he had choked to death. Oh! We are all so sad! He will be buried tomorrow morning, then we are leaving soon on the boat for Wembo Nyama. The dear mother and father are as brave as any you ever saw, but how our hearts go out to them!

I cannot write more now. Pray for their comfort and that each of us may be as ready to go as this precious innocent baby. We had all learned to love him so much.

Here is love for each of you. I meant to make this a longer letter but with these circumstances I know each of you can understand that one can't write.

Our love and prayers go out to each of you. May God richly bless you. Mr. Davis and Clara join me in love to all.

Yours,

Mrs. J. J. Davis.

HALLELUJAH CAMP OF 1929.

The Hallelujah Camp of Oregon, Wis., founded by Rev. C. H. Jack Linn and wife, came to a close Sunday evening, August 25, and was said to be the biggest and best ever held. The interest and attendance increased with every service until hundreds of people heard the gospel in sermon and song and scores knelt at an altar of prayer seeking salvation and healing for soul and body. The commodious tabernacle with its dome shaped platform and lighted cross welcomed its hundreds of worshippers and attendants from more than 50 Wisconsin cities and towns of more than twenty different religious denominations. A beautiful spirit of unity and harmony prevailed throughout the camp and expressions of thanks and gratitude to Rev. and Mrs. Linn were heard on every hand for making this glorious camp possible.

Special Children's Meetings were held each day, as well as special services for Missions, our Holiness schools and Colleges, etc.

Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Redmon, of Indianapolis, Ind., were the evangelists who sounded the gospel with no uncertain sound and their beautiful spirit of humility and love won for them a large place in the hearts of the people.

Miss Imogene Quinn, the well-known Hoosier Evangelist and Song Leader, again had charge of the music and was ably assisted by the Happy Harmony Trio of Youngstown, Ohio, and Mr. Horace Booker, blind pianist and harpist of Washington, Ark.

The Hallelujah Camp Ground, with its beautiful trees and flowers, is said to be the most beautiful in the world, but greater than its natural beauty was the beauty of the presence of the Holy Spirit which seemed to pervade the atmosphere from the first to the last service. Already plans have been formed for a bigger and better camp in 1930. New cottages will be erected and improvements made at once.

A GREAT REVIVAL.

One among the greatest and richest meetings ever held on the grounds where the Louisville, Tenn., Holiness Tabernacle is now located, was conducted by Rev. H. C. Morrison, preaching, and Bro. Kersey as singer. I think it was about thirty years ago. Our holiness folks possessed a tent which had been erected on many previous occasions to the glory of God, and many successful gatherings and battles had been held under its sheltering folds in the surrounding country and, like the worn uniform of a veteran of war, it was full of many chances for leakage in the event of rain. But full of hope for the best, including the weather, we anticipated with pleasure the coming of Bros. Morrison and Kersey. Other evangelists preceding them had extolled their qualifications, and strange to say all those holiness evangelists seemed to think others were greater than themselves.

The writer well remembers the arrival of these two brothers, for no sooner did they land within the house and settle inside, than Bro. Kersey found the piano to try out a new song and with Bro. Morrison standing at his back they rendered "There's power in the blood," etc. The fervor and vigor and joy and gladness shining on their faces made one think of a line of skirmishers thrown out in advance of an army going into battle, and I concluded we had a true report, as far as my humble ability to discern was concerned and my faith was greatly stimulated.

I think it was a ten-days' meeting; it should have been thirty. Nevertheless, the rain came and if memory fails not, it rained nearly every day. With rain, came the mud, but best of all the folks came and they came to such an extent that if it had not rained and (without pikes) fixed the roads the tent would not have sheltered the people. As it was, seats were often changed to avoid the leaks, and at times an umbrella was held over Bro. Morrison as he preached and over Bro. Kersey at the organ, which was covered over except the keys to be played upon. The altar was filled with seekers often down on the wet straw which had to be renewed, as the best to be done. Some nights after closing it was a picture, a scene worth beholding, a long line of lighted vehicles with lanterns, some in wagons and buggies, horseback and foot, a procession wending its way up and down the hilly roadway on the way to the village, but mostly to the homes among the hills and valleys where the country man tilled the soil, and his faithful wife attended the affairs of the home and children. Their hungry hearts were as thirsty for a full gospel as the fields were for the rains, and they came through rain and mud for miles and brought the children. The weather sifted the crowds and doubtless kept away numbers who would have been fair weather encumberers of the truth hunting for the leaves and fishes of a good time.

The tent being about done for, the building of a Tabernacle was in view and it was on that hill afterwards erected and the annual assembling continued through the years. There was a goodly number converted among the sinners attending, and believers came into the blessing of full sanctification and in every way it was a fruitful advancement of the gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord.

How strange that through rain and mud and for miles night and day they came and filled the old and leaky tent, and yet we hear it takes many fishes and loaves of some kind of earthly attraction to get a reasonable crowd into some half million dollar churches, surrounded by multitudes who lack nothing by way of modern facilities. Somehow I have thought that if the crowd that filled that tent, those tired and weary hearts and souls of the women, those horny-handed men who seem to get the least reward in our land for the days they toil, they who in the solitude of their natural surroundings live so near the Creator who sends the rains to water their fields, if with the Spirit-filled evangelist with the fires of Pentecost warming his soul and the faith of that crowd in one of our great churches responding with joy and gladness to the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ Jesus, I imagine that the silk and satin and curiosity of the city would hasten to see what strange things were happening in their church. May that day come when they will all be filled to overflow and their doors wide open, along with their hearts to the Christ who baptizeth with the Holy Ghost and fire purifying their hearts by faith.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Second Pilgrim Holiness Church of 2500 W. Third St., Dayton, Ohio, announces a revival meeting slated for October the 6th through the 20th, under the leadership of the Holy Ghost with Rev. George B. Kulp, of Battle Creek, Mich., as evangelist. This will be Brother Kulp's first meeting in Dayton and the saints of not only this church but the holiness people of Dayton and surrounding villages are looking forward to this meeting with great expectancy.

This church is going forward, and God is blessing. The members love each other and love their pastor, and a few new members are gradually being added. The church has just purchased the building we are now worshipping in and Brother Kulp will dedicate it to our blessed Lord October the 20th in the midst of an All-Day meeting crammed full of good things. Arrangement is being made to entertain out of town visitors who may desire to spend the day with us.

Our Fourth of July All-Day meeting with Rev. C. P. Pridgon, who spoke both morning and afternoon, graphically describing the many interesting places he visited and experiences he had on his recent trip into many countries and nations was greatly enjoyed and appreciated by the splendid audience we had that day. After hearing his remarkable discourse on various points in the Holy Land and other places of Biblical history which he visited, many of us concluded our Bibles would be read with a clearer understanding and with renewed zeal.

Please unite in prayer with our praying band for the Kulp meeting and be with us if convenient for you.

JOHNSON AND WRIGHTS AT BEVERLY, OHIO.

Rev. Andrew Johnson, evangelist, Wilmore, Ky., and Emmett and Cleona Wright, Trinway, Ohio, evangelistic preachers and singers, by the incidental assistance of Rev. Paul Moore, Beacon, N. Y., Aug. 11-25, conducted the initial campaign of the Muskingum Valley Camp Meeting Association in the Beverly-Waterford, Ohio, community, under one of the Asbury College Gospel Extension Tents. There were many seekers for pardon and purity. Dr. Johnson delivered his famous lecture on Evolution Sunday evening, Aug. 18, to from 1000 to 1200 people, and on Saturday and Sunday evenings, 24th and 25th, he preached on The Cause and Cure of the Crime Wave, and The Second Coming of Christ, respectively, to from 1200 to 1500 people. The community was completely captured and won to the cause. All four of the churches were benefited. The work was amply supported by popular subscription, and a permanent organization was effected. What little opposition existed before the meeting vanished, or, in the language of The Assyrian Host, "melted like snow." The community seemed a unit in desiring an annual repetition of the attempt. It seems the general consensus of opinion that this meeting was by far a real, lasting intellectual stimulus and spiritual benefit to the community than a Chataqua would have been, at about one-half the actual cost, lasting longer, and was more far-reaching and specific. The officers for ensuing year assure their friends that every reasonable effort will be made to make and keep this camp sound and orthodox, and that the better-prepared and dependable special workers only will be employed or tolerated. They can conscientiously recommend Dr. Johnson and the Wrights, as also Rev. Moore, should he later enter this specific field from the pastorate.

The Church as a Preacher Sees It

The above is the title of a booklet written by Rev. James H. Hervey, D.D., of Springfield, Mo. He treats the subject from an unbiased standpoint; and suggest the remedy for its defects. It closes with a Mother's Day sermon, which is worth the price of the booklet. Any one interested in this subject and desires a copy of the booklet of 32 pages, may send 20 cents to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., or James W. Hervey, 1610 N. (Continued from page 1)

This was true of the persecutor Saul, when a great light shone about him, and he must make his choice to continue his persecution, or to surrender himself and become a chosen vessel of the Lord. Abraham reached a climax in his history when he built his altar, bound Isaac, laid him upon it and lifted the sacrificial knife to take the life of him who was dearest of all things, and heard the voice of God staying his hand, and stood forth crowned forever as the "father of the faithful."

In some way these times come to all of us, times of decision, times of consecration, times when ladders lead up to heaven; when our dearest Isaacs must be bound and laid upon the altar of sacrifice, times when men come to the forks of the road and turn their feet into the paths of holiness and walk in the light, or into the paths of selfishness and grope in darkness.

There is no such thing as a development of strong, holy character without sore trial, bitter testing, severe temptation and positive decision. Where there are mountains there must be valleys. If we would climb into the mountains of transfiguration we must pass through the dark valleys of humiliation, surrender, death to self, and consecration to our Lord. If we would stand upon the mountain peaks of spiritual victory we must be willing, before such elevation, to descend deep into the valley of death to self, of a crucifixion which eliminates from our nature all carnal love, and brings into our hearts by the power of the Holy Spirit, the love of God.

This way of death to self, to the incoming of the divine nature, at times, would seem impossible, but we must not turn back. Heaven is our great objective; eternity lies out before us. We are transacting business for an unending existence. We can afford to pay a great price for there is a great prize. Sad to say, many turn back and die in the valley and shadows, but those who press forward, as they approach the summits of grace and love, may enter clouds, may become discouraged, may feel that they have reached the highest heights possible to the human, but there are peaks that shoot into the sunlight far above the clouds. Shall we climb them upon our knees? What brightness, what warmth, what purity of atmosphere, what select company! The multitudes have stopped far below; the world with its clamor and falsehood, pomp and tinsel, seems so far away and heaven so very near.

There are high peaks along the mountain range of religious experience, and God invites us there. Not only so, but in infinite love he comes to us with those influences and tests that would break our souls loose from the world and its littleness, and lift us upon the wings of his power into the high altitudes of faith and life and light.

This is the thought in the text: The eagle delights to build its nest amid the rugged crags of the highest mountain; the nest is made of sticks and twigs. When the eaglets have grown to age and strength sufficient to fly the mother bird insists that they shall leave their nest, and the crag upon which they have perched and plunge out into the air. The young birds hesitate; their wings have not been tested, and the mother bird tears away the sticks and twigs of which the nest is constructed; she determines to give her young ones comfort and repose no longer; they must learn to fly, seek the prey, and support themselves. If the mother bird permitted her young to remain too long in its nest, the muscles of the wings might eventually become so hardened that they never could be used for flight; so she refuses longer to supply her young with food, and she stirreth up her nest, drives them out of their comfort, gives them rest no longer, because continued rest would disqualify them for the high delights of flight. She destroys their place of abode in order that they may seek something far better. When the young bird is forced off the edge of the precipice, and flutters about with its wings unaccustomed to flight, the mother bird will not permit it to fall, but finally diving beneath she catches her young upon her wings and bears it to a place of safety. It is thus that what may seem cruel to the young bird, is really the means of instruction and help until directly it spreads its wings in graceful strength and sails away into the blue vault of heaven.

This is the prophet's figure of God's method with the souls of men. There is an infancy in religious experience; a time when God shelters with great care the little ones in his kingdom; he lets them lie in the nest of comfort and ease while he protects them from the encroachments of the enemy. But there comes a time when they must arouse themselves; they must be up and out and doing something for Christ and humanity; a time for great faith and zealous action. Not infrequently God is compelled in the development of Christian character, to break up the nest in which his children are disposed to rest, to find comfort and contentment. There are countless Christians who can point to experiences that tried their souls; losses that they cannot explain, sorrows that, for the time, tempted them to believe that God cared nothing for their souls; but later on they have come to realize that God was breaking up their nest in order to lead them on to a higher and better state of grace; to bring them into a stronger faith, a deeper experience of divine love, and a service far more active and fruitful than they had once believed possible.

God in mercy plucks away the thing to which we cling in order that our aching hearts may seek better things, and our empty hands may lay hold on eternal things. In the progress of our souls upward, he makes our stopping places so uncomfortable that we are bound to move out and on. At times he appears to leave us alone to struggle; our strength gives way, we sink down, it appears that our all is lost; our sufferings are unbearable, the wings of our faith seem to be exhausted, the storm beats upon us, and then it is that he comes beneath us and bears us aloft and brings us into a profound sense of our utter dependence upon him, and that his love and presence mean infinitely more to us than the things to which we once clung; our loss has been our gain.

I am not coming to you in this exhortation with the lullaby words of a mother to her infant, but with the shout of a captain to his soldiers in battle. I would be almost harsh in voice and startling in statement. I would warn you to expect that if God loves you he will pluck away the decaying sticks and twigs on which you rest, that you get out and go up to higher peaks. Satisfied, contented! No, no, out, up, on and on to higher heights until your faith in God shall be like the wings of the eagle in the air. What room, what light, what purity; the world is far below; it sinks away, its fields become garden spots, its great rivers are but threads, its mountains mole-hills, its noise is hushed; it is like a distant star; it is out of sight. There is music, there is strange fragrance in the air; there is great buoyancy that bears us on; there is a new light, there is a city; it flashes in gold and sparkles in diamonds. Its walls are jasper; it is the New Jerusalem.

THE SEPARATED LIFE.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

PAUL, in his second letter to the Corinthians, 6th chapter and 17th verse, exhorts the Christians to a separated life, by saying: "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you. And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

In the preceding verses the apostle shows to the early Christians that light and darkness, Christ and Belial, have no fellowship with each other; neither can the follower of Jesus associate with, and participate in, the pastimes and amusements of the ungodly, and keep in touch with the God of infinite holiness.

The Saviour taught us that it was impossible to serve two masters; impossible to have the same affection for two different objects; we would either hate the one and love the other, or love the one and hate the other, thus proving conclusively that God and mammon could not occupy a place in our hearts at the same time. There is a law in physics that two objects cannot occupy the same place at the same time, which is equally true in the spiritual realm.

To be separate from the world, we must bid farewell to its foibles, pleasures and amusements, concentrating our affections and desires on the things that pertain to the Kingdom of God. James tells us that a "double-minded man is unstable in all of his ways." It takes concentration on anything, secular or religious, to make a success of it, but how much more do things eternal require our undivided affection, when we have the world, the flesh, and the devil to contend with. All who have gone before us who have made good in the Christian race, did so by practicing the motto of St. Paul, when he declared, "This one thing I do." Some one has said that "We are not here to play, or dream, or drift; we have hard work to do, and loads to lift; we dare not shun the struggle, but face it as God's gift."

Then, there is power in the separated life. Jesus taught this in his life when here on earth by often drawing aside and closing himself in with the Father. What strength came to him through those all-night times of communion with the Father! How he would go out to meet the surging multitudes undergirded with supernatural strength, and how his words would fall with dynamic power upon the hearts of the eager throngs as they pressed upon him.

There is a translation of the first verse of the 91st Psalm which is very beautiful and gives a practical lesson of separation. It reads: "He that goeth aside to sit quietly in the secret place of the Most High, will find Him coming over so close that this man shall be lodged under the very shadow of the Almighty." This is but another way of saying, "Draw nigh to the Lord, and he will draw nigh to you." The Lord always meets us more than half way, when he sees we are making our way toward him.

The separated life is the easy way to live the Christian life. Let it be understood in three worlds that you are determined not to "know anything but Jesus Christ and him crucified," and the temptations that come to a half-way Christian would gradually leave you. Of course, you will always have the tempter to contend with, but you have every advantage when your heart and mind are set for the prize of your high calling of God in Christ Jesus. And, always after the battle of temptation will come the ministering angels.

There is a beautiful thought in the following lines, with which I shall close this meditation.

"Come ye apart from all the world holds dear,
For converse which the world has never known,
Alone with Me, and with My Father here,
With Me and with my Father not alone.
Come, tell Me all that ye have said and done,
Your victories and failures, hopes and fears,
I know how hardly souls are wooed and won:
My choicest wreaths are always wet with tears.
Then fresh from converse with your Lord return,
And work till daylight softens into eve:
The brief hours are not lost in which ye learn
More of your Master and His rest in heaven."

supremacy of Christianity is assuredly unchallenged. We will never outgrow it, or surpass it, or find something better. For Christ, the founder of Christianity, is the supreme revelation of God.

As we ponder the eternal truths contained in this immortal proclamation of Christ, we discover that the primary function of the individual Christian is to reveal God to man. The revelation begun by Jesus Christ must be continued by his followers. As the sun of society Christians must transcend it, and cause men and women to look on high. This light is not to be supplied by intellectual brilliance. It is to be the light of simple goodness, by which God and true life are revealed.

Of course, this designation alters the whole perspective of life. It is to a position of prominence that the Christian is hereby promoted, and in the light of that holy vocation he can never be the same again. When men and women take the vow of loyalty to Christ and his kingdom it is as if they said to the world by that very act, "Look on us." Thereby they automatically become objects of the public searchlight. In the peasant home from which Jesus came the dimly-lighted room would only seem homelike when the lamp was brought in, and placed on the lamp-stand. Another memory of his boyhood would be that of the village which had been his home so long perched high on the hill-side, a landmark in all weathers, by which men steered their course over the hills. Like the lamp in the cottage that never quite goes out the night through, like the town on the crest of the hill which serves as a guide to travellers at all seasons of the year, we are to let our light shine out so that men may find it less difficult to find God, themselves, and each other, because they have crossed our path.

This light which is to shine to the glory of God is to come from within. We cannot borrow from others when the lamp of spiritual experience burns low, or when the flames of joyous enthusiasm are extinguished through spiritual sloth or inactivity. Christianity teaches a personal God who is represented in the person of Christ. Christianity is a personal religion. Therefore the knowledge which spells salvation comes only when we know God and experience his presence in our lives. It is the inner light of that sacred presence which must radiate from us and bathe the world in the sunlight of God's love. It must be by the life, and not by the lip, that we make known to the world that we "live, and move, and have our being" in the kingdom ruled over by God.

Our Lord was not a self-deluding optimist so he visualized at the outset the probable temptations which would beset the Christian. He seems to have had a presentment of the course of conduct that some nominal Christian people would follow. The peril is that men will take that vital light and "put it under a bushel." Just what did Christ mean to suggest? What are the perils?

Selfishness is certainly a pronounced enemy of true Christian living and is implied directly in the figure used by Christ. The candle was to give light to "all that are in the house": likewise the Christian life must flourish by its contacts with others. Yet how frequently, and for utterly selfish purposes, the Christian religion is cabined, and confined, and curtailed for the use of the individual. It is easy for Christians to concentrate their attention on what they get, instead of thinking of what they should give. We should not think of what it brings us, but what it brings others. We do well to appropriate the consolations of Christianity, but let us never overlook its challenge. The light of Christ in our life may be obscured through selfish living, especially, if we regard our religion as a lemon, to be squeezed for all we can get out of it.

Then, too, we must not forget that the bushel was the symbol of that commerce which existed in the day of our Lord. And it is relatively easy even today for the teachings of Christ to be compromised, and diluted, because men affirm that "religion and business do not mix." Many a man has made the Golden Rule an object of admiration instead of the basis of action. And in the realm of business it is not hard to find men who have paid no heed to the Christ tapping on their office door.

This, then, is the conclusion of the whole matter. That our lives must be Christ-inspired and Christ-controlled. Then will men see the goodness of our works and glorify our Father who is in heaven. As the Westminster Catechism has it, "Man's chief end is to glorify God and enjoy him forever." There is to be no theatrical display nor self-advertisement, but a frank, courageous Christian life lived in the open. Like the lamp shining for shining's sake. Not the light of ourselves, but the light entrusted to us, which shines in those words and deeds which awaken moral admiration, and thus lead men to glorify the Unseen transcendent, he whose character is revealed through the works of his sons, spirits like him. Thus shall we kindle the imagination of men and lead them to an appreciation of the sublime goodness of God, our Father.

"Ye are the light of the world."

"If the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness."

"If we say that we have fellowship with God, and walk in the darkness, we lie, and do not the truth."

"But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

REV. C. M. GRIFFETH.

HIS LARGER PURPOSE.

God has a wonderful plan—divinely inspired—for your life.

It is a plan that is complete, beautiful, practical and successful. A plan, which, if we willingly hand ourselves over to him, he will work out for us, notwithstanding all the agencies and powers and devils who would try to thwart it.

And why not? Would God provide a perfect salvation for a man and then be utterly indifferent as to what became of that man's life? Would God save a man's soul from sin and not have a provision to save his life from a purposeless existence?

Did not God have a plan for Joseph's life? His jealous brothers in an effort to thwart God's plan might cast him, if they will, into the pit, or later sell him to the Ishmaelites. It will be hard indeed on Joseph, but it will only hasten the working out of God's plan.

And Joseph in one of the sunset days of his life, looking back across the years to that early morning hour when the sun seemed to rise so slowly behind a drapery of portentous clouds aflame in threatening scarlet as he, a slave boy, was being hurried away from home and homeland to distant Egypt, he saw in it all that God has a larger purpose for his life than he could ever have had for himself if he had remained unmolested in fair Canaan.

"But," you say, "that was for Joseph. We cannot all be Josephs."

But is God unmindful of you just because you may occupy a very small corner in life? Would God who notices even the fall of a sparrow have no interest, no purpose, no beautiful plan for lives that are limited? Is not a tiny violet, growing in an out-of-the-way place along the edge of a field as perfect and as beautiful flower and as much the handiwork of God as some highly prized lily or cultivated rose?

In that very calling in which you are engaged, God has a plan for your life, which if faithfully followed by a continuous yielding to Divine control, God will work out for you that divine aspiration for your life—"His larger purpose."

Hungers of The Heart.

BY H. B. HARDY.

This volume contains inspiring chapters on The Hunger for God, Happiness, Knowledge, Social Life, Love and Immortality. The author deals with the different phases of heart hunger in a most helpful way and makes it very plain that real satisfaction for every hunger is found in Christ. Don't fail to get a copy and feed your soul on these rich truths. The book was published at $1.00. We have a limited number of copies that we are closing out at 60c each, postpaid. Messages of Christian Comfort for the Sick.

Helpful Verses for Children, Youth and Grown Ups. Price 30c a dozen, or four dozen for $1.00.

A message of sympathy, tenderly expressed, comforting in character, cheerful in spirit, and promptly delivered, is always a tonic to the sick. "I was sick and ye visited Me." A personal visit cannot always be promptly made, but a "Message of Comfort" can be mailed at once—the quicker the better. An assorted supply of these cards, on hand for immediate use, and used as opportunity offers, will make you a blessing in a time of need.

Grace Before Meals.

The same grace repeated time after time often becomes so commonplace and mechanical that we are prone to forget its real meaning. "Grace Before Meals," is not the product of one mind, but the assembled expressions of many devout servants of God. There is an appropriate grace for every day in the year. This little book has been used very effectively in teaching the different members of the family to say grace. It contains 167 pages, is neatly printed and bound. Price 50c.

PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING COMPANY,

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am going to ask if you will let me join your circle once more, as you were so kind to print my other letters. I was very sorry to learn of Dr. Morrison's recent illness. Hope and pray he will be restored to his former health so he can continue in the great work which he enjoys so well. Thank God we still have people who are not ashamed of their colors, and to let the world know they belong to the Master. Life is too short to let the pleasures of the world draw us away from the Master. It is very short compared to eternity, if we should have to spend it in torment and miss the happiness, if we serve Satan. I am so thankful I ever found The Herald and I'll tell you how I came to know about it. It was seven years in June. I found two religious papers lying in the M. E. Church of which I was a member, and I chose The Herald as I believed it was the deepest, and I, as well as others, have learned many things where otherwise I would have missed. We must be on our guard nowadays of what we read. There are many false teachers everywhere, and I know The Herald has done its duty, and will to the end, to warn us. I always enjoy reading the letters from each cousin, and especially when they say they are saved. I realize I cannot write letters that are as interesting as other cousins do, so you will have to excuse me. I enjoy writing. I live on a farm and like it just fine. We are having a very warm and dry period at present. I wish some one could give me the name and address of a song book with the hymn, "Tell Mother I'll Be There." I have not been able to find it. Or, if some one cares to send me the hymn direct to me. I wish the cousins that are sanctified would write to me. Please pray for me that I may receive the blessing.

Mary Frenz.
Rt. 2, Wrightsville, Pa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I live on a farm about one and one-half miles southwest of Patoka. I am seventeen years of age. I have dark brown hair and brown eyes and weigh 112½ pounds. I go to the Pentecostal Church at Patoka. I like to go to a place where I can worship the Lord in spirit and in truth. I haven't been in the way of serving the Lord very long. I was baptized the 8th of December, received the Holy Ghost on New Year's Eve. I have been doing the best I can to be a soldier for the Lord.

Lola V. Goff.
Patoka, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just finished reading page ten and I sure love to because I hear of so many other Christian boys and girls from other states. I am a Christian, was baptized Dec. 8, 1928. I go to Sunday school and church and sure would hate to miss. I have received many blessings, but the one I want most has not come to me yet, the baptism with the Holy Ghost. I would like to hear from some of the boys and girls and I will try and answer every letter I receive. I was fifteen years old Feb. 1. I have brown, wavy hair, brown eyes and dark complexion. I am five feet, seven inches tall and weigh 124½ pounds. I am a freshman. I have four brothers; two of them are older and two of them younger than I. This is my first time of writing and I would like to have it published.

Mary Edith Gray.
Box 84, Patoka, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Can you make room for another Virginia boy to join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first time of writing to The Herald, and I hope to see it in print. I go to Sunday school and meeting when fit. We have a very fine pastor; his name is Arthur William Groscup. Well, I guess I just as well describe myself to the cousins. I have light hair and I am five feet, four inches tall and weigh 135 pounds. My birthday is on 30th of May. I will be sixteen. My step-father takes The Pentecostal Herald and I like its reading, especially page ten. My middle name starts with L and ends with E, and has three letters. Can you guess it? If you can and wish to write to me, I will tell you more about myself in the next letter. Well I guess I just as well ring off as I am taking up too much space. I hope Mr. W. B. is deer hunting when my letter arrives. May God be with us all till we meet on the other shore.

Rt. 1, Box 72, Elkton, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I like to read page ten. I am five feet, six inches tall. My birthday is May 5. Who has my birthday? I am twelve years old. This is my second letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. The other letter was not printed. Darleen Hamshire, I guess your first name to be Ruth. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with S and ends with S. It has five letters in it. I will try to answer all letters received.

George S. Hodges.
Rt. 1, Box 25, Osborne, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twenty years of age, five feet, two inches and a half tall, have dark brown hair (not bobbed) and dark brown eyes. Who has my birthday, March 27? My mother takes The Herald and I sure do enjoy reading it, especially page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope Mr. W. B. is fishing when this arrives. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E, and has six letters in it. The one that guesses correctly, I will write to them. Guess I had better be going and leave room for some one else, but please print this letter. If I see it in your columns will write again soon. Will close with love to the cousins and Aunt Bettie.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Greetings in the precious name of Jesus my Savior, Sanctifier, Healer, but best of all my keeper. I'm so glad this evening for a full and free salvation and for a God who is just the same today as he was in days of old. I am a South Dakota girl and do not see many letters from the State of Sunshine in print. I was saved when I was nearly ten years old and the Lord sanctified me last winter. Oh, how I do praise God for keeping me. Dear young people, the enemy is still busy and how he does try to get us on a sidetrack, but I am glad that we can always fall on our knees and he answers prayers. I am going to a little Bible and High School. The name of our school is Sunny Side Bible School. I am a Sophomore and I also study the Bible. I am taking Pentateuch this year and the Lord surely blesses us in this study. I am eighteen years old and my birthday is September 2. Have I a twin? If so, be sure to write to me and I will send you a picture of myself. My parents are Christians and I am so glad for a Christian home. We get The Pentecostal Herald in our school and I always like to pick up the paper and read page ten. I especially like to read those letters that tell us all about how they were saved and how God is keeping them. Dear young people I truly pays to serve Jesus. There is nothing like salvation. I'm glad that I am not of the world, but that my desire is for Jesus Christ. I have no desire for movies, dances, parties, powder, paint, short dresses and many more of the devil's trash. I do not believe that a true Christian has any desire for these things. I have nothing to brag about but I have a thankful heart that God took the desire away and that I am bound for that beautiful city my Lord has prepared for his own. O, it will be wonderful to be with Jesus. Stay true to Christ dear cousins, those of you who have found him, but those of you who have not will you keep on praying till Jesus will save you? Hold on in prayer. He is able to save and also to keep. If you will confess your sins he is able and willing to forgive them. Dear cousins, do not stop when you get saved, but get your back tracks straightened up and then keep on praying and work for Jesus. While I was teaching my Sunday school class last Sunday I was asking my scholars what we feed a baby after it was born? They answered "Milk." I then asked them what to feed the babies in Christ. They said, "The Bread of life, to testify and pray." I believe this is true in our lives when we were saved these three things kept us on fire.

I also teach a Junior class which I enjoy greatly, but my heart gets burdened for the dear children. Pray for me that I may teach those dear children the way to Heaven, that I need not be responsible for their souls.

We are now praying for a revival here and help us to hold on until we can reach the throne. We often go out singing for the sick, and pray for us that we may do it more and that the Lord may help us to spread the Gospel that many souls get saved.

My letter is long and I must ring off. But will you please, those of you who have an experience, write to me. I want to correspond with those who are also going on this strait and narrow way that leads to glory. I will answer all letters received. This is my first letter and I hope to see it in print.

Your cousin,
Rosa Maria Engbrecht.
Box 356, Freeman, S. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Daddy takes The Herald and I have been reading the letters on page ten and I think they are so nice. I read after supper. I go to school and I like my teacher and she likes me. I am eleven years old. I have two brothers and one sister, and she is thirteen months old. I love mother and daddy. I have twelve hens and they are laying. I set a hen today. I live in town but we have a nice place to have little chicks. Well I hope I will see this in The Herald.

Charlie Stillwell
Phenix City, Ala. Rt. 1.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Hello cousins! May I join your happy band? I take The Herald and enjoy every page of it, including page ten. I think it is so interesting to read letters from almost every state in the Union. Washington boys and girls should get busy, we have a state that is worth representing. I am a teacher in the grade school and enjoy my work immensely. We teachers, I feel, have a great responsibility and privilege in training the youth. I am a Christian and find a great joy and peace in serving Christ. It makes my heart rejoice as I read the letters of the cousins and find that so many are Christians. May the Lord bless everyone of you. It certainly pays to serve Jesus. The way is not always smooth, but I believe that we grow as we become victor over the hard temptations; and we know that Christ does not let temptations cross our paths which are harder than we can bear. Is not that a wonderful promise that Christ has given us? Cousins, are we letting the Lord have his way in every detail of our lives? How he needs consecrated lives to labor for him. I would love to hear from any who care to write. I am twenty-one years old. With love to all.

Mildred Beale.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother takes The Herald, and I like to read page ten. My mother is in the last stages of T. B., and has been sick for a long time. She wrote three letters to the Boys and Girls' Page. She is Mrs. J. W. Paynter, and wants all Christians to pray for her healing. She is not able to write. I live on a small farm. We raise chickens. Geneva Cobb, why didn't you answer my card? Catherine Anders, I guess your first name to be Mary. If I am right don't forget your promise. Allen Reid, I guess your first name to be Cora, so if I am right don't forget your promise either. I go to church and Sunday school all I can. Our pastor is Rev. C. E. Whitworth. We all like him fine. I went to church yesterday. We sure did hear a good sermon. I have light hair, gray eyes and fair complexion. I was fourteen years old September 7. I would like to hear from any of the cousins who care to write to me. I have one broth-

Rap! Rap! Rap! I just wonder if you would let an Arkansas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am four feet, ten and one-half inches tall, brown eyes, brown hair, medium complexion, and am thirteen years of age. Father takes The Herald. I sure enjoy reading page ten and also the good sermons. I am a member of the Methodist Church. We don't have church very often, but I go every time I can. Catherine Anders, I guess your first name to be Mary. Don't forget your promise. Arrie B. Reeves, I guess your middle name to be Belle. C. Allen Reid, I guess your first name to be Cora. E. Laura Smith, I guess your first name to be Estell. If I guess right please keep your promises. Whoever can guess my middle name I will write a letter. It begins with E and ends with L. Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it. I am five feet, seven inches tall and weigh one hundred and seventeen pounds. I have brown hair and eyes and dark complexion. I am fourteen years old and in High School. I am very proud of our school; there are about 400 pupils. I get awfully tired of going nine months in the year. I have two brothers, one sister, and a sister-in-law. Elsie Meads, I guess your name to be May. Mary Grinstead and Vera Cobb, I guess your names to be Eliazabeth. That is my middle name therefore it shouldn't be hard to guess. Please write to me. I will answer any letter I get. I am a Christian. I go to Sunday school, League and Church every Sunday. I like my teacher and pastor. We are having a revival at our church now. I am praying that there may be many souls saved. I have written to you once but I suppose Mr. W. B. got it as it was not in print. I hope this escapes him.

FALLEN ASLEEP

GREAT LOVER OF THE HERALD GONE HOME.

On August 3rd at 7:40 P. M. in the T. B. Hospital at Washington, D. C., one of the most beautiful Christian characters that we have been privileged to know went home to be with Jesus. Mrs. Lillian Garret, a devoted follower of the meek and lowly Nazarene, a great sufferer and withal a happy, shining example of what grace can do, slipped away to the land where suffering never comes. There are some lives that can never end, and of such was Sister Garret. As her pastor, I frequently visited her in her days of pain and always carried away far more than that which I brought. Many seasons of refreshing like unto a real camp meeting came in these hours of ministry that have been of untold value to the writer. Often when the pain was so severe that it seemed that she could scarcely pass through it, she would lift her thin hands to heaven and testify of the grace that saved and sanctified and kept under such conditions. There went out from that sick room a holy influence that told far more for the kingdom of God than many whose lives are not bound by sickness. Sister Garret was an ardent lover of The Pentecostal Herald which came to her room every week until shortly before her departure. She found much comfort in its pages and often would have passages marked and kept for special use. One poem, written by another sufferer, and printed in The Herald had much of comfort, it was—

"Father, Take My Hand."

"I am so tired Father; all the way,
The path has grown more difficult and steep,
I grope and stumble as the shadows creep
Closer about me and the light of day
Fades into darkness over all the land;
Quick tears brim my eyes, I cannot see
Thy face in tender skies bent over me.

"I am so helpless, Father, take my hand,
Clinging to thee I will not fear the night,
Though it be long and the way hard.
With no bright glimpse of thy golden starred
Fair Heavens. Though I see no light,
Father, I will be brave and bear the pain
Of this long night of sorrow till again
Shall dawn the morning in this soul of mine.

"Yea, even though the weary night shall last Through all my earthly years, yet will I keep My hand in thine, nor murmur, Lord, nor weep,
If thou wilt in the darkness hold me fast,
Until my journey through the shadow land
Is over, and I shall behold the light
Of that fair city where there is no night,
And enter there still holding thy dear hand."

And so after the weary journey had been run our sister dropped the burdens of sickness and suffering and entered where "No burdens are allowed to pass through." By her side continually stood her sister, Anna Hyatt, a trained nurse, who made, at a real sacrifice of herself, the days of sickness easier to be borne and who by ministry in prayer often kept back the hand of death.

Sister Garret's desire was to educate her children in Asbury, but when her husband died and she was left to carry the burden alone, she was not able to do so, but ever prayed for the school that was dear to her heart. But one of these children remain, Edwin M. Garret, of Washington, D. C., and he was constantly upon his mother's heart that he might be a great soul winner. There would be no greater joy for her. There are two sisters remaining: Miss Anna Hyatt, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. W. W. Taylor, Herndon, Va. Sister Garret was born Nov. 21, 1881, died August 3, 1929. Services conducted by Rev. Hildebrand, former pastor.

Rev. J. H. Parker,

HOPKINS.

Percy Barney Hopkins passed to his eternal home, August 16, 1929, at the home of his mother, Mrs. Alice Hopkins, Marion, La. He graduated from Tulane University in 1924, with highest honors, majoring in Business Administration. He became connected with Union Indemnity Co., New Orleans, La., soon after his graduation and had risen to a position of high esteem at the time of his death, being considered one of the best underwriters in the South. His early success in life was due to his own untiring efforts, keen intelligence, congenial disposition and unusual insight into human nature. The entire period of his illness was marked with patience and bravery, always uncomplaining and considerate of others. While his family and nearest relatives gathered around him, weeping bitterly, he showed no emotion, or fear, but calmly looked into their faces with eyes full of love and gratitude. One of his last acts was to pat his mother's hand and say "Good Mama." He left her with the statement that he was ready to go. He was laid to rest beside his father, James L. Hopkins, who passed to his reward three years ago, the sincere impressive funeral service being conducted by Rev. Frank P. Moss, pastor of the Methodist Church.

His cousin,
Norma L. Stewart.

STEWART.

D. S. Stewart was born in Calhoun Co., Ala., January 31, 1851. At the age of twelve he came to Texas with his father's family and settled in the eastern part of the state. He with his family moved to Hamilton county in 1882 and later to Erath county, from whence he moved to Ranger, one year before his death, July 28. He married Belinda L. Anderson, Sept. 21, 1876. To this union were born four children. Two of the children, H. L. Stewart, and Vila Stewart Scott, preceded him in death. The other two, Mrs. G. O. Strong, and T. W. Stewart live in Ranger. He is also survived by thirteen grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren. Rev. T. Earl Scott, a grandson, was reared by this family from infancy.

Brother Stewart was converted and joined the church at the age of 22. He was an official of the church from time to time, and superintendent of the Sunday school where he lived for a great while and was always found faithful to every call of the Lord and the church. He leaves to his children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren a noble heritage. During his many months of illness he remained patient, kind, and trustful. His conversation was of Heaven. His greatest joy was in the reading of the scripture and in communion with God. He came to die unafraid because his hand was in the hand of the Master of death. He is gone but his influence abides. Truly "he fought a good fight and kept the faith." Good-bye, brother beloved, we shall meet in a world where Jesus abides.

Rev. P. T. Stanford.

COMPANIONSHIP WITH GOD.

Dr. T. L. Hulse, retiring editor of the Central Methodist has published a book of four sermons under the title of "Companionship With God." The author is not only one of our deep thinkers, but his balanced judgment and lucid diction make what he has to say on any subject well worth reading. The title of the book is also the subject of the first sermon and is one of the greatest deliverances on that subject that I have read in many a day. The subjects treated in the other sermons are as follows: "Six Reasons Why I Am a Christian," "The Holy Spirit—His Nature and Mission," and "The Stewardship of Life."

I happened to know that these sermons have been put into printed form because of the urgent request of the author's friends whose lives have been blessed under the deliverances of these great messages. The author's loyalty to the great fundamentals of Christianity and his capacity for stating these doctrines are facts well known by all the brethren who have read the Central Methodist or who have heard him preach. An appropriate preface has been written by that veteran of a thousand battles in the interest of vital Christianity and the abundant life in the fullness of the Spirit, Dr. H. C. Morrison. The book is published by The Herald Press and may be had from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. Price, 35 cents.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson 1.—October 6, 1929.

Subject.—Recognizing our debt to others. Mark 12:28-34; James 2:14-17.

Golden Text.—Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Phil. 2:4.

Introduction.—True social service is applied Christianity. It is the child of Christianity, and lives only when the Christ spirit has pervaded human society. It cannot be made a substitute for Christianity. Without real Christianity it is a sham, deceiving both server and served. It is an artificial flower without life or perfume. In all true Social Service we "long after men in the bowels of Jesus Christ," as Paul wrote to his beloved Philippians. Missions on any less basis will curse both missionaries and the people to whom they are sent. Missionary work for social betterment is but sentimentalism. It will soon die, and leave a barren waste where it should have made a well watered, fruitful garden. It tries to do by dry culture what can be done only when the soil is irrigated from the springs of God.

By all means let us do all the good to all the people we can help; but when we undertake to save men by what is now termed Social Service, we are hitching the horse behind the wagon. Bettering one's environment will not save his soul; but salvation from sin will lead him to improve his own environment. If good environment would save sinners, our millionaires should be the best of saints; but such is not the case. Many of them, while living in luxury, are as far away from Jesus Christ as was Judas Iscariot. Multitudes of people need better clothes, better food (and more of it), better homes, better education, and a thousand other good things; but they need salvation from sin more than they need all else besides. Give them all that heart can wish, and leave out salvation, and they are but sounding brass or tinkling cymbals. If we are to save men, we must put first things first.

Comments on the Lesson.

28. One of the scribes.—The word scribe means a writer. They were men who transcribed the writing of the Old Testament, and were supposed to be thoroughly conversant with its teachings. Ezra belonged to this class. Having heard them reasoning together.—Refers to the preceding conversation. In the opinion of this scribe Jesus had answered his adversaries well. His question, "Which is the first commandment of all?" was timely and of first importance.

29 and 30. In his reply to the question of this scribe, Jesus quotes from Deut. 6:4, 5. The quotation is not absolutely literal, but its meaning is clear. If one loves God with all his heart, soul, mind and strength, he can do no more until he can grow some. This is perfect love; though it is not absolutely so. He should do better in his tomorrows. Otherwise he will be a failure.

31. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—The true meaning of love comes out here. Love is not all feeling. It is feeling that produces action. Pure love always does its best to bless its objective. Nor can it do less, for it can never be satisfied with less than its best. Love that expends itself merely in good feeling is "gush." Pure love lives by the Golden Rule—lives by it in its dealings with both God and men. It does good forgetful of reward. Love has no greed for gain. Greed for gain vitiates it—turns it into moral poison. He who loves fulfills all the commandments. To do otherwise would pervert his inmost being. Love will live or die for the object of its devotion.

32. Well, Master, thou hast said the truth.—This scribe must have been a choice specimen—far ahead of the average Jew of his day. He had quite a clear understanding of truth, as is evident from the connection he makes between these two greatest of all commandments and the oneness of God. His clearness of spiritual vision is seen again in his statement, that obedience to the commands of God means "more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices." This great truth should be pressed upon our pupils.

34. Thou art not far from the kingdom of God.—The open way to salvation is obedience. Many claim that they cannot believe, when the trouble is not a want of faith, but of obedience; for no disobedient soul can believe God. In dealing with many souls of all types, I have almost invariably found the difficulty at this point. When one obeys God believing is as natural as breathing. Do what God says, and your doubts will take wings.

James 2:14-17. Remember that James is not writing of the faith that brings justification in its initial import. He is telling a saved man how to live in order to keep saved. He is exactly in harmony with Jesus in John 15:2: "Every branch in me that beareth not fruit he taketh away." James is teaching what John taught in his first epistle, 3:17: "Whoso hath this world's good, and seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"

There exists the same relationship between faith and good works as between a good apple tree and its fruit. That is the teaching of Jesus in Matt. 7:17: "Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit." Faith is the tree: its fruit is its ripe apples. Faith is the vine: its fruit is its luscious ripe grapes.

There is no conflict between James and Paul. The latter tells how to get saved from sin; the former how to stay saved. How meaningless to tell a hungry man to be fed, a cold man to be covered with warm garments, and leave him helpless. Faith in God sets the table and brings out the warm clothing. Faith treats the needy man as it would treat God himself. James is right in saying that "faith without works is dead." There may be works without faith; but never faith without works.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

been a reader of your paper for many years. She was teacher of the Emanuel Bible Class of the M. E. Church, of Juniata for many years, of which I have been a member for over twenty years. She knew her Bible, and was a wonderful teacher and devout follower of her Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. She was a sufferer for many weeks, but was patient and loving through it all, giving her counsel and words of comfort and cheer to all who came to her bedside. We always feel we had received more than we had been able to give. Her testimony seemed to grow brighter as nearer the end she came. We know "her works do follow her"; as "Bread cast upon the waters shall be gathered after many days." She loved the Church of Christ, and was never happier than when she was attending the means of grace and mingling with God's people.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

—Basil Mathews in 'The British Weekly.'

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and His saving power in the lives of men." Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Sam King: "We are glad to report one of the best meetings ever held at Kelley's Chapel, Evarts, Ky. We had 21 bright conversions and 12 additions to the church. The revival is still going on; every one who was converted will pray or testify when called upon. The mines have been idle for some time and work has been bad, people have moved away, but we are working away from Evarts. Five or six families had to move during the meeting, and three young people left the altar unsaved, but asked to be remembered in prayer. Services were conducted by Rev. C. F. Chestnut, pastor, while Rev. W. L. Young and his members rendered valuable assistance in singing and altar work."

The All Prayer Foundlings' Home, this city, will hold its 24th annual celebration at the Home, Sunday, October 6th, at 3:00 P. M. They have cared for 600 babies during their 24 years of work. This work is carried on by Rev. G. C. Cromer and wife who have the love and confidence of all who know them. Take Frankfort Ave. car to Jane, then one block north to 2305 Sycamore Ave.

Rev. Irvin B. Manly, of Houston, Texas, is in an interesting and far-reaching union revival at Nimmons, S. C. From there he will go to Forrest City, Ark., for a meeting at Wesley Church.

M. E. Pruitt: "The revival held in Millersburg Methodist Church by Rev. C. H. Martin was a good meeting. He was assisted by Rev. Andrew Johnson, of Wilmore, Ky., who rendered most valuable service. His sound logic and spirituality won the hearts of the various denominations, resulting in a great spiritual awakening. He did much in stirring up the membership to raising their church claims, and also emphasizing the importance of church membership. Sister Martin presided at the organ, and Sister Johnson did splendid work as soloist and in choir work. Conference sent Brother and Sister Martin to Bloomfield, but our loss is Bloomfield's gain. Our prayers go with them. We shall receive Brother Boswell and family in the same spirit of prayer."

E. C. Smith: "We are in a great meeting at Gradyville, having had 58 conversions to the present time. There were 22 converted at one morning service. Rev. Verner Blair, of Russell Springs, Ky., is doing the preaching. He is a great gospel preacher, and any one desiring help in revival work need not hesitate to call Brother Blair to assist them. The meeting is being held in one of The Evangelical Methodist League tents. On Tuesday night the crowd was estimated at one thousand or more."

The Newell Interdenominational Holiness Association will hold its annual meeting at the foundry landing, New Cumberland, W. Va., September 19-29th inclusive. Rev. E. E. Shelhamer will have charge, assisted by his son, Everett, who will have charge of the music and leading young people's services. Those in the vicinity of Steubenville, Ohio, and Chester, W. Va., are cordially invited.

Fred and Kittie Suffield: "It gives us great pleasure to recommend Miss Marion Whitney, of 203 Woodlawn Ave., Jersey City, N. J., as a very competent soloist, song leader, and children's worker. No pastor or camp meeting committee will make any mistake in securing her as a worker."

NOTICE!

Rev. W. W. McCord advises us that his fine papershell pecans are ready for the market. We have told our readers about them before, but am writing to say that if they are what he sent to us as a sample, you will get some of the finest pecans you ever ate if you order them from Rev. W. W. McCord, Sale City, Ga.

Mrs. H. C. Morrison.

PREACHERS MADE TO ORDER.

M. M. Bussey.

It is a common thing to have a suit of clothes made to order, but did you ever think of having a preacher made to order? Did you know the Bible has printed the order blank to have preachers made to order?

Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come forever and ever.

"That this is a rebellious people, lying children that will not hear the law of the Lord:

(Order blank) "Which say to the seers, See not; and to the prophets, Prophesy not unto us right things, speak unto us smooth things, prophesy deceits:

"Get you out of the way, turn aside out of the path, cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us." Isa. 30:9-11.

You will note there are seven stipulations in having a preacher made to order. First, he is to "see not." He is to be blind to deep spiritual truth. It is what you see brother preacher, that gets you into trouble with those who do not want to walk in the light and pay the full price.

Second, "Prophesy not unto us right things." Hold back, and fear to speak out the things which ought to be said. Even though you know right things do not speak them out, but hold them back, lest it hinder your success, and disturb the peace."

Third, "Speak unto us smooth things." Pull the teeth out of your sermons, take the bite out of the truth, take the cut out of the sword. Put on the soft pedal, be harmless, inoffensive, and safe where carnality is having a good time; brag on the "old man." Harness him up in the church and let him pull the load.

Fourth, "Prophesy deceits." Prophecy all you will, be eloquent, be logical, be zealous, but let it be in line with a heart that is deceived, and do not disturb its carnal rest.

Fifth, "Get you out of the way." Get out of the narrow way, the rugged way, the hated way, the way of the cross. The way which is so hard for carnality and the flesh, and popularity. Get out of the way of suffering, and groaning, and weeping, and become light and foolish, and joke and jest; become a good mixer by having on hand a good stock of the latest jokes by which you can lift conviction from the souls of the lost.

Sixth, "Turn aside out of the path." Do not continue to walk in that narrow path, for thus you reproach us, but turn aside so we shall all be alike and you will not make us miserable by such contrast. Cease to be a godly example before us.

Seventh, "Cause the Holy One of Israel to cease from before us." We have no objection to religion, we have no objection to preachers, we have no objection to churches, and sermons, and services. In fact, we like to ease our conscience with a little of it, but do cause the Holy One, Jesus, to cease from before us. Jesus who died to save from all sin, to sanctify, to enable us to live holy lives. Do cause him to cease from before us. Then we will like you, and we will pay you, and we will not persecute you.

Thus says an ungodly world, and a backslidden church. Woe unto the preacher who fits into this program, for hell will be his doom.

"SPECIAL SACRED SONGS NO. 2."

One of our customers writes as follows relative to the song, "Leave All To Him": "I have been confined to my bed for the past three years and when I heard the song, 'Leave All To Him,' I was greatly impressed by it. May the dear Lord inspire you to write many more and may His richest blessings rest upon you and yours."

The above song was written by Haldor Lillenas but is found only in "Special Sacred Songs No. 2," a book of 128 pages containing solos, duets, and quartets. The price is 60c the copy; two for $1.00. Order from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

"SPECIAL SACRED SONGS NO. 3."

Rev. A. I. Garrison, a missionary from India, writes to Mr. Lillenas as follows: "I am a missionary of the Christian Missionary Alliance in India. I was converted at Silver Heights Camp Ground, New Albany, Indiana. I secured a copy of your song book, 'Special Sacred Songs No. 3,' and I have used it a great deal. The songs entitled 'How Much I Owe,' 'Don't Turn Him Away,' 'When I Beheld Him,' 'He Is the Rose of Sharon,' 'My Shepherd,' 'The Center of His Will,' and 'Living For Jesus' are my favorites."

The above book can be secured from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.; price 60c the copy; two for $1.00.

"YOUR ROSES MAY HAVE THORNS."

The above song is having a wide field of usefulness and is being used by a great many special singers. One of our customers writes as follows, from Odenton, Md.: "I am writing to you with reference to a song which I heard while in attendance at a service last night. I think this the most beautiful song I've ever heard. The name of it is 'Your Roses May Have Thorns.'"

This song can be secured by ordering "Special Sacred Songs No. 3," price of which is 60c the copy or two for $1.00. You can secure a copy from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

GOOD FOR REV. L. E. WILLIAMS.

Having Glorious Results.

Rev. L. E. Williams, evangelist, with headquarters at Wilmore, Ky., is having most gratifying success in his work. He is an humble, earnest preacher of full salvation. We commend him to our brethren desiring a revival that means a gospel and experience which prepares one for judgment and heaven.—Rev. H. C. Morrison, D.D.

An Earnest Preacher.

Rev. L. E. Williams, of Wilmore, Ky., is a true and earnest preacher of the Word. He is engaged exclusively in evangelistic work, is a settled man of good religious experience and has had eight years in the pastorate, and eight years in evangelistic work.—John Paul, D.D., Pres. Taylor University.

Old-Time Preaching.

It gives me pleasure to state that I know well my friend, Rev. L. E. Williams, my fellow townsman and former student of Asbury College. He has a splendid record as pastor, and is a very successful evangelist, holding meetings on the old line of conversion and sanctification. I heartily recommend him to those who want an old-time revival. He has strong preaching ability and good common sense, and will fully co-operate with the pastor.—J. W. Hughes, D.D., Founder of Asbury College.

A Second Blessing Preacher.

To the Saints Scattered Abroad Greetings:

My old friend and brother L. E. Williams is in the field of evangelism. He is an old Asbury boy and has made good. He is doing good work in camps and churches up and down the land.—Bud Robinson.

THE PERMANENT CAMP GROUND SITE OF THE FLORIDA HOLI- NESS CAMP MEETING AT ORLANDO, FLA.

Greetings to all The Herald Family:

The Board of The Florida Holiness Camp Meeting is making progress slowly towards the permanent site for the camp, but plan to have matters in shape for a great rallying on the permanent site at next camp meeting and make it the greatest yet by the help and power of the Holy Spirit's presence and prayers of his holy people.

The appeal sent out by letter for a small sum from a good many folks has been coming slowly and we are making progress but find that if we are to get grounds all in shape and buildings erected by next February, we will have to intensify our efforts on this line.

The grounds selected are just between Orlando and Winter Park, and easily accessible to both with water and lights and already platted and recorded and will be the very place for the many friends of this work to lease a lot on the grounds and build a cottage and come spend as much time before or after as they may see fit and then enjoy attending the great feast of spiritual things we have always had at this gathering.

The plans involved include the purchasing for cash of the acreage and the erecting of suitable buildings to make folks comfortable as rapidly as our means will allow.

Everyone interested in spreading this doctrine of entire sanctification all through the nation, is hereby requested to pray that God may guide the Board and officials in everything and keep us on fire as we bear this great burden and go forward under many difficulties in the Saviour's name. If interested write the Secretary and if looking for an 80-acre truck farm, unimproved, which has been given us to sell for use on grounds, write or wire the Secretary also.

Yours for spreading the Good News,
E. C. Wills, Sec.-Treas.
P. O. Box 1944, Orlando, Fla.

AN EARNEST REQUEST.

Will you please print a request for prayer that the readers of The Herald unite in prayer for my dear sister who was operated on and is in a serious condition may soon be entirely healed if it is the Master's will, and that I may be spared from any cancerous disease. I know that anything asked in Jesus' name will be granted.

I love your paper; it contains so many helpful truths. I would like to tell you of one incident that your paper did. My sister, of whom I am writing, is a Christian, and has been for a number of years. She is just thirty-five and was sorely afflicted with cancer. About three weeks ago she was operated on but the colon where the cancer was located does not heal properly. She came to bid us good-bye before going away, and knowing the trying ordeal of being left alone with her thoughts, I gave her The Pentecostal Herald to read. It seemed that that week Dr. Morrison had written directly to her in his editorial, "Commit thy way unto the Lord."

She was so brave until she bade her boys good bye, then her grief was almost too great to bear and as Jesus wept over Jerusalem she wept for them. Finally, her husband began reading Dr. Morrison's message and the following pages, and a great spiritual peace came to her. She went on the operating table trusting in the Lord and regained consciousness praying for her children. I have sent her the copies I have received since and I know she has enjoyed each one.

I hope the Lord will bless each reader and each contributor; I pray especially for Dr. Morison, that he may be spared with restored health.

Yours truly,
Josephine Call.

NO DRINKING IN LONDON?

"We counted at least fourteen violently drunk in these two blocks, half women."

That is a sentence from a letter received last week by Boy Scout Executive George C. Driesbach, of Rockford, Illinois, from Boy Scout Leader Walter S. Grebner, of Sterling, Illinois, one of the party of American Boy Scouts in Europe this summer.

The letter contains description of a prominent London Street one night as the saloons were closing. None of the young American boy scouts abroad is old enough to recall the American saloon; their European experience is their first touch with a drink-ridden country.

The letter says:

"Since coming to London we have noted more obnoxious, more wretched looking people than one sees in a month in the states and last night and the night before we saw one of the great reasons why.

"After coming home from Madame Toussaud's 'Collection of Wax Figures with Einar, Oscar and I took a walk to get some fruit. On the way back, about four blocks from the hotel we saw crowds and just casually sauntered down. Understand the hotel is in quite a fashionable part of Westminster.

"Before this we had seen several figures staggering along and on the way home from Madame Toussaud's three women, dead drunk, called us names until a 'Bobby' dispersed them. Oscar remarked, 'and they say you don't see any drunks in London!'

"Well, to continue our story we went down to the crowd and found that in two blocks there were eight saloons and that they were closing. The great crowd was at least 50 per cent elderly women and 50 percent of them were 'stewed.' Glasses of beer outside, bottles being gulped down and yelling and howling all about. One old woman fell flat in the middle of the street dead drunk, until two young girls helped her home. A man and evidently his wife, drunk, engaged in an argument which ended in a fist fight between the two.

"I think we counted at least fourteen violently drunk in these two blocks, half women. It was so disgusting, so degrading at 11:15 o'clock at night that we left the scene, firmly thanking God for American prohibition and convicted that it is our greatest blessing nationally. I have talked to many Americans and they voice the same opinion. I would like to take its opponents to these scenes.

"I haven't the slightest doubt as to their conviction, for it is so obvious here in the 'land of personal liberty' so-called. Friends, believe me or not, these are absolutely true facts and I'm sure such scenes are not spectacles in the good old U. S. A., as they are here. America sure has the jump on Europe in this as well as in other ways."

The letter quoted from above was published in the Rockford "Morning Star," Rockford, Ill., August 31, 1929.

LATE NEWS FROM MISS HUGHES.

The Ridouts have left us for good. They are over in Japan and their boat will pass through here en route to India. We miss them very much.

Two weeks ago or more we were being forced by the government to make our decision on registration of all our work or take the consequences. You see our Bethel property is out in the Chinese city, not on Concession soil, and therefore we are at the mercy of the government's demands. You understand, of course, that to register means primarily the forcing of the worship of Sun Yat Sen's picture, and this we cannot and will not agree to—it is simply unthinkable. We cabled Dr. Nast asking him to notify our friends of the serious situation for we felt that we needed the prayers of God's people. I am so glad Dr. Morrison, he sent the message to you. Today we have had a call from a Nationalist official giving us three days to register or the law will act. We haven't the slightest idea what the law will do. It may close the whole plant. It will probably close our educational work and possibly the hospital, but we are singing,

"I'm going through, I'm going through.

I'll pay the price, whatever others do." The Lord is keeping Dr. Stone's and my heart in perfect peace and it is a joy unspeakable that without one exception every American and Chinese fellow-worker is one with us. There is no pulling or struggling, or whispering or suggesting that perhaps we had better compromise. We could not be sure today of the loyalty of our people if we did not know that they are every one sanctified, married workers with wives and little ones dependent upon them standing loyally by us in this hour of crisis. If they close up Bethel, praise the Lord, there are four hundred and fifty millions of people in this great land waiting to hear the old Story of love, and we'll go out in Bands to tell the Story. Do ask your people to pray much for us.

Lovingly yours,

JUST ONE IN THE WHOLE WORLD.

There is just one Bud Robinson—no one like him or even akin to him. There is not another "Life Story" like his or similar to it. His recent book, "My Life's Story" is, as he puts it, "loaded to the water line with the activities of forty-seven years of labor in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ." The chapter on his call to preach is worth the price of the book and more. Get it and read it. It has 217 pages, but when you start reading it you will not want to stop until you have finished. It sells at the remarkably low price of $1.00. Don't fail to get your copy. You will weep and you will rejoice as you read it.

KEPT BY THE POWER OF GOD THROUGH FAITH.

By The Editor.

OUR Lord Jesus not only saves, but he keeps; in the forgiveness of sins and regenerating power there is an instantaneous and marvelous work, a gracious change; it is being born again. It is to become in Christ a new creature, and life stretches out ahead, many temptations and conflicts await this new creature, and the keeping power of Christ is necessary. One must not only be saved in the great work of pardon and regeneration, but one must be kept from sin in a sinful world.

It will be remembered that in his prayer contained in the 17th chapter of John's Gospel, speaking to the Father of his disciples, our Lord said: "I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." Jesus saves people for service. He would not hasten them away to heaven, but keep them in this world and use them for his glory in the salvation of others. All Christians should get this truth very clearly fixed in their minds. Our Lord is able, not only to save us from our past sins, but to keep us from sin, and sinning, in this present world.

We must remember that heaven is getting along very well without us. There are no burdened, broken-hearted widows there, with hungry children crying about their knees to be comforted and helped, no little orphans in barefoot nakedness and leanness to be washed and clothed and fed and homed; there are no wasted lives festering with disease and chained down with sin in garrets down in the slums to be sought and healed and saved and led out into the light and glorious liberty of the Son of God. Heaven is graciously free from all this sort of thing, but this poor lost world is full of sorrow and suffering and calls for service here.

One of the most blessed things in Christian life and experience is the high privilege of service. To be saved by his grace, and to go forth in his name and for his sake, to minister to the needs of lost humanity, is one of the highest privileges that a human being could possibly desire in this world, or any other world. It is all very well to have a community chest; we are in perfect sympathy with all of those philanthropic organizations that have been built up to minister to the needs of humanity; but those who minister to the sick, the imprisoned, and the suffering by proxy, are suffering great disadvantages themselves. One of the greatest means of grace is to go into the place of suffering, to pray at the bedside of the sick, to wash the soiled and sore feet of motherless little children, to bind up the broken heart with one's own hand; to enter into fellowship with the very poor, the unfortunate, and may I say, the sinful; to get down into the very depths of human sorrow and human need and hand out, not only some money, some old shoes, some half-worn clothing, some potatoes, and stale bread, but to hand out a bit of one's heart, to choke back some

WHAT PLEASES GOD.

"Whatsoever the Lord pleased, that did He in heaven and all deep places."

What God decrees, child of His love,
Take patiently, though it may prove
The storm that wrecks thy treasure here,
Be comforted! thou need'st not fear
What pleases God.

The wisest will is God's own will;
Rest on this anchor, and be still;
For peace around thy path shall flow,
When only wishing here below
What pleases God.

The truest heart is God's own heart,
Which bids thy grief and fears depart
Protecting, guiding, day and night,
The soul that welcomes here aright
What pleases God.

Oh! could I sing as I desire,
My grateful voice should never tire
To tell the wondrous love and power,
Thus working out from hour to hour
What pleases God.

The King of kings, He rules on earth,
He sends us sorrow here, or mirth,
He bears the ocean in His hand;
And thus we meet on sea or land
What pleases God.

His Church on earth He dearly loves,
Although He oft its sin reproves;
The rod itself His love can speak,
He smites, till we return to seek
What pleases God.

Then let the crowd around thee seize
The joys that for a season please,
But willingly their paths forsake,
And for thy blessed portion take
What pleases God.

Art thou despised by all around?
Do tribulations here abound?
Jesus will give the victory,
Because His eye can see in thee
What pleases God.

Thy heritage is safe in heaven;
There shall the crown of joy be given;
There shalt thou hear and see and know,
As thou couldst never here below,
What pleases God.

Paul Gerhardt.

tears of pity, to melt and refine one's soul with the sorrows and sufferings of other people.

It is the glory of our blessed Lord to save people from their sins, and to keep them free from sin and sinning in a sinful world, to put into them his spirit of love and compassion and helpfulness, and to train them to do as he did, as described by the apostle: "He went about doing good." And so he prays that we be not taken out of the world, but that we be kept in it, and kept free from its sinfulness, living in the midst of its temptations and its wickedness, with hearts aflame with love divine, going about doing good. It may be that the very poor and dependent, the sick, the ignorant and that very large number of helpless people in the world, are God's schoolteachers in the economy of our Christian life. If there were no one to help, nobody to feel sorry for, no one to weep over, no pitiful, broken, helpless human being for whom we can sacrifice and suffer, I say, it may be, we would become hard-hearted; the fountain of our tears might dry up; we might become mere selfish animals, with no tender, holy emotion, no longing and love for others. Our Lord has much business in this world, work that must be done and for this reason he would take us out of the world by his regenerating power; then he would take the world out of us by the baptism and sanctifying of the Holy Ghost; then he would send us back into the world, full of sin and suffering, graciously saved and kept and used in saving others.

THE OLD-TIME REVIVAL.

WE often hear devout people expressing a desire to see an old-time revival of religion. These expressions raise in our mind the question, What was the old-time revival and how was it produced? The old-time revival was characterized by a profound conviction for sin, a deep grief on the part of the convicted over sins committed against God. Mourning because of sins was sometimes protracted through several days; sometimes it extended into weeks. Not infrequently the penitent gave up hope as he or she looked upon the awful wickedness of having trampled upon God's commandments and having rejected his mercy. These despairing souls had to be encouraged by Christian workers, to pray on; not to give up hope. Scriptures were quoted to them, such as, "Seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened." "Whosoever cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." The holy Scriptures abound with wonderful passages of encouragement to the broken and contrite spirit. The word of the Lord was in great use about the altar place among penitents in the old-time revival.

After those deep convictions came bright conversions. When a soul came out of such dense darkness into the marvelous light of salvation there was great joy, and often shouts of praise. In many instances the new converts would walk about the neighborhood, ride over the community and bear testimony to the wonders of God's love, the saving power of the Lord Jesus Christ. The joy of this salvation with its glad testimonies, happy shouts, and melodious songs would extend through weeks and months, and under the influence of the testimony of these new converts sinners would be powerfully convicted and souls would be saved.

In the early history of Methodism when these revivals of deep conviction, bright conversions, great joy and glad testimony were so common, it was generally understood that there was another blessing, a wonderful outpouring of the Holy Ghost in reserve, a definite cleansing from all sin, a direct operation of the Holy Ghost perfecting in love. When

GOSPEL NOTES AND REFLECTIONS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Peter, in describing the preaching of his day, says that "they preached the Gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven." Stevens said of the early Methodist preachers, that they preached with the full expectation of seeing people saved during their preaching. In the mission fields today we feel there is a great lack of faith in the power of the gospel to save people on the spot. Many missionaries make so much of the idea of "background." They think that it is too much to expect that raw sinners should be converted to God simply under the preaching of the gospel—that they need teaching, training, etc., before they can hope to see them converted. Hence it is that so much of mission work has been turned aside to education, and a great percent of the endeavors of present day missionaries seem to be in the realm of education instead of evangelization. I am firm in the belief that the great need of the foreign field today is New Testament, Holy Ghost, evangelistic work carried on with the one purpose of getting people saved.

PREACHING TO SAVE.

Bishop Thoburn, of India, tells the following: "While preaching at Cawnpore I learned a lesson which was to affect my succeeding labors in a most important way. Had preached to an ordinary congregation and, as was our custom, at the close of the sermon, called on awakened persons to rise. Two or three men did so and during the prayer I went to one of them to try to show the way of salvation. To my extreme surprise he assured me that he had found peace during the sermon. He had been awakened, pointed to Christ and enabled to believe during the half hour that I had been preaching. I had never met with such a case before and at first was a little incredulous about the man's profession; but soon another case exactly similar occurred, and other like cases have continued to occur with greater or less frequency ever since. I have long since ceased to marvel at them. The real wonder is that I should have preached nearly fifteen years before discovering that the ambassador of Jesus Christ intrusted with the ministry of reconciliation is really able, through his message, to do that which he is sent to accomplish. The messenger of Jesus who speaks for his Master should beware of trusting to methods, helps, or any artificial appliances, but always stand up before his fellow men in the confidential expectation of seeing them convicted and converted while listening to the word of life."

Preaching in Calcutta one Sunday night with no little difficulty because of his fever, he thought he would dismiss without a prayer meeting but he was constrained to give the invitation and sixteen persons rose and went forward. Seven of these were converted during the preaching of a blundering sermon in which he scarcely knew what he was saying. From this we again learn

1. That the Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. Rom. 1:16.
2. That the Gospel preached in weakness, but in dependence upon the Holy Spirit, will still yield definite results in both the foreign field and the home land. 2 Cor. 2:3, 4.
3. That the preaching of the Gospel, not education, not institutionalism, not intellectualism, is that kind of religious endeavors which will be blest of the Holy Spirit. 1 Cor. 1:17.
4. That God's promise is very definite and sure when he says: "For as the rain cometh down and the snow from heaven and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater, so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it." Isaiah 55:10, 11.

"Great Sun of Righteousness, arise,

Bless the dark world with heavenly light;
Thy Gospel makes the simple wise,

Thy laws are pure, thy judgments right."

"THIS IS WHAT I WANT!"

Let me add one more story to the power of the gospel in heathen lands. A Hindoo with troubled conscience went to the Brahmin to ask how he could make atonement for his sins. All told him that he had to mortify or torture his body; he must drive a number of iron spikes through his sandals and walk to the sacred River, a distance of 480 miles. When he had done this he may hope to get rid of his sins. The poor Hindoo, anxious to save his soul, set out on his terrible journey until he could endure the torture no longer, so he was compelled to halt beneath a wide spreading tree. While there a missionary came and preached the gospel. The poor Hindoo heard the words: "The blood of Jesus, the Son of God, cleanseth from all sin." The preacher told what sin was with its guilt, showed man's utter helplessness to save himself through any self-imposed suffering, and pointed out God's way of salvation through the precious blood of Jesus.

These sounds fell upon the Hindoo's ears like rain on a thirsty soul. He drank in every word and at last plucking off his sandals he cried out: "This is what I want! This is what I want!" He gladly received the gospel, believed it and became a living witness that the "blood of Jesus Christ does indeed cleanse from all sin."

A CHINESE FANATICISM.

The study of fanaticism reveals some peculiar elements in the makeup of the human mind when fanaticism is joined to some sort of religious propaganda. The Tai Ping Rebellion which broke out in China about 1851, was largely the result of religious fanaticism. Hung Hsiuchuan was the leader of it; he was a farmer's son. He was fairly well educated and for a while put himself under the teaching of Rev. Issachar Roberts, a Baptist minister at Canton. He did not stay long enough to be baptized, but went off and organized a religious society called the Shang Ti Hui, or "Society of God." He started to preach the worship of one true God and to condemn idolatry. He drew to himself quite a following and they soon became wild flaming fanatics, not satisfied with preaching against idolatry but proceeded to destroy heathen temples and their gods. They developed into an army and cut their way across China putting to the sword those who opposed. After thirteen years of bloodshed in which it is estimated that between twenty and forty millions of people perished, the thing wound up at Nan-king where the leader lived in luxury, extravagance and dissipation and afterwards committed suicide.

Fanaticism has written many chapters of sorrow and disaster in the history of the Church of Christ. Mr. Wesley had a great deal of trouble with people who imagined that they receive particular directions from God not only in points of importance but in things of no moment in the most trifling circumstances of life. Whereas God has given to us our own reason for a guide, though never excluding the secret assistance of his Spirit.

Well has Dr. Daniel Steele said:

"The fanatic degrades the word of God by claiming for himself an inspiration equal to its theopneustic utterances. (The modernist adroitly belittles the Holy Scriptures by classifying their inspiration with that of Homer and Shakespeare). Wesley warns against the folly of enthusiasts who imagine that God dictates every word they speak, and that it is impossible they should speak anything amiss, either as to the matter or manner of it."

The fanatic also imagines he has a manifestation of God so immediate that he no longer needs the ordained means of grace. "All these," says Steele, "are specimens of vagaries contrary to common sense and the Bible which have brought Christianity under reproach."

"Such the credulous dotard's dream,

And such his shorter road;

Thus he makes the world blaspheme,

And shames the Church of God;

Staggers thus the most sincere,

Till from the gospel hope they move;

Holiness as error fear

And start at Perfect Love."

When preaching for many years around at the Camp Meetings and Conventions in America I found everywhere the sad devastating effects of various forms of fanaticism, wild fire and other forms of "zeal without knowledge." Some years ago I wrote the following concerning some difficulties we have to meet with in connection with the camps and other meetings.

Difficulties arising from zeal without knowledge, or from enthusiasm not mixed with Godly wisdom. A preacher who is now extensively known throughout the country as a great preacher of full salvation tells of an experience he had many years ago. He had a hungry heart and had fully resolved to be sanctified and started for one of the holiness camp meetings with no other purpose than to get the blessing. As he neared the camp he was sitting in the car with another preacher to whom he made known his purpose. A good sister in front hearing him say he was going to the camp to be sanctified bent over to talk to him. Among the things she emphasized about sanctification was faith healing. She told him that that very morning she arose to find her arm all sore and broken out with erysipelas. She told the Lord she wanted to go to the camp and he must heal her, instantly it was done, so she said and she exhibited an arm without the trace of a scar or a sore upon it.

When he got into the meeting and the service was in full swing, another sister came to him and talked to him about being sanctified. He told her this was his purpose. She insisted that he ought to be sanctified. He replied that was what he came for, and then she proceeded to back up her contention that he ought to be sanctified by telling him the power in prayer sanctification will bring and told the following: "Yesterday," she said, "the dust was so dreadful here that we could hardly breathe, so I told the Lord he must send some rain; the rain fell and then it looked as though so much rain would fall that it would make it muddy and people would not get to the camp. So then she told the Lord only to send enough rain to settle the dust and instantly the rain stopped." Now those two over-zealous sisters were too much for the young man. If they had talked sanctification from the standpoint of getting rid of sin, being made pure and being perfected in love, it would have intensified the brother's desire, and quickened his quest for the blessing, but they talked the thing from a point of view which at once kindled a prejudice in his heart and sickened him and instead of his becoming a mourner he went away home in disbelief and disgust and went for some eighteen years without the blessing.

Another difficulty is found in the folks who go around camp with their stories of new revelations, visions and "strange gifts."

They will be found bearing various labels. Some the "third blessing," some the "latter rain," some the "gift of tongues," etc. Their obvious employment seems to be to unsettle folks, to get people to strive after not the great essential—deliverance from all sin, but after the miraculous, the mesmeric, the unnatural, visions, rhapsodies and spiritual spasms.

AMERICANS AND THE BOXERS.

During the Boxer Uprising of 1900, in which two hundred and thirty-three missionaries were killed, the relief of the Legations in Peking, the Chinese capital, was a matter of international importance as all nations had their representatives there. Seven nations contributed troops to relieve Peking. The Japanese had 8,000, Russians 4,800, British 3,000, Americans 2,500, French 800, Austrians 58, Italians 53. To the American troops was assigned the South bank of the Canal which connects Peking with Tunchow. General Chaffee was in charge. This story is told: "When the Americans came up a Yankee drummer boy climbed up the weather beaten wall of the Chinese city and with his drum straps aided several of his comrades to reach the top. They then climbed down on the inside and managed, notwithstanding the fire of the Chinese sharpshooters, to open the city gate. The Americans took four other gates between them and the palace and were ready for a march right into the Forbidden City (Peking) but were held back by the Allies until such a time as a general march was arranged for to be participated in by troops of all the nations represented. The Americans held the main gate of the city and entrance to the palaces had to be subject to passes issued by them. When those troops arrived all looting and disorder ceased and the proud City of Peking through its own foolishness in countenancing and encouraging the Boxer uprising against missionaries and all foreigners, was in the hands of foreign war lords and their troops. In the meanwhile the Empress Dowager and her court had to flee across Shansi and up the valley of the Wei to Hsianfu, the capital of Shensi the ancient capital of the Empire.

It is worth while observing that the attitude of America in all her dealings with China has been invariably fair and equitable. Not so the other nations. Every chance they got through a scrap or a war they bit off another slice of Chinese territory. America kept free of that sort of business and generally speaking it can be said that the Chinese hold the Americans in a very high regard, much more so in these days of "extra territoriality" and "concession" discussions than the other foreigners who have been at war with China and who have extorted big concessions at the conclusion of their wars. It seems a shameful pity in view of these things that the Americans are exploiting China in the interest of the cigarette. Everywhere you go the deadly American cigarette is in evidence and, it has been said, that the Tobacco magnates of America have used as a slogan: "A cigarette in the mouth of every Chinaman and Chinawoman." It is no uncommon thing to see Chinese women smoking the deadly cigarette on the streets and stores and hotels. England stands guilty for the dreadful Opium curse upon China, and now America is cursing her with the dreadful cigarette. And all for the almighty dollar! Alas! Alas!

Why I Love the Methodist Church.

Rev. William E. Schubert.

Love the Methodist Church because my father was a Methodist. It was he who first taught me to pray. I remember kneeling by the bed in my room while he taught me "Now I lay me" and "Our Father." One was "the little prayer," the other I called "the big prayer." I remember asking for "the big prayer"; though I did not know then that one was human and the other divine, one written by man, and the other spoken by Christ. I knew that one appealed to me more than the other; yet today both are precious, because my father taught them to me in those days when parents took their vows seriously.

I love the Methodist Church because my mother was a Methodist. It was she who early dedicated me to the Lord for his work, she who had wanted to be a missionary but couldn't for health reasons. It was she who never pressed this upon me; in fact I did not know it until after I had made my own decision to come to China. It was she who encouraged me, and used all her resources and energies to help me in my effort to get an education.

It was a Methodist preacher, one of the Bovards, who laid his hand upon my head one day in my boyhood, and said, "I claim this boy for the ministry." It was his brother, my college president, who later helped to make it possible for me to prepare for that call.

I love the Methodist Church because it was at her altar that I found the Lord. A Methodist evangelist, Fred Ross, preached and shouted, prayed and exhorted; judgment became real to me, I yielded, and while my Sunday school superintendent prayed and sang with me I gave my heart to God.

It was Methodist pastors and their wives, Carnes and Ore, Reberger and Summers, who trained and held me to the Church. They and other workers in the Junior League, the choir, and boys' clubs, took me through that trying time in that sinful little town in California, endured my meanness, loved me any way, and held me true.

It was in a Methodist Church that I first felt the social influence of evangelism; for it was during a revival meeting that I first felt I should do something to better society. A Methodist layman, editor of the local paper, provided that opportunity when he circulated a petition and started a local option fight, first of the many prohibition battles I took part in until we wrote it in the law of the land. I have always been grateful to the editor (who was also my father) for teaching me to fight in a just cause, even though we lost money, and were often in the minority.

I love the Methodist Church because it was while standing at a Methodist altar that I received the blessing of holiness, when a vision of the Cross and the multitudes of China led me to say "Yes" to God and he sealed my decision with fire. I have been helped by other holiness churches, but my greatest encouragements to seek and live and preach holiness have come from the people of my own church. It was Methodist young people whose lives and testimony led me to seek until I found. Lela^h Torrey of sainted memory, Archie Butters who explained it to me, and they and other Epworth League officers put me early into "work which kept faith sweet and strong" during my first year at college.

It was a Methodist preacher of the old school who trusted me for my board and room one year in college when I thought I must quit, and it was he who encouraged me to join conference, though I thought I was too young, and had been told so.

It was a Methodist district superintendent, Dr. John Oliver, who gave me a trial when no one else would have me, appointing me to a circuit in the cattle country, and who recommended me the following year to the conference. The preaching of holiness was taboo in those days, but neither he nor any of the other men under whom I have worked since on two sides of the Pacific have ever tried to keep me from preaching holiness. Whenever the subject was mentioned, though we did not always agree on terms or details, they encouraged me to witness and preach and lead people into the experience of God which led me into the ministry and to China. Except by that first Conference relations committee, I have never been discriminated against because I was a holiness preacher, and at times I have been favored above others, and above what I felt I deserved.

I love Methodism because of its literature. The man who encouraged me to join conference loaned me books, and since then my heart has travelled the roads of England with Wesley, and the "Long Road" with Asbury, and I have been enamoured ever since with Wesley's Sermons, Adam Clarke's commentaries, Bishop Taylor's campaigns in California, Australia, India, and Africa, with Arthur's "Tongue of Fire," with Inskip and Wood, with Oldham and Warne, with Morrison and Smith and Stanley Jones. Thank God for this church with a glorious past. Thank God for its true men today.

I love the Methodist Church because of its possibilities for the future. I believe we will still fulfil the function for which God raised us up. There are praying people everywhere, there are some in each of our churches. The faithful preachers are raising up recruits and the leaders are only too glad to get them. Unbelief is not doing this, so the future is with those who remain true to the things which have made Methodism glorious.

These are the reasons why I love the Methodist Church. All this might truthfully be said of other churches by their members, but this has been my experience with Methodism for thirty-five years. My loyalty is not clouded by recognition of her faults and by fears of her failings, for these are tempered by the fact that here I found the Lord, and here he made me his own and called me to his service, so if I criticise, I will do it in love.

"For her my tears shall fall:

For her my prayers ascend:

To her my cares and toils be given ;

Till toils and cares shall end."

Methodist Mission, Nanchang, China.

The Lost Traveler.

It is related of a lost traveler that when he was near the point of perishing on the desert sands, he cast his eyes down and saw a small bag. Hoping to find water or dates, he quickly alighted from his camel, and eagerly seizing the bag tore it open. "God pity me!" he exclaimed, "it is only pearls!"

By nature all men are lost, wandering through the dreary, dangerous Desert of Sin. But there are fountains of Living Water, from which if they drink they will not perish.

One of the many Scripture passages representing man's lost condition is, "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way." "Gone astray!" Lost! But this glorious fact is also announced, that the good Shepherd came "to seek and to save that which was lost." Blessed intelligence indeed! But we must be willing to be saved on the good Shepherd's own conditions—to be lead by Him out of the Desert of Sin.

WHEN THE SERPENT STRIKES.

By J. F. Michael, Ph.B.

"Surely the serpent will bite without enchantment."—Eccl. 10:11.

THE subject, "When the serpent strikes," struck me as being pertinent from a sermon point of view. Such an article appeared in a recent issue of The Texas Outlook written by Mr. T. C. Reed. Mr. Reed's object was to impart preventive information. We know the result if bitten by a rattlesnake. Hence, the information he gave is timely. In view of this fact I wish to bring this thought over into another sphere, viz: the spiritual. Whether we will it or not the human family has had much to do with the old serpent. The serpent is not only vicious but interesting as well.

NOTE HIS UNIQUE CHARACTERISTICS.

He is noted for his rapid locomotion. And graceful is his movement too. On land or water, in the earth or up a tree, he is equally rapid. Some are so rapid that they are called racers—blue racers.

He is noted for his peculiar mysteries. The snake charmer, or enchanter, can tell us much about his peculiarities. No other creature in all the world quite like him. His power to charm is beyond question. I recall having seen a little bird scared out of its wits, and apparently it could not move an inch. Can he charm human beings? I do not know, nor do I possess a disposition to ascertain.

He is noted for his beauty. I never shall forget one bright spring morning the rattler that crossed the road ahead of me. Its beauty was almost inexpressible. Evidently he had just cast away his old suit, and now going abroad all dressed up for another year. This reminds us of the fact that the curse did not divest him of all attractiveness. He stands out almost unique in this particular. The sad thing about it is that old Satan has capitalized much of the beauties of this life. He cares but precious little about what we actually call homely. He wants the most attractive, and he usually gets it.

He is noted for his remarkable wisdom. Satan recognized this when he set out to ruin the human family. He selected the most subtle creature of all the field, and that creature was the serpent. And I dare say he retains that subtlety unto this day.

He is noted for his deadly bite. Nature has highly endowed him with a most fearful protective, and he makes use of it on the least provocation. I call to mind a certain little fellow bitten by a big rattler. That snake was so enraged that he followed the child for a second attack which proved fatal. The child had done the snake no harm, but the snake true to his nature sent his poison through the child's body, and wrought his death. Truly the serpent strikes without enchantment.

HIS PLACE IN WORSHIP.

Not that God gave him a place in our worship. No, not by any means. But the human race by virtue of its relationship to the Devil has worshipped many things, and the serpent has played no small part in this awful tragedy. In China, Japan, Syria, Mexico, North and Central America the serpent is rich in religious symbolism. The North American Indian snake dance is an annual affair well known to many. Temples of worship have been erected and dedicated to the serpent. Doubtless he is one of the most dreaded and one of the most revered creatures the pagan world encounters. Indeed with many people to kill a snake is to provoke the wrath of the gods. The modernist that goes about preaching that man is inevitably religious is absolutely correct, but let us not be blind to the fact that man has spent much time worshipping at the devil's shrine. Sad to say that much of our worship even in this enlightened day is purely paganistic. Genuine reverence and Bible consecration are lost arts to many modern church folk.

THE SERPENT A TOOL OF SATAN.

When Moses and Aaron stood before the Egyptian Magicians (Ex. 7:12) the Devil thought he would stage a good one by converting rods into moving serpents, but imagine (if you can) his bewilderment when Aaron's rod turns into a serpent and swallows down the magic snakes. The devil has been using magic all these millenniums. No wonder he has the world hoodwinked.

Let us remember that the snake is no bed-fellow, that he is a dangerous playmate, and that he strikes without enchantment. Several years ago a pentecostal preacher was conducting revival services near Cardwell, Mo., and in order to prove to the people that he had the baptism of the Holy Ghost he put on some snake performances. He handled the snake quite successfully; and to show that a certain sister also had the baptism of the Holy Ghost he gave her the snake. It bit her. The doctor was three miles away, but arrived in time to save the woman's life. She would have died, for the serpent was the most poisonous, being a copper-head. Needless to say this broke up the meeting for the doctor cursed them out, and the preacher left the community. Any preacher that makes use of the devil's tool will end up badly.

THE SERPENT'S FIRST STRIKE.

The first strike the serpent made wrought the downfall of the first Adam and of his entire race (Gen. 3:1-6). From that bright dawn until the present hour he has been striking at mankind. How true the Book—the serpent's head has bruised the heel of man. He has left his slimy trail across the ages. In Adam the first we all die. Where is there a family that Satan's dark curtain of night has not overshadowed? His activities serve as a cold shivering shroud that cuts out light and hope from the millions of seeking souls that long for release from his satanic power. He first struck right at the heart of man, then man's home, the state, the nation, and the world. His work everywhere is literally chaotic. The serpentine hiss has fallen upon the ear of every other creature whether it be beast, fowl, or human being. His venom sting flows with rapidity through the veins of society. Look where you may and you can see the sinful products of the serpent's strike.

THE SERPENT'S LAST STRIKE.

While it is indeed true the serpent's head has bruised the heel of man; it is also true that the heel of man shall bruise the head of the serpent. God said the seed of the woman would do it. That seed is Jesus Christ—the second Adam, in whom we live, move and have our spiritual being. After Christ's baptism he was led by the Spirit into the wilderness where he encountered the serpent. (Matt. 4:1-17). On that occasion Satan went down in defeat. Though he lost the battle he continues to strike, and will continue until the end of the grace age. In the twentieth chapter of Revelation St. John tells us that an angel came down from heaven and laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years—during the glorious reign—the Millennium that the saints anxiously await. At the close of the Millennium he is loosed out of prison, during which time he will re-organize his forces and attack the camp of the saints. But sin-avenging fire descends upon Satan's subjects and devours them all, after which the Devil that deceived them shall be cast, not into a pit as at first, but into the lake of fire and brimstone to be tormented day and night for ever and ever. Having struck his last blow, he, as all others that go the way of sin and rebellion against God, must inevitably meet his Waterloo. He strikes no more.

THE GREAT PHYSICIAN.

Naturally, when a serpent strikes one we call the nearest physician. That is the sensible thing to do. However, some religious fanatics refuse to govern themselves thus, and always suffer the consequence. Back in the days of Moses the fiery serpents bit the children of Israel and they died in consequence thereof. God directed Moses to make and put upon a pole a brazen serpent, and all that looked upon it were healed. St. John says, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man (Jesus) be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." (John 3:14, 15). Jesus is the great Physician that can heal the world's ills if called while it is yet day. Reader, if you are not a Christian why delay calling the great Physician to heal your wounded soul of Satan's venom sting? Call him while you have strength and the right exercise of your mind. Don't delay your salvation for that is the most important question confronting you. This is the prayer of your humble servant—the author.

Grace Before Meals.

The same grace repeated time after time often becomes so commonplace and mechanical that we are prone to forget its real meaning. "Grace Before Meals," is not the product of one mind, but the assembled expressions of many devout servants of God. There is an appropriate grace for every day in the year. This little book has been used very effectively in teaching the different members of the family to say grace. It contains 167 pages, is neatly printed and bound. Price 50c.

Denuded and Deluded Mothers.

J. Q. SWIM.

"As is the mother, so is the daughter."— (Ezek. 16:44).

I was sitting on the stone steps of the Kansas State Bank waiting for the doors of the bank to be opened for business. A number of mothers, ladies, and maidens, passed and repassed the bank during those fifteen minutes, dressed in various garbs of cost and color. But, by a vast majority of those who passed by, there seemed to have been a serious mistake made by some one; either the one who had purchased the goods, or the dress-maker who had tried to form the cloth into a dress, or the one who was trying to wear the garment; for the dress seemed to have been cut according to the cloth, and made for a small child; or the mother, or the daughter, might have made the mistake, and put on her little sister's dress that she wore before her school age.

At least, those were some of the thoughts that came to my mind, while looking upon the living scene. Among the number of maidens that passed by was one particular young maiden about eighteen years of age. She was of a fine physique, beautiful, cultured, refined, intelligent-looking, but bold and forward in her appearance. She was dressed, or partly so, in a plain black satin, or satinet, that fit neatly to a part of her body; her head and neck and arms, and nearly all of her shoulders, were naked; her breast was bare below common decency; her limbs were covered with flesh-colored hose and exposed above the knees; her dress skirt did not come to the knees; the length of the dress, including waist and skirt, was not over twenty-four inches from the top to the bottom. To behold such a picture as this on the streets, in broad daylight, in a city of civic righteousness, schools, churches, Sunday schools and Christian homes, is enough to make an angel weep. Forty years ago, if a mother or a maiden had appeared on the street of any town or city in such attire they would have been put under arrest on sight, and put behind the bars, where she would rightfully belong. Such exposure of the female body is a disgrace of civic righteousness; it is a slur on Christian womanhood; it is a betrayal of the Church of Jesus Christ; it is an outward manifestation of unbelief and atheism; it is one of the signs of the apostasy of the church, and the coming of the Lord; it is the climax of the curse, and the downfall of this nation. Who are to blame? There is more than one cause, of course. But the chief and leading cause is a lack of parental authority, systematic order, and prayer in the home. The second cause is a lack of backbone, manhood, conscience, and the Holy Ghost, behind the pulpit and in the pew. Unless this subject is taken up by pulpit and pew, in co-operation with the home, and agitated, and brought before civic authority, court, judges and the church, we, as a free people, will not only lose our civil liberties, but our social and religious freedom, and God will write on our state walls, and our church walls, and our home walls, "Ichabod"—the glory has departed.

There must be a complete and perfect separation between the state and the church, between God and mammon, between worldliness and the service of God, between holy service and the service of the world. The modern institutional church building may have been hatched in the incubator cranium, and for a pure purpose, but to say the least of it, it certainly savors closely on the border of worldly fashion and worldly gain and ambition, and its various annexes are principally patronized by church members and people who know nothing about the "Born Again" experience. Dwight L. Moody once said, "I believe that there are a great many Christians who are what might be called 'Haran Christians';" that is to say, they go to Haran, and there they stay; they only half obey; they are not out-and-out Christians; they are halting between two opinions, holding back part of the price. The first call that came to Abraham to go into the land of Canaan was while he dwelt in Ur of the Chaldees. In obedience of this Divine command, he started. His father's family accompanied him as far as Haran; here they stopped. Remember, Haran was not in Canaan. They had gone only part of the way. But Terah, Abram's father, and his household, served other gods; that explains it all; going to Canaan meant giving up all, forsaking all, making a complete surrender and consecrating all to God. This they were not willing to do. They sought to unite the worship of the true God with carnality and idolatry, and as a result, like the children of Israel at Kadesh-barnea, where they rebelled, and their carcasses fell in the wilderness. So to be a Haran Christian is really and sadly to miss obtaining the promise of God, and to lose our spiritual inheritance. To be a Haran Christian is a compromise, a clinging to pet sins, some darling indulgence, a half-way surrender, a mingling of the true with the false, a vain effort to worship God and mammon, a mixing up together the fraternal, the social, the amusement, the movie, the parlor entertainment, and the religion of the world, and the religion of the Bible together. This cannot be done, and retain a Bible "Born Again" experience. Sweet water and bitter water cannot come from the same fountain, or grapes grown on thorn bushes; we cannot be true soldiers under two flags. The food of Canaan will not come with the fleshpots of Egypt. There is no concord between Christ and Belial; you cannot follow the foolish fashion of the world and follow in the footsteps of Jesus, even in a "Born Again" experience. Listen to the words of the Master: "So, likewise, whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple" (Luke 14:33). No holding on to the world with one hand, and trying to hold on to God with the other. God requires nothing less than giving up all, in a state of a "Born Again" experience. It is Heaven or hell.

Other prolific causes are the moving-picture show, the jazz dance, and the reading of false, impure and lewd literature, as found in many of the current magazines and novels of the day. This literature, like a creeping paralysis, has crept into public libraries, railroad depots, on the palace car, our palace hotels, cafe restaurants, show-windows, church parlors, religious reading rooms, rest rooms, the parlor of our homes, and even some holiness homes, so called. It is even permitted now, by men in high authority, to enter our mail matters with all of its virus poison. And even some of our noted and classical ministers attend the star theatrical performances, to find out the secret of drawing the mass of young people to the church. It needs no philosophy to answer that secret; cut out all real prayer and religious experimental testimony, and introduce in its place suppers, and theatrical performances, in the name of religion, and you certainly have carpeted the path that leads to the house not of prayer, but of play, amusement, sin and damnation.

The public demands, and is crazy for, such literature as referred to above, or it would not be placed on the market. We might sow the United States knee-deep in religious literature, and tell the mass of the people to help themselves free of all cost, and the most of them would wade through it and buy the impure lewd stuff. Any real Christian knows the reading of such literature is more demoralizing than the open saloon; to eradicate this craze and passion for such literature is going to take more than white paper and black ink. It is going to take more than religious associations and clubs. It is going to take something more than high school training and education. It is going to take more than the reform societies and ethical instruction. This craze for the reading of such lewd literature was born from the very center of hell, and to reconstruct it, it will of absolute necessity, have to be born from Heaven. And it has to begin and be incubated in the very heart and breast of the mother, and mothers that know how to pray and prevail with God, and to make a success of it, it will have to be supported and backed up by praying fathers, and praying preachers, and praying evangelists, and praying Sunday school superintendents, and by praying Sunday school teachers, and by a praying pew. It must begin with the people of God. It will take more than a generation to see much of the fruit of your labors; this generation will never be reformed; we have entered the cycle of apostasy, and there awaits us nothing but the judgment of a righteous and just God. Our Sunday morning secular papers, delivered, in too many instances, by our Sunday school boys, and very frequently by the boys of religious homes, and sometimes by the children of holiness parents, are doing more to damn our fathers, mothers, and Sunday school children than most of our preachers are doing to save them. How many of our ministers would dare to unchurch their members on account of receiving and reading the Sunday paper issues? And how many of our religious mothers, that take their children to Sunday school, punish and correct their children for looking at the funny and foolish pictures in the Sunday issues?

In these days of modernized theology and modernized regeneration and modernized sanctification, it is almost impossible for any religious press to publish and sustain any religious paper, magazine or journal, without entering the domain of questionable literature or questionable advertisements. No one can give a pen picture of the awful influence that the reading of immoral and lewd literature has on the heart, mind and conscience. The influence of such vile literature is invariably and inevitably deadening and damning to the innocence and moral purity of boys and girls who read such stuff. It is more deadening on the moral conscience than alcoholic drinks or poisonous cigarettes. It is astounding to find such filth in the homes of good church people. God created man in his own image for defending and protecting childhood from such debasing, demoralizing association, that they might be taught in ways of cleanness, righteousness and purity.

For a father or a mother to neglect this is a far greater sin than for the heathen mother to throw her babe into the mouth of the alligator in the river Ganges. Oh, that God might wake us up, and give us spiritual mothers that would be more interested in the purity and the salvation of the souls of their children, than they are in the political affairs, commercialism, or the pleasure and fashion of the world: "Lest he come and smite the earth with a curse." (Matt. 4:6).

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

By J. F. HARVEY.

PART II.

HAVING noticed the nature of true scriptural testimony, we now shall emphasize the necessity of, and faithfulness in that testimony. No one can live in the enjoyment of holiness who does not embrace the opportunity to tell what the Lord has done for his soul. He must testify for his own soul's good, and also for the good of other souls. A truly saved soul feels the urge to be a witness for his Lord, and he says:—

"Then will I tell to sinners round,
What a dear Saviour I have found;
I'll point to his redeeming blood,
And cry, Behold the way to God."

They who would repress or in any way discourage Christian testimony do great injury to the spiritual life of the individual, as well as obstructing the spread of salvation to other souls. "Smothered fire goes out, but live coals, exposed to and swept by the winds of heaven, will glow and kindle into flame. It is so with experimental grace. Lock it up in the heart, seal the lips, palsy the tongue, repress emotion, and the inevitable consequence will be the extinguishment of the Spirit's fire." So let the testimonies to the saving and sanctifying power of blood of Jesus roll on in meekness, and love, and godly fear. And let those preachers and leaders beware how they speak against or discourage such testimony. "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God." It is God's order, it is the divine plan, and we cannot be true to God unless we witness for him in verbal testimony.

The people of God are often called upon to give witness for him amid unfavorable conditions. They are called to let their light shine in dark places. Especially after being sanctified they find that they are to follow Jesus and endure the scorn, the reproach, the misrepresentation and loneliness that fell to him. Many, when they get into these unfavorable surroundings, cease to testify, or tone down their testimony until it means nothing, and thus escape the reproach that is always connected with the clear and definite testimony to holiness. This is a subtle temptation of Satan to rob the soul of victory, and to rob other souls of the benefit of the testimony to full salvation.

Clear testimony to entire sanctification as a second work of grace has ever been attended by more or less reproach and persecution. From apostolic days down to this present modernistic day it is a shame to give testimony to the sanctifying blood of Jesus. When Jesus said to his disciples—"Ye shall be my witnesses," he used the Greek word Martures, from which comes our English word "Martyrs." This teaches us that Christian testimony must often be given with sacrifice. Not always may we give testimony in the midst of those who say "Amen" to the testimony. There will be times when we will fail in loyalty to Jesus Christ if we do not witness in the face of scorn, hatred and opposition. A scriptural witness is to be a martyr whenever necessary.

The Lord's people may talk about fundamentals, discuss theory, and speculate all they please about salvation, and stir up no reproach. But when they turn to be witnesses and declare that the living, personal Holy Ghost has wrought within them a divine work through the blood of Jesus Christ, whereby they are saved from all sin and made holy in heart and life, then Satan and all the powers of hell arise to oppose and discredit such testimony.

Nothing on earth brings opposition like testifying to the sanctifying power of the blood of Jesus, and that such an experience is received as a second and divine work of grace. It has ever been so. Abel was killed for bearing testimony to the blood. Joseph was sold as a slave by his brethren because of his testimony. Jesus was crucified, not alone for being holy, but for testifying that he was God's Son. The apostles were beaten, stoned and imprisoned because of their testimony for Jesus. Madame Guyon was tormented and afflicted, abused and imprisoned for years, all because she lived a holy life in the midst of an unholy ecclesiasticism, and gave testimony to the power of Jesus to cleanse from all sin. The Romish Inquisition killed millions of Protestants because they witnessed to a salvation by faith.

It is encouraging to note that God has never been without his witnesses upon the earth. God has his saints in all ages, and while you and I may never be called upon to witness for him in the face of physical suffering and martyrdom, yet true testimony always includes that element. There are other kinds of martyrdom than physical, and he who would be true to scriptural holiness must possess the martyr spirit. These are days of moral and religious degeneracy. Days of multiplied crime and wickedness in high as well as low places; days of hypocrisy, untruthfulness, shallow profession of holiness; days of impiety and iniquity of the vilest sort. Social life is rotten to the core. The churches are packed with masses of unregenerated souls. There is no line of demarcation between the church and the world. As in the olden days, "The prophets prophesy falsely and the priests bear rule by their means, and my people love to have it so." Truly it is a day of spiritual degeneracy, decay and death. But what a day for clear, definite testimony to the saving and sanctifying blood of Jesus. What a glorious opportunity is afforded to the holy people in this day. Paul and Silas witnessed for Jesus and were beaten and imprisoned, but God gave them songs in the night and a revival in the prison. When the apostles refused to obey the order of the council to not speak in the name of Jesus, they were beaten and again commanded to not speak in his name, and being let go "They departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name."

God's holy people should count it all joy when they are called upon to be witnesses for their divine Lord even in the face of unbelief, scorn and ridicule. The more perilous the times, the heavier the reproach, the fewer the witnesses, the greater the need of faithful testifiers. We can comfort ourselves with the knowledge that as God has had his witnesses in the most apostate days, so he will have to the end those faithful ones who will not kiss their hands or bow their knees to the idolatry or formalism of their times.

Then, saints of God, go on and be true to the blood that sanctifies wholly and thus saves from all sin. Walk in holiness and humbly, sweetly, faithfully tell what Jesus has done for your soul. Let the mockers mock, and the scorners scorn. Some day it will all be forgotten like a dream. Some day we shall see him who has redeemed us from our sins, and has washed us in his most precious blood; we shall look upon the visage that was "so marred more than any man," and yet, to the saints of God, the beautiful face of him who is the fairest among ten thousand and the one altogether lovely. In that day we will join our voices with the multitude which no man can number, in the testimony of the eternal ages:—"Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb.—Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God forever and ever.—For thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation; and hast made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign upon the earth." Hallelujah!

His infinite concern for us is in a measure represented by the following incident: A daughter wandered away from home and plunged into a life of sin and shame. But a loving mother traveled for many years all over the country, through dismal streets and dark alleys, in search of the lost one, sacrificing her all and life itself in the eager but fruitless search.

Thus Jesus forsook his all above, and sacrificed his life for the poor, lost traveler through the perilous wilderness of sin.

We are all either lost or saved travelers to the far-off country. To which class do you belong? Men need not be in hell to be lost. Millions are lost on earth. It is only a little time until a change of locality will take place. What you perhaps need most of all to realize is that you are lost! Until you do, you will evade the seeking Shepherd. Oh, begin to pray that God may show you your lost condition!

Many persons who are not Christians realize, however, in a degree, that they are lost. This ought to be sufficient to manifest some concern for their souls.

Just a little while before she died, a lady said: "If I had been as much interested in my soul as I was in the world, I might now be saved."

A young man with whom the Holy Spirit often strove, cried out, "The Spirit of God is leaving me, never to return! Oh, I am lost! forever lost!"

Dear lost soul, may you soon be able to say:

"Amazing grace! how sweet the sound
That saved a wretch like me!
I once was lost, but now am found—
Was blind, but now I see."

A. W. ORWIG.

Prayer and Fervency.

Teresa died of hard work and worry and shameful neglect, almost to sheer starvation. But she had meat to eat that we know not of. And strong in the strength of that spiritual meat, Teresa rose off her death bed to finish her work. She inspected with all her quickness of eye and love of order the whole of the house into which she had been carried to die. She saw everything put into its proper place, and every one answering to their proper order, after which she attended the divine offices of the day, and then went back to her bed and summoned her daughters around her.

"My children," she said, "you must pardon me much: you must pardon me most of all for the bad example I have given you. Do not imitate me. Do not live as I have lived. I have been the greatest sinner in all the world. I have not kept the laws I made for others. I beseech you my daughters for the love of God to keep the rules of your Holy Houses as I have not kept them."

"The hour I have so long looked for has surely come at last. The time has surely come that we shall see one another. My Lord and Savior, it is surely time for me to be taken out of this banishment and be forever with Thee." The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit, and a broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise. Cast me not away from Thy presence, and take not Thy Holy Spirit away from me. Create in me a clean heart, O God." "A broken and a contrite heart; a broken and a contrite heart" was her continual cry till she died with these words on her lips, "A broken and a contrite heart thou wilt not despise." And thus with the most penitential of David's penitential Psalms in her mouth, and with the holy candle of her church in her hand, Teresa of Jesus, went forth from her banishment to meet her Bridegroom.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

THE ASBURY FOREIGN MISSIONARY TEAM.

A new and interesting development in the field of missionary evangelism is being undertaken by one of the Methodist Evangelical League Gospel Teams. The former Asbury Gospel Team, composed of Erny, Crouse and Kirkpatrick has changed its name to the Asbury Foreign Missionary Team and is planning a year's evangelistic tour of Japan and Korea.

The work in the Orient will be of the nature of the gospel tent meetings conducted in this country. A new 50x80 tent has been provided by the Methodist Evangelical League and is already on its way. The Asbury College, class of '25, is supplying another section to the tent which will make its dimensions 50x120, with a seating capacity of about one thousand. Revivals will be conducted under this tent when the weather permits, and in church buildings during the winter seasons.

The boys expect to be associated with the Nakodos in Japan, and Robert Chung in Korea. Herald readers are well acquainted with the wonderful way in which God has blessed Chung's work in Korea, as seven thousand souls were saved and sanctified in one year's time. We earnestly pray that God will richly bless these young men and grant them an abundant harvest of souls in foreign lands.

They solicit your prayers and interest. Any communication to them may be addressed to 5709 Midway Park, Chicago.

J. L. GLASCOCK'S REPORT.

August 7, Dr. C. W. Butler, President of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness, called us by long distance phone to ascertain if we could be with him August 8 to 18 in the Findlay, O., camp meeting to take the place of an evangelist who had failed to fill his appointment. Having an engagement with another camp meeting we were obliged to decline Dr. Butler's invitation for the whole time for Findlay, but so arranged as to give him three days till he could get on the ground.

When we reached the Findlay camp we found that the local pastors had been doing the preaching till we arrived there. Because of the disappointment the people felt by the engaged evangelist not coming to them, the work was a little slow in starting, but after it got going the Spirit of God came upon the people, and there was much importunate praying and not a little of old-fashioned shouting, while seekers were at the altar and some prayed through. Professor N. B. Vandall was in charge of the service of song and did his part well. Also the Farmers' Quartette rendered several numbers which caused the people to rejoice and shout. With this auspicious opening we found it difficult to close our work at that camp.

From Findlay we returned home and attended to some things claiming our attention and then hastened on to Kearney, Neb., for our next camp meeting. When we arrived there we found that the people had experienced a dire drought which caused almost an entire failure of crops, and in Kearney there had recently been two bank failures which caused many of the camp meeting folks serious financial loss. However, the camp meeting board and their constituency took hold of the situation in a heroic way and saw to it that the high financial standard of other years was not lowered so as to cause their workers any financial loss.

Evangelist Jarrette Aycock and his good wife and daughter were our efficient and congenial colleagues in the work. He alternated with us in the preaching, assisted his wife some in the service of song and raised the finances. His daughter was the efficient pianist. Mrs. Aycock also assisted Miss Lola Hughes in the Children's Meeting, delivering some very significant object lessons. The work of salvation was a little slow starting, but went well after it got going. At least one hundred testified to having been converted, reclaimed, or purified. Twenty-seven different seekers were at the altar in the closing service and without exception professed to have received what they had sought. Altogether it was a successful meeting and especially so when all of the unfavorable circumstances were taken into account. Brothers Patterson and Hughes were instant in season and out of season in promoting the work, and seemed greatly pleased with the successful meeting we had.

We are now in correspondence with people for fall and winter meetings, and expect soon to be afield again. Persons desiring to correspond with us relative to dates should address us, 1305 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio. J. L. Glascock.

TARPON SPRINGS, FLORIDA.

To those that are interested in the Mission work among the Greeks, Greetings, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, our Saviour. We thought it would be interesting for us to send you a bit of news of the work that we have started among the Greek people of Tarpon Springs, Fla. It is a pioneer mission field among the Greek people in this country. We are trying to evangelize among these people as we are the only ones of the Evangelical Faith to do mission work in this town.

We are appointed by the Southern Methodist Church General Board of Missions to this place, but there has not been made any provisions for a chapel or a hall or any place to hold a meeting except through the great heartedness of Dr. H. C. Morrison who has loaned us one of his Gospel Tents to hold services under and also under which we just closed a revival meeting where many people were saved, and many of the Greek people have attended our meetings. At the beginning of the revival they were very much interested in the Gospel until the Priest has forbidden them to attend the meetings and threaten to excommunicate them or turn them out of the church, and absolutely forbade them to come to the services. Many of them have stood without the tent from night to night, except when it was raining, and have listened with great interest. There were about twenty-four that put up their hands and asked for prayer; also two young men of Greek descent were saved. There have also been a great many American people saved and blessed because of this revival.

We are very much in need of a tabernacle and equipment so we will be able to do the work that we are sent out to do. The first thing that we desire is, that you pray for us, and the second thing that if you have any tithe money and desire to put it in a place to bring a hundred percent dividend in the Kingdom of God we shall be glad and shall appreciate if you will send us some, so we can build this chapel before the cold weather sets in.

In the Master's Service,

Rev. Paul John Pappas.

P. S.—Brother Pappas is an Asbury boy, a graduate of the College, and is thoroughly worthy and reliable. His address is 543 Grand Blvd., Tarpon Springs, Fla. Some of us have tithes we shall want to send him. Mrs. H. C. M.

WOLFE CITY, TEXAS.

Rev. Harry S. Allen, of Macon, Ga., conducted a two-weeks' revival here and to say it was a success is putting it very mildly. The fact is, it was one of the greatest revivals ever held here and we have had some great revivals in the past with such notable evangelists as Dr. George Truett, John B. Andrews, Thurston Price, B. B. Crimm, Alonzo Monk, Jr., and others too numerous to mention, among them Frank Norris; but with all of these Brother Allen compares favorably in his preaching and is one of the most lovable men it has ever been my privilege to know. The people here fell in love with him from the very start. He is filled with a burning desire to see the church revived and to reach the unsaved. He is absolutely untiring in his work and the salvation of souls is first with him. I say without the least hesitancy that Evangelist Allen is one of the very best with whom I have ever been associated. We saw him leave with keen regret for, it seemed the meeting was just getting under good headway. We had the largest congregations for years and the attendance constantly increased. You cannot make a mistake to have, and get behind Brother Allen wholeheartedly.

W. R. Sharpe.

RAMSEY, INDIANA, CAMP MEETING.

This was the twenty-fifth annual camp meeting of the Ramsey camp. For location, grounds, and equipment it is in the front rank of camps; for constituency, it is supported by as fine people as one will find. There are more old veterans of the cross in this camp than the average camp meeting. The alarming thing is that so few young men and women are being gathered in to take the place of those who are being transported to the skies. Rev. J. E. Gray, of Greenville, Ind., a Methodist pastor, is the good president, and George Pinaire is the efficient secretary, and C. L. Davis is the treasurer, and they are assisted by a fine board of directors. The camp meeting is attended by all denominations, and strictly an interdenominational camp.

The workers this year were Rev. C. B. Jernigan, of Nashville, Tenn., and J. B. McBride, of Pasadena, Calif., evangelists, and that notable and efficient song evangelist of national reputation, Rev. C. C. Rinebarger as director of music. There are no better in the land than he. He gets better with passing of years. Brother Rinebarger is moving to Henryette, Okla., to take charge of the Nazarene Church in that city. Miss Ada Shutts, of Wilmore, a graduate from Asbury College, presided at the piano and rendered splendid service. Sister J. E. Gray, wife of the president, had charge of the children's service and did a wonderful work among the children. She is a splendid worker anywhere she is placed. The dining hall and cooking departments were under the supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Davis, and it is a common saying among all who ate at the dining hall that their meals are unsurpassed by any camp meeting, and at the nominal price of 25 cents a meal on week days, and 35 cents for Sunday dinner; they have chicken, not only on Sunday, but on other days they have them now and then. Every one asked, "How can they do it?" They have done it for many years, and they must come out alright. Taking a suggestion from Brother Rinebarger last year, the camp meeting directors had new bedsteads, springs, new mattresses, and coverings put in the workers' cottage, and now the workers can rest well at night. Brother Rinebarger is always thinking of some improvements that can be made, so this year he raised the money personally, among friends, to buy a nice range stove for the kitchen.

Rev. C. B. Jernigan and the writer grew up in the same county in Texas and have been acquainted and good friends, and having met in many conventions and heard each other preach yet, this was our first full meeting together, though we started almost the same time in the work. He is a preacher of no mean ability, and a delightful evangelist to work with. We did have a time together until the morning of the sixth day when he and his family, who were with him, had to leave for Oklahoma City to attend a major operation on their eldest son who was not expected to recover. Then I had to do double duty for the rest of the camp meeting. I hope that we may some time have another meeting together. His two daughters rendered valuable service in song and on their violins and won the hearts of the people. Misses Johnnie and Margaret Jernigan are at the top in music, and are wonderful singers as well. People attended for many miles, and one family from Illinois. Brother James, of New Albany, Brother Rinebarger's father-in-law, was in attendance part of the time pushing the battle with all his might. Having been five times at this camp in fifteen years we will say that we have enjoyed it and have been treated splendidly, and leave a host of friends. God bless old Ramsey camp. J. B. McBride.

GRADYVILLE, KENTUCKY.

I am asking space in your valuable paper to make a report of a meeting held at Price's Chapel, one of my churches, in which four young people, students of Asbury College, were helpers, as follows: Rev. Paul Huyett, pastor Woodford Charge, Kentucky Conference; Rev. Isaac Scudder, who is taking his course for admission into the Kentucky Conference. These young men did the preaching to the delight of all who heard them. Their messages were inspiring and helpful, preaching the old-time gospel which is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth. We predict for them a great future in the work of the kingdom, and pray that God's blessings shall be upon them in all their efforts to do his will.

We also had with us the Latham Sisters—Miss Mary and Joy—who had charge of the music and singing, and who did splendid work among the young people. These young ladies with their great messages in song and prayer and exhortation, made a lasting impression upon our people. The services at the tent, and the fellowship and association which they had with our people has done much to restore confidence in the neglected doctrine of holiness. The Latham Sisters are members of the Nazarene Church. This party was sent out by the Methodist Evangelical League, and we trust this work shall go on till the doctrine of full salvation shall be established everywhere. We heartily recommend this party to any one in need of help in revival work. They are sound on the old-time Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification, preaching it with power and unction. There were about twenty conversions and sanctifications in this meeting, and some uniting with the church. Yours for a full salvation,

E. C. Smith, P. C.

JUST A LITTLE REPORT.

God has been very good to us the past year and given us souls in many states. I have been going at a pretty fast gait since March. In April and May I labored in the sunny south, which took me to New Orleans, for the first time, and also Miami, Fla. I returned from those strange but beautiful scenes to Asbury College Commencement, then off to the great camp meeting in Cincinnati, then to Barboursville, W. Va., Donnellson, Ill., and on to Lisbon, N. Y., where we held a great tent meeting and organized the Lisbon Camp Meeting Holiness Association with fifty-two charter members. In drafting the constitution I made it obligatory that in order to become a member one must be at least eighteen years of age, saved and a believer in holiness as taught by St. Paul and John Wesley, and to be elected to office, one must be at least twenty-one years of age, and be sanctified at least one year prior to their election. They have a beautiful camp ground, a big tent and all necessary equipment and contemplate erecting a large tabernacle. The officers are made up of well-to-do farmers, mail carriers, veterinary surgeons and so on. Please to pray for the success of this holiness camp. I have some dates open through the fall, and camp dates for next summer. Write me at Wilmore, Ky.

L. E. Williams.

CITRONELLE, ALABAMA.

We are making report on a meeting held at old Shiloh Camp, Miss., which began on August 3rd, and ran through the 11th. This is one of the old camp grounds of Mississippi. Scores were saved and many united with the church. Rev. T. H. King, pastor of the Methodist Church there, is a princely man and a wonderful yokel. Old citizens of that place told us that this was the best meeting they had had in twenty years. We were asked back for another meeting next year there. One of the special features in the meetings were our vesper services with the young people; we had six to offer for life service for God and many others saved and put going in his field. It was wonderful to see the altar filled night after night with seekers and many were saved at the altar; one night about forty were saved. Many Christians sought the infilling of the Spirit and were wonderfully blessed. God is blessing us and we ask an interest in the prayers of all the readers of The Herald.

We certainly hope this finds Dr. Morrison improving and soon entirely well. With best wishes to The Herald staff, I am, Yours very cordially, Luther A. Horn.

I united with the church, after I had taken the vows, in deep and solemn tone, the pastor exhorted the congregation to do all in its power to perfect me in love. This exhortation was wonderfully significant to a young convert rejoicing in a new-found salvation, and the great mass of the Methodist people lived with this objective set before them, that somewhere, sometime, they would enter into the fulness of the blessing of the gospel, to an experience free from the motions of the carnal nature, and the perfection of the peace and rest of the soul perfected in love. This objective was invaluable. It was a strong guard against relapsing into worldliness and a powerful incentive to "go on to perfection." This great doctrine, this incentive, this bent of the mind to the highest and deeper things of the Spirit, separated Methodists from worldliness, which distinguished them from other denominations of Christians. It gave them a simplicity of life and a religious zeal that made revivals of religion easy; the devout people of other denominations delighted to attend Methodist revivals for the refreshing of their souls. Methodism was a revival; in this spiritual atmosphere great numbers of young men were converted and called to preach who not only filled Methodist pulpits but eventually, many of them went into the pulpits of other denominations.

The old-time revivals were characterized by great preaching. The faith of the people in the inspiration of the Scriptures, the Godhead of Jesus Christ, and the atonement he had made for all men from all sin, was so simple and so genuine that it created an excellent atmosphere for preaching. The foundation of these old-time revivals was laid in powerful preaching. The preachers believed the Bible; they preached law and gospel. Sinai thundered, Gethsemane groaned, Calvary bled, and Pentecost blazed. They made the things of God tremendously real. They preached on sin, the unreasonableness of it, the wickedness of it, and the final ruin and punishment of it. Our Lord Jesus himself did not teach more plainly the existence of hell and the torments awaiting in it for the impenitent, than did the old-time Methodist preacher. The old-time preacher preached of judgment day. He stood up before Sabbath breakers, profane swearers, adulterers and adulteresses, liars and thieves in high and low places and, speaking with authority, dignity, and power of a prophet of God, assured them that they must appear at the judgment seat of God to account for their sins. He warned them that death was certain, that hell awaited them, that their only escape was true repentance and salvation through the death of Jesus Christ obtained by faith.

This sort of preaching not only convicted sinners but it laid a great burden upon the hearts of Christians; it drove them to fasting and prayer. They were made to realize the condition of friends, relatives and neighbors, and they quit their work, turned aside from their pastimes, concentrated their minds and consecrated themselves to the revival, to God, to service. They went about and talked to the people; they prayed in the homes of the people, exhorted and warned the people. The Holy Spirit was with them and on them, and applied their warnings and exhortations. The songs were in harmony with the sermons and the burdened hearts of the Christians. They were great, solemn songs: "Show pity, Lord," "Come, humble Sinner," "Rock of Ages," "Jesus Lover of my Soul," "There is a Fountain Filled with Blood." There was no frolicking on the keyboard of the piano, no short-sleeved, naked-breasted soloist entertaining sinners and disgusting saints. There was an atmosphere of solemnity, of prayer, of holy fear, of repentance. There was a consciousness of the presence of a holy God. Zion travailed, revivals broke out, penitents were born again by the power of the Holy Ghost, believers were sanctified and great hosts of redeemed souls went flocking up the way of eternal life to God and heaven.

UNRULED LIVES.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HERE never was a time when lawlessness in the home and state was more prevalent than now. There is a spirit of wanting to have one's own way from the tiny child to the more mature. Often we read of where children have been chastised and to "get even" with the parent who punished them, they go out and hang themselves, run away, or do something violent and unheard of.

In Isaiah 63:15-19, we have God's people praying for him to return to them and deliver them from their enemies. They plead his help and profess their faith in his power to protect and deliver his people. As an argument for his intervention the church cries out: "We are thine; thou never barest rule over them; (their enemies) they were not called by thy name."

This verse would indicate that the Christian life is one of discipline. It is in the Christian life as it is in the home life—the undisciplined child never brings honor to his parents, nor does the Christian who knows nothing of the Holy Spirit's chastening rod amount to anything in spiritual things. Truly, "no chastening for the time seemeth joyous, but grievous, but afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them who are exercised thereby."

In considering this subject, Ernest B. Allen says:

"There is a vast difference between ruled and unruled men. Our lives reveal the rulers we have deliberately chosen, or those to whom we have weakly surrendered. The unruled man is undisciplined, uncontrolled, unable to work well in harness. All restraint becomes at times irksome. To yield to it cheerfully, accept its training, and follow its laws, requires force of character and repeated action of the will.

"The difference between the Christian and any other man lies in his voluntary acceptance of a great moral discipline. It does not make him a mollicoddle! He can suffer long as Paul affirmed, and be kind. He does not behave himself unseemly, nor seek his own, and is not provoked or puffed up! He can bear, believe, hope, and endure all things! Sooner or later, this inevitably separates him from other men.

"Then he is apt to grow proud and suffer a fall. He reverts to his former estate. He is no longer different from the 'unruled' about him. Rather, he is ruled again from the lower levels of his own nature, by the baser things about him. But a Christian ought to be ruled by the will of God, his Father-friend, and not by his own will. This was the great distinction of Jesus. He did not come to do his own will. He deliberately, repeatedly, chose to do his Father's will—and paid the price. God forbid that we who bear our Lord's name should 'become as they over whom' he never ruled, 'as they that were not called by (his) name!'"

Notice!

A number of persons have written to us asking for the facts about the article "A Miracle in Black," which appeared in THE HERALD of September 4. To any who may wish information relative to this marvelous child, we would advise them to communicate with Rev. C. F. Wimberly, St. George, S. C., the author of the article. The child lives in Jacksonville, Fla., I understand.

Improving.

Dr. Morrison seems to be improving, as there has been a decided change for the better since we wrote of his condition last week. It will take very careful nursing, and great caution on his part to stem the tide of difficulties which he has to overcome before he is able to be up again. His pain has abated and he sleeps and eats fairly well. Keep praying for him, that he may soon be up and able for his western trip to Texas, where he hopes for permanent help for his asthmatic condition.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Catholicity, False and True.

REV. W. EDMUND SMITH.

SINCE science has made this world a whispering-gallery and we have become neighbors to everybody, all must recognize the importance of cultivating the spirit of fraternity and good will between the different racial groups, different religions and different denominations included in the same religion. The slogan "Make way for brotherhood, make way for man!" is upon many lips. We hope for the abolition of the old-time diplomacy of "intrigue" in the comity of nations made possible by a League or a "World Court," in which all international differences and grievances will be scrutinized in the light of justice, and decision rendered accordingly. War shall no longer be an excuse for the employment of a great army and a mighty fleet, developed for the purpose of territorial expansion, more than for the matter of self-protection. The causeis belli must be more than the spleen of some imperious ruler or the wounded dignity of his people. A few years ago the sinking of the "I am alone" would have meant war between America and Britain. Today it has caused only a slight flurry and very little belligerent talk. We are told that the millennium may be brought in by the Federation of churches, in which denominational peculiarities shall be forgotten, doctrinal tenets reduced to a minimum, the federation standing on the eternal principle of goodwill and brotherhood.

We insist that the Spirit of Jesus in the heart must create a greater dread and hatred for war, than did all the horrors of the "world war." Christ was the Prince of Peace, and it was a song of peace the angels sang on the night of his birth. When Christ is born in the heart he brings a song of peace. But Jesus also brought a sword: he was the greatest precipitator of human conflict the world has ever seen. At his birth the sword was unleashed against him; during all his ministry malignant enemies pursued him because he inveigled against their dead ceremonialism and their sanctimonious religiosity. Paul followed in the train of his master as a disturber of the status quo, and so have all those who have caught the heavenly vision. They have individually come into peace through conflict, and have discovered that peace ever comes through waging an aggressive warfare, not with carnal weapons, but with spiritual, against all the powers of darkness. In international issues, the most saintly Christians have not been "peace-at-any-price" men. We think the piety of John Wesley will compare with that of George Fox, yet he urged the early Methodists to take up arms to defend their king. Howell Harris was one of the most saintly men that Wales ever produced, yet he organized a regiment of Christian soldiers to defend the country against the danger of the restoration of the papistical "House of Stuart," and for three years marched with his men, preaching in his regimentals the glorious gospel of redeeming love, God honoring his faith with many trophies won amongst the fighting men. No matter how much we hate war, we all must assent that there are worse things than war; that out of all its horrors God has often brought great good: he has made it the "wrath of man to praise him." And so long as the human heart is so sinful and selfish, we can never hope for permanent peace based on the spirit of utilitarianism, and national and international expediency. When we say peace and safety then will sudden destruction come: Armageddon is still in the future.

We must ever contend for the true catholicity of the spirit of Jesus Christ; still that is never the spirit of expediency, compromise, and surrender of fundamental and vital doctrines so necessary to the propagation of the truth and the establishment of the Spiritual kingdom. Paul might have made a compromise with heathen Rome, had himself appointed High-priest of Christianity and been lionized as a great religious teacher, instead of being reviled as an impostor and sacrificed as a martyr. The great apostle could sacrifice all his Jewish prejudices and all things non-essential, but he was compelled by the power of the Holy Ghost within him, to be true to the fundamental truth, that there was "none other under Heaven given amongst men whereby they must be saved," but through the blood of Jesus Christ, who had been crucified as a result of his own testimony to his full-orbed deity. The battle between different religious groups has ever been around the Cross of Christ—its meaning and the conditions and nature of its efficacy.

In the religious world we have many dangers today that threaten the sacrifice of vital Christianity. We have a denatured and devitalized system, ornamental and impressive in its ceremonial observances and ritualistic regularity, pompous in its hierarchical and ecclesiastical pretensions, yet impotent to regenerate the heart and transform the life, because of its lack of scriptural simplicity and contact with divine power. Ceremonial religion has been successful in winning the devotion of many of the cultured, and of holding in its power a multitude of the lower and ignorant classes, over whom it casts the spell of mystery, grandeur, and traditional authority, but it has never fed or satisfied the soul—the deepest, heart-longings of anyone; and when the revival has come in which individual contact with the Christ has been emphasized as the right and privilege of every individual, then the battle has been on.

But our worst danger is not seen in a pompous ritualistic Roman Catholicism, but in a denatured and devitalized Protestantism, with all the protest taken out, and all its vital power lost in its ignoring or denying the essential principles of our faith which honor Jesus and are honored by the Holy Ghost. The comity of denominations today is not being secured by the triumph of a living faith through which are revealed to the individual the satisfying character of spiritual things—even righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost, but rather through the sacrifice of these experiences that have ever made a great gulf between liberal and evangelical Christians; between Gentile believer and Jewish devotee.

At the risk of being called narrow and reactionary, bigoted and unchristlike, I make my protest against any such unholy compromise. Such compromise may have a show of will-worship and receive the homage and patronage of many high in ecclesiastical authority, who want to see success on a superficial basis, not on the principles of eternal truth and righteousness as set forth in the New Testament and emphasized by the wisest and the best that the Evangelical Christian church has produced. They accept the latitudinarian doctrine that we are all natural children of God; that we can ignore the name of Jesus, and the confession that Jesus demands and the experience which he inculcates; keep all our doctrinal views under our hat as non-essential, and join with Jew and Unitarian, Universalist and Christian Scientist, even with Brahman and Mohammedan in singing a hymn of praise to Allah, to Thor, to the Great Architect of the Universe, or to God. This is what they call catholicity of spirit; the largest spirit of Jesus. If this be the spirit of Jesus, it is far from that spirit which has produced all the spiritual triumphs in the past under Luther, Wesley, Finney, Albright and all the fire-baptized who suffered for the faith and endured hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ. The true Christian is not under the compulsion of narrow prejudices or mere denominational peculiarities, but he is under the compulsion of loyalty to the Holy Ghost who has saved and sanctified him, has given him the perspective of the true orthodoxy, which exalts Christ as Saviour and Lord. Think of Christians giving up the fuller revelation in the New Testament and in Jesus and going back to the Old Testament to read all this scripture ignoring the name of Jesus in prayer, in the presence of those Jews and liberals who deny our Lord and Christ. No wonder the Holy Ghost is grieved and Zion languishes. Those who make such compromise are indifferent to or wholly sceptical concerning the need and efficacy of revivals of religion. They are having what they call a revival of the spirit of Brotherhood which they think will save the world. It has never been successful and never will be. It ignores the actuality of human sinfulness and the adequacy of the Blood of Jesus to meet the deepest need of the sin-sick soul. Any other kind of religion than the Blood religion is only humanitarianism which sacrifices the glory of God to the whims of the people. It teaches another Gospel upon which Paul pronounced a curse, and when he did so he was speaking under the compulsion of love and not bigotry.

But note the catholicity of Paul; he believed the heathen might be saved without hearing the Gospel, providing he walked in all the light that he had. Without the law he might do the things contained in the law, thus evidencing his willingness to receive all the disclosures God would make to his heart. We are compelled to regard the Roman Catholic hierarchy as the most corrupt ecclesiastical machine the devil ever devised, yet we are compelled to believe that within the fold of the Roman Catholic Church the most saintly characters were developed the world has ever known; and this in spite of their teaching and environment. But we believe that great man, who was looking and longing for spiritual authority and unity, and who in the midst of his perplexity wrote "Lead Kindly Light," so much sung and admired by all Evangelicals, was following an Ignus Fatus and not the true light, when he landed in Rome and received a Cardinal's hat. We believe there are many honest and consistent Hindus, but we can have little faith in a great leader who for years heard the gospel, came under its influence in England and America, yet still holds to Hinduism and worships an old cow, and sees in the immoral rites of that religion something better than he sees in the Blood Atonement of Jesus, although he does profess to believe in the Sermon on the Mount. I am broad enough to believe there are some Unitarians who have real faith in Jesus in spite of their emasculated creed, but that will not permit me to unite with all of their kind on a common platform of the universal Fatherhood of God and the universal Brotherhood of Man. Such relationships are established and propagated through spiritual regeneration and sanctification. The Lord knoweth them that are his. Neither a fine orthodoxy devoid of life and love will save us; but because God may have some other sheep that are not of our fold, this is no reason why we should give up our fold with its sheltering bars of all the glorious doctrines, and the oversight of the "Good Shepherd," to run helter skelter out into the barren wilds of rationalism and Judaism. "Hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown."

Mount Hermon.

Bishop and Mrs. Fisher were the guests of honor at a dinner given by the boys at Fernhill, Darjeeling, on Monday, July 15, 1929. It was the happy occasion of the formal announcement of the new name for the Boys' School. Rev. Edward Shurley Johnson announced that Bishop Fisher had finally consented to the unanimous request of the School Managing Committee that his name be associated with the school and that henceforth it would be known as The Bishop Fisher School For Boys. The Committee recognized that its request must be based on the potentialities and possibilities of future growth rather than on the present position.

Bishop Fisher responded in a very happy speech expressing his pleasure at what had been done but questioning the wisdom and advisability of using his name. With his characteristic and sparkling humor he pointed out that it was the dead saint who was usually the most acceptable one, and that he was suffering from one of his rare experiences of stage fright.

William Davis, one of the Senior boys, in an impromptu speech expressed the pleasure of the School at having Bishop and Mrs. Fisher as their guests and in a glowing tribute to the life and work of Bishop Fisher spoke of the appreciation of the students of the use of his name and of their desire and purpose to carry out his ideals and make their school worthy of its name.

In a second response Bishop Fisher told of having just finished the writing of his new book, "Creative Personality" and that in the hope of each of them being "Creative Persons" he would give an autographed copy to each boy.

Hungers of The Heart.

BY H. B. HARDY.

This volume contains inspiring chapters on The Hunger for God, Happiness, Knowledge, Social Life, Love and Immortality. The author deals with the different phases of heart hunger in a most helpful way and makes it very plain that real satisfaction for every hunger is found in Christ. Don't fail to get a copy and feed your soul on these rich truths. The book was published at $1.00. We have a limited number of copies that we are closing out at 60c each, postpaid.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

CRIPPLE TOM.

In a miserable East London home, in a dark, wretched room at the top of a house, lay a cripple boy at the mercy of an aged relative, whom he called "Granny." His mother had taught him to read and write. Snowy nights, the lad had crept into the mission hall. Lying alone day by day for two years there came into his mind the memory of what he had heard there. He knew it was from the Bible the speakers had gathered their knowledge, and he wanted one. Granny only laughed and said, "Bibles weren't in her line! What did a lad like him want with Bibles?"

One day, however, up the creaking stairs came noisy, boisterous Jack Lee, the only friend the cripple had in the world. "Hurrah! hurrah! Got a new box. Off north tomorrow! Come to say good-bye, Tom. But I've got a real beauty present for you, my lad. A bright, new shilling for you, Tom. And you're not to spend it till yer wants suffin real particular." "Oh, Jack, you are good, but I want something now very, very particular." "Yer do? What's he?" "I want a Bible." "A Bible! well, I never! Who ever heard of a poor lad spending all that on a Bible, when I had to scrape months and months to save it in coppers." "Don't be angry, dear Jack," cried the crippled boy; "you're going away, and I shall be lonelier than ever, and, oh, I do so want a Bible. Please get it, Jack—now—this very evening at Fischer's before the shop closes. Granny never would; she'd spend it in gin, if I let it get into her hands." "What can yer want with a Bible, Tom? only scholars understands them there things." "Maybe so, Jack, but I'm hankering after one, for I must find out whether them there folks in that mission hall you and I sometimes used to go to, told true about some one they called Jesus. Let it be your parting gift, Jack, and you will make me so glad?" "Very well, lad, then I'll go, but I knows naught of 'Bible buyin'." "Fischer has 'em at a shilling, for I saw 'em marked in the window when I used to go by. Quick, Jack, or the shop will be closed!"

Returning he said, "Fischer says I couldn't leave you a better friend, Tom, and he declares the shilling couldn't be 'vested better; and says he: 'It may be worth a thousand pounds to the lad; so 'pears there's suffin we ought to know about.'"

After a month's hard reading, Cripple Tom knew more about his Bible than many who have professed to study it for twenty years. He learned the way of salvation, his only teacher being the Holy Spirit; he learned also that obedience to God's will meant helping to save others.

"It won't do to keep all this blessed news to myself," he said. His bed stood close by the window sill, which was low, and somehow he got a pencil and paper, and wrote our different texts, dropping them into the noisy street below, directed:

"To the Passer-by—Please Read."

After some weeks a tall, well-dressed gentleman entered the room and took his seat by the lad's bedside. "So you are the lad who drops texts from the window, are you?" he asked kindly. "Yes," said Tom, brightening up. "Have yer heard someone has got hold of one." "Plenty, lad, plenty! Would you believe it if I told you that I picked up one last evening, and God blessed it to my soul?" "I can believe in God's Word doing anything, sir," said the lad, humbly. "And I am come," said the gentleman, "to thank you personally." "Not me, sir! I only does the writin'; He does the blessin'." "And you are happy in this work for Christ?" said the visitor. "Couldn't be happier, sir. I don't think nothin' of the pain in my back, for shan't I be glad when I sees Him, to tell Him that as soon as I know'd about Him I did all I could to serve Him? I suppose you gets lots of chances, don't yer, sir?" "Ah, lad, but I have neglected them; but, God helping me, I mean to begin afresh.

At home in the country I have a sick boy dying. I had to come to town on pressing business. When I kissed him good-bye, he said: 'Father, I wish I had done some works for Jesus. I cannot bear to meet Him empty-handed.' The words stuck to me until the evening when I was passing down the street your little paper fell on my hat, I opened it and read: 'I must work the works of Him that sent me, while it is day; the night cometh, when no man can work' (John 9:4). It seemed like a command from heaven. It startled me and brought me to my knees that night, and I could not sleep. I have professed to be a Christian for twenty-two years. I made inquiries and found out who dropped these texts in to the street, and why it was done. It so shamed me. I am going home to work for the same Master that you are serving so faithfully." Tears of joy were rolling down the lad's face. "It's too much, sir," he said, "altogether too much." "Tell me how you managed to get the paper to start it, my lad." "That warn't hard, sir. I jest had a talk with Granny, and offered to give up my ha' porth o' milk she gives me most days if she would buy me paper instead. You know, sir, I can't last long. The parish doctor says a few months of cold weather may finish me off, and a drop of milk ain't much to give up for my blessed Jesus. Are people happy as has lots to give Him, sir?" The visitor sighed a deep sigh. "Ah, lad, you are a great deal happier in this wretched room, making sacrifices for Jesus, than thousands who profess to belong to Him, and who have time, talents, and money, and do little or nothing for Him." "They don't know Him, sir. Knowin' is lovin', and lovin' is doin'. It ain't love without." "You are right, Tom. But now about yourself. I must begin by making your life brighter. How would you like to end your days in one of these homes for crippled lads, where you would be nursed and cared for, and where you would see the trees and flowers, and hear the birds sing?" The dreary lad looked wistfully into the man's kindly face, and after a few moments' silence answered: "Thank'ee, sir; I've heard tell of 'em afore, but I ain't anxious to die easy when He died hard. I might get taken up with them things a bit too much, and I'd rather be a-lookin' at Him, and carryin' on this 'ere work till He comes to fetch me. Plenty of joy for a boy like me to have a mansion with Him up there through eternity." The visitor felt more reproved than ever.

"Very well, my lad; then I will see that you have proper food and all the paper you need while you live. I will settle it all with one of the Bible women. Now, before I go, I want you to pray aloud for me," and as he made the request the strong man knelt down by the dying boy's bedside, scarcely suppressing a sob as he covered his face with his hands. The lad trembled at having to do such a thing, but when he saw that bowed form and heard that half-stifled sob, he knew he ought to comply with the request.

There was a seraphic light on the poor pale face, as he said in a tone of the deepest reverence: "Lord Jesus, I know You're-a-listenin', and I'm much obliged to You for sendin' this friend here to cheer me in my work. Now, Lord Jesus, he's a bit troubled about not havin' worked for Thee enough in the past days. Will You help him to see to it that ther's nothi' left undone in the comin' days, and please, Lord, make him go straight away and tell them other rich men that they don't know Thee if they arn't a-workin' for Thee. And I'm grateful to You, Jesus, for all the paper and the food that's a-comin' to me while I live. Maybe I'll hold out a bit longer to write these texts for Thee. Now, Lord Jesus, please bless this kind friend, all roads and always. I ask this for Thy name's sake." "Amen," said the deep-toned voice.

When winter set in his friend heard that the dear lad "had gone to be with Jesus." The same post brought Tom's much-prized and much-used Bible. When the boy's friend lent it to his youngest son to read—the careful marking, the short, simple prayers written by the cripple lad on the margin, and his dying wish on the fly-leaf, that "this holy Book may be as great a friend to some one else as it has been to me," made so deep an impression on the youth that he gave himself to the Lord, and later on to mission work. In Central Africa he has shown that worn Bible to many a native Christian, when telling them about Cripple Tom and his texts.—Mrs. Walter Searle.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and the cousins getting along? I was eleven years old March 26. I am in the fourth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Luck. This is my second letter to The Herald. Tell some of the cousins to write to me. I hope to see this letter in print. I have two sisters and one brother. I go to church every Sunday I can. My Sunday school teacher is Miss Walton. I like to read page ten.

Vernard Mill.
Rt. 1, Box 82, Elmont, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Louisiana girl join your boys and girls' page? My papa takes The Herald and my mother and little brother read page ten to me as I am only five years old and cannot read. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My mother is my teacher. Well cousins, I must close as I have whooping cough. I hope to see this letter in print. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Jonice Couser.
Athens, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and the cousins progressing? Nicely, I hope. I am nineteen, five feet, eleven inches tall, and weigh 145 lbs. I like to play tennis and most all outdoor games. Also I like to travel. Will answer all letters from cousins six years old or older. Would especially like to hear from cousins from Canada or British Isles, but all will be most welcome.

Eugene Reynierston.
Hustonsville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky boy join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald so I would like to see it in print. My mother takes The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. I am fourteen years old, have light hair, gray eyes and fair complexion. I live on a small farm near Mammoth Cave. Ruth Cash, I guess your middle name to be Geneva. Fern Rogers, I guess your first name to be Lorena. Arie Reeves, I guess your middle name to be Bell. Laura Smith, I guess your first name to be Eudora. My birthday is June 6. Have I a twin?? If so please write to me. I am in the eighth grade at school.

Walter Paynter.
Rt. 4, Box 24, Cave City, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have written once before to The Herald. I hope this will be in print. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My oldest niece is in the first grade at school. My brother, whose name is Ben L. Duval, is a Methodist preacher, and he is married. His wife's name before she married Ben was Florence Fellows. Aunt Bettie, I thank you very much for printing my letter. I want some one to answer the following Bible questions. Who was the first man God made? How many days did the flood last? Who led the Arabs out of Egypt? How many of you cousins are Christians? We have a pretty good Sunday school. I am sixteen years old. I hope someone will write to me. My brother and sister-in-law live at Camden, Ohio. Has anyone read Pollyanna? The author of this book is Eleanor H. Port. It is a good book. Madeline Morter wrote to me after I wrote before. Please print this.

Leah.

I have an organ and can play a little. I also go to school and take eighth grade work. My father died last April 25, so that just left mother, brother, sister and me to live alone. I get very lonesome at times and wish for pen pals. I would like to hear from boys and girls all over the world. I will answer all letters I receive, and with the first letter I will send a snapshot of myself. I like to read, but my hobby is writing and raising flowers. I raised several flowers last year but expect to raise more this summer than ever. Well, Aunt Bettie, this is my first time. I'll go hoping to see my letter in print and I'll be expecting to receive some letters.

Rina Molleen Long.
Rt. 1, Peytonsburg, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Nebraska girl join your band of boys and girls? L. Ferne Rogers, your middle name is Lurana. I know because my mother knows you. She held you when you were a tiny baby. Her name used to be Mattie L. Whitaker, do you know her? I wish some of the cousins would write to me. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with R and ends with A, and has four letters in it. Cousins, when did Moses sleep five in a bed? I will write to anyone of you who writes to me. I must close now. I hope Mister W. B. is out chopping wood when this arrives.

Dorothy Baker.
Blue Springs, Nebr.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am glad to know that so many girls and boys take interest in writing to The Herald. I sure enjoy reading page ten. I have never written to The Herald before and hope to see this letter in print. I have light brown hair, gray eyes, and fair complexion and weigh about one hundred pounds. I am fifteen years old. My birthday is Sept. 20. I would like to correspond with some of you cousins. I will answer all letters I receive. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Lillius Duke.
Rt. 2, Chapmansboro, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please let a little South Dakota girl join your happy band of boys and girls. Madge L. Haggerty, you have a twin but it is not myself. It is my cousin Charlotte; she is nine years old. How old are you? My birthday is April 11. Have I a twin? I have at school; she is eleven years old and I am ten. I am a Christian and go to the M. E. Church. If I have a twin I will exchange pictures with them. Can you guess my first name? It begins with M and ends with E. I do not go by my first name. Marie Seener.

Rt. 1, Brookings, S. Dak.

FALLEN ASLEEP

BEVIER.

Mrs. Emma Bevier, a resident of West Hartford, Conn., retaining her membership in the John Wesley Church of the Nazarene, Brooklyn, N. Y., with which her deceased husband, Rev. Charles Bevier, had so much to do and was pastor in its early history, and was associated with Rev. William Howard Hoople, Rev. H. B. Hosley, Rev. John Norberry and Rev. H. F. Reynolds in the association of the Pentecostal churches of America, and later became a part of our great Nazarene movement. Sister Bevier was faithful to the end. In faith, in love and in walk her life was an example of the One, "whom not having seen she loved." While her walk was with the Lord she never forgot the common touch of humanity. Her tithe and offerings were regular to the church. On Monday evening, August 26th, a pleasant time was spent with friends, and shortly after retiring she fell asleep in the Lord. This way of going had been her wish, closing her earthly career of seventy-five years. Only a few days before her passing she had written the pastor to ascertain the cost of a memorial window in our new church for her husband, but her going so suddenly the answer never reached her. The children who loved her will now have a beautiful window in memory of their father and mother, Rev. and Mrs. Charles Bevier. Thursday, August 29th, with the children, we laid the remains in the family plot beside her sainted husband at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

A. G. Crockett, Pastor.

SPREAD THE GOSPEL.

Mrs. M. P. Fenlason.

Time is passing, swiftly passing,
Haste to make the message known
To the millions rushing downward,
Who will reap as they have sown.

Tell the precious love of Jesus
To the erring, sin-sick soul,
How he bled and died to save them,
How he longs to make them whole.

Cross the continents and oceans,
Spread the tidings far and wide
Of the love of God the Father,
How his Son was crucified.

Cast your bread upon the water,
Sow good seed from shore to shore,
Trust in God to make it prosper
And increase forevermore.

Haste to send the Old, Old Story
Over mountains and the plain;
Time is short, be up and doing,
Soon the Lord will come again.

With the voice of an archangel,
All the dead in Christ shall rise,
And we who are alive and watching
Will go to meet him in the skies.

We'll rejoice and give him honor,
The marriage of the Lamb is come,
And his Bride has been made ready,
And the twain have been made one.

Glory to the God of heaven,
Glory to his only Son;
He doth save, we are dwelling
In the Everlasting One.

Spread the everlasting gospel,
Unto earth's remotest bound;
Preach the gospel, sing the gospel
Unto every creature found.

For the harvest now is ready,
And the laborers are few;
Give your time and give your money—
Prove yourself a Christian true.

Adam Clarke---Great Commentary

Dr. Clarke was one of a long succession of men who, in every age of the Christian Church, have applied the best energies of their intellect and heart to the study and interpretation of the Scriptures. The seven gifts which, according to Augustine, the true expositor of Scripture must possess—reverence, piety, science, fortitude, prudence, cleanness of heart, and heavenly wisdom—were his portions.

The studies of his earlier years always had a bearing on this grand work. From the beginning he felt the need of being taught by God to understand his own word. Referring to this, he says: "No man ever taught me the doctrine I embrace; I received it singly by reading the Bible."

Sufficiently critical to aid the inquiries of the more serious student, and yet sufficiently popular to serve the purpose of general edification.

He gives a lucid view of the several books of Scripture, as to their dates and authors, their scope and connection; he expounds the original text in a manner adapted to the deficiencies of the reader; he elucidates difficulties in chronology, history, and oriental manners; he develops the grand doctrines of revelation, and applies the whole to the great concerns of human salvation and duty.

One leading feature in its character is independence in thinking. While he availed himself of the labors of others, the great number of his expositions are emphatically his own.

Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary on the Bible is one of the noblest works of the class in the entire domain of sacred literature. It is a thesaurus of general learning.

Its luminous expositions of the Law and the Gospel; its earnest and forcible appeals to the conscience of the sinner and the unbeliever; its rich couplings of general knowledge; and its valuable aids to the students of those holy tongues in which revelation took its first recorded forms—all will render this book the companion and the counselor of multitudes as long as the English language may endure. The man who accomplished it achieved immortality, his name having become identified with an indestructible monument of learning and religion.

We commend it as the most spiritual commentary published. 6 large volumes, good paper, good binding, new type.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson II.—October 13, 1929.

Subject.—Keeping Fit for the sake of others. Daniel 1:8-20.

Golden Text.—Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's. 1 Cor. 6:19, 20.

Time.—About B. C. 606 to B. C. 600.

Place.—Babylon.

Introduction.—I have been sitting for sometime in a camp meeting tent away up in the mountains in the northwestern part of the United States, trying to form some just conception of the infinitesimal proportions of a thoroughly selfish man; but my mental microscope is too weak to bring him into view; and I am sure that, could I discover him, I could find no words small enough to describe him. He who lives for self alone becomes a withered tree, a fruitless tree; a dead shrub; a dried leaf; the mere ashes of what might have been; the bare spot where something should have grown; a cipher with the rim rubbed off.

One finds himself when he forgets himself in the interest of others. Jesus could not save himself from death on the cross, and save a lost world. A grain of wheat must die in the earth in order to produce more wheat. Self-sacrifice is always the law of progress. Jesus died for us. We must die for others.

How true all that is; and yet there is a sense in which one must take the very best care of himself, in order to do his very best for others. Sickly men make poor soldiers. Such care of one's body as will make him strong for life's work is as religious as praying. The body being a temple of the Holy Ghost, one should keep it as clean and healthy as possible. It is the King's chamber—his throne room; make it worthy of his Divine majesty.

What tremendous responsibility rests upon one for the preparation and use of his mental powers. Is he to serve and bless others? He can do so only in proportion to his ability. It is a shame for God-given mental faculties to lie undeveloped and unused for a life-time. The world needs you, and you are under a sacred obligation to serve. Be conscientious and get ready. Above all else that you can give, the world needs you. What you mean when you say "I." It needs your ego, your spirit, your personality, your better self. He who fails to receive God's best in an uttermost salvation, cheats himself and swindles all men, because he fails to do his best service—that service for which he has received a place among men. He is the fellow who wrapped his talent in a napkin and buried it in the earth. He was just good for nothing—too lazy to work, and afraid he might do something for some one else. When such a man dies, that is his best contribution to the world. Daniel and his three friends were good boys. They were brave boys, because they were good boys. Their environment was about as bad as it could be; but their hearts throbbed with a great purpose to serve their generation by the will of God. You may search with a ten-thousand-power microscope, but you will not find even a trace of selfishness in the boy Daniel. He is a model for young men of all ages. He turned self to the wall and forgot he was there, because he had a mind to serve humanity. Right eyes and right hands might go, but he would stand for his afflicted people, for the right, and for his God. Daniel builded better than he knew; for he stood as a bulwark against evil and for righteousness for all coming time.

The modernists tell us Daniel never lived; but he did live. Had he never lived, no man who lived during the last five hundred years before Christ could have invented him. Such men must live, or the world will never hear of them. Abraham Lincoln and Frances Willard had to live to be known; for no one can invent such characters.

Comments on the Lesson.

8. Daniel purposed in his heart.—Daniel speaks for himself and his three friends. He made up his mind, as we say—determined. The king's meat, or food, and wine had, perhaps, been offered to idols in sacrifice according to heathen custom. Daniel did not wish to be defiled physically or spiritually by eating such food. The prince of the eunuch was Ashpenaz.

9. The Revised Version seems better here: "to find kindness and compassion."

10. I fear my lord the king.—The king had power of life and death over his subjects, being an absolute monarch; and Ashpenaz was afraid Daniel and his companions would not thrive if they did not eat the food dictated by the king who might have his head cut off.

11. Melzar means steward—not a proper name.

12. Prove thy servants.—Make a test. Let us eat pulse—peas, beans, and other vegetables for ten days. Let us drink water. Ten days was but a short time when they were beginning a three-years' course. There would be sufficient time to overcome any little backward movement.

13 and 14. This was good sense. Try us, and if we cannot stand the test of comparison at the end of ten days with other Hebrew children of the captivity, then bring on our portion of the king's meat and drink. The servant acquiesced, and gave them pulse and water. Good! They will win.

15. Fairer and fatter.—Why not? There are few better foods than legumes, and God was blessing the boys in every meal they ate. We need but little flesh, and no strong drink at all.

16. Melzar took away their portion.—Did not require them to eat the king's meat, nor to drink his prescribed wine.

17. This is rich. Obedience to God "brought knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom." Few men ever go as far as Daniel did in "understanding in all visions and dreams." Be true to God, and one need have no fear. He will "bring it to pass."

18. At the end of the days.—After they had finished their course of three years' training.

19. The king communed with them.—Examined them. He desired to learn what progress they had made in the learning of the Chaldeans. Daniel and his chums were at the head of the class.

20. Ten times better.—This is an indefinite number, meaning far better. The boys had not only outstripped their fellow students, but were ahead of the king's best magicians and astrologers. Nothing so quickens the intellect as genuine piety. Then comes a stimulant through the touch with the Divine Spirit, that is tantamount to inspiration. Christian scholarship is superior to non-Christian scholarship.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Some one wishes to know the address of Eleanor Row, who recently had an article in The Herald on "The Immodesty of Dress." If any one knows, or if she should see this notice, please drop me a card with address. Mrs. H. C. Morrison.

J. L. Carothers: "The meeting at Norwich, Kan., while not what we expected, yet much good was done, there being 29 at the altar for reclamation, regeneration or sanctification. Some who had been seeking for a year were able to come through to the light. The good people of Norwich were greatly discouraged over the extreme drought. Fields had dried up and fruit ruined and outlook not very promising along financial lines. Brother Lyon, the pastor, is a strong advocate of holiness and has a fine people to serve. We go to Alden, Kan., next Sunday."

A. S. Beck: "We just closed a fine meeting in the tent with Rev. C. B. Hutcherson at Price's Hill, with 21 conversions. We are in Franklin in a great meeting; 19 have been converted and the crowds are large."

H. J. McNeese: "My license having been renewed by the quarterly conference from Sept. 6, 1929, to October, 1930, I am open for fall and winter campaigns, giving dispensational messages, holding revivals and special week-end meetings anywhere in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, New York. I have preached for some of our large M. E. churches, and am a member of the National Holiness Association for the Promotion of Holiness. Just closed a meeting where we practically reorganized a church into a holiness church. Write or wire me at 634 13th Ave., New Brighton, Pa."

Revival meeting at the Pilgrim Holiness Church, 300 So. Brown St., Lewistown, Pa., Nov. 3 to Nov. 17th. The engaged evangelist is Rev. Geo. B. Kulp, of Batle Creek, Mich., who was made a great blessing to the church in his meeting with us last fall. We extend a hearty invitation to all of the saints to come and enjoy the feast of good things with us. Remember us in prayer that God will favor us at this time with his divine presence. Saints coming from a distance will be entertained free. Pray—Plan—Come. Francis H. Lishman, pastor.

Rev. Geo. W. Willis, D.D., well known evangelist, recently preached an unusual sermon on The Church of Pentecost to a very appreciative audience at Wade Park Avenue M. E. Church, Cleveland. He has just completed his 75th reading of the Bible in different versions and many times with various comments and helps. He contemplates lecturing on the Bible under the title—"Book of the Ages." He can be addressed at his home address, 1605 E 93rd St., Cleveland, O.

AN OPEN LETTER TO DR. C. F. WIMBERLY.

My Dear Doctor:

I saw and read with interest in The Pentecostal Herald of September 4th your account of the "Miracle in Black." You invite comment on this extraordinary circumstance and ask what we think of it. First, let me say, if we believe in Almighty God and in his written word we must believe in his ability to work miracles in the supernatural. If God did cause the supernatural to happen in days past why should he not give us this demonstration of his power today if his name can be exalted in the earth by it? Many Herald readers, like myself, believe that God has the power and does work miracles, and that many things that surround us every day cannot be reasoned out or accounted for only as supernatural or miraculous.

We accept this performance of the little piccaninny as true without being able to see any reason why God should make such a demonstration of his power in such manner, time and place. Why should he choose this little illegitimate black child to show his power unless it be to demonstrate more perfectly his ability to use the weak things of the world to confound the mighty? We are at a loss to know why you have shrouded it in mystery by withholding the names of the pastors and others of any who witnessed it and the city where it occurred. There may be readers who would like to write to the pastors you speak of, or to friends in the "southern city" where this happened. Since it is deemed good to publish the happening it can surely do no harm to publish the place and the witnesses.

Your brother in Christ,
G. W. Christian.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

—Basil Mathews
in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and His saving power in the lives of men." Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

Permit me to say a few words about my husband, the late Rev. Robert L. Selle.

First, he was a man of God; in other words, he was God's man. He loved the church as he loved his own life. He worshipped the Christ above everything else, in spirit and in truth. Christ was first, last, and always uppermost in his thought. He really accomplished good. On his last charge, Rogers, Ark., it was said he was the best man ever lived in Rogers. We have had hundreds of letters of sympathy, regretting his death very much. He has written a goodly number of songs, "Lifting Hymns" being his latest song book. He has written nine books; three are still in print, and can be secured from his wife, Sara E. Selle, 304 Seward St., Winfield, Kan. In his book, "What Church Would Jesus Join?" Bishop Bristol said he answered the question right. "Walking With Jesus" is one of his best books. The price of these two is $1.00 each. "Old Time Religion" can be had for 15 cents. Blessing will come to you by reading these books.

Yours for kingdom building,
Sara E. Selle.

DYER, TENNESSEE.

August 11th brought to a close one of the greatest ten-days' camp that has been seen at old Vincent Springs Camp, Dyer, Tenn., for several years. The attendance was cut down some on account of rains, but what was lacking in quantity was made up in quality.

We had old-time Holy Ghost preaching by Brother Allie and Sister Emma Irick, who were at their best. They stirred hearts and brought conviction to the hearts of many. Quite a number were awakened, saved and reclaimed and some sanctified. Mrs. Etta Foils sang the gospel at every service and was a blessed aid in every altar service; she cannot only sing, but it right on hand until the last amen and the last seeker leaves. Praise the Lord for such preachers and singers.

Vincent Springs is a real old-fashioned camp meeting where the people do not go to have a picnic, but to save souls, where they believe in praying through until souls get the victory. Practically all the houses on the grounds were filled with campers from different towns over West Tennessee and Kentucky, and the presence of God was wonderful in the camp this year.

In answer to intense prayer and preaching of the gospel twelve or fifteen souls were saved, some believers sanctified and the saints encouraged and built up in a most holy faith and went home praising God and more determined than ever before to build up and support Vincent Springs Camp and push holiness and fight the battle of the Lord.

Joe T. Hall, Sec'y.

HICKORY LEVEL, GEORGIA.

The revival services of the Free Methodist Church at Hickory Level were conducted from August 19 to September 1, by Rev. W. W. McCord, of Sale City, Ga. Bro. McCord was here twenty-four years ago and preached with power sent down from Heaven; as a result many souls were saved and sanctified. A goodly number of these have stood the test and kept true to the doctrine of holiness.

They were pressing forward holding up the banner of holiness against opposition in their own church, when a Free Methodist minister came along and invited them to join their forces with a holiness church and they did so.

After these twenty-four years the church called Bro. McCord to come back and preach the Everlasting Gospel, and he gladly responded. How it inspired the church to hear Bro. McCord still preaching the old-time gospel in its purity and power!

Since his serious illness his physician cautioned him to take it easy and preach twenty or thirty minutes, but all his messages were from one hour to one hour and forty minutes in length. Great crowds came to listen to the truth. God honored his Word through his servant and many souls prayed through in the old-fashioned way to justification, reclamation and sanctification. Quite a number were anointed and God touched their bodies in healing power.

The people showed their appreciation of Bro. McCord's services by making a nice purse for him. The church bids him God speed in his work and hopes that he may come back again and preach for them.

Miss Eula Nichols, a consecrated and talented young woman, of Rockmart, Ga., made a great contribution to the meeting in her services as pianist.

Lucile Smith Young.

FRANKLIN, KENTUCKY.

We came down and gave Rev. C. B. Hutcherson a tent meeting out ten miles from Franklin, Ky. We had a very wonderful meeting; all denominations came and took part. Our crowds were fine. Twenty-one were saved at the altar. Rev. C. B. Hutcherson is a young man from Asbury College and the highest type of Christian manhood I have ever met. He is sound and not ashamed of the gospel of Christ. To say I love him does not express it. He is certain to make a great preacher. His people love him and they are sorry to hear of his leaving to take work in New York.

We moved into Franklin and put up the tent. They received us wonderfully, gave us every good lot in town. We could not use but one; they sent the lumber to seat it. The Methodist Church let us have some chairs and others sent chairs. The mayor of the city let us have seats out of the Court-house lawn. Rev. M. L. Dyer has been faithful and began to urge his people to come. The crowds came from the beginning. One evening a doctor found the Lord and his face shone as he hugged and shook hands with the people. Three men from fifty to sixty-five came and found God. Conviction gripped the hearts of many, and they began to pray through to victory until twenty-seven found God. The crowds came an hour and a half before preaching time. Many are coming for miles; some out of Tennessee. It all proves that God answers prayer and the old-time gospel will win if faithfully and fearlessly preached. People are hungry. Business men closing their stores that their clerks may come to the tent. We do not know when the meeting will close. God loves a tent and so do the people. This preacher had rather preach in a tent to 1000 or 1500 people as the greatest church in the land with 100 present. Pray for us.

Beck Brothers.

WATCHFULNESS.

Rev. J. W. Covington.

For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore: for you know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrow, or in the morning: Lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping.—St. Mark 13:34-36.

I feel like addressing myself mainly to the ministers of the Gospel. While he (Jesus) commands all to watch, yet I believe the porter has reference to the minister; the same as in Isaiah 11:21: Watchman, what of the night? and Ezekiel 33:7: So thou, O Son of Man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

Note, please, house of Israel, then hear Jesus in the text. He is like a man going on a far journey, before leaving he gives orders to his household, and then instructs the overseer to watch. Back in Bible times, when history was being made, the watchman was set upon a wall. He was a lookout, high upon the wall so he could see out into the distance the approaching danger. I would like to ask just here, are we ministers as watchman over the household (the Church of Jesus Christ) high enough up in Divine grace to see any danger approaching?

Note again, please, that if the watchman failed to warn the people and they were destroyed, or lost, their blood would the master require at his (the watchman's) hands. May I ask another question: Does the ministry of today realize the tremendous responsibility that is resting upon their shoulders? or are we in the class of which we get a picture in Isaiah 56:10-12: His watchmen are blind: they are all ignorant. They are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber. Yea, they are greedy dogs which can never have enough, and they are shepherds that cannot understand: they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter.

In this day in which we live, with sin and debauchery so rampant, wicked men waxing worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived, the preacher that does not see anything to be alarmed over, does not see any danger approaching and is not warning his congregation, must be in the class of which Isaiah gives the picture. When was there ever such a crime wave as is now sweeping the country? And it is getting worse every day; not only is the prohibition law being violated, but every law of the land. Never was there a time since civilization dawned when human life is as cheap as it is now; or the morals of our country any lower. As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it also be in the coming of the Son of Man. They were eating, drinking, marrying, and given in marriage. Close to 200,000 divorces were issued in the year 1927. But some one will say there are more marriages than in former years; but let's notice the facts in the case. There were 1,880 less marriages in 1927 than in 1926, yet there were 11,184 more divorces in 1927 than in 1926. These figures embrace statistics from forty-seven states and the District of Columbia. We are breaking down in the home life; most of our criminals are between the age of 18 and 30 years; most of them inherit the criminal nature, for their mothers try to kill them before they are born, therefore, they come forth as murderers. This is a time when women don't want to be mothers; they would rather be in politics, and on the streets.

Again, when was modesty as much a stranger as it is today? Women go on the streets today in a garb of dress that my sister would not have come into my presence in, when I was a young man at home. Worse than that, yet they go into the church choirs and pretend to sing the Gospel, dressed in such a way that a decade ago they would have been ashamed to have gone on the street. Oh, the god of fashion! he is wrecking, blighting, and damning our race. Watchman, Watchman, what of the night? Porter, preacher, what do you see? Let's wake up and shake ourselves and see if we be in the rath. As long as our church buildings are used for suppers, plays, recreation, and dance halls, we need not look for anything different!

The only thing that will save this country is a revival of old-time religion; when preachers will be so empowered by the Holy Ghost that their messages will be so weighty that it will crush the foundation from under professors, and cause sinners to repent. This hand-shaking, card-signing method won't do it. I believe the ministry is largely responsible for the conditions as they now exist. We have failed to keep the vision, and where there is no vision the people perish. Prov. 29:18.

Since the fault is largely in the ministry, we will have, first of all, to see our own heart's need, and cry out like one of old: "Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me. Then, and not until then, will I teach transgressors thy ways; and sinners shall be converted unto Thee." We cannot teach a thing we do not know ourselves. I believe that if every minister in the United States would obey the last command that Jesus ever gave, found in Acts 1:4, 5, and receive the baptism with the Holy Ghost, they could bring about a reformation in twelve months.

Where is the Moses that will lead the people that are in bondage back to God? We have plenty of Aarons. Aaron was so weak-kneed that he couldn't preach to the people forty days, in the absence of Moses, without catering to their whims and wishes, and turning back to idol worship.

Where is the Knox that will say, "Give me souls or take mine." Where is the Edwards that will so wait before God that when he preaches people will hold to their seat to keep from falling into hell, and 500 are converted under one sermon. Brethren, God is the same today.

No doubt you will say that the writer of this is a pessimist; but haven't I stated facts? If you are on a fast express train speeding over the rails at 60 miles an hour and the engineer sees a red light, and stops his train just in time to save you from sudden death, you wouldn't call him a pessimist would you?

In conclusion, should the Master of the house, over which he has made us overseer, come this evening, or at midnight, or in the morning—could we welcome him as a faithful servant ought to do, and be ready to render our account. May the God of heaven lighten our eyes, lest we sleep the sleep of death.

Revivals!

Revivals!!

Revivals!!!

The reason some churches do not have revivals is because the preacher and people do not read Revival Literature. Get people reading revival books and they will pray and work for revivals.

One of the latest books on this subject is Dr. Ridout's book containing his Asbury College Lectures on "The Culpepper Foundation" (The book is dedicated to Burke Culpepper). This book is entitled Revival Blessings.

The chapters are as follows:
1. The Story of Great Revivals.
2. Great Soul Winners.
3. Revivals and their Laws.
4. Evangelistic Call and Commission.
5. Mass and Personal Evangelism.
6. Privileges and Perils of Evangelism.
7. The Art of Soul Winning.
8. Revival Kindlings.

JUST ONE IN THE WHOLE WORLD.

There is just one Bud Robinson—one like him or even akin to him. There is not another "Life Story" like his or similar to it. His recent book, "My Life's Story" is, as he puts it, "loaded to the water line with the activities of forty-seven years of labor in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ." The chapter on his call to preach is worth the price of the book and more. Get it and read it. It has 217 pages, but when you start reading it you will not want to stop until you have finished. It sells at the remarkably low price of $1.00. Don't fail to get your copy. You will weep and you will rejoice as you read it.

THE CHASTENING OF THE LORD.

By The Editor.

THE Psalmist tells us that "the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." He also says, "They are more to be desired than fine gold." He adds, that they are "sweeter than honey and the honey-comb."

The Psalmist is no doubt thinking of the wisdom and mercy of God's judgments, the gracious and beneficial effect that comes to men, communities and nations from the judgments of the Lord. If we were left to ourselves we would no doubt go far astray. We can and must be held in check and given guidance by the gracious and far-reaching effects of God's judgments.

It were far better to be chastened of the Lord than to be deserted and left alone by him. Nothing more unfortunate can befall man than that he be left to himself. Those who receive no corrections from God are not his children. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth."

There are judgments of mercy, chastisements with gracious corrective effects, rebukes that bring humiliation, repentance and restoration to obedience, devotion and communion. These gracious corrective means of God's mercy are more to be desired than gold, sweeter than honey. The Psalmist says, "It was good for me to be afflicted. Then, thought I upon my ways and turned my feet unto thy testimony." Who that has lived the Christian life for any number of years has not had experiences of chastening that brought sorrow, thinking upon one's ways and returning to closer fellowship with God?

There are judgments of the Lord of another character. Judgments that bring with them destruction. They come after the resources of mercy have been exhausted. Those who will not have mercy must finally receive the judgments that forever seal their doom. Men can go beyond the boundary lines of mercy. Those who trample upon the laws of God, spurn his mercies, refuse his offers of forgiveness and salvation, must finally fall beneath the sword of just and fearful judgment.

The antediluvians reached a point of rebellion and wickedness where they would not have mercy. God cannot force mercy upon any one. He can knock at the door, but the door of the human will cannot be broken down. God cannot force himself upon those who refuse to receive him. Noah preached long, warned faithfully and in the meantime built the ark for the preservation of himself and those who would accept mercy but those who would not receive judgment. This is the logic of the universe. This is and must be the divine order. Sodom and Gomorrah reached a pitch of rebellion and wickedness so fearful that it was a mercy to the human race to send down fire. They were so corrupt that they became corrupters of man-

I KNOW THY SORROW, CHILD.

I know thy sorrow, child; I know it well,
Thou needst not try with broken voice to tell.
Just let me lay thy head here on my breast
And find here sweetest comfort; perfect rest!
Thou needst not bear the burden, child, thyself;

I yearn to take it all upon myself!
Then trust it all to me today—tomorrow:

Yes, e'en forever; for I know thy sorrow.
Long years ago I planned it all for thee;
Prepared it that thou mightest find need of me.

Without it, child, thou wouldst not come to find
This place of comfort in this love of mine.

Hadst thou no cross like this for me to bear,
Thou wouldst not feel the need of my strong care,

But in thy weakness thou didst come to me,
And through this plan I have won thee.
I know thy sorrow and I love thee more,
Because for such as thee I came and bore
The wrong, the shame, the pain of Calvary,
That I might comfort give to such as thee.

So resting here, my child, thy hand in mine,
Thy sorrow to my care today resign.
Dread not that some new care will come tomorrow.

What does it matter—I know all thy sorrow.
And I will gladly take it all for thee
If only thou wilt trust it all to me.

Thou needst not stir, but in my love lie still
And learn the sweetness of thy Father's will—
That will has only planned for the best;
So knowing this lie still and sweetly rest.
Trust me. The future shall not bring to thee
But that will bring thee closer still to me.

kind. They were so morally dead that the stench of their wickedness would fill and poison the moral atmosphere all about them.

The Jewish nation reached a climax in their wickedness in the rejection and crucifixion of the Lord Jesus. Having rejected and crucified the only Saviour there is in the universe there was nothing left for them but God's judgments and he smote them. John the Baptist told them that the ax was laid at the root of the tree. It was an awful threat. They became even worse. Rome lifted the ax and smote the tree. Its fall was so violent that it scattered its branches throughout the earth and the blight upon Palestine and the wandering Jews has been an abiding warning in the world; when men refuse mercy judgments will come. Those who will not be saved must be destroyed.

I can but believe we are approaching a period of God's retributive judgments. The wickedness of the world is great. The fearful war of the nations did not bring repentance and a turning away from sin to righteousness. Millions were slain upon the battlefield. Other millions of human beings were starved to death. Then a strange and awful pestilence spread abroad and untold millions were swept suddenly into eternity. But men have not repented. The Sabbath is desecrated all over the civilized world. Untold millions of heathen go without the Gospel, while professing Christians waste millions of money in tobacco, cosmetics, at the doors of moving picture shows. Tens and hundreds of thousands of people in these United States whoop and yell like godless heathen at the baseball park on the Sabbath day. The mill of the divorce courts grinds on with a full hopper. Worse still, many a pulpit and supposedly Christian schools are giving an uncertain sound. Who can prognosticate what the end will be?

We believe that God's judgments will come upon us. We look for drouths, for floods, for storms, for fires, for contagions, for lawlessness, murder and waste. We look for immodesty in women and brutal, passionate wickedness in men. The trampling upon God's laws and the rejection of his mercies have a fearful effect upon the individual and upon society. Conditions are created that bring with them their own fearful curse. Repentance always counts large with God. If our preachers should cry mightily and spare not, if our people should turn away from their sins, if we would kindle in this nation a hundred thousand revival fires, if we preached mightily against the unbelief, the wickedness and the worldliness of our times, no doubt judgments would be stayed, mercies would be extended. But will we do it? Will the ministry become aroused? Will our college professors cease to teach infidelity? Will our lawmakers fear God? Will those supposed to enforce the law punish criminals? Will we stop giving hundreds of millions of dollars to see lewd moving pictures and send the Gospel to the heathen world? Will we? That's the question. There must come a period of great revivals and turning back to God, repentance for sin, saving faith in Jesus and a turning of the whole tide of the moral life of the nation toward reverence and righteousness, or we may be sure God's judgments will be visited upon us.

A Word From My Sick Bed.

As THE HERALD readers know I am again confined in the Baptist Hospital, Louisville, Ky. I have passed through some very severe suffering this time. We tried to fight the battle out with the doctor and a special nurse at our home in the country, but my situation became so serious that the doctors, the nurse, and my family all believed it was necessary for me to come to the hospital. I have gone through some very severe physical suffering, but I am glad to report that the asthmatic condition is wonderfully improved. It is a peculiar and very severe suffering to be in a condition where one must struggle for breath. This became so severe that I hardly saw how I was going to be able to live much longer in that condition, but I was greatly relieved and at this time I am profoundly thankful to say that the asthmatic trouble has been wonderfully relieved. My physicians report me improving every way, and we are hoping that within a short time I shall be able to take the advantage of the pure, dry air in southwest Texas.

ILLUSTRATIVE SKETCHES AND SUGGESTIONS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Of the Gospel of Jesus Christ it may be said: "You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will, but the scent of the roses will hang round it still." So in persecution and trial which come to the church and disciple of Jesus; no matter how hard the trial and test may be, the blessing abides.

Voltaire once wrote: "In less than a hundred years Christianity will have been swept from existence and will have passed into history." Now Voltaire has passed into history, Tom Paine has passed into history, Bradlaugh and Ingersoll have passed into history, but the Bible still stands and is the most published and most widely circulated Book in the world today. Voltaire lived in the same age as John Wesley. Voltaire cursed his age with blasphemy and infidelity. Wesley blessed his age with the greatest religious awakening of modern history. One of the secrets of the growth of the Christian religion is the martyr spirit it produces. Here is a story from China:

"In a village not far from Yen Sen a young man recently became a Christian. His old father got very angry, and tried various plans to get him to give it up, but all in vain. At last he told his son that if he still persisted in following Christ, he would bury him alive, and fixed a date for carrying out his purpose. This burying alive is not very uncommon, and a Chinese father has the old Roman father's right to do as he pleases with his children. Thus a daughter who has been an unfaithful wife, or has dishonored her father's name before marriage, is quite likely to suffer death at her father's hand, or to be made to commit suicide by him; and I have heard of fathers burying alive, in one case a grown-up son, and in another a son who gambled and in other ways was a disgrace to the family. Well, the day arrived, and the young fellow was led by his old father to the edge of the deep hole which was to be his grave if he refused to give up Christianity. A sorrowful group of relatives stood round, who had tried in vain to shake the old man's determination. 'Will you give it up?' 'No, father, you can bury me in there if you like, but I cannot give up Jesus Christ.' Unexpectedly the old man burst into tears and the burial did not take place."

THE SANCTIFIED LIFE.

Sanctification is a great Bible Doctrine. From an exchange we reproduce the following:

"In our Authorized Version the word Sanctification is used five times, sanctified about sixty-two times, sanctifieth four times, sanctify about sixty-nine times. But the Greek words are also rendered hallow, be holy, holiness.

"How is Sanctification brought about?"

"By God. 'I the Lord do sanctify Israel.' (Ezek. 37:28).

"By Christ. 'Unto the Church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus.' (1 Cor. 1:2).

"By the Holy Ghost. 'Being sanctified by the Holy Ghost.' (Rom. 15:16).

"God hath chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit' (2 Thess. 2:13). See also 1 Peter 1:2; 1 Cor. 6:11.

"By the Blood of Christ. 'Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered without the gate' (Heb. 13:12).

"By the Word of God. 'Sanctify them through Thy truth: Thy word is truth.' (John 17:17).

"By Faith. 'Them which are sanctified by faith that is in Me.' (Acts 26:18).

"By Prayer. 'It is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.' (1 Tim. 4:5).

The sanctified life is a life lived in the will of God. Andrew Murray has a beautiful thing upon the life settled in God. It bears upon the sanctified life when trial and test come:

In Times of Trouble Say:

First: He brought me here; it is by his will I am in this strait place: In that I will rest.

Next: He will keep me here in his love, and give me grace in this trial to behave as his child.

Then: He will make the trial a blessing, teaching me the lessons he intends me to learn, and working in me the grace he means to bestow.

Last: In his good time he can bring me out again—how and when he knows.

Say: I am here—

(1) By God's appointment.

(2) In his keeping.

(3) Under his training.

(4) For his time.

A STORY FOR THE CHILDREN.

In one of the mission fields the following took place. The pastor asked the children to bring in various gifts for the work; as they had no money they could bring in rice, vegetables, etc.

Among the boys there was a new pupil, a little colored boy, who had been in the school only a short time. He was an orphan, and had no one to help him or shew him what to do. On the following Sunday the children began to bring in their gifts and place them on the platform in the church. In the meantime our little friend's heart grew heavier and heavier. The tears started to his eyes; he could not keep them back. Bowing his head in prayer, he said, "Oh Jesus! Dear Jesus! I love Thee with all my heart! I too want to take up a gift, but my hands are empty! What is there for me to give?" Then God put a wonderful, beautiful thought into his mind. "My boy," whispered Jesus, "just give yourself—yourself! That's the gift I want from you today." As his name was called he went forward, stepped up to the Communion Table, took from it the silver plate lying there, placed it on the floor, stepped into it in his bare feet, looked up very earnestly into the face of his pastor, put the plate back, and went to his seat. "Well," said the missionary to himself, "that was a queer thing for John to do; I think I will ask him why he did that." When the service was over he called John aside, and said, "That was a queer thing you did this morning. What did you mean by it?" "Well," was the answer, "a short time ago I gave myself to Jesus, and I love him with all my heart, because he has done so much for me. Now when I stood on that plate and looked up at you my heart was filled with a great gladness. It meant just this: 'Dear Jesus, I love you with all my heart, my hands are empty, but if you will take me, just me, I will be your boy. Go where you want me to go; do what you want me to do, and be what you want me to be. I give myself to thee forever! It is the only gift I have to bring.' O pastor! I am so happy! Oh, so happy! Will you take me and train me so I can go forth and tell the glad news of Jesus?"

NOTES FROM THE BIBLE CONFERENCE AT BETHEL, SHANGHAI.

Requests were made that we give some messages on Revivals of Religion. We gave three. One was based on Acts 2:37-47.

There is a wide difference between Revivals and Evangelism. Many are enthusiastic on evangelism—so-called, who have no place in their program for a real revival of religion embracing repentance, regeneration, sanctification and the Baptism of the Spirit.

There is a wide difference between revivals and religious education. Everywhere today they are talking about this subject and holding conventions; but many advocates of religious education have no interest in a real revival of religion. Many leaders in religious education are opposed to revivals.

Revivals come from God; other affairs may be programmed but you cannot program a revival; it must be prayed down and prepared for by tears, confession, repentance, prayers and intercession.

The great revival in Korea occurred in the midst of a great political upheaval. The Russo-Japanese War had recently finished and Japan had annexed Korea to the Empire, yet it was in that year 1907 that the great revival broke out. In a year or two the Methodist Church leaped in numbers from 7,796 to 24,244, and the Presbyterians grew from 9,756 to 19,654.

Some of the great revivals of history broke out in troublesome times. In fact, it is when times are hard, and hearts are breaking and darkness covers the land that God's people should be pleading for a revival of the grace of God.

To have a revival of religion—

(a) You must give up your prejudice to the altar and the excitement of the meeting.

(b) You need to adopt different methods, by getting back to the New Testament way of getting people saved and sanctified. Many preachers never think of "throwing out the net" and they never expect to see people saved in their meetings.

(c) You must get right with God and get right with your fellows. There must be confession, restitution, reconciliation.

(d) There must be prayer and intercession.

(e) The secret of revivals. 2 Chron. 7: 14, Zechariah 4:6.

The great need of the mission field as well as the homeland is a genuine revival of religion. J. Z. Hodge, speaking before the U. P. Christian Council of India, said:

"We go back then to our Marching Orders, which are also our Standing Orders, 'Go ye therefore and teach all nations.' A command, yes, but an inevitable command. It could not have been otherwise: this is the obligation of love and the obligation remains. It is the fashion nowadays to assess the missionary contribution to India in humanitarian terms. The service rendered through mission schools, colleges, hospitals, leper asylums, orphanages and farms wins the applause of senates and an occasional Kaiser-i-Hind medal from Government. We have, on the whole, consistently advocated the cause of the poor and the outcast and found comfort in the good-will of common men; but this is not enough: we must be judged by our spiritual contribution to the life of India. Unless we have some spiritual gift to impart we had better stay at home. The end of Christian Missions according to Jerusalem is—"the production of Christ-like characters in individuals and nations through faith in and fellowship with Christ the living Saviour, and through corporate sharing of life in a divine society."

"I prefer the Message and its Objectives as worded in St. John 3:16: 'God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.' But best of all is the Saviour's rendering—"And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold, them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one flock and one Shepherd."

Bishop Joyce was a great revival bishop and in China he had some great meetings. He once said,

"The blessed old-fashioned gospel under the blessing of the Holy Spirit does produce old-fashioned revivals, old-fashioned conversions, and old-fashioned victories. I have learned the secret of absolute dependence on the Holy Spirit."

A BRIEF REVIEW OF LIFE.

Rev. Ramsey C. Armstrong, B. D

I was born on the fourth day of October in 1842, in Willcox Co., Ala. The name of my father was John E. Armstrong and my mother's maiden name was Mary May. There were born to this union four boys and five girls. The oldest boy and the youngest girl died in infancy. The others all lived to maturity and married and lived to raise families and died in advanced age. I was the second youngest of the family and I am now the only surviving member. All the others died in the triumph of the Christian faith. Two of my brothers died in the ministry. I was taught to pray in my childhood. Among my first recollections was praying and preaching, so that from childhood I had an impression that I would preach. When alone and out of hearing I would try to preach. When about thirteen years old I gave my hand for membership in the Methodist Church, South. At that time six months' probation was required before administering the vows of the Church. This was overlooked by the pastor of the charge. But in my heart I assumed the vows and tried to live in keeping with the same. I knew that I had not been regenerated. After the passing of several months I made up my mind to seek salvation and that I would go to the mourner's bench and embrace every opportunity of expressing my desire for salvation. When about fifteen I gave my heart to God. But the devil injected doubts in my heart so that I was bewildered, so that I was not satisfied with my condition. A camp meeting was pending in Newton county adjacent to Jasper county where we were living. I prayed daily that at that meeting I might receive such a blessing that I would be delivered from all doubts in the future. My prayers were answered. O, what a glorious night that was at Holly Springs camp meeting. The power of God came upon us at the grove meetings of the brethren and also of the sisters. We met at the tabernacle about dark, the men from one direction and the women from the other. It was like the meeting of two great rain clouds with thunder and lightning. There was no preaching, but mourners were called. I had already been blessed and I was in the shouting ring, and conversions were taking place constantly. We drifted down to Brother Odom's tent and there we continued to sing and shout and salvation's tide flowed. We shouted until four o'clock in the morning.

"On the wings of his love I was carried above
All sin and temptation and pain;
I could not believe that I ever should grieve,
That I ever should suffer again.

"O the rapturous height of that holy delight,
Which I felt in the life-giving blood!
Of my Savior possessed, I was perfectly blessed,

As if filled with the fullness of God."

This couplet expresses the blessings I received that night. I have never doubted for one minute the power and peace, comfort and joy in my heart that night. There was a short interval in my praising God but about twelve o'clock that night and while standing just outside the hall of the tent near one of my sisters, the good Lord called me to preach the gospel. I have never doubted one moment my call and my commission is still binding and as long as I have the ability to preach I expect to do so. I know that I was sanctified that night for religion was my theme for some weeks. My father was a farmer and owned slaves previous to the war between the States. When not at school I worked with the negroes. While at work with them I talked religion to them. Remember I was only a boy about fifteen years of age. I never told any one about my call to the ministry. I felt that I was too young and ignorant to preach. But the devil tempted me in every way and I had a hard struggle before I was licensed to preach. Just before I was eighteen the pastor, Rev. David Stovall, approached me at Magnolia church where we held our family membership. He asked me to take a walk with him. As we walked he began to tell me that I was called to preach and he wanted to ask the Church that day to recommend me for license to preach. This was Friday and the day before the meeting of the quarterly meeting in the town of Jasper. I said no, I did not want license, for I had been deferring the matter in my own mind. He said that if I did not preach the devil would get me. This I believed, for I was so impressed by the Holy Spirit. He insisted so persistently that I told him he could ask the Church to recommend me to the conference for license to exhort. He accepted this, and I was licensed the next day to exhort. The fourth day of October I was eighteen years old and on the 14th day I preached my first sermon. At the quarterly conference following the one I was licensed to exhort, I was licensed to preach. Should I live until the fourth day of next October I will have been preaching sixty-nine years. I have good health, am strong and active and do all the work about my place. I take calisthenic exercises every morning, except the Sabbath. I joined the Confederate Army in my nineteenth year and served in the ranks of the First Texas Legion as private for seventeen months. I did not join the army because I desired to do so, but from force of circumstance. I always had a horror of war and have it until this day. As a minister I felt out of place and prayed God to take me out of the rank and file carrying a gun and give me a chaplaincy; this he did and I was satisfied when I laid down my gun and picked up the cross of Christ.

I was only a licensed preacher and could not perform the functions of a Deacon. I chanced to meet Dr. G. C. Andrews of the Mississippi Conference and I mentioned that matter to him. He thought that under the circumstances the Conference would grant me Deacon's credentials. He informed me when and where his Conference convened. It was to be held at Kosiskusco. It was about two days travel on horseback from where our brigade was camped, so I was given a pass and went to the Conference. The Conference unanimously elected me and I was ordained by Bishop Pane. I retained my commission until the end of the war.

I was a private in the 1st Texas Legion which was commanded by Col. Whitefield. He readily granted me a transfer to the 9th Texas Cavalry, commanded by Col. Dudley W. Jones. He and I became very close friends. He was a fine man, and under my ministry he was converted. I organized a camp church taking in every one who wished to join regardless of denomination. I preached the gospel and avoided all controverted difference. We had no contention, but perfect harmony. When the war closed I was at home on furlough. In just a short time I began teaching school which I continued to do for five years. I was impressed that I should join the Conference. It took me some time to get the consent of my good wife. But after doing that and after making up my mind to itinerate, the devil injected a temptation in my heart. The suggestion was that I was doing a good work. That I opened my school with prayer every morning and lectured the students twice a week and that I preached about as much as the pastor of our circuit. That I attended all the quarterly meetings and the two-days' meetings; and then I would have the pleasure of my home. With this impression I was asked to attend a camp meeting, which I did. The meeting was of short duration, beginning on Friday night and closing on Sunday night. It fell to my lot to do the preaching at night. I was asked to preach the opening sermon. I told the pastor that I was not in the spirit of preaching, but three other preachers including the presiding elder also said they were not prepared for the hour. So I had the responsibility upon me. But I preached mechanically for the Holy Spirit was absent and I was alone. I did the best I could, but I felt mortified at my failure. However, the presiding elder tried to flatter me by saying the sermon was all right.

I was notified that I must preach again Saturday night. That afternoon I sought a secluded place in the forest. By the side of a large tree in a dense thicket, I kneeled down to get the Holy Spirit back in my heart. After a complete surrender of myself to God there came to me this comforting impression, that if I would do my duty, take up the Cross, join the Conference and live a devoted life that he would be with me all through life and bless me. That I should be reasonably successful and that he would let me live to be an old man. That he would not exempt me from the ordinary experiences of life. I overcame the temptation of the devil. He left me. I was victorious and happy. That night the Holy Spirit preached through me. When I called penitents I left the pulpit and changed my position from place to place and was finally overwhelmed by the power of the Spirit and got down in the altar and talked and rejoiced in Jesus my Savior. We had a great meeting. The next night, Sunday night, the closing night was a great occasion. I was wonderfully blessed in preaching. I was tired and we, the preachers, went to bed soon after entering our tent and being sleepy I dropped into a slumber and in a little while I was awakened by a group of singers who were singing in a tent not far away. The music was heavenly and our hearts were electrified by the sweet music. From then until now, and that was in 1872, the promise of my Lord has sustained and comforted me, and I feel at this hour that he has more than fulfilled his promise. It has helped me in many a struggle. There never was a period in my life from boyhood up, when I did not believe in sanctification. I have heard my father and other old-time Methodists discuss the subject of perfect love or Christian perfection, meaning the same thing. I imbibed the doctrine when quite a boy. Since my first experience, I have not always enjoyed the blessing. There have been intervals when I permitted something to impede my enjoyment. I have never hesitated to preach Holiness for it is prerequisite for a home in Heaven, for the Word says, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." I am striving to ascend higher and higher in the scale of moral being.

One important aspiration was fostered by me. From youth up I was much interested in education. After traveling some six years as an itinerant I became a student in the Chautauqua School of Theology. The School had an excellent faculty. This school was taught in part by mail communication. Dr. W. R. Harper taught Hebrew and Old Testament. Dr. Alfred A. Wright taught Greek and New Testament and Biblical and Doctrinal Theology. Dr. Philip Shaff taught Ecclesiastic History. Dr. L. T. Townsend taught Homiletics and Pastoral Theology, and Christian Science, Life and Literature.

It took me nine years to complete the curriculum and stand my examination, which was at home, but in the presence of competent witnesses who signed the papers. Dur-

PURIFYING CONDUCT.

Rev. R. Heber Wightman.

Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way? by taking heed there to according to thy word. Psa. 119:9.

THE text asks and answers an important question. Young men are interested in it. The old men of the present generation are fast passing away, and who is expected to fill their place in church and state, but the young men, their sons, who are coming to the front to act their part in the great drama of human affairs? The pulpit, the bar, the bench, the halls of legislation, offices of high trust in the government,—all these are to be occupied by the young men of their day and time.

Deeply interested in the welfare and happiness of the young men of our country, I am making this appeal. First, the term "way" in the text, is figuratively used to denote conduct, and the word "cleanse" means to purify that conduct and make it morally blameless and unsullied. Now the term cleanse supposes impurity, for what is pure needs no cleansing. Is the young man exhorted to cleanse his way, to make his conduct blameless and upright? Then, of necessity, the inference is plain; that naturally, the heart is depraved, and the life corrupt and the character blotted by transgression. The bent of the mind is naturally to evil. This, the Bible teaches, and it is corroborated by experience and observation. How are we to account for this bent or proneness to evil, but upon the hypothesis that in the moral constitution there exists this innate or inherent depravity of which the Bible speaks. Pride, self will, alienation from God, inordinate attachment to the things seen and temporal; these and kindred elements of carnality characterize the young in general. It is an indisputable fact, that these wax stronger and harder by daily exercise, until in the lapse of years they become the fixed and almost invincible habitudes of life. Under the dominant influence and control, then, of such elements of depravity as these, is it surprising that young men go astray from the path of moral rectitude, are irreligious, careless and reckless as to their future and eternal well being? Is it nothing of astonishment that paths of sensual indulgence, catering to the lusts of the flesh and eye, and the pride of life, grasping with avidity at the riches, honors, and pleasures the world presents to their view?

Second, let us consider the import of the answer in the text—"By taking heed thereto, according to thy word."

The great leading truth taught in this answer is, that in order to purity of heart, and blamelessness of conduct, young men must ponder well the paths of their feet. They must accustom their minds to serious contemplation in regard to the aims, purposes and pursuits of life, and their far-reaching and ultimate consequences. Are not discretion and prudence, and liberation and forecast indispensable, if young men would succeed in the different vocations of life, in which they may engage? Who can expect to act well his part in the drama of life, that is destitute of these fundamental principles of conduct? Can riches be acquired? Can the laurels of distinction be won? Can the important relations of social life be usefully and creditably filled, in the absence of these and similar qualities of mind? It is impossible. Why did God implant in the mind the faculties of reason and conscience and judgment, if they had not been intended to be of profitable service to us in our probationary state?

But how seldom are the dictates of reason regarded by the young? How often are the admonitions of conscience drowned in the uproar of conflicting passions and clamorous appetites! What sober and thoughtful mariner would spread the sails of his gallant ship to the faithless winds and venture upon the navigation of the storm-tossed ocean without chart and helm and compass, fully prepared by their available helps to make a safe and prosperous voyage? What the chart and helm and compass are to the gallant ship freighted with costly merchandise, conscience and reason and judgment are to human conduct in reference to respectable, useful and happy living.

Are there not strong considerations why young men should allow these divinely implanted principles to exert a restraining influence and governing control over their conduct in the aims, purposes and relations of time? Who are more exposed than the young to the various temptations that beset the path of our pilgrimage to the grave? Who more liable to be seduced by the bewitching fascinations of the world, and corrupted by its contaminating associations? Transgressors blackened by vice, and hardened in crime, are ever vigilant to entice and entrap by their wicked devices, and the young are especially objects of their wiles and stratagems. They were not the aged and infirm of his countrymen that Cataline essayed to enlist under his black banner as conspirators of Rome, but they were young men fresh and vigorous and ambitious; many of them alas were enticed by the gilded allurements of vice. The nature of the young is pliant and yielding. It is difficult for them to pronounce that little monosyllable, "no," with emphasis and decision, when allured by the seductive persuasions of those who themselves are profligate and vicious.

The paths of youth are slippery indeed, and oh, how liable young men are to fall away, and make miserable wreck of character and fortune, and aspiring hopes, excited by passion, and mirth, and inspiring bowls, when the objects of temptation beckon them to illicit gratification. With the crimson flush of health upon the cheeks; with the buoyancy of vigor in the step; with the hot blood merrily dancing along the arterial circulation; with the emotional gushing and outflowing; with the whole sentient nature keenly impressible by surrounding objects; with the prospect of a long, healthful life before them, environed by such felicitous surroundings as these, how prone are they to fling to the winds the claims and obligations of a religious life, and to adopt as their motto the epicurean song, "Eat, drink, and be merry."

What hope is there in any young man, educated or reared in comparative ignorance, who sets out in life to build a character and acquire a fortune, without the exercise of thoughtful discrimination, and conscientious convictions, in the selection of his associates. If he yield to the blind impulse of appetite, and greed and gain, and love of pleasure, unheededful of the voice of conscience, the dictates of reason, and the bias of a sound, discriminating judgment, what is to be expected in these circumstances, but disgrace, discomfiture and hopeless ruin in the end. Let young men take heed to their conduct. Let them use prudence, discrimination, and judgment in the selection of their companions and the choice of their occupations. A young man cannot be too eclectic in the selection of his associates, and the choice of his profession and business for life. How many young men of noble qualities and generous emotions, are ruined for both worlds on account of improper companionship, and unfortunate associations. If a youth associate with the profligate, the skeptical, the profane and intemperate, will not the legitimate, logical sequence of such association be to assimilate in life and character and fortune, to that which is vicious and profligate, and to ultimately engulf him soul and body in the maelstrom of infamy and woe?

Let a young man, correct and moral in his general deportment, be unhappily led astray by another of dissolute and profligate habits; let him visit the gambling table, and look with approving eye upon the sparkling wine, as it passes from lip to lip among the devotees of Bacchus, in the nightly orgies; let him become a willing and frequent visitant at eating and drinking houses, and houses of ill-fame; let him get his full consent to desecrate the holy Sabbath in pleasure excursions by land or by water, and never enter the church of God to behold the "beauty of the Lord and to inquire in his temple," and it requires no prophet's ken to see the end, and no prophet's voice to predict the ultimate destiny of such a young man. His sun shall set while yet it is noon upon his suicidal grave; burning tears of fond but blasted hopes shall be shed, while sepulchral night winds shall chant their funeral dirge, making a solemn mockery over the utter vanity and final ruin of intemperate delights.

But the text adds, "According to thy word." Young men are exhorted to take heed to their way according to the doctrines of belief, and the rules of conduct laid down in the word of God. The Bible, it will be allowed, is the most remarkable of all books. The doctrines it teaches, and the maxims it prescribes are to be found in no other book. They are peculiar to the Bible, and constitute an irresistible argument in proof of all divine inspiration. What a powerful influence the doctrines of the Bible exert upon human belief and practice!

Why, we inquire, has the word of the true and living God been given to man? If in our present lapsed and depraved condition, reason and conscience and the innate instinct of the soul were sufficient, per se, to guide us safely to our ultimate and eternal destiny, then the gift of the Bible would have been superfluous and useless. But it is truth long since conceded by the sages of antiquity that reason is an insufficient guide, and it must be allowed that there can be no safe reliance upon a conscience depraved and perverted by original and actual sin. The speculations of philosophy and the opposition of science falsely so-called, may bewilder, perplex and fill the mind with doubt and uncertainty, but they can never blaze the way from earth to heaven. To the Bible we are compelled to go at last for correct and reliable information, in reference to our belief and conduct. Let any young man set out in life with the fixed purpose to mark out his line of conduct, and govern his appetite and passions according to the preceptive and prudential rules of the book of Proverbs and he cannot possibly err, or make shipwreck of his golden hopes. The ancient oracles, especially the oracle at Delphi, were eagerly consulted on all private or public occasions of private or public importance, but their responses were so equivocal that they could be applied to any result whatever.

There is a sure and more reliable oracle than that of Delphi; the holy Bible, and to it you are invited to come and learn the will of God concerning you, and to know how you are to live on earth that you may live forever in heaven. Is a young man ambitious to attain to respectability and honor and wealth and power in society? In what surer way can he accomplish the desired end than by fearing God and keeping his commandments. The precepts of Christianity, if considered only in reference to the present life, shall be found upon examination to be the very best that human wisdom could devise, or that could be reduced to practice. Industry, economy, prudence, diligence in business—these form elements of character that cannot fail to insure satisfaction and success. And yet these are the very elements of character and principles of conduct that the word of God enjoins. How instructive and informing to the mind the study of the theology of the Bible, the evidences of Christianity. Its firmament is lighted with myriad stars all borrowing their luster from the central sun; and from star to star the inquiring mind may wing its flight, charmed by its unearthly melodies, and gathering fresh stones of knowledge of the spiritual and divine. How pure, elevating and practical its code of morals! How encouraging to the highest exertions in goodness and virtue and religion its promises of ultimate success and reward! How inspiring its poetry! How comforting, as the soft whisperings of the Eolian harp when kissed by amorous breezes, then stirring the soul to its profoundest depths of feeling, or bearing it aloft upon Seraph wings, in contemplations the most sublime and rapturous. Let infidels hold their conventions to deride the Bible, and ridicule its teachings and abolish its Sabbaths; let fanatical statesmen reject its God-inspired doctrines, and depend on innate instincts, and mental abstractions for political principles of government! Do ye—

Take two young men equal in talents and acquirements, and start them in the race of life. Let the one take heed to his conduct according to the word of God, believing its doctrines, and keeping its commandments. Let the other reject Christianity as a divinely-revealed religion, spurning its teachings and refusing obedience to its precepts; what think you will be the final result here and hereafter? What shall be the nature and extent of that influence which they individually shall exert upon society? A Howard burning with the zeal of a quenchless love, visiting the hospitals of Europe to minister physical comfort and religious instruction to the wretched inmates, is an object far more worthy the ambition of the immortal mind, than a Bonaparte marching to the throne of universal empire, over battlefields drenched with human blood, and whitened with human bones.

Depending upon the Bible as his rule and guide, the young man shall succeed in life; but relying upon any other system independent of its illuminations and teachings, he shall make a miserable failure, drifting like some melancholy wreck, upon a moonless and starless sea tossed and driven by mocking winds.

Oh, tell me, is there any power short of the grace of God in the soul, which can save the young from the dominant control of appetites and passions? You may expatiate in eulogistic terms, upon the humanizing and refining influences of education, and polite and elegant associations; but alas! education with its attendant polish and refinement, contains no "Vismedicatrix" to heal the maladies of the soul diseased, or to make that upright and pure which by nature is "earthly, sensual and devilish." A young man may be as amiable and lovely as was the young man who came to Jesus inquiring the way of life; he may have talents angel bright; with a polished education and fascinating manners, but apart from the checks and restraints of the Christian religion, carnality shall predominate over the inner man, making even genius itself subservient to its baneful lusts and appetites, as is made manifest in the case of the gifted Byron. The Duke of Orleans was a Prince of shining talents and great taste and spirit, but dissolute in his habits of life to a most disgraceful pitch of extravagance. He had the misfortune in his youth, says the pen of the historian, to be placed in the hands of a most unprincipled Tutor, though he was a Cardinal of Rome and prime minister of France.

There is nothing that can be substituted, in the room of a heartfelt experimental religion. Educational training shall be incomplete and unsatisfying unless pervaded by the faith, hope and love of the gospel. Human happiness and greatness cannot be formed in natural or mental worth alone. What are Seneca's Morals to Solomon's Proverbs? What the philosophy of Aristotle and Plato to the philosophy of Jesus Christ? The light from the Star of Bethlehem outshines all other lights, for when the light from other stars goes out in darkness, this star, as it once guided the wise men to the manger cradle of the infant Jesus, so now shall guide every inquiring heart to the cross, then up to those mansions not made with hands eternal in the heavens.

Voltaire, the high priest of infidelity, and John Calvin, the founder of Presbyterianism, were of the same generation; they were contemporaries through a long course of time. Calvin when a young man governed his conduct by the word of God; Voltaire governed his conduct by a Christless philosophy. He laughed to scorn the religion of Jesus. While the one was scattering with pestilent activity the seeds of immorality and unbelief; the other with equal unwearied zeal labored for the cause of religion and the regeneration of sinners. The works of Voltaire have found their way wherever the French language is read; the disciples of Calvin are to be seen wherever the English language is spoken. The principles of the Arch-infidel were more rapid in their operation; he who aimed at no such evil as that which he contributed so largely to bring about, was himself startled at their progress; in his later days he trembled at the consequences which he then foresaw; and his remains had scarcely mouldered in the grave, before these consequences brought down the whole fabric of government in France, overturned her altars, subverted her throne, carried crime, devastation and misery into every part of his country, and shook the rest of Europe like an earthquake. Calvin's doctrines, meantime, were slowly and gradually winning their way; but they advanced every year with accelerated force, and their effect must ultimately be more extensive and more powerful and more permanent, for he has mightier principles at work.

Who seeks for happiness in heaven at last, apart from excellence and truth and love, in the embracement of Christianity, "seeks blooming roses on the cheek of death; seeks mellow grapes beneath the icy poles; seeks substance in a world of shades." While your locks are yet wet with the dew of life's balmy spring, and the activities of your nature are fresh and vigorous, we beseech you to give your hearts to God. There is a moral beauty in a life of religious activity and zeal for the promotion of God's glory in the world, that is incomparable.

Brooklyn Holiness Convention.

The Fourteenth Annual, Interdenominational, Brooklyn Holiness Convention will be held (D. V.) Nov. 1-10, inclusive, in The First U. P. Church, corner Bond Street and Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., Rev. W. M. Nichol, pastor. The Convention will open Friday, Nov. 1, at 2:30 P. M., with a season of intercession led by Mrs. John Thomas of Wilmore, Ky., followed by the Lord's Supper.

The Convention evangelists will be Rev. John L. Brasher, D.D., of Alabama, Rev. A. L. Whitcomb, of California, Commissioner S. L. Brengle, of The Salvation Army. It is also possible that Rev. C. W. Ruth, of California, will be with us.

The 9:00 A. M. Fellowship Meetings will be led by Sister Thomas. The Sunrise Power House services by Sister Nellie Magee, the Praise and Testimony meetings by Bro. Will Stringham. There will be open-air convocations daily at 7:00 P. M., in charge of Bro. Chas. MacLean with Bro. W. H. Ortlip in his famous "Chalk-Talks."

Even-tide Intercession will be led by Rev. J. D. Thomas, of Cambridge, Mass., and Rev. L. Henderson, of Danbury, Conn.

Sister John Norberry will occupy her usual place at the organ, and the soloists will be Rev. Alvin Young, who will also lead the singing, Sister Elsie Davies, the marvellously sweet soprano of Wales, and Sister Florence Miller, whose rich contralto voice has so often charmed the Brooklyn Convention. No stronger altar workers can be found in the Holiness Movement, than these three, who always sing in the "fulness of the blessing" and never leave the altar 'til the last seeker is gone.

Sister Gertrude Miller will be on hand to secure rooms for you at reasonable rates if you will write me in advance what you desire. Breakfast, dinner and supper are served in the church.

Will THE HERALD family all over the land please pray for a mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the Convention? For preachers, workers, and those who bring the messages in song, and for the dear brothers and sisters who so faithfully and loyally minister in dining room and kitchen, because they too have "an inheritance among all them which are sanctified." Pray also please, for good weather, and finally, brethren, plead for us Philippians 4:19. We believe in presenting details to our Heavenly Father, who never has failed us. Everybody pray! Everybody come who can! Especially do we invite all holiness evangelists who happen to be near at Convention time to join in fellowship with us, as they can make it convenient.

ing the time I was studying I spent four years on a District as presiding elder, and the balance of the time in stations. But the study was a great help to me.

I have not retired from the pulpit. I have three regular appointments which I fill with great satisfaction to myself, and expressions of appreciation from the people I serve.

TEMPTATION AND HOLINESS

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

WE desire now to notice how a holy person can be tempted? If there is nothing within that can be appealed to, how can he be tempted? Again, how far can one go without losing his experience?

1. God permits temptations, either to remind one afresh what grace has accomplished in his case or to reveal some defect. He tempteth no man, though his fiery trial detects and exposes the dross.

It is quite easy to see how one could be tempted while carnal principles remained within, because as long as a carnal tendency remains, it can be appealed to. But now we come to one who has not only been saved from sinful desires, but from the very germ that would hatch out a desire. There is nothing but love filling such a heart.

If this be true, how can such an individual be tempted? We answer, just the same as Adam and Eve, (who were holy) could be tempted. Just the same as Jesus, who was not only human, but Divine, could be tempted.

"Power to commit sin is essential to temptation. Man is a moral being, he is therefore capable of moral action. A moral action is the voluntary act of an intelligent agent; and the volition or action must be right or wrong according to some moral standard in the universe. If power to do the contrary does not exist in the agent at the time the violation is put forth, there is no moral merit in the act; therefore power to sin is requisite to all moral merit. Power to sin is not a vice nor even an imperfection; but a virtue of a very high quality. If God gave me the power to do wrong that I might have the power to do right, (which he surely did), then I am to recognize that power as a Divine gift and act accordingly."

We must discriminate between a possibility to sin and a tendency or bent toward sinning. Jesus could have sinned, but that is no proof that sinful propensities existed in him. The same can be said of all who are pure in heart.

The possibility of sin must be pre-supposed in any individual before we can conceive of his being tempted. But because he is subject to temptation, that does not necessarily imply the existence of any sinful tendency. God is the only being who is absolutely perfect. It is impossible for him to sin. "He cannot be tempted." It is contrary to his nature. If it had been impossible for Jesus to sin, then he would not have been human. The possibility in Jesus to sin, never became an actual fact. Thank God! Through grace, the same may be said of redeemed man.

But if there remains no tendency to sin why are even the pure in heart directed to "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation?" Even Paul felt the need of saying, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I myself should be a cast-away."

We are on probation. All human needs and desires, though in themselves lawful and innocent, become sources of danger unless steadily guarded.

2. How far can a person go without losing his experience?

Holiness is not such an ethereal thing as to slip away under every test and unpleasant circumstance. One may do or leave undone things that call forth a reproof of the Holy Spirit. Perhaps on some lawful point, he rashly said or did something; afterwards he looks back and feels that he did not do the best thing. His conscience is very tender and he feels badly about it. The Spirit (and sometimes the devil), magnifies it and makes it look still more serious. The erring one is very sorry and solemnly promises God that it shall never be repeated. God takes him at his word and passes the thing by as a fault. As time goes by perhaps the same thing is repeated. Again the Spirit reproves him but after a time of fasting, weeping and praying, confidence regains her former strength and God excuses the thing as before.

Clean souls suffer more remorse from wounding their conscience once, than back-slidden souls do in yielding time and again. We are not prepared to say how often a sanctified soul can call forth a reproof of the Spirit on the same point and not lose his experience. We would not like to say more than twice. It largely depends upon the amount of light the person has. One person might lose his experience much more easily than another. However, no conscientious soul is anxious to experiment. He wants to keep as far away from the precipice as possible.

Some people are continuously harrassed and tormented for fear they might lose their experience. Their time is largely occupied in praying over their old weaknesses, or examining some of the devil's scare-crows. This is dishonoring to God, and often opens an inlet to unbelief—the first carnal principle to enter a holy heart. "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment: He that feareth is not made perfect in love." Has God not said: "If in anything ye be otherwise minded" he will "reveal even this unto you?" Let God's responsibility alone!

It is his business to let light shine, and your business to walk in it. It is his business to make duty very plain, and your business to quickly obey. It is his business to convict you on any line that is for your good, and it is your business to keep yourself open and glad to receive such conviction. It is his business to upset your plans, and reprove you when you are about to do, or already have done something that would injure your experience, and it is your business to move so softly and conscientiously that he can easily carry out his own blessed designs. Such souls never need lose their experience.

This is rest of faith. This is letting God fight his own battles. This is being "hid with Christ in God." Few have ever dug deep enough to find this place; and a less number have lived holy long enough to retain such an inheritance; but, thank God it is a glorious possibility. Grace is enabling the writer to prove it. Hallelujah!

Some Don'ts for Preachers.

BY F. LINCICOME.

Don't fail to preach Jesus and the cross. Preaching should be such as takes hold upon the people. It has been my observation that the preaching of the cross never fails to do it.

Flickering lights, shooting meteors, telegraphic sensations, and bursting bubbles may interest and call forth commendations from the floating populace and light reading "readers," but whom will such preaching lead to Christ? The preaching that takes hold of the people is the preaching of the cross. You cannot deceive the people. If you attempt to preach yourself, for self-glory, the people will detect it, and your preaching will be in vain. A gospel properly proclaimed is its own attraction. It takes hold upon the people, and such hold that sinners cannot shake it off. If you want self-glory, go to the literary or political world, and dig, dig deep and you will find it, but the glory of preaching always belongs to God, and he will turn and overturn until men and preaching are consecrated to his glory through the salvation of souls.

Preaching that comes from the soul, gushing from the mouth, sparkling tear-drops, tracing the blood veins and dropping from the fingers, can be rendered useful in the cities amid the "higher-ups," or it may be taken at three o'clock in the afternoon into the country schoolhouse, where, surrounded by rude benches, broken windows, bare floors, and coatless lads, it will wield an influence which will be fully realized only when eternity dawns upon us.

Some ministers are forever talking about the philosophy of religion and its relation to science, "premises," "reasonable hypothesis," and "third propositions" with a logical conclusion. Others are spending their time and energy in preaching "issues" such as dress, tobacco, jewelry, lodges, meats and drinks, and ordinances. Still others are making a great effort to quote the "fathers," renowned poets, and a large sprinkle of Shakespeare.

The average sermon of today is made up of about five and one-half ounces of stories, four ounces of literary quotations, six ounces of anecdotes, and one-half ounce from some old commentary. In other words, about ninety-nine percent of it is a conglomeration and about one percent, Bible truth.

A good many preachers today are "crackerjacks" at biology, geology, astronomy, sociology, psychology, philosophy, and "foolosophy," but are very short on the Bible.

Let us get back to the cross of Christ in our preaching, and help the Holy Ghost in revealing Christ to a lost and dying world. "And I, if I, be lifted up. . . will draw all men unto me."

Finney, in a lecture on the subject of revival, delivered as long ago as 1835, said, "A revival is a purely philosophical result of the right use of constituted means. It is not a miracle, nor dependent upon a miracle."

Tools For Workers.

A Commentary on the Whole Bible

By Jamieson, Fausset and Brown

"This is the only one volume commentary on the whole Bible that is satisfactory as a spiritual, evangelical work, true to the Bible as of supreme Divine authority. Its strongest point is just that which most teachers and Bible readers need, a clear explanation of verses at once scholarly and spiritual. It can be unreservedly recommended to the attention of all Christian workers."—Sunday School Times.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

WINONA LAKE BIBLE CONFERENCE.

By M. A. Martin.

The thirty-fifth annual Bible Conference in session for ten days at Winona Lake, Ind., closed Sunday, August 25, with twelve inspiring meetings. At least 12,000 were in attendance at the combined services of the day. The Conference throughout was exalting in its instruction and in its association, and to thousands a spiritual feast. For the first time the Conference closed with Holy Communion at 9:30 P. M., in the Auditorium.

More than two thousand wended their way from the Tabernacle to the Communion Service in charge of Dr. Biederwolf, who was assisted by ministers and elders of various denominations. It was the most impressive and spiritual Conference closing on record and will no doubt be carried out in the future.

With the soul stirring messages of the preachers and Bible teachers the quiet communing with God at the closing hour, men and women who have been in contact with events for years at Winona were led to exclaim, "the like of this 35th Conference we have never known."

The attendance throughout broke the record of last year by three hundred. Six hundred and ninety-four ministers were registered, coming from all parts of the United States. A large number of Home and Foreign Missionaries were in attendance who thanked God for the privilege afforded them.

The Conference closes with all expenses paid and a neat balance which Director Biederwolf turns over to Winona Institutions.

One cannot begin to tell of the many good things which the program afforded, sermons, Bible expositions, the splendid music directed by Home Rode-heaver, the "Rescue Mission Boys," the Gideons, the Hillside services, the meetings for women, daily addressed by Dr. Massee, the inspiration given by the Missionaries who told of their work each afternoon and evening.

"Home-Coming Day" was a great success. The largest crowd ever assembled on a mid-week occasion was here. Rev. "Billy" Sunday was the preacher, and the very mention of his name always brings great crowds to Winona. An "old-fashioned lawn party" was held under the trees, where refreshments were served, and reminiscences of old time Winonans eloquently given. Dr. Biederwolf presided.

Among the preachers were, Drs. Frank H. Ballard and H. J. Wicks of England; Drs. J. C. Massee, Robert Watson, Boston; Dr. Robert G. Lee, Memphis, Tenn.; Dr. Wm. B. Crowe, St. Louis; Dr. Robert Scott Inglis, Newark, N. J.; Dr. W. A. Sunday; noted Bible Expositors, Dr. Herbert W. Bieber and A. T. Robertson, drew large audiences at the morning hours, the Auditorium being filled.

There were a number of Evangelists who spoke at the Hillside services, Dr. Biederwolf preaching at the opening Sunday evening service. His text, "Where there is no vision, the people perish." Many declared this to be the strongest message of the Conference.

Sergeant Alvin C. York, the great soldier, speaking on Sunday afternoon, told of his war experiences and also of his plans for the mountaineer children.

The consecration meeting for men on the Indian Mound led by Dr. Biederwolf, will ever be remembered by the hundreds who took part.

Dr. Massee had charge of the women's meeting in the Auditorium, which was also largely attended.

The Conference goes down in history as one, if not the greatest ever held in Winona. Dr. Biederwolf is a great director and will have the prayers of God's people in his work wherever he goes and in his plans for Winona Conference next year.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

We were to begin a revival with the baby Nazarene Church in Chillicothe, Ohio, August 12th, but because of being called home by the sickness and death of our father, we did not get to the meeting until five days later. We found that Rev. A. K. Laird and wife, supply pastors, had the meeting going good. We swung right in with the good spirit and tide of the meeting, and for ten days we preached the gospel of full salvation the best we could. The Holy Spirit put his seal on every service, and convicted the people of their need of a Savior and sanctifier. We did not have a great throng of seekers at the altar, but there was hardly a service but what some one prayed through to a definite experience of regeneration or sanctification.

The last Sunday we had the joy of seeing twelve fine saved and sanctified people unite with the church. Among them were two railroad men and their wives, who are tithers and will be a strong asset to the church in every way. We were entertained in the home of Rev. James Clifford and wife, chaplains of The United States Industrial Reformatory, a Federal Prison which has about 1200 or more prisoners from all parts of the United States. Rev. Clifford and wife are both saved and sanctified Nazarene preachers, and are wielding a mighty influence for good among these men who have broken the laws of the United States. Sister Clifford is affectionately known among these men as "Mother Clifford," and truly she has proven herself a mother to many a wayward young man.

Both Sundays that we were there we were in the Chapel Services. The first Sunday after we preached and services were over a young Jew came sobbing to the Chaplain's residence, begging for prayer. We took him to our room, where Brothers Clifford, Laird and myself prayed with him and pointed him to Jesus. It was hard to get him to see that Jesus died for him, and that his blood would cover his sins, but finally his broken and contrite heart seemed to open, and we believe that Jesus found a welcome in this young Jew's heart, whose kindred as a people have rejected Jesus as being their Messiah.

The second Sunday we were there, Sister Laird preached, and Brother Clifford made an altar call, and soon there was at least 100 precious men and boys kneeling at the altar. As Brother Clifford asked us to pray for them, we never felt God's presence any nearer or clearer in any great holiness camp meeting than we did right there. Muffled sobs and tear-dimmed eyes told us that God was touching some of their hearts. Prison rules limited the time of our service, but we hope that some of these dear men found Jesus as their Savior, and we will not be a bit surprised to meet some of these precious men in heaven, who found Jesus at that altar of prayer on that memorable Sunday morning. I wish that every penal institution in the world had chaplains like Rev. James Clifford and wife. The Chillicothe revival was our last engagement before our District Assembly. We have just got home from our Assembly, and will rest a few days before going out on the battlefields again. Our slate is filling up nicely for Autumn and Winter, but we have a few open dates, and if any who may read these lines feel that they need us for a revival, we will be glad to correspond with them. Our address is London, Ohio, Rt. 5.

BOSSARD'S CAMP MEETING.

This camp is situated eight miles from Sumter, S. C., on the Sumter-Bishopville Highway, one of the best paved roads of the South, which makes it very easy to reach. People can come from adjoining towns without difficulty. The Camp is only two summers old, but a tent meeting has been held there for the past four years, which prepared the people for the camp. It was only a year ago that we partly organized as a camp meeting. This year we organized with an executive board and also a board of trustees. The people of the community seem back of it to a man.

The workers for this year were Rev. J. R. Parker and Rev. M. V. Lewis, of Wilmore, Ky. Rev. Lewis is one of the finest song leaders that has ever been in this part of the state. People came for miles to hear him direct the singing, while his solos were the sweetest songs ever heard. The very first night he captivated the audience.

Rev. Parker was true in his preaching and fearless when it came to uncovering sin. He preached some of the most remarkable sermons I have heard. We hope to have him back with us in the future. There was one sanctification and about twenty conversions. During the meeting a man promised to give the lumber and put up a dormitory that will take care of fifty people. Several other men have donated enough lumber to erect a tabernacle. In ten years we hope to have one of the best camps in the South. This is just the beginning of what God wants to do for us. This camp has grown out of several meetings which have been conducted under one of the League's tents. May God add his blessing to the League and send in the money so other tents may be purchased.

C. O. Dorn, Pres.

NORMAL, ILLINOIS, CAMP.

The Normal camp was a fruitful one this year. A spirit of prayer rested on the people from beginning to close, hence a sense of God was realized. A kindly spirit was evident throughout. The workers had a rich anointing on them. Brother Whitcomb, Brother Fugett ministered in the word and Bro. C. Milby in song. Brothers Vennard and Griffith from C. E. I., had charge of the young people's meetings. Thursday, P. M., was missionary service. Bro. Glenn and family represented their work in Egypt. It was a new departure for this camp to give a service over to missionary work. It was so satisfactory, it will be repeated next year. Miss Aronson and Miss Jones, returned missionaries, spoke a few words. I am sure it pays to serve Jesus wholly.

ALPENA, MICHIGAN.

In traveling over these United States I have found that the one cry is, "What is the matter with our Protestant churches?" "Why have they lost their crowds?" "Once our churches were crowded, but why this falling away?"

There is a reason, and we believe one of the principal reasons is that the preachers have largely lost the passion and heart-breaking burden for souls. It used to be that when you listened to the man of God in the pulpit it stirred you and put you under conviction until you felt yourself a lost sinner. Preachers do not pray as they used to, nor do they study their sermons as they should. The fact is, there is not much gospel in many of the present day sermons. The gospel is the most charming message you can give to the people and they like it, and tell it abroad and the next Sunday the crowd has increased, until by and by the church is filled with eager listeners.

When preachers neglect to agonize in prayer for the lost his message is dead—no life, no power, no salvation. Preachers do not wait on the Lord for the leading of the Spirit in the messages they shall give to the people. A Sunday School lad called on his pastor and said to him, "I judge we shall have a great sermon today?" The pastor replied, "Oh boy, I don't know myself the sermon for the day." If he had been spending hours in prayer he would have said, "Yes, my precious boy, I will by his grace," give my people a gospel message today." Men like to go to church if they get food from a live sermon.

The crime wave would lessen if preachers would fast and pray twice a week, and spend from two to four hours in earnest prayer for one solid year. Revivals would break out everywhere, but dry, lifeless sermons without power grip no one and the preacher seems he is glad when time for dismissal comes.

There is only one reason I would be a bishop, and that is that every pastor who failed to have a real soul-saving revival would be moved. They cry "Times have changed! This young life is no worse than in saloon days! We had sweeping revivals then!" But we did not have the monster of modernism to combat. When the people's faith in the Word of God is destroyed it is difficult to get them to give heed to the gospel message.

For one, I shall continue to fast and pray. I must have souls in every meeting. I expect it, I preach for it, I exhort for it, I believe for it, and praise the Lord, I see it. If you do not desire sinners converted do not call us. If you don't want a tithing church do not call us. We do not need the froth and foam, but safe, constructive evangelistic revivals. We never had greater faith, a richer experience, and the past year has been one of victory. We have been in this great work for twenty-five years. Write us at Wilmore, Ky.

With every good wish and earnest prayer, I am,
Will J. Harney.

FROST BRIDGE CAMP MEETING.

The annual camp meeting was held at the Frost Bridge camp, near Waynesboro, Miss., August 16-25. Rev. Don Householder, of Los Angeles, Calif., was the preacher in charge. Prof. J. H. Furbay, of Taylor University, was in charge of the singing and children's work. Mrs. J. H. Furbay was pianist and assisted Prof. Furbay in bringing some wonderful gospel messages in song.

This was one of the greatest meetings in the history of the camp. The weather was favorable and made it possible for many who lived quite a distance from the camp, to attend the meeting. The crowds were large and at times the great tabernacle was crowded and numbers were not able to find seats.

Rev. Householder, a faithful, consecrated servant of God, proclaimed the great Bible truths, earnestly and forcibly. The visible results of his gospel messages of full redemption were another convincing evidence that the Word of God will not return unto him void. Conviction settled upon the people and over sixty souls knelt at the altar, most of whom prayed through and gave definite testimonies that they were either regenerated or sanctified by the power of God.

A beautiful and impressive scene was witnessed the last Saturday night of the meeting, when fifteen young people bowed at the altar and dedicated their lives to God. Several testified that they were definitely called to the ministry and Christian service. God alone knows what may be accomplished in his kingdom by the lives of these consecrated young people.

Prof. Furbay did a great work with the children. He conducted their services each morning, and in one of their services fourteen of them gave their little hearts to Jesus. One night was given over for a children's service, with Prof. Furbay in charge. This program revealed the fact that Prof. Furbay knows how to tell the old, old story of Jesus and his plan of salvation in an attractive and impressive manner. By the faithful service and Christian influence of such a true follower of Christ these little ones have been wonderfully blessed.

It was inspiring to have in the congregation day after day preachers who helped by their prayers, testimonies and messages. Several Asbury boys were among those who visited the camp, and willingly did what they could.

Plans are already being discussed for the improvement of the camp ground during the next year. The Junior Association has made plans to help in beautifying the campus and for the erection of a girls' dormitory. The Junior Association is a young organization and is a great help in securing the interest of the young people in the work, and in this Association leaders are being trained to carry on the work and relieve those who have labored so faithfully through the years.

When we think of what has been wrought, of the many blessings God had poured out upon us during this meeting, truly we have much for which we should be thankful. We earnestly pray that "He who began a good work" in us "will perfect it until the day of Jesus Christ."

"JESUS BIDS US SHINE."

"His lamps are we,
To shine where He shall say.
And lamps are not for sunny rooms,
Nor for the light of day;
But for dark places of the earth
Where shame and wrong and crime have birth;
Or for the murky twilight grey
Where wandering sheep have gone astray."

It will be remembered that I spent some weeks in this same institution June past. While here at that time I met with a wonderfully interesting boy, a handsome, intelligent young fellow with his legs in plaster cases for the strengthening of some weakness. He was in a rolling chair and was brought to my room several times where we talked together, and I prayed with him very earnestly for his salvation. I am very grateful to tell you that I recently received a letter from him, he having returned to his home, in which he tells me that he has been converted. His testimony is very clear. I am now praying that he may be called into the ministry, and I feel that it would be cause for eternal praise to the blessed Trinity if my coming to the hospital led to the conversion of this boy and he became a faithful preacher of the gospel. Please join with me in this prayer.

I hope I may be able to report decided progress in my health next week, and if it is God's will; I long to preach the gospel for several years yet. But after fifty years of almost unbroken health, and almost constant preaching, I have no right to complain, and I will not do so. I have been quoting to myself with great comfort these past days, the words of our blessed Lord: "The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" By the way, brethren, that is a great text, and if I get back to the pulpit I will use it, and I suggest to any of you that you build up a good practical sermon from these words of our Lord Jesus.

Faithfully yours in him,

H. C. MORRISON.

NEWS NOTES.

BISHOP James Cannon, Jr., Chairman of the Board of Temperance and Social Service of the Methodist Church, South, in a report which he is sending to the Church Press, concerning the work of the several international religious conferences in Europe which he attended as an official delegate, among other things, says:

"The impression which President Hoover made upon these European leaders was the thing which struck me most forcibly in my contacts with them in the great social and religious gatherings. Their estimate is that he has a constructive mind of the first order, highly developed by study and experience. With such ability joined to his high conception of duty and patriotic purpose they expect him to make one of our greatest Presidents. They think that his impact upon national and international questions in the short space of six months has been tremendous and unparalleled.

"A striking example of the Hoover method of handling important subjects is found in his reply to the statement of Senator Howell on lack of Prohibition Enforcement in the District of Columbia. In this statement which should receive the hearty, enthusiastic approval and active support not only of all true friends of prohibition but of all genuine supporters of constitutional government, the President most significantly declares: 'It is the intention, not only to secure the fullest enforcement in the District possible under the organization of enforcement agencies as provided by law, but to make it a model in this country.'

"This declaration is the climax of a statement bristling with facts; asserting that Senator Howell's statement seriously impugns the good faith and capacity of the District Officials, calling them by name; that the President is glad that the question has been raised, expressing a natural confidence that such charges would not be made on the floor of the Senate unless they were based on facts, and declaring positively that if such facts are forthcoming the President himself will have the matter thoroughly investigated.

"With President Hoover's life record of successful achievement in whatever he has undertaken these cannot be regarded as idle words or as an exaggerated statement issued under sudden pressure, but as a thoroughly considered and carefully worded expression of the President's fixed determination to do a certain definite thing, namely, to give to the country and to the world a demonstration of the kind of prohibition enforcement which is possible under existing laws and agencies as a 'model' of what can and what ought to be done, in other cities and sections of the country whenever the responsible heads of government are sincere and vigorous in their purpose to enforce the prohibition law.

"As the Congress of the United States—the Senate and the House of Representatives—is the legislative body which passes all laws for the District of Columbia, the people of the country have a right to expect their Representatives in Congress to give sympathetic and practical co-operation to the President, the Chief Executive of the District of Columbia, in his expressed purpose to make the District a 'model' of the enforcement of the prohibition law. And if it shall be found that additional enforcement legislation is necessary for the District, the people will expect it to be promptly forthcoming.

"Model enforcement resulting in model conditions cannot be secured in a day, but those who have followed the amazing achievements of President Hoover's career know that if he has indeed put his hand to the plow he will not turn back until regardless of opposition and obstacles of every kind he has plowed the furrow to the end."

"Count It All Joy."

If the children of God consider their trials, not in their natural bitterness, but in the sweet love from whence they spring, and the sweet fruits that spring from them, that we are our Lord's gold, and that he tries us in the furnace to purify us, this may beget not only patience, but even gladness in the sufferings.—Leighton.

Seek ye the Lord, while he may be found. Call ye upon him while he is near. Isa. 55:6.

JUST AS WELL BE HONEST.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

THE Lord has set up such a definite and plain standard for those who would be fully saved that one need not err therein. The fact is, "he that willeth to do his will, shall know of the doctrine." It's all in whether we want to know God's requirements for us or not.

If there were no other passage in Holy Writ by which we may be guided in our pilgrimage from earth to heaven, the one which declares that, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord" is enough to convince any honest-minded person that one need not seek entrance into the heavenly kingdom unless he has this indispensable qualification.

I know there are persons, many of them, who claim that it is impossible to be holy in this life; that so long as we are in the flesh we shall be subject to temptation, and that we are compelled to yield to temptation, and consequently sin. But over against the opinions of such persons we have the Word of God that declares that we must be saved from sin if we hope to gain entrance into the New Jerusalem.

The Lord tells us emphatically why we should be holy, because he is holy. An unholy person cannot have fellowship with a holy God. And he proposes to so change us inside and out, that we shall be holy—like him—and that is a fair proposition. His commands are always his enablings. If he says we must be holy, and proposes to so transform us that we shall be clean in thought, word and deed, why should we object to his undertaking the work in us!

He declares that he will "take away the stony heart and give us a heart of flesh." But he cannot do this until he gets our full consent. Ah, there's the rub. Our carnal nature cries out for its own sinful propensities. It longs for the fleshpots of Egypt when it is our privilege to be feasting on the milk and honey of Canaan. It takes will power, determination, and all the forces we can command to be able to submit one's self to the Divine Surgeon for the eradication of the carnal mind, but by God's grace we can do it, if we really want to be holy more than anything else in the world.

McCheyne, a man who knew this blessed deliverance from sin, once said:

"I am also deepened in my conviction that if we are to be instruments in such a work we must be purified from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit. Oh, cry for personal holiness, constant nearness to God by the blood of the Lamb! Bask in his beams; lie back in the arms of his love; be filled with his Spirit; or all success in the ministry will only be to your own everlasting confusion. . . . Oh, to have Brainerd's heart for perfect holiness; to be holy as God is holy, pure as Christ is pure, perfect as our Father in heaven is perfect! . . . How much more useful might we be, if we were only more free from pride, self conceit, personal vanity, or some secret sin that our heart knows. Oh, hateful sins, that destroy our peace and ruin souls!"

Is it not strange that we should have to be exhorted and persuaded to have a work performed in us that would uproot that which causes all of our trouble, unrest, unbelief, and keeps us unhappy? Those hateful things that destroy our peace and ruin our souls. God only wills the best for us, but it seems from our slowness to let him have his way, that we do not believe it. To be supremely happy is to be emptied of sin and filled with the love of God. To be unhappy is to be separated from God and a slave to the Devil.

Charles Wesley poured out the longings of his soul for this grace of complete deliverance from all sin, when he wrote:

"Oh for a heart to praise my God,
A heart from sin set free,
A heart that always feels thy blood
So freely spilt for me.

"A heart resigned, submissive, meek,
My great Redeemer's throne;
Where only Christ is heard to speak,
Where Jesus reigns alone."

That's it! To let Christ be Ruler of our hearts so that every word, thought and deed will be prompted by the gracious Indweller—Christ. Reader, have you done this? Turned over your heart premises to HIM who can cleanse and keep them clean? You are the loser if you have not done so.

New Business Manager For Asbury College.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees of Asbury College the first of June Mr. C. A. Lovejoy, Business Manager for the past six years, submitted his resignation to the Board to become effective September 15, 1929. In this place of large responsibility great care had to be taken in the selection of his successor.

After careful thought on the part of the President and the Executive Committee, Mr. W. W. Cary, of 1754 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill., was elected to this position. Mr. Cary is, we believe, well qualified for his task. He has been a very successful business man in Columbus, Ohio, and has for the past two years been Vice-President and Executive Secretary of the Chicago Evangelistic Institute assisting Dr. Iva Durham Venard in her most excellent Bible Training School.

Brother Cary has been cradled and reared in the Holiness Movement and has felt a distinct call to leave secular work and identify himself in a business way with the interdenominational holiness work. He feels the opening at Asbury College is the open door for just such work as he has been called to perform. I bespeak from all readers of THE HERALD for Brother Cary a sympathetic and appreciative welcome to this place of largest opportunity and responsibility. Brother Cary has been a valiant defender of the faith in every church to which he has belonged. He rings absolutely true to all the ideals for which Asbury College stands. May the Lord grant his blessing as he begins the new year, a member of the administrative staff of Asbury College.

L. R. AKERS, President.

Asbury College Begins

Its Fortieth Year.

PRESIDENT L. R. AKERS.

Asbury College began its fortieth year September 18 with the activities of Freshman Week. Four decades have passed since the venture of faith which meant the establishment of Asbury College. From its humble beginning of eleven students and two teachers it now ranks as the largest college of liberal arts in the State of Kentucky excluding the two universities. All records were broken this year in the enrollment of students which filled to overflowing all dormitories, requiring the requisition of additional housing facilities. More than five hundred registered in the College of Liberal Arts during the first five days of registration, 110 are enrolled in Bethel Academy, while the Seminary has held its own or made possibly a slight gain over former years.

The school has taken on new life and enthusiasm since the opening of the new auditorium with its splendid equipment and the use of the great four manual organ and Steinway concert grand piano, both gifts from friends of Asbury College.

Great anticipation had been made for revival services which were to have been conducted by President Emeritus, Henry Clay Morrison, who has endeared himself through his years of sacrificial service to every Asburian and friend of the institution throughout our country. Sad indeed was the announcement that because of illness he was unable to conduct the special services which at the beginning of each fall semester have become an annual custom. Fortunate, however, was the institution in securing the services of Rev. John Thomas, this witty, wholesome, and interesting preacher of full salvation. Brother Thomas is a Welshman and his messages, though couched in simple language, are full of gripping and fervent appeals which result in altars filled night after night with those seeking pardon or purity. If all evangelists would present Scriptural Holiness as a second work of grace, subsequent to regeneration, as forcefully, scripturally, and as sweetly as does Brother Thomas, I believe a new era of spiritual life would be inaugurated throughout our nation. At present writing, two hundred or more have been at the altars within the past week and the good work still continues. This year is a bit epochal in the spiritual life of the Asbury students because of unusual outpourings. The spring meeting, conducted by the Rev. T. M. Anderson, was one of the most fruitful known by the College in many years. This open ten-day meeting, conducted by Brother Thomas, follows up in the fall with equally good results considering the number of days he was able to give us.

The Freshman Class, we think, has never been excelled in its fine personnel and cosmopolitan representation. Numbering approximately two hundred from two-thirds of the States of our Union, we feel it to be a picked body of Christian youth that will splendidly acquit itself in valiant service when, four years hence, its members go out upon life's firing line. Last year's Senior Class, numbering 114, was the largest in the history of the institution, and one thing worthy of note was that it was almost a unit for Jesus Christ, 112 of the 114 acknowledging His lordship in thought and life.

The opening service of the school year was on Tuesday morning, September 24th, in the new Auditorium. Despite the fact that this beautiful building will accommodate around two thousand people, it was almost filled with students and visitors for this occasion. Mrs. Era Wilder Peniston, one of the seven members of the Faculty in Europe this summer, who studied in Paris under the world's greatest master organists, presided at the splendid four manual Austin organ, playing the grand old selections of the centuries in a twenty-five minute prelude.

The new department in Pipe Organ begins most auspiciously. In addition to the great instrument mentioned, through the generosity of the Senior Class a two manual fifteen stop Estey practice organ is also available, which greatly enhances the work of this department.

Upon the platform of this opening service were a large number of evangelists and ministers from Wilmore as well as out of town points. The President's address, stenographically reported, will be published, in whole or in part, in an early issue of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD.

With the spirit of harmony as nearly perfect as can be found, we believe, in any institution of our land, we begin the fortieth year of our college life confident that it is yet in its infancy and that the sunrise of a greater Asbury, whose gracious influence shall be felt around the world and whose graduates shall be among the recognized spiritual leaders of our age, is just dawning and we confidently look forward to the tomorrows under the guidance of the Holy Spirit whose blessed presence is felt in classroom and on the campus throughout the collegiate year.

Already Asbury College has proven its worth to the Kingdom of God. More than a hundred missionaries from this institution are scattered throughout the countries of the earth proclaiming the glorious message of full redemption. Hundreds, if not thousands, of evangelists, pastors, deaconesses, and mission workers may be found throughout our nation and in other lands. Five college presidents, with two of her sons elected to the bishopric, a general secretary of the Board of Missions, prominent lawyers and business men are also included in this galaxy of well trained minds and noble souls. And still the army increases from year to year. Asbury College is standing foursquare and unflinchingly for the faith of our fathers and for the spread of Scriptural Holiness throughout all lands. No taint of modernism is countenanced either among faculty or students.

Our great need is sufficient support from those who attest the excellence of its output and the truth of its spiritual standards. It is a clearly established fact in educational circles that students pay only a portion of their way through school. Student fees pay the professors, but never erect buildings. The compulsory building program of Asbury College, necessitated by the rapid increase in its student enrollment, has laid an almost crushing burden upon the shoulders of the administrative staff. Much prayer and thought must be continually given to this phase of the work which, if sufficient funds could be found to provide for current needs, would give larger opportunity for spiritual leadership and service. We are praying that God will open the hearts of those who are seeking to give an account of their stewardship to him to the end that investments may be made in this glorious business of fitting the youth of our land to become Spirit-filled evangelists of a great and complete redemption. With the sinews of war adequately provided, Asbury College's growth would be little short of phenomenal and its increased influence for God as well as the souls of men purchased by his only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, would be assured in larger measure than has ever been known before. We earnestly solicit the prayers and financial support of God's people everywhere to the end that Christ may be enthroned in the hearts of men and his teachings prevail in the councils of men.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

BIBLE STORY.

"The Least of These."

Matt. 25:40.

Jesus once told a story, children, to show how those who loved him could still work for him even after he went back to Heaven. He said that if one should see a poor person hungry and give him food, or thirsty and give him drink, or ragged and give him clothing, or sick and care for him, it would be just the same as if these things were done to himself. I want to read you Jesus' own words: "Inasmuch as you have done these things to one of the least (or poorest) of these, my brethren" (He calls poor people his brothers and sisters) "you have done them to me." Isn't it beautiful to think that by doing kind acts to poor people, we are really doing them to Jesus, himself?

Jesus said also, children, that if one did not do helpful things—such as feeding those who were hungry, clothing those who were ragged, and caring for those who were sick—it was the same as if he had been left to suffer. Jesus' own story, I am sure, you will like to read when you are older, but today I want to tell you a beautiful one which Longfellow wrote:

Many years ago in a country far away from here, men who wished to please God used sometimes to go away by themselves and live in a great building, called a monastery. These men were called monks, and they spent their time praying to God and doing kind, helpful things for people. They lived in little rooms called cells, ate simple food and wore coarse clothes, so as to have more money to give away.

One of these monks was alone one time in his cell. He knelt down on the cold stone floor and prayed, asking God to forgive him for all he had done that was wrong and to help him to be more loving and kind.

Suddenly the little cell became as bright as if lightning had flashed in the sky, and a Vision of Christ appeared in the room. A bright light shone about him, and he smiled upon the monk. He looked just as he did when he lived on earth and went about healing the lame, the deaf and the blind. The monk's eyes filled with tears of joy as he saw Christ. As he knelt there with his hands crossed upon his breast, worshipping this vision, he said, "Who am I, Lord, that Thou shouldst come from heaven, Thy home, to visit me in my poor cell?"

But as he prayed, suddenly, the monastery bell rang out, "Bim, bam! bim, bam!" It called the poor people, the blind, the lame, and all the beggars of the street, to come to the monastery to get their daily food. The monk, who knelt worshipping the beautiful vision was the one who always gave them this food. When he heard the bell he hesitated, not knowing what to do. How could he let the poor, hungry people stand waiting at the gate, and yet how could he leave his heavenly Guest to go to those beggars? As he was trying to decide, a little voice in his heart whispered:

"Do thy duty; that is best;

Leave unto thy Lord the rest!"

He knew it was his duty to feed the poor, so he started at once to his feet and with a last look at the Blessed Vision he slowly left his cell and went on his errand of love and mercy.

The poor people were waiting at the gate, looking hungrily through the iron grating. When they received the food, it seemed to them that it tasted better than it ever had before. The monk, as he gave it to them, thought of all they had to suffer, those poor people who had no homes or food, and who were often cold and ill, and he felt so sorry for them. Again, the voice in his heart whispered:

"Whatsoever thing thou doest

To the least of mine and lowest,

That thou doest unto Me!"

He was very glad to remember that, in giving to the beggars, he really gave to Christ.

When all the hungry people had been fed, the monk hurried back to his cell and lo! as he came near, he saw the same wonderful light shining from his little room. He paused at the door, for there stood the Vision of Christ, still standing where he had left him when he was called to feed the poor. For a whole hour Christ had waited for him to return.

As he fell upon his knees, the vision said, "If you had not gone to feed the poor and hungry, I could not have stayed, but in serving them you served me."—Adapted from Longfellow's "The Legend Beautiful."

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl nine years old. This is my first letter to the Boys and Girls' Page. There are eight churches in our town. I go to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. E. N. Tarpley is our pastor. We all love him. Aunt Bettie, I know Dr. Morrison. He has been in our town twice. He preached in the Tabernacle. I hope he has gotten well and will come to preach for us this year. My grandmother takes The Pentecostal Herald. Please publish my letter for I want to surprise grandmother. Love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Somehow today I've been impressed to write to The Herald. So much so that I felt the Lord would have me write. He's been so very, very near to me today. I had been quite ill since Wednesday and have been in the sick room of the hospital where I work and while I've been here God has been showing me some ways in which I can please him more. Today I've felt better physically and I had time to study my Bible and pray and not have to be rushing off to duty. Then, too, I've been reading The Herald. It was an old number but just the same it's been food for my soul. My greatest desire in life is to be what Jesus would have me be. His coming seems so near and there are so many who will be left if they're not saved soon. What we as Christians do for him I believe we must do while it is yet day, for surely the night draweth nigh. I have not been in Boston long. Came to Medford, that's a small city near Boston, last October. My home is in a small country town in the mountains of West Virginia. I praise God that I had a Christian mother who taught me from childhood to love Jesus. I started to serve him twice before, but went back, but three years ago he saved me and since I came to Boston he sanctified me and by his grace I mean to be true. I attend Wesley Chapel in Boston. Rev. Floyd Bradley is pastor. God is blessing in every way. I shall be glad to write to any who care to write to me as long as my time permits.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please let a little North Carolina boy join your band of boys and girls? I have just come home from the hospital, where the doctors operated on my head. I suffered so much before I went to the hospital; the bone just behind my ear hurt me so the doctors said I had bone infection. I may never get well. I cannot walk yet and am very weak. Father and mother are living, one brother and one sister, both older than I am. I am twelve years old. My mother has been in bed most every day since I was born, so I do not know what it is to have a mother's care. Father and mother are not Christians. I am not saved. I may soon go into eternity and I would like to get well, but if I must die I won't be saved. I have no one to tell me how to be saved. Mother is so uneasy and anxious for me to get well, but she can't help me, nor tell me anything about Jesus. I have lived at a cotton mill for ten years. The boys and girls are rough; they can tell you anything mean, but they don't seem to know anything about heaven. Aunt Bettie, I wish you would print this. I ask all the cousins that are Christians to please pray that I may be healed, and that I may be saved. I have always had a hard time in this life. I want to go to heaven when I die. I also ask all the cousins to write me. My address is Cliffside, N. C. Marvin McDaniel.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a Texas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Daddy takes The Pentecostal Herald and I rush to see page ten. I have brown hair, gray eyes and light complexion and weigh 110 pounds. I am thirteen years of age. I am a member of the M. E. Church. As this is my first letter I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this letter arrives. Any of the cousins who wish to, may write to me. Vergie L. Farmer.

Box 35, Queen City, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a girl from New Mexico join your happy band of Christians? I am ten years old and in the fifth grade. I am four feet, nine inches tall. I have light hair and blue eyes. My birthday is September 29. I enjoy reading page ten. I like to read the cousins' letters. I have five sisters and three brothers. There are nine of us in the family. We take The Herald. There are so many good things in it. I would like to see my letter printed.

Mosquero, New Mex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a letter from Louisiana to Our Boys and Girls. For quite a while I have wished to join the jolly band of The Pentecostal Herald. We cannot make other people see with our physical, mental or moral eyes. We have no right to condemn another's vision simply because it is not exactly like our own. One of the secrets of a happy, beautiful life, perhaps the greatest one, is that we only count as one, but it is good when we have learned to make that one count for something worth while. England was waiting in doubt and dread. No one knew how the tide of war was going. London was wrapped in fog and in the deeper gloom of depression, when a signal message reached the city which read, "Wellington defeated." The great city mourned and lamented, but the fog lifted, the light grew clearer, and it was discovered that the message had two additional words. It read, "Wellington defeated the enemy."

So runs the story of Waterloo. It is a story of life as well. It makes all the difference in the world whether we look at our dangers and difficulties through the fog of gloomy hopelessness and unbelief, or through the clearer atmosphere of faith and courage. Few messages of misfortune are so entirely and finally evil as we think. They often have some added words, if only we stand our ground and wait for them. This world is not a place for weakness or for the spirit that gives up easily. A young business man was manager and part owner of a large concern which was entirely destroyed by fire. His friends waited anxiously for his account of the disaster; when it came it was brief and dealt chiefly with the future. "The fire was fierce, but it is over," he wrote. "We have moved into new quarters not far away, and are going on as well as we can. The old building was inconvenient in some ways, and we shall remedy that in putting up a new building. So, what has happened may prove a blessing."

The world has little room for weakness and cowardice. If it had, it would be a poor place to develop strong, resourceful, courageous manhood and womanhood. Whatever else we are here to do, it certainly is not to fail, and our lives cannot be useless while we keep faith and do our best. We cannot always see the result of our efforts or understand the meaning of all the hindrances and defeats that come to us. When the gloom seems too thick to be pierced, when but a fragment of the message reaches us, then is the time for the highest courage that sees the future through the eyes of faith and refuses to admit defeat. If lamenting and mourning London could have pierced the fog it would have known that it had no cause for its gloom, and it is the same with the many of the happenings that we fear spell defeat and loss. We are reading but part of the message. By and by, in a clearer light we shall see that things which were hard were not so much to our hurt as we thought, and the words we miss may make success instead of failure.

Boys and girls, you can never tell where your letters in The Herald may land, but let's hope each one may contain a line that shall help some poor, starving soul; and don't forget the reading each day of your precious Bible. It's sweet teachings you can take with you all along the way and into the valley of the shadows. It is a beacon of light shining across the dark waves. I will answer every letter received.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter. I enjoy reading page ten. I go to the U. B. Church at McCool. Can any of you cousins guess my first name? It begins with E and ends with Y, and has five letters in it. Buddy Robinson is coming to the Nazarene Church in York Sunday. My mother is a member of the Nazarene Church. I will close now. I would like to see this in print.

Rt. 4, York, Nebr.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We (Fay Lee and Jolene McAdoo) are writing to you and the cousins because we find it much pleasure to read page ten, and we are sure that we will enjoy writing together. We are cousins. I (Fay Lee) have written once before, but since I take The Herald myself I want to write again and tell the cousins how it helps me out as I have been converted since my last letter. I am a member of the church and attend regularly. I received a letter from one of the cousins after I wrote my letter to The Herald. I guess you must know her, Sylva Enlow, Rineyville, Ky. I sure did like her and if anyone sees her tell her I'm still waiting for an answer.

I (Jolene—my friends call me Peggy) would like to become one of the cousins. We have not been taking The Herald very long but I have found that I certainly like page ten. This is my first letter and I hope to see it in print. My birthday is December 4. I am fifteen years old, have light brown hair, blue eyes and a fair complexion. I am five feet, four inches tall. I will be a junior in high school next year. I go to Sunday school and church regularly. Our revival began September 1st. My cousin Fay and I want to receive letters from both boys and girls, so please write soon as we like to correspond with some one we don't know personally. We'll have to ring off. Send the letters to Miss Fay Lee McAdoo, East Prairie, Mo., Box 315.

DOUGLAS, GEORGIA.

My dear Mrs. Row:

Your article in last week's Herald has expressed my sentiments exactly. For some time I have been feeling that something must be done to correct the present style of dress. Surely we who claim to be modest women can't sit idly by and allow it to go on as it is going. Things that only a few years ago were considered shockingly immodest are looked upon as being exceedingly modest now. Who can tell what the end will be if things continue so? God is displeased with it, and we cannot expect him to smile upon this nation as it is. We must get busy now or soon it will be too late.

Woman's appearance from her head to her feet is entirely out of harmony with Scripture. Her hair is bobbed, her dress is immodest, and her shoe heels are so high that she walks "mincing as she goes." Instead of adorning herself with good work, and with shamefacedness and sobriety, she has the appearance of wanting to attract all the attention possible with her gaudy, vulgar dress and actions.

Satan is spreading himself like a green bay tree. We look on horrified but very few of us seem to be making any protest. Womanhood is being trailed in the dust. Her mode of dress and manner of conducting herself afford plenty of subject material for the funny papers and joke columns of magazines and newspapers. Her person is no longer held sacred by the public, but can be seen every day pictured in nude form in almost every secular magazine and periodical, as well as in many of the daily newspapers. She can also be seen pictured on bill-boards holding a cigarette between her fingers trying to entice every passer-by to indulge in the filthy habit of using tobacco. It is a shame and a disgrace to this so-called Christian nation of ours. Such things do not exist to this extent in heathen lands.

Where is our Christianity? God is the same yesterday, today and forever. Can we not trust him to lead us in a crusade against immodest dress, immorality and such evils as are promenading to and fro throughout this land? He has led the W. C. T. U. to victory and he is able also to lead to victory a union whose aim is to establish pure womanhood and save the nation from ruin. For when woman falls the home goes to pieces and the nation is destroyed.

There is yet a host of women in this land who have not yet bowed their knees to Baal, and I feel confident that they are ready to offer their services in whatsoever way they can in order that the enemy may be put to flight. I am sure that such pressure can be brought to bear that many popular evils will be forced to seek hiding quarters in one place and another rather than vaunting themselves before our eyes.

"In unity there is strength," so let us work and pray to the end that our forces may be united and the fight begin immediately. Instead of permanent waves, transparent costumes, and joy rides in high priced cars, we ought to be in sackcloth and ashes, on our knees in the dust of humility.

Yours for pure womanhood,
Mrs. Claud Minglehoff.

Your young friend that is inclined to be skeptical will read, enjoy and get help from our book, "The First Soprano." Price, $1.00.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson III.—Oct. 20, 1929.

Subject.—Useful Work a Christian Duty. Gen. 2:15; Exod. 20:9; Neh. 6:3; John 5:17; John 9:4; Acts 20:33-35; 2 Thess. 3:6-12; Eph. 4:28.

Golden Text.—If any would not work, neither should he eat. 2 Thess. 3:10.

Introduction.—Some have supposed that God commanded men to work as a punishment for sin; but that is hardly true. We read in Genesis 2:17, that God put Adam "into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it." I suppose there must have been work connected with that job. If the Sabbath is of Edenic origin, it must have been instituted before the fall. We pay much attention to the rest day, but too little to the command to work the other six days. I think Dr. Adam Clarke says it is as great a sin to idle away the six days as it is to violate the Sabbath day. Man could no more live without work in the time of his innocence than he can since his fall into sin.

God bases his command for work on the fact that he works, no less than that he commands men to rest because he rested from all his labors. I am sure that I do not know what it means for God to rest, unless it means a cessation from the work of creation; but that is only a guess.

Labor is not only necessary to the production of food, clothing, etc., but it is necessary for the development and healthfulness of body, mind and soul. The one who takes no vigorous exercise must pay the price of a flabby, weak body, with all of its concomitant ills—indigestion, insomnia, and common sluggishness. But that is not the worst of it; for his brain will be undernourished, so that it will be impossible for him to do his best mental work. College students often make a sad blunder in not taking sufficient care of their bodies, thinking that they are too busy to waste time in exercise and recreation; but they could hardly make a bigger mistake. They get too busy not to take proper recreation. When the body fails, all fails for the ambitious student.

But there is more at stake besides body and mind. Honest labor, and plenty of it, is good for the soul. The proverb says: "An idle brain is the devil's work shop." That is, doubtless, true; but an idle man is the devil's tool. No one, unless physically impotent, can lead an idle, workless life and be a genuine Christian.

God is busy; and he has always shown his appreciation of work by calling laboring men into his service. Moses was looking after sheep when he was called away to be the leader of Israel. Elisha left his plow for the prophetic office. King David was a shepherd boy. Gideon was a farmer. Matthew was busy collecting taxes when Jesus called him. Several others of the apostles were fishermen on the Sea of Galilee when called to be ministers in sacred things. God has little use for lazy men. In all ages he has called men into his service from the field, from the forge, from the shops—from just anywhere that he can find hard muscles and honest hearts.

When Jesus toiled in Joseph's carpenter shop he dignified manual labor for all time to come. None but worthless simpletons are ashamed to work.

To be hard and brawny from honest toil is manly. To be weak and flabby from laziness is assinnity.

Comments on the Lesson.

Gen. 2:15. The Lord God.—Jehovah God. The Garden of Eden.—No one knows where it was situated. It was the home of the first human pair; and Adam was the caretaker. Exod. 20:9. Six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work.—Then idleness is a sin, because it violates the law of God.

Neh. 6:3. I am doing a great work.—Nehemiah was too busy rebuilding the wall of Jerusalem to stop for a quarrel with Sanballat and Tobiah. It is a pity some church people cannot get too busy saving souls to fuss about fads and isms.

John 5:17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.—That is sufficient example for all men. John 9:4 reiterates the same great example. God has no time for lazy idlers.

Acts 20:33-35. Here we come to the example of the Apostle Paul, the greatest preacher and missionary of the ages. Few are now required to do as he did. There was no rich church to back him; but he went out trusting in the living God, and making tents with his own hands, that he might preach the Gospel to dying men. Some stingy folk are still shouting over his example; but they are not following in his footsteps. Shame on them! Missionaries should be well supported in this day; and the home church must do it, or lose her own soul. But Paul goes somewhat farther in his statement, and declares that the strong should support the weak. Of course! No man having the things of this world can let his weak neighbor suffer, and escape damnation. It is more blessed to give than to receive.—Certainly! Who would not rather be a giver than a beggar? This saying of Jesus is not given by the evangelists; but Paul picked it up somewhere. I am glad he preserved it for us.

2 Thess. 3:6-12. Some good advice. Paul calls idle men disorderly men. He refers again to his own example as a laboring man. The people were poor, and he would not burden them with his own support. There are times when it is a sin for preachers to urge certain poor people to contribute to their support. I remember the case of a preacher who was red-hot after the tithes, but never paid them himself. There were many very poor members in his church who tithed to pay his fat salary. But that preacher burned up more than fifty dollars a year of that money smoking cigars. Tell me, honest people, is there a hell somewhere in the future? Paul goes so far as to say that, "if any would not work, neither should he eat." Mind you, he did not say "could not work." Paul is right. One man has no right to "sponge" on another. How this does hit certain lazy rich folk who suck the life-blood out of hard working laborers.

Eph. 4:28. This is tantamount to calling an idle man a thief; and that is exactly what he is. Every one must either work for his living, or steal it from some one who does work. Of course, the exception is always made in favor of one who is sick and, therefore, cannot work.

This one thought: Work does not necessarily mean manual labor. Employment is a better word. One must have something to do—hard work, brain work—something that blesses men and helps the world along.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. A. J. Fryhoff, 277 N. Warren Ave., Columbus, Ohio, has an open date December 8-22, that he would be glad to give any one who desires a revival.

Rev. Jack Linn on September 28 met with an accident and his left arm was broken. Special prayer is requested in his behalf.

Rev. A. S. Beck: "Our meeting at Franklin, Ky., closed under the tent with forty converted and hundreds blessed in the eighteen days. Over 25,000 heard the gospel preached. People drove from Tennessee and many counties. Many were turned away. Over 1,000 voted for our return in 1930. They responded to our needs in a temporal way and every boarding house and hotel opened their doors to us. With the crowds thronging the tent more than an hour before preaching time convinces us that the old-time gospel will draw the people. We shall never forget the different denominations who stood by us, and worked and prayed for us. We go to Bowling Green next. Our address is 1019 South Fourth St., Louisville, Ky. Our slate is filling for next year."

Dr. S. A. Danford was appointed evangelist at the recent session of the Pacific Northwest Conference by Bishop Lowe, and is available for meetings anywhere. Dr. Danford can be addressed at 1177 West 11th St., Eugene, Oregon.

Rev. Fred St. Clair: "We closed at Bessemer, Ala., last Sabbath and came to Mobile where we had a siege last fall. We are more than repaid for all of our pain and self-denial. We organized a Nazarene Church at that time and it is going fine, with Brother J. O. Bell as its much-loved pastor. He was formerly a Methodist pastor. Rev. O'Harra will join me here and we will go on together until Jesus comes. I see great perils in the holiness ranks. We are rapidly losing the heroic, and that spells disaster. We used to go anywhere, sleep on hard beds, or no beds, eat hard tack, metaphorically speaking, but now we want big salaries, big titles and choosing the way of the least resistance. 'Pity, 'tis true—true 'tis a pity.' We shall probably go west from here. Ten thousand blessings upon The Herald and its force."

MISSIONARY DISTRICT ARGENTINA.

Greetings in Jesus. Thank the Lord for the strong editorials that come from week to week in The Pentecostal Herald. They are a blessing to our souls. You will please find enclosed $2.00 to renew my subscription.

Here we are in a city of over 2,000,000 people, truly a modern Babylon. The need is simply appalling. The three small groups of believers that the Lord has given us here in the city are holding their own and souls are being saved from time to time, and believers are being sanctified. Thank the Lord for the precious blood that cleanses from all sin right now. Hallelujah!

When we think of the nearly 2,000 towns here in the Argentine where the gospel has not been preached, we wish we were a hundred strong and could run to carry it to them. Wishes are not realities and the ripened grain falls and is lost. Some of our people love the prayer hour and are a great blessing to the work.

On the 27th of August my husband and I visited a town of more than 5,000 people, less than two hours ride on the train from here where the gospel has never been preached except as we go from door to door and the Lord opens doors to us. We praise him for the privilege of giving feet to the word. Isa. 55:11.

We ask an interest in your prayers for this great, needy, neglected field.

Blessings on your work for the Master. Your sister in Jesus, seeking the lost, Lula B. Hutcherson Ferguson.

TESTIMONY.

In April, 1924, I was converted in revival meetings held in our church by Dr. Nixon, our pastor. October 12, Jesus appeared to me at midnight in such a marvelous way and I was very happy and devoted my life to doing good and caring for the sick until my health broke down and I had to have an operation; being very ambitious I went to work too soon and suffered a nervous breakdown in trying to seek sanctification and lost my experience and my mind became badly affected. I have two sisters who were brought to Jesus through my suffering and only through their faithful prayer to God was I kept from going insane. I did not give up reading my Bible or praying entirely, but the enemy tried to stop me and one day in March of this year, I wrote to a dear friend, whom I met five years ago at Romeo camp meeting, and who has been an invalid for twenty years asking if I could see her. March 17, in a raging blizzard (the enemy told me I would never get there) I took the bus at my sister's home in the country and rode forty miles, then changed to another bus and went five miles more to this dear saint's home. I immediately began seeking the Lord, and March 20, at twenty minutes past 2 the Lord restored me into his kingdom; March 24, at twenty minutes past 6 in the morning he sanctified me and gave me the witness that the work was done. When Satan tries to make me doubt I can tell him it is only a lie, for I know the blood cleanses me from all sin. Praise the Lord for his wonderful goodness and mercy to me. Through our united prayers this friend's daughter was saved Sunday night, May 26. Pray for me that I may be a faithful follower of Jesus.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

—Basil Mathews in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and His saving power in the lives of men." Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

LAYMEN OF TWO METHODIST BODIES PLAN MEETING IN LOUISVILLE, KY., DEC. 5 AND 6.

A conference of laymen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Central States was called here Wednesday for December 5 and 6, looking toward promotion of co-ordination and fellowship between laymen of the two Methodist branches.

The conference is the first of a series planned for the territory embracing Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana.

The call for the first meeting was authorized Tuesday night at a meeting of thirty-four representatives of the two denominations, selected at a meeting in Louisville last May, and the group was permanently organized as the Inter-Methodist Council, with J. H. Dickey, Louisville, as chairman.

Approximately 2,500 delegates are expected to attend the meeting here in December. Bishop Edward H. Hughes, Chicago, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Bishop John H. Moore, Dallas, Texas, of the Southern Church, will be speakers during the session.

The aim of the council is to foster a movement toward a universal program for the laymen of both Methodist churches, and to co-ordinate the lay forces in a spirit of fellowship, officials said.

Other officers of the council elected were: Vice presidents, C. B. Nordeman and Dr. John Trawick; secretary, C. R. Bohannon, and treasurer, James E. Pearson, Jr.

The movement for the council was fostered by the Rev. B. E. Smith, Chicago, and the Rev. George L. Morelock, Nashville, Tenn., according to those at the conference.

Other speakers who will participate in the December conference include the Rev. Dr. Dan Poling, Brooklyn, president of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor; Bishop F. H. McConnell of New York, president of the Federation of Churches in America; Branch Rickey, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals Baseball Club and an outstanding layman; the Rev. Dr. Henry Nelson Snyderone, speaker on marriage and the home; Raymond Robbins, Chicago, promoter of social service; Dr. James Endicott, Dr. John R. Mott, Dr. Robert E. Spear, Charles H. Ray and the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Jefferson.

A MILLION TO ONE CHANCE.

Frank G. Shafer.

This seems like an exaggeration, but let us complete the sentence, and then, dear reader, you can judge by the Scriptures whether or not the comparison is overdrawn. Here is the complete sentence:

"When a church is used for a big money-raising banquet and entertainment, with appetites sharpened by a delayed supper, and the object of the gathering is not to pray but to have a so-called good time, the chances are a million to one that the soul's welfare and the cause of Christ and the Holy Spirit is forced to play second fiddle to the Devil." The writer recently had a foretaste of what God's abhorrence of such a scene must be.

I had attended a prayer meeting: during my absence a dance orchestra of which a relative was a member, decided to practice at our residence. Imagine my feelings on returning, to find our living room filled with cigarette smoke while this gang had virtually taken possession of our home.

BARGAINS IN BIBLES

An opportunity to save money on Christmas gifts. The stock is very limited on these items, hence the offer is good only during October.

Only 29 copies.

24 copies same as the above, with the additional feature of concordance, genuine calf lining, for $2.75 each, postpaid.

Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

Then and there the writer realized just why the fury of our Lord was so great on the only occasion in which Jesus ever struck any one in driving out the desecrators of his house which he designed not for the stomach but only to feed the soul.

It is a terrifying thought that the soul can be actually cursed instead of blessed by attendance at some gathering in the house of God. This is plainly inferred in 1 Cor. 11:17, "Ye come together not for the better but for the worse."

Some time ago the writer attended a prayer meeting in a small but intensely spiritual church, the kind of which Jesus said, "Fear not little flock." On the way I had to pass a large, fashionable and popular church. I found both sides of all the four streets crowded with automobiles, in-dictating that it was a great and doubtless never-to-be-forgotten occasion.

I soon found what the magnet was as the basement windows were open and the supper festivities were at their height, with all tables crowded and every one animated and full of gossip and laughter. As this was on a regular prayer meeting night just after Decoration day, I was somewhat prepared to see the announcement on the Bulletin, "No Evening Services Until October," a third of a year.

I continued on to that little, unpopular prayer meeting of twelve persons, but only God can measure the feast we had for our souls and the priceless spiritual dividends that will accrue to us, both here temporarily and up yonder forever.

the great days
in the Sunday School year. The greater part of this material is new and original never having appeared in book form before.
It covers all grades
from the Beginners
on up.

The book contains recitations and dialogues for Children's Day, Patriotic occasions, Rally
Day, Missionary
Day, and five other important special occasions. Ninety-six pages sent postpaid for 40c.

Etched Bronze Bookmark.

There is no bookmark
on the market more strikingly attractive than this entirely new novelty. The design is etched in black on bright finished bronze that will not tarnish. The picture of the Hofmann head of Christ stands out clearly, and the delicately etched tracings are very artistically executed. This is not only a beautiful bookmark, but also a practical letter opener which can be used in cutting the leaves of new books. The bookmark is 4 1/4 inches long and is furnished with silk cord and tassel.

Price, 15c each, $1.50 per dozen, postpaid.

JUST ONE IN THE WHOLE WORLD.

There is just one Bud Robinson—
no one like him or even akin to him.
There is not another "Life Story" like
his or similar to it. His recent book,
"My Life's Story" is, as he puts it,
"loaded to the water line with the activities of forty-seven years of labor
in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Jesus Christ." The chapter on his call to preach is worth the price of the book and more. Get it and read it. It has 217 pages, but when you start
reading it you will not want to stop until you have finished. It sells at
the remarkably low price of $1.00.
Don't fail to get your copy. You will weep and you will rejoice as you read it.

THE OLD, OLD STORY.

Millard E. Lutz.

Across the sea in sunny land,
Where Satan ruled with heavy hand,
Committed was the greatest crime
Of every age and every clime.
Through streets where good King David trod

By man was led the Son of God;
Condemned by craven creatures' cry
Upon a Roman cross to die.

All friends desert when him they sieze
While with them 'neath the olive trees,
His brow they cruelly adorn
And pierce with crown of prickly thorn;

With gibes as king was dressed and then

Spit on and mocked by wicked men;
His back from awful scourging wealed
That by those stripes all can be healed.

His cross was then on Simon laid
Who was compelled to lend his aid.
He, weary, faint and suff'ring, trode
With others dreadful Calvary's road.
And said, with love that never fails,
To women who his fate bewails,
For him they should no longer weep
But for themselves their wallings keep.

And when they reached the gruesome ground

Did he o'er country look around Beneath approaching death's dark spell

And view the city loved so well?
Did northward look as though to see
His own beloved Galilee
Where humble home of boyhood's day
'Mid rustic beauty peaceful lay?

All earthly friends had long since flown,

The path of shame must tread alone,
Nor would, till all was over, hear
The Father's loving voice so dear.

As on the cruel cross he lay
Forgiveness for them peaceful pray
Instead of loud and useless wails
While driven were those awful nails.

And when the wicked work was done
He hung in Syria's scorching sun,
The Temple's veil was rent in twain
So man to God could access gain;
The quaking earth great terror lent
As though on vengeance dire was bent;

The shining sun appeared to hide
As though the sight could not abide.

Six hours upon the cross was hung,
His frame with torture dire was wrung.

No mortal e'er can feel or know
His awful anguish, pain and woe;
No Father's smile helped pay the cost,
He suffered terrors of the lost.
His victor cry at last arose
Triumphant over fiendish foes.

Did Hell rejoice with ghoulish glee,
Along with Scribe and Pharisee
In triumph o'er the victory won,
As they supposed, o'er God's own Son,
When on a cross with bowing head
He died, and then the body dead
To Joseph's sepulcher was borne
There to await resurrection morn?

He ne'er again will lowly stand
And loving plead with outstretched hand;

No shameful death again endure
Mankind's salvation to secure.
Will loving come in sovereign right
With angels and the Father's might,
And then despite all doubts and sneers
On earth will reign a thousand years.

That reign the ransomed will enjoy
While He all foes will then destroy.

On great, white throne in triumph's hour

Will sit with God's almighty power;
Whose glory will o'er world be shed
And then will judge the quick and dead.

Let all for that great time prepare
So many with him the glory share.

"THE CIGARETTE."

A secular paper recently said: "New York, May 19.—(WNS)—More than nine billion cigarettes are smoked each month by the American people, an increase of about a billion a month as compared with a year ago, according to figures given out by the American Tobacco Company here. The gain is ascribed largely to the greater number of women smoking. Cigarette production here in the first quarter of 1929 was 26,912,000,000 compared with 24,371,000,000 cigarettes in the same period in 1928."

The Editorial of same paper made these statements:

"Incidentally it would not be amiss to mention the fact that eminent physicians have declared that the cigarette is the least harmful of any form of using tobacco. Not that the use of tobacco generally is considered harmful, unless indulged in to excess. Physicians to a very great extent smoke cigarettes, and the little smokers are cheerfully puffed almost anywhere and any time. Intemperance in the use of anything is injurious; and even in the matter of language; it is not commendable to find the head of an organization which stands for temperance violently attacking a custom that has its followers in all parts of the world and has survived assaults by 'reformers' since tobacco was 'discovered' by Columbus in use by the Indians nearly five hundred years ago.
In the sixteenth century great works were written and campaigns carried on against the use of tobacco. But tobacco has continued to gain in popularity, and the charges of fanatics that it was harmful, when used at all, have been disproved. But now there is a demand that the cigarette makers be denied the use of the air to advertise their products. The appeal should be denied."

Surely men with a little sense know that tobacco in all forms is harmful.
A doctor states that there is enough poison in one cigarette to kill a cat.
Edison says, "There is a poison in the cigarette called 'acrolein' that produces degeneration of the brain cells and this degeneration is permanent and uncontrollable."

The Board of Temperance of the M.
E. Church has opened war on this enemy to childhood and youth. We have a book of about fifty pages in which the subjects treated are: Chapter I—
The Boy's Body; Chapter II—The Boy's Mind; Chapter III—The Boy's Soul; Chapter IV—The Boy and Cigarettes; Chapter V—The Boy and Thirty Days Record; Chapter VI—The Boy and The Doctor; Chapter VII—
The Boy and Fifty-four Objections;
Chapter VIII—The Boy and Kentucky
Statutes; Chapter IX—The Boy and Ruin; Chapter X—The Boy and Edison.

I want to find a host of boys, girls, men and women interested in saving our youth to help scatter this book.

lishing Company publishes this book

Revivals!

Revivals!!

Revivals!!!

The reason some churches do not have revivals is because the preacher and people do not read Revival Literature. Get people reading revival books and they will prayer and work for revivals.

One of the latest books on this subject is Dr. Ridout's book containing his Asbury College Lectures on "The Culpepper Foundation" (The book is dedicated to Burke Culpepper). This book is entitled Revival Blessings.

The chapters are as follows:

1. The Story of Great Revivals.
2. Great Soul Winners.
3. Revivals and their Laws.
4. Evangelistic Call and Commission.
5. Mass and Personal Evangelism.
6. Privileges and Perils of Evangelism.
7. The Art of Soul Winning.
8. Revival Kindlings.

REDEEMING THE TIME. By The Editor.

GIVE us men in the pulpit free from the love of money, and free from the fear of man.

No man is fit to preach Christ's message to his fellow-men who cringes before ecclesiastics or fawns before the rich.

The times in which we live demand a terrific gospel from a ministry of spotless character, fearless soul, and loving heart.

We need men in the pulpit today who are so full of faith and the Holy Ghost that they will be a terror to men who do not fear God, who hate his government, and violate his commandments.

The tame, goody-goody preacher who pokes and mingles in a haphazard, familiar way with wicked men, may get their familiar slap on his shoulder, but he will not be able to stir their hearts with fear of God, and break them with sorrow for their sins.

Bad as the world is, there are multitudes of people now living who love devout, brave ministers of the gospel who stand for their convictions, clear ideas, and who do not hesitate to declare them in plain, unequivocal language, without bitterness on the one hand, or apology on the other.

God's command to his messengers is that they deliver his word to the people, "whether they will hear of whether they will forbear." The messenger's business is to deliver the message with pure motive in the right spirit, and leave the result with God and the people. In that day when he shall stand in the white light of the Judgment, he will not be responsible for what the message was, nor what the people did with it, but he must answer for its delivery. Then God, who called him to the work, heard all of his words, saw the motives of his inmost soul, and understood all the desires of his heart from first to last, will judge him, and there will be no pit deeper, no torment more horrible than that into which the fawning, fashionable, time-serving minister will be cast.

The ministry can master the situation if they will. God's word is their message, and it is sharper than a two-edged sword, and "shall not return unto him void." The people will hear the word of God, and it will conquer them, compel them to think, repent and pray. The truth is mighty and will prevail. The gospel of Jesus Christ, spoken with authority from a pure heart, with clean lips, fascinates men and draws them away from sin to the Saviour. If there are not revivals, the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of believers and a mighty forward movement in the kingdom of Christ, the fault is not to be found in God or his gospel, nor is it in the people, but you may be sure there is something wrong with the man up

DOVE-WINGS.

By Rev. Henry Burton, M.A.

"Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away, and be at rest."—Ps. lv, 6.

And whither wouldst thou fly, O soul,
If thou hadst wings?
Is rest beyond the seas? at either pole?
Are there the springs
Where Heaven's pure waters bubble up below?
And the far oceans answer sadly, "No!"

Tell me, O soul, where wouldst thou fly
To find thy rest?
Among the stars? the spaces of the sky?
From East to West?
And suns and stars make answer, sphere on sphere,
"Back, back, O winged soul, rest is not here."

Where wouldst thou fly? to works, to forms?
With thy dove-wings?
Will these give shelter from eternal storms—
These poor, dead things?
And Working answers with a voice severe,
"Turn back, mistake! soul, rest is not here."

Ah soul, thou need'st not fly away
To find thy rest;
Peace seeks for thee if thou wilt stay,
And just be blessed:
Fold up thy wings and sit at Jesus' feet,
There wilt thou find thy Heaven—a rest complete.

in the pulpit. Oh, man up in the pulpit, whose face is dry, whose voice is tame, whose heart knows no agony of desire, and whose ministry is fruitless, there is coming to you an awful judgment day. What shall your harvest be? As you sow, so shall you reap, is the inevitable law by which all shall be judged. May the Lord help us to watch and be sober, redeeming the time because the days are evil.

Reversing the Divine Order.

THERE is nothing more plainly taught by Christ and his disciples than that we are to serve one another. In many instances Christians have not been as wide awake to the importance of active Christian service as they should have been, but just now there is a tendency to lay more emphasis upon what Christians are to do than what they are to be.

This is reversing the divine order. Jesus Christ says, "Make the tree good, and the fruit will be good." Nothing can take the place of regeneration, or being born again. The new birth is one of the indispensable qualifications for entrance into heaven, and holiness of heart is the other. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God," and "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord."

Many who claim to be followers of Christ have drifted away from the teachings of the Master as to the qualifications for entrance into his kingdom, and are laying emphasis upon the activities of the church, instead of upon the qualifications of Christian character.

ter. They are looking after the quality of the fruit without digging about the roots of the tree to see if it is in a healthy condition.

We are in the beginning of the great apostasy, and it will take more than the ministries to the bodies of men to meet the needs of the sin-sick souls that are longing for a power that can lift them out of their misery and sin into a life of freedom and holiness.

The poor old world is going insane over play. The cry for entertainment is everywhere, and thousands of professed followers of Christ seem to think there is no harm in using the house of God as a place to "eat, drink, and be merry," and indulging in pastimes that are shocking to the more devout and serious people. There are some denominations that have their own dance halls in order to "keep their young people at home," and in their exclusive "society."

We say that it is a pitiful and contemptible misuse of the church. It is of the devil, deceiving the people and offering stones and scorpions of pastime in the service of the Master, instead of the eggs, fish and bread of salvation from sin and Satan. When Jesus found the buyers and sellers, entertainers and gossipers eating, sleeping, and playing in the temple, he did not say, "All right gentlemen, keep this thing up; enlarge it, continue it, and you will save the race. In building your churches always arrange places for eating, playing and sleeping." No, sir! He made a throng of cords and drove out the rabble.

What the church needs is a revival of pure and undefiled religion, a religion that will change the hearts of men so they will hate the foolishness of the world and love the place of prayer. Under the preaching of the gospel men and women, boys and girls, will become stirred and penitents will crowd the altars and be blessed.

But hark! we venture a prophecy. We are in the beginning of a great apostasy. Many evangelical churches have rejected the doctrine of holiness of heart and life, given up the doctrine of regeneration and are raising questions of any special need for a change of heart. Frequently, they have given up the doctrines of the fall and depravity of the race, are questioning the deity of Jesus, and the value of the atonement he made upon the cross for a fallen race. Doubt has driven faith out; the golden shields have been taken from the walls of their sanctuaries, and they are preparing to hang up brazen shields, made of brass, with enough shine to deceive the people, and "Ichabod" will finally be written over their doors.

To your tents, O Israel! Cry to the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob that he will come to the holy remnant and answer their prayers for the reclamation of the deceived and wandering prodigals from the Father's house. Our doctrines are being ignored, the people are starving to death, and many of the watchmen on Zion's walls are becoming indifferent to their sacred duties, the atonement of Christ is depreciated, the Holy INCIDENTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS FROM AFAR.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

It was said of one of God's saintly women that "Her life was a benediction and her face a love letter to all humanity."

Many of the Lord's called ones did not reach the goal they marked out for themselves because God had other plans for them. Mrs. Browning's lines suggest the thought:

"God did anoint thee with his odorous oil,
To wrestle, not to reign; and he assigns
All thy tears over, like pure crystallines,
For younger fellow-workers of the soil
To wear for amulets; so others shall Take patience, labor, to their heart and
hand,
From thy hand and thy heart and thy brave
cheers,
And God's grace fructify, through thee, to all."

I was reading in 1st Tim. 6:20: "O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust." Moffatt's translator makes that read "Keep the securities of the faith intact."

I was in a bank in Shanghai the other day and a foreign looking woman in a very excited manner came rushing up to the window with a paper in her hand and, speaking in broken English, she said to the clerk: "Is that any good now?" The clerk looked at the paper and then at her and smilingly said to her, "Yes, it is good." Then she went on to tell that she just got in from Moscow (she was a Russian) and they told her on the train it was no good; that now that a war was impending between China and Russia that her paper was no good. When I saw the amount on it I did not wonder the woman was a bit scared because it called for 9,000 taels—that is in Shanghai money over $11,000, in American money, about $6,000. I joined in with a word of comfort to her that her money was in a great American bank (The National City Bank of New York), one of the biggest and safest banks in the world. Of course the distressed woman was pleased and relieved of all further worry. Now I suppose the trouble was the woman coming along on the train got talking with some people who would like to have secured that bank paper from her for a small amount by persuading her that it was no good, now that China and Russia had broken off diplomatic relations. It was fortunate for her that she held on to her paper till she reached the bank where her money was safe.

Now the moral of that incident to me is on this wise. There are multitudes today who fail to keep the securities of the faith intact. They listen to this one and that one; they hear what this preacher says, and then the other; they read what this big professor says and they become bewildered and finally give up their faith and lose their peace and happiness and finally their souls.

The Scriptures say, Hebrews 10:35: "Cast not away therefore your confidence which hath great recompense of reward." The real idea of that Scripture seems to be saying to us, do not barter or trade away your hope of heaven and your assurance of salvation. Don't give up the evidence of your redemption through the blood of Jesus. Do not scrap your Bible and its promises. Do not throw away your certificate of the New Birth. Esau, for a mess of pottage, sold his birthright, Moses, in a fit of temper, forfeited his chance to go over into Canaan. Judas for thirty pieces of silver sold his Lord and in the agony of remorse died the death of the suicide.

In these days of apostasy and terrific heresy thousands there are who are scraping the old gospel for the new, thereby losing their peace with God and their assurance of salvation and their hope of Heaven.

The biggest and most successful trick the devil ever played on the church he is playing today by the spread of this hell-born modernism which is rampant everywhere. It is a terrible business that so many of our preachers and teachers (and some missionaries must be included in it also) are engaged in today of robbing God's people of their faith and getting them to cast away their confidence in the Bible, in the Atonement, in the plan of salvation, in saving and sanctifying grace.

Quite recently I spent a few hours in the presence of one of God's true and tried missionaries. He is now a father in Israel in China. He graduated from Yale and Princeton and has given over forty years of his life to China. He told me of a certain religious leader now active in China. At one time he was a true and zealous preacher of the gospel, an evangelist and winner of souls among the Chinese. During one of his furloughs in America he entered a Modernistic Theological School and took in their poison; he became a changed man, his spiritual, soul-winning fervor was exchanged for cold, modern intellectualism; his evangelism was exchanged for a soul-destroying philosophy. When he came back to China he was so saturated with modern unbelief that his original church mission could not use him and he had to be discontinued. Through the efforts of another missionary (?) who was modernistic to the core and who has considerable wealth at his command, he was installed eventually Editor of an important religious journal in China. This of course, only reflects conditions in the homeland. People write inquiring, "Are there many modernists in the mission fields?" I could answer that in a single statement, "The mission fields reflect exactly the condition of the schools and churches in the homeland." As is the homeland so is the foreign field. Bring on a great revival in the homeland that will cleanse away this soul-destroying skepticism that is permeating every department of the church work and there will be a correspondingly great revival in the foreign fields.

Let me illustrate this by a recent book I was reading. The Life of Mary Clarke Nind, one of the greatest missionary workers of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church (1870-1905). She was sometimes spoken of as the missionary cyclone. She was active, please observe, when the church was not saturated with modernism as it is today. She was brought up when Methodist churches had revivals and holiness preaching. Some definite things I note about her religious life:

1. She was definitely converted when five years of age.

2. She was definitely sanctified after struggling with inbred sin for many years. Hear her story of the second work of grace. She says: "While listening to the deacons and pillars of the church in the weekly prayer meeting, bewailing their many sins of omission and commission—speaking of their coldness and worldliness, their want of love and zeal, etc.—to my young heart there came often the question, 'How can these things be?' These Christians, old in years, have the same troubles that I have. Must I go on to thirty, forty, fifty, sixty years, and still have to fight against my easily besetting sins, and every now and then be conquered? Is there no hope of victory all the time? Cannot Jesus, the physician of soul and body, heal my soul as quickly and as perfectly as he healed the sick while on earth, saying to the leper, 'I will, be thou clean, and immediately his leprosy was cleansed.'"

"Thus I reasoned and soliloquized, then went to a good old deacon for a solution, and told him all, and he answered me: 'Mary, you want too much; you must expect to fight, and struggle, and to be overcome by sin and Satan sometimes through your life; but ere you die, before you go to heaven, Jesus will take all your sins away and make you holy.' My heart was heavy as I turned away, not believing the theology given, and feeling an earnest desire to die suddenly and soon if I must go on battling for three-score years and ten. But I lived on, having a good amount of joy in the service of the Lord, and yet, as thousands do, sinning and repenting, gaining a victory, then losing a battle, struggling, fasting, resolving, praying, hoping, longing to be free. For nearly forty years I was 'in the wilderness,' so near the goodly Canaan, and yet not entering in; for I had no Joshua to tell me 'I was well able to go up and possess the land;' nor did I know how to enter.

"But God, who is rich in mercy, having seen my tears, heard my sighs, sobs, and prayers, saw me beating against my cage, trying to be free. He sent a man of God from the Theological Seminary in Chicago who preached the doctrine of the 'Higher Life,' and he enjoyed the experience he preached. I listened eagerly. I longed for Sunday to come, that I might know more. How clear and well defined the way!—the narrow way—how much consecration included and involved! How the light of the Spirit did shine upon the truth! How the Lord did discover to me that there was much to be surrendered—love of applause and honor, some worldly ambitions, love of dress, desire to be rich, and many other things! After some conflicts sharp and strong I resolved to be and do all the Lord would have me be and do, cost what it would. I laid aside my jewelry after hearing an excellent sermon upon the text, 'Let your women adorn themselves in modest apparel,' and, as on my knees I told the Lord I did it for his sake, the blessed baptism fell on me as the seal of the divine approval. The little act cost me some bitter opposition, but I steadily adhered, and rejoiced in my freedom."

After years of longing and much struggling, out in her new home in Minnesota, she came into the Second Rest of which she tells in the following words:

"In my own room, on Thursday evening, just before going to prayer meeting, the work was done, and the baptism of melting love, and the gentle hush of tenderness, and rest of soul was mine. And I said again and again, 'Can it be, after all these years of weary waiting and hard struggle, that I have rest?' I went to prayer meeting and tried to tell it, but it was the rest unspeakable. All night long I was too happy to speak, and a hundred times or more I said: 'Blessed Jesus! I have rest, sweet rest. Emptied of self—filled with God. Mary C. Nind had rest!' Hallelujah! The morning came—the best morning of my life then—the power of God had prostrated my body. Physically weak; but, oh, such rest! My face, my voice, my step, my bearing, was changed! My children noticed it. I told them I had rest. I cannot say it has been, from that time until now, unbroken rest; but I can say that through grace it has been the habit of my soul, and whenever I have lost it I have by faith pursued till I regained it. I cannot live or work for Jesus successfully without it. It cost me much to seek it, and to find it—too much to ever lose it. It has been to me 'the pearl of great price.' These years since I have been in this valley of blessing have been years in 'Beulah land,' years of rest, victory, peace, joy, and glad, continued service; and as I go I sing:

"O come to this valley of blessing so sweet
Where Jesus will fullness bestow,
O believe and receive and confess him,
That all his salvation may know."

SILENT MAKERS OF HISTORY.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

THE stage decorations get only a casual notice from the audience. The beautiful beaver board walls, painted in fantastic designs, the asbestos curtains, adorned to appear as the most gorgeous landscape, the stage arrangements resembling a room in a palatial home—all of which are but incidentally noticed by the spectators. It is the hero, the heroine, the villain—the dramatae personae, that absorb all the attention.

The writers of history, in a large measure have placed woman as the beautiful stage setting of the human drama. She acts as the variegated lights and shadows to bring out the full force of the artists. Man has always occupied the center of the stage; he is the big chief marching across the pages of history. Woman is considered the understudy of man in the triumphs of the race.

We are persuaded that another history, or histories, ought to be written. In this connection we do not refer to the few women who have played the spectacular role in the movements of nations. Perhaps a half dozen such have won a place in the limelight of big achievements,—ruled empires as monarchs supreme, dominated parliaments at will. In using the above caption, we do not have them in mind; we do not mean the Jezebels, the Maria Therasas, the Marys, the Elizabeths, the Victorias. History has given them their full quota of notoriety. Too often it must be said to woman's dishonor, that few who have wielded scepters of great power, but that were cruel and self-centered. The gentle sex are as dangerous as men, if possessed with unlimited power. We believe that her cruelty in such cases has caused more suffering than that of men, all things being equal; all of which proves that woman, by nature, is no better than man. Human nature reduced to its last analysis, whether made or female, is depraved and sinful. The carnal mind, untouched by divine grace, has a germ of every sin in the Decalogue, needing only the viz uturga—the stimulus of environment—for its committal.

It will require the Judgment Day to reveal the part woman has played in the greatest of all dramas—Life. The environment that produces a tuberosity is never thought of as the perfume radiates all about the room. The sunbeams get little or no credit as they paint the glorious petals of the dahlias. So it has been in the making of history, in which is recorded weal and woe, success and failure, wealth and bankruptcy, happiness and sorrow, heaven and hell. Of it all, woman is the unknown, unseen hand holding the key that has unlocked the secret treasures of civilization. She has been either the warm, wholesome atmosphere bringing out the holiest and best in men, cheering them to superhuman endeavor and sacrifice, or the withering, blighting power over the heart and life of men, many of them now languishing in prison cells, or having paid the supreme debt to society for inhuman crimes.

At the center of motives leading to the world's greatest tragedies may be found the woman as the chief factor. She is the dynamo from which have gone out earthquake waves of ruin and disaster. No mathematician can calculate the subtle power of woman. There is an old story, which of late is regarded by some as a silly myth, yet we still believe it. This story gives us a preface to the whole history of the human race. It was the insidious charm of a woman that caused the Adamic Federal Head to forfeit the glories of an earthly paradise. As a result of this man has dragged his clanking chains of slavery through the centuries; it brought upon us the worst of all slavery—the depravity of soul. It brought a curse upon man, upon the ground, and on all living things. Only in this old story can we find a rational explanation of what the following millenniums of history have revealed. We repeat, that woman has furnished only the stage setting, as it were, but in so doing she has created the atmosphere for deeds noble and ignoble.

Woman's vanity, fickleness and frailties have furnished color for much of the romantic literature; but these very weaknesses have been the shrine before which the strongest, bravest and truest have bowed as suppliant slaves. The more vain and fickle, the greater her power, and the greater number of victims. On the other hand, her courage and fortitude have been the wonder of poets and sages in all ages. Her endurance, suffering, and sacrifice for noble principle have eclipsed the deeds recorded among men. She has borne her burden of heart agony in a thousand Gethsemanes, when the sweating of blood would have been a relief. The lonely vigils of motherhood at the bedside of sick loved ones, denying food, sleep, and rest,—like a guardian angel, suffering a hundred vicarious deaths. Oh, the unfathomable depths of a woman's soul; it can inspire and exalt to the highest heaven, or drag down to the lowest hell.

Every country and every age have known the Lady Hamiltons—beautiful, proud, queenly, arrogant, selfish. Kings step down from thrones to bask in their smiles, noblemen fight deadly duels for one favor bestowed. Yes, such was Lady Hamilton, the magnetic queen of English nobility; the most sought for, the most alluring, tempting woman in England. Lord Nelson, the Neptune of the English navy, sweeping before him the armadas of France and Spain—a man of iron will, but he falls before the charms of Lady Hamilton, and became her slave and groveling puppet. For the favor of this woman, Lord Nelson was willing to sell his honor, almost wrecking the court of England. The Lady Hamiltons have played their role in other courts, and in lower realms of society, statecraft, and business. Truly, the complexes of woman have almost infinite variety; it can be truthfully said, although such does not appear in the annals of men and things, it is not far from the truth to say, she has wielded the scepter of universal empire, at the same time playing only a silent part.

Apropos to our discussion, without a thought of irreverence, we wish to quote from the great Eleventh Chapter of Hebrews, as a parallel to woman's powers, without doing violence to the Sacred Record:

"Subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned the flight of armies; others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, and others had trials of cruel scourgings, yea, moreover of bonds and imprisonment: They were stoned, they were sawn asunder, were tempted, were slain with the sword; they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destituted, afflicted, tormented." Thus has been woman's career in history.

In the Dark Ages of the Fifteenth Century, there lived a little Italian maiden in, or near, the city of Florence. She was the sweetheart of an Italian lad named Savonarola. This curly-headed Miss grew tired of the lovesick boy, and jilted him. His grief and depression were almost more than he could bear. There was but one place open to him, a place where he could bury himself away from objects that would keep the wound open. The young man entered a monastery, and there he suffered and prayed until he found himself. The Church of God, and all civilization owe a debt of gratitude to that little Italian Miss. She gave to the world one of the greatest gospel heroes and martyrs since the Apostle Paul. We remind our readers that we are discussing "Silent Makers of History."

More than fifty years ago the Kansas legislature was in session. After a long and bitter debate, the body was to vote on the untied question of Prohibition. The vote was taken, resulting in a tie; that meant a victory for the liquor interests. At the critical moment, just before the vote was settled, by the vote of the speaker, a little woman rushed into the legislative chamber and put her arms around a gentleman's neck, and with great emotion whispered to him. The man sprang to his feet, and shouted: "Mr. Speaker, I change my vote!" Prohibition was saved to the "Sunflower State." What did that mean to the commonwealth of Kansas? She has about the lowest rate of illiteracy of any state in the Union; she has more money in saving banks per capita, with one or two exceptions, of any other state. There are grandfathers in Kansas who never saw an open saloon. The name of this little wife is not known; but she takes a large place among the "Silent Makers of History."

On one of the many high hills in Kansas City there is a magnificent monument overlooking the city. This sublime creation in marble is an epitome of what would require volumes to portray. It is named "The Pioneer Mother." The mother is mounted upon a horse, holding her babe to her bosom, while the husband leads the animal by the bridle, with also another horse bearing all their earthly goods. On the face of that mother is the halo of motherhood character. They are journeying bravely forward into the wilds of a primeval land, ready to suffer the loneliness of pioneer life; ready to undergo the dangers of "savage beasts, and still more savage men." This mute masterpiece in stone tells a thousand unwritten stories of the debt we owe to the first mothers of America. They were the heroines of a silent drama which the greatest tragedies ever staged could not approach. Here were the "gems of purest rays serene," shining in the solitudes of the wilderness; and "flowers born to blush unseen," but their sweetness has been wafted back to us, like the vesper benediction at eventide. The lights and shadows of civilization have been etched by the hand and heart of woman. Mixing the colors of every great picture, whether it be a triumphant ascension to glory or fame; or whether it be an inferno of defeat and humiliation. Through all the painful marches of the centuries may be seen though often playing an invisible role—the Woman.

Grace Before Meals.

The same grace repeated time after time often becomes so commonplace and mechanical that we are prone to forget its real meaning. "Grace Before Meals," is not the product of one mind, but the assembled expressions of many devout servants of God. There is an appropriate grace for every day in the year. This little book has been used very effectively in teaching the different members of the family to say grace. It contains 167 pages, is neatly printed and bound. Price 50c.

Venturing On The Impossible--With God.

Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, D. D.

Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward! Exodus 14:15.

AS far as I am concerned I believe that this is the word of the Lord to his people today, the word they particularly need to hear.

We shall probably best gather some of the values of the text if we remind ourselves first of all of the fact that these words were spoken to a peculiar people, and they were spoken under peculiar circumstances. Let us take a few minutes, therefore, with the two lines,—the peculiarity of the people and the peculiarity of their circumstances!

They were spoken unto the children of Israel. Who were they? Why were they called the children of Israel? Why not the children of Jacob? Why not the children of Isaac? They were that, and yet they are not so described. Why not the children of Abraham? How often do you find them so described? Why constantly in these historical records and prophetic writings do you find these particular people referred to in this way? Let us stop and answer that question!

It may be a mechanical method, and yet it is suggested that when you read the Bible you note where great words or phrases emerge. This description of these people is found first in a curious verse, Genesis 32:32. Now listen to it!

"Therefore the children of Israel eat not of the sinew which shrank, which is upon the hollow of the thigh, unto this day."

What a curious declaration! Of course you ask what does he mean by "this day"? Devout Hebrews never eat that part of the carcass, and "this day" is August 11, 1929, because it is still true. They do not eat it "because he touched the hollow of Jacob's thigh, and the sinew of it shrank." And that flashes us back to this 32nd chapter.

It is a story of how God dealt with Jacob, a keen and shrewd man. When he was 70 years old he left home and went to the far country under a cloud. And he went a poor man,—to take his own story, "With my staff I passed over this Jordan." He was coming back with two bands, and he knew certain things were looking at him. He knew Esau was there somewhere, watching him. He sent forward his possessions and his family, and himself stayed behind to be alone with God. And that night God took human form and wrestled with him through the night. Any moment he could have crushed him, but he was drawing out his strength till he was exhausted. Then there came the moment when Jacob said:

"I will not let thee go except thou bless me!"

Not with a strident voice, but it is the broken, defeated man, yet holding on to God! "What is thy name?" said the wrestler.

He knew it was good for Jacob—"supplanter"—to say it once more.

"Thou shalt no more be called Jacob, but Israel!"

What does that new name mean? We read on and find the meaning "prince," but it does not mean prince. If you break up the word it gives two words Isra El, "Ruled by God." That is, God grappled with the man to crown him, defeated him to make him king, and his new name is the man mastered by God.

The children of Israel—the name, then, has this perpetual spiritual significance, it marks these people in their relationship to God: the people constituting a theocracy, the God-governed people, the people mastered by God, under the rule and reign of God.

Now the circumstances were also peculiar. We have seen in our reading of Exodus 14 that the children of Israel were at an impasse under divine guidance. They could not see where to go, and they began doing what you and I have so often done, making calculations and saying it would have been much better to have stayed in Egypt in bondage than come out to die in freedom. At the moment they had escaped from Egypt they were "entangled in the wilderness." They had marched under divine direction until they came to a place with Pi-hahiroth on the right, a place of marshes; Baal-Zephon stretching on the left, rocky vastnesses which they could not traverse with the women and children. In front of them lay the Red Sea. Only the road passable that they had already traversed; and they were hemmed in, for Pharaoh occupied the road behind them, marching toward them. To these people and under these circumstances these words were spoken:

"Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward!"

The words are for the people of God today, the Israel of God, the people in the kingdom of God who own him as king, the theocracy scattered throughout all the world today. We shall agree,—and this is not a pessimistic note, for no Christian man can be a pessimist if he is living in the full power of Christianity,—that the present hour is difficult. Take the church of God as a whole! She is halted, perplexed. All the circumstances of the last decade and more seem to have halted her progress; dissensions within and difficulties without, and the best people in the world, the truest to the divine passion for the coming of God, are strangely perplexed. They hardly know which way to turn. I make every exception you want made for the loyal souls in the church, but the general outlook is one that perplexes us. In our many conferences we are looking at situations fraught with strange difficulty. We feel we are somehow at an impasse. That is why I bring you this message this morning as it is found here: "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward!" But there was no way forward! That is the whole point.

I want to say three things about it, with what brevity may be consonant with clarity.

First, that means at least that there can be no going back. Second, such a word to such a people under such circumstances introduces a new element into the discussion of the impossible. Third, such a word creates for the people of God an opportunity for a great venture of faith. If they make it, God can do things he cannot do till his people are in that attitude.

NO GOING BACK.

I see, first of all, the emphasis that there can be no going back.

I need to be told that in my own life as a Christian. There can be no going back, no consent to compromise, no lowering the standard, no agreeing to discuss Jesus Christ in order to accommodate him and his teachings and his work to the cry of the age in which we live. It is always the temptation of an hour of supreme difficulty to go back. When we are up against things we are apt to say that the ideal was a great one, but it is impracticable: let us lower the standard a little, let down the fences and make things a little simpler, and go back upon the things for which we stand and that have made the church of God an army terrible with banners.

Now we may remind ourselves this morning that there is no need to go back. I could wish that you did not know the sequel of this story, because I would desire that we hear that command as the people heard it when they had no idea what God was going to do. The text loses its impact when you consider it in the light of the sequel. And I say there is no need to go back even if the sea is never divided. "And be drowned?" Possibly: and why not? God has not always divided seas. His sons and his daughters, the crusaders of the centuries have marched right into death over and over again, so that wonderful as the sequel is the essence of its value is in the command that came to the people when there was no way out,—Forward march!

That is God's word to his people today. We have held our conferences and committees, and we have considered situations, but when we have done it all, what are we going to do? How are we going on? The voice of the Lord says, "Forward!" No going back, in spite of the blackened fields of Europe, in spite of all that has happened in the last decade! No compromise, no lowering of his standards, no consenting for a single moment that our Lord was mistaken in his idealism! Forward! No going back!

In the old days in Scotland when the Covenanters were being persecuted, many of them had to hide in dens in the mountains. They lived there long months while the soldiers hunted them like beasts. Into those dens little groups gathered that they might receive instruction in the Word and worship in quietness. A laddie named Jamie Douglas held what he considered the high office of taking food to a minister in one of these dens. He knew ways through the mountains others did not know. The soldiers knew where he was going, but they could not catch him. One day, however, they caught him coming back, and the captain commanded him to turn and go back where he had come from. Jamie said he could not do it. The captain caught him up and rode along the edge of a rough precipice, 500 feet down, and hanging him over it gave him one minute to change his mind. Immediately Jamie turned his head and said:

"Drop me down if you must!"

He dropped him, and only the mangled body of Jamie was found below. And that is going forward magnificently, flinging up a highway for God.

Secondly, I think a command like this to a people like this under circumstances such as these introduces a new element into the discussion of the impossible.

Supposing we had been in that exact situation, and that word of the Lord had come to us, a word of the Lord not exactly contradicted by Moses but certainly something Moses had not suggested.

Moses had said: "Fear ye not, stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord, which he will show to you today: for the Egyptians whom ye have seen today ye shall see them again no more forever. The Lord shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace."

What God said was this: "What are you crying to me for? Speak unto the people that they go forward! Tell them to travel on! I cannot do it all. Tell them that when they march against the impossible I can begin to work!"

If under those circumstances we had been there we should have found that that command from God introduced a new element into the discussion of the impossible. For it was an impossible situation. What would you have done? The only thing you could do was make terms with your fellow men, and get back. Otherwise do you know the word you would have used? The tiny word "If." Get the situation! Hemmed in by the sea in front, the marshes and rocks on either side, and Pharaoh coming behind, you would have said, "If we are to go forward . . ." I defy any man to finish that except in one way, and I will express that in language I have learned on your side of the Atlantic. If we are to go forward it is up to God! I am not irreverent. If we are to go forward God must act!

In the "British Weekly," a few months before Sir William Robertson Nicoll died, he wrote an article with this strange title: "Why Not Try God?" The whole thought of that article was along the line I am trying to suggest to you. He was speaking of the difficulties of the hour then, and he was looking at what men were doing. They were trying this, that and the other, trying organization, cleverness, wit and wisdom, and they were not getting anywhere. "Why not try God?" Why not get back to the one fundamental thing of our faith? "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit," saith the Lord!

Forward march! That is always possible in the power of God, and in none other. That is what we need: something that shall smash our conceit and break us down in the presence of our own cleverness, and bring us back to God. If we are to go forward there is no hour greater, more possible in the life of the individual believer than an hour when we are particularly up against difficulties, and driven back.

I do not mean it is for us to dictate to God as to what he shall do. Somebody asks what I mean. We are in danger of doing that. "God must act, and he must do thus and so." How do you know what he must do? Whenever I go I hear people saying that what we need is an old-fashioned revival. Will you tell me what you mean by an old-fashioned revival? When I ask people that they go back to the days of D. L. Moody, they go back to the days of Wesley. Quite right, but when you talk about an old-fashioned revival has it occurred to you that each of those revivals was so new a manifestation that the organized church was afraid to drop into line with it? When you sit down and sigh for a manifestation such as came 50 or 150 years ago you may be blinded to the movement of God beginning on earth all around you. It isn't a method of God we are to be concerned about, but the God of all methods. If we are to go forward a new recognition of that fact is what we need supremely today.

A VENTURE OF FAITH.

Finally, a command like that to a people like that created their opportunity for making a venture of faith.

There seem to be things God cannot and does not do except upon fulfillment of conditions, and that according to the principle of eternal law, whenever God does a great thing it is when men have fallen into right relationship with him. He is not limited in himself, but in us he is limited. And in the venture of faith forward, when there is no way onward, when it seems as though onward was certain death and destruction, then God begins to act. He will divide the sea, or perhaps not, but he will act and he will move toward his own victory.

Our responsibility is that of obedience and faith. I am not responsible for the dividing of the sea: I am responsible for marching when God says forward. Are our faces set that way?

How wonderfully Bunyan names his characters! There is only one I have any doubt about. Do you remember Mr. Feeble-Mind? One day Bunyan makes Mr. Feeble-Mind say something like this:

"I am resolved to go when I cannot run, to creep when I cannot go. My mind is beyond the river that hath no bridge, and I am, as you will see, of a feeble mind."

If that is feeble-mindedness, the Lord increase the number of the feeble-minded! There are days when we can run, there are days when running is impossible but we can creep, there are days when even creeping ceases, but then there is the mind beyond the river with no bridge. I think that is what Paul meant when he said, "Set your affections on things above!" Keep your mind on heaven! Keep before you the vision of supreme things, the heavenly conception of conduct and character! Keep your mind there even when you can't move! Then you are marching forward, and if men and women are doing that today, however weak and small, then God is marching on!

—Record of Christian Work.

PUT OFF—PUT ON.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE Christian life obligates one to co-operation with the Holy Spirit if we would know the heights and depths of the atonement of our Lord Jesus Christ.

In Colossians 3:9, we are reminded that we have "put off the old man with his deeds;" in verse 10 we are exhorted as having "put on the new man," thus indicating that there must be a putting off of all that is evil before we can put on that which is good.

In the verses above in this same chapter we are told of some of the things that we in our sinful state have to put off: "fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness which is idolatry." One can scarcely believe that these things dwell in the unregenerated heart but the Scriptures so declare, and our experiences teach us that in all of us there are some of these things, perhaps all.

We are told in Romans 13:14, that we are to "put on the Lord Jesus Christ," which means that our bearing, habits, daily walk must be such as to rightly represent the Lord Jesus Christ—to walk, even as he walked.

This verse is said to be memorable for its association with the life of Augustine, who says: "Thus was I sick and tormented in mind, bitterly accusing myself, and rolling and turning about in my chain, till it might be wholly broken."

At length, rushing into the garden, groaning in spirit, "all my bones were crying out. Soul-sick was I, and grievously tormented. I said to myself, 'Be it done now! Be it done now!' And a voice said, 'Why standest thou in thyself, and so standest not? Cast thyself upon him! Fear not! He will not withdraw himself to let thee fall. He will receive and will heal thee. Stop thine ears against those unclean members of thine which are upon the earth that they may be mortified!"

Then arose a mighty tempest, bringing a heavy downpour of tears. "I cast myself under a certain figtree and gave rein to my tears, and the floods of mine eyes brake forth. Why not now? Why not this hour make an end of my uncleanness? And lo! from the neighboring house I heard a voice as of a boy or girl, I know not which, singing and oft repeating, 'Take and read! Take and read!' Checking the torrent of my tears I arose, interpreting it to be a divine command to open the Book and read the first chapter I could find. I seized, I opened, and in silence read the passage on which mine eyes fell: 'Not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying: but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof!' No further would I read, nor was there need, for instantly all my heart was flooded with a light of peace, all the sadness of doubt melted away!"

This recital of Augustine's heartbroken repentance and agony of soul to find Christ has been experienced, somewhat, by every one who has awakened to the fact that they are sinners, without God and without hope in the world. In the language of the Psalmist, we have cried out, "The sorrows of death encompassed me, the pains of hell gat hold upon me, and I found trouble and sorrow."

How well do we remember when we realized we were lost and undone unless Christ came to our rescue. But, by "putting off" the wicked deeds of our sinful past, and "putting on," by faith in Christ, the robe of righteousness, we found the peace that passeth understanding, and the love of God was shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost. What a transformation from the life of bondage to sin to the life of freedom in Christ! How the old things passed away, and, behold, all things became new! But before this joyous experience was ours, we had to co-operate with God by "putting off" the old man with his deeds and "putting on" the new man which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him."

Then after we have gotten into the way we are still commanded to "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and to run with patience the race that is set before us, ever looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." So all along the way, we must keep stripped for the race, allowing no worldly weights to cling to us and impede our progress in the heavenly pilgrimage. May God help each one of us to so run, that we may obtain the prize that is set before us, even everlasting life.

"O watch, and fight, and pray;
The battle ne'er give o'er;
Renew it boldly every day,
And help divine implore."

Ideals for Earnest Youth.

Ideals for Earnest Youth is a charming book for young people of both sexes. It is neatly bound, excellent paper, good, clear print, 224 pages, short chapters, sometimes only two pages, frequently not more than three pages. This enables the young reader to catch up the book at a few spare moments, read a chapter and go to work, or on a journey, with something to think about. Let me give you a few of the chapters:

Self Respect, Self Mastery, The Joy of Living, Your Ideals, Courtship and Marriage, Take Care of Your Mind, The School of Struggles, Backbone vs. Wishbone, Team Work, Recreation.

Send a dollar to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for a copy of Ideals for Earnest Youth, and surprise one of your children or young friends with a bright smile and a beautiful gift.

THE MAN GOD USES.

COMMISSIONER S. L. BRENGLE.

I was talking with a Christian merchant a while ago, who expressed a great and important truth. He said: "People are crying to God to use them, but he cannot. They are not given up to him; they are not humble, and teachable, and holy. There are plenty of people who come to me and want work in my store, but I cannot use them; they are not fit for my work. When I must have someone, I have to go and advertise, and sometimes spend days in trying to find a man who will fit into the place I want him for, and then I have to try him and prove him to know whether he will suit me or not."

The fact is, God is using everybody that he can, and using them to the full extent of their fitness for his service. So, instead of praying so much to be used, people should search themselves to know whether they are usable.

God cannot use anybody and everybody who comes along any more than the merchant could. It is only those who are "sanctified and meet for the Master's use," and "prepared unto every good work," that he can bless with great usefulness.

God wants men and women, and he is hunting for them everywhere; but, like the merchant, he has to pass by hundreds before he finds the right individuals. The Bible says: "The eyes of the Lord run to and fro through the whole earth, to show himself strong in the behalf of them whose heart is perfect toward him!"

Oh, how God wants to use you! But before you ask him again to do so, see to it that your "heart is perfect toward him." Then you may depend upon it, and that God will show himself strong in your behalf. Glory to his dear, dear name!

When God searches for a man to work in his vineyard, he does not ask, "Has he great natural abilities? Is he thoroughly educated? Is he a fine singer? Is he eloquent in prayer? Can he talk much?"

But, rather, he asks, "Is his heart perfect toward me? Is he holy? Does he love much? Is he willing to walk by faith, and not by sight? Does he love me so much, and has he such childlike confidence in my love for him that he can trust me to use him when he doesn't see any sign that I am using him? Will he be weary and faint when I correct him and try to fit him for greater usefulness? Or will he, like Job, cry out, 'Though he slay me, yet will I trust him.' Does he search My Word, and 'meditate therein day and night, in order to do according to all that is written therein?' Does he wait on me for my counsel, and seek in everything to be led by my Spirit? Or is he stubborn and self-willed, like 'the horse and the mule, which have to be held in with bit and bridle,' so that I cannot 'guide him with mine eye?' Is he a man-pleaser and a time-server, or is he willing to wait for his reward, and does he seek solely for 'the honor that cometh from God only?' Does he 'preach the Word,' and is he 'instant in season, and out of season?' Is he meek and lowly in heart, and humble?"

When God finds such a man, he will use him. God and that man will have such a friendly understanding with each other, and such mutual sympathy, and love, and confidence, that they will at once become "workers together."

Paul was such a man, and the more they whipped him, and stoned him, and tried to rid the earth of him, the more God used him. At last they shut him up in prison, but Paul declared with unshaken faith, "I suffer trouble as an evildoer, even unto bonds; but the Word of God is not bound;" and so he spoke God's Word, and neither devils nor men could put shackles on it, but it pierced right through the prison walls, and flew across oceans and continents, and down through the long centuries, bearing the glorious tidings of the blessed Gospel; overthrowing thrones, and kingdoms, and powers of evil, and everywhere bringing light, and comfort, and salvation to dark, troubled, sinful hearts. Though more than eighteen hundred years have passed since they cut Paul's head off, and though they had done with him forever, yet his usefulness increases, and his mighty words and works are today bearing such fruit to the good of men and the glory of God as passes the comprehension of an archangel.

Oh, how surprised Paul will be, when he gets his final reward at the General Judgment Day, and enters into possession of all the treasures he has laid up in Heaven, and the everlasting inheritance prepared for him!

Poor, troubled soul, cheer up! Be of good courage! You think you are useless, but you do not know. Trust God!

Paul saw dark days. He wrote to Timothy one day, and said, "This thou knowest, that all they in Asia be turned away from me." Study his life in the Acts and in the Epistles, and see what conflicts and discouragements he had, and take courage!

Jesus said, "He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This he spake of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive."

See to it that you are a believer. See to it that you are "filled with the Spirit," and Jesus will see to it that out of your life shall flow rivers of holy influence and power to bless the world; and you, too, will be surprised, at the Reckoning Day to behold the vastness of your reward as compared with the littleness of your sacrifices and your work.

Some Don'ts for Preachers.

REV. F. LINCICOME.

Don't waste your time. I suppose there is no class of professional men more inefficient in the use of their time than ministers. As a rule, I think that most preachers are pretty slipshod. We know there is no end to the work we might do and we know there is no imperative demand for most of its being done within a definite time limit so we take the whole matter rather easily, making ourselves believe that because we have so much to do and because we do make spasmodic efforts to get it all done, we are therefore very busy, nay, overworked. I really think the most of us have been pulling the wool over our eyes without knowing it.

How much time, brother minister, are you putting in each day on your job? Some don't seem to know exactly what a minister's job is. A minister has only two main jobs and then a great mass of other things that might be done.

A minister's two main jobs, for which he is paid, are the preparation of his sermons and visiting and calling on his people.

Wouldn't it be a good thing for every minister to estimate the total amount of time that it will take for his work, to make up a time budget? I am not advocating living by a time table, nor insisting on an inflexible program, the same every day, but some sort of a schedule would help us in the use of our time.

Put system and method into your work. Say, divide your time and give at least four hours a day to your study and four hours a day to calling. I wonder how many preachers put in eight hours a day on their job. Not many. Some preachers spend a good bit of time growing about the small salary they are getting, but many of them get every dollar they are earning. The average preacher is not on the job. There is no job that affords a greater temptation to laziness than the ministry and I fear many have yielded to that temptation.

I wonder if it would help any if the official board would request, if not demand, a monthly report of the pastor as to how he has invested his time. I am satisfied, brethren, we can all improve and be more economical and systematical in the use of our time. Some of us are very careful as to how we spend our money, but very careless about how we spend our time, which is worth money and infinitely more.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS' LIBRARY

Ways of Working

BY A. F. SCHAUFFLER

Deals with the Sunday school from the Cradle Roll to the Home Department. It deals in a most interesting way with the duty of the pastor to the Sunday school, the relationship of the pastor and superintendent to each other; their relationship to the teacher and the teacher's relationship to the pupil. The chapter on the Teachers' Meeting will create in any teacher a desire to be more fitted for this sacred task. The blackboard work, music and the S. S. library are all ably and religiously handled. We would not attempt to estimate the value this book would be to a worker in any school. 238 pages, good paper, clear type page, cloth bound. Our special price $1.00.

Sunday School Problems

PROFESSOR AMOS R. WELLS

The author has given his life to the study of the Sunday school, and in this remarkable volume he offers the solution of most every problem that confronts those who bear the burden of the school. Some of the subjects treated are "The Backward Scholars," "How to Get Home Study," "When Attendance Wanes," "The Bible in the Class," "Pearls Before Swine," "How to Tell a Bible Story," etc. 297 pages, good paper, good binding. Our special price $1.00.

The Teacher? The Child and the Book

BY A. F. SCHAUFFLER

This book starts off with the teacher's Seven Helps—two eyes, and what to do with them; two ears, and what to hear; two hands, and how to use them; two feet, and where they should lead; one mouth, and God intends it should be used; one mind, and what it should be stored with; one heart, which should be full of love for the pupils. Also "The Teacher's Varied Calling," "The Teacher's Mistakes," "The Teacher's Personal Character," "Use of the Imagination," "Study of the Child," "Life of our Lord," etc. There are many other very helpful things. 283 pages, good type, paper and binding. Our special price $1.00.

Our Boys and Girls

BY MRS. M. G. KENNEDY

Mrs. Kennedy has written this book for the common needs of the average teacher, hoping to save some of them the perplexity and worries through which she had to plow her way for these many years. She tells of Organization, Equipment, Habit Culture, Church Attendance, What Shall the Harvest Be? etc. 122 pages, good paper, good binding. Our special price 75c.

Sparks from a Superintendent's Anvil

BY A. F. SCHAUFFLER

The result of thirty-six years of Sunday school work and Bible study. There is nothing in it which has not been put to actual tests, and the matter and manner of teaching as well as the development of the child have been considered from the practical standpoint. It is divided into three parts, "The Book or What We Teach," "The Scholar or Why We Teach," and "The School or How We Teach." You will find it interesting, very suggestive as to ways and means, and you would not be without it for ten times its cost. 274 pages, good type, paper and binding. Our special price $1.00.

The wide-awake pastor, superintendent or teacher, is constantly on the lookout for something that will better qualify him or her for this special work, and this set of books is invaluable. These five volumes have a special net retail value of $4.75. We have a limited number of sets that we are offering at $2.50 each, postpaid. If you do not order at once, you may miss the opportunity of getting this set.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

REPORT OF R. P. MARSHALL AND WIFE.

Our meeting at Drakesboro, Ky., was a splendid example of old-time revival fire. Shouts of new-born souls were heard nearly every night, and at the close over forty had been saved or blessed in some way. The pastor, Bro. Russell, stood by the meeting and boosted with all his might. Rev. H. H. Jones, of Central City, did most of the preaching and did it well.

Our next work was with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church of our own home town. This was an accidental meeting, as I was home for my vacation. We enjoyed splendid fellowship with the pastor and evangelist. Several were saved or reclaimed.

Following this we had a few days of rest and then were called to assist in the revival at the Presbyterian church of Russellville, Ky. Col. Guy W. Green was the evangelist. He is a very fine speaker and a splendid, brotherly man. There was no large amount of visible results, but the messages of the evangelist were greatly appreciated and will surely bear fruit.

Our next meeting will be here at Lewisburg, with Col. Green under the auspices of the Methodist Church. We ask the prayers of all for a real revival. We have open dates in November due to the cancelling of a meeting in Alabama. Address us at Lewisburg, Ky.

CAMP SYCHAR LETTER.

It was Robert Burns, the "Ayrshire Plowman" who wrote:—

"Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see ourselves as ithers see us!
It wad frae monie a blunder free us
And foolish notion."

The suggestion contained in these quaint lines is a wholesome one, and well worth our consideration. This is true in the case of individuals, of churches, or of camp meeting associations. To "see ourselves as ithers see us" may clarify our ideas and give us a better perspective often than simply seeing ourselves from our own standpoint only. Such an outside view may not only "Frae monie a blunder free us and foolish notion," but sometimes it may contribute to a better understanding of excellencies before unnoticed, and of possibilities unperceived, thus leading us out in our estimate of ourselves; for there is a danger of folks underrating as well as overrating themselves. Many a heart has been made sad because of lack of appreciation by friends, and many a life has been crippled in its usefulness because the individual did not recognize the possibilities of his life until too late.

It is a fine art to be able to correctly appraise our own possibilities and powers, and to avoid the extremes of underrating or overrating them. It is here that the assistance of our friends, yes even our enemies in faithfully or maliciously it may be, pointing out our failures, our mistakes, or calling attention to our unrecognized abilities is of real value to us; in enabling us if we please to "see ourselves as ithers see us." True, it may come to us as a surprise, or it may bring with it a sense of humiliation, but received in the right spirit and properly appreciated it becomes a real blessing to us.

The writer remembers with gratitude the feeling of surprise that came to him, when, after spending all his money in preparation for what seemed to him his proper place in life, that of a local preacher, preaching just wherever and whenever opportunity afforded, that his pastor, a Methodist preacher, came out with the startling statement that he (the writer) was going to take the examinations and enter the regular ministry at the next session of the Annual Conference. That seemed the height of presumption; and not until the matter was presented to him from the standpoint of others' viewpoint did it seem at all possible to the writer that such a thing could be. And we desire to say humbly that after thus contemplating the subject and seeking to know the mind of the Spirit upon it we have never for one moment doubted or regretted our final decision. But "seeing ourselves as others saw us" had much to do in our final momentous decision.

If we apply this thought or principle to Sychar seems to us to be as beneficial as it would be in individual cases. We are all perhaps more or less partial in our estimates of our friends; and likewise in our appraisal of our favorite camp meeting. Remembering as we do the blessed seasons of refreshing at her altars, and the glorious victories we have won or witnessed there, our judgments may become just a little bit biased until we may possibly overlook some imperfections and shortcomings which may exist. On the other hand familiarity with the scenes and the conditions existing may cause us to overlook some of the real excellencies of the camp. It is with the thought in mind that by an honest investigation into the work and conditions of Sychar as seen by those not so intimately connected with her as some of us are, we may recognize and remedy any possible defects which may exist, and at the same time there be promoted in our minds a better recognition and appreciation of the strong points of the camp we love so well.

We welcome any suggestion which the patrons of the camp might desire to send in. We will not obligate ourselves to publish all that may come to hand, but will give full consideration to all that come, and do our best to weigh and publish any or all that we can that will contribute to the ends mentioned above. Send in your contributions to the undersigned, your impressions of Sychar to my address, Irondale, O.

In conclusion permit us to state the impression and opinion of a camper this year. He said in substance: "I have attended many camps in all parts of the country this year and in other years; but the thing which marks Sychar camp as unique is its work among the young people. It is not always that you find the spirit of consecration and devotion among young people that you find at Sychar. The genuine religious experiences, the intelligent grasp of vital gospel truth, the correct indoctrination of Sychar's young people cannot be excelled and is rarely equaled anywhere."

We are sure that this evaluation of the work among the young people at camp Sychar, coming as it does from one of wide experience and close observation, is very encouraging. It should arouse within us a deeper appreciation of our camp and a higher estimate of the future effects of its work. Should we not pause to give thanksgiving for what has thus been wrought and to lift our hearts in earnest prayer that God may perpetuate the work among the young people of Sychar camp?

REPORT OF BOWMAN EVANGELISTIC PARTY.

Since my last report to The Pentecostal Herald I have conducted ten revival meetings. Some lasting as long as five weeks. I think that I can truthfully say that this last year has been the greatest year of my ministry. While we have been in some hard places and did not see the results we desired, nevertheless we have seen hundreds kneeling at the altar of prayer, some repenting of their sins, others seeking holiness, some help for their body, and best of all God did not disappoint a single one who came, and was willing to go all the way with him.

Our last meeting was at Viruqua, Wis. Every night for five weeks hundreds of people gathered at the big tent; many of these people were of the Lutheran faith and were somewhat hesitant when it came to the altar service, but the last three weeks of the meeting saw the altar filled night after night, and many of them getting a definite experience. Their testimony would be—"Oh, I feel so happy! This is what we have been starving for. This fully satisfies."

Our party now consists of four. We have a four-piece orchestra with Mrs. Bowman at the piano, Louise the Saxophone, Mr. Ferguson (who is our song leader from Asbury College) plays the cornet, and I the violin. We also have a string quartet consisting of the following instruments, mandolin, tiple, banjo, guitar. Anyone desiring our service please write us at once. We do not feel that we are too large for the small towns and churches, neither do we feel that we are too small for the large towns—for if we come we come in the "Name of the Lord God of Hosts."

REPORT OF EVANGELIST TILDEN H. GADDIS AND THE MOSER SISTERS.

After a series of campaigns in Eastern States, the last one at Baltimore, our third time with the American Rescue Workers and the best in attendance, spirit and results, Sunday morning services in First Nazarene Church and closing with altar full of men in Fayette St., M. E. Church, broadcasting over WCBM, and arranging to return in 1931, we engaged with Pastor Way in the Second P. H. Church, Greensboro, N. C. Splendid attendance filling the church night after night and filling the altar at most every call. Twenty-three sought God the last night. Noonday meetings at the cotton mills and broadcasting over WNBC.

Our camp meeting season opened with Southern District camp of the P. H. Church, Greensboro, N. C. Bro. Joseph H. Smith, our co-worker, ministered in his rich, spiritual manner. Good seeking, as many as thirty at a time at the altar.

Next a county-wide Methodist day with ten churches uniting and a revival campaign following in the Greenville, Ill. M. E. Church. Six o'clock services in various towns of the county preceding the night services. Large attendance, much conviction, altars filled; one mother 93 years of age saved at home. Bro. Magill, the pastor who arranged the campaign, stood by us.

Then to Sault Sainte Marie, Mich., that unique city on the Canadian border with the world-famed locks handling more tonnage than Panama and Suez combined, with its beautiful parks, wonderful climate and a multitude of attractions. We found here a new but growing Holiness Association representing eleven denominations and is a great open field for spiritual work. This the second annual meeting with good attendance; as many as eighteen at altar at a time. Plans are laid for a greater camp when we return in 1930. Bro. Manger, the president, who is the Wesleyan pastor at Cadillac, Mich., is a beautiful spirit and has this work on his heart.

Our second year at Alicoet, Ky., that great old camp where the headlines of the Holiness Movement have preached for thirty years. Virgil L. Moore, our co-worker, and we had delightful fellowship. Attendance larger than last year, filling Tabernacle every night and thousands outside on Sundays. People found God who had never been saved before, and some remarkable cases, among them two of Dr. W. B. Godbey's grand-daughters saved and sanctified and called in such a glorious manner. We are called back for 1930.

Hurrying to the Connelly Springs, N. C., camp for Monday night we found Brothers John Owen and Jim Green shelling the woods. A good camp here and many found God. We engaged with them until the last Sunday afternoon when we left to begin a tabernacle meeting at Kannapolis, N. C., the towel city of the world where 600,000 are made daily. Bro. Green came over to our help and what a time we had. The spiritual tide kept rising until on the last Sunday sixty people sought God and whole families were converted. Some were marvelously healed. They planned to finish the building and make the work permanent. We have return calls to these places.

Bonnie, Ill., was our next camp with Bona Fleming our co-worker. The thirty-seventh year of this great camp which is largely attended. Difficult to get folks to altar here although over a hundred sought the Lord. We called here for 1932.

Our camp season closed with the annual tabernacle meeting of the Randolph County Holiness Association at Winchester, Ind. A very wonderful camp. They sure can shout and pray. Good attendance and old-fashioned praying through; altar full three times on last Sunday with seventeen seeking the last service. A great healing service on last Sunday brought twenty-four to be anointed and some miracles. They sure did treat us royally and received many calls.

May God set his seal on this summer's work.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN CONVENTION.

Just recently a new bridge was opened which crosses Lake Champlain thus connecting the two states New York and Vermont. The pastors of the Nazarene churches of Northern New York and Vermont have also bridged the Lake by organizing the Lake Champlain Nazarene Preachers' Association.

Each group has a monthly all-day meeting in their zone and every quarter the two groups unite for a convention. These are not frigid zone meeting but torrid zone meetings. The first quarterly meeting of the L. C. N. P. A. was held at Altoona, New York, September 18 and 19. The first service was called at 7:30 Wednesday evening and was opened by the writer with the Wilmington orchestra aiding greatly. Rev. U. T. Hollenback and Rev. R. D. Haas sang a duet which was a great blessing to many. Rev. W. S. McPherson, pastor of the Altoona Church gave an address of welcome and response was made by the two group presidents, Rev. A. M. Babcock and Rev. S. W. Beers. This was followed by a short message by Brother Hollenback whose subject was, "It Can Be Done In New York," and a short message by Brother Beers whose subject was "It Can Be Done In Vermont." A special prayer service for a Home Mission Revival followed these two splendid messages.

Thursday's session was opened by a prayer service in which the glory of God was outpoured in a marked manner and the saints prayed and shouted and were indeed blessed. The essence of that prayer-meeting hovered over the sanctuary the remainder of the day. Rev. Ray Haas brought the morning message using the subject "Getting Our Message and Work Before The People." This was indeed a fine message and those that were there will not soon forget it. The entire morning service was one in which hearts were inspired and many got a new vision of their opportunities and privileges in Christ Jesus.

The Lake Champlain Nazarene Preachers' Association held its quarterly business meeting preceding the regular preaching service of the afternoon. Definite plans were made for advancement in this Northern area and by the help of the Lord we intend to lengthen our cords and strengthen our stakes by pushing on and out in the fields already established and also new fields. The L. C. N. P. A. quartette consisting of Brothers Haas, Poole, Hollenback, and Babcock sang "Holiness For Evermore." Rev. A. M. Babcock was the preacher of the afternoon and his subject was "The Dynamics of Holiness." This message blessed and inspired the hearts of the people and we truly felt the dynamic power of holiness as he preached.

The evening service was opened with congregational singing. Mrs. Ella Vaughan sang a beautiful solo, "Why I Love and Adore Jesus." Brother Hollenback brought an evangelistic message with the unction of the Holy Ghost upon him and four seekers bowed at the altar of prayer after the invitation was given. One was reclaimed and three were gloriously sanctified wholly. To God we ascribe all the praise and glory for all that was accomplished. We were indeed glad to have some of the brethren from the Mooers, N. Y., church present and also some of our sister denomination pastors. Come again brethren.

Our next quarterly L. C. N. P. A. convention will be held in the Church of the Nazarene at Wolcott, Vt., December 11th and 12th. People of all denominations are welcome to attend these conventions. Board and lodging free to all who attend.

We are expecting great things from God in this section of the country. J. W. Poole, Reporter.

Ghost is being grieved away, and God is saying, "Oh that my people had hearkened unto me."

Let God's faithful ones rally all along the line. It is no time to cower or hesitate or fall from the ranks of faithful service. Let us realize that,

"A charge to keep, I have—
A God to glorify;
A never-dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky."

May our prayer be,

"Help me to watch and pray,
And on thyself rely;
Assured if I my trust betray,
I shall forever die."

To The Herald Readers.

The doctors assure me that there are some indications of improvement in my health, and I am hopeful, though greatly exhausted with this third time in the hospital within eleven months. I am very grateful to believe that the worst of this attack has passed and that I may now gather strength within the next ten days or two weeks, to get out for the warm, pure atmosphere of southwest Texas. All the physicians seem to think that would be very beneficial to me. I have been permitted to sit up about thirty minutes the last two days, after three weeks of very exhaustive suffering. I greatly appreciate the prayers of THE HERALD family, and good letters which come to me which I cannot answer. I can have no hope for anything like permanent health apart from the special blessing of the Lord.

When a man comes into this region in which I have been suffering and battling, Jesus Christ looms up as our all in all. How little everything looks as compared with Christ, while he fills the universe with his power and his compassionate love. I should be profoundly thankful if he should raise me up for a few years in the ministry, at the same time, I am deeply conscious that he can carry on his great world work without me. John the Baptist, whom Jesus said was one of the greatest ever born, got his head cut off before he was forty years of age. He was a marvelous preacher, but the Lord could carry forward his work without him, and so permitted his enemies to imprison and decapitate him.

OUR TWENTY-FIVE CENT OFFER.

We are offering The Pentecostal Herald from now until February 1st for the small sum of twenty-five cents. We are doing this in order to introduce the paper into many new homes. We want all the friends of Bible truth and evangelical Christianity to help us sow The Herald down in thousands of new homes. During the coming months there will be able discussions of some most vital subjects that ought to be read by the rank and file of Christian people of all denominations.

We are living in perilous times. It is simply startling to contemplate the fearful drift away from Bible Christianity toward modern doubt, uncertainty and a character of teaching that is rapidly undermining the faith of the people in the fundamental truths of evangelical religion. Christian men and women everywhere who want to preserve evangelical, saving faith in the world ought to become zealous and earnest in their efforts to save the church and people from a fearful state of backsliding.

H. C. Morrison.

Let us all, above all things, seek to be filled with the Holy Spirit.

Faithfully your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

The Opening Address of President L. R. Akers, at Asbury College at The Beginning of the College Year, 1929-30.

(As Stenographically Reported)

In that great work of Shakespeare called "Romeo and Juliet," you will recall the little dialogue between the lovers; particularly the one place where Juliet, looking down from the balcony, says to Romeo:

"What's in a name? The rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

Let us stop for a moment and ask that question, "What's in a name?" Have you ever stopped to consider how tremendous are the issues sometimes wrapped up in a little word of a few letters? Think a bit. What do some of these small Anglo-Saxon words mean to you? What does that word, life, mean to you? The words, school, home, mother, child, God? Great are the little words of life. Tremendous in their scope and reach. There is indeed much in a word.

Before me this morning is one of the most cosmopolitan student bodies in the United States. It has gathered here from forty or more of our commonwealths, from the Pacific coast, from the northern forests along the Canadian border, from the balmy states of the Southland,—every part of the nation is represented here this morning.

There are two things we might ask ourselves this morning. The "Why" of Asbury College and the "What" of Asbury College. I shall never forget a very thrilling trip which I took through the battlefields of France shortly after the War. I remember going down into the blood-stained forts of Verdun, of walking with sad and halting steps over Dead Man's Hill, scene of a human holocaust, of seeing those blood-drenched fields where almost a million men poured out their lives in the most desperate conflict the world has ever seen. I recall going through the Argonne Forest; and I am still wondering how in the world our soldiers ever went through that tangled underbrush of thorns, barbed wire, chevaux de frise, and all manner of diabolical devices to impede their progress. I was sitting at a Rotary Dinner in Hotel Cecil, London, and happened to remark to an Englishman, "I cannot understand how our boys ever got through the Argonne Forest." I shall never forget his reply: "Because you Americans did not have sense enough to know you couldn't do it. You just went ahead and did it." There was a profound truth in that. The European armies had been accustomed to fight in mass formation. It was absolutely impossible for such an army to go through the Argonne Forest. The Americans were taught the individualistic method. Every man had to think for himself, to act upon his own initiative. The American commander would say, "Boys, we must make a certain objective by such and such a time." And down these heroic fellows went on their faces, and, wriggling like serpents, under the hail of machine gun bullets through the barbed wire and thorny thickets they finally reached their destination and took by surprise the German forces who did not believe it possible for any one to pass through such a maze of obstacles and dangers. But they were there. They had not sense enough to know they couldn't do it so they went ahead and did it.

I am reminded of the founding of Asbury College. According to worldly philosophy, the man who founded Asbury College did not have sense enough to know that another college couldn't be built in the Blue Grass, so with faith he did the apparently impossible; and today we say, "Mr. World, we are here." The man who did that made an audacious venture of faith and I shall always give him a tribute of praise for that sublime audacity that sent him out without money or friends, with nothing but an indomitable faith in God to believe that the impossible could be made possible. I want to take this occasion to present to you the founder of Asbury College, the man who dared to do what other men said couldn't be done. (Dr. Hughes came forward amid prolonged applause.)

Faith always glories in doing the impossible. I think it was Mirabeau who said, "Impossible is such a blockhead of a word!" I remember that the wisest Teacher of all said, "With God all things are possible to him that believeth." When a man of faith journeys along life's highway and finds a precipitous mountain across his pathway, reason says, "You cannot go farther," but faith affirms, "Yes, you can," and gives him wings to fly over the mountain.

As a mighty venture of faith, Asbury College was founded. It is a child of faith, cradled in adversity, reared in sacrifice, and developed amid vicissitudes. How many of you have ever taken time to watch a baby grow? I have. I have had four. There isn't anything in life more interesting than to watch a baby grow. There are two things that pertain to this experience: rocking chairs and rockets. You rock him and he will rock you often. The pathway of a baby is beset with bursting bombs. He is a perpetual surprise to you. It is an interesting process to watch a baby grow. Many are the questions that baby asks you! You may have a Ph.D. after your name, yea, enough degrees to give you academic indigestion, but that little fellow with his Why? What? and When? will cause you to forget all your wisdom in your embarrassing inability to answer him. It is a wonderful thing to watch a baby grow! I thank God I have had that privilege.

But what about baby Asbury? It has been an interesting thing for Dr. Hughes, Dr. Morrison, and others who have put their life blood into this institution to watch baby Asbury grow up. Asbury College, born an orphan, with no place for it, no sympathy, no assistance, an orphan on the doorstep of the Kentucky Association of Colleges for more than twenty years, finally grew until it threatened to kick in the door of the Association, so it had to be let in. In forty years this school has grown from its insignificant beginning of eleven students and two teachers to more than eight hundred in number. Under the wise leadership of Dr. Morrison it has gone forward until it has attracted nation-wide attention, and even received notice in the lands beyond the sea. We have a caption, "Asbury graduates girdle the globe." In forty years we are one of the best known schools in the religious world.

Why? Because of the emphasis which Asbury College puts on heartfelt religion, because of the fact that Asbury College stands absolutely foursquare for Wesleyan and Biblical Holiness of heart and life and emphasizes the need of a clean heart as well as willing hands for service. I have often thought as I have walked about this beautiful campus that it was especially fitting that these buildings are red in color for every building is bought at the price of sacrificial giving. It has cost red blood to put them up. It is a rather significant thing to take those two little words, "bless," and "blood," and find they are from the same root derivative. What is the truth that comes from this fact? Simply this: that blessings cost blood and sacrifices. "Without the shedding of blood is no remission of sins." Without the shedding of blood there is nothing in life worth while. Everything that is priceless costs the blood of some man or woman. Our school has gone forward and it has gone forward on its knees; and on its knees is the only way that Asbury ever will go forward. This school must be a school saturated with prayer, with intercessory prayer, a school that not only teaches things that are essential, but a school where its students possess things essential. It is important for us to know what we believe, but it is imperative that we know Whom we believe, and that Asburians go out to preach a positive Gospel, for the only thing that can check the hurrying hordes of men as they go to and fro through the various avenues of life is the Gospel with a compelling note, a positive, trenchant, clear-cut, know-so Gospel. That is the thing that attracts the attention of men and finally secures the surrender of their hearts. So we want the youth who go out from Asbury College to proclaim God's eternal verities, but first of all to experience them. God forbid that we should send out men to preach something they know nothing about. That which wins men is to know that he who preaches to them has first gone down himself and died. What does Holiness mean? It means first of all a birth: and then a death. And the man that has not died cannot preach the Gospel with the compelling power that God gives only to those who have paid the price and who have taken the cup to their own lips, who have died to ambition, to place, to popularity, to what men say or think; who walk in that lonely, solitary path alone, yet not alone; who walk with him whose radiant presence more than compensates for men's unfriendliness and neglect.

Three hundred of you are newcomers here. May I say to you that the greatest peril of this day is not the so-called peril about which men have written, not the peril of Bolshevism nor the yellow peril. The supreme peril of America is the stark material paganism of this age that worships mud gods, that puts the almighty dollar above Almighty God. Seeking gold, it forgets God, and so plunges on headlong to oblivion and death. Do not allow this modern conception of success to sweep you off your feet. It is a false success, a veritable will-o'-the-wisp.

I am more and more convinced that we need to keep before us continually the fact that man is a two-world creature. We must not live for one world. We must always live in this world with the other world in the background of our thinking. There are flowers that are biennial. They are beautiful. But they bloom only in the second year. They are planted and grow the first year, but it takes a second year to bring out their full blossom and beauty. None of us can ever know the possibilities of a human soul in this life that is vitiated by greed and blackened by vice. It takes another world for a soul made in the image of God to unfold and enlarge. God alone knows the infinite value of a human soul. We are souls, but we do not know their value. The only one who ever did know the value of a soul thought so much of it that he left his throne in heaven, laid aside his power, and came down to wear a seamless robe and minister to sinful, needy men. Not content with living a life morally irreproachable in its stainlessness, he stretched himself upon an old rugged tree that crowned the summit of a skull-shaped hill and went down to death that we, the children of death, might become the children of life.

Beloved, we cannot reason out this marvelous salvation. We cannot think it out. We must faith it out. Make faith a verb instead of a noun. The heart and the mind can double-team. We can think in believing and we can believe in thinking. Religion can follow with bated breath the footsteps of God through his universe as well as follow him through the pages of sacred Writ. We want to thank God for the possibility of a personality that can come out of sin through Jesus Christ clear-eyed and clean-lipped, not afraid to think and not afraid to trust. The man that can trust will think rightly and clearly. The man who is saturated with the presence of the Holy Spirit is going to think straight, and truthfully. I like that kind of a personality. God does not ask us to have minds that are locked up, but he does ask us to have minds that are open to his divine illumination. He asks not bodies tortured in penance, but bodies dedicated in service, not souls shackled by fear, but souls free as a bird to soar and shine for him. Faith is both an attitude and an act. Faith is not only the life blood of religion, but faith must become the life blood of your soul and mine if we are to walk the high-ways of God. May I say by way of testimony that there may be scars upon my faith, but beneath it there are no uncertainties. I know Whom I have believed and I am satisfied.

Our big business here is to help you young people to find yourselves religiously and to the dedication of this task I pledge myself and this Faculty not to spare ourselves but to give you freely all that we have to help you find yourselves and in finding yourselves to find God.

This is the age of bewilderment. The young people of our colleges do not know where they are. They are like cattle stampeded and rushing about in a circular track. How great the need that this body of buoyant, red-blooded, full-lived youth be guided out of their little narrow sphere into the shining road that leads to the white heights celestial.

America today is measuring life by the quantitative rather than by the qualitative. We are prone to substitute human mechanics for spiritual dynamics. "Where two or three are gathered together in my name," said the Master, "there will I be in the midst of them." But when two or three men gather together they say, "Let us organize and elect a president, a secretary, and a treasurer." And that is why we are faltering and failing. We are trying to get along without God. We would take Deity out to the edge of his universe and politely bow him out. Blind America! Look about and see our youth. Think of the three R's of our fathers; and now the three S's of their children: Speed, Spend, and Sport. You can go out into any of our highways and see them going sixty miles an hour nowhere. The lamp of knowledge in our universities today seems to be the tail-light of parked automobiles. "See America First" is now "See America Fast." There is nothing more tragic than blind America. America should be synonymous with vision, with full-orbed Christianity. But America is blind and blind to the fact that it is blind.

I was on a train coming from Detroit some weeks ago and across from me there sat three nuns. I was looking out at the beauty of the landscape and the interesting scenes all about me. Those nuns were great blinders over their faces that shut out the landscape. There they sat counting their beads. I thought, it is an awful thing to have anybody so blind, impervious to God's beautiful world, and deteriorating amid pulsating life. But far be it from me to bring any reflection upon the nuns. There are blinders upon our business men. The other day I called upon a banker. He sat in a little office counting his stocks and bonds and the only "open sesame" to his metallic mind is the clink of the dollar. If it doesn't have that clink his mind remains closed. His face has grown wizened and wolfish and his hands like the claws of a bird of prey. God help him—a man with metal blinders. There is nothing sadder than for a man to make his own world. It means for him to doom himself to mediocrity. The man who makes his own world makes a small, meager world. God made a great world and the greatest task that ever confronted humanity is that of bringing back and setting in operation God's plan to redeem the world for which his only Son died. Let God make your world for you. Let Christ lead you into the abundant life, for did he not say, "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly?"

I am making a daring statement. I make it reverently. It seems to me that in this material age God Almighty is now hard up for men and women who can shut their ears to the voices of the world and hear the still small voice of his Holy Spirit. I say God Almighty apparently is hard put to it to find a man who is both holy and handy, a man whom he can touch and send. Apparently it is exceedingly difficult to find such a man. Where are the Abrahams, Elijahs, and Isaiahs of the twentieth century? Can we send out men like that? Men whom the world needs acutely, who do not preach a muffled Gospel but a full Gospel, men who are willing to ring the alarm bells and stand on the walls of Zion and speak the truth regardless of consequences. That is the supreme need of the hour. Asbury College should be a spiritual power house of the most high God. If it is not it may as well close its doors and quit. We have one excuse for existence and that is to educate minds to think clearly and stir the souls of our youth to proclaim courageously a Gospel so full and free that men may be emancipated from sin and may go out and tell other men there is power in the Blood of Jesus Christ to cleanse from every stain of sin. And so it all comes back to this. Have we had our vision of him who can transform life and who can make the vision of this world seem small while his own kingdom looms so large that nothing else matters except that it prevail among men? I thank God for the Cross of Jesus Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation to all who believe! The old rugged cross! "And I if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me!" That is the challenge. That is our duty. That should be our supreme joy,—to hold up Jesus Christ and him crucified. Let us go out to be living evangelists of this Christ.

*"Sweetest note in seraph song,
Sweetest name on mortal tongue,
Sweetest carol ever sung—
Jesus, blessed Jesus!"*

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

MAKING A START.

Did you ever notice how difficult it is for an engineer to get a long freight train started in motion? He gives his engine a violent lurch backward, then quickly forward. Often he has to repeat this performance numbers of times. Finally the big iron monster belches forth that first powerful exhaust. Then quite often the wheels start spinning around instead of propelling the train. The engineer applies his sand, the wheels slip no longer, and again comes that slow, labored, determined exhaust. But after he gets his train in motion its very momentum carries it along.

Haven't you experienced the same difficulties on your little "railroad" of life? The young student is instructed to write a theme on a given subject. Instead of getting right down to it he will do something entirely foreign to the task. And yet he is really trying to make a start. He sticks his pencil in his mouth as if he thinks there is some magic in such a method. He looks out the window, seeming to think that his first sentence can be discovered out in the open. He scratches his head as if to remove the mental rubbish and find his thought beneath it. Maybe he will look helplessly at one of his fellow-students.

All this is a kind of cowardice which, though pardonable, should be overcome. It is a kind of cowardice that exists to some extent in us all. We dread to make the start. The initiative is a bugbear. We are on fire to do a certain commendable thing, to undertake something big and noble, but to make the start!

What is your dream? What is your objective point? To what do you aspire? Is it within your power to make the start today? By all means don't allow this dread, this fear to keep you from making the start. You can't wish it into existence. Day-dreams are all right. They are not to be condemned. They have ever prefaced all noble lives. But the day-dreamer must wake up some time and put his dream into execution. Don't say your aircastle is too good to be true, but rather say it is good and shall be true.

The following is quoted as I remember it from Shakespeare. I wish every young man and woman would make it his or her motto. I wish you would write it in big letters and tack it up in your room.

"Our doubts are traitors, and make us lose the good we oft might win by fearing to attempt."—Frank Strickland in Kind Words.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a boy seven years of age. My father has been dead four years and I am very poor. I live on a farm with my grandfather. I have one brother and two sisters.

John Lewis McKenzie.
Cades, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to The Herald. We have been getting this paper for several weeks, and I enjoy reading it very much. I am seventeen years of age. I finish high school in May. I mean to go to Trevecca College this fall. I will study for the ministry. May I ask The Herald family to pray that I may be a blessing to the world. I would like to receive letters from the cousins.

Olof Hesson.
Gordonsville, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am seventeen years old, have black hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, and am a Sophomore in high school. My birthday is April 10. Have I a twin? If so, please write me. I think The Herald is a good paper for boys and girls to read, and I enjoy reading it very much. Can anyone guess my middle name? It starts with I and ends with E, and has five letters in it. If so, I will write them. I would like to hear from some of you cousins.

Lizzie Wiley.
Rt. 2, Box 35, Fitzgerald, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Arkansas girl join your happy band? So please, Mr. W. B., don't be looking when I get there. I am eight years old and am in the fourth grade at school. I sure do like to go. My great-grandfather, Mr. G. M. Hopkins, takes The Herald and you see I get to read page ten. My birthday is July 19. Have I a twin? If so, write to me and I will answer. This is my first letter to The Herald and hope to see it in print.

Nadine Baker.
Branch, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for a Tennessee girl? My father takes The Herald. I attend Sunday school at the Nazarene Church. My father is the pastor. My first name begins with R and ends with A. This is my first letter and I hope to see it in print. I also hope to get letters from other boys and girls.

R. Louise Hesson.
Gordonsville, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have never written to The Pentecostal Herald. I have a new fountain pen and thought it would be a good time to try it out. I am a boy fourteen years of age and in the eighth grade. I go to the Nazarene Sunday school every Sunday. My father is the pastor. I would like to join your band.

Aram Hesson.
Gordonsville, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please give me a seat as I want to write a short letter. I am a little Alabama girl twelve years young. My name is Sarah Lois. Has anyone my birthday? If so, I would like to receive postcards or letters from them. I have blue eyes, light hair, fair complexion and in the fourth grade. I joined the Baptist Church last summer. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday, but I am not as good as I ought to be.

Sarah Lois Bivin.
26 Kingston St., Prattville, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I haven't written to you for so long I guess I will have to get permission to join your happy band again. I started out working for Jesus at the age of fourteen. I try to live more for him and try to serve him better each day. I am a member of the M. E. Church. Aunt Bettie, I have written a poem of what Jesus will do if you will obey his commands and what he has done for me. If you will allow me to I will write it for you.

"Love of Jesus."

"Jesus found me in a field of sin,
By his tender love and care he took me in.
Always under his command I'll live,
As he is able and willing to forgive.
He will forgive all your sins today,
If you will only kneel to him and pray.
Have faith and pray with all your might,
Jesus will forgive as he does us all right.
Pray and read his word each day,
Try to help lost souls, or sheep gone astray.
Keep his commands and he will forgive,
And when we go home forever we will live."

I believe Jesus will do this for anyone who will believe and do what the Bible tells us to. Don't you? I had better ring off before Mr. W. B. gets around.

Velma T. Perkins.
Million, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Is there space for a few words from Portland, Ore.? I read and enjoy the letters on page ten, most of all, the letters that speak of Jesus. I am not a little girl, but a mother, with a little girl of my own. I have known about Jesus the greater part of my life, but it is only within the last seven years that I have known him as my personal Savior and can tell of the wonderful change that was wrought in my life when Jesus came into my heart. Old things passed away and all became new. Trials come, as they do to us all, but there is a peace in my soul that all the wealth of this world cannot buy. I am especially interested in those who are lonely or shut in, but would be pleased to hear from anyone who would care to write to me.

With love, in Jesus' name,
Mrs. E. P. Johnson.
985 E. Main St., Portland, Ore.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a St. Paul girl in your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old and have many freckles. My birthday is April 10. Have I a twin? I enjoy reading page ten. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with F and ends with N, and has four letters in it. Freda Hiller, I guess your first name to be Ruth. I hope you keep your promise.

Evelyn Besemer.
830 Simpson Ave., St. Paul, Minn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Tell Blue Eyes to slip over and give a lonely North Carolina girl a little room to join in with their fun. No, I'm not really lonely, just sad, I guess. Papa died May 16, 1929, and all of you cousins who have a loving papa in Heaven know how I feel. Mama has been getting The Herald for about four months, and I sure enjoy it, especially page ten. Who doesn't? I wish I could find words that would tell how much The Herald has helped me. I'm the teacher of a Sunday school class and I must say I have found many helpful hints in The Herald. My pupils' ages are from four to six years of age and I really don't feel worthy of teaching them, but I hope to encourage them to live for Jesus as that's the only life worth while. "Your Sister in Jesus" wrote a real nice letter. I, too, want you to remember me in your prayers, Auntie. I sure would like to get better acquainted with you and more of the cousins. I truly hope to see this letter in print, as it's my first letter. I will describe myself as I always want others to. I am eighteen years old. I have dark brown hair, fair complexion, blue eyes, wear glasses and weigh one hundred and twenty. I am a blonde and my birthday is August 27. Have I a twin? If so, please write. I will be glad to hear from any of you, boys or girls. I will answer all letters received. Who guesses my middle name? It starts with E and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. I have been in summer school the past three weeks at Harris High School, but am planning to go to a boarding school Sept. 3. My sister and I wrote a poem in honor of papa. I sure hope to see it in print in The Herald. I hope Mr. W. B. has been filled before my letter arrives.

Dora E. Tanner.
Rt. 1, Harris, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just finished reading the most interesting letters of the cousins and thought that I would like to write and join your happy circle. Why don't some of you older cousins write? I am twenty years old and am a Christian. I have not known what good health is for over five years. Of course, I have many things to be thankful for, among them that I am not bedfast, that I have a good Christian father and mother. I earnestly ask the prayers of all the cousins and of Aunt Bettie, that I may regain my health. I should like to hear from some of the cousins. Oh say, let me out quick; I see Mr. W. B. coming.

Mabel Adams.
Rt. 3, Latham, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I again join your happy band of boys and girls? Do any of you cousins remember me? It has been a long time since I wrote. I take The Pentecostal Herald and couldn't do without it very well. I read everything in it. I am teaching a class of Junior girls in Sunday school. Some of them have given their hearts to Jesus. The Christian life is the only life to enjoy. Jesus is a wonderful Saviour to me. Friends, may leave us or forsake us, but Jesus is always with us, he never leaves us nor forsakes us. You will never know what joy and peace are until you give God your life and live for him. Today is the day of salvation. Give God your heart while he is calling. You will never regret it. I am going through with Jesus. I would rather have him than all that the world of-

FALLEN ASLEEP

BELL.

In loving remembrance of our darling, Everette Niles Bell, who fell asleep July 31, 1927.

Two years have passed since you left us,

Whom we loved and cherished dear,
Can we help but feel so lonely
While our Darling is not here?

No more his sweet and smiling face
Will cheer our hearts and home,
But in memory's love we'll keep him,
Though in sorrow we're alone.

Heaven retaineth now our treasure,
Earth the lonely casket keeps,
And the sunbeams love to linger,
Where our Darling Everette sleeps.

Mother and Brother.

REDMON.

Mrs. R. S. Redmon, mother of Evangelist J. E. Redmon, departed this life Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, Sept. 17th. She was 93 years old Sept. 8th, and enjoyed splendid health. Just weakened down with age and slipped away to be with Jesus like one falling asleep. She was a beautiful Christian character, whose choice was to go and be with Jesus. We have just said good-bye and shall soon say good-morning. J. E. Redmon.

LEFEW.

Since the assembling of our last camp, one of its members, Mrs. C. B. LeFew, has been called to the great camp above. When the messenger came she was ready, and followed on till she came to the shore of a great river, where she was given choice of passing over the Mighty Divide, or returning and taking up the work to which she had dedicated her life. She was glad to go on, but turning, she looked backward and saw the assembling of The Association at its annual meeting in Salem, Va., the leader, the missionaries from the Orient and South America, the Treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Camden, in their respective places—but her chair, as Secretary, was vacant. The appeal of it brought the cry from her heart: "Let me go back to the work again." But this was not the Father's plan. After lingering a few days longer, she passed peacefully away into the rest prepared for the children of God.

She leaves two children, Rev. Chas. LeFew, of the Baltimore Conference, and Mrs. Warren Moorman, of Salem, Va. The Association extends to them its deepest sympathy, praying that her influence may still mould and strengthen them in their journey to the city above. We shall miss her, and that vacant chair will ever remain a sacred thing in our memory. Sleep on, faithful Comrade, and all others that have passed on, till the trumpet of God shall sound and you shall come again to us in your glorified bodies.

At the Memorial Service held at the Tabernacle, Sept. 8th, the congregation sang, 'How firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord.' Mrs. F. A. Day paid tribute to her fidelity as a member of the W. C. T. U., her pastor, Rev. Raymond Wood, spoke in terms of praise, of her faithfulness to the church and as a witness to the truth of the faith of its early Fathers. Mr. Charles Felty alluded tenderly to her work among the Juniors, and the moulding of his life by her training. Dr. Joseph Owen, in his own forceful manner, emphasized her devotion as a member of the Holiness Association. Her favorite hymn, "There will be no night there," was sung by Miss Rosanna Felty. So passed our sister to her eternal reward.

Mrs. A. B. Hatcher.

TARVIN.

The death angel came August 25, and took our own beloved mother to dwell with the redeemed of all the earth in the celestial city beyond the sky. Just as the Sabbath school bells of earth were ringing that morn down here the golden bells of heaven were ringing a welcome to dear mother over there. It was so hard to kiss and say good-bye as she called her children and grandchildren to her bedside and told them she was going to live with Jesus, and would watch and wait for us just inside the eastern gate. While our hearts were broken, yet we look up and rejoice to know that she has gone to a home where no more sorrow and no more tears can ever come. She was converted in early girlhood and joined the Baptist Church at Flag Springs, Ky. She was married to B. P. Tarvin, of Carthage and lived and reared her children to womanhood and manhood at this place. She was sanctified a few years ago and joined the Church of the Nazarene and was a loyal member until her death. Her funeral was conducted at the Methodist Church by Rev. Wilford Mitchell, the pastor and Rev. J. F. Daugherty a nephew by marriage, after which she was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the cemetery to rise in the first resurrection, when the angel shall proclaim time shall be no more and Jesus comes to claim his own. Sadly missed by all, yet we say, "Thy will be done." She leaves to mourn her loss six children and twenty grandchildren, eight great-grandchildren, one orphan boy, Zarah Teanny, whom she reared to manhood and is a student at Trevecca College, Nashville, Tenn., one brother, T. O. Kennedy, of Mentor, Ky., a host of relatives and friends. Her children are Rev. Kennie Dawn, Mrs. Edith Herndon, Mrs. Vestine Crowder, Arnette Tarvin, Estil Tarvin and Evangelist E. C. Tarvin.

Her daughter, Edith.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IV.—October 27, 1929.

Subject.—The Christian View of Recreation.. Mark 2:18-28.

Golden Text.—I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. John 10:10.

Introduction.—Viewing our lesson from the standpoint of every day life, there is little connection between the subject mentioned in the caption and the Golden Text. We do not usually connect physical play with spiritual life, especially with "more abundant spiritual life." But the connection becomes close if one takes Paul's view in 1 Cor. 10:31: "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." That covers the case. There is a wide difference between the eternal life mentioned in the Golden Text and the abounding physical life that comes from healthful recreation; but the latter should always be conducive to the former.

I shall mention a few things that are not wholesome. The dance, especially the waltz, is immoral. I am personally acquainted with a prominent dancing master in the state of Washington, who says his children never dance, because he considered it morally unsafe. If I may be permitted to write as a doctor—not as a preacher—I will say that there are few viler things practiced among human beings than the modern dance. I condemn it in toto.

Another form of recreation that is now becoming very reprehensible, and very dangerous, is promiscuous bathing. Maybe I should say that the bathing is all right; but the bathing suits are all wrong. Not long ago I went to a popular natatorium for the express purpose of studying this thing. It was beautiful to see the splendid swimming and diving of the young people of both sexes; but their nakedness was shocking. If one wishes to understand the lewdness of this practice, he does not want to look at the nudity of the bathers. Let him watch the eyes of the two sexes. It is almost vulgar to write of such a matter, but that will tell the tale.

To tell the truth, promiscuous bathing and dancing cannot be done in the name of the Lord; nor can they be so done as to minister to his glory. I prefer that my daughters should indulge in neither of these pastimes.

Some claim that there is fine recreation in a game of cards; but I do not see it. There may be diversion, but not recreation. The game is too dangerous to be played "to the glory of God."

I am sorry to have to condemn the "movies," as they are called. That is a wonderful invention—one that should be a blessing to humanity, but commercialism has made it an almost unqualified curse. I am not writing in ignorance, but from firsthand information. Having been accused of preaching against what I did not understand, I went incognito into numbers of them of all grades. Now and then one sees a clean film; but very few of them are free from immoral suggestions; and, beyond question, they are conducive to lawlessness. I do not think that I am going too far when I say that they breed crime.

But there is little recreation in the "movies." Like cards, they are a sort of diversion from the humdrum routine of life. Nothing more.

Now for some things that I deem good. Some are very fond of croquet; but I take little stock in it, because it is too tame. It is the invalid's game. Tennis is far better. That cultivates both body and mind, and gives vigorous health. Baseball is good, but not the commercial type, that leads to gambling. Fishing and hunting are superb. I prefer outdoor recreation; albeit, some indoor games are fine in bad weather. Basket ball and volley ball are both good.

But I am running this too far. Personally I am a physical culturalist—have been for a good many years. One should care for his body as he does for his soul, that it may be a fit temple for the Holy Ghost. He must "glorify God in his body."

Comments on the Lesson.

18. Used to fast.—The Revised Version is better. The disciples of John the Baptist and those of the Pharisees "were fasting" at that particular time. The Pharisees could not understand why his disciples did not conform to all Jewish customs, just as others were then doing; and so they called on him for an explanation. Had their motive been good, there would have been nothing amiss in their question.

19. Can the children of the bride-chamber fast, while the bride-groom is with them?—Jesus is the Bridegroom, and his disciples he calls the "children of the bridechamber." Fasting expresses sorrow. For the disciples to have fasted while Jesus was with them would have been a reflection on the presence of their Bridegroom. That could not be done. They must honor him in spite of Jewish law, for he was above law.

20. But the days will come.—Soon their Bridegroom would be taken from them—Jesus would ascend to his Father. In those days fasting would be proper.

21 and 22. Here we meet the dividing line between old things and new things, between Judaism and Christianity. The two figures used by the Master are apt. A new patch would not do on the old Jewish garment. The new would shrink and tear the old. Old wineskins could not stand the fermentation of new wine—they would burst, and the wine would be lost. The new wine of Christ must be poured into new wineskins; Judaism must give place to Christianity. Again, it will not do to pour the new wine of Christianity into the old wineskins of heathenism. Mrs. Eddy reversed that process. She poured Hindooism into the new wineskin of Christianity; but the old Hindoo wine is no better than it was in the old heathen wineskin of India.

27. The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath.—Verses 23-26 are all simple, needing no comment, but some folk seem unable to comprehend verse 27. The word "sabbath" means simply rest. It has no reference to any special day. Jesus used it with reference to the sabbath day that the Jews had so perverted that its keeping had become a burden. A sacred rest day in the week is necessary to the best interest of all people. It should be a holy, happy day when men abstain from labor, and worship God in the beauty of holiness. Nothing should be done on that day that will not honor our Maker. He is Lord of the sabbath, and should be Lord of our lives. One of America's big sins is sabbath desecration; but there are few signs of repentance, or of reformation. The nation may fall because of this great national sin.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

The Asbury College Foreign Missionary Team held a meeting in the Nazarene Church, Baltimore, Md., on September 25. The pastor says "these four Spirit-filled young men played, sang, and spoke the message of God to our souls. At the close of the meeting a number of our young people dedicated themselves to the service of the Lord, as he shall choose. We bid them Godspeed as they go on to the regions beyond, praying that God may give them many souls for their hire."

Rev. H. L. Golden: "I am in the evangelistic work and preach a full salvation from all sin. I will go anywhere I am needed. Reference if necessary. My address is Kosciusko, Miss., Rt. 4."

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister closed a four-weeks' campaign at Safford, Ariz., with the M. E. Church, South, and Baptist Church co-operating. His next campaign is at Huntington Park Tabernacle, Los Angeles, Cal. He can be reached at 4021 Lennox Ave., Inglewood, Cal. Dr. Hofmeister was in Wilmore at the camp meeting enroute west.

H. H. Corbin: "The meeting sponsored by twelve laymen from five denominations held August 28 to September 15, was conducted by Rev. C. W. Ruth and Carle A. Meeker as evangelists, and Kenneth Wells and wife in charge of the singing. Many were blessed at the altar of prayer and some old fashion conversions took place, while others were sanctified and refreshed in their spiritual lives. Bro Ruth and Sister Meeker did some real preaching, while Brother and Sister Wells gave us some heartfelt singing. It was a good meeting and could be duplicated in any city by laymen planning and doing likewise."

Rev. T. J. Adams writes: "I have closed a very gracious meeting at Poteau, Okla., which was a great church revival and greatly needed. I began at Cameron, Okla., October 6. My slate for 1930 is filling up, with only July, August and September open. I shall endeavor to put The Herald into every home possible. It is God's mouthpiece to this God-forgotten world. I have a very sick boy. Please to pray for his healing."

The National Convention for the Promotion of Holiness will be held in the Y. W. C. A. Auditorium, Van Wert, Ohio, October 22-27. There will be three public services daily, 10 A. M., 2:30 P. M., and 7 P. M. The preaching will be scriptural, evangelistic and dynamic, with Rev. C. W. Butler, D. D., president, Rev. Paul Rees, pastor-evangelist, of Detroit, and Rev. T. M. Anderson, evangelist of Wilmore as the preachers. Special music will be furnished by Rev. James E. Campbell, director, and Miss Delia Haldy, pianist. By special arrangement the first service, Tuesday night,

Borger, Texas, has been much in the news recently. Not all the news appears in the newspapers, however. Borger has a number of churches working efficiently and quietly in an endeavor to change the complexion of the community. The First Presbyterian Church, Rev. David Rees-Jones pastor, has just closed a ten-day enlistment campaign conducted by Guy W. Green, Kansas City layman, which was wonderfully successful. Men, women and children to the number of fifty-six united with the church on Sunday morning, September 29, 1929. Among these are many of the leading business men of the community. On all sides there is nothing but praise for Guy W. Green personally, for his methods, and for his messages. He was welcomed by the civic clubs and appeared before them. The High School appreciated his chapel talk so much that they turned out en masse to hear him one evening at the church. Of a truth Mr. Green is different. Mr. Green is now holding a meeting for the Methodist Church of Lewisburg, Ky. His permanent address is 1322 East 30th Street, Kansas City, Mo.

We expect to be in Florida for revival work during the winter and next spring. If there are those who desire our services along full salvation lines, while in the south or on the way, write us at 815 Allegan St., Lansing, Mich. Margaret K. Crammond, Evangelist. C. C. Crammond, Song Director, Pianist and Trombone.

NOTICE.

I am a reader of The Herald, am married, and have three children, but am unable to work. Wife and I are Christians. My children need clothing, and if anyone who reads this has any cast-off clothing we would be glad to get it. I make flowers and would appreciate orders for same. My address is 233 Lafayette St., New Albany, Ind.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

—Basil Mathews
in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and His saving power in the lives of men." Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

My Sermon Notes

By CHARLES H. SPURGEON

A selection from Outlines of Discourses Delivered by Mr. Spurgeon Covering the Entire Bible.

- Vol. 1. Genesis to Proverbs.
- Vol. 2. Ecclesiastes to Malachi.
- Vol. 3. Matthew to Acts.
- Vol. 4. Romans to Revelation.

These volumes are $1.50 each, or the entire set will be sent postpaid, boxed and labeled at the special price of $4.00.

In this book are 1,500 questions which any one ought to be able to answer if he really knows his Bible.

Through using it, one will gradually familiarize oneself with the splendor of the Bible, its variety, its literary values, its wisdom and summary of all rules for success and happiness. It is simple, practical, entertaining and educational.

Price, $1.00.

SOWING AND REAPING.

Rev. Walter E. Isenhour.

It is a law which God hath made,
Both high and broad and deep,
That whatsoever seed we sow
That shall we also reap.

The man who sows in sinful pride
Will surely be abased;
For he shall never reach the height
Where noble men are placed.

Whoever sows the seed of strife
Shall reap a crop of hate;
And when he sees Almighty God
He'll meet an awful fate.

To sow the seed of greed and lust
The flesh to gratify,
Is but to gather in a crop
Of anguish by and by.

And he who sows in drunkenness
Shall reap a maddened brain;
For what he thinks will give him joy
Shall only give him pain.

To sow the seed of vanity
Is but to live and fail;
No laurels wave above his brow,
No banners o'er him sail.

To sow against the will of God,
Against His righteous cause,
Shall bring to all a penalty
For violated laws.

If to the Spirit we will sow
Instead of flesh and sin,
What joy there'll be at reaping time
When sheaves are gathered in!

To live and do and give our best
To bless the lives of men,
Will make us happy when we reach
Our earthly journey's end.

To brighten up the path of life
By deed and song and prayer
Is to receive the smiles of God
In Heaven sweet and fair.

Then, reader dear, go forth and sow
Seed that are good and clean,
And in the City of our King
A "Crown of Life" you'll glean.

OPENING OF THE TWANTE, BURMA ANGLO-VERNACULAR SCHOOL BY BISHOP F. B. FISHER.

The opening of the new brick building at Twante was a great function. A wee Burmese boy dressed in a bright red silk skirt and dainty white Jacket presented the key to Bishop Fisher hidden in a glorious pink hibiscus that was almost as big as he was and a dainty wee girl presented Mrs. Fisher with a lovely bouquet of flowers. When the key was turned in the lock two boys opened the doors and fastened them back, revealing the walls lined with a living flower garden. The school children held a rope of greenery in which was tied at frequent intervals more of those big pink hibiscus. On the left the children were lined all the way up the stairway to the top step. Two girls dressed in old court costumes led the procession from the door to the seats in the assembly room. Mrs. Fisher was overheard to exclaim, "O, this is too lovely, I can't bear it!" It was suspected that she had tears in her eyes even as others had who had witnessed the struggle to acquire this fine new building after those awful years in the old bamboo cowsheds.

The school children presented an interesting program before Bishop Fisher and others spoke. A message of greeting and congratulation from Rev. J. R. Boyles on furlough in America was read.

shift of a building the new brick structure seems like a palace to the teachers and pupils. The building is at least a reality but more real than the building is the debt of about $8,000 that hangs over the missionaries' heads. Government paid half of the cost and the missionaries borrowed the balance fully expecting that friends in the homeland would stand behind them.

This school has done a fine work in the community. A little church has been organized and a beautiful little chapel of teak wood was built by the teachers and Christians of the community. Some of the pupils have become followers of the Christ and have gone out as teachers to bless other communities. Day by day these fine Burmese boys and girls are taught the Holy Scriptures. Jesus as the only hope of the world and the Saviour from sin is held up to them in classroom and chapel. The teachers are all consecrated Christians and their lives are a mighty influence on the boys and girls who sit under their instruction.

The bricks in the walls of this building cost about one cent each. I wonder if some of the readers of this paper would not like to own a few hundred or thousand bricks in that school, in far-off Burma? $800 will pay for a classroom and it can be made into a memorial to some loved one. $1600 will pay for the fine Assembly Room in this building. Who has some of the Lord's tithe that they would like to invest wisely for him. Address Rev. James R. Boyles, 150 5th Ave., New York, N. Y., care Methodist Board of Missions.

THE ABSALOM REVOLT OF YOUTH.

Rev. Harry S. Allen.

Our high school age, both boys and girls, are driving madly like Jehu, down the broad way to destruction. They emphatically resent any interference, or even a hint or suggestion that would try to arrest their mad career. "Leave us alone," they are saying. We are living in an age of indulgence and do as you please, and any restraint, parental or otherwise, is looked upon as intolerable.

Who is responsible for present day conditions? First and foremost, the blame must be laid at the door of the parents. A mother who had become deeply convicted on the subject of card playing in her home, said to the evangelist who was holding the services she was attending, "I went home the other night from the service and burned every deck of cards in my home, got down on my knees and promised God I would never play again." The conversation took place in a parlor where fifteen or more people were gathered. This mother had her fourteen-year-old boy and girl of sixteen present with her. She made the startling announcement, "I taught my own children how to play cards. I have been spending the evenings playing cards with my boy and girl and instructing them as to the game. I have seen the evil and what it may lead to and I have repented and promised God never to play again."

Her fourteen-year-old boy straightened up and replied openly to this statement of his mother, "Well, mother, you may have seen the evil of card playing and you have quit playing, but I want to tell you, I am not going to stop playing; you taught me how and I like the game and I am going to keep it up."

The preacher astonished and alarmed at so frank a statement from the youth said, "Sister, you see what sowing the seed of habit has done for your child. You realize the harm and what it may lead to, but you have taught that child a habit that may make of him a professional gambler and send him to a prison cell or the hangman's noose, and he will point his finger in your face and say, 'I am here because of the influences of my home life and the lessons my own mother taught me because in her unregenerated condition she could see no harm in card playing.'"

Much of the wild spirit of dissipation among the youth of the present time may be laid at this door, the lack of discipline and proper example in the home.

In another place where evangelistic services were being held the pastor and evangelist met a high school girl as they visited from home to home doing personal work. The evangelist said, "Young lady, I have not seen you at the church during the revival; come and get a blessing out of the meeting."

The sixteen-year-old girl laughed in the face of the preacher as she replied, "No, I have not been to your revival and I am not coming. Your revival is too tame for me. It has no kick in it. I am looking for a kick. I want something with a thrill in it. I rather go to the dance, and automobile riding with the boys at night; those things have a kick in them and that's what I am looking for. There's no kick in your revival services."

Going over to warn her mother of the danger her daughter was in after hearing this brazen declaration, the preacher found that the mother was encouraging her daughter in her spirit of adventure.

How are we to reach the young people when the home influences are directly in accord with the spirit of dissipation and wild abandonment that characterizes the youth of this generation?

A boy of about the same age as the girl referred to above was similarly approached and urged to attend the revival services. "Tomorrow is Sunday and you have a good opportunity to come to the services young man; we hope to see you there." "I'm going fishing tomorrow," he replied. "What! going fishing on God's holy Sabbath Day?" "Yes, that is the best time to fish," he unblushingly answered.

"The devil will get you certain if you desecrate the Sabbath like that." "I am not afraid of the devil; we are good friends," he said.

A young man just getting through one of the preparatory schools and ready for the freshman class in college, a boy whose mother is just as anxious to keep him from destructive influences as any girl's mother could be as to her daughter; this young man was told by his pastor as to dancing and worldly amusements in general that it was all right as long as they were indulged in with moderation.

It is all right, in other words, to take poison as long as one takes it in moderation. It is all right to steal as long as it is done moderately. All right to be impure as long as one is careful and not overly indulgent. That is the curse of the world today. We have forgotten that God said, "Avoid the very appearance of evil."

This boy called on a girl of one of the best families in the city, and smelled whiskey on her breath. In the parlor where a dozen young people gathered he was the only one among both boys and girls who refused to indulge in cigarette smoking. It is impossible that the parents of the girl at whose home these conditions existed were ignorant of what was taking place. By thus permitting their daughter and the others to sit up and indulge in cigarette smoking and drinking home brew in their parlor, they were oiling the toboggan slide for a quick exit to deeper depths of infamy and disgrace, and the parents more than the young people will be held accountable by God.

Not only is the laxness of parental control responsible for the evil days upon which we have fallen as to the conduct of the high school age, but the influences in the schoolroom itself are not conducive to deep spirituality. A board of trustees in a certain school, after finding out the qualifications of those who were applying for positions as teachers as to their educational advantages, then they wanted to know, "Are you a Christian? Do you play cards? Do you dance? Do you attend the theater?"

One might say what presumption! "We do as we please outside of our school hours." "Then you can seek employment in some other school," this board of trustees replied.

Thank God for such a board. It would vastly change the complexion of things if every board of trustees took the same stand in the selection of the men and women who were to stand before the impressionable youth of the land.

Then the pulpit has a tremendous bearing on the situation. Whenever an uncertain sound is given in the way of condemnation from the sacred desk, then wildness and revolt will reach its extreme limit in young and old. If the church and pulpit do not cry out against such worldliness and looseness, who will? A fearless, fire-baptized ministry fresh from the upper room with all the boldness and love of Pentecost will do more to check the wild revolt of youth than any and every other agency combined.

Whether it is popular or not, may the church take a decided stand against this alarming encroachment of evil and sin and hold up a standard of holiness unto the Lord and declare unrelenting warfare upon the tide of worldliness that threatens the very power of vital godliness in our worship.

Your young friend that is inclined to be skeptical will read, enjoy and get help from our book, "The First Soprano." Price, $1.00.

WHAT IF IT WERE TRUE!

By The Editor.

WHAT if it should finally turn out that the Bible is all it claims to be—a divinely-inspired Book—revealing the way, and the only way, of salvation; and that there is to be a coming of the Lord; that he is to appear with great glory in the clouds, with angels and saints. It would certainly be a very embarrassing situation to quite a number of would-be religious teachers who make it their business to ridicule much in the sacred volume, and to cast more or less of doubt with reference to divine authority on practically all of the Bible.

What if there is to be a final judgment, and the Christ who was nailed upon the cross is to sit upon a throne, judging all nations and all men. And what if it turns out that he is exactly who and what he is represented to be in the writings of the apostles. Would it not be embarrassing to these high-salaried preachers and professors who are insisting that he was not of virgin birth, that he performed no miracles, that he was an ignorant man, partaking of the superstitions of his time, and that he made no blood atonement for sins upon the cross. How would these false teachers be able to face him at a time like that, after having, not only, had no faith in him for the atonement for their own sins, but having devoted themselves to the destroying of the faith of those who had trusted in him and that, too, in spite of the fact that Jesus himself has said, it were better to have a millstone fastened about one's neck, and be cast into the depth of the sea, than to offend, that is, to destroy the faith and devotion of one of these little ones.

What if it should turn out that there is a hell, a real prison house for rebellious, unbelieving and impenitent souls. What if it should be found after all, that the description of hell given by our Lord Jesus is correct, and its punishment and horror should be equal to a lake burning with fire and brimstone. This would be a fearful fate for those would-be religious teachers who have mocked and ridiculed the teachings of the Bible on this subject, the teachings of our Lord himself, with reference to this future state of the impenitent. Reflection on this subject is interesting and might prove profitable. It is a dangerous thing to tamper with the Bible. It is reasonable in all of its teachings and requirements. It claims to be divine authority. It insists that godliness is profitable for the life that now is, and that which is to come. It constantly points to a fearful judgment awaiting those who die in their sins and is constantly offering a gracious pardon to those who will repent and turn to Christ for salvation.

There is one thing absolutely certain: If it turns out that the Bible is true, that it is divinely-inspired, the word of God, of absolute authority, there is coming a time of great embarrassment and fearful calamity and retribution to many of the would-be religious

THE FALLOW FIELD.

By Rev. Henry Burton, M.A.

The days were bright, and the year was young,
As the warm sun climbed the sky;
And a thousand flowers their censers swung,
And the larks were singing high;

For an angel swept on silent wing
To the grave where the dead earth lay;
And the Easter dawned as the angel Spring
Rolled the rugged stone away.

Then the fields grew green with springing corn,
And some with flowers were bright;
And each day came with an earlier dawn,
And a fuller, sweeter light.

So the year grew older noon by noon,
Till the reapers came one day,
And in the light of the harvest moon
They bore the sheaves away.

But one field lay from the rest apart,
All silent, lone, and dead;
And the rude share ribbed its quivering heart
Till all its life had fled.

And never a blade, and never a flower
On its silent ridges stirred;
The sunshine called, and the passing shower—
It answered never a word.

It seemed as if some curse of ill
Were brooding in the air;
Yet the fallow field did Master's will,
Though never a blade it bare:

For it turned its furrowed face to heaven,
Catching the light and rain;
It was keeping its Sabbath—one in seven—
That it might grow rich again.

And the fallow field had its harvest moon,
Reaping a golden spoil;
And it learned in its ever-brightening noon
That rest for God was toil.

teachers of our times. They are found in schools and, sad to say, many of them in pulpits, whose teachings place question marks on practically everything taught in the Holy Scriptures. They are gradually undermining the faith of the people in the word of God. When you destroy the faith of the people in the Bible, in the necessity of obedience to its commandments, and faith in its promises, you have not only ruined their hopes for the future world, but you have also made them dangerous citizens for this world. Well, the day of reckoning is coming. By and by, we shall know the facts. We believe the Bible. We believe in its authority, in its inspiration, in the salvation it offers, in the promises it makes, in the future to which it points. We believe there is absolute safety in keeping its commandments, and faith in the provision it offers for our salvation here and hereafter. Whatever comes, we do not believe that the future holds a time of embarrassment and confusion for those who believe and obey the teachings of the Bible and put their trust for salvation in the Christ of the Bible.

O sinner! when the Spirit comes with entreaties or warnings and offers salvation and eternal life to your soul, you may think it a trivial matter for you to resist; but you hold your eternal destiny in your choice at that critical moment; for God says: My Spirit shall not always strive with man. Gen. 6:3.

Peter's Twentieth Century Message

THE FULFILLMENT OF PROPHECY.

IN the closing verses of the first chapter of Peter's second epistle and the opening verses of the second chapter of this same epistle we find a startling description of conditions existing today. It would seem that Peter might have written these words only last week.

First, he tells us that no prophecy is of private interpretation; that prophecy is not man's invention, "but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." He then goes on to tell us that there were false prophets in the past "as there shall be false teachers among you who privily shall bring in damnable heresies."

I want the reader to observe this word, 'privily.' It describes the processes of the destructive critics perfectly. They use great skill and cunning in the introduction of their false teaching. They do not call together conferences, conventions, synods or associations and declare that the Bible is untrue; that the creeds of the churches are false; that Jesus was either mistaken or willfully deceiving the people when he claimed to perform miracles; when he claimed to have pre-existence; "before Abraham was I am"; when he spoke of the glory he had with the Father before the world was. They do not in a public and outspoken way make a frontal attack upon the Word of God, his Son and the church he founded. They get in their destructive work "privily." They assume great scholarship; they claim to be devoutly pious; they would be grieved perhaps over the ignorance of their fellowbeings who cling to the old faith were they not so amused and so given to ridicule of their ignorance. Generally when these apostles of the new theology are exposed, and their false teachings uncovered, they will declare that they have been misunderstood, that they are loyal, evangelical Christians; or they cry out that they are being persecuted. Meanwhile they do not hesitate to assail practically every fundamental truth of our holy Christianity. At the same time in classroom and pulpit they are constantly criticizing, finding fault with and denying the inspiration of the prophetic and apostolic writings.

Let Peter further describe the position of the modern destructive critic; "Even denying the Lord that bought them, and bringing upon themselves swift destruction." How accurately Peter describes a bold and boastful class of men who are among us today. They deny that our Lord Jesus was begotten of the Holy Ghost; they deny that he was of Virgin Birth; they deny his supernatural wisdom; they insist that he thought in harmony with the superstitious and ignorant people with whom he was surrounded. They deny that he performed miracles; they deny Evangelistic Travels In The Land of The Rising Sun.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

As I write this article our ship is moving toward the China Sea on her course towards Hong Kong and Singapore. Tuesday found us at Yokohama, Japan, where we took our steamer of the P. and O. Line, the S.S. Kashiner, bound for India and England. (We leave the ship at Singapore).

At Yokohama we had the rare pleasure of seeing the great German Zeppelin as she came toward Tokyo on her voyage around the world. It was announced that she would fly over Yokohama about 4 P. M. There was great excitement and all the roofs and high buildings were crowded with Japanese awaiting the great ship. Wife and I were on one of the business streets and had no need of seeking a higher place because the great ship was visible to all. Soon she appeared in sight, then encircled the city and made way for Tokyo where she was to stay two days. All we could say was wonderful! Wonderful man's ingenuity! Wonderful the age in which we live! Wonderful that we should be in Japan and see our first Zeppelin there. The world is very small when we think of it, and now in this Twentieth Century the findings of Science are reducing time and space so that the nations are living next door to each other. Rudyard Kipling said:

"Lo, all the pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!"

This undoubtedly is true but the present age is developing wonders which the past never dreamt of. What the end will be we cannot tell, but if wars keep on and man keeps on blundering as in the past and keeps on forgetting God and ignoring Christ and shutting up and shutting out the Bible, modern civilization will go on the dump-heap like that of Nineveh and Tyre!

We were called to Japan to preach at the "Convention for the Deepening of the Spiritual Life" at Karuizawa. This is a summer resort for the missionaries up in the mountains about four hours ride by train from Tokyo. About 500 missionaries come here in the summer time away from the heat of the cities and towns. They have a good-sized auditorium there with regular Sunday services and conventions of various kinds including this one in August along holiness lines. It was a great privilege to meet so many missionaries from all parts of Japan and of many denominations. We preached two Sundays at Karuizawa as well as at the regular Convention services. These meetings reminded me so much of the camp meeting days of U. S. A. The Lord gave us unusual liberty from the beginning to the close, and it was both a privilege and a blessing to pour out the truths of sanctification, holiness, the Spirit's baptism, etc., day by day to hungry, praying souls. When one remembers that many of those missionaries have been for months, perhaps a year, hidden in some interior part of Japan where they have not heard a sermon in English all that time, one can appreciate how much joy it was to them to attend a spiritual convention and enjoy fellowship with those who experience and enjoy full salvation and a full gospel. At the outset of the Convention a good Presbyterian missionary—a Princeton man, who has been missionary in the same place for twenty-seven years, said to me in a conversation relative to the meetings something like the following: "Now we want you to give us the doctrine of holiness clear and definite. Our people will be here waiting to hear it; do not hesitate to preach it and preach the biggest Saviour to us that you know of." Now that message heartened us and as the Lord helped us we tried to preach definitely the doctrine, experience and blessing of holiness of heart and life. We felt the presence of the Spirit from the beginning, souls were convicted of their need and sought diligently the blessing.

If any one desires to know what my texts and themes were during the Convention I will set some of them down as follows:

1. Ezekiel 37:9.
2. Jeremiah 49:8 and 30, Luke 5:4.
3. 1 Thess. 4:3 and 5:23.
4. Matthew 3:11.
5. Exodus 3:1-6.
6. Hebrews 12:1, also verse 14.
1. Joshua 3:5.
8. Exodus 34:29 and Judges 16:20.
9. Matthew 11:12 (closing message).

Preaching to missionaries from many lands and many denominations is quite different from ordinary work. In our first service was a Bishop, in another an English Rector. Some German missionaries were present at all the services. The English predominated in numbers. Some Keswick friends aided greatly in the prayer spirit. A Kansas woman highly educated, who studied in Boston, was among the first seekers. An Irish lady "broke" into the close of one of the meetings with a ringing testimony of victory and I feel sure Karuizawa became to many the Mount of Vision and blessing and power. My experience here, as in China, is that definite preaching is what meets the need. There is a tremendous amount of talking on general themes relative to the godly life and walk, but needy souls require more than that; they need to be shown how to obtain the blessing. Thank God for the old-fashioned Methodist doctrine of entire sanctification. There is nothing like it to lead souls into definite blessing and it works in the foreign field as well as in the homeland.

While we were at Karuizawa we were entertained at the Japan Evangelistic Band Home (British). A number of their missionaries stopped there and we had a wonderful fellowship in prayer. Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson had charge of the home this summer and we shall never forget their kindness. Mr. Cuthbertson is the Director of the Band in Japan. He is a man richly endowed of God by grace and gift as preacher, singer, leader, and a man of prayer. Mr. and Mrs. George Breathwaite are old-time Quaker missionaries and we shall never forget their kindness to us during these days. Of this Mountain Convention and fellowship we have to say like Peter: "It was good to be there."

Let me add a word here about missionaries and their vacations. The Orient is very trying on the Westerner. In China your life is never safe. In Japan your health is always in jeopardy. They say that Japan has 58 active volcanoes in it. Earthquakes are common. The atmosphere of Japan is very electric and people suffer greatly in their heads. It is said that the average life of the missionary in Japan is only five years. The strain is very great hence the need of letting up in the heated season. Many missionaries take from a month to six weeks' vacation and they go to the mountains greatly. Even there the atmosphere is trying as there is likely to be a great deal of rain. Some seasons have an unusual amount of rain and bad weather. I met Dr. Draper, a Methodist missionary who has spent over forty years in Japan; he looks hale and hearty; he expects to end his days in Japan his adopted country. I have no doubt in his early days he had his trials with the climate but finally became acclimated.

Dealing with souls is impressive work, and to aid others in their struggle for holiness and the deeper things of God is a work which angels may covet. One is overwhelmed at times with a sense of unworthiness that God should use mortals and not angels in making known the great Redemption. Amiel has well said, "Every soul is an abyss, a mystery of love and pity. A sort of sacred emotion descends upon me, whenever I penetrate the recesses of this sanctuary of man, and hear the gentle murmur of the prayers, hymns and supplications which arise from the hidden depths of the heart. These involuntary confidences fill me with a tender pity and a religious awe and shyness. The whole experience seems to me as wonderful as poetry and divine with the divineness of birth and dawn. Speech fails me, I bow myself and adore."

There is a tremendous difference between Japan and China. The latter is immense, clumsy, careless and at present extremely lawless. Japan is a small country but beautiful, artistic, neat and cleanly and law abiding. Soon as you strike Japan you feel under law. The Japanese are notoriously courteous. A certain writer says: "I like these Japanese country people. The scrupulously neat peasant women, with their hair combed carefully back and their rosy faces were quite attractive. Their intense ceremonious politeness to each other always amused me. Whole family parties would continue bowing to each other for ten minutes on end at railway stations, sucking their breath and rubbing their knees. When they had finished, someone would re-commence and the whole process would have to be gone over again." The Japanese wooden clogs worn by the majority of people make a clatter on the streets corresponding in sound not unlike one hitting a cement walk with his walking stick. In the cities the men dress in foreign clothes to a great extent, but one is constantly met with men dressed in kimonos and skirts. The West and East are constantly knocking together out here.

Religiously and morally, Japan is in a bad condition. One of the Salvation Army chiefs recently published in a Tokyo paper a telling article on immorality in Japan. He showed that there were 11,690 owners of licensed prostitute houses, that there were perhaps 58,000 women in them, and servants and others thus employed would reach probably 87,000. Japan has a licensing prostitution system which is the most wicked of all the nations. There is much agitation against the system among religious workers, also in parliament and probably things will be bettered in the near future.

Japan is now heading up a Million Souls Campaign. Of course there are many "pros" and "cons" respecting it. Some believe these slogans and movements never achieve much. Some suggest that the Church of Japan is in no spiritual condition to care for such a number of souls if they should be brought into it; others believe the movement is a good thing. The head of it is Toyohiko Kagawa, a very godly, self-sacrificing man who has been called the Wesley of Japan. I have not met Mr. Kagawa but I understand he has done an immense amount of religiously social work; he has been put in prison several times for his preaching and gives himself, his time and all that he has for his people and gospel and cause. The government of Japan respects him highly now, though they once imprisoned him, he holds an office in the Social Department of the Government, but refuses to take any salary. He is a great writer as well as preacher and gives away nearly all his income to the poor and needy and the church. His books would yield him a good living, but he gives away his earnings in that line. In these matters he greatly resembles John Wesley, who lived on a little over one hundred dollars a year and gave away all the rest.

A Trip to New York--Some Observations

Rev. W. G. Bennett.

WE left Nashville, Tenn., about June 1st. We had a wonderful trip through the mountains of Tennessee, the Carolinas, Virginia, etc. We viewed the Natural Bridge in Virginia, were at Jamestown, the sight of the first colonial settlement, Washington's birthplace at Mount Vernon, the Capitol, the White House, and many other places of interest. Virginia is literally soaked in blood. Everywhere along the highway we saw tablets marking the different fields of battle. What a fearful price the fathers paid for our national life, and how cheap the modernists are selling it!

From Washington we drove on to Baltimore and Philadelphia, and from there on to Ocean Grove, N. J., where Mrs. Bennett had sung for a number of years and has a host of friends. This is a great Methodist center, and summer resort. They have a daily religious program, where they have the best speakers and singers that can be secured. We had the privilege of hearing Dr. Tindly, said to be the greatest colored preacher in the world, Harold Paul Sloan, and other defenders of the faith.

Extending some fifteen miles each way from Ocean Grove along the beach is Asbury Park, Bradley Beach, Allenhurst, and other noted resorts. Here you see literally hundreds of thousands of pleasure seekers wearing less clothing than savages wear, bathing in the Ocean, promenading the walks, lying in the sand, basking in the sunshine until they are almost as copper colored as American Indians. When the modernists have broken down all respect for law, and the anarchists have piled our beautiful Attics in heaps of debris, these pleasure seekers will have accustomed themselves to go without clothing until living like the aborigines will not be so difficult for them.

From Ocean Grove we went on to New York, where we spent several days viewing the only really great city we have ever seen. We had seen suburban towns like Chicago and Detroit, but New York is a great city. The skyscrapers, the extensive apartment houses extending along the different drives, the parks, drives, museums all impressed us deeply. If New York's religious movements were as substantial as her commercial and social life, she would wield a mighty influence in the world.

I was walking home with George Peguron, who for years has been superintendent of Old Faith Mission. I turned and said to him, "Aside from your mission and a few others like it, where in this great city is any one getting saved tonight?" He looked thoughtful and said, "I don't know."

There is an elderly Episcopalian minister who does considerable personal work and street preaching that is very effective. There is a city evangelistic association that assists in tent meetings and holds street meetings. They came out on Broadway one day at the noon hour. A lone woman blew a wind instrument, a young man in clerical robes led in prayer and introduced an actor who told something of the story of his life. This is a fair sample of our methods for city evangelization at the present time. We have nothing but commendation for any such movement, but it is entirely inadequate to meet the demands, or to demand the respect of a swiftly moving age such as ours is. There are quite a number of holiness churches of different names scattered throughout New York, but I am told they are hampered financially, and the attendance is not large. There are several fundamentalist preachers, Baptists, Episcopalians, and others that are exerting considerable influence, but what of the modernists? Speaking in general terms, they are having their own way. A beautiful cathedral, costing millions is being built for

Harry Emerson Fosdick on Riverside Drive along the beautiful Hudson. They tell me that multitudes are being attracted to his ministry, where they are aesthetically entertained and soothed, while he quietly injects into the veins of their moral nature the poison virus of destructive higher criticism.

Here that most eloquent man, who exerts such a wide influence through his questionnaires in the daily papers of our nation, S. Parkes Cadman, charms his great audiences over the radio and otherwise, and tells the intent listeners part of the Bible is fish and part bones. They are advised to eat the fish and put the bones aside. He leaves them to judge for themselves which is fish and which bones. I suppose anything in the Bible one did not like to swallow could be cast aside as bones. There would not be much fish, I judge, for this pleasure-loving, godless generation.

New York is headquarters for the Federal Council of Churches, an organization so thoroughly committed to the propagation of modernism throughout the church and the world that no well informed person could question their standing on these lines, an organization so thoroughly political in its movements, and so thoroughly in harmony with communism, both in our own country, Europe, and the East, that Representative Arthur M. Free, of California, has demanded an investigation of their political standing. For a long while we have seen that if the philosophy of evolution became general, our civilization must give way to a civilization based upon state rights rather than upon individual rights and personal liberty, but we did not know until recently that in The Federal Council of Churches we have an organization so gigantic that S. Parkes Cadman claims that it can control twenty-two million votes; whose covert purpose it is to bring in what they regard as an up-to-date condition of civilization where the human race can be developed by the survival of the fittest, as they were in ages of barbarism. This means in plain language that sacred marriage rights can be discarded and that only the best specimens of the race shall be allowed to reproduce their kind. In past ages the gathering of the inhabitants from rural districts into the great centers of population has been a precursor of revolution in society. With forty, and in some states, fifty percent of our population gathered into our great cities, the future is certainly ominous. What the outcome will be remains to be seen. If in our great cities there shall come a great revival of Bible preaching, then there might be hope for our civilization, but without this the future looks very dark. The moral breakdown of our women, the widespread disregard for law, the determination of the clergy and educational leaders to force upon unsuspecting multitudes untried philosophies and theories of religion, are all precursors of a coming revolution.

Mr. Rockefeller is giving millions to preserve ancient landmarks of our early national settlements. Mr. Ford is also, we understand, building a museum to preserve antiques of our forefathers. If Henry Ford or John D. Rockefeller would appropriate a million dollars to finance a great campaign of Bible preaching in our great cities, he would be the greatest benefactor of our national life, the most unique philanthropist of all history, and an untold blessing to lost souls.

This scribe writes somewhat in the refutation of modernism, but really the best possible refutation of modernism, and the best defense of the Bible would be a great revival of Bible preaching by Spirit-filled men. I walk the streets of our great cities and seem to hear the roar of bombs, and the crumbling of the walls of skyscrapers; but what of all this when compared to the tramp, tramp of the multitudes toward the regions of endless night! A child born in New York City would stand little better show of reaching heaven than a child born in heathenism. True the child in New York would have greater light, but also a far greater chance of being poisoned with false doctrine. You cannot make me believe a great and gracious God is indifferent to all this, or that present conditions are a part of his plan for the human race. New York ought to have a revival with twenty-five of the best Spirit-filled preachers in the land, an equal number of chorus leaders the very best, a hundred other Christian workers and musicians all going at the same time and keeping on for a campaign lasting at least a year; and then a campaign in every great American city of like proportions.

Perhaps you have already said this is all a wild, frantic dream, and you are right, if you leave Almighty God out of the equation. You perhaps have thought of the cost and said the great need is the money. No, no, a thousand times no! A vast sum of money without a great spiritual awakening would be only a curse. Our great need is for humble men and women of prayer, who shall cry day and night unto the Lord of harvest, that he will send forth laborers into the harvest.

Prohibition Anvil

Wrecks Hammers.

ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON, LL.D., LITT.D.
General Secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism.

THE prohibition anvil has wrecked many hammers. No other governmental policy ever tried in this country has been so bitterly or so continuously assailed with so little results attained by its assailants. Every weak point in the underlying philosophy of this movement, in the laws expressing it or in the enforcement of those laws has been found, attacked, emphasized by a keenly alert group who are not unaware of the potential prize of billions of dollars which will be made available to the liquor trades if they may once more regain legality.

Every technicality upon which even the flimsiest arguments might be based has formed the basis of suits brought before the courts to test the constitutionality of the Eighteenth Amendment itself and of laws for its enforcement. It would be difficult to find any parallel to the experience which the prohibition laws have thus undergone. The sole result of these repeated legal assaults has been a clearer definition of a national policy now more deeply entrenched in the body of law than before.

The personnel of prohibition has been made the target for unending attacks. When the friends of this cause insisted that men hostile to the principle of prohibition could not with propriety be entrusted with the highly difficult task of its enforcement, they were immediately criticized by the foes of prohibition and sometimes by uninformed friends of the cause. Many men whose whole past records seemed prima facie evidence of their hostility to prohibition were placed in positions of responsibility for its enforcement. When the natural and inevitable thing occurred, then the public spokesmen of the liquor group pointed to the conduct of these enemies of prohibition who were in an official position as though their failure to enforce a law which they disliked

THE INCREASE OF KNOWLEDGE.

Rev. Wm. S. Bowden.

"Knowledge shall be increased." Dan. 12:4.

THE past century has witnessed an increase of knowledge entirely unparalleled in our world's history. Previously knowledge was confined to the few; now the masses possess knowledge. There is still ignorance enough, but comparing this age with previous ages we are justified in calling this the age of knowledge. After due credit has been given to the past, it remains to be said: "In the last one hundred years there has been more progress in all that tends to domestic comfort, more advancement in science, art, education, and business generally, by means of communication and transit from place to place, than in the three thousand years previous." Neither is this increase of knowledge an accident. It is not only the natural result of previously acquired knowledge put to practical use; it is the fulfilment of the Scripture prophecy—"Knowledge shall be increased."

This language refers wholly to the last days of time. At the time the prophet uttered these words the intercourse between men and nations was greatly circumscribed. But as men are migratory, and a moving, roving, restless spirit has seized the world, men have improved upon the primitive methods of travel. So along with the rapid transit of these last days there has come a great increase of knowledge. It is our contention that this increase of knowledge has come about largely within the last one hundred years. In the next paragraph are some words written by Dr. John Cumming, prophetic student, which bear out the thought in our mind.

"So far these words have been illustrated and fulfilled in every age of the world, and on every acre of the earth. There has always been locomotion in the world; there has always been increase of the great capital of sacred and of secular knowledge. But the words of the prophecy seem to imply that this shall be intensely, singularly, and unprecedentedly the characteristic fact; and that as the world grows older, and the twilight of its setting sun grows dimmer, its progress over the world's area, and its increase in knowledge of all kinds, shall be greater and richer, and more ample than it ever was before."

In other words: The prophecy indicates that there is to be a special age of progress and increase of knowledge, and that the coming of such a period of time is to be an indication that we are in the "time of the end." It is our purpose to mention three fields in which this increase of knowledge is to be especially noted. Other events which mark the "time of the end" fall within this same period of time.

1. Mechanics.

During the past one hundred years there have been more mechanical inventions than during all previous time. What did our forefathers know of the combination reaper and threshing machine? Contrast the hand printing press of Benjamin Franklin with the modern printing press, turning out hourly over one hundred thousand papers of 16 pages, folded and counted. And then the modern typesetting machine! Sixty years ago the modern typewriter was unknown, and the power spinning-machine a novelty. Consider our modern means of navigation, the steamship, the air-ship, the steam railway, the automobile.

How electricity as well as steam has been harnessed as the servant of man. Interurban travel by trolley car belongs to this period. The first practicable electric railway line was constructed and operated at the Berlin International Exposition in 1870. Behold the world today ablaze with electric lighting! In 1876 at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia there were just two primitive electric lighting exhibits. The telegraph dates back to 1844. Now the "mysterious whispering wire" covers the bottom of the sea. If one had ventured the suggestion one hundred years ago that the time was near when New York or Boston could carry on a "fireside conversation" with Paris or London, he would have been deemed a fit candidate for the insane asylum. Samuel Morse endured twelve years of poverty before there was much interest aroused in his telegraphic instruments. Alexander Graham Bell in 1876, at the age of twenty-nine years, received the first patent on the telephone. A year later Thomas Edison brought out the first phonograph; and his patents now run up into the hundreds. The photographic camera dates back to 1840. This increase of knowledge is seen in modern implements of warfare, in modern artillery, in modern battleships, and submarines. Consider that practically all the inventions of the mechanical world which we highly prize today have come within the past one hundred years. Here are a few in addition to those already mentioned: Wireless telegraphy, roentgen, motion picture, radium, chronometer, safety lamp, stereoscope.

2. General Education.

This is a scientific age. Sometimes science is defined as classified knowledge. It is the knowledge of nature reduced to a system. While there is some nonsense which goes under the name of science, there is far more applied science in the world today than ever before. Science has been revealing to man the wonders, the forces, and the wealth of earth, sea and air. Geology has shown the footprints of God in creation. Astronomy shows us the stars.

"Forever singing as they shine,
The hand that made us is divine."

The two inventions, the telescope and the microscope, have made possible great increase in astronomical, biological, and geological knowledge. Archeology speaks loudly: "Thy word, O God, is truth." This period known as the Time of the End has witnessed the introduction and development of popular education. We have the spectacle of a "Nation at School" in the case of Japan, with China and Korea sending students to all parts of the earth to finish their education.

Learning is no longer kept in the hands of the favored few.

Mechanical and scientific discoveries and achievements have brought about a more advanced system of education. The thirst for knowledge is abroad in the world. The youth of fifteen years today has a broader education than his grandfather had at fifty. The fact that he does not always use his education to the best advantage does not do away with the fact that it is an educational age. The mental activities of the age are great. Consider the word "education" in the large sense of including art, culture, ethics, philosophy and literature. Newspapers, periodicals and magazines are multiplied on every hand. The tremendous printing presses of our day are kept busy twenty-four hours in the day, telling us what is going on in the world. "Knowledge shall be increased."

3. Scripture Knowledge.

The Bible has been unchained from the pulpit and given to the common people. No other book has been run through so many editions, and been so widely circulated. As the industrial and business world has been benefited by the mechanical and scientific inventions of the last century so has the church. It has been an age of missionary activity. At the beginning of the past century the Bible was printed in comparatively few languages. There were but few missionaries. There was but little money put into missionary work. Behold today the Bible translated into practically all languages and dialects, missionaries scattered throughout all lands, several hundred mission societies earnestly at work, and money being given with great liberality to the mission fields.

In 1799 the London Religious Tract Society was organized. In 1904 the British and Foreign Bible Society was organized. In 1816 came the American Bible Society. In 1825 the American Tract Society was organized. From that time on the knowledge of God's Word has been spread abroad in an intensified way. When "this gospel of the kingdom" shall have been "preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, then shall the end come" (Matt. 24:14). The end of the age is surely near at hand. Let the missionary work go on. Let us consecrate to our blessed Lord, for use in his service, our lives, our money, our every talent, and joyfully labor on,

"Till o'er our ransomed nature,
The Lamb for sinners slain
Redeemer, King, Creator,
In bliss returns to reign."

PROPHETIC KNOWLEDGE.

This is the special phase of Scripture knowledge which claims attention. This is not only an age of prophetic fulfillment but also an age of the unfolding of the prophetic Word to the understanding of the people of God. Especially has an understanding of the prophecies of the book of Daniel been increased. The sealed book has been unsealed, and the "wise" (Dan. 12:10) "understand" the import of the words. Speaking of this passage one commentator says: "Many shall give their sedulous attention to the understanding of these things." Dr. Gill gives this comment: "Many shall be stirred up to inquire into these things. The knowledge of this book of prophecy (Daniel) shall be increased, things will appear plainer, the nearer the accomplishment of them."

Sir Isaac Newton, writing two centuries ago, in his "Observations on the Prophecies," says: "It is a part of the prophecy that it should not be understood before the last age of the world; and therefore it makes for the credit of the prophecy that it is not understood; but if the last age, the age of opening these things, be now approaching (as by the great success of late interpreters it seems to be), we have more encouragement than ever to look into these things. But in the very end the prophecy shall be so far interpreted as to convince many, for then, says Daniel, 'many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.'—Among the interpreters of the last age, there is scarcely one of note who hath not made some discovery worth knowing; whence I seem to gather that God is about opening these mysteries."

God is indeed opening up his prophetic word. While it is one of the signs of the times that ignorance and indifference on the part of the masses of the people toward the prophetic scriptures exists, it is true on the other hand that there is a godly class of Bible students in all evangelical denominations giving their attention with joy to the understanding and unfolding of the prophetic word. While there are those who, in fulfillment of prophecy, are saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming," and, blind to the significance of present events, say, "All things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation," yet there has sprung up from the press in the last few decades a multitude of books which throw light upon the prophetic word. Surely, knowledge has been increased. Prophetic knowledge has been increased.

In one of the last sermons preached by Rev. A. B. Simpson he made reference to the book of Daniel. He took the position that the predicted increase in knowledge was to be seen especially in the awakened interest and better understanding of the prophecies, and especially the prophecies of the book of Daniel. I close the article by quoting one paragraph from this sermon.

"One sign of the impending crisis is the extraordinary interest in prophetic study which marks our time. I remember the time in my own life when we had to go back to Sir Isaac Newton and half a dozen writers for all our authorities on the subject of prophetic truth. The literature was extremely meager and the subject little discussed. I was brought up myself on the old lines of post-millennial doctrine and looked with contempt on the fads and fanaticisms of the Millerites and the people that were looking for a literal return of the Lord. Since the day when God brought it to my attention after he had baptized me with the Holy Spirit, some thirty-five years ago, I have noticed how this subject has absorbed the attention of the spiritually minded men and women, how on every side the seals are being taken from the prophetic scroll, and the light of heaven is falling on the blessed hope. God said to Daniel: 'Seal up the book until the time of the end.' It was to be sealed till the time of the end, and the fact that the seals are being broken and the truth is being made plain and clear is a very solemn sign that the fulfillment must be near."

Good News About the Florida Holiness Camp Meeting.

Since the sending of the item printed in THE HERALD under date of Sept. 25, the Executive Committee held a special season of fasting and prayer that God might not only give us the plans for raising the funds to purchase the Camp Site but also make known his will as to the location and in answer he gave us the plan of The King's Royal Hundred for the securing of funds and led us to an eleven acre tract one mile south of the corporate limits of DeLand, Fla., on the Florida Main Highway number three direct from Jacksonville to Tampa, at a most reasonable price, and on Thursday, Sept. 26, the Board and friends met and went over it carefully, weighing the property both from a financial standpoint, accessibility and adaptability of the grounds and after a most gracious season of prayer, in which the Spirit came and blessed our hearts, the Board unanimously voted to purchase for cash this site which has 38 good buildings already on it, laid off in streets, and water in every cottage, furniture, electric lights and sanitary provisions on the grounds to take care of all refuse and waste.

The cash is to be paid at the earliest possible moment, but not later than December 15, 1929. The Board with faith in God and the lovers of the blessed old truths of the most wonderful Book, contracted for the grounds and authorized the writer to proceed to raise the money through the plan of The King's Royal Hundred, or otherwise, if some did not want to adopt the Royal Hundred Plan. Anyone reading this who may be interested in The Plan may have full particulars by addressing the Secretary.

The Board proposes to have a good closed-in Tabernacle on these grounds by next camp meeting with dining room and ample facilities for taking care of those who come to spend these ten days with us. The Board also voted to move the date up from February 27 to March 8, to March 6 to 16, so please make note. Anyone desiring a cut of the front of the Camp Grounds may have same by writing the Secretary. Also with same will go details of the grounds and buildings and a list of our workers and dates for next camp meeting. Praise the Lord! Folks from many states come to Florida and we want to make this next camp meeting the greatest in salvation and entire sanctification ever held in these parts. Pray, really pray, please, for those who bear this fearful responsibility and write for any information wanted and it shall be forthcoming. Address Rev. E. C. Wills, Secretary and Treasurer, P. O. Five Things in Christ's High Priestly Prayer.

REV. A. W. ORWIG.

OF course there are other very important features in the prayer, as recorded in the wonderful seventeenth chapter of John's Gospel. But my purpose is merely a glimpse at a few of the points therein contained.

Presentation. By this I mean to what Christ himself refers, namely, a presentation or the giving of God's word to his disciples, and what he expected them to give to the people. His own language is, "I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me." And again he declares, "I have given them thy word." That is, he gave them the great truths of God as to the divine plan of human redemption. And they went forth and proclaimed the same, and marvelous results followed. Preachers of the present day are commanded and expected to give the people God's words, and not something else. Not a few, however, discourse on many other themes outside of the gospel. People are often merely entertained and amused instead of instructed and fed. I do not say that the preacher may never, in any degree, go outside of the realm of divine truth. But when it is done it should be by way of profitable illustration and application. An eminent preacher said that when he preached philosophy, men applauded; but when he presented Christ, men repented of sin and were saved. When we truly preach the Word we preach Jesus.

Preservation. That is, Christ prayed that his disciples might be preserved or kept from evil. "I pray that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." How very solicitous he was and still is for the welfare of all his followers! He would have them remain in the world for the world's good, but preserved from the evil influences of the world and the power of Satan. We sometimes speak of the keeping power of Christ. He does indeed impart keeping grace to overcome the world, but in a sense we must keep ourselves. That is, we must keep out of sin's paths. Then we can say, with the Psalmist, "The Lord is my keeper." Yea, "the Lord is faithful, who shall stablish you, and keep you from evil."

Sanctification. Jesus prayed for the sanctification of his disciples. Had they not already been sanctified? Not "wholly," as is plainly shown by their unsanctified strife as to "which of them should be accounted the greatest." Hence Jesus prays that they may be sanctified in the sense of being made pure and holy, including their being set apart entirely to the great and glorious work assigned them. God's Word, the Holy Spirit and the blood of Jesus are all mentioned in the Bible as factors in our sanctification or heart purity. And surely the prayer of Jesus that we might be thus cleansed ought deeply to affect us and lead us earnestly to desire and seek the all-important experience.

Unification. "That they all may be one." The disciples were hardly this before the day of Pentecost. But the fiery, refining, unifying baptism of the Holy Ghost on that most eventful day was indeed an answer to Christ's prayer for unity. Veritable type of heaven's own atmosphere! How strongly they were now cemented together in the bonds of Christian love and fellowship. They were now, as never heretofore, "one in Christ Jesus." And it proved a mighty factor in their labors to promote the kingdom of God. Even the heathen were compelled to say, "See how these Christians love one another!" Would to God that this holy, sympathetic oneness prevailed more freely today among all Christians! And of which the apostle Paul speaks, "the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," and "in the unity of the faith."

Glorification. "Glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee." This was a petition that the Father would now, more than ever, vindicate the Messianic claims or divinity of Jesus. Not, however, for his own sake, but for the glory of God and the salvation of men. God had, indeed, already been glorified in the mighty words and works of Jesus during the three years of his ministry. God would certainly be glorified by the atoning work of his son, Jesus Christ, the last acts or stages of which were now about to be enacted. Among these were the supernatural phenomena during his crucifixion, so that even wicked men cried out, "Truly this was the Son of God." And God was again glorified when Jesus rose triumphantly from the tomb. God was also glorified in the awe-inspiring ascension of Jesus. He was mightily glorified, ten days afterward, in the wonderful outpouring of the Holy Spirit. And soon after this the apostle Peter cried out, to the astonished people, at the healing of the lame man, "The God of our fathers hath glorified his son Jesus." Let us never forget that it was ever the dominating purpose of Jesus to glorify his Father. While foretelling his death in John 12:28, he prayed, "Father, glorify thy name!" And then in the seventeenth chapter of John, fourth verse, he declared, "I have glorified thee on the earth."

And, certainly, it should be our constant aim to glorify God and his son, the Lord Jesus Christ. And we can do it in no better way than by seeking the salvation of souls, and thus imitating Jesus. Our daily lives should tell for the divine glory. Jesus himself said, "Herein is my Father glorified, was an argument against the statute. Evidences of the corruption of weak, inefficient or wet public officials were cited by the wet group—some of whom had sponsored these appointments or at least by their protest against the appointment of convinced friends of the cause had made possible their nomination—as though this were proof of the law's failure rather than the most severe condemnation of the enemies of this policy themselves. Friends of prohibition have not sought the appointment of its enemies to public office, they have not bribed public officials to violate their oaths office, neither does their patronage encourage bootleggers and rum runners. Such law violations as occur, occur among the group opposed to prohibition and not among that tremendous body of American citizens who believe in and observe it.

PROHIBITION ANVIL WRECKS HAMMERS

The legislative arena has been the scene of other assaults. It would require a long catalogue to list the various measures intended to make prohibition unenforceable. Probably every imaginable scheme for modification or nullification or for full repeal of prohibition has been proposed in some legislative chamber in this country. While few of these have gotten beyond the committees to which they were referred, they, none the less, furnished publicity opportunities whereby the wets might suggest to the mind of the people at large an impending overthrow of the prohibition law.

Misleading referenda, straw votes and newspaper polls, often couched in language which did not clearly set forth the issue to the citizens, have been conducted wherever the field seemed most fertile to the publicity experts of the now outlawed liquor group. The fact that many of these referenda had no legal or binding effect made them merely vehicles for advertising purposes for the foes of prohibition. In most cases, the friends of this cause did not participate in such straw votes. This was merely a form of gorilla warfare by which the foes of the Eighteenth Amendment sought to annoy its friends or to divert the attention and activity of its friends and supporters from the real tasks confronting them.

Violations of the law have been exploited in the public press. There is a justification for this law. The fact that such violations are the exception and that the great majority of the American people are not engaged in such violations makes them news in the real sense of the word. Before prohibition, bootlegging and moonshining were so common that rarely if ever did such offenses attain the dignity of first page news. The lawlessness of the unlicensed traffic was commonly ignored. Under prohibition, however, these offenses against the law have a news value which they never had before. Each first page story of this character is an evidence of the naive astonishment of editors that such things can be. However, the effect of the repeated publication of such news, while perfectly proper and, in itself, an evidence of the common observance of prohibition to which these events are exceptions, has a propaganda effect not underestimated by prohibition's foes.

One phase of the strategy of the foes of prohibition is based upon a rather curious reversal of the American idea of fair play. This lies in an immediate and vociferous defense of prohibition law violators whenever there is a contest between them and officers of the law. Ignoring the long list of men who have given their lives in the line of duty as victims to some murderous criminals, such shooting affairs as have occurred between officers and those who resist arrest have been amazingly exploited. The conclusion of these cases is rarely reported. The fact that the courts have repeatedly exonerated accused officers of the law on the ground that their acts were in self-defense and completely justifiable does not obtain that widespread publicity given to the fact that some officer has defended himself against armed liquor gangsters. No one seriously defends any misuse of fire arms by any public officer, but one cannot ignore the fact that public servants are not intended to be the passive targets of criminals, that armed resistance to arrest is commonly accepted as a serious offense and that innocent citizens are more apt to co-operate with public officials than to take pot shots at them.

The old-time Indian tactics of picking off the leaders has been pursued by the foes of prohibition with sufficient success, apparently, to justify their adoption of these tactics. Many champions of this policy have wearied of the misrepresentations, the slanders, the false charges, the continuous attacks made upon their character or their motives and have withdrawn from the combat. Some have died prematurely because of the stress and strain of the fight. Some have had their reputations so blackened that they despaired of ever being able to establish their actual innocence against the charges which had been "framed" against them. There are martyrs of prohibition as there have been martyrs of every other feature of the program which the Christian Church has supported through the ages.

The morale of the supporters of this social policy has been the focus of countless assaults. In order to weaken their united effort, there has been a flow of insidious propaganda to the effect that prohibition, while a noble theory, was impossible of realization. The fact that its actual realization was easily verifiable by even casual observers did not lessen the insistence on this point by wet propagandists. This movement beginning as a moral crusade and developing into a social program with most important economic bases, was pictured as "purely political" by brewers' advocates who thus attempted to alienate the people of the churches. Could the practically united voice of many branches of the Church be stilled on this question and could the massed influence of many churches be resolved into parochial units, the goal sought by the brewers and the vintners would be easy of practical attainment. Hence, the false insistence that prohibition is not so much a moral problem nor a social problem nor an economic problem as it is a partisan political issue.

The steady anvil chorus rung by the hammers of the foes of prohibition has wrecked many of these hammers but the anvil remains unmarred. One might glance back over the past decade and note the continuous gains registered by prohibition in spite of these assaults, unparalleled not alone for their number but for their violence. It is heartening to those who believe in the theory underlying democracy to note the popular response in this war of sophistries and fallacies. Each year has marked a growth in prohibition sentiment. Each electoral year has marked a decrease in the number of elected public servants who are known to be opponents of prohibition. Each twelve months has marked a renewed insistence upon positive enforcement of the law. Complementing these is a steady development in the observance of prohibition by a people who seem strongly convinced that it is far better to own homes, automobiles, radios, and the other adjuncts of modern life than it is to dwell in slums or crowded tenements where one drowns not alone one's sorrow, but one's wealth and health and happiness in a pail of beer.

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY

Some Don'ts For Preachers.

F. LINCICOME.

Don't try to use wit and humor unless you have it, and if you have no sense of humor as a natural endowment you will be wise not to attempt to cultivate it. The preacher who is not funny but tries to be funny is a pathetic figure. He makes every one sorry for him. Simply to repeat a story which has made others laugh, and to repeat it because they laughed, is a melancholy performance.

Don't fail to be a gentleman. To be a gentleman for one man is exceedingly easy, for another tragically difficult. It takes more than fine clothes and good manners to make a gentleman. Too often the thin veneer of good clothes and conventional manners makes the character only the shabbier and more disgusting to the discreet observer.

A gentleman is one who is always gracious but not effusive; who is dignified but not prim; who sees everything but notices nothing which could embarrass; who avoids the words that wantonly open wounds; who, in a word, is invariably kind, and is able to show forth his kindness. A gentleman is the delight of all who know him, and it is somewhat a question with me as to whether a gentleman is made or whether he is born.

Don't over-emphasize one phase of Bible truth at the expense of another. If you do you will hinder the whole range of truth. For the Bible is a unit. Truth is always symmetrical and undue emphasis on one phase of truth destroys its symmetry. I fear many of us have given undue emphasis to the minor truths of the Bible. What we eat and what we wear are of a definite importance in our salvation, but if unduly emphasized they will hinder the whole range of Divine truth. We must learn to distinguish between the essentials and non-essentials of the Bible. I say non-essentials but I hesitate in calling anything that God has considered of enough importance to put in the Bible a non-essential. But I will put it this way. All truth is important, but some truths are more important than others. Jesus said to the Pharisees, you do several good things, but you neglect the weightier matters.

I believe that all truth is equally inspired, but all truth is not equally important. If we lift truth out of its proper proportion we hinder the whole range of divine truth. I believe in a four-fold gospel—justification, sanctification, divine healing, and second coming, but I do not think they are of equal importance in one's salvation nor should they have equal emphasis. In my opinion if we give the four-fold truth its proper emphasis we will give at least ninety percent of our time and energy to the preaching of justification and sanctification and about ten per cent to divine healing and second coming. Heaven is not conditioned upon the view I may hold on the doctrine of the second coming—whether I am a post or a pre-millennialist—heaven is not conditioned upon whether I am sick or well, but it is conditioned upon moral purity.

Grace Before Meals.

The same grace repeated time after time often becomes so commonplace and mechanical that we are prone to forget its real meaning. "Grace Before Meals," is not the product of one mind, but the assembled expressions of many devout servants of God. There is an appropriate grace for every day in the year. This little book has been used very effectively in teaching the different members of the family to say grace. It contains 167 pages, is neatly printed and bound. Price 50c.

Messages of Christian Comfort for the Sick.

Helpful Verses for Children, Youth and Grown Ups. Price 30c a dozen, or four dozen for $1.00.

A message of sympathy, tenderly expressed, comforting in character, cheerful in spirit, and promptly delivered, is always a tonic to the sick. "I was sick and ye visited Me." A personal visit cannot always be promptly made, but a "Message of Comfort" can be mailed at once—the quicker the better. An assorted supply of these cards, on hand for immediate use, and used as opportunity offers, will make you a blessing in a time of need.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

DR. RIDOUT'S MEETINGS IN NANCHANG.

Dr. George W. Ridout, of the New Jersey Conference, professor in Asbury College, held meetings in Kiangsi in May, beginning in Nanchang. Many times the altars were crowded with seekers for pardon or holiness, and a large number were converted, including two sisters of the military governor, who attend Baldwin School; over forty new members were received into preparatory membership in the student church, and some had the very glow of heaven on their faces. Some of the young men who have held out for years were converted, and some Chinese lady teachers who had been quite antagonistic to the church were greatly impressed and stopped their opposition; one of these is the daughter of a Chinese district superintendent.

There was opposition on the part of some of the Chinese preachers, who said they liked the sermons but did not like the altar services. These meetings had a note of reality in them which reminded several of us of our youth; we are convinced that there can be instantaneous conversions in China too, and we will never be satisfied again without Pentecostal results. The churches of Asia will be better for Dr. Ridout's coming to us at such a sacrifice this year.

Showers of Blessing in Sienyu.

The revival movement continues to be the outstanding feature of the work here. The stream grows deeper and wider as it flows on. During the last twelve days of March we had with us Dr. and Mrs. George W. Ridout, of Asbury College, Rev. Andrew Gih, who was with us in the Bethel Party last year. Mr. Lin, a gospel singer, and Miss Grace Hwang, Bible teacher, the latter two also from the Bethel Mission, Shanghai.

Our Sienyu preachers, a large number of the Bible women and selected delegates, both men and women from every nation, were in attendance. Dr. Ridout, who is a member of the New Jersey Conference, together with Mrs. Ridout, preached the simple gospel of regeneration and sanctification and they preached it with power. Dr. Ridout often had to get up from his bed of sickness to go to the church and preach, returning to it again after the service. His burning zeal for the Chinese made a deep impression upon them all. There was always a quick response to every altar call. The altar was crowded with earnest seekers. The meetings resulted in many workers being brought into a new and deeper experience. Some were rescued from lives of sin and made over into new men and women and sent back to their charges to begin in earnest the work of rescuing souls. From these meetings groups of revived church members, chiefly official members, have been sent back to form a nucleus in almost every church. The series of meetings gave unquestionable evidence of the presence of the Holy Spirit and resulted in the transformation of many lives.

Growing out of this revival movement there is a movement among the laity to shoulder responsibility in carrying on the work of the church. Hitherto this has been left chiefly to the paid workers.

After the series of meetings at Sienyu City the Ridout Party went to Hinghwa City for a series there. A great blessing resulted to the church there. "Koh Sang" our young official who was greatly blest at Sienyu went on to Hinghwa and did some very effective witnessing in Hinghwa resulting in quite a stir among the teachers and students of the Guthrie Memorial High School.

While the Hinghwa meetings were being carried on by Dr. Ridout the Sienyu workers divided up into three bands and held three meetings in the Sienyu region with splendid results. At one of these meetings while Rev. Na Mo Tai was speaking the Spirit came upon the congregation with great power. An unflinching bent on organizing a band of brigands was convicted of sin and converted. A number of others were converted, the pastor stirred up to a new consecration of his life to a spiritual ministry and the entire membership of the church revived. Following this meeting the pastor and a group of eight members have been going about to adjoining regions witnessing with power to what the Lord has done for them. Once they made an excursion up into the hills taking their rice with them and were used to stir up into new life a small congregation on the hill tops there.

Dr. S. C. Sang, our Conference Evangelist, was loaned to the Amoy church for the month of March and reports from there show that his ministry was blest of the Lord. Since his return he together with his helpers have held six meetings with remarkable results in reviving the local churches.

In all of these meetings we witnessed people under deep conviction of sin, being born of the Spirit and filled with all his fullness. We found that the preaching of the simple doctrines emphasized by the early Methodists work as they did in the olden days if preached by lips burning with a zeal for souls, and were still effective.

During April Bishop Birney held a retreat for all the preachers of the Conference. Rev. S. S. Ding, of the Board of Religious Education and Rev. Harry Worley of Foochow, were present and took part. Bishop Birney gave addresses that stirred the preachers to get down to the business of soul saving in a more earnest way than they had in the past. The closing days of the Retreat "Koh Sang" gave a rousing exhortation and many preachers pledged themselves to go back to their charges and carry on revival work. Koh Sang is setting a wonderful example in giving all the free time he has aside from his official duties in preaching fearlessly to all. He is being used to lead many into the light.

Dr. Sang has organized a "travelling" Bible School to accompany his party as it goes from place to place holding meetings. At present he has five students. They are being trained in Bible Study and in the practical work of the ministry the emphasis being on soul saving work. The work and study is under Dr. Sang's personal direction. We believe that there are great possibilities in this feature of the work.—W. B. Cole in China Christian Advocate.

REVIVAL AT ASBURY COLLEGE.

The opening of the school year at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., is in the past. The student body from all over the world have gone to work. The Institution, true to its purpose, failing on account of his sickness, to secure the services of Dr. H. C. Morrison, nevertheless had Rev. John Thomas, of Chicago, on hand. He commenced his plain gospel sermons on Monday the 23rd, and closed on Monday night the 30th of September. More than forty penitents were at the altar the first night, and it was practically full every night till the close. From 150 to 200 were saved, sanctified or reclaimed. The young people did not get into confusion, nor run over each other, in their zeal to do God's work, but they certainly at times crowded each other. What a thrill it did give an old soldier of the cross to see their bright, happy faces and lithe, quick movements as they worked like beavers for their Lord. A high-browed D.D. might have been a little confused or even turned away in disgust but I do not believe that the Holy Ghost, who was superintending, was the least confused or puzzled, but rightly directed his willing servants and mightily helped them to aid the weeping penitents to throw off the shackles of Satan and to pass through narrow gates into the realm of Christ's freedom.

If the greatest woe that can befall an immortal spirit is to be eternally lost, and the greatest weal is to be eternally saved, then blessed is the man that gets sinners saved even if his method is different from mine, especially if I am, by my method, getting none saved. If I am getting none saved, I am not trying to help my cause, by criticising and condemning those who do, but I am blessing and praising them. Satan has not gotten undisputed control of this old world. This army of young people is going to fight him, not with carnal weapons, but with the whole armor of God. They are going to capture some of his strongholds and make prisoners of many of his soldiers and turn them enthusiastically against him.

May I add that the services were held in the new Hughes Memorial Auditorium, one of the most beautiful audience buildings in the state. Its lights, acoustic properties, two thousand comfortable chairs, and broad speakers' platform, backed by a $25,000 pipe organ, flanked by seats for more than a hundred singers, make it an ideal place for the large student body to gather. Dr. Akers, pointing to the well arranged altar, said to the audience, who had just been enjoying the splendid music of organ and choir, "This $25,000 organ is not the main thing in this building, but audience-room, choir loft, organ and pulpit are built around, and are but aids to this altar where penitent sinners may seek their way back to the Father's embrace."

J. W. Harris.

REPORT OF N. B. VANDALL.

Am writing just a short report of my work thus far in this year, and I surely thank God for blessing my message in song and for keeping me busy, and for giving me complete victory over sin.

I think God has been blessing me spiritually, more this year than ever before, and I have no intention of turning back, but intend to keep on with the old-fashioned crowd who believe in full salvation.

My work this year has been varied, starting January 1 at Lancaster, Ohio, with Rev. W. M. Davis, pastor of the Maple St. Evangelical Church, where the "flu" about upset things the first week, but God was with us, and Brother Davis hewed right to the line and souls were saved and sanctified.

Then over into New Jersey, at the West Side M. E. Church in Millville where Rev. D. C. Evans was the good pastor. This was our second trip to that church, and Rev. Evans is known everywhere in South Jersey as a fearless preacher of the Gospel. The "flu" again about upset things. Brother Evans was in bed, sick most of the time, but we did our very best and a few souls prayed through, and on the last Sunday we had a break and about 50 prayed through in one service. Then back to Ohio again with Rev. E. E. Cole at Gettysburg M. E. Church, where we had the delightful privilege of working with Dr. J. W. Carter, of Wilmore, Ky. We had no great results at Gettysburg, but God alone knows the good that was done, for out of the few who prayed through, God may have a Finney or a Moody.

Then up to Coshocton, Ohio, with Rev. Perry, pastor of the Nazarene Church, where we had a gracious revival, and wonderful fellowship. The Coshocton folk are true blue, and Rev. Perry is one of the very finest men in our Church.

Then over to South Bend, Ind., with Rev. D. A. Kaley, pastor of the First Evangelical Church, we did our best but had but little visible results. Next up to Detroit with the Holiness Tabernacle Association where Rev. Paul Rees is the beloved pastor, and is doing a great work over the Radio, as well as at the Tabernacle. Dr. Joseph Owen was the evangelist there, and beside the good time I had singing to those people, I think I grew about two inches, spiritually speaking, under the messages Dr. Owen gave us. Then over to Chicago with Rev. John Thomas at the N. W. Gospel Tabernacle. And what a fine crowd of folk he has there. Was there only over one Sunday, but had about 1,000 out on Sunday night. Then a big jump to Dixie Land with Rev. C. M. Dunaway in a Nazarene tent meeting in Macon, Ga., under the supervision of District Supt. Oscar Hudson. Between the boys, the wind and the rain, we had a hard time keeping the tent up, but the folk turned out and God blessed. There are no finer folk to labor with than Hudson and Dunaway. Then back north and over the line into Canada to the Ottawa District Camp of the Holiness Movement, Church of Canada, where Rev. John Knapp did most of the preaching for the camp, and God gave us full altars at almost every service. Then back into the States with Freddie Thomas at Bradford, Pa., where Rev. Byron Maybury was pastor. About seventy souls prayed through at this meeting. Then to Sharon, Ohio, camp with Rev. Neese and Teroe. The camp was one of the best in years in every respect. Then back to our old stamping ground at Findlay, Ohio, camp with Dr. C. W. Butler, President of the National Holiness Association, Rev. Glasscock and Rev. William Heslop. Findlay Camp is one of the very best in Ohio and worth any one's time to come to Findlay just to hear the singing. And then the Big Lick Quartet just can't be beat. Then back to Michigan again to the great Hopkins camp where Revs. Jos. H. Smith, T. M. Anderson and Bro. Surbrook did the preaching. The altars were filled time after time, in all about 350 seekers.

At this writing am in a National Holiness Convention at Greenville, Ohio, with the President of the Association, Dr. C. W. Butler. The convention is going fine and the crowds are increasing, and God is blessing the people through the messages of this great Bible Expositor. Pray for me that God will continue to bless and use me for his glory in singing the Gospel.

MT. CARMEL CAMP MEETING.

Back in the beautiful mountains of Eastern Kentucky the fifth annual holiness camp meeting of Mt. Carmel School, was held August 23rd-September 1st. Rev. Charles Vincent, of Wilmore, and the writer were the preachers. The music was under the able direction of Sister Vandever, assisted by my son John at the piano. Under the anointing of the Spirit the Mt. Carmel ladies' quartet sang beautiful gospel songs that gave the meeting just the atmosphere essential to victory. These young women would be a blessing to any of our holiness camps, for they know God and he owns and blesses their ministry in a marked way. This was Bro. Vincent's third visit to this camp. He and his family are dearly loved by the people.

These mountain people are a lovable folk. In their veins flow the purest of early colonial blood, and when they start in earnest, how they do go through with Jesus. I have never heard clearer testimonies to the saving and sanctifying grace of God than those given by these dear people. The first person blessed in the camp was a visiting mountain minister. The message of Saturday night put him under conviction for heart purity. Sunday morning in his home he prayed through and came up to the camp with a shining face and a bright testimony. Clearly called of God, this work was established by Miss Lela G. McConnell, in September, 1925. Under her able leadership a $25,000 school building has been built, that is affording the children and young people of Breathitt county the opportunity of an accredited education. Sister McConnell has gathered about her a noble band of young people to aid in the work, every one of whom is enjoying the experience of entire sanctification. She insists upon this spiritual qualification as a necessary fitness for the work.

At each morning and afternoon service reports were given by these workers, who during the summer had been preaching at the seventeen school-house stations Sister McConnell had established. But answers to prayer, instances of Divine Guidance, special interventions of Providence, and miracles of grace wrought by the Holy Spirit, I have never heard reported by a group of Christian workers. By holy living and bleeding sacrifice these workers have wrought a ministry of love that has won the confidence of the people and they are responding to the gospel message. It is pathetic to hear the people plead with the workers: "Do not leave us. Please stay and help us."

Mt. Carmel School and this schoolhouse station work is a work of faith. The entire support comes in in answer to prayer, for Sister McConnell depends solely upon those "whose hearts God has touched." I know of no place where a cleaner work along old-fashioned holiness lines is being done. Five thousand of God's children who want to support this type of a work ought to rally to this missionary enterprise and give it the hearty support of love, prayer and gifts. Miss McConnell's address is Lawson, Ky. Evangelist Warren C. McIntire.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

Never before in the history of the world have the forces of evil been so arrayed against the forces of righteousness. Truth and Error are engaged in a conflict which is shaking the foundations of all that is right and good. The precious Word of God is being robbed of its sacred truths which have been the solace and comforts of saints of all ages. Men in high places are tapping the fountain of inspiration, and by a steady leakage, the life-giving stream of our Christianity is becoming shallow and dry.

The empty churches on every hand, the spiritual dearth, the formality and worldliness, the lack of reverence for God's house and his Word, are potent witnesses of the fact that people are dying of thirst, and being led blindly over the precipice of eternal destruction.

Dear Herald Readers, this is a time when the Lord requires every faithful follower of his to be in the thick of the fight; we must form an unbroken phalanx if we would drive back the tides of unbelief that are sweeping the land and hedging up the way of life for wandering sinners.

Realizing our responsibility we are going to make it possible for every Herald reader to have a part in scattering truth as it is found in The Herald, by sending us one or more subscribers on our special liberal offer of 25 cents from now until February 1, 1930. There are many who can put The Herald into four homes by sending us the names with one dollar, and others who can solicit their friends to subscribe for this length of time. Please to act at once, and so help to arrest the onmarching multitudes to death and destruction, by scattering The Herald, with its messages of full salvation, as so many leaves of the Tree of Life for the healing of the nations.

"The Master is come and calleth for thee."
What shall your answer be!

Mrs. H. C. Morrison.

that he atoned for the sins of the people in his sacrificial death upon the cross; they deny that he had a bodily resurrection from the dead. Peter was undoubtedly describing the advanced apostles of the New Theology and that host of unfortunate men and women who are drifting into Unitarianism. They are without doubt fulfilling this prophecy of St. Peter and "DENYING THE LORD THAT BOUGHT THEM."

It is a fearful thought that we have not a few cultured ministers in evangelical churches who today do not hesitate to take a position that robs them entirely of all benefits realized by faith in the atoning merit of the Christ. I cannot see how these unfortunate men can fail to "bring upon themselves swift destruction." I feel within my heart a most earnest protest against their false teachings and at the same time a great pity for their deluded and lost souls.

Follow Peter in his description of conditions which prevail in many sections where these false teachers are making headway. He says, "And many shall follow their pernicious ways." This is quite true. A host of people are being drawn away from saving faith in the Word of God and the Son of God by these suave and polished gentlemen who privily have gotten into pulpits and colleges and are overthrowing the faith of multitudes of people.

It is much easier to destroy than it is to create. It may take many years for architects and builders to erect a splendid temple, but an incendiary can put a torch to it in a moment and directly the whole building is wrapt in the red flames of destruction. The average Christian has not made a careful study of the Christian evidences; is not a student of systematic theology; and is not prepared to answer the specious arguments of these false teachers who are leading multitudes of people away from Christ after "their pernicious ways." It is sad beyond all description to think of a man being called by a congregation or sent to preach to a people, whom they believe to be a man of God, a teacher of righteousness, a counsellor and guide in the things of salvation. They trust him; with his flatteries and high claims of scholarship and devotion he gets their confidence and with great shrewdness he gradually leads them away from the faith of their fathers, from the plainly written Word of God and directly he has them, with conceit and sneers, "denying the Lord that bought them."

Listen to Peter still further. He tells us of these men who will privily bring in damnable heresies, "that many shall follow their pernicious ways." Now listen to the result, "By reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." How true this is today in great city churches and schools where these false teachers have won the confidence and following of their congregation. The outside world has been encouraged to speak evil of the way of truth. They have been confirmed in their spirit of unbelief of the Scriptures and rebellion against God. They become blasphemous, lawless, immorality increases, crime breaks out; there is robbery, murder, seduction, divorce, Sabbath-breaking and every species of lawlessness. The rivers of iniquity overflow their banks because up at the fountain, the pulpits and church schools where the great truths of the Bible ought to be proclaimed and the congregations ought to be rebuked for sin, instructed in righteousness, built up in holiness, and made to be salt and light to preserve society and illuminate the pathway of a prodigal world back to the Father's house, falsehood is taught, unbelief is disseminated, the foundations are torn up, the salt hath lost its savor, light is turned into darkness and "THE WAY OF TRUTH IS EVIL SPOKEN OF."

Let Peter describe these fearful conditions a little further. "And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you." How startlingly true! While these false teachers take away from you the Gospel which is the power of God unto salvation, they also almost force you to build up their institutions, to foster their organizations, to make them strong in their places where they defile and pollute the holy waters of truth. "Feigned words"—when they want a collection they are beautifully orthodox; they can make all kinds of promises; they appear to be the champions of the Bible, the heroes of the cross; they are remarkably skillful in "making merchandise of you."

Peter here has given us a startling picture of conditions that exist all about us. It is not worth while for us to try to cover up the sins that shame us and break our hearts with grief while the youth of the land is deceived, congregations are led away from God and his Word; great salaries are paid to men who have not seen a soul converted to Christ under their ministry in years and yet, they "with feigned words" deceive the people, destroy the faith, and in many instances go boldly and recklessly on without rebuke.

Peter gives us a fearful description of their end. No doubt he tells the truth. It is something awful to contemplate. Hear him. "Whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not and their damnation slumbereth not." Peter, to assure us that no men can be so scholarly, pretentious or exalted that they can escape the judgments of God, calls our attention to the fact that "God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment." Our hearts ache with grief for those unfortunate men who today are diligently engaged in destroying the faith of the people in the Word of God, in Christ as the supernatural Son of God, and the atonement he has made for sin on the cross of Calvary.

We grieve with unutterable sorrow that many young men in theological schools in this nation are being led away by these false teachers; and without fully realizing what they are doing they are "denying the Lord that bought them." May it not be that the teaching of our Lord will be fulfilled in them in that day when they shall say, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? And in thy name have cast out devils? And in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

The Work of the Lord

Goes Forward.

IN the years past there have been many false prophecies with reference to Asbury College. Not a few of my friends hesitated to give money to the school because they feared when I dropped out the school would backslide and gradually disappear. Some of my friends often made this excuse to me when I solicited financial aid.

This was the boast of the enemy of Asbury College. Some of my students waiting in a depot heard an enemy of Asbury College, a preacher, by the way, say to another preacher, "Asbury College is a one-man school, and when old man Morrison dies, it will soon go out of existence." I have now been sick for almost a year, and the reports which come to me from Asbury are most encouraging.

I was not out in the field of service at all the past summer, yet the enrollment of the school is larger than ever before; two hundred freshmen and more to come. Best of all, I had been engaged to hold the fall revival at the opening of the school, but here I was on my bed in the hospital; fortunately, our Brother Thomas, the Englishman with such a warm heart and strong faith, was in Wilmore and they secured him at once and went forward with one of the greatest revivals ever held in Asbury College. From what I hear, I judge it was a better meeting than if I had held it. Ninety-five percent of the freshmen class are now saved, and ninety-eight percent of the sophomore class are converted, reclaimed or sanctified. Of course the revival was not at all restricted to these two classes. When Brother Thomas was compelled to leave the meeting went on for some days with gracious power.

Another good feature of the situation at Asbury is the fact that Rev. Virgil Moore had just been appointed by the Bishop pastor of the Methodist Church in Wilmore. He is one of the most evangelistic pastors in the conference, a strong and fruitful preacher in the camp meeting; he graduated from Asbury College a few years ago. He is well acquainted with and much beloved by professors and students, and the people of the community. It certainly looks like our beloved Bishop Darlington was led of the Lord in this appointment.

So I lie here and rejoice and praise the Lord that the College is growing and is greatly blessed in gracious revivals, entirely without me. And so, I have no doubt it will be when this old body is moldering away in the little cemetery at Wilmore. It would be cause for alarm indeed, if the gracious God who planted the school, and has nurtured it, could not find some one to lead the hosts at Asbury when this old man drops out. You may be sure that school with which I have been so closely connected for many years is very dear to me. I could not begin to tell how many revivals I held there during the fifteen years that Brother Hughes was president. The fifteen years I was president I held the revival every year at the opening of the school, with the exception of one or two years, I am not positive which. I have seen the conversion and sanctification of souls at the altars of Asbury College and the church in Wilmore amounting, I suppose, to several thousand, furnishing hundreds of men for the ministry and quite a large number for the mission field. You may be sure as I hear of its growth, splendid revivals, and constant development along all lines, I am rejoiced and encouraged for the future of the school.

I have come down very close to the river several times in this sickness in which I have been in bed twenty-two weeks within the past eleven months. I have felt great concern for Asbury College and THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD; they have been sort of Siamese Twins. Brother Hughes and I located from the Kentucky Annual Conference at the same time, he to found Asbury College and myself to change THE HERALD from a monthly to a weekly. The blessing of God has been upon these agencies for the spread of the doctrine of holiness and an evangelical faith and effort for the salvation of souls. It is wonderful how the Lord has led us along, and the marvelous influences that have gone out through the nation and beyond the seas through these agencies.

You may be sure they have been much in my mind during this long illness. I knew that I was seventy-two years of age before this sickness came upon me, but I did not realize that I was old. I felt such strength, vigor and eagerness in the great work that old age was carried, almost unconsciously, and with great joy. But these twenty-two weeks in bed, rapidly approaching the end of my seventy-third year, have taught me that I need not expect the physical vigor and capacity for labor that I enjoyed thirty years ago. I do not worry in the least over this fact. I do entreat the people who have been the friends of Asbury College and THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, under the blessing of God, to keep these two institutions of God's good grace going and growing as the decades pass. Your heart would be thrilled if you could see the letters that come to us from people of most all denominations who are blessed with the messages of truth that are carried to them by THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. I have a very strong faith that through the leadership of Dr. Akers, with his great faculty, under the power of the Holy Spirit, Asbury College will continue to stand steadfastly for the scriptural doctrine of holiness, as interpreted and preached by John Wesley and the founders of Methodism. I believe that long, long after I have departed this life, THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD will continue to carry the good news of full salvation through faith in Jesus. I beg of the great HERALD family to be faithful and to see that the paper grows and goes on with its message until our Lord shall come. It is nearly forty-two years since I felt the call in the quiet hours of the night to start THE HERALD. The impression was so strong that it seemed like a command. The battle was a long, hard one; it was seven years before the enterprise met its own expenses. I toiled day and night and mortgaged my home. I had some very gracious interviews with my Lord in those days of abuse, ridicule and many false accusations that I could not answer. It was broadcasted that I was trying to split the church, organize a new church and have myself made bishop of another church. Nothing was ever farther from my thought. But some of the most blessed fellowship I ever had with my Master was in those days.

I am propped up in bed dictating this editorial, and I have made it much longer than I intended. My physician, who has been so faithful during these three hospital experiences, believes that I am improving nicely and in a week or ten days may be carried on a stretcher into the drawing room of a train and shipped away to the plains of dear old Texas, where they tell me asthma disappears. Of course, if it is the Lord's will I shall be very glad to get away. I know many of you have prayed for me, and I trust you will continue to do so, and not for my body alone, but that the blessed Comforter, the Holy Ghost, shall be and abide with me in a very gracious way. During the sufferings and weaknesses of this long sickness, one of the great hindrances to my recovery is dreadful night sweats; sometimes the nurse has to change my gown five or six times in one night; but for the last three or four nights we have been doing much better, only changing once or twice. I am thanking God and taking courage. Blessed be his name forever! Your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

Throw Away Your Crutches.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE tendency of humanity is to trust in false supports. Somehow, we are inclined to substitute the shadow for the substance, the chaff for the wheat.

We would prefer the twine and wrapping paper to the merchandise of truth.

Men naturally are religious; they have propensities to worship, but they seem disposed to neglect the "great salvation" and substitute, apparently what seems non-essential, for that which is absolutely indispensable to a true Christian life. It seems that when true religion, with all of its beauties, is presented that we would be eager to accept it, incorporate it into our lives and live a life "hid with Christ in God."

Alas! there is the perverseness of the human heart to consider. In its natural state it revolts from a divine religion and prefers a human sham. Christianity is Christlike-ness, and it is a sad fact that the personal sanctity demanded by the Christian religion is the chief objection to it of the unsanctified mind. Men want religion, they want something to worship, but they want something tangible, something external, something independent of the heart. But the Word explicitly declares that "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." It is a heart affair, this Christian religion which cometh, not with observation, but by the work of the Holy Spirit in regenerating and sanctifying power.

We lose sight of the fact that with the natural heart we cannot please God. "It is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked. Who can know it?" It is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed, can be. It is likened to a cage of unclean birds, to a whited sepulcher full of dead men's bones. What a picture of ourselves are the grace of God in regenerating power gets hold of us!

The tendency of fallen human nature is to hanker after the things that please the senses; an appetite that can be satiated with shows, dances, cards, all sorts of pleasures of the godless world, and there is only one way to get rid of such hankerings, and that is by the expulsive power of a new and stronger affection which comes into the heart when self is laid upon the altar of sacrifice, the cross is consumed by the purifying fire of the Holy Ghost, and he takes up his abode in the temple of the human heart. It is heartening to us as we consider the deceitfulness of sin, and the power it has over the human race, to know that there is ONE who is mighty to save from ALL sin, and to keep the citadel of the heart from all encroachments of the evil one.

It would be a new day for the Christian Church if all who profess the name of Jesus Christ would come to realize the obvious necessity of being cleansed from all sin in order that we be Christians who shall really worship God in spirit and in truth. But when men are pressed with the precepts of the Bible and convictions of conscience, that religion, to be saving, must be admitted into the inner nature and become a part of our spiritual being, they persist in reducing it to a diluted form, mixing worldly ingredients with it, so as to destroy its efficacy; or substitute a part for the whole; or displace it altogether by some human device. "Forms and ceremonies" are substituted for the "worship of God in spirit and in truth." As some one has said, "Men make and use substitutes and crutches until they lose the use of themselves, and become permanently stiff and deformed as Christians. They are weaklings afflicted with a chronic feebleness. They live and die in a state of spiritual decrepitude."

Reader, if you are using crutches to support your feeble faith, throw them away and lean upon the everlasting arms of an unshaken faith in the cleansing blood, and see how much better your spiritual travelling will be.

FIVE THINGS IN CHRIST'S HIGH PRIESTLY PRAYER.

that ye bear much fruit." And he also said, "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven." And the apostle Paul exhorts thus: "With one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." Let us not seek our own glory, as many seem to do. This is dishonoring God instead of glorifying him. And let us not be unduly concerned about good feelings or the comforts of religion. These will come spontaneously, more or less, as we endeavor to glorify God. A man once said to his pastor, "I have prayed a long time for the comforts of religion and have not found them." "Pray that God may glorify himself," was the reply. Ah yes, that is infinitely more important. In doing so we shall share not only the joy of Jesus, but some day his glory. He prayed that we "may behold" his glory. "And that will be glory for me."

Hungers of The Heart.

BY H. B. HARDY.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE LITTLE MAID'S AMEN.

A Story of Faith.

A rustle of robes as the anthem
Soared gently away on the air—
The Sabbath morn's service was over,
And briskly I stepped down the stair:
When, close in a half-illum'd corner,
Where the tall pulpit stairway came down,
Asleep crouched a tender, wee maiden,
With hair like a shadowy crown.

Quite puzzled was I by the vision,
But gently to wake her I spoke,
When, at the first word, the small damsel

With one little gasp straight awoke.
"What brought you here, fair little angel?"

She answered with voice like a bell,
"I tum, tos I've dot a sick mamma,
And want 'oo to please pray her well!"

"Who told you!" began I; she stopped
me:

"Don't, nobody told me at all,
And papa can't see tos he's cryin',
And, 'sides, sir, I isn't so small;
I's been here before with my mamma,
We tummed when you ringed the
big bell,
And ev'ry time I's heard you prayin'
For lots o' sick folks to dit well."

Together we knelt on the stairway
As humbly I asked the Great Power
To give back her health to the mother,
And banish bereavement's dark
hour;

I finished the simple petition
And paused for a moment—and
then,

A sweet little voice at my elbow
Lisp'd softly a gentle "Amen!"

Hand in hand we turned our steps
homeward:

The little maid's tongue knew no
rest,

She prattled and mimicked and carolled—

The shadow was gone from her
breast;

And lo! when we reached the fair dwelling—

The nest of my golden-haired waif—

We found that the dearly loved mother

Was past the dread crisis—and safe!

They listened amazed at my story,
And wept o'er their darling's
strange quest,

While the arms of the pale, loving mother

Drew the brave little head to her breast.

With eyes that were brimming and grateful

They thanked me again and again—
Yet I know in my heart that the blessing

Was won by that gentle "Amen."

—The Gospel Expositor.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please give me a little room on your Boys and Girls' Page? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I enjoy reading The Herald very much. Who has my birthday, March 18? I am fifteen years of age. I have medium brown hair and fair complexion. I received my eighth grade diploma and I am now ready for high school. I am a Christian and belong to the Methodist Church. I like to go to Sunday school. If any of you cousins near my age would like to write to me, I will be very glad to get your letters and do my best to answer all letters I receive.
Wilma Margrave.
Norris City, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a
Florida girl join your band of coun-sins? I am fourteen years old, a freshman in Dade City high school. I belong to the Methodist Church. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I love my teacher. I have three sisters and one brother. We are great chums but I can beat him playing checkers.

I drive mother's car to take music. I like to drive; it is such fun. Mildred Bonin, I think I must be your twin, except in name. I am five feet, three inches tall. I weigh 113 pounds, have medium brown bobbed hair, blue eyes and am a brunette. My birthday is March 28. If I have a twin please write to me. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with C and ends with E, and it has seven letters in it.
I hope Mr. W. B. is car riding as I hope to see my first letter in print.
Anna C. Vernon.
Rt. 1, Box 68, Dade City, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for a little Kentucky girl? I am ten years old and in the eighth grade. I have brown eyes, light hair, and dark complexion. My mother takes The Herald and I read page ten.
She has been taking it about twenty-five years. I haven't seen any letters from Kentucky, so I thought I would break the silence. This is my first letter to The Herald. Who ever can guess my middle name I will send them a card. It begins with J and ends with T, and has five letters in it.
Eloise J. Stephenson.
Rt. 2, Carlisle, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and all the cousins? I have written to page ten of The Pentecostal Herald twice this spring and summer, but I guess Mr. W. B. got them both as I did not see them in print. Mama takes The Herald and we prize it as the very best paper we get, and we get nine papers. I read The Herald from cover to cover, but best of all I like page ten. I wonder how many of you cousins are Christians? I am not a Christian but hope to be some sweet day. I am twelve years old.
My birthday is Jan. 24. I have medium brown hair, blue eyes and have light skin. I am four feet, six and one-half inches tall and I weigh 72 pounds. I am in the sixth grade at school. Have I a twin? If so, won't you please write to me? I will send any one my picture if you will only write to me. I want to correspond with lots of girls near my age. I will answer all the letters I receive from boys or girls. Please print this letter, Aunt Bettie, for I am so lonesome as my mother is bed-fast and has been for two months. She can't walk a step. I am so afraid of Mr. W. B. that I will now close hoping to see this in print.
Lillian Berkley.
Spring Lick, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter and I certainly hope to see it in print. I want to surprise my mother and father. I am thirteen years old and am a Christian. My father is a Methodist preacher. He has taken The Herald for several years and I enjoy it quite as much as he does. I have a tan and white pony and a police dog for pets. I have written to one of my cousins and will be glad to write to more. Ruby Pickard, I guess your middle name to be Nell, and Freda Miller, I guess your name to be Ruth. Well, I had better close before
Mr. W. B. wakes from his nap.
Ruth Pritchett.
Box 618, Stonewall, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been about a year since I wrote you last. I love to hear from boys and girls of my own age who live in different states.
I am afraid I neglected some of my interesting correspondents. I was graduating from high school last year and was so busy that I could not find time to write. But I will have plenty of time to answer all letters I receive now. If any of you cousins want to take a tour which is well worth while, just visit Wisconsin. Nothing could be more beautiful than her hills, rivers and lakes. The dolls of the Wisconsin River are undoubtedly the most beautiful. I wonder if the rest of the cousins heard from Mr. Lawrence Bird of Dalton, Ga. He is a poor, bed-ridden invalid and is entirely dependent upon charity for his support.
His address is Rt. 6, Dalton, Ga. I'm sure he would appreciate any contributions from the cousins who could send him anything. I guess I'd better cut my letter short and leave space for some one else. Ruby Oleson.

822 Cleveland St., Beloit, Wis.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I love the good old Herald and always enjoy reading it and writing to the Boys and Girls' Page. I have written to page ten since I was old enough to write a letter, and really, Aunt Bettie, you will never know how many interesting friendships have been formed through your efforts to have a page for the young folks. I have received lots of nice letters from the cousins and to the ones I failed to keep up the correspondence with let me say it was not because I didn't enjoy your letters, but I just couldn't answer them all,
especially after I went away to school.
I did write to some of you but I know there's no fun in writing letters when no answer comes to them. When I wrote last (about a year ago) I told some of the many changes that had taken place in my life since I had written before, but this time I shall not tell them because they are so numerous that I fear my letter will grow so long that there will be no more room for the other cousins to have their letters printed, but this
I will say, that I am still trusting Jesus. He is more precious than all the world to me. I love him with all my heart, and my whole heart is fixed in him and his wondrous love. I'm going through with Jesus. In these last days when the world is going mad over pleasures, and worldly things we need to put all our trust in Jesus, stand true and watch and pray. I expect to be in meetings in a short while as a worker, singer, and player. Will those who know the Lord pray that I shall be useful in the Lord's work, and that I shall be strong and courageous. After being out in the world among all kinds of people I find that it means a lot to stand true when others do not understand what it means to serve the Lord and to know him as a personal Savior, but he is able to keep us if we will only trust him. I must stop now and give someone else a chance to talk. If anyone cares to write to me I will try to answer their letters for I enjoy the fellowship of God's children even if I don't meet them personally. Aileen Pigg, if you see this write to me. I would love to know where you are and how you are getting along. May God bless all the cousins and the many Herald readers, is the prayer of your Herald cousin.

Luella Waller.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little Louisiana boy join your band of boys and girls? I am eight years old. My birthday is March 27.
Who is my twin? I am in the second grade. I have one little brother. For pets, I have a little white dog, and a little pig. All you cousins write to me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please give me a little room on page ten to thank every one who sent me papers and tracts, and the little picture cards.
The little children enjoyed them beyond words. I will accept more if any one feels led to send them. I always give them out with a prayer. I feel sometimes like it's a very little, but when I stand before the judgment I want to hear my Savior say, "She hath done what she could." I live on a rural route. The roads are rough and it's several miles from here to the churches, so we get Bro. G. C. Hesson, a Nazarene preacher, to come and preach in the schoolhouse. He is a good man and preaches the word in the beauty of holiness. I belong to the M. E. Church, South. Oh, how I wish all the Methodist preachers would preach and teach and live Bible holiness like Dr. Morrison and like the Wesleys taught it. Praise God, there are a few still standing true in these awful days. Truly, I believe Jesus is coming soon. All who read this pray that you will be ready when he comes. Get ready now if you are not ready and try to win some one else, for the harvest truly is great and the reapers are few. Read Matt. 9:37, 38.
I am thankful I can say I am praising God for his saving, sanctifying and

Dear Aunt Bettie: A little girl from Alabama would like to get acquainted with children all over the United States and I have found a good way if you will only print this letter. My uncle, Rev. Lon Fleming, from the west is visiting us and he takes The Pentecostal Herald. I enjoy reading it very much, especially page ten. I am four feet, three inches tall, have dark brown eyes, brown curly hair and fair complexion.
Weigh 75 pounds. I finished grammar school last term, and will be so glad when I can enter high school. I am not a member of any church but certainly do like to go to church and Sunday school. We have prayer services in our home every Thursday evening at 7:30. I enjoy that very much. There are so many people serving the devil instead of our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us all. If the devil's angels would just stop and think of what the consequences will be to what they call joy and happiness, they would change their way of living and live a life that would bring them real joy and happiness that would be eternal. But those that are going astray will enter into a place of everlasting punishment, won't it be awful? I'll say so much if I don't hush until Aunt Bettie won't print it, but excuse me and let me say this:
I have a birthday June 13th. My age is between ten and thirteen. The one who guesses my age I will write to them, and if I have a twin I will send them my picture.

FALLEN ASLEEP

WOODWARD.

Joel Woodward passed to his reward Sept. 3, 1929, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Emma G. Roberts. A good man, a loving, devoted father has gone home to be with loved ones, who have gone on before. He was born Oct. 16, 1837, in Mason county, near Germantown, Ky. Was converted and joined the Salem Methodist Church near Germantown in young manhood. He was united in marriage to Elizabeth J. Stiles, near Germantown, March 22, 1864, by Rev. Ephraim Cole, and permitted to love, honor and cherish and walk by her side 60 years and 6 months, she having gone on 5 years ago to await his coming.

To this union were born eight children; four preceded their parents in death. Those remaining are A. W., A. H., and E. A. Woodward, and Emma G. Roberts. After the death of our mother, father came to live in my home. He was such an inspiration, always happy and cheerful, looking on the bright side of life, and how we did enjoy hearing him sing the good old Methodist hymns of his childhood. Just a few days before his going, he sang: "Am I a soldier of the cross." I said: "Surely you are." Had he lived until Oct. 16, 1929, he would have been 92 years old. While his body gradually weakened, he was happy in the knowledge of soon being with departed loved ones. He often talked with me about his going home and said he was anxious and ready to go, that he had made his preparations years ago, and hadn't a doubt about his acceptance with God. Such a wonderful testimony. May his mantle fall on us children.

The funeral services were held on Thursday, Sept. 5, at 3 P. M., at my home, conducted by Rev. C. H. Greer, pastor of Epworth M. E. Church, South, Lexington, Ky., of which he was a loyal member, assisted by Rev. J. P. Strother, and was laid to rest in the Lexington cemetery.

His daughter,
Emma G. Roberts.

SELLE.

Robert L. Selle, D.D., was born in Stanley Co., N. C., Jan. 13, 1865, and died at Rogers, Ark., Sept. 2, aged 64 years, 7 months and 3 days.

He leaves a wife, one daughter, Mrs. T. D. McCoy, of Little Rock, and three sons, Willard Ayars and John Wesley at Memphis, Tenn., and Robert Mallalieu. Robert Mallalieu is a minister of the gospel, pastor of Riverside Park, Methodist Church in Indianapolis, Ind.

Mr. Selle was converted when fourteen years of age. Early in life he was called to the ministry. He never doubted the call. When nineteen years old he united with the Blue Ridge Annual Conference and was licensed to preach and admitted on trial, and was ordained Deacon in 1886. He attended school at Grant University in Chattanooga. He preached forty-four years and served many charges very successfully in the several conferences to which he belonged.

He was pastor in San Antonio, Tex., Great Bend, Kan., Little Rock, Ark., Nowater and Newkirk, Okla.; was District Evangelist on the Guthrie district and Alva district in 1921 and 1922. In 1923 and 1924 he preached at Shidler, Okla., and 1925 at Tustin, Calif. In 1926 he came to Rogers, Ark., where he served until his death. He was District Superintendent nine years. The last district was Little Rock.

In addition to writing many beautiful hymns he has written eight books.

He was elected delegate to the General Conference which met at Los Angeles in 1904 and in the same year he was given the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from the MacLennansville Institute, Tennessee.

He was married to Minnie D. Ayars at Malvera, Ark., June 24, 1890. She died in 1919. She was a beautiful character.

In 1921 he married Sara E. Doebler, a Deaconess and Evangelist in the Methodist Episcopal Church. Mrs.

Selle was ordained Elder in 1927 by Bishop E. L. Waldorf at Guthrie, Oklahoma.

Funeral services were held at Rogers, conducted by G. W. Martin. Also service was conducted by C. E. Chaple at Little Rock, Ark.

MIXON.

Irene Mixon departed this life to be at rest with God, Sept. 29, 1929, at her home in Crowville, La. She was born July 14, 1918. Though her stay with us was brief, memories of her fragrant life linger near, reminding us whether our stay be long or short in this valley of tears, that we can leave behind us bits of loving kindness, smiles and cheer, guiding some fellow pilgrim to Christ down through the path of years. She did not slip into her last sleep unaware. She told her father she was "going home." Why weep, bereaved loved ones, she has gone to her last peaceful, undisturbed sleep, with the draperies of her couch about her and is lying down to pleasant dreams.

She leaves her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Mixon, three sisters, Chlorine, Helen and Lessie, one brother, E. E., Jr., besides a host of relatives, playmates and friends who mourn her passing, but who, by the grace of God, expect to greet her in heaven to abide with her forever.

Dr. Charlie Weir, of Winnfield, La., conducted the funeral services. His message was directed to the living with a solemn warning to make preparations to meet death with victory. She cannot come back to us, but what a sweet comfort we have that we can go to her.

The remains were laid to rest in Sanders Cemetery, near Winnfield, La., Sept. 30, 1929, awaiting that morning when the dead in Christ shall rise and we who are alive and remain shall be caught up together to meet the Lord in the air.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson V.—November 3, 1929.

Subject.—Respect for Rightful Authority. Mark 12:13-17; Rom. 13:1-7; 1 Peter 2:13-16.

Golden Text.—Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. Rom. 13:1.

Introduction.—Intelligent beings, no matter how good they may be, must live in obedience to law. One may go further, and say that everything and every being in the entire universe exists, or has its being, either in obedience to law, or it is an outlaw. God himself lives in perfect accord with the laws of that eternal code which is but the expression of his own nature. We find it expressed in such statements as these: "God is love;" "God cannot lie;" "I am the Truth." Justice and mercy are emanations of his being. God never violates any of these great fundamental laws. In fact, he cannot violate them, for that would be to do violence to his own nature.

The same thought is true with all finite beings and things. Chemical elements must exist in obedience to their own laws of being. The microscopic microbe has no other mode of existence. The flowers bloom in the same way. The grain growing on the wide planes of the Dakotas and the luscious fruit in our orchards are as strictly obedient to law as the myriad stars that grace the heavens. All animate nature, including man, either obeys or violates law. Men and devils are the outstanding outlaws of creation. The latter are wandering stars of light, that have broken through the limitations and laws of their being, and are now reserved in bondage unto the darkness of everlasting damnation. Men are outlaws on earth, traitors against God, already condemned to everlasting destruction, but with a call to repentance and a promise of mercy and pardon ringing in their ears from the very heart of God. Jesus Christ, God's own Son, has made atonement for our sins, that makes pardon and regeneration and entire sanctification possible to every lost child of Adam.

The difference between heaven and hell is the difference between obedience and disobedience. The difference between civilization and anarchy on earth is of a like nature. Were there no disobedience to law in New York there would be no sin in that city, and New York would be as good as heaven. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." Sin is at the bottom of all earth's woes. Clean out all sin and its results, and earth will once more become a paradise. The angels of God would hover over the place, and the Devil would be out of a job. Thank God that blessed day is on the program of the future.

Comments on the Lesson.

Jesus had aroused the anger of his enemies by the parable concerning the man who had rented his vineyard to some dishonest husbandman who had refused to pay the rent, and had beaten his servants, and had killed his son. They understood his application of the parable. God was the rich man; Jesus was the Son; they were the farmers. No wonder they were angry.

13. Pharisees were the strictest religious sect of the Jews. They were separatists—spiritual exclusives in their own opinion. Not much is said of the Herodians. They were a group of ecclesiastical politicians who made it their business to side with the Pharisees in all of their plots against Jesus. Their name indicates a bad connection. To catch him in his words.—Speech would be better, as the word is singular in the original. They could find nothing against his conduct; so now they set a trap for him, as they would for some wild beast. Picked, shrewd men are sent to watch for some little slip in his words that might be so construed as to condemn him. Never has the devil so out-deviled himself as in dealing with the Son of man.

14. This verse cannot be surpassed for keen, Satanic hypocrisy. Almost every word in it spells out the lie lurking in their hearts.

15. He, knowing their hypocrisy.—He "needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man." Why tempt ye me? Why do you test me? Why do ye try to deceive me? Bring me a penny.—A denarius—a "Roman silver coin worth about twenty cents."

16. Whose is this image and superscription.—Caesar's image and Caesar's name. They were using Caesar's money, and were therefore under obligation to his government. They were caught at their own game.

17. Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's.—They would catch him; but he has caught them. These are the wisest words ever uttered concerning our obligation to Divine and human governments. Jesus spoke a whole civil code in a single sentence—just ten words in the original, including articles.

Rom. 13:1. Let every soul.—No one is exempt from obedience to law. The higher powers are officers appointed to execute the law. God is the Author and Sustainer of all good laws; and he commands obedience to human laws. We may repeal laws by duly constituted methods; but outlaws and traitors talk of annulling laws.

2. Shall receive to themselves damnation.—This possibly refers to the punishment administered by civil governments; but one who maliciously violates the laws of his country can hardly hope to escape hell hereafter. God is upholding law. Verses 3 and 4 are clear enough.

5. Subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake.—We must obey law not simply for fear of punishment, but because we have a conscience that demands right living. It is twofold.

7. Render therefore to all their dues.—This parallels so closely the Master's own words, that one almost looks for quotation marks. It is not only the basis of all good government, but of all good conduct on the part of intelligent beings.

1 Peter 2:13-16. If that were the philosophy of a mere fisherman from the sea of Galilee, men would build monuments to his memory. The words may be Peter's; but the thought belongs to him who knows the needs of all men. How splendid is the teaching: We are free; but we must not use our liberty to accomplish unlawful ends. Those who are pure in heart are the only really free souls in the universe.

Bargains: On page 13 you will find some real bargain offers.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

J. W. Carter: "Had good meeting at Agra, Kan. A number blessed and about thirty additions to the church. Rev. Russel G. Strong, the pastor, who is now in Asbury College for the last year, was full of good works during the meeting and contributed largely to its success. I am anxious to be kept busy preaching a full salvation. Can be reached by letter or wire at Wilmore, Ky."

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister is now conducting a campaign at Huntington Park Tabernacle, Los Angeles, Calif. The altar was filled, the first appeal made by the evangelist on Wednesday evening of the first week. Dr. Hofmeister will spend this winter on the coast. He can be reached at 4021 Lennox Ave., Inglewood, Calif.

At the close of a meeting which Guy W. Green held for the First Presbyterian Church of Borger, Texas, September 19-29, the pastor, Rev. David Rees-Jones, wrote:

"Borger Presbyterianism has taken a great step forward as the result of the enlistment campaign conducted here by Guy W. Green, of Kansas City, Mo. Much publicity has been given to an outbreak of lawlessness that occurred here recently. Borger is not utterly devoid of a sense of righteousness. Neither is the community destitute of upright citizens. Fifty-six of Borger's leading men and women, including a few children, united with the Presbyterian Church on Sunday, Sept. 29, 1929. A never-to-be-forgotten sight it was when these persons pledged allegiance to the Lord Jesus Christ at the morning service in a crowded church. On all sides there is nothing but praise for Mr. Green personally, for his methods and for his messages. The civic clubs greatly appreciated the privilege of hearing him. The high school pupils, after hearing him at their chapel hour, crowded the church one evening. Of a truth, Mr. Green is different. His worth-while, constructive work builds up the church." If you are interested in the kind of a sane, constructive meeting you naturally would expect from a former business man and editor who holds two university degrees and who built up in a great city the largest men's Bible class in his denomination, write Guy W. Green, 1322 E. 30th St., Kansas City, Mo.

DELTAVILLE, VIRGINIA.

My dear Madames Row and Mingle-dorff:

May I add a little to what you both have written, as I feel the great necessity for your timely articles? I would like to say that as long as professors of holiness dress and act as if they had an unmanageable itch to mimic or follow the "flapper" (as they are called) by changing the modest black hose for light silk ones of all colors that the flapper wears, and shortening their dresses until they are half to the knees and more, it will be a difficult task to approach the worldly and the young concerning their extremes.

We are following hard after them, and certainly they are bright enough to see that we have the same spirit concerning those things, as they.

For the most part we professors will not bob our hair, but have long ago abandoned the simple modest way of the saints of other days and have conformed to the pulling over our ears and foreheads and smearing and netting our hair until we seem to be well inoculated with the fever of conformity to this sinful and adulterous generation. I, for one, am in hearty sympathy with all you say and would suggest that we start on this outrage at the correct end, for as long as the worldling can put the slam on the holiness professors they cannot see our sincerity. I am,

ALL-DAY HOLINESS MEETING.

The Miami Valley Holiness Association of Dayton, Ohio, will hold its annual Thanksgiving Day meeting in the Pilgrim Holiness Church at Arcanum, Ohio, on Thursday, Oct. 28; opening at 9:30 A. M.

A number of ministers (pastors and evangelists), singers and a host of God's holy people are expected to be with us. A great day is anticipated. A gratis light lap lunch will be served at noonday to all present, and you are cordially invited to meet with us in this Holy convocation.

J. L. Kennett, President.

HIS RAINBOW.

Sadie Louise Miller.
Taylor University, Upland, Ind.

Storm clouds lower,
Thunders rumble in the west.
But up above the cloud
Is brightest blue;
And after rumbles cease,
And each dark cloud has blessed
The earth with copious shower,
Will come a bow of brilliant hue.
So every dark and stormy hour
Is crowned with peace;
For I am sure that He
Who owns the earth and me
Hath but allowed
Just what is best.
It is the only way He brings to view
His rainbow of resplendent hue,
Pushing its way from Heaven's glory through
A storm-washed sky of blue.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

— Basil Matthews
in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and His saving power in the lives of men." Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

My Sermon Notes

By CHARLES H. SPURGEON

A selection from Outlines of Discourses Delivered by Mr. Spurgeon Covering the Entire Bible.

Vol. 1. Genesis to Proverbs.

Vol. 2. Ecclesiastes to Malachi.

Vol. 3. Matthew to Acts.

Vol. 4. Romans to Revelation.

These volumes are $1.50 each, or the entire set will be sent postpaid, boxed and labeled at the special price of $4.00.

In this book are 1,500 questions which any one ought to be able to answer if he really knows his Bible. Through using it, one will gradually familiarize oneself with the splendor of the Bible, its variety, its literary values, its wisdom and summary of all rules for success and happiness. It is simple, practical, entertaining and educational. Price, $1.00.

HUMAN NATURE.

When you study human nature
'Tis amusing, you'll agree;
And whether men grow worse or better,
Is a mystery to me.

We have good men, and great men,
And bad men by the score,
We have men, who only want their share,
And men who strive for more.

One man says, "I won't help the cause,"
Another says, "I will,"
One man runs up a big account
Another pays his bill.

One man is father of his home,
His neighbor is a curse;
But there's a way to aid reform,
Don't try to make him worse.

If we, by chance, might come across
A pal that's down and out;
Just show him where he's missed the way,
'Twill bring a change about.

There's friends around us every day
On whom misfortune laid
A withering hand, they have no heart
To try to make the grade.

They are not crooks, they only lack
The pep encouragement lends;
Shall we stand back? They need our help,
So let us all be friends.

If you will only look ahead,
So plainly you will see
The paths we travel lead into
The same eternity.

God made it so, that we might help
The weaker ones along;
If we refuse to give them aid,
We get His plans all wrong.
Nannie Belle McRae.

SINNING AGAINST LIGHT.

Rev. H. F. Pollock.

One of the greatest of all crimes in this crime-ridden age of ours is the crime of sinning against spiritual light. God has given us, in our day alone, much more than enough light to save the entire world from its sin. But we have rejected the light of His Word until today we are in the midst of a maddening maelstrom of human lives destined to utter destruction on the rocks of the lowest barbarism and savagery. It is not enough to merely say that we are in the midst of moral and spiritual chaos, but the rate at which we are traveling is so terrific that we will very soon wake up and come to our senses in the regions of the damned, and that without remedy! The destruction of our present-day civilization would not be a new thing in history. Israel, the chosen of God, through rejection of light, was banished and suffers to this day. Greece, ancient world center of art and philosophy, through rejection of the light, dropped into oblivion. Rome, once mistress of the world, through rejection of light, died and has long since been buried. And we today are on the same road. Well might we stand in amazement and wonder if humanity will ever wake up. The matter cannot be smoothed over nor evaded by our self-deceived complacency over our modern attainments and philanthropies. There are many things today to which we may point and plead progress, but the mockery hurls itself back into our faces by the stubborn fact that we have forgotten God and missed the way of salvation. BARGAINS IN BIBLES

An opportunity to save money on Christmas gifts. The stock is very limited on these items, hence the offer is good only during October.

India Paper Pocket Reference Bible

Ideal for young man or young woman, or for a Christian worker to carry in pocket. The size is 4 1/2 x 7 1/4 in. thick, and weight 12 ozs. It has the chapter numbers in figures, references, maps in colors, fine thin India paper, good clear minion type, bound in flexible morocco, with overlapping edges, stamped in gold, red under gold edges, silk headband and marker. You could hardly imagine a prettier little Bible for gift purposes. It is a good $3.00 value. We have only a limited number of these and are offering them at $2.30 each, postpaid.

Illustrated Child's Bible

Has beautiful blue black morocco binding with overlapping edges, size 3 1/2 x 5 1/2, with a good clear readable agate type, pronouncing, a large number of full page illustrations. Stamped in gold. We are offering them, while our supply lasts, at $1.00 each, postpaid.

Same as the above in black binding and without the illustrations, 90c.

Large Type Red Letter Bible

This Bible has the large black faced burgeois type, is self-pronouncing, chapter numbers in figures, family record, references, words of Christ in red, prophecies marked with a star. Has a number of full page illustrations with explanatory matter under each, Bible Readers Aids, including How to Study the Bible, by Moody, Calendar, reading the Bible through in a year, and Harmony of the Gospels. Bound in genuine leather with overlapping edges, size 5 1/2 x 8 1/4 in. thick. Stamped in gold. A good $4.00 value that we are offering for $2.15.

Same Bible as described above with the additional feature of concordance, at $2.50.

Large Type India Paper Bible

Large self-pronouncing burgeois type with references, chapter numbers and figures, a table for the reading of the Bible through in a year, some blank pages for notes, the names of the books on corner of page making it self-indexing, bound in a very fine quality of small grained goatskin, calf lined to edge, silk headbands and marker, red under gold edges, size 5 1/2 x 8 1/4 in. thick, weight, 23 ozs. The workmanship on this Bible is superb, and it would be difficult to find a better looking and better wearing Bible. Order at once, as we have only 8 copies. This is an $11.00 value that we are closing out special at $7.25.

Same Bible as described above, with the additional feature of the concordance, an indestructible lining. Special price, $7.50.

Ideal Scholar's Bible

A beautiful book bound in genuine morocco with overlapping edges, stamped in gold, has beautiful pronouncing minion type, chapter numbers in figures, 40,000 references with chapter headings and dates, maps, red under gold edges, silk headbands and marker, size 4 1/2 x 6 3/4 x 7 1/2 in. thick—a regular $3.50 value that we are offering for $2.45.

24 copies same as the above, with the additional feature of concordance, genuine calf lining, for $2.75 each, postpaid.

Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

that preachers of today were transformed into Old Testament prophets and John Baptists, taking for their text "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead; and Christ shall give thee light."

This is not scarecrow business. It is but looking squarely at the naked truth, rugged though it may be. Why waste time patting ourselves on the back in our mutual admiration societies when precious immortal souls for whom Christ died are hastening on to everlasting destruction!

Ye who are Christ's true followers, be ye thus minded: Take unto you the Sword of the Spirit with greater determination than ever before. Sanctify the Lord Jesus Christ in your hearts. Put on the whole armor of God. And above all, take the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench

Small Old Folks' Bible

Very large easy reading small pica type, printed with plenty of ink, bound in beautiful flexible morocco, stamped in gold, gold edges, beautiful Family Register, maps in many colors, and although it has this very large type the size is only 5 1/2 x 8 1/4 in. thick, and weight only 27 ozs. Makes an ideal Bible for home study, for old folks or for a Bible student. A regular $4.00 value that we are offering for $2.50. Only 30 copies left.

30 copies same as the above with overlapping edges, special $3.50 each, postpaid.

Large Type India Paper Reference Bible

Bound in a beautifully grained Morocco with overlapping edges, has fine, thin India paper, 50,000 references, chapter numbers in figures, dates at the head of reference column. It has silk headbands and marker, red under gold edges, size 5 1/2 x 8 inches, and only 3/4 inch thick; weight 21 ozs. It has large long primer self-pronouncing type and maps in colors. The publisher's catalogue price $8.00. Number of this Bible is 7690X. We have 19 copies that we are offering at $1.00 each.

10 copies same as the above, with a genuine leather lining—regular price $9.00; we are offering them at $4.50 each. The number is 7695X.

Bible Study Bible

This Bible has large self-pronouncing burgeois type with 40,000 references and a Bible reader's course, divided into 36 lessons for a school year of 40 weeks. You will be delighted with this course and will get something out of the Bible that you have never gotten before. The book is printed on fine India paper, has red under gold edges, silk headbands and marker, bound in genuine leather with overlapping edges, size 5 1/2 x 8 1/4 in. thick, and weighs 23 ozs. Regular price $8.00. Sale price, $5.00, postpaid. Only 19 copies left.

Large Type Testament and Psalms

Has a very large bold black faced brevier type with 64 full page illustrations printed in many colors. Bound in cloth, stamped in gold, size 4 1/4 x 6 3/4 x 7 1/2 in. thick, weight 10 ozs.

This is a good $1.50 value that we are offering for $1.00, postpaid.

25 copies same as the above, without the illustrations, printed on the fine Oxford India paper, bound in genuine morocco, 3/4 in. thick, weight 5 ozs. Our sale price, $1.50. This is a thin, handsome volume.

India Paper Vest Pocket Testament and Psalms

This is one of the most attractive volumes to be had on the market on account of its small size, light weight and beautiful fine quality. Has a genuine goatskin binding, leather lined to edge, overlapping edges. A beautiful clear self-pronouncing nonpareil type, India paper, red under gold edges, silk headbands and marker, a few blank pages for notes. Size only 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 x 1 1/4 in. thick; weight only 3 ozs. The regular net price is $2.00; our sale price $1.50, or 5 of them for $6.00. A beautiful Christmas gift.

65 copies same size, style and quality as above, in the tan leather instead of black. We are offering these at $1.25 each, or $12.00 per dozen.

all the fiery darts of the wicked. God has called us to be soldiers in the great war against sin and Satan. Fear not, for the God of battles is with thee. The victory is sure. Christ shall reign till he hath made his enemies his footstool. Amen and Amen!

To you precious souls, who have not yet been saved, be ye thus minded: Put on the Lord Christ. Cast down your own stubborn resistance to his will. Surrender to him NOW while you may, for the door will some day be forever closed to you. You cannot escape Christ. "Whosoever shall fall on this stone (Christ) shall be broken"—his own resistance to God's will must be broken, and God's will embraced and followed. "But on whomsoever it shall fall (those who sin against light), it will grind him to powder." Which Will You Take?

Etched Bronze Bookmark.

There is no bookmark on the market more strikingly attractive than this entirely new novelty. The design is etched in black on bright finished bronze that will not tarnish. The picture of the Hofmann (Idea of Christ stands out clearly, and the delicately etched tracings are very artistically executed. This is not only a beautiful bookmark, but also a practical letter opener which can be used in cutting the leaves of new books. The bookmark is 4 1/4 inches long and is furnished with silk cord and tassel.

Price, 15c each, $1.50 per dozen, postpaid.

"MEMORIES."

Nannie Belle McRae.

I.

I have just a simple story,
That I wish to tell to you;
It's about my home in Dixie,
And my mother fond and true.

II.

I have roamed America over
And to foreign lands I've gone;
But this thought was ever with me
That, some day, I'd wander home.

III.

After years—my steps turned homeward
And I hastened on my way;
To the shrine of fondest memories,
I shall ne'er forget that day.

IV.

The old home nest was empty,
And all the birds had flown;
Father, mother, sister, brother,
No one answered—all had gone.

V.

As I wandered to the nursery
In the twilight shadows dim;
Standing there in bowed silence
Came the words of this old hymn.

VI.

"Rock of Ages cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee;
Let the water and the flood,
From Thy wounded side which flow'd,
Be of sin the double cure,
Save from wrath and make me pure."

VII.

To the little bed-room chamber
Where I used to run in glee;
Kneeling there—ask His protection, While mother crooned—"Abide with
me."

VIII.

Into another room I entered,
Far the dearest one of all,
But it seemed so bare and empty,
Not a picture on the wall!

IX.

This was mother's room, where often
She read that dear old Book,
While I, with toys and tops and marbles
And thru' story books would look.

X.

Mother never seemed despondent,
And when tempests fierce would blow
She would croon—"How deep the waters
But they cannot overflow."

XI.

Oh, my sins they came before me,
A burden far too hard to bear;
I had wandered far from Jesus
And from mother's tender care!

XII.

Angels waft this blessed message
To my mother up above—
That my steps were guided homeward
By her wondrous mother love.
"Tell mother I'll be there
In answer to her prayer.
This message guardian angels
To her bear:
Tell mother I'll be there,
Heaven's joys with her to share,
Yes, tell my darling mother
I'll be there."

NOTICE!

I'm making up my slate for fall and winter meetings. Any pastor or committees desiring my help in an old-fashioned Holy Ghost revival where souls pray through to real victory, you may reach me by letter or by wire at 1219 W. Del St., Evansville, Ind. I go for freewill offerings of the people.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A reader of The Herald earnestly desires the prayers of its readers for her former pastor's wife, who is in the hospital, that she may be restored to health, if it be God's will.

Will the dear prayer circle pray for our little boy, that he may grow strong and get well without an operation.—Praying Mother.

Mrs. D.: "Please to pray that God may remove a tumor in my body without an operation."

R. Q. R.: "My wife was operated on about a year ago for cancer and claims that she has been helped, but seems to have quite a bit of trouble. She feels she cannot live long unless she gets help from the Lord, so we earnestly request prayer for her healing."

"Please pray for my husband who for years has been a church member, but knows nothing of an experimental salvation; also my son who has once known God but is backslid."

Rev. H. F. Y.: "We kindly solicit the prayers of the praying people through The Pentecostal Herald in behalf of our revival meeting in Magnolia, Ia., from October 20 to November 3."

J. M. H.: "Please pray for me that I may be healed of catarrh and deafness, and sanctified wholly."

A. E.: "Will The Herald family please pray for my eyes, that they may be strengthened; as I'm about to train for the ministry."

Mrs. J. P. T.: "Please pray that my soul will be saved completely. I want to be a real holy Christian."

Mrs. W. B. Z.: "I'm writing you for an interest in your prayers for my family, two boys and two girls; also pray for me that I may meet my financial obligations to my fellowman."

Your young friend that is inclined to be skeptical will read, enjoy and get help from our book, "The First Soprano." Price, $1.00.

THE BOOK OF JOB

Biblical Masterpiece.

The above is the title of a recent book written by Prof. Newton Wray, D.D., of Upland, Ind. It is a most attractive binding, large readable type. He says, "This volume was born of trial. The author was passing through dense shadows that oppressed him with a sense of mystery and left him no recourse but to search the Word of Divine Inspiration in which light is thrown upon the dark scenes of life and the sense of mystery is relieved by gleams of hope." He further says, "It was written for the mass of people who faint and fall under burdens imposed by circumstances beyond their control." We are sure this type of book will appeal to hundreds who have had like temptations and trials and will be read with profit.

It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. Price $2.00.

I LOST THE WORLD

This song is becoming very popular in many sections of the country. We have the following letter from George H. Timmons, of Columbus, Ohio:

"It surprises me how your music is taking here. Just think, Brother Lillenas, that I, a man of 80 years of age, am singing and my voice is just as pure as when I was thirty, and my singing partner here is 68 years of age. Last Sunday night we used your song, 'I Lost the World and the World Lost Me.' We were encored twice. I don't think you have ever composed its equal for baritone and tenor."

Yours respectfully,
"George H. Timmons."

This song can be secured in "Special Sacred Songs No. 3," price 60c. Order from Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

THE LAW INSUFFICIENT.

By The Editor.

IN the eighth chapter of Romans Paul is seeking to teach the Jews that, while the law of Moses is the law of God, and is good, that the mere keeping of the law is not sufficient. In fact, human nature is in such a sinful state that it simply in, and of, itself cannot keep the law; hence the necessity of Christ, whose power and grace can so destroy the flesh, or sinful nature that, through faith in him, the keeping of the law becomes possible.

The carnal mind is enmity against God, it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. In the very nature of the case it is bound to be rebellious; but by faith in Christ this flesh life may be crucified, this carnal nature eradicated, and then one comes under the domination and reign of the Holy Spirit, when obedience to law becomes natural and the soul's delight.

In other words, the Lord has set up standards of life, or laws that govern the hearts and lives of men, which standards are in harmony with holiness. God's standards demand pure thinking, unselfish and righteous living. They are made and intended for man, but man in a fallen state cannot comply with them. There is something in man, naturally, that does not love God or his laws, and in the nature of things, he is bound to fall into disobedience and violation of God's laws.

But God gave his Son to make atonement for the sins of men, and by faith in him the heart is renewed and cleansed from all sin. There is power in Jesus' blood to eradicate the fallen, sinful nature, to purge out and destroy the envious, carnal mind and give the soul full deliverance and complete victory. Sin is gone, the old man is gone, and the new man is lifted into a state of purity of heart where it is now just as natural for him to keep the law of God as it was natural for him to violate that law. When, after the flesh, he minded the things of the flesh, now that the flesh, or carnality, is destroyed, the Spirit of God dwells in him and he minds, desires and does the things of which the Spirit approves and loves.

The Jews were self-righteous. That was the rock on which they split. Their claim was that they needed no Christ to atone for their sins, to change their natures, to cleanse their hearts and make them pure. They said, "We keep the law. The law of Moses is good enough for us." We have many people just like those Jews today, full of self-righteousness and conceit who believe they can get along without an atonement for sin. They tell us we need no regeneration, that they keep the law, observe certain rules of living, they do not need to be cleansed from sin, that they were born pure. They are deluded and must perish.

It is plainly declared in God's word that, "What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made us free from the law of sin and death." In the face of such declarations it were far safer to appropriate the cleansing blood, than to stumble into eternal torment trusting in one's own righteousness.

"Then let us sit beneath his cross,
And gladly catch the healing stream;
All things for him account but loss,
And give up all our hearts to him:
Of nothing think or speak beside:
My Lord, my Love, is crucified."

Monthly Sermon.

AN EXHORTATION AND A PROMISE.

Text: "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. 3:2, 3, 4.

The exhortation and promise contained in the text are very comprehensive. It goes to the very root of Christian life, and the glorious hope of the coming of our Lord, and the reward which is vouchsafed to those who are dead to the world, and are living the life hid with Christ in God.

The Apostle would guard those who have entered into the mysteries of this blessed life against becoming entangled with the things of the world, of coming to love the things of time,—material things—rather than the things of the Spirit, which are eternal. We appreciate the importance of the exhortation when we remember that, however devout, consecrated, and separated from the world we may be, yet we have a physical life, a body which must have food, clothing, a place of residence, means of conveyance from place to place, provisions for education and intellectual development.

If men live long, there comes a time when they are not productive; often they are afflicted with disease and in need of nursing and care in their old age. In view of these facts, it is quite natural for them to desire to make some provision for their families, in case of death before their children are of age and competent to provide for themselves. Any man is solicitous for the comfort of his wife if he should, because of infirmities or death, cease to be able to supply her material wants.

All of this calls for industry, economy and wise investment. With a large per cent of the human race, life is an almost unending battle for bread. It is remarkable the number of good, industrious people in the world who, if deprived of labor for sixty days, by sickness, a strike or lock-out, would be in actual distress for the simplest necessities of life.

This physical life, with its natural wants, becomes urgent and complicated. It of necessity raises questions of political economy, governmental policies, treaties with neighboring nations, traffic and trade, manufacturing, transportation and distribution. The whole question of labor and capital enters into the matter of food, clothing, and housing in a very practical way. There is danger here that the devout Christian have his mind drawn to material things, his attention absorbed with the matter of physical life, and neglect the culture of his soul and watchful care that his affections are not set upon temporal things.

The possibility and hope for the luxuries of wealth on the one hand, and the fear of meager poverty and want on the other, comes to disturb the minds of men. They become intensely interested with the economic problems of life; the hope for wealth and the fear of poverty often develops in them a covetous spirit and they become schemers, money lovers, exacting, dishonest, hard masters and bad payers. The Apostle understood the danger to which Christians are subject; he realized that the physical man must soon perish, that directly we shall have no need of temporal things; that the spiritual man will live forever; the real man can never die; that his needs must go with him into the eternal world. Hence the exhortation, "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth."

In this material age, we have great need of caution at this point. Perhaps there has never been a time in the history of the human race when there was more wide-spread and eager desire for money, and those things which it will secure, than at the present time. A high state of civilization is fraught with peculiar dangers. The savage was content to dwell in a cave or a hut made of bark and thatched with brush. He lived by the chase, could eat flesh of his wild kill raw. If game failed him, he could exist on roots, nuts and berries. He clothed himself with the skins of the animals he killed for food. When he traveled, he walked, rode his pony or his ox. He paid no rent, no fire insurance, no taxes; he received no bills from the butcher, grocer or dry-goods man. He received no note from the tailor or laundry

TRAVEL NOTES AND REMARKS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

As I write this article on board ship in the South China Sea bound for Singapore, we are reminded that we are saying good-bye to China, and after nearly twelve months of evangelism in China, Japan and Korea, our faces are turned towards Malayasia and then India. What a year it has been! We came to spend three months and have been held nearly twelve. So many doors were open, so many calls; such opportunities for gospel preaching and evangelization as we have never experienced in all our ministry, and work enough ahead of us if we stayed, to keep us going in China alone for the next three years. From far away Yunnan to Manchuria calls are heard but we have engaged long since to give some time to the Straits Settlement, to India and other points that we most reluctantly said "good-bye" to China, and to Bethel, our headquarters, with the hope that with the good providences of God meeting us and overtaking us we may return to China and give a longer period of service. Of this matter after more prayer and waiting on God we may speak to THE HERALD readers later on.

I think I will put in this article a few random reflections on China as a whole.

China is unquestionably one of the modern problems in the science of government. It has a population so large as to be almost inconceivable—400 millions. It was a Nation before the days of Abraham and Moses. When Egypt, Assyria, Persia, Greece and Rome were in the limelight making all kinds of blotches upon the pages of history China was serenely carrying on and nobody knows much about it. Its great wall worked effectively for many ages to keep out the barbarian and the foreigner! Its Emperors ruled serenely under the impression that they were the favored sons of Heaven and all other people were lower breeds. If an ambassador from another Nation desired audience with the Emperor it was only upon condition that he kow-towed, thereby acknowledging China's superiority; all other nations being but dust and ashes. Perhaps more is due to the British than to any other nation for effecting a work of disillusion in China. One has said that the British "first won the right to be regarded as human beings and not as hairy savages in China and France (in the forties) was the first to force Peking to remove the ban upon the propagation of Christianity."

I was reading recently about a Chinese Warrior in the olden days who was ordered to resist an invader and protect a city. When he found the odds against him and there was no hope he fled to a mountain near by and wrote a poem! This illustrates the Oriental and ancient way of doing things, but today the Chinese are not writing poems. They are writing in large letters upon history's page. The day of disillusion and awakening has come to China and it is like a giant wakened up after a very long sleep and not in a very good humor. Some one says that China "is simply hysterical at this stage with self-complacency and contempt for the foreigner." The country is simply reeking with Communism and the anti-foreign feeling at times scarcely knows no bounds.

In Shanghai the other day I met a missionary from Fukien Province who told of the necessity some of them were under of fleeing for their lives as the Communistic forces were coming that way endangering property and lives. August 1st was a day fraught with peril. It was feared the "Reds" would bring on riot and disturbance, and in Shanghai the police and military forces were keeping on the alert. We had our headquarters in the Chinese City but as we had to take steamer to Japan August 2, we deemed it wise to go down to the Concession and we had our trunks taken down ahead of us and we put up at the Missionary Home not far removed from the British and American Consul, so that if trouble ensued, rioting, strike, etc., we could manage in some way to get our luggage to the ship and we could get away safely. However there was no uprising; no riot; everything went along as usual.

Some would say in view of present eruptive tendencies in China what's the use of sending more missionaries there? Now the facts are China is one of the very neediest and ripest of mission fields and it is now in this time of transition and the moulding of a new Republic that China needs the gospel and all the Christian impact possible. She needs Bible and Gospel and Church and Sunday School and Christians to hold her steady and to impart ideals which her heathen religions cannot give. Well has Bishop Oldham said:

"For this is a religion which cannot enter any man's experience without creating in him a high sense of the sacredness of his own personality. He may be a humble coolie of China or a peon of Mexico, or a despised pariah in India, but let the liberating wand of Jesus' power but touch him and at once he begins to see new values in his personality and to demand a new degree of respect for that personality. Is he not also a son of God and a spiritual child of Abraham? Is he not an immortal of transcendent value and is he not the object of love and care of the King of kings and the Lord of lords?"

As one travels in the East, especially by sea, he finds that the British are everywhere in this part of the world, and on the whole it must be admitted that they have done more to open up the Orient to civilization (such as it is) and to trade and commerce, travel, education and religion than any other people on the globe. Certain things always go with the English, and among them Prayer book and the Sabbath day. On board a British ship when Sunday comes everybody is reminded of it because there will be Divine service at 11 o'clock in the Cabin, and if there is no clergyman on board the Captain or Purser will read the service. On our Sunday out between Hong Kong and Singapore the Captain sent word to me requesting that I take the service, which I would have done, but the storm at sea on that Sunday had put the majority of the passengers in a state of body and mind not conducive to church going so the service had to be given over.

A good story is told by Lord Hamilton in one of his books about a Welshman and a Scotchman, both of whom were running for a political office. A wit said of them, "Well, if we get the Welshman he'll pray on his knees all Sunday and then prey on his neighbors the other six days of the week; whilst if we get the Scotchman he'll keep the Sabbath and any other little trifles he can lay his hand on." It must be conceded, however, that the Britisher is a skilful manager and generally can find a way out of any difficulty and that successfully. John Bull has been often called a blunderer but he generally blunders to a successful conclusion. The story is told of one of those British Generals in Ireland during the Fenian uprising of 1867. He had captured about three hundred Fenians in a skirmish at Tallagh about 20 miles from Dublin. How to escort so many prisoners into Dublin was a very grave question with his limited force. Lord Strathnairn suddenly got an inspiration; he had every single button, brace button and all cut off the prisoners' trousers. The poor Irishmen had perforce for decency's sake to hold their trousers together with their hands and it would be a mighty hard matter for those fellows to run a yard under such distressing handicaps. Suffice to say they arrived at their destination reporting no runaways. Let me tell now a little different story:

In the Old World many customs prevail unknown in the new. In England there was a profession known as "Chimney Sweeps;" soft coal being in use so much there it was necessary to have the chimneys swept frequently. Those men carrying on the business had little boys with them whom they sent up the chimney to wriggle and creep up as best they could by digging their bare toes into the crevices and working their elbows and knees alternately. These little fellows would be almost stifled by the foul air and showers of soot and sometimes would tumble to their death. There was a good woman, Mrs. Montagu, who left a sum of money to give these boys a holiday and a picnic once a year. The story of why she did it is thrilling. She lost a little boy by kidnapping; all attempts to find the boy utterly failed. On the first day of May the chimney sweeps arrived to clean the chimneys of the Montagu home and one of those boys was sent up to his horrible task. Somehow he lost his way in the network of flues and emerged in a different room to the one he had started from. As he came in the room something struck him as familiar and a half forgotten chord was struck in his brain, he turned the handle of the door of the next room and found a lady seated there. Then he remembered! Filthy and soot stained as he was, the little chimney sweep flung himself into the arms of the lady with a cry of "Mother." It was Mrs. Montagu's long lost kidnapped boy. No wonder that in her will she remembered the chimney sweep boys!

The British have a manner of speech which is unlike that of any other people, and these days when nearly all we hear comes from English lips we are struck by the fineness of their speech and their diction.

They are not, however, quite as fulsome as the following. A story is told of one English family who acquired the habit of addressing each other in Johnsonian English. They were engaged one day in the sports when the eldest daughter said to one of the guests, as they were following the hounds: "Pray let us hasten to the summit of yonder commanding eminence where we can, with greater comfort to ourselves, witness the further progress of the chase."

We have some Texans on board. We have not tried out that sentence on them, but one would not have to guess very long as to how they would express themselves. On the whole I think Americans in their haste have not given much time to correct expression or elegance of language. They are too ready to adopt slang and everything else "for short."

A Britisher tells of travelling from Calcutta to Ceylon along with a number of American ladies who were engaged in Missionary work. When they got within a hundred miles of Ceylon the ladies began quoting from the missionary hymn of Bishop Heber's:

"What though the spicy breezes Blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle."

They asked the Captain in their keen appreciation of the poetry how far out to sea the spicy breezes would be preceptible. The Britisher became mischievous and went to the Steward and asked for some nutmegs and cinnamon; he grated the nutmegs and pounded the cinnamon up and then with one hand full of each he walked slowly up and down the deck in front of the Americans; soon the cry went up: "the spicy breezes." "I got a delightful whiff just then, who would have thought that they would have carried so far out to sea!" No doubt these folks went home and declaimed eloquently upon the spicy odors of Ceylon! As one travels in the Orient the odors are anything but poetical. A witty writer has said that the national air of China is not sung but sprayed.

The East easily conjures up before the western mind the idea of aromas sweet and wonderful and the Bible has much to say about myrrh and sweet smelling things.

When one strikes the East the contrasts are so unspeakable! The most unspeakable poverty and the most amazing opulence! The most wonderful modesty and the most atrocious immorality! The most entrancing scenery, the most appalling living conditions, sordid and abominable! But, thank God, whatever Christianity touches it elevates and cleanses and sanctifies. Well has Dr. John Mason said:

"Christian graces are like perfumes; the more they are pressed, the sweeter they smell; like stars that shine brightest in the dark; like trees, the more they are shaken, the deeper root they take, and the more fruit they bear."

A GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

Rev. G. Arnold Hodgkin.

HERE is a stretch of country in South Africa, some sixty miles in length, and ranging from one to five miles in width, which is called by the English, The Reef, while the Dutch term is The Rand. This portion of territory is in reality a low lying chain of hills, or rather a winding elevation which is little above the surrounding country, but which rises very near to six thousand feet above the level of the sea. On this narrow strip of country are situated several flourishing towns, and the one city, Johannesburg, which has a white population of around two hundred thousand, while the native population reaches the same figure, if not more.

Johannesburg is the very center of the great African gold mining region, being situated somewhere near the center of the Reef. It is one of the most up-to-date and thriving cities in the world. A typical street scene with the thronging white population jostling each other on the crowded thoroughfares, the very modern stores, shops and bank buildings, and the endless stream of automobiles (nearly all American make), remind one of a busy and modern American city. One has difficulty to realize that he is actually treading the streets of an African city. The scenes are so far removed from what is spread before the gaze everywhere in the outlying districts, that the sensation is of having sailed for many days across a wide ocean to another and entirely new nation.

The great and all-absorbing industry of the Reef is gold mining. There are no less than seventeen great mining companies operating along the area from the west end of the Rand, at a place called Randfontein to the east end of the district the town of Springs being close to the eastern extremity. This district is called the Witwatersrand Gold Fields. The output of gold is enormous and exceeds the imagination. The mining companies have, up to the end of 1928, milled about seven hundred million tons of ore, and have recovered gold therefrom to the value of one thousand million pounds sterling or five billion dollars. During last year the mining companies produced gold to the value of forty-two million pounds, or two hundred and ten million dollars. This was well above half of the output of gold in the entire world.

According to figures given in a brochure, put out by the Transvaal Chamber of Mines, we get the following quotation. They say, "Day and night the reduction works and treatment plants of the Witwatersrand are busily engaged in the crushing of ore and the recovery of gold contained in it. Each year they deal with twenty-nine and one-half million tons of ore, and produce over nine million ounces of gold, worth approximately forty-two billion pounds sterling; which means that in the twelve hours from dusk to daylight, and during the time when the Rand is asleep, the reduction and treatment plants produce gold to the value of fifty-seven thousand, five hundred pounds sterling."

When we made, with friends, a visit to one of these mines, we were permitted to hold in our hands 800 ounces of gold bullion in ingot form, worth about fifteen thousand dollars. The officials who showed us every courtesy, seemed most happy to permit an American to handle some of their yellow treasure.

The question might be asked, Why interest ourselves, as Christians, in this colossal output of earth's riches? The answer is easy. It is this, As in all great industries, there must be employed, many thousands of natives, as well as white men. Passing by, for the moment, the white men who are thus employed, we turn our attention to the natives. There are at the present, something like three hundred thousand young men from all parts of South Africa, and even from Central Africa, employed in the gold mines of the Rand. They are here separated from their families. They are transported to the mines by the mining companies, and are living in the native compounds. These are situated along the Rand, and number one hundred and twenty. Each compound accommodates from three to six thousand men. Here the men live, and here they manifest to each other, the sort of spirits they are; and their natures range from the wickedest heathen to the most devout Christian, who has been led by some missionary or Christian worker, to Christ, either at his home, or since he came to these parts.

The great importance of reaching these men of Africa with the gospel may be seen from the fact that each man represents practically a native kraal or home, with anywhere from five to forty inmates. If one of these workers on the Rand, then gets truly born again, and proves faithful, when he returns to his kraal filled with the love of God, his influence for Christ will reach as far as that of half a dozen saved women. This is from the relative social position of men and women in Africa. The man is the ruler and the one of great importance, while the women are little or nothing more than the slaves and pawns of the men. If a woman is a Christian, she must yet obey her husband in all things. Sometimes the lot of the Christian woman is most deplorable. Custom backs up the husband in his heartless tyranny, and there are few laws as yet to emancipate her from her abject slavery. There are many women who would be saved, but for the fact that they are so brow-beaten by their cruel lords and are such slaves to these lazy tyrants, that they dare not take the step. There are many who do and who are able to stand, but their lot is surely unenviable, and sometimes almost unendurable. There have been incidents, however, where the wife who has been transformed by the grace of God, has been able to pray such conviction upon her spouse, that he has been won to Christ. These cases have, from what we can gather, been few and isolated.

When a man finds God, it is entirely different. The women and children who have been accustomed all their lives, to render obedient servitude, are not difficult to lead in the right path, just as they have been led in the wrong way. There are exceptions to this rule, true, but we speak now of generalities.

It is true that the men are more difficult to win to Christ than the women are. Drunkenness and licentiousness run riot. What else could be expected when opportunity for all manner of debauchery are so universally afforded? The tragedy of it all is that the white man has made such a shameless contribution to drunkenness and debauchery of the native, just for the sake of shekels. The best efforts of the societies that seek to uplift the native are thus sadly neutralized by conscienceless individuals who pander to the depraved tastes of the black man, for a sordid gain. Add to this the fact of the naturally darkened heart and mind of the heathen, with all of his inherent cruelty and wickedness, and we have set before us something of the situation that exists along the Rand. The Christian worker or missionary has to face these things everywhere. They are among his chiefest difficulties. They are recognized and taken into consideration by all who are engaged in the work of salvation of the heathen of Africa.

But, says some one, "Are not these discouraging aspects of the work destined to make the work difficult and uninviting?" If we look alone at the discouraging aspects, yes. If there were no encouraging facts, we might well be inclined to discouragement. But, it is not so. There are many proofs why the work of saving the men on the Rand is both a success and fraught with wonderful opportunity.

In the first instance, we may remark that there is an evident boredom among native men on the Rand, despite all the clap-trap and fuss, which are indulged in by heathen people in general, to find pleasure and satisfaction for the soul. The native dances, which are so much practiced by the African heathen, are an example. When one enters the compound, he hears the beating of the drums, on every hand. If we look carefully, we are able to detect an ennui and listlessness among the many, while those who are engaged in the dance are few, in many instances. It is true that when a great dance is put on, to which the white people come, as to a show, then there is great excitement, and the natives are all aglow with the frenzied feeling which causes them to dance until they fall from exhaustion. But, for the most part, when the men are not at work down in the mines or at the mills; or when they are not engaged in some other task of their own, they lie around on the ground, or sit idly, and seem to be anything but happy with the pleasures afforded them in the compounds.

In the second place, there is the native's innate desire to see anything new or novel. The missionary coming in with his workers, the sound of the gospel songs, or the appearance of the some "Umfundisi" from over the sea, having a novel effect upon the mind of the native, never fails to arrest his attention. The sons of Ham are innately curious, and many a hard heathen sinner has been won to Christ, who came to see the missionary and hear what he has to say, because his curiosity was aroused.

Again, we have, above all and more important than all else, the power of God to touch the heart and mind of even the darkest heathen soul. Where men can be called together to hear the truth, and where they stay to listen, especially those who have not been hardened by having heard often and rejected, there is always the possibility that those who sit in darkness and in the shadow of night, may be won for Christ, because the gospel is the power of God unto salvation,

MY LORD AND MY GOD.

Rev. Mark Guy Pearse.

St. John 20:28.

HE has not entered into the mystery of the blessed life who has not learnt to say this with all the strength of mind and heart—"My Lord and my God." We must know Christ the Lord as our own, our very own, taking him all to ourselves. My Lord, in perfect fitness and correspondence to my nature and my wants. My Lord, in the constancy of his presence with me, and in the completeness of his help. My Lord, in the fulness of his claim upon my love and faith and service. My Lord, in my appropriating him, having and holding him as wholly mine. Let us muse upon this until the fire kindle—how the gracious Lord comes to each of us in the distinctness of our character, and in the separateness of our circumstances, and teaches us each to say, "My Lord and my God."

What have we until we have learnt to say this?

Think of Thomas the disciple, the apostle, —Saint Thomas, if you will; yet so long as he stopped short of this, his high position and privilege availed him nothing. We envy him his knowledge of the Lord—the look, the tones, the manner, the words, the doings—all were vivid in his mind, yet all these memories only confused and bewildered him as he looked back upon them. He knew all about Jesus, but that knowledge left him lonely and despairing. He moved as in a dream, with all things wrapped in mist. His soul put forth trembling buds of hope—and then an icy fear swept over him and all was dead again. Alas, poor Thomas, a little to be blamed perhaps, yet wholly to be pitied! Ah, are there not today hosts of men and women like him? Men and women to whom Christ is only a Christ that was; they treasure his history, but they never know his presence. He is a memory, a text for endless sermons, a name on which to rest our creeds and theories. And such a knowledge leaves them as it left Thomas—in loneliness, in fear, haunted ever with doubt and failure.

But think of Thomas after this experience. He has put forth the finger and touched the wound-print. He has thrust his hand into that sacred side. Then all the heart leaped up and cried, "My Lord and my God." Joyful assurance like a tide swept and surged about his soul, filling every crevice and cranny with triumph. Every perception, every faculty of the mind, was filled and satisfied by that vision of the Lord. "My Lord,"—not dead,—himself, and now so much more than he was before. He has overcome death. He has proved himself triumphant over chief priests and Roman soldiers. He has conquered the powers of darkness; and now his great love, stronger than death and mightier than the grave, brings him back into the midst of his mourning disciples. My Lord, what cannot he do! Now every hope lives again; now is every dream and desire of the soul made possible. All within him was filled and thrilled and fired by the possession of such a Saviour. And all that this precious Lord is the disciple holds as his own—my Lord and my God.

Now that is where the Lord seeks to bring each one of us—right up to the point of this glad possession. Until we get there our religion cannot but be a sickly, sunless thing—little more than a fear and a failure. But think of the wealth of blessedness that is ours when the heart can say, "My Lord and my God." Not a dead Christ, not a memory, not afar off, but the Saviour mine—more close and intimate and constant than any other can be. My Lord, revealing himself to me as I need to know him. My Lord, gathering to himself by the constraint of his love all my love as his own; teaching me to find the brightness of his presence in all the common things of life; teaching me to bring all these common things into his service. My Lord, by such amazing proofs and pledges of love. My Lord, that I may find a heaven of rest in his care, a heaven of activity in his service, a heaven of joy in his presence. That is what the Lord would be to us.

In Christ there is the perfected humanity which makes him one with every man.

Think how we differ amongst ourselves. Think of differences of race, of nations; think of social differences; think of the infinite variety there is in character. Difference in stature is a measure of inches, but who can measure the difference in souls? Here are possibilities of such heights and depths—of endurance, of devotion, of love, of hatred, of cruelty; the soul can soar beyond the loftiest mountain peak and sit in heavenly places with Christ Jesus, or here and now it may sink away down into such depths that no nethermost hell is deeper or darker or hides more dreadful secrets than the soul may do. How are we shut away from each other! how few we ever know, and how few know us! Now and then we foreigners and strangers meet with someone who speaks our mother-tongue. We understand them at once, instinctively, and they understand us. Then there is fellowship. Fellow—it implies fitness; co-response—it answers to us; and some inner door of the heart is opened. But in Jesus Christ is the completed human nature that is broken up and divided amongst us. He is the blessed Fellow-man who fits us every one. He understands us perfectly and answers to us. He comes to each of us as none other can ever come, saying, "I am thy Friend, thy Brother. I understand thee, and can come and be at home with thee in the innermost chamber of thine heart." Here nationality is lost—there is neither Jew nor Greek. Here social distinctions cease to divide—there is neither bond nor free. Here external conditions vanish—there is neither circumcision nor uncircumcision. Here natural divisions no longer separate—there is neither male nor female.

Look at Christ in contact with individual cases. Take, for instance, the case of the disciples, and see how he led them one by one to himself. They were very unlike each other. Thomas and Peter were as wide asunder as the poles—Peter, swift, impulsive, rash; Thomas, slow, hesitating, and doubtful. And Peter must have often thought Thomas dreadfully reserved. Yet each could come to say perfectly, "My Lord and my God." Then there was John, looking into the heart of things and seeing them at a glance. How different from Philip, who needed to have things made very plain before he could see them at all! Now look at the all-wise Master dealing with these, bringing them each one to himself just according to their separate characters.

Take another illustration of this truth—that wherever Christ went he made every sufferer feel that he could do exactly what each needed. At once, instinctively, every needy one felt—"He can help me;" and each came to know him as my Lord, my Friend, my Healer.

Here is the leper; a hopeless case, if ever there was one. Incurable, and much more than that, making the sufferer to be abhorred and dreaded. But a passing glimpse of that face, the sound of that voice borne on the breeze, was enough. All within him felt that here was the very help he wanted. Watching his opportunity, he springs from his hiding-place and falls at the Master's feet. "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean."

Once, and only once, there came one with some doubt; with a word of hesitancy, as if not quite sure that Jesus could help him. It was the case of the man who went to the disciples before he found Jesus, and who got his heart chilled and his faith dimmed by their failure. He spoke with a faltering—"If thou canst do anything." At once Jesus took his "if" and put it where only it ever can be—in us, not in him: "If thou canst believe."

Again, see how the Lord deals with the two who come before us in this chapter—Mary Magdalene and Thomas. In the one case that is expressly bidden which in the other case is expressly forbidden. She who would touch, must not. He who would not, may. Look at the two cases. Mary Magdalene lingers in the garden, blinded by her grief. There before her stands the risen Lord, but she thinks it is the gardener. If the Saviour cannot reach her heart in one way, he will seek another; and if the eye know him not, he will appeal to the ear. He speaks to her with the old familiar tone of love. "Mary!" At once she is at his feet with joyful adoration. "My Master!" "Touch me not," said Jesus. "I am not yet ascended to my Father." It meant the tenderest care for her—as if he said: "Already at my going thine heart has been broken; and now to know Me again in any bodily presence will be only to renew thy grief. Wait until I ascend to my Father; and then when the Holy Ghost is given, thou shalt know Me in a deep, abiding, spiritual union that shall never be broken." But to Thomas the word is—"Reach hither thy finger: stretch forth thine hand." He is of another material; that bodily contact shall help the spiritual union. Then as the finger rested on that wound-print, and as the hand was laid against that sacred side, all his soul exulted in conscious possession of the risen Saviour—"My Lord and my God!"

Do not think that all this was possible for those early disciples and for those sufferers of old, in some easier way than it is for us today. Do not think for a moment that this conscious personal possession was made easier by his bodily presence. Far otherwise. Then Christ stood in a crowd, observed by many eyes; shut off by some distance from even those nearest to him; passing occasionally out of the midst of those who were most intimate with him. But the work of the Holy Spirit is much more directly a separate and personal work. Now no longer in the crowd, now no more as one of many, is Christ made known to us. He comes to us, away, alone, and by ourselves—"If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." A presence possessed by us as my Lord is now the very promise that he waits to fulfil to each of us.

Ideals for Earnest Youth.

Ideals for Earnest Youth is a charming book for young people of both sexes. It is neatly bound, excellent paper, good, clear print, 224 pages, short chapters, sometimes only two pages, frequently not more than three pages. This enables the young reader to catch up the book at a few spare moments, read a chapter and go to work, or on a journey, with something to think about. Let me give you a few of the chapters:

Self Respect, Self Mastery, The Joy of Living, Your Ideals, Courtship and Marriage, Take Care of Your Mind, The School of Struggles, Backbone vs. Wishbone, Team Work, Recreation.

The "Gospel" of a Union Seminary Student.

HAROLD PAUL SLOAN, in the Essentialist.

ONE day on a train in the middle West the writer fell in with an engaging young man, who had just finished his first year in Union Theological Seminary. His background was a Methodist College. He was an attractive youth, with a friendly way, a remarkable frankness, and an evident desire to do good. A conversation developed between us, which lasted for several hours. At its close the writer set down such parts as he could accurately and vividly remember. They are reproduced here, immediately after the student report on Liberalism, as an evidence of the truth of those findings.

Editor: You expect to preach this summer, what will be your Gospel?

Student: Socialism. We expect by high ethical teaching and example to achieve substantially an ideal world in less than a hundred years.

Editor: How does Christ come in? How do you regard him?

Student: He was a human being, better than the rest of us. I think Ghandi is very much like him. I would like to discuss with you the similarity between Ghandi and Christ. Don't you think they are very much alike?

Editor: I know something about Christ, but very little about Ghandi. I am not able to discuss the resemblances of this great Buddhist teacher to Jesus. You discuss it. I will be interested to hear you.

Student: Well, I guess I can't discuss it either, for I do not know much about Ghandi myself.

Editor: What do you believe at Union about the Virgin Birth?

Student: We don't believe in it. We magnify science, and the idea of virgin birth is biologically objectionable. Besides we know where the story of Jesus' Birth came from.

Editor: That is interesting. Where did it come from?

Student: Oh, the idea of virgin birth was common in Jesus' day. Lots of pagan heroes were supposed to have been virgin born.

Editor: Won't you mention one of these supposedly virgin born heroes?

Student: I can't. I do not remember any one in particular, but I know there were lots of them.

Editor: You are mistaken. There are none at all.

Student: Why I know better. There were lots of them. I read a book about it.

Editor: No, there were none. There were persons who were supposed to have been born as a result of cohabitation between the gods and women; but there were no pagans who were supposed to have been virgin born. Justin Martyr pointed out the distinction between these coarse pagan stories and the New Testament records of Jesus' Virgin Birth some eighteen hundred years ago.

Student: I never heard anything about that. I will have to look up what I was taught and see just what the facts are.

Editor: What do you believe about the Resurrection of Jesus?

Student: We do not believe that either. A resurrection from the dead is unscientific. Resurrections do not happen.

Editor: How do you think of God?

Student: As an unconscious finite will, immanent in the universe, working out his unconscious purpose. Your idea of God is anthropomorphic.

Editor: I am glad you used that word. It is a familiar word in Liberal circles, and I am anxious to know just how they are using it. What do you mean by anthropomorphic?

Student: Manlike, of course.

Editor: Yes, but manlike how? You do not suppose that Christians think of God specially as having hands and feet, do you?

Student: No.

Editor: Then what do you mean? Do you mean that Christian thinkers are anthropomorphic because they think of God as being a trinity of personalities?

Editor: You have been splendidly frank, and I have enjoyed talking to you. Will you answer me one other question? Why do Liberals so generally refuse to answer questions, and seek to avoid interviews where their exact views would be discovered?

Student: It depends upon what questions are asked them.

Editor: I recently asked a group of Liberals, including some of your professors, a set of questions dealing with the Deity of Christ, his bodily Resurrection and Virgin Birth, the authority and inspiration of the Bible, and such matters, and every one of them refused to answer me.

Student: Of course they did. I would have refused to answer you too if you had written me. We do not want the people to know that we deny these beliefs because we are afraid they would not like us, and that their resulting hostility toward us would embarrass us in our positive message.

Editor: You have no original positive message. Liberalism is only a negative criticism. Your ethical teachings you share with Historic Christianity. Christianity had already changed the face of history before Liberalism had ever been thought of. The civilization of the Roman Empire was an egoistic civilization. It was a system of power and tyranny. The Church changed this by preaching the Resurrection Life and Atoning Death of Jesus Christ. The ethics of Jesus which you stress were not the energy of that transformation. They were and are rather a guide in the self-expression of the new life begotten in men by the Holy Spirit when they believe upon Jesus at the point of his divine self-manifestation in the Resurrection, and of his Atonement on the Cross. I like to summarize the changes which the preaching of Jesus and the Resurrection made in pagan civilization by listing the ten major abuses of that age which Christianity has abolished.

Student: I recognize the historical truth of your statement about the influence of the doctrine of the Resurrection in primitive Christian preaching. Give me that list of ten great abuses which this preaching abolished.

In further support of the student statement that Liberalism and Historic Christianity are two divergent religions, two totally different philosophies of life, we append a letter from another young man, who heard Professor Fosdick during his recent appearance at Princeton, and who afterward, in company with another student, saw him in a private interview. I have two independent accounts of this address and interview, one by each of these young men. Each made his statement freely and imposed no limitations upon me in connection with it.

June 29, 1929.

Dear Brother Sloan: Over a month ago you wrote to me regarding the questions we asked Dr. Fosdick the night he was at Princeton. I will attempt to answer the questions you ask of me and perhaps give you a little bit more. I took notes on his lecture and then at the after meeting in Murray-Dodge Hall.

Dr. Fosdick said nothing about the birth of Christ that night. As to the resurrection, here is what he said, "I have grave doubts about the resurrection of Christ. If we had the original of the last chapter of Mark, it would be better. Mark first, then Matthew, Luke and John. I believe Christ is alive."

Then the third question which you asked me about, he did not refer to the miracles of Christ at all during the evening.

Then as to the Deity of Christ, here is what he said, "I do not believe in the previous existence of Christ, but that the love, etc., does and did exist in God. Logos came from pagan sources." In other words, Dr. Fosdick does not believe what John wrote when he quoted Christ as saying, "Before Abraham was, I am."

As to his lecture on the purpose of the ministry Dr. Fosdick mentioned Christ three times and Jesus twice. The gospel was not mentioned once.

Dr. Fosdick advises the students that the best way to prepare for the ministry is to take courses in philosophy, economics, and the basic sciences.

He did not refer to Bible study whether private or in class.

I have some more notes of his if the above are not enough. You have a right to quote any of these statements and I will certainly back them up.

Yours Sincerely.

There are two truths here that earnest Christian men need to ponder most seriously.

First, the student statement that Liberals do not want the Christian world to know how much of historic Christian truth they deny. A young man one year in Union has already definitely grasped the fact that it is important to conceal one's true position. Here is the explanation of the striking fact that not one Liberal answered the questions sent out to Liberals and Evangelicals at the beginning of this year. It is amazing that a movement which boasts that it is an ethical advance, and that claims to give central place to the Sermon on the Mount should allow itself to be so ethically compromised. The fact is Liberalism dare not be fully honest.

Second, the student conclusion that Liberalism and Christianity are two different religions. This is literally true. The two systems have a totally different historic background, a totally different psychology, and even a different metaphysics. Liberalism is no more Christianity than Mohammedanism or Buddhism.—Western Recorder.

May I Receive the Holy Ghost?

S. D. GORDON.

THE meaning of the question should be kept clear. Of course the Holy Spirit is in every one creatively. This is so regardless of our consent. It is his Creator-presence within that keeps us alive. (Job 27:3, 32:8, 33:4; Psa. 104:29-30; Acts 17:28-29; Daniel 5:23, (last clause).)

In a deeper meaning he is in every one who trusts Christ as a Saviour. (John 3:5-8). He comes in when we open the door of our lives to Jesus our Saviour. He comes in by our consent, through our opened door, and is free to do much more than the mere creative touch requires. He creates the new life within us, the Spirit life, the Christian life.

The real meaning commonly associated with the question is this: May I receive the Holy Spirit in his fullness, to dominate all my life, and my service, with his wondrous presence and his resistless, fragrant, gentle power? The question refers in reality not merely to his presence within, but to his freedom of action in us and through us, with our active consent and co-operation. May I?

Well, that depends. It depends on him, and it depends on me. It depends on him, because he won't come in if he is not wanted. He won't come in if the house of my life is made disagreeable or offensive to him.

It depends on me, because he can't come in except through the door I open to him from the inside. It depends most on me, because he wants to come in. He is eager to. He asks to be allowed to come. If I haven't yet definitely opened the door to him, he is waiting now, eagerly waiting, on my front

"THE GREATEST OF THESE."

B. F. DURLING.

IN considering the "Greatest Thing in the World," the question naturally arises, "What is the nature of that 'Greatest Thing!'" While many doubtless, have it as an experience, in defining it some might have great difficulty.

May we not say, love is that element which God breathed into man in that creative act by which he was made a living soul? God is love in its highest, infinite sense. Man was created in his image. May we not suppose that even in his wrecked, natural condition, man would retain some measure of that image? In the complete restoration of that image, the original perfect love will be regained.

While there may be difficulty in defining this great element, it may be easier to note some of its effects. As in the case of electricity, definition may be difficult. To note effects may be far easier.

As to the effects of love, one is its great power to attract. Thus it becomes a mighty bond of union. This is especially true in the spiritual realm. This finds fit illustration in the material system, where Gravitation is the mighty bond holding the starry universe in a unity wherein millions of worlds move with a faultless rhythm.

So in this higher spiritual realm love is the divine gravitation. Thus is to be realized that oneness of discipleship which Jesus so much desired when he prayed, "That they all may be one," even as he and the Father were one.

It is the nature of love to crave love in return. How true this is in the family relationship. It seeks to find a resting-place in a reciprocating heart or hearts. The only perfect resting-place for a human heart is in God. It may seek that rest elsewhere, but it will be in vain. It was created with a capacity so abysmal, that nothing less than its Creator can satisfy its craving. True, God has so constituted the human heart that it can find what may be termed a secondary rest in other human hearts. This may be especially true when those hearts are filled with divine love. No one knows love in its highest sense if he have not this blended love, the human and the divine. When a home is founded upon that, if it be the real thing, truly it becomes the symbol of the home celestial. The true earthly and the heavenly home are both founded upon love.

Nor this alone, but Jesus designed that love should unite all his earthly followers into one great family, a spiritual family here on earth. While this may be compatible with some denominational lines yet the spirit of Christ-like love should oversweep all such lines. The fact that we are Presbyterians or Baptists, Episcopalians or Methodists should be submerged in the great sea of divine love. All are one in the great love. The great Father-Heart without distinction is pouring the divine tides through every welcoming heart. How sweet, how satisfying, how eternal the great element in which we live and move! As the great sea pours its tides upon the shores, so the divine sea laves waiting hearts, yea, even upon closed hearts, they come beating, beating in wooing tenderness.

Not only does God give his love, but also he desires love in return. It is said that the more noble one's nature is the greater is the hunger for the return of love. What then must be the craving of Jesus for the love of those to whom he has given himself. It is a matter for astonishment that any would withhold from him the tribute of a deep affection.

Indeed the love which one has for him who has been so much to us, should lead one to dedicate to him all one's being and possessions. We owe it not only to him but to ourselves as well. Only thus can the noblest character be attained. Our powers need the transforming touch of God to reach their highest. Otherwise the inevitable drift will be to evil.

In the case of ambition, if this be not under the dominion of love, then selfishness is certain. Effort will center in self and too often it will be at the expense of others.

Even the opposition to evil if it be not tempered with love may degenerate into censoriousness. Our benevolent disposition needs love lest it be moved not by compassion and sympathy but by the praise of men.

God's pure love has power to transform the nature. Beautiful in many respects as Nature's gift of love may be, it needs the transforming power of God's great love. Much as one may owe to Nature's gentle gift, still it is not sufficient to grapple with the inborn evils which inhabit the natural heart. It may appear to accomplish some surface work, but behold, somewhere else the evil breaks out with increasing power.

Nothing save the power of him who created man can create him anew in divine love. Well did the great preacher speak of the "Expulsive Power of a new Affection." God dwelling unhindered within the soul is needed to prepare one for life here and hereafter. Nothing less will be sufficient.

There comes to us now the thought, that while God dwells in our hearts, we dwell in God's heart. Oh, marvelous thought! and yet the Word says that our life is hid with Christ in God. It also speaks of Christ's dwelling in the Bosom of the Father. Ah, how rich are these suggestions. To what heights will divine love carry us. Looking in thought far down the ages as they make their flight through the abyss of Eternity, to what strength and sweetness will this union of the divine and the human grow! What will be the height and depth, the length and breadth of our Father's love! And it will be endless. Oh, Eternity, how wonderful that thought! And still more wonderful our divine Father whose love is forever enfolding us. Oh, love divine brought down from Heaven to us in the heart of Jesus, be ours forever and ever. Then will our love grow into an eternal adoration.

God's Searchlight.

W. M. ZIMMERMAN.

Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts. And see if there be any wicked way (way of pain) in me, and lead me in the way everlasting. Psal. 139: 23, 24.

Verses 1-7 acknowledge God's omniscience or his universal knowledge. Verses 7-18 his omnipresence or his being everywhere present. If God knows everything and is everywhere present, then he is the One who is qualified to search hearts.

I. David requests God to search him and not some one else. Many want the "other fellow" to be searched, but David was one at heart, who requested an inventory of what he had on hands. "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup." 1 Cor. 11:28. Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts. And see if there be any wicked way in me; and lead me in the way everlasting.

Dr. Adam Clarke says: "David needed to offer this prayer, while filled with indignation against the ways of the workers of iniquity; for he who hates, utterly hates, the practices of any man, is not far from hating the man himself. It is very difficult 'To hate the sin with all the heart, and yet the sinner love.'"

II. How does God search the heart? Time and space would fail us to tell how God searches one when in solitude, or in adversity, in sorrow, or in serious thought, in noble aspiration, in memory perhaps of better days that are past and gone. Add to this the effect of his Word, which is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart, and being applied by the Holy Spirit, who sends the truth home with overwhelming power.

In 2 Sam. 11:27, we read, "The thing David had done displeased the Lord." When anyone is condemned by his conscience for anything that cannot bear the light of heaven, it is "God's searchlight" striving to get the sinner to go down before God until the eclipse has passed away and joy and light take its place.

The church at Corinth were babes in Christ, but were yet carnal," as evidenced by their strife. How many churches are like this only the pastors know too well! Strange it is that they will not let God remove the "wicked way" that is within them.

The margin has it "Way of pain." That sinners have an evil heart that is a "way of pain" we know, but does this apply to God's people? No! Then we should expect to find peace, joy, love and co-operation. You answer, many professing holiness are like the Pilgrims who sought religious liberty then became persecutors themselves. We answer, all such are deceived. Perfect love as described in 1 Cor. 13, is the gauge that tells whether we are up to the standard or in today's language, we have a "flat tire."

The Negro Spirituals are songs sung by the colored people and are very popular. One is entitled "Standin' in the Need of Prayer."

1. "Not my brother, nor my sister, but it's me, O Lord, Standin' in the need of prayer:" (lines repeated)

Cho. "It's me, it's me, O Lord, standin' in the need of prayer." (lines repeated)

2. "Not the preacher, nor the deacon, but it's me, O Lord," etc.

David felt his own need, and that is the burden of the above song.

"I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth thee. Wherefore I abhor myself, and repent in sackcloth and ashes." Job 42: 5, 6. Job must have had a vision of his own need when he uttered these words.

"And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver; and he shall purify the sons of Levi; and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness." Mal. 3:3.

Will the reader make David's prayer his own and allow God to make him the man his heart tells him he should be? Amen!

here, as in all the world. God's power seems to be outpoured in a most wonderful way upon those who are giving their lives for the heathen, while many of those who are staying away when they might and should come, are dry, and fail to have the power of God upon them. There is no need or room here for a ministry that is tainted with a spirit of commercialism, nor is there room or place for mere pulpitiere, eloquent though they may be; but there is room and great need for men filled with the Holy Ghost, and who will come without the promise of a dollar, and win these black men to Christ.

Last, but not the least, we have the example of the power of God to save, in many of these African men, who are so transformed by the power of God that their lives are a wonder to all. We have looked into the shining faces of men who have been saved through the efforts of compound missionaries, and who are standing like Gibraltar for God and holiness. Their lives count in a most remarkable way. Their influence is felt all through the compounds; and their example is most wholesome.

These, and many other infallible proofs, tell us that there is in the gold mining region of South Africa, a golden opportunity for some men to come and pour out their souls in Holy Ghost preaching, and in importunate praying, to win a host of priceless ebony jewels for the crowning day.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

FROM THE BATTLEFIELD.

We are happy to report that the year of 1929 goes down on record as one of the greatest and most fruitful years in our nearly thirty years of evangelistic labors. We have held nineteen revivals and camp meetings during the year, witnessing over twelve hundred souls saved, reclaimed and sanctified and scores cast their lot with the church. Have held fifteen Rescue Rallies, conducted fourteen Sunday school Rallies; raised many poundings for the pastors, conducted Missionary Rallies and raised many hundreds of dollars for churches and camps. Have been treated with the kindest consideration by churches, pastors, camp meeting committees and the generous public. We return next year, late in July and first of August to grand old Ft. Jessup camp, Many, La., then to that famous old camp of Bonnie, near Mt. Vernon, Ill. This is one of the great camps of Illinois.

We love God and scriptural holiness, the same doctrine and experience that Godbey, Morrison, Huff, Ferguson, Pickett, Hughes and a host of that type and others who have out-stripped us in the race of life. Our slate for winter, spring and next summer is filling, and we solicit correspondence to our home address, Box 918, B:thany, Okla. We must have greater revivals, promote holiness, build the church, win souls and extend his kingdom in all the earth. Yours and his in the fullness of the blessing, Allie and Emma Irick.

FROST BRIDGE CAMP, MISSISSIPPI.

The Frost Bridge camp meeting was held in August, beginning on Friday 16th, and closing Sunday 25th. Services were in charge of the Rev. Don Householder, of Los Angeles, Calif., and the music conducted by Prof. John H. Furbay and Mrs. Furbay, of Taylor University, Ind. Both evangelist and musicians did a splendid work and the interest manifested by the people was greater than we have witnessed in a decade. We were blessed with good weather which gave neighboring communities an opportunity to attend, and made the Sunday crowds unusually large. An encouraging number of souls found salvation, a few were reclaimed, and still others received the blessing of sanctification.

Bro. Householder and Bro. Furbay are able and zealous workers for the cause of Christ, and we feel that we have been accorded a gracious privilege by having been in a meeting with them. We hope, with God's help, to materialize certain plans for the enlargement of the tabernacle before the meeting of another camp. The future is bright and we are looking forward to years more fruitful still.

Campground Committee.

REPORT OF R. P. MARSHALL AND WIFE.

Since our last report we have assisted in three meetings; two last month and one this month. The first was with the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in our home town. This was a good meeting, but with small visible results. The next was with the Presbyterian Church of Russellville, Ky., where we were associated with Col. Guy Green, of Kansas City.

After attending the Louisville Conference, we rushed to Plaquemine, La., to assist W. E. Thomas in a meeting with the local Methodist Church. A more unpromising situation we never saw. The city was 95 percent Catholic, and the poor, struggling Protestant churches had about given up, and gone into a state of formalism. Never in the history of the town had there been a real revival. As always there were difficulties, but the last week of the meeting saw the tent filled every night and the outside lined with Catholics who were afraid to come in. As to visible results, fourteen joined the church and many came forward for prayer. Bro. Thomas gave some splendid sermons and handled several tight situations with unsurpassed diplomacy and Christian spirit.

Our next meeting will be with Bro. Thomas at Central City, Ky., where we will assist our good friend H. H. Jones and his splendid people. Pray for us there.

REPORT.

It has been some time since we have given a report of our revival work in the field. Our first tent meeting this summer was in West Indianapolis. The Lord gave us a good meeting and about 35 souls found God. The writer had charge of the singing and Mrs. Shaw did the preaching. We found some old-fashion Methodist people there who stood by us and helped push the battle.

From there we went to Mt. Hope Camp in Kentucky. Our co-workers there were Rev. T. P. Roberts and daughter of Wilmore, Ky. Brother Roberts is a good preacher and we worked together just fine, this being my second camp with him. We had one of the best camps that had been there for years, and the last Sunday a crowd of three thousand people, and a number of souls found God in the pardon of sin.

Our next meeting was at Dalesburg, Ky., in a Tabernacle with the Pilgrim Holiness people, where Rev. S. R. Mattox is pastor. We learned to love the people there and the pastor stood by us and we thank God for good Christian people like Bro. and Sister Mattox. We also got acquainted with their District Supt. Brother Simpson. Thank God for men like Bro. Simpson. We need them in the field.

Next we went to Oak Woods Tabernacle, for ten days. There we had to push the battle alone but God gave us victory. Four souls found the Lord and they want us back there next year.

We are now in Covington, Ky., in P. H. Church in a revival. Big crowds and some have found the Lord here. We go Sunday to Maysville, Ky., for a two-weeks' meeting with Rev. Carpenter, pastor. Then on to Tollesboro, Ky., and on and on. Pray for us. We need your prayers. If any church or mission is in need of a revival you can write us at this address, 1062 Division St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Blish R. and Mary Shaw.

GREENSBURG, KENTUCKY.

This has been a great year for me. I was called to Portsmouth, Va., in March; we had a gracious meeting there with the good pastor, S. W. Phillips. The battle was hard but God gave us a great meeting.

From there I was called to Benson, N. C., to the First M. E. Church. Dr. Jerry M. Glenn was the evangelist, and I am sure that I have never met a more lovable man. I have never met any better people any place than I did in Benson. God's power was wonderfully manifested there. Pastors would make no mistake in calling Dr. Glenn for a meeting. From Benson, I went to Wallins, Ky., where we had a great time. God's Spirit came in mighty power and many souls were saved or sanctified.

My next call was to Indian Springs to the great Southern Holiness camp meeting. Dr. Owen and Dr. Paul of Taylor University were the evangelists. I had the time of my life singing and praising God with the Indian Springs folk. From here I went to Normal, Ill., camp meeting with Dr. C. B. Fugitt and Dr. A. L. Whitcomb. I could report other meetings that were most gracious and victorious. I am now in the Nazarene Church of Atlanta with Dr. C. H. Babcock as evangelist. I go from here with Dr. Babcock to Collingswood, N. J., in the First M. E. Church. Pray for me.

Yours for Jesus,

E. C. Milby.

KINGSWOOD CAMP AND ASSEMBLY.

Some weeks ago I gave 21 reasons why you ought to attend the Kingswood Holiness College Camp Meeting and the Kentucky District Assembly. Now that that Camp and Assembly is history, it gives me pleasure to report that we were surely justified in asking you to be with us. All our 21 reasons came true save two or three and those were unavoidable. But the dear Lord more than made up to us all that seemed to be a loss.

Bro. Chas. Stalker could not be here because of the death of a relative. The Lord mightily anointed our dear Brother Seth C. Rees, our General Superintendent, and strengthened him physically for the occasion. His messages were with demonstration and with power. Great altar services followed these sermons of truth.

Rev. Andy Dolbow is a cyclone of fire and power. His shouts and testimonies were so used of the Lord that at times the saints were swept in to holy ecstasies of joy. At one time the glory so swept the camp that for more than one hour the saints wept, shouted, laughed, danced and ran for very joy. Those who experienced this hour of holy rapture will not soon forget it.

This Camp and Assembly were the largest ever held in this District. Brethren were here from Delaware and Maryland on the East, California on the West, Florida on the South, New York and Michigan on the North. The visitors who were not Delegates to the Assembly enjoyed the Business Meeting in the morning. It was our first trial combining the two and it worked beautifully. We hope for greater things next year. One of the enjoyable as well as very helpful features of this Camp were those very instructive "Chalk-Talks" by our beloved Editor, Rev. W. C. Stone. Every Church should have Bro. Stone come and give these talks. They are helpful to old and young.

Thursday afternoon was Foreign Missionary Service, and it was one of the best we ever attended. The melting, tender power of God was in evidence. Each speaker seemed at his best. The offering exceeded anything ever given here—over $3600.00 in cash and pledges.

Friday afternoon was Orphanage Service. The platform was filled with nearly 60 orphans and the workers. The children sang and quoted Scripture, testified and shouted until the entire audience was moved to tears and then to shouts of joy. Again the saints gave with joy—about $1200.00—and the promise of a new pair of shoes for every boy and girl in the home. Oh, that every Pilgrim could have been in this service.

On Sunday the morning service was given over to Kingswood Holiness College, our President, Rev. Walter Surbrook in charge. It was a timely service. A large number of new and old students were on hand to take part. The offering came to about $1500.00. This, with the offering for the camp expenses, made a total offering taken during the camp of over $7000.00. Praise the Lord! But best of all, precious souls sought God throughout the entire camp.

All this making the very best camp we have ever had at Kingswood. Why not plan to be here next year?

Chas. L. Slater.

BROTHER BUCK'S REPORT.

After my stay in Pen Hande, Texas, for three weeks, I was privileged to meet Wm. Lambeson, formerly from Michigantown, Ind. He was wonderfully converted 33 years ago, and his family followed him. Twenty-two years ago he moved his family to Spring Lake, Tex. I met this brother five years ago and found him still smiling. A short time ago I went to his home at Plainview, and for hours we had a heart to heart talk, and he kept saying, "Oh, I am so glad the holiness people ever came to my town." Nine years ago his wife was called home to receive her crown. Through all these years he was always ready to meet you with a smile. Just one week after this visit, he had a stroke and never regained consciousness for three days. He then passed on to be with Jesus. He leaves three daughters and one son to mourn their great loss, although blessedly reconciled to the will of God, because they knew he was prepared to meet his God. I bless God that the holiness people die well. I laid his dust to rest, bade it goodbye, and hurried to the Charleston, Ill., camp. Here I met Brother D. C. Shearer, Dist. Supt. for the first time in nineteen years. I was delighted to meet him and his wife and learn of the great work they are doing. About twenty-five years ago I found him at New London, Ind., a very dry Quaker, but through the operation of the Holy Spirit, he became an "Earth-Quaker." The Lord bless him more and more, and his good wife included. Amen.

After this trip I shall take a flying trip to White Haven, Pa., for five weeks to line up for my winter campaign. I preached one night in the M. E. South, at Plainview, Texas; more than fifty rushed to the altar. Oh, the hungry people for holiness. When I left them, this Scripture came to me, "My people do perish for the lack of knowledge." How can we reach them? Don't abuse these people, but let us pity them.

Yours for holiness.

A. D. Buck.

CHARLESTON, WEST VIRGINIA.

We are glad to report precious victory through the Blood of Jesus. Since last February God has been graciously with us in eight meetings. During these meetings, except the last, I have had the help of a precious brother, Rev. Howard Gothrie, who now has left me to attend Bible School.

Our first meeting was with the Pilgrim Holiness Church at Ann Harbor. God was there. While it was largely a revival within the church, we feel it was profitable and trust the church there was helped. We believe some definite and lasting victories were won. Bro. Morningstar, the pastor, and his good people stood by and supported loyally in every way.

From there we went to Three Mile, West Va., uninvited, but led by God. We were heartily received. It was pioneer work. God gave victory. A small Pilgrim Holiness Church was organized, about $800 pledged for a church building and the building is now under construction.

Our next two meetings were with the Household of Faith Mission people at Pt. Pleasant, West Va., and Oak Hill, Ohio. At both places God gave some very definite and positive victories. These good folks gave us every Christian courtesy. We trust we may have been helpful to these churches.

With the Nazarene Mission at Lansing, Mich., our meeting was small but not futile. We had some victory and trust the meeting was a stepping stone to a church that will do things for God. Those carrying the burden there are few but self-sacrificing. It is a new and needy field but promising.

We turned to Three Mile, West Va., for a tent meeting in June, to find the church moving onward and upward. The devil was arrayed but we had a good little meeting. Next we went near Elkview and there found some real saints and God gave us a good meeting and folks in the Fountain.

At present I am with the Pilgrim Holiness people in a tent meeting at Charleston, W. Va. God is blessing. The pastor, O. W. Barnes, and the church in the majority, are standing faithfully by. This is a hard battle but victory is appearing. We claim it. We are expecting a number more to pray through before the meeting closes.

We haven't had any "landslides" in all our meetings, but believe some have settled for Eternity to go with God. Would like to see crowds seeking God but praise him for the few who really pay the price.

Grace Before Meals.

The same grace repeated time after time often becomes so commonplace and mechanical that we are prone to forget its real meaning. "Grace Before Meals" is not the product of one mind, but the assembled expressions of many devout servants of God. There is an appropriate grace for every day in the year. This little book has been used very effectively in teaching the different members of the family to say grace. It contains 167 pages, is neatly printed and bound. Price 50c.

man asking him to drop in and settle account. There was no threat to cut off the gas, turn off the electricity or come and take the telephone out of his house. The changes in the styles, high prices for spring, summer, autumn and winter hats were unknown to him and his family. Silk stockings had not been discovered. He was not out a nickel a year for newspapers, magazines, school-books, the latest novels, or the recent translation and abridgements of the New Testament. When there was a death in his family there was no doctor's bill to settle. He bought no lot in the cemetery. He had no daughters in high-priced colleges. He paid no fines for drunken, rollicking sons, in order to keep them out of prison and save the respectable name of his family. He was at no extra expense for the entertainment of aristocratic week-end visitors. He had no temptation to mortgage his bark hut in order to buy a finer automobile on a credit than that owned by his brother-in-law. All of these things come in unending procession and ever-increasing numbers with advanced civilization.

The civilized man wants a house, if possible, a mansion. He wants food, the best of it, in vast variety, gathered from many countries and climes. He wants clothing, comfortable, elegant, and changes for a variety of temperature and occasion. He wants his table covered with papers, magazines, illustrated weeklies, and the latest books. He wants a library filled with thousands of volumes. He wants his house decorated with art. There must be expensive furniture, soft carpets, beautiful grounds, ornamented with shrubbery and flowers.

The civilized man wants to educate his children to the best advantage. He wants to travel; if possible, must see the world. He is not satisfied with the supply of his needs. He has intense desires for things he does not need. He is in great danger of becoming corrupted with ambitions and extravagant desires. He would have a winter home in southern climes radiant with sunshine, and a summer home in high mountains, in northern regions. Heavy expenses pile up for the civilized man. Bills flow in upon him in great numbers at the first of every month. Much of the time he is driven like a slave with the lash of his desires and those of his family. He gets his heart and thought fixed on things on the earth. He has no time for meditation, for prayer, for hiding away in communion with his Lord. He hurries from his home to places of business, from his business to places of pleasure, from plenty to extravagance, extravagance to luxury, from luxuries to intemperance, from intemperance to dishonesty, and on and on to the strangling of every spiritual impulse. He is swallowed up with worldly longings and lusts.

He may have made a profession of religion. He may be a church member. He perhaps makes contributions, possibly large contributions, for the support of the church, but he knows nothing of the life hid with Christ in God. His affections are set upon the things of the world. If he was ever converted, the holy fires which once burned upon the altars of his heart are extinguished. He walks in darkness. He becomes a doubter. He is the easy victim of false teachers. He is glad to give up the old faith in the Bible that called for a righteous life. He listens with eager attention to those who deny the Virgin Birth of Christ. He is glad to believe that he is evolved from the animal and is on his way up to something larger and better than, somewhere in the distant millenniums or millions of years, his posterity may attain to a wonderful state of unselfish goodness. He rejoices when you tell him there is no hell, he need not fear death; there is no holiness, he need not hunger and thirst after righteousness; that there is in him no old man of sin to be crucified, no new man of regeneration to be sought with all his heart. He becomes dead in trespasses and in sins and his dead conscience makes little or no protest against selfishness, covetousness, the trickery of trade and commerce, the over-reaching of his fellows, the grinding of the poor, the mad race for wealth and its false promises of contentment.

It is not strange that in a world like this even ministers of the Gospel should become ambitious for place and power in the church, large salaries, high sounding degrees and to love to be greeted as Rabbi in the market places. They, too, with all others in the Christian Church who are seeking to make their way to heaven, need to be exhorted to set their affections on things above, not on things on the earth. The Apostle uses strong language here, and most suggestive. He says, "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." This is a very strong figure of speech. They were not physically dead. They still lived and moved among men, but they were supposed to have crucified worldly ambitions, inordinate desires for wealth, luxury, and all those temporal things which administer to appetites, and passions which govern the carnally-minded.

They had passed through a strange and gracious process which destroys sin, and of course with it sinful ambitions and desires for those things that administer to the gratification of a sinful nature. They were living a hidden life. They were sheltered in the cleft of the Rock of Ages. Their longings and desires went out to their Lord. He was their desire, the delight of their souls. The Apostle says, "He is our life." He calls attention to the fact that Christ will appear in glory, that he will come again in great triumph and that those who are dead to sin, whose lives are hid in him will appear with him in his glory. He calls our attention to a most gracious Christian experience—dead to the world, its passions, its desires, its pursuits. They are industrious, to be sure, economical, thrifty, but all the time recognizing their stewardship, that we are laboring, not with selfish and carnal motives, but for our Christ and our fellowbeings, and that we are kept separated from the world and on the tiptoe of a joyful hope and anticipation of that greatest of all days, and most glorious of all hours, when our Lord shall appear and we shall appear with him in his triumph and glory.

We do not believe that there is any greater stimulant to a whole-hearted consecration, a life of self-sacrifice and devotion, of separation from every phase of worldliness that is tainted with wickedness, than that we should stimulate our enthusiasm, strengthen our faith, and fan the fires of holy love within our hearts with the thought of the great fact that our Lord Jesus shall re-appear on earth; that he will surely come, that he will come in glory and power, and if he should tarry until we have experienced the great change called death, we shall come with him. If he should come before our physical dissolution, we shall be changed and caught up to meet him.

Faith in these coming events, and the hopes and joys which they inspire, wield a powerful influence to draw us away from the desires and affections for the things which perish, the mere material, and tremendously influence us to set our affections on things above, to hide ourselves more completely from the turmoil and strife of the world and the snares of the wicked one. It is our privilege to have Christ indwell us and, by faith, to dwell in him, and to wait with earnest prayer and joyful service until the temporal things shall perish and the eternal things—the treasures which have been laid up in Heaven—shall be brought out into undiminished joyful uses, while the ceaseless ages roll. Let us heed the Apostle and set our affections on the high things, things entirely above and outside of those things that perish with the using, that cannot administer to the satisfaction of the soul or bring us into closer and more intimate fellowship with him in whom our lives are hid, until we have the inexpressible joy of appearing with him in his glory.

Improving Slowly.

My two former sicknesses and confinements in the hospital so exhausted my health resources that I find that recuperation this time comes very slowly. I am quite better of the disease, but so very weak. I am hoping very much to be able, in a couple of weeks, to be carried to the train and sent away to Southwest Texas, where they assure me the dry, warm air, and almost constant sunshine, is the very best remedy for asthma. I am sorry to be calling the attention of the readers to myself, but many people write asking for information of my condition, and I take this method to inform them of my improvement. I have been able to sit up thirty minutes for several mornings, and yesterday and today was wheeled out in a rolling chair to the sun parlor. This has been encouraging to me. I thank you for your prayers. My nurse says that she is quite sure that prayers have been heard, for at least twice, I have appeared to be as near death as any patient she has ever nursed who did not die, and that both times I rallied and came back, she believes, in answer to prayer. I am grateful to these praying friends, and trust they may continue to mention me at the throne of grace. May God's will be done.

Your brother,

The Passing of Dr. W. P. Harvey.

On September 29, in Louisville, Rev. W. P. Harvey, D.D., of the Baptist Church, passed away. He was 88 years of age.

Many years ago, when I was starting the publication of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, and meeting with very strenuous opposition, I was fortunate in making the acquaintance of Dr. Harvey. We would meet often in our travels; he was at that time the business manager of The Western Recorder. He was a man endowed with unusual business knowledge, especially in religious papers. I frequently went to him with my problems and he was the best counsellor I had in those stormy days. He always manifested a genuine interest in my work, and I loved him very dearly.

When I came home from Florida last spring, and missed him from the streets I enquired about him many times, but was unfortunate in not finding any one who could tell me where he was. How I should liked to have visited him on his sick bed. He was a great Baptist, but he had brotherly love for Christian people of other denominations. I shall always cherish a memory of his friendship and kindly counsel to me in the days that are gone, and hope in the not so distant future, to meet him in the Father's House.

SUFFERING FOR JESUS.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

WE were reading "The Call to Prayer" recently, and in it was an account of the capture of one of our dear Asbury boys, H. C. Wesche, a doctor by the way, and the looting of the home of another one of our Asbury boys, Mr. Supernois. Miss Fern Tillman, recently returned to China from a furlough, during which time she was our nurse at Asbury College, was making her home with the Supernois family, and while they were on a trip to the mountains, everything they had was taken by the robbers, so when they returned "their house was left unto them desolate."

We were glad to learn that after about a month Dr. Wesche was liberated without any hurt, but the furnishings of the Supernois home have not, and cannot be entirely replaced, for they had some things that were very dear to them, which cannot be restored.

In another "Call to Prayer" there is an interesting letter from Bertha Warner, one of our Asbury girls, who has been in China for some time. I might say here for the encouragement of those who have invested in Asbury College, that we have some 106 of our young men and women on the foreign fields spreading the gospel of a full salvation. Asbury's products speak for her wherever they go. Miss Warner writes under the head, "Our Crying Need," which we print below, knowing you will read it with keen interest and prayerful solicitude:

OUR CRYING NEED.

BY BERTHA WARNER.

The other afternoon it was my privilege to take a hurried trip to Yangku where Miss Kortemeier and Miss Mitton are located. This was my first visit to that place; consequently there were many things of interest to me. I have been especially eager to see the Henry Clay Morrison Memorial Chapel. The building is brick and one of the nicest chapels we have and my heart rejoiced to see it.

All the time I was looking around at the building my thoughts kept turning to the man—Henry Clay Morrison. I thought of the number of times I have heard him in Chapel at Asbury College, the few times I have sat under his ministry at camp meetings, of his articles in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. I could almost hear him again calling out to the sinners in no uncertain tones, "Repent ye! Repent ye!" and hear his faithful warning to believers, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." My heart just naturally cried out, "Oh, how much we need a CHINESE Henry Clay Morrison today." A young man such as Dr. Morrison was with the zeal and love for souls that he had then and has carried through these years; a man with unflinching faith and courage though pressed by many foes; a man with holy boldness who will dare to proclaim the Truth; a godly man who can lead and feed his flock; a man who will stand out-and-out for God and his Word, because modernism or atheism is also creeping into China; a LEADER—the Chinese people are naturally not leaders—only God can make a Chinese into one by filling and baptizing him with his own Spirit. We have no greater need in China today. Our missionaries have been crying out for years for just this kind of a preacher as no doubt every true missionary all over China has been also. Doubtless Dr. Morrison will never see China again, but oh, that some young Chinese man might tarry until he is imbued with the mighty presence of God in a similar measure as Dr. Morrison has had through all these years and then that the Spirit of God might give to him also a like vision of lost souls among his own people.

Probably hidden away in some little corner of this world there is some person who has taken time daily to pray, and pray through, for Dr. Morrison. Perhaps this is the reason he has remained the great tower of strength that he has. I am wondering if God does not want to use someone, who will read these lines, to pray until the Henry Clay Morrison will be found in our midst and then keep on praying for him until his years of labor are at an end. This kind of a memorial cannot be purchased with your money, but can be obtained by your prayers.

Let me say in closing that my heart has been blessed and helped as I have thought upon these words "Unto you therefore which believe he is precious." 1 Peter 2:1. Jesus became unspeakably precious to my heart when I gave my life to him and believed him for my personal salvation, but I find that day by day as I believe him for bigger and bigger things he grows more and more precious.

Florida Holiness Camp Meeting.

The camp meetings held by the Holiness Association at Orlando, Fla., have been a gracious success from the very first. They not only have a good attendance from the community and many towns in the surrounding country, but quite a number of tourists, devout and earnest people, have attended, sympathized with and encouraged this work.

Up to this time, the Association has not been able to build, but have been using tents, and visitors have been renting rooms in the suburbs of Orlando. The brethren now have a most remarkable offer for very excellent property in the town of DeLand, Fla. From what they write to me the grounds are well located, quite accessible, and already have a number of buildings, cottages, in all, I believe, some thirty-eight structures on the ground, with water, sewerage and lights installed. They have been offered this property for $10,000. The parties owning it, want cash. It is really a great opportunity and the brethren are seeking pledges to be paid by the middle of December. I understand quite a number of people have pledged themselves to give $100. I believe it is an excellent investment for the spread of Christian Holiness. In these trying times, when unbelief is so broadcast, societies are organizing and actively trying to destroy faith in the Bible in a most aggressive and blasphemous way, and modernism is cooling off the zeal and sowing the seeds of doubt broadcast in the churches, those of us who believe in full salvation by faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, ought to do what we can to promote and spread abroad a gracious revival of salvation from all sin. Here is an opportunity, and a very rare one, to establish a permanent holiness camp meeting in Florida, where through the years, the full gospel may be preached and multitudes may find regeneration, reclamation and sanctification. Let any one who sympathizes with this great work notify Rev. E. C. Wills, P. O. Box 1944, Orlando, Fla., that they will become responsible for what ever sum they are willing to donate to this splendid opportunity for the spread of Bible holiness.

Faithfully your Brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

MAY I RECEIVE THE HOLY SPIRIT?

door-step, for me to open the door so he can come in.

The question is, may I? not can I? That throws the question back on me. That means, is it in my power to? And it certainly is. Not shall I? That throws it back on my purpose. And surely it will be my eager purpose to when I know how eager he is, and how much his presence, cultivated and unhindered, means. But may I? That means, is it possible for me? Is he willing to come into my life? And he certainly is, as eager to come in, as Jesus was eagerly willing to die for me.

Who is this Holy Spirit? He is Jesus' other self; Jesus' successor down here. (John 14:16-21, with numerous parallels.)

What does he do? He does in us what Jesus did for us, and is doing for us. (John 14:16-21; Acts 2:46-47.) Jesus died for our sins, to free us of them. The Holy Spirit makes us actually free from the power of sin. Jesus taught us to pray. The Holy Spirit puts the spirit of prayer within us. Jesus bids us help and win men. The Holy Spirit gives us a longing to help others. Jesus taught us to be perfect. The Holy Spirit makes us long for purity and actually makes us pure in heart, and increasingly pure in life. And so regarding the Book, and so on through all phases of Christian experience.

How do I receive the Holy Spirit? The answer may be put in many ways. Here is one simple answer: John seven, thirty-seven to thirty-nine, gives four words that stand for four steps, four simple steps, though one may go through them without analyzing and counting. Four words—"glorify," "thirst," "drink," "believe."

"Glorify" means enthroned: they glorified Jesus in Heaven on his return there by enthroning him. We glorify him in our lives by enthroning him as Master, actual Master, in all one's habits and life. This is the real battlefield, at the start, and then to keep him enthroned.

"Thirst" means intense desire. There must be in the intense desire for his full indwelling. Are you thirsty? (Isaiah 44:3, 35:6-7; John 4:13-14).

"Drink" means take. When the simple (but decisive, radical) act of enthroning is done then say to him, "I drink, I take, I now accept." And then add to your prayer, "I thank thee, I thank thee for coming in." Now that is settled. The Holy Spirit comes in at once in his fullness when the door swings open to him.

"Believe" means expect. As you go your common round, as the need comes, the emergency, the temptation, the opportunity, expect, expect his gracious power to meet the need. And he will. He never fails.

How shall I KNOW he has come in? There'll be inner evidence. Are you hungry for his power? That itself is an evidence of his presence within. Have you a desire to pray? Do you wish you could pray better? Do you long to understand the Book better? Does it draw you away for a reading? Do you long to be pure in heart? Do you earnestly want to overcome temptation? Have you an eager desire to get others to know Jesus? to help them? Is there a deep-down desire to please Jesus? These and the like are all evidences of the Holy Spirit's indwelling. (Galatians 5:22-24; Ephesians 5:9).

How can I have his fullness in a greater measure, constantly increasing and uninterrupted? Take a bit of quiet time off alone daily with the Book, listening, meditating, sitting quietly in his presence. This is giving him the fresh touch to reach and train and help. Underscore "quiet," mind, spirit, heart quiet; no straining after something; just holding one's self open. Make it the simple, dominating purpose to please him in everything. Always give him the benefit of the doubt. And when in doubt, don't.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

ADVENTURING IN GOODNESS.

Five boys stood on the street corner plotting mischief. They had nothing to do and it was Saturday and spring-time, and the call of the adventure was in the blood.

"Let's sneak down the street and ring the doorbell of Widow Jones. She hates that worse than poison," said one of the gang.

"Oh, that's too easy," said another. "Let's bum transfers and ride all day in the elevated trains."

"Nothing doing," said a third. "I'd rather raid the fruit stand of old John. He's too lame to catch us and his apples are all polished up."

The fifth boy now turned to the rest. "Listen, fellows," he said, "I ain't any better than the rest, but I got an idea. Miss Jackson said yesterday that there is more fun in an adventure in goodness than in anything else. She knows an awful lot and besides she's pretty. I'd like to try it just once."

"Oh, go on," said the first boy. "We ain't got time for that kind of stuff."

"Well, I don't know," said the third, "If there's fun in it we should worry. But what will we do?"

The fifth boy was equal to the demand.

"I got it all thought out," he said. "You know old Mrs. Sampson. Well, I saw her trying to cut up a load of kindling. What do you say we go get axes and cut it up for her and pile it in her cellar, too, and when she offers to pay us we'll all say: 'No, Mrs. Sampson, we don't take nothin'. We was just loafin' around, so we thought you might like a lift.'"

"It's a go," yelled the boys, and each one ran in a different direction for an ax. They were back in a moment, and a little later Mrs. Sampson straightened up her tired old back to look at five boys armed with axes standing all around her.

"Bless us!" cried the old lady. "What do you want?"

"Nothin'," said the first boy. "Just thought you might need some help."

"I can't hire you," said the elderly woman.

"Nobody can," said the second boy. "We're doing this for you just because we want to."

A half hour later five boys stood at Mrs. Sampson's door. The wood was all chopped and carted in.

"I can't believe it," said the old lady, with tears in her eyes. "I never see the beat of it."

"It ain't nothin'," said the fifth boy. "We were just adventurin' in goodness."

"God bless you," said Mrs. Sampson as she watched them walk away. "Here comes a policeman," yelled the first boy.

"Who cares?" said the second boy. "He ain't lookin' at us," said the third boy.

"It's great to know that he is a friend of ours," said the fourth boy. "Adventuring in goodness is the real stuff," said the fifth boy.

—From the "Journal of Education."

Dear Aunt Bettie: Thank you very much for printing my letter in The Herald. May the Lord bless you and the cousins. We are now in Sohag in the midst of our busy cool season's work, after a few weeks' rest at the sea during the extreme heat. We have over eighty enrolled in our school so far, and I teach in all the three rooms and give the class in the yard Bible lessons. I spend most of my time in the little folks room, teaching them the Arabic alphabet and Arabic number writing and give them Bible stories and a verse to learn three times a week. It is very interesting work. Two little boys are Moslems, and they have learned the verse I have taught them so far—1 John 4:11. I have taught them the stories of Moses and Samuel. In the big girls' room, I have classes in Genesis, Matthew and Luke. I give English lessons also, but enjoy teaching the Bible classes best.

It is of the Sunday school I wish especially to speak this time. Most of those who come to school and a few others attend it. We give them lessons from old charts that are sent to us, and in the past we used to give them Sunday school cards that were sent us from America, but we have not had any for a long time. These children love cards so, and even grown people, for most of them are very poor and live in mud houses. They often paste the cards on the walls for pictures to adorn their humble dwellings. When we have cards for them they come to Sunday school better. Please cousins, try to gather some bunches of cards and send me right away, putting on the packages, "printed matter," so there will be no customs to pay. Also charts and old scripture calendars can be used. Pray for us, and try to send some cards right away.

Beulah Bassett.
Sohag, Upper Egypt.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a South Carolina girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have dark brown hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, weigh 123 pounds, am five feet, seven inches in height. My birthday is June 17th. Have I a twin? Am eighteen years old. I am a Baptist, go to Sunday school and church every Sunday, except when I am not sick. Our pastor has gone on a vacation to West Virginia. His name is Rev. W. S. Bradshaw. If anybody ever loved a preacher it is Mr. Bradshaw. I hope Mr. W. B. is in the pantry eating cookies. I hope to see this in print, for it is the first letter I ever wrote to you. Whoever guesses my middle name I will write to them. It begins with a C and ends with A, and has four letters in it.

Bernice Brinson.
Alcolu, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and all of the cousins? Will you leave a chair for a Florida cousin to come in and join the happy throng? I suppose you will want to know something about me first of all. I am five feet, two, and weigh 109 pounds. I have light, bobbed hair and light complexion. I am in the ninth grade. I go to the Nazarene Church and Sunday school. My birthday is December 12 and I am thirteen. Have I a twin? If my twin will write to me I will answer the letter. I have one sister and four brothers. We live near the ocean. When we are at the beach we can see the ocean liners going back and forth. Have any of you cousins ever ridden on one of these ocean liners? I have. I went from New York to Key West. I have a little puppy for a pet and we call him Tip-py. How many of you cousins have been to Florida? We are trying to get a home in Wilmore, Ky., so all of us children can attend Asbury College. Before I close I am going to ask you a riddle. What great man's initials are the same as a nickname of a former President? Anybody who can answer this please write to me, and all of you who cannot write to me also and I will answer it for you. I hope to see this in print as it is my first letter to The Herald. If it is in print I will write again. With love to Aunt Bettie and all of the cousins.

Ernestine Rex.
231 S. E. 4th Av., Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a little boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade. My grandmother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it. I want to see my letter in print. I will have to quit.

John Edward Spencer.
Engelhard, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: They say that there is always room for one more, so there must be room for a girl from Ohio. I am in high school and have been for some time. In our high school it seems that no one loves Jesus, and they laugh at us because we uplift the blood-stained banner of Jesus. For the past two years I have been going about from place to place telling others of Jesus. In three or four years I want to be a missionary. As I have no friends that are Christians I wonder if some of the cousins of mine won't write. My birthday is on April 15. Do I have a twin? I have one sister who is younger than I. I play the piano for different meetings. I also sing some. Cousins, please write to me because I would love to have both the boys and girls to write to me. I am five feet, six inches tall, and have dark hair. I guess Viola Melon's name to be Beatrice. James Roy, the middle verse of the Bible is Psalm 118:8. The Bible contains 773,693 words, 31,102 verses, 1,189 chapters and 66 books. I think that's correct.

June Ballard.
305 Ross St., Steubenville, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am thirteen years old and am in the eighth grade at school. My mother takes The Herald and I sure do like to read page ten. My birthday is September 5. Have I a twin? Freda Hiller, I guess your name to be Ruth. Ruby Pickard, I guess your name to be Nell. Am I correct? I go to the Methodist Church. Our pastor is Rev. A. D. Houghlin. I sure do like him fine. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My Sunday school teacher is my mother. Well as my letter is getting long I will close hoping to see my letter in print.

Sarah Shaw.
Rt. 4, Paris, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little West Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old, am in the sixth grade, have dark brown hair and blue eyes; my weight is 72 pounds. I have three brothers and two sisters. If any of the cousins wish they may write to me. My sister, Audra Clark, wrote a letter, so I thought I would write one too.

Eloise Clark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please slip over and make room for a little North Carolina girl. I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade at school. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with N, and has seven letters in it. Wava L. Fulmer, I guess your middle name to be Lorene. If so, write me. Please put this in print as this is my first letter.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been a reader of The Herald for a number of years and think it is a fine paper. I am five feet tall, have dark brown hair (not bobbed), gray eyes and fair complexion. My age is between twenty-five and thirty. My birthday is July 2. The cousin guessing my correct age I will send a snapshot. My hobbies are reading and needle work. I am a member of the Christian Church. Cousins from the North, East, South and West all write and I will answer all letters received.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you allow me to jump into your jolly band for the first time? I surely will enjoy it. The letters are so interesting in The Herald. I want to tell you what a jolly time I have. I go to school every day. My school has begun. We sure have a good teacher; her name is Miss Mae Newman. We go to Mount Victory School. I have been going to school eight years and in the eighth grade. My deskmate is Evie Glen Rush. Now, you can open your eyes and imagine how I look. I weigh 108 pounds. My hair is light brown. I have fair complexion with blue eyes. I'm fourteen years old. My birthday is April 20. Can you find my twin? I have one sister and no brothers. I sure enjoy music. I also like to cook, sew, climb, ride horses, but best of all I like to read letters, so if anyone ever sees this in print, I would sure like to hear from them.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little West Texas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? About five years ago I had an accident which deprived me of my sight and I go to school at Austin, Texas, five hundred miles from my home. I come back home at Christmas and father and mother visit me in the spring. So you may guess that I grow very homesick in the term of school. I am a Christian and hope that I may do something to promote the kingdom of God on this earth. We and some of our neighbors went to church at Childress and had dinner at the park and played an hour or two before returning home. I can play the piano and enjoy playing very much. I am promoted to the sixth grade. I was twelve Sept. 12. Have I a twin? If I have please write to me. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with V and has eight letters in it, and ends with A.

FALLEN ASLEEP

COTTENGIM.

In memory of our darling little girl, Michia Imogene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. Maurice Cottengim, who fell asleep in Jesus, Sept. 12, 1929, age 5 years, 8 months and 22 days, following an operation for appendicitis. Funeral services were held in the home at Winchester, Ky., by Brother Crockett, of the M. E. Church, South. Interment in Winchester Cemetery. No more on earth will we hear the sound of her sweet voice, but we are assured that she will be waiting with outstretched arms in glory for mother, daddy, little brothers and all of her loved ones. As young as she was she had faith in Jesus. Just a few days before she died a friend stayed with her while her mother went to the train to meet her father. They were gone longer, I guess, than she thought they ought to be and she asked her to pray to the Lord to bring them safely back. When they would start on a trip she would ask the Lord to take care of them. She was so afraid of storms. She would say to me, "Mama, pray to the Lord to save us." She leaves to mourn her loss, mother, daddy, two little brothers, Ralph and Jackie, two grandmothers, and two grandfathers and many friends.

"A loved one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled."

While our hearts are sad at the passing of our dear little Imogene we know her suffering and pain are over and our heavenly Father had need of her in a better world. We will only think of her as safe in the arms of Jesus, and her going will only make heaven dearer and help us to live closer to God, and have the assurance of meeting our darling again in the land where we'll never grow old.

Her loving grandmother,
Mrs. Y. Chewning.

SETTLE.

We wish to announce the death of our beloved brother, M. G. Settle, who passed away Sept. 29, 1929. He was born near Bloomfield, Mo., and as he grew to manhood united with the Congregational Church and lived a devoted Christian. He was married when about twenty years of age, and was the father of two girls; he reared eleven orphan children who loved him like a father.

Brother Settle was married three times; he leaves a wife, one daughter and a number of friends to mourn his going. His death is a great loss to the church to which he belonged, as well as the neighborhood in which he lived. We feel sure that he has exchanged the old rugged cross for a crown and is enjoying the fruits of his labors. He was laid to rest in the Dogwood Cemetery on September 30. Rev. Manard preached the funeral sermon.

A Friend.

GAINES.

J. B. Gaines, son of Ira and Effie Gaines, was born near Frankfort, Ky., August 18, 1909; was taken ill with appendicitis, July 31. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Louisville, Ky., August 5, and was operated on August 6. He departed this life Aug. 11, just at daybreak, Sunday morning, making him nineteen years, eleven months and twenty-three days old.

He was converted and united with the Methodist Church, Charlestown, Ind., Feb. 7, 1929. While at the hospital he renewed his covenant with his Lord and died a triumphant Christian death, shouting and praising God and asking and receiving the promise of his loved ones who were present to meet him in heaven. One of the many good things he said was when he called his mother and told her good-bye, and said, "Tell all my friends good-bye, and tell them they will find me beyond the golden gates." Then he sang the chorus of the song, "God be with you till we meet again."

He is survived by his wife, two sons, Henry B., and Willie, his mother, father, three brothers, Clarence, Paul C., and Robert Francis, two sisters Florine and Pearl, and a host of friends and relatives. He was a kind father, a devoted husband and a true friend. The greatest consolation that we loved ones and friends have is to know that he has gone to be with Jesus and is now at rest.

Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. H. Wooldridge, which was thought by all to be a wonderful service. J. B. raised his hand and pointed toward heaven saying, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want." Such words by one departing this life makes it easy for a spiritual minister like this pastor to preach a funeral sermon.

His wife,
Lillie Gaines.

WANTED, A PREACHER. (At Hardscrabble Charge)

Rev. H. G. Wedding

Our Church wants a preacher, a preacher of fame,
Not too fond of sensation; nor too prosy and tame.

But one who has learning, devotion and skill,
And can live on a pittance will just fill the bill.

We feel in our hearts, we can justly expect,
He shall not be too young to command our respect.

Nor yet do we want one decrepit and old,
But one who will add to the strength of the fold.

The pastor we're seeking, and hoping to find,
Must be active, and earnest, and helpful, and kind.

Nor too conservative—fond of the past,
Nor yet too progressive, too daring or fast.

The success of our Church on the preacher depends,
So we trust he will know how to win hosts of friends.

He must not be frivolous, vapid or light,
Nor yet be so solemn our souls to affright.

There's one fault that all of our pastors have shown,
They expected that part of the time was their own.

But we have a right, for the money we pay, ($500.)
To call for their service, by night or by day.

In fact, we are waiting and hoping, some day,
An angelic pastor, may wander this way;

Who can live, work and suffer, yet never complain,
If sometimes he fails, all his dues to obtain.

Quite humble and meek, not puffed up with pride,
Nor greedy, nor selfish, nor dissatisfied.

But thankful to take what the Church may afford;
Knowing patience is ever its own best reward.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Will The Herald family please join with me in prayer for the salvation of my two sons, one who has recently lost his wife.—An Anxious Mother.

Pray mightily for a son that has threatened suicide.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VI.—Nov. 10, 1929.

Subject.—World Peace through Mutual Understanding.. Isa. 2:2-4; Acts 17:22-28; John 4:20, 21.

Golden Text.—They shall not hunt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea. Isa. 11:9.

Introduction.—It will be impossible to write satisfactory notes on this lesson. The three passages are so jumbled that anything bordering on a consistent connection among them is out of the question. The passage from Isaiah refers to the Millennium, when it will be gloriously fulfilled. In its fuller and more remote sense, it may refer to the glories of the renewed earth after the final judgment. The passage from the Acts and that from John refer definitely to this present age.

At first blush, one would suppose that every one would like to see peace on earth; but that is not true. Multitudes believe in war and love it. The World War taught us some lessons that we shall not soon forget. Destruction of life and property was so great, and the burden of debt left upon the nations is so heavy, that most of them prefer to wait awhile before engaging in another war. Another dread hangs over the nations: The implements of war have become so terrible that none but the foolhardy care to face them. Perhaps we should even be thankful for these fearful things that keep nations from going to war.

Of course, ideal peace among nations must come through good will and mutual understanding; but the morning star that is to usher in that glad day is yet below the horizon. We should, and we do, thank God for every sincere effort that is being made to avert war. Every lover of God and men must rejoice for every good treaty and for every peace pact among nations. Disarmament would be a blessed thing, could it be accomplished; but it cannot come in a day nor a year. Big military organizations will die hard. Men who promote them cannot be easily persuaded to surrender their prestige and their fat salaries.

Moneyed men, as a rule, do but little fighting; but they manage to make millions out of war. They are not likely to cry for peace as long as war will multiply dollars. Many of them will oppose international peace.

One of the hardest influences to combat is the war spirit that has for ages cursed the world. She has made heroes out of her military men. Monuments have been erected to their memory; and they have been lauded as the truly great men of earth. If wars are to cease, there must be a change in public sentiment. We must erect our monuments to great teachers and preachers, to scientists, and statesmen, to worth-while writers and noble philanthropists. These must become our heroes. The entire trend of current history must cut a new channel. Our school histories must be rewritten. Our children must be led to find their ideals of manhood and womanhood in nobler things than battlefields and shattered battleships. We must learn that there is more honor in the plain garments of the civilian than in the foppery of brass buttons and red tape.

Disarmament is our hardest battle. As long as nations prepare for war they will have war. No boy ever learns to box, who does not wish to test his skill. Men who always keep fishing tackle on hand are sure to fish when opportunity can be found. Preparedness will demand war forever more.

One thing will stop war forever: Take all the fight out of men. Nothing else will. Thank God, the day is coming when righteousness and peace will rule the world; but not now. God's glad day is in the future. When the High Priest comes out of the bridal chamber of the skies and Satan is shut up in the abyss for a thousand years, then will be universal peace among the nations. Then will they "beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks," and "learn war no more." Glad day; happy day. May God speed its dawning.

Comments on the Lesson.

2. In the last days.—These words are indefinite. They undoubtedly refer to a period far distant from the days of Isaiah. The first verse of the chapter refers them to "Judah and Jerusalem," but possibly only as the center of action. The mountain of the LORD'S house.—Here we have the symbol of God's kingdom. In the top of the mountains.—In that day Jehovah's kingdom will dominate all things. All nations shall flow unto it. Jerusalem will be the world's center of attraction.

3. Many will say.—Note the words which follow. They tell why the multitudes will be going to Jerusalem. Something tremendous is going to take place in that city, for "out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem." This is a millennial prophecy.

4. He shall judge among the nations.—Jesus shall rule all nations. He shall rebuke them for their bad living; and "they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks." In that glad day there shall be no more war; for by his express command the nations will learn war no more. Let us mitigate its horrors all we can; that is right and proper; but wars will never cease until Jesus comes back to earth to reign over men.

That is all millennial. Now we turn to matters that concern the current age. Acts 17:22. Paul.—The great apostle is on one of his missionary journeys and is preaching in Athens. Mar's Hill.—Sometimes called Areopagus. It was the seat of a great court whose members were known as Areopagites. It was there that Paul met the learned men of Athens, and delivered to them his celebrated speech. He was very adroit, but does not seem to have made much impression upon his hearers. Too superstitious.—The language is rather complimentary: "Very religious."

23. Beheld your devotions.—The objects of your worship, meaning their idols and shrines. TO THE UNKNOWN GOD.—They had no name for that one. In Greek the designation was simple: Agnostotheos.—They were so religious that they had more idols than names. Paul took this one to be the true God, and declared him unto the Areopagites—rather a bold thing to do.

Verses 24 and 25 are clear without comment; but verse 26 needs some. Why the word blood should be in our English text I do not know. It is not in the best Greek versions. Its presence weakens the text. This is literal: "And hath made of one every nation of men." That "one" was the original Adam. I am inclined, from this verse, to think that God never purposed that the different races should mix and intermix, as they are now doing. It breeds race trouble.

28. We are his offspring.—Paul is quoting from some Greek poet. His language is the essence of culture and politeness. His purpose was to win a hearing for the gospel; but as one reads his elegant speech, there comes a conviction that, possibly, he was just a bit too smooth. In other places, where his preaching was more jagged, he had far better success. Real sermons must come with a certain blunt boldness. The Holy Spirit is back of us.

John 4:21. Ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.—The Samaritans thought their sacred mountain was the proper place of worship, and the Jews thought Jerusalem was the proper place. I suppose Jesus is trying to tell this woman that one place is as good as any other, if one's heart is right toward God.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

The First Methodist Church of Lewisburg, Ky., Roy R. McDowell, pastor, held special meetings, Oct. 2-13, under the leadership of Guy W. Green, layman of Kansas City, Mo. The meeting was the most successful held by the church in many years. There were fourteen additions.

Mr. M. S. Shiveley, 328 E. Breckenridge, Louisville, Ky., is available to assist in meetings where a song leader is needed.

Rev. John E. Hewson, 127 N. Chester Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., has some open dates for fall and winter that he desires to give to any one desiring evangelistic assistance. Brother Hewson is an earnest preacher of the gospel and a soul winner.

Dora Geil: "Since the death of my companion, Paul Geil, I am continuing in the evangelistic work with Miss Lillian Hasselbring as helper. We recently closed a good meeting at Bloomsburg, Pa. We both sing, Miss Hasselbring plays the guitar, and I preach as God leads. We are open for dates and those wishing to get in touch with us may address us Frankfort, Ind., general delivery."

Rev. W. A. Vandersall is slated for a revival campaign at Lansdale, Pa., Nov. 17 to Dec 2. He is open for meetings in the east or anywhere. Address him 1208 North Cory Street, Findlay, Ohio.

Rev. Jos. H. Lewis, of Wilmore, Ky., has been appointed Conference Evangelist of the Kentucky Conference of the M. E. Church. He is making up his slate for the coming conference year and is open for calls. As not many meetings are held in Kentucky during the winter months of January to April, he will accept calls outside of his state. The past year has been a busy and a successful year for Bro. Lewis. A Joyous Christian series of meetings, in which many were saved or sanctified. His address is Wilmore, Ky.

The leading character in the story "The First Soprano" becomes such a happy Christian that her brother who was an unbeliever, seeks her happiness and finds Christ. The two together are very happy in their new experience and they win others through their solicitation and influence. The book has a missionary story that is worth the price of the book to any one; also one or more love affairs. It makes the most attractive and helpful Christmas book to be had on the market this year. It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky, and the price is $1.00.

Prayer is requested for the fall revival meeting at Mt. Carmel Academy, (Baby Asbury) in Breathitt Co., Ky., Oct. 24. Jos. H. Lewis, of Wilmore, Ky., will be the evangelist. Will you pray for the meeting?

Rev. L. Reep, Wilmore, Ky.: "I am ready to help any preacher in his revival for the salvation of souls, and also to send The Pentecostal Herald to any persons who feel they cannot spare the money for this great soul saving paper. Dr. Morrison's weekly paper has been the means of saving many, yes thousands, of souls by reading this good paper."

MY BIBLE.

We've traveled together,
My Bible and I,
Through all kinds of weather,
With smile or with sigh!
In sorrow or sunshine,
In tempest or calm,
Its friendship unchanging,
My lamp and my song!

We've traveled together,
My Bible and I,
When life had grown weary
And death e'en was nigh;
But all through the darkness
Of mist or of wrong,
I found it a solace,

A prayer and a song!

So now who shall part us,
My Bible and I?
Shall isms or schisms,
Or "New lights," who try?
Shall shadow for substance,
Or stone for good bread,
Supplant its sound wisdom,
Give folly instead?
Ah, no! my dear Bible,
Exponent of light!
Thou sword of the Spirit,
Put error to flight;
And still through life's journey,
Until my last sigh,
We'll travel together,
My Bible and I.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

—Basil Mathews
in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and His saving power in the lives of men." Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

My Sermon Notes

BY CHARLES H. SPURGEON
A selection from Outlines of Discourses Delivered by Mr. Spurgeon Covering the Entire Bible.

- Vol. 1. Genesis to Proverbs.

WHAT JESUS IS TO ME.

I'll sing what Jesus is to me—
My happy soul cannot refrain;
He died from sin to make me free,
My joy was purchased by His pain!
O, Day of Days! O, glorious Dawn,
When Christ, "the Lamb of God," was born!
All heaven above,—all earth below,
To Him let ceaseless praises flow!

Deliver from my sin and shame,
My dear Redeemer is to me;
A "Cleansing Fountain," praise His Name!
"Refiner" from all dross, is He.
He is "my Rock"—my "Safe Retreat"—
My Shelter from the storm and heat;
My faithful "Shield and Buckler," too,
And He's my "Great High Priest," so true.

Once, Jesus seemed to me,—somehow,
That formless "Root out of dry ground,"

But fair and "comely" to me now,
Since in me doth His "grace abound."

Now He's the spotless "Lamb of God,"
Who shed for me His "precious Blood,"

Who all my being doth control—
The blessed "Bridegroom of my soul!"

He is the "Rose of Sharon" sweet—
The "Lily of the Valley" fair;
The "Bread of Life," which all must eat

Who would, with Him, His kingdom share.

He's my "Exceeding Great Reward,"
The "Tree of Life," "my Lord, my God,"

Of whom my soul delights to sing—
"The Holy One," "Our Coming King!"

YOUNG PEOPLE, ATTENTION!

The Annual Convention of the Young People's Gospel League, a national organization of holiness young people, will be held Nov. 22-24, at Taylor University, Upland, Ind.

The aim has been to have the General Convention consist of necessary business and reports with the major emphasis upon the deepening of spiritual life and the empowering of the Holy Spirit. Rev. Paul S. Rees will be the main speaker of the Convention. Though only a young man, he is one of the leading preachers of today. Dr. Peter Wiseman, outstanding Canadian Holiness leader, Miss Anna McGhie, nationally known young people's worker, and other well-known speakers will address the Convention, giving inspiration and leading the young people into the deeper truths of his Word.

The discussion groups and business sessions will enable the Holiness young people from various parts of America to talk together about the problems they are facing, the plans they are making and the progress attained, in the advancement of his work.

We covet an interest in your prayers that his entire will may be accomplished in and through this Convention and the entire organization.

Taylor University has extended the magnanimous invitation of free enter-

"SPECIAL SACRED SONGS NO. 2." One of our customers writes as follows relative to the song, "Leave All To Him": "I have been confined to my bed for the past three years and when I heard the song, 'Leave All To Him,' I was greatly impressed by it. May the dear Lord inspire you to write many more and may His richest blessings rest upon you and yours."

The above song was written by Haldor Lilienas but is found only in "Special Sacred Songs No. 2," a book of 128 pages containing solos, duets, and quartets. The price is 60c the copy; two for $1.00. Order from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

Small Old Folks' Bible

India Paper Vest Pocket Testament and Psalms

This is one of the most attractive volumes to be had on the market on account of its small size, light weight and beautiful fine quality. Has a genuine goatskin binding, leather lined to edge, overlapping edges. A beautiful clear self-pronouncing nonpareil type, India paper, red under gold edges, silk headbands and marker, a few blank pages for notes. Size only 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 in. thick; weight only 3 ozs. The regular net price is $2.00; our sale price $1.50, or 5 of them for $6.00. A beautiful Christmas gift.

65 copies same size, style and quality as above, in the tan leather instead of black. We are offering these at $1.25 each, or $12.00 per dozen.

SHAM.

That is the title of one of the most startling books of fiction one has been our good fortune to read. Some years ago the same author wrote a book: "Prodigal Daughters," which was an eye-opener. This book is equally thrilling and thought provoking. It deals with the subject according to the title. The Sham is as bold and blatant, as the noted book, "Elmer Gantry," but it is clean, and on a high plane. All the story is handled in a way free from any of the slime of book mentioned, but in a way, the Sham is the outstanding message. We advise preachers and Christian workers to read this book. Then in the end it brings out the marvelous power of the gospel truth. You will not lay the book down until you have finished it.

Order from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

Your young friend that is inclined to be skeptical will read, enjoy and get help from our book, "The First Soprano." Price, $1.00.

PENTECOST.

By C. E. Hardy.

An ever unfolding theme. When he came into the movement for the promotion of holiness the author of this book found that the words pentecost and pentecostal were used in a way that he could not understand. He sought out thoroughly the origin and meaning of the word as used in the New Testament and has given us a brief but luminous statement on the gift of the Holy Spirit, discussing the relation which this blessing sustains to sanctification, to missions, and to the Second Coming of our Lord.

Price $1.00. Order of The Pentecostal Pub. Co., Louisville, Ky.

John Paul.

THE GOD OF THE LUCKY.

This is the title of one of the most thought-provoking books we have seen in many a day. It is by Dr. S. W. Purvis, a Methodist of Philadelphia. They are short sermons published in the "Philadelphia Bulletin," every Saturday, for many years. They are gems—thoughts bristling with vitality, and—pardon the slang—Punch. Any preacher could spend $1.25 no better than by ordering this book. There are about seventy-five of these short, spicy, thought tonics in the book. Get this book, brethren of the ministry—it will pay you. Order of The Pentecostal Pub. Co., Louisville, Ky.

THE MIRACLE IN BLACK.

Since my article under the above title appeared in The Herald, I have been bombarded from every nook and corner of the land—asking questions—as to where, when, who, etc. Some of them have been thoughtful enough to enclose a stamp; but many more have not. I am busy, every hour in the day—and part of the night. I wrote this story exactly as it happened. So, for self protection, I will say, that it happened in Jacksonville, Fla., in December, 1927. The parsonage was the Springfield Church, in that section of the city. There were two other preachers present and the wife of one. Since then, a new preacher occupies this parsonage, and I have heard nothing about "Ruby" since then. I have no explanations further than I first wrote. C. F. Wimberly.

SESQUICENTENNIAL OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO BE OBSERVED BY ENTIRE WORLD.

One hundred and fifty years ago, in a little cottage of Gloucester, England, there was launched one of the greatest youth movements of history—a quiet meeting at a round table destined to be of more far-reaching influence than the children's crusade.

It was the first organized Protestant Sunday School—a daring social venture of Robert Raikes, an obscure editor of Gloucester who, in 1780, organized the little class which was the beginning of one of the largest and most powerful organizations in the world.

Today the membership of the Sunday Schools of the world numbers more than thirty millions. The organization is taken so much as a matter of course in modern Christian civilizations, and plays so vital a part in the national and international education of youth, that its beginnings are not always considered.

But on the sesquicentennial of the founding of that first Sunday School, in June, 1930, delegates from three continents will gather in Toronto to do honor to Robert Raikes in a ceremony of dedication of a great bronze statue of that famous layman.

At the same time, a similar heroic statue will be erected and dedicated at Gloucester, near the site of that historic dwelling in which the first Sunday school was held.

Both statues are in replica of the now famous one which stands guard over the Thames on the embankment at Victoria Gardens, London. The original was erected on the 100th anniversary, a gift from the school children of England, who in tribute to Robert Raikes, raised the money for the great bronze figure by the subscription of pennies.

Scholars, religious teachers, students and laymen from all over the world will gather in the Canadian city to do honor to Robert Raikes when the statue is dedicated in June, on the occasion of the convention of the International Council of Religious Education.

The Toronto statue is the gift of J. L. Kraft, noted philanthropist and business man of the United States, treasurer of the International Council of Religious Education. Mr. Kraft, who is a native of Canada, has been a staunch supporter of Sunday schools all over the world, and is at present superintendent of a large Sunday school on the north shore, in Chicago.

The city of Toronto, by vote of the City Council, will furnish the site for the statue, the base, and the care of the statue in perpetuity.

That first Sunday school of Gloucester, which numbered less than a score of boys, was undertaken by the socially-minded editor in 1780 because of his intense interest in those countless children of his city who were adrift on the streets throughout the Sabbath day. Child labor in England was a common sight in his day, and the social conditions among poverty-stricken youth were deplorable as the prison conditions which Robert Raikes decried in his "Gloucester Journal." In that day, a Sunday school was a radical departure from the methods of most who were interested in "social uplift." Prison and reform schools more and more labor, were the usual answer to the crying problem of the youth of England.

After months of careful planning of a possible Sunday school organization for boys, Robert Raikes drew his proteges from off the streets and taking them to the little cottage where he had his offices, set them to the study of English and of the Bible.

His initial classes were so successful that he founded a similar school for girls three years later.

From the first organization, Robert Raikes expanded the organization. He engaged several woman teachers in various parts of the city to hold Sunday morning classes in their homes. He himself secured the membership of these classes, sending children to the nearest neighborhood school for instruction in reading and Bible history.

The social experiment proved so successful in the suburbs and city of Gloucester, that other influential men in the city undertook similar organizations. In less than a quarter of a century, Sunday schools were established in almost every section of England.

It was in 1780 that Robert Raikes made his first experiment. In 1786 it was estimated that 250,000 children were receiving instruction in Sunday schools.

From that beginning rose the first Sunday School Society, in 1785. And in 1803 the first Sunday School Union was formed in London, largely through the efforts of Robert Raikes, followed by the organization of similar unions throughout England.

These first schools, because of the social nature of their inception, united secular with religious education. The schools which rose from them in Scotland were almost entirely of a religious nature however.

In the years immediately following Robert Raikes' experiment, Sunday schools were established in Scotland, Ireland, and America. The Protestant Sunday school as it exists today on the continent of North America was established by the Church of England in Halifax, Canada, 1783; next in Philadelphia, in 1790, when thirteen persons met to organize the movement.

The growth of Sunday schools in all Protestant churches throughout the world was rapid and all-enveloping until today the organization has branches in every country, in every civilized community, of the world.

WALKING WITH JESUS.

If I constantly walk in the way I should go,
If I search for the truths God would have me to know,
If I follow each day in the path Jesus trod,
It would lead me at last to the City of God.

Though my talents be few, naught of greatness I do,
I am trusting in Jesus and he'll take me through.
Oh, the promises many of joys yet untold
Of that home yet awaiting with streets of pure gold,
Of a Savior that's waiting to dry every tear,
If we travel the highway of holiness here.

'Tis a pathway so free from all worldliness here,
But to each trusting heart 'tis a pathway of cheer.
There's a peace and a joy that the world cannot bring,
And our Lord we adore as his praises we sing.

Mrs. B. D. Chance.

I LOST THE WORLD

This song is becoming very popular in many sections of the country. We have the following letter from George H. Timmons, of Columbus, Ohio:

"It surprises me how your music is taking here. Just think, Brother Lillenas, that I, a man of 80 years of age, am singing and my voice is just as pure as when I was thirty, and my singing partner here is 68 years of age. Last Sunday night we used your song, 'I Lost the World and the World Lost Me.' We were encored twice. I don't think you have ever composed its equal for baritone and tenor."

"Yours respectfully,

"George H. Timmons."

"THE FIRST SOPRANO."

By Mary Hitchcock. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., price $1.00.

The story is gripping. It is a powerful plea for the deeper things of God in our religious life. A fashionable Episcopal Church with a paid choir and as a first soprano, the daughter of one of the wealthy members. She was rarely gifted. She loved music and the people were entertained by her singing. The Rector was a man of culture but not deeply spiritual. He saw nothing wrong in the formalism and worldliness that was eating out the vitals of his church. A visiting Rector with a deeply spiritual message that stressed religious worship for the glory of God led the First Soprano to examine the motive behind her captivating music and lo, the glory of God had no place in it. She was singing because she loved to sing and the people loved to hear her. A revolution was wrought in her life and in that of her skeptical brother. It is a most forceful plea for more spirituality in our worship and lives. Once into the book it is hard to lay it aside till finished. I wish it might have a million readers. M. P. Hunt.

THE WORD OF GOD SHALL ABIDE.

By The Editor.

THERE is, and will continue to be, a mighty host of evangelical Christian people in the world who believe the Bible is the inspired, infallible Word of God. They believe the great truths the Bible teaches; they sought and found the Christ the Bible reveals and, having trusted in him for salvation, they have experienced the forgiveness and peace the Bible promises.

The salvation of the Christ revealed in the Scriptures, Old Testament and New, is no longer to them a mere doctrine, dogma, theory or creed. It is a demonstrated fact, a gracious experience, a daily life. They have found the Lord Jesus and they know him; they have found in him a Saviour who gives them full assurance of salvation.

Those who have found the Lord Jesus in their searching of the Scriptures, have also found that he sets his seal of approval upon the Old Testament Scriptures. To believe in Christ is to believe his words and teachings; and to believe the teachings of Christ is to believe in the inspiration of the Old Testament. They believe the men who wrote the Scriptures were inspired by the Holy Ghost. When they wrote the truth from the mind of God, it was his infallible Word. When they wrote down historical records, or the sayings of bad men, they were inspired to make those records correct. The men who uttered the words and performed the deeds they put to record may have been very wicked men, but there were reasons why God wanted their deeds and words sent down to the rising generations and he inspired holy men to make an absolutely correct record of the events related in the Holy Scriptures.

The Word of the Lord will abide. Jesus gives us full assurance that the heavens and the earth may pass away, but his Word shall not pass away. His words endorse and fasten down forever the words of prophets, and priests, and kings, and soldiers, and peasants, and good and bad men and women, as we find them recorded in the Old Testament. The destructive critics cannot destroy the faith of multitudes of people in the infallibility of the Holy Scriptures. They are at war with God. Somewhere, sometime, they will all go down in defeat. We have often thought of that communication to Joseph and Mary who had fled with the young child, Jesus, into Egypt: "They are dead which sought the young child's life." Men become very quiet and inactive when they die. We have noticed this for years and so it has been with the enemies of Christ and of the Bible. They die, but the Word of God abides and our Lord Jesus rides on to victory.

The final outcome is secure. Jesus shall reign until he hath put all enemies beneath his feet. The Word of God cannot pass away. The clamoring voices of the skeptical multitudes will eventually be silenced, but the sad feature of the situation lies in the fact that multitudes of people are being deceived, their faith is being destroyed, and their souls will be lost. There is nothing quite so tragic as an immortal soul wandering about the earth, who has lost faith in the Holy Scriptures and in the deity and saving power of our Lord Jesus Christ. We are not able to understand what kind of heart or conscience is possessed by those people who seem to delight in drawing their fellow-beings away from their faith in the Holy Scriptures and the Lord Jesus as a personal Savior. Undoubtedly, such persons must meet an awful doom in the day of judgment.

This May Be My Last Appeal For Asbury College.

I hope it will not be my last appeal, but I will soon be seventy-three years of age. These twenty-four weeks on the sick bed in eleven months have cut very deeply into all of my physical resources. I am improving and hope to make the start for western Texas in the very near future. I hear very encouraging reports with reference to the southwestern climate of Texas for asthmatic trouble and I am very hopeful of results if I can get into that region.

The thing which most deeply concerns me is the type of men who will preach the gospel. At the close of this, and the coming of the next generation, I believe that the preaching of the pure gospel, as we find it in the holy Bible, by wholly consecrated, cleansed and Spirit-filled men, will solve our problem and save our nation. I do not believe anything else will. It does seem to me that, above all things, God's messenger should be filled with the Holy Spirit.

One of our very greatest needs is a Theological Seminary where young men under the instruction of devout and profound scholars, who are sanctified, Spirit-filled men, shall receive their seminary training after graduating from college. We have organized and set up such a seminary at Asbury College and it is doing excellent work. Our teachers are all graduates of great universities and have had years of experience, and every one lays emphasis upon the Wesleyan doctrine of holiness and evangelism. The men turned out from this school have not received any taint of modernism, but have been well prepared to meet with, and combat, successfully, the various false teachings that, in the church and out in the world, are so fatal to an evangelistic, redemptive gospel.

This year we have in the seminary a great increase of students, twice as many college graduates as we had last year, besides some two hundred students in Asbury College who are taking Bible studies under the seminary faculty, preparing themselves for the ministry.

We are in great need of money to assist the young men who want to take their theological course in Asbury. All churches have to assist in the education of their young preachers. The way to spread scriptural holiness throughout the nation and around the world, and carry forward that type of evangelism that brings regeneration to sinners and the perfecting of the saints, is to prepare and send forth into the world a well trained, Spirit-filled ministry.

I am sure there are thousands of people who read THE HERALD who are deeply interested—in these times of aggressive skepticism and much teaching in many pulpits which produces doubt, rather than regenerates men—in the education of a soul-winning ministry. I desire, with all my heart, that we may secure funds to help earnest young men who feel their call to preach, in their preparation for their lifework, at the Asbury Theological Seminary.

My dear friends, may I plead with you, with all my heart from my sick bed, to give us a helping hand in this hour of need and wonderful opportunity. If we had the financial aid we could continue to double the number of college graduates who want to be taught in a seminary that stands true and strong for the Wesleyan teaching of Christian Holiness. Earnest, honest, fearless preachers, with the spirit of perfect love, who will give the people the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation, is the greatest need of our times. Some of our readers could make a good large contribution to this fund, others less, and a multitude could give us from one to five or ten dollars.

Let's make a Thanksgiving Offer to God for the gift of his Son, for the blessed gospel and what it has done for us. I beg you in the name of our blessed Lord to have your offering ready by Thanksgiving Day. Send it to our financial secretary, Rev. Guy Wilson, Wilmore, Ky. He will acknowledge same, and we will see to it that it is administered with caution and economy to the very best advantage. Do not send any of this Thank Offering to Louisville, as wife and I will be at that time, the Lord willing, far away in Texas. Send it, as suggested, to Brother Wilson and he will at once write you an acknowledgment of your gracious gift. Please say that it is for the education of young men preparing for the ministry or mission field.

I sat up a full hour this morning and felt little or no fatigue. The doctor gives me leave to sit up both morning and afternoon, including a few steps, for which we are profoundly thankful.

Faithfully your Brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

"Today if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts." Hebrews 3:15.

"GOD FIRST!" THE STORY OF A MAN OF GOD.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

In a previous article I mentioned that, in my boyhood days, I was stirred by the story of the "Cambridge Seven" who gave up their ambitions of a worldly sort and answered the call of the mission field as it came through Moody and Hudson Taylor, and went out to China, penetrated into the interior where a missionary was unknown and did exploits for God. Mr. Hoste, who was one of them, is now Chief Director of the C. I. M. work in China; recently I had a delightful visit with him.

I have just finished reading the Life of Bishop W. W. Cassels, the first Bishop of Western China, and in this article I shall pass on to my readers some of the good things which I found in this inspiring book.

In the first place, it may strike my readers as strange that the China Inland Mission should have a place for a Bishop. I was surprised myself till I learned that it was the policy of the C. I. M. to assign certain sections of the field to certain denominational groups who worked under their Mission. To Szechwan they sent an Episcopal group of missionaries, those who came out from the Church of England, and they had liberty to develop their mission work along their own lines, provided the work of the Lord was really done; and truly this was done in a most faithful manner in the diocese of Bishop Cassels, who was a faithful minister of Jesus Christ; of him it was said: "His work, to which he constantly remembered God had called him, was the passion of his life. He had no hobbies; his great objective was the evangelization of the district over which he had been set. Nothing must crowd evangelization out."

Bishop Cassels was a graduate of Cambridge University where he took his B.A. in 1880. He was for a while connected with All Saints Church, South Lambeth, London, where the greater call came to him.

The Moody and Sankey meetings in England in the eighties stirred the land from one end to the other and mighty meetings were held at Oxford and Cambridge. It is generally true that with every real revival there comes also a great outburst of missionary zeal.

Hudson Taylor was always very particular as to the class of men who went out in his C. I. M. work. He was such a man of prayer that he virtually prayed the right men out to the field and the Cambridge Seven was God's answer to his pleading. A great sensation was aroused all over Great Britain and a wave of enthusiasm swept over the churches. The farewell meeting of the "Seven" was held in Exeter Hall, London, and, despite the rain and storm that swept over the City that night, Exeter Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity.

Dr. Findlay once said: "Ah, it was no easy march, no holiday pageant, the coming of the Son of God into this world of ours. He came to save sinners. Not to help good men—this were a grateful task; but to redeem bad men—the hardest work in God's universe. It taxed the strength and devotion of the Son of God. Witness Gethsemane! And it will cost his church something, more haply than we dream of now, if the work of the Redeemer is to be made effectual and the travail of his soul satisfied."

When Mr. Cassels sailed for China (Remember he was a missionary ten years before he was made a Bishop) he had his luggage so marked that there was no mistaking the master passion of the man. In bold black capitals he had had printed in red on large labels the two words "GOD FIRST," and these were conspicuously pasted on all his belongings.

It was said of him: "God First." It was this that constrained him to leave England, and it was this that was henceforth to dominate his whole life. And nothing dulled the edge of this devotion. Forty years of toil in a pagan land amid untoward conditions, tested but never quenched this first love. To the end he was always keen and ardent, never lukewarm.

When they landed in Shanghai Mr. Cassels was profoundly moved by the enormity of the work: "We felt more than ever," he wrote, "that nothing but a mighty outpouring of the Spirit of God can be of any use."

The Cambridge Seven held meetings in the Shanghai Cathedral and something very extraordinary happened; their testimony and message were so powerful that the Rector in charge, a British Chaplain, was gloriously converted. He publicly acknowledged that though he had in the past honestly sought to do his duty, and had, he believed, preached the truth as he then knew it, he had never until that day been able to commit his own soul wholly to the Saviour's care, and now he had come into a new experience, a new life. Such words from the British Chaplain came upon Shanghai almost like a thunderbolt and produced a great impression.

Notwithstanding the conversion of the Chaplain, and many other evidences of God's power, Mr. Cassels was not satisfied. He wrote: "When we were on board the steamer coming up to Tientsin we were all stirred up to spend our time in prayer for the deepening of our spiritual life and the outflowing of God's Holy Spirit upon us. We felt that the work at Shanghai had in a measure failed, owing to our want of spirituality, holiness and power. . . . We were constrained to humble ourselves very low before our God and to plead for inward purity as well as for power. . . . We saw, too, how much was contained in what is called 'the promise of the Father,' the great gift of the Holy Spirit, not in the measure in which he is given to all Christians, but in the fulness which was promised by our Lord and in which he was received often after a period of waiting by the early church."

When the time came for Cassels to penetrate into the interior he was ready; he was accompanied by Beauchamp. They had had only three months language study when they departed four days distant from their nearest missionary neighbors. Of course they had difficulties with the language as well as with the people. In the midst of it he could sing: "How oft in the conflict, when pressed by the foe,

I have fled to my refuge and breathed out my woe;

How often when trials like sea billows roll,
Have I hidden in Thee, O Thou Rock of my soul."

In the midst of it all he could say: "But now he has indeed once again brought me out into a wealthy place. I do not think I ever had such visions of his love and his glory."

A stranger in a Chinese village, or town is going to be the object of the most unceasing curiosity. The people crowd upon him before he is up in the morning and do not leave till the last thing at night.

Next we find Mr. Cassels starting out alone for his lonely station at Paoning—the place to which he is to give nearly forty years of labors—his only companion in this long march being a Chinese boy.

Speaking of Szechwan—his province—he writes: "What idol worship, what superstition! What careful observance of idolatrous rites! What magnificent temples! What crowds of priests! What tinkling of bells and chanting of prayers! What burning of incense and candles, paper money and all the rest of this heathen paraphernalia. But in proportion as the work is more difficult the triumph of grace will be more glorious."

Mr. Cassels was married to an English missionary lady in 1887 and bringing home his bride to such an interior far away station was no small undertaking, as a white woman had never been seen there before. No sooner did the news leak out of the arrival of his wife than crowds, overwhelming crowds, almost terrifying crowds, surged into the premises both to the danger of the people and the property. Instead of a restful home to bring his young wife after fifteen weeks of travel, endless crowds fill the yard and the house and from early morn till late at night they are beset by prying, inquisitive people so that there is no privacy and no refuge from prying eyes.

In the midst of all we hear him say: "We must advance upon our knees." "I feel more and more that next to obeying the Master's command to pray that laborers may be thrust out into the harvest fields, the important thing to bring before the Lord unceasingly is that the converts from heathenism may be kept and built up and filled with the Holy Ghost."

This idea of advancing upon our knees was very faithfully adhered to by Mr. Cassels. Every week had a day of fasting and prayer in it.

After eight years of the most strenuous labors for God in new territory where he broke new ground and opened up the gospel ministry among a people hitherto untouched by it, he has an opportunity for a furlough. During these years he writes, "I cannot remember that I have been confined to bed for one single day. I have traveled thousands of miles, and not one hair of my head has been hurt, and if you ask about the matter of provision, here again God has done exceeding abundantly; not one thing failed."

The consecration of Mr. Cassels to the Bishopric took place during this furlough. He was made Bishop of Western China at Westminster Abbey, London, Oct. 18, 1895, the Archbishop of Canterbury presiding. One week after found him sailing for China, and after his arrival he begins a letter which he sends to his Missionaries with these words: "I am but a little child." "Jesus called a little child unto him and set him in the midst." "A little child shall lead them."

It was said of Bishop Cassels: "He was extraordinarily shy. It created a barrier which he felt much more acutely even than the rest of us. He was very humble. I had heard his humility spoken of long before I met him, but to work with him for three years was to see what real humility was."

Perils by land and water were constantly his lot. Once going down the river with his wife and five children, his ship struck a rock in mid stream and speedily sank. A small ferry came to their rescue and they were saved. Another time going through the Yangtze rapids the vessel struck a rock while going full steam ahead. The Bishop and twelve missionaries stood in the stern of the vessel while the bow was sinking. Some of them jumped overboard, others were rescued by lifeboats. In this shipwreck the Captain was drowned. Of course all their goods and clothing were lost.

Bishop Cassel's heart was constantly crying out for increase of souls and a revival of God's grace. In 1909 the revival wave which struck Korea began to touch Chinese shores and in February, 1910, special meetings were conducted looking toward a revival. The Bishop reported the following:

"The striking feature of the Mission was that the spirit of conviction fell on the people from the very first. . . . An irresistible wave of prayer with confession of sin fell on the congregation. This became intensified day by day and reached its climax on Wednesday. The spirit of conviction was most deep and widespread. It fell on all classes alike, literate and illiterate, young and old, chiefly on the men, but the women did not escape. I do not know whether one was most prostrate with shame at the terrible frailty of even the best Christians or filled with wonder at the marvelous power of the Spirit of God to lead men to make such confessions. Many promised reparation of various kinds and not a few sums of money have been paid back."

His labors until the end were abundant. During one of the years when Revolutionary disturbances were all over China he was on the road exactly one hundred and eighty-five days. Midst all the terrific strain of those troublesome days in China when no life was safe he could say with Paul: "We are pressed on every side yet not straitened, perplexed yet not unto despair, pursued yet not forsaken; smitten down yet not destroyed; always bearing about in the body the dying of Jesus that the life of Jesus may be manifested in our body."

In 1918 he writes: "Lawlessness, corruption and Civil War still prevail in China, and from a political point of view the outlook is darker than I have ever known it. But as I look around I discern many causes of deep thanksgiving: wide open doors and no lack of opportunities for telling out the gospel message; evangelistic campaigns, revival meetings are being attended by most useful and sometimes remarkable results."

After an illness of some ten days Bishop Cassels died Nov. 7, 1925, and in eight days after Mrs. Cassels passed away. They were both buried from the Cathedral of Paoning and they rest from their labors of forty years in that far off country. When they went to Szechwan forty years ago such a thing as a Christian church was unknown; when they died there were over 150 preaching stations; over ten thousand converts had been baptized; there were nearly one hundred preachers, besides Bible women and other lay workers.

BROTHER BROWNING'S LETTER.

HIS afternoon it suddenly dawned upon me what a long time has elapsed since I wrote anything to THE HERALD family, so I came at once to my typewriter and began this letter. It is awkward for me to write and somewhat painful because nearly three weeks ago I came home from preaching and the Devil had a nice little trap set for me and I walked right into it. One of the children had taken the light out of the hall upstairs and someone else had left the door open that leads down the back stairway. Before I knew what was wrong I had fallen headfirst down the stairway and banged my head against the refrigerator in the kitchen and in addition to numerous bruises had broken a bone in my left elbow. Dr. McClure, a dear old Presbyterian physician, who attended me congratulated me on being able to make that descent without breaking my neck. Fortunately, my right arm is in good shape and I can use it for just twice as many gestures when I get warmed up to my preaching. Whenever some kind of trouble overtakes me I preach a sermon on Romans 8:28: "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are the called according to his purpose," but this time I seemed to have a premonition that trouble was on the way so I got in the first lick on the Devil and preached that sermon in a tent meeting at Delaware, Ohio, just a few nights before the accident.

Perhaps it will not be amiss for me to say to my friends that at present I am pastor of the First Church of the Nazarene in Columbus, Ohio. In a little less than a month I will finish the first year of my pastorate. It seems a bit odd that a man should be twenty-eight years a local preacher and spend twenty-two years of that time in the evangelistic field before becoming a pastor, but that is my experience. The transition has been novel and yet not so difficult as I had imagined. Perhaps one of the reasons is this that my church has allowed me the privilege of doing some revival work. Last February it was my privilege to conduct a fruitful revival in the Eastern Nazarene College, of Boston, Mass., and also during the summer it was my privilege to preach in camp meetings at Ellis, La., Eaton Rapids, Mich., Romeo, Mich., and our own camp meeting which is held just six miles north of this city. By the time this letter reaches you I shall probably be preaching in the Brooklyn Holiness Camp Meeting in New York.

One other thing that helps to keep me happy and satisfied in this pastorate is a radio service that I conduct each Sunday afternoon over WAIU. This is a work of faith which the Lord laid on my heart about the first of March. While this is not one of the greater broadcasting stations we have listeners two hundred miles away who get the messages clearly, and within a radius of two hundred miles of this city there are many millions of people. While radio audiences are not usually very responsive we do get some beautiful letters occasionally telling us of the blessings received through these services. As a result of one appeal over the air I got a splendid radio for Evangeline Reams' Rescue Home and another for Miss McConnell's school down in Breathitt county, Ky. Just as soon as I can get a couple of days off from my work I want to take the set down to Mt. Carmel and have the privilege of seeing something of the wonderful work that is being done for the mountain boys and girls.

Last June wife and I took our four children and drove from Columbus to Nashville, Tenn., in one day. We spent the night at Trevecca College, that beautiful and living monument to the memory of Brother McClurken, where we were cordially entertained. Early next morning we got started on that wonderful concrete highway that leads to Memphis, Tenn., and before dark we had reached the home of my brother-in-law, Leslie Sturdivant, at McCrory, Ark. We rested one day and then made trip next day to the home of my wife's people near Shreveport, La. There I left the family and took the train for the camp meeting at Ellis, La. This was a trip that will long be remembered. Brother Ed. N. LeJeune, an old Asbury boy, who was reared in that county and had been wonderfully converted from Roman Catholicism, had invited me to preach in the very camp where he was sanctified just a few years ago. Catholicism has a terrific grip on that part of Louisiana but the type of Christians that have been won to the cause of holiness makes one feel that we must do more for that section of the country. Among other unusual believers I wish to mention Sister L. J. Coco, of Marksville, La. This gentle, cultured woman was formerly a Methodist and the wife of a courteous and lovable Catholic merchant. One Sunday they were attending the service in the Methodist Church when Mrs. Coco noticed an elderly white-haired gentleman who looked like a minister sitting in the congregation. She inquired about him and found that he had been sent down there by the Southern Methodists as a missionary to the French Catholic people. She invited him to dinner and tried to make things as pleasant as possible for him. After the meal was over Mr. Coco excused himself and left the house and then old Brother Robidoux said, "Daughter, do you know that it is possible for a person to be saved from all sin?" Then he told her to get her Bible and he showed her the promises and there in the parlor of her own home Sister Coco, a formal Methodist, entered into a radiant and conscious experience of heartfelt salvation. Later on she and a dear friend, Mrs. Joffrion, visited God's Bible School in Cincinnati and both entered into the experience of sanctification. Not long after this Sister Coco's husband died in the faith. Since then this devout woman has felt the call of God and has gone into neglected fields in Louisiana teaching and preaching the gospel in her quiet but effective way and the Lord has signally honored her labors. At present she has as a co-worker, Miss Ella Ruth, a Taylor University student, who sings the gospel with beauty and unction. Sister Coco visited the Holy Land recently, and in her talks to the young people she uses the lantern slides of scenes in Palestine in a most effective way. We are praying that the Lord may open the way for some of our holiness evangelists to visit southern Louisiana. It is a beautiful country with its broad fertile rice fields, forests with great trees and trailing mosses, and beauty and romance aptly described in Longfellow's Evangeline. I found in the Ellis Camp Meeting some faithful souls who were sanctified years under under the preaching of Dr. Morrison and who were sending their children to Asbury College. Some of these young people will be preaching the gospel of full salvation when our beloved Henry Clay Morrison is walking with the redeemed along the flower-strewn banks of the river of life.

My stay in Louisiana was all too short. I took the train for Shreveport early Monday morning and a brother-in-law, Leon Lafitte, met me and drove me out to my wife's old home near Stonewall. There I found her sick in bed and not one of our four children was well. Chills and fever and boils had come to spoil the visit. However we besought the Lord for help and three days later we were able to start for home. It was raining that morning and the outlook wasn't very bright, but we knelt on the porch for the final season of prayer and we left my sister-in-law and her children and my Catholic father-in-law and Catholic brother-in-law all weeping. When I think of it now I have the heartache to go right back down there and start a revival. Who started this everlasting hurrying business any way? Well, if anybody who reads this ever holds a revival at Stonewall I shall be glad to pray for him and help contribute. As we journeyed back towards Arkansas we struck some very treacherous roads and came near being overturned twice, but the Lord preserved us and we got back to McCrory about three o'clock on the morning of the fourth of July. I celebrated by staying in bed most of the day. Two more days of travel landed us in Columbus and by the time we were rested our camp meeting on Moore's Road began. Unble Buddie and William Heslop and wife and B. H. Haynie and I were the workers. Prof. Messer led the singing. Brother Messenger, of Chicago, gave the prophetic messages. This was my third time to be in this camp and it was by far the most fruitful one that we have had here.

The next day after the Columbus camp meeting closed I went to Eaton Rapids, Mich., and remained a week. Paul Rees and Joseph Owen were there during the early part of the camp and then Joseph Smith and Col. Brengle arrived and remained until the close. Eaton Rapids camp was at flood-tide

OVERCOMING THE WORLD

Rev. A. H. M. Zahniser.

"For whatsoever is born of God, overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."—1 John 5:4.

WE see from the Scripture just quoted, what is, and ought to be, the result of regeneration—a real born-again experience in grace. It is the intellectual, moral and spiritual conquest of the world. Yea, the victorious conquest of the world.

The term world is used by the sacred writers in a variety of meanings. Without going into the discussion concerning the different original words so translated, the meaning can usually be quite safely determined by its connection. It is sometimes used to mean (1) The habitable world, as we know it, the earth. (2) Then too, it sometimes refers to the great mass of humanity, the inhabitants of the world considered together, or as a whole. (3) And, also with reference to, the present order of time or existence, this world. (4) Then again, it refers to the future state and existence—the world to come. (5) And sometimes it seems to refer to all the kingdoms and powers subject to Rome in our Savior's time, or, to all the earthly powers and kingdoms of the world at a particular period. Luke 2:1. (6) To the close of the Jewish dispensation, and its reference to or type of the final consummation. Matt. 24:3; and, finally, (7), it is used to signify the prevailing corrupt sentiment, disposition and practices of men, generally. The spirit, customs and manners of the majority rejecting Christ, and his salvation. It is in this last sense, principally, that it is used in the scripture we are now considering. It, however, in a spiritual sense, may be taken comprehensively. For what does he not overcome and gain who succeeds in God's sight and service? "Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savor of his knowledge by us in every place." (2 Cor. 2:14).

By victory we mean the gaining of superiority in any conflict, or competition; the defeat of an enemy in combat or battle, conquest, triumph; it is the opposite of defeat.

It is possible to have the victory. A victorious life is our blessed privilege! "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

Whatsoever or whosoever. He that is born of God is born for God and his service and glory, is born for a better world; and for a fuller and higher life than that enjoyed or known by the unregenerate. He that is born of God is furnished with such arms and weapons as will enable him to defend himself against all his foes, and to conquer. "For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world, and this is the victory that overcometh the world: even our faith."

Faith is the cause or means of victory. It is the instrument, and furnishes us with suitable weapons, with heavenly artillery by which we are able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked one. "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds." (2 Cor. 10:4).

WHAT IT IS TO BE AN OVERCOMER.

It is to rise superior to our foe or contestant; to be lifted above the obstacles in our way; to get beyond or pass over successfully any and all danger points and places. To be a come-over. Just to climb right over everything the cruel enemy piles in our way; or fly across it. Sometimes we may fly, see, Isaiah 40:31. Then again we must walk and climb. But the climbing is safe and the victory sure, when we are in the narrow way of life, and going forth in the name, and at the command of the chief captain of the race. In Revelation 11:12, we read: "And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud; and their enemies beheld them." Then in the twelfth chapter and tenth and eleventh verses, of the same book, "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ; for the accuser of our brethren is cast down which accused them before our God day and night. And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death." After speaking of the sting caused by sin; and of the dread and terror of death, and the grave that has come as the result of sin, the inspired Apostle Paul exclaims, "But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." (1 Cor. 15:57).

WHAT IT IS WE MUST OVERCOME.

Our scripture passage says, "Overcometh the world." Yes, the world; but this means much. If we are to overcome the world we must overcome its Captain and Leader, the Prince of the power of the air; the Accuser of the brethren, already mentioned, Satan, our wicked and wily foe. His tricks are many and mean. He has a special "pick on" the redeemed. He seems to have particular spite at the children of God, who are the objects of his love and care. Seeing he cannot injure God himself, he is bent on doing his best, or worst, to destroy his children. When he fails in their destruction, he tries to torment and harass the saved and sanctified subjects of God's grace.

We must overcome the spirit of the world. The spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience. "Be a snob," Prof. Robt. E. Rodgers of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is quoted by the press, as saying to a class of graduates. But the book of inspiration says, "He that showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord thy God require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God." (Micah 6:8). "Gentle, showing all meekness unto all men," writes Paul. (Titus 3:2). While Saint Peter, giving the ladies directions, how to appear like holy women, says, "Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or putting on of apparel;

but let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price."

We must overcome the world in its customs, maxims and fashions. The world says, "You may as well be dead as to be out of fashion." The Bible teaching is, "Be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God." (Rom. 12:2). Christians are not to be in bondage to the foolish notions of proud people. The show and sham and shame of modern fashions have disgraced and cursed many. We are shown that the world is actively antagonistic to the children of God. "Marvel not, my brethren, if the world hate you. We know we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren," our author tells us in the third chapter of this epistle. He had been impressed with the prayer of the Divine Master, in which he said, "I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." (John 17:14-16).

Saint John has already shown what he believed constituted worldliness, and what the Christian attitude toward it should be. He wrote, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world: If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." (1 John 2:15-17).

WHO THEY ARE THAT OVERCOME THE WORLD.
"Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." Dr. Adam Clarke says, "The neuter all is here used as gathering together in one, under the category of 'born of God.' The whole mass of the born of God conquer the world." Or, whosoever, as some copies have it, and no doubt this expresses the meaning to us now, as the very next verse makes it personal. "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" It is an individual conflict with each one of us. Yet there is also a united effort. It may be predicted of all the born again people of God; and it may be declared concerning each one that has experienced the new birth. But only the born again—the born of God, can successfully cope with the situation, and rise superior to all worldliness and all moral and spiritual enemies.

THE MEANS BY WHICH WE MAY OVERCOME THE WORLD.

"Our faith." This text says our faith. The faith must be personal and inwrought. It must be in our Lord Jesus Christ: for he is the true and sure Conqueror. In and by faith we are united to Christ and stand fast in him in an holy contempt of the world and all its opposition. But faith works by love. Our love to, and for, God and Christ, shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit, so draws us away from the world and its charms, that the separation becomes a joy instead of an hardship. Salvation affords a pleasure that is pure and satisfying. Sinful pleasures lose their charm. The overcoming believer says, "Far from my heart be joys like these."

By faith, the heart is sanctified and purified from the sensual lusts, passions and principles that hold sway and dominate the worldling. Immediately after the prayer referred to in which Jesus presents his disciples to the Father, with the declaration that they are not of the world, and prays that they may be kept from the evil in the world, he adds, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." (John 17:17). As to the process by which this is done we read in Acts 15:9, "Purifying their hearts by faith."

Faith receives and derives sufficient strength and virtue from its object, the Son of God, to conquer all the frowns and flat-teries of the world. "Looking unto Jesus." "Consider him that endured such contradiction of sinners against himself, lest ye be wearied and faint in your minds?" Going forth in faith, we will not mind the scoffs and sneers of the world. We all must bear the cross, but we look forward to wearing the fadeless crown.

Faith lays hold upon gospel promises and gospel grace and obtains the indwelling power and presence that is greater than all that is in the world. Faith looks beyond the bounds of time and sees an invisible world at hand, to which this world is not worthy to be compared, and into which it tells the soul, so possessed, it must keep ready to enter. Here is the testimony of Paul, "Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit." (2 Cor. 5:5). No wonder he continues, "Therefore, we are always confident." And he tells us why, "For we walk by faith." Faith in God produces confident living, and a blessed hope for the future. The Master warns us, "And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares." (Luke 21:34).

It is the genuine Christian that is the true conqueror of the world by faith. "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?" With a violence of faith and the works such faith produces, the believer overcomes all difficulties. He becomes a real hero. Read the list given in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. See what others have done through faith in a living, unchangeable Christ, and take courage. Then sing with Charles Wesley,

"Urge on your rapid course,
Ye blood besprinkled bands;
The heavenly kingdom suffers force;
'Tis seized by violent hands;

"See there the starry crown
That glitters through the skies;
Satan, the world and sin tread down,
And take the glorious prize.

"Courage! your Captain cries,
Who all your toil foreknew,
Toil ye shall have, yet all despise,
I have o'ercome for you.

"The world cannot withstand
Its ancient Conqueror;
The world must sink beneath the Hand
Which arms us for the war.

"This is the victory—
Before our faith they fall;
Jesus hath died for you and me;
Believe, and conquer all!"

"How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" Hebrews 3:2.

The Sinful Soul, Young or Old, Shall Die.

BISHOP W. A. CANDLER.

HE prophet Malachi foretold the coming of a period of blessedness in which God's messenger would by his powerful ministry "turn the heart of the fathers to the children and the heart of the children to their fathers"; and he warned the people that by the influence of such a turning of hearts would be averted an hour of calamity when the Lord would "smite the earth with a curse." (Malachi 4:6).

We seem to have come upon a time when spurious prophets are seeking to turn the hearts of children from their parents, and teach the youth of the land to trace all their wrong doing to their mothers and fathers, thereby relieving themselves of any sense of condemnation for their sins.

Some of the stock sayings of these patrons of youthful folly and apologists for youthful immorality are such as these: "The young people of today are as fine in every sense of the word as any generation that has preceded them"; "Youth is the product of heredity and environment and they are what their parents have made them"; "If father and mother do not behave, how can their children be expected to do better?" "What is left for modern youth to respect and reverence?"

Now there are grains of truth mixed up in this demagogic flattery of youth; but these grains are miserably compounded with hurtful errors and confusing contradictions.

If the young people of today are so very fine and are at the same time the product of their heredity, how can it be said that their fathers and mothers are so awfully bad? Did sorry parents produce such fine progeny? Whence came all this juvenile fineness?

It is quite true that home life has suffered the loss of some most sacred elements, such as the family altar and the habit of regular attendance upon the services of the Church. This loss cannot be overstated; it is nothing less than a fearful deterioration of life which, if not corrected, must lead speedily to grave social disorders, and in the end to national disasters.

But the youth of today have had no small part in pulling down the family altars of the land and in treating all religious services with contemptuous indifference.

Much of this evil influence has fallen upon them in the schools from which the Bible is excluded and in which text-books, filled with rankest materialism, are used. All this tide of evil flows on during all the days of the week and carries away on its current many boys and girls of immature minds and unstable moral convictions.

Meanwhile "the movies," which are "schools of vice," make their daily contribution to the demoralization of children and youth.

Along with these demoralizing forces there go popular forms of conversation, in which piety is identified with puritanism, and in which shallow minded talkers pour forth the cant phrases of the worldly, such as "I do not believe in long-faced piety" and "I believe in a happy religion," etc. As a matter of fact such people do not believe in any religion whatsoever, but do rather clamor for a life of religionless pleasure-seeking. St. Paul describes their sort as "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." (1 Tim. 3:4). Nevertheless, their senseless sayings fall as seeds of evil in young minds all too ready to give heed to such godless stuff.

It cannot be denied that another factor in the demoralization of the children and youth of today is the disposition of many parents to shift upon nurses, day school teachers, and Sunday school teachers the burden of the rearing and instructing of their offspring. "Business" and "society" occupy their minds, leaving small room for the loving care of children. Thus the home is disintegrated and destroyed.

These several currents of evil are not disconnected; they are parts of one devouring stream, carrying on its bosom old and young alike to the most fearful destruction at last.

They issue from the springs of self-indulgence which always overflow in periods of opulence and luxury; and which submerge the highest principles of right and the holiest things of life in a turbid tide of selfish vanity.

But these swift currents of wrong cannot be arrested by telling the youth of the land that they are fine and blameless, and that their parents are the evil-doers who are responsible for the ruinous things now so prevalent and potent. That sort of prattling preaching to the youth of the nation will only accelerate the speed with which society is hastening to destruction.

There is a vast increase of crime among the youth of the land, and it is worse than useless to try to deny the fact. "Flaming youth" is setting fire to the moral supports of our social system and the national life. And a young man, or young woman, who is old enough to commit crime is old enough to be held responsible for being a criminal; and no extenuation for the offenses committed can justly be drawn from the faults of the parents.

The sensible thing to do, if we would check this wild wave of criminality, is to call both parents and children, old and young, to repentance.

We have had quite enough of pulpit petting of wayward youth. We need now some serious preachers who will cry with Ezekiel, "The word of the Lord came unto me, saying, What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge? As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel. Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine; the soul that sinneth, it shall die." (Ezek. 18:1-4).

Ancestral virtue is not transferable, and ancestral vice cannot explain or extenuate the sins of sons. Every one, whether young or old, must bear the blame of his own wrong doing, confess his own guilt, and repent for his own sin; for all are free-agents, who know right from wrong. No one can shift his own responsibility for his acts backward upon his parents or forward upon his posterity. Sin is peculiarly a personal and individual matter. "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

In this awful matter of sin there is no place for weak sentimentality or the idle vaporings of "behaviorism." All men know they are free. Upon this fact, firmly fixed in the universal consciousness of mankind, rests all government in earth and in heaven. The denial of it means anarchy and disorder. Before the stainless majesty of the moral law every soul must bow in reverent subjection. Rebellion against it means that crime will run riot in the universe.—South-ern Christian Advocate.

The Illuminated Bible Story Book

For a child from 7 to 12 years old. It is handsomely bound, has an attractive jacket, presentation page, is beautifully illustrated in colors, printed on enamel paper in a beautiful dark blue ink, large, regular old folks type. Eighteen Bible stories are interestingly told, beginning with "Noah and the Ark" and ending with "Jesus Before Pilate." A little 10-year-old girl stepped into our office just a few days ago, picked up a copy of this book and was soon lost in it, the stories were so interesting. Give it for Christmas. Price 60c.

this year. There was hardly a barren altar service and it was remarkable to see what numbers of people prayed through to victory. Brother Joseph Smith was at his best in preaching and dear old Col. Brengle just simply captured the hearts of the people by his simple and unctuous messages. One day I said, "Brother Smith, you ought to write a book entitled Fifty-Five Years In Canaan." His eyes twinkled and he replied, "No, I am going to wait and write one on Seventy-Five Years In Canaan." Another day when we were talking, Col. Brengle told us how he happened to write his famous books on holiness. Some ruffian threw a brick at him and hit him on the head and he was confined to the hospital for eighteen months. While in the hospital he dictated the articles which later composed the book entitled "Helps To Holiness" which has been translated into twenty languages and has gone around the world. The old gentleman smiled and said, "If there had not been a little brick there would not have been a little book." He also told us that one day before his wife died she took that brick and painted on it these words from Genesis 50:20, "But as for you, ye thought evil against me; but God meant it unto good."

At the close of the Eaton Rapids camp meeting Brother E. O. Rice, who is now treasurer of the Oriental Missionary Society, carried me in his car to camp meeting at Romeo, Mich., about forty miles north of Detroit. There it was my privilege to be associated with Rev. Joseph Owen, president of John Fletcher College, and Rev. Chas. Babcock who is one of the greatest preachers of the Holiness Movement. The singing was led by Brother and Sister Shank. These good people can often sing the folks up to shouting ground when the preachers are not able to get them there. This camp meeting was attended by large congregations and while it was not quite so fruitful in visible results as the one at Eaton Rapids it was nevertheless a fine camp and I enjoyed the fellowship of some beautiful saints many of whom represent the fruits of labors of Dr. W. G. Nixon who, before his death, was for many years the great champion of holiness in Michigan Methodism. On the camp grounds at Romeo there is a huge granite boulder weighing several tons that has been rolled out on the edge of the slope overlooking the tabernacle and to one side of it has been fastened a bronze plate with an inscription to the memory of this fallen hero. His son Lloyd, who led the singing at Eaton Rapids, is growing sweeter and richer in grace as he grows older in the ministry, and may some time in the near future take the place of leadership in the ranks of the holiness people that was once accorded his sainted father. The Lord bless him and make him the worthy son of a great sire.

Some time when my friends happen to think of me breathe a prayer for me that God may use me in this situation. Here in a city of more than a third of a million people I am the only preacher who is preaching full salvation over the radio. Just a few churches in this great city stand for holiness. If Jesus were to come to Columbus and catch away his saints I wonder often if there would be more than a thousand, apart from the babies and little children and mentally irresponsible people, who would be in that number. Just a few blocks from our church is the great Ohio State University with a few more than ten thousand students enrolled. A little handful of choice, beautiful young people come in to worship with us from time to time but most of those students don't know we are in town. Indeed, from the way they act, most of them do not seem to know that there is a God. Sometimes I feel like walking out into the street and screaming to these great hurrying throngs and try to arrest their attention long enough to tell them about God and duty and destiny. Each week about twelve hundred people read my weekly church letter which sometimes contains two thousand words. Tens of thousands hear me preach over the radio and also hear full salvation songs by our choicest singers. We pray and invite and advertise,—and in our regular services people get blessed and shout. In spite of all these things we do not have large congregations. Not many people seem to want to go the way of holiness. My mind runs back to the time when I was first saved and felt that the Lord had called me to preach. I knew little about preaching and so little about the Bible that one day in a sermon I had Daniel in the fiery furnace. The word sanctification was not in my vocabulary. Nobody had ever preached it to me. In spite of all these weights people used to crowd the churches to hear me down in the country in Tennessee and weeping souls would fall into the altar straw and hear from heaven and shout the victory. Holiness people everywhere, my heart breaks over the deadness and barrenness of our preaching today. A few precious souls here and there are snatched as brands from the burning but millions and millions and millions go laughing and reveling and dancing down to black fires of endless torment. Can we not, will we not gather our strength and our faith for another assault on the mighty resources of divine grace and beseech God to stand once more in the midst of his people and let us once more arrest the serious attention of this mad generation?

Yours in the love of God forever,
RAYMOND BROWNING.

Romans 8:28.

Revivals and Human Duty.

REV. WINFRED R. COX.

It is interesting to observe how God adheres to his plan in saving men. He is none the less changeable in this respect than in his holy character. The trend of Modernism is in the direction of disregarding the Divine laws of redemption and to make man his own redeemer, thus attempting to set aside the only way by which man may be saved.

The angelic hosts (except those who rebelled with Satan) have always obeyed the Divine commands and would be delighted to receive the orders of taking the Good News to the children of men; but this is business delegated to men only and it is theirs to carry out. Ever since the days of Pentecost, especially, God has ordered and honored the efforts of men in the salvation of his fellows. The angel who told Joseph to flee into Egypt with the child Jesus, could have handled Herod or protected the child Jesus, but human agency was to be employed to protect the Divine Life. The angel who appeared to Cornelius could have delivered the message that Peter preached to him, but this would have encroached upon the rights and privileges of human servants; so the order was "Send men to Joppa."

It is notable, in observing how ready Divine operations are, when human hands have done the work which God has assigned them. It has been well said, "Man's extremity is God's opportunity." It is very seldom we meet God at the top of the flour barrel. The prophet's visit to the widow was when she was baking the last cake. When the four men let the palsied man down through the roof and lay him before the Master, was pronounced the time for Divine operations. When the stone was rolled away from the door of the sepulchre, there was given opportunity for the Master to say "Lazarus, come forth."

Have I clarified the fact enough to now say, God is waiting on us to do the work which he assigned to human hands in the saving of men? Are we ready to admit that the speed of the church is slowed down by human delinquency; that revivals of old-time religion would spread with more fire and fruitfulness if we—his divinely appointed agencies—would do the part which is ours? These burning facts should be allowed to weigh heavily upon our hearts. The religious conditions about us are enough to cause the setting aside of days of fasting and prayer that we may qualify more nearly with the commission of spreading the Good News.

Our duty is more than to merely get people saved. Wesley said, "It means more to retain the grace of God than to obtain it." This also means that more capability is required in helping men to retain the grace of God than to get them to obtain it. Is it not true that more real effort is being put forth to get men saved than to aid them in keeping saved?

There is much which may be done along this line, but one thing is worthy of mention and which is clearly set forth in the raising of Lazarus and included in the instruction of the Master, "Loose him and let him go." After he died, human hands prepared him for burial, applying the grave-clothes, etc. But when he came forth alive and responsive to the Lord's command, he was still "bound hand and foot and grave clothes about his face." Anybody knows such conditions would greatly hamper one in many ways; but Jesus said, "Loose him and let him go." Who is to loose him? The ones who put them on him. Human hands are to take them off. They put them on.

What does all this symbolize? If a man curses, commits murder, lies, steals and is a sinner, we say he is dead spiritually and common sentiment labels him as such; but when he gives up all his sins, comes to God and receives the life-giving touch which regenerates his soul, he is alive and is saved. He is a child of God, is in the family of God and is now worthy of confidence and to be received into the church. The grave-clothes must now be taken off. No longer is he to be condemned or charged of the sins which he formerly committed; they are forgiven and since God has forgiven him, we must also and no longer hold against him the wrongs which he did while he was a sinner.

It is wonderful how the Holy Scriptures declare a man free, who has received God's pardoning grace. We are told that God "removes our sins from us as far as the East is from the West and remembers them no more forever." Paul informed the Corinthian Church that if they forgave one of the wrongs, he also forgave him, lest Satan would get an advantage, for we are not ignorant concerning his devices. (2 Cor. 2:6-11). From where does one get the right to take a cruel pick and dig out from under the blood of Christ, sins which have been thus covered? If God grants pardon and sets one free, then we as Christoans should be like him to the extent that we will obey the command, "Loose him and let him go."

Rich or Poor.

There may be about you some people who are so rich they would not subscribe to THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, and some who are too poor. What do you think of sending them this gospel message, weekly, from now until February 1, at a cost to you of only 25c each? It might be the means of leading them to Christ, or into a richer Christian experience.

Little Children

Enjoy the Children's Page in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, and if you would reach their parents, it might be a wise step to send THE HERALD addressed to the child. They will find the Children's Page and the older folk will get their message also. You can send it from now until February 1, at a cost of only 25c.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

My last revival was in Groveport, Ohio, with the Church of The Nazarene. The membership of this church is small, the building small, and there was some difficulties in the church, but in spite of all this, God gave us a big little revival. Most of the difficulties were adjusted during the revival, and 25 seekers came to the altar, counting repeaters, and fourteen were saved and six sanctified. Five good, bright converts united with the church. Some of the others who were saved or sanctified were already members of the church, but had gotten their eyes off of God and their duty, and were backslid. We feel sure that the church was in far better condition when the revival ended than when it began, and if everybody will mind God there is a bright future for Groveport Church.

Members of the Lancaster Nazarene Church, and Parson's Avenue Nazarene Church of Columbus came in and helped fight the battle with us, and we are very grateful for their assistance.

Rev. Triphon G. Kaparoff is the pastor of this little church, and I can say I never worked with more devoted and congenial people than this good pastor and his wife. Brother Kaparoff is a native of Macedonia, the country where St. Paul once received an urgent call to "come over and help."

I am now engaged in a Home Missionary Campaign in Ligonier, Ind., on the Nazarene District superintended by Rev. J. W. Montgomery. We are not getting hold of the people very fast here, but we see omens of victory, and are encouraged to press the battle on. More later.

COATESVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.

We have just had a very fine evangelistic campaign at Coatesville, Pa. The services were held in the Olivet Methodist Episcopal Church, which has a membership of 1800. A large number were won to Christ and the church through the Home Visitation and the Evangelistic Meetings. Several were received into the church yesterday.

November 3rd we have a union campaign in Lock Haven, Pa. Several churches will unite in the combination method: the program includes one week of preparatory mass meetings for the church, followed by one week of Gospel Home Visitation, and then one week of Evangelistic Meetings. In eleven campaigns with the combination method there have been 3,100 decisions for Christ and the church.

We now have an open date beginning December 1st for 15 or 22 days. Shall be glad to send you terms and plan or any other information you may desire. Reply postal enclosed. With best wishes for a good year, I remain, S. B. Goff.

REPORT OF THE GADDIS-MOSER EVANGELISTIC PARTY.

At the West-side Church of the Nazarene at Decatur, Ill., with Bro. N. B. Jensen, pastor, the Lord gave a gracious revival. The church was praying and expecting and throughout the campaign stood nobly by us. The large building was well filled and despite some rainy weather attendance was remarkable. Great conviction came upon the unsaved and at first call the altar was filled and from that on to the closing service there were many seeking God. The children's meetings in the afternoons were well attended and enjoyed and the Sunday school on the last Sunday was turned into an evangelistic service bringing thirty-two young folks to the altar of prayer. God dealt with souls throughout the campaign in a very blessed manner and there were some unusual cases of old-fashioned victory. We were informed of some definite results from the noonday shop meetings.

A great Sunday School Rally on the second Sabbath under the splendid leadership of Dr. West, their efficient superintendent, brought a record attendance of 429. This church has had a remarkable growth under Bro. Jensen and his good wife who are beautiful spirits and much loved by their appreciative flock. A fine love offering was given the pastor the closing night and an abundant remuneration gladly given our party.

We are now at Fargo with the new, but live Nazarenes, and they act like they just would have victory in the name of Jesus.

PHENIX CITY, ALABAMA.

We closed last night a great revival meeting under a great big tent, and we have never had a better meeting during my ministry in this section of Alabama. The preaching was done by Rev. Luther A. Horn, of Mobile, Ala., our own Conference Evangelist, and his strong, Godly sermons were to the edification and salvation of many. We erected the tent on the lawn of our beautiful new Trinity Methodist Church, in one of the best locations in this city of a population of about 17,000; then Columbus, Ga., is just across the river with a population of about 60,000, and our congregations were large and from these two towns with large delegations coming to us from other towns. Brother Horn was at his best, and the Lord met with us in his mighty power and eternity alone can tell how much good was really done. We only received about sixteen into the church but our membership was given a new vision of a greater work they may do for him. Hundreds were blessed at the altars, and Sunday we had a regular pentecost. Old settlers said that no meeting in the history of Phenix City had had such an effect upon the city during the last twenty years as this. Brother Horn says that in all his travels he has not found a more attractive church than our new building here. We realize far better than we can express, that this great church building has come in answer to faith. There are no rich people in our church, but our church property here is estimated to be worth $100,000, and we feel with such a wonderful church building, and our people having been baptized and refreshed with God's Spirit, that we are facing better days.

May God's blessings rest and abide upon Dr. Morrison and all the readers of The Herald.

J. M. Truett, P. C.

CLAY CITY, KENTUCKY.

We have been busy most of the summer and have seen some glorious results. We recently conducted a three-weeks' meeting at Raceland, Ky., with the Rev. H. D. Harris. Raceland is midway between Russell and Greenup. The C. & O. R. R. is now building, I was told, the largest railroad shops in the world at Raceland. It is a hard field but we found some of the finest people that we have ever met and the result of the meeting was satisfactory to the pastor, church and community. The pastor is a fine character, splendid preacher and loved by all. We were entertained in the beautiful new home of Mr. and Mrs. Forte, the postmaster, and they certainly did their job well. Fine people. There were many blessed, converted, reclaimed and united with the church a few outstanding characters.

We are at this writing assisting the Rev. P. S. Elam, at Clay City, Ky. The crowds are large and interest deep. This is a very interesting church to me as Clay City was the first place I ever attended a conference, and the first Bishop I had ever seen, Bishop Morrison, and he made a profound impression on me as a boy preacher.

We are filling our slate up for winter and spring.

REPORT OF BRO. PYUN AND SR. LI SARIWON, KOREA.

Bro. Pyun is praising God for his unchangeable love and goodness during another month and because he has been blessed and kept by the power of God. He says that even though he is an insufficient one God has worked through him and has done a work in the hearts and lives of others.

God's blessing has been upon Bro. Pyun as he has visited the homes of the Christians and dealt with them according to their spiritual conditions and needs. The older and more established ones he only plans to visit once in two weeks but the new converts and seekers he endeavors to visit two and three times a week. They are very independent upon this spiritual help and Bro. Pyun is always anxious to go to them in the fullness of the Spirit so as to be made as great a help and blessing as possible. Labor conditions in Sariwon are very bad indeed, there being at the present time about 70 percent of the laboring class without work and from 15,000 to 20,000 families living on an income of forty sen a day. Under such conditions the Christians have many trials and temporal difficulties, but Bro. Pyun is glad to report that they are living in victory, trusting God for the supplying of their needs. Praise his Name!

An epidemic prevailed in Sariwon this month which caused great suffering and many deaths, but in a miraculous way the lives of all the Christians were preserved and Bro. Pyun feels like praising God especially for this. How blessed it is to abide under his shadow and under the cover of his wings. The daughter of one of the Christians, Bro. Pek, was taken down with this plague and death seemed certain. She fell into an unconscious condition and for four days could take nothing to eat. In spite of the darkness that hung over the home the parents kept their trust in the Lord and Bro. Pyun visited them twice each day and held on in earnest prayer for healing even though, humanly speaking, it seemed impossible. One day Bro. Pyun went in the room where she was and took hold of her hand and felt her pulse. It seemed that life was ebbing away but still Bro. Pyun trusted and held on to God. The family gathered into the room to see her pass away and prayed that God would be with her spirit as she left the world, but praise be unto God, he performed a miracle and within three hours of the time when the last prayer was prayed she sat up and asked for something to eat. Before that night had passed she smiled and stood on her feet, perfectly whole. Hallelujah! Bro. Pyun says they witnessed the kind of a miracle performed by Jesus himself on Jairus' daughter and Peter's mother-in-law. Praise God his power is the same!

One of the new seekers this month was a very wicked man known throughout the community as the chief of the drunkards. He is an official of a certain office and lived with a concubine. However, in spite of the hardness of his heart the Spirit dealt with him and caused him to abandon his life of sin and seek the Saviour. He has been truly regenerated and is now a changed man—a new creature in Christ Jesus. Praise God!

Another new seeker is a woman who lives near the church and who for a long time had opposed the Christians. She has repented of all her sins and found the Saviour. Praise God! Another who had persecuted the Christians, a Mr. Kim, was convicted this month and has begun to come to the church and seek the Lord.

Sr. Li praises God for health and protection during the hot season and because he has been with her and has given victory in her work for him.

She is glad to report a good spiritual condition of the Christians. One family removed to a village about six miles away but they are continuing to attend all the church services. There is a church of another denomination right across the road from where they live but they prefer to come to their own church where they can hear the full gospel preached. A family who moved to Sariwon from another place have begun to attend, and seem very earnest. And still another family who moved to Sariwon from Pyeng Yang have voluntarily begun to attend our church. They are very zealous and are preaching to their neighbors.

The workers have divided Sariwon into three districts and have appointed leaders of each district who visit the Christians in their district and who lead a prayer meeting somewhere in their district each Friday night. God is richly blessing this work.

One day in personal work Sr. Li met a very superstitious family, one to whom she felt that God had sent her to make Jesus known. She saw the skin of a dog hanging in front of the door so made this her subject of approach, asking what this was and why it was there. They said that they had done this to prevent the god of disease from entering the home. There were many idols in the home to whom they sacrificed continually. Whenever they had any meat or anything special they always gave the idols some first. They lived in constant fear of the idols, and were afraid to even speak freely for fear of incurring the wrath of the gods. Sr. Li told them how she had once been an idol worshipper but now she had found the true and living God and they were greatly influenced. The young lady in the home took Sr. Li into her room and wanted to know more about this, and decided to follow Jesus Christ. Please pray for the salvation of this needy family.

Please keep much in prayer for the work at Sariwon and for Bro. Pyun and Sr. Li.

A REPORT FROM THE FIELD.

For some time I have intended giving a brief report of my meetings but have been so busy have not taken time. To give a report in full would take too much space, so I shall just touch the high points.

Starting the first of June, Mrs. Lewis and I began at Key Street Church, Princeton, W. Va., with Rev. A. S. Clear, pastor. Dr. W. M. Morrell, pastor of First Church, Princeton, whom we helped in March, did the preaching. This was a very successful meeting and one thing delightful was the fellowship of these brethren. The Holston Conference met at Princeton a few years ago and Dr. H. C. Morrison gave the evangelistic addresses, which linger yet in the hearts of the people. The influence of his ministry contributed to this meeting.

From there we went to Delanco, N. J., Fletcher Grove camp meeting, where we met devout followers of God. Our co-laborers were Ray N. Johnson and F. Lincicome. Never has it been my privilege to labor with two finer spirits. Bro. Johnson has no equal to his experience and age. The future holds great promise for this youthful evangelist. Bro. Lincicome is unsurpassed when it comes to delivering a full and complete gospel. Many times the service was swallowed up by waves of glory and shouts of victory. Am happy to say that they invited us back for the following year.

From there we rushed to Mt. Olivet, Ky., to join our good friend and brother, O. H. Callis, in the Penn Grove camp meeting. With his fearless spirit and tactful manner he preached as few men do. It was our pleasure also to meet and become acquainted with his godly wife and beautiful little daughter, Laura Woodson, who can sing like a nightingale. Mrs. Callis generously assisted in the services with her violin.

Leaving Mt. Olivet early Monday morning, we all five rushed to Centerville, N. J., to join my brother, Rev. W. H. Lewis and assist him in a two-weeks' campaign. This was a very hard meeting but fruitful.

Leaving New Jersey, Mrs. Lewis and I turned Southward to help C. O. Dorn at Sumter, S. C., in a camp meeting. Here Rev. J. R. Parker did the preaching in a fearless and effective manner which resulted in many conversions. Mrs. Parker was also present and rendered valuable aid in prayer and personal work.

Fig. N. C., was our next stop in the Ashe County Camp Meeting. This year marked great progress in the history of the camp. We had people visiting us from nine states. Rev. C. M. Dunaway was the principal speaker and was at his best. We also had with us Rev. C. O. Dorn, Rev. Chas. Williams and Rev. W. H. Lewis, who brought us helpful messages. The closing days Hon. W. D. Upshaw came by and brought us two wonderful messages. It was our good fortune to have the Phifer Sisters of Sumter, N. C., with their musical instruments, who captivated the people and contributed greatly to the spiritual welfare of the meeting.

From Fig. we turned back to South Carolina to join Rev. S. E. Ledbetter in two meetings near Sumter. Bro. Ledbetter preached with unction and a burdened heart. Never have we been treated with more courtesy and hospitality than in this grand old state.

M. V. Lewis.

Will You Help Us?

We propose to send THE HERALD to all new subscribers for twenty-five cents until February 1st, 1930. This is a very liberal offer, and cannot bring us directly any financial gain. Our object is to place the paper for a number of months into the hands of people who are not acquainted with it, with the hope that we may be able to bring them into more vital relationships with our Lord Jesus. We believe that THE HERALD carries a scriptural, vital message that will have a very gracious effect upon those who read it from week to week.

We receive letters from every quarter of the country and frequently from overseas from people who rejoice and thank God for the blessing that comes to them through the reading of THE HERALD. This greatly encourages us. We are longing, under the guidance and help of the Holy Spirit, to be able to pass out the true Bread of Life to all people who read the pages of this paper, to interest them more deeply in the teachings of the Holy Scriptures, to bring them to see the fullness of the atonement made by our Lord. We are longing to help the people into the great, glorious experience and life of full salvation.

We earnestly appeal to all of our subscribers to help us at this time; interest your friends, get their subscriptions. As you know, the price from now to February 1, 1930, is only twenty-five cents. Inform them that each week the paper will contain a sermon from some able minister of the Gospel, that we are discussing in these columns the most vital questions of Bible doctrine, religious experience and Christian activity, that we are preaching Jesus, the Son of God, the Saviour of men, who died and is alive forevermore, whose mighty power and inexhaustible resources of life make possible the salvation of all men from all sin who may here and now repent and believe for pardon, or consecrate and believe for the cleansing which is provided in his precious, all-atoning blood. Come and help us in this good work. Help your fellow-beings. Help your Lord to bring the news of his redemption to a lost world. Help us to sustain and carry forward the great good work in which we are engaged. Get a blessing for yourself by making yourself a blessing to your fellow-beings. This is your interest as well as ours, and it is with your co-operation that this great idea can be carried to success. The loyalty of our friends has never been questioned; our sincerity in our work has never been doubted, we are sure. Let us co-operate in this campaign to scatter full salvation literature over the land, and thus you will enjoy the blessings which shall attend our efforts.

Our evangelists, like the pioneers of old, are entering the "unexplored" regions, proclaiming the blessed truth of full salvation for all men from all sin, and meeting with good results. But ask any of them what would have been accomplished had their evangelistic tours been preceded by holiness literature and the people presented the truth and the community prepared to receive the preaching of it? They would answer, in one accord, that they would have labored under more pleasant and encouraging environments, and that their efforts would have been far more largely rewarded. Thus we can appreciate the importance of sending holiness literature to eradicate prejudice and prepare hearts for the preaching of full salvation. You know THE HERALD, that it stands in the open, fearless in its purpose, radical in its principles, and reasonable in its declarations. Thousands owe their present state of grace directly or indirectly to THE HERALD. But we need you to help us get THE HERALD to the people. It can be done! It will be done! Let each of us prove our worth, and have our name recorded as one who helped in this great and noble work.

An Interesting Statement From Dr. Fosdick.

would like the readers of THE HERALD to read a statement recently made by Dr. Fosdick.

"I am a modernist. I am not attacking knowledge and I am making no cheap and easy retreat to mysticism. The problem of adjusting one's religious thinking to the modern scientific world-view has been my personal problem and in a sense it always will be, and I would not abate one jot or tittle of emphasis upon its significance.

"But I have watched liberal churches grow sophisticated, absorb their religious energies in theological adjustments, spend their time informing the world how up-to-date they are, become intellectually complacent, lose out of their religion all the passion of an ethical adventure and the deep resources of dynamic spiritual power, until they were not worth to the community what it cost to run them. May God save us from any such inglorious anticlimax!"

Dr. Fosdick makes it clear that he is a modernist and expects to remain so. We doubt if the Doctor is correct when he says he is "not attacking knowledge." There is quite a bit of what is supposed to be knowledge in the history of the Church, the doctrines of the Bible, and the gospel, which has been a tremendous power in the world, which he does attack.

Dr. Fosdick denies the pre-existence of Jesus, his Virgin Birth, his Godhead, and his resurrection. There is a tremendous amount of teaching with reference to these great scriptural truths that is most valuable knowledge, that he has set himself to drive out of the thinking, faith and life of the people. With his attitude toward Jesus Christ, I do not see how he can regard the church as the Church of Christ. With the plain teachings of the Bible with reference to the Christ of prophecy, of the Gospels, and the Epistles, which Dr. Fosdick denies, he has no right to claim to be a Christian. He has no faith and, in the nature of things, cannot have faith in Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of sins. He is logically forced to believe that Christ's claim to pre-existence, to the glory he had with the Father before the world was, and the oneness he had with God, from whom he came, and to whom he was to return, were false claims. He cannot worship and believe for salvation in the Christ of the Bible.

In describing the liberal churches which have lost their spiritual power, and "are not worth their upkeep," it may be that Dr. Fosdick is describing the church of which he is pastor far more than he thinks. A people who will employ for their pastor a man who claims that Christ had no existence before his birth, was not of virgin birth, never performed a miracle, and had no resurrection—they are not Christian people. They may claim to be, and may think they are. They may do many good works, in a way, but they cannot endorse Dr. Fosdick's views by calling him to be their pastor, and be worshippers of the Lord Jesus, devout people in communion with the Holy Spirit.

Preachers cannot endorse Fosdick and be true to the Christ he rejects. The poor man is blinded with his own conceits, and must repent of the fearful sin of denying the Godhead of Christ, and his saving power, or he will find at last that the door is shut. Is it possible that Dr. Fosdick, or any one else, can believe that Christ was a mere human being and his wonderful claims to being one and equal with the Father, were false, and yet, he has power to forgive sins, and is a being worthy of the devout worship of mankind?

It is quite impossible for any man to take the attitude toward Jesus and the Holy Scriptures that Dr. Fosdick has taken, and be a Christian man. He is at war with the best knowledge of all human history. He is at war with the prophets who predicted the coming of Jesus. He is at war with the apostles who wrote the Gospels and the Epistles. He is at war with all the great teachers and preachers of the past who have gone forward preaching the Godhead of Christ, the redemptive power of his death upon the cross. He is at war today with all the true evangelical forces that are seeking to save a lost world through the atoning merit of the blood of Christ shed upon the cross. He is at war with God. Any man who denies the Deity of Jesus Christ, and his eternal oneness with the Father, and the redemption he wrought upon the cross for the human race, is at war with the Holy Trinity and the saving truths of the gospel. He has sown the seeds of doubt in thousands of hearts. He has quenched the faith in countless young people. He has offended many little ones. It had been better for him to have had a millstone bound about his neck and been cast into the deepest sea, than that he should have lived and made the war he has made against gospel truth, and the evangelical forces that bring men to repentance and saving faith in Jesus Christ.

The Scriptures speak of the stone which the builders set at nought, but became the head of the corner, then declares, "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

H. C. MORRISON.

A New Editor.

The Way of Faith, published at Columbia, S. C., has always been a paper carrying in its columns great love and faith. It has always exalted Jesus Christ, high over all powers of evil. The management of this paper has been fortunate in securing for its recent editor Rev. John L. Brasher, a man of superior education and natural gifts. At his best, he is one of the most powerful preachers I have heard. He will put into this paper profound thinking on the great essential truths of the gospel. This editorship will give him an opportunity, while pastor, to speak the saving truths of the gospel to a host of readers. May God bless him, graciously, in this new channel of the service of his Master, and the readers of the paper he edits. While the paper is published in Columbia, S. C., the Editor's office is in Boaz, Ala. Brasher is a man that you have to know a bit to understand the deep channels of his devotion to his Saviour, and his love for his friends. He is one of the most delightful men to take a long walk and talk with in the woods between the services at a camp meeting, that I have ever known. Somehow, I get closer to a man, and understand his intelligence, his faith, his devotion—the real inward man—better in a long walk and talk in the quiet woods, than any other way. A few times I have had this very delightful privilege with John Brasher. May God greatly bless him in this new field of his labors. H. C. M.

The Passing of Brother Hyde.

I do not know when I have been more shocked and grieved over the death of a beloved brother than that of Rev. E. L. Hyde, of New Jersey. I had known Brother Hyde for more than a quarter of a century. He was one of the most cheerful, hopeful, zealous evangelists I ever knew. I think he held some eighty revival meetings in the City of Philadelphia. There was great demand for his services. There was simplicity, clearness and winsomeness in the manner and the message of the Lord as he gave it to the people, that drew a great number of souls to the repentance and saving faith in the Lord Jesus, and a multitude of God's children into the blessing of sanctification through the precious blood of our Redeemer, which cleanseth from all sin.

Brother Hyde used to be a most delightful and useful brother at the Mountain Lake Park camp meeting. He was frequently put forward to take the collections to finance the camp, because of his wonderfully kind spirit and good humor. One of his greatest works was done at Ocean Grove, N. J. For years, he had charge of the holiness meetings in a certain hall set apart for that purpose. He was able to present the message with such a shining face, and such a spirit of love and sympathy, that he drew the people to crowd the hall where he held his daily holiness meetings, and great numbers would gather at the altar and receive the sanctifying power.

He will be held in loving memory, not only among the multitudes who were blessed by his ministry, but by multitudes of preachers with whom he labored and associated. I never heard any person speak one word of criticism against Brother Hyde.

A few years ago he delivered the course of lectures on Evangelism at Asbury College and seemed to win the love and admiration of all the people. Dear Beloved Brother has gone from us, but we shall know where to find him. We extend to his family our warmest sympathy and pray that God may comfort them in their bereavement.

H. C. MORRISON.

A Faithful Servant of the Lord Jesus.

I have read with deep regret of the death of Rev. R. L. Selle. He was one of the most devout and industrious pastors I ever knew. He could not be satisfied without the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of believers. He was a pastor who constantly looked after the needs and interests of his people. I held more than one meeting with him when he was pastor, and was with him in several camp meetings. He was a Christian gentleman of high order, as well as a devout Christian and earnest preacher. He often contributed to the holiness papers and frequently his enraptured mind ascended into the realm of poetry, and he wrote some very excellent poems. I can hardly call to mind any man in my knowledge who was a more zealous worker for the salvation of his fellowbeings. He was a great believer in the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification, claimed the experience, and illustrated in his life the testimony he gave. I have no doubt but he is now in Paradise in the enjoyment of his Lord and many souls who were blessed under his ministry. It is with a degree of sadness that we recognize the fact that we shall see him no more in the flesh, but we rejoice in the hope of meeting him among the blest in the home beyond the skies. Let all of us who knew and loved Brother Selle gird ourselves afresh and press the battle faithfully until we shall have finished our course and through the infinite mercy of God, the cleansing of the blood of Christ, and the guidance of the Holy Spirit we, too, shall go to join the holy family in our Father's house on high. H. C. MORRISON.

TWO ORDERS OF CHRISTIANS

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

O one who half way observes, it is a demonstrated fact that there are two classes of Christians in the church. There are many "professors" of religion, but we fear that there are fewer "possessors."

It used to be in olden times, in the days when it was difficult to get into the church, and as difficult to remain in the church, that any one who was a member of the church was really considered to be a "born-again" Christian. We recall the days of our childhood when the minister stood up in the pulpit to preach, we expected to hear such trumpet sounds of the gospel note that we should have been keenly disappointed had it not been so.

The old-timers preached mightily on sin, hell, judgment and heaven, until you felt you would sink into the bottomless pit forever if you did not "flee from the wrath to come," and usually, after such a sermon, there were many who left the hog-pen of sin and turned their steps back toward the father's house.

Those were great old days! Days of power, of conviction because of sin, of a sense of God as his Spirit moved and worked in the hearts of men and women. I am thankful that I lived in those blessed days of gospel preaching, of the declaration of the power of the blood, and the mightiness of Christ to save and keep from sin.

The old-time minister of the gospel commanded the respect and confidence of the people. I recall that when the "circuit rider" would come to our home—and he usually made our home his headquarters over the fifth Sunday—that we all stood in awe, because we felt a man of God was in our presence. Some of us youngsters had been out on a frolic one night, and while we were gone the pastor came, and when we were told that he was at our home, I felt ashamed and embarrassed to meet him the next morning, for fear he would ask where I had been.

But somehow, that state of things does not seem to prevail in the times in which we are living. Young people can boastfully defend the dance, mothers and fathers can play cards, attend all sorts of worldly amusements and "live as the world," generally, and seem to think it matters little to any one whether they are worldly or spiritual. They represent one class of Christians, so-called, and are a hurt to the church and a stumblingblock to the young people.

But we are thankful that, even in these days of unbelief and loss of faith, in these days when the blessed Book is being discarded and torn to pieces for the opinions of men who are not illuminated by the Spirit of God, that some of us can know that we have "passed from death unto life," and have the consciousness of having been "twice born." And while we see much that distresses and grieves us, we "know whom we have believed, and are persuaded that he is able to keep that which we have committed unto him against that day." I rejoice that I came under the power of the gospel and found the peace that passeth all understanding.

"I came to Jesus as I was—

Wearied, and worn, and sad;

I found in him a resting place,

And he hath made me glad."

Reader, to which class do you belong? The "professor" or the "possessor?" Wesley said, "I am inclined to think that whosoever finds redemption in the blood of Jesus has then the choice of walking in the higher or the lower path." Then he adds, "Will it be a little thing to have a lower place than you might have had in the kingdom of your Father?" Worth thinking about!

100 Books Free.

We have a little book entitled "The Lost Christ," which is a most remarkable sermon preached by the noted Gipsy Smith, and it was so effective that in many places he was requested to repeat the sermon, in one instance, four or five times. The price of it is 35c.

To the first 100 persons sending us one good reason of not over 50 words length, "Why Good Books Make the Most Appropriate Gifts for Christmas," we will send a copy of "The Lost Christ," postpaid, free of charge. These must be in this office not later than Nov. 30, 1929.

Address your "Reason" to The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

Attention!

When the new dormitory for girls was erected at Asbury College, it was thought to be large enough to take care of all of our young ladies for years to come, but this year's influx of co-eds has overflowed the dormitory at the very beginning of school, necessitating placing the Bethel Academy girls in a dormitory to themselves.

They are nicely taken care of and are quite eager to make their new domicile attractive. One of our needs in this building is a piano and it has occurred to me that if any reader of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD has a piano in good repair, which could stand continued service, and which could be donated for this new dormitory, it would greatly enhance the pleasure of the girls who reside there and would supply a real need.

If any other reader feels prompted to send a check for the furnishing of a cozy living room this also would answer an imperative need and would complete the interior equipment of the dormitory.

Should this appeal interest any reader, kindly notify Professor Geo. B. Burkholder, Principal Bethel Academy, Wilmore, Ky.

That Young Man

In your community who needs the gospel, might be reached if you would have a copy of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD mailed to him, personally, every week from now until February 1. It would cost you only 25c to try it.

Help Some Boy to Find Christ

This Christmas. Just at this time we have gotten hold of one of the most attractive Testaments, just the thing for a boy to carry in his pocket. There is a place for the name and address; three pages devoted to telling one How to Become a Christian; then two songs, one "Carry Your Bible," and another, "Jesus is a Friend of Mine." The music is written with the songs.

There are a number of attractive colored illustrations, and for a small Testament, the type excels any we have seen for clearness, which makes it easy to read. The chapter numbers are in figures, and the binding is a beautiful dark green imitation leather.

This is just the Testament for a Christmas gift; it is so attractively gotten up that a boy just cannot resist reading it. The price is only 50c.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

DETERMINATION.

Dear Boys and Girls: I have written a big word to begin my letter to you. Some of you little ones may have to spell it and ask some one what it means. You all will need it often in your lives. It may be this cool morning some boy or girl will feel like staying in the warm bed longer instead of getting out in the cold, but you said, "I must get up right now for breakfast will be ready before I get there," and you had to have determination to say "I will get up right now." So when you were ready for the good warm food you were glad you did hustle up. When you know what you ought to do have determination to say "I will." But if there is something bad that you know you ought not to do but you would like to do just say, "I will not." That is good determination. If you do a wrong thing that is a bad determination. A girl was asked to go with a party where she was not sure it was right to go, and her mother was not there to tell her if it was right to go, and as she was not sure about it she said, "No, I will not go." So be sure a thing is right before you do it. A boy is asked to smoke a cigarette but his mother has told him not to learn that habit for it is wrong. Don't do it. Learn to say no when wrong things tempt you. Be sure you are in the right then go ahead.

With love to you all and Aunt Bettie.
Yours truly,
Mary Hudson.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I've been thinking for some time I would write to your page and when I read Miss Beulah Bassett's letter of Sohag, Upper Egypt, that you had printed in The Herald of August 14th, it encouraged me to try to say a few words to The Herald cousins in way of encouragement, for it is like you said, "We never know what may be done through page ten." For I feel sure God's all-seeing eye is upon page ten, and he sees and knows all that is being said or done. It is like the song that says "Every step that you make this great eye is awake, there's an eye watching you." This great eye is God. Yes, cousins, God knows it all. There is nothing hid from him. He knows all we do, think or say; he knows the very intent of our hearts. Praise his holy name. O, I shall never forget my wonderful experience of salvation. Early on the morning of October 15, 1912, God rolled the burden of sin from my heart. I do praise and thank him for salvation. Since then God has given me a deeper experience by baptizing me with the Holy Ghost. O how I magnify the name of Jesus; he's a wonderful Savior to me. I wouldn't turn away from him for all the world, yea, ten thousand worlds like this. I'm poor and needy, so far as this world's goods are concerned, yet I'm satisfied and contented with Jesus. I want to be more and more like Jesus. Cousins, I have four children living, one girl and three boys, and they are not all saved. Will you and Aunt Bettie join me in prayer that they all shall be saved and filled with the Holy Ghost, and that God will use them somehow, somewhere in his vineyard? It is my heart's desire and prayer that God will use my entire family in some way to win souls for Jesus, and make them willing and glad to suffer for Jesus' sake. I'm so glad today I have the assurance of eternal life. As time rolls on, opportunities fewer, and eternity nearer, I'm thanking the Lord I'm nearer Heaven. Dear Aunt Bettie and dear Bro. Morrison can never know the inspiration they have been to me through the pages of The Herald. I'm unable to find words to express it. God bless you both. May the Lord strengthen Bro. Morrison both physically and spiritually that he may be able to continue in his work. I enjoy so much page one By The Editor. Every word is loaded with truth. Thank God for the few who don't handle his word deceitfully and who fear God rather than man. Cousins, I will be glad to read in page ten your testimonies of what the Lord has done for you. May God bless you every one. I want to meet you in Heaven sometime. I will be glad to receive letters from any one who cares to write.

Your Sister in Christ,
Mrs. W. T. Walker.
Rt. 1, Box 166, Arcadia, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: So often have I wanted to write to you and tell you how I enjoy your writing in The Herald, one of the best papers I ever read. I always look for your pieces first and enjoy them so much. I am a shut-in with rheumatism; am 77 years old, and enjoy The Herald so much. Hope Bro. Morrison may be spared many years to do his good work. Am glad to say "His grace has brought me safe thus far, and grace will lead me home." Your admirer,

Dear Aunt Bettie: I hope you will let me join your happy band of boys and girls. I am thirteen years old and in the first year of high school. I have brown curls and dark brown eyes. My birthday is November 3. I am a Christian and would like to hear more about this little band if any of the cousins would care to write to me. Mary Woolums, I think your middle name is Elizabeth. Freda Hiller, I think your name is Ruth. I hope to see this letter in print.

Uletta Thompson.
508 Broadway N. Buhl, Idaho.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have written several letters before and have never seen them in print so thought I would try once more. My father takes The Herald and I surely do enjoy reading it, especially page ten. I go to Sunday school and church every Sunday. I have about a mile to go. I am thirteen years old and my birthday is Nov. 26. Have I a twin? I have been a Christian for only a short time, but I surely wouldn't give it up for all the world has to offer. I was saved under the preaching of Dr. John Owen and sanctified under Dr. Mingledorff. The camp ground is only a short distance from my place, being a half mile. It is named after Bishop Asbury. We have a nice tabernacle and in it the meetings are held. I have heard Dr. Morrison preach and think he is a great preacher. I am sorry to see that he has been ill. I have two brothers and two sisters, one of which had a letter in The Herald. They are all Christians. My parents, grandparents and nearly all of my uncles and aunts are also Christians. One of my grandfathers, who was ninety years of age and was a great Christian, passed on to the other side just last week. I want your prayers that I can be a better Christian. As this letter is getting long I will close. I also want others to write to me.

Paul W. Slagay.
Washburn, N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I hope I will be admitted for a short time. I had a letter printed on page ten last December. I received lots of letters, books and some money. I wrote to several but was unable to answer all, so I hope all that did not get a reply will accept this as one. I am confined to wheel chair and bed all the time and am so nervous I can't hardly write. I thank you all, and will be glad to hear from you again.

Your cripple friend,
Owen J. Pickens.
Waterloo, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am wondering if there is room for a new visitor? If so, I would love to tell the little folks of my experience when I was only a little girl, and hope it will help some little girl or boy to let Jesus come first in their lives. It came to me as a great question like this—that I must love God above everything. I answered the question immediately but not in God's will, for I said I can love God above everything except my mama and papa, (the idol of most every child's heart). That same question continued to come time and again, and I thought God unjust, for it seemed impossible for me to love God the best, even better than that love I had for my earthly father and mother. But one day I read a letter on the Children's Page, and the writer said, "If we love God more than we love father or mother, then we could love father and mother with a greater love even than we could before." Isn't that great? When I read this I said if that is the way, sure I can love God the best. As soon as I answered in his will, there was a flash of joy that filled my soul which I did not understand just then, but I knew that the question was settled. May God bless Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Mrs. B. H. Smith.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am wondering if there's room for a Texas girl to join your happy band of boys and girls. If so I would like to join. I haven't much to say for I am sending a riddle which will take up a right smart of room. This is a Bible riddle and I expect all of the cousins to try their luck at guessing it.

A Bible Riddle.

God made Adam out of dust,
But thought it best to make me first;
So I was made before the man,
To answer God's most holy plan.

My body God did make complete,
But without arms or hands or feet.
My ways and acts he did control,
But to my body gave no soul.

A living being I became
And Adam gave to me a name.
I, from his presence then withdrew,
And more of Adam never knew.

I did my Maker's law obey,
And from them never went astray.
Thousands of miles I go in fear,
But seldom on the earth appear.

For a purpose wise which God did see
He put a living soul in me,
A soul from me my God did claim
And took from me that soul again.

For when from me that soul had fled
I was the same as when first made,
And without hands, or feet, or soul,
I wander on from pole to pole.

I labored hard by day and night,
To fallen men I gave great light.
Thousands of people young and old,
Will at my death great light behold.

No right or wrong can I conceive,
The Scriptures I cannot believe,
Though my name therein is found,
They are to me an empty sound.

No fear of death doth trouble me.
Real happiness I shall never see,
To heaven, I shall never go,
Nor to the grave, or to hell below.

Now, when these lines you slowly read,
Go, search your Bible with all speed,
For that my name is recorded there
I honestly to you declare.

Now, everyone of you cousins get to work and answer this riddle. Please write to page ten and give your answer.

If I see this in print I will come again. I would surely like to see this in print to surprise my parents. I will close and give others room to write.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you move over and let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years of age and in the fourth grade. My birthday is April 2. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. My mother and father take The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with B and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I belong to the M. E. Church. Father and mother are Christians. We have family prayer each day. I pray God may save my big brother and sister. I say my prayers every night. I ask the prayers of The Herald family that my mouth may get well.

REV. EDWIN L. HYDE, D.D.

A most impressive service over the remains of the Rev. E. L. Hyde, D.D., was held in the Pitman M. E. Church, Tuesday, October 15, at 2 P. M.

The church was thronged with friends from Philadelphia and Pitman and vicinity, who came to pay tribute to a man whose life and character had made such a wide-spread impression through 45 years of faithful ministry.

Dr. John G. Wilson read the sentences on entering the church, members of the Pitman Rotary Club acting as pall-bearers. Dr. Belting announced the opening hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers." Prayer was offered by Dr. M. E. Synder, of Ocean Grove, N. J. "When They Ring Those Golden Bells," a favorite of Dr. Hyde's, was then sung by the soloist, Miss Stoney. Dr. R. H. Crawford read the first lesson. Dr. John Watchorn read the second lesson. Dr. George M. Broadhead announced the hymn, "O Could I Speak the Matchless Worth."

Dr. C. L. Gaul read the resolutions of the Philadelphia Preachers' Meeting concerning Dr. Hyde's wonderful record as follows:

On Friday last there closed the earthly life of a true prophet of God. He was called of the Holy Spirit to the sacred work of the Christian Ministry and aptly specialized in the field of Evangelism.

He gave the earlier years of his service for Christ in Holiness Christian Church. Since 1917 he has been a recognized evangelist in the Conference and Area.

A sturdiness of faith in Christ and in the Gospel of full redemption was the source of his strength. He called men to repentance with winsome pathos and earnestness. He led believers into the richer experiences of things spiritual and incited them to intenser service for the Master.

His wide range of travel is marked by distinct advances of the Kingdom of his Lord and ours. The Holiness meetings under his direction at Ocean Grove were a blessing to multitudes who thronged to hear his interpretation of the truth. This field at Pitman is fairer because he led and labored here.

The Conference, where he had his loved fellowships, mourns the close of his career.

The Ministers' Meeting of Philadelphia and vicinity of October 14, 1929, charges us to make proper appreciation of this servant of Jesus Christ and to convey to his bereaved family its sincerest sympathies.

Dr. Wilson announced the reason of Dr. Boswell's absence. He was detained by illness. Addresses were made first by Dr. Geo. W. Henson, who dwelt tenderly upon the calling of Edwin L. Hyde as an Evangelist. He "preached the Word" and "rightfully divided the Word of God."

This is the highest calling which can come to any man. He was always on the outlook for illustration to brighten up the Word of God. Wherever he went he was the pastor's helper. He had peculiar tact and extraordinary common sense.

Dr. Henson was followed in an address by Dr. T. W. McKinney who said in part:

"May I speak a word for my friend? I shall miss him much. He was well-started on his way as a Christian. He knew he had passed from death unto life. He was true to the historic faith. He held the confidence and esteem of his brethren. He had a keen sense of humor. He was a master of assemblies. I have never toiled with any man who could conduct an after meeting with such consummate success as could he. How shall we face the future?"

Dr. Wilson followed Dr. McKinney with a brief but touching address. He said in part:

"The beautiful, fragrant flowers we gather in the garden of heart-love. We love him for what he was. His life had something of the love and passion of Jesus. Edwin Hyde knew Jesus Christ. That is the secret of the life that he lived. He was an intimate friend of Jesus. What a joy it was to have intimate fellowship with Dr. Hyde."

Dr. Belting made the closing prayer and benediction was offered by Dr. Munhall. The interment was made in Hill Crest Cemetery, contiguous to Pitman.

LET US NOT FORGET.

Few people are so fortunate as to have practically every task they have begun finished when their summons comes, but in a large measure this was true of our sainted sister, Rev. Minnie L. Roberts who left us a little over six months ago. For twenty-seven years her tireless hands had toiled on and on; by the time one task was well on its way to completion another was well begun; but even with this constant moving, she had few uncompleted tasks. However, there were a few, perhaps God permitted it to be so, that he might have something to link us on to this great work that she was having to lay down.

When the first line relative to the "Unfinished Task" was read, I am sure that it was with you, as with me, "By God's Grace," I said, "I will help complete the work," and that resolution is still dominant in my soul today. I am still working and planning as to how I can help finish the work that she had begun. I am finding several avenues through which I believe most of us can work, if our hearts are enlisted, and I believe they are. No one could have ever visited Rest Cottage in her day and not in some way be unmoved by the same great burning passion to help those who are so helpless, the unfortunate girl.

Soon after her "Home-going" it was decided to make one of the "un-finished tasks" a memorial to her memory, not that she needed such, for she has them by the thousands all over this great land of ours, but that those who should come to the blessed institution in the years to come would see and come under the influence of the holy life, "She being dead yet speaketh." I speak of the laundry building that she had so much desired to build and equip with modern laundry equipment. Up to this time wherever the matter has been presented there has been a generous response in pledging to this work, but these are the days of the year when there are so many calls coming in that we are in danger of forgetting Rest Cottage with her large family to be cared for, and even the pledge that we made for so noble a work. Bear with me, while I urge that we do not forget this noble work so unselfishly started by our dear sister, and even in these strenuous days do our very best to bring up our pledges to the MEMORIAL and then add a little bit for "Current Expenses."

May I mention one thing more I would like for you to do for Rest Cottage? By all means put Rest Cottage on your prayer list and daily pray that God will bless and enable our precious Brother Roberts and his noble band of co-laborers to keep the light ever burning for every wayward daughter that desires to get back to a life of purity. Then, you can give as God has given to you, but you say that you have nothing to give of any consequence, but you have a neighbor who has, so pray that God will open the eyes of that neighbor to the needs of this great institution, and incidentally drop a word here or there relative to the work being done, and an occasional Rescue Messenger put

A Fixed Income--- Asbury College Demand Notes

Asbury College one year Demand Notes read: "On Demand after one year's notice in writing we promise to pay—"

Reasons Why Asbury Demand Notes are Better

- FIRST: They guarantee a fixed income—6%. No period of high money rates lasts indefinitely. Good interest with good security is not always to be had. Asbury offers both.
- SECOND: They are the most flexible security for one to hold. Bonds cannot be cashed until due. Bonds are paid off at an arbitrary date.
- THIRD: They can be cashed after one year's notice. Most any one can finance a need for a year. If health or business conditions demand a return of your money, you are protected.
- FOURTH: You escape the difficult hazards of reinvestment from time to time. There is satisfaction in knowing that you are not to look next year for a place to reinvest your money.
- FIFTH: There is reward in knowing that your money is not only invested at 6% but that it is serving a great purpose—building Christian character.

Asbury's growing program will doubtless demand 6% money for some time. Preference will be given Christian people who first accept our demand notes.

THE WHITE ROSE.

Rev. Gaston R. Coyner.

My soul leaps up when I behold
A rose that God has given;
Its pure, white petals give me joy
And peace akin to Heaven.

I plucked one just the other day,
I breathed its sweet perfume;
Then felt God fill my heart with love,
And all the dross consume.

Oh, I some day in Paradise
Will live with God's own Son;
Where roses bright will bloom for aye,
And I'll pick many a one!

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A Reader: "Please to pray that a prayer may be answered if it is God's will, also that I may live close to him every day."

A Mother: "Please to pray for my daughter who is converted but is quick to lose her temper. Pray for me that I may be drawn closer to the Master."

"Please pray for us that our home may not be sold. I can't bear the thought of losing it after living in it for 24 years."

A Friend: "Please to pray for my wife who has a nervous breakdown."

Mrs. W. I. B.: "Please pray for my son and family."

O. A. M.: "Please to pray that my husband, who has been a terrible sufferer for over 25 years, may be healed."

Wanted. To hear at once, from any one owning (in good condition) the book, "Life of John Inskip," who would consider selling same, or if not, would be so kind as to lend the book to me, as it is out of print. Good care is guaranteed, no children to handle it.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VII.—Nov. 17, 1929.

Subject.—Living with People of Other Races. Acts 10:9-15; Acts 10:30-35; Gal. 3:28, 29.

Golden Text.—Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. Acts 10:34, 35.

Introduction.—Perhaps there is no more difficult matter among men than this. Race prejudice is intense. It is much more marked between some races than between others. During the Methodist Centenary in Columbus, Ohio, some years ago, I had a fair opportunity to study this matter. There were present many students of both sexes out of various races and nations. It was quite common to see American boys associating on equal terms with girl students from Japan, China, Korea, and other lands. Two of the most popular girls with American boys were not of the white race: one was a full-blooded Indian girl from Oklahoma, and the other a bright little Miss from Japan. With one exception there was a pretty general social mixture among those young people, and all seemed happy in their associations with one another. That one exception was made toward negro students. Not one time did I see any social relations between a young person of that race, of either sex, and one of another race of the opposite sex.

Being at that time a teacher of Sociology in Asbury College, this matter was, to me at least, of no small interest. Why should the negroes be discriminated against as if they were not even members of the human race? After observing this state of affairs for some days, I met a gentleman who was from that part of the U. S. that has so long fulminated against the South because of her not entering into social equality. After calling his attention to what was going on, I asked him for an explanation. His reply was: "I believe the thing is born in us." I do not believe that is true, for little children show no such race prejudice until it has been instilled into them by their elders. In many quarters, and for long ages, there has been a strong prejudice against the Jews. This has often been charged to the fact that their race was responsible for the murder of Jesus Christ. No doubt this has weighed heavily with many people; but the Jews may find the trouble nearer home than that. Many things have militated against them: (1) Their own race exclusiveness; (2) their religious exclusiveness; (3) many of their business methods are proverbially reprehensible; at least, such has become the common belief of their Gentile neighbors; (4) there is a conviction among the best Gentiles that they will not pull to the top when a community is working for the highest standards; (5) they have always considered themselves better than Gentiles. The words of Jesus are appropriate here: "Judge not, that ye be not judged. For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again."

I am dreading with a delicate subject; but I am dealing with it in the fear of God. We can get much light on the subject from the prayer of our Lord in the seventeenth chapter of John. In that prayer he is asking that his Church may be made perfect in one as he and the Father are one. Here is the one and only remedy for race adjustment. If men will not permit the Father to answer the prayer of his Son, race prejudice and race hatred will last till the crack of doom. Mind you, nothing less than entire sanctification for the entire race of man is going to kill this devilish monster.

I have written as best I can in the short compass allowed me. You may make any further application that may occur to you. If any one can turn light on the subject, I shall be glad to have it.

Comments on the Lesson.

Read the context from the beginning of this chapter down to the lesson to get the connection; and as you read keep in mind the bitter prejudice of the Jews against the Gentiles. Possibly no caste prejudice of India could surpass it. Then remember that the Romans were ruling the Jews; and that, for that reason, they were possibly the most hated of all Gentiles. Get the full picture before you, or you will miss the import of this lesson.

9. On the morrow.—The day after Cornelius started them to Joppa. Upon the housetop.—Their houses were flat on top, and much use was made of that part of the home as a private retreat, and as a sleeping place on hot nights. The sixth hour was noon.

10. He became very hungry.—That was natural, as people in that land seldom ate before midday. Fell into a trance.—I suppose this was divinely superinduced, and, therefore, miraculous. God prepared him for the message about to be delivered.

11. Saw heaven opened.—No one knows what this was. This entire scene is a portrayal of a spiritual vision. The Jewish law divided animals into clean and unclean; and now God uses all sorts of animals in this vision to teach Peter that all men are of the same stock as himself. Peter was to learn that Gentiles were as good as Jews. He had lived a strict life—had never eaten the flesh of unclean animals, nor had he ever associated with Gentiles; but all must change. There were no longer any unclean animals. Peter must henceforth associate with Gentiles on an equal basis. It was a hard lesson, but he learned it after Paul rebuked him severely.

Acts 10:30-35. The scene of our lesson changes. Peter has entertained in the home of Simon the tanner down at Joppa the men sent by Cornelius; and they have made the return trip to the house of the centurion at Caesarea. Verses 30-33 give us the statement that Cornelius made to Peter upon his arrival. It contains nothing that needs comment. But the next two verses are a revelation. Peter had learned much during the last few days. He had made a discovery that many church people seem unable to comprehend. Peter had found a household of converted Gentiles. But how about the little brother who says: "If you don't come through my church door, you can't get to heaven?" God is not looking for people who can pronounce shibboleths, but for such as are pure in heart and clean in life. Peter's mission to the household of Cornelius was not to get them converted (they were saved already), but to get them sanctified through the baptism with the Holy Ghost. That work, by the grace of God, he accomplished.

Gal. 3:28, 29. Here we have Paul's broad statement concerning the oneness of God's people. Jesus prayed for this. Nothing, save entire sanctification can produce this; but that can, and does produce it. I am now working in my sixth holiness camp meeting for this season, 1929. In these meetings I have worked with sanctified people belonging to about a dozen different denominations; but there has not been a misunderstanding nor a jar from start to finish. I am satisfied that these blessed people could work and pray and rejoice together for a thousand years without so much as a ripple of disturbance. With them the high priestly prayer of our Lord has been answered. They enjoy a holy oneness with God and with one another.

"ONE CHRISTMAS"—

Not a "Santa Claus" Christmas, but a Christmas which revealed to a whole family the Christ. A Christmas time when the father of the household so touchingly told of God's gift to the world that the children wanted in turn to give the best they had to the Master. The older son, like Isaiah, heard the voice of the Lord, saying, "Whom shall I send?" and answered the call to missions to far away Africa with "Here am I, send me."

This is an intensely interesting and most touching story—one calculated to stir the heart of the Christian and bring the unsaved to Christ. Any one will enjoy it; if you want to bless a class of boys and girls, a friend or some member of your family, invest in as many copies as you can use. Price 50 cents, or 12 copies for $5.00.

The book is beautifully bound in red Christmas binding, with the title and the wise men stamped in gilt.

FIRESTONE COMMENDS PROHIBITION.

Prohibition and highway transportation are the two major reasons for the great prosperity of the United States, so Harvey S. Firestone, the well-known tire manufacturer of Akron, told members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon meeting recently. Mr. Firestone said he favored the Eighteenth Amendment and urged business men and the public to enforce and support the law.

Mr. Firestone outlined the radical change for the better, particularly in industry, under prohibition. There was not, he said, the same contentment in factories nor the happiness and uplifting conditions among the workers before prohibition as there is today, and there is no question that conditions have been greatly improved by prohibition.

HELP SOME BOY TO FIND CHRIST

This Christmas. Just at this time we have gotten hold of one of the most attractive Testaments, just the thing for a boy to carry in his pocket. There is a place for the name and address; three pages devoted to telling one how to become a Christian; then, two songs, one "Carry Your Bible," and another, "Jesus is a Friend of Mine." The music is written with the songs.

There are a number of attractive colored illustrations, and for a small Testament, the type excels any we have seen for clearness, which makes it easy to read. The chapter numbers are in figures, and the binding is a beautiful dark green imitation leather. This is just the Testament for a Christmas gift; it is so attractively gotten up that a boy just cannot resist reading it. The price is only 50c.

A Joyous Christian

The leading character in the story "The First Soprano" becomes such a happy Christian that her brother who was an unbeliever, seeks her happiness and finds Christ. The two together are very happy in their new experience and they win others through their solicitation and influence. The book has a missionary story that is worth the price of the book to any one; also one or more love affairs. It makes the most attractive and helpful Christmas book to be had on the market this year. It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky, and the price is $1.00.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

S. H. Pollitt: "Just closed a good meeting at Mt. Vernon, Ky. Saw thirty-five or forty bright professions of conversion and sanctification; the church greatly revived. Begin at Berry, Ky., the 27th. Let us have the prayers of the readers of The Pentecostal Herald."

News from Bro. Jack Linn, who recently broke his arm in an accident, tells us that he is fast on the way to recovery. He will begin his work in New Philadelphia, Ohio, Nov. 3. He has a few open dates for the winter. Mrs. Linn travels with Bro. Linn as song leader and soloist. They may be addressed at Oregon, Wis.

Evangelist J. L. Glascock has an invitation to hold a meeting in Camas, Washington and prospects for holding other meetings between Cincinnati, O., and Camas, but has some open dates not yet taken which he would be pleased to give to any persons desiring his services in evangelistic work. He could zigzag north or south between the two places above named so as to accommodate those who would wish to secure his services. Persons desiring to correspond with him relative to dates should address him, 1350 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio. He desires to start this campaign about the first of November, but could make some variations to suit parties for their meetings if they will write him promptly.

ONE ACCORD.

Acts 2:1; 4:24.

One of the conditions of God's mighty working in any church or assembly is for that company to be in one accord. In fact, the word in the original does not mean simply to be of one mind and purpose, but it means of the same mind. The Holy Spirit has so moved and melted all hearts and desires that they have become the same. The mind, desire, purpose have been given by the Holy Spirit. It is his mind moving through us.

The word in the original means more than simple agreement; it has in it the potentiality of an active movement like that of a rushing mighty wind. The word has in it the intense zeal of sacrifice. In addition there is such a flame as one sees burst forth in times of intense anger or wrath.

Nothing bad is in this "one accordness" or same mindedness which was given on the day of Pentecost by the illuminating, purging, purposeful Spirit, swept by a flame of sacrificial love from the burning heart of God.

It was all attuned and intensified by the days of waiting, sanctified by their sorrow for a Lord that had been crucified, and then arose and disappeared in the heavens. It was steadied by the promise of the Father. It was increased in geometrical proportion by the wonderful united harmony of the hundred and twenty perfectly attuned hearts gathered together in that upper room. There was the depth of thirty-three years of sorrow, expectation, solicitude, surprise of the mother after the flesh. There was the sweetness and heroism of other of the women. There was the great-heartedness of a Peter who had denied and wavered, but was now getting in him the strength of the rock. The sons of thunder were there tuning in to the love and patience of the Lamb. Thomas' despondency and doubt gave the minor notes before but now were converted and covered with the major notes of sacrifice in the fulness of faith and victory.

All the hundred and twenty instruments were tuned together; they rushed together; they wrestled together; they flowed together; they burned, glowed and blazed together till the massive gates of heaven swung wide open, and the supernatural Spirit and Divine Dove of God came down, bringing the secret of life, light and love and sat upon them and demonstrated the might of weakness, the power of love and the wisdom of unworldliness.

Martyrs were made, mountains were crossed, seas were sailed, hearts were made new. Life, death, resurrection and glory came down. Say not "one word" as, simply speaking the same words, or thinking the same thoughts. That is too frigid a phrase to express a flame of fire. Say rather the witchery of love, angelic, human and divine with its secrets of spiritually atomic and divine power was released. The redemption purchased by the cross came down, the sparks from hammer driving nails and spear piercing heart let out the secret of life and power for all worlds and all time.

I looked for a lion and found a lamb; I looked for an eagle and found a dove; I looked for the proud of the earth and found the humble; I looked for the mighty engines of war and found a voice, a tongue of fire. I looked for great things of nature and found great things of grace. I looked at my birth and lo! a new birth. I looked at an old creation but now a new creation. I had seen the greatness of natural life and now I saw the greatness of its death. The corn of wheat had died alone, now it was to live again in infinite harvests.

O my soul, be clothed with this mighty personal plenitude and potentiality! Tarry in faith, receive by faith but tarry till thou art all attuned by this heavenly supernatural divine personal endowment. All things are possible with thee. Dare to believe it and God will reveal it. He is waiting to do greater things than ever. His mightier Coming draweth nigh. His almighty Spirit has to struggle and travail in thee to bring it to pass. Tarry till all this is revealed in thee, and

Heroes of Peace

Imagine having a leg cut off without being "put to sleep," yet that is the way it was always done until a young doctor, horrified by the agony all about him, worked out a way to make surgical operations painless. This book tells his story. And he sure to read about the fellow who made it possible to save folks from horrible death when bitten by mad dogs.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Overcoming Handicaps

These are tales of young men who, though facing hopeless looking situations, laid their plans and put on the battle that brought victory. Their game is worth watching, and you will feel like cheering when the seemingly invincible handicap is not given in.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Stories of Grit

His father shot the boy's eyes out—an accident, of course—but after the doctors got through with him he determined that it would make no difference, he would work out his disability. With heart-breaking difficulty he struggled on until he became a high government official. And you will want to read about that other boy who landed here without money and unable to speak English, yet forced his way up until nationally known and admired.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Blazing New Trails

"Your head is going wrong. Rain only only comes from above; you cannot get showers from below," said the South Sea island chief when the white man began to dig a well during a terrible water famine. And the natives were astounded when fresh water came seeping into the rude well. This book will give you the interesting details.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

How John Became a Man

BY ISABEL C. BYRUM.

THE GOLDEN RULE FOUNDATION.

"The Golden Rule Foundation" is an agency through which the principle of the Golden Rule can be applied to the alleviation of suffering and for the general welfare of mankind. The Foundation operates under a charter granted by special act of the state of New York.

Purpose.

While the purpose of the Foundation as stated in the charter includes: "Soliciting and receiving contributions to a fund or funds and administering such funds or funds in the spirit of the Golden Rule for the welfare of mankind throughout the world," its present efforts are directed chiefly toward meeting the needs of underprivileged children both at home and abroad.

The Foundation Seeks:

1. To conserve for the benefit of underprivileged children the organization and momentum of the Golden Rule Sunday movement as developed through six annual observations in many countries.

International Golden Rule Sunday was originated by Near East Relief in 1923. President Coolidge repeatedly stressed the international significance of the movement. Noted educators and religious leaders of every faith have recognized educational and spiritual values even greater than financial campaign values.

When Near East Relief, in anticipation of the close of public campaigning June 30, 1929, announced that the Golden Rule Sunday Campaign of 1928 would be the last for the benefit of the children of the Near East, there was a general consensus of opinion that the movement should be conserved for the benefit of needy children throughout the world.

Near East Relief officially says:

"The observance of Golden Rule Sunday has been referred to an independent Board of Trustees, incorporated as The Golden Rule Foundation, and will be continued on behalf of other underprivileged children. Near East Relief has no official connection with this new corporation but bequeaths to it its heartiest good will."

2. To keep before the public the facts of child welfare and other needs, and to urge the universal applicability of the principle of the Golden Rule to meet such needs in co-operation with existing educational, religious and social agencies.

3. To provide a Foundation to receive and hold in trust bequests, legacies and other gifts to be administered in accord with the wishes of the donor and in the light of changing conditions, thereby rendering to the average citizen a service similar to that which the larger private foundations render their founders.

4. To apply to philanthropy some of the principles that investment trusts apply to industrial securities. To its founders, patrons and members it provides a diversified and flexible investment in philanthropy based on investigation and analysis of needs combined with a continuous study of changing conditions and needs.

Sources of Income.

On the second Sunday in December, "International Golden Rule Sunday," people of every nation and religion are asked to unite in a practical expression of the Golden Rule. It is a recognition of the eternal and universal obligation of the strong to help the weak, of the prosperous to share with those in need.

One of its distinctive features is a "Golden Rule Dinner," the substitution of a very simple meal for the usual Sunday dinner. Coming between Thanksgiving and Christmas, those two red-letter days associated with abundance, rejoicing and good cheer, its purpose is to quicken the imagination and lead to a practical application of the Golden Rule in behalf of those who have no harvests and for whom there can otherwise be no Christmas joys. Gifts vary with the intensity with which the needs of the underprivileged are visualized. The minimum gift is the difference between the cost of the frugal Golden Rule Dinner and that of the usual Sunday meal. The equivalent of one day's income is suggested as a standard gift.

Gifts may be designated by the donor and will be transmitted in full. An appreciable percentage of the money given will be allocated to approved child welfare projects in the United States.

Foundations and individuals who contribute to this fund are recognized and recorded as follows:

$5,000 or more Founder
$1,000 or more annually..... Patron
Between $100 and $1,000 annually

Sponsor
$100 annually Sustaining Member
$50 annually ... Contributing Member
$25 annually ... Co-operating Member
$10 annually Member
$5 annually Associate Member

Persons contributing to the Founders' Fund or becoming members are entitled to all the publications of the Foundation and to all the facilities of the Department of Research, Information and Survey.

One Hundred Per Cent to Constructive Philanthropy.

One hundred cents of every dollar contributed to the general funds of the foundation will go to investigated and approved constructive philanthropy, without deduction for campaign, collection, or administration expenses. All designated funds will be transmitted in full according to the expressed wish of the donor. Such expense as may be involved in the general work of the Foundation or Association will be met from the specially contributed Founders' Fund and membership dues, full audited accounting for which will be rendered to the founders and members.

THE MIRACLE IN BLACK.

Since my article under the above title appeared in The Herald, I have been bombarded from every nook and corner of the land—asking questions—as to where, when, who, etc. Some of them have been thoughtful enough to enclose a stamp; but many more have not. I am busy, every hour in the day—and part of the night. I wrote this story exactly as it happened. So, for self protection, I will say, that it happened in Jacksonville, Fla., in December, 1927. The parsonage was the Springfield Church, in that section of the city. There were two other preachers present and the wife of one. Since then, a new preacher occupies this parsonage, and I have heard nothing about "Ruby" since then. I have no explanations further than I first wrote. C. F. Wimberly.

RICH OR POOR.

There may be about you some people who are so rich they would not subscribe to The Pentecostal Herald, and some who are too poor. What do you think of sending them this gospel message, weekly, from now until February 1, at a cost to you of only 25c each? It might be the means of leading them to Christ, or into a richer Christian experience.

THE PASTOR'S RESPONSIBILITY. By The Editor.

WHEN God calls a man into the ministry he evidently sees in that man qualities and capacities to guide his people into fields of truth, to build them up in grace and all the qualities of Christian character, to instill into them sound doctrine that will not only save them but make them instruments in the hands of the Lord to be used for the salvation of others, and to protect them against the ravages of all false doctrines, unbeliefs and fanatisms that, like prowling wolves, would scatter, rend and destroy the flock of God. The responsibility, like the honor of being thus called and appointed of God, is one of the greatest that can be laid upon a human being.

The pastor must know his people; he must live among them and be in close and sympathetic touch with his flock. It will be a great advantage if he can call them all by name, and the more he knows of their family connections, past history, business occupations, social relationships, dispositions of mind, temperamental inclinations, plans, purposes and spiritual state, the better. As the physician must know the patient to treat him successfully; as the teacher must know his students to instruct them wisely; as the general must know his soldiers in order to march and fight them successfully, so the pastor must know his people in order that he may be prepared to feed them upon appropriate spiritual food, guard them against yielding to temptation, encourage them in good works and develop all their powers and capacities for the service of the Master.

Resist every temptation to neglect pastoral visiting. No man has sufficient scholarship or can preach with enough brilliancy and eloquence to make up and atone for the neglect of pastoral work. If the pastor would benefit his people with his pulpit ministrations he must enter into the life of his people; he must know their temptations, sorrows, burdens, needs, hopes and fears. In a word, he must have that knowledge and acquaintance with his people that cannot be had in any way but through pastoral work, face to face and heart to heart conversation and confidence. This life is a life of burdens and sorrows, and there are few people, indeed, who have not some trouble they would like to confide to some friend in whom they have implicit confidence; in whose wisdom, counsel and spiritual insight they can trust. This friend should be the devout and godly pastor.

A pastor to be successful must have the confidence of his people. They must believe in his intelligence, piety and faithfulness. They must feel that they have a pastor to whom they can go for counsel and advice in matters of business, education, marriage, family troubles as well as the secret and inner conflict of their own hearts. The pastor must have spiritual illumination and dis-

I BELIEVE IN THE LORD JESUS CHRIST.

I believe every word that the old prophets uttered with reference to the Coming, the Person and Work of the Lord Jesus Christ. I believe every word written in the Gospels and Epistles about our Lord and Saviour. I believe every claim the Lord Jesus made for himself. There is not a shade of question in my mind about his pre-existence, about his Virgin Birth, about the miracles he performed, his sacrificial death and bodily resurrection. I rejoice in this faith. There is not a question on my mind with reference to his power to save his people from sin, here and now, through his cleansing blood.

I believe that his Godhead, majesty, power and glory are entirely beyond human conception. If the world could have him preached in the power of the Holy Spirit as he is, we would soon have a very different world. In the evening of life, I only wish I had served him better. I trust in him, worship and adore him with all my heart, and call upon all the people that read this paper, to give themselves, unreservedly, with an unhesitating faith, to him for pardoning mercy, sanctifying grace and uttermost salvation.

Your brother,

H. C. Morrison.

cernment that will enable him to look deep into the heart life of his people; never with mere curiosity; that would be unchristian and vulgar; but always that he may understand how to apply the helpful, purging and healing power of the Word of God.

The pastor must guard with great care against any sort of tendency to gossip among his people, carrying from one family to another any hint of the family affairs and secret heartaches and sorrows which have been confided to him. You can see at once the propriety of this suggestion. You will soon learn that you must be upon your guard against certain characters who are found in almost all congregations who will seek to draw from you information about matters of which they have no right to know. In the pastorate you want to be very careful in the selection of your confidential friends. Learn to bury many things deep in your own heart. It is best neither to talk with or listen to busybodies. It is remarkable how such people can twist a man's statements, enlarge on them and make it appear that he has said things entirely foreign to his thought or the facts in the case.

To be a truly successful pastor—and I do not now allude to mere popularity and promotion—but success in that higher and better sense in winning your people away from worldliness and helping them out of doubts and prejudices and bringing them into the deeper and richer experiences of God's grace, and developing them into strong and useful men and women in the service of the Lord. In leading them into full consecration and perfection of faith, purity and love, requires so much wisdom, patience, longsuffering and toil that you would become utterly discouraged, but for the fact, that the Lord who has called you to this great work has promised to be with you always in the work.

REV. BUD ROBINSON.

REV. Bud Robinson will hold a more unique place in history than either Lorenzo Dow or Peter Cartwright. The population of the country has greatly increased and the means of travel are so much better than in their day, that he has been able to touch vast multitudes far beyond what either of these men had an opportunity to preach to. He has also had a more definite message. Everywhere he has majored on holiness. Bud has been a thorough believer in the Wesleyan interpretation of the Holy Scriptures on entire sanctification, as a second work of grace; and he has lived in a period when this Bible doctrine and Christian experience have been under very general discussion, and the people who have heard him, knowing his attitude, have been prepared to receive his message. Thousands have gone to hear him who were hungering and thirsting after full salvation and have been enabled, under his ministry, to receive the blessing. Others have gone through curiosity, and many in a good spirit to hear a man of very limited education, and very remarkable insight into the Scriptures, and a most interesting manner of delivery. We do not think many people ever went to hear Bud Robinson preach, even among those who were prejudiced, who went away without believing he was a most devout and earnest Christian, and that he spoke the truth with reference to the two great works of grace—regeneration, bringing in the new man, and sanctification crucifying and casting out the old man.

It would seem that Bud Robinson is a providential man, raised up for a special work. Some years ago, when he and a number of others were turned out of the church, or had their license taken from them as local preachers, fully believing Methodist doctrine, they could not join other churches. If they had they would have met with strong opposition to their preaching entire sanctification. It was in this way that a new organization became necessary, and several little organizations of churches sprang up in various parts of the nation. They were making some headway, but laboring at great disadvantage. Finally, they wisely got together and organized themselves into the Nazarene Church. Here Bud Robinson found a home and a marvelous opportunity to preach full salvation, without hindrance, up and down the nation.

Lying in bed while sick, I have been reading his life recently published by the Nazarene Publishing Co., Kansas City, Mo. The latter part of the book consists very largely, too largely, in fact, with naming his trips and places where he preached, rather than giving more of his unique philosophy and very interesting interpretation of Scripture. But

SOME NOTES AND NEWS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Banditry is very prevalent all over China and it amounts almost to a reign of lawlessness instead of law. In a previous article we told of our purpose of going to the headquarters of the National Holiness Association in Shantung. Our ticket was purchased and with Mr. Troxel we were to start off on Monday morning at the close of the Bethel Bible Conference. On Sunday a telegram came that the bandits had captured the city. Since then word came to us that Dr. Wesche and Woodford Taylor had been carried away by the robbers and held as hostages till they—the robbers—got certain concessions from the government. Later, word from Mr. Troxel tells us that both missionaries have been released and have arrived home all well. Fortunately during this reign of terror the women and children of the N. H. A. had been taken to Pei-teh-ho near Peking. The N. H. A. missionaries are in the midst of banditry, famine conditions, etc., and will need greatly the prayers of God's people in these days of stress.

We had the pleasure of greeting Paul Rader as he arrived in Shanghai, Aug. 26, just as we were departing for Singapore and India. He looked to be in fine condition physically and is ready for four months' service in different parts of China. He began his meetings at Martyr's Hall, Shanghai, Sept. 4th, speaking there in the afternoon at 5 P. M., and in one of the churches at 7:30 P. M. His schedule is being worked out by Mr. Jeffrey of the Christian and Missionary Alliance and Mr. Leland Wang, one of the foremost Chinese evangelists. China has a hungry heart for the real gospel and we believe Mr. Rader will find a great response to his gospel messages.

Great dissatisfaction has been expressed by the Fundamentalists among the missionaries about the sending out of Canon Streeter to lecture and preach at the Missionary Alliance at Kuling and other places and to lecture in the schools. We heard the Canon in one of his twenty minutes sermon in Shanghai. It was a very disappointing affair truly! He is regarded as a considerable modernist. Of course he will be acceptable to the modernists and there are plenty of them, but I predict wherever he goes he will sow doubt and not increase faith. It is strange how men with big titles will get a following though they have no message and are absolutely devoid of inspiration. Strange that Paul Rader should come to China the same time as Canon Streeter. It would be an interesting event to witness a debate between those two or to have them on the program in the same meeting. You can depend upon it that it would be Paul Rader who would do the cannonading. While the Canon would be getting ready Paul would be ready to call for mourners! Well, China needs Paul Rader with his fiery messages whilst it does not need any more titled, doubt breeding modernists.

Dr. Mary Stone and Miss Hughes at Bethel have had to forego any holiday or vacation this summer because of the need of careful watching of the Nationalists in their educational program which requires Registrations and the considerable annulling of Bible and Religious Instruction in the schools and other handicaps. Bethel is both evangelical and evangelistic and all its work has just the one object—Salvation and Evangelization. If the Missionaries as a whole had stood united and solid for Bible and religion as paramount in all the Mission Schools the difficulty would have been overcome long since, but so many stood ready to compromise and bow to the image Nebuchadnezzar had set up that in the early stages the cause was practically lost! Some

SAYINGS FROM THE EAST.

"Rotten wood cannot be carved."—Confucius.
"When the rulers are without piety and the people without learning, destruction is imminent."—Mencius.

"Illusion is brief but repentance is long."

"When God is about to confer a great office upon a man he first embitters his heart and mind with suffering, wearies his sinews and bones with toil, starves his body, exhausts and impoverishes him and opposes and confounds his undertakings. Thus he stimulates his ambition, hardens his resolution and supplies his deficiencies."—Mencius.

"The palace an orgy of lust! The countryside a hunting preserve! Intoxicating drink! Lofty roofs and carved walls! These have ever been the prelude to ruin."—Shu King.

In the days of the Ming Dynasty of China a Chinese author tells of a magic carpet: "A ship of the red haired barbarians came to one of the ports begging permission to trade. This being refused, the strangers begged to be allowed the use of so much ground as they could cover with a carpet for the purpose of drying their goods. Their petition was granted and taking the carpet by the corners they stretched it until there was room for a large body of men who, drawing their swords, took possession of the city."

Moral: Give the Devil an inch and he will take a foot. Permit sin a foothold and it soon takes possession.

Missions rather than sacrifice Bible and Christian instruction have closed their schools. Bethel is watching and praying that their work may go steadily on and that all departments may open as usual in the Fall.

Whatever the School outcome may be Bethel is putting forward a wonderful Evangelizing program for the Fall and Winter and expects to send out five Evangelistic Bands in various parts of China. One Band is scheduled to spend three months in far-away Manchuria, and wherever the Bethel Bands go the full gospel and old-time revivals go.

SOME FIELD NOTES.

We have recently returned from evangelistic meetings held in Central China. We spent nearly five weeks in two of the chief cities where there are many educational institutions and large churches. Some of the gatherings were held in connection with District Conferences which were attended by ministers, Bible women, missionaries and workers from all parts of the province. We preached twice daily to very large gatherings and these meetings were also attended by students from the colleges, high schools, Bible schools, etc. The old Gospel of free and full salvation was witnessed to by the Holy Spirit and when we made the altar calls, it was not an uncommon thing to have throngs come forward immediately. We believe that many found God in converting, restoring and sanctifying power while a great many of the workers received new visions of the Gospel and fresh baptism of power.

In one of the cities great interest developed in the girls' school and many sought the Lord. One series of meetings was held in a tabernacle corresponding very much to the type of building used in the camp meetings in the U. S. A. The crowds came twice a day, notwithstanding the great heat, and a good percent of the congregation was made up of soldiers and students from the Government schools. It was our joy to see some of these at the altar, seeking the Lord.

In one series of meetings we found very unspiritual conditions existing among the Chinese preachers and of course we met with considerable opposition as we carried on the old-fashioned revival meetings in their midst. Some of them evidently were thinking of the work of the ministry too much along intellectual and social lines, and they were expecting that in our Conference addresses, we would favor them with addresses along popular lines, instead of revival lines. We feel that our call to China was not to lecture, but to preach the full gospel and to call sinners to repentance and believers to Holiness. We have adhered to that work all through the nine months in Asia. At the close of this meeting of which we speak, some of the ministers expressed their dissatisfaction in saying that Dr. Ridout could preach nothing but Sin, Salvation and Sanctification. We were really glad for this testimony because it gave us a little bit of assurance that we had not departed from the lines of work which God sent us to do in China.

After the Conference was over, we spent a few days down in two of the city churches located in the very heart of the city. There we had an opportunity of proving out the power of the Gospel among real heathen people, those who do not come to the churches and who probably never heard the Gospel before. At some of these services where the doors were wide open, the crowds were so dense that they not only filled every seat, but filled the aisles right up close to the pulpit. Often in preaching interruptions would occur, but we would break out in singing some familiar old song, the tune of which the Chinese Christians would know, and thus get their attention back again and resume the message. At the close of preaching, the invitation would be given and always quite a number would stay to the after meeting to be shown the way of salvation.

We are now again in Shanghai engaged in special meetings at Bethel where every day large numbers of students, nurses, etc., are seeking the Lord in each service. We are lecturing daily also at the Bible School and in a very little while, the Summer Conference will be on in Shanghai, which will be attended by preachers and people from various parts of China. Then we get ready for Japan, where we have two engagements, the principal one being the Karuizawa Conference which is a very large summer conference for missionaries. After that Conference we shall take steamer for Singapore, where we shall be engaged most of September. Then we take steamer for Calcutta, India, where our first Indian engagement will be in Yeotmal, Berar, India Oct. 17-22. We shall probably be in India preaching at various points for two or three months. We have engagements in Palestine and Egypt which will be in the early part of 1930, and then we move on towards Prague in Central Europe, where we shall be engaged in special evangelistic services, then go on to England where we shall fill several engagements. We suppose we shall hardly get back to the United States until June, 1930, in time for the camp meeting season.

"One Christmas"—

Not a "Santa Claus" Christmas, but a Christmas which revealed to a whole family the Christ. A Christmas time when the father of the household so touchingly told of God's gift to the world that the children wanted in turn to give the best they had to the Master. The older son, like Isaiah, heard the voice of the Lord, saying, "Whom shall I send?" and answered the call to missions to far away Africa with "Here am I, send me."

This is an intensely interesting and most touching story—one calculated to stir the heart of the Christian and bring the unsaved to Christ. Any one will enjoy it; if you want to bless a class of boys and girls, a friend or some member of your family, invest in as many copies as you can use. Price 50c, or 12 copies for $5.00. The book is beautifully bound in red Christmas binding, with the title and the wise men stamped in gilt.

TESTIMONY OF THE METHODIST FATHERS.

Rev. C. V. Fairbairn.

PART I.

ONCE more the church festival of Whitsuntide, or Pentecost, has been observed by Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, Lutherans, and a few others. But, sad to say, to many Protestants the day and the event mean so little that many know neither the day nor the month upon which and in which it falls. And yet, without a Pentecost there had never been a Christian Church; and without the Holy Spirit, who upon the day of Pentecost was inaugurated to the Administratorship of this dispensation, and the blessed experience, which his coming made possible for the individual believer, there is and can be no truly Apostolic or Christian Church today.

Amongst those who will observe the day, some will merely recall the historical event, making no attempt whatsoever to relate this to present-day Christian experience. Others will attempt such application, telling their hearers, in the face of an abundance of evidence to the contrary, that this was the time and place of the disciples' regeneration. Others, while admitting the conversion of the believers prior to this, will preach that this was a second, definite blessing, but one without any reference to a cleansing of the heart, merely power for service. Others will teach the same, but will add that the evidence of this baptism will be in the recipient's speaking a few words in an "unknown tongue." Others will declare that this second blessing did relate to heart purity, even involving purity as well as power. And still others will declare just as emphatically, albeit unscripturally, that the disciples were regenerated during the earthly ministry of Jesus; that they were sanctified wholly somewhere, somehow, sometime between his resurrection and ascension; that Pentecost introduced a third blessing, the anointing with power for service.

We believe that the blessing of God follows his own very truth. We believe that he does signally bless with true success those who declare and stand for his truth. And we know that the old world has never, since the days of the apostles, witnessed such Divine endorsement, such saving, sanctifying power, as that which sealed and accompanied the great Wesleyan revival, which gave rise to the Methodist Church.

Since this is the case; since history records no such manifestation of divine approbation, in modern times, of any other interpretation of the Pentecost, as that which crowned the earnest efforts and preaching of the Methodist fathers, would it not be of profit for us to discover, if possible, what Mr. Wesley and his compeers believed and taught regarding the meaning of Pentecost? Or in other words, what did the Methodist fathers believe the baptism with the Holy Ghost meant to the individual believer? What did it do for him? What was the significance, experimentally, of receiving the gift of the Holy Ghost?

LET THE METHODIST FATHERS SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES.

"The ground of a thousand mistakes," says Mr. Wesley in Christian Perfection, "is, the not considering deeply, that love is the highest gift of God,—humble, gentle, patient love: that all visions, revelations, manifestations whatever, are little things compared to love. It were well you should be thoroughly sensible of this. The heaven of heavens is love. There is nothing higher in religion; there is in effect, nothing else. If you look for anything but more love, you are looking wide of the mark, you are getting out of the royal way. And when you are asking others, 'Have you received this or that blessing?' If you mean anything but more love, you mean wrong; you are leading them out of the way and putting them upon a false scent. Settle it, then, in your heart, that, from the moment God has saved you from all sin, you are to aim at nothing but more of that love described in the thirteenth of the Corinthians. You can go no higher than this, till you are carried into Abraham's bosom."

According to Mr. Wesley, this wonderful experience is the product of the baptism with the Holy Ghost, the gift of the Holy Ghost, and greater than all other gifts. This is evident from his comment on Matt. 3:11: "He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and fire." Says he: "He shall fill you with the Holy Ghost, inflaming your hearts with that fire of love which many waters cannot quench. And this was done, even with a visible appearance as of fire, on the day of Pentecost."

Says Dr. Adam Clarke on the same passage: "He (the Holy Spirit) is represented here under the similitude of fire, because he was to illuminate and invigorate the soul, penetrate every part, and assimilate the whole to the image of the God of glory. It is surely true that fire as we know it materially has destructive and purifying aspects as well as warming, inflaming, and illuminating."

In his Portrait of St. Paul, Mr. Fletcher, speaking of the same scripture, says: "He shall introduce a more spiritual dispensation, and administer a more efficacious baptism: for he (Jesus) shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and fire, shedding abroad those gifts and graces which shall penetrate and purify your hearts, as metals are penetrated and purified by material fire."

"Now the apostle cannot mean here (John 7:38) that the miracle working power of the Holy Ghost was not yet given," says Mr. Wesley. "For this was given: our Lord had given it to all the apostles when he first sent them forth to preach the gospel. But the Holy Ghost was not yet given in his sanctifying graces, as he was after Jesus was glorified. . . . And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, then first it was that they who 'waited for the promise of the Father' were made more than conquerors over sin by the Holy Ghost given unto them."—Vol. I, Sermon XI, sect. 11.

"At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you." For 'if any man' love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come to him, and make our abode with him.' John 14:16, etc. Which," says Mr. Wesley, "implies such a large manifestation of the Divine presence and love, that the former (manifestation) in justification is as nothing in comparison of it."

Perhaps no one understood Mr. Wesley, his life and teaching, more fully than did the sainted Fletcher of Madeley. In Checks to Antinomianism, Vol. I, Mr. Fletcher says: "I have now finished my sketch of Mr. Wesley's doctrine, so far as it has fallen under my observation during above sixteen years' particular acquaintance with him and his works. . . . In a word, he thinks that God can so 'shed abroad his love in our hearts, by the Holy Ghost given unto us' as to sanctify us wholly, soul, body, and spirit: and enable us to 'rejoice evermore, pray without ceasing, and in everything give thanks.' And he is persuaded that he who 'can do far exceeding abundantly above all that we can think or ask,' is able to fill us with 'the perfect love which casts out fear,' that we being delivered 'out of the hands of our enemies,' may have 'the mind that was in Christ,' and be, in our measure, 'as he was in the world': He the stock of the tree of righteousness, and we the branches, 'having our fruit' from him

'unto holiness' and 'serving God without fear in true holiness and righteousness all the days of our life.' This he sometimes calls Full Salvation . . . or the 'glorious liberty of the children of God,' sometimes 'a being strengthened, established, and settled;' or 'being rooted and grounded in love;' but most commonly he calls it Christian Perfection."

From these special gems we readily see that Mr. Wesley certainly believed that the Pentecostal gift of the Holy Ghost was more than merely an endowment with power, even that it involved a marvelous work of grace, producing such a glorious result in the soul, as he saw fit to term "Full Salvation."

In the chapter "Christian Perfection Defined," of his Last Check, Fletcher says: "We frequently use, as St. John, the phrase 'Perfect Love,' instead of the word 'perfection,' and understand by it the pure love of God, shed abroad in the heart of established believers by the Holy Ghost, which is abundantly given under the fulness of the Christian dispensation." In chapter, "An Address to Imperfect Believers," Ib., he says: "If the sprinklings of the Spirit were sufficient, under the Jewish dispensation, to raise the plant of Jewish perfection in Jewish believers, how much more will the outpourings of the Spirit raise the plant of Christian perfection in faithful Christian believers! And that this revelation of Christ in the Spirit, as well as in the flesh, these effusions of the water of life, these baptisms of fire, which burn up the chaff of sin, thoroughly purge God's spiritual floor, save us from all our uncleannesses, and deliver us from all our enemies; that these blessings, I say, are peculiarly promised to Christians, is demonstrable by a cloud of New Testament declarations and promises:—(which he proceeds to give)."

And again. "After having prayed the Father to sanctify his disciples through the truth firmly embraced by their faith, and powerfully applied by the Holy Spirit, he adds, 'Neither pray I for these alone, but for them who will believe on me through their word.' . . . Our Lord could not pray in vain: it is not to be supposed that the Scriptures are silent with respect to the effect of this solemn prayer, an answer to which was to give the world a specimen of the power which introduces believers into the state of Christian perfection: and therefore we read, that on the day of Pentecost, the kingdom of God, 'righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost,' began to come with new power." And from his writings at this place, we catch his inference, that the "glorious baptism, or capital outpouring of the Spirit, carried the believers further into the kingdom of grace which perfected them in one."

And yet again. "When our faith shall fully embrace the promise of full sanctification, the Holy Ghost, who kindled so much love on the day of Pentecost that all the primitive believers loved, or seemed to love, each other perfectly, will not fail to help us to 'love one another' without sinful self-seeking; and as soon as we do so, 'God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us.'" "And if one outpouring of the Spirit, one bright manifestation of the sanctifying truth, so empties us of self as to fill us with the mind of Christ, and with pure love, we are undoubtedly Christians in the full sense of the word." "How unscriptural and irrational is it to suppose, that, when God fully baptizes a soul with his sanctifying Spirit, and with the celestial fire of his love, he cannot in an instant destroy the man of sin, burn up the chaff of corruption, melt the heart of stone into a heart of flesh, and kindle the believing soul into pure seraphic love."

"Seek ye the Lord while he may be found."

THE LAST SERMON.

Preached by Sam Jones.

(After preaching this remarkable sermon he started for his next appointment, but died that night on the train. Let every reader of these lines take due warning.)

He that being often reprov'd hardeneth his neck; shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy. (Prov. 29:1).

HE bare announcement of this text is enough to bring every one of us to our feet with this question: "Unto whom does God speak in those fearful words? Unto whom does God address himself in that fearful language? There are hundreds of people who ought to announce the fact, and that is, 'Surely God means me, for I have been often warned, I have often been reprov'd and have often heard his Word. Surely he means me.'"

I announce strictly a fact when I say there have been more sudden deaths in the last twelve months of this world's history than any year since the evening and the morning of the first day of this world's life. More men in the last twelve months have suddenly gone into the presence of God than in any twelve months in all the world's history. You hardly pick up a leading daily newspaper in the United States that there is not from fifty to 5,000 persons that have been swept away suddenly and have come into the presence of God. By earthquake, by fire, by tidal waves, by accidents on railroads, by storms at sea, by apoplexy, by paralysis, by heart failure; day by day the register has gone way up; and, mark my words, just as God gives the warning to men so is that proportion of sudden death multiplied in all the earth. More men have hardened their hearts and more men have been swept into the presence of God, and as you hear me tonight I shall recall illustrations of these fearful facts that lie back in my brain and which have been gathered from all parts of the country.

I want to say to you that I have preached to thousands and tens of thousands of people who have been swept suddenly and awfully into the presence of God soon after my voice died out in their ears. I was preaching at the memorial meeting at Nashville, Tenn., some years ago. On the second Tuesday night, Captain Ryan, a man who owned all the steamboats along the river, came forward and asked to be prayed for. Shortly one of the pastors walked up to my side and said, "Mr. Jones, that man, Captain Ryan, is the most wicked man in this city and a very great sinner." That night Captain Ryan was converted, and he walked up to me after the service and said, "I want you to come to my house and I want you to see my wife and children." I answered, "I cannot come before a certain date." He said, "I will come for you on that day." On the morning of the day arranged he was at the service, and after the service we got into a buggy and rode up to his splendid home. When we got out of the buggy he introduced me to the mayor of the city and three of the captains of boats which he, himself, owned; also to lawyers and other influential men of Nashville.

Presently Mr. Ryan's wife walked in and I was introduced to her, and after a few moments of conversation, she said, "Now, gentlemen, dinner is ready." As we crossed the hall into the large dining room, the captain took my arm. "Mr. Jones," he said, "not one of these four men are religious and I want the last one of them brought to Christ." He put me at the head of the table. The mayor of the city sat directly on my right and at his side was one of the captains. Immediately on the left side were the other two captains—four great, big, stalwart men. I addressed my conversation right to those four men, pressing Christianity and the question of religion on them with all the force I could, incidentally mentioning the fact that within twelve months there would be sudden deaths among those sitting at the table.

After the meal was over we parted and not one of the four men were Christians or came to the meetings. I had not been away from Nashville three months until the steamboat captain who sat next to the mayor on my right hand side walked up to his home one day and when his feet struck the front porch of his home he fell with a heavy thud and was dead when his wife and children reached him. Not three months more had passed when the man who sat on my left, just as he stepped on to his boat and as the boat started to move off, fell on his face and never spoke another word. Not two months more had passed when Captain Ryan sent me a paper from Nashville in which I noticed that the steamboat captain who sat second to my left went suddenly into the presence of God. A few days later I saw where the mayor of the city had been out hunting, and when loading his gun the gun went off, putting the whole load of shot into his head. He fell forward and never breathed another breath; and before I had been away from that town twelve months those four stalwart men had all been suddenly called into the presence of God.

"He that being often reprov'd and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

I was preaching at a Tennessee camp meeting a few years ago and we were having great crowds there. On a certain day a young man who had been in the back of the tent standing up while I was preaching (and I was "saying things" that night) turned on his foot with an oath on his lips and said, "I have had enough of that." He went out and went towards the railroad station. There was a freight train passing at the time which was going about eight or ten miles an hour. That young man grabbed at the side irons on the side of the train, lost his grip and rolled under the wheels and was in the presence of God almost before I was done speaking.

I was preaching at Gainesville, Miss., some years ago. There were only a few days left in the meeting and I said to the men who were helping: "Let us all get down to work." Next morning Pastor Brown came up to me and said that he had passed two saloon-keepers on the street that morning as he was coming down and had asked them to close up their saloons and come down and hear Sam Jones. They said, "Does Jones think that we can close up our business and go down to hear a man like him talk?" I mentioned this incident in the meeting and said that two saloonkeepers of that town had cursed on the street and said they could not close up their places of business to hear the Word of God. I said, "I have seen doors closed with black crepe tied on the door knob; they had better look out."

The next morning I left Gainesville one of the saloonkeepers who had said this came down-town in the early morning to open his saloon, and just as he unlocked the door and pushed it open he fell in the doorway and lay there dead when the first policeman came around on his beat that morning. Dead before his wife and children could say "Good-bye!" Mr. Brown sent me a marked copy of the paper a few days later which said that the other saloonkeeper went up to his home and fell on the floor as he was going in and was dead when his wife got to him. There was black crepe on the doors of those two saloons, and, mark my words, there are men in this town that are cursing the meeting and cursing on the street, who will be suddenly struck down. I am not a prophet nor the son of a prophet, but you will have deaths in this town that will startle it before the last day of this very month. Mark that! God hath said it. There are people in this town that are turning against God and despising his mercy, some of them in the last sixty days of their lives, and every time you turn your back on God and walk off from his mercy you are refusing the greatest offer that a man can ever have.

Years ago a corps of civil engineers came to a little town in a valley in Pennsylvania and went up into the mountains and examined the dam which controlled the waters of the stream which flowed down into the valley. They came back to the valley and said to the people of the town, "That dam is unsafe. The people in the valley are in constant danger." The people said to them, "You can't scare us." That fall the men came back to the valley and examined the dam again and said to the people in the valley, "We warn you people again, you are in danger every hour." They laughed at them again and said, "Scare us if you can." The men went up again in the spring and warned the people again, but the people said, "That is a chance. We have been hearing that so many times. Scare us if you can."

It was not fifteen days later, that a boy with his horse on the dead run came down into the valley shouting, "Run for your lives! The dam has gone and the water is coming!" The people only laughed at him; but he did not wait to hear their laughter: he went on down the valley still shouting the warning. In a very few minutes the dirty water came, and in less than thirty minutes after the water struck the town Johnstown was in ruins with more than 3,700 of those who had been in the town in the presence of God. You have been reprov'd many a time yourself, and frightened many a time yourself and you sit out there and say, "Scare me if you can." "Get me by frightening me if you can." But on God's judgment day you will run and call for the rocks and mountains to hide from God's just fire your little soul. God gets closest to the man who is honest with his own soul and is in need of Christ. God help you to pray about this, "I am not to be frightened into Christianity."

"He that being often reprov'd and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

It is an awful thing to die, anyway, but to die without a moment to pray, without a moment to counsel the wife, without a moment to talk with the children; but to be struck down suddenly.

I don't know when I shall die or where I may go down, whether in a railroad wreck, in storm at sea, and I might even go down on a wagon or I might drop dead with heart failure; I don't know how I shall die, but I know I prefer to die easily. I know I deserve to die suddenly. I may be taken with a stroke of paralysis and would have to be carried to the train and from the depot up to the old home where I can live for years, into the room where I have sat and talked hours at night with my wife and children. I would suffer and linger there for days talking to them about the responsibilities that would rest upon them when I was gone, about right living, and, when the last day would come and the last night would come, and the doctor had packed up his stuff and gone; wife and children would stand around my couch and I would bid them live good lives; at the last moment I would turn to my wife and speak the last words of my heart to her and bid her be faithful to the end; I would kiss them all good night and go home as happy as any school boy ever went home from school; but to die suddenly and without preparation, without a word of counsel to the wife, without a word of comfort to the children, without a moment to utter anything to this world. "Cut him down, why cumbereth he the ground?" God help me to go home easily.

"Suddenly destroyed and that without remedy?" How we look to remedies here. Millions of dollars are spent in patent medicines, doctoring and all that sort of a thing and it shows how men dread death and how they lean upon remedies and how they look to remedies to heal and remedies to effect the cure; but "without remedy." The saddest hour that I ever saw was after ten weeks of suffering and hard work, when my wife was very sick. That night the doctor came to me and said, "I now break to you the saddest news that ever fell on human ears. Your wife cannot live." I looked at the doctor and said, "Doctor, do you mean it?" He said, "The symptoms now say that remedies are useless." I went into the upper chamber of my home and turned my face toward God and said, "O Lord Jesus Christ, who raised Lazarus from the dead when he had been buried four days, and said, 'Come forth, Lazarus,' and he stepped forth and drew the napkin from his jaws and the grave clothes off him and walked home with his sisters; keep the words that you spoke that day and spare my wife." She lives today, cured by that only remedy of God.

The day will come to you, father, mother, man and woman, when your doctor will pack up his medicines and go, and when every instrumentality shall leave; mark my words, and you will turn your eyes toward humans and human instruments and they will say, "There is no remedy." Then is the time when that man or woman shall turn his eyes from human remedy to God and God shall sit upon his throne and say, "No remedy." There is no remedy in either human or instrumental power and there is no remedy in Heaven for that poor fellow. "He that being often reprov'd and hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be destroyed and that without remedy."

The Nature of Temptations Peculiar To the Sanctified.

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

TEMPTATIONS and vile imaginations will be presented to the mind of the purest soul, but they can be repelled and resisted. They can lodge and remain only at the consent of the will.

With the sanctified soul, temptation becomes effective at that point where "resistance as a means of preserving integrity first becomes necessary." This point is generally at that juncture where something is presented through the medium of the senses, especially adapted to gratify some natural appetite or apparent human need, as in the case with Eve, or Jesus. The satisfying that appetite "within certain limitations fixed by the law of God is sinless." But the moment resistance becomes necessary in order to preserve innocence and fidelity, then that same fixed law forbids the thing presented, and to yield in desire, or action is to transgress.

Satan has to change his tactics with sanctified souls. Formerly he came and found within that which he could lay claim to, but now "he cometh" and findeth "nothing." As a rule he does not, on approaching a clean soul, propose a sinful act, for he well knows that such would detect in a moment his cloven foot. There is nothing within to which a sinful solicitation can appeal.

"Desire to sin is not essential to temptation. The dominion and desire to sin is removed in regeneration, and ability is given the regenerate soul to live without sin, although there are weak points. Entire sanctification, the climax of Christian character, removes the tendency to sin, by destroying carnality, the prolific source of all actual sin; and right here is seen the difference between the liability to sin, and the power to sin.

"An individual may have power to do a thing that he is not liable to do. For instance he has the power to become a drunkard, and yet, the probabilities are he will never become a drunkard, however often or severely he may be tempted; and so on other lines."

It is incorrect to say that regenerated souls have carnal desires. They may have carnal tendencies, but these can only hatch out into desires at the consent of the will. The will is in full harmony with God as long as grace predominates. It is likewise incorrect to say that sanctified souls have involuntary desires. There is no such thing as involuntary desires. There are involuntary carnal principles within the unsanctified, but these never become desires, until they first receive the endorsement of the will and that moment they incur guilt.

Well then, if there are no voluntary or involuntary responses that can be appealed to, where does the link break between a state of holiness and depravity? We believe it is at the point where the soul through incessant pressure weakens, and yields in spirit though not outwardly.

Hence, Satan must work through a physical or unsuspected channel. True, he will batter against the outside, and suggest outlandish things. He does this, not with the hope of his yielding, but to torment and accuse. He would not be a devil if he did not do this.

He is likened in the Scriptures unto three things, viz.: "a roaring lion," "an angel of light," and an "accuser of the brethren." As a roaring lion he frightens more souls than in any other way. When he fails here, he often succeeds as an angel of light, in deceiv-ing. This is his most successful scheme on ministers and such as are capable of spreading error.

But when he fails here,—then he sets in for a life-long siege to accuse, perplex and bring to bear against that soul the infernal pressure of hell.

The temptations peculiar to the sanctified are more fiery and diabolical, but of shorter duration than against other souls. Seeing there is nothing within, as in the unsanctified that will consider for a moment a plausible suggestion, therefore whatever the devil desires to accomplish, he must do quickly.

Another kind of accusation peculiar to the sanctified is that of magnifying their faults. They are not perfect in judgment or wisdom, but in love and obedience. They are not faultless even though God said they should "be preserved blameless." Often those who are envious, expect more of them than God Almighty does, and more than they pretend to profess. Sometimes they do things they are very sorry for, such as a hasty transaction, an unthoughtful statement, zeal that drove some seemingly honest soul away, or something else that was not the best thing to do or say under the circumstances.

Upon reviewing it, the Spirit magnifies and makes it look serious indeed, for their good in the future. Now, Satan, who has been eagerly watching every move, takes advantage of the reproof of the Spirit and comes in like a flood, and causes them to feel the more deeply mortified and humiliated. Perhaps someone will add fuel to the fire by reviewing and telling a new discouraging feature about it.

At such seasons Satan takes a special fiendish delight in sneering in the face of the already chastened soul. He is pleased if such will look at it from one of two standpoints: either mourn over it and become despondent, rather than believe God to yet overrule it for the best, and perhaps get glory out of it; or on the other hand, rather than quickly and humbly make acknowledgments, becomes reckless and independent about it. Right along here is where more than one has lost his hold upon God and become carnal again.

Another point at which Satan is well pleased, is when he sees a sanctified soul pressed down with cares and responsibilities—even though they pertain to the spread of the gospel. If he sees that a soul is determined to keep clean and balanced, then he will be pleased if that soul will do one of two things: either through exposure and zeal for the lost, overwork, until his health is impaired; or, if he is able to become more aggressive and irresistible, allow his mind to become overburdened, so that much of his time in secret prayer is spent in pleading for the removal of obstacles rather than for souls. In short, he is so encumbered with secular affairs and responsibilities that he cannot be all he might be in soul-saving; and to this extent Satan is pleased. "Many a man's spirituality has been buried in the grave of his activities."

Satan often tries to counterfeit God's disapproval and bring a feeling of guilt and condemnation upon the conscientious soul. Often shallow holiness professors are his best instruments against the truly sanctified. He hates such with a more deadly hatred than all others, because they live so near the throne and have such influence with the King. Thus he works with unfatiguing effort, howling after them until they outstrip him and sweep through the pearly gates.

THE BOOK OF BOOKS.

DR. L. R. AKERS, Presidnet of Asbury

In this age of "latest things" and "best sellers" it is the novel or bizarre that catches the attention of the masses. However, it is well for us to remember that the most modern news is not the last work of fiction, with the ink still damp from the press, or the night edition of the penny Post, lurid with headlines. The most up-to-date book in the world is one of the oldest books—it is the Bible. It is essentially a present-day Book because it contains every man's biography. Some one may say, "Biographies are written about poets and kings and statesmen, not about ordinary folks." Yet the story of man's life is written and inscribed in the world's greatest volume; and it is told along with the lives of kings and priests, warriors and statesmen, prophets and patriarchs.

This Book is the mirror of the human soul. Each man finds his counterpart within its pages. As he reads its thrilling narratives of human life crowded with temptations, struggles, defeats, and victories, with its sobs of sorrow and shouts of joy, with its passion and pain, his own heart whispers, "This is the story of myself," and he wonders at the divine revelation which lays bare his innermost soul.

Over and over again the same tragedies of life occur. The morning newspaper apparently giving the latest information is in reality only a reprint of Moses and Elijah, or of Daniel and Paul. There may be a slight difference in incident and environment, but none in the moral meaning or substance. How much farther have we got than Adam and Eve, contentment and discord, innocence and guilt? Not an inch. Cain still murders Abel. Abraham still journeys to Canaan looking eagerly for that land of milk and honey. Men are anxiously trying to find their way back into Eden, to get by the cherubim and the flaming sword, to enjoy again its trees and flowers, fountains and perfumed bowers. How to get back to that garden has been the problem of the ages.

As the plumed knights of old journeyed forth in quest of the Holy Grail and found it not, so men vainly seek this elysium because sin has blinded their eyes to the vision of the true and beautiful.

No indeed! We have not outgrown the Bible. There are thoughtless and superficial folk who speak of this Book as being out of date. Even some in the ministry have become so progressive, as they think, that they must discard the Bible and seek newer and more sensational themes, but these men are only clever swindlers deceiving themselves. A diet of froth and fudge soon satiates, and if continued, nauseates. It is difficult to find a substitute for bread, and so far nothing has been discovered so satisfying to the human soul as this heaven-sent "Bread of Life." There are times when a congregation will even turn from such fascinating themes as Eugenics, Sociology, Socialism, Pragmatism, etc., to listen with interest to the story of the Cross, or hear a sermon on Sin and Its Penalty, or even to enjoy such an old-fashioned theme as Heaven and Its Blessedness.

The Bible has no revelation to make to unbiblical minds. There are some who have read this Book with their eyes, but not with their hearts; they have turned its pages, but missed its treasures. Approaching the volume with skeptical minds and irreverent hearts, it became a sealed Book to them, and there was no beauty in it that they should desire it.

However, to the lowly and contrite heart

it was a well of water in a barren desert, or as bread and meat to the famished soul; to him in darkness it became a lamp unto his feet and a light unto his path. All the needs of human life with its complexity and perplexity may be supplied from this inexhaustible storehouse.

The Bible is the Book universal. Text-books are for the scholar, Blackstone for the lawyer, Materia Medica for the physician, theology for the minister, but the Bible is humanity's Book. It is not written in Hebrew, Greek, or English, but in the language of the human heart.

Islam has the Koran, China the sayings of Confucius, Greece her Plato, England Shakespeare, Italy Dante, America Emerson, but the Bible is the world's Book—belonging to all nations.

Not somebody's air, but everybody's air; not somebody's sky, but everybody's sky; not somebody's sun, but everybody's sun; not somebody's Book, but everybody's Book.

How shameful the teaching that the Bible should be accessible only to experts, how needful it is to king and peasant alike! This Book should be snatched from the hands of the priests and put into the hands of the people.

The Bible is the Book for all time. Not the "I was," but the "I Am," is the author of the Book, and because he is the changeless One, the same yesterday and today and forever, the Bible is not only the Book for today, but for tomorrow and forever. This Book is not out of date, but ahead of the times, and countless centuries must elapse before man can measure up to its standard of life with its fullness of blessing.

The trouble with society is, not that it has outgrown the Book, but that with flagging step it has failed to keep pace with this Great Guide to human progress.

Let us, then, with the Aladdin's lamp of study and the magic ring of prayer find in this Volume of volumes our treasures of mind and heart.

Let it also become our armory, and from its bountiful stores may we gird ourselves, putting on the whole armor of God that in the long and bitter struggle over the city of Man's Soul the radiant angels of God, marching and counter-marching on the plains of Paradise, shall shout the paeon of victory, and, catching up their sweet voiced harps like the sound of many waters, sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. And as the glorious symphony of praise swells and resounds amid the fretted arches and lofty domes of that heavenly city, God's battle-scarred veterans will come marching home bearing the trophies of victory, and there to meet them will be One like unto the Son of God, and he with his pierced hands will open wide the gates of his eternal city that they may have an abundant entrance in. "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Dont's For Preachers.

BY REV. F. LINCICOME.

Don't try to get on without replenishing. Replenishings of the Spirit may be needed where there has been no defilement.

The auto does not need repairs every time it is run into the garage. It may need oil, or gasoline, or water, or air or perhaps a spark plug. The holy soul may be sensible of a spiritual exhaustion, when it feels no sense of condemnation. A fire may be low, and need stirring, and not be entirely out.

Our capacities are finite, and our measures of grace are expended, through trial and test upon one hand, and by service and trust upon the other hand. Thus our souls are enlarged, as we walk and work and worship in the Spirit. And this enlargement makes demand for such refillings of the Spirit as are found in Acts 4:31, yet such replenishings are neither recoveries nor new baptisms.

Don't try to do the maximum of work on the minimum of prayer. Service without unction is impotent. How much more effectual our work would be if preceded by more prayer. Our singing, praying, preaching, and testifying count but for little only as God assists. Our mightiest attempts apart from the help of the Holy Ghost is impotent, while our feeblest effort with the aid of the Holy Ghost is omnipotent.

It is not for us to try to see how much more we can do for God than we are doing but to see how much more of God we can get in what we do. For it is God in the service that counts.

If we would be effectual we must be much with God. I have seen the significant words somewhere which convey a great truth, "To be little with God is to be little for God."

A group of ministers in a ministerial meeting in New York City sometime ago confessed they had been trying to do the maximum of work on the minimum of prayer. When a test was put on that large body of men by asking how many of them prayed one hour a day only a very few responded. When asked how many prayed fifteen minutes a day only a small number arose. When it came down to five minutes a day they all arose. After they all sat down one of the latter arose again and said: "I am afraid I have lied for I am not sure I spend five consecutive minutes in prayer each day." Brethren in the ministry, how many minutes are you spending each day in prayer? Would you have to say if the test were placed on you that you are among those who are trying to do the maximum of work on the minimum of prayer?

Old Person or Shut-In.

There are doubtless one or more such persons in your community and you could brighten their lives and possibly lead them to Christ or into a deeper religious experience, by sending them THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD weekly, from now until February 1, 1930, for only 25c.

A Miracle in Black.

I have tried to reply to the many letters coming to me from all over America, concerning the little black child in Jacksonville, Fla., and I sent a notice to THE HERALD. I have recently investigated the case, and have learned that some colored people have taken the child, and left the city. She spoke in some of the churches after the interview of which I wrote. Ruby would now be nearing her fifth birthday; but her whereabouts are not known to me. This much I have learned, which will be of interest to the readers of THE HERALD—Ruby was found on the city dump where she had been abandoned by her mother, and this old darky found her covered with ants, and cared for her. To me, it was the most remarkable thing I have ever known, aside from things revealed in the Word. Little Ruby, the black, abandoned waif, was one of God's miracles of these "last days." No reader of THE HERALD would welcome information about her more than I would. This writer shall not be surprised to see more of such wonders as we approach the final crisis.

C. F. WIMBERLY.

Needy People.

You will find all about you some folk in the need of the gospel message, and you will doubtless be surprised how readily they would read a paper addressed to them personally every week from now until February 1. It will cost you only 25c.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

SYCHAR BOARD MEETING.

Putting aside for the present other considerations in regard to Sychar let us notice in this report the result of the annual meeting of the Board of Control which was held at the home of E. H. Oberholtzer, on Camp Sychar grounds on Tuesday afternoon, October 15. Every member of the Board was present and the following action was taken relative to the work next year.

Two new members were elected to the Board, both of whom are well known to most of Sychar attendants. Rev. W. L. Mullet, of Akron, Ohio, who so ably conducted the singing at the Young People's tabernacle two years ago, and who will have the direction of the singing at the main tabernacle the coming year, was elected as ministerial member of the Board, and Bro. L. J. Minard of Mount Vernon, whose smiling face and genial Christian personality has endeared him to the Sychar family, was elected to a place on the Board as lay member. All the other members of the Board were re-elected so that the Board as constituted is as follows:

Rev. C. L. Lewis, of New Washington, Ohio, who for so many years has stood at the head of the Board as its President will continue in that capacity for another year. He will be supported in his work by Rev. H. E. Williamson, of Marion, Ohio, as Vice-president; Rev. E. E. Shiltz, of Geneva, Ohio, and Rev. J. J. Adams, of Sycamore, Ohio, will again be found at the Secretary's office acting in the capacity of Secretary and Assistant Secretary respectively. All requests for information regarding the camp should be directed to these brethren at the addresses given above.

William Kathary, the genial Superintendent of the dining hall, was again selected to preside over the affairs of the dining room, kitchen and grocery as well as re-elected to serve in the important office of Treasurer.

Rev. C. T. Goodwin, of Wooster, Ohio, was named Auditor, and also Secretary-Treasurer of the missionary work of the camp. Brief mention was made concerning the service and work of the Sychar Missionary Movement in a former letter, and of which more anon. Suffice it to say now that it was very inspiring and effective as to immediate results.

H. E. Oberholtzer was appointed as Superintendent of Grounds to fill the vacancy caused by the sudden passing away of O. F. Skeen on the camp grounds last year during the camp. Bro. L. J. Minard the new member of the Board was named as Assistant to Bro. Oberholtzer.

William Kathary, H. E. Oberholtzer, and L. J. Minard were elected as the Board of Trustees. Rev. H. E. Williamson and Rev. J. J. Adams were selected to serve as the Book-stand Committee; Rev. E. E. Shiltz, William Kathary and H. E. Oberholtzer constitute the Purchasing Committee, and Rev. C. L. Lewis, Rev. C. T. Goodwin and Rev. H. E. Williamson were again named as Executive Committee.

With all departments of the work fully organized and a full force of workers selected and engaged we are even now looking forward to another great camp which will be held, God willing, on the old grounds August 7 to 17, 1930. The following force of workers has been retained:—Platform evangelists, Rev. E. Hilton Post, Rev. Raymond Browning, Rev. Joseph Owen. Song leaders, Rev. W. L. Mullet for main tabernacle, and Rev. H. M. Campbell for Young People's tabernacle; Young People's Worker, Miss Anna McGhie; Children's workers, Miss May Gorsuch and Mrs. H. E. Oberholtzer; Pianists, Mrs. Harry Maitland and Mrs. H. E. Williams; Rev. H. A. Guiler and wife will have charge of the Ring Meetings. With this force and prayer and effort we should succeed.

MRS. E. STANLEY JONES' LETTER.

Many of you have asked us to tell you something of our school, of how the boys live and what they do. Someone suggested that the enclosure, or walls of our "Compound," was to keep the boys from running away. But they little knew our boys! If a ball falls on top of a fifteen foot dormitory, a boy jumps for some projecting edge on a verandah, digs his bare toes into some tiny crevice, clings to a cornice and before I have found my voice to forbid such a dangerous stunt he is on the roof top and preparing to descend in like manner.

This enclosure is a protection, in a way, from thieves. Still they do get in. One night there was a rattling among the brass plates. Some of the little boys sleeping near, jumped up and in the dim moonlight could discern the figure of a man. They ran for him and he ran for a bamboo pole he had placed slantingly against the wall. As he tried to climb it, they snatched at his legs but they were well greased and slippery. Then one jumped and caught the loin cloth in which he had tied the plates. It loosened and came down with a clatter but the man escaped. The next morning the boys proudly displayed their spoils. One dirty old loin cloth and a bamboo pole.

No, our wall will not keep determined bodies in or out. But it is the custom for Indian homes to have an enclosure and our flock would not feel at home without it.

The dormitories are very simple. Three long rooms, with large arches instead of doors. No furniture, except the little iron beds strung with rope and little wooden or tin trunks belonging to boys who are rich enough to own them.

The dining room is a large covered verandah where the boys sit on the floor for meals. Their dishes consist of one brass plate each. Every boy fills his plate with water for a drink before eating and washes it and puts it away in a rack after eating.

Indians eat daintily with their fingers so there is no need of forks and knives and spoons.

Twice a day is eating time. Most of the boys before coming to us have had but one scant meal a day. But now we give them two and try to give them enough to satisfy their hunger. Every morning they get three or four of the whole wheat pancakes and a plate of lentils or vegetables cooked with oil and spices. Every evening they get a plate of rice with a spoonful of curry gravy. Sometimes, as a special treat, they each have an onion or a lump of brown sugar or a guava or half a lemon from our garden.

They do all their own work and are divided into five divisions, each containing about twenty boys of all sizes and ages in charge of an older boy selected by the whole body of boys. One division cooks, another sweeps, another pulls the water, another gathers and cuts the wood, and another keeps the compound clean. They change work every week so they do not get tired of always doing one kind of work. Of course every boy has six hours of school work, too, but I cannot take time to write of that now.

Many friends who support boys here have asked what they could send them. A new edition of the vernacular hymn book is on the press and I know of nothing that would make a boy quite as happy as a brand new hymn book. It would be used not only for church services but daily for morning prayers in school and evening prayers in the hostel. A whole Bible would add to their joy, for even before boys learn to read they love the Book and keep it carefully wrapped in cloth when not carried proudly to the services of the church.

A dollar bill tucked in an envelope would come safely and get both Bible and Hymn Book and leave a little for pocket money. I could give the few old ones to preachers to give away.

As usual we are a very much separated family, Eunice in Boarding School, Mr. Jones preaching in first one city and then another and I keeping the flock at Sitapur. But we look forward to a reunion at Christmas. Life is not always easy but I know trials are not confined to the Mission field.

And now, with St. Paul, we "give thanks to God always for you," and we pray "that in everything ye may be enriched in HIM." Mrs. E. Stanley Jones, Sitapur, India, U. P.

GOD'S SPIRIT AT WORK.

It has been a long time since we have reported any meeting to the readers of The Pentecostal Herald. A peculiar twist or two in our makeup makes it a difficult matter for us to report our own meetings. However, we have decided to report two meetings, one held in Wisconsin, and the other held in Michigan. The first one we are reporting in this letter, the other one later, for we are awaiting developments at the last place.

Nearly four hundred miles north of Chicago, on the southern shore of Plum Lake, is the town of Sayner, and also a little "community" church with very strong, old-fashioned Methodist leanings, with Brother and Sister Ernest Alton, firm and staunch believers in the old doctrine of sanctification and holiness, in charge. On the part of these faithful saints of the Lord, it is wholly a work of love. After missing a couple of railway connections and hitting a storm on Lake Michigan, we arrived at Brother Alton's home at 8 A. M. Sunday morning, and an hour later, faced our congregation. It was fair in size, and we were aware of its good will, and soon became aware of its spiritual condition. Honestly professing holiness without its possession, and regeneration, they were living on the ragged edge, or were backslidden. Much the same everywhere, brother.

For two weeks we preached the Word, but our congregation remained obdurate and immovable, although many wept. We made but three altar calls, short ones. We still firmly believe that it is "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." No evangelist cares to travel fourteen hundred miles without seeing some one find God. Early on the last Sunday morning, we laid the whole matter before the Lord, confessing our own inability and failure. He sent Brother Alton and your humble servant a mile away to the home of George Erdman. We found Brother Erdman a very sick man indeed, and suffering very great pain and helplessness. A specialist had failed utterly. The specialist, however, had arrived and was awaiting the arrival of his servants. We, children and all, gathered around the suffering man, and all prayed. Then we anointed him, and went our way. An hour later, Brother Erdman entered the Sunday school with his little family. His cup was boiling over. He couldn't keep still. "There was none to deny."

In the service that followed, we preached a short sermon on "The Holy Spirit." At the close, we knew the work was done. So well did we know it, that we laid our watch before us and then gave the congregation ninety seconds to decide, and awaited results. It was a finished work. They all came. In twenty minutes they were all through. Little puddles of tears on the benches and chairs where they knelt attested to their sincerity. To God be all the glory!

W. E. Lytle, Lawyer-Evangelist.

Troy, Ohio.

We are glad to have such a fine report from our friend, Brother Lytle, and trust the Lord may keep him busy in his whitened harvest field of wasting grain. He has suffered much for his convictions, but the Lord has turned his sufferings out for the furtherance of the gospel. Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Morrison.

HOLLOW ROCK CAMP.

If records are correct, and we do not have reason to doubt them, Hollow Rock has the distinction of being the oldest camp in existence. Services on these sacred grounds have been held for a period of over one hundred years. Under the present Interdenominational Holiness Association was held this year the 59th annual meeting for the spread of Scriptural Holiness. Many spirit-filled men and women have spoken on the platform and thousands having heard the call of God to Holy living have knelt at the altar of prayer and wept and prayed through to victory and have gone back to their homes and churches to live and shout and shine for God until he has called them to himself in glory.

The camp committee had planned wisely in their selection of workers for this year. The preachers were Revs. John and Bona Fleming and C. W. Butler, D.D. Brother John Moore led the chorus in song and sang a number of beautiful gospel solos, all of which were enjoyed and many souls found help in his messages in song. Miss Edwina Wilson of East Liverpool, and Prof. Robert Troupe of the same city, were the accompanists. Mrs. Edith Mackey Smith was in charge of the children's meetings while Miss Janie Bradford of Washington, Pa., took care of the spiritual interests of the young people. Every part of the services of the camp were properly cared for.

The attendance was excellent. The Spiritual fervor was never more keenly felt than during this meeting. Sinners were converted, believers were sanctified wholly, backsliders reclaimed and the saints were edified, and built up in the most holy faith. The spirit of agonizing prayer was never greater; the leading of the Holy Spirit never more direct and the shout of new born souls frequently filled the heart with joy. The preaching of the Word by Bros. Fleming and Dr. Butler was pungent and true to the line. All in all it was surely a wonderful meeting. But it is now a matter of history, but the fire of the Holy Spirit is still burning. Praise the Lord and while we rejoice in the old time gospel let us pray, plan and work for the meeting announced for 1930 that it may still be better even than the one of which we are writing.

Please do not wait until the camp committee call for prayer, but begin now while you are reading this article and continue daily until the camp opens again next year. God will wonderfully bless and enrich your soul. You will be already prayed up and able to push the battle for God and lost souls ere the first hymn is announced. In this day of compromise on the part of so many professing Christians we must stand true to "the faith of our fathers" if we expect to gain the crown which is laid up for us in glory.

Yours in His name and the best interests of Hollow Rock.

AMONG THE HILLS OF NORTHERN TRANSVAAL.

G. Arnold Hodgkin.

It was the good fortune of the writer and his wife to accompany Rev. and Mrs. D. B. Jones on an automobile tour to the Northern Transvaal, and to take some part in a Missionary Convention, which was held under the auspices of the Hepzibah Faith Mission. We had met the leader of this deeply spiritual work in Africa, Bro. I. E. Dayhoff, while he was on a trip to America a few years ago, and had a short season of blessed fellowship with him. It was a real treat to meet him again, and to work with him and his band of mission workers, for a few days in this convention on the new mission station in the Transvaal.

Firstly, what shall we say of the trip with our dear friends, Mr. and Mrs. Jones? It was one of the most delightful motor car trips of our lives. Every moment was enjoyed as we both went and came. Whether we were driving along the beautiful South African highways or taking lunch by the wayside, we could wish for nothing better in the way of recreation and Christian fellowship, than those happy hours with these friends and workers for Christ.

Again, what can we write concerning the Convention and workers? Time and space would fail us here to speak of all those whom we met among the workers. But we can say that they are all deeply impressed in the affection of our hearts. The process of impression was neither difficult nor tedious. There we were, all working and praying for souls and the outpoured blessing of the Lord, and the harmony was most marked. We had come from America, England and Wales. We represented several different churches or societies. And yet, all walked in the light of John seventeen.

The blessing of the Lord was manifest from beginning to end. There were times when we felt the surge and power of the presence of God, and our hearts were melted like wax before a blaze. The natives seemed to feel the power and blessing for they sat and listened to the gospel story and we are sure some really turned to the Lord.

How good it is that the holiness missionaries can have Conventions like this one, where they may meet together and enjoy a time of refreshing from the Lord. May there be many more like this one in the Transvaal.

these chapters tell you of his runs and jumps from place to place, and it is well understood that, wherever he stopped for one sermon or two, for a three to five days' convention, the crowds were there and Bud preached to them the fullness of the salvation of our blessed Lord and Saviour. In this way, he has been invaluable to a new and struggling church which has no modernism in its ministry, and where preachers and people hold up the Lord Jesus as mighty to save to the uttermost.

It has been my privilege to be very closely associated with Bud Robinson in the early years of his ministry, and to meet with him on many fields of the battle of love for souls as the years have gone by. He, like myself, is growing old, and I hope those who need him so much, and love him so well, will not work him to death, and that he may be kept for a good number of years to bear witness to the cleansing, sanctifying power of Jesus' blood.

He has written a number of very interesting books, and if the Lord tarries, centuries after his death he will be spoken of, as Lorenzo Dow and Peter Cartwright, as one of the most unique and interesting and devout preachers that has ever appeared in the American pulpit. The very fact that he is so utterly unlike any other minister that our country has ever produced will preserve his memory and make him and his ministry interesting down the stream of time. It is to be hoped, after he passes, some man who knew him well, and associated with him much, will write his most interesting history.

H. C. MORRISON.

My Dear Friends.

There is no greater need in this world to-day than a host of well trained men in the ministry, who are entirely free from modern destructive criticism, well educated, God-called, and Spirit-filled. I am begging you, with all of my heart, to make a Thanksgiving donation to our Theological Seminary at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.

This department of the school has developed wonderfully, but we do need quite a sum of money to assist devout, poor young men to prepare for the ministry. Do not ignore our needs, or forget the time. Whether it is a thousand dollars or one dollar that you have to give us, send it in a few days before Thanksgiving to Rev. Guy Wilson, Wilmore, Ky., and he will report its receipt. Send nothing to THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. If I am living, I am planning to be somewhere in Texas. I love, with all my heart, this message of full salvation from sin through our blessed Redeemer, and I long for it to be preached and broadcasted over all this land and around the world. That, and that, alone, is the reason why, lying here in bed, I make this earnest appeal to the great HERALD family.

H. C. MORRISON.

Asbury College a World College.

There is a sense in which Asbury College is a world college. Its students come, not only from practically every state in the Union, but from many foreign countries. Its graduates go out as pastors, evangelists, missionaries and teachers, around the world. We have 106 missionaries scattered over the earth in South America, Costa Rica, Japan, Africa, Sumatra, Philippine Islands, Portugal, Szecho-Slovakia, Cuba, Korea, China, and Mexico.

It is a world college in the sense that practically all parts of the world look to Asbury for help; her representatives are carrying the message of salvation to the ends of the earth. In my travels I have been surprised at the large number of parents who are eager to send their children to Asbury College for their education. They give as their reasons for this desire, that they are appalled at the infidelity abroad in the land and the skepticism that is being taught in many of the schools. They very wisely desire that their children shall be educated without being robbed of their faith in the Bible as a revelation from God, and their trust in Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour.

They believe their children will not only be rooted and grounded in an evangelical Christian faith, but they believe they will be in the midst of good, healthful surroundings, where their bodies will be protected, and their souls nurtured in the things that are spiritual.

Many parents have had opportunity to observe the graduates of Asbury College and see that they have a purpose in life, that they are striving for something worth while, and that they have capacity for leadership. The students that go out from this college are its very best advertisements. Parents judge that such fruit must grow on a good tree. All of these and other reasons which might be enumerated, account for the fact that hundreds pass by many schools in all parts of the country to get to Asbury College.

H. C. MORRISON.

Send The Herald to Young Preachers.

We receive many letters from persons who say that someone has been sending them THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, and that they are very grateful for the paper and desire to have it come to them permanently; that they wish to subscribe. Give us a devout, consecrated, Spirit-filled young ministry and we shall be able to preserve the integrity of the Church, and carry forward the work of world evangelization. Give us a ministry tainted with the new theology, the spirit of destructive criticism, the spiritual life of the Church at home will die; we will send false teachers into the mission fields, the work of regeneration and the baptism with the Holy Spirit in sanctifying power will disappear, faith and reverence will leave the earth and the curse of God will come upon us in war, bloodshed and ruin.

We think that thousands of HERALD readers know some preacher in whom they can afford to invest 25 cents. Send his name and address at once and we will send him THE HERALD until February 1. The probabilities are that he will then become a subscriber. If the reader should not know of a young preacher, if they will send us the money, say from one to five dollars, or even one, and we will furnish the name and address. Do it now, and thus help to get the truth of full salvation and other vital messages before the people. Let us hear from you at once.

H. C. MORRISON.

The Duty of The Watchman, MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE most solemn and awful charge ever committed to mortal, is that which is entrusted to the minister of the gospel. Yet, we fear it, like many other sacred responsibilities, has become ordinary simply from the fact that it has been the common medium through which the Lord has designed that the world should know of its atonement that was made for it on Calvary.

In speaking of the watchman on the walls of Zion, the Lord said to Ezekiel, "O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me." We see from this passage that the minister should be in such vital touch with God that his messages would come direct from headquarters; receiving "the word at my mouth," said the Lord; then he is to be the go-between, the mouthpiece of the Lord, warning them for him.

Oh that a minister of the gospel would always feel this vital connection, this divine responsibility, the issues that are at stake when he stands before a congregation of never-dying souls and claims to be the messenger of the Lord. It has been said that every man who calls himself a preacher of the gospel of the Son of God ought to hold his ministry as the first thing in all of his life and service, otherwise he not only cannot be true to his mission, but he cannot win men to Christ. Here all the ambassadors of Christ may well afford to bare their heads and remove their shoes, remembering they are standing upon holy ground.

Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, looking at what men should be and do under the power of his presence, said: "No power but the Holy Ghost could take a man through those regions—Jerusalem, Judea, and to the uttermost parts of the earth. The man who has been baptized with water only, will choose his own parish and sphere of labor and circle of operation, but the man in whom is the burning of the Holy Ghost, will say with Wesley, 'My parish is the world,' and will be constrained by the love of Christ to go out anywhere." Then he adds, "Lord, help us to receive the Holy Ghost that we may do our best."

In speaking of ministerial supply, Bishop Candler said, "You get an indefinite gospel with more qualifications than substance, and a real man does not care to go forth to preach it. It may be that we are developing a sort of system of scribism, that is everlastingly concerning itself with little minute matters of secondary importance and losing the grip on essential things. I am inclined to think that in Paul's time there was division existing with regard to the gospel which he felt was the power of God unto salvation. And now you find a good many men qualifying and limiting in various directions until it does not grip old men or young men. They become largely the announcers of the numbers of the musical program on Sundays. That will not call men or hold them. In Protestant worship the central thing is the proclamation of definite gospel truth. When we get the idea that everything may be true, we bring forward by implication that everything may be false. For my own part, I will not undertake the burdens and responsibilities of the ministry, if I have to go forth with a gospel that is uncertain as to what it means, or whether men need it or not. The world needs it, and it is absolutely indispensable to this world; and that being true, God lays his hand on men who must go and tell it. Two things have come out of revival hymns and preaching. And when you do not have those great movements of grace that lift men up to heights where they will rejoice in God and feel confident by reason of their relation to him, you do not have preachers. The man must, like the prophet, see Jehovah in his temple, high and lifted up, before he answers, 'Here am I; send me.'"

Oh that we might have an army of preachers like our great founder, John Wesley, who went everywhere, and all the time preaching a full gospel to those in the open air, in halls, in the byways, and even from his father's tombstone. His open-air work was the foundation of our great Methodist Church, yet we find very few of our modern ministers who have faith enough in this method of work to even hold occasional meetings.

Who will be the Wesleys, Whitefield, and Finney, who will make the pages of the twentieth century Methodism glow with the gospel torch of a full and free salvation? Moody and Spurgeon are gone, but who is at this time in the real heat of battle winning souls to such an extent that their names will go down in history as the greatest soul-winners of their day? Why do we have to look back to what has been done to encourage our faith? Why may we not look at what is being done now, that the army of the Lord may be quickened to a pace that will mean the speedy evangelization of this prodigal world. Let us, as preacher and people, follow the Captain of our salvation back to the upper room, and there get on the gospel harness, and in touch with the divine current that will make us mighty to the pulling down of the strongholds of Satan. Then shall we go forth "fair as the moon, clear as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners."

E. STANLEY JONES' LETTER.

wrote you last in June. The story of what happened between June and the first part of August can be quickly told.

Apart from one series of addresses, given mostly to the hundreds of missionaries in the hill station of Landour, I spent the time in finishing up my new book. I went to a lonely Himalayan lake-side and there in the undisturbed quiet I finished it. The title is to be "The Christ of Every Road," with a sub-title, "A Study in Pentecost." The publishers say they will rush it through and get it out before Christmas.

Then I went down to the plains and spent four days at home with Mrs. Jones before taking the road again. Sitapur was hot so I succeeded in carrying away with me, as a road companion, a good case of prickly heat. My first place was Agra. I was to be there only a few days as an introduction to a later series. The principal of the great Christian College there felt that he did not have sufficient command of the situation to launch a campaign to win the non-Christian students to Christ as he was new as principal. But he was eager to get hold of the staff and Christian students. I had one day of retreat for the Christian staff. Many entered a new life, so they said. I had wondered if I could have Round Table Conferences with the non-Christians after publication of my last book. Agra was a test. We had one with the Christian and non-Christian staff at the College and it worked wonderfully. They told me afterwards that they had never opened up to each other in this way before. Our hearts burned within us as we talked about him in the way. As usual the non-Christians were hazy or skeptical. It seems that apart from Christ men's lives do not light up with a living glow. He is the light of the world. Two nights I spent some hours with the students, allowing them to ask me questions. It was great to open yourself for questions believing that your case was good and that things would hold together. They do with Christ as the Keystone of the arch of your thinking.

Agra was just a preliminary skirmish, the real battle was to begin when I got to grips with a city in a prolonged series. The real battle began at Nasik. This city is an orthodox city and one that I had not visited before. Here resides a Shankarachariya, one of the four leaders of orthodox Hinduism. It was here that he received Miss Miller, the American girl who married the ex-maharaja, into caste Hinduism. The feeling was that, with this opening of the door, there would be a landslide into Hinduism from Westerners. The situation was militant. We had the largest theater of the city for the meetings and it was filled. One night at the close of the address when I was answering questions a local doctor in a very heated way said, "How is it that you come from America to preach to us when in your hotels there are signs up: 'Chinese, Indians, dogs and cats not allowed?'" The cats made me suspicious. I asked him for his facts. He telegraphed for them but I have not had a reply yet. But apart from the mixed-up information there is enough truth to make it sting.

By the way it is amazing how the East is looking at us more keenly than ever. They are quoting Judge Lindsay's statements about the sexual looseness of youth in U. S. A. against the passage of the bills to raise the age of marriage from 12 to 15 years. Judge Lindsay has also furnished the ammunition for replies to Miss Mayo. Yesterday at question time I was asked about the questionnaire sent to 1400 ministers in the U. S. A. regarding their religious beliefs. This was quoted by a Hindu from a vernacular paper to prove that Christianity was losing its hold upon the West. Thus the world is a whispering gallery.

At Nasik I had three solid hours of questioning and they would have gone on if we had not had to stop from sheer exhaustion. At this place I had an interview with the Shankarachariya and urged him to allow converts to stay in their Hindu homes. Now they are put out. He agreed. It is an important step for if they are allowed to stay in their homes, as in China, then we will have large numbers of the educated classes coming over.

Poona was the best place so far. It has six colleges and is a center of intense nationalism. The chairman of the first night, the leading nationalist of the Marathi country, Mr. Kelkar, began the series by these words: "There is not one of us who would not like to meet Christ. But we cannot see him, therefore we have to have interpreters. The speaker is an interpreter of Christ so we listen with eagerness to his interpretation." It broke open the whole situation for me. From the very beginning there was an eager interest. I had been told that Poona was not interested in religion, that it was too taken up with nationalism to listen to religious lectures. But the hall was packed night after night with people sitting in the windows, on the floor, in the aisles and standing everywhere. At the close of each address I would let those go who wanted to go and then the rest would stay for questions. We would go on for several hours with these questions. One youth sent up twenty pages of questions. When I balked at this appalling manuscript of questions he blandly said, "Then answer the first six pages!" I found that he had copied these questions from a book published by an American publisher! But on the whole the questions were first-hand and living and connected with real problems. The last night I urged only those to stay who wanted to face the questions I had raised rather than to ask questions. About two hundred Hindus and Moslems stayed. It was a very great hour as we bowed in prayer in this after-meeting and faced the Living Christ. "To think that you could get Hindus and Moslems to do that in Poona—it was a miracle," said a missionary at the close.

The first meeting in Poona was a reception at the school of Miss Sorabjee, an Indian Christian lady whose clear witness for Christ is a living force in Poona. She had gathered the elite among the Parsees and the Hindus and the power of the Living Spirit was in that very first meeting. Several real conversions came out of it—one a brilliant Parsee woman.

I spoke in several of the non-Christian colleges to large crowds of eager students. I stayed with the brothers of the Christian Ashram while there. The Ashram is built on the principle of simplicity combined with a passionate Christian devotion. The brothers, European and Indian, live in little cells about five feet by seven. They wear sandals, dress in Indian home-spun, eat in Indian style with the fingers, have a sunrise meeting each day, keep silence until 9 A. M. and also from after dinner at night to bedtime, have no money, live in a brotherhood of worship of Christ and work for men. The atmosphere was joyously Christian. I loved it. I felt utterly at home. It made me very eager to hasten the establishment of our Ashram in North India. We hope to have it going by the Spring.

Between Poona and Sholapur I spoke to the 700 women in Pandita Ramabai's old place, Kedgaon. What hallowed associations were there. The touch of that sainted woman is still on the place. At Sholapur the spiritual struggle was tense. The theater was full and the atmosphere was electric. A doctor, who had led the mill strikes, and a Sadhu headed the opposition at the question time. On the last night when I spoke to the packed theater on "My Personal Religious Experience" the interest was tense. The living Spirit gripped them, so much so that these leaders were frightened and when the European chairman asked to be excused at the question hour, they got the crowd to vote the sadhu to the chair so he could upset what I had said. I brought the whole manoeuvre into the open, made them ashamed of it and before the meeting was over we were more deeply face to face with Christ than if this maneuver had not taken place. It was a boomerang that hit the hitters. The next day I answered questions for nearly six solid hours and at the close one of the chief opponents said that they had only one request to make when I came back next time and that was, "that more time be allowed for questions!"

I am a very happy man. To my very finger tips I love this struggle for the soul of a people. It has the feel of a real battle in it. I would not be elsewhere for worlds. Rev. Paul Braisted, who is my colleague for six months, has done excellent service with small groups of students and others. I am grateful for the help that you give us in prayer. I am certain that India is facing things in a new vital way. If some of you would like to know how you can help us financially please write me and I will be glad to tell you where we can use money for the vital purposes of the Kingdom. Thanks to you who are helping.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

HE WANTED TO LEARN.

More than a hundred years ago a stout, freckle-faced, awkward boy of eighteen years, dressed in a ragged waistcoat and short breeches, without stockings or shoes, rapped one evening at the door of a humble cottage in northern England and asked to see the village schoolmaster. When that person appeared the boy said, very modestly, "I would like to attend your evening school, Sir."

"And what do you wish to study?" asked the teacher, roughly.

"I want to learn to read and write, Sir," answered the lad.

The schoolmaster glanced at the boy's homely face and rough clothes scornfully, and said, "Very well, you may attend; but an awkward, bare-legged laddie like you would better be doing something else than learning his letters." Then he closed the door in the lad's face.

This boy was the son of the fireman of a pumping engine in a Northumberland coal mine, and was born one hundred and forty-eight years ago—on June 9, 1781, to be exact. His birthplace was a hovel, with clay floor, mud walls, and bare rafters. When he was five years old he began to work for his living by herding cows in the daytime and barring up the gates at night. As he grew older he was set to picking stones from the coal, and after that to driving a horse which drew coal from the pit. He went half fed and half clothed.

When he called at the school-house he was plugman of a pumping engine and, though he knew nothing of reading or writing, he had studied the engine until he had a complete knowledge of the machine. He was able to take it apart and make any ordinary repairs.

Not discouraged by the advice given him by the schoolmaster, he made application and attended the evening school. At the end of about two years he had learned all this school could teach him. He conceived the plan of constructing a steam engine. It took him a long time, but at the age of forty he had made several engines, and was known as a successful energetic engineer, and was called upon to build long and difficult lines of railroad.

But his locomotives were too slow; he wanted them to run faster. He proposed to build one that would run at the rate of twenty miles an hour! Everybody laughed at him. Some thought he was crazy. One gentleman, who considered himself very wise, said to him: "Suppose you invent an engine capable of running nine or ten miles an hour, and suppose, while it is running, a cow should stray upon the track. Will not that be a very awkward circumstance?"

"I should think it might be very awkward—for the cow," he answered.

Well, he succeeded in making his locomotive, and at a trial which took place near Liverpool it attained to the unheard-of speed of fourteen miles an hour! By making certain improvements this same engine, the Rocket, was made to go at the speed of thirty miles an hour. People laughed no longer, but admired.

He was invited as a consulting engineer to foreign countries, and wealth flowed upon him. Philosophers sought his friendship and his king offered him knighthood. But he preferred to remain plain George Stephenson. That is the name of this "awkward laddie," who became the inventor of the locomotive.—Sel.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again for just a little chat with the cousins. I've taken The Herald for several years, and sure enjoy it from cover to cover. I enjoy Dr. Morrison's good writing, also his wife. I have been bedfast over thirteen years. I have written two letters that were printed and received presents, such as books, papers, money, stamps, tracts, phonograph records, candy and enjoyed them all. I hope and pray the Lord will reward all dear readers who remembered me. I hope some will see this who will send me anything to help a poor sick girl pass time off. I enjoy reading good literature. I have much to thank the Lord for, and the best of all is a home beyond this world of sorrow and affliction. I am ready to say farewell to this vain world of sin and sorrow at any time. I hope to get a letter and card shower from every State in the union. I can't go to church or Sunday school like other girls, can't sit up, and suffer all the time; anything to help my long, lonesome hours would be a great kindness.

Mattie L. Aycock.
Rt. 1, Hartselle, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you open the door a wee bit so a little girl can slip in and join your corner of boys and girls? I am a little country girl living on a farm. I am five feet tall and weigh 102 pounds. I have black hair and black eyes. I enjoy going to Sunday school. I have been teaching the beginners in the Mount Tabor Church. I live on a farm ten miles from Charleston, W. Va. I have two sisters and three brothers. I have a darling little baby brother. I am thirteen years old. I like music, but I can't play. I hope I shall get letters from your boys and girls. I love to write and I will answer every letter I get.

Audra Mae Clark.
Lynch, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I sure do enjoy reading page ten. I am a little girl from the northeastern part of Alabama. I have brown eyes, sandy hair and a fair complexion. I am five feet high and weigh ninety pounds. Ruth Hiller, I guess your name to be Flora. Maxine Williams, I guess your name to be Edith. If the names are correct remember you are to write me. My first name starts with A and ends with E. The one who guesses it I will send them my picture. I am twelve years old; my birthday is October 14. Who is my twin? If I have one please write to me. Ruth, remember if I guessed your name you are to send me something. I hope Mr. W. B. is feeding his chickens when this arrives.

A. Mavis Rice.
Rt. 1, Wedowee, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit me to your happy circle again? I have written to The Herald before, but it was several years ago. Aunt Bettie, how are you and the cousins getting along? How many cousins take lessons on the piano, violin, or cornet? I take piano lessons and I have a sister who takes violin lessons. Who can guess my age? It is between ten and fifteen. I am five feet, three inches tall, and weigh 103 pounds. I have light wavy hair, fair complexion and blue eyes. Mary E. Baird, I guess your middle name to be Elizabeth. Bessie Campbell, I guess your middle name to be Nona. Ruth E. Steely, I guess your middle name to be Elaine. Who has my birthday, May 28?

Eva Jones.
P. O. Box 81, Foley, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Today is my first time to discover your page in The Herald. My mother takes The Herald and enjoys it very much, and I shall enjoy reading the letters of the boys and girls of other States. I am ten years old and in the fifth grade. My birthday is March 3. I guess Thelma Easton's middle name to be Elaine. I would like for someone to guess my middle name. It begins with I, and ends with E, and has five letters in it. I want to know if I have a twin. If so please write me. I hope to see my letter in print because this is my first attempt.

Eleanor I. Bracewell.
51 N. Warren St., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please let an Oregon girl join your band of girls and boys. I live in the beautiful Rogue River Valley. Pears are the principal crop raised, although they raise nearly everything here. Mother has taken The Herald for several years, and this is the way we read it. After supper when the chores are all done all seven of us gather in the front room and mama begins on the front page and reads the dear old Herald through. But mama has been sick for quite a while so I read page ten anyway. I have light hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. My age is between seven and sixteen. Elda Hilton, I guess your name to be Fannie. Bessie Campbell, I guess your name to be Nina. Can some of you tell me what name was spoken in heaven and then there was silence for half an hour? I hope my Texas kinfolks read this. I am a Nazarene girl living for Jesus. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print.

Edna M. Knowles.
Rt. 4, Box 52, Medford, Ore.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been quite a while since I have written to you, so I thought I would write and let you know that I am still one of your members. Aunt Bettie, you sure have been writing nice letters and stories. I think all the cousins enjoy reading your letters, that is the first thing I read in The Herald. I still go to Sunday school and church every Sunday. The superintendent of our Sunday school is Mr. C. O. Hundley. Everybody likes him fine. Our pastor, Rev. Jolly Harper, is a young man going to College, and we pray and hope he will be a great man as Dr. H. C. Morrison some day. I wish all of you cousins would write to me for I love to receive letters from Christian boys and girls.

Ethel Young.
Church Point, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I just know you'll let another Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I was sixteen June 17. I am five feet, six inches tall, have brown curly hair, fair complexion and bluish-grey eyes. The thing I like most is reading Christian literature and the Bible. I certainly do enjoy reading The Pentecostal Herald. My dear aunt took it for me as a Christmas present and I think it a precious one. I am a Christian and belong to the Southern Methodist Church. Of all earthly things I love it is sweet-natured Christian friends. I go to Sunday school every Sunday and I have a very dear teacher, Mrs. Lillie Roadman. We think our pastor, Faye G. Gibson, a heaven sent preacher of the gospel. My hope is, to always live for Christ and be a shining light for him in the world. Hoping to hear from all the cousins, both girls and boys. Kindest regards.

Phyllis Calfee.
Rankin, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again. But I am in Missouri this time instead of Kansas. I live in the country on a farm. My mother, brother, and I are at my grandparents. My mother takes The Herald as I have told you before. I wrote about one year and a half ago, and my letter was printed, and I thank Aunt Bettie a lot for printing it. I am thirteen years young now, and in the seventh grade. We think The Herald is a wonderful paper. It is so wonderful that we can read about Rev. Ridout's great meetings over in the foreign countries, and hear of so many souls being saved in his meetings. I was converted a year ago, May 10. I love to live for Jesus. I will close with love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Julia Ross.
Rt. 2, Rich Hill, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I sure enjoy reading the good old Herald. I read almost every line in it every week. I have been disappointed every time for awhile because I have been looking for my letter in print which I wrote a few months ago, but I guess Mr. W. B. got it. I am a Christian. I have been saved over a year and later sanctified in a revival held at our church. I sure enjoy living for Jesus. I attend two Sunday schools every Sunday and I am the primary teacher and secretary of our Methodist Sunday school and the beginners' teacher of our Union Sunday school at our schoolhouse. I sure enjoy teaching my classes and I haven't missed one time teaching them this year and God is blessing and building up in numbers rapidly. I serve as President and a member of the program committee of our Epworth League. I am seventeen years old. My birthday is June 24. Have I a twin?

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been looking through all our old Heralds we have gotten for the last year and I decided to write to you. I am five feet, four inches tall, weigh 117 pounds, have light brown hair and blue eyes. I was fifteen years old Sept. 13. I wish that some one near my own age would write to me. I will answer all letters received. My father is pastor of the Garnett Holiness Mission. We have prayer meeting Wednesday nights, Sunday school and preaching Sunday morning, Young People's Meeting and preaching Sunday night. We live on a farm ten miles from Garnett. Aunt Bettie, I am trying to be a Christian, but know I am not where I ought to be. I ask you and all the cousins to pray for me.

Alice Kramer.
Rt. 6, Garnett, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Is there a bit of space for a little Kentucky girl to join your jolly band? As my first letter was not in print I will write again. I go to school every day. The name of the school is Mt. Victory. I am in the seventh grade at school. Who can guess my first name? It begins with C and ends with S, and has six letters in it. I was born in 1919. My birthday is August 15. Have I a twin? If so please write to me. I like to go on a picnic. I like to ride horseback. I want all the cousins to write to me. I will answer all letters I receive. I am four feet and four inches tall, have brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am nine years old. I have a little Bible of my own. It has all the chapters in it. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

FALLEN ASLEEP

IN MEMORIAM.

My precious mother, Mrs. Annie Mercer Albright, was called home to heaven at noon, Oct. 9, 1929, on the 13th anniversary of the death of her youngest son, Harry. She suffered a stroke of paralysis, March 17, 1927, while in St. Petersburg, Fla. We brought her home to Carrollton, Ohio, Oct. 6, 1928, and she lingered till above date, never regaining the use of herself. She suffered intense pain part of the time, and had to lie in one position the two years and almost seven months. In all that time she never once murmured or complained, but always had a sweet smile for everybody.

She was converted at an early age, and so well converted that she never backslid; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, remaining a faithful member till death. She received the blessing of sanctification in 1892 at old Hollow Rock camp meeting. She walked and talked with God continually, never having a break with him.

She was born in Unity, Columbiana Co., Ohio, Jan. 27, 1844, and at the age of seven years drove with her parents in the old style covered wagon to Indiana where they cleared woods and built a log cabin home. She was the youngest of fourteen children, and the last survivor. The family returned to Ohio when she was about fifteen, and on Feb. 6, 1862, she united in marriage to John W. Albright, at East Fairfield, Ohio. He preceded her in death April 15, 1905. To this union was born eight children, five of whom preceded her to her heavenly home. Two died in infancy. Her son Charley was killed in an automobile accident Oct. 14, 1910, at Sebring, Ohio. On the morning of Oct. 9, 1916, she found Harry had slipped off to heaven. Elmer (better known as Dick) was taken to glory suddenly from Wilmington, N. Y., camp meeting (where he and his wife Tillie were workers) July 2, 1918. Three children survive, viz: Firman, of San Diego, Calif., Percy, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and her only daughter, the writer. She also leaves 14 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren to mourn her loss.

She was a wonderful mother. She knew no idleness, besides her care of the home and family, having a natural talent for art, she adorned the homes of her friends and loved ones with many beautiful paintings.

The heritage she has left us is priceless, that of a pure, holy, saintly life, in which could be found no flaws.

Luella Albright Henderson.

CARMICHAEL.

Mrs. P. T. Carmichael died Sunday, Oct. 6, 1929, at one o'clock at the family home, 1102 South Park Ave., Tifton, Ga. Mrs. Carmichael passed away quietly, as if going to sleep, in the manner in which she had said she wished to die.

Mrs. Carmichael was Miss Elizabeth Tignor Fambrough, daughter of Rev. W. N. Fambrough, and was born in Coweta Co., near Senoia, on March 11, 1859, being in her seventy-first year. She joined the Methodist Church in August, 1871, and had been a faithful member and true Christian since. She was prepared to meet her Lord. A week before her death she looked at the picture of her parents and said they were beckoning her home, spoke again of going to her heavenly home last week, and on the morning before she died remarked to a granddaughter that it was the day she was to die.

She was married to Mr. Carmichael on December 16, 1875, in Coweta county. They came to South Georgia, Dec. 11, 1902, and located seven miles south of Tifton, where they lived a number of years; from there moved to Lenox for a few years, from there to Woodbury for awhile and to Tifton about four years ago and had made their home here since, except for what time she spent visiting her children and relatives.

The family have a host of friends throughout this section who will be greatly grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. Carmichael. Her funeral was held Oct. 9, 1929, being conducted Tuesday afternoon by Rev. C. C. Smoak, her pastor, and assisted by

Asbury College one year Demand Notes read: "On Demand after one year's notice in writing we promise to pay—"

Reasons Why Asbury Demand Notes are Better

- FIRST: They guarantee a fixed income—6%. No period of high money rates lasts indefinitely. Good interest with good security is not always to be had. Asbury offers both.
- SECOND: They are the most flexible security for one to hold. Bonds cannot be cashed until due. Bonds are paid off at an arbitrary date.
- THIRD: They can be cashed after one year's notice. Most any one can finance a need for a year. If health or business conditions demand a return of your money, you are protected.
- FOURTH: You escape the difficult hazards of reinvestment from time to time. There is satisfaction in knowing that you are not to look next year for a place to reinvest your money.
- FIFTH: There is reward in knowing that your money is not only invested at 6% but that it is serving a great purpose—building Christian character.

Asbury's growing program will doubtless demand 6% money for some time. Preference will be given Christian people who first accept our demand notes.

Rev. Leonard Cochran, of Stonewall, Ga., who paid a most eloquent and impressive tribute to the departed mother. Rev. W. E. Towson also was a participant. The pallbearers were Rev. J. W. Tyson, Dr. W. A. Rowan, N. O. Allen, S. A. Martin, J. D. Browning and H. J. Vernon, all who were Mrs. Carmichael's close friends. A quartet composed of Mrs. J. J. Golden, Mrs. Claude Williams, Mrs. W. T. Baker and I. W. Myers contributed the vocal and instrumental talent for the occasion. At the cemetery Bro. Smoak and Rev. W. D. Raburn offered prayer and the quartet sang a hymn.

All the children were present except T. A. Carmichael, of Austinburg, O., who was unavoidably detained. She is survived by her grief-stricken husband and seven children, thirty grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, two brothers and one sister.

Mrs. Carmichael reached the age of three score and ten living to be older than either of her parents or brothers and sisters.

H. C. Smith: "Please pray for my wife, Mrs. H. C. Smith, who is in the State Hospital at Patton, Calif.; also pray for Mrs. J., that she shall be well in body and live as close to God as she wants to. Pray for me that I shall believe and trust God as I want to and as God wants me to."

Mrs. J. B.: "I am sending a special request for you to join me in prayer that the trouble in our home be blotted out and pure love fill our hearts for each other, that husband and I be happy and useful in our Master's cause. We are both Christians. Oh! pray earnestly. An anxious heart."

A Herald Reader: "Please pray for me that I might overcome evil influence and live a perfect life. Pray that we might have the privilege of church in our neighborhood. God's people are drifting away and souls all around us are going to hell. Pray earnestly that I may do my duty."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VIII.—November 24, 1929.

Subject.—The Higher Patriotism.
Jonah 1:1-3; 3:1-5; 4:5-11.

Golden Text.—And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth. Acts 17:26.

Time.—About B. C. 860.

Places.—Palestine and Nineveh.

Introduction.—Was there ever a Jonah? Some of the critics tell us there was not. They affirm that this book is only fiction. But in 2 Kings 14:25 Jonah is mentioned as a historical character. He is the same Jonah that we meet in this prophecy, "the son of Amittai. . . Of Gath-he-pher." Jesus Christ is good authority with all wise men, save a few of the more erudite critics; and in Matt. 12:38-41 he confirms the story of Jonah—both his incarceration in the fishes belly and his preaching in the city of Nineveh. He refers to him again in Matt. 16:4, and in Luke 11:29-32. Either Jesus was mistaken, or falsified, or the story is true. I take the last view. I believe Jesus knew what he was talking about. Jonah lived; although stranger than fiction, the little book that bears his name is history. I am reminded of a Salvation Army lassie who told an infidel that she believed the story of Jonah and the whale, and that she intended to ask him about it when she got to heaven. The infidel said: "Well, suppose you don't find Jonah there?" She answered: "Then you may ask him." That infidel could have "kept silent in seven languages," had he known them.

We shall not realize that Jonah had any patriotism at all, unless we are acquainted with the fact that the city of Nineveh was the capital of a mighty nation, Assyria, and that there was great danger lest that nation should completely overrun all Israel. Jonah did not want Nineveh to repent; he did not wish God to forgive and spare her. For the safety of his own people, he would have rejoiced to see Nineveh burned out with a rain of fire and brimstone from heaven.

Yes, Jonah was a patriot; but his patriotism was no bigger than Palestine and his own people. If Jehovah would bless and care for the Jews, the Gentiles might all go to the bow-wows for ought he cared. No thought of "the Higher Patriotism" had ever moved his soul. Was he a bad man? No, he was a good man; but he was a narrow man. What a sectarian he would have made. If you do not belong to my "set", you have my ill will and my curses. So human, and so modern. It is time for the world to get out of swaddling garments. God has many good people all over the earth. It may almost kill some of us to realize it, but He loves others as well as he loves "us."

Surely you do not mean to say that God would not rather see a poor old cornfield negro plunge into hell than to see the cultured daughter of the rich land owner go there; surely you do not believe that God would not prefer the damnation of a miserable Indian outcast to that of a rich bon ton in New York City; surely you would not tell us that God loves pagan negroes in the jungles of Darkest Africa as well as he loves cultivated Frenchmen and Americans. Yes, that is exactly what I mean to say. And "The Higher Patriotism" demands that we be Godlike, and love our neighbors as we love ourselves.

"The Higher Patriotism" is a glorious standard. I am tempted to term it a bewildering utopian dream. It reminds one of the old negro who said that some white men were talking too much about what ought to be and what ought not to be, but were not paying sufficient attention to "what am." "The Higher Patriotism" is what God and some good people want, and what bad people and some good people do not want. It is not the negative Golden Rule of China lying dormant in literature: it is the positive Golden Rule of Jesus Christ living and ruling in international relationships. It is a fine standard to work for; and, thank God, we are feeling a bit of its peace and joy between outbursts of war here and there. It is great comfort and rest between spells of booming guns and bursting shells. But its full glory will be millennial. Then we shall love one another, and "learn war no more." We shall be our brothers' keepers.

1. The Word of the Lord.—Those old-time prophets received their messages direct from Jehovah. I am glad they give him full credit for what they say.

2. Go to Nineveh.—That was no small appointment for a man with no salary, no church backing—nothing but a cheap suit of clothes on his back. Nineveh was a great heathen city sixty miles in circumference, and containing an immense population wholly given to idolatry. Its wickedness was a stench in Jehovah's nostrils.

3. But Jonah rose up to flee to Tarshish.—No missionary work for him. He was bound for Spain. He would hide from the presence of the Lord. Would he? No. He would go down to Joppa, and take ship on the Great Sea; but he could not escape the All-seeing Eye. Out in the Mediterranean he would meet God and settle accounts in a fish's stomach. Maybe it was a poor place for an altar service; but it was the only sort that suited Jonah. And when Jonah got through at the altar he was ready for the second section of our lesson in chapter three.

2. Arise, go unto Nineveh.—No chance in the appointment. Jonah should have been thankful for that second call. Some have lost the second by refusing the first. Jonah might have worried himself about a suitable sermon for that great city; but Jehovah relieved him of that task: "Preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee." Some more of us need to hear that.

3. So Jonah arose and went unto Nineveh.—One can almost see his strides. No more fish for him: he was tired of it. He had mastered one great big word: Obedience. Obey God, and all else will be well for all worlds.

4. Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.—He was in a hurry—no time to hunt for a boarding house. He could sleep on the street. No time to waste looking for some big hall in which to preach. As soon as he was inside the city gate, he began to deliver Jehovah's message. I wonder if something of that sort is not needed now.

6. The people of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a fast.—I am inclined to believe that Jonah did some great preaching. His sermon was short, but it cut to the quick, and the people of that great city went down in genuine repentance. Even the king put on sackcloth and sat in ashes. God had mercy, forgave their sins and spared their city. "A broken and a contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise."

4:5. So Jonah went out of the city.

—The preaching was finished and the altar service was soon ended. All vice was soon ended. All the mourners, except Jonah, had been comforted. He, poor fellow, erected a little brush arbor to keep the sun from burning him, and wanted to die. May God help us poor preachers, for all the Jonahs are not dead.

6 and 7. A gourd vine and a worm.—That is not accurately quoted, but it gives the sense. By God's help the vine grew and shaded Jonah for a day; but by God's help a worm cut it down that night. Jonah got mad, and fussed, and "wished in himself to die." God's time had come. Jonah was a poor student; but he must learn his lesson in "The Higher Patriotism." Human beings in sinful Nineveh were better than a gourd vine. If Jonah wanted mercy for his vine that cost him nothing, surely God should be merciful to a big city of helpless people. Jonah had his lesson. We hope he profited thereby.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Dr. O. G. Mingledorff will, D. V., spend most of the coming winter in evangelistic work in the far Northwest, beginning November 17 at Lewiston, Idaho, and going on into Washington State. Persons wishing to communicate with him will please address him at South Bellingham, Washington, care Rev. A. O. Quall.

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister, evangelist, closed a four-weeks' tabernacle campaign at Huntington Park, Los Angeles, Calif. He spoke at the Training School, and met Dr. McLaughlin, Editor of The Christian Witness, whom he had not seen for fourteen years. Dr. Hofmeister's western address is 4021 Lennox Ave., Inglewood, Calif.

The meeting at Praise, Ky., was a success. Thirteen saved and sanctified, and nine joined the M. E. Church. Rev. H. G. Murrel is the pastor.—Rev. Wm. Kelley, Conf. Evangelist of M. E. Church.

"Revival Blessings" by Rev. Geo. W. Ridout, published by The Pentecostal Publishing Co., is superbly worthwhile. I enjoyed its every page. It is at once informing and inspiring. It is calculated to set the fires a burning. Get it and read it.—M. P. Hunt.

MY DUTY.

Delaune Daniels Mason.

If I can only keep the faith,
As Paul in days of old,
If I can only stand the test
And prove myself as bold
As Daniel in the lions' den,
And Stephen when they stoned him,
I'll hear "Well done, thou faithful one,
Now you may enter in."

What joy these words will bring to me
If I can be but true,
And all along the way of life
Good things for others do.
But I must surely keep the faith
And walk the narrow way,
Redeeming time, and pressing on Until that blessed day.

It is simple, practical, entertaining and educational.
Price, $1.00.

HERE IT IS! JUST OFF THE PRESS!

Just what gospel singers everywhere have been looking for. A new book of special songs by Rev. George Bennard (author of The Old Rugged Cross). It is called "Bennard's Melodies, Solos and Duets" and contains a large number of "specials" for any and all occasions and is suited in range for all kinds of voices. In it you will find many new numbers not found in any other book. Any one of the following is worth the price of the book over and over again:

- "Where the Palefaced Flowers Bloom."
- "Beautiful in the Morning."
- "When the Shadows Flew Away."
- "Tell Them All to Meet Us."
- "Saved by Grace Divine."
- "Lord Thou Art Questioning."
- "The Master of Harvest is Calling."
- "There is no Friend like Jesus."
- "My Heart says Yes to Jesus."
- "Some One is Waiting."

These are but a few of the many charming numbers you will find in this book. Artistically bound, size 7x10. Price 50c. Order from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

Light on the Child's Path

Wm. A. Bixler
A fine book for the tiny tots who have not learned to read. No fairy stories or fiction. Its ninety-three pictures inspire the child for good. The short stories and poems are interesting and help the parents entertain and instruct the little one in pure Christian principles. Well illustrated. 128 pages.
50 cents

Stories from the New Testament

For the Little Child

Contains 28 stories about boys and girls of the New Testament. Many full-page pictures. Test questions covering each story make the Bible lesson stay fixed in the youth's mind.
Cloth bound. 75 cents.

Stories from the Old Testament

For the Little Child

Similar style to book listed above. It entertains and brings to mind good character-building lessons by telling the ever-new stories about Old Testament boys and girls. Well illustrated.
Cloth bound. Includes test-questions. 75 cents.

Tiny Tots in Story Town

By ISABEL C. BYRUM

This book will thrill the little tots from 2 to 6 years old. Pictures in two colors make every page more interesting. As usual this mother-author has woven good Christian morals into her stories. They really do your child good, besides entertaining.
A few of the titles—In Story Town—Crippled John—Happy Way—Dare Do Right—At Grandpa's and others. Strong linen cover.
Price 35 cents.

Bible Hero Stories

A New Series of Finely Illustrated Bible Story Books for Children. Excellent for Gifts and Rewards.
Series One of Bible Hero Stories contains the following six books:

Joseph, David, Moses, Paul, Jesus, Book I, Jesus, Book II
Each book has thirty-two pages, 6 3/4 x 9 3/4 inches in size. Has richly printed, soft-gray color covers, with six full-page illustrations in colors matching the covers.
Price, each, 18 cents; per dozen, $1.80.

Ideals for Earnest Youth

BY A. T. ROWE

A purposeful message for our modern youth with their great opportunities and problems. It is practical rather than theoretical. Actual incidents and experiences of real, outstanding, unusually successful men are given as food for thought.
Avenues of opportunities for success are pointed out, as well as the ever-common boulevards to failure.
Valuable for young people's meetings, societies, and leagues. Emphasizes youth's needs of Christ's guidance, but clearly avoids any doctrinal discussion.
Sixty-one pithy chapters with a punch in each one. Beautifully cloth bound; attractive two-color jacket. Price $1.00.

Forgotten Children

By Julia Flewellyn

Nell, and Squinty, and Brandy, are waifs of the great city of New York. They are the "driftwood of humanity"—thrown out on the street—nobody's children—Forgotten Children.
Nell is a typical "spitfire" of the alley, passionate and outspoken in her barbaric language of the streets. She gives one thrills all the way through by her unexpected outbursts of savagery. Yet, under all the dirt and grime and seeming "good-for-nothingness" of these outcasts are tender chords waiting to be touched by a loving heart, awakened by kindness.
Something new for our young people.
189 Pages. Price $1.00.

A Noble Life

BY MARY C. HASKETT.

This book forcefully and entertainingly brings before the youth many lessons of priceless value. It will help him to develop noble character.
96 pages. Cloth, 50 cents.

The Hero of Hill House

BY MABEL HALE.

Reads like fiction, but is a true story of a Christian Kansas boy. It is thrilling and adventurous. But nothing is objectionable. It sets forth good Christian principles for right living. It will entertain and instruct.
Lodestone cover. 221 pages. $1.00.

Chats With Uncle Jack About Nature

By C. W. Naylor

It exalts God and gives the boys and girls an introduction to his handiwork in the mountains, the streams, the clouds, the birds, insects and beasts all around us. The "Chat" on "Just Mud" will make any boy or girl sit up and take notice. Especially fine for 9-16 years old youth.
Well illustrated. Cloth bound. 128 pages. Price 60 cents.

Aunt Charlotte's Stories of Bible History

We have sold something like twenty thousand of these and they have given universal satisfaction. One hundred and four stories, taking one through the Bible by reading two stories each Sunday. Questions after each story. Over two hundred illustrations.
Neatly bound in cloth. Price $1.00.

The Poorhouse Waif

BY ISABEL C. BYRUM.

A true story of an orphan boy made fatherless by the Civil War. His boyhood life was filled with unusual events. He was mistreated on every hand. How he became a useful Christian man is a story absorbing and worth reading.
224 pages. Cloth, 60 cents.

CHRISTIAN HERO SERIES

Thrilling Tales of Heroism, Adventure, Love, Triumph, and Dangers at Home and in Many Foreign Lands.

These are Life Stories of world-renowned religious leaders, men of purpose, ideals, and vision—mighty testimonies to Christian power! They appeal to young and old alike. Gripping and Educational.

ADONIRAM JUDSON, Apostle of Burma—Percy. How Judson met the curly-headed, black-eyed Ann Hasseltine and won this charming girl who also had a desire for adventure is told early in the story. How they together faced a foreign-mission field, hand in hand, daring by sheer courage and an indomitable faith in God to carry the gospel message into the dangerous land of Burma is also related.
Cloth bound. 128 pages. Price 75c.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE, Missionary-Explorer of Africa—Kleeberger. Livingstone went right into the jungles of Africa where wild animals abounded on every side. Many thrilling encounters did he meet. He taught the simple gospel story to the wild natives and won many to Christ. The natives loved him and the deeds of valor and loyalty shown him make a beautiful story. Cloth. 128 pages. 75c.

JOHN BUNYON—The Immortal Dreamer—McCreary

You know Bunyan wrote the famous book—Pilgrim's Progress, but do you know he was one of the greatest preachers of his day?

The author tells you about the long, tedious twelve years' imprisonment because of his strong religious convictions. Illustrated. 128 pages. 75c.

HENRY MARTYN, Apostle to the Mohammedans—Lopez

Henry Martyn lived a strenuous life. On his tombstone the epitaph is rightly inscribed to him—"A flame of fire. An inspiration to youth. Cloth bound. 129 pages. 75c.

DWIGHT L. MOODY, The Soul-Winner—Rowe.

Young people will be inspired to bigger, better things after reading of this great man. Many are the thrilling and humorous events pictured in the story. His experiences in the great Chicago fire, his travels abroad, several pages of anecdotes that only Moody could produce. Cloth bound. 128 pages. 75c.

JAMES HUDSON TAYLOR, Pioneer Missionary of Inland China—Hunnex

Chinese manners, and customs are charming, and this story of Taylor is one of unusual interest. Cloth bound. 154 pages. 75c.

JOHN G. PATON, Hero of the South Seas—Byrum.

It is difficult to find a good place to stop reading until you turn the last page of this book. A very good account of the life of this famous missionary to the cannibals. Cloth bound. 127 pages. 75c.

CHARLES H. SPURGEON, Prince of Preachers—Adelson.

It has been prophesied that Spurgeon would become a great preacher when he was yet a lad. Before he was twenty years old he had achieved a great popularity. Illustrated. 116 pages. 75c.

MARTIN LUTHER, The Lion-Hearted Reformer—Morrison.

It required a man of iron nerve and courage to do what Luther did. How he fearlessly took his stand against the corruption of the Roman Church and in the face of losing his life, is a most absorbing story. Cloth bound. 125 pages. 75c.

JOHN WESLEY, The Christian Hero—Egermeier.

The life of the great Wesley, preacher and reformer, is well told. He loved God, and dared to do God's bidding. Inspiring and uplifting. Cloth bound. 128 pages. 75c.

Bright colored jackets
Every Home Should Have the Above 10

Linen Baby Prayer Book

This little book is printed on flexible cloth, 6 pages of illustrations and prayers, and it may be washed and ironed. The pictures are in colors. It makes a very attractive little book to give to babies and you can make some mothers and babies happy by sending this.

It costs only 15 cents.

Overcoming Handicaps

These are tales of young men who, though facing hopeless looking situations, laid their plans and put on the battle that brought victory. Their game is worth watching, and you will feel like cheering when the seemingly invincible handicap is licked by sheer determination that would not give in.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Three Times Three

BY PANSY.

Nine well illustrated chapters that are interesting and helpful for young people. This is a triple cord twisted from threefold strands. Three families, three children in each home. Three times three friends have told the tale.

Neatly bound in board. Price 50c.

Blazing New Trails

"Your head is going wrong. Rain only only comes from above; you cannot get showers from below," said the South Sea Island chief when the white man began to dig a well during a terrible water famine. And the natives were astounded when fresh water came sweeping into the rude well. This book will give you the interesting details.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

How John Became a Man

BY ISABEL C. BYRUM.

A real Western story. Tells how a young man grew up among wicked surroundings, became dissatisfied with such a life, gave his heart to God, and later became an effective missionary. A true story.

96 pages. Cloth, 50 cents.

Bits of Biography

BY A. L. BYERS.

Stories concerning the lives of great men and women. These short narratives are events that are particularly interesting to the youth, and written as such. Entertaining and educational.

Cloth bound. 160 pages. 75c.

NEEDY PEOPLE.

You will find all about you some folk in the need of the gospel message, and you will doubtless be surprised how readily they would read a paper addressed to them personally every week from now until February 1. It will cost you only 25c.

SATAN AND CHRIST IN FLANDERS.

"The thief cometh but to kill: I am come to give Life." (John 10:10).

"He took bread and gave to them—and they knew him." (Luke 21:34).

From out of the trenches, a ghastly Inferno,

Came Youth, disillusioned and heart-sick; abhorring

The gruesome instruction from Satan's War-Bible:

"Thrust your bayonet through your enemy's body"—

To a hut where a "Sally" served doughnuts and coffee.

"Come in!" cried the Chaplain, "We'll sing, 'Come to Jesus!'"

Then low murmured one with an agonized conscience,

"Jesus Christ is not here: this is Satan's dominion!"

Prince of Peace, Son of God, He would never forgive us

For shedding the blood of men made in His image,

He could never forgive us."

Then answered the Chaplain,

"Into hell He descended and preached to lost spirits,

Showed His hands and His feet and His side, with the wound-prints;

Prayed, 'Father, forgive them, the soldiers who pierced me'—

Come to Jesus! He's here. He forgives and He's saying,

'Eat, drink and give thanks, in remembrance of me.'"

Let us devoutly celebrate Armistice Day!

Marcus D. Buell.

THE ILLUSTRATED BIBLE STORY BOOK

For a child from 7 to 12 years old. It is handsomely bound, has an attractive jacket, presentation page, is beautifully illustrated in colors, printed on enamel paper in a beautiful dark blue ink, large, regular old folks type. Eighteen Bible stories are interestingly told, beginning with "Noah and the Ark" and ending with "Jesus Before Pilate." A little 10-year-old girl stepped into our office just a few days ago, picked up a copy of this book and was soon lost in it, the stories were so interesting. Give it for Christmas. Price 60c.

PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING CO.,
Louisville, Kentucky.

JESUS SATISFIES.

There's not a craving of the mind
Which Jesus cannot fill;
There's not a pleasure I would seek Aside from His dear will.
From hour to hour He fills my soul
With peace and perfect love;
While rich supplies for ev'ry need
He sendeth from above.

The joys which this vain world bestows

Have lost their charm for me;
Once I enjoyed its trifles too,
But Jesus set me free.

Its joys will perish in a day,
Its pleasure quickly fly;

Its mirth like mist will pass away,
And all its honors die.

He stilled the angry tempest's power,
Which raged within my heart;

And bade each sinful passion there
To speedily depart.

Yes, Jesus is my all in all,
He satisfies my soul,

For me He died on Calvary,
And now He makes me whole.

Yes, Jesus, is my Saviour dear,
My Rock, my strength, my Song,

My Wisdom and my Refuge safe,
To Jesus I belong.

He is my Advocate with God,
My Way, my Life, my Light,

My Great Physician and my Friend,
My Guide by day and night.—Sel.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustrations. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1930 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Heroes of Peace

Imagine having a leg cut off without being "put to sleep," yet that is the way it was always done until a young doctor, horrified by the agony all about him, worked out a way to make surgical operations painless. This book tells his story. And be sure to read about the fellow who made it possible to save folks from horrible death when bitten by mad dogs.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Stories of Grit

His father shot the boy's eyes out—an accident, of course—but after the doctors got through with him he determined that it would make no difference, he would work out his ambition. With heart-breaking difficulty he struggled on until he became a high government official. And you will want to read about that other boy who landed here without money and unable to speak English, yet forced his way up until nationally known and admired.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Gift Books for Everyone

The First Soprano BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The underlying motive of this excellent piece of Christian fiction, into which is woven a fascinating love story, is the consecration of life and talent to God. It peers through the superficiality of mere profession, and the hypocrisy of certain features of Church life and appeals strongly for reality in Christian experience. You will find it one of the most interesting stories you have ever read. Packed in green or red Christmas box. Price, $1.00.

The Beauty of Holiness BY RIDOUT

This book is designed to set forth the fact that there is moral beauty in holiness—attractiveness, winsomeness, sweetness as well as power. Cloth bound, 75c.

The greatest book of all history, next to the Bible, and there are tens of thousands of young people, as well as old, who have not been blest by the reading of this great book. And even those who have read it ought to read it again. It makes one of the most attractive gift books to be had. We offer two beautiful editions. A large type edition with notes and colored illustrations, neatly bound in cloth. Price $1.00.

A very attractive pocket size edition, good clear type, bound in cloth. Price 50c.

The Master's Twelve BY REV. FRED B. WYAND.

A study of "The Twelve" will help you to get a better understanding of the Master himself. This is a new book by a new author and is calculated to give some new light on these twelve men and their Master. If you are not more than delighted with it, you may return it and we will refund your money. Price $1.50.

Doran's Ministers' Manual for 1930

Brings together within the covers of a book of over 600 pages an exhaustive and inexhaustible body of material for the alert minister, comprising suggestive sermon outlines, innumerable illustrations, choir devotions, church night plans, mid-week addresses, and a vast bed of seed thoughts for sermons and addresses. These and a hundred other things—all of them enough to fill five books—are in the Manual for 1930 and the price is but $2.00.

The Nightingale of The Psalms

BY EVANGELIST J. E. AYCOCK.

An Exposition of the 23rd Psalm. A beautiful and touching explanation of this Psalm. By linking it with many other tender and comforting passages in both the Old and New Testaments, the evangelist gives this best beloved Psalm a new richness and depth of meaning in its application to life here and hereafter. More than 40,000 sold. Hundreds of people have ordered it to give away.
Price, 25c, 5 for $1.00.
Christmas envelopes will be sent free on request.

Turn But a Stone

Addresses to Children.
BY ALEXANDER.

The author tried these addresses out in his own congregation before putting them in book form. There are 50 very attractive subjects, with a scripture text to each one, and a wonderfully interesting story to illustrate each text. This book will be of untold value to anyone interested in teaching young people in the home, church or Sunday school. It has had a large sale at $1.60. Our special price, $1.00.

Finney's Autobiography

A Famous Gospel Worker says:

"No Christian can read through these pages without being profoundly stirred. It is a classic upon the practice of prayer. The reading of that book compelled me again and again to turn down the pages and retire to prayer." Price $2.00.

"Wherever Finney was working, as evangelist, or pastor, or teacher, there was a continuous revival. The lectures that make up this volume tell the why and how and power of Finney's life."—S. S. Times
Price $2.00. The set (2 Vols.) $3.00.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life

HANNAH WHITALL SMITH.

A whole generation has felt its power and been stimulated by its wholesome faith. The author has the happy faculty of finding the heart of the truth and interpreting it in a clear, pungent way that makes one see its practical bearing upon life's difficulty. The book will prove a great blessing to any one who will read it. Price, $1.25.

That I May Save Some BY BISHOP WILLIAM FRASER McDOWELL

These five lectures Bishop McDowell declares are not a contribution to theology or to scholarship, but rather "one more effort to get the Church to singing again, singing anew, the song of the angels above the plains: 'A Savior is born.'" There is therefore, a distinct evangelistic purpose running throughout the volume; and there is also a definite challenge to the Church of God, everywhere to do the work of an evangelist and to demonstrate in a convincing way that the gospel of Christ is still the power of God unto salvation.
Binding, cloth. Price, net, $1.00.

Beautifully bound in cloth, stamped in gold. Price, $1.50.

One Christmas

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The opening scene is that of a family, in a snow-laden northern city, gathered around the home fires on Christmas Eve. The artless questions of the younger children provoke serious thought on the part of the father and older brother, who is a college student, and this thought leads to decisions which are far-reaching in their effects. A beautiful book to send to friends. An ideal gift for pastors to send to members of the congregation. Suitable for teachers of intermediate and young people's groups to send to members of the class.
Gift edition, beautifully bound in art cloth, 50c.

God's Minute

A book of 365 daily prayers, sixty seconds long, arranged from January 1 to December 31; a prayer to each page, written expressly for this book by the most eminent preachers and laymen in the English speaking world. At the top of each page is a collection of Scripture on encouragement to prayer.

Cloth. Price, 60c; Postage, 5c.

Fox's Book of Martyrs

A history of the lives, sufferings and triumphant deaths of the early Christian and Protestant martyrs. It tells the story of some of the most thrilling periods in Christian history when "a noble army, men and boys, the matron and the maid," "climbed the steep ascent of heaven, 'mid peril, toil and pain.'" It is thrilling and convicting. 370 large pages. Good clear type, beautifully printed and bound. Price $1.50.

The Bent-Knee Time

BY S. D. GORDON.

Three hundred and sixty-two, (to quote the author) "little bits which are meant to be distinctly secondary to the book itself." Every paragraph makes clear the pathway to God. This little book is appropriate for young and old. Any Christian will appreciate its simplicity. Neatly bound in cloth with a silk marker. Price, 75c.

Dairyman's Daughter

This charming little book has resulted, it is said, in the conversion of thousands. It has a rare beauty of style and withal an uncommon spiritual power.
Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 50c.

PEOPLE ARE HEART HUNGRY.

By The Editor.

WE are hearing much today in the political and social world about conservatism and progression. It is entirely possible that conservatism becomes a sort of idolatry, worshipping of the past, a holding on to a thing simply because it is old. On the other hand, progression may be a catch word of the demagogue, a talisman to arouse the whoop and anger of the mob.

There is a class of people in the world whose conduct has produced character and conditions that breed discontent and longing for change. They do not understand that what they need is a change of heart, a change of nature; they think that it is possible for the legislature of the state, or the congress of the union to enact laws that will make them happy, contented and comfortable. In this they are sadly mistaken. Of course legislation may powerfully affect society for good or evil, but a man's peace and happiness depend upon his proper adjustment to his Creator and his inward state of mind.

We are in danger that conservatism go to sleep, and let opportunities pass by unimproved; at the same time we are in danger that progression goes mad and runs over opportunities. These things are worthy of consideration in the religious as well as in the political world. Preachers are in danger of becoming conservatives, of moving forward backwards, facing in the wrong direction, thinking, talking, preaching and living in the past. Other preachers are in danger of throwing away all that is old as if it were worthless and, like the Athenians, being constantly on the chase for "some new thing," hence the "new thought," the "new theology," the "new nothing."

The conservative will plow and cultivate last year's cornstalks with a sort of hope that he will be able to gather another roasting ear, but with a feeling if he should not, his time is well spent; that the old stalks ought to be respected for their good service in the past. The progressive will lay off his coat and chop down a well and faithful apple tree that has borne good fruit for many years, and is full of promise for the future, simply because it is old. The matter of great importance is, that we shall learn to distinguish between last year's cornstalks and fruit trees in good bearing.

There is no doubt we have some preachers who are too conservative; they are backing into the future; they are too quiet and easy; they fail to arouse the people, awaken the mind, stir the conscience, provoke thought, agitate and move things forward. Such men are an incubus; they hinder the work of the Lord; they encumber the church; they occupy places and consume time that might be used to gracious advantage by men who would do something. We have others who boast that they are progressives; they are constantly seeking to supplant the old doc-

A VOICE FROM THE LONG AGO.

I am not afraid that the people called Methodists should ever cease to exist in Europe or America; but I am afraid lest they should only exist as a dead sect, having the form of religion without the power. And this undoubtedly will be the case, unless they hold fast both the doctrine, spirit, and discipline which they first set out. Methodism is only plain scriptural religion, guarded by a few prudential regulations. The essence of it is holiness of heart and life; the circumstances all point to this. If even the circumstantial parts are despised, the essential will soon be lost. And if ever the essential parts should evaporate, what remains will be dross.—John Wesley.

trines and old methods with something new. The class meeting is given up for social gatherings and entertainments. The prayer meeting is turned into a short lecture to empty pews, and the altar of prayer, with its repentance, tears, agony of soul, confession of sin, and new birth, by the power of the Spirit, is substituted with a human resolution, a mere walk-up-and-give-your-hand to the preacher. This is not progression; it is trifling with the hungry souls of the people; it is handing stones to those who cry for bread.

The old doctrines of Methodism are vital. There is the eternal power of God in them to save a lost world. There are no new truths in the kingdom of heaven; there may be a deeper insight into truth, a broader view and firmer grip upon the things of God and the soul, but the truths proclaimed by Moses and the prophets, Jesus Christ and the Apostles, John Wesley and the founders of Methodism are as unchangeable as the nature of God himself. The people are hungry for the old truths of Methodism and, unless faithfully preached, our Methodist sheep will wander and straggle and starve under the new fallacies and follies. Let us stand faithful and true to the great doctrines that brought us into existence and have made us a mighty people in the world.

We would not for a moment intimate that the people called Methodists have a corner upon any truth of God. We are glad to know that there are shining examples in all churches of great faith in the fulness of the atonement, and the freedom and perfection there is in the salvation of Jesus. At the same time it causes us unutterable grief to see Methodist people turning up their noses at the great old doctrines which form the foundation stones upon which the superstructure of Methodism stands.

"Thy word is everlasting truth;
How pure is every page;
That holy Book shall guide our youth,
And well support our age."

Thy Word is truth, Thy Book is truth,
Truth that abideth, and can never cease,
Calling with winning voice to age and youth,
Calling to peace! —Selected.

Monthly Sermon.

SAVING BY LOSING.

"He saved others; himself he cannot save.
If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross and we will believe."
Matt. 27:42.

The civilization which the life and teaching of Jesus Christ has brought into the world has made many changes entirely unnoticed by the casual observer.

Today when it becomes necessary to take the life of a criminal in order to protect society from the ravages of crime, the quickest and most painless means are used. It was not so before the life of our Lord in the world illuminating the minds of men and introducing into justice a bit of compassionate mercy toward the most dangerous members of society.

Before the coming of Christ the representatives of the law sought the slowest and most painful methods in the execution of criminals. Men delighted in the sufferings of those whom they adjudged unworthy to live. Perhaps there never has been invented so painful a method for the execution of men as that practiced by the Roman Government, namely, the cross.

The victim, perhaps, in strong and robust health was nailed upon a cross. The nails were driven into the hands and feet, those extremities farthest from the vital organs of the body. In this position the cross was set up in some public place, and became the object of the scoff and ridicule of the public and was thus made an object lesson and warning to any one who was disposed to rebel against or interfere with the laws and reign of the Emperor of Rome. Thus unprotected under the beating sun, falling rain, or winter winds the victim hung, bled, suffered the most excruciating pain and often lingered for many hours before relief by death.

Today before execution the vilest criminals are treated with great kindness and courtesy. Their friends are permitted to visit them. The minister of the Gospel, or the priest of the church, comes to offer them repentance and saving faith in the Lord Jesus. They are marched to execution with every kindness, and science has been called upon to produce death as sudden and painless as possible.

We doubt if there was ever more savage hatred in the hearts of men against any victim than that manifested by those high churchmen who, with their false accusations

Gospel Travel Notes From the Equator.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I am beginning this article at Singapore, Straits Settlement, in the Malay Peninsula. This is one of the most intensely interesting parts of the world we have yet visited. Singapore stands as a gateway between Europe and the East. It has been spoken of as the "Crossroads." It is the half-way station around the world. It stands within nine degrees of the Equator. It is about the size of Seattle and has over two million Chinese in it, about ten thousand Europeans, many thousands from India, and of course, the Malays themselves run into other thousands.

At Singapore those multitudes of the yellow and brown races are enjoying the fruits of civilization of the white man. Here are Chinese millionaires and Indian "wells offs," and Malay people with money, automobiles, and property and it all came about through British Colonization and rubber, tin, coconut and pineapples, etc. But if it had not been for the white man, jungles would be where rubber estates are, and the tiger and the crocodile would still be running eating stands.

Let us just put in here something about Australia. This country carries the white man idea too far—they will admit only the white man. Now in this Oriental country it is next to impossible for the white man to do the drudgery, and the Chinese and Malay and Indians do it because they are used to it. They can stand the heat better than the white man, hence Australia has great stretches of country, barren and unfruitful. If they would open their gates to the Chinese coolies they would develop immense resources.

On the streets of Singapore and in the public buildings all races are to be met with—dark-skinned Arabs and Hindoos, and Parsees, the Chinese, the Malay, the Japanese. They come from Bombay and Madras, etc., in India, from Amoy, Canton, etc., in China, from Siam and Bangkok and all parts of the world.

Sir Stamford Raffles, a far-sighted Englishman, founded Singapore when it had a population of 150 people. Five years after the British flag floated over it it grew to a city of ten thousand. Raffles died in England in 1824, a most depressed and unhappy man. For years his grave was neglected and forgotten. If his spirit could come back to Singapore now he would find a city of nearly three million, with one of the greatest harbors of the Orient. It is the sixth largest port in the world, with fifty steamship lines using it. Its temperature is wonderful, and it is the same, practically, all the year round. The glass in the day time keeps in the eighties; at night it is always cool. I was reading, while in Singapore, of New York sizzling with heat at 94, while here it stood at about 80! at night, 70. This is the only country where I have seen Chinese and the Malays bringing their children to school and calling for them in automobiles. One Chinese millionaire I heard of who recently bought a $20,000 Rolls Royce car; he was once a student in the Methodist Mission School; he is now a rubber king in Singapore.

American Missionary work in the Malay Peninsula began in the early days of Bishop Oldham. It will be remembered that he was a Government Surveyor in India in the days of William Taylor. He was truly converted and gave up his profession to become a missionary of the cross. He came to Singapore in 1886. An alumnus of the school he founded tells about Bishop Oldham in the following words:

"It is a pretty story. On the 1st of March, 1886, Rev. W. F. Oldham, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Singapore, opened the Anglo-Chinese School at No. 70 Amoy Street with thirteen (13) pupils. From that day onwards he never let the grass grow under his feet. In the year 1888, he was able to report an average attendance of 250 pupils. Through the liberal and substantial help given by certain Chinese gentlemen, he acquired that beautiful property known as 'Bellevue' and in the year 1891 he was able to announce the opening of a Boarding School where 'the boarders were to sit at the same table with the Principal and the Resident Masters' and 'the English language alone was allowed.' Knowing, as we do, the position which our Alma Mater holds in the sphere of education in Malaya today, we, the old boys, who have so much to be thankful for, cannot possibly fail to appreciate the energy and ability of the man who founded the Anglo-Chinese School.

"He was undoubtedly a born educationalist and the history of our school is indeed a tale of educational enterprise which must command the universal admiration of every one who has the cause of education at heart.

"The name of Dr. Oldham is one which must be perpetuated in this country and it is up to those of us who had the privilege of meeting him on his recent visit to Malaya to see that steps are taken early to establish a fitting and lasting tribute worthy of the illustrious founder of our Alma Mater.

"May the good God spare his life for many more years to come and enable him to watch with gratification the growth of this school."

I think it was at Singapore that Bishop Oldham was led into the deeper life of holiness; he felt the need for himself and for his people and he held a service with that in view and was one of the first to bow at his own altar as a seeker. An epochal event happened in his own personal experience that day, which he has never lost. The holiness people all over the world are always happy to hear Bishop Oldham's messages. The work which he started in Singapore has grown to immense proportions. There are now over 4,000 students in the schools and ten or a dozen congregations of Methodists of various nationalities and an Annual Conference. We have been holding evangelistic services in the Tamil Church, but the congregation has been made up largely of Chinese who understand English, so that we did not have to preach through interpreters. In fact, yesterday (Sunday) was the only day I preached through interpreters. I preached at 11 A. M. to the Amoy Chinese, at 2 P. M. to the Japanese. Wife preached at 11 A. M. also to the Chinese through interpreter. I preached at night in English to a congregation made up greatly of Chinese young people, many of whom are either graduates or students in the Mission schools.

A rather interesting thing about the Japanese who are starting up a work at Singapore. The laymen who is taking a very intense interest in this work is Dr. K. Tsutada, a Dentist. He has a large family and two of his sons, like himself, deeply devoted to God and his kingdom. Rev. W. E. Horley, who is one of the District Superintendents, told me that Dr. Tsutada was one of his boys in his school years ago. Behold the fruitage! This former student is now one of the Doctors of Singapore and is heart and soul in the work of holiness and evangelism among the Japanese. The Doctor speaks English perfectly and interpreted for me as I preached a holiness message from Isaiah 35:8, 9.

As we came out of church one Sunday night we saw ahead of us a great procession lighted up with flaming torches. It was a Hindoo "something" and one could see in that demonstration the East in embryo. Most of the men had nothing but cotton coverings around their loins; of women there were but few because in Hindooism the men seem to do the religious work. In the midst of the procession were several images, but the one that seemed to have the largest place was a large gilded Peacock and he was so heavy that it took 30 or 40 men to carry him. A band was playing a very inharmonious air while the torch-bearers gave light all along the procession. The Standard Oil Company was in evidence in an ox cart and a fellow went around pouring oil on the torches making them blaze up with fury. Now to us, this procession had a lesson. Wife had been preaching to the young people on the baptism of fire; I had been preaching on the great mission of the Church—the salvation of souls. Here was a great mass of heathens being moved by a great emotion and symbolizing something in their religion by the burning of torches. The sad thing about us Christians is the absence of fire and holy emotion. We do not wave the flaming torch of testimony as we should, and religious emotion has been tabooed and too much of our religion sinks down to the professional, the inanimate, the "safe and sane." The heathens have their enthusiasms! The Christians have their forms! We need to have lighted again by some Luther or Wesley or Booth or Inskip the flaming torch of a new religious experience and passion.

Wife and I have put in a strenuous week in the Singapore schools and churches. Over four thousand young people are enrolled in the Methodist schools of Singapore. We spoke in the mornings, afternoons and sometimes, evenings, in the chapel services to different groups. Twice have I spoken to 500 among the Senior classes, then we have spoken to other groups of 300 less or more. At the Tamil Church, Short Street, I preached at night in English to Chinese and Tamil who understood English. From 5 till 6 we held a meeting distinctly for Christians for the promotion of holiness, which was attended by missionaries, pastors, church workers, European, Chinese, Indians, and Japanese. Our evangelistic program was planned by Rev. W. E. Horley, M. E. Dist. Supt., and at first our meetings were held in the chapel of the Coleman Street School, which was a capacious building and quite central, as was supposed, but it did not work and we moved to the Tamil Church, on Short Street, where more people attended and where there was real revival interest. The meetings were largely attended by the Chinese who understood English, and to me it was a great relief as well as a great joy to be able to preach in my own mother tongue.

Again we found the message of full salvation accepted with open heart by the people, and after preaching, when the invitation would be given, there would be many responses. This was most noticeable among the young men. They seem to have a hungry heart and the more searching and close the message the more they seemed to enjoy it. On Sunday night, Sept. 15, as we closed the meeting upwards of forty raised their hands for prayer and then in the after meeting about twenty-five or more came to the altar and confessed their faith in Jesus. A singular event occurred in connection with two young men; they were deeply convicted and went out with the crowd but the Spirit moved them so that they had to come back to the church; they came forward at the close of the altar service and gave themselves to Christ. No one can tell what that may mean to those young men. The Spirit of God moved so deeply in that last meeting that it seemed too bad to have to close the revival but we had to be 250 miles farther up the Peninsula on Monday so as to begin a meeting at Kuala Lumpur, the capital city of the Malay States.

We try to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Some suggested that we go out by the Sunday night train, 8 P. M., but we do not believe in Sunday trains at home or abroad, so we preferred to travel all Monday and go straight from the train to the meeting that evening. It was well that we so decided. Our closing service began at 5:30 and it was nearly nine o'clock before we left the church. If we had taken the Sunday night train we would have had to hurry through the closing meeting and leave the church at 7:30 without any altar service or after meeting, and who knows but what in that after-meeting some one got saved who will meet us on the Resurrection morning to tell us that if it had not been for that after meeting their soul might have been lost.

TESTIMONY OF THE METHODIST FATHERS.

Rev. C. V. Fairbairn.

PART II.

IN Chapter XXII, of Christian Theology, printed as a separate tract, entitled "Entire Sanctification," by Holiness Movement Press, 480 Bank St., Ottawa, Canada, in 1903, Dr. Adam Clarke says: "To be filled with God is a great thing; to be filled with the fulness of God is still greater; to be filled with all the fulness of God is greatest of all."

Third Blessing theologians interpret Clarke as teaching, that "To be filled with God," is first blessing; "To be filled with the fulness of God," is second blessing; "To be filled with all the fulness of God," is third blessing. But on page 21 of the same pamphlet, Dr. Clarke makes himself plain. "By the 'fulness of God,' we are to understand all the gifts and graces which he has promised to bestow on man in order to his full salvation here, and his being fully prepared for the enjoyment of heaven. To be filled with all the fulness of God is to have the heart emptied of, and cleansed from, all sin and defilement, and filled with humility, meekness, gentleness, goodness, justice, holiness, mercy, and truth, and love to God and man."

On Acts 1:4, says the same theologian: "As every pious soul believing in the coming of the Messiah through the medium of the sacrifices offered up under the law, was made a partaker of his death, so every pious soul that believes in Christ crucified is made a partaker of the Holy Spirit. . . . It is by the Spirit that sin is made known, and by it the blood of the covenant is applied; and indeed without this the want of salvation cannot be discovered nor the value of the blood of the covenant duly estimated. How properly do we still pray, and how necessary is the prayer, 'Cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of thy Holy Spirit, that we may perfectly love thee and worthily magnify thy name through Jesus Christ our Lord.' On Acts 1:5: 'John baptized with water, which was a sign of penitence in reference to the remission of sins, but Christ baptizes with the Holy Ghost for the destruction of sin, the illumination of the mind, the consolation of the heart. . . . The Holy Spirit (was given) to illuminate, regenerate, refine, and purify the heart.' Again on Acts 2:38, he says: 'Ye shall receive the Holy Ghost by whose agency alone the efficacy of the blood of the covenant is applied and by whose refining fire the heart is purified.' On Acts 6:5: 'Full of the Holy Ghost, saved into the spirit of the gospel dispensation; and made partakers of the Holy Ghost by which the soul is sanctified and endued with those graces which constitute the mind of Christ.' And on Acts 15:9: 'The purification of the heart by the Holy Spirit was the grand object of the religion of God and . . . the Gentiles had received this without circumcision.'"

On page 25, of the pamphlet mentioned before, "Entire Sanctification," Clarke says: "As there is no end to the merits of Christ incarnated and crucified; no bounds to the mercy and love of God; no let or hindrance to the almighty energy and sanctifying influence of the Holy Spirit; . . . we may ask and receive, and our joy shall be full." On page 30, same pamphlet, published 1903 by the Holiness Movement: "Be so purified and refined in your souls by the indwelling Spirit, that even the light of God shining into your heart shall not be able to discover a fault that the love of God has not purged away." "Ye shall be perfect, as your Father who is in heaven is perfect" (Matt. 5:48). But what does this imply? Why, to be saved from all the power, the guilt, and the contamination of sin. This is only the negative part of salvation, but it has also a positive part; to be made perfect—to be perfect as our Father who is in heaven is perfect, to be filled with the fulness of God, to have Christ continually dwelling in the heart by faith, and to be rooted and grounded in love, . . . What a glorious privilege! And who can doubt the possibility of its attainment who believes in the omnipotence of God, the infinite merit of the blood of atonement, and the all-pervading and all-purifying energy of the Holy Ghost?"—page 31, ib.

And now for a strong quotation. "What a change! and what a blessing! What then is this complete sanctification? It is washing the soul of a true believer from the remains of sin; it is the making one, who is already a child of God, more holy, that he may be more happy, more useful in the world, and bring more glory to his heavenly Father. Great as this work is, how little, humanly speaking, is it when compared with what God has already done for thee! But suppose it were ten thousand times greater, is anything too hard for God? Are not all things possible to him that believes? And does not the blood of Christ cleanse from all unrighteousness? Arise, then, and be baptized with a greater effusion of the Holy Ghost, and wash away thy sin, calling on the name of the Lord."—page 48, ib.

On Acts 2:4, Benson, in his Commentary, says: "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost—That is, all the one hundred and twenty, as appears from verse 1. At the time of this wonderful appearance, this whole company were abundantly replenished with both the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, not only in order to their own salvation, but also and especially to qualify them to be Christ's witnesses to mankind, both Jews and Gentiles, according to his promise, Ch. 1:8. They were filled with the graces of the Spirit, and were more than ever under its sanctifying influences; were now holy, and heavenly, and spiritual; more weaned from this world, and better acquainted with the other. They were more filled with the comforts of the Spirit, rejoiced more than ever in the love of Christ, and the hope of heaven, and in it all their griefs and fears were swallowed up."

William Carvosso, the Cornishman, Wesleyan class leader for fifty years, testified: "Just at that moment a heavenly influence filled the room; and no sooner had I uttered or spoken the words from my heart, 'I shall have this blessing now,' than 'refining fire' went through my heart, illuminating my soul, scattered its life through every part, and sanctified the whole.' I then received the full witness of the Spirit that the blood of Jesus had cleansed me from all sin. I cried out, 'This is what I wanted. I have now got a new heart.' I was emptied of self and sin and filled with God."

In relating his experience, Benjamin Abbot said: "I found it was the will of God even our sanctification. I soon hungered and thirsted for full salvation." At family prayers the Spirit of God so came upon him that he thought he would die; the place was glorious because of the presence of the Spirit of God. The cry of his heart was, "Come, Lord, and sanctify me, soul and body!" That moment the Spirit of God came upon him in such a manner, that he fell flat to the floor, and lay as one strangling in blood, while his wife and children stood weeping around him. He said, "I had no power left to lift hand or foot, nor yet to speak one word; I believe I lay half an hour, and felt the power of God running through every part of my soul and body, like fire consuming the inward corruption of my fallen depraved nature."—An Exchange in Holiness Era, May 25, 1927, from Herald of Holiness.

Some fine paragraphs are to be found in Village Sermons, by Rev. George Burder, a blind Methodist preacher, 1752-1832. "We do not plead for infallibility, or knowledge of future events, or ability to know anything not revealed in the Bible. It is for the sanctifying influences of the Spirit we plead. The apostles and the first Christians received from the Spirit not only miraculous powers, just mentioned, but also light in their understandings, conviction of sin in their consciences, and faith and love in their hearts to Christ' They 'purified their souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit.' The Spirit was the earnest of their heavenly inheritance; and all their holy tempers, affections, and actions, are called the fruit of the Spirit. Corrupt nature is just the same now as it was then, and needs the same power to change it." "The Spirit of Christ is called the 'Spirit of holiness;' for he is the author of that holiness without which no man shall see the Lord. Believers are chosen to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." "The tongues were of fire. Thus the prophecy was fulfilled, 'He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and fire.' O, Celestial Flame, come and sit upon us also; enlighten our darkness, purify our affections, consume our corruptions, and fill us with Thyself."

Rev. Amos Binney, in his Theological Compend, on page 128, in speaking of the terms used to express Holiness or Sanctification, among others, uses the term, "The Baptism of the Holy Ghost." This is a testimony indeed to what Methodist Theology teaches.

Rev. W. B. Pope, in Christian Theology, Vol. III, on Entire Sanctification or Perfect Love, says: "The Spirit is imparted in his fulness for the entire consecration of the soul to the Triune God, the love of God, having its perfect work in us, is the instrument of our deliverance from indwelling sin."—page 50. Again on page 52, he says: "The Spirit of God, as the Spirit of perfect consecration, is poured out upon the Christian Church." Once more, on page 53, "There is no limitation of the Spirit's office in the reproduction of the Christly character in us. It was the lesson of that day, the Spirit's elect symbol was fire. First, he appeared as the Shekinah glory, without a veil, diffused over the whole church, and then resting upon each. The light which touched every forehead for acceptance entered as fire each heart, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost: filled literally for the time being; and, if we suppose that indwelling permanent, we have our doctrine substantiated. That in this there may be continuance, we are taught by St. Paul, 'Be filled with the Spirit.' Last-

SEVEN FLOODS OF HOLY SCRIPTURES.

Rev. J. T. Larsen.

HE average reader would commonly believe that there is only one flood recorded in the Holy Scriptures, namely, that which is found in Genesis 6-9. This may be the only first world-flood of water which destroyed all except eight souls, but not the only flood in the Bible.

I. The Flood of Satanic and human sin.

Sin began when Satan rebelled against God in heaven and there was a warfare between God and his angels and Satan and his angels.

Satan lost his dominion, which some have thought was over the original creation on the earth. (Jer. 4:20-22, Isa. 13, Gen. 1:1-3). Satan hated God's new arrangement of Adam as the head of a new race. Satan sought to corrupt the first pair of this new race. After Adam and Eve were placed in the garden of Eden, they were given commands as to maintenance of the garden, the trees which they could touch and those trees, "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil," whose fruit they could not take. (Gen. 2:17). But the violation of this command came very soon when Satan tempted Eve and she fell through pride and desire while Adam fell deliberately. They were transgressors and sinners both by action and by nature after that time. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God," is God's verdict. Consider the millions of sins committed by all the race since that time, proving that mankind is depraved in nature and character. "The wages of sin is death." "Be sure your sin will find you out." "The soul that sinneth it shall die." These are the words of God concerning sin, whose issues have flowed like a flood down through the centuries. It still flows onward regardless of laws of God and man, and any civil restrictions to prevent its flow.

II. The Flood of Water in Noah's Time.

This was the second flood and a direct judgment upon the first flood of sin, which was then corrupting the whole human race, Noah and his family excepted. Noah was warned of God to prepare an ark. He obeyed God because he believed God's Word. After one hundred and twenty years the ark was finished. "Come thou and all thy house into the ark; for thee have I seen righteous before me in this generation." (Gen. 7:1). The animals and fowls of every kind came into the ark. When all were safely within the ark, God closed the door of the ark. Then it rained for forty days and nights. God made doubly sure to punish every sinner with death because of man's awful sin. The waters descended about twenty-two and one-half feet above the highest hills, and the mountains were covered. Noah and family were saved and safe. The ark floated about for five months, for "the waters prevailed upon the earth one hundred and fifty days." (Gen. 7:24). But it was a total of one year and eleven days before Noah and the animals could go forth out of the ark on dry ground. (Gen. 7:11, 8-14).

Thus ended the awful flood of water, and God placed his rainbow in the sky that there would never again be a flood over all the earth to destroy the human race by water. This was God's covenant with Noah and the succeeding generations. Noah walked with God and found grace in the eyes of the Lord. He did not live and walk like other human beings. In a sense it was an unspeakable mercy of God not to allow the other corrupted millions to live, for they would have corrupted all other succeeding generations. The ark was a type of Christ in whom there is safety and salvation. In the world there is no safety for the curse of God is upon the earth, the law-breakers, and the unredeemed. Are you safe in Christ or are you still without him? If you are without Christ you are still unsafe. You are saved by being in Christ, even as Noah was within the ark. Will you believe God's promises and obey him by entering into right relationships through Christ? Will you let Christ stem the flood of evil to which your heart is heir, even like the rest? Noah accepted God's only remedy for escape. Will you accept Christ, God's remedy for sin?

III. The Flood of God's love for all mankind. God has always been a God of love, although he has been obliged to punish sin because he is just and righteous. His love extended to all mankind, ever since man was created. In the Old Testament God showed his love for Adam and Eve by making coats of skin for them; and by caring for them and all their descendants in a physical sense. He showed his love for Noah and his family. If others had believed God's command and promises to Noah, they would likewise have repented and found forgiveness with Noah in the ark of safety; but they refused the offer of free grace unto salvation and were eternally lost!

Still God loved Noah and his descendants. Due to the people's sinful folly in the building of the tower of Babel, God must confound their language and scatter them over the earth. Still he loved them! He chose Abraham to become a father and leader of a new nation which was later called Israel. Throughout all their history of nearly four thousand years, God loved Israel even when they backslid and sinned.

When God allowed their enemies to come upon them, it was only to chasten them and lead them back to himself through repentance and confession of sin. When God caused them to go into captivity for seventy years, he loved them still and later brought them out of it. When they were under the Roman rule before and during Christ's first coming to earth, God loved them, and, "So loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Herein we see the great flood of God's love which flows from eternity past through all eternity! Even when Israel had sinned in Old Testament times, God had promised them the Redeemer—the Christ—who was to be their King and Messiah.

The Jews hated Christ without a cause, crucified him with the assistance of other Gentiles. Truly Israel suffered for this sin of rejecting of Christ. In A. D. 70 the Roman General, Titus, took Jerusalem and over one million Jews were put to death. But God loved them still! He sent the Holy Spirit at Pentecost to convince them and the Gentile nations of sin, and to offer them free salvation through the blood of the crucified One, who was risen and ascended, even the Lord Jesus Christ.

For nearly nineteen centuries God has sought in love and mercy to lead men back to himself—"For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." (Luke 19:10). For all these long centuries God's love has been taught, preached, proclaimed, and sung in almost every nation and tribe. The Word of God reveals the true and living God. It reveals the only true and living Saviour. It reveals the only true way to prepare for heaven. It gives the only remedy for sin—the blood of Christ. It shows the danger of sinning against the knowledge of God's love and commandments. Yet men have rejected God, Christ, the Spirit, with the combined exercise of mercy of the Blessed Trinity! In the Old Testament times Israel rejected God as Father and Creator, nationally. The heathen knew not God except in an expression of Jewish testimony toward them at times. The Jews rejected Christ in the New Testament, because of his sinless life, his high standard, and their unbelief.

They also rejected the Spirit's witness at Pentecost, grieved him, and even blasphemed him! The Christ came to reveal God visibly. They said: "This is the heir, let us kill him!" The Spirit came to reveal Christ to men's hearts, in all love and tenderness, exceeding that of a mother's love. He brings men to conviction, confession, and repentance for sin. But if he is rejected, how can anyone be convicted? That is one reason why Jesus termed ascription of the works of God to Satan to be blasphemy against the Spirit. (Matt. 12:31, 32).

IV. The Flood of Jesus' Blood for man's sin. God sent Christ as a love-gift to the world. He was God's Christmas gift to the world. "There was no room for Christ in the inn," yet he grew to perfect manhood, physically, mentally and spiritually. He was God and man in one person, yet separate and distinct in two natures. He came to reconcile man to God by his death on the cross. He came to justify God in freely justifying guilty sinners (Rom. 3:24-26). He came to vindicate God's righteousness and suffer for man's sin, and a broken law. In order to be able to do this judicially and actually, Christ was virgin-born and conceived of the Holy Spirit. He was a perfect, sinless, and powerful Savior,—deity and humanity combined in one Person. He must come in human flesh and die to put to death sin, and be victor over death for us.

After his marvelous and miraculous ministry of healing the sick, ministering to the needy, forgiving sins, raising the dead, casting out devils, and preaching the Gospel to the poor, and arranging for the founding of the Church, Christ was betrayed, unjustly tried and condemned; ignominiously crucified and buried. There flowed from his hands, feet, brow, and side, blood and water; for he died of a broken heart it is said, according to the science of natural laws, in comparison with the Scriptures. This flood of blood means cleansing, healing, forgiveness, pardon, and salvation unto the uttermost.

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
And sinners plunged beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains."

"The dying thief rejoiced to see,
That Fountain in his day;
And there may I, though vile as he,
Wash all my sins away."

"Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." From this flood of shed blood of Christ flowed two succeeding floods which will be mentioned:

V. The Flood of God's Grace through Christ. Man has never, and will never be saved by any personal and meritorious works. "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast (Eph. 2:8, 9)." "The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men. But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost; which he shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour; that being justified by his Grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life" (Titus 3:4-7). Here we observe the grace of God in Christ because of the love and kindness of God. Here we may see the regenerating process of the Spirit, enabling us to have a changed heart and life. Here we have salvation by the operation of the whole Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. There is grace for salvation, grace for victory, and grace for singing, service, and joyfulness.

There is also grace for the rightful performance of service for God without and within the Church. There is grace to enable us to be kept in spite of any human infirmity unto eternal life. There is also grace for suffering and patience in times of testing and trials. If you lack grace it is because you have not drawn nigh, nor attempted to receive power for Christlikeness and entered into his victory. There needs to be an abiding faith in his benevolence in answer to our love, our faith, our prayers, and our living in close communion with him. The fault of any lack may be yours, not God's.

The flood of God's grace has never ceased to flow from all eternity, since Christ's death upon the Cross, and will finally blend and end in the eternal glory for his saints. "My grace is sufficient for thee; for my strength is made perfect in weakness."

VI. The Flood of Salvation. This flood is the natural outcome of the flood of God's grace and Christ's blood. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his Grace." (Eph. 1:7). This flood has never ceased to flow for the chief of sinners since the pouring out of Christ's blood, and since the shedding forth of the Spirit of God at Pentecost. What a marvelous day it was for all the world, especially the Church! Although so long ago, his Spirit and life has never been exhausted. We may now have salvation from the penalty of sin, the power of sin, and the pollution of sin. "For by grace are ye saved through faith." "So great salvation!" (Heb. 2:4). This means salvation free, full, final, and forever, from sin and its consequence, and an entrance into the provided Home above. Death, penance, human atonements, or morality cannot be a Saviour from sin. Christ died, arose, ascended on high that he might shed forth the grace of God for the sinner and fill him with the Holy Spirit. "I have been saved, am being saved, and shall be eternally saved." It all depends upon God's Son, not any man. It is accomplished in the heart through the Spirit, by faith in his Word, and a willingness to let the flood of salvation come in! He ever lives at the right hand of God to make intercession for us and for the saints of God.

VII. The Flood of Hell-fire. There is necessity of punishment for sin. Throughout the Bible hell-fire is referred to as "Sheol," "Hades," or "the lake of fire." The latter may be termed the literal hell mentioned in Rev. 19:20, 20:10. Christ warned of everlasting punishment, Mark 9, Matt. 25:41-46. Christ died to save us from the results of sin, which is a flood of hell-fire. If we reject God, Christ, the Spirit, the grace, the blood, the salvation, and refuse to forsake sin, we may expect nothing less than "everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." This is a solemn warning. Hell will exist as long as sin exists. Hell is the wages of sin—a living death! The beast and the false-prophet had been in the lake of fire 1000 years and were not then destroyed! (Rev. 19:20, 20:10).

"God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Pet. 3:9). It should be very hard for anyone to go to hell over mother's prayers and tears, over an open Bible, over sound sermons, over much literature spread abroad, over the entreaties of pastors and teachers, and over the dying Son of God on the cross! How can you do it? God must have a place for sinful, lawless, and wilful persons in the life to come. Why reject Christ and go to that place?

Christ said there was such a place. God has established it by decree, and millions will unfortunately go there to verify the fact. But none need go there unless they neglect so great a salvation, and reject so great a sacrifice of blood for their sins.

Which flood do you choose, the flood of sin, of love, of grace, of blood of Christ, of salvation, or the flood of hell-fire? Just as surely as the flood came in Noah's time, so in spite of scoffers, judgment will come and those outside of Christ will be forever lost and will "depart into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." Choose this day which one you will serve: Satan or Christ, sin or righteousness, and whether you will finally enter Heaven or hell! It depends upon your choice and willingness to seek his offered salvation and be saved by grace and blood today!

A Fine Opening at Taylor University.

At the time of the opening of our holiness schools I was confined to my bed and did not know much of what was going on, but I am glad to note that Taylor University has not only a great faculty, but one of the largest student bodies in its history, and work is going forward on a very spacious auditorium, which will take good care of the crowds that gather at Commencement and other occasions. This will be a very great addition to that growing institution. May the blessing of God rest graciously upon the president, and upon all the work wrought in Taylor and by its graduates who go out to the ends of the earth.

That Thanksgiving Offer.

I beg your pardon for coming at you again with a reminder of that Thanksgiving Offering I am asking you for, for the Theological Seminary at Asbury College. I certainly would not continue to urge this matter if it were not so important. We need it so much, and it will be such a help to dear young men who have been saved and sanctified in our camp meetings, in our tent meetings, and the highways and hedges where the holiness people have borne witness, wept, prayed and rejoiced, and rescued many a big, brawny fellow from sin to Christ, have led him on into the Canaan of perfect love and whom God has called to preach. He needs the training that he can receive from our Theological Faculty, every one of them well trained and wholly sanctified, and deeply devoted to this work.

A few days ago, a splendid young man, a graduate of one of the first colleges in all the South, had started to one of the large theological seminaries, thoroughly tainted with modernism, decided to come by Asbury and look over the situation. He was not only delighted, but powerfully impressed, and said, "This is the place for me." He enrolled at once, and I have no doubt will go out, by and by, with a great message of full salvation.

I am waiting and praying to see what you will do. Help us, beloved, it is the work of the Lord.

H. C. MORRISON.

P. S. I want ten thousand devout and holy women who read this paper, to join me in prayer to stir up the people to make a very generous offering at Thanksgiving, for the support of our Theological Seminary at Asbury College.

A Time of Great Grace and Power.

I had hoped to gather strength to attend the meeting of the Pilgrim Holiness Church at Kingswood College. I longed to meet, and hear once more, the gospel message from my dear old friend, Seth C. Rees. When the time came I was quite unable to go. I read with interest of the wonderful meeting of this body at Kingswood, Ky. I rejoice that in these times of great spiritual dearth God has people who are preaching full redemption from sin through the sufferings, death, resurrection and intercessions of our blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

It appears from reports that the Holy Spirit was there amidst of the people in gracious power, regenerating, and sanctifying souls, for which we give praise. I have not been able to visit Kingswood since the days of Brother Hughes, but that school is evidently growing and the place has become a center of great spiritual blessing. May the Lord continue to bless that school and send out from there men and women fully saved, Spirit-filled, to preach and witness to the power of Christ to save to the uttermost.

Why You Should Give Books for Christmas.

The world is full of cheap, trashy books, and children and young people readily get a taste for them. Unless better ones are provided, how are they to know that the others are not so good? It was Channing who said "Books are the true levellers. They give to all who will faithfully use them, the society, the spiritual presence of the best and greatest of our race."

Besides the great money waste, toys are given today and gone tomorrow; a lot of candy and its like unfit the physical man; in numbers of instances money is spent for other luxuries which boys and girls do not need and which are not best for them in the building up of character.

The problem of this speedy age is to keep the home life contented, and we know of no better way than to invest in books which interest both parent and child. In this way many happy evenings are spent reading around the family fireside. We have in mind at this time one mother who reared a family of four boys, who said she had never had an anxious moment about those boys, that she always knew where they were, and that she attributed their loyalty to and love for home to the fact that from babyhood they had been supplied with good, wholesome reading matter.

Books enlighten, they interest and entertain; they build character. It is the easiest thing in the world to discern between two persons as to which one reads, and reads the right kind of literature, and which one does not. The one who reads is, almost without an exception, bright, intelligent, cultured, and an inspiration. The one who does not read is stupid, unable to talk on any subject worth while.

Make your Christmas gifts count for the upbuilding of character and give books this Christmas.

But you ask, where may I secure the right kind of books? We suggest the following, which we have looked into and know to be interesting, helpful and appropriate:

"The First Soprano," price $1.00, for any one from 12 to 50 years of age.

"Boys Who Made Good," price $1.00, for boys from 12 to 20.

There are four other books in this series equally as good:

"Overcoming Handicaps," $1.00.

"Stories of Grit," $1.00.

"Blazing New Trails," $1.00.

"Heroes of Peace," $1.00.

"Ideals for Earnest Youth," $1.00, for boys or girls from 12 to 20.

"Beautiful Girlhood," $1.00, for girls from 14 to 21.

"John Wesley the Christian Hero," 75c, for boys or girls from 10 to 20.

"Dwight L. Moody the Soul-Winner," 75c, for boys or girls from 10 to 20.

"Grandmother's Lily," "Arabella's Hen," "Harry the Newsboy," 35c each, for children from 6 to 12.

"Tiny Tots in Story Town," "Our Darling's A B C," 35c each, for children from 2 to 6.

Hurlbut's Story of the Bible, $2.00.

Egermeier's Bible Story, $2.00.

Aunt Charlotte's Story of the Bible, $1.00.

The above 3 books are suitable for reading in the home. The Pentecostal Publishing Company can furnish any of the above mentioned books.

ly, as a tongue, the symbol signified the sanctification of the outward life of devotion to God and service to man. Hence there is no limit to the Spirit's consecrating grace. 'I sanctify myself that they also might be sanctified.'

On page 201, "Steele's Answers," we find the question: "What right have we to teach that Spirit-baptism is for purity? Where in the gospel did Jesus declare this?" In his reply, Dr. Daniel Steele, that eminent Methodist, holiness theologian, son-in-law to Rev. Amos Binney and reviser of Theological Compend, says: "I wish everybody who desires to have his New Testament illuminated with an arch light would study Bernard's Progress of Doctrine, in which it is shown that the great practical, experimental truths are left in the gospel as tiny seeds to be fully developed after Christ's ascension, such as the atonement, justification and sanctification, and the purifying work of the Holy Spirit. He said very little about the gift of the Holy Spirit as a Person till the day before his death when he confined his remarks to the positive works of the Spirit, witnessing, teaching, illumining, strengthening, gladdening and giving to the believer a manifestation of his bodily absent Master. He omitted the negative and smallest part of his work in the heart, the subtraction of depravity. Sanctification is to the fruits of the Spirit what house-cleaning is to the house-furnishing. It is requisite to comfort and health, but is by no means ornamental. Moreover, before Pentecost the best of the apostles were not prepared to receive this negative office of the Spirit. They were so saturated with ceremonialism that they deemed themselves holy, if they observed the Levitical code. The Spirit himself must create in their minds the idea of inward holiness as necessary to Christian discipleship. Before such preparation the prediction of the purifying work of the Spirit would have puzzled and perplexed the disciples. May not this have been one of 'the many things' Jesus did not tell them because they were not able to bear them, but which the Paraclete would unfold to them? This he did chiefly through St. Paul. See Rom. 6:6, 18:22, 1 Cor. 1:30, 2 Cor. 7:1, Gal. 2:20, Am. R. V., 5:24, Eph. 4:22-24, Col. 3:9, 1 Thess. 5:23, 3:11."

Says Dr. W. B. Godbey, on Acts 11:44-48: "In the midst of Peter's sermon, his appreciative audience, responsive to the Holy Ghost, received by faith the simple, wonderful truth. Therefore the glorified Saviour, who honored the faith of the one hundred and twenty at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost, now graciously verifies the sanctifying faith of this audience, pouring out on them, as on the Jews, the gift of the Holy Ghost, i. e., the Holy Ghost himself, whom Jesus gives when he sanctifies us."

"The purging away of the carnal nature of a regenerated believer is wrought through the merits of Jesus' blood by a mighty distinct, and gracious baptism with the Holy Ghost. He is a mighty purger. His baptism is likened to fire; fire is a great purger, illuminator, and heat producer. The figure of fire is used in connection with the promise of the baptism with the Holy Ghost. St. Peter commenting on the blessing received at Pentecost, bears witness that the one hundred and twenty were purified. It seems childish and puerile that man should try to make it appear that the baptism with the Holy Ghost is not for cleansing, but simply for empowering. Purity is power. God wants purity. Sin is the work of the devil. Jesus came to destroy his work. His blood cleanseth from all sin, and the Holy Ghost in this gracious baptism, through the merits of Jesus' blood, cleanses the believer's heart and sets up the kingdom of God in the heart. The baptism with the Spirit in his fiery, purging power is the crucifixion and casting out of that carnal nature which is enmity against God; the purifying of the heart and the setting up of the kingdom of God within the soul."—Editorial, "What is Bible Holiness?" Dr. H. C. Morrison.

"At the first Pentecost, the law of God was given, engraven on tables of stone. At the memorable Jerusalem Pentecost, by the baptism with the Holy Ghost, that law, which was originally engraven on tables of stone, was written on the minds and hearts of the disciples. To have God's law written on the heart is to attain to God's ideal of holy character. The baptism with the Holy Ghost is God's method of writing that law on our hearts, thereby conforming us to the image and character of his Son. This is sanctification, holiness, perfection of Christian character. This is the great distinguishing promise concerning the Holy Ghost dispensation. Jer. 31:31-34."—The Holy Spirit, A Study, pages 76, 77, by Bishop W. T. Hogue.

From these multiplied quotations from Methodist Fathers, both of the past, the recent yesterdays, and the present, we see that Methodist theology has ever taught and Methodist experience has ever been Pentecostal Sanctification.

God's Commands and Promises.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

God has given us many "exceeding great and precious promises." By them we may "be partakers of the divine nature." He has also given us many commands, and the realization of the promises is conditioned on obedience to the commands. This is a truth that is sometimes overlooked.

This is especially true in dealing with penitent sinners. Well meaning and sympathetic workers are prone to quote God's promises, assuring the seeker of God's love, mercy and grace, and urge him to believe the promises. "Step out on the promise" is a favorite saying, and it is the right thing, when the seeker has reached that point.

Many times, seekers need to be shown God's commands, rather than his promises. God will surely do his part, when the conditions are met. The penitent must become wholly obedient to God in heart before he can, by faith, claim the promises. Dealing with seeking souls is a most delicate and critical thing. Often it becomes necessary to probe into the heart for hidden idols, in order to really help the seeking soul. There may be a secret disobedience, scarcely discerned by the person himself, and he must be shown. Hold up before him the mirror of God's Word, including his commands, and the Spirit will show him the hidden thing.

A man had been seeking God's pardoning grace for some days, and was in great darkness and distress. He went to the pastor's home for counsel and prayer. They knelt together, and the man tried to pray, but with poor success. The faithful pastor asked him about that wheel of fortune, with which he had been making a dishonest living. After some hesitation, he vowed to destroy it. He did more. He carried the wreck two miles to the church, and there publicly burned it in one of the big heating stoves. The pastor was too wise to "promise" him anything until he obeyed God.

At Ephesus, "many that believed" had kept back their books on sorcery, and were practicing that. The incident of the seven sons of Sceva alarmed them. They saw then that there could be no compromise with God, and they "came and confessed and showed their deeds"—they had been doing wrong. They also burned their books.

Don't try to make it easy for seekers. Let them know God's requirements, and obey them. Give them the commands as well as the promises, and let them know that obedience precedes faith. When they square up with the commands, there will be little difficulty about believing the promises. Better to do a little work thoroughly, than much shoddy work. Remember, there is a fire-test coming, to try every man's building, "of

Help Some Boy to Find Christ

This Christmas. Just at this time we have gotten hold of one of the most attractive Testaments, just the thing for a boy to carry in his pocket. There is a place for the name and address; three pages devoted to telling one How to Become a Christian; then two songs, one "Carry Your Bible," and another, "Jesus is a Friend of Mine." The music is written with the songs.

There are a number of attractive colored illustrations, and for a small Testament, the type excels any we have seen for clearness, which makes it easy to read. The chapter numbers are in figures, and the binding is a beautiful dark green imitation leather.

This is just the Testament for a Christmas gift; it is so attractively gotten up that a boy just cannot resist reading it. The price is only 50c.

Heaven's Way.

Supposing, then, that God should smite you with afflictions without, and with temptations within, and should leave the soul, so far as consolations are concerned, in a state of entire aridity? Do, then, I would say, what God requires you to do, and suffer what he requires you to suffer; but in everything be resigned and patient. With humility of spirit, with a sense of your own nothingness, with the reiterated breathings of all ardent but peaceful affection, and with inward submission and quietness, you must wait the return of the Beloved.

In this way you will demonstrate that it is God himself alone and his good pleasure which you seek, and not the selfish delights of your own sensations. Leave what is past in oblivion; leave what is to come to the decisions of Providence; and devote to God the present moment—a moment which necessarily brings with it God's eternal order of things, and in everything excepting sin is a declaration of his will. By casting ourselves into the simple presence of God, in the exercise of faith, we shall find instant supplies of strength for our support. This was the succor sought for by David. "I have set," saith he, "the Lord always before me; because he is at my right hand I shall not be moved. Therefore my heart is glad, and my glory rejoiceth; my flesh shall also rest in hope." And it is said in Exodus, "The Lord shall fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace."—Madame Guyon.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

SITAPUR, INDIA.

I should like to keep the friends of the Hardoi-Sitapur district in close touch with the work, in general, and from time to time will give each one a more intimate glance at the particular worker who has been made possible by the support sent.

Since taking over this district I have found it impossible to send many personal letters, and this is the first general letter since Dr. and Mrs. Titus left the district to take charge of the Badaun district. It was very unfortunate that soon after my transfer, word came that Mrs. Hollister, whose husband had been appointed to succeed me in the Kumaon district, was ill with pneumonia. Instead of being able to really take over my new work, I am still in charge of my hill work, and as this is the hot season on the plains, I have given most of my time to Kumaon. From September I hope that I can give undivided time to my new work. Sitapur district is one of our oldest districts and has been neglected. For many years, it was a part of the Lucknow district, and the city of Lucknow so often claimed the major attention of the Superintendent. Since becoming a separate district, there have been many changes of Superintendents. And now, with our forces depleted, it has been asked to share the time of a Superintendent with Hardoi. Also within the bounds of the district is the civil district of Kheri, with more than a million people.

In May, I visited all of the principal centers of the work, and met most of the workers. In Sitapur and Hardoi, I held quarterly conferences. I found that in the short time that the Tituses were in the district they had given great impetus to the work. Like most of our older fields, much needs to be done for the Christian communities, which have often lapsed into old customs. Many of our Christians are from the lowest castes and do not have the background needed. Surrounded by heathen influences, largely unsheltered, deprived of the privileges of schools because of poverty, one marvels at the progress that has been made by some of these people of the depressed classes. We have 31 paid workers and 9 retired workers in the 11 circuits. Two men give their whole time to the sale of Scriptures, and one worker spends his time among the educated classes who come to an Institute in Sitapur, kept up through the kindness of Dr. Stanley Jones. From July, a University graduate enters our evangelistic work. Most graduates have in the past entered schools or Government offices, but this young man, a son of one of our preachers, wishes to give his life to the evangelistic work. One of the greatest assets of this district is that Sitapur has been the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. Stanley Jones for twenty years, and their devotion to this district, of which he was once the Superintendent, and to the Boys' School for which Mrs. Jones has given years of her life, have been the great influence that has kept alive the Christian work there during years of changing personnel.

I enclose the last report of my work in Kumaon partly because the time spent there these last few months had been intended for Hardoi-Sitapur, and more particularly because I am sure that you are interested in all fields of labor which our Church has entered, and which is for the advancement of His kingdom. It is my prayer that this letter may be the beginning of an acquaintanceship which shall ripen into a partnership in which we shall share the joys and disappointments of service for him in one of the most needy fields of the North India Conference.

Yours sincerely,
E. M. Moffatt.

BELFORD, NEW JERSEY.

"Surely goodness and mercy has followed me all the days of my life."

We left Jacksonville, Fla., May 6. Kingswood, Ky., Holiness School was the first stop. We had a splendid time with those students. What a noble set of young men and women, out and out for God. Went to Seymore, Ind., where I found Charley Walter, the sanctified engineer, running the fast train from St. Louis to Cincinnati for twenty years, shouting all along to line. I found him in an unconscious condition, but while he waited for the chariot, he would throw up his hands, and with a loud voice would say, "Sin has no more dominion over me." Hallelujah! He passed over victoriously.

I stopped over in Indiana, my old battleground for twenty-six years; absent for nineteen years, thought I was entirely forgotten, but to my happy surprise they came for thirty to fifty miles. Oh, what a time of refreshing it was!

I hastened on to Texas for five weeks; had a great time. Then to Charlestown, Ill., camp; here I found Bro. C. Shearer, P. E. He was a dry Quaker twenty-eight years ago, but got saved and sanctified, and God surely is blessing his labors.

I came to White Haven, Pa., for four weeks. From there I came to Belford, N. J., a water front of New York Bay, the city being in sight. It is the dumping ground of the city in the summer season. I opened up a campaign and forty came to the altar the first call. It surely was a Pentecost. Lutherans, Methodists, Jews and Catholic came to God. Hallelujah!

This ends my summer campaign for 1929. I expect to be home, Green Cove Springs, Fla., for Christmas, D. V. Oh, the need for an old-fashioned revival over this land of ours! Modernism, cold theology and a sinning religion have damned the world. God hasten the day when we can hear the old song ring out its call: "Oh, mourners in Zion, how blessed are thou." I say "Back to your tents, oh Israel," and on your knees. Amen.

A. D. Buck.

PENSACOLA, FLORIDA.

Rev. R. J. Hasken, of Pensacola, Fla., one of the General Evangelists of the Alabama Conference of the M. E. Church, South, recently closed a very successful revival at Double Springs. His preaching is of the highest order, clear-cut, forceful and in the power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. He preaches a full gospel, salvation from all sin, purity of heart and holiness of life. He rings true to Wesleyan interpretation of the Scriptures upon which our great Methodism is founded.

Those desiring the service of a master-builder on the walls of Zion should engage this great and good man. His sermons on "The New Birth," and "God and His Law," should be preached in every pulpit in America. Keep this good man busy.

Fraternally,
Grady Aldridge, Pastor.

MOBILE, ALABAMA.

Just closed in Mobile Nazarene Church the greatest real revival that Mobile has seen in many years. Hallelujah! The little church we were enabled, under God, to plant here last fall is making good under their much loved pastor, Rev. F. O. Bell.

These are the most perilous times this poor old earth ever witnessed. The Scriptures are being rapidly fulfilled right before our eyes. The worst symptom of all is the loss of vision, even by numbers in the distinctively holiness churches. No vision means no burden, no prayer no glory. God pity us!

Rev. O'Harra was invaluable in mighty prevailing prayer and shouts of praise. We now go to California to rest all through November. God forever bless all The Herald force.

Devotedly,
Fred St. Clair.

ANDREW JOHNSON'S EVANGELISTIC REPORT.

We will adopt the multum in parvo plan of report and give a brief account of eight revival meetings in one write-up. This will save both time and space and yet scatter the good news from the far-flung line of old-time gospel evangelism and let my friends know that I am busy in revival work.

1. The first meeting of the season was held under a tent at Templeton, Pa. Bro. Earl A. Moore was manager. He has secured workers for five years in tent service at Templeton and thus planted holiness in the town and community. We had a hard pull in this campaign, but witnessed a degree of victory.

2. Hickman, Ky., was next in order. Rev. J. B. Mackey, pastor of the West Hickman M. E. Church, South, secured us for this meeting. It was held in a tent. Large crowds came and souls were blessed and a real revival spirit broke out and is still in evidence.

3. Penhook, Va., camp was next on the calendar. Here we had a great time with fine hospitable holiness people. Rev. W. J. Craddock of the Virginia Conference, is the moving spirit in this splendid Institution. He has a number of excellent people associated with him in the work. Good crowds came and heard the gospel truths expounded. Many were helped in their religious experience. Some fine preachers attended the camp. Prof. Glen Oldaker and wife, of Culpepper, Va., conducted the singing. They are fine and took well with the people.

4. Mt. Lookout camp near Lima, Ohio, came next. Here we met some of the salt of the earth. Rev. Ray C. Dotson, of Alger, Ohio, is president of the camp. He is a strong young pastor and was a special favorite of the late and lamented Bishop Henderson. In this camp we had the honor and privilege of working with that choice preacher, Rev. E. E. Shelhamer. Beyond the shadow of a reasonable doubt Shelhamer can preach the closest and most searching sermons of any evangelist in the field. God has peculiarly gifted him along this digging line of soul-saving preaching. Mrs. E. E. Shelhamer led the singing and conducted the children's services. She also is a fine preacher and a gifted writer. We had a fine camp meeting. Our good friend, Dr. Aaron S. Watkins, who is pastor of one of the Methodist Churches in Lima, attended the camp. He is a great platform lecturer as well as strong gospel preacher.

5. Beverly, Ohio, camp came next. This was the first camp meeting ever held in the town. It was a great success. The committee will have another meeting next year. Rev. S. M. Firestone, an old Asbury boy, who is still true to the cause of full salvation, is pastor in the town and helped to engineer the launching of the camp. We were royally entertained at his hospitable home high on the hilltop overlooking the town and the historical Muskingum River. Here we met Rev. Paul Moore of Beacon, N. Y., who was back in Ohio on a visit. He threw himself into the camp and worked like a conquering hero for its success.

The music was led by Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Wright, of Trinway, Ohio. They sure did make the music ring in the good old-fashioned way.

6. Millersburg, Ky., was next in order. Rev. H. C. Martin, pastor of the Methodist Church, invited us to help him wind up the Conference year and to proclaim the gospel of salvation to his people and the town in general. Mrs. Johnson sang special solos and assisted in the meeting. Bro. and Sister Martin gave us cordial entertainment in the Parsonage. For the brief time we were there we had a good meeting. In connection with this campaign we attended a few sessions of the Kentucky Conference which met at Winchester, Ky.

7. We next went back to Hickman, Ky., and held a meeting in the First Methodist Church of which Rev. R. P. Duckworth is pastor. The music was led by Rev. M. C. Yates, pastor in the Tennessee Conference. Many detractions in the town and on the Mississippi River made it difficult to have a sweeping revival; but much good was accomplished anyway. Hickman has a splendid people who still have a touch of the old-time Southern hospitality.

8. Our last meeting to report at this time was back in eastern, mountainous regions of old Kentucky at a place called Fogertown. The services were held in the big gymnasium of the High School. My assistant in this revival was the indefatigable, heroic warhorse of evangelistic and home missionary fame, the Rev. Charles B. Kolb, of Elgin, Tenn. My! what a wonderful worker is Bro. Kolb. He knew how to handle the mountain people and is a great mixer in any community. He is the man who sent the boys down into Tennessee who got the World-war hero, Alvin York, converted. Rev. Kolb is a great preacher. He has recently swung out again into the evangelistic field. He ought to be kept busy in this line of work for which he is peculiarly adapted and spiritually equipped. We had a great time at Fogertown. Some bright students of the school were converted and joined the church. We are working to build a Tabernacle near there on Terrill's Creek. Our Uncle, Bob Johnson, deeded a tract of land at the junction of three counties for this purpose. Pray that this work may succeed. Any amount of donation for this cause would be well spent.

We thank God, take courage and press on in the fruitful field of evangelism.

Yours in Christ,
Andrew Johnson.

COATESVILLE, PENNSYLVANIA.

We have just had a very fine evangelistic campaign at Coatesville, Pa. The services were held in the Olivet Methodist Episcopal Church, which has a membership of 1800. A large number were won to Christ and the Church through the Home Visitation and the Evangelistic meetings. Several were received into the Church on the last day of the campaign.

We now have an open date beginning December 1st for fifteen or twenty-two days. With best wishes for a good year, I remain.

S. B. Goff.

NOTICE!

At the recent session of the Alabama Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. J. L. Brasher, who for two years has been pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Boaz, Ala., returned under the appointment of his Conference to the evangelistic field.

We believe this news will be welcomed by a great host of Dr. Brasher's friends scattered up and down the country. Brother Brasher went in to the pastorate after a number of years of exacting work as President of John Fletcher College. His energies had been much depleted and his health seemed precarious. We are glad to inform our friends that there has been a return of strength and a complete recovery to health. Dr. Brasher is strong in body, alert in mind, rich in experience and capable of the best work of his life in his chosen field of evangelism.

Already our brother is being sought by people in different sections of the country. He certainly should be kept busy. Let all those who have thought of him in relation to revival campaigns get in touch with him at once. As long as he has open dates, we are sure he will do the very best he can for the brethren, and are also sure that his leadership and ministry in revival campaigns, in church, camp meeting, or convention will be a great blessing.

Faithfully yours,

Joseph Owen,
Pres. John Fletcher College, University Park, Iowa.

The Illuminated Bible Story Book

For a child from 7 to 12 years old. It is handsomely bound, has an attractive jacket, presentation page, is beautifully illustrated in colors, printed on enamel paper in a beautiful dark blue ink, large, regular old folks type. Eighteen Bible stories are interestingly told, beginning with "Noah and the Ark" and ending with "Jesus Before Pilate." A little 10-year-old girl stepped into our office just a few days ago, picked up a copy of this book and was soon lost in it, the stories were so interesting. Give it for Christmas. Price 60c.

and frantic cries, brought about the crucifixion of our Lord Jesus. They wagged their heads, mocked, ridiculed, and, in the language of our text, boasted that, although he had saved others himself he could not save. To this boast, they added the challenge, "If he be the king of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe."

To fully appreciate something of the humiliation and suffering of our Lord we must remember that those who believed in and loved him were standing in hearing of this challenge and looking upon his sufferings. It is quite reasonable to suppose that this challenge of his enemies awoke some hope within their hearts. They would naturally reason—What a splendid opportunity to reveal his true character. If he will now come down from the cross, they have promised to believe. They will be compelled to do so. They could no longer doubt if, with the power he calmed the sea, opened the eyes of the blind and raised the dead, he should at once in the presence of the multitude lift himself off of the instrument of his torture and stand healed and whole in the midst of his enemies.

No doubt Jesus could have come down from the cross. More than twelve legions of angels stood ready to come to his rescue. Jesus could have saved himself, but he could not save himself and save others. In order to save a lost world he must lose himself. He must not only submit to the false accusation of the Jews and the cruel power of the authorities of Rome, but he must appear to be a failure to those who loved him best. That was the bitterest dregs in the cup of his sufferings. Those who believed in, loved and followed him, must look upon what appeared to them to be defeat and failure. Why not come down from the cross, rebuke and shame his enemies, and by this splendid act establish beyond all question his claim to divine kingship?

Up to this time the disciples had failed to get a true conception of the character and ministry of Jesus. They were believing that he was the Messiah of Israel, the coming King of prophecy. Now, to all appearance, his claims have been false. He is not what he had appeared to them to be. They turn away in unutterable sorrow and defeat. Although the Lord had spoken to them of his resurrection they had failed to understand or get any real conception of this great event which was so soon to follow.

It occurs to me there is a very deep and practical lesson for us to learn just here. The teaching is that if we would save others we must lose ourselves. It seems that selfishness is the supreme thing in human nature as we find it. Nothing is more common among human beings in every class of society and all conditions of life than the seeking after self, to own, to control, to dominate. These are the things that have characterized mankind throughout the history of the world.

The supreme thing in the religion of the Lord Jesus is the crucifixion of self, is the death of this strange principle that loves and advances and exalts, praises and delights in self. Men become so intoxicated with self that they are always claiming and putting down to their credit every possible good deed; not only so, but they seek to give themselves credit for the good deeds of others. There is nothing more common than that men should climb upon the labors and good results of humble, toiling souls and proclaim themselves the architects of great structures into which they never laid a brick or drove a nail.

It is the purpose of the salvation of our Lord Jesus to crucify this old selfish nature and bring us into a life of unselfish, boastless, humble service. In other words, we must die to self if we would live the Christ life and bring life to others. The religion of Jesus is a religion of self-sacrifice. It involves the death of Christ to bring it into the world. It involves death to self on the part of those who would keep it a living, active force to bring life into the dead.

It will be remembered that some persons, supposed to be women with a degree of human compassion, had prepared and kept for such occasion a drink, a mixture of vinegar and myrrh. This concoction produced a kind of stupor in the victims who were nailed upon the cross. It was a sort of anesthetic and brought numbness into the body and thus dulled the agonies of those subjected to this cruel method of death.

We read that this mixture was offered to Jesus. It was pressed to his lips, but at once recognizing its character he would not receive it. One of the records says, "When he had tasted thereof he would not drink." Jesus utterly refused to ease the pangs of the cross. He would drink the cup of his sufferings to its bitterest dregs. What a blot it would have been on the white pages that record his life, ministry and death, if he had permitted himself to be so drugged that he would have been unconscious and hung there in some sort of drunken stupor. Had he done this it would have darkened all the shining glory of his life, teachings, suffering, and death.

Had he done this, he would have been incompetent to commend his mother to the care of his beloved John. He could not have capped the climax of all his loving forgiveness of men by praying, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." Had he done this, the dying thief would not have seen in a drugged, unconscious Christ hanging limply upon the cross a Redeemer mighty to save sinners to whom he cried, and not in vain, for mercy. Those immortal words of Christ to this penitent thief which have gone ringing through the centuries and around the world, bringing hope to the hearts of countless multitudes of miserable sinners—"This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise"—would never have been uttered.

This drugging of ourselves has become quite common. This side-stepping real suffering for our Lord. A sort of religious timidity that manages to get by without the reproach of the Cross. We have had a kind of religious concoction prepared that avoids the heartbreak of repentance, the excruciating pains of the new birth, the fiery heat of sanctifying power, and manages to claim all the benefits of the atonement here and hereafter without any cross. No rugged wood, no sounding hammer, no piercing nails, no gaping mob, no ridiculing ecclesiastics. May it not be that we can so manipulate the mixture of deadening drugs that we can avoid the cross, get the praise of the mob and the approval of the high priests, but are we really dead? Have we paid the price? Has the old man been crucified? Have we gone down into the sepulchre of obscurity with our Lord and been raised up in purity of heart to live lives of holiness?

Has there not appeared among us a species of timid holiness, a people who would dodge the persecution and reap the benefits of a great religious movement in the world? Are there not some who choose the time and place for testimony, who give so uncertain a sound that even the chief priests have no accusation but rather commendation. Are we not in danger of drugging ourselves to all suffering of Christ for humanity, of bringing ourselves into a sort of state of indifference to human suffering and sorrow, to feed ourselves extravagantly and use a bit of drug on our salad to make us forget the hungry, to clothe ourselves with extravagant comfort and carry a little vial in our pockets to take a sort of nose whiff to deaden ourselves a bit when we meet gaunt nakedness on the street or the backwoods country road? I am wondering if two-thirds or three-fourths of our church members today are not taking enough of the drugs of indifference to enable them to get through life without suffering any real sacrifice for Jesus and humanity, any real reproach for the sake of the Cross, any real privation for a lost and sinful race of human beings in their ignorance, poverty, dirt and rags as they stagger toward the brink of death and fall headlong over the abyss?

Would God that we divested ourselves of all drugs; that we took our cross with the full meaning of its reproach and suffering; that we become intensely sensitive to all the sorrows of a lost world; that we groaned out in intercessory prayer unutterable sorrows for lost mankind. May the Holy Ghost bring us into the mystery of some sort of participation in the sufferings of Jesus so that we may know something of death to selfishness, so that we may fully awake to the great truth that, if we save ourselves we cannot save others, but if we lose our lives in humble, holy service we may find them again in those redeemed by the power of Christ through our instrumentality. May God's Spirit teach us the profound and awful meaning of the Cross, the deep and marvelous lesson of losing our lives, here and now, that we may find them yonder in the future radiant and glorious in the salvation of others.

Down in Texas.

The readers of THE HERALD know that, for some time, I have been trying to get out to Texas with my bronchitis and asthma with the hope for health. All of my physicians expressed the belief that it would be good for me to get out into the pure air of the Texas plains. The nurse at the hospital had walked me up and down the hall once a day for about three days, and I got out of bed at eleven o'clock and they lifted me on to the train, and into a drawing room car, with my wife, on the dear old L. & N. for Memphis. We had to change cars there, but a prominent official, with several redcaps, met us there, put us into a rolling chair and soon had us in a drawing room car on the Missouri Pacific, with beds already made down, for Ft. Worth, Texas.

The colored porter on the L. & N. from Louisville to Memphis took such good care of me, with such a kind heart, that when we parted at Memphis, I told him if it was slave days I would buy him, set him free, and hire him for life. It amused him very much. He was a Baptist, and I believe had the love of Christ in his heart.

By the way, these colored porters on the Pullmans are a wonderful set of men. This is especially true in the Southland. In all my years of travel, north and south, I have not come in contact with more than a half dozen porters who have not been courteous and quick to render a bit of service. For the most part, they are gentlemen bound in black. "Oh," you say, "they are looking for a tip!" Very well, it's a shame when they render their service with such promptness and courtesy, that they fail to get their tip.

Every one was kind to us on the way, and after a pretty rugged night on the train, we reached Fort Worth the next day about 2 P. M. The wheel chair got me to a cab and we were soon comfortably located in the Westbrook Hotel, where you will get as fine accommodation, and as good food for the least money, as any place I know of in the wide west. I was quite fagged out and rested here a few days.

My beloved Brother J. T. Upchurch came over and took charge of us. We found out that it was snowing in Northwest Texas, and entirely too cold for me to go out on the plains. So Brother Upchurch figured us out a trip to the Rio Grande Valley, a warm climate, near the Mexican border. It took us another day and night on the train to get to this beautiful Valley. I laid down almost the entire trip and got here very much exhausted. We are in the beautiful little city of Weslaco in the great orange and grapefruit district, only six miles from the Mexican border, some 74 feet above sea level. Brother Upchurch came with us, arranged everything, found us a good room at a reduced rate in an excellent hotel and comes in several times a day to see how we are getting along. He is looking about for some good quiet family where we can get board after I gather strength enough to get out.

It is very warm here. My cough seems greatly relieved and I am hoping to improve after I get rested from my 1500 mile journey. Brother Upchurch is staying over for a few days to see how I get on and render me any assistance he can. My debt of gratitude for his kindness can never be paid. I feel as if the Lord gave him to us in this time of our great need.

Some of the Lord's sanctified people who take THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, have located us, been in and prayed with us, and brought us a fine lot of delicious oranges and grapefruit. So we praise the Lord and take courage.

H. C. MORRISON.

BACK TO CHRIST,

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

WE remember seeing a cartoon "Back to Christ," which represented a preacher seated in his library, with books galore at his command. He was poring over Darwin, Spencer, Huxley and other "scholars" from whom he hoped to learn real truths, as they were authentic (?) on the important questions of the day. In a corner on a shelf, covered with cobwebs, were the standards which support and defend our holy faith, and alongside of them the Bible, the antiquated volume which is out of date and discarded because so many errors (?) have been found in it. As we studied the cartoon, and pictured the tired, dissatisfied look upon the preacher's face, we could but have a feeling of commiseration for one so utterly blinded by the god of this world, as to leave the one Book, the law of God, and vex his muddled brain over what men, who are so very far away from the truth, have to say.

We venture the assertion that this cartoon does not exaggerate the situation in many quarters today. God's book, with many, is a back number, and if studied at all, it is with the purpose of detecting its supposed defects, and to set up the judgment and opinions of men whose egotism is so prominent, that they fail to see good in anything, but what they are the authors of. We may say what we please about the hindrances of the church, the cause of the prevailing apostasy, and the rapid gait with which the powers of darkness are moving in this world, but to our mind, there is no one who is a greater enemy, and is doing more harm to the cause of Christ, than those high in authority who sit in judgment on the Holy Scriptures, discarding that which condemns themselves, and seeking to improve that which would exalt them in the eye of man. The following taken from the Literary Digest gives us some idea of which way the wind is blowing and should bring us to serious reflection and prayerful consideration.

"A protest, west and east—west as far as San Francisco, and east as far as London—arises against the 'new worldliness.' By this is meant the appropriation of the material benefits of Christianity with a repudiation of all or nearly all of its vital meanings. 'The modern world,' says the California Christian Advocate (San Francisco), 'has no need of the atonement of Christ, no need of his intercession, no need of his regenerating grace. It insists that humanity is essentially all right.' 'It is not too much to say that a diametrically opposite conception of what religion ought to mean has for some time past been dislodging the old summons to prepare for eternity and the revealed faith of the things invisible,' says the Church Times (London). 'In fact, it is only the visible things with which, it would seem, Christianity ought to concern itself—the amelioration of the external conditions of human life on earth.' 'The modern world sneers at the idea of universal sin. It has no place for penitential tears, no need of heart-cleansing by the Spirit of God. It has no doctrine of personal salvation because there is nothing to be saved from.' So writes the editor of the California paper, moved like his conferee in London by the recurrent Advent season. He goes on to analyze the modern conception of Christ as an altruistic and humanitarian conception, leaving out all the higher conception, of his real mission to the world. Thus:

"He came to save the world from sin. It is because the church insists on the reality of sin, the need of redemption, the need of repentance, the need of regeneration, of inward purity, of absolute surrender to Christ, that the modern world seeks to discredit the church. The modern world objects to being condemned. The modern world has taken up the hallucination that sin is not a reality. Sin being discredited, the whole fundamental idea of Christianity is changed. Christ is no longer a Savior, because no Savior is needed. Christ to the modern world is largely a temporary convenience. The modern world wants the missionary to civilize the cannibal, so that trade may be extended. Christian civilization demands the products of the factories, hence Christianity is a good thing.

"The modern world sees that somehow railroads, telegraphs, telephones, new houses, new streets, new furniture, new clothes, are demanded where the Christian church sets up the cross, and hence it says it believes in Christ. It does not believe in the missionary who insists upon protecting the weak against the strong. It believes in the 'survival of the fittest.' We have never met an individual with a working Christian experience, born of God, born of love, who was opposed to the church. An inadequate, a temporary, a sheer commercial idea of Christ naturally opposes the deeper, truer meaning of the church.

"The Christ the modern world is now insisting on is a fictitious Christ. Such a Christ has no authority over the conscience. He is the Christ of civilization, a great captain, or chieftain of the industries of the world. Christianity with the modern world is another name for prosperity. Christ is an impersonal something working toward material prosperity, enlarged personal comfort, a principle restraining your neighbor, conferring special privileges on yourself. This is a time when personal leadership amounts to but little. Any notion which appeals to selfishness and self-interest will run like a forest-fire. People do not ask for a moral reason for a course of conduct. Will it pay? is the paramount question in the modern mind. The modern world has deceived a good many saints calling prosperity Christ."

While it is true that the "modern world" has a standard set up by which to gauge Christianity, does it follow that the ministers of the gospel are to lower the standard to meet the opinions and demands of a godless world?

Nay, verily. The law of God was given for all men of all ages, and the salvation purchased by the Redeemer of the world, is to be had on the same conditions today as it was when Nicodemus went to Christ and asked the way into the kingdom, "Ye must be born again." And "Except a man be born from above, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Yet, in the face of this burning declaration from the mouth of the Son of God, through whom and by whom are all things, there are those who would place salvation upon the humanitarian plane, and make it a matter of serving our fellowmen, and not to love God with all the heart, soul, mind and strength, first, then our neighbor as ourself. This is Confucianism, pure and simple, dealing only with the temporal side of the question, for which no Christ is needed, and leaving out the all-important matter of the sin problem, the very thing Christ came into the world to adjust.

That person spoke truly when he said, "The gradual shifting of the central interest of existence from heaven to earth, from the divine will to human wishes, has tended to make life a desolemnized and common thing. It is an abuse of terms to assert that the concentration of care and compassion upon mundane needs is making this world more sacred. It results rather in that materialistic vulgarity of mind upon which a reason like Advent breaks with a disagreeable shock."

We believe the shortest route, and the quickest solution to the problem of the world's prodigality would be for the ministers to get a real burning experience of salvation from all sin, themselves, then the gospel would be the theme of their preaching, and Christ would be lifted up who would draw all men unto himself. "Preach the word," was Paul's admonition to Timothy, not politics, social service, prize fights, or any such worldly topics. People get these out of the newspapers, and too much of them, but when they go to the house of God, they want the bread that cometh down from heaven, and the water of life. Let us pray for our ministers, that they may be men who are dead to everything but the will of God, men who are so busy seeking the lost sheep on the mountains of sin, that they do not have time to run off on the sidetracks of modern skepticism and infidelity. Men, who like Paul, can say, "None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God."

With mercy and with judgment

My web of time he wove,

And aye the dews of sorrow

Were lusted with his love.

I'll bless the hand that guided,

I'll bless the heart that planned,

When throned where glory dwelleth

In Immanuel's land!

—Samuel Rutherford.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

THE FIGHT THAT PROVED NOTHING.

Raymond Browning.

Our old school teacher, "Sawney" Webb, used to tell the boys that fight never proved anything. "For instance," he said, "suppose some one calls you a liar and you knock him down, does that prove that you are really honest? If so, suppose that in the fight that fellow knocks you down then that proves that you lied." Then in a kindly way the old philosopher used to plead with his students to cultivate self-control and to try to settle their differences without anger. This advice struck me very forcibly some years later when I had charge of a boys' preparatory school and had to face that same problem. This incident happened.

One day I heard an unusual noise in the dormitory and I ran upstairs to find that two young men were engaged in a furious fist-cuff and a crowd was swarming into the room. My first move was to order all the non-combatants out of the room and then seeing that the fighters were pretty evenly matched I walked out and closed the door. There really isn't much enthusiasm in fighting when there are no spectators. Soon a lull came in the proceedings and then the murmur of disputing voices; then one of them said, "Professor, may we have some water to wash our faces?" I went back in the room and sat down and waited until the excitement was all past and the boys had cleaned up pretty well. Aside from minor scratches and bruises, Jones had an ear torn and Clarke had an ugly bruise just beneath one eye on the point of his cheek. After listening to both sides of the story I said, "Now you boys thought that a fight would settle your differences and it hasn't done it. Clarke, suppose you could see Jones lying in a coffin tomorrow, would you be proud of that wound you made on his ear?" He hung his head a moment and said, "No, sir, I would be ashamed of it." Then I asked, "Jones, if you could see Clarke lying in his coffin tomorrow would you like to call the boys around and show them that ugly bruise you put on his cheek?" "I'd be mightily ashamed of it, Professor," he replied. I said, "Life is uncertain. Stranger things than these have happened. Now, I want you boys to shake hands and be friends and love each other. Will you do it?" Without a moment's hesitation they gripped each other's hand and walked out of the room together.

A few mornings later in my chapel talk I felt led to talk to the boys about the conversation between Christ and Nicodemus. A revival was in progress in one of the village churches and the boys seemed interested and some had been to the altar for prayer. At the close of the talk a young man came forward weeping and asked me to pray for him, and hardly had he knelt when some others came and we turned the chapel service into a revival and, if I remember correctly, seven young fellows were brightly converted. We then had a testimony service and it was a heavenly time with us. It was so wonderful that without any signal or announcement this season of refreshing had suddenly been sent from the Lord right down into our schoolroom. The last boy to testify was Clarke. He was a tall, straight, handsome athlete, just eighteen years old and weighed a hundred and sixty-five pounds. The bruise on his cheek was dark and ugly, but his face was shining. He said: "Professor, I haven't lived just like I ought to all the time, but today I feel like I am a Christian and I want you to pray for me that I may hold out faithful to the end." I looked at my watch and said, "Boys, we promised you a half holiday today and it is just half-past eleven o'clock. You may go now." They rushed from the room whistling and laughing, and in a few minutes were on their way to a picnic at Panacea Lake which was just a few miles away.

It was just eight minutes past four, for my watch filled with water and stopped, when I heard somebody scream and saw Clarke struggling out in that lake and plunged in with my clothes on and tried to get him. Another teacher came to help me but Clarke caught him and dragged him down and came near drowning him. He finally managed to break loose and came up and I held his head above the water until a boat came to our assistance, but before we could locate Clarke's body and get him out life was gone. How strong and handsome and lovable he seemed that morning when he said, "Pray for me that I may hold out faithful to the end" and did not dream that the end was just four hours and thirty-eight minutes away.

We carried him back, laid him in the schoolroom where only the day before he had sat reciting his Latin lesson. The schoolboys moved about like ghosts and all the usual noise and merriment was gone. Next morning we took him to the train to begin that sad journey to the village home where father and mother and the younger children were waiting, the schoolboys filed by the coffin for a last glimpse of their dead comrade. That big bruise was still on his cheek. I saw Jones come to the door and turn back. He seemed to dread to look into that coffin. Again, he came, and again. Finally, he gathered courage and came and bent down over the casket and went out sobbing like a little child. The quarrel had been settled and the wrong had been forgiven, but I believe in that moment he would have given his right hand to be able to take back that cruel blow.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please admit me into your band of boys and girls. I wrote a letter once before and saw it in print so I thought I would write again. I received many nice letters from the cousins, and enjoyed getting them very much. I will tell a little something about myself as you cousins might have forgotten by now. I am twenty-five years of age, and my birthday is Sept. 25. I have dark hair and dark eyes. In this section where I live are quite a few orange groves. I have a small grove of my own and enjoy working in it very much. How many of you cousins enjoy fishing and hunting? I do. I live near the famous Indian River, and I can go fishing and hunting there often. I would like to correspond with the boys and girls near my age. I hope Mr. W. B. is out hunting when this letter arrives. So you cousins please answer this soon.

John Ragin.
Shiloh, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have written to The Herald before, but it has been some time. I enjoy reading The Herald and also page ten. I think The Herald is a good religious paper for everyone. How many of the cousins like to go to Sunday school and church? I do and enjoy going. I belong to the M. E. Church. Our pastor is Bro. Winters. I have two sisters. My birthday is June 17. Have I a twin? If so, please write. My father takes The Herald. I would like to hear from some of the cousins. Hope Mr. W. B. is out working in the garden when this arrives.

Allene Lockard.
Woodrow, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am just sitting here listening to the wind and thinking so many things, and a little thought came creeping into my mind and kept growing until lo and behold! I was thinking of every one of you. I wonder how many of the cousins think I'm a wonderful "promiser" but not much "practicer." Forgive me, please, I didn't realize what I was promising when I said I'd answer all, but will make a promise to this effect: I'll answer all who send postage stamps. To those who asked for a snapshot, I wish to say that I'm sorry I couldn't send one but will give a description instead. I am five feet, five inches tall, have brown hair and eyes and am not pretty of face, but I want my soul to be always beautiful to behold. God sweetly saves, sanctifies, satisfies and keeps me now. I must say good night and pleasant dreams ere Mr. Waste Basket arouses and brings my visit to an untimely end.

Mildred Florence.
S. R. 3, Cynthiana, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second letter to The Herald. My first one was not in print. I suppose Mr. W. B. got it. I have dark blonde hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am sixteen years old and a Sophomore in High School. I would like very much to hear from some of the cousins. Hope to see this letter in print.

Marguerite Price.
Box 55, Beebe, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I surely do want to join your happy band of boys and girls. I have only read a few numbers, and I sure do like them. I hold a better Sunday school attendance record than any one in my town. If I have good luck when August comes rolling around I can say I haven't missed a Sunday in nine years. I have blue eyes, light hair and fair complexion. I am fifteen years old. My birthday is June 16. Have I a twin? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with I and ends with E, and has five letters in it. I hope some of the cousins write me. I will answer all letters received. I have already written to some of the cousins and received answers.

Gladys Karriek.
414 So. Madison Ave., Irvine, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Who will write to a lonely little boy? Mother has been sick for such a long time and can't talk and read to me now as she used to do. I have no brothers or sisters and daddy has work so far from home. Father and mother are Salvationists. Papa was an officer in the Salvation Army for awhile; he loves little girls and boys so much but had to give up the work in the Army as he is getting too old and mother being sick. I ask you cousins to pray for her to be healed, if it is the Lord's will. Please write to me.

Robert Meador.
Rt. 1, Cohutta, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you slip over and let a little Kentucky girl have a seat with your happy band of boys and girls? My mother has taken The Herald for about three years, and I enjoy reading page ten very much. I am nine years old, four feet and four inches high, have brown hair and fair complexion. I have a Bible of my own and I read in it every day. It has the New and Old Testaments in it. Who can guess my first name? It begins with C and ends with S, and has six letters in it. I would be glad to get a letter from any of the cousins. I will answer all letters I receive. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Gwendolyn Newman.
Trammel, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Having been some two years since I have written for page ten, so much in love with The Pentecostal Herald, with a godly love in my heart for you and Bro. Morrison, I feel that it is the will of God that I write for page ten today. I am saved and sanctified wholly at this writing. Am thanking God for victory over the world, flesh and the devil. I enjoy most of the letters on page ten, but will have to say I enjoy the spiritual sermons of God's anointed best. Have just read "The Will of God" by Rev. J. C. Boone in May 8th issue, and I think it is wonderful. Readers of page ten, you that are Christians, read it again. I did not get to go to our Sunday school this morning, so missed Sunday school and Class meeting. Thank God for the old-fashioned Methodist class meeting. I wish that the Methodist Church (North) that I moved my membership from, had still the class meeting. They have outgrown it? Just think, three churches in a very small village about two miles from where I live, Methodist, North, Baptist and Dunkard and I have never heard a holiness sermon in them in my life, a real holiness sermon, and I have lived here all of my life, forty-two years. I am thankful for The Pentecostal Herald. Have taken it for several years and to me it is getting better. Am thankful to God that he helped me to place it in several homes and one particular home, it has borne much fruit, and I am sure it gave light in others. To my young friends who are Christians and write for page ten, keep the blessing of God in your soul through earnest, fervent prayer and never fail to witness for God. To my unsaved young friends who write for page ten, who have big plans for your future life, remember God says "Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." To all the brethren in Christ, I would say,

"Let us walk in the pathway of duty Let us work till the close of the day, Then we shall see the great King in his beauty,

When we've gone the last mile of the way."

Listen, boys and girls, when you want to buy a new book just look over the list as usually given in The Pentecostal Herald and I'm sure you will be delighted. Prove me now and see. I am going to get the book, "Two Tramps," for my boy and then two boys will read it. Tell Bro. Morrison I'm glad God is giving him back his strength.

A Fixed Income--- Asbury College Demand Notes

Asbury College one year Demand Notes read: "On Demand after one year's notice in writing we promise to pay—"

Reasons Why Asbury Demand Notes are Better

- FIRST: They guarantee a fixed income—6%. No period of high money rates lasts indefinitely. Good interest with good security is not always to be had. Asbury offers both.
- SECOND: They are the most flexible security for one to hold. Bonds cannot be cashed until due. Bonds are paid off at an arbitrary date.
- THIRD: They can be cashed after one year's notice. Most any one can finance a need for a year. If health or business conditions demand a return of your money, you are protected.
- FOURTH: You escape the difficult hazards of reinvestment from time to time. There is satisfaction in knowing that you are not to look next year for a place to reinvest your money.
- FIFTH: There is reward in knowing that your money is not only invested at 6% but that it is serving a great purpose—building Christian character.

Asbury's growing program will doubtless demand 6% money for some time. Preference will be given Christian people who first accept our demand notes.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IX.—December 1, 1929.

Subject.—The Christian Home in a Modern World.—Luke 2:40-52.

Golden Text.—Honor thy father and mother. Eph. 6:2.

Introduction.—A Christian home is a beautiful institution. It is a heaven in miniature. An ideal Christian home is composed of a Christian husband, a Christian wife, and a group (the larger the better) of well trained Christian children. Poodle dogs and pet cats cannot take the place of children in a Christian home. A Christian home is more than a haven of rest. It is not a negative, but a positive entity. It is more than a covent from storm and strife; it is a power-house from which currents of sacred influence are constantly passing to bless the world.

A Christian home is buttressed with eternal truth. The Bible is its foundation rock. In such a home the Holy Trinity is believed in and honored in daily worship, in prayer and songs of praise. It has secret closets that are wireless telephone stations to glory. Messages are constantly ascending to gladden the heart of God, and answers are sweeping back to rejoice the inmates of the home.

A Christian home is ruled by a beautiful angel whose best name is Love. She has a coterie of helpers whose names are Joy, Peace, Longsuffering, Gentleness, Goodness, Faith, Meekness, and Temperance; and, in dark hours, another bright angel called Hope, comes in to lend her aid. Even the little children get acquainted with these blessed spirits and fall in love with them. Such a home is like a flower garden where one breathes the aroma of roses and violets and forget-me-nots.

Christian homes do not produce worldlings. As well expect butterflies to eat oak leaves. Such homes do not send out their young people to dance, play cards, run to the movies, and such other worldly amusements. Children who are well fed at home do not chew rocks and eat dirt on the streets.

Christian homes must be well supplied with good literature, and utterly devoid of that which is bad. Few of the papers and magazines now published are fit to enter a home of any sort. Better put poison in baby's milk, and have done with it. The damage will be much less in the long run. All tainted books must be taboo.

All truly Christian homes are free from tobacco. Their inmates neither grow, give away, sell, nor use that deadly poison. Nor do they indulge in the use of any other deadly habit-forming drug. They find their rule of life in 1 Cor. 10:31: "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

A Christian home is dedicated to God, and is therefore like heaven: "There shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination, or maketh a lie." One may enter such a home at any hour in the year, and search it from garret to cellar, look under the beds, into the closets, ransack trunks and suit cases, but he will never find an ounce of contraband liquor, a deck of cards, or any other gambling device.

Out of Christian homes go clear-headed, pure-hearted, clean-handed young men and young women to bless their fellowmen. They are beacon lights along the rocky shores of time. They are the moral and spiritual bulwarks of the world. Without them the nations would sink.

I hear a protest: "You have put the standard too high." But I have done no such thing. I know there are exceptions on both sides; but I am describing the "Simon-pure" Christian home. Nor am I willing that any one should be permitted to pass counterfeit coins for genuine, nor highly concentrated carbon for diamonds.

America is not resting upon her government in Washington City. She is resting upon the homes of the nation. Make these clean and strong; and the nation will be clean and strong. Make the homes unclean and weak; and the nation will become unclean and weak. If there is to be no Bible study, no family worship, no Christian songs, no sacred Sabbath in our homes; but on the contrary, if our homes are to be cursed with the smoke of a hundred billion cigarettes a year, if our young people are to go half-naked, and run to the devil through the dance, the card-table, the salacious movies, and every other infernal thing that is spewed out of hell, this nation must fall.

A Christian home in America today is as beautiful as heaven. Thank God, there are still many such in the land. Our prayer should be: "O God, multiply their number a million fold."

Comments on the Lesson.

I do not suppose that we are, in this lesson, to study the Christ child in particular, but the home in which he grew up. He is not so much a reflection of the home as the home is a reflection of Him. No place can be a Christian home, unless he is its head. We know little about his mother Mary and his foster-father Joseph, except as we see them through his light. In that light the little carpenter shop in Nazareth becomes luminous with unearthly splendor, and the peasant home glows with heavenly beauty. The angels of God camped all over that place, and constant streams of glory and blessing were coming down from the celestial world. He walked the streets of his little city amid cohorts of angels that outshined all that the prophet's servant saw upon the mountain heights. Men saw it not; but there was a supernatural splendor about the humble peasant home, that surpassed all the gorgeous glory of Solomon's costly temple. A greater than Solomon was there. The King of earth and heaven sat on his mother's knee clothed in the holy beauty of Deity. Take him into your home; make him the head of it, and you will have a heaven on earth.

I do not know how to comment on this lesson verse by verse. As I read it, I see nothing in it, save the Christ child. His beauty is so marvelous, that I lose sight of Joseph and his mother. The learned doctors of the law shrink into pigmies, and I wonder if they are really there at all. I look into his glorious face, and remember that old Dr. Lovick Pierce of Georgia used to say that when he got to heaven he wanted to sit down near the throne, and look at him, and admire and worship him for a thousand years before he even took time to look for his son George, the Bishop.

I am sorry some preachers have mutilated this beautiful picture by trying to preach from it little sermons about "losing Jesus." The Holy Spirit put no such trickery into the passage. Go elsewhere for texts on backsliding (there are lots of them in the Book); but let this heaven-touched Christ picture alone. Look through it, and see the heaven-born glory of the humble Nazareth home, if you can. It is all there. Invite him into your home:—Clean out the place from shingles to cement floor; brush down all the cobwebs; wipe the dust off the furniture; clean the windows; throw the skeleton out of the closet; set the table; put fresh flowers in the vases; set the table; put the family Bible on the center table; turn the whole establishment over to his control, and you will have "A Christian Home in a Modern World." Hallelujah!

NATIONAL HOLINESS CONVENTION AT MOOERS, N. Y.

The National Association for the Promotion of Holiness will hold a national convention in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, Mooers, N. Y., beginning Tuesday, Dec. 3rd and closing Sunday evening, Dec. 8th. Dr. John Owen, of Taylor University, Upland, Ind., and President C. W. Butler, of Cleveland, Ohio, will be the preachers. Rev. A. J. Fryhoff will have charge of the singing throughout the Convention. Services morning, afternoon, and evening each day after the opening service. We urge everybody who possibly can to attend this "Feast of Tabernacles," Dec. 3-8, 1929. Kindly write the pastor if you are coming so he can arrange for your entertainment.

Rev. Clyde R. Summer,
Pastor, Mooers, N. Y.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Rev. W. E. Thomas is engaged in a meeting at Central City, Ky., with the pastor, Rev. H. H. Jones, assisted by R. P. Marshall and wife, musical directors. He has an open date for December 1.

Andrew Johnson, Wilmore, Ky., will be in a revival meeting in the M. E. Church, Cave-in-Rock, Ill., Nov. 10-22 with Rev. A. N. Hicks, pastor. Prayers are requested for the success of this campaign. People in the surrounding towns are cordially invited to attend.

Rev. and Mrs. Jack Linn, the Lord willing, will be in Florida and the Eastern Southern states this winter. They invite correspondence from those who would like their services as evangelists and singers. Address them at Oregon, Wis.

ALL-DAY HOLINESS CONVENTION THANKSGIVING DAY.

The Epworth Camp Meeting Association (which camp grounds is two miles north of Murphysboro, Ill., Rt. 13) will observe Thanksgiving with an all-day meeting and basket dinner. If the weather is favorable services in the Tabernacle; if too cold we will go into the church and spread our table in the cottage on the ground. Rev. F. V. Harwood, of Kentucky, will be the principal speaker.

Curwen Henley, Pres.
J. W. Deterline, Sec.

THE SECOND BLESSING.

Mark 8:25.

Blinded by sin is every man
Until he comes to know
Jesus who passes 'long the way,
And how he loves him so.
I beg you seek the Savior now,
He surely is your friend;

Your eyes shall be opened through faith,

Ye shall be born again.
Yet clearly see ye not the Christ
Who for your sins hath died,
'Till he touches the eyes again
And ye are sanctified.

O won't you seek this blessing, friend?
Enjoy the road you plod;
Rejoice and sing and at the end,
Plainly ye shall see God.

Carl S. Smith.

My Sermon Notes

BY CHARLES H. SPURGEON
A selection from Outlines of Discourses Delivered by Mr. Spurgeon Covering the Entire Bible.

- Vol. 1. Genesis to Proverbs.
- Vol. 2. Ecclesiastes to Malachi.
- Vol. 3. Matthew to Acts.
- Vol. 4. Romans to Revelation.

These volumes are $1.50 each, or the entire set will be sent postpaid, boxed and labeled at the special price of $4.00.

In this book are 1,500 questions which any one ought to be able to answer if he really knows his Bible. Through using it, one will gradually familiarize oneself with the splendor of the Bible, its variety, its literary values, its wisdom and summary of all rules for success and happiness. It is simple, practical, entertaining and educational.
Price, $1.00.

Children and Young People

Beautiful Girlhood

By Mabel Hale
Every teen-age girl should own a copy of this book of wholesome advice. Dangers along her pathway are pointed out. She will take fresh courage as she is pointed to the real stepping-stones in life. It does not deal with sex problems. Encourages lofty ideals.
FOR THE GIRL—Who Wants to Make A Success Who Wants a Real Girl's Book Who Feels Herself Misunderstood Who Desires to Be Beautiful

Your daughter with the flush of youth in her cheeks and the starlight in her eyes, facing life eagerly, inquiringly, needs this book.

Gift Style—Pretty blue border on each page. Mounted medallion on front cover, which is protected by watered-silk, embossed tissue jacket. 232 pages, cloth bound. Price $1.00.

Light on the Child's Path

Wm. A. Bixler
A fine book for the tiny tots who have not learned to read. No fairy stories or fiction. Its ninety-three pictures inspire the child for good. The short stories and poems are interesting and help the parents entertain and instruct the little one in pure Christian principles. Well illustrated. 128 pages. 50 cents.

Stories from the New Testament

For the Little Child

Contains 28 stories about boys and girls of the New Testament. Many full-page pictures. Test questions covering each story make the Bible lesson stay fixed in the youth's mind.

Cloth bound. 75 cents.

Stories from the Old Testament

For the Little Child

Similar style to book listed above. It entertains and brings to mind good character-building lessons by telling the ever-new stories about Old Testament boys and girls. Well illustrated.

Cloth bound. Includes test-questions. 75 cents.

Tiny Tots in Story Town

BY ISABEL C. BYRUM

This book will thrill the little tots from 2 to 6 years old. Pictures in two colors make every page more interesting. As usual this mother-author has woven good Christian morals into her stories. They really do your child good, besides entertaining.

A few of the titles—In Story Town—Crippled John—Happy Way—Dare Do Right—At Grandpa's, and others. Strong linen cover.

Price 35 cents.

Bible Hero Stories

A New Series of Finely Illustrated Bible Story Books for Children. Excellent for Gifts and Rewards.

Series One of Bible Hero Stories contains the following six books:

Joseph, David, Moses, Paul, Jesus, Book 1, Jesus, Book 2

Each book has thirty-two pages, 6 1/2 x 9 1/4 inches in size. Has richly printed, soft-gray color covers, with six full-page illustrations in colors matching the covers. Price, each, 18 cents; per dozen, $1.80.

Ideals for Earnest Youth

BY A. T. ROWE

A purposeful message for modern youth with their great opportunities and problems. It is practical rather than theoretical. Actual incidents and experiences of real, outstanding, unusually successful men are given as food for thought. Avenues of opportunities for success are pointed out, as well as the ever-common boulevards to failure.

Valuable for young people's meetings, societies, and leagues. Emphasizes youth's needs of Christ's guidance, but clearly avoids any doctrinal discussion.

Sixty-one pithy chapters with a punch in each one. Beautifully cloth bound; attractive two-color jacket. Price $1.00.

Forgotten Children

By Julia Flewellyn

Nell, and Squinty, and Brandy are waifs of the great city of New York. They are the "driftwood of humanity"—thrown out on the street—nobody's children—Forgotten Children.

Nell is a typical "spitfire" of the alley, passionate and outspoken in her barbaric language of the streets. She gives one thrills all the way through by her under all the dirt and grime and seeming "good-for-nothingness" of these outcasts are tender chords waiting to be touched by a loving heart, awakened by kindness.

Something new for our young people.

189 Pages. Price $1.00.

A Noble Life

BY MARY C. HASKETT.

This book forcefully and entertainingly brings before the youth many lessons of priceless value. It will help him to develop noble character.

96 pages. Cloth, 50 cents.

The Hero of Hill House

BY MABEL HALE.

Reads like fiction, but is a true story of a Christian Kansas boy. It is thrilling and adventurous. But nothing is objectionable. It sets forth good Christian principles for right living. It will entertain and instruct.

Lodestone cover. 221 pages. $1.00.

Chats With Uncle Jack About Nature

By C. W. Naylor

It exalts God and gives the boys and girls an introduction to his handiwork in the mountains, the streams, the clouds, the birds, insects and beasts all around us. The "Chat" on "Just Mud" will make any boy or girl sit up and take notice. Especially fine for 9-16 year old youth.

Well illustrated. Cloth bound. 128 pages. Price 60 cents.

Aunt Charlotte's Stories of Bible History

We have sold something like twenty thousand of these and they have given universal satisfaction. One hundred and four stories, taking one through the Bible by reading two stories each Sunday. Questions after each story. Over two hundred illustrations.

Neatly bound in cloth. Price $1.00.

The Poorhouse Waif

BY ISABEL C. BYRUM.

A true story of an orphan boy made fatherless by the Civil War. His boyhood life was filled with unusual events. He was mistreated on every hand. How he became a useful Christian man is a story absorbing and worth reading.

224 pages. Cloth, 60 cents.

CHRISTIAN HERO SERIES

Thrilling Tales of Heroism, Adventure, Love, Triumph, and Dangers at Home and in Many Foreign Lands.

These are Life Stories of world-renowned religious leaders, men of purpose, ideals, and vision—mighty testimonies to Christian power! They appeal to young and old alike. Gripping and Educational.

ADONIRAM JUDSON, Apostle of Burma—Percy. How Judson met the curly-headed, black-eyed Ann Hasseltine and won this charming girl who also had a desire for adventure is told early in the story. How they together faced a foreign-mission field, hand in hand, daring by sheer courage and an indomitable faith in God to carry the gospel message into the dangerous land of Burma is also related. Cloth bound. 128 pages. Price 75c.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE, Missionary-Explorer of Africa—Kleeberger. Livingstone went right into the jungles of Africa where wild animals abounded on every side. Many thrilling encounters did he meet. He taught the simple gospel story to the wild natives and won many to Christ. The natives loved him and the deeds of valor and loyalty shown him make a beautiful story. Cloth. 128 pages. 75c.

JOHN BUNYON—The Immortal Dreamer—McCreary

You know Bunyan wrote the famous book—Pilgrim's Progress, but do you know he was one of the greatest preachers of his day?

The author tells you about the long, tedious twelve years' imprisonment because of his strong religious convictions. Illustrated. 128 pages. 75c.

HENRY MARTYN, Apostle to the Mohammedans—Lopez

Henry Martyn lived a strenuous life. On his tombstone the epitaph is rightly inscribed to him—"A flame of fire." An inspiration to youth. Cloth bound. 129 pages. 75c.

DWIGHT L. MOODY, The Soul-Winner—Rowe.

Young people will be inspired to bigger, better things after reading of this great man. Many are the thrilling and humorous events pictured in the story. His experiences in the great Chicago fire, his travels abroad, several pages of anecdotes that only Moody could produce. Cloth bound. 128 pages. 75c.

JAMES HUDSON TAYLOR, Pioneer Missionary of Inland China—Hunnex
Chinese life, manners, and customs are charming, and this story of Taylor is one of unusual interest. Cloth bound. 154 pages. 75c.

JOHN G. PATON, Hero of the South Seas—Byrum.

It is difficult to find a good place to stop reading until you turn the last page of this book. A very good account of the life of this famous missionary to the cannibals. Cloth bound. 127 pages. 75c.

CHARLES H. SPURGEON, Prince of Preachers—Adcock.

It has been prophesied that Spurgeon would become a great preacher when he was yet a lad. Before he was twenty years old he had achieved a great popularity. Illustrated. 116 pages. 75c.

MARTIN LUTHER, The Lion-Hearted Reformer—Morrison.

It required a man of iron nerve and courage to do what Luther did. How he fearlessly took his stand against the corruption of the Roman Church and in the face of losing his life, is a most absorbing story. Cloth bound. 125 pages. 75c.

JOHN WESLEY, The Christian Hero—Egermeier.

The life of the great Wesley, preacher and reformer, is well told. He loved God, and dared to do God's bidding. Inspiring and uplifting. Cloth bound. 128 pages. 75c.

Bright colored jackets
Every Home Should Have the Above 10 volumes. Price only $6.75 postpaid

GRANDMOTHER'S LILY

Here are five true stories as gripping as fiction. In child language the author tells Ann's Robin, Earning a Bible, Grandmother's Lily, What Happened on Friday, Marjorie and the Wasps. Pictures on nearly every page. Linen cover. 35 cents.

ARABELLA'S HEN

A pleasant tale about a hen who was a missionary and who was spared for a long life and why. Eight stories in all—about children, their pets, and playtimes. A touching group of stories such as The Cyclone, Baby—I Don't Want to Pray Tonight, etc. Linen cover. 35 cents.

HARRY THE NEWSBOY

Children love to read of brave little Harry who lived in a New York City tenement house and sold papers after his father died, to support his mother. Thrilling and well illustrated. Six stories—Jimmy's Friend—A Family of Pigeons, etc. Linen cover. 35 cents.

OUR DARLING'S A B C

By Isabel C. Byrum
Another book for the 2 to 6-year-olds. A picture and verse of poetry accompany each letter. On the opposite page is an excellent story bearing on the picture. Each picture and story are of familiar Bible characters, etc. Strong linen cover. 64 pages in colors. 35 cents.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages for each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustrations. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior. Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1930 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Heroes of Peace

Imagine having a leg cut off without being "put to sleep," yet that is the way it was always done until a young doctor, horrified by the agony all about him, worked out a way to make surgical operations painless. This book tells his story. And be sure to read about the fellow who made it possible to save folks from horrible death when bitten by mad dogs.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Stories of Grit

His father shot the boy's eyes out—an accident, of course—but after the doctors got through with him he determined that it would make no difference, he would work out his ambition. With heart-breaking difficulty he struggled on until he became a high government official. And you will want to read about that other boy who landed here without money and unable to speak English, yet forced his way up until nationally known and admired.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

FACING FACTS. By The Editor.

THERE are two great facts that we ought to face and think about: Eternity! Immortality! There is no way to get around the fact of eternity and immortality. Eternity is before us, and we are immortal. We march together on an unending road, up or down.

When the billions of years have passed we still have our personal, conscious existence. An eternity stretches its ceaseless cycles before us, and on we go into a bottomless pit of darkness, or a topless heaven of life and glory. There is no greater folly than that immortal beings should dismiss from their minds their own ceaseless existence and fail to devote themselves to preparation for that great beyond which never ends.

When we read the Bible, with its laws, its severity, its records of punishment of the wicked, its mercies, the love of God, the sacrifices of Jesus Christ to save the lost, the gift of the church, the call of the ministry to lift up the voice of God through the earth, calling men to salvation, and then see droves of people brought into the membership of the church without conviction for sin, without repentance, without regeneration, without forsaking their worldly lives; the preacher wetting his hand in a bowl of water and patting them gently on the head, giving them the right hand of fellowship, it does not look much more like Bible salvation than the Catholic idolatry and worship of plaster-paris images in South America. It does not look quite so bad; it is surrounded and helped with a better civilization, but so far as redemption from sin, denying one's self and taking up the cross and following Christ, it is a miserable farce; it is deceiving souls.

The Methodist Church used to contend tremendously with sinful men and women, that they must repent; they must forsake their sins; they must separate themselves from every form of worldliness that was hurtful to spiritual life. They must be "born again." They must consecrate themselves and press on for a glorious experience, the crucifixion of the old carnal nature, and the perfect love of God shed abroad in the heart. The Holy Spirit set his seal upon this preaching. The power of God came down, and men noted for wickedness, drunken brawlers, disturbers of the peace, blatant infidels, were smitten with the power of God, born of the Spirit and became witnesses of Christ and pillars of strength in the churches with which they united.

The talk about the days of revivals having passed is cant. It is, I am about to say, a lie against the Holy Ghost. He is here in our world to perform the offices for which he was sent. He is just as able to convict of sin as he ever was. He uses the sword of the Spirit to divide asunder the sins which plague the soul; and that sword of the Spirit is the Word of God from the tongue and lips

IF WE KNEW

If we knew the cares and trials,
Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointments,
Understood the loss and gain—
Would the grim eternal roughness
Seem, I wonder, all the same?
Should we help where now we hinder?
Should we pity where we blame?

Ah! we judge each other harshly
Knowing not life's hidden force,
Knowing not the fruit of action
So less torpid at its source;
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good
And we'd love each other better,
if we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives
That surround each other's lives;
See the naked heart and spirit
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we should find it better,
Purer than we judged we should,
We should love each other better
if we only understood!

Could we judge all deeds by motives,
See the good and bad within,
Often, we should love the sinner,
All the while we loathe the sin.
Could we know the powers working
To overthrow integrity,
We should judge each other's errors
With more patient charity.

—Author Unknown.

of a holy ministry, touched, illuminated and burning with a live coal of divine fire. Let the ministry consecrate themselves, be cleansed by the blood of Jesus, filled with the Holy Ghost, and turn themselves loose as the ministers of the Almighty with a tremendous message against sin, and a great heart plea for salvation, and we'll see revivals. All this cant and falsehood about the days of revivals being passed will be hushed up and disappear.

Was the world ever more wicked than it is now! Did unbelief and every phase of skepticism ever flourish more than at the present time! Did we ever have more Sabbath desecration! Was there ever more lewdness, shameless nakedness and vulgarity, profanity, and wickedness of every sort, than we have now! We boast of education, but are not the educated in open rebellion against God! Are they not setting his Word aside! Are they not violating our prohibition and other laws! Are they not rioting in pleasure and pastimes which are contrary to spiritual growth! Are they not attacking the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures and leading the people astray from God! Will they not go naked and doomed to the Judgment Day as helpless and hopeless as other sinners! Will they not need to be called to repentance and to be regenerated as truly as their fellow-beings who may not use as good grammar in their conversation, or handle their knives and forks as accurately at their meals! I doubt if there are any people on this continent more rebellious against God, more indifferent to his laws, and more contemptuous of the Christ, than a very large percent of our educated people. Many of our universities are centers of skepticism and irreverence. No class needs deep, pungent repentance, glad surrender to God and regeneration more than our educated people.

These preachers who are telling you that the days of revivals are passed, who ridicule the heartcries and tears of penitent sinners, calling it "sob stuff," are traitors. They can't be ignorant of the fearful wickedness of the times. Ought not people who have spent their lives in rebellion against God and in violation of his laws, repent? Does not their wickedness call for tears of sorrow? Rich men who have oppressed the poor and made their fortune by all sorts of dishonest dealing, been the betrayers and seducers of girls, wronged and taken advantage of their fellows—they need to weep! Let the preacher show them the wickedness of their hearts, the demands of God, the coming judgment and an eternity of torment, and they will bow their heads and their broad shoulders will shake with penitent emotion. The preachers of this country ought to awake to their responsibility. They should remember the Bible teaches that if they fail to discharge their duty, the blood of the lost will be required of them. We need to bring intelligently to the consciences of the people living in these United States the facts of eternity, immortality, repentance, the new birth, and a life of consecration to God and devoted service to humanity.

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE.

NEVER in the history of the world has there been such general effort to educate all the people. It certainly is unfortunate for any human being to grow up without instruction that will enable them to read, to know something of past history, to become acquainted with the great men who have left written records behind them. Most of all, to be deprived of the privilege of reading the Word of God for themselves.

Here in our homeland of the United States we have, for sometime, been having a real revival of effort to reach and teach the illiterate. Any state is, and ought to be, ashamed to have within its borders a large percent of people who are unable to read and write. The remarkable improvement in the high schools of the southland is quite noticeable. The public school buildings are large, handsome, and well adapted to the purposes for which they are constructed. Our public high school architecture is better than that of our universities a half century ago.

There is a most commendable desire to educate the girls of the country. Most any father and mother feel if their daughters are

MESSAGES FROM GREAT SCHOLARS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Paul uses the term schoolmaster in relation to the law. Gal. 3:24, "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ."

We have had many schoolmasters in life's training and drilling. As we look back upon school days we find some outstanding teacher or teachers whose lessons and messages burned their way into the deeper strata of our being and thought.

Among my schoolmasters in my student days none made a deeper impression upon me than Austin Phelps, D.D., of Andover—not that I ever attended his classes, but his books how great were they! How grateful I am that in those good old days of orthodoxy his books were in the Course of Study. I have recently been reading his book entitled "My Portfolio," in which he discusses in his usual illuminating manner such subjects as the pastorate, creeds, amusements, preaching, missions, prayer, etc. It shall be my purpose in this article to pass on to my readers some of his great words upon those great subjects.

Writing on the Pulpit and Calvinism he makes a strong case when he says that it produced many giants. Speaking of such preachers as Knox of Scotland, South of London, Chalmers of Edinburgh, Edwards of Northampton, Hopkins of Newport, Davies of Virginia, Alexander of N. Y., Albert Barnes, of Philadelphia, Beecher of Boston, and Dr. Griffin, he says: "They were men of the Pauline stamp of intellectual coin. They were productive of profound religious awakenings. They created, and what is more, controlled such awakenings in the interest of thoughtful piety. This they did by their union of a rousing eloquence with a solid thinking power. They illustrate magnificently the practicability of uniting great hearts, with great intellects, deep feeling with deep thinking, intellectual conquest with the Baptism of the Holy Ghost."

Now let us stop a moment at this point to remark that in our day a number of our intellectual preachers (so called) evidently consider it beneath them to stick to the gospel in their preaching. If they take a text it is but to use it as a clothes peg upon which to hang the tawdry garments of their own eloquence or modern thinking upon. I have read a great deal of modern sermon literature and I regret to say that it is a rare thing nowadays to read a gospel sermon from any of the "advanced" thinkers of this age. Their sermons are little else than literary efforts or intellectual essays or philosophical dissertations.

Dr. Phelps, speaking of the "passing racket" and the "harpings of a few skeptical minds that our faith is defunct and our theology obsolete, says that it reminds him of Robert Southey's answer to a flippant critic who declared that the "Edinburgh Review" had crushed Wordsworth's "Excursion." "Crush the Excursion," said the brother poet, pointing to the mountain back of Wordsworth's home, "You might as well try to crush Skiddaw!" So we say to those dapper critics of the theology and of the pulpit which are built into our history, "As easily crush Skiddaw!" Yes, the "strength of the hills is his also."

Speaking of the preaching of Albert Barnes the great preacher of Philadelphia, Dr. Phelps says, that Albert Barnes was thoroughly possessed with the spirit of the early revivals of New England. His preaching was always expectant of revivals. His preaching disturbed his worldly church members. A lawyer said, "I must go where I can enjoy my religion; Mr. Barnes makes me feel that I haven't any." Hearing him preach, a member of his church said: "I was convicted of sin as I had never been before. I saw that my old hope was a false one; and oh how I hated the man for so breaking up my peace! If I had had any doubt of my lost state, the enmity of my heart to him was enough to undeceive me. I would have dismissed him in a week, if I could; but I dared not say a word, the people loved him so, and so I fumed and raged carrying hell within me, till the grace of God broke me down. I owe my soul to Albert Barnes."

"His pulpit was burdened with no self-contradictions, no flings at creeds, no ranting about character as opposed to theology, and no fogs which muddle hearers as to what he did believe."

The following pen picture of Albert Barnes in action in his Philadelphia pulpit will interest my preacher readers. Theme of the sermon was: "The love of God in the gift of a Savior." He showed that salvation originated in the love of God; then, that it was the grandest expression of love of which a finite mind could conceive; and finally, that it was planned and executed for the world. In the first two thirds of the discourse, he interwove argument and illustration, and emotive appeal, and most tender soliloquy, till the whole house was hushed and many eyes were swimming at the thought of the love of an Infinite Heart for a lost soul. The inherited faith, and the matured convictions, and the personal experiences of his hearers, were all committed to swell the current of sympathy with the preacher, which evidently held the assembly fast. Every eye was fixed upon him; every breath was mute; the very children looked up, awed by the presence of an unseen power, as his mellifluous voice rolled out like the vibrations of a bell his sonorous and swelling periods. Then when the still excitement, which nothing else produces like the preaching of the gospel, seemed to be at its height he lifted up his eyes, and glancing around till every corner of the house seemed as if penetrated by the light of God's countenance, and summoned to hear God's words with the single sharp perpendicular blow of the right-hand he said, "And I love to feel and will feel—it makes me love the gospel more and the Saviour more—that Christ died not for chattels and farthings; he died for souls, for men, for immortal minds . . . He who makes an arrangement by which any class of men is excluded from the gospel invades the prerogative of God, prohibits what he commands, and exposes himself to the wrath of the Almighty! Any system of things on earth which prevents the fair promulgation of the gospel is a violation of the arrangements of Heaven and will sooner or later meet the curse of the Most High." (He was denouncing slavery).

"The effect was of a singular sort," says Phelps, "such as I have never witnessed before or since in a magnetized assembly. There was no outcry, no springing to the feet, no speaking, . . . but the stillness suddenly deepened like the silence of the elements which precedes an earthquake, while a weight like that of an Atlantic tidal wave seemed to roll in as if engulfing every man, woman and child! For a moment we all seemed to lie there buried deeper than ever plummet sounded!"

THOUGHTS ON IMMORTALITY.

Dr. Phelps tells of a dying Captain in the Civil War asking, "Does heaven begin at once?" He then added: "I shall soon know all about it," and fell asleep.

A saintly person who for years did not know a painless hour, when asked what his most vivid conception of heaven was, replied: "Freedom from palpitation of the heart." Another said, "One thing I know; whatever else is before me, I am going out of this worn out body to be shut up in it no more forever."

In immortality we shall have,

1. An enlarged range and an augmented intensity of mental powers.
2. The soul's natural dominion over material things will be grandly developed.
3. An intensified consciousness of personal identity.
4. A new sense of the personality, the perfections, and the friendship, of God.

Said Dr. Candlish on his death-bed, "I have no overpowering emotions, but I have a great faith."

Dr. Phelps on the Creeds of the Church and the Doctrines of Grace.

"They are not matters of Philosophy. They are revealed facts. If one of them is compromised or denied they all sooner or later suffer. A believer in one of these matured and standard denominational creeds of the Church has no right so to use the liberty of individual interpretation as to throw out, or to obscure, any one of these structural statements. He has no right to claim that he accepts the creed 'for substance of doctrine' if he rejects any one of them."

"The church has the right to say that I shall not shelter my denial under cover of her creed, and claim therefore her fellowship and endorsement. The consensus of the Church Universal to the few central facts of the system of grace lifts them out of the range of individual liberty in interpreting the creeds which contain them. I have no right to use my liberty of interpretation to their destruction. There they stand, stamped with the impress of ages of Christian belief. There they must stand forever to all who would use those creeds as the expression of their faith and the passport as religious teachers to the confidence of mankind."

Dr. Ridout in the Orient.

Those of our readers who have failed to follow Dr. Ridout in his marvelous evangelistic work in the Orient have been unfortunate. I doubt if there have been any such revivals held by a visitor from this country as he has been holding, since the days of Bishop Taylor. Great crowds of the various churches have attended his ministry, and missionaries and native people in large numbers have been blessed at the altar of prayer, definitely regenerated and sanctified.

Dr. Ridout expects to return to the United States in time for the camp meeting season next summer and will be glad to give his services to any camp desiring them. He will not only have a camp message of full salvation, but he will have a wonderful message with reference to the blessing of God in the Orient, the open doors and the ready response of the pagan people to the gospel. I most heartily commend our brother to the camp meeting committees. He will have a message that we need to hear. The Lord has wonderfully used him in spreading Christian holiness among many pagan people. Our prayers follow him. His wife is with him and is efficient and abundant in labors. May the Lord bless and use them in India as he has in China.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

MILITANT HOLINESS.

Rev. Joseph H. Smith.

THERE was fighting after they entered Canaan. Those were Spirit-sealed believers at Ephesus whom Paul led into God's armory and bade them invest themselves with the "whole armor." And those are victor's crowns that Christ promises to the Overcomers in Revelation. Holiness is not only worship as of Abel, and walk as of Enoch, and work as of Noah, it is warfare as of David. Paul, that sample Christian—pattern for us all in closing his career, spake not only of a sacrifice he is ready to offer, and of a course he has finished; but of a fight he has fought.

Much of our warfare is defensive. The make-up of our armor suggests that. To the one aggressive weapon: "the sword of the Spirit," there are at least three that are defensive: the "helmet," the "breast-plate" and the: "shield." And when the apostle is urging us to full equipment thus, it is that we "may be able to withstand in the evil day." Earlier in the Epistle he advises us that "the days are evil." And this suggests times of siege and of conflict as of war. We are still close enough to the days of the great World War, to readily recall what sort of days they were—their jeopardy, their disorder, their distress, and the death and desolation that ensued. Well might such be called "evil days." And somehow with a sort of universal and dispensational extension this inspired apostle attaches this feature to the days in which we are to live the Christian life. "The days are evil."

"Ne'er think the victory won,

Nor lay thine armor down.

The fight of faith will not be done,

Till thou obtain the crown."

Possibly here in Ephesians 6:13, where "the evil day" is mentioned, a certain battle day is in mind. For though all is time of siege and the forces are ever at war, there are seasons of special conflict, which may well be likened to battle days. These special combats come alike to the individual Christian, who may be having a fierce fight right now while his brother sitting by him knows nothing about it, and also to the Church as a whole, when in a generation Christianity is subjected to an attack and onslaught or an assault, like some of the warfare the Philistines waged against God's people of old. And every loyal subject of Christ's Kingdom must be in readiness to fight the battles of the Kingdom as well as his own personal frays. There is an holy patriotism as well as a holy piety. When Paul announced that he had "kept the faith," we venture he meant that not only had he kept it in his own bosom, but he had kept it in the church. And it was not until "after his departure" he predicted that grievous wolves would enter to destroy the flock.

Mighty forces are arrayed against the "seed of the woman." Forces that surpass all those of "flesh and blood." Not only are these "the rulers of the darkness of this world," but in the high (or heavenly) places of religion and revelation or super-thought, they operate and militate as forces of "spirit wickedness." These, we must note, are inimical and militant attitude toward the Christ and Christianity. Not a few of the Lord's men and ministers are occupying themselves mostly in effort to offset or down hell's power as the rulers of the darkness of this world, and hence their reformation, civilization, legislation and humanitarian propagandas; and much credit may be claimed by the Church of Christ for its banishment of slavery, and restraint of various vices, and relief of many distresses for which Satan and the darkness of the world were responsible. But it rests upon us who have the seal of the Spirit, and who are "set for the spread of holiness over these lands," to wrestle with "Spiritual wickedness in high places." And that to the "casting down of imaginations and every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God."

In our day forces inimical to Christ, forces that are anti-Christ in an aggressive sense, have largely succeeded in enlisting the reasoning powers of men against the faith once delivered to the saints. Our children are attacked at school, our professors are faltering in the universities, our preachers are trembling in their pulpits and hoisting flags of truce. Church governments seem unable to conscript their men for warfare against error, and it requires such as have had the vision of the King in his glory, and whose lips have been touched with the live coal from God's altar, and whose sin has been cleansed and their iniquity purged to be ready to say: "Here am I; send me." Holiness waits not to be conscripted; but volunteers for Christ in the warfare of its day.

Satan's aggression against saints and the church is mostly in the realm of thought, of doctrine and of faith. Then error opens the door to vice. See how covetousness, fornication, and idolatry follows the doctrine of Balaam and Jezebel. (See Revelation Ch. 2 and 3). And no doubt the great growth of crime in our land, of looseness in society, and worldly and questionable practices in the church life of our day, is largely due to our failure to "withstand," in this time of battle, against the truth of Christ.

Nearly all the charges made against the five of the seven churches in Revelation which Jesus found not perfect before him, concerns the admission of false doctrine, like those we have referred to; and all of these errors and evils the Lord traced to Satan—speaking of his "synagogue," and his place of "dwelling," etc., and the like. From the beginning of time the old serpent's chief battle field against God and humanity has been in what we would call Theology, or the realm of truth concerning God and human responsibility. Hear his assumptuous statement to Eve in the garden of Eden, and that in contravention of what God had declared of himself in them. So in Timothy 4:1, we are advised that the departing of some from the faith have, through the seducing spirits, accepted the "doctrines of devils." Satan, as a war measure may counterfeit Inspiration; and posing as an "angel of light," he makes promises of great "Freedom of Thought" and at the same time, by his seducing agents—(for error propagators whether in Christian Science circles, or in University classrooms are masters in arts of blandishment, and sophistry) are entrapping the mind in tangles and snares, in fetters of wrong thought, from which few ever again get free.

These high and wicked powers hold councils of war against the saints. This is what is signified by the "gates of hell." The gateways of those strong ancient cities, were the seat of their princes; and there they formulated their policies and programs, and their military plans. Christ's language on this line indicates his recognition of purpose, and plot, and propagandas of the kingdom of darkness against his people, his church, and his name—and himself. And while, with the sword of the Spirit, we are called to execute much aggressive warfare in casting down the towers of vain imaginations and vicious reasoning which Satan has built in place of the revealed truth of God, we are nevertheless ourselves to be well panoplied against the wiles of the wicked one, with which he still hopes to destroy our souls. Truth, he can never destroy; but many that once had the light of truth he has beguiled and damned. The "gates of hell shall not prevail" against the Christ, the Son of God; but "we must contend earnestly for the faith once delivered unto the saints," for "the Just shall live by faith," and "if any man draw back," the writer to the Hebrews says, it is "unto perdition."

Our warfare then is for our lives, and for the lives of those we love. A warfare for home and native land in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Mark, then, well the fighting posture enjoined in Ephesians 6:18, 19, and this both for ourselves and the leaders or generals in the army of the Lord: "Praying always, with all prayer, and supplication in the Spirit and for me. . . that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the gospel."

Why You Should Give Books for Christmas.

The world is full of cheap, trashy books, and children and young people readily get a taste for them. Unless better ones are provided, how are they to know that the others are not so good? It was Channing who said "Books are the true levellers. They give to all who will faithfully use them, the society, the spiritual presence of the best and greatest of our race."

Besides the great money waste, toys are given today and gone tomorrow; a lot of candy and its like unfit the physical man; in numbers of instances money is spent for other luxuries which boys and girls do not need and which are not best for them in the building up of character.

The problem of this speedy age is to keep the home life contented, and we know of no better way than to invest in books which interest both parent and child. In this way many happy evenings are spent reading around the family fireside.

Books enlighten, they interest and entertain; they build character. It is the easiest thing in the world to discern between two persons as to which one reads, and reads the right kind of literature, and which one does not. The one who reads is, almost without an exception, bright, intelligent, cultured, and an inspiration. The one who does not read is stupid, unable to talk on any subject worth while.

Make your Christmas gifts count for the upbuilding of character and give books this Christmas.

But you ask, where may I secure the right kind of books? We suggest the following:

"The First Soprano," price $1.00, for any one from 12 to 50 years of age.

"Boys Who Made Good," price $1.00, for boys from 12 to 20.

There are four other books in this series equally as good:

"Overcoming Handicaps," $1.00.

"Stories of Grit," $1.00.

"Blazing New Trails," $1.00.

"Heroes of Peace," $1.00.

"Ideals for Earnest Youth," $1.00, for boys or girls from 12 to 20.

"Beautiful Girlhood," $1.00, for girls from 14 to 21.

"John Wesley the Christian Hero," 75c, for boys or girls from 10 to 20.

"Dwight L. Moody the Soul-Winner," 75c, for boys or girls from 10 to 20.

"Grandmother's Lily," "Arabella's Hen," "Harry the Newsboy," 35c each, for children from 6 to 12.

"Tiny Tots in Story Town," "Our Darling's A B C," 35c each, for children from 2 to 6.

Hurlbut's Story of the Bible, $2.00.

Egermeier's Bible Story, $2.00.

Aunt Charlotte's Story of the Bible, $1.00.

The above 3 books are suitable for reading in the home. The Pentecostal Publishing Company can furnish any of the above mentioned books.

GOD'S EAGLES.

"As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings; so the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange God with him." (Deut. 32:11, 12).

NOW we are going to talk about eagles—God's eagles. In the first place how does God make his eagles? Moses says that God has several stages in the process of making a spiritual eagle. The first thing, he stirs up the nest; as an eagle stirs up her nest, so the Lord stirs the nests of the people out of whom he designs to make eagles.

The eagle builds a large nest on the mountain crag, or in the highest tree that it can find, a great nest of sticks, and then it lines that with wool, skins of the animals which it destroys—rabbit skins and goat skins and sheep skins—making it soft; and the young eagles get fat and lazy. So when the time comes for the young eagles to fly, they are not disposed to get out of their nest, just like people exactly. So the mother bird with her bill picks out every soft thing in the nest and throws it outside and lets the eagle down on the sharp briars and thorns and sticks, and so the young bird is uneasy; it tries to find a soft spot and cannot find it. It gets on this side of the nest and there is a stick, and on that side there is another stick, and it cannot sleep, and it gets so miserable and unhappy that finally it is willing to get out and go somewhere else.

This is God's method with those who are going to be his eagles. God stirs the nest of every true saint. It may be the home life that God stirs and takes away the soft lining, takes away the property, takes away the loved one, the father, mother, sister, brother, husband, wife, parents or children. He stirs the church nest, makes things unpleasant and disagreeable, so that we find no peace or rest in the home church. He stirs up the neighborhood and digs away the soft things and the pleasant things, and the nice things and makes life miserable, so that we are perfectly willing to move out and go anywhere or any place, north or south, to some other neighborhood, some other surroundings. He stirs up our theology, our notions, our opinions, our beautiful dreams, and all kinds of crucifixion come.

All the apostles had their nests stirred, and all the patriarchs and all the reformers and all the evangelists and all the pastors in some way or other have had their nests stirred,—the social nest or the family nest, or the church nest. In some way or other God stirs the nest and lets us down on hard things that draw the blood, that make us ache, that make us suffer. And so, friends, this is the way that God works and is working. Go back twenty-five, thirty or forty years and see how you were fixed; look at the change in your life from then to now; see how God has taken all the props from under you—that church, that preacher, that Christian, that piece of property. God took away the props until you lay down on hard rocks, thorns and briars. He tore up the nest. That is God's method.

God not only stirs the nest of his saints, but he fluttereth over them. When God allows trouble, sorrow, poverty and desolation to come to us, and we are sad, and weep and cry and look down to find something to lean upon, then God flutters over us—the sound of wings. God does it to draw attention to himself, to get us to look away from him, to look away from the coffin and the grave, and the old house, and the deserted farm, and the departed friend, and when God can get our attention, then there comes a change. The mother might flutter all day long, but the young birds would never look up while lying on a sheepskin or a rabbit skin. But when it is all thorns and briars and sticks, they look up.

The next thing God does is, spreadeth abroad his wings. God unfolds his magnitude, his attributes, his majesty, his might, his power, his glory. I shall never forget when we lost everything we had, after trying to save a little for twenty odd years. Everything was swept away, and we were two thousand dollars in debt without a dollar to pay it with. Then God began to reveal himself to us, and my wife said one day, "I believe God is a living God." We all say that we believe that, but I never knew what it meant until he began to spread abroad his wings. When God shows you the amplitude of his providence, the unspeakableness, the greatness, the vastness of his resources, it is a revelation to your soul. You have read it and believed it all your life with the intellect, but that doesn't count like it does when God shows you the magnitude of his grace.

The eagle spreads abroad her wings, and then the young bird sees that the mother is larger than the nest; and when God shows us the resources that he has, and that these resources are larger than all our needs for body and soul and spirit, for time and eternity; when God shows us that more than we need is, in God, provided for us, what a sense of assurance comes into our souls! When I had not a dollar on earth—only fifteen cents—and a family to support, I felt just as safe and safer than I do now. I felt that Almighty God was just as able and willing to help me as though I had a million dollars. The nest was gone, everything was gone; but God showed me his long wings, "He spreadeth abroad his wings." Are you an orphan? Is your husband dead? Is your wife dead? Is your mother or father dead? Are you poor? Are you hated? Are you cast out? Are you ostracised and minimized and undersized? Are you perplexed? If you will get your eyes on God and God alone, you will not have a care, you will not have an anxiety. All we need is to see God. "Spreadeth abroad her wings." When God comes to a soul and begins to unfurl his attributes, unfurl his inexhaustableness, and draw the vision of the soul away from briars and thorns and rocks and distress and sin and everything on earth or in hell, and you begin to see God and let God unfold himself to your soul, oh, what a wonderful epoch that is!

The next step: "She taketh them and beareth them on her wings." The first is, stir the nest, tear it all to pieces. That is what God did to the Christian Church in Jerusalem. He stirred their nest, and they went out everywhere preaching the gospel. They never would have gone fifty miles if God had not stirred their nest in Jerusalem. He stirred the nests of Luther and Wesley and Whitefield, and my nest. What for? To make us go. The mother bird will spread out her wings from tip to tip and lay them right flat down, and the young eagle will step from the briars and thorns and sharp sticks, and climb up on mother's wings. It is only a step from the sharp sticks to mother's soft wings, and it will step out and put its claws in her wings and hold on to her feathers, and when she begins to shake her wings, it takes a stronger hold. The little bird can look back and see the tree and the nest, but around and around the mother goes in the clear blue sky, and after she has soared one thousand, two thousand, three, four, five thousand feet, she will give a sudden lurch, and off falls the little bird, and oh, how it tumbles and rolls, and puts out its wings and beats the air, and the mother bird watches, and when that young bird is about half way down to the earth, she shoots with the accuracy of a bullet and gets the bird, and around and up she goes; and that thing is repeated until that little bird knows how to fly.

So God stirs our nest, and we weep and sob and cry,—money gone, friends gone, church gone, nobody loves me; then Jesus Christ stretches out one great wing, and we begin to take hold of him, and then he moves out and up and away. My, my! it is a regular holiness camp meeting. When the Lord has taken us about five thousand feet high, he gives a lurch. "My! Oh! What shall I do? I thought I was sanctified; I thought I was going to heaven, and now it seems to me that my religion is gone. Down, down, down; the devil will get me." God is watching from the skies, and when we get almost down, he shoots under us and bears us around and around, higher and higher, until we get to where we have learned the lesson. "Why, Lord, forgive me. I was leaning on my sanctification; I was leaning on the camp meeting; I was leaning on what You had done for me. Now I see, Lord, I dare not lean on anything in this world, not on my feelings and shouts and blessings; not on what You have done in the past, but I must trust You and live by faith." When we get there we learn to fly. Lean on the Lord and him alone. That is God's way to make us eagles.

Then God can turn us loose in a thunder storm or at midnight, or on a cold winter day with the wind blowing forty miles an hour. The eagle has been known, in a storm where the wind blew sixty miles an hour, to set his face right in the face of the blinding storm and beat his way like a sailing ship right against the storm. God teaches us how to fly, and how to go through storms and keep alive and pressing on, willing to live by faith, to trust God for soul and body, to trust him for all things.

God stirs the nest and makes you fly, Then you begin to weep and cry;

His hand has failed and down you go,
With naught in sight but rocks below.

A dreadful sight and fast the fears
Take place as all hope disappears:
Oh, how you miss the downy nest
But God has stirred it for the best.

He knows your lack of faith and trust,
He knows how for vain things you'd lust,
He knows you'd lean on men and creeds,
And would not to his Word take heed.

So from your nest he picked the down,
Left naught but thorns and briars around;
Then gladly you stepped on his wing,
And to this thought you'd always cling.

But still on this you could not grow
The ways of God to fully know;
'Tis time to exercise your wings,
And get the faith that launching brings.

So quick he lurches, down you go,
And help you cannot see nor know;
Then to your wings you swiftly take,
While fears increase your heart to break.

Far down, down, down, you swiftly go
Until you're near the rocks below;
Then quick beneath your trembling frame
He darts: you're safe from care and pain.

This lesson he repeats quite oft,
Until you learn to soar aloft
Above all troubles, trials and waves,
Until you learn Christ always saves.

ASBURY COLLEGE.

THE FIFTY NEEDIEST STUDENTS.

IF the readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD could sit at the business manager's desk in Asbury College, and day after day read the piteous appeals that come from young men and women from all over this country, and indeed from many parts of the world, asking for some way whereby those without money and without any prospects of aid can obtain a college education, under holiness auspices in order that they may be fully equipped to go out to preach the gospel of full salvation to a dying world, as God has called them to do; I am sure that the money would pour in to such a degree that we could say to every such young man or woman, "Come to Asbury. Those interested in the spread of the gospel have provided for you, and you will be seen through your four college years."

A woman writes from the mountains of Tennessee: "Since I have for some years enjoyed the experience of sanctification, it is with the utmost grief of heart that I find my children growing up without proper educational advantages. I have four sons. As small children they responded to my teaching and prayers; but now as they are growing up, being naturally active and of course wanting company their own ages, they are finding as companions certain young men in the neighborhood who are bootlegging and engaged in many vicious pursuits. I feel I must get these boys in Asbury College where they will be with companions who know and love God; where holiness is being preached, and where there is a great spirit of prayer over the entire campus. Can you not find some way whereby they can work their way through school? I am a widow without resources, but I would be willing to live in a barn or chicken house, if I could only see my boys through Asbury College."

A letter from a private in the British Army in India: "I have but recently been saved and sanctified and now feel that God has called me to preach the gospel. Asbury College has been recommended to me and I write to inquire whether there is any help for me to get through. It will cost me heavily to come to America and my resources are small."

A letter from a preacher friend: "There is a young man in my church who has been beautifully sanctified. He feels now that God has called him to special Christian service. He is under a serious physical handicap as a result of an accident which prevents him from doing ordinary work. Yet his character is such that I feel he must have the advantage of a college education at Asbury."

It is not only letters. This year there arrived a fine young man whose father is at the head of a holiness mission work in the South. His father is on a strictly faith basis. The work is but beginning. It is interdenominational in character and the monetary return is the slightest. This young man came in this fall and said: "I feel that I must have my college education in order that I may be ready to preach the gospel of full salvation. My life is wholly yielded to the will of God. I am willing to do anything, but I literally have no money beyond the $10.00 registration fee for my room. I am willing to do any work if you will give me a chance to enter."

A statement from one coming in to register at the beginning of this year: "Because I was left an orphan in very early boyhood, I had few educational opportunities. For the last seven years I have been preaching the gospel, and now realize that I must have a college education to give my best service in this field. I started for school with a little money saved up, but my wife was taken with a serious illness which called for hospital treatment, and I have landed here without money. I must have six years, two years in the academy and four years in college. Is there any way that you can help me to enter?"

A statement: "I have been going to a very worldly college where every influence against Christian living is rampant. This summer through the influence of an Asbury graduate I was led to the altar in a camp meeting and was converted. I feel now I simply must not re-enter my former college with all the influences against my new found experience. At the same time my conversion was so recent that I have saved no money. I have enough work at the other college town to pay all my way through. I have been self-supporting, since I was thirteen when my father died. Can you not let me enter and earn my way? I have nothing to pay down."

Asbury College is not yet equipped to furnish industrial work in such an amount that young people can earn their total expenses. Everyone of proper character and an ambition to get a college education is given an opportunity to earn a part of their expenses. It is probably not wise that the entire expenses be earned while studying, for this is a severe handicap. A college student's earning capacity is usually very low. They are classed as unskilled labor very properly, and it is obviously impossible to work six or eight hours per day, and at the same time attend classes and devote the proper time to study and preparation, to say nothing of the all-important time required for chapel, prayer meetings, revival services and special preaching and evangelistic events throughout the college year.

The fund which we need is a revolving one. The students borrow money, and as they are out earning money, return it to be re-loaned again and yet again.

We need a large fund for this purpose; but I am making an appeal now for Asbury's fifty neediest students, at present in college, who must have a specified sum to finish the year. We can well use $10,000 at once for this purpose. If the subscriptions to the fund were in excess of that amount, it would enable us to write to some who have applied for aid and to whom we have been unable to say, "Come on" because we have not the money to help them. Some of these last are indeed worthy of your assistance. Will you not respond to this appeal and see to it that Asbury's fifty neediest students shall be assured, that they can complete the year which they have begun by faith? What a wonderful investment it is to send out young men and women filled with the Holy Spirit, fitted with a splendid college education, to spread out in the pulpits, and missionary posts, and the evangelistic work, to carry the preaching of holiness to the world. May we suggest that you make a response now while God puts this upon your heart? It is the aim of Asbury College that every young man and woman fully surrendered to God's will who applies for a college education shall have that education; and lack of money shall not interfere.

Just What Your Daughter Needs.

It is well in selecting presents for our children to know what is best for them, and we are taking the liberty of telling the mothers who read this paper of a wonderfully attractive book that has sold by the thousand. The title is as attractive as the book—Beautiful Girlhood—and the contents of the book are such as will bless and encourage your girl in her struggles through those transitional years from girlhood to womanhood. Many of our girls do not do because they do not know; this book treats of the various phases of a girl's life that will help her to mature into a bound in blue cloth, with extra cover, has splendid, readable print, and sells for only $1.00. Do not fail to order this for your beautiful, modest, noble woman. The author says, "This little book is born of a desire to help and encourage our girls who are struggling with the problems that come up in teens." Such topics as "Character Building," "A Sunny Disposition," "Sincerity," "A Christian," "Choosing a Lifework," and other equally interesting subjects are treated in this opportune book. The book is beautifully daughter, or niece, or other young women friends you may have, and it will be sure to please and profit. MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

EXPLORING THE BIBLE.

By Frank E. Gaebelein.

In one of the most remarkable contributions to the popular and at the same time thoroughly cultured and rational study of the Bible in our generation, Mr. Gaebelein has combined real scholarship, good writing, thorough acquaintance with the latest researches, and university atmosphere and attitudes of today, with a conservative, evangelical faith that rests the whole case on the immovable foundations of the Rock of Ages, and the inviolable integrity and inspiration of that Word of God which "cannot be broken." It is amazingly rich in what it actually gives the reader. It answers innumerable questions that are constantly arising in practical Bible study. A Bible class might well spend a winter studying this entire book, chapter by chapter, and such a class would find it one of the most unusual and fascinating studies they had ever had, no matter how familiar they might think they were before with the Bible. The discussion of "Inspiration," in Chapter III, is thorough, convincing, and satisfying. There is nothing vague, or indefinite, or "up in the air," about the book. It is so delightfully practical, practicable, and concretely useful in its working suggestions for studying the Bible for oneself. Such a chapter as "Seven Guiding Principles for Bible Study" is immensely valuable; the ordinary student can readily memorize these seven principles, and will find them useful for the rest of his life. The fresh and thorough exposition of the great Covenants of the Bible, from page 120 to page 147, make a contribution to Bible study that is worth its weight in gold. The book is marked by sanity and restraint. It is not overdone. It is positive, but not dogmatic. It is not oracular. But it leaves the reader in not the slightest doubt of what the author believes, and why he believes it. The author has handled wonderfully well the historical sketch of the Canon, about which most Christian people are densely ignorant, and concerning which there is so much misunderstanding among the rank and file. The study of the significance of certain numbers in the Scriptures is convincing and satisfying, and does not make the mistake, so often made in this connection, of carrying things too far and forcing conclusions that are untenable. The book is easy to read, delightfully profitable, and one that has been tremendously needed. Price $1.50.—S. S. Times.

The Best Witness Testifies.

VANGELINE Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army in the United States, has lifted her voice on the subject of Prohibition, joining her sentiments to those of Bishop Manning, Dr. Cadman and other Church leaders of note in this country. Her message is directed to the public through the Anti-Saloon League to make clear the stand of the Salvation Army in the contest now raging between those who favor a bone-dry nation and those who would bring about the return of light wines and beer through a modification of the Volstead Act.

AMERICA HAS SOLVED THE DRINK EVIL.

"The Salvation Army was born under a lamp-post in London more than half a century ago," said Miss Booth, "mainly because there existed rum shops spreading misery, suffering and poverty among the masses, and now after all these years of hard fighting to protect the home, emancipate neglected children and wipe from our national escutcheon the disgrace of all the evils arising from drink, it is good to find that the people of America have come to a correct judgment concerning the drink evil. It is unthinkable that the country will ever return to the deadly saloon system and a resumption of liquor vending.

WHAT ABRAHAM LINCOLN SAID.

"This verdict was anticipated many years ago when Abraham Lincoln wrote:

"Of our political revolution of '76 we are all justly proud. In it was the germ which vegetated, and still is to grow and expand into the universal liberty of mankind.

"Turn now to the temperance revolution. In it we shall find a stronger bondage broken, a viler slavery manumitted, a greater tyrant deposed; in it more of want supplied, more disease healed, more sorrow assuaged; by it no orphans starving, no widows weeping; by it none wounded in feeling, none injured in interest.

"And when the victory shall be complete—when there shall be neither a slave nor a drunkard on the earth—how proud the title of that land which may truly claim to be the birthplace and the cradle of both these revolutions that shall have ended in that victory!"

THE SALVATION ARMY KNOWS.

"Surely it will be conceded that the Salvation Army knows something about the evils of strong drink. My revered father who founded the organization, began his life's work of salvaging men and women in and about the bars of saloons of England. It was to combat the degradation and vice which are inevitable consequences of liquor drinking, that he fought to rescue souls in the slums of big cities. From that day to this, with ever increasing vigor, the Salvation Army has held rigidly to its purpose and it feels it had a great deal to do with the enactment of prohibition in America.

"It is an illogical thing to say that because a new law has not worked like magic, it is best to cast it aside and return to the original state of vice which because of its awfulness prompted the enactment of that law. Such a thing would make civilization march backwards. It is rather the duty of the citizen, the state and the government, to find ways and means to make the law work out its unquestioned benefits to humanity, and if anyone says it cannot be done, that person sure enough is the one who cannot do it. But it can be done. It is being done.

"Enemies of the Volstead Act waste their time when they try to tell organizations like the Salvation Army that national prohibition will not work, or that it is impractical and more vicious in its application than the effect of unbridled public drinking. As a matter of fact, vast changes have come about since prohibition and to undo them would be to strike a blow at every fireside and every industry in this country. If prohibition has lifted up a new element of rum-drinkers who can afford to pay bootleggers' prices for immature or poisonous liquor, then indeed it is but a passing condition that must soon disappear. If it is now an indoor sport among those who can afford to throw away their money, to carry flasks, give cocktail parties and flout the prohibition law as a matter of amusement, then it is but the clatter of teacups in the boulevards that is distracting the public, and has nothing to do with the humble side streets and the great open spaces which make up the real America, because of their overwhelming majority.

DRUNKEN MEN ARE GONE.

"Why try to tell the Salvation Army that the park benches are crowded with drunken men as they were before prohibition when we used to gather them in on Thanksgiving Day, for example, and fight to salvage them? They are gone. The benches still remain, but the occupants are not drunk any more and are climbing upward to better things while the public rushes by all unheeding. Why try to tell us that workingmen spend their wages before their families can get the money for food, and that men beat their wives and children as in the old days? It simply is not the case.

"It is true that the work of organizations for human betterment and for the alleviation of suffering everywhere, goes on apace, but it is not because of any liquor issue. Prohibition changed many phases of our work but as a matter of fact released us so far as the saloon harvest of wreckage was concerned, so that we could redouble our efforts on other problems. Orphans and door-step babies still abound; young women, thrown against the world unfairly, still require help; old men and women still reach the day when they cannot work and we must sustain them; but the cash balances in your savings banks, the percentage of families that are now owning their own cottages, the crowded condition of our public and private schools, and even the fact that about twenty million automobiles are propelled around the country today, all refute the statement of the drink advocate who says that crime has been increased, secret drinking more widely spread and children inspired to break all laws, because prohibition is here. With prohibition gone you would have a third less savings in the banks, half as many cozy and independent homes, and one-tenth the radio sets, one-fourth the automobiles. The money tied up in those things came from somewhere. It came from the channel which hitherto led to the pockets of the brewers, distillers and grog-shop keepers.

DRINKING A FAD OF IDLE RICH.

"Find me one industrialist of importance in this or in any other country who will say he prefers to have his employees drink liquor, rather than remain in sobriety—it cannot be done. And the employees are not clamoring for liquor as the agitators would have the public believe. The workingman is not interested in liquor. When the saloon closed he became interested in his family, in the education of his children, in the acquirement of a home and in the attainment of those fundamental things that make life most attractive. It is the man and woman higher up, who do not have to work for the money they can produce for the bootlegger, who are doing the drinking and the talking.

"I can even see if the idle rich persist in making a sport of the prohibition law that the day may come when the boulevardiers, vastly in minority, may have to be salvaged out of their attractive places for secret drinking and rescued if possible by the Salvation Army and other agencies for relief, just as the poor saloon victim used to be. In that event the sober, busy and progressive working classes will automatically become the aristocrats of the day and society, so called, will be turned upside down in its system of organization. Those trying now to repeal the law against liquor are wasting their time. That law was gained at too great a cost in years of toil and struggle, sacrifice and suffering to be lost to a handful of noisy bootleg patrons, backed of course by the old time rum investments.

LAW WILL STAND AS CHURCH HAS STOOD.

"The prohibition law will stand just as the Church has stood and still stands. Both have received many assaults. Sobriety, personal or national, is not an evil.

"There is no issue of human rights or liberty to be considered in the prohibition matter at all. There is a law against murder, and it would hardly do to say that because the wanton taking of human life is looked upon with disfavor and forbidden by statute, the rights and the liberty of the public have been violated. That is all rubbish. Liquor is harmful when used for beverage purposes and everybody knows it. Open up the gate for light wines and beer, and you have a new type of saloon with the old-time harvest of misery, cruelty, poverty, suffering and crime, full upon us again. Regulation is impossible, if by that is meant public drinking where nobody can get drunk and spend money for rum which ought to be spent on the home.

BILLIONS AT STAKE IN FIGHT FOR BEER.

"Probably many billions of dollars are at stake in the present fight to bring back light wines and beer. If the liquor were to be given away, instead of sold for a profit, the backers of the movement to modify or repeal the Volstead Act would disappear over night. That shows clearly why the fight is now on. Prohibition is a success and because of that fact the fight is on to upset it. Enforcement hurts somebody's financial interests. It always does. This government can enforce prohibition if it will and the way it can do so is to let the present boulevard and drawing room fad die out, then calmly and without any fuss deal with the law breakers just as those who murder or indulge in any other such forms of 'human liberty' are dealt with."

Help Some Boy to Find Christ

This Christmas. Just at this time we have gotten hold of one of the most attractive Testaments, just the thing for a boy to carry in his pocket. There is a place for the name and address; three pages devoted to telling one How to Become a Christian; then two songs, one "Carry Your Bible," and another, "Jesus is a Friend of Mine." The music is written with the songs.

There are a number of attractive colored illustrations, and for a small Testament, the type excels any we have seen for clearness, which makes it easy to read. The chapter numbers are in figures, and the binding is a beautiful dark green imitation leather.

This is just the Testament for a Christmas gift; it is so attractively gotten up that a boy just cannot resist reading it. The price is only 50c.

The Illuminated Bible Story Book

For a child from 7 to 12 years old. It is handsomely bound, has an attractive jacket, presentation page, is beautifully illustrated in colors, printed on enamel paper in a beautiful dark blue ink, large, regular old folks type. Eighteen Bible stories are interestingly told, beginning with "Noah and the Ark" and ending with "Jesus Before Pilate." A little 10-year-old girl stepped into our office just a few days ago, picked up a copy of this book and was soon lost in it, the stories were so interesting. Give it for Christmas. Price 60c.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

SYCHAR'S MISSIONARY SERVICE.

One of the most outstanding services of Sychar camp for the season of 1929 was the annual Missionary service which was held at the two o'clock hour on Wednesday, Aug. 14. Brief mention of this service was made in a previous letter, but now a little more in detail.

After a very inspiring season of congregational singing in which those old standard numbers, "The Call for Reapers" and "Rescue the Perishing," were sung, Rev. C. L. Lewis led us to the throne of grace. Then the Misses Wilcox and Budman sang "Follow Me" with such spirit and unction that the whole congregation was deeply moved.

Rev. C. T. Goodwin presided and introduced Miss Ford, missionary to Africa, who spoke briefly, but with such power and earnestness that all were deeply impressed. Miss Ford brought to our attention the fact that out of the great population of Africa only nine out of every one hundred are touched in any way by the gospel; that one-third of these are Roman Catholic; that of those remaining under Protestant influence one-third are modernist; and that of the two-thirds remaining who are fundamentalist in belief only about one-third of these teach holiness. So that in all only about one in every one hundred are reached by holiness evangelism. These facts should cause us to prayerfully consider our duty towards the holiness missionary movements now being carried on in the foreign fields.

Miss Ford is returning to Africa as an interdenominational missionary to preach holiness to the teeming millions who have never heard of Jesus, of whom there are two hundred millions in the Tanganyika district alone. The prayers of the Sychar people will follow Miss Ford as she returns to Africa.

Following Miss Ford's address Prof. and Mrs. Wells sang beautifully and with such feeling, "I wonder if I have done my best for Jesus," that we all were constrained to take an inward look and to ask ourselves that question.

The main address of the afternoon was that of Miss Leona Aggola who represented the National Holiness Association and its work in China. Space forbids an extensive report of Miss Aggola's message, for it was indeed a message coming direct from the field in China. The outstanding facts of Miss Aggola's address were that the field served by the National Holiness Association is an inland district 81 miles away from a railroad. She also pictured the awful condition of the people there,—heathenism having no music, no song, no Sunday, no schools, no physicians, nurses, or hospitals, no institutions for the unfortunate, nothing but darkness, helplessness and sorrow, and all without hope.

The people subsist on nearly nothing, eating soup prepared with chaff, having a fire only occasionally, and almost continually cold and hungry. This condition has existed since the time of Abraham until about nineteen years ago when the National Holiness Association entered this field with the gospel.

Miss Aggola emphasized the three main points of contact with the people, viz., Tracts, Chapels, and by Tents. Through these three agencies the gospel is being carried to the two hundred millions in the area fifty miles square, and for which Dr. Woodford Taylor whom Sychar people support on this needy field is responsible for sixty-five thousand. Miss Aggola is supported by a Dakota Camp and goes back gladly and enthusiastically to her work soon. She concluded with a fine tribute to the character and work of Dr. Taylor whose work and support is understood and sponsored by Sychar people.

One of the unique features of this service was the offering which is an annual event, the proceeds to be directly applied to the work of Rev. Woodford Taylor, of whom we have already written. This year no public canvass or collection was taken. It was suggested by Rev. Goodwin that it be made a subject of special prayer and that pledges be made on cards which were furnished. On their way out of the tabernacle these pledges were deposited in receptacles at the doors. No begging, no haranguing, just a prayerful consideration and a following of the leading of the Spirit of God. The result justified the method for a total of $684 in cash and pledges was received which afterwards was raised to about $800.

The most touching and perhaps the greatest feature of the service was the altar service. Rev. Goodwin, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, we are sure, gave an earnest appeal for volunteers to the foreign field, and very quietly, and with perfect understanding of the issues involved, thirty-two young people deliberately bowed at the altar definitely dedicating themselves to the foreign work, whenever and wherever the Spirit should open the way. No undue pressure or urgency was exerted, but these young people quietly and one by one stepped out in definite consecration to the missionary work. It was surely a beautiful and impressive scene. We felt as if we were in the very presence of heaven itself.

After a wonderful season of prayer led by Miss Aggola and Rev. Goodwin, Miss Anna McGhie the worker among the young people, and under whose ministry many of these young people found salvation, closed the service with a few excellent and appropriate remarks, and Dr. George Bennard, the author of "The Old Rugged Cross," dismissed us.

We were loath to disperse and felt as we imagine Peter, James and John felt upon the Mount of Transfiguration when they said, "Let us build up here three tabernacles and abide here." May we witness many more such inspiring, uplifting, fruitful services.

AWAY OVER IN LOUISIANA.

I attended the South Georgia Conference held at Columbus, Ga., last November. Before the conference began I was in the city of Columbus preaching the Gospel in the North Highland Methodist Episcopal Church. After preaching at this church a week we went to the Nazarene Tabernacle on Rose Hill. The tabernacle was a temporary headquarters for the Nazarenes while their fine church building there was being constructed. Brother Huff is the pastor of the Nazarene folks in Columbus and is doing a fine work.

While in Columbus we had the privilege of speaking over the radio. It was "something new under the sun" for me. I took for my text, Acts 2:4, "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost," and spoke on the "Fullness of the Holy Ghost." I was invited to speak again the following Sunday night. I gladly accepted the invitation and took for my text Pilate's great question, "What shall I do then with Jesus who is called the Christ?" Mrs. Hysell sang, "They led him away to be crucified."

Since the first of this year I have been in meetings in Kansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana and West Virginia. I have not kept account of the seekers, but have seen many bow at the altar of prayer for pardon or holiness.

At present I am at Gibsland, La. Gibsland is in the Northwest part of the State. We are supplying the Gibsland charge until conference which is to be held at LaFayette, beginning Nov. 20. The Lord has blessed us since coming here and we have seen not a few bow at the foot of the cross seeking pardon, reclamation or sanctification.

I earnestly request the prayers of all who may read these lines to pray for me that I may be used of God in bringing many precious souls to our Wonderful Redeemer.

Rev. Harvey B. Hysell.

REPORT OF JOS. H. LEWIS.

For three years we have been very busy, as Conference Evangelist of the Kentucky Conference of the M. E. Church. Last year we held seventeen series of meetings. Since conference two good meetings have been held. The first at Baldwin, near Richmond, Ky., where ten were saved and five sanctified. The other was held at Mt. Carmel Academy (Baby Asbury) in Breathitt Co., Ky. Here about thirty were either saved or sanctified. Eternity alone will tell the complete story of the labor of love and the results of the sacrifice of Miss Lela G. McConnell and the six faithful, consecrated workers associated with her in that fine missionary work there. That work is one of the finest and yet the most daring faith venture I have ever witnessed. God is mightily setting his seal upon the work of the school.

Will you pray for this great work of the Lord in the mountains of Kentucky, and for me, that God may use me mightily in the days ahead.

Joseph H. Lewis.

TAMPA, FLORIDA.

Rev. C. M. Dunaway has just closed one of the most spiritual and successful revivals ever held in the First United Brethren Church here in Tampa. Many were reclaimed, saved and baptized with the Holy Ghost. People who had been in the church for years confessed that they had never been saved, though they thought they were all right. The pastor and a few of his consecrated people had been praying for a year for just such a meeting and the Lord gave the "exceeding abundantly above" results. Only eternity will reveal the results of a meeting of this nature. Rev. Dunaway is safe, sane and sound in all of his work. He is fearless and regards not the person of man. Any one really wishing a revival will make no mistake in calling this man of God.

W. D. Mitchell, Pastor.

REPORT OF MEETINGS.

From Sept. 29 to Oct. 13 we assisted the First Evangelical Church of Stockton, Ill., in a revival meeting. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Van Evera, a fine man of God and a contender for the faith, did the preaching. We had charge of the music and young people's work, and assisted the pastor in his calling on the sick and shut-ins bringing them the gospel in song. Bro. Van Evera's messages were freighted with the truth of the Gospel and it was evident that the "Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." There were between fifteen and twenty who knelt at the altar for either salvation or consecration, the majority of whom were blessed.

On Sunday, Nov. 10, we closed a three-weeks campaign with our home church, the First Evangelical Congregational Church, of Highland Park, Ill. Our co-laborer for the first two weeks was Evangelist D. E. Luttrell, of Chicago. He is a very fine preacher and has a great God. His sermons were convincing and compelling. Due to a pre-arranged engagement, Bro. Luttrell had to go on to another meeting, so the pastor, Rev. C. G. Unangst, preached the last week, alternating with a few outside speakers.

Our young people's work here was very successful. The outstanding feature was the splendid program which was given at the close of the campaign.

Gospel songs and choruses as well as many scripture passages were given by the youngsters to the delight of the large attendance for the occasion.

About fifty seekers responded in this meeting. Whole families were saved; young people were saved; older people were revived. Many were the testimonies of blessing and help received. Plans are already being made for a similar meeting for 1930, and there is a desire to have us to again assist in the music and young people's work.

Besides these campaigns we have done some work at the jail of our county, singing the gospel and telling the story of Jesus and praying with the prisoners and pointing them to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. On another occasion we gave an hour's program of sacred music at the great Government Hospital near Great Lakes, Ill. This program was greatly appreciated by those ex-service men who hear so much worldly music, and so little about Jesus.

We are at present engaged in a campaign with the First Evangelical Church of Barrington, Ill. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Davis, who has recently accepted the office of Superintendent of Men at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, is doing the preaching. We are in the midst of a great Visitation Campaign, going out into the byways and compelling them to come. Our young people's work here bids fair to be a great part of this meeting, having started with an enrollment of 210. God is working.

We have a few open dates which we would like to fill with churches wishing help along the lines which we have been describing. Anyone wishing to correspond with us may address us at our home address which is Box 204, Highland Park, Ill.

The Musical Whites.

INTERDENOMINATIONAL HOLINESS CONVENTION.

The fourteenth annual Brooklyn Interdenominational Holiness Convention met according to previous announcements Nov. 1 and closed Nov. 10. The situation was good and close to the great marts of trade. Rev. W. Nichols, pastor of the Bond Street Presbyterian Church, was very courteous to the people and was glad to have an opportunity to serve the convention again as he had done years ago.

Rev. John Brasher, evangelist from old Alabama, a Methodist Episcopal minister, and Rev. Raymond Browning, Nazarene evangelist from Columbus, O., together with Col. Brengle of the Salvation Army, made up the main speakers daily. Rev. A. L. Whitcomb, of the Free Methodist Church, was unwell and could not attend. He was the invited help from the Free Methodist Church.

Rev. Brasher is a great preacher. Rev. Browning is a forceful personality and his descriptive powers are splendid. Col. Brengle is always interesting and sweet as heaven itself. Mrs. Thomas had charge of the 9 A. M. Fellowship Meetings daily and our sister is a real Bible teacher of prominence being also a returned missionary from Korea. Rev. Alvin Young was in charge of the music, besides he is a superior soloist. He was assisted by Mrs. Elsie Davies, Mrs. Florence Miller, these two sisters have very superior voices and are altar workers for God and his cause. Mrs. John Norberry presided at the organ and piano with ability. Brother Cooke gave fine talks at 1:30 P. M., twice during the convention on Prophecy and was so well liked that it is very probable that he will take the whole time next year from 1:30 P. M. to 2:30 proving his thesis that has gripped him for thirty-five years.

This great convention was born in the heart of our dear Sister C. H. Cooke fourteen years ago. Sister Cooke is the Corresponding Secretary of the Convention and has spent her money and given her time to this work for all the years. Surely God has been with her and her corps of workers over the land mightily for many souls have been saved and sanctified during these meetings. She has maintained a Tuesday afternoon prayer meeting at Atlantic Avenue fourteen years in the Salvation Army Tabernacle, which place is called the Power House for the Interdenominational Holiness Convention.

The kitchen was presided over by three spiritual Free Methodist women from Rochester, N. Y. The cooking was pronounced as near perfect as could be. Great love was expressed to Sister Mary E. Magee, who had charge of the culinary department for her ability to secure the best meats, vegetables and fish in the market and at the most reasonable prices.

On Thursday night, Nov. 7, the writer was appointed to hold an all-night prayer meeting consisting of a division of time for relay praying from 10 P. M., to 12 midnight and from 12 midnight until 2 A. M., and from then to 4 A. M., the last watch closing at 6 A. M. Some of the praying saints remained through the four watches. We have never heard such intercession in all our life before. Surely God heard and many souls were saved and sanctified during the Convention. All glory to God for giving us this marvelous, spiritual, and especially happy convention.

Rev. H. W. Hodge.

prepared to teach school their sustenance is sure and that they have secured a good place in society. It were better from a financial standpoint for a man to leave his daughters well educated and prepared to earn a good living in teaching, than that he should leave them without education and quite a sum of money.

The advancement of female education in the United States in the last quarter of a century is quite remarkable. There are not only female schools giving very great advantages in higher education, but young women are now admitted to most all of the great universities, and are proving themselves quite equal to their brothers in mastering the various branches of study in higher education.

It has occurred to me, and I have been thinking for sometime of the possible menace there is in higher education for women. I must not be misunderstood. I have never spoken, voted, or taken any part in any sort of effort to hinder the advancement of women to all the opportunities and privileges enjoyed by men. It must be remembered, however, that one of the very highest services that women must perform for society and the progress of civilization, is the reproduction of the race, and it is quite noticeable that women who, after graduating at the colleges, who seek degrees in universities, and become eager for the larger knowledge which is obtained in special studies and science, and other branches of learning, and extensive travel abroad, are very likely not to marry. Many of them devote themselves most worthily to teaching or social service for the general uplift of society.

Highly educated women in our universities who are so equipped that they can easily support themselves, do not need to marry in order to secure a livelihood, and after they have spent some years in the universities, they will not marry the type of men that they would have married when graduating from college. There is one thing of which we may be sure—highly educated women, if they do marry a little late in life, have very small families, one or two children, perhaps, and frequently, none at all. Those who are best equipped, perhaps, to take care and guide the physical, mental and spiritual life of children, in many instances, have no children, and if any, only one or two.

Some time ago I was preaching in a large city church with a most excellent pastor. One day, while in conversation, he said to me, "I find that in my church there are fifteen couples of well educated, well-to-do, excellent families who have been married some two to fifteen years who have no children." He said "they attend, and take an interest in church affairs. Of course, they are making no contribution to the enlargement of the Sunday school, and are not raising sons and daughters to take their places in the Church of God." He said, "I am asking myself where this church will get its membership in the future when some of my finest people, in some regards, are not rearing any children to carry forward the work of God in the church after they have passed away." It is hardly to be supposed that this was an isolated case. He had taken pains to number, and knew, personally, such families.

No one must accuse me of objecting to the higher education of the women of our country, but it is perfectly safe to say that the young women who graduate from college when they are from nineteen to twenty-two or three years of age, are much more likely to marry, raise and train large families of children, and give to the church and nation a fine type of man and womanhood, than those women who go on to the universities and seek the higher education. Of course, we want university-trained women in our colleges, and they are excellent teachers, and most of them maiden women. They have never married and the strong probabilities are, they never will.

Looking into the future, while the whole trend of our American idea is to give our young womanhood the benefit of university training, as the generations pass what will be the outcome? For instance, if our excellent Anglo-Saxon women of these United States educate themselves up to a point where they either will not marry, or if married, do not intend to be encumbered with children in seeking the enjoyments of their intellectual life, who will bear the children that will populate this nation, two or three centuries from now, if our Lord should tarry?

There are two classes of people you may count upon for large families: First, our colored population. The women of the colored race are usually equipped with physical strength; they bear large families; they are affectionate. The humblest colored mother is seeking to give her children at least, a primary education. Second, the emigrant population, especially those from Southern Europe who have little education before coming to this country, have large families. They delight in children. So, as we look into the future we are wondering what the color of the population of these United States may be within a couple or three centuries? If our Anglo-Saxon daughters seek higher education and refuse to reproduce our race—the Anglo-Saxon race—will gradually pass away, and without any sort of exaggeration, we can conceive of a period, not so far distant, in this country, when the colored race and those physically vigorous peoples from Southern Europe who have come among us and are so prolific, will be the dominating people of these United States.

I may add, also, that most all of our great universities are dominated with the evolutionary idea of creation. They are skeptical. Teachers and students have largely lost faith in the inspiration of the Scriptures, the Deity and redemptive power of Jesus Christ. These centers of skepticism are a menace to the spiritual life of our nation. It is becoming popular for one to be very liberal in his religious views. The young women who attend these institutions are drifting away from the evangelical faith which saves from sin.

I suppose some of my readers will think there is no ground to justify the suggestions I have offered; and, to tell the plain truth, I am not lying awake at night worrying over the situation, but have been trying to look a bit into the future and ask myself in quiet moments, what sort of a population this country will have with the present drift of things, a couple or three centuries from the present time. There is one thing of which I feel perfectly sure: its dominating population will not be of Anglo-Saxon blood.

THE WATCHTOWER.

HERE is a department in The Nashville Christian Advocate under the above heading, signed "The Watchman." When I can get hold of the Advocate I always read with interest, what he writes. He is a well posted man and has a very broad view of what is going on in the world. His reasoning, comments and conclusions, are very suggestive, and I have found it interesting to myself, to try to guess who he is. I have not been able to settle positively on any man, and yet, I am of the opinion that I could name him.

In October 18th issue, he begins his observation as follows: "The American Legion in its national convention the other day, gave a fresh kick to the football of investigation of lobbying, which President Hoover put in play not long ago. These youthful ex-soldiers even went so far as to draw a list of organizations which they think ought to be investigated. It is a rather curious list, at that, ranging from the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, to the Association for the Advancement of Atheism. Just what those two bodies might be supposed to have in common, will strike the casual reader as a bit puzzling."

Long ago, I came to the conclusion that the man on The Watchtower is a very liberal modernist. I may be mistaken, but his general tone leads me to believe that he is modernistic to the core.

Is it not true that the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America is under the leadership and direction of rank modernists? Are not Fosdick and Cadman among its high priests? If so, may there not be a closer relationship between this organization and the Association for the Advancement of Atheism, than the Watchtower man has been able to discover? This organization of atheism denies the Bible account of creation. Do not many of the leading men in this Federal Council deny the same? This atheistic organization denies the Virgin Birth of Christ. So does Fosdick, and Cadman recognizes him as a full brother. This atheistic organization denies that Christ ever performed any miracles. So does Fosdick. This atheistic organization denies that Jesus rose from the dead. So does Fosdick. And he has a very large following among the Federal Council of Churches. This atheistic organization is set to destroy the faith of the people in its faith in the Holy Scriptures. Are there not many men connected with the Federal Council of the Churches who are not most successfully engaged in that horrible business, and have not they a tremendous advantage over the atheistic organization because of the fact that they are supported by the church, and preach their heresies from the pulpit? In many instances, men like Cadman, Fosdick, and their ilk, are ploughing the ground for the atheistic sowing of the seed of unbelief and blasphemy. Aren't they cutting logs for the atheistic mill? In truth, is not this atheistic organization an effort entirely unnecessary, and a waste of time and energy? Let the modern skeptics go on with their false teaching until they have captured the universities, the colleges, the high schools, and the churches, and when the people come to believe that the Old Testament is folklore, and the New Testament is such fiction as Fosdick makes it out to be, will there be any need for an atheistic organization to destroy the church, to blast the home, and damn the world? All such teachers as Fosdick, Cadman, and their host of little followers, can do the work of destroying all evangelical Christian faith more successfully than the atheistic association. I should be glad to see these skeptical teachers smoked out of their holes and brought before a committee of the United States and made to tell in plain words, the infidelity and unbelief they have in their hearts, and preach from their pulpits, and teach in their schools.

If the churches of this country, in its ministry, schools, and homes, were faithful and true to the Holy Bible and the blessed Christ who is so mighty to save from sin, we would need to have little fear of the atheistic society. But these modernistic preachers and professors are more in harmony with a phase of atheism than they would like to confess. They are broadcasting the seeds of unbelief; they are destroying the faith of the finest youth of the land. They are sending into eternity multitudes who, long ago, have given up the Bible and surrendered their faith in Jesus Christ. They have produced conditions in thousands of churches in the various denominations where a true revival of religion, with deep repentance and regenerating power, is almost impossible. These high-salaried skeptics in our pulpits are far more guilty and dangerous to the churches, the homes, and therefore, to stable government, than this atheistic association.

Exploring the Bible.

A STUDY OF BACKGROUND AND PRINCIPLES,
By Frank E. Gaebelstein, A. M.

Dr. Gaebelstein is well known as a careful and devout Bible student. He has written a most excellent book. I sincerely wish it could have been placed in my hands when I was on my first circuit. It would have been immensely valuable to me. That does not mean that it cannot be read with interest and profit in middle life and old age.

Dr. Gaebelstein stands tremendously for the divine inspiration and trustworthiness of the Bible. The book is well worth the price and time it takes for its perusal. A large percent of the people who read the Bible in a fragmentary way, and accept it as the Word of God, have little, or no knowledge of the Book, how it came to us, and the tremendous power it has over the lives of those who read it carefully and follow its instructions with devout obedience.

The thoughtful reader may disagree with the author in some of his statements, but it would be a stupid person who would refuse to read any and all books if he could not agree with all the writers may have to say in the discussion of the various subjects under consideration. I commend this book very highly. It can be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Company., Louisville, Ky. It is handsomely bound and contains 195 pages. Price $1.50.

H. C. MORRISON.

Two Books for Girls.

Young people of our country are reading, and reading much that is of no intellectual and moral benefit, but just the reverse. It is not worth while to undertake to keep them from reading, but the wise thing to do is to place in their hands books that attract and entertain them and, at the same time, prove beneficial by inculcating good impulses and high ideals of life. We have been most fortunate in securing two books that entertain, instruct, and elevate the thought and desires of those who read them. The first I mention would make a beautiful Christmas present to any girl, is "The First Soprano," by Mary Hitchcock. She gives the remarkable conversion of a young woman who was a very talented singer in the choir of a great city church, of which she was a member. A plain, earnest minister came to the church and preached a few sermons which revealed to her that she was not a Christian, and she was in great distress. She found no encouragement, but opposition, among her church friends, but she was finally graciously converted and led her infidel brother to Christ. And so the story goes. I think most any girl who gets hold of this book will read it with interest and, possibly, a spiritual awakening that will be of great value. It is beautifully bound in cloth, printed on good paper, contains 187 pages. Get this book both for the girls and boys of your family. Make a Christmas present of it to some girl who needs to be brought to serious thinking about her soul's salvation.

Beautiful Girlhood, by Mabel Hale, is a very interesting book of short chapters on many subjects of great importance for girls growing up. It is written directly to, and for, girls. It is attractively bound, and has suggestions all along the line of a girl's life to womanhood, her associates, boy friends, etc. Every chapter in it is interesting and suggestive. It, too, would make a nice Christmas gift for a girl, a good book to have in a family where there are several girls who will read something, and should be furnished with something good to read. These books may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for $1.00 each. I commend them because I believe they will be of real value to any girl who may be so fortunate as to read either, or both, of them.

FACTS AND EVIL SPEAKING.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

THE following incidents remind us of the frailties of human nature; how prone we are to see the objectionable and lose sight of the real beauty which glows in the unselfish devotion of those who count it a privilege to serve. We wonder if this party ever found out the mistake he had made in thus wrongly judging the faithful missionaries who denied themselves that their guest might have the best. May the Lord flood our hearts with that love that "thinketh no evil," that "hopeth all things," and that "never faileth." How different this spirit from that which Paul manifested when commending the Philippians that their care for him had "flourished again;" and lest they might think he was complaining, he said, "Wherein ye were also careful, but ye lacked opportunity."

Friends, we need to get where we do not demand so much attention, and then we will not feel the slights when they come; and if a little kindness should be dropped along the way, it will come as one of those sweet surprises which we did not expect, and which we feel that we did not deserve, so we will be that much ahead. Blessed is the person who does not live to be ministered unto, but who lives to minister, and counts it a privilege to serve unnoticed by any eye save that of his Lord and Master.

Some one has said that the test of leadership is the readiness to be invisible. The rudder is under the water during the voyage, and is not seen by the passengers. If it were chiefly to be seen, its guiding power would not amount to much. Until we learn not to care whether we are observed of men or not, we shall never become as effective in leadership as we might. The great forces of nature work chiefly without attracting attention. But the following is the point we wanted to get before you:

"A man traveling in a far-off part of the world came to a place where there were missionaries. All travelers expect missionaries to be hospitable, whether they themselves believe in missions or not. This man was no exception. He accepted the friendly invitations of the missionaries, to lunch with one, dine with another, and so on. They, on their side, spared no pains to make their guest comfortable. Their fare was very plain. But they clubbed together and, for the visitor's benefit bought some ham, which was an expensive luxury in those parts. Wherever the visitor went for a meal, the ham was sent there for him. He enjoyed it very much. But he did not understand their hospitable strategem. He thought they all had quantities of ham in their larders; he went home and talked about the extravagance of the missionaries, who lived every day on the most expensive food.

"Another visitor accepted a missionary's hospitality in another spot. The missionary household went without butter themselves habitually; but enough butter for the guest was placed by him at every meal. He ate it. He never noticed that nobody else had any; and so he, too, went home and criticised the luxuries that missionaries have.

"Yet the facts in the case were facts. One traveler did have ham at the missionaries' tables; the others did have butter. Evil-speaking may follow facts. The trouble is, it usually doesn't have all the facts, or anything near all. More than that, it puts the wrong construction on the facts, and so makes them false in their bearings. These two incidents, reported lately by one who knew, show the risk we run of slandering others by saying unkind things based, apparently, on fact. The only safe rule is to put the kindest construction possible on facts, and when they seem beyond favorable construction—why, then keep that golden silence which all the ages have taught wise men to praise."

The First Soprano

Is the title of a very interesting story combining an entrancing narrative of human interest with a moral background of convincing merit. It shows the emptiness of mere formal church worship without having the spirit of worship, and points out the compensation a young woman received by a whole-hearted surrender to God. It is a story that will charm and captivate the young people, and will be read with interest by older members of the family as well. It is beautifully bound in dark blue cloth, with extra cover of green and gold, and put up in an attractive red box, just what you want to contain a Christmas present. You will never regret ordering this book. Price $1.00 of Pentecostal Publishing Company.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

"One Christmas"—

Not a "Santa Claus" Christmas, but a Christmas which revealed to a whole family the Christ. A Christmas time when the father of the household so touchingly told of God's gift to the world that the children wanted in turn to give the best they had to the Master. The older son, like Isaiah, heard the voice of the Lord, saying, "Whom shall I send?" and answered the call to missions to far away Africa with "Here am I, send me."

This is an intensely interesting and most touching story—one calculated to stir the heart of the Christian and bring the unsaved to Christ. Any one will enjoy it; if you want to bless a class of boys and girls, a friend or some member of your family, invest in as many copies as you can use. Price 50c, or 12 copies for $5.00. The book is beautifully bound in red Christmas binding, with the title and the wise men stamped in gilt.

Grace Before Meals.

The same grace repeated time after time often becomes so commonplace and mechanical that we are prone to forget its real meaning. "Grace Before Meals," is not the product of one mind, but the assembled expressions of many devout servants of God. There is an appropriate grace for every day in the year. This little book has been used very effectively in teaching the different members of the family to say grace. It contains 167 pages, is neatly printed and bound. Price 50c.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

A LIVE DOG, A DEAD LION.

"You told us about the dog and the lion." This I have frequently heard from school children, in reply to my question as to what I said when last I addressed them a year or two before: for I often use this Bible text in school talks,—"A living dog is better than a dead lion;" it gets their attention, it stays with them. Eccl. 9 is full of striking truths. But "What's the idea?" asked a young minister meeting me on my return from a school visit. Yes, why am I, a long-time preacher with many "irons in the fire," seeking the schools? Ministers having no such inclination miss much: the most fertile soil for good seed! Children's friendship, confidence, love: While the children themselves are poorer for want of the minister's spiritual talks. Too many children hear no gospel preached; others not even in Bible school. For years my compelling urge has been to bear a message to such children, specially those of the rural schools. It has proved a most satisfactory service. Love, the one direct road to their hearts; sympathy for them in troubles, which to them are as real as to adults, wins a like response.—"Their pleasures mingle sometimes with tears." Since the advent of autos, and dis-use of rural churches, Sunday visiting is the habit, thus denying church advantages to thousands of worthy children. For this reason I have made school visitation a permanent duty, not to preach a sermon, nor yet to ignore my spiritual mission to children, hence this Bible text. The very fact of a minister's presence, relates, in a child's mind, to things divine: instance, while still new in a certain town, I met a pretty three-year-old child, singing to herself. "What a beautiful little girl, and pretty song!" so saying I gave her a penny: on being asked at home who gave the penny, she replied—"I don't know his name, but he was from church." For adaptation I put the dog and lion in conversation:—

Dog—"I wish I were you, king of beasts, with your stately step, fierce eye, and tremendous roar."

Lion—"But I wouldn't be you, little weak cur, kicked around, no account, can't scare anything but a rabbit."

But after a hunter's bullet brings down the lion, the little dog happens along, and seeing the lion's big hulk lying on the mountain side, speaks again:—"I want to take back what I said awhile ago; I don't want to be you now, for a living dog is better than a dead lion. I can run and bark a little, but you can't roar at all." If the lion could speak it would say,—"I'll take back what I said too; I said I wouldn't be you, but I would now; for you can chase a rabbit, but I can't even scare a mouse: as little as you are, I'd rather be a living dog than a dead lion."

What a lesson to children of the value of their own little lives. A boy wished he could be a certain king, with castles, wealth, and a good time, but on hearing of the king's hospital experience, changed his mind, saying, "I would rather be my little self." I remarked to school children—"How rich you are," to which a lad replied, "I have no money in the bank;" but when asked what he would take for an eye or finger, shook his head to every offer, refusing all the money in the state, found himself so rich that no amount could buy him out. As in Whittier, "Let the million dollar'd ride, while you walk by his side, but you have what his millions cannot buy." The richest man in America in his day, (named reserved) starved to death. Able to purchase choicest foods, yet could not eat after he got it. Watching some laborers working in the rain for a dollar per day he remarked, "I would give all my wealth for their appetite for supper, and to sleep like they do tonight." What a new perspective to children of wealth, physical, mental, moral, spiritual, evolves out of this one text. Following my nature bent, to the hills, forests, and birds that sing there, the flowers that bloom there, the little animals that live there; attracted by every tree, stump, and rock, with every rural sight and sound, and drawn irresistibly to the rural schools found there, fitting well into nature's setting, as if ordained of God to dwell together, I have only to dip into my heart and write,

"Fond memories hover in thy air,

For dearest of all are the children there."

To these rural children I gravitate with my messages to children, as the bird to its climate. To this I add spiritual literature, my poem "School Children," picture, "Little Brown Church," a school motto, and my tract on "An Ice Cave" here in Edgewood, Iowa, which attracts many tourists in summer. Withal these lovely children are fortunate, for here, undisturbed by distractions of modern city life, which crowd and mar the child mind, they study in quiet, learn their lessons mid the simple arrangements of nature, and are normal, intelligent, and happy. I am glad to have known so many of them; they have enriched my life beyond words, and I would urge others to enter this open door of school visitation, where welcome and uniform courtesy greet the caller.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl from Illinois join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old and in the fourth grade at school. My father is a Free Methodist minister. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. Anyone who can guess my middle name, I will write them a letter. It begins with F and ends with S, and has seven letters in it. Adele Ferris, I guess your middle name to be Nell. Rubie Broxton, I guess your middle name to be Frances. Am I right, girls? Boys and girls, please write to me. I will answer all letters I receive. I hope Mr. W. B. doesn't get this letter. Helen F. Zahniser.
318 E. College Ave., Greenville, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old. I am in the fourth grade. My birthday is November 4. Have I a twin? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with A and ends with L, and has five letters in it. My aunt takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to the Methodist Church. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. My Sunday school teacher's name is Mrs. Bessie Dunn. I like her fine. I have two brothers, one is thirteen years old and one is seven. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print.

Shelby A. Kiper.
McDaniels, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Florida girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eight years old and will be in the fifth grade at school. I made two grades last year. I go to Sunday school almost every Sunday. My mother is my teacher. We go to the M. E. Church. I am blessed with Father and mother. I live on a farm eight miles from Madison on the new Blue Spring road. Two of my cousins live with us; their names are Willie and Ila McCullough. Aunt Bettie, I think The Herald is the best paper I ever read. Daddy has been taking it about ten years. I have dark hair, brown eyes and a medium complexion, weigh 61 pounds. I am the only child. Grandmother lives with us but she is visiting in Florida. My middle name starts with F and ends with E, and has six letters in it. Best wishes to Aunt Bettie and the cousins. I hope to see my letter in print as this is the first.

Ruby F. McCullough.
Rt. 1, Box 129, Lee, Florida.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Ohio girl join your large band of boys and girls? I was ten years old June 19. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. I go to country school and am in the fifth grade. We open our school by reading the Bible and repeating the Lord's prayer. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten very much. I have one sister older than I. Who can guess my first name? It begins with A and ends with S. It has four letters in it. Who ever guesses it I will send them a picture of myself. I have blue eyes, brown hair, and a fair complexion. Elma L. Caley, I guess your middle name to be Lois. As this is my first letter to The Herald I will say good-bye till another time. Hoping to see my letter in print.

A. Evalyn Mahaffey.
Rt. 5, West Union, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little boy seven years old. I have brown eyes and brown hair. My birthday is September 19. I am in the third grade at school. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print.

Russell Kiper.
McDaniels, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second letter. Mariam M. Burris, I guess your second name to be Minnie; if I am right don't forget your promise. I am glad to hear that Jesus has healed Dr. Morrison, and I hope that he will be able to go to his meetings. I read your story of the "Drummer's Dream;" it was certainly a good and true story. I go to the Methodist Church in pretty weather but we live on mud roads so we cannot go to church when it is bad weather. The more I read page ten the better I love to read it. I will answer all the letters I receive. I would also like to have snapshots of as many of you as can send me one. I hope that the scrapbasket is away when this letter arrives because I would like to see it in print.

Avis Mahaffey.
West Union, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Mississippi girl join your happy band? My mother takes The Herald. This is my first letter to it, and I hope to see it in print. I have dark brown hair and eyes with a true brunette's complexion. I am five feet, five inches tall and weigh 113½ pounds. My birthday was May 3. The cousins who are my twins please write me. I was thirteen my last birthday. I belong to the Methodist Church, and go nearly every Sunday. Loye Fay O. Henderson, I guess your middle name to be Ola. Lucile Gillham, I guess your middle name to be Constance, and Mary Grinstead, I guess your name to be Mary Elizabeth Grinstead. Now please keep your promises. I will write to the cousin who guess my first name; it begins with F and ends with E. All the cousins write. I had better stop off before Mr. W. B. comes in and catches this. But first I want to tell the cousins and you, Aunt Bettie, that I enjoy your letters on page ten.

Elizabeth Young.
Victoria, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and all the cousins this beautiful weather? I am having a grand time in the country. I am sixteen years old, have long blonde hair, hazel eyes, fair complexion, am five feet, three inches tall and weigh 128 pounds. My father has a farm of 180 acres. I work in Baltimore, but I am in the country at my parents now. One of the great sports down here is boat rowing. My middle name begins with C and ends with Y, and has four letters in it. The boy or girl that guesses it first I will send a picture of myself. I will answer all letters I receive from any of the boys and girls. I hope Mr. W. B. is out playing golf when this arrives.

Helen C. Bowen.
Wallville, Md.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a little Sandy Ridge girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my third letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I am still reading The Herald and enjoy it fine. I have fair complexion, black hair (bobbed) blue eyes, am five feet, five inches tall and weigh 116 pounds. I am fourteen years old. I have attended four meetings and enjoyed them fine. I haven't missed but one Sunday school in almost a year. I have three

Imagine having a leg cut off without being "put to sleep," yet that is the way it was always done until a young doctor, horrified by the agony about him, worked out a way to make surgical operations painless. This book tells his story. And be sure to read about the fellow who made it possible to save folks from horrible death when bitten by mad dogs.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Stories of Grit

His father shot the boy's eyes out—an accident, of course—but after the doctors got through with him he determined that it would make no difference, he would work out his ambition. With heart-breaking difficulty he struggled on until he became a high government official. And you will want to read about that other boy who landed here without money and unable to speak English, yet forced his way up until nationally known and admired.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XI.—December 15, 1929.

Subject.—The Christian Spirit in Industry. Deut. 24:14-15; Eph. 6:5-9; 1 Tim. 6:17-19.

Golden Text.—As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also to them likewise. Luke 6:31.

Introduction.—As one faces this problem the picture shows a dark background. Even the brighter aspects of it are too much shaded. Where shall we look for the "Christian Spirit in Industry?" Certainly not in any absolute standard of right. Some comparison may help us. It is a long call between old slave laws in Rome and the best modern labor conditions in America. Then a man might work a slave to death, or kill him outright; but no punishment followed. Now the laborer is no longer a slave, but possesses, at least, some of the rights of a free man. Since Lincoln issued his famous Emancipation Proclamation industrial relationships have changed a good bit in America. Even negroes are now entitled to humane rights, even though they may not always get them.

Permit me to quote from Arnold's S. S. Notes. I do not like the picture, but it is true to facts. Some day, maybe, it will be better.

"Present condition. Machinery invention in the eighteenth century converted rural England into a great manufacturing country. During the nineteenth century industry swept Europe and America. Now it is making a 'terrific invasion' of the Orient. Labor conditions there resemble those of England over a hundred years ago. Statistics in 1923 revealed the following facts: 1. In Japan, one-fourth of the laborers are under fifteen years of age; 68,000 women work underground in mines at fifty cents for a twelve-hour day; factory wages, twenty to sixty cents a day of twelve to seventeen hours; thousands of families living on $2.50 to $10.00 a month in one room, six by eight feet. 2. In India, wages eight to forty-nine cents a day; as many as six families in one room fifteen by twelve feet; baby mortality in one-room apartments 828.5 per 1000; annual factory profits 100 to 420 per cent. 3. In China, wages twelve and one-half to sixteen and one-half cents a day of twelve to eighteen hours; children, six to twelve years, three to twelve cents; no protective laws; homes of city poor often barely permit the family to lie side by side. While in America by contrast we have great reason for rejoicing, we still have unsolved problems. With sixty per cent of our wealth held by two per cent of the people, and five per cent of it scattered over sixty-five per cent of the population, with large corporations paying vast dividends, and often grinding wages unreasonably low, with disgraceful conditions in our coal mining districts, with one and a half million laborers unemployed in normal times, with no concerted effort to improve wages for unskilled labor, with protective legislation still sorely needed in many states, continued study and effort to promote the Christian spirit in industry is imperative."

—A. J. D.

Christ's Golden Rule that we have in this lesson, would settle all business misunderstandings, and would come as near as possible to producing ideal conditions in the industrial world. Some claim that it does not fit modern conditions. Then modern conditions should be so altered as to fit the Golden Rule. That rule spells righteousness; and anything less than that is unrighteous. Men may refuse to live by it now; but they will settle accounts by it at the judgment bar. Eternal justice demands that. God is going to judge men "in righteousness."

In endeavoring to introduce "The Christian Spirit" into industry we must remember that the matter has two sides. Men are prone to think that it applies only to the employer; but that is wrong. The employer has as much right to expect honest labor as the employee has to demand honest wages. The obligation is as binding upon one as it is upon the other. Both of them must render account to God for the things they do.

Every good man must rejoice over every improvement that has been made in the relationship between capital and labor. Better conditions are coming slowly, but surely. They will come faster as industrial intelligence increases on both sides.

Comments on the Lesson.

Deut. 24:14, 15. This was Jehovah's law many centuries ago. He has not changed. Would God that men would obey this law today. Many a time have I seen starving children among farm-renters, because the ravenous landlords had ground their parents down to such small compensation that decent living was impossible. A Jew could not oppress a hired man in his wages. He must pay proper wages, and he must pay at the proper time, or meet God's wrath. That is true now of all men.

Eph. 6:5. Servants.—The word means slaves. Your masters.—Your owners. As unto Christ.—Although they were common slaves, they must obey their master for Christ's sake. Paul is writing to Christian slaves; but his words apply just as well to hired men and women.

6. Not with eye service, as men pleasers.—Do not pretend to render good service, when in reality you are only trying to mislead your employer. Do your best to please Jesus Christ; and men will get good service, and you will be rewarded.

7 and 8. This is a consolation to honest employees. Do your work as unto the Lord, and he will compensate you in due time. Just as I wrote that last sentence, a strange thought came to me: "Mingledorff, Jesus Christ has you employed in very sacred labor. Are you rendering him honest service?" Maybe you might do well to think this over, and apply it to your own case.

9. Ye masters.—Slave owners or employers. Forbearing threatening.—Let there be no fussing nor abusing of your employees. Your Master is in heaven.—You will render account to God for your treatment of your employees. No respect of persons.—The slave is as precious in God's sight as his owner; the employee as precious as his employer. 1 Tim. 6:17-19. No use to quote these words, and little use to comment on them. In the first place, very few of the rich will ever read these notes; and in the second place, little impression would be made, in case they did read them. Riches are a snare to the soul. Very few persons accumulate large wealth and keep true to God. It is not impossible, if one is using his wealth for the advancement of the kingdom of God. Otherwise it spells damnation. There can be no selfish ambition, or aggrandizement, in the accumulation or use of this world's goods. "The Christian Spirit in Industry" condemns all this in toto.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Evangelist Henry W. Bromley, of Cynthiana, Ky., has recently conducted two successful evangelistic meetings in New Jersey.

Miss Imogene Quinn is engaged in a series of revival services at the First Evangelical Church, corner of Bridge and Straight Ave., Grand Rapids, Mich., from Nov. 24 to Dec. 8. She will be glad to welcome any of The Herald family to these services.

Rev. Edwin P. Phillips, who has been associated with Lighthouse Mission, St. Louis, Mo., for some years, has been lately elected Superintendent of The Hannibal Holiness Mission, Hannibal, Mo., and takes charge of that work Dec. 1st.

As the result of a special evangelistic meeting held in the First Presbyterian Church of Hobart, Okla., Oct. 30 to November 10, under the leadership of Mr. Guy W. Green, of Kansas City, Mo., there were sixteen additions to the organization of God in town. Fourteen of the sixteen were adults, most of whom came on confession of faith and among whom were five sets of husbands and wives.

B. F. Pritchett, Conf. Evangelist, 656 N. Broadway, Shawnee, Okla.: "I am again entering the field of evangelism under the appointment of the East Oklahoma Conference, as Conference Evangelist. I am in sympathy with the old-fashioned methods of fasting and prayer, in the promotion of a great revival. If I am invited to your church or camp, will come without stating terms. I have devoted twenty years to evangelism, and the pastorate and can furnish the best of references."

SALE CITY, GEORGIA.

Sister Morrison very kindly mentioned our choice paper shell pecans through the columns of The Herald some weeks ago. I have had many inquiries and a number of orders from same. A certain percent goes toward putting The Pentecostal Herald into home of those unable to subscribe. I wish to say that, notwithstanding we have made only about 10 percent crop in South Georgia, I still have some choice ones on hand and those wishing same for Christmas should write me at once.

Yours in him,

W. W. McCord,

WANTED CLOTHING.

In a recent letter from Rev. Charles A. Peters, Albany, Ky., he asks that we insert a notice in The Herald calling attention to the fact that he lives in a very needy part of the state of Kentucky, and will be glad to distribute any clothing the people may have to send him. We have put notices in The Herald before and the people have responded by sending clothing to Brother Peters. Any size, or style will be appreciated, for there are most any kind of persons who need

Children and Young People

Beautiful Girlhood

By Mabel Hale
Every teen-age girl should own a copy of this book of wholesome advice. Dangers along her pathway are pointed out. She will take fresh courage as she is pointed to the real stepping-stones in life. It does not deal with sex problems. Encourages lofty ideals.
FOR THE GIRL—Who Wants to Make A Success
Who Wants a Real Girl's Book
Who Feels Herself Misunderstood Who Desires to Be Beautiful

Your daughter with the flush of youth in her cheeks and the starlight in her eyes, facing life eagerly, inquiringly, needs this book.

Gift Style—Pretty blue border on each page. Mounted medallion on front cover, which is protected by watered-silk, embossed tissue jacket. 232 pages, cloth bound. Price $1.00.

Ideals for Earnest Youth

BY A. T. ROWE

A purposeful message for our modern youth with their great opportunities and problems.
It is practical rather than theoretical. Actual incidents and experiences of real, outstanding, unusually successful men are given as food for thought.
Avenues of opportunities for success are pointed out, as well as the ever-common boulevards to failure.

Valuable for young people's meetings, societies, and leagues. Emphasizes youth's needs of Christ's guidance, but clearly avoids any doctrinal discussion.

Sixty-one pitiful chapters with a punch in each one. Beautifully cloth bound; attractive two-color jacket. Price $1.00.

Forgotten Children

By Julia Flewellyn

Nell, and Squinty, and Brandy, are waifs of the great city of New York. They are the "driftwood of humanity"—thrown out on the street—nobody's children—Forgotten Children.

Nell is a typical "spitfire" of the alley, passionate and outspoken in her barbaric language of the streets. She gives one thrills all the way through by her unexpected outbursts of savagery. Yet, under all the dirt and grime and seeming "good-for-nothingness" of these outcasts are tender chords waiting to be "touched by a loving heart, awakened by kindness."

Something new for our young people. 189 Pages. Price $1.00.

A Noble Life

BY MARY C. HASKETT.

This book forcefully and entertainingly brings before the youth many lessons of priceless value. It will help him to develop noble character.

96 pages. Cloth, 50 cents.

The Hero of Hill House

BY MABEL HALE.

Reads like fiction, but is a true story of a Christian Kansas boy. It is thrilling and adventurous. But nothing is objectionable. It sets forth good Christian principles for right living. It will entertain and instruct.

Lodestone cover. 221 pages. $1.00.

Chats With Uncle Jack About Nature

By C. W. Naylor

It exalts God and gives the boys and girls an introduction to his handiwork in the mountains, the streams, the clouds, the birds, insects and beasts all around us. The "Chat" on "Just Mud" will make any boy or girl sit up and take notice. Especially for 9-16 year old youth.

Well illustrated. Cloth bound. 128 pages. Price 60 cents.

Aunt Charlotte's Stories of Bible History

We have sold something like twenty thousand of these and they have given universal satisfaction. One hundred and four stories, taking one through the Bible by reading two stories each Sunday. Questions after each story. Over two hundred illustrations.

Neatly bound in cloth. Price $1.00.

The Poorhouse Waif

BY ISABEL C. BYRUM.

A true story of an orphan boy made fatherless by the Civil War. His boyhood life was filled with unusual events. He was mistreated on every hand. How he became a useful Christian man is a story absorbing and worth reading.

224 pages. Cloth, 60 cents.

CHRISTIAN HERO SERIES

Thrilling Tales of Heroism, Adventure, Love, Triumph, and Dangers at Home and in Many Foreign Lands.

These are Life Stories of world-renowned religious leaders, men of purpose, ideals, and vision—mighty testimonies to Christian power! They appeal to young and old alike. Gripping and Educational.

ADONIRAM JUDSON, Apostle of Burma—Percy. How Judson met the curly-headed, black-eyed Ann Hasseltine and won this charming girl who also had a desire for adventure is told early in the story. How they together faced a foreign-mission field, hand in hand, daring by sheer courage and an indomitable faith in God to carry the gospel message into the dangerous land of Burma is also related. Cloth bound. 128 pages. Price 75c.

DAVID LIVINGSTONE, Missionary-Explorer of Africa—Kleeberger. Livingstone went right into the jungles of Africa where wild animals abounded on every side. Many thrilling encounters did he meet. He taught the simple gospel story to the wild natives and won many to Christ. The natives loved him and the deeds of valor and loyalty shown him make a beautiful story. Cloth. 128 pages. 75c.

JOHN BUNYAN—The Immortal Dreamer—McCreary

You know Bunyan wrote the famous book—Pilgrim's Progress, but do you know he was one of the greatest preachers of his day?

The author tells you about the long, tedious twelve years' imprisonment because of his strong religious convictions. Illustrated. 128 pages. 75c.

HENRY MARTYN, Apostle to the Mohammedans—Lopez. Henry Martyn lived a strenuous life. On his tombstone the epitaph is rightly inscribed to him—"A flame of fire." An inspiration to youth. Cloth bound. 129 pages. 75c.

DWIGHT L. MOODY, The Soul-Winner—Rowe.

Young people will be inspired to bigger, better things after reading of this great man. Many are the thrilling and humorous events pictured in the story. His experiences in the great Chicago fire, his travels abroad, several pages of anecdotes that only Moody could produce. Cloth bound. 128 pages. 75c.

JAMES HUDSON TAYLOR, Pioneer Missionary of Inland China—Hunnex. Chinese life and customs are charming, and this story of Taylor is one of unusual interest. Cloth bound. 154 pages. 75c.

JOHN G. PATON, Hero of the South Seas—Byrum.

It is difficult to find a good place to stop reading until you turn the last page of this book. A very good account of the life of this famous missionary to the cannibals. Cloth bound. 127 pages. 75c.

CHARLES H. SPURGEON, Prince of Preachers—Adcock. It has been prophesied that Spurgeon would become a great preacher when he was yet a lad. Before he was twenty years old he had achieved a great popularity. Illustrated. 116 pages. 75c.

MARTIN LUTHER, The Lion-Hearted Reformer—Morrison.

It required a man of iron nerve and courage to do what Luther did. How he fearlessly took his stand against the corruption of the Roman Church and in the face of losing his life, is a most absorbing story. Cloth bound. 125 pages. 75c.

JOHN WESLEY, The Christian Hero—Egermeier.

The life of the great Wesley, preacher and reformer, is well told. He loved God, and dared to do God's bid. Inspiring and uplifting. Cloth bound. 128 pages. 75c.

The First Soprano

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The underlying motive of this excellent piece of Christian fiction, into which is woven a fascinating love story, is the consecration of life and talent to God. It peers through the superficiality of mere profession, and the hypocrisy of certain features of Church life and appeals strongly for reality in Christian experience.

You will find it one of the most interesting stories you have ever read. Packed in green or red Christmas box. Price, $1.00.

The Master's Twelve

BY REV. FRED B. WYAND.

A study of "The Twelve" will help you to get a better understanding of the Master himself. This is a new book by a new author and is calculated to give some new light on these twelve men and their Master. If you are not more than delighted with it, you may return it and we will refund your money. Price $1.50.

Doran's Ministers' Manual for 1930

Brings together within the covers of a book of over 600 pages an exhaustive and inexhaustible body of material for the alert minister, comprising suggestive sermon outlines, innumerable illustrations, choir devotions, church night plans, mid-week addresses, and a vast bed of seed thoughts for sermons and addresses. These and a hundred other things—all of them enough to fill five books—are in the Manual for 1930 and the price is but $2.00.

The Nightingale of The Psalms

BY EVANGELIST J. E. AYCOCK.

An Exposition of the 23rd Psalm. A beautiful and touching explanation of this Psalm. By linking it with many other tender and comforting passages in both the Old and New Testaments, the evangelist gives this best beloved Psalm a new richness and depth of meaning in its application to life here and hereafter. More than 40,000 sold. Hundreds of people have ordered it to give away.

Price, 25c, 5 for $1.00.
Christmas envelopes will be sent free on request.

Turn But a Stone

Addresses to Children.

BY ALEXANDER.

The author tried these addresses out in his own congregation before putting them in book form. There are 50 very attractive subjects, with a scripture text to each one, and a wonderfully interesting story to illustrate each text. This book will be of untold value to anyone interested in teaching young people in the home, church or Sunday school. It has had a large sale at $1.60. Our special price, $1.00.

Finney's Autobiography

A Famous Gospel Worker says:

"No Christian can read through these pages without being profoundly stirred. It is a classic upon the practice of prayer. The reading of that book compelled me again and again to turn down the pages and retire to prayer." Price $2.00.

Finney's Revival Lectures.
"Wherever Finney was working, as evangelist, or pastor, or teacher, there was a continuous revival. The lectures that make up this volume tell the way and how and power of Finney's life."—S. S. Times.

Price $2.00. The set (2 Vols.) $3.00.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life

HANNAH WHITALL SMITH.

A whole generation has felt its power and been stimulated by its wholesome faith. The author has the happy faculty of finding the heart of the truth and interpreting it in a clear, pungent way that makes one see its practical bearing upon life's difficulty. The book will prove a great blessing to any one who will read it. Price, $1.25.

That I May Save Some

BY BISHOP WILLIAM FRASER McDOWELL

These five lectures Bishop McDowell declares are not a contribution to theology or to scholarship, but rather "one more effort to get the Church to singing again, singing anew, the song of the angels above the plains: 'A Savior is born.'" There is therefore, a distinct evangelistic purpose running throughout the volume; and there is also a definite challenge to the Church of God, everywhere to do the work of an evangelist and to demonstrate in a convincing way that the gospel of Christ is still the power of God unto salvation.

Binding, cloth. Price, net, $1.00.

A Feast of Good Things

REV. J. M. HAMES.

A volume that is truly a "Feast of Good Things" to the hungry people of God. Seventeen chapters that deal with the progress and maturity of the sanctified life. A gift book any Christian would appreciate and derive great spiritual help from. Price $1.00.

A great historical work by an ancient writer. Nearly 100 illustrations.

1055 pages. Size 7½x9¾. Cloth. Price $2.00.

Messages for the Times

REV. C. F. WIMBERLY, D.D.

This author is one of the most timely and brilliant writers of the day. What he says is fresh and to the point. Whoever reads this book will be richly repaid. Dr. Wimberly has given the cream of his best thinking; the love of good literature will be stimulated and faith in things which the anxious questions of the younger generation provoke serious thought on the part of the father and older brother, who is a college student, and this thought leads to decisions which are far-reaching in their effects. A beautiful book to send to friends. An ideal gift for pastors to send to members of the congregation. Suitable for teachers of intermediate and young people's groups to send to members of the class.

Gift edition, beautifully bound in art cloth, 50c.

One Christmas

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The opening scene is that of a family, in a snow-laden northern city, gathered around the home fires on Christmas Eve. The anxious questions of the younger children provoke serious thought on the part of the father and older brother, who is a college student, and this thought leads to decisions which are far-reaching in their effects. A beautiful book to send to friends. An ideal gift for pastors to send to members of the congregation. Suitable for teachers of intermediate and young people's groups to send to members of the class.

Gift edition, beautifully bound in art cloth, 50c.

God's Minute

A book of 365 daily prayers, sixty seconds long, arranged from January 1 to December 31; a prayer to each page, written expressly for this book by the most eminent preachers and laymen in the English speaking world. At the top of each page is a collection of Scripture on encouragement to prayer.

Cloth. Price, 60c; Postage, 5c.

Fox's Book of Martyrs

A history of the lives, sufferings and triumphant deaths of the early Christian and Protestant martyrs. It tells the story of some of the most thrilling periods in Christian history when "a noble army, men and boys, the matron and the maid," "climbed the steep ascent of heaven, 'mid peril, toil and pain.'" It is thrilling and convicting. 370 large pages. Good clear type, beautifully printed and bound. Price $1.50.

The Bent-Knee Time

BY S. D. GORDON.

Three hundred and sixty-two, (to quote the author) "little bits which are meant to be distinctly secondary to the book itself." Every paragraph makes clear the pathway to God. This little book is appropriate for young and old. Any Christian will appreciate its simplicity. Neatly bound in cloth with a silk marker. Price, 75c.

Dairyman's Daughter

This charming little book has resulted, it is said, in the conversion of thousands. It has a rare beauty of style and withal an uncommon spiritual power. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 50c.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustrations. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1930 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Price: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

The Gist of the Lesson, 1930

BY R. A. TORREY, D.D.
Fits the Vest Pocket.

Price, 35c.

All Denominations Approve Its Use.

Tarbells Teachers' Guide

BY MARTHA TARBELL, Ph.D.

New ideas, new light, new suggestions and new enthusiasm comes to the teacher who opens the 1930 edition of this favorite handbook to the International Sunday School Lessons. "A wealth undreamed of and almost passing belief" are the words used by one reviewer in describing it. The greatest triumph however that has come to "The Guide"—that it has won over all helps—is the reputation it now enjoys for "making teachers of all who use it."

$2.00 postpaid.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1930

BY AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.

Sunday School Workers' Best Friend. Indispensable.—As an up-to-date Commentary on the Uniform Lessons for 1930. Help, guidance, inspiration, and satisfactory preparation all can be found in it. Comprehensive.—It contains everything necessary to a teacher's preparation—explanatory notes of the text, topics for discussion, illustrations of all kinds, suggestive methods to develop the lesson—maps, charts, etc.

Inspirational.—No teacher can use this wonderfully selected material without gaining a spiritual inspiration as to how it may best be imparted.

No Bible worker or student can afford to be without it.

Price, $2.00 Postpaid.

THE SIN OF ANANIAS AND HIS WIFE.

By The Editor.

HERE is a Scripture that declares, "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." The thought of his heart leads to action. His acts build his character. His character fixes his destiny. This Scripture is quite in harmony with another which reads, "Out of the heart are the issues of life." To put it into other words, the life issues out of the heart. The heart is the fountain. The stream which flows from it makes up the life.

* * *

Ananias and his wife were wrong at heart. They were selfish, covetous. The Scriptures tell us that covetousness is idolatry. It is loving things, the creature better than the Creator. This is not so rare a sin. It takes place often in the church of God, even in the ministry it becomes the common sin of seeking a place of power and influence in the church rather than seeking to lift the church into holy communion with God and seeking the lost for whom Christ died.

* * *

It is a fearful thought that a man called of God to preach the Gospel should undertake to make a pedestal out of the Christ on which he tries to climb for his own elevation rather than making himself a pedestal upon which he lifts up the Christ.

* * *

Let it be remembered that sins are very sociable. They go in companies. They unite in unholy marriage and produce large families. It was so with this unfortunate pair. First, they were influenced by the great revival. They were profoundly impressed by the manifestation of divine power. They united themselves with the company of the Lord's people. They had a desire to appear to be of the very best. The entertainment of the great gathering of the saints called for considerable financial outlay and some zealous souls in order to meet these expenses sold their property and gave the income from such sale to provide for the wants of the visiting multitude who were giving themselves to prayer and praise and joy in the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel.

* * *

Ananias and his wife must appear to be as good as the best. So they sold a piece of property, with all outward appearance of joyful consecration to a good work, but in their selfish hearts they begrudged to God the income from the sale and while they appeared to the people to give in the full amount received for the property they kept back a part of the price for selfish uses. Notice how sin accumulates. First, they have a selfish, covetous nature. They are money lovers. Second, they join themselves with all appearance of zeal and earnestness to the people of God; hypocrisy. Third, they pretend to have such zeal that they sell the property, but keep back a part of the price and go, no doubt, with a strut of pride, and lay grudgingly, we suppose, a part of the price at the feet of the disciples.

They no doubt congratulated themselves that they were making fine headway. They appeared to be among the very best and most generous. They would receive the loving gratitude of the people who were benefited by their gift. But God is a searcher of hearts. Nothing is hidden from the eye of him with whom we have to do. This little drama is made up of a few brief acts in rapid succession. Their hearts are uncovered. Their sin is rebuked. They fall dead. The curtain drops over them. It is a black curtain.

* * *

What was the sin of this unfortunate couple? First, they undoubtedly were cursed with the love of money, very common. Second, they had enough of religious sentiment to desire to join themselves with the Lord's people. Third, they wanted to appear to be far better and more generous than they really were. Fourth, they appropriated for selfish usage that which belonged to God. Let us tarry here a moment. Is this an uncommon sin? Are we cheerfully, without the blast of trumpets, or begrudgingly, giving to God His own? I am unfortunate in the use of the word, giving. We cannot give to God that which is his own. We can pay that which we owe. We can be good stewards. On the other hand, we may rob God and I fear the robbery of God is a far more common sin than it is supposed to be.

It is all right that we should have a good home, a well built, well arranged, capacious house, with modern improvements, but whose money built the house? Are you quite sure that you did not put into that house some of the Lord's money? It is all right for you to have a good car large enough for your family and to show your courtesy by now and then taking a friend for a ride, but whose money bought the car? It is fine to take a trip, to have a nice summer outing, to go to the lakes, to bathe in the brine along the seashore, but whose money bought the railroad ticket and paid the hotel bills? Are you quite sure that it is your money? In other words, have you paid your tithe? Have you given to God that which belongs to him? Have you not only paid your tithe, but have you brought a thank offering to the altars of the Lord? That house of yours there. Is there money in that building that ought to have gone to the support of a missionary? That's a beautiful car you have, but did you steal the Lord's tenth to put into those balloon tires? It runs beautifully, but did you rob God of the Sabbath morning hours and go joy riding when you ought to have been at worship?

God's attitude toward the covetous, the hypocrite, the robber, and the liar has not changed. His judgments may be delayed, but the time will come when the sword of justice will flash from the scabbard of retribution. We are hastening to death and judgment. Let us be sure that we are not playing the Ananias act, that we are not appropriating to our own use that which justly belongs to

God. Think on these things and if mistakes have been made, if we have been dominated by selfish motives, let us make haste to repentance and to restitution to God of that which justly belongs to him and upon which we have no claim.

Monthly Sermon.

HOW TO BRING SINNERS TO CHRIST.

"When Jesus saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee."—Mark 2:5.

The account of the healing of the paralytic as given in the Gospel by Mark is one of the most interesting of all the miracles performed by our Lord. In this, we find not only the healing of the body, but the forgiveness of sin; and we judge that this was true in every case that the faith that enabled Jesus to heal also enabled him to forgive. There never was or is any question in the mind of the faithful about his power, both to heal the sick and forgive the sinful. Unbelief is the only obstacle that stands in the way of the mighty works of Christ.

There is a very interesting human element in the account, as Mark gives it to us, which is most suggestive. It was quite fortunate for this paralytic that he had four friends who had great faith in Jesus. His condition was such that he needed a group of believers to lay hold upon his cot and bring him into the presence of Christ. He was helpless; without some human assistance he would have undoubtedly died of palsy in his sin, but there were four men who believed that Jesus was more than master of the situation.

These men were also concerned for their brother. They could not be content to let him remain sick and helpless when Jesus was so able to heal, and within reach of their helpless friend. Their faith in Christ, and their love for their neighbor set them going. They went after him; they assured him of both the power and the disposition of Jesus, the compassionate and mighty Healer of the sick. He was no doubt thoroughly convinced and thankful for assistance.

This faith in Christ and love for the neighbor united the four men in zealous effort. I imagine that I can see them hurrying away to the home of their sick friend; they are walking rapidly, they are close together, and are conversing with eagerness among themselves. They break in upon their friend with enthusiasm surprising him with good news; they are all about his bed, all speaking at once and confirming each other's testi-

THE WORK OF THE LORD IN THE TROPICS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I am writing this article on the Indian Ocean on board the P. and O. steamer Mantua on the way to India. We left Penang of the Straits Settlement two days ago. We had a strenuous three weeks in the Malay Peninsula, having to divide our time between four cities, Singapore, Kuala Lumpur, Ipoh and Penang. We had to hasten from one meeting to another in order to meet the schedule marked out. In each case we would close a meeting one night and then hasten on by train to the next point and preach the opening message the next night thus giving no chance for a rest between meetings, and our daily schedule began at 8 o'clock in the morning when I would speak at the High School chapel to the older students ranging in numbers from 250 to over 400. Mrs. Ridout would speak at the same hour to the girls to groups of 200 and more. Our daily holiness meeting for believers took place at five o'clock till six in the afternoon and the evangelistic service at 8 P. M. at night. For the Tropics this was a very full program and frequently we were warned that we should not attempt so much but the fields were white unto harvest and the laborers were few. Hundreds of souls were led to Christ and many into the deeper life during these busy days and this was our chief joy. If the angels in Heaven rejoiced over one sinner repenting (Luke 15:10) how much more should mortals rejoice in sharing in the great work of leading souls to salvation.

Malaya is one of the most intensely interesting fields we have yet visited. It was quite a unique thing to see Malay boys with their Mohammedan caps on and their traditions and background being Islamic throughout, in the school chapels singing with the other boys such hymns as "What a Friend we have in Jesus" and "Stand up, stand up for Jesus." They say the most difficult problems of these states is to Christianize the Mohammedans. By a strange course of circumstances the Mohammedan religion swept down through Malay away back about four centuries ago and ever since the natives have adhered tenaciously to that faith and though many of the youth go to the Christian schools, yet it is exceedingly difficult to make even a dent in their Mohammedanism. The Rajahs or Sultans which rule (nominally) the Malay States are entirely Mohammedan—they have many wives and live in luxury, and the Mohammedan faith permits them to do this provided they build and maintain the Mosques and observe the religious fashions of their faith.

I have read that it is the boast of the Malays of the Peninsula that during forty years of Christian Missionary work not a single convert has been won from Mohammedanism to Christianity. I cannot vouch for this statement. I hope it is not true.

Directly opposite to our dwelling place at Ipoh was a heathen Temple. From early morn till late at night the gongs and bells sound and peculiar sharp high music somewhat resembling the Scottish bagpipe is heard. Of course it indicates that worship is going on. We went through one of those Temples the other day when no service was in progress and an assistant took us around and explained the pictures. The most atrocious to our thinking, was that one representing one of the gods with an elephant face upon it. Out in this part of the world one comes in constant contact with the "real article" in Oriental religions. The Mohammedan plays a very important part in Malaya because the native rulers—the Sultans, are all Mohammedan and it is an understood thing with the British Government that the missionaries are not to interfere with the religions of the native people. The Malays are hard to reach with the Christian religion—they will send their children to the Christian schools but in some places they forbid them to attend Sunday school or church. The Malays are forbidden to enter a Christian church, and I believe also that there is some sort of a law which prohibits the missionary from holding any public services for the Malays. The Chinese and the Tamils and other Indians attend the meetings with regularity and interest, but the Mohammedans and Hindoos seldom. The first night we held our meetings in the chapel of the school building a few Sikhs were present, the next night none were present because the meeting was held in the church, and while I am speaking of the Sikh let me stop long enough to explain that they constitute greatly the Indian police force, when Britain needs the dark skinned man for that purpose. The Sikh is a splendid soldier and Britain has honored him ever since the Indian Mutiny because they stood true to the British flag and went to their death—many of them in defence of the British.

The Mohammedan is a difficult proposition chiefly because they have the tendency to stick together when a religious issue arises. If those against whom he rebels happens to be of another faith the quarrel may eventually rise to the dignity of a Holy War. Those words "Sabil Allah" or Holy War against the Infidel is a slogan which arouses all classes of Mohammedans and they can all be fired very suddenly into an enthusiasm. Their faith so full of hate and pride and passion causes them to regard all other religions with disdain and they are very apt to regard it as a sacred thing to put to the sword all who hold the Infidel faith. In the Philippines many years ago one of this cult wanted to die killing the infidels and he went to the priest and took the solemn vow then, fired up with a crazy fanaticism, he started out with his deadly weapon and killed upwards of twenty-five white people before the authorities trailed him and killed him and the poor wretch died happy—so they say!

One thing that especially characterizes the Mohammedans is their doctrine of predestination or fatalism. The following lines suggest this tendency:

The dream that came to me as I lay
Beneath the waving palm,
It led me forth upon my way,
It broke upon my calm.
It whispered to me as I went
Beneath the forest green,
The message that my God hath sent
To break my sleep serene.

Ah me! I travailed brave and strong,
To set the wry world right,
To succour those who suffered wrong
To fight the Holy Fight,
And if the wicked win the day
Tis Allah's will I wean,
Glad to His peace I'll pass away
Who have his Vision seen!

The Mohammedans hold to the five pillars of the faith such as (1) The saying of the creed; (2) the five daily prayers; (3) the 30 days fast of Ramadan when from sunrise to sunset no food or drink is taken (but they make up for it by feasting all night); (4) almsgiving; (5) the pilgrimage to Mecca. This must be taken in person or proxy at least once during the life-time.

It is said more people go to Mecca from Malaya and the Dutch East Indies than from India. (Of course one reason is they have more money—the pay of an Indian in Malaya would be from three to ten times as much as in India). However going to Mecca usually does not improve the morals of the Malays very much. There is a proverb which says: "If thy friend has been once to Mecca, trust him not; if twice avoid him; if thrice flee from him as from Shaitan himself."

One is constantly struck with the amazing contrasts between the Chinese in Malaya and the Chinese in China. In Malaya they rise to millionaires through rubber and tin, and live in palaces and amid luxury, and the ordinary classes and coolies have a good living, and their children are becoming well educated. In all our travels in Malay we have not seen a single case of foot binding. I was told of one man who came to Malay as a barber (street barbers are very common in China)—he is now a millionaire, another man who came as a coolie with all his clothing on his back—and not much of that—got into business and when he died left his son a business which made him one of the outstanding millionaires today. Such a thing as that would be impossible in China. The eternal and iniquitous "squeeze" which government and army generals and bandits would put on a man of means prevents any man to rise from the lower ranks to riches. Then there is something else to be reckoned with in this matter. The Malay Chinese enjoy law and order under British administration. Any one who sees what British colonization has done in the Malay Peninsula will behold an exhibit which will forever cure him of that foolish fear for giving over to people who have no genius for government the idea of "self-determination." It is just as well to admit out in the open that some people are absolutely incapable of self government and when they ally themselves with some great governing power who has a genuine genius for ruling, they pave the way to peace and prosperity; to contentment and progress. The Malay States are a monument to Great Britain's ability to rule and govern, just as the Philippines furnish an exhibit of America's genius for government.

PERSONAL NOTATIONS.

During our work in the Malay Peninsula we met with some very fine missionary workers. At Ipoh our program was in the hands of Rev. F. H. Sullivan, District Supt. He has had a very wide and extended experience in missionary work and has maintained the evangelistic note throughout. The work at Ipoh resulted in a very blessed harvesting of souls. The interest in the Girls' School under Mrs. Ridout grew daily until a real revival broke out there and scores of girls came out for Christ. In the evangelistic services at night at the church the altar would fill up with seekers and a very blessed work broke out among the young men and older people.

Readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD who go to Red Rock camp meeting will remember Miss Minnie Rank who has spent many years out here in Malaya. She is in charge of a splendid girls school at Ipoh now occupying their new building. Miss Rank has a very fine helper in Miss Royce. These two missionaries made it possible for Mrs. Ridout to hold such a gracious revival in their school. We enjoyed very much taking our tiffin at the school each day. Friends in Minnesota will do well to keep interested in Miss Ranks' work in Malaya. I was informed that from Dr. Valentine's church in Minneapolis quite a good group of missionaries have gone to the foreign fields. It is a good thing in these days of Modernism to have missionaries sent out from churches like Dr. Valentine's because they have been indoctrinated in a manner that enables them to hold to the great essentials when they get to the field.

1849---Meridian, Miss., November Seventh, Eighty Years---1929

L. P. Brown.

My dear Children and Grandchildren:

FROM the far away Alps a little bird, named Graf, was taken on board the Zeppelin airship. On the journey across the ocean's broad expanse it was ever singing to cheer. Upon reaching the land, it looked back upon the ocean and the great air-plane that had brought it over and its throat just warbled and warbled paeans of thanksgiving and praise.

This day reminds me that I have had an eighty years' journey from my native home, and the query comes, what is the tenor of my song?

"There are voices calling me tonight,

Out of the past;
Speaking good cheer to my soul in its flight—

Out of the past;
Oh, how those voices now ring in my ears,
Kindling my hopes, and allaying my fears,
Dimming my eyes with sweet memory's tears—

Out of the past!
"There are faces smiling on me tonight,

Out of the past;
Bringing me vision of holy delight,
Out of the past;
Visions of home with its comfort and cheer,
The unbroken circle of faces so dear,
Lovely, how lovely, those faces appear;
Out of the past!

"Loved ones, I bless you for coming tonight,
Out of the past;
Flooding my soul with heavenly delight—

Out of the past;
Some day we shall meet where the bright chorus sings,
Meet where the sound of the dirge never rings,
Singing the anthems sweet memory brings,
Out of the past!"

THEN AND NOW.

"Yet often though I wish again
To run and swim and fish again
As did the care-free little boy
Who once I used to be.
I wouldn't backward turn the page
And barter all the joys of age
To let some fairy steal my years
And make a boy of me.

"Though much of joy was mine to know,
This older life is fine to know,
I walk with laughter still today
Despite my weight of care.
I'm sure I would not now enjoy
All things I cherished as a boy,
Nor wish to give my pleasures up
In boyhood's fun to share.

"To life this is my attitude:
I have a sense of gratitude
For every joy which I have known.
A happy boy was I,
But it is fun a man to be,
And it is good to live and see
The richer beauty of the world
As time goes swinging by."

On 'Father's Day', L. P., Jr., sent me a three-in-one framed picture. My old home at Jackson, Miss. with faces of Ma and Pa, my parents. The old home at Black Hawk with faces of Mother and Father, Willie's parents, and our home at Meridian, Miss., with faces of Willie and me. The likenesses are all good, the mechanical part, the whole setting could not be improved upon.

From time to time I sit and ponder, first of the home where I was born. The bodies of eleven once occupants are in a near-by cemetery, leaving but two, Sister Hadie and me, of a large family. The old home has passed into other hands. In this cottage in the years ago was spent happy, glad some boyhood, early manhood, and the leaving several years before reaching my twenty-first birthday to battle with the sterner realities of life.

The second is the vineclad home where Willie, my wife, was born. The larger part of her family have gone to their reward. Both of these homes have made history which has told on the world for great good.

The third in the picture, you as children and grandchildren know more about. For forty-two years Willie and I lived there a one-life. Within its walls you first saw the light of day. Here around the home altar you were reared. As parents we saw each of the ten—and all are now living—reach their majority.

Thirteen grandchildren today give promise of markedly strong characters. Within a few days of three years and nine months ago, God called Willie, 'Mother' and 'Grandmother,' to come up to her final and merited home. It was "No Gate ajar;" she went sweeping through the gate. I trust her beautiful, well-ordered Christian life and the fulfilling translation will ever be a fresh memory and prove an inspiration for only the highest and noblest in life.

Upon this, my Fourscore Birthday, I can scarcely think of a single new line I could give you in the way of admonition. It seems I have, throughout the years, by love, teaching and prayer gone the entire gamut.

In October, 1620, one hundred and twenty pilgrims and strangers upon earth set sail in the Mayflower for Virginia, but landed at Plymouth, Mass. Part of your ancestral chain goes directly back to that group. The crossing of the ocean then required sixty-three days; the Zeppelin's trip required less than four days, and indications now point to two days. Today we are a nation of one hundred and thirty millions. Our growth and development along all lines have been marvelous. The past fifty years have out-distanced all the previous ones, yet, I ween the next ten or twenty years, at farthest, will prove in the comparison as miraculous.

The big world is before you as an open book. Opportunities were never as great. Vacancies are at the top in every line of endeavor. This seems to be the testing age of ages. Real men and women were never in greater demand. The consciousness of sin is being blotted out. Each person would be a law to himself or herself. God's Sabbath day is observed in the breach. Men called of God in high endeavor are more afraid of men than of him. The family altar and the God-ordained home-life are rapidly passing away. Often from the sacred desk in the very House of God men are heard who guardedly lower, or make weak, heaven-given Bible standards. So called "diversions" in high social circles which, in other years, brought into immediate action the "unwritten law," now go by unnoticed. In view of all these things let me give you a single verse fraught with meaning—

"Take time to be holy,
The world rushes on;
Spend much time in secret
With Jesus alone.
By looking to Jesus
Like Him thou shalt be;
Thy friends in thy conduct
His likeness shall see."

The real key to all true life is the home. Let it ever face toward the Father's House. Not only let the day begin and end with mercies acknowledged, and forgiveness sought, but let it be seen and felt that God is your chiefest joy.

A few months ago an old-time transport known as Thomas went out of the 'Golden Gate' in California on its last voyage. It was the first of the American transport ships. It had carried over four hundred thousand soldiers during the McKinley administration. It never lost a passenger. It never had a wreck. It made one hundred and five trips from San Francisco to the Philippines. It carried troops to China. Without the firing of a gun, or any kind of military 'good-bye salute' the old transport, having served its day of usefulness, was silently turned out on the old ocean and consigned to the mud flats.

It is a precious thought, my loved ones, that as I pass four-score years and look back upon life there is much I should have better done, but there is consolation in the fact, I have ever leaned hard on God. My voyage has not in a detailed sense been like the old transport, yet, I have never shunned being a freighter. My desire has been to share another's woes. I have tried to build character for myself and for others. I have prayerfully tried to stand in the breach in every hour of need. In matters that pertain to Church and State and upon all moral questions, I have sought the right, and not waited to see what was the majority side.

I am fully aware of the love and confidence of each one of you, and when I am called to pass from the ocean of time to the ocean of eternity, I trust it will be in some quiet hour. The old transport according to usage should have had an honored salute. I insist that mine shall have none. Let the life for good or evil be its own interpreter.

A number of years ago, I gave to each of you ten children a neat, limp-back Bible with your names in gilt letters on it. In my recent rounds of a month's visit to the various homes, I asked for a Bible and one of the grandchildren handed me one of those same books with her mother's name on it. I am now ordering thirteen just like those, if to be found, for our grandchildren trusting that from the oldest down to the youngest it may prove to be ever at hand.

Two of the number, L. P. B. Lipscomb and L. P. Brown, Jr., recently passed their nineteenth year and are soon to be graduated from colleges. The high attainment and standard of the young men are a source of great gratification. I shall expect them to ever be clean and pure and to be exemplars through life in their respective professions.

I note that the other eleven, from the youngest to the oldest, have each a distinct individuality which omens good results. I cannot hope to live long enough to see the rich fruition in their lives, but with confidence they will not be lacking. I do now rejoice, and trust through an open window in Heaven to still watch their courses.

Widely scattered, your visits to the old home are only occasional, and I know the question upon your minds is, "How are you, Papa and Grandfather?" "What is your real physical condition?" I see but little change from that of fifteen or twenty years ago. Though I am old, yet, I am strong and well.

"Truly my age is as a lusty winter, Frosty, but kindly."

This thought is constantly with me, "If wrinkles must be written upon my brow, let them not be written upon my heart. The spirit must not grow old."

Life's real solace, however, is in my Old Bible—

"Though the cover is worn,
And the pages are torn,
And though places bear traces of tears,
Yet more precious than gold,
Is the Book, worn and old;
This Old Book is my guide,
'Tis a friend by my side,
It will lighten and brighten my way.
And each promise I find
Soothes and gladdens my mind
As I read it and heed it today."

Esteem your Bible more than your necessary food.

In simple faith, love and prayer,
Father and Grandfather.

If Methodism Shall Have a Pentecost.

Rev. B. L. Wells.

HE near approach of the anniversary year of Pentecost 1930 has filled many hearts with a yearning to see our Methodism, which was born in a Pentecostal period, enjoy again the freshness and spiritual warmth of another Pentecostal period. Some would say that this is a vain wish and impossible of fulfillment and reason thus:

1. We are now a great world-wide church with an intricate organization and the early church was small and had little organization.

2. We have brought many of our people into the church through the channels of religious education and have put less emphasis upon a climacteric experience of conversion, therefore our people would not care for such an emotional experience as would probably come in a new Pentecost.

3. We Methodists are now an educated people, many college and university graduates among us, and the early Methodists were mostly an illiterate group who desired an emotional rather than a rational type of religious experience.

4. We live in a cold, calculating, commercial age in which the Church has learned the secret of mass production and uniform output from big-business so to talk of a Pentecostal experience for individuals would be to swing back into the hand-loom and grain-cradle age.

Such arguments as the above have been the narcotics which have drugged the Methodist Church into a mere machine when it should be a spiritual dynamo that would change "men dead in trespasses and sin" into men of holy life, having the "mind of Christ," alive unto every good work.

The arguments against a great Pentecostal experience for Methodism are really the greatest arguments why we should pray that God would send the Baptism of Power upon us.

Let us look at them again:

1. We are a great church with much organization and every organization or institution in the world tends to stultify the spiritual. It is the very nature of organization to seek for the uniform and oppose the exercise of freedom. "The spirit maketh alive" but organization tends to deaden. The machine age of uniformity does not produce great painters or musicians or sculptors or saints of the finest type. The greatest need of our church is for the Free Spirit of the Living God to break through Boards, Programs, Cabinets and every other form of organization and touch with the "coal from off the Altar" the heart and lips of every Methodist Church from our Bishops to the least gifted local preacher on Hard-Scrabble Circuit.

2. We are indeed an educated people even above the average and still hungering for knowledge since one out of every five students in the colleges and universities of the United States come from a Methodist home. But, the educated mind is often a menace save the heart be touched and renewed by the grace of God. We educated Methodists need a "heart-warming" throughout the church or we will cease to be a "Savor of life unto life" and how shall the world be spiritualized if we are impotent.

3. Indeed our churches are filled with the product of our religious educational system. But how few have the "witness of the Spirit;" how few can pray till the heavens answer or can be effective laborers in the harvest that is white. If every member of our great church would tarry till the Spirit comes we would take the world for our Christ within the present century. Present-day psychology teaches that life is never on a level plane but that we make progress in waves or curves. It is by the wave-crests of conversation, consecration and the spiritual baptism that we "may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God" not by conforming to this world but by the renewing of our minds.

4. We have become so enamored of the "business" ways of doing things that we have forgotten that God is spirit and his ways are spiritual. We have used earthly methods and received earthly results. Is it not time to try God's way if we want spiritual results? Bishop Meade at the McPherson, Kan., Conference is the author of this appeal, "We have tried everything else to get folk saved, let's go back again and try God's plan as he lays it down in his Word."

Now, to the main question before us: How can Methodism have a Pentecost?

1. Let's put spiritual interests in the forefront. Our bishops and leaders must tarry till the fire falls. They could well afford to give an entire year over to a spiritual conference and almost forget the business parts. Every preacher could be told to stay on the same charge for another year and the whole conference session be given to uplifting Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit, calling the preachers to a week of prayer and tarrying instead of the tiresome round of reports and anniversaries.

2. Our District Superintendents could tell the laymen that no preachers would be changed for a space of two years and the Superintendents could rally the forces for great revivals.

3. Our Boards could well spend a part of a year calling on God to send a Pentecost to our church instead of cluttering the mails with thousands of dollars worth of useless matter. A Pentecost in Methodism would give the Boards all they needed for a steady advance and unless Pentecost does come we are doomed to retreat and failure. Office chairs in World Service offices could profitably be exchanged for knee-pads. Fervent prayers could well replace many multigraphed letters.

4. Our preachers should be asked to pray till Pentecost comes to their own souls; then we would see sweeping revivals again in our churches. Many churches are asking for men who know and preach—"the Gospel, the power of God unto salvation."

Our Advocates could well afford to fill their pages for the next six months with articles that will challenge the church to think on the deeper matters of the Spirit. It is not enough to put in an occasional article such as came from the pen of Bishop Welch, but a real Pentecost will come only as the result of the impact of a week-by-week challenge from the press, pulpit, and religious teachers. Many of our people hunger for articles that present the great truths of a mystical religion and take certain other Christian literature because the Advocates fail to feed the common man on the Word in its depth and purity.

Our laymen should be challenged to face the fact of a great church which reports only one-third of one per cent increase for a whole year with hundreds of churches failing to report a single conversion. Is God pleased that a preacher and fifty or one hundred members should labor a year without one soul saved? Has Methodism lost her passion for souls? Our great church was not founded to formulate creeds but to spread scriptural holiness and save the lost. If Methodism fails at these points she may expect to be supplanted.

Why is she failing? Because the passion for souls is in eclipse and worldliness has crowded the hunger for holiness out of our lives.

What can save our beloved Church? A new Pentecost! A fresh world-wide baptism of the Holy Spirit will cause us to hear again the shouts of joy, the ringing testimonies, the fervent prayer. The anointing with power will send preachers and laymen to seek the lost and lift the saved.

O Methodism to your knees! Ask God to forgive our continued laziness and indifference. Tarry till the Power falls! God is not deaf! On to Pentecost!

FAITH IN MONEY MATTERS.

W. W. CARY, Business Manager
Asbury College.

HE recent terrific smash in the stock market all over the country has once more emphasized the important question: "Where shall I invest my capital? In what can I trust?"

There are many devout, godly people interested in the preaching of the gospel of full salvation, and the advancement of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ who live a life of faith in many matters, but their faith does not extend to their money transactions. They believe in God and in his many promises, but when they have money to invest they put all their confidence in the reputation of certain business leaders who are supposed to be conservative, sound and successful in handling money, and forget Kingdom needs. They may be sincerely grieved in heart at the lack of sanctified men as faithful preachers of the gospel in our pulpits, and the consequent degeneration of our churches and church members of every denomination; but those same men, when there is a thousand dollars or more to invest, will put it into stocks or bonds of some strictly commercial organization, and turn the capital to the development of steel, public utilities, automobiles, etc.; when on their desks lie urgent appeals to invest in the development of self-sacrificing, Spirit-filled preachers, missionaries and evangelists. This is often called common sense, shrewd judgment, and such conduct is explained by the statement that the leaders in institutions doing religious work cannot be trusted in money matters. How often such money is lost as though a rebuke were being given from the Lord.

The experience of generation after generation does not justify the use of the phrases, "common sense and shrewd judgment." Oddly enough God's promises are just as true in money matters as they are in things of the Spirit. Christ himself wasted scarcely any time about money matters—that all engrossing subject to which so many Christians devote almost their total energy. When he needed actual cash he plucked it out of the mouth of a near-by fish, as though to indicate to his followers that supplying necessary cash was about the smallest part of God's care for them. The Bible is filled from cover to cover with statements about the ephemeral quality of commercial organizations and of man-made enterprises. Likewise there are innumerable instances of direct statements about the unfailing quality of God's own works, and the assured future of men who put their trust in him.

Let those Christians who today sit in sorrow over the loss of money invested in houses and lands, in stocks and bonds, open the one sure guide to safe investments and examine the instructions there given on how to invest money wisely for the biggest returns and the greatest safety of capital. The directions can be selected almost at random. Turn to the Psalms and we find:

"Blessed are they that put their trust in him."

"But let all those that put their trust in Thee rejoice."

"Let them ever shout for joy because Thou defendest them. . . for Thou Lord wilt bless the righteous; with favor wilt Thou compass him as with a shield."

"Some trust in chariots and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God." (That might be restated in modern language, "Some trust in property deeds and first mortgages and some in stocks and bonds.")

"There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty."

Have you ever stopped to see whether such statements as these could be taken into account in financial affairs as well as in spiritual matters?

This is not to say that you should serve the Lord for the sake of material prosperity. Such base motives have ever been rebuked, but in getting away from such a motive, some sincere people have gone too far in the other direction and have utterly divorced their pocketbook from their religious life. Not only "the cattle on a thousand hills" belong to the Lord; but also the total financial resources of banks and the earnings of corporations are in his hands, and it is pleasing to him when his own children follow his voice in every department of their lives.

Shrewd judgment and level-headed common sense act according to experience and past history. It is the dragon voice of the enemy, which says all institutions devoted to the training of Spirit-filled men and women for special Kingdom service, are risky places to put money. The facts disprove such a statement. It is true that there have been at times men with more zeal than judgment, who have inaugurated institutions which have proven unsound, financially, but there are many such institutions who have an unbroken history of sound financial judgment and probity.

Asbury College is an institution which proves this statement. Here a conservative, sound business policy has been adhered to over a considerable period of years. There have been no annuities issued at fantastic interest rates. There have been no huge bond issues put out. Money has been refused rather than to pay an extraordinary rate, which conservative business policy would not warrant. As a result obligations have been met promptly, and today Asbury College is glad to set forth its record in the handling of money matters. There are other such institutions and they offer an opportunity to invest money not only as gifts, but in annuities which produce a lifelong income, and in notes and bonds that can be accounted safe.

Is it not strange that corporations engaged in strictly commercial pursuits have unlimited money resources, and only need to put forth a statement that they will receive money to have the money over-subscribed; whereas, such institutions as Asbury College have to repeat and continue a statement of their money needs? The number of students that can be adequately cared for is limited. The total equipment, the teaching staff and the endowment is no where nearly as large as it should be.

But "wisdom is justified of her children." Today all over America there are men and women who thought they were living a life of faith but who forgot that faith in God can also extend to the pocketbook; who are today counting their losses and retiring in grief for some salutary meditation on the vanishing quality of money when applied to commercial enterprises.

Whereas, those men and women who went a step further in the faith program, and invested their money in the bonds, notes and annuities of Asbury College and similar institutions, are receiving steadfast income and are assured as to their future. It is not the intention of this statement to claim that no one should invest in enterprises other than religious, but first things should be put first, and so long as there are needs for the education of Spirit-filled and wholly sanctified workers for God, the money should be pouring in in an unfailling stream until the word goes out, "We have more than enough. Please cease to send it." It is not improper to read Psalm 37, verses three to six and apply them to financial matters as well as to every other activity of living, for when anyone invests in an institution utterly devoted to the work of God, one is indeed putting trust in the Lord and comes under the promise, "Trust in the Lord and do good, so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."

The one surest human activity on earth today is the development of holiness in life and heart among God's people, and the one institution, that is certain to endure among all those established by men, is one which is whole heartedly and faithfully devoted to sending out to every portion of the world men and women filled with the Holy Ghost, to preach the gospel of full salvation to every portion of the globe.

"The liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall be watered also himself." Prov. 11:25.

Three C's in the Christian Life.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

MANY of us have noticed the placard placed at railroad crossings bearing these words: "Cross Crossings Cautiously." When I see this warning card staring me in the face, it reminds me that somebody has been interested enough to warn travelers of the danger that lies in their path, and is seeking to check their speed, lest they rush into the jaws of death.

These three C's have a lesson in them for us as Christians, which we would do well to heed. I shall let them stand for "Concern, Confession, Consecration." Let us at the same time take them as a sign of warning as we travel the road of life, remembering that if we disregard them we may rush into dangers that threaten the soul's eternal welfare.

The word "concern" means anxiety, solicitude, interest, and applied to us is a foundation stone which underlies our fate for this life, and that which is to come. A sinner will never repent of his sins unless he has an interest in his spiritual welfare, a deep solicitude for his moral character here, and his eternal happiness hereafter. When a sinner becomes concerned about his soul's salvation he becomes serious, the Holy Spirit convicts him of sin, and he resolves to better living. This, then, is the very first step toward becoming reconciled to God; First, concern, then confession, then consecration to God of one's being for time and eternity.

The word "confession" means to acknowledge one's fault or sin; to uncover, as it were, your life, and bare your sins and crimes to the world. It takes grit and grace to go through this ordeal, but when God sees we are really sorry for our past wickedness he turns the stream of grace into our heart and enables us to go to the bottom of our deepest need, bringing us into the light of a new day, a day made radiant by the Sun of righteousness who has arisen with healing in his wings. "Open confession is good for the soul" is what we have heard many times, but its familiarity does not lessen its truthfulness. The Word says, "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." After we have confessed our wrongdoings, then we are to confess the joy of salvation which follows confession of sins.

Concern and confession are the steps that lead us to the next step of "Consecration," which means to dedicate, or devote to some special purpose. To the Christian, it means that he abandons himself, or herself to God, absolutely, to be under his direction and control. It is expressed in that verse by Davies:

"Lord, I am thine, entirely thine.
Purchased and saved by blood divine;
With full consent thine I would be,
And own thy sovereign right in me."

It is to be "sold out" to Jesus as our Lord and Master, having no will of our own, save as it is lost in his will. It is to have the rivulet of our little wills lost in the Amazon of his will. To be wholly consecrated, as Paul indicates in Rom. 12:1, "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Not a dead sacrifice, but a living sacrifice; a sacrifice that means activity in his service; a sacrifice that will count for something in things spiritual for yourself and for others.

Nor is consecration all; true, it is our part, but God asks this of us that he may show himself strong in our behalf. He asks us to lay ourselves upon his altar, a holy sacrifice, separate from the world, even ourselves, that he might sanctify the gift, make it clean from sin's defilement, that the hindering cause may be removed that would deter us from being our best for him. We should bear in mind that,

"God has his best things for the few
Who dare to stand the test;
He has his second best for those
Who will not have the best."

To which class do we belong? Are we content to be a "second," or do we with holy solicitude crave to enjoy God's best? Paul exhorts us to "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, (how?) looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith."

Reader, always bear in mind that the reward of consecration is "God's best"—a heart from sin set free, and filled with love divine. How small is our all compared to HIS ALL! But that is all he asks—ourselves—holy, living sacrifices.

I wonder if we can all truly say with Frances Havergal:

"Take my will, and make it thine;
It shall be no longer mine.
Take my heart, it is thine own;
It shall be thy royal throne.
Take my love; my Lord, I pour
At thy feet its treasure store.
Take myself, and I will be,
Ever, only, all for thee."

The flights of the human mind are not from enjoyment to enjoyment, but from hope to hope.—Johnson.

Just What Your Daughter Needs.

It is well in selecting presents for our children to know what is best for them, and we are taking the liberty of telling the mothers who read this paper of a wonderfully attractive book that has sold by the thousand. The title is as attractive as the book—Beautiful Girlhood—and the contents of the book are such as will bless and encourage your girl in her struggles through those transitional years from girlhood to womanhood. Many of our girls do not do because they do not know; this book treats of the various phases of a girl's life that will help her to mature into a beautiful, modest, noble woman. The author says, "This little book is born of a desire to help and encourage our girls who are struggling with the problems that come up in teens." Such topics as "Character Building," "A Sunny Disposition," "Sincerity," "A Christian," "Choosing a Lifework," and other equally interesting subjects are treated in this opportune book. The book is beautifully bound in blue cloth, with extra cover, has splendid, readable print, and sells for only $1.00. Do not fail to order this for your daughter, or niece, or other young women friends you may have, and it will be sure to please and profit. MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

SAVED FROM SECTARIANISM

E. E. SHELHAMER.

AND John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and we forbid him because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, Forbid him not."

Mark 9:38, 39.

There are different degrees of salvation. First, we are saved from all outward sin. Then in entire sanctification we are saved from all inward pollution—all unholy tempers. Many good people stop here, thinking they have reached the highest peak on the "Delectable Mountains." But, beloved, there are heights and lengths ahead that no one dreamed of when he first knelt at the foot of the cross. As an instance, there are not very many who are wholly saved from prejudice and sectarianism. They imagine that to be loyal to their church, they must be more or less biased against others, especially those who are likely to be rivals and preach practically the same things. Yea, holiness people may need help in this respect.

Here was the "beloved disciple," perhaps thinking to himself, I will prove to the "Master" my superior loyalty and in return get a fine commendation when I tell him that "we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and we forbid him because he followeth not us." Yes, the preacher was casting out devils and doing it in the name of Jesus, but because our label was not on him or his converts; because he did not line up with us in every particular, "we forbid him."

John Wesley in his sermon on "Bigotry" says: "Suppose, then, a man have no intercourse with us, suppose he be not of our party, suppose he separate from our church, yea, and widely differ from us, both in judgment, practice, and affection; yet if we see even this man 'casting out devils, Jesus saith, 'Forbid him not.'"

"Everyone is either on God's side, or on Satan's. Are you on God's side? Then you will not only not forbid any man that casts out devils, but you will labor, to the uttermost of your power, to forward him in the work. You will readily acknowledge the work of God, and confess the greatness of it. You will remove all difficulties and objections, as far as may be, out of his way. You will strengthen his hands by speaking honorably of him before all men, and avowing the things which you have seen and heard. You will encourage others to attend upon his word, to hear him whom God hath sent. And you will omit no actual proof of tender love, which God gives you an opportunity of showing him.

"If we willingly fail in any of these points, if we either directly or indirectly forbid him, 'because he followeth not us,' then we are bigots. It is too strong an attachment to, or fondness for, our own party, opinion, church and religion.

"Take care, that you do not convict yourself of bigotry, by your unreadiness to believe that any man does cast out devils, who differs from you, or because he does not worship God according to that scheme of religion, which you have received from your fathers.

"Examine yourself: Am I not sorry, that God should thus own and bless a man that holds such erroneous opinions? Do I not discourage him, because he is not of my church, by disputing with him concerning it, by raising objections, and by perplexing his mind with distant consequences? Do I show anger, contempt, or unkindness of any sort, either in my words or actions? Do I not mention behind his back, his (real or supposed) faults, his defects, or infirmities? Do not I hinder sinners from hearing his word?

If you do any of these things, you are a bigot to this day.

"If you will avoid all bigotry, go on. In every instance of this kind, whatever the instrument be, acknowledge the finger of God. And not only acknowledge, but rejoice in his work, and praise his name with thanksgiving. Encourage whomsoever God is pleased to employ, to give himself wholly up thereto. Speak well of him wheresoever you are; defend his character and his mission. Enlarge, as far as you can, his sphere of action; show him all kindness in word and deed; and cease not to cry to God in his behalf, that he may save both himself and them that hear him."

There are two extremes, and he is well balanced who has found the happy medium. There is the narrow, churchly spirit, then on the other hand, there is the insubordinate, independent air. To swing to either extreme is to put a limitation on one's usefulness in soul winning. Thank God, it is possible to be loyal to your "fold" and yet recognize and fellowship "other sheep" which are not of your brand. It requires a big soul to do this.

We are not pleading for divisions. It might be a blessing if all Christians had but one name, especially, those who believe and practice practically the same things. But, on the other hand it is a fact that God did not organize his chosen people into one tribe, but twelve. Each patriarch and tribe had a different characteristic. God and nature teach variety. It seems that no man, or movement is big enough to see and magnify proportionately, all truth in all its phases.

The great battle between sin and righteousness, under king Emmanuel, is composed of regiments known as churches, each fighting the common foe under its own peculiar regulations. What a pity when they begin to spend their ammunition on each other, rather than upon the common foe.

Few are properly balanced. It seems almost impossible to find one who is considered loyal to his movement, who is not more or less biased against others. Some cannot worship freely with anything except their own little crowd. Others go to the other extreme, put on the soft pedal and tone down to suit every crowd they chance to meet.

Personally, we rejoice that God has saved us from a sectarian spirit. And the wonder is that we did not do as some of the "Church of God" factions demand, viz: come out of every sect and join their sect. To do so would have made us more sectarian than before. For we have observed that these dear people as a rule are more intolerant and less lovable toward other churches than almost any other class.

Wesley said, "The world is my parish." And again, "Go not where they want you, but where they want you most. Go not where you can do good, but where you can do the most good."

Dont's For Preachers.

REV. F. LINCICOME.

Don't neglect the course of study. The course given you by the church comprises a very brief and well-selected list of books to be studied or read as helps to the understanding of preaching the word. There is not a subject included in the course that is not exceedingly profitable. God forbid that any of us with time and strength and mental vigor should try to excuse ourselves from the mastery of this valuable course.

It is a question in my mind whether a person can be really spiritual and at the same time intellectually lazy.

What excuse can there be for a preacher who claims to be called of God to preach the word, but who spends far more time reading the newspapers than he does in studying his course of study and those books which help to the understanding of the Bible? What excuse can there be for the one who is always so busy building chicken coops or shopping or gadding about as a mere social mixer that he cannot give even one hour a day to his study? It is not to be wondered that thousands of preachers fail to grow in grace and fruitfulness by the way they spend their time. God puts no premium on ignorance and the preacher who is too lazy to study need not be surprised if he fails to be approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

If a preacher refuses to give himself to the things which God hath appointed as a means of his spiritual and mental development, he need not wonder if his profiting fails to appear and he neither be able to save himself or those that hear him.

Don't forget that a call to the ministry is a call to study.

Help Some Boy to Find Christ

This Christmas. Just at this time we have gotten hold of one of the most attractive Testaments, just the thing for a boy to carry in his pocket. There is a place for the name and address; three pages devoted to telling one How to Become a Christian; then two songs, one "Carry Your Bible," and another, "Jesus is a Friend of Mine." The music is written with the songs.

There are a number of attractive colored illustrations, and for a small Testament, the type excels any we have seen for clearness, which makes it easy to read. The chapter numbers are in figures, and the binding is a beautiful dark green imitation leather.

This is just the Testament for a Christmas gift; it is so attractively gotten up that a boy just cannot resist reading it. The price is only 50c.

It is not what we have, but what the Lord can put into us that settles everything. "Ye shall receive,"—there is our deliverance, there is our hope!—Mark Guy Pearse.

The Illuminated Bible Story Book

For a child from 7 to 12 years old. It is handsomely bound, has an attractive jacket, presentation page, is beautifully illustrated in colors, printed on enamel paper in a beautiful dark blue ink, large, regular old folks type. Eighteen Bible stories are interestingly told, beginning with "Noah and the Ark" and ending with "Jesus Before Pilate." A little 10-year-old girl stepped into our office just a few days ago, picked up a copy of this book and was soon lost in it, the stories were so interesting. Give it for Christmas. Price 60c.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

LOUISVILLE CONFERENCE.

Rev. C. K. Dickey, D.D.

The eighty-fourth session of the Louisville Annual Conference opened in Princeton, Ky., a town of some eight thousand people, in the beautiful new $75,000 church, Rev. P. H. Davis, pastor, Bishop H. M. DuBose, presiding.

After devotional service led by the presiding bishop, a fifteen-year-old boy, Ralph Cash, son of Dr. W. L. Cash, delivered an eloquent address of welcome, which will be published in full in the Methodist Layman; also an address of welcome was delivered by the Mayor of the city. Baxter W. Napier, the efficient former Secretary, was re-elected Secretary without opposition.

The session was most harmonious and brotherly love was evidenced everywhere. There was an ease and rest among the preachers which was produced by the open cabinet method, yet the appointments, for the most part, were not known until Saturday.

The Louisville Times, for the first time in eighty-four years, printed a list of the tentative appointments, subject to change, in the last issue of Saturday afternoon, which were for the most part correct.

The Conference elected early in the session, the following clerical delegates: A. R. Kasey, who led the delegation, and has for a number of years, is the new presiding elder of the Louisville District. J. C. Akin, J. W. Johnson, P. H. Davis, B. W. Napier; Alternates, H. H. Jones, C. W. Hummel. The lay delegates are J. H. Dickey, brother of this writer, who is Conference Lay Leader, led the delegation on the first ballot, the others are, Mrs. W. J. Piggott, J. A. Akin, S. M. Harris, C. W. Taylor. The alternates are R. S. Cooper and Wm. Elliot.

The following connectional brethren were present and addressed the Conference: Dr. W. P. King, Dr. Jno. W. Shackford, Dr. W. G. Cram, Dr. C. C. Jarrel, Dr. C. N. Allen, Dr. L. E. Todd, Dr. R. E. Nollner, Mr. G. L. Morelock, and perhaps some others.

Four were admitted on trial: Revs. S. P. B. True, C. S. Raney, Chas. Hall of the Primitive Methodist Church, Stanley, England, whose orders were recognized, as was H. Carlisle, who was received an elder from the Christian Church. One of the four admitted, C. S. Raney, was voted in on two-thirds rule. Two who were recommended for admission on trial were voted down by two-thirds rule. Rev. S. A. Arnold was re-admitted. Rev. R. L. Oliver was transferred to the Missouri Conference and is appointed to the Missouri City Circuit, Richmond District. Twelve were admitted into full connection, viz: A. C. Bowles, H. H. Ogles, R. H. Garrison, Otha Neathery, V. V. Capps, R. V. Mathews, Owen Hoskinson, T. C. Howell, C. D. Owen, M. L. Fudge, L. F. Southern, W. C. Cassell. Two were superannuated, R. H. Roe, G. Y. Wilson. Three died, B. F. Wilson, J. E. King, F. A. Mitchell. Seven preachers' wives died during the year, whose memoirs will appear in the minutes. The Conference voted to change the time from holding the memorial service on Sunday afternoon to a week day session of the conference next year.

The districts reported ten licensed to preach, making 142 local preachers. There were received into the church an increase of 668 members over last year making a total conference membership of 63,838. There were 1462 adults baptized and 327 infants. Sunday schools 417, members enrolled 41,266. Missionary societies 257, members 6,678. Brotherhoods 3,123 members. Epworth Leagues 139, members 3833. Lindsay-Wilson, Jr., College at Columbia, and Logan College at Russellville have enrolled this year 463 students, the largest in their history at this time of the year. The two schools have property valued at $325,000.00 and an indebtedness of over $50,000.00. To help liquidate this indebtedness and secure larger equipment an endowment for these growing and overcrowded schools the Conference has appointed Rev. T. L. Hulse, Educational Secretary, who will give his entire time to this work. Rev. P. L. Piercy was made Missionary Secretary and will give his entire time to this work.

Mr. E. S. Boswell who has been agent for the Methodist Orphans Home in Louisville, Ky., of both the Kentucky and Louisville Conference, resigned on advice of his physician after serving as agent for 32 years, and the matron, Mrs. Jessie Way Williams, was appointed agent. She addressed the Conference and raised $2,405. There are 62 orphans in the home at present.

Rev. B. C. Horton, D. D., is the new editor of the Central Methodist, the official organ of both the Kentucky and Louisville Conference, taking the place of Rev. T. L. Hulse, former editor the past seven years.

One of the best features of the entire conference was the evangelistic services conducted each afternoon of the Conference by Rev. Alonzo Monk, General Evangelist, Dallas, Texas. The preachers and laymen were greatly blessed and helped by the preaching of this Spirit-filled man.

There were 189 appointments in the seven districts, 174 charges and there were 75 changes. One new presiding elder was made, Dr. R. Kasey was put on the Louisville District, succeeding Dr. A. P. Lyon, who had completed his second quadrennium, bringing his district to one of the outstanding 100% districts of Southern Methodism, having paid all claims in full the past four years, and this one done by each charge without any outside help.

Dr. J. W. Johnson, who came to us from the North Alabama Conference nine years ago, goes back to Fourth Ave. Methodist Church, Louisville, Ky., for the tenth year. He was elected the second time delegate to the General Conference, an honor here rarely bestowed on a transfer. He is held in high esteem among us. Fourth Avenue is one of the one hundred leading churches in Southern Methodism.

Dr. A. P. Lyon goes to Settle Memorial Church, Owensboro, succeeding Rev. B. C. Hodge, who came to us six years ago from the North Alabama Conference, and is now stationed at Crescent Hill, Louisville, which is perhaps forging to the front more than any church in the Conference rivaling Fourth Ave. Ex-mayor Houston Quinn is a member of this church.

Our Secretary was honored for the first time by being elected delegate to the General Conference. He went from First Church, Henderson, to State Street, Bowling Green, which is a very strong station with a $60,000 educational plant recently erected by the outgoing pastor, Dr. A. R. Kasey.

Rev. Leonidas Robinson, Ph.D., was moved after three years on Bowling Green district to the Owensboro district, and G. W. Hummel who had served four years on the Owensboro district was placed the second time on the Bowling Green district.

The Conference raised $847,976.00 for all purposes, 55 charges paid 100%, 15 paid nothing, the average for all was 71.49% paid.

The next Conference of 1930 goes to Bowling Green, Ky. This scribe was re-elected Conference Reporter. The appointments were read at 4:30 Sunday afternoon.

One of the interesting features that came before the Conference was the different memorials that were voted on, both by the committee on memorials and the Conference. The Conference voted on a memorial recommending that a law be passed requiring all the Bishops to hold an open cabinet, and to tell, or cause to be told, to the preachers their appointments at least thirty-six hours before the appointments are read. This also requested the 1930 General Conference return to us Bishop H. M. DuBose. Concurrence was twice voted asking that the law be changed from six to two years, before laymen could be eligible for election as delegate to the Annual and the General Conference.

Rev. Virgil Elgin, a non-user of tobacco, offered a resolution that all reference in the Discipline to refrain from the use of tobacco by candidates on admission into full connection, be removed. The Conference voted it down by an overwhelming majority.

A memorial was signed by a minister's wife that the word "obey" be stricken from the marriage vow. The committee voted non-concurrence, the Conference voted concurrence. The Conference voted by large majority to retain the law in the discipline requiring a two-thirds vote to admit an applicant for admission on trial who does not meet the educational requirements.

REPORT OF THE GADDIS-MOSER EVANGELISTIC PARTY.

The Nazarenes at Fargo, N. Dak., occupy what was formerly a Baptist Church building, near the center of this the largest city in the State. This work is new and the Lord gave us a revival which will help them on to better things in the future. Attendance filled the building and some turned away the last night. The altar was filled at the first call and seeking was good through the campaign, closing with 17 at the altar the last night. Some remarkable cases, among them a schoolteacher who wrote that her life was influencing her scholars since her conversion.

Through the courtesy of Bro. McCracken, pastor of the Fargo Union Mission, we broadcasted a service each Sunday morning over WDAY, receiving good response from same. Bro. H. J. Hart, Dist. Supt., added his refreshing personality to the services of the last week and we rejoiced in his good fellowship. His wife is the good pastor of this work and carries a burden for souls. They sure treated us royally in every way. We plan to return to Fargo in 1931.

Following this we engaged Monday night at Freeman, S. Dak., with the Sunnyside Bible School in a very gracious service and Tuesday morning in a chapel service with the Freeman College. This settlement of German Mennonites are a lovely people and received us so kindly and sent us away refreshed.

Ploughing through Nebraska mud to Wauwata we began with Bro. G. E. Truesdell and his band of Pilgrims. Despite bad roads and other unfavorable circumstances this meeting climaxed in a victory with 22 at altar the closing night. We were led to take an offering for the pastor who is suffering a nervous break and needs rest. $75.00 in cash was so cheerfully given in about five minutes.

Then spending four nights with the Denver, Colo., Holiness Mission, Bro. J. M. Ford, pastor, our fourth time in this great city. Ten seekers the first night and 23 the last and a blessed time of victory throughout. We were privileged to attend day sessions of the District Ministerial Convention of the Nazarene Church where we furnished music and singing and it was a profitable time of blessing and good fellowship. Will return to Denver in 1931.

Leaving Denver Friday morning we stopped at the Colorado Springs Bible Training School for a chapel service with Supt. Thomas and his fine student body, and then hurried on to Wiley, Colo., for a night service with Bro. Hill and his Pilgrims.

Sunday morning following we began in the Calvary M. E. Church, Wichita, Kan., our fourth time in this city. Bro. W. E. McCoy, the faithful pastor, had his church in fine shape and on the first night the building well filled and 32 at the altar. We expect a great time of victory here.

BECK BROTHERS AT BOWLING GREEN, KENTUCKY.

Our last tent meeting was at Bowling Green. We did not know if we could have the meeting or not on account of the weather. It rained and turned cold. We put in six oil heaters and a coal heater, and put down plenty of straw. The people came on just the same, many driving from Franklin, Ky., and miles the other side. We only had one or two nights some one did not come from Franklin, Ky. We had some eight or ten ministers in the meeting, some attending regularly. Our Free Methodist brethren were nice to let us have some church pews. We got some chairs from Broadway Methodist Church. Rev. Ogles is pastor. He showed a beautiful spirit in assisting us in heaters and his prayers helped greatly. Rev. R. H. Garrison attended regularly; he did everything he could for us and the dear Lord paid him for it by saving his little daughter.

Brother Copas was with us several nights. Bro. Parker spoke one night for us and everyone enjoyed it. I do not remember the number saved, some ten or twelve, many were blessed. I stayed over and gave a temperance lecture; the tent was full. The entire crowd voted they would not vote for any man that did not declare himself dry for any office in the election that was to soon follow.

We find the people everywhere hungry for the gospel. They will come miles to hear of a Savior that can save from all sin. They want to hear a sermon preached on old-fashion hell. They want to hear a sermon on the popular sins of the day. They respond to a sermon preached on the Second Coming of the Lord. They will drive miles and miles in the rain to hear a sermon on the beautiful doctrine of holiness. They get hungry when you preach on sanctification. You cannot scare the people with the Word of God. The trouble is, God cannot get preachers enough to declare the whole counsel of God. This world is sin-sick; it is starving to death. I can fill any hall, any church, any tent with the plain gospel of the Son of God.

Our slate is filling up for 1930. We go to Tennessee for two meetings in 1930. We are to hold two Tabernacle meetings, one at Scottsville, Ky., and at Pentecostal Park, Glasgow, Ky. Rev. C. B. Hutcherson of Ft. Covington, N. Y., to assist me in this meeting at Dr. H. C. Morrison's birthplace near Glasgow, Ky. My address is 1019 So. 4th St., Louisville, Ky. A. Stanley Beck.

A REPORT.

As I read The Pentecostal Herald, especially the earnest entreaties of that grand old man, the uncrowned king of the Holiness Movement, the bearer of full salvation, the Whitefield of the twentieth century, as he lies flat of his back crying through the press to the holiness people to press the battle with all their might by preaching it, praying it, living it, and scattering it abroad through his? no, the lovers of God; paper, it stirs my heart. God's command is his enabling act. When he said, "Repent, be ye holy, go ye therefore, and teach all nations," he made it possible by his sacrificial death to obtain power by the baptism with the Holy Ghost to carry out his commands.

Men of God, let us put part of our tithes into The Pentecostal Herald and get it before the people. I held a revival for a pastor in West Virginia whose wife, while cleaning out an old parsonage, found an old Pentecostal Herald, read and subscribed for it and got sanctified before she ever heard a holiness sermon.

The press is one of the greatest powers in the world. I am rejoicing over the news that dear Doctor Morrison is rapidly regaining his health and hopes to be able to take his place in the field again. May the God of all grace grant it.

I have been in some good revivals since reporting through The Herald. In my last two meetings the Lord was with us in a gracious way. Souls found peace in the crucified one and the churches were encouraged and strengthened. The people were very generous and nice to us. They supplied all our financial needs and besides that gave us a nice flock of White Orpington hens and two turkeys.

I have some dates open through the winter months. Also have some camp meeting dates open. I go anywhere in the United States or Canada for a freewill offering trusting God and the people. Pastors, laymen, camp meeting Committees, anybody, call me anywhere you need me; don't promise me one cent, but keep me on the firing line. I have been re-appointed Conference Evangelist and recommended as General Evangelist by the Kentucky Conference.

Dr. Morrison says of me: "We commend him to our brethren desiring a revival that means a gospel and experience which prepares one for judgement day and heaven." I would like to spend much of the winter in the South, in church or tent, yea, any place for God's glory. L. E. Williams.

mony. He is convinced; their enthusiasm and faith are communicated to him, and at once each man seizes a corner of the sick man's couch and they are away to the Lord. I judge there is no debate, one insisting that they carry him through the field, another contending for a back alley, another for Broadway, and another for Main Street. Faith and love, along with enthusiastic service, are very unifying. They at once agree upon the shortest and quickest route to bring their needy brother into the presence of the Master.

At one time, their way seemed blocked, but it is difficult to block the way of earnest men full of faith and on fire with love. The house is crowded, the doors are full, the windows are jammed. They possibly hesitate for a moment with no thought of giving up their object and at once they decide to climb up on top of the house. You understand that these oriental houses were flat-roofed, and that there were outside stairways leading to the top of the house which was a comfortable place for rest in the cool breeze after the setting of the sun. These men betake themselves to this stairway and are soon upon the roof, locating the Lord beneath them. At once they begin tearing off the roof; directly there is an opening; and with cords they lower the sick man down upon the very heads of the throng, who in astonishment press out of the way, and the sick man on his cot is stretched out at the feet of Jesus. How fortunate for this poor fellow that he had friends who were determined, who would overcome obstacles, who would rip the roof off a house but what they would bring a helpless brother to the feet of the Master.

Jesus looks up to see where the man came from and there are four heads filling the hole through which the sick man descended. They are looking straight into the face of Jesus. Faith is written all over their faces. Every lineament beams with confidence. Their eyes are full of trust. It isn't necessary for them to speak; Jesus can see their faith. While their lips utter no sentences, their faith speaks in eloquence. It says, "Master, we know who you are; we believe in your power, your compassion, your love; we know that you can heal this man, and we believe you will. We have brought him to you for that purpose; our efforts are ended; here thy power begins."

Jesus could not disappoint these men. It was not in his infinite heart to do so. He never did such a thing before nor since through all the centuries; faith appeals to him, moves him, and secures from him the expression of his love and the blessing of his power.

Jesus says, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." This was a surprise. At once, it awakens criticism; complaint is raised in the company. Some one who has no faith, no love, has brought no needy person, torn up no roof, at once says, "Who can forgive sins but God only?" Jesus rebuked him and said, "Whether it is easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk?" Jesus was here showing his absolute authority, his Godhead, his rulership over disease and sin, and he continued: "But that you may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house."

The man was healed and forgiven. He leaped up and seized his cot. It was not necessary to crawl out through the hole in the roof; the people gave way and let him walk out at the door.

We have here a wonderful lesson on how to bring men to Christ. First of all, the sinner is a spiritual paralytic. He will not get to the Lord by himself. He needs help, must have help. Revivals do not start themselves. Sinners do not stumble about in their spiritual blindness and accidentally run up on Jesus. It was the plan of God to use men to win men. He appoints his children to go and bring the lost to him. In order to have a revival of religion and the winning of souls there must be faith in Jesus Christ, faith in his deity, his Godhead, his authority and power to forgive sins, and his willingness to do it. There must be faith that he can and will save, not only the children, the decent people, the young folks, but that his power can reach those in the far country who have been smitten by sin, who are paralyzed in wickedness, who are dead in trespasses, who are far away. There must be a faith that claims the worst of sinners.

This faith must have for its companion and yokefellow, love. There must be Christian love for the worst of men. There must be a holy longing that goes out for the outcast, the drunkard, the thief, the criminal, the vilest of women, and those prodigals who have wandered farthest from the Father's house. This faith and love must be united and produce service. There must be action; an inactive faith and a timid love that hesitate to put forth effort are of little worth. Faith, love, effort, combination, zeal that will not hesitate, that will not be blocked nor halted, that will climb up on housetops, tear up roofs, invent means and find out ways to bring men to Christ,—these are what count, that bring revivals, that rescue the perishing, that rob Satan of his victims led at his will; that glorify God, that give Jesus an opportunity to show what he can do.

Observe that this man got more than he was expecting; more than his friends were looking for. They sought to get him healed, but he received the forgiveness of his sin. How like our Lord! There is more in him than we know. He gives greater blessing than we are expecting. He pours out grace and mercy abundantly, if we lay our desires at his feet and lift to him our faces radiant with faith. I have no doubt this man, once helpless with palsy and lost in sin, is somewhere today in the grand galleries of the universe with our Lord. Those four men with faith and love for capital to begin business with started things going that will go through all eternity.

Let the children of God get busy; kindle the fires of your faith; warm up your heart with love; locate the helpless; find out where the sinners are; go after them; bunch together; search them out; impart your enthusiasm to the dull, dead souls of the lost;

arouse them; bring them in; overcome the obstacles; break the fence down; tear the roof off; press through the throng; let nothing prevent; God delights in a holy recklessness that will not be stopped by any obstacle. "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."

There is no work so great and blessed, and such a means of grace to the worker, as bringing souls to Christ. If you have faith, and love, and religious industry, and holy zeal, you can bring a soul to Jesus; then you have accomplished a greater work than to lead an army to victory, to build a city, or to rule an empire.

Recent Lynching in Florida.

SOME weeks ago a colored man in Florida committed the unpardonable sin against a young woman. He was captured, identified and placed in jail. If I remember correctly, he was taken from one prison to another for safe keeping, and finally landed in a jail at Tallahassee, the capital of the state. But the sheriff, so eager for his protection, took him out of the jail to seek some other place where he would be more secure, and meets a heavily armed mob with guns presented, who take the prisoner from the sheriff.

Had the sheriff kept the man in the Tallahassee jail two double-barrel shotguns loaded with buckshot would have made him secure against any mob. Not a doubt about this. Mobs act with the understanding that they are secured from punishment; that the victim is the only one in danger. When bullets begin to whistle among them they break for safety.

The colored man was hung, shot to pieces, dragged some distance and burned. We understand investigations are to be made. We get tired of that word "investigation." We find it constantly in the newspapers. Some drunken driver runs into the car of an innocent family, kills and cripples, and the papers say "investigations are to be made." Banks are robbed by the cashiers and clerks and "investigations are to be made." Senators and millionaires have a big dinner and draw their whiskey flasks from their hip pockets and drink until their eyes are bleared and their breath as fragrant as the perfume of a certain species of cat, which we shall not mention, and "investigations are to be made."

Always after a mob seizes a victim and reeks their vengeance in the most cruel manner upon him, "investigations are to be made." Very little ever comes of it. This mob, to which we refer, not only sinned against their victim who would have been duly punished, but they sinned against Florida. They sinned against the Southland. They sinned against the whole United States. Their crime is published in foreign countries in heathen lands and held up before devout missionaries as a proof that our Christianity has not saved our people from cruel barbarism. Most of all, they have sinned against God. Every one of them is a bloody murderer, and he never can have a clear, easy conscience again. If he dares to reflect upon his conduct he will see his tortured victim in the night; he will be startled in his dreams; he will carry a load that will disturb his mind and weaken his body, and without deep repentance and forgiveness will go into the torments of an eternal hell.

The public press, the religious press, teachers in the schools and preachers in the pulpit ought to cry out against mobs of every kind that are undertaking to take the law in their own hands and reek their vengeance upon some hapless victim, guilty or innocent, as the case may be.

Men may try to quiet their consciences with the plea that such violations of the law will protect society; it does nothing of the kind. It degrades them; it makes them guilty of the high crime of murder, and subjects their community and state to the sneer and contempt of the better class of people; their crimes are published in Europe and heathen lands to the humiliation and hurt of our American people and civilization.

Men who unite in mobs and take away from the proper authorities prisoners, and hang, shoot and burn them, ought to be sought out, found, brought to the bar of justice and punished. A few instances of this kind and mobs would become very rare, and after while these black, bloody pages would no longer go into the history of our American civilization.

H. C. MORRISON.

A Special Issue of The Herald.

In an early issuing of the coming year we are going to publish a special Revival Issue of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. We have already secured the promise of a number of excellent articles.

There has not been a time in my knowledge when so many persons of all religious denominations, and thoughtful people in the various walks of life were thinking and saying so much with reference to the great need of a genuine revival of religion. This is a very hopeful indication. If Christian people, generally, can come to feel the need of a revival and go to the throne of grace with importunate prayer, we may certainly hope for gracious results.

We hope that a very large number of our readers will order extra copies of this Revival Number at 2 cents each per hundred of this issue and scatter them broadcast, and thus help to arouse the people and create a desire for a spiritual awakening that will bring results in the salvation of many souls.

Some one may read this notice who would like to express themselves through the columns of THE HERALD with reference to the need of a revival and the kind of revival needed. Write down your thoughts at once briefly and forcefully and send them to THE HERALD office.

Faithfully,

H. C. MORRISON.

A New Trail Through the New Testament.

We have the promise of some most interesting and helpful articles for next year's HERALD under the above head—"A New Trail Through the New Testament." These articles will be written by Rev. Andrew Johnson, D. D., a very interesting and unique scholar. He will give us a number of articles running through the New Testament. Andrew Johnson is sound to the core, a powerful defender of the faith, and these articles will be of a character to entertain, instruct, and better equip those who study them for a Christian life, both in a restful faith and active service. They will be interesting. We await them with expectation of finding something that will be unusually interesting, suggestive and helpful. They will begin with the first number of THE HERALD, January, 1930. Be sure to read the first chapter and follow the trail through the New Testament.

Faithfully,

H. C. MORRISON

Order Now!

Now is the time to make your Sunday school teacher or friend a present of Arnold's Practical Commentary of the Sunday School Lessons for 1930. It is one of the safest, most practical, helpful commentaries you will find. It is just the thing for a busy man or woman who does not have time to make extensive search of Lesson Helps. I use no other Commentary, and have used this with great satisfaction for many years. And the price is just right too—only $1.00 postpaid. It would be a fine gift for any one who enjoys looking into God's Word for spiritual light and refreshing. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., can supply you.

Dear Herald Subscriber:

This morning we received a very interesting letter. It said, "Please find enclosed check for $1.50 for which send The Pentecostal Herald to Mrs. Blank for the coming year as a Christmas Gift."

That appeals to me because it solves the Gift problem in a practical, simple, satisfactory way. It is a gift too, that does not soon pass into the "dump heap" as a worn out, useless thing. But for fifty weeks that friend will receive a reminder of the one who sent it.

If you will list below the names and addresses of friends to whom you would like to send The Herald we will mail them a beautiful Christmas Gift Card with the Christmas Issue of the paper. What would be more Christlike; or what would more beautifully represent the true Christmas spirit than this?

Yours for a Christian Christmas,

H. C. Morrison

P. S. If you will send as many as five names we will make you a special price of $1.00 for each subscription instead of the regular price of $1.50

JOYFUL SEASON'S GREETINGS

Throughout the coming year "The Pentecostal Herald" will extend to you my hearty Christmas greetings.

The gift of

"O Send out Thy Light and Truth; let them lead me; let them bring me unto Thy Holy Hill." Psalm 44:3.

The above is the style except that it is printed in red and green.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

SOWING PRECIOUS SEED.

"How it rains! I think I will not go out with my tracts this afternoon," said a gentleman to himself one wet Sabbath. Then, retiring from the window, he threw his bundle of tracts upon the table, and yawning, dropped into his easy chair.

There he sat, idly musing, while the sacred hours fled. By and by his little daughter came in from Sunday school. Seeing his bunch of tracts on the table, she said:

"Why, pa, haven't you been with your tracts?"

"No, my dear."

"Are you going with them, pa?"

"Not today, my dear. It is so very wet."

"O pa, let me go with them! I've got my bonnet on and can soon take them round."

"No, no! It's too wet for anyone to go out. You must stay at home, my dear."

"I won't get wet pa. I'll take the big umbrella. The people will want the tracts. Do please let me go, pa."

These and similar pleas conquered the reluctant father. The little girl started. She knew the district, and was soon at her blessed work. A few steps led her to a large, old house with a big knocker. She rapped again and again, but no one replied. The poor child's patience was almost exhausted when she heard a sound in the house. Another knock, and the door was opened by a woman who wore a good dress, but whose face the little girl thought looked very unhappy.

The child smiled upon her, gave her a tract, and finished her round, and went home, little thinking that by her walk in the rain that afternoon she had snatched a soul from ruin, and a body from the jaws of death.

And yet it was even so; for the woman at whose door she had waited so long, was in the act of hanging herself when the child first lifted the knocker. The rope was fastened to the high post of an old-fashioned bedstead, the noose was round her neck, and she was about to launch herself headlong into darkness. The knock disturbed her. She waited. It came again. She waited longer. It came again and again, until to get rid of the annoyance, she slipped the rope over her head, and went to see who might be the disturber. The loving look of the child disarmed her anger. She took the tract, read it, was convicted, led to Christ and the next Sabbath told her joyful story to the little girl's father.

Thus did a little girl's hand, armed with a tract, pluck a brand from the burnings.

Here is another case. A young man having been shorn of six hundred dollars by the nimble fingers of a gang of gamblers, was bent on putting an end to his life. While on his way to execute his desperate purpose, a gentleman traveler put a tract into his hand entitled, "On the Worth of a Soul."

It startled him, shook his purpose, and to relieve his distress, he resolved to take a journey. In the carriage he met the giver of the tract, who, though ignorant of his character and purposes, gave him another tract entitled, "The Suicide." The coincidence startled the young man, and during a pause in the journey he went to the giver of the tract and in very earnest tones said:

"Pray, sir, give me a few more of your tracts, for they have saved my life!"

He then gave the foregoing recital of his case, listened to much serious advice, and on parting with the distributor, gave assurance that he would not neglect the salvation of his soul. He was another brand plucked from the burning by a tract!

Courage, O brother, in the field of tract distribution. You may be feeble in ability and weak in personal influence, but your weapons are mighty. Go forth daily, therefore, armed with your unretreating but potent instruments of warfare! Who knoweth but you, too, may save souls, and having sown with tears the precious seed, may return again with joy, bringing your sheaves?—Tales of Trust.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I was wondering what you and the cousins are doing these fine days. I wrote to The Herald once before and certainly do appreciate Aunt Bettie printing it. I am five feet, two inches tall, and weigh 112½ pounds. I have blue eyes and dark brown hair. I am fourteen years old. My birthday is May 27th. Have I a twin? I have finished elementary school. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with B and ends with H, and has six letters in it. I will answer all letters I receive from the boys and girls. As my letter is getting long I will quit writing and give the other cousins room. I hope Mr. W. B. is in swimming when this arrives. Beatrice B. Bowen.

Wallville, Md.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little West Virginia girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I am thirteen years of age and am a freshman in Spencer High School. I have brown eyes and medium hair, and have a dark complexion. I am five feet, two inches tall and weigh 99 pounds. Flora G. Jean, I guess your middle name to be Gaynell. Mrs. Fred Sartain, I guess your little daughter's name Evonne. Willie H. Jean, I guess your middle name is Kate. Kate A. Thomas, I guess your middle name is Alice. Now if I have guessed right remember your promises. I must close hoping Mr. W. B. is hoeing potatoes when this letter arrives.

Juanita Mullins.
Spencer, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let two girls from Kentucky join your happy band of boys and girls? We read The Herald and enjoy the letters on page ten, especially the stories and poems from Aunt Bettie. We live on the same farm, go to the same school and church, are in the same grade, are both Christians and go to the M. E. Church. This is our first letter to Aunt Bettie and we hope it passes Mr. W. B. unharmed as we see very few letters from Kentucky. Mrs. Fred Sartain, we guess your daughter's name to be Elaine. If we are right please send us a picture. Ruth Berkeley, we guess your name to be Margaret and Emily. Write us if we are correct. Josephine Dunn, the oldest man that ever lived was Methuselah; he was 969. Who can guess our middle names? They are the same, begin with I and end with E and have five letters in them. What is the shortest chapter in the Bible? When did Jesus come into Jerusalem? Does God work with people in non-Christian lands?

Bernice I. Vick,
Gladys I. Fletcher,
Smithland, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am waiting to join your happy band of boys and girls. I am eleven years old. My birthday was August 9th. Have I a twin? If so, I would enjoy all letters from you. I have one brother eight years old. I sure do enjoy reading page ten. I see some of the cousins ask and answer questions. I will answer some that Josephine Dunn asked. First, Jesus wept; second, Issachar, Zebulum and Benjamin; third, Methuselah; fourth, he was 969 years old. Who can guess my first name? It begins with I, and ends with A, and has three letters in it. Ruth Berkeley, I guess your name to be Margaret and Emily. Hope Mr. Waste Basket is out when I knock. As this is my second letter to the dear old Herald I will stop. Love to all the cousins and Aunt Bettie.

Evelyn Bryant,
Emporia, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please move over and leave me join your happy band? I have dark brown hair, brown eyes, and am 33 years of age, five feet, one inch tall, and weigh 96 pounds. We enjoy reading The Herald so much. I thank the Lord for Dr. Morrison. It was under his preaching at Sebring, Ohio, camp meeting, July 25, 1915, that Jesus saved me. Was sanctified at Shelton's Grove, Sept. 4, 1915, under Mrs. W. L. Murphy. I never shall forget those days. Dear readers, please pray the Lord will undertake in my case. I'm not satisfied. My husband preaches and goes wherever the Lord leads. We have been married seven years and have three daughters we love so much. Lois Geraldine is six years old, Doris Elaine is three and Marian Esther was eight months old Oct. 7. The girls love to sing and pray, play church and have altar service. One will lead singing or preach and the other play piano like Daddy and Mama. Elaine was kneeling and told Lois to come to Jesus. Pray, dear readers, that the Lord will help us bring these girls up to love Jesus and be soul winners for him. Mrs. Fred Sartain, I guess your daughter's name to be Elaine. Am I right? If so, please send me you and your daughter's picture.

Mrs. Harry M. Alexander.
1012 Howard Ave., Jeffersonville, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Canadian girl join your happy band? I am eleven years of age, weigh 94 pounds, about four feet, nine inches tall, have blue eyes and light hair. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My Sunday school teacher is Mrs. L. E. Strandquist, and our pastor is Rev. Hunt. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E, and has five letters in it. As this is my first letter I will close.

Irene M. Strandquist.
Warden, Alberta, Canada.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I am way from Alabama to talk with you. I wrote about two years ago and saw my letter in print. Now I am a good deal taller. I am nineteen years of age. I live in a country where we have fine crops. We go bathing at night or any time of the summer. Will you cousins try and find the song as follows: "There's a light in the valley." I would like to have the address of the song book this song is in. Put this in print as I would like to have the song. Martha Kleinschmidt, Elberta, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please make room for a Kentucky girl? I have been a reader of The Herald only a few weeks, but I enjoy it so much. I wish to join your band of girls and boys. I am a girl thirteen years of age. I have blue eyes, light hair, and a light complexion. I am four feet, eight inches and weigh 90 seven and one-half pounds. Have I a twin? As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print. I will answer any letters received and am hoping to receive letters from all of the cousins.

Leona Johnson.
Morehead, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I like page ten very much and only read it Sunday for the first time. I will be ten years old Dec. 13. I want to be a Christian, and want my mother and father and two sisters and brother to be Christians. Tell my cousins to pray for us. My aunt is a Christian and goes to Asbury College. I would like to go there some day. I don't know who Mr. W. B. is but I hope this letter will be printed and will not go in the scrap basket.

Jimmie S. Haring.
Ridgewood, N. J.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Minnesota girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have always lived in South Dakota and am going back to go to school. My mother is going to work up there. I go to Sunday school and church every time I can. I am eleven years old and in the fifth grade. My father died five years ago. Mrs. Fred Sartain, I guess your little girl's name to be Elaine. I hope God will bless you and all the cousins. I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this letter gets there.

Frances Shannon.

Kindness.

If you want to make a child, little boy or little girl, happy on Christmas morning, give a copy of "Black Beauty." Most every one knows this is the story of a horse, but it never grows old and several hundred thousand have been sold. No child can read it without having instilled in him a tender, kindly feeling toward all dumb brutes, and a book that teaches kindness builds character. This special children's edition is bound in bright-colored boards, has double pages of beautifully colored illustrations and will delight the heart of any child. The price is only 50c.

The Pilot's Voice

BY ISABEL C. BYRUM.

This highly profitable story of a wayward boy is written in a manner that holds the rapid interest of all who read it. It will restrain its youthful readers from going astray, or if they have already done so, will pilot them back into the safe harbor of right-living.

This is a true story written with an analogy of a voyage. It will entertain the boys and girls and at the same time will impress them with a good lesson.

224 pages. Cloth, 60c.

Heroes of Peace

Imagine having a leg cut off without being "put to sleep," yet that is the way it was always done until a young doctor, horrified by the agony all about him, worked out a way to make surgical operations painless. This book tells his story. And be sure to read about the fellow who made it possible to save folks from horrible death when bitten by mad dogs.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

Stories of Grit

His father shot the boy's eyes out—an accident, of course—but after the doctors got through with him he determined that it would make no difference, he would work out his ambition. With heart-breaking difficulty he struggled on until he became a high government official. And you will want to read about that other boy who landed here without money and unable to speak English, yet forced his way up until nationally known and admired.

Cloth Bound. Price $1.00.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XII.—December 22, 1929.

Subject.—The Child in a Christian World. Luke 2:8-20.

Golden Text.—Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for such is the kingdom of heaven."—Matt. 19:14.

Introduction.—I do not like the caption of this lesson, for the simple reason that there is no such world this side of heaven. During the Millennium we may have such a world, but not now. Suppose we offer a substitute for this caption, and make it read thus: The Obligation of Christians to Children. That will give us working room.

The lesson material is not free from ambiguity. The text concerns solely the childhood of Jesus; but the Golden Text applies to all children. The fact that this is our Christmas lesson would indicate that we are to study about the infant Jesus, but the reading lessons for the week lead us far afield. Maybe a combination of the two will overcome the difficulty. But we must not forget that Jesus was the God-child without any carnal nature, and comparisons between him and ordinary children may easily lead us far astray.

Our world is full of sinful men and women. As I write these words my heart aches within me. Little children born in sin, as they are, have but a poor chance to grow into clean manhood and womanhood. When this nation smokes more than one hundred billion cigarettes annually, and adds ninety-seven million pounds of tobacco to its consumption of that poisonous drug in one year, our children have almost no chance at all. What is to become of our little ones when our schools are turned into ballrooms? I write as a physician, and I know that I am backed by some of the best medical authorities on the earth: The spell of the dance is its "illicit physical contact" between the sexes. Remove this, and the dance will die. Few things are more deleterious to health of body, mind and soul than this illicit excitement, especially to growing boys and girls. The salacious suggestiveness of the movies is damnable beyond the power of words to paint. I hear the cry of "Pessimist;" but every real doctor is a pessimist in that sense. He must find out what is the matter with his patient before he can minister for his relief. The genuine optimist sees the worst of his case, but has courage and faith to battle for the right. I do not like to use rough words, but the chronic optimist who is afraid to learn that his patient is ill, is a fool. He needs common sense.

This is a sick world. It is sinsick. It is already condemned, because it has not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God; and it is now awaiting the execution of the death sentence; but, thank God, during the waiting mercy is being proffered to every one who will repent and believe in the sacred blood of Calvary's cross.

Into this sin-cursed world our children are born. I say "our children," for they are all mine and they are all yours. We dare not exclude one of the little tots. There rests upon each of us an obligation as high as heaven and as sacred as the mercies of God to lead every one of them to Jesus Christ for salvation. They must not be simply trained in the things that make for Christianity; they must be led to him for regeneration through faith in his blood. Thank God, they can be regenerated long before they have any sense of sins committed against God. I have personally known of several cases of clear regeneration of children under five years of age. Bishop E. M. Marvin of the M. E. Church, South, I think claimed to have been born again when he was but four years of age. An old preacher friend of mine told me that he was soundly converted between three and four, and never did backslide. Not long ago an old saint stated in my presence that she was converted before she was four years old, and had never lost that experience. Five years ago I witnessed the conversion of a little four-year-old girl; and it was one of the clearest, most joyous conversions I have ever seen. Her friends tell me that she has never backslidden.

There is a lesson here that I wish to drive home with all the force I can muster: Our children are not born regenerated; but they are born under a covenant of grace that makes their final salvation certain, if they are taken out of this world before they arrive at years of accountability. Rest assured that God will do for them whatever is necessary for entrance into a holy heaven. The fearful heresy of this day is the teaching that they are born regenerated, and that all they need is good training. That trick of the devil is damning its multitudes. Jesus stated the full case when he said to Nicodemus: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." Our best work for our children will be a sad failure, unless they are born the second time, and then enter into the fullness of the blessing of eternal salvation "through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth," as Paul states it.

Comments on the Lesson.

8. Shepherds abiding in the field.—Evidently that was during the warm nights of summer, for they did not keep their flocks out in the fields at night during winter.

9. The angel of the Lord.—A messenger from the heavenly land—the word "angel" means messenger. Came upon them.—Directly above them in the air. The glory of the Lord.—I have long wanted to know the meaning of the word "glory" as used in the Bible; but thus far can find no definition. It must have been some supernatural effulgence such as shined upon Saul of Tarsus on the Damascus road. It was natural that they should be "sore afraid," for they were but human.

10. Fear not.—How often do we meet this statement in the New Testament, though usually from the lips of Jesus. God would have his children fear nothing but sin. Good tidings of great joy.—That is the meaning of the word "Gospel." Thank God, the good news is for "all people."

11. The city of David.—Bethlehem, where King David was born. A Savior.—"Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for He shall save his people from their sins." Christ the Lord.—The appointed Master.

12. A sign unto you.—If the angel had not told them that he would be found in a manger and wrapped in swaddling clothes, they would possibly have sought for him among the rich people of the city; but that was not his place. One born and reared in a palace could not live and die for a lost world.

13. A multitude of the heavenly host.—A great company of angels. They were interested in the redemption of men, and were praising God because of the Savior's birth.

14. Good will toward men.—This verse is undoubtedly mistranslated, but the Revised Version seems to be even farther from the literal sense. If one so small as I am may be permitted to render the verse into simple English, I will put it thus: Glory to God in the highest, and peace upon earth among men of good will. Really, there can be no genuine peace among any other class of human beings.

16. They came with haste.—It did not take many minutes for the shepherds to decide what to do, for their expectations were wrought up to a high pitch. This thing occurred at a time when the entire nation was expecting their Messiah. The shepherds were rewarded by finding just what the angel had told them they would find.

17. They made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.—Wonderful, but not strange. To this day no one who really hears the good news about Jesus can keep from scattering the message abroad. It is too good to keep.

19. Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.—Such sayings might strike others with wonder; but they went to the bottom of Mary's heart, and stuck fast. She pondered them. That is, she thought them over and over, and wondered what they could mean. He was but a babe in a mother's arms, but what sort of a babe was he? Heaven had never taken such notice of any other baby. No doubt she asked herself time and again what the future had in store for her strange boy. She understood all she could; but there were a thousand mysteries locked up in that little one that were too deep for mortal ken.

20. Well might the wondering shepherds glorify and praise God. They had heard and seen things that had set all heaven to singing. The light of heaven's Morning Star had broken over earth's long midnight of sin. Eternal glory was quivering over the eastern hills and gilding the mountain peaks from the rivers even unto the ends of the earth. Tune your harps, ye angels of light; break forth into singing, ye love captives in Paradise; for earth's Redeemer, the King of glory, is born of a woman. The Word has been made flesh, and dwells among men to bring them back to God. Amen! Hallelujah for ever!

I will be available for calls as Gospel Song Leader after Jan. 15, 1930, the Lord willing, Pacific Coast States till May 1. After that the middle states. Compensation is of secondary importance. I want to sing for the glory of God and the salvation of lost souls. Will travel in my own car—A. R. Dooley, Star Route No. 3, Port Townsend, Wash.

Ideals for Earnest Youth

BY A. T. ROWE

A purposeful message for our modern youth with their great opportunities and problems. It is practical rather than theoretical. Actual incidents and experience of real, outstanding, unusually successful men are given as food for thought.
Avenues of opportunities for success are pointed out, as well as the ever-common boulevards to failure.

Valuable for young people's meetings, societies, and leagues. Emphasizes youth's needs of Christ's guidance, but clearly avoids any doctrinal discussion. Sixty-one pithy chapters with a punch in each one. Beautifully cloth bound, attractive two-color jacket. Price $1.00.

Gift Books for Everyone

The First Soprano

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The underlying motive of this excellent piece of Christian fiction, into which is woven a fascinating love story, is the consecration of life and talent to God. It peers through the superficiality of mere profession, and the hypocrisy of certain features of Church life and appeals strongly for reality in Christian experience.

You will find it one of the most interesting stories you have ever read. Packed in green or red Christmas box. Price, $1.00.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life

HANNAH WHITHALL SMITH.

A whole generation has felt its power and been stimulated by its wholesome faith. The author has the happy faculty of finding the heart of the truth and interpreting it in a clear, pungent way that makes one see its practical bearing upon life's difficulty. The book will prove a great blessing to any one who will read it. Price, $1.25.

That I May Save Some

BY BISHOP WILLIAM FRASER McDOWELL

These five lectures Bishop McDowell declares are not a contribution to theology or to scholarship, but rather "one more effort to get the Church to singing again, singing anew, the song of the angels above the plains: 'A Savior is born.'" There is therefore, a distinct evangelistic purpose running throughout the volume; and there is also a definite challenge to the Church of God everywhere to do the work of an evangelist and to demonstrate in a convincing way that the gospel of Christ is still the power of God unto salvation.

Binding, cloth. Price, net, $1.00.

A Feast of Good Things

One Christmas

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The opening scene is that of a family, in a snow-laden northern city, gathered around the home fires on Christmas Eve. The artless questions of the younger children provoke serious thought on the part of the father and older brother, who is a college student, and this thought leads to decisions which are far-reaching in their effects. A beautiful book to send to friends. An ideal gift for pastors to send to members of the congregation. Suitable for teachers of intermediate and young people's groups to send to members of the class.

Gift edition, beautifully bound in art cloth, 50c.

God's Minute

A book of 365 daily prayers, sixty seconds long, arranged from January 1 to December 31; a prayer to each page, written expressly for this book by the most eminent preachers and laymen in the English speaking world. At the top of each page is a collection of Scripture on encouragement to prayer.

Cloth. Price, 60c; Postage, 5c.

Fox's Book of Martyrs

A history of the lives, sufferings and triumphant deaths of the early Christian and Protestant martyrs. It tells the story of some of the most thrilling periods in Christian history when "a noble army, men and boys, the matron and the maid," "climbed the steep ascent of heaven, 'mid peril, toil and pain.'" It is thrilling and convicting. 370 large pages. Good clear type, beautifully printed and bound. Price $1.50.

The Bent-Knee Time

BY S. D. GORDON.

Three hundred and sixty-two, (to quote the author) "little bits which are meant to be distinctly secondary to the book itself." Every paragraph makes clear the pathway to God. This little book is appropriate for young and old. Any Christian will appreciate its simplicity. Neatly bound in cloth with a silk marker. Price, 75c.

Dairyman's Daughter

This charming little book has resulted, it is said, in the conversion of thousands. It has a rare beauty of style and withal an uncommon spiritual power. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 50c.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustrations. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1930 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Price: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

The Gist of the Lesson, 1930

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

BY MARTHA TARBELL, Ph.D.

New ideas, new light, new suggestions and new enthusiasm comes to the teacher who opens the 1930 edition of this favorite handbook to the International Sunday School Lessons. "A wealth undreamed of and almost passing belief" are the words used by one reviewer in describing it. The greatest triumph however that has come to "The Guide"—that it has won over all helps—is the reputation it now enjoys for "making teachers of all who use it."

$2.00 postpaid.

JOY TO THE WORLD! THE LORD IS COME!

By The Editor.

WE are now approaching the greatest day of all the year; the day on which we celebrate the birth of the world's Redeemer. It is meet and right that we should all rejoice, that families should reunite, that friends should exchange tokens of love and appreciation, that children should be made happy, that the world should put on her garments of joy, and the bells should ring out the glad acclaim of full salvation in Jesus' name.

The birth of the Lord Jesus Christ was the gladdest hour in all human history. It was the wisdom of God that his Eternal Son should be manifest in the flesh. It was not an accident that he was born in a stable; he was to come into the world in so lowly and humble way that the poorest would feel that they had in him a sympathizing and loving Friend. It was the divine will that he should strike society at the bottom round.

It was a compassionate thought of the infinite Father that Jesus Christ should embrace in himself two natures—the divine and human. The human, that he might sympathize with men; the divine, that he might be able to save men. It would be impossible to improve upon the divine plan. We have a Christ who can be touched with the feelings of our infirmities; himself having been tempted, he is able to succor those who are tempted. How marvelous and how glorious a salvation has been offered to us in a Redeemer who passed through the experiences we must endure, and who has in himself unlimited and infinite power. To his name be eternal praise and glory.

But for the coming of Christ into the world, we never could have gotten a correct view of the Father. We knew he could build a universe, but we never dreamed that he would be willing to labor with carpenter's tools. We knew he was surrounded with angels and cherubim, but who would have thought he would have eaten with publicans and sinners. We knew that he held the world in the palm of his power, but who would have dreamed that the God of the universe would have taken little children into his embrace. Jesus came into the world, lived, labored, associated with, and suffered for us, and startled us with the statement that, "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father." The Lord Jesus did not only come to die on the cross, but he came to live among men and reveal to them the compassionate heart of a merciful Father.

At Christmas time our memories are refreshed, our gratitude is brought to high tide. We tune our harps to the glad notes of praise; we forgive one another in Jesus' name. We bow in adoration at the feet of the Babe of Bethlehem. We remember with sad joy, the tragedy of Calvary. We praise our ascended Lord and renew our hopes of

JOY TO THE WORLD!

Joy to the world! the Lord is come;
Let earth receive her King;
Let every heart prepare him room,
And heaven and nature sing.

Joy to the world! the Saviour reigns;
Let men their songs employ;
While fields, and floods, rocks, hills and plains,
Repeat the sounding joy.

No more let sin and sorrow grow,
Nor thorns infest the ground;
He comes to make his blessings flow
Far as the curse is found.

He rules the world with truth and grace,
And makes the nations prove
The glories of his righteousness,
And wonders of his love.

his glorious appearing. We exultantly sing with the poet,

"Oh, for a thousand tongues to sing
Our Great Redeemer's praise."

Let us seek to make this Christmas time the best in all of our history. Let us try to make some one else happy; some one who has no kindred claims upon us; some one to whom Christmas is a sad occasion because there is little, or no hope, for a full stocking. Oh, that God would enlarge our hearts with gratitude and sympathy, and that we might come into closer communion with our blessed Saviour and Lord.

THE CLOSING YEAR.

THIS is the last issue of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD for the year 1929. I trust THE HERALD has been interesting and helpful to its many readers. We have published enough sermons in these columns this year to make two large volumes if printed in book form.

We have sent out enough printed matter in these pages this year on the subject of holiness to make a large book on that gracious doctrine and experience. The revival reports put into book form would make two large books. The camp meeting reports would make a good sized book. The matter printed in THE HERALD this year of 1929 against the attacks on the inspiration of the Scriptures by modern liberals would make a large and useful volume.

The many excellent discussions on the various phases of religion, doctrine, life and service printed in THE HERALD the past year would make, in book form, several good sized volumes. Letters of appreciation of the work THE HERALD is doing have come into this office by thousands. For this, we feel profoundly grateful, and we pray God to give us special grace and wisdom for the work of the coming year.

Our one supreme desire is to help the people in these trying times to find the Lord, to know the truth, to be saved from all sin, to live for God and humanity, to serve the fellowbeings, and to get safely home to heaven. Sacks full of letters have come from those who claim to have been helped. We praise God and gird ourselves for earnest effort to make 1930 the best year in the history of THE HERALD. One of the hopeful features about THE HERALD is that it has large room for improvement, and it shall be our purpose to make it much better the coming year.

I am preparing to give our readers ten sermons the coming year. I trust the Holy Spirit may help me to make them profitable to all who read them. God helping me, I shall keep the flag flying against all forms of modern liberalism that is breaking in upon us from many quarters. I ask no favors, and give no quarters to the spirit of skepticism that would tear the Bible to tatters and undertake to rob our Lord of his Godhead, blood atonement, and saving power. I believe the Bible is a divine revelation from God. I love its truths, adore the God it reveals, and trust for full salvation in the Christ it offers. I crave the abiding, comforting and empowering of the Holy Spirit it promises. I rejoice to have spent much of my life in the service of the blessed Trinity, but regret that my service has not been better. I cast my mistakes and sins under the atoning blood of Christ and, if I enter the new year, it will be with a song. If I die, I'll go home to heaven washed in the precious blood of the Lamb.

We have a tempting bill of fare for the coming year. We plan to give our readers in THE HERALD PULPIT fifty sermons. This will be a mental and spiritual treat. We shall give these sermons on many themes from many able preachers. Renew your subscription at once, and if it has been a blessing to you, send in one new subscriber at once so the first issue of 1930 may reach that new subscriber, and they will get all of the fifty sermons. Think of it! Fifty Sermons! enough to make two large books. May God bless you all, cleanse, fill, keep and use you for his praise and glory among your fellowbeings. We shall pass this way but once. Let us redeem the time, because the days are evil. Judgment is coming, when our account shall be rendered.

Special Number of The Herald.

We are preparing a special Revival Number of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD which will contain many very important contributions from men who are feeling the tremendous importance of a great spiritual awakening in this nation. Quite a little is being said of the celebration of Pentecost. Nothing could be so important, or such a gracious celebration of the coming of the Holy Spirit upon the disciples at Pentecost in Jerusalem, as a repetition of his coming upon the church. Would to God that the Protestant preachers of the Evangelical churches of this nation, with their people, could come with one accord to the throne of grace calling up-

A PAGE OF ILLUSTRATIONS FROM EASTERN LANDS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

All nature testifies to God. The vastness of the universe be-speaks a God infinite in wisdom, in greatness and in power. An Eastern Potentate said to a Jewish Rabbi, "You teach me that your God is everywhere. I should like to see him." "God's presence is indeed everywhere," said the Rabbi, "but he cannot be seen. No mortal eye can behold his glory." The King insisted that he should see God. The Rabbi took him out under the blazing Oriental sun and bade him look at the sun. "I cannot see," he cried, "the light dazzles me." Then said the Rabbi, "Thou art unable to bear the light of one of his creatures, how then couldst thou look upon the Creator?"

"They that go down to the sea in ships," said the Psalmist, "these see the works of the Lord and his wonders in the deep." Psa. 107:24.

Sailing as we are now in the Indian Ocean, we are reminded again of the greatness of God and the vastness of creation. The Indian Ocean has some characteristics all its own; often it is swept by the monsoon and nearly always it is hot, the vertical sun overhead shines so fiercely that one feels it greatly, there is a predominance of high temperature during the days but coolness comes on at night. But withal it is magnificent in its contents and associations. Here Coke, the man who ordained Francis Asbury Bishop, passed away upon one of his missionary tours and was buried at sea, and the Captain of our ship, the "Mantua" a few weeks ago died on board and was buried at sea.

No doubt our readers may remember the story of the pious youth who was so happy over his religion that often he would shout in the public service to the great annoyance of the minister. One evening he was invited to take supper at the parsonage where he fell upon a book on Natural History. He read on till he came to the Ocean where he read that at some places the Ocean is six miles deep. This started him shouting. The preacher asked him the reason of it and he said: "This book says the Ocean at some places is six miles deep and God says in the Bible that he has cast all my sins 'into the depths of the Sea.'" Micah 7:19. Hallelujah! So the Ocean deep and immense and splendid and dreadful at times speaks to us of God's marvelous pardoning grace.

(2) In Malaya the people have a great habit instead of putting their money in the bank, of turning it into gold and wearing it as buttons on their coats and jewelry in their ears and noses and on their hands, arms and feet. In one missionary home one of the servants worked in an old jacket which had as buttons three twenty dollar gold pieces. At one time she had six, but three of them got stolen. This suggests many things such as

- (a) Love of display. 1 Pet. 3:3.
- (b) Unworthy exposure of earthly possessions.
- (c) Selfish control of that which might be invested to help others, Luke 19:20-23.
- (d) No vision. Ignorance!

(3) Recently we went into a Chinese Temple which was known as a Snake Temple because snakes abounded there. On the high altar could be seen snakes coiled up; on branches and ledges and posts—in fact everywhere you looked you saw snakes, big and little. These snakes, hideous as they looked, we were told were harmless, the priests fed them good and they knew when they were well off, and they drew many sight-seers to the Temple. Now it is hard to imagine how these unseemly creatures could add anything to the idea of worship—of course they could not—they were kept there for purposes of gain! But my thoughts went to the church and I think there are many churches which have snakes and serpents in them! Many are unclean and carnal, like the Corinthian Church. They permit snakes to thrive there! The House of God must be kept clean and sacred. Luke 19:46.

(4) These days our travels throw us in with the English very much. Indeed they predominate everywhere. Let me pass on the following.

A lady coming up to London from the South Coast to do some shopping was asked by her husband if she had sufficient money with her. She replied that she thought she had; but her husband considered that it would be better to give her an additional five pound note, which he accordingly did.

In the train to London the heroine of the story went to the restaurant car, leaving her purse on the carriage seat, and on her return the only other occupant of the carriage, an old lady, remarked to her, "You should not have left your purse behind you, my dear. It is not safe."

Presently the old lady fell asleep, and her fellow traveller, feeling vaguely uneasy, opened her own purse. The five pound note was not there. Very quietly she reached for the old lady's handbag. It contained a five pound note, which appeared to have been the last thing put into it. She resumed possession, as she thought, and spent the money subsequently in London.

On arriving home her husband asked her how she had managed to buy so much. "I had the extra five pounds you gave me," said she. "Oh, no," replied the husband. "You left it behind on the dressing table." Every endeavor was made by inquiry and advertisement to trace the old lady; but without avail.

This story furnishes us a rebuke for being suspicious of others and blaming others for our own blunders and thoughtlessness. 1 Cor. 13:5.

(5) Wonderful are the hidden forces of destruction hidden in the bowels of the earth. A thousand miles or less from the Malay Peninsula in the Straits of Sunda the waters are very mysterious. Volcanic cones lie around, erupted from a slumbering sea. Krakatoa presents quite a spectacle—a faint spiral of smoke issuing from his summit, but in 1883 there broke forth one of the greatest eruptions known in this region, nine square miles of Island was blown into dust and the explosion set in motion a gigantic ocean wave which is said to have careened around the entire globe destroying 300 villages and taking nearly 40,000 lives. The sound was heard 3,000 miles away. It set up a series of concentric atmospheric waves which traveled at least three times around the earth, and some can still remember the "weird sun glows of a wondrous beauty" that painted the heavens for three years in succession owing to its fine dust that lingered suspended in the sky.

In view of these things how striking is Peter's description of the day of the Lord "when the heavens shalt pass away with a great noise and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up." 2 Pet. 3:10, 11.

(6) There is something weird and pathetic about an old ship. Out in these waters the British decided to destroy an old warship which because of her name—the Australian—the people loved very much, but her days of usefulness were over and her years numbered. They took from her everything movable; a writer described the "remains" thus, "She lay with a heavy list chained to the wharf stripped of all her glory; her paint soiled and blistering; her steel, once shining, rusted; her brass gone or neglected; her funnels lying contorted on her decks a heap of scrapped metal; her quarter deck that was once so scrupulous—unclean; her bowels gutted, her Admiral's quarters a shamble; her ward room empty of life, its floors littered with splinters and screws and bits of iron; her doors gone; her privacy a mockery; her body a carcase. She was foul and stained and done for—but above all the ruins from the fore-castle deck flew the Australian flag! It seemed to say as it flaunted itself in the wind and the sunlight that though the body perish the spirit is immortal! In a few days the old hulk was towed out to sea and sunk—buried in the depths of the ocean she in other days sailed so majestically."

So with this body of ours—this ship that carries the soul through life's tempestuous sea, will some day go into decay. Its days shall be numbered but the soul lives on and on through eternity. Thank God for the words, 2 Cor. 5:1-4, "For we that are in this Tabernacle do groan, being burdened not for that we would be unclothed but clothed upon that mortality might be swallowed up of life."

They tell us that it was a custom in Rome when the Emperor went by upon some grand day that amid all the pomp there was an officer appointed to burn flax before him and to cry out: "Sic transit gloria mundi," (All worldly glory shall pass away) and that like the smoke from the burning flax all these things are but vapors. Reminding us of James 4:14, "What is your life? It is even a vapor."

(7) There is something of romance about rubber. Thirty years ago no man thought of planting a rubber tree. It was a wild thing collected in the dim wild places of the world—in the heart of Africa and the forests of Brazil. We have read about the Belgian atrocities in Africa among the natives there who were forced to toil where the rubber grew wild and bring in certain quantities or be subject to the cruellest punishment at the hands of the Belgian taskmasters. Even at that time rubber was not cultivated. But in 1876 a great event happened when in Ken gardens, London, from a few seeds brought from Brazil the first rubber trees were developed by the English—the seedlings were sent to Singapore and prospered and from these sprang the great rubber industry! In 1900 the "boom" began and the jungle and forest and the wild beast disappeared and rubber plantations took their place. Up to the great war the Malay Peninsula exported over fifty million dollars worth of rubber, and since then the developments have grown to great proportions.

We are reminded of that passage, Zechariah 4:10, "Who hath despised the day of small things?"

Twenty-six seedlings of rubber grew into millions and millions. So the gospel seed; no one knows how immense may be the harvest. A story is told of a French gospel given to a lady at the Paris Exposition. She accepted it then tore it up and scattered the leaves to the winds—a poor woman picked up some of the leaves and read two or three. Her whole soul was stirred and she said: "I must get more of these, where can they be found?" She took them to a policeman and he directed her to a Bible Society's depot close at hand. She went in and inquired and was given the Word of God freely. Her hungry soul was fed and she found the living God and was born again "of the incorruptible seed of the Word of God." 1 Pet. 1:23, Isa. 55:11.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Rev. A. H. M. Zahniser

WE sometimes hear the expression, "There's not much in a name. And Shakespeare said, 'What's in a name? That which we call a rose By any other name would smell as sweet.'"

True. Yet names are very significant. The name many a young person bears indicates what the parents desired them to be. If a young man bears the name of John Wesley or John Calvin, it is quite likely he had religious parents who admired great and good preachers and leaders in the Church of Christ. It is to be regretted that so many by their character and conduct belie the name they bear. Some mothers wish their daughters to be very beautiful, and to adorn society by their prettiness, and they have given them such "Christian names" as Rose or Lilly. Maybe the maiden's face, when developed, does not suggest that she should deserve such an appellation. Many times people's nicknames indicate more truly what they are than do their baptized, or originally given names. After being tested and tried by their friends they may be more correctly labeled, than by their parents at birth. Yet the critical eye of the public is not always safe and sane in discernment. It occasionally happens that a nickname has a sting or stigma to it. If this comes falsely, for Jesus' sake; the reproach should be borne bravely, and even gladly. It may possibly be turned to a good account. It is altogether likely that when the early disciples were first called Christians at Antioch it was by way of derision or ridicule. The same is true regarding the Methodists being called Methodists because of their conscientious methodical ways and manners. Some very devoted folks have been ridiculed as "Holy-Rollers." I tell them to be sure to keep holy. "Because it is written, 'Be ye holy for I am holy.'" (1 Pet. 1:16). Then roll on, and if the devil gets in the way, as some of our colored friends used to sing, "We'll roll the old chariot over him."

There, however, are two brief portions of Scripture bearing upon this subject that I wish might be indelibly written on the hearts and minds of the young people especially. The first is in Proverbs 22:1, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold." The same thought concerning the value and blessing of a good name is expressed in Eccl. 7:1, "A good name is better than precious ointment." The other reference is, Prov. 10:7, "The memory of the just is blessed: but the name of the wicked shall rot." As an illustration of the truth of this latter scripture, we frequently call attention to the record and reports we have of the twelve spies sent out to inspect the land of Canaan, and to the fact that though all their names are carefully recorded in the 13th chapter of Numbers, and all were great men among their tribes and of their times, yet it is exceedingly difficult to become enough interested to memorize the names of the ten who brought back the evil report. While we seem to just naturally recall and think of the names of Joshua and Caleb. If you have not read this account lately, it would be worth your while to do so. And also to study the name and life of Caleb who was of the same tribe from which our Lord sprang. Then of Joshua the son of Nun, who succeeded Moses as the Captain of the host of Israel, and did for them what Moses was not permitted to do—led them into the promised land. And he became an illustrious type of the great New Testament Joshua—or, our Jesus. For really the names mean the same. And at least two times we find, in our "King James' Version" of the New Testament the word Jesus standing for the Joshua of Old Testament history and fame. See Hebrews 4:8, "For if Jesus had given them rest, then would he not afterward have spoken of another day." And also Acts 7:45, where St. Stephen speaking of the tabernacle said, "Which also our fathers that came after brought in with Jesus into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God drove out before the face of our fathers, unto the days of David."

It is this name, the blessed Jesus, we would have you all think about and dwell upon, as we ask,

"WHAT'S IN A NAME?"

The name of the Deity—of the Jehovah God, has ever been sacred and precious to his people. One of the Ten Commandments in the decalogue is, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." (Ex. 20:7).

Many interesting and useful volumes might be written on the names and titles ascribed to God in the Old Testament. David uses nine different terms or appellations in one verse, in telling what he was to him. In Psalms 18:2 he writes, "The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower." In a time of distress and danger and persecution, the prophet Jeremiah found consolation in being able to testify, "Thy words were found, and I did eat them; and thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart: for I am called by thy name, O Lord God of hosts." (Jer. 15:16). Does this not remind the reader of the wonderful prayer of that great hero of New Testament times, the Apostle Paul, recorded in Ephesians the third chapter? He says, "For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named," etc. Yes, it means something to have this name called upon us. There is a priceless privilege and tremendous responsibility that goes along with being called a Christian. Let us not contradict our name. May our practice correspond with our profession. The inspired Isaiah makes a marvelous prophecy concerning the coming of the Messiah, and gives us some of the titles he should bear. Note his words in chapter nine and verse six, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." Let us think and meditate on these appellations. Then let us turn and read the announcement of the angel to Joseph, the espoused husband of the Virgin Mary, recorded in Matt. 1:20-23, "Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary, thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled that was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us."

If we really get hold of this as we should we will begin to appreciate and try to magnify the name of our God, in some such language as others have expressed. "The name of the Lord is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it and is safe" (Prov. 18:10). "And they that know thy name will put their trust in thee; for thou, Lord, hast not forsaken them that seek thee" (Ps. 9:10). "O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together" (Psa. 34:3). With Charles Wesley, let us prayerfully sing,

"My gracious Master and my God,
Assist me to proclaim,
To spread through all the earth abroad
The honors of thy name."

And with John Newton exclaim and proclaim,

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds,
In a believer's ear;
It soothes his sorrows, bears his wounds,
And drives away his fear."

* * * *

"I would thy boundless love proclaim
With every fleeting breath;
So shall the music of thy name
Refresh my soul in death."

What's in a name? Much every way, when it's The name high over all!

The First Soprano

Is the title of a very interesting story combining an entrancing narrative of human interest with a moral background of convincing merit. It shows the emptiness of mere formal church worship without having the spirit of worship, and points out the compensation a young woman received by a whole-hearted surrender to God. It is a story that will charm and captivate the young people, and will be read with interest by older members of the family as well. It is beautifully bound in dark blue cloth, with extra cover of green and gold, and put up in an attractive red box, just what you want to contain a Christmas present. You will never regret ordering this book. Price $1.00 of Pentecostal Publishing Company.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Help Some Boy to Find Christ

This Christmas. Just at this time we have gotten hold of one of the most attractive Testaments, just the thing for a boy to carry in his pocket. There is a place for the name and address; three pages devoted to telling one how to become a Christian; then two songs, one "Carry Your Bible," and another, "Jesus is a Friend of Mine." The music is written with the songs.

There are a number of attractive colored illustrations, and for a small Testament, the type excels any we have seen for clearness, which makes it easy to read. The chapter numbers are in figures, and the binding is a beautiful dark green imitation leather.

This is just the Testament for a Christmas gift; it is so attractively gotten up that a boy just cannot resist reading it. The price is only 50c.

The Illuminated Bible Story Book

For a child from 7 to 12 years old. It is handsomely bound, has an attractive jacket, presentation page, is beautifully illustrated in colors, printed on enamel paper in a beautiful dark blue ink, large, regular old folks type. Eighteen Bible stories are interestingly told, beginning with "Noah and the Ark" and ending with "Jesus Before Pilate." A little 10-year-old girl stepped into our office just a few days ago, picked up a copy of this book and was soon lost in it, the stories were so interesting. Give it for Christmas. Price 60c.

OUR CHRISTMAS SERMON.

Rev. W. B. Hinson.

"Thou shalt call his name Emmanuel, which means God with us."—Matt. 1:23.

I have listened to the low sigh of the wind in the pine tops when the gloaming tells that the day has gone; and I have listened through the night to the sob of the surf on the shingle when the sea was enraged; and I have listened to the moan of a strong man in his distress and his pain; and sometimes it has seemed to me as though sighing and sobbing and moaning were heard all through this Old Testament Scripture. And the men who were thus sighing and sobbing and moaning were feeling after a lost God. Job stood up in the midst of all his anguish and said, "I look before but I cannot find him, and I look behind and he is not there. Oh, that I knew where I might find him." And Tennyson millenniums afterwards came along and said,

"I found him not in sun or star,
In eagle's wing or insect's eye."

The Old Testament dispensation had the forward look. In the garden of Eden you become acquainted with it. "There shall come," said God, "There shall come the bruiser of the serpent's head." And all through those dispensations—Edenic, patriarchal, kingly, prophetic—you can still hear that voice of the prophet that tells of the tomorrow when the mystery of today will become a revealed thing. The star shone fitfully, I grant you, obscured by cloud quite often; but never was its light extinguished, even the star that told of the coming time when the Child would be born, and the wise men catching the radiance of that star would seek the world's Redeemer. And he came. And then as the text says the dispensation is changed, and it is no longer the God without us, but the God with us.

And he was born, as I love to think, into our experience as well as into our nature; that never does my foot strike a stone on this pilgrimage of life but his foot struck it before mine found it; that never does a clinging bramble tear my flesh but Jesus by experience knows the pain I feel because that bramble tore him before ever it found me, and that in all our afflictions he had part.

We have a High Priest who is touched with a feeling of every infirmity possible to mortals, and he knows by his own experience just how our head aches and our heart throbs and our life becomes a desolate thing. He was born into our experience. He came and he walked down those streets and along those lanes and among those vineyards, and I find as my life grows older the greatest delight I have is to sit down or walk or work in my garden, and isolate my mind and just walk up and down that old Judea with this Christ and see what a God we have in the God who then was spoken of as a God with us. I try sometimes to read the old theologies that I studied when I was a young man in college, and I never can read them now. They have such a remote God. They have a God capable of definition as they say, "Bounded there and bounded here, that is God." And I cannot subject him to any such conditions or limitations as those. I do not know that God. But I do know the God who looked up into a tree, and back of the curiosity that the commentators say prompted Zachaeus to climb the tree, he saw the hunger in the heart of the publican for something that all his money could never buy. I do know that God who wrote once and once only so far as I know, and he bent his eyes down upon his writing while men sought to drag a woman to ignominious death. And then he looked up and said, "Where are your accusers?" "They are gone, Lord." "Yes, and I have no accusation to make. Do not do it again." I do not know this God who is limited in this way and that way. I cannot comprehend those terms. But I know Jesus who looked at the women who brought their children to him, and I know if I could I would take my little grandchild to him for his blessing. They took them to Jesus. And those old time people said, "Do not trouble the Master. Take the little children away." Oh, I would not worship any God who could be troubled by a child! And Jesus Christ said, "Drive them not away but let them come!" He gathered those little children around him, his tapering fingers nestled among their curls, and what he said to them would be far richer music to me than what he said to his blundering, bungling disciples. He is the God I know, the God with us.

Oh, I beseech you never let those people cheat you of your New Testament. I tell you it excites my wrath hot and magnanimous when I meet with people trying to destroy these four gospels. I want the story of the God with us. I can go to him. I cannot go to the God of Sinai; I have too much sin. I do not want the trumpet that peals so loud—I want Calvary. And I want the Calvary that commenced at Bethlehem when the Son of God who thought it no robbery to demand equality with the Infinite and Eternal Jehovah, condescended to become a little child that you and I might be taught by the Brother who knows us because he has lived our life, to look up into the face of the God without us in the old dispensation, and lovingly confidently say, "Our Father who art in heaven."

God with us gave place to God within us. God without us in the Old Testament dispensation; God with us in the gospels; but afterward may I say a greater and grander revelation—God within us. Did you ever stop for one minute to think how this world would be bereaved if it lost Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, the four gospels? Because you see if they went they would necessarily take the Epistles with them; and the Old Testament is an unfulfilled fabulous thing without those four gospels. I have stood in that stable, I have seen that manger, I have seen it as plainly as the wise men from the East ever saw it. I have seen the cattle, I have heard them. I have dared look into Mary's face, and I have greatly admired mute Joseph standing in the shadows. And then I have ventured sometimes to look into the face of the Child, and I have gone with him up and down those streets and country lanes, gone with him thousands of times, until there is nothing in the world of literature so real to me this morning as the Jesus Christ of those four gospels. I can hardly take a walk of a hundred yards but something or other reminds me of that great Brother of my soul and the wonderful way he lived, the wonderful way he looked, the wonderful way he talked in that olden time. The high water mark of the Hebrew Bible is a man finding his hiding place in God. "Lord Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations." But the high water mark of the New Testament is God finding his dwelling place in man. "Know ye not that your bodies are the habitation of God."

Has Christ ever been born in you the hope of glory? My friend, from that stable in Bethlehem you could go to hell. It is not the Bethlehem of geography, but it is the Bethlehem of experience that you want. And you want to have Christ born in you the hope of anything you like. The hope of perfect health, for Christ born in you means you shall dwell forever more within a body that is as immune from disease as his own resurrection body in which he went to his Father. Born in you the hope of intellectual development, for while we are pent in the body down here, and the mind beats against the bars as an imprisoned eagle might against a cage, let us hearten ourselves with the thought that by and by without a single restraint the mind will have perfect liberty. But all that is as nothing beside this. If he is born in you, if your life becomes the Bethlehem in which appears the God incarnate, you shall be delivered from your sin. Would you like to give Jesus Christ a gift? He gave you one. It was a bloody gift, for it was his own spoiled, scarred, sacrificed life. That is what he gave you. Let us go to him—the blind man who is here, and the deaf man, and the dumb man, and the leprous man, and the man who is soon to be damned if he does not speedily be saved—let us all go to him.

"Oh lovely attitude he stands,

With melting eyes and outstretched hands."

It was Christmas Eve last night and the devil got hold of me as he had not in many and many a year. And he said, "There is a chance for you to preach a good sermon on that word Emmanuel, and here is a fine introduction all glittering and fair, poetical and beautiful. And here is a conclusion, and the conclusion is even better than the introduction." And I held that thought in my mind for a while and concluded I would give it utterance. And then I said, It is not what they want. They do not need word painting and poetry and rhetoric. No, but this is what they need. They need someone to take them by the hand and say, I know Jesus Christ, and I know he is Bread and Water and Light and Life. What you need, man, what you need, woman, is for someone to take your hand and put it in the hand of Jesus and say, "Meet Jesus Christ—Christ here is the man." I cannot do it. But I have a Friend who can, for The Holy Spirit will take your hand at this moment and put it in the hand of the Son of God your Savior. All you have to do when you put your hand in the hand of Jesus is just let your finger move around the palm a bit, and it will very soon rest in a scar, and you will know he is the Savior of Bethlehem and Calvary by the print of the nail in his hand.

HIS NAME.

REV. HENRY OSTROM, D. D.

WHEN the scroll is unrolled and Jesus reads in the synagogue from the sixty-first chapter of Isaiah and shows that Isaiah was writing about him and his blessed mission on earth, he begins thus: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me." He has called attention to that person who all through the Bible is presented without a name. The Holy Spirit while sometimes represented by the word "it" in English translations aiming to conform to the Greek is nevertheless presented by Jesus as in the sixteenth of John with the pronoun "HE," "HIM," "HIMSELF." But no name is given. He is the "other Comforter, or Advocate," he is "The Spirit of Truth." His personality is never obscured.

But of him whom we celebrate as coming to earth with special acclaim at this season of the year, it is said, "Thou hast given him a NAME." A name which is above every name! At the name of Jesus every knee must bow! Do you wonder then that the Holy Spirit (un-named) was not to speak of himself? Do you wonder that he was to testify of Jesus? That he descended upon him at his baptism? Or, that in the synagogue that day Jesus read, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me"?

Jesus! The Angel of the Lord pronounced the word to gentlemanly Joseph and the Holy Spirit sees that it is so referred to in Luke's account specifying that it was so uttered before he was born of Mary. Jesus! The angel choir knew the name for as they sang in the cloud-heights they announced, "unto you is born a Saviour." Saviour? that is the word. It is the very essence of the meaning of the name, Jesus. So the name originated above the earth, it came through to us from the riven heavens. It would have to be so. For, man may dream out philosophies as to the need of approaching higher ideals or polishing habits to make them less fatal but man does not sense the need of a Saviour. Man would hasten to acclaim him the wonder of Bethlehem, the leader of the sages, the reformer superlative, the religionist of highest success, and with high-sounding music and rich paraphernalia applaud this one, when not too busy applauding some other, but all is mockery until we from the soul acclaim him Saviour. Whether in China or in Carolina, if we submerge this title we may cause people to contribute money, we may hear lost men singing "Onward Christian Soldiers," we may unbind bound feet and substitute heathen temple decorations with Roman Catholic absurdities called art, we may increase the sale of ice cream and foot-balls but we shall have been proceeding as refined pagans. Nor do we blot out his title as King. "He must reign!" But no mere reformer, however illustrious, can ultimately reign. Our subject now is to recognize a Saviour-King, (let us revise it and say THE SAVIOUR-KING.)

No wonder those angels sang the word "Saviour." Had not heaven been for centuries commanding and providing sacrifice of shed blood, animal sacrifice it was indeed, but such exact and fractional instructions were given by God concerning them that they were bathed in the authority of God's throne as they pointed ever to that Cross where their last little minutiae would be fulfilled in the shedding of the precious blood of Christ. And mark, the word "precious" is not spent when you have considered that his blood was the reality and the blood of those sacrifices for centuries the type. Ah, the angels are singing of a heavenly fact, a treasured truth, a love beyond words; they know that God has but one way revealed by which to cure the sin of sinful man, and hence they carol the word "Saviour." The ruby from the heavens was being presented, the jewel earth's mines could never give, the precious wealth all set in God's great love was being handed down, so they sang the word, "Saviour." Properly, we say it—Jesus.

O, snare us not this Christmas time with paganism trying to sing in its minor key some faulty sentiments of vanity. Let us sing of the sin-cure. Let us sing of the blood that cleanseth. Find us the choir. Where will you seek it? They, intoxicated with the mere tickle of the jazz, they cannot sing it. They, trained to allow their ears to cheat their voices by vanity over their own tones, they cannot sing it. But there is a choir. That drunkard, that harlot, that criminal of yesterday but saint of today, these can sing it. That self-sufficient, well-brought-up moralist of yesterday but humble saint of today, he can help swell the chorus. Hear them, and remember that yesterday they had no song:

"Joy to the world the Lord is come!"

Hear them, and remember their hearts are singing:

"Jesus, the very thought of thee, with sweetness fills my breast."

Hear them (and are you one of them?)

"Nor voice can sing nor heart can frame, Nor can the memory find

A sweeter sound than thy blest name O, SAVIOUR of mankind."

Jesus! That heavenly word, transferred to be his earthly name. Jesus! Ah, the noise of earth. The silence of heaven! But the silence was broken and, amid the noise came the music from heaven, the music of his NAME. And to those who receive him the music out-sounds the noise. "In me ye have peace."

THE POETRY OF CHRISTMAS.

WILLIAM M. YOUNG, D. D., SC.D.

POETRY is the highest form of human speech. The princely men of the kingdom of God all spoke in poetic forms. Five of the sixty-six books of the Bible are written in poetic beauty, and other books are interspersed with it. Poetry has a large place in the literature of the Christian Church. The world would be poor without the psalms of David, and the song of Zacharias, and the magnificat of Mary, and the cantata of the heavenly host.

Zacharias calls Christ the Dayspring from on High; this is a splendid metaphor, a picture of the rising Sun of Righteousness with healing in his rays. The day of spiritual and moral glory springs into being at the coming of the Prince of Peace. Light is a favorite metaphor of the Bible. In the nineteenth psalm we read of the sun as a bridegroom coming forth from his chambers in the east. Night's sable skirts are withdrawn; unclean prowlers and hideous beasts flee away. The splendours of the King of the day are mirrored in the golden streak on the ocean's cheek. The hillsides and forests are aflame with the glory of the life-giving fire. Quivering shafts stream across the towering mountains and light up the great city domes. It is the dayspring! It is morning in a world of night. Man goes forth to his labors and joys of the day.

Zacharias prophesied concerning Christ when he said: "Through the tender mercies of our God; whereby the Dayspring from on High hath visited us. To give light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace." Luke 1:78. This is a beautiful bit of poetry written by one of God's great prophet-priests. "The people who sat in darkness have seen a great light." At his coming, the arctic winter of the world's hardness began to thaw. Selfishness, entrenched in a thousand strongholds, began to be broken. The light of his presence began to melt the adamant of human hearts. He laid siege to the thrones of kings and began to ameliorate harsh laws.

He broke the power of slavery, and polygamy, and idolatry, and cannibalism, and heathenism and duelling and gambling. He will yet break the power of alcoholism and militarism and prize-fighting and every hard and cruel thing. Before his ever-increasing light intemperance and avarice and lust shall melt away, and joy, and happiness, and prosperity, shall come to their own in the earth.

"Peace on earth, good will toward men!" That was part of the angelic song. Could Homer, or Milton, or Shakespeare have matched it? The wise men said: "We have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him." Matt. 2:2. More and more the wise men of earth are coming to worship him. More and more the Babe of Bethlehem is becoming the "Figure du Jour," the Man of the Hour. Well said the Pharisees, "The world is gone after him." The advancing hosts of the earth are leaving behind them the fragments of broken idols and shattered superstitions, and the cry has gone forth: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of Glory shall come in. Who is this King of Glory? The Lord of Hosts, he is the King of Glory." Psa. 24:9, 10. Wise men presented him their gifts; we may still bring him our best, for he said: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

At the head of a large branch of the Oklawaha River in Florida is the famous Silver Spring. Ten steamboats might float on it at once. Looking into the clear water from a boat may be seen the gleam of the limestone of the vast crystal bowl seventy-four feet below, and immense subterranean torrents burst forth. When Christ was born in Bethlehem of Judea there burst forth a mighty crystal fountain whose living waters are flowing on to the ends of the earth. Long before the great event, a prophet of God had said, as he saw through the mists of the ages the coming of the river of life: "And it shall come to pass, that everything that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the river cometh, shall live." Ezek. 27:9.

"Flow wondrous stream with glory crowned; Flow on to earth's remotest bounds."

In the Roman Forum, Augustus set up the Golden Milestone, the starting-point for all the great military roads which led into all lands which Rome conquered. About the same time, in Bethlehem of Judea, during the silence of the Holy Night, the Milestone of the Ages was erected. Not a year too soon, nor a year too late; not a day too soon, nor a day too late: "But when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them which were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." Some one says that Paul says nothing of the Virgin Birth of Jesus: what does he mean when he says, "made of a woman?" Bishop Leete says: "For my own part after years of study and thought, I am more confident than ever of the genuineness of the accounts of the birth of Jesus. I believe that he came to earth 'according to the Scriptures.' I think that if he had come in any other way than by a divine method, he would have been less than divine, and would long since have been well-nigh or quite forgotten. With the message of each Christmas season, the gladness, the glory and the meaning of the manger-

Wanted—"Christian Colleges" That Are—Christian.

Properly to plant and nourish a Christian college is one of the highest privileges of Christian men and women. There is no soil so productive as mind, and who wishes to do the greatest possible good, and for the longest possible time, should nourish the fountains of learning, and help thirsting youth to the water. "Beating hearts are better than granite monuments," thus spoke the late President King of Cornell College (Iowa). But what is a Christian College? That is the question that a host of thoughtful people are asking today. Just as there is a great body of church members who are nominal Christians only, so there are schools which call themselves Christian, but bear not the gracious fruit of Christianity.

Many colleges there are who once were aflame with evangelistic fervor, but today have drifted from the "Faith of our Fathers." In some schools the big business of life would seem to be chasing the pigskin; in others the quest of the sheepskin is encouraged, in a lesser number the crown of life is emphasized, and soul culture stressed along with the training of the mind and development of the body.

True education cannot be defined in such academic terms as credit hours, class periods, courses of study and text books. These things are necessary, but other things are of supreme moment. Dispositions must be disciplined, attitudes must be tested, motives must be purified; there must be the refinement of personality, and the continuous fashioning and development of character. True education, if it means anything, means daily schooling in the art of right living, and right living means living as nearly as possible the life of Jesus Christ in harmony with, and in service for, our fellowmen. Service above self; Christ over all; his Kingdom triumphant in the hearts and lives of men; this should become the dominant force in thought and life.

There is no virtue in ignorance as there is no excuse for it. Yet to be ignorant of educational standards is not nearly so dangerous nor so inexcusable as to be ignorant of, and indifferent to, the moral values of life which make up the very bulwarks of our civilization. "The low brow" at the edge of the jungle is far less to be feared than the "high brow" among his test tubes, with a masterful knowledge of chemistry in his brain, but with a void in the heart where only love should be enthroned. There may be a menace in the yellow peril, but the greater danger is in the white peril, the peril of white men whose ideals are yellow. The supreme peril is the man with the 10x12 mind and the 2x4 soul, the man with the keen mind and dull heart.

Thinking minds appreciate the fact that America's present estate dates back to the three R's—reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic—and the Bible, to the little church that was the center of the early community's activities, serving as a means of spiritual life on the Sabbath and as a place of training for the minds throughout the week-days. Just so long as the church and the school were wedded, our country's ideals were kept untarnished and wholesome, but when education began to depart from the guiding and restraining influence of the Nazarene, then it entered upon dangerous paths and today we are suffering the effects of our departure from that path which has always led to the fullness of life. We still exalt the three R's as the basis of our national pre-eminence, but we have well-nigh forgot the fourth "R", Religion, without which neither education nor national life can long endure. If we would bring any arraignment against the so-called religious school of today it would be this: that its religion is the religion of languor and of relaxed ideals. It was a significant indictment of the average college that appeared in a recent issue of "The Nation" under the caption "The Languid Generation." The youth of today are lolling about on velvet cushions of high-powered automobiles, victims of an enervating age of luxury, yet history clearly teaches that luxury is the spade that has dug the grave of every empire that has ever perished.

This death stupor toward the finer things of life should be broken, and only the challenging appeal of a dynamic personality leading a new crusade for the moral emancipation of sin enslaved humanity can arouse the drugged minds of 20th century lotus eaters. Is not the promise of the Galilean, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth will draw all men unto me," sufficient stimulus to send forth Great-hearts to salvage society? Bring the Contagion of the personality of Jesus into the Class Room then such insane topics as Babe Ruth and bobbed hair will give place to serious conversation, world redemption and international brotherhood will occupy the thought of America of tomorrow and a fresh lease on individual and national life will be insured.

This age is at the crossing of the roads between a science that is well-nigh godless or an education that focalizes about the person of the world's one Great Teacher. Which way will America go? Her choice means that she will follow in the death trail of Nineveh and Tyre and the forgotten nations of yesterday, or that she will utilize her central position among world powers to further the principles of peace and make the mind of Christ prevail in the councils of the world.

The colleges and universities of America not only hold in the hollows of their hands the destiny of America, but in a fearful sense the destiny of all civilization. Whether we will acknowledge it or not, we have become our brother's keeper and this means the keeping of all men everywhere. "Let the rest of the world go by" must no longer be our national lullaby. This is the golden age of America's opportunity. The nations of the world are sitting on our doorsteps. We have been feeding them with the bread of wheat. Shall we feed them the Bread of Eternal Life as well? Today the eyes of the world are focused upon us for moral leadership. This leadership is impossible unless it is created in thoroughly Christian schools. What shall it be? The triumph of the test tube or the New Testament? Science can utterly destroy civilization. Shall our schools be sufficiently Christian to restrain science from the will to destroy it?

This is indeed the age of progress and we have gone forward with the stride of seven league boots in commerce, science and invention, but, alas, we fear to the detriment of the spiritual power and consuming passion that made the heroic forbears the mighty moral force of our yesterday. We must go back to the source of power, back to the Bible, that Book of power; we must make the spiritual values for which the Bible stands a part of the very breathing of our students. We must break away from this death-stupor of contentment with things material and strive as a man who runs a race for the supreme good.

Youth is intense. We must catch and direct this passionate intensity in a new crusade for that service of humanity which can be rendered only through the fullest development of the intellect and the spiritual life.

May we not say in the trenchant words of Professor Thompson: "Truth and the finding of it, beauty and the making of it; goodness and the doing of it; are not these the great unifying pursuits?" All these are embodied in the wisdom of him who said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." After all there is only one alternative before us: "It is Christ or Chaos."

Falling From Grace.

MRS. JULIA A. SHELHAMER.

"Ah, Lord, with trembling I confess,
A gracious soul may fall from grace;
The salt may lose its seasoning power,
And never, never find it more."
—Wesley.

This represents orthodox hymnology which is corroborated by Scripture.

Judas was chosen by Jesus as a fit subject to travel with him in evangelistic work—to preach, to heal and to raise the dead. "Freely ye have received," said Christ, implying that Judas was a recipient of Divine grace. Yet, "he by transgression fell" and "went to his own place" (hell).

Saul was once converted. The Bible states "God gave him another heart." And yet he so completely backslid that we find him lying on the floor of a witch's hut the night before he committed suicide. He was a self-murderer and "we know that no murderer hath eternal life, (eternal security) abiding in him."

These facts portray the exactly opposite idea of those who trust in the doctrine of "once in grace always in grace," to take them through to heaven. Those who thus believe, base their main argument upon the thought of the Fatherhood of God, or "once a son always a son."

Many other articles are given to Christians other than sons, viz, "heirs," "adopted" sons, "brethren," a "bride," "servants," "intercessor" (lawyers), "ambassadors," etc. None of these relationships are so secure that they do not permit of final separation.

The terms intercessor and ambassador apply to the highest aristocracy of professions. They have the freedom and dignity of an agent instead of the lowly capacity of a servant. The relationship of the latter is between his master and himself alone, while that of the agent is confined to the bringing of his employer into contractual relations with third parties.

All soul-winners then are agents of the very highest type.

Perhaps "American Law" will be kind enough to illustrate how it is possible for one who is a soul-winner to lose Divine favor and be eternally lost.

An employer may revoke an agency which he has expressly agreed shall be irrevocable. This agreement may be in writing and the violation of it be a legal and just cause of a lawsuit by the agent thus dismissed. However an employer may revoke an agency without liability in case said agent breaks his contract.

Likewise there is no decree of the Almighty concerning his followers which cannot be revoked in case they break their contract "with him."

The saddest thing that we can imagine is that one who has once known and loved Christ should fall from grace and finally wake up in hell.

The terror of such a situation was keenly felt by Charles Wesley when he wrote,

"Lest this my fearful case should be,
Each moment knit my soul to thee;
And lead me to the mount above,
By the low vale of humble love."

Grace Before Meals.

The same grace repeated time after time often becomes so commonplace and mechanical that we are prone to forget its real meaning. "Grace Before Meals," is not the product of one mind, but the assembled expressions of many devout servants of God. There is an appropriate grace for every day in the year. This little book has been used very effectively in teaching the different members of the family to say grace. It contains 167 pages, is neatly printed and bound. Price 50c.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

Since I sent in my last report I have had two meetings. The first was in Ligonier, Ind. This was a pioneer meeting. Rev. J. W. Montgomery, Supt. of the Northern Indiana District, Church of the Nazarene, had rented a nice hall on the main street, had it well lighted, and with a good piano for music, and Song Evangelist C. A. Hoover and wife to play and sing, it looked like we ought just about take the town for Jesus, but we failed to take it. Brother Hoover and I visited almost every residence in the town and left cards announcing the revival, and when folks would come to the door we would give them an urgent invitation to come, but come they would not. We thought we could get a hearing if we could have open air meetings, but the mayor would not let us, so we were compelled to stay in the hall.

Large numbers would some nights gather in front of the hall and listen and peek in at the windows and door, and while Brother Hoover and wife would sing I would slip back to the door and invite them in, but they would back off, or make a hasty get-away as though in deadly fear of being hurt or killed. Our largest crowd was 22, and most of them were professed Christians. However we are not willing to let the devil claim complete victory. One young married man was brightly saved, and we believe that some of the seed we endeavored to sow fell on good ground.

Our last revival was in a country church in the hills of Southern Ohio, in what is known as Salt Creek Valley Nazarene Church. This church is 20 miles from the nearest railroad. The roads are rough and winding and hard to travel in bad weather. Not one penny was spent to advertise this meeting. Did we have crowds? Well, if you had been there, you'd a thought so. I judge the church will seat 200, and the second night it was crowded to the limit, with the aisles standing full, and many on the outside who could not get in. And it continued that way throughout the meeting. One night we preachers and singers decided we would not try to go because the creek was out over the road so bad. But at church time we looked out and we could see the lights of autos as they were slowly going through the waters, so we decided to try it. We ran through water up to the running boards for quite a distance, but finally got to church and found a good sized crowd awaiting us. During this revival we saw 19 towns and cities represented in the crowds besides the country people who came. Some drove 30, 40, 50, and even 60 miles to this revival.

The altar services were good. We had near 60 seekers counting them as they came. Quite a number of the seekers came to the altar several times. One thing that I especially liked was the thoroughness of the altar work. The seekers were persistent and would not give up until they got a definite experience. Several nights the altar services would last until near midnight, and on Sundays we would begin at 10:30 and not get through until 2:30. And such shouting! It was a sight to behold! sometimes it would seem that everybody in the front was shouting.

The last Sunday it rained hard all day, but we closed with good victory. Five fine folks united with the church, and several more would have joined if they could have got there, but high waters kept them away. Rev. J. W. Steen was my preaching partner in this revival, and Joseph Swartz and wife were the musicians and singers. The evangelists and singers were well taken care of in the homes of these dear people, and paid well for their services, and invited to come back again. Salt Creek Valley has no regular pastor. Here is one of the greatest fields we ever saw for a good live pastor to build up a strong work. By the time this is in print we will be in another revival campaign in Cardington, O.

W. W. Loveless.

REPORT OF BROOKLYN CONVENTION.

The Annual Inter-Denominational Holiness Convention at Brooklyn was held at the United Presbyterian Church on Atlantic Avenue. The pastor, Rev. W. Nichols, gave us a very fine welcome, co-operated with us in every way; and extended every Christian courtesy.

It was Interdenominational not only in name, but in fact. Members of all denominations mingled together and made one great happy family. Everyone forgot minor differences in Theology and Doctrine, enjoyed one another's outlook on the great experience of Bible Holiness.

A wonderful happy atmosphere pervaded every service, none looked sad—as though a Holiness Convention ought to be as solemn as a funeral ceremony. "The joy of the Lord was our strength." Happiness was the keynote of the convention, sinners noticed it, unsanctified believers wondered at it, and the saints rejoiced in the joy and liberty that all enjoyed in the presence of the Lord.

Brother and Sister Cooke have been the conveners of this Annual Convention for many years; and not one has been held without lasting result and blessing to numbers of men and women. Conventions of this character prevent us from becoming too narrow in our denominational bounds. They also rekindle the flame of zeal, for this truth of Scriptural Holiness in many hearts who rarely hear it preached elsewhere. May the Lord bless these two dear self-sacrificing saints, and spare them to many years of fruitful service.

We missed some familiar faces this year. Dr. H. C. Morrison, that great lion-hearted warrior of the south, has been laid aside by sickness, but some of his messages and words were recalled by the speakers. Dr. A. L. Whitcomb was also prevented by sickness from being present. Both of these precious saints were the subject of many prayers for their recovery.

Each Convention speaker seemed to have a realm of his own. Dr. Brasher took us for a climb up to the mountain top, each time he spoke; as someone expressed it, "We could climb where we could not fly." After his messages some of us became spiritual mountaineers. Rev. Raymond Browning brought messages of conviction to sinners and encouragement to saints. Commissioner Brengle made everyone feel that he had a fatherly interest in them personally, and made their mouths water for the fruit of the land of Canaan. May the Lord ever keep us preaching and testifying of a land that flows with milk and honey.

The song evangelists did their part well, Rev. Alvin Young assisted by Mrs. Miller, and Mrs. Elsie Davies (the Welsh nightingale) gave us many beautiful and inspiring messages in song: that brought heaven down in such a way that the things of this world looked very small in comparison with things eternal.

Mrs. John Thomas brought wonderful messages to the morning fellowship service. Brother Cooke also gave two instructive messages on prophetic subjects, and others each in his allotted place did their work as unto the Lord. There were a number of seekers whom we believe really prayed through, took God's promise by faith, and witnessed to definite blessing of sanctification or salvation received.

Rev. J. Dunster Thomas

EVANGELISTIC REPORT.

The Lord of Elijah still lives and answers prayers. Our last meeting at Rome, N. Y., was one of the greatest of the year. A packed house greeted us every night for three weeks. Over one hundred people sought the Lord at the altar. Of that number sixty testified of getting definite victory. We hear a great deal of talk in these last days that old-fashioned revivals are things of the past, but if the readers could have been present at the Rome meeting it would have seemed like the days of old-time power to see people pray through and strike fire. We feel like buckling the armor a little tighter and pressing the battle to the very gates of the enemy.

J. M. Hames.

SHAFTSBURG, MICHIGAN.

I am acting in the capacity of pastor and evangelist. Last June I accepted the call of the Nazarene Church here when the pastor resigned to accept a call in the New York district. I am having the time of my life keeping "Bachelor's Hall" as my family live in Jackson fifty miles away. A year ago last September it seemed I had reached a place where my days of active service was ended. I arranged matters accordingly and tried to adjust myself to the situation. And then God met me and gave me the surprise of my life. He made it clear to me that my ministry was not ended and that he would take my case in hand and see to it that I would have plenty to do. Talk about stimulation and inspiration—I had plenty of it then. I went to the weekly prayer meeting and told the people that I had met God and he had renewed my commission and that I would not be among them very much from then on. I told them I knew God would set before me an open door and to just watch me to see if I was mistaken. I don't know much about science and philosophy but I do know the voice of God. The results in the last year and six months have verified my convictions expressed that night. Very little time since that day has been spent at home. In a few days a call came and from that day to now I have been busy.

I have just closed out a fine meeting in Bay City, Mich. This meeting was held in the Church of The Nazarene. Rev. Alva Eastman is the efficient pastor. I was assisted in this meeting by Irene Chaple, the blind soloist of Grand Rapids, Mich. She rendered most efficient help and was a large factor of my success. The people turned out in splendid force. Extra chairs had to be gotten to care for the crowd. The altar was filled and overflowed. There were forty the last day. There was not a day that there was not definite results. Seekers began to come the first Sunday. Nearly all the seekers were raw material too. It was not a case of knock down and set up but going right out after new material and getting them too, bless God. A Catholic sought and his wife. He had run a gambling joint in the city that got so bad the police raided it and it was closed. God got hold of him. His wife was saved. The pastor writes me that the work is going on and souls are getting through. Some of the ministers of the city churches were in attendance. This was my second meeting with this church and the best meeting the church ever had, so they said. We have a call to go back for a week-end meeting in the near future. And so—"Singing I go along life's road, for Jesus has lifted my load." Bless his Name!

A SUMMER'S REPORT.

Mrs. Rice and I returned from Los Angeles to Upland, Ind., the first part of May, in time to attend the annual meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness which was held at Wilmore, Ky., May 7th. The annual election was held and Rev. C. W. Butler elected President. All present felt he was the providential man for the office. Many excellent holiness sermons were preached by our holiness leaders, Rev. Joseph H. Smith, Rev. H. C. Morrison, Rev. John Paul, Rev. C. W. Butler, Rev. Paul Rees and others.

A few days later found us at the great annual camp meeting held at God's Bible School, Cincinnati, Ohio, where all of our deputation workers met. This is one of the greatest camp meetings in the country in point of seekers and attendance.

Our next camp was Red Rock, near St. Paul, Minn. Dr. G. G. Valentyne, of Minneapolis, is the President of this camp and under his splendid leadership down through the years thousands of God's people have had their spiritual thirst satisfied at this great camp.

Years ago it was regarded as a long stretch from St. Paul, Minn., to Mountain Lake Park, Md., but the fast trains and automobiles have shortened the time, although the miles remain the same. This camp meeting, held annually in the mountains of Maryland is a wonderful place for the people of God to gather, coming mostly from the thickly populated eastern states. Upon our arrival we found the Lord blessing the camp. We were most graciously received and given an opportunity to present the great cause of missions.

Many of our camps are located in the country or at the edge of some city or town, the beautiful groves and shrubbery making attractive places for Christian people to gather and worship God in the beauty of holiness. We were especially impressed with the landscape and the plan of the camp at Oregon, Wis., managed by Rev. and Mrs. Jack Linn. Space forbids our mentioning each one of the camps by name, included in our summer's itinerary, however, we might say that we are strong advocates of holiness camp meetings, as the cause of Christ has been greatly advanced by this outdoor method of bringing the gospel to the multitudes.

September 30th found us, with our three children, Mary, Roland and Ardell, and Mrs. Rice's mother, Mrs. Jennie Roberts, all en route by automobile to Los Angeles. We all thank God for traveling mercies as it was through his providence that we arrived in safety on Oct. 9th, without any serious mishaps. We reached Los Angeles in time to be in meetings being conducted by Rev. Joseph H. Smith at Trinity Missionary Church, Hobart Blvd. and Lemon Grove, the American Headquarters of the Oriental Missionary Society, the meetings closing the following Sunday, Oct. 13. These meetings were a wonderful success and our dear Brother Smith never preached better during his remarkable ministerial career.

We feel that the missionary cause is greatly indebted to our camp meeting constituency and their official families. May God abundantly bless and reward them all for their Christlike spirit and helpfulness to those who have a burning desire to carry the message of the Cross to heathen lands! What a real blessing it was to our souls to meet so many of God's people who have been the means of carrying the gospel message to the ends of the earth through their prayers and financial help! We are remembering at the Throne of grace all these precious friends met during the summer and it is with glad hearts that we look forward to looking into their smiling faces again next year at these places of spiritual feasting. May God bless the camp meetings of our country and increase their number!

E. O. Rice.

STILL IN THE BATTLE.

Mrs. Linn and I just closed a unique meeting in the Gospel Mission, New Philadelphia, Ohio. It was a big little meeting. The lovely hall would not seat more than 200, but it was continually filled. We are glad to report that the old-time Gospel works, and we saw many at the altars to be saved and sanctified, and the saints were truly revived.

In these days of modernism, we are so happy to know that God has a band of faithful men and women everywhere. I never saw a finer group of Christians than at this little mission. They prayed, shouted, paid, and boosted in every way. Sister Margaret Hewlow is the pastor of this work, and she truly was a charming yoke-fellow. She knew how to turn an evangelist loose and she knew how to boost him.

Please pray that we shall be kept faithful, and ever singing and preaching his blessed Gospel.

Rev. and Mrs. Jack Linn.

It is not what we have, but what the Lord can put into us that settles everything. "Ye shall receive,"—there is our deliverance, there is our hope!—Mark Guy Pearse.

Put God's mercy to the test! He can bear a greater pressure still. Lean hard, harder, hardest, again! You cannot fatigue omnipotence.—Joseph Parker.

on God for a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon the ministry and laity of the churches.

A brilliant writer said some time ago, speaking of the condition of the churches, "The need of the hour is not more of us, but a better quality of us," to which I respond, "If we could improve the quality, we could greatly increase the quantity." If the church membership of these United States could be brought into a real consecration and receive a genuine baptism with the Holy Ghost, we could belt the world with a girdle of divine fire. We could criss-cross the nation, civilized and heathen, with a gospel in the power and demonstration of the Spirit that would do more for peace among the nations of the earth, happiness, contentment and prosperity among the people, than all conventions with reference to making war impossible, the reduction of armies and navies, put together. This special issue of THE HERALD will be prepared and sent out with the hope of helping to arouse and stir within the people a longing for the enlargement of their own spiritual experiences, and a genuine enthusiasm for the salvation of the lost. We think of publishing it about the fourth issue in January, and we hope a host of people will send in for a bundle of these for distribution, at the rate of two cents per copy. Send the order in ample time for the office force to know the number of extra copies that will have to be printed.

Faithfully,
H. C. MORRISON.

The New Editor of The Central Methodist.

The new editor of The Central Methodist, Dr. B. C. Horton, is a man of heroic spirit. He has been a great physical sufferer, but has gone forward with a cheerful spirit that commends him to the admiration and sympathy of his brethren in a high degree. Having been sick ever since he became editor, now traveling in the west, I have been deprived of reading The Central, having seen only two copies of the paper since he took charge and they gave promise of fine work in his new and important field of labor. We notice there is some talk of uniting The Central Methodist, published in Louisville, and the Advocate published by Rev. W. A. Swift, in Jackson, Tenn. The union of these two papers would doubtless, be a wise movement. It would give to one paper a large territory with a constituency that ought to furnish splendid support. Such a paper, perhaps, would be enlarged to 24 pages and make one of the strongest weeklies of the church. We are believing, and wishing, for our Brother Horton great success in this new enterprise.

H. C. MORRISON.

No Paper Next Week.

Remember the last issue in December will not appear as it falls at the time when the office force want a vacation, so do not think you have missed your paper, when it fails to put in its appearance December 25. We promise fifty issues a year and this is one of our skips.

The World's Christmas Gift.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."
—Luke 2:11.

HERE is nothing truer than that there are many things which transpire in life whose meaning we do not understand, and whose value we do not appreciate until they are passed by.

Let us contemplate what this old world would be were the glorious Christmas-time taken from us; this of course would necessitate the taking away the fact that makes this happy time possible, and what would be the condition of the world if Christ's birth was annulled and the changes which it has brought about were obliterated? Can you imagine the chaos and confusion that would be ours?

But how joyous the thought that we have such an event to look back upon, and that the prophets looked forward to with longing expectation, for this was to be the time when a new day should dawn upon the world and, as some one has said, when we remember the high meaning that has come into human life, and the clear light that has flooded softly down from the manger-cradle in Bethlehem, we do not wonder that all mankind has learned to reckon history from the birthday of Jesus, and to date all events by the years before or after the Nativity of Christ.

It was Henry Van Dyke who said that, "The birth of Christ was the sunrise of the Bible." How true it is that he is the Sun of Righteousness and the Light of the world. We miss much of the real meaning of what Christmas really is, by celebrating it in a way that detracts, rather than adds to the sacredness of the day. It is right and proper to remember our friends with tokens of love, but in our giving do we remember that God's gift to the world was himself, and if we would give the highest and best to the world we must offer ourselves? He who would have the highest joy that this Yuletide time affords, is the one who forgets himself in serving others. This privilege is not confined to the rich, but the poorest may render some service that will help some one else and bring comfort to his own heart. Whittier expressed the true spirit of giving when he wrote:

"For somehow, not only for Christmas, but all the long year through,
The joy that you give to others, is the joy that comes back to you;
And the more you spend in blessing the poor and the lonely and sad,
The more of your heart's possessing, returns to make you glad."

Dear readers, Christmas will not have any lasting effect upon us if we do not carry its spirit all through the year. Dr. Hale says, "It is only for thirty-six hours of the three hundred and sixty-five days that all people remember they are brothers and sisters, and those are the hours that we call Christmas Eve and Christmas Day," but if we retain this cosmopolitan spirit all through the year we may have daily reminders of this happy occasion.

This world did not know what was transpiring that night in the manger when the Christ-child was born, but while earth was blind to the greatest event that ever appeared on the pages of history, the heavenly hosts were in readiness to come to earth and announce to the shepherds who were obedient to the heavenly vision, and had gone to where the young child lay, that unto the earth a Son was born. Note that the angel does not simply say Christ is born, but unto you he is born, and unto you I bring glad tidings of great joy, but praise the Lord, it was to be to all people; he was the world's Redeemer. His advent brought peace on earth and good will to men, and if we have his spirit in us, our coming into the world will mean, as far as our little sphere is concerned, peace and good will to men. If we shut out the Babe of Bethlehem, it would have been better had we never been born. What a solemn thought that we have it in our power to make our own destiny; either to make the world better by having lived in it and at last spend eternity with the good and holy, or be worse than one who never had an existence.

It is said that one dark night a young German soldier, posted at a sentry-box before the barracks, heard the hoof-beats of his captain's horse. He went quickly out and offered his salute and then stood there like a marble statue till the captain called out, "What use to me are your tokens of respect on this dark night; open the gate so that I can ride in." So it is that our outward demonstrations are but mockery in God's sight, if we do not open the door of our heart and let him enter. The thought is put very clear by an ancient poet who said,

"Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born,

If He's not born in thee thy soul is all forlorn."

May every reader of THE HERALD open wide the door of his heart and give full sway to him, who came in the humiliation and poverty of the lowest, yet who tasted death for every man, overcame death, hell and the grave and today reigns in glory as the world's Redeemer.

"Come thou, dear Prince, oh, come to us, this holy Christmas-time!

Come to the busy marts of earth, the quiet homes, the noisy streets, the humble lanes.

Come to us all, and with thy love touch every human heart,

That we may know that love, and in its blessed peace

Bear charity to all mankind."

An Interesting Book.

Missionary Heart Throbs, by James V. Reid, is the title of a most interesting book just published. The readers of THE HERALD will remember that Brother Reid, for many years a successful evangelist, has recently made an extended tour of service in Latin America. His heart has been stirred with the sad condition of a large percent of the people of the country he visited. He gives an account of these conditions and urges, with reason and pathos, the importance of a larger interest on the part of the churches in this sadly neglected people.

In several chapters he gives an account of the wonderful work of the Holy Spirit in the redemption of wicked men, and their remarkable labors among their fellows. The book is thoroughly interesting. I understand that he hopes to make another trip through that country, and is trusting that the sale of this book will go a good way in the furnishing of his financial support on this evangelistic missionary journey. It is good, clear print, 86 pages, with paper binding. Price 50 cents, and can be had of Rev. James V. Reid, 2912 Meadowbrook Drive, Fort Worth, Texas.

THE POETRY OF CHRISTMAS.

cradle, of the virgin birth, of the sinless nature, of the beautiful life and of the atoning death of Jesus Christ are more firmly held in my mind as the one great comfort, hope and strong assurance of the human heart. 'Glory to God in the Highest' for the fact and promise of 'peace on earth to men of good will!'

The ringing bells of Christmas sound out the joy-note of a great salvation to all the world. What sweet memories of childhood cluster around Christmas! How we remember the hanging up of the stockings, and the shouts of the children on Christmas morn. How we remember the father who read to us the story of the shepherds and the angels and the wise men. Every year Christmas is becoming more and more dear to the heart of all nations. A revival of trade every year tells the merchant that Jesus has come. Christmas creates and nourishes the spirit of brotherhood; and this expanding Christian brotherhood will one day leave no room upon the earth for hatred, and race-prejudice, and war. Christmas means, "good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

Now is the time to make your Sunday school teacher or friend a present of Arnold's Practical Commentary of the Sunday School Lessons for 1930. It is one of the safest, most practical, helpful commentaries you will find. It is just the thing for a busy man or woman who does not have time to make extensive search of Lesson Helps. I use no other Commentary, and have used this with great satisfaction for many years. And the price is just right too—only $1.00 postpaid. It would be a fine gift for any one who enjoys looking into God's Word for spiritual light and refreshing. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., can supply you.

What matter how the winds may blow,
Since fair or foul alike are best:
God holds them in his hand, I know,
And I may leave to him the rest,
Assured that neither calm nor gale
Can bring me danger or delay
As still I toward the haven sail
That lies, I know, not far away!

Just What Your Daughter Needs.

It is well in selecting presents for our children to know what is best for them, and we are taking the liberty of telling the mothers who read this paper of a wonderfully attractive book that has sold by the thousand. The title is as attractive as the book—Beautiful Girlhood—and the contents of the book are such as will bless and encourage your girl in her struggles through those transitional years from girlhood to womanhood. Many of our girls do not do because they do not know; this book treats of the various phases of a girl's life that will help her to mature into a beautiful, modest, noble woman. The author says, "This little book is born of a desire to help and encourage our girls who are struggling with the problems that come up in teens." Such topics as "Character Building," "A Sunny Disposition," "Sincerity," "A Christian," "Choosing a Lifework," and other equally interesting subjects are treated in this opportune book. The book is beautifully bound in blue cloth, with extra cover, has splendid, readable print, and sells for only $1.00. Do not fail to order this for your daughter, or niece, or other young women friends you may have, and it will be sure to please and profit. MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Dear Herald Subscriber:

This morning we received a very interesting letter. It said, "Please find enclosed check for $1.50 for which send The Pentecostal Herald to Mrs. Blank for the coming year as a Christmas Gift."

That appeals to me because it solves the Gift problem in a practical, simple, satisfactory way. It is a gift too, that does not soon pass into the "dump heap" as a worn out, useless thing. But for fifty weeks that friend will receive a reminder of the one who sent it.

If you will list below the names and addresses of friends to whom you would like to send The Herald we will mail them a beautiful Christmas Gift Card with the Christmas Issue of the paper. What would be more Christlike; or what would more beautifully represent the true Christmas spirit than this?

Yours for a Christian Christmas,

H. C. Morrison

P. S. If you will send as many as five names we will make you a special price of $1.00 for each subscription instead of the regular price of $1.50

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

I suppose you think your Aunt Bettie has run away and is never coming back. Well, you probably know that Dr. Morrison and I left Louisville October 30 for Texas, expecting to go to Abilene, but after getting to Ft. Worth we found that there had been snow in Abilene, so we decided to go to the Rio Grande Valley where it does not snow, but is warm and pleasant. But an "unusual" thing happened, they say, for instead of being sunshiny, as we expected, it rained almost all the time we were there, so we came up to San Antonio, Texas, after a very pleasant three weeks' stay in Weslaco, Texas. I say "pleasant," and so it was, in spite of the rain, for we met many of our Herald readers who came to see us often and brought us delicious oranges and grapefruit which we enjoyed very much. It is wonderful how widely our great Herald family is scattered, and it is certainly a great joy to meet them as we move from place to place. They seem like real kinsfolk, and they are, real Christian kinsfolk, for we are brothers and sisters in the Lord.

You will be glad to know that Dr. Morrison is improving and we are hopeful that in a short time he may soon be entirely relieved of his asthma. He has gained some weight, eats and sleeps fairly well and is much encouraged with his condition. We believe the Lord has raised him up in answer to the thousands of prayers that have ascended to the throne of grace in his behalf. We spent Thanksgiving Day on the train and had a very restful, quiet time, and as we traveled along I told him that most of all that I was thankful for was that he was able to ride by my side and had been spared to us again.

Well, my dear boys and girls, Christmas will soon be here, perhaps, before this gets in print. If so, I wish each and every one a most joyful time and a glad and happy New Year. I hope every cousin will continue to be a reader of The Herald during 1930.

Lovingly,
AUNT BETTIE.

CHRISTMAS.

Christmas! How we, the children of God, love to see that word in print! How we love to hear it spoken! How we love to utter it? How we love to meditate upon it!

Christmas! That word so dear to millions of God's children o'er all the earth—from the king in his royal palace, the millionaire in his mansion, all the way through the rich, middle class and poor of his family, to the poorest of the poor, and the most obscure of the obscure—to the boy or girl in the morningtide of the earthly pilgrimage, the adult in its noontide and the aged in its eventide.

Christmas! That word which is inseparably linked, as it were, by a golden chain, to that dearest and sweetest word in the English language to the believer:—

JESUS

Through that beautiful mystery of the Christian faith, the incarnation, so concisely stated by the Holy Spirit, the Third Person of the Trinity, through John, "the Beloved," in the fourteenth verse of the first chapter of the fourth Gospel:—

"The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us," through the Incarnation we have Christmas.

Christmas! This day and Easter, Glorious Resurrection Day, both of which are so radiant with the light celestial, are the two great festivals of the Christian Year which is ushered in with the Advent Season which, because it leads up, and gives birth, to Christmas, is so appropriate a time for the preparation of the hearts of believers for the coming of that day on which is re-emphasized that voluntary act of infinite love of God the Son—so transcendently beautiful—in clothing himself with humanity, preparatory to becoming

The Savior of Mankind, of which act the Holy Spirit thus speaks to all in the Book of Hebrews, the sixteenth verse of the second chapter:—

"Verily he took not on him the nature of angels, but he took on him the seed of Abraham."
"He came down to earth from heaven, Who is God and Lord of all."

The Holy Spirit, again speaking, this time through Paul, "The Apostle to the Gentiles," in the latter's First Epistle to Timothy, the fifteenth verse of the first chapter, clearly defines the mission of Jesus in these words:—

"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners."

Thus uniting in his Person, Perfect and Eternal Deity and Perfect Humanity, he, through his death upon the Cross of Calvary, became

The World's Savior, the Savior of the "whosoever," saving the individual from the guilt and power of sin in this world and from its penalty "in the world to come."

This, the Heart of the Gospel, was proclaimed in the angelic announcement made to the humble shepherds "abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night" (Luke 2:8), near the "little town of Bethlehem," in the land across the sea, on "the midnight clear long years ago:—
"Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior Who is Christ the Lord." (Luke 2:10, 11).

"He died that we might be forgiven, He died to make us good, That we might go at last to heaven, Saved by his precious blood."

So wonderful is this! At the time of the calendar year when the period of darkness is the longest, we have a spot that is so bright—so radiant with the light which shines from heaven,—and that spot is a day, and that day is the twenty-fifth of December, upon which the greater part of the Christian church celebrates the Incarnation of the Eternal Son of God, the Second Person of the Glorious Trinity—the taking of humanity into the Godhead, God the Son, by so doing, becoming also the Son of Man.

Christmas! How its spirit, so sweetly and so silently, like a visitor from heaven, comes into our hearts, even long before the dawning of the twenty-fifth of December—just filling them to overflowing—and lingers far into the New Year. A blessed experience is this! But there is a much more blessed one which can be the priceless possession of every child of God, and that one is this: As the One Whose Incarnation is celebrated on Christmas abides—not comes and goes, but abides,—spiritually in the heart of every believer, so it is the glorious privilege of the believer because of the presence of the Abiding One, to have the Christmas spirit in his heart the whole year round, that spirit only being intensified, enriched and made more beautiful during the Christmas season which has the twenty-fifth of December as its center. O that if any one of us does not have this, the much more blessed, experience—this experience which God desires everyone of his children to have,—may such a one seek it at once and become its happy possessor.

Christmas! How its world-wide message "to all people" is proclaimed even before, as well as after, the twenty-fifth of December. It is the blessed privilege of every believer to proclaim the wondrous and uplifting world-wide message of Christmas. O that everyone of us who is a follower of Jesus may embrace every opportunity—for each is a golden one—to proclaim that message which the world needs so much to hear, believe and put into terms of living, not only during the month of December, but also during each of the eleven months preceding it.

May Christmas of nineteen twenty-nine be the day upon which there will be a deepening, a sweetening and an increasing of our love as Christians for God's "Unspeakable Gift," Jesus, our Savior who abides spiritually in the hearts of all who are his (Rev. 3:20, John 15:23, 1:12) and who as the God-Man the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity, clothed in our humanity—our "Great High Priest," "touched with the feeling of our infirmities" (Heb. 4:15), now sitteth "on the right hand of God" "the Father Almighty" in Heaven, where "He ever liveth to make intercession for us" (Heb. 7:25), and from which beautiful place He is coming some glad day in that Resurrection in which, with hands outstretched in blessing upon his loved ones, he went back to heaven from Mount Olivet, coming to receive his own unto himself. (John 14:2, 3).

And to those who are not Christians who read these lines—this Christmas message—may that day be the day on which you will accept Jesus as your personal Savior—"Let Jesus come into your heart." But something better: accept him NOW—as soon as you read this message. Then you will be able to begin Christmas as his own dear ones.

God bless Aunt Bettie, Dr. Morrison, and the great family of Pentecostal Herald cousins.

Sincerely yours in Christ.
Cousin Sunshine.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am just a little Georgia girl, five feet, six inches tall, have brown hair, (not bobbed) blue eyes and fair complexion. I weigh 145 pounds. My age is between fourteen and eighteen. This is my first letter to The Herald and I trust to see it in print. I live on a 164 acre farm which we own. I enjoy farm life fine. We can grow most any kind of fruit and vegetables we desire. On the farm people can enjoy the fresh air and sunshine most. I do not go to dances, shows or anything of the sort. I enjoy reading good books. I have three brothers and two sisters and I am the youngest. I have two brothers and one sister married. My father takes The Herald and he and mother enjoy reading the good articles in it. Bernice Strickland, I guess your middle name to be Mary. Virginia M. Tilford, to be Mae, and Donna M. Wessman to be Marie. My birthday is Oct. 16. Have I a twin? Thanking you, Aunt Bettie, if I see this in print on page ten. Love and best wishes to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Rt. 3, Fayetteville, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you just give me a little room? I want to join your band of boys and girls. I have only been a follower of Christ a short while, but I have been happier than I have ever been. I want to be always true to my Christ, the one who suffered on Calvary for me. It is so wonderful to walk along life's rugged pathway with your hand in the hand of Christ. Well I had better stop or old W. B. will get my letter. I will answer any letters written to me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you permit an Alabama girl to join your happy band of boys and girls? I thank you. I surely do enjoy reading The Herald, especially page ten. We have only been taking it a short while but I have learned to love it. I am a member of the Methodist Church and enjoy going to Sunday school and to hear the gospel. I have brown hair, brown eyes, fair complexion, with freckles, and am fifteen years young. How do you like me? Willie K. Jean, I guess your middle name to be Kate. Am I right? Mrs. Fred Sartain, I guess your little daughter's name to be Eunice.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Alabama girl join your happy circle? There! I knew you would. I enjoy reading The Herald, especially page ten. I am a member of the Methodist Church and attend services and Sunday school regularly. I am the fifth of ten children. Have no dead brothers or sisters and my parents are still alive. I don't like to frighten people but I will tell you how my beauty stands. I am thirteen years old. Will be fourteen Jan. 4. Have I a twin? I am in the ninth grade, have blond hair, light complexion and blue eyes, weigh about 122 pounds, and am about five feet, four inches high. There! I hope I didn't frighten many of you away. Katie A. Thomas, I guess your middle name to be Alice. If I am right don't forget your promise. I had better hurry on before Mr. W. B. gets back from his hike. My middle name starts with E, ends with E, and has five letters in it. The one to guess it I will write to you.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a lonely Mississippi girl wanting to find some one that has my birthdate and age. I was twenty years of age December 29, 1928. My one desire is to be a preacher, if not, a preacher's helpmate. I am trying to live a true-blue Christian's life, however, the way is rugged sometimes. I do not like the movies, dancing, nor any other worldly pleasure. I am a poor girl expecting to finish high school next spring. I wonder if there is one who doubts life beyond the grave? I do not now, but once I did. One day a year ago I lay at the point of death. My people thought me dead, but I was only unconscious. I felt myself sinking into darkness. I said, "Be patient, God will lead the way." A bright light shone around me and I found the angels standing at my side. They seemed to breathe or whisper to me, and at once I was stronger and was soon able to be up. I have learned from this that a person must watch his steps if he expects to be a child of God. I wonder if there is any one who would like to write to me? Just say the word and I will answer. I am a member of the Baptist Church, but I enjoy all religious literature. May God bless each one that reads this and help you to never stray from this fold, is my prayer. A true lover of The Pentecostal Herald.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

(Owing to our skip Christmas week, we are giving two Sunday School Lessons this week.)

Lesson XIII.—December 29, 1929.

Subject.—Fellowship through Worship. Psalms 122:1-9; Heb. 10:22-25.

Golden Text.—As his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Luke 4:15.

Introduction.—In the sense of the word as used in our lesson, I suppose worship means adoration, reverence, praise rendered to Deity. This is the highest sense of the word, and must be the one intended here. For a group of people to meet in some place, and sing a few songs with little thought of their meaning, and join in a formal prayer, is not worship. One would better call it mockery. Worship is a serious matter in which one's entire being is engaged.

Where shall one worship? That is an important question in our day. The Jews said Jerusalem was the proper place; but the Samaritans called for Mount Gerizim; but Jesus said the time would come when neither of these would be the best place. He indicated that any place would be suitable, if one's heart be right toward God. To join in their so-called worship with Mormons, Jews, Russellites, Unitarians, Christian Scientists, Mohammedans, Theosophists—with any cult or ism that denies the Deity of our Lord, is taboo to every genuine Christian, no matter what sort of building the service may be in. It is sacrilegious and brings reproach upon our Savior.

Shall a Christian worship with a Modernist? Let me put the question a bit differently. Suppose a Modernist pastor is appointed to my church; must I worship with him, and sit under his preaching? No! Forever No! But says some one: "I must fill my place in the house of God." Well, suppose you do; you will endorse that man, and bid him "God Speed" by your endorsement, something that the Word of God absolutely forbids. (See 2 Jno. 9-11). Shall one endorse such a pastor by helping to pay his salary? Certainly not. "But," says one, "I have taken an obligation to support the Church, and I must do it." Not so fast. There is a double responsibility. Your church is under a sacred obligation to furnish you the pure Word of God; and you are under no obligation to support infidelity in the pulpit. Rather, you are under a solemn obligation to Almighty God to rebuke such infidelity by refusing to worship with it, and by withholding your financial support from it. The time has arrived when God-fearing Christians must fight this modern infidelity in the Church with every possible means. Such evil men must be taught that they cannot get either our support, or our fellowship. The battle is on to stay on.

There is a glorious fellowship among the true saints of God. Remember this: All true Christian fellowship is "with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ," through the Holy Ghost. I suppose that this was in the mind of our Lord in his great prayer recorded in John seventeen. Through entire sanctification God's people are made perfect in one as Jesus and the Father are one. When such people come together for worship (though they may belong to a dozen different denominations) there is a blessed fellowship. Witness the different denominations working together in the N. H. A. mission in China. There has never been a jar in that holy group. One may visit a half dozen holiness camp meetings in a summer, where from fifteen to twenty different denominations worship together, pray at the same altar and preach from the same pulpit, but he will find nothing contrary to the sweetest fellowship. The prayer of Jesus seems to have been answered among such people.

I am wondering whether the worship produces the fellowship, or the fellowship the worship. Such fellowship cannot be found anywhere among men, except among "the pure in heart." Blessed fellowship! It is akin to heaven. I went through six ten-day camps of this sort during the summer that has just closed; but I never did find out to what church most of the saints belonged. Not for one moment did I see any sign of envy, jealousy, ill will, or any other workings of the carnal mind among all those dear people of God. They are separated from the world—yes, dead to the things of the world, but alive unto God. Such worship and praise I have seldom witnessed in all the more than fifty years of my ministry. Thank God for it all. There is a heaven of worship among the saints on earth, that is an earnest of that above. "Let the people praise thee, O God, let all the people praise thee."

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Let us go into the house of the Lord.—Dr. Adam Clarke gives the date of the writing of this psalm as B. C. 536. The author seems to impersonate the Jews in their joy when returning to Jerusalem after the seventy years of captivity in Babylon. The very hope of being once more in the house of God filled their hearts with joy.

2. Our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem.—Although most of those then living in Babylonia had never seen the city of their fathers, they longed to be within its walls and to worship in its sacred temple. Jerusalem is, in a big sense, home to every Jew on earth to this day.

3. A city that is compact together.—Closely built.

4. Whither the tribes go up. . . . to give thanks unto the name of the LORD.—The reference is to the custom of all the tribes going up to Jerusalem for worship at stated seasons of the year.

5. Thrones of judgment, the thrones of the house of David.—The throne represented justice. The Jews always took pride in the dynasty of king David.

6. Pray for the peace of Jerusalem.

—What sort of a vile wretch would refuse to pray for the peace and prosperity of his own country? Dr. Clarke says it would disgrace the hemp to hang men who "labor to destroy the public peace, to subvert the government of their country, to raise seditions, and to destroy all its civil and religious institutions." Amen! They shall prosper that love thee.—I suppose that was purely a poetic wish arising from a glad heart.

7. Peace be within thy walls.—

They had had sufficient war and strife to satisfy them. The long captivity was gone, and the one remaining desire was for peace.

8. This verse rings with the same sentiment: "Peace be within thee." They could think of little else.

9. Because of the house of the LORD our God I will seek thy Good.—The psalmist rises to a high point when he puts the temple above the city. The greatest asset that any city, or any people, can have is a house of God wherein his pure Word is regularly preached to the people. But an inadequate church is worse than none at all; for it preempts that ground, and thereby renders it impossible to reach the people with the message of salvation. Turkey, Russia, Italy and Mexico are, in large measure, in that condition now. Preaching that does not save people will damn them.

Heb. 10:22. Let us draw near with a true heart.—No worship is acceptable to God that does not arise from hearts that are sincere. In full assurance of faith.—Without faith it is impossible to please God. A faithless prayer insults him. Having our hearts sprinkled.—With the precious blood of the Lamb of God. From an evil conscience.—The condemnation for sin removed by the merit of the blood. Our bodies washed with pure water.—There is here a reference to the ablutions of the Jewish priests prior to the temple service; possibly also to Christian baptism.

23. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering.—The writer has good reason for this exhortation: "For he is faithful that promised." It is a fearful thing to doubt God, for it calls him a liar.

24. Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works.—That is fine. It is not to excite in others a spirit of envy or emulation, but to lead them on by good example. Any other spirit would be sinful.

25. Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together.—Unless one must absent himself from the church as a rebuke to false teaching, I know of no excuse that will permit one to stay away, unless providentially hindered. As the manner of some is,—I wonder what Paul would think of this present age. People who belong to no church can hardly be expected to be regular attendants upon services; but when one thinks of the multitudes who have their names on church rolls, but seldom, if ever, attend public worship, he is amazed. About nine out of ten of our young people never attend church at all. They are growing into manhood and womanhood in dire ignorance of the best things in our civilization. They are losing what can never be regained; and the nation is losing in good citizenship. Not only is she losing in good citizenship, but she is gaining in bad citizenship; for nearly all our criminals are coming from this unchurched class. We must have a nation-wide revival, or there will be trouble in the near future.

Lesson I.—January 5, 1930.

Subject.—Childhood of Jesus. Matt. 2:10-22.

Golden Text.—Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins. Matt. 1:21.

Time.—B. C. 5, according to corrected chronology. The month is not known; but his birth must have taken place sometime during the summer months.

Place.—Bethlehem.

Introduction.—A few words concerning Matthew, the writer of the first Gospel, may be in order. About all we know of his parentage is that his father's name was Alphaeus. Before his call to the apostolic office he was a tax collector under the Roman government, and went by the name of Levi. No reason is given for the change of his name; although the new name, Matthew, means "gift of Jehovah."

As a Roman tax collector he was commonly known as a publican, and was bitterly despised by his own people, the Jews, who not only hated the Romans, but considered it both a sin and a disgrace to pay taxes to support their government. The Romans demanded a certain sum of money from the tax collector, his own remuneration being whatever he could "squeeze" out of the people beyond that amount. The door for extortion was wide open, and many tax gatherers entered in thereat, which accounted in some measure for the contempt in which they were held by the people.

Some think that this Levi (Matthew) was rather an honest sort of a collector; but there is no evidence pro or con. The notion may have grown out of the fact that Jesus called him to be an apostle; although that can hardly be termed evidence, seeing that such a man as Saul of Tarsus, a persecutor and a murderer, was later called to a similar high office in the Church. God is not looking for clean men, but for men who will let him make them clean. We are all rather dirty by nature.

Several of the disciples of Jesus were disciples of John the Baptist prior to their call to follow the Master, but Matthew was not. We do not know that he had ever so much as heard the preaching of The Baptist. But he did possess some fine qualifications for the work to which Jesus called him. He certainly was not very religious, after the traditions of the Jews; but there was in him a sort of sturdiness of character that was worth while. Then his fine training in business was no small matter. It taught him accuracy in dealing with facts. As one reads this little book that bears his name, he sees the business man all through it. It is accurate even to details.

Matthew seems to have followed the Master very closely; although he never attained unto the close intimacy accorded to Peter, James and John. But we judge from the portrayal he gives of the Master and his work, that he was a close observer of what was going on, and that he entered quite fully into the spirit of Jesus. Although he was in the upper room on the day of Pentecost and received the baptism with the Holy Ghost, he says nothing about it. In this regard he runs a close parallel with the writers of the other three Gospels. They write of it as a coming event, but leave Luke to tell the wonderful story in the Acts of the Apostles.

Except what we find in the book that bears his name, we know little of what Matthew did after Pentecost. He wrote the Gospel about A. D. 60 to A. D. 65. In looking up the matter we can find no authentic history, but tradition credits him with having preached some fifteen years in Palestine, and after that with having done some missionary work in other lands. Believe it or not, as you like: it makes little difference after the passing of these more than 1800 years.

The birth of the baby Jesus was the greatest miracle the world has ever known. On the supposition that "the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us full of grace and truth," the mystery is luminous with the light of eternal day; but if he was not the God-man, his birth was, and is, the most inexplicable, unsearchable mystery of all the ages. If he was not God in the flesh, the results of his short life constitute the miracle of all miracles. On no other ground can the how and the why of it be explained. We find the proof of his virgin birth in what he was and in what he did. Maybe I should say: "In what he is still doing." For him a human father was impossible, because there was none great enough. The very dimensions of his being declare that he was "begotten of the Holy Ghost."

It will be well for the student to compare carefully the two genealogical tables as given by Matthew and Luke. They differ very much, but are not contradictory. Space forbids me to enter into the question here. Read some good orthodox writer on the subject—Clarke is good; but by all means avoid the modern "pestilence that walketh in darkness." The one important point brought out by both writers is the fact that, on his human side, Jesus descended in a direct line from King David. Thus he had to come, in order to the fulfillment of the Scriptures that went before.

I was almost at the point of saying that I was sorry we do not know the exact time of our Lord's birth; but if we did, many of us would worship the day and hour. I suppose God covered up forever many of these matters, because the human race is so prone to idolatry. For a long time men did not know even the year in which Jesus was born; but that has now been discovered. As to the month and the day, we know absolutely nothing. Maybe that is best for us.

Comments on the Lesson.

In studying a passage of Scripture it is always important to get the setting. We read in the beginning of this chapter that Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king. This was Herod the Great who was about seventy years of age at the time of our Lord's birth. You will remember that this Herod died shortly after he had the babies around Bethlehem murdered in his jealous purpose to destroy Jesus, and that his son Archelaus became king in his father's stead. The Herods were a bad lot. One of the sons of Herod the Great, Herod Antipas, had John the Baptist beheaded; and it was he who abused the Lord Jesus Christ when Pilate sent him to him for examination.

When the wise men came from the east saying that they had seen a star in the heavens that portended the birth of a Jewish King, Herod was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. His trouble possibly caused the trouble among the people. We note that he called together the learned men of Jerusalem to learn from them where Jesus should be born. They answered almost verbatim from the prophet Micah 5:2: "And thou Bethlehem in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." When Herod had received the coveted information, he sent the wise men to Bethlehem with orders to search diligently for the young child Jesus, and to come back and tell him where he was, pretending that he too wished to worship him. Herod was somewhat like the devil, "a liar from the beginning."

10. When they saw the star.—I see no reason to try to explain the occurrence of this star. The birth was miraculous, and the star was miraculous. Our wisest explanations only puzzle our brains. There was a notion among the people that peculiar stars hung about the birth places of royalty; but that does not explain this miracle. They rejoiced with exceeding great joy.—The Greek says: "They rejoiced a very great joy."

11. They . . . fell down and worshipped him.—Had he not been God, that would have been idolatry. Mark you, they did not worship Mary, as some of our moderns would have done. Read Hebrews 1:6. I do not know that there is any special significance attached to the kinds of gifts presented to the young child. Some people have a habit of weaving a good deal into the Scripture that God never put there. They are wise above what is written, and sometimes make fools of themselves.

12. Warned of God in a dream.—In Bible times God frequently used this means to communicate with his chosen ones; and I am persuaded that he still does so in our day.

13. The angel of the Lord.—Angel means messenger. Again God's orders are given through a dream; but they are none the less real. He would outwit the murderous king by sending his Son into Egypt for protection. One is puzzled at the quickness and the simplicity of God's work. Men would have called for an army to protect the babe of Bethlehem; but God needed only one man and a donkey and the shining stars.

15. The death of Herod.—It would take a book to record the bad men who have been called into eternity soon after the commission of some great sin. God leaves them free to commit the sin; but before they are aware of it, the death-trap is sprung. Out of Egypt have I called my Son.—This is an indirect quotation from Hosea 11:1, a fulfillment of prophecy.

16. Mocked of the wise men.—They disobeyed his orders, and raised his wrath; but that was not the cause of his murdering the little ones. He was so jealous of his throne that he was afraid of a baby. Even kings are sometimes very great cowards. I am not sure that the world knows a greater scoundrel than Herod the Great. I have known of one man who named his son Herod; but I think he must have hated the boy.

18. Again Scripture is fulfilled. Rachel weeping for her children.—Rachel stands as the representation of the mothers among her descendants. Her little ones "are not": they have been ruthlessly murdered.

19. When Herod was dead.—That was the best deed he ever did for his people. Again God's angel carries a message to Joseph. It is time to leave Egypt.

20. Go into the land of Israel.—Some have wondered at this command from God, when Archelaus was reigning in place of his father, and would be no less cruel. But God knew all about it. There was a prophecy to be fulfilled. Jesus must live in Nazareth; and so once more the messenger comes in a dream. Joseph turns "aside into the parts of Galilee; and the little one is safe. The world will never forget that one little statement: "He shall be called a Nazarene."

I will be available for calls as Gospel Song Leader after Jan. 15, 1930, the Lord willing, Pacific Coast States till May 1. After that the middle states. Compensation is of secondary importance. I want to sing for the glory of God and the salvation of lost souls. Will travel in my own car.—A. R. Dooley, Star Route No. 3, Port Townsend, Wash.

THE OTHER PRAYER.

Kathryn Wilson Walker.

Last night,
When the silence and the solitude
settled down,
And reminiscence paused upon the threshold of my mind,
All alone,
My heart was overwhelmed with such felicity that I longed to repay,
Or at least to make my prayer a song of gratitude,
And I knelt
In the dark oblivion of the night time
Just to pray.
But the words came not, and then
I said
The self-same prayer
I always say.

I know He knows—
That lost in the dim labyrinth of my thought
It guidingly glows—
That other prayer, the prayer I cannot say, but only feel;
Yet in the dark oblivion of the night time when I kneel
Just to pray,
The words come not, and then I say
The self-same prayer
Of yesterday.

THE BEAUTY OF HOLINESS.

By Rev. G. W. Ridout.

This book is prepared especially to help people lead a holy life. It takes up the sevenfold beauty of the Christian life. It is the only book of its kind for holiness people. Price 75c.

Talking With God

A MANUAL OF PRAYERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS.

Within the covers of this book are one hundred and twenty-six prayers that have come fresh and sparkling from the minds and hearts of men and women who have written what they feel concerning their love and praise for their Heavenly Father and for the blessings they have received.

Many denominations are represented among the contributors.

Beauty, simplicity, and brevity mark the petitions. If read in the quiet of one's chamber, or used in the pulpit or from the platform, they will prove beneficial.

Price, 50c.

Good Stories from the Good Book

ILLUSTRATED WITH MYSTICAL PICTURES.

Three Booklets of Different Stories
The life of Jesus Christ, re-told in an exceptionally interesting way.

Five Mystic Pictures illustrate each booklet, whose beauty remains mysteriously veiled until they are viewed through bi-colored, gelatinous nose glasses, one pair of which is furnished free with each set of booklets. These glasses bring to view two pictures out of each confused one, a different picture responding to the gaze of each eye.

Three booklets of 16 pages each, in illustrated covers, size 4 1/2 x 6 inches and enclosed in attractive envelope. Price, 30c.

IN PERMANENT BOOK FORM

William Edward Biederwolf's

"Ten Reasons Why I Know The Bible Is The Word of God."

These ten splendid and unanswerable Lectures, which just recently appeared in the columns of The Pentecostal Herald, will appear in a very few days substantially bound in cloth, and sell for one dollar and a quarter.

People who do not accept the Bible, Christians who want their faith reinforced, Preachers who want material for sermons, Theological Students and Christian workers in general.

MISSIONARY HEART THROBS

By James V. Reid.

Incidents gleaned by the author during evangelistic tours into Latin America.

A wonderful story of one man's investment in souls: a story of the "Great Black Christ of Esquipulas"; accounts of odd customs and habits of natives; narrations of the marvelous transforming power of God's grace in restoring wrecked character. The stories will furnish inspiring illustrations for sermons, lectures and missionary programs for young and old.

Price 50c.

Kindness.

If you want to make a child, little boy or little girl, happy on Christmas morning, give a copy of "Black Beauty." Most every one knows this is the story of a horse, but it never grows old and several hundred thousand have been sold. No child can read it without having instilled in him a tender, kindly feeling toward all dumb brutes, and a book that teaches kindness builds character. This special children's edition is bound in bright-colored boards, has double pages of beautifully colored illustrations and will delight the heart of any child. The price is only 50c.

Gift Books for Everyone

The First Soprano

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The underlying motive of this excellent piece of Christian fiction, into which is woven a fascinating love story, is the consecration of life and talent to God. It peers through the superficiality of mere profession, and the hypocrisy of certain features of church life and appeals strongly for reality in Christian experience. You will find it one of the most interesting stories you have ever read. Packed in green or red Christmas box. Price, $1.00.

The Beauty of Holiness

BY RIDOUT

This book is designed to set forth the fact that there is moral beauty in holiness—attractiveness, winsomeness, sweetness as well as power. Cloth bound, 75c.

Revival Blessings

BY REV. GEORGE W. RIDOUT.

The greatest need of the world and the church is a revival. This book is very suggestive. It deals with:
The Story of Great Revivals.
Great Soul Winners
Revivals and Their Laws
Evangelistic Call and Commission
The Art of Soul Winning
Revival Kindlings, etc.
128 pages, neatly bound in cloth. Price $1.00.

Books by H. C. Morrison

The Christ of the Gospels $1.00
Remarkable Conversions 1.00
The Two Lawyers 1.50

Any of these will make an attractive gift.

How to Sleep on a Windy Night

This book is made up of 16 wonderful stories that will prove interesting, instructive and very helpful to any young person, or even to an older person. It contains 168 pages, is nicely printed and bound in full cloth, with jacket. Special net price, 75c, postpaid.

My Life Story

BY BUD ROBINSON.

His recent book, "My Life's Story" is, as the author puts it, "loaded to the water line with the activities of forty-seven years of labor in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ." The chapter on his call to preach is worth the price of the book and more. It has 217 pages, and sells at the remarkably low price of $1.00. You will weep and you will rejoice as you read it.

OTHER BOOKS BY BUD ROBINSON.

Nuggets of Gold $1.00

Pilgrim's Progress

The greatest book of all history, next to the Bible, and there are tens of thousands of young people, as well as old, who have not been blest by the reading of this great book. And even those who have read it ought to read it again. It makes one of the most attractive gift books to be had. We offer two beautiful editions. A large type edition with notes and colored illustrations, neatly bound in cloth. Price $1.00. A very attractive pocket size edition, good clear type, bound in cloth. Price 50c.

The Master's Twelve

BY REV. FRED B. WYAND.

A study of "The Twelve" will help you to get a better understanding of the Master himself. This is a new book by a new author and is calculated to give some new light on these twelve men and their Master. If you are not more than delighted with it, you may return it and we will refund your money. Price $1.50.

Doran's Ministers' Manual for 1930

Brings together within the covers of a book of over 600 pages an exhaustive and inexhaustible body of material for the alert minister, comprising suggestive sermon outlines, innumerable illustrations, choir devotions, church night plans, mid-week addresses, and a vast bed of sermons and addresses. These and a hundred other things—all of them enough to fill five books—are in the Manual for 1930 and the price is but $2.00.

The Nightingale of The Psalms

BY EVANGELIST J. E. AYCOCK.

An Exposition of the 23rd Psalm. A beautiful and touching explanation of this Psalm. By linking it with many other tender and comforting passages in both the Old and New Testaments, the evangelist gives this best beloved Psalm a new richness and depth of meaning in its application to life here and hereafter. More than 40,000 sold. Hundreds of people have ordered it to give away.

Price, 25c, 5 for $1.00.

Christmas envelopes will be sent free on request.

Turn But a Stone

ADDRESSES TO CHILDREN.

BY ALEXANDER.

The author tried these addresses out in his own congregation before putting them in book form. There are 50 very attractive subjects, with a scripture text to each one, and a wonderfully interesting story to illustrate each text. This book will be of untold value to anyone interested in teaching young people in the home, church or Sunday school. It has had a large sale at $1.60. Our special price, $1.00.

Finney's Autobiography

A Famous Gospel Worker says:

"No Christian can read through these pages without being profoundly stirred. It is a classic upon the practice of prayer. The reading of that book compelled me again and again to turn down the pages and retire to prayer." Price $2.00.

"Wherever Finney was working, as evangelist, or pastor, or teacher, there was a continuous revival. The lectures that make up this volume tell the why and how and power of Finney's life."—S. S. Times.

Price $2.00. The set (2 Vols.) $3.00.

The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life

HANNAH WHITHALL SMITH.

A whole generation has felt its power and been stimulated by its wholesome faith. The author has the happy faculty of finding the heart of the truth and interpreting it in a clear, pungent way that makes one see its practical bearing upon life's difficulty. The book will prove a great blessing to any one who will read it. Price, $1.25.

That I May Save Some

BY BISHOP WILLIAM FRASER McDOWELL

These five lectures Bishop McDowell declares are not a contribution to theology or to scholarship, but rather "one more effort to get the Church to singing again, singing anew the song of the angels above the plains: 'A Savior is born.' There is therefore, a distinct evangelistic purpose running throughout the volume; and there is also a definite challenge to the Church of God, everywhere to do the work of an evangelist and to demonstrate in a convincing way that the gospel of Christ is still the power of God unto salvation. Binding, cloth. Price, net, $1.00.

A Feast of Good Things

REV. J. M. HAMES.

A volume that is truly a "Feast of Good Things" to the hungry people of God. Seventeen chapters that deal with the progress and maturity of the sanctified life. A gift book any Christian would appreciate and derive great spiritual help from. Price $1.00.

Purpose in Prayer

BY EDWARD M. BOUNDS.

This book is just what the title implies. It intensifies the value, importance and necessity of prayer. Just the book for the quiet hour, for careful meditation and for all who wish to seek and find treasures of God. Special price $1.00.

The Nativity of the Holy Spirit

BY REV. ARTHUR T. O'REAR.

The author has made a life study of the subject of the Holy Spirit and in this volume gives a careful study of The Personality, The Nativity, The Naming, The Programme and The Receiving of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit is the greatest need of the individual and the church today, and you cannot make a mistake in giving this book. Price $1.50.

Dictionary of the Bible

BY DR. WILLIAM SMITH.

With contributions from 64 other great Bible students of the world. This book is a Bible encyclopedia of persons, places and things. 15 double-column pages devoted to Jerusalem, and other important places and persons in proportion. It is invaluable to any Bible student. There are 1,017 large double-column pages and the book is beautifully printed and attractively and substantially bound. A good $3.00 value that we are offering for $1.50 postpaid.

Life and Works of Flavius Josephus

Contains the history and antiquities of the Jews up to and including the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans in A. D. 70, to which are added seven dissertations concerning Christ, John the Baptist, and other characters. It also includes the life of Josephus and an analytical index to the entire work together with tables of texts of the Old Testament parallel to Josephus' writings. A great historical work by an ancient writer. Nearly 100 illustrations. 1055 pages. Size 7 1/4 x 9 3/4. Cloth. Price $2.00.

Messages for the Times

REV. C. F. WIMBERLY, D.D.

This author is one of the most timely and brilliant writers of the day. What he says is fresh and to the point. Whoever reads this book will be richly repaid. Dr. Wimberly has given the cream of his best thinking; the love of good literature will be stimulated and faith in things which are genuinely worthwhile will be strengthened. Beautifully bound in cloth, stamped in gold. Price, $1.50.

One Christmas

BY MARY HITCHCOCK.

The opening scene is that of a family, in a snow-laden northern city, gathered around the home fires on Christmas Eve. The artless questions of the younger children provoke serious thought on the part of the father and older brother, who is a college student, and this thought leads to decisions which are far-reaching in their effects. A beautiful book to send to friends. An ideal gift for pastors to send to members of the congregation. Suitable for teachers of intermediate and young people's groups to send to members of the class.

Gift edition, beautifully bound in art cloth, 50c.

God's Minute

A book of 365 daily prayers, sixty seconds long, arranged from January 1 to December 31; a prayer to each page, written expressly for this book by the most eminent preachers and laymen in the English speaking world. At the top of each page is a collection of Scripture on encouragement to prayer.

Cloth. Price, 60c; Postage, 5c.

Fox's Book of Martyrs

A history of the lives, sufferings and triumphant deaths of the early Christian and Protestant martyrs. It tells the story of some of the most thrilling periods in Christian history when "a noble army, men and boys, the matron and the maid," "climbed the steep ascent of heaven, 'mid peril, toil and pain.' It is thrilling and convicting. 370 large pages. Good clear type, beautifully printed and bound. Price $1.50.

The Bent-Knee Time

BY S. D. GORDON.

Three hundred and sixty-two, (to quote the author) "little bits which are meant to be distinctly secondary to the book itself." Every paragraph makes clear the pathway to God. This little book is appropriate for young and old. Any Christian will appreciate its simplicity. Neatly bound in cloth with a silk marker. Price, 75c.

Dairyman's Daughter

This charming little book has resulted, it is said, in the conversion of thousands. It has a rare beauty of style and withal an uncommon spiritual power. Price, cloth, $1.00. Paper, 50c.
