SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson X.—June 9, 1929.

Subject.—The Story of the Rechabites. Jer. 35:1-11.

Golden Text.—We will drink no wine. Jer. 35:6.

Time.—About 600 B. C.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—The Rechabites were not Jews. It is hard to settle some points in their history. Some have supposed that they descended from a man by the name of Rechab, and got their name from him; but this is not clear. The name Rechab means a chariot rider, or driver. Jeremiah calls this man the father of Jonadab. He says that the Rechabites in his day claimed to obey the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab their father; but in Jewish speech this might mean only a remote ancestor, as king David is called the father of other kings in later generations. No doubt, they descended in direct line from Jonadab.

The Rechabites were peculiar in regard to alcoholic drinks. We would, perhaps, term them fanatics. They would have nothing whatever to do with grapes—would not plant the vines, nor eat the grapes. They refused to drink so harmless a beverage as unfermented grape juice.

They would build no houses to live in, but dwelt in tents. They seem to have planted no seed of any sort. In fact, the assertion is made, that they planted nothing. They were a nomadic people, much after the wandering fashion of Arabs and Gypsies. Just how they got their living is not clear. No doubt, they had their flocks and herds, as practically all other oriental tribes who wandered from place to place. In some measure they resembled the Bedouins of the desert, only they were not vicious.

It is interesting to note how their father Jonadab impressed his convictions upon his descendants. Some of those ancient people must have been powerful teachers. How did Amram and Jochebed manage to so teach Moses the things of God during his infant years, that Pharaoh's court and the schools of Egypt could never undo their good work? Jonadab wished his descendants to be strong and clean. His rules were rigid, sent them—in large measure—away from the associations of other people, but made strong, unbending characters out of them. Nothing could induce them to violate his commandments.

It is a consolation to know that America is a land of prohibition. It has been woven into the very foundation of the nation, the Federal Constitution. And we are going to enforce that glorious amendment against all the booze bums and scoundrels that infest the land. Uncle Sam has never yet been conquered; and our moonshine population may as well make up its mind that the old Gentleman will never run up a white flag to any dirty gang on earth. Along with the 18th amendment, we shall enforce the Volstead Act, or something stronger. We are done with strong drink in America; and the world had just as well take notice, and act accordingly.

Comments On The Lesson.

The first four verses of this 35th chapter of Jeremiah give us some of the most definite information that we possess concerning the Rechabites. Putting this with other facts, we learn that when Jerusalem was besieged by Nebuchadnezzar's army, these people went into the city of Jerusalem seeking protection within her walls. Jehovah used them to put the loose-living, disobedient Jews to shame. Jeremiah was commanded to put them to a severe test. Their lives were so upright and clean that they were even permitted to enter the sacred precincts of the temple for this purpose. Jeremiah conducted "them into the chamber of the sons of Hanan. . . A man of God," and attempted to induce them to violate the commands of their father Jonadab.

5. Drink ye wine.—But they drank not. They had cultivated no thirst for drink. "Pots full of wine" and cups out of which to drink it could not entice them to break their Rechabite vow of teetotalism.

6. We will drink no wine.—There was real backbone back of that reply to Jeremiah's orders. Some generations had come and gone since Jonadab gave command to his children and descendants that they should forever abstain from drinking wine; but the passing years had made no difference. Their conscience stood like granite against sparkling wine and a commanding prophet, even though he claimed to be delivering to them the word of Jehovah.

That was a tremendous lesson in obedience for the Jews; but it made little impression upon their dead consciences. When men set their hearts against God to do evil, and stiffen their necks and harden their hearts in sin, nothing is left for them, save the wrath of God.

7. No one clause in this verse brings out its heart. Those Rechabites were quoting to Jeremiah the orders received by them from their father Jonadab. They were to live out in open nature, but must not be farmers nor wine-makers. And they gave his reason for this: "That ye may live many days." I think he narrowed them down a bit too close as to "sowing seed;" but we are learning in our day that few things are so conducive to health, longevity and happiness as living in pure air and sunshine. Hot-house plants are never strong. With men, it takes a good deal of "rough and tumble" to make them worth while.

8. Thus have we obeyed the voice of Jonadab.—Note how emphatic they were, and how far their obedience extended—to their sons and daughters. It was inculcated and enforced from generation to generation. It was not much like the wild disobedience of the present time, when children rule and parents obey. Nowadays most parents cannot rule Sallie and Johnnie till they are fifteen years old.

9. Nor to build houses for us to dwell in.—Had they built houses they would have settled down in one place; and that would have defeated the purpose of Jonadab. Housedwellers are likely to become soft, and unable to endure severe hardships. They repeat that they had neither "vineyard, nor field, nor seed."

10. We have dwelt in tents.—They were made of coarse, heavy cloth; the material was usually goats' hair. There must have been much tenting among those oriental peoples; for even as late as the time of St. Paul, we learn that by trade he was a tent-maker, and that this was likewise the trade of his two intimate friends, Priscilla and Aquila. To say the least of it, that was a healthy way to live.

11. So we dwelt in Jerusalem.—In this verse the Rechabites themselves reveal their reason for being in the city instead of the country. They were seeking safety from two opposing armies. The wars were not especially against them; but roving bands of heathen soldiers would show little mercy toward a small tribe of nomadic cattlemen. They probably pitched their tents on some vacant spot, or spots, within the walls of Jerusalem, hoping to return to the open country as soon as peace could be restored.

The Rechabites hold up to the gaze of men in all times a lesson in obedience and sobriety. It made them strong; and it has perpetuated their name and fame through 35 centuries. These virtues will make any people great in any age. America's hope lies in a rigid enforcement of her prohibition laws.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Evangelist H. W. Galloway and son Charles, his pianist, are available for tent and camp meetings this summer. Address, H. W. Galloway, Del Norte, Colo.

W. G. Bennett, formerly from the northwest, was recently married to Miss Ruth Harris, director of music in Trevecca College. Miss Harris, formerly teacher of voice in John Fletcher College, has been song leader in many of the holiness camp meetings. They are in the evangelistic field together, and have open dates for the summer. Mail will reach them if sent in care of Trevecca College, Nashville, Tenn.

To whom it may concern: I would like to get in touch with any District Superintendent, or Presiding Elder who may be in need of a man for pastoral work. Have six years experience in Evangelistic work and eight years as Pastor; am serving a charge at present and will be available any time after September 1. I have no preference as to what Church calls me so long as it is of the Wesleyan type. I preach a whole Bible. Address replies to Mrs. H. C. Morrison, care The Herald and they will be forwarded me.

Partner Wanted—Christian man and wife, or young lady to help in opening Mission Home. Mission in Atlantic City, N. J. Must be member of a Holiness church, play some instrument well, and willing to share expense, work and profit. Write fully. Miss J. L. Kenney, 25 Hanover, Margate City, N. J.

THE OPENING BUD.

There is a bud which just today Has opened up, and seems to say— I am alone but yet will try To scatter fragrance where I lie. This bloom so rare no doubt will be Transplanted soon, where all may see Its wondrous beauty, all because It did its best right where it was.

THE CHALLENGE OF VICTORY.

By Ernest H. Cherrington, LL.D.,
Litt. D.

Director of Department of Education,
Anti-Saloon League of America.

The sweeping victory for prohibition which was registered at the polls on Tuesday, November 6th, may prove more disastrous than any defeat. It is for the friends of the Eighteenth Amendment to determine whether the popular will so forcefully and so signally expressed at the ballot box shall find a larger and fuller expression in the advancement of national prohibition, or whether they will allow election day with its amazing results to be merely a magnificent gesture.

The peril faced by every moral movement is that its supporters will demobilize too quickly. Themselves law abiding, they mistakenly assume that their adversaries will be equally scrupulous. All written history records this error and the lamentable results which have grown out of it.

When the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted—by majorities which are comparable only to those given dry candidates in the recent election—millions of the most ardent supporters of the prohibition cause believed that the fight was over and that there no longer existed any necessity for maintaining an organized front. The history of the next few years testifies not only to the folly of that supposition but also to the harm wrought by what was never intended as desertion but which in reality was nothing less. Such weaknesses as prohibition developed, the growth of a well financed and highly organized illicit liquor traffic, the corruption of venal officials many of whom were placed in office by the support of wet Congressmen and Senators, with a host of other evils were the natural result of the demobilization of a large part of the dry army.

This fight is a la outrance. We have won a smashing victory. We must now make certain that we are not robbed of its fruits. The situation is more critical than the superficial observer may readily believe. The elimination of many foes of prohibition from both branches of Congress and from many other public offices while it increases the potential effectiveness of prohibition also constitutes a challenge to every friend of this social policy. We will be measured by our response to the fullness of our opportunity.

It is well known to every political observer that the larger number of legislators respond in the degree that pressure is applied upon them by their own constituency. In a representative government such as our own, this is not only natural, but quite proper. If the people do not desire action on some specific policy, such action is not obligatory upon legislators in a democratic republic.

The coming session of Congress will be besieged by the friends and foes of some dozen important social policies. The attention of our national law makers will naturally be given most fully to such questions as are most forcefully supported. From the President down through the whole list of administrative officers, there will be the usual pressure to meet new policies and make those new adjustments which are inevitable in a new administration. There will not be wanting those who will urge the importance of their own pet policies upon the attention of our public servants. The friends of prohibition must maintain their organization and maintain it effectively if they desire to hold a place among those who will be eagerly contesting for the eye and ear of those in authority.

There is also a moral duty which rests upon us now more heavily than perchance at any time since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. Not alone the President-elect, but a surprisingly large majority of those elected to various administrative or legislative positions were victors in the recent contest because of their position upon the outstanding issue of the election—prohibition. They are friendly to this cause. They are aware of the majority which supports it. They are conscious that only a minority which is even smaller than many of us had believed is opposed to this principle of prohibition or to its enforcement. All these officials are entitled to our fullest co-operation and most hearty support. If we disband today, or if we reduce our forces to a peace footing, we will leave these men unsupported in the great task which confronts them. They responded to our appeal believing that they would have behind them in their efforts to carry out the wishes of the American people, the organized support of the anti-liquor element in American life. We dare not be recreant to that trust. If we disappoint them, we shall work irreparable damage to the cause which is so dear to us.

We especially need a new emphasis upon the duties and responsibilities of individual states in aiding the solution of this important problem. The Eighteenth Amendment never presumed that the federal government would alone bear the responsibilities for enforcement of the law. There must be co-ordination, co-operation and concurrent action. Each state has its own burden to bear in this respect.

Honest and efficient state officers who are trying to do their duty in carrying out the will of the people concerning intoxicating beverages, should be made aware of the wholehearted support which they may expect from the friends of prohibition. The election returns have demonstrated the strength of the popular sentiment upholding prohibition. Organized, that popular sentiment may register itself in many ways that will greatly increase the splendid results already achieved under this social policy. Unorganized, that popular sentiment—which will not again have a chance to register itself at the polls for two years—will be as uncoordinated and as helpless as a mob.

Vitality important is it that we should not merely discuss the significance of a broad educational policy as an essential element of the prohibition movement, but that we should co-operate more completely in putting that program to work. The two million youth who reach their majority yearly plus the alien and his children constitute a field which has been too often ignored. Unless these can be fully informed about the vital truths concerning beverage alcohol and its menace to our modern civilization, our difficulties will grow instead of decrease.

The large sums invested in political activities as well as in very shrewd propaganda by the old-time liquor interests are evidences of the fact that these, while repeatedly beaten, have not yet surrendered. The stake of five billion dollars—the potential value of the licensed liquor traffic, if once more legalized—is the incentive which spurs the foes of the Eighteenth Amendment to action. The friends of prohibition are fighting for a sober, happy and prosperous land, free from the tentacles of the liquor octopus, free from the crime which it inevitably breeds, free from the corruption which is its essential element and free from the pauperism and misery which trail this traffic everywhere. Our victory on Tuesday indicates the strength of public sentiment upholding this policy. Our task today is to so organize that sentiment, so express that sentiment and so obey that sentiment that the next eight years will furnish irrefutable proof of the social, moral and economic value of this method of dealing with one of earth's most ancient evils.

BOYS ENJOY

Out-of-the-ordinary stories—stories of adventure. One of the most interesting stories we have read recently is "The Two Tramps." It would seem to be a book for boys, but really it is a book every one would enjoy. The tramps in this story are not beggars or men of low ideals, but tramps for Jesus. Order one or more copies to place in the hands of boys, at the special price of 60c.

Now Ready.

The memorial edition of Dr. W. G. Nixon's sermons is off the press. We are sure that his friends and the reading public in general will be interested in this series of gripping messages by one of the great pastor-evangelists of the day.

This book has ten messages from the pen of Dr. Nixon and a closing chapter which includes the messages delivered from the pulpit of his old church at his funeral held in the city of Detroit.

The many thousands who have listened to Dr. Nixon up and down the country will remember some of the themes presented here. Noteworthy are the messages on "Covenant Breakers," "The Benediction of Jude," the great sermon on Pentecost under the title of "Afterwards," "The Roadway to the Gates of Pearl," and the remarkable commencement message on "Character Building."

These messages are characterized by Dr. Nixon's terseness, his ability for striking utterance, and are accentuated by the spirit of conviction which always controlled the man in building the gospel message.

The book is clearly printed, has an attractive binding, contains one hundred forty-nine pages, and is sold at the very reasonable price of $1.00 per copy.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Pray for strengthening of body and mind of a sister; also, for salvation of our children.—Sister.

Pray for a revival to be held at Hillsboro, Miss.

Pray that the appetite for snuff may be taken from a reader of The Herald, and for a brother who is almost nervous broken down.

NOTICE!

Rev. Irvin B. Manly, member of the Texas Conference, Methodist Church, can be had for revival work, June, July and August. For twenty years a successful pastor-evangelist. "The family altar in every home and the young people won for Christ," is his slogan. He is specially "the young people's preacher." Winning them is both easy and natural with him. For union meetings or other kind, address, 401 Cosmos St., Houston, Texas.

THIRSTING FOR GOD.

A. W. Orwig.

Thirsting for God, for him alone;
For him I sigh and deeply groan;
Naught else my soul can satisfy,—
Nothing that dwells beneath the sky.

Thirsting for God, the holy God,
Not moved thus by his chast'ning rod;
But by his Spirit and his love,
Drawing my heart to things above.

Thirsting for God, I want him more Than all of earth's abundant store,—
Than riches, pleasures, earthly fame,
All these are fleeting, hollow, vain.

Thirsting for God, my inmost soul
Cries out for him, my only goal;
He only shall my portion be
In time and in eternity.

Thirsting for God, like him to be;
Yes, thirsting for his purity;
His spotless image let me know,
Washed whiter than the glist'ning snow.

Thirsting for God,—himself he gives,
And now in my glad heart he lives;
Himself is more than all beside;
With him indeed I'm satisfied.

Let every thirsting soul look up,
And take an overflowing cup;
God's fullness, all his fullness take;
He'll give it now for Jesus' sake.

FALLEN ASLEEP

WHITLEY.

On the night of January 18, 1929, just after the clock had tolled the hour of midnight, the death angel came and claimed for its victim our darling mother, Mrs. Sarah E. Whitley, aged 74 years and one month. Her death was caused from an attack of flu. Mother was the daughter of Rev. Edmond and Naoma Wright, and the wife of Rev. George F. Whitley, both of the M. E. Church, South. She was sick one week and suffered intensely but bore her suffering with Christian fortitude. She professed faith in Christ in her girlhood and lived true to her Lord till the end. She loved her Church and always attended services when able, and contributed to its support. When she kept house her home was the home of the Methodist preachers. But for several years she had lived among her children as father had preceded her to the Glory land 29 years.

She was the mother of three sons and two daughters, her youngest son having died two years ago; she leaves four children to mourn their loss of a tender and affectionate mother, besides grandchildren, great-grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends. She was loved by all who knew her, and was a friend to all. I can never remember when any one in need who came to her ever went away empty-handed.

Oh how sadly we miss her, for as she would visit among her children we would each be expecting her soon. She's gone from us to never come back any more but we feel that if we live true to the godly example she set before us we shall meet her some sweet day to part no more. I earnestly ask the prayers of God's children who may chance to read this that we may live so that mother's prayers will at length be answered, that we may at last form an unbroken circle around the throne of God.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. E. Coop, after which her body was laid to rest on Jan. 20th by the side of her husband in the family burying ground, but her spirit lives on with God.

Lovingly, her daughter,
Ada Spear.

OGBURN

Mr. H. B. Ogburn, son of E. J. and T. A. Ogburn, departed this life Jan. 20, 1929. He was born Nov. 17, 1882. His home was in De Funiak Springs, Fla. In 1902 he was united in marriage to Nettie Lloyd and they lived happily together for about 25 years. To them were born six children. His loving companion and two babes preceded him to his eternal home. His wife's death was caused by a car wreck, about three months before the Lord called him home to rest from all of his labors. He was hurt in the car wreck and never got over it. He had the flu and relapsed into pneumonia.

He leaves four sweet children, all of whom live in De Funiak Springs. He leaves a devoted mother, three brothers, two sisters and a host of friends and relatives to mourn his loss. Our loss is heaven's gain. He was a Methodist by belief and seemed to love everybody.

He was born in Dale Co., Ala., in 1882, near Ozark. His father moved to Geneva County, Ala., in 1887 and he was raised up and married and lived in Geneva County several years. He spent his last days in Florida.

The funeral services were held in the Methodist church by the pastor, at De Funiak Springs. He was laid by the side of his precious wife to wait for the resurrection morn, when the dead in Christ shall rise.

His mother,
Mrs. T. A. Ogburn.

NEGROES!

By The Editor.

Do not think I have used the word "nigger" in many years. It is offensive to colored people and distasteful to me. I do not need it in my vocabulary. I am trying to be a Christian; that means I must be courteous and respectful to all of God's creatures.

It is a queer kind of Christianity that can be kind to dogs, love horses, take great care of a nice cow, fix a comfortable place for the chickens to roost, feed the pigs with promptness and be insolent and contemptuous toward human beings because of their color.

Our colored people have had a long, rough road to travel. You say they have come up slowly. Perhaps so, but they have met with much opposition. They have had heavy burdens to carry; they have struggled against the swift currents of centuries of heathen darkness and superstition. They are making progress in spite of all these handicaps. They should have sympathy and encouragement instead of contempt.

The Negro race, like the white race, is not to be judged by its weakest and most unworthy specimens. Perhaps, neither race is to be judged by the occasional, outstanding genius, but there is an average to be struck somewhere. Those of us who live in the southland, know quite well that there is a vast number of colored people who are industrious, trustworthy, and remarkable for their kindness. During the history of this paper we have had in our employment colored persons who were trustworthy in the highest degree. Their courtesy and kindness were a real comfort to me. This is true of thousands of colored people who serve their white employers, not only industriously and honestly, but with a loyalty that is remarkably interesting.

To tell the plain truth, colored people have been wonderfully kind to me. My grandfather, the father of my mother, owned many negroes. The story was that he never struck one or sold one. He had the heads of all his colored families in the great family room "up at the big house," for prayer. They were Methodists, white and colored. They lived in peace. The war came on and they were free, but they stayed about the home of the old master. My aunts and uncles owned blue-grass farms in central Kentucky and they owned many colored people. This was on my mother's side. The descendants of those old servants of the slave days are there in the neighborhood working for the white descendants of the old masters to this day, and there is a strong bond of friendship. If any of my mother's people ever sold a slave, or used the rod upon any, except the children, I have never heard of it. The old ones are nearly all gone. There is Ben Rains, who is very old. He has a comfortable little house and a younger wife who cares for him. It has been my privilege to visit him twice within the past two years, and I always gave a little token of my respect and love to this faithful old brother "bound in black."

As my heart ripens for the world to come, I am longing to see good will among human beings, especially that those of us who claim to be Christians guard carefully against prejudices, hatred, discourtesies and unkindness of every sort. How offensive it must be to God that we should hate or disrespect any one of his creatures because we find him as his God created him. Criticizing the work, we are finding fault with the workman. I fully recognize the lines that should be drawn among the races, but there are no sides of any lines that justify hatred or taking advantage, or discounting a human being because of color, financial conditions, or the advantages of education which they have not been privileged to enjoy. Those who are wise owe a debt to the ignorant. Those who are educated should always try to bring learning to the uneducated. Those who are healthy should prove their gratitude for health by ministering to the sick. Those who stand upright should lift the fallen. If there is such a thing as a superior race of human beings, let them prove their superiority by giving the glad hand of helpfulness to all other races of human beings.

Opposition to the Second Coming.

IT is quite interesting to note the considerable agitation on the part of many ministers on the subject of the second coming of Christ. The opposition to the New Testament teaching on this subject is widespread and it seems that this opposition grows and becomes intensified as men rise, or seek to rise, in power and authority in ecclesiastical organizations. This is so marked that one would think they are almost afraid our Lord will come before they are able to realize their fond ambition for places of power in the church.

In The Nashville Christian Advocate of March 1, of the current year, there is a sermon with the title, "The High Quest," by Rev. W. B. Selah. It contains much very excellent matter; in fact, this brother gives us some unusually fine thought on the subject of "The Kingdom of God." There is, however, quite a bunch of flies in his pot of, otherwise, very fine ointment. He can't get along without making a fling at those who love the blessed hope of the coming of Christ. We clip the following from his sermon:

"The idea that the kingdom cannot come until Christ returns in the flesh to establish it cuts the very nerve of endeavor. If Christ is to return as a sort of military Messiah and overthrow all evil and establish heavenly justice, why should we strive to better social conditions? The early Church lacked social vision largely because many of the early Christians were waiting for the second advent of Christ. The world in that day was cursed with human slavery. The social edifice was afire. But the Church did nothing about it. It was waiting for the Lord to return and set up a new social order. Men thought they could well afford to live in a social shack for the night when the Lord was coming to build a palace for them in the morning. Today there is a group of very earnest and conscientious Christians who look for the second coming of Christ. Some of these premillennarians are bold enough to set a date for his appearance. Most of them have no social vision. They do nothing to make the world better. In fact, they hope and sometimes pray that the world will get worse, for they believe that when things become intolerable Christ will come and overthrow the powers and establish his kingdom. But such men have misinterpreted the sayings of our Lord."

We do not know the type of premillennarians that our brother has been associated with. We know a large number of people who believe that the Lord Jesus will come in great glory, and establish righteousness in the earth, but this faith has not "cut the very nerve of endeavor." Take, for example, the Rev. A. B. Simpson, a most apostolic and saintly man. I would not undertake to endorse all of his views, or say amen to his every utterance; but that is entirely apart. He was one of the great gospel preachers of his time. He organized the Christian Missionary Alliance Movement. I have considerable acquaintance with these people. Mr. Simpson and the people of this organization are among the most zealous missionaries of a century. They are very firm believers in the coming of our Lord, and this very faith has stirred them up to a most marvelous missionary endeavor. No people have been more active than the Christian Alliance in an effort to carry the gospel into, and over, all heathen lands. Not only so, but their lives for Christ, their consistent living, their brotherly love and kindly attitude toward mankind is one of their very distinguishing features. I am not undertaking to underwrite or endorse everything our brethren of this organization may believe and say, but that is another matter. I do admire their zeal for the spread of the gospel; their unquestioning faith in the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, their implicit trust in the redemptive power of the sacrifice and suffering of our Lord Jesus, their joyful hope of his soon appearing, and their diligent, untiring service, while they await his coming. It occurs to me that their splendid endeavor for the spread of the gospel in heathen lands should lift them above the spirit of ridicule on the part of any one who claims to be a Christian.

GOSPEL LABORS OFF THE MAIN TRACK.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I am writing this in the interior of China—this time in Fuchian Province, South China.

Leaving Shanghai by Japanese steamer, after two days, we steamed into Foochow anchorage. It seems indeed too bad that a city of 500,000 people with a thousand years of history back of it has no harbor as yet, and that ships have to anchor down the river about ten miles from the city. All kinds of river boats await the incoming steamer to carry passengers up to the city. Our party hired a launch which took us and our belongings to a landing. We arrived Saturday night and spent Sunday at Foochow. This is the city where Methodist Missions had their beginning in China. Here Bishop Wiley lies buried.

We held three services on Sunday—the two main services in the Central Church where the students from the various schools attend; the afternoon meeting was held in one of the school chapels. Both afternoon and night we had altar services with students seeking the Lord. As we have to come back to Foochow for special revival services we shall not write any more of this great city for the present.

Monday began our trip in the interior where we were scheduled for meetings at Sien yu Hinghwa and Futsing. Mode of travel now was different from anything previously experienced because this was our first series of meetings off the main tracks of travel; hitherto we traveled by steamer or railroad. Now we are getting our first experience being carried in chairs by coolies. We left Foochow by launch which bore us up the river, then into a creek which we traversed as far as it was possible for us to do. At the landing we were met by our chairs and coolies and then for twenty miles were borne through a country that was very beautiful in its summer-like climate and its vegetation, flowers, etc.

Finally, in the late afternoon we were landed at a mission station where we put up for the night, and next day, early, we departed on foot till we got outside the city walls where we were again picked up by chair and coolies and carried on till we struck the automobile road, thence by auto and launch and more auto till we finally reached Hinghwa. Our original intention was to go on from this point to our destination, Sien yu, where our first evangelistic engagement was to begin, but Rev. W. B. Cole had come down to meet us and to hold us at Hinghwa over night because of bandit trouble. It seems that that very morning the bandits had come down from the hills and stopped an automobile and carried off or kidnapped the passengers—their purpose being of course to hold them for ransom. This is a very common practice in the interior of China these days, but as a rule the bandits keep off the main roads as they know soldiers are around, but now and then they will become bold and venture forth. Missionaries tell us in this section that the bandits seldom bother the missionaries; they recognize that they do the people good and their hospitals and doctors take them in and are kind, even to bandits, when they are sick and wounded.

At this writing war is in the air but this is China and it will be a long time for things to settle down to good and solid government. Let it be remembered that the China Republic is only seventeen years old. It takes a country a long time to find itself after going through the throes of Revolution. If we stopped mission work in China because of the civil wars we would never get anywhere. The work and the fight must go on despite all the odds and all the difficulties, and thank God, wherever we go we see revival fires breaking out and hundreds seeking God.

We are now at that place in China where a Pentecost broke upon the churches about twenty years ago. It began here at Hinghwa. This is the place where Dr. Brewster carried on a wonderful work under the M. E. Church. Twenty years ago, they tell me, some preachers had been fasting and praying and then in a meeting—I think it was Good Friday—the Spirit of the Lord came upon the people and they began to confess their sins to God and to one another, and the fire spread and spread and spread until a regular pentecost swept over this section. Dr. Brewster has long since gone to Heaven, but Mrs. Brewster is still here and is in daily attendance at the meetings.

I was reading today in Ezekiel 3:5: "For thou art not sent to a people of a strange speech and of an hard language. . . . Not to many people of a strange speech and an hard language whose words thou canst not understand." I was quoting these words to the Chinese preachers and trying to show the great need of their being on fire for God for the salvation of their own people, but oh, as I applied them to ourselves how different!

China is cursed with many dialects and one has to be interpreted again and again. China from Shanghai cannot be understood at Foochow. My interpreter, Andrew, who travels with me now, has to be interpreted himself and so it goes in China. One has got to learn the language and dialect of the section one intends to work in as missionary. Two whole years of a missionary's life has got to be spent learning the language before they can do any public speaking, and even then it is with fear and trembling. I was just speaking with a Chinese evangelist who got his training in America. He told me that he held meetings at Amoy and preached in English and was interpreted by an American missionary! Think of that—a Chinese preacher preaching to Chinese people having to be interpreted by an American! And so is China! Of course we have the advantage wherever we go of always speaking in English and being interpreted by some educated Chinaman in the dialect of the province where we are preaching.

Here let me tell a story of my present interpreter. He is an educated young fellow. He attended Theological Seminary in a certain city of China where evidently they pay little or no attention to the spiritual life of the students. He graduated and came back home, joined the M. E. Conference and was assigned work. A converted Hebrew came up in this section of China preaching Christ and converting grace and this young man did some interpreting for him. One night the sermon was on "The New Birth"; while this young college graduate was interpreting he got converted and became a changed man, and ever since that he has done a very fine work for the Lord, teaching in the Boys' School and also as assistant pastor of the Church. He threw overboard a lot of the modernistic teachings he had received at the Seminary and has developed a very fine Christian experience. He has evidently had a good time interpreting our holiness messages. It is a great joy to see workers and preachers and missionaries get the blessing of full salvation in the meetings. Last week after we had preached on a "Clean Heart" one of the evangelistic missionaries entered in joyously at the altar services and her soul is aglow now with holy fire.

In the summer time Conventions for the deepening of the spiritual life are held in various parts of China. These are attended by many missionaries. Many of them who have been trained in modernistic schools at home find themselves sadly wanting as they attend these conventions. I heard this story recently. A young woman came to the convention all settled in her own modernistic view of the Bible, etc. She was quite interested at first in the meetings as the speakers spoke on Evangelism, etc., but as the meetings deepened and the preachers began to talk about the Blood, and the Bible as being the Word of God from Genesis to Revelation, as they preached faith in the Bible as the revealed Word of God she shuddered. "Why, the idea of the Old Testament being the Word of God." "Why," she said, "there are lots of things in it that I don't believe and that I wouldn't teach." "Why," she said, "I would have to throw overboard my education and all that I have been taught if I believed what they preached here." She had a terrific struggle for several days. She could neither sleep or eat. She tried to pray but her education gave her no course in the prayer life. (And please remember she was trained in one of our Church schools in U. S. A.) At length she surrendered to the Spirit of God. She gave up! Light broke in on her soul. She was brought into a real state of grace. The Old Testament she despised became a delight to her, the promises became sweet, prayer a delight, and she went back to her station a saved, Spirit-filled missionary!

Now, does it not seem sad that young people will be sent out to missionary work who have intellectual training but whose spiritual equipment is only of the kindergarten type.

I think a good prayer for the missionary is found in those words of Charles Wesley:

"O thou, who camest from above,
The pure celestial fire to impart,
Kindle a flame of sacred love,
On the mean altar of my heart.

"There let it for thy glory burn
With unextinguishable blaze,
And trembling to its source return,
In humble love and fervent praise."

NOTES ON THE REVIVAL.

At Sien yu, Rev. W. B. Cole, of the M. E. Mission, had been getting the people ready and when the meeting opened the Spirit of God began to work. Rev. Andrew Gih shares with me the preaching. Mrs. Ridout holds a Woman's Meeting every day in hospital chapel. Every morning at 7:15 we have a Bible Hour with the preachers and the Bible Women, preaching at 10:15 and 7:30. The schools co-operate and come to the meetings. Soon the altars are crowded with seekers. Sometimes half way down the church people are on their knees seeking the Lord for pardon and holiness; conviction deepens, the hospital nurses are seeking the Lord, preachers are cleaning up, some are confessing things in their lives that have been wrong and the sanctifying fire is spreading. One young government official is present at every meeting and now he is at the altar; he comes and comes again till he receives the Holy Ghost—his face is aglow with the power of pentecost. Wonderful the effects of a revival upon a community; the voice of song and prayer is being heard constantly; every day tells of new victories in the life of some man or woman.

In this revival it was so blessed to have such co-operation from all the missionaries. Dr. Johnson, of the Hospital, is a power with the women folks. Miss Beta Scheirich, of W. F. M. S. and C. E. I., whose evangelistic gifts are so pronounced, is wielding a big influence with the girl students and the Bible Women. Mrs. Cole is constant in her work with the young people and Miss Aldrich is always ready to help in the battle. The missionaries of the W. F. M. S. at this point are certainly both evangelical and evangelistic and ring true in both doctrine and experience. To Dr. Johnson and Miss Palm, the nurse, both Mrs. Ridout and I are deeply indebted.

After the Sien yu meeting we came down to the Hinghwa engagement. This is a big Methodist center having many Institutions connected with it and a big church building; in fact, they say the Hinghwa Church is the largest in China. Here the evangelistic meetings were held mornings and nights, the Woman's Meetings in charge of Mrs. Ridout, being held in the afternoon in a large hall. Preachers and Bible Women from the district have been called in and they are at all the meetings. We preach holiness to the church and pardon to the unsaved. Soon the work of conviction takes hold of the meetings and at every preaching service the big altar is crowded with seekers for pardon and holiness. The people and preachers are hungry, then the students from the various schools come by scores to the altar; the other night special appeal was made to the young men of the high school to come out for Christ, over forty came out and we had upwards of one hundred students from the various schools seeking God that night. Our difficulty here is the crowd seeking is beyond our means to help. Through our interpreter we exhort them and direct them how to seek God, to confess their sins and trust Christ for salvation. We then have to rely upon the Holy Spirit to do his office work and give light and the knowledge of salvation. Sometimes we surround the seekers with those who can pray for them. The Women Missionaries deal with the women and the girl seekers. Here in China the line is very closely drawn regarding sexes. Women deal with women, men deal with men. All sit separate in the meetings; there is no mixing but very strict separation.

The work of revival has some marks which characterize it no matter what country or people. Confession of sin takes both forms—to God and to others. Here is a woman who confesses a wrong of twenty years ago; here is a servant woman who confesses to the missionary evil tempers which she exhibited years ago; here is another that pays a debt of years ago, and so it goes. When the Spirit begins to shed light confession of sin begins. In the foreign fields as well as at home the same thing holds true of which the poet sings:

"In evil long I took delight,
Unawed by shame or fear,
Till a new object met my sight,
And stopped my wild career."

Thank God, the old gospel is the same the world over; it is the power of God. We can sing with the same degree of faith in China as in U. S. A.,

"Jesus mighty to renew,
Work in me to will and do;
Turn my nature's rapid tide,
Stem the torrent of my pride;
Stop the whirlwind of my will,
Speak and bid the sun stand still,
Now thy love almighty show,
Make even me a creature new."

LATER NOTES OF THE REVIVAL.

Sunday was a great day. Fine crowd out to early prayer meeting at 6:30 A. M. At 10:30 preached on Pentecost as a personal experience and as a blessing for every church. At the close had crowded altars as preachers, missionaries, Bible Women and church members came praying for their pentecost. In the afternoon Women's Meeting crowded as Mrs. Ridout preached and perhaps a hundred souls seeking God. At 3 P. M. preached to men on "The Baptism of Fire," and had a glorious altar service; at night closed the meeting preaching Jesus to the multitude and calling sinners to repentance.

Early Monday morning we depart by launch to Hong Kong and then by chair and auto to Futsing where we join in a meeting with about a hundred preachers and one of the Methodist Bishops in a five days' meeting preaching and pushing holiness among the preachers and salvation among the unsaved. Here in China everybody wants the Chinese preachers to get full salvation. There are no limits put on your preaching of holiness. The Chinese church needs all the religion it can get hold of and it is a great delight to preach to hungry souls.

We have recently passed another milestone along life's pathway (birthday). It was spent in travel to our next revival in one of the interior cities, but oh, it is a rare joy in these days to be able to spend and be spent in publishing the glad tidings of full and free salvation in a desperately needy land. Let me close with some lines that seem very precious to us in these days.

"O Zion haste, thy mission high fulfilling,
To tell to all the world that God is Light,
That He who made all nations is not willing
One soul should perish, lost in shades of night."

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE HUMAN HEART.

ONE day a sceptic asked a highly educated and cultured Christian woman how she could prove the Bible was the Word of God, and she said to him, "How can you prove there is a sun in the sky?"

"Why," he replied, "Because it warms me and I can see its light."

"And so it is with me," she said, "the proof of this Book being the Word of God is, that it warms my soul and gives it light."

We have now considered eight reasons for believing this Book to be the veritable Word of God, and here is a ninth, the Testimony of the Human Heart.

If you want to know in a single sentence what that means I can tell you best in the words of one of the great English poets

"I know the Bible is inspired because it inspired me."

And if you would further seek to know what that means I could have asked you until a few years ago to come with me to a little town in western Indiana. You could have seen there a living picture which has stamped itself in my memory more indelibly than if graven in plates of steel. It is after nine o'clock at night and in a quiet, humble home sits an old gray-haired man, bending down in rapt attention and consuming interest over the pages of an old and well worn Book, which seems to shine upon his face with a glorified light. It is the Bible. Year after year and night after night the years through he has been sitting there. Let us go in and for your satisfaction I will put the question, "Father, how do you know this Book is the Word of God? You are not in any sense a learned man; you have never been to the university; you have never read Butler's Analogy, nor Janet's Final Cause; you are not in any sense acquainted with the learned disquisitions of an Augustine, an Erasmus or a Paley. How is it that you have come to believe that this Book is the very Word of Himself?"

And you would hear him say: "Believe it to be the Word of God! Yes, I know it is—my heart, my soul, my whole being tells me it is so. This Book—what a Book it is! It has revealed to me things no man could ever tell me; it has given me a peace that passes understanding and a joy I never knew before; it has given me wisdom when I have been perplexed and changed my sorrow into a song! it has quieted my fears and quenched my bleeding wounds; it has kept the graves of my loved ones green and kindled in my soul the hope of a coming resurrection; it has changed death, which for me is not far away, from a dark messenger of dread into an angel of glad tidings. The Book of God? I am as sure of it as I am that I am sitting here a living, breathing man."

This is what I mean by the testimony of the human heart. I mean what Robert wrote, "My idle reasonings sometimes makes me a little sceptical; but the necessities of my heart always give the lie to cold philosophizings."

I mean what Daniel Webster had chiselled on his gravestone, "Philosophical argument has sometimes shaken my reason for the faith that was in me; but my heart has always assured me that the Gospel of Jesus Christ must be a reality."

I mean what Coleridge said, "I know that the Bible is the Word of God because it finds me in the deep places of my being."

"In the deep places of my being." That is where the Word of God takes hold with its quickening, energizing and transforming power. That is where the actual man really is.

I do not wonder that the ingenious gentleman of analytical notoriety, who undertook to find out just what is in a man, came to the conclusion that the Bible is right when it says that man is "fearfully and wonderfully made." He discovered that the average man contains the constituents found in 1200 eggs. There is enough gas in him to fill a gasometer of 3649 cubic feet. The iron in him will make four ten penny nails. His phosphate contents will make 8064 boxes of matches. There is enough hydrogen in him, in combination to fill a balloon and carry him above the clouds. And out of the remaining constituents you can make seventy-five candles, a good-sized cake of soap, six teaspoons full of salt, a bowl of sugar and ten gallons of water.

Now some people may think that a very delicate and wonderful analytical dissection. We don't; and when it is all over, we feel like asking, Is that all there is in a man?

No, that is not all. The biggest part of man the analyst has overlooked; for there is something in the deep places of a man's being, that does not discover itself to the critical eye of the chemist, nor yield itself to the mortar and the pestle. The real man is not the outward man that responds to scalpel and microscope, but the inward man of conscience and soul and heart that responds to the Word of the Spirit of God who called it into being.

"It finds me," said Coleridge, "in the deep places of my being." And so it finds me, and it finds you and it finds every man who has ever come to it humbly and honestly seeking to know the truth. Intellectual pride, of course, it cannot brook.

Have you ever read those remarkable words of Heinrich Heine, the Jewish poet and cynic, who after having found Christ became once more involved in doubt, and later seems to have returned to Christ when night and death were falling? He said:

"Astonishing! That after I have whirled about all my life over all the dance-floors of philosophy, and yielded myself to all the orgies of the intellect, and paid my addresses to all possible systems, without satisfaction, like Messalina after a licentious night, I

THE MAN WHO IS WORSE THAN JUDAS.

Dr. G. Whitefield Simonson.

(Preached in M. E. Church, Bellmore, N. Y.)

AN order to make any kind of a fair comparison between Judas Iscariot and the man (or woman) in Bellmore today, we must first look at just what Judas did. And St. Matthew puts it this way: "Then one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot, went unto the chief priests, and said: What will ye give me and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver." That is the first scene.

The second scene takes us through the trial and condemnation of Jesus, with the soldiers dragging Christ about and making fun of him.

"Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that Jesus was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that. And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself." This is the third scene. (St. Matt. 26:14, 15 and 27:3-5).

Judas moved too slowly and too gently to suit Judas. He had an idea that he knew how to push the Kingdom of God better than Jesus was doing it. He believed in the power of Jesus. He knew of that Nazareth mob which had tried to hurl his Master from the hill; and he remembered that Jesus just passed through and left them astounded. He had heard his Master confuse the tax collectors; and had also heard his defiance of King Herod: "Tell that fox, Behold I cast out devils, and do cures today and tomorrow." He knew that the soldiers sent to arrest Jesus had returned without him and reported: "Never man spake like this Man." O yes, Judas knew the power of Jesus; and he believed that he could compel Jesus to use that power to demonstrate physical and temporal supremacy. I ask you to look at DeQuincey's description of Judas: "The object of Judas was audacious in a high degree, but for that very reason not treacherous at all. His hope was that when, at length, actually arrested by the Jewish authorities, Christ would no longer vacillate; he would be forced into giving the signal to the populace of Jerusalem, who would then rise unanimously for the double purpose of placing Christ at the head of an insurrectionary movement and of throwing off the Roman yoke."

JUDAS TRIED TO UNDO HIS BAD WORK.

When Judas saw with surprise that Jesus was actually tied up by his enemies, then Judas did his best to undo the work he had done against Jesus. He made a desperate effort to set Jesus free.

Now, over against that put the work of the man or woman in Bellmore who selfishly and stubbornly pushes his ideas of building the Kingdom of God, and declares that he will keep right on his own way, and cripple and break the Church which is the body of Christ, unless it comes to his little narrow, selfish ideas of what the Church of Christ ought to be. Such a man is really saying: Christ in his Church must be what I want him to be—my tyrannically stubborn idea of a Divine Master—or I will do my utmost to break the Body of Christ—The Church.

Look at them! Judas and such a man! Is not Judas the better man of the two? Judas tried to undo his hurt of Jesus.

Judas sold Jesus to his enemies for the price of a slave. He would get the equivalent of a life-time of selfish service, by tricking the enemies of Jesus. Hear him sneeringly warn them: "Hold him fast." A cunning plan to put all the responsibility of loss upon the heads of Jesus' enemies. He will laugh at their failure to realize on their trade. Judas is certain that Jesus will never allow himself to be bound and killed. O no! But Jesus is bound and on his way to death.

"Then Judas, when he saw that Jesus was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, I have sinned . . . and he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple." That proves clearly that money was not the big thing Judas was after. When Judas saw that he had hurt the body of Christ, he did his best to heal it.

THE MAN WORSE THAN JUDAS.

What then shall be said of the man in Bellmore—or in any other place—who bruises the Church which is the body of Christ, and gleefully stabs its holy influences, as the Roman soldiers pierced the body of our blessed Lord? Is not such an one worse—far worse—than Judas Iscariot?

Judas found that his bargain had brought him more than he wanted; that trade included a Potter's Field he knew not about; there was an awful burden of black despair rolled upon his mind that he never had expected. His selfish, sinful, proud, blundering mind had started Jesus to the terrible Cross and its torturing death. His conceited superior ability to do things was unable to undo his stupid treachery. With the sound of the ringing gold on the Temple floor, flung in defiance at the feet of the priests, Judas rushed out into the darkness, used his girdle for a gallows' noose, and leapt into eternity.

Notice this! Judas was not a sniveling soul, sneaking around doing his worst against God and the Church of Christ, and then whining foolish excuses, declaring that he "hoped to get to heaven when he died." Look at him. Judas sees that his hands have turned his Master to his death. He makes those same hands his own hangman. Now that he cannot save his Master from his enemies, he will not save himself.

Do you see that man who trains with the enemies of Christ's Church, doing the things that sell out the honor of Jesus, and yet says that he wants the Church to go forward and to grow? He is playing a meaner game than Judas ever thought of playing. Like Esau he sells his soul's inheritance for a mess of present profit or pleasure; and then he plans to beg for future blessings, blaming some one else for his folly. Judas did not do that. There are Achans today who fool themselves into thinking that they can pile up polluted gold and garments, when God has called for an entire consecration, and yet enjoy fellowship in the tents of God.

They who play the Judas-game are sure to lose. You cannot serve Christ and his enemies at the same time. The man or woman who thinks to benefit by the blessings of Christ and his Church, while living so as to discredit Christ and make his Church appear as a cheap, small institution,—such folks are worse than Judas was, the records of the Blessed Gospel being our standards.

John Ruskin has this to say about Judas: "We do great injustice to Iscariot in thinking him wicked above all common wickedness. He was only a common money-lover, and like all money-lovers the world over, didn't understand Christ; he couldn't make out the worth of him, or the meaning of him. This is the money-lovers' idea the world over. He does not hate Christ, but cannot understand him; does not care for him, sees no good in that benevolent business; makes his own little job of it come what will."

Listen to me, my friends! Look this startling proposition squarely in the face. Many men and women, who would not think of living in a place which did not have the blessings and benefits of Christ and his Church, are selling Christ for their own selfish interests and tying up Christ's Church so as to make it a helpless and ridiculous thing in the eyes of the enemies of Jesus; many there are who pour their money out for soul-scorching pleasures, and then deliberately make Christ and his Church a beggar, by pretending that the ringing Gospel call of Christ to make his Church fully function in all human society is something they cannot afford to obey. And that gives God the lie, for Christ has squarely said: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things (food, clothing and housing) shall be added unto you."

But look there again! Those very men and women who have sold out Christ and broken and bound his Church are saying: I want the Church to send some one to pray for the saving of my shriveled soul when dying, and some ritual to ride me to heaven.

How can the Holy God of Heaven keep back his righteous wrath from falling on such worse than Judas—souls?

Judas Iscariot was a better man than that.

"We bend the knee, accept the vow,
And breathe the thoughtless prayer;
How soon are prayer and vow forgot,
Amid life's crime and care!
The Savior's passion, Cross and blood,
Of what avail are they,
If first the Savior we forget,
And next we disobey!"

"For pleasures, vanities, and hates,
The compact we renew,
And Judas rises in our hearts—
We sell our Savior too.
How for some moment's vain delight
We will embitter years,
And in our minds and hearts, alas! find Only remorse and tears."

JUDAS A RED TRAFFIC SIGNAL.

Judas is a terrible warning to us to stop our stubborn, selfish, sinful, selling of Christ and crippling his Church. As one of God's humble spiritual traffic officers, I flash before you the red signal of Judas' life. I lift my right hand and warn you not to go that way. Turn right at this very spot, and travel with Christ and his Church along the highway of holiness which he has cast up for his people to enjoy. Hear him now. He gives the signal for every man to follow him: "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life." Join your life to his and know the joy of heaven on earth. Swing into an heroic stride with your Savior, and go with him to the Cross. Does that seem to you to be a way of gloom? I echo the victorious song of every soul who has taken it: It is the only way to eternal gladness and glory which has opened to the sinful hearts of men. Jesus led his disciples in singing, as they stepped out into its shadows; and out through those long-drawn shadows Christ led them into the shouting gladness of an eternal day of joy. Judas went out that same night into despair and destruction. But listen! They were all together with Jesus, when that evening of shadows began.

My fellow-man, you and I are here with Christ in his Church amid these shadows of this evening. The Spirit of God brings the words of Jesus to us as clearly and as personally as they were first spoken amid the gloom of the Garden of Gethsemane; with the tenderness of the divine heart-break, Christ calls to you: "Friend, wherefore art thou come?"

Shall your answer be a betrayal?

Or will you courageously say just now to your Divine Friend and Savior: I'll go with Thee all the way.

Start this very moment, with all the determination of your manhood and womanhood, and sing with George W. Doane, as you catch step with Christ, your Savior:

"Thou art the Way—to Thee alone
From sin and death we flee;
And he who would the Father seek,
Must seek Him, Lord, by Thee.

"Thou art the Truth:—Thy Word alone
True wisdom can impart;
Thou only canst inform the mind,
And purify the heart.

"Thou art the Life:—the rending tomb
Proclaims Thy conquering arm;
And those who put their trust in Thee
Nor death nor hell can harm.

"Thou art the Way, the Truth, the Life;
Grant us that Way to know,
That Truth to keep, that Life to win,
Whose joys eternal flow."

Ideals for Earnest Youth.

Ideals for Earnest Youth is a charming book for young people of both sexes. It is neatly bound, excellent paper, good, clear print, 224 pages, short chapters, sometimes only two pages, frequently not more than three pages. This enables the young reader to catch up the book at a few spare moments, read a chapter and go to work, or on a journey, with something to think about. Let me give you a few of the chapters:

Self Respect, Self Mastery, The Joy of Living, Your Ideals, Courtship and Marriage, Take Care of Your Mind, The School of Struggles, Backbone vs. Wishbone, Team Work, Recreation. There are 61 short chapters in this book, each one loaded with good thought expressed in beautiful language.

Perhaps it is very well to be grieving over the fact that young people are going astray, and constantly bringing complaints against them for the error of their ways, and insisting to them that they should not do this, that, and the other thing. How would it do to cheer up, get a hopeful outlook for the rising generation by placing good books in their hands and get them to reading and thinking good thoughts, desiring good things. Thought produces desire, desire leads to action, repeated actions fix habits, habit fixes character, and character fixes destiny.

Send a dollar to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for a copy of Ideals for Earnest Youth, and surprise one of your children or young friends with a bright smile and a beautiful gift.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

Famous Playwright's Criticism of America.
ANDREW JOHNSON.

THE Chicago Herald-Examiner carried the following criticism of America, by the famous playwright, Mr. Channing Pollock, on the front page of its publication of April 18th by International News Service: "America," said the playwright, "is becoming impossible to live in. One can scarcely draw a free breath. We are not allowed to read intelligent books. We may not see one-half of the interesting foreign plays. We cannot live our own lives. We cannot even have wine with our meals."

Mr. Pollock, according to the report of the International News Service, made the above criticism of America upon his arrival in gay Paris, France. The caustic criticism while unjust, unpatriotic and unAmerican is interesting because it reflects the attitude of one of the representatives of the producers of the stage plays of the theatrical and movie world. Let us examine the five indictments which he brings against our country which, in his opinion, is making "America impossible to live in."

1. "One can scarcely draw a free breath." Here in the land of the free and the home of the brave where we gladly boast of freedom of speech, freedom of press, freedom of worship, and the free and universal use of the American franchise, this famous playwright upon landing in Paris, informs the reporters that in America we can scarcely draw a free breath. Such a crack-shot of criticism aimed at America is almost sufficient to cause fresh vibrations of the old Liberty Bell in Independence Hall, and to re-awaken the echoes of Patrick Henry's immortal speech—"Give me liberty or give me death." Possibly the poignant playwright has unwisely confounded liberty with license, failing for the moment to recognize that obedience to law is liberty. Liberty is not full license to follow one's natural desires and inclinations on all lines of popular amusements.

Beyond a peradventure the passionate pursuit for sinful pleasure is the peril of this age. We have, if anything, entirely too much license in this country. We need to curb the unrestrained tendencies to profligacy in American life instead of calling aloud for more license under the guise of personal liberty. With all the wide open doors to the various theaters of popular amusement every day of the week, this unpatriotic playwright pessimistically paints America as a place where we can "scarcely draw a free breath."

If he feels this way concerning the American nation he ought never to have the unblushing temerity to return to her shores to sniff the fresh, pure air of her far and flowing fields of peace and prosperity. Let him remain in Paris with its continental Sabbath and sparkling wines where he can dilate his nostrils, expand his lungs and drink in the glorious air of infinite freedom.

But let him also know that every law-abiding, home-loving, God-fearing citizen of the United States finds it possible, within the bounds of all our constitutional regulations, to "draw a free breath." There is a vast difference between the free breath of liberty within the law and the foul breath of license that blows the venom of bolshevism upon the great moral institutions of America.

2. "We are not allowed to read intelligent books." Since when, may we ask, has America put the ban on the reading "intelligent" books? Is it possible that the famous playwright puts a premium upon the proscribed books that bear the imprint of immorality upon their pages and characterizes them as intelligent books? When has America ever put the ban upon intelligent books that are moral, decent, loyal, true and patriotic? There are thousands of periodicals, magazines and books that are too indecent to be carried by the U. S. mail. Why should such trash be called intelligent?

No. No. America does not proscribe books because they are intelligent; but because they are immoral, indecent and not fit to be read. The playwright may have a very unique idea as to what constitutes an intelligent book. Is there not too much intelligence along certain illegitimate lines of activity in the world today? Playwrights, preachers, professors and politicians should exert their influence to protect the American youth from the menace of unwholesome literature that is flooding the land. Books that poison the mind should be prohibited whether they are intelligent or unintelligent.

3. "We may not see one-half of the interesting foreign plays." Pity the other half if they are worse than the half the public is permitted to see! Are there not other qualities of a play beside that which may be described as interesting? The devil himself may get up things that are very interesting. Should not a play be instructive, inspirational, moral and uplifting if possible? Is the word "interesting" the only descriptive adjective to be applied to a play or a picture? Is there not something more in life, even in the realms of sport and entertainment, than the element of interest? The plays we already have in America are interesting enough without importing the "interesting" foreign plays. But herein lies the secret of modern amusement. The playwright has let the cat out of the wallet. Those who are producing the plays and the pictures for the American public must be put to their wits end to produce something that is new and "interesting" to their patrons. Behold the principle of gradation in its application in the play industry! The old plays and the old pictures become too tame. Those that are educational are too dry. Those that are moral are too sermoniac. Come on with the carnal, the suggestive, the new, yea, the "interesting." This seems to be the demanding and commanding cry that sounds as a loud speaker in the open ears of the playwrights and producers. Hence the search for the forbidden "interesting" foreign plays.

4. "We cannot live our own lives." "Our own" lives! Note the element of selfishness here. Where is any trace of the altruistic spirit in the above peevish and pessimistic line? The immortal Declaration of Independence, held sacred and inviolable in every true American heart, names among the inalienable rights—life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Yet here is a famous playwright telling the reporters in Paris that in America we cannot live our own lives. I wonder if the noted playwright ever read the Bible statement of the great Apostle Paul who said: "None of us liveth to himself, and no man dieth to himself." (Rom. 14:7). "Personal liberty" was the hue and cry of the old-time brewer and distiller. They emphasized personal liberty to the neglect of civil and religious liberty. We cannot have civil liberty unless there is a certain limitation of so-called personal liberty. We have a right to do as we please so long as we do not interfere with the common and

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XXII.

A VISIT TO THE CITY OF GOODWILL.

WHEN Huston returned to the city of Goodwill he was amazed at its rapid growth. A number of factories had been established, two big railroad shops had moved in, the stone quarry was employing a large number of men, coal mines had been opened up a small distance from the city, oil had been found in paying quantities in a river bottom only a few miles from the corporation, the population had been doubled and was rapidly growing. The street on which he had bought his five acres had grown to be a very popular street, and out beyond his purchase, a number of wealthy men had built their mansions, making his tract very valuable.

Opposite him, the city had given fifty acres of beautiful land, along with a considerable cash gift, to a struggling university in a neighboring town, which moved to Goodwill and was building up on much larger plans for a great school. The university was attracting wide attention, and had a student body of something over a thousand, with promise of large increase. The administration building of this school, standing back some hundred yards from the avenue, faced Huston's five acre tract. He was offered a large sum for his land, but decided not to sell; in fact, during the three years of his evangelism, the output of his oil land had made him a wealthy man, and he had quietly invested his income in bonds and was waiting an opportunity for an investment for what he believed would be some permanent work for the Lord.

He was giving liberally, on the quiet, to the holiness missions in foreign lands, and assisting the full salvation schools. He managed his affairs with such discretion and quietness that very few people knew anything of the amount of wealth he possessed.

At the earnest entreaties of his old friends, he determined to set up his tent on his five acre tract and hold a revival of religion. The tent was set up, he secured a good group of singers and started in for a month's protracted meeting. His friends at old Bethel, who had starved out spiritually under the ministry of their modernistic pastor, thronged to Huston's tent. Students came in large numbers, at first, perhaps, through curiosity, but profoundly impressed with the intelligence, earnestness, wisdom and eloquence of the preacher, came again, became deeply interested, and to the chagrin of the skeptical president of the university, and his faculty, practically all of whom believed themselves to be descended from apes, quite a number were powerfully converted. People came from all the churches in the town, and from adjoining communities. The meetings continued and at the end of four weeks, the people insisted that the meetings must not close, but continue.

Huston heeded their request and went forward. By and by, the fall chill came on and he bought twelve foot inch plank and, with the assistance of a number of volunteer carpenters, put up a great tabernacle with comfortable seats for fifteen hundred people, and the meetings went forward. By and by, they had no services on Mondays or Saturdays, secured heating apparatus and prepared to keep the tabernacle open through the entire winter. Quite a number from various congregations professed sanctification, some were turned out of their churches, some invited out, from others, the churches withdrew, the modernistic pastor of old Bethel dropped a number of his board, and it came to pass that in the growing city of Goodwill, there was quite a flock of the Lord's sheep without any shepherd.

Huston and his wife, who was his able and joyful assistant in all of his work, counselled and prayed together, and finally determined to organize some sort of a people's congregation, so these saints who were without pastor or church should have a spiritual home; they formed the organization with the understanding it would not be any sort of effort to establish a new church, but simply for a people's church where full salvation could be preached, revivals could be held and holiness conventions could meet in the city of Goodwill.

Huston made no sort of fight against the church. He did not refer to them in his ministry, but preached the gospel. He filled his mind and heart with Bible truth; he spent much time in secret prayer, and when he went into the pulpit he was aglow with divine power. His face shone, his very being thrilled. He had power with God and men. There were no antics in his manner; nothing was said to provoke laughter. He was a messenger of God combining a seriousness that suggested thoughts of judgment day and, at the same time, a glad call to weary souls to a joyful salvation in Jesus Christ.

After all, there is perhaps nothing that people like better than powerful, eloquent, gospel preaching. There is such vast revelation in the Bible, there is such adaptation to humanity's sin and sorrow, and starving, hungry souls; such instruction, rebuke, exhortation, warning, entreaty and promise poured out in the gospel, that the preacher has no need to wander away from the Word of God to find a message for lost humanity.

The people went out from Huston's ministry feeling that the Lord had spoken to them. If they were sinners they carried a burden, they often trembled with fear; multitudes went away to repent and pray, to come back and seek the Lord. If they were saints, their hearts burned within them while they communed with Christ through the message of the minister. What an unspeakable blessing it is to any city to have a true preacher of the gospel which is the power of God unto salvation in the community or city. There is no way to tell of the power and influence of his life. He is indeed "salt and light" which permeate, purify and illuminate the minds and hearts of the people. His messages bind husbands and wives into closer union and prevent divorce and the breaking up of families. They put obedience into the hearts of children and lead to reverence and respect for parents. His faithful utterance of divine law makes business men to fear God and deal honestly in trade. The words of wisdom and truth that fall from his lips blast the seeds of crime and check and hinder the wicked in their purposes and prevent untold evils. His life and teaching give emphasis to the Word of God, and the people who hear him believe in its divine inspiration and authority.

His sermons lift up and glorify Christ, and make the people to pause in thought and action, lest they should grieve or sin against the Holy Ghost. The blessed Trinity becomes an awful reality. Men remember that God is in the midst, that he sees, and hears, and knows. Sin becomes to them hateful, dangerous and destructive. They turn from it, hunger and thirst after righteousness, and are filled.

[How blessed it is to be a true minister of the gospel of Christ, to devote one's time searching the Scriptures and bringing out of the Word of God holy medicine for the sick souls of humanity. An angel might all but envy the man who walks amid his fellows studying their natures and their needs; who seeks the poor and alleviates their wants; who finds the sick and suffering and points them to the comfort which can only come from the eternal Father in the dark days of sorrow. Who looks for the sinful as the shepherd would search after lost sheep, and brings them back into the fold of forgiveness, love, and immortal life; who rings out a message to starving, swine-feeding prodigals, everywhere, that the father at home longs for their return and will meet them with the open arms of mercy.

What an honor! What a privilege! What a responsibility to be called into the ministry, to become a mouthpiece for God, to represent the Lord Jesus Christ in the world; to help men to see the danger and ruin of sin, the curse of it all, and the beauty and eternal blessedness of a holy heart and a righteous life. What is more pitiful than a lazy, indolent preacher who eats, and stuffs and sleeps, neglects the people, fails to study his books or prepare his sermons, goes into his pulpit without a message, or any holy fire of love, storms and beats and yells over his own ignorance and anger at the people whose burdens and sorrows he knows and cares nothing about; whom he would beat and stone and drive, as Esau would have done his brother Jacob's cattle, to their ruin. Poor man! He wants to move. He is dissatisfied. He has no real love for any one, and you may be sure no one loves him.

Huston was a true minister of the gospel. It showed in his clothes, his walk, his face. Many preachers of today seem to try to disguise themselves; to look just as little like preachers as possible, and they succeed remarkably well. In their dress, conversation, general behavior and even in their pulpit ministrations, you can hardly distinguish them from very ordinary laymen who, by some mischance, have gotten out of their proper sphere of action.

If a stranger in the streets of Goodwill had been hunting for some one to perform the marriage ceremony for him, or to pray for his dying child, or to carry a message to some one in great distress, and had met Huston on the street, he would have looked at him a moment and said, "Excuse me, Sir, but aren't you a minister of the gospel?" I can well remember the time when you could, somehow, recognize preachers of the gospel on trains, on the streets, or wherever you met them; not necessarily because of clerical vests, but they were stamped with a peculiar distinction. There was something dignified in their manner; something noble and pure in their faces; there was a set about their mouths that impressed one. Huston walked among his fellowmen with the dignity and purity of countenance that set him apart from the ordinary, that fixed in his countenance the dignity and purity that made people to feel that a man of God was among them. The people will flock to hear such a man preach. There is in the human soul something that wants to hear from the headquarters of the universe through a true messenger what the divine will, the divine law, and love is concerning them.

There were calls for Huston to preach everywhere. Churches and tabernacles were filled wherever he was announced. Backsliders were reclaimed, sinners were converted, believers were sanctified and whole congregations were thrilled with new desires, pure emotions and longings for closer fellowship with Jesus Christ wherever Huston delivered his messages.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

GLIMPSES OF RED ROCK PEOPLE. DO YOU REMEMBER?

When a hard day's work is over and you relax into your easy chair for a few minutes of reflection before retiring, or, during the quiet hours of the Sabbath Day as you are leafing through the well marked pages of your Bible, or perhaps, in the night time when sleep fails to close the weary eyes and rest the tired frame, have you not often in thought gone back over your experience at Red Rock, wonderful experiences of whole days thrilling with songs, testimonies, prayers, marvelous sermons, and joyous shouts of victory? How you would like to live again the stirring scenes and feel your soul move in unison with the souls of hundreds of others of God's good people as they are swayed by the gracious Holy Spirit in the various exercises of reverent worship. It saddens you a bit as you realize that these glorious events are now but the history—you had almost said the memories—of a past camp. No, they are not mere memories, for in your life and likewise in the lives of many others there were things done that will always be ever present realities; and yet, these experiences of days gone by can never be lived again—they are history.

But history can be recorded, and if we had a part in the making, if it were no more than being present, we derive both pleasure and profit in often looking back to it. Fortunately at the 1928 Red Rock Camp Meeting two men, Rev. T. C. Henderson, one of the evangelists, and Rev. A. J. Abbott of Hammond, Wis. kept separate daily written records. Brother Henderson's account consists of impressions, comments on conditions and events, results and effects produced, and very general outlines of sermons, Bible studies and Young People's talks. Brother Abbott's memoranda comprise mainly somewhat extended outlines of discourses. These interesting and valuable notes, too extensive to be printed in full, have come into our hands. From them we shall try to present a few glimpses of 1928 camp history and trust that many who read these lines may be able to answer "yes" to the question that heads these reflections, DO YOU REMEMBER?

The Opening.

Red Rock contains about fifty cottages, some of them built large to accommodate groups of people. As the time for camp meeting draws nigh the cottages begin to fill and by the first Sunday of the camp all are generally occupied and some are crowded. Then there are the men's and women's dormitories and the hotel, while the tourist camp contributes its share of visitors who prefer their own quarters. So when the familiar sound of the old historic tabernacle bell peals forth at exactly seven o'clock on the evening of the last Thursday of June announcing the first meeting of the camp it always happens that a goodly assemblage of people greet the workers. The audience that assembled at 7:30 P. M. Thursday, June 28th, 1928 was the largest in several years. Just as the bell ceases ringing Rev. Floyd Nixon, the song leader, announces the first song and the people join him in singing of the Blood of Christ and of Pentecost. Dr. Vallentyne, in charge of the services, wastes no time, makes no lengthy announcements, but after earnest prayer and a special song by Brother Nixon, gives the meeting into the charge of Rev. T. C. Henderson who is to preach the opening sermon. This is Brother Henderson's fourth year at Red Rock. Expectancy is in the air as he announces and then develops his theme, "Knowing the critical nature of the times in which we live, what manner of persons ought ye to be?" At the close two earnest seekers accompanied by scores of sympathetic friends come to the altar. As the people retire to their places of rest they praise God for so auspicious an opening.

Wednesday Afternoon, July 4th.

In the opening service the significance of this day is fittingly recognized. Brother Fisher, a faithful soldier of the Cross as well as a faithful soldier of his country, sang an appropriate song composed by himself.

Bishop W. F. Oldham is to preach the sermon of the afternoon. The bishop has come for a three days' stay at the camp. His text is, "He is able to save to the uttermost." The one thing above all others that men everywhere need is SAVING. Salvation is needed not only to the uttermost parts of the earth but also to the uttermost recesses of every individual soul. Jesus is able to do both. With many wonderful illustrations drawn from his wide experience in many lands the bishop demonstrates the power of the gospel he proclaims, while the audience expresses consent by such earnest shouts of "Amen" and "Glory to God" as can come only from hearts that have learned by experience to appreciate the truths that the preacher utters. The closing part of this service is an offering of several hundred dollars given in response to the bishop's plea for a missionary enterprise in South America. But the Bishop's strongest plea is for young men and women who will dedicate themselves to missionary work if God should call them, and the most stirring moments of the entire camp occur when the altar is lined with young people who come forward to make such consecration of themselves.

Friday, July 6th.

At six o'clock the tabernacle bell rouses the camp to renewed activity. Even at this early hour the indications are for a day of great heat. The 6:30 morning prayer service is promptly under way and the songs of devotion interspersing earnest prayers of intercession float out over the camp from the tabernacle. This morning prayer is not the only nor even the chief time for looking to God. Red Rock people pray much for the success of the meetings. Daily in the cottages, in the dormitories, in the woods, wherever opportunity affords a place, individuals as well as groups are seen and heard in prayer. Even children find prayer habits easily formed in such an atmosphere of intercession. The young people are organized into definite groups for prayer.

Eight o'clock is the hour for the Fellowship Meeting. The testimonies and experiences related here are worthy of a book, and no mere mention like this can hope to give even an inkling of their wonderful and varied character. As in all such meetings the general theme is naturally the great goodness, faithfulness and mercy of God manifested in the lives of the testifiers.

At 8:45 Dr. Vallentyne brings his message in Bible Study. This day he is pressing on his listeners a challenge to high things in Christian living as he draws from Paul's recorded labors in prayer for the Colossians. He relates instances from his own experience in the winning of men for Christ, and the people are deeply stirred as there is impressed upon them the need, the privilege and the joy of aggressive personal work.

To lovers of children there is no more interesting place than the Children's Meeting. At Red Rock this is held every morning at 9:00 o'clock in the Young People's Tabernacle. For obvious reasons adults are invited to stay away. However, since in this instance the reporter is the husband of the children's leader, reliable accounts of the meetings are available. Today Mrs. Henderson with chalk and blackboard and the New Testament is giving the children a new picture of Christ Jesus as the Light Giver. The young listeners give faithful attention. They receive portions of scripture to memorize and it is marvelous what some of them can store away. Then there is time for testimony, and how happy and joyous these are. Now invitation is given to any who will seek, and a season of prayer follows.

The Young People's Meeting at 6:30 scarcely waits for the exact hour. Eagerly the young people, surrounded by a fringe of older folk, catch the first strains of joyous emotions within them. They are testifying now, telling of personal victories won. One young man was sanctified in a meeting in the woods. A young woman reports a large attendance at a group prayer meeting with several definite deliverances. Mrs. Henderson leads and speaks about sanctification as an inheritance. Thirsty souls are drinking in the word and when the altar invitation is given many respond without hesitation, and before the meeting has closed five testify to having received the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

Purposely thus far we have left out of our account of this day the three great preaching services. To describe them adequately would require chapters. We can only mention them. In the forenoon Bishop Oldham, stately in bearing, quiet and effective in manner, stirring hearts to action by simple but marvelous stories of what God has wrought, preaches another missionary sermon that few who hear can ever forget. In the afternoon Evangelist C. F. Wimberly in his graphic and picturesque manner paints in vivid words a wonderful vision of the luscious fruits of Canaan. In the evening in spite of the oppressive heat the service begins with great singing under the leadership of Brother Nixon. Bro. Henderson preaches and with the earnestness, clear thinking and apt expression which characterize him, lays on the people heavy words of warning and exhortation about the reality and awfulness of sin, and closes with the cheering proclamation that there is full and free redemption for all who will receive it.

And so there comes to a close a great day of the Red Rock Camp Meeting of 1928. Do you remember,—if not THIS day then some other day just as great,—perhaps to you even greater? And while these days of which we have been writing have passed into history, shall we not rejoice that there will be other days like them again this year, and every year, until the Lord shall come. May they prove to be days of ever increasing glory to God as well as blessing to a constantly growing number of people.

EASTERN MEETINGS.

By Jarrette E. Aycock.

After closing our meeting in Denver, Colorado, the last of February, we left Mrs. Aycock at our home in Bethany, Okla., and made our way to Baltimore, Md., to hold a meeting in the People's Tabernacle where Rev. D. E. Higgs is the pastor. God gave us a good meeting with more than ninety seeking the Lord for pardon or purity. God especially blessed in the Sunday School work with 378 on time, one hundred of whom were brand new folks and 57 of whom we are sure were not members of any Sunday School. Prof. Burl Sparks was our co-laborer in this meeting, and we surely enjoyed his services; he is a good singer, a booster for the meeting, and a blessed brother indeed.

Our next meeting was at Canton, Ohio, with Rev. C. J. Forcey. God also honored our efforts. Prof. Marsh and Schurman were our co-laborers in this meeting and our fellowship with them was good. There were between ninety and one hundred seeking God, most of whom we believe were happy finders, and over twenty united with the church. In this meeting the Sunday school work took on unusual enthusiasm. One man invited 256, one hundred and nine of them came and 88 came on time. There were more than five hundred on time and over ninety were new people with over 70 to follow up who were not members of a Sunday school.

From Canton we went to Alliance, Ohio, where Rev. C. B. Strang is the pastor. We have never enjoyed the fellowship of a pastor more than Brother Strang; surely he is God's very own. He led the singing, and local talent, visiting friends, and the writer did the special singing. There were something over fifty forward for prayer counting as they came, and ten joined the church, 387 came out to Sunday school on time and more than ninety were reached who are not members of a Sunday school.

On Monday night after the Alliance meeting we held a young people's service in First Church, Cleveland, where L. W. Collar is pastor. We have held six meetings in Cleveland Church and we know so many of their people, it was like going home.

We next went to Philadelphia, Pa., to Rev. John Nielson at the Collingdale Church. This was not a large meeting, but a good one. The presence of the Lord was graciously felt; there were over forty professions. Brother Nielson said he would get a number of people out of the meeting for members. They have their Sunday school here in the afternoon, and this was the first one we had ever encountered, but it made no difference, the people got busy and there were three hundred and forty-six on time, around seventy of them were new folks and many were not members of any Sunday school. By new folks we mean people who were never there before.

Our co-laborer in this meeting was Bro. Geo. P. Woodward, of West Chester, Pa., a religious cartoonist. He illustrates sacred song, drawing the picture while the song is sung. His work is beautiful and was a great drawing card. This young man is very spiritual, a good personal worker and altar worker, and is an asset to any meeting. He was on the staff of a large daily paper; they wanted a cartoon on prohibition, he drew one in favor of it, and they said no, we want cartoons against prohibition, so he told them they would have to get some one else to draw them, and now he is drawing for Jesus. Give him a call, he will bless your meeting.

We are now in a meeting in New Bedford, Mass. God is blessing, not a barren service since the first call was made. They call this conservative New England, but I have seldom seen such enthusiasm as is being manifested here in the Sunday school work; they have a goal of 500, and that is more than double their regular attendance, but I believe they will make it. Local talent is furnishing the music in this meeting, with what help the writer can give.

In all these meetings the pastors have stood nobly by us, the people have seemed to love us, and the fellowship we have had with them has been blessed indeed. The last Saturday night of each campaign has been devoted to a service for the General Young People's Society, and the crowds have usually been our largest for week nights. We have secured in the above meetings over 225 subscriptions to The Herald, over 60 subscriptions to the Young People's Journal, and over 300 names and addresses all told of people who were not members of any Sunday school which these pastors plan to follow up.

Our next meeting is in Pittsburg, Kan., then to Artesia, New Mexico; the latter part of June we will be in Emanuel Nazarene Church, Los Angeles, Calif., with Dr. Lineweaver. We trust our California friends will keep this date in mind and come to this meeting.

REVIVAL IN SEOUL.

Our meeting in Seoul was conducted in the large Northern Methodist Central Church. Here again we conducted two services daily, one in the early morning and one in the evening. We had an average attendance of around 500.

This church is a student's center, for many students from the girls and boys' schools, mission schools and government schools attend this church. Many of these young people came to the services with hungry hearts and it was a joy to see some of them find the joy and peace that only comes in finding Christ. Many of these students came to me with their problems, doubts and fears of many kinds were perplexing them. False teaching, new ideas, Bolshevism and anarchy is being propagated in this land, and it no easy thing for a young student to become firmly established in the Christian faith when they meet with ridicule and persecution, sometimes by their teachers as well as outsiders. But God's ear is attentive to the cry of every earnest seeker and many of these students came into definite Christian experiences during those days. I think some sixty or eighty persons were really satisfied in the meetings and most of these were students.

The pastor wanted to put special emphasis on Christianity in the home, and tried to reach as many family groups as possible. There were 70 whole families who attended, sometimes all coming out to the early morning service in a body.

We always give seekers an opportunity to stay for an after service if they wish to remain for prayer. And God has blessed these services most graciously. A world tourist was asked by a friend to look in on our meeting one day. The altar service was on and many earnest petitions were ascending to the throne; this western gentleman remarked that he had travelled all around the world but had never witnessed a scene like that.

lacked social vision, largely because many of the early Christians were waiting for the second advent of Christ. The world in that day was cursed with human slavery. The social edifice was afire. The church did nothing about it. It was waiting for the Lord to return and set up a new social order."

This is a rather serious charge to bring upon the early church of the Lord Jesus Christ which, in poverty, persecution, imprisonment, and death, went about preaching Jesus and sowing the seed which, in due time, brought forth the harvest of all the good that the world today enjoys. The early church did believe and rejoice in the promise of our Lord that he would return. This gave them indomitable courage. Through fire and blood they went forward preaching the gospel and laying the foundation for the entire superstructure of whatever Christian civilization and social progress has been made in the world.

I read in my New Testament that the church in the days of St. Paul took up collections and sent their gifts for the support of the poor; even before the days of St. Paul, there was so much social service for the help of widows and the poor that the apostles were compelled to call in laymen to carry on this good work, that they might give themselves to prayer and the preaching of the Word. Our brother in his effort to make it appear that those who looked for the Lord are a sort of good-for-nothing saints, forgets about these features in the life and activities of the early church. The fact is, from the very first, all along through the centuries, the church of the Lord Jesus Christ has been deeply concerned for the present needs of humanity, and sought to ameliorate human suffering. Those martyrs, of whom the world was not worthy, were comforted and made strong in the blessed hope of the coming of our Lord, as they bore faithful witness and went, without a tremor of fear, to the block of execution, and the stake of fire.

To quote again, our brother, speaking of the premillenarians, says: "Most of them have no social vision. They do nothing to make the world better. In fact, they hope, and sometimes pray, that the world may get worse, for they believe that when things become intolerable Christ will come and overthrow the powers and establish his kingdom.

But such men have misrepresented the sayings of our Lord." This paragraph is not a fly in the pot of ointment; it's a drowned toad in the milk jar. There may be some such people as are here described, but I have failed to meet with them.

Rev. Tisdale Young, perhaps the greatest preacher in the City of London, preaching to more people than any other Methodist preacher in England, is a strong and happy believer in the second coming of our Lord. So was Dwight L. Moody. Who contributed more in his day to the spiritual life and the general social uplift of humanity, than Mr. Moody! Dr. Torrey, who recently ascended to heaven, a great scholar, taking his degree in a German University, preaching the Lord Jesus to millions of people in various parts of the earth, a mighty defender of the inspiration of the Scriptures, leading countless thousands to saving faith in Jesus, and to incalculable betterment in their social conditions, was a strong believer in the second coming of the Lord Jesus.

We do not believe that any man, or any dozen men, contributed more largely to freeing this nation from the legalized liquor traffic than Billy Sunday. Long before the Eighteenth Amendment was written into the Constitution, Billy Sunday often held meetings in towns of fifty thousand population, seventy-five thousand, and a hundred thousand, where, as one of the results of these meetings, all saloons were voted out of the corporation. That was something of a social uplift; and Billy Sunday is strongly premillennial in his views and teachings.

I could mention a number of great Baptist and Presbyterian preachers in these United States whose intelligence, whose faith in the inspiration of the Scriptures and in our Lord Jesus, whose devoted and fruitful ministry has built up vast church plants, organized missions, carried on school work and ministered untold thousands of dollars for suffering humanity which should lift them entirely above the contempt of any one who may disagree with them on any point of doctrine, who are devoted, intelligent, aggressive premillennialists.

There are a large number of Methodist ministers, men good and true, north and south, who believe in the second coming of Christ, who look forward with hope and prayer to that glorious day; who grieve over the destructive criticism and modern, liberal skepticism which has come into our churches, "cutting the nerve of endeavor" for the regeneration and sanctification of human souls, who are happy and hopeful believers in the coming of the Lord; and, by the way, they are being intimidated. I think the time has come for them to face about with great boldness and true Christian courage against their intimidaters, and to faithfully sow the pure gospel seed of the appearing of the Lord, warn and encourage their people to keep their spiritual lamps trimmed and burning.

If a convention should be called for a meeting of the Methodist people in these United States who are premillennial in their faith, and all the preachers and laity in the M. E. and M. E. Church, South, should meet in such convention, there is no city in the nation large enough to entertain them, and they could easily set up a new organization utterly free from the blight of the many destructive heresies that are creeping into Methodism. They could organize one of the most evangelical, spiritual, revivalistic missionary churches in all the world with ample means to erect churches, schools, missionary enterprises, and kindle revival fires all over this nation. I am not advocating any such movement, but these brethren who are so constantly misrepresenting and nagging at those who are rejoicing in the hope of the second coming of our blessed Christ, had better examine and see if they have any oil in their vessels with their lamps. In the parable of the Wise and Foolish Virgins, Jesus teaches us that we may have all the outward appearance of true discipleship, but be lacking in the great essentials which will enable us to receive him with joy at his appearing.

Holiness Camp Meeting, Wilmore, Ky.

The Holiness Camp Meeting at Wilmore, Ky., covers July 25 to August 4. We have engaged for the preachers at this meeting, Rev. C. W. Ruth, C. F. Wimberly and H. C. Morrison. Mrs. Box, of St. Louis, will have charge of the Young People's and Children's Meetings; Kenneth and Eunice Wells will have charge of the singing. We are expecting not less than 75 ministers of the gospel in attendance, all of whom have free entertainment. We are believing and will be praying for the gracious presence of the Holy Spirit in convicting, regenerating and sanctifying power. We hope to have a large attendance from the towns of Central Kentucky. Rev. W. D. Turkington, Professor in the Theological Seminary of Asbury College, is our Secretary, and is ready to render any service in the way of information and assistance to those who desire to attend the camp meeting. Address him at Wilmore, Ky.

Your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

AN UNSTAGGERING FAITH.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

ABRAHAM stands out before us as one of the greatest characters in the Bible. He has been honored with the title "Friend of God," which is the highest honor that could have been paid him.

We are acquainted with the facts in his early history, how he was led out of his own country to one he knew nothing of, but with that unstaggering trust in God, he journeyed on and on until the Lord indicated where he should halt. His chart and compass were not ordered after his own plans or desires, but his part was to ascertain what the will of the Lord was and to do it, which he did cheerfully and unhesitatingly.

God made some unprecedented tests upon this faithful old soldier, but be it said to his honor, he never swerved in one of them. The first, as you recall, was to leave his country and kinsmen; then God gave him a promise, which, to all human appearances, was impossible, enough to cause him to stagger, if there was any staggering in him. But he laughed at impossibilities, believing God would bring to pass what he had promised.

That was a marvelous promise made to his "Friend," when God told him he should be the father of a great nation, as great as the stars in the heavens, and the sands on the seashore. And this promise was made in the face of a human impossibility, for he and his wife were past the age when it seemed beyond reason that they should be the progenitors of a nation.

Abraham was not disturbed at the obstacles that seemingly obstructed his realization, but instead of becoming faint-hearted and doubtful, he kept saying to himself, "He is able, he is able." The God of nature could change his natural laws and make them serve his purpose. He knew that if God commanded a thing he had the power to bring his commands to pass. His faith rose higher and higher as he contemplated the infinite resources of the Almighty.

Reader, these acid tests that were brought to Abraham were to unfold to him the limitless resources that were hidden in God's glorious nature. The stronger the test God makes upon us, the greater will be the unfolding of his infinite nature if we stand the test with an unflinching faith; but when we begin to falter, or to stagger in our trust, then we miss the opportunity of in turn testing the resources of the Divine Father. God tests us that we may test him, and how we miss it when we fail to stand true in the hottest fire until his image is reflected in us.

In the three great tests God made upon Abraham, that of leaving his own country and kinsmen, that of promising him a child in his old age, and that of giving the darling of his heart as a sacrifice, yes, the only channel through which the promise of a great nation should come, he stood with an unshattering faith, believing that what God had promised he was able also to perform. And what a reward awaited him! He met the tests, and all he had surrendered was given back to him, plus a faith that did not shrink, though pressed by every foe.

Reader, have you ever been subjected to the test of obedience? And have you stood it unshakingly? Or have you wobbled from side to side hesitating whether you should obey the Lord or risk having your own way? Has Satan persuaded us that we know better than the Lord what is best for us? It seems that he could not thus influence us, but have we not oftentimes when we felt within our hearts that God's way was safest and best, yet we yielded to our own selfish desires and presumed to map out our own plans and, in the end, realized that we had "played the fool," as the wise man said. Let us bear in mind that, whatever the test, however great the difficulties that accompany them, however dark the way may seem, if God is calling go, no matter what the results may be. The poet had it right, when he said,

"Trust and obey, for there is no other way
To be happy in Jesus, but to trust and obey."

Beautiful Girlhood.

Here is a book written by a girl for girls. It is a beautiful book in every way—paper, print, binding, with an attractive picture of the writer. The book is having a wide circulation. In this thoughtless, giddy age when there is so much to distract the young mind from the things that really count that are worth while, to the things that are hurtful to character and destructive to real happiness, a book of this character is invaluable.

This is a heart-to-heart talk from a girl who has had quite a bit of experience, to girls. It comes from one who knows to those who need to know. It ought to go into countless thousands of homes. It has an attractive binding, the beautiful pages framed in blue, the short chapters filled with practical thought make it altogether, a book worth while. It would make a beautiful graduation present for a high school girl, an appropriate birthday gift. Buy this book for your daughter, your sister, your niece. It is not necessary to wait until they graduate or for their birthday. There is no way to estimate the gracious influence, like good seed sown in good ground, by the reading of good books. It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for the small price of $1.00 postpaid.

equal right of another. What kind of life does a man want to live who cannot live his own life in America? It is a good thing to remember that it is not all of life to live nor all of death to die. In him we live and move and have our being. (Acts 17.)

There is a physical life, a mental life and a spiritual life. There is no restriction in America, the playwright to the contrary notwithstanding, against living the proper kind of life. If we desire to live aright we certainly ought to be able to live our own lives even on this side of the sea. We should "eat to live and not live to eat." We should live for others as well as for ourselves. The law of the land permits one to live as free and as full a life as any normal, useful, patriotic, home-loving, God-fearing citizen should care to live.

5. "We cannot even have wine with our meals." Thus the playwright reaches the climax of his criticism on America. This, as Shakespeare would say, is the most unkindest cut of all. It seems to be entirely too bad that America will not allow its loyal, liberty-loving citizens to have wine with their meals! Wine, however, is not the only beverage to mingle with our meals. We can have milk, coffee, tea, postum, grape juice and Adam's ale. The click of the wine-glass is certainly not indispensable to the completion of the American meal. But with the proscribed playwright life is robbed of its joy and a citizen of his natural inalienable right if the wine-glass fails to sparkle on the festal board. If, in the opinion of the playwright, we could only attend all the "interesting" foreign plays, read all the "intelligent" books, draw full breaths of sweet personal liberty, live "our own" lives without let or hindrance and have plenty of sparkling wine with our meals, what an earthly paradise America would be!

The unpleased playwright will have the high privilege and the golden opportunity of having wine with his meals in Paris. So during the years of his earthly pilgrimage, if the dry, dull, uninteresting America fails to guarantee to him the full measure of felicity, he can cross the ocean's foam and breathe freely in France where he can be wine and dined and read intelligent books and witness "interesting" plays and live "his own life" unhindered and unmolested. Selah!

Hence it must be admitted that America, amid all her limitations and contaminations, has one point for which she is to be praised—she does not compel her unsatisfied citizens to remain on American soil. They can emigrate to the land of "personal liberty."

In conclusion this preacher is different from the playwright. He feels that America is the best country of the world in which to live. He has plenty of breathing room. He finds plenty of intelligent books to read in the various libraries that dot the land. He finds that American life is quite interesting even without the "interesting" foreign plays. He has plenty of elbow room in the wide range of the American domain in which to live his own life. He even enjoys his meals with Jersey milk instead of wine. For he believes that "wine is a mocker, that strong drink is raging and that whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." (Prov. 20:1). He has read and believes the following words of warning in the book of Proverbs: "Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? who hath contentions? who hath babbling? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine. Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." (Prov. 23:19-32).

The writer does not claim that America is a perfect paradise. There is plenty of room for improvement. But there is one thing absolutely certain, it will take something different from free wine, foreign plays, salacious literature and a continental Sabbath to make America a better place in which to live!

now find myself on the same standpoint where poor Uncle Tom stands—on that of the Bible. I kneel down by my black brother in the same prayer. What a humiliation! With all my sense I have come no farther than a poor ignorant negro who had only just learned to spell. Poor Tom, indeed, seems to have seen deeper things in the Holy Book than I."

Yes, it finds you in the deep places of your being. What other book in all the world so associates itself with the joys and sorrows, the aspirations and disappointments, the struggles, the victories and the defeats, and the very issues of life and death itself as does the Bible.

It finds you in the deep places of your being.

It finds you there in the very fact of Regeneration. This is one of the things that cannot be shaken. You don't need a blueprint to let you know you are converted. You can be more certain that you are a son of God than you can be of your earthly parentage.

How do you know that you were not left on the doorstep? How do you know that you did not come out of a foundlings home? But I do know when I was born the second time, because I was not only there when it took place, but I gave the consent of my will to the transaction, and I have the witness to it in my own soul to this very hour. You can take everything else from me but you cannot take that.

It finds you there when the sun shines. There isn't a decent joy in all the world that a knowledge of the Bible doesn't sanctify and sweeten.

It finds you there when the shadows come. There isn't a sorrow that does not get sustaining grace somewhere out of the pages of this Book.

It finds you there when the cheeks pale and the eyes dim and the summons for eternity is about to come.

As the old Scotch woman said, "Thank God, I have my Bible. It was the guide of my youth and is the staff of my old age. It wounded me and healed me. It condemned me and acquitted me. It showed me I was a sinner and it led me to the Saviour. It has given me comfort through life and I know it will give me hope in death."

When the great Wizard of the North lay dying at Abbotsford, turning to his beloved Lockhart, he said,

"Lockhart, rak me the Book."

"What book?" said Lockhart.

"Ah," said the dying genius, that flung out his wonder-working wand, the spell of whose sorcery has made millions weep over his 'Heart of Midlothian,' and millions shudder at his 'Astrologer,' and millions rise to ecstasy with the poetic beauty of his 'Fair Maid of Perth,' "Ah," said the dying Sir Walter Scott, "there is but one Book for a dying man; rak me the Bible."

When Stanley was in Africa he read his Bible through three times. When he started he had 180 pounds of books. As his men were stricken by famine, fighting and sickness there came a test of relative values. The books were gradually abandoned until only five were left. Two of these were books on navigation, kept for their practical value, and the remaining three were the Bible, Shakespeare and Carlyle. Mr. Stanley said, "Poor Shakespeare was afterwards burned up; Carlyle and the navigating books were left by the way, and I had only the Bible left."

"We've travelled together, my Bible and I,

Through all kinds of weather, with smile or with sigh;

In sorrow or sunshine, in tempest or calm,

Thy friendship unchanging, my lamp and my Psalm.

"We've travelled together, my Bible and I,

When life has grown weary, and death, e'en was nigh.

But all through the darkness of mist and of wrong,

I've found thee a solace, a prayer or a song.

"We've travelled together, my Bible and I,

Thou Sword of the Spirit, put error to flight;

And through my life's journey, until my last sigh,

We'll travel together, my Bible and I."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading it very much. My father takes The Herald. I enjoy reading the requests for prayer. I am a firm believer in prayer. I have been praying for Mrs. D. L. Griffin who has been sick for three years, and is now healed. She is able to go home in a few days. I am now praying for Miss Esther Banks, who was a friend of ours at Chatham, La. My father was her pastor for two years. My grandfather gave us a family Bible many years ago. In it we found a clipping from The Herald, cut out about twenty-five years ago. I am sending you a copy of it.

"Dat Ole Pipe."

"I say, brudder, I thought you belonged to the church."

"So I does."

"Den, why are you suckin' dat ole pipe?"

"Can't a feller smoke a pipe and belong to de church?"

"Well, yes, he may belong to the church buidin', but neber to de church triumphant."

"I should like to know how you make dat out?"

"Well, brudder, look at it in dis way; how would you look walkin' de golden streets of de New Jerusalem wid dat ole pipe in you mouf?"

"I would jus' snatch it out and bury it quick."

"Yes, but what would you do wid it. You could not find any place to frow it out ob sight; no place to hide it; no way to get rid of it. You hab been gibben a nice, white garment to put on, and dare ain't any pocket in it to put de ole pipe, so you would hab to hide it in yo hand."

"I say brudder Jones, you are gettin' a feller in a bad fix wid de ole pipe, the way you are puttin' it."

"But dat ain't all; by and by you will want a smoke, and you will walk de golden streets tryin' to find a place to hide, so you can smoke, and de streets ob dat city is 'bout fifteen hundred miles long, and if you should get to de end ob de street you would fotch up agin de wall dat is made ob jasper, and so high you can't clime ober, and no hole in de wall to stick yo head for a smoke, and you will want a smoke so bad you will almost make up yo mind to smoke right in de golden city. Then yo will begin to think ob gettin' a match to light the ole pipe; and den it will come ober you all ob a sudden dat dare ain't no matches in yo new close. Den you would wish you was back in dis ole world wid de ole close, wid de ole pipe so you could take some comfut."

"I say, Brudder Jones, I can't stand dat. I can't afford to lose dem golden streets for de ole pipe so here it goes, de tobacco, de matches, and all."

"Dat's de right way. If you was goin' to a weddin', where would you fix up?"

"I would fix up at home, ob course."

"Jus' so. Now, if you 'spect to go to heaben you must get ready down here, for de church triumphant is de folks dat triumph ober all dare sins, by de help ob de Lord; ober all dare nasty habits, and lib jus' as pure as possible, and hab no wrong thing 'bout dem; for de Word says, 'Let him dat is filthy be filthy still, let him dat is holy be holy still; so you see you will be jus' what you are when you fotch up in dis world', so if you lub to use de debbil's colone, you will hab to where de brimstone kinder kills de smell; you neber, neber can get in the golden city, habin' on yo de smell of dat Ole Pipe."

Lake Charles, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: My father takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I am a school girl in the seventh grade. I am thirteen years old. I am a little Methodist girl. I love to read good Christian papers and books. My name is Ethel Hurst. I would like to hear from any of the boys or girls who write to Aunt Bettie. I have a good teacher. Her name is Edith Bragg. She is a fine teacher. She lives close to us. I have three sisters and four brothers. We only have to go a quarter of a mile to school. May God bless Dr. Morrison, Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Ethel R. Hurst.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little motherless girl eight years old living on top of the Blue Ridge Mountains. We are poor people; my father is a preacher. If any little girls have any clothes they do not need, please send them to me. Your little sister.

Nancy Cave.
Rt. 2, Stanley, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please slide over and let a little girl from Iowa come and chat with you again. I am twelve years old, four feet, nine and one-half inches high and weigh seventy-five and one-half pounds. Last spring I started to follow the footsteps of Christ, our Savior, who can save and sanctify all. We are having a revival here now. G. Augustus Jones is the evangelist. He is sure good and we are praying that he might wake up the people and that many souls may be saved. I go every night and go to church and Sunday school all I can. Lucile Johnson, I guess your name to be Helen. Bessie Childress, I can answer two of your questions. The men that walked in the fiery furnace were Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. Nebuchadnezzar was the king that had them cast into it. You will find the answer in the third chapter of Daniel, from the 13th to the 27th verse. Elizabeth Viles, I guess your name to be Anne. Pearl E. Voas, I guess your middle name to be Ella or Emma. Now who can guess mine? It begins with E and ends with A, and has six letters in it. The one that guesses it I will send them something. I hope Mr. W. B. is calling at the next door when this letter arrives.

Ruth Richardson.
Magnolia, Iowa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I have been reading The Pentecostal Herald for several years and I thought I would write. I am ten years old. My birthday is Oct. 6. Have I a twin? I have brown bobbed hair and brown eyes, am four feet and three inches tall and weigh sixty-three pounds. I go to school and I am in the eighth grade. My first name begins with M and ends with Y, and has four letters in it. The one who guesses it correctly I will write a letter. As this is my first letter I will leave, hoping to be allowed to write again. I hope Mr. W. B. is out taking his morning exercise when my letter arrives.

Juanita Allen.
Short Creek, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kansas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my second letter to The Herald. I hope to see it in print too. The other time I wrote to The Herald I lived in Deer Creek, Okla., but we moved to McPherson in June. I am eleven years old and in the sixth grade. My teacher's name is Miss McElvain. I just have three blocks to walk to school. I have three sisters and one brother. My oldest sister, her daughter and her husband sailed for Africa as missionaries Jan. 31. Last Sunday we got a cablegram from London saying that they had arrived safely. London is only one-third of the way. My sister and her husband were both former students of Asbury College. Pearl E. Voas, I guess your middle name to be Elda. H. Lucile Johnson, I guess your first name to be Helen. Morris G. Lee, I guess your age to be twenty-two. If I have guessed all of your names and ages right don't forget your promises. I belong to the Methodist Church.

Elda Pearl Eberle.
1018 S. Walnut St., McPherson, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please move over just a tiny bit, and let a little Missouri girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I am four feet, one inch tall, have blue eyes and blonde hair. I am twelve years old and in the sixth grade. Father takes The Herald and I like it fine, especially page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald and hope that you will print it and surprise mama and papa. I live on a forty acre farm. The sport I like best is horseback riding. I would like to hear from some of the cousins, and if they write to me I will be glad to answer them. I am sending my love to you and the cousins.

Lydia Mae Merriman.
Rt. 6, Doniphan, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl nine years old. I wrote you a letter some time ago but failed to see it in print. I enjoy reading the letters written by the boys and girls on page ten very much. I go to school and am in the fourth grade. I go to Sunday school and enjoy going very much. I mean to give my heart to Jesus and live for him. Hope this letter will miss the waste basket. I have brown hair, blue eyes, and have a very fair complexion. I have a birthday Dec. 27.

Emma Rachel Harney.
Baileysville, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading The Herald every week until I feel like I am with you all. I go to Junior High School of Laurel, Miss., and am in seventh grade. I am eleven years old, am four feet, four inches tall and weigh sixty-eight pounds. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. We don't take The Pentecostal Herald but my grandmother does in Alabama, and she sends it to us through mail. I enjoy reading it very much, especially page ten. Morris G. Lee, I guess your age to be twenty-one. Charley H. Vaulk, I guess your age to be twenty-four. Charley, I think I ought to get it right because I worked hard enough. If I am right, send me the book you promised for me. I am real anxious to get it. Who can guess my first name? It begins with E and ends with Y, and has four letters in it. I will answer any one if they guess it, if it is the Lord's will.

1104 12th Ave., Laurel, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make space enough in the dear old Herald for a Galatia girl? I love to read The Herald. I have never written to The Herald before. I am fourteen years old, blond, blue eyed, fair complexion. I have five sisters and two brothers. My father is dead. My mother is living. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. Belong to the Methodist Church. I will guess Geneva for Ruth G. Cash. I hope to see this in print. My birthday is Oct. 9. If anybody has my birthday please write to me. I will close with love to Aunt Bettie and all of the cousins.

Ruby Pemberton.
Rt. 3, Galatia, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a little girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with E, and has seven letters. I am nine years old and will be ten July 18. Have I a twin? I am in the fifth grade. Dorothy Shaw, I guess your middle name to be May. Winifred Clabaugh, I guess your age to be twenty-three. I will answer all the letters that I receive.

Billie Henry.
Rt. 2, Hardin, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a West Virginia girl twelve years old, four feet, eight inches tall with brown eyes, black hair and medium complexion. Ethel Miller, the Kingdom of God is on earth. The Bible comes from religion. Cain was the name of Adam's first child. Has man ever entered the Garden of Eden since Adam and Eve were driven out? Elizabeth M. Burnett, I guess your middle name to be Marie. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with A and ends with E, and has five letters in it. I will write to whoever guesses it correctly.

Stella R. Parkins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been a long time since I visited your band so you can surely let me in this time. I guess you cousins remember me so there is no need of describing myself. I live a mile and a quarter from school and sure do like to go. I ride my pony to school. My friend who lives a quarter of a mile farther than I do comes to ride with me. We sure do have some good times riding together. I belong to the 4-H Club and like it fine. I sure do like to sew and cook. I am in the second year. How many of you cousins like sports such as horseback riding, swimming, skating? I do. I also like to go flower hunting in the early spring when there are lots of pretty flowers to pick. I think violets are the prettiest of all wild flowers, though all of them are very pretty. I had rather live in the country where I can hunt wild flowers than in the city where I can't have any fun. My age is between ten and thirteen. The one who guesses it I will write to them. I won't take up any more space as I am afraid Mr. W. B. will get me. All you cousins near my age write to me. My address is Box 105, Ashland, Okla.

FALLEN ASLEEP

CHILTON.

Claude L. Chilton, Jr., born Sept. 19, 1879, in Alabama, graduated at the Southern University, Greensboro, Ala., in 1900; took his M. A. at Vanderbilt University in 1901; he joined the South Alabama Methodist Episcopal Conference in 1902; married Miss Clara C. Weidman, June 8, 1915. His wife and two boys survive him, Claude, Jr., and Cecil. His brothers are, Arthur, Thomas H., Robert; his sisters, Miss Cecile and Mrs. Scheel. Claude's father was a distinguished minister of the same conference as Claude, who left the church in 1903 on account of fundamental differences with his conference on holiness and other things. He was left with poor opportunity to make sufficient living for his family and Claude, Jr., gave up his ministerial career and went into a bank in Montgomery to make money to educate his young brothers and sisters. He lived to see them all fine scholars and well settled in life. Claude attended the Free Methodist Church on 16th Street, Brooklyn, for years and helped to sustain that work, besides carrying on a mission in Mount Vernon, New York. Claude played well on the piano and would sing his father's beautiful hymns at night with his family until his last sickness and when he could play his instrument no longer he would sing hymns until death closed his vocal organs forever to this world. Claude was proficient in Latin and Greek, besides having perfected the bank advertising business. He was vice-president of the Blodgett-Advertising Company, Incorporated, situated in the French Building, Fifth Avenue, New York City, when he died. We preached his funeral sermon from "Mark the perfect man," etc. We buried him on a beautiful hillside looking to the east. No sweeter, purer, lovelier saint have we ever known than Claudius Lysias Chilton, Jr.

DRAKE.

John N. Drake, son of Dennis and Maria Drake, was born April 4, 1870, near Winterset, Iowa, and departed this life February 12, 1929, in Vinton, Iowa, being 58 years, 10 months and 8 days old. He was reared on a farm near Winterset. He was united in marriage to Annie L. Wilson, Feb. 22, 1907. They settled on a farm near Creston for about three years. They then moved to a farm near Dexter, Iowa, living there until 1920, when they moved to Vinton for school privileges for their daughter Naomi who lost her sight in infancy. They have since made their home here. Mr. Drake has been a farmer all his life. He was industrious, honest, respected and trusted by neighbors and friends.

To this union were born two daughters, Eunice in 1908 who died at 2 and one-half years of age, and Naomi born in 1911 and now in the school here in Vinton. He was preceded in death by father and mother and two sisters, Barbara Sawyer and Emma Sheeley and one brother William Drake. His only living relatives left are nieces and nephews. Mr. Drake gave his heart to God when a boy and was converted. He suffered a break with God and was again regenerated fourteen years ago, shortly after consecrating his life to the service of God. He knew the cleansing through the precious blood of Jesus. Since his regeneration and sanctification he has remained loyal and faithful to God. His last days were victorious. Knowing the end was approaching he was calm, trustful and resigned to the will of his God.

Mr. Drake has fought a good fight; he has finished his course; he has kept the faith. He loved to read his Bible and has surely obeyed our Lord's command, "Search the Scriptures," and in searching he did not fail to find the "Pearl of Great Price," for he was made a vessel unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use. His life proved his testimony to be true. He delighted in composing songs and poems to the honor of his Lord.

At the beginning of his last illness he felt that God was going to call him home but said, "It's all right." He was in great suffering and pain, unconscious part of the time but patient and thoughtful when conscious, giving testimony of his faith, confidence and trust in God. His faith held to the very last and he was ready to go.

A kind and loving husband and father was thoughtful in the hour of death as he had been in life. He put his business affairs in as good condition as he knew to make it as easy for his loved ones as possible when he was gone.

Mr. Drake united with the Evangelical Church near Winterset and on moving to Vinton transferred to the United Brethren Church. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and daughter Naomi and a large number of relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held in the United Brethren Church in Vinton, Thursday, Feb. 14, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Earnest Shaffer, and interment made in the Vinton cemetery.

Mrs. John N. Drake.

YODER.

Nicholas B. Yoder, of Wakarusa, Ind., after a long siege of illness and a brave effort to live, passed to his reward on April 24th. He had gone to Cleveland Clinic Hospital for treatment so that he might, as he said, "live with his children just a few more years."

He was of German descent, his forbears having come to this country during the 17th century, to seek religious freedom. From them he inherited that virility, industry, and upright character which made him a man of influence and worth in every phase of life.

He was educated in Wakarusa, and Valparaiso University. For sixteen years he followed the teaching profession. In 1893 he launched upon a business career as senior member of the firm of Yoder Brothers, a furniture and hardware company, from which he retired in favor of his older son in 1927. He has said, "In 34 years of business dealings I have never willfully taken advantage of a single man."

Mr. Yoder is survived by his wife and three children, Merl Yoder, merchant of Wakarusa; Worth Yoder, a civil engineer in Cincinnati, Ohio, and Mrs. Mark (Hattie) Montiehi, of Elkhart, Ind., all of whom attended Asbury College.

He was a member of the M. E. Church and for many years taught the Men's Bible Class, often being called to other cities to give discussions to other congregations. His life was beautiful, and his devotion to Christ and Christian principles an inspiration to all who knew him. He was indeed a true soldier of the cross, and how fitting that the words "I will cling to that old rugged cross and exchange it some day for a crown" should be sung for him.

He loved his children dearly and gave all to make them happy and successful in life. The greatest heritage he gave them was the example of his life which will forever be a source of inspiration to them.

His body rests on the banks of the beautiful Elkhart River and his soul has eternal bliss with Christ on that beautiful shore over there.

Mrs. W. N. Yoder.

MY LIFE'S STORY

The Autobiography of Bud Robinson

This is the book for which thousands have been waiting. It is years since "Uncle Buddy" has written a book dealing with his life and experiences. Now we have this volume, his autobiography, giving an intimate recital of his experiences from early childhood to the present time. Pathos, humor, optimism, scathing rebuke, with an amazing memory of detail unite to give this volume the peculiar charm that characterizes all of Bud Robinson's writings. Just as there is only one Bud Robinson so this is the only volume giving the complete story of his life up to the present.

IS IT WRONG TO DANCE?

Alfred C. Spencer.

We must have moral insight if we would surely know the rightness or wrongness of dancing, or anything that we do. The answer to the question, "Is it wrong to dance?" must be given by the right standard, if it would be correctly answered. We should look at it in the light of truth, and from the standpoint of the Judgment Day. It is taken for granted that the inquiry, whether it is wrong to dance, would be such as would come, at least, from a somewhat awakened conscience.

To the question under discussion, another question may be asked: "What is the true guide to our natural physical desires?" It is from God, our Creator, and the only true God, that we can learn the right standard of living, or of deportment. This right standard, or the correct principle of living is revealed to us in the Bible, the Word of God. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." (Psalm 119:105)

Galatians 5:16 says "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh." Is not dancing a "lust (or desire) of the flesh"?

In Colossians 3:5 we read: "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth; fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affection, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry." Webster's Dictionary gives the meaning of the word "mortify" thus: "To deaden by religious discipline, as the carnal affections, bodily appetites, or worldly desires; to bring into subjection; to abase; to humble."

We should "mortify" or "bring into subjection" all inordinate affection. The word "inordinate" is defined thus: "not limited to rules prescribed, or to usual bounds; irregular; disorderly; excessive; immoderate." Evil concupiscence is given as follows: "Unlawful or irregular desire of carnal pleasure; lust."

The dance is a worldly, sensuous affair, which belongs to the kingdom of Satan; and to those who are not spiritually enlightened it may seem innocent enough. The bait of the music, the attraction of the opposite sex, the sociability of the occasion, all seem to combine in alluring to the evil in the dance. Those who are wise will not go in the way of temptation.

"Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul" (I Peter 2:11). Avoid getting into the spell or intoxication of the dance. How can the soul prosper in such an atmosphere of inflamed lust?

Can a Christian stand on neutral ground in the matter of dancing? Let us read Galatians 5:17: "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit lusteth against the flesh: for these are contrary the one to the other." Let us remember that "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts. If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit" (Gal. 5:24,25). Will a saved or regenerated person dance? and will a person who is sanctified wholly desire to do so?

To all who are tempted let a word of comfort and loving help be given. It is not wrong to be tempted; it is only wrong to yield to temptation. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him" (James 1:12). If we wish to be delivered from temptation let us be true followers of the Lord; for "the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation" (II Peter 2:9).

Our purpose in living is to glorify God. People of spiritual sense can see that we cannot glorify God in the modern sensuous dance. Let all who are holding on to eternal life, avoid the dance. Our Creator, in great love for us has abounding joy to give, and we need not seek lustful pleasure which must be of a downward trend.

"For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die: but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live" (Romans 8:13). Let us put our influence against the dance. May we live the life, "through the Spirit," that will be pleasing to God.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XI.—June 16, 1929.

Subject.—Judah Taken Captive. 2 Kings 25:1-12.

Golden Text.—Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people. Proverbs 14:34.

Time.—586 B. C.

Places.—Jerusalem, Riblah and Babylon.

Introduction.—We take from Arnold's Commentary a short resume of history that is interesting: "Solon was the great leader in Athens at this time, while Rome, yet rather obscure, was under the rule of the Etruscan Kings. Israel had been taken captive by Shalmanser, the Assyrian king, 134 years before. Twenty-four years before the time of this lesson, the Chaldeans took Nineveh and thus overthrew the Assyrian empire. Now Nebuchadnezzar, proud, ambitious, cruel monarch of the short-lived Chaldean empire, takes Jerusalem, burns Solomon's temple, the most superb and costly edifice ever erected by man; and ends Jewish regal power."

This lesson marks one of the saddest events in all Jewish history. I am not sure that the world furnishes another such picture of sin and its consequences. Starting with the call of its great founder, and following the nation on through the centuries, one feels that he is passing through a sort of labyrinth. The people sin, and are chastised by Jehovah; they repent, and he forgives and takes them back into favor. This sort of thing is repeated all along the line; and yet there is an upward movement in the nation until it reaches its zenith in the reign of King Solomon—the mightiest King, and perhaps the worst, that ever sat on the throne of God's "chosen people." When Solomon's reign ended Iahab was hanging from the door of every home in the land. The nation had been led astray by the idolatrous behavior of its ruler, and was already on the way to ruin. Few things are worse than bad men in office. Solomon's own proverb covers the case completely: "When the wicked feareth rule, the people mourn."

The captivity of Judah really began in 606 B. C. at the end of the first siege of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. A large number of Jews were then deported to Babylon, among whom we find Daniel and his three boy friends, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. In course of time Nebuchadnezzar enthroned and dethroned certain men of Jewish royalty, and carried away other groups of captives. Zedekiah was the last one of these vassal Kings. Our lesson today gives us a study of his final rebellion against the Babylonians, and the utter ruin of both himself and the kingdom of Judah. She followed her sister kingdom into captivity from which few of them ever returned.

Comments On The Lesson.

In the ninth year of his reign.—Connect this with the last three verses of the previous chapter. These chapters are wrongly divided. As it stands in the text one might suppose it to mean the ninth year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar; whereas it refers to the ninth year of Zedekiah, when the city was besieged for its final overthrow.

2. Unto the eleventh year of King Zedekiah. That is, about two years, as well as we can calculate; unless the siege took in but a part of these last two years of Zedekiah's reign, as the next verse indicates.

3. The fourth month.—The siege began the very last of our December, for the Jewish 10th month corresponds to the latter part of December and the first part of January. The fourth month was mid summer. The famine prevailed in the city.—This was a cruel form of war. Better kill men outright on the battle field than to starve a whole city to death. When the last loaf of bread had been consumed, and helpless mothers and their hungry children were dying, there was nothing left to do but to surrender the city into the hands of the cruel enemy on the outside. The fruit of Judah's sins was ripe for the harvest.

4. The city was broken up.—The Revised Version translates: "A breach was made in the city;" that is, the wall gone away, and a gap was torn in it for the entrance of the besieging army. The men of war fled by night.—That agrees with the statement of Josephus that the breach was made at midnight. Between two walls.—"Along the Tyropean valley between the hills Moriah and Zion." The king went the way toward the plain.—Pen cannot describe the situation. Use your own imagination. The rout was complete. The Jewish army fled for its life, leaving women and children in the hands of merciless heathen soldiers; and the panic-stricken king who had thought to defy Nebuchadnezzar fled alone, or with some few faithful attendants. "The wages of sin is death."

5. Persuaded after the King.—Zedekiah was the chief offender and the leader of his people; and the Babylonians would not suffer him to escape. He made his last run for life that night. Had he recognized the utter futility of trying to throw off the yoke of Babylon, he might have served Nebuchadnezzar or a sub-king with peace, and some degree of prosperity for himself and his people; but his want of sense, coupled with his rebellious nature, forced him to his ruin.

6. To Riblah.—Near Mount Lebanon. As Nebuchadnezzar was also carrying on war with Tyre at this time, he had his headquarters at that place. Wherefore Zedekiah was carried to him. Gave judgment upon him.—We would say: "Tried him by court-martial," and condemned him.

7. His sentence was severe. "They slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes." That was unrefined cruelty. Put out the eyes of Zedekiah.—They let him gaze upon the most heart-rendering scene they could produce, and then knocked out his eyes forever. As if that were not sufficiently cruel to satiate their pagan hearts, they carried him captive to Babylon "bound in fetters of brass." I hope no one will charge God with responsibility for their terrible deeds. When the Jews absolutely refused to obey him, he withdrew from them, and Satan and his devilish Babylonians did their work. If one will not follow God, he has no right or reason to expect his protection.

8. In the fifth month.—Just one month after the capture of the city. Nebuzaradan.—One of Nebuchadnezzar's officers. He was appointed to finish the destruction of Jerusalem.

9. He burnt the house of the Lord.—When Jehovah forsook the beautiful temple, there was nothing left but a pile of stones and some other building material. Now it must go down in ashes; and the homes of the King and those of all the great men must go with it. Brick and stone cannot make a temple of God. He must inhabit the edifice, or it is no better than a playhouse, or a theater.

10. Brake down the walls of Jerusalem.—When God forsakes, ruin follows. Poor old Jerusalem would not have God; and her very walls must be shattered to the ground. Read carefully Romans 1:28—32.

11. Nebuzaradan made almost a clean sweep. What desolation was left behind. The city lay a mess of charred ruins, and practically all the people were gone.

12. Gift of the poor of the land to be vine dressers and husbandmen.—Of course, these were no better than slaves of Nebuchadnezzar. They toiled only to pay heavy taxes to satisfy the rapacity of their d'abolical masters. Sin never pays anything but ruin and death.

DICTATES OF CONSCIENCE.

L. I. McDougle.

"We have the right to worship God according to the dictates of our conscience: But what if the conscience is twisted? "Well, who has the right to take the twist out?" In founding the American Republic it was proposed that the Church and State separate. If the founders of the Government had said, "We must worship God according to the holy Scriptures," that would have meant an interpreter and the union of Church and State from the start. The "right" is a civil and political one. This was done to protect the relations of the Church and the State. As matters now stand the government does not claim the right or authority to prescribe the mode of religion for the people.

It is a mistake to offer a civil right as an immutable law of God. Jesus said, "In vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrine the commandments of man." Representing this as a religious right has had something to do with the organization of about two hundred denominations and the setting up of several hundreds of religions. The holy Spirit is the author of one religion, not of confusion. "Well, how do you know when you have the right one?" we are asked. The Christian religion is based upon the Holy Scriptures, the Holy Trinity, Incarnation, Atonement, Resurrection and the specified conditions of salvation. If we accept these we know that we have the right one.

Who has the right? Civil institutions have the right to test the quality of the conscience in relation to civil matters, and Christians, and Christian institutions have the right to examine the quality of the conscience in relation to religious matters. "Conscience is my guide," we often hear it said. In the Roman Catholic Church they are told that the Church is the guide. In the Lutheran Reformation it was claimed that the Bible was the guide. In the Wesleyan revival it was held that the Holy Spirit was the guide for the renewed, not the natural heart.

PERSONAL AND EVANGELISTIC.

Rev. J. L. Glascock, 1350 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio, a most worthy and successful evangelist, has some open dates for the summer. He will fit into a camp meeting, a church meeting, or anywhere a full gospel is wanted to be preached. Bro. Glascock is one of our tried and true evangelists who has won thousands of souls to Christ.

Rev. H. H. McAfee, 1114 N. Fern Creek Ave., Orlando, Fla., will be available for some camp meeting or tent work during July and August. He and his wife are splendid workers and will be glad to assist in tent or camp meetings as preacher and personal workers. Let those who are wishing to get in touch with workers for their camp or tent meetings, address them as above.

Rev. Fred G. Williams, Alva, Okla., who has had some years experience in the pastorate, is available for evangelistic services. He is highly recommended by his superintendent, Rev. J. L. LaGrone, who comments on his strong and successful ministry in the pastorate. Dr. C. W. Butler also looks upon him as a true man of God worthy of our confidence. Those interested in securing his assistance in revival work may address him as above.

Rev. Leonard Cochran, Wilmore, Ky., has been used most graciously in our tent work during the summer and informs us that he has a few open dates, one from June 1-30 and the first two weeks of July. I wish to commend Brother Cochran to any needing a devout, consecrated young man for their meeting. He is fully prepared in every sense of the word.

In rearranging our slate we have two open dates for this summer namely, July 25-Aug. 18, and August 25-Sept. 8. Any churches wishing our services for any of these dates please write us at our home address, Frankfort, Ind., or as per slate. We are also open for calls and are slating up for the winter.—Paul and Dora Geil, singers.

Because of a cancelled meeting, Mr. and Mrs. Paul White, singers, musicians and pastors' helpers, have an open date June 2-16. Any camp or church needing special singers write or wire "The Musical Whites," Box 204, Highland Park, Ill.

Wanted—Second hand, medium size tent for gospel meetings. Address Rev. Albert Trabue, Mitchell, Ind., 209 W. Baker St.

DR. BIEDERWOLF'S ARTICLES INTERESTING.

I am reading with intense interest, the very able contributions of Dr. W. E. Biederwolf in The Herald, entitled "Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God." I have never read an abler and more convincing argument on this question than is found in this splendid serial of Dr. Biederwolf and I am hoping that these masterly contributions will be collected and placed in book form.

BOYS ENJOY

Out-of-the-ordinary stories—stories of adventure. One of the most interesting stories we have read recently is "The Two Tramps." It would seem to be a book for boys, but really it is a book every one would enjoy. The tramps in this story are not beggars or men of low ideals, but tramps for Jesus. Order one or more copies to place in the hands of boys, at the special price of 60c.

My Sermon Notes

BY CHARLES H. SPURGEON

A selection from Outlines of Discourses Delivered by Mr. Spurgeon Covering the Entire Bible.

Vol. 1. Genesis to Proverbs.
Vol. 2. Ecclesiastes to Malachi.
Vol. 3. Matthew to Acts.
Vol. 4. Romans to Revelation.
These volumes are $1.50 each, or the entire set will be sent postpaid and labeled at the special price of $4.00.

Will The Pentecostal family please pray that my daughter may be restored to health.—Her Mother.

Will you kindly announce through your good paper with emphasis and brotherly love which is characteristic of you in your paper? God has answered prayer through the columns of your paper and I believe he will do it again. There are many righteous people who read your paper and the Bible says, "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth me." Jas. 5:16. Pray that God will heal and undertake for my entire family of seven which has been broken up on account of serious illness for about four years —this illness includes a son, myself and wife, the latter has cancer of the bone. I believe God will answer prayer for healing regardless of the seriousness of the disease and will unite us again as a family. I believe this scripture and I am sure there are many readers of your paper who believe it, and if so, God will answer—"All things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer believing, ye shall receive." Matt. 21:22.

Rev. D. L. Griffin.

BROWNWOOD, TEXAS.

The work of the Church of the Nazarene of Brownwood, Texas, is making fairly good progress. This work has been established several years. The present pastor has been here since last fall working for the advancement of God's kingdom. We hope to have a church building of our own before long. Pray for us that "Second blessing" holiness may be more established in this western town.

I. L. Flynn, Pastor.

PRE-INVENTORY SALE OF BIBLES

We offer you here a very large assortment of some of the choicest styles of Bibles published, at such low prices that you can hardly afford not to invest in them. THE DEVIL.

By The Editor.

THE Scriptures plainly teach that there is a Devil; not simply an evil influence, but a person of vast knowledge and power. It appears that he is a fallen angel, and that he has brought down with him a knowledge of things, spiritual. It seems that the Devil has an intense, unabated hatred against God, and while he cannot, personally, touch God, drag him from his throne and trample him under his feet, he constantly endeavors to insult and grieve God by the destruction of men, whom it appears from the Scriptures, are the chief objects of God's love.

You can conceive of some weak and vile creature who hates, with the bitterest envy and contempt, a strong, good man. He dare not attack the man whom he knows could easily defend himself, and punish the assailant, but in order to grieve the good man he hates, he degrades his children, he destroys the virtue of his daughters, he makes drunkards out of his sons, he runs his automobile over his little child in the street, he kidnaps his baby, he tortures him with grief by ruining his family. This seems to be the theory upon which the Devil works. He gratifies his vicious hatred against a holy God in the destruction of the creatures of his love.

To doubt the existence of a personal Devil, is to doubt the plain teachings of the Holy Scriptures. It is to doubt the words of the Lord Jesus. If Jesus taught anything, he taught that there is a Devil. The apostles tell us that the Devil made repeated attacks upon Jesus himself. He is very daring. His remarkable success has given him courage. It should be remembered that he has great power. He deceived and led into disobedience and sin, the first pair of human beings. He won a victory over as great and good man as King David, and over as wise a man as Solomon, and over as meek a man as Moses, and over as strong a man as Samson. David was rescued from his snare, but suffered through life, because of his sin. Moses was restored to the divine favor, but did not cross into Canaan. Samson's prayer was answered, and he destroyed his enemies, but he went down into destruction with them. The curtain drops over the close of Solomon's career, and we hope that he was finally restored, but his sins remind us that Satan is so powerful that the wise man who wrote the Proverbs in Holy Writ, can be deceived, tempted, and brought down by the power of the Devil.

The Scriptures teach us that "the Devil goeth about, like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may devour." The lion is a powerful beast; with his soft feet he can creep, without noise, upon his prey. With a sudden leap he crushes to the earth, and rends his victim. We are placed upon our guard with the instruction that this great enemy of God, this hater and destroyer of humanity, is moving quietly, creeping upon us stealthily, ly, and ready to leap with a sudden and powerful temptation, some strong delusion, upon us, and that we should watch and pray.

The Devil is a great deceiver. We are taught that he can transform himself and appear as an angel of light. He has a vast variety of bait for the dangerous hook of his deceptions, hatred, and schemes for our destruction. He baits with beautiful, godless women. He baits with strong, deceptive, intelligent, unbelieving men. He baits with beautiful, disobedient children. It should be remembered that in tempting our Lord, he claimed to own all the kingdoms of the world; and he offered to give them to Jesus if Jesus would worship him. The plan was, "I will let you own and rule the world, if you will let me own and rule you."

The Devil is a great liar. He does not own this world. God created it and owns it. The Devil does not own a grain of sand, a blade of grass, a leaf upon a single tree, a fragrant flower, a singing bird, a gurgling brook, a winding river, or billowy wave of all the seas. He does own men, women and children. He has a great way of controlling people and working through them to accomplish his diabolical purposes. Sinners who violate the laws of God, reject the mercies of God and refuse to accept salvation through the crucified and risen Son of God, are under the power of the Devil. They are much more wicked and dangerous in their influence, than they are supposed to be. Think of a college professor being possessed of the Devil, and the influence he can wield through the years destroying the faith of the students under his instruction, lifting the floodgates of unbelief, leading on to immorality and sin of every kind. Such a man, under the power of the Devil, can broadcast the seeds of doubt that will bring an ever-increasing harvest of unbelief, wickedness and destruction.

Take the editor of a great daily paper, who belongs to the Devil, whose mind is under the domination and direction of the Devil, who thinks and speaks and writes and lives his life and sends out his influence into the homes and minds and hearts of tens of thousands of people. He sees no harm in sin; he is friendly to almost every form of wickedness. He defends and encourages immodest dress. He is the advocate of the race track, with its degraded gambling influence, that does not only affect the rich, but the poor and ignorant into whom he injects the spirit of gambling and dishonest desire to get something for nothing, until it is their delight to rob the ignorant and unsuspecting of their hard-earned wages. He is the enemy of prohibition. He encourages bootlegging; he constantly opposes the enforcement of law; he breeds and nurtures in the hearts of the people, a contempt for law. He becomes a powerful ally of wickedness of every description. It is thus that the Devil works through men and women for the wreck of homes, the blight of young lives, the ruin of character, and the destruction of souls. The Devil has no respect for old age; no reverence for sainthood, no pity for childhood; he is full of hatred. He will stick his nose, with its poisonous breath, into the cradle of the baby; he will grab at the heels of an old man as he goes into his coffin. He will even want the body of Moses after the spirit has ascended unto God. My fellowbeings, do not forget that there is a Devil, and he will attack you; he will try to drag down and destroy you.

For protection against him, you will need to keep yourself within the bounds of the law of God. You will need to seek salvation in the Lord Jesus Christ. You will need to be endued with power from on high. You will need to be filled and kept by the indwelling of the Holy Ghost. You will need to "put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the Devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Thank God, we have this gracious promise in his Word, "Resist the Devil, and he will flee from you."

It is said of Judas Iscariot, one of the twelve disciples, that "The Devil entered into him." Being possessed of the Devil, and under his control, he was prepared for the most diabolical crime, which has made him to be regarded as the monster sinner of the centuries. Even with the Devil in him, he could be present at the sacred Last Supper; he could still follow and betray Jesus with a kiss. Think of the fearful possibilities when the Devil of doubt enters into a minister of the gospel! He can still partake of the sacrament and, while he cannot literally kiss Jesus, he can compliment him as the greatest and best of all men. He can deceive the people with compliments and praises of the character and teachings of Christ, while, at the same time, he denies his miraculous virgin birth, in spite of the record of the miracles wrought by Christ in the gospels; with a smile he can insist that Christ never performed any miracles; that he had no such Godlike power. He can write question marks over every prophecy in the Old Testament Scriptures concerning the coming of Christ and his redemptive suffering. He can insinuate that, if Jesus had been a bit more discreet in his teaching, he need not have been crucified, but might have remained a teacher to a good old age; that the crucifixion had nothing to do with the savings of men from sin. Thus the supposed minister of the gospel, into whom the Devil has entered, can be led on to betray his trust, to delude the people, to destroy their faith and plunge them into the darkness of doubt here, and the outer darkness of perdition hereafter. What havoc this wolf in sheep's clothing can make of the Church of God! The Devil is never at

NOTES AND OBSERVATIONS FROM THE ORIENT.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

At the time of writing this article we are still in the country of Fukien Province, China, holding our third meeting before we get back to Foochow where we hold an eight-days' engagement.

Between meetings we get a chance to look over a book or two in some missionary's home; and just recently we have read hastily one of the latest books on John Wesley—this time the author is Arnold Lunn, son of Sir Henry Lunn a well known English writer and religious leader as well as traveller. There is nothing particularly new in the book, but it was rather refreshing to me to read again some of the things which made Wesley mighty through God.

Rather interesting was that interview Wesley had with Bishop Butler of Bristol, of Butler's "Analogy" which we young preachers had to study and sweat over. Wesley wrote, "The Analogy of Religion is a strong and well wrote thesis, but far too deep for their understanding to whom it is primarily addressed." The trouble was, Butler in combatting Deism made his appeal to the intellect while Wesley made his appeal to the heart. Bishop Butler is remembered for his "Analogy." John Wesley is remembered for the great religious awakening of the 18th century which stirred the whole nation and two continents.

Bishop Butler said in an impatient outburst to Wesley, "Sir, the pretending to extraordinary revelations and gifts of the Holy Ghost is a horrid thing—a very horrid thing."

Wesley replied: "My lord, I pretend to no extraordinary revelations or gifts of the Holy Ghost; none but what every Christian may receive and ought to expect and pray for."

The Bishop ordered him out of his diocese by saying: "You have no business here; you are not commissioned to preach in this diocese. Therefore, I advise you to go hence."

Wesley replied: "My lord, my business on earth is to do what good I can. Wherever therefore, I think I can do most good, there must I stay so long as I think so . . . A dispensation of the gospel is committed to me and woe is me if I preach not the gospel wherever I am in the habitable world."

Wesley never pretended to be a Bishop, yet he ordained preachers and sent them out to preach. When he sent George Shadford to America he wrote him thus:

"I let you loose, George, on the great continent of America. Publish your message in the open face of the sun and do all the good you can."

The Message of Methodism may well be summed up in those lines of Charles Wesley: "Father, whose everlasting love

Thy only Son for sinners gave,
Whose grace to all did freely move,
And sent him down the world to save;
Help us thy mercy to extol,

Immense, unfathomed, unconfined,
To praise the Lamb who died for all,
The general Savior of mankind."

The Message of Methodism has been dropped or forgotten or totally neglected today by thousands of our pulpits and churches and "another gospel" fashioned after the times has taken its place. As we read the church papers over here we wonder sometimes what kind of a church some of the Methodists (so-called) are running. Certainly not the Methodism of Wesley. I wonder why we do not make more use of Wesley's hymns. Every new hymn book that comes out seems to cut out the more spiritual of those hymns and their place is supplied with hymns on "Social Service," "Aspiration," etc. What a glow there is in the following lines on conversion by Wesley:

"O how shall I the goodness tell,
Father, which Thou to me has showed?
That I, a child of wrath and hell,
I should be called a child of God.
Should know, should feel my sins forgiven,
Blest with this antepast of heaven."

I think of these lines on the Real Presence:

"We need not now go up to heaven,
To bring the long-sought Saviour down;
Thou art to all already given,
Thou dost e'en now thy banquet crown;
To every faithful soul appear,
And show Thy real presence here."

This makes me think of Brother Lawrence and his practice of the presence of God. We hear him pray: "O my God, since thou art with me and I must now in obedience to thy commands apply my mind to these outward things, I beseech Thee to grant me the grace to continue in thy presence; and to this end do thou prosper me with thy assistance, receive all my works and possess all my affections." Again we hear Brother Lawrence speak: "God has infinite treasure to bestow, and we take up with a little sensible devotion which passes in a moment. Blind as we are, we hinder God and stop the current of his grace. But when he finds a soul penetrated with a lively faith, he pours into it his graces and favors plentifully; there they flow like a torrent which, after being forcibly stopped against its ordinary course, when it has found a passage, spreads itself with impetuosity and abundance."

Wesley's rules for the maintenance of the Presence were very simple:

1. In every action reflect on your end.
2. Begin every action in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.
3. Begin every important work with prayer.
4. Do not leave off a duty because you are tempted in it.

NOTES ON GOSPEL WORK IN CHINA.

Foochow conference has had some very fine history. Twenty years ago revival fires swept through here but in the past ten years or more there has been a decline and revival fires have gone out. A veteran missionary said to me recently that the Centenary Movement was a set back to the work of God in China. It placed the emphasis so much on the material, finances, numbers, etc., that it wrought ill and not good for the kingdom. It seems too bad that with increasing education, better equipment, better educated missionaries, etc., the real work of soul saving decreases instead of increases. Our meetings here at Futsing with Bishop Birney and Rev. Harry Caldwell give us some splendid opportunities. The preachers, Bible women and workers from several districts have been called in and for four days one continual, intense round of meetings are being carried on. We have preached daily at 10:30 to preachers and workers only. Mrs. Ridout has a woman's evangelistic meeting daily at 3:00, and again at 7:30 we have another meeting with preachers, workers, etc., where we preach and press the old-fashioned gospel of full salvation and the Spirit's baptism for God's people, especially for the preachers and workers. Bishop Birney has been preaching some deeply spiritual messages every morning to the entire conference on such subjects as "Fellowship with God," "The Higher Life," etc.

In all our meetings we have sought to bring souls to the place of full surrender. Yesterday morning we preached on "A Clean Heart and its Accompaniments." We endeavored to show that with a clean heart we shall have

- (1) The presence of the Holy Spirit.
- (2) The joy of salvation.
- (3) The freedom of the Spirit.
- (4) Fruitfulness in soul winning.

At the close we had an altar service to which we invited only preachers and Bible women. Possibly seventy-five or more came forward and prayed and wept and surrendered and trusted the blood to cleanse from all sin. Some joyous testimonies were given indicating that some had come into the blessing. Out here in China there is great need of preaching a full gospel and a full salvation. In fact, nothing but full salvation will meet the need. The Chinese background is so different from ours; they have not had centuries of Christian teaching. Many of them come clear out of heathenism when they become Christians; then, on the other hand, many of the second and third generation Christians think themselves Christians who have never experienced a change of heart. There is much need of a revival of regeneration among the churches but in order to bring that on the preachers must get on fire of the Holy Ghost themselves.

In this section of China there has been considerable "Anti-Christian" feeling among the students. In one of our meetings the boys' school was badly infected with that kind of thing, but the revival helped greatly to break it. One night we had a young man—a government official who had got the Spirit's baptism in the meetings to tell his experience. He had been a student in the schools there and was well known to the students, and many of them came out to hear him. After his testimony we gave an exhortation and upwards of forty of the students came out to seek Christ. The following night many more came and thus by way of the revival meeting a lot of the "anti-Christian" spirit was broken and we feel sure the teachers will have a much easier task in handling their students.

A Chinese meeting is unique in many ways. Of course it is different. Men and women sit apart. The singing consists of songs which are translations of our home songs and hymns such as "Lord Jesus, I Long to be Perfectly Whole," "Jesus Breaks Every Fetter," "Pass Me Not," etc. Somebody offers the opening prayer. The sermon, through the interpreter, usually lasts an hour which in reality only means half an hour because two persons are speaking, then the altar service which too often means the whole body moving forward and then prayer becomes general and all over the house people are praying. But the difficulty often is to get them to pray definitely. Too often the prayer is in the plural: "O Lord, forgive our sins," etc. Not till we get them down to the personal, praying for themselves personally do we get the results desired. Missionaries tell us that the Chinese are great talkers and if you invite them to hold a prayer meeting one half of the time is likely to be taken up by a talk by the leader. We attended a prayer meeting at 6:30 A. M. the other Sunday morning. A good crowd was out. The D. S. held the meeting. After a song and a prayer he talked for half an hour and then called for prayers; everybody prayed and in less than ten minutes the meeting closed. Talk, more talk, still more talk—very little praying. I think I have attended same kind of meetings in the U. S. A. but when the real spirit of prayer is on a people intercession takes the place of talk and supplication claims all the time.

All of us may well pray with the poet,

"O Thou, by whom we come to God,
The life, the truth, the way,
The path of prayer thyself has trod;
Lord, teach us how to pray."

Over here in China you will come up constantly with the real missionary reminding one of Xavier when he was instructed to go to India. There passed before him as he planned to go a vision of stormy seas and barren shores and barbarous people, toil, hunger and persecution and as he beheld this picture of his own coming trials he was so transported by the thought of being counted worthy to suffer for Christ that he cried out fervently in the Latin, "Amplius, Domine, amplius"—that is to say "Yet more, O Lord, yet more; give me more to endure, more to undergo, more to overcome."

One meets in all parts of China men and women of deep piety—saintly people. When we were preaching in Nanking a good woman and her daughter were always present at our Theological Seminary addresses in the morning. She had a saintly face. When Nanking was looted by the bandit soldiers and the missionaries driven out, some of them beaten almost to death, this good woman's home was a place of refuge. Her husband was a prominent contractor in the city and had built a great many of the mission buildings. He and his wife almost at the price of their own lives did everything possible to shield the missionaries from death. Speaking of it later she said, "Oh yes, we lost a great deal materially during the looting (their house was looted) but oh," she said, "we have gained so much spiritually."

Christianity is the only religion that produces saints and, thank God, they are everywhere, in every land and among every race and nation.

"Saints of the early dawn of Christ,
Saints of Imperial Rome,
Saints of the cloistered Middle Age,
Saints of the modern home;
Saints of the soft and sunny East,
Saints of the frozen seas,
Saints of the isles that wave their palms
In the far Antipodes.
"Saints of the mart and busy streets,
Saints of the squalid lanes,
Saints of the silent solitudes,
Of the prairies and the plains;
Saints who were wafted to the skies
In the torment robe of flame,
Saints who have graven on men's thoughts.
A monumental name."

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER X.

THE BEST MEN BELIEVE IT.

HERE are other reasons why I could commend the Bible to you as the veritable Word of God, but as a tenth and final reason I would thus commend it to you because the best men in the world accept it as such. You say, "Do you mean to assert that the men who believe in the Bible are better than the men who do not?"

I most certainly do, Sir. I do not mean to say that there are no good men who reject the Bible. I do not mean to say that there are no good men outside of the Church, men who are as good and sometimes better than some men inside of it. But I do mean to say this: if you will get the people in the Church on one side of you and the people of the world on the other side and then shut your eyes and draw out fifty or a hundred or five hundred from each crowd, when it comes to law-abiding citizenship and decency and honesty and honor in general and all the finer points that go to make up a character that God approves and the world respects, the Church crowd will outshine the other crowd like the blazing sun outshines the pale-faced moon; although one of the Church crowd may be a hypocrite, if you can get any comfort out of that!

Yes, Sir, the best men in the world accept the Bible as the Word of God. You know this is true; so much so that when you see a man reading his Bible you instinctively take it for granted that he is a good man.

If you went into a saloon and threw down a Bible on the bar and asked for a drink, or went into a gambling joint and threw down a Bible on the "green cloth" and told them to start the game, you know what the proprietor would say to you:

He would say, "What is the book you have there?"

And you would say, "It is the Bible."

He would say, "Do you believe in it?"

And you would say, "I do."

And what do you suppose he would say?

He would say, "Telephone the asylum, boys; he's bug-house."

But you go into a saloon, or into a gambling den or into a house of prostitution and throw down a copy of Tom Paine's "Age of Reason," or any other infidel book that assails the Word of God, and not a question would be asked. But the Bible and those sort of things do not go together.

Years ago a young infidel was travelling with his uncle in the West. This uncle was a banker and they were a bit nervous about their safety when they found out they had to stay all night in a rough cabin by the wayside, whose only occupant was a rough looking man of some years, dressed in a bear-skin suit. They agreed that the young man should sit with his pistol and watch until midnight and then awaken his uncle who would watch until morning. Pretty soon the young man peeped through a crack and saw the old man in the other room reach up to take something down from the shelf.

He thought he was going after his pistol and he said to himself, "Here's where the trouble begins."

But instead of a pistol it was a Bible the old man took down, and after reading in it awhile, he knelt down and commenced to pray, and the young infidel began to pull off his coat and get ready for his bed.

And his uncle said, "Look here; I thought you were going to sit up and watch."

And the young man said, "I was, Uncle, but me for the bed! There's nothing to fear as long as the only other person in the house is an old man in the room with a Bible in his hand."

He knew, even though he was an infidel, that there was no use of sitting up, pistol in hand, to watch all night in a cabin that was hallowed by the Word of God and consecrated by the voice of prayer. Say, do you think Tom Paine's "Age of Reason" or Bob Ingersoll's infidel lectures would have done for that young man's fears what the Bible did?

No, Sir, there is no mistake about what we said. The best men in the world believe in the Bible as the very Word of God. And I will go even further than that and say, the better a man is the more he believes in it as such.

John R. Mott was a big enough man in President Wilson's mind to be asked by him to become the Minister to China for this Republic. He has travelled repeatedly this world over, and he has this to say, "The most noble and unselfish lives which I encountered in the different nations, when I came to know them long enough I discovered were the lives which yielded the largest obedience to the pages of this Book."

I was down in Atlanta and they had a moral house-cleaning time. They bought a farm and an old homestead and about thirty girls from the Red Light district accepted shelter there. They needed a Superintendent and a Miss Appleyard, a beautiful, cultured young woman from one of the Southland's best homes volunteered; and she came and laid her pure, strong and sweet life down alongside the soiled and wilted lives of these unfortunate victims of sin. In her devotion to the work she bore more than her share, and I read a little while ago that she had made the sacrifice complete in death.

Say, do you suppose she believed in the Bible? You show me any one who has ever done a thing like that who didn't believe in it.

Who are the people who are down in the haunts of sin and in the slums of the city pouring out their lives to bring the fallen back to the place of hope? People who believe in the Bible.

Who are the folks who have gone out from the comforts of home and the yearning arms of loved ones to toil and sacrifice and idle in the midst of foreign squalor and filth and wretchedness in order to bring the loathsome leper back to health and the heathen in general to the place of hope in God? They are the folks who believe this Bible is the Word of God.

Show me the individual who has a holy regard for the Lord's Day for any other reason than the mere necessities of human nature and I will show you some one every time who believes in the Bible. Take me to the purest, holiest and most spotlessly white and spiritual soul in all this land, and I will show you nine times out of ten a soul that draws its inspiration for that life out of this Book. And when I see a soul like that believing in a Book like this, it recommends the Book to me with a mighty big argument in its favor, and I would like to know more about a book that will make a life like that.

And when one knows that this is the case, and knows it has done something like that for millions, he finds himself almost tempted to question a little bit the life of the man who tramples it underneath his unholy feet and goes out of his way to tear it into pieces.

This is especially true of the man or woman who has known the Word and formerly professed to believe in it. It is an easy thing to get into doubt about things divine when one first begins to drift away into worldliness and sin and from the standard of a righteous, holy life such as this Book holds up.

Let me tell you of a young college graduate. His pastor asked him to show the stereopticon pictures of Bible scenes in the Sabbath school. He thought the young man being a college man could do this work very acceptably.

"If I do it," said the young man, "I'll do it as a personal favor to you, not that I believe in it."

"I do not ask that you do it merely as a personal favor," was his pastor's reply.

"Well, I've been thinking, and I don't believe in a God."

"Come down to my study," said the preacher, "and we will talk it over."

The young man had gone to college as a member of the pastor's church, and he had a right to talk it over. He came and the two spent several hours over the question.

"So you have been 'thinking,' and have arrived at the conclusion that there is no God."

"Yes."

"Will you name some other great thinkers who stand with you on this question?" asked the pastor.

The young man hesitated and finally said, "Didn't Kant, the philosopher, reach that conclusion?"

"Have you read Kant's books?" he was asked, and the preacher endeavoring to find out whether the boy had been doing any thinking at all on the subject.

"No-no," he replied: "I've been told that he had discarded God."

THE BAPTISM WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT.

Rev. A. H. W. Zahniser.

"I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." (Matt. 3:11).

LET us think about the work of the Holy Spirit, particularly the baptism of the Holy Spirit. He is the eternal Spirit. In an important sense he has been in the world from the beginning.

When the earth was without form and void, the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, and God said, Let there be light, and there was light. When it is recorded, "and God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." The plural term indicates the trinity in unity. It evidently refers to the three divine persons in the Godhead—Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. And when it is said, "The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" it evidently means more than giving him a mere existence, or animal life. Seeing he is said to be created in the image and likeness of God himself man is a being capable of holding communion with God; of possessing and enjoying the presence and fellowship of the Holy Spirit. What we are told in the first chapter of St. John regarding the creative power and energy of the eternal Word, might doubtless be also predicted of the Holy Spirit. "All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made."

Many of the chosen and anointed prophets, and a few kings, of Old Testament times lived beyond their dispensation, and were possessed of and directed by the Holy Spirit in a gracious and marvelous manner; and were filled with his sanctifying and illuminating presence. But the great Day of the Holy Ghost was not to come till Jesus had been crucified and glorified. We, however, may say this day dawned when Jesus made the gracious promises concerning his coming to the chosen disciples and witnesses and "breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost." (See John 20:22). When as Luke says, "He lifted up his hands and blessed them, and it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven. And they worshipped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy; and were continually in the temple praising God." To which he adds a hearty and fitting "amen." But it was not fully come till ushered in with power and heavenly glory on the day of Pentecost. "When the day of Pentecost was fully come they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them, and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." (Acts 2:1-4).

We at once recognize the holy portion quoted at the head of this article as from John the Baptist, the great herald and forerunner of the Messiah. In them we see beautifully united and blended the spirit of humility, earnestness, faith and of prophecy. These are requisites to a successful ministry. John refers both to his own mission and that of Jesus Christ. He speaks of the baptism he was called to preach and administer—that of water unto repentance; then of the greater baptism bestowed by the mightier One: The baptism of the Holy Ghost and fire. We have before us two great prophets and preachers, John and Jesus, and two baptisms—that of water and that of the Holy Ghost. John's greatness consisted in his relation to, work for, and association with Jesus, and in the fact he was filled with the Holy Ghost from his birth. He felt unworthy of his place and position. Jesus was and is greatest of all. "For God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him." (John 3:34 last part).

Volumes might be written on any of these subjects or various phases of this passage of Scripture and its setting and teaching. We, however, wish at this time to confine ourselves more particularly to the greater baptism spoken of—the baptism with the Holy Ghost and fire. It will be observed the second which is used here is in italics indicating it is not in the original but is supplied by the translators. Observe then,

First. It is one baptism. The teaching is not that there is a baptism of the Spirit, then another of fire, but that the believer is baptized with the Holy Ghost as with fire. He receives a fiery baptism. Fire is the strong symbol made use of. In Eph. 4:5 we read, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." The writer does not say one mode of administering baptism, but one baptism, by way of pre-eminence. Fire will either consume and destroy, or permeate and fill with itself. It will destroy all that is inflammable or combustible and purify and refine that which remains. So too, the Holy Ghost fire will burn out carnality, and fill the believing soul with his own blessed presence.

Second. It is a baptism for Christian believers. Sinners are not baptized with the Holy Ghost. The Spirit does not fall in his purifying, empowering presence, upon unbelievers.

Those who are already clearly converted and reconciled to God through grace are prepared to seek the fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ. Till past sins have been forgiven and the relation changed the soul cannot seek intelligently this rich experience. It was from the study of the Holy Scriptures, and by the leading of the Holy Spirit that John and Charles Wesley came to the conclusion John Wesley expressed, when he wrote, "In the year 1729 two young men in England, reading the Bible, saw they could not be saved without holiness; they followed after it and incited others to do so. In 1737, they saw, likewise, that men are justified before they are sanctified; but still holiness was their object. God thrust them out to raise up a holy people." There are two works of grace. The Holy Spirit sustains the same relation to heart cleansing or entire sanctification that the witness of the Spirit does to pardon or justification.

Third. It is an illuminating baptism. It enlightens the soul; it clarifies the vision, and enables one to see light in God's light. Charles Wesley realized this when he wrote those lines,

"Refining fire, go through my heart;
Illuminate my soul;
Scatter thy life through every part,
And sanctify the whole."

According to William H. Bathurst it was this flame of living fire which shone so bright in saints of old, and which "Brightened Isaiah's vivid page." If we are sincere Christian believers we may confidently pray

"While to thee our hearts we raise,
On us thy Holy Spirit pour."

The Master himself, after calling attention to earthly parents knowing how to give good gifts to their children asks, "How much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him? In 1 Thess. 4:3, we read, "For this is the will of God, even your sanctification." There is no need to be in darkness concerning our privilege to enjoy this experience. "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (John 1:7). "The Lord God is a sun and shield."

Fourth. It is a purifying baptism. St. Peter, speaking concerning gentile believers who had received it said, "And put no difference between us and them purifying their hearts by faith." (Acts 15:9). Jesus says: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." (Matt. 5:8). We are commanded to love one another with pure hearts fervently. This baptism is a purging fire. Like water it cleanses, and like fire it purifies and illuminates.

There was an element of moral weakness in the heart of each one of the disciples before the baptism of the Holy Ghost was given them on the day of pentecost. With one it manifested itself in one way, and with another in some other way. So too, each justified believer who has not been entirely sanctified and baptized with the Holy Ghost will become conscious, sooner or later if he follows on to know the Lord in his fulness, that there are principles within that need to be removed. He is moved to cry out,

"O that in me the sacred fire
Might now begin to glow;
Burn up the dross of base desire,
And make the mountains flow!"

"O that it now from heaven might fall
And all my sins consume!
Come, Holy Ghost, for thee I call;
Spirit of burning, come."

Fifth. It is a baptism of power. It qualifies and empowers for service. The great Head of the Church urged the need of it, and told the apostles and first Christian disciples to tarry at Jerusalem till they were endued with power from on high. And, as we read, in Acts 1:8, he assured them, "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; (or the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you, see marginal reading) and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Oh, how much we need power these days! Holy Ghost power! Power to resist the enemy; to overcome evil; and power to work efficiently for our Lord and Master. We may have it, but we cannot obtain the necessary power without the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Even as men in anti-deluvian times tried to build their way to heaven by erecting the tower of Babel, people are in this twentieth century of the Christian era imagining their power is in brick and mortar and money and numbers and music, etc. But it is moral and spiritual purity and power that is so largely and lamentably lacking in the modern church. So long as the leadings of the Holy Spirit are either ignored or neglected church members will remain weaklings.

Sixth. It is a perpetuating baptism. It establishes and energizes the individual believer that receives it. And it will establish and render permanent the work of a church that seeks and obtains it, that upholds and contends for it. That church that has a sanctified and fire-baptized ministry and laity will have a real mission till Jesus comes again. The work of such an organization or movement will abide. No individual believer can be at his or her best without it. No such can measure to her responsibility and properly discharge her obligation before God and to man without it. If the Church desires to perpetuate the work she has been commissioned to perform, she should insist on all her members going "on unto perfection" and obtaining the baptism of the Holy Ghost and fire."

This leads us to our last main observation that,

Seventh. It is an essential baptism. It is both commanded and promised in the Word of God. No Christian should dare to oppose it. No Christian can afford to live without it. No one can safely neglect it. In Eph. 5:18, we read, "Be filled with the Spirit." In the second chapter of the Acts and the thirty-ninth and fortieth verses these gracious words are left on record, "For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off even as many as the Lord our God shall call." This is the thirty-ninth verse, but the promise is followed by an exhortation in the fortieth, "And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation." We see how important and essential it is that we see how it has been provided for us; that we are commanded to seek and receive it; and, that it is so graciously promised to us. We need it to seal and preserve us unto the heavenly kingdom and glory. Let us grieve not this Holy Spirit by whom we are sealed unto the day of redemption. Neglect not the gift that is in thee. Let all thy powers be sanctified, purified, illuminated, empowered, energized and perpetuated by the baptism and abiding presence of the Holy Ghost. Amen!

May we all appreciate our dispensational privileges, our pentecostal blessings, and from our hearts sing,

"The Comforter has come, The Comforter has come!

The Holy Ghost from heaven, the Father's promise given;

O spread the tidings 'round, wherever man is found—

The Comforter has come!"

The Fore-Handed Wets.

"A distinction should be made between law on the books, and the social will as found in fact." "Distinguish between this law (prohibition) and normal law." So says Richard Watson Child, "author, diplomat," etc., in a letter to George W. Wickersham. Dr. Wickersham is chairman of president Hoover's National Law Enforcement Commission, whose business it is to investigate as to the reason for the lax enforcement of our criminal laws, especially the Eighteenth Amendment. No sooner had Mr. Hoover announced the personnel of the commission, than Mr. Child made public his letter to Mr. Wickersham.

It is plain wet propaganda. Less, perhaps, to influence the commission directly, than to affect public sentiment, and thus indirectly influence the commission. If not, why make public the letter? What is "social will"? Just another name for wet public sentiment! If he means the mass-will of the American people as to liquor, that is expressed in the Eighteenth Amendment. That 96 percent of the states ratified the amendment in record time, leaves no doubt as to the will of the American people, as a whole, concerning the liquor traffic. That some foreign ruled states have responded to wet agitation, and have repealed their own state dry laws, does not change the obvious will of the nation as a whole.

The wets are clearly alarmed at president Hoover's move! Their lawlessness will not endure further exposure! President Wilson was unfavorable to prohibition. President Harding was apathetic, and President Coolidge was no better. During nine years, the wets industriously made hay in that sunshine. They have built up a great law-defying machine; and now that Mr. Hoover quietly but seriously purposes to uncover the workings of that machine, panic reigns in the wet camp! The overwhelming defeat of their champion last fall, staggered them, and they cannot take any more!

Mr. Child naming the Eighteenth Amendment, leaves no doubt that he had that especially in mind. When he compares "this law and normal law," he more than intimates that prohibition is abnormal. He also takes a shot at President Hoover as having "emphasized that no individual has the right to choose which laws he should obey." In other words, Mr. Child affirms that those who belong to the crowd whose "social will" is against prohibition, need not respect the Eighteenth Amendment. Evidently he would warp the mind of the commission chairman in advance, to the wet view. He is afraid of a fair, unbiased decision on the merits of the case.

A. S. HUNTER.

OPENED EYES.

REV. HENRY T. SCHOLL, D. D.

HOW we look at things depends largely upon how we have our eyes opened; and when we reckon up the number of our eyes correctly they sum up six. There is one pair each of physical, mental and spiritual eyes.

Etymologically, a man is one who thinks. What a man is depends largely upon what he thinks; and what he thinks depends mainly upon what he clearly and intelligently sees. Familiar to many is the language of Mrs. Browning:

"Earth's crammed with heaven,

And every common bush afire with God;
But only he who sees, takes off his shoes."

Biology, presumably, is a scheduled study in multitudinous high schools. Bi-ology is the ology of life. Of life, vegetable and animal, God is the author. He "made the earth, and all things therein." God is the author of life and the sustainer thereof. In him all things have their being. "All things were created by him and for him, and he is before all things, and by him all things hold together."

Study now your flower with the conception that God gave it life and form; and that because of his immanence the flower reaches its maturity, and, through normally developend seed, reproduces its kind. In the complete flower you have the essential organs, stamens and pistil; and the protecting organs, corolla and calyx. The stamens, that stand around in a group, are the men of the household, and the pollen contained in their anthers is designed to render fertile the seed nested in the ovary at the base of the pistil.

The study of the plant carries with it a study of the varied methods of bringing the pollen into contact with the immature seed, and a study of the various methods of distributing the seed when matured. The pollen reaches the immature seed by way of the stigma and style; and to reach its destination, through deposition on the stigma, bees are the carriers in some cases, and in other cases butterflies and moths are serviceably employed. A good supply of bumble-bees is needed to guarantee the fertility of red clover seed.

Study plant life with eyes opened Godward, and here are some of the conclusions reached. God is a lover of beauty; or he would not have made so many beautiful flowers. God is a master hand as a designer, or he could not have brought into vital and specific being such a wonderful variety of flowers. God cares for insects, and provides the honey nectar in varied flowers for the life of bees, and for the delight of men. For the benefit of moths, he gives a light color to flowers that they seek in the night, and makes some of them additionally noticeable by their pervading perfume. He has shown his goodness to man in enabling our edible seeds, as rice and wheat and corn, to bring forth a large family, some thirty, some sixty and some a hundred fold.

Study Geology with eyes opened Godward, and note his marvelous goodness to man. Take the first chapter of Genesis, for a general outline of the order followed. Man is the crowning work of creation, and appears near the close of so-called day number six. Myriads of years had been spent in getting the world ready for him. Winds, rain, the action of moving masses of water, and the slow ploughing of massive glaciers were all utilized in working up the soil to a condition of ready cultivation. Meanwhile, by long protracted processes, the earth was stored with petroleum, and with coal, and with limestone, and with copper. Gold and silver were widely distributed for ornamental and mercantile use; and the flashing diamond, by the divine alchemy, has been produced from carbon of like ilk with fuel coal.

Stars visible to the naked eye run up into thousands. Stars discernible by our most powerful telescopes are computed by the millions. "God calls them all by names; because of the greatness of his power not one faileth." These shining stars are suns, some of them bigger than the sun of our own system. Our sun is so big that were the earth placed at its center, and were our moon encircling it at the wonted distance of 240,000 miles, the orbit of the moon would be about half way to the sun's circumference.

The sun is said to be 92½ million miles from the earth. Light reaches us thence in eight and one-third minutes, and from the pole star in 45 years, or thereabouts. According to observations taken in Peru, at the Arequipa station of the Harvard College observatory, we are 110,000 light years distant from the Magellanic group of stars and nebulae, gloriously visible in the southern hemisphere. Light speeds through space at the rate of 186,200 miles per second, and a single light year, accordingly, is six trillion miles. God has infinite wisdom and power for the masterful and beneficent management of all this immensity, and much more additional. He also numbers the hairs of your head and of mine, notes the fall of each individual sparrow, and keeps in correct adjustment the rotating electrons of which superlatively minute atoms are said to be composed.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XXIII.

GOODWILL WAS ON A BOOM.

TIME sped on. Goodwill grew with marvelous rapidity. New sections were plotted into city lots, bought and built upon. The population increased rapidly, the attendance at the university doubled; Huston's church would not hold its growing congregation. His wealth had grown into a large sum and he determined to build a vast gospel plant upon his five acres. He secured excellent architects and started out upon a building program; first of all, a large church, beautiful in its simplicity; the exterior carried in every part the idea of a great house of God. The auditorium provided for the comfortable seating of three thousand people; most ample provisions were made for a very large Sunday school. There was a building on his tract with modest beauty and great comfort for working girls. In one corner of his large lot was a building carefully arranged for homeless men, for the unfortunate to rest his weary body, recuperate his health and spirit and find a place of employment and self-support.

There was a Bible school erected for the training of missionaries and evangelists. He poured his fortune into the enterprise, only retaining sufficient for the support of himself and wife and something to make them comfortable if they should live to a quiet old age.

Huston became the regular pastor of the new church, which was called "The People's Church." He was earnestly solicited to organize and build churches of the same character in many other cities, but he refused to undertake any sort of general organization, always insisting that such churches were impossible without efficient pastors, and that it was not his purpose to undertake to build up a new denomination. He frequently gave lectures on Evolution, exposing the theory, to which hundreds of students came from the university, and became a great annoyance to the president and professors of that institution, all of whom were skeptical with reference to the inspiration of the Bible, and devoted believers in their monkey ancestors.

Huston frequently lectured to packed houses on Modernism, its false and dangerous teachings. He was not a ranter; he did not abuse those with whom he disagreed, but he was a scholar. He had the poise, the emphasis and courage of a man who knew why he believed what he believed, and why he did not believe the popular skeptical teaching which was destroying the faith of multitudes of people who had not been properly instructed, and who were ready to receive almost any teaching that harmonized with their own depraved inclinations and nature.

The years went by, the city grew; in time, it numbered over a hundred thousand people and continued to increase rapidly. The attendance at the university grew, but the president and his professors were greatly annoyed by Huston's church. He held gracious revivals and twice each year had holiness conventions. Many of the university students were converted, not a few of them sanctified, quite a number attended Huston's training school for missionaries and evangelists, and went out to foreign fields with a message of full salvation.

The professors finally decided that the way to undermine and destroy Huston's work was to join his church, appear to be in sympathy with his work, get hold of his young people, and gradually instill into the rising membership of his congregation their skeptical ideas. This is one of the most adroit and successful methods of modernism. They have remarkable patience and are very tactful in the propaganda of their false teaching.

There is a strange something in the young people of today that no one has been quite able to interpret. It is safe to say that it is a mingling of a spirit of disrespect for age, of rebellion against parental government, of conceit and a daring adventure. It is tinged with a strange and unaccountable reckless immodesty. It is something difficult to comprehend, but is a state of mind, not universal to be sure, but very common that offers a very fertile field for the sowing of the seeds of unbelief, and a very general spirit of lawlessness.

A group of professors well acquainted with these facts, took advantage of this state of mind, united themselves with Huston's congregation, took over with them quite a body of young people who were just emerging from the monkey stage, and were thoroughly in sympathy with the enterprise of their skeptical professors, who soon became Sunday school teachers, built up large classes, and gradually carried forward their work of deception and adulteration. They gave entertainments in their homes, they took the young people out on weiner picnics; they had much to say about progress, the new age, the open mind, the up-to-date conception of life, the fumbling of the old and unscientific mind. They selected their brightest young people in the organization of Huston's church, asked them to read certain books and give their opinion. If, at any time, they became a bit impatient, and were too bold in their statements, and any objection was raised, they always pleaded that they had been misunderstood. This is the custom of the modernist. They have very pliable consciences and can assert their faith and devotion most positively when it becomes necessary to do so, in order to hold their position, and carry forward their enterprises in the destruction of the faith.

The years passed rapidly. The professors worked slyly, but diligently. They rejoiced as they sowed the tares among the wheat, and realized that their safest plan of propagating their ideas was never an open attack upon the Bible and saving Christian faith, but the gradual and secret introduction of their unbelief. They were so cultured, so genial, so kind and accommodating, such delightful gentlemen, that within a few years they and their student allies from the university had come to have a very large influence over the young people of Huston's congregation.

Much of the time Huston was away preaching at camp meetings and great revivals; this gave them the better opportunity. They always expressed great admiration for him to his face, and concern for his health, lest he should overwork, the importance of an assistant pastor, secretaries and visitors who would relieve his burdens.

The years had sped and Huston was now well past his fiftieth birthday. The burdens he had carried had told upon his physical strength. His beautiful wife, who had been so true a helpmeet, so constant and faithful in her support and assistance in all of his work, had a nervous breakdown. Under the advice of physicians he made a hasty flight with her to the southwest. It became necessary to appoint an assistant pastor. The college professors who had worked their way into the Sunday school, and several of them on the official board, seized the opportunity in his distress and haste, to suggest, temporarily, a man of their own choice. He was a highly educated young modernist who boasted his belief in the Apostles' Creed, but did not think it was necessary to find fault with scholars who were pushing out into new fields of thought and discovery, with reference to the inspiration of the Scriptures, and spiritual life here and hereafter.

Huston spent several months with his wife in the far west; in spite of his loving care and all that the most skillful physicians could do, his beautiful and devoted Ida faded and died. She passed away in triumph, with a beautiful testimony. His heart was rent asunder. It seemed that the impossible had occurred. He had always comforted himself with the thought that he would go first. He wandered about in desolation. He made no complaint against God, meanwhile, but for the fact of his church and beloved people, he would have been glad to have gone to his beloved Christ up to the paradise at peace and rest.

A few weeks after the death of his wife, he returned to his church which received him with the tenderest sympathy. No one was so ready to comfort and help him, as the assistant pastor. He was advised to take several months rest; for years he had labored incessantly; he had carried heavy burdens; he had had no vacation, now he must take time, both for soul and body, to recuperate and gird himself for the home run of his great life of service.

So, through the advice of physicians and friends, after a few weeks with his beloved people, Huston took a three months' vacation. He spent some time in Southern California, stayed a while in New Orleans, wandered into Florida, and finally, somewhat improved and refreshed, he returned to his beloved church.

Meanwhile, the new pastor, with the university professors, and the rapidly growing young people of the church, had made great progress in the church; two of the faithful old stewards had died, university professors had been placed in their stead, and others were so old they seldom attended official meetings.

During Huston's absence, pageants had been introduced into the church, and had fairly swept the young people away from their spiritual moorings; these same young people had, for some time, been training up their parents in the way they should go, who were now insisting that if the young people did not get entertainment in the churches, they would go outside to seek the same and the results would be far worse than if they brought select entertainments into the church, instead of having the young people to seek inferior and, perhaps, immoral entertainments on the outside.

To his surprise, Huston found that great changes had come among his people, many of whom had been among his substantial supporters, were now having much to say about a new and progressive age, and the fact that young people could not be tied down to old exploded ideas and customs which were entirely outgrown. He was grieved in his heart; he was conscious of great loss of physical vigor, and scarcely knew what to do.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION ANNUAL.

The Sixty-second Annual Meeting and Convention of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness was held at Wilmore, Ky., May 7-12, 1929.

The Convention met in public service at the M. E. Church, South. We were royally entertained at Asbury College where also our Boards and Committees met. Rev. O. C. Seevers, pastor, and Dr. L. R. Akers, President of Asbury College, were untiring in their efforts to make our stay memorable.

Representatives were present from coast to coast, and from North and South. A wonderful spirit of unity prevailed in the various sessions. Heaven's refreshing showers were felt in the most strenuous business hours, as well as in the direct Evangelistic meetings.

The proposed amendment to the Constitution was not adopted, but in its stead a by-law was added which looks toward the creating of a National Council of one hundred and twenty to function under the National Association for pushing the battle of holiness. A full report of this by-law will be given by W. W. Cary, of Chicago.

A resolution concerning present day conditions of faith and doctrine was presented by Dr. Andrew Johnson. It was accepted, and ordered printed in our various publications.

The preachers were under the anointing; and God poured his great truths of a full Salvation through them. The opening sermon of the Convention was given by Dr. L. R. Akers who struck the keynote of vital Godliness, Holiness, powerful and practical. Every speaker rang clear and true, lifting up the Christ of God, whose blood cleanses from all sin.

Rev. Joseph H. Smith conducted the "School of Prophets," daily, and preached Sunday morning. The speakers for Sunday afternoon and night were Rev. C. W. Butler and Dr. Morrison. Other night sermons were given by Revs. John Owen, J. L. Brasher, John Paul, and Paul Rees. Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Hogle, and Mrs. B. C. Beesley ably represented the missionary department. Revs. Iva D. Vennard, Anna L. Spann, and Jennie Duryea added to the strength and blessing of the Convention. Many other Evangelists, pastors, teachers, and missionaries gave their prayerful and helpful attendance.

The devotional and praise services were favored with choice messengers of music. Evangelist W. R. Hallman from Chicago led the Convention singing. He was supported by a large orchestra, and by members of two College glee clubs. Several special soloists, among whom were Ruth Harris Bennett, Magdalene De Bour, Rachel Gillespie, and M. V. Lewis, gave messages of hope and gladness.

The attendance was large from the beginning, and the presence of God was manifest in convicting, converting and sanctifying power. The altar services were victorious and some souls entered in while the preacher was preaching. The spiritual tide ran high again and again and when it came time for election there was marked evidence of the leading of the Holy Spirit in the choice for President.

The election resulted as follows: President—Rev. C. W. Butler, D. D., Cleveland, O. Secretary—Rev. John A. Duryea, Binghamton, N. Y. Treasurer—Mr. Ludwig Anderson, Hannibal, Mo. Corresponding Secretary—Rev. O. W. Rose, Cooksville, Ill.

Auditor—Rev. E. O. Rice, Upland, Ind. Vice Presidents:

Rev. John Paul, D. D., Upland, Ind.
Rev. C. W. Ruth, Los Angeles, Calif.
Rev. Iva D. Vennard, D. D., Chicago, Ill.
Rev. Paul Rees, Detroit, Mich.
Rev. H. C. Morrison, D. D., Louisville, Ky.

Corresponding Secretary.

REPORT.

After a few days at our home in Kentucky, we went to Clanton, Ala., beginning April 14. The pastor, Rev. E. A. Childs, is one of the most lovable characters it has been our privilege to be associated with. The church is well organized and, which is more important, the emphasis is laid upon spiritual life. His brother, Rev. H. P. Childs, from Pensacola, was to do the preaching, but on account of sickness was unable to preach but a few times, and the pastor nobly responded to the occasion.

We specialized on the young people's work and at our services for young people each night at 6:30 the attendance was remarkable and the interest very encouraging. We used our chalk talk sermons each night. All of these young people came to the main auditorium for the following service and composed a splendid choir, which on the last night numbered two hundred. The church was much revived, and several joined the church.

From Clanton we went to Birmingham for a week where we were singing each day for the Radio Revival from Station WBRC, and at night were with the meeting at the Ensley Tabernacle.

Glenn V. Tingley is pastor of the tabernacle and also chaplain of WBRC. He is doing a great work in Birmingham. Each day came scores of letters telling of the good which had come from the radio services. Many had been saved; in fact, I believe that there were nearly one hundred who wrote in that they had been converted through the medium of these services. Some of the letters were pitiful in the extreme. People who felt that the church had no place for them, yet heard the gospel at home and believed. There were about thirty saved in the week at the Tabernacle. Rev. A. A. Smith, from Tampa, was the evangelist in charge.

We are now at Crestview, Fla., with an Asbury boy, O. H. Vanlandingham. We are praying for a good revival. From here we go to Pensacola with Rev. H. P. Childs, and from there to our meeting at DeLeon Springs which has been changed several times this spring.

The Herald has been of untold benefit to us in our evangelistic work. Nearly all our calls have come through it, and we are enthusiastic boosters everywhere we go.

R. P. Marshall.

CAMPTON, KENTUCKY.

Our meeting at Campton began with fair interest and in a few nights the house was filled and chairs were placed in the aisles. The people seemed to be ready for the meeting and were anxious to see real victory.

In answer to real soul travail on the part of the pastor, Bro. Lee, and his wife with a number of others we were made to praise the Lord for genuine victory. There was more demonstration of the Holy Spirit in old-fashioned shouting than I have seen for a long time. It is a delight to work with such people. They did not wait for the meeting to get cleared up in their experience. Some would come to the church shouting and leave the same way. We are surely grateful for such outpouring of the Holy Spirit as we saw there.

Conviction came in answer to prayer. We were called out of bed to go to pray with some that were under pungent conviction, and about midnight we saw them find victory. The singing was led by Bro. R. M. Baldwin, an Asbury graduate. He is surely fine. The singing on the part of the people was the best of any church that I have been privileged to hear for some time.

I am quite busy with a heavy slate for the summer. Remember us at a throne of grace that we may see many find victory in saving and sanctifying grace.

J. R. Parker.

A GREAT PENTECOSTAL REVIVAL IN SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS, BY THE ROBERTS EVANGELISTIC PARTY.

As a Southern Methodist preacher, the writer is taking the liberty of giving The Pentecostal Herald readers some account of the most remarkable religious movement he has ever witnessed. Manifestly it is nothing less than the power of God.

The Roberts Evangelistic Party opened in a spacious tabernacle seating 3000 people, January 20, 1929. Evangelist C. E. Roberts and his wife, May T. Roberts, are unquestionably God's chosen vessels. For something like thirty years they have led many great gospel campaigns, but those who have followed up their labors closely declare that this mighty awakening in the Alamo City is the most wonderful of all.

From the actual records, the writer has learned that, to date, there have been between five and six thousand converts. Hundreds of sick people are being divinely healed. Each succeeding day adds additional numbers both to the saved and the healed. More than three-score men and women have been delivered from the tobacco habit and completely lost the desire for it. Three divorced couples have been reunited in marriage and set up family altars where the voice of prayer was never heard before.

This great revival has continued for more than sixteen weeks without one night's interruption, regardless of the weather; the fact is, there has been a constantly growing interest from the beginning, and the end is not yet. The meetings have gained such volume and momentum that Evangelist Roberts has been urged by hundreds of good and substantial Christian citizens to dismiss any thought of discontinuing. They feel that the great work has only fairly begun, and Evangelist Roberts himself says that he sees no closing in sight, and will continue indefinitely, doubtless through the summer. The morning meetings are attended by hundreds, and at night, there are great throngs of people, while every Sunday night the tabernacle is literally packed, and many standing outside who cannot get in.

They broadcast over KGRC seven times a week, and many have reported that they have been converted or have received healing for the body during the messages over the radio. Roman Catholics are attending the meetings in large numbers, and many have testified that they have been saved or healed. In addition, some prominent Jews have been converted and healed through faith in Christ. The messages given by these consecrated servants of Christ, Brother and Sister Roberts, are accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit, as their heart-searching appeals come both in song and sermon.

This writer has never had any sort of sympathy with religious fads, and has never been swept off his feet by any sort of shallow or superficial sensationalism; has no part nor lot with religious fanatics, and is solemnly pledged to "be ready with all faithful diligence to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines, contrary to God's word;" at the same time, he herewith bears record that he has never before seen such marvelous displays of divine power as exhibited in the Roberts' meetings. Having witnessed for a number of days the unusual and remarkable scenes that are daily enacted, and heard scores of ringing testimonies from perfectly sane and intelligent people to the healing, as well as to the saving power of the gospel, he has been divested of all preconceived notions and wholly disarmed of all prejudices. For what shall we do with our notions and prejudices when we look face to face upon people who were all but blind and deaf, and others who were born lame or totally crippled, now seeing and hearing, and walking?

For six consecutive weeks, while a young missionary pastor in this same city many years ago, the writer was in a great revival conducted by Dwight L. Moody; some years later, he was in a great meeting in another city with R. A. Torrey; was in two different revivals conducted by Geo. R. Stewart, and in the mighty revivals led by that great preacher and master of assemblies, Sam P. Jones; but these meetings at the Robert's Tabernacle are attended with greater power than any he has ever witnessed.

The work being done in San Antonio by Evangelists C. E. Roberts and May T. Roberts is, by every token, a most remarkable and marvelous religious movement. Pentecost is being re-enacted right down here in San Antonio, at the Robert's Tabernacle.

HENDERSON, KENTUCKY.

I closed a very fine meeting in Henderson, Ky., April 30. There were several fine cases of pardon and purify and the first week from all indications it looked as if we were in the throes of a real revival, but the Rubin and Cherry Carnival show of 32 railroad cars came and set up in one block of the tabernacle and drew the larger percent of the people away and spoiled our larger possibilities; however we had some victories down to the close. Such carnivals as Rubin and Cherry's is a curse to any town or city and should not be allowed to come into them.

We were invited the last Sunday morning by the Mayor of the beautiful city of Henderson and his Assistant leader, Mr. Robert McGregor, who was in Peniel College when the writer was connected with it, to speak to the large Men's Bible Class in the First Methodist Church, South, for twenty-five minutes. We had a fine class of men and they received my message on Isa. 53, with much enthusiasm and interest. I have not seen Brother McGregor in 23 years, but he still bears the marks of a holiness college and is a Christian gentleman. The Mayor and Brother "Bob" drove down to the hotel for me and took me back. It was a most delightful privilege to speak to them.

I also had in our services Rev. Henry Higgin and his good wife, former pastors of Clay Street Methodist Church, South, during the years when it was the center of holiness for the city and conference. I visited with them and was never treated more kindly. They are still rejoicing in the victory of a full salvation. That church is now called the "Bennett Memorial Church." Bro. Napier, the good pastor, is a holiness man and shouted us on when he could be with us. The new pastor of the Nazarene Church and his wife rendered valuable service, also Bro. T. J. Poole.

His and yours,
J. B. McBride.

A GOOD MEETING.

We were engaged by Rev. J. A. Johnson, of Depoy, Ky., to hold him a revival in the church at Powderly, Ky., a little mining town on the I. C. R. R., ten miles South of Central City, Ky. Our attendance was small at the beginning but soon the crowds came, conviction got hold of the people; some prayed through at the altar; two mothers with small children came and God blessed their hearts and they rejoiced. Some twenty or thirty people would ask for prayer at a service. Many thought the meeting ought to go on. The people were greatly discouraged and wanted to give up. Their church had no Sunday school. We encouraged them to hold to their little church; they organized a Sunday school with fifty enrolled, three joined the Church. Many wept as we said good bye. There are some as fine people in Powderly as can be found on earth. We were entertained in the best homes. The mines were having a hard time, mines running only one and two days a week.

We are planning a tent meeting with Brother Johnson soon.

MONTGOMERY, LOUISIANA.

I have just returned from Montgomery, La. We had some fine services. Thirty-three years ago I was pastor there and we had a great year; 1000 converted, 300 sanctified, and 354 joined the church. I found some still true to God. I was sorry they had let the camp go down. Dr. Morrison held a meeting there. That year I had thirteen places to preach. Five were called to preach that year. I located that year and went into the evangelistic work. Any one needing a meeting, let me know. God bless The Herald.

such advantage as when he possesses a deluded, highly educated, polished, attractive preacher who sets himself to destroy the faith of the people in the inspiration of the Word of God, the Deity, sacrificial sufferings and atoning merit brought to lost and sinful men through the Son of God. It matters not how scholarly, how eloquent, how plausible and pleasing the man in the pulpit, when he denies the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, the Godhead, and atoning merit of our crucified, risen and mediating Saviour, he is under the influence of the Devil. He has sown tares in the wheatfields of our Lord. He may appear as an angel of light, but he is, in fact, the emissary of the powers of darkness.

Let it be remembered that the Devil is old, but not enfeebled. He is a powerful spirit, a liar, a deceiver, the accuser; he can appear as an angel of light. He has had marvelous success in the destruction of human beings. He did not hesitate to attack the Son of God with his temptations. He will attack you, my dear reader. You cannot meet and resist him in your own strength; your spiritual house must be kept by the presence and power of the Holy Ghost. May a compassionate and merciful God save you from the snares of the Devil.

“As Thy Days, So Shall Thy Strength BE.”

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE above taken from Deut. 33: 25, is one of the most wonderful promises contained in Holy Writ. It should quiet all of our fearful forebodings as to whether we shall be able for the conflicts that lie ahead of us.

The Lord says to us, practically, no matter what the coming days may bring, whether sorrow, disappointment, suffering, bereavement or abandonment, there will come alongside of these disagreeable and testing experiences the all-sufficient grace that will in every way more than equal the trials through which you shall have to pass.

One of the titles given to the Holy Spirit is that of Paraclete, which means “one who stands by our side to help.” And so the above promise is really the promise that we shall not be tempted above that we are able to bear, but the blessed Paraclete will be there by our side to see that we are not engulfed in the waves of temptation that shall sweep over us.

Have you not found in your past experiences wonderful surprises of this “strengthening” when you have been called to pass through sore and unexpected trials? Have you not been amazed at yourself, how you stood up under the load and the burden that was laid upon you? Well, that is proof that God furnished the strengthening grace just when you most needed it, and so he will through all the coming days whose unfoldings are yet to be made.

One could all but covet trials just to have the comfort and joy of experiencing the strengthening grace that accompanies them. Daniel would not have known the joy of deliverance had he not been cast into the den of lions. Paul and Silas could not have sung the sweet hymns of praise had they not been in the prison's dungeon. As the crushed geranium gives forth its sweetest fragrance, so the crushed spirit sings its sweetest songs in the night time.

Some one has said that Jenny Lind thrilled her audiences because she sang out of a broken heart. It takes the mellowing, soulful experiences of life to attune us to the harmony of other broken lives. Only the grief-stricken can enter into the heart burdens of the bereaved ones. Jesus went all the lengths of human suffering, tempted in all points like as we are, in order that he might succor us when under the tempter's cruel power.

I recently came across a beautiful poem bearing on the above subject with which I shall close this meditation, believing it will be a blessing to all who read it.

“AS THY DAYS.”

“Do thy weary footsteps falter,
Does the path seem steep and hard,
Dost thou long to drop the crosses,
And fly Home to thy reward?”

“Lift thy heart in holy courage,
Let thy faith the promise see,
For His good word never faileth:
‘As thy days, thy strength shall be.’

“Weak and faint, does life seem ebbing,
Does all hope of vic'try flee?
Fear not, O beloved toiler,
‘As thy days, thy strength shall be.’

“Does the mountain path grow rougher?
Still the Lord hath need of thee;
He hath trod the steeps of Calvary;
‘As thy days, thy strength shall be.’

“Does the tempest beat more fiercely?
Still shall stand His blest decree,
All the waves shall not o'erwhelm thee;
‘As thy days, thy strength shall be.’

“Hush thy heart in sweet abiding,
Let all doubt and sorrow flee;
Sink to rest upon His bosom,
‘All his strength shall be for thee.’”

Correction!

In May 22 issue of THE HERALD containing the 7th Chapter of Dr. Biederwolf's articles on the Bible, the head of this chapter was printed “Its Absolute Destruction,” when it should have been “Its Absolute Indestructibility.” We regret this oversight, but gladly call attention to it, that no one may be misled.—Editor.

Attention! Sunday School Teachers!

One of the most popular, sound and helpful commentaries on the Sunday School Lessons is “Arnold's Practical Commentary.” I have used this book almost exclusively for many years, and although I have access to most every Commentary on the market, I consider this the most practical, orthodox, spiritual in its interpretation and application of any book I have examined. There are many Sunday school teachers who have not seen this book, and we are writing to advise you to try a copy for the rest of the year, and I am sure we shall have your order early in the year for the 1930 edition. The regular price is $1.00, but owing to the fact that the year is nearly half gone, we are offering the few copies we have left in stock, for only 60 cents! This can be used when through with the Lessons for prayer meeting talks, or helpful suggestions on most any subject. I have been practicing what I am preaching for many years, hence I have no apology for seeking to introduce you to this helpful companion—Arnold's Practical Commentary!

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Constitution Day at The National Holiness Convention.

THE National Association for the Promotion of Holiness devoted all of Wednesday, May the 8th, as “Constitution Day” to the consideration of a memorandum which had been presented to the September meeting in Chicago, and had received wide publicity. There is no better proof of the growing interest in the work of the National than the number of discussions and proposals from every portion of America and even from mission fields that grew out of this memorandum.

Dr. C. W. Butler, president of the National, called on W. W. Cary, chairman of the committee, to report on the committee's action. Mr. Cary stated that the committee had individually gathered opinions and judgments from every possible source. The memorandum in its original form was by no one regarded as a fixed plan, but rather to be provocative of thought. After prayer the committee entered into a discussion of the best means of carrying out the central idea, which was to enlarge the interest in and attendance at the annual meeting of the National; and to devise some practical method whereby men and women from coast to coast who enjoy the experience of entire sanctification, should give thought, prayer and effort to promoting holiness in every form of activity. First, in every direct evangelistic campaign, such as are promoted by the National itself in a series of conventions to be held in various parts of America; in all individual campaigns and churches, camp meetings, etc., where scriptural holiness is earnestly preached. Next, in promoting the interests of holiness churches of every denomination; of training schools and colleges that maintain the doctrine of holiness; of publications and missionary enterprises under the great banner of holiness unto the Lord. In committee the discussion was general as to the best method whereby to unite in fellowship and in a concerted effort behind the National every denominational and interdenominational interest in the movement. In the words of President Butler, it was agreed that the higher and more inclusive interdenominational spirit should dominate our advance. The committee after much open and frank discussion formulated a resolution upon which all agreed with the most remarkable unanimity. It was felt by every member of the committee that the Holy Spirit was present directing and dictating the thoughts and actions of all, and after the resolution was drafted a great prayer of thanksgiving went up to God for that direction.

The resolution was as follows:

Resolved, that there shall be a National Council of One Hundred and Twenty to supplement and reinforce the work of the Executive Council, to be selected by an Appointing Committee of nine chosen by the Administrative Board, the President of the National being the Ex-Officio member of this Committee and presiding when present.

Resolved, that the representative membership of the National in its Annual Meeting shall be invited to file nominations for this Council from their respective states or sections of the nation.

Resolved, that in selecting the membership of this Council of One Hundred and Twenty, the Appointing Committee be instructed to take into consideration, not only territorial distribution but distribution among the various schools, state organizations, camp meetings, evangelists, missionary movements and periodicals and churches or denominations standing for the testimony which the National represents.

Resolved, that the activities and meetings of the membership of this Council of One Hundred and Twenty and their sectioning, be directed by the President of the National, with the advice of the Administrative Board.

This Council of One Hundred and Twenty shall meet annually in conjunction with the Annual Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness.

The members of this Council shall be appointed to serve for a term of four years and shall be eligible for re-appointment.

The Appointment Committee shall have power to supply vacancies from year to year, also to discontinue any member at any time upon proper evidence of their being no longer qualified to act on said Council.

Members appointed on the Council shall be notified of their appointment, together with full information as to its object, and the duties involved. Upon acceptance of said appointment and the duties involved, the member shall be duly qualified.

Never had a committee reported to the National with any greater feeling that the members had not worked as individual human beings, but had been directly guided and inspired by the blessed Holy Spirit. The work of the National is promoting the indwelling of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of believers, and, because every member of this committee earnestly sought guidance, the prayer was granted in an abundant measure and every one went out from that meeting feeling that his presence had been marvelously manifested.

Following this report a brief discussion upon the floor of the convention was had. The discussion largely took the form of questions relative to the meaning of various phases. It was pointed out that since this was not a change in the constitution of the National, but rather a by-law to be added, it was correct procedure to discuss it in one session and to vote upon it in another session in accordance with the terms of the constitution. The amazing thing was that every speaker and questioner stated, "I am in favor of this plan." It was pointed out that the number of one hundred and twenty was selected in commemoration of the number of those gathered in the upper room at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost. This point profoundly affected the entire assemblage. Dr. Lewis Akers made a speech seconding the resolution, President C. W. Butler spoke briefly in favor of the general plan. Men from the Atlantic coast and the Pacific Northwest arose to express their complete accord and the session was adjourned. After a short recess the president, C. W. Butler, called the convention into session. On motion the proposal of the committee for the Council of One Hundred and Twenty was offered. The President called for a rising vote and with the same remarkable unanimity as shown in the committee meeting, the entire assembly rose to their feet voting "Aye," whereupon spontaneously there burst out a great chorus of "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." It was felt by all that the National had been guided in the discussion by the Holy Spirit; that this resolution had been prepared directly under His control and was not the work of men's hands, but was of the Spirit. It may safely be stated that the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness has taken a forward step, the fruit of which will never be known in its entirety by man, until we bow before the throne of Christ our Lord and hear His commendations of our service in his dear name.

To Every Reader of The Herald.

Friends: I have done my best for Christ's sake, in writing a tract on Gambling. It is barely off the press, sells for only 25c. It is the very best sermon I could preach against gambling and social cards, and I believe it is as much inspired as anything I ever said or wrote.

Won't you please write now to THE HERALD for a copy, read it, every word of it, then do just two things—first send in an order for from a dozen to a hundred, and sell or give away among your people. Also write me, at least a card and tell me you read it, and what you think of it.

I heard of a colored preacher who was talking about the rabbit that climbed a pine. One of his stewards arose and corrected him and said, that was a slip, parson, for a rabbit, you know, can't climb. The pastor heard him through and replied that ordinarily that was true, but on this occasion the dogs were so close in behind the rabbit, that he just fairly had to climb.

Somehow I feel that the needs of our church, so got in behind me that I just fairly had to write against gambling.

And if you don't get and read this tract, I hope you will lose every bet you make from now on, and forever.

THE HERALD will make a reduction if you order in quantities, and besides all this I have three other books nearly ready for the press, and need what I have put on Gambling to help on these others.

Then the pastor told about Kant's first book and its conclusions, and about his subsequent reversal of position in regard to the existence of God.

The young man then began to assert his denial of God, when the pastor stopped him and said:

"There is something else back of all this: tell me the whole story."

When the boy hesitated, his pastor said: "You went to college, and you began to drink, didn't you?"

"Yes."

"You lost money at cards?"

His pastor knew this and was prepared for the answer, "Yes."

"You did some other things of which you are not now proud?"

"Yes."

And when you did all those things, you began to disbelieve in God? Isn't it a fact that you had to get rid of God in order to escape a guilty and a troubled conscience?

You see the young fellow did not think his way into infidelity. Real thinking never lands a man in a place like that. The thing that usually leads to scepticism is the thing that makes the soul uncomfortable in the presence of God and that thing as a rule is sin. There are exceptions, but this is the rule. And instead of repenting and getting right with God men will brazenly deny the existence of God and rule the Bible out of court.

It is your privilege to be sceptical if you arrive honestly but you must come clean, and I serve notice now that when a man begins to flippantly deny the existence of God and to find fault with the Bible and turns his little garden hose of his own self-esteem, colossal and stupendous intellect upon the other world in frantic, futile endeavor to put out the fires of judgment, people of real thought and observation begin to suspect that his chief trouble is in his heart and not in his head.

There was an old Frenchman by the name of Lepaux who tried to get up a new religion. He called it "Theo-philanthropy," and he complained to Talleyrand that it made but little headway among the people, and the shrewd old statesman replied, "I am not surprised at the difficulty you find in your effort. It is no easy matter to introduce a new religion. But there is one thing I would advise you to do, and then, perhaps, you might succeed."

"What is it? What is it?" cried Lepaux in great excitement.

"Well," said Talleyrand, "It is this; go and be crucified and then be buried and rise again on the third day, and then go on working miracles, raising the dead, casting out devils and healing all manner of disease, and then if possible you may accomplish your end." And the old philosopher went away silent.

And so it is with the Bible. The fact that man never wrote a better one is a mighty strong argument in its favor. If man made the Bible he ought to be able to make just as good a one today. He ought to be able to make a better one. That is so by the very law of development.

Think of the little smattering of knowledge they had in their day as compared with ours. Science had not yet unlocked for them the doors of nature; the stars above and the rocks below withheld their secrets from them, and yet one is simply dumbfounded and staggered at the intelligence with which the Bible handles almost every problem that confronts the human race.

And so I say, Let the infidel, the agnostic, the materialist and the atheist with all the knowledge of the twentieth century at their command write a better book than the Bible or at least one just as good or hold their peace.

Yes. I believe the Bible is the Word of God because the best people in the world accept it as such and the better the people are the more they believe it.

And now, my friends, since this Book is the Word of God, it is mighty important for you to know what it has to say about the great question which occupied our minds at the beginning of these addresses.

It is this Book that gives to you the only possible and positive assurance of a life beyond the grave. But it has more to say. It says that man was born in sin and shapen in iniquity, and that we have all sinned and come short of the glory of God, that the wages of sin is eternal death and that without holiness no man shall see God.

But, thank God, it shows us a way out of the dilemma. Lord Kelvin was the greatest scientist the British Empire ever had. He gave to the world more scientific discoveries than perhaps any other man who has ever lived. One day somebody asked him what was the greatest discovery he ever made, and he replied, "The greatest discovery I ever made is the fact that the Lord Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief."

And this Book says that this same Saviour is yours, if you will let Him be, and mine if I will take Him as such.

What a Book it is!

"Thou truest friend man ever knew;

Thy constancy I have tried;

When all were false I found thee true,

My counsellor and guide.

"The mines of earth no treasure give

That can this volume buy

In teaching me the way to live

It taught me how to die."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:

It seems that old winter is slow in letting go his grasp, as it is late in the spring and we are still having fire. I suppose we who have been in the warm, sunny climate of Florida feel it more keenly than those who have been here through the extremely cold weather.

We went to Asbury College and attended the National Holiness Convention and enjoyed hearing the good sermons from various preachers of the Holiness Movement. Dr. Morrison preached the closing sermon on Sunday night and it sounded much like his old time vigor and earnestness. If it were not for the cool, damp weather we have been having he would be improving rapidly, but such weather is not good for his bronchial trouble and it keeps him from getting well as quickly as he otherwise would.

I suppose most of you are out of school until next fall, so you will have to find something to while away the time during your vacation. Be sure to lend a helping hand to father and mother, and seize every spare moment you have to read something good and instructive. Do not idle away your time, for we are told that "An idle brain is the Devil's workshop," and I know you do not want the Devil to be working around your premises. One of the best ways to keep from doing wrong is to be busy doing that which is right, thus you not only keep out of mischief, but you are improving yourself as well.

I suggest that you who write letters this summer, take great pains to write them neatly, spell your words correctly, and make them as interesting as you possibly can. This will be good training for you, and will help to improve your otherwise idle moments.

With lots of love, I am,

Devotedly,

AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. I am a Kentucky girl. My teacher gets The Pentecostal Herald; I read page ten and it has some fine letters on it. I have yellow hair, fair skin, and blue eyes. I am twelve years old. Miss Eva Rhodus is my teacher. She is a fine teacher. I am in the seventh grade. My birthday is January 3. Have I a twin? If I have write and tell me. I thank God that he has given me grace to serve him. We all need Jesus Christ for a friend. I joined church last Sunday. It seemed as if Christ wanted me to give my life to him, and let him have his way. Christ died on the cross for all of us, and I feel that we should serve him. Here are some verses I made.

Down came the little snow-flakes
Tumbling one by one,
As one was coming from the sky, it said,
"Aren't we having fun?"

God sent them down from Heaven
To fall on fields and trees,
To see them playing is pretty,
But oh, it makes me freeze.

I think they are so pretty,
Because God took such pain
To make the beautiful snowflakes
And let them fall like rain.

God made them out of raindrops;
He let them freeze so white,
And sent them down to earth
To make the earth look bright.

I think they look like diamonds,
As they tumble from the sky;
I'd rather see them than diamonds
None loves them more than I.

The beautiful little snowflakes
Are made by God's own hand,
I'm sure they had such lovely fun,
Tumbling down to land.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I don't take the paper but my grandfather does and he thinks it is a fine paper. He likes Dr. Morrison's talks. I sure do enjoy reading page ten. I have dark brown hair, blue eyes and am a brunette. I weigh about seventy pounds. I am eleven years old and I have been wondering if I had a twin? If so, please write to me. My birthday is June 22. I am in the sixth grade at school. I love to go to school, I went to school every day this year. I am fond of horseback riding. I have two pets, a dog and a cat. My dog's name is "Bill." I would like for the cousins to write me. I will try to answer all letters I receive.

Eva Glen Rush.
Trammel, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes an eight-year-old girl from Michigan to join your happy band of boys and girls. This is my first letter to The Herald. Some one sends my father The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to the Skeels Baptist Church and I go to the Skeels school. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with E, and has six letters in it. I hope Mr. W. B. does not get my letter.

Thelma Easton.
Gladwin, Mich.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl nine years old. I live on a farm. We raise cotton, corn, peanuts and strawberries. I go to Sunday school nearly every Sunday. I have a little baby brother and I like to rock him to sleep. With love to the cousins.

Marguerite Nell Watts.
Pleasant Plains, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a North Carolina girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have blue eyes, light brown hair, and a few freckles. I am nine years old. My birthday is July 1. My oldest sister's birthday is July 2. My mother takes The Herald. We never knew about The Herald till two years ago when an evangelist, Mr. Young, was here, who went to Asbury College. I go to the Nazarene Church. My Sunday school teacher's name is Miss Grace Nelson. She certainly is nice. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with C and ends with E, and has nine letters in it. I hope Mr. W. B. is sick in a hospital when this letter arrives. God bless Aunt Bettie and all of the cousins.

Elaine C. Carlson.
Mohall, No. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to The Herald. I'm twelve years old and in the seventh grade. I have blue eyes, brown hair, fair complexion. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My teacher's name is Mrs. Britzius. I belong to the Evangelical Church. Our pastor's name is Rev. Gains. Thelma G. Boozie, I guess your middle name to be Grace. M. Mae Mortain, I guess your middle name to be Macie. I hope W. B. isn't lonesome.

Coral Chapin.
Kidder, So. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Is your dog bad? If so, hold him till I get in. I thought I would write again as I very seldom see any letters from Maryland. This is the second time I have written to The Herald. I am a boy of thirteen and have dark eyes and hair, and am five feet, three inches tall. I am Christian and belong to the M. E. Church. Aunt Bettie, I hope you locked the door so Mr. W. B. can't get this letter. Write me all of your cousins and I will try to answer all letters received.

Raymond Higgins.
Box 11, Neavitt, Md.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you move over a little and let me sit down for a little chat with you and the cousins? I am a lonesome Carolina girl wishing to correspond with some of the boys and girls who read The Herald. I read it and think it is a fine paper. I love to read page ten. I am five feet, three inches tall, weigh one hundred and fifteen pounds, have blue eyes, fair complexion and golden yellow hair. I am sixteen years old. I have two sisters, Mother and Dad. I live in a pretty little place with hills covered with yellow Jessamine and wild honey suckle in the summer days. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with F and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. Whoever guesses it I will send them a snapshot of myself. Aunt Bettie, please print this letter, for I am lonesome and want to get lots and lots of letters.

Your want-to-be friend,

Nellie F. Rawls.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a girl from Vermont. My age is ten. I have light hair and blue eyes and light complexion. My birthday is April 24. Have I a twin? If so, write me. Howard Myers, I guess your middle name to be Charles.

Agnes Tassie.
So. Woodbury, Vt.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Can an Ohio girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is the first letter I have written to you, and I hope to see it in print. I am eleven years old, and I am in the sixth grade. I like school very well. One thing I like to do best is to win souls for Christ. I belong to the Methodist Church, and also the Sin Haters' Band which I attend every two weeks. In these meetings many boys and girls are saved from sin. I am glad I have a praying mother and father. They are the ones that kept me from going out into the world. I would be glad if any of my cousins would write to me. If you will write I will be glad to answer. I will close with God's richest blessings upon you all.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Just finished reading the Boys and Girls' Page of The Herald. I am surely glad so many of the cousins are Christians. May God bless and keep you always faithful. I am a Christian and find Jesus very precious to my soul. Here are a few questions that I thought would be interesting for the cousins to answer about Bible Biography. Who are the most noted persons of the period of the Patriarchs? Who are the most noted persons of the period of the Theocracy? Who are the most noted persons of the period of organization and extension? How many cousins have read the biography of H. C. Morrison? I have, and enjoyed it very much. I will be glad to hear from any of the cousins.

Martha Hanson.
Rt. 1, Twin Brooks, S. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Cousins, don't you remember me, an Idaho girl? Well, I'm coming again. Do many of you cousins like to play in the snow? I do. My father made my brothers and me a pair of skids and we have a great time with them, only there are four children to ride on one pair of skids, but I guess we will survive it, don't you? Elizabeth Jones, I guess your first name to be Diana. If so, remember your promise. Joe Shaefer, I guess your middle name to be Harold. If I am right please write.

Lois Sadoff.
Rt. 4, Moscow, Idaho.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am six years of age, have light hair, brown eyes, fair complexion, and weigh thirty-five pounds. My birthday is November 22. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with D and ends with E, and has five letters in it. I am in the third grade at school.

Velma D. Oliver.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XII.—June 23, 1929.

Subject.—A Psalm of Praise. Psalms 103:1-113.

Golden Text.—Bless the Lord, O my soul. Psalm 103:1.

Time and Place unknown.

Introduction.—Our praises and our petitions are out of proportion. Were we not such everlasting beggars, we would get more and better answers to our prayers. Most public prayers remind one of a customer in an apartment store calling for a hundred different things without stopping to learn if the house carries any of them. We pray like we are wild and finish up with an emphatic Amen, but forget to find out whether or not God paid any attention to us. Such praying is careless, may be foolish, and sometimes lacking in reverence.

Worship enlarges the soul. Communion with good and great men and women makes us wiser and better. It was impossible to associate with E. M. Bounds or Frances Willard without receiving some spiritual enlargement. Bishop W. R. Lambuth pushed his big soul into other men's souls until they almost burst asunder. If profound respect for, and intimate communion with, the good and great of earth so enlarge us, how can we be little if we are in constant communion with Deity? It is impossible. All great worshippers of God are great. Men always partake of the object of their worship. The story of the young man who came to resemble The Great Stone Face, rests upon this singular truth. We find the apostle Paul dealing with the same truth in 2 Cor. 3:18: "But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." If the object of our worship be vile, we shall be degraded. If we praise the Infinite God, we shall be enlarged. Not only does the soul go out to the object of its adoration; but it brings back into its own being the nature of the object it worships. One often sees husband and wife so adore each other, that in course of time they look like twins. The heathen worships his idols till he shrinks to unhuman proportions. The covetous man worships dollars till his soul becomes hard and shrivelled, and his countenance grows brazen. An expert can walk through an audience, and pick them out almost to a man. How true are Paul's great words in Galatians 6:7: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

The finest trait in King David was the way he praised Jehovah. That was his redeeming feature. He cried: "Let the people praise thee, O God, let all the people praise thee." He went further: "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." He wanted the hills to skip like lambs, and the mountains as rams. He even called for the trees to clap their hands in praise to God. Shall we not join with David in praise and thanks—giving to the Giver of every good and perfect gift. Make the hour of this lesson a joyous one. I do not mean that classes are to fill the hour with earthly joy and hilarious foolishness, but with deep, heart-felt praises that will make glad the heart of our God. Do not have anything that angels would not be glad to join in with you.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Bless the Lord.—The revised Version is better: "Bless Jehovah." When the word bless is applied to God, as here, it signifies to praise, or to adore. O my soul.—meaning his spirit—the essence of his being—what is meant when one says, "I." All that is in me.—I am not sure that this adds anything to what precedes. David is making the case emphatic by leaving nothing out. His holy name.—One's name stands for himself. God's name here means simply God himself.

2. Forget not all his benefits.—I think benefits is used in its etymological sense here—kind doings. David had much to praise Jehovah for, and was anxious to forget none of his mercies. How prone we are to forget what the blessed master is forever doing for us. How we do need to make the petition of the Psalmist our own prayer.

3. Who forgiveth all thine iniquities.—The Psalmist begins now, item by item, to mention some of the blessings included in the former verses. Receiving forgiveness for our sins is, indeed, a gracious blessing—one for which we should never cease to praise the Lord. Who healeth all thy diseases.—David was right in praising Jehovah for the healing of physical illness. Let men say what they please about it, or against it, it is a Bible doctrine; but I am persuaded that we limit God when we desire all our healing to come without medicine. Suppose one happens to spill carbolic acid on a little child's hand, and there is a bottle of grain alcohol sitting in reach. If one knew that grain alcohol was a perfect and immediate antidote for carbolic acid burns, it would be foolish to stop to pray about it. Pour on the alcohol, and the little one will be relieved at once. Then thank God for giving you the good sense to use the means of cure lying at your hand. If by mistake you swallow a deadly poison, call on God for help, and take an emetic, or have the contents of your stomach pumped out instantly. I am simply calling for good sense, instead of fanaticism.

4. Who redeemeth thy life from destruction.—It is said that John Fletcher used to thank God that he was not in hell. Perhaps we would have been dead long ago, had not God protected us from the machinations of Satan. How rich is the remainder of the verse: "Crowneth thee with loving-kindness and tender mercies." That beats a crown of gold bedecked with the costliest gems of earth.

5. Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things.—I wonder if David knew about "strawberry short cake." Do you suppose he ever ate thanksgiving turkey with all the other delicious fixments of that happy meal in America. What a wonderful adaptation our Father has fixed up between our gustatory apparatus and the fine foods he has made for us. I sometimes think that my taste buds and spring chicken must have been tuned to the same note. Any way, they are in fine harmony. David was shouting because all these good things renewed his youth "like the eagles." That is true of all the birds—they look new when they finish putting on new feathers. Last fall one of my old roosters was so picked that he looked as almost ready for the pot, but in a few days he was so proud of his new white suit that he almost walked on his toes. Nothing could beat him, save a girl in new Easter duds.

6. Some dispute this; but God is just, and will finally set right everything in this world. His day of judgment will soon come.

7. This seems to be a contrast. He was more intimate with Moses than he was with the people. As Moses was the leader, this was necessary. I do not know that Moses was blessed above others.

8-10. Here we have some fine words, few of which need explanation. Chide.—Chastises in order to save. Keep his anger forever—when men do right God's anger toward them ceases. Hath not dealt with us after our sins.—The next clause explains this one. Thus we have been kept from eternal ruin.

11 and 12. This is all figurative. David is endeavoring to show the infinitude of Jehovah's mercy and forgiveness—boundless.

13. Like as a father.—That comes close to us. Some of us are parents. We know how we feel towards our wayward children. David says God is like that. If you do not know how it feels, I cannot tell you.

PERSONAL AND EVANGELISTIC.

Miss Agnes Greider: "In The Herald dated May 15, an article appeared under the title 'Gleanings from the Evangelistic Field,' signed Andrew Johnson, in which he makes the following statement: 'We stopped one night at St. Louis and spoke at the Lighthouse Mission, which has been organized into the Flower Memorial Nazarene Church.' This statement is incorrect. Lighthouse Mission has not been organized into a Nazarene Church, but is still, as in the beginning, an interdenominational work independent of any denomination, incorporated under the State of Missouri, and auxiliary to the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness."

Rev. Harry M. Alexander, 1012 Howard Ave., Jeffersonville, Ind., has some open dates in June which he desires to give to any one desiring his assistance. He recently held a good meeting in Sunshine Mission, Columbus, Ohio.

Beginning June the 23rd, we are to hold a three-Sunday meeting for Dr. P. G. Lineweaver, pastor of the Emmanuel Church of the Nazarene at 4901 Avalon Boulevard, Los Angeles, Calif. Services will be held each night during the two weeks except Saturday. We will be glad to have any of our old friends and acquaintances of Los Angeles and vicinity attend these meetings. Jarrette and Dell Aycock, Evangelists.

Rev. Joseph F. Michael, Pastor the First Methodist Church, Abernathy, Texas, was married to Miss Ethel Wells, of Lockney, Texas, on May 17, 1929. Rev. R. F. Dunn, of the Northwest Texas Conference, officiated. Mrs. Michael is a Scarritt graduate and worked as a Home Missionary for three years at the following places, viz.: Nashville, Dallas, and Oklahoma City. She also taught public school for a number of years.

Dr. T. M. Hofmeister will conduct a campaign in the Opera House, Jamestown, Ohio, beginning June 2nd and continue each night, except Saturday.

SEEING THE FUTURE

BY CHRISTABEL PANKHURST

A book that evangelical believers will read with keenest interest. The Sunday School Times says it "is her greatest one, the conclusions of a brilliant mind, a devout Christian, a famous authority on social and political problems, and one who writes under the mastery of a great conviction." Be sure to read these discriminating studies of prophecy and the signs of the times, giving a satisfying and Biblical solution to the problems of this troubled world and of the individual Christian.

FALLEN ASLEEP

SELF.

Wednesday afternoon, April 24, at four o'clock the spirit of Mr. T. Jepp Self departed from this world to be with his Savior. He was born near Louisville, Ky., Feb. 8, 1858, being seventy-one years, two months and sixteen days old at death. About the age of thirty-six he joined the M. E. Church, South, of which he was a devoted member until death. His was a character mellowed and sweetened by a long life with many experiences. There is one link gone out of our golden chain of friends here, but one added up there.

In 1881, he was married to Miss Mary Clines, who preceded him to that home, nearly sixteen years ago. He leaves behind eight children, thirty grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren, besides other relatives and a host of friends to mourn his death.

About forty years ago he, with his family, left Kentucky and moved to Texas. About ten years later they moved to Nacogdoches county where he lived until death.

Funeral services were held by Rev. T. H. Honea and Rev. Davis in the Redland cemetery near Cushing, Tex., April 25.

Weep not dear ones, he is only waiting on yonder shore, and all we can do is to prepare our selves to meet him where all is bright and no "good-bye" words are ever spoken.

A Grand-daughter.

GONE HOME.

Brother J. C. Teter sends us word that his dear wife passed away February 12. Just three months before she set sail for the Eternal City she wrote the following lines:

"I have been looking over my past life and, with the Apostle Paul, I can say my course is almost run; I am ready to be offered up, but God forbid that I should boast, save in the cross of Christ. And yet, when I think of seven years as superintendent of the Sunday school in the M. E. Church, Class Leader and Bible Class teacher, I have some evidence that my work was not all in vain. Then about three years in the prison work with Mr. Teter, and my five years in Africa, while it was not all I wish it might have been, I believe God will say 'She hath done what she could.' I have never sought eulogies, and want none; just a plain coffin, and the people to know I have moved out and gone home."

"Mrs. James C. Teter."

SMITH.

Brother John T. Smith was born in South Carolina, Nov. 20th, 1854; died at the home of a friend at Clayton, N. Mex., April 23rd, 1929, age seventy-four years, five months and three days. He moved with his parents to Georgia early in life and at the age of twenty-one years he left the state of Georgia and moved to Texas. In the year 1880 he was united in marriage to Mollie Sidney Brown. To this union were born nine children, seven of whom are still living, two of his children and his wife having passed on some years ago. The children living are: Rev. Frank B. Smith, of Berkeley, Calif., who is now district superintendent of the Northern California

District of the Church of the Nazarene, Robert P. Smith, Stanley H. Smith, Averill Smith, Mrs. O. E. Winslow, Mrs. Alice Mooneyhan, and Mrs. Edna Black.

Brother Smith was converted and joined the Methodist Church early in life, later joining the Church of the Nazarene, in which Church he remained until death. He raised a large family of nine children, the majority of whom are still living to bless the world. He lived a good life. He will rest in peace. Farewell, Brother Smith, we feel that you have only "passed over the river to rest under the shade of the trees."

Funeral services were held in the First Baptist Church at Clayton, N. M., April 27. Rev. McLaughlin, the pastor, preached the funeral sermon to a large crowd of friends and relatives.

J. S. Collins.

JONES.

Carroll N. Jones was born Sept. 2, 1904, in Fitzgerald, Ga.; died May 5, 1929. When a child, he joined the Central M. E. Church, South. At the age of fifteen at Indian Springs Holiness camp meeting, under the preaching of Rev. C. H. Babcock, he was converted. In 1921, after his father's death, he rededicated his life to God's service; since that time he had been abounding in the work of the Lord. His crowd of young associates were in the B. Y. P. U. work of the First Baptist Church; his influence in this department of the church was great. I've heard many of the older attendants say that Carroll's talk was like a sermon. They organized a young men's Baracca Class in the Sunday school. After a few years of faithful service he was elected president in building it to a membership of sixty or more. One year ago Carroll joined the First Baptist Church, and has been a co-worker with his beloved pastor, Rev. J. F. Singleton. He was an outstanding character among the young people of our community, always seeking to lift them into a happy Christian life. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. R. L. Jones, and three brothers. His funeral was at the First Baptist Church, Rev. J. F. Singleton and Rev. W. A. Tyson officiating. The peace of Heaven seemed to brood over the great congregation; the tributes of love in floral offerings were beautiful. His body was interred in Evergreen cemetery.

Mrs. Beulah Brannon.

REUQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A mother asks prayer for a wandering boy, and that her children may be saved.

Mrs. R. K. L.: "Please to pray for my infant who has undergone an operation, that our heavenly Father may heal him."

We regret to learn that, on account of failing health, Dr. D. F. Brooks has been advised by his physicians to cancel his engagements for the summer. Dr. Brooks' many friends will learn with keen disappointment that this old and faithful soldier of the cross is unable to take up his usual place in the camp meeting work.

BOYS ENJOY

Out-of-the-ordinary stories—stories of adventure. One of the most interesting stories we have read recently is "The Two Tramps." It would seem to be a book for boys, but really it is a book every one would enjoy. The tramps in this story are not beggars or men of low ideals, but tramps for Jesus. Order one or more copies to place in the hands of boys, at the special price of 60c.

A GOOD MAN NEGLECTED.

We have not known a time when we needed revivals any more than we do today. Still we have splendid men who have given their lives to the study of revivals and we have left them with nothing to do. I wish to call your attention to Rev. E. O. Hobbs, one of the General Evangelists of the Southern Methodist Church, a splendid preacher and a clean man; a man that always works for the salvation of souls and the good of the church he is laboring with. Some evangelists have put on high pressure methods both in evangelistic methods and in getting of money, but not so with Bro. Hobbs. He always tries to do honest work that will stand and is grateful for what is paid him and never makes it hard or embarrassing to the pastor or the congregation. Brethren if you want a meeting call Bro. Hobbs to assist you. He lives at Cynthiana, Ky. He should be kept busy in revival meetings. Give him a call and see if he does not hold you a good meeting. Wm. S. Maxwell, P. E.

LISTEN GIRLS!

The above is the title of a late book by Mrs. Dell Aycock written especially for girls. The lessons have been gleaned by Mrs. Aycock as she has come in contact with young people in her evangelistic work. It is full of kindly advice and suggestion to girls in this day of evil influences, and it would be fortunate if every girl in this land of ours could have the benefit of reading these practical lessons as given by Mrs. Aycock. Perhaps you are wishing for a graduation present for your daughter or friend; if so, this would be a very helpful and attractive gift. It is neatly bound in cloth, and sells for the small sum of 50 cents. Order of Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., if you desire one.

PRE-INVATORY SALE OF BIBLES

We offer you here a very large assortment of some of the choicest styles of Bibles published, at such low prices that you can hardly afford not to invest in them. Many of them we bought at about one-half the regular price, hence we can sell them to you at the prices listed below. They are all the King James Version and all perfect stock.

Don't let this opportunity pass to supply yourself, your children and your friends. Also you can make an investment here that will net you 40% or 50% on your money, instead of 6%. If you want to buy a quantity to sell again, we will ship them on a guarantee that if you fail to dispose of them within a reasonable length of time, you may return them to us in good condition, and we will refund your money, less the postage.

HOLY ACTIVITIES.

By The Editor.

THERE can be no such thing as consecrated idleness. Those who have wholly consecrated themselves to God have evidently, given themselves to him for service; they are to do something; they are to be busy in the wide field of human need.

* * * *

To be sanctified wholly, to receive the baptism with the Holy Ghost, is to be filled and thrilled with a mighty "go." The revival of the Bible doctrine, as interpreted and lived by John Wesley, has been called "the Holiness Movement." Mark the word movement.

* * * *

It would sound very queer and quite impossible to express it thus: "the Holiness Standstill." To be cleansed from sin and filled with the Holy Spirit, means to move, to speak, to act, to find something to do and do it with joy. This writer has a friend who is a deaf mute. He has been graciously sanctified, and he is a good witness to the saving power of Christ, with his shining face and the significant movement of his hands.

* * * *

Yes, we understand that one may enjoy the blessing of sanctification who is very poor, who lives a secluded life, who has little opportunity for service, whose field of service is very circumscribed, and yet, there is a chance to witness somewhere; there is intercessory prayer; that is very blessed, and a great means of grace. Never allow yourself to imagine that you cannot do something, that there is not some place in which you can render some service.

* * * *

I well remember, while evangelizing in India, some nineteen years ago, we were at the annual meeting at Epworth Heights, some seventy-five miles out from Bombay. There was a group of British soldiers who had gotten leave of absence and were attending the meeting. One of them, a rather insignificant little fellow, had received on some previous occasion, a gracious cleansing and filling of the Holy Spirit. He was deeply concerned for this group of soldiers who had come up with him to the meeting. He seemed to lose his appetite for food; sometimes he would continue in prayer in the secret place, rather than attend services. He frequently fasted. One night he prayed all night. Every one of the group of soldiers, four or five of them, all told, were powerfully blessed at the altar; some converted, one or two sanctified. These men were afterward the kindling wood for a gracious revival in Bombay. It is quite probable if this little soldier had not agonized in prayer, these men would not have been saved; and if they had not been, it may be, we would not have had the wonderful revival in Bombay. We preachers were to the front; this humble wrestler with the Lord was in the secret place, but God will know where to place him in the great future, and in whose crown to put the stars of rejoicing.

Say, brother, sister, claiming full salvation, do something! Speak to somebody; circulate some tracts; give humble witness to your neighbor; fast occasionally and pray for some one. If there is some one against whom you are in danger of having a bit of prejudice, pour out your heart for them in earnest prayer. To be holy, is to be active. We are not to shut ourselves up in seclusion, always; in the closet we are to receive the power that will enable us to go forth with a glad joy to rescue the perishing. Let every man and woman, let young and old, who read these humble words, regird themselves for larger activities in the service of the Master. Life is passing rapidly. It will soon be ended, even to those who live longest. Let's crowd into it all we possibly can to help, to uplift, to encourage, to bless. Let us despise no one, however poor or feeble-minded, or unattractive, or sinful. Christ, by the grace of God, hath tasted death for every man. Up and out to the rescue!

How is This for Patriotism and Loyalty?

J. M. ROWLAND.

SOME months ago the University of Virginia received some advertising, caused by charges of widespread drinking among the students and alumnae of the university. The usual amount and quality of newspaper mud-slinging and far-fetched discussion flooded the press, as is always the case when one questions the sway of Demon Rum. The president, Dr. Alderman, sent forth a gentlemanly and polished reply, which carried with it the promise that something would be done about it. The governor and attorney-general also assured the state of their sincere determination to look into the matter.

It seems that the president made an earnest effort to house-clean which carried with it an order that drinking on the premises of the university must stop. Those in authority co-operated with him. The head officers of the Greek Letter Fraternities tried to help, as they were doing in other parts of the country by placing the ban on drinking in the fraternity houses. One of these fraternities, according to news reports, refused to observe the ruling of the university president and of the head of their organization. The official inspector of the fraternity inspected the quarters and reported that they were still drinking openly and making liquor in the building they occupied. At this juncture one of the young Solomonic Bolsheviks who did not propose for either God or man to tell him and his klan what laws to keep wrote his national headquarters as follows:

"If the evangelical brotherhood and the Methodist Board of Prohibition, Temperance and Public Morals have succeeded in getting control of Delta Tau Delta in the same way that they have of the Federal government, I hope to God you kick us out forever and anon."

This smart Alec retort is typical of a minority of modern products of this jazz age people are trying to educate and who refuse to recognize any laws they dislike. His reply will not hurt the Methodist Church, which was fighting the devil before he was born and will still be on the firing line when his superiority complex has busted and carried him on ethereal waves to the domain of innocuous dissuade. It merely brands him and his ilk of Bolsheviks and it reflects on their institution in a manner to disgust many of their fellows who have been drinking a little deeper from the Pierian Spring than they drank from the fraternity bar.

We commend the university authorities for what seems to be an earnest effort to remedy a serious matter and we sympathize with them in having among their students some freaks of the swell toad variety. But no institution should be held accountable for some of the raw material that is sent to them. But what kind of citizens will these Bolsheviks make if this is a sample of their loyalty and devotion to their country and her laws?—Richmond Christian Advocate.

It would seem that the authorities of the University should expel a bunch of these Bolsheviks. The writer of the insulting message quoted above, needs a good case of Jones Law. A fine of a few thousand dollars, hair closely clipped, a suit of stripes, and about three years in the penitentiary might teach him that, after all, it is better to be sober and obedient to law than drunk and defiant. The enforcement of law is entirely too lax. Men in universities who trample upon the law deserve more swift and severe punishment than crap shooters in back alleys.—(Editor Herald).

The Lord's Day Association.

This Association not long since organized in Louisville, Ky., is the outgrowth of the Sunday Defense Work, started in Kentucky, in March, 1926, and maintained continuously ever since. It is an agency for service and a channel of expression through which Christian people and good Americans may voice their convictions and build sentiment for the better rest day and a more religious observance of the holy Sabbath.

We have a direct commandment from God to remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy. Those who violate this commandment are living in rebellion against the God who gave it, and are setting a bad example before their children and fellowmen. We feel that there is great need of widespread agitation on this subject and good people everywhere should use their influence to get a better observance of the Sabbath both for rest and worship.

The General Superintendent of this Association is Rev. H. P. Hoskins, Box 1042, Louisville, Ky. He will be glad to receive information or give information to any one interested in this subject.

THE GOSPEL MID DRAGONS AND DARKNESS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

In Foochow, yesterday—Sunday, I preached in the oldest church in Asia—the first church ever built in China. It is called Ching Sing Tong Church, which means "The Church of the True God." It was built in 1855. It is situated now right in the heart of the city on the business street and is a great center for a live evangelistic mission. Before beginning the service a number of the workers went outside on the church steps and sang some gospel songs and invited the people to come so that when preaching began the house was nearly full—many of those coming however, were anything but worshipful, one old fellow coming in with his long pipe and puffing away with it till the pastor kindly slipped up and asked him to desist; another fellow coming in puffing his cigarette and walking right up to the front seat, but after preaching the gospel and giving the invitation a dozen or more of those men came forward to the altar and were prayed for and showed the way of salvation.

Going over to the church we had to travel by rickshaw and passed over the famous old bridge called "The Bridge of Ten Thousand Ages." Now I do not think that meant that the bridge was that old, but it is the China way of expressing an hyperbole and setting forth the great antiquity of the structure. The bridge is about a quarter of a mile long and thirteen or fourteen feet wide. It has thirty-eight solid buttresses. Immense stones, many of them a yard square and forty-five feet long, extend from buttress to buttress and upon them a granite platform is laid. As I crossed that crowded bridge and witnessed the teeming, hurried, hectic masses coming and going across it I just wished I had pen to describe the scene. All kinds and conditions of humanity were crossing it—women in bare feet and women in silken slippers, rickshaws bearing the well-to-do in their satins and silks and gold and silver adornment. Now a flapper appears being hustled by a laboring woman carrying on her shoulders burdens beyond her strength, the yelling of the hack drivers and rickshaw men, the cart-men and the coolie burden-bearers filling the Sabbath morning air with sounds anything but harmonious. The congestion of carriages, auto busses, rickshaws, sedan chairs at times almost held up locomotion and everybody seemed to be in a hurry—almost like New York. The rich and the poor hustled one another, the young and the old were there and most of the heads were bare, some of the women's headgear was peculiar as they decorated them with small silver swords—a fashion prevailing in Foochow among the women in memory of centuries ago when the women had to take the sword themselves in defense of life and virtue.

The Chinese are great talkers, and in this section their dialect requires them to speak largely from the throat. They talk loudly in average conversation; in argument they become intense and you would think they would soon come to blows, but that seldom happens. One of the amusing things to us is to hear them bargaining as to the price for carrying luggage. Frequently I have remarked to wife: "The oratory is beginning," and it goes on heatedly and with gestures till a conclusion is reached and the next thing you know a fellow handles your luggage by carrying it suspended on a bamboo pole and the load sometimes is heavy enough for a horse. Fortunately for us in all these matters we have some preacher, presiding elder or missionary who does the bargaining for us while we look on and for the while enjoy the fun.

Foochow is a city of over half a million

REVIVAL FIRES.

Thank God, the old gospel of pardon and Holiness and the Spirit's baptism works in China just as in the U. S. A. and other countries. The promise of the Spirit is to all Flesh. Acts 2:17. Revival power was given at the meetings at Sienyu and Hinghwa to an unusual degree. Preachers and Bible workers and church members got the fire.

A letter from Rev. W. B. Cole of the Sienyu District, Hinghwa Conference, received since we came to Foochow gives the following:

"Last week Sienyu held meetings in three places with remarkable results. The meetings were four days each and speakers were those blest in the Sienyu meetings. The churches were revived and souls saved. At two of the points the entire countryside was stirred. One would-be bandit chief was converted. A woman possessed with a demon was set free and restored whole. She is now a joyful Christian. The revival is going on. It has just begun. Hallelujah. W. B. Cole."

Everywhere we go there is intense hunger among the ministers and missionaries. The feeling prevails if the pastors catch the fire that it will mean churches on fire and revivals of religion. Generally before the meetings begin the District Superintendents call in their preachers and Bible women to get under the influence of the meetings, pray for the Spirit's baptism and then go back with revival fires burning in their hearts. G. W. R.

souls. It was here that our American Methodist Missionary work began in 1847. The pioneer missionary was Rev. J. D. Collins of Ann Arbor, Michigan. He was so bent on going to China that when Bishop Janes informed him that they had no funds, he replied, "Bishop, engage me a place before the mast, and my own strong arm will pull me to China and support me while there." He and Rev. M. C. White sailed on the "Heber," a voyage lasting four months. (Now a missionary can cover the journey in one month). In less than six years Brother Collins became a physical wreck. In 1851 he had to return to America and died in San Francisco 1852 at the age of 30. In those days missionaries did not last very long. After his death Rev. Isaac W. Wiley and Rev. James Colder came to China. In after years Dr. Wiley became Bishop and was the first Bishop to die and be buried in China. This afternoon we stood at Bishop Wiley's grave in the cemetery at Foochow. He died in 1884 in his 59th year.

We are engaged in an eight-days' evangelistic meeting in Foochow. The meeting has just begun. At today's meeting after we preached on "The Promise of the Spirit," upwards of sixty people bowed at the altar. We are hoping and praying for a gracious revival in this big city and the missionaries are hungry for a work of grace. More about this meeting later.

VARIOUS EXPERIENCES AND NOTES.

The Chinese are most courteous and cordial in their hospitality, their receptions and their farewells. It was a beautiful and lovely farewell they gave us as we left Futsing. As we were leaving the School Compound early in the morning all the school turned out to see us and a whole troop of them followed our chairs outside the North gate. There we all assembled and sang revival songs and said "good-bye" and for a long time as we journeyed on we could hear the girls' voices as they sang the choruses. Among those who came out to say good bye were the hospital nurses and Dr. Lee, a wonderful Chinese physician in charge of the hospital. This institution is positively ideal in all its bearings. Dr. Lee got her entire education in America—her academic work at Herkimer and her medical work in Philadelphia. She is a Christian on the old time salvation lines. She was constant in attendance at the revival meetings and rejoiced when souls were coming to God and when preachers got stirred up with the holy fire to do better work in their churches. As we went through the hospital everything was spotlessly clean. In the baby ward were several recent arrivals, one sweet little girl baby was given away by its mother to a woman who was assisting in the hospital. Mothers in China still despise baby girls and give them away or throw them out to perish. One beautiful girl of thirteen in the girls' school was bought as a baby for 63 cents by one of the women missionary who brought her up and schooled her. She is a fine Christian girl and destined to become a Christian teacher some day in the mission school.

One of the very fine teachers in the girls' school had a singular experience and a fortunate escape from what might have been a wretched life in the following manner: She was a student, and an excellent one, in the Mission School. She had passed the middle school and was now ready for college, when she received a letter from her father to come home and be married. Now this was entirely the father's arrangement; he chose the young fellow for a certain sum of about $60, which the prospective groom paid the father for his daughter. Meanwhile the poor girl knew nothing of the young fellow, perhaps had never seen him; yet customs in China required her to submit. However, with the assistance of her teacher she begged off for a year and during that year her father died. Then the responsibility was thrust upon the Uncle who rather favored the girl. An arrangement was finally entered into by which the engagement was broken for $100. This the girl readily consented to. She borrowed the money from two of her teachers and paid it back out of her small salary until she has it nearly all paid. In the meanwhile she finished her college and is now one of the very best Christian teachers in that Girls' School. In China it is considered an awful thing for a girl to go unmarried, but "one of the evidences of Christianity in China," says Dr. Mary Stone, "is an old maid" and these Christian girls are glad for their liberty and their freedom from the awful thrall that very often marriage inflicts on girls in China. Of course there are many very happy Christian marriages in China and it is a matter of great delight to the missionaries to see girls of the Mission Schools marry young men who also have had their training in Christian schools.

One horrible sight in China is the poor woman trying to walk on mere stumps instead of good human feet. Frequently we see women hobbling along in bound feet. Their progress is slow and you look to see the poor thing tumble but somehow they hold their own at terrific disadvantage. If ever there was an infliction put upon girls and women that is not only positively cruel but just as positively absurd and nonsensical it is this evil of bound feet. Of course the poor peasant women do not have to endure the agony because they are required to be beasts of burden and they need feet to qualify them for their labors. Feet binding is not nearly so prevalent as it used to be, but in some country places it still exists. It is just fine to look at the girls in our Mission Schools, as with perfect human feet, they can skip and run and jump and romp and enjoy life. Put it down as one of the products of Missions the unbound feet of untold millions of China's girls and women!

THE DRAGON IMAGE AND DEMON.

Such is the name of a book by Dr. Dubose for many years a missionary in Soochow. In it are set forth the teachings of Confucianism, Buddhism and Taoism. It is a singular fact that in China a man may be all three—a Buddhist, a Confucianist and a Taoist. Confucianism is based on Morality, Buddhism on Idolatry, Taoism on Superstition. Confucianism says that the heart is good—that it is good by nature, that the thoughts of the heart flowing in their natural channels are pure; that a man may rectify his own heart and when it goes wrong he can, by his own power, restore it to the path of Virtue. Put over against that the Word of God, Jeremiah 17:9: "The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked; who can know it?" Also Jeremiah 13:23, "Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? then may ye also do good, that one accustomed to do evil."

One of the things which needs to be smashed in China is Confucianism. It is not a religion. It is a system of ethics but notwithstanding these teachings all through the centuries China makes no attempt to live up to them. Carstairs Douglas in a Missionary Conference in 1877, said: "Confucianism is the citadel; take it and the war is ended."

Buddha has been called the "Night of Asia." He was born in India 624 B. C. When he was born they say a light illuminated the heavens, a rainbow stretched athwart the sky, a multitude in the air sang, there was a shower of roses and nine dragons spouted water for him to bathe in, both cold and hot; the babe walked seven steps to the four points of the compass and with an expressive wave of his tiny hand said, "Above heaven and under heaven I alone am great." What a wonderful baby this youngster was and how notoriously humble and meek!!! The whole story of Buddha is made up of such ridiculously foolish legends that it seems almost unbelievable that millions would bow at his altars and worship such a lie and delusion!

It took nearly 300 years for Buddhism to get rooted in China. It is atheistic. It acknowledges sin in general but not in the particular. It says, "Oh, yes, every one must have sins, but the individual has no sin, hence in China there is no sense of sin." The worship of Buddha is nothing but a babel of words and vain repetitions. In every temple the sound one hears is a repetition of O-me-to-fuh. Speak to the priest and he answers with this word, the response in prayer is the same, as the priest counts his beads it is the same word. They say that for every ten thousand times this word is repeated one merit is secured. A priest was asked, How often do you repeat "O-me-to-fuh" a day? His answer was "Oh, about twenty or thirty thousand times." The vain repetition of the heathen of Matt. 6:7!!

One of the dreadful things about Buddhism is the ugly, unspeakable Dragon. The fabulous dragon of China is a monster with scales like a crocodile and having five clawed feet—he has no wings, but when he rises in the air it is by a power he is supposed to possess of transforming himself at pleasure, he can make himself large or little and rise and fall just as he chooses. Wherever you go you meet the image of this ugly dragon. The dragon has done more to retard the progress of China than anything ever invented. Coal mines cannot be opened up because a dragon lies under the mountain and it would be a disaster to the community to disturb him; improvements cannot be made because the dragon lies underneath and must not be interfered with. You meet the Dragon in Revelation, but every time he is associated with the Devil and destined to be destroyed. So with the Christian faith; when the people become Christians they get from under the dragon power, he fills them with fear no longer. Free from sin, free from dragon fear. Free in Jesus. What a change!

Another religion of the Devil in China is Taoism. The originator of this, Lao-tse, was born in Honan Province, China, 604 B. C. The Taoist priests spent most of their time dealing with evil spirits and quack medicines, so much so that they have won the appellation, "a dirty set of fellows." Sochow seems to be quite a center for this delusion. They have a great Temple there surrounded by thirteen large temples in which there are about 300 gods! This Temple situated in the center of the city is the rendezvous of all pleasure seekers, pickpockets, villains, priests, beggars, fortune tellers and gamblers. It is a "vanity fair" and the road to hell not to heaven. The first Pope of Taoism spent much of his time manipulating the "elixir of the dragon and tiger." He slew many dragons and in nine years gained the power to ascend to heaven. At the age of 123 he ascended to heaven to enjoy the bliss of immortality, so the legends go!

Now what fills my soul with burning indignation is the modern tendency of some of our wise men (some of them missionaries) who attempt to put across the monstrous idea that there are good points about all these religions and that we ought not to condemn them but make allies of them. May God forgive them!

It is absolutely the very essence of evil to make any compromise with other existing religions in the heathen world, not that it would be wisdom to spend one's time in assailing them. No, no, thank God, we have a bigger business than that; but over and against these dark heathenish systems it is our business to put a positive gospel—a gospel so transparent in its purity and holiness that, like the noonday sun, it makes every other star and planet invisible.

"Fly abroad, thou mighty Gospel!
Win and conquer, never cease;
May thy lasting, wide dominion
Multiply and never cease;
Sway thy scepter,
Saviour, all the world around!

"Who but thou, Almighty Spirit,
Can the heathen world reclaim?
Men may preach, but till thou favor,
Heathens will be still the same;
Mighty Spirit!
Witness to the Saviour's name."

YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN.

O. H. BLOOMSTER, A. B.

IT was with interest and pleasure that my attention was called to an article with this same title by the editor of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. Because of the need of the world for this experience and its far reaching effect upon society, I would like to say a few words in regard to, as Nicodemus says, "How can these things be?" Jesus speaks so emphatically about the necessity of a change in the life and spirit of the human being that the ruler of the Jews expresses both surprise and bewilderment when he utters the above quotation.

Many people in all ages have attempted to answer Nicodemus' query concerning the new birth. The Roman church through penance and other forms has sought to bring these things about, but we fear in the great majority of cases has failed to bring about the great change. Martin Luther climbing the Holy Stairway on his knees suddenly becomes aware that he is on the wrong track.

The Episcopalian and Lutheran churches through their beautiful rituals and prayers seek to bring needy man into the correct relationship with God, but alas, it is so often like throwing water on a duck's back.

Our fathers of Methodism established "the mourners' bench" as the proper method of bringing lost man to his Savior. And here man often finds the Christ, but dare I say it? even sometimes this way fails to bring about the proper result.

The popular evangelist will call for those seeking the new life to move down the aisle and grasp his hand. But grasping the hand of a man, however holy he may be, does not create a new heart.

Others to make the way easier for those seeking salvation will pass cards around through the audience urging them to sign up for Jesus. We fear, however, that signing a card will never make you a Christian.

The mass movement is used in decision day services to bring large groups of Sunday school children into the fold. The following of a group of people will not bring you into the kingdom of God.

Assenting to a set of questions before the congregation may enroll you on the church records but cannot enroll you in the Lamb's Book of Life.

Nicodemus says, "How can these things be?" Many will say and are saying the same, as they note the difference of opinion among religious people.

We are apt to bring objections one against another about our methods of dealing with souls. Devotees of the mourners' bench have no use for card signing, raising hands, etc., while advocates of the latter can see no sense in long vigils at the altar.

Why quarrel over these things? The methods used in dealing with people concerning the new birth must not be confused with that which happens in the spirit life when the heart is changed. "Come unto me," said Jesus. The individual must choose. I can come to Jesus as I kneel at an altar with head bowed and the saints praying around me, or I can still refuse him entrance. The great transformation can come over me as I sign a card if I at the same time sign over my heart to the Christ. If as I grasp the hand of the evangelist I also grasp the hand of the Almighty my heart will be changed. As we go through the beautiful ritual of a formal church, we can get to Christ, if we let those prayers and readings saturated with the Gospel of Christ get into our spirit life. On the other hand they may be only the repeating of so many words with no effect on us at all. If with the inner man we assent to the church vows Jesus will come into the soul and take his abode there.

Jesus said, "Ye must be born again." He says to the woman at the well, "Ask of me and I will give you the Living Water." That is the great central theme of the Gospel. That is the goal to be gained. And no one can gain it for us. We alone can win. When with faith and true repentance we turn to Christ the great work will take place, be we alone or in the great congregation, be we at the altar or in the pew, be we on bended knee or standing erect with our face heavenward, or be we at home or out in God's great open. Wherever man is truly seeking God, there God is to be found.

Often in my appeals I do not call for the sinner to come to the altar, or to raise the hand, or to make any kind of a move, but to simply open the heart's door and let Jesus in. I assure them if this is done we will soon find it out.

Let's remember the lost one's greatest need is to find his Saviour and let's use the method that God seems to give the greatest results through using.

My Mother's Golden Key.

My mother's prayer was the Golden Key,
She always used on her bended knee;
With it she opened the store of grace,
Which made our home a heavenly place.

Amid the toils of the busy day—
No matter where, in every way,
She held that Key in her hand of power
And used it well every passing hour.

When darkness came and discouragement,
A place there was where she always went;
And there with prayer as her Golden Key
She opened heavenly treasures free.

At evening time when the work was done,
She soothed the children to sleep, each one;
Then by their side on her bended knee
She locked them up with her Golden Key.

And when she came to the Gate of Light
With heavenly glories all in sight,
Her Golden Key opened wide the gate
And there for her loved ones she will wait.

LIVING BY FAITH.

Prof. H. E. Rosenberger.

Text: "I live by the faith of the Son of God." (Galatians 2:20).

EVERY worthy life has an inward source of strength. Discover this inner spring, and you have the secret of its greatness and power. Every man's life is also guided by certain ruling ideas and governed by certain dominating aims. And the more exalted and powerful the ideas and aims which govern him, the higher the level on which his life will be lived, the more noble and lasting his accomplishments. There is no more interesting study than the influence of great ideas over the minds of men. Such ideas have so possessed and transformed them, that they in turn have changed the course of human history. The power to seize a great truth and give it undivided attention until its consequences have been wrought into the fabric of human experience, is characteristic of every great saint and prophet.

Now, if an idea may lift a life to worthy accomplishment, how much greater must be the lifting power of an indwelling, divine personality? The life of St. Paul has drawn the attention of the ages, and inspired men of every generation to holy living and noble achievement. And in the words of our text he discloses the secret spring of that life. "The life that I now live," says he, "I live by the faith of the Son of God." In considering this subject, let our thoughts gather around the answers to the following leading questions.

I. What was this faith by which Paul lived?

1. It was not intellectual but spiritual. It was not the end of an intellectual process humanly attained, but a conviction divinely inwrought by the Holy Spirit. It was not the result of a process of thinking, wherein he might ever after rest content with having reached the truth. It was not in fact the conclusion of a process of thinking, but the beginning of a course of action; for truth with Paul must make vital connections with life and be valued by its fruits in holy living.

He elsewhere tells us that his faith was not received by instruction of others, but came to him by a revelation from Christ himself. Again he speaks of it as a "heavenly vision," which he felt an imperative call to obey. And in Hebrews he defines faith as a conviction of the reality of "things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." It is fairly easy to string ideas together and, resting in one as a conclusion, to say, "I've got it." Such a one indeed has it—a conclusion; but this was not the faith by which Paul lived. His faith was the end of a process which passed far beyond the understanding. It was a conviction of the heart, as well as a belief of the head: "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." And this conviction so possessed him that he was lifted out of himself into a life of self-sacrificing loyalty to his Lord.

2. It was not historical but personal. Historical faith is based on "knowledge about"; personal faith on "acquaintance with." There is a great difference between believing facts about an individual, and reposing such confidence in him as to commit one's interests to his care. Someone has said that a good deal of our faith is faith in other people's faith. We hope to arrive at faith by imitating those who have it. But this was not St. Paul's way. He had known Christ after the flesh, that is, by hearsay and history; but no longer did he seek thus to know him. He counted all things but loss that he might know him in personal experience. Nor was it a mere reflection of a faith handed down from a historic past, the faith of tradition. Paul lived, as was promised of the just man, "by his own faith." And yet, as it was not he who lived, but Christ who lived in him, so it was not his own faith but the faith of the Son of God by which he lived. So completely was his life united to his Lord that he could truly say that Christ both lived in him and believed through him. "For me to live is Christ," is his striking statement that reveals to us the secret of his remarkable career.

It has been said, "Orthodoxy can be learned from others; living faith must be a matter of personal experience." When the Samaritan woman, who had met the Master at the well, bore testimony of her new faith to her townsmen, they believed; but when he later came to their village and they heard the message from his own lips, they said to the woman: "Now we believe, not because of thy saying; for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Savior of the world." It is this personal faith inspired in the heart by the immediate presence of the Christ himself, that we so much need today. Creeds we have enough, traditional faiths and head beliefs we have a plenty. But that living faith that comes by revelation of Christ in us, which was the faith of Paul, is all too rare. Not through the keyhole of history, but through the open door of personal revelation, does Christ come.

II. What were the results of this faith? "By their fruits shall ye know them," declared Jesus; and Paul after testing his faith for years under the most exacting conditions of real life could testify: "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me." The question after all which each of us must ask ourselves, is not, "What do I believe?" but rather, "What does my faith do for me?" Let us put the faith of Christ to a pragmatic test and note a few things which it did for Paul and will also do for us.

1. It brings a full deliverance from sin and elevates to a life of strict morality. We do not say that every moral life is a saved life, but we may affirm that every truly saved person strives for moral perfection. So long have we condemned the morality which substitutes good works for the righteousness of Christ, that we have seemed to condemn also the morality which springs from living faith, and have often failed to insist that those who profess faith shall show a pattern of good works. But Paul was too wise to separate religion from morality, saving faith from good works. Faith for him was both a present possession and an absorbing pursuit. He had exchanged the rags of his Jewish self-righteousness for the robes of Christ's holiness, yet he longed for the excellent knowledge of Christ Jesus, his Lord. He had been crucified with Christ, and still he pressed on to "know the fellowship of his sufferings" and be fully conformed to his death. And until this process of salvation has had its beginning in our deliverance from the domination of sinful practices, Christ has done nothing for us. On this minimum of morality we must insist as the outward evidence of the inward grace. Let us ever remind ourselves that sincerity of belief is no substitute for righteousness of life.

2. It gives Christ as the ideal for both character and conduct. A life that would grow in nobility and strength must have set before it high ideals and worthy goals. For, as someone has said, "People seldom improve when they have no other model but themselves to copy after." Ideals are corrective: they reveal our defects and at the same time show the way to improvement. Ideals are also inspirational, and give goals for which to strive. And such ideals to be truly effective in moulding life and character must be embodied in living persons. Where, then, is that godlike image of what a man may become, where is the pattern of a perfect life towards which he may strive, if not in Jesus of Nazareth? And we must not let the false standards which prevail, whether in the world or in the church, mar the pattern or blur the image of character which it is possible to reproduce in one who has attained to the full stature of manhood in Christ, nor to diminish our conception of the possibilities of that grace that enables him to reach it.

In many respects we have all fallen short of fully realizing this ideal. And who is able to imitate Christ, to reproduce the characters that were in him. We have imitated his meekness, his kindness, his sympathy,—these perhaps because the effeminacy of our generation makes them popular, while our own weakness makes them easy to imitate. But who has ever reproduced the strength that was in him, the courage, the power, the kingly qualities? We have thought of his power in terms of those forces which drive the machinery of our industrial age. Whereas what is needed is moral strength, the power to live, to suffer, and to endure, as well as to accomplish and effect. To insure constant progress an ideal must continually advance. Like the horizon, which when we have arrived where it once appeared stretches away in the distance as far as before, so is Christ to the enlightened soul. His grace enables us to surmount one peak, and lo; other heights loom up in the distance and ever lure us on. From glory to glory do we go, as we behold in him the image of a perfect man and the ideal of a perfect life.

3. It gives Christ as the object of eternal love. The soul needs an aim beyond this life. The action of a heavenly body is determined by its centre of gravity. Some make their orbits in less than a year, others require centuries to complete their cycles. If Christ is our life, our centre of gravity lies outside this earthly sphere where Christ has gone, and he draws us on by an inescapable attraction,—our life moves toward an eternal goal. We may not move towards success so rapidly, or attain the heights so quickly, according to the estimate of this world, but our life swings on an eternal pivot, which will bring us to a completed cycle of success at the Judgment. It makes a great difference whether our life has its centre in an earthly existence, or sweeps out into an eternal duration. From this higher point of view it is the worldling and pleasure seeker whose life is narrow and vision circumscribed, while the man of faith has the wider horizon and the larger view. What folly then, what madness, to live as though one's existence were bounded within the narrow limits of birth on the one hand and death on the other! Plato once said that the life worth living is one which leaves no regrets when viewed from its end. But faith goes farther and gives us an eternal point of retrospect from which to estimate this life.

III. How was this faith obtained?

By the death of the old self-life. The self which must die is not the natural self endowed with qualities of human personality. This self of native faculties was wonderfully alive in the apostle and wrought mightily through his hand and brain. "I live," he tells us; and the divine Spirit working in him quickened his human powers and raised them to the highest efficiency. It is rather the self of carnal affections, of worldly ambitions, which must go to the Cross; our "old man" must be crucified, if we are to know the fulness of the life of faith.

Now, the Cross in the writings of St. Paul symbolizes two aspects of Christian experience. In the one it is Christ who is crucified for Paul, in the other it is Paul who is crucified with Christ. The first is the ground of our justification by which we are reconciled to God. The second is the process by which we are brought to full sanctification. The one involves turning our eyes to Christ's Cross, the other implies our being lifted up on it and enduring the death agony with him. Not only must Christ have suffered for Paul, but Paul too must die, if Christ is to live in him. It is this second aspect of the Christian life, bringing to full birth the life of Christ in the soul, about which Paul exults in our text. His mind labors with a great idea, and struggles for language adequate to express it. "I am crucified," he testifies, and with the next breath he corrects what may seem an exaggeration by adding, "Nevertheless, I live." George Muller, when asked the secret of his great faith, replied: "There came a day when I died. I died utterly, died to George Muller, his opinions, preferences, tastes, and will; died to the world, its approval or censure; died to the approval or censure even of my brethren or my friends; and since then I have studied to show myself approved unto God."

IV. How was this faith retained?

1. By prizing it above everything else. No purity is secure that is not prized, no virtue is safe that is not treasured. Paul "kept the faith" by prizing it above all earthly possessions. Compared to what he had found in Christ he valued his Hebrew lineage, the favor of the Jewish church, his reputation in the world, as mere refuse, to be dumped on the garbage heap as of no worth. Being convinced that his Master was able to keep what he had committed unto him, the apostle abandoned himself wholly to his Lord with a singleness of purpose of which we know little today, choosing suffering instead of ease, stripes instead of applause. The heart of the man is expressed in one high resolve: "This one thing I do." His faith was no pale negation of the surrender of worthless things, but passionate devotion to the highest knowledge: "the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus the Lord." It was no static creed or indifferent belief, but an ever-unfolding life. Faith for Paul was a present possession, it was also a principle of progress that drew him out in a passionate pursuit after a promised prize. May we, as many as have this principle of progress for a perfect present possession, "press toward the goal for the prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus."

2. By spreading it. Robert E. Speer has remarked that one who professes religion must do one of two things with his faith—either change it or spread it. "If it isn't true he must give it up. If it is true he must give it away." The faith of early Christianity went like a flame over the then known world. Issuing from the simple conditions of its Jewish origin, it was caught up by Paul, a man especially prepared by Jewish training and Greek culture to speak to all classes of men, and spread to all parts of the Roman Empire, being planted by the fiery apostle in all its strategic centres. There is to be found on an old church in Bybantium the following inscription commemorating the work of the great apostle to the Gentiles: "Paul, having seen face to face the divine light of heaven, filled all the earth with infinite light." May as many as read these words be baptized in the faith of Christ which wrought so mightily in the apostle. Then wherever we go we shall become centres to radiate the light into the lives of others, and soon the light of faith will illuminate our world as it lighted the Roman world of old.

To the very close of his career Paul remained obedient to the "heavenly vision." So all-powerful was his vision of faith that he was not moved by the trials and afflictions attendant on a life of godliness. Yea, he gloried in tribulations and cried, "None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself that I may finish my course with joy." His faith enabled him to surmount all obstacles, and as his life trembled a moment on its farthest horizon, he took a swift retrospect and exultantly exclaimed, "I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Then looking out toward the future, he saw the hilltops gilded with the glory of life eternal, and in triumph he shouted, "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness." What was it that carried Paul through to such a grand consummation? It was the steady power of an inspired faith in the Son of God.

Winning Forces in Soul-Saving Work.

A. W. ORWIG.

Many of these might be mentioned, but I will refer only to several.

First of all is the baptism with the Holy Spirit. The Word of God settles that declaration. It declares that "the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life." It also says, "It is the Spirit that quickeneth." And likewise it affirms, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." But God also employs human agencies. His word declares that men are "workers together with him." Also that "we are laborers together with him." Concerning Barnabas and Stephen it is declared that they were "full of the Holy Ghost."

Professed Christian workers should be "blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke." A Christian's good name is at least a part of his working capital, and he cannot afford to be indifferent to it. In order to show the importance of having the confidence of those whom we would influence for good, the following incident is pertinent.

Soon after the conversion of a once very worldly woman she engaged in mission work. Attempting to speak to a wreck of a man about his soul's salvation, he said to her, "Do you play cards?" She replied that she did not. "Do you dance?" was his next question. "I do not," she answered. "Do you go to the theater?" "No, not now," was her reply. "Very well," said he, "then you may talk to me, but I will not listen to anybody who does the things that helped to make me the bad man that I am." God may take care of our reputation, but we must take care of our character.

Another winning force or requisite in soul-saving work is true humility. Sometimes Christian workers are apt to be proud of their attainments or success. They stand on very dangerous ground, yea on the brink of spiritual ruin. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." Oh beloved, the more God uses us, the lower down we should sink in humility before him.

And let us not forget that prayer is a most effective force. It should precede, accompany, and follow all Christian work, but especially when we attempt to lead people to Jesus Christ. It should be "always laboring (striving) fervently in prayer." Those who have been the most efficient soul winners have always done a great deal of private knee-work. There ought to be more princes and princesses in prayer, prevailing with God and men.

Certainly faith is a highly important requisite in the glorious work of rescuing souls from the power of sin and Satan. Of Barnabas it was said that he was "full of faith," and that "much people was added unto the Lord." It may not take great faith to induce people to join the church but often it requires prayer and faith to get them to be Scripturally saved.

Unquestionably the Bible is of unspeakable importance in soul-winning labor. It is the great storehouse or arsenal from which to derive the best possible equipment. The better we know the Bible the greater will be our success. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." We should know what parts of it are best adapted for the different kinds of people with whom we may be called upon to deal. That is, we should exercise a holy tactfulness. Christ himself said, "Be wise as serpents and harmless as doves." He adapted himself to the circumstances or environments of men. Notice how adroitly he spoke to the "woman at the well."

A Christian man, in passing a farm house on a very warm day, asked a young woman in the yard if she would please give him a drink of water. After quenching his thirst and thanking her, he pleasantly asked, "Have you ever drank of the water of life?" That was tact, and it afterwards led to her conversion.

Love is the greatest of all winning forces for rescuing the perishing. If we would be ardent and successful soul-winners we must have the pitying, yearning, melting love of Jesus,—a love that can weep over the lost and sacrifice for them. Love must indeed be the ruling principle, the all-absorbing passion of our being.

"Did Christ o'er sinners weep,
And shall our cheeks be dry?"

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00. The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE PASSING YEARS.

HUSTON'S enfeebled health placed him at great disadvantage under the new conditions that had sprung up during his enforced absence from his church.

Reading the Old Testament Scriptures one is quite surprised at the frequent backslidings of the Israelites. After all the remarkable demonstrations of God's power and manifestations of his special care and blessing for them, they seemed to easily forget, to turn back to idols, to worship in the high places, to disobey in the face of warning and entreaty from the prophets. One can hardly understand how it would be possible for a people to be so blind to their own best interests and drift away from their God in all sorts of wickedness.

But we see history repeating itself. Have you not seen gracious revivals followed by fearful backsliding? Have you not noticed that at the close of revival meetings certain persons, members of the church, set themselves to destroy the good effect, to bring in entertainments and feasts, to joke, jolly, and laugh away all seriousness, and snigger in their sleeves, as they saw the babes in Christ stumbling back into worldliness?

It is quite remarkable how soon a spiritual church, that is supposed to be steadfast in its faith in all the fundamentals of our holy religion, can become chilled and drawn away from the truth, and the true spirit of devotion, by a highly cultured and shrewd wolf in sheep's clothing who, while he professes the greatest admiration for Christ, and marvels at the beauties and superior literature of the Scriptures, mixes the poison of modern skepticism into the meal of truth, with which he makes the bread to feed his people.

"Oh, he is so scholarly! He is such a delightful gentleman! He is remarkably well versed in literature. He has travelled extensively! His pulpit manners are so refined! Perhaps, at first, you feel a bit shocked at some of his statements, but as he argues his case and brings out his ideas of truth, and real living, you are fully convinced that he is quite right."

And thus the people become the easy, deluded victims of their polished deceivers; one by one, they give up every great essential truth of Christianity and, directly, they have no real faith. They believe nothing; they pride themselves in a diluted agnosticism. They ridicule anything approaching a dogmatic statement with reference to God, the Bible or Christian experience.

The tares had been carefully sown in Huston's spiritual wheat field and, in spite of all he could do, they grew. The years slip by rapidly after a man reaches fifty-five. Huston's congregation, especially his young people, were taught that he was becoming too old for leadership; that he could not adapt himself to the new age; that he was looking backward instead of forward. That the death of his wife had so broken him down that he had lost his mental grip; that they must bear with him a little longer, but he was more to be pitied than censured for his lack of appreciation of present conditions, and the kind of message that the times demanded.

Thus the people were weaned away from their pastor, the man who had led them to Christ and nurtured them with the gospel. It is an interesting fact that the very large majority of the people believe what they are taught by the men in the pulpit, and it appears that they are more ready to believe the teachings which harmonize with their depraved natures and the things of the world, than they are those Bible truths which insist on the crucifixion of the carnal nature and separation from the world.

We doubt if there has ever been a time in the history of this nation when there was larger opportunity and more eager welcome for false teachers than at the present time. There is a tremendous current of thought and life drifting away from the Bible, from God and righteous living. We have a class of men in our pulpits who are quick to make use of these conditions in securing their own popularity and large salary.

The wolf is becoming so popular that it is hardly necessary for him to go to the expense and waste the time of securing, and obscuring, his attractiveness by wearing the sheepskin. The bolder the assault upon the Bible the more popular the skeptical preacher becomes. It becomes almost a crime in many communities to utter any sort of objection to the teachers of doctrines that contradict the sacred and important teachings of the Holy Scriptures.

As the years passed, Huston's physical vigor gave way and the university people gradually got themselves into the Sunday school, and on the board of stewards, until they had almost complete control of the situation. They objected to holiness conventions, toned down their revivals, by and by, they insisted that these periodical, religious mobs had a bad psychological effect upon their student body, and decided that the church would try the experience of Decision Day professions and Easter ingatherings to keep up its membership.

They worked enthusiastically to bring in a multitude of unconverted children on Decision Day, and gathered in a host of people, including many roystering students, at Easter, and made much of the small expenditure of money, the large ingathering, and the beautiful and cultured manner in which they were added to the membership of the church, without bellowing around an altar and shouting up and down the aisles.

A few years of this sort of thing without a revival, and gradually introducing into the church a variety of entertainments and festivals, the church grew cold in its spiritual life and began to esteem itself very highly as a modern, up-to-date, aggressive congregation.

Through the influence of the university professors, a number of wealthy men in the city, who were growing a bit tired of the overhead expenses of the old ecclesiasticisms, under which they had grown up, came into Huston's church with the idea of less expense and larger liberty.

Huston's health was such that he was compelled to lay much of the burden of the church upon the shoulders of his assistant pastor, who was always full of praise and flattery for the old pastor. While diligently visiting among the more influential members of the congregation, he expressed his great love for Brother Huston, at the same time, expressing his deep regret that the days of his usefulness were practically over, and that he must soon hand over the responsibility of so heavy a pastorate to some one of more vigorous constitution, and, in fact, more abreast with the times.

The people were flattered and pleased with this very attractive, highly educated young brother, and always assured him that with his splendid equipment and wide experience with the congregation, he was the only one at all fitted to follow Mr. Huston in the pastorate.

Huston's fifty-ninth birthday was approaching and his secret enemies in his fold arranged to give him a great reception and banquet on his birthday, and then announce to him that they were no longer willing to have him jeopardize his life with his heavy duties, but they must have a new pastor, and that he must have a long and much needed rest, and then return to them for the quiet evening of his life to bless them with the beautiful example of a ripened Christian experience. The plans were well laid, and the schemers were happy as they drew their net about their unsuspecting victim.

Qualifications for a Minister.

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

"Be ye clean, that bear the vessels of the Lord." Isa. 52:11.

PRIMARILY this may have had reference to the priests who were to minister in the temple, but it may also apply to ministers today. Mark you, it does not say, we should be scholarly, or eloquent, or dynamic, or fearless, good as these may be, but the stress is placed upon cleanliness.

There are at least three aspects in which we should be clean.

I. Be clean in heart.

Nothing will live as long as purity. This will survive all kinds of natural or acquired ability. Be clean in heart and be so clean that a suggestive thought, not to say a coarse joke, finds no response whatever; so clean that impure people do not feel comfortable in our presence; so clean that everyone feels safe in our company; so clean that no one can conceive of our stooping to an underhanded trick.

We read, "Keep thy heart with all diligence: for out of it are the issues of life." Prov. 4:23. This would infer that if the heart is kept clean—the streams of action, yea, everything that issues from such a heart and life will be clean.

II. Be ye clean socially.

This does not necessarily imply that we should be cold and unsociable, but rather, carry a pleasantness and simplicity becoming that of an innocent child. A girl has evidently lost something very valuable when she can sit in a barber shop with limbs crossed and giggle and laugh with men. A man, though he be a minister, has evidently stooped beneath saintly dignity when he can feel "at home" in a bathing suit at these modern swimming pools and beaches. It is shocking to see a minister flop around in the sand with women who are half nude. Moody said that it was not necessary for a minister to increase his usefulness by joining a secret fraternity, and we would add, nor is it necessary for a minister to behave at "outings" and "picnics" in such a way as to cause anyone to be surprised or disappointed.

III. Be ye clean physically.

There is no excuse for untidiness. We need not be fastidious or worldly in our appearance, but clean. David asks the question, "Who shall ascend unto the hill of the Lord, or who shall stand in his holy place?" Then he answers, "He that hath clean hands and a pure heart." This may mean not only clean hands in the sense of not accepting bribes, but it may also mean physically clean—finger nails, collars, shoes, teeth, etc. In fact, the general appearance of a man should be so clean that the most refined person would not hesitate taking the sacrament at his hands. It does not cost much to keep the clothes sponged and pressed, so that if they are not expensive, they at least convince the people that the holy mind and clean body inside the clothes have good taste. While there may not be any particular sin in being slouchy, it does not add to a minister's bearing and influence. God grant that we may so behave ourselves as we go in and out before the people, that we may be true representatives of the wonderful Christ.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

CAMP SYCHAR IN PROSPECT.

Thus far our contemplation of Camp Sychar has been largely retrospective. Now with the passing of the months, as the time draws near for this year's camp, our thoughts are more prospective, and we begin to think of what is to come, rather than that which has been.

Heretofore we have been thinking of the sermons, the testimonies, the singing, the victories of previous camps. Now we turn our attention to that which lies before us; and our prayers are ascending for Sychar's next camp.

As we contemplate the next camp which opens August 8, our faith is strong for another season of victory. We can always depend upon God's presence and power so long as we meet conditions, and we feel assured that the program for this year's camp has been wrought out under the direction of the Holy Spirit and with the sole object and purpose of building up the kingdom of God upon earth, and of glorifying God in the salvation, reclamation and sanctification of precious souls. With this purpose in view we are sure of the blessing of God upon the work, and are fully expecting him to place his seal of approval upon the camp as in other years.

From the human side the preparations were never more complete. Sychar has ever aimed to place upon her workers' list only the best to be obtained, and has in practically every instance succeeded in this endeavor, the very best talent and workers of the greatest ability and deepest consecration having been secured. And we feel that this year is no exception to the rule, and that the personnel of this year's workers has never been excelled. A brief contemplation of these workers will prove an inspiration to us.

First we mention Rev. E. W. Petticoord who needs no introduction. He has been on the corps of workers at Sychar in previous years and is well-known not only to Sychar patrons, but is widely known throughout the length and breadth of our land. His forceful messages last year are still ringing in our memory, and we look forward with glad anticipation to hearing him again.

The inimitable Rev. C. M. Dunaway will be with us again also. It is with pleasure that we remember his former messages, messages that he never fails to get across to his hearers. We welcome the opportunity of sitting at his feet and hearing him open to us the truths of the gospel in his characteristic, forceful way.

The only worker this year that may be regarded as new is Rev. T. M. Anderson, and he comes to us not as a stranger, for many of those who attend Sychar have had the pleasure of hearing him at other camps and meetings. But to any to whom he may be strange we are glad to say that Rev. Anderson is one of the best of present day evangelists. Sychar is indeed fortunate in having been able to secure him for this season of the camp.

Of the other workers it is sufficient to but call attention to their names as they are well known and rank high in their respective fields of work.

The name of Miss Anna McGhie as worker among the young people is sufficient to cause those who have attended her meetings at Sychar and elsewhere in the past years to rejoice and to look forward with great anticipation to real spiritual feasts as they listen to her messages and counsel with her on questions affecting their spiritual lives.

The children will be delighted to know that those efficient and godly workers among the children, Miss May Gorsuch and Miss Ollie Tanner are to be with us again this year, and this guarantees another season of real blessing and enjoyment for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Wells need no introduction to Sychar goers. The mere mention of their names is sufficient guarantee that the music at the main auditorium will be of the same high order as last year. We find ourselves looking forward with pleasurable expectation as we think of the inspiring song services last year under the direction of these competent, consecrated servants of God.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Davidson are on the force this year as song leaders at the Young People's Tabernacle, and those who have heard them sing at the camp and elsewhere in former years will be glad to know that they are to be with us this year as regular song leaders. Their presence and service will prove a real blessing to all who shall be privileged to hear them.

The Ring Meetings which have been such sources of inspiration and help in other years will continue to be a feature of the camp this year. Rev. Guiler who had charge of these services last year will probably be in charge again this year. If not he, then some other consecrated, Spirit-filled servant of God will be responsible for them and the good work will go on. We are anticipating glorious times at these services.

The other appointments of the camp will be taken care of as in other years with a view to the comfort and convenience of campers. It is something of an undertaking to provide for the crowds that attend Sychar camp, and much credit is due to the management for the efficient way in which this is accomplished year after year. This year everything possible is being done that in this respect also the high standard of efficiency attained in other years may be maintained.

Already we find ourselves planning for these ten glorious days. While not exactly "forgetting the things which are past" but rather looking back over them with happy remembrance, we are in a great measure replacing them in our minds by "looking forward to the things that are before."

Only one thing comes to suggest sadness. There will be some faces which we will not see at Sychar this year. They have gone to their long home. They are among the redeemed through awaiting our coming. But even in our sadness we rejoice to realize that our loss is Heaven's gain and these are beyond the reach of sorrow, pain and temptation. We pray for the special blessing of the Father upon those of our friends who are thus called upon to mourn, and for the richest blessings of God upon Camp Sychar this year. As we look forward with such assurance of blessing, and with such pleasurable anticipation of a blessed time of victory, let us not forget to pray.

H. W. Middleton.

A REAL REVIVAL OF REAL RELIGION.

The writer makes no apology for the headline. Many are saying, "The old time revival is a thing of the past." Some mean by this that they do not believe in the things the old time revival stood for. Never was the old time revival, and all it stood for, more needed than now. If the reader of this report had been present on the last Sunday evening of the Cavour Parish revival and had witnessed the public confession of previously unconverted church members and others who had been saved in the meetings, and believers who had been sanctified; if you had looked into their faces and heard them sing, "Since Jesus came into my heart, floods of joy o'er my soul, like the sea billows roll, etc.;" if you had been bothered with doubts as to the possibility of the old time revival your doubts would have vanished. If some one is asking: What about a few months from now, the answer is obvious. If the pulpit furnished the right kind of food for babes in Christ, and the church members live Christianity, the new converts will be all right and others will have been won for Christ. The Christian Church was born in the midst of pentecostal fire and cannot live in any other atmosphere.

There are a goodly number on the Cavour Parish who believe the "Upper Room" experience was not exclusively for the one hundred and twenty in Jerusalem two thousand years ago, but that all who will tarry and meet every condition preparatory thereto will receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost. With faith based on this belief, a revival was prayed for and planned. Evangelist H. E. Copeland, of Oskaloosa, Iowa, was secured to do the preaching. Last year a tent was erected about midway of the parish, the pastor doing the preaching during a three weeks' revival campaign. The work of the parish having since been extended, it was deemed wise this year to have revival meetings in two centers. According to Bishop Henderson's plan, we had arranged for the assistance of a neighboring pastor in an intensive visitation campaign preceding the meetings. Circumstances having prevented the neighboring pastor from coming, a number of consecrated laymen went out by twos and did some real work in visiting and praying with the people. We had determined to be ready for the revival when the evangelist arrived. We were not disappointed. On the first day a goodly number sought either pardon or purity.

At the beginning of the campaign, storms made country roads, off the gravel, all but impassable. Some of the time many could not get to the services. A faithful layman furnished the pastor with a horse and buggy, with which he drove about seventy miles and visited thirty families during the first week of the meetings. Having been announced that this was not to be simply a church membership campaign, but an effort to get people saved and sanctified, it was soon discovered that those who did not want to meet the conditions of salvation were studiously staying away from the meetings, hence the need of continued evangelistic visitings, which was kept up throughout the campaign.

When it seemed evident that we could not finish in four weeks, Evangelist Copeland unhesitatingly cancelled a large city church date and planned to stay six weeks. God blessed the sacrifice of the evangelist and the faithfulness of local workers, reinforced by friends from twenty to forty-five miles distant, who had been in previous meetings with Brother Copeland, and more than sixty definitely sought the Lord during the meetings. About thirty-five sought pardon and about twenty-five the blessing of entire sanctification.

The pastor testified that it was the most blessed six weeks he had spent for many years. Never did a people have the Gospel preached to them more thoroughly or more faithfully. In stormy nights, when only a few came, the sermon was just as thoroughly and faithfully preached. It is fully believed that the atmosphere of the parish is yet largely under the influence of this great meeting, and that results will continue throughout the year, or even indefinitely. The outstanding feature of the whole campaign is the quality of the work done. There will be a goodly number received into the church as a result of the meetings. It is a great joy that numbers of church members who had never been converted were brought into the light and saved by the grace of God. God have mercy on pastors who are filling up the church with unconverted church members. The offering for the evangelist was quickly and easily made up to about three hundred and twenty-five dollars.

Some incidents of the campaign will be interesting, and we trust will glorify God. Previous to the opening of the meetings, four persons sought the Lord through personal visitation. During the meetings two school teachers, who were visited after school hours, prayed through to victory. One of them, though a church member for years, had never been converted. A young man who was rushing to get into the field with his "Farm-All" tractor was persuaded to take time to go to his room and pray for the forgiveness of his sins. He had never been converted, or a member of any church. One man was found in the barn getting his tractor ready for spring work. In thirty minutes visitor and visited were on their knees in a horse stall, and victory came. The visitor had to hurry off to meeting, but secured a promise that the farmer would read the Bible and pray with his family that night, which he did. A pretty sight on the last night of the meetings was that father and mother at the altar with all of their children, except the baby. One splendid mother, after seeking earnestly the blessing of sanctification, said, "Through the inconsistency of a bad temper I gave up family worship, but, God helping me, I will resume this duty and never give it up again." A young woman, member of the church, said, "No, I am not saved; just give me time to think," adding afterwards, "I cannot figure out the reason for this condition unless it is that the preachers have not been giving us the truth." What does the future hold for us when whole congregations, to the last individual, are admittedly without the saving knowledge of Christ? Jesus said in Matt. 15:14, "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall in the ditch." Of course, if what James Moffatt said in the North Western of March 15, 1928, viz., "It is no longer possible to believe that the stories in the Gospels are in every detail literally correct, or even that Jesus said all that he is reported to have said," Jesus may not have said that, thus furnishing comfort for the blind leaders. According to this, and some other misinterpretations of the Bible, we are not sure of anything Jesus is reported to have said. We cannot help fearing that some of these wisecracks will not have a chance to apologize to Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.

COVINGTON AND NEWPORT MEETINGS.

We were in two short meetings at Covington and Newport, Ky. These were good meetings for the time we had to give them. I was called away in the midst of our efforts there to Roanoke, Va., on account of the illness of my son. Brother and Sister Wireman are doing a great and needy work in these wicked cities; a work, it seems, no one else is willing to do. They are of our church, but are doing an independent mission work and God is blessing their efforts. Brothers Maxwell, Clark and Gamble stood by us all they could. I preached once for Brother Clark, and once for Brother Gamble. After seeing my son on the road to recovery, I hurried on home for a few days, then on to Brother Ed. Hilburn, pastor at Mannsville, Ky. The meeting was held in Mt. Zion Church, an old country church with some old-fashioned saints and we had an old-fashioned revival. And why not, with one of the best men in the Louisville Conference as pastor, with a few as saintly men and women as can be found anywhere; the church was wonderfully revived and a goodly number blessed. At the close we took a fine class into the church and, the best of all, they were all saved during the revival. I had one of the best homes I was ever entertained in. Brother and Sister Rufus Phillips treated me like a king. I was in a number of good homes for a meal and was kindly treated by them all.

When they loaded my car with the many good things to bring home with me, I insisted they take the donation to their pastor, but they gave me to understand their pastor would be looked after.

We arrived in Wilmore just as the convention opened and heard some of the greatest preaching we ever heard in our life. This was a feast of good things indeed.

We are now in Crittenden, Ky., for a month's battle, and desire the prayers of all praying people. I have two open dates between now and Conference, June 1-16, and August 4-15. As this August date is between a Kentucky and Ohio camp would be glad to help some camp or church in Kentucky or Ohio.

ULDINE UTLEY IN FAYETTEVILLE, W. VA.

Uldine Utley, America's famous 17-year-old evangelist, has just closed a very successful campaign here. Union services were held in the large Auditorium of the M. E. Church. The church was filled to overflowing and each night people were turned away. Never before have we listened to such a consecrated young person. Her face shines with the love of God and her messages are backed up by the power of the Holy Spirit.

A number of young people and older ones were blessed, and we believe lasting good has resulted. Her last Sunday here she gave her vision of the Rose of Sharon. As we listened it seemed we could hear the stately tread of the Son of God and the rustle of his seamless robe.

Uldine began preaching at eleven years of age. God has wonderfully blessed her work. From East to West, North and South, she has carried the gospel story. The story of her conversion and the Baptism with the Holy Spirit will never be forgotten by the people of Fayetteville. We give God all the glory for such a privilege of hearing Uldine.

How to Obtain the Desires of our Hearts.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

At the bottom of every pursuit in life there is the one objective—that we may get what we want. Of course, not always in the proportion and quantity that we wish, but so far as our means will allow. The farmer plows his fields, sows his seed, cultivates the grain in order that he may have that which will satisfy his appetite, and to sell in order to procure that which he cannot produce himself.

The parent toils from morning to night in order that he may be able to supply the demands of a growing family, from whom he expects to derive pleasure and satisfaction in the years to come. The student assiduously applies himself to the tasks before him each day, that he may gain the desire to be wise and useful in life. So it goes on through all the avocations of life, the end of which is some sort of satisfaction for ourselves, the realization of the desires of our hearts.

We are told in Psalm 37:4, how we may always obtain the desires of our hearts, namely, "Delight thyself in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of their heart." The word "also" refers to a statement in the preceding verse, which makes it necessary to a correct understanding of the passage quoted above. It reads thus: "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."

This passage may be interpreted temporally and spiritually. The person who goes about doing good will always be a welcome visitor in any community and, better still, a most welcome resident. But the spiritual interpretation brings us to a more advanced state, and one rewarded in a most remarkable manner. To delight in the Lord is more than to do good, it is more than to be fed; it assures us that if we delight in the Lord we shall have no unsatisfied craving of the heart.

Delight in the Lord is a recipe for all we need while journeying through this vale of tears. And we need to note that this promise makes sure all we desire by simply delighting ourselves—in the Lord. Other ambitions are obtained by some sort of investment, but our Father guarantees that we shall "want no good thing" if we delight ourselves in him.

But, dear Reader, in order to be able to "delight ourselves in the Lord" we must have the fountain of our being absolutely free from everything that is inharmonious to the Divine Indweller. There must be no counter-currents in the soul, nor any cravings of the heart which divine holiness and love dare not satisfy.

Some one in commenting on this thought has said: "In view of the actual facts of experience, it might seem that this promise must have a very liberal interpretation. For many of the most saintly persons suffer great afflictions, and make the usual and proper efforts to escape them. And the greatest desire of all purified believers is the arrest of all wickedness and the universal spread of righteousness: and this desire of the good has not been satisfied in the case of a single saint. But religious experience contains many paradoxes, of which this is one of the most interesting. The most afflicted Christian who delights in the Lord realizes an inward rest and contentment while he is making effort to escape from his sufferings. And amidst the sorrow felt at sins of the world, the purified "fret not themselves because of evil doers," and experience a sense that every craving of the heart is satisfied. And to be always delighting in the Lord far transcends any suffering, disappointment or sorrow that can befall us in this mortal life. Our one all-consuming desire is to "know HIM", and having this knowledge we crave naught else beside.

Announcement.

Since the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness has trusted me with the responsibility of leadership for the coming year, I wish to announce to all interested friends that I desire to make up a very full slate for National Conventions beginning in the East about November 1st and continuing across the country including a couple of months on the Pacific Coast the latter part of the season.

It is my plan to make the evangelistic emphasis the great issue in all of these conventions. It is also my plan to so manage the program as not to make it unduly expensive. I will appreciate communications with any inquiries you may desire to make from friends in the different States at an early date. If any place has decided preference as to workers, please communicate the same as quickly as possible.

C. W. BUTLER, President.

Resolution.

Whereas, the movement of Rationalism, Liberalism, Destructive Higher Criticism and Darwinian Evolution, commonly known as Modernism has made serious inroads upon the religious life of America:

Whereas, it has invaded the institutions of learning throughout the land and has scattered the seeds of scepticism and infidelity and undermined the faith of multitudes of the rising generation;

Whereas, this so-called Modernism is put forward and maintained as the very essence of progress and as being pre-eminently scientific, social and Christian, making it all the more dangerous;

Therefore, Be It Resolved: That the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness in convention assembled, put itself on record as being unalterably opposed to Modernism as herein described, and as being in favor of Fundamentalism so far as it stands for the Mosaic (Genesis) account of the creation and fall of man; the Inspiration of the Bible, the Virgin Birth, the Deity, the Vicarious Atonement and Bodily Resurrection of Jesus Christ.

Further, Be It Resolved: In view of the fact that the Association stands committed to the cause of Christian education and also recognizes the serious situation that exists in the educational world today—that we urge upon religious parents everywhere the necessity of sending their children to schools and colleges where their morals will be protected and where their faith will not be wrecked but strengthened and confirmed in the truths of the Bible.

Finally, Be It Resolved: That the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness re-emphasize above all things the work of evangelism and the evangelical doctrines of repentance, saving faith, regeneration, the witness of the Spirit and entire sanctification as a second work of grace wrought by the purifying and empowering baptism with the Holy Spirit.

EVANGELISM AND ELSE.

REV. C. F. WIMBERLY, D. D.

In the face of our tremendous slump, both at home and on the foreign field, we are alarmed over the situation. There is not another concern on earth that would long continue with such an annual loss, as given out by our compilers of facts. We are making heavy investments, and the demands grow steadily; every pastor's mail is loaded with communications from our boards—all of them good, worthy, and necessary demands. Each one at headquarters is urging the importance of his claim, and that it must be attended to at once, or the Cause will suffer. We are sure none of them overstates the case. One of our good bishops sounded a true note recently about our machinery—that it is getting top-heavy. We do not believe any pastor can give full attention to them all and have any time left for his own special duties. We can only do our best, and we are kept on the stretch.

Yes, something must be done, and speedily, if we are to recover the ground—that is not lost, but ground we are losing, conferences, not a few, reporting a loss of membership. The loss may be explained, but it is depressing, just the same. Our organization was never so well adjusted as now; our "skilled laborers" were never so well qualified as today, according to modern standards; but the grist from the hopper is not commensurate with the investment and the organization. Deny this, if we will, and explain it all, nevertheless, the facts remain and are startling. We are not "delivering the goods," to use street parlance.

So, the cry is sounded out from the highest authority of our church, "We must have a revival." The call is for a new emphasis on Evangelism. Our church has just read the book by Dr. Goddard, "The Methodist Evangel." It is timely, with both point and purpose. The theme of this book is Evangelism. The social order must be evangelized; commerce, politics, education and the home must all be evangelized, and strange as it may seem, according to this author—the Church must be evangelized. Herein, we face our biggest task. All our interests could be easily cared for, if once the church could be evangelized. Ours is a case of creeping paralysis—moving from the extremities inward toward the vital organs of our religious life. The malady is almost chronic, and it began some two or three decades ago. It began when we began to cheapen our Evangelism. In some instances, Evangelism cheapened itself, and caused much of the trouble.

We may say what we please about our old-time, out-of-date Methodist revivals, and the new needs for a new order. There is no new order; sin remains the same, and if there is to be a remedy, it must remain the same. Other denominations may get on with easy methods—card-signing, confirmation, plans of evangelism; but we are not built after that pattern. When we fashion after other than our own ideals and methods, which are distinct, and peculiar to ourselves, we lose our glory, and our heritage.

We shall continue to lose membership, and have even a greater shrinkage in the treasures of our many noble causes, so long as we try to imitate other Evangelism than our own. Is not the gospel one and the same, regardless of denominations, and is not the human heart the same listed under any name? Oh, yes; but our line of appeal and standards, we repeat, are peculiar and different. Ours is a church with a soul surcharged with a passion for the lost—believing men lost, and with but one remedy, and with but one application—the Blood, by the impartation of the Holy Ghost. The heart of our whole system, our many and church-wide enterprises—home and abroad—have but one objective, the one objective of God's Son in this world—evangelism. Good news for a lost world. When we endow colleges; add departments for this, that, or the other, when we build hospitals, erect half-million dollar churches, and spend twenty-five thousand dollars for a pipe organ—there should be but one objective—the message of redemption to lost men. If there are other things in view, it is getting money and doing things under false pretence. State and private institutions may do things for intellectual and economic ends; but all of our organization, in whatever capacity, is part of the Church of Jesus Christ who is the Head; therefore we can have but one ultimate objective—seeking to save that which was lost. He came for that purpose, and we as his ambassadors are circumscribed to the one end he sought.

This long preamble leads our discussion to a few things we wish to say about evangelism, and when we say this word, we mean Methodist Evangelism. Our observations have not been theory, or from books. On our first circuit, after the "first round," we began a continuous revival meeting, lasting all winter. This was in the fall of 1895, and this has been our program in every charge since, up through every class of appointments, and also helping the brethren in their revivals. It has not been a long range conception, but a close-up, first-hand, and because of this experience, we feel in a measure qualified us for an expression.

First of all in importance, Evangelism presupposes a Fallen Race, a race without God, and in sin. So long as we tamper with this Biblical, Orthodox, Methodist doctrine of Original Sin, explain it away, play on the soft pedal, talking about our "little angels," in dealing with our children and young people, the temper will all be taken out of our Damascus Blade of Truth. If we can meet the needs of a fallen race by kindergarten training and the like—then Christ's mission to this world was a mistake. It was all unnecessary; his substitutionary death was a needless sacrifice.

Our whole system of theology is wrong; our fathers of Methodism—from Wesley down, were all mistaken. Oh, the sacrifice of our early "Pioneers of Methodism." Think of the lost motion the whole scheme has involved, and it was not found out for over one hundred years of hard service. The salvation of childhood was provided for in the Atonement; but after accountability they must be taught to face the truth of a lost condition. "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish," must mean there are no exceptions. If the race is not lost—only mentally and physically diseased, let us be done with our preaching; if sanitation, education, and environment will do the work, we should lay off our Good News Gospel. If something else—anything else—will save men, or children—then is our preaching in vain.

Evangelism, therefore that will meet the needs of Twentieth Century intellectualism and conceit—is the message that men are lost, requiring repentance toward God, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Evangelism presupposes the need of the "New Birth." "Ye must be born again," was said without modification. Scriptural Evangelism should bring men to a consciousness of salvation by the "Witness of the Spirit," and Adoption. The Holy Ghost will still plant upon the soul the "Spirit of Adoption" of all who will meet the conditions.

Furthermore, our Evangelism must "go on," as it were, if Methodistic: "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." That means something, if it means anything. We know of no way whereby a conference, association, synod, or an opinion of any man, or group of men, learned to the nth degree, can set aside this ipse dixit of God. It is being done, we grant, very satisfactorily, but will that suffice when the "Books are opened."

Our Evangelism will be fox-fire and spurious until a most positive note is put into it. It must not be a "new message for a new age," but a new emphasis on old truth. We must make no uncertain sound; the line must be drawn, and then the Holy Ghost will as of old reveal sin, and take the redemptive truth of Christ and show it unto the lost. Brethren, the people are not to blame. We are the ambassadors of this ministry; we are the trustees, as Dr. Goddard has said so pointedly, and the people perish for this Bible knowledge. We should cease saying so much about Evangelism, unless we mean to do something about it.

The Necessity that Jesus shall Return to Reign on the Earth.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

JESUS will return to earth again. This was prophesied before he was born, and he definitely promised it when he was here. He will come "without sin unto salvation," not again to die in atonement for sin, but to reign and rule from David's throne. He will then be Immanuel, God with us, the Prince of peace. We know these things from God's Word. We are sure, also, that God has a reason for so planning it. We believe and trust God, without understanding his reason, because his thoughts are too high for us.

But, we can readily see at least one reason why Jesus must return to earth and take the reins of human government into his own hands; and it seems to be reason enough, if there are no others.

That reason, perhaps the chief and the only one, is, that man, even at his best, is incapable of self-government. This is true, both individually and collectively. If it be said that man has governed himself all through the past, the very character of his self-government is proof of his incapacity. This is true of those who have tried to follow God, as well as others. The entire history of man, from Cain and Abel to this day, is ghastly with war, bloodshed, rapine, cruelty, suffering, injustice.

The primary reason for all this is sin, man's sin. And also, apart from the factor of sin, we easily see that man is not capable of ordering his own life aright. This is true of us individually. Take a hundred fully saved, intelligent men and women, each sincere in the purpose to be and do right. Among them, there will be honest differences of opinion as to personal conduct. It comes from faulty human judgment. In the company there may be a dozen various ideas of what is best. Certainly some, probably most, perhaps all, are in error. It is not moral wrong, but human infirmity.

When it comes to community government, the town; city, state or nation, the situation is much aggravated. What individual has wisdom sufficient to be president of the United States, with its hundred millions of people, and make no mistakes in administering domestic and international affairs? What company of individuals can so do? Look at the president's cabinet and at congress. See the debates on tariff, farm relief, etc. Men do not agree, because no one knows. Who is capable of managing a town of two thousand population, or of two hundred, and make no blunders? Who can be judge of a court, and always give a just decision, charge or sentence? What parent can always do the best thing in ordering his own home? Again, this may not involve moral wrong, but only human infirmity.

It is little different in the church, composed of God's people, which is divided and subdivided, over doctrine, polity, ordinances, government, etc. We do not agree there, because no one knows.

Thus, when we analyze it, we quickly see that finite man is incapable of self-government, in either church or state. The wonder is, not at the injustice and wrong among men; but that there is not more of it. And, beside, we are so accustomed to the existing order, that we O. K. things as being good, which are really unfair and oppressive to some. We both suffer and inflict wrongs, unsuspectingly.

Now, imagine any individual taking over world-rule, and bringing about universal righteousness of government! It is too big a task for the best and wisest man or woman who ever lived, or ever will live. Under human rule there cannot be an "earth wherein dwelleth righteousness" of administration between man and man. The futile attempt at a community of goods in the Spirit-filled apostolic church, settled that for us. Those seven men purposed well but the task of dealing fairly with each case on its individual merits, was beyond human wisdom.

But, when Jesus returns to reign over all the earth, he will have Divine omniscience as well as authority and power. He will find things on earth much as they now are. He will know just how to meet every question and solve every problem in exact right and justice. He will know how to handle such a situation as that in China now. He will know what to do about Russia, Italy, France, Nicaragua, Mexico—and the United States. He will know how to meet the prohibition, narcotic, opium and other similar questions, settle strikes, avoid panics, etc. He will know how to bring order out of chaos, peace instead of war, good will for hate, justice to displace oppression, etc. He will be able to disarm the nations, to scrap war navies, aeroplanes, artillery, and to disband the armies.

Yes, earth needs Jesus, the Son of God, on its throne! God started man under a Theocracy, and we must come back to that. This is the Divine program. It has been a long, crooked and weary path that mankind has trodden, an alien from God, the prodigal wasting his substance in riotous living. But, Jesus is coming to rule; "He whose right it is, and I will give it unto him." "Yes, I come quickly. Amen! Yes, come Lord Jesus!"

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

I have often heard that there were many devout Christians among the slaves of olden times. I have heard my mother tell of one of their old slaves dying, and there was a holy glow shone round about his head. There is no doubt he went straight to heaven when his breath left its tenement of clay.

This week, I am giving you a beautiful story about "Cuff," a negro slave, which indicates that there were some devout slaves. Being a slave did not prevent them from being children of the Lord, and our heavenly Father was just as near to them in their bondage and servitude as he was to the Israelites of old. Our Father is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that believeth on him is accepted of him. I know you will enjoy this beautiful story of Cuff.

Cuff.

Cuff was a negro slave who lived in the South before the war. He was a joyful Christian and a faithful servant. His master, however, was in need of money and one day a young planter, who was an infidel, came to buy Cuff. The price was agreed upon and the Christian slave was sold to the infidel. But in parting with him the master said, "You will find Cuff a good worker and you can trust him; he will suit you in every respect but one."

"And what is that?" said the master.

"He will pray and you can't break him of it; but that is his only fault."

"I'll soon whip that out of him," remarked the infidel.

"I fear not," said the former master, "and would not advise you to try it; he would rather die than give up."

Cuff proved faithful to the new master, the same as he had to the old. The master soon got word that he had been praying, and on calling him said, "Cuff, you must not pray any more, we can't have any praying around here; never let me hear any more about this nonsense."

Cuff replied, "O Massa, I loves to pray to Jesus, and when I pray I loves you and Misses all the more, and can work all the harder for you."

But he was sternly forbidden ever to pray any more under penalty of a severe flogging. That evening, when the day's work was done, he talked to his God, like Daniel of old, as he had aforetime. Next morning he was summoned to appear before his master, who demanded of him why he had disobeyed him. "O Massa, I has to pray, I can't live without it," said Cuff. At this the master flew into a terrible rage and ordered Cuff to be tied to the whipping post and his shirt off. He then applied the rawhide with all the force he possessed until his young wife ran out in tears and begged him to stop. The man was so infuriated that he threatened to punish her next, if she did not leave him, then continued to apply the lash until his strength was exhausted. Then he ordered the bleeding back washed in salt water; the shirt on and the poor slave to be about his work. Cuff went away singing in a groaning voice:

"My suffering time will soon be o'er,

When I shall sigh and weep no more."

He worked faithfully all that day, though much in pain, as the blood oozed from his back where the lash had made long, deep furrows. Meantime, God was working on the master. He saw his wickedness and cruelty to that poor soul, whose only fault had been his fidelity; and conviction seized upon him; by night he was in great distress of mind. He went to bed but could not sleep. Such was his agony at midnight that he awoke his wife and told her that he was dying.

"Shall I call in a doctor?" she asked.

"No, no; I don't want a doctor—is there anyone on the plantation that can pray for me? I am afraid that I am going to hell."

"I don't know of any one," said his wife, "except the slave you punished this morning."

"Do you think he would pray for me?" he anxiously inquired.

"Yes, I think he would," she replied. "Well, send for him quickly."

On going after Cuff they found him on his knees in prayer, and when called he supposed it was to be punished again. On being taken to the master's room he found him writhing in agony. The master, groaning, said, "O Cuff, can you pray for me?"

"Yes, bress de Lawd, I'se been prayin' for you all night," and at this fell on his knees and asked the Lord for guidance to point his master to the Lamb of God which beareth away the sin of the world. When he arose his master in greater agony than ever exclaimed, "O Cuff, can't you tell me what I must do to be saved?" "No, Massa, I knows nothin' you can do. God saw that you and I were just pure sinners fit for nothin' but de lake of fire, but He loved us so much that He sent de Lord Jesus to suffer in our place, and when He hung on de cross God laid on Him all our sins, past, present and future; and He suffered and died for 'em there, and when He arose from de grave dey were all gone as far as de east is from de west."

"But, Cuff, must I not repent and pray to be forgiven?" "No, indeed, youse jus' a dead man and de fust thing you needs is life. De Lord Jesus is de only Life dere is. Jus' receive Him and den you'll have plenty of time for repentin' and prayin'."

"But how can I know I am saved." Cuff opened his Testament and read, Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth My Word and believeth Him that sent Me hath everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment, but is passed from death unto life.—John 5:24. "You see it's jus' hearin' and believin' and havin'!" The Spirit applied the Word and the light of life entered the master's soul, and together they mingled tears of joy for the wonderful love that saved both master and slave with the same salvation. Before morning the mistress was saved, too, and the whole plantation was soon aware of the great change that had been wrought.

Cuff was at once liberated and together master and slave traveled through the South witnessing the transforming power of the love of God.

Reader, if you haven't this love in your heart you are missing everything worth living for in this world or the next.

Lovingly,

AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Tennessee girl join your happy circle of boys and girls? I am eleven years old, have light hair, bobbed, blue eyes, medium complexion. I weigh about sixty-four pounds. I have one sister and one brother. I am the oldest. I am a Christian and belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. My father and mother are Christians and belong to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Who can guess my first name? It begins with D and ends with Y, and has seven letters in it. Whoever guesses it I will send them my picture some time. I will ring off before Mr. W. B. wakes up.

D. Oliver.

Pleasant Shade, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Ohio girl join your band of boys and girls? I am in the seventh grade at school. I am twelve years old. Have I a twin? My birthday is on the second day of January. I am five feet tall and have brown hair and eyes. Can any one guess my middle name? It starts with L and ends with A, and has six letters in it.

Eleanor L. Burcham.

Miller, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I can we get stars and pins. I go to school and am in the sixth grade. I am eleven years of age. My teacher's name is Mrs. Marchell Archer. I like her very much. My birthday is August 24. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. We are going to have a program at the end of school. I would like to correspond with some girls about my age. I will try and answer all letters I receive. I hope that Mr. W. B. doesn't get this letter, for I want to see it in print. I hope Aunt Bettie and all the cousins are enjoying themselves.

Ella Roof Johnson.

Rt. 2, Greensboro, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for a Fitzgerald girl to join your happy band of girls and boys? I was eight years old April 15. I am in the second grade. My teacher's name is Miss Barfield. My Sunday school teacher's name is Mrs. Evans. Mother takes The Pentecostal Herald and I like the tenth page. I will close with love for Aunt Bettie and the Band.

Mary Ellen Brannon.

P. O. Box 22, Fitzgerald, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Georgia boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old. My birthday is June 8. I am in the 5th grade. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. Mother takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald, so I will close for this time.

James Wesley Brannon.

Box 266, Fitzgerald, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a down east girl of the Bay State join the happy band of boys and girls? This afternoon I happened to pick up one of my uncle's papers and turned to page ten in The Herald. After reading some very interesting letters, I asked my uncle if I could write a letter and get acquainted, (for it would be a good way to know people all over the United States). He gave me encouragement, so I hope this will be published before Mr. W. B. gets it. I am fourteen years old and would like very much to correspond with someone and would try to get a picture of myself. I go to the Nazarene Church of Lowell. Our church has a membership of about 200 and about 223 in Sunday school. A few weeks ago we had revival meetings conducted by Sister Crooks of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Leaman, of Canton, Ohio, and their eight-year-old son helped to sing. He was a cute little singer. I wonder if you heard about China, about the famine? It is said that one man could live on one dollar for one month.

Myrtle Gordon.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Illinois girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eight years old and in the third grade. I have one half mile to go to school. I got an average of 96 4-5 on examination. I go to Sunday school every Sunday that I can. We are thinking about getting some little tame rabbits. We live on a farm and have two little calves and a little colt. I have two sisters named Dorothy and Maryanna. I hope to see my letter in print. I would like for some little girl to write to me and see if she could guess my middle name. It begins with M and ends with E, and has eight letters in it.

FALLEN ASLEEP

YOUNG.

Rev. Daniel W. Young, 63 years old, minister of the Methodist Church, of Lawrenceburg, Ky., died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clyde Mitchell. He had been in declining health for a year, and for two months had been confined to his room. Mr. Young was born in Anderson county, Ky., December 29, 1866, and with the exception of a few years spent in Woodford county, he lived his entire life in Lawrenceburg and Anderson county. He had been a minister for 30 years.

He was the son of Benjamin Young and Alice Carter. His father died when he was only a child. He is survived by his step-father, J. M. Carter; one sister, Mrs. Louis Guyn; two brothers, Logan Carter and Orville Carter, all of Louisville.

He was married to Louella Alderson, March 30, 1886. Besides his wife he is survived by ten sons and daughters.

Funeral services were conducted at the Methodist Episcopal Church Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. R. F. Jordan, of Vanceburg, former pastor of the church, officiating, assisted by Rev. R. L. Harney, the pastor; Rev. William M. Stallings, Rev. J. Tyler Davis and Rev. W. G. Eldred.

With the passing of D. W. Young, minister, business man, good neighbor, fast and firm friend, Lawrenceburg loses one of the best citizens of which any city or community can boast. D. W. Young was uniformly good, uniformly honest, uniformly upright, and his every action revealed an intent to do unto others as he would have others do unto him. Although family and friends will miss him as long as life endures, sweet solace may be derived from the knowledge that he performed life's duties as only a true man can and set an example worthy of emulation.

ROSE.

Feb. 6, 1929, Mrs. Margaret E. Rose departed this life and went to live with Jesus and the loved ones gone before. She was born in Morgan county, Ky., July 15, 1861; was united in marriage to John D. Rose, of Wolfe Co., Ky., Feb. 23, 1877. To them were born eight children. She has been a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South, since early womanhood. Her suffering was great the last two months of her illness, but she bore it patiently, and was often heard to say, "It's alright; not my will, Lord, but thine be done." She leaves five daughters, two sisters and one brother, besides a host of friends and relatives to mourn her loss. We look to Jesus for comfort in trials like these, fully realizing that he will sustain us by his grace and that he doeth all things well. God alone knows our heartaches when we realize there will be no more family gatherings at the old home we all love so well, but it seemingly has brought us in closer touch with our heavenly home, for it seems that heaven is nearer since her going. My prayer is that we may each one be faithful, so we can make that undivided family in heaven which was one of her daily prayers.

Her daughter, Mrs. James Roberts.

PIGG.

Just one year ago, June 12, the death angel crept into our home, just as the lovely sun began to peep over the horizon to help scatter darkness, and claimed for its victim the husband and father, George W. Pigg.

How sad to know his place in the home is vacant and we see his dear face no more in this world, but we have a blessed assurance that he is at rest and we can go to him. Yes, he is gone but not forgotten, and we will ever cherish those sweet memories. He was near eighty-six years of age, born July 14, 1842.

His grave was covered with flowers as silent messages of love from friends and loved ones. The host of friends turned their backs on the new-made grave to take up the ever present duties and keep in memory the life of our dear husband, father and grandfather, etc., who had gone to be with loved ones beyond the stars.

He and his wife had been married more than fifty years, and their union was blessed with six children. The many doctors and nurses were very kind. He rejoiced in the Lord's service and called for prayers and songs.

Since this year is gone we miss him but little less, but we are so glad we feel heaven is richer and we must all be true, as he was so anxious that all of us meet him over there.

We stood beside our father's bed
And knew the end was nearing,
And heard the gentle, weeping
Of the ones who loved him best.
And still we hoped and still we prayed,

And yet somehow were fearing,
That very soon this tired one
Would know that dreamless rest.

His daughter,
Rev. Susie Pigg Eagan.

EVETT.

In memory of our little darling Mildred Irene Evett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Evett, born August 3, 1926, and died August 4, 1928.

The little babe has gone to rest,
To reign with God forever blest;
Her little tongue will always praise
A Savior's love, redeeming grace.
Far from a world of sin and strife
She now enjoys a heaven's life,
And joins to praise and shout and sing,

And make the heavenly arches ring.
Could we but hear her little tongue,
So sweetly sing the heavenly song,
Could we but see her smiling face
Delighted with the happy place,
Now let us strive the prize to gain,
Let's come to Christ with him remain,
Then we shall share in Jesus' love,
And meet our little babe above.

TO EVERY READER OF THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD.

Friends: I have done my best for Christ's sake, in writing a tract on Gambling. It is barely off the press, sells for only 25c.

It is the very best sermon I could preach against gambling and social cards, and I believe it is as much inspired as anything I ever said or wrote.

Won't you please write now to The Herald for a copy, read it, every word of it, then do just two things—first send in an order for from a dozen to a hundred, and sell or give away among your people. Also write me, at least a card and tell me you read it, and what you think of it.

I heard of a colored preacher who was talking about the rabbit that climbed a pine. One of his stewards arose and corrected him and said, that was a slip, parson, for a rabbit, you know, can't climb. The pastor heard him through and replied that ordinarily that was true, but on this occasion the dogs were so close in behind the rabbit that he just fairly had to climb.

Somehow I feel that the needs of our church so got in behind me that I just fairly had to write against gambling.

And if you don't get and read this tract, I hope you will lose every bet you make from now on, and forever.

The Herald will make a reduction if you order in quantities, and besides all this I have three other books nearly ready for the press, and need what I have put on Gambling, to help on these others.

MY LIFE'S STORY

The Autobiography of Bud Robinson

This is the book for which thousands have been waiting. It is years since "Uncle Buddy" has written a book dealing with his life and experiences. Now we have this volume, his autobiography, giving an intimate recital of his experiences from early childhood to the present time. Pathos, humor, optimism, scathing rebuke, with an amazing memory of detail unite to give this volume the peculiar charm that characterizes all of Bud Robinson's writings. Just as there is only one Bud Robinson so this is the only volume giving the complete story of his life up to the present.

217 pages; full page portrait of author; attractive cloth binding. Price, $1.00.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XIII.—June 30, 1929.

Subject.—Review.

Reading Lesson.—1 Thess. 2:10-20.

Golden Text.—I have loved thee with an everlasting love: therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee. Jer. 31:3.

I do not know how to write this review lesson. From one side it all looks pessimistic; while from the other side it looks optimistic. Some lessons, however, are quite clear. For these we may search.

I. Our notions about God may, and do, change. No two of us have the very same ideas concerning him. That has always been true; and it will so continue for all time to come. But he never changes: "with him there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." He has revealed himself more fully in the New Testament than in the Old Testament; but that does not signify any change in his being. The Jehovah of the Old Testament is the God of the New Testament.

II. Human nature never changes. God can change us; but, left to ourselves, we are the same in all ages. We may improve ourselves somewhat, and we may improve our environment; but our nature remains the same. Take Greece at her best and Africa at her worst, and human nature is one. By nature the Jews in the days of the Judges and the Jews of modern times are not different. Nor are they different from the Gentiles of the ages.

III. God being ever the same and human nature never changing, we can understand something about his dealings with men. It is true, of course, that as men improve under the light he gives them, some change in his government must take place, just as we change our government over students in school life.

IV. Just as long as the Jews were obedient to the commands of God, everything went well with them. Their crops were abundant. "The early and the latter rains" were on time, full and free. Their flocks and herds were healthy and prolific. They themselves were practically free from diseases. There is not a more beautiful picture of human health and prosperity than that among those Israelites during their periods of obedience to Jehovah.

V. Now turn the picture and study the opposite side. Whenever Israel disobeyed God, ruin came upon them. Rain was withheld, and famine stalked through the land. The olives, the figs, the grapes all failed. There was no harvest in the grain fields. The threshing floors were empty. The flocks and herds were devastated. Disease preyed upon the people. Their heathen enemies swept over them, and carried them away captives. Israel perished in far off Nineveh. Judah languished in cruel Babylon.

This punishment was mostly disciplinary. God did not mean to be cruel towards his chosen people. Their day of retributive justice had not yet arrived. The Messiah must come out of Judah; and Jehovah was preparing that rebellious people for that tremendous event. Had they been obedient, the work would have been easy—Judah would have escaped her fearful chastisement.

VI. If I mistake not these lessons are applicable to America and to all other lands. "God is no respecter of persons." What he did for the Jews, he will do for us. As far as America has followed God she has been richly blessed; but disobedience is bringing upon us some severe chastisement. I am aware that it is unpopular to write such words. Especially is it so to prophesy that there is danger ahead. Were it possible the disobedient and gainsaying would minister the same sort of punishment to me, that Jeremiah received at their hands in his day—maybe worse; but I stand by the Book: If America will not repent and turn back to God, she must suffer.

But I am asked: "Wherein has America disobeyed God?" This nation has robbed God in tithes and offerings. America has been blessed with great riches. She is "money-mad and pleasure crazy." We are squandering the gifts of God to our own ruin. Think of the billions that have gone (still going) for strong drink. The nation is sinking about three billions per year for tobacco, debauching her manhood and her womanhood (even the children) beyond all measure. The Philistines are upon us. I quote from a report of Dr. Charles L. Barber of Lansing, Mich., before the annual convention of the American Association for Medico—physical research, delivered in Chicago, Sept. 23, 1927: "Sixty per cent of all babies born of cigarette smoking mothers die before they reach the age of two, due primarily to nicotine poisoning. A baby born of a cigarette smoking mother is sick. It is poisoned, and may die within two weeks of birth. The post-mortem shows degeneration of the liver, heart and other organs." I pray God's pity upon some preachers in this fair land, who profess to be followers of the "Christal Christ," but enter their pulpits loaded with the filthy stench of tobacco.

While the heathen at home and abroad die and perish in their sins, we professing Christians in America build costly churches to satisfy our own vanity, pitch altars over against altar, and squander our wealth on our lust. I am writing in a town of 1,500 people who boast four churches in gun-shot of one another. They are in a continual fuss among themselves, while three-fourths of the population have never known the saving power of grace. I wonder what God thinks of such things.

VII. Turning the picture we find some lessons that are beautifully optimistic. In the midst of all the heart-rending sin and idolatry of the chosen people it is refreshing to find Hezekiah leading his people back to God. We learn that a good ruler blesses his subjects, while wicked rulers are a curse to any people.

We are ready to shout for joy when Isaiah cries: "Comfort ye my people," and pictures for Israel and all the coming ages our suffering Savior.

When Hilkiah found the book of the law in the temple the shock to King Josiah and the entire kingdom was terrific; but it was a blessed discovery. The nation had sunken to the depths in morals; but the reading of the law led to repentance and blessing.

The lessons from Jeremiah make us hang our heads in shame. With super-human boldness he declares to his people the dreadful impending doom that is about to overtake them, weeps over them, and begs them to repent and turn back to God; but they persecute and abuse him. Finally Israel's sun sets in midnight gloom that will see no daybreak for seventy years.

The quarter's work ends in a glorious doxology. The 103rd psalm breaks over our weary, troubled hearts like the cool, refreshing breezes of a woodland after one has struggled for weeks through a scorching desert.

The cry of my heart is, that Jehovah's dealings with Israel might turn back our great nation in her mad rush in the ways of sin.

THOU SHALT REMEMBER ALL THE WAY THE LORD THY GOD HATH LED THEE.

Deut. 8:2.

He was better to me than all my hopes,

He was better than all my fears;
He made a road of my broken work,
And a rainbow of my tears.

The billows he guarded my sea girded path,

But carried Lord on their crest,
When I dwell on the day of my wilderness march

I can lean on his love for the rest.

He emptied my hands of their treasure store,

And his covenanted love revealed;
There was not a wound in my aching heart

But the breath of his love had healed.

Oh tender and true was the chast'ning care,

In wisdom that taught and tried,
Till the soul he sought was trusting in him,

And nothing on earth beside.

He guided my path that I could not see

My ways that I had not known;
The crooked was straight, and the rough made plain

As I followed the Lord alone.

I praise him still for the pleasant palms

And the water-springs by the way,
For the glowing hills of flame by night,

And the sheltering cloud by day.

There is light for me on the trackless wild

As the "wonders" of old I trace;
When the God of the whole earth went before

To make me a resting place.

Has he changed, for me? Nay he changeth not!

He will bring me by some new way,
Through fire and flood and each crafty foe

As safely as of yesterday.

Never a watch on the dreariest halt

But some promise of love endeared;
I read from the past that my future shall be Far better than all of my fears.

Like the golden pot of the wilderness bread,

Laid up with the blooming rod,
All safe in the Ark with the Law of the Lord,

To the covenant care of my God.

"Heart Rhymes From North Carolina."

The Pentecostal Publishing Company has just brought forth a book of my best and choicest poems with the above title. The book contains sixty-three poems, with a short sketch of the author's life, also the photographs of the author and his wife, making 130 pages, and sells for 75c per copy; two copies for $1.25, or five copies for $2.50. The book is the outcome of more than twenty years of labor. There are poems on the great state of North Carolina, poems on nature, and a goodly collection of religious poems, and will cheer your heart to read them. A copy was recently presented to President and Mrs. Hoover, and the following letter has just been received from their Secretary, Mildred Hall:

My dear Mr. Isenhour: The President and Mrs. Hoover have asked me to thank you for your thought, —and for the copy of your book of poems, "Heart Rhymes From North Carolina," which they are looking forward to reading at their first opportunity. Assuring you of their appreciation of the friendliness this gift conveys, I am, Yours sincerely, Mildred Hall.

Those desiring the book will please address the author, enclosing amount as per above. Rev. Walter E. Isenhour, Hickory, N. C.

New Book.

Etched Bronze Bookmark.

There is no bookmark on the market more strikingly attractive than this entirely new novelty. The design is etched in black on bright finished bronze that will not tarnish. The picture of the Hofmann head of Christ stands out clearly, and the delicately etched tracings are very artistically executed. This is not only a beautiful bookmark, but also a practical letter opener which can be used in cutting the leaves of new books. The bookmark is 4 1/4 inches long and is furnished with silk cord and tassels.

Price, 15c each, $1.50 per dozen, postpaid.

SPECIAL CALL TO PRAYER.

The Board of Trustees of The Florida Holiness Camp Grounds, Inc., feel that the time is ripe now for the establishment of The Florida Holiness Camp Meeting in permanent shape upon our own grounds as the Lord opens the way. He has made it unmistakably plain that he is in this work, and so signal has been his blessing that several hundred souls have been saved and sanctified at her altars. In our last camp we had people from 34 states in the congregation one night.

God helping us, we shall make no mistakes in this matter and send out this clarion call to every lover of Bible Holiness to pray for us that we may be led unerringly by the Holy Ghost in the selection of the site and in the raising of the funds to meet this need. Without the earnest prayers of the devout people who read The Pentecostal Herald we cannot undertake so great a task, and ask you to please lay hold on God for us, that he may have the pre-eminence in everything and make clear and plain his will concerning this matter.

God is opening the way and one of our Spirit-filled men, a trustee of the camp, has donated 80 acres of fine muck land that will grow all kinds of vegetables, is near the highways and is worth every penny of $5,000.00, but is not suitably located for the Camp Site, and we have this for sale. Should some reader of the paper see this and be interested in truck farming you cannot do better than write about it or come and see it. Should more land be desired we have a friend who has another 40 acres adjoining that may be had for $2,500 additional. Write Rev. E. C. Wills, P. O. Box 1944, Orlando, Fla., for particulars.

Our plans for the permanent site, is to lease lots to those who come up to standards required, who may build a cottage on the Camp Ground, where they will have electric light and water, and not only attend camp meeting but can spend the winter months on the Camp Ground in their own cottage near the best of markets, lakes, fishing and other items of interest. All leases will be made subject to the rules and regulations of the Florida Holiness Camp Grounds, Inc., so as to protect her interests and, at the same time, give plenty of room for the lessee to be free and unhampered in all that is right and good. Said lease will be so worded and drawn that in case the camp meeting was ever abandoned or given up, the holder of the lease gets a warranty deed for such lot or lots which he or she may have under lease.

Sincerely asking you to pray earnestly for this great work, and hoping that you may be able to attend our next camp on our own Camp Ground site, I am Yours sincerely,

E. C. Wills,

Sec.-Treas., Orlando, Fla.

THE PARABLE OF THE FROZEN LAMB.

C. G. Shutt.

A wealthy Western Ranchman employed a shepherd to take care of his flock. One winter day the mercury suddenly dropped to ten degrees below zero, and a typical Western blizzard was on in all its fury. The ranchman went out to his barns to find out how the shepherd was getting along with his flock. As he neared the barns he began to find dead lambs covered in the snow, and others stiff with cold shivering in the storm. As he drew near the barn, to his horror and dismay, he saw the shepherd standing at the door with a stick, keeping the lambs back. The ranchman cried out: "Why in the world are you keeping my lambs out?" The shepherd replied: "I made no contract with you concerning the lambs, I was to look after the sheep, and a lamb is not a sheep." If you wanted me to look after the lambs too, you ought to have specified." The ranchman was so indignant at the words and conduct of the shepherd that he grabbed the stick from his hand saying: "You miserable idiot; you are not fit to herd rattlesnakes. Get my lambs in quick." As soon as the living lambs were gathered in the ranchman looked about to see what was the extent of the damage caused by the misguided shepherd. He found scores of dead lambs all about the barn and the carcasses of many which had been slain by wolves far out from the barn. The ranchman told the shepherd that his time was up and he could go as soon as he buried the dead lambs.

Now whatever misunderstanding there might have been between this shepherd and the ranchman, Christ makes the attitude of the child to the Kingdom of God so plain that there is no room for misunderstanding. "And they brought young children to him that he should touch them: and his disciples rebuked them that brought them. But when Jesus saw it he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the Kingdom of God." Christ showed further that the child was not only in the kingdom but the greatest in the Kingdom.

We offer you here a very large assortment of some of the choicest styles of Bibles published, at such low prices that you can hardly afford not to invest in them. Many of them we bought at about one-half the regular price, hence we can sell them to you at the prices listed below. They are all the King James Version and all perfect stock.

Don't let this opportunity pass to supply yourself, your children and your friends. Also you can make an investment here that will net you 40% or 50% on your money, instead of 6%. If you want to buy a quantity to sell again, we will ship them on a guarantee that if you fail to dispose of them within a reasonable length of time, you may return them to us in good condition, and we will refund your money, less the postage.

ASBURY COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

By The Editor.

The Commencement Exercises of Asbury College covered June 1 to 5. This has been a great year in the history of the school from several points of view. First, Asbury enrolled the largest number of students in her history, and graduated the largest class in her history. My understanding is that she enrolled something like 900 students in all departments; there were 114 A.B. graduates, every one but two, being devout Christians, and most of them wholly sanctified.

* * * *

During the year there were three gracious revivals of religion, more properly speaking, two revivals. This writer at the opening of the school, preached several sermons and saw quite a number of students converted and a number professed the experience of entire sanctification. After a few days the President, Dr. Akers, took up the meeting and pressed forward with most gracious results in conversions and sanctifications. These meetings were held in the college chapel.

* * * *

During the college year there are many religious activities in the way of noonday prayer meetings, chapel services, and quite a number of religious organizations for prayer and testimony, which preserve and cultivate the spiritual life of the student body. Our mid-winter revival meetings are always held in co-operation with, and at, the Methodist Church in the town. This winter the services of Evangelist T. M. Anderson were secured and he did great work, both as preacher and altar worker. The revival was with unusual power; many souls were converted and sanctified, and a host of others renewed their vows and were greatly blessed in the enlargement of their spiritual lives.

* * * *

It would be difficult to estimate approximately the value of a gracious and deeply spiritual revival among some hundreds of bright, intelligent, purposeful college students. Who could undertake to prognosticate what the outcome of these revival seasons will be. Young men are called into the ministry, young women are called to the mission field, young lives are consecrated, cleansed, and Spirit-filled that will be used of God in many walks of life. Not a few revivals have been held in Asbury College which, in their gracious results, have touched the rims of the earth. Out from the altars of this famous institution of learning devout young people have gone to many fields beyond the seas, who, under the power of the Holy Spirit, have wrought mightily for God and humanity.

* * * *

The preachers for the Convention and Commencement occasion were Morrison, Bromley, Vogel, Barr, of Philadelphia, Pitman of New York. One of the great addresses was delivered by Clarence True Wilson, of Washington, D. C. Dr. Macklem, like St. Luke, the good physician, both physician and evangelist, preached two sermons which brought a number of seekers to the altar.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

A GREAT YEAR IN ASBURY COLLEGE.

By President L. R. Akers.

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, LL.D.
President Emeritus Asbury College
President Asbury Theological Seminary

LEWIS ROBESON AKERS, LL.D.
President Asbury College

ASBURY College on June 5th finished its thirty-ninth year. In more ways than one this was also its greatest year.

In the first place, while in the enrollment of colleges throughout our nation there has been a very decided slump and in almost every instance a decrease as in comparison with the year previous, this institution was unaffected by this widespread tendency and even made a very pronounced gain, lacking only fourteen of enrolling nine hundred in all departments while the College of Liberal Arts registered its greatest gain in an enrollment of 694.

We were delighted with the splendid personnel of the student body. In addition to its cosmopolitan atmosphere, we find that the best type of Christian homes in our country are represented here.

This year's work has also been marked by a sustained spiritual tone throughout the entire session. Following the established custom a ten-days' series of evangelistic services were held at the opening of school and a two-weeks' service at the beginning of the spring semester. Both of these occasions were observed with gratifying results. The president of the college conducted his own fall revival in which a large number of students were definitely saved or sanctified at the altar. The spring revival under the Rev. T. M. Anderson was far-reaching in its scope and its close found almost the entire student body definitely committed in heart and life to the service of our Lord Jesus Christ. The usual condition applying during the spring months of restlessness and a slackening of spiritual fervor did not apply this year. Throughout the year until Commencement the spiritual tide continued without any evident abatement and the close of the year found the Senior Class (the largest in the school's history, number 114 A. B.'s) with only two of their number unsundered to Jesus Christ. During the year a large number of our students have been definitely called into special work, many of them looking to service in mission fields in various foreign countries while a number have enlisted as evangelists, pastors, and special workers. In fact, it would be conservative to state that at least forty per cent of the student body have consecrated themselves to some special line of Christian work.

One of the outstanding events of the year has been the successful completion of the new Hughes Auditorium which has a seating capacity of two thousand and which beautifully completes the white-columned facade of buildings along the semicircle. The Asbury College campus, viewed from the front, is one of the most pleasing to be found in this entire section of the country and this latest addition to these classic buildings is indeed a delight to the eye.

The splendid four manual, sixty-two stop, Magee Memorial Austin Pipe Organ was completed and used during the Commencement Exercises, and the opening night on June 1st found the new Auditorium crowded to its capacity with hosts of visitors from many states. A great artist had been secured for the evening, the Governor of the State with almost his entire staff being present on this occasion.

The campus and equipment of Asbury College presented a most pleasing and attractive appearance and all who came to Commencement were impressed not only with the splendid equipment which they found but even more so by the spiritual atmosphere which was sensed throughout the entire Exercises.

Since the completion of the new Auditorium, plans are being made for the coming year which will bring to the student body and our visitors a far greater feast of good things than has ever been given hitherto. The outstanding speakers of the nation, particularly the leaders of the Holiness Movement, will be on the platform and it is safe to say that a new era has begun for Asbury College in the wide variety and very high quality of addresses and sermons which will be given from time to time. In addition to the spiritual betterment there will be occasions for great musical programs of exceptional merit. It is now possible to render orations and sacred numbers before large and appreciative audiences. The Lyceum Course for next year far exceeds any previous courses in its scope and talent.

Never was there a finer opportunity for a college student to receive a superb equipment along all lines than today in Asbury College. With a Faculty growing in strength and with additional material comforts provided for those who come to our halls we feel that we can offer to the Christian parents of this nation a haven of safety as to religious training as well as a thorough and completely up-to-date course of intellectual training.

The general feeling is that Asbury College stands upon the threshold of the greatest period of its history. With its ever-widening circle of friends and enlarging sphere of influence it is making a contribution of consecrated service to humanity not only unsurpassed but unequalled, we believe, by any institution of its kind in the world. And may we speak for it, as it stands like a lighthouse upon a hill, the hope of the holiness people and those who stand for the whole Bible, the continued support of its godly constituency in both prayers and financial aid. "By their fruits ye shall know them," and the world everywhere is recognizing the stamp of the Asburian as that of the most earnest and un-failing consecrated service.

Ideals for Earnest Youth.

Ideals for Earnest Youth is a charming book for young people of both sexes. It is neatly bound, excellent paper, good, clear print, 224 pages, short chapters, sometimes only two pages, frequently not more than three pages. This enables the young reader to catch up the book at a few spare moments, read a chapter and go to work, or on a journey, with something to think about. Let me give you a few of the chapters:

Self Respect, Self Mastery, The Joy of Living, Your Ideals, Courtship and Marriage, Take Care of Your Mind, The School of Struggles, Backbone vs. Wishbone, Team Work, Recreation.

Send a dollar to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for a copy of Ideals for Earnest Youth, and surprise one of your children or young friends with a bright smile and a beautiful gift.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

Asbury College, Her Outlook and Challenge.

By W. Brandt Hughes, M.A., Dean.

DEAN W. B. HUGHES

ON Saturday morning, May 25th the faculty and students met in the old Chapel for the last time. This place of worship has been the gathering place for prayer, praise, and testimony, as well as the center of the college life for nineteen years. Under the crowded conditions of the past eight or ten years, the very nearness has brought into the institution a blessed fellowship that has knit us together in bonds of friendship and love.

But the very fact that the student body taxed the capacity of the building has in a measure crowded out our friends of the community.

With the completion of the new Hughes Memorial Auditorium, with more than treble the seating capacity of the old Chapel we may look forward next year to a great program of intellectual and spiritual feasts to which we may welcome all who may care to attend. President Akers has announced his intention to bring to Asbury the leaders of the National Holiness Association as well as other speakers of note.

The new building provides also seven new classrooms. This will insure adequate facilities for classroom and laboratory work.

With our building program well cared for the emphasis may be placed as never before upon the real college; namely, teacher and student, their welfare and their best interests. Asbury was founded for the distinct purpose of providing a standard college training in an atmosphere shot through with the teaching of Jesus Christ and dominated by the presence of the Holy Spirit, an atmosphere free from those subtle tendencies that destroy faith and one separated from any of the demoralizing practices that destroy student character and efficiency. To keep this high standard of head and heart training Asbury presents a challenge.

She presents a challenge to the administration to secure well trained, safe and sympathetic teachers, to meet regional standards in education, to lead us in spiritual matters and to win and hold the confidence of our friends and constituency.

She presents a challenge to the faculty to remember always the mission of Asbury College and her self imposed obligation to send out a stream of young men and young women fitted not necessarily for leadership but for SERVICE.

Asbury presents a challenge to her student body. In this twentieth century of opportunity and progress where one lives and sees as much development in ten years as in a life-time a half century ago the field is ripe for Christian service and Christian living in all walks of life. But how favored is that student who has been honored by a call to some definite field of Christian work. Asbury's challenge to such an one is to make use of every precious minute in the four short years of his college life.

Asbury challenges her Alumni. No longer is the college graduate considered merely a part of the past but a definite part of the current life of the institution, to bring the ripened judgment of years and experience to bear upon standing with and helping his Alma Mater in every problem to which he can make a contribution.

Asbury challenges us all to unite together in prayer that she may never depart from the high standards set up by her founder. Let us be one in upholding every ideal that has made Asbury an outstanding Christian college.

Her founder builded not for gain,

Behind lay death to self and ease.

Before him lay a task to do,

Before him yet uncharted seas.

Nor did he falter or complain,

Though sometimes faith and hope seemed gone;

His not to question, but to do;

To toil, toil on, and on.

That early band, through toil and prayer;

Reviled, despised, misunderstood;

Renewed their faith, took firmer stand,

And gave themselves for others' good.

In times of trial one watchword rang

Out clear and changed the night to dawn;

Through every day, through every hour;

Pray on! Pray on! Pray on!

Shall we be traitors to the task,

Or toil and pray and give anew

Ourselves each day, to carry on

This work that now is ours to do?

And you who come in after years,

Will you be true when we are gone,

That this great ship in triumph may

Sail on, and on, and on?

No Paper Next Week.

As next week will be Fourth of July week, there will be no HERALD, as we always observe this national holiday week by giving THE HERALD force a little cessation from the daily routine of work. Do not think you have failed to get your paper, but remember it is one of our annual skips, Christmas week being the other.—Editor.

Special Notice!

Since coming home from Florida I have engaged in some religious services, preached frequently, and find myself quite exhausted. The bronchial and asthmatic troubles hang on tenaciously. My physicians advise that I get into the pure air of the southwest and take as nearly absolute rest as possible. Dr. Lewis Akers has kindly consented to do my editorial work for four weeks, so I may be as nearly relieved as possible from any sort of physical or mental exertion. We are believing that at the end of that time I shall be able to come back to my loved task greatly strengthened. Let all correspondence with reference to THE HERALD be addressed to Mrs. H. C. Morrison, or Mr. Pritchard, Louisville, Ky. It is to be hoped that no one will send me advice and suggestions with reference to sure cure of asthma and bronchitis. I have an abundance of these; I shall now, with God's good help, try the dry air of southwest Texas. On careful examination I am assured that there is no indication whatever, of T. B. germs.

With profound gratitude to the many friends who have assured me of their sympathy and an interest in their prayers, I am,

Your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

Beautiful Girlhood.

This is a heart-to-heart talk from a girl who has had quite a bit of experience, to girls. It comes from one who knows to those who need to know. It ought to go into countless thousands of homes. It has an attractive binding, the beautiful pages framed in blue, the short chapters filled with practical thought make it altogether, a book worth while. It would make a beautiful graduation present for a high school girl, an appropriate birthday gift. Buy this book for your daughter, your sister, your niece. It is not necessary to wait until they graduate or for their birthday. There is no way to estimate the gracious influence, like good seed sown in good ground, by the reading of good books. It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for the small price of $1.00 postpaid.

What Asburians Can Do For Asbury.

By Guy Wilson, Executive Secretary.

GUY WILSON, Executive Secretary.

THE spiritual and material supporters of Asbury College fall into two classes: those who are debtors to the institution by virtue of what it has meant in their own lives and those who through careful thought and observation as to the needs of our 'present age' feel that their calling cannot be fulfilled without both prayers and material gifts being made in behalf of such a worthy and God-honored work.

Some of us find ourselves in both classes. We are debtors, and we look upon Asbury as a world school proclaiming a whole Bible, the living Christ, and an uttermost salvation—the one need of our age. Twenty-six years ago next September kneeling at Asbury's altar—with E. Stanley Jones on one side and the sainted Mary Hughes on the other—I found Christ as Saviour. Two years later, under the direction of a Methodist father—a preacher-pastor—I found Christ as my Sanctifier. Two and one half years in Asbury College left its imprint upon me, in experience, training and inspiration which during the past twenty years has followed me in my ministry of Evangelism throughout the United States.

Besides the words, "I am debtor," there is another word, "We are laborers together." Is there anywhere in the wide world a closer bond than that existing between the men and women who from various states and lands have met for a time in such a mount of inspiration, later going out to all lands and peoples? It is the history of all colleges that their permanent future is inseparably related to their alumni and former student body. A recent action of the Asbury Alumni Association created an associate membership including all former students who have had at least eight hours resident work in the college.

Asbury will never be endowed perhaps directly through the actual material gifts of her own family circle but thousands of burning hearts while carrying on in their respective fields are going to find themselves face to face with two groups of inquirers. The first is a select but limited number of young men and women. The second is a consecrated and devoted group of mature men and women likewise limited in number. The first group will ask primarily one question. "Where may I pursue my educational ideals and prepare for life, having faith and experience strengthened instead of impaired?" The second group will ask, "To what institution can I be directed with my tithe and gifts and in what institution may I safely invest my funds in Annuity bonds, Estate pledges and wills confident of both security and the greatest good resulting therefrom?" We believe the best answer is ASBURY. It is not the only answer but we believe it to be the best.

There are hundreds of young men and women whose hearts today burn with a passion akin to that which possessed hundreds of young missionaries and pastors who had their career beginnings in Asbury's yesterday. They need but a guiding hand. Your hand fellow-Asburians, must be that hand. Today as in no other day perhaps in the history of Christian work in America there are a large number of high minded successful business men and women in middle life and nearing the end of life, who purpose that their money shall be placed where it will count most. They believe in the Bible. They believe in the power of the Holy Spirit. They believe in old-fashioned John Wesley experiences. They believe in Colleges that encourage students to work their way. They believe that a great school directed by a select board comprising spiritual leaders from our two Methodisms, and some who are members of other denominations can insure permanent spiritual and material success more easily than can a school under sole control of one denomination. And they would know also that such a school not being backed by Conferences, Synods, or Assemblies must go to the people direct and single handed for its support; but they may have never heard of Asbury. They may not yet know that they can join in a labor, the heart throbs of which, reach to the ends of the earth. Some one must tell them. You Fellow-Asburians, numbering several thousand, throughout the United States and other countries can help us to tell them about this opportunity.

It is the purpose of the Asbury organization to cultivate and to meet personally—sooner or later—as large number of prospective Asbury Supporters as is possible. We cannot act without knowledge. You are in position to supply us with information which in turn may mean spiritual blessings

GLIDE-CRAWFORD PORTICO

ASBURY COLLEGE and MISSIONS.

By Professor W. D. Turkington.

IT has been truthfully said that the attitude of a Christian church or any Christian institution toward the missionary program of the great church of Christ is one of the best, if not the best, criterion by which the spiritual life of that church or institution can be judged. This is as it should be, for it was no one less than our Lord himself who in the "great commission" to his people said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," and it was he also who said, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me . . . unto the uttermost parts of the earth." These two statements express to us the burning passion of the heart of Christ with regard to the non-Christian world, namely, its evangelization. But, they express more than that. They bring us face to face with the fact that it is by means of those who are his people that this desire of the heart of our Lord is to be realized. We should not think it strange then that that church or Christian institution which is living closest to the great heart of Christ, that is, the one which is most deeply spiritual, should also be the one that is characterized by a corresponding zeal for and activity in the great missionary program of the church. It seems that the reverse of this is also necessarily and logically true, that the church or institution which is most vitally interested in the salvation of men around the world is the one that is most spiritual. The history of churches and missions proves the contention here.

Now then, what of Asbury College and missions? Is the missionary activity in this college such that we may logically infer that she is as she purports to be, a spiritual college? We believe that the question must be answered in the affirmative. The following facts seem to be convincing.

There is no college in the world with a student body that approximates that of Asbury College in numbers which in the same number of years has sent out as many missionaries into the non-Christian lands. Asbury started about thirty-nine years ago with eleven students, but in the thirty-nine years that have elapsed since that time she has sent out from her halls a total of more than one hundred Spirit-filled missionaries to the ends of the earth. Today there are in active service on the mission fields or on furlough in the homeland one hundred and three men and women who have, while in the halls and at the altars of Asbury, caught the vision of a lost world and have heard the call of God to carry the message of light thither.

Among this group are those who have come to places of outstanding leadership in the missionary program of the church. We mention here just a few though there are many. Bishop Fred B. Fisher, missionary bishop in India, is a graduate of Asbury College. E. Stanley Jones, who has been characterized as the outstanding religious leader of this day, is also a product of Asbury College. Dr. Willard Cram, General Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board of the Methodist Church, South, is one of the graduates of Asbury. And so we might go on citing name after name of Asburians, all of whom have wrought and who today are being used of God in the far-flung battle line of missions.

But someone will say that this is all in the past. What about the missionary activity and zeal in the college today? It is just here that we are glad to report to our friends and constituency that never has the school been characterized by more of the missionary spirit and zeal. There are in Asbury College and her affiliated schools today more than eighty young people who are called to the mission fields and who are in preparation for service there. Missionary emphasis is still strong, else young people would not be receiving the call to the fields beyond. Another evidence of the missionary activity in the college is the fact that each year a special offering is taken for foreign missions. On these occasions the giving is hilarious and in the short time of about fifteen minutes more than a thousand dollars is raised. When one remembers that few of our students are rich and that many of them are forced to work at least part of their way through school, this matter of giving for missions is a fine indicator of a strong missionary spirit and so of a real spiritual life.

Finally we must mention the type of missionary sent out by Asbury College and what is the nature of the call that sends them forth from home and native land into lands foreign to them. We know of no way to state this better than to quote from one of Asbury's outstanding representatives in the field, E. Stanley Jones. He is quoted in "The Methodist Times" of London with reference

Asbury Theological Seminary.

DEAN F. H. LARABEE.

HERE is only one Theological School on the American continent today granting the Bachelor of Divinity degree to its students, in which there is taught in all departments of the school, the historic tenets of Wesleyan theology. This is Asbury Theological Seminary of Wilmore, Ky.

In no sense is this to be interpreted as a proud boast, but rather the fact is here recorded with a deep sense of regret, that the one-time splendid theological schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which once rang so true to the Wesleyan interpretation of the Scriptures, have side-tracked these great landmarks of the Christian faith. They no longer use the great doctrinal words, sin, regeneration, judgment, sanctification, witness of the Spirit, with their traditional meanings. With them they connote new concepts. For example, sin no longer is a deadly virus bound to destroy the human soul, but rather a mere sore spot capable of being healed by some external balm. Regeneration is no longer the impartation of a new life, but the cultural training of the mind. Sanctification is no longer the cleansing away of the carnal nature by the baptism of the Holy Ghost, but rather an intellectual development.

Such shifts of emphasis will never lift this old world out of the depths of moral degradation into which she is sinking. The old gospel which gets men saved from sin must be preached.

Asbury Theological Seminary has no other mission than that of training men to "preach the word" with vigor and power sufficient to bring men in penitence for their sin at the feet of an all-sufficient Savior. She recognizes no other power but the shed blood of the slain redeemer Jesus Christ the Lord of Glory. She places full credence in those age-long saving doctrines of Holy Writ. And because of this we believe that under God she is destined to make a large place for herself in the world's redemption.

Asbury Theological Seminary is still young as a distinct school of theology. Asbury College with which she is closely associated has always been a training school for young ministers, and has given to the church some of its most efficient ministers and missionaries. The theological school as such has graduated only six classes with a total of 23 Bachelor of Divinity students. These students are taking high place in the world's influence. Of these 23 there are eight foreign missionaries now on the field, or about to set sail in the near future. One of the eight has just completed his Doctor of Philosophy degree and will soon go back to his own country, Japan, to invest his life in service for his Christ. He goes in the fervor of this wonderful gospel which he has learned to preach. Three or four are college professors. Two are home missionaries. The remainder are serving well as pastors of churches. Humanly speaking, none are failures. The Lord is greatly blessing the ministry of these men and women.

The Faculty now carries seven full-time professors and three part-time professors. The guiding genius of the school is Dr. H. C. Morrison, our peerless president.

The institution now appears to have just passed its probationary stage as a distinct school. It has every appearance of being about to enter upon a more expansive program of service. The outlook is most promising indeed. Inquiries from students of other colleges than Asbury are coming in. They seem to see the need of getting a preparation for preaching the gospel where their faith in its integrity may be buttressed and confirmed instead of shattered. A large class of between twenty and twenty-five will come over from the senior class of Asbury College next year. Others of Asbury graduates who have been out preaching for a year or two will return. The teaching force will be strengthened as we go forward. The next ten years will see large advances in our theological seminary. Prayer is being made that many of God's noblemen may catch the vision of a great opportunity to invest their money in this splendid enterprise.

Let men everywhere by prayers, by money, by sympathy, by co-operation in fellowship and good will, by the grace of God, arise to this task and vow to place on the Asbury campus, a theological seminary, which will be an abiding monument of the grace of God, and a continual blessing to mankind.

ASBURY COLLEGE AND MISSIONS.

to his farewell address, delivered at Central Hall, Westminster, London, as follows:

"Twenty-one years of my life have been spent in India, and I suppose I might now be counted as of age in missionary service. I have also arrived at the age where, if I go back this time, I am committed for the rest of my life. I am now forty-five, and I suppose I could put my roots in the West and make what little contribution I could here, but I know that if I go back now, I am committed for the balance of my days. And English lady said to Mrs. Jones out in India, when we had been having an upsetting time: 'I do not see why you stay. We have to stay because we are officials, but it seems to me Mr. Jones might be able to get something to do in America.' I think, perhaps, I could get something to do.

"The romance period of missions has gone. If I am held to this movement, I am not held because of romance, but because of reality. The thing has now been stripped of the glamour and if I am committed to it now, I am committed to it with my eyes open, seeing that there is no glamour about it. It is toil, it is blood, and it is sweat, it is heartache and misunderstanding, it is Gethsemane and Calvary, but, thank God, there is in the offering an Easter morning.

"To tell you why I am going back to the East I must go back to the beginning. When I was in college (Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.,) I was not interested in missions, but there was a group of students in the college who were. They were very wise. Instead of asking me to be a missionary they gave me a talk to make on missions, and the more I studied the matter the more deeply concerned I felt. I came to the day when I was to give the address and I was so broken up that when the hour came I said: 'I have no disposition to give any address or go into that room unless something happens. Something ought to be done about it.'

"I was in a state of spiritual desperation, and the inner voice came and said: 'According to your faith be it unto you.' I said: 'Somebody will go from meeting as a missionary.' Little did I know who it would be. I found that I was the one; I had prayed myself into it.

"When I got through my college education I received a letter from the college president saying: 'It is the will of the faculty, the student body, the religious people, and, we believe, it is the will of God for you to teach here.' I got a letter from a friend at the same time: 'I believe it is the will of God for you to enter the evangelistic work at the home base.' At the very same time I got a letter from the Mission Board saying: 'It is our will to send you to India.'

"There was a traffic jam of wills there. I took the letter from the Mission Board aside and opened it before God, and said: 'What am I to do? I have got to answer this. My life is not my own.' And clearly the inner voice said: 'It is India.' I said: 'All right, it is India.' I wrote to the Mission Board and said: 'I am willing to go and ready.'

"Now I am sufficiently old-fashioned to believe in a divine call. I have been called to India, and I have never been recalled, so I go back. The central reason why I go back is simply that call. That call makes me feel this: the question of success or failure is irrelevant. If you were to tell me I was going back to failure, and would see no converts, and would die without the vision fulfilled, I would say, 'All right, send me back.' That is not the question. It is not mine to succeed or fail, it is mine to be true to the highest that I know. Some way, somehow, the vision will catch fire, and the world will see it, though it may not be in my time."

And so it is that Asbury College is and always has been a missionary college. This fact argues for the continued spiritual life of the school. But more than this it argues for the continued support of the college on the part of those of God's people who are spiritually minded and who have at heart the advancement of his kingdom around the world.

untold. You have met friends who by their life and testimony have been looking for an investment which would pay 100% dividends for Christ. These people will invest somewhere. They will contribute somewhere. Do you feel that Asbury is worthy? Certainly she is no longer an experiment. Do you not feel that her present success is but a testimony to her message and mission? If so, help us to help good people to understand that in America there is a school—born out of sacrifice and carrying-on in that same spirit—a school which has but one purpose. This purpose and spirit of devotion possesses not only student body and faculty but every member of the organization. It can best be defined also by scriptural words:

"They that turn many to righteousness"
 "Laying up for yourselves treasures above."

The encouraging outlook which I have observed on every hand, the host of friends in all parts of the land, and the burning words of testimony and prayer which pour into this institution in every mail cannot be described. Asbury's day is ahead. It is a day of burden, of larger enrollment, of greater conquests for Christ. You must help us in this glorious task. Since the student body was never of a higher type and since the spiritual tide was never deeper, we solicit your prayers that with every material blessing there may come to us grace and power in larger measure.

Send in your information and send it often. "We are laborers together."

HUGHES MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM

Crucifixion of John Henry Huston.

BY ALICE HOLLANDER.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE CRUCIFIXION.

USTON'S birthday came. He was now fifty-nine years of age. His excessive labors and the shock of the death of his wife has told seriously upon him nervously. He was greatly reduced in flesh; his voice, so strong and unctuous, had been so weakened that it was a bit difficult for him to be heard at the back of the top gallery of his auditorium.

He was hardly conscious of these defects, but knew enough of them to tax himself severely in order to atone for them. The flattering group of modernists looked with great pleasure upon the giant whom they were quite sure was rapidly approaching a condition making it impossible for him to carry forward the work. He had turned over the church, with all legal possession, to a board of directors, and now the university people felt they would have at their disposal, this splendid plant with which they could indulge themselves in a riot of liberal teaching without any interference from any ecclesiastical power, whatsoever.

The entire congregation was enthused over the celebration of the old pastor's birthday. In the afternoon the church was like a beehive; the president of the University and his wife, and a large number of the professors were invited and were to have the highest seats on this important occasion.

Huston, little suspecting the plans that had been made, and what was to follow the banquet, put on his best apparel and, in spite of a deep depression and an unaccountable uneasiness in his heart, made himself as cheerful as possible and came with a good deal of reservation for the feast given in his honor. Never had his secret enemies been so flattering, so extreme in their courtesy and praises. He was seated at a special table with the president of the University, and the entire board of the church made up of some thirty men. He was surprised to find that the old board was practically all gone. Nearly half the board was made up of university professors; the other half, of men who had been elected in his absence, of whom he knew but little. They all centered their attentions upon Huston. Their courtesy and praise were so extravagant that it made him uneasy and distrustful of their sincerity.

The feast finished, there were many speeches, all lauding him for his long life, unselfish service, the noble generosity with which he had built the vast plant, and the unselfishness with which he had turned it over to a self-perpetuating board, signing away all legal right of control of the property. The fact of his having signed away all right of control of the property was emphasized so often that it awakened in him a bit of uneasiness.

One of the most eloquent speakers, he noticed, was one of the shrewdest criminal lawyers of the city who had recently been elected a member of the board during his absence. He had known this lawyer for years, and had always regarded him as a man of unusual gifts in his profession and, at the same time, utter lack of conscientious scruples in the practice of the same. He thought it was strange that such a man should have been elected a member of the executive board of this church, and the large plant under its control.

Huston had not only given the plant, but he had also donated to the institution a sum of money invested in bonds which brought to the church a yearly interest of something like $18,000 for the upkeep of the institution.

After the speeches there were songs, a prayer offered by the president of the University, another by the assistant pastor, then the benediction, and the great company (Continued on page 8)

ASBURY COLLEGE FACULTY

One of the great occasions of Commencement was the dedication of the new auditorium built in memory of Rev. John Wesley Hughes, founder of Asbury College. Dr. Hughes spoke to the vast audience of the founding of the school, and something of its progress for the first fifteen years of its history while he was president. Rev. W. L. Clark, who was one of the first students in the little four-room building in which it began its history, made an eloquent address on the beginnings of Asbury College. Bishop Dubose, well known for his scholarship and eloquence, was the main speaker of the occasion. We know of few men who have a vaster knowledge of human nature than Bishop Dubose, and a finer flow of beautiful language in the description of human events. Rev. T. F. Toliaferro, Frankfort, Ky., who acted a very important part in the early Christian life of Rev. J. W. Hughes and H. C. Morrison, was present, and was brought to the platform and stood between Dr. Hughes and Morrison while Bishop Darlington, in well chosen words, dedicated the building to the service of God and humanity. Rev. W. S. Maxwell presented to the college oil paintings of Dr. Hughes and his wife, Mary Hughes, deceased, who was such an important factor in the early history of Asbury College. Visitors from every quarter of the country pronounced the Hughes Memorial one of the most beautiful structures, both outside and in, they had ever seen.

* * * *

A host of friends were present from various quarters to see their children graduate, and all seemed to be highly pleased with the school and the great work being done. God has been pleased to make this college a center of education, Christian experience, the building of Christian character and the sending out of quite an army of devout laborers into the harvest field of the world. Those who with their unbelief and bitter opposition would have destroyed the school in its early history, had little or no conception of the damage they would have brought to the multitudes in the homeland and many foreign fields, who have heard the gospel of a full salvation because Asbury College has existed, weathered many storms, and continues to send forth her graduates as teachers, pastors, missionaries, evangelists and preachers to bless the world. May a merciful God protect this great center of spiritual life and power from all those who would destroy or curtail its usefulness in a white harvest field, where much precious human grain is going to waste because of a lack of reapers in many needy fields.

* * * *

Dr. L. R. Akers who has the most remarkable sympathy and support of faculty and student body, was elected president of Asbury College for five years. He delivered a great address on Commencement day which will appear in the next issue of THE HERALD. We trust it will be read thoughtfully. It raises some serious and vital questions.

He was assisted by the Glee Clubs with a number of splendid selections. Governor Sampson, of Kentucky, and his staff were in attendance, as were many other distinguished visitors.

One of the most pleasant features of the Commencement occasion to this writer was the gathering of a large number of the Alumni who received their training while he was president of the college. They crowded into my room to assure me of their loyalty, which was a great comfort. Many of them are able preachers of the gospel, scattered over a wide area of this nation. Several of my old boys were present who have rendered gracious service in foreign fields.

with a place in our hearts which can never be surrendered to any one else, can get entirely away from the excitement and burdens of this place, and stand some chance for at least, much improvement in his health and the lengthening of his days."

Huston was surprised beyond measure.
He arose, stood erect, and with flashing eyes, said, "Am I to understand that this board is asking for my resignation?" to which the official who had just spoken answered, "It is not exactly that, my dear pastor, but we are seeking to lift from your shoulders the burdens which you are unable to bear." To which there was a very general chorus, numbers of the board arising to their feet and saying, "It is our desire to give you much needed rest, and to preserve your life."

The truth began to dawn on Huston, and he realized that during his sorrow, sickness and absence the board had been formed, his church had been estranged, and that he was mony with the thought and aspirations of the people who largely make up and, in the future, must make up, the congregation."

The surprise and pain of the situation made Huston, for the time, almost speechless. He finally arose and said: "Gentlemen, you understand that this plant was erected entirely, or nearly so, with money that I furnished. You also know that I have labored here, receiving no salary through the years, but supporting myself with my own means. It hardly seems proper, without a word to me, or an intimation, you should have planned anything like this, and sprung it upon me without a note of warning. I see from the remarks of several of the board that, after all, it is not so much a question of my age, or my failing health, but I am to be cast out because I will not accept the false teachings of modern liberalists."

At this moment a number leaped to their feet and, with angry tones, insisted that this was improper language for the pastor to use toward a group of brethren who esteemed him so highly.

When the chairman of the board secured silence the lawyer arose and very calmly informed the gentlemen of the board that Mr. Huston had signed away all legal claims to the property, that it was entirely in their hands, and that they had a legal right to dismiss or employ any one in the management of the affairs of the church, that they believed to be for the best interests of the congregation; that while he had only been a member of the board a very short time, he was fully convinced that it was the unanimous opinion of all the members present, that Huston should be dismissed as pastor, and the young gentleman who was now his assistant, should be chosen as pastor of the congregation. He understood Mr. Huston to be a man of considerable means, so it would not be necessary to make any provision for his support in the future. "And," said the lawyer, "while I am on my feet, I move that the board of this church now assembled, dismiss Rev. Mr.
Huston as our pastor, and call to this church Rev. Judas Iskabor, assistant pastor, as the regular pastor of Member after member of the board arose and spoke, all in sympathy with the first speaker. Several of them dared to use plainer language, insisting that Mr. Huston as much as he was beloved, was too old to undertake the pastorate of so large a church, in so progressive a city, where such a large part of his congregation was made up of young people who had practically divorced themselves from the old ideas of the Bible and the religious life, and would no longer submit to the notions and dictations of the dead past.

"This great independent church," said one, "is in the heart of a thriving city. Its congregation is no longer made up of the BETHEL ACADEMY.

GEO. B. BURKHOLDER
Principal Bethel Academy

Bethel Academy is a distinct unit of Asbury College and maintains a regular four years High School course with a separate faculty of ten choice Christian men and women, who are graduates of colleges or universities and have had several years' teaching experience.

Recognition: Bethel Academy is recognized as A(SA) in the high schools of Kentucky and is a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, insuring recognition of its credits in the public high schools of the country and admission of its graduates into the approved Colleges of the Association.

She has won distinction in the student activities of the state of Kentucky, having won first place in the State Declamatory contests for two consecutive years. She also won first place in two wind instruments for the year 1928 and second place this year.

Debating clubs and public speaking are encouraged, especially for those who are preparing for religious work.

The Academy offers Bible courses and a course in Blaikie's Bible History. Mrs. Gaile Morris, M.A., wife of Frank Morris of the Seminary, has charge of this department.

One of the outstanding features of Bethel Academy is that we strive to put first things first. Therefore, we may say that the ministerial and missionary students are given every opportunity to further develop their Christian experience and their zeal for lost humanity.

The ministerial students meet three evenings each week. Here those who have definite calls are given opportunity to preach and those desiring calls often have their desires fulfilled.

The missionary students have a part in the Asbury Volunteer Union. Regular prayer meetings are held each day for the purpose of praying for those who are in foreign fields. A general missionary service is held each Sunday afternoon. It is not unusual for the students to receive a Divine call to the mission field in these afternoon meetings.

Many of our number have a real vision of what it means for souls to be starving for the lack of the true Gospel. It is the aim, yea, our purpose, after they have finished these few short years of preparation in Bethel and Asbury, to go out clad in the whole armor of God, having the breastplate of righteousness, their feet shod with the preparation of the Gospel of Peace, taking the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation and last but not least, the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God.

The daily chapel hour is one fraught with spiritual fragrance bringing victory and encouragement to students and faculty.

The musical department has especially been favored with the talented musicians who have come here for further development. All have shown great interest in the various programs which have been rendered from time to time.

For the past few years, the Musical Extension Bureau of the University of Kentucky has conducted state contests in which schools of the state may participate. The student body of Bethel Academy recognize in this an excellent opportunity to come in contact with other schools, whereby we might yield an influence for the highest and best things of life. As the result, some of our musicians have had the privilege of winning state contests.

Sacred music is given preference and classical selections are given a prominent part. We realize that within the sacred melodies are embodied the real feeling and expression of the soul.

The musicians have the privilege of playing in the College Band and Orchestra, while members of the Chorus often try out for the Glee Club. Quartets and octets are organized for the singers, and brass quartets and ensembles for the musicians. These various groups play an important part, not only in school activities, but in mission work and many Sunday services. These consecrated young people bring the Gospel to hungry souls through song and instrumental music.

The Fall term opens September 18, 1929. We invite students who have completed the eighth grade. Older persons who have not had an opportunity to finish the grades or desire part High School work with the Bible courses or Specials may enroll, and classes will be arranged for them.

Any further information desired write to G. B. Burkholder, Principal, 300 N. Walnut St., Wilmore, Ky.

this church, giving him power to secure whatever assistance may be advisable to carry forward the work of this great congregation to the best interests of the people making up the congregation, and the community."

The motion was made and passed with a unanimous vote. Huston was asked to pronounce the benediction. He stood up, tried to speak, muttered a few inaudible words, fainted, and would have fallen full length upon the floor, had he not been caught in the arms of several men standing near him. The spear of modern criticism, with its trickery and insinuating methods, so shrewd and conscienceless, had pierced him to the heart.

Music Department of Asbury College.

NINA JEANNE RIDGELL, Director
CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC.

Realizing fully the important place music is to take in all liberal education, it is the aim of Asbury Conservatory to have the highest ideals and standards in every department. We want students to know that they may come to Asbury College and do serious work in music. The curriculum of the piano and Voice Departments will be raised to compare favorably with that of the best Northern and Eastern Conservatories. We wish to send out graduates who are thoroughly trained musicians in every sense of the word, graduates who would be a credit to any institution. Credit will be given for the study of Piano, Voice, Theory, Counterpoint and Harmony toward literary degrees.

The director of the Conservatory, Nina Jeanne Ridgell, has studied with some of the world's greatest artists and teachers, including Percy Grainger, the great Austrian pianist, and Albert Ross Parsons of New York, dean of American piano-forte teachers.

Miss Ridgell was connected with the Meridian College Conservatory for over twenty years, and for twelve years was director of that great Conservatory.

The Meridian Star says of her: "Dr. Ridgell has made more musicians perhaps than any other individual in Mississippi."

She has associated with her Mrs. Christine Conrad, a musician and teacher of wide experience, efficient in every sense of the word. She holds the degree of B.Mus. Mrs. Conrad has studied and traveled extensively both at home and abroad and has heard almost every artist of note in America, and is a splendid critic.

Mrs. Suzanne Schulze is a graduate in Voice of Central College, Lexington, Mo., a well known Methodist School. Since graduating from the above named College, she has continued her studies with several of the artist teachers in Chicago and other cities. Mrs. Schulze has had years of experience as a voice teacher, and has held the position as director of voice department in some of the leading colleges in America. She is untiring in her work with her students, patient, painstaking and conscientious in teaching the smallest details of technical development and artistic interpretation. She is an experienced Choir Director, a gifted musician and teacher. She is a most valuable addition to the music faculty of Asbury College.

"Music is the universal language of mankind."—Longfellow.

The well educated person is one who has a knowledge of other things besides those branches generally acknowledged as essential. Among these "other things" music occupies a lofty place; for there is in every personality a something that demands it.

Only the things which lead to a higher and nobler plane of thought are worth while; and nothing can do this more readily than music. Thus our music department has done its part is creating an atmosphere in Asbury College that is conducive to higher thoughts and actions.

The instructors, through their beautiful Christian characters, seek to create a spiritual atmosphere about their pupils. They are loyal to the school and to the principles for which it stands, and are intensely interested in their work. Thus the department is prospering under their instruction.

"Music religion's heat inspires,
It wakes the soul, and lifts it high
And wings it with sublime desires,
And fits it to bespeak the Deity."
—Addison.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

George Lester Edie, evangelistic singer, of Arlington, Ohio, has the month of July open and desires to give it to any one who needs a song leader or young people's worker. He received evangelistic singers' diploma at Taylor University in 1926, and graduated in music in 1928.

Rev. T. J. Adams recently closed a good meeting at Quinton, Okla., in the M. P. Church. People traveled for sixty miles to attend the meeting. The battle closed with a shout of victory. Brother Adams has a few open dates for August and September. Address him, 809 West 6th St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Mrs. Laura B. Albright, who has been pastor of Petersburg, Md., Friends Church for about ten years, is available for revival work. She will be in Petersburg, Md., until August 1, then she will be in Harmony, N. C., until September 1, when she begins a meeting in Winston-Salem, Va.

INSO-NORBERRY.

Rev. John Norberry's daughter was married to Mr. Martin Inso, of New York City, of recent date. Both the bride and bridegroom are graduates of Eastern Nazarene College, Boston, Mass. They are making a motor trip through New York State to Niagara Falls and Canada, and on their return will live at Hollis Crest, Hollis, Long Island, receiving after June 20.

SPRINGERTON, ILLINOIS.

A Holiness Convention will be held at Jacob's Camp Ground, Springerton, Ill., July 3rd and 4th. Preachers, Rev. Albert Johnson, assisted by local pastors, Frank Doerner, song leader. Come praying for a great outpouring of the Holy Ghost.

Miss Vivian May Norris, Director of the School of Fine Arts in Asbury College, is an artist of international renown. Not only is she a member of the International Art Student's League, but last summer she was summoned to Glasgow and made a member of the Royal Scottish Academy. Her works are in the Metropolitan Museum of New York and have been exhibited also in Europe. She will have some of her creations on exhibition in Paris as well as at different art centers in this country.

We cannot exaggerate the excellency of her work or personal ability. Happy indeed are those students who may enroll under her careful and skillful director. The recent Art Exhibit in Asbury College, in its excellence of technique and interpretation, amazed the large number of visitors who saw it.

HOME ECONOMICS.

By Mary Richards Oliver, B.S.H.E.
Director.

"Who can find a virtuous woman?
for her price is far above rubies."—
Prov. 31:10.

Of all the occupations that confront the women of today we believe that home-making is the outstanding one. Out from the home is going to emanate all that is good in community, in state, and in nation.

Hidden away beneath the exterior of every personality, there is some ideal, desire, and ambition to be of service in the world. In the heart of every woman there are potentialities and powers that if unlocked and set going in the right direction will make the world a better place in which to live.

Every young woman should have a thorough training based upon scientific knowledge of things pertaining to the home which will enable her to go out and take her place as a skilled worker in a home or other field where she may be able to do her share of the world's work.

We are offering in Asbury College a course in Home Economics which we believe will be of value to those who wish to teach this subject, and also to those who wish to be successful home-makers. College credit is given for all work done in this department. At the end of two years of work a certificate is awarded, and at the end of three years a diploma.

There is a great demand for teachers to take their places in high schools, in colleges and in universities.

An observation of the conditions which exist at the present time leaves no question that there is a great need for a revolution and a standardization for the homes of our country. The young woman of today is the home-maker or the home-breaker of tomorrow. President Hoover in his battle for conservation of food during the World War said a notable thing. "Go back to the simple life, be content with simple food, simple pleasures, simple clothes, work hard, pray hard, play hard, work, eat, recreate and sleep. Do all courageously. We have a victory to win."

So in observing and comprehending the trend of the times and the conditions as they exist we are compelled to acknowledge that we do need a great awakening and intensifying of interest in the training of young women in the greatest of all occupations or subjects,—the home.

FOUR HUNDRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

This volume compiled from Health and Food, a journal of our Pilgrim brethren, and published by Loizeoup Brothers, 1 East 31st, New York, is at once one of interest and helpfulness.

The four hundred questions deal with more than 1200 different scriptures. The answers for the most part are satisfactory. In a few instances this reviewer had to take exceptions, as for instance, in what is said as to Household Baptisms and as to Life Insurance; but as a rule I found myself in agreement with the interpretations given.

From all I can gather the Pilgrim Brothers are a great people, thundering in a fine way for the old paths and seeking to live the life as set out in the New Testament. As I have read the book my heart has gone out to them in holy fellowship.

To those hunting for help on difficult scriptures and knotty problems the work is commended. To be had of The Pentecostal Herald, Louisville, Ky., for $2.00.

Department of Speech.

DAISY DEAN GRAY, Director

PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Until a recent date most of the work in this subject was done in private schools,—the best known of which were Emerson, Curry, Cum-nock, and Powers. Each school was a law unto itself. This detachment has now been focused into an organized unit. Fourteen years ago began the centralized movement which was called, "The National Association of Academic Teachers of Public Speaking." It soon became obvious, however, that this label was limited; much that was taught under this title was not public; therefore, more general terms began to be applied until Speech has come to be the most popular and universal term in usage.

Twenty years ago there was no university department in Speech. Some of our leading universities are now giving work leading to the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in Speech. The world at large has developed a new consciousness of its power. Speeches are being increasingly judged by standards of worth. "Outmoded specimens and backwoods eruptions of empty bombast and deceptive spread-eagleism, of which really educated people should be ashamed, is now tabooed."

A scientific and practical study of Speech is rapidly displacing the unreality of exhibitory delivery. Schools must provide for the development of the ability to speak. Life changes: educational methods and subjects must change with it. In keeping with the general change in this field, we take pleasure in announcing that our department, formerly called Expression, takes the title of Speech, and under the term Speech we shall teach Fundamentals, Public Speaking, Phonetics, Speech Composition, Dramatic Expression, Parliamentary Law, Debating, Interpretation, and Speech Correction.

Life Annuity Bonds Of Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky.

There are many Christians who have something laid by which they would like to have used in the work of training a thoroughly consecrated and sanctified ministry at Asbury College at their death. However, they need the income of it while they live, and so feel that the best they can do is to leave it to us in their wills. Too often, unfortunately, these wills are successfully contested and the wishes of the deceased are thwarted.

This difficulty is overcome in an Annuity Contract, for the donor is his own executor. Our Annuity Bonds are secured by the entire assets of Asbury College. The investment is SAFE, the returns are CERTAIN.

Scores of our friends have already invested their funds with us in this manner, and during the more than fifteen years that Asbury College has been issuing LIFE ANNUITY CONTRACTS it has never defaulted on an annuity payment; our friends, moreover, have given us assurance that they have never had occasion to regret their investment in this form of gift to Asbury College.

LIFE ANNUITY BONDS can be written for amounts of $100 and over. Simply write us your age and the amount you desire to invest on Annuity Contract, and we will forward to you at once the Annuity Bond made out to you for your inspection and approval, or you may send us your check with your application, and the bond will be dated back to the day you wrote the check, from which date the annuity payments will be calculated.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Note: As we shall have no paper next week, we give two Sunday school Lessons this week. Next week is our Fourth of July vacation. (Editor).

Lesson I.—July 7, 1929.

Subject.—The story of Ezekiel. Ezek. 3:4-11.

Golden Text.—As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live. Ezek. 33:11.

Time.—About B. C. 580.

Place.—Near Babylon.

Introduction.—Ezekiel was one of the four greater prophets among the Jews. He was the son of Buzi, who was a priest. It is a bit interesting to note the priestly mark upon the son—not a birth inheritance, but the imprint of his early environment, just as we now see upon sons of preachers the imprint of the parsonage.

Ezekiel was carried captive to Babylon with Jehoiachin about eleven years prior to the destruction of Jerusalem. With some of his fellow-captives he made his exile home in Babylonia on the banks of the river Chebar. Whether this place was his own choice, or assigned to him by his captors, does not appear in the record; but perhaps it was the latter.

Ezekiel measures high in character. Some other captives seem to have taken on Babylonish notions and customs, even going into heathenism; but Ezekiel was a Jew to the end. His adherence to the true religion was on a par with that of his contemporary in captivity, the spotless Daniel, who would not defile himself with the king's wine and meat. Such men make humanity worth while.

The record does not show that Ezekiel prophesied before his captivity. He is quite definite as to the time and circumstances of his call to the prophetic office. He beheld a vision of God "in the fifth day of the month, which was the fifth year of king Jehoiachin's captivity." In the third verse of his first chapter he enters into some details concerning his call, saying that he was himself a priest, and the hand of Jehovah came upon him "in the land of the Chaldeans, by the river Chebar."

Ezekiel was one of the greatest of all the prophets. He was held in the highest esteem by his fellows in captivity. It is interesting to the student of language to note the varied forms in which he expresses himself. "He has instances of visions (8:11), symbolical actions (as 4:8), similitudes (12:15), parables (as 17), proverbs (as 12:22), poems (as 19), allegories (as 23:24), open prophecies (as 6, 7, 20, etc.)" Few writers, or speakers, can be so versatile.

While he calls himself a priest, it does not appear that he functioned in that office, but in the prophetic. Judging from the records, he must have acted in some measure as a sort of spiritual shepherd over his captive brethren. He was above all else a great preacher of righteousness, so much so that we frequently speak of the "Gospel of Ezekiel." The Jews classed him among the very highest of their prophets; and so he stands today in the estimation of the best Christian scholars.

History is not clear as to how, when, or where Ezekiel died. However, we have this much through tradition: "He is said to have been murdered in Babylon by some Jewish prince whom he had convicted of idolatry, and to have been buried in the tomb of Shem and Arphaxad on the banks of the Euphrates."

Comments on the Lesson.

The figurative language in the first three verses of this chapter indicate that Jehovah was filling Ezekiel with the message that he was to deliver to captive Israel. The term "Son of man" here used must not be confused with the same words that Jesus so often applied to himself; although God does use it with reference to Ezekiel in a broad and representative sense. He was Jehovah's messenger to the entire Jewish people.

4. Get thee unto the house of Israel.—The name Israel here does not apply simply to the exiles who were of the kingdom of Judah; but to all Jews. My words.—It is a preacher's business to preach the Word of God. He has no time to waste upon lesson matters. He should use the time well: for the night will soon come when no man can work. Could I begin life again, I would stick closer to the Book.

5. Strange speech . . . hard language.—Some of us who have tried to deliver God's message in languages other than our mother tongue feel the meaning of those words. It hurts when one has done his best, to realize that the people did not get his message. As a rule, native preachers in all lands must preach salvation to their own people.

6. Surely . . . they would have hearkened unto thee.—What truly evangelical minister in America has not felt the force of this verse during the last two decades! Often as we preach to men and women who turn deaf ears to our pleadings, our souls long for a chance to preach in some mission field with its hungry millions.

7. The house of Israel will not hearken unto thee.—They had refused to hear God, but had hardened their hearts. Then why send Ezekiel to them? Men may reject salvation; but God will leave them without excuse.

8. Made thy face strong.—God clothes his true messengers with a holy boldness. Paul prayed for it.

10. This verse is great. No man can deliver God's message to the people until he has first received it into his own heart. It must grip him, or it will never grip the hearers.

11. Whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.—That is, refuse to hearken. The preacher has no choice. He must deliver his message, though it be in the face of the severest opposition. If need be, he must die.

24:15-18. We skip some chapters to find Ezekiel facing the bitterest experience of life. "Behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke." His wife must die; but he must neither mourn nor weep. No tears must run down his cheeks. That was bitter. That evening his wife died; and he obeyed God's command; but how he did it, I see not.

MICHIGAN AND WISCONSIN CLUBS—FLORIDA CLUB

Some have thought that Jehovah intended by this dealing with the prophet to teach the captive Jews not to mourn over the destruction of their beloved city of Jerusalem.

Lesson II.—July 14, 1929.

Subject.—Ezekiel Teaches Personal Responsibility.. Ezek. 33:7-16.

Golden Text.—So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Romans 14:12.

Time.—B. C. 595 to B. C. 574.

Place.—Babylonia.

Introduction.—Our subject is thought-provoking. Adam tried to throw all responsibility for his fall upon Eve; and, if I mistake not, that has been human weakness ever since. We are prone to blame "the other fellow" for our sins. Men are constantly hunting for scapegoats to load down with their own meanness. Even the poor old Devil is blamed for much that he never did. Not long ago a desperately wicked man was lambasting Satan, and trying to unload all his wickedness upon him; whereupon I was led to inform the gentleman(?) that the Devil that was running him lived in his own skin and wore his clothes. I am willing for Satan to have all that is due him, but we cannot pile our sins on him, and expect God to excuse us. "Every tub must stand upon its own bottom."

Working in groups has a strong tendency to lead one to shirk personal responsibility. I learned a lesson by watching a team of six big horses pulling a heavy load. One of them had learned a trick. When pulling a load by himself he would fairly throw himself into his collar; but when pulling with the other five he would let his traces slack while keeping step beautifully with his companions. Watch for his human brethren; you can find them anywhere.

Personal responsibility is two-fold: (1) toward God; (2) toward one's fellows. God has put up his standard for our salvation; and no man need expect him to compromise so much as a hair's breadth. The Bible says it takes repentance toward God and faith in the blood of Jesus Christ to save one's soul. Many are telling us nowadays that we can be saved through good conduct. Is that true? Never! "God cannot lie." We must meet our own personal responsibility and live up to the divine standard, or perish.

Our responsibility to God is twin brother to our responsibility to men. There is no truth in one's claiming to be right with God while wrong towards his fellowmen. If one will not deal honestly with men, neither will he deal honestly with God. He who shirks responsibility in one place will do so in another. Bear this in mind: We are responsible to God for our conduct toward all men. Cain's silly question, "Am I my brother's keeper," is just as silly now as it was when he uttered it; but there are yet several Cains tramping the earth.

We shall not get the force of our lesson without studying the first six verses of this chapter. God gave Ezekiel a picture of an ancient walled city with a watchman stationed upon the wall in time of danger from some enemy that might invade the land. The watchman's business was to keep on the lookout, and to report the approach of an enemy. If he did his duty faithfully, and the people failed to heed his warning, no blame rested upon him, even though the enemy captured and destroyed the city. With this powerful illustration before us we face our lesson.

7. O son of man.—Again we meet this expression applied to Ezekiel as the representative of his people. I have set thee a watchman.—He is God's preacher, appointed to warn his people. The house of Israel.—Israel is here applicable to all the Jews, especially of that day. Ezekiel was not to preach any of his own peculiar notions; but "thou shalt hear the word of my mouth, and warn them from me." Would God the modern pulpit could learn that lesson. This is no time to give men stones when they are crying and dying for bread. "Preach the Word."

8. O wicked man.—No man will fly to Jesus Christ until he realizes that he is a lost, condemned sinner. He who belittles sin, belittles Jesus Christ. His blood will I require at thine hand.—Woe be unto the preacher who calls sin only a blunder, or the remains of an animal inheritance. There is hell at the other end of that sort of preaching.

9. Thou hast delivered thy soul.—Thank God for that. It is fearful to preach to men who stiffen their necks and harden their hearts against God; but if the preacher has been faithful in the preparation of his message, and if he has delivered it in the fear of God, "with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven," he need have no fears. Resisting souls may perish, but God will not hold such a preacher responsible for their loss.

10. How shall we then live.—Israel had forgotten the goodness of their

God. They seem to have forgotten that he would be merciful to repenting sinners.

11. As I live, saith the Lord God.—That expression is somewhat in the nature of a divine oath. Then follows one of the most comforting statements in all the word of God: "I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked: but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel." Be in earnest, be in a hurry, for tomorrow may be too late, and tell all your pupils how anxious God is to save them from sin. The Devil tells us that God wants to damn sinful men; but "he is a liar from the beginning." Master the parable of the prodigal son, tell of the forgiving father, and make the story ring like heaven in the hearts of all your pupils.

The remainder of the lesson is a sort of theological dissertation on sin and salvation. If some people would square their teachings by it, they would come much nearer preaching the truth. If this language means anything, it means that a lost sinner may be saved as soon as he repents and turns to God. On the other hand, it means that a child of God may backslide, turn away from God and be forever lost. If that is not its meaning, I confess that I see no sense in it. Why such fearful warning, if the thing cannot happen? When Ezekiel says in another place: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die," he must be speaking of a pardoned soul. It alone can suffer spiritual death; for the unforgiven soul is already "dead in trespasses and in sins." I have heard some very dangerous preaching just here.

What Would It Mean to Put THE HERALD Into 10,000 New Homes?

1. It would mean 40,000 souls touched by the soul-stirring articles, reports, sermons, etc., every week.
2. It would mean a mighty progress in the spread of scriptural holiness over this country.
3. It would mean the enlightening of the people on the dangerous heresies that are being so widely propagated in our schools and churches.
4. It would be an inspiration to thousands to live a higher and holier life.
5. It would mean 160,000 pages of Full Salvation literature sent all over the land to be read, re-read and passed on every week.
6. The good that would be accomplished would be incalculable.

Won't you be one of ten thousand who write us today, enclosing at least two subscribers on this liberal offer? Or better still, how about investing $5.00 of your tithe money in sending THE HERALD into ten homes for the remainder of the year? By so doing, this defender of the faith will be warning the people of the dangerous destructive criticism so popular today, and urge them to a life of separation from the world, and the importance of cleaving to the faith of our fathers which is seeking to be destroyed by the enemies of the Bible.

Dear Reader, if there ever was a time for you to rally to THE HERALD in its defense of the faith, that time is now! Let us hear from you immediately, with the names and address of friends who will subscribe through your solicitation, or by sending some of your tithe with the names of those whom you know will be blessed by reading THE HERALD.

We are counting on YOU to help us in the great work of spreading the Gospel of a Full Salvation among people who are perishing for the bread of life.

Yours for the Old Gospel,

TO THE HERALD FAMILY, GREETING

By Dr. L. R. Akers

SINCE my childhood, THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD has been in our home and I have grown up a faithful reader of its pages. I have learned to look upon THE HERALD subscribers as peculiarly a Christian family, bound together by ties of common interest, first with a desire to seek and acquire the life "that is hid with Christ in God,"—the sanctified life, the victorious life—and after the subjective experience then the objective passion, a yearning for the salvation of the world for which Christ died.

We are profoundly convinced that in the world's greatest material age only a full and complete Gospel can suffice to meet the soul problems of present day society. The hope of tomorrow is found in the Holiness Movement of today. We believe no periodical is doing more to cultivate the deeper spiritual life and to sound an evangelistic crusade than THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, which has been so ably edited for forty years by the mighty exponent of Bible Holiness, Dr. Henry Clay Morrison.

My association with Asbury College and, as a consequence, with Dr. Morrison, has been one of the closest intimacy for many years. My father served on the Faculty of this institution under its founder and first president, Dr. John Wesley Hughes, while I spent two and a half years in its halls, graduating in 1904. For eleven years afterward I had the honor of being President of the Alumni Association, and with possibly one exception, I have attended all of the Commencements of the school since graduation. On June 5th, we closed the fifth year of our administration as President of Asbury College.

For the first time in the school's history we have had an absence covering eight months of Dr. Morrison's ministry in our institution. During this time he has been seeking to regain his strength following the over-exertion of years of continuous and unusual labors in the educational, evangelistic, and editorial fields, doing the work of a half dozen ordinary men throughout this long period.

What a wonderful ovation he received when he appeared on the platform of Asbury College after several months in Florida. His heart surely must have been gladdened by the joy which was mirrored upon all faces at his return to the scene of fifteen years' faithful service.

The physicians have decreed rest that he may come back to a measure of normalcy which will permit him to resume his evangelistic labors. And when he called upon me to assist him for a period of four weeks in the editing of this paper I felt a sense of inadequacy to follow this trenchant and mighty herald of full redemption who has so wonderfully blazoned a white path of holy living through the last half century. As I come before you, THE HERALD family of whom I have been a member since childhood, I feel a bit as I did when making my first radio talk over WGY. The newness of the experience of speaking to an unseen audience of hundreds of thousands of people made me feel quite shaky and my tongue exceedingly thick. However crudely I may express myself to you in this opening editorial page, I can assure you that though the pen be slow and awkward the heart back of it beats with a genuine love for you and for the Christ whom we all love and seek to serve.

THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD and Asbury College have been from the beginning side by side and heart to heart in upholding and advancing full salvation in America, and it is our profound conviction that these two agencies for good should continue to co-operate in closest accord for the bringing in of a new day of spiritual achievement in the life of our nation. Believing in the sufficiency of the Gospel and the personal presence and power of the Holy Spirit we must undertake great things for God and expect great things from God. Countless thousands have for years thanked God for THE HERALD, for its fearless proclamation of the saving truths of the Bible and its unrelenting war upon the evils which threaten the life of the church and destroy the souls of men.

We have implicit faith in the Gospel which is the power of God unto salvation when it is proclaimed in all of its phases and in its fullness. We are unalterably opposed to its adulteration with human philosophies and the unbeliefs and notions of men who would substitute the novel or bizarre for the time-tested, never-failing power of God in the reclamation, regeneration, and sanctification of human life. We would condemn without hesitation those who have become hirelings instead of prophets and who have turned the church of God, essentially a place a worship, into a place of entertainment with plays, shows, romp, and carnal pleasure, instead of the quietness and meditation of the Father's sanctuary.

The coming year is to mark the observance of Pentecost in the program of the church. We note many references to the need of Pentecost. There is a very general feeling among devout people everywhere that there must be a deeper spiritual life and more power among ministers and church members if we are able to meet the issues of the present day and save the churches from the plague of worldliness and sin which threatens us on every hand. We read an appeal from the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, made some years ago, which seems to us especially applicable for the present hour:

"Our Methodism is a mighty force with great numbers and large wealth. It has shown in its world-wide program commendable liberality and a general effectiveness in its organized activities. Its supreme need is a baptism of power, a Pentecost of heavenly love bringing salvation to a lost world. For this let all the people make earnest, humble, and continued supplication. Tarry—tarry until you be endued with power from on high."

We are profoundly thankful to God that a recognition of this supreme need is being felt by many devout people here and there throughout the land. There is a genuine heart hunger and an earnest longing for a Pentecost which will come as a refreshing shower upon a desert land. Without doubt the one great need of the church is the baptism with the Holy Spirit. Our reading, thinking, conversation, purpose and prayer should lead us on in this direction.

If we as a HERALD family might bind ourselves in a covenant of prayer to the end that first of all, our lives shall be blameless and irreproachable in the beauty of holiness, and again that we shall not cease by day or night through intercession and personal effort to bring again a spiritual refreshing and a nation-wide revival to the needy hearts of men. This unified purpose would be honored of God and our hearts would greatly rejoice as we would see God's plan realized in the world.

For Holiness.

I have never thought of myself as a very good example of the sanctified life. I have met and associated with many persons who seemed to live on a higher plane of spiritual attainment and devotion than myself.

I have not a doubt of having received a gracious baptism with the Holy Ghost cleansing from all sin, and I believe with all my heart that men were created, that the Bible was written, that the Lord Jesus came into the world, lived, taught, suffered and died upon the cross that we human beings might be saved from all sin, and live holy lives, kept by divine power, the indwelling and guidance of the Holy Ghost.

Now, in the evening of life I thank God that it has been my privilege as a very weak agency, to live, to love, and to labor that my fellowbeings might come to believe in sanctification, the cleansing power of Jesus' blood, to seek and find in him a Redeemer able to save to the uttermost.

I believe with all my heart that it is the duty of the whole church, in her officials, her publications, her schools, her literature, her pastors and evangelists, her Sunday schools, lay leaders and the young people of the Epworth League to be constantly teaching and pressing to the high mark of full salvation from sin. That this should be the great goal, the glorious objective, to be fully saved, and to bring others to the knowledge of Christ and his power, and into the fulness of this blessing of the gospel.

Holiness of heart and righteousness of life gathered up, embrace and bring to a glorious climax all Bible truth, all Christian life and experience. This is the grand central station into which all the trains of God's plans and purposes run.

PREACHING FULL SALVATION IN MANY LANDS

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

The human heart is the same all around the world, and the gospel of full salvation finds a great response in the Chinese Church. In our recent meeting in South China we found people hungry for this great truth.

Nothing short of a full salvation gospel will meet the needs of the church in both America and Asia today.

John Wesley stirred England of the 18th century with holiness truth and preaching. The preaching of full redemption brought on a great awakening and produced generations of saints. It will do the same today if we would give it a chance.

One of the most blessed forms of full salvation is shown in its setting as Perfect Love.

The expression Perfect Love is found only in John's writings, 1 John 4:18. It is a term used to designate a state of soul in which sin is entirely cast out; the heart made pure, and God is loved with all the heart, mind, soul and strength. Faber sang about it thus:

"I love Thee so, I know not how
My transports to control;
Thy Love is like a burning fire
Within my very soul."

John Wesley defines the experience thus: "The loving God with all our heart, mind, soul and strength, this implies that no wrong temper, none contrary to love, remains in the soul and that all the thoughts, words and actions are governed by pure love." Wesley further speaks of the faith whereby the blessing is obtained in this wise:

"But what is that faith whereby we are sanctified, saved from sin and perfected in love? This faith is a divine evidence or conviction—

"1. That God hath promised this sanctification in the Holy Scriptures.

"2. It is a divine evidence or conviction that what God has promised He is able to perform.

"3. It is a divine evidence or conviction that he is able and willing to do it now.

"4. To this confidence that God is able and willing to sanctify us now, there needs to be added one thing more—a divine evidence or conviction that He doth it."

James Brainerd Taylor, the Presbyterian, tells how he received the blessing thus: "I was delightfully conscious of giving up all to God. I was enabled in my heart to say: 'Here, Lord, take me; take my whole soul and seal me Thine now and Thine forever. If Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean.' Then there ensued such emotions as I never before experienced. All was calm and tranquil, and a heaven of love pervaded my soul shortly after. I was dissolved in tears of love and gratitude to our blessed Lord, who came as King and took possession of my heart."

When in Japan we had some fine meetings with the Japan Evangelistic Band of whom Mr. Paget Wilkes has been the chief for many years. We have read a good deal of Mr. Wilke's illuminating books on Sanctification, etc. In an address of his he tells how he came into the experience of full salvation in the following:

"I remember about thirteen years ago in Japan I got so desperate for God's best, that if it had not been for God's mercy I should have gone out of my mind. I was seeking God, and he showed me the pride of my heart, and told me to call together some of the Japanese Christians that I had led to Christ and ask them to pray for me.

"I said, 'Lord, I cannot do it: I am a missionary: I've come out here to teach these people.' And the Lord said, 'Those are my conditions.' Then I remembered how the Lord submitted to John's baptism, and Paul,

PERFECT LOVE.

"O Jesus! Jesus! dearest Lord!
Forgive me if I say
For very love Thy sacred name
A thousand times a day.

"I love Thee so, I know not how
My transports to control;
Thy love is like a burning fire
Within my very soul.

"O wonderful! that Thou should'st let
So vile a heart as mine
Love Thee with such a love as this,
And make so free with Thine.

"The craft of this wise world of ours
Poor wisdom seems to me;
Ah, dearest Jesus! I have grown
Childish with love of Thee!

"For Thou to me art all in all,
My honor and my wealth,
My heart's desire, my body's strength,
My soul's eternal health.

"Burn, burn, O love! within my heart
Burn fiercely night and day,
Till all the dross of earthly loves
Is burned, and burned away.

"O light in darkness, joy in grief,
O Heaven begun on earth!
Jesus, my love! my treasure! who Can tell what Thou art worth?

"O Jesus! Jesus! sweetest Jesus!
What art Thou not to me?—
Each hour brings joys before unknown
Each day new liberty.

"What limit is there to Thee, Love?
Thy flight where wilt thou stay?
On! on! our Lord is sweeter far Today than yesterday.

"O Love of Jesus! blessed love!
So will it ever be;
Time cannot hold Thy wondrous growth,
No, nor eternity."

—Faber.

to be taught by Ananias, and I saw the desperate pride of my heart. I obeyed God, and it may seem a small thing to you, but it was real 'dying.' Today I could take you to the spot in Japan where the Comforter came to my heart.

"Beloved, when God shows us the poverty and barrenness and pride of our heart, and we are willing to obey him, then the Comforter will come.

"The widow woman, alone in her room, set out all the empty vessels, and then took that little pot of oil and filled them all.

"And we may bring the empty vessels of our heart, our desires, imaginations, longings, the consciousness of being barren and empty, and, spreading them out before the Lord, draw upon that wonderful pot of oil, the Holy Spirit in our hearts.

"Oh, praise God, he will come, as we draw upon him by faith. He will fill our hearts with divine, compassionate, holy love. Emotion is not love. Love is practical. It will go to the one you have wronged and ask forgiveness, out of the fullness of your heart, and that love will take hold of your spirit.

"Let us get down before God. Let us seek his face. Let us claim this blessed experience, the fullness of his holy, persuasive, compassionate, tender, positive love, and remember that there is always more to follow."

Perfect Love has been put into the sweetest poetry by Tersteegen, the German, and translated by John Wesley. I regard the following as one of the sweetest of hymns on the subject:

"Jesus, Thy boundless love to me
No thought can reach, no tongue declare;
O knit my thankful heart to Thee,
And reign without a rival there;
Thine, wholly Thine, alone I am;
Lord, with Thy love my heart inflame.

"O grant that nothing in my soul
May dwell, but Thy pure love alone;

O may Thy love possess me whole,
My joy, my treasure, and my crown;
All coldness from my heart remove,
May ev'ry act, word, thought be love.

"O Love, how cheering is Thy ray!
All pain before Thy presence flies;
Care, anguish, sorrow, melt away,
Where'er Thy healing beams arise;
O Jesus, nothing may I see—
Nothing desire, or seek, but Thee.

"In suffering be Thy love my peace,
In weakness be Thy love my power!
And when the storms of life shall cease,
Jesus, in that important hour,
In death, as life, be Thou my Guide,
And save me, who for me hast died."

If we would regard Perfect Love as a Medicine for the Believer's Soul we might, without levity, consider the ingredients entering into it as made up of the following, which has been set forth by Rev. F. E. Marsh, a very wonderful English writer upon the deeper things of God. We grant that the setting is rather odd and peculiar, but there is a great measure of truth in it and we pass it on to our readers as being worthy of a serious study.

THE SAINT'S MEDICINE CHEST.

One pound of the Spirit's graces in equal portions of one ounce each.

- 1 oz. Balm of Gilead. Jer. 8:20..
- 1 oz. Bark of Calvary. Isa. 53:4-6.
- 1 oz. Syrup of Faith. Jas. 5:15.
- 1 oz. Essence of Love. 1 Cor. 13:13, R. V.
- 1 oz. Oil of Confidence. Prov. 3:26.
- 1 oz. Honey of the Word. Prov. 4:20-22; 16:24.
- 1 oz. Spice of Concentration. Song of Songs 4:12-16.
- 1 oz. Stalk of Uprightness. Prov. 14:2; Rom. 14:17.
- 1 oz. Flower of Discretion. Prov. 22:3.
- 1 oz. Root of Contentment. Heb. 13:5, 6.
- 1 oz. Herb of Joy. Prov. 17:22.
- 1 oz. Milk of Kindness. Prov. 31:20.
- 1 oz. Frankincense of Worship. Matt. 2:11.
- 1 oz. Dew of Humility. Prov. 22:4.
- 1 oz. Crystals of Patience. 2 Pet. 1:6.
- 1 oz. Perfume of Praise. Ps. 103:1, 2.

Pound these ingredients well in the mortar of believing prayer, 1 John 5:14, with the pestle of truth, Eph. 4:20, 21; add sufficient water of the Spirit's life, Rom. 8:11, till all are proportionately mixed together, and then put in the jar of a sanctified memory, 2 Pet. 1:12. Apply the preparation three times a day and oftener if required, with the hand of diligence, 2 Pet. 1:10, and it will be found that this Christ-all preparation, Matt. 8:17, will cure all kinds of ailments, Matt. 8:16.

Ideals for Earnest Youth.

Ideals for Earnest Youth is a charming book for young people of both sexes. It is neatly bound, excellent paper, good, clear print, 224 pages, short chapters, sometimes only two pages, frequently not more than three pages. This enables the young reader to catch up the book at a few spare moments, read a chapter and go to work, or on a journey, with something to think about. Let me give you a few of the chapters:

Self Respect, Self Mastery, The Joy of Living, Your Ideals, Courtship and Marriage, Take Care of Your Mind, The School of Struggles, Backbone vs. Wishbone, Team Work, Recreation.

Send a dollar to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for a copy of Ideals for Earnest Youth, and surprise one of your children or young friends with a bright smile and a beautiful gift.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

CONVERSION AN ACT OR A PROCESS

Rev. Henry F. Pollock.

CONVERSION is the act of divine grace whereby a repentant sinner is turned from the path of unrighteousness, and placed in the path of righteousness—of right feeling, thinking and acting. It is a heart experience, received by faith, and thus wrought in an instant of time. Such is the traditional view of the experience. Many modern philosophers and theologians, however, have come to the conclusion that, in keeping with the development of the modern mind, and the more recent findings regarding human experience, the view formerly held should be somewhat broadened. It is claimed by these men that, although in some cases conversion has been cataclysmic or instantaneously manifest, yet oft-times it is a slower process, working itself out gradually by degrees. In some, they claim, it is done in an instant, but in many others it is a gradual work. As such a doctrine and experience is most vital to all human lives, it behooves us to be well established in the real truth concerning it.

Let us examine the views of our fathers as to how they understood and expressed conversion. First, the heart was regenerated, made new. It meant a complete change in direction or attitude. It does not take one long to change his direction. If I am going north, it takes but an instant to turn and go south. My attitude does not change by degrees. Before conversion I am against the will of God. After it, I am wholeheartedly for it. My mind has been made up in an instant—the instant I say yes to God's will. I am not regenerated a little bit today, a little more tomorrow, and next month more regenerated, until I am finally altogether changed in my attitude toward God. There is a positive and abrupt change in my soul's attitude when the transforming grace of God moves on the soul in answer to an appropriating faith.

In the next place the fathers understood that when one was converted and his sins forgiven, he was thus justified in the sight of God. Who ever heard of any one being declared just by degrees? A judge in the court room does not speak thus: "Now, gentlemen, the accused before you is a little bit just in my sight, but as I go on I see he is a little more just. He is becoming more and more just every time I look at him," and then closes his speech by declaring the accused fully just, and thus acquitted. To the contrary, the acquittal is made outright. If a man is justified, that justification is the act of an instant, from the character of the thing. Traditionally, it has been thought that when one is converted, he is adopted into the family of God. If I were an orphan child and a good family took up legal proceedings to make me their child, I would never think of educating myself day after day, week after week, into the belief or knowledge that I was a member of that particular family. It would be foolish to think that I was becoming a little more and more adopted every day. If I am outside God's family, nothing is clearer to me than that fact. If the Holy Spirit witnesses to my heart that I am received into his family, that knowledge is made known to me at once. It takes only an instant to be conscious of my state of adoption. A sinner coming to God for salvation, does not have to wait a week, month, or year to be able to sing with assurance: "I'm a child of the King!"

The fathers believed that when one was converted, the Holy Spirit directly moved on the soul in witness to the fact. Some of the modernists would have it this way: Under a gospel invitation or appeal, a man makes up his mind and decides for Christ. He begins to be a follower of Christ just a little, and becomes increasingly so by following his example day after day. He is receiving his witness of salvation in an ever increasing degree of assuredness, until at some indefinitely settled time in the future he is fully assured that he is converted,—that is, regenerated, justified, and adopted.

Now all this leads us into a great maze of confusion. Such an idea of conversion would establish three definite classes of human souls in the world. The Bible speaks of only two: saints and sinners. But now we have added a third: Sinners-being-converted-into-saints. If a person in this last class happened to die before he was fully converted, what would be his eternal destination? He could not in justice be lost, for he had started to become righteous. Yet he could not be saved eternally, because he is not yet fully converted. The Bible teaches us that no unconverted person will be admitted to the Heavenly City. And thus we find ourselves in the midst of much confusion.

Now, our modernist brethren will answer what we have said in this way: "O, you misinterpret the nature of the case. Take the laws of psychology as now understood. All knowledge comes to us through the physical senses. Our aim is Christian character. Character cannot be made in a moment, a day, or a week. Every action in accord with the principles of Christ pushes forward the building of Christian character. Sensing right situations, or outward stimuli, and responding to them in a Christlike manner brings one into a converted state." This, it is even claimed, establishes the soul better in the Christian life better than any cataclysmic conversion experienced under "high pressure methods." And thus they attempt to evade the real issue.

God established the law of human psychology when he created man—and the human mind works according to those laws,—that is, through the senses, ordinarily. However, the modernist is confusing two things: (1) the moment of forgiveness or conversion, and (2) the days of contrition and repentance preceding conversion proper; and the days, weeks and months following in which the soul is growing in grace and service. There is a marked distinction here. Growth in grace is altogether different than conversion. As the situations of life present themselves to the Christian from day to day, Jesus as his constant companion enables him to react to them in accord with the Bible and his will, and our Christian life, already having been begun at conversion by a simple act of faith, is now broadened, deepened, and strengthened. This is growth in grace. But one must get into grace before he can grow in it.

As we said above, the modernist claims that all knowledge comes to us through the physical senses. This is not true. The consciousness of saving grace, supernaturally imparted, does not come through any of the senses. It comes directly to the innermost recesses of the soul in response to an act of receptive faith. Every converted soul will testify to that fact.

I have yet to meet the man or woman who claims to have been converted gradually. I prefer to hold to that view established by the experience of millions of human souls. If I tried to get people saved by degrees, I would not get them saved at all. The modernist is not getting them saved. He may think he is winning them to Christ according to his idea of conversion, but the simple and awful truth remains that he is subtly leading men into a form of godliness without the power thereof. By the tremendous deceit of purporting to offer "life in its reality," he is leading human souls into meaningless forms and lifeless habits that make it harder to win such souls to the real experience of conversion than it would be had they never heard the gospel message of salvation.

May God help us to be clear in our thinking and true in our conduct in seeking and saving that which is lost—in getting men converted on the spot. Amen.

A Sample of Methodist Modernist Teaching.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

A letter from a retired Methodist preacher in the west, brings the following. The preacher on this occasion was a man under thirty, the product of Boston School of Theology. What aggravates it is, that four years ago, before he went to Boston, he was regarded as a promising young preacher. His theme was the temptation of Jesus. The writer of the letter says, "This is written from memory (the next day), but I think it is a fairly accurate setting forth of the views he expressed." Below is quoted from the letter.

"Jesus, a devout young man of Nazareth, a carpenter by trade, hears of the preaching of one John, in the wilderness about the Jordan, and shuts up his shop to go and hear from John lessons about God. When he hears John preach of bringing in the kingdom of God, he says, 'I will give my life to help that movement,' and was baptized in proof of his sincerity. After his baptism by John, he had a great spiritual experience; and heard the voice of God speaking to his spirit, saying, 'Thou art my beloved.' He then is led by the Spirit into the wilderness to 'think things through', and became so absorbed in that, that he forgot to take food for forty days and nights. 'If Jesus knew all things without thinking them through, as we have to, he could be of no help or inspiration to us.' After this, when he realized his hunger, he refused the temptation to turn stones into bread, in order to emphasize the spiritual, as over against the material. When tempted to cast himself down from a pinnacle of the temple, he refused to become a 'wonder worker,' to draw attention to himself. When tempted to get control of the kingdoms of this world by worshipping the tempter, he refused because he was not sure that the tempter could make good his promise. And, though not sure of his ability, yet he preferred that method to the other. So he started out with that purpose in view, and he asks all who will, to join him."

Comment is needless! Think of the coming generation of Methodist preachers being fed on that sort of semi-blasphemous stuff in our theological schools! And think of the children and young people being fed on it from the pulpit! We need not marvel, however much we may regret it, that virile youth fail to curb and restrain their natural and depraved passions, and the orgies of crime is on! How long can American civilization stand up under it? And what about the millions of souls thus defrauded of the power of Christ through the gospel, unto salvation? "Sheep without a shepherd!"

Dr. Ridout's Book, "The Beauty of Holiness"

This book has now been translated into Japanese and Chinese and is circulating throughout the Orient. "Beauty of Holiness" sets forth the fact that in real Bible holiness there are such beautiful things. This book is intended for holiness people, to help those who are in the experience of full salvation. It will make a beautiful gift book as well as a devotional book for God's children.

SAVE A SOUL FROM DEATH.

Rev. W. M. Young, D. D.

"Let him know that he which converteth a sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."—James 5:20.

THE Apostle Paul closes nearly all of his epistles with a benediction. I think there are no finer benedictions in human language than those found in the epistles of Paul. James writes a very practical book, setting forth the way of Christian service, and closes his epistle with the climax of noble achievement, the conversion of the sinner. The conversion of sinners is the most worth while business in this world. When we go up to our chambers for the last time, and fold our hands to work no more, there will be one thing that will stand out most prominently in the catalogue of things done,—the winning of souls. If we have brought none to Christ, that fact will stand out like Pike's Peak among the monuments of our regrets. Rutherford knew this when he said:

"If one soul from Anworth
Meet me at God's right hand
My heaven will be two heavens
In Emmanuel's land."

"LET HIM KNOW"

Charles Peace, who attained infamous notoriety in England some years ago as a burglar and murderer, a man who seemed absolutely depraved in every part; as he was being led to the scaffold to expiate his crimes under the law, the prison chaplain offered him what are called "the consolations of religion." The wretched man turned to him and said: "Do you believe it? Do you believe it? If I believed that, I would crawl across England on broken glass on my hands and knees, to tell men it was true."

Do we believe it? Do we believe that eternal death awaits the impenitent? Do we believe that Christ gives eternal life to those who believe on him and receive him?

"HE WHICH CONVERTETH A SINNER"

Some of us remember when conversion was preached with much greater emphasis than it is today. We believed it was either conversion or eternal ruin. We believed that one must be converted from sin and to Christ. It is quite possible to become converted to a church or a doctrine or a dogma or even to a preacher. It is said that D. L. Moody once met a drunken man, who asked if Mr. Moody knew him. He said, "No, I do not remember you." "Well, you ought to; I am one of your converts," said the man. And Mr. Moody answered, "I think you must be, for you surely are not one of the Lord's converts." Conversion is just as necessary today as it was in the times of Christ or the days of our childhood. Rebellious men are still walking the broad road and must be turned to God.

"FROM THE ERROR OF HIS WAY"

I do not know what the error of your way may be; it may not be drunkenness; it may not be burglary; it may not be murder.

The error of your way may be the error of indifference. It may be that you care little whether the house of God be full or empty; whether the kingdom goes forward or falters. It may be that you are little concerned whether your neighbor is saved or lost.

The error of your way may be the love of money. The Holy Scriptures say, "The tithe is the Lord's," but you may have been cheating him out of his tithe for fifty years, and still professing to love him. How long would you accept professions of love from your tenant farmer if year after year he held back and did not pay his rent?

Perhaps your error may be an old grudge; if that be so, be well assured that you must be converted from that error, or die in your sins. "He that hateth his brother is a murderer."

"SHALL SAVE A SOUL FROM DEATH"

Perhaps you have seen a great building on fire, and the firemen risking their lives to save men's bodies from death. A great building was on fire. A little girl was seen at a window high above the street. They brought the life-saving apparatus, and told her to jump for her life, but she refused. She said, "The baby is still in the house." She ran back and struggled with the smoke and flames, and again came to the window. And again they called to her to jump, but she would not leave the baby. At last, with the heroism of a martyr, she struggled to the window and dropped the baby into the net, and then tumbled herself out of the window, but she was burned beyond hope. As tender hands ministered to her, she said: "Don't worry about me, I saved the baby." It was a great act to save the baby! to save a human body, but how much greater to save a soul from death!

"I HAVE TWO BOYS DOWN THERE"

A lot of men were entombed in a coal mine, and great crowds of people had gathered. An old gray-headed man came running up; he seized a shovel, and began working, seemingly with the strength of ten men. A young man asked to relieve him, but he said: "Get out of my way, I have two boys down there!"

Perhaps some of us have boys and girls who are down in sin and need to be saved from death. Perhaps there are boys and girls in your Sunday school class, teacher, who need to be saved and brought into the precious assurance of sins forgiven.

SPIRITUAL POWER REQUIRED

God saves men by means of saved men; to convert a sinner from the error of his way, a man must himself be converted. Men fail in this holy task because they are not equipped with power from on high.

When Jesus was sending his disciples out to win the world and extend his kingdom, he breathed on them and said: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." To be a soul-winner, one must be baptized with the Holy Spirit. Christ commanded his followers to tarry in Jerusalem till endued with power from on high.

John Wesley was not a soul-winner during the first fourteen years of his ministry. But after that night when he said he felt his heart strangely warmed, he was able to warm other hearts.

TO SAVE A SOUL FROM DEATH ONE NEEDS
A BURNING HEART

Moses had brought up the Children of Israel from the slave-pens of Egypt. He had gotten them through the Red Sea and well on through the wilderness, but they sinned a great sin, and God was about to destroy his people. But Moses went down on his face before God to plead for them: "Oh, this people have sinned a great sin and have made them gods of gold. Yet now, if Thou wilt forgive their sin; and if not, blot me, I pray thee, out of the book which thou hast written." How it reminds us of Paul as he says: "I could wish that myself were accursed from Christ for my brethren, my kinsmen according to the flesh." Rom. 9:3.

While the blisters of the live coals were still on his lips, Isaiah cries: "For Zion's sake I will not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until her righteousness go forth as brightness, and her salvation as a lamp that burneth."

Ezekiel, yearning over Israel, cries out: "O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord. I will put my Spirit in you and ye shall live."

Such was the flame of zeal that burned in the early Church, when Philip went down to Samaria, and Peter to Babylon, and Thomas to India, and Barnabas to Cyprus, and Paul to Rome; they faced burning deserts and raging seas, wild beasts and wicked men, to save souls from death. They testified before kings, and were crucified and burned, to save souls from death.

LET US TALK WITH THE MARTYRS

There was Savonarola; why did he shiver in the dark dungeon, only to be carried out and hanged and his body burned? Was it to make lye to burn out the heart of Rome? No, it was to save souls from death.

Yonder is John Huss standing at the stake and the flames are scorching his nerves and singeing his hair and he is suffering excruciating pain. I ask him why he endures as seeing Him that is invisible, and he says: "To save souls from death."

There stands Martin Luther before the sovereigns of half of the civilized world, amid soldiers and knights with gleaming armour. A steeled baron touches him with his gauntlet and says: "Pluck up thy spirit, little monk. I have seen hard battles in my day, but nor I, nor any knight in this country ever needed a stout heart more than thou needest now. If thou hast faith in these doctrines of thine, little monk, go on!" Then hear him say with firm resolve: "Here I stand, I can do no other; help me God!" What was he doing it for? Was it not to save souls from death?

HAVE YOU READ THE HISTORY OF ENGLAND?

Yes, you have read the story of despotic kings and unholy wars. But have you read of the men and women who counted not their lives dear to them. If I had English blood in my veins, every drop of it would bound, and every nerve would tingle, as I read of those who seeded down old England with the gospel of salvation. The soil of old England is soaked with the blood of those who were willing to crack their sinews traveling over rough roads bearing the water of life to famished souls. From Wycliffe to the faggots and gallows of Tyburn and Oxford, men have sealed their faith with their lives. Those were not our Modernists who say that it does not make any difference what you believe. They were penned in wretched prisons, like John Bunyan, but they heralded forth the truth of God to save souls from death.

AND SCOTLAND AND IRELAND DID WELL

THEIR PART

It was of Hamilton that his enemies said, "If any more are to be burned, burn them in cellars," for they feared that the smoke of their sacrifice would make a winding sheet for those who had kindled the fires.

My spirit takes fire as I think of Hugh McKail, standing on the scaffold of martyrdom. Going to one side of the scaffold, he says: "Farewell, sun, moon, and stars! Farewell all earthly delights! Farewell, father and mother!" Then going to the other side of the scaffold, and lifting his hand, he says: "Welcome God and Father! Welcome sweet Jesus Mediator of the New Covenant! Welcome Holy Spirit, Comforter! Welcome death! Welcome glory!" Then the trap door drops and his soul is released. Why did he go to the scaffold? Why did he die? To save souls from death.

JOHN KNOX PRAYS FOR SCOTLAND.

In an old castle in Scotland visitors are shown a place where the planks of the floor are worn away, and they are told that John Knox wore them away with his knees. There he prayed: "Lord, give me Scotland, or I die!" For what was he praying? To save souls from death.

Many years ago I stood in the Art Museum and looked with profound interest on a great painting by Dore representing Margaret Wilson fastened to a stake where the tide of Galway creeps up; and it crept up till it lifted her blood-bought spirit above the glories of the crystal flood which flows from the throne of God.

Dr. Goodell asked a noble young missionary who had been sent home from the foreign field to recover health: "Why do you want to return?" He replied: "Because I can't sleep for thinking of them."

But above and beyond all that the saints have done and suffered, look back to Calvary. Jesus did not die for a sentiment; he did not die merely as an example of self-sacrifice or heroism. He died to save souls from death.

There may be those here today who need to be saved from death. To such I would say, Look to Jesus; he is able to save to the uttermost. "Whosoever calleth upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." Rom. 10:13.

"SAVE A SOUL FROM DEATH"

I heard a voice of power proclaim
That Christ can cleanse the darkest stain,
And save a soul from death.

To dark Gethsemane He went
And prayed till all his strength was spent
To save a soul from death.

My Saviour faced the frowning foe,
And drank the bitter cup of woe,
To save a soul from death.

For human sin His heart was sore,
A crown of thorns in death he wore,
To save a soul from death.

He groaned upon the dreadful tree,
Fulfilling Heaven's divine decree,
To save a soul from death.

Lord, send me forth with burning speech,
The living word of power to preach,
To save a soul from death.

"Give us a watchword for the hour,
A thrilling word, a word of power,
A battle cry, a flaming breath,
That calls to conquest or to death.

The glad evangel now proclaim
Throughout the earth in Jesus' name—
That word is ringing through the skies;
Evangelize! Evangelize!

To dying men, a fallen race,
Make known the gift of gospel grace,
The world that now in darkness lies,
Evangelize! Evangelize!"

High Points in the Recent Commencement of Asbury College.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WITHIN the narrow limits of a short duration of time the well-known town of Wilmore, Ky., has witnessed a series of rapidly-transpiring events that might well be marked as some of the letter days on the calendar of her religious history. The Annual Convention of the National Holiness Association, the Commencement of Bethel Academy, the Kentucky State Holiness Convention and the Commencement of Asbury College with all their various exercises and activities were woven into the warp and woof of Wilmore's wonderful educational and religious advantages and opportunities. We have neither the time nor the space to specify the many remarkable things that happened during these delightful days of instruction, inspiration and visitation. We will mention only some of the high points of the glorious occasion.

One thing that stands out very prominently in memory's review of the eventful affair is the unique sermon that was preached by the gifted son of the noted Dr. G. Campbell Morgan. Young Mr. Morgan is pastor of a Presbyterian Church in Lexington, Ky. He was invited to preach the baccalaureate sermon for the graduates of Bethel Academy. His sermon was a model of pure English, very appropriate for the occasion, rang true on gospel and fundamental lines and set a good example to all the preachers present on brevity and terminal facilities. He captured the graduates and carried the large Sunday morning congregation, with its pastor, Rev. O. C. Seevers, which in turn showered him with compliments and congratulations.

The first formal opening of the great Hughes Memorial Auditorium with a grand recital on the big pipe organ marked another important event of the occasion. A large audience taxed the capacity of the new building and listened with spell-bound interest to the matchless music that rolled from the majestic instrument touched by the skillful fingers of the famous player, Prof. Riemen-schneider, of Cleveland, O. Governor Flem D. Sampson, Mrs. Sampson and several State officers and members of the staff honored the occasion with their presence.

The next high point of the Commencement, as viewed and reviewed by the author, was the dedication of the new Auditorium Monday afternoon. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington dedicated the building with grace and dignity, feeling and unction. The bishop's speech of dedication was preceded by an address by Bishop Dubose, followed by remarks by Dr. H. C. Morrison, Dr. J. W. Hughes, Dr. W. L. Clark, Dr. H. W. Bromley and Rev. W. S. Maxwell, presiding elder, who presented pictures of Bro. and Sister Hughes, which were unveiled by Rev. Arthur Hughes and Mary Wilson, a son and daughter. Rev. J. F. Taliaferro, who was instrumental in shaping the early educational career of Dr. Hughes, was on the platform and was presented as the venerable benedict to the man in whose honor the great Auditorium was erected.

The next high point in the order of events was the Alumni banquet held in the spacious and sparkling dining hall of the Lafayette Hotel, Lexington, Ky. President Akers delivered a fine speech of welcome to the one hundred and fourteen graduates who were received into the Alumni Association. Rev. O. H. Callis, General Evangelist, was the toastmaster for the occasion.

One of the outstanding events of the entire Commencement was the great sermon delivered by Dr. Clarence True Wilson. He spoke on the subject of "Jesus, the Reformer." He said the great need of the world today was a prophesied ministry which would restore the lost art of religious rebuke. The Old Testament, he declared, was the history of three great reforms. A religious reform under Abraham; a municipal reform under Moses and a social reform under the Prophets.

The climax of the whole occasion was the great crowning day of the Commencement proper. This was Wednesday morning of the first week of June. The long line of the Academic march from the Administration building to the new Auditorium marked the beginning of the imposing ceremonies of the combined classic and spiritual commencement. More than one hundred and fifty graduates of the various departments wore the tasselled cap and classic gown. The Commencement occasion was stately, solemn and majestic, and yet deep, tense, earnest and religious. It was indeed a beautiful sight. When all the rank and file of doctors, professors, graduates, juniors and friends filled their respective places the venerable president emeritus, Dr. H. C. Morrison, led the solemn congregation to the throne in an earnest and inspirational prayer.

President L. R. Akers, clean, classical and consecrated, stood forth as a prince, and delivered a strong, tactful and telling address to the large group of graduates. His splendid speech embodied the fundamental elements for which Asbury College as an Institution stands.

Four representative men from New York, Texas, Mississippi and Missouri respectively, were honored with the D.D. degree. Their names are Rev. O. P. Clark, Rev. V. C. Curtis, Rev. Eli Pittman, and J. W. Hervey.

Let the holiness people all over the land continue to rally by Asbury College. It is a great school and destined to do much good and to exert a far-reaching influence upon the religious life of America and the missionary regions beyond.

Sons of God.

I have before me a beautifully bound book of sermons with the above title by Rev. Julius C. McPheeters, pastor of University Methodist Church, South, of Tucson, Arizona. Brother McPheeters is a man of marked ability, stalwart faith, and the true evangelistic spirit. These sermons will well repay the reader in head and heart, with the clear and sometimes, very eloquent, statements of Bible truth. The book is printed on excellent paper, clear, large type, from The Taylor University Press. We bespeak for it a wide reading. Brother McPheeters is one of our outstanding evangelistic pastors. In a few short years he has built up both a great church edifice and a great membership at Tucson. He is a soul-winner. Men who come to him receive saving truth, and when they do not come to him, he goes after them as a good shepherd after lost sheep, and brings them back to the fold. You may send $1.65 to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for a copy of this excellent book. Faithfully yours,

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XXVI.

BATTLING FOR LIFE.

HUSTON was stretched unconscious upon a couch and a physician was summoned who administered restoratives; later on, he was placed in an automobile and carried to his home.

His crucifiers complimented and contented themselves that his collapse proved that he was in his dotage, and that they had acted wisely in relieving him of any further responsibility as their pastor.

It was some time before the prostrated man became conscious and capable of consecutive thinking. He then realized that he had been too generous; that he had permitted the enemies of saving gospel truth to gradually get charge of his congregation. He lay quietly for some days under the care of a nurse and physician, carefully selected by the assistant pastor who kept all of his friends from visiting him.

On the following Sabbath the lawyer, to whom we have referred, stood upon the rostrum of the great church and, with a rather successful effort at broken tones of sorrow, announced that the pastor who had been in the work for years, had had a complete breakdown, and the board had been compelled to give him unlimited leave of absence, and that so large a congregation could not go forward without a pastor with full authority of leadership, and that most fortunately, they had been able to secure the services of Rev. Judas Iskabod who had become thoroughly acquainted with, and was deeply interested in, the very best interests of the congregation.

The people were somewhat surprised at the announcement, but accepted it at its full value. Some of the old members expressed genuine grief, but the congregation, made up largely of young people, felt they were most fortunate to be rid of a man who was not at all abreast with the times, and in his stead had a pastor who was in fullest sympathy with the new age and most aggressive and liberal theological views.

As Huston lay prostrate upon his bed, he realized that he had given himself up too much to grief over the loss of his wife. He had felt as if one-half of his being had been torn away and buried, while the other half, bleeding and suffering, had almost forgotten the responsibilities that rested upon him, and permitted the wolves of unbelief to invade the fold of Christ and destroy sheep and lambs.

He determined to battle for his life; to live, if possible, and if God would give him strength he would win back what had been lost and save his people from the delusion which had come upon them. He saw that the tares had been sown so industriously and thickly in the wheat that it would be most difficult to pull them up without destruction of the wheat. It would take time; it would take physical strength, which he did not now possess, but a strong resolution came into him and he set himself, first of all to get back the physical strength which would prepare him to wage the conflict he knew to be necessary to rescue his people.

A good physician, one of his old tried and true friends, who had moved away from the city, came back with some difficulty, got into his sick room where they sat quietly and talked over the situation. His old doctor advised him, just as soon as possible, to get away from the exaggerated, tender care of his enemies, and to take a trip to Europe; to abandon himself to perfect rest and, as far as possible, dismiss the thought of his trouble; to heal the deep wound of his crucifixion in his heart, and remain away until he was fully restored.

Huston took this advice and, after a few weeks of unutterable mental anguish and great physical weakness brought upon him by the disaster which had visited his church, the treatment he had received at the hands of the board, he pulled himself together, took a sufficient sum of money to support himself comfortably for some time in Europe, and took his departure for New York City, where he had engaged passage on a steamer for France.

He spent a few days quietly in a hotel in New York. On the evening before his ship was to sail, he ate something which made him so violently ill that the proprietor of the hotel, fearing that he might die on his hands, called an ambulance and sent him to one of the best hospitals in the city.

Here a very singular coincidence occurred. I must call the attention of the reader to the fact that from his boyhood, in his school life, as a cow boy, among his associates, in the Texas College and the Eastern University, and even by his wife, he had almost universally, been called John Henry; rarely was the word Huston used among his most intimate friends. He became so thoroughly acquainted with this that he did not think of anything else but being addressed as John Henry; frequently, Mr. John Henry.

The incident to which we refer is the strange fact that on the very evening that our friend Huston was taken to the hospital, a gentleman who was preparing to sail for France on the same ship on which Huston had engaged passage, was brought into the hospital. There was suspicion that he might have an attack of smallpox.

The young lady who kept the records at the office made a mistake in registering the name and room of these two new arrivals who came in a few minutes of each other. While it was her intention to register John Henry Huston in Room 124, she, in fact, sent Mr. John Henry to that room, and while it was her purpose to have sent Mr. John Henry to Room 107, she sent John Henry Huston to that room. This mistake was not noticed. A time or two, the nurse addressed Rev. Mr. Huston, as Mr. Henry, but he was so accustomed to this, and supposing that she did it out of kindness, and in an effort to make him feel quite at home and among his friends, he paid no attention to it.

In due time it was discovered that the real John Henry had a virulent case of smallpox. He was removed to an isolated ward and soon died. The physicians and nurses, because of the mistake made in the register's office, believed that John Henry Huston had died of smallpox. They placed his body in a hermetically sealed coffin, placed it in a strong box with a certificate pasted on top, insisting that the deceased had died of a contagious disease and, under no circumstances, must the coffin be opened. They shipped the remains as Rev. John Henry Huston, pastor emeritus of the People's Church, city of Goodwill (the name of the state slips my mind) care of Rev. Judas Iskabod, pastor of said church, in said city. A telegram was sent to Rev. Mr. Iskabod telling of the death of Rev. Huston, and of the shipping of the remains.

Many of the people in the city of Goodwill were deeply moved. They were also profoundly impressed with the wisdom of the board in relieving him of his duty, and placing in his stead, the Rev. Mr. Iskabod.

Great preparations were made for the funeral services, but as the supposed old pastor had died of smallpox, the friends sent flowers and only a small group were present at the interment in the cemetery. A service in his honor was held in the church the following Sunday afternoon. The vast auditorium was packed, with many standing. A number of ministers of the city made a few remarks and several of the professors of the university.

They did not fail in, as modest manner as possible, to refer to the fact that he was of the old school; that his conceptions of doctrines and his ideas of scriptural teaching belonged to a dead past; that they all honored him because of his sincerity, but they regretted that a man of such excellent spirit had failed to understand present conditions and bring himself into harmony with the new age; that he was one among the last of many stalwart men who were rapidly passing away and making room, and giving opportunity to a younger and better prepared class of men who would lead the young life of the nation into higher fields of thought and better conceptions of the true philosophy of life.

Meanwhile, Huston was rapidly recuperating in the hospital in New York. A skillful physician there found that the cause of his nervous state and weakness of body, was very largely on account of a physical condition which could be easily remedied by a minor operation. This was performed and Huston recuperated with marvelous rapidity. It was as if a tremendous burden had been lifted, both from brain and body, and he sprang up like a hickory withe that had been bent down by some obstacle, suddenly removed.

His physicians assured him that his improvement would be rapid and that there was no necessity for his going to Europe, unless he had some special desire to travel, but it would be wise for him to remain some time in the hospital and then he should spend the winter months in Southern Florida, and with the opening of the spring he would be his old self ready for heroic service.

We would remind the reader that several weeks have passed since the crucifixion of our beloved Huston by his official board, and the Rev. Mr. Iskabod and the zealous group of workers who had gathered about him, with the young people of the congregation so full of life and eagerness for service, have been very busy. At the celebration of their new freedom and entrance into the new age, with a program of service truly worth while, they had determined to put on a pageant. They had fallen upon the idea of giving to the people some comprehension of the grandeur of King Solomon when he received that famous visit from the Queen of Sheba. This would give the young people, as well as some of the older, an opportunity to show to the enchanted gaze of the multitude the magnificence of the Oriental dress in the days of Solomon and his famous queen visitor. Great preparations were made; fine costumes were rented, beautiful imitations of crowns were carefully built up by the very best milliners of the city. Goodwill was deeply interested and they congratulated themselves that, at last, they had at this great church an energetic and aggressive young man who no longer embarrassed other pastors of the city in emotional revivals of religion. The preparations went forward with great enthusiasm. Something over a hundred of the young people were trained to perform their various parts in the coming display of ancient Oriental glory.

Finally, the date was set and announced, tickets were on sale, and every one was in a high state of anxiety to see the splendid pageant which would not only be entertaining, but have an element of education and Oriental historical value; at least, this was repeatedly announced in the public press by the Rev. Judas Iskabod, who, with his own hand, had written out the play and was the enthusiastic leader in all of the preparations of the grand event. (Continued)

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

EVANGELISTIC REPORT.

The past five months in revival work has taken me into Washington, Oregon, California, Kansas, Kentucky and Ohio. In all our engagements we have seen 350 souls find pardon or sanctification; I mean that many different people, and some of them received both pardon and purity. We have seen some wonderful cases of healing and thousands have heard the gospel of a full salvation. We are devoutly thankful to God for his manifold blessings that have come to us and for his sustaining grace in some of the severest conflicts in life's evangelistic labors of 27 years. The pastors and workers with whom I have been associated have all treated me most kindly and our fellowship has been beautiful and sweet. The people have been generous and kind and thoughtful of my needs. God bless them all. Our first camp meeting began May 30, at Willow Lakes, S. Dak. We were there last year. They are a fine people. Pray for a great summer harvesting of souls.

J. B. McBride.

WILLIS BRANCH, WEST VIRGINIA.

Closed a revival Sunday night, Brother J. W. Foster, of Manchester, Ohio, being the evangelist. We held the meeting in the schoolhouse and God gave real victory from start to finish. Two services were so completely under the control of the Spirit, the preachers did not get to preach; just a wonderful praise service. There were 89 or 90 conversions, sanctifications, and reclamations. The writer had charge of the children's meeting and quite a number were saved. Sister Billups, a real worker for God and lost souls, and myself will continue the children's meeting each Wednesday and prayer service each Sunday afternoon. We praise God for such a consecrated man as Brother Foster. He has held four meetings on the Harper charge since Jan. 2nd. Many souls have been saved.

Our meeting here closed with nine saved and sanctified on the last night and a praise service of mighty demonstrations and power. We have been praying God to give us an old-fashioned revival. Remember us at a throne of grace that victory will continue.

Mrs. L. R. Blake.

SHANGHAI, CHINA.

We recently passed through the big feast—Chinese New Year. Every one's birthday comes on this day. Should a child be born in even the last hour of the last day of the old year it would be two years old on New Years. New Year came on Sunday, Feb. 10th. Every store was closed. All work stopped. But it was not quiet! It was like many Fourth of July's in one. Oh! the fire crackers!! At midnight I was awakened by a vast broadside of large and small fire crackers and they kept it up for days. In the morning the ground was covered as by red snow—the "confetti" of exploded fire-works. Fire crackers are but a part of the feast—the noisy part.

The last day of the year everybody is busy—the men at closing up their accounts. All bills must be collected and all debts paid. Woe be to the man who does not pay his debts. The women are very busy. The house must be made as clean as a pin and decorated, and the brooms hidden—bad luck if they appear on New Year. Before the New Year sun rises all kinds of food must be gotten ready! Guests—many—will come during those days and they must be feasted. Few people see slumber the last night of the old year. But when the sun rises, calm reigns over the household. As one walks out between 6 and 9 A. M. the whole town is asleep. Sunday indeed! But excitement arouses them and about 10 o'clock you'll find the streets alive with people dressed in their best "bib and tucker" and you hear, "Kong Hyi Fah-dzai!"—"Congratulations and abounding wealth to you," shouted from one to another. The closed doors are plastered with appropriate sayings written on blood-red strips of paper. Go to open spaces of the city and see crowds encircling puppet shows, acrobats, monkey performers, squirming dragons, entertainers of all kinds, and peddlers of sweets and children's toys—Vanity Fair! Go to the temples and you find thousands burning incense and candles before all the idols, praying for wealth, old age and bliss.

One interesting god connected with the New Year is the god-of-wealth which is worshipped especially on the 5th—his birthday. The money spent on fire crackers in his honor would pay China's national debt. Few begin work again until he is properly worshipped. Another is the kitchen-god. He is a paper god and sits over the stove in the kitchen where he spies on the doings of the family for a year. On the 23rd of the 12th month he is given a big feast. Sweet syrup is put on his mouth and he is put in a beautiful paper sedan chair and burned in glorious style, accompanied by fire works—which is sending him to the Upper-god to report on their year's doings—all this fuss and sweetness is to bribe him to speak well of their family to his majesty. When he returns on the last night of the old year—a new idol is bought and placed with little ceremony—in the old niche—it will be a year before he reports again—why "taffy" him now?

Next to idol-worship gambling takes a big place in New Year celebrations—gambling everywhere! What they eat and drink, and the fire crackers, and gambling, all, in some way or other, symbolize or point to the sound "Kao-sen"—excelsior! in the sense of rising high in wealth and station—especially in wealth. It's indeed a wonderfully interesting time, and is indulged in even by beggars—for they receive a harvest of alms.

The National Government ordered that Chinese New Year should not be observed this year. It might as well have tried to turn back the greatest tidal wave of history! National commands stop the observance of Chinese New Year's customs! Only the conversion of these people to Christ will stop this idol worship and lead to the worship of the true God. And to us the glad part of it is that each year more leave the false and adopt the true as the Chinese one by one are born anew. We are not discouraged. Pray much for China. Kindest regards and best wishes.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

Since we have last reported through The Pentecostal Herald we have had two good revivals. The first was at Walbridge, Ohio, with the Church of the Nazarene. Rev. John Crider is the efficient pastor of this fine little church. Nearly all the men who are members of this church are railroad men and because of that some could not attend the night services. So for their benefit we had day services, which proved to be a great blessing to the church.

The altar work was thorough and the results good. While we did not have great numbers crowding the altar, yet we had earnest, persistent seekers clear through the meeting, and a nice number were saved and sanctified. This was the third revival we have helped Brother Crider with in various churches on the Ohio District. It would be hard to find a more devoted and loyal man to God and his people than Brother Crider. He puts God and his work first all the time. May his tribe increase.

Our last revival was in Lowell, Mich., with the Church of the Nazarene. Rev. Earl J. Stevens is the good, big-hearted pastor of this fine little church. Here again we had some obstacles to keep people from attending. Some of the men worked in shops at night, and some of the farmers were very busy getting in their crops. So our attendance through the week was not so large, but on Sundays we had large crowds, and of course the best altar results. The last Sunday night the altar was well filled with fine young people seeking the Lord, and most all came through with a definite experience. Four good members were added to the church. During this revival one good brother offered to pay one-half of the church debt of $1660.00 if the church would raise the other half. Brother Stevens urged the church to action, and they had it almost raised by the time the revival closed. The church and people also gave Brother Stevens and his good wife a love offering of $25.00 the last night of the revival. This was also our third revival with Brother Stevens in various churches where he has been pastor. He too, is loyal, devoted and self-sacrificing and is proving himself to be a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

A REPORT.

This is my first report in the column of this splendid paper since my entering the evangelistic field last October. I resigned my pastorate last year to enter the field. God has given us some good meetings, and has blessed our efforts. Many have found Jesus Christ, either for pardon or purity. We have held meetings at the following places with good results: Our first meeting was at Hammondsville, Ohio, in the Church of the Nazarene. Rev. Ray Estell was the pastor. The people treated us royally, and gave us a call for a return meeting, and we returned back to the church last March, and God gave us real good victory, and we still have another invitation to return for a third meeting. The Barnett Sisters of Ellet, Ohio, were the special singers, and others. The attendance was fine! Following our October meeting we went to Grafton, W. Va., in the Church of the Nazarene. Rev. Miss Lena McKee was the faithful pastor. The meeting was held in the Courthouse. This was rather a hard pull, but God blessed us in our efforts. The Graftonians treated us better than we deserved. We then supplied and preached in Pennsylvania, and began a meeting with our new and baby church in Dubois, where Wm. Sloan is the untiring pastor. Brother Sloan, is the son of Dr. Howard Sloan, former District Superintendent of the Pittsburgh District. He is a promising young man, and is getting along nicely in his pastorate. We were only to be there one week, leading up to the Dedicatory service of their new church, but God was blessing so graciously that we went on another week. We had a great time with those kind people of DuBois, Va. Our next revival was of a week's endurance with the people of the Church of the Nazarene, Kenmore, Ohio. Rev. H. H. Davis is the pastor. He, too, is a good booster. We followed Rev. John Fleming, who had been going on for two weeks. This was no small job to fall in line with our dear friend John. He is a hurricane personified. He laid a good foundation, and went on "high" so that we thought our hearts would fail us in trying to reach the heights to which he had taken the people. We cannot say that we did reach that place, but we can say that God gave us a good week's meeting. God bless the people of Kenmore, which are "no more," but rather a part of that great city, Akron, Ohio. We closed a good meeting in Wellsville, Ohio, in the Church of the Nazarene. Rev. J. A. Stewart is the pastor. He treated us like we were a king's son. God came on the scene more than once, and the folks shouted and shouted, and the evangelist didn't get to preach at times. This meeting closed just before our great Pittsburgh District Assembly. Of course we took in the feast of fat things. We also preached for some of our leading pastors: Cleveland, Ohio, First Church of the Nazarene, and had three seekers in the one evening service we preached there. Rev. Collar is the good pastor. He is one of those "hooser" pastors that is putting the thing across in Cleveland. We preached for Rev. Chas. Wetzel, Uhrichsville, Ohio, my old home church. Brother Wetzel has done wonderful work in this place. We preached for Rev. Chas. Hanks, pastor of the Arlington St., Akron, Ohio, Nazarene Church. Brother Hanks is also doing a great work. Then for Brother Andrews who just closed his four years' pastorate at Greentown, Ohio. One of the most spiritual churches in the entire movement.

I can really and truly say that I have not worked with a better class of preachers than those represented in this report. God bless them.

We are at this writing holding a home mission meeting in New Salem, Pa. There are three Catholic churches in this town of 1500 to 2000 population. One Presbyterian and one Christian Church. This historic town dates back to 1793. God is blessing us, and the outlook is splendid. We go from here to Caldwell, Ohio, in a tent meeting. Pray for us.

B. H. Pocock, Evangelist.

OWINGSVILLE, KENTUCKY.

We wish to report through your columns the revival which began at the Mt. Pleasant Church on the Owingsville charge, on May 6th and closed May 19th. In this meeting we were assisted by Rev. J. R. Parker, of Wilmore, Ky., who did the preaching to the delight of all who heard him. He won the confidence and respect of the people, and under his preaching which was accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit, they became hungry for God, found their way to an altar of prayer and prayed through to victory in the old-fashioned way. Thirty-one souls found God during the meeting and many others were touched. Twenty-five were added to the Church and we praise God who giveth the increase.

We would add in respect to Brother Parker that, in our estimation, he is an evangelist of rare ability and deep piety, one who preaches the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, stands by the pastor, works for his every interest, and leaves the revival in the church rather than taking it with him. We recommend him very highly to any one who desires to see the church revived and souls saved. Brethren, please pray for us.

C. C. Tanner, P. C.

REPORT OF THE MILLWOOD MEETING.

On Sunday afternoon, May 12, we began the tent meeting at Millwood, Ga. That veteran of Christian work, Brother Paul M. Lang, had erected his gospel tent in the heart of the town, and the meeting began by Rev. F. A. Ratcliffe preaching from the text found in the third chapter of Habakkuk and second verse: "O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years."

The preaching was done by Rev. F. A. Ratcliffe, who is pastor of the Axton charge, and who is also Conference Evangelist for the South Georgia Conference of the Methodist Church, except during two days absence when his place was ably filled by Rev. Beall, pastor of the local Baptist Church. The singing was done by local talent, and led by the pastor, and Brother Paul Lang.

The meeting hadn't gone far when denominational lines were forgotten. The Baptists seemed to take as much interest in it as if it had been conducted for their own church exclusively, and the fellowship between the two denominations was beautiful.

This meeting is thought by some to be the greatest meeting at Millwood since the great meeting held twenty-seven years ago when the Methodists and Baptists came together in a great revival under a brush arbor, and the revival swept the town and surrounding country. That meeting was also held by the local pastors, Rev. F. A. Ratcliffe, and Rev. T. P. O'Neal, assisted by Rev. I. R. Kelley, who was then pastor at Pearson.

No community could surpass the good people of Millwood in entertaining the preachers. They spread a feast for them everywhere they were entertained.

Many professed conversion, and some entered the higher life. God was with us in great power for which we rejoice and take courage. Both the churches were greatly revived, and thirty-two members were received; eight joining the Baptists, and twenty-four the Methodists, the membership of the Methodist Church being a little more than doubled.

The old Methodist Church was dropped a few years ago, but it was reorganized and set on its feet again by Rev. Claude Horton, and under the present pastorate, the old church has been repaired, and about three hundred dollars being spent on it. They now have a little more than half enough money raised to paint it inside and out, and to stain the seats.

The carnal nature in man is more deep and dangerous than any words you may use can describe. It is the "old man of sin" that is to be crucified. He must be "put off", he must be "destroyed." There is no place for him in the kingdom of many mansions where only the pure can enter and dwell.

It is growing late in the evening. I have suffered much these past eight months. I hope I have not complained, but I do praise God he has let me live to publish THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, to render some active service in the building up of Asbury College, to travel over a wide area as an evangelist, I believe prompted and actuated all the time, with quite a bit of chaff in the wheat, no doubt, for holiness, a great reverential love for the doctrine, a great desire that my fellowbeings might know the blessedness of a heart from sin set free, a great faith and adoration of the Lord Jesus, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world, and the gracious help of the Holy Ghost who has borne with me, strengthened me, and led me on. My heart longs to strengthen my brethren in the faith, to exhort them to be of good courage, to live, to pray, to preach, so that the people will hunger and thirst after righteousness, so that they will sell all for that precious jewel of full salvation from sin. May God bless all the churches, all the organizations, all the people, and influences laboring to bring the people into holiness of heart and righteousness of life.

H. C. MORRISON.

Dr. Morrison in the Hospital Again.

We regret to tell our readers that Dr. Morrison suffered a relapse after coming from the Commencement at Asbury College and has been confined to his bed almost constantly since coming home.

Last Monday he began to show symptoms of an additional trouble which necessitated his going to the hospital, and after examination, the doctors think an operation will be necessary to relieve the seat of his ailment.

He had planned to start south in a few days, but how little we know what lies ahead of us. Truly "Man proposes but God disposes," and we must bow submissively to what seems to be the Father's leading. It may be very fortunate that he did not leave home, for had he started and taken ill it would have been much worse than being at home where the comforts of an up-to-date hospital and skillful nurses could minister unto him.

We shall ask that our readers remember Dr. Morrison in prayer, that God may bring him through alright, and that he may be restored to health and service to his fellowmen. I'll keep you posted through THE HERALD as to how he gets along, for I know you will be anxiously waiting to know the outcome of his operation, if he has one, or his illness.

He has been one of the most optimistic, patient sufferers I have ever seen, and has a simple trust in our Father to know that whatsoever he does is best. Such times as we are passing through are good times to lean heavily upon the everlasting arms, and believe that "all things work together for our good," even though the rod is laid heavily upon us. We do not understand all these mysteries of providential workings, but we know our Father makes no mistakes and will reveal to us after while what his purpose was in all he allowed to come into our lives that, for the time, seemed so mysterious. Like the Psalmist, I will say, "What time I am afraid I will trust in the Lord."

Later: The doctors are hopeful of tiding Dr. Morrison over without an operation, at least for the present. He is not suffering so severely, and we are trusting in the Lord to bring him through. Pray daily for him.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Special Notice!

On the day of the dedication of the new Auditorium at Asbury College, Rev. W. S. Maxwell, P. E., of the Covington District, presented the College with oil paintings of John Wesley Hughes and his first wife, Mary W. Hughes. The work was done by an artist of Lexington, Ky. Brother Maxwell informs me that several of the old friends and students of Brother Hughes have sent him contributions toward paying for these paintings. There is yet need for considerable contribution. Will the old students and friends of Brother Hughes who have been blessed under his ministry, send their offering to Rev. W. S. Maxwell, Fort Thomas, Ky. Please look after this matter at once.

Corrections.

In a recent sermon in THE HERALD by Bishop A. H. M. Zahniser, some errors escaped the proofreader which we desire to correct. In referring to the second with applying to the baptism with the Spirit, with was omitted. Where it says "The Holy Spirit sustains," etc., it should read "The baptism of the Holy Spirit." Where it reads, "No such can render," it should be "No church can render." We feel it due Brother Zahniser that attention be called to these mistakes, and gladly do so.—Office Editor.

President Akers' Address to the Class of '29 At Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., on June 5, 1929.

MEMBERS of the Class of 1929, may I offer you my heartiest felicitations as we meet together on this red letter day. I would congratulate you because it is your privilege to live in the palace age of human history. We have heard of the Stone Age, the Bronze Age, the Iron Age, and the Golden Age, but in all truth it is your glorious privilege to live in the Golden Age.

Your great-great-grandfathers were citizens of a county, your great-grandfathers were citizens of a state, your grandfathers were citizens of a section, your fathers were citizens of a nation, but, in a peculiar sense, you are world citizens. We live in an international age. We are today at the very hinge of history. We behold old orders disintegrating. We have seen thrones toppled over, empires broken up. Authorities once feared are now laughed out of court. Voices long silent have found utterance. Many traditions and institutions have passed away with the new order. And yet with many of these things which should have gone long ago, alas many good things have also gone. Yet in spite of this I would reiterate that this is the golden age for you. It is the age of largest opportunity. Never did youth face greater problems and greater responsibilities. This old world of ours has been somersaulting in morals and in the loss of ideals since the world cataclysm, and your great task is to set it right side up again and bring it to the crucified feet of him who is Lord and Master of us all.

There are real dangers that confront us. Tremendous obstacles are to be overcome. Great battles are to be won. Among the forces that menace the integrity and permanency of civilization we might mention the red peril. Here we see the incarnation of lawlessness and of anarchy. The red peril is one of terrific menace because it seeks to blast away the very moral sub-foundations of human society. The sanctity of the marriage tie to the red is a huge joke. Free love is loudly proclaimed. Christianity is sneered at as a vain superstition cherished only by the weak and effeminate. Bolshevik cartoons are blasphemous. One shows an attempt to build a ladder to the sky and hurl God Almighty out of his own heaven. This determined propaganda to advance atheism and communism as a world program, while not as yet universally successful, is yet causing many wise men to knit their brows in perplexity. The atheistic propaganda in American schools is a back-wash of the red program for the world.

Another much talked of menace is the yellow peril, a growing sense of racial solidarity among the yellow peoples who constitute by far the major part of the world's population. Professor Stoddard has written an interesting volume on "The Rising Tide of Color" and seems to sense an ominous movement against Nordic or white supremacy. He fears that through sheer force of numbers pagan materialism may inundate our western civilization and break down the slowly acquired result of the centuries.

Then there is the "green" peril, or the peril of ignorance, the danger of the low brow or the proletariat, the danger from the so-called submerged masses who with rumblings of discontent and hatred threaten to destroy the intelligentsia and break down the present social order in a retrograde movement that will land us back in the jungles of our yesterdays. Truly ignorance is a luxury which no nation or individual can afford. More than one thoughtful man laments the national hysteria and mob psychology which prevail in times of civic stress or excitement. Mob spirit is invariably lower than the individuals that constitute it.

It is our profound conviction, however, that no one of the red, yellow, or green perils is the supreme peril of this present hour. We believe that America's greatest peril is the white peril, the peril of the white man with the black heart, the white man with yellow ideals, men who have substituted the love of gold for the love of God, men who laugh at the golden rule and blindly follow the rule of gold, men who are avowed devotees of the jungle creed, "Every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost;" men who have adopted for their rule of living Ruskin's sarcastic version of the Ten Commandments:

"Thou shalt have gods of self and ease and pleasure before me. Thou shalt worship thine own imaginations as to houses and goods and business, and bow down and serve them. Thou shalt remember the Sabbath day, to see to it that all its hours are given to sloth and lounging and stuffing the body with rich foods, leaving the children of sorrow and ignorance to perish in their sodden misfortune. Thou shalt kill and slay men by doing as little as possible thyself, and squeezing as much as possible out of others. Thou shalt look upon loveliness in womanhood to soil it with impurity. Thou shalt steal daily the employer from the servant, and the servant from his employer, and the devil take the hindmost. Thou shalt get thy livelihood by weaving a great web of falsehoods and sheathing thyself in lies. Thou shalt covet thy neighbor's house to possess it for thyself; thou shalt covet his office and his farm, his goods and his fame, and everything that is his."

Let us again reiterate: the supreme danger of the present moment is the well nigh universal stark and pagan worship of material success. We are living in an atmosphere of material lust that presses down upon us far more heavily than the atmospheric pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch.

Man was made a two-world creature and only as he lives with the background of another world in his thought can he ever hope to fulfil the divine mission concerning him. A one-world man is inevitably a failure, yet human society is made up of such men,—modern Epicureans who have no thought beyond the present moment of material or fleshly enjoyment. We are continually regilding the golden calf. Ancient Israel had nothing on modern America in bowing down to the golden calf of material success.

Symbolic of our worship of material things, one may but turn the leaves of any modern magazine and behold a typical example in the advertisements. For instance, here is a black headline, "BE A SUCCESS!", illustrated by a picture of a man of forty leaning back in a Morris chair smoking a cigar. True success is never found in a Morris chair, but only in carrying a cross. Another advertisement shows a man driving a Packard with the statement, "TEN THOUSAND A YEAR!" He is supposed to be a great success while a book-keeper at $150 per month is supposed to be a failure. Society is shot through and through with this material miasma. Ideals are laughed at. "Deals" are everything. Keen minds are lauded, but noble souls ignored. Yet what is more tragic than a man with a 10x12 mind and a 2x4 soul, one who is well upholstered without but has log cabin furnishings within? Preachers of this nation should have three Sundays a week to warn our people against the deadly peril of worldliness, this devil's anesthetic which would substitute for the goodness of God the gold of man just as if Jesus had never lived, just as if he had never died. It is a tragedy unspeakable that in this tremendous age one should have a man's idea of the universe and a child's idea of the God who made the universe; that man's greed for gain should eclipse God's creed for good. No man's work is greater than his soul.

Let us get at the source of the world's ills and see what remedy is provided. First of all, man is suffering from eye trouble. We see poorly and we see wrong things. Our souls suffer from low visibility. The fog of bewilderment and the coal dust of commercialism have obscured the atmosphere in which we live. We do not have a background of spiritual values. How often we hear the current phrase, "I see by the morning paper," and the morning paper is the only eye that multitudes have. What is it they see? A daily catalog of crimes, of human ills. "Anything that breaks the Ten Commandments is news," says a modern editor. The morning paper brings with it its daily bath of moral filth and human corruption. How few are the golden deeds, noble thoughts, and inspiring examples recorded in its pages. Many of us are near sighted or far sighted. Seeing only what is near we miss the stars. Seeing only that which is far away we overlook the little, finer, gentler things of life. Jesus Christ alone had a perfect background and foreground. As a result, he was the only man in the world who had perfect vision and a perfect life, so to him we must go for the solution of life's difficulties and the cure of human ills. "The Great Physician now is near, the sympathizing Jesus," and he alone holds in his nail-pierced hands healing for the sin-sickness and the soul sorrow of human society.

What was his mission? Let us hear the Annunciation Angel: "Thou shalt call his name Jesus for he shall save his people from their sins." Yet how cruelly did we mistreat our Savior. Leaving heaven's diadem for earth's shame, the plaudits of the angels for the curses and reviling of men, his first pillow among us was the straw among cattle, his last a crown of thorns upon the cross. The reception committee became the rejection committee. The people he came to save took him out of their city and crucified him upon a skull-shaped hill. But in spite of all this before he left he made his will in our favor. What was it he gave to us? He gave his mother to his beloved disciple, John; his body to Joseph of Arimathea; his clothing to the soldiers who crucified him; but what did he give to us? His crowning gift to us was the gift of the Holy Spirit. Said he, "It is expedient that I go away, but I send unto you the Comforter who shall not only be with you but in you and he shall teach you all things."

The coming of the Holy Spirit was to illuminate our minds so that we should have the thoughts of Christ, to sanctify our hearts that we might live the holy life of Christ, to comfort our souls that we might be ever conscious of the Everlasting Arms beneath us. No man has ever truly lived who has not first lost himself completely in surrender to Jesus Christ. Every full orb'd spiritual life must first mean a birth. "Ye must be born again." Second, there must be a death. "I am crucified with Christ." The divine process is first forgiveness of sin, regeneration; then cleansing from the Adamic or carnal nature in the act of entire sanctification. "Without holiness no man shall see God." The Celestial City must be reached by way of two towering peaks, Mt. Regeneration and Mt. Pentecost.

In closing, may I enjoin you to embrace the glorious opportunities for service in this golden age? With the soldier who died on the heights of Gallipoli, may your prayer be also "Thanks be unto God who has matched us to this present age." May your prayer be that of Wesley,

*"O for a heart to praise my God,
A heart from sin set free,
A heart that always feels thy blood
So freely spilt for me."*

And may your task be also that of the consecrated singer,

*"To serve the present age,
My calling to fulfil,
Oh may it all my powers engage
To do my Master's will."*

May God graciously bless you and lead you into the field of largest service is my prayer.

Make Your Reservations for Next Year in Asbury College Early.

The Dean advises me that reservations for rooms for Asbury College next year both as to new students and the return of old students exceed anything we have known hitherto.

We would advise students who are contemplating coming to Asbury College sending in at once their reservation fee ($10, returnable any time before Sept. 1st) to the business manager to the end that the best accommodations may be secured well in advance. There are always some cancellations of choice rooms at the eleventh hour but the early reservation is much the safest and more satisfactory arrangement.

L. R. AKERS, President.

MY VISIT TO ASBURY.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

I had the privilege of attending the Commencement Exercises of Asbury College, and in many ways it transcended all former Commencements. There were 114 A.B. graduates, all but two were said to be devout Christians, and the majority of them preparing for service in the Master's wide harvest field.

Some matters had to be settled by the Board of Trustees, but God undertook for us and we feel that adjustments have been made that will mean much for the institution in the days to come. There are no victories without battle, and so we go forward believing that God's will has been done and his guiding hand is upon the school.

It is being circulated that modernism has crept into Asbury College, which of course, is a scheme of the enemy to hurt the institution, for there is no modernism believed or taught by any member of the faculty. We have an able committee who keep their eyes upon this situation, and should any professor attempt to inject any sort of "strange doctrines" into his classroom the next step would be the loss of their pedagogical head. If there is any one thing that the president of Asbury College and the Board of Trustees are teeth and toenails against it is that form of new thought known as Modernism, and not for one moment will any sort of this teaching be tolerated in Asbury College.

We are aware that Asbury has its enemies who will not lose any time in trying to damage the institution, but I wish as one who is close to the hub of this wonderful institution of learning, to say that Asbury's friends need not have any uneasiness whatever as to its stand against modernism that is seeking to destroy the faith of our young people wherever it has a chance. We stand for the whole Bible, for changed hearts by the power of the Holy Ghost in conversion, and the purifying power of the Holy Ghost in sanctification. "True to the faith of our fathers" is our slogan, and by God's grace we shall stand there until he shall come to take charge of this world by his right to reign.

Let the friends of Asbury work and pray for her as never before, and we believe that there lies ahead of her one of the greatest years in all of its history. Dr. Morrison is to hold the fall revival, and then the spiritual tide will run on and on through the year, and many will find the Lord in his saving and sanctifying power. The enemy never camps around a corps, but he summons his cohorts to attack where the forces of righteousness are strongest, and for that reason Asbury is one of his chief targets. But, "If God be for us who can be against us?" "God is in the midst of her and she shall not be moved." Amen!

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

It would be wonderful if all of the boys and girls who read page ten should at last find a home in heaven, wouldn't it? I should think that if any of you should "make your bed in hell" you would remember the good letters with their exhortations that you used to read on page ten. I would that any of you who may not have given your heart to the Lord will do so after reading the beautiful and touching story I am giving you in the following:

He Took My Place.

An ungodly sea captain lay in his cabin in midocean, death staring him in the face. He shrank back in the presence of "the King of terrors," and the dread of eternity took fast hold upon him.

Captain Coutts sent for his first mate, and said: "Williams, get down on your knees and pray for a fellow. I have been very wicked, as you know, and I expect I shall go this time."

"I am not a praying man, you know, captain, so I can't pray. I would if I could."

"Well, then, bring a Bible and read me a bit, for my rope is about run out."

"I have no Bible, captain; you know I am not a religious man."

"Then send for Thomas, the second mate, perhaps he can pray a bit."

The second mate was soon in the presence of his dying captain, when he said to him: "I say, Thomas, I am afraid I am bound for eternity this trip. Get down and pray for me. Ask God to have mercy upon my poor soul."

"I'd gladly do it to oblige you, captain, if I could; but I have not prayed since I was a lad."

"Have you a Bible, then, to read to me?"

"No, Captain, I have no Bible."

Alas for the dying sinner! How awful his condition. On the brink of eternity, and without Christ!

They searched the ship over for a man who could pray, but they searched in vain and for a Bible, but none could be found until one of the sailors told the captain he had seen a book that looked like a Bible in the hands of the cook's boy, a little fellow named Willie Platt.

"Send at once," said Captain Coutts, "and see if the boy has a Bible."

The sailor hurried off to the boy and said to him, "Sonny, have you a Bible?"

"Yes, sir, but I only read it in my own time."

"Oh, that is all right, my lad; take the Bible and go to the captain's cabin. He is very sick and wants a Bible. He thinks he is going to die."

Away went Willie Platt with his Bible to the captain's cabin.

"Have you a Bible, my boy?"

"Yes, captain."

"Then sit down, and find something in it that will help me, for I am afraid I am going to die. Find something about God having mercy on a sinner like me, and read it to me."

Poor boy! He did not know where to read, but he remembered that his mother had him read the 53rd chapter of Isaiah just before he left home for that voyage.

Willie turned to that blessed chapter that so fully sets forth the love and mercy of the Lord Jesus Christ in dying for poor sinners such as John Coutts, and commenced to read. When Willie got to the fifth verse—"He was wounded for our transgressions. He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed"—the captain, who was listening for the very life, realizing that he was surely having his last chance of being saved, said: "Stop, my lad! That sounds like it! read it again."

Once more the boy read over the blessed words.

"Aye, my lad, that's good—that's it, sure."

These words from the captain encouraged Willie, and he said: "Captain, when I was reading that verse at home, mother made me put my name in it. May I put it in now just where mother told me?"

"Certainly, sonny; put your name in just where your mother told you, and read it again."

Reverently and slowly the boy read the verse:

"He—Jesus—was wounded for Willie Platt's transgressions. He was bruised for Willie Platt's iniquities; the chastisement of Willie Platt's peace was upon him, and with his stripes Willie Platt is healed."

When Willie had finished the captain was half-way over the side of his bed, reaching toward the lad, and said: "My boy, put your captain's name in the verse and read it again—John Coutts, John Coutts."

Then the lad slowly read the verse again: "He was wounded for John Coutts' transgressions, he was bruised for John Coutts' iniquities, the chastisement of John Coutts' peace was upon him, and with his stripes John Coutts is healed."

When the boy had finished, the captain said: "That will do, my lad; you may go now."

Then the captain lay back upon his pillow and repeated over and over again, those precious words of Isaiah 53:5, putting in his own name each time, and as he did so, the joy of heaven filled his soul. He was saved! Yes, praise the Lord, reader, he was saved! And another poor sinner for whom Christ died "had received Him" (John 1:12).

Before John Coutts fell asleep in Jesus, he had witnessed to everyone on his vessel that the Christ of God—the man of Calvary was wounded for his transgressions, bruised for his iniquities, that the chastisement that he rightfully deserved had fallen on his blessed Substitute, and with His stripes—the stripes that fell on Jesus—He had been healed!

Beloved reader, do you know anything about this salvation? Have you taken your true place as a poor "ungodly sinner" before God and trusted in Christ for pardon?

Lovingly,
AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wonder if you'll print my letter for me? I want to get acquainted with you and all the cousins. I've been a reader of The Herald for a long time and just recently subscribed for it. I surely enjoy page ten. I'm not very big, Aunt Bettie, just five feet, two inches, but I belong every bit to the Master. I'm a graduate at High School; have had one year at God's Bible School in Cincinnati and I'm just old enough to vote. My birthday was the last of January. Where is my twin? Say, Aunt Bettie, where do people get the idea one cannot be a Christian and still have fun in life? I've never enjoyed life half so well as I have since I gave my life to him. He makes every day count! I have been in Cincinnati till just a few weeks ago, but had to come home on account of my health. I live in the country and we have very few Christians here. The young folks here all get their good time going to movies, dances and Sunday baseball games. I don't object to playing ball but I believe in keeping the Sabbath. What do you think, cousins? I'd like to hear from any of you cousins who will write. I like to write letters so there can't be too many for me. Don't let Mr. W. B. see this, Aunt Bettie, I'm downright afraid of him.

Mary Shorten.
Rt. 4, Osgood, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl join in? I am nine years old. I have red hair. Pearl Noas, I guess your name to be Edna. Am I right? I have two brothers and one sister. Mamma takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Who can answer these questions? How many chapters are there in the New Testament, and how many in the Old? How many brothers did Joseph have? Who was the first man that God made, and who was the first woman? My birthday is April 21. Have I a twin? I am not going to Sunday school but I am going this summer. I go to the Methodist Church. I am in the fourth grade at school. I live on a farm two miles from town.

Tillie E. Larkins.
Rt. 1, Princeton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am six years old. I like to go to Sunday school. Who can answer these questions! What were the ten plagues that God sent upon the Israelites? I have two sisters and one brother. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. My birthday is June 18. Have I a twin? I have brown hair. Mamma takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten.

David E. Larkins.
Rt. 1, Princeton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for me, after almost a year's absence from the grand page? I have had several letters printed and I received so many nice letters and religious papers. I get a letter from India Missions almost every month. I have several correspondents I have made through the page. I have been corresponding with a girl from Alabama ever since 1925. She is married now. She is Nellie McCain. Bessie Childress, I read your nice letter on the page a few weeks ago. Cousins, she is one of my correspondents. I like spring the best, for the birds sing their sweetest songs then. Mother earth puts on her coat of green, decorated with all colors of flowers. I think flowers are the prettiest and sweetest things that God has given to us, except little children, for Jesus says, "Except ye become as little children ye can in no wise enter into the kingdom." Cousins, have you ever thought what a happy meeting it would be if we should all meet at the feet of Jesus? Do any of you have this song, "Trace the footsteps of Jesus?" My brother-in-law has the phonograph record of it, but you cannot understand it, so I would like for some one to send me the words of it, also the music, if you can. I will tell you all a little about my visit to my sister's. I stayed six weeks. She lives on the Mississippi River just about three quarters of a mile from it. We went to the river four times. I saw a steamboat, the first one I ever saw. The waves on the river were pretty high, and when the barges would strike a wave the water would fly away up yonder. The Mississippi River is rising now and they are expecting another overflow. The people don't care for anything down there but making cotton and having a high heel time. I mean in some parts of the Delta, the place where I went. There are not any churches, only in town. They don't go to church. Most of the people hunt or joyride on Sunday. I am glad there are so many who write to the page and say they are living for Jesus. Bessie Childress, the names of the men that were put in the fiery furnace were Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. King Nebuchadnezzar was the one who had them put in there, because they would not fall down and worship the golden image. The flames were so hot they burned the men who threw the boys in. The king looked and there were four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they had no hurt; and the form of the fourth was like the Son of God. Who wrote the Book of Acts? When did Christ rise from the dead? In what town was Jesus born, and who was king at that time?

wait till some more convenient day. Today is the day of salvation. We should all love our enemies. "Bless them that curse you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you." I live on the farm and like it fine. I am twenty-five years young, have black hair, brown eyes, medium complexion, am five feet, two inches high, weigh about one hundred and forty-three pounds. Aunt Bettie, I enjoyed your story about "The Lost Traveler." Isn't it awful for anybody to be like that young man in that story, when he cried, "The Spirit of God is leaving me never to return. I am lost, forever lost."

Effie Dixon.
Rt. 2, Sweatman, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. I am five feet tall, have blue eyes, dark hair, and weigh about ninety pounds. My birthday was January 1. I am fourteen years old. My Daddy died two years ago, and as I am the oldest boy I had to be mother's plow boy. I have one sister and one brother. I go to school and am in the seventh grade. I like to read page ten. Will some of you children write to me? I like to get letters and will try to answer all letters I get.

A Fifty Cent Investment

One sure way to promote Holiness and the work of God is by way of the printed page. An investment of 50 cents by sending The Pentecostal Herald to some one in your church or town, or to some friend at a distance may mean the leading of that friend into the experience of Full Salvation. Here are 7 reasons for investing 50 cents just now:

1. The Herald has Dr. Morrison's great sermons and messages.
2. The Herald has messages from great evangelists.
3. The Herald has a wonderful Sunday school Exposition.
4. The Herald has news of revivals all over the nation.
5. The Herald's second page gives Dr. Ridout's articles and messages from China, Japan, Korea, India, etc. The entire mission field will be covered in these articles.
6. The Herald has Mrs. Morrison's page for the children as well as her other messages.
7. The Herald stands foursquare on every great issue relating to the Church, the School, the Home and the Nation.

Remember Five Dollars sends The Pentecostal Herald to 10 persons and here is a good place to place some of the Lord's tenth out on heavy interest.

Revivals!

Revivals!!

Revivals!!!

The reason some churches do not have revivals is because the preacher and people do not read Revival Literature. Get people reading revival books and they will pray and work for revivals.

One of the latest books on this subject is Dr. Ridout's book containing his Asbury College Lectures on "The Culpepper Foundation." (The book is dedicated to Burke Culpepper). This book is entitled Revival Blessings.

The chapters are as follows:

1. The Story of Great Revivals.
2. Great Soul Winners.
3. Revivals and the Laws.
4. Evangelistic Call and Commission.
5. Mass and Personal Evangelism.
6. Privileges and Perils of Evangelism.
7. The Art of Soul Winning.
8. Revival Kindlings.

FALLEN ASLEEP

SUMMA.

We loved her, yes, we loved her,
But Jesus loved her more,
And he has sweetly called her,
To yonder shining shore.

The golden gates were open wide,
A gentle voice said, "Come,"
And with farewell unspoken,
She calmly entered Home.

Maria Lousinda Summa passed to her eternal home, April 28, 1929, at 5:50 P. M. at her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ross A. Lancaster, at Dean St., Confluence, Pa. Grandma had been ill for years, but had been bed-fast for over a year. She was married to Adam Summa, Nov. 29, 1883. To this union there were nine children born. Her husband and four children preceded her to the grave some years before. It was hard to give her up, but I feel our loss is Heaven's gain. It was hard to give up our long loved one, yet I have this consolation that she is at rest safe in the arms of Jesus, and is free from all suffering, and is waiting on the other shore for her near and dear ones. Yes, dear Grandma is gone from this world and all we can do is to prepare ourselves to meet her in heaven, where there is no pain nor sorrow, but where all is beautiful and pleasant. She leaves to meet her above a sister and brother, three sons, two daughters and thirteen grandchildren. She was a member of the Christian Church and loved Christian friends, Christian reading and hymns. During her sickness she often wanted that beautiful hymn, "The Old Rugged Cross," sung, which was sung at her funeral, also, "I will sing you a song," and "It is well." Short services were conducted in the Lancaster home Wednesday at 1:30 by our pastor, Rev. Frank L. Stuck. Services were also held at the Methodist Church at Johnson Chapel by Rev. F. L. Stuck. She was laid to rest in the Johnson Chapel cemetery to await the glad Resurrection day. We miss her, oh so much, but God has a better place for her, and some day we expect to meet her where partings are no more.

There are loved ones in the Glory,
Whose dear forms you often miss,
When you close your earthly story
Will you join them in their bliss?

You can picture happy gatherings
Round the fireside long ago,
And you think of tearful partings,
When they left you here below.

One by one their seats are emptied,
One by one they are going away,
Now the family is parted,
Will it be complete some day?

Her grand-daughter,
Helen Lousinda Lancaster.

THE BATTLE-CRY OF FAITH.

Will O. Scott.

O Church of God, stretch forth thy hand,
Make bare thine arm of might,
O'er widest sea and farthest land,
From plain to mountain height!

O Church of God, thy heritage
Is not in yellow gold;

But in the Spirit-written page
That Prophecy foretold!

O Church of God, where'er thou art,
On earth or Heaven above,
Thy throne is in the human heart,
Thy jeweled scepter, Love!

O Church of our Redeemer keep
The standard of the Cross unfurled,
O'er mountain high and ocean deep;
All 'round this sin-cursed world!

O Church of God, may heart and mind,
In Prayer and Praise unite,
Till Hope her full fruition find;
And Faith be lost in Sight!

MY LIFE'S STORY

The Autobiography of Bud Robinson

This is the book for which thousands have been waiting. It is years since "Uncle Buddy" has written a book dealing with his life and experiences. Now we have this volume, his autobiography, giving an intimate recital of his experiences from early childhood to the present time. Pathos, humor, optimism, scathing rebuke, with an amazing memory of detail unite to give this volume the peculiar charm that characterizes all of Bud Robinson's writings. Just as there is only one Bud Robinson so this is the only volume giving the complete story of his life up to the present.

217 pages; full page portrait of author; attractive cloth binding. Price, $1.00.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson III.—July 21, 1929.

Subject.—Ezekiel's Vision of Hope. Ezek. 47:1-9.

Golden Text.—Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end.—Isaiah 9:7.

Time.—About B. C. 574. These dates given from time to time are only approximately correct. Absolute correctness is impossible.

Place.—Babylonia.

Introduction.—Our lesson calls for some use of the imagination. It had been some thirty years since the first captives had been taken from Jerusalem to Babylon—the group in which Daniel and his three friends went away. Ezekiel and his company had been carried away at a later date. They had been in Babylonia about twenty years. Picture them growing old, weary with slavish toil to satisfy the greed of their heathen masters, and longing and wondering if they would ever again see their Jerusalem homes. Ever and anon the elders would visit Ezekiel the prophet to learn if he had any news from Jehovah, any promise that their captivity would soon have an end. Maybe they had forgotten that Jehovah had declared through the lips of Jeremiah (25:11) that their bondage in Babylonia should last seventy years. Poor old men! They would be dead long before freedom would come to their captive people. God had been patient and long-suffering toward his sinful people; but “the way of the transgressor is hard,” and Israel must suffer for her sins.

During the early days of Ezekiel's ministry he was a bit severe, but spoke only the messages received from Jehovah. There was terrible rebuke, and a call to repentance; but Israel refused, and persecuted their God-sent pastor.

In our last lesson Ezekiel was preaching personal responsibility, and declaring God's willingness to forgive and to save. Their punishment was severe—God's hand was heavy upon them. They thought their chastisement too severe, and said the ways of God were not equal. I think they wanted to lay the blame for their captivity on Jehovah. How human they were—just like we are; for human nature is identical in all ages and in all climes.

Our lesson today will deal with salvation under a beautiful figure. Ezekiel's vision carries him back to Jerusalem and forward to the coming of Jesus Christ, and portrays to him a restored temple and salvation as rivers of living water. This message he gave to captive Israel. I wonder if he or they understood it. If so, their hearts must have wept; for it was something they could never behold with their natural eyes. It was yet centuries to come. But they could have received its gracious benefits, had they returned to God. The picture looks dark and uninviting. God tried hard to save his chosen people from both earthly suffering and everlasting ruin; but they were headstrong, and bent to backsliding. There would be a long drought between Ezekiel's waters and the coming Savior; but Israel would have nothing, save their own stubborn way. Jehovah's threats and promises meant nothing to them.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Afterward.—You will have to read the preceding chapter to find the force of this word. Ezekiel in his vision was back in Jerusalem and saw the temple as it would some day be restored. He had walked through its various courts, and had witnessed the restored worship of Jehovah, as it had been when Israel was faithful. The description reads as though he had actually seen all that he was telling his people. The word afterward marks the transition from these things to the vision of our lesson. He brought me. This was the prophet's guide. Read Ezekiel 40:1-3 for an explanation. By “the door of the house” the entrance to the temple is meant. Waters.—Type of the “water of life,” salvation. Turn to St. John's vision (Rev. 22:1, 2), and compare the two. They are really but one vision—or two visions of the same thing.

I do not see that we shall gain anything in this lesson by discussing it verse by verse. It is a word picture of the growing kingdom of our Lord among men. Keep this before you, and the lesson grows luminous. It is all figurative, but clear. These waters come from the temple, God's dwelling place—they issue from the very heart of God. In John's vision referred to above, they came from the throne.

If we go back in time to the days when our Lord began his ministry on earth, the stream of salvation seems but a rivulet. I say seems, for it was just as great then as now. The smallness was only in the seeming. The plan of redemption has always embraced the entire Trinity. The enlarging has been in our view of it. And yet there is a sense in which it has enlarged during these passing centuries. We are in a divine school passing from grade to grade. God has been giving us all we could use in the different grades. When I use the word “us” I mean the race of men. In a great school the entire course of study is present all the time; but freshmen can make little use of what properly belongs to seniors. The fall of man dropped the race so low that God had to labor for centuries to prepare it for the coming Redeemer.

There is also a personal sense in which the waters enlarge. David's cup ran over. Jesus told the woman of Samaria of “a well of water springing up into everlasting life.” In John 7:37-39 we read of flowing “rivers of living water.” This is possible, and should be real in the life of every Christian. I am aware that Jesus was here speaking of the experience that follows the baptism with the Holy Spirit, that sanctifies the soul; but this is the privilege of every converted soul: “For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.” None need be left, for the promise covers the race.

The latter part of Ezekiel's vision is comforting. Note how in verse eight the waters run out into the desert—dark, barren, heathen lands where no glad message of salvation was ever heard. It would run into the dead sea of paganism, and the waters would be healed. The “great multitude of fish” that shall inhabit the healed waters represent the multitudes of saved men and women in the heathen nations of the earth.

Ezekiel's soul never gave birth to such thoughts as these. They were God-breathed. Well did the prophet declare them to have been revealed to him by Jehovah.

What a wonderful salvation is ours. Most of us have never conceived of the half of it. Nay; we have touched but its borders.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. L. E. Williams, Wilmore, Ky., has the months of July and August open for calls and will appreciate any one writing him who may be in need of evangelistic help.

Rev. W. Taylor Knight, Central Ave., Shadyside, Ohio, has some open dates the latter part of July which he desires to give to any one desiring his assistance. He is now pastor of the Union Bible School Mission, River-view, Ohio, at which place he has been doing a noble work. A new church is now under construction at that place which has been brought about by Rev. Knight's untiring efforts. He is a Bible holiness preacher and knows how to preach the gospel. Any one desiring a real live wire preacher will not miss it on Brother Knight. Address, Rev. W. Taylor Knight, Central Ave., Shadyside, Ohio.

D. B. Murphy, of Bethany, Okla., of the Nazarene Church, will begin a meeting with the Methodist people in the Methodist tabernacle at Sweetwater, Texas, August 4.

Nelson Gilbreath, formerly of Cartersville, Ga., and associated with Sam Jones in his evangelistic work, is still available for meetings as singer, guitar player and choir leader. He has stereopticon Bible pictures with which he illustrates his songs. Address him, Malakoff, Texas.

Geo. N. Leist: "I am a local preacher in the Methodist Church, Pike County Parish and am hindered in my work for lack of a machine to get to some of the outlying churches. I am wondering whether some consecrated person did not have a used Ford Coupe which they would be willing to give and have dedicated to the Lord's Work. You can find out all about me by writing Rev. Chas. F. Bowman, 627 Moulton Place, Portsmouth, Ohio. He is my Dist. Supt. Address me, Piketon, Ohio."

T. J. Adams: "Closed a good meeting at Quinton, Okla., and begin here and it looks like a great revival is on; deep conviction is on the large crowds; some seeking, and we are expecting a real old-fashioned revival. Have two or three open dates, July 1 to 15, August 1 to 15, and Sept. 11."

Rev. P. P. Belew: "Following a meeting in St. Paul, Minnesota, which closes July 21, I have an open date which I would like to give some camp or church, enroute to my home; but will go anywhere. Those interested may communicate with me as per my slate, or at my home address, Olivet, Ill."

Herbert J. McNeese: "Our services at Beaver, Pa., are coming along well. Souls seeking and finding God. During the summer we have several good dates. We go anywhere. Address 13th Ave., New Brighton, Pa."

Lander College, Greenwood, S. C., has just closed a session of strong advance. The commencement sermon was delivered by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth of Macon, and the literary address by Judge Joseph A. McCullough of Baltimore, Md. The baccalaureate sermon was preached by Dr. R. H. Bennett, President of the College. There has been added to the endowment of the college during the year $170,000 in cash and subscriptions. There is also on hand $132,000 in endowment raised last year. These are in addition to the previous endowment. The graduating class of 56 was the largest in the history of the institution, and the enrollment was also the largest in the life of the college, reaching 372. Every student not already professing Christ professed religion during the session. The enrollment for next session is already unusually good.

WRITTEN TESTIMONY OF Angelo Lazzarini (condemned to die June 24).

June 16, 1929.

"Let me warn the young people to let sin alone. I was unsaved, but thank God, I was saved here (Beaver, Pa., County Jail). I want the world to know that Jesus can save every one. Give Jesus your heart now.

"Angelo Lazzarini."

Sent by Evangelist H. J. McNeese, New Brighton, Pa.

TO THE CAMP MEETING FOLKS OF VIRGINIA, DELAWARE, EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA AND WASHINGTON, D. C.

Dear Friends: It has been several years since Mrs. Henderson and I have ministered to the good people who attend the camp meeting at Mt. Vernon, Va., but we have had abundant opportunity to know of the growth and development of that sacred place, and I am asking the editor of The Pentecostal Herald to give me space in their paper to invite your attention to this growing and gracious meeting for this summer. This camp was founded and fostered by the sainted Rev. H. B. Hosley. Its history is rooted in his sacrifice and faith. It is located on a part of George Washington's original estate, close to the city of Washington, D. C., and within walking distance of the Potomac river. The location is ideal. A beautiful oak grove fitted up with cottages, rustic cottages and rooms in the house offers accommodations which are available for the asking. For many years past a large number of people have come to this place for a spiritual feast and they have never been disappointed. Many of the most noted preachers of a full salvation have ministered there, and for this coming camp meeting season, there will be a group of strong and constructive evangelists to give leadership to this gathering. A large and convenient tabernacle is now under construction and will be ready for the first service of the coming camp. No charge is made for lodging and the cost for board for the entire ten days is but ten dollars! Only one dollar per day! Cheaper than staying at home!

The holiness folk who attend Mt. Vernon camp meeting are of the finest sort in America. The stamp of the glorious man who founded the camp is on all the place and the program. You will never cease to be grateful for the joys of holy fellowships, the inspiration of the mighty preaching, the conscious nearness of God, if you can possibly spend part or all of the time of the coming camp meeting there. The dates are August 1st to 11th, and I plead with you to write Mrs. J. H. Shrader, Acotink, Va., Sec., for further information. I wish that it would be my portion to share the good days there with you.

Thomas C. Henderson,
Oberlin, Ohio.

Central Holiness Camp Meeting Wilmore, Kentucky. July 25th to August 4th

Rev. C. W. Ruth, Rev. C. F. Wimberly, and Rev. H. C. Morrison will be the preachers. Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Box will have charge of the Children's and Young People's meetings. Prof. Kenneth and Eunice Wells will have charge of the music.

Let all the people rally to this time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Write to Mrs. O. C. Garvey for rooms in the women's dormitory, to Mrs. W. F. Wyatt, for reservations in the Men's dormitory. The W. C. T. U. will have charge of the dining hall, which means that first class meals will be yours at a very reasonable price.

Ministers entertained free.

Remember the date, July 25 to August 4, and don't fail to be with us. Write Prof. W. D. Turkington, Wilmore, Ky., for information relative to the camp meeting.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

What Would It Mean to Put THE HERALD Into 10,000 New Homes?

1. It would mean 40,000 souls touched by the soul-stirring articles, reports, sermons, etc., every week.
2. It would mean a mighty progress in the spread of scriptural holiness over this country.
3. It would mean the enlightening of the people on the dangerous heresies that are being so widely propagated in our schools and churches.
4. It would be an inspiration to thousands to live a higher and holier life.
5. It would mean 160,000 pages of Full Salvation literature sent all over the land to be read, re-read and passed on every week.
6. The good that would be accomplished would be incalculable.

Won't you be one of ten thousand who write us today, enclosing at least two subscribers on this liberal offer? Or better still, how about investing $5.00 of your tithe money in sending THE HERALD into ten homes for the remainder of the year? By so doing, this defender of the faith will be warning the people of the dangerous destructive criticism so popular today, and urge them to a life of separation from the world, and the importance of cleaving to the faith of our fathers which is seeking to be destroyed by the enemies of the Bible.

Dear Reader, if there ever was a time for you to rally to THE HERALD in its defense of the faith, that time is now! Let us hear from you immediately, with the names and address of friends who will subscribe through your solicitation, or by sending some of your tithe with the names of those whom you know will be blessed by reading THE HERALD.

We are counting on YOU to help us in the great work of spreading the Gospel of a Full Salvation among people who are perishing for the bread of life.

Yours for the Old Gospel,

H. C. Morrison

THE HOLINESS CAMP MEETINGS OF AMERICA.

By Dr. L. R. Akers

THE holiness camp meetings of our nation are now pitching their tents, building their long altars, and spreading their straw in preparation for the hungry hearts of the men and women who may attend their services. These are the weeks when tens of thousands of people from Maine to Florida and from Virginia to California will wend their way to these spiritual fountain heads, many of them for the refreshing of their religious experiences, others hungering and thirsting after righteousness and in quest of an experience of full and complete redemption from all sin.

There is no way to estimate the endless good that has come to the spiritual life of our nation through the work that has been done at the altars of our holiness camps scattered throughout the various states. Multitudes of sinners have been converted, backsliders reclaimed, and believers sanctified while hosts of the Lord's people have renewed their vows and girded themselves afresh to press the battle for eternal salvation. We shall never forget the wonderful hours spent beneath the majestic trees and tabernacles and tents as the prophets of God have proclaimed fearlessly and powerfully the message of full redemption. In the halls of our memory there still echo the shouts, prayers, and stirring songs of these marvelous services in which the Holy Spirit's presence and power were so graciously manifested.

The earliest camp of our remembrance is that of Sychar in central Ohio, made memorable because of its great grove of beautiful maples and oaks, its never ceasing fountain of crystal waters about which there is always a crowd gathered to quench their thirst. The long rows of white tents make a city of righteousness and wonderful are the services that make up the daily schedule. The young people's tabernacle presents an inspiring spectacle and the happy faced lasses and laddies that throng this spot find here permanent influences for good and experiences which linger oftentimes throughout their entire lives.

The regular services are held in the large tabernacle whose beams of Oregon fir form a huge covering like a German helmet with no posts to obstruct the view of speaker and audience. A mighty choir of some two hundred or more singers lifts one's soul upward upon wings as of eagles. We can recall through the years the splendid leadership of "Uncle Billy" Yates who now sings with the unnumbered throng about the Throne, the song like the sound of many waters, of Moses and the Lamb.

Happy memories also cluster about Hollow Rock, Red Rock, Eaton Rapids, Romeo, Sebring, and the new and smaller camps of Washburn and Absaraca in North Dakota, with the same hunger for spiritual things evident in all that attend, whether it be north or south, east or west.

Our favorite of all camps of the South is that of Indian Springs, one of the largest in the entire United States, whose hillsides have been made glorious by great outpourings of the Holy Spirit amid the glad shouts of saved and sanctified souls.

What a blessing it would be if our people, instead of rushing away to resorts and godless places of entertainment, would plan to spend ten days or two weeks at some of the spiritual powerhouses known as Holiness camp meetings. What would be better for body, mind, and soul than to pitch a tent in which the entire family could live during the period of camp preaching. What blessed memories would remain in the minds of the youth throughout their entire lives of these periods at the annual camp when men sought God with their whole hearts and in seeking found him a satisfying portion to their souls. Spiritual influences and examples are woefully lacking in the lives of young America and these blessed spots of prayer and praise, of happy fellowship and spiritual uplift should not be denied the boys and girls whose hands will direct the destiny of our nation's tomorrows.

There is a danger, however, that attending camp meetings may be without the motive which will make them what they were intended to be—fountain heads of spiritual inspiration and experience.

The value of any camp is not in the number of spectators who attend, but in the number of seekers who receive. The measure of success in any camp must largely depend upon the faith and intercession of those who support it and plan its continuance. The early days of camp meetings meant, on the part of those who attended, a genuine expectation for a mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit and this expectation was not without realization. Ever must it be true that according to our faith so will it be unto us. However, the skies are still full of Pentecosts and whenever men assemble with one accord and one mind, marvelous is the response from above. What times of fellowship! What manifestations of divine power! What altars full of penitents! Indeed these sacred spots become milestones on the way to Heaven for countless thousands.

An altarless ministry means a spiritual Sahara for the church of the living God. Let us rally to the camp meetings, keep the fires burning, feed the hungry souls of the people, lift high the banners of full salvation and keep the torches of holy fire burning.

If any one should ask, What is the greatest need of the world in these perilous times? the answer might be truly made: earnest, fearless preachers of the whole Gospel as revealed in God's Word. A Spirit-filled ministry is the world's supreme need. Such a ministry means more for the social uplift of men, for commercial righteousness, political purity, the sacredness of womanhood, the best training and preparation of childhood for the responsibility of mature years than anything and everything else in the world. Such a ministry makes the world habitable, purges and purifies society, ennobles and elevates the race.

To bring men to Jesus Christ is to bring them to industry, to economy, to the finest family ties, to a quest for the best interests of the community, sympathetic contributions for the comfort of the suffering, effective preventatives against disease and poverty,—in short, to bring men to Jesus Christ means to bring everything that is good and ennobling to them. This hour needs such a Spirit-filled ministry, one absorbed and consumed with a passionate desire to bring men from the slavery of sin to emancipation in the glorious freedom of the Christian life.

In the holiness camp meetings, conventions, and revivals, God has an opportunity to call the youth of our nation into glorious service for the advancement of his Kingdom. There is no field of larger promise and possibility. The need is great. The outlook is vast. The fields are white to the harvest. The issues are eternal. The souls of men are priceless. Let us not by our indifference permit the multitudes to perish for lack of knowledge. Let those who love God and his truth and the souls of men think on these things and rally to keep our camps aglow with holy fire and the fountain of cleansing open for the healing of the multitudes.

ABOUNDING GRACE.

"Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." (Rom. 5:21). "And the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John 1:7).

It was John Stuart Mill who said, "If there is one fact, the reality of which is certain, it is that of sin." When we ask, What is sin? we are at once led into a maze of mystery. Three answers might be given: that of Scripture, Philosophy, and Modern Science. The Bible speaks of sin as the transgression of the divine law originally given in the conscience. Philosophy sees sin in its essence of selfishness. Modern Science holds sin to be due to the conflict of the lower man with the higher, or the struggle of the ape with the angel. We cannot enlarge upon these theories. The thing we would emphasize is the fact of sin and that there is a remedy for sin. Sin has been the theme of the ages. It has engrossed the minds of the world's greatest 2 Cor. 11:26.

While in Foochow we had occasion many a time to cross the bridge of the "Thousand Ages." Soon it is to be demolished and a modern bridge must take its place because China is getting dissatisfied with being a thousand years behind the time. As I looked at that old bridge I thought if it could speak what history it could recall, what thrilling stories it could tell of strife and peace; of plenty and poverty; of pain and pleasure; of weal and woe. Built away back before America was discovered, when steamers were unknown, when telegraph and railroad were not dreamed of—built in the days of the Emperor and the Mandarin when feudalism reigned and the people were as multitudes unthinking and untaught.

"And I think how many thousands
Of care encumbered men,
Each bearing his burden of sorrow,
Have crossed the bridge since then."
As I meditate upon these things the lines of an old hymn come back to me:
"A thousand ages in thy sight
Are like an evening gone;
Short as the watch that ends the night
Before the rising sun.
"The busy tribes of flesh and blood,
With all their cares and fears,
Are carried downward by the flood,
And lost in following years.
"Time, like an ever flowing stream,
Bears all its sons away;
They fly forgotten as a dream
Dies at the opening day."

Our days at Foochow were busy days, filled up to the last moment with meetings. We began with the Methodists and finished up with the Congregationalists and Presbyterians. As we waited for our steamer to carry us back to Shanghai we held quite a number and variety of services. On Thursday morning we were invited to speak at the American Board Compound to a gathering of Chinese pastors, Bible Women and Missionaries. We gave a message on the "Power of the Spirit" and the presence of the Lord was felt by all as we spent two hours together in waiting on God.

The Compound here was extremely interesting to me. In the center of it was a great (sacred) rock on top of which was an immense tree. This was a sacred spot to Buddhists and it was with extreme difficulty that it was purchased for missionary purposes, one stipulation being that if at any time they wished to come and pray at that tree they should be allowed so to do. The Chinese make much fuss over dragons and they held that a dragon was underneath that rock and every now and then the dragon's shoulder would lift the rock, but since the missionaries have got hold of things the dragon has never moved as far as it is known.

A story was told me of a singular thing that happened a few years ago. One of the missionary homes got on fire. A flying ember passed by all the other places and the wind finally landed it on a Buddhist Temple, which caught on fire and was burned to the ground. I thought as I heard of that, it is the missionary's business to start gospel fires that will burn up idolatry, burn up superstition and false gods and false worship and establish the faith of Jehovah and plant houses of worship where the gospel of Jesus Christ will be proclaimed and the wonders of grace made known. Every now and then a Buddhist priest opens his heart to the gospel. Let me add this story here:

A Buddhist priest listened to the gospel message as given by a Chinese preacher; at the close, as he heard the story of the Prodigal Son, he said:

"The forgiveness of that young man by his father is a thing I can understand." He said, "But what of the burden of sin of previous lives which binds us to the Wheel of Life?" The answer was:

"The Lord Jesus Christ is the Door out of all the past as well as being the Entrance into a new and an Eternal Life."

In the city of Hanchow, which has been called the City of Temples, there is one temple known as the Hall of the "Sleeping Buddha." The figure is one hundred and twenty feet in length and about forty feet high. It is believed to be the biggest image of Buddha in the world! It is an immense figure reclining with the head resting on the right hand, enormous feet with huge round toes of regular form.

Every time I see one of these images I think how helpless they are to help needy humanity! Psalm 115 describes them: "They have mouths but they speak not; eyes have they but they see not; they have ears but they hear not; noses have they but they smell not; they have hands but they handle not; feet have they but they walk not; neither speak they through their throat."

While in Foochow it was our pleasure to stay in the Missionary Home presided over by Miss Martha McCutcheon, who was a student at Taylor University when I taught there. The first home Miss Martha entered when she reached the College Campus years ago, was our home, and now as Mrs. Ridout and I arrive at Foochow—strangers in this big China city—the first and only home we had during our stay there was this enjoyable Methodist missionary home in charge of Miss McCutcheon of the W. F. M. S. She has developed into a real worthwhile missionary. She helped us in all our meetings. At the piano she could play anything at a minute's notice. Her previous camp meeting experiences came in unusually handy in the revival. She has the reputation all along the line of being a worker whose commonsense and consecration and dependability can be counted on for any place of responsibility to which she may be assigned.

TRAVELLING ON THE YANGTSE.

The Yangtse is China's famous River. It is the Mississippi of Asia. In a sense it splits China in two and it gives a body of water navigable in a more or less degree for a distance of over three hundred miles. From Shanghai to Hankow large sized river steamers can be navigated and British, American, Japanese and other gunboats can get up that far (and pardon me if I say that in the present condition of affairs in China it would seem a piece of inexcusable folly to try to dispense with those gunboats. China can get up a mob and a quick temper in very short notice and, with the Communistic elements constantly at work in the dark, another uprising against foreigners and missionaries could happen at any moment if it were not for the presence of the police in the shape of a gunboat, a regiment of foreign troops and a tank or two. It was an American gunboat and a few skillfully directed shells that killed nobody which saved the foreigners in Nanking from being massacred in 1927).

We had a rather singular experience travelling on the Yangtse recently as we were proceeding to our evangelistic engagement in Central China. Dr. Stone, Miss Hughes, Miss Huppert, Miss Mayo and Miss Bettie and Mrs. Ridout were in the party—all going to Nanchang where Dr. Stone was to deliver the address at the funeral of Miss Howe, one of the most famous of the veteran missionaries of China. We embarked on a Chinese steamer, the "Kiangshun," of the China Merchants Steamboat Co. In other days travel on this ship and this line up the Yangtse was delightful, nice cabins, excellent food, comfortable and enjoyable accommodations at very reasonable prices. But war changes things! China is never without war in some part or parts of it. For some weeks past the Yangtse valley was the center of conflict; now the center has changed, but the Yangtse River is always the great thoroughfare of travel. China travel is much more by water than by rail because of the inadequacy of railroad facilities and its cheapness. We had been advised not to travel by Chinese boat because of so many soldiers travelling that way, but we took the risk, nevertheless, and at first everything was very pleasant and we thought ourselves fortunate in the ship we chose; but as the second day wore on we were disillusioned and advised that we had better change to another boat when we got to Nanking.

As we proceeded up river our crowd was constantly increasing. At one point we stopped in midstream for a big boat putting out from shore laden with boys in uniform from a Chinese school; they filled up the upper deck so with their bed and baggage, and carried on so uproariously right under our cabin window, that it was impossible for some of our party to get to sleep till past midnight. Then we were warned that five hundred soldiers would come on board at Nanking and would fill up every bit of space, the officers would demand our staterooms and there would be no place for us on board. Now it seems that Chinese soldiers are not so fully disciplined as they might be and, on board ship, they forget their manners and are prone to take possession of things to suit their liking. When war is on I understand the owners of Chinese steamers are powerless—soldiers must be given the preference and they come on board in hundreds, and all the ship company can get out of them from the government is about twenty cents a day for their rice. So it is quite a losing proposition to the company to turn away their paying customers and give up their ship to the troops. The Chinese are very curious when foreigners are around; they peer into your stateroom windows; they fill up the doors and windows of the dining room to watch you as you eat your meals; if you walk the deck (and I was the only foreigner on board) what they observe and what they say about you is a caution. In these days when the Communists have sown dragon's teeth in China and taught eternal hate to foreigners, folks who know say that their language about foreigners is neither very chaste or very kind.

Well, we left our ship at Nanking which we reached about 7:30 in the morning. This gave us a day in the Capital City which was an unexpected pleasure to some of our company who had never been in this city before. The next steamer, which was a British ship, went out the next morning and having secured quarters on her we were free from any further molestation and allowed us to go on our way to Kinkiang.

Next morning we were up at 5:30 A. M. to take our boat for the rest of the journey. We waited till 8:30 A. M. before our ship of the Indo China Line came in sight—the "Luen Ho." Though she was crowded, the steward thought he could find room for our company, which he eventually did. Among the signs hung up we read the following:

"Passengers travelling between points on the Yangtse River are hereby warned that indiscriminate firing on ships by native troops occur at various points along the river and in travelling by our vessels under these conditions they do so entirely at their own risks. Certain parts of the vessel are protected as far as possible against rifle fire and passengers are strongly advised to ascertain the position of same as soon as they embark."

Piracy and banditry prevail to a terrible extent in China, hence this sign—but then when I read the U. S. A. papers and the stories of bandits robbing banks, robberies, hold ups and murder, I think that China is not without hope, seeing she is only in the seventeenth year of her independence. America has had 150 years to learn to behave itself, with Bible and gospel but seems to grow more wicked, not less!

THE NEW AND THE OLD.

I have read somewhere about the Filipino, that he is easy to get along with till he tucks in his shirt—when he gets on a suit of foreign clothes he begins to feel himself somebody. So with China! We have thought long of "Old China." We have got to change that now and think of "Young China" with a chip on his shoulder. Young China is doing things. Those old foolish walls of the ages must come down and everywhere now they are tearing them down and using the stone to build roads. Those narrow streets must go and broad avenues take their place.

I walked through some streets yesterday where everything was uproar and rubbish, wire and construction, houses torn down to make way for modern thoroughfares.

In Nanking, the same thing is happening; the old is giving way to the new. We rode along the new Boulevard which stretches from the heart of the city to Sun Yat Sen's tomb. It is as modern in width and build as Broad Street, Philadelphia. In making it the government gave orders to tear down everything that stood in its course. In China, please remember, they have no Boards of arbitration to decide on prices, etc., of said property. Oh no! If your building is in the way, down it must go, and you may get a few hundred dollars for it; perhaps you may not get a cent! Protest! No use to protest. If you try that you may be worse off! Many folks lose their heads in China after a physical fashion! Better lose your house than lose your head is the philosophical way to look at such matters.

By the time this article shall appear in print Nanking shall have had one of the greatest events in its history as the new Capital of the Nation. The Nationalist Government has spent millions in preparing a great Tomb for the ashes of Sun Yat Sen. They have built the magnificent affair right over against the Ming Tombs—those Emperors who so hatefully ruled China for 500 years. As we viewed this piece of inexcusable extravagance, and then passed by the Ming Tomb, those words of Shakespeare seem quite suited to the scene and circumstances:

"The cloud-capped Towers; the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve.
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made up; and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep."

Value of a College Education to Those Preparing for the Ministry

Henry W. Bromley, D. D.

OF all men the minister needs and can use to the best possible advantage a college education. The training one gets in High School and Academy is but elementary, while the college not only emphasizes the value of the lower schools, but in a higher way develops and polishes the awakened faculties, thus helping to complete one's preparation for life's work.

A minister must secure and retain the respect and confidence of the people among whom he labors in order to do work commensurate with his calling. He may be good enough to demand their confidence, and sufficiently untrained to not command their respect. A preacher must be consecrated, well informed, self-contained, and thoroughly disciplined. The college gives him the opportunity to become thus equipped as does no other institution. It is not merely the textbooks that make the man; it is the general atmosphere, the variety of instruction and the wide range of association, with the exchange of views, as well as the absorption arising from constant contact with so many others with like calling and ambitions.

It is said that a half-witted young fellow was once exhibiting to a group of bystanders the tricks of his trained dog, when an intelligent looking gentleman drove up in a buggy, and watched with interest the canine's stunts. Finally he said, "Say, boy; that's some dog you've got. I have a dog like that, but I haven't been able to teach him any of those tricks." "Well," said the half-wit, "You see, its jest this way; you've got to know more'n the dawg or you can't learn him nothing!"

So with the minister. He must not be satisfied to preach merely what his people already know, but if he wishes to hold their attention, create and maintain their interest, and, in short, become their spiritual and moral leader, he must possess a superior knowledge.

Here is where the college becomes of inestimable value to the ministerial prospect. The college not only sharpens his appetite for, but puts him in actual touch with, the sources of information. It is sad to say, but lamentably true, that many a young man never learns to study until well within his college course. This fault lies largely as we see it in our modern system of education. Our best equipped and highest salaried educators are not always found in the elementary schools, with the result that some things that should be fundamental are not always drilled into the academic mind. The college tends to correct these faults, especially in regard to mental application.

The college curriculum is well adapted to the college age. They are psychologically balanced. Self-interest, ambition, the weighing of vocational possibilities, the consideration of one's life work—these are all metaphysically retro-active. The tendency is for the pupil to become a student.

The minister may be a man of One Book, but even that Book teaches an exceedingly wide range of interests. Besides, the newspapers, magazines, rapid travel, and rural mail delivery create a constituency that requires an extent of knowledge and intellectual equipment not heretofore expected of the average minister in modern times. However, it is well to remember that even in mediaeval and ancient times most efficient teachers of Bible truths were men of knowledge and training.

It is not enough to learn the sources of knowledge. One must learn what he should choose to know, and cultivate efficient methods of securing, retaining, classifying his knowledge. But even these advantages are not of great value to the world if one does not learn the effective use of what he has learned. Herein is wisdom, which is knowledge rightly applied.

In college the student learns his Latin, Greek, and modern languages; Economics and Sociology; History, Botany, Geology and Astronomy; Physics and Chemistry;—primarily knowledge. He studies psychology, metaphysics, philosophy, logic and rhetoric—these relating largely to the use of knowledge.

In Asbury College the moral and spiritual elements add still greater value to the education of the ministerial student. Asbury does in a remarkable degree what it was intended the denominational schools should do; give the individual a thorough college training under the most favorable religious environment. The religious life of Asbury is maintained at a high temperature. Both the content and method of one's thinking are blest by an intense spiritual atmosphere.

And Asbury's graduates have done things. And the measure of an education consists not so much in the accumulating of a great store of knowledge, as in learning to contribute to the world an aggressive life of usefulness.

The minister is God's messenger to men. He himself must be a living example of the life God demands of those to whom he is sent. Asbury College places great emphasis upon the godliness of the man as well as the intensity of the message. This institution recognizes that the effectiveness of the method and the message depends upon the character of the man, and therefore labors to build up a strong, healthy Christian character.

The faculty is composed of consecrated men and women of unusual ability along their respective lines, and they know how not only to impart information upon the subjects they teach, but to bend every phase of teaching to the construction of strong, determined Christian character.

Dr. Lewis Robeson Akers is not only a preacher and writer of ability, but a devoted Christian leader of decided convictions as to Wesleyan doctrines. Both faculty and student body are loyally following his leadership. His recent election for a period of five years gives stability to the administration under which the institution has made such remarkable progress during the last five years.

Then back of Dr. Akers is that strong defender of the faith, Dr. Henry C. Morrison, who is not only Chairman of the Board of Trustees, but also President of Asbury Theological Seminary, which more and more is meeting the long-felt need of high grade training in theology for those who would enter the ministry fully equipped for meeting modern conditions. The course leads to the B.D. Degree. It is no longer necessary for Asbury graduates to go to seminaries where faith is endangered, if not wrecked, during theological training. Spirit-filled instructors direct the higher education of our future church leaders.

New Educators at Taylor.

Taylor University brings six new professors into its teaching staff for next school year, covering the fields of History, Science, Music and Religion. Among these are Prof. John T. Chappell, Ph.D., of Johns Hopkins University, Prof. A. L. Bramlett, Ph.D., of the University of North Carolina, and Prof. A. Lincoln Shute, Th.D., formerly president of the Methodist Theological College, in India, and Prof. C. O. Bush, A.M., of Amherst. These professors are chosen for their spiritual vision and evangelical convictions as well as scholarship.

The Three Enemies---Ignorance, Self-will and Doubt.

Rev. Thomas Clark Henderson.

HE normal Christian is one who is filled with the Spirit of Jesus Christ. Many, many Christians live below their privileges in Christian experience. Why? Because there are three enemies who are constantly working to defeat every one of us in our seeking to come to the best in Christianhood. These three enemies are ignorance, self-will and doubt.

By ignorance, in this connection, we do not mean the lack of general knowledge, but ignorance of what the Scriptures teach about the highest realities in Christian experience. It is but the plainest truth to say that there are hosts of otherwise well informed Christians who do not clearly understand that they may experience more than the forgiveness of sins and the genesis of the new life. If there is anything more for them in character obtainments through the grace of God, they know nothing definite about it. There were many such in the early church, and for them the Apostles wrote special messages. Paul is repeatedly asking his readers: "Are ye ignorant, brethren?" or "know ye not, brethren?" as though there might be some great experimental truth of which they were ignorant.

The classic instance to point is that of the Ephesian disciples. When Paul found them and began his ministry to them, his first question was significant: "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" Their surprising answer was equally significant and revealing. They said, "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." That was ignorance, indeed! They were totally without knowledge of the person and work of the Holy Ghost. What wisdom was in Paul's treatment of them! He did not discount their former teachers or preachers. That was high prudence. Nor did he ignore the meager grace which they possessed. That, too, was good caution. He asked them to state their testimony, to tell what they claimed in Christian values. They assured him that they had received "John's water baptism." Taking that as his clue, Paul explained to them that their water baptism was a symbol of their repentance and a token of their faith in Jesus Christ, the Saviour. He pointed out to them that the very ritual of their baptism anticipated more—and after instructing them he knelt and prayed with them, and as he laid his hands on them "the Holy Ghost came on them."

These Ephesians were not the last group of Christians who were ignorant of their right to be consciously filled with the Holy Ghost. Many there are in the modern church who give every evidence of being quite as ignorant of the deeper values in Christian experience as were those Christian converts in Ephesus. One is constrained to call to the Christians of this day: "Are you ignorant, brethren? Do you not know that you may be cleansed from all sin and indwelt by the Spirit of God? You may be a victorious and holy Christian!"

The causes of this ignorance are several. Some know nothing about their higher privileges because they have never been told them. Others have been wrongly instructed. Yet others have found such a glorious transformation in the event of their conversion, that as yet they have seen no great need for more. Whatever the cause may be, there will come no good from discounting them, nor their present obtainments in grace. It will not help them to withdraw from them. They need to be carefully and patiently instructed in the truths that have to do with Christian experience. What they have obtained by faith should be appreciated, but not made the terminal of salvation. They need to be told that normal Christianhood is higher than the average among us.

The ordinary type of Christian life cannot but hinder the new convert by giving him the impression that the average is right. The weaknesses and wickedness of those who profess great grace may give him the idea that the claims to holiness and entire sanctification are all false. His lack of knowledge of the plain teachings of the Scriptures may keep him from seeing that God wills something more for him than he received at the event of conversion. He will not come to full consecration and victorious faith automatically. He is conditioned to receive the teachings and promises about full salvation, but he is also conditioned to receive misleading teachings. Such Christians should be looked on as those who need our help. They deserve and need our prayers. They should have our testimony to the richest grace which God has given us. We should point out to them the clear message of the New Testament about personal sanctification. We should sacrifice our own ease to get them under the preaching and teaching of the highest Christian experience. They need this, all of this, and ours it is to bear to them whatever ministry will aid them in coming to know their full inheritance in Christ Jesus.

It is very likely that the most common cause for the weakness and incompleteness of Christianhood is in the fact that many Christians do not know that there is a definite and glorious experience of Christ which will deliver from all sin and perfect the believer in love to God and men by the personal indwelling of the Holy Ghost. It is as certainly the business of the preacher to preach and teach full salvation to incomplete Christians as it is his business to preach the possibility of conversion to the unforgiven.

The second enemy in the way of the Christian becoming holy is self-will. Where many fail to obtain God's richest grace is because they are blind to their privilege; many others who well know their privileges fail to enter into their possessions because they are not willing to let go of their own will. They refuse to entirely surrender to Christ. They do not fully consecrate their all to the will and service of God. The selfish nature within them clings to some territory which should be relinquished. They do not choose to go the humbling way of self-denial. Their pride is not crucified. They shrink from becoming fools for Christ. They may long for full deliverance, but they will not consent to separate from self-reliance, or self-aggrandizement, or self-seeking, or love of ease. It is evident that many who pray for entire conformity to the will of God defeat their own prayers by not making a complete abandonment of themselves to God. They refuse to totally yield somewhere in relation to money, friends, foes, rank, service, time, or their intellectual pride. For all such there can come no fullness of the Spirit's indwelling and no triumph over sin. The Holy Spirit waits to fill yielded folk.

This thing of self-will is blinding. It is almost impossible for the stubborn and selfish man to sense his sinful self-life. Pride is always wrong, but it is most impossible to convince the proud person that he is proud, and that his pride displeases God. The mind and the body both seem to conspire to defend and retain some forms of stubborn non-surrender. The body pleads for indulgences and ease. The mind struts in proud authority. The will easily becomes brittle and defiant.

There is a phrase-picture in the New Testament which puts this matter before us in a clear light. "If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." That picture of walking in the light is helpful and easy to grasp. Light is that revelation of God's nature and will which comes to us through conscience, the written Word of God and the Holy Spirit. To walk in that light means to conform to all the moral demands of that light. To have nothing between us and the source of that light—God. Evidently, then, before we can know the power of the blood of Jesus Christ to cleanse from all sin, we must conform to all the known will of God. Submit and trust and the fact of cleansing will be realized. Without a full yielding there can come no cleansing from evil within, and no fullness of the Spirit within. The most stubborn enemy to overcome in seeking full salvation is this one of self-will. But it must be and may be routed.

The third of these enemies is doubt. Persons who are fully informed about the nature of full salvation, and about their needs and their privileges, and who are fully consecrated to God's will yet do not come to realize the conscious experience which they desire because they will not take the last and most vital step of faith. All who fail in their seeking of entire sanctification do not fail because they do not understand their privileges and needs, nor yet because they do not commit themselves fully to God's will, but because they seem to be unable or are actually unwilling to restfully trust the promises of God for their immediate helping.

Explain it as we may, there is in most of us a something which makes it quite difficult to take a step of "naked" faith for personal moral help. Our human nature shrinks from it. Our reason begs for evidence as indisputable as logic. It is seldom easy for most of us to believe that something is being done in us and for us, that is of unseen moral value, just because the Bible assures us that such is true. The practical mind and the carnal mind certainly take the venture of simple faith in the written promise of God as foolishness, as being a leap into the dark. Yet that leap of faith is the final and crucial step to take if the Spirit of God is to have his full way into and in our hearts. Nothing will be a substitute for faith. One may understand the doctrine of entire sanctification accurately, or one may be fully consecrated to God, or one may experience a great and profound emotional thrill and still be far from taking the step of faith which lifts the seeker across the threshold into the Holy of Holies. Anchoring one's faith to a promise of God is not the same as something else, it is a definite, intelligent act, and no one can do it for another.

Most of our difficulties about believing God's promises are not mental, but moral. We will not believe. We simply will not take God's promise at its face value and act on it. We refuse to rest our case in the hands of the Great Physician. However there is no victorious life until we definitely stand on the plain and clear promise of God.

It is my observation that faith is helped most certainly by the seeker taking a clear and applicable promise to God in prayer. The one promise which I have known to help the most people is one which has been quoted in this meditation: "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." If the honest seeker will take that promise and plead it before the Throne of Mercy, faith will operate readily. If the earnest seeker can say, "I am sincerely walking in all the light I have; indeed, that is the very reason for my seeking purity of heart; and the promise before me is that if I do that then I have fellowship with God, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth me from all sin," he will find that that sort of thoughtful pleading will make it easy to rise above doubts and contrary feelings, and, to his delight, inner rest and assurance will fill his heart. The best way to kill this enemy of doubt is to rest on some such clear and definite promise of God.

When these three enemies are overcome—ignorance, self-will and doubt—then full salvation becomes the experience of the devout soul. Here is the way to obtain full salvation—clearly recognize your need and your privilege in this matter; absolutely yield yourself, your all to God to obtain this great grace; and then restfully and persistently trust the promises of God that cover your needs.

All the difficulties in the way of the seeker for the Pentecostal experience of entire sanctification are included in these three things, failure to grasp the truth itself, failure to let go of oneself, and failure to trust the promises. And, by the same logic, the three essential steps to gain the heights of holiness are, first, clearly recognize that you can now be cleansed from all sin and filled with the Holy Spirit. Second, yield yourself fully to the sway of the Holy Spirit. Third, simply believe that the promise is yours and that right now the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth you from all sin. To take these steps lifts the subnormal Christian to the glorious normal life which is far above the average Christianhood of the day.

GOD'S UNFAILING LOVE.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HAT is a wonderful declaration contained in John 15:9, where our elder Brother says: "As the Father hath loved me, so have I loved you."

The enemy often tempts us to doubt that God loves us, but that his wrath is turned upon us, when the Scriptures plainly declare just the contrary. Even when we have been disobedient and unmindful of God's mercy and longsuffering toward us, it is we who have changed and not our indulgent Father.

If the enemy can succeed in getting us to doubt that God loves us he has gone far toward achieving his purpose in causing us to cast away our confidence, to become discouraged and finally, to give up entirely. But we have God's infallible word on our side, for he has declared nothing more plainly in his word than that "I have loved thee with an everlasting love." In Hosea 11:4 God declares that "I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love."

In Isaiah 49:15, we have an answer to Zion's lamentation that, as she thought, God had forsaken her, but hear our Father's pathetic reply, an effort to console and comfort them in their distress: "Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she could not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee."

Could any promise from the Father be more assuring than this? We who are mothers know something of the unchangeable love, the love that will go to the limit in order to defend or assist the fruit of our wombs, yet it may be possible for even a mother to forget her offspring, but God goes farther than the deepest, truest human love and declares that, though the mother forget the son of her womb, yet he will not forget us.

And yet, in the face of these wonderful promises, the amazing declarations of love, Satan would have the audacity to assail us with the temptation to doubt God's love, knowing if he can achieve this, he will burn the bridge that is our only way of access to the Father.

Satan has some advantages of us! We are unworthy; we do not deserve to be loved; we have sinned grievously; we have been ungrateful and forgetful of his tender mercies and the sacrifice he has made in giving his Son to die for our sins, but in spite of this, and more, if we have gone to greater lengths of ingratitude, he yearns over us and loves us still. Mothers, it is something like you and I feel when our own flesh and blood walk over our hearts by indulging in those things that they know is contrary to our wishes and desires for their highest happiness. Oh no, we do not turn against them, but we, with bleeding hearts, follow them and long for their return to our fond embrace of forgiving love.

Let's enter a covenant that we will not doubt our Father's love, no matter what the enemy may suggest. Let's admit our unworthiness, but never the fact of God's love. If there comes anything between us and our Lord, let us remember that he has not left us, but we have left him, and by retracing our wayward steps we shall find him—waiting—just where we left him. Sin is the only thing that separates us from the Father; we are the sinners, and the only way to get that obstacle out of the way, is to confess it and forsake it, then we and the offended One come together—where we left him.

"Oh for grace our hearts to soften!

Teach us, Lord, at length to love;

We, alas, forget too often

What a Friend we have above:

But when home our souls are brought

We will love thee as we ought."

Where Will we Spend Eternity?

REV. HENRY T. SCHOLL, D.D.

SPACE is immense, but it has its limits. If we could be comfortably seated upon a magic carpet, and speed through space at the rate of 186,200 miles a second, we might draw near the confines of space in 125,000 years, or thereabouts.

Eternity, however, is limitless duration. We will never reach the end thereof. The lapse of six or more thousand years since Adam and Eve walked joyously together with God in Eden is immense. Far greater is the lapse of, presumably, hundreds of thousands of years since this world of ours, at God's command, flashed forth in space a blazing sphere. But neither hundreds of thousands of years, nor hundreds of millions of years will bring us to the end of eternity.

Where we will spend eternity is a superlatively more important question than, What shall we eat, What shall we drink, Where-withal shall we be clothed, and how and where, in this life, are we likely to have a right good time.

Eternity will be spent by you and by me in one of two places. One is the place designated as fire everlasting, prepared for the devil and his demons. The other is the Father's house, with its many abiding places; where joy is full, and where unsullied pleasure lasts forevermore. We reach the latter designation as our eyes are wide open to the correct estimate of spiritual verities; and as we are heartily and habitually minded to give individually all diligence in making both calling and election sure.

If we have a well grounded hope of entering eventually the Homeland, our blessed assurance is firmly based upon five facts. (1) Christ is the Author of our Salvation. (2) The blood Atonement of Jesus Christ is the Ground of our Salvation. (3) A vital Faith in Jesus that habitually Works by Love is the Medium of our Salvation. (4) Fruitful Works of Righteousness give evidence of the verity and vitality of our faith in Jesus Christ, and (5) The Outcome of our saving faith is that Spirit-begotten and synergized Holiness of character and conduct, without which no man shall blissfully see the Lord.

Heaven is entered through Christ, the Door. John 10:1, 9. In no other name is salvation possible. Acts 4:12. All unbeliev-

REVIVALS WITHHELD IN MERCY.

An unholy membership clogs the chariot wheels of the Church, and prevents her aggressive movements. Unless a devoted, earnest membership undertakes to lead forth those who are newly born in Zion, how unlikely are the new-born babes to retain the ardor of their first love! How soon does the world resume its hold on the heart! And it is thus that the Church is so much burdened with the spiritually dead. But on whom does the guilt lie? Where may the blood of these souls be found? Of whom will God require it? O, indeed, an ingathering of precious lambs into the fold does bring vast responsibilities on the individual members of a Church! I do not doubt but that it is often in mercy to the Church that God does not hear her oft-repeated prayer for a revival. In view of this, it is no wonder that we are divinely admonished that "judgment must begin at the house of God." It is not surprising that the disciples were required to wait until endued with power from on high. O, that Christians would more generally awaken to a sense of their responsibility!

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE APPEARANCE OF A GHOST.

EV. John Henry Huston, who was supposed to be Mr. John Henry, had made a most favorable impression upon the officials of the hospital where he was confined, and they had taken in him a very deep interest. His personal physician had assured him that he believed a winter spent in Southern Florida would be all he needed to restore him to robust and vigorous health.

He insisted, however, that it would be better for Mr. Huston to make the trip in a large, private automobile, the personal property of the physician, resting quietly at nights, in hotels, rather than that he should go by train and travel in sleepers. So he figured out the very best highway trip from New York City to Miami, Florida, a trip that he himself had made frequently in his car, and arranged for him to stop each night at a comfortable hotel with which he was well acquainted. He took pains to write ahead to the proprietors of these hotels and have an excellent sun-exposed room reserved for the night in which Huston was scheduled to spend in his place.

The tour was so arranged that Huston would spend the third night of his journey just thirty miles beyond the city of Goodwill, and, as fate would have it, the highway over which he was to travel, led directly through this interesting city.

The doctor sent his own chauffeur and a well selected, strong male nurse to take care of Huston on the journey. Huston, with high appreciation of the attention given him, and being well able to do so, not only paid all bills, but gave handsome tips to his chauffeur and nurse.

It so happened that they were delayed at their noon meal to an extent that they would not be able to reach their hotel station of the third night, until a little after dark. It was just about eight o'clock when they reached the city of Goodwill. It was early in the month of December, and quite dark. That he might be thoroughly comfortable on his journey, the doctor had Huston arrayed in a soft, snow-white uniform worn by convalescents at the hospital. It consisted of long, loose pants, white shoes, and a kind of robe with draped sleeves, the skirt reaching to the knees, with a broad belt around the waist, giving the patient a rather ghostly appearance.

There was an arrangement among the cushions in the large car so that Huston could stretch himself out in this loose, comfortable garment, wrapped in a heavy Scotch blanket, and rest with great comfort during the day.

When they came to Goodwill Huston insisted that his chauffeur and nurse allow him to go by and look in on his great church. He told them that he had erected the church and been its pastor for some years, and he desired just to look in on the great auditorium.

The nurse hesitated and said, "Your physician told me that you were not completely recovered from your operation, and must be kept very quiet and there was to be no visiting of friends enroute to Florida. If I should disobey his orders and you suffer any evil consequences, it would bring me serious trouble and I would doubtless lose my position at the hospital."

Huston promised them if they would let him look in he would speak to no one; he would simply give one fond look at the vast auditorium in which he had ministered to multitudes of people. It would take but a few moments and he would speak to no one; it was not likely that any one would be about the church, and they could draw their car up at the back door of the study; a half dozen steps would lead to the door of his study opening into the auditorium, he would open the door, press the button, give one wistful look, step back into the car and they would be at once upon their journey.

The nurse finally consented; by this time they were in the city, and on the main street upon which the church was built. They simply had to turn their car to the left on a drive that led around the church and came back into the street, and headed on to the town where they were billed and rooms reserved for the night.

The great car pulled up to the back door of Huston's study. He threw off his heavy blanket, stepped out of the car in his white robes, climbed the three steps to the back door of his old study. Fortunately, the door was not locked, and opened readily as if glad to welcome its master of many years, and he stepped into the study, which was perfectly dark.

Now strange to relate, this was the very night that pastor Judas Iskabod was giving his magnificent pageant, and at that very moment was making an eloquent speech to an audience that packed the brilliantly lighted auditorium to its utmost capacity, with many chairs for extra seats.

King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, with various members of their courts, were seated, in gorgeous robes and glittering crowns, upon the platform. The audience was spellbound into a deathlike silence by the magnificence of the ancient costumes of the Orient.

Pastor Iskabod was saying: "Ladies and gentlemen, we are happy to greet you this evening. We are highly pleased with this intelligent and appreciative audience. I was about to say, that we are entering the open door of a new era in Church history. The fact is, we have already entered. It may be that the word "age," would be more appropriate than the word "era." We have emerged from an old decaying age into a new age. We have broken off and thrown from us the shackles of the past, and we are breathing the healthful atmosphere of a generous and splendid liberty hitherto unknown by humanity. We no longer cling to the outworn ideals and conceptions of our forebears. We have divorced ourselves from every phase of religious superstition. We no longer look backward to the prediction of prophets and the vague writings of so-called apostles. This is a forward looking age, full of new discoveries, and we are out for all there is in life for us. We care little for the past; we admit that the future is veiled. We are living in the present and propose to get all out of life that we possibly can."

At this moment he paused and there was a tremendous handclapping. The president of the university and many of the professors occupied prominent seats in the audience. The pastor bowed gracefully, with a modest smile of appreciation, clearing his throat and straightening himself up to full height, his head thrown back, said: "We are no longer controlled by inspiration, but by scientific investigation and discovery." Then, with lifted voice, and clenched fist coming down into his open hand, he said, "We no longer believe in spirits. We are not afraid of ghosts."

At this very moment, Huston, who could hear nothing of what was going on in the auditorium, threw the door between the study and auditorium, wide open and, amazed at what greeted his eyes, he threw both hands high above his head, gazed one instant, stepped back, closed the door, hastened to his car and leaped in. The driver stepped on the gas and in less than a minute's time they were well-nigh past the city limits, on their way southward.

Huston was a man who, when in perfect health, weighed about 225 pounds; he had been so reduced by sickness that he now weighed only about 170 pounds. This gave him a gaunt and ghostly appearance. When he suddenly appeared in the door opening from the study into the auditorium, Iskabod wheeled, gazed at him for an instant, turned deathly pale and leaped from the platform, upsetting a number of flower pots, and falling upon his knees in the center aisle.

The Queen of Sheba, frightened out of her wits, followed him and, unfortunately, fell astride of him. He struggled up the aisle on his hands and knees, with the Queen riding on his back. This was not a part of the original program, but simply the result of a fright which had, for the present, scared these intellectuals of the new age out of their wits. The entire audience—president, professors, students, and the whole assembly of culture and refinement, was frightened into speechless silence.

Finally, King Solomon sprang to his feet and amid the screams and yells which broke out, endeavored to call the house to order, but to his horror found that he had lost the power of speech. Unfortunately, some one had struck a main electric wire in his struggle to get out of the auditorium, turned out the lights and left them in dense darkness.

Amidst screams and yells, pulling and pushing, tearing clothing, with not a few of the cultured sisters fainting, the vast audience struggled for the exit. Fortunately, no one was killed, but many severely bruised. The Queen of Sheba rode her splendid steed almost the entire length of the aisle, then fell off backwards and fainted. She was lifted up just before the lights were cut off, otherwise, the poor, frightened woman would have been trampled to death.

"Spoiled" by Going to a Bible Training School.

REV. A. W. ORWIG.

"It has just spoiled her," was the strange and shallow-minded remark by a lady concerning a young woman whom I intimately knew, and who had attended a Bible Training School. She considered the young woman "spoiled" because the latter did not accept her views as to certain social maxims and practices, and because she took a deeper interest than ever in spiritual things. May it be the blessed lot of many others to be "spoiled" in the same manner!

But just a few words as to how the young woman was "spoiled." Her interest in and knowledge of the Bible were very greatly increased, her religious experience was considerably deepened, and her usefulness greatly augmented. Greater interest was awakened in Bible study in her home. She also became a far more efficient teacher in the Sunday school, so that all her scholars became Christians. Going to that Bible School did not make the young woman gloomy or unsociable, but rather added charm and interest to her daily life. The unsaved were not repelled by her introduction of religious subjects in social intercourse; but, on the contrary, interested and benefited. She wisely adapted herself to circumstances, and drew them out in inquiry as to the way of salvation. "Spoiled," indeed, for the frivolous things of the world, a kind of spoiling many others need. Going to a Bible Training School, or our own theological seminary, may accomplish it for them under the blessing of God.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

REVIVAL OF HOLINESS IN TORONTO, ONTARIO, CANADA.

Parkdale Tabernacle, 186 Cowan Ave., Toronto, Ontario, Canada, has been the centre of an old-fashioned revival. Dr. C. H. Babcock, of Los Angeles, California, that mighty man of God, was greatly blessed in preaching the Word in a campaign from May 5 to 19. The saints had been praying for a revival and the very first day of the battle the revival broke in on us with a high tide.

The interest and spirit of the meeting continued to increase, coming to a crowning climax in the last great service Sunday evening May 19. Sinners were saved, backsliders reclaimed and believers sanctified. A spirit of prayer came on the saints and the blessing of the Lord fell in copious showers throughout the entire meeting. Sometimes things grew tense and the hour became awful with a deathlike hush as the gospel plow went deep and exposed sin and laid bare under its searching light the inconsistent lives of souls on their march to the judgment. Praise God for Holy Ghost conviction. Let us pray for more of it. Large crowds attended the services, the Lord giving the evangelist the hearts of the people and the truth went home to the hungry hearts of hundreds who needed help. It is estimated that between three hundred and fifty and four hundred seekers knelt at the altar of prayer. Pray for the work here and especially for those who have taken their stand for God.

This work of Holiness was undertaken just about two years ago under the leadings of the Holy Spirit. From the very beginning the hand of the Lord was mightily manifested in favor of his own cause. The enemy has been defeated at every turn and his attempt to hinder the work has been prayed clear through and pulled down and converted into stepping-stones to greater victory for the God of battles. Hallelujah!

May all who read these lines earnestly pray for the spread of Scriptural Holiness in this great and wicked city. If you have friends in this city or province, please give them the glad tidings of this letter and extend to them a cordial invitation on behalf of Parkdale Tabernacle to attend this means of grace.

W. M. McGuire, Pastor.

McKEESPORT, PENNSYLVANIA.

The dedication anniversary services in the Pilgrim Holiness Church were marked by the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. God manifested his approval of the messages and the entire services, and people came to the altar till there were forty-one at the altar, and a number prayed through to victory. These people love the old-fashioned Gospel, and the stronger it is the more they manifest their love. Eighteen hundred dollars were raised for the indebtedness on the church and parsonage, so that for the year this is taken care of. The giving was free and hearty, and I predict for this church a great future as soul winners. They are located in a fine neighborhood, have fine buildings, good congregations, and pastor and people are devoted to the cause of Christ. The Gospel in its purity and power is acceptable yet, when it is preached, and God delights in blessing it, and the messenger, and the people. The last Sunday there were three services, each one owned of God. This church has a number of male voices, in fact, a larger number of trained male voices than in any church I know. They can be depended on at any time and delight in making melody unto the Lord. I left there rejoicing that God has a people in this city who are loyal and true.

George B. Kulp.

SCIOTA, NEW YORK.

A gracious revival has just closed in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Sciota, N. Y. We began Sunday, May 19, and continued through Sunday, June 2. Rev. J. C. Long, evangelist for the New York State Holiness Association, was with us throughout the meetings. The attendance upon each service was excellent and people came from far and near to hear the Gospel and take part in the campaign. The blessing of God was upon the meeting from the first and the Holy Ghost had his right of way. We had no special song leader but called on different ones each service whom the Spirit seemed to indicate. There were forty seekers for regeneration, reclamation and entire sanctification and some real work done which will tell for time and eternity. The postmaster and one of the local merchants was reclaimed just before the meeting and got sanctified the first day of the campaign. Several young people sought God praying through to victory and rose from the altar with the shine of a new-found experience on their countenances. Pastors from neighboring communities came and were a great blessing to the meetings. Brother and Sister P. K. Jennette entertained the evangelist. Each message seemed to be divinely ordered and was delivered under the unction of the Holy Ghost. Conviction was deep and pungent and tears flowed freely down many a cheek. Even though Bro. Long was pastor on this charge for six years and has been back for one other revival in the Sciota Church yet he was God's man for us this year. We could not have found one better adapted for the emergency. He was under the burden of the meeting all the time and God graciously honored his ministry. Any one desiring an evangelist can do no better than engage Brother Long. His address is Houghton, N. Y. He is employed by the New York State Holiness Association and is also its president. All offerings are sent directly to the state treasurer and all goes to help spread Scriptural holiness over the state of New York. An offering of $125.24 was realized from our campaign and has gone in. A beautiful spirit of harmony and blessed fellowship flourished among the saints throughout the revival. The church herself has received a mighty spiritual uplift, and we thank God and take courage. All glory and praise to the triune God above.

Clyde R. Sumner, Pastor.

BENNARD-REED CRUSADE.

A very happy and, we believe profitable, year in evangelism closed on May 12th for the Bennard-Reed Evangelistic party. Evangelist George Bennard, well known to Pentecostal Herald readers, who for twenty-five years has been preaching a gospel full of redemption from Coast to Coast and God has sealed his ministry with gracious revivals year in and year out, has been the preacher and leader of these campaigns. Rev. D. E. Reed, for twelve years Evangelist of the Michigan Conference of the Methodist Church, has been the associate preacher and leader of the young people's work. During part of the campaigns we have been assisted by Miss Hannah Dahlstrom, a Spirit-filled pianist and soloist of unusual gifts.

Our first meeting was at Napoleon, Mich., with a fine little band of Methodists. Some very thorough results were obtained. Rev. Wm. Synder is the earnest pastor. In November we had a real community awakening at Kokomo, Ind., the attendance often taxing the capacity of the church. The devoted pastor, Rev. R. L. Wilson, reported 180 seekers at the altar of prayer. The pre-Christmas campaign was with Rev. W. P. Mannin, one of the stalwart pastors of Michigan, held at his Lakeside Church. A very helpful meeting. The January meeting was a return engagement with the good people at Woodland, Mich.; a union effort of three churches; some fine fruitage resulted. Pre-Easter found us at Stockwell, Ind.; a hard battle, but some gracious results.

Our last meeting was at Elkhon, Mich., ending May 12th, a three-weeks' meeting that was a real revival, the best of the year. A capacity audience nearly every night, a beautiful harmony and co-operation between the Evangelical, Mennonite, Methodist and Mission churches. Large numbers of young people, boys and girls, and several fathers and mothers sought peace with God. The last night witnessed twenty-one conversions, young men and women, and some few heads of families.

Our party has not been together all the year, but sometimes separating, helping pastors in other places, including Grand Rapids, Detroit, Niles, and Wheeling, West Virginia. It has been a pleasure everywhere to speak a good word for the dear old Pentecostal Herald.

Our next crusade will be a Union Tent Campaign June 30th to July 14th inclusive at Freeport, Mich. We are already booking for the fall and winter and ask the great Herald family to remember when in prayer that God may use us in winning many to complete redemption in Christ this coming season.

D. E. Reed,
Albion, Michigan.

AN OLD-TIME REVIVAL

From May 20th to June 2nd, at Bethesda M. E. Church, Brownsville, Md., the people witnessed what they consider a return of "The Good Old Days." Under the earnest and forceful preaching of Rev. J. R. Parker, of Wilmore, Ky., the entire community was deeply stirred, and the crowds continued to increase till the last service.

Forty-eight were converted or reclaimed; thirty-three joined the church, and seven infants were presented for baptism. This ingathering at the last service on Sunday afternoon was a very sacred and heart-touching scene for the large congregation who had gathered for that occasion. There seemed to be a feeling among all that the meeting should have continued for at least another week.

Brother Parker, besides with the pastor visiting and praying with the people in the afternoons, led the singing and preached every night. He is young and full of life. He preaches a Christ who is mighty to save from all sin, but he makes no long face about it. We believe he lives and enjoys the Gospel he preaches. We are expecting a great year on our work.

M. V. LEWIS' REPORT.

My dear friends and brethren in the Lord:

It has been some time since writing you, nevertheless I have been very busy in the Lord's work. From May, 1928 to 1929 I have been in and conducted over 700 services and have sung over 6,000 times. The Lord has been very gracious to me in keeping me in strength for my duties.

To give a report of all my meetings would take too long, but will touch on two or three.

New Castle, Ind., was a simultaneous campaign with fourteen churches, in which it was my privilege to labor in the First Methodist Church. The churches organized their forces and put on an intensive visitation campaign which resulted in touching all the unsaved and unchurched folks of the city. It was said that the city had never experienced such an effort to get folks in touch with the Almighty.

Rev. W. L. Kemper, pastor with whom I labored, is indeed a Christian gentleman and a brother in the Lord. Never has it been my privilege to labor with a man who was more concerned about his church.

To Princeton, W. Va., was my next move to join Dr. W. M. Morrell in the First Methodist Church to lead his people closer to God. We started off good from the first night not wanting a congregation, as there was scarcely a night but what we had all that could be well taken care of. With the wonderful soul-stirring messages given in sermon we could see the audience groan spiritually. We do not know how many were reclaimed or brought into the kingdom of God, as the entire church was moved. Mrs. Lewis joined me here and assisted in the work with the children where we had about 250 in training.

From here we went to Anderson Street Methodist Church, Bristol, Tenn., where we remained for nearly five weeks. Charles Williams is pastor and indeed a devout man of God. His messages were characterized by earnestness, fearlessness and fidelity to God's word. We had a number of meetings for men only which resulted in a great host giving their hearts to God. We also had several women's meetings which brought many into a closer relationship with God. There are so many characteristics of a meeting of this kind and its long duration, one can hardly give it justice in a brief report. We will say however, that all the church-going people of Bristol turned their attention to Anderson Street. This was a great time of rejoicing because of the way people found God at home, on the streets, in the pews and at the altar.

The children's work was of great interest both to the workers and city, as we had so many we could hardly take care of them.

Let us pray more and work harder for this coming year than ever before for the gracious outpouring of God's Spirit upon the people.

M. V. Lewis.

SULPHUR SPRINGS, TEXAS.

Monday, June 17, 1929, brought to a close an intensive evangelistic campaign in the First Methodist Church, Sulphur Springs, Texas, conducted by Evangelist Harry S. Allen, of Macon, Ga., and Charles F. Dunn, evangelist singer, of Atlanta, Ga., and marks an epoch in the history of the Church and community for the advancement of Christianity as has seldom been known in past years on similar occasions.

In submitting the results of a revival of this nature, the good that has been accomplished can hardly be estimated. Deep in the hearts of men and women, boys and girls and children, are planted such impressions as prompt good intentions for higher and nobler standards of living and stimulate the better-self in humankind, and in time to come to decisions and determinations to live Christlike lives may be traced to events of this meeting. Such permanency in establishing the cause of Christ seemed to be a striking characteristic in the efforts of these evangelistic leaders, in the practical, simple, yet convincing and uncompromising gospel preached by the evangelist and the messages in song by the singer. Nor can the results of such a campaign be termed satisfactory when there is left without the realm of spiritual inspiration a single soul. But may it be justly and candidly said that few, if any, came under the sound of the gospel messages, as preached by Bro. Allen, who were not brought face to face with forceful facts that would arouse a realization of certain necessary attributes for Christian living, and at other times were touched with such tender and stirring devotion to the cause of Jesus Christ that would seem akin to Heaven itself.

The originality, uniqueness and earnestness that attended the services throughout the entire series proved remarkably effective and these qualities, together with the unusual methods of conducting a number of the special services, differed greatly from those ordinarily used in similar campaigns, and indicated thoughtfulness, tact and skill, and a deep and prayerful consecration on the part of the leaders. Especially may be mentioned in this connection, the Sunday school night when particular recognition was made to the work and workers of this great field of labor; family or "Old Folk" night at which time splendid and tender tributes were paid to mothers and fathers; and others in which truths were concretely demonstrated by the use of object lessons, applicable alike to children, young people and adults.

The organization of the groups of young people and children under the supervision of Mr. Dunn, with their choruses, enthusiasm and inspiration, added much to the services and through this work and on occasions when efforts of pastor, evangelist and Sunday school workers were combined in these group meetings, some of the most effective, most visible and lasting results of the revival were consummated.

In recognition of the unusual ability and exceptionally commendable traits of character and personality, also qualifications for successful evangelistic work, the official board of stewards voluntarily passed resolutions in which they strongly endorsed the work of these men.

The closing service was made a grand reception for candidates for church membership, numbering ninety-six, and most of whom came in on profession of faith. This large group included many of the boys and girls and young people of the Sunday school and was indeed a great harvesting, resulting largely from seeds sown and labor done by faithful Sunday school workers, as well as through the immediate influence of the forces of the revival.

thinkers from the early dawn of history to the present day. To find the solution of the riddle of sin has been the theme of poets, philosophers, seers, and sages throughout the ringing changes of the centuries. Many unique hypotheses have been presented. All sorts of remedies have been tried. But there remains more hideous, more menacing than ever—the fact of sin.

Wesley, grappling with this great problem, is not the discoverer of some new truth or novel doctrine, but simply re-interprets and re-emphasizes in clearer terms the faith of our fathers living still. Back of him is an army of the sun-crowned elect of God,—fathers, patriarchs, theologians, martyrs, saints,—all proclaiming the power of Christ to cleanse the heart of man from all sin. Wesley declares the only complete, perfect, and divine cure for sin is a distinct, definite work of grace, subsequent to regeneration and obtainable here and now by simple faith in the cleansing blood of Christ. "As we are justified by faith, so are we sanctified by faith," says he.

The preaching of this dynamic marked the rise of Methodism in England and America. Early Methodism made her spectacular rise to spiritual leadership in the world by way of the altar and the mourner's bench. The Gospel messages heralded by the mighty preachers of those days were concerning sin and its penalties, regeneration, and the sanctification of human hearts through personal faith in Jesus Christ and his vicarious atonement. Nine-tenths of the preaching of early Methodism was evangelistic and the other tenth had to do with the development of the spiritual life and the strengthening of the faith of the saints. Moral reform, social service, and humanitarian methods were magnified only as the fruits and graces of a genuinely transformed life proceeding from a heart from sin set free.

Our beloved Methodism was born amid the shouts of new-born souls and she has made herself a world evangel through her mighty spiritual revival awakening. She has always fostered Christian education, but, during the years that have passed, she never made this necessary measure a substitute for the supernatural works of the Holy Spirit in human hearts.

Had we then the resources, membership, equipment and educated leaders which we now possess with the passion for the salvation of men which burned within the breasts of the early preachers, the accomplishments in those crude days would have swept the world with a divine conflagration of spiritual power, the results of which cannot be even imagined. Had we today that divine passion for bringing a lost world to the feet of our crucified Savior, that passion which animated the heroic hearts of Asbury, Whitefield, Wesley, Coke, Whatcoat, and others, we could easily change the disheartening and alarming report of a stagnated church without an increase in converts and members, to the glorious announcement of the addition of a million souls for Methodism throughout the world.

It is high time that we realize the futility of man-made programs and return to the only source of power, namely, the guidance of the Holy Spirit and a recognition of his leadership as the head of this dispensation. Would that our bishops might issue a world call for a convocation of the Methodist ministry which would mean a tarrying before God in humility, contrition, and genuine sorrow for the spiritual barrenness and dearth that are so widely evident in the present day pulpit,—a tarrying that should endure until the long withheld Pentecost should again descend, tipping the tongues of his evangelists with the sacred fire of the skies and creating anew a ministry of John the Baptist, as well as John's, Paul's, and the Apostles. The insistent cry of every one who loves the Lord Jesus Christ should be that of the Psalmist of old, "Wilt thou not revive us again: that thy people may rejoice in thee?" This is the supreme need of the hour, a God-sent revival, not a man-made revival, a prayed-down revival in answer to the prayers of people who know and meet the conditions of prevailing prayer.

As I travel from one end of this land to the other and have opportunity to see for myself the condition of the churches; as I read the various religious periodicals and talk with men and women in influence and power in the church, my heart would be sick, yes, nigh unto despair, if I did not know God and that he answers prayer. When I hear the gross error and the superficial and unsatisfying things taught by many professedly orthodox ministers; the absence of a real, living Gospel from many who do not preach error but who are certainly not preaching the truth in its fullness and in the power of the Holy Spirit; the unconcern of apparently the great mass of the membership of our churches regarding the loss, both at home and abroad; the rapidly growing compromise with the world on the part of a very large proportion of the membership of our churches; the almost forgotten family altar, and the neglect of private prayer, together with the openly avowed disbelief in prayer on the part of not a few; the inactivity in soul winning on the part of an overwhelming majority of the members of our church today; these things cannot but fill any intelligent and properly instructed Christian with a sorrow that almost breaks the heart.

The glorious truth of full salvation, which comprehends the regeneration of the human heart and its sanctification or cleansing from all sin; this complete cure, bringing with it the largest measure of growth in grace and the consciousness of a victorious life,—this, and this alone, will suffice for present day needs and give humanity a surcease from its sorrow and sin.

Sin is mighty, but Christ is Almighty. Sin is powerful, but Christ is all-powerful. To the despairing one comes the message, "Sin shall not have dominion over you." "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world!" "The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." For the one who is faint of heart there is the valedictory prayer of Christ for his disciples, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth. I sanctify myself that they themselves may also be sanctified in truth."

"Wherefore, Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate. Let us therefore go forth unto him without the camp bearing his reproach." "For we have not here an abiding city but we seek after the city which is to come."

Who can estimate the results, the spiritual revolution that would take place if preachers, evangelists, missionaries, Christian workers everywhere would begin to preach with a flaming passion on "sin and its cure"? If from tens of thousands of pulpits men heard thundered the changeless truth that "the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life"? What if the text, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world!" could be preached for only thirty days by the prophets of today? Is it too much to say that we would behold our modern Ninevehs, our twentieth century Babylons, in sackcloth and ashes, that the glory of our God would shine in our midst, that Christ would indeed be acclaimed as King of heart and life? Dare the church of the living God accept the challenge? May God make us white-plumed heralds of his sin-curing, energizing truth, crusaders of a new day when the righteousness of Jehovah shall cover the earth, as the waters cover the sea!

Civilization and culture cannot save any people from decay and death. Nay, these within themselves carry the seeds of decay and ruin. In devotion to the things that are near and material, men lose sight of the things that are spiritual and eternal. In pursuit of the almighty dollar, men lose sight of Almighty God. Practically all the great empires of history have passed away primarily because of their neglect of the spiritual or higher life. It is one of the ironies of history that religion makes most show when it is swiftly declining. Like the hectic flush on the cheek of the dying consumptive there may be a false simulation of life even when disintegration has set in.

The age of Solomon was called the Golden Age, but it was that period which marked the culmination of Israel's ancient glory and the tragic decline of the nation both spiritually and materially. It was in the period that the great temple of Herod was being builded as one of the wonders of the world, but it was an age marked by decline and death of the nation itself. The decay of its religion is the most tragic calamity that can befall a nation. It is the beginning of the end in a nation's life. Sin, and sin alone, is the almost invariable cause of a nation's death. We speak of the departed glories of Sodom and Gomorrah, of Egypt and Babylon, of Assyria and Israel. The underlying cause of their destruction is comprehended in the little word of three letters, SIN. The great prophets of Israel without one hesitating utterance or deviating line declare that the doom of nations is due to their iniquity and sin.

What are these sins? The very same evils that run rampant in twentieth century society: apostasy, pride, idolatry, mammonism, greed, intemperance, impurity, lawlessness, and perversion of justice—these are the sins against which the prophets flame out and against which they denounce a certain and impending judgment. Well doth Micah say, "What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God?" and almost invariably this is exactly what both individuals and nations have refused to do. We have had politics because we have had morals. We have evil economic conditions because men are selfish and greedy. We have wretched industrial conditions because we have broken the golden chain of man's brotherhood and riveted the iron chains of servitude upon his wrists instead. These are the things that sap the vitality of a nation, that break it up into warring classes and sectional strife. The decline of a nation's life invariably begins first with the decay of a nation's heart and that decay ever means the decline of a nation's power. A nation's political policy is an expression of the nation's faith or lack of faith. What a nation is its political policies will be. The verdict of history is unmistakable. Nations perish from causes within, not from causes without. Every nation has died as its faith died. The nation that loses its religion has lost its life. No nation ever died of old age. Every nation thus far has died of a rotten heart; and the heart began to rot as the hands began to clutch gold. The loss of God and the love of gold are the two sources from which flow the evils that have ruined every nation that has perished. Nations are not destroyed. They commit suicide.

The present brand of preaching is inadequate to meet the moral or immoral conditions of this present century. The greatest material age of human history can only be saved from its death blight of materialism by the mightiest Gospel ever yet proclaimed. There is no twentieth century Christianity. Christianity is twenty centuries old, based on Christ's deity, atonement and resurrection. You can have twentieth century religion but not twentieth century Christianity. The only Christianity is the Christianity of the first century, the Christianity of Christ and John and Paul,—the Gospel that was re-discovered and re-preached by Wesley, Whitefield, and other fire-baptized souls. Because such a Gospel has been neglected, the church of the living God seems wandering about in a spiritual Sahara.

Our hope is the preaching of power; the preaching of a full and complete redemption from the power of and deliverance from the guilt of sin. The preaching of a flabby, enervated and compromising Gospel cannot successfully meet the challenge of this great material age. The Holy Spirit must be honored, his power to cleanse from all sin must be exalted. Soft preaching and pussy-footing ministers are largely responsible for the skepticism which fills our schools, the worldliness which dominates so many churches, and for the throngs that are in the broad way who nevertheless have been blood-purchased by Jesus Christ.

Back to the day when men shall cry mightily for mercy in true repentance and contrition, when believers shall tarry until they be endued with power from on high. Back to the main line of a complete and full salvation. Back to a prayerful and expectant church. Back to a fearless, compelling ministry, not weakened by doubts or palsied by fear, but a bold, progressive, conquering band of crusaders. More than silver and gold, more than eloquence in oratory, more than programs and cathedrals, do we need the living, sanctifying, empowering Christ in our midst.

Central Holiness Camp Meeting.

I am glad to know that arrangements are going forward for a great, good camp meeting at Wilmore, July 25 to August 4. Write to Prof. W. D. Turkington, Wilmore, Ky., for information you desire with reference to cottages, hotel, or whatever you wish to know.

We have a great force of workers for the coming camp, C. W. Ruth, C. F. Wimberly for preachers, and for the young people's work, Mrs. S. C. Cox and husband, whom we do not believe can be surpassed with such work. We are hearing good reports of the coming camp. Fortunately we have been able to secure for the leaders of the song service, Prof. Kenneth Wells and wife. They will be a bit new to Central Kentucky and will be heard with great delight and real spiritual benefit. Pray for the meeting and arrange to be present.

Your brother,

Don't fail to send us two or more new subscribers on our 50 cent offer. See page 16 for what it means.

OUR FIFTY CENT OFFER!

We earnestly appeal to all of our subscribers to help us at this time; interest your friends, get their subscriptions. As you know, the price from now to January 1, 1930 is only fifty cents. Inform them that each week the paper will contain a sermon from some able minister of the Gospel, that we are discussing in these columns the most vital questions of Bible doctrine, religious experience and Christian activity, that we are preaching Jesus, the Son of God, the Saviour of men, who died and is alive forevermore, whose mighty power and inexhaustible resources of life make possible the salvation of all men from all sin who may here and now repent and believe for pardon, or consecrate and believe for the cleansing which is provided in his precious, all-atoning blood.

Come and help us in this good work. Help your fellow-beings. Help your Lord to bring the news of his redemption to a lost world. Help us to sustain and carry forward the great work in which we are engaged. Get a blessing for yourself by making yourself a blessing to your fellow-beings. This is your interest as well as ours, and it is with your co-operation that this great idea can be carried to success. The loyalty of our friends has never been questioned; our sincerity in our work has never been doubted, we are sure. Let us co-operate in this campaign to scatter full salvation literature over the land, and thus you will enjoy the blessings which shall attend our efforts.

Our evangelists, like the pioneers of old, are entering the "unexplored" regions, proclaiming the blessed truth of full salvation for all men from all sin, and meeting with good results. But ask any of them what would have been accomplished had their evangelistic tours been preceded by holiness literature and the people presented the truth and the community prepared to receive the preaching of it? They would answer, in one accord, that they would have labored under more pleasant and encouraging environments, and that their efforts would have been far more largely rewarded. Thus we can appreciate the importance of sending holiness literature to eradicate prejudice and prepare hearts for the preaching of full salvation. You know The Herald, that it stands in the open, fearless in its purpose, radical in its principles, and reasonable in its declarations. Thousands owe their present state of grace directly or indirectly to The Herald. But we need you to help us get The Herald to the people. It can be done! Let each of us prove our worth, and have our name recorded as one who helped in this great and noble work.

TOUCHING THE SORE SPOT.

ONE of the most beautiful and appealing attributes of our great God, as revealed in the Holy Scriptures, is his deep and abiding interest in the poor. How frequently this fact is brought to view, both in Old and New Testament writings! How remarkable this teaching of the Old Testament, "He that hath pity on the poor, lendeth to the Lord." It reads as if God put himself under an obligation of indebtedness to those who help the poor.

Jesus gives as one of the credentials of his Messiahship that "the poor have the gospel preached unto them." It is necessary to give for many things—the erection of schools, churches, and various philanthropic institutions, but we have a feeling that the giving which especially appeals to our God is that which touches the sore spot of actual human suffering.

Lying here on my bed in the Baptist Hospital in Louisville, going through the most intense physical suffering I have ever experienced, I have thought much of the physical agony in our world. This great hospital is full of suffering, from little children born with misshapen limbs, to old people fighting out their last battles of life in agony which tests and drains all their powers of resistance.

Then my mind has changed to mental suffering, and somehow, there has come up before me, time and again, the work of Berachah Home at Arlington, Texas, under the control and direction of James Upchurch and his wife. I have thought of the young girls who have been courted, loved, and been deceived and have awakened to their sad and awful ruin, who have gone out into the wide world homeless and hopeless who, under the mercy of God, have found Berachah Home. How many of these girls have been converted, sanctified, educated, developed into fine, intelligent women, and become useful members of society. If there is any greater work going on in this world than that at Berachah under the leadership of the Holy Spirit, through the instrumentality of Brother Upchurch and his wife, and their co-workers, I know nothing of it. This is a great work. To send a contribution to Rev. J. T. Upchurch, Arlington, Texas, to help carry forward this good work, is to "touch the sore spot." This hits the target of deepest human need. It throws the lifeline to those who are really sinking. You become a link in the chain that brings and binds some poor, broken-hearted sufferer to the Lord Jesus.

Berachah Home at Arlington, Texas, for the rescue of fallen girls, is a place that I cannot understand. I have been there often and preached at their annual meeting, but I found it almost impossible to realize where I was. I could but feel I was preaching at the Commencement exercises of some female college. The blessed Trinity has worked wonders there. The power of the gospel is so demonstrated before your very eyes that you walk about feeling as if you were spending a little while on some other planet, or in some other realm where the spirit of humility, forgiveness, and divine love penetrated the very atmosphere.

This place needs enlargement, and a more generous support in order that it may receive and give help to more poor souls that are beaten by the storms of sin, and longing to find rest at the Berachah Home of hope.

Sitting on my bedside here a few days ago, one of the greatest surgeons in this state or city, told me plainly that in my broken down and exhausted condition of health the operation necessary for my recovery was impossible. I assured him that I had expected nothing else but such a decision. The doctor believed that my suffering could be greatly alleviated and, possibly, my life extended, and I am grateful to say that since that time my pain is far less, and I seem to have some returning vigor. Whatever the result may be, I have longed to write this appeal for the great work of this rescue home at Arlington, Texas.

Since I was taken sick some nine months ago, several friends have sent me small donations amounting to, perhaps, $35 or $40 all told. I do not want any donations of financial character of any sort sent to me. The Lord is taking gracious care of me. But I do wish that a host of the readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD would lift up a humble prayer for me and, at the same time, send a check, large as convenient, to Rev. J. T. Upchurch, Arlington, Texas, for the care of poor, deceived girls, broken hearted and homeless, seeking a home at Berachah where so many have found an open door, a Christian welcome, a saving and sanctifying Christ, and the beginning of a useful and happy life. God has a promise for blessing for those who, in the true spirit of Christian love, touch this sore spot.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

It would shock me beyond words to express if I knew that any of my nieces would stoop so low as to smoke a cigarette; but what about my nephews? I trust none of them have been caught in this snare; but if so, it is not too late to quit and give yourselves to clean living. We are inclined not to look upon the cigarette habit as being very bad, but I think after you shall have read the following you will see that they play a large part in the destruction of your mind and heart's best aspirations.

Partners!

Said a whisky flask to a cigarette, "I'd like to make a good sized bet That I can get more scalps than you, Although your victims aren't so few." Said the cigarette to the whisky flask, "Well, that's as easy as I could ask, For I give kids their downward start, Then you pitch in and do your part. They come to you with burning thirst, But I'm the fellow that sees 'em first; So most of them should count for me. I'll take the bet, it's a cinch, dy'e see?"

Then the whisky flask had this to say, "I never looked at the thing that way, But I confess you spoke the truth; 'Tis you that tackles the foolish youth. You fill his system with dokey smoke, I mould him into a first-class soak; We work together far too well To quarrel for even a spell." So the whisky flask and the cigarette Shook hands together and offered the bet,

And away they sauntered side by side Hunting for victims far and wide: In every corner of the nation. Partners in crime and ruination. So here's our warning, on the level, Shun them as you would shun the devil.

Lovingly,
AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As a few old people write for page 10, I wish to add my little bit, and I hope you will deem it worthy to appear on page 10. Your letter of January 2 was a great inspiration to me. I am nearly 70 years old, and have very good health. I live on a five acre farm in the state of Washington with a brother and son. I raise some poultry, and do all the cooking and house work. I gave my heart to Jesus when young; in after years I backslid, but last fall I had an opportunity to attend some revival meetings at Orchards, Wash., conducted by Rev. C. F. Wimberly. I was very glad to meet him as I had always read and liked all his writings. He is a man filled with the Holy Spirit. He did great good at this camp meeting, for it was there that I prayed through, and was filled with the Holy Spirit. Oh, what a glorious change there was in my life. I was born again; the old life was washed clean. I had not realized that such a complete change could be possible in my life; even the books and papers I had liked to read were nothing to me. This evangelistic camp meeting was last August, 1928. I promised God I would write my testimony to The Pentecostal Herald to be published. I always pray God to bless and keep Dr. C. F. Wimberly. I'll never forget as he clasped my hand and said, "God bless you," for I felt sure that God in his mercy had received me and I shall continue in the blessed way the few years he lets me live. I love to read everything in The Pentecostal Herald; have been a subscriber several years. I was so glad to read the two sermons by Rev. C. F. Wimberly. I thank God Dr. H. C. Morrison has so far recovered from his long illness as to be able to preach. How I wish I might hear him. God bless you, Aunt Bettie, and Dr. Morrison.

Mrs. C. A. Messenger.
Vancouver, Wash.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please make room for an Avon boy twelve years old. I have dark hair. I go to school and am in the sixth grade. My teacher is Mr. Spencer Newman. My middle name starts with B and ends with S. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am in the Intermediate Senior. My Sunday school teacher is Mrs. Aleatha Scarborough. Our pastor is Mr. R. N. Fitts. I like to read page 10. I have not been saved, but I like to read it just the same.

Milton B. Meekins.
Avon, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you cousins please move over and let a Mississippi girl join your band of happy boys and girls? I am a girl seventeen years old. I have blonde hair, blue eyes, am five feet, seven inches tall and weigh one hundred and thirty-four pounds. I go to Sunday school and teach the primary class. Who can guess my second name? It begins with M and ends with T, and has eight letters in it. All you cousins let your letters fly to Helen Bellew.

Rt. 1, Box 60, Saucier, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a Kentucky girl to join your happy band. I was eight years old Dec. 16. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I am three and a half feet tall, I have dark brown hair, brown eyes and weigh about forty-seven pounds. I go to school and am in the first grade. For pets, I have one cat. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking a drive when this letter arrives.

E. May Fry.
Box 42, Moberly, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am seven years old, my birthday is Dec. 1. I have brown hair, brown eyes and weigh forty-nine pounds. I am three feet, eight inches tall. I go to school and am in the first grade. My mama takes The Herald, and thinks it is a fine paper. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking a nap when this letter arrives.

Raymond J. Fry.
Box 42, Moberly, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of cousins? I am four years old, my birthday is Oct. 19. I am three feet tall, have brown hair and brown eyes. For pets I have a dog named Louis. We have a car and I enjoy riding in it. I hope Mr. W. B. is out riding when this arrives.

William H. Fry.
Box 42, Moberly, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second letter to the dear old Herald. Aunt Bettie, please print this if you have room. Albertha Mabel Smalley, the shortest verse in the Bible is "Jesus wept." Joe H. Schaefer, I guess your name to be Howard. Am I right? Elizabeth Niles, I guess your name to be Anne. My mother is dead. My father is married again and I have four brothers and two sisters. What do you cousins do for past time? I like to read. How many of you cousins read the story of "The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston?" in The Herald? I hope Mr. W. B. don't get this letter. Let your letters fly to a cousin.

Fannie Barrett.
Rt. 2, No. 119, Berea, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little North Carolina boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twelve years old and in the fifth grade at school. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am in the Intermediate Senior class. My father takes The Pentecostal Herald and I enjoy reading page 10. Please write to me cousins, and I will answer all I can.

Seth Mull.
Morgantown, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a boy from Kansas join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald, and hope to see it in print. My mother and father have taken The Herald about thirteen years. I always enjoy reading page ten. My father is a Methodist minister. I like to go to church and hear the truth from him or anyone else. It makes me glad to know that so many of the cousins are saved. I like the article you put in The Herald about cigarettes. I do not like them. They will ruin everybody. I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade. My birthday is September 26. My name begins with O and ends with R, and has five letters. Who can guess it? Lucile Johnson, I guess your name is Helen. Elizabeth Viles, to be Anne. Pearl Voas, to be Edna, or Ella. I will try to answer all letters received.

O. Lloyd Matthew.
Cleveland, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother and grandmother take The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald. I am eight years old and go to school every day. I like my teacher fine. I am in the third grade. I live on the Kentucky River. I go to church at Polsgrove. I belong to the Methodist Church. Bro. Marvin Richardson is our pastor. I like to read Aunt Bettie's letters.

Cecil Hodges Dorton.
Polsgrove, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please open the door and admit another Mississippi reader of the dear old Herald into your cozy corner? Say, Bernyce, you promised when you gave the write-up on "Faith," if Mr. W. B. did not get it, you would write another, to the opposite, "What life is without faith." That was so complete, I look every week for it. Nothing can take the place of faith. Men are fixing habits unconsciously day by day morally, physically, mentally. My grandparents on my father's side came from South Carolina and I am interested in anything said about the old state. Jean Baptiste Sully, a French composer, I think composed the first song in 1633. If Mr. W. B. does not get this letter I will try to answer the other two questions next time.

Hellin Burch.
Winchester, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I be one of your happy band of boys and girls? I am a little girl eight years old. I go to the United Brethren Sunday school in Lima. I am in the third grade and go to Washington school. My teacher's name is Miss Elliott. I have one brother and sister. I like to read page ten in The Herald. Please print my letter as it is the first time I have written to you.

Maxine King.
530 E. Vine St., Lima, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old, and in the fourth grade. My little brother and I are staying with our grandma as our mother is dead. She left us three years ago last June. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. I belong to the M. E. Church. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with F and ends with N, and has four letters in it. If you guess it I will write to you. I will answer all letters I receive. My grandma takes The Herald and I like to read page ten.

Virginia F. Randall.
Ft. Sumner, N. M.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wrote once before and Mr. W. B. didn't get my letter so I thought I would write again. I am a Christian and belong to the Methodist Church. I go to church nearly every Sunday and to prayer meeting after Sunday school. My birthday is May 26. Who is my twin? I am twelve years old and in the sixth grade. Mother takes The Herald. I have one brother. I enjoy reading our Boys and Girls' Page very much. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking a nap when this arrives.

Marie Dodge.
Rt. 1, Box 49, Terra Alta, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little North Carolina boy join your band of boys and girls? I am twelve years of age. I belong to the M. E. Church and love to go to Sunday school and church. I go to school and am in the fifth grade. I live in the country and like it fine. For pets, I have a pony, cat, and bantam hen. Joe Schaefer, I guess your middle name to be Harold. I am looking for a letter. We take The Pentecostal Herald and I sure do enjoy reading page ten. As this is my first letter I will close.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. I have never written to The Herald before and I hope to see my letter in print. My grandpa takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I live on a farm, two miles from Lakeville, Ohio, where I attend school. I did not miss one day of school last year and have not missed any this year so far. I attend church and Sunday school at Loudonville, Ohio. I am a member of the M. E. Church. I have a sister seven years younger than myself. My birthday is April 4, and I will be twelve years old. Have I a twin? I have black hair, brown eyes and weigh ninety-nine and one half pounds and I am in the sixth grade. My middle name begins with L and ends with E, and has six letters in it. Can you guess it? Hoping to gain new friends, and thanking you in advance, I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this arrives.

Wava L. Fulmer.
Rt. 2, Lakeville, Ohio.

NOTICE!

A request has been sent in to The Herald for a poor woman whose husband is in the hospital with T. B. She has several small children, whose ages run from four to nine years, also an infant. She wishes clothes for these children and will appreciate any help given. The boys are four and six, and the girl nine years. Send parcels to Mrs. Elmer Wood, Rt. 1, Ivey, Ga.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Evangelist David Wilson, of Binghanton, N. Y., will conduct a seven-day Holiness Convention in the Friends Church of Urbana, Ohio, July 29 to August 4. Other churches are invited. Fred C. Harris, Pastor.

FALLEN ASLEEP

HALL.

William Baker Hall was born near Knoxville, Tenn., in 1840, where he lived until 1885, when he moved to Kansas. After some other changes of location he finally moved about 1905, to the Twin Falls' tract of Idaho, where he resided the remaining years of his life.

For several years he had been actively engaged in a coal business, which he managed until a little more than four months before his death. At this time he became confined to his bed, and his strength gradually failed. Death came to him May 26, 1928.

For the most part, during these months he was lovingly and tenderly cared for by his son, Andrew, and his daughter, Mrs. Addie Bradley. Although his daughter, Mrs. Lulu Stewart, and his daughter, Mrs. Nannie Hoops, had the pleasure of assisting some in the care of their beloved father. Also there were neighbors who so kindly helped.

Father Hall was converted when a boy, and early in life joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, to which he was loyal. But Christ came ahead of his church. He loved the Bible, and had been a devoted student of it from young manhood. He was not only a hearer of the Word, but a doer, also.

To give, according as God had prospered him, gave him great pleasure. Spreading the Gospel and caring for the poor were some of the ways he found to lay up treasure in heaven.

It is so pleasant to recall how he and Mother Hall had their daily family worship, returning thanks unto their Saviour, and asking a blessing upon each of their children and others. Father Hall often ended his prayers thus: "And bring us down, at last, to our graves in peace." His praying did not cease when he became bedfast, but many of his moments were spent in prayer.

He so much wanted God's people to all be in harmony at this place, and souls to be saved. To this end he felt that a regular prayer meeting and a deaconess for the church here, who would go in love, and speak to people about their souls and their Saviour, were two needed steps.

Towards the close of his life he expressed, as at other times, the greatest desire of his life: that the rest of his children give their lives to God.

He so often spoke of wanting to go home to glory, and for his sake we are glad his desire was granted, but we miss him so much.

He is survived by five sons, we believe: John of Los Angeles, Calif., Brose, of Long Beach, Calif., Newton, of Twin Falls, Idaho, Andrew and William C., both of Murtaugh, Idaho, also six daughters: Mrs. Nannie Hoops, of Emmett, Idaho, Mrs. Lulu Stewart, of Lebanon, Ore., Mrs. Addie Bradley, of Murtaugh, Idaho, Mrs. Iva Smith, Gertrude and May all of Long Beach, Calif.

Brother Paul Worcester had charge of the funeral services, which were held in the old home in Murtaugh, where a large crowd gathered to pay their respect to one who had lived honestly among them, and proved by his daily actions that he loved Jesus.

Beneath many beautiful flowers his body was laid to rest in the Twin Falls cemetery, by the side of that of his beloved wife, Susan Elizabeth, who fell asleep in Jesus, April 2, 1917.

We like to think of when his grave will be opened when Jesus returns and calls forth the righteous dead.

His daughter,
Nellie Hall.

LOGUE.

John Franklin Logue was born at Wetmore, Kan., Sept. 10, 1871. Died at Nampa, Idaho, May 31, 1929.

In 1897 he moved with his parents and three brothers to Kay county, Okla., where he was united in marriage to Willie Elizabeth Whitworth. To this union was born one son.

In January of this year, Mr. Logue contracted influenza. After only partial recovery he went back in the service of the Oregon Short Line, having been employed by this company for more than ten years.

His energy was greater than his endurance, and as a consequence he was soon a patient, again, in the hospital, where he spent a number of weary weeks, through distress from kidney and heart trouble.

During his illness he was so patient and uncomplaining that it was touching to the hearts of those who lovingly and tenderly watched over him.

Mr. Logue was kind and generous, willing to sacrifice himself for the comfort or pleasure of others.

He was converted many years ago, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church.

His thoughts were much on Eternal things, throughout his sickness, and he communed much with his Saviour. He believed in God's goodness, and felt that his illness was permitted because of God's love.

We were so saddened when we learned that his gentle spirit had taken its flight, but we rejoice that his suffering is ended.

He is survived by his wife and son, Lyndell, also a brother, Robert Logue, of Glendale, Arizona, and a sister, Mrs. Addie Schumaker, of Wetmore, Kan.

Funeral services were in charge of Rev. Chas. W. Ronk. He used for the scripture reading the 90th Psalm, and as his text 2 Sam. 14:14. The hymns sung were "Lead Kindly Light," and "Nearer My God to Thee." The floral offerings were beautiful.

His body was laid to rest in the beautiful Twin Falls cemetery, to await the resurrection morn.

Gone, his Redeemer to behold, All earth's sorrows forever ended, Safe and happy in the fold.

I'm sure, some day, through God's grace,

If to heaven our way we've wended, We shall see, again, our loved one's face.

Nellie Whitworth Hall.

GONE HOME.

Since writing last for The Herald I have been passing through deep waters. My dear, loving, sainted wife passed away at Statesville, N. C., on Monday afternoon, May 27, three hours after an operation in the Davis hospital for gall bladder and gall stone trouble. It was a great shock to me; and had it not been for the presence of God to comfort, strengthen and uphold me it seems that I would have been utterly cast down. However, I can say with the sainted Wesley, "The best of all is, God is with us."

Dear Lela was my greatest source of earthly comfort and helpfulness. She was a faithful companion, a kind, tender, noble mother and a sweet-spirited Christian. Our married life was only a little over eight and a half years, but it was the happiest, most blessed and contented period of my life. Oh, the many times she prayed for me! Oftentimes she prayed this prayer: "Now Lord, bless me and Walter. Help him that he may not become discouraged."

Before her departure she told me she was ready to go. This is a great and wonderful comfort. It enables us to look up and renew our determination to go through with Jesus. I have a new interest in heaven now, since the dearest person to my heart has gone up there to be with Jesus.

Her home-going leaves me with four children, the oldest past seven and the youngest, sweet little Edith, scarcely six months old. Oh, the responsibility! One of wife's sisters has little Edith and may keep her. She will be as near a mother to her as anybody on earth.

I desire an interest in the prayers of the great Herald family at this sad and trying hour. Pray for my dear little motherless children, and pray for me that I may be a greater preacher of full salvation, and a greater soul-winner than ever before. May God bless you, one and all.

Faithfully and sadly,
Rev. Walter E. Isenhour.

REQUEST FOR PRAYER.

I request prayer of The Herald family that my daughter may be restored to health. Her Mother.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IV.—July 28, 1929.

Subject.—The Story of Daniel. Dan. 1:1-4; 1:19, 20; 2:17-24.

Golden Text.—They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever.—Dan. 12:3.

Time.—B. C. 606 to B. C. 534.

Place.—Babylonia.

Introduction.—There is possibly no more charming piece of literature than the prophecy of Daniel. Notwithstanding all the assaults of boastful and shallow scholarship in these modern days, the book still stands intact. It has been almost a complete outline of the salient points of history during the last 2500 years.

Daniel was carried captive to Babylon immediately after Nebuchadnezzar's first siege of Jerusalem about 606 B. C. It was in the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim. Be careful to distinguish this king from his son, Jehoiachin, who came to the throne of Judah after his father's death.

It is supposed that Daniel was of royal blood, and that he belonged to the house of king David; but of this there is no good historic proof. He was quite young when carried to Babylon—probably not more than twelve or fourteen years of age; albeit, this is only a guess. One fine thing I note about this boy Daniel and his three close companions, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego: they stood like flint against all compromise with heathenism. The training of some Jewish parents produced children that were samples for all ages. Joseph sold into Egyptian slavery. Moses adopted into Pharaoh's court, and these four young Hebrews, in Babylonian slavery and exile, cannot be surpassed among men for clean morality and manly deportment. We build monuments to our heroes; but the children of such parents are monuments more enduring than any marble or granite shaft that ever pierced the sky. If they could do such work against such hopeless odds, there is no excuse for parents who fail.

Daniel, the slave-boy, went into public office solely from the standpoint of ability. At the very first test, he was more than a match for all the so-called wise men of Babylon. That put him in the king's gate, and made him governor over the entire province of Babylon. Belshazzar made him third ruler in his kingdom when he found him superior to all his wise men. Darius honored him with high office, making him the greatest of the three sub-rulers in the empire. All these and more honors and responsibilities were heaped upon him; but not once did he fail to measure up to the highest standard of integrity. It would seem almost a sacrilege to draw even so much as a contrast between Daniel and some of the rascals who have been entrusted with high office in the City of Washington. No man can point the finger of scorn against this captive Hebrew; but if some of the "oily rogues" who have disgraced our nation had justice they would spend the next century behind iron bars. It is a joy to know that the nation has many noble men in high office; but rascals will leave a stain upon our national history that will make our children blush for shame.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. The third year of . . . Jehoiakim.—Doom was now beginning to fall upon Jerusalem for her sins. Besieged it.—The city had a wall around it, and the implements of war in that day were not strong enough to break through with the speed of modernistic warfare. Whereupon the Babylonian army camped around the city until the inhabitants were starved into submission.

2. The Lord gave Jehoiakim into his hand.—The whole city went with the king. Jehovah forsook them, and delivered them into the hand of their enemy. To be forsaken of God is hell on earth. Land of Shinar.—The Hebrew name of Babylon.

3. Ashpenaz.—This man was an important personage in Babylon, as this verse shows. Of the king's seed.—Here we find the reason for supposing that Daniel belonged to the royal family.

4. The Babylonians must have known that there was some fine talent among the Jews. But the standard set up for the selection of these young fellows was tremendously high to be made by a heathen nation. It would sift some of our present-day colleges. Those young men were to be trained for honorable office in the nation.

19. The king communed with them.—The word is mild and friendly, but the verse sounds much like a severe examination. I suppose this examination by the king came after Ashpenaz had made his selection from among all the young captives.

20. Ten times better.—They had profited well by whatever teaching their Babylonian instructors had imparted to them. The teachers may have been good, but the pupils were better. We must not lose sight of the fact that these boys were specially guided and inspired by the Divine Spirit.

17. Then Daniel went to his house.—There was some dwelling place provided for him and his three friends. Daniel lays the case before them, and they come to the real test of prayer. The next verse shows that all their lives were to be snuffed out with those of the other wise men.

19. The secret revealed in a vision.—This was one of Jehovah's favorite ways of making things known to his intimate followers. The revelation came to Daniel in a dream. So God talked to Joseph, the foster father of Jesus.

20-23. Daniel's doxology of praise to God for his answer to the prayers of himself and his friends is beautiful. The very manliness of the young man rings in every word of it. While he seems to express himself with perfect ease, and with no embarrassment, there is no undue familiarity and no boasting.

24. Arioch.—He was the king's executioner; but Daniel could face him now, for he had heard direct from the King of kings. Daniel pleads, but his plea is almost a command: "Destroy not the wise men of Babylon." "Put up your ax: I have heard from heaven." "Bring me in before the king, and I will shew unto the king the interpretation." How courageous a man grows when God speaks to him.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

The National Association has their annual camp meeting at Louisville, Tenn., Sept. 1. Rev. C. M. Dunaway is the preacher, and Brother and Sister Phillips, of Wichita, Kan., the singers. Address Mrs. Walter D. Fouché, Sec., Louisville, Tenn.

Ivan H. Smith: "Since receiving the blessing of sanctification at Indian Springs camp meeting five years ago, I have been a constant student of the Bible and feel called to the ministry. Any one needing assistance in revival work, I shall be glad to help them. Address me, 993 W. View Drive, Atlanta, Ga."

J. B. Kendall and singer began a union tent meeting at Greenup, Ky., July 14. Rev. Kendall has an open date beginning August 1. Write or wire him at Lexington, Ky.

Rev. and Mrs. G. S. Pollock who resided in Wilmore to educate their son in Asbury College, have moved to Freedom, Pennsylvania, where Bro. Pollock is serving as pastor of the M. E. Church. They have a splendid, almost new, six-room bungalow near Asbury College on a fine, level lot which they will sell at cost to any good person desiring a modern home in the good town of Wilmore. Description and price furnished on application. Address Rev. G. S. Pollock, 461 Parkway, Freedom, Pa.

Three of our tent workers have recently held meetings at Ludville, Ga., in which much good was done. One man attended who had not been in church for three years. Their second meeting in Oakman, Ga., was very good. The people were hungry for the gospel. Their third meeting was at Dallas, Ga., and they have engagements for others in that state. They report much interest and some salvations in all of their meetings.

The annual meeting of the Mooers, N. Y., camp will be held at Mooers, N. Y., July 27 to August 11. They are fortunate in having Revs. John F. Knapp and C. W. Ruth, Rev. John Thomas and wife, Rev. John Scobie, Mrs. Tillie Albright, as workers. Rev. Arthur Gould will have charge of the music, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Biglow at the pianos. Under the blessing of God, this corps of workers and your attendance at this camp can be the greatest camp that Mooers has ever seen. Address Kenneth F. Fee, Mooers, N. Y., for information.

Rev. Robert Chung, an old Asbury College Graduate who recently returned to Korea, is the conference evangelist of that part of the country. He has had marvelous success in his meetings. A meeting in Wonsan resulted in 500 being saved and sanctified, among them being 18 preachers and Bible women. In Central M. E. Church in Seoul 70 families came to the Lord. In Soowon union meeting of the M. E. Church and Oriental Missionary Society 100 were sanctified. In Yuchu meeting 110 were definitely blessed, among them fifty preachers and Bible women. This was a district meeting. Tongchun meeting of the M. E. Church, South, 400 were sanctified and Korean Holiness Band organized. The total is 1160 souls who have been blessed through these meetings. Pray for Brother Chung, that he may be a firebrand in that needy harvest field.

Miss Imogene Quinn has July and August open for calls. She will go anywhere as preacher and singer. Address her 909 N. Tuxedo St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Rev. T. J. Adams recently closed a good meeting at Henryetta, Okla., in which God's power was greatly manifested. Brother Fred Canady will labor with Brother Adams this season. If you wish a revival give these brethren a call. Address, Rev. T. J. Adams, 808 West 6th St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

The Mission Camp will hold their meeting at Tannehill's Grove, midway between Cecil and Canonsburg, Pa., July 18-28. Workers: Rev. D. E. Wilson, Alvin Young, and Chas. Embrey.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Anderson, Plainville, Kan., singers and chorus leaders, are open for calls to do evangelistic work. Brother Anderson also plays the trombone and leads young people's meetings. They are members of the West Kansas Conference and are available for meetings from August 1 to Sept. 10.

Don't fail to send us some new subscribers on the 50 cent offer.

BETHANY, LOUISIANA.

On account of continued rains the committee thought it best not to have a tent, therefore secured the school building in which to hold the revival.

Rev. H. S. Johns, who for twenty years, has been chaplain of the Louisiana Penitentiary, pastor together with Mr. B. M. Alexander, chairman arrangement committee, did all in their power to make the meeting a success. The power of the Holy Spirit was present from the beginning in convicting power. Many have been blest and a number have united with the Methodist and Baptist churches.

A movement to build an addition to the church was launched. All over the country there is a great lack of Bible reading. A storehouse of treasures is the Word of God, able to build and sustain, yet we are still searching for these precious truths.

W. E. Thomas.

NOBLESVILLE, INDIANA.

Wife and I left Green Cove Springs, Fla., May 1. We stopped at Kingswood, Ky., and held a meeting with the student body and had a splendid meeting. We went to Indiana, my old stamping ground for 25 years, and in which state I built twenty-one holiness churches. In my first meeting they came for forty miles. They would greet me with "Don't you know me? I was converted under your ministry twenty-five years ago and still shouting the victory." In those days they were young people, but now they are frostbitten, gray haired, but the same smile and shout. I shall stay as long as possible, but must leave for Spring Lake, Texas, where I built a church twenty-one years ago, forty-five miles from the railroad. I am fully persuaded that nothing but the old time mourner's bench revival is the kind.

Yours in the fight,
A. D. Buck and Wife.

GREETINGS!

It has been some time since I have reported in The Herald, but am glad to tell you that Jesus saves from all sin. I am engaged in evangelistic work this year and have recently held meetings in Junction City, Kan., and Valparaiso, Ind., for the Nazarene people. God gave victory in both meetings and many souls were blest. The pastors were fine men to labor with and stood by us in preaching the old-time gospel. At present, I am with Rev. H. J. Sutton, pastor of the Primitive Methodist Church at Boone, Ia. I have never met people who are more zealous for souls.

Yours in Christ,
C. Preston Roberts.

MT. STERLING, KENTUCKY.

We recently held a meeting in the courthouse at Mt. Sterling, Ky., in which Rev. Andrew Johnson did the preaching. All who heard him were interested in his sermons and many testified to the fact of the inspiration they had derived from them. Four professed conversion and one young man was called to the ministry. This was a great meeting and those who failed to attend missed a great spiritual feast. Brother Johnson is sound in doctrine and carries a passion for souls. We ought to keep him busy in the Kentucky Conference the year round. He is not only a great preacher but a great teacher and leader.

Brother Richard Clark was a great blessing to the meeting and Rev. Logsdon and Dr. Combs also rendered valuable assistance. The writer had charge of the preliminaries and leading the singing. May the Lord bless The Pentecostal Herald.

C. H. Caswell

ONE LIGHTED TORCH.

Only recently it was my good fortune to sit in company with my wife and four friends and hear a wonderful testimony. A mother is speaking:

"We grew up in a church that never lays emphasis on heartfelt Christian experiences, but rather on confirmation. One of my daughters went away to work in the home of a live-wire Christian. The family invited and urged her to attend revival meetings that were in progress, but she was proud and refused to go. Such a thing as a revival had never concerned her or her parents or grandparents.

"After she had been in the home a week she began slipping out after the family had gone to church and would quietly enter the church, sit in the back seat, and after the service would hurry back home so the family would not know that she had been to the meeting. This continued for a week, and as she heard the preaching of the unsearchable riches of Christ, and saw many happy conversions, the Holy Ghost brought her under very deep conviction, and one night she left the back seat and went to the altar, where she prayed through to blessed victory in Jesus Christ.

"Now that her torch had been lighted she immediately wrote home to father, mother, brothers and sisters. Deep conviction came upon them and they sent for her that she might tell them how to be saved. One of the brothers said to a neighbor boy, 'Come, let us go to the woods to pray. I want for myself what my sister has.' They went to the woods together and were both blessedly saved.

"Just at that time an evangelist opened a tent revival meeting in the immediate neighborhood. The mother, sister, and younger brother were saved. The younger brother is now in a great Christian college, preparing to preach the gospel."

Thus this one girl, lighting her torch from the light of Jesus, was able to light many other torches. Jesus said of his people: "Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." He then graciously added: "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature." This message is not alone for preachers and missionary, but for every blood-cleansed layman. We must go with our prayers, earnest, prevailing prayers. We must go with our money, giving until the giving is sacrificial. Those who can and will go have a right to expect us who remain at home to support the work they are doing. "Ye are the light of the world." We simply must light other torches. The work must go on in an endless chain way.

Edward D. Fellers, Evangelist.

TESTIMONIAL.

I wish to say that Bro. Herbert McNeese, New Brighton, Pa., is a young man whom God has called to preach. He is safe and sound. Give him a call.

Rev. O. F. King.

Elder in Nazarene Church, New Brighton, Pa.

Central Holiness Camp Meeting

Wilmore, Kentucky.

July 25th to August 4th

Rev. C. W. Ruth, Rev. C. F. Wimberly, and Rev. H. C. Morrison will be the preachers. Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Box will have charge of the Children's and Young People's meetings. Prof. Kenneth and Eunice Wells will have charge of the music.

Let all the people rally to this time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Write to Mrs. O. C. Garvey for rooms in the women's dormitory, to Mrs. W. F. Wyatt, for reservations in the Men's dormitory. The W. C. T. U. will have charge of the dining hall, which means that first class meals will be yours at a very reasonable price.

Ministers entertained free.

Remember the date, July 25 to August 4, and don't fail to be with us. Write Prof. W. D. Turkington, Wilmore, Ky., for information relative to the camp meeting.

Asbury College— A Full Salvation School

"In the Heart of the far-famed Blue Grass"

LEWIS ROBESON AKERS, President

A STANDARD COSMOPOLITAN "A" GRADE COLLEGE enrolling students from forty states and ten foreign countries. One hundred and fourteen A. B. graduates in the class of '29. Recognized as "A" grade by the University of Kentucky and the Kentucky Department of Education. Member Association of Kentucky Colleges and Universities. Member Association of American Colleges.

A DYNAMIC CENTER OF SPIRITUAL POWER for those contemplating Christian service at home or abroad, but furnishing basic courses for the regular professions of life. Asbury College is noted throughout the nation for its fidelity to Methodist standards. Its good fellowship and spiritual atmosphere are unusual.

THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS provides fourteen majors leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree, in Classics, French and German, Spanish, English, Education, History, Philosophy, Political and Social Science, Biology, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Fine Arts, and Religious Education.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION supervised by accomplished and experienced teachers, master pupils of Percy Grainger and Joseph LeVhinné.

ART DEPARTMENT. Vivian May Norris, Director, Member of the Art Students' League, A. M. I., an illustrator of America's leading periodicals.

EDUCATION. Special attention given to this Department by two highly trained Graduate teachers, with a view to meeting various state requirements.

HOME ECONOMICS. Splendidly equipped quarters with latest scientific electric apparatus.

EQUIPMENT. One of the latest and best equipped colleges in the State. Commodious brick buildings including three dormitories for young men, one of the finest Memorial Halls in the South housing three hundred young women. New water system, electrical conveniences, beautiful campus lighted by a "white way," New Memorial Library of 40,000 volume capacity, New Auditorium, seating 2,000, New Four Manual Memorial Pipe Organ.

ENVIRONMENT. Sixteen miles south of Lexington on main line of Southern Railway and near L. & N. main lines. Altitude 1,000 feet. One of the most healthful towns of the State, population, 2,000, with no pool rooms, moving pictures, or other demoralizing influences. Total expenses for the school year $430.00. School begins September 18.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" is sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

BETHEL ACADEMY

(Chartered under Asbury College)

What Would It Mean to Put THE HERALD Into 10,000 New Homes?

1. It would mean 40,000 souls touched by the soul-stirring articles, reports, sermons, etc., every week.
2. It would mean a mighty progress in the spread of scriptural holiness over this country.
3. It would mean the enlightening of the people on the dangerous heresies that are being so widely propagated in our schools and churches.
4. It would be an inspiration to thousands to live a higher and holier life.
5. It would mean 160,000 pages of Full Salvation literature sent all over the land to be read, re-read and passed on every week.
6. The good that would be accomplished would be incalculable.
7. Won't you be one to help bring this to pass by sending for sample copies of THE HERALD, showing them to your neighbor and urging them to subscribe on our Special Offer of 50 cents from now until January 1, 1930?

Won't you be one of ten thousand who write us today, enclosing at least two subscribers on this liberal offer? Or better still, how about investing $5.00 of your tithe money in sending THE HERALD into ten homes for the remainder of the year? By so doing, this defender of the faith will be warning the people of the dangerous destructive criticism so popular today, and urge them to a life of separation from the world, and the importance of cleaving to the faith of our fathers which is seeking to be destroyed by the enemies of the Bible.

Dear Reader, if there ever was a time for you to rally to THE HERALD in its defense of the faith, that time is now! Let us hear from you immediately, with the names and address of friends who will subscribe through your solicitation, or by sending some of your tithe with the names of those whom you know will be blessed by reading THE HERALD.

We are counting on YOU to help us in the great work of spreading the Gospel of a Full Salvation among people who are perishing for the bread of life.

Yours for the Old Gospel,

H. C. Morrison

IS THIS THE PRAYERLESS AGE?

By Dr. L. R. Akers

WE are writing these words in a tent of the South Dakota Holiness Association at the Mitchell camp, as we labor with Bro. C. W. Ruth and others. We cannot but be impressed by certain commendable characteristics of this camp. First of all it is truly interdenominational. Here are gathered together in the finest spirit of unity—Methodists, Free Methodists, Wesleyan Methodists, Nazarenes, Pilgrims, and others who believe with all their hearts that "without holiness no man shall see the Lord," and who are banded together in a common purpose to proclaim the glorious gospel of a full and complete redemption for all men everywhere.

While there is a distinct place for the holiness sects yet we are of the opinion that if the holiness movement is to be worldwide in its sweep we must continue to encourage and to push the interdenominational colleges, camp meetings, and conventions for here, as in other agencies, "In unity there is strength."

* * * *

We note at this camp a hide tide of spirituality and scarcely a single service of the meeting has been fruitless. For the harmonious accord and effective results which are evident to all who attend—there is a reason. Carefully analyzing the various elements making up the life of the camp one thing stands out pre-eminently above all other considerations—the spirit of intercessory prayer. Prayer may be roughly divided into three classes. First, the prayer of Communion. This means being on the sweetest and most intimate terms with God. Such is the prayer often used by the psalmist and typified by such frequent expressions as "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me praise his holy name." A prayer of thankfulness, of good fellowship, of closest relationship.

* * * *

Then there is the second and most common form of prayer—that of petition. This is used by all who pray at all. Too often it is the only type of prayer used. There are those who are perfectly willing to use God but unwilling for God to use them. They will go to God in a pinch and after the crisis is over forget him until the next emergency arises. The only part God plays in some lives is that of a glorified Santa Claus. He is looked upon as one who dispenses favors, gives gifts, mostly material, and the real vital and eternal values of this blessed relationship are overlooked, which accounts for the spiritual impoverishment of so many lives. We seem to be living in a Canaan land of material blessings but in a Sahara desert as to real godliness and humble, sacrificial, joyous, wholehearted service.

* * * *

The third form of prayer is intercession. This is the climax of prayer. It is instanced by such examples as Abraham pleading for Sodom, Moses throwing himself between God and rebellious Israel. Love's climactic is found in the prayer of Christ for his ene-

GET BUSY.

We would that every member of our great Herald family would get busy at once, and send us at least two subscribers on our trial FIFTY CENT offer from now until January, 1930. This is a small favor to ask of those who enjoy The Herald's weekly visits, but if every one would respond it would mean about fifty thousand new subscribers for The Herald. Many of you would like to do something for Dr. Morrison, but as you are too far to give the "cup of cold water," you can gladden his dear old heart by helping to swell The Herald's subscription list. I am sure it is in your heart to do this, but will you do it, or simply neglect it! Let's see! Sincerely yours, mies while on the cross, and in Stephen for his murderers as he was stoned to death. Revealed here is a great principle in the government of God. We are sparing others or we are being spared because of others. It may be the prayer of a little child that keeps back a thunderbolt from our midst; a godly mother may be a dike holding back a flood-gate of God's wrath against a depraved and wicked household. Only intercession can save this world from overthrow. When intercessory praying declines the world's woes increase. It should be a sobering thought to know that if we fail in our interest in, and praying for, those who know not God, that through our indifference precious souls, blood bought, may be cast forever on the cinder heap of the universe. "Am I my brother's keeper?" was the sullen and rebellious question of Cain and down through the centuries God has ceased not to answer in the affirmative. "Bear ye one another's burden" applies most truly to the burden of prayer which every devout Christian should carry for a lost and dying race.

Mrs. H. C. Morrison.

* * * *

Prayer is the lifeblood of the Christian religion. Blood is life, and life cannot exist without blood. The vital necessity of prayer as a part of the very warp and woof of the spiritual life is shown by the frequency with which it is enjoined in the word and the many examples shown, together with the implicit directions given as to the manner and methods of praying. We have heard of the different ages in the story of human progress. The Stone Age, the Bronze Age, the Golden Age, and the like. This is called the age of science, the age of invention, but alas! it is also "The Prayerless Age," and, because it is a prayerless age, it is a powerless age, and because it is a powerless age it is a godless age. It would seem that the multitudes have laid the Ten Commandments on the table by a two-thirds majority and most of them would be willing to bow God out of his own world, for in the worship of material things they feel they are getting along very well without him. The truth is no man is getting on well without Jesus Christ. More necessary than sight to the eye, sound to the ear, or blood to the heart is Jesus Christ to the souls of men, but if his rightful claim upon life and service is acknowledged in human society it will come only through the medium of prayer.

Prevailing prayer is always the prayer of faith. Science is the prose of life. Religion is the poetry and beauty of life. But science is only a moon, and philosophy only a star, while faith is the sun that blesses with warmth, light, and life.

"What if God didn't save you?" asked an unbeliever of a devout and consecrated old man. "Then he would be the greatest loser" replied the old man. "How is that?" said the unbeliever. "I would lose my life but he would lose his character," was the reply. "For he has promised to save all who come unto him in the name of his Son Jesus Christ." Our faith however must not be in our prayer but in God's faithfulness. Faith is not a confession of our merit but of our demerit.

* * * *

Without doubt the greatest need of the present age is a mighty revival of old-time Holy Ghost religion. We hear of our need of a great navy, great banks, great colleges, great corporations, but the greatest need is an old-fashioned mourner's bench that will stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific and another one to cross it at right angles from the lakes to the gulf. This would form a cross of power that would bring America back to spiritual normalcy and to God. The death stupor upon the church today may be illustrated by a census taken some time ago in Brooklyn, known as the city of churches. Four hundred official members were interviewed as to the matter of family prayer and not a single one was found to have regular worship in his home. What hope have we for the church of tomorrow when men of today have ceased to pray. "The American college students' ignorance of the Bible is universal, profound and complete," wrote a Japanese student to his people at home. Is not this a terrible indictment of present day spiritual dearth. Prayerless homes are the undertakers of America.

* * * *

Before the sinner will turn over his bankrupt soul to him who can save and restore, the church of the living God must go back upon its knees and tarry long before him. It is the prayerless church that soon makes an empty church. Was it not John McNeil who said sadly, "I have a church full of empty pews and holy memories."

"And they stood and watched him there"—these are almost the cruelest words in Holy writ. Christ was dying in agony—but they only stood and watched him. And if we do not agonize in prayer, if we do not give heart, passion, and life, to the struggles of the righteous, we do but mock the agony of our dying Lord. Today's supreme tragedy is Christianity without a cross. A prayerless religion is a crossless religion; a crossless religion is a Christless religion. Ever are the words of Christ ringing down the centuries—"If any man would come after me let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." Only the pathway of prayer leads to the heights of God and the crown of life that fadeth not away.

THE WAYS OF THE SPIRIT IN MANY LANDS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

In Asiatic lands they believe in spirits, but they are evil spirits! It is amusing, as well as tragic, to see the tricks the people seek to play on the spirits to deceive them; for instance, they will put a ring around a boy's neck in order to make the spirits think that he is a girl, as girls are not worth much in these lands; and if the spirits do them evil it does not matter much. In funerals they will shoot off firecrackers in order to scare away the spirits.

One thing that distinguishes the Christian religion from all others is the fact of the Holy Spirit, and that our God—the God of the Bible—is a Holy God! It is in such lands as China that the holiness of God needs to be preached, and taught, and enforced.

I. MARKS OF A TRUE REVIVAL. JOEL 2:28-30.

In 1910 a revival broke out among the churches on the Fen River, China, and some of the characteristics of the revival were:

- (a) Soul moving manifestations accompanied the preaching.
- (b) Deep conviction of sin.
- (c) Heart-broken confessions and restitution.
- (d) Great liberty in prayer.
- (e) Envy and jealousies were confessed and put away, and long standing quarrels gave way to heartfelt reconciliations.

The work was confined to no single group but broke out also in the schools; the school boys were in great distress over their sins; so great was their agony that when the leader tried to comfort them with the promises of God he could be heard only by shouting in their ears. The most abject confessions of sin were made.

In one of the meetings while the Missionary spoke on "Grieving the Spirit," it was impossible to hold the people back from their confessions of backsliding and wrong doing. During one of the Deacon's prayers a young man began to cry, confessing sin and as suddenly he started back and cried out in agony: "O God, I dare not see thy face," and then fell right down on the floor. At that instant an awful wail of anguish broke out all over the hall. The school boys fell on their faces to the ground, the same cry being on every lip: "My sin! My sin!" The school girls and some of the women were also on their faces crying out for forgiveness. This must have lasted over an hour. God in awful, holy majesty had come down into the midst and it made one think of the day of judgment. One who described it said: "God had come amongst us; all knew it and every heart was open before him. For myself, I had the most intense realization of the holiness of God and my uncleanness in his sight."

From these things we gather—

1. That the operation of the Spirit of God is alike among all peoples and races. There is no difference.

2. That real revivals of religion always mean cleaning up the church and cleansing of the members from strife, antagonisms and those many things which hinder the work of God.

3. That conviction of sin is not confined to those of mature years, but strikes in among the young—boys and girls as well as the old people.

II. "BEAUTY FOR ASHES AND THE GARMENT OF PRAISE." ISAIAH 61:3.

A Chinese preacher of the C. I. M., who had experienced a real change of heart after passing through a severe sickness, suffered greatly from physical and mental depression and a deep sense of failure and sin took possession of him. One day when he felt he could endure his struggle no longer he said: "One man cannot bear two burdens—the burden of his sins and the burden of preaching. I must be delivered from the one or the other." He cried: "O Lord, either relieve me of this load of sin or release me from the responsibility of preaching. If thou wilt pardon my sin I will never again complain; I will never say in summer: 'It is too hot to preach,' nor will I say in winter: 'It is too cold to travel.' If thou wilt but pardon my sins I will risk everything for Thee." So deep was his conviction that he begged to be relieved of his office as preacher, but his brethren had too much confidence in him to grant him that request. They knew the Lord had a great blessing in store for him and that he would come out of this as gold tried in the fire.

It came in an unexpected manner to him. As he was in the pulpit preaching on Acts 20:32, which in the Chinese is translated to read: "God is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified," a new vision of truth and grace was given him and the power of God came upon him. He who mourned for his sins had received the garland for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning and the garment of praise, for the spirit of heaviness. From that time on the joy of the Lord was the most conspicuous feature of his Christian life and service. This man who, before his conversion had been known for his Confucian scholarship and deep learning, now became one of the most demonstrative servants of God in that section of China. It was said of him that his "demonstrative nature and frequent outbursts of praise were more after the manner of the early Methodists or Salvation Army than of a staid Chinese scholar."

III. CONVICTION FOR SIN. ACTS 2:37.

A preacher in China just as he was beginning his sermon was stopped by an old man who said to him: "You need not tell us about anything else; only let me know how to be saved from sin. I don't want to know anything else for I have been a great sinner, a very wicked man; now I am fifty-eight years of age, but there's hardly any sin I have not committed." He further said: "What I want to know is whether there is salvation for such a sinner as I have been. I have been to the Temple of Tung Yoh (the god of hell) and worshipped there and the priest told me it was all right, I need not fear; but not being satisfied I went to the top of the pagoda on the Hung San and the priest there gave me a paper assuring me of the god's propitiation, but yet I was not satisfied; I have been to your chapels here and all I want is assured salvation for I have had to suffer already for my sins, and I fear the judgment to come. What must I do to be saved?"

The modern idea of Missions is that we must not look for old-fashioned conviction among the Chinese; they need to be taught, instructed, indoctrinated before they can become Christians, hence many missionaries do not expect any immediate fruitage from preaching. They never expect to hear people cry out, "What must I do to be saved?" The word so often used now is "background." They think Chinese converts must have background in order to become real Christians. Paget Wilkes, who has had a long and thorough experience in heathen lands says, "Many a young missionary accustomed to the joys of harvest in his home church reaches his station on the foreign field only to be told almost at once: 'You cannot expect that sort of thing in heathen lands. Without a long period of instruction it is impossible to expect that a soul can pass from darkness to light.' Alas, his keen ardour is thereby cooled and a dull, non-expectant spirit is at once engendered in his mind. This is fatal. There must be a driving conviction in the heart that it is possible for one entirely ignorant of the gospel to be saved within a few hours of his first hearing the message, if only he has been prepared by the Spirit of God and his heart has passed through the crucible of suffering, sorrow, or sin. . . . Above all things then, we need to study the Book and accept its descriptions and diagnoses as unalterably true. In spite of all academic vaporings to the contrary do we believe—

1. That man is guilty. Rom. 3:19.
2. Dead in sin. Ephe. 2:1.
3. At enmity with God. Rom. 8:7.
4. Blind. Ephe. 4:18.
5. Helpless. Rom. 5:6.
6. A lover of sin. 2 Thess. 2:12.
7. In bondage to Satan. 2 Tim. 2:25, 26.
8. By nature depraved. Rom. 5:19.
9. In danger of everlasting destruction. 2 Thess. 1:8, 9.

Mr. Wilkes tells the following story of the Marechale of the Salvation Army that one day she walked through a large library in Paris. She expressed her pity for the poor students who had to read and study so many volumes, observing that her own studies were limited to two. On enquiring what they might be she replied, "The Word of God and the human heart. I am never lonely."

IV. IN DEMONSTRATION OF THE SPIRIT AND OF POWER. 1 CORINTHIANS 2:4.

No man illustrated this in the modern times more than William Booth, the fire-baptized leader of the Salvation Army. Harold Begbie says of him in a recent article.

"I suppose that no Christian ever more deeply shocked, horrified and outraged so vast a host of devout people, or made so many of the enemies of God rejoice by the character of his proselytism. I doubt, too, whether any man of serious purpose ever so completely exposed himself to intellectual contempt and popular ridicule—perhaps the two deadliest weapons with which mankind defends itself against the innovator. And yet this passionate youth from a provincial slum and a suburban pawnbroker's shop, no powerful friends to help him, overcame the opposition of the world, established a most powerful religious organization, and when he came to die, old, broken, and blind, had the nations of the earth as his pall-bearers and humanity itself as his chief mourner.

"It is a life so extraordinary, considering the time in which it was lived, that no man in his senses would seek to explain it; but at this cool distance from his tempestuous career, and with all the documents he left behind him open for our inspection, there are certain conclusions we may fairly draw from his record which help us to understand at least something of the man's spirit."

In our day the word evangelism has been reduced down to something just a trifle less than a slogan. There are hosts of preachers and leaders and writers who talk eloquently and prettily about evangelism who have the most intense aversion to revivalism and to emotionalism in religion. They want everything done, as they say, "decently and in order." They are death on the least show of religious emotion, especially among young people. "Flaming Youth" must be led into the ways of conversion without any stirrings of the emotions, and religion is the acceptance of a challenge or the coming to a decision!

We were in a meeting recently where a letter came from some of the preachers (who needed greatly a mighty religious stirring in their own souls) suggesting that our sermons and messages were fine and excellent, but if we would only cut out the emotional they would be so much more acceptable! Decorous, dignified and deathly characterize too many of the activities of preachers and churches in these days. We need the demonstration of the Spirit.

THE PROMISED REVIVAL.

SERMON BY MRS. S. B. SHAW AT GENERAL HOLINESS ASSEMBLY HELD IN CHICAGO, MAY, 1901. (BY REQUEST).

DEARLY Beloved! If there be any reason in the providence of God why I should be here today, you know as well as I, that it is not the mere preaching of a sermon. There are too many here that can do that better than I. If there be any reason, it is that I might bring to you something of the lesson that I believe in my inmost soul, God has been writing on my heart by the power of his blessed Spirit, during the last three months.

I invite your attention this afternoon to part of the thirty-seventh verse of the thirty-sixth chapter of Ezekiel; "Thus saith the Lord God: I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them."

The "this" referred to in the text was a deep, thorough, widespread, searching revival—a glorious revival in Israel, promised and described in the chapter from which the text is taken. I invite your attention to a study of this revival for God is an unchangeable God and if we can learn what he did for his professed church and his professed people under certain circumstances and conditions in the olden time, then we may know what he is willing and able and waiting to do for his professed church today. I say his professed church for I ask you to notice that Israel in this chapter and in this connection meant not Israelites indeed in whom there was no guile, but the professed people of God—those who had been known and were called by his name. Here I believe as Holiness People we have sometimes made a mistake. We have sometimes seemed to think that God cared nothing for his professed church as such; but I believe that this is a sad mistake and that the Scriptures abundantly confirm me in this. All of God's dealings with his Israel of old show that in spite of their rebellion and hardness of heart they were precious in his sight. When they were disobedient and rebellious he chastened them and if they returned not, he suffered them even to be carried away captive into the land of their enemies—yet because they were called by his name, he was jealous over them and when their enemies rejoiced in their downfall he visited them in awful vengeance because they rejoiced over the calamity of Israel. Nor did he give Israel up because of their sin—nor has he given them up; for Paul plainly tells us that they are to be grafted in again and both the Old and the New Testaments promise that Israel shall be restored. So I believe God cares for his professed church today and as it was his will to grant a sweeping revival in Israel in the olden-time, so it is his will and he wants us to ask for and expect a sweeping revival today—not outside of the church but in the church—and that for this end, in spite of difficulties, we should labor and pray and believe.

In studying this revival promised by the prophet I call your attention to five things.

1. Prevailing Conditions. It was a time of desolation—a time when the church seemed to have no cause to expect favor at the hands of God. For disobedience, God had chastened her and because of her continued disobedience and terrible idolatry she had been carried away captive into Babylon. From the human standpoint, she had no claim on the mercy of God—no right to expect his favor or a gracious outpouring of his Spirit. Yet in spite of her unworthiness God declared that he was for her and would turn unto her and that he would take her from among the heathen and bring her unto her own land.

2. Gods' Reason for Promising a Revival. What moved God, then, to make this vow? What moved God to declare he would send to them the heathen round about and bring them back, and that he would build the waste places, and the land of Canaan should no longer be desolate of souls? Not the worthiness of the church; not the spirituality of the church, but the glory of his own name. God values us for his own name's sake. This is plainly stated in the twenty-first and twenty-second verses of this same chapter. "But I had pity for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel but for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went." God promised, then, a revival not because of the worthiness or the faithfulness of the church, but for the glory of his own name.

3. The Source and Beginning of this revival. This was not in Israel, but in the mind and purpose and plan of God. God saw not the worthiness of his people but the reproach brought upon his own name by their unworthiness—even the profaning of his own name among the heathen. In other words he saw the terrible need and declared that he had lifted up his hand in behalf of Israel and against her enemies.

4. The Thoroughness of this promised revival. This thoroughness was to be shown, first, in deep repentance and humility. "Then shall ye remember your own evil ways and your doings which were not good, and shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations." (Verse 31). Moreover this revival was to be a holiness revival. Its thoroughness was shown in the second place by the thorough cleansing of their hearts and their restoration to their own land, the land of Canaan. "For I will take you from among the heathen and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land. Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh and I will give you a heart of flesh." (Verses 24-26). Its thoroughness was also to be shown by its permanent results. "And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my commandments, and do them. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and I will call for the corn, and will increase it, and lay no famine upon you. And I will multiply the fruit of the tree and the increase of the field, that ye shall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen." (Vs. 27-30).

5. The Condition upon which this revival was promised—as shown in the text itself. "I will yet for this be enquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them." Prayer, then, was the only condition named on the human side in the accomplishment of the will of God in the revival of Israel.

Now, beloved, in harmony with these points to which I have called your attention, I would bring to you the lesson that God has, as I said before, been deeply impressing upon my own heart, during these last few months.

We noticed first that it was a time of great desolation in Israel, and her faith had no claim to the mercy of God. She had gone away from his service. She was cold and indifferent, bowing down to false gods. By the chastening of God, all her lands were laid waste and her people were carried away captive into Babylon. We read that the prophet was to speak to the mountains of Israel, as if they alone were left to hear the word that was spoken.

O beloved, you may draw the picture as dark as you choose of the need of the professed church today—of her coldness, her indifference her worldliness, her idolatry. Still, the word of God gives you ground for confidence in a revival,—a sweeping revival in Israel.

I say it was a time of desolation. God always has chastened his people, when disobedient. I presume he always will. When the church grows cold and careless and indifferent to any degree; when to any degree she loses sight of the glory of God and his salvation—her one object and cause of existence,—just to that degree God withholds his blessing from her. This was a time of famine—a famine of souls. Beloved! What is this cry we hear today? What is the message we read in nearly every Christian paper? It is the cry that we need a revival. This cry comes from the Episcopalians, the Presbyterians, the Baptists, the Methodists, the Congregationalists. We read this message in denominational and undenominational papers. Ministers in their conferences and their presbyteries are asking, "Why is the church with all its power and all its wealth and all its carefully laid plans and all its multiplied organization making so little real progress? Why is her membership not increased? Why is she not accomplishing greater results? Why are her members being carried away in captivity to worldliness and sin? Why are the thousands round about us unmoved? Why will they not attend our services? Why can the Christian church not accomplish in the evangelization of the world what she accomplished in the first two or three centuries of her existence? Beloved, what is all this but an acknowledgment that God has laid a famine upon us? And there is a cause. God has not laid a famine upon the church without cause! Loving her, the church, as we do, we are compelled to acknowledge to some extent—and may I not say to a large extent, she has her eyes off of one thing: God demands the salvation of those about her at every hazard, at every cost!

I would not ignore the good that is being done. I would not question the faith of the weakest of God's children, nor fail to encourage every spark of grace in a human heart. I believe there never was a time when I was disposed to break the bruised reed or quench the smoking flax. But are we to be satisfied with weakness? Are we in our love for the church to overlook her worldliness, her backslidings? By no means! But on the other hand let us remember God's love for his people of old, and that God has said that he is married to the backslider. Let us remember God's infinite tenderness and patience with us and let us bear in mind that it was at such a time as this—yea, truly at a worse time than this, that God declared by his prophet, moved by the Holy Ghost, that he would send a revival. So I believe today that God has given to many who are taught of the Spirit a promise of glorious and sweeping revival in the professed church of God.

And that our faith may be strengthened, let us look in the right direction. Let us remember that this revival had its beginning, not in the mind of the church; not in the minds of God's people; not in the minds of those sanctified and true, but in the mind and purpose of God, himself. Let us remember, too, that God's purpose to grant a revival was not brought about by the faithfulness and spirituality of the church but for the glory of his own name and because of the great need. God had laid a famine upon Israel but that famine did not bring glory to God! On the other hand, the heathen only profaned his name the more because of it. They did not comprehend that God was able and willing to bless and prosper his people as of old and was only chastening them for their disobedience: They only mocked and said, "The God of Israel is not able to deliver them out of our hand."

ABRAHAM'S SEED.

Prof. W. O. Allen, Professor Asbury Theological Seminary.

"If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Galatians 3:29.

THE promises of God to Abraham were given and repeated with variation of detail on sundry occasions through the lapse of hardly less than fifty years. First when called to leave his home and kindred and become a wanderer to an unknown land (Gen. 12:1-3); then at Shechem (12:7); and again after Lot had separated from him, choosing the richest portion of the land (13:14-16); then in the blessing of Melchizedek (14:19, 20); afterward it was confirmed by a covenant (15:1-21), though as yet Abraham had no son.

Years go by and Ishmael is born of the bond-woman, man's faithless attempt to bring about a fulfillment of God's promise. More years go by and Ishmael is a lad of thirteen, Abraham an old man of ninety-nine, and Sarah is ninety, when Jehovah refuses to accept the son born of the flesh and promises Isaac, the heir of faith (17:1-27).

When Jehovah announced to Abraham the impending destruction of Sodom, he declared his confidence that Abraham will command his children to keep the way of Jehovah, "to the end that Jehovah may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him" (18:17-19).

Finally, when Isaac was offered up, Jehovah swore to Abraham by the highest and most immutable earth (22:15-19).

Assembling these records of God's promises to Abraham and his seed, all of which deserve careful attention, and analyzing the contents, we find the following items:

1. The seed should be innumerable;
2. The land should be an everlasting possession;
3. Jehovah should be their God;
4. They should keep the way of Jehovah, to do righteousness and justice;
5. They should possess the gates of their enemies;
6. They should be blessed, and should be a blessing to all nations;
7. Blessing or cursing should be the portion of others according as they should bless or curse Abraham and his seed.

Who are the seed to whom these promises were given? In the light of later revelation, and especially of the mystery revealed to Paul, we make the following affirmations:

1. Only to one seed were the promises made. Abraham had other posterity besides Isaac, the child of faith; but he alone was heir to the promises.

2. Natural generation is no guarantee of inheritance to those who are wanting in faith. Ishmael and the children of Keturah are not included. Esau, though a son of Isaac in the flesh, was rejected because he was a profane person. The Israelites who were led out of Egypt by Moses perished in the wilderness and failed to enter the land of promise because of unbelief. Idolatrous Israel was carried away into captivity, put away as an unfaithful wife (Jer. 31:32). John the Baptist said to the multitudes that went out to be baptized of him: "Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham."—Luke 3:8. Cf. John 8:37-44.

3. The children of Abraham are those that are justified by faith. Paul argues this point at length in the fourth chapter of Romans. And in Galatians 3:7 we read: "Know therefore that they that are of faith, the same are sons of Abraham." And in the 28th verse of this same chapter we read further: "There can be neither Jew nor Greek, there can be neither bond nor free, there can be neither male nor female; for ye all are one in Christ Jesus." In Ephesians 1:13: "In whom having also believed, ye (Gentiles) were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, which is an earnest of our inheritance." The fact that Gentiles have the same privileges with the Jews is still more emphatically set forth in Eph. 2:11-21. It seems incredible that anyone who admits the inspiration of the Apostle Paul could deny this truth.

4. We conclude therefore that there is no difference between Jews and Gentiles in the inheritance of the promises made to Abraham. There is only one seed to inherit the promises, this seed is not begotten by natural generation but is "through faith of Jesus Christ," and "the Gentiles are fellow-heirs, and fellow-members of the body, and fellow-partakers of the promise in Christ Jesus through the gospel." (Eph. 3:6).

What then is the place of the Jew in the divine economy? It is evident that there were peculiar advantages to the Jew. But the advantages carried corresponding responsibilities, and failure to meet these responsibilities brought fearful liabilities not only upon those who failed, but upon their children for many generations. Their example may serve as a warning to us of the fearful consequences if we fail to profit by the advantages which we now enjoy.

1. It gave them no exclusive rights. Abraham was blessed in order that he might be a blessing, and that in him all the families of the earth might be blessed. Because the Jews refused to accept the gospel plan with its provision of faith, and its extension to the Gentiles, they were rejected.

2. Neither are the Jews now excluded from the provisions of grace. As a matter of fact very few Jews since the days of the apostles have accepted the gospel. There are reasons why this is so, facts sociological and psychological, just as there have been few converts from among Moslems or heathen nations. Not all the responsibility for failure can be laid at their own door, however, for professed Christians have themselves been guilty of perpetuating the walls of separation. But it has always been true throughout the gospel age that salvation by faith in Jesus Christ is promised to Jew and Gentile alike.

3. Nevertheless the Jew had advantages, as Paul admits in Rom. 3:1, 2.

a. They had the oracles. The law and the prophets gave them a knowledge of the living God, the covenant-keeping God, such as heathen did not have. The temple service taught the lesson of propitiation through the blood of Christ. The unity and the holiness of God was known to the Jew as to none of the heathen.

b. They shared in the Messianic hope. The messages of the prophets created an expectancy among them of the coming Christ. The vicissitudes of their national history had intensified this hope, and the preaching of John the Baptist had fanned it into a flame of zeal.

c. They were entrusted with a commission to the nations. The prophets had clearly taught that they were to be a light to lighten the Gentiles. Their call is recognized by the Psalmist, as in the 67th psalm: "God be merciful unto us and bless us, . . . That thy way may be known upon earth; thy salvation among all nations."

d. To them Christ was first given. "He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But to as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God." Paul said that the gospel is "the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth; to the Jew first." Theirs was an advantage, not of actual inheritance, but of opportunity to become heirs through faith, and to be the purveyors of this grace to the Gentiles. This advantage was lost through unbelief, and what should have been their glory has become their curse.

4. An inherited unbelief puts the Jews now at a disadvantage. A child born in a Jewish home inherits a prejudice which is a barrier to accepting the gospel. The fact that Christ is believed on by the Gentiles is a stumblingblock to the Jew. Pride in his descent is an obstacle to that humility which prepares the heart to accept of grace by faith in Jesus Christ. Instead of the Jew being a messenger of the gospel of Christ, he has become the originator or promoter of every form of antichristian doctrine. Spinoza was a Jew, Karl Marx was a Jew, the foremost propagandists of the soviet system are Jews; their money is financing the efforts to break down our prohibitory law; they joined with the Papists to exclude the Bible from the public school and are now aligned on the side of agnosticism and atheism; they control much of the public press which is debauching the public mind with its details of crime and vice and resistance to law enforcement. We do not recite these facts to heap upon them a disproportionate share of blame for the evils that afflict society today, nor to rouse prejudice against them, but rather to awaken sympathy for the Jew who is brought up in such an environment and is so far estranged from the preaching of the gospel. How can they be saved? Only God's grace can transcend these barriers.

5. But their blindness is not incurable. The branches that were broken off from the true olive tree can be grafted in again. The unbelieving Jew has no peculiar claim on God's favor, but he is the object of redeeming love, and the yearning Christ would welcome him back into gracious favor.

6. But as many Jews as are restored to covenant favor become a part of the one seed of Abraham along with the believing Gentiles. "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone that believeth." The seed of Abraham is one body, of which Christ is the head. No child of the bond-woman is an heir. The Jew will not inherit because of natural descent from Abraham, nor because of circumcision in the flesh, nor because of his obedience to the law, but only because of obedience to that law of faith in Christ, after the likeness of Abraham's faith.

This conclusion does not imply, however, that the Jew must surrender his racial identity and become absorbed into Gentile Christianity, any more than that the Gentile must become a Jew, or the Negro a white man, or that the Oriental must become a Westerner. It does not exclude the possibility that the Jews may return to Palestine and establish an independent national existence, but such a nation, if established, as well as all the kingdoms of the earth, must become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ (Rev. 11:15). The assumption that the Jew is to have a superior place in the Messianic kingdom and exercise lordship over the Gentiles, or that the bloody sacrifices of the Mosaic law are to be restored,—all such conclusions from a literal interpretation of the Old Testament Scriptures are erroneous and confuse the relation of type and substance. When the type was fulfilled in Jesus Christ its transitory nature became evident, the law gave place to the covenant of grace, the ceremonial cleansings to the sanctification of the Spirit, and the Davidic throne to the everlasting kingdom of David's son. Place in that kingdom is not given to those "born of flesh nor of blood nor of the will of man, but of God." It is based on service, on humility and sacrifice, and is not the dominion of worldly might and power and glory, but is the rule of faith and goodness and love. "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Neither rank nor race nor sex have any place in Christ Jesus. These natural distinctions do not cease to be, but they are not the basis on which honors are bestowed. The prophets condemned the unspiritual Israelites for their confidence in the flesh time and again. See Isa. 1:11-17; Mic. 6:6-8; Jer. 31:33; Ezek. 36:22-31; Hos. 14:2; Psalms 51:17; and many more.

But what are the promises which Abraham's seed inherits?

1. The Land. As this promise was first given to Abraham it was circumscribed by the range of his vision. Later it was extended from the river of Egypt to the Euphrates. To Joshua was promised "all the land whereon the sole of your foot shall tread." The Psalmist (37:11) says: "The meek shall inherit the land," which in Matt. 5:5 becomes "the earth." Likewise the fifth commandment, "the first with promise," reads, "that thy days may be long upon the land which Jehovah thy God giveth thee;" but in Eph. 6:3 it becomes "that thou mayest live long on the earth." Psalm 2:8: "Ask of me, and I will give thee the nations for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Isa. 11:9: "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of Jehovah as the waters cover the sea." Rev. 5:9, 10: "For thou wast slain, and didst purchase unto God with thy blood men of every tribe, and tongue, and people, and nation, and madest them to be unto our God a kingdom and priests; and they reign upon the earth." Hebrews 11:10, 13-16 credits Abraham and the heirs with him of the promise with a loftier faith than the mere occupancy of a parcel of ground; they were setting up a civilization diverse from that of Babylon or the worldly dominions that have succeeded it. Their dream will not be fulfilled until the Lord's prayer is a reality: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." Paul rises to the height of sublimity in Eph. 1:22: "And he put all things in subjection under his feet, and gave him to be head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all.

2. An Everlasting Possession. The promises of God as set forth in type are rich beyond all possibility of shadows to convey. Yet the type itself seems to come short of its fulfillment.

The reason for this is given in Heb. 11:39, 40: "And these all, having had witness borne in them through faith, received not the promise, God having provided some better thing concerning us, that apart from us they should not be made perfect." Of the nearly four thousand years since the promise was given to Abraham less than one-third of the time have the Jews occupied any part of the promised land, to say nothing of its widest extent; and for only a few centuries did they have any independent sovereignty. Moreover, death is a nullifier of the promise of an everlasting possession. What are a few short years of mortal life! The fulfillment of this promise requires the resurrection of the dead and eternal life.

3. Righteousness and justice. This promise finds its best interpretation in the prophecy of Zacharias (Luke 1:67-79): "To grant unto us that we being delivered out of the hand of our enemies should serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness, before him all our days."

4. The Gates of their Enemies. There is an aggressiveness in the promise that will be fulfilled only in the destruction of all the foes of Christ, whether social, moral or physical. All worldly dominions must be subdued, all socially entrenched wrongs must be uprooted, all spiritual oppositions overcome, death and hell overthrown. "On this rock will I build my church, and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it." (Matt. 16:18).

5. The Promise of the Spirit. Abraham died in the faith, having for a possession only a sepulchre, and for a seed only Isaac, and for a city with foundations only a Bedouin tent. The years have grown to centuries and centuries to millenniums, and much of the promise lies yet in the future. The natural seed of Abraham is disinherited and scattered far and wide among the nations, an object of reproach, a people spoken against. "But the promise stands sure, having this seal: the Lord knoweth them that are his;" and to each is given the seal of the Spirit, "an earnest of our inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession." "Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, . . . that upon the Gentiles might come the blessing of Abraham in Christ Jesus; that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith" (Gal. 3:14). "Ye are not in the flesh but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of Christ dwelleth in you." "The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are children of God; and if children, then heirs: heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him (are joint-sufferers), that we may be also glorified with him (jointly-glorified)."

Brother, Sister, have you the seal of the Spirit? Are you Christ's? Can you claim the promise? Have you the earnest of the inheritance? The kingdom of God is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. How much of the land do you possess? Or are you still wandering in the wilderness, afraid to enter into the promised land? Are you not only blessed, but are you a blessing? Do your neighbors bless themselves in you? Do the ends of the earth fear before him because God hath blessed you? Is your Lord's money put out to usury, or is it wrapped up in a napkin for your own selfish possession? If the heathen are not fellow heirs with the saints, you and I must answer for them? Do you believe God intends them to be fellow-heirs with you?

Remember what a fearful judgment came upon Israel because they failed God in the day of opportunity. You and I are only wild olive branches grafted into the true olive tree. Let us fear lest we fall through the same example of unbelief. And be not like the son who said, 'I go, sir,' and went not. China is looking to us today, and India, and Africa, and Mexico, and South America, and the isles of the sea. God is waiting on us. The longsuffering of God is salvation. But he will not always wait. He will come in such an hour as we think not, and if we are not found faithful stewards, giving the gospel meat to his household, he will cut us asunder and give us our portion with the hypocrites. "If any man love not the Lord Jesus, let him be anathema."

"If ye are Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

Filling the Pulpit—"With What?"

A. W. ORWIG.

As a preacher took his seat in a barber's chair, on a Saturday evening, he said to the barber, "I want you to do a very nice job, for I am to fill a pulpit tomorrow, and I want to look trim." Quickly the barber, unacquainted with such language, inquired, "Fill it with what?"

Spiritually considered that was a very significant question. As one reads the notices of sermon topics in Saturday's issue of the daily papers, he is sometimes surprised at the secular and unscriptural subjects chosen. Admitting the fact that startling and sensational themes may occasionally be permissible, yet, on the whole, it is questionable whether such a course is wise and profitable. The preacher's object should not be to draw a crowd, yet he should so preach that the crowd will flock to hear him.

Of some preacher's sermons it might not be uncharitable to say that such men were "hard up" for a subject, especially when they had nothing to say about the Lord Jesus Christ and his great salvation. In a very important sense every preacher's motto should be:

"Jesus only is our message,
Jesus all our theme shall be,
We will lift up Jesus ever,
Jesus only will we see."

A newly converted Jew said to a preacher, "Your sermon, although possessing some good things, had a very vital defect, and was only what I could have heard in a Jewish synagogue." He meant to say that there was no divine Christ in it, the Redeemer of men. Of a distinguished preacher it was once asked "If you would give but one talk to a crowd of men, on what subject would you speak?" Without any hesitation he replied, "Jesus Christ."

Oh, my beloved brethren in the holy Gospel ministry, whatever may be your theme in the pulpit, let Jesus Christ burn and glow in head and heart, so that sinners will be saved and Christians will hunger and thirst for "the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Surely this should be the chief object of all preaching, and this kind the Holy Spirit will truly honor and bless.

A thoughtful young girl had the grace and courage to say to her somewhat worldly father, "Father, you're no really true preacher, because you don't talk Jesus." A young preacher in a college town, and whose congregation was not very spiritual, told his father that he was more or less hampered in his ministry because he could not properly dwell on the deep subjects with which they were familiar. The father, also a preacher, replied, "Do not be discouraged; preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ. They probably know very little of that, and greatly need it."

"Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them."

"Since my eyes were fixed on Jesus,
I've lost sight of all beside,
So enchained my spirit's vision
Looking at the Crucified."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE NEW PASTOR A NERVOUS WRECK.

THE morning following the appearance of the ghost at the pageant the leading newspaper of Goodwill came out with the following big headlines: A STARTLING MYSTERY! This was followed by a column describing what had occurred at the People's Church the evening before. The reporter who wrote the account was present and with his own eyes saw the marvelous apparition. He wound up the description of the affair by saying, "Those who were present and saw the apparition were fully convinced, and henceforth, could never doubt that man has a soul; that there is a future existence after death. This remarkable apparition settled forever, that question in the minds of those who were privileged to see what appeared at the church last evening."

Poor Judas Iskabod was a nervous wreck the next morning. He was laboring under the impression that the ghost had ridden him up the aisle and, it was with great difficulty, that his friends tried to convince him that it was the Queen of Sheba, under whose massive weight he had struggled up the aisle on his all-fours, instead of the dead and buried former pastor whom he had so unjustly superseded. The poor fellow, after a few days, was removed to the hospital, where he spent several weeks recovering from the fearful shock; and then was given several months' leave of absence for the recuperation of his health.

The university, which was determined to keep fully abreast with the times, at once organized a society made up of the president and a number of the professors, for a thorough investigation of spirit phenomena. It so happened that Sir Gulliver Dodge, of Europe, was in the United States giving seances and lecturing on spiritism. The society sent for him for a series of lectures. He assured the university and the cultured people of Goodwill, that they had been greatly favored with so remarkable manifestation, about which there could be no possible question or doubt. The man whom they knew to be dead and buried, had appeared before so many witnesses who had known him intimately, and could not possibly be mistaken with reference to the identity of his ghost.

"This at once, and forever, settled the question that the spirit does exist," said the great scientist, "after the death of the body, and can appear in such a realistic and positive way, that none but the persistently and stubbornly ignorant, can question. We have now," said he, "emerged entirely from mere theory on this subject, and entered the realm of stubborn, unquestioned facts. It is now our duty to press, with intelligence, but a zeal worthy of so great a cause, farther into this interesting realm of discovery."

The intellectuals of the town were delighted to listen to the great scientist with his clear reasoning. They were especially pleased, and commented on his wonderful poise and beautiful sincerity. He spent a couple of weeks, was invited to a number of evening dinners by the elite, always accompanied by the president of the university; and all such occasions the people expressed their grief that their dear Judas, who lay in the hospital suffering from nervous prostration, could not be present.

They explained to the learned scientist that their pastor was one of the most refined and delightful gentleman. He was a very unusual scholar and had quite worn himself out with his studies and the care of so large a congregation; then to make everything worse, he had not only seen the apparition along with the rest of them, but the dear man crawling up the aisle on his hands and knees, had labored under the delusion that the ghost was on top of him. It was really remarkable that "he had not died on the spot."

Sir Gulliver Dodge wound up his interesting and illuminating visit with a great lecture at $1.00 a ticket for admission. It was first announced for the auditorium of the People's Church, but it turned out that many of the "Four Hundred" class of the little city, who had been present on the night of the pageant, could not be induced to enter the place, they were compelled to give the lecture in the City Hall.

The great scientist left in excellent good humor, with pockets well filled. He congratulated himself and the admiring people, that never before had he been in a city where it was so easy to make converts to his theory. "The interesting feature of it all," said he, "I am pleased to note that these converts are of the most intellectual people of your wonderfully attractive and progressive city."

Meantime, our beloved Huston was bathing in the sea and basking in the sun, having his youth renewed like the eagle's down in sunny Florida. At the end of the winter his physician pronounced him, not only 100 per cent well of all his former troubles, but one of the most vigorous specimens of humanity he had ever known.

Huston, it will be remembered, had no heirs or relatives, that he knew of. His wife's people in the west had mourned him as dead, and no one had the slightest dream that John Henry Huston was yet in the flesh, except the man himself, and a few persons with whom he had become acquainted in Southern Florida, who knew nothing of his past tragic history.

Mr. Judas Iskabod gradually recovered from the fearful shock he had received, and was indeed greatly relieved when he found that he had not been ridden by the ghost which he had conceived had a special grudge against him, but by the rotund Queen of Sheba. The scare, well over, the people laughed at and teased him quite a bit over his excessive fright and the figure he had cut crawling up the aisle of the church with the Queen of Sheba, in all her Oriental and ancient glory, astride him.

Iskabod, notwithstanding his faults, was a man of energy and enterprise. He at once supplied himself with a number of books on spiritism. He acquainted himself with several prominent mediums. He went to some of the larger cities and attended seances and then, with great caution, prepared a lecture on "The Spirit of Those who have Crossed the Bar." He gave this lecture on a 25 cent-per-head admission in several of the smaller towns, and at the earnest solicitation of his many friends in the city of Goodwill, arranged to deliver it in the City Hall of that place.

He had resigned the pastorate of the People's Church, and the pulpit for the present was being occupied by any one who could be found for the place on the Sabbath. Many people who had given themselves over to spiritism had quit the church. Some of the enthusiastic young people who had been so aggressive in the reception and promulgation of the ideas of the new age, had scattered to the four winds; some had gone into the movies, others were dancing in cabarets in the big cities, others had gone to the far west, and but for the handsome income provided for this church by Huston's liberality it would in all probability, been forsaken and closed.

Extensive arrangement was made for Is-kabod's lecture in the City Hall of Goodwill. His many lady friends, for he was an unmarried man, especially the enthusiasts over spiritism, had persuaded him to charge one dollar for admission, but he had modestly hesitated at so exorbitant a charge. But in view of his illness and hospital expenses, they insisted that the people would be glad to render him some financial assistance and pledged that they would sell the tickets and see that the City Hall was packed to its utmost capacity.

In order that the time of his lecture, which they determined to make a great event, should not conflict with any other gathering, or meetings of any sort in the city, they selected Monday evening, May 2. The month came in on the Sabbath. They felt this would be a most opportune time for his lecture.

They were a bit annoyed because two broad-shouldered young men had appeared in the city some days before, announcing a great tent meeting. These young men had selected a spacious lot and put up a tent that would easily accommodate two thousand people. They had been busy providing a large platform and arranging unusually comfortable seats for such a gathering. This meeting was to begin at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The people were assured that the minister who would do the preaching, was a man of ability and wide experience. His name was not given.

The enthusiastic people who were working up an interest in the lecture, noticed the putting up of the tent and the arrangements for the meeting, but comforted themselves that the intelligent people of Goodwill had made such progress in intellectual development and scientific discovery, that such religious mobs could no longer attract their attention. So they dismissed all thought of the tent meeting, to which the common herd might go, without in any way interfering with the great intellectual treat they were to have from their dear Dr. Iskabod at the City Hall on the evening of May second.

Arrangements were made for a number of social events; various clubs and organizations were to appear in evening dress at the lecture and, at its close, they were to have late dinner at a number of the best restaurants of the city.

There had not been such a buzz of interest and enthusiasm in the high life of the city of Goodwill since the extensive preparation for the pageant, which had taken place or, in fact, had failed to come off, some three months previous.

Saturday evening at nine o'clock, the workers got together and sent a couple of their leaders to notify Mr. Iskabod that the tickets were all sold, that the hall would be packed, that standing room would be at a premium, and that he should have every cent of the door receipts, which would amount to something like $2350.

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

REIDSVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA.

We have just closed a revival in Lowe's Church at Reidsville, N. C., with Bro. W. R. Harris. The Lord most graciously blessed in the conversion of souls at each service for over a week. Some seventeen or eighteen were converted in the old-fashioned way by praying definitely through to complete pardon and victory. We are now in the beginning of another campaign at Cedar Grove, N. C., with Rev. F. A. Lupton and the outlook is most encouraging for a great revival and the conversion of scores of people. Great crowds are packing the church each service, and are most appreciative in their attention given to the messages.

I have an open date for a revival in September which I will be happy to give to some pastor. Write me at Wilmore, Ky., or Murphy, N. C. Brethren pray for our meetings that many may be converted to the Lord and others filled with the Spirit and mightily sanctified. Sam Maxwell.

THE REVIVAL AT ELKTON, MICHIGAN.

Not in years has Elkton and vicinity experienced such a religious awakening as at the present time. The Gospel Crusade, sponsored by the Methodist Church, has been far-reaching in its results. From the opening night to the close the attendance was gratifying and many nights a capacity audience greeted the evangelists, Bennard and Reed.

Evangelist Bennard brought messages of high order and soon won his way into the hearts of the people. A large chorus choir, ably supported by a men's chorus, composed of men of the community, furnished inspiring music.

One feature of the campaign was the boys and girls' meetings held at 4:00 o'clock each afternoon, the auditorium being well filled on each occasion. These meetings, under the direction of Rev. D. E. Reed, will long be remembered by the young life of Elkton. Among the many converts were boys and girls, many young people, and heads of families. The services closed on Mother's Day with over two score seekers at the altar.

The pastor and his people are greatly delighted with the results and the fine community interest. The spirit of unity among the various churches was marvelous to behold. O. W. Trask, Pastor Methodist Church.

MICHIGAN MEETINGS.

We are glad to report that God has been with us down through this year in a special way, helping us to accomplish a few things for the advancement of his kingdom. Since last September we have held eleven campaigns, in the following denominations: Methodist Episcopal Church, German Methodist, Evangelical and Nazarenes.

Perhaps one of the best meetings we held this year was at Lansing, Mich., in the Potter Park Methodist Episcopal Church. Rev. B. A. Hahn, the pastor, had prepared the way by pastoral visiting and having cottage prayer meetings preceding the revival. The large auditorium was well filled at almost every service, conviction was deep and conversions bright. Seventy-nine sought the Lord to be saved, reclaimed or sanctified. Some of the results which ought to be noted were: five whole families were converted, leaving worldly amusements (and the men forsaking their tobacco); Ten families established an altar in their homes; seventeen receiving light on tithing, took up this bit of Christian Stewardship willingly; twenty-eight persons united with the church last evening; old differences were, of course, buried, and the once sad faces are now shining witnesses for the Lord. Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

We are now in the midst of a campaign with Rev. C. I. Harwood, pastor of the Nazarene Church, near Otisville, Mich.

Prof. C. C. and Margaret Crammond.

During the winter our labors took us into the East, where the Lord gave us some gracious victories. We held a very good meeting at Bloomsburg, Pa. Rev. J. M. Price, the pastor, was greatly afflicted, having been in the hospital thirteen weeks and bedfast for eighteen weeks, but he was happy in the Lord and trusting him to lift him up that he would again be able to pastor the flock and preach the Gospel. We have since heard that he is again able to fill his pastoral duties. At West Chester, Pa., God gave us a good meeting in their new and beautiful basement church which the Lord helped the pastor, Rev. Phil Geiter and his people to establish.

From here we went to New England and held a very good meeting with Rev. L. E. Darling in the Evangelical Church. They have a large field here in this suburb city of Boston and are doing a good work among the many New Foundland people who have located in that community. Our next engagement with the enemy was in Beverly, Mass., with Rev. E. Stetson and his Church of the Nazarene. We enjoyed our labors here and saw some good victories, a goodly number being saved and sanctified and the church encouraged. Our last battle in the East was with our fine pastors, Rev. D. Swarth and wife, at Lawrence, Mass. We had helped these good shepherds of their flock in the great N. W., at Lewiston, Idaho, in two very good meetings, and were glad to be with them again in Old New England. God gave us a good meeting under some very difficult circumstances. They had bought an old burnt-out castle and spent much time and money to have it repaired and ready for our meeting, but within a few days of having it finished, the enemy got busy and three different citizens of that neighborhood underhandedly planned and brought about an injunction and stopped the carpenters, so that the meeting could not be held in their new church. But God gave a good time of salvation over all opposition. The pastor and people were encouraged and praying and believing God would defeat the powers of darkness and open the way to enter into their new and beautiful and well located church home.

May first we began our summer's labors in Cadillac, Mich., with Rev. A. D. Buck and his people. Here again the Lord was pleased to give us a great closing up of the meeting. At Reed City, Mich., we were privileged to labor with their good pastor, Rev. C. J. Studt and wife. A number were either saved, reclaimed or sanctified. They gave us an urgent call to return for 1930.

Our first camp meeting was held near Corcoran, Minn., the Hennepin County Holiness Association Camp. We had labored with this good people in three successive camps in the past and were called back for this the eighth annual camp. We surely were glad to see so many of the converts of our former camps standing true and being some of the officers and pushing the work. The Lord gave us another good camp with souls seeking and finding God pardon and purity. We are now beginning the battle here in Rosholt Camp, S. D., and believing for a time of salvation. We covet the prayers of the saints of God that we may continue and be at our best for God and the salvation of the lost of earth. All glory and praise to Jesus our Lord and Saviour.

Theo. and Minnie E. Ludwig, Evangelists.

FROM THE BATTLE FIELD.

This has been a very glorious and fruitful year in his service. We have kept busy. The Master gave us gracious revivals on the western slope of Colorado this winter and spring campaigns in Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, and here and there. Have witnessed many hundreds seek and find the "Benefits of the Double Cure."

We have labored with many wide-awake pastors and aggressive churches; have been treated with great kindness and remunerated well for our humble labors. It has been a pleasure to scatter and push The Pentecostal Herald in all our meetings. We never loved God better, or enjoyed the gospel of Full Salvation and the work of promoting Scriptural holiness any time in all our thirty-two years of ministry. We return to old Ft. Jessup camp, near Many, La., and to grand old Vincent Springs Camp, Dyer, Tenn., again this year. Will look for great hosts of friends of holiness at these great annual gatherings. Come to camp and stay through. God bless the grand old editor, Dr. H. C. Morrison, and his able staff of writers and multiplied thousands of readers in all lands, and make this one of the greatest years in the history of the Holiness Movement.

Our slate for 1930 is filling. Address us Bethany, Okla. Yours for revivals that will bless the ministry and the laity, and hasten the return of our Lord. Amen! Allie and Emma Irick.

GOSPEL BARN, FRAZER, PENNSYLVANIA.

In an Interdenominational Evangelistic Campaign held in our Barn at Frazer, Pa., by Evangelist Rev. Mary H. Ellis, assisted by Tillie McNutt Albright, it was definitely proven that people are hungry for salvation and for holiness.

Only a barn, but how wonderful! When we recall that our Saviour was born and started his earthly life in a barn. Many souls were born again in this barn, and how sweet will be the memory of this shrine to the saved and sanctified souls who found Jesus, and who received the second blessing of holiness here.

If I could only tell the wonderful times we had with the Lord here; how he came in power; how entire families were saved, and how people who heard holiness for the first time so eagerly accepted it; but the fact that this campaign was scheduled to run from April 15th to May 5th, then extended to May 26th, and then again to May 31st, you will realize that they were a great success.

During the first week people from the nearby countryside made up the congregation, but the word was passed along, and spread so rapidly that very soon people and delegations came for 35 miles and more to attend the services. Sinners, backsliders, church members, all alike found Jesus at the altar in this barn.

During the last two weeks, the meetings were wonderfully supported by The Church of the Nazarene of West Chester, Pa., whose pastor is Rev. Philip Geiter, and how wonderfully God did bless us during this time. On Sunday night, June 9th, on the first anniversary of the Nazarene Church of West Chester, about 15, saved and sanctified from the barn, realizing that they desired to feast on holiness continually joined with the Nazarenes at West Chester, and if Rev. Ellis and Sister Albright could only have heard the testimony of these barnites, I am sure they would have felt well repaid for the effort put forth.

These two whom the Lord so graciously sent to us, departed from here to New Philadelphia, Ohio, where their holiness campaign is being held in a tent, and supplemented by meetings nightly on the courthouse steps, and we pray God's richest blessings be with them, not only there, but wherever they are called.

After all the sorrow and heartaches of this sinful world are over, I know God will whisper to them, as he calls them home, "Well done, faithful servants," and I am sure they will recall these barn meetings where, for seven weeks, they labored many hours each night that souls might be saved for him.

J. R. Parker.

WHEATFIELD, INDIANA.

I have just closed a very successful tent meeting at Wheatfield, Ind. Opposition to the meetings was very strong because the people have been filled with this "sinning religion," and no longer want the real gospel message. I began preaching old-fashion repentance which includes surrender, confession of sins, forsaking of sins and making restitution where it's needed; and entire sanctification as a second, definite work of grace which empties the heart of all sin and fills it with perfect love. The Lord honored his truth in a marvelous way and in spite of the devil and wicked men people plowed through to glorious victory. During the series of services I had something over thirty seekers and twenty-five of this number were saved and then sanctified. I think most every one that was saved went on into the experience of holiness.

The crowds and interest increased with every service. I find that people are hungry for the real truth and if we preach the gospel people will get interested and be saved and cleansed from all sin. Thank God the truth and blood have never lost their power.

The meetings closed with wonderful victory and the Lord is blessing the word to the salvation of souls at our present location. Praise the Lord for the gospel and its power.

Yours for the lost, Charles Cochran.

A REPORT OF ROBERT CHUNG'S MEETINGS IN KOREA.

To all friends and patrons of Robert Chung this report will no doubt have some interest, for it tells of the splendid success he is having in his evangelistic work in Korea. I am giving you this report just the same as he gave it to me. It contains the results of five meetings:

First, Wosan Meeting.—This was a union meeting in which about a thousand people gathered every night. Five hundred people really prayed through. Out of this meeting came eighteen preachers and Bible women.

Second, Central M. E. Church in Seoul.—Seventy families came out for the Lord. Eighty persons really found the deeper experience.

Third, Soowan Meeting.—This was a meeting among the M. E. Church people and the Oriental Missionary Society people. There were one hundred experiences of sanctification.

Fourth, Yuchu Meeting.—This was an M. E. Church district meeting. There were one hundred and ten definite experiences of saving grace, and among them there will be fifty preachers and Bible women.

Fifth, Tong Chun Meeting.—This was with the M. E. Church, South people. It was a district meeting, over seventy workers in this district. Four hundred prayed through clearly. Among them there will be fifty-six preachers and Bible women. The revival fire is still going on in that locality. Praise God! F. H. Larabee, Secretary and Treasurer for Robert Chung in the U. S., Wilmore, Ky.

FOREST CITY, NORTH CAROLINA.

We recently closed one of the greatest revivals Forest City has ever seen. We had evangelist M. R. Harvey, from Cherryville, N. C. He is a good preacher, and a great prayer. I was thoroughly convinced in this meeting that prayer is the main factor in a revival. Bro. Harvey formed a habit, while here, of praying two hours daily, and you could surely feel the effects in the services each evening, and observe the altar lined with seekers most every night. I believe he is a God-called evangelist. He gave up one of the best pastorates of our conference. He went over to Lynchburg, Va., and held a good meeting, organized a church, and was insisted upon to accept the work, which is a wonderful opening, but feeling that God wanted him to remain in the evangelistic work he refused. Soon after he received a call to hold the Hortence Camp Meeting in Georgia and a number of other meetings down there. While here, he received a call to the First Wesleyan Church, Birmingham, Ala., but refused another good pastorate to remain on the battlefield. Surely he is seeking the will of God instead of a position.

The songs of his own composition, which he sings, such as: "The Birth of a Family Altar" and "Tired of Mother," take well with the people. Let us keep him busy. He is strictly Wesleyan and will do you and your work good. H. B. Hiatt.

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.09.

A word to our members of the Evangelical Methodist League.

Quite a little army of our Asbury boys from the Theological Seminary are now out with the tents in revival work. We are getting some encouraging reports from the work. Using these thirty-odd tents they will be able to bring the news of full salvation to tens of thousands of souls this summer.

The need is great, the opportunity is great, and those of us, especially interested in this work, ought to pray very earnestly for the blessing of God to attend our young brethren in this summer's campaign. The Holy Ghost is the ONE, and the only ONE, who can apply the gospel truth in a way that brings the repentance and faith that enables HIM to regenerate. We must keep this fact in mind, and beseech him to be present to guide, to bless and use this army of young ministers to win sinners to Christ and to help many of the Lord's children into full salvation from all sin.

How inexpressibly blessed to be cleansed from all sin! To be filled with the Holy Spirit! This is indeed heaven on earth begun. Work of this character abides and counts. There is so much mere profession, Decision Day action and various ways of bringing people without regenerating power, into the church, that one is distressed to think what the church will become as the old people who were converted and sanctified at the altars of the church, die off, and the membership becomes made up of persons who have simply joined the church without being born of the Spirit.

Let us pray earnestly that the young preachers who are in this tent work may be wonderfully blessed of the Lord. We do not think there is anything better for theological students than that they should spend their summer vacation in evangelistic services. Of all things, a minister of the gospel ought to have a passion for souls. In our theological work in Asbury we try to carry along theory and practice together. I do not believe there is anything that will stimulate study and earnest desire and effort for preparation for the ministry, like the experience in these tent meetings in soul winning with these young preachers during the summer. I thank God that we have gotten this work inaugurated and we must keep it in mind; above all, we must pray God that the Holy Ghost may rest upon and guide these young ministers in this gracious work.

It seems now that I shall not get to any of the camp meetings this summer. The doctors have all decided that my long sickness has so reduced my physical strength that I cannot undergo the major operation which they claim is necessary, but they are hoping to bridge me over with the promise that I may rest up, recuperate some of my wonted strength and be able for service in the ministry. My case is in the hands of the Lord, and it gave me no distress when I was told that I would not be able to survive the operation: God's will be done in me and with me.

We have arranged for me to leave the hospital next Monday, July 15, and go out to our little country place at O'Bannon, Ky., where it is hoped that through quiet and careful nursing I may come back to a good degree of physical strength. Let us pray earnestly, day and night, for our tent workers. I am leaning on the everlasting arms.

Faithfully your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

OPEN LETTER.

REV. O. G. MINGLEDOFF.

My dear Dr. Morrison:

OUR editorial concerning "The Growth of the Churches" provokes thought. I have read it carefully several times; but I am wondering how many of us have sufficient courage to make an honest inquiry into the reasons for success in soul-winning in some denominations and comparative failure in others. We are too apt to compliment ourselves for success, and to excuse ourselves for failure.

You seem to confine your call for explanations to three denominations: Baptists, Nazarenes, and Southern Methodists. Be it so. An answer for these three will apply to all others.

I take up first the cause of failure in Southern Methodism. There lies before me an article entitled, "Loose Him and Let Him Go." It was written by some one in Florida, published in the Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., and reprinted in Zion's Herald for May 29, 1929. The article is only half a column in length, but in my judgment it comes very near to being an answer to your inquiry, at least insofar as Southern Methodism is concerned.

Here is the article in full:—

"Pastors and laymen are chafing under the burden of keeping the machinery going, and many of them are wondering if something may not be done to simplify the routine work of the local church. Men who have answered the divine, irresistible call to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ and have unreservedly placed themselves upon the altar of service are not content to be compelled to give an unreasonable amount of their time to the mere mechanics of organization. Men are dying in their sins while preachers are puttering around looking for a 'key' man or woman to head this campaign or that drive. Why not untie the hands of the preacher and remove the shackles from his feet, giving him time to prepare to do the real work of a prophet? Why continue to weave around him a web of General Conference directions, rules, and regulations? Why not put more trust in the power of prayer and the proclamation of the message of the cross instead of relying so much upon committees, campaigns, and contributions? We desire it to be clearly understood that we are not opposed to organization. It has its place and is essential, but we are pleading that emphasis may once more be given to that which has made Methodism the greatest single factor in the world in the building of the kingdom of God here upon earth. Again we say: 'Loose him and let him go.'"

This feeling pervades the rank and file of Methodist preachers; and the laymen are even more troubled than their pastors. A few examples may help us:

1. A good preacher said to me three years ago: "God did not call me to be a tax collector, or to serve tables. I am going to locate." And he did locate.

2. Another brother said: "I am tired of rules and regulations, and demands upon me from Headquarters. I have no time left to preach the gospel. I am going to a church that will give me a chance to win souls." He has gone.

3. The chairman of a board of stewards remarked to me a few weeks ago: "I wish I could go to church one more Sunday morning and not hear a plea for money or some church organization. I want the gospel."

That will suffice. I could quote page after page of such statements. They tell a sad story. We have, in large measure, quit preaching the gospel. Our preachers are so loaded down with rules, regulations, and drives, and organizations, and collections, that they have little time left for pulpit preparation. If we in Southern Methodism ever get back into the soul-saving business, we must pay less attention to dollars and more attention to souls; and most of our church organizations must be scattered to the winds as rubbish.

II. There is a big difference between educating people into salvation and winning them by preaching the gospel. Here the Baptists have a big advantage over us Methodists. They are still winning by preaching. When a little book called "The Kingdom in the Cradle" came from the press, I made bold to say that it would curse the world for a hundred years. Now I will make it another hundred. In that book we have Pelagianism revamped, and handed to the church as God's plan for saving the world. One of the chief troubles with us Methodists is that we are committed to a program of educating sinners into salvation; but the thing cannot be done. We must go back to preaching the gospel, or finish dying.

III. Modernism is killing Methodism. Other churches are suffering also, but that does not help us. Modernistic preachers are not soul-winners. They may drag many into church membership, especially on decision days; but that is not salvation. Their methods are filling up many churches with unsaved people. May I go so far as to state that this spirit of infidelity is tainting much of the membership of nearly every large church body in the nation? But it cannot be otherwise when destructive critics are so largely in charge of our printing presses, church papers, Sunday school literature, colleges, seminaries, universities, and many of our big pulpits. A poisoned fountain cannot send forth pure water.

IV. Our comparison with the little church of the Nazarene is humiliating to us; but there is a reason. We Methodists have about forgotten the blessed doctrine of holiness; but the Nazarenes are true to it. Jesus Christ did not consider a church ready for soul-winning until it had received the baptism with the Holy Spirit. Read John 16:7-11. That is God's plan for saving lost men. He has no other that I know of. There is no use to deny that Methodism, at least her larger bodies, has almost totally expunged this necessary doctrine from her preaching. She must come back to both the message and the experience, or die spiritually—not far from it now.

V. The churches are losing about 85 per cent of their Sunday school pupils. The young people do not relish the dry stuff thrown out Sunday after Sunday from our pulpits, and they will not have it. Tell it out all over the land: In most of our big churches the young people seldom ever hear a sermon preached. If they attend Sunday school, they leave when that ends. We must in some way reach them with a saving message.

I say it with emphasis: The holiness churches, often sneered at by anti-holiness people, do not have much trouble with their young people. Could they eliminate the influence of young people from non-spiritual bodies, they would scarcely have any trouble at all with them. Let me say in closing that our young people want Jesus Christ, but they do not want the lifeless type of religion that the churches of this day are offering to them.

THE ROCK—JESUS CHRIST.

W. R. CHAPMAN, PH.D., D. D.

Text: Psalm 61:2; "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I."

Is not this a prayer? Is it not a most wonderful and transcendent supplication to God? David was crying out in his soul-spirit to be led to Christ who is the Rock. Christ is "as the shadow of a rock in a weary land." Here Isaiah was speaking of a "Kingdom which is not of this world."

Who is the rock that is higher than I? Who is that which is "as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land?" There is but one answer. David in the first statement has reference to Jesus only; and Isaiah, in the second place, has reference to Jesus only.

For, be it remembered, it is Jesus Christ only who stands out as "the rock that is higher than I," and "as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." No human resort, or home can give us any permanent relief or solace. They only serve to modify the pain and assuage it, but cannot eradicate and destroy it.

Before the great rock and in its shadow we can find peace, comfort, and loving care. It is a place of real safety. It is the place where we may lay down our burden and rest. "Cast thy burden on the Lord and he will sustain thee." Rest shall here come to the weary. "Fear not, I am with thee." He will remain with us, come what may. "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Are not these glorious and most transcendent thoughts! They are truths from the very throne of God.

"Lead me to the rock that is higher than I." Yea, even higher than the angels. It is a prayer; the noblest and sublimest one in the Old Testament. It is the Christian's prayer when he would be nearer to his God. It is the sinner's prayer when he would have his burden of sins rolled away. It is the Christian's hope; the sinner's salvation.

When we get to the rock that is higher than I, we can truly say, "I know that I have passed from death unto life." This too, is a noble realization.

The great fact remains that there is a rock that is higher than I; and there is a shadow of a great rock in a weary land. These clearly point out to us that there is a genuine "assurance of hope," and that hope has its realization, completion, and fulness in Jesus Christ our Saviour.

May I not call this "rock that is higher than I," and "the shadow of a great rock in a weary land," the "Delectable Mountains" of God. On these mountains Jesus is with us, and his Father is with us. Was he not on the Mount of Transfiguration and on Mount Calvary? Therefore, oh Spirit, lead us to that rock, and to the shadow of that rock; and though your life shall be "one day," which to your mind shall be "Neither day nor night," but only twilight, yet "at evening-time it shall be light."

"Before that rock all shadows shall be swept away. In the shadow of that rock shall no sin be; and when the evening shall come to you and to me, then we shall stand in the evening of our life and look out upon "new heavens and a new earth, wherein righteousness" and eternal peace dwell.

The same Spirit will so gladly lead us onward and upward to the rock that is higher than I, and to the shadow of a great rock in the weary land. Then, oh I beg you, I persuade you to let your prayer be, "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I." We have pains and sufferings, and sorrows and trials and disappointments of life, and even death.

So, let us learn a beautiful lesson taught us by one of God's lowly creatures, but nevertheless the work of his hands. That lesson comes to us from the deer. When the weather is cool and pleasant, and the brooks are shady and babbling in every beautiful glen, the deer will feed in the lowland. He grazes in the valleys, in the nooks, and drinks from the beautiful streams that flow in all directions. He takes life easy. In time of rain every leaf is a little cup of sparkling water from which he may slake his thirst. But let the sun shine bright and hot, let the day grow intensely burning; the ground is parched and burning; the beautiful little streams dry up, the clouds send down no refreshing rain. Under such troubles the deer, with unerring instinct and powers of knowledge will climb the mountain, and away off in some shady nook, some sequestered glen, he goes to some inviting familiar spring, and there at this fountain, and from its cool and limpid waters he drinks and is satisfied.

It should be so with the Christian. He should in ordinary times derive complete comfort and consolation from the common scenes of his every day life. At these times he may, with great pleasure, drink in joy from human friendships and love. At these times he should be able to find daily blessings and joys to fill him with daily delight and pleasure.

But sometimes seemingly God withdraws the effulgent brightness of his countenance. He permits his children to suffer, to have pain and sorrow, to weep and cry, to suffer and die, to be sick and sorrowful, to be tempted and even to fall; then as the deer goes to the mountains and seeks out a beautiful glen with its spring of limpid waters, so let us flee to the rock that is higher than I, and to the shadow of that rock in the weary land.

Guided by the spirit of all true grace, let us climb the mountain of God's eternal grace and his pleroma of mercy. If we do this, we are assured that, away up that mountain we will find the smitten rock of Horeb, where we may drink of that gushing fountain, of which if a man drink he shall never thirst.

We are all pilgrims on a journey. Our journey leads us from Ur of the Chaldees to Palestine, the land of promise, the land which flows with milk and honey. Yes, dear old pilgrim, dear young pilgrim, weary traveller through this sad and weary world, let us give you a word in season for him that is weary. "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I." Let that, my fellow pilgrim, be your daily, constant prayer.

Some of you are young and do not expect to go, but you may. Some of you are joyful and not ready to go, but you may. Some of you are full of young life, and do not yet want to go, but you may. I have seen them go. Last of all, and thinking of myself, you are warned by the gray hairs that in their snow mantle your intellectual brow, and by the many furrows which have traced their history of sadness, sorrow, sickness, and death, that you will soon, ah, too soon, be passing away.

Look at the old man. His best days are gone, gone beyond recall. His steps are tottering, his hand is trembling, his form is bent, the eye is dimmed, the ear refuses to hear, his face is wrinkled, all remind you that soon "the silver cord will be loosed, and the golden bowl broken." Are you ready?

This is a picture, but this is a true picture. It is a word painting, but the Master painter declares it is true. It is a story, but its setting is in fact. It is history.

Look again, and in looking you look over the eternally changing past. Think for a fleeting moment, and in thinking, you remember its season of joy and bliss, of pain and sorrow, of light and shadow of sin and holiness. Ah, you, I am sure remember the many loved ones who have gone out before you. You remember the grandmother, the son, the daughter, the wife, the husband, the mother and the father. Vacant chairs left. You remember them. You cannot forget.

I know sometimes you fondly call back the merry days of sweet childhood, the bounding fond hopes of youth, the stern realities of manhood. I would call them all back again, but they are gone. They will not listen. They will not hear me. They sternly refuse to return.

The snows and storms of those accumulated years have frosted your head and their suns have potentially beamed softly into your soul-spirit.

And so, pilgrim, you look forward to meet the great unknown, which is hastening so rapidly to meet you, and while you, because of your crudeness, cannot tell what the morrow may bring forth, yet you are obliged to feel, and even know, that you are almost there.

Again, I cry out, Spirit "lead me to the rock that is higher than I." So one by one we pastors and people are scattered. As these saints then at Rome had been or, when one by one, as they were at last, we are "gathering to our fathers."

Well, there is a way to live that we may make our end here glorious. Let us live the motto of Dr. Guthrie:

"I live for those that love me,
For those that know me true,
For the heaven that smiles above me,
And awaits my coming too;
For the cause that lacks assistance,
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that I can do."

Prayer and Importunity.

H. W. HODGE.

In the late summer of 1923, after two strenuous camp meetings, beside other duties as a church superintendent over a large territory from New York City to Virginia, I became weary in body and mind, slowed down on prayer and early rising, and began to loosen my armour and the cords of my spiritual corslet, when lo! I heard far away the sharp, quick "Yelp, Yelp" of Lucifer's Hell Hounds, and though far off I knew they were on my track. I called a halt, found me a quiet room in a hotel, and went to fasting and prayer. After a few days I recovered the keen edge of my velvet experience. I recall now that when a young lad on my father's farm near Opelika, Ala., Lee County, at fifteen years of age, the colored boys would go 'possum hunting with me in the wild woods at night. We had two fierce dogs, and when we heard their peculiar "Yelp, Yelp" we ran for the spot to find the 'possum up a persimmon tree, his tail around a limb, and his grin sardonic. But watch the conduct of those hounds. They would spring for a horizontal limb of the tree and, fastening their teeth in the wood, would swing backwards and forwards, their eyes glaring, the foam and froth oozing from their mouths, swinging clear of the ground like a man just under their quarry, uttering all the while a lugubrious growl that sounded a death knell for the 'possum.

Lucifer's Hell Hounds are on our Track! Man, man, fight and work and pray day and night, against the seductive allurements of expediency and ease. Your many activities will bury your spirituality in a grave too deep for resurrection. Yelp, Yelp! I hear those hell hounds! They are coming nearer and nearer. We must never quit our armor. Forever put aside "theistic evolution" and any doubts of Christ's virgin birth. We trample upon any doubt of our Lord's literal resurrection and glorious ascension to the throne of the universe. Lucifer's hell hounds will pursue the poor saint to the gates of heaven, and when you enter, they will leap to the bolts that secure the doors, and, swinging to and fro, will leave their slime on the very bars of the gates of glory.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

HOW GOD HEARS THE LITTLE ONES.

A True Story.

Amelia M. Starkweather.

Julia was a little girl, five years old. One day, as she was playing about the house, she went into the kitchen. Now it happened while she was there, that Katie, the maid was taken suddenly very ill. She dropped into a chair, and exclaimed, "O, Julia, run quick and call your mother, and bring the camphor bottle."

She ran into another part of the house, where her mother was busily engaged in conversation with a lady, and pulling her sleeve, said, "Mama! Mama!" several times.

Her mother paused long enough to say, "Don't interrupt me, my child," and turned again to the lady.

Julia, finding she could not get her mother's attention, ran into the pantry, to see if she could not get the camphor herself. But, although she got up in a chair and stood on tiptoe, she could not reach it. Now Julia had done all she was able to do, and yet she knew somebody must do something, or Katie might die.

And what do you suppose she did? With the help of a chair, she climbed upon the dining table, and knelt down, and said, "Dear Jesus, Katie's awful sick, and I can't make mama hear, and the camphor bottle's too high; and won't you please make Katie well."

She then went into the kitchen, and said, "You'll feel better now. I asked Jesus to make you well."

Katie, who was a Catholic, heard her through the door which was open, told it afterwards, and said, "I did get well right away."

When her mother asked why she climbed upon the table, Julia replied, "I thought I would get just as near Jesus as I could, and maybe He would come the rest of the way."

Children, that is the way to do in any time of trouble. Get as near to Jesus as you can, and he will come the rest of the way, but He can hear you just the same down low as up high.

This same little Julia was a very bright child, and good usually though sometimes she was a very naughty girl, as I will tell you. She was so naughty, one day, her mother told her she must go into the next room and stay till she was a good girl. She went out crying very hard, but in a little while said she would be good, so her mother told her to come in, but she didn't look just right. There was no smile on her face, and very soon she had to be sent out again; and again she came in with a promise to be good, but her mother had to send her out the third time.

Now, Julia got very angry; she screamed and banged the chairs about, and made a great noise for a few minutes. Pretty soon the noise ceased, and her mother went close to the door and listened. She heard her saying the little prayer she had been taught. "Dear Jesus, bless papa, and mama, and Julia, and sister, and make me a good little girl for Christ's sake, Amen."

Her mother opened the door very softly, and there she was on her knees; she got up with a very sweet smile, and said, "I'm a good girl now mama. I was so awful naughty, and felt so dreadful bad, I said to myself, 'I guess I'll say my prayers, and maybe Jesus will help me to be good.' And sure enough, she was just the best girl you ever saw. This is a true story, every word of it. When you are tempted to be naughty, little children, try the same medicine that Julia did, and see if it does not help you.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I surely enjoy reading page ten of The Herald. I am so glad to be able to say with all the cousins, that I too am a Christian. I love Jesus with all my heart. Praise his name! I'm a little Maryland girl only fifteen years old. My father is a minister, and I am very glad of it, because precious people are dying without Jesus and laborers are needed in the vineyard. Last summer my girl friend and I sang in a tent meeting on the western shore of Maryland. We really found pleasure in working for our Master. We expect to sing this summer again in a meeting with my father. I play a banjo and my girl friend plays a guitar. I would be very pleased to hear from any of the boys and girls. Halleine Smith, I surely enjoyed your letter in The Herald, Feb. 20th.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let me visit your page again? We have subscribed for the dear old Herald again this year. I love to read Aunt Bettie's pieces and those good sermons and that wonderful Sunday school lesson each week, and so much good news from many lands. I am so glad to hear Dr. Morrison is improving. I hope he will soon be enjoying health again. If I could I would tell you and the cousins how glad I was when I heard Mr. Herbert Hoover was elected for our President this time, because he is not for whiskey and Mr. Smith is, and many thought if he had been elected the open saloons would be here again, and it seemed to me like that would be more than I could stand to see. I thought like Sister Thomas said, I thought there were enough women voters to vote Mr. Smith out. It took fasting and much praying and right voting to get him elected. I am praising and thanking God for a good president. Dear readers, just think if the saloons were here there would be so many children without a home or a piece of bread, and so many more people without Christ than there is now. I will leave you for this time. God bless you one and all, is my prayer.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let another little Alabama girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am in the fourth grade. I go to the M. E. Church. I live on the farm, I like it best. I like to feed the pigs and calf and chickens and gather the eggs and play in the sunshine and breathe the pure air. I have four sisters and one brother. My papa takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Papa and mama belong to the M. E. Church. I hope Mr. W. B. will be feeding his chickens when this arrives so I can see it in print. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins, Ruthie Auston.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We have been taking The Herald for a number of years and I sure do enjoy page ten. I have written to page ten and I had my letter printed. Well, I guess the first thing to do is to describe myself. My birthday is April 25 and I am thirteen years old. Who is my twin? I am about five feet, six inches tall and weigh about one hundred and eight and one-half pounds. I have long brown curls and have a fair complexion. I go to High School and am in the ninth grade, and I like all of my teachers. I have nearly five miles to go to school. I go to the Nazarene Church and Sunday school and enjoy it very much. I live on a large chicken farm of one hundred and ninety acres and we have many good times. I am saved and sanctified and I hope all of the cousins can at least say they are saved and that most of them can say that they are sanctified too. I thank the Lord for all that he has done for me. One day in school I had an awful pain over my eyes and I could hardly stand it. I asked the Lord to help me and not so long after the pain was gone, whereas they usually hang on for a long time, and I praise the Lord for helping me. A few years back the Lord healed me from scarlet fever, and I was only sick three days. Some day I hope to be a missionary in Africa. I think of those poor heathen people who know nothing whatever of salvation. I have written some stories and have got 50¢ a piece for them and am saving the money for missionary books, and soon

I will start saving the money for missionaries and missions. I am writing to a little girl near my age who lives in Africa and works for a Miss Robinson by Fitkin Memorial Hospital. Her name is Sentikle Mapalala. I think it would do some of the cousins good to get a correspondent in some foreign land.

Well I must close or by the time Aunt Bettie gets done reading this, Mr. W. B. will be back from planting seeds—as I hope that is where he will be. Much love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

"His Delight."

The Lord our God will we serve,
And His voice will we obey,
Let my mouth be filled with thy praise
And with thy honor all the day.

Remember them that are in bonds,
As bound with them,
Let the peace of God rule in your hearts,
For we ought to obey God rather than men.

Honor the Lord with thy substance
And with the firstfruits of thine increase;
The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee
And give thee peace.

He that loveth his brother
Abideth in the light,
Give alms of such things as ye have,
For the prayer of the upright is His delight.

Lorraine O. Schultz.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I was reading The Herald this morning. I read the Boys and Girls' Page, and I found in one letter a girl had written and said her birthday was June 23rd, and she asked if she had a twin. That is my father's and my birthday. I will be fourteen my next birthday. I haven't seen only one letter from Tefft. I am a Christian. We have prayer meetings every Wednesday and Friday night and we can hardly wait from one time to the next. We have preaching every other Sunday morning and evening and today is the Sunday he is here. His name is Rev. Harry Illingworth; he sure preaches the true gospel. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. We have had quite a few boys from Asbury, and two of the Professors, Bro. Harold Hilliard, and Bro. Fred M. Essig. The first ones that were here were Alex Reid, one of our home boys and bringing with him different times boys from the school. But the first real revival we had was when he came during Christmas vacation bringing with him Bro. Paul Pappas, Bro. Horace Booker, and Bro. Hotchkiss. That was in the year of 1926 that was the first time we had the true gospel preached here since I can remember. I was saved and many others during that meeting. We have had many good meetings since that. And we always look forward for the Asbury boys to hold meetings in the summer. And some of the others were the Cochran Brothers, Bro. Redford, Priddy, and Mrs. Alex. Reid. They sure know how to preach old-time religion that saves and sanctifies. The Herald comes to our home every week and we look forward to the strength and help we get from it. As this is my first letter to The Herald I would like to see it in print. My letter is getting long, so will close. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Louisiana girl into your happy circle? I have never written before but hope you will let me have space for a short letter, for every one says Louisiana is behind anyway. Well, I guess you want to know what kind of a person is writing so here goes. I am a little over five feet tall and weigh one hundred pounds. I have black curly hair (bobbed) and dark complexion and brown eyes. My age is between fifteen and twenty years old. Who can guess my correct age. I finished High School last year, but I'm not going to school anywhere this term, but planning to go this fall. I am a great hand to read. I have been reading the Bible here of late and the Door-step Bible School has given me a Testament for my work. I am a member of a Bible class here and this work is new to me, but I enjoy it. I have a sister that will finish High School this year. I have only one sister and no brothers. My mother and father are living. I have a request to make of you all. I have an uncle who is very sick and has been for about three years with T. B. His name is H. J. Gryder and he lives in Cannon City, Colo., care Tremont County Hospital, and he has been confined to his bed most of his time and not expected to live long. If all of you that can and would write him a letter and send him some good reading matter, something that will cheer him. I'll go now hoping to see this in print for several reasons; the main one is I want my uncle to receive some cheer and comfort through the mail. I want everyone who reads this to write me a letter. Now boys, I mean you same as the girls.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Rap! Rap! Rap! Good morning Aunt Bettie. Will you crowd over and make room for a West Virginia boy in your circle of happy boys and girls? I have only been reading The Herald about two months but The Herald and I have become great friends. I like to read page ten very much, besides all the rest of the good reading that always is in The Herald, especially The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston. I think it is the most wonderful story that ever was written. I am wondering if one of you cousins would send me the first two chapters of the above named story, as I want to keep a record of it. I urge that all of you cousins that will to read it. I am proud to say that I have found Jesus and I find great joy in trying to live a Christian. In answer to Bernice Lorence Williamson's questions: Noah was about 120 years building the Ark, and it rained 40 days and nights. How many were saved in the Ark? Must close as I am taking up too much space. If Mr. W. B. does not get this I'll come again some time. Asking you all to pray for me that I may live a devoted Christian life. All that wish to may write to me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let another Alabama girl join your band of boys and girls? I am four feet, five inches tall and weigh seventy-four pounds. I am ten years of age. I am going to school. I am in the fourth grade. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. My father takes The Pentecostal Herald. I like to read page ten. As this is my first letter to The Herald, I hope to see it in print.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"CALLED, CHOSEN, FAITHFUL."

Rev. 17:14.

A tribute to my husband.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

On May 20th Arthur L. Brown passed away. His birthday was May 26. Sometimes, referring to it, he would say, "I am a May flower." And he was. As beautiful in his life, and as fragrant as the roses, sweet peas, syringas and nasturtiums that he planted and watered and loved best, up here on Zion, the God-given name of the hill where our home is located. "Quietness and confidence" in God best describe his daily life. Isa. 30:15. Once when a friend was ill, with no hope of recovery, the friends gathered to pray for her, asked for a peaceful, painless ending. In the Spirit he cried out, "You came to give life and to give it more abundantly." John 10:10. God answered his cry.

At the end as we stood near him, I was led to repeat these lines I had known years ago and forgotten until this trial:

"Measure thy life by loss and not by gain,
Not by the wine drunk, but by the wine poured forth.
For love's strength standeth in love's sacrifice,
And he who suffers most has most to give."

As I finished a friend said, "As you spoke the words 'poured forth' his life went out."

I said, "Is he gone?" It was like God to have it so.

"O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together." Psa. 34:3. He is fulfilling to me, "I have loved thee with an everlasting love." Jer. 31:3. And my joy answer is, "Thou remainest." Heb. 1:11. And so—

"For the loved dead, I cannot bind
My soul to grief.

For is it not as though the rose, that Climbed my garden wall,
Had blossomed on the other side?"
Death doth hide
But not divide,
He is but on Christ's other side,
He is with Christ, and Christ with me,
In him united, still are we."

CAIN.

The readers of The Herald will be sorry to hear that Sister W. R. Cain has gone home. She took her departure July 2, after being stricken almost a year. Her many friends of the holiness ranks prayed for her recovery but God ruled otherwise and took her to himself.

Her account with God was settled long ago. She was saved when a child and sanctified 25 years ago. She lived her religion every day. She cared nothing for empty profession. Hers was a real possession. Nothing but radical holiness satisfied her. She was uncomplaining in her life though for many years she stayed at home while Brother Cain was in the evangelistic field. She will be missed by the many who knew her and especially by those who attended the Kansas State Holiness Camp. She was an efficient assistant secretary of the camp and carried most of the burden.

Our prayers go out for Brother Cain that he may be sustained in these lonely hours, but Jesus will take him through till they meet over yonder.

Her funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. M. Smith, an old friend of a quarter of a century, and her body laid to rest in Wichita, Kansas.

OSBORNE.

Rev. Essie Osborne, who a number of years ago took her Theological credits from Asbury College, went home to heaven June 8, 1929. For years she was in the evangelistic field, and forgetful of self, labored to bring lost souls to Christ. When urged by friends to rest, she would say: "I must be about my Father's business."

Her illness lasted more than a year. She suffered intensely but would say: "There is not a spark of unbelief in me. I am ready to go to sleep and wake up in the arms of my Lord."

She loved The Pentecostal Herald and its teachings of full salvation.

DELL.

P. J. Dell, Sr., of Waycross, Ga., was born July 8, 1853, and died Dec. 14, 1928. Brother Dell was converted early in life and united with the Methodist Church, South, of which he remained a member until he was called to his reward. He was the faithful father of eight children, six sons and two daughters. His father, Philip J. Dell, was a Methodist circuit rider.

Brother Dell invested in and helped to support the work that has been done here in the Union Tabernacle. One young man who was converted in the Union Tabernacle in the first meeting we held in Georgia has received his degree from Asbury College and gone out to win others to the Master.

Rev. Allen, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, of Waycross, Rev. Clary, pastor of the Hebardville Methodist Church, and the writer had charge of the funeral. We hope to meet dear Brother Dell some day in "our Father's house."

Rev. Harvey B. Hysell.

RICHARDSON.
Philo M. Richardson, of Magnolia, Iowa, departed this life June 5, suddenly and alone. His ten-year-old grand-daughter found him dead on the kitchen floor when the rest of the family were in Idaho, on account of the illness of the boy's maternal grandmother. Mr. Richardson had suffered two strokes previously, the last one occurring last December. He recovered sufficiently to keep house for his son and two motherless children.
He was born October 19, 1848, was united in marriage with Miss Mary Downs, March 17, 1877. His wife died some ten years ago. He leaves his son Ralph and three grandchildren to mourn his departure.
Brother Richardson was a devoted friend of The Herald, having taken it for many years. He was also generous in purchasing books which he distributed among his friends.
Such lives as that of Brother Richardson have not been lived in vain,

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson V.—August 4, 1929.

Subject.—Belshazzar's Feast. Dan. 5:1-7:27.

Golden Text.—Be not drunk with wine wherein is excess. Eph. 5:18.

Time.—About 538.

Place.—Babylon.

Introduction.—It would be both profitable and interesting to give here an extended account of ancient Babylon; but both time and space forbid. We must be content with some few important facts of her history. The exact date of the origin of the city is unknown, but it was not long after the flood. Some place the date at about 120 years following that event. It seems to have been closely connected with the building of the tower of Babel.

I find some differences of opinion among writers of ancient history as to the size of the city. A Bible Dictionary lying before me says its walls were "50 miles in circumference, 300 feet high, and 75 feet wide." The reference given is Jeremiah 51:44-58; but such figures are not given there. In Arnold's S. S. Notes the figures given are 56 miles in circumference, 300 feet in height, and 87 feet in width, or thickness. Somewhere in that neighborhood, I suppose will be correct. According to these figures the city included within her walls not less than 200 square miles.

The Euphrates river ran through the city. It must have taken good engineering to build such a wall over that immense river at its inlet and its outlet. There was also a canal leading from the river underneath the city wall, and emptying into lake Nitocris. When Cyrus captured the city, he enlarged this canal, and drew of the water of the river to such an extent that his army entered the city by way of the river-bed.

Belshazzar the young king (he was not yet 20 years old) was a sub-king, ruling jointly with his father Nabonnedus, or as it is sometimes spelled, Nabonidus. From what can be learned of him he must have been a profligate young pagan. It is not at all probable that the army of Cyrus could have approached the city without being detected. No doubt Belshazzar and his people thought themselves secure within those mighty walls. Maybe the young ruler thought to bid defiance to the enemy by calling for a feast and a drunken revel at the height of the siege.

If you will read Jeremiah 51:44-58, you will learn that long before Belshazzar's feast God had declared that Babylon should be destroyed. But, as a matter of fact, the city persisted in some fashion for some centuries after the beginning of the Christian era. There was a colony of Jews there in apostolic days. St. Peter wrote his first epistle there. (See 1 Peter 5:13). I am fully aware that a tremendous effort has been made to make people believe that Babylon here means Rome; but there is no evidence in history to prove the claim. I suppose such a thing would never have been thought of, had it not been absolutely necessary to get Peter to Rome in order to make him the first pope. But Peter never claimed nor exercised such an office. Nor does any one know for certain that he was ever in the city of Rome.

One thing is certain: old Babylon that once ruled among men, is now but a heap of ruins inhabited by ravenous beasts. It has become the retreat of archaeologists and curio hunters. The word of God stands true forever more.

This thought may be added: Debauchery is never safe. Men may revel in gluttony and drunkenness, but the avenger, like a sleuth-hound, is ever on their track. Some day the monster will close in on them, and doom will be settled forever.

Comments on the Lesson.

That was a big feast—"a thousand of his lords," the grandeur of the realm. Young as he was, he already had his haven full of wives and concubines. These joined in the feast, and helped the men to desecrate the sacred vessels that had been brought from the temple in Jerusalem. In the midst of their feasting, drinking and sinning came the hand of a man that wrote the mysterious words on the wall of the immense hall in which they were carousing. The king's loins strength gave way till his knees smote together. What could those words mean? The wise men were called in, but could do nothing. Consternation filled every heart in the hall. Confusion reigned to such an extent that the queen was aroused in her apartments, and went in to see what the trouble was. She suggested calling for Daniel who, she thought, would be able to solve the mystery. If he could do so, the king promised him great honor and high position in the affairs of the kingdom.

17. Now read this verse and learn the meaning of manhood: "Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy rewards to another." May God pity the man who compromises the truth for position. Daniel was a real man. He was the king, while Belshazzar was the slave.

18-23. There is no reason to comment on these verses in order. Their meaning is clear. But note the courage and the faithfulness of Daniel. He was now growing old, and had been in captivity nearly all his life; but it had not cowed him. One takes off his hat to such stalwart, unbending manhood. He had lived and toiled through the reigns of several kings. He had seen Babylon, much of it, built and beautified under the hand of Nebuchadnezzar. He had witnessed his greatness, his sin against God and men, his insanity when he was driven from among men and ate grass like an ox, his restoration to sense and to his throne, and his final fall. Now he has the courage to stand in the presence of his grandson, and to tell him the whole story, and to remind him of that old ruler's forgetfulness of his obligation to Jehovah. The last hour of that dynasty had struck. Doom was at the gates; and drunken Belshazzar and his beastly guests must answer the call, and answer it in blood.

24 to 28. Mene, mene, tekel upharsin.—Awful words. Take Daniel's explanation. Peres is the singular of upharsin. To this day one reads these mystic words with a certain degree of awe.

I am just thinking how applicable these words are to the lives of multitudes in all ages. Can we read them, and retrospect our past with perfect composure? I confess that when I contemplate my years that are gone, I have no joy except under the blood of my Savior. Place God's word in one end of a balance and yourself in the other, but deny the efficacy of Calvary's blood. Try it, if you dare. Thank God for that precious blood! It is our only hope, our only plea! But, blessed be God forever, it is all we need!

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. J. W. R.: "We are in deep distress and ask that you pray that God will deliver us."

L. A. A.: "Please to pray for my son that God may fully restore him to health."

Mrs. L. C.: "Pray for our coming revival at Whittier, N. C. Also for a widowed mother who has throat trouble."

Mrs. D. F. Z.: "Pray for me and mine, and for an adjustment of my financial affairs; about to lose my home."

Mrs. M. M.: "Pray for me as I have a cancer that is giving me much pain. My only hope is in God, our Father."

W. C. S.: "Please pray that I may be converted and healed."

A reader: "Pray that if it is God's will I may be restored to health, and be renewed with the Holy Spirit."

Let every one who reads these lines pray for a mother who is a nervous wreck. She is unsaved, but God can save and heal her.

A CRY TO ARMS.

Ray N. Johnson.

War! Blood! Death! Hell! Terror! Degradation! Sin! All of these and more make up warfare. When America entered the war a cry to arms resounded throughout these United States. Enlist, mobilize, train, fight, were the words on the lips of children, men and women. Foes were within and without. Our nation must be defended. A Cry To Arms! A Cry To Arms! It was this cry that sent men by the thousands to don the kahki and go out in defense of a nation they loved. Some went to return—some never to return. The armistice came, sighs of relief and prayers of thanksgiving went up to God. The war was over. No more would we hear the awful cry to arms.

But today a cry to arms is heard. We must sound it as never before. We must again mobilize, train, fight. In defense of what? In defense of righteousness. David said: "Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?" That's the Christian's cry to arms. Today we are facing dangers and perils and foes that must be fought. Let us look at some reasons why a cry to arms is heard today.

Lost our God Consciousness.

People live today in sin with no thought or consciousness of God's wrath and condemnation. Christians live among fields of service and lose sight of the dripping blood of Calvary's brow, and the breaking heart of a crucified Lord who died that a world might be saved. Churches build—and exist—but no beacon light of faith pierces the darkness and calls home to God. A Cry to Arms!

Lost Our Fear of Sin.

Compromise, cowardice and corruption, have so cowed us today until no messengers appear before the walls of Zion to warn. No Jonah appears to break a city to pieces and bring a king and people to sackcloth and ashes. No John the Baptist dares to stand and cry "repent." We sleep and Jesus in his infinite mercy carries and millions are steeped in sin—while an endless cataract pours its human cargo into Hell. A Cry to Arms!

Hell Has Turned Loose.

Why? Is God asleep? Is God too little that the job he created has grown to such proportions that he cannot handle it? The reason Hell has turned loose is because we have turned loose of heaven.

You say from this picture it would seem you are a pessimist. No! Look with me now as I close. I see a battlefield, a terrible conflict is raging, dead and dying are strewn across the waste and devastated land. An army darkened with the fury of hell and dressed in power of a devilish hierarchy seems to be pushing a minority back into the hills. True, it is they have retreated into the hills. But now, what is this I see! New recruits, a new charge? No! It's the same group of people who were fighting and retreated, but they ride like new men. What is that banner I see held aloof? "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help—my help cometh from the Lord." Who is that rider at the front who rides like a veteran and seems to know just what to do? It must be Jesus.

Let us beat a retreat long enough to look unto the hills and get help from God. Then let us charge and fight as Jesus fought—with the sword of the Spirit. Then, a nation will hear of God and his redemptive grace and thousands will be saved. Reader, will you enlist? Now!

"If God be for us who can be against us."

DEDICATED TO BROTHER MORRISON, THE EDITOR OF THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD.

I've been thinking for some time
In this California clime,
I should speak a word or two
Of cheer and praise
To the editor of The Herald
With its banners all unfurled
For a full and free
Salvation in these days.

Brother Morrison, I will say,
You have been my strength and stay
Through your paper with
Your message clear and bright.
As I get it every week
And its help I truly seek Through God's Spirit to keep Meek through Gospel light.

May God make you well and strong
As you journey, journey on,
And give you many Blessed happy years.
With His sanctifying power,
Give you fresh, daily showers,
And keep you ever free
From doubts and fears.

I have never seen your face
But through sanctifying grace
We shall meet in blessed
Realms beyond the sea.
So I thank you for your faith
As it spans the world in space,
So that many may enjoy
Sweet peace with thee.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

We have just returned from Winnipeg, Manitoba. After spending a year in pastoral work there, we are again entering the evangelistic field and will go anywhere for just freewill offerings. Have had many years' experience in pastoral and evangelistic work. Present address, Rev. R. Wilkinson, 1106 Orleans Ave., Keokuk, Iowa.

Wm. S. Runyon: "We wish to recommend our dear Brother Wilkinson to those who may be looking for help. You will find him a true holiness preacher, that you can trust in the exposition of the word and without any fads. Firm as a rock with compassionate love."

Community Upbuilding Campaign will be held under the auspices of Eckerty Holiness Association; it is interdenominational. Hear the Todd Evangelistic party, August 2-11, 1929.

Workers—Rev. William H. Todd, D. D., pastor of the First United Brethren church of Terre Haute, Ind., evangelist in charge.

Miss Pauline Todd, Music Director, Soloist, Children's Specialist, of Terre Haute, Associate Evangelist.

Miss Lucille Todd, the daughter of Rev. William H. Todd, an accomplished musician, will preside at the piano and assist in children's work.

Accommodations—The Tabernacle located in a beautiful grove near Eckerty, Ind., offers comfortable accommodation, ample parking space on the ground, abundance of good water, beautiful shade. Dormitories for women and dormitories for men, with dining room on the ground. Entertainment at reasonable rates.

Order of Service—Children's meeting 9:00 A. M., sound gospel preaching; Bible study 10:30 A. M., inspirational singing; people's meeting 2:00 P. M., great fellowship; Gospel service 7:30 P. M.

Invitation—Christians of every faith are urged to support this campaign. The public is most cordially invited. Spend ten days with us in spiritual retreat and wholesome recreation. Lizzie McBurney, Sec.

LIGHTHOUSE MISSION
St. Louis, Mo.

Lighthouse Mission has been, and expects to remain an Interdenominational Holiness Mission Work. St. Louis and its environs has a population of a million people. There are not likely over 1,000 holiness people in the city, hence a very great need of a place where real wholesome Scriptural Gospel of full salvation is preached and taught the year round.

A most cordial invitation is extended to all authorized holiness preachers, evangelists, college presidents, deans of evangelistic institutes, professors, editors of holiness papers and holiness laymen to visit Lighthouse Mission when in or passing through the city. Our address will be found in the public directory at Union Station. Regular weekly services, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday evenings, and a full day on Sunday.

We are slated for one of the National Conventions with Dr. Butler, President of The National Holiness Association this fall or early winter. We wish to commend and recommend Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Box, young people's workers, who had charge of the young people's meetings at the Wilmore camp meeting this year and who are engaged there for 1930. They are a product of Lighthouse Mission and are always and everywhere its loyal supporters.

Rev. E. P. Phillips was elected to fill out the fiscal year as Superintendent of Lighthouse Mission (which ends with September) at the June monthly meeting of the Board of Directors.

Lighthouse Mission Publicity Man.

CHURCH MUSIC.

Music is an important part of public worship, and in order to be acceptable to God, his praises in song must be offered in spirit and in truth. While the singing of solos, duets, or anthems are often helpful, yet it must be admitted that the singing of hymns and spiritual songs by the congregation is of far more importance because all may take part in it.

Newly-formed congregations often have a great longing to possess a pipe-organ, when the truth is, a piano, especially a grand piano, has many advantages over the organ. For one reason, it is a staccato instrument, and it is therefore better fitted to keep a congregation together in singing. Again, it is not so expensive as an organ, and it is usually an easy matter to find one who can play.

The purchase of a pipe-organ is often a step in the wrong direction. It involves extra expense such as the hiring of an organist and the purchase of special music, and usually there is an attempt made to attract and to entertain the world with artistic music. All this is detrimental to the true spirit of worship. And in this connection we may mention the tendency of song-leaders to turn the song service into a singing-school, striving after artistic effects, or urging the people to sing loud in order to produce a great volume of sound. All this is wrong for our praise must be genuine if it is to be acceptable to God.

Thomas W. Shannon.

Central Holiness Camp Meeting Wilmore, Kentucky. July 25th to August 4th

Rev. C. W. Ruth, Rev. C. F. Wimberly, and Rev. H. C. Morrison will be the preachers. Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Box will have charge of the Children's and Young People's meetings. Prof. Kenneth and Eunice Wells will have charge of the music.

Let all the people rally to this time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Write to Mrs. O. C. Garvey for rooms in the women's dormitory, to Mrs. W. F. Wyatt, for reservations in the Men's dormitory. The W. C. T. U. will have charge of the dining hall, which means that first class meals will be yours at a very reasonable price.

Ministers entertained free.

Remember the date, July 25 to August 4, and don't fail to be with us. Write Prof. W. D. Turkington, Wilmore, Ky., for information relative to the camp meeting.

Asbury College— A Full Salvation School

"In the Heart of the far-famed Blue Grass"

LEWIS ROBESON AKERS, President

A STANDARD COSMOPOLITAN "A" GRADE COLLEGE enrolling students from forty states and ten foreign countries. One hundred and fourteen A. B. graduates in the class of '29. Recognized as "A" grade by the University of Kentucky and the Kentucky Department of Education. Member Association of Kentucky Colleges and Universities. Member Association of American Colleges.

A DYNAMIC CENTER OF SPIRITUAL POWER for those contemplating Christian service at home or abroad, but furnishing basic courses for the regular professions of life. Asbury College is noted throughout the nation for its fidelity to Methodist standards. Its good fellowship and spiritual atmosphere are unusual.

THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS provides fourteen majors leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree, in Classics, French and German, Spanish, English, Education, History, Philosophy, Political and Social Science, Biology, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Fine Arts, and Religious Education.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION supervised by accomplished and experienced teachers, master pupils of Percy Grainger and Joseph LeVhine.

ART DEPARTMENT. Vivian May Norris, Director, Member of the Art Students' League, A. M. I., an illustrator of America's leading periodicals.

EDUCATION. Special attention given to this Department by two highly trained Graduate teachers, with a view to meeting various state requirements.

HOME ECONOMICS. Splendidly equipped quarters with latest scientific electric apparatus.

EQUIPMENT. One of the latest and best equipped colleges in the State. Commodious brick buildings including three dormitories for young men, one of the finest Memorial Halls in the South housing three hundred young women. New water system, electrical conveniences, beautiful campus lighted by a "white way," New Memorial Library of 40,000 volume capacity, New Auditorium, seating 2,000, New Four Manual Memorial Pipe Organ.

ENVIRONMENT. Sixteen miles south of Lexington on main line of Southern Railway and near L. & N. main lines. Altitude 1,000 feet. One of the most healthful towns of the State, population 2,000, with no pool rooms, moving pictures, or other demoralizing influences. Total expenses for the school year $430.00. School begins September 18.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

BETHEL ACADEMY

(Chartered under Asbury College)

Don't fail to send us some new subscribers on the 50c offer.

Don't fail to send us some new subscribers on the 50c offer. See page 16 for what it means.

What Would It Mean to Put THE HERALD Into 10,000 New Homes?

1. It would mean 40,000 souls touched by the soul-stirring articles, reports, sermons, etc., every week.
2. It would mean a mighty progress in the spread of scriptural holiness over this country.
3. It would mean the enlightening of the people on the dangerous heresies that are being so widely propagated in our schools and churches.
4. It would be an inspiration to thousands to live a higher and holier life.
5. It would mean 160,000 pages of Full Salvation literature sent all over the land to be read, re-read and passed on every week.
6. The good that would be accomplished would be incalculable.
7. Won't you be one to help bring this to pass by sending for sample copies of THE HERALD, showing them to your neighbor and urging them to subscribe on our Special Offer of 50 cents from now until January 1, 1930?

Won't you be one of ten thousand who write us today, enclosing at least two subscribers on this liberal offer? Or better still, how about investing $5.00 of your tithe money in sending THE HERALD into ten homes for the remainder of the year? By so doing, this defender of the faith will be warning the people of the dangerous destructive criticism so popular today, and urge them to a life of separation from the world, and the importance of cleaving to the faith of our fathers which is seeking to be destroyed by the enemies of the Bible.

Dear Reader, if there ever was a time for you to rally to THE HERALD in its defense of the faith, that time is now! Let us hear from you immediately, with the names and address of friends who will subscribe through your solicitation, or by sending some of your tithe with the names of those whom you know will be blessed by reading THE HERALD.

We are counting on YOU to help us in the great work of spreading the Gospel of a Full Salvation among people who are perishing for the bread of life.

Yours for the Old Gospel,

A. C. Morrison

LET US HAVE ONE MORE "DRIVE."

By Dr. L. R. Akers

WITH every age there are terms that spring into prominence, are used by the multitudes and then discarded with the coming of another era. One of the most familiar words of the past decade has been "drive." This term has been used and used until now it has fallen somewhat into disfavor. We have had "drives" in almost every imaginable movement, "drives" for social uplift, "drives" for greater missionary endeavor, "drives" for community chests, ad infinitum. But before this term becomes obsolete, why not have one more "drive"? Why not a Full Salvation "drive"?

The only remedy for sin-enslaved humanity is the religion of Jesus Christ; not the ritualistic, ceremonial or formal trappings so prevalent in every-day worship, but the regenerating and sanctifying power of Christ himself vitalizing and energizing the ranks of society, renewing, transforming, cleansing and empowering men for full-orbed lives regnant in glorious and sacrificial service.

Let us have another "drive" for a revival of spiritual dynamics instead of the continued powerless regime of human mechanics. Let us have again an acknowledgment and full recognition of the Holy Spirit who is at the head of this dispensation and whose supremacy is so largely ignored by the large majority of those who make up the membership of the Christian church. Generally conceded is the deplorable fact that this is a commercial age, an era of pleasure and luxury, when God and his claims upon human life and service are largely forgotten. We have never known a time when a mighty revival of full salvation was more necessary than at the present moment. In the hour of great spiritual dearth comes the supreme challenge to the people of God to exalt and promulgate the saving and sanctifying power of our Christ and to put forth extra effort to show men the way of the Cross which leads home to God. Instead of acquiescing or submitting to the discouraging conditions, we should gird ourselves afresh with a dauntless and deathless determination that there shall be no compromise with or surrender to the forces of evil in this battle against worldliness and spiritual indifference.

One of the heartening hopes for the present hour is that there yet remains a large element of people in the evangelical churches who have not been swept away with the ideas that are being promulgated everywhere, who are not sanctioning and endorsing the program of ultra-modern divines who entertain and flatter their hearers, rather than in humility leading them to repentance and saving faith in our Lord. Thank God, this element of more spiritual people are in deep distress over existing conditions and out of this distress and soul-agony there may yet come the long-desired revival of old-fashioned, Holy Ghost power. This more spiritual element realizes that the church, to save herself from a flood of worldliness, false teaching, and wrong practices must have an endowment of power and it is coming to realize that the only source of that power is in the Holy Spirit.

We believe there has been no more auspicious hour or a more critical one in the religious life of our nation than at present. This is the time for holiness people everywhere to make every possible effort to "drive" forward with an unquenchable desire and an invincible determination that the world at large shall know there is power in the blood of Jesus Christ to cleanse from all sin.

Summer furnishes an unusual opportunity for brush arbors, camp meetings, tent meetings, meetings in barns or vacant buildings, —or out of the way places. We who love the Lord and desire to see his will prevail among men should come together in this crusade for a revival of the preaching of full redemption from sin. Multitudes of earnest Christians of all denominations are feeling their need of power, of freedom, of joy, of the liberty that will enable them to go bravely and cheerfully to the task of soul winning. It was the saintly John Fletcher who suggested that "every one who received the baptism of the Holy Spirit was a witness and preacher of righteousness."

Let us inaugurate this Full Salvation "drive." There are many people who want to do and who do not know just what to do. Why not get together with those of like mind and sow the community down with holiness literature. The circulation of papers and tracts, the placing of books either by sale or by free distribution, the taking of subscriptions to THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, —these and other methods would greatly facilitate the ushering in of the drive that would count for time and eternity.

Tent meetings are a source of great spiritual uplift and usually can easily be arranged for. The Holy Spirit is mighty and powerful and he operates through willing instruments. He must have the consecrated feet of God's children to walk with, their fire-tipped lips to speak through. He lives and moves in those who move. He gives power and effectiveness to those who are spiritually aggressive. Let us be busy about his business and in that business find our highest joy.

Upon my own heart there has been a burden for many months to the effect that God would raise up in Methodism some great spiritually outstanding bishops who would sound the trumpet note for a mighty convocation of the ministers of the church, not to meet and discuss human programs, but to meet in humility and prayer before God until there is another Pentecost tipping the tongues of God's prophets with fire and truth, energizing and sending out his evangelists to proclaim with a note of authority (sadly lacking in the present hour) "Thus saith the Lord." Let us pray to the end that a spiritual Moses may be raised up to lead the hosts out of Egypt into the Canaan land of full redemption. Let us seek again the upper room. Though the world says, "hurry," God still calls his disciples to "tarry," —to tarry until they are endued with power from on high.

Prayer changes things. Prayer is the medium by which the seemingly impossible becomes the possible. Prayer removes mountains. Prayer confounds and confuses the enemies of God. Prayer puts to flight the impious hosts of wickedness. Prayer is an invincible weapon in the hand of the faithful believer. Our fathers were not far afield in the statement that "The devil trembles when he sees

The weakest saint upon his knees."

The coming revival must be the fruit of prayer. There is no other way but the way of prayer and the way of faith. According to our faith so will it be unto us. Tarrying before God in prayer breeds a faith mighty in girth and in its reach for the extension of the Kingdom of our Lord among men.

We are a powerless people because we are a prayerless people. Our Lord, untouched by the blight of sin, found it necessary to tarry in the early morning for hours in communion with his Father. If prayer was so vital to the Sinless One, how much more necessary to us who "have all sinned and fallen short of the glory of God?"

Let us then who experience and believe in Full Salvation covenant together that through prayer and faith we shall prevail, that we will indeed put on a personal "drive" for the spread of Scriptural Holiness over these lands; that we shall leave no stone unturned to advance the cause of full redemption in this deplorably needy age. Let us broadcast widely the circulation of holiness papers, books, tracts, and helpful literature. Let us plan for revivals. Let us call evangelists. Let us utilize willing, devout, and consecrated men and women. Better have mixed metaphors than mixed theology. Better be willing to break the rules of grammar if only we may break hearts. It has always been the glory of God to use the weak to confound the mighty. Any one who has the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, who has the call from God to preach and who loves immortal souls can be used effectively in spreading the good news of full salvation. Let us plan for great things for God and expect great things from God.

Man was made for God. Sin has alienated him from God. Christ is the ladder by which God comes down to man, by which man ascends to God, and he is the only ladder by which this chasm between the sinless God and the sinful man can be bridged. He alone can bring the At-one-ment or reconciliation of God with man. God made man to be upright and downright and inright and all right. He created him in moral purity. Sin has separated man from God. It has not destroyed God's love for man. He loves him in his sin. He so loved him that he gave his son, Jesus Christ, to redeem him from sin.

NOTES FROM THE STUDY AND THE FIELD.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Preaching the gospel in the Orient is vastly different in method from the homeland, but the message is the same. Here one speaks through interpreters all the time. I have preached through Chinese, Japanese and Korean interpreters and every time I preach I try to keep to the great essentials of the Gospel message. I had an experience sometime since in China where some preachers evidently did not enjoy the messages. It was a place of great need, sin abounded and not much vital salvation; aversion to revivals was very apparent. One preacher expressed his disappointment over my preaching because he said I preached on nothing but sin, salvation and sanctification. I really praised God for that unwilling and unintended testimony.

In preaching in Shanghai on full salvation I centralized a good deal in Romans; the following notes set forth "The Fulness of the Blessing."

In Chapters 13, 14 and 15 and 16 of Romans Paul sets forth the practical things of Christian life and experience; and we must remember that the Christian religion is something to be practiced as well as professed. Paul is desirous that they should be fully established in the Gospel, and that in their general conduct they should exhibit the graces of the Spirit. He wants them to show forth Jesus in their lives. He wants them also to be joyful Christians and he says in Romans 14:17: "For the Kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Paul further says in Romans 15:13, "Now the God of hope fill you with all joy, and peace in believing that ye abound in hope through the power of the Holy Ghost." In Romans 15:29 he states some of his own experiences as a preacher of the Gospel when he says, "I am sure that when I come unto you I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ." Now, the fulness of the blessing sets forth the following:

1. Fulness of cleansing. Through the blood of Jesus we may be cleansed in our hearts from all defilement and made entirely pure, obtaining the blessing which Jesus promised, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

2. Fulness of love. In John's Epistle 4:17 and 18, this love is spoken of as "perfect love." "There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear." This "perfect love" means loving God with all our heart, mind, soul and strength; this implies that no wrong temper, none contrary to love remains in the soul, and that all the thoughts, words and actions are governed by pure love.

3. Fulness of liberty. 2 Cor. 3:17. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty." It is our privilege to enjoy the glorious liberty of the children of God.

4. Fulness of power. The fulfillment of the promise, Acts 1:8: "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you."

5. The fulness of God, as Paul prays for in Ephesians 3:19, "That ye might be filled with all the fulness of God." Dr. Adam Clarke commenting on this Scripture says, "To be filled with God is a great thing, to be filled with the fulness of God is still greater, but to be filled with all the fulness of God utterly bewilders the sense and confounds the understanding." Deliverance from sin is a great blessing, but how much greater blessing is it to be filled with the fulness of God.

All through Romans Paul insists on righteousness. He says, Rom. 14:17, "For the Kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Practical Christianity means that SALVATION.

SALVATION is of God assured,
Through Christ's own precious blood out-poured;

'Tis by His finished work alone
That saved ones are His very own.

AND SAFETY too is of the Lord,
So true and sure is His own Word,
That nought can harm those saved by grace,
Christ is their Sure and Hiding Place.

SALVATION is from heaven above,
The Gift of God in wondrous love,
To sinners dead in sins and lost,—
Yet few are conscious of its cost.

SALVATION is a glorious fact,
God proves His every word exact,
And those redeemed, by Christ's own blood,
Are safe and kept, made near to God.

SALVATION is for sinners free,
Through Christ Who died on Calvary's tree,
And none are really safe except,
The yare by GOD both saved and kept.

SALVATION we delight to tell,
How Christ came down to save from hell,
That rebels might, by grace, now be
From sin and Satan's bondage free.

HOW SAFE and happy are all those,
Who are now saved, who once were foes
But now in Jesus Christ, Who died,
They will for aye in Him abide.

SALVATION!—Are YOU saved by grace,
Or are YOU still in Adam's race?
'Tis not of works, but grace alone,
And this saved ones delight to own.

we must be inright, and outright, and up-right, and downright and all right. In Rom. 16:17 Paul urges them, "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." Paul is always strong on doctrine. It is an important thing to hold fast sound doctrine. When we become careless doctrinally we shall be careless ethically. Loose doctrines lead to loose practices. We need to stand by the old doctrines of grace, and if we are going to build the church of Jesus Christ up in righteousness and true holiness we must hold fast to sound doctrine.

In Romans 15:30, Paul says, "Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me." This is the only place in the Bible where the "love of the Spirit" is spoken of. All God's people should have the love of the Spirit which will create a great love for the things of the Spirit. Romans 8:5.

In coming to a conclusion, Chapter 16:24, he says, "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." And then he speaks of being established, "according to my Gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ." Paul is insisting again, as he does all through this great Epistle to the Romans, on the great importance of being established and settled in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and if we follow the teachings of this great Epistle we learn, step by step, the blessed secret of a real, deep, joyous, Christian experience.

In all Paul's writings we see how he puts Jesus the Divine One, Jesus the Mighty Saviour—saving to the uttermost right in the very center of all his teachings. As one has put it,

"Christ, absolutely necessary,
Christ, exclusively sufficient,
Christ, instantaneously accessible,
Christ, perennially satisfying."

Over here in China we are constantly meeting with returned students from America. They arrive with their diplomas and college degrees and in many instances they find employment in government institutions. Some, however, are not so fortunate and keep looking around for something to put their life into. Many of them have been trained in Modernistic schools and have lost their faith and therefore, do not want to tie up to Christian work. They remind me of the young man in the following story:

The story is told of Filippo Neri, founder of a great school in Italy, that while at one of the universities, a young man whom he had known as a boy, ran up to him with a smiling face, and told him that his long-cherished wish was now gratified; his parents had given him leave to study law. He had entered the law school, and meant to spare no pains in pursuing his studies.

After he had spoken for some time in this strain, the holy man, who had listened patiently and kindly, replied:

"Well, when you have completed your studies, what do you mean to do then?"

"Take my doctor's degree," said the youth.

"And then?" said Neri.

"Then," said the youth, "I shall have a number of hard and knotty cases to manage, and by my eloquence, learning, zeal, and acuteness, I shall draw notice and gain fame."

"And then?" repeated Neri.

"Why, then?" added the youth, "I shall be promoted to high office, and shall make money and grow rich."

"And then?" continued Neri.

"And then," said the young man, "I shall live comfortably and honorably, in health and dignity, and shall be able to look forward quietly to a happy old age."

"And then?" continued Neri again.

"And then," answered the young man, "and then—and then—I shall die."

"And then?" once more asked Neri with deeper emphasis.

The young man made no answer. He hung his head and walked thoughtfully away. He took a look into "eternity," and it changed the course of his life.

How different the case of so many unsaved Oriental returned students from some young men I met with in Korea. One of my interpreters there was Brother Chai. I learned his story which interested me. Seventeen years ago he was an ardent student of English as he intended to go to America to complete his education (and perhaps get spoiled), and although a church member when he met the Oriental Missionary Society he found himself unconverted. He got converted in the old-fashioned way, then got sanctified wholly, and then? Well, he got a change of vision! America faded from his horizon. He felt a clear call of God to preach and save souls! College degrees had no longer any attraction for him. He laid himself upon the altar of entire consecration to preach, to teach, or train workers for God that Korea might be brought to God. It is wonderful the way God has used that man and given him infinitely more than American schooling could have brought him! Another of their preachers is an honor graduate of the Korean Christian College. He was due to go to U.S.A. for further study and more degrees but he chose rather to stay in Korea and become a holiness preacher with the Oriental Missionary Society. God bless him!

SOME TRAVEL NOTES.

We have just returned from a month's labors in Central China. Our mail brought us letters from India, Egypt, Palestine, Prague, England and Japan. We shall be in India in the Fall; our schedule is incomplete thus far for India. Any missionaries in India wishing to write us, our address till August 10, will be Bethel, Box 533, Shanghai, China. September will find us in Singapore, care British and Foreign Bible Society. Address us October, care Indian Witness, Lucknow, India, or care Miss E. L. Southworth, Wun, Berar, India. We are definitely announced for the Yietmal Convention, Oct. 17-22.

THE PROMISED REVIVAL.

By Mrs. S. B. Shaw.

ALL around us today the name of our God is profaned and souls are hindered from yielding their hearts to him by the spiritual famine that is upon us. They do not see that we are being punished for our sin and unbelief but they say, "There is nothing in the religion of the Bible." "Christian experience is nothing but imagination." "God has no power to save and keep from sin and build up his people. Our lives are as good as theirs. Why should we seek after their God?"

O, beloved, this is the saddest part of all! For the church to suffer is only just; but through this famine the very name of our God is reproached. The name of our mighty Redeemer is profaned in all the heathen world 'round about us, because of our sin and need, and because of the famine God has placed upon us.

O, beloved! There is too much excuse, there is too much cause, there is too much reason; when the men of the world 'round about us say, "I do not believe there is a man that lives without sin." The church of the living God ought to be a living contradiction to such a statement as that! Surely the same motive which led God to make his declaration to Israel, will lead him to declare in this day that he will send a revival. It is the glory of his own blessed name that is to be accomplished in such a revival in the church of the living God! And if we ask for it and plead for it and believe for it on this ground, we shall find our faith increasing and God will answer our prayers. I remember at one time being greatly burdened for a poor, proud, wilful backslider—a man whom God had once called to preach the gospel and had used in the salvation of souls; yet he had wandered so far from God that he had gone into spiritualism and sin of almost every kind. For about two weeks a great burden of prayer was upon me; but as I saw his awful pride and rebellion and hardness of heart my faith would have utterly failed had not the Holy Spirit prompted the cry in my heart, "O Lord, for Thine own name's sake, save that precious soul." I saw the evil he was doing—the awful reproach he was bringing upon the cause of God and how God might be glorified in his salvation and with that cry—"For Thine own name's sake" I was enabled to prevail and that poor hardened, sin-bound soul was brought in deepest humility to the foot of the cross; every sin was confessed and abandoned and deliverance and salvation came. And was not God glorified in his salvation more than in his bondage and condemnation? O brother, if you cannot prevail for the salvation of souls and for a revival in any other way, plead the name of God himself—that his Name may be glorified.

We noticed also that while this revival was to begin in the mind and purpose of God, it was to bring, what every true revival always brings, heart transformation. We have been saying, "If the people will only repent, God will have mercy; if people would come to the fountain, God would send His blessing." God proposes to bring his people to repentance! I believe in the free-will of every soul that God has created; but I believe this revival is to come to Israel not because she is worthy, but because God purposes and wills it. He says, "They shall be willing in the day of my power." Sometimes you preachers say God can't do anything until people are willing. I say, if God had done nothing for me until I had of myself come to a point of voluntary and unconditional surrender, I would never have been saved. But God for his own mercy's sake wrought in my heart to bring me to heart-felt repentance and submission to Himself.

God can and will, in answer to prayer, work mightily upon human hearts and hear and answer the weakest longing of a human soul after himself. My case is but the experience of every soul that is converted. God will not forgive you until you repent. But, if you haven't grace enough in your heart to-day to repent, you have a right to call upon God to move your soul to repentance, and God is willing to answer that prayer. I know I prayed that prayer and He answered it mightily. I remember when my heart went out after God. I knew I ought to realize my lost condition. I knew I ought to come, above everything else, to seek the salvation of my soul, yet I was still cold and careless, until, from the depths of my soul there came a prayer prompted by the Holy Spirit that God would help me, and he, by his own power, humbled my proud heart and brought me where I could seek him from my very inmost soul. He answered the prayer and even the very longing of my soul. When a revival comes to Israel, the depths of hearts will be broken up and they will be moved to repentance.

God doesn't visit Israel with His chastenings, and leave her in that condition. This is not God's way. He says, after he comes and brings her back into her own land, then she shall remember her own evil ways and her doings that were not good and shall loathe herself in her own sight for her iniquities and for her abominations. Let us not say then that when the church, as a whole, repents, God will revive his work but that when, in answer to the prayer of those whom God can use, God pours out his Spirit and revives his work, the church will repent. Then repentance will come. God will see that it does come. God alone is able to break up the deep of hearts and bring them down in the very depths of humility and sorrow for their coldness and their indifference and their lack of faith and love and devotion.

As we have seen, this heart transformation included heart cleansing and restoration to Canaan. As of old, the rightful inheritance of the church is purity and prosperity. He wills that his people should dwell in the "Land of corn and wine and oil,

With every blessing, blessed," and in working and praying for the revival God promises, we must be satisfied with nothing less!

A result of that promised revival that we did not particularly mention was that the waste places should be built up. O my brother, my sister, are there any waste, any desolate places in our land today—places that ought to be built up and occupied by the church of the living God? Have we any waste places in Chicago? Are there any churches in Chicago, where on Sunday morning there is a congregation occupying a few seats and thousands all around them going down to an eternal hell? These waste places are not only in Chicago, but all over this land we find them—the waste places, the desolate places. God says these waste places shall be built up.

We have been limiting the power of our God! We have been looking the wrong way. God says, "I will build up the waste places." There are none so waste but that God is able to build them up again. There is no wilderness so desolate, but that, under God's blessing, it will blossom as the rose.

God help us, and send us down in confusion today, because of our little faith and love! O, beloved, if your faith is small, is it not because your love is so small?

Some of you may have heart-aches because of loved ones out of Christ. For many years my heart has never ceased to go out for a loved one backslidden from God. I have cried from the very depths of my soul for God to bring him back. I never think of him without praying for him and I have never given him up. I have never let go of my hold on the throne of God in his behalf. I know he is fighting against God. I know he is (so far as I can see) going farther and farther away, in the rebellion of his soul, from the God that once saved him. But I have only pled for him the more earnestly, "For Thine own mercy's sake! For Thine own name's sake," spare that blood-bought soul! I cannot give him up! I will never, never give him up so long as God in His mercy does not utterly withdraw the Spirit's aid in intercession. I don't expect to give him up, until God brings him back,—a broken and a contrite soul, to Jesus Christ. What has given me that faith? It is the love back of it! This was Mr. Shaw's oldest brother who was saved in his last sickness and gave a good testimony before his death. We have given up people too easily. We have given up pastors, when they fought holiness. We have given up brothers and sisters here and there. Why? Because we didn't have faith; because we didn't love them as we should, had we gone down in humility at the feet of Jesus, and cried to God as Christ did when he said: "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." But some of you say that those cold-hearted men knew what they were doing, and that they had the light, but they drove in the nails, and crucified him. In a sense they did know, and if Jesus could say what he did in behalf of that mob, the Holy Spirit can come to our hearts and say it in behalf of such as those we have mentioned that seem to fight against the truth. Then before you cease to pray for any soul be sure that that soul is worse than the members of that cruel mob that rejected the Saviour and cried out, "Crucify him, crucify him," for doubtless many of them were afterward converted in answer to the prayer of Jesus.

But there is a condition. I said that this revival started in the mind and purpose of God. Glory to God; I believe God speaks, sometimes, to the hearts of the Children of Israel, as he spoke in olden times to the prophets. I believe he has been telling his children up and down our land in their places of prayer that he will build up the waste places and send a revival to the church; but he says: "I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them." The very first thing God does in bringing about a revival is to grant an especial spirit of intercession for such a revival to souls that are moved by the burning love of Jesus. I said to you, beloved, I believed that God had promised it. I can't tell you how God has moved my soul the last few months. I have been just a little worker in his vineyard for a number of years. I love the holiness movement, and holiness people. I want to live and die with them, but while I am praying for the holiness work and the holiness people I am praying for more than that. For months an agony of prayer has taken possession of my inmost being. I have been praying for this Assembly but not for this alone. I have been praying for the denomination of which I am a member but not for that alone. I am praying for a revival in Israel, a revival like that described in our lesson that shall begin in the church and sweep through the church and reach out to the uttermost parts of the earth.

God has brought us together for a purpose. We are here in obedience to the calling of God and the leading of his Spirit. We are here, many of us at least, because our hearts have been led out in prayer for a mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit,—not for our own sakes but that we might be bet-

COMING TO TERMS.

By the late Bishop H. C. Morrison.

Text—"Agree with thine adversary quickly, whilst thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison."

"Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing."—Matt. 5:25, 26.

WHAT IS THE ADVERSARY?

WHATEVER may be the primary meaning here, God is the adversary of sin. God hates sin. God will ultimately destroy all sin, and all souls who refuse to renounce it. But redeeming love holds divine wrath in abeyance, while God himself comes as a plaintiff with a complaint against the sinner, and seeks to bring him to agreement with himself. So the adversary becomes the plaintiff.

The world is not to confer, nor compromise; but "agree" with him. Come to his terms. Comply with his requirements. Here is a distinctive feature of the Gospel. Salvation is one price. Other things may be "marked down" and fluctuate in price with the seasons; but the price of pardon is without change. Some pulpits mark it down; but the marked down salvation, like shoddy goods, will not wear and last. A genuine, all gold pardon is never to be had for less than an absolute agreement with God.

Agree with him quickly. Here is need of haste. Issues are involved which admit of no delay or indifference. Something of such moment as to allow no claim before it. This word "quickly" should fill the unsaved soul with alarm. It is a danger signal. We use it at the tragic moments. When the flames burst through the dwelling; when the dear one is in danger; when life hangs upon a moment. This is the word used to urge the sinner to agreement with God. It is a moral volcano. God himself is using it and urging haste.

WHILE THOU ART IN THE WAY WITH HIM

God has come to save the lost. He travels with every man in the first stages of life, for the express purpose of bringing him to an agreement and into harmony with himself.

Sinner, you have a divine traveling companion. Whether you realize it or not, God is journeying with you. Your life may be to him an incessant insult, yet he follows you with more than a father's solicitude.

The plan of salvation is simply God's devisement to get into the way with us and journey with us for a time.

This life, therefore, is the most momentous part of our existence. Brief it is, but fraught with destiny. How solemn, how awful is life! How tremendous its issues!

HIS WALK WITH US REVEALS HIS CHARACTER

When one has sinned against us we are slow to propose adjustment, if indeed we do it at all; but God comes to us seeking to reconcile us. How can he afford it? He could not if he had as little right character as we have. But such is his wealth of character that he can afford it. So vast is the difference between God and us that he can afford this approach and offer to us.

You feel no resentment toward the little child when it is angry and rebellious; but you seek to quiet and comfort its spirit. But if the parent of that child offend you, you resent the offense. Why is this? The parent has character which the child has not.

In our smallness of character God deals with us as we deal with the little child. And he does it simply because he is God, and infinitely above us in nature and character.

We also see his infinite patience daily in the life journey. When we propose compromise with an enemy we do not wait long for his reply. If he says, "I will think over the matter; come back to see me again," we do not parley with the ignoble creature. And we would see him in the neighborhood of the "last river" before we would go to him again. But God has such grace and character that he comes to us again and again, and even "stands at the door of the heart and knocks" for admission.

LEST HE DELIVER THEE TO THE JUDGE

Among the Orientals the creditor had power to arrest and arraign the debtor. God is the great creditor, who has the sinner at his mercy. He can bear with him or deliver him to judgment by his own sovereign power and will. Hence, as he travels with us, en route to the judgment, let us wisely "redeem the time" and "agree with him quickly."

THE JUDGE.

It is the office of the judge to pass sentence and fix doom. Here we have the impersonation of that white-haired skeleton form whose jurisdiction is universal, and whose specter is a scythe. We call him "Death."

All flesh and all spirits, out of harmony with God, shall pass under his dominion. The body of the saint will come under his power; but his spirit has the "victory over death;" while the sinner is delivered, soul and body, into his hands.

Death is such a judge as has no sympathy. He knows no clemency. Pity is a term at which he sneers and claps his skeleton hands in derision. He knows no bribes and changes no decisions. But God will break his power over the very dust of his saints, while the impenitent will rise only to pass into the "second death."

AND THE JUDGE DELIVER THEE TO THE OFFICER

The officer inflicted the punishment; applied the bastinado, or other instrument of torture. Satan stands as the ready servant of death. As the angels do the will of God in hell. To be "delivered by the judge to the officer" is to pass, under doom, from the hand of death into the custody of Satan, and by him to be cast into prison.

THE PRISON

Hell is the great universal state of prison of the damned. We build prisons, one or more, and they prove too small; but the prison of the universe is ample in capacity. Not built within—but outside the corporation of God's domain—built without—where there is room—infinite room—eternal room. "Outer darkness." Out where the sun never shines nor the stars never smile. Out where God himself never looks. Outer darkness is the prison.

The effort to escape it is but to plunge deeper. Were it walled in or circumscribed, then might one escape. But its very outer-ness is its impregnability. To go further is to sink deeper into its gloom. Outer darkness! Who can portray it?

AT ANY TIME

Here is a royal prerogative, "The issues of life are in his hands." Not at a suitable time, or an appointed time; but at "any time." No moment is exempt. Nature has set times. Her flowers bloom, her fruits ripen, her snows fall in their appointed season. But death walks side by side with man from his cradle, his skeleton form keeping step with his step, and his scythe just in his advance. At midnight or at noon, in pleasure's round or sorrow's depths, when least expected or least prepared. At any time.

Who die just when they expect it? Raphael's greatest painting was left unfinished on the easel. The merchant's day book is left half posted on his counter. The books of the schoolboy (as in my own home) strapped and buckled under his desk. Laid down at evening time never to be taken up. At this moment the invisible archer may be poisoning the arrow and bending his bow with unerring aim, at one in this audience. "At any time."

THE PRISON TERM

"Until thou hast paid the uttermost farthing." In the British National Gallery is the celebrated picture of Perseus holding up the head of Medusa. That head turned everyone into stone who looked upon it.

There is a warrior with a dart in his hand. He stands stiffened into stone. Another with a poinard beneath his robe, and just ready to strike; but he is now an assassin in statue, motionless and cold. Another creeping stealthily, with murderous intent; but there he stands in stone. He looked upon that fatal head, only to be instantly petrified.

SUCH IS DEATH

What I am when I look upon it, I shall be forever. If I see death in bad character, I shall be transfixed in that character. Death sets the character colors, and makes them changeless as eternity. Oh, the duration of the doom in outer darkness! "Until I have paid the uttermost farthing."

How shall I pay a debt so vast that Christ could only meet it with the blood of his heart? But oh, the "wonders of his love!" He will pay—he has paid all our hopeless debts, and now he only asks that we accept what he has done. That we "agree" and come into harmony with him. Then, while you may, accept release from this mountain load—this burden of sin which will sink you eternally; accept that deliverance now. Agree with him now. Agree with him "quickly"—lest at any time—today—tonight—tomorrow—he "deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into the prison eternal."

Our Sojourn In Jerusalem.

G. ARNOLD HODGIN.

O this is Jerusalem, the city of Holy history, of Christ, Calvary and eternal redemption, of conflicting religions; and the place of pilgrimages and sojourns since the days of antiquity! The multitudes of pen productions about Jerusalem make us shrink from putting anything on paper lest we be but indulging in vain repetitions or in copying others. But, if the great have given us their impressions, the deeply spiritual have been inspired to pen for us, pictures of this sacred spot, and the ordinary have been bold enough to bother us with their platitudes; perhaps there may be forgiveness for us if we dip our pen to join the last named company, at least, and tell you what we have seen also.

To one who has lived among the images of the ancient glory of the city of David, and has failed to take into account, the proclamation of desolation upon this home of the Jews, Jerusalem is disappointing. One cannot exactly tell why, but there is something about the most of us that revels in the romantic. Our visualizing is many times like air castles and mirages, distorted, and the actual envisaging is ruthless in its reality. Until we see with our own eyes, we are prone to attach to that which we anticipate, a grandeur, which we do not like to have dissipated. The encomiastical writings concerning the Holy City have so far obscured the actual facts that many have thought this was a paradise. There are some noteworthy matters which it may be well to tabulate, as inevitable factors in rendering Jerusalem a sad disappointment to those of us who may look, at the present time, for utopia.

First: the want, degradation, and filth that one encounters within the gates. Jerusalem as it is now walled in, is surprisingly small. One can walk around its walls on the outer side in one hour, easily. The people are packed into a small compass with no adequate sanitary arrangements, the air reeks with foul odors. It may be true that many of the beggars that infest the whole place have a fairly good bank account or shekels stored for, they know not what, but the poor are here and in abundance. Rags barely cover the unwashed bodies old and young alike. Certainly slaves filled the streets and homes in the days of David's and Solomon's glory, but we find it somewhat difficult to believe that the conditions of health and supply of wants were on the low level then, that they now are. The house has been left desolate, and when there is desolation, there is almost inevitably, degradation.

Second: the overrunning of sacred places, by conflicting creeds, who squabble and quarrel over the exact spot of our Lord's nativity, where they crucified him, and where he lay. It is scarcely to be expected that it would be otherwise, when we take into consideration the fanatical superstitions of people, but nevertheless, it is disappointing that we should have to see this thing, which stares us in the face everywhere. Personally, we were glad to leave the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, with its five different sects all loudly proclaiming its spot as the exact place, and go out to the Garden Tomb, and there look at what is probably as near the right spot of crucifixion and burial as any, and meditate on the voluntary giving his life for us, and just thank our Lord for salvation through that shed blood.

Third: It is disappointing to one who loves life in religion, to behold this mummery—this hypocritical parade of dead religiosity. Of all places on the face of the globe, where we should expect life and devotion in religion, surely it would be in Jerusalem. But not so. Sacerdotalism with its candles, crucifixes, and cakes of unleavened bread, obscures real worship, and many times forbids it. The Moslem, who prays five times daily, who, while revering Jesus as a prophet, yet considers it among the worst of sins to worship him as God, who thinks Allah is so merciful that murder and adultery are lesser sins than 'shirk' (the worship of Jesus), surely makes no contribution to either devotion or holy living. But, Mosques are everywhere, and the Jews wail because there stands one on their former place of worship and the glory has departed. The veil is upon the face of them all.

Fourth: A pall of gloom hangs low on the city, as such. The curse has not been lifted from its inhabitants. This pall of desolation hangs over its domes and minarets, and will hang there until Israel shall say "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." (Matt. 23:39). Did we expect to see and feel the glory of the Lord upon Mount Zion? We were mistaken. It is not there. The only glory and blessing discernible, is in the heart irrespective of places, and in the hope of his coming and the turning away ungodliness from Jacob.

If our story should end here, I fear it would be but a dismal dirge. But it does not. There are many things that make the heart thrill and the soul swell with gladness for an opportunity to come and see. To view the land and city where so much has transpired and will come to pass, that so vitally affects all mankind, is of itself a wonderful opportunity, and, to us who know him, a source of great joy and blessing.

First: it is a place of holy history. Around this city, as the center of Israel's hopes, aspirations, and devotion, shaped the events that led up to the coming of a world's Savior and Lord. Every battle, every conquest, and every act of jurisprudence that found existence in Jerusalem from Abraham to Christ, were factors that made contribution to one result; a path for the feet of the man of Galilee. Unwitting, were they, as are the many forces of mankind's maneuvering today, in shaping the world for the second advent of Christ, yet nevertheless God, who holds the winds in his fists, shaped the Holy City for the fit time and opportunity to receive her Lord. No other people but the Israelites would do, and not another city but Jerusalem could fit into the plan. This is the place about which God wrote history. How it thrills our hearts to contemplate—to meditate upon it! Again, it is here that the tragedy, intended for a complete overthrow of the true kingdom, was transformed into the greatest victory over sin and rebellion that the world can ever know. The exact spot is of little importance when we remember that somewhere in this immediate vicinity, Jesus died for you and me, that the new tomb of Joseph of Arimathea could not hold him, and he arose according to promise, that he showed himself in his postcarnate glory to his disciples, and that from the summit of a lofty hill in full view of the city, he ascended on high. Once again, this is the city, when on an occasion of a great Jewish feast, while a band of waiting expectant disciples tarried in an upper room, the Holy Spirit fell upon them and ushered in a new day, and the promise of the Father was fulfilled in sanctifying and empowering them to successfully accomplish all the will of God among men. Our souls are exultant in this, that we have fulfilled today, the promise of the Father to us, because it was fulfilled in this city near two thousand years ago. Pentecost brought the Holy Spirit to remain in the world until Jesus comes.

Second: This is the city where prophecy will be gloriously fulfilled in the second advent of Jesus Christ our Lord and King. It will not be London, nor New York, nor any other city except Jerusalem. We have walked through the grimy lanes and byways, and said to our own hearts, that it will not always be so. The feet of him who ascended from Mount Olivet (where we had a gracious prayer meeting), will stand again on the same hill, and the city shall become the throne of the King of kings and Lord of lords. All dearth, degradation, darkness, and death will be abolished from the confines of the place of promise. Want will skulk back to its lair, and plenty shall come forth with the golden horn. Vengeance, war, crime, and thievery, will wither and die like mown grass under a midsummer sun. Righteousness, peace, and honesty will cover not only all this land but the whole world as waters cover the sea. All these and ten thousand other things which our hearts cannot conceive and our minds cannot comprehend will change all that now appears, into a paradise.

And so we walk amidst the filth and darkness, and sin, and our very souls thrill in holy excitement, as we contemplate what is to be, in Jerusalem.

The Fountain of Wisdom.

The character and piety of a home may well be judged by the books found on the table or in the library. If you go into a home and find books by Ingersoll or like characters, you are made to feel that there is unbelief in that home; if you find a library filled with light, trashy fiction, you will know there are no high ideals or holy thoughts about God or things eternal.

The well-read, well-informed person is able to cope with most every situation, and every one owes it to himself or herself to set apart say an hour a day to read. The Greek proverb that "The fountain of wisdom flows through books" is true. The reading of the right kind of literature encourages, enriches, makes one happier, a better citizen, a better Christian and not infrequently fills one with a burning desire and determination to do more for God and humanity.

You can make no mistake in buying the following books, as they are written by great and good men and on interesting and helpful themes:

Great Men and Great Movements, by Bishop Chas. B. Galloway.

This book has 328 pages, bound in cloth, stamped in gold.

Great Revivals and the Great Republic, by Bishop W. A. Candler.

This book has 344 pages, bound in cloth.

The Snare of the Fowler, sermons by Rev. Geo. R. Stuart.

This book has 234 pages, bound in cloth. Hot Shots, Sermons and Sayings, by Sam P. Jones.

This book has 304 pages, bound in cloth.

Wit and Wisdom of Warren A. Candler.

This book has 285 pages, bound in cloth.

Wesley and His Work, by Bishop W. A. Candler.

This book has 223 pages, bound in cloth.

The above 6 books, if published today would sell at a net price of $12.00. We offer to send them to you postpaid for $3.00. When our present stock of these books is sold out the edition will be exhausted and more than likely not be reprinted. So send us your order at once, as it will be an investment you will never regret.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Two notices appeared in the Saturday evening paper of Goodwill which should be printed here. The first we mention read as follows:

"Because of failure to secure certain furniture for the big gospel tent, and a number of seats that were shipped and have been delayed, the meetings in the tent will not begin until Tuesday evening, May 3. The public will be treated with excellent music and a sermon by a very interesting preacher. All will be welcome."

The other notice to which we call attention read as follows:

"The good women who have taken so much interest in arranging for my lecture in the City Hall at 8 o'clock Monday evening, May 2, insist that I shall say a word to the public through the columns of your excellent paper. I will simply say, that I believe my information on the subject for discussion, is of such character that I shall not only be able to entertain, but to give the people some valuable instruction which to me, is of prime importance. I have not only read widely on the subject of spiritism, but I have become acquainted with some of the greatest living mediums. In addition to all this, I have had a most remarkable personal experience, which convinces me beyond all doubt, that it is possible for those who were once in the flesh, after what we call death, to reappear so like their former selves, that recognition and identification are positive. I shall be glad to see my friends at the City Hall at the time above mentioned."

"Respectfully yours, Judas Iskabod."

The reader should be reminded that our good friend, John Henry Huston, knew absolutely nothing of the remarkable "comedy of errors" which had transpired since, with a broken heart, he had left the city of Goodwill with the purpose of visiting Southern Europe. He did not know that a gentleman by the name of John Henry had been taken to the hospital the same afternoon, and about the same time, that he entered the institution in New York City. He was entirely ignorant of the fact that a mistake had been made by the young woman in the office of the hospital, and that because of this mistake, he was supposed to have died, his remains shipped to Goodwill and buried there. He knew nothing of the fearful disturbance he had created on the night he looked in upon the great audience in the dear old church, and the spectacular ride of the Queen of Sheba up the main aisle of the church.

He did think it a bit strange that none of his friends had written to him, but being exhorted by his physician to keep perfectly quiet, he supposed that it was generally believed that in due time he had shipped for Europe and was now resting quietly in Southern France.

With the regaining of his health and former vigor, he had determined to go back to Goodwill, undertake a revival meeting in a large tent and see what could be done toward the rescue of his people and the large property plant he had built with his own money. He had had the tent made, had employed the two young men to go before him, set up the tent and make all arrangements for his coming. In order that there might not be any organized effort to hinder his work, he had instructed the young men not to mention his name, or let any one know that he was coming to hold the tent meeting.

He had started from Florida in his automobile, expecting to get in to Goodwill on Saturday afternoon, but high water had prevented his progress and he did not get to the city until deep dusk on Monday evening.

The young men who had gone before him to make preparation, thinking he might want to be well posted on conditions, and having heard much of the lecture on spiritism, had bought three tickets and reserved three seats in the front row of the City Hall.

They were ignorant of the tragic event connected with Huston's dismissal from the pastorate of the church, the manner in which Judas Iskabod had been placed in the pastorate, and the interesting events which followed. They had reserved a room at the hotel for Huston, but had not placed his name upon the register. When he arrived in the grownig darkness, they took him at once to his room and he was made quite comfortable.

At their suggestion, that they should go down to supper, he assured them that he had eaten late dinner and would, perhaps, take a little lunch after the lecture, in which he was quite interested. After his young friends had given him the subject and the name of the lecturer, he was quite amused and more deeply concerned. He was pleased to find that they had reserved seats on the front row at the Hall.

The evening was chilly, especially for one just out of Southern Florida, so walking from the hotel to the City Hall, Huston turned up the collar of his coat, pulled his hat well down over his eyes, and was not recognized by any one on the street. The lights in the Hall were turned down so dimly that no one could be recognized in the building. It was often used for moving pictures, although there was an arrangement by which the Hall could be brilliantly illuminated. There was a perfect glare of white light upon the spacious platform.

A few moments before 8 o'clock a splendid array of ladies and gentlemen, in extreme evening dress, came out and sat upon the platform. After they were seated in a very picturesque position, the beloved Judas Iskabod walked out with low-cut vest, three diamonds sparkling in his expansive shirt bosom, and his coat cut back in the finest hammer-tail design. The only thing that at all marred his attractive appearance was the fact that, notwithstanding, he was a man of rather short neck, he had on an extremely high collar, which came up to his ears and gave him the amusing appearance of trying to peep out of his garments at the vast audience which received him with intense clapping of hands.

The president of the University, who was the master of ceremonies, was just about to arise to introduce the speaker, when the Mayor who, with his family and friends, was seated in a private box in the first gallery, near the platform, asked if he might be permitted to make an announcement. The courtesy was extended to him in the most graceful manner. He arose and announced that the congressman representing that district would speak in the City Hall next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, and insisted that he should have a large hearing.

For some reason, the apparatus which controlled the light in the Hall, had failed to work, but the difficulty had been found and remedied, so that when the Mayor had finished his announcement, the president presiding, said, "If there is any one else who wishes to make an announcement of importance, I am sure it will be the pleasure of the speaker of the evening to have him do so now. We are, in fact, a few minutes ahead of our schedule, and will be glad to offer this opportunity to any person who has an announcement of interest to our people." He also thanked the Mayor for his announcement, and added a few words of exhortation for the people to be present to hear their honored representative.

It occurred to Huston that it would be a good time to announce his meeting; judging that most of the people supposing him to be in France, he thought the psychology of the surprise might have its advantages, and no doubt would create considerable interest and bring out a large audience for his first service.

In a suppressed voice he asked if he might make an announcement, to which the president replied, "Certainly, if it is of a character that should interest the people of the city."

Just as Huston arose to his full height of six feet, two, in ruddy health, a full glare of light was flashed on in the Hall. Before Huston could speak the people on the platform who had known him well during his pastorate, and who had seen his supposed ghost at the pageant, leaped to their feet white with horror. The Queen of Sheba, who had been enjoying some weeks of nervous prostration, and the solicitude of her many friends, for her gradual improvement in health, chanced to be sitting very near the Rev. Iskabod, who had collapsed in his arm chair. She leaped into his lap, threw her arms around his neck and cried to him at the top of her voice, for help. "Oh, save me Save me!" she besought him.

Huston, in amazement, turned to the congregation, most of whom had been present when his supposed ghost appeared when, to his surprise, the people leaped to their feet, many of the women screaming aloud, and the whole audience broke for the various exits. He turned toward the stage and found that the Rev. Iskabod and the Queen had fallen upon the floor apparently unconscious, while the university president had taken the water from the speaker's stand and was bathing their faces. Every one else had left the stage and, in a few moments, no one was left in the Hall, except Huston, with his two young men, and the university president, with Iskabod and the fainting Queen.

Huston went forward and asked the president to please explain to him the cause of the intense excitement, eager to apologize if he, by mischance, had done anything to disturb the peace of the assembly.

ter fitted to be used of God in bringing about, and prayer is the condition God has about and prayer is the condition God has given. If God has sanctified our hearts, it is not because he wanted to do us some special favor. Jesus said that it was written that his Father's house should be called a house of prayer. If our hearts have been made temples of the Holy Ghost it is that the Holy Ghost might find in us a place to pray,—might find in us instruments that he might use in interceding with groanings that cannot be uttered for the accomplishment of God's will and purpose in the salvation of others.

God will hold us responsible for this opportunity! The very heart of our God is going to be grieved if we do not get down lower before Him than we have ever been in the past! Great responsibility rests upon us as holiness workers—as those that know the power of the blood of Jesus and the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and God will require much at our hands! God wants to use the holiness movement and to use it gloriously in bringing about a revival that shall take away the reproach that is upon the church and bring eternal glory to our Redeemer. O beloved! God commands us to go down! down!! down!!! in the unsearchable love of God, until God shall lift us up and move us out and carry a deep and glorious revival of pure and undefiled religion all over this land.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

THE WOODLAND INTERDENOMINATIONAL HOLINESS CAMP MEETING.

The Woodland Holiness camp meeting was held May 30-June 9, under a new tabernacle in the beautiful grove at the Woodland Methodist Church, eight miles from Willow Lake, S. Dak., in one of the finest farming sections of the state. The tabernacle, new and commodious, was dedicated on Decoration Day, and a large offering was taken to pay for it. It was a lovely service, all the saints rejoicing in the successful accomplishment in securing this wonderful tabernacle. The camp meeting was far better than last year. The writer having held both meetings sees a wonderful advancement in the work of the Association. He helped to reorganize it last year, as that was the first annual camp meeting, and most all the officers were new in holiness camp meeting work. This year the weather was very fine, and the crowds splendid, overtaxing the seating capacity of the tabernacle the last night. The interest was good, souls finding pardon and purity from the beginning to the ending. Finances came so easy, and liberally that all expenses were paid and there was almost half enough money left in the treasury for next camp expenses. The president, Mr. Erle Arne, is a veteran of the World War, a lieutenant, but one of the finest Christian gentlemen you will find in a year's travel. He is truly a sanctified man, and his wife is a wonderful woman. She is the Association poet and of no mean ability. She is a fine reader also. She gave us a reading at the dedication service that blessed every heart. The Treasurer of the Association, Rev. Roy Cox, who is also cashier of the bank in his town, and Sister Cox the pianist for the Association, with whom we stayed during the camp, are among God's elect. No more humble, holy people live. They give of their time and means to the work of a full salvation. We never were treated more royally than by them. The Secretary, Rev. Elmer R. Finch, is a holy man and very much interested in the work of the Association. I have not found a finer class of laymen in all my twenty-seven years of evangelistic work than these South Dakotans. They represent a number of the old-line churches. Rev. R. E. Chambers and his wife who are fine singers belong to this camp, and were with us a number of times and gave us some fine messages in song. Rev. W. Myron Redfield and his family were with us a number of times and rendered good help; he and his wife are in the pastorate at Esmond Methodist Episcopal Church. He was a member of the greatest Quartet in the State, and a wonderful baritone singer. Rev. Roy Mudgett and his family from Mitchell, eighty miles distant, were with us over the last part of the camp. Their daughters brought us one good message in song. Rev. Paul Miller, pastor of the Methodist Church, Corona, S. D., spent several days in the camp bringing his family one hundred miles to be with us. All of these Methodist preachers are holiness men. Rev. Doty, another pioneer Methodist preacher, was with us two days. He was instrumental in raising part of the money, to procure the tabernacle. Rev. C. F. Griger, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Raymond, S. D., brought a carload of folks to the camp one day, and he supports the camp with his influence and money also. Rev. N. A. Luke, pastor of the Carpenter and Woodland Methodist churches, where the camp was held, is on the Board, and stood right by us all the way through. He is a graduate from C. E. I., so one could not expect anything else from him.

The singing was conducted by home talent, Rev. John Friesen, of Carpenter, S. D. John is one of the sweetest-spirited men, and one of the finest leaders and soloists in the whole country. He and his brother Jake broadcasted from Huron, S. D., many times, and are counted among the best. This camp is Auxiliary to the State Camp at Mitchell, thus linking it with the National Holiness Association, and is supported by an excellent people from all the churches and deserves recognition in all of our holiness papers. This makes twice I have been their evangelist, and we have many friends among these dear people. God bless and prosper them in their work of full salvation in that part of South Dakota. I shall hold them all in glad memory.

I represented Berachah Rescue Home at Arlington, Texas, in a service and they gave me good offering for the work.

MOUNTAIN MISSION WORK.

These are days of encouragement with us in the Holiness Mountain Mission work in East Tennessee and Southern Kentucky. One of the most encouraging is how those who have been saved and sanctified in the meeting in the past years are standing true and are, by their lives, proving that holiness is practical in every day life; especially is this true of some who have been saved from lives of awful sin, who are now the leading Christians of the various sections in which they live. Some, by their efforts, have been used to build churches in their neglected neighborhoods, some are preaching the gospel with blessed results. Another thing is, we are receiving many calls to enter new sections by the people living there who say we want a meeting like you held in such and such a place that we may quit our wickedness like they have done where you held meeting some time ago.

We have met also with a number of other things within the past few weeks that are encouraging us to believe for a great summer's campaign in the Holiness Mountain Mission work during the coming summer months.

We have, and are receiving more urgent calls for meetings than ever before, especially from neglected places where the work is so much needed because of neglect of holding gospel services in those places.

Remember us in special prayer that we may be able to give these hungry people what they so much need and what they are so earnestly calling for.

Charles B. Kolb, Elgin, Tenn.

TWO GOOD MEETINGS.

We opened fire on the devil at Sunshine Mission, Columbus, Ohio, March 24 and continued until April 7. The fight was hard but thank God for answering prayer and giving us victory. The Holy Ghost was faithful and brought conviction to a great many hearts. There were a number of souls who bowed at the altar for healing, for pardon, and the second blessing. The good Superintendent, A. O. Griffith, just left the entire meeting in our hands and we did our best to let God have his way with us.

April 18 we were engaged to lead the song service in a revival meeting at the Nazarene Church, Jeffersonville, with Rev. S. Thomas and wife, the converted Jew of Indianapolis, Ind., as evangelists. The church was edified under the preaching of Bro. Thomas and wife. These servants of God are fearless preachers of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Bro. Thomas was a lawyer before his conversion.

The good pastor, Rev. Burnett, had prepared the church members for the revival by having prayer for some time before the meeting began; this made for the success of the meeting. This meeting will be long remembered because of the manner in which the truth was given to the people.

Rev. Harry M. Alexander.

CHICHIMULA, GUATEMALA, C. A.

Dear Co-laborers:

Ever since Bro. Reid left us last February, we have had a desire to write and tell you something of the benefits of his visit, but have been hindered by sickness and other causes, and we beg you to pardon our delay.

Bro. Reid's ministry among us will be long remembered. He came and secured a very special place in the hearts of the young people because he feels and loves and cares. His messages were fruitful. Not among the least of the benefits of his visit to us was his ministry in music. Roman lands know only wails and dirges. There is no joy here. This is the land of the cypress, you know. The music he brought out of an old out-of-tune, borrowed piano and the songs he sang brought tears to eyes and blessing to hearts. Some hearer said he thought he was in heaven when he heard the music. Brother Reid took to the byways and was a blessing in the out of the way churches. During the last meeting of the annual conference here, time was given to the people to tell of their gladness, and with their testimonies to salvation they gave expression to their love and appreciation of Bro. Reid's visit.

We would be glad, dear friends, if you would see to it that our brother return to us some day. The needs are so appalling. We feel that you are among those who care.

I sailed for the United States April 11th, and if I can meet any of you and tell you of the needs in Central America and of the Indians of the Andes in South America I shall be very happy.

R. Esther Smith, Supt.

REPORT OF MEETINGS.

On June 30, we closed the Whetstone Valley Holiness camp meeting at Wilmot, S. D. It was a twelve-day camp and God was with us every day. This was the fifth annual camp and the greatest of all. The Wilmot people are fine folk. They purchased a tract of land and it is surely going to make an ideal camp ground. People came for many miles and quite a number camped on the grounds and took in all the services. According to the Board, this year's attendance was double any previous year. The camp is interdenominational, was shown by the attendance of Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Lutherans, Free Methodists, Catholics (one was saved), Evangelicals, Nazarenes, and no doubt others of whom we did not learn. An unusually warm, friendly feeling pervaded the Assembly and all joined in praise and worship to our God. It was indeed inspiring to listen to the great audience and the fine choir of young people join in singing such songs as "Power in the Blood." "Since Jesus came into my Heart." The young folk responded wonderfully well and we had a fine choir each night.

Evangelist H. J. Anderson, of Aitken, Minn., was the preacher. His messages stirred the hearts of the people and folk came to hear him. He hits sin with sledge-hammer force. Sinners became convicted of sin and repented. His sermons to the saints were certainly inspiring and many a shout resounded through the camp as some pilgrim caught a glimpse of the promised land. Truly Bro. Anderson is a great revivalist.

Mrs. White and I were assisted in the music during the camp by the following: The Asbury Quartet, who stopped over for two services, a Sioux India Trio, a visiting minister who sang, and a young man who played the accordion. We always try to use all visiting talent. With this help and our own use of the big guitar and trombone and our solo and duets, we were able to put on a varied and interesting musical program. The camp showed their appreciation of our efforts by inviting us back for the 1930 camp, and if the Lord permits we will again have the privilege of carrying the gospel in song to our friends in South Dakota.

Our work with the children was very successful. We are using a plan that we haven't seen used before, but it works and we have been able to lead many boys and girls to Christ. We believe in winning them while they are young and tender and not wait till the devil makes them as hard as iron.

On our way home we stopped off at Red Rock Camp. Bro. Joseph Owen, Bro. John Thomas and Bro. Floyd Nixon are the workers. They asked us to sing so we sang at the Monday night and Tuesday morning services. They wanted us to stay a few days, but we wanted to spend July 4 at the Manville, Ill., camp, our home camp; so we left Red Rock and came to Manville. Rev. Fogg, of Los Angeles, was the evangelist and Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Liddell, of Chicago the singers. A great missionary service was held the afternoon of the fourth, Sister Eva Carpenter being the speaker. The people were blessed and a fine missionary offering was given. We had the privilege of playing the trombone and singing at this service.

We are at home at present but will be out in the field again in a few days. Anyone wishing fall and winter meetings, write or wire us. We play and sing the gospel and try to win your children for Christ before the devil gets them.

During our camp at Wilmot, we were able to secure between twenty and thirty subscriptions to The Pentecostal Herald. We think it is a great paper and we are doing our best to put it into homes where about all the reading matter is some daily newspaper with its poisoning influence.

The family Altar League has invited us to sing on their programs broadcast through the Moody Bible Institute Station, WMBI, (277.6 meters) each week day morning at 7 o'clock daylight saving time, 6 o'clock Standard time. We have sung on these programs a number of times and from the great number of cards and letters, many people have been blessed. We shall be glad to sing for you over the radio, and if you should happen to tune in and hear us, kindly drop us a line. We do not sing each morning, but just occasionally when we have time. Our permanent address is Box 204, Highland Park, Ill.

"The Musical Whites."

ECLECTIC, ALABAMA.

We are now here at Eclectic in our twelfth meeting thus far this year. We started in January at Whistler, Ala.; from there we went to Bayou La Batre, Ala., where we held our fifth meeting, and all during the pastorate of Bro. A. B. Clausin. From there we went to Robertsdale, Ala., then to Montgomery, Ala., then to Hattiesburg, Miss., Broad Street Church, where we held a meeting there last year also. From there we went to Mobile, Ala., my home town, where I think we had one of the best meetings of the year; 12 young people offered themselves for life service. From there we went to Lyman, Miss., for a Union Tent meeting where we also had a big meeting; three fine young men offered themselves for the ministry, two for the Baptist and one for the Methodist Church. We went then to Crandall, Miss., and from there to State Line, Miss., and from there to Uniform, Ala., where I held my fourth meeting. Then to this place, where we are headed toward a great meeting. The Lord has been wonderfully good to us and scores have been saved and great numbers have joined various churches. Our slate is filled until November 1st.

We ask the readers of The Pentecostal Herald to pray for us that we may be lost in the will of God, and in his great field be instruments in harvesting many souls. Brother H. C. Norsworthy, of Hattiesburg, Miss., is with us in our work and we have been blessed of the Lord in a mighty way this year in seeing many weep their way through to the Saviour, and come into a joyous experience of full salvation.

With every good wish to you and your wonderful paper, I am, Luther A. Horn.

FROM DR. RIDOUT.

We have two invitations to work in Egypt where we shall arrive early in 1930. We are also invited to hold meetings both in English and Arabic in Jerusalem, Palestine. We hope to be in Prague in the early spring where we shall engage in some evangelistic meetings with an Asbury College man, Rev. J. Alex Reid. He is the English preacher at the famous old church of St. Martins in the Wall. August 14-18 we shall preach at the Mission Conference at Karuizawa, Japan.

The mission of Christ in the world is to destroy the works of the devil and to save men from all sin, to restore him to communion, fellowship, and co-operation with God.

Since God's plan is the salvation of all men there is no release for us in ceasing to encompass the divine will concerning man. In a peculiar sense we who know him in his fullness are under mighty obligation to carry on this same gospel of glad news and victory until everywhere human hearts have had the opportunity of finding peace and pardon. It is for us to see that the Word is presented; the Holy Spirit honors his Word, and conviction comes.

We must tell the man on the street there is hope for his sin-sickness. We must assure the discouraged hearts that the Everlasting Arms of God are at their disposal. We must say to humanity everywhere that "whosoever will may come and drink of the water of life freely," for the promise is true and unchanging. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon."

Make Your Asbury College Reservations Now.

The present outlook for the next year in Asbury College would indicate the largest enrollment thus far in our history. The Dean of Men advises that on July 1st reservations for young men equalled those of September 1st of last year. The Dean of Women states that the reservations for young ladies exceed anything known at this time in any previous year. More inquiries are coming in than we have ever yet received and we again feel it would be wise for all prospective students to make reservations as early as possible. While there are some cancellations at the beginning of the year, yet the old adage, "first come, first served," applies in the matter of rooms and enables the administrative force to plan more carefully for the year's work. Send in your room reservation fee of $10.00 (returnable any time before September 1st) to the Business Manager.

Plans are now being made to observe Freshman Week activities beginning September 18th. All registration should be completed by September 1st.

Faithful Preaching.

Preaching that produces results in the way of conversion and building of Christian character must be specific, positive, very clear-cut, and to the point. The old minister who said, "My friends, if you do not repent to an extent, I fear you will go to hell in a degree," did not make converts, but made himself the subject of ridicule. The true fruitful preacher of the Gospel must give the people a message from God. He must speak with authority. We do not like to hear a preacher say, "I have come to the conclusion;" or, "It is my opinion;" or, "The best thinkers of our times have decided;" or, "I wish to give you my most mature thought on this subject." We like to hear a man preach who declares the Word of the Lord; who believes himself to be called and sent of the Lord; who believes the great doctrines of the Bible. We want to hear a "Thus-saith-the-Lord" man.

It is very plainly written in the Bible that "God's Word shall not return to him void." There is no promise that men's beliefs, notions, conclusions, and philosophies shall not return unto him void. It is the Word of the Lord that is quick and powerful and sharper than a two-edged sword. O, for a ministry that will preach God's Word with great earnestness; with love, to be sure, and yet, with authority. Who will insist that "I am the messenger of the Lord, and this is his message to you." The preacher who preaches with tremendous earnestness on sin, the unreasonableness of it, the fact that God, throughout his Word condemns it, that it will inevitably bring ruin, that "the soul that sinneth, it shall die," that there is no mercy for the impenitent; that men who would find mercy of God must forsake their sins; that those who persist in sin, and die in sin, will inevitably fall into hell. Such men will produce conviction, and see conversions. Would you be a faithful preacher? Then you must preach a definite gospel. You must give no uncertain sound on the great fact of sin, the Judgment Day, the fearful realities of future punishment, the sufferings of Jesus Christ, and his willingness and power to save men from sin. To preach a full Gospel, you must preach holiness. You must insist that God has called men to be holy; that "the blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanseth from all sin;" that our Lord Jesus is able to save to the uttermost. That now is the accepted time; that we are saved by faith; that delay is dangerous. Such preaching will produce conviction, will lead to repentance, and result in the salvation of souls. We hear complaint from many quarters that much of the preaching of today is without point; that the preacher himself seems to have no definite and profound conviction. That he does not feel an intense and passionate desire that the people who hear him should flee from the wrath to come. In fact, it looks as if many preachers of our time have questions in their own minds with reference to the wrath to come. They do not seem to feel that those who make no profession of faith in Christ, are in any special danger; that they are likely to drop into eternal punishment at any moment. Undoubtedly many ministers are not seriously alarmed with regard to the unconverted about them. They are taking things easy; they are not alarmed, and they are not alarming those who hear them. One of the greatest needs of our time is a great revival in our pulpits; an awakened ministry will awaken the people, and bring repentance and salvation.

The sinner is not going to repent until he is made to realize his great danger. It is the duty of the preacher to present the truth to the unsaved man with reference to his attitude toward God; the unreasonableness of his rebellion and wickedness; God's attitude toward the sinner; and the absolute certainty of his vengeance upon those who fail to repent. The minister must show the sinner that the impenitent will be cut off, and sent away to perdition, locked up forever in the prison house of guilty, unpardoned souls. The fruitful minister must be serious and earnest. He must feel a great burden upon his heart for the lost. He must keenly realize his responsibility to God and men. He must declare the whole counsel of God without hesitation or apology. The definite, positive, earnest preacher of the whole Gospel as found in the New Testament, will be a fruitful preacher. It will be a fearful thing for a man to appear at the Judgment Bar of God who has not declared the truth to the people with a burdened heart for the salvation of those who hear him.

E. STANLEY JONES' LETTER.

My dear Friend:

HERE I am home at last after a year of wandering. No prodigal ever came home with deeper joy than I did! I found Mrs. Jones and Eunice both well and seemingly happy to see me back again.

With this I resume my quarterly letters to friends of the work we are trying to do. These letters have been interrupted by my year's stay in the homeland part of which was spent in Latin America. About that year's work I need to say little. It was a grilling task to speak four hours a day and travel between times, but I came out at the end fresh and ready for more. I got more in England but that is a story that I shall reserve to a later portion of this letter. Surely there are resources for the body as well as for the soul in our Gospel. If we only knew how to take them! We are just as tired as our minds are and no more. If we could keep inwardly poised in soul the body could stand almost anything. But I must not go off on that for this is a news letter.

Throughout the Eastern and Central portions of the United States I travelled trying to awaken the church to the need of the world. How much will remain as a permanent contribution will be seen in the future. Each morning I had from fifty to five hundred of the ministers of the different denominations for a Retreat, or Round Table on Evangelism and Missions. These three hours each day with the ministers were never-to-be-forgotten hours. Word comes that many lives were transformed through them. The public meetings were very large, running to seven thousand. Everywhere the church was overwhelming in its eagerness to hear the call of the world.

But I was more than glad when my ship sailed toward the East on April 6th. I did a good deal of reading on the return journey for my soul was eager to catch up in its nourishment. I spent a week in England, a very busy week indeed. On the first day of arrival the representatives of the religious and secular press came to interview me. Then I went off to Liverpool where a reception awaited me and then the great London Missionary Society meeting at night. The English surprised me. I thought them unemotional. I found them even more responsive than the American people. The next day, Sunday, there were four addresses including broadcasting over the whole chain for the British Isles and a great service in the Liverpool Cathedral. These services were packed and in some cases people turned away. Then back to London for addresses of various types and kinds ending up in the great Central Hall meeting when they turned away great numbers. I have not seen in any part of the world more responsive people. They more than met one half way. The heart of Britain is sound and responsive and desirous of being Christian. And they do not have to be converted to Missions.

I crossed to France after a busy week and caught my boat for India at Marseilles. My cabin mate, a captain in the British Army, was converted on the second day out. It was a joy to see him after that. Something new had come to him. I took several services on board ship and the young officers requested me to have a question hour when they could come and talk about their difficulties.

It became hotter and hotter as we came into the tropics. At Port Said we got our sun hats and needed them. Bombay was hot but I knew it would be hotter as I came up through the country. On the train up I took out my clinical thermometer to see how hot it was in the compartment under the fan. The mercury straightway ran up to 108 degrees and since the thermometer would register no more it stopped there! Yesterday it was 114 in the shade and the hottest month is not yet here—June.

But the missionaries and Mrs. Jones and the Indians were at the station to meet me at Lucknow and that compensated for the day of par-boiling in the train.

I am now back at my desk. What a joy it is. I love to sit down and talk with these men about life and God and destiny. In a few minutes some of the leading men will be in for tea and after tea we will talk. I trust about Him. We are in for the most difficult year of many years in India's history. The battle will be tense, but it is worth while for a nation's soul is at stake.

You have helped us in the past. We will look to you to help us in the future. I am sustaining a great deal of work through the generosity of friends who have entrusted funds to me to put them where they are needed most. I shall look to you to keep that line of help intact. I can be reached here in India or at 150 Fifth Ave., New York.

With my gratitude for your friendship and fellowship in a great task.

Fraternally yours,

E. STANLEY JONES.

Bob Shuler's Victory.

The readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD will remember that a notice appeared in this paper some weeks ago of a trial going on in the courts of Los Angeles wherein the Knights of Columbus were bringing suit against Bob Shuler for certain publications in his magazine.

In the first trial there was a hung jury, ten for acquittal and two for guilt; in the second trial, the entire jury rendered a verdict for acquittal, a complete victory for Bob Shuler.

He has been carrying on a great crusade for civic righteousness in Los Angeles. His monthly magazine is a blazing torch against the corruption, graft and wickedness of that great and beautiful city. It makes wonderfully interesting reading, and is revealing what one man can do when he champions righteousness. Send your name and address, and $1.00 to Rev. Bob Shuler, 12th and Flowers Sts., Los Angeles, Cali., and you will get his monthly magazine for one year. You will sit up nights to read it. H. C. M.

A Word to our Readers.

Knowing that our readers will be anxious to know how Dr. Morrison is getting along, I am writing to say that he is improving slowly, and is able to sit up a good part of the time and go to his meals at the table. In his weakened condition it is not expected that he will recover rapidly, but we are grateful that he seems to be on the mend, though it be slow. Do not cease praying for him, that he may soon be able to get into the work he loves so well, and for which we trust the Lord is going to spare him.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Dr. G. W. Ridout, our Corresponding Editor, will leave China for Japan early in August where he gives the messages at the Karuizawa Missionary Conference, August 14-28. He will next start for Singapore in September.

ber. In October his work begins in India. He has engagements in Egypt, Palestine, Central Europe and Great Britain which will take him up to May, 1930. He expects to reach the United States in time for the camp meetings of 1930. Camp meeting committees desiring his services please write Mrs. H. C. Morrison, care PENTECOSTAL HERALD, Louisville, Kentucky.

"AND THE STOPS TOO."

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

GEORGE Muller, in commenting on the verse found in Psalm 37: 23, "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord," writes in the margin, "and the stops too."

God's leading does not always mean a forward march, but oftentimes it bids us "stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." Paul recognized the leading of the Lord as definitely in his "stops" as he did in his "steps." There are times when we need to "wait on the Lord" that we might know the will of our great Leader. Paul did this, without exception, in his missionary journeys, the results testifying to the wisdom of his action.

It has been truly said that Paul was out on the road, ready to press on into new fields of service, and the task of divine direction was only the matter of closing some doors and opening others. He had absolutely no choice in the selection of his field of labor, but his one desire was to ascertain where the Lord desired him to labor and that became his chosen field.

With the majority of us, the Lord has a difficult time arousing us to action at all, and then we want to select the place of operation. Paul had thought he would remain in Asia visiting the most influential cities, but God's plan was otherwise, at least for the time being. One night after Paul had finished the day with its responsibilities, he lay down to rest, and there appeared to him in a vision, a man of Macedonia, praying him to "Come over into Macedonia and help us." No sooner had the call fallen upon Paul's ear, than he took passage across the Aegean Sea, where he found Luke, who joined them in their missionary campaign. Paul, Silas, Timothy, and Luke, what a missionary quartet! Some one has said that no one could have guessed that little advance guard represented a greater kingdom than that which Xerxes represented when he invaded Europe, though he brought together forty-six nations to contend against Greece, constructed a canal for his ships to ride upon, and flung a bridge over the Hellespont, over which his soldiers marched incessantly for seven days and nights. The picture of the magnificent Xerxes, seated on his throne of gold watching the tremendous disaster of the battle of Salamis, fades away with the years; so, also, does the glory of the victories of Roman Augustus; but the King whom Paul came to Europe to herald forth rises still to greater and greater power.

We are not told that Paul visited the synagogue on his arrival in Philippi, the place selected for their first missionary labors in Europe; instead, he found a little praying group of women by the river outside the city. What an unexpected visitor they had in Paul, accompanied by his three helpers, and the door for preaching to them the gospel swung wide open, the truth was poured forth and lodged in the heart of Lydia, an influential woman of Philippi, and not only she, but her whole household found the Lord Jesus in his saving power; and to show her gratitude to these heaven-sent messengers of the cross, she invited them to lodge in her house, where they found a most cordial, Christian welcome. Who would have planned the entrance of these missionaries into Europe in such an unpretentious manner! But God truly moves in mysterious ways, his wonders to perform; and who will dare say that his ways, are not the best?

Paul was true to the voice of duty and, in the measure in which we seek to do our duty shall we know what is in us. But what is duty? The demand of the present hour. Duty is duty, whether it be the smallest or the greatest matter. He is on the highway of nobleness of character who has learned to be scrupulous concerning the smallest thing. Make the minutes beautiful, and the hours and the days will be radiant. Know what thou canst work at, and work at it like a Hercules. In all true work, were it but true, hard labor, there is something of divineness. But we can only have guidance assured by heeding Proverbs 3:6: "In all thy ways acknowledge him and he shall direct thy paths."

Special Notice!

We are publishing on another page of this issue of THE HERALD a sermon by Bishop Morrison, who passed to his reward some years ago. He was a great gospel preacher, and a great soul winner. Read it. I wish five hundred preachers who read THE HERALD would preach it. EDITOR.

Radiant Living.

REV. C. M. GRIFFETH

THE GLORY OF DIVINE ILLUMINATION

The ancient cities were but dimly lighted. It was not safe to be out after sunset. In the day the narrow streets were blinding hot in the glaring sun, but at night they were in pitch darkness, except here or there a blazing torch or the pale light of the quiet moon hung low in the southern heavens.

In his prophecy of the future Jerusalem, Isaiah speaks of the city as being divinely illuminated. "The sun shall be no more thy light by day; neither for brightness shall the moon give light unto thee; but the Lord shall be unto thee an everlasting light, and thy God, thy glory."

What a picture of the Inner City of the Soul when illuminated by the divine Presence!

Can you catch a picture of the inner city of Zion? A city of heavenly serenity and of holy inhabitants protected round about with the towering walls of Salvation with its portals of Praise through which blazes forth the glory of the Divine illumination which is within?

When a man's soul is dependent for light upon material sources, such as pleasure and possessions, his light is but material light—shining for a season and then there is twilight and then pitch darkness.

But when a man's soul is illuminated by that spiritual illumination whose source is God, his soul shall rejoice in a perpetual day! There shall be no night, for God himself is the light thereof. As Isaiah says: "The Lord shall be thine everlasting light!"

May your soul be an inner city of Zion! A city of heavenly serenity with every inhabitant of thought, emotion and motive holy. A mind and heart surrounded by the protection of the impregnable walls of Salvation, graced with the portals of Praise.

And may God himself be thine everlasting joyous Light!

The Church as a Preacher Sees It

The above is the title of a booklet written by Rev. James H. Herve, D.D., of Springfield, Mo. He treats the subject from an unbiased standpoint, and suggest the remedy for its defects. It closes with a Mother's Day sermon, which is worth the price of the booklet. Any one interested in this subject and desires a copy of the booklet of 32 pages, may send 20 cents to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., or James W. Herve, 1610 N. OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:

This is a very warm afternoon as I sit at my desk with my electric fan going at my back. I suppose all of you who can, are finding a cool place, and perhaps a bathing pool where you can refresh yourself.

We are in the country now at our home, where we have not been to really keep house for several months on account of Dr. Morrison's sickness. He left the hospital Monday and is now enjoying the cool country air at home. He is improving and we are hoping ere long, he will soon be able to be up again.

I came across a piece of poetry the other day and it is so full of good advice that I am giving it to you and hope each one may put into practice what it advises. How often we are made to regret that harsh word spoken, but a kind word is always a pleasant memory. There is an old saying, "Think twice before you speak once," and that is very safe, especially when we are excited and apt to say something we should not. It would be good to memorize this and say it to yourself, occasionally, and also to other people as well.

Kind Words.

Do you know a heart that hungers,
For a word of love and cheer?
There are many such about us;
It may be that one is near.
Look around you. If you find it,
Speak the word that's needed so,
And your own heart may be strength-end

By the help that you bestow.
It may be that some one falters
On the brink of sin and wrong,
And a word from you might save him—

Help to make the tempted strong.
Look about you, oh, my brother!
What a sin is yours and mine,
If we see that help is needed
And we give no friendly sign.

Never think kind words are wasted,
Bread on water cast are they,
And it may be we shall find them
Coming back some day.
Coming back to where sorely needed,
In a time of dire distress;
So, my friend let's give them freely;
Gifts and giver God will bless.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second letter to The Herald and hope to see it in print. Howard Perrin, I think your name to be Warren. Pearl Voos, I guess your middle name to be Emma. The one who guesses my name I will send them something. It begins with R and ends with H, and has four letters in it. Charley H. Faulk, the way I did it it came to 40, so that is what I say. My birthday is Feb. 26, have I a twin? The one who has my birthday I will send a letter and something with the letter. I will close and give the room to somebody else. I will answer all letters I get from the cousins. Just send them to

R. Freda Hiller.
231 Glenwood Ave., Pawtucket, R. I.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am just a little girl fifteen years of age, and have T. B. Mother has T. B. too. We have been in a sanatorium sometime, but are improving rapidly and hope to soon be able to go home. I have a very dear friend in the sanatorium; she takes The Pentecostal Herald and sometimes I get it from her to read. I sure do enjoy reading it too. Well, I presume I had better not write any more, as this is my first letter to The Herald. This leaves me hoping very much to see it in print. How many of the children of Israel are there?

Shirley Nelson.
Hill Crest Sanatorium, Charleston, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter. I am in the fifth grade at school. I am twelve years old. I have blond hair and brown eyes. Can you guess my middle name, it begins with B and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this arrives. My birthday is July 28. Have I a twin?

Viola Milan.
Westview, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Arkansas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eleven years old, have dark hair, gray eyes, and light complexion. My birthday is February 11. I enjoy reading page ten. My father takes The Herald. This is my first letter, and I hope to see it in print. Can any one guess my middle name, it begins with D and ends with E, and has four letters in it.

Altues Amyette.
Rt. 1, Judsonia, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a little boy from Mississippi. We live on the state farm. My father is a driver. They have twelve camps here, besides the woman's ward and the hospital. I have been through most of the camps. The two white camps have high barbed wire fences around them. The convicts eat out of tin plates, and haven't any knives and forks, they just have spoons. The cooks make biscuits in a trough, and stir the dough with a hoe. You cousins come over and we will go see Kenney Wagner. Verla Jean Rowe, the Bible contains 73,746 words, 31,173 verses, 1,189 chapters, and 3,566,480 letters. It took 4,101 years to write the Bible, and it contains 66 books. The Bible has 22 authors. Am I correct? Who can answer these questions? What is the middle verse in the Bible? In what verse in the Bible does the word "reverend" occur? How many times does the word "hard" occur? Who was the first transgressor? Verle Jean Rowe, I am expecting a snapshot of you and a letter. I will answer all letters received from the cousins.

James Ray.
Camp 7, Parchman, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Ohio girl join your band of happy boys and girls? I do not get The Herald but my Aunt does, she saves it for me and I sure like to read page ten. The other articles in the paper are very interesting also. This is my first letter to The Herald. Pearl E. Voos, I guess your name to be Erna. If I am right please don't forget your promise. My middle name begins with L and ends with E, and has six letters in it. If anybody can guess my name I will write you a letter. My birthday is the 9th of June. Have I a twin? If so, let me know. I hope I will see this in print. Madge L. Haggerty.
5121 Globe Ave., Norwood, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am joining Mary and Yolanda Beldina in prayer that the rest of their family may soon become Christians. They say they are praying every day for this one thing. What a fine example for all Christians to follow. Cousins, let's all join them in prayer and believe God's Word.

Rev. C. R. Pate.
Rt. 4, Newport, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have come back to see you again. Mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading the paper. Well, Aunt Bettie, I will not take up much room but I will stay awhile with you to see your boys and girls. I am writing two cousins, a boy and a girl. I enjoy going to Sunday school, go every Sunday I can. My letter is very short but I will go, and come to see you again sometime. I will try to write to all boys and girls who write to me. Hope to see this in print.

Era Holloway.
Rt. 1, Box 127, Wedowee, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I must join your happy band of Christians. I have light brown, long hair, fair complexion, am five feet, two inches tall and weight about one hundred and twenty-four pounds. I was eighteen years old January 21. I found my Savior one glorious evening in the dusk, at the edge of a patch of woods about two hundred yards from the house. My father and mother are both living. I have four sisters, all younger than I. One of them is a Christian. We are the only Christians in our family. We are members of the C. P. Church. I should be pleased to correspond and exchange pictures with some of the other Christians.

Rosette Boals.
Norris City, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just been reading page ten and thought I would write as I had not written for a long time. Mr. W. B. got the last letter I wrote. I am eleven years old, have dark hair, (bobbed), grey eyes and medium complexion. My mother takes The Herald. My father is a merchant and postmaster. Will close hoping to see my letter in print. Love to Aunt Bettie and cousins. Edith B. Miller.
Crocus, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a girl from Indiana join your happy band of boys and girls? I am sixteen years of age, five feet tall, have long black hair and black eyes. My birthday is August 8. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. I am a Christian and enjoy working for my King. I have helped in three revivals as pianist this past winter and am helping in one at my own church now, and have a call to help in another later. I sure do enjoy page ten. Can anyone guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with H, and has nine letters in it. As this is my first letter, I would like to see it in print. I would be very glad if some of the cousins would write to me. If any care to write, I'll send them my picture. This is one of my poems:

We Thank Thee.
Oh, God, we thank Thee for Thy love,
And for Thy Son Thou hast given,
That we might have everlasting life
And receive a home in Heaven.
We thank Thee for Thy many blessings

That we receive along the way,
And for Thy watchful care over us
Every night and day.
For the beautiful sunshine and the rain
That makes the harvest with its golden grain,
For beautiful flowers that bloom in the spring,
And the little birds that so sweetly sing.

We thank Thee God for many things.
Mary E. Woolums.
Box 83, Eckerty, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I come in and chat a while with you and the cousins? It has been a little over three years since I wrote to the Boys and Girls' Page. I enjoy reading the cousins' letters and am glad to see that more of the older girls and boys are writing. I like all of the letters, but am especially interested in those who are nearer my age. My age is between twenty and twenty-six; I am five feet, seven inches tall; weigh one hundred and sixteen pounds, and have brown hair, brown eyes and medium complexion. We have taken The Herald for a number of years and I usually read it through soon after it comes. I think everyone should cultivate a taste for good reading matter. I am also a lover of music and I have spent several years in studying piano. I thoroughly enjoy playing, however, I don't spend a great deal of time on jazz. I appreciate the classical pieces more. For the past two years I have been teaching in a denominational school but I am spending this year at home. We live on a farm and raise the crops common to this section of Kentucky, also some poultry and livestock. My father is a local Methodist preacher. I have two sisters younger than I. They are still in school. Carthel Dold, I am glad to see that you favored us with a visit not long ago. I have always read your letters with interest. I believe you have changed your address since you wrote last. I am sure that all of us would be glad to have the privilege of a trip through California. I have never been fortunate enough to get that far west, although I have traveled in about one-fourth of the States of our Union. I am a member of the Methodist Church and I find the Christian way of living a very happy one. God is so wonderful to us, and there are so many things to be thankful for. Sometimes when I am in danger of having the "blues" I begin to "count my blessings" and

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little Kentucky girl. May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I have been a reader of The Herald for a great while. I sure enjoy reading page ten. I have two sisters, one is twelve years old and the other is four. My parents are Christians and I and one of my sisters. I am nine years old and in the third grade. I didn't get to go to school any last year, I had a stroke of paralysis and it left me a cripple and I have been closed in all winter. Are you cousins glad when summer comes? I sure am. Can any one guess my middle name? It starts with N and ends with L, and has four letters in it. Whoever guesses it I will write to them. Well, as this is my first letter I will quit and come again. I hope to see my letter in print.

Ruby N. Pickard.
Rt. 1, Central City, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Thank you for letting me in. It is raining so hard. Oh, it is so good to know that Jesus is just wanting to take us in his loving arms, all who will call on him. I am so glad that he took me out of the mud of sin and set me on higher ground. Yes, praise his holy Name. Glad to know so many of the cousins are Christians, for it is the only way; the way of the Cross leads home. I thank the Lord for the good old Herald. It is meat for my soul. May I ask The Herald family to join me in prayer that God will send a full gospel preacher to our little town. Oh, that we could have a revival of old-time power. It is sad to think that so many so-called Christians of today don't know what the new birth is. Jesus said, "Ye must be born again." We are so glad that Brother and Sister Morrison did so nicely in Miami. Trust that he will soon be back to work. Oh, that we had more old-time power preachers. Mr. W. B. is just around the corner, so cousins be good, don't forget to pray. Remember Jesus said draw near unto me, I draw near unto ye. Love to all.

FALLEN ASLEEP

CARTER.

Alfred Thomas Carter, son of Alfred and Drucila Milican Carter, was born in Panola Co., Miss., Feb. 3, 1851; died in Search, White Co., Ark., May 24, 1929, at the age of 78 years, 3 months and 21 days. He came with his parents to Arkansas at the age of 8 years and was converted when 21, joined the M. E. Church, and was a faithful member. In 1922 getting the light on holiness, he was sanctified and united with the Church of the Nazarene of Searcy, and was one of our most consecrated members until God said, "It is enough; come up higher." He married Miss Emma Ward, Aug. 30, 1878; to this union were born twelve children, six boys and six girls, seven of whom, with their mother, preceded him to the world beyond. On Oct. 20, 1898, he was again married to Mrs. Anna Glenn, a faithful and loving companion to the end.

He was a faithful and loving husband and father. His illness and intense suffering of many months was borne in Christian patience and fortitude. Realizing that he was traveling the last mile of the way, he made loving distribution of all his property to his five remaining children and loving wife, also made plans for his funeral which were carried out.

His testimony was, "I am now ready. Everything is fixed up for time and eternity." His prayer was, "Heavenly Father, grant me a painless hour to cross the valley of the shadow of death." His prayer was answered; he quietly went to sleep, and so gently did he pass away that he was gone before they were aware of it.

His funeral was in his home church, at Searcy, with a vast crowd in attendance. The floral offerings were many and very beautiful. He was laid away in the Oak Grove Cemetery. We miss him here, but will meet him yonder.

Rest, toiler rest,
Thy burdens laid aside.
In white robes dressed,
Beyond death's chilling tide.
Safe from the darts so ill,
With all the bloodwashed dwell."
Services conducted by the writer.
Chas. E. Woodson, Pastor.

SILL.

Mr. John H. Sill, for many years a reader of The Pentecostal Herald, departed this life at his home in Glendale, Cal., June 6, aged 85 years, 10 months and 6 days. He was born in Bedford county, Pa. At the age of nine years his parents emigrated to Illinois.

The funeral was held at Forest Lawn Cemetery, Rev. Henry Scheidman officiating. The service was attended by a large number of friends whose sympathy and appreciation were shown by the beautiful floral designs that covered his grave.

He was converted in the Methodist Church in Illinois, and after moving to Glendale, Cal., united with the Nazarene Church. He professed the blessing of entire sanctification and exemplified the life in his daily walk.

Brother Sill was a great friend of Asbury College and has given substantial assistance to it for many years. He was loved and respected by all who knew him, and while he rests from his labors his works will follow him.

Brother Sill and wife celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary April 22, and their eight children were all present from five different states.

May our Father comfort the bereaved hearts and make them to form an unbroken family in the house of many mansions.

Mrs. H. C. Morrison.

BISHOP.

April 24, 1929, George C. Bishop, of Monticello, Fla., passed away, his spirit taking its flight for its eternal home. He had been in declining health for a year and a great sufferer, but very patient and submissive to God's will. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church in early manhood, and had battled through to ripe old age for he was about to reach his

REV. JOHN PAUL, D.D.

Rev. John Paul, D.D., Upland, Ind., President of Taylor University and the St. John of the holiness movement. Dr. Paul is one of the outstanding leaders of the holiness ranks and a favorite at this camp, where he has blessed the multitudes with his ministry on several previous visits.

Rev. John F. Owen, D.D., Upland, Ind., of Taylor University faculty, and one of the strong young men of the holiness pulpit of the M. E. Church. While this is Dr. Owen's first time as a worker at Indian Springs, he comes with high commendation and will have a hearty welcome.

PASTORS

Here is an extraordinary offer!

The publishers find that they have an overstock of Doran's Minister's Manual and are offering these books to dealers so that they may be sold at $1.00 each, plus postage. The regular price is $2.00. We have taken fifty copies. After these are sold no more will be available. Many of our pastors now are using this Minister's Manual. It is arranged for the calendar year but its suggestions and sermon material are of great value at any time. We are going to share the cost of mailing and are offering the book at $1.00.

Planned for the busy pastor. Not a mere book of sermon outlines, but a veritable mine of the very best available sermonic material for the modern preacher. The 1929 manual covers the calendar year, with a complete new collection of illustrations, poems, outlines, suggestive texts, children's sermons, invocations and other features which make it indispensable to the busy pastor. Topical and scriptural indices make each item immediately available.

A $2.00 book for $1.00.

Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

76th milestone. All through his illness he talked of his going home and often sang some favorite song and read his Bible to the last. He loved to read The Pentecostal Herald; had been a subscriber for years. He was a great follower and believer of Dr. H. C. Morrison. He looked forward to his sermons and writing each week; he said it refreshed his soul to read after these godly men. His pastor visited him frequently and he always wanted to talk of the goodness and mercy of God. He was ready and waiting to go. What a happy re-union with the loved ones gone on before, "that he had loved and lost awhile." May each of his children trust the God he loved and served and meet him in the sweet bye and bye.

The flowers we lay upon your grave
May wither and decay,
But the love we bear for you dear

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VI.—August 11, 1929.

Subject.—Daniel among the Lions. Dan. 6:1-28.

Golden Text.—The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them.—Psalm 34:7.

Time.—About B. C. 538.

Place.—Babylon.

Introduction.—In our last lesson we witnessed the fall of a great nation. Belshazzar's last feast, in its desecration of sacred things and its pagan debauchery, filled the cup of Jehovah's wrath to the brim. I mean WRATH. There is a foolish modern notion that the God of the Bible is a sort of spineless God who is always smiling upon men. Nonsense! Our God is a king. He does smile upon his children; but he is "angry with the wicked every day." St. John says of the unbeliever: "The wrath of God abideth on him." We read in Hebrews 10:31: "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." St. Paul writes, 2 Cor. 5:11: "Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men." Sin is terrible in God's sight. It is treason. Babylon is not the only nation that has fallen. Following her downfall, that of the Medes and Persians went down in sin. Then came Alexander the Great whose short reign went to pieces under Jehovah's curse. The two Jewish kingdoms perished because of sin. God's hand is on the nations and kingdoms of this world. Their kings and czars, and emperors, and presidents rule while he permits, and fall when he frowns.

In today's lesson we meet a crucial day in the life of Daniel. For more than sixty years he had been an exalted and faithful servant of the kings of Babylon. He had seen them in life and in death. He had witnessed the downfall of the old dynasty, but did not fall with it. When Darius came to the throne at the fall and death of Belshazzar, he found Daniel as the third ruler in the Babylonian kingdom, and had the good sense to set him at the head of the three presidents whom he appointed over the affairs of his own kingdom. But Daniel had his enemies. Was there ever a true man who did not stir the jealousy of some of the devil's imps? Some of the chief underlings of the kingdom could not endure to see such high honors heaped upon a captive Jew. They must get rid of him in some way. They certainly honored him when they admitted that nothing could be found against him in his management of the affairs of government. He was no grafter on the finances. I wonder if those rascals did not wish to do a little grafting, but were afraid to risk it under the honest eyes of Daniel.

Their plot to destroy Daniel was a devilish scheme. First, they knew the low vanity of Darius, and played on that. They were satisfied that Daniel was too faithful to Jehovah to be bent by their machinations—he would pray, even against death. They tricked the king into signing the horrible idolatrous decree, and then sneaked up like blood-thirsty beasts to catch Daniel at his prayers; and they succeeded, for the old saint was not such a hypocrite as to hide himself; although he knew all about the decree.

Watch the scamps as they run in their gloating glee to tell Darius that Daniel was praying to his God; but he did not rejoice with them. When he found that he had been trapped by their chicanery, he was grieved and "labored till the going down of the sun to deliver Daniel;" but the laws of the Medes and Persians could not be altered. Although he was too useful to the state to be destroyed, Daniel must go into the den of lions.

Comments on the Lesson.

10. When Daniel knew.—He was a man of courage and honesty. Cowards act the hypocrite: brave men act openly. Toward Jerusalem.—There was no special merit in facing toward Jerusalem when he prayed, but his heart longed for the city of his people; and his action was natural. Mohammedans always pray toward Mecca—their sacred city. Three times a day as he did aforetime.—Through this little window we discover the why of Daniel's purity and power. No one can have such a beaten track to the mercy seat and be mean and little. One may "say prayers" by the hour, and get nothing. Daniel prayed.

11. These men.—Those jealous fellows who were plotting Daniel's ruin. How eager they were to catch him on his knees.

12-15. These verses are not directly included in the lesson; but be sure to read them. They reveal the devilry of the plot against Daniel. Here his enemies are seen in their demands upon Darius for his death, while the king is laboring to deliver him, but has to yield because of the foolishness and injustice of the laws of his nation.

16. The king commanded.—Although Darius labored so hard to save Daniel, under the laws of his nation he was forced to consign him to his fate. Thy God... will deliver thee.—Daniel had so lived that the heathen king had faith in his God. Read John 17:17-23, and take your own measure.

17. Sealed it.—To prevent its being opened by any one. It was death to break such a seal. All was done that could be done to give the hungry lions a chance to eat Jehovah's prophet; but they never touched him.

18. The king passed the night fasting.—His grief must have been bitter, seeing it robbed him of sleep, and drove away his desire for his accursed music.

19. This verse indicates excitement and hurry. The king left his bed "very early," and went at once to the lions' den. He was nervous. He was conscience-smitten. I wonder if those lions were just kept there to eat condemned men.

20. O Daniel, servant of the living God.—The lamentation of the king's heart rings in his cry. What a contrast between his dead gods and Daniel's "living God." Is thy God able to deliver thee from the lions?—There was some doubt in his heart, but he was hoping for the best.

21. Daniel answers like a man, but with the courtesy due the king: "O king, live forever;" and I suppose he was honest in his salutation. The expression meant simply: "Long may you live."

22. My God hath sent his angel.—The gods whom Darius served had no angels to send; but Jehovah's angels "encamped round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." Angels can shut the mouths of hungry lions. But why was Daniel protected? Because before both God and the king innocence was found in him. Jehovah protected his servant for his own glory. Others may have to die for his glory. Either will be best for God's devoted child.

23. Take Daniel up out of the den.—It is interesting to note how glad Darius was that Daniel had not been injured by his saucy room-mates. But maybe he failed to see Daniel's better room-mate. It must be great to sleep all night long among lions while angels from God keep them quiet and gentle. But when Daniel's foes were thrown among the same lions they met a different fate. Read the sequel.

THE SAME OPPORTUNITY

Never presents itself the second time. An opportunity lost is lost forever. Now is your opportunity to send The Herald to some one until January, 1930, for 50c.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. L. B. T.: "Please to pray for the salvation of my boy, also help financially."

Mrs. M. T.: "Please to pray for me that my eyesight may be spared."

Mrs. J. H. C.: "Please to pray for a young man whose mind is rapidly failing him. Modernism in a large Methodist University largely responsible for it."

Mrs. W. E. H.: "Pray for a friend who is suffering from a nervous breakdown. She feels she is going to be healed by faith, so pray for her."

C. H.: "Pray for my wife who has lost her reason following an operation. She is a fine Christian woman and I believe God will answer prayer for her."

Our readers are requested to pray for Mrs. Mattie Bourne who is a sufferer of long months.

FIFTY CENTS

Invested in the interest of a soul will bring large returns. Try sending The Herald until January, 1930, for 50c to some one who needs the message it carries.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Rev. Irvin B. Manly, of Houston, Texas, is in a revival of wide interest, at Nyle, Texas, where there is no church and but few people live. The place is mid-way between Rockdale and Thorndale. People are attending from surrounding counties. Young people are taking active part in the whole program of the revival. Brother Manly's slogan for revivals is, "A revival of the Family Altar and of Bible reading." As the services are out-doors, "Under The Sky" heads the announcement for the meeting.

Will you kindly announce in Pentecostal Herald that I am coming through my camp meeting campaign in such good health and blessing that I will now not only consider calls additional for 1930 camp meetings, but will book dates for meetings and conventions for coming fall and winter. May probably divide dates between South, East, West and Pacific Coast. Address to Joseph H. Smith, Redlands, Calif.

Woodward County Holiness Association Tent meeting will be held at Mutual, Okla., August 8-18th. Workers: Evangelist Rev. I. C. Mathis. Song evangelist, Rev. C. D. Clift; pianist, Miss Fern Green; President, Rev. E. A. Green; Sec., Mrs. C. A. Kurtz, Woodward, Okla., Rt. 2.

The thirty-third annual camp meeting will be held on their beautiful camp grounds, A. P. Byal Park, Findlay, Ohio, opening on Thursday evening, August 8. Sermon 7:30 and closing on Sunday evening, August 18, 1929. The workers are Rev. J. E. Shannon, Santa Ana, Calif; Rev. C. W. Butler, Cleveland, Ohio; Prof. N. B. Vandall, song leader, Akron, O.; Miss Winifred Menenway, young people's instructor, Farmer, Ohio; Miss Florine Ewing, pianist, Findlay, Ohio. V. V. Thomas, President. L. M. Cole, Vice-President. G. W. Egbert, Sec.-Treasurer.

Rev. Harry M. Alexander: "Rev. Harry Long engaged us to assist him in a meeting at Charlestown, Ind.; the meeting was in a hall and the people came out wonderfully to hear the old-time gospel preached. Many got under conviction, and there were about sixteen prayed through; some were healed. The purpose of this meeting was to organize a Mission. My next meeting will be a tent meeting at Jeffersonville, Ind., from July 18th to August 1. Open dates after August 1st."

C. A. Calhoun: "I am happy to report victory in McComb, Miss., the last meeting. God blessed in a wonderful way. We had a real pentecost feast. The Holy Ghost took absolute charge of one service. No one spoke except as the Spirit gave utterance. The altar was filled. Praise the Lord. We have been at Collinsville, Miss., for five days and near one hundred souls have found God. There were around 40 or 50 souls in the altar Monday night. Pray for us that God will continue to use us to his glory."

WANTED: Sanctified printer, as partner of job printing, and small religious newspaper. Must have good reference. Address Rev. Albert Trubue, 209 West Baker St., Mitchell, Ind.

For Sale: Conn slide Trombone, Artists' model, high and low pitch, medium bore, silver plate and gold plate bell, plush lined case; all in A1 condition. Priced to sell. Write The Musical Whites, Box 204, Highland Park, Ill.; July 21 to August 11, Freeport, Ill.

WIT AND WISDOM.

Ignorance is costly and enlightenment is enriching.

The greatest faith is found amid the greatest difficulties.

God perfects every true man's work. The Christian worker sows and reaps at the same time.

Holiness is the highest attainment of humanity.

The worst atheism is that which believes there is a God, but lives as if there were no God.

These are just a few of 285 pages of sayings from that great book, "Wit and Wisdom," by Bishop Warren A. Candler. This book alone is worth $2.50, but you may secure it and five other great books as described on page 5 for $3.00.

A Partnership For You

THIRTY TEACHERS in the Lucknow Conference need American partners in their work. You provide capital (from $80 to $200 according to Conference scale): they provide labour. Large dividends assured.

These men are trained workers; most of them have worked successfully for a number of years. They have remained at work through the very difficult years of decreased income and there is now no provision for their support except the too scant offerings of the poverty-stricken new converts to whom they minister. Unless partners can be found, who will provide money for their expenses, they will have to leave the ministry.

One of our preachers refused a permanent Government appointment on twice his present salary and a generous pension in order to preach the Gospel. Another one worked without salary for fourteen months until his accumulated savings were exhausted. A third was beaten three times because he insisted on teaching a school for the children of the depressed classes in the village in which he lived. The Conference is working to spread a knowledge of Christ and to establish a fellowship of disciples who love the Lord Jesus and serve God in holiness of heart.

Send your gift (in monthly or quarterly installments, if preferred) to the Board of Foreign Missions, 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City, N. Y. Every cent you send will be forwarded to India and used for the purpose indicated. Say that you read this advertisement in The Pentecostal Herald, and that the money should be sent to the Lucknow Conference.

SILVER HILLS CAMP MEETING.

The Silver Heights camp meeting begins August 1 and continues over August 11. The workers are Rev. Virgil Moore, Rev. Charles Stalker as preachers. Prof. Burl Sparks will have charge of the music and Miss Grace Ruth will have charge of the children's meetings. Let the people rally to this old camp meeting which has been the scene of days of the Son of man on earth. Pray for, and attend this camp and get a refreshing for your souls.

SCOTTSVILLE, KENTUCKY.

We engaged the splendid tabernacle at Scottsville, Ky. The good Baptist, Free Methodist and M. E. Churches helped to beautify the grounds. When we arrived we found everything ready—pump put in order, trees whitewashed; we have never seen more beautiful grounds. We had good crowds from the beginning; many asked for prayer. At times as many as 50 and 75 would come forward for prayer and eighteen prayed through at the altar. Husband and wife of two families were beautifully converted. The Mission band of Glasgow came over with their string music one night and on the last Sabbath. We had a fine dinner and three services. As this writer preached on the beautiful doctrine of holiness at the eleven o'clock service the saints of God shouted for joy. Some eight or ten ministers were in the meeting. There is as fine a group of Christian workers as can be found at this camp. This great tabernacle was built over thirty years ago after Dr. H. C. Morrison had held a revival in a tent in Scottsville, Ky. I know it would have done his dear heart good to have seen the great crowd and heard the shouts of God's children, and to have seen the splendid condition of the tabernacle. Many came from Barren county to our last Sabbath.

We never were more conscious of the presence of God as at this camp. We were invited to come back next year for the third Sunday in July. We accepted the invitation. May our dear Lord's richest blessings be on those good people that prayed and worked for the salvation of souls. The place seemed like holy grounds. As we stood behind the sacred desk we thought of such great men as Dr. H. C. Morrison, Dr. Carradine, C. W. Ruth and others who have conducted great meetings here.

We are now in a tent meeting in Hart County. Then a tabernacle meeting and three tent meetings running us up to October. Yours for lost souls,
A. S. and R. S. Beck.

WANTED!

The name and address of one or more young preachers to whom we can send The Pentecostal Herald. If in sending these to us you want the privilege of paying for them, you may do so on our 50c proposition. Or, if you have some money to invest and haven't the names, we shall be glad to supply them.

A CALL FOR UNITED PRAYER.

A National Convocation for prayer will be held at Salem Park, Indianapolis, Ind., August 7-20, in charge of Evangelist S. B. Shaw, Grand Rapids, Mich. Many noted and devoted preachers are expected, including bishops, college presidents, editors, superintendents of Christian Institutions, and many well known evangelists.

This meeting was endorsed by the National Holiness Association held at Wilmore, Ky., last month.

The following covenant of prayer has been endorsed by several Convocations of Prayer held in other cities in charge of Evangelist S. B. Shaw.

Covenant of Prayer

Believing it to be the will of God that the love of Christians, notwithstanding their differences should be so manifested that all men should be compelled to say of them, "Behold, how these love one another."

Therefore, we do covenant together to call upon God continuously for a more abundant fulfillment of his promises for the outpourings of the Holy Spirit than has yet been witnessed among us, and for a deep general revival of pure and undefiled religion.

Free entertainment will be provided for all who come to attend the meeting. For information write S. B. Shaw, 101 Alton Ave., Indianapolis, Ind.

JUST ONE IN THE WHOLE WORLD.

There is just one Bud Robinson—no one like him or even akin to him. There is not another "Life Story" like his or similar to it. His recent book, "My Life's Story" is, as he puts it, "loaded to the water line with the activities of forty-seven years of labor in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ." The chapter on his call to preach is worth the price of the book and more. Get it and read it. It has 217 pages, but when you start reading it you will not want to stop until you have finished. It sells at the remarkably low price of $1.00. Don't fail to get your copy. You will weep and you will rejoice as you read it.

THE PRINCE OF THE HOUSE OF DAVID

By Ingraham.

A story of the life and times of our Lord as told by an eye witness in letters to her father. The narrative is beautifully and forcefully unfolded. Because of its unusual style it will be read by many who would not read the New Testament.

Anyone who reads this book is brought face to face with the fact that Jesus is truly "The Prince of the House of David" and the Savior of the world.

A book that the young people will read and enjoy. It will hold their attention clear to the last page.

We have 240 copies of a pocket edition of this book, bound in blue cloth, that we are selling at 30c each or 2 for 50c.

A NEW BOOK

Dr. Arthur T. O'Rear has written a book, "The Nativity of the Holy Spirit," which is a distinct contribution to the more recent literature on this subject. The book is introduced by Bishop Sam Hay.

Dr. O'Rear couples theological soundness with a new method of approach. The discussion is very comprehensive, providing a kind of education in spiritual things that is greatly needed. While his book is constructive and positive, it deals negatively with false movements and modern errors regarding the Holy Spirit and furnishes new light under this head.

The Opportunity Is Swiftly Passing!

Don't let it go by without your having placed THE HERALD in some home. It may be the means of salvation to the entire household.

Every soul, some time, somewhere, longs to know God, and this may be your opportunity to help some one into a saving knowledge of Him. We have known instances where persons were not approachable in the interest of their souls, but the Holy Spirit has spoken to them in the quiet of the reading hour.

We pass this way but once, so let's make our time and efforts count for God and souls. Try to induce some one to subscribe on the special 50c offer till January. Invest 50c of the Lord's money and send the paper to some one; then pray God to bless the message THE HERALD carries to the good of that soul.

Dear HERALD readers, what we do must be done quickly. The special subscription period is rapidly slipping away, souls are passing into eternity, many of them lost, and it behooves us to get desperately in earnest to offer the Bread of Life to as many as will receive it.

Think NOW of some loved one or friend who needs soul food, and either ask them to subscribe or send them the paper until January. Seemingly small things count for much in the service of the King.

COMMIT THY WAY UNTO THE LORD.

By The Editor.

I will have no controversy with God. His word, will, and way shall be supreme with me. I will look into his holy Book and devoutly pray that he make his will known to me.

How great is God! His incomprehensible, eternal existence, his infinite knowledge, his omnipotent power, his omnipresence! What is a mere man that he should contend against God!

How wonderful that so great a Being should be concerned for creatures like ourselves! We are reminded again and again of that saying of David, "When I consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained; What is man, that thou art mindful of him? and the son of man, that thou visitest him?"

We never could have had any sort of correct view of the God of the universe, his nature, and attitude toward mankind, if Jesus Christ had not come into the world. He revealed God. He taught us to say "Our Father who art in heaven." It was Jesus who said, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life."

How wonderful it all is! The contemplation of it staggers thought and sweeps beyond imagination. It certainly does make sin and selfishness and rebellion against God look exceedingly wicked, unreasonable and foolish. Let us come to one final, positive conclusion—that we will have no controversy with God; that we will commit our way unto him; that he shall be first, supreme and high over all in our thought, desire and devotion.

Man's way, naturally, is out of harmony and in conflict with God's way. We are depraved, self-willed, selfish. The spirit of rebellion is in us. We need regeneration. Mere human decisions and professions and ordinances are not enough. We need regeneration, the impartation of a new, divine life. We need the expurgation of a corrupt, carnal life; the old man—the sinful nature—needs to be crucified. We need the incoming and abiding of the Holy Spirit.

What a marvelous change all of this mighty work of the Holy Spirit makes in a human being! What a renewing, what a cleansing, what an incoming! How different everything is! The things we loved, we hate; the things we hated, we love. It is a marvelous revelation and readjustment. How completely we have been won over to God's side of every proposition. We are filled with one great amen to all of his word and will and way. We have no further controversy with God. He fills the universe. Jesus Christ is a great, glorious fact, and a mighty Saviour. The Holy Ghost is a real person

I am grateful to Dr. Akers for his editorial work for me the past four weeks. I am profoundly thankful to be able to take up the work again with this issue of The Herald. I thank God that I feel my health is sufficiently recovered to justify me in taking up my usual task. I am grateful to many friends who have mentioned me to our merciful heavenly Father in their prayers. I appreciate more than words can express the kind letters received from friends, which I cannot undertake to answer.

H. C. Morrison.

and a real presence. We thirst, we long, we hunger; we reach out and press on to know more and more of the divine will and the divine love. Great God of the universe, our Father in Heaven, through the redemptive sufferings and triumphant resurrection of Jesus, and by the power of the Holy Spirit, bring us into perfect, glad, constant harmony with thy will in all things.

Four Neglected Doctrines.

THERE are four greatly neglected doctrines plainly written in the Holy Scriptures, that should be preached with fervency and frequency. I name them here: the New Birth, the Future Punishment of the impenitent Wicked, Christian Holiness, and the Second Coming of Christ.

These are fundamental doctrines of the Christianity of Christ. They have to do, directly, with the individual person, especially the three first mentioned, and a clear, positive discussion of all of them is rarely heard in a very large percent of our churches.

We cannot understand how any man claiming to be called of God to preach can have comfort and peace with his own conscience, and fail to give great emphasis in his pulpit ministration to the doctrine of the New Birth. Our Lord Jesus teaches us with repeated emphasis that the New Birth is absolutely essential; that it is the way into the Kingdom of God.

The minister of every evangelical church ought to preach on Sabbath mornings so frequently and forcefully on the necessity of regeneration, of this wonderful change of heart wrought by the Holy Spirit in the individual, that no person in his membership can remain comfortable and in any sort of religious peace who has not the inward witness of this gracious work of grace that our Lord calls being "born again."

Do not the Scriptures teach us that the minister will be held responsible for the spiritual state of the people under his care, and the gospel message which he brings to them? Shall the minister drift so far away from the plain teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ that he would receive large numbers of unregenerated people into the church, baptize them, give them the right hand of fellowship, leave them under the false impression that they have secured their souls' salvation, let them go along in this deceived state of mind, and never really wake up until they awake in the spirit world to find that they have never repented of their sins, received regenerating grace and by the power of the Holy Spirit become the children of God? Can we believe, for a moment, that the man in the pulpit claiming to be called of God to preach, can perpetrate such deception upon the people and escape retribution? Impossible!

In my meditations these long, quiet days and nights I have been confined to my bed, I have been greatly distressed as I have thought of the way multitudes of people are being taken into the church without repentance, without regeneration, without having been taught, or really knowing anything about the spiritual life, the deep and wonderful dealings of the Holy Spirit with the spirit of the individual.

We see much going on in the church that is, perhaps, quite proper; the raising and distributing money, charitable work of many kinds, and some things which are of a very questionable character, but the New Birth, the repentance, faith, forgiveness and regeneration of each individual member of the church, apparently, almost forgotten and brushed aside.

Kind reader, tell me now, when did you hear the pastor preach an earnest, powerful sermon insisting upon the regeneration of the individual? When did you hear him, with great zeal and tender earnestness, insist that it is Jesus who says, "Ye must be born again." I certainly do not wish to appear to be bringing any sort of railing accusation against our ministers, but I firmly believe if, during the month of the coming September, for four Sabbaths in succession, the preachers of the evangelical churches of these United States will preach each Sunday morning on the New Birth—they may divide the subject up showing its various phases, the human and the divine side—it will produce a tremendous impression; it will arouse the church membership. It will put people to thinking and talking. Not a few persons will telephone the pastors for private interviews. I have not a doubt but such a procedure would lead to the salvation of great numbers of souls. I should not be surprised if four such sermons did not bring about gracious revivals of religion.

Undoubtedly, such a line of work and public ministry would be pleasing to the Lord, and have the seal of the Holy Spirit, and produce good results. Would it not be good news to tell all members of the church who have not been, that they may be born again, their sins blotted out, their hearts renewed, their lives made happy with the consciousness of acceptance with God, through Christ? The gospel is "good news." The doctrine of the New Birth is the best of news. It embraces the forgiveness of all sin, the bringing of the soul into peace with God, adoption into the heavenly family, a new life imparted by the Holy Spirit. This is glorious, good news!

AMID THE SOCIAL AND THE SOLEMN IN CHINA.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

After our South China meetings we came back to Shanghai where, awaiting our coming, was a young man and a young woman who wanted us to perform the ceremony at their wedding on May 1st. This was the first time I have been called upon for an office of this kind. Some things entered into this of interest to many HERALD readers. The young man was the nephew of Dr. Mary Stone, of Bethel, and he was educated at Ohio Wesleyan. The young woman was of a prominent family in Kinkiang, China, and she was educated in University of Wisconsin. The both desired the service in English and according to the rites of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They were both the products of Christian Missions and are constant attendants at Bethel services, Shanghai.

The next special event following the wedding was a funeral and, strange to say, the wedding and the funeral were peculiarly related. Strange but true!

The funeral was that of Miss Howe who was one of the veteran missionaries of China, having spent fifty-seven years of her life in China. She it was who took Mary Stone when she was seven years of age and began to train her as one of the two first medical women doctors of China (with Dr. Ida Kahn).

Then again, Miss Howe schooled the mother of the bride of whom I have written, and a story is told like this: that when the young man—Mr. Chang—came to Miss Howe to ask permission to marry her girl student she did a most extraordinary thing in order to emphasize what she wanted to say to the young man by way of advice. She took a very delicate and beautiful China cup (Kinkiang is famous for its potteries) and said to the young man, "Now you see this beautiful, exquisite and delicate cup, don't you? Well now the girl whom you are asking to be your wife is beautiful and delicate like this cup." Then Miss Howe suddenly threw the beautiful cup on the floor and it was smashed in pieces to the amazement of young Mr. Chang. She said to him, "Try to pick up the pieces and put the cup together." He said it was impossible. "Then," she said, "So it will be with this young, sweet life if you fail to love her and protect her; if once your love for her gets broken just like that beautiful cup it can never be put together again." The lesson was learned. The pair were married and I have been told that their love was never broken, that their married life extending over thirty years has been ideal and their home life without a jar. They have had a wonderful family of six sons and five daughters. They have all received the very best of education. One son is a Bachelor of Science of Bristol, England, and the manager of one of the Chinese railroads; others have held high positions. One daughter is the wife of one of the Cabinet members of the Nationalist Government. We spent a day in the Chang home in Kinkiang. The father is one of the chief contractors of the city. Their home is immense and beautiful just outside the city wall. Their grounds are laid off in wonderful flower gardens abounding particularly in roses. We rested and ate and prayed in this beautiful home and thanked God for what Christian Missions have done for China in producing such homes as these.

Hastening on from Kinkiang to Nanchang where our next engagement was we arrived in time to witness the funeral exercises at the home of Dr. Ida Kahn of dear old Miss Howe who was mother to Dr. Kahn as well as to Dr. Stone. The whole city of Nanchang seemed to be stirred at the funeral. Such a crowd wanted to attend the services that Dr. Kahn arranged to have them outdoors in the hospital compound. The program was a lengthy one and lasted from two till five P. M. One of the principal addresses was by Dr. Mary Stone, who also has written an account of Miss Howe's wonderful life as a missionary.

We have seen many funerals in China but of course this one was different because it was Christian; but Dr. Kahn being Chinese herself had some features of the native funeral in it of course. There was no funeral hearse but the casket covered with an immense canopy was carried upon the shoulders of thirty coolies. The "mourners" wore sackcloth. The cortege was a long and impressive one. The brass band of the Baldwin School preceded the body and at certain intervals played various selections. The procession went through the principal streets of the city; some of them were very narrow and both sides were lined with people through the whole length of the journey to the grave. Mrs. Ridout and I were in rickshaws and the streets of Nanchang are as rough as we have ever rode in—cobble stone streets could hardly be rougher, but the city is being modernized fast and they are now building splendid, wide concrete streets and boulevards. After three hours we finally arrived at the burying ground where, after singing and prayer, the remains were laid in a tomb to await the Resurrection morn. Of Miss Howe it may be said:

"Blest are the workers who partake
Of pain and shame for Jesus' sake;
Their souls shall triumph in the Lord,
Glory and joy are their reward."

STORY OF MISS HOWE.

Dr. Mary Stone has written a beautiful sketch of Miss Howe and we take the liberty of passing on to our readers some of the main points of the sketch:

"A beautiful young woman just home from College was sitting in her home at Lansing, Mich., reading a telegram in her hand, 'Will you start for China instead of India with a party of Missionaries next week?' She knelt down and asked for Divine guidance. She said afterwards, 'A message from Heaven came while kneeling, 'I want you in China instead of India.' From that time her heart was all for China and Miss Gertrude Howe never regretted the decision.

"Miss Howe adopted four Chinese children, Ida, Julia, Fanny and Belle. The care she gave them was marvelous. She lived in a room adjoining them and was indeed a mother to them. In those days there was no Mission Doctor and she used to read medical books so as to prescribe for her children. She loved her pupils.

"When my father took me by the hand, at the age of seven, to Miss Howe to train me as a Doctor, she smiled. She said, 'Your daughter would have to study English first.' In those days there was not even a man Doctor in China. Here was a Chinese wanting his little daughter to study medicine! However, Miss Howe took that subject to the Lord in prayer.

"Just at that time Yung Wing, an official, took a consignment of one hundred Chinese boys from the Government to the United States to place in various schools of America. Miss Howe took a flying trip to America during her vacation just to see if Chinese could study the language. She made a short stay, taking her two older daughters, Ida and Julia, and came back to teach English to a select few of her students. Because it was an unprecedented thing she met a great deal of opposition in the Mission. The result just showed her farsightedness and her strength of character that she would 'obey God rather than man,' and she trained a group of young people herself and fitted them for entering College in America.

"In the midst of the work of erecting many buildings for the Society and conducting classes in the school, she personally taught Bible Classes and carried on the higher education of a group of young men and women. We had higher Mathematics, Chemistry, Physics, Latin and all the subjects necessary for our entrance examinations at Michigan University in 1892, when Miss Howe took a group of five to said University.

"Dear Miss Howe has surely been a master builder in the Lord's kingdom. Her missionary work has been a Statesman's work. She was an Ambassador sent by the King of kings to seek out the future leaders of China. She sought for jewels as though seeking pearls. Like the formation of pearls through suffering, so at the end she has seen the pearls of great price, trophies to present to her King.

"It was not in the many large Institutions that Miss Howe erected for educational and medical work in the different centers of China that made her pre-eminently a Missionary of vision, but that she was led by the Master-BUILDER, Jesus Christ. That is why when many Missions had to close when the country was in turmoil her Ship of Missionary State had plenty of hands to man her Ship!

"The half cannot be told, in this brief sketch, of the wondrous beauties of this life of passion and love for China's children. How many summers when the heated season came on and the other Missionaries fled for much-needed rest to beautiful Kuling, the mountain resort for the foreign population, but where Chinese residents were not tolerated, Miss Howe would take her flock of 'grandchildren' and as many sick and needy babies as possible to the little hut-like home in the foothills, and there devote herself during vacations to the not easy task of mothering her very often trying brood of boys and girls.

"Here, with the ceaseless screech of the cicadas in the bamboos and the tormenting mosquitos, while the howl of the wild beasts of the mountains warned against venturing far from the tiny home, Miss Howe spent many summers, literally following the Master himself in the emptying of herself for the training of those young hearts for Christ. And Miss Howe never for a moment impressed Chinese or foreigners with the thought that she was making a martyr of herself. She found her fullest joy in life among her Chinese children.

"After we returned to China Miss Howe left the beautiful home of the missionaries and came to live in a little Chinese home that she built for us out of her own money. She indeed sold all her property in America to give to China.

"Dr. Kahn was the oldest adopted child and was indeed a true daughter to her mother. She is one of the most well-read, best known and beloved Doctors in China. She has a brilliant mind and a big, generous heart. In answer to a call from the Government she took charge of the large hospital at Tientsin where her influence was felt amongst all circles in the country. Here she stayed only two or three years and returned to the Mission work where she made a happy home for her dear mother in her old age when she needed her most.

"Early in May, 1928, our Evangelistic Band was asked to attend the District Conference in Kiukiang, and we were very anxious to return and see our old friends. I shall never thank the Lord enough for allowing me to see dear Miss Howe then. When she was asked if she remembered me, she said, 'Do you think that I would ever forget Mary Stone?" Indeed it was a very precious visit. The few days with the blessed Saint and Seer of the Lord were indeed 'Days of Heaven on earth.' We brought away many sweet memories and photos of her. When word came saying that she had gone to her Heavenly Home we rejoiced that she has gone to her Master Whom she faithfully served so long and to her glorious reward. Her faith in the Lord has indeed won for her a place in the Westminster Abbey of the Bible—Heb. 11:25."—(Mary Stone, M. D.).

THE WALK HOME WITH GOD.

Rev. B. F. Durling.

HE work of God within the human heart subsequent to regeneration, as we wish now to consider it, is of a twofold character, both positive and negative.

In the latter sense, it is that work of the Holy Spirit by which the heart is cleansed from sin, through the atoning merits of Jesus. This negative work of the Spirit may be done instantaneously. This may be considered negative in that the deep root of sin whence spring those antagonisms to God, is cleansed away according to 1 John 1:7.

In the positive work a transformation is wrought by which the soul becomes a partaker of the divine nature. The hindrances having been removed, the divine Love fills the soul and also the various divine graces which the presence of God abiding within the soul will produce. This work is wrought when faith accepts Jesus as a present, perfect Saviour. There is present also a spirit of full consecration to God. The love of sin is removed, the love of righteousness taking its place. Pure love for God and man fills the heart. The flow of the nature is Godward. There is a deepened consciousness of the presence of God. He seems to the soul more real and more deeply within its life. The heart is more sensitive to the breathings of the Spirit. Within the deep chambers of the soul is heard the "still small voice" of the Spirit. That gentle voice appears to fill the soul with holy music. Never before did the Heavenly Father seem so precious. May it be said, that transformed heart exults within the great heart of God. Even so, for "Our life is hid with Christ in God."

The mind also has felt the ennobling presence of the great Transformer. It now delights in pure thoughts, nor finds it hard to comply with the injunction found in Phil. 4:8. This characterizes those things upon which the Christian may properly meditate.

The will too, has been submerged in the will of God, yet still retains its own individuality, with increased power. Divine Love has become the ruling element in the life. Sin is consumed by its holy fires.

In some measure we now have noticed the nature of this experience. Its necessity next may be considered. That strong thinker, Alexander MacLaren, who has been called "the prince of expositors," expressed his opinion of its necessity in this strong language: "Heaven depends on holiness." It has been emphasized also by that great master of English, J. H. Newman, who has said, "It is told us again and again that to make sinful creatures holy was the great end which our Lord had in view in taking upon him our nature, and that none but the holy will be accepted for his sake at the last day."

One much greater than these has said that without this condition of heart "no man shall see the Lord."

To whom then will be granted that bright vision? Jesus gave answer in these words, "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." The command of God makes it clearly imperative in the words, "Be ye holy; for I am Holy." It is moreover, a present necessity. This is shown by the words, "That he would grant unto us that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies might serve him without fear in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life." Not in the moments of death; not a day or an hour or a year before that solemn hour, but "all the days of our life."

Its importance and necessity being so great, why do any neglect the matter absolutely indispensable to their eternal well-being?

One reason is that sin blinds one to its appalling importance; also to sins own ruinous nature. This was so terrible as to require the coming to our rescue of God's own Son bearing to us the eternal and infinite love of God, and becoming the subject of the greatest tragedy which ever shook earth and heaven. What would have been our condition had he never come? How blind to all this is the one of impure heart. How little he realizes that sin holds within itself the seeds of eternal death. It does however, although it may come garlanded with beauty; with all the attractions of music, literature and art, yet at the last its victims will be draped in crepe and cypress and be attended by dirges. Their requiem will be the wailing of broken hearts.

Another cause of this neglect is, that many have made the world their idol. Its fading tinsel has hidden the fine gold of eternity. Dazzled by the momentary will-o'-the-wisp, they are blind to the glory of the stars. Infatuated by the fame of an hour they forget the crowns of eternity.

Again, others fail to realize the omnipotent power of Jesus to save; a power even unto the uttermost. He saves not only from sin but also to a nobility, purity and loveliness of character destined to become heavenly. What a depth of love; what a realization of God; what a growth into him, are experienced.

Alas, that so many fail in securing this rich inheritance! Sin has destroyed in many cases their spiritual hunger. Their passion for the high and pure has never been kindled into activity by the companionship of God. To the fact that Jesus can save to the uttermost they are blind. That another should give serious thought to that great truth they count as fanatical. Along this line Dr. Horace Bushnell says: "But saddest of all is the practical depreciation of Christ, or of what he can do as a Savior, experimentally, from sin. To believe much is enthusiasm; to attempt much, fanaticism. The assumption is that Christ in fact will do only a little for us, just as there is a little done, when the very sufficient reason is that there is only a little allowed to be done. He will be a Saviour in short just as mighty and complete as we want him to be; just as meager and partial as we require him to be. How true is that statement, "He will be for us all that we desire and trust him to be."

While so many neglect or wilfully reject this rich inheritance, we rejoice that so great a multitude have chosen the better part and are enjoying its pleasures. What satisfaction, rest and peace are theirs. They have risen into the heavenly places in Christ. May we not compare them to those who have ascended from the lower altitudes to the mountain summit? It may have been over rocky ways at times; up through clouds draping the mountain slopes; on, on into the realm of sunshine, and to the summit over-arched by the dome of azure and where night crowns it with stars. Oh, what a vision sweeps out before them! Picture framed by the farflung horizon. Here in the silence they rest as in God's holy place. All is so quiet, so calm, so serene. At the foot of the mountain all is noise and confusion. What a contrast! A suggestion is here of those other two opposites; the peace of the righteous and the unrest of the unsaved. On the one hand, souls created with a capacity to receive Deity in abiding intimacy, with all that this means; yet walking with the arch-enemy of God and man. On the other hand, the delightful experience of those who have mounted the heights with Jesus. By eager desire, by prayer, by faith in a present, perfect Saviour, they have risen into what should be the normal life of every child of God. Oh, what a life of sweet companionship it is; not only with like-spirited children of God, but also with God himself. With glad anticipation and much assurance, they look forward to ever brightening days which will soon ripen into that glory which Jesus had with the Father before the world was. And so will they ever be with the Lord.

Modernism a Fraud.

L. W. MUNHALL.

What has Modernism done for the world? Nothing whatever to meet and supply its needs. It has no remedy for the ruin of sin; no peace for its tumults and unrest; no balm for its heart-ache; and no hope for its despair. It genders doubt where faith is needed and boldly challenges the Word of God, denying its authorship and authority. It makes Creation's wondrous story unbelievable and ridiculous, and substitutes for it the conjectures and vagaries of men vain in their imaginings. It sneers at the thunderings of Sinai; beclouds the visions of the Prophets of God; substitutes the jazz of sensuous desires for the Song of the Angels; and makes the Creator of the Universe the illegitimate son of the woman whom God has honored above all others. It robs the redeeming shed blood of God's only begotten Son of its value and power to impart life and peace. It insists that the seal placed upon the tomb of Joseph of Aramathea is yet unbroken. It has padlocked the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem and filled the bottomless pit with doubts in mad desire to find a way of escape for mortal man from his hell-deserving misdoings. Its philosophies offer no adequate remedy for the world's confusion and unrest. It has produced divisions and strife in the Church and marred her beauty and robbed her of her influence and power. Instead of solving the problems of governments it is adding to their confusion and intensifying their enmities. It is essentially and radically at variance and in conflict with the religion of our Lord and Saviour, and unquestionably Satanic.

The Church of The Outreaching Hand.

Rev. Edward Reynolds Kelley.

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, that killeth the prophets, and stoneth them that are sent unto her! how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen her own brood under her wings and ye would not."—Luke 13:34.

Iwish you might see the picture as I see it. Jesus is on his way to the beloved city. He has left little Bethany behind him, and now he is winding his way down the slopes of the Mount of Olives, when catching a glimpse of Jerusalem in the distance he stops and stands with outreaching arms; hands extended toward the city, he cries: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem . . . I would have gathered thy children together, even as a hen her own brood under her wings and ye would not." What a picture!

And this attitude of the Master's must be the attitude of the Church in the twentieth century. Not in an artificial manner; not in a melodramatic manner, but in a real vital, living way. If the Church is ever to lift the fallen and the outcast she must possess Christ's love for them. If souls are to be saved at her altars, she must have his passion for souls, and also possess his faith in the possibilities of saving men and women from their worst. This is to be the attitude of the Church of today. And when I make this statement, I do not mean that the layman alone must be a man of this character, but the preacher in the pulpit is to be standing with heart and arms outreaching for the fallen and the lost.

What, may I ask, is the preacher's main objective in the ministry? I do not know how you will answer the question, but I unhesitatingly say: his main objective should be souls. Ah! But is it? With so many varieties of sermons as we have them today, with so many different themes, with so many different ideas; I fear many a preacher has forgotten about souls and is now placing the emphasis elsewhere. I judge this to be true from the many different kinds of preachers we have occupying the modern pulpit. For instance: there is the literary preacher. Now, as a rule, these men are never deeply spiritual, and therefore they do not expect their sermons to be criticised from a spiritual standpoint. I have in mind a man of this sort. While his church in Topeka, Kansas, was undergoing repairs he preached in the opera house and during the Sunday evening services instead of preaching the gospel he would lecture on the "Merchant of Venice," "Mozart," "Hamlet" and other subjects of like character. How many souls think you were converted under such mockery?

Then we have the sociological preacher. Now I have nothing to say against sociology, but it is out of place when a preacher substitutes it for the gospel of Jesus Christ. Then, we have the preacher who is known for his intellectuality. Folk attend upon his ministry, not for soul food, but for brain food. This man is not expected to speak to the heart but to the head. And we have the spectacular preacher. My! How he advertises for the crowds. And he gets the crowds, but what do they get? That's another matter. He uses brass bands to get the people, but what does he feed them? My brothers, there is nothing so attractive as the "old, old story," and it will outlast all the brass bands and movies that you can possibly employ.

You will recall what occurred on the Day of Pentecost. You will recall what an impression the Church made upon the world that day. You will recall how those in the Church attracted the multitudes outside of the Church. Let the modern Church have Pentecost repeated and there will be another similar interest and wonder, and people will no longer wish to be fed upon the husks of the world and entertained; for a gospel backed by the power and presence of the Holy Spirit will not only attract the crowd, but it will hold the crowd after they have been attracted thither. Not only will the preacher then be a man of God with outreaching arms and heart, but such a Church will mean a membership full of human and divine sympathy—in action. I am not a lodge man, but I am going to take the liberty of making this statement: The reason the lodge has grown and continues to grow is due to the brotherhood principle incorporated therein. There can be no doubt as to this. It is selfish, it is true; but it is there. And we must confess, that in a sense, the lodge shows more of a brotherly spirit than does the Church.

Now, do I hear some one say: "Well, our churches are open, and if the people do not care to come they are to blame." I have heard such before, and while the statement is more or less true, yet it lacks force; and the church that feels that way about the masses, or the individual either, is not, as a rule, winning souls for the Master. The churches were open in the days of Wesley and Whitefield; in the days of Asbury and McKendree, but these fire-brands of God went forth and carried the gospel message to the hungry multitudes.

Then, there are those who do not understand the Church. Have you ever heard any one say: (a) "They dress too fine up there for me." (It is mostly undress now.) Of course you have. While in the evangelistic work some years ago, I attended one of the leading churches of Southern Methodism. I sat in the vast building that Sabbath morning and as I looked around me I was reminded of the "Charge of the Light Brigade," and these lines came to me, which I have preserved—

Feathers to the right of me,
Flowers to the left of me;—
The organ in front of me
Pealed and thundered.

It was difficult to say whether you were in a flower garden, or a poultry yard. The poor did not feel at home in that church. (b) "They do not visit among us." You've heard that expression; have you not? Surely you have. The plain, unvarnished truth is, we seem to forget there are hundreds of thousands in our cities' life who need mothering and ministering unto. If the Church fails to minister to them, if the Church will not be a mother to them; pray, whom are they to look to?

Some years ago a street preacher was standing upon one of the public squares of London haranguing the crowds and claiming to be the Christ; when they cried out, as with a single voice: "Show us your hands! Show us your hands!" They wished to see the nail prints in his hands before believing him. They had a right to make such a demand. And, my brother, just as truly has the world the right to make such a demand of you and me. Where are the marks of our toil and sacrifice we boast of? Where are the tears we shed over the lost?

Back to the picture. Do you think the Master's eyes were dry as he stood there and looked upon the beloved city; the doomed city? I do not. We are told that he wept over Jerusalem. Yes sir; Jesus cried over Jerusalem. That statement may not appeal to your finer sensibilities, but, nevertheless, it is true. How many tears have you ever shed over the lost?

Brother, listen! What is needed today is a real, vital, living passion for the salvation of men. Where are our tears? Where are the sleepless nights we have spent in agonizing prayer for the salvation of souls? Do not I pray you, think I am pessimistic when I declare, in the words of another: "The pity of it all is just this, that the Church, with all of its loud and exuberant profession is exceedingly like 'the world.' There is no clean, clear line of separation."

Quenton Hogg was asked upon one occasion what a certain building had cost. His reply was: "Not much, simply one man's life blood." Every great thing costs. It matters not what it is—it costs. And, brothers, if you and I are to have a Church with outreaching arms and heart; reaching out after the fallen, rescuing the dying, saving the lost; then it will take our life's blood. Are we willing to give it? It is only when the Church becomes awful and sacrificial, when she bears in her body the crimson "marks of the Lord Jesus," when there is "blood upon the lintel and the two side posts" of her door, that the multitudes will be arrested and drawn together within her walls.

The late Dr. Sheridan tells of a vacation he spent some years ago, with a party of friends, in the Canadian woods, and while there how the pleasure of the season was marred by the news coming into the camp that one of the campers was lost. He had gone for a walk, and in attempting a short cut through the forests he had become bewildered. At once the entire party made plans for a thorough search, dividing themselves into several bands.

"We plunged into the forest," says Dr. Sheridan. "The sky was dark with clouds, and soon it began to rain. Through dense woods and underbrush, over heaps of decaying logs, over rocky ledges and high hills, and then down into swampy ravines, drenched and dripping at every step,—so we plunged on hour after hour until we came out on the shore of Twelve Mile Bay. Then we knew we had missed the boy. We started back. As dusk drew on our apprehension for our young friend increased. When we reached camp we found all the parties in except one, with no sign of the missing lad. The father of the lad was pale and anxious, and his mother completely prostrated in her tent. 'There,' one said, 'Did you hear those shots? Three shots!' 'No,' replied others, 'we heard nothing.' 'I am sure I heard three shots,' said the first, 'over in the north-east.' Two Indian guides who had searched all the afternoon, thought they heard shots, too, and dashed off in the trail leading in that direction. After what seemed hours, though it was scarcely more than half an hour, there came quite clear and distinct three shots. 'There it is again!' said one excitedly. We answered with two shots, and at last the signal was repeated, this time nearer. Presently through the forest gloom could be discerned torches, and then there was a cry, 'John is found!' And then a shout went up from the crowd.

"Profound as was the human interest," Dr. Sheridan continues, "it had a deeper significance still; for as we plunged through forest fastness all the afternoon and evening, and up and down hills and morasses, we thought of him who went into the mountains to find us—the sheep that were lost. And over and over again the words kept singing themselves in our hearts:—

"But none of the ransomed ever knew

How deep were the waters crossed,
Nor how dark was the night the Lord passed through,

Ere He found the sheep that was lost.
But all through the mountains, thunder-riven,

And up from the rocky steep
There arose a glad cry to the gates of Heaven—

'Rejoice, I have found My sheep.'"

Brothers, it is this spirit the Church must possess if we are to have the lost saved and souls sanctified at our altars.

INSECTS AND LITTLE FOXES.

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

NE of the master illusions of the human mind is the illusion of bulk. We imagine that bigness is the manifestation and measure of power. The growth of what is called "big business" tends to foster this illusion.

But little things are often more potent, for both good and evil, than large things. Such is the case with what we regard as insignificant insects, which, nevertheless, are very far from being insignificant. Insects destroy more property and more human lives than does war. It is said that they destroy annually more than $2,000,000,000 worth of property in the United States alone, and this huge figure will not appear improbable if the ravages of yellow fever in former days and the damage done by boll weevils in recent years are recalled.

The female of a certain species of mosquito was discovered by the lamented Dr. Walter Reed to be the propagator of yellow fever, and before that notable discovery was made, the South Atlantic and Gulf ports of our country frequently lost by an epidemic of that pestilence more lives in one year than all the American soldiers slain in the war with Spain, and they suffered the loss of untold millions of property. Such enormous damage was done by a small insect known by the Spanish name of "mosquito," which means "little fly." Another variety of the mosquito conveys the germs of deadly malarial fever, which annually slays its thousands.

It is now known that the common house-fly is the great carrier of typhoid fever. That deadly disease typhus fever, we are told, is often communicated by the bite of the body louse. This mortal malady prevails in armies to an alarming extent. During the first fifteen years of the nineteenth century, its ravages in the armies of Napoleon, and among the population of the countries which were the seat of war, were appalling. In May, 1812, the Bavarian troops serving with the French numbered 28,000, which number was reduced to 2,250 by February, 1813, the great destroyer of them being typhus fever. In Mayence alone, of the 60,000 French soldiers composing the garrison in 1813 to 1814, about twenty-five thousand men died of typhus fever in six months. During the World War medical science arrested to a wonderful degree the direful results of this dreadful malady; but doubtless many American youths in the army fell victims to it.

Vermin from rats, it is claimed, spreads the bubonic plague. When the awful results of these terrible diseases, which insects carry, are considered, it may well be believed that the entomologists are correct when they affirm that the little creatures are the worst foes of the human race. They are the more dangerous because so little suspected.

And they have their almost perfect parallel in the faults of men which are commonly called "small vices," "peccadillos," and the like.

Christian life rarely, if ever, fails through gross immoralities. It perishes by almost insensible departures from spiritual experiences and religious obligations, which departures culminate at last in repulsive moral obliquities. Worldliness with all its alluring forms is more injurious to piety than downward wickedness. Wherefore, says St. James, "The friendship of the world is enmity with God" (James 4:4). And St. Paul exhorted the Christians at Home, in these words: "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God" (Romans 12:2).

Unchristian diversions are insectivorous things which injure Christian lives as mosquitoes convey yellow fever and malarial fever. There is no saying how much of crime issues from the germs of evil in the moving picture shows. Children and youth have fevers of vice burning in their systems before they know, and before their parents suspect, the moral perils to which they are exposed in the shows.

It is a significant thing that Israel fell into idolatry through the relaxing leisure and diverting sports which they indulged while Moses, their great leader and law-giver, was in the Mount with God. The record reads, "The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play" (Exodus 32:6). St. Paul, in the first epistle to the Corinthians, points out the warning supplied by the grievous fall of Israel in these words, "With many of them God was not well pleased; for they were overthrown in the wilderness. Now these things were our examples to the intent that we should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted. Neither be ye idolaters as were some of them; as it is written, The people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play" (1 Cor. 10:5-7).

In their mania for feasting and playing they fell into shameless nakedness (Exodus 32:2-5) and repulsive lasciviousness. The outcome of it all was "there fell of the people that day about three thousand men." A high price truly was that Israel paid for allowing the insect of the godless love of play to infect them with the germs of sin unto death.

So are all they who are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God" (2 Tim. 3:4). The deification of amusement means the dethronement of God and the death of the soul; for "she that liveth in pleasure is dead while she liveth" (1 Tim. 5:6).

Playhouses and dance halls are the shrines of modern idolatry, where spiritual life perishes from the bites of the parasites of pleasure.

In home life also are often practiced petty foibles which result fatally to both peace and piety. They are accounted as quite insignificant and venial, but out of them issue most serious consequences.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe pointed out some of them years ago in a useful book entitled "Little Foxes," drawing the title of the volume from the following verse in "The Song of Solomon," "Take us the foxes, the little foxes that spoil the vines; for our vines have tender grapes" (Song of Solomon 2:15).

The hurtful "Little Foxes," which Mrs. Stowe described and condemned, were "fault-finding," "irritability," "repression," "persistence," "intolerance," "discourtesy," and "exactingness," all of which most people regard as minor matters, scarcely worthy of serious consideration. But, as Mrs. Stowe shows, the continued indulgence of these sins may wreck Christian character and ruin homes.

Against the habit of fault-finding, she affirms that "all fault-finding that does no good is sin;" and she makes out the case clearly and conclusively.

For the slaying of this injurious "Little Fox," she offers "the grave and virtue of Praise," and commands it in these wise paragraphs:

"We should praise our friends—our near and dear ones; we should look on and think of their virtues till their faults fade away; and when we love most, and see most to love, then only is the wise time wisely to speak of what should still be altered.

"Parents should look out for occasions to commend their children, as carefully as they seek to reprove their faults; and employers should praise the good their servants do as strictly as they blame the evil.

"Whoever undertakes to use this weapon will find that praise goes farther in many cases than blame. Watch till a blundering servant does something well, and then praise him for it, and you will see a new fire lighted in the eye, and often you will find that in that one respect at least you have secured excellence thenceforward.

"When you blame, which should be seldom, let it be alone with the person, quietly, considerately, and with all the tact you are possessed of. The fashion of reproving children and servants in the presence of others cannot be too much deprecated. Pride, stubbornness, and self-will are aroused by this, while a more private reproof might be received with thankfulness. . . .

"Lastly, let us all make a bead-roll, a holy rosary, of all that is good and agreeable in our position, our surroundings, our daily lot, of all that is good and agreeable in our friends, our children, our servants, and charge ourselves to repeat it daily, till the habit of our minds be to praise and to commend; and so doing, we shall catch and kill one Little Fox who hath destroyed many tender grapes."

The hidden den from which issue the "Little Foxes" enumerated by Mrs. Stowe, and many others that equally impair personal piety, is found in the self-centering of one's life. The magnifying of self always and inevitably leads to the minifying of others. It tends also to sensitiveness which generates misery within and without one's self. Egoism is the fruitful source of both unrighteousness and unhappiness.

All these evil tempers and dispositions which Mrs. Stowe calls "Little Foxes" may seem to be matters of small concern; but they are of real importance. Some may esteem them as mere trifles; but as was said by a great and good man, "trifles make perfection and perfection is no trifle."—Baptist Message.

CHAPTER XXX.

INTENSE EXCITEMENT IN THE CITY OF GOODWILL.

THE university president, still laboring with the fainting pair he was trying to revive, without speaking, motioned Huston to keep away. Huston and the young men associated with him stood in amazement, entirely ignorant of the cause of the intense excitement.

In a few minutes the more courageous men who had fled from the Hall, began peeping in at the door. A physician, who had been called, hurried to the platform where, with a bottle of ammonia he was soon able to restore consciousness to those who had fainted, and had them removed to the hospital.

The university president stood on the platform gazing in utter surprise at Huston. There was the real man. He was sure this was not a ghost. He firmly believed he had attended Huston's memorial service, and delivered an eloquent address in which he had modestly hinted, so as to be understood by the initiated, it was really best for old men with old ideas to pass away with the passing of an age, that had outlived its usefulness, in order that a new and progressive age might be inaugurated. He had been present at the church, and had seen and recognized the white object in the study door, not as a living man, but as Huston's ghost. There had been no doubt about this.

He had become intensely interested in spiritism, was the president of an organization of research into the occult regions of the spirit world; he had been an enthusiastic supporter of the lectures by Sir Gulliver Dodge; he had encouraged Rev. Judas Iskabod in his investigations into spiritism, and his lecturing enterprise, and now there stood before him John Henry Huston in robust and radiant health. The only way he could possibly account for his physical presence was that he had been resurrected from the dead. He was so filled with amazement, so confounded with the fact before him, that he stood and gazed in mute silence.

Men began to gather around Huston, a number of them shaking hands with him, and some with a show of anger, demanding to know why he had sent a coffin into the town supposed to contain his body. Huston was almost as mystified as they were. Several newspaper reporters, with pad and pencil in hand, rushed in and asked for an interview and explanation.

After a moment's thought Huston saw there was some sort of mystery connected with his appearance; that undoubtedly a coffin had been sent into town, and the people had supposed it contained his remains. He saw, also, that some of the people were inclined to accuse him of having undertaken to practice a deception upon the community.

With these facts in mind, he asked for quiet, and said: "Now, gentlemen, I cannot understand the situation. I know nothing of the coffin which you say came to the city, claiming to contain my remains. I begin a meeting here on Tuesday evening in a large tent which I have set up, and at that time I will make a clear statement of all the facts connected with where I have been, and what has transpired with me, personally, since I left your city some five months ago.

"In order that my statements may not be misunderstood or garbled, I shall make no statement to any individual or newspaper reporter until in the tent tomorrow evening. You will be welcome to the service to hear what I have to say."

With that he retired to his room in the hotel, but old friends were so constantly, along with the curious, calling to see him, and insisting on knowing how he happened to be alive, etc., that he got his young friends and co-workers to bring out his car; he retained and paid for his room, got in his car and slipped away some twenty-five miles, to a city where he secured room in a hotel and remained there until Tuesday evening, in time for the opening of the services in the tent.

When the community found he had disappeared, many of them believed that Huston was dead, and this was another appearance of his spirit; this time in physical form, and that if he did appear at all in the tent on Tuesday evening he would be there, not in the body, but in the form of a ghost.

You may be sure there was much talk throughout the city. It was the one theme of interest. There were all sorts of surmises and speculations. Some quiet, thoughtful people of the older class, who had always believed in Huston, and took no stock in ghost stories, winked at each other significantly, and suggested that Mr. Iskabod, the university president, and a number of the professors had gotten themselves in a very embarrassing situation, and that they judged that the spiritism bubble had been punctured.

There was a general clamor and demand among the people for the return of the dollar they had paid to hear the lecture which had not been delivered.

The husband of the Queen of Sheba was chasing about the town threatening to sue somebody for damages because of his wife's nervous condition, but he failed to find a lawyer who would specify what person he should bring charges against. It was generally supposed if Huston, in order to deceive the people, had had a body shipped in there, or a coffin claiming to have a body, he laid himself liable to prosecution by any one who suffered real damage growing out of this deception.

It looked as if a very strong spirit of resentment was likely to be engendered against Huston. It was certainly a strange comedy of errors, and the people waited with anxiety for Huston's explanation at the big tent on Tuesday evening.

The place was packed to its utmost capacity when the hour of service arrived. The lots about the tent were crowded with people, and a number of policemen were on the street in front of the tent to keep a passage way open.

In due time Huston appeared upon the platform. The choir, which had been gathered for the meeting, sang several hymns. Huston called upon a visiting preacher, an old friend of his, who had heard of his strange appearance, and had come over from a neighboring town, to lead in prayer. He then stood up and, in a few clear sentences, told his story.

"Most every one in this audience, either knows or knows of me. For years I lived among, ministered to, and loved the people of Goodwill. The death of my beloved wife brought me to the verge of a nervous collapse. My health had been undermined by many years of constant labor. Some of you know of my crucifixion here. I have no words to tell of the sufferings through which I passed when I found my people had been taken away from me, and the property which I had built up, had come under the control of parties who were determined to put me out of the pastorate. For some time, I felt as if I should die, and really had no desire to live.

"In broken health I left you expecting to go to Southern France, in harmony with the suggestion and wishes of my physician, and there try to recover my health and, if possible, return to the ministry of my beloved people in this city. I engaged my berth on the steamer for France, and while waiting for the ship to sail, was taken violently ill. It seemed to have been ptomaine poison. I was sent almost unconscious to the hospital, where I fell into the hands of a most excellent physician. At his request I submitted to a very thorough diagnosis of my physical condition. He found my trouble arose largely, almost entirely, because of a condition that could be remedied by a minor operation. The operation was performed, and I was restored in a most wonderful way, to health. I was not yet strong, I had lost much flesh, I was greatly weakened by the sorrow through which I had passed, and was advised to go to Florida for my health.

"Dressed in the robes of a convalescent patient, I was wrapped in a heavy Scotch blanket, and by my good physician placed in his large private automobile, and with a chauffeur and an excellent male nurse, I was sent to Southern Florida. I passed through this city one evening a little after dark; my memory is, about eight o'clock.

"Although quite weak, I begged the nurse to allow me to look in upon my beloved old church. The automobile was driven to the back door of my study, I stepped out and entered the study from that door. Walking across in the darkness to the door opening into the auditorium, I opened that door and gazed in for a moment. I was surprised to find the place packed with people. Fearing that my appearance might disturb the audience, I closed the door at once, stepped into the automobile and hurried away twenty-five miles to the town where my doctor had engaged rooms for me and my attendants."

For a moment there was deep silence. Then exclamations coming up from all parts of the tent. Then a roar of laughter; and the people broke into conversation, exclaiming to each other, "Well, how about that!" "There's your ghost!" "If that don't beat all!" "What about the organization to investigate spiritism?" "How about Mr. Iskabod's lecture on the souls of the departed?" "What about Sir Gulliver, who carried away a thousand dollars of our money!"

It was quite awhile before Huston could get order restored. When he could speak again, he related to them that he had been resting quietly in Florida, that he felt his health was fully restored, and that he had returned to his beloved city to preach a message of full salvation to the people; and it was his purpose to spend his remaining days in earnest service in the city of Goodwill.

This announcement of Huston's poured a flood of light on the situation, and fully explained away the ghostly apparition on the night of the pageant. But what about the coffin, that had come to Goodwill supposed to contain the body of Huston?

Ideals for Earnest Youth.

Ideals for Earnest Youth is a charming book for young people of both sexes. It is neatly bound, excellent paper, good, clear print, 224 pages, short chapters, sometimes only two pages, frequently not more than three pages. This enables the young reader to catch up the book at a few spare moments, read a chapter and go to work, or on a journey, with something to think about. Let me give you a few of the chapters:

Self Respect, Self Mastery, The Joy of Living, Your Ideals, Courtship and Marriage, Take Care of Your Mind, The School of Struggles, Backbone vs. Wishbone, Team Work, Recreation.

Send a dollar to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for a copy of Ideals for Earnest Youth, and surprise one of your children or young friends with a bright smile and a beautiful gift.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

LAVELLE, PENNSYLVANIA.

A new interdenominational camp under the leadership of The Pilgrim Holiness brethren, was held here over July 4th, and was owned of God in the salvation of many souls. It was well attended on the Sabbaths, some coming for sixty miles. The brethren who instituted this camp are workmen in the mines, and a finer lot of folks I have never met. They pray and pay, and work, and seems there is nothing for the welfare of the camp that they are asked to do, but they are at it at once. They have bought ten acres of ground from the Reading Coal and Iron Co., for one hundred dollars an acre. The grounds are most delightfully situated. They gave enough money to pay the first two installments; two-thirds of the price, leaving them but little to raise in the future. Deep spirituality marked the entire camp. On the last Sabbath as I was preaching in the afternoon, I saw one of the finest sights I have seen for years. God was wonderfully blessing, the saints were shouting, conviction was deep, when all at once, without any altar call, men started to run for the altar, and in a few minutes the altar was lined. It was a scene long to be remembered. Folks said it was old-fashioned, but I know God is still blessing the truth and it was just what he has promised to those who meet conditions. I return for next year, if I do not go to heaven, same date. God helped me preach fifteen times in ten days, take three offerings, and returned home feeling good, soul and body. Praise his Name! I am eighty-four years old and still hitting, by God's rich grace, on all six. George B. Kulp.

"UNDER THE TENTS."

The membership of the Evangelical Methodist League will be interested in the reports of the meetings held by the Asbury College students.

As Secretary of this organization I have made a request from all workers under the tents to make reports of their meetings from time to time, but as yet only a limited few have had time to respond. Of the few we are now making a report and the others later.

First—Rev. Walter Cross who has been one of our most successful workers under the tents is working this year with Rev. Amos Laine in Florida. In their two earliest meetings they report one hundred saved or sanctified.

Second—Rev. J. Norris Loper and Wilbur Fry are at work in the state of Mississippi. In their first meeting they report fifty-three definitely blessed. In their second meeting sixteen yielded themselves to the Lord. They are well and happy in the work.

Third—Fred Alexander and Fred Shiltz have just finished a meeting at Roxbury, Ohio. They report this a meeting gracious in spirit with good crowds attending, but as it sometimes happens in a good meeting only a few yield to the Lord. They have now pitched their tent for the second meeting.

Fourth—J. R. Parker has just closed a splendid meeting in a town by the name of Seco in the eastern mountains. There were eighty saved and sanctified with three subscribers to The Pentecostal Herald.

Fifth—Two young men in Georgia, Vincent and Stephens, had a hard-fought battle in their first meeting. Everybody interested in cotton crops. Only three saved. A second meeting now well started has big promise. Thirty already yielded to the Lord.

Sixth—A trio consisting of Root, Lowell, and Moss are in Wyoming for the summer. Already they have held two tent meetings. They report fifty-six saved in the first meeting, sixteen in the second, eight subscriptions to The Pentecostal Herald.

Seventh—The Rev. Paul John Pappas, a graduate of both College and Seminary, has recently received his appointment from the Southern Methodist Board of Missions through the Florida Annual Conference to minister to fifteen hundred Greeks in Tarpon Springs, Florida. This appointment carries no parsonage, church, or building of any kind. The only asset he has is one of the League's tents. He stretches this and goes to work through summer and winter. Let every League member pray for him.

KAVANAUGH CAMP MEETING AND BIBLE CONFERENCE OPENS AUGUST 8TH.

With Colonel Guy W. Green, of Kansas City, Mo., the "Layman Evangelist," who has gained such a wide reputation in the last few years in the evangelistic field, heading the program, the Kavanaugh Camp Meeting and Bible Conference opens August 8th and continues through August 18th. The Camp has taken on a new appearance with its electric lights throughout the grounds and buildings, replacing the old coal oil and acetylene lamps, the bath house with its compartments for both men and women, with running water, its sprinkling system to keep down all chance of dust, the road-way improved from the main highway to the camp and a number of cottages freshly painted. Reservations are being made in such numbers as to make it necessary to suggest that everyone desiring a cottage or a room at the camp should get in touch with Mr. Jack Ward at Crestwood, Ky., immediately. Colonel Green, who will preach at three o'clock and 7:30 daily adding the morning service to his program each of the Sundays, is one of the most popular evangelists of the present day. For a number of years he was in the newspaper field, having been editor of two different newspapers in Kansas City and several State and Farm Journals. During his career as newspaperman in Kansas City, he became teacher of a Men's Bible Class. During the several years he taught the Class, it built up from a very small number to an attendance of 600 men. It was from this class that Colonel Green decided to enter the evangelistic field, where God has wonderfully blessed his preaching, resulting in many souls being brought into the kingdom. He is a speaker who is especially attractive to men and he has the distinction of drawing as many, if not more, men than women to all of his services.

Dr. H. H. Halley, of Chicago, Ill., has been engaged to take care of the 11 o'clock and 4 o'clock Bible hours each day. Dr. Halley is probably the most amazing Bible student in America today. He knows practically all of the Bible from memory and it is said, were he put to the test he could quote Scripture 25 hours straight without repeating a single verse and without missing a word. He is neither a stuntist, a dramatic reader, a doctrinaire, nor an evangelist; yet, his Bible hours are real revivals. This will be the greatest treat Kavanaugh has ever offered to Bible students, preachers and Bible lovers.

John C. Musselman, of Kansas City, Mo., considered by many to be the best soloist and song leader in the Western section today, will have charge of the music. He is at present soloist in the Lynnwood Boulevard Methodist Church in Kansas City, Dr. Stidger's church. He is probably best known to the people of this section, however, over the radio from WDAF and KMBC. Miss Rena Chatham, of Louisville, will have charge of the Children's Program this year. She is a teacher in the public schools of Louisville and also a teacher in the Primary Department of the Virginia Avenue Methodist Sunday School. Miss Christine Goldsborough, of LaGrange, will be at the piano and Mrs. R. C. Arnold will play the violin at all of the services.

An unusual feature of this year's program will be the picture: "KING OF KINGS," on Saturday evening, August 10th, beginning at 7:30 P. M., and taking the place of the regular preaching service. This picture will be shown in lantern slides, but is a reproduction of the big moving picture by Cecil DeMille. D. M. Simms, formerly General Secretary of the Kentucky Sunday School Association, is booked for a special address on "Methods of Teaching in the Sunday School," Friday evening, August 16th at 7:15. This special addition to the program is for the benefit of the Sunday school teachers. "Woman's Missionary Day," Thursday, August 15th, will be under the direction of Mrs. W. D. Cain, of Louisville, Secretary of the Louisville District Missionary Societies. The entire day will be given over to a Missionary program, to be announced later. "Laymen's Day" will be held Saturday, August 17th with Mr. J. H. Dickey as Chairman. The following ministers will conduct the morning Devotionals at 9:15: Rev. H. S. McClure, of Crestwood, Ky., August 9; Rev. A. H. Herring, of Crestwood, Ky., August 10; Rev. I. E. Reid, of Crestwood, Ky., August 12; Rev. Frank Lewis, of Louisville, Ky., August 13; Rev. W. R. Johnson, of LaGrange, Ky., August 14; Rev. A. P. Lyon, of Louisville, Ky., August 15; Rev. Thos. B. Talbot, of Danville, Ky., August 16; Rev. T. L. Hulse, of Louisville, Ky., August 17.

Each evening except August 16th and Sundays, moving pictures will be shown on the grounds, which will be both entertaining and uplifting.

OAKLAND TABERNACLE.

Oakland Tabernacle is located twelve miles from Greensburg, La., in St. Helena Parish. It was built on the grounds of the Consolidated Agricultural School, half way between Day's Chapel and Center Church. Rev. J. A. Parsons is the pastor. Rev. W. W. McKnight is leading the singing.

One week each year is set apart for this meeting. People come for miles around. Some bring their dinner and supper and remain all day. Services are held at eleven in the morning, three in afternoon and eight in the evening. Hundreds attend the Sunday and the night services and a creditable number in day time. The thing that impresses me most is the vast number of young men and women who attend. As high as forty or fifty of these young people attend the morning services. How my heart yearns for the Lord to get complete possession of their lives. Numbers are coming forward for prayer and numbers are being blest from the first service. O for the power to present Christ in his fullness so that people will hunger for him.

We begin at Marrowbone, Ky., the 17th.

"O for a passionate passion for souls,
O for a pity that yearns,
O for a heart that will love until death.
O for the fire that burns.
O for the pure prayer-power that prevails,
That pours out itself for the lost,
Victorious prayer in our Conqueror's name,
O for a Pentecost."

W. E. Thomas.

SIENYU, FUKIEN, CHINA.

Those of you who have known that we were to have a revival season here during the spring have doubtless been praying for the meetings. In fact, I know somebody has been praying because of the remarkable results. I am sure you will all want to hear something about the meetings in order that we all may praise the good Lord who poured out this blessing upon the church here.

Dr. and Mrs. George W. Ridout reached us the 20th of March and meetings began the evening of that day. With them were three Chinese workers from the Bethel Mission in Shanghai. One of them, Rev. Andrew Gih, was here last year when the revival had its visible beginning in our midst. Another, Mr. Linn, is a singer. The third, Miss Grace Hwang, is a splendid Bible teacher. The meetings lasted twelve days and we had delegates in from the country churches about us, both men and women.

These twelve days were days of glorious victory. Mrs. Ridout is quite as much of a preacher as her husband and she held a mass meeting for women each afternoon. Both she and Dr. Ridout believe in the old-fashioned altar service and we find that the Chinese take to it very well. At no one of the twelve meetings for women would the altar accommodate all who were seeking. Sometimes half the audience would try to go forward. At every service there were conversions and hearts cleansed by the Holy Spirit. These meetings would begin at two o'clock and go on all afternoon. People would not go away until the lateness of the hour compelled them to go.

Rev. Andrew Gih and Dr. Ridout conducted the main services at ten o'clock in the morning and again in the evening. They preached a very simple Gospel of Regeneration and Sanctification. The power that attended these simple Bible messages was remarkable. Almost every service had its altar service. Dr. Ridout said that in the States he would be pleased with a dozen seekers but here the altar was overflowing a moment or two after the invitation was given. Sometimes half of the church had to be turned into an altar to provide for all those who wanted to go forward.

Most of our country workers, preachers and Bible women were in. They sought the baptism of the Holy Spirit and many were the shining victories. To those of us who knew individual cases and witnessed the victories gained in these lives each meeting was indeed a stirring scene for us. How we all were stirred when a young official one night stepped out before the audience and gave his testimony. He was a young man of high principles and faithful in his office. He has been a member of our church for some time. But he told how in the course of his duties he had condemned more than sixty bandits to be shot and had done it with a stroke of the pen feeling no pity or concern in his heart whatever for the souls of these men. He said that God had spread out his sins before him right so that he could see himself as he was in God's sight. He was claiming forgiveness in the Cross of Christ. He was seeking the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Before the meeting closed God clothed him with power from on high. Within a few days he gave his testimony in a student center with great effect upon those gathered there resulting in many souls seeking Christ. He is giving freely of his time to voluntary service in the church. He tells folks that the old Koh Sang (his name) they used to know died up there in the Sienyu Revival Meetings and that they see before them a new creature in Christ.

Of course the proof of the fruits of the meetings will be seen in what those who have received the blessing do with it. And we are already seeing glorious fruitage. The very week the meetings closed three meetings were projected and the workers divided up into groups to assist each other. These three meetings were of four days each and were held in the country places. The Lord blessed the testimony and the preaching of these newly Spirit-filled workers with the results that a tremendous stir was made in each place, the church members revived and many heathen brought to a decision to follow Christ. Our District Superintendents say that they have never witnessed anything like it. At one of the places when an altar call was given the whole congregation by one impulse moved forward either to consecrate themselves to the Lord or to seek forgiveness of their sins.

In the testimonies that followed one young man who had been cast off by his family told how that he had matured his plans to become a bandit chief and get rich by plundering others. That very night God showed him his sin and then cleansed his heart so that he was resolved to give up forever his plans to be a brigand. At another place where I was present a woman who had lately become possessed with a demon and was making her home a place of terror came under the influences of the meetings. Her husband was the manager of the idol fetes of that place and they had many idols in their home. As soon as this woman entered the church and heard the voice of the preacher she became quiet. However on going back to her home she would become violent again. The workers taught her to trust in Jesus to break her fetters and happy to say the last two days of the meeting she was normal both in the services and afterwards in her home.

The revival, we feel, has just begun. It must spread to all the country places. The Lord is working mightily in our midst. Let us keep on praying. We have proved over and over the power and value of prayer. When during the meetings we came up against hard problems the workers went to prayer and from the prayer rooms came out with the assurance of victory and sure enough victory followed at the next meeting. We give praise and glory to our gracious Saviour.

Yours in His service,

W. B. Cole.

Is it not possible that in many of our pulpits we have almost no gospel at all? I am saying this with the understanding that the gospel is the good news of salvation through trust in the Lord Jesus Christ. In many of our pulpits we have discussions on various subjects, addresses on many topics; they may be interesting, they may have a place in the political, educational, economic, and social life of the people, and yet, not one word of gospel. The gospel is a divine, saving power. It has to do with sin, the rebuke of it, the warning against it, and the gracious promise of redemption from it. I would to God that the many hundreds, perhaps some thousands, of my dear ministerial brethren who read this paper, would determine to preach, after earnest prayer, a series of sermons on the New Birth, so scriptural, so plain, so earnest, and so urgent that no one in their congregations can be comforted, and remain asleep, religiously, who has not the inward witness that they have been born of the Spirit.

This, first one of the four doctrines I mentioned, is so important that I have written at greater length on the subject than I intended, and as I am a bit tired I shall have to take up these other three doctrines I mentioned for discussion in next week's HERALD.

Oh, my brethren, called of God into the ministry, do not permit yourselves to bring people into the church without repentance, without regenerating grace, and live and die without being made to feel under your earnest ministry, that they must be "born again."

Nearness to God.

Of course, it is understood that God is omnipresent, but with many people in their thought and conduct he is far away; with not a few, he does not exist at all. I remember to have read, many years ago, from a book written by a devout soul, these words: "A memory of the presence of God is the best preventive against sin." The observation is quite true. Nothing is more wholesome than a consciousness of the divine presence.

When you hear persons speaking lightly, or sneeringly, of entire sanctification—holiness of heart and life—you may be quite sure that such persons have never been in their thinking and consciousness close enough to God to discover their own depravity, their sad lack of purity of heart and life. Those who come close to God are able, in the light of his holiness, to discover their own corrupt and sinful nature, and then they cry out, "Unclean," as Isaiah of old did. Then they long for a touch of the holy fire, of cleansing from all sin.

How great and holy is God? To become conscious of his awful presence is to abhor one's self in dust and ashes: to loathe and hate one's uncleanness. It is then that the soul hungers and thirsts after righteousness. It is then the cleansing blood of Jesus is precious beyond all things. What depth of humility! What surrender of all selfishness and worldly ambition! What consecration of poor, unworthy self! Then as the hart pants for the waterbrook, the soul pants for God. Then Jesus Christ is exalted, high over all. He is the whole heart's desire. Then the old man is indeed dying; then the gracious and painful processes of his crucifixion are going on, and the blessed Trinity is bringing a human soul into a state of entire sanctification from sin, which fits it for a heaven where sin cannot enter.

When you hear preachers, or any one, speaking lightly, or with ridicule, against sanctification of the human soul, you may be sure they know nothing of these deep and awful processes of the Holy Spirit that crucify the old man of sin, and bring the child of God into the blessed fulness of salvation. These are deep, awful, and glorious mysteries which are entirely hidden and unknown from all those who are not willing to follow Jesus to Gethsemane and to Calvary. When I hear people speaking lightly of sanctification, of the great cleansing power of Jesus' blood, it does not so much arouse resentment as it awakens pity and fear for such a soul. Is it not the recrucifixion of Jesus to discount the cleansing, sanctifying power of his blood?

IN NOTHING BE ANXIOUS.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

THE above is the revised rendering of Ephesians 4:6, which in the King James' Version reads, "Be careful for nothing." The thought, of course, is identical, but the revised rendering has a bit more of our present day way of saying it. We are all acquainted with "anxiety," more or less and, I fear with most of us, it the "more" experience.

In spite of the fact that Mr. Wesley said he would as soon curse as to "worry," many of us are given to that very thing, and not stintingly, either. Personally, it is one of my weakest places—to worry over things that I cannot help, and so I am benefited none and yet have gone through the ordeal of worrying.

THERE MUST BE A REMEDY.

or the inspired writer to the Ephesians would not have exhorted them to refrain from anxiety. I recall the antidote for this very thing in the passage where it is promised that "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee." I do not think worry, or anxious care, can keep house with the placid, sweet-spirited Dove of Peace, at least, you would think they would be very uncongenial roommates.

Some one in writing of "anxious care" says: "Black care! It has always been among men, and perhaps more today than ever, when the pressure of life is heavier and the constraint of circumstances more imperious. Are there not hours in which the clouds gather densely over the ark of God, and the stoutest hearts tremble? Is it easy for even the Christian soul to look on a family of little ones, sleeping soundly, and know that they will certainly awake hungry for food, of which the cupboard is bare, and have no tinge of anxiety?"

At such times the apostle exhorts us to "Make our requests known unto God." God does not require us to agonize before him in order that we make known our needs to him, but simply to tell him about ourselves in humility, and rest upon his never-failing promise to help us in time of need. Is it not true with most of us that we take our burdens to the Lord, but we do not leave them there. We find ourselves laying down our burdens, but how prone are we to take them again. We must remember that God is our Father and knows before we ask him what we need, but we must show our faith and trust in him by coming "boldly to the throne of grace," that we may obtain mercy, and find help in time of need.

There is none of us who are exempt from life's discipline. As Longfellow has so beautifully expressed it, "Into each life some rain must fall, some days be dark and dreary." It takes the bitter to temper the sweetness in life's cup of varied experience, so it is ours to accept it as from our Father's hand, the same as we acknowledge his blessings. Paul said he had learned how to abound, and how to be abased, to be full and to be empty, thus adjusting himself to the varied vicissitudes of life's pilgrimage and so be the better and stronger for such experiences.

Such is the portion of mortals here below, but amid all peace, God's white-winged sentinel angel, shall come down to keep the heart with its affections, the mind with its thoughts. Worry, unrest, anxiety, will stand without, as the noise of the street breaks in vain on the double windows of the city counting house, whilst the child of God learns humbly and patiently the lesson of his Father's love. Careful for nothing, prayerful and thankful in everything is the program of divine Love and the secret of a happy, victorious life. And it is, dear reader, your privilege and mine!

DEATH OF THE "OLD MAN."

COMMISSIONER S. L. BRENGLE, D. D.

THE Son of God came into this world, and lived, and toiled, and taught, and suffered, and died and rose again in order to accomplish a two-fold purpose.

The Apostle John explains this two-fold work. In 1 John 3:5, speaking of Jesus, he says, "Ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins." This is his justification, and regeneration, which are done for us and in us. In verse eight he adds, "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested to destroy the works of the devil." That is entire sanctification, which is a work done in us. Now upon an examination of experience and Scripture, we find this is exactly what man needs to have done for him.

A NEW PRINCIPLE OF LIFE

First, he needs to get rid of his own sins, and have a new principle of life planted in him. "All men have sinned and come short of the glory of God," and when any man comes to God, he comes burdened with a sense of his own wrong-doings and tempers. His sins condemn him; but, thank God, Jesus came to take away our sins. When a man comes with a penitent heart, acknowledging himself a sinner, and puts his trust in Jesus, he will find himself suddenly freed from his sins. The sense of guilt will vanish. The power of evil will be broken. The burden will roll away. Peace will fill his heart. He will see that his sins were laid on another, even on Jesus, and he will realize that "with his stripes we are healed." This is a result of that free pardon, that free justification for all past offences, that God gives to every one who surrenders himself heartily to and trusts in Jesus. At the same time God plants in the man's heart a new life. The man is born of God, and receives what Paul calls the washing of regeneration, which washes away all the man's guilt, and all the sin for which he is responsible. At this time, too, there will be planted in the man's heart, love, joy, peace, and the various fruits of the Spirit, and if his experience is very marked, as such experiences frequently are, he will probably think there is nothing more to be done. But if he walks in "humbleness of mind" (which, by the way, is a much-neglected fruit of the Spirit), if he speaks often and freely with those who love the Lord, and if he carefully searches the Word of God and "meditates therein day and night," he will soon find that sin's disease is deeper and more deadly than he thought, and that behind and below his own sins are the "works of the devil," that must also be destroyed before the work of grace in his soul can be complete.

He will find a big, dark something in him that wants to get mad when things are against him; something that will not be patient; that is touchy and sensitive; something that wants to grumble and find fault; something that is proud and shuns the shame of the Cross; something that suggests hard thoughts against God; something that is self-willed and ugly and sinful. He hates this something in him, wants to get rid of it, and probably condemns himself for it and maybe will feel that he is a greater sinner now than he ever was before he was converted. But he is not. In fact, he is not a sinner at all so long as he resists this something in himself.

Now, what is the trouble with the man? What is the name of this troublesome something? Paul calls it by several names. In the eighth chapter of Romans he calls it "the carnal mind," and he says it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be."

SOMETHING EVIL AND AWFUL

In the seventh chapter he calls it "the body of this death," and wonders how he can get deliverance from it. In Ephesians 4:22, and Colossians 3:9, he calls it "the old man." In Galatians 5:17, he calls it "the flesh."

John calls it "sin," as distinct from "sins," and the "works of the devil." Ezekiel calls it a "stony heart" (chap. 36:26). The theologians call it "inbred sin," "original sin," and "depravity." Whatever you wish to call it, it is something evil and awful, that remains in the heart after a man has been converted.

Some say that it is got rid of at conversion, but I never saw any people who found it so, and Mr. Wesley, who was a much wiser man than I am, and who had a far wider range of observation, examined thousands of people on this very point, and he said he never knew of one who got rid of this troublesome thing at conversion.

Some people say that growing in grace is the remedy.

Some people say you never get rid of it while you live. It will remain in you and war against you till you die. They are not altogether prophets of despair, for they say the new life in you will overcome it and keep it down, but that you will have to stand on guard and watch it, club and repress it, as you would a maniac, till death relieves you.

Personally, this subject once gave me great concern. These warring opinions perplexed me, while the "old man" made increasing war against all my holy desires and purposes. But while I found man's teachings and theories were perplexing, God's teachings were plain and light as day.

GOD'S TEACHINGS PLAIN

1—God doesn't admit that we get rid of this at conversion, for all his teachings and exhortations concerning it are addressed to Christians. And those who hold this doctrine will have to admit one of two things—either that it is not removed at conversion, or that a great number of earnest professors who claimed to be converted have never been converted at all. Personally, I cannot admit the latter for an instant.

2—God does, by the mouth of Peter, exhort us to grow in grace, but that simply means to grow in favor with God, by obedience and faith, and does not touch the subject in hand. Corn may grow beautifully and delight the farmer, but all its growth will not rid the field of weeds.

3—Neither does God anywhere teach that this thing need be bothering us till death, or that death will destroy it.

4—Nor do I find any warrant in the whole Bible for purgatorial fires being the deliverer from this evil.

5—But I do find that God teaches very plainly how we are to get rid of it. Paul says, "Put off the old man" (Eph. 4:22.) James says, "Lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness" (James 1:21). John says, "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin," not part of some sin, but "all sin."

All these passages teach that we are to get rid of something that bothers us and hinders our spiritual life and show plainly that this work is not to be a slow, evolutionary process, but an instantaneous work wrought in the heart of the humble believer by the Holy Ghost.

Blessed be God! And the Bible further teaches that the one thing needful on our part to secure this operation of the Holy Spirit is an obedient faith "that laughs at impossibilities, and cries 'It shall be done.'"

If this Bible teaching is true, then it is a matter that can be proven by experience. If one man proves it to be so, that establishes the Bible testimony against all the doubters in the world. All men used to believe the world was flat. Columbus rose up and said it was round, and he proved it against them all. There may be some ignorant old fogies yet who believe the world is flat, but they can prove it to be round, if they will take the trouble, and whether they prove it or not, their purblind unbelief does not change the fact.

Just so, the greater part of mankind believe that "the old man" is destined to live to the end, but as Paul says, "Their unbelief does not make the faith of God of none effect," and humble men and women are rising up every day to declare it is possible, and that all men can prove that he can be destroyed, if they will meet the conditions.

Oh, that we could get men to understand this! Oh, that we could get them to take counsel with faith and not with unbelief! Oh, that we could get them to see what Jesus really came to do!

I proved this fifteen years ago, and ever since I have been walking in a day that has no setting sun, and everlasting joy and gladness have been on my head and in my heart. Glory be to God.

It is no little Salvation that Jesus Christ came to work out for us. It is a "great Salvation," and it saves, hallelujah! It is not a pretence. It is not a "make-believe." It is a real Salvation from all sin and uncleanness; from all doubt and fear; from all guile and hypocrisy; from all malice and wrath! Bless God!

When I begin to consider it and to write about it, I want to fill the page with praise to God. The hallelujahs of Heaven begin to ring all through my soul, and my heart cries out with those four mystical beasts before the throne, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty," and in spirit I fall down with "the four and twenty elders," and worship him that liveth for ever and ever, who has taken away my sins and destroyed the works of the devil out of my heart, and come to dwell in me. (Romans 8:2, 3, 4).

Finally, "Take heed, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief" "And to whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not? So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief." "But we which have believed do enter into rest" (Heb. 3:12, 17, 19, and 4:3; 1 Thess. 5:17-24; Romans 12:1, 2; Heb. 10:35-39; 1 John 5:14, 15.)

A Church Choir Smitten by the Holy Spirit.

One of the most conspicuous examples of a divine innovation upon the accustomed routine services of a certain city church was enacted some years ago. A Spirit-filled man had been invited to hold a series of meetings, and when he stood up to preach the first sermon he was deeply grieved at the formality he witnessed, and inwardly prayed God to break it up. The levity of the white-robed choir was especially distressing to him. Soon the Lord said, "Go on with the service, and I will take care of the choir." Afterward the Spirit of God fell on him in mighty intercession, and he heard a noise at his back, as though people were falling, chairs being upset and the like. When he ceased praying and opened his eyes he noticed that there was a penitential commotion in the audience, and that the members of the choir were stretched out in rows under deep conviction, calling on God for mercy. The next night scores of prostrate people, professors and non-professors of religion, wept and confessed sin. And again God saved, sanctified and baptized with the Holy Ghost.

Oh that the sin-slaying Holy Spirit would mightily fall upon all churches where a heartless service prevails and keeps people in the grip of the great enemy of souls. O Lord, let it come in veritable earthquake power!

The Fountain of Wisdom.

The character and piety of a home may well be judged by the books found on the table or in the library. If you go into a home and find books by Ingersoll or like characters, you are made to feel that there is unbelief in that home; if you find a library filled with light, trashy fiction, you will know there are no high ideals or holy thoughts about God or things eternal.

The well-read, well-informed person is able to cope with most every situation, and every one owes it to himself or herself to set apart say an hour a day to read. The Greek proverb that "The fountain of wisdom flows through books" is true. The reading of the right kind of literature encourages, enriches, makes one happier, a better citizen, a better Christian and not infrequently fills one with a burning desire and determination to do more for God and humanity.

You can make no mistake in buying the following books, as they are written by great and good men and on interesting and helpful themes:

Great Men and Great Movements, by Bishop Chas. B. Galloway.

This book has 328 pages, bound in cloth, stamped in gold.

Great Revivals and the Great Republic, by Bishop W. A. Candler.

This book has 344 pages, bound in cloth. The Snare of the Fowler, sermons by Rev. Geo. R. Stuart.

This book has 234 pages, bound in cloth. Hot Shots, Sermons and Sayings, by Sam P. Jones.

This book has 304 pages, bound in cloth. Wit and Wisdom of Warren A. Candler.

This book has 285 pages, bound in cloth. Wesley and His Work, by Bishop W. A. Candler.

This book has 223 pages, bound in cloth.

The above 6 books, if published today would sell at a net price of $12.00. We offer to send them to you postpaid for $3.00. When our present stock of these books is sold out the edition will be exhausted and more than likely not be reprinted. So send us your order at once, as it will be an investment you will never regret.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

HOW EDDIE PREACHED.

"When I get big enough I'm going to be a preacher," said Eddie one day. "What is a preacher," asked grandma.

Eddie looked surprised. "Don't you know what a preacher is? A preacher is a man that tells people what the Bible means. And he says, 'Thirldy my brethren,' and everybody listens to him. It's nice to have people listen to you."

Grandma smiled. "I think you are big enough to preach now," she said. "Really and truly, grandma?" asked the little boy eagerly. "Yes, really and truly."

"I'm afraid not," said Eddie, after a few minutes of thought, "or I know how, and I don't."

"What does the preacher do first?" asked grandma.

"He takes a text and then he 'splains it. I can't do that."

"Oh, yes you can," said grandma. "Here is a good text for you to explain: 'Be ye kind one to another.'"

"There's nothing to 'splain 'bout that," said Eddie. "You just be kind to everybody, and that's all there is of it."

"A good text, though, for my little preacher's first sermon. I should like to have him preach from it for a week."

"Preach a week? Why, grandma, I can't."

"Can you be kind to everybody you meet for a week?"

Eddie looked thoughtful. "Would that be preaching?" he asked.

"It would be the very best kind. A good preacher has to preach in that way, or people will not listen to what he says in the pulpit."

"Well," said Eddie, with a sigh, "I suppose I can try, but I wasn't thinking 'bout that kind of preaching."

"You'll be showing everybody what that verse in the Bible means, you know," said grandma.

"It's not kind to the teacher to whisper in school," said Eddie, the next day, and he did not whisper once.

"It's not kind to Bridget to play along the road and keep my dinner waiting, either," and he hurried home from school.

"It's not being kind to mother when I don't do errands promptly," he said; and he did quickly and well whatever he was bid.

Every day and all day he thought about what was kind, and tried to do it.

"The end of the week came. 'How do you like preaching?' asked grandma.

"Why, I like it; but, grandma; I guess everybody must have been preaching 'bout that text for everybody has been so kind to me."—The Mayflower.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wrote to you over a year ago and I wish to thank you for printing my letter. I will be twenty years old March 30. Do I have a twin? I would like to find one. I had a twin brother but he died when a baby. I have an older brother living. I have wavy brown hair and brown eyes. I will not take time to describe myself here but if any of the cousins would like to know me better I would be glad to hear from them. I will answer all letters received.

I have been taking The Herald about a year. Mother subscribed for it first. When her subscription expired I liked it so much that I did not want to do without it. I read practically all of the articles. I do not want to miss any of the good things in it. I am a Christian. When I subscribed for The Herald I was clerking in a store here. I had to hear so many things I did not like and meet people who were not like I would like to be and I felt the need of something to keep me in the right way. The Herald is a great help.

I went to Camp Sychar for my vacation last year and the year before. I hope to go this summer again. The sermons they preach there are wonderful. Every one of the meetings is a help in some way. While there one wants to live right and it does not seem hard to do so. But after being away from the good atmosphere and having to mingle with other types of people it is easy to lose your enthusiasm. The Herald with its good sermons and other articles ever reminds me of my good resolutions I made at Camp and makes it easier to follow its teachings.

I wish all the cousins could read "In His Steps," by Sheldon, and "The Christian's Secret of a Happy Life," by Hannah Whitall Smith. Books like those inspire one to try harder to follow in his steps. Of course none of those can surpass the Bible though.

I enjoy playing the piano, especially the Camp Sychar hymns. I also like to take walks in the country in the spring when the first wild flowers bloom. This letter is getting long so I will close for this time. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins, Frances Holdren.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading The Pentecostal Herald and enjoy it very much. We do not take it, but two dear old friends let us have the paper. I am a member of the Missionary Baptist Church. I am seventeen years of age. One of my favorite pastimes is reading or writing poetry. I am sending one of my poems that I would enjoy seeing on page ten. With best wishes to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Influence.

Live a life so when departing
To that far off hoped for clime,
Some poor, weary, worn-out brother
Might see footprints left behind.
Footprints that would safely guide him

Through the darkness of the night,
Guide him to the home eternal
'Mid the everlasting light.

Live a life so when departed,
And no more your feet shall roam;
Others follow in your footsteps
That will lead them safely home.

Live a life in going forward
To the goal that lies ahead,
Giving courage to another,
Leaving footprints where you tread.

Live a life so good and useful
That when from this world you part;
Everyone will sadly miss you,
Cast a shadow on their heart.

Live a life when age is creeping
And the roses fade away,
So the path that you are going
Will grow brighter all the way.

Live a life so when departed
And your body is at rest,
That your friends will say about you
By their living we were blest.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As I have never written a letter to The Pentecostal Herald I was wondering if you dear ones would like a word from me. I am a girl between the age of twenty and twenty-five. I would like a little space to tell you dear boys and girls how I do enjoy reading your letters.

When I read your good letters I wonder how far along on the King's highway you are for your age. So many of the cousins tell us they are Christians. I am so glad to know that there are so many who are starting while young to serve the Lord. I know by experience it is the only life worth while. Let nothing turn you out of the way. There are so many ways Satan has to lead people to paths of sin. Should we do things because others do it? We have to say no when tempted to do the doubtful things, which lead us from the paths of Christian living. Let us, dear cousins, study God's precious word and do always the teachings of it, and if a thing is doubtful in our minds ask Jesus to lead us. We know when Jesus leads us we shall be kept from evil.

I haven't read many letters from Ohio. Wake up, boys and girls. I have lived in this State all my life and think it a good State. I can say I know without a doubt, that my name is written in the Lamb's book of life. Praise his precious name for a know-so salvation. He is a wonderful Savior to me. Praise the Lord. I am a member of the M. E. Church. I want to do all I can for my Lord. I teach a class of boys and girls in our Sunday school. They are between the age of eleven and seventeen. Oh, that I might in some way lead these dear souls to Jesus. Remember me in your prayers, Aunt Bettie, and also you cousins that know the Lord, remember me. I thank God for The Herald. It has helped me so much, I can hardly wait for the next paper. I sure love good reading. The Lord sent a minister to our church filled with the Holy Spirit. He certainly is a man of God. He preaches in five churches, where the Lord is using him in a wonderful way. I thank God for sending him to us. He has preached here for several years. May the Lord bless him in his work. Let us all prepare and be ready when the Lord shall come to take us to our home prepared for us, that we may enter it. I have loved ones out of the ark of safety, but I am trusting the Lord for the salvation of their souls. I must go for this time.

Jesus is near,
There is no friend like Jesus to comfort and cheer.

Lonely, no never, I'm never alone,
For Jesus is with me wherever I roam.

Your Sister in Jesus.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been a reader of The Herald for a number of years and always enjoyed reading page ten. I am twenty-five years old. I have dark brown hair (not bobbed) fair complexion and blue eyes. My birthday is July 2. Have I a twin? I am a member of the Christian church. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with E, and has six letters in it. I will be glad to correspond with all the cousins that care to write to me.

Edna L. Jones.

Rt. 3, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here's another wanting the rest to move over and give her room. I am seventeen years old and am in second year high school. My birthday was December 13, and if you cousins write to me I will tell you more than I have room for in this letter. I go to the Baptist Sunday school every Sunday. I would like to see this in print because this is my second letter. I will answer all letters received and I am hoping to receive letters from all of the cousins.

Bee Bratcher.

Box 173, Rockport, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for an Ohio girl? My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten very much. I am ten years old and in the 5th grade at school. My birthday is Jan. 4. Have I a twin? If so please write and I will answer. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My teacher's name is Mrs. Cora Schockey. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with L and ends with E, and has six letters in it. I hope Mr. W. B. is out fishing when this letter arrives. This is my first letter and I hope to see it in print. I will close and leave room for other boys and girls.

Inez L. Workman.

Rt. 3, Bellaire, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As it has been over a year since I have written to The Herald, I want to write just a little. I'm glad to know Mr. Morrison is still improving; hope he will soon be able to go and win many more souls for Christ. We can look all around us and see so many we fear are traveling the broad road. As I was reading the Boys and Girls' Page I saw a letter from Halleine Smith, and I think it's a great lesson to the young people who are enjoying the dances and so many other sinful things of the world they call pleasure. After all there is no pleasure in them. Halleine, I don't know you, but I want to say you did the wisest thing you ever did when you gave your heart to God. It is a greater honor to have your name written in the Lamb's book of life than to see your name in the bright lights of Broadway. Wish that more of the boys and girls could see it that way. But so many of them seem Don't put it off, today is the day of salvation. I'm so glad for his saving and sanctifying power. I certainly do find a great joy and happiness in trying to live for Christ. He is all and all to me. He is with me in all my sorrows and trials. He goes with me from day to day. I praise him for his goodness and mercy to me. I do enjoy reading The Herald; think it a grand old paper. Dear Aunt Bettie: This is the second time I have written to The Herald but I guess you have forgotten me; it has been almost two years so I guess I had better ask to join your happy band of boys and girls again. I am twelve years old. My birthday is Feb. 24. Who is my twin? My father is a Methodist preacher, he preaches the straight gospel of God and nothing else. I am happy to say that I have found Jesus Christ and am trying to serve him. I ask you all to pray for me that I may do more for Jesus and when our work here on earth is over that I may meet you all in that great land above. Ethel Miller, I will answer some of your questions. The Kingdom of God is in heaven. God's blessings come from the Kingdom of God. Religion comes from the Bible. Cain was the first son of Adam. I guess I will close before Mr. W. B. comes in. WANTED! A COUGH!

"Not a cough in a car-load"! is an advertisement of a certain brand of cigarettes. At the very low price of the 'little coffin nails' (or, is it cough-in' nails?), since they are turned out by the billions, in car-load lots; yet a car-load would cost a bit of money! And then, not to find even one cough-in (coffin) a car-load!!! Cough-in' (coffin) seems to come high that way. We must look elsewhere for our coughs. Perhaps a well known brand of cough drops may be a less expensive way.

And yet, the above is about the least objectionable of the numerous propaganda items put out by the tobacco trust. When they say that cigarettes are good for the throat, the nerves, etc., their advertisement should be excluded from the mails for spreading falsehood! When they say that cigarette-smoking promotes the slim figure, that is worse than decent lying! The cigarette propaganda of the tobacco trust, which many newspapers promote, is among the worst forms of diabolism now extant. Those would-be spiritual guides who tell us that "man is incurably religious," need a different word at the end. If much that marks the average man is religion, it is diabolism, of the devil.
A. S. H.

THE DEVIL ON THE RUN.

Men who are tempted do not find it so hard to believe in the devil. Who is it but the devil that can put a man into such straits? Who can so make him want to do the thing he knows he shouldn't do that he is almost willing to disgrace himself, his family and his friends for the sake of doing it? Yet he is not quite willing, for what creatures we mortals are to have a conscience. What are we going to do with it? Stifle it? Drown it like a cat in a bag?

Well, if it is the devil that is causing us all this trouble, let us fight him. The Good Book says, "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."

Who would not rather see the devil's back than to see his face?

We have a shining example in Jesus. He dismissed the tempter on short notice: "Get thee behind me Satan. Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." "Then the devil leaveth him." When God fills the soul the devil is crowded out. If we will live like Christ, we can see Satan's back growing smaller in the distance.

It is the privilege of every valiant Christian soul to have the devil on the run!
Glenn Welmer Douglass.

PASTORS

Here is an extraordinary offer!

The publishers find that they have an overstock of Doran's Minister's Manual and are offering these books to dealers so that they may be sold at $1.00 each, plus postage. The regular price is $2.00. We have taken fifty copies. After these are sold no more will be available. Many of our pastors now are using this Minister's Manual. It is arranged for the calendar year but its suggestions and sermon material are of great value at any time. We are going to share the cost of mailing and are offering the book at $1.00.

Planned for the busy pastor. Not a mere book of sermon outlines, but a veritable mine of the very best available sermonic material for the modern preacher. The 1929 manual covers the calendar year, with a complete new collection of illustrations, poems, outlines, suggestive texts, children's sermons, invocations and other features which make it indispensable to the busy pastor. Topical and scriptural indices make each item immediately available.

A $2.00 book for $1.00.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VII.—August 18, 1929.

Subject.—The Return from Captivity. Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm 126.

Golden Text.—The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad. Psalm 126:3.

Time.—About B. C. 536.
Place.—Babylon.

Introduction.—The Babylonish captivity began B. C. 606, when Nebuchadnezzar carried away the first group of captives, and ended in the first year of Cyrus.

About B. C. 712 Isaiah prophesied (44:28 and 45:1) that Cyrus would liberate the Jews from captivity, and that under his rule Jerusalem should be rebuilt. This was more than 100 years before Nebuchadnezzar conquered the city and carried away the first captives.

In the early part of the captivity, when the Jews were hoping for release, Jeremiah sent them a message (chapter 29:10-14): "For thus saith the Lord, That after seventy years I will visit you." The promise was that at the end of that long period they would be permitted to return to their home land. Very few of the older ones ever saw Jerusalem again.

We see the bitterness of their grief in captivity in the 137th Psalm: "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land? If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning. If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy." On the other hand, their unbounded joy when the captivity ended is seen and felt in Psalm 126: "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream. Then was our mouth filled with laughter, and our tongue with singing. . . The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad." The contrast is almost a resurrection from the dead.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. In the first year of Cyrus.—Cyrus was the chief ruler; and Darius was a sub-king. This was about the year 536 B. C. The word of the Lord by Jeremiah.—Chapters 29:10-14. The prophet claims divine inspiration here. Note that Jehovah "stirred up the spirit of Cyrus king of Persia." Long years before he was born God called him by name, and assigned him this task; and now that he has come, God uses him to overthrow the Babylonian government, and to set Israel free. His word stands secure forever. Our little modernistic blacksmiths may wear out their man-made hammers beating on it, but the blessed old anvil will never chip nor crack while God lives.

2. Jehovah's charge to Cyrus was clear: "He hath charged me to build him an house at Jerusalem, which is in Judah." I wonder if God spoke to him directly. He may have been familiar with the writings of the Jewish prophets; and, if so, could have drawn his conclusions from them.

3. He is the God.—Cyrus seems to set no store by heathen gods. I wonder if he really believed in Jehovah. This verse points the way to real liberty.

4. Note the broad sweep of this order. Cyrus is calling for all sorts of valuable things that might be needed in rebuilding God's temple in Jerusalem. He surely meant business.

5. The chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin.—These were the two tribes that formed the kingdom of Judah. Priests and Levites.—Some part of the tribe of Levi went into Babylonish captivity; but what part, is a question. Even in captivity God did not leave them without their spiritual leaders. Ezekiel was one of this number.

6. Beside all that was willingly offered.—I judge that the things mentioned in the preceding part of this verse were given in obedience to the command of King Cyrus. Many other things came in as freewill offerings. No doubt both Jews and Babylonians joined in the giving.

As we pass from the study of these six verses it may be well to state a few things that properly belong to the introduction. While Ezra wrote this book, he was not the leader of the first group that returned to Jerusalem. Zerubbabel seems to have led this early group. See chapter 2:1, 2. This first venture failed. The work of rebuilding was stopped by the instigation of Jewish enemies, for a number of years. Ezra did not return till several years later. From Artaxerxes Longimanus "he received letters, money, and every desirable help, and went at the head of a large party of returning exiles to Jerusalem, B. C. 457." In this lesson we are to keep our attention upon Zerubbabel instead of Ezra, the author of the book we are studying.

The first three verses of Psalm 126 are clear and beautiful. Comment can add little to them; but the last three verses call for some explanation.

4. Turn again our captivity.—That sounds as though they were yet in captivity, but not so. When Cyrus' decree of liberation was published all the Jews were made free, but multitudes of them chose to remain in Babylonia; and the psalmist is praying God to turn them back home. They had settled down at homes and business in the land of captivity, and did not wish to leave. As the streams in the south.—Water courses that filled up with a rush in times of heavy rains. The writer is calling for a great, rushing stream of his people to return and rebuild the waste places in their sacred homeland.

5. They that sow in tears shall reap in joy.—They wept their way to Babylonia, and waited there for 70 years; but now they are retracing their steps to Jerusalem laden with rich gifts for the rehabilitation of their beloved city.

6. This verse is of broad application. It applied to the exiled Jews; but it also applies to Christian workers in all times. It is the weeping laborer who brings his sheaves back with him. Only broken-hearted preachers are worth while; others would better plow in the fields.

NOTICE!

Have some time for revivals and camp meetings not yet taken. Can furnish best of reference as to preaching and soul winning. My terms are an invitation. Am not on the shelf nor in a rut.

B. F. Pritchett,

Conf. Evangelist, East Oklahoma Conference, Stonewall, Okla.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Fred Alexander: "Graduating from Asbury this June the Lord fairly pushed me into the evangelistic field with one of the Methodist Evangelical League tents. I did not expect to like the work but the Lord has blessed so richly in my own soul and in the salvation and sanctification of a few other souls that I feel that perhaps this is the work God would have me to do until I go to the mission field. We held a two-weeks' campaign at Roxbury, Ohio. After July 28th I will be free to go anywhere. My permanent address will be Wilmore, Ky."

The revival at Raceland being conducted by the pastor and Rev. J. B. Kendall is attracting large crowds. Rev. Kendall is a man of wide experience and is doing some great preaching. He is one of the general evangelists of the M. E. Church, South, and pastor and people are delighted in securing the services of such a man for Raceland. There will be congregational singing and Rev. Kendall's great messages at 8:00 o'clock all this week and next.

Any pastor, evangelist, or evangelistic party that desires to secure the services of a soloist and pianist who has had superior musical training, and a wide experience in pentecostal evangelism, an ordained minister, resourceful and versatile, and an attractive personality, and who will consider invitations to labor in smaller meetings as well as in larger ones should address Evangelist J. L. Glascock, 1350 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio, for further information.

The Southwest Holiness camp meeting will be held at Salem, Va., Aug. 30-Sept. 8. Workers: Joseph Owen, Harvey Wood, from Korea, and others. Pray that many may receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Everybody welcome. Mrs. J. B. Camden, Sec.-Treas.

The Hancock County Camp Meeting Association—The thirty-third annual camp meeting will be held on their beautiful camp grounds A. P. Bial Park, Findlay, opening on Thursday evening, August 8. Sermon 7:30 and closing on Sunday evening, August 18, 1929. The workers are Rev. J. E. Shannon, Santa Ana, Calif.; Rev. C. W. Butler, Cleveland; Prof. N. B. Vandall, song leader, Akron; Miss Winifred Henenway, Young People's instructor, Farmer, Ohio. Miss Florine Ewing, pianist, Findlay.

The Dundy, Chase and Perkins Co., Holiness Association will hold their 19th annual camp at their grounds near Imperial, Neb., North of D. L. D. highway on August 16-25. Rev. E. A. Lacour, University Park, Ia., evangelist. Rev. Truesdell, Wauneta, Neb., leader of song. Miss Pauline Koertner of Roseland, Neb., in charge of the children's work. Jno. J. Kitt, Sec., Wauneta, Neb.

WANTED!

The name and address of one or more young preachers to whom we can send The Pentecostal Herald. If in sending these to us you want the privilege of paying for them, you may do so on our 50c proposition. Or, if you have some money to invest and haven't the names, we shall be glad to supply them.

Don't fail to send us some new subscribers on the 50 cent offer.

A GREAT SERMON BY A GREAT WOMAN.

Rev. Etta Sadler Shaw

State and National Evangelist of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Rev. Etta Sadler Shaw, wife of Evangelist S. B. Shaw, died at their home in Grand Rapids, Michigan, Dec. 4, 1928, in her sixty-ninth year.

She was one of the most successful workers with boys and girls of her day. The churches and public schools always welcomed her. She was also a great lecturer and preacher. The sermon above referred to was taken down by a short hand reporter and is now published in two issues of The Pentecostal Herald of Louisville, Ky. The two copies will be mailed to one address for ten cents, four copies fifteen cents. You can send postage stamps. All orders should be addressed to S. B. Shaw, 101 Alton Ave., Salem Park, Indianapolis, Indiana.

TESTIMONY.

Mrs. J. J. Childers: "I am impressed to write a few lines to your grand paper, The Pentecostal Herald, which has been a welcome visitor in our home for more than 30 years. The Herald has proved a real benediction to us as we read its sacred pages. I don't know of any paper that has been such an inspiration to me. I am truly sorry to hear of Dr. Morrison being sick again. I am asking the Lord to restore him to his much needed health as he is such a soul winner for Jesus. But I am only asking that the will of our God be done. I can't think of anyone who would be missed more than Dr. Morrison. I can well remember when he used to go to Waco camp and his wonderful sermons were an inspiration to all who listened to him. May the Lord touch his body and heal him, if it be in accord with his will.

"I want to ask that I be remembered in the prayers of The Herald family. I have not been well for some time as I had a severe attack of flu in February, but I am able to be up most of the time. The Lord has been so good to me all along life's journey. I was 75 years of age Feb. 4, and I can say I love God, and the joy of my heart is to be in his service. I want to do all I can to spread scriptural holiness over our nation. I have tried in my weak way to live for God for more than a half century; have been sanctified for 35 years."

Mrs. G. W. Gordon: "Jesus never seemed more precious than today. The old account was settled long ago when I was 11 years old, and three days after God sanctified me. There is nothing in this world so progressive as real Bible salvation. The vision of Jesus is ever before me when I pray, and some day I shall see him face to face, then he will tell me some things that I shall never know here."

TWENTY-ONE REASONS.

Twenty-one reasons why you should attend the Kentucky State, and Kingswood Holiness Camp Meeting, Kingswood, Ky., August 30 to September 8, 1929: You will meet and hear

1. Rev. Chas. Stalker, of Columbus, Ohio, known as the round-the-world evangelist.

2. Rev. Seth C. Rees, of Pasadena, Calif., General Superintendent of Pilgrim Holiness Church, a mighty preacher of the Word.

3. Rev. Andy Dolbow, of Wilmington, Dela., 85 years old and as nimble as a boy, of whom it has been said, "For years he won more souls to Christ than all the bishops in the United States. It was Andy who, in those awful days of sin, would vomit, and freeze to his own vomit, and dear old Maggie, his wife, would come with hot water and thaw him loose, take him home and pray for him. Come hear his life story. It is marvelous!

4. Rev. W. L. Surbrook, President Kingswood Holiness College, a man with a message.

5. Rev. R. G. Finch, General Superintendent Foreign Missions of the Pilgrim Holiness Church, with a burden for the world.

6. Rev. M. G. Standley, of God's Bible School, Cincinnati, Ohio, Assistant General Superintendent of Pilgrim Holiness Church; the man who has helped thousands of young people to a life of victory.

7. Rev. W. C. Stone, of Cincinnati, Ohio, Editor Pilgrim Holiness Advocate. His Chalk Talks are a delight to the eye and a mighty inspiration to the heart. Come meet our Editor.

8. Rev. S. M. Stikeleather, General Secretary Treasurer of our Foreign Missionary work and Business Manager of Kingswood Holiness College.

9. Rev. C. C. Brown, Home Missionary of the great State of Kentucky.

10. Rev. J. A. Wisner, Superintendent of our Orphanage, one of God's noble Christian gentlemen.

11. Rev. John Butler, known as the "Farmer-Preacher," pastor of Kingswood Holiness Church.

12. Rev. J. O. Emerick, Dean of Theology. Rev. and Mrs. Will Neff, of Cincinnati, coming warriors of the Cross, Rev. H. D. Duker, Jr., of the Maryland District.

13. Rev. Mrs. Nettie Soltero, right from Mexico. Hear her stirring missionary messages.

14. Rev. Raymond Simpson, our District Superintendent.

15. Then you will want to meet that splendid body of fearless holiness preachers of the Kentucky District, more than one hundred strong.

16. You will get to enjoy the District Assembly that convenes each morning of the camp (Sunday excepted) Rev. Seth C. Rees in the chair.

17. You will see and visit Kingswood Holiness College, the Senior College of the Pilgrim Holiness Church, the best equipped institution in all our church. We want you to visit our Laboratory and Library.

18. We want you to meet our splendid saved and sanctified faculty, who carry a burden for the spiritual welfare of their students.

19. You will see and visit your Bethel Orphans' Home. It will delight your heart to see your boys and girls, hear them sing and play and witness for Jesus.

20. You will see good old Kentucky, the land of Abraham Lincoln, the State you have always wanted to visit.

21. Last, but not least, you will ride into Kingswood, over our brand new State Highway No. 58, all graded and ready for the macadam surface. 58 turns off of U. S. 60 at Harned, and is the western gateway to the World's Famous Mammoth Cave region of Kentucky.

How do you get there? Take U. S. 60 from the East or West, come to Harned and out to Kingswood on 58.

Take the L. & N. R. R. from Louisville or St. Louis to Harned and Taxi out to the camp at Kingswood, Ky.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."
—Basil Mathews
—The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and
His saving power in the lives of men."
Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen
Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

THE PRINCE OF THE HOUSE OF DAVID

By Ingraham.

A story of the life and times of our Lord as told by an eye witness in letters to her father. The narrative is beautifully and forcefully unfolded.
Because of its unusual style it will be read by many who would not read the
New Testament.

Anyone who reads this book is brought face to face with the fact that Jesus is truly "The Prince of the House of David" and the Savior of the world.

A book that the young people will read and enjoy. It will hold their attention clear to the last page.

We have 240 copies of a pocket edition of this book, bound in blue cloth, that we are selling at

A NEW BOOK

Dr. Arthur T. O'Rear has written a book,
"The Nativity of the Holy Spirit" which is a distinct contribution to the more recent literature on this subject. The book is introduced by Bishop Sam Hay.

Dr. O'Rear couples theological soundness with a new method of approach. The discussion is very comprehensive, providing a kind of education in spiritual things that is greatly needed. While his book is constructive and positive, it deals negatively with false movements and modern errors regarding the Holy Spirit and furnishes new light under this head.

A Fifty Cent Investment

One sure way to promote Holiness and the work of God is by way of the printed page. An investment of 50 cents by sending The Pentecostal Herald to some one in your church or town, or to some friend at a distance may mean the leading of that friend into the experience of Full Salvation. Here are 7 reasons for investing 50 cents just now:

1. The Herald has Dr. Morrison's great sermons and messages.
2. The Herald has messages from great evangelists.
3. The Herald has a wonderful Sunday school Exposition.
4. The Herald has news of revivals all over the nation.
5. The Herald's second page gives Dr.
Ridout's articles and messages from China, Japan, Korea, India, etc. The entire mission field will be covered in these articles.
6. The Herald has Mrs. Morrison's page for the children as well as her other messages.
7. The Herald stands foursquare on every great issue relating to the Church, the
School, the Home and the Nation.

Remember: Five Dollars sends The Pentecostal Herald to 10 persons and here is a good place to place some of the Lord's tenth out on heavy interest.

The Opportunity Is Swiftly Passing!

Don't let it go by without your having placed THE HERALD in some home. It may be the means of salvation to the entire household.

Every soul, some time, somewhere, longs to know God, and this may be your opportunity to help some one into a saving knowledge of Him. We have known instances where persons were not approachable in the interest of their souls, but the Holy Spirit has spoken to them in the quiet of the reading hour.

We pass this way but once, so let's make our time and efforts count for God and souls. Try to induce some one to subscribe on the special 50c offer till January. Invest 50c of the Lord's money and send the paper to some one; then pray God to bless the message THE HERALD carries to the good of that soul.

Dear HERALD readers, what we do must be done quickly. The special subscription period is rapidly slipping away, souls are passing into eternity, many of them lost, and it behooves us to get desperately in earnest to offer the Bread of Life to as many as will receive it.

Think NOW of some loved one or friend who needs soul food, and either ask them to subscribe or send them the paper until January. Seemingly small things count for much in the service of the King.

EXCEPT YE FORGIVE.

By The Editor.

OUR Lord Jesus teaches us very clearly that if we would expect forgiveness we must grant forgiveness. The door of mercy is closed against the unmerciful. There is no promise anywhere in the teachings of Jesus that the prayer of the unforgiving and the unmerciful will be heard.

We judge from the teachings of our Lord that about one of the most important things in the individual Christian character, life and practice, is forgiveness, an attitude of kindness and mercy toward our fellowbeings; and mark you, this must be toward the unworthy.

It is a very common thing among people who appear to be good, and who believe themselves to be very genuine in Christian character, to say, "If he or she were worthy I would gladly do this or that." Does the true spirit of mercy look after worthiness and wait to dispense its assistance until some one is found who is worthy? How about God's attitude toward us? Should he refuse to hear our prayers, to forgive our sins, and to bless us until we make ourselves worthy, would we have any basis at all for hope of help?

Jesus taught nothing more definitely than that we are to love our enemies; we are to pray for those who spitefully use us. We can think of nothing more dangerous and destructive to a peaceful, happy, religious experience than that we should allow the spirit of envy, jealousy, and opposition to any one of our fellowbeings, to come into our hearts and influence our lives, so that we come to wish evil toward anyone; and if we hear of their misfortune, feel a thrill of gladness, and say within ourselves, "he or she got what was coming to them."

I well remember a brother in tears telling me that when he got sanctified and wanted to set up the family altar his wife objected and he believed that his wife's mother, who was living with them, was encouraging his wife to oppose him in his desire for family prayers. I tried to comfort him, exhorted him to be patient, to break down their opposition by living a beautiful life before them; by letting them see the great change that had come to him. He stammered out between his sobs, that, if his mother-in-law did not quit interfering with his family affairs, he was going to pray God to take her out of the way. I think that was a rather modest way of saying he was going to ask God to kill the old lady. I could but be amused. Of course, if the brother had knocked her on the head with a baseball bat it would have stopped her activities, but he no doubt would have been brought before the court and, in all likelihood, sent to the penitentiary; but he thought or, at least seemed to think, that God could kill the old woman for him and get away with it. A very dangerous state of mind.

Looking backward, I remember at least twice in my young ministry to have felt a bit of jealousy. It was toward two young ministers about my own age. I loved and admired the young brethren, but they were becoming very popular, and it occurred to me they were appreciated a bit beyond their merit. To listen to their praise in the mouth of my friends, became a bit painful. To tell the plain truth, I suffered; I began to get a grudge against these men. I was ready to point out their weaknesses, to call attention to their faults; to wonder why, out loud, that men of such limited abilities could be so popular, could draw such crowds of admiring listeners, and could be in such demand. I became frightened; my attitude toward those dear brethren was destroying my peace and hindering my love for them. This state of mind was short-lived. I prayed it away, and my heart got happy. I forgot their faults, I enjoyed their ministry, I appreciated their value, I delighted to see them go forward successfully. I formed for them a life-long love. One of them has passed to the other world. I grieved over his departure; the other one, like myself, is an old man. I long for his fellowship.

I write these lines because I sorrow for anyone who refuses to forgive; who cultivates a spirit contrary to mercy and love for one's brethren; who becomes jealous, who nurses hatred against a human being in the smallest degree. This sort of thing is positively contrary to the teachings of our blessed Lord, is poison in the soul, and makes communion and fellowship with the Holy Spirit impossible. May our Lord and Saviour help us most graciously and fill us with the spirit of forgiveness, mercy and helpfulness toward the most unworthy.

Four Neglected Doctrines.

IN last week's HERALD I called attention to the fact that there are four great Bible doctrines that are sadly neglected in our pulpit ministrations, namely, the New Birth, Sanctification, or Christian Holiness, Future Punishment, and the Second Coming of Christ.

I believe that the faithful preaching of these doctrines so plainly written in the Scriptures will awaken interest, lead to repentance, and bring many souls to our Lord Jesus for salvation, and the neglect of them will be very hurtful to the ministry and very fatal to the people. We confined our remarks last week to the New Birth. Christ speaks so plainly with reference to the New Birth that it would seem that every minister of the gospel would lay great stress upon it, preach it, insist upon it, and faithfully contend that it is a personal matter, and that no one has a right to any hope for salvation who neglects or ignores the New Birth.

This week we will call attention to Sanctification.

It is well understood that this word has a double meaning; sometimes it is used in the sense of consecration, or setting apart for holy uses, and at other times it has a much higher and deeper evangelical significance and refers to cleansing, purging from sin, purifying from all spiritual uncleanness. I refer the reader to any Standard Dictionary which is very clear in this higher definition of the word.

It is written all over the Bible, as well as specifically declared that, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Every person ought to be taught that if they cherish any hope of heaven they must be willing to be separated from all sin of every kind. One thing certain, there is no hint in the Scriptures that any one of us will be allowed to carry any sin into heaven.

It seems to us the plainest and simplest thing in the world that a minister of the gospel could stand up in the pulpit on Sunday morning and open up the Scriptures to his people on the subject of holiness of heart and righteousness of life. He can show the people that God requires purity of heart and righteous living, and then he can show them how that God has made ample provision in Christ for us to meet this requirement. The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin. We cannot see why any one should take exceptions, or find fault with a minister for a plain, earnest proclamation of these vital Bible truths; and we believe that if the average preacher, or the entire ministry of the evangelical churches, would preach this full gospel in the spirit of the gospel he would find a very large percent of his people interested and grateful. It would create comment; some would, no doubt, object; some might protest very vigorously, but what of that! Christ bore the cross in order to provide this gospel; shall we refuse to bear the cross in order to preach this gospel? Can we do so, as called of God to deliver his message, and escape his condemnation?

The gospel—the gospel, mark you—is "the power of God unto salvation." Not speeches and addresses on many subjects; some of them doubtless, important, interesting and instructive, but without saving power. The gospel has to do with sin, the lostness of humanity, the love of God, the good news that Christ came and died to save sinners. It is this that has power in it to convince, convict, lead to repentance, saving faith, regenerating power. The gospel must be preached or the preacher himself will become a fruitless, withered branch.

The preaching of holiness of heart and righteousness of every day life is wonderfully comprehensive. It takes in the whole Bible, the fall of man, the natural corruption of his nature, the deep depravity of his heart, the need of an atonement, the love of God which gave his only Son, repentance, faith, pardon, regeneration, the impartation of a new life, sanctification, the expurgation of an old life, the incoming and abiding of the Holy Ghost, growth in knowledge and

MEDITATIONS IN A RICKSHAW.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Travel in the Orient is vastly different from that of the Western world. "The old is better than the new" seems to be the attitude of the East touching modern ways of life and locomotion. When the first railroad was built by foreigners in China—a short road only—after it was completed the Chinese Government bought it and paid every dollar asked for it, then tore it up and shipped the engines and rails to Formosa and dumped it there. But things have greatly changed since then and now China has many railroads and planning to build many more.

In our evangelistic trips we have traveled by steamer, launch, sampan boat, sedan chair, train, and rickshaw—we have not yet traveled by wheelbarrow.

In city work the most convenient and cheap is the rickshaw, a two-wheeled vehicle, a cross between an old-fashioned, small-sized buggy and a big-sized baby carriage. It is comfortable riding in a city like Shanghai where they have paved streets, but in the inland cities where the streets are made of unequal stones put together with no idea of smoothness, resembling in many ways the old-fashioned cobbled-stone streets, the sensation of riding in a rickshaw is not pleasant. It is a case of humpty dumpty, up and down; it is fine exercise either before or after meals.

To arrive in a strange city late at night, with rain pouring, streets muddy, and to enter a rickshaw and be carried off by a man whom you don't know, and to whom you cannot speak any more than the man in the moon, is not a pleasant sensation if you are not accompanied by some friend. Our steamer brought us late at night to Kinkiang; fortunately some good missionaries were awaiting us; we boarded a rickshaw, Mrs. Ridout another, our friends in others, to be carried in the dark and rain and mud through strange streets to the Mission Compound a long, long distance away. We thought what a misfortune would be ours if the rickshaw man turned the wrong corner and carried us off from our companions. I cannot conceive of anything more forlorn or dangerous for an American without a word of Chinese lost in a strange city at midnight. On one occasion in the city of Nanchang, where we were holding evangelistic meetings at Baldwin School and living in the missionary home of Brother W. E. Schubert, we had occasion one night to go over to Dr. Kahn's hospital just after the funeral of Mother Howe, the veteran missionary. There were six of us in the party, each one in a rickshaw, the distance being too great to travel on foot on a rainy, muddy night. By a strange mistake Mrs. Ridout was in the first rickshaw, Mrs. Schubert next, the next following; in the many turnings and twistings of streets, alleys, etc., the first rickshaw carrying wife got away from our party, and though we called and called we could get no answer. Imagine, if you can, a lone American woman astray in a Chinese city on a rainy night! I was seized with feelings of frightful anxiety. I got out of my rickshaw and ran ahead calling as I went, but received no answer. Brother Schubert urged me to get back into my rickshaw and go on to our destination as the rickshaw men all knew Dr. Kahn's hospital. To my great relief when we arrived, there was wife, and the rickshaw man wiping the perspiration from his face lit up with a big laugh as he enjoyed the joke of getting there far in advance of the others. It was a scare, nevertheless, which has made me take extra precautions hereafter to have the first rickshaw occupied by some one who knows!

But I intended to write about some "Meditations in a Rickshaw." I will try to pass on a few of these to my readers.

First. As one passes through the streets of the Chinese city one is struck with the teeming multitudes; the din; the garble of tongues and the sordid, worn, and somber faces of the people.

Thinking, theoretically, what becomes of these multitudes without Christ and without salvation? Paul's answer is the best I know, in Romans 2:12-16: "For as many as have sinned without law shall perish without law, and as many as have sinned in the law shall be judged by the law." In the olden times when agitation on behalf of Foreign Missions was beginning in New England, there were many who took the ground that the heathen were better off in their darkness, and if the gospel was brought to them it would only increase their responsibility and perhaps add to their condemnation. Daniel Steele, answering this objection, said that Christians in Boston could not remain Christians if they disobeyed the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." When we think of what Christian Missions have accomplished in China, India, Africa, South Seas, etc., we thank God that the vision was given to those men of Andover, to Judson, Taylor, Thoburn, Paton, and a multitude of others to carry the gospel to the world of heathenism. Recently I was reading a small book of Bishop Quayle in which he has these beautiful words about Bishop Taylor. He says: "Bishop William Taylor was a strange and mighty character and as far traveled a missionary as the annals of the church universal afford. He was at home in every speech and clime where men needed to hear of the great Christ who saves men from their sins. About the man there clung the odors of the gospel as about the dim mountain cling odors of the pines. He will feel at home in heaven; and his children from the four corners of the world will 'rise up and call him blessed.' I have heard him sing in a quaint, unmusical voice: 'I'm the child of a king, the child of a king,' with such communicative passion as to make me know how a man could forsake houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for Christ's sake and be glad to exultancy at the sacrifice. He and the King have met."

2. Then again we think of Life and its mysteries and its complexities as thoroughly beyond the range of possible solution outside of the Christian Revelation.

They tell us China has been given in ages past the best code of ethics; they tell us India has been rich in philosophy, but where have they led to? Certainly not to purity and goodness. Certainly not to Faith and Hope and Love! You need to visit the East to see Fatalism and Pessimism and unspeakable wickedness in full bloom. In Japan their philosophy and higher learning without Christ contribute greatly to suicide. The Gospel brings Hope and Faith and Love and the Christian Faith gives interpretation to Life as none other system can. Wordsworth, in one of his noble poems, has some beautiful lines which I will quote here:

"Another gift

Of aspect more sublime; that Blessed Mood
In which the burden of the mystery,
In which the heavy and the weary weight
Of all this unintelligible world,
Is lightened; that serene and blessed Mood
In which the affections gently lead us on,
Until, the breath of this corporeal frame
And even the motion of our human blood
Almost suspended, we are laid asleep
In body, and become a living soul;
Of harmony, and the deep power of joy,
While with an eye made quiet by the power
We see, into the life of things."

In the 1884 General Conference of the M. E. Church, for the first time, a Chinese delegate appeared in the person of Pastor Sia, of Foochow. He was a scholar led into the light by a saved blacksmith. When he visited Washington, D. C., he was granted an interview with President Cleveland. He said to the President:

"While visiting the Hall of Representatives and the Senate Chamber yesterday, I noticed in passing through the rotunda, a large painting on the wall representing a company of people on board a ship kneeling around an open Bible. On inquiring what it meant I was informed that those people were just setting out for this country to found a new nation. And now in so short a time what wealth and prosperity have flowed in upon you! Has it not sprung from this great fountain of knowledge, the Holy Bible?"

Yes! Let us thank God for the Holy Bible which lightens up many dark problems and gives us the best philosophy of life. I have often been forcibly struck with those words of Hebrews 11:3, "By faith we understand." Truly one has said, "Faith takes in the sublimest truths and the wildest circle of thought. Guided by the philosophy of faith we shall not stumble at mysteries, nor at alleged contradictions between Science and Revelation. To cherish infidelity is to paralyze one of the noblest faculties of the soul."

3. Then again as one passes through the busy streets literally thronged with people, one cannot but notice the effects of the conquering light of Western civilization. Truly the old is giving way to the new and China is joining itself to the family of nations in a very emphatic manner. Makes me think once of those notable words of Milton in relation to another people. He said: "Methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking her invincible locks." China certainly has roused herself and she is now on the way to suffer many things at the hands of her "flaming youth." It is a hazardous thing educating young Chinamen without Christ. Everywhere we go we find the schools are much harder to be controlled. In the government schools discipline is exceedingly difficult and every now and then the students strike! In the Mission schools there is better control but things are vastly different from other days. Then to add to the peril of the situation is the virus of Communism which certainly has got into the system of the students. This breaks out every now and then. In some sections celebrations are held and holidays called for concerning events of aggravating import. Everything that the Foreigners have done by way of injury to the Chinese is held in bitter remembrance in these celebrations. The British two years ago in Shanghai fired upon a parade of protesting students killing several. The firing was wrong; it was inexcusable; it was Chinese blood spilt in peace times by foreign troops. I am not sure whether England ever made any apology or reparation for it! Now the youth of China is remembering that in a yearly celebration and other kindred occurrences. It must be confessed that the foreigners are guilty of many foul deeds in China and these things are an open sore to young China, hence there is an undercurrent of hatred to the foreigner. In other uprisings there is no telling how this thing may work out. It is to be hoped that the Communists will not get control again. If they do it will be another case of looting and burning and killing, it is to be feared. But we must pray and hope that those in power will be providentially guided and that the good hand of God will be with this nation as it has been in the history of others.

Just now, General Feng known so much in America as the "Christian General," is acting very strangely. The Nationalist Government has turned him out and they bring heavy charges against him. They are holding him up as anything but "Christian." They charge him with being in league with Russia, securing support from them. They also charge him with using famine relief funds to buy arms and supplies for his army. At this writing things are serious and another war is imminent. Feng, it is said, has 500,000 troops; he is a great soldier, his men worship him and it is thought he has the best disciplined army in China. When he and the Nationalist clash in real battle it will be a grave question as to the final effect upon China. Many there are who would like to see Feng president of China, but being a man of no education it would be considered now a step down for China to have a President who was not highly educated. The present head of the government received his education in Japan and all his cabinet are trained men, many of them having been educated in America.

In a recent dispatch we read: "Gen. Feng has issued a statement to the various foreign Ministers and Consuls in China explaining why he has started a military campaign against General Chiang Kaishek and urging that the Powers will maintain strict neutrality regarding the conflict. Gen. Feng declares in the manifesto that he will give full protection to the life and property of the foreigners in all areas affected by the war."

4. Furthermore, as I move along in my rickshaw I cannot fail to be moved by the sight of the neglected children playing on the streets and to whom life offers not much uplift or joy or future. Our children at home have great reason to thank God for their goodly heritage. Jane Taylor, in one of her fine children's hymns, is heard to say:

"I thank the goodness and the grace
Which on my birth have smiled,
And made me, in these Christian days,
A happy Christian child."

Childhood in the Orient is so different! Little children are thrown out and thrown about without any remorse. Baby girls are tossed out to perish on some dirt heap, or sold for little or nothing; sometimes bought up for slavery purposes and worse. Little girl slaves are common; they are bought to act as slaves in the home,—to care for the baby and do countless other things. I noticed in one town close to the Mission building a little girl day after day out in the street with a baby tied to her back. Poor little thing! that's her burden day by day, trying to play a bit with other children but the baby is heavy and she is so little! Then again, many mothers exchange their baby girls. The accursed habit of bethrothal of little children still stays by the ignorant Chinese. They want a wife for their little son so they exchange their baby girl with some other woman's baby girl and bring it up in the same house with the boy with the intention of marrying them when they get in their teens. Their reason for doing this is because they say it is cheaper than buying a wife for the son later on. Unspeakeably wretched habit! I saw recently in a hospital ward a bright faced little girl, paralyzed, in part, who prior to her being reached by the hospital friends was being brought up for the purpose of being sold into something worse than slavery. I saw another grown girl with one leg gone and one hand—all the results of a brutal woman whose slave she was who treated her with the utmost cruelty. When I look at the children in our Christian schools in China and then at the children of heathenism, Oh the contrast! Jesus loved the little children and wherever the religion of Jesus reaches the homes childhood reaps a great blessing and benediction.

Finally, my meditations must close with a note of praise for what God has done in this great land of China, and this I cannot better state than in the language of a Chinese preacher uttered some years ago. He said: "Heretofore, difficulties met us at every step. The worship of village idols, sacrifices to ancestors and the untold superstition of the people have made it impossible to get the religion of Jesus into their minds. These many difficulties may well be compared to the many hard knots and joints in the bamboo. It is hard to split. You get past one joint then comes another and another and you are almost baffled in the attempt to get through it. But now, God has, with one stroke, cleft the bamboo from top to bottom. When milder agencies fail, God sends abroad the thunder of his power. He strikes terror into the hearts of all, cuts through obstacles and sweeps away the refuge of lies. He breaks every yoke, snaps every chain, and bids the oppressed go free!" Amen!

"THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME."

Richard W. Lewis, D. D.

HEN John Howard Payne wrote the immortal song in which are the words used as a title for this article, doubtless no one of his day would have challenged his declaration, "There's no place like home." But we cannot be quite so sure as to our own times consenting without many denials here and there, and on the part of perfectly honest and sincere persons.

In Payne's day travelling was difficult and slow, hence comparatively few persons went far away from home. Mr. Payne himself was one of the exceptions, hence his song.

Then the home had few competitors. Men loved their homes intuitively, sincerely, and deeply. Then practically everybody lived at home. That was a day of "home sickness!" The song was quite true: "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

But the times have changed. Our civilization has grown to a complex composite. Its old-time simplicity is a thing of the past. No new device is long on the market until there are imitations galore! Every successful measure meets with many competitors. The Masonic Lodge long enjoyed an undisturbed monopoly. Today it is surrounded with aggressive rivals. In a small city in the West there were counted 72 lodges, all active! "Clubs" are everywhere, and on the increase, so that it is now hard to find suitable names for the new ones!

So, it has come about that the many modern orders, organizations and activities of a town now claim sufficient attention and time to render them formidable competitors of the home. In a small town of 3,000 it was recently discovered that nearly all the leading women were so busy with the work of one organization or another that they could not be found at home! There were several literary clubs, two Parent-Teacher Associations, a flourishing business and professional women's club, besides the "Eastern Star," and many Church organizations making demands upon the women.

Perhaps the most dangerous home rival is the club for men. Business men have long been dividing their time between their homes and their clubs. The latter often are models of comfort and convenience, with every conceivable luxury to lure men and hold them away from the home. No longer are these home substitutes satisfied with rented quarters—they are now owning their buildings. Some of the most massive, imposing, splendid buildings are occupied and owned by business men's clubs. The Yale Club in New York City is in the class with "sky-scrapers," the investment of 7,000 members. The business men's club in Fort Worth, Texas, is equally huge and "homey," and cost its many hundreds of members well up into the millions. Its appointments and furnishings are luxurious. Every possible comfort is supplied. In these clubs men are lounging at all hours. Practically all the worthwhile papers, magazines, and periodicals generally, are in the reading rooms. There are agreeable conversations, exciting games, music, radio, shower baths, smoking,—every possible pleasing feature available, calculated to make one forget he is not at home! In such sumptuous clubs many hard-worked men find far better provisions for their rest of body and peace of mind than they would find in their own homes! Perhaps herein lurks the real danger of the modern club for men. While they are wonderful relaxation stations, charming spots socially, fine feeding places for hungry bodies, and in very many respects offer superb opportunities for business men, one wonders how far they go in weaning unmarried men off from home-founding, and to what extent they unprepare a married man for appreciating and enjoying his own home. Here is a case which seems to offer a "hominess" menacing to the family home.

Clubs, however, are not the only substitutes for "home, sweet home." The modern hotel would give its guests all possible "hominess," and thus hold them the longer.

The modern apartment house is fitted out with "built-in" this, and "built-in" that, frigidaire, radio wiring, disappearing beds, tables, etc., and all compactly put together, so as to save steps, minister to the ease and comfort of the housewife, and in the end rivet the renter. Even the garage is in its place, presupposing that it will be needed. Indeed, everything is done to make the place so attractive that the occupant will be content to live in a "borrowed house." There is one feature which is seldom thought of in its true light, and that is the announcement so generally flaunted in the faces of would-be renters: "No children allowed." Who can tell how far this restriction has worked to withhold normal offspring, rather than to lead newly weds into whatever sacrifice needful to own their homes and rear children rather than the usually permitted poodle pup.

The theatre, too, is offering its comforts of cushioned, soft seats, its whirling, cooling fans, its home scenes, its soothing, nerve-easing music, its lower rates—anything and everything to draw people out of their homes and into a more comfortable place to spend the evening. Time was when one felt content to entertain one's guests in the home of which John Howard Payne sang so sweetly. But today you visit a city and at once your host, or your hostess, begins to plan for your attendance on the most popular theatre. Is it because we are no longer gifted in the ancient art of agreeable fireside conversation? Is it because we do not want any interruption in our chain of shows-seeing? Is it due to the general impression that everybody expects to be so entertained? Account for it as we may, it is true that the theatre has become one of the home's most successful rivals. The danger is that our youths are going to grow up building character out of a flimsier fibre than is required to meet the demands of an ever increasing exaction that calls from business bent on success at any price. The theatre ideals are far from those

"YE ARE HIS WORKMANSHIP."

Rev. C. V. Fairbairn.

"And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."—1 Thess. 5:23.

THE prayer of Paul for the Thessalonians is identical in purpose with that of Jesus for his disciples: "Sanctify them through thy truth."—John 17:17. The subjects of this prayer were regenerated men. This is very evident from 1 Thessalonians 1. Yet for these good, well-saved, not-of-the-world believers the great apostle prays that they may be sanctified wholly throughout spirit and soul and body.

HOW ARE THEY TO EXPERIENCE THIS GREAT BLESSING?

Says one: "The blood cleanses me." Another says: "The Holy Spirit sanctified me." A third says: "Well, I was sanctified by faith." And then, provided they enjoy theory only, these three brethren cold-shoulder each other, and the world sees a neutralizing comment upon Jesus' prayer: "Sanctify them . . . that they all may be one in us; that the world may know that thou hast sent me."

From what is proposed, we can see that sanctification is difficult of accomplishment. So deeply rooted is the carnal mind in the very sub-soil of the human heart that man knows himself helpless. All systems of theology recognize the impotence of mere man-methods. An act of will cannot cleanse the heart: neither will prayer, Bible study, faithful performance of duty, undergoing any ceremony, or aught that man can do for himself, purify his naturally corrupt heart.

It takes supernatural power to do this. Since it is contrary to Satan's workings, it must be accomplished by power supernatural and divine, resident only in God himself. It is he who undertakes to do this which otherwise is utterly impossible. "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly." Or, to give it the intensive force of the Greek: "May the God of peace himself make you holy." Thank God, our sanctification is not left to mere human effort, but it is in the hands of the great I AM who had but to speak, and earth, air, planets and satellites stood forth from nothing and had a being.

"We are His workmanship."—Eph. 2:10. Such a difficult work can only be wrought by Almighty God; but in the accomplishing thereof he works through several agencies. We will notice these.

(1). Christ Jesus, the Sacrificial Agent.—"We are sanctified through the offering of the body of Christ once for all."—Heb. 10:10. "For their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth."—Jesus.—John 17:17.

(2) The Blood of Christ—(Heb. 13:12; 1 John 1:7). This is the purchasing or meritorious agent. The shedding of his blood satisfied divine justice and enables God to be just and still justify the ungodly. Without the precious, atoning blood no cleansing is possible.

(3) The Word of God—(Psa. 119:130; John 17:17; 1 John 1:7). This is the declaring or revealing agent. His word enters; the light shines; we see our uncleanness: but, thank God! we also see the remedy provided, the possibility of cure. By walking according to the Word, i. e., "in the light," we take the King's highway of holiness and cleansing is guaranteed. Victory is possible on no other line.

(4) The Believer's Intelligence. This is the perceiving agent. Light is perceived by the eye. The ear responds to sound-waves. The God-given intellect in man is the faculty which perceives the sanctifying truth. God excuses the fool and idiot and covers such cases, in great mercy, with the sheltering blood. So it is with infants and all irresponsible. But to the intelligent man, God cries, "Come and let us reason together;" and again, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters," etc.—Isa. 55:1-3. The whole plea is addressed to beings able to perceive, reason, and consider.

(5) The Believer's Will.—This is the consenting and determining agent. "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice . . . unto God." Present ye—Man's will must act. "This is the will of God, even your sanctification;" but our will must co-operate with the Divine Will. Hence Jesus said to the blind man: "What wilt thou?" His will and our will must labor together to produce the one, desired effect.

(6) The Believer's Faith—(Heb. 11:6; Mark 11:24; Acts 15:9; 26:18). This is the receiving or appropriating agent. Says Jesus: "Whosoever things ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them." Says Mr. John Fletcher: "I have called faith apprehending a sanctifying baptism or outpouring of the Spirit."—(Address to Imperfect Believers). Without faith cleansing is utterly impossible. Faith must precede both the cleansing and the witness of the Holy Spirit to the cleansing. There must be a faith-reception before there is an experimental-reception or there will be no experimental-reception at all.

(7) The Blessed Holy Spirit—(Rom. 15:16; Col. 1:11; Eph. 3:14-19; Acts 15:8, 9; Titus 3:5-7; 2 Thess. 2:13; 1 Pet. 1:2). This is the administrative agent or all-in-all potential one. He is the Sole Administrator to men of atonement-purchased benefits. He is Essential Deity. He is the Very God of Peace himself. He is Potential Deity. He is the sole Executive of the God-head at work in the world today. Therefore, we declare the truth, that the great potential agent in sanctification is the Holy Ghost. He illuminates the Word, else it is dark and meaningless. He illuminates my heart and mind, else I will never perceive my privilege revealed in the Word. He strengthens my already consenting will, thereby enabling me to utter consent and abandonment to the whole will of God. He alone can inspire my faith to be both receptive and effective. Even the precious blood availeth naught for me, unless the Holy Spirit applies its healing benefits to my heart. And so, the Holy Spirit, Only Executive, Sole Administrator, Potential God, Essential Deity, Very God, illuminates the Word, enlightens my mind, aids my will, inspires my faith, and deep within works that holiness which has been purchased for me with the blood of Jesus, and "without which no man shall see the Lord."

Hence, in 1 Peter 1:2, we read: "Elect . . . through sanctification of the Spirit:" the capital "S" signifying not sanctification of the believer's spirit, as in 1 Thess. 5:23, but sanctification by the Holy Spirit. Again, in 2 Thess. 2:13 we find: "God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth." Note the similarity of the wording here to Eph. 1:4: "God hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy, and without blame before him in love." Once more, we read in 1 Cor. 6:11, that "ye are sanctified by the Spirit of our God;" and in Rom. 15:16, find the words: "being sanctified by the Holy Ghost."

Says that saint of God, Mr. John Fletcher of Madeley, to whom we have referred hitherto: "If our hearts are purified by faith, as the Scripture expressly testifies; if the faith which peculiarly purifies the heart of Christians is a faith in the promise of the Father, which promise was made by the Son, and directly points at a peculiar effusion of the Holy Spirit, the Purifier of spirits; if we may believe in a moment; and if God may in a moment seal our sanctifying faith by sending us a fulness of his sanctifying Spirit; if this, I say, is the case, does it not follow, that to deny the possibility of the instantaneous destruction of sin, is to deny that we can make an instantaneous act of faith in the sanctifying promise of the Father, and in the all-cleansing blood of the Son, and that God can seal that act by the instantaneous operation of His Spirit."

Just read that rich paragraph again, and see how thoroughly the early Methodists,—for Fletcher, while an Episcopalian, was certainly one of those blessed, holy men called Methodists,—believed in the full operation of all the agents, co-operating with the Holy Ghost, when he came in mighty Pentecostal effusion upon the soul, in order to the instantaneous destruction of sin and the entire sanctification of the believer.

Asbury College and the School Year 1929-30.

BY PRESIDENT L. R. AKERS.

Vacation days are coming swiftly to an end and soon we shall be beginning another school year at Asbury College. Soon a host of young people from Maine to Florida and from Virginia to California, and even from across the seas, will be pouring into Wilmore by train, bus and private automobile.

A material increase in enrollment is anticipated and to young people who plan to come to Asbury we would urge the importance of sending in the entrance application and the room reservation fee of $10.00 as early as possible so that a room may be assured. (The room reservation fee will be refunded, if you should not be able to enter, provided notice is given before September 1st.)

As we stand upon the threshold of the year 1929-30, we pledge this school anew to stand unflinchingly for the fundamentals of our holy Christianity, for the glorious doctrines of Methodism, and especially for the great truth of a full and free redemption for all men from all sin. Asbury College purposes to keep the fires of evangelism burning upon her altars and to send out into the harvest field of the Master splendidly trained leadership which will be able to speak mightily for God and the promotion of His Kingdom among men.

May the coming year be the happiest and best year in the life of every young man and woman who plans to go away to college. To those of you who plan to come to Asbury, we extend a cordial welcome and shall look forward eagerly to greeting you September 18.

The Source of Goodness

And Gladness.

REV. A. H. M. ZAHNISER.

THE fourth Psalm and the sixth and seventh verses contain a question, and a statement that should be of interest to us all. The passage reads, "There be many that say, Who will show us any good? Lord, lift Thou up the light of Thy countenance upon us. Thou hast put gladness in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and wine increased."

This query and answer fairly represent two classes of people that have long lived side by side in the world. The one class inquiring, and many times with a doubtful mind, the source of good. The other having found in God the true source of satisfaction, they are convinced that real goodness and lasting gladness can be found nowhere else. Those who have gotten acquainted with God in Jesus Christ need search no further, but can testify, "All my springs are in thee." Ps. 87:7. All such recognize God's favor and blessing as being necessary to properly appreciate and enjoy both temporal and spiritual good. Hence they pray, "Lord, lift up the light of thy countenance upon us." They also estimate spiritual graces and attainments at a much higher value than material things. They believe that the consciousness of the presence and approval of God is worth more than all that money can buy. Even broad acres yielding rich returns in bountiful harvests are not worthy to be compared to the joys that come from right relation and holy communion with God. "Thou hast put gladness in my heart, more than in the time that their corn and wine increased."

All our blessings, whether personal or general, should evoke heartfelt thanks to God. He is the Source of all goodness and gladness. But what is all else, without salvation? And the blessings of salvation are of a personal character. The secret things belong unto the Lord. And the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him. "Eye hath not seen, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit; for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him. Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God. Now we have received not the spirit of the world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God, which things also we speak, not in words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teaches; comparing spiritual things with spiritual. But the natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned. But he that is spiritual judgeth all things, yet he himself is judged of no man. For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he might instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ." (1 Cor. 2:9-16.) Jesus says, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." (Rev. 2:17).

"Rivers to the ocean run,
Nor stay in all their course;
Fire, ascending, seeks the sun;
Both speed them to their source;
So a soul that's born of God,
Pants to view his glorious face;
Upward tends to his abode,
To rest in his embrace."

that formerly were formulated in the best homes. The home teaching was, and ever should be, that great emergencies are to be met with manly courage, whereas the theatre is far too often furnishing object-lessons of cowardly refuge in dissipation, suicide, or some other tragedy. By the multiplied thousands our families, from father to the little child, are emptying the home at night, and on Sunday afternoons, to fill the theatres. Who will say that the substitution is going to uplift and ennoble home life, or produce a stronger, wiser, better generation.

Even the on-rushing palaces a-wheel strive to make us forget that we are spinning through space at the clip-off of 60 miles per, rather than comfortably seated at home in the old town. You may occupy a cushioned, revolving chair, you may read, nap, rest, eat, engage in pleasing conversation, enjoy a shower bath, get shaved, have your usual manicuring, etc., etc.

Now comes the hospitals, not alone with their "homey" atmosphere which is so comforting, and helpful to patients, but at the same time robbing us of one of the sweetest of all our home sentiments. In the future there will be few who can pass some old home and say with a thrill, "That is the old home in which I was born." It is hard to awaken any sentiment over being born in a hospital. Already the age is fast losing its sentimental side. Great and good as our hospitals are, they are fast becoming substitutes for our homes in moments of sickness. The tender touches of dear ones are now displaced by the technical skill of professional nurses. As important, even imperative, as the modern hospital may be, nevertheless it, too, is aiding in the weaning away of families from home-life.

With all this strenuous and persistent effort towards doing away with the old-fashioned home-life, and building up a new life apart from the past, the question will force itself upon us: After all, what is the heart of the home? What is that strange, sweet, something which sets a real home off in a class to itself, and keeps it from having any worthwhile imitators, or competitors? This question deserves careful answer; perhaps right here we may be able to discover the safety valve for home-life, on the wane today.

There are three things which enter into the home to make it separate and apart, a thing distinct and differentiated.

First, the sacredness of privacy. In forming a true home two lives yield themselves, the one to the other. The two are merged, strangely enough, into one life, if well mated. They are alone. They live apart from all other beings. Into their sacred realm not even parents may enter. They are shut in, the whole world is shut out. They are secluded, shielded, insulated, in their wedded oneness. In the intimacy of married life each being is bared to the other as in no other relationship of life. This is a matter too sacred and too solemn for house-top parading. Where two lives blend into one the curtains should drop, and utmost privacy should protect.

Second, there is in any genuine home the element of personality, essentially prominent. A home is not a house, and a house is not a home. Two persons unite to make a home. Money in the bank cannot make a home. Things in a house do not make a home. Two lives must be linked in lovely harmony before there is a real home. Then, "be it ever so humble, there is no place like home." In any analysis of the true home, personality must play an essential, prominent part.

And what makes personality essential to a real home? What is the basal element in this person which makes him or her suited for a home partnership? It can be just one thing, an old-fashioned, tame, "homely" something, which, for lack of a better name, we call LOVE! Like electricity, no one ever saw it; no one can define it; no one can control it; and yet like electricity, it is a fundamental and tremendous power. Two persons in one home where this strange, subtle something is lacking, turn that home into a little hades! Home-life intimacy is such that it is utterly unbearable where love does not "cover a multitude of faults." On the other hand, two persons in a home the atmosphere of which is pure, sweet, holy love, turn that home into a miniature heaven!

Where love is, confidence is established; and where confidence is, peace reigns; and where peace is, contentment dwells; and where contentment is, the home is an unqualified success—however poor, however obscure, however humble the place called home.

In the home of love there is a beautiful interdependency. The one partner supplies the lack of the other. The one is ever incomplete without the other. This is descriptive of the true home in the highest sense.

There is no sweeter spot on earth than a harmonious home. Its atmosphere is heavenly. You feel it at once on entering the threshold. Such homes do not ask you to "make yourself at home." You are made to feel at home without any effort on your part. When the home is not up to standard; when it is weak and lame, and fails to make you feel perfectly "at home," you cannot atone for the home lack by anything you may be able to do. Should you try to act in such a home just as you would in your own home, you would be a misfit, and your efforts a misfortune.

True homes are made from within, never from without. The gilded face of a clock cannot make the "movements" keep time. A new mainspring is needed. Even so: in the average American home a new mainspring of LOVE is the need. Let us get back to the heart of the home and get the "movement" repaired. With a new mainspring of affection there will be smooth and harmonious turning of all the home wheels, and the hands will go around in perfect order.

If we enquire for the law, or the laws, for establishing a true home, rather than a false one, the answer is not far away, nor hard to find. Some very simple and fundamental rules may be given to young people who when followed will yield a happy home-life every time.

First, Go slow. Home-life relationship is so very sacred, so deeply important, that no wise person will dare to dash into matrimony. Much time is required for trying each other out. For learning each the other. For adaptation, one to the other.

Second, analyze carefully, first, yourself, second, your prospective partner. Study temperament. Are you suited? Will you be equally yoked together? Do you love blindly,

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE INVESTIGATION.

ON Monday morning following Huston's statement at the big tent, a number of prominent citizens of Goodwill met in the office of a leading lawyer, and a committee was organized consisting of several physicians, a couple of prominent lawyers, a banker and Huston, to make an investigation of the coffin and its contents, and, if possible, unravel the strange mystery connected with its coming to the City of Goodwill.

Some feared that the opening of the coffin might bring on a contagion of smallpox, others insisted that the inscription upon the box containing the coffin was put there to prevent an investigation. Finally, an undertaker was employed to open the grave and take up the box containing the coffin. A powerful X-ray was secured, several pictures were made, and the fact was demonstrated beyond doubt that the coffin contained a human body.

Huston then wrote, under the advisement of the committee, to his hospital to find out what mistake could have been made. The correspondence was kept up for some days; finally, a physician came from New York to Goodwill, attended by a young man, the son of a gentleman by the name of John Henry. He sought out the Rev. John Henry Huston, who brought him and the young man attending him, before the above mentioned committee. The physician had brought with him a leaf from the register of the hospital where Rev. Huston and Mr. John Henry had been placed on the same evening, as mentioned some time ago in this story.

Examining this record it was found that the clerk making the record at that time had made a mistake in placing the names upon the daily register, and because of this fact, John Henry Huston was supposed to have died, and his remains shipped to Goodwill, when, in fact, Mr. John Henry had died and his remains shipped to Goodwill. In order to put the matter beyond all question, several men were secured who had been afflicted with smallpox; the grave was opened, the coffin was uncovered and at once, young Mr. Henry recognized his father. This solved the problem of the comedy of errors and gave the newspapers of Goodwill a most interesting series of articles which were copied, to some extent, throughout the country.

There was one matter to be cleared up: Mr. Henry's clothing had been burned at the time of his death, but when he entered the hospital his bill folding purse had been disinfected with its contents and locked up in a safe. After his death, on examination, it was found to contain $7,500 in cash. This was in addition, or apart from, money Mr. Henry had on his person which had been used to defray his expenses at the hospital, purchase his casket and send his remains to the City of Goodwill.

The physician produced a letter which he had written to Rev. Judas Iskabod, pastor of the People's Church at Goodwill, enclosing a check for said $7,500. He also produced a letter from Rev. Iskabod in which he most profusely thanked him for the kindly care he had given to the old ex-pastor of said church, and for shipping the remains, and for the check which money he promised should be faithfully turned over to the proper heirs. This letter had not been written by a secretary, but had been written with pen and ink by Mr. Iskabod and contained his personal signature.

The question had been settled with reference to the identity of the contents of the mysterious coffin, now the question was raised, what had become of the $7,500? On investigation, it was found that on a certain day, harmonizing with the date on the letter, Mr. Iskabod had deposited this identical sum of money in one of the city banks, and the physician produced the check with Iskabod's signature.

One of the interesting facts about this feature of the story was that no one had heard a word from Mr. Iskabod about this interesting bit of pocket change. By examining into the records of a certain real estate agency, it was found that a few days later he had bought quite a nice property for the sum of $8,000, and had paid in cash $6,000, with a note for the remainder to be cancelled in twelve months. It was also found that about the same date, he had bought a handsome automobile, paying $1,000 cash. These circumstances, taken altogether, made a rather ugly case for the brilliant young minister of the new age, who was no doubt, quite aggressive.

Young Mr. Henry arranged at once to ship the remains of his father back to their native state, but before leaving, with an attorney, and several men of the committee mentioned, he visited Mr. Iskabod who had resigned his pastorate of the People's Church, and demanded that he should at once pay him the $7,500 of his father's money, or be arrested and stand his trial for theft of the same. This was no ghost story. Mr. Iskabod, assisted by one of his mediums, and a strong supporter of his views with reference to communication with the dead, a wealthy widow, went to the bank, made a note for the money, with the addition of the interest for the few months he had had it in possession, and turned it over to Mr. Henry, the son of the deceased. All of this transaction made a most interesting front page article for the morning paper, with large headlines.

A few days later, it was rumored about town that Mr. Iskabod's health was in such condition that, for the present, he had given up the ministry and was going to the far west to recuperate, and take a much needed rest. We have not been able to follow him up, but the strong probabilities are, he has entirely given up his interest in spiritism and association with those who "peep and mutter." No doubt, his health fully restored, he might make a very acceptable and successful pastor in some suburban church of wealthy and select people who, in this new age, have discovered that the Bible is fiction, that there is no such thing as an atonement for sin; in fact, no such thing as sin, but certain weaknesses and animal-like proclivities that have not been outgrown in our evolution up toward the perfect human.

The president of the university at Goodwill, with a large body of his professors, was asked to resign, promptly met with the request and faded out of the community. Ouija boards were burned by the score, and quite a bit of paraphernalia of various mediums was destroyed. A number of tables, which had been walking about in several homes of the city, got a long rest for their weary legs. The women who had sold tickets for the lectures for Sir Gulliver Dodge and Judas Iskabod, were so tormented with dunnings for the money they had secured, and threats of suit for damages, that all of them who could do so, got away for the various summer resorts as far from Goodwill as possible.

The vagaries of destructive criticism got a black eye; the modernistic boasts of the new age, with its broadminded intelligence, which had been talked so much and so eloquently, died down. The people of Goodwill realized that they had been living and acting some hundreds of years behind the times; that they had been believing all sorts of ghost stories and paying out their good money to shysters who knew nothing of any sort of communication with the dead, but were under the delusion and power of the Devil.

Huston's meeting went forward with great power. The board, which had dismissed him, resigned. He selected from those powerfully saved under his ministry, a company of men, good and true, and built up a great official body to whom the big church plant was committed for safe keeping and faithful administration of a pure gospel. A new life came into them, and for a number of years he was a faithful and trustworthy pastor of one of the largest, most intelligent, consecrated and liberal congregations, not only in that city, but in the state. He was able to secure a strong, true, young man, highly educated, powerfully converted, wholly sanctified, clear and efficient in the interpretation of the Holy Scriptures in harmony with the Wesleyan teaching, as his assistant pastor, and to take his place when he should no longer be able to stand in the pulpit on Sunday morning and deliver his mighty messages of salvation full and free for all men from all sin, through the atoning merit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

THE END

or with eyes wide open to the other's faults? Blind love is foolish love. The highest love is in the face of seen and admitted faults.

Third, be sensible (after marriage). Give and take. Bear and forbear. Make it a fifty-fifty proposition. Put yourself in your partner's place. Live the "golden rule" daily at any cost. If you find faults in your partner, so may your partner find faults in you. You both are but human. Angels never marry mortals! Nor should mortals expect to marry angels. Mortal men wed mortal women. A fellow feeling should make each most tolerant. Let reason season love. Call commonsense to sit on the home throne. Build your home-life on RIGHT. Get your idea of right from the Book of books.

Finally, if "there's no place like home," neither are there any enemies like enemies of the home. Attention is called to some of these in closing.

The increasing carelessness of parents permits young people to associate and mate without proper parental oversight. Age and experience should ever be offered to youth for their guidance.

The hourly growing familiarity of the opposite sexes cannot but tend more and more to disgust youth, and discourage marriage. "Familiarity breeds contempt," is no where more applicable than in the case of young people taking liberties with each other.

The alarming rate at which the divorce evil is growing and spreading threatens the home as its worst, most dangerous menace. "If others cannot live together happily, why should I assume that I shall be an exception?" Thus youth reasons, and well.

The lowered morals among young women, perhaps the result of loose examples set by their elders, must inevitably turn many men away from the marriage altar, first because there is less need to wed, and second, because there is more fear to do so!

Finally, the growing disposition seen in high social circles to make marriage only an experiment, called "contract marriages," "affinity marriages," etc., etc., cannot but react on the minds of marriageable men and women, and indirectly harm the home-life of the nation. The clear tendency is towards tabooing marriage. Thus it is that one wonders if the strange prediction of an ancient preacher (Isaiah 4:1) is now about to be fulfilled! We know that a part of it is, for we see it with our own eyes day by day—is the other part about to come true?

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

TEFT, INDIANA.

I have just closed a twelve-days' tent meeting at Teft. Considering opposition, the conditions and length of time, I had a very good meeting. During the twelve days there were over thirty saved and sanctified.

Although I have had better meetings in quantity, I don't think that I ever conducted a better meeting in quality. The work was deep and I feel permanent.

There are several young men called to preach in this community, as a result of the tent meetings, who are looking forward to get their preparation in Asbury College. Three of these young men are making desperate efforts to enter Asbury this fall.

To the Lord be all the glory for what's accomplished and praise be unto his name for the blood that can cleanse a heart from all sin and keep it for the Master's use.

MRS. E. STANLEY JONES' LETTER.

I am thinking of you individually although these duplicate letters may not seem to so indicate. How I do love your splendid letters! Only the necessity of saving time and strength for the work to which I am called in India keeps me from writing each of you with my own hand.

Our hot weather has begun and I am sitting under a punkah—a sort of fan made by nailing a long strip of Chinese matting to a pole suspended by ropes from the ceiling. A rope is attached and this goes through a hole in the wall and is pulled by a man sitting on the verandah outside. Two old Christians, who are blind and very happy to be able to be self supporting in this way, are pulling the punkah for me. They are always happy when the hot season comes and they need not be objects of charity.

My garden is nearly all dead. The hot winds are as fatal as frost. Just at the time when one craves most a little fresh green food we cannot get even a lettuce leaf.

Three days more and Mr. Jones lands in Bombay! It has been a long separation and this spring we have been like children—counting the days to May 4th. After school closes, May 10th, we will pack up all the work we can carry with us and flee to the mountains. I will send home all the boys who have parents or friends who will or can keep them. The matron and a teacher will stay here to look after the rest. They will have various kinds of industrial work to keep them out of mischief. Often the boys who have homes do not want to go to them because of the dirt and poor food and crowded condition; but it is good for the boys and for their parents, too. I try to make them see that they are each one, little missionaries and it is their duty to pass on to others the things they have been taught in school.

As soon as we get to the mountains our Eunice will come home and attend school as a day pupil while we are there. So the summer is a joyful time for her.

I had a rather startling experience recently. I was driving into Lucknow to attend the Board of Governor's Meeting of our Isabella Thoburn College. I started before daybreak, as the first meeting was at 7 A. M., and I had to go 52 miles. I was driving a bit fast and looking straight ahead when suddenly from the dark jungle at the side of the road, a fine stag sprang in front of the car. His antlers crashed against the radiator and he fell back with his neck and front legs broken. I felt so badly for I love these soft-eyed, dainty creatures in spite of the harm they do to the fields. On the way home I passed 14 camels, 3 elephants, innumerable monkeys and goats and 151 ox-carts. It is quite a feat to pass that many oxen and get home with one's temper intact!

The ox driver seldom can make up his mind to leave the center of the road until you are vigorously tooting at the back of his cart and then he and the oxen are seldom of the same mind as to which way to turn. Often when there is a long line of carts, some of them will turn to the left and some to the right and block the road completely.

Last week I attended the wedding of a Mohammedan friend. For a week before the ceremony she sat absolutely quiet in an empty room. Her food was placed before her and she spoke to no one. This was to subdue her spirit and teach her quietness and self-control. The ceremonies lasted three days. When they were over the husband was escorted to the room where the bride sat with her relatives. They passed over and left them alone. Then he lifted the heavy gold embroidered garment that covered her and for the first time looked upon her face. Fortunately this time both were good to look upon and there is every reason why they should be happy. But it is not always so.

I had an interesting caller the other day. I was in the school house and looked up to see a Hindu priest in a long saffron robe looking at a picture of "Christ in the Temple" that hangs on our wall.

When I went to him he said, "I was passing and thought I would look in." After talking with him a bit he said, "I met your husband one time and he said to me, 'Give yourself absolutely to Christ, keep nothing back and see what happens.' For two years I have been trying to get courage to do this thing. It is not a light thing to belong to Christ."

We talked a while and he went away sadly, saying, "I need courage, I need courage."

I have left this letter twice to chase monkeys.

Because they are sacred to the Hindus no one dares kill them and they have multiplied so fast in this station that they are a terrible pest. Food which should go to save starving children, goes instead to keep these great, thieving creatures alive. The Hindu seems to consider human life cheap, compared with his sacred cow or monkey or alligator or cobra. And even though an animal is not among those especially considered sacred, it must not be destroyed for who knows whose soul may not have passed into even the pestiferous crowd!

And now, dear friends, I must close. Do not feel that you must answer. You are busy, too, and we would not put extra burdens upon you. We will keep your names on our mailing list and if you will put up a little prayer for us and the work committed to us when the letters come, we will be well repaid.

Yours in Happy Service,

Mabel L. Jones.

CHOCHIWON, KOREA.

Bro. Chun and Sr. Kim are very happy to report that God is wonderfully blessing the church, and that many souls are seeking and finding the Lord. The Christians are hungering after deeper spiritual things and are pressing forward. This church has undergone many hardships in the past but now God is giving victory and there are blessed prospects ahead. Some of the Christians are pressing on into holiness and some are experiencing the healing power of God. The attendance is increasing—often there are as many as seventy present and on Sunday the 24th there were one hundred and thirty present including children. The small building was filled to overflowing and people had to stand on the outside. It seemed that this displeased the devil for in just a few days word was received that the building which they were renting for a church had been sold and that they must give it up. There is nothing in sight yet, but the workers are praying and believing that God will give them a better place.

One day the workers received word that one of the new seekers had been taken violently sick so they hurried to her home. She is a young woman, about twenty-five years of age who had begun to seek the Lord about a month before. Bro. Chun and Sr. Kim found her in a bad condition—very pale and her hands and feet cold. She could not open her eyes or speak. Sr. Kim was afraid she would not live through the night if God did not undertake for her. For two hours the workers held on in prayer and God wonderfully answered. She was healed and also renewed in spirit. Her husband, an unbeliever, was greatly touched by this and decided to give his heart to the Lord also. Praise God!

A Mr. Li is one who sought the Lord this month. He began to seek the Lord about a month ago through the influence of his wife so decided to attend the conference in Seoul, and at that time he was truly born again. Bro. Chun is also very happy because his wife was saved this month. Four years ago she decided to become a Christian but it was merely a mental decision and there was no change in her heart. On the 18th of this month through the work of the Holy Spirit she repented of all her sins and was saved. She confessed that she had been disobedient to parents, that at one time she had wanted to kill herself, and that she had taken a yen from her parents before she left home. At once she sent a letter to her parents telling them of what she had done and enclosing the yen. She has found the Lord and is now light and happy. Praise the Lord!

One night Bro. Chun had a cottage prayer meeting in his home and invited anyone who wanted to come, to come. One who came was a man who had once been a member of another church but he understood nothing about real salvation. Bro. Chun's talk that night touched his heart and caused him to truly seek the Lord. He gave up his drinking and smoking at once, is going on with the Lord and has promised to give one yen and fifty sen each month to the support of the work.

There are three itinerant points at which Bro. Chun would like to open up branch churches. In a village about a mile away one brother began to preach diligently to his relatives and several have sought the Lord. One of his cousins destroyed all his idols and firmly decided to become a Christian. He is now coming to the meetings and brings his mother and children with him. He has also preached to his neighbors so that several people from this place now are coming to the meetings. In another, more distant village, Bro. Chang one of the earnest Christians lives. He brings several young men from this village to the church with him, and they are wanting a meeting place in that village also. In still another village a young woman who is a public school teacher and her mother are very zealous. They are working for the Lord there also. Please pray with us that it may soon be possible to open up branch churches in these places.

An old woman and her daughter attended the meetings faithfully from a distance of about three miles or more. Often the roads were very bad but they did not mind this and came as long as the old woman could possibly walk that far. After that she prayed diligently in her home and the daughter came alone. One day recently the daughter came to Sr. Kim and told her that her mother was very sick so Sr. Kim went at once to the home. She found her in a very sick and weak condition, looking as if she were ripening for heaven. Sr. Kim asked her about her spiritual condition and asked if she was ready to go to heaven. She looked into Sr. Kim's face with peace and assurance and said, "Yes, there is no doubt in my heart. I shall go to meet my Lord." Her face fairly shone with the glory of God. The next day she went home and the neighbors were greatly influenced by her peaceful death.

Sr. Kim visited more than a hundred homes during the month and dealt with many unbelievers personally. God gave her 37 seekers. Praise his Name! She is praying for a thousand souls during the year. Praise God for such a goal! She also distributed 300 tracts this month and is praying that many who read these may be saved.

BROTHER WILLEY'S LETTER.

In company with three other missionaries I left Huanuco August 22nd, riding two leagues in a machine to the rancho of a wealthy friend. By noon we were mounted and cantering along the trail in a cloud of dust, four missionaries and an arico with a pack animal. We rode all that afternoon passing Indians laden with earthen ware from the villages to which we were bound. Later in the afternoon it began to grow cooler until by nightfall it had become real cold. At about seven-thirty we stopped at an old abandoned Indian hut constructed of mud and grass. Unpacking our beasts we prepared a supper composed of boiled rice and tea. After eating a nice warm dish of rice we turned in clothes and all to dream pleasant dreams.

The next morning when we arose the ground was covered with frost and ice but the Indians did not seem to mind the cold as they ran around in their bare feet and parts of their anatomy exposed. The second day we rode on without mishap, surrounded by beautiful country. That night we again slept in an Indian hut high up in the hills, being compelled to force our horses up a steep incline in the darkness. One Indian turned a large room over to us, which, on investigation proved to be the habitation of an old hen and her chicks and, some guinea pigs and rats, but it was a welcomed place that evening. The following morning we were on our way traveling over a new trail which was under construction. We were on our way to La Union, the center of the Inca land. We passed through one especially beautiful and fertile valley where twelve teams of oxen were plowing in a large field. I could not resist galloping over to stop the whole procession lining them up in order like so many cavalry mounts. The Indians were greatly pleased to have their pictures taken, doubtless it was their first.

We lunched at a little village called Quivilla then pressed on. Mr. Simmonds the leader of the party and I decided that we wanted a bath in the headwaters of the Amazon so we stripped and had a plunge. I can assure you that the waters streaming down from the Andes are not tepid. After our bath we lit out on a gallop in order to catch up with the party. From the place of our bath we began to ascend, travelling up a steep mountain in the form of a loop, the horses slipping and sliding on the rock. Three thousand feet below us on a steep incline lay the valley of the Marantana a river meandering like a great ribbon. Frankly, I did not feel like riding so I hugged the rock wall, walked and perspired. We reached the pueblo of Yata at seven-thirty that evening. On the way up I had a long talk with an Inca Indian who had obtained a Bible from the Huanuco Mission. He said he believed in it and was reading it. Thus, many days journey from the main station the news has spread being carried by Indians laden with products of the mountains or driving their sheep down the steep passes.

The following day we made an impression on the officials in Yata on visiting a new water works under construction. We found they were using a very weak mixture of cement in a very important part of the construction. Mr. Clark, being an engineer, was able to advise them in the matter. That evening a young chap, a liberal, turned a fine large room over to us and did everything in his power to make the meeting a success.

On arriving at the place of meeting we found the room packed, giving us just room for our lantern and slides. We were honored with the presence of all the officials of the town except the Cura (priest). Even the drunks were for us. One old fellow kept crying "Baje con los curas" (down with the priests). "Vivar las evangelistas." We found all through the valley the young men especially very liberal and want a change. They see the error of the hierarchy of Rome. The young chap who gave us the room informed me that if we would come to Yata he would give us the use of the room. He also expressed the wish that he might sell Bibles in the town. That evening all the Bibles we had with us were sold and the people begged for more; even the captain and governor wanted the Word of God. O! how the doors are swinging in a land wide open.

grace, suffering, endurance, establishing and going on. How marvelous is this comprehensive truth of holiness, a preparation for endless eternity in a sinless heaven with God, the angels and the saints of all ages!

An angel could not ask for a greater privilege, a higher calling, a more glorious service than to live among men, to go up and down the earth proclaiming a full and free deliverance from sin, a joyful life of peace with God, of fellowship with Jesus Christ, of a heart from sin set free. This gospel of full salvation is indeed "good news."

What a change would come in the churches, in all the evangelical churches, in the homes, in the lives of the people, in this sin-cursed world of ours if, for six months our ministers of the Protestant churches of these United States, with open Bibles, shining faces, and hearts aglow with divine love, should preach to their people the "beauty of holiness," the will of God that we should be saved from all sin; the gift of God, the awful agonies of the cross that we might be saved from sin—what a stir it would create! Such preaching! How the people would talk about it, read their Bibles, pray, think, reform their lives, inquire of their preacher, get together to discuss holiness and wait upon the Lord in prayer. There is not a doubt about it.

Oh, my brethren, men of God up in the pulpit, do not be afraid to speak to the people that God, in his Word, requires holiness of heart, that in the gift and crucifixion of Jesus Christ he has provided for holiness, that in the day of judgment he will demand holiness; that we must go on to perfection, or we will go back to apostasy, always proclaiming and pointing to the bleeding Victim of the cross, and urging upon the people that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin.

Personal Note to Herald Readers.

As we move from China where we have had nearly ten months of preaching the gospel and evangelizing, and where we have seen gracious revivals, we feel led to ask the prayers of God's people for our work in India, Egypt and other parts. Pray for us that we might experience power from on high in every meeting; that we might preach the gospel with the Holy Ghost sent down from Heaven and that our ministry may be used to the salvation and sanctification of many souls. Our first engagement in India will be Yeotmal Holiness Convention, October 17-22, then we go next to a camp meeting of the Free Methodists. GEO. W. RIDOUT.

Help Childhood and Youth.

W. R. CHAPMAN, PH.D., D. D.

Text. Proverbs 22:6.—"Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Proverbs 20:11.—"Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right." Matt. 8:16.

SOMETIME ago a gentleman was in a western city; he, with several friends, was standing on the street talking, when three high school boys pushed over a weighing machine and took all the pennies. The gentleman and several others attempted to stop it. This gentleman's friend laughed and said: "Boys will be boys."

The question I want to point hinges on this every day statement, "Boys will be boys." Have any of you ever been guilty of making that remark? I surely hope not. Think my friends of the dangerous implication of such a remark. Think of the teaching carried by that remark. It seems very true to me that the implication is, that what boys do now is of little moment since, to a large number of people, what boys do has nothing to do with their later life when they ought to be worth something to themselves and to others. But this is a great mistake, a very great mistake. What boys do largely enters into their training, and leaves its marks for the future, either good or bad. I tell you most positively such doctrine carried by that remark and other like remarks is most fallacious, and it has caused much negligence on the part of those who are training the boys and girls of today. It leads one away from the correct understanding of the boys and girls.

I am fully persuaded that what boys and girls do now does materially influence their future character, growth, and achievement. I am sure whatever is permitted to grow in the minds of the boys and girls will materially affect them and it will flower and come forth as fruit in the life of that child as a youth tomorrow and either hurt him or her, or greatly benefit him or her as an adult day after tomorrow. So be careful as to your teaching.

A gentleman visited a large prison some time ago; after completing the round of inspection, the warden sat down with him to talk the prison matter over. Pointing to some young men who were crushing rock not far distant, he said to the gentleman: "A few short years ago those young men were ruddy-faced, smiling, happy boys, playing on the streets of your cities and in your countryside. At that time no one, and certainly not the boys themselves, thought they would end up behind the bars. Evil influences came their way. While their homes and the church and the schools were neglecting them because they were difficult to understand, evil men and evil companions, of their own age led them into paths of wrong. See them today. 'Take care of the boys,' the old warden said. 'Take good care of the boys. Your boy may be here tomorrow.'"

I tell you a little good, kind advice, a little help to the boy and girl at the right time; ah, more, a little real understanding of them by the older folks, would go a long way in saving them for future good; but do this while the boy is a boy and while the girl is a girl; in other words, while their minds are plastic, while it can be moulded and directed into the paths that lead the right way; that lead toward the church and not the prison.

Do you want a Christian world tomorrow?

I suppose every one will answer in the affirmative. Well, if you do, how are we to go about securing the thing we want? Do I hear an answer? Well, I doubt if I do, so I will try to answer it. To my mind, there is only one answer to this great and weighty question. If we really want the world tomorrow to be Christian we must begin in the home. We must fit many of the parents to raise children, and then this generation of babies, of childhood, and of youth, must be brought up and trained in the constant love and nurture and admonition of Jesus Christ and our Father God. I can think of no other way. This is the only way. The only way is in the home. The home is the place where such real training must begin. Then it must be followed up in the public school, the private school, the Sunday school, the college, the university, and last, but far from being least, the Church.

The home is the great place. Do you, my hearers want the home to continue as the biding institution of society and all that is good? I am persuaded you do. If you really do, then let us be very sure that we raise the children and youth to believe in the true sacredness of marriage, of parenthood, and of home, and to thoroughly understand what is involved in building and maintaining a real potent Christian home; a home where God is, where God dwells. I believe we can maintain the home. I am sure we can. We can make it increasingly Christian if we will. It all wholly depends on the way we train our little children, and our older boys and girls and the young people.

We believe in the Christian Church. I am persuaded that every one does. You and I believe that the church today holds, and always has held higher and nobler ideals than those which exist in the world surrounding it. Is not this true? I am sure it is. We also believe that the church must live on because it has a divine mission to perform.

I may ask what is that mission? I will answer it briefly. It is the Christianizing of the lives of the children, of the men, and of the women.

Parents should, in teaching their children, center their teaching on the teaching of the Kingdom of God. Jesus did this. It is making them like Christ. Now Jesus, to do this, preached love as the dominating motive and service to God and to man as its ideal expression. In the Kingdom which Jesus preached God was recognized as our Father, and as his Father, and all men are recognized as brothers and all women as sisters. I believe the Christian Church lives to spread and disseminate such a plan of life. I am fully persuaded that it lives to spread this plan of life throughout the whole world. And men and women must see that it is done. How is this to be done? If the Church is to scatter the "good news" as the "glad tidings" of Jesus and his gospel, it must begin in the home. If the coming generation is to hear the "good news," this generation must be trained to do it. The children of today must provide the way. The children of today must hear the "good news" and be led to accept it. If the Church is to live tomorrow it must win the children of today to the support of its plans. The very life of the Church depends on this. There is no other way by which this may be done.

Jesus began by winning the children. He took a child and set him up as the ideal of the Kingdom. He is an ideal. Let us keep him as such. We can, if we will rightly train him. We must remember that Jesus has taught us very plainly that our heavenly Father has made us, every one of us, for himself and for a home in his house. He has taught us that it is the desire of the Father that every child of his shall grow up in his love and care. I tell you that we do not believe that a single child was made to wander away from God's fold and family; and then to be brought back into the fold when it has grown old, and after much riotous living.

I do not believe a child need ever wander away from the fold. I believe he never will if he is rightly trained, taught, and directed. I fully believe this; and I also believe that it is only possible, but the great desire of our Father, that every child should grow up a devout Christian being led to accept Christ in childhood, and never know himself as having been anything but a Christian. I firmly hold this doctrine.

With doctrine in my mind I believe that the Church holds a very clear and definite responsibility to the children. It must carefully look after the children. It cannot do otherwise. The Church must provide means for the careful training of the children. This plan must be systematic. It must look after the little children, the older boys and girls and young people in the abundant life.

Sometimes I think that we have surrendered our boys and girls to organizations outside of the church, and to the world. I feel sure we have suffered them to wander into "the far country," feeling, I suppose, that when they had finished sowing their "wild oats" that, like the prodigal son, they would return. Do they always return? No, I think not. Multitudes of our own boys and girls never return. Some, of course, do return. But on those that return I beg you to note the scars. It is a sad thing to let the boys and girls sow "wild oats," and yet have seemingly fond parents.

Did you ever see parents let their children have their own way? Did you ever see parents threaten their children and never carry out the threat? Did you ever see parents pet their children in the wrong way? Many other questions I could ask, but why?

It is not worth while. You know that these things exist. How can any one, any parent that will honestly look the world in the face, and take careful note of conditions, do such things? I cannot see why they love their children in that way, but they do.

It is certainly the divine birthright of every child born in this world to be trained well and to, at a very tender age, be brought into the Father's earthly house, and there receive special training at the hands of Christians. We have no right, as parents, to suffer one of our little ones to wander away from his love and tender care. They were entrusted us that we might raise them and fit them for God's heavenly Kingdom. Remember you parents are responsible for your children.

Parents, bear this injunction in mind: Give more attention to your children. Direct them, lead them, help them. Remember, fond parents, it all depends and rests with you. Again remember that the only hope of a Christian world tomorrow is in your boys and girls of today. They are in your hands and in your care and protection. All for what? for your careful training. I am sure that you can lift up Jesus before your children that they will be able to see and understand that he is your Saviour; and seeing and understanding this, have you not won the battle? I think so. I feel sure that you Christian parents can make Jesus' way of life real and regnant. It looks to me, from my long experience in handling children, that Christian parents can win the confidence of their own children, and win them in wholehearted service to the Master.

What is the boy? Who is the boy? What is the girl? Who is the girl? They are the persons who will shortly carry on what you have begun. They are the ones who will sit where you are sitting. They are the ones who will finish writing the thing you started, and write the work you failed to write. They are the ones who will finish the work you started. They are the ones that will take your pew in the church, who will take your place in the pulpit, and other places of honor. They will step into your places as statesmen, orators, soldiers, authors, poets, painters, architects, and sculptors.

Did you ever stop to think what you are training these children for? If you have not, then I beg you stop, think, act. But do not act alone. Get God to help you. They are the ones who will move in tomorrow and take over your churches, your schools, your colleges, your universities, your homes, and your affairs of state. Parents may go to Congress and make national policies and agreements today, but they will determine how they shall carry out and enforce them tomorrow.

Parents, it is a fact that you soon pass off of the stage of action. You will soon be called from the arena. The drama which you are so well acting will soon be closed. The curtains will fall on it. But your children at once step in and take your place. Even your reputation and your name, and your fortune are in their hands. They can make all shine with luster of the midday sun, or they can drive it with midnight darkness. It all depends upon the way you have raised and trained them.

May I add a closing remark. The fate of the state, the fate of the nation, the fate of the world, the fate of humanity, the fate of the Christian Church, the fate of Christianity is in their hands. Therefore, is it not well that you should give them some real attention.

I think it is. The burden is upon you parents. Your responsibility is very great. It is a burden indeed. You love your children. I know you do. I have loved one and lost. But it was his gain. Because of that undying love you have for them I appeal to you to give more attention to your children. May God help us raise our children for the Church, and for him, is my closing benediction.

How to Resist Temptation.

E. E. SHELHAMER.

EVERY man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust and enticed."

There are at least four steps in connection with temptation—Attention, Consideration, Gratification, Humiliation.

1. Attention. Here is where the tempter succeeded with Mother Eve. He called her attention to the beautiful and luscious fruit. Having gained this first point he quickly caught on to her natural weakness—loquacity. Had she only kept a closed mind and a closed mouth all would have been well. It is the same with every holy soul today. Such an one cannot be tempted except along natural and legitimate lines. "When the woman saw that the tree was good for food and that it was pleasant to the eyes and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took." It is that first look that makes it possible to think, then forget all former resolution. Job realized this when he said, "I made a covenant with mine eyes: why then should I think?"

Notice Achan's sin! He "saw" the goodly Babylonish garment and shekels of silver, then "coveted," then "took," then "hid," then died in disgrace. No one can fall until he first looks or listens, then lingers, then longs, then lunges. It is simply impossible to be overcome on any line so long as the mind is closed to the thought of yielding and the question is undebatable. Remember this, you are invincible so long as you do not let down the first bar and throw open the subject to debate. But if you dare to do this for a moment the floods will pour in and sweep you off your feet.

2. Consideration. This is the second step. If Satan can get one to ponder then wonder, the battle is likely to be lost. One man said, "If I were tempted along a certain line I do not know what I would do?" This man was defeated already. How unlike Joseph, who no doubt had it settled in his mind beforehand that come what would he could not sin.

He was fortified and as unmovable as Gibraltar, when temptation came. "How can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?"

3. Gratification. Is it not strange how one can go stone blind in a moment in view of present profit or pleasure, rather than wait for joys and comforts more enduring? David "saw" then "inquired" (considered), then like a mad animal broke down the fence and ruthlessly trampled under foot all sense of honor, and righteousness. After he had gotten through with his seeing and sending, then God began sending strife, sedition and sorrow which never ended. Reader, beware!

4. Humiliation. If one could only stop long enough to look around and behold the many shipwrecks, he might take warning. Some of these were once mighty in sailing the high seas and doing commerce for God. But they trifled, ventured too near the rocks and are now out of commission—stranded on the shores of time. Others are dismantled and though pretending to be in service, are like floating derelicts without mast or rudder—more dangerous than old hulks, high and dry on the beach.

Precious reader, remember there are souls now in hell and others on their way there, who at one time roamed on plains of spiritual light grander than you or I ever experienced. To your knees! To your knees!!

Spiritual Clinics?

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

"M. D." following a name tells us that the person believes there is disease, sickness and suffering in the world, and that certain remedies will effect cures. By those letters we know that he has been in a school where the instructors believe the same, and has been carefully trained in the art of diagnosis and prescription. When, in case of illness, he is called in, we know that he will take the situation seriously. He will not slap the patient jovially on the back, tell him how well he is, just get busy helping your well neighbors, join my health club, come to my clinic, etc., and you are all right, a hundred percent good! No! Physicians do not do that!

"D. D." following a name tells us—what? Too often it means that the person does not believe in sin, in the fallen state of man, in the blood atonement, in "repentance unto remission of sins," in the new birth by the Spirit, in sanctification and holiness; that he does not believe in revivals, "mob psychology," in penitential tears, in "the joy of Thy salvation," in testimony to "the power of God unto salvation." Those letters after his name may mean that he has been in a school where the professors do not believe the above things, but that they are the superstitions of grossly ignorant people, and not adapted to the educated people of our scientific age. They believe we are all inherently good, "religious animals," and need only a bit of ethical training. To this "D. D." there is no sin disease in the soul, nor any remedy for it in the atonement. Once a week he has an ethical clinic, where he discourses briefly on some pleasant topic. Join my church, occupy a cushioned pew, listen to the pipe organ and trained choir, and hear my lecture. We are all fine folks, and you are a top-notch!

The twentieth century is not the first one to suffer with this sort of thing. Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and the other prophets saw the same 2500 years ago. Of many of the "prophets" then, God said, "They prophesy lies in My Name! I have not sent them!" Luther and Wesley found the same in their days. Wesley's followers, during a century, were faithful to Christ, to the Bible and to souls, and the continents felt the thrill of a new spiritual life. Conditions in Methodism now, beggar anything in the world's history!

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

I am giving you an interesting letter from one of our cousins who was led to the mission field through the influence of Page 10. We never know what may be done through our page, and I am sure you will enjoy the letter from Miss Bassett.

AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let an old cousin, who used to write to your page several years ago, rejoin your happy circle? I have now been a missionary in far away Egypt for five and a half years, and page ten is largely responsible for my being in Egypt, and for that reason I still find interest in reading page ten. Several years ago I wrote a letter to page ten, in which I told of my call to Africa. The brother of our missionary superintendent read my letter and wrote to me, and soon sent me their monthly missionary paper, telling of the work in Egypt. After a few years of training in Bible Schools at Hutchinson, Kan., and Cincinnati, Ohio, the Lord opened my way to spend two years at Bedford, Indiana, our missionary headquarters, setting type for the missionary paper and getting ready to come to Egypt, to which part of Africa the Lord showed me I should come. So you see I owe much to page ten, as it helped me to reach Egypt.

I will tell you a few things about our work here. We have an orphanage for girls at Alexandria. There are forty-five there now. Two of the larger girls help teach in a day school at Girga, in our part of Egypt, five hundred miles from the coast. We spend two months or more every summer at the sea in our orphanage in sight of the beautiful Mediterranean. It is necessary for us to take this vacation, because it is very hot here in Upper Egypt during the summer. In this part of Egypt we have work in the cities of Hohag and Girga and in several villages. We have two missionaries at the sea and four here, besides those now on furlough. Also five native preachers help very faithfully. I have been training two boys, the sons of one of our preachers, and they will soon be ready to start out in the Lord's work. Even now they visit the villages and preach some, and also take a meeting here sometimes. They are fine boys. I now also help teach in our large day school for girls here. We have about 100 enrolled. Some of the larger girls were brightly saved in our convention held in our tent here in March. We had six conventions this year in the tent and many were seeking and finding God. Also we made various tours of the villages between the conventions. This is a very interesting, yet needy and darkened land. I am happy to have a part in God's work here. Sister Jackson and I call and preach, as well as teach. Our new missionary, Bro. Plants, who came this year, bringing a new Ford car, is a great help in the work. He also resides in Sohag. We have one missionary at Girga. Our doctrine is good old John Wesley Methodism, and we are a faith mission, supported by free-will offerings. My mother sends me the paper. My father, who was a holiness preacher, went to heaven this past October. The Lord comforted my heart when I heard of his death. Please print this letter, even if it is long, and I will try to write again and make it shorter. I would be glad to get letters from any of the girls or women who read this page, and will try to write to all who write to me. Pray for our work here.

Beulah Bassett.
Sohag, Upper Egypt.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please let an old lady join your happy band of cousins. I want to express my pleasure reading the continued story in The Herald. Every chapter gets more interesting. The moral seems to be: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Henry Huston was trained in the fundamental principles of religion. The virgin birth, the crucifixion and resurrection. He had sore trials, and was not appreciated. I have passed that sad route, but am glad to realize "Twas grace that brought me safe thus far, and grace will lead me home." No doubt the whole Herald family prays for Bro. Morrison, but we have to leave it all in our Father's hands. He knows best and will do what is best for all who trust him. I am seventy-seven years old, and have been confined to my room two months and know how to sympathize with the afflicted. The Herald is a great comfort to me. I enjoy your writing, and hope you are wonderfully sustained in your trials. Love and best wishes to all. Beg to remain, faithfully your sister, Mrs. B. F. Copeland.

Grantsville, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like very much to join your happy circle. I do not get your paper, but one of my very dear friends does, and I read and enjoy it very much. This girl friend and I both wish admittance to your club. I am sixteen years old, have wavy blond hair and blue eyes. I love pets and nature. I wish to make the best of friends with every one of you, and very much wish to hear from the boys and girls.

Jeanette King.
Beebe, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am seventeen years old and in the eighth grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. Huldah I Pridden, I guess your middle name to be Inez. Please do what you said. I hope W. B. is on a hike when this arrives. Will be glad to hear from any of the cousins.

Edith Biddle.
Rt. 3, New Market, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second attempt to pass Mr. W. B. My father takes The Pentecostal Herald and I enjoy reading it very much. Does anyone know whether the Garden of Eden has been entered since Adam and Eve were driven from it? Were did Cain's wife come from? Does the Bible tell of John's death, if so, where? I will be thirteen years old Sept. 23. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. I will be glad to get letters from the cousins, and will try to answer all letters received.

Stella Parkins.
Rt. 1, Box 50, Fayette, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old and in the third grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. I have brown hair, blue eyes and light complexion. Can any of you guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with G, and has four letters in it. The one who guesses it I will write them a long letter. As this is my first letter to The Herald I will close with love to all the cousins.

Fannie Scarborough.
Avon, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We would be very glad to get space in your columns for our short word to let you know we do like to read The Herald, and we have mother to read us all the good letters that are printed for we enjoy them all. We are sisters and have two brothers that are our senior by a few years. We have the good fortune of having a very dear mother and father that are true blue Christians. We have family prayer, and thanks at each meal for the food that we have before us for we give credit to our heavenly Father for all we have. We live on a farm of 180 acres and we enjoy farm life. We have a nice creek running through our farm and our brothers catch so many nice fish, and how we all enjoy the feast. We raise chickens, geese, ducks, and guineas. It is such sport to hunt guinea's nest. We found one the other day with forty eggs in it. I have a setting of goose eggs that will hatch this week. We do enjoy caring for the baby fowls of our flock. My sister found a twin among the letters and I wonder if I have one. I am nine years old

August 7. Our school is out. I will be in the third grade next year. We all enjoy going to church, especially the meetings; there are so many different ones, we have one to go to most all the summer months. My oldest brother is the only one of us children that has been saved. We ask the prayers of all the Christians that we all might be saved and made to rejoice as others do that live in the Lord. Would be glad to hear from some of you cousins. Will answer by card any way. With love and best wishes to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Jeanette and June Uffelman.
Rt. 3, Erin, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been a long time since I wrote page ten. We have taken The Herald for years. I am a little dark complexioned woman thirty-seven years young, the mother of seven children, wife of one of the best husbands in the whole world, last but not least, I am a T. B. patient in a Sanatorium. There are six girls in our ward; we have some good times reading good books, talking on the Bible, the goodness and greatness of our Father in Heaven. We have seasons of prayer each morning which we enjoy very much. All the girls in our ward go to their meals but me. The dining-room is about one hundred feet down the walk, so while they are gone I get very lonely. One evening in the cold month of February I composed this little rhyme about my dear father dying of cancer of the stomach, and I am not able to go to see him. I was home for the Holidays to see him. He was very poor and so sick but not bedfast; but took his bed soon after I came back to the Sanatorium. Will give you the poetry now hoping to see it in print.

The brightest picture that Hangs on memory's wall,
Is that of my gray-haired father,
When he visited me last fall.

Now if I go to see him,
In his bed of fever and pain,
It will surely spoil the picture,
Even though I don't see him again.

Oh how can I lie here and worry,
(It will be impossible to gain)
And not go and see him when maybe,
I could do something to ease pain.

So I'm trusting in Jesus our Savior,
To visit the dear old home,
To bless, comfort and heal him,
For the sake of his boys that roam.

I must stay here for the sake of my children,
For they need my care, oh so much.
If the Lord will only help me,
For his kingdom is of such.

Should father cross the river,
Before my strength returns,
His loving smiles will linger
Back at the dear old home.

If I never see his smiling face,
Until we reach that shore,
I know we're saved through Jesus' grace,
Who taught us we'd live evermore.
Mrs. A. E. Strickland.
Clendennin, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I am again; just a Pax girl, but I long to become better acquainted with the cousins and you. I received a nice letter from Mildred Reigo. I wish some more of the cousins would write to me. Well, I will close for this time. I hope to see my letter in print. Tell Mr. W. B. to go chase himself. Mae E. Wells, the answer to the riddle is "Herbert Hoover." Dorothy R. Baker, I guess your name to be Rita.

Thelma Rutherford.
Box 66, Pax, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a girl from Poole, Ky., join your happy band of boys and girls? As Mr. W. B. got my first letter I am writing again and I hope to see this one in print. I have been reading The Herald for nearly a year and I enjoy reading page ten. I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am a blonde. I only have one brother, who is away and I get awfully lonesome, and would like to hear from some of the cousins. Marian Burris, I

FALLEN ASLEEP

STRATTON.

The Rev. Job L. Stratton, minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church for more than half a century, and beloved and highly respected resident of this city for more than a quarter of a century, died Feb. 24, about 7:45 o'clock at the family residence, 411 Haus avenue, after an illness of but a few days, due to weakness of his advanced age.

The passing of Rev. Stratton removes from this community one of its outstanding Christian men and leaves a place, that it will be hard to fill. His death comes as a shock to hundreds of people with whom he had been in more or less close contact for many years.

Retired in 1916.

Rev. Stratton was born on a farm in Goshen township, Mahoning Co., Ohio, February 4, 1845, being 84 years of age at the time of his death. He was the son of Daniel and Julia Stratton. He prepared for the ministry with great care, being a graduate of Mt. Union College in the classical course. He joined the Erie Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church in Akron in September 1872 and retired from the active ministry in 1916. During twelve of these years he supplied churches in New Castle and vicinity.

He came to this city as pastor of the Epworth M. E. Church, which he served for four years. In 1905, he was appointed to the pastorate of the Croton Avenue M. E. Church, which he served for five years.

After his retirement he supplied Simpson M. E. Mission on Atlantic Avenue, for nearly nine years. His last regular work was as pastor of Pulaski and King's Chapel M. E. churches in 1923-24.

For 56 years, he gave full proof of ministry, leaving every church he served richer in the things that make for character and good citizenship. He was always ready to serve every good cause to the extent of his strength and ability.

Ever since coming to New Castle, he had been a member of the Ministerial Association, every member of which organization, held him in the highest esteem. Only recently resolutions of appreciation of his steadfast faith, spiritual optimism and constant intercession for the success of the Visitation Evangelism Campaign were passed by this body of ministers. He held his membership in the First M. E. Church of this city.

Rev. Stratton was married twice, his first wife was Ella Shultz to whom he was married in 1872 and who died in 1881. There were two sons born to this wife, Prof. Ruliff V. Stratton of Port Huron, Michigan, and William A. Stratton of Yakima, Wash. His second wife, now living, was Mary S. McFall of Smith's Ferry, Beaver county, Pa. He also leaves one brother, P. D. Stratton of Akron, Ohio. He was a member of the Protected Home Circle.

The body of Rev. Stratton was taken to the First M. E. Church at 2 P. M., at which time the services were held. Interment was in Oak Park Cemetery.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VIII. August 25, 1929.

Subject.—Rebuilding the Temple. Ezra 3:10-13; 6:14-16; Ps. 84:1-4.

Golden Text.—I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the LORD. Ps. 122:1.

Time.—B. C. 536 to B. C. 516.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—From the time when the tabernacle was erected in the wilderness under the supervision of Moses, Israel had no other regular house of worship till the days of Solomon. About 500 years prior to the date of our lesson he built the first Jewish temple on Mount Moriah in the city of Jerusalem. The Babylonians under the reign of Nebuchadnezzar burned it after it had been standing about 400 years. Solomon lavished the wealth of the Jewish kingdom upon this magnificent structure. It was constructed out of the finest of stone and wood, and garnished with immense quantities of beaten gold.

I have often heard preachers arguing in favor of fine churches, because Solomon's temple was so costly; but the argument will not hold. That temple was built as a house of worship for an entire nation. It is not only foolish, but sinful to put vast sums of money into costly church buildings, in order to satisfy human vanity, while millions of poor people at home and in heathen lands are starving for the gospel, and for the bread that feeds the body. I do not believe that many of these beautiful structures are erected solely for the glory of God.

Our lesson today follows the end of the 70 years of captivity of the kingdom of Judah in Babylonia. Shortly after the Medes and Persians captured Babylon and completely overthrew the forces of Belshazzar, Cyrus, King of Persia, issued a decree for the rebuilding of the temple of Jehovah in Jerusalem. Turn to Isaiah 44:28, and read his remarkable prophecy concerning Cyrus, made some 200 years before that monarch was born: "That saith of Cyrus, He is my shepherd, and shall perform all my pleasure: even saying to Jerusalem, Thou shalt be built; and to the temple, Thy foundation shall be laid." Read on into chapter forty-five for more of this wonderful prophecy.

The rebuilding of the temple was begun and carried on under the leadership of Zerubbabel, for which reason the structure is commonly known as Zerubbabel's Temple. Although King Cyrus provided very bountifully for the rebuilding, even going so far as to tax his western provinces quite heavily in order to furnish the needed funds for the work, the rebuilt temple did not equal that of Solomon. We read in the account of it given in Scripture that when the foundation was laid there was both shouting and weeping. The younger people, born and reared in captivity, had never seen the glory of the first temple; and they rejoiced much when they saw the work that was being done. But there were older people, doubtless some who were carried away from the homeland in raids made on the city subsequent to the first invasion in B. C. 606, who had seen Solomon's temple before it was destroyed. These wept when they saw that the temple being rebuilt would be inferior to the first. Ichabod was written everywhere—the glory of the once proud, but sinful people, was no more. They were broken in both purse and spirit; but there was yet hope in the hearts of a few God-inspired leaders who were ready to die for Jerusalem.

Comments on the Lesson.

It will be well to read the first nine verses of this third chapter of Ezra before coming directly to the lesson. Note that before they began to lay the foundation of the temple, they set the priests in order, and erected an altar of whole burnt offering. They restored the regular worship of Jehovah as directed in His Word, in order that they might receive his guidance and blessing in their work. That was proper and acceptable in his sight; for "except the LORD build the house, they labor in vain that build it." When Zerubbabel was about to build the temple God sent to him by the prophet Zechariah, saying: "This is the word of the LORD unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

10. Laid the foundation of the temple.—Possibly some of the stones forming the foundation of Solomon's temple were still in place; but the Babylonians had so completely torn things asunder that it was needful to lay the great stones in order again. The priests.—Some who had returned from captivity, or priests who had been born and reared in captivity. The sons of Asaph were singers belonging to the tribe of Levi; but they were not of the priestly family of Aaron.

11. Sang together by course.—Antiphonal singing. Choir responding to choir.

12. Ancient men.—Old men, such as had seen the glory of the first temple. Could not discern the noise.—The volume of sound was a babel, weeping mingled with shouting.

Ezra 6:14-16. Here we come to a break in our lesson. The mongrel Samaritans wished to have a part in the work of rebuilding the temple, but the Jews who were of pure blood would not consent; whereupon the Samaritans grew angry and jealous, and by appealing to the king at Babylon, succeeded in stopping the work for a period of 15 years. Here we take up the work again.

14. Prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah.—These two good men were Jehovah's preachers in that day. By their messages they encouraged the leaders and their workmen. Note that the building was done under the command of three kings, Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerxes. The work was completed some twenty years after it was begun by Zerubbabel.

16. Kept the dedication of this house of God with joy.—As far as possible they were possibly patterning after the dedication of the first temple. See 1 Kings 8, Psalm 84:1-4. This psalm needs no comment. It is a simple, beautiful doxology of praise, that comes very properly at the end of our lesson. It is sweetness after bitterness; joy after a long night of sorrow. Thank God, our dark places come just before the dawn; weeping just before joy.

PERSONAL AND EVANGELISTIC.

Rev. W. E. Lamp has recently held meetings in Nashville, Ill., in one of our Evangelical League tents in which ten were converted, three sanctified and four additions to the church. Bro. Lamp is doing a great work with our tent. He also held a good meeting at Macedonia, Ill., in which 25 were converted, 5 sanctified and 18 united with the church.

Three of our Asbury boys have been holding tent meetings in Wyoming in which they have seen 122 souls saved or sanctified. Brothers Root, Lowell and Moss are doing a great work in Basin, Wyoming.

The Hofmeister Tabernacle Campaign, Jamestown, O., under the direction of Rev. T. M. Hofmeister closed after eight weeks' duration. Dr. Bromley called on the evangelist as he passed through town. Dr. Hofmeister preaches the Holy Spirit and the ministry of healing. His address is South Solon, O. He expects to tour the State of Tennessee soon.

A pioneer interdenominational meeting will be held in Jackson's Hole, Wyo., Sept. 1-8, Rev. B. Frank Moss, Stanley Lowell, and Paul Root in charge, assisted by Capt. H. J. Galahue and others of the Salvation Army. Saints everywhere are requested to pray for this needy field. For information, write Mrs. Albert Pratt, Wilson, Wyo.

The Annual Prayer Conference at Heights (North Pt. Pleasant) W. Va., is exciting new interest each year. All believers of old-time Bible salvation are invited to come for full time. Such instruments of our Lord as Dr. Shade, of Miami, Fla., R. E. Brockman, and Evangelist Grace Haney, a deaf mute who, with her father are world wonders for the Lord, will be chief evangelists. Board and lodging furnished free on grounds. The date is August 29th to September 8th inclusive.

REST COTTAGE—PILOT POINT, TEXAS.

We have just returned from Rest Cottage where we had been called to meet the board of directors, this being the twenty-sixth anniversary of this institution, and we wish to say as we have said before, that to our mind there is no greater institution of its kind in operation anywhere. Every department of the work is in fine shape and is a credit to our great Church and to our country. Our hearts were indeed made glad to see how our heavenly Father was blessing this part of our church work, and to see the shining faces and hear the testimonies of those dear girls who had lost their way, but now had been redeemed by the blood of Jesus, and hear them praise God for Rest Cottage and its workers for their faithful service in helping them find the Lord; they are making good. They gave a program one evening while we were there, and it was a grand success.

With all that the Lord has done for Rest Cottage and fallen humanity, there was a peculiar sadness about the place—the one who had worked so faithfully for nearly twenty-six years had slipped away, and everywhere we looked we could see something her hands had made, her beautiful paintings hanging on every wall in the Home, the beautiful stone fence that she planned and helped to build around the lawn with her own hands. Her whole life was wrapped up in her work there.

However, there was one task that lay so close to her heart she had to leave unfinished, and that was the erection of a brick veneer building for a laundry which is so much needed there, and funds are being raised for that purpose now in memory of Sister Roberts, (it will be called the Minnie Roberts Memorial Building.) Many helpful suggestions were made in regard to raising the money for this purpose and the Board is behind Bro. Roberts in this worthy undertaking, and we certainly hope that the Church and the friends of Rest Cottage will co-operate with us in this great enterprise.

On Thursday there was held in the Rest Cottage Chapel a Memorial service for Sister Roberts in which the business men of Pilot Point took an active part, also the Mayor of the city and Rev. E. C. Escoe, pastor of the Methodist Church. I have never heard greater honor and praise given to any one than was given to Sister Roberts for her faithful and efficient work while here on earth, and also our dear Brother Roberts and his faithful corps of workers. Some of these men have known Brother and Sister Roberts since the very beginning of their work there, and were in a position to know of its growth and success. The last year ninety-eight girls have been cared for in the Home; babies born during the year forty-two, eighteen girls have been received and cared for in the last seven weeks. This place certainly has the proper name, Rest Cottage, a place where poor unfortunate girls can find not only rest for their bodies, but can be pointed to the One who can give rest to the soul.

THE POTATO PARABLE.

E. E. Shelhamer.

A certain rich man was about to take a trip into a far country. He had become wealthy as a great potato-raiser. His field consisted of twenty-five acres. But now as he was about to take this journey he called his five sons, transferring to them his property and good will.

These sons were very religious—one belonging to the Nazarene Church, the second to the Pilgrim Holiness; the third was Free Methodist, the fourth was a Wesleyan Methodist, and the fifth a member of the Brethren in Christ. These being holiness churches, the boys were expected to profess and practice a high standard of living.

The father desired that these sons keep the field intact and pool their interests. But the boys thought best to have line fences, dividing the field into five-acre lots. One desired to make a specialty of large potatoes; another said he did not care so much for large ones, but he wanted quantity rather than quality; the third said he wanted to raise early potatoes, getting them upon the market early in order to receive good prices. The fourth said he was not so anxious for an early variety, but wanted good keepers. The fifth wanted to combine all of these in his five-acre lot.

The good father in his kind way protested, saying it was expensive to have so many line fences; moreover the horses would trample down at the ends of the rows much valuable land.

"But," said he, "if you insist on these partitions, I urge you to be so magnanimous that when you see your brother have a bumper crop, you jump across the fence and help him harvest it. If you are not big-hearted enough to do this, at least stand and lean against the fence and visit a little. And, if you are too busy to do this, please do not be low enough to throw any weeds across on your brother's lot. And, if perchance you are tempted to do this mean act, for Jesus' sake, I beg of you to practice what you preach to such an extent, that you will not steal any of your brother's potatoes after he has dug them."

Yes, perhaps all these holiness factions might save overhead expense in their little papers, schools and orphanages, if they were all in one big field; but since this does not seem to be a possibility, surely we ought to be so well saved that we will bid each other God speed. If this cannot be done, it is certainly deplorable when any one stoops so low as to proselyte and steal members who rightfully belong elsewhere.

We have come to a time when it seems that in order to prove one's loyalty to his little crowd, he must be more or less biased and prejudiced against the other crowd. Oh, for such a baptism of Divine love that will make us forget a lot of little differences and cause us all to rally around one central truth—Jesus and Him crucified.

"And John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name; and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us. And Jesus said unto him, Forbid him not, for he that is not against us is for us."

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

JUST ONE IN THE WHOLE WORLD.

There is just one Bud Robinson—no one like him or even akin to him. There is not another "Life Story" like his or similar to it. His recent book, "My Life's Story" is, as he puts it, "loaded to the water line with the activities of forty-seven years of labor in the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ." The chapter on his call to preach is worth the price of the book and more. Get it and read it. It has 217 pages, but when you start reading it you will not want to stop until you have finished. It sells at the remarkably low price of $1.00. Don't fail to get your copy. You will weep and you will rejoice as you read it.

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."
—Basil Mathews
in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast
from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and
His saving power in the lives of men."
Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen
Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

THE PRINCE OF THE HOUSE OF DAVID

By Ingraham.

A story of the life and times of our Lord as told by an eye witness in letters to his father. The narrative is beautifully and forcefully unfolded.
Because of its unusual style it will be read by many who would not read the
New Testament.

Anyone who reads this book is brought face to face with the fact that Jesus is truly "The Prince of the House of David" and the Savior of the world.

A book that the young people will read and enjoy. It will hold their attention clear to the last page.

We have 240 copies of a pocket edition of this book, bound in blue cloth,
that we are selling at 30c each or 2 for 50c.

A NEW BOOK

Dr. Arthur T. O'Rear has written a book,
"The Nativity of the Holy Spirit," which is a distinct contribution to the more recent literature on this subject. The book is introduced by Bishop Sam Hay.

Dr. O'Rear couples theological soundness with a new method of approach. The discussion is very comprehensive, providing a kind of education in spiritual things that is greatly needed. While his book is constructive and positive, it deals negatively with false movements and modern errors regarding the Holy Spirit and furnishes new light under this head.

A Fifty Cent Investment

One sure way to promote Holiness and the work of God is by way of the printed page. An investment of 50 cents by sending The Pentecostal Herald to some one
in your church or town, or to some friend
at a distance may mean the leading of that friend into the experience of Full Salvation. Here are 7 reasons for investing 50 cents just now:

1. The Herald has Dr. Morrison's great
sermons and messages.
2. The Herald has messages from great
evangelists.
3. The Herald has a wonderful Sunday school Exposition.
4. The Herald has news of revivals all over the nation.
5. The Herald's second page gives Dr.
Kidout's articles and messages from China, Japan, Korea, India, etc. The entire mission field will be covered in these articles.
6. The Herald has Mrs. Morrison's page for the children as well as her other messages.
7. The Herald stands foursquare on every great issue relating to the Church, the
School, the Home and the Nation.

Remember Five Dollars sends The Pentecostal Herald to 10 persons and here is a good place to place some of the Lord's tenth out on heavy interest.

GLORIFYING MEN.

By The Editor.

MEN may be regenerated, sanctified, baptized and indwelt by the Holy Spirit in this life. Jesus very clearly teaches that we may be brought into most gracious experiences of grace while the spirit of man dwells within the body; but man must wait for his glorification in the world to come.

Jesus teaches a very vital and blessed relationship with himself in John 15:4, 5: "Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me. I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: For without me ye can do nothing." This is a most wonderful and beautiful union with our blessed Lord.

There is a wonderful promise in John 14:23, where Jesus answering a question put by Judas, not Iscariot, speaks thus: "If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." This is a most gracious promise of our Lord; nothing can be more desirable than heaven itself, than such fellowship with the Father and Son, than is here promised. It will be understood that in order to such a privilege there must be surrender, forsaking of all sin, consecration, the giving of one's self to the Divine Master in humility, the spirit of forgiveness toward men, unselfishness in a marked degree. No one could think of such relationships with the Father and the Son as possible to the proud, envious, man, with a vengeful spirit. All of this, with every selfish ambition, must pass away if we would have abiding with us the Father and the Son; and then, there must be no spirit of boastfulness, no struttings of religious pride, no despisings of one's fellow-beings who has not come into such sacred relations.

For such relationships as those described in the above paragraphs, there must be honesty to the fraction of a cent, not only in act, but in thought. There must be truthfulness to the least degree; there must be the spirit of forgiveness quite like that of the Master; there must be so shed abroad in the human heart by the Holy Ghost, the love of God that we forgive those who have sinned against us, and love our enemies with something like the forgiveness and love of Christ himself. No pompousness, no brag, no taint of self-righteousness or boasting of one's spiritual attainments and gracious communions with the blessed Trinity. There may be, and ought to be, witnessing to the power of Christ to save, to the love of the Father, to the guidance and comfortings of the Holy Ghost, but it must be in the spirit and tone of humility, without any boasting of self or claim of personal worthiness.

Men who really discover Christ in his glory cease to glorify men. They love men; they will seek to bring them to Christ for salvation; they will wish them well and render them unselfish service, but they will not, cannot, glorify them. If we have discovered something of the real mystery and power of the blessed Trinity we no longer feel that we cannot get on without this or that man. We no longer feel that God, in any sense, needs any certain individual. Of course, certain men in the history of the world, like Moses, St. Paul, John Wesley, and many others who might be mentioned, have been eminently useful, but God is always able to put down one and put up another, to work out his purpose in any one of his servants, lay him aside, or call him hence, and go forward with his great plan for world redemption, with other individuals and instrumentalities. Let us never belittle God by allowing ourselves to think that he cannot go forward triumphantly without any certain person or special individual. Moses finished his appointed task and God raised up Joshua. Joshua leads on until time for him to go home, and Judge Samuel appears. The ages move on and in due time John the Baptist is heard in the wilderness; his head is cut off and St. Paul holds on high the torch of an evangelistic gospel. History marches forward and Martin Luther awakes a drowsy, sinful world. Spiritual fires grow dim and John Wesley, with a group of young men, cry out with a voice in tones of divine authority that, "without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Revival fires burn throughout the British Isles, touch the American continent and, for a time they smoulder, but God raises up a number of chosen vessels and a mighty revival breaks out in these United States; they hold ten thousand revival meetings, erect camp meetings for the spread of holiness from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico, from the Virginia Beach to the Pacific slope, erect holiness schools, and send out a little army to all the mission fields of the world, and in tents, brush arbors, the open streets, in the mountain regions, and the cabins of the poor, tell mankind with glad heart that Jesus Christ is able to save, to sanctify, and by the power of the indwelling of the Holy Ghost, to keep from sin.

Let us so discover God in the vastness of his unlimited wisdom, power and love, that we shall have no fears, whoever comes or goes, lives or dies, God abides. His eternal purposes must be wrought out. He will never cease to desire men to be holy. For this he gave his Son to bleed upon the cross. For this he has sent the Holy Ghost into the world. We must cease to exist on earth; our voices must be silent, our activities, by and by, will be no longer extended, but God will abide. The Holy Ghost will move upon the hearts of men. The gospel will call the sinners to repentance; the teaching of Jesus that those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness are blessed, and shall be filled," will still be proclaimed, and long after those of us who are building and preaching, loving and laboring, have crumbled into dust, Jesus Christ, the mighty King of kings, and Lord of lords, will be marching on to victory, until all his foes shall have been placed beneath his feet.

Four Neglected Doctrines.

WE have discussed the New Birth and Sanctification as two of the sadly neglected and all-important Bible doctrines that ought to be kept before, and urged upon the people, until they produce conviction that will not allow the people to go along with a false peace, but will lead them to seek and obtain these great essential blessings abundantly provided for in the redemptive sufferings of our Lord.

This week we are calling attention to the sadly neglected doctrine of the Future Punishment of the impenitent Sinner. This doctrine is so clearly and emphatically written in the Scriptures that it seems strange indeed, that any conscientious minister of the gospel would drift along for years without preaching to his people with great earnestness on the subject.

To preach on the Future Punishment of the Wicked does not mean that the pastor or preacher shall become a ranter, or abusive, or shake his fist and threaten the people with "hell fire," or "fire and brimstone," as we hear the frivolous frequently remark. This is a hot subject that needs to be discussed in a cool way, without excitement or rant, but with great seriousness and with an earnestness that will carry conviction. The preacher need not expect his message to produce a gracious effect upon his audience; in other words, to make the people feel the truth and power of the sermon, if he, himself, does not feel its truth, importance and power. The speaker on any subject must feel the importance of his message if he hopes to make the hearer feel its weight.

We are well aware that we have in the world today a very large number of people, both among preachers and people, who are quite opposed to anything of an emotional nature in matters of religion. They object to the preacher saying anything that will arouse fear and cause distress or anxiety among the people.

Fear is a very important element in our human make-up. It is quite a balance wheel in the adjustment of our life and living. The fear of famine guides the farmer in the raising and harvesting of his crops; the fear of fire keeps the whole family watchful against any sort of accident that would lead to the burning of the home. The fear of sickness suggests the guarding against many indiscretions that would involve our physical health. Take from us the fear of the suffering that indiscretions and neglect would bring upon us in many phases of our intellectual and economic life and life would be-

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON MISSIONARY MATTERS

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Let me preface this article with a pen sketch of one of China's greatest Missionaries by Professor Warneck.

"A man full of the Holy Ghost and faith, of entire surrender to God and his call, of great self-denial, heartfelt compassion, rare power in prayer, marvelous organizing faculty, energetic initiative, indefatigable perseverance, and of astonishing influence with men, and withal of childlike humility."

I have had letters from America desiring information. It would be impossible in my busy days and weeks of evangelistic activities to carry on a large correspondence. My weekly article to THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD has to have the right of way over all my other writings, of course, so in this article I think I shall answer a list of questions which will fairly represent the average line of inquiries.

1. Does the preaching of the Gospel have the same effect in Asia as in America?

Practically there is no difference when preached in the power of the Spirit. I have seen it produce conviction, tears, confessions, conversions, assurance, sanctification. I think that gospel preaching is too much neglected and undue emphasis put upon teaching, instruction, etc. Many believe that the people should first be put under a process of instruction before they are in a condition to entertain saving faith, hence, they do not look for immediate results and for sudden conversions. Bishop Taylor, when working in India in 1871, expected direct gospel results and came into conditions where these were not expected, he said: "This old gospel method of having awakened sinners to speak out inquiring 'Sirs, what shall we do to be saved?'—to come out on the Lord's side and to consent at once to renounce their rebellion and avow their allegiance to God—seems entirely new. We signally lack power. The ministers have never before worked in this way—direct hand to hand fight with the powers of darkness to rescue souls, to be led at once to Jesus. The lay workers are not visible in any public effort to save souls yet."

Bishop Taylor further said: "I do not expect physical miracles; they are not necessary; but I do expect the Spirit of God to produce awakening so deep and conversions so powerful, with the outward manifestations and proofs of his work so demonstrably clear that they will serve better than physical miracles to convince this people that the Bible is true and that Jesus Christ is alive and the only Saviour of sinners."

2. If the Native Church is raising up a Native Ministry what need is there for the foreign missionary?

In many ways the foreign missionary is indispensable but, of course, as the native ministry gains in numbers and efficiency foreigners will decrease. Many church schools are managed almost entirely by native teachers and the pastorates are in the hands of native preachers almost entirely. Foreign missionaries having a real passion for souls, who have been soul winners at home are urgently needed for evangelistic work, but too often when they reach the field they are diverted to educational work and there they dry up, lose their fire and drop into professionalism. The foreign missionary is needed also for executive work and for blazing new trails, opening up new territory, etc.

3. Are all who go to the foreign fields to be classed as missionaries?

By no means. A young woman on one of the Dallar Line boats was very worldly; she played cards, danced and carried on frivolously. One day a man of the world said to her: "Oh, I did not know you were a missionary?" "Oh," she said, "I am going to teach in one of the mission schools." Now, in my judgment, that young woman ought not to be considered a missionary. She went to do school teaching in the Orient under false pretenses. Perhaps the Missionary Board which sent her did not inquire faithfully as to her religion. Dancing "missionaries" never save any souls. I heard once of some other young women who came out to the Orient under the same false pretences, presumably, and they danced and carried on so on shipboard that the heads of the Mission wrote to the home board requesting that hereafter young women sent out by them should refrain from dancing on the passage out. This class are unworthy to be called missionaries.

4. Do you find much Modernism or Higher Criticism on the Mission Field?

Yes. Too much of it. The troubles of 1927 sent many home and cleaned up some of the schools where they taught. A great deal of modernism is due to the excessive emphasis put upon intellectual equipment for the mission fields. Too many missionaries make too much of college degrees and in order to get them go to the most liberalistic schools, drink in the poison and come back to spread it. I asked Kanamouri of Japan about this matter; he told me things I would not care to put into this article on the question of modernism in Japan. He said some good things about Southern Methodism and Southern Presbyterianism (including of course, the Free Methodists.) I was in a city where they were about to open up a Theological Seminary. One of the heads said that he hoped to have a certain professor from America come over and help him. Now this professor is widely known for his destructive theology and wherever he goes in the homeland or the foreign field he will do little else than scatter doubt and skepticism. To me, it is nothing short of the tragic—I feel like using a stronger word—to have teachers come from the U. S. A. to project on the minds of students coming up out of heathenism the perilous teachings of modernism. What China needs in these days is positive Bible truth—the truth as it is in Jesus.

5. What changes are taking place in the mission fields calling for changes in method and message?

Great changes have taken place—especially in China. Missionaries who have been in China many years say there have been greater changes in the past two years than they have ever dreamed of. China's young people have wakened up. They cannot be driven or browbeaten. The Chinese cannot now be treated as once they were with a "superiority complex." You must meet them on the level. The idea that we foreigners are "lords of creation" doesn't obtain any more. There is a frightful amount of hate to the foreigner still in China and much of this is due to the grasping methods employed by European natives. Thank God, America as a nation, doesn't claim an acre of Chinese territory!

As to the message I do not think that there is any call for a change in the gospel message. Many there are who think that we should have a different approach. I do not think so. The Gospel is the power of God to every one that believeth whether in Europe, America or Asia. There is no difference because Sin is the same, the human soul is the same needing a Redeemer from sin. We need to remember what Gandhi, of India, told E. Stanley Jones. He said: "I would suggest that you must practice your religion without adulterating or toning it down." So with our Gospel—let it not be toned down either at home or abroad.

6. What effect do foreigners in business in Mission Lands have upon the work of Gospel Missions?

I would say on the whole the effect is bad. Shanghai is one of the most wicked cities in Asia. There are 40,000 foreigners there. The great percent live worldly, wicked lives. Some Americans out here go to the depths of wickedness, English, French and others also. The same is true of the big cities of India. Christian civilization, as we call it, furnishes wretchedly poor exhibits of real Christianity and of course the heathen seeing these things lose faith in the gospel that the missionary talks about. William Taylor began his work in India within the Church; he saw that if the gospel was to win at all it must be through a clean church and a holy people. He said: "I took strong ground from the start in favor of getting these saved. In their present state the mass of them make a false showing of Christianity and are terribly obstructive to our great work of leading the heathen to Jesus. Everyone we get truly saved from sin will be a double gain to our cause—first to remove a stumbling block, and secondly, to secure a living stone resting on the foundation of the apostles and prophets."

E. Stanley Jones calls attention to this same matter all through his book, "The Christ of the Indian Road." He cites a case where two Europeans fought a duel and killed each other. The Hindus buried them and wishing to make an offering to the spirits of the dead they thought these fellows would love in death what they loved in life, so they set up on their graves a cigar box and a whiskey bottle!

7. To what extent is the Church at home responsible for the success or the failure of Missions in the foreign fields?

To a large extent missions reflect the home church. The absence of spirituality at home is reflected in missions. Let me once more quote Stanley Jones, he says: "We are inoculating the world" (the American world especially) "with a mild form of Christianity, so that it is now practically immune against the real thing. Vast areas of the Christian world are inoculated with a mild form of Christianity and the real thing seems strange and impossible." "Our churches are made up of people who would be equally shocked to see Christianity doubted or put into practice."

An unspiritual home church is going to send unspiritual missionaries to the foreign fields. Unspiritual schools are going to send unspiritual and skeptical scholars and teachers to teach in the mission school. The unspiritual home church is going to utterly fail to back up with their prayers and intercessions those they send to the fields. The conditions in the foreign fields today are largely due to the absence of the power of God in the home church. Let a mighty revival of religion take place in the home church and at once a reaction will occur in the foreign field.

8. Are the native Churches doing much in the way of self-support? Are the native pastors and members as a whole very spiritual?

In some sections churches are wholly self-supporting. The O. M. S. churches in Japan are working almost entirely on the self-support basis. Many of the larger churches of various denominations support themselves. Many more would support themselves if they had the vision. I heard of a Chinese family who came out of heathenism into the church. One of them told that it cost them thirty dollars a year to belong to the Temple and give offerings to idols, etc.; since becoming Christians it cost them nothing! No vision! If there was a deeper spirituality in the native churches they would not depend so much on the Missionary Society paying their bills. Many of the churches have developed formality instead of fire and the pastors fail to do the work of evangelists. There are some splendid exceptions, of course, and many there are who preach a powerful gospel and get people saved; but on the other hand just like the home church there are many in the churches who are members; who have come in through baptism, etc., but who have not been born again. On this matter think of the condition in the American churches.

9. What is the comparative emphasis placed upon Education and Evangelism in the foreign field?

This is a question about which much may be said. Let me quote again Bishop William Taylor. He said, "The living example of a holy church is the only argument that will ever convince the natives that Jesus is the Christ or that the Bible is the book of God. Education has been unduly relied upon by very many good earnest missionaries and their patrons. If mere literary education had any regenerating power in it, then the educated people of Europe and America would be model Christians; but what has education done to cure their spiritual maladies?"

I think I am not overstating things when I say that everywhere there is an overwhelming emphasis placed upon education and an amazingly small emphasis placed upon Evangelism. I expect if they could be counted that one could find ten engaged in educational work to one engaged in straight, definite evangelism. There are many reasons for this. Many have no training whatever in evangelism or soul winning. The average missionary's library abounds in books on Teaching, Psychology, Sociology, Pedagogy, etc., with scarcely a book on evangelism. It seems to have been forgotten in the curriculum of the average training school or seminary that candidates for the mission fields should be thoroughly trained and drilled in the art of saving souls. Then, again, many of the native preachers are sent to schools where evangelism is not taught. They go in for literary degrees and come back to the pulpit minus any passion for souls. A prominent Chinese Baptist leader, a man with many college degrees himself, talking of his preachers whom he wanted me to address at their Convention said that they were most of them college men but they had no fire; they did not know how to win souls and he wanted to get them aroused along evangelistic lines. Another thing that obscures evangelism is the view taken by many leaders that our main hope is in the education of the young. Now this shows an absence of vision. I often ask the question: While we are educating the young what is going to become of the great teeming masses on the outside?

I believe the present situation in China calls for a vigorous evangelistic program. The churches should go in for revivals; the native ministry should be trained more for aggressive soul saving work instead of just holding things together, collecting funds, etc. What China needs is a great revival of religion such as struck Korea in 1908, such as India had in the days of Praying Hyde. Too many preachers have an aversion to revivals. In a recent meeting we had quite a group of Chinese preachers who strenuously opposed our conducting altar services in connection with our preaching. These men never have such a thing as an altar service in their churches; they don't believe in them and they never attempt any other method of bringing lost souls to Jesus. In China, as elsewhere, preachers develop into machine men, politicians, time servers, formalists. The burden of the teeming millions of souls lost in heathen darkness does not get hold of them and they have no vision!

10. Which is the best method of contributing to the Missionary work?

The needs are so great that care should be exercised in the use of the Lord's money. Many of the Mission Boards permit donors to designate how they want their missionary money to be used. I think too many people give upon impulse more than from intelligent conceptions of real need when real work is being done. Holiness people should not confine their gifts to any one organization, nor should they be carried away by personal appeals by individuals, some of them natives of Mission lands. I have known instances where foreign students have abused the trust placed in them. We should look into the question of organization, permanency, etc., of a movement before putting the Lord's money into it. Then let me suggest also that when sending money to the foreign field that it is far more convenient to those receiving it to have it come in a Bank Draft or Cashier's Check than by Postal Order. Sometimes post office orders cause endless trouble in foreign countries. I had a small amount sent me for famine orphans by postal order. I could not collect it because the postmaster used wrong order form. If it had come in a check the money could have been gotten at once. Go to your Bank instead of the post office.

THE POWER OF A HYMN.

JAMES V. REID.

THE little city of Chiquimula, Guatemala, is headquarters for the Friends Mission, one of the most successful and interesting organizations in Latin America. Their field of operation is throughout southeastern Guatemala and northern Honduras. They stand for the Wesleyan teachings of holiness, and their workers are beautifully consecrated, earnest in spirit and powerful in prayer. The lives of their native converts prove the effectiveness of the Bible doctrine of holiness.

For two weeks each year they have a great Convention, similar in character to our camp meetings in the United States. It is a great time of reunion for the missionaries as they come in from all the outpost stations; and it is a great time of spiritual blessing for the hundreds of native Christians who come in from far and near to sit together in that heavenly place. One man from Honduras rode for eight days, and an Indian man and his daughter rode for six days by mule to be in the Convention in February of this year.

Sixteen years ago I visited Chiquimula for the first time and it was a wonderful privilege to go again this year to have a part in that great meeting. Each afternoon for a week I spoke to the combined student bodies of the Boys and Girls' Schools in a series of message on Christian Character Building. These services, being held in their large tabernacle, were attended also by large crowds of the older people.

When the friends learned that I was to be present for those eight days they began seeking for a piano for use in the services. The Mission possesses only the tiny folding organs, and pianos are scarce articles in that little city. However, a search revealed an instrument in a wealthy Roman Catholic family who had been friendly toward the mission work, and they readily consented to loaning their piano for the meeting. It was an antique of unquestionable years, the tone was of tin pan quality and badly out of tune. But it was a piano, a thing which many of the native Christians had never seen or heard. It was an object of great interest to that crowd of worshippers.

Following the lessons each afternoon I spent some time playing hymns for the audience. Their appreciation was ample reward for the effort. On Wednesday afternoon there came to the service an American man from the town of Zacapa, a railroad center 25 miles away. He was an elderly man, huge of frame, bearing all the marks of a dissipated life. He had come on a business trip to see one of the Mission members. He is representative of a class of American men who have buried themselves in the seclusion of those obscure countries, have thrown off all moral restraint and gone the ways of dissipation.

On that Wednesday afternoon I played the grand old hymn, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." I felt sure God put some tone quality into that old piano that it had not possessed before. When I returned to the Mission home for supper one of the workers said, "Mr. M—— was very much moved by that old hymn this afternoon and wants to know if you will play it again tonight if he comes to the service." I replied, "I will play it for him just as often as he will come." He was back again that night and again I played that hymn which has been the consolation of many a heart. Instead of returning to his home next day as he had intended he remained in Chiquimula through Sunday, attending practically every service.

On that last Sunday morning it was my privilege to deliver the message; God's power was keenly felt; the altar was crowded with seekers. In the rear of the tabernacle sat Mr. M——. Toward the close of the service I slipped back to speak to him. We walked to the street entrance together; there he stopped, gripped my hand firmly and said, "Mr. Reid, I have been in this country twenty-five years and I have been starved to death for such music as you have played. The old song, What a Friend We Have in Jesus, awakened something down in my heart I have not felt for years."

His eyes flooded with tears and his thick lips trembled until he could not speak for a moment; then he continued, "This is the first Sunday in many years I have not been drunk. I am known as the best gambler in this part of Guatemala. I have tried everything under heaven, but I am not happy."

I said, "Mr. M——, you have tried everything but God, haven't you?" He was silent for a moment and I pressed the question, and then he answered, "That's so."

He walked away with his big frame trembling with emotion. I saw him again on Tuesday as I passed through his town en route to the port. He met me at the train, took me to a little railway hotel for dinner and looked after my baggage. I pressed the question of his salvation once more, but he is so deep in the entanglements of immorality it seemed he could see no way out at once.

As I bade him goodbye he clung to my hand and asked, "When are you coming back here again?" I replied, "I don't know, Mr. M——, but I hope the Lord lets me come again soon." He said, "Please come back and play music like that again."

I came away with a twofold prayer in my heart, that God would put it upon the heart of someone to provide a real piano for that Mission where souls might be touched by the power of music; and that he would let me return to play again for such hungry hearts. For five hundred dollars a new piano could be placed in that School and Mission where the children could learn to play and spread the influence of Gospel music in a land that knows only cheerless chants and doleful dirges.

I Have Been Greatly Impressed,

Says Rev. Arthur Sellers, while reading "Perfect Love," by Rev. J. A. Wood, and believe it the best, clearest, most authoritative for the Methodist doctrine, clearing all doubts and arguments against holiness, than any other book I have found. Indeed, I am impressed to have as many of my members have it as possible.

Brother Sellers' statements are not in the least overdrawn. If you haven't a copy of this book, get it and read it. Price, $1.50.

HIMALAYAN PEAKS OF REVELATION.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

"Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion forever and ever."—Rev. 1:5 and 6.

QUR text takes the form of a beautiful benediction. It is a gem of literature. It has the rhythm of poetry and the cadence of music, yet it suggests philosophy so profound that it would require many volumes to elucidate its meaning. It is one of the Bible's superlatives.

This is an age of intellectualism. Learning has become deified; it has the center of the stage. But learning that is confined to facts, details and data is a failure. It should clarify the vision, widen the horizon and move out the sky-lines. This is true whether the research and investigation be microscopic or telescopic germs or comets, literature or mathematics. Learning should help us to make comparisons and classify according to relative values, realizing on the one hand that we are thinking God's thoughts after him, and then, after our greatest achievements, in the language of Newton, "We are only picking up shells from the seashore."

If we should compare the truths of Revelation to the mountain ranges of earth in their importance of value, we would begin with the lowest foothills and ascend to the highest peaks of the Himalayas. We are told that there are four peaks of this range which rise sublimely above twenty-five thousand feet. There are four Himalayan peaks of Revelation which rise in matchless grandeur above all the other ranges of divine truth. In this beautiful benediction are couched these four greatest things. They are God's superlatives.

We doubt if John, in his apocalyptic vision, comprehended the significance of this language. It sounds extravagant to speak of God's superlatives. But if you wish to know the greatest things that God can do, discover the greatest thing that he has done, because love always deals in the superlative.

There is difference of opinion as to what constitutes greatness—superlative greatness. Everything that is big is not great. There must be magnitude of mind, matter or space, but such is not enough. It must sustain relationships that are necessary and eternal.

What is superlative greatness? One writer says the achievements of the nineteenth century, another the reign of universal law, another our blazing civilization, man's coming to himself, business, industry, learning, but these do not constitute greatness according to our text. We would undertake to raise before the eyes of our faith the Mount Everest of Divine Revelation, "unto him that loved us." Here we have the highest mountain peak.

THE FOUNDATION OF OUR REDEMPTION.

The infinite, the all-powerful; the undying love of God rises far above all the facts of earth and heaven. We find that millenniums before the race was conscious of its needs, God had anticipated those needs, not only the needs of this world, but the needs of two worlds. In the distant yesterdays the Wise Creator had filled the bowels of the earth with supplies of which we are now the beneficiaries; at first the hillsides were covered with forests, but now we are using the coal fields. When that shall have been exhausted, we have oil and gas to meet our needs. And in the next place God has not only anticipated our earthly needs, but his love is such that it sets aside justice; it overcomes every obstacle, bridges every chasm to bring the Balm of Gilead to the crushed and sinful world.

Rebellious, undeserving man, having outraged every law of God and every human relationship, deserving extreme penalties, can ask for pardon, and get it. Courts and juries know no such principle. But God's love sets aside justice.

We once visited a police court. A drunken man had beat up his little wife the night before, had been arrested, spent the night in jail. She came to the court room with her face bandaged and her eyes blackened from his brutal assault. She pleaded for her husband: "Judge, don't be hard on Jim; he's good to me when he's sober. Judge, let him off easy." The Judge said: "My dear woman, I feel like worshipping in the presence of such love. But a man who would abuse such a faithful little wife as you are gets no mercy in this court. I would send this man to the gallows in ten minutes if I had the power. Your love is holy and I honor it."

A mother seeks her wayward girl by having her pictures scattered in the haunts of shame in the underworld with a message, "Come home, Mary, mother still loves you." David declared, "Thou hath loved me out of the pit," and we are the beneficiaries of this Mount Everest of Revelation—the Foundation of our Redemption.

This love will last. Millenniums after the great men and things of earth are forgotten, we may be drinking deeper and deeper of this living fountain.

"When we've been there ten thousand years,
Bright, shining as the sun,
We've no less days to sing God's praise
Than when we first begun."

Where now may we find a definition which is sustained for superlative greatness? Surely we must locate it among the big things of human achievement. Think of a building sixty stories high, a college with sixty million dollars endowment, an ocean steamer a quarter of a mile long proudly riding the waves. These are great things, but not according to our definition. May we raise before the eyes of our faith the second Himalayan peak of Revelation. It is in our text "Washed us from our sins in his own blood." Here we have

THE CONSCIOUS REALIZATION OF OUR REDEMPTION.

To the wise, the scoffer, the arrogant, the self-important, this may sound like nonsense. It is not the wisdom of the world. What do we mean by redemption? It is not bigotry, sectarianism, creeds, chantings, gowns or holy orders. But it is redemption, deliverance from the power, pollution, guilt, consequences and penalty of sin. Demons may become saints. Magdalenes may walk in white before God.

But is this important? Oh, yes, to unimportant folks, some may say, to old men, children, preachers, etc. But to big people, rulers, men of affairs, captains of industry, such may be of little consequence. We scramble and fight over the little patches of the world, but the Book says gain it all, get a blanket mortgage on the whole earth and lose the soul. They will go out into eternity screaming beggars. That is just as true of kings, presidents and multi-millionaires, as it is of the humble.

What is redemption? Here is a page of history from the Civil War. A Union soldier was killed in Monroe county, Mo. The provost marshal at Palmyra, nearby, said that one Union soldier was worth ten "Rebels." The guard house was filled with citizens who were Southern sympathizers. Ten men were selected to be shot; among them was a poor man with a large family. In the guard house was a young man who sought an interview with the officer saying to him that he was of no importance, never had been. If he were dead, no one would suffer or care, and he begged for the opportunity to go out and die in the place of this husband and father. Any history of Missouri that failed to record this account of sacrifice would be rejected. He died for the other man.

Let us seek a third expression of Superlative Greatness, some further comparisons. Let us raise before the eyes of our faith the third Himalayan peak, "and hath made us kings and priests unto God." Here we have

THE PRIVILEGES OF OUR REDEMPTION.

On Golgotha in the long ago a man hung on a cross. The earth trembled, the sun darkened, the graves burst asunder; a pagan declared that a God is suffering. That man lowered his head and gave up the ghost and said it was finished. The veil of the temple was rent, the holy of holies exposed. Only priests were allowed to enter that place before. Now we may all enter into the holiest by that blood-bought privilege, "kings and priests unto God."

It is difficult to get an audience with a king. It would be greater significance to rule with a king. But here we have privileges greater than having access to the kings of earth. We get audience with the King of kings. This is not confined to holy orders, ecclesiastical dignity, but an illiterate old woman in the backwoods may push ahead of great men in church and state and gain audience with the King of Heaven.

Here is an old story: The widow, the mortgaged home, the last day, and she must be ousted. The officer goes early in the morning to notify her, the door is slightly ajar. He looks in; he sees the little woman gathering her children about her knees; they kneel in prayer; she talks into the unseen, pours out her heart in helpless dependence. The officer leaves silently, and notifies the man who holds the mortgage that, while he is an officer, the papers shall not be served. This woman was a priestess unto God, and like Queen Esther of old, she had gained favor with the King.

Gladstone went into the presence of Queen Victoria with a measure to be signed. The Queen refused. He insisted. Finally the Queen said, "Mr. Gladstone, you must not forget that I am the Queen of England." Mr. Gladstone sprang to his feet and said, "Your Majesty must not forget that I am the people of England, and I demand that you sign this." It was signed.

Let us find still another comparison. Shall we seek among the many big things of earth for our comparison? Let us lift the eyes of faith to the fourth Himalayan peak of Revelation, "to Him be glory and dominion forever and ever."

THE FUTURE INHERITANCE AND COMING GLORY OF OUR REDEMPTION.

Here is the vision that eclipses our wildest dreams—the coming reign of Jesus Christ, the faithful and his holy bride reigning with him, a joint heir with Jesus Christ. The heart glows with joy and anticipation when the telescope of our faith is lengthened out, and we contemplate that administration. We have read of the wise reign of Solomon, the imperial reign of Cæsar, the beneficent reign of Alfred the Great, the pious reign of Louis IX, the intellectual reign of Elizabeth, the moral and spiritual influence of Queen Victoria. But combine them all, and their glory is as moonbeams compared with the noon-day sun. He will put down all rule and all power, and the kingdoms of the world shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord Jesus Christ. It will be a reign of righteousness and true holiness, and the world will again blossom with pristine beauty and glory.

The prospects about us are not flattering. Sin abounds; the land is full of crime, cruelty and violence; the Gospel of life and salvation falls on deaf ears; we stretch out our hands and few men regard us. Yes, the hour is dark, but thank God, the darkest hour is just before the dawn. Let Satan do his worst; let him smother out the gospel light to the limit of his power, but the darkness is the foretoken of the eternal sunrise. But "His dominion shall be forever and ever." Earthly joys and glory are empty things, and perish with the using. Napoleon looked from St. Helena to his beloved France. "Yesterday," he declared, "all Europe was at my feet. Today my honor is lying at my feet like filthy rags."

When General Wolfe was taking his army the night before the battle of Quebec, where they scaled the Heights of Abraham, ready to attack the strong fortification of the French, sitting by the side of his aide as the two were silently coming down the river, General Wolfe said, "I am depressed tonight." The aide said, "Cheer up, General, you will capture Quebec tomorrow, and parliament will vote you a title." To this General Wolfe replied:

"To boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
All that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave Awaits alike the inevitable hour,
The path of glory leads but to the grave."

He captured Quebec, but lost his life.

What are the duties before us as we contemplate this glory. We must put the Coronation Hymn in our hearts today and wait till God's clock strikes twelve. We can afford to wait. By and by we shall no longer hear the wail of anguish follow the cry of bitterness and agony. Let us lift up our drooping hearts, strengthen our feeble knees, for our Redemption draweth nigh. Then we shall swell the chorus of joy, and me thinks we shall hear something like this: "Hallelujah! Hallelujah! for the Lord Omnipotent reigneth. Sorrow and sighing shall flee away on the wings of night, and the wicked shall cease from troubling and the weary shall be at rest."

"Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion forever and ever."

THE PREACHER'S AIM.

C. W. RUTH, EVANGELIST.

WE are persuaded there are many good preachers who fail in soul-winning simply because they take poor aim. The preacher who aims at nothing should not feel surprised when he hits it.

The marksman, however skillful, and well equipped, is certain to fail of success, whenever he fails to take correct aim. Much, very much—depends on the preacher's aim.

The man who simply preaches because it is his time, and his turn to preach and deals in glittering generalities, though he may be thoroughly orthodox, and say many good things, is not likely to succeed in soul-winning. Preaching in general, and generalizing in peaching, has never precipitated a revival. Of course he who simply aims at entertaining, or pleasing the people, and is content with "drawing his breath and drawing his salary" may feel that he has accomplished that which he aimed at. But we are disposed to believe that all true ministers of Jesus Christ will always desire to win souls for the kingdom; and when they fail in this they fail in the great objective of their ministry. While there are times when he feels called upon to "feed the flock," he nevertheless knows that unless there are some lambs born occasionally, there will soon be no flock to feed. His highest calling and chief joy is that of winning souls. Then why do so many good men, apparently fail, along this line? Many reasons might be given, but certainly all must agree that the fault is not in the gospel; for it is still "the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth." (Rom. 1:16.) We are inclined to believe that in many instances the failure is largely due to the faulty aims of the preacher.

We think some good men fail because they aim too high; that is to say, they aim at the head,—at the intellect, the reason and the judgment; but men who are successful soul winners invariably aim at the heart, and shoot to kill, and are not content with anything less than an unconditional surrender. Though the intellect is convinced, there can be no salvation until the conscience is aroused, and the will surrenders. Generally speaking, the people know enough to save them, and know better than they are doing, but the conscience is unreached, and therefore the will unyielded.

He who would see sinners convicted of sin, and converted to Christ, must take aim in that direction, and preach accordingly; that is to say, he must preach the kind of truth that is calculated to produce conviction, and thus constrain men to turn to Christ; in other words, the preacher must preach saving truth. While all truth may be indirectly essential, all truth is not directly essential to salvation; while all the preacher said, was truth, it was not saving truth.

Recently we heard a most eloquent address on Christian Education, delivered by the President of a college, who also is a minister of the gospel; all he said was true, and instructive, and entertaining, but no one said, "What must I do to be saved," and no one came forward to an altar of prayer, seeking the Lord; nor was it expected that any one would come, for such was not the aim of the preacher, nor the purpose of the discourse; hence no one was saved by that message; all he said was truth, but it was not saving truth.

Just so, if a minister would persuade men to seek the experience of entire sanctification; he must preach the truth which relates to this experience, and brings men to see the scripturalness, and the necessity of such an experience; an occasional reference to the subject in a general way, or the mention of the word sanctification, or holiness, in a discourse, is not likely to bring men to feel their need of such an experience, nor lead them to an intelligent seeking for the same.

We have heard evangelists preach on subjects entirely foreign to the doctrine of sanctification, with scarce a reference to this experience, and then invite people to come to the altar to seek sanctification; we felt like saying, "Brother, why not invite them to come forward to seek glorification?" for the people addressed knew just as much about glorification as they did about sanctification, and had doubtless felt their need of the one as much as they did of the other. The preacher may have said many good things, and doubtless meant all right, but certainly took poor aim while delivering his discourse. He should not feel disappointed if no one responds to his invitation, and no one obtains the experience.

Christ spake of his chosen ministers as "fishers of men;" and every skillful fisherman knows that much depends on how he baits his hook; and that different kinds of fish require different kinds of bait; hence he baits his hook according to the kind of fish he expects to catch. As Charles G. Finney was an expert fisherman, we are minded to insert his instructions, "How to preach without winning converts":

1. Let your supreme motive be popularity rather than salvation.

2. Study to please your congregation and to make a reputation, rather than to please God.

3. Take up popular, passing and sensational themes to draw the crowd, and avoid essential doctrines of salvation.

4. Denounce sin in the abstract but pass lightly over sins that prevail in your congregation.

5. If asked, "Is it wrong to dance, play cards, or attend the theater?" answer very pleasantly, "Oh, that is a matter for private judgment. It is not for me to say you shall or shall not."

6. Preach on the loveliness of virtue and the glory of heaven, but not on the sinfulness of sin and the terrors of hell.

7. Reprove the sins of the absent, but make those who are present pleased with themselves, so that they will enjoy the sermon and not go away with their feelings hurt.

8. Make the impression on worldly church members that God is too good to send any one to hell, even if there is any hell.

9. Preach the Universal Fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man so as to show that no second birth is really needed.

10. Do not rebuke the worldliness of the church, but fall in with the amusement policy. Instead of meeting for prayer, let the people "sit down to eat and drink and rise up to play."

11. Avoid seriousness, alarm and earnest efforts to pull sinners out of the fire, and the old-fashioned idea that the church is a rescue mission.

We feel certain that the preacher who follows the above instructions will need no mourner's bench in his church, and will not need to pray with weeping penitents; but oh, the tragedy of it all, when he meets lost souls at the Judgment who should have been saved under his ministry; and he himself empty-handed. "If the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned: if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity: but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand." Ezek. 33:6.

Dr. Ridout's Book, "The Beauty of Holiness"

This book has now been translated into Japanese and Chinese and is circulating throughout the Orient. "Beauty of Holiness" sets forth the fact that in real Bible holiness there are such beautiful things. This book is intended for holiness people, to help those who are in the experience of full salvation. It will make a beautiful gift book as well as a devotional book for God's children.

THE NEW ERA OF THE HOLINESS MOVEMENT.

Rev. Joseph Smith.

PERHAPS there is nothing more unique in Christianity than the Holiness Movement of our day. It is not a church and yet it has given origin to a half dozen churches, and a dozen more owe their type and character to its momentum. It is not a University, and yet a score of colleges and numerous schools have been propagated by it, and are in turn furthering it. It is not a general Missionary society, and yet there is now scarcely a missionary field in the world but where it pulsates and is represented. It has never had a bishop to control it, and yet it has probably a thousand evangelists in the field who are giving themselves wholly to the work of the ministry and who derive their support from it.

The Holiness Movement differs from various other propaganda in and about Christendom: From Federations and Associations which seek for amalgamation (under name of Christian unity, etc.), sometimes at the cost of considerable compromise or a flag of truce as to respective denominations. It is more like an atmosphere, permeating all religious bodies. Its chief effective quality is influence rather than organization. And what organizations do form in its trail, perish or petrify in the absence or dissipation of its influence.

It has persisted now for near a century, and about seventy-five years ago began to appear in literature, next in a quiet unassuming type of parlor evangelism, later in a committee of ministers, self-appointed, with a purpose to spread it. Then, in turn, it developed into a National Association, which became interdenominational in its character; and this has filled the land with camp meetings and revivals which seem to know neither sect, section, nor season. It has dotted the country with schools and colleges which, like light-houses, stand out against shore tides of modernism, lashing their waves against the good old Ship Zion. It produces ministers that remind men more of the New Testament type than do the usual seminary output. And it stimulates and sustains a ministry of truth divine beyond that which any ecclesiasticism (other than those of its own influence and type) assumes credit for or support of, and yet against which none can offer valid or Scriptural objection.

Its distinctiveness thus from a mere churchism, its difference from a mere unification propaganda, its superiority over anything merely educational, its insistence upon the highest type of character and conduct, and its general inducement of godliness and of zeal for the saving of the lost, and for the carrying of the gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth,—these things, we say, together with its repulsion of all sorts of fanaticism and its discouragement of censoriousness and criticism despite the many things in many of the churches which are to be deplored, stamps the movement as a ministry of the Holy Spirit meant to meet and solve the problems of the church in this age. And happy and favored are they who have come early under its influence and tide. It is like a warm gulf stream tempering the atmosphere of the zone or area wherever it passes.

A new development of the Holiness Movement is now in course of progress, and no one can estimate where probably it may go. Like a youth outgrown his boyhood knickers, some of us have seen for some time past that this movement had outgrown the organization which had done so much to extend it. Not that the bottles had grown old, nor that the wine had changed to something new—for from the first until now there has never been a scintillation of any change in this Holiness wine of the Kingdom, nor has the leathern bottle of simple testimony, preaching and evangelism, become old or out-of-date for its containment. But the vintage has become so large that the movement has far outgrown the association formed for its retention and extension. Its independent units throughout the land have needed and sought affiliation; and yet the aversion or conscientious scruples against anything like a new church or ecclesiastical unification has seemed to delay such affiliation. Not only this, but any such approach to organic control seemed to be thoroughly discouraged and opposed by the Spirit of the movement himself. The movement will never be a body but a spirit.

Many had looked forward to the recent annual meeting of the National Holiness Association; some with apprehension, more with hope. There really had been no ground for the apprehension of any change in the standards of the Holiness Movement, and but little for the fear of a complex organization that would assume control of its churches, schools, missions, evangelists and papers, though the memorandum sent out gave some to feel alarm on this very point. But there was the hope that the "National" would somehow adjust or expand itself to a relation to the whole movement so as to further all its interests, and that in every possible way, and to relate all the holiness people of the land—and all lands—in a family grouping without the forfeiture or submerging of the distinctive interests of either. Such seems soon to be realized by the unanimous action of the National Association.

Doubtless, messages from the President and others will make this plain. So we shall here simply state that the first action in the matter was to table the paper above referred to, and that without one word of debate. The delegates from all parts of the country had come together after much prayer and due deliberation, evidently convinced that said paper, while pure in its motive and animated by the holy conviction for a rejuvenation of the work of the Association, did not however express the mind of the Spirit on the matter. So this was tabled by an early and unanimous vote. Thus no change was made at all in the constitution of the "National," even as none had ever been dreamed of in its doctrinal standards or statement.

But after mature consideration, relying on the Spirit, a by-law was enacted that makes way for a Council of the Pentecostal number of one hundred and twenty to afford territorial, church, educational and evangelistic recognition to all units of the movement, and this without absorbing or ignoring any. The National is not to seek simply to build itself up, but to be under and back up the building up of every part and phase of the Holiness Movement. See!

Some of us were never so well pleased with the National as on this account, for now we can see, and say plainly that as a member of the same we are authorized and encouraged to labor in our ministry for the furtherance of holiness in our own church, and for the furtherance of the holiness work of every holiness church and mission in the land. Likewise as to schools and papers and preachers—all who serve the movement for the promotion of Scriptural Holiness—we are ready as ever before to serve.

Some of the results that will follow will be (1) an intermingling of all the holiness interests in general conventions, great camps, and various ministries for the spread of holiness beyond the borders of either of these, and without inter-meddling with the individual organization or interests of any. (2). An interchange and fellowship of evangelists and other preachers of the various holiness churches in this interdenominational movement without either prejudice or partiality towards either of the churches they represent. (3). A united effort on the part of all holiness people to stem the tides of infidelity that beset the schools of our churches and the seminaries of our preachers; and to further and sustain such schools and colleges throughout the land as are under the influence of the Holiness Movement, whether they be schools of our own churches or not. (4) To keep evangelism so well to the front that there shall continue to develop a still higher and more competent race of Holy Ghost preachers that will be capable of meeting the crisis of the home land and of aiding the evangelism of holiness by the various foreign missions that stand for the same. (5). An increased dedication of tithes and offerings to the work of spreading holiness thus, even at a greater sacrifice to ourselves, and a lesser subscription to such of the drives in our respective churches as may foster opposition to or neglect of holiness rather than its promotion.

The progress of the Holiness Movement in the past generation has been such that we find ourselves unable to even estimate what this new era may mean for the rising generation. Only this, we are sure of the Captain of the Lord's Hosts who appeared by Jericho to Joshua has appeared unto us; and bids us "Go forward!"

My Answer to Mother.

REV. ROBERT L. SELLE, D. D.

If I could see my mother now,
Aglow with heaven's light and love,
Forever free from want and care,
In heaven, her happy home above—
I'd tell her I am coming on.

If I could see my mother's smile
And beck'ning hands stretched out towards me,
And hear her call, "Come on my child;
I'm waiting here in heaven for thee,"
I'd tell her I am coming on.

If I could hear my mother sing
The song of Moses and the Lamb,
So rich, so sweet, so full of praise,
With angel choir at God's right hand—
I'd tell her I am coming on.

If I could see my mother now
With crown of glory on her head,
Amid the throng of white robed saints,
Where all desire with love is fed,—
I'd tell her I am coming on.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

TENT MEETINGS IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Just a line to let you know how one of your gospel tents is progressing in the great state of North Dakota. Our party consists of Rev. Chas. W. Grant, evangelist; Rev. Virgil Sibera, singer; Mrs. Chas. W. Grant, pianist and special worker for children. We are preaching under the supervision of Dr. G. LeRoy White, D.S., of Bismarck District.

Our first meeting was in Moffit, N. D., June 15-24. Started in the tent but it was blown down several times by the famous Western winds and it was necessary to conclude in church. God certainly gave us a sweeping revival. Many were definitely touched by him.

The next night, June 25, we started in Sanger, N. D. There was no church in this community, and worse still, not one professing Christian. Here we had some few definitely blessed; closed in Sanger July 7th.

The next night, July 8th, we started in Grassy Butte, and continued for only a week, closing the 14th. Grassy Butte is only a small place but we had splendid crowds—people driving for miles to hear the glorious gospel. The last Sunday was a great one; three services and God doing great work in each. A splendid revival and an unusually fine remuneration for such a small place. Thanks to the faithful pastor, Mrs. Nellie Cook.

July 15th, we started our fourth campaign in Bowman, N. D. It is in the extreme Southwest corner of the State. Our crowds were fine. Some folk from South Dakota came. I believe I have never witnessed a greater outpouring of the Holy Spirit in an ordinary church revival than the one at Bowman. Three services on the last Sunday. Many sought pardon and purity. In the afternoon eighteen young people consecrated their lives to God. Praise God for such great victory. The days of great revivals are not past. Prayer brings the victory. We certainly appreciate the use of the tent. Continue to pray for us.
Chas. W. Grant.

GRACIOUS MEETING AT BENNETTSTVILLE.

The First Methodist Church at Bennettsville, S. C., has recently had a gracious spiritual refreshing in a two weeks' meeting conducted by Doctor Luther Bridgers, of Gainesville, Ga., and his singer, Rev. Homer S. Jenkins, of Atlanta, Ga. Our church has a large membership, is splendidly equipped and organized, and making rapid progress in a material sense, but the hearts of the pastor and earnest members felt the deep need of increasing the spiritual forces of the church, and this blessed work can be accomplished only by an outpouring of the Holy Spirit. My heart rejoices to say that God did honor the Word in a most wonderful manner, and the Holy Spirit was graciously poured out upon our people.

This was Brother Bridgers' first visit among us, but his beautiful Christian personality soon won every heart. As, no doubt, the readers of The Herald know, he has been down in the deep valley of the shadow, but I know he met the Christ there in a very definite way, because he came up out of the valley with even greater power and a halo of glory that proclaimed to the world that he has indeed been with Jesus. Brother Bridgers' sermons were wonderful expositions of Bible truths, heart-searching messages, so deeply impregnated with the Holy Ghost that they gripped the very souls of his hearers. The morning sermons were directed especially to the church, based upon Methodism's foundation, Christian Perfection, and my heart was thrilled to know that Brother Bridgers is standing absolutely true to the John Wesley doctrine of scriptural holiness. Our church has been revived as it had not been in many years. It was a beautiful sight to see the altar filled on several occasions, and the beaming countenances of those who "sought and found" was enough to cause rejoicing in heaven. Truly the days of revivals are not passed, as some "modern thinkers" would have us believe, but when the church meets conditions God will surely answer, pouring out his blessing according to the measure of our faith. We do thank God for what has been wrought and earnestly pray that the revival fires may continue to brightly burn. God's Word when delivered in all its power and sweetness never fails to bring forth abundant fruit. I have never seen a more beautifully consecrated servant to carry the Master's life-giving message to a dying world than Brother Bridgers. He is absolutely orthodox, free from that sensationalism that sometimes hinders the real work of the Holy Spirit, yet filled with the Spirit controlled and electrified by the Holy Ghost whose marvelous blessing is upon his ministry. His solo each morning, just before the sermon, was a very impressive part of the service, as they were truly a gospel message in song.

Great congregations attended the services; frequently the large auditorium was taxed to its capacity, with chairs placed in the aisles. It was inspiring to have in the congregation day after day numerous preachers from other towns who came to hear this godly man unfold the Scriptures. I must mention the loyal co-operation of other denominations in town, particularly the Presbyterian, whose pastor, Rev. J. S. Garner, was one of the most faithful attendants.

Homer S. Jenkins, who led the singing, did it most acceptably. He and Brother Bridgers made many friends during their stay here who will welcome them again.

God bless Brother Bridgers! Bless him more and more wonderfully as he goes onward proclaiming the wondrous story of Jesus and his loved. That he may come back to our town for another meeting is the prayer of innumerable hearts.

Kate Gibson.

BROTHER WILEY'S LETTER.

Leaving Yata we passed over the Andes on the way to Patches riding over miles of great table-land, pampa swept by the cold winds of the great Western Cordill. As we rode across the barren lands of the alturas here and there we met a lone Indian keeping watch over his flock of sheep or horses. Suddenly the most beautiful vista of all burst upon our sight. Mt. Raymundi, one of the largest peaks of the Andes, glistening like an immense diamond in the sunlight thirty miles away. Around it a snow storm was raging. At twelve-thirty we suddenly came out upon a great lip of a mountain and saw scattered along a great canyon the hanging gardens of the Incas buried in cloud mists while as far as the eye could see were the mud walled villages fading into clusters of spots. The whole mountain side looked like a crazy quilt hanging out in the sun to dry. Directly below us lay the pueblo of patches, the church and the court yard gleaming white in the sunlight while the river wended its way like a great silver snake through the village. We were nearly an hour reaching the plaza from the pass. On reaching the village we inquired for the friend to whom we were going, La Fuente, we found him an excellent chap indeed, one who would make a fine Christian. Fuente entertained us in his home and did all in his power to make the meeting a success. The school building was chosen as a place of meeting. When we arrived, the place was literally packed with Indians. The priest rang the bells against us but there was no response from the people so in desperation he said, "Go sin if you will."

The following morning we said goodbye to La Fuente and headed for the village of La Union. Arriving at about noon we were welcomed by a young Judge who treated us with the utmost courtesy, giving us his time. He led us around town, introducing us to the leading citizens. The Mayor, the Editor and the Judge were some of the most progressive, liberal and intelligent of all the men we had as yet met on our trip. We also met a young army captain who in his travels had come in touch with the evangelists and was a diligent reader of the Bible and very proud to let the world know that he was the owner of such a book. This chap was imprisoned for four days when stationed on the coast, for letting the Protestants preach to the soldiers.

We hope to make La Union the center of a real work in the valley. Having that town as the center we can ride out to the surrounding pueblos holding a week's meeting at each town, making the circuit within a couple months then returning for a rest at La Union. The climate at La Union is ideal, the streets of the city are wide and clean, clear, pure water runs down from the mountain while a half league from the town there is a hot mineral spring. Then, too, living in the town is very cheap, but, best of all, it is geographically the center of the whole valley. We shall never forget the meeting in La Union that night. The court of the hotel was packed while we had two soldiers standing guard over us. The judge introduced the speaker, pouring out a stream of language in denunciation of the old regime of error and bondage and exalting the things for which the evangelists stood. When he finished speaking the crowd clapped their hands rously. After the service Brother Stiner and I gave out tracts. Women and children with hands uplifted cried and pushed toward us until the soldiers had to come to our help, breaking up the press. After getting out of the press at La Union, I trembled like a leaf in the wind. It was heart-breaking to realize here were people greedy for a tract to read a portion of the Word of God while in the homeland thousands were pressing their way into the highways of sin, madly seeking hell born things. Here there is none to tell the story of a Saviour's love until we struggle through the months mastering the language in order to tell the story straight.

DAYTON, OHIO.

While the Dayton, Ohio, camp meeting fostered by the Miami Valley Holiness Association is now a matter of history, it will long linger amidst the pleasant memories of the past in the minds of those who had the pleasure of being in it and enjoy the stately steppings of the Holy Ghost, the insweeps from the skies and the varied order and turn of things from day to day.

The camp was held on a newly purchased plot of ground located in a thirty-acre tract joining the city corporation line and wonderful woods of large forest trees known as McCab's Park, which the campers had the privilege to enjoy and conduct open air service. It is also only one half mile from the National Military Home of Dayton, Ohio. The city street cars pass immediately in front of the ground making it very convenient for the Dayton people to attend. The attendance on Sundays and evening services during the week was good. A most wonderful spirit of unity and love predominated from the very beginning to the close of the camp which was commented upon frequently by the evangelists and the people. All seemed delighted with the new proposition for a permanent camp meeting ground, the location and outlook for the future. The common expression heard over the ground was, "I am sure God led the association to this place," and very similar remarks.

It was truly the people's camp. A test was made as to how many different denominations and missions were represented in the camp at one service, and hands were lifted representing every one that we could think of, and still other hands were lifted indicating the name of their denomination had not been called, and yet we all sang, prayed and testified as if we were members of a single church. About twenty-five applications were received for membership in the association.

Rev. H. M. Mitzger, superintendent of the Ohio District of the Mennonite Church, preached the first message to the camp on Friday afternoon. Rev. P. F. Elliott, of Owasso, Mich., did all the night preaching and his messages were invariably followed by a number of seekers at the mourner's bench, the most at a single service being seventeen the first Sunday night. Rev. Harry Hays, superintendent of the Ohio District of the Pilgrim Holiness Church, preached twice the first Sunday. Rev. Paul Elliott preached twice and Rev. James Siders preached at other afternoon services including the last Sunday; souls sought and found God in the afternoon service.

Rev. A. H. Johnston, of Akron, Ohio, had charge of the singing and did his part splendidly. On account of Sister Johnston being sick in the hospital she was not at the camp. We all missed her, but Bro. Johnston carried us victoriously along and the singing and preaching were in keeping with the excellent atmosphere that obtained throughout the camp. Conviction settled upon the people and there was exceptional good altar work and the result was that many prayed through to victory and liberty and gave definite testimony to an experience wrought in their hearts by the Holy Ghost.

Brother and Sister Hays, Brother and Sister J. D. Shell, and Rev. Arthur Linn, the golden tenor singer, were among those who sang special messages in our camp. A vacant five-room house near the camp was turned over to us, gratis, and fitted out with cots for sleeping quarters; other furnished rooms were secured and dormitory cots furnished in the building on the grounds. The cook also came in for compliments. After a man had been told the price of his meal was twenty-five cents he said it was worth fifty; others made kindred remarks.

The offerings were good. Aside from the expense of the camp, it was shown that an additional piece of ground would be very beneficial to the camp and more than $1600 in cash and pledges were received to use for camp expenses and the further purchase of ground or improvement as the camp should see best.

The Association is greatly encouraged and looking forward to bigger and better things.

J. L. Kennett, President.

IRON MOUNTAIN, MICHIGAN.

The second annual camp meeting of the Upper Peninsula Holiness Association was held in Iron Mountain, July 12-21. The camp was under the supervision of the Michigan Association for the Promotion of Holiness. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. Joseph Dutton, District Superintendent of the Marquette District. Rev. L. M. Blakely, of Detroit, and Rev. Anna L. Spann, of University Park, Iowa, were the camp preachers. Mrs. H. Heneks of Detroit had charge of the music. Mr. Heneks presided at the book store. Bro. Blakely is not new at this camp, having preached here last year, consequently those who love to hear preaching on the Spirit-filled life came from far and near and they were not disappointed.

Sister Spann is a member of the Friends Church and was new among us, but by her kindly spirit and clear-cut presentation of Scriptural Holiness soon won our hearts. From these preachers we had great messages on the Holy Way.

One of the most encouraging things of the camp was the fine co-operation of local churches and pastors. Baptists, Swedish Mission, Salvation Army, and Methodists seemed to mingle until one felt that the Lord's prayer of John 17 was answered. Over 100 souls knelt as seekers either for pardon or purity.
P. P. Dirksen, Sec.

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

The Church as a Preacher Sees It

The above is the title of a booklet written by Rev. James H. Hervey, D.D., of Springfield, Mo. He treats the subject from an unbiased standpoint, and suggest the remedy for its defects. It closes with a Mother's Day sermon, which is worth the price of the booklet. Any one interested in this subject and desires a copy of the booklet of 32 pages, may send 20 cents to The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., or James W. Hervey, 1610 N. come a haphazard and unregulated situation. We are powerfully influenced by fear, which is a constant guard against the reckless ignoring of natural laws that govern every phase of practical living in this world.

No one can read the Bible thoughtfully without discovering at once that the compassionate God, who has given us this Book, seeks again and again to impress upon us the danger of wickedness, the fearful consequences of sin, the sure and awful outcome of unrighteous living. One finds directly in searching the Scriptures that they were written to emphasize the fearful fact that "the wages of sin is death." That we must "flee the wrath to come" in repentance for our sins and the seeking of salvation through the atonement made by the Lord Jesus.

One reason why sin and crime abound on every hand is the fact that those inclined to criminal action have lost the sense of fear. They believe they can commit almost any crime, and that shrewd lawyers, corrupt judges, and purchased jurors can secure them against punishment. They are not afraid to murder, burn, destroy, seduce, violate all the laws that are supposed to protect society. You let the criminally inclined feel quite sure, "If I should kill my enemy I shall certainly go to the electric chair." Such conviction would have a very cooling effect upon a hot anger. You let the bootlegger believe, "If I make and sell this liquor my property will be confiscated; the fine assessed will bankrupt me, and I shall wear stripes and sweat at hard labor in a penitentiary," and he will not take the risk.

The fact has been demonstrated that if laws are promptly enforced and criminals are adequately punished with promptness and severity, crime decreases. Our country is being over-run with criminals because there is comparatively little fear of punishment. Some way is found for the violators of the law to escape prompt and severe punishment, therefore, lawlessness abounds, criminals laugh in the face of a supposed justice that lets them go free of punishment for their crime.

This country needs the thrill of an intelligent, holy fear of punishment for wrongdoing. The preachers of our land ought to so earnestly preach the teachings of the Scriptures on punishment for sin, that the whole conscience of the nation will be awakened, aroused, and that men, everywhere, would come to realize that there is a coming day of judgment, when every hidden thing will be brought under the white light of eternal justice.

I am not quoting the sayings of our Saviour with reference to the future state of the wicked. They are fearful and well known to every Bible reader. Pits of fire, fire and brimstone, lakes of fire—the strongest words that can be used; weeping, wailing, gnashing of teeth, outer darkness, bound hand and foot, everlasting contempt, smoke of torment. The earnest, honest preacher will have no trouble to find a text in order to preach a sermon on the future punishment of the wicked that ought to put saint and sinner to most serious thought and earnest action; the sinner to repentance, and the saint to zealous action to rescue the perishing.

Let the minister preach on the Future Punishment of the Wicked and use the plain language of our Lord and at once he is asked if he believes in a literal hell, literal fire, etc. This need not embarrass the honest preacher for a moment; he can readily reply, "these are the words of our Lord Jesus Christ. He knew the facts. If he used figures of speech they certainly did not exaggerate the facts. Our Lord was, and is, incapable of exaggeration. To have used figures which exaggerate the facts, as they actually exist would make our Lord guilty of misrepresentation, of falsehood."

The thought is impossible! When Jesus spoke of the future punishment of the wicked, he spoke awful truth, and the preacher who lets the people go without faithful and earnest warning on this subject is guilty of criminal neglect, and doubtless God will call him to account. The man in the pulpit must be faithful to Christ and the people in his message, and the man who fails to warn the people that, if they live in their sins and die in their sins, they will go into an awful hell of torment, is unfaithful to the God who called him to preach, and the people who wait upon his ministry and furnish his support.

This subject is not for a tirade of ranting, but it does call for earnest preaching, for clear statements, for logical argument, for powerful appeal, for repeated message, for a declaration of Bible truth that will awaken guilty sinners to a sense of their danger. Many of us are quite ready to condemn infidels, skeptics, and modernists who deny the inspiration of the Bible, and yet we let the time go by and neglect many great teachings of the Bible; important doctrines are not mentioned by us. We are shy of adverse criticism. We fear the condemnation of the people who are asleep and do not want to be aroused. We may grant that the Bible is inspired, but lack the courage to bring to the people under our ministry the vital doctrines of the Bible.

If the preachers of the Protestant churches of these United States would, for several Sunday mornings, bring to their congregations earnest Bible sermons on the future punishment of the wicked it would cause much discussion; it would have a powerful awakening effect upon Christians and sinners. It would stir up the church to hold revivals for the saving of the lost. It would bring many tens of thousands of sinners to repentance and saving faith in the Lord Jesus. Would God our preachers would get burdened and busy with a mighty message and warning plainly written in the Holy Scriptures which would lead vast multitudes to seek our blessed Saviour for the salvation of their souls.

"Thou art with me I know,

I feel the sweet flow

Of the sin cleansing wave's gladd'ning tide.

I am washed from my sin,

Made all holy within,

And in Jesus sweetly abide."

Central Holiness Camp Meeting.

CENTRAL Holiness Camp Meeting opened July 25 and closed August 4. Brother C. F. Wimberly was on the grounds from the beginning and Brother Ruth got to us on Monday night, after the first Sabbath. Brother and Sister Wells, of Upland, Ind., for the first time, had charge of our singing and the people were greatly pleased, both with them and their services. They are not only fine singers, but their lives of devotion and their testimony are of real value in any meeting in which they serve.

Mrs. S. C. Box, with her husband, had charge of the young people's and children's meetings, and did fine work. They are delightful people. Their presence and joyful witnessing for Christ is a most excellent spiritual tonic and inspiration in any meeting in which they are engaged. There were many comments on the excellent preaching by Brothers Wimberly and Ruth. Several of the local brethren were pressed into service before Brother Ruth arrived and were blessed of the Lord in their ministry.

I had no thought that I would be able to attend the camp meeting. I had been at home from the hospital some days and was improving, and when I found one of my physicians was going up for the closing days of the camp I insisted that I did not want to be so far from him, so wife and I went up on Friday afternoon, expecting to be a surprise to the friends on the camp ground. They received us very gladly, but we failed to surprise them and found that they had been praying that I might be able to come up for the close, and that I should come on Friday.

After eight months shut out almost entirely from much service of any kind, and almost from revival meetings, it was a great blessing and privilege to get into the camp meeting atmosphere. I found the most beautiful harmony and Christian love among the people. They were talking about how graciously the spirit of love and fellowship had been with them all the time.

On the closing Sabbath morning Brother Ruth preached from the text, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." His sermon was a great exposition of a great saying of our Lord. It was indeed the bread of life broken with remarkable skill and unction to the multitude. I shall endeavor to get Brother Ruth to publish this sermon in a booklet. It should, by all means, be in print.

Brother Wimberly's sermon to a multitude on Sunday afternoon, on "Radio in Prophecy," ought also to be printed in pamphlet form. It would have a large circulation and be read with great interest.

My health would not permit my attending the evening services, but we heard good reports of the closing night service, with some twenty people at the altar of prayer, and many salvations. The collections came along nicely and the brethren were able to meet the expenses of the camp.

We are profoundly grateful to Brothers O. C. Garvey and F. W. Rice, two of the substantial citizens of Wilmore, for the new young people's auditorium. It is a beautiful structure. These brethren who have meant so much to our camp meeting, looked personally after the erection of the building which was put up by our beloved Brother Hopper, who erected the great auditorium many years ago. At last report there was only a small amount unpaid on this new auditorium for young people.

As usual, the dining room was under the management of the W. C. T. U. women of Wilmore. I doubt if a finer group of Christian women can be found anywhere than this consecrated sisterhood. Mrs. L. L. Pickett, wife of that faithful old warrior, is the State President of the W. C. T. U. and lives in Wilmore. They employ excellent colored people to do the cooking, and this group of consecrated and refined women of the various churches in Wilmore, wait upon the tables. They make meal time a real pleasure, both with the excellence of the food and the Christian grace with which it is served.

There is a great band of praying women in Wilmore. When Dr. Akers became president of Asbury College I said to him, that this group of praying women who meet together often from house to house in prayer meetings, were a source of courage and comfort to my heart through the years I was president of Asbury College.

I was thankful to God to find that the outlook for the coming year at Asbury College is most encouraging. More students were signed up July 1 this year than were signed up the first of September last year. In my travels and correspondence I find that the influence of this school is spreading abroad, and the great work God is doing through this instrumentality is making a powerful impression.

Wife and I remained at Wilmore a while Monday morning and I found the brethren with great faith and hope for next year's camp meeting. I never saw them more cheerful and encouraged for enlargement and greater things for God and humanity than they are now. We had visitors from many states and our desire and prayer and belief is for better things next year. There were 107 ministers of the gospel present at the camp this year. May God bless, enlarge their faith and zeal and fruitfulness, for all time to come. The trip really seemed to do me good physically. It certainly was a spiritual help, for which we thank God and take courage. My strength comes back slowly, but we are hoping and praying that if it is the Master's will I may yet be able to render some service in the great white harvest field of human souls.

Your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

In the Home of the Black Man.

G. ARNOLD HODGIN.

AFRICA is primarily and consistently, the home of the black man. This has never, from the earliest times, been successfully disputed. From the fact, however, that no nation has any inherent right to exclude other peoples from its shores, so long as they do not violate the best interest of their fellow habitants, the white man, may be said to occupy something of the same position in Africa as the black or brown man does in America. The American negro has rights. None of us may dispute it. He is with us and certain things may not be denied him. Among these may be catalogued his opportunity to create a home and dwell therein, in safety within our borders. He also may and does have a voice, by ballot, in our government policies. But he is made to remember that the country is the peculiar possession of the white man, and that for reasons which need not now be given. Just so; the black man lays just claim to that portion of Africa, north, south, east, and west, where the Bantu tribes speak their dialects. However, and wherever the Caucasian may enter in, build his home, and dwell therein, he must remember that he is building his "home in the nests of other birds." He is in another man's land. The lethargic and artless native, with the advance of civilization, is awaking to these things, and also to his own power and position. The rapidity with which he is being recast into a new mental and social mold, is a source of alarm to the greedy settler, and a surprise to all. No longer, may it be said that they only who have been christianized by the missionary, are donning the habiliments of the European or American. There are those who dress and make an attempt to beautify their huts, from no other motive than for social elevation. Young men are eager to learn the trades, to make money, and shine in their surroundings.

It might be stated, and that with all truthfulness, that the social status of the man of Africa, is that of the woman, for she has never yet risen above the level of her lord. How long this will continue is a matter of grave conjecture. Christian civilization has always emancipated and elevated woman. No nation is nearer Christ and Christianity than are its women to their proper place in society and the home. Where there are abuses like plurality of wives and disregard of the holiness of motherhood, the race will remain degraded and debauched. The coming of Christ to either individual or nation must mean the lifting of woman to her rightful sphere. In Africa, the women in general, have been so long degraded and held as nothing more than chattel, being sold to this day for so many cattle; the hope seems to be in getting the men to see the light and cease beating them down and making them the drudge, and be slaves and playthings of their passions. Since the girls are sold for something like ten head of cattle, whether they are Christians or not, and since a widow is the common property of all the men of the neighborhood, the task is little less than hopeless unless the men are changed in their attitude. The girl of the heathen father may run away, but she will probably be apprehended and brought back to marry the man who pays the cattle for her. And the police have, as a part of their duty, the arrest and return of the runaway. The English Government seems thus far to be helpless in the matter in some quarters at least, for the selling and plurality of wives go on all the while. It is a fact that in Swaziland which is mandated territory and certain other parts, the European law prevails and a woman may be made to mind her father in everything except the matter of whom she desires to marry. It is not so everywhere, however, and it is not an uncommon thing for a heathen father to sell his daughter for ten head of cattle, to a husband who is worse than a beast, and the girl a Christian. In an industrial school where we visited and preached to close to half a hundred young women and had the joy of seeing a number of them find God, and even some profess the grace of entire sanctification, we were horrified to find later that part of them were already sold and must sooner or later go to the homes of their future husbands, and share a heathen crawl with other wives.

These things are not only put in our ears by the word of those who have long dwelt here, the observer may see for himself, for they are all around us.

But the question arises, is it not a hopeless task? To be sure the darkness is deep, and the impact of the forces of civilization has made little more than an indentation upon the stubborn mass of superstition, and heathenism in general, but the strokes are regular, and the progress is increasing its strides, though the task seems so colossal as to be hopeless.

Now this other question arises, what shall we, as ambassadors for Christ do? Are these shifting social positions to mean naught to us? In the first place one thing is evident to those who meet and minister to the native in his hut or compound; and that is, that with all his awakening desire for a place and a chance in the world, the African has the age old and universal hunger for God and heart peace. Especially is this true where he has not been spoiled by some false religion or cult. When the gospel is preached in love and power, men, spite of their sin, want deliverance and a rest from the weary grind of a Christless life. There is something deep down in the human heart, which, even among the heathen, longs for expression, for the operation of God's quickening power, for a riddance of the cancer of guilt and pollution.

Again: there is a golden opportunity for the gospel preacher. It is folly to suppose that there is nothing to do, when one cannot speak the language. There are splendid interpreters to be had everywhere, and one may go among the native Kraals and compounds and get the gospel to men and women by the thousands. We mentioned compounds. There are no less than 300,000 young men from all over Africa who are employed by the great gold mine companies which take millions annually from those mines along what is known as the Rand in the neighborhood of Johannesburg; and who are housed in compounds which accommodate something around 3,000 each. Here the gospel preacher has a rich opportunity to go and preach either in the open or in the rooms of these men. It was our privilege to go to one compound and stand on a table and make proclamation of full salvation truth, with men seeking God at the close of the service. We also spoke in one of the many missions which are located just near the compounds. This one was crowded to the doors, and when the message was given, there was a rush for the altar and many confessed and prayed till peace came. We have not seen a finer altar service in the states than that one. Some confessions were startling, but the men were wrought upon by the Holy Ghost and felt that they must find peace. God gave it and we rejoiced together.

And so we conclude that the thing for us to do is just what should be done the world over; get the gospel of full salvation to these men of Africa. There is a hunger for and a response to truth. Everywhere we have gone in the last two months, there is an eagerness on the part of the native to hear the simple old-fashioned gospel, with its appeal to the unrestful heart, and its promise of peace and joy. We believe the time is ripe for a great movement in the homeland, not to send pedantic preachers here with cold forms and hollow ceremonies, but to send an army of men filled with the Holy Ghost and faith to tell under the anointing of the Spirit of the way of the cross, the power of Christ's blood, the path of repentance, the witness of the Spirit, and of the blessing of entire sanctification, through the baptism with the Holy Ghost and fire.

Cults and heretics are everywhere in this land. They are not careless nor indolent. Let us take warning, lest we miss our chance to save men and they go down through the channel of some false religion.

Collapse of Evolution.

This book has been on sale for some time. It was written by Prof. L. D. Townsend, D.D., S.T.D., M.V.I. Dr. Townsend was a profound scholar and he went deep into the subject of Evolution. He has produced a little volume of 125 pages of clear, reasonable, powerful argument and proof against the whole theory of Evolution. It should be in the home and read by the people all over this nation.

It is well understood that the prominent evolutionists have been infidels, or at least, skeptics. No modern theory introduced among men has had such tendency to destroy the faith of the people in the inspiration of the Scriptures, in fact, in the existence of God, as has Evolution. It undertakes to account for the universe, as we find it, without an intelligent, personal Creator. This book by Dr. Townsend is invaluable. We wish THE HERALD readers would buy it, read it, circulate it, advertise it, broadcast it, and help to save the young people of the rising generation from the blight of the infidelity that is being produced throughout the land by the teaching of Evolution. The book may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for $1.00.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

TIRED OF BEING GOOD.

Once there was a good little girl and everybody loved her. She knew how to smile—a big, happy smile, that made her face look like the pretty fields when the sun is shining, and she was always singing, even when she washed the dishes for mother.

All the children at school liked Eleanore—not because she was clever and helped them with their lessons, but because she was always so happy and so good.

Teacher never had to keep Eleanore in after school, and scarcely ever had to call her name for speaking when she was not supposed to speak, or giggling like some little boys and girls did when they should have been studying.

You can imagine, then, how very sad and surprised everyone felt when one day Eleanore came to school without a sign of a smile on her face.

She banged her books on the desk, and sat herself down with more noise than was needed. She refused to smile at the girl beside her who was smiling at her. She drew on a piece of paper when teacher was talking to the class. She pulled the curls of the girl in the seat ahead, and when asked to recite she plainly showed that she had not studied her lesson.

Of course teacher was shocked, when she told Eleanore to write a word on the blackboard, and Eleanore hung her head and refused to come. Teacher did not argue, but for the very first time since Eleanore had been in her class, she had to keep her in after school.

Teacher, of course, talked gently to the little girl, and asked her what had made her act so different to her usual self, and what do you think Eleanore said? She said: "Well, I'm tired of being good; because you like the little boys and girls just as well, who are not good, and you never like me any better."

Teacher laughed just a little bit, but she looked sad. "Why, Eleanore," she said, "I always thought you were good because you loved me, and did not want to give me trouble, and not because you wanted any sort of reward."

I need not tell you that after a little talk with teacher Eleanore was her own bright self again, for you see she really did love her teacher.

Eleanore is just like some other little boys and girls who get tired of being good because no one seems to notice or reward them. But remember this, boys and girls, that we should try to be good because we love Jesus and do not want to grieve him, and not because we think he will love us better than other little lads and lassies. And we must never do right because we want a reward, but because we love the right and hate all evil.—Young Soldier.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please slip over a wee, wee bit and let an Alabama girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years of age, and was promoted to the fourth grade in school. I am not a member of the church but I would like to be, so I want all the cousins to pray for me that I may be a Christian. My birthday is August 6. I was ten years young. I have one sister who has a birthday in August. She will be thirteen the day I am ten. I have a brother that has a birthday August 8, so you see our birthdays are pretty close together. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with G and ends with L, and has seven letters in it. The one that can guess my name first I will write to them. I hope Mr. Waste Basket is out when this letter arrives.

Flora G. Jean.
Blountsville, Ala., Rt. 2.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little married girl join your happy circle? I have dark brown hair, curly, gray eyes, am twenty-two years of age, five feet, two inches tall, and weigh one hundred and twenty-six pounds. My husband subscribed for the dear old Herald a few months ago.

We sure do enjoy reading it. Aunt Bettie, your piece on Prayer was so good; you are right, if Satan can keep us Christians off our knees he is fixed. But oh, what would life be without prayer? When everything is wrong just to pray helps so much, and God seems so much nearer when we really pray. Pray, boys and girls, that many may be saved before it is too late. I have been married six years. My husband was converted two years ago this summer. He has been called to preach the gospel. He is twenty-five years of age; he is in school now. He preaches twice a month. We have a little daughter we love so much. I will send a picture of her and myself to the one who will guess her name. It begins with E and ends with E, and has six letters in it. She is three years of age.

Mrs. Fred Sartain.
Dennis, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I just wonder if you and the cousins will move over a wee bit and let me have a little room? I am a little girl from Alabama, and I surely do enjoy reading The Herald, especially page ten. I have three brothers and five sisters, so you see there is quite a large family of us. My oldest brother is a minister. I have one brother and one sister married. I am a member of the Baptist Church, but I go to Sunday school at the Nazarene Church. I sure do enjoy going to Sunday school. I was thirteen years old August 6. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with K and ends with E, and has four letters in it.

Willie K. Jean.
Rt. 2, Blountsville, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wonder if you would mind to give a Virginian a place in The Herald? This is my first attempt to join your happy band, and I do hope you and the cousins are enjoying the richest blessings of life. I always look forward to the coming of The Herald with pleasure, and enjoy reading it very much. I wonder if there is a good Christian lady who would like to have a home with a good family; if so, please write me. I would like a middle-aged lady or one around sixty years of age. I would be glad to hear from some one. Please write me, Box 131, Clifton Forge, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wrote to The Herald about two years ago and saw my letter in print. Alice Quinter, I guess your name to be Virginia. I am ten years old, weigh sixty-two pounds and am four feet and two inches tall. Have light brown hair, blue eyes and have fair complexion. Have I a twin? If so please write to me. I have three Christian names. One begins with M and ends with T, and has eight letters in it; the other begins with E and ends with Y, and has five letters in it. Whoever guesses either of my names I will write to them. Please pray for my mother that she may get well. Thank you, Aunt Bettie, for printing my first letter.

Ruth Berkley.
Spring Lick, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We just finished reading page ten, so thought we would write. We are two girls, age fourteen. I, Anna, am five feet two and one-half inches tall and weigh one hundred and sixteen pounds. Have dark complexion, brown eyes and brown hair, bobbed. I, Ila, am five feet and two inches tall, and weigh ninety-seven pounds. Have medium complexion, gray eyes and dark brown hair, long curls. We both belong to the Baptist Church. Guess we had better hurry on before Mr. W. B. comes.

Anna Vetter, Ila Maris.
Bassett, Neb.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second letter to The Herald. I received many nice interesting letters from the cousins. I still love to read the letters and would like to hear from more of you. I am a girl of thirteen, with blue eyes and black hair, have fair complexion set off with a few freckles. There, I hope you all will like me. I go to school at Beulah Junior High, and am in the seventh grade. I attend church and Sunday school at Pleasant Grove Methodist Protestant every Sunday. We have a fine Sunday school for a country church. I am going to ask a few Bible questions. What king slept on an iron bed? Who did God call his wash pot? I will not take up any more of your space.

Minnie Allgood.
Draketown, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Nebraska girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eleven years old and am in the sixth grade. I have brown hair and large brown eyes. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I was awarded a Bible by my teacher last Sunday for having my lessons good, and a pin from the Sunday school for perfect attendance. My grandfather is a Methodist minister, and he sends us The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. This is my first letter and I hope to see it in print.

Lee Maynard.
Nebraska City, Neb.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Texas girl join your family circle? I am thirteen years old and in the seventh grade. I was thirteen September 27, 1929. I have dark hair, blue eyes and am five feet, two inches tall. I belong to the Methodist Church at Daisetta and go to Sunday school every Sunday. I, Elizabeth Deem, I guess your name to be Ida Elizabeth. Am I right? My name is Katie A. Thomas. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with A and ends with E, and has five letters in it. Any one that can guess my name I will send them my picture. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print.

Katie A. Thomas.
Daisetta, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a boy twelve years old and I wish very much to join your happy circle of little boys and girls. I am about five feet high and have brown eyes and brown hair. My birthday is August 18. I like to read the articles in The Herald and my father likes to read it too. When it is raining he sometimes stays home and reads The Herald, especially page ten, to us. I have one brother and two sisters. I go to school and Sunday school every day I can. Our preacher's name is Bledsoe. I go to the Methodist Church, South. I would like to hear from some of the cousins that read this paper. I saw in a letter that Mae Evelyn Whitworth wrote, some questions and I am going to answer them. The first is Jesse. The second is Samuel was in the temple. Third, on Mount Sinai. Fourth, the two chapters that are alike are the 19th chapter of 2 Kings and the 37th chapter of Isaiah. Now I'm going to ask one or two. What verse in the Bible has all the letters in the alphabet except one in it? What is the longest and shortest verse in the Bible? I hope Mae Evelyn Whitworth can answer these. Good bye. I am hoping some one will write to me and that some one can answer my questions.

Lorenzo Sturkey.
McCormick, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As I am wanting to join your happy, cozy little family, may I come in? I am ten years old. My birthday is January 20. Have I a twin? I live on a farm near a little town named McDaniels. My dear old grandmother and grandfather live about one hundred yards from my house. I have one little brother three years old. We have a big time. This is a beautiful day; 'tis so sweet out to hear the birds singing. We thank the Lord for giving us so much pleasure. My pet is only a little black lamb, his name is Negro. Our preacher's name is Brother Wilson. We like him fine. My mama and papa take The Herald. I do sure enjoy reading page ten and all the sermons. I see some of you cousins ask some questions. May I ask one or two? What is the shortest verse in the Bible? and in the Old Testament? Who was the oldest man ever lived? and how old was he? Howard C. Myers, I guess your middle name to be Charles. Elizabeth Dunn, I guess your first name to be Ina. If I am right don't Dear Aunt Bettie: Wonder what you and the cousins are doing these warm days? I have been hoeing in the garden, planting flowers, cleaning house. Oh, well, there's plenty to do on a farm anyway, but we enjoy it, don't we? I noticed in the paper that Dr. Morrison was improving; hope he will soon get well and come back home. Our pastor tried to get Dr. Morrison to hold our camp meeting but for some reason failed to get him. We hope to have him some time. Cousins, here is my age: Take the tribe of Benjamin, Num. 1:37. Divide that by the number of foxes Samson used in burning the Philistine's corn, Jud. 15:4. Add to that Noah's age when he died, Gen. 9:29. Divide that by the number of years Joash was hid in the house of the Lord, 2 Kings 11:3. Subtract the number of men Jesus healed in St. Luke 17:12. Divide that by the number of men that were with Jesus in John 18:1, then add the men he appeared to in Mark 16:12. You will have my age in 1929. Hope W. B. doesn't get this. With lots of love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

FALLEN ASLEEP

WHEELER.

Friends and relations are grieved to announce the death of Mr. J. H. Wheeler, who passed away on Saturday morning, June 22, at 8 o'clock at his home in Bazette, Texas. Mr. Wheeler was born in Missouri, Dec. 25, 1856; came to Texas when a very small boy. He married Mrs. Katie Bryant Sanders, in Dallas county, Feb. 1, 1887. Mr. Wheeler joined the Methodist Church when young, and has been an active member ever since. His influence always counted for the best. He was one of the noblest of men. Mr. Wheeler enjoyed reading his Pentecostal Herald, which he had been taking for about forty years.

Funeral services were held at Bazette in the Methodist Church, with Rev. C. G. Shutt and Rev. Fisher officiating. Burial was in the Bazette cemetery. He is survived by his dear wife and nine children. Mrs. Charlie Beauchamp, C. G. Wheeler, Mrs. W. T. Munn and Mrs. I. M. Seely, all of Ennis, Texas, D. J. Wheeler, of Venus, Tex., R. W. Wheeler, of Dallas, G. H. Wheeler of Rice, Tex., A. W. Wheeler of Oklahoma City, Mrs. O. L. Vanlandingham, of Duncan, one step son, W. H. Sanders, of Hillsboro, Tex. A son, Jimmie C. Wheeler, formerly of Ennis, Texas, died five years ago. He also had 35 grandchildren, his oldest being Mrs. Clifford McKay of Corpus Christi. Mr. Wheeler had one of the oldest family altars in the country. All of his children were raised around it, some of them saved in it. He was a kind father and grandfather, a devoted husband and a true friend. He was so patient through his illness. He sang several old songs while on his death bed; about the last one was, "I'm going home." The greatest consolation that we friends and loved ones have is to know that he has gone home, and is now at rest.

HARRIS.

Rev. Nathaniel Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Harris, was born in London, England, May 14, 1855 and died July 2, 1929, aged 74 years, in his home, 14388 Lauder Ave., Detroit, Mich. The end came after a long illness of complications and finally a stroke.

Brother Harris was married early in life to Martha Ann Houlding, also of London, Eng. To this union were born eight children:—Benny, who died at 7 months; Beatrice, who died at 12 years; and the following who survive him:—Walter, of Toronto, Ontario, Canada; Ernest of Wood River, Ill.; William S. of Belleville, Mich.; M. Ruth Bennett, of Nashville, Tenn.; Lila Tapp, of Belleville, Mich.

Rev. Harris led a very active life; he entered the ministry under the definite call of the Lord while in his early twenties. He held some important pastorates in England, Canada and later in the United States.

His earliest efforts were along the lines of evangelistic work, organizing societies and building churches. Later he entered the Congregational connection and took up the work of the ministry. In 1890 he came to Canada and joined the Methodist Church. In 1902 he moved to the United States with his family where he held several pastorates.

He was a member of the Genesee Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church until the time of his death.

In 1923, following his first wife's death, he came to Michigan and later located in Detroit. In 1925 Brother Harris was married to Mrs. Cora B. Mercer, of Detroit, Mich., who also survives him. Besides, there are 16 grand children and 2 great-grandchildren, to mourn his going.

He was active in the work of the ministry until within a few months of his death, preaching wherever and whenever opportunity offered, ceasing only when ill health and a very weak heart prevented. One of the last things he ever told the writer was that he hoped to pitch a tent near where he was living and hold a revival meeting. He loved the work of the ministry and for many years was a faithful and strong preacher of the Wesleyan doctrine of Entire Sanctification as a second definite work of grace wrought in the heart of the believer. He delighted in the rugged truths of the Gospel and when health and opportunity permitted was found in the prayer meeting in the church where he had placed his membership—Asbury M. E. Church, Detroit, Michigan—and always testified to the delight and inspiration of all present to a fall and present and perfect salvation from all sin.

Being of a sturdy physical build he was a splendid embodiment of the truths he endeavored so faithfully to expound. In holiness gatherings throughout the State and in the Ann Arbor Holiness Association, where he was the ministerial Superintendent for more than a year, he was constantly affirming that we can be sanctified wholly in this present life. He lived and died as he preached, that sinner must be saved from sin and that believers must be sanctified wholly.

Brother Harris led many souls to Christ in England, Canada and the United States.

Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Lloyd M. Blakely, who spoke feelingly from the appropriate words, "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Interment was made in the family burial plat in the beautiful hill-top cemetery in Belleville, Mich.

Those who knew him soon learned to love him and many of us who knew him best and loved to hear him tell of his wonderful Christ, will miss these recitals of God's mercy, blessing and leadings.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord—for their works do follow them." Rev. Lloyd M. Blakely.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IX.—September 1, 1929.

Subject.—Ezra's Return to Jerusalem. Ezra 7:6-10; 8:21-23; 8:31, 32.

Golden Text.—The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him.—Ezra 8:22.

Time.—B. C. 458.

Places.—Babylon and Jerusalem.

Introduction.—In the fourth chapter of Ezra we learn that sometime after the Jews began to rebuild the temple, certain of their enemies (Rehum, Shimshai, and others) wrote a letter to Artaxerxes, king in Babylon, against them. By order of the king they were forced to cease their rebuilding operations for a period of some fifteen years. At the end of that period the prophets Haggai and Zechariah so encouraged the people that they once more began work under direction of Zerubbabel and Jeshua. But almost immediately their enemies started more intrigues against them. They seemed to doubt the declaration of the Jews that king Cyrus had made a decree for the rebuilding of the temple and the city. In their letter to King Darius they specially requested that he would have search made in the archives of Babylon to see if such an order had ever been made by Cyrus.

Moving on into the sixth chapter we learn that Darius instituted the requested search "in the house of the rolls" (books), and that the decree of Cyrus was discovered. One would naturally suppose that "Tatnai, governor on this side of the river, and Shetharboznai" were very much disappointed at the way their plot worked out; for instead of an order from Darius to stop the Jews from rebuilding, they received a special command to furnish them all needed supplies of food and money, so that the work might proceed as speedily as possible. Sometimes the Devil's men overstep the line, and defeat their own wicked plans.

From this time on the work of restoration went forward till the day when the house of Jehovah was dedicated amid great rejoicing on the part of the people.

Coming to the seventh chapter, and endeavoring to keep our connection, we find that "after these things" "Ezra went up from Babylon" to Jerusalem. There was a lapse of several years between the dedication of the temple and Ezra's going up—something more than 50 years.

Note how carefully Ezra traces his genealogy, in order to establish his right to the Aaronic priesthood. None but lineal descendants of Aaron could exercise this office.

Comments on the Lesson.

6. Went up.—This was the common expression in use among the people in their journeys to their Holy City. Jerusalem was up among the mountains. A ready scribble in the law of Moses.—He was a master in the law. As there were no printing presses, a "ready scribble" (writer) was a man of value. The king granted him all his request.—We find the reason for this in the following clause: "According to the hand of the LORD his God upon him." Ezra's God moved upon the heart of the heathen king.

7. There went up some of the children of Israel.—It had been a long time since their captivity began. The old captives were all dead, and their bodies were resting in Babylonian graves. Their children had been born and reared in a strange land; but to them it was home. They knew no other country. They had heard much concerning Canaan; and some were ready to move there; but many of them lived and died in the land where their parents had been slaves. Porters and Nethinims were two classes of laborers who performed some of the rougher work connected with the temple and its environment.

8. In the seventh year of the king.—B. C. 458.

9. The first day of the first month . . . the first day of the fifth month.—The journey from Babylon to Jerusalem had consumed four months. That was fairly good speed when we think of his company. There were nearly 2000 men, besides a great multitude of women and children.

10. To teach in Israel statutes and judgments.—God's people were perishing from lack of knowledge. Ezra saw their condition, and prepared himself by much study to meet their dire need. His was a noble purpose, but he must take his beloved people back into their homeland; for little could be done for them as long as they were scattered among the heathen. He must get them back to the house of Jehovah.

8:21. Then I proclaimed a fast.—Fasts were common among the Jews—so much so that they lost their significance. But a fast observed in the name of our God is good for the soul—a fine preparation for genuine worship. Such was the fast that Ezra imposed upon his company. They humbled themselves before God, in order that 'they might seek of him a right way for themselves, and for their little ones, and for all their substance.' They needed God's protecting hand; for scholars have estimated that they were carrying with them from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 in silver and gold; and they were passing through a region infested with beastly robbers ready to fall upon any helpless travellers who might chance to pass that way.

22. I was ashamed.—Ezra had told the king so much about the protection that Jehovah would give to his people, that he was ashamed to request of him a military escort. Read this 22nd verse. It is good preaching.

23. He was intreated of us.—We have here the heart of this lesson. Prayer is the greatest exercise of which the heart is capable. These helpless Jews were safe in God's hands after they had humbled themselves before him, and had committed themselves and all that they had into his keeping. Had robbers made a foray against them, there would have been dead men in the ranks of their enemy. The church of this day needs prayer more than she needs everything else.

8:31. The river Ahava.—It was at this river that Ezra gathered together the people who had decided to accompany him on his mission to Jerusalem. They were twelve days coming together, and preparing for the long journey. Ezra wrote this account at a later date. Note how he states that Jehovah's hand was upon them, and that he delivered them from certain enemies that "lay in wait by the way."

32. Three days.—When they arrived at Jerusalem there was a rest of three days before they got down to business; but on the fourth day they carried the gold and the silver and the sacred vessels into the house of God where they were weighed and placed in the care of the proper custodians.

CHOOSING A COLLEGE.

Paul A. Root

Editor The Asbury Collegian.

Asbury College exists today with the highest of educational standards. Our holiness schools are on a par with larger institutions for the same fundamental subjects and studies are taught which go into the formation of a complete cultural education, and these subjects are taught by instructors as well qualified by experience and with equal recognition by degrees as may be found in larger colleges or universities.

We believe it to be utter folly for a Christian young person to choose an ungodly college in which to secure his education feeling that, in so doing, he will emerge better qualified to face life. Such schools as Asbury have no apology to make, educationally, either to the Christian homes which support them or to the educational world at large. It is a mistake on the part of many to believe that the only value in the holiness school is to be found in its revivals by which means its students are revived spiritually. Not for a moment would we minimize this particular feature of the school, nor would we hesitate to affirm that these glorious outpourings of the Holy Spirit are the fundamental and vital sources from which flow all the other streams of good things in our school life. However the strictly educational side of the school is not to be regarded as a minor consideration; something which entails a necessary sacrifice in the matter of scholarship in order to secure the religious benefits. To the contrary, it is our firm conviction that the strictly educational side of Christian schools, such as Asbury College, is superior to that of schools avowedly atheistic, infidel, or modernistic, all of which are utterly destructive of true Christianity.

If we are fundamental in our Bible study, we believe that Jesus pronounced a great truth when he attributed all lies to the Devil, who is the father of lies. Further, we believe that no soundly converted man will deny that the majority of our colleges today are the dens of sin and Satan, religiously, educationally, and socially. Briefly, we might observe that the great outstanding features of our civilized Western world, as distinguished from the heathen Orient, are either the direct or indirect heritage of Christianity. Then to what source may we attribute an educational system which denies the existence of God, laughs Christ to scorn, or refuses to own Jesus as the very Son of God? The source is plainly Satan and sin and, as such, Jesus said we might expect the result to be the propagation of lies.

Nor does Satan restrict his lies to the religious field. In the very heart of modern education we find the basic principles either founded upon or highly colored by the subtlety of the Devil's lies. Materialism in philosophy; evolution in science; immoral realism in literature; bald vulgarity in art; syncopation in music—these are recognized as standards to be found in almost any college today. From gateway to back fence the modern college is founded upon, and ornamented by—falsehood.

How then in the light of God's truth and eternal values can the Christian young man or woman expect a higher degree of education in such an institution thus enshrined in a false light, than from the truly Christian school? At Asbury we study the philosophy of man in the light of God's philosophy. If science, we learn the secrets of the miraculous nature about us in the light of the truth as it is in Christ, who was with the Father and Holy Spirit in the beginning when all was created. The idealism of Christ is our standard in literature. We learn to regard Art as the reflection of all truth and beauty of whom Christ was the first Artist. We believe that music, when it is the language of a soul in which the Spirit of Christ dwells, as quickly ascends to the Father's throne as the audible prayer coming from the same holy heart.

We are bound to recognize that purely from an educational standpoint, say nothing of the social and moral sides of the question, as vitally important as they are, when the holiness college and the worldly college are weighed in the educational scales, as God sees them, the former, saturated with falsehood, is bound to be "found wanting," and wanting what may be found at Asbury College and other holiness schools—an educational system founded firmly upon, "the truth as it is in Christ Jesus." Not a portion of the truth, but the whole truth.

While we are yet young let us "Rejoice at the remembrance of his holiness." Let us follow men like Dr. Hughes, Dr. Morrison, and Dr. Akers who, with vision, faith and courage, have steadily guided Asbury College through the years as a dynamic center where religion and education work hand in hand to thoroughly furnish unto every good work, Shall we choose a college and education where Christ is high and lifted up, or one where he is trampled in the dust? Which—Christ or Belial? A hearty welcome awaits you at Asbury College.

THE SAME OPPORTUNITY

Never presents itself the second time. An opportunity lost is lost forever. Now is your opportunity to send The Herald to some one until January, 1930, for 50c.

FEAR NOT.

Everett L. Stuart.

Fear not, O soul, oppressed
By trials and distressed
With pain and grief;
Though in the dungeon cast,
In mire thy feet are fast,
God brings relief!

Fear not, nor doubt again;
Deliverance has been
In other days:
Look up in hope and faith;
"I'll ne'er forsake," God saith—
Enough for praise!

Fear not! God loves and cares,
And though He long forbears,
His help will come;
His promises are true;
He'll take you safely through
To His blest home.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

The first National Convention will be held at Greenville, Ohio, in the Mennonite Brethren in Christ Church, September 10-15. Dates are being booked rapidly, but a few remain untaken. If interested, write immediately to Rev. C. W. Butler, D.D., President, 3219 Cedar Ave., Cleveland, O.

While retaining my relation of Director of Theology, and my relation as Endowment Treasurer, my work for the next school year is so adjusted that I shall be free to give the major portion of my time to the work of Evangelism. My engagements will be seen in my slate in this paper. Address me, Rev. John F. Owen, 172 E. 13th Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

There will be a Laymen's Revival in Newton, Kan., August 23 to September 15, under the direction of Rev. C. W. Ruth, assisted by Miss Clara Meeker, and Prof. Kenneth Wells and wife. This meeting will be held in Themerian Park, one block west of the postoffice. Pray for the meeting and all who can do so, attend. Mr. H. H. Peters is chairman of this meeting.

Rev. E. J. Moffitt is holding a good meeting in Streets, Va., in which souls are being saved and the Christians blessed and refreshed. Brother Moffitt will begin the Shackelford, Va., camp meeting August 16 and continue until the 25th.

Mrs. Catherine Frishe: 'If there is any one who has an old people's Bible they could donate to an elderly woman with very defective vision, please to write Mrs. C. C. Frishe, 3606 Glenn Ave., Covington, Ky. I will pay the postage on it.'

More than three thousand W. C. T. U. delegates, officials and members will gather in Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 19-25, to attend the fifty-fifth annual convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The principal business of the convention will be to strengthen the educational policies of the W. C. T. U.; to plan to aid the government and the administration in law observance and law enforcement; and to prepare for the senatorial and congressional election of November, 1930, which the W. C. T. U. officials anticipate will be a desperate effort by the wets to unseat dry sitting legislators.

In addition, the Indianapolis convention has an historic significance. It will mark the fiftieth anniversary of a previous W. C. T. U. convention in the same city which elected Frances Willard to the Presidency, and adopted the educational policies which prepared the country for national prohibition.

As a part of the convention program next month the W. C. T. U. will unveil a tablet commemorating the life and work of Frances Willard. It is to be placed in the State Capitol in Indianapolis, and received officially for the state by Governor Leslie.

Several prohibition leaders and government officials will be prominent in the convention program, among them being Dr. James M. Doran, U. S. Commissioner of Prohibition.

FIFTY CENTS

Asbury College—
A Full Salvation School

"In the Heart of the far-famed Blue Grass"

LEWIS ROBESON AKERS, President

A STANDARD COSMOPOLITAN "A" GRADE COLLEGE enrolling students from forty states and ten foreign countries. One hundred and fourteen A. B. graduates in the class of '29. Recognized as "A" grade by the University of Kentucky and the Kentucky Department of Education. Member Association of Kentucky Colleges and Universities. Member Association of American Colleges.

A DYNAMIC CENTER OF SPIRITUAL POWER for those contemplating Christian service at home or abroad, but furnishing basic courses for the regular professions of life. Asbury College is noted throughout the nation for its fidelity to Methodist standards. Its good fellowship and spiritual atmosphere are unusual.

THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS provides fourteen majors leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree, in Classics, French and German, Spanish, English, Education, History, Philosophy, Political and Social Science, Biology, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Fine Arts, and Religious Education.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC AND SCHOOL OF EXPRESSION supervised by accomplished and experienced teachers, master pupils of Percy Grainger and Joseph LeVhaine.

ART DEPARTMENT. Vivian May Norris, Director, Member of the Art Students' League, A. M. I., an illustrator of America's leading periodicals.

EDUCATION. Special attention given to this Department by two highly trained Graduate teachers, with a view to meeting various state requirements.

HOME ECONOMICS. Splendidly equipped quarters with latest scientific electric apparatus.

EQUIPMENT. One of the latest and best equipped colleges in the State. Commodious brick buildings including three dormitories for young men, one of the finest Memorial Halls in the South housing three hundred young women. New water system, electrical conveniences, beautiful campus lighted by a "white way," New Memorial Library of 40,000 volume capacity, New Auditorium, seating 2,000, New Four Manual Memorial Pipe Organ.

ENVIRONMENT. Sixteen miles south of Lexington on main line of Southern Railway and near L. & N. main lines. Altitude 1,000 feet. One of the most healthful towns of the State, population, 2,000, with no pool rooms, moving pictures, or other demoralizing influences. Total expenses for the school year $430.00. School begins September 18.

For Catalog write Wm. BRANDT HUGHES, Dean.

WILMORE, KENTUCKY.

ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

HENRY CLAY MORRISON, D.D., President.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. "The whole Bible for the whole world" sanely interpreted and heroically preached is the ideal toward which we strive. Write Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for catalog.

JUST A DREAM.

Perhaps because I heard a sermon in my early youth regarding a mountain of sin and the efficacy of Jesus' blood to remove it; the association of one of the world's greatest electric signs, (Wrigleys in New York) perhaps I say, these memories may be responsible for the vivid dream of life's immortal journey that came to me. Perhaps these echoes of youthful days, these silent specters that troop through the halls of memory, weave into the fabric of our dreams these beautiful motion-picture illustrations to buoy us up and to encourage us on life's pilgrim way. Whatever the cause, or the object of the Master, he permits them to be thrown upon the screen of our memory, and blesses even in the dreaming of them.

I dreamed I was journeying toward a sunset over a level, wide extended plain; there were many with me, and I saw in the distance, life's sun-set, and beyond the horizon the domes of the Eternal City. There was nothing to impede my progress or obscure my vision, and I saw the white light of eternity play about the opalescent domes of the great cathedrals, tabernacles and temples, and I was overjoyed to know that I should reach the journeys end eventually and be with my Lord. That one day I should look upon his face and be satisfied; for I should see him as he is and be like him. Glory to God!

Suddenly there appeared millions of elfin-like figures, the duplicate of those I had seen from my hotel window in New York City on the great Wrigley Electric Sign. They were the three-cornered hats and possessed the strength of a Hercules. One little fellow grabbed up a great boulder from somewhere on the plain, the plain that before had appeared absolutely level, somewhere he obtained this mammoth boulder and dropped it in my pathway.

I looked, beheld upon its face was graven in cameo clearness the figure of the old half-dollar; the replica of one I had stolen when a lad of about 6 years of age. This half dollar that I lied about to my father, was roundly thrashed for stealing, and deeply humiliated when forced to return and apologize regarding it.

There it stood barring my way. Then millions of these little imps, like bees in a hive or ants in an ant-hill set to work and brought my sins in the form of these huge rocks, on each of which was written a particular offense; lies, profanity, jealousies, envyings, covetousness etc. etc. and builded against the first one cast in the way. Up, up, up, grew the structure, many times higher than the Woolworth building in New York; these imps swarming up its sides with additional material until it reached the clouds.

From out the cloud there appeared an arm, bared to the elbow; in the hand there was the nail-pierced wound; from this wound there oozed a drop of blood. The hand was extended out over the mountain of my sins—a single drop of blood fell from the wound upon it, and in the twinkling of an eye all had vanished, imps and all, and my vision was unobscured.

I saw the gates of the celestial city. Beyond the gates there arose the plains upon which marched victorious multitudes; armies marching and countering-marching on the hills of God. Contented flocks fed upon the plains; snow-white lambs gamboled on the green; great trees spread their grateful shade, and little rills laughed musically in the vales; yonder a majestic river flowed, a silver ribbon o'er the matchless splendor spread.

I heard great orchestras give their oratorios, angelic choirs of many voices sang their peons of praise, and above the great concourse of multiplied harmonies, I heard the single silvery notes of a mighty soprano ring out:

"Holy! Holy! Holy! Lord God Almighty!

Early in the morning our song shall rise to Thee!

Holy, Holy, Holy, Merciful and Mighty,
God in Three Persons, Blessed Trinity."

Then I looked still upward and above the choirs and orchestras was the throne, and he who sat thereon was screened about, for no man can look on the face of God and live. From the throne there streamed aloft great shafts of light, radiating from the center of him who sat thereon.

Then to the right there stood him of the seamless robe. I saw the wounded hands, the riven side and pierced feet, the Crown of thorns was on his brow; and while I thought of them who placed it there in ignominy, he made intercession for MY sins, and lo, the thorn crown faded and in its stead there appeared a royal diadem, the radiant beauty of which no tongue can depict. HALLELUJAH! HALLELUJAH! GLORY TO GOD!

REQUEST FOR PRAYER.

W. A. Revis: "Please ask the prayers of your readers for a revival of the work of salvation in Mussoorie. There is great indifference on every side, both Christian and non-Christian. Just now we have a converted Mohammedan giving lectures and interviews. There are some inquiring the way. There is a European population with very little vital religion. We have received a promise, Isaiah 54:2, 'Spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes.' And one soul has been sent in partial answer. Pray for us."

Mrs. R. McQ.: "Pray for the conversion of my son and his wife. My soul is greatly burdened for them."

Mrs. J. W. B.: "Pray for my brother who is seriously afflicted, that Jesus will heal him and make him a bright and shining light for him."

Please pray that Mrs. Roller, of Louisville, Ky., may be healed of heart dropsy.

Mrs. M. L. T.: "Please to pray for my boy who is about to take a trip that we feel would be his ruin. May the Lord guide his way."

Mrs. E. M. L.: "Will all the readers of The Herald please pray for my entire family at Wicklow, Manitoba, that they may be saved and sanctified and ready for the soon coming of our Lord."

Christ Through Oriental Eyes!

With and Without CHRIST

By SADHU SUNDAR SINGH

"Here is a man who, in a flowing toga, with a short black beard, tells a remarkable, unaffected message with the fire of a prophet and the power of an apostle."

—Basil Mathews
—in The British Weekly.

The Sadhu is probably the most widely known Christian in all India. An outcast from a home of wealth, he underwent privation and persecution, he says, "to experience the Living Presence of Christ and His saving power in the lives of men." Besides his own story, he tells of many others he has known who have lived with and without Christ. The mysticism of the Oriental mind is seen at its best in these writings of the Sadhu. He, too, has seen Christ on the Indian road. Price, $1.50.

THE PRINCE OF THE HOUSE OF DAVID

By Ingraham.

A story of the life and times of our Lord as told by an eye witness in letters to her father. The narrative is beautifully and forcefully unfolded. Because of its unusual style it will be read by many who would not read the New Testament.

Anyone who reads this book is brought face to face with the fact that Jesus is truly "The Prince of the House of David" and the Savior of the world.

A book that the young people will read and enjoy. It will hold their attention clear to the last page.

We have 240 copies of a pocket edition of this book, bound in blue cloth, that we are selling at 30c each or 2 for 50c.

A NEW BOOK

Dr. Arthur T. O'Rear has written a book, "The Nativity of the Holy Spirit," which is a distinct contribution to the more recent literature on this subject. The book is introduced by Bishop Sam Hay.

Dr. O'Rear couples theological soundness with a new method of approach. The discussion is very comprehensive, providing a kind of education in spiritual things that is greatly needed. While his book is constructive and positive, it deals negatively with false movements and modern errors regarding the Holy Spirit and furnishes new light under this head.

The Opportunity Is Swiftly Passing!

Don't let it go by without your having placed THE HERALD in some home. It may be the means of salvation to the entire household.

Every soul, some time, somewhere, longs to know God, and this may be your opportunity to help some one into a saving knowledge of Him. We have known instances where persons were not approachable in the interest of their souls, but the Holy Spirit has spoken to them in the quiet of the reading hour.

We pass this way but once, so let's make our time and efforts count for God and souls. Try to induce some one to subscribe on the special 50c offer till January. Invest 50c of the Lord's money and send the paper to some one; then pray God to bless the message THE HERALD carries to the good of that soul.

Dear HERALD readers, what we do must be done quickly. The special subscription period is rapidly slipping away, souls are passing into eternity, many of them lost, and it behooves us to get desperately in earnest to offer the Bread of Life to as many as will receive it.

Think NOW of some loved one or friend who needs soul food, and either ask them to subscribe or send them the paper until January. Seemingly small things count for much in the service of the King.

COMPLAINT OR PRAISE!

By The Editor.

TO have fellowship with the Father, to enjoy communion with the blessed Trinity, we shall have to so regulate our lives that we will be pleasing to God.

Is God pleased with our whining and complaints? Are we constantly grumbling because of our lot? Are we half mad at something or somebody, we hardly know who or what, because we do not have more and finer clothing? Are we pouting because our table is not laden with more luxuries? Are we envious of those about us because they have more money, and more of the pleasures of the world, than we have? Why are we complaining at our lot?

Do we object to work? Do we feel that we ought to be the pet of the Lord, that he ought to make some sort of arrangement that we may be idle? Do we want to eat our bread in the sweat of the brow of some one else? What's the matter with us, that we pour out a stream of complaints, that we are always finding fault with our occupation, with our surroundings? It may be that our largest difficulty is inside of us. It may be that we need a new heart. Perhaps if our hearts were right we would have real happiness in the battle of life, however strenuous it might be.

Why not be happy? Cut out your grumbling and pour out a stream of praise and thanksgiving instead of complaint and fault-finding. Why not thank God that you are not in hell, in the penitentiary, in a hospital, in the poor-house. Untold thousands of our fellowbeings are in all of the above mentioned places and you are still out, up, and going, able to earn your bread. Let's wipe the scowl off our faces and drive the complaints out of our mouths, and cheer up and, in the language of the old brethren in the country churches, in their long prayers, say, "Lord, we thank thee that it is as well with us as it is," and mean it and keep it up.

What husband would be pleased if his wife was always complaining about her unfortunate marriage, and contrasting her poor circumstances with that of her wealthy sisters? What wife would be pleased if, at every meal, her husband was telling of the superior cooking of his mother, and scowling at the dishes she had labored with great care to provide for him? What father would be pleased if his children were always murmuring because he did not give them a more stately residence in which to live, a finer car in which to ride, a larger variety of food and clothing, and all the while contrasting their condition with that of their more wealthy neighbors? Is God pleased when we murmur and complain as if he had been unkind to us, and indifferent to our state in life?

Let it be remembered that many of the disadvantages that we suffer, and the hardships that have come to us, are entirely of our own making. We refused to listen to advice. We refused to study and grew up ignorant. We laughed at those who cautioned us about late hours, improper eating, and various dissipation, and we became unhealthy; we idled our time away, wasted our inheritance, and became poor. We followed the will-o'-the-wisp and landed in the dismal swamp, and then instead of penitently retracing our steps, and mending, as far as possible, the breaks we made, we grumbled, complained, blamed our friends who loved and warned us, complained against a compassionate God whose laws we violated, and whose mercies we rejected.

Come, now, my beloveds, let us put away complaining and grumbling and fault-finding at once and forever. Let us look on the bright side of life. Let us thank God for the untold mercies he showers upon us, the protection he has given us when we knew nothing of it, the chastenings he has dealt to us in compassionate mercy, to correct, caution, and save us from calamities that would have come to us, but for his preventing mercy. Let's do away with complaints and give ourselves to praise. Let's meditate a bit and think of the things we have escaped, and the countless mercies that have come to us, give God thanks and go forth rejoicing, instead of fault-finding and complaint.

Four Neglected Doctrines.

WE have written of the New Birth, Sanctification, and the Future Punishment of the Wicked, we now call attention to the Second Coming of our Lord. It certainly is a rare thing that a Methodist congregation hears a sermon on the Second Coming of Christ. We will not suggest that this teaching is necessary in order to salvation, and yet sermons on the Second Coming of Christ have a powerful awakening effect.

I have preached on this subject many times in revivals, followed with great altar services. I remember on two occasions at great camp meetings preaching on the Second Coming of Christ and closing with an earnest exhortation, when the altars were packed with weeping people, and not less than fifty persons were either converted, reclaimed or sanctified.

You fix the mind of your audience on the fact that Christ will come back to this world, that he will appear in his glory in the heavens with saints and angels and the necessity of being prepared to receive him with joy, urging upon the people the importance of regeneration and cleansing from all sin in order that they may rejoice at his appearing, and you may be sure that those who are in their sins are likely to become quite uncomfortable.

Our Lord Jesus plainly and repeatedly taught that he would come again. The two men in white raiment who appeared to the disciples when our Lord ascended into glory, assured them that in like manner he would come again. The writers of the New Testament were faithful to call attention to this fact and present the subject in a way to arouse interest, awaken conviction and urge the necessity of preparation for that great event.

It would seem that the teaching of our Lord and the writings of the inspired apostles would call the attention of all Christians to this subject and give it a prominent place in the ministry of all men claiming a call to preach the gospel.

That our Lord Jesus Christ will appear in the heavens, in clouds of glory attended by mighty angels and hosts of redeemed souls, so that the inhabitants of this globe shall behold him, is one of the most tremendous revelations contained in Holy Writ. It will be one of the greatest events in the history of God's dealings with mankind. Nothing is more plainly taught in the New Testament Scriptures than this glorious coming of our Lord. Strange that we hear so little, almost no preaching on the subject. Passing strange that there should be such bitter prejudice against this Bible teaching and against the preaching of this glorious appearing. We believe it would be a means of grace to preachers and people, everywhere, if the ministers of all of our evangelical churches should prepare and preach on Sabbath mornings, plain, scriptural sermons on the Second Coming of Christ.

With many people the Lord Jesus is only a historic Christ. He lived, taught, was crucified, and died, nearly two thousand years ago. They will admit, perhaps, that he arose from the dead and went away to heaven. With a large percent of church members heaven is a long way off, and Jesus becomes almost a myth. Preaching on the Second Coming makes the Lord Jesus a living Person, a reality, the most tremendous Person in the universe, his coming an outstanding fact in the future history of our world. It awakens interest, it produces conviction. People search the Scriptures in order to find out their contents on the subject. They discuss the matter with each other; it produces serious reflection in the mind of the sinner, and joy in the heart of those who love him and long for his appearing.

What can be more encouraging to the true soldier of the cross fighting against ten thousand foes of righteousness. What can be more stimulating to the faith of the humble, oppressed Christian than the fact that my Lord will appear. He will reveal himself, and his opposers and foes will be compelled to acknowledge his person in the glory of his power. What can stimulate the joy and courage of hard-pressed souls set upon by Satan with all of his wiles, temptations and falsehoods, than the joyful fact that the Lord Jesus will appear, and that Satan shall be cast out of the world, and out of the confusion there will come order, out of the war there shall come peace, out of the doubts and

A PAGE OF THOUGHTS AND INCIDENTS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

1. Looks as though the East is fast becoming a storm center.

"The East" says Mr. C. F. Andrews, "is now becoming the storm center of the world. Mahatma Gandhi and Rabindranath Tagore have urged me to come and tell the West. If the unrest and bitterness become greater, and the misunderstanding on both sides becomes critical, what can be the end but a greater world conflagration than happened fifteen years ago? The East is the danger-spot today. Unquestionably every single day a great excitement of humanity is growing." The East, says Dr. Pantou, God is reserving (Rev. 16:12) as a thunderbolt for the West.

2. What power there is in Intercessionary Christians!

A writer says: "I know personally of five people in different parts of the world who are called insistently to prayer for revival between 3 and 4 a. m., every day." Doubt cannot live five minutes in the wind of the Breath of God. At David Morgan's funeral in 1883, T. C. Edwards said:—"I remember the service he held at Bala. I was at the time in the College, studying great things, but without ever realizing them as living truths in my experience. I knew Butler's proofs of a future existence and Paley's 'Evidences' of Christianity. I felt their force as arguments, I could not rebut them, but I was in a state of doubt as to the whole. But two simple Gardiganshire men came to Bala, preaching Jesus Christ simply, modestly, with neither much learning nor eloquence, but with something more than both. Eternity was in the service; heaven filled the place. The chapel was filled with God. The place was dreadful; no one required Butler's proofs or Paley's evidences. The change I felt was evidence enough to me of the divine contents of Christianity."

3. A Remarkable Conversion!

An exchange tells the story:

"At the close of last century a Korean scholar and aristocrat, Yi Sang-jai, was cast into prison for two years by his autocratic king, for utterances derogatory to Eastern rule. On the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese War, arrested on an unnamed charge, he was again imprisoned. 'In my distress, unconsciously,' he says, 'I lifted up the corner of the coarse reed-mat that covered my prison floor, when, lo, what should I see beneath it but a little book with red cover and a Chinese inscription. I looked at it and it said, 'The Gospel According to St. John.' Had I found the elixir of life I could not have been more overjoyed. Here was a book, and I could read, and such a book. I read it through that day. Yes, read it through, twenty-one chapters, and like a breath of life it was to me. The next day I read it again, and as I read I prayed that God would open my eyes. 'Would you believe it,' said he, 'as I read it and continued reading Jesus rose before me, divine, the Great Saviour. I had been wholly wrong in my estimate of him. He was God indeed. After I had read it through about thirty times, one morning word came that I was free. 'Free?' asked I of the officer. 'Why was I arrested in the first place, and why am I let go now?' 'I don't know,' said he, 'but you are free.' So I returned home and on my way I asked myself, 'Who locked me up in prison?' My soul answered, 'God.' Why did He lock me up? That I might have a vision of Jesus, the Divine One. Who put the little book under the mat? The Holy Ghost, the Comforter. Thank God for all his goodness."

"Thus Yi Sang-jai, Greatheart of Korea, came forth out of his prison experience to be for twenty-five years apostle and teacher to his own ancient people. We who knew him bowed before him and counted him our superior in all things great and good. His smile, the sound of his voice, the light of his eye, gave a charm of life, indescribable. On March 30, 1927, he passed away. A great national funeral, the first ever held, drew hundreds of thousands of people in its train."

4. A Preacher's Wonderful Healing.

Rev. William P. Nicholson held many powerful meetings in America before going to Ireland and Australia. He broke down under the strain. He tells this remarkable story in the Alliance Weekly:

"I had to cancel all work in Australia and New Zealand because I found for the first time in fifty years that I had a heart. They put me to bed for three weeks, but it ended with my being three months in bed. Then I was told there was little or no change for the better, and that it would take a year or more to get it right if ever it would be right. I discontinued everything and made for our home in California. The specialist here told me my heart was in a bad condition and that I might never be able to preach again; and that if ever I did, I should never be able to go into it the way I evidently had been going. I had almost come to the conclusion the Lord was finished with me and that I was on the shelf.

"A Presbyterian minister here in Los Angeles asked me to preach for him. I was like the Irishman who could resist anything but temptation, so I preached for him and felt no ill effects for a time. About the Thursday following I thought I should cave in, my heart was so pained, and the exhaustion was terrible. I went to the doctor, told him what I had done. He scolded me and told me to rest, saying that was the only thing that would help me. I left his office that day in great weakness and pain and thought I should never get home. I was just down and out. Just as I stood at the corner of Sixth and Hope Streets, the Lord touched me, and in a moment the heart was healed. It felt just like a load of lead falling off my heart, and life rushed through me like a torrent. Hallelujah! I stood there dumbfounded and could not believe it was true. I started to walk; my feet felt as if they had a grip of the ground, as we say in Ulster. I did not say a word about it to anyone. I was scared in case it might be only some freak of the heart, and I did not want to make a mockery of the Lord and his power to heal.

"I went down to the specialist two weeks later, and he told me that the adhesions at the case of the heart (some five of them) had been torn off, and that was what I felt when I thought a load of lead fell from my heart. The heart then was able to pump without hindrance, and that was why I felt the new life rushing through me.

"Even then I did not say a word to others, for I was so hard to convince. One morning on my knees I told the Lord if I were really healed, for him to give me a sign, namely, that he would open up work for me without my making a move."

God answered in a remarkable way and called him to a fine work in Toronto.

5. A Conversion and a Sad Warning to Girls.

Duncan McNeill, a former English actor, tells the following thrilling story:

"The fascination of the footlights found me an easy victim, for the earliest aspiration of my boyhood was to be an actor. Many of my nearest relatives were 'on the boards,' and at the most impressionable time of my life I lived in a stage-struck atmosphere. I made my debut on the stage at a very early age, as a variety artiste and dramatic vocalist. I also acquired some reputation as an exponent of what was then a very popular item on the music-hall stage—clog and step dancing. The songs I sang were my own composition, both words and music, and for many years I was well known as a song writer to the music-hall profession.

"My conversion to Christ was brought about, I believe, through the instrumentality of a godly aunt, who prayed for me for years, and never once seemed to doubt that God would save me. How I remember her prayers, her tears, and her pleadings! How often I ignored and refused them. Just to please her, as I thought, I consented one day to accompany her to church.

"Never shall I forget the service I attended in the little Methodist Church. Even to this day I remember the feeling of ennui that possessed me as I sat through the service. I was, truth to tell, bored to the verge of tears! Then the unexpected happened. A young lady in the choir stood up to sing a solo. It was just the bait for me. I was always the lover of a good song well sung. And so she sang:—

"There were ninety and nine that safely lay

In the shelter of the fold,

But one was out on the hills away,

Far off from the gates of gold—

Away on the mountains wild and bare,
Away from the tender Shepherd's care."

"It was not the words of the hymn that impressed me first, but the singer's voice. It was sweet, rich, and appealing, and I began to appraise her value as a professional singer on the stage. Then I paid heed to the words she sang, and my heart was strangely melted.

"But none of the ransom'd ever knew,

How deep were the waters cross'd;
Nor how dark was the night that the Lord pass'd through

Ere He found His sheep that was lost;

Out in the desert He heard its cry—

Sick, and helpless, and ready to die."

"I do not think I ever attended a church service again from that day till the day of my conversion. I began to drink heavily to forget the prickings of conscience and the striving of God's Holy Spirit. Then, one night, in a city concert hall, as I passed to my dressing-room I saw some fellow artists, all well known to me save one, a young lady. Yet her face was familiar. I tried to recall her name, but I was baffled. Before my turn to go on the stage arrived, I suddenly remembered where I had seen the face. She was the girl I heard singing in the little Methodist Church choir. She had entered the profession as a ballad vocalist. My heart smote me, and I felt sad. Why did she not stay in the church choir? She was better and safer there. This was not a life for her. But conscience said, 'If it is not good for her, it is not good for you.' She made shipwreck of her life, and died broken-hearted, early in life, and later on, when God saved me, I joined the little Methodist Church where I heard her sing first, and filled the place in the choir that poor little I—G—vacated.

"It was in the month of August, 1896, in the city of Glasgow, after listening to an earnest Gospel address by the Rev. James Lyall, that I gave my heart and life to Jesus. At once I bore witness to all my old companions. For more than thirty years I have preached the Gospel in many parts of the world, to hundreds of thousands of people, and thousands have been blessed and saved. I have told this old, old story of Jesus and his love to the sailors on the battle-ships and mine-sweepers, to the soldiers in the barrack room, the camp, and on the battlefield; to the merchantmen and the working men; to the wealthy aristocrats and the poorest of democrats; to the pure and the prostitute, the innocent and the guilty, the living and the dying; and always I have found it to be the panacea for all human sins, sorrows, and sufferings."

MESSIAH'S TRIUMPH.

Rev. Wm. S. Bowden.

GOD has promised his Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord, world dominion. The occupant of David's throne upon Mount Zion has been promised the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession. The promise cannot fail, for it is Jehovah who has made the promise.

The first world ruler was Adam. "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness: and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth" (Gen. 1:26.) This world-wide dominion was forfeited because of sin. What was true regarding the offer of world dominion to the first federal head of the race, Adam, is emphatically true of the second federal head, "the last Adam," our Lord Jesus Christ. "Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet" (Psa. 8:6). But are we not told elsewhere in the Word that we see not all things as yet put under him? We'll come back to this point.

After the fall of man, the dream of world empire soon seized the brain of man. Ever since the attempt to build the Tower of Babel (Gen. 11), one ruler after another has sought to hold the sceptre of world dominion. History recognizes four universal empires—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia and Rome. The sway of none of these has been quite absolute, yet it has been strong enough to place these nations in the category of universal empires.

We readily recognize that the aspiration for predominant world-power is no new ambition. Since the passing of Roman supremacy there have been a number of aspirants to world dominion. Alaric tried and failed. Charlemagne tried and failed. Napoleon's attempt at universal rule is written in the blood of eleven million of his fellow men. In more recent times Kaiser William of Germany made a losing attempt in the same direction. Ex-Ambassador James W. Gerard in a book published during the war gave this quotation from the writings of the Kaiser:

"From childhood I have been influenced by five men: Alexander the Great, Julius Caesar, Theodor II, Frederic the Great, and Napoleon. Each of these men dreamed a dream of world empire. They failed. I have dreamed a dream of German world empire, and my mailed fist shall succeed."

Several careful writers have stated that a number of years ago, the Kaiser, in a secret state document, designed for his counsellors, and court officials, used these words:

"In 1914 I shall be the Emperor of 250 million people, and in 1920 I shall be the Emperor of the world."

The prediction for 1914 came very near being true, but that for 1920 came a long ways from being realized. "Man proposes, but God disposes." At one time during the progress of the war I preached two carefully prepared sermons to give a negative answer to the question: Will Germany Win? One of the reasons presented at that time applies to any war lord who thinks he will wield universal sceptre. God has decreed otherwise. In the great metallic image seen by the king and interpreted by the prophet (Dan. 2), there is room for but four universal human empires. When God says four, man cannot make it five.

Man may be confident of success, but he cannot change the divine program. In harmony with the word of prophecy the kingdom of Babylon was succeeded by that of the Medes and Persians, and that by the kingdom of Greece, and that by the Roman empire. According to the divinely revealed program the fifth kingdom is to be the kingdom of the Messiah, represented by the stone in the prophecy.

The second Psalm contains a wonderful picture of the Messiah's triumph. Let us concentrate our thoughts upon this Psalm. It is often overlooked or wrongly interpreted. Rev. James Stalker has said that he doubts if there could be produced from either sacred or profane literature a more remarkable instance of the power of putting a great deal into a few words than this Psalm. He has also called attention to the fact that the Psalm is a great poem as well as a great Messianic prophecy, and that the theme is painted pictorially.

There is not one picture, but four. They are different, yet all closely connected, and at the end are brought together into dramatic unity. The artistic balance is perfectly kept, the same number of words being given to each picture. There is no hurry or overcrowding. Every picture is painted broadly and freely, and even with a great deal of elaboration, and yet the whole Psalm contains but twelve verses.

The Psalm is full of Christ. It opens abruptly. It contains three series of utterances by three different speakers. The first is the writer of the Psalm (vs. 1-6). The second is Messiah himself (vs. 7-9). The third is the Lord Jehovah (vs. 10-12). What the writer himself says constitutes the first two divisions of the Psalm. Let us briefly consider the four divisions in order.

I. MESSIAH'S FOES (VS. 1-3).

The Psalm opens with an utterance of amazement. "Why do the nations rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" The Psalmist then gives a vivid picture of the revolt against Messiah. This is the earth picture. The heaven picture will come later. In these first three verses we have a picture of the confederation of the nations and the consultation of the nations against Jehovah and his Christ. Rev. F. E. Marsh has said that nothing could be more dramatically expressed in defining a great combine of earth's authorities. Let us notice in particular what is here said of the nations.

1. The nations rage in displeasure. "The nations rage." Nothing has ever excited so much enmity as Christ and the Gospel. This hostility is violent, intense. The picture is that of the tossing of the waves of the sea. The margin of the revised version suggests this when we are told that the nations "tumultuously assemble." They are wild with anger. There is one perpetual restlessness, one ceaseless movement of discontent, the throbbing of rebellion that cannot be appeased, of a vain, bitter, and ceaseless revolt.

2. The people imagine a vain thing. They would run the world without regard to God and his Christ. It is folly to ignore God and his plan. It is useless for the potsherd to strive with his Maker. The heaving ocean does not accomplish anything worth while by its unrest; neither will the opposition to God bring about the desired results.

3. The kings of the earth set themselves. The hostility is organized. There is arrayed opposition. There is deliberate rejection of the Christ. Earthly kings and rulers determine to oppose the Lord's work. When the Lord Jesus Christ began to preach, the rulers not the common people, set themselves to defeat him.

4. The rulers take counsel together. We see the determination by which the revolt is characterized. They take counsel against the "Anointed." That means the Messiah, the Christ of the New Testament. Men who have taken counsel together in nothing else have taken counsel together against the Lord and against his anointed. Though hating each other they have cried in unison, "Crucify Christ." How literally were these words fulfilled when Herod and Pontius Pilate, and the rulers of the Jews combined together to put Jesus to death! Acts 4:25-27.

5. Let us break their bands asunder. The simile speaks of a rebellious animal endeavoring to be free. The requirements of the Gospel are considered fetters that bind. There is a strong desire to be free from the wise constraints which our Lord imposes. The spirit here indicated has been manifested throughout this whole dispensation. It was never more strongly marked than at the present time. There is a spirit of lawlessness abroad in the world which is well described by these words.

6. And cast away their cords from us. The constraints of the Gospel may seem irksome, but how foolish are people who think they can throw off their responsibility to Almighty God! God requires holiness of his people. Messiah's foes desire to cast off such strong cords as God has given for binding his people together and to him and his Anointed.

Take note of the extent of the revolt. Here are the words used, "Nations," "People," "Kings," "Rulers." This revolt has been running through the centuries, underlying human history, breaking out in fresh manifestations age after age. The six New Testament references to this Psalm indicate that it had a partial fulfillment at the first advent of Christ, but a more complete fulfillment is seen in history since that time and in the present opposition to the Christ. This is to continue until Christ at his second advent triumphs over his foes.

II. JEHOVAH'S DERISION (VS. 4-6).

These verses give us the heaven picture, the divine tranquillity. Jehovah is calm amid the raging of his foes. God is undismayed and undisturbed. He patiently waits till the rage has spent itself in vain, like the fretting billows against the rock-bound coast.

1. He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh. It is a striking metaphor. The Victor is in the heavens—watching the wicked plots, reading the evil thoughts, hearing the decisions of his enemies. As the Psalmist thinks of the Divine One observing all that is going on on earth he becomes very bold in his imagination and speaks of the laughter of God. Some one has said that it is a poet's phrase but a prophet's truth.

2. The Lord shall have them in derision. He despises the petty and futile hostility of men. He holds in contempt the puny efforts of man to oppose him. The derision of the Most High! What a figure to use! Over and over again God has turned into contempt the wrath of his enemies! He will do so on a larger scale at the judgment day!

3. Then shall he speak unto them in his wrath. God has spoken so much in love that some people do not consider that it is possible for him to speak in wrath. But there is considerable said in the Bible about the wrath of God. One of the most striking pictures in the whole Bible is that of the Christ rejected saying to the mountains and rocks: "Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb." Rev. 6:16.

4. Vex them in his sore displeasure. The word "vex" is rendered "trouble" in the margin. The opposers of God's government bring this trouble upon themselves. They treasure up wrath against the day of wrath. The Lord is displeased with wickedness. Most of the time he withholds the bolts of judgment, but in several great judgments in the past he has clearly shown his attitude toward sin.

5. Yet have I set my King upon my holy hill of Zion. It is not a king, nor the king, but MY KING. The word "set" means to invest with authority and place in a position by appointment. The Son of God is the divinely appointed King; he is the divinely

BELSHAZZAR'S FALL.

Evangelist P. P. Belew.

Text: "In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain." (Dan. 5:30.)

ELSHAZZAR seems to have been a regent king. The legal head of the nation had been assassinated, and Nabonidus, the son-in-law of Nebuchadnezzar and stepfather of Belshazzar, had usurped the throne. He seems to have associated Belshazzar with him in his reign, probably to strengthen his own position.

Babylon, the capital city of the kingdom, was first built by Nimrod, the grandson of Ham, but reached its apex of fame, along with the other monuments of Babylonian greatness, during the reign of Nebuchadnezzar. It was then that the great temple of Nebo was reared as if to the very skies and the almost equally grand temple of Belus was extended and adorned. It was then that the vast reservoir was dugged one hundred and forty miles in circumference, one hundred and eighty feet deep, and equipped with floodgates and sluices. It was then that the banks of the Euphrates and the shores of the Persian Gulf were lined with quays and warehouses. It was then that the grand canal was digged from the city of Hit on the Euphrates four hundred miles through the alluvial plain to the very sea. It was then that Babylon herself was surrounded with a massive wall eighty-five feet thick, three hundred and thirty-five feet high, fifty-six miles in circumference, and containing more than five hundred million cubic feet of solid masonry.

Within that mighty enclosure stood the great metropolis of the Babylonians. Its very name signified the gate of God, though it should have been called the door to hell. In splendor, opulence, and power it far surpassed any other city of its day. Chief among her glories were the majestic hanging gardens. These were artificial hills reared by heaps of masonry to the height of seventy-five feet, arranged and overlaid with sufficient soil to nourish flowers, shrubbery, and even large trees. The hanging gardens together with the great walls constituted one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world. Something of the magnificence of this great city may be seen from the scriptural allusions to it as "the lady of kingdoms," "the glory of kingdoms," "the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency," "the golden city," and "the praise of the whole earth."

But no other city erected by the pride and genius of man has suffered a more complete extinction. As a millstone thrown into the waters of the ocean vanishes from sight, so has Babylon disappeared from among the nations. A few mounds here and there which the passing centuries have covered with grass and bushes are all that is left of that once mighty metropolis.

The cause is not far to seek. No nation has furnished a more concrete demonstration of the fact that "sin is a reproach to any people." Babylon is said to have been the paradise of gluttony and lust. Their feasts were times of revel. Everything that would excite or appease appetite was demanded and wasted in the most riotous abandonment. Tropical fruits were heaped on plates of silver. Intoxicating liquors were served in glasses of gold. Throngs of women surged before the great temple of Beltis to fulfill their religious (?) obligation to deliver up themselves to the first strangers that they met. The gods were said to rejoice and drink with the people and to partake of all the excesses of the festival. There is little wonder that God wiped from the earth this cesspool of vice and iniquity. Chief in the series of causes that called forth the judgment of Jehovah on the illfated city was the profligacy of the king.

1. Belshazzar was guilty of ignoring God. This feast was an annual event in Babylon; but it was invested with special significance on this occasion, because Babylon had hitherto withstood every assault of the Medes and Persians, who were then at its gate. Therefore the king and his royal household celebrated the victory by dissipating and praising "the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone"; and, as Daniel reminded him, the God in whose hands his breath was had he not glorified. In every age it has been the wont of carnal men to ascribe praise for favors to something or someone other than God. In our own day of crass materialism men will cross land and sea to find a natural cause for every effect and will lay under contribution all their brain power to explain away the supernatural. And do not thousands make of Thanksgiving and Christmas days of dissipation and drunkenness instead of times for devotion and praise? Such is man's disregard for God.

2. Belshazzar was guilty of pride. He lifted himself "against the Lord of heaven." Over and again in the human race has it been demonstrated that "pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall." It was so in the case of Sennacherib. It was so in the case of Nebuchadnezzar. It was so in the case of Belshazzar. And it is so in all cases. Either man must cast down "every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God" or be himself brought low in the dust of humiliation. Alas for this arrogant, God-defying, Christ-rejecting, blood-despising age! Unless some force turns men from its agnostic and evolutionary philosophies to the God and faith of their fathers, the world will soon be amid the breakers of atheism and everlasting damnation!

3. Belshazzar was guilty of drunkenness. Before the thousand assembled at the great banquet he "drank wine." For ages past strong drink has been one of Satan's most faithful allies, and its ruined subjects are found from the palace of the king to the hut of the peasant. A man once set a pair of child's shoes on the counter of a saloon and said: "Give me a drink for these." The bartender pushed them back, saying: "Keep your baby's shoes; he will need them." "No," replied the man, "baby is dead"! How low has a poor wretch fallen that can pawn his dead child's shoes for liquor! But alcohol has sunk its thousands to such degradation. And equally guilty with these miserable creatures are those who lend their influence, either illegally or legally, to make possible the manufacture and sale of the abominable stuff.

4. Belshazzar was guilty of profanation. When Nezushadnezzar pillaged Jerusalem he had carried to Babylon the "golden and silver vessels . . . out of the temple which was in Jerusalem." The dissolute and drunken Belshazzar now called for those sacred vessels which had been used in the service of Jehovah only, and from them these royal libertines drank wine and praised the pagan deities.

This was the final stage in the drama of a life whose cup of iniquity was already to the brim. Mercy had fulfilled her mission. Justice could linger not and damnation refused to slumber. In the midst of this unspeakable carousal came forth fingers of a man's hand and wrote the doom of the king on the wall of his own palace before his very eyes. "The king's countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his loins were loosed and his knees smote one against another." He is not now the merry figure of a few moments ago. He no longer pours out libations to the gods or drinks to the health of his fellows. The supernatural has appeared, and the king's heart is solemnized by the token of his certain and swift destruction. His guilt is intensified by the facts that he has long rejected light and spurned opportunities. Did not both Isaiah and Jeremiah predict this event? Had not Daniel been in the king's court for years? Was not Jehovah's dealings with Nebuchadnezzar a matter of common knowledge to Belshazzar? Yes, but, like men in every age, he continued in sin till judgment broke over his own head.

In his sore distress he calls for the astrologers, the Chaldeans, the soothsayers, and promises that whoever will read the writing and make known the interpretation of it shall be clothed in scarlet, have a chain of gold about his neck, and be third ruler in the kingdom. Notwithstanding all this they could not qualify. Oh, stand back, ye workers of iniquity! God has reserved the honor of revealing his purpose to his own servant. Let Daniel be called. Crowned with the wisdom of years and filled with the Spirit of God, the prophet of Jehovah appears on the scene and makes known the interpretation.

1. The kingdom has run its course. "God hath numbered thy kingdom and hath finished it." "Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians." What! Is Babylon in danger, Are not her massive walls impregnable and her gates strongly guarded by the bravest of the nation? Does she not have sufficient supplies to endure the siege for fifteen years? What cause is there for alarm? But wilt thou know, O vain man, that God still rules in the kingdom of man and appoints over it whomsoever he will. The time has come when the head of gold must give away to the breast and arms of silver, and Babylon with all her pride and glory must lick the dust. The enemy is within the city even now. Alas! how many will learn too late that their refuge of presumption will not abide the judgment of the Almighty. Those who trust for safety in anything save the pavillion of God will have their illusive hopes forever swept away by the shafts of retribution.

2. The king's doom was imminent. "Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting." Unrecognized by the mob he was slain by an unknown hand at his palace door. Thus from a place of sacrilege and worldly pleasure, from a palace of gilded sin, from a cesspool of royal filth and oriental vices he went to meet a justly offended God. His hard and impenitent heart had treasured up wrath against the day of wrath. The day of reckoning had come; and the justice of God, like the sudden release of a long pent up and mighty stream, burst from the bounty of his fury and swept down upon the king with irresistible force. Well did Isaiah say that hell from beneath was moved to meet him at his coming. There was reserved for him "the blackness of darkness forever."

THE SAME JESUS.

Acts 1:11.

REV. W. H. REEVIS.

WHAT a sublime scene was the setting of these words! On a hill-top a short distance from Jerusalem were gathered about one hundred and twenty persons.

Our Lord Jesus had been giving his last instructions, and concluding, lifted up his hands in blessing upon them, and in this posture his form began to rise from the ground, and continued until a cloud hid him from them. And in his place, as they gazed, two heavenly messengers appeared and recalled them to the present, with these words: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven."

What must have been their meditations as they returned to Jerusalem? Let us too meditate for a while on the words uttered by the angels—"This same Jesus." What a strange being was this as the disciples recalled their associations with him! He had made claims which no man ever made. He had performed actions which no man had ever done. He had lived a perfect life before them. And what must also have impressed them was that with all this he had been a perfectly natural human being. He had even befriended the lowest of men and had shown himself a friendly person—their Friend. He had talked to them and others, eaten with them, lived with them, travelled with them and shared their lives. And now their Friend had gone.

And another thing they knew. He had brought them into an experience of God. He had been to them a Savior. As such, what emotions had been stirred in them and still lingered! Years ago I heard a veteran missionary tell an experience. He had come in contact with a new tribe, which had no conception of a true God, and no word in the language which would express the concept—Savior. They were resting around the camp fire after a strenuous day which had included an encounter with a lion. The brute had seized a young chief and would have carried him off but for the interference of the missionary who had beaten off the animal. This chief was chanting the praises of the 'Bwana' and in his eulogy he expressed the idea that his Master had saved him from the lion. At once the missionary cried out, what did the Master do? "Master saved." That was the word the missionary had sought for years. "Saved,"—Savior. He had found the word for Savior. Now he could tell them about a Savior. He tells of his joy in these words:

"I have been thirty times stricken with fever, three times attacked by lions, several times by rhinoceri, ambushed by natives, for fourteen months never saw a piece of bread, have eaten everything from ants to rhinoceri; but I would gladly go through the whole again for the joy of bringing that word 'Savior' to another tribe in Africa." To every one who realizes Jesus as Savior there must come something of this divine joy.

"That sweet comfort was mine,

When the favor divine,

I first found in the blood of the Lamb;

When my heart first believed,

What a joy I received,

What a heaven in Jesus' name."

Some such joy must have lingered in the hearts of the disciples at the words of the angels: "This same Jesus."

It might be profitable to consider what might have been the mental conceptions of the disciples as to who this Jesus might be, both at the time of this incident and later; for we cannot but think but that their thoughts of him grew more comprehensive and clear as the years passed. The disciples were not scholarly, that is to say, they were not products of the schools even of their own time. They were ordinary men—men such as might have served on a jury, had there been such an institution at that time. After all, it is not the scholar who gives the final verdict of what is true. Intense study is apt to warp the mind, making it incapable of seeing truth in its relation to other truth. Sooner or later all truth must pass the test of practicality and experience, and here the ordinary man has something to say.

The disciples had the Old Testament, substantially, as we have it today. They had Jesus Christ, the greatest Teacher of all time. If Mark Hopkins at one end of a log and a student on the other made a university, then we would say that three years of peripatetic schooling with Jesus Christ was a most proficient School of Theology. Such a school today would put a disciple in an effective relationship to the Kingdom of God, as many Theological Schools do not.

Let us see what the disciples had learned already. Nathaniel had learned early in his acquaintance with Jesus, that he was the Son of God, King of Israel. Peter learned: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God." Even doubting Thomas was finally convinced as he exclaimed: "My Lord and my God." As we open St. John's Gospel, written later, we read: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him, and without him was not anything made that was made." He must have seen that the nowadays much abused Book of Genesis spoke of his Master: "In the beginning God created"; Elohim, a plural name of God; bara, a singular verb,—created. Here is place for a Triune God. Again in the first verse of that book is named God; in the second verse,—the Spirit of God; in the third verse God spake—the Word of God. The Word was God.

Whence had John with the author of Genesis these mighty truths? He had them not by science or philosophy, but by Revelation. Science and philosophy are but the hand-maids of Revelation, and yet they sometimes try to become usurpers. So said Peter: "By the Word of God the heavens were of old. . . . But the heavens and earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men."

A proper prudence would seem the better course in our approach to what these disciples had learned in their school. For them their Master was their Authority. He was "full of (grace and) truth." And yet some have developed a doctrine of kenosis,—self-emptying,—which instead of applying to the Word being made flesh, entangles him in the misunderstandings of his time, and makes his words subject to correction by so-styled scholars of today. To us, Christ is our Teacher, our supreme Authority on all such matters. We believe with St. Paul: "In him dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily." He was God in his totality. Do I understand him fully? Not much of a God can be contained in the confines of our small minds. But, thank God, though the heaven of heavens cannot contain him, he can take up his dwelling place in the human heart.

After this incident on the hill-top where the disciples were parted from their Lord, they returned to Jerusalem, and tarried there until Pentecost. There they received the mighty outpouring of the Holy Ghost. This, too, was a great enlightener for them as to 'this same Jesus', and what he was to be to them. In these days of the rainy season in Mussoorie we sometimes find the atmosphere heavy with clouds, or haze, or dust, obscuring the vision. But let the rains fall and then the clouds lift, and what vistas do we get:—the eternal snows sketched with a pencil of silver in the sunshine, against a background of azure blue; the bit of English landscape of green meadow and copse on the Dun; and far over the rocks and woods of the Sewaliks, the yellow and brown plains of Hindustan. So by the enlightening of the Spirit we see things we did not perceive before; it clears the vision. For "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him; but God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit." Praise his holy Name!

But it is not merely an intellectual concept we receive. We do not find that the Bible ever appeals unduly to the mere intellectual. It directs itself to the heart and will. 'With the heart man believeth.' 'Repent and do the first works.' One great enlargement that came to the disciples on the day of Pentecost was a vision of extension of the scope of the Gospel. Said Peter then: "Let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made this same Jesus which ye have crucified both Lord and Christ." It was for all the house of Israel. When they had learned this, you remember that Peter was taught by a vision and coincidence and outpouring of the Spirit that this Gospel extended even to the Gentiles. They realized that there was for Jerusalem, Samaria, Galilee and the world a Universal Christ. The Methodists in America with a membership of 9,164,720 in 1928 added but 45,144 to their number, less than half of one per cent. Of course these are statistics only, but is there not something wrong? Have we lost the vision? Do we not again need to see 'this same Jesus'?

We might also mention the fact that their larger vision of Jesus did not require any long time for them to get adjusted. We sometimes hear that the reason for the retrenchment or slow advance in these days is because people are getting adjusted to new knowledge. It took the disciples not three hours to get adjusted to the light of Pentecost, and at once things began to happen. Men were converted, miracles were wrought, the Temple services began to feel the effect, and as they went to distant cities it was said of them: "These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also."

But we feel there was something more than this, and that accounts for all this. It was a new, fuller experience of God in the hearts of the disciples, that made all this difference. It was intensive before it was extensive. They had a very special, a very distinct change wrought in them. They had a connection with Jesus before this, but it didn't seem to hold them in times of crises. Peter failed, Judas betrayed, they all forsook and fled at the night of his trial. Even after his resurrection Peter said I go a-fishing, and the rest said, we go also. All that they knew of him did not keep them at their job. Shall we put it this way—that Jesus had been a figure on their landscape; now he anointed King. Despite the determined hatred and opposition of men upon earth, Jehovah's Anointed shall reign. The Bible pictures him with all the ensigns of royalty; sword, sceptre, escutcheon, crown, throne. He is now seated with the Father in his throne, but he will soon come to occupy his own throne and exercise righteous rule. The authority he has and the power he will possess are given to him by his Father (Matt. 28:18; John 3:5; 5:27; 13:3; 17:2, 24; Acts 17:31; Phil. 2:9). "My King." Think of the dignity of his person, the extent of his dominion, the greatness of his power, the blessedness of his sway.

III. MESSIAH'S MANIFESTO (VS. 7-9)

1. I will declare the decree. The scene is again changed. Christ speaks. He reveals what the Father has said to him. "Thou art my Son; this day have I begotten thee." Alexander Maclaren has said of these words: "The point of time referred to is not the beginning of personal existence, but of investiture with royalty." That investiture had its inception when our Lord arose from the dead; it will have its consummation in Messiah's reign. See Acts 13:30-37. "He was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." Rom. 1:4.

2. Ask of Me. What was Christ authorized to ask of the Father? "The heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Let us claim the heathen for Christ through prayer before he comes as judge. The uttermost parts of the earth belong to Christ by right of inheritance, creation and redemption. Let us persuade as many as possible to accept their redemption rights in Christ.

3. Thou shalt break them with a rod of iron. The rod of iron shall put down all opposition. Christ is not to find a converted world when he comes. Christ comes in judgment as well as in mercy. There is construction as well as reconstruction. Dr. Maclaren puts it thus: "Destruction has still to be done, and its most terrible energy is to be displayed in the future, when all opposition is to be withered into nothingness by the brightness of his presence." Three times in the book of Revelation it is said that he shall "rule all nations with a rod of iron" (Rev. 2:27; 12:5; 19:15). Let us now submit to his rule of love.

"Thou shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." This is the repetition of the same truth under another figure. The potter's vessel is easily broken. Those who oppose God are likened unto the potter's vessel. "For the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted" (Isa. 60:12). The Canaanites, the Egyptians, the Babylonians, the Persians, the Greeks, the Romans would not serve God, and they have perished. Ere long all earthly kingdoms shall give way to the heavenly kingdom.

No decree of the divine government can be frustrated. People may fail to recognize the claims of Jesus Christ, but Jehovah's great purpose of making Jesus Christ King of the world is unchanged and unchangeable. Whether the world will have him or not Christ is to be the King of the world. Those who will not acknowledge his Lordship must perish. Loyal hearts shall rejoice in his glorious reign. All world kingdoms are to give way to the sovereignty of Christ at his coming. See Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14; Matt. 13:40-43; Rev. 11:15.

IV. JEHOVAH'S COUNSELS (VS. 10-12).

1. Be wise—Be instructed. Jehovah entreats thus through the Psalmist-prophet. There is here a divine call to teachableness. "Do stop and consider. Learn the folly of opposition to God before it is too late." Oh, that kings and judges and people more generally would consider this call to wisdom.

Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation.

2. Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice with trembling. This is a call to do his bidding, to be governed by his laws while it is called today. We ought to rejoice that God has given us a being and filled our lives with blessings. We need to fear lest we ignore God and slight the precious opportunities of life which he has given us. If we are in tune with the infinite we'll render joyful service unto our God, but we need to fear lest we get out of tune with God and favor the revolt.

3. Kiss the Son. This is a call to reconciliation, to submission. Do him homage. During this war against Jehovah and his Anointed, fight on the winning side, that is on the side of Christ. All opposition shall cease when God blots out the incorrigible rebels. "Be wise. Kiss the Son." This call is backed by a most weighty reason: "Lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little." "Blessed are all they that put their trust in him." Heed the appeal of infinite tenderness which closes this wonderful Psalm. Realize the blessedness of those who fight for, not against, God. The blessedness that is ours now is a foretaste of the eternal blessedness that is to be.

Man's little day of opposition will soon close. Blessed be God, the Redeemer—King comes! He comes to reign!

"Let all that love Him hasten

The coming glorious day,

By earnest consecration,

To walk the narrow way.

By gathering in the lost ones,

For whom our Lord did die,

For the crowning day is coming by and by."

Prayer and the Word of God.

DAVID FANT, JR.

"Behold a sower went forth to sow, and when he had sowed, some seeds . . . fell into good ground." (Matt. 13:3-8).

How constantly in the Scriptures do we counter such words as "field," "seed," "sower," "reaper," "seed-time," and "harvest-time." Employing such metaphors, the Lord Jesus Christ interprets a parable of nature in Matt. 13 by a parable of grace. The field is the world and the good seed is the word of God. Whether the word be spoken or written, it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; and in our work of evangelism the whole world is our field; every creature the object of effort and every book and tract a seed of God necessary for sowing of the world field and completion of the harvest.

Who can estimate the good that may be accomplished through the faithful sowing of even the smallest Spirit-blessed seed? In the realm of nature so rapid does the seed multiply in geometrical progression that a single grain of wheat multiplied through twenty successive crops might yield enough seed to plant every square foot in the solar system.

Richard Sibbs wrote a tract styled "The Bruised Reed." A tin peddler gave a copy of it to a bootblack by the name of Richard Baxter. Through it Baxter was saved, God enriched his life, and he wrote "A Call to the Unconverted." This came into the hands of Phillip Doddridge, who was saved and later led to write "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul." This latter was read by William Wilberforce, and the great emancipator contributed his unusual gifts to the preparation of "A Practical View of Christianity." Leigh Richmond received this, his heart was likewise touched, he was converted and wrote a little book, "The Dairyman's Daughter," which has been translated into forty-seven languages and has probably been the means of winning hundreds of souls to the Lord Jesus Christ.

David Brainerd at the age of thirteen was brought under conviction by reading of Jane-way's "Token for Children." At the age of twenty-one he was saved and went to Yale College, during which time he was brought under the influence of George Whitefield of England. Brainerd was expelled from Yale for saying that a certain professor at that institution "Had no more religion than a chair." (Modernism in our universities is possibly not as modern as we thought—in fact, it is just as modern as, and also as ancient as the devil), and also for being absent from a revival service without leave. Brainerd was sent as a missionary to the wild North American Indians by a society in Scotland. While preaching he kept a diary, which after his death was edited by Rev. Jonathan Edwards. A humble shoemaker, William Carey, read it and went to India; Henry Martyn read it and went to India and Persia; McCheyne read it and went to the Jews; Dr. Edward McKendree Bounds read it and went to his knees in intercessory prayer at 4 A. M. for fifty years, and left us his "Spiritual Life Books," the greatest devotional books of the century; M. W. Hodge read it, was influenced by Bounds, edited his "Spiritual Life Books" and now has issued the only American edition of the Life of Brainerd. "A good book is the precious life blood of a master spirit, embalmed and treasured for this world and that which is to come."

God can do wondrous things through a single, yielded life. Saul of Tarsus, with a vision of the crucified, died daily that he might live eternally in souls saved. As a result of that one life, churches were planted, throughout Asia Minor and founded at Philippi, which became the mother church of all Europe and America. He left fourteen epistles that are our heritage today for reading, study and preaching.

Why Grieve.

CLYDE EDWIN TUCK.

Why should we for the sainted dead repine,
Friends who no longer journey with us here?

Though here no more their happy faces shine,

We feel, at times, they may be very near.

They wait ahead, and are not lost, we know,
Except to mortal sense—somehow, somewhere

They live and love again, while here below
We glimpses catch of their celestial sphere.

For love can never change in influence,—

It reaches out from Heaven to our earth,
All suffering and care to recompense,
For in that purer realm it had its birth.

For God is Love, and He is all in all;

We live in spirit only and in Him;
He who takes note of every sparrow's fall
Will never let the light of love grow dim.

Love that rejoices in another's good,
Like that our friends departed for us bore,
And meekly all the darts of hate withstood,
Can perish not, but lives for evermore.

It still enfolds us, and would light our way,
Would act as anchor to our faith and hope;
It bids us doubt not, but to watch and pray
Until truth's dawn breaks on life's higher slope.

Hungry for the Heart.

BY H. B. HARDY.

This volume contains inspiring chapters on The Hunger for God, Happiness, Knowledge, Social Life, Love and Immortality. The author deals with the different phases of heart hunger in a most helpful way and makes it very plain that real satisfaction for every hunger is found in Christ. Don't fail to get a copy and feed your soul on these rich truths. The book was published at $1.00. We have a limited number of copies that we are closing out at 60c each, postpaid. Order a copy today. If more convenient, stamps will be acceptable. Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

THOMASVILLE, GEORGIA.

We have just closed what is perhaps the best meeting in the history of our church, with Rev. W. W. McCord, of Sale City, as evangelist. This meeting was sent to us in answer to prayer. We had been desperate in prayer but hardly knew what to ask for, but God knew what we needed and sent Bro. McCord to our rescue. The meeting ran a little less than three weeks, but during that time a number of professions were made. Seven adults came into the church, one of whom is a fine young man with the call of God upon him to preach the gospel. This did not seem to be an opportune time for a meeting but the writer is convinced that any time is God's time if people will meet the necessary conditions.

Rev. McCord is a strong preacher and is especially gifted in drawing crowds. While he was here we had the largest audience we have had in our new church. He preaches the gospel in its fullness without fear or favor. His scathing denunciation of sin makes some folks mad, but one thing they have to say is that he does it with a heart full of love for the sinner.

During the meeting several were anointed for healing. One woman came for more than a hundred miles to be healed. She had been broken up in a wreck; her hip was sore and one arm could not be lifted but a little above her waist. After she had been anointed and prayed for she no longer felt the soreness in her hip and could comb her hair with the stiffened arm. God always honors such faith. Her young son and his wife came with her and they both were beautifully saved. Another son who lives here, had previously said that he did not believe in sanctification, but during the meeting he went to the altar and got the experience. Later he told the writer that going after his mother to be healed stimulated his faith to believe that God could sanctify him. A number stated that by God's help they were quitting the use of tobacco, which holds so many in this Southland in bondage.

Bro. McCord certainly stands by the pastor and the church. He is unselfish almost to a fault. He looks after every other interest before his own. While here he secured a pounding for the pastor worth easily twenty-five dollars and raised all of the back salary. He put the church before the people as it had not been before. May the Lord bless him and keep him busy. The churches over the country would do well to secure the services of this man as evangelist.

D. W. Simpson, Pastor.

LAKE ARTHUR, LOUISIANA.

We are rejoicing over the glorious soul-saving camp. He was there in mighty power to save. Altars were crowded. Souls were saved, reclaimed and his children filled with his Holy Spirit. The President stated publicly last Sunday that this was the best camp in ten years for Lake Arthur, La. There is a way to have a real soul saving revival. You would not start each and every camp or revival exactly alike?

The Evangelist should be a man of much earnest prayer. He ought to get his directions from God. Messages should be directed by him. I would never go into the Holy Temple without direct leadings as to the exact message for that hour. It is his work, he called me and he knows the needs of the people who will be there each time, hence he knows the exact message needed for each service.
