OPEN DOORS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

By The Editor.

WE have entered the open doors of the New Year. How swiftly the year 1928 has passed away for those of us who have been full of desire for the advancement of the glory of God, the salvation of souls, and the betterment of the race. Indolence makes time heavy. Its wheels drag and the years are long and weary. To the industrious, the days fly by and the train of time pulls out from the station almost before we have time to get aboard, and we whirl through the months with marvelous rapidity.

What shall we do during the year 1929? We must have an objective. We must undertake something. There must be some sort of definite end in view. There must be plan. There must be economy of time and good, hard, honest work. The aimless life will be a useless life. If there is no objective, there can be no definite plans and no intelligent concentration of effort. We must have an object so worthy, a purpose so urgent that we will lay wise plans and devote ourselves with cheerful energy to the accomplishment of ends desired.

Let it be remembered that, what ought to be done may be done. Do not become discouraged or surrender because a worthy object seems to be beyond our powers. Remember God. Do not let yourself forget that there is a great, Almighty, resourceful God; that he hears prayer and gives help; that on the mountains round about us there are invisible chariots and horses; that those that be for us are more than those that be against us. We must be thoughtful and wise. There must be no personal pride or ambition corrupting our objectives and our plans. The glory of God and the blessing of humanity must stand out far above all things else. Then we can work with a will. Then we can pray with faith for answer to prayer.

Personally, at the opening of this New Year, I am thanking God that the past year has been crowded with unusual service. He has answered prayer and renewed my strength like the eagle's. I had a hope and dream of a sequestered spot with some good books to rest a bit and watch with quiet interest the procession pass along, but the battle is so hard, the foes are so numerous, the needs are so great I cannot afford to desert the ranks of active service and retire to the evening shades. O, that the God of my orphan babyhood, the guide and comforter of my youth, the strength and joy of my manhood, may gird me up for better battle than in any of the past years; that in this good year of 1929 I may see his name glorified in the spread of his gospel, in the salvation of souls, in the increased circulation and effectiveness of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, in a great revival of holiness in Kentucky, and in the spread of the gospel and experi-

A NEW YEAR'S WISH FOR YOU.

"The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: the Lord make His face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."
(Numbers 6:24, 25, 26.)

"The Lord Bless Thee."

How shall He Bless Thee?
With the gladness that knoweth not decay
With the riches that cannot pass away
With the sunshine that makes an endless day—
Thus May He Bless Thee!
"And Keep Thee!"

How Shall He Keep Thee?

With the all-covering shadow of His wings
With the strong love that guards from evil things
With the sure power that safe to glory brings—Thus May He Keep Thee!

ence of full salvation in Jesus Christ all over this great continent and around the world. Give me an interest in your prayers that my body may be strong, my mind clear and active, my soul pure, and my heart on fire for the spread of the gospel of full redemption and the glory of the blessed Redeemer, our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

THE NEW YEAR.

THIS is the first issue of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD for the year 1929. I trust THE HERALD has been interesting and helpful to its many readers. We published enough sermons in these columns last year to make two large volumes if printed in book form.

We sent out enough printed matter in these pages last year on the subject of holiness to make a large book on that gracious doctrine and experience. The revival reports put into book form would make two large books. The camp meeting reports would make a good sized book. The matter printed in THE HERALD the year of 1928 against the attacks on the inspiration of the Scriptures by modern liberals would make a large and useful volume.

The many excellent discussions on the various phases of religion, doctrine, life and service printed in THE HERALD the past year would make, in book form, several good sized volumes. Letters of appreciation of the work THE HERALD is doing have come into this office by thousands. For this, we feel profoundly grateful, and we pray God to give us special grace and wisdom for the work of the coming year.

Our one supreme desire is to help the people in these trying times to find the Lord, to know the truth, to be saved from all sin, to live for God and humanity, to serve their fellowbeings, and to get safely home to heaven. Sacks full of letters have come from those who claim to have been helped. We praise God and gird ourselves for earnest effort to make 1929 the best year in the history of THE HERALD. One of the hopeful features about THE HERALD is that it has large room for improvement, and it shall be our purpose to make it much better the coming year.

God helping me, I shall keep the flag flying against all forms of modern liberalism that is breaking in upon us from many quarters. I ask no favors, and give no quarters to the spirit of skepticism that would tear the Bible to tatters and undertake to rob our Lord of his Godhead, blood atonement, and saving power. I believe the Bible is a divine revelation from God. I love its truths, adore the God it reveals, and trust for full salvation in the Christ it offers. I crave the abiding, comforting and empowering of the Holy Spirit it promises. I rejoice to have spent much of my life in the service of the blessed Trinity, but regret that my service has not been better. I cast my mistakes and sins under the atoning blood of Christ and, if I enter the new year, it will be with a song. If I die, I'll go home to heaven washed in the precious blood of the Lamb.

Let us gird ourselves for battle as never before, giving ourselves more completely to the Lord, being filled more and more with his Holy Spirit, and pressing the work with an untiring and devoted faith in the great task of the world's evangelization. Let every reader of THE HERALD make it a point to bring the doctrine of entire sanctification to some one who has not heard of this gracious truth. Circulate books, hand out tracts, give away copies of holiness papers, help to educate young preachers who are to go out and publish abroad the gospel of a full salvation, contribute something to send sanctified missionaries to the foreign field, and keep your own heart fired with a passion for the lost about you. Our faith is strong for a year of victory. Let us put on the whole armor of God and go forth in the strength of HIM who is mighty to save and strong to deliver. Pray for us, that God may grant us wisdom and grace for every good word and work, and so guide us that his name may be glorified and his people blessed. Let us see to it that by divine grace we put ourselves into that blest company who love God, then without doubt or fear we can claim the "All things." Let us live this year as though it were our last; and who knows, but before another twelve months shall have passed away, some who are reading these lines will have conquered the last enemy and gone home to be with the Master forever.

"Thou art with me I know,
I feel the sweet flow
Of the sin cleansing wave's gladd'ning tide.
I am washed from my sin,
Made all holy within,
And in Jesus sweetly abide."

KINGDOM NOTES FROM THE FAR EAST

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Away back in Chinese history Emperor Shi Hwangti, who reigned seventeen hundred years before America was discovered, began the great Chinese Wall. He has been known as the Napoleon of China. In the course of time he became vain and proud; he has been described with a high pointed nose, slit eyes, a pigeon breast, a wolf voice and a tiger heart. He was stingy, cringing and graceless. He decided that he wanted all Chinese History to begin with him, so he ordered all books of history, poetry and classics burned and he killed off all the scholars he could find. How much this reminds us of Job 32:9, "Great men are not always wise."

Of this poor, conceited Emperor and his stone wall may be applied the words of Pope in his "Essay on Man":

"Chaos of thought and passion, all confused;
Still by himself abused or disabused;
Greatest half to rise, and half to fall:
Great lord of all things, yet prey to all;
Sole judge of truth, in endless error hurled;
The glory, jest and riddle of the world."

Martial law still prevails in Shanghai. It is an armed camp—Chinese, British, French, Japanese, Italian, etc. Frequently as we returned to Bethel after speaking in the city at night, we passed through sections bristling with bayonets. We have been stopped often by soldiers who inquired as to our destination, who we were, etc., etc. One night we were asked if any Russians were in our car. They are determined to wipe out Communism. It is a deadly thing and the Nationalists show no mercy; when a man is proven to be a Communist he is beheaded right soon. They have sometimes nailed the head up in some public place in the Chinese City so as to warn all those inclined to bolshevistic tendencies, as to what awaits them, if they carry on any propaganda. Bolshevism, both politically and theologically, is of the Devil. The British Weekly said recently:

"The real spirit of Bolshevism is accurately revealed by the famous, or infamous, cartoon published on the front cover of one of the principal Red magazines, showing a Russian workman, with sleeves rolled up and a sledge hammer in his hand, with his foot on the first rung of a ladder, and the following wording underneath: 'I have already smashed our earthly thrones and now I am going up to shatter the throne of God.'"

"You might put the whole case for Bolshevism first and last in these terms—that it is the unflinching proposal to eradicate from human nature every vestige and reminiscence of Christianity."

I have recently been reading an Essay from the pen of Rev. J. MacGowan, for fifty years a Missionary in China. It is entitled: "The Way to Win the Whole World For Christ." In this article he sets forth "Three great Principles of actions that workers in the mission field should never fail to carry out."

1. The first of these is that the preaching of the Gospel to the heathen is the first and supreme duty of the Missionary and may in no circumstances be neglected.

2. Second great principle is that no person, man or woman shall be accepted for service in the foreign field whose heart is not aflame with the passion for preaching the Gospel to the heathen. Anyone lacking that supreme motive will only prove a hindrance to the spread of Christ's Kingdom.

3. Third great principle is that no Missionary Society or any of its agents shall interfere in any way with a native church, by exercising authority over it, or by assisting it with funds either for its support, or for the building of its school or church.

This last statement is a trifle extravagant, I think, and may seem strange to American readers who have been giving their money to foreign missions, but the fact is that self-supporting churches have frequently been the most spiritual, while those who have been kept going with foreign money have crystallized into formal affairs and ceased as soul-winning centers. Some one told me since I have been in China that one of the things that has hindered the work of God has been the fact that the Chinese have not been sufficiently thrown upon their own resources, but have learned too much to feed out of mission hands. I have preached in two American-built churches in China, the money being American and the plans of the church also. In both instances the architecture of the church was totally unsuited to China, and in both instances a lot of money was spent uselessly. One of those churches today is empty—the other decidedly too large and ridiculously out of keeping with Chinese needs as a place of worship.

Now let nothing that I have said ease up the consciences of folks who make little or no contribution to foreign missions. The fact is, that today in China consecrated missionary money placed in the right hands for the spread of the pure gospel and Bible holiness can go farther and accomplish more than ever. In the holiness campaign now on under the leadership of Dr. Mary Stone and Miss Jennie V. Hughes, of "Bethel," Shanghai, and carried on in the North by such a veteran missionary as Rev. C. W. Troxel, of the National Holiness Association, will be touching China in all the Provinces and giving the gospel of holiness to countless thousands. We are about to launch The Chinese "Guide to Holiness" as a monthly, and the work of translating a lot of holiness literature has been started at Bethel. Consecrated money spent just now in holiness evangelism in China will pay the richest dividends in souls.

About the most remarkable conversion in the history of China Mission was a noted Confucian Scholar who has been known as Pastor Hsi (Shee). His life written by Mrs. Howard Taylor, is a wonderful story. He became one of the noted preachers of the China Inland Mission. He had a unique way of preaching, rarely taking a text, preferring to make use of a whole passage or chapter. Here is an example from Acts 27, the story of Paul's shipwreck.

1. The Indifference of the Unsaved. They pay no heed to the message of God through his servants; just as the centurion and the captain of that ship turned a deaf ear to the warnings of Paul.

2. The prosperous beginning of a course of sin. "The South wind blowing softly."

3. The short lived character of the sinner's happiness: The wind and tempests soon arose.

4. The sinner's futile efforts to save himself: Undergirding the ship and casting away the tackling.

5. The despair of the soul: Neither moon nor stars for many days appearing: all hope of rescue gone.

6. The need of perseverance on the part of God's servants. Paul's advice at length prevailed.

7. The final salvation of all who obey God and trust his promises: The whole ship's company brought safely to land.

Coffins are very much in evidence all over China. Many people have their coffins in the house with them. I read of a young man who returned home after a long absence and he made a present of a coffin to his mother. Of course, it was appreciated because the Chinese cannot endure the thought of not being buried in a coffin. That great Chinese statesman, Li Hung Chang, who went around the world to study Western ways and civilization, always carried his coffin with him. It was a big piece of baggage but where Chang went his coffin went with him.

It is a rare thing to go through the streets without seeing a coffin suspended on bamboo poles and carried on the shoulders of eight or ten coolies. Yesterday we passed one of those funeral processions and saw the sons in sackcloth heading the coffin. They wear much sackcloth on these occasions, especially the sons as they fear it was due to some wrong doing or sin of theirs that their father died. Along with the coffin go bands of music and bearers carrying banners, pictures, chairs, the ancestral tablet and other things. One funeral procession was headed by two immense wooden figures of men over ten feet high with faces on them depicting terror and dreadfulness. We were given to understand that these were the guides and guards of the spirit of the departed in the other world. These figures were so unspeakably ugly and wicked looking that it would seem as though there could only be one possible place where they would be welcome.

Heathen religion has no "immortality to preach and no Jesus to pilot the dying across the dark sea of death into the ports of eternal bliss and felicity."

SALVATION REVIVALS.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

SALVATION is received by heart faith (Rom. 10:10), as distinguished from intellectual assent. Heart faith is possible only after true repentance for sin. Genuine penitence is caused by conviction of sin by the Holy Spirit. The sin convicting work of the Holy Spirit is largely contingent upon Spirit-filled believers (John 16:7, 8). A Spirit-filled person or church is a praying person or church.

Thus are salvation revivals, the only kind worth having, quickly traced directly back to revival conditions in the church and community, produced by a Spirit-filled, praying church. This is God's normal way for salvation revivals, local, general and worldwide. "As soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth." (Isa. 66:8), is God's figure showing us the relation his people sustain to the salvation of the lost about them. A woman cannot have her babe on her bosom, until she first travail in birth for it. Neither may we expect babes in Christ, except as we travail in prayer for souls. In Nature God provides a loving, tender mother to nurse and nourish the new born infant; and soul travail for the salvation of the lost, prepares the church to be a nursing mother to the new converts.

In a coal mining town in Pennsylvania, a small Methodist society had been faithful amid adverse circumstances. With no church building, their public services were limited to Sabbath afternoons in the public school-house, where they had Sabbath school every week, and preaching once in two weeks. They faithfully maintained prayer and class meetings in their various homes each week, and their family altars daily. This condition existed several years. In my second year as pastor, a small church building was erected and dedicated at great sacrifice by the new members. This was one of four preaching places, and ours was the only church organization in the town. At once, we went into the revival meeting for which they had prayed and waited, and with most gracious results. Though their number was less than one half of one percent of the population of the place, of very wicked people, they had kept revival conditions there, and the impact of that meeting was felt throughout the community and beyond. Did space permit, I could recite various events showing the influence those few Christians had over the people, generally.

In an isolated village in the Allegheny Mountains of Pennsylvania, of some 300 or 400 souls, was a Methodist society of fewer than forty members. They had a small church building, and maintained the regular weekly program of services, with preaching every second Sabbath in the afternoon. On my third trip there, some of them asked about a revival. They had not had one in a long time. Their children and neighbors were unconverted; and the unusually large number of young, unmarried men in the village, due to the coal mines and stone quarries, were rough and wicked. Some of the church people were very solicitous for the salvation of the unconverted. When they learned that I was engaged in a revival meeting at another point on the circuit, they proposed to have prayer meetings until I could be there. In the winter weather, they kept the church warm, and each evening they would gather about the altar for prayer for their families and neighbors. This continued for some weeks. The first night I preached there, three young girls from the Sabbath school were converted, after deep repentance and earnest prayer. When they knelt at the altar, one of the praying men exclaimed, "Praise God! This is only kindling wood! We're going to have a big fire here!" And we did! When the special meetings closed, there were scarcely half a dozen persons of responsible age in the place, who were not converted; and some were sanctified. All those wicked young men were part of the harvest. One of them held out for two weeks, and when he knelt at the altar, he soon went over on the floor as one dead. He was confined to his bed for three days, and to the house for a week. His testimony was, "I fought God for two weeks, and he nearly killed me!" Those few praying, travelling people had plowed and prepared the ground in advance.

An old time country Methodist church had dwindled to a few unspiritual, indifferent, careless members. In the early days of Methodism, it had been a center of spiritual life and power, where people attended in large numbers from a radius of ten or twelve miles. The shifting of population had left it stranded, like a log when the water recedes. It was a populous community, but with very few saved people. The few members were discouraged, and proposed to abandon it. One fully saved, Spirit-filled man stemmed the tide. He declared that God was not done with the old place, but that they should have a revival and get sinners converted and sanctified. He was regarded with amusement or ridicule. But, he was praying for a revival! At conference, the presiding elder, instead of cutting them off, as they expected, told me, the new appointee, that the place was a part of my regular work. The first time I met the praying man, he greeted me about like this: Grasping my hand with a firm grip, he began pumping my arm, as he exclaimed, "Glory to God, Brother Hunter! We're going to have a big revival here this winter (it was then November). I've been praying for it every day for a year, and every time I pray for it, I get a blessing on my own soul. Now, God would not do that, if he was not going to answer my prayer! O, it's coming! We'll see this old house full to the doors!"—it seated near 500. His faith was honored. The usual congregation had been between twenty and thirty. In the most inclement weather of the winter, people came five and six miles and filled the place. Many were converted and some sanctified. People were convicted at home, who had not been in the meetings. Faults were confessed, estrangements healed, enmities settled. Previous to that meeting I had labored earnestly through three weeks at another point, with little visible results. There was enmity and division in the church, and they would not confess and repent. But, some from that neighborhood, went to the other meeting and were saved. One man from that place attended the other meeting some, but did not himself get into the current. He said to the praying man, "This is the kind of a meeting we need at our place." The other replied quickly, "Why, the Lord tried to give one, and you would not have it!"

I know what God can do through a few earnest, praying, travelling people. We need not wait for the entire church to get on its knees. The promise is to two of you who agree. While I have known some gracious revivals where there was seemingly no travail in the church, the other is God's plan. God does not send natural babies into the world, except there is a loving mother to care for it; nor is it his way to send spiritual babes where there is no travelling church to mother them.

"I Will Hear What The Lord Will Speak"

(Psalm 85:8)

C. V. FAIRBAIRN.

WHY will men, even professing Christians, refuse to do what God's Word plainly declares they must do? Dr. Schofield relates how a certain man puzzled for a long time over a certain passage of Scripture. Finally, however, he decided to take it to mean just what it appeared to mean on the very face of it. At once the passage became delightfully simple. O God, give us hearts willing to hear and heed Thy Voice. Amen.

Hosea complains that the people of his day were "destroyed for lack of knowledge," not because they did not have the chance to know, but because they "rejected knowledge." (Hos. 4:6). Isaiah, who prophesied about the same time, accuses them, "Thou didst not lay these things to thy heart." (Isa. 47:7). To Ezekiel, the Lord said, "They come into thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after covetousness. And, lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument: for they hear thy words, but they do them not." (Ezek. 33:32). Just how deliberate was this rejection, in Isaiah's time, and again in Jesus' time, can be gathered from Christ's quotation from Isaiah, "For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should turn to me, and I should heal them." (Matt. 13:15). And what terrible denunciation does Stephen hurl into the teeth of his adversaries, "Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost." (Acts 7:51).

Beloved, we are just now considering a very important matter. Well spake the Holy Ghost, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

Millions profess to be on the way to heaven. Brother, you do. Sister, so do you. So do I. Jesus says, "There shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth." (Rev. 21:27). And again, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." (Heb. 12:14). Now, if we are not pure and holy, we have no hope of entering the pearly gates. But, "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." (Matt. 5:8). But we cannot be made all pure and holy unless we hear God's Word, give heed, and walk in the light of it. Jesus' very simple and plainly worded prayer was, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." (Jno. 17:17). His Word must be believed, that is, received in faith. If thus received, then, since we really believe it is even as God says, we will act according to it. Hence Peter says that God "purified their hearts by faith" (Acts 15:8, 9): and again, "Ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit." (1 Peter 1:22).

Now, if entrance to heaven is conditioned upon purity of heart; and purity of heart depends upon obedience to the truth; and obedience to the truth will never be unless we in faith receive the Word as the very expression of God's thought and will for us; how far short, then, do many, many, many fall, who, though they profess and contend that they do believe and receive the Word as his very word, nevertheless show very plainly, by refusing to walk in the light of it, that their faith is not so very profound after all.

Why, we cannot have any fellowship with him even here, unless we so accept the Word, and walk according to it. It is "the entrance of Thy Word" which "giveth light." (Psa. 19:130). "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (Jno. 1:7). Now, if we do not walk in the light, then we walk in darkness. We must, therefore, have gotten away from God; for "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." (1 Jno. 1:5). Then what are we? "If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth." (1 Jno. 1:6). Then here we are walking in darkness because we have refused to give heed to the Light, his Word. But, "the path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day;" while "the way of the wicked is as darkness; they know not at what they stumble." (Prov. 4:18, 19). Then, if we walk not according to truth, but in darkness, we are not even justified, say nothing about being sanctified wholly.

IN OBEDIENCE ONLY IS THERE SAFETY. —

It is "he that keepeth my sayings" that "shall never see death." (Jno. 8:51). It is "whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, (Christ's) and doeth them" that is "likened unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock." (Matt. 7:24-27). If we reject his Word, he will reject us; for "because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee." (Hos. 4:6).

Why do men refuse to walk according to God's Word? Because of the pride of their carnal hearts. "The wicked through pride of his countenance will not seek after God." (Psa. 10:4). Then, "Hear ye, and give ear; be not proud: for the Lord hath spoken. Give glory to the Lord your God, before he cause darkness, and before your feet stumble upon the dark mountain, and, while ye look for light, he turn it into the shadow of death, and make it gross darkness. But if ye will not hear it, my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and mine eyes shall weep sore, and run down with tears, because the Lord's flock is carried away captive." (Jer. 13:15-17). O, beloved, let us take the only safe course. "Today if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." (Heb. 3:15).

Special Notice!

Frequently, we shall have in this paper special messages to those hungering and thirsting after righteousness. It will be a short, pointed bit of instruction on how to enter the experience of entire sanctification. Send THE HERALD to your friends who need this instruction. We shall also have messages on "How to Win a Sinner to Christ." We shall have instruction to a seeker on how to find Christ. Help us to sow THE HERALD broadcast everywhere. H. C. MORRISON.

A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE.

Dr. Walter Benwell Hinson.

"Sleep on now; rise, let us be going."
(Matt. 26:45).

IN the greatest desert song that has ever been written—a song that could not have been written, only that God helped the writer—Moses tells us what we all know to be true if we are thoughtful and earnest, as he says, "We spend our years as a tale that is told." Did you ever stop long enough to think of what that sentence means? He told you a story standing in the sunlight or under the stars; and the recital of his experience was very beautiful in your ears. But you undertook to tell it a week later; and that which occupied thirty minutes as the speaker told it to you, occupied less than two minutes as you retailed it to another. Only the high out-jutting peaks of the story were remembered by you; all the details of it were forgotten. And Moses inspired by God dared to say that that is the way we spend our years—"as a tale that is told."

Now you can tell whether that statement is true or not if you look back over the year that is just about to close. What millions of words you said! How many of them can you recall? What multitudinous words were poured into your ear! How many of them do you remember? It is questionable whether any man could stand up here tonight and repeat twenty sentences that he has either said or heard during 1928. "We spend our years as a tale that is told!"

And how ceaselessly we endeavored and accomplished and achieved! What hundreds of finished tasks fell from your fingers and from mine! What multitudinous deeds we wrought! How many of them can we recall? How many of them stand up clear as Mount Hood when the air is rare and thin? Startlingly few! How much was crowded into your life and mine during this past year! What novels might have been written about it! What psychologies were in it! But how much of it can you recall? Three hundred and sixty-four days! Yet how many of those days stand out clear and plain in your memory tonight? What people you met, with whom you conversed and had dealings, and who impressed your mind in various ways, and perhaps agitated your heart! But how many of those faces can you recall tonight? How many of those scenes appear to your mental vision? "We spend our years as a tale that is told!"

Where are all these words that we spoke? Where are they gone? I heard some one say today that a letter from India conveyed the news that a radio message given here in Portland was heard in that far-distant country. I wonder if those words we have spoken went any farther than India! I wonder what has become of them! Where are they? And as I wondered that, I began to think that perhaps after all the sky is nothing but a great sounding-board, and all these multitudinous words that we have spoken during the year that is dying are all somewhere. And if this be a hackneyed statement, it is a true and suggestive one—God knows every word that you spoke during 1928! And I suppose every single word I spoke made some ineffaceable impression on myself, or on some one else—as on God.

And all the deeds that made up your experience during the year—where are they? There is a record of them in other lives though the act or the thought does not stay with you—

"It reaches through other lives far on." What about that record? It is not only in the lives of others, but it is in you; you are the sum total of your experience during this year. I remember when I crudely thought that God kept books, and that he had a great ledger, and under the name W. B. Hinson, he had written down the things I said and did and the sort of experience that made up my life. But very soon I saw the crudity of all that and I said, "I am the record; I am a part of all I have ever seen, or ever heard, or ever been—I am the record." Oh, my friends, at the last, God will not have to put out his omnipotent hand and move us to the right or to the left; for voluntarily and of our accord we shall move to the right or move to the left. You are the record of your experience of 1928!

I suddenly recall a horrible punishment they had in early English history, when for a certain crime they took the body of the man who had been murdered and hung it around the neck of the murderer. I know people who have done that concerning the past of life. I meet with some representative of that class almost every week of my life. I talked with a man not very long ago, and his reason for not attempting a better life, for not emerging from the mist and the shadow, and for not accepting the greatest blessing God has to give, was a sin he committed long years ago; and he had persisted in taking that sin and hanging it about his soul; and whenever an aspiration from God touched his brain or heart or spirit, that man said, "No, this past sin forbids that." And as I told him of the sunny promises of God, to them all he turned a deaf ear, and listened only to the thunder that came out of his past. That is a wrong use to which to put the past. How do I know it? Because if we all did it, heaven might close its twelve gates, and hell would rejoice, and all the world would grow hopeless and would despair and die.

But should we cut ourselves entirely from it? No! As I shall show you in a minute, very largely we sail over the same course year after year. Now the rock you struck in a certain latitude or longitude this year, you should mark on your life-chart and not strike that rock again. That is the wise use to which to put the past. What is that saying we have—"If a dog bites me once, it is the dog's fault; if the same dog bites me twice, it is my fault." There is some philosophy of life in that statement! There may be some extenuation offered for striking the rock once; but if you deliberately steer for that same rock a second time, I fear God will call you a fool who could not learn by experience!

And oh, out of that past there comes to us, if we are wise, great beacon lights of warning, and bells ringing out to tell where the rocks are just underneath the wave—solemn warnings, as well as great invitations. We should wisely use the past.

When I was back east, I heard of a preacher who was slandered; and he stepped out of his pulpit and remained silent ten years, until the scouring of conscience, declared the slander to be what it was—a lie from the pit of perdition. That preacher was a fool! Why should a man stop in his progress because a coyote screams upon a hill? In God's name, let the man go on, and let the animal do what it likes! Why should a man swerve from a high and holy purpose because of something rising up out in the darkness? That is foolishness; and yet most of us are doing that sort of thing.

I could go on until nine o'clock talking about this! Oh, the men who have told me, with sorrow in their tones, "We would join the church, only"—and then they hark back! Let me say it again solemnly and clearly, for I know I have God's truth back of this statement, no one has a right to take his past and hang it around his soul as you would attach a hundred pound weight to an imprisoned eagle! Cut yourself loose from it by the mercy of God and the cross of Christ! For

"I hold it true with him who sings,
On one clear harp in divers tones,
That men may rise on stepping stones
Of their dead selves to higher things."

Now is that in accord with this Book which furnishes me with all I have to tell you? It is! Whoever made a grosser blunder than did Simon Peter in the judgment hall when Jesus Christ was being tried? Whoever did a deadlier thing than three times over deny all knowledge of the Christ, and seek to make the denial believable by attaching an oath to it? But what did Peter do? He got the thing made right with his God. Whether he ever got it made right with his fellow disciples is not mine to say. But he made it right with God! And when at Pentecost the call came for a "rock man," this same man who had denied and blasphemed rose up and preached the most startling sermon that has been preached since Jesus went back to the glory. How did he do it? By cutting himself loose from the judgment hall, getting the sin forgiven and the wrong righted; and to quote that line again, "on the ruin of himself" he rose up to an unselfish Christian life, for which all the world is glad.

Make the application of that. Do not let your past lie there unrighted, so far as it is in your power to right it. But because you slipped and fell is no reason why you should never walk again. "To err is human;" and to seek forgiveness and live out your life for the welfare of the world and the glory of God is the Christian duty of every man who knows his God. "Sleep on now."

Mr. Gladstone expressed his contempt for "oncens." He meant by that the people who went to church only on Sunday morning.

They are not here now, for this is Sunday night! But in another sense, I have had disgust for the "oncners"—people who when we suggest what is easily within their power, say, "We used to"—this is their old stock phrase—"We have borne the burden and heat of the day." Well, there is a good deal of the "burden and heat of the day" to be borne yet, and in the name of God, I ask you when were you released from your obligation to serve him so long as you breathe! There is no discharge in this war! If you think the day has gone by when you can in any way by your life benefit man, aid the church, and glorify God, I say it is time you are in heaven! And the Lord get you there as soon as he can, for you may be of some service the other side of the stars, but you are no good down here! So you can say even to that past of high achievement, "'Sleep on,' for I am not bringing you into the future, and I am not depending on you for the rest of my life."

Concerning your future—what? "Rise, let us be going." And it looms before you and me today, if we are thoughtful—and if we are not thoughtful nothing looms up, unless it be our stupidity; it looms like a great sphinx, 1929! Question it, it makes no reply; appeal to it, there is no answer; and argue with it, you cannot for it takes two to make an argument!

You can know a great deal of 1929 if you have been thoughtful and watchful during 1928. Why? Because very largely your life will be duplicated in '29. The same old duties! How many mornings did I come in on that Fulton street car, aiming to be in my study before the clock struck eight? I shall have to do it again! How many tasks did I pick up day after day? I shall have to pick up the same old tasks again!

And so I say very largely we can forecast the year ahead by the year that has gone. I think it is interesting and beneficial to do it. I have known suffering; I have known sin; I have known bereavement; I have known slander; I have known pretty nearly everything that is bad; and yet I thank God for my life. And I had keen sympathy with Huxley, the agnostic, when I read a few days ago that he said in a solemn mood, "After all, I wish there existed another life; I am sorry I have the belief that I have; I wish I could share those Christians' belief." And he said, "Friend, I would sooner be alive in the heart of hell, knowing what was going on, than to have gone out of existence altogether."

I am glad I am alive; I am glad I shall never die; I am glad I shall live on for ever and ever! And I look back with you over this year that is gone; and as I think of the year that we shall face in a few more hours—the "New Year" as we call it, it is largely another chapter very similar to the year that is gone. Rise! Face it! Meet it! It ought to be a better year than the last, because of your added experience and your growth in knowledge and in actual wisdom; and by the avoidance of those things, the existence of which you did not know before, but you know them now, you can make your life more serene and stable, and have more poise and power than you ever had before. Greet the unseen with a cheer! It brings you another opportunity.

"Let us be going."

"I saw you tremble," said a marshal of Old France to Ney. He said, "You did; and if you had trembled as I trembled, you would have run away from the foe. But I took my trembling in my grip and won the fight." Certainly that is what men have done! And that is what you can do! It is not a poul-tice you want; it is a whip cracking around your souls, goading you forward! Of course, there is fighting; but do you not know that every fight is a possible medal for high behavior and great bravery? So greet the unseen with a courageous soul.

You have been hurt, did you say? Do you suppose there is any one under God's sky tonight who has not been hurt? "It is hard pounding," said Wellington on Waterloo's red plain; "but we will see who can pound the longest." That is the spirit with which to face the future! Stop the groan; let loose the cheer!

"So they have torn you, maimed you;
Better men fared thus before you,
Fired their ringing shot and passed,
Madly charged, and died at last.

"Well, charge again; to grief be dumb,
Let the victors when they come,
When the forts of folly fall,

and over that body of yours let the next generation march into magnificent victory!

I heard of a minister in this city who the other day said he hoped that the Lord would take him home very soon, for he was tired of all the struggle and the hostility that surrounds the church today. That is the very reason I pray God to keep me alive! There is a fight on; let us get into it! Never mind where, for as I said long ago there is good fighting all along the line! Start in anywhere you like, and you will find the red flag of Calvary raised in opposition to the black banner of hell! Get in and do your part!

I am wondering if I dare say one word to you. It is keyed up very high, and I did not always realize that there was music—martial music—in the soul for it. The word is this: The highest courage is the courage that dares to fight a losing fight. Convince a man of certain victory, and he can easily hold his own; but when it is stand there and die, then the highest courage is called for.

No sir, the world is not going to get better! We slew twelve million people in the last war, and we have the gases all ready to slay fifty million in the next war; and the engine of destruction is better put together for its devilish purpose now than it has ever been in the days that are gone! And he who stands on the side of God stands in the minority, we may just as well admit a fact. And God is calling you to display the highest courage possible, to "fight the good fight of faith" when all the odds are against you. Dare you do it? "Rise," says Christ, "let us be going." Let us face it, and endure like good soldiers! This is a little inkling of the heroic which is in the Christian religion!

Sometimes I blame myself very much because I do not preach more about heaven and rest; and then I take courage again by remembering that after all it is a world of conflict; and while there is a good deal about rest in this Bible, there is more about fighting the good fight. And always in that particular mood I go to Paul, and I hear him talk about the hardness to be endured, and the fighting to be done, and the need of "the whole armor of God," and I get comfort again. It is fighting time now, and it is not a skirmish that is on us; it is a bloody battle. And there is not quarter to be asked, or given, for it is straightforward fighting! There is no discharge in the way, I tell you again. Who here will listen to Christ say, "Rise up, let us be going," and dare march on, keeping step with the King?

You elderly folk—have you been doing this? Can you look back on the past with satisfaction? Can you say with Browning:

"I was ever a fighter, so one fight more—
The best and the last!"

Do not stop! Do not rest on bygone achievements!

"Let the dead past bury its dead!
Act—in the living present!
Heart within, and God o'erhead!"

And you young people, I call you to contemplate the heroic in the Christian religion! I call you to gaze upon the Christ, the great Hero of eternity! And he looks at you, and this is the way he talks—let me give you a specimen of his speech—"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me; so shall he be my disciple." Does that not make your pulse jump? Does it not make your heart tense, put the glint in your eyes, and stiffen your very soul, and nerve it to high endeavor? Thank God! Can you flinch from it? Can you shrink back, and like John Mark, want to go home to your mother? Then God help you, for you have fallen before the high opportunity, and you have let enterprises of high moment slip from your reach! Oh, play the man! Do not dodge! Do not shirk! Do not shrink! Let whoso will stay by the stuff; but you get out where the sun glances on the bayonet, and fight to the accompaniment of a magnificent thunder that seeks your life! You young men, will you rise up to that? You young women, will you essay that sort of life?

They gave colors to a regiment once to replace the flag that had been torn in many a fight; and after that banner had been presented, the whole regiment—by pre-converted movement, of course—stepped forward a pace towards that flag, and as one man those men shouted:

"Through fire or sword, through weal or woe,
Unwavering and in faith,
Where'er those sacred colors go
We follow to the death."

Shall we be less strong, less noble, and less courageous, we who look at our banner—blood-red, for it represents the cross? Shall we falter? Shall we consider ignoble ease, personal gain, and comfort? Or shall we hurry to where the fight is the fiercest, the foe most unmerciful, and desperate the result? "Quit you like men, be strong."

Three or four times today I have urged the making of good resolutions, in view of the coming year. I brush out of my way the foolish people who say that if you have broken a resolution in the past, you should not make another. That is all nonsense! Make your resolves larger, stronger and bigger ones than you have ever made before. When you cease to resolve, do you know what illustrates you? A fish floating down the stream; if there is any resistance at all, there is some life in that fish; but when there is no resistance, the fish is dead. So long as a soul struggles, aspires, and resolves, there is hope; but when the soul ceases so to do, the angels know that soul is dead. Make your resolves! You know what you ought to do; to pray more; to read your Bible more; to interest yourselves in the things of Christ more than you have ever yet done; and this last—to hand your life over to the Lord Jesus Christ and really say to him:

"I will go where you want me to go;
I will say what you want me to say;
I will be what you want me to be."

Will you do it? If I could say aught else to goad you into the doing of it, I would say it; but I do not know what else to say. Jesus Christ calls you; what is your reply? My reply is this: He may do anything he likes with me but this one thing, I do not want to be discharged from the fight. He can do anything else he likes; but by his own name, I beg him not to discharge me from the fight. I wish that might be your decision too! "In God's name and in God's strength, I am going to rise to a higher and better life."

Dr. G. W. Ridout's new book, "Revival Blessings" is full of matter of the most vital interest to soul winners. Do you want a history of the great Revivals? It is here together with chapter after chapter of the most vital matters on Revivals, Soul Winning and Evangelism. Dr. Ridout gave these lectures at Asbury College and there was a demand for their publication. Those who heard the lectures wanted the book. Here it is! We make this offer to preachers and evangelists. Send us One Dollar and after examining it if you do not want to keep it return it to us and we will give you your Dollar back.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER I.

FIGHT OR FLIGHT.

IT was like "a clap of thunder from a clear sky," a trite expression frequently used when something occurs which seems to be impossible.

John Huston stood with a small note in his hand which he had read twice, with a fixed gaze upon the ground at his feet. The note had just been handed to him by the colored man who was a house servant at Judge Gray's. The colored man stood waiting with a large, well done-up package in his hand.

The note read like this:

"My Dear Mr. Huston:

"I was married today in the county seat at two o'clock, to George Hendricks. It is most fortunate for you, as well as myself, that I had an awakening from the fancies of the immature mind of the thoughtless girl. I am sending you the letters which you have written to me, and asking that you return mine, all of them, by the colored man who brings yours with this note. It is the desire of my husband, and in harmony with my own wishes, that there be no sort of communication between you and myself for the present.

"Respectfully,

"MRS. GEORGE HENDRICKS."

In order that the reader may appreciate the astonishment with which young Huston was so completely nonplussed, we must give you a bit of background.

John Henry Huston was the only child of Howard and Mary Huston, humble, but most excellent people, who died and left him an orphan when ten years of age. He had lived in the home of his uncle, William Brown, the brother of his deceased mother. This uncle owned a farm a short distance from the town where he had attended public school, had graduated from the high school, and had spent his freshman year in the small college located in the little city. He worked on his uncle's farm during the summer, attended to the chores about the barn during the fall and winter, and attended school. He was a strong, well built, handsome young fellow, just turning into his nineteenth year. We would not call him brilliant, but he had a strong mind hungering for knowledge, was a hard student and possessed unusual oratorical gifts. He held a good place in the respect of the faculty and appreciation of the student body. He was a quiet young man, never in any way, connected with any sort of dissipation which so frequently characterizes the college life of many young men. He was a handsome fellow, of the Greek type, a strong chin, a fine nose, rather large, well shaped mouth, and fine brown eyes which were penetrating, but full of kindness, flavored with a good hint of humor. He promised to be, when grown, a little above six feet in height.

This is perhaps, enough to say about the hero of this story for the present.

Now for a word about the author of the note, of which we have spoken above. Miss Annie Gray was the only daughter, in fact, the only child, of Judge Gray. She was a young woman of many attractions; not what you would call beautiful, but a large open, handsome face, a fine, graceful figure, and quite unusual in her rather dignified, quiet way of moving about her duties and in society. Her father was a lawyer of some distinction; had been County Judge for a number of years. A few years before the beginning of this story he had retired from office and the general practice of his profession. He owned a beautiful home, and had a comfortable income, had married late in life, lived quietly, and lavished his affections upon a devoted wife and his beloved daughter, Annie.

During the first year of high school there sprang up a warm friendship between young Huston and Annie Gray. It ripened into a devoted first love, and it was understood in the school and community that, later on, this young couple was to be married.

Judge Gray was not especially pleased with this arrangement, but was wise enough not to add fuel to the flame by raising objection, but all the while hopeful that in due time, the proper man would come along and capture Annie's heart.

One of Judge Gray's objections to Huston, in fact, the principal objection was, that it was understood that Huston was to become a Methodist preacher, and the Judge felt that that did not promise for his daughter the life of ease and luxuries which he desired she should enjoy.

Judge Gray was president of the bank in the little city which we shall call Canton, and he was not entirely free from the thought of his daughter's future, when he assisted in bringing from the county seat the son of his former law partner, Mr. Hendricks, George Hendricks, who had recently graduated from an Eastern college, to become paying teller in the bank of which he was president.

The Judge made it a point to have young Hendricks, who was unusually attractive, frequently at evening dinner in his home. The young banker was at once attracted by the quiet dignity, the unusual intelligence and the sparkling wit of Miss Annie Gray.

It was back in the days of the horse and buggy, and Hendricks had brought with him a very handsome outfit, and many evenings after banking hours, he and Miss Gray had been seen driving along the country roads near the town.

Huston's attention had been called to these evening rides, but it had not disturbed him in the least. He had grown up among the best of women. He knew nothing of the changeable, fickle variety. Annie Gray was his first and only love. To him, she was all but an angel. Doubt was impossible, so far as her steadfast loyalty was concerned. He had not lived in the world long enough to find that girls are prone to appreciate a second lover. It is quite easy for them to fall in love with some plain boy with whom they are thrown in the early morning of life, and just as easy a little later on to be captured by a fascinating young man, some years their senior, who knows more of the world, and understands how to approach and win the affections of a young woman who may be finding her first love affair a bit prosaic.

Arousing himself from the reverie into which he had fallen, Huston went to his room, picked up the box in which he had kept, as his most sacred treasures, all the letters that had come to him from Annie Gray, bound them with a strong cord, and handed them to the colored man. When he fully realized the calamity which had befallen him his first impulse was to gather up his little belongings and flee the country, never to be seen or heard of in that region again. His second impulse was to go to the bank early next morning and give George Hendricks a thorough beating. He decided that it must be fight or flight.

The heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. May we have a vision of it, that we may mourn our sin, and in broken-heartedness whilst lying trembling at the foot of the cross receive some token of forgiveness through the blood of the Lamb!

Asbury Theological Seminary Correspondence Department.

Out of a growing conviction of several years standing Asbury Theological Seminary is convinced that she can become serviceable to a large group of people in their homes, who are now deprived of student advantages. Among such people are pastors serving rural churches on small salaries, insufficient to allow them to give up their work and attend school, Sunday school superintendents, and teachers who are occupied with positions forbidding further work at school, but who would be glad to take courses qualifying them with a better understanding of the Bible, and still other Christian workers needing good conservative instruction in the Word of God. The following non-credit courses with descriptions given below are available by correspondence. More complete outlines of these courses together with application blanks for registration and rules for carrying on the work may be had on request.

The correspondence department is an entirely new department in our Theological Seminary and distinct from all other departments of work.

CHRIST IN THE OLD TESTAMENT.

15 Lessons. Price $7.00.

The children in our schools learn abstract principles by means of concrete examples. In like manner the religious consciousness of Israel was trained through its history and its worship, by type and symbol, by judgment and deliverance, to an apprehension of the great truths of redemption in Christ Jesus. In this brief course the student learns the method of divine revelation as he studies the enlarging picture of the Christ from the beginning to its full-sized presentation in the "Word made flesh."

STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

16 Lessons. Price, $7.00.

A course for Ministers, Sunday School teachers and Christian workers who want to do better work and yet do not have time or opportunity to attend Bible School or Seminary.

The purpose is, to make the New Testament more intelligible, more easily taught, and more dynamic; to make more efficient teachers, stronger and more helpful preachers, and more useful and holy Christians.

A STUDY OF THE BOOK OF ROMANS.

20 Lessons. Price, $9.00.

The aim of this course is to give the student a comprehensive and practical understanding of this most wonderful epistle of the apostle Paul.

WESLEYAN AND BIBLICAL HOLINESS.

21 Lessons. Price, $10.00.

This course comprises a study of the doctrine and experience of entire sanctification. It purposes to study the subject both from the historical and Biblical standpoint. Not only the theology of sanctification will be examined, but the experimental side will be discussed. The course should appeal to Christian workers in holiness meetings and to those needing help in their personal experience.

A SHORT COURSE IN NEW TESTAMENT INTRODUCTION.

18 Lessons. Price, $8.00.

The course is concerned with a study of the books of the New Testament as to their right to a place in the New Testament Canon, authorship, purpose of the writing, date and place of composition, peculiarities of the writing, those to whom written and a brief survey of the content of each book. The course is intended not only to give the student a certain knowledge content with regard to the subject matter, but also to fix more firmly in his mind and heart the conviction that these books of the New Testament are Scripture and so the Word of God.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

LEWISTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA.

There is a small church here of the Pilgrim Holiness Denomination, only twenty-two members, but they are a power for God in the community, command the respect of bankers, merchants, and the city at large, have revivals right along, two special meetings in every year, pay the evangelists well, tears of joy running down their cheeks as they do it, because God sends in the money. They bought a property here one year ago, worth twenty-five hundred dollars, paid one thousand dollars on the debt, and I had the privilege of touching a burning match to the note of two hundred dollars that the Sunday school paid in one year. How do they ever do it? They tithe all their money into the church, do it gladly, pay all their debts when they come due, and are now making arrangements to build a church structure that will accommodate the crowds that come when they have special evangelists. I preached here ten days; crowds on Sundays that they could not accommodate at nights, and fine congregations during the week. Every service souls were seeking. They do not talk much to seekers but they do pray! These people made my heart rejoice as they drank in the truth and prayed while I preached. There will be an increase in the accessions, so the pastor told me. Greater knowledge of the way the kingdom is growing, for they gave me a fine list of subscribers to The Pentecostal Herald. Praise the Lord! These people dress the way they profess, live the Book, and command the skies. May their tribe increase!

George B. Kulp.

STEELE, NORTH DAKOTA.

A most gracious revival was held on the Steele charge with two weeks of meetings at Steele, and two more at Driscoll, N. D. Rev. Mark S. McKie, of Holt, Mich., was secured for the preacher, and did some splendid work. A full gospel was preached in the demonstration of the Spirit, and sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed, and believers entered into the Canaan rest of perfect love. While the meeting was a hard pull all the way through the Lord blessed the Word, and the church was blessed at both places. Brother McKie is a young man, but wholly given up to the Lord, and his ministry in the Word is plain and clearly attended by the blessing of the Holy Spirit. No one can make any mistake in securing Brother McKie for revival meetings, because he will do the cause only good, and preach all the fundamental doctrines of the Bible and such as the Methodist Episcopal Church holds.

F. W. Gress.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS

We have not reported for some time, but we have not been idle. In September we held a revival with the Church of the Nazarene in Bowling Green, Ky. This young church has some of the salt of the earth in it. Rev. Frank Potts, a fine Christian young man, was their pastor at that time, but was planning to go to Bible School. God's presence was with us in every service, and the revival ended with a great altar service; souls finding God, and one fine Christian woman joining the church.

Our next engagement was in McDonald, Pa. Rev. Ella Boger, the good pastor, and her loyal people stood by us nobly with their prayers and help. God gave us some good cases of salvation in McDonald. This was our second revival with these good folks this year. As long as we live, the memory of our fellowship with these holy people will be a sweet remembrance to us.

Next we went to Coraopolis, Pa. Here we found a little band of holiness folks that were somewhat discouraged, but loyal to God. Rev. Benjamin Trunick is their good pastor. Our crowds were small to begin with, but gradually grew, until the last night we had the church nearly full. We did not see the folks crowd the altar to find God, but we did have a number of good cases of salvation.

We are now just in the beginning of what looks like a great revival with the Sunshine Mission in Columbus, Ohio. The saints are praying, the fire is falling, and seekers are finding God. We have not had a barren altar service since we began, and conviction is heavy. More later.

"I feel like traveling on." Yours for lost souls.

W. W. Loveless.

CECIL, PENNSYLVANIA.

We wish to report another good meeting in which a goodly number of souls prayed through to blessed victory at an altar of prayer. The town of Cecil, Pa., is made up of a people who have, in more recent years, landed upon our shores, consisting of Belgians, French, English, Scotch, Polish, Italians and else.

The Community Gospel Mission Church in which the meetings were conducted has been running for some nine or ten years and has been instrumental in leading hundreds into the light of full salvation. Some of our strong men of the Holiness Movement have labored there in the passing years; and the Mission has sent a number of students both to Asbury and Kingswood Colleges for their preparation for the ministry and mission field.

Some few years ago this body of devout worshippers launched an enterprise of an annual camp meeting ground. A beautiful woodland, some few miles out of town, was leased, a tabernacle built; dining room and cottages were placed upon the grounds, and such men as T. M. Anderson, Paul Rees, David

E. Wilson, Loveless and others have gotten in effective work in the giving of full salvation, which abides with very noticeable results.

Among these people is found a high type of a foreign element who are making the very best of American citizens, settled in their own neatly arranged homes. Many have only recently turned from their belief in Romanism and are strong in the Protestant faith. We were informed that there were nights when most a dozen different nationalities were represented in the congregation and there were services in which numbers of these were represented at an altar of prayer.

We shall not soon forget the sweet songs of victory, many of which were to us entirely new, that were used in these meetings. They were at times sung with such a full congregational volume that one would be caused to think of the day to come when all nations and tribes of earth shall join, in unison, in songs of praise to our coming King of kings and Lord of lords.

We have just closed a chain of eight revival meetings and are now enroute home for a week or ten days of rest with the family. These are strenuous days for both the hard worked evangelists and pastors, but we still have the encouragement to know that if the Word of God is preached in its purity by love and heartfelt persuasion results may still be had at the altar of prayer.

Fielding T. Howard, Evangelist.
Kingswood, Ky.

SALE CITY, GEORGIA.

The writer closed his year's work of strenuous evangelistic labors at Alexander City, Ala., Nov. 4, arriving at home on election day. My wife, who had remained at Waycross, Ga., with some friends for five months during my work in Mississippi and Alabama, joined me at Albany and we came home and re-opened same, which had been closed for almost seven months. Our yard had grown up in Bermuda grass, weeds, broomsedge, etc., reminding me of just how the human heart may become, if unkept by the great Gardener of the skies. We are home together to market wife's Pecans, which she is using to help several worthy institutions, and to help make up a large deficit in the writer's pioneer work for our Church of the Nazarene this year in taking the Gospel of full salvation to needy people in needy places. Ours has been a "labor of love" and God has given us some gracious times.

The writer was associated with the Collier Band of Texas. Our meetings all continued from four to six weeks. Large numbers fell at the altar of prayer, and many prayed through to victory. Yesterday, Nov. 19th, we received the sad intelligence that wife's father had passed on to his reward, at The Wesley Memorial Hospital, Atlanta. Rev. J. S. Lewis, for some forty-seven years was a Methodist preacher, sometime member of the South Georgia Conference, M. E. Church, South, of which he had been a supernuminate for several years. He was one of the early holiness preachers and a familiar face at Indian Springs Camp Ground ever since its organization. He was the father of sixteen children, twelve living. He was happily married four times, all of his wives preceding him to heaven. Won't that be a happy meeting? The writer's wife was daughter of his second wife who was Lillie Muchison, daughter of Dr. Muchison, of Arlington, Ga., and the author of the chapters, "Without Guile," in the well known book by the invincible John B. Culpepper, "Some Women I Have Known."

Wishing for all a happy closing of the year 1928, a Merry Christmas and prosperous and happy New Year, I beg to remain, one of his little ones under the blood.

TABERNACLE BAPTIST REVIVAL SUCCESSFUL.

Evangelist Baxter F. "Cyclone" McLendon, of Bennington, S. C., preached the most soul-stirring revival sermons to the church it has ever been our privilege to hear. Souls were saved, backsliders reclaimed, saints built up and believers filled with the Spirit. It's the consensus of opinion among Tabernacle Baptist members that Bro. Mack is the strongest preacher and safest evangelist this church has ever had. He's now in a tabernacle revival in Earlsboro, Okla. Pastor A. Reilly Copeland says that Mack is in a class by himself because the Lord made the class. Pastor Copeland began a revival at Calvary Baptist Church, Mt. Calm, Texas, Nov. 26.

HUNTINGTON, WEST VIRGINIA.

Our conference met first of October. My first meeting after conference was at Spring Hill, W. Va., with the Methodist pastor, Eugene Dick. We had a hard pull, but we held onto the Lord and he answered by fire. We closed out with victory. A number bowed at the altar, either for regeneration, reclamation or sanctification.

From Spring Hill I went to Cold Fork, W. Va., with Rev. George Thumm, the Methodist pastor. This is a mining town. We began to shell the woods. Some got mad and stayed away for a few nights and then came back. The Lord answered by fire. We closed out with victory. I am at present in campaign at Keyford, W. Va., with Rev. H. E. Crowder, an old Asbury boy. This is a large mining town, and many difficulties to contend with, but the Lord is answering prayer and folks are coming to the altar. Praise his Holy Name forever. We find many true men and women up and down the country who love free and full salvation. The old time gospel has not lost its power if presented in the power of the Holy Ghost.

Your brother in Christ,
W. A. Grogg.

WEST SONORA, OHIO.

Just a few lines to let our friends know we are still in the field as evangelistic singers and workers, and are glad to report we are busy and seeing some souls find God. To him be the praise. We are now at West Sonora, Ohio, with U. B. Church. This is our fourth campaign this fall. We are reaching a great many children in our boys and girls' work and consider it an essential part of a campaign, as we have proven the Scripture "a little child shall lead them." Who? The parents. We have and use several choruses in connection with our children's work that are very effective. Write us if you would like to have a new chorus song for your children.

BROOKSVILLE, FLORIDA.

The old-time power is coming upon the little city of Brooksville, Florida. We began here the 18th of November and will run through the 16th of December. We are in a large canvas tabernacle and God is present to bless at every service. The meeting started with the Methodists but has spread to every church in the city; there have been ninety-two professions at the altar in the old-time way up to this time. The first invitation was answered by fifty-two coming to the altar and confessing sins and accepting our blessed Christ in the good old-fashioned way. Brethren, the days of the visitation of the Holy Ghost have not passed. Jesus is the same he was in St. Paul's day.

We have January and February open for a church or city-wide revival.

Butts and Cunningham.

LOCKETT'S CHAPEL REVIVAL.

We began a meeting with Rev. J. R. Randolph at Lockett's Chapel, October 9, and closed October 21. Lockett's Chapel is on Monticello Circuit, was once a strong church but the members died and moved away and only six families remain. The pastor is a true yokefellow and had prepared the way for the revival. The schoolhouse is on same lot as church and the teacher brought the school out to the day services; most of the school claimed to be saved, others at the altar at different times. The congregations were large for that place. The Baptists came and helped us out very much. The Christians were wonderfully revived. It was at this church several years ago Mrs. Johnson organized the first Missionary Society. We stayed in the home of Bro. Oats. We found them some of God's elect. We ate dinner and supper out quite often.

Bro. Randolph is a faithful and devout pastor. We were to help him at Ellis, but not being quite ready will help them later. We spent ten and one-half months last Conference year in revivals; five hundred blessed, three hundred joined the church, six young men called to preach. I have been at home since Lockett's revival for a needed rest, but Sister Johnson is busy in her Jubilee meetings in her District.

Anyone wanting us write or phone us at our expense at Vine Grove, Ky.

Dr. Morrison Still in the Hospital.

Dr. Morrison is now in his fifth week in the Deaconess Hospital, in Louisville, Ky. He has been very seriously sick. There is now apparently some improvement. The doctors fear other complications. If these can be fought off there is hope for permanent recovery. We will appreciate very much the earnest prayers of his friends.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

GOODBYE! OLD YEAR!

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

"Good-bye, old year, you're going out,

Your reign is ended, close the book

With all its fear, its joy, its doubt,

No more within its pages look;

We'll meet its record by and by,

You're going out, old year—good-bye.

"Good-bye, old year, you have been true,

You kept the promises you made

Of spring and harvest time; we view

The heaps in barn and storehouse laid,

With thankful hearts; but you must die,

Your time has come, old year—good-bye.

"Good-bye, old year, the new year comes,

Her hands are filled with hope and cheer,

We greet her gladly; yet we turn

To drop for you a farewell tear,

To dimly hear your parting sigh,

—Selected.

The word "Good-bye" carries with it a tinge of sadness. This is especially true when we speak the parting word to a loved one, as there is a feeling that it may be the last time we shall see that face or hear that voice we love so well.

When we say Good-bye to the old year we are reminded of the varied experiences we have had—some of them sad, others joyous. Life is made up of sunshine and shadow. Longfellow had it about right when he wrote:

"Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days be dark and dreary."

It takes the rain—the unpleasant things—to make us appreciate that which is pleasant. So, after all, if the old year did hold some experiences that were not so pleasant, it carried with it much that made it sweet to live. We have more good days than bad ones; more well days than sick ones; more friends than enemies; more of the milk of human kindness in life's cup than bitterness of disappointment and suffering. And, what reverses come, we are assured that, to the child of God, they are dropped into the mixture of life in order to render it more palatable and wholesome.

As we bid the year 1928 good-bye let it be with a determination that we shall enter upon the year 1929 with resolutions for better living, more serious conceptions of life, a greater love for our fellowmen, and a desire to leave a stream of influence that will bless those who have touched our lives during the fading year.

It were good if, in bidding the old year good-bye, we could forget all that has been unpleasant; all of the hasty words, the broken vows, the neglected duties, the unspoken words that should have cheered some disconsolate heart; the letter of comfort that should have been written, the smile and kindly word that some heart needed as we passed them along life's highway. But it is gone—that opportunity—and we are left with the sad reflection, which we trust will spur us on to amend the failures of the past, that such regrets shall not be lingering at the tomb of 1929, if we should be spared to see it.

How true it is that,

"The issue of the life to be

We weave with colors all our own,

And in the field of destiny,

We reap as we have sown."

Then, let us enter the New Year of 1929 "forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before." Let us, as one has said, "Study Christ's life more and thou wilt soon learn to mend thine own." Let me admonish you and myself.

"Make a little fence of trust around today,
Fill the space with loving work, and therein stay.

Look not through the sheltering bars upon tomorrow,

GOD will help thee bear what comes of joy or sorrow."

A Holiness Correspondence Bible School.

In our travels for the last number of years, many people have asked me if they could not take Bible Lessons with Asbury College by correspondence. We have thought much on this subject. At a call meeting of the professors of the Theological Seminary at Asbury, it was decided that we could organize a correspondence Bible School and carry forward a work which we believe will be a great advantage to those who will avail themselves of the opportunity we offer. This correspondence school will be separate and apart to itself. It will not be a part of Asbury College or of the Seminary. We are publishing in this issue of THE HERALD a very clear statement which we trust will be interesting. After reading the course of study write to Rev. F. A. Larabee, D.D., Dean of the Theological Seminary, Wilmore, Ky., and he will be glad to answer any inquiries and give you all necessary information. We are hoping that this correspondence school will mean better prepared Sunday school teachers, and will open up a new interest in the Bible at the firesides of a great many homes during the coming winter.

Faithfully your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

Notice!

This week we are starting our story, "The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston," which will be found on page 6 each week. We trust our readers will follow this story weekly and get the wonderful lessons which are to be brought out in it.

The Manger and The Cross.

BY PETER WISEMAN.

DURING a conversation on the Virgin Birth some time ago with one of our city pastors, a learned young man, he suggested, in support of his view, that it was not necessary to believe in the Virgin Birth in order to believe in Christ as our Savior, that only two of the evangelists recorded it. We asked him if he ever noticed that only two of the Evangelists record that Christ was born at all, and why not dispute his birth on the same ground? He replied, "I had not noticed this before."

THE SACRED RECORD RESPECTING THE INCARNATION.

"And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail! Thou art highly favored, the Lord is with thee; Blessed art thou among women! And when she saw him, she was troubled at his saying, and the angel said unto her, 'Fear not, Mary, for thou hast found favor with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Then said Mary unto the angel, 'How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?' And the angel answered and said unto her, 'The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.' (Luke 1:26-31).

All that this record requires is faith. It is supernatural, of course, so is the Bible. To rule out the supernatural would leave us "nothing but leaves." If there is no Virgin Birth, there is no God-man; if there is no God-man, there is no salvation. And then, what?

HIS ONLY HOPE.

The fact of his coming argues its necessity. It is further argued from the fact of sin, with all its awful results. Man is in bondage, captive. He is lost. He is blind. He is dead. He is condemned and under the wrath of God. Nothing is clearer than that man is a fallen being, and helpless to redeem himself. Redemption must come from some outside source.

Redemption is not found in sin, not found in man, not found in the law, nor in works. It must come through atonement, made by one who can properly represent both God and man, and satisfy all the requirements of both. He must satisfy Deity and humanity, at the same time redeeming the latter.

There are said to be three probable ways of salvation, namely, the claims of the law, the virtue of works, and by expiation. As to the first, the Word says, "By the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified." With respect to the second, it says, "Not of works lest any man should boast." It must, then, be by atonement or expiation.

This expiation must go from God in order to be valid and to avail with him. It must at the same time belong to humanity in order to be valid and to avail for humanity. Hence the necessity of the incarnation, God becoming man, the God-man. "There is one God and one Mediator also between God and man, and man Christ Jesus." (1 Tim. 2:5). "The God-man," says Dr. C. Morgan, "is the gateway between God and man. Through him God has found his way back to man from whom he had been excluded by rebellion. In him, man finds his way back to God from whom he has been alienated by the darkness of his intellect, the death of his love, the disobedience of his will. God finds himself in this Person, and is with man. Man finds himself in this Person, and is with God. Through the God-man, Deity takes hold upon humanity. Through the God-man, humanity takes hold upon the Deity.

Christ became flesh. He took flesh, humanity, and dwelt among us. He came down to the lowest circumstances that he might redeem the lowest. He stooped to it, because of his love for us.

"FOR THIS CAUSE."

Christ did not come to this world as a journalist to study the customs, languages of a strange people. He did not come just merely to live a beautiful life—though he lived such a life. He did not come to give the world a code of ethics—though such a code may be gathered from his teaching. If this were his mission, why his death? Why not inaugurate an institution of learning in Palestine, become its President, teach and write books, and avoid the cross? No! No! He came to the manger, he took flesh, in view of the cross, to which he stooped as a vocation and upon which he died as Victor. The last time he went to Jerusalem, he was the most eager of the little band to get there, for he knew the purpose of his mission. "He went before them and they were amazed."

The life of Christ was the only life ever given up in this world. "No man taketh it from me. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again." Men have died, it is true, sooner than they otherwise would for some great cause; but Christ alone actually gave a life which was forever in his keeping, that the race might be redeemed. "Men die sooner who must in any case die later; but Christ died for us who but for his own willingness could not have died at all." Nothing in the economy of redemption was for himself; he came for the race. His death was an act, an accomplishment, not an accident. He died as a Victim in the typical relationships which he bore, but he also died as VICTOR.

The death of Christ, then, was not that of a martyr, much less a criminal. "Was Paul crucified for you?" Christ's death was that of the sinless One, the God-man, who in his own body bore our sin on the tree. On the cross he accomplished human redemption, and from the cross uttermost salvation is offered to all, even to the lowest. Consider the Person of the cross, and the merit of the sacrifice is beyond dispute. "But this man, after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God: from henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool. For by one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified." For this cause he came into the world.

THE GREAT DYNAMICS.

In the Person, his mission, and his death, are infinite love, the dynamic of love. Love brought him down. His life was a life of love. "To measure the heart of the Infinite," says one, "we must get the dimensions of the cross." The cross is a proof and an illustration of the love of God, and also a proof and an illustration of the love of Christ. It was pure love, yes, infinite love, that caused him to be born among cattle, and live such a glorious life among the poor, upon that uplifted cross this crowned sufferer to fling wide his arms, and seek to lift the world back to his Father's side. It was infinite love!

In the Person, his mission, and his death on the cross, are infinite merit. There have been many great missions but never one just like his. There have been many great lives but never a life just like this one. There have been many crosses and many crucifixions. At the time of Christ's death, and at the same place there were two other crosses, but the center cross is different. It is "the cross"; the Person on it is an unique Person. His death also unique.

In the Person, his mission, and his death, are infinite power, the dynamic of power;

MOTTO FOR 1929.

"For me to live is Christ."—Phil. 1:21.

All for Thee, Lord, All for Thee!
All for the Christ who set me free—
I looked at the world with its pomp and show;
I look at self, too hard to know.
Lord, for Thy pleasure, like clay in Thy hand:
Give grace and a will to do Thy command.
Thy will, Lord, I'd seek to know;
Thee only I'd follow, who loved me so,
A life that will please Thee, my motto shall be;
A walk with Thyself blessed Savior, with Thee.
—R. Miller.

the power of an unique Personality; the power of an unique crucifixion, a death on the cross, which is called, "the accursed tree"; for upon it he died; yet it is the tree of life, for by its sacrificial Victor we live. In the cross there is power to break the power of cancelled sin and to set the prisoner free. There is cleansing power, and overcoming power; there is life eternal for all.

GLORIOUS OBJECT AND PURPOSE.

What was the object of his coming? The answer is found in one word—"lost." What was the purpose of his coming? Again the answer may be given in one little word—"save." "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

The blessed Jesus came from heaven that we might be given a title to a fitness for, and go to heaven. He was born among cattle, died between thieves, that we may be reconciled to God. He was cradled in a manger that we might have a mansion. He became poor that we might be rich. He drank the awful cup of death that we might drink the wine of the kingdom. He wore a crown of thorns that we might wear a crown of glory. He became the Son of Man that we might become the sons of God. He was lifted up upon a cross that we may sit on a throne. He went to the tomb that we might be raised from it. He wept tears of sorrow that our tears might be wiped away. He died that we might not die. He became a sin-offering that we might be cleansed from sin. He came down to the manger, to the cross, to the grave, that he might lift us up to God. And he accomplished gloriously and triumphantly.

"THE WONDROUS MAN" STILL LIVES.

"There is a man whose tomb is guarded by love, whose sepulchre is not only glorious as a prophet declared, but whose sepulchre is loved. There is a man whose ashes, after eighteen centuries, have not grown cold, who daily lives again in the thoughts of an innumerable multitude of men; who is visited in his cradle by frankincense and myrrh. There is a man whose steps are unweariedly retold by a large portion of mankind, and who, although no longer present, is followed by that throng in all the scenes of his by-gone pilgrimage, upon the knees of his mother, by the borders of the lakes, to the tops of the mountains, in the byways of the valleys, under the shade of the olive trees, in the still solitude of the deserts. The greatest monument of art shelters his sacred images; the most magnificent ceremonies assemble the people under the influence of his Name; poetry, music, painting, sculpture, exhaust their resources to proclaim his glory, and to offer him incense worthy of the adoration which ages have consecrated to him. And yet upon what throne do they adore him? Upon a cross! "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore."

"Hath he marks to lead me to him,

If he be my Guide?

In his feet and hands are wound prints,

THE GREAT PRINCIPLE.

The provision for the recovery of the race was provided by Christ. He trod the wine-press alone, but the application of that wonderful provision is still in process. We have something to do in this. In other words, the principle of redemption must be the principle of the Church, the body of Christ, and each member of that body. Is this not the great thought in Col. 1:24, "fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh for his body's sake, which is the Church"? "I will make up the full sum of all that Christ has to suffer in my person." (Moffatt).

The principle of the mission of Christ is an eternal principle. "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission," no salvation, no progress, no Christian civilization. This is true domestically, socially, educationally, nationally, as well as spiritually.

As followers of Christ the principle of condescension which he manifested in coming to the manger, should have a special place in our lives; the principle of suffering for others should be ours, for there is the ministry of suffering; the same is true of love. If he gave his life for us, we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren. "He saved theirs, himself he cannot save." This is true morally and spiritually. He could not save himself and the world. He gave his life, his very self, for others. The same principle holds in our life. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it; and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it." Die to live; die that others may live; and in so doing we shall truly live.

Let us commemorate the gracious event of the coming of Christ to redeem the world as his holy followers, not as those who walk in the vanity of their minds, fulfilling the lusts of the flesh.

Hand-Me-Down Prayers.

What means this publication of "prayers" in our church, Sunday school and Epworth League literature? Do the editors think that people do not know how to pray? If so, they are partly correct! The church has become so unspiritual that many in it do not know how to pray. We need but listen to them to know this. They have had but little opportunity to learn how to pray. Many of them did not hear prayer at the family altar at home; they were not taken to class and prayer meeting, there to listen to godly men and women pray; nor to the public preaching where they heard the minister and other saintly persons pray. They did not come into the church by way of the mourners' bench, where real prayer is born of soul travail. How can they know what is true prayer? how to address God, how to reverently supplicate him? This condition is reciprocal. As the spirit of prayer declines, ready-to-wear prayers are provided; which, in turn, promote the further decline of the spirit of prayer, etc. Listen to the prayers from many average pulpits, and how much of genuine communion, petition, supplication is there in it? Jesus said that men (all men) ought to pray; that they ought to pray; that they ought always to pray; that they ought always to pray, and not to faint, or give up. What will be the end of a prayerless generation? Is it strange that the church, that individuals, are lacking in power from God? "In everything, by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." Prayer has its request! "That prayers, supplications, intercessions, thanksgiving, be made for all men." Intercessory prayer! Jesus, "in the days of his flesh, offered up prayers and supplications, with strong crying and tears"! How do we pray?

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

My Dear Boys and Girls:

Wouldn't it be nice if we could have a great gathering where all the boys and girls who write to our Page could assemble and get acquainted with each other? Often, in our travels, I meet with boys and girls who come up to me and call me "Aunt Bettie," saying they write to me through The Herald, and I feel as if they were really kinsfolk, and am always delighted to meet them. This is only a little taste of what it would mean if all of us could meet and know each other. But as that cannot be in this world, let us appoint a meeting time in the City of the skies, to which we are all journeying, and one by one will find our house of many mansions. It will be a time of rejoicing to know that we are safe from the sin and strife of this world and shall go out no more forever. What I want us to do is, that we resolve to get in perfect harmony with Jesus, and so live the coming year that if we should be called to bid farewell to this vale of tears we may have the assurance of a house not made with hands eternal in the heavens. I wish that every boy and girl, man and woman, who reads this page would give themselves fully to the Master, and determine that from this on their lives shall count for more in the service of the kingdom. I wish that every one may be saved the pain of separation from loved ones, by death, but it is not likely that such shall be the case, but we can pray that the sufficient grace may be given in every time of need. Study your lessons with an end in view—that you are going to make an intelligent, useful man or woman, devoting all of your talents to the Lord's work. The way to be happy is to be good, for no matter how many reverses may come, if we know we are right with the Lord, we can claim the promise that "All things work together for our good." May the Lord take special oversight of each one of you during the year 1929, and bring you into the place where you can best serve him and humanity. A Happy New Year to each of you!

Lovingly,
Aunt Bettie.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little Iowa boy nine years old and in the fifth grade. My birthday is July 19. I have two sisters and one brother. My father is an M. E. minister. I am the youngest one of the family. My brother and I have a bicycle and we have lots of fun riding it. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends in E, and has seven letters in it. Whoever guesses it I will send a pretty card.

Gravity, Iowa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Colorado Springs girl join your happy band? I am eight years old and in the third grade. I go to Sunday school. Mama takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I hope to see this in print. Would like to be one of the cousins.

Mary Augusta Brumley.
301 S. Wahsatch Ave., Colorado Springs, Colo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little boy six years old. I go to school and love my teacher very much. My mother reads your page in The Herald to me. With love.

Arthur Moore, Jr.
Birmingham, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your sunshine band of boys and girls? Thanks. I am from the good state of Kentucky. I have black hair (bobbed) gray eyes, and am sixteen years of age. My birthday is March 17th. Have I a twin? The one that can guess my first name I'll write them a long letter. It begins with V and ends in A, and has five letters in it. How many of you have a hobby? My favorite hobby is reading good, clean western stories. My favorite authors are Zane Grey and Gene Stratton Porter. I hope that notorious, slick-headed W. B. is out car-riding when this letter arrives. This is my first attempt to write to The Herald and I hope to see it in print.

Helen Robertson.
Webbs Cross Roads, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eleven years old and in the fifth grade. I have big blue eyes and blonde hair. I like my Sunday school and I attend it every Sunday. We take The Herald and I sure do like to read page 10. Who has my birthday, April 18? If you have please write to me. How many of you have a hobby? My favorite hobby is playing town-ball. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print. Of course Mr. W. B. will snatch it the first thing.

Edith Robertson.
Webbs X-Roads, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Georgia boy join your band of boys and girls? Aunt Bettie, will you please print my letter this time. I and my twin brother live with our grandmother, who lived alone with her afflicted son until we came to live with her. We are eleven years old. Our birthday is Nov. 7. Grandmother is never well so we have most of the housework to do. We milk the cow, churn, sweep, make beds, wash dishes, get stove-wood, and wash clothes. Uncle Pierce can't work or care for himself, so we care for him. Grandmother is a Christian. She loves the Lord and tells us of his great love. We have never used a bad word. We are not Christians but we want to be and are striving to be. I want all the cousins to pray that we may be saved. Grandmother prays for us. We do want to go to heaven when we die, where there will be no more trouble. It grieves us to see poor grandmother suffer so much. We ask all the cousins to write us. We do not go anywhere hardly, and like to get letters.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little boy of the State of Georgia join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old, have light hair and blue eyes. I have a sister older than I, and the babies are twins, a boy and girl. They are three years old. I have never gone to school very much, as I am not strong and mother is never well. Doctors say she has heart trouble and the goitre on her neck bothers her. She is very nervous. I love my father and mother. I do not attend Sunday school but mother reads to me and tells me of the love of Jesus. I am not a Christian, but I hope to be some day. Cousins, will you pray that I may be saved. I want all the cousins to write me; will answer all letters received.

Lucus Whaley.
Rt. 3, Box 69, Dalton, Ga.,

Dear Aunt Bettie: I like to read page ten very much. I have a brother named after Dr. Morrison. Dr. Morrison baptized Gaynelle and me. Gaynelle is my sister. She is almost nine. I was ten Sept. 15, 1928. I am in the sixth grade at school. My teacher is Mrs. Roberts. I like her real well. My teacher's husband is the principal of our school.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you kindly let a little Louisiana boy enter the happy circle of chatting boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald, which is a welcome visitor in our home every week. I am a good attendant of Sunday school every Sunday. I am seven years of age, being in the second grade. I am wondering who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with E, and has nine letters in it. It is the name of a general of great importance. If anyone guesses my middle name I will write an interesting letter to them about an interesting trip we took up north. Charles O. Griswold. I guess your middle name to be Otis. If I am right please do not forget your promise. Ona M. Budd, I guess your middle name to be Marie. If I am right please let me know if I am a good guesser. I hope this letter comes out in print as it is my first one to The Herald. I hope Mr. W. B. is picking cotton when my letter arrives.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let an old Mississippi man join your happy band of boys and girls? I live away down in Southwest Mississippi. I am a reader of The Herald. I love to read it. I love to read page ten as well as the boys and girls. I want to hear from some of the boys and girls in South Carolina. My grandparents on my mother's side came from South Carolina. I would like to hear from some of them and what part of the state they live in. Who was the man that preached the first sermon? Where can you find it in the Bible? What was the first girl named that was born after Eve? Who invented the first song? I had better close with love to the boys and girls.

T. W. Reeves.
Rt. 3, Gloster, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I enjoy reading the Cousins' Page, and also writing to it. Some of you cousins from Kentucky write to me and tell me about your state. I sure do like to read stories about old Kentucky. I would like to see the great Mammoth Cave. Cousins, do you like good ghost stories? I do, but I don't believe in ghosts. I have a boy friend that does. I will bring a poem by Edgar A. Guest.

The Broken Drum.

"There is a sorrow in the household;
There's a grief too hard to bear;
There's a little cheek that's tear stained,

There's a sobbing baby there.
"And try how we will to comfort,
Still the tiny tear drops come,
For, to solve a vexing problem,
Curly Locks has wrecked his drum.

"It had puzzled him, and worried,
How the drum created sound,
For he couldn't understand it,
It was not enough to pound,
With his tiny hands and drumsticks,
And at last the day has come,
When another hope is shattered,
Now in ruins lies his drum.

"With his metal band he broke it,
Tore the tightened skin aside,
Gazed on the vacant space bewildered,
Then he broke right down and cried.
For the broken bubble shocked him,
And the baby tears must come,
Now a joy has gone forever,
Curly Locks has wrecked his drum.

"While his mother tries to soothe him,
I am sitting here alone,
In the life that lies behind me,
Many a shock like that I've known.
And the boy who's upstairs weeping,
In the years there are to come,
Will learn that many pleasures
Are as empty as his drum."

I say amen to that. In grown up years we will find many pleasures as empty as the little boy's drum.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a little girl seven years old, and in the third grade. I go to school every day. My teacher's name is Miss Bales. My father and mother take The Pentecostal Herald. I go to church and Sunday school nearly every Sunday. As this is my first letter I would be pleased to see it in print.

Dear Aunt Bettie: In reading the 10th page of The Herald I concluded I would say a few words. I very much enjoy page ten, but how much more we would all enjoy it if we could just forget to describe ourselves and say a few words for Jesus. I sure enjoyed Chester A. Murray's letter in The Herald. I, too, enjoy nature very much and it is very true as he quoted, we may be "falsely accused and misunderstood" but we have the joy of knowing there is one who has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Howard the past spring I was sanctified. Since God cleansed away the carnal nature that was within me, I have no desire for the wicked pleasures of this world but pray God that I may ever be a useful servant in his vineyard. I have a brother in Asbury College studying for the ministry, so Asbury is very dear to my heart. I only wish that it was my lot to be there with my brother in College as I graduated from the Elizabethtown High School in the spring of 1928. But we know that all things work together to the good of them that love the Lord. I have a sister in High School, three sisters and a brother in the grades and baby brother at home. Rev. Jarbo is our pastor. We like him very much as he preaches a full gospel. I had the privilege of attending, for the first time, a camp meeting service at Silver Heights this summer. How many of the cousins like music? I for one sure do and am taking lessons on the piano at present. I must be going; if any one cares to write to me I will answer.

Yours in his service,

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Louisiana girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. My father has been taking The Herald for about thirty-three years. I enjoy reading page ten. I have two sisters, a mother and father for which I am very thankful. I am ten years old and in the sixth grade at school. I am a blonde. My teacher's name is Miss Amelia Tanner. I live on a farm and like farm life fine, although we live in the overflowed district the water came from five to fifteen feet deep on our place in 1927.

Audrey Adams.
Jonesville, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a reader of The Pentecostal Herald and think it fine. Was 40 years old Dec. 31. I have been confined to a wheel chair and bed for seven years with rheumatism. I am drawn in a sitting position; can only use my hands a little. Some days they are so sore I cannot use them to write. I sympathize with all who suffer as I have suffered so much but I try to look on the bright side of life. I am a Christian and belong to the M. E. Church. My wife died April 11, 1915. Left me with two little girls, so we have lived with mother and one sister ever since, but my youngest girl died March 11. It was so sad to give her up and we are so lonely without her, but God knows best and we must be submissive to his will. She was fourteen years old. My other girl is seventeen years old. She will finish high school this term, if nothing happens. My girls were both members of the M. E. Church, and mother and sister are too. Mother was seventy-one years old August 12, and she has been in poor health this year. My sister is telephone operator so she earns our living except what our friends help us. They have had a hard time since I've been down working and caring for me. I hope Aunt Bettie will print this for me as I hope to receive letters or any good books to read. Reading is a great pleasure to me as it help to pass the lonely hours away. I want to thank Bro. H. C. Morrison for sending me The Pentecostal Herald as it's such a good paper.

FALLEN ASLEEP

RAMSEY.

While working in factory at Newark, Ohio, Aaron Ramsey of Jacobsburg, Ohio, was injured by a fall, resulting in his death on Friday, Nov. 30. He was born in Belmont County, Ohio, Jan. 3, 1873, making his age 55 years, 10 months and 27 days. He had been a member of the Jacobsburg M. E. Church practically all his life, and during the years was a blessing in the church, a heavy giver to the Lord's cause.

Those left to mourn his passing to his reward are, his wife, Retta Jane Ramsey, his brother Orrville Ramsey, of Warwick, Ohio. Also nieces and nephews and a host of friends. Mr. Ramsey was a great lover of Camp Meetings and was found at Camp Sychar, Sebring and Hollock Rock many times.

Funeral services were conducted from the Jacobsburg M. E. Church, Monday, Dec. 3rd. Services were in charge of Rev. O. L. Benedum, of East Liverpool, Ohio. He was assisted by the pastor of church, Rev. Tippet, Rev. Gray of Salesville, Ohio, M. E. Church, and Rev. C. J. Reiff, pastor of the Bethesda Nazarene Church. Singing was in charge of Mrs. O. L. Benedum. The body was buried in the church cemetery at Jacobsburg to await the resurrection morning.

O. L. Benedum.

CRAWLEY.

On the morning of Sept. 6, 1928, the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. Osco Crawley were made sad as the angel entered their home and plucked from their arms their darling baby, Wilbur Joe, aged 17 months and 20 days. Little Wilbur was a sweet, beautiful baby and much loved by all who knew him. He was sick only a few days but suffered intensely. All was done for him that the loving and tender hands of his parents and friends could do, but to no avail.

His father, mother and little sister Nellie will sadly miss his childish prattle and sweet baby smiles and his presence brightening and cheering the home. But I would say to them, "Weep not for little Wilbur. Only think of him as a bright and shining angel with our blessed Lord who said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.'"

Jesus has a better home for Wilbur than you had. He will never be sick or feel pain, but is happy, waiting and watching for you to come. Be faithful to God and it will not be long until you can go to live with Jesus and little Wilbur, where there will be no more sad partings but all is peace and joy and love.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. F. Huddleston, assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. R. Thomas, after which his little body was laid to rest in the Spears Chapel burying ground to await the resurrection morn.

Lovingly his great aunt,
Ada Spear.

HARMON.

Mr. John A. Harmon was born in Crittenden, Ky., Jan. 5, 1850; died Oct. 28, 1928. Professed religion at Hurricane church at the age of nineteen and joined the M. E. Church, South. Lived a consistent Christian up to the time of his death. He held to the old-time doctrine of sanctification, taught by Dr. Morrison and many other old-time worthies. He always loved and honored The Pentecostal Herald and read the same up to the time of his death. May the blessings of God be upon Dr. Morrison in spreading Scriptural holiness over the land.

"What we preach in these days" seems to be an open question in some theological circles. Asbury Seminary is in harmony at this point with St. Paul's dictum "preach the word."

With Asbury "the what" is not an open question, and "the how" is answered by taking a three-year course in theology culminating in the B.D. degree. was in attendance at Bethany-Peniel College, Bethany, Okla.

Miss Keene had entered Bethany-Peniel College in her Freshman year last September at the opening of the fall term of school. She had gotten adjusted in her studies and other activities of the College life there, and she had time and again written her parents and spoken to her friends about how well pleased she was with the place, the College, and the people of Bethany-Peniel College. Sadie was making excellent grades in all of her studies and was highly esteemed by both faculty and student body for her high Christian ideals and beautiful spirit of Godliness. At the last College prayer meeting she attended she gave a most beautiful and triumphant testimony of her Christian experience in God's saving grace and his sanctifying power. And among the things she said in her testimony she praised God for her loving, consecrated parents, for their Christian teaching and counsel to her, and also, for God having led her to attend Bethany-Peniel College, such a wonderful Christian school.

Sadie was always, from childhood, a bright and very studious pupil in her school work. During her high school life her deportment and literary ability were so marked and so very satisfactory that she was awarded five medals during those four years of high school work. From her very youth, Sadie had a most beautiful and charming disposition. Her short journey here on earth was characterized by a conscientious, obedient and an unselfish life.

She was converted early in life and was sanctified and united with the Ellis Nazarene Church during our church meeting at the Ellis Tabernacle last August. She lived a beautiful Christian life and left a bright testimony, before she departed this world, that she was ready to go to her Eternal Home.

Miss Sadie Keene leaves her father and mother, a younger sister, Mamie Opal, two little brothers, Henry Leland, Jr., and Roy William, together with a host of relatives and friends to mourn her absence from this world.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson II.—January 13, 1929.

Subject.—Sin. 1 John 1:5 to 2:6.

Golden Text.—If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 1 John 1:8, 9.

Time.—Not definitely known. About A. D. 70.

Place of Writing.—Unknown.

Introduction.—There seems to be no question as to the authorship of this epistle, the apostle John having written both it and the gospel that bears his name. In some respects the two writings are closely akin. They are children of the same father.

This writing does not carry the earmarks of an epistle, but rather those of a small book. It is not addressed to any one, nor to any group, in particular; although in its polemic nature the writer is certainly combating a troublesome sect of his day, who were known as the Gnostics. In some parts of the work he seems to be striking at the errors of Zoroastrianism, the doctrine that claims the creation of the two principles of evil and good in the universe. Barring these few individual thrusts, the epistle has a broad, general application to all Christians.

John's definition of sin is, perhaps, somewhat broader than most of us are accustomed to think. Our contention is that sin is the wilful violation of law. John calls sin outlawry, without any qualifying term. In that sense mistakes might be termed sins. Our error concerns a disregard of sins of omission. We look upon such sins as lying, stealing, adultery, drunkenness, etc., as being very flagrant; and, no doubt, they are. On the other hand, we do not seem to have tender consciences about refusing to love God with all our heart, soul, mind and strength, or the loving our neighbor as we love ourselves; whereas these sins of omission are just as atrocious in God's sight as any other class of sins.

As we enter upon the study of SIN, I suggest that we take some time to meditate upon the fact of sin and its awfulness. If we do not attain unto an adequate understanding of the nature of sin, we shall never be able to get a full comprehension of the glory of the atonement in Christ Jesus. Contemplate the immensity of the divine law in the light of the Divine Being of whose nature the law is but an emanation. It will give one some adequate idea of the nature of sin, if one can come to realize that it is treason against the Divine Government, and against the Divine Lawgiver. Every sin is a stroke at God's throne, and therefore at God himself.

May I take another suggestion? As we enter upon this study it will be well for each of us to have a private interview with God. One can search his own heart and life in some measure; but there may be dark corners and closets containing vile things, into which he will not pry without the light and leadership of the Holy Ghost. Face the matter honestly and squarely. Submit to God, and let him be your judge. Look closely for remains of the carnal mind. Remember that your committed sins are but the fruit of the old tree. Be severe with yourself; but always remember the mercy of God, lest you fall into despair. Satan is always ready to suggest the hopelessness of your case; but, "if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous."

Comments on the Lesson.

In the first four verses of this first chapter John deals sledge-hammer blows upon his antagonists. He is fighting men who had denied the verities of the Gospel. He places his personal knowledge of Jesus Christ against all their surmises, and drives home his argument with a vehemence that is almost furious. Three times in as many verses he declares that he had seen the Christ. He had seen him, handled him, gazed upon him; and now he calls him the Word of life, and in the second verse says that he was "that eternal Life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us." In the third verse he grows mellow, and tells his false brethren: "That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye may have fellowship with us"; but, mind you, "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." They must come to a full faith in the Eternal Son, or he would have no fellowship with them.

5. God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.—This was a center shot at the heretics whom he was combatting. Light here means perfect holiness, and darkness means sin, or evil in any form. John is vindicating God against the errors of a semi-heathen religion that claimed to be Christianity. He could not brook so much as a semblance of a charge of evil against the God of Christianity.

6. If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth.—That is tense. What will sinning brethren do with John? According to their notions, he must be a great heretic. But he is correct. A heart soiled with sin cannot have fellowship with a holy God. Sin and salvation will not mix any more than water and oil.

7. If we walk in the light as he is in the light.—I suppose that means about what the apostle meant when he wrote, "Every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." That is a high standard; but will anything lower admit one into heaven? Walking in this way of purity with God, "we have fellowship one with another," fellowship with him; "and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." No one can so walk, and fail to walk into the experience of entire sanctification.

8. This is John's answer to such as claim that they were born without a carnal nature. "If we say that we have no sin"—no inbred sin. God says we have. Some in John's day denied it, and some Modernists deny it now. Shall we believe God, or men? John says such teachers deceive themselves, and have no truth in them.

9. If we confess our sins.—Tell God about them with broken, contrite hearts, and beg for pardon. He is faithful and just.—Thank God! His faithfulness never fails, and since Jesus died for us his justice demands the salvation of every truly penitent soul. But he pledges himself to cleanse away all our iniquity, unrighteousness, carnality, inbred sin, the old man, or whatever we choose to call it, on the same condition that he forgives our sins—an open-breasted confession of it in our hearts.

10. If we say that we have not sinned.—God says, "We have all sinned, and fallen short of the glory of God." That is plain. He who says otherwise calls God a liar. That makes old Mrs. Eddy and her sort look shabby.

2:1. That ye sin not.—That ye may not sin. John would keep us out of sin by faithful warning; but if a man sin, his case is not hopeless—Jesus is our Advocate with the Father; and there is forgiveness for the penitent.

2. He is the propitiation for our sins.—He has made an atonement for us, has satisfied the claims of the divine law; so that God can now pardon a repenting, trusting sinner, and be a just God.

3. We know him, if we keep his commandments.—Jesus makes this the test of our salvation (John 15:10): "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." To know God, and Jesus Christ whom he has sent is to have eternal life. Not to know him is death—spiritual death.

4. This is a fearful verse. We have heard some preachers say that no man can possibly keep God's commandments. Surely such men do not know the way of salvation. Liars cannot be Christians. Impossible!

5. Whoso keepeth his word.—Obeys his commandments. In him very is the Love of God perfected.—Obedience and perfect love are twins inseparable. God has joined them together. Let no man put them asunder.

6. He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.—That sentence is packed full, piled up, and running over all around the edges. If you wish to know its meaning, go and learn how Jesus lived while he was on earth, and then walk in his steps—live as he lived among men. "Practice makes perfect"; but you will need divine help all along the line.

A. O. Quall: "Singing Evangelist and Preacher, Fred Canaday, of Portland, Ore., is spending his Christmas vacation in the East, and has time for a few meetings. This is your opportunity to secure a splendid evangelist who is on fire for God and has a passion for souls. Address him at 624 Oak Street, East Liverpool, Ohio."

Rev. Fred Andrews: "I desire to get in touch with a man and wife who are gospel singers and personal workers, who are consecrated to God and not afraid of hard work and who have the months of January and February, 1929, open. I have the Ft. Jefferson Charge of the M. E. Church, a three-point work, and I wish to begin just as quickly as I possibly can after New Year's day with my revivals. I cannot guarantee anything now more than entertainment; the finances will depend upon the interest that can be created. Any one who feels that God is moving you to answer this call write at once to Rt. 1, Greenville, O."

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior. Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Jean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodistist.

The Gist of the Lesson, 1929

BY R. A. TORREY, D.D.

Fits the Vest Pocket. The Religious Telescope says: "Has proved a blessing to Sunday school teachers and pupils. In addition to the digest of the lessons, comments, etc., it contains attendance record, blank pages for names and addresses, calendar and the Ten Commandments.

Price, 35c.

All Denominations Approve Its Use.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

BY MARTHA TARBELL, Ph.D.

New ideas, new light, new suggestions and new enthusiasm comes to the teacher who opens the 1929 edition of this favorite handbook to the International Sunday School Lessons. "A wealth undreamed of and almost passing belief" are the words used by one reviewer in describing it. The greatest triumph however that has come to "The Guide"—that it has won over all helps—is the reputation it now enjoys for "making teachers of all who use it."

$2.00 postpaid.

No Bible worker or student can afford to be without it.

CHRISTMAS IS HERE AGAIN.

Christmas is here again, the time of much giving,

The time of rejoicing and joyous living,

The time that all people, nation-wide sing about,

The time that the chime-bells everywhere ring about.

Christmas! the best time of all the whole year,

Christmas, the Birthday of the Christ-Child so dear.

Christmas is here again, our eyes fill with tears,

Thinking of the friendless, for whom no one cares,

The pitiful beggar whose home is the street,

The blue sky a covering—with little to eat,

Feeling the struggles of life not worth while,

Might be a bit gladdened by our hand-clasp and smile.

Christmas is here again, O bless the natal day,

Of the holy Christ-Child, born among the hay:

Give him royal welcome; do a kindly deed,

Help his struggling children; fill some want or need.

Thus you do unto him, who did all for you,

On this Day of all days, love and faith renew.

Carrie Evans.

DENDRON, VIRGINIA.

I enjoy reading your most excellent paper, but I was grieved to read an article signed by one of the charter members of the Wakefield, Va., Tabernacle Association in which this party deliberately misrepresented the attitude of the ministers in this vicinity towards the tabernacle. I am sure none of us object to having others pray for us but we do object to unjust and unchristian criticism. I am sure I express the sentiment of the ministers in this vicinity when I say that we are not opposed to the Holiness Movement because we should all seek holiness of heart. We are not a class of preachers who sneer at Bible sanctification, but the trouble with the Wakefield meetings is, that entirely too many times have we discovered that some of the leaders make a great deal of sanctification during the meeting, but after the meeting closes they seem to leave their religion at the camp. It is the every day living of sanctification that really counts; and until some of the leaders of the Wakefield Association realize this important fact, it will be impossible for them to convince the public that sanctification means a changed life. I know whereof I speak, because I have had some of these leaders in my own church, and you can tell a tree by its fruit.

It will take consecrated leadership to keep the Holiness Movement moving. To be cleansed of sin, to be kept pure in heart, and to faithfully witness to the power of our blessed Lord to save and keep, means that we will not stoop to gossip, nor will we have a lot of jazz records in our home for our children's amusement, but rather keep our homes warm with the atmosphere of true Christian piety, and live up to our profession. Yes, we must be what we pretend to be if we expect to command the respect of the public.

E. B. White.

Pastor of the Dendron Christian Church.

MOUNT CARMEL CHURCH AND SCHOOL IN THE MOUNTAINS OF KENTUCKY.

No doubt our friends are looking for a report of the work here because it has been a long time since last we reported. The work has been moving on under the blessing of God. The summer station work was unusually good this year. We had some of the most remarkable cases of conversion and sanctification that we have ever seen. Our hearts are filled with gratitude for the spread of scriptural holiness in these mountains.

Our grade and high school is filled to capacity again. We are trusting the Lord to send us money to enlarge our dormitories and class rooms. We closed our first semester revival Oct. 22. Brother Joseph Lewis, of Wilmore, Ky., was the evangelist. Bro. Lewis preached a full gospel with much blessing and wisdom. We praise God for sending him to us. Many of our students sought the Lord definitely either for regeneration or sanctification. A large number of them bear the fruits of a real walk with God in his sanctifying power. Our hearts are blessed and encouraged as we see what the Lord is doing in our midst. The outpouring of the Spirit is often felt in a remarkable way.

We have the same faithful faculty that we had last year with the exception of R. L. Swauger, who has been given a year's leave of absence to finish his college work at Asbury. Genelle Day and Frances Davis are the grade teachers; Nina Dickson, Ross Louthan and Horace Myers are the high school teachers, and Mary Vandiver is the Matron, music and art teacher.

In this independent, interdenominational work of faith all of our finances come in direct answer to prayer. The board of trustees of the Mountain Missionary Society of Asbury College holds the deed to our property. The members of the board are: Miss Daisy Dean Gray, Miss Della McCall, Miss Martha Archer, Miss Mary Vandiver, Dr. L. R. Akers, Dr. F. H. Larabee, Mr. Lovejoy and Miss Lela G. McConnell.

We praise God for the prayer and help of this society. All our workers come from our holiness Bible schools and from Asbury College.

During the three years of our history scores of souls have sought the Lord at our altars in our station work and at our annual holiness camp meeting, and scores of young people have spent a year or more in our school. Some of our students have been with us these three years. We had four graduates last year. Three of these have a definite call into Christian work and are in Asbury College this year. A number of our present student body have calls into definite work. These things rejoice and encourage our hearts. To date (Oct. 29) we have received $36,012.66. When Dr. H. C. Morrison dedicated our buildings September 8, 1925, we had a debt of $25,000.00. It is now $3,700.00. We have been able to put $2,000.00 worth of improvements on the buildings and keep our living expenses of $4,000.00 per year paid. The faithful teachers have made it possible to reduce the debt so much because they have sacrificed their salary each year.

The free-will offerings of God's people have made this work possible. In our daily faculty prayer meeting and in our mid-week and Sunday services we pour out our hearts to God in

Finney's Autobiography

A Famous Gospel Worker says:
"No Christian can read through these pages without being profoundly stirred. It is a classic upon the practice of prayer. It presents no discussion or apologetic upon the theme of prayer; but recites in a plain and direct form many of the author's experiences. The reading of that book compelled me again and again to turn down the pages and retire to prayer."

FINNEY'S REVIVAL LECTURES
"So powerful is the present-day application of this masterpiece by a master evangelist that the Moody Bible Institute urges the careful study of this book upon the thousands of soul winners it sends out from its classrooms. Wherever Finney was working, as evangelist, or pastor or teacher, there was a continuous revival. The lectures that make up this volume tell the why and how and power of Finney's life."—S. S. Times.

A PLEASANT WOMAN.

Rev. Walter E. Isenhour.

There is a pleasant woman I always like to see,

Who makes my life so happy and fills my heart with glee;

Her smiles are like the sunshine that chase away the gloom,

Her life is like the flowers with sweetest of perfume.

Her face is but the index of love divine within,

Where Jesus reigns supremely and cleanseth from all sin;

And like the sky above us, so deep, and calm and blue,

Her eyes reveal a patience that's always proven true.

Around the family altar she breathes a fervent prayer

For Jesus Christ to keep us from sin and grim despair,

And lead us by his Spirit beside the waters still,

Or keep our feet from straying while climbing Zion's hill.

She reads the blessed Bible, believes it is inspired,

And of its truth so holy has never yet grown tired;

For her it has a message so rich and full and sweet

That causes her, like Mary, to sit at Jesus' feet.

She loves her children dearly, and toils from day to day

To rear them for the Savior and teach then how to pray,

So when they grow to manhood they'll have an honest heart,

And from the way of righteousness never will depart.

She loves her home and cares for it in a pleasant mood,

Singing as she makes the beds, or cooks for us our food,

The sweet old songs dear mother sang many years ago

To calm our fears, ease our pain, or drive away our woe.

She loves her neighbors, rich or poor, treats them kind and good,

Likes to prove herself a blessing in her neighborhood.

Her wealth of goodness stored away in heart, mind and soul

Has led the erring and the lost into Jesus' fold.

If critics rise, friends prove false, or enemies abound

She never lacks in sympathy, nor devotion sound.

This sunny, pleasant woman, so free from ruinous strife,

I'm glad to tell you all just now is my precious wife.

Adam Clarke---Great Commentary

Dr. Clarke was one of a long succession of men who, in every age of the Christian Church, have applied the best energies of their intellect and heart to the study and interpretation of the Scriptures. The seven gifts which, according to Augustine, the true expositor of Scripture must possess—reverence, piety, science, fortitude, prudence, cleanness of heart, and heavenly wisdom—were his portions.

The studies of his earlier years always had a bearing on this great work. From the beginning he felt the need of being taught by God to understand his own word. Referring to this, he says: "No man ever taught me the doctrine I embrace; I received it singly by reading the Bible."

Sufficiently critical to aid the inquiries of the more serious student, and yet sufficiently popular to serve the purpose of general edification.

He gives a lucid view of the several books of Scripture, as to their dates and authors, their scope and connection; he expounds the original text in a manner adapted to the deficiencies of the reader; he elucidates difficulties in chronology, history, and oriental manners; he develops the grand doctrines of revelation, and applies the whole to the great concerns of human salvation and duty.

One leading feature in its character is independence in thinking. While he availed himself of the labors of others, the great number of his expositions are emphatically his own.

Dr. Adam Clarke's Commentary on the Bible is one of the noblest works of the class in the entire domain of sacred literature. It is a thesaurus of general learning.

Its luminous expositions of the Law and the Gospel; its earnest and forcible appeals to the conscience of the sinner and the unbeliever; its rich counsels for the well-understood wants of the Christian' inner life; its endless exhibitions of general knowledge; and its valuable aids to the students of those holy tongues in which revelation took its first recorded forms—all will render this book the companion and the counselor of multitudes as long as the English language may endure. The man who accomplished it achieved immortality, his name having become identified with an indestructible monument of learning and religion.

We commend it as the most spiritual commentary published. 6 large volumes, good paper, good binding, new type.

SPREAD THE GOOD NEWS.

By The Editor.

A LONG with the blessing of entire sanctification there comes an obligation as high as heaven to spread the news of full salvation. Whatever the voice of unbelief and opposition may be there are many Christians who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness; they long to know the way into the Canaan of Perfect Love. Those who have crossed over are obligated to help those who would follow them into that goodly land.

* * * *

Those laymen, brothers and sisters, who have found the power of the cleansing blood of Jesus, should take a very active part in helping to spread the good news. While the ministers of a full gospel must be willing to suffer want, to endure persecution, to make large sacrifice, if necessary, that they may spread the good news of the full redemption found in Jesus Christ, the laity who know the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ, like Aaron and Hur, must hold up the hands of those who proclaim the truth.

* * * *

Many, many times in the early history of what is known as the Holiness Movement, this poor man has labored day and night, from camp to camp and hall to hall, brush arbor to woodshed, preaching to multitudes and seeing many blessed, while sore embarrassed with financial obligations—grocery bills, dry goods accounts—and much that is incidental to the expenses of family life, which brought no little extra burden in the battle. I am not whining. Somehow I always met the obligations, but for ten or fifteen years I knew the drudgery of hard times and pressure, while multitudes of the well-to-do were giving most hearty approval, but little else, to the preacher. I am reminded now of assisting a certain brother who took real pains to raise quite a good collection at the close of a revival meeting. It was in a village church, but he looked after the meeting carefully and his generosity lifted a burden from my mind that seemed to help me soul and body. My gratitude to God and to the brother can never be forgotten.

It may be that paragraphs like this are entirely unnecessary, but the time has come for a very earnest effort to revive our camp meetings, to arrange for some great holiness conventions, to put new life into the revival of full salvation and it will call for labor, for money, for self-sacrifice, for hard work, for earnest prayer, for faithful preaching. Let us gird ourselves afresh and get into the good battle for a mighty spiritual movement. Let us love and labor and give. This does not mean that we shall undertake to make preachers rich, to drain a community, to beg and ding-dong an audience. It simply means we must be faithful, enterprising, liberal and at it in earnest. There is many a man and woman who could rent a tent, set it up in the village or in some neglected community on the creek, get some earnest workers and win some precious souls. The days are passing. Satan is ravaging the world like a hungry lion. Shall we not get very busy in the white harvest field? There are thousands of communities that are a spiritual desolation; they are almost without the gospel. They know nothing of true revival and of the gracious saving power of Jesus Christ. Can we not get something done among the people of such communities before it is too late? The reader will excuse these wandering thoughts, but oh, that the people who know the mightiness of Christ to save from all sin would give themselves with great zeal and earnestness to spread the gospel of full salvation!

REJECTED LIGHT.

Text: "In him was life; and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not." John 1:4, 5.

These words are found in the introductory to the Gospel by John. They refer to the coming of Christ among men and their failure to recognize him as the Messiah and Redeemer. This seems one of the strongest and most stupid blunders in all the history of the human race.

The Hebrew prophets had so clearly pointed out the coming of the Lord, and had given such minute details with reference to his character, his conduct, and his ministry and the history unfolding about him that it would seem almost impossible for these men who had familiarized themselves all their lives with the writings of the prophets to fail to recognize the Christ.

The only way to account for this blindness of the Jews, and their failure to recognize in Jesus the Messiah for whom they had looked and waited so long, is the fact that they were in a fearfully backslidden state. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. They had only the letter without the spirit of law and prophecy. Jesus said to them, "If ye had known my Father ye would have known me." These Jews knew about God, but they did not know him. This blindness and failure to recognize Jesus as the promised Messiah and Redeemer of men was not confined entirely to these Jews or to any period in history or any one people.

With the progress of history, the growth of the church, the countless multitudes who can witness to the saving power of Jesus, we have in the church today vast multitudes of people who claim to be Bible students, who claim to be fully as pious, even more pious, than the Jews who rejected Jesus and manipulated the influences and directed the course of events which finally brought him to the Cross who also deny the Godhead of Christ and his saving power. This is quite common in our day. Multitudes of people in the various churches are quite as slow to receive Jesus Christ as God manifest in the flesh, the only Saviour from sin, as were the Jews to receive him as the promised Messiah of prophecy and the Redeemer of his people. John very sadly records of the Jews of the time of Christ, "He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not. He came unto his own, and his own received him not." Is this not quite true today? Is Jesus not being rejected as Savior and Lord by multitudes of professed Christians? The rejecters of Christ today have far greater light than had the Jews. They also have the history and example of those Jews who secured the rejection and crucifixion of Jesus and yet they persist in denying his Godhead, his miracle-working power and his vicarious suffering and the atonement he made for a lost world upon the Cross.

If the church loses her touch with God, if she becomes busy with the temporal and material things of the Kingdom, if she is engrossed with the prejudice and pride of sectarianism, if she comes to use the holy things of God for selfish motives and for the gratification of the ambitious desires of men, then the church becomes as blind, possibly more blind, to the things of the spiritual kingdom than the world itself.

In the days of Christ on earth certain Roman officers believed in and accepted him as God's Son and representative on earth, while priests rejected and derided him, and even the publicans and sinners heard him gladly, felt the strange and blessed power of his personality and the truths which he preached, while those who were well versed in prophecy and would have been supposed to have received him gladly, were full of hatred and scorn against him. The attitude of Pilate, the Roman governor, at the trial of our Lord, was far more generous than the attitude of the chief priest and his adherents.

There is perhaps no blindness which makes it so impossible to discover the truths of salvation as the blindness of religious conceit, ecclesiastical prejudice, and the carnal ambitions of those who would prostitute the church from her true bridehood to Jesus and use her for the advancement of their own selfish motives and wicked designs.

Great light had shone upon Jerusalem and Judea, but the apostate church was too blind to behold its radiance and beauty. The calamities which followed were unutterable in ruin and horror. No people has ever been subject to more fearful suffering and utter destruction than were those Jews on whom the light had shone, and who rejected that light.

It should be borne in mind that the rejection of light brings darkness; the rejection of divine mercy brings judgment; evil follows

SHOWERS OF BLESSINGS IN ASIA.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

As I write this we are in the midst of a wonderful revival at Ningpo, China, where it is an ordinary thing to see several hundred people seeking the Lord every day. Morning, afternoon and evening the meetings go on and missionaries of the Presbyterian, Baptist, Friends, English, Wesleyans, and Church of England are joining in the services. Sunday afternoon there were two Anglican Bishops in the audience and missionaries from both Europe and America.

Preaching through an interpreter is now an ordinary thing. It reminds me so much of my war experiences in France. Often I would see the guns mounted and fired and the man at the gun knew nothing as to where the shell was going. He was given his instructions, the range, etc., etc., and fired—perhaps the objective was ten or fifteen miles away, but that was nothing to the gunner; he knew if he was given the range the shell would do the business; so in preaching the gospel of holiness through an interpreter, one trusts that the Holy Spirit will accompany the truth and it will find its lodgment in the heart and conscience of the hearers. The most important thing is to have an interpreter that is filled with the Spirit and knows his Bible.

Ningpo is a city of 400,000 people. It was the birthplace of the Chinese Inland Mission. Here Hudson Taylor started, here he was married and a most ancient building site stands here as the first Mission Station of the C. I. M.

This City by the River has not a single automobile in it, nor have we seen a horse or wagon. The streets are too narrow to admit of either; all traffic is done by rickshaws and sedan chairs, and all freight is carried on the shoulders of coolies. During the wars of the past few years Ningpo has been in the hands of both the Southern Army and the Northern but it was never fired on.

The Baptists and Presbyterians have some fine school, church, and hospital property here. The city is built on both sides of the River Ningpo. Our residence during the revival is on the North Bank with Rev. E. M. Smith, (Presbyterian). We cross over the river every time we go to meeting. The ferry is a row boat capable of carrying a dozen or score passengers; a number of these boats go back and forth. If they attempted to put a regular ferry boat on the river there would be a revolt, perhaps a mob, because certain coolies have operated these boats for years past without number. Ningpo, however, is now on the eve of something modern. The present Mayor is a Boston man. He spent six years in Boston Tech, and graduated with honors. He now is projecting a great modernizing program in his native city. Already streets are being widened and modern buildings are going up. Modern water supply will be coming on and numerous other improvements.

A former Mayor was carried away with Communistic doctrines, but when the Nationalists got into control they rounded up all the radicals and took the former Mayor out and decapitated him—the most severe and humiliating punishment that can be dealt out to a Chinaman, because he hates the thought of going about in the next world without any head on him. The Chinese are great believers in the spirit world.

If I were to fully describe the scenes we have witnessed in the revival campaign in Ningpo, China, to some, perhaps, it might appear like a matter of exaggeration. If the like scenes were witnessed in a holiness convention in America I suppose someone would write it up with such adjectives as "Cyclones," "Landslides," etc., but as none of such expressions are used out here I shall try to convey some idea of the work by transcribing a few things from my "diary" notes.

October 31. Left Shanghai by steamer "Hstin Pekin" for Ningpo. I have traveled in all kinds of ships, but never saw such a mass of humanity huddled together on a passenger ship before. Fortunately we had an experienced British Captain in charge of the ship who knew the river.

We had five sisters of charity on board. They had no stateroom or bed so the good captain turned the saloon into sleeping quarters and had cots brought in and fixed them up comfortably.

We had a Chinese Bible student with us who could play well on the piano, so we had a time singing revival songs before retiring. Strange how our American revival songs have taken hold of the Chinese. Such songs as "Come and Dine," "Jesus breaks you every fetter," "You need not look for me down in Egypt's sand," "Hallelujah, I have found it," are quite popular in our meetings.

November 1. Arrived at Ningpo 6:00 A. M., taken to Presbyterian Mission for breakfast. At 4 P. M. at the girls' school held a Leaders' Meeting to pray for the coming services. Quite a number of American Missionaries were present but the Chinese were there in large numbers and all the praying was done in Chinese. I spoke on Acts 19:2, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" endeavoring to set forth the great need of knowing God in the Holy Ghost and giving the Spirit of the Lord the right of way in our lives as well as in all our work for God.

The various Missions have all united in this revival campaign. An Episcopal minister at this opening meeting gave us a very cordial greeting and spoke of the need of a revival.

November 2. The revival began this morning in the Presbyterian Church, the largest edifice in this city of 400,000. At 9:30 A. M., hundreds had gathered in the church and we preached from Acts 1:8. An altar service followed in which over fifty souls sought God.

In the afternoon at 4:30 church filled below and many in the galleries, students from all the Mission Schools were present. We preached on full salvation. Fortunately my interpreter, Pastor Andrew Gihn, is a fine evangelist; he follows the sermon with a burning exhortation and at once the altar is crowded and the aisles, and over 150 souls are seeking the Lord for pardon and purity. They wept and prayed and rejoiced as the Spirit moved them.

Nov. 3. Meetings began at 9:30 with a big crowd. Preached a holiness message. Again they rushed to the altar and everything was jammed with the crowd seeking God. They prayed and wept and sobbed and confessed and rejoiced. We judge over two hundred were on their knees seeking God for pardon and holiness.

We took supper at the Baptist Hospital and then at 7:30 preached in an improvised chapel to a crowd of nurses, employees and people from the neighborhood. Altar call was given and about 25 sought the Lord and several found salvation.

Sunday, Nov. 4. This was the great day of the Feast. At 10:30 we preached at North Bank but the room was too crowded to attempt an after meeting. At 2:30 the big church was crowded—galleries and all. We preached on Romans 8:2, contrasting it with Romans 7th, showing that there was something better for the Christian than the defeated life set forth in that chapter. We had a good time preaching deliverance from sin, both outward and inward.

Brother Andrew, my interpreter, followed up with an exhortation to the church to seek holiness. When he opened the altar there was a rush to the front and over two hundred souls were down on their knees seeking the blessing. Scores of these were young people from the schools. We carried on till nearly dark. It was glorious to see souls coming through to victory.

Sunday night another crowd. Mrs. Ridout preached on the "Fire Baptism," Matt. 3:11, and at the close fully two thirds of the audience were at the altar and in the aisles and benches seeking the blessing.

This was a strenuous day. They tell us in the Tropics one has to be careful; they cannot be expected to do as much as they could do in the West, but we have thus far been kept in excellent health and the Lord gives us strength according to our day. Went to rest feeling that we had spent a full day and a glorious day in the service of the King.

November 5. This day another day of salvation. Testimonies are coming in of victories obtained through the blood. Preached at 9:30 on sanctification, 1 Thess. 5:23, in which I set forth what sanctification was not, then what it was, and what it could do for you. Then, how to obtain it and how it will keep you. The Spirit applied the Now to hearts so that when Andrew made the appeal, at once the altar was thronged and all available space filled with kneeling seekers. One hundred or more seeking sanctifying grace. Many prayed through and testified to receiving the blessing.

As we came into the 3 P. M. service we were met by a lady missionary who told us there was a woman who intended that afternoon to give up her Buddhist paper which she had prized so much and which she had paid twelve dollars for. It was a chart or guide into the other world so that when she died this paper burned at her funeral would be a "sure guide" to her into the great beyond. When we gave opportunity for testimony she came to the front and unfolded her paper and testified to the power of Jesus to save her completely, then she handed the paper to Brother Andrew who turned it over to me, which I shall prize as a precious memento of the Ningpo revival. The Spirit of testimony continued and one young lady, assistant to the pastor, in one of the churches told of her deliverance and the blessing God had given her. She spoke with power and unction and her testimony was greatly blessed of God. Oh, it is blessed to hear the Chinese Christians praise God for the same saving and sanctifying power as we enjoy in America. Thank God for the good old-fashioned holiness gospel. Well may we sing:

"We'll girdle the globe with salvation,

With holiness unto the Lord,

And light shall illumine each nation;

The light from the lamp of his Word."

One of the most wonderful testimonies at this service was that of Miss Morgan, an American missionary who has spent over 25 years in Yunnan Province, China, where she practically buried herself for Christ. She became sanctified at Bethel and came with us to the Ningpo meeting. She is a marvel of the sanctifying power, changed, transformed, purified, endued with power from on high and burning with intense zeal for God. She returns to her far away Province after Christmas taking with her a Chinese young lady saved and sanctified, the daughter of a Chinese preacher. Together they are going into that dark region of China to spread Scriptural holiness.

After the testimonies, we preached on Pentecost, Acts 2:17, and as Andrew was exhorting after the sermon people arose at different places and held on to the benches ready to make a rush to the altar; the moment the word "come" was given we suppose two hundred people were again on their knees in all parts of the church seeking their Pentecost, and it was another great time in Zion. Oh, the hungry hearts of the Chinese for the pure gospel! Let no one say they are unemotional or unresponsive. In all my ministry I never saw such response to the gospel as we are witnessing these days in China. Hallelujah!

"Oh, for a thousand tongues to sing,
My great Redeemer's praise!

The glories of my God and King,

The triumphs of his grace."

November 6. 9:30 service began by Bishop Singh of the Episcopal Church, who spoke on Acts 4:23-30, after which we preached from Hebrews 12:1, 2: "Lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset," "Follow peace" and "Holiness without which no man shall see the Lord." Again the altar full of Christians seeking holiness. A woman handed me a bundle of papers, red and other colors. They were her Buddhist papers containing prayers, merits, etc. It was one of the weights she had to get rid of.

At 4:30 P. M., crowd made up of young people from the schools, missionaries, men and women from various churches. Preached on, "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 3:23. Was showing how we cannot get rid of sin by hiding it or deceiving, nor could our idols deliver us. Was strangely led to dwell on this point, because many worship Buddhist idols. In the midst of things Pastor Hshi came inside the altar and opened up a box and handed it to me containing merit papers, prayers and imitation paper money in abundance, such as they offer for the dead. A woman had turned all these things over to the pastor. She had been in the church probably, but was still clinging to these idol relics and papers. Now she gave them up, her hope and dependence for salvation would be on Jesus alone. It is wonderful when the Spirit works how people will give up their darling idols. At this service another great altar service at which many prayed through to victory.

At night we preached on Heb. 2:3 and limited the altar call to those who had not sought before and who needed converting grace. About 40 seekers.

November 7. Thought to close the meeting on Tuesday night as we were engaged to speak twice daily at Baptist Ministers' Institute (Chinese), but interest was so great that we announced another meeting for Wednesday night. When we entered the church crowd was greater than ever. We preached on Isaiah 1:18, and again had a crowded altar of sinners seeking God. So great is the interest that the meetings will go on every night up to Sunday. It is just like an old-fashioned revival meeting. The singing of American revival songs is wonderful and often the students on their way home sing, "Jesus breaks every fetter," "Showers of blessings," etc., etc. There is no difference; the old gospel for lost sinners produces the same effects everywhere.

OBSERVATIONS.

The human heart the same in China as in America. I saw exact duplicates of scenes I have witnessed in American revivals. No difference! The same spirit.

If our Missionary Boards would get their missionaries on furlough to take a course on soul winning and how to conduct revivals it would infinitely help Missions in foreign fields. How absurd to send missionaries to big modernistic schools to brush up on Psychology, Philosophy, Sociology, etc.! Nothing but waste of time and money. China needs missionaries filled with a passion for souls. Education plus the Holy Ghost is alright, but education minus the Holy Ghost is a snare and a delusion for the foreign fields.

Nothing attracts like a revival fire. People are coming from long distances to the meetings. People stay between the services; eating their lunches in the side rooms.

The President of one of the big Chinese Associations said to me that so many of his preachers have the education but no power to win souls. He wanted me in my lectures to the Institute to spend one hour daily in evangelistic addresses to the preachers so that they might get the fire in their souls for soul winning. China's greatest need is a thousand preachers baptized with the Holy Ghost.

At the Chinese altar services all the women folks are decently attired—the only approach to flappers in China are some of the missionaries from America and England. I have seen a few of these around Shanghai and wondered what "pious" board sent them out! Certainly many come out as missionaries(?) who seem not to have any piety, prayer or passion for souls. Of course they reflect the type of Christianity prevailing in America which is so alarmingly worldly. The folks coming out to China as Missionaries ought to have a burning heart full of the love of God and a passion for souls.

WINGS.

REV. A. W. ORWIG.

"Under whose wings thou art come to trust."—Ruth 2:12.

WINGS are mentioned often enough in the Bible, from a spiritual point of view, to make them an interesting and profitable subject for consideration. But some men manifest a strong passion for artificial wings, at least in the form of flying machines, under various names. Flying in this manner has its fascinations and uses. But, after all, when God created man he did not furnish him with actual wings, as a part of his body; and therefore did not intend him to fly physically or naturally. There will be a time, however, when God will enable his true children to move at will through infinite space, and with unspeakably greater speed than all flying machines and every species of the feathered tribe. And there will be absolutely no fear or danger connected therewith. The very thought is most enrapturing to the devout heart. Fly! ah, yes, beloved in the Lord, our time for that is indeed coming. And it will doubtless begin when we shall be "caught up" from the earth, to some region "in the air," there to meet and greet the blessed Lord Jesus Christ. No effort on our part will be required, but we shall mount up with a buoyancy and ecstasy wholly beyond our present comprehension. Praise God for the certainty of that brilliant event!

But now let us consider wings as they relate to some of our Christian experiences.

We sometimes hear about the wings of faith. Blessed indeed is the one who really has them! Certainly every child of God should possess them. How they enable one to rise above the spiritual lowlands of doubt and discouragement into the realms of glad hopefulness and sweet assurance! On the other hand, how unbelief, fear and repining, often clip the wings of faith and keep one from soaring to those lofty and sunny heights of grace and power which our heavenly Father intends we shall experience! With the wings of faith we would the oftener (why not always?) be able to remove mountains of difficulties, as Jesus intimated, and then added, "All things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."

We sometimes hesitate to obey God because we do not understand his purpose or fear results. It is said that John and Charles Wesley on one occasion discussed the doctrine of obedient faith, when the latter said, "If God told me to fly, and I had the wings, I would fly." His brother John answered, "When God tells me to fly, I will fly, wings or no wings." Of course he meant he would make the effort in God's name, believing that God would honor his faith by enabling him to fly, even though he might not give his trusting one literal wings. Ah, the wings of faith can carry us where no other kind of wings can bear us.

"Look high, O soul! for what is earth but dust,

The fleeting shadow of the better things?

The heavens are thine if thou wilt use thy wings,

And sighs will turn to songs if thou wilt trust"

Whither will not the wings of love fly on errands of mercy and helpfulness? Consecrated men and women have forsaken home and friends and comforts and gone to "the uttermost parts of the earth" to carry the gospel message to those who have never heard it. But those self-sacrificing ones had the God-given wings of faith as well as of love. The wings of real love never grow weary. Only death itself can fold them to inactivity.

"Speed on the wings of love;

Jesus, who reigns above,

Bids us to fly."

And what will not the wings of true prayer do? They will surmount every difficulty, wrest victory from seeming defeat, open wide the windows of heaven, and bring down both spiritual and temporal blessings for ourselves and for others.

The wings of prayer are beautifully alluded to in Isaiah 40:31, as follows: "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings of eagles," etc. The passage is very broad in its scope as to the benefits or results of the true use of the wings of prayer. The proper waiting upon the Lord gives poise and special efficacy to prayer. The wings of eagles are, so the wings of real prayer are effective as touching every human need. Weakness is turned into "strength," the halting one is made to "run" and faintness yields to superhuman vigor. Oh, for the "wings" of Holy Ghost inspired prayer that dissipates every spiritual cloud, pierces the skies and lays hold upon the very throne of God!

Has God wings? Figuratively speaking the Bible alludes to them very beautifully and forcibly. Very pathetically Jesus refers to his great willingness to have gathered together his erring ancient people, "even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings." Once more God speaks to the strong wings of eagles, as expressive of his protection afforded to his people. "Ye have seen how I bare you on eagle's wings, and brought you unto myself." And still again, referring to the mother eagle teaching its young to fly. God speaks of its bearing "them on her wings," etc. He thus illustrates his own patient and loving dealing with his children in protecting and helping them.

But there are other fine and impressive references to the "divine wings," both in the sacred Scriptures and in numerous hymns. We read of "the Sun of Righteousness" arising "with healing in his wings." What a beautiful picture of the efficacy of the atoning work of the Lord Jesus Christ! But the healing of those blessed "wings" are for soul and body. How compassionately he spread them over the people who thronged him that they might be healed of their spiritual and physical maladies! And is he less compassionate and able now? A certain poet says,

"Close to his bosom we may press

And feel his healing wings."

And still another writes,

"For he indeed is Lord of lords,

And he the King of kings,

He is the Sun of Righteousness,

With healing in his wings."

The Psalmist David loved to dwell upon the thought of deriving help from the divine wings. "Hide me under the shadow of thy wings," he prays. And he declares, "In the shadow of thy wings will I make my refuge." Ah, he knew the best place of safety in the time of trouble! Again he exclaims, "I will trust in the covert of thy wings." And as if he would emphasize the fact that we are to live by faith, rather than by sight, his poetic

IS EVANGELISM IN VAIN?

Rev. Andrew Johnson, D. D.

WHAT is the matter with evangelism? Is the church so good that it does not need a revival? Is the world so bad that it does not want a revival? Has evangelism seen its best day? Has the modern age dispensed with old-time evangelism? Is there a new and better way in vogue? Are the customary periodical revivals relegated to the past as the by-gones of an emotional age?

Sixty-five evangelists advertised, in a recent copy of THE HERALD, "open dates." Twenty-four General Evangelists of the M. E. Church, South, made no report at all for the third quarter. What does all this mean?

We do not profess to be able to perfectly analyze the situation and to give the cause of this declension in the far-flung field of revival activity, but we offer the following reasons why evangelism is not flourishing as in former years. The reasons we offer are seven-fold, cast somewhat in the form of rhyme. But upon a close inspection it will be discovered that there is reason as well as rhyme in the premises. No one, therefore, who carefully studies the present situation or the in statu quo of the evangelistic movement in the United States can accuse the author of presenting in this connection "rhyme without reason." Here, then, is our outline:

Presidential year,
Pastoral fear,
Church out of gear,
Cost too dear,
People don't care,
Higher critics' sneer,
The Second Coming near.

Let us discuss these different propositions in the order in which they occur.

1. The presidential year. We all know that the great quadrennial political campaign waged in the election of a president is detrimental to revival work. In the very nature of the case it could hardly be otherwise. The minds of the people are absorbed in political affairs, the respective candidates and the vital issues of the national campaign to such an extent that it is extremely difficult to switch the attention of the public to the question of religious revivals. Nearly four months of the year are thus consumed in the nomination and election of a president. The presidential year, therefore, cuts quite a figure in its general effect upon the field of evangelism. There is this redeeming feature, however, in the recent political campaign a great moral victory was won which will exert a reflex influence upon the religious life of the American nation. This in turn will stimulate the work of evangelism.

2. Pastoral fear—a wholesome fear if you please. There have been so many mistakes made in the evangelistic work that it has caused prudent pastors to think twice, so to speak, before they dare to call evangelists to their churches. The innocent evangelists have to suffer often on account of the guilty, independent, free-lance, self-appointed evangelists who have hurt the work and injured the cause. The pastors have become disgusted, to a great extent, with the very thought of professional evangelism. The feeling of the average pastor may be expressed as follows: "I am almost afraid to call any evangelist and turn him loose on my congregation." Then there comes ringing down from the episcopal chair the charge or challenge: "Pastors, hold your own revivals! Every pastor should be an evangelist." Under all these circumstances is it any wonder that many pastors stand in awe and call not the evangelists? There may be hundreds of good, level-headed, safe and sane evangelists available and yet the good pastor, like Noah of old, moved with fear, prepares an ark to the saving of his house and holds his own revival meeting, or secures a fellow pastor to assist him. It is the job of a jurist to be able to select the right man, for the right place, at the right time. The pastor must see the need of a revival, desire a revival and determine to have a revival. Good common sense, prayer, faith and divine Providence will direct him in making the right choice in the selection of a proper evangelist to assist him in a great soul-saving evangelistic campaign. Remember that the poor evangelist does not have the high privilege and prerogative to select the kind of a pastor he may desire to help in revival work. He has to take the pastors as they come—good, bad or indifferent. There are good and bad in all flocks, folds and fields of human endeavor.

Beyond a peradventure pastoral fear has put some of the evangelists in the rear. Pastors should not cast away their confidence in the accredited evangelists of their own church! Evangelists should stand by the pastors as co-workers in the extension of the Kingdom of God! (Eph. 4:11-13).

3. The Church out of gear. We are in the church, of the church, for the church and mean to stand by the church. It is the greatest institution on earth. Yet it is not perfect. It has its faults and infirmities. With all love and loyalty to the church as an institution we will nevertheless venture the assertion that the church is practically out of gear for aggressive evangelism. The modern trend of the church is away from revivals. Such a state of affairs is not to be hailed as an happy omen and a sure sign of unparalleled success. It would be far better for the prosperity of Zion in all its borders if the church of today were geared up for intensive and extensive revivalistic campaigns. It is an evil day for any church when it is out of harmony with the scriptural plan of revival activity. The church must change its gear if it intends to keep pace with the progress of modern civilization. It takes the steam of revival effort to furnish the power to enable the church to push ahead in its spiritual conquest of the world.

We must pray God to shift the gear of the ecclesiastical machinery from modernism to evangelism or the church is a goner world without end!

4. The cost too dear. This is another great hindrance to revival work. We hear the cry: "We cannot afford to put on a revival or an evangelistic campaign; it costs too much." Thousands of churches have refused to launch a revival campaign on account of the cost. It is true that some revivals or protracted meetings cost too much. Extravagance should by all means be avoided. Economy and efficiency can be and ought to be combined in evangelistic work. Some evangelists have been overpaid. This reacts and causes other evangelists to be underpaid. The financial side of a revival campaign should be carefully safe-guarded so as not to injure the cause nor to cripple the evangelist. There is a reason to all things. The laborer is worthy of his hire. We should not muzzle the ox that treads out the corn.

The cost of revivals is unfortunately the crux of the evangelistic movement. We might as well face the facts. Thousands of doors are shut to the evangelists because the churches deem the cost too dear. There needs to be a proper regulation of this part of the church's activity. We must have the "sinews of war" if we carry on the fight against the world, the flesh and the devil. As Sam Jones once said it takes three things to run a revival—grit, grace and greenback. It will not do to starve the evangelist on the one hand; nor make a "stall-fed calf" out of him financially on the other. We must keep in the middle of the road in revival work as well as in all other kinds of activity. We need more business in religion and more religion in business.

5. The people don't care. We have come upon a period of supreme indifference relative to religion. The world at large does not seem to care very much about sacred things. It is pleasure-mad and money-mad. The passionate pursuit of worldly pleasure is the peril of the age. "Gallio cared for none of these things." (Acts 18:17). "Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion." (Amos 6:1.) There is a spirit of Laodicean lukewarmness that has settled down upon the church of the present generation. Of all the things that paralyze evangelism this is the worst. The world is rocked in the cradle of carnal security. While this is the greatest hindrance to revivals it is likewise the greatest reason why we should have revivals. We must break up the indifference of the people in spite of all diabolical ingenuity of the devil!

6. The higher critics' sneer. The greatest opponent to higher criticism is evangelism. And on the other hand one of the greatest opponents to evangelism is higher criticism. The destructive higher critic does not believe in the old-time revival. He scoffs and sneers at it. We must not fail to take this into the account in our consideration of present day evangelism. It must not be ignored. The spirit of modernism is widespread in the church today. We are now beginning to feel its effects. Hundreds of church doors are closed to evangelists by the high hand of modernism. We must mobilize and fight modernism to a finish. If militant modernism gains the ascendancy and prevails in our churches the day of evangelism is forever doomed. Modernism and evangelism are incompatible elements. We stand for evangelism as opposed to modernism. More evangelism and less modernism is the need of the hour. This should be our watchword and cry!

7. The Second Coming near. Many read the signs of the times and tell us that the end is near; that we are living in the last days. It is said that this accounts for the hard times and declension in evangelism. It is more difficult to have meetings now than it was twenty-five years ago, yea, ten years ago. But there is one encouraging feature to this whole affair. We are to exhort one another so much the more as we see the day approaching. Many shall be purified, made white and tried in the last days just before the second coming of Christ. The great harvest of souls must ripen before the angel reapers descend from the sky to thrust in the sickle and cut the golden grain. We have now finished our discussion of the seven-fold reason for the present state of affairs in the far-flung field of evangelism. Let us, in view of all these things, buckle on the armour a little bit tighter and do more valiant service in the vineyard of the Lord. As evangelists let us make full proof of our ministry. (2 Tim. 4:5). Then evangelism will not be in vain.

Thoughts From Gethsemane.

By J. F. HARVEY.

WE would not presume to attempt to explain Gethsemane. All efforts to explain the suffering of the human soul of Jesus at that hour and in that place are utterly vain. However, there are many precious lessons we may learn, and much spiritual help we may receive by prayerful meditation upon this the most tragic hour in the life of our Savior.

As we approach this most sacred place and hour our shoes come quickly off our feet, for this is holiest ground. Our heads are bowed, our hearts subdued, and our souls are filled with reverential awe as we look upon this strange struggle under the shadows of the trees in Gethsemane.

"Tis midnight: and on Olive's brow
The star is dimmed that lately shone;
'Tis midnight; in the garden now,
The suffering Savior prays alone."

It was a strange struggle, not understood by men, angels, or demons. His agony could not have been caused by the prospect of the painful scourging of his body, or the cruel death upon the cross. Millions of martyrs have gone singing to the burning stake, and shouted triumphantly amid the flames. We must, therefore, look far beyond the physical suffering of the most devoted martyr if we would appreciate what Jesus endured for us in the garden.

We believe that here was the climax of the redemptive sufferings of Jesus. The battle between holiness and sin, between purity and impurity was fought in Gethsemane. The two extremes met and the struggle was terrific. Calvary, with its cross, was necessary, but Calvary, in its deepest sense and in its holiest meaning, was in Gethsemane. We are convinced that the largest part of the redemptive price was paid in the unprecedented and indescribable agony of that night.

"Tis midnight; and for others' guilt
The Man of sorrows weeps in blood."

The agony and distress of the divine Son of God that night, can be consistently explained only on the ground that he suffered the Just for the unjust, that he might bring them to God. He became a sin-offering for the whole world, and in order that he might make a perfect atonement for sin, he must bear in his own body and soul the awful curse and penalty of sin. Sin must do its worst, and he must stand alone in his stern grapple with sin. He must accept in himself that which he would destroy. "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin." 2 Cor. 5:21.

If Jesus would be the world's Redeemer from sin he must permit sin to grasp him, to embrace him, to hold him tight. He must take sin by the throat and strangle it to the death, and at the same time his own immaculate soul be unstained by it. Only in that way could he offer the perfect sin-offering as the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

Included in this struggle, and we believe its climax, was separation from the Father. Jesus felt and knew it must be so. He saw the hour approaching when the sweet communion and the intimate relationship that he had ever with the Father, would be broken. That moment came when, on the cross, he cried, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" We are sure that in Gethsemane he endured all the agony and suffering of a lost soul.

The climax of the agony and suffering of Jesus was the hiding of his Father's face. The horror of his contact with sin was thus intensified beyond all human comprehension.

"Go to the garden, sinner, see
Those precious drops that flow;
The heavy load he bore for thee;
For thee he lies so low."

Shall we follow him, as, with his disciples he leaves Jerusalem's streets and goes out over the Kedron brook toward the spot under the great old olive trees, a favorite praying place where he had spent so many nights in communion with the Father. Into the woods he goes, the disciples being left among the trees. Intense longing for fellowship is seen in his taking of the favored three, but even they must be left behind while he goes farther. How much farther no man can understand. We only know that he went all the way that we might be saved. He is on his knees, on his face, at full length upon the ground. The agony is upon him.

"Dark was the night, and cold the ground
On which the Lord was laid;
His sweat, like drops of blood ran down;
In agony he prayed,—

'Father, remove this bitter cup,
If such thy sacred will;
If not, content to drink it up,
Thy pleasure I fulfill.'"

It is said that the words used to express his agony are so intense that the translators are puzzled to find English words strong enough to put in their place. Does it seem strange that in that trying hour his humanity reached out for human fellowship and sympathy? To his chosen three he says,—"Tarry ye here, and watch with me." Listen, what is it that he is saying now? "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death."

"My soul is so dissolved in sorrow, my spirit is filled with such agony and anguish, that if speedy succor be not given to my body, death must be the immediate consequence. Now the grand expiatory sacrifice begins to be offered: in the garden Jesus enters fully into the sacerdotal office, and now, on the altar of his immaculate divinity, begins to offer his own body—his own life—a Lamb, without spot, for the sin of the world."

Angels came to strengthen him as some of the life, that on the morrow is to be freely spilled out, now reddens the ground. He is suffering the agony of a lost soul, the tortures of the damned. He had sin, death, and hell by the throat, and he must have divine help lest his body die before the battle is won.

"The Father heard; and angels there
Sustained the Son of God in prayer,
In sad Gethsemane;
He drank the dreadful cup of pain—
Then rose to life and joy again."

Marvelous sacrifice beyond words to tell, or mind to comprehend. Mercy and compassion for a prodigal world that can be received and enjoyed by the vilest sinner, if only he is willing to forsake his sins and trust in the Savior that suffered for him. He endured the agony and anguish that is our just desert. He tasted death for every man. He drank the cup to the last bitter dregs.

The whole world is represented as standing guilty and condemned before the tribunal of God. Into every man's hand the deadly cup is put, and he is required to drink the poison. Then Jesus enters, takes every man's cup out of his hand and drinks of the poison, and thus tastes, or suffers the death which every man otherwise must have undergone. He has redeemed us unto God by his own suffering and by his own blood. "Wherefore he is able to save them unto the uttermost that come unto God by him." There is no way of salvation, there is no peace, there is no hope, there is no holiness except through and by him. "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord has laid on him the iniquity of us all." (Isa. 53:6).

"Not all the blood of beasts,
On Jewish altars slain,
Could give the guilty conscience peace,
Or wash away the stain.

"But Christ, the heavenly Lamb,
Takes all our sins away;
A sacrifice of nobler name,
And richer blood than they.

"My faith would lay her hand
On that dear head of thine,
While like a penitent I stand,
And there confess my sin."

Benefits Derived From Temptation

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

HERE is a blessing promised to him that "endureth temptation." It is God's design and your privilege to come out of every trial in a better state than when you went in. If this is not your experience then you have suffered defeat just to that extent.

While upon earth Jesus met and defeated the devil at every turn, and in like manner, every one who is made partaker of his "Divine nature" can do the same today. "Because greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world."—1 John 4:4.

Rev. R. T. Williams says: "Jesus did not employ more divinity, more divine power in his own fight than he will give any poor struggling soul in the fight with temptation. Heaven will be richer and sweeter to us for having been tried and tempted here."

"So long as faith turns everything to God, puts all in God, and takes all from God, Satan cannot carry the city of the soul by either strategy or storm. Luke 22:31-32. Rev. 12:11. Standing watchful and well-armed in the full panoply of heaven, verily "One shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight." Deut. 32:30.

"Unswerving fidelity to God and his Word is more essential than to know the extent of the enemy's power, or the subtleness and magnitude of the temptation. A perfect Christian would rather wrap himself in the blood-stained banner of the cross, and die on the field of battle than to betray the glorious Name of Jesus, by which he is called."

One benefit derived from temptation is an increase of humility. To look back and see the many different things which combined toward making a way of escape for you, while others more talented, were drawn under, and to feel that but for the grace of God, you would have been overcome; this will naturally produce a humble effect upon the soul.

Another benefit derived from temptation, is an increase of watchfulness and prayer. Jesus said (first) "watch and (then) pray lest ye enter into temptation." The more a soul becomes acquainted with the weakness of human nature and the power of the devil, the more it drives him to "renewed and redoubled watchfulness and prayer."

Another grand benefit to be derived from temptation is an increase of wisdom and ability to help others.

"It is a blessed thing to be able to assist immortal beings as they struggle through a thousand difficulties, discouragements, and besetments along the path of duty to heaven and eternal life. Happy indeed is the man who can speak the word which will put strength into the faltering feet. There are such people, and we have invariably observed that they are individuals who have been tossed about in many a spiritual storm, and walked in furnaces of fiercest moral trial."

"If the reader will turn to the biographies of the most devout men he will be struck with their description of sore temptation, and dreadful personal attacks of Satan upon their souls, which would have swept them from their feet, but for their steadfast looking to Christ and calling on God. Concerning the pre-eminent usefulness of these men, history leaves not a shadow of doubt. To such Christian characters we would rather go for help in time of great spiritual trial than any other class of God's people."

"The battle-scarred veterans of the cross, the men and women who have had frequent and awful fights with Satan, are the best counsellors. Many and various temptations have prepared them to be helpers indeed."

"With every triumph on this line, comes not only a sweet and delicious inward joy but

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER II.

OUT UNDER THE STARS.

FTER Huston had sent away the package of letters he went into his room, read the note again and again, and sat gazing into the fire. He shoved his school books aside, picked up his Bible, started to open it, then held it up in his hand, looked at it thoughtfully, and laid it aside.

Huston's religion had been most matter-of-course. He had been reared by Christian people, converted young. Believed and received the Bible without question or doubt. His love affair had been woven into his religious and church life. He and Miss Gray attended church, Epworth League, and all church functions together. They read the Bible together. They often prayed with each other. And Huston had gotten the notion that he and the girl he loved were sort of special favorites with the Lord. That they had been created for each other. And that a gracious Providence had brought them together, and that his guiding hand would constantly direct their course of life.

Now that she had been torn away from him, the skein of his life was so tangled and broken that he could not understand how it would be possible for him to rearrange the loom of his purpose and keep on weaving.

A horrible feeling came over him that his religious experience and love affair were so closely united and intermingled that he could not lose the one and keep the other.

The love of God and of a good woman often go together. The man who really reveres, honors, and loves a good woman is usually easily won to the Christian life. It's a rare thing that you find a man without reverence and respect for womanhood who is a devout Christian.

Huston was utterly bewildered. No one could possibly have brought him to believe that what had happened could have occurred. His love had been his inspiration. His heart was set to be a true and earnest minister of the gospel. And intermingled with all his thoughts, plans, and desires, was this girl whom he had loved so devotedly for three years. He felt completely bankrupt. His faith in his Bible, his Lord, and his call to preach, was shaken. He realized that a great anger, a desire for revenge, was rising up in him. He thrilled and throbbed with a sense of physical strength. He felt that he had power in his arms to rend to pieces the one who had taken away from him the one and only supreme desire of his heart.

He arose, put on his heavy overcoat, buttoned it up and went out into the night. He was panting for breath. He seemed to have asthma of the soul.

He walked rapidly up the road, turned in at a pasture gate and strode across a wide expanse of ascending field to the top of a ridge where there was a great rock. He threw himself down upon the rock, clasped his hands under his head and looked up into the heavens. It was a cloudless, moonless night. The air was pure. The vaulted sky was deep blue, and studded with countless stars.

He lay there meditating. A cow moored in the distance, a dog barked. A little animal scurried across the pasture. There was the whir of the wings of a night bird. And then a deep and awful silence fell upon the world. It seemed that all nature had gone to quiet sleep and left him alone in the stillness of the night with the stars looking down upon him.

A feeling of the vastness of creation, and his own smallness came over him. All the anger went out of him. He reasoned with himself. He felt that he was so infinitesimal that he deserved nothing. That he had no right to claim anything. He felt that his very love had been unreasonable. That he ought not to have asked, or expected, a young woman to wait for him through the long years, and then unite her life with his when he could offer so little of the comforts and nothing of the luxuries of life.

The thing that overwhelmed him so completely was the religious phase of the situation. He had thanked God a thousand times for the love of this girl. That she was his divinely chosen wife. When now it appeared that this was all in his imagination; that God had nothing to do with it. He did not understand how he could go on praying and believing. The stillness of the night, and the glory of the heavens seemed to argue with him and warn him against the repudiation of his faith. But the whole machinery, plan and purpose of his life seemed to be shattered. He knew full well all of the fight was gone out of him. There was not the slightest desire for revenge. He only wished happiness and success to those two persons who seemed to have wrecked all his plans for life. He lay there in the deep silence of the night, there was not even the chirp of a cricket to disturb his meditation. Now and again the atmosphere so still seemed to throb with a great, gentle something, like the movement of a vast ocean wave. Did nature have a soul? And was this the throbbing soul of nature in the stillness of the night? Or was it the gentle presence of the Creator of all things?

He lay there gazing upwards in wonder. He meditated. He resolved to leave the country. He would not remain there and see so far away from him, so impossible to him, the girl he had loved so devotedly. He would not become the subject of the chaff and ridicule of the community. He would answer the call of the far-away West, and try as best he could to forget.

But what about his religion? The foundations of his faith seemed to be giving away. His very heart felt as cold and dead within him as if it had been stone. The very heavens above him reasoned that there was a Creator. These vast, shining worlds could not exist otherwise. It could not be a blind force. When I consider the heavens, the moon and the stars, what is man? He stopped there. Is all this vast universe the creation of Jove, a mighty omnipotent, far away, cold being, who has no concern or care for the individual? Or, is this Creator our Father, who art in Heaven? to whom we can come with every problem at all times with the hope of hearing and of help.

With these questions in his mind, and one long, last look into the heavens bending over him, he arose and returned to the house. On entering he noticed by the clock that it was fifteen minutes past three. He lay down upon his bed without taking off his clothes, and slept a troubled sleep. He arose early and commenced at once making his arrangements for flight to the far West.

WINGS.

spirit breathes forth this sweet refrain, "He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust." Ah, David will do more than trust. For he declares, "In the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice."

"There is a safe and secret place

Beneath the wings divine,

Reserved for all the heirs of grace;

O be that refuge mine."

And in that immortal hymn beginning, "Jesus, lover of my soul," we have this beautiful prayer,

"Cover my defenseless head

With the shadow of thy wings."

Another poet sings,

"Deigns to call me his beloved,

Lets me rest beneath his wings."

It seems some of the sacred poets cannot refrain from incorporating into their hymns some reference to the divine wings as the secure sheltering place of God's children. But they have precedent for it in the Word of God. And now just one more such reference, without, however, exhausting the number.

"In the shadow of his wings

There is rest, sweet rest;

There is rest, there is peace, there is joy

In the shadow of his wings."

If we are really God's children we have the wings of faith, love and prayer. But with many of us the plumage might be somewhat larger and stronger. Others have had their wings more or less clipped by contact with various foes and influences, and while off their guard, like David, on one occasion, perhaps chafing under unpleasant but providential surroundings, we grow a little impatient at our trials and sufferings, and with him exclaim, "O, that I had wings like a dove, for I would fly away and be at rest." Of course his language, as to the wings of a dove, was figurative. But, dear reader, there is "a rest to the people of God" this side of Heaven. The "wings" of true consecration and faith will surely bring soul rest. When it can be truly said of us, as Boaz said to Ruth, "Under whose wings (the Lord's) thou art come to trust," we shall indeed have the highest order of peace and rest, even amid outward afflictions. But do not forget the right kind of "wings."

Fundamentalism Not Enough.

Modernism will send souls to hell—is doing it; but Fundamentalism cannot take us to heaven! Any one can fall off the top of a house to the ground, but no one can jump from the ground to the top of the house! Morally as well as physically, we naturally gravitate downward, not upward. While the devil is the father of Modernism, he is not himself a Modernist! He is not Unitarian. He knows the Deity of Christ. He knows the truth of the Bible, from lid to lid. He is orthodox in his belief. He "believes, and shudders"! On doctrinal points, he could be a Methodist! And yet, he is the devil just the same! It requires more than that sort of "belief" to save us. Good as they are, Fundamentalism and orthodoxy, cannot save us from sin and get us to heaven! We must "contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints," and we must do more than that. "With the heart (as distinguished from the intellect) man believeth unto righteousness." "The faith" which does not include "repentance unto remission of sins," "repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ," faith in the blood of Jesus to cleanse us from all sin; is hardly worth propagating. The present flood of Modernism shows that when heart faith is not there, head faith does not abide! When a soul is in the grip of the sin-convicting Spirit, his theology will straighten out, if it has not been straight. He wants to find the sin-pardoning God, and Modernism has no attraction for him! A. S. HUNTER.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

REPORT OF MT. LAKE PARK CAMP MEETING FOR 1928.

Mt. Lake Park Camp Meeting under the auspices of the Association convened this year from the 29th of June to July 9th. This camp is situated in the heart of the mountains with most wonderful trees and lake and all conveniences for the people who come to enjoy the feast of good things.

This year marked one of the greatest camps in its history. The association spared no pains to make it a real, live, and spiritual camp meeting. For their workers they secured Dr. C. W. Butler, President of the Cleveland Bible Institute, Rev. Paul Reese, and Dr. C. H. Babcock, with Prof. Kenneth Wells and his wife as singers. A finer group of workers could not be found, and such beautiful harmony and love prevailed throughout the entire camp.

Dr. Butler gave us wonderful messages, his teaching cannot be excelled, and the people were enriched in their souls because of his faithfulness to God and the Word. Rev. Paul Reese was loved by all, and his ministry is one that is owned of God. The mighty messages that he brought to the people sent convictions to the hearts and lives which brought fruits for the kingdom of God.

Dr. C. H. Babcock, who had been at Mt. Lake Park at different times was received as their friend and brother. God anointed and blessed the word as he brought it to us from time to time, and hearts were blessed and faith was renewed and souls established in God. A wonderful time of salvation and the blessing of God came at each service and altars were crowded with seekers after God. God seemed to delight in blessing these three ministers by rewarding their labors with souls.

Prof. Wells and his wife need no introduction to the people, their messages in song and their fine spirit of co-operation not only in the song service, but at the altar, was much appreciated. They surely are the "sweet singer of the wonderful Gospel of Christ."

We could not overlook the fact that Brother C. M. Hood the President of the Camp is a man of God, not only interested in his own salvation, but is devoting time and energy to enlarging the camp each year. He has a wonderful staff of sanctified men to help him. Brother C. A. Lovejoy, Vice President, Wilmore, Ky., has a wonderful personality and knows the camp meeting work throughout. Dr. Daniel Westfall, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has served the camp for ten years, as Secretary and Platform Manager. He is a wide-awake, sanctified man and has but few equals in the camp meeting field, as platform director. The Assistant Secretary, Rev. M. W. Castle, of Spencer, W. Va., is a Godly man, full of faith and courage and has much to do with the details of the camp. Mr. J. P. Bohlander, of Elizabeth, Pa., is the efficient Treasurer. These are all Godly men, who love the Lord and rejoice in his work. Let us thank God and take courage and press the battle for great victories in the future. C. M. Hood.

GARFIELD, KANSAS.

After serving five years at Burdett where we had fruitful revivals and the membership largely increased, the last annual conference which met at Dodge City, Oct. 17 appointed us to the present charge. We arrived Oct. 26. It is only twenty-five miles from Burdett. We found a hospitable people and the work has a promising outlook.

The church, through the Aid Society, the Trustees and an individual's kindness immediately begun necessary improvements; papering the entire house and varnishing all wood work and making some outside improvements all at a cost of $175.00, exclusive of much work donated.

The people have expressed a high appreciation of the gospel truth preached. A prayer meeting has recently been started, a good attendance the first meeting. Sixteen in attendance the second meeting, some driving a good distance.

The flu epidemic prevails in our midst now, seriously hindering attendance at school, Sunday school and preaching service.

We are trusting the Lord for a revival in the near future, and praying to that end. We welcome The Herald, and enjoy its many helpful articles, some written by acquaintances and former class mates of Asbury College. W. B. Summers.

LAKESIDE, MICHIGAN.

The Bennard-Reed Evangelistic Party just closed a very successful revival campaign with the Beamer Memorial Methodist Church, Kokomo, Ind. During the two weeks and a half more than 180 definite seekers were at the altar of prayer. Quite a number have been taken into the Beamer church and others are to come in later, so the pastor, Rev. R. L. Wilson, writes us. And by the way, Rev. Wilson is a real pastor. He is a man of sterling character who stands well with his own people and also with the pastors and people of the other churches of Kokomo. It was a genuine pleasure to be associated with Rev. Wilson and his good people. Rev. D. E. Reed, of Albion, Mich., conducted boys and girls' services each day after school. The average attendance was 300. We witnessed a great work among them. The altar was well filled from time to time with sinners seeking pardon and Christians seeking purity. The melting of the Holy Spirit was upon the congregation again and again. It was truly a great meeting. Dr. Bennett, the District Superintendent of the Kokomo district, was present at one of the services and told the large crowd that he was delighted with what he had seen and felt during that great service. The Doctor is much loved by the men on the district. He told the men at a large preacher's council that he was more than delighted to have such meetings held in his territory. God be praised for the victory at the Beamer church.

During the ten days we have been here the Lord has given gracious victory. We have seen fifty or more seeking God for pardon or the blessing of heart purity. Rev. W. P. Manning is the Methodist pastor and is being used of the Lord to do a good work. We have known him for years and appreciate his friendship. We have also had very fine boys and girls' meetings here. Quite a number of young folk have given their hearts to the Lord. Mr. Reed is a splendid children's worker. Miss Hannah A. Dahlstrom, who has assisted the writer in a number of meetings, is singing and playing for us. Her work is very acceptable. She sings and plays in the Spirit. Besides her excellent work at the piano and her service in song, she has a burden for souls. She knows how to help seekers at the altar. It is always a delight to have her associated with us in the party.

Our next meeting is at Woodland, Mich., where all the churches of the town unite in a soul winning campaign. The writer held a meeting there two years ago when a large number of souls sought salvation. We ask the prayers of The Herald family. Yours in the good fight,

George Bennard.

HORTON, KANSAS.

We have just closed meetings in the First Methodist Churches of Pueblo and Canon City, Colorado. The church at Pueblo has a $200,000 building and 1,000 members. Dr. Geyer, the pastor, has done a great work here. Pueblo is noted for its indifference to religion and it ran true to form while I was there. They have two great high schools and they solicited my talks for them. Fifty united with the church in this meeting.

The church at Canon City has 1,150 member. We began there two nights before the election. Hoover stopped off and spoke to us on his way to California. The local election ruined the town spiritually. The Klan put out a ticket and the local election developed into the bitterest fight I have ever seen. In the First M. E. Church there were Klan and anti-Klan men and women running for office. It left the most unsavory effect that I have ever observed.

We are engaged for three months in First Methodist Churches of the Kansas Conference; then we go to a great church in Ohio, and Illinois. Our dates are set until next fall.

Pastors are calling for help this year; they need it, when you consider the condition into which the church has drifted. Three great churches in the state of Washington are wiring and writing for dates, but I can't get to them. I have had to turn down calls to Nebraska, Ohio, West Virginia, Michigan, and Wisconsin this year. I am preaching against sin; and for salvation the best I know how. W. N. LaMance.

KANSAS CONFERENCE REPORT—TOPEKA DISTRICT.

The East Topeka Church and pastor engaged the Rev. John W. Waldron to assist them in a revival during October. The services began in a fine spirit of co-operation and prayer on Sunday, September 29. During the first three weeks 80 cottage prayer meetings were held, with a total attendance of over 600. A group of men gathered each evening fifteen minutes in the fellowship room of the church for prayer before the services began. We held three big praise and testimony services on the Sunday evenings before the regular services. There were 1200 personal calls made into the homes and places of business of our people. At the end of the third week 125 persons had bowed at an altar of prayer, many of whom had been members of the church for years without a personal experience of salvation. Some came to be converted, some to be reclaimed, and still others came for the Baptism of the Spirit. Some of the official members who had not been interested in doing personal work, after seeking and obtaining the baptism, went out of their own accord and have been winning souls to Christ.

We had planned to close at the end of the third week but on Sunday morning the congregation voted unanimously for us to go on for another week. That night we had the largest crowd that ever attended a service in this church. It was packed full and people stood in the back of the gallery through the entire service. The fourth week we did some intensive personal work and Brother Waldron gave a message each afternoon on personal evangelism to a group of workers. This week there were 50 more persons at the altar. One man over 80 years of age was reclaimed and a lady 55 was converted on Thursday night. Dr. Clyde W. Odom, our District Superintendent, was present at this service and intended to hold a second Quarterly Conference at the close of the service but decided it was best not to break in on the spirit of the service with a business session.

There was a very fine spirit of co-operation on the part of the churches and pastors of the other denominations in this part of the city. Two of the pastors who have been here longer than I said to me that it was the greatest spiritual awakening that East Topeka has had for years. My officials seem to think that it is the greatest revival ever held in our church.

On Rally Day we set a new all-time record in Sunday school attendance with 315 present. Finances are in much better shape this year. We are meeting the payments on the building, World Service will be doubled and the budget will be paid in full. We have had as high as 85 persons in prayer meeting on Wednesday night with an average of about 50 since the revival. Pastor and people are rejoicing together in the work of the Lord.

In addition to my personal work, finishing my Fourth Year Course of Study, and serving as associate editor of the Topeka District Bulletin, I have preached in five evangelistic campaigns since January and had two other invitations which I could not accept. W. H. Roughton, Pastor.

REPORT OF MY SUMMER CAMPAIGN.

Wife and I left Jacksonville last May after a five-days' meeting at St. Matthew's Church in that city, with a splendid meeting, number of seeks and finders.

Greensboro, N. C., was our next meeting. This was at the Bible Training School. We found an army of young men and women out and out for God. We had a great time with those students.

Joy, N. C. This place is sixty miles south of Greensboro. Quite a number prayed through to God. We hastened back to the Bible School camp meeting, a gracious outpouring of the Spirit of God.

Richmond, Va. We found this city cursed with cigarette factories. I was told that 8,000 girls are working in these factories, helping to damn the young men. You can see a display on signs that will read like this: "Old Gold Cigarettes, not a cough in a carload." The health of these factory people is at stake. It seems that they are sapping the very vitality and pep out of them. No wonder that we have the testimony of Colonel Ginter just before he died, that he had three regrets: first, that he had never married; second, that he had never become a Christian; and greatest of all, that he had invented the American Cigarettes. They spend millions of dollars for advertising; they fly over cities in airplanes, and with the use of an amplifier say, "Smoke Old Golds, not a cough in a carload."

Winslow, N. J. Here I found a church-house, a graveyard, and three members. The foreign people are flooding this country, and crowding the Americans out of business, home and church. However, we had at the altar Italians, Armenians and a number of Americans.

Camden, N. J. Here I came across a dear brother, John Norberry. This was our first meeting since the Chicago Convention 25 years ago, where Brother Martin, Will Knapp, E. A. Ferguson and myself first met. This was a blessed, sweet remembrance of the yesterday. We began our meeting with him in a tent for eleven days. About five hundred bowed at the altar of prayer. One preacher who had preached the gospel for twenty-two years, and then backslid for fifteen years came back to God, and God shook the neighborhood through this man. Hundreds of people were saved through this man. I handed this meeting over to the pastor and Mrs. Ellis, from Philadelphia. They went on with the meeting for six weeks longer. Over one thousand people were saved. To God be all the glory.

Kutztown, Pa. This meeting was held in the large pavilion with a seating capacity of one thousand people in the public park. This town has a population of 2,700, the Dutch Reformed and two Lutheran churches—and all the difference in the doctrine of the two denominations is that one believes in using wafers at Communion, while the other believes in using home-made bread. All advocate a sinning religion. Sin every day in thought, word and deed; and they are practicing it every day. I heard more cursing in the two weeks while there than I heard two years in Florida. I have not found the standard of religion as low in these United States as I found it in Berks and Lehigh county. They are confirmed when they are fourteen years of age, take communion every six months for the remission of their sins, then they are good for another six months. These people are harder to reach than the Roman Catholics, and they surely have possession of that country. Tens of thousands of these deluded people don't even have a chance to get right with God. I was one of them once but the good Lord saved me. Thank God. God gave us a gracious meeting. People came for forty and fifty miles.

McKeesburg, Pa. This meeting was held among the Church of God people (the old Vinbearnians). These Dutch people know how to pray through to God. This was a seventeen-day feast.

Stony Run. This is the place where I discovered America, my birthplace. They put up a platform for me to preach from. This platform was fifty feet from the grave of my father, and mother, and sister; my first converts after I was saved when I drove thirty-six miles to tell them what Jesus had done for me and they were saved.

Marcus Hook, Pa. This pastor was sanctified in my meeting a year ago. This was a great meeting. The altar was filled every night. The space will not permit for full report. Closed the campaign at Bryson City, N. C., Dec. 5th. Saw over fifteen hundred people weep their heart out to God. Brethren, don't wait for calls. Go after the lost ones.

close and rapidly on the heels of rejected good. Sodom and Gomorrah rejected mercy and fire rained down upon them. Nineveh repented and was spared and blessed. This is the logic of the Kingdom of heaven. This is in harmony with the eternal fitness of things. Judgments follow close after rejected mercy. Those who refuse the light of heaven must eventually be driven into the darkness of hell.

If you take the back track of history and look deeply into the cause of the calamities that have come upon the earth, the downfall of nations, the breaking up of empires and the destruction of peoples, you will find that sin has been the cause, that men have sought darkness rather than light. They have rejected the truth and chosen falsehood. They have hated holiness and loved iniquity. They have sown to the wind, and as sure as God reigns and his word is true, they have had to reap the whirlwind.

When the light of divine love and mercy shines upon men and they reject it, refuse to comprehend, to change their way, to repent of their sins and turn their feet into the paths of repentance, wisdom and mercy, ruin must inevitably follow. It is beyond the power of God to make the wicked happy, to give them peace, to grant them pardon and salvation if they will not repent and change their ways. By and by the fruitless tree must be cut down as a cumberer of the ground. This is true of individuals, of communities, of nations where great light is given and gracious opportunities are offered and special mercies extended and rejected. Fearful judgments follow. Finally, God must deal with men. In the end, there is one of two things that God in the nature of things is compelled to do with the individual and with the nation; he will pardon or he will punish. Those who will not receive life must have death. Those who utterly refuse heaven choose hell.

It is impossible to build an empire so large, to found a nation so strong, to organize armies so complete, to develop commerce so great and to amass riches sufficient to protect and guard yourself so secure that you may reject the light of heaven, refuse the commandments, counsels, and warnings of God and escape his judgments. The highway of history is littered with fallen empires, wrecked nations and ruined cities which have refused divine guidance, refused to listen to the inviting and warning voice of God. Nations and people who have trampled upon divine law, have had their own way with themselves, and have met with inevitable disaster.

It seems hard for humanity to learn the all-important lesson that those who sow the seeds of rebellion against God must reap a harvest of punishment from God. Somehow, men persist in forgetting. By and by they refuse to listen to the voice of the past or to believe its solemn testimony and warning. They say there was no flood; there was no Sodom and Gomorrah; they would like to say there was no Babylon, Persian, Grecian, or Roman empires, but here on your bookshelves are the histories, and yonder on the desolate plains are the ruins which prove that when men and nations refuse the light darkness will inevitably follow. It has ever been so and will ever be so.

Infidels are telling us that the Gospel has failed; that it has been, and is now, insufficient to civilize and lift men out of barbarism, war, confusion and world decay. They should remember that the Gospel has never undertaken or promised to save men who reject it. The Gospel cannot produce a civilization in harmony with the character and teachings of Christ when the vast majority of the civilization deny or entirely ignore the divine origin and saving power of the Gospel.

How different the history of the world would be if men from the days of Abraham, with a fidelity like his, had have learned to obey the commandments of God, believe the promises of God and consecrate to him those things which they loved best.

Suppose the entire Hebrew nation had surrendered to the Lord Jesus as did the Apostle Paul and gone out with a burning zeal to convert the world. Long ago the banner of the cross would have waved over every nation. What would have been the result if all England, all the people of the churches in England in the days of Wesley had joined in sympathy, prayer and zeal in a holy consecration for the evangelization of the British Isles with John and Charles Wesley, Adam Clarke, John Fletcher and Richard Watson? Think of what a center of spiritual influence the British Isles would have become, and how that influence would have penetrated and permeated the great nations of Europe and made impossible the ravage, bloodshed and ruin of the World War.

Had Methodism kept the spirit of McKendree, had the Methodist preachers of this nation, North and South, East and West, been wholly sanctified, filled with the Holy Ghost, and kept the fires of revival burning everywhere, and before the people the constant call to an entire consecration and the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost, we never would have had any civil war. Freedom would have come without bloodshed and the pages of history would glow with the records of the splendid victories of the Cross of Christ and the salvation of untold multitudes who have gone out in darkness.

Jesus Christ and his Gospel cannot illuminate the darkened souls of men who refuse to receive him, who will not comprehend, who persist in sin, in rejection of the truth, and go forward stumbling on in the darkness and pride of their own wicked hearts. Let those who are rejecting the Gospel with its light today make sure they will find darkness tomorrow. There is no darkness so dense, so black, and so eternal, as that which comes to those who will not receive the Bible. Take warning, follow being, and make haste to receive the Lord, to walk in the light here, and dwell in the eternal light hereafter.

Little hearts, O Lord, may love Thee,
Little minds may learn Thy ways,
Little hands and feet may serve Thee,
Little voices sing Thy praise;
Growing wiser, stronger, happier,
Loving Jesus all their days.

WHAT I MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

W E remember reading of a dream a young woman had. She said: "I was alone in a big room, and a man came up to me with a woman who looked like me, but much prettier. She had red cheeks, such as the doctor said I might have if I'd take more exercise. She was taller, or I guess she looked taller because she stood so fine and straight. I began to talk to her. She had the sweetest voice and knew everything. She'd read all the books that I've always meant to read, and she could play the piano wonderfully, as I might if I only hadn't stopped practicing. And somehow, I felt she never lost her temper as I do, and that everybody who knew her must love her. I don't know how I knew all these things, for she didn't tell me. I just sort of felt them the way you do in dreams. Still I didn't know who she was, and she wouldn't tell me, so I asked the man and he said, 'Why, haven't you found out yet? She's the girl you might have been.'"

As we read this we could but apply it to the Christian life. We often forget the fact that we shall not only be held responsible for what we are, but for "what we might have been," with the resources of grace at our disposal. The difference in people is not so much in the diversity of their gifts or opportunities—although we allow that they have somewhat to do with shaping our lives—but the greatest difference is in the way we lay hold of the divine resources. This is proven by the lives of men and women who have come up out of the most discouraging and unfavorable environments and have, by drawing heavily upon the resources of grace, been wonders of the world.

Who would have thought that Abram, the unostentatious follower of the Lord, would have been dignified with the title "Friend of God?" The secret is not in the fact that he merited the name, from a human standpoint, but in that little bit of history we have of him where it is said, "Abram fell on his face: and God talked with him."

Ah, dear reader, this is the recruiting station, the manufactory where lives that count for something are turned out. The mercy seat is where the patterns of "what we might have been" may be seen. We get visions when our faces are turned downward, more frequently, than when we are gazing around to see how someone else is doing. You recall that Abraham wondered at some of the great promises God made him and thought God had gone beyond that which he had power to perform, but the Lord gently rebuked his unbelief by asking, "Is anything too hard for the Lord?"

There is where our difficulty usually lies; we limit the power of God to meet our poor human needs. Satan makes our weakness loom up so great before us, and so magnifies our unworthiness to our discouragement, that we are tempted to think God is not able to meet the situation; and this, too, in the face of that wonderful declaration that "All power in heaven and earth is given unto him." The enemy of our souls would have us forget the tender, gentle, drawing power of Jesus. He does not want us to remember nor believe that the promise, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out," was meant for us. That man who had been converted from a sinful life gives the simple fact of how he was helped in time of need. He said, "I just crept to the feet of Jesus, and, greatly to my astonishment, he did not scold me—he knew I had been scolded enough; and he didn't pity me; and he didn't give me any advice either. He knew I had had plenty of that. He just put his arms around my neck and loved me. And when the sun rose I was a new man."

Ah, this is the Master's way of meeting our needs. He knows before we tell him, of our failures, our weaknesses, our broken resolutions, our attempts to do right and the chagrin and shame we have suffered in those fruitless attempts; but he does not scold, nor censure, but loves, pities, and draws us closer to him lest the enemy pull us a little farther from him. Yes, he remembers and prays for Peter that "his faith fail not."

But how are we to get back to the beginning of the way and become "what we might have been?" Is there no remedy for the mistake we have made in failing to avail ourselves of the opportunities to be "like him?" Surely there is a remedy whereby we can atone for the neglected means of grace and yet start up the ladder whose summit is crowned with the true riches of success. The illness of a son brought Abraham Lincoln to seek the "Land of beginning again." Mr. Lincoln kneeling by the bedside of his son realized that he had neglected his duties as a father and in the anguish of his soul he prayed, "O God, thou knowest how the cares of State weigh and how, because of it, I have not been the father I should have been. O great Father, spare the boy and forgive me the sin." The mercy seat is the place where all our difficulties may be settled, all our wrongs made right, all our sorrows healed, and all of our sins forgiven. Christ is the panacea for all of life's ills, the mender of broken resolutions, and the healer of every sinsick soul.

May we not be encouraged by the sentiment expressed in that wonderful poem written by Longfellow, "The Ladder of St. Augustine," in which he so beautifully makes our failures a ladder upon which we can ascend to higher things:

"All common things, each day's events,
That with the hour begin and end,
Our pleasures and our discontents,
Are rounds by which we may ascend."

Then let us not be discouraged by these visions of "what we might have been," but remember that in Jesus Christ there is a provision of grace which reaches beyond the depth of failure and lifts us up to where we may be living examples of the saving power of God. And when the enemy comes in like a flood, tantalizing your soul with your shortcomings, admit it all, but remind him that, "Where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound," and with this armor of defense you will have put him to flight. In the language of the poet you will "Not deem the irrevocable Past,

As wholly wasted, wholly vain,
If, rising on its wrecks, at last,
To something nobler we attain."

a realization of growing inward power. In this manner we go from strength to strength. In no way can we more quickly come into greater measures of spiritual vigor than by victory over temptation. It is the gymnasium where moral muscle is developed, or the campaign experience which makes the veteran.

We read that David first killed a bear, after that a lion, and later a giant. So it is still; we begin with small victories but grow mightier with every triumph and finally get to slaying giants easily.

Under such a progressive life, the things which moved us a few months or years ago, cannot do so now. Plains are traversed, rivers crossed and mountains climbed we once thought impassable and insurmountable. A wall is leaped over, a troop is run through or overcome, and Satan's attempted bonds are snapped like thread.

Suppose it were so, that the strength of every conquered athlete should go into the victor; then by and by who could stand before him! And suppose that the physical force of every animal slain would go into the body of the hunter and slayer; what a marvel of

HENRY CLAY MORRISON.

By Rev. D. Rand Pierce.

No laurel leaves are needed for thy brow,
To crown thy deeds and herald forth thy fame;
Upon High Heaven's scroll, long since, thy name
Was writ among faith's heroes, there to glow
When human monuments are dust. The snow
Of winter on thee rests; but still the flame
As calmly glides life's glittering sun to rest!

Some lay their blooms upon the silent bier
Of friends, and sob into the death-sealed ear
The words that would have cheered life's trying hour;
But thou, O man of God, whose ministry
Hath myriads blessed, take this I offer thee
In friendship's sacred name—one humble flow'r!

physical power the man would become and nothing could withstand his onset.

Something like this takes place in the spiritual life. The force of the thing conquered becomes in a deep wonderful sense our own. And with victory over every foe, we cry with John—"This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

"Now unto him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy, to the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."—Jude 24, 25.

BY THE BLOOD.

ERNEST WESLEY.
Rom. 3:25; 5:9.

IVING attention to this great and blessed truth, let us first consider a few statements accepted as facts by all who believe the Bible to be the Word of God, God-breathed. What others think is of no importance or value.

1. All have sinned and come short of the glory of God.
2. Sin demands pardon and cleansing.
3. Without pardon and cleansing there can be no salvation.
4. Man has never yet discovered any method by which this can be obtained.
5. God has provided, revealed and offers his method by which all sinners can be pardoned and cleansed.
6. This one and only method is through faith in the Blood of the Lamb slain, in the plan of God, before the foundation of the world.

I. What is God's way? Without trying to explain any of the terms used: ransom, redemption, purchased, bought, etc., let us accept the fact testified to by all the redeemed now in glory as well as by tens of millions on earth: we are purchased, bought, redeemed through the death and blood shedding of Jesus Christ and in no other way, through "faith in the blood." How can this be? With God's "How" we have nothing to do. "Secret things belong to God; revealed things belong to us and our children." Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the God-man has met all the demands of justice, has fully paid the purchase price: this is all we need to know, all we need to believe. All who reject, all who do not accept this one and only plan of salvation refuse the "wedding robe" provided, trample the Blood of the new covenant under unhalloved feet. Praised be his Name—all who, by faith, "sprinkle door posts and lintel" and "wash their robes" have the right to enter in through the wide open gates into the city of God! Rev. 22:14.

While we remember that every one of heaven's ransomed hosts "ascribe their victory" and salvation to faith in the Blood, let us all also remember that none who seek to enter by "some other way" ever have found or ever can find before them an "open door": for all such there remains ignorance, bondage, darkness and eternal death. Just here let me quote the words of Mr. Spurgeon: "The Blood shed on the cross was much more than the blood of man: how much more we know not." Without possible contradiction the union of Godhead and manhood in Lord gives infinite value to the Blood of the Lamb—value and efficacy enough to redeem a thousand worlds. "How," we know not.

II. Some results from the Blood shed.

1. Redemption. 1 Pet. 1:18, 19. Not redeemed with any precious things of the earth, but with the precious Blood.
2. Justification. Rom. 3:24, 25. It is only through the Blood that we are freely justified.
3. Pardon. Eph. 1:7. Remission of our sins is obtained only through the Blood.
4. Cleansing. 1 John 1:7. We have but one fountain opened for sin and uncleanness which is the Blood.
5. Peace. Col. 1:20. Our peace has been made with God through the Blood.
6. Access. Eph. 2:13. Naturally away from God, by the Blood we are brought nigh.
7. Holiness. Col. 1:22. Hebrews 13:12. Had there been no cross, no Blood shed, there would be no possibility of "that holiness without which no man can see the Lord."
8. Purchased to be Christ's. Acts 20:28. With his own blood our Lord "bought us." We cannot be his as long as we refuse this purchase fact.
9. Guarded. As the blood sign kept Israel in safety, so the Blood of the Lamb of God, accepted by faith as our redemption-price, keeps us in safety.

In a few words: if we believe the witness God has given us in his Word, we must believe that all spiritual blessings are offered and secured to us through the Blood poured out on Calvary's altar.

"O the Blood, the precious Blood,
Which Jesus shed for me,
Upon the Cross in crimson flood—
Just now by faith I see."

Who Is He?

REV. ROBERT L. SELLE, D.D.

It was from Bethlehem to Calvary,
In all the ways of life, he went for me.
There was no sorrow that he did not feel,
Nor any sickness that he did not heal.
There was no burden that he did not bear,
And none were left without his tender care.
There was no hill too steep for him to climb,
That he might find and save the lost on time;
No tears too scalding for his eyes to weep,
In ceaseless searchings for his long lost sheep.
There was no day too long for him to fast,
To bring us bread in quantities to last.
No trail too long or rocky for his feet,
And yet he was for all The way Complete;
No storm too fierce for him to brave and stand,

To make an endless calm for all the land.
No waters were too deep, or wide, or cold,
For him to cross to make secure The Fold.
His garden was Gethsemane; O, night,
What darkness he endured to give us light!
There was no gall too bitter for his lips,
For us, nor was he spared the keenest whips.
There was no cross whose weight he did not bear,

That he might lift the fallen from despair;
No death too tortuous for him to die,
That he might give to others life on high.
There was no sword too sharp to pierce his side—

The Prince of Life, and, too, The Crucified!
There was no grave too deep to lay him in—
The One who came to save the world from sin!

The angels sang for joy when he was born;
But when he died, the wicked hissed with scorn!

* * * * *

The resurrection glow was not too bright;
It was a gleam of heaven's morning light,
Which pierced the long and death-like night of gloom,
To light the world through Joseph's open tomb!

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Boys and Girls:

I am giving you a beautiful poem from Brother Gray, thinking as you are all in school it will be especially interesting and appropriate. When I have anything real good I shall give my place to it, for you know "variety is the spice of life."

Lovingly,
AUNT BETTIE.

SCHOOL CHILDREN.

Dear children of the little school,
Who read and write, and spell by rule:
These lines of tender verse are penned—

To children by the children's friend.
In every school I find a joy,
My heart is with each girl and boy;
Assured by smiles and innocent glee—
"The friends I seek are seeking me."
Problems never seem easy to do,
English and Grammar, Geography too;

Exams and tests, mistakes and fears,
Your pleasures mingle sometimes with tears.

Sweet childhood days, too soon a-gone,
With study and play, and laughter and song.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets" won,

Of labor and love, you'll have the sum.
O dear little school-house by the road
Where wild birds sing, and flowers nod:

Fond memories hover in thy air.
For dearest of all are the children there.

T. Richardson Gray.

ILLUMINATED TEXTS.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

Text. "A more excellent name."
Heb. 1:4.

Story. A little heathen boy learned in the Mission to love Jesus. Going to the Mission one day, he saw a devil worshipper who shouted, "This drinking cup of mine shall fly. There is no god stronger than my devil god." Little Pitram stepped into the crowd and said, "In the Name of Jesus it shall not fly." The devil worshipper cried to his devil god and threw rice at the cup, shouting, "It shall fly." It did not. Some of the crowd smiled, some shook their heads at Pitram, but he went happily on to the Mission.

Poem.
"Jesus- Jesus! dearest Name,
Bread of heaven, and balm of love,
Oil of gladness, surest claim,
To the treasures from above."

Prayer.
Father in heaven, to Thee I pray,
Help me in all I do or say,
To honor the Name of Jesus.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I just received my Herald and always read page ten first, which I very much enjoy. Aunt Bettie, your letter was very interesting last week. Glad you remembered all shut-ins and cripples. I have been a shut-in for many years. I haven't walked for eleven years. I sit up some, but lie in bed most of the time. I am a Christian and belong to the M. E. Church. My birthday is April 26th, and am 51 years young. Have I a twin? We live on a farm among the Ozark Mountains. They raise wheat, corn, hay, all kinds of vegetables, and big red apples. We have well kept highways and schools and lots of churches. We are having plenty of beautiful sunshine this fall. I am not able to do any kind of labor at all, I write and read. I'll be glad to have a letter and card shower during the holidays and will answer all who enclose self-addressed and stamped envelope. I'd appreciate reading matter, or anything to help pass away lonely hours during winter season.

Your shut-in friend,
Mrs. Della Krone.

FALLEN ASLEEP

BAILES.

Mary Etta Bailes, daughter of Newman and Georgia Bailes, was born Jan. 9, 1914, and died Aug. 26, 1928, aged 14 years, 7 months and 14 days. She was a member of the Simpson M. E. Church near Summersville, W. Va. Her parting words were, "That as she passed through the shades of death she would enter into the great Eternity of Life."

She leaves to mourn her departure a father, four sisters and three brothers, her mother, one sister and one brother having preceded her. I was called to conduct her funeral service on August 27, while at Mt. Nebo. After she was laid to rest in the little cemetery near the church I talked to her father who told me about the beautiful way she passed out of this life.

"When we've said good-bye to the ones we love,
And we've safely reached our home above,
When we'll be with Jesus forever more,
Leaning on the everlasting arms."

Oda B. Teets.

BISHOP.

Marshall Edwards Bishop departed this life Nov. 2, 1928, after an illness of several weeks. He had lived to the age of 94 years, 7 months and 7 days. A valiant soldier has laid down his arms. He fought with the Grays in the Civil War, the marks of which he carried to his death. He fought for his God and for right for nearly three quarters of a century. A more zealous Christian would be hard to find. Sacrifice and self-denial were to him a joy and a thing of beauty did it but advance the cause of Christ on earth.

He has gone to his reward and hath heard it said, Well done good and faithful servant. Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many. Enter into the joys of thy Lord.

His beloved wife, Cornelia Ida Bishop, preceded him nearly two years ago. There are three sons, J. G. Bishop of New York, E. W. Bishop, of New Jersey, and J. H. Bishop of Lynchburg, Va., with a number of nieces, nephews and a host of friends left to mourn their loss. And who will really miss his wise counsel and Godly example. May his prayers be answered that not one of his loved ones be missing when the roll is called up yonder.

His devoted niece,
Eva H. Sizer.

MIXON.

The subject of this notice was born in North Conecuh county, Ala., 68 years ago and died in Georgiana, Ala., July 1, 1928.

Her parents were Christians and she was brought up in the fear and admonition of the Lord. She joined the M. E. Church in early life and began the Christian's warfare. With grace and the knowledge of the Lord, she sought to attain the higher light in true Christianity. In this sphere she lived and by precept and example taught the true way of holiness. She was uncompromising and believed in going to the top where beauty could be seen and where the warmth of her God could be felt.

She realized more and more that religion is the basis of every human well-being and as the years came and went she grew in grace and in the knowledge of the firmer conceptions of a genuine Christian womanhood.

We call her dead but not so; the tree has decayed but by the fruitage there lives to appease and enrich others.

Ye humble scribe, who in childhood played with her in the same yard and watched her course through the years, feels his hopes strengthened and his vision brightened because of her life and our admonition. We might profit by the study of such lives. So as we pass, we too, shall find the gates ajar.

M. A. Lane.

ALBIN.

Miss Sarah Catherine Phyllis was born Nov. 6, 1868, in Henry Co., Ill. She was married to Mr. John Albin, Mar. 27, 1888. To this union five children were born, four of them having preceded their mother in death. In 1899 she moved with her husband from Jackson Co., Kan., to Oklahoma where she lived until her death, Nov. 27, 1928. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church at Sweetwater, Okla., in 1914. Was a faithful Christian until her death. She leaves to mourn her departure her husband, John Albin, one daughter, Mrs. Allegra Easterlin, three grandchildren, Betty Jo and Frances Jean Easterling, and Bessie Mildred Hill. Three brothers, Lee Phyllis, Paxico, Kan., Frank Phyllis, St. Marys, Kan., Embert Phyllis, Vermillion, Kan., and Mrs. Lizzie Thompson, of Elk City, Okla. All being present at the funeral except Embert Phyllis and Bessie Mildred Hill. The latter having arrived a few minutes late. While she had been in failing health for some time she was not seriously ill but three days. The funeral was held by Rev. Perry McArthur at the home. The body was laid to rest in the Mulberry Cemetery by the side of her two daughters.

Besides her immediate family she leaves other relatives and a host of friends to mourn her death.

WESTHAFFER.

Mrs. Harriet Elizabeth Westhafter, aged 71, passed away very suddenly, at 5:10 A. M. the morning of Nov. 19. She had gotten up, but came back to bed, as I supposed, to rest a little while. In a few moments I heard a peculiar noise, and on turning on the light, saw she was about gone. Never spoke, or made any struggle. She had been in poor health for years. That is the reason I retired from my active work six years ago last spring, and moved here, as this county was our home.

She was born near Gnadenhutten, ("Tents of Grace"). Converted when fifteen years old, uniting with the M. E. Church. Under the pastorate of Rev. Lewis, now of Mt. Vernon, O., she came into the experience of entire sanctification, writing me, that night to the place I was engaged in my evangelistic work. She said, "This afternoon I came into the blessing of entire sanctification. I have been praying three years for this experience. I am sanctified, praise the Lord." She lived it. A great Bible reader, also one that went regularly to her secret prayers. Her life no doubt was shortened by taking care of her parents, both lingering for months in each sickness. But her motto seemed always to be "Others."

In my pastorates in the North Indiana Conference she was greatly beloved by the people, though not able to do much work for the church. We had just built, during the past summer, our new home, naming it "The Alabama." (Here we rest) but her rest in this home built with a view to her convenience and comfort, was short, as we moved in the 28th of last August. We attended Sunday school and church on Sunday morning before her going. She seemed greatly interested in the services. While she never sang, she loved to hear the old-fashioned hymns. As we stood together while the congregation was singing the closing hymn, "Close to Thee, Close to Thee," she leaned against my arm and looked on the book. It seemed to me that something supernatural come from her to me. I can feel that touch yet.

Short services held the 21st at the home, the ministers of the city taking part and acting as pall bearers. At Gnadenhutten, Rev. P. B. Schaffner, pastor of the First M. E. Church, of New Philadelphia, gave a very inspiring and comforting message, then she was laid to rest in that beautiful cemetery near our son, who died of "flu" in 1919, also near her brother and parents. Surviving, the husband, two sons, and daughter, Charles A., of New Philadelphia, Raymond M., Life Annuity Bonds Of Asbury College, Wilmore, Kentucky.

There are many Christians who have something laid by which they would like to have used in the work of training a thoroughly consecrated and sanctified ministry at Asbury College at their death. However, they need the income of it while they live, and so feel that the best they can do is to leave it to us in their wills. Too often, unfortunately, these wills are successfully contested and the wishes of the deceased are thwarted.

This difficulty is overcome in an Annuity Contract, for the donor is his own executor. Our Annuity Bonds are secured by the entire assets of Asbury College. The investment is SAFE, the returns are CERTAIN.

Scores of our friends have already invested their funds with us in this manner, and during the more than fifteen years that Asbury College has been issuing LIFE ANNUITY CONTRACTS it has never defaulted on an annuity payment; our friends, moreover, have given us assurance that they have never had occasion to regret their investment in this form of gift to Asbury College.

LIFE ANNUITY BONDS can be written for amounts of $100 and over. Simply write us your age and the amount you desire to invest on Annuity Contract, and we will forward to you at once the Annuity Bond made out to you for your inspection and approval, or you may send us your check with your application, and the bond will be dated back to the day you wrote the check, from which date the annuity payments will be calculated.

PEACE.

Anne Ellen Kittle.

Long ago on a star-lit December night, to a group of simple-hearted shepherds was brought a message by an angel band.

"Twas the glad news of the Savior; the Prince of Peace. "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Good will toward men! That is the keynote of peace. When men have in their hearts that love which works no ill to his brother; when malice is extinguished never to flare forth again; when avarice has been forgotten and its place lost in the memory; when self-glorification is converted into self-effacement; when men's hearts are set like a flint and will not be moved from the cause of righteousness; then and only then shall we find lasting peace.

Are we really in earnest concerning the peace question? If we are, let us prove it—let us act—individually, striving together in love toward the goal of peace; peace by the way of good will.

O, Prince of Peace, live in our hearts until

Our lives o'erflow in peace to all—good will.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D.D.

Lesson III.—January 20, 1929.

Subject.—Christ the Savior. Luke 15:3-7; Romans 5:6-10.

Golden Text.—And thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins. Matt. 1:21.

Time.—The passage from Luke was spoken by our Lord in A. D. 30. Paul wrote to the Romans about A. D. 58.

Places.—Perea and Corinth.

Introduction.—Christ the Savior, the anointed Savior. We use the word Christ as a proper name designating our Lord; but in the New Testament its common use is descriptive, an adjective. It is the equivalent of the Hebrew word Messiah. Savior is the English for the Greek word Jesus, as is clearly brought out in the Golden Text.

There is a close parallel between our present-day spiritual condition and that of the Jews at our Lord's ministry on earth. They had no dream of salvation by faith, but were trying to save themselves by obedience to law. The tendency of the modern church is exactly the same. In truth, this seems to be the tendency of human nature. In the times of Martin Luther the Church had almost completely lost sight of the doctrine of salvation by faith. There is little said today about believing unto salvation; but the cry of "Do, Do!" is ringing throughout the Church. I am satisfied that we are not doing half enough; but I am just as thoroughly satisfied that we cannot whip spiritually dead people into action, unless we accomplish something on lines of church pride; and we certainly cannot save the lost by putting them to work out their salvation.

Man is lost, hopelessly lost, without a perfect Savior. He cannot even move toward God without prevenient grace; for no man can come to Jesus Christ, except the Father draw him through the Divine Spirit. This was the basis of the Gospel as preached by Jesus and his apostles. Jesus died because men were lost. He poured out his blood to satisfy Divine Justice, so that the Father could pardon sinful, lost men. St. Paul felt the full force of it when in his letter to the Romans he wrote: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek." Unless men are lost, such words have no meaning.

Although we were completely lost, had forfeited every right and every hope we had in the world, thank God Jesus has become for us a perfect Savior. But we must not get the idea that he made for us a commercial atonement, so that God either will, or must, save the entire race of men: he made a governmental atonement that makes it possible for God to pardon every soul who will repent and accept by faith the salvation provided for him through the blood of the cross. Remember, it is a conditional salvation: "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him." The atonement in Jesus Christ is full and free to every one that believeth, "but he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son." The way of faith leads to everlasting life: the way of unbelief leads to everlasting damnation.

Could we but realize the utter hopelessness of sin, we would never cease shouting because of the hopefulness of complete salvation through the only begotten Son of God. Some one has written very eloquently about the fact of SIN; he might write far more eloquently concerning the fact of SINNERS. Leaving the devil and the demons out of the count, the most wretched, woe-be-gone, miserable, blasted creature in God's universe is a Christ-rejecting sinner lost in eternity's night. We know nothing about hell, except what the Bible tells us; but to be polluted by sin, to be Godless and hopeless forever, would constitute an insufferable hell for any being created in God's image. Remorse! Remorse! It will ring throughout the lake of fire and brimstone forever. Look! Look!! The cross comes into view with its bleeding sacrificial Lamb. Look yonder at Joseph's tomb. The stone has been rolled away, and Jesus, our Savior, is alive forevermore. Begone with your Modernistic infidelity! He is God: Yea more; he is the GOD-MAN. The keys of death and hell are hanging at his girdle. Hope plumes her wings for an endless flight beyond the stars. Salvation full and free! All things are ours, because we are Christ's and Christ is God's. Hallelujah forever!

Comments on the Lesson.

It is useless to comment on this parable verse by verse. The people to whom Jesus was speaking could appreciate every word of it to the full. Its meaning is largely hidden from us in America, because we know so little about sheep and shepherds. What blunders we have heard men make in trying to interpret the twenty-third psalm. That wonderful poem must be seen in the light of a Syrian setting, or its beauty will be lost to the reader. The intimacy that exists between an Oriental shepherd and his flock must be understood before one can comprehend the full meaning of our Lord's parable. The beautiful story of Garibaldi and his soldiers finding the old shepherd out in the woodland in the darkness of night searching for a lost lamb may turn some light upon the subject. When a good shepherd housed his sheep in the late evening, if one were missing he could not sleep till it was found. He took the back-track over the way his flock had traveled during the day, hunting and calling the lost sheep by name until he heard its cry. Then with a glad heart and a bounding step he hastened to its rescue. Laying it on his shoulders, he bore it to the fold with a glad heart, dressing its wounds and petting it as though it were his own child. His happy soul could not rest till he had rushed out to tell the good news to his friends and neighbors who joined him in his rejoicings because he had found his sheep that was lost.

Our blessed Shepherd makes this a picture of himself rescuing a lost soul. How glad he must be when a sinner returns to the fold. All Heaven shouts. Listen to his gracious words: "I say unto you, that likewise Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance."

This would be a good time to sing:

"There were ninety and nine that safely lay
In the shelter of the fold,
But one was out on the hills away
Far off the from the gates of gold—
Away on the mountains wild and bare,
Away from the tender Shepherd's care."

The part of our lesson taken from the fifth chapter of Romans calls for a little more minute attention.

6. When we were yet without strength.—When we were hopelessly ruined by sin. In due time.—At God's appointed time—"in the fulness of time." Christ died for the ungodly.—I think it is E. P. Roe who tells the beautiful story in his Opening a Chestnut Bur of an old man who was a very great sinner. The old fellow could not see that he had any interest in Jesus until some one told him that he died for great sinners like himself. Then because he was such a great sinner he believed unto salvation. When Jesus saved Saul of Tarsus, a murderer, he reached the climax. No sinner needs to perish in despair.

7. Scarcely for a righteous man will one die.—The thought in this verse is not clearly expressed in our English translation. The meaning is that such a sacrifice of one's life is not common; but that it may occur in some cases and under some circumstances. The full meaning comes out in the next verse, and needs no explanation.

8. But God commandeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.—That is glorious news to lost men. The apostle piles up his logic in the next verse.

9. Much more then, being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him.—There are no such thoughts in man-made religions. Their hope is to be saved through works. Christianity saves through the blood of God's Son alone. Our best deeds are but fruits of our salvation.

10. Read this verse carefully. In it Paul is making one of his great contrasts. "If, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son." That was blessed news; but something better must follow, or salvation would not be complete. The apostle is looking ahead. It is great to be saved from sin; and even that should keep us shouting happy forever, but the big thing is, not what we are saved from, but what we are saved unto. Ours is a salvation that will draw upon the resurrected, living Christ for ever for eternal life; and that eternal life is something far beyond mere existence. Although it was lost in the fall, in Jesus Christ we are again made partakers of the Divine Nature.

THAT WILL NOT SHRINK

J. R. Gilbert, P. C., Fenholloway Circuit, Tallahassee Dist., Florida Conference: "The last two weeks of October we had a gracious meeting at Shady Grove Church. Time and again the altar was filled with seekers—some were definitely blest. Rev. W. R. Quinton, evangelist of Chipley, Fla., did the preaching. I do not believe any one could have done it better. As a preacher of the gospel he is clear, positive, convincing and Scriptural. We were greatly blessed and edified. Eternity alone shall know the results. We thank the Lord and take courage."

N. G. Griswold, Pastor M. E. Church, Fullerton, Ky.: "We have just closed a gracious revival at Garrison, Ky., in which there were 30 conversions, 30 accessions, 5 sanctifications and 12 baptisms. God was with us in great power. The evangelists were Sister N. H. Young and Edna May Trunklin, of Maysville. These sisters proved to be great workers for the Lord."

Perry R. Rood: "I will gladly accept calls for revivals in churches, camps, halls and home missionary meetings from any pastor or committee seeking an evangelist, for two or four weeks' meetings as the place might require. Have been in the active ministry, both pastor and evangelist, about fourteen years and know every phase of the pastor's work, and take delight in serving every way. Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

New ideas, new light, new suggestions and new enthusiasm comes to the teacher who opens the 1929 edition of this favorite handbook to the International Sunday School Lessons. "A wealth of undreamed of and almost passing belief" are the words used by one reviewer in describing it. The greatest triumph however that has come to "The Guide"—that it has won over all helps—is the reputation it now enjoys for "making teachers of all who use it."

HELP FOR THE BLIND.

Most people have an interest in the blind. Let us divide them into three classes: First, those who react in somewhat this way when passing a blind beggar on the corner: "Poor fellow! I don't blame him for begging. What else could he do? I must give him a quarter. I only wish it were ten times as much, but, dear me, there are so many other helpless ones like him that I must also help."

One who belongs to the second class is too well schooled in twentieth century methods of social service to encourage begging of any kind. He has learned the favorite slogan: "Help the Blind to Help Themselves," and he earnestly seeks to apply it. To this class, which is considerably smaller than the first, belong a great many benevolent Jewish people and non-professing Christians, who nevertheless have much real sympathy for those less fortunate than themselves. Their main object is to bring the blind to a place of economic independence by means of education and manual training. To this end, local organizations have been formed and much valuable legislation accomplished.

The third class is as small proportionately as Gideon's Band. Those in this class are in sympathy with all efforts to better social conditions among the blind, and to train them for trades and professions, but they realize that "man cannot live by bread alone,"—that after all, these are only second things, not first. The attitude of one belonging to this class might be expressed like this:

"As one who has learned that abounding life can come only through an entire yielding to Christ, the Savior as Christ, the Master of every thought, word and deed, I am convinced that a life built upon any other foundation is 'as a house built upon the sand'; therefore, out of loyalty to my convictions, I am bound to do all in my power to bring my fellowman into this relationship. I do not feel that the blind need Jesus any more or any less than the seeing. But they need him fundamentally, eternally! If they are to claim his promise for 'all things,' they must first seek the Kingdom; they must put first things first. It is my high privilege to help open their eyes to this indispensable truth."

Because there was a little group of men and women with a vision like this, the Braille Circulating Library (Y. M. C. A. Building, Richmond, Va.), was organized in 1925. They were firm in their belief that the most practical way of reaching the blind all over the world was through the medium of the embossed (Braille) page, and that no devotional books were better suited for this than those of James H. McConkey,—already translated into eighteen languages. Today there are between eight and nine hundred volumes (twenty-four titles) in Revised Braille, Grade 1½, which are circulated on the lending plan, among some four hundred and fifty readers in ten different countries. The work is supported entirely by free-will offerings, and there is no expense whatever to the reader. Any who request the books are welcome to the loan of them.

The following quotations are extracts from letters received from blind readers:

(Georgia). "I wish I could find language sufficient to tell you how deeply I appreciate the book on Prayer. It is undoubtedly the finest work of its kind in raised print, and has done much to give me new courage to pray down greater and deeper blessings than ever before. I read it through twice."

(Pa.) "It (Prayer) is the most wonderful book I have ever been able to read for myself. I want it for my own and I need it."

(Minn.). "I hope I may have a chance to read all the books again. When I have read them all, I would not mind starting over."

(Kansas). "A few weeks ago I received the little book, 'The New Commandment,' which I read and re-read, and then made a copy of the same for my own personal benefit."

(Japan). "Thank you for lending us Mr. McConkey's pamphlets. We had held them too long, for they were so good that we copied them in toto, and kept them in our library, which is open to any Blind."

I unhesitatingly consider Rev. J. W. Hughes, of Wilmore, Ky., one of the outstanding evangelistic teachers of any age, and Asbury College is a proof of the statement. Nothing could be more fitting, nothing more essential, nothing could send a thrill to the world more quickly than the completion of this building. EVER LOOKING UNTO JESUS.

By The Editor.

AS we run our race, if we cease to look to Jesus, we lose our patience. But if we keep our eye on him we can easily hope unto the end. Looking unto Jesus we shall remember the greatness of the Atonement, the mightiness of his power to save and keep, the fact of his coming in glory, and no situation can wear out our patience.

* * * *

Those who love the Lord Jesus Christ in deed and in truth, can but rejoice that the Scriptures declare that he shall reign until all of his enemies are placed beneath his feet. This is encouraging. However dark the day may be, and however the enemies of righteousness may seem to triumph, nevertheless, we have the promise of the infallible word that, at last, the Lord shall reign victorious.

* * * *

There is a comforting passage of Scripture which reads as follows: "Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity. For they shall soon be cut down like the grass and wither as the green herb." Of course, this does not mean that we are not to be grieved because of wickedness, nor that we are not to contend against evil; but it does mean that we are not to discourage ourselves, or despair in the conflict.

* * * *

From the same Psalm, which is the 37th, we read: "Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart. Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass." These words are full of assurance and comfort. It is wonderful how God can handle our situations for us if we will only put things into his hands, walk in obedience to his commandments, and wait upon him for his decisions and decrees.

* * * *

It is in this wonderful 37th Psalm we read, "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass." These words should be very consoling to the hearts of the saints who are sorely tried with the worldliness, unbelief, and the sin about us everywhere. God does not forget, neither has he given his world over into the hands of the wicked. He sharpeneth his sword and bendeth his bow. By and by those who trample upon his laws, ignore his authority, reject his mercy, discount the Atonement of his Son, and grieve his Holy Spirit, shall be brought to judgment.

* * * *

We have come upon times when the children of God must remember the exhortation of the apostle to run their race, ever looking unto Jesus. The eye that is fastened upon Christ will brighten with hope and be saved from seeing much else that can only disturb and hinder. Looking unto Jesus lightens the load, smoothes the pathway, puts lightness and surety into the feet that run up the narrow road of eternal life. Let us carry with us the thought of Christ. Let us sing about him, pray to him, witness for him, live and labor for his glory, and the time will not be long. Soon the conflict will all be over, and we shall be forever with the Lord.

An Open Letter to a Beloved Pastor

No. I.

My Dear Brother:—

HAVE been thinking much of you of late. Having known you when you were a very young man and, having followed with interest your rise and progress as a Methodist minister, and knowing something of your present position and popularity, I have been ruminating in my own mind with reference to your life work and your future.

You were raised by devout, humble people. You had the advantage of decent poverty, of hard work, careful economy, and genuine respectability. These things were all in your favor; they called upon your latent resources and built into you much of what has made you a strong, intelligent, and successful man in the ministry.

I have been thinking recently of your conversion. It was during a gracious revival in the village where your parents were devout and zealous Methodists in the church where you received your early Sunday school training, and where you had inculcated in you the doctrines and spirit of true Methodism. Your community was not wealthy, but the people were industrious, thrifty, respectable and devout, an excellent class of people in which to grow up into a strong, resolute manhood. The church of which your parents were members, where you attended Sunday school, where you were converted, and in which you held your membership up to your young manhood, was genuinely Methodist. It was a great revival church.

The pastors of that church believed in revivals of religion and promoted them. It was a rare thing that a conference year passed without a revival in the Osgood Methodist Church. I well remember the evening you were at the altar of prayer. You were then just turning into your fifteenth year. The meeting of that fall was deep and widespread; scores of young people in the village and surrounding country were converted. Several preachers came out of that revival; one a Baptist minister who has been a successful pastor and soul winner. There was Brother John—who has been a very useful local Methodist preacher, and yourself. I am also under the impression that one of the young men converted in that revival became a Cumberland Presbyterian minister. I am not certain about this, however. You may be able to inform me.

I am quite sure you recall that you were at the altar a number of times. You may remember that I spoke to you and prayed for you. Your conviction was very deep. You confessed your sins and prayed with great earnestness for pardon. I shall never forget the night of your conversion. You came through just as the preacher finished his sermon; you leaped from the altar with a shining face, praising God. After embracing your father and mother you went about the house shaking hands with the people, testifying to the love of Christ and his willingness to forgive sin. You went back into the audience and brought several of your schoolmates to the altar of prayer, one of whom was converted that night. I was standing with a group of men, and one of the brethren remarked, "That boy will be a preacher. Within twenty minutes after his conversion he was out seeking souls, and bringing them to the altar of prayer."

Your steadfastness and zeal as a young Christian, and your active work in prayer meetings, Sunday school, and revivals of religion in that church, is well-remembered and spoken of among the older citizens who were present at your conversion, and those who grew up with you. The people of your community expected you to succeed and, as you have been advanced in your appointments to one of the most influential places in your conference, they have been gratified. You know how graciously you are received whenever you visit the village and preach in the church of your boyhood.

The thing about which I have been thinking and which has stirred me up to write this letter, is the fact that since you have come to be pastor of one of our very prominent churches, you no longer have revivals of religion. In your earlier ministry you held many very successful revivals; in fact, I believe you were one of the most successful soul winners in your conference, but since becoming pastor of your present church, a pastorate which extends over quite a number of years, you have not had a protracted meeting in your church. You have added quite a large number of people to your membership, but this has been done by an organized canvassing of your community previous to, and the bringing of a large number of persons into the church on Easter morning. You have also received a very large number of young people from your Sunday school on Decision Day. I have been wondering how that a man so deeply convicted, so powerfully converted, and so zealous in revival work, and soul winning for a number of years, can get his consent to make such a radical change as you have made in the process of bringing people into church membership.

You know full well that the people who are canvassed and brought into your church on Easter morning, and the Sunday school people who are herded in on Decision Day, know nothing of a pungent conviction for sin. They do not, as you know, experience the KINGDOM TALES AND TRAVELS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I am writing this on the first train I have taken since arriving at Shanghai—all our journeys have thus far been by boat—but I am now on the train going from Shanghai to Nanking, the new capital of the Republic. Chinese trains carry 1st, 2nd 3rd and 4th class cars—the latter class and the third are always crowded. One wonders how it is the Chinese travel so much. Boats and trains are crowded and the baggage is immense. Very often one has to carry bedding along. A band of Bethel evangelists accompany us to Nanking to engage in the revival there. We bring our bedding along as the looting of the missionary homes last year means a shortage in many things necessary for one's comfort in cold weather. "Take up thy bed and walk" is a scriptural expression to us in America that is little understood but in the Orient it is quite the thing to do. We have passed through a great deal of farm country thus far. The Chinese are toilers seven days the week. They know no Sabbath rest. Men, women and children toil. Life is sordid for the multitude. Their religion is sordid also. We have been in the Buddhist temples and the images there and idols are a combination of the grotesque, the hideous, the revolting and wicked. Some of their deities are the most revolting and yet they pray to them and burn incense. It is the most absurd thing that was ever thought of to try to extract the best things from Buddhism and join it with Christian faith. I met a prominent missionary professor of a Japan College—(America). He was invited to the Jerusalem Conference to give an address on Buddhism. I think he leans considerably to the idea that Buddhism has considerable truth in it, that we Christians may do well to incorporate! Well, Buddhism as we see it in China is the mother of the darkest and most damning superstitions. It surrounds the life of the common people with devils; on every hand life is one terrible haunting existence of evil spirits which follows them to their graves and after death in the world beyond. The poor deluded worshippers try to buy salvation by oblations, prayers, penances, etc. In our last revival we had many turn in their merit papers purchased for so much from the Buddhist priests. One of those papers was said to have cost twelve dollars. In the papers turned in was much paper money which is burned at the grave with the idea that its worth (in smoke) will furnish many comforts to the spirits of the dead in the other world. The Chinese are very credulous. They make all sorts of things in paper and carry it before the coffins of the dead with the idea that the departed may need them in the next world. Sometimes these articles may be a chair, table, etc. In one instance they made a Ford car out of pasteboard and carried that to the grave and burned it thinking, we suppose, that it might come in handy to the departed to ride about in the regions of the dead. I have frequently said to the Chinese Christians: "It ought not be very difficult for your people to believe in the supernatural or immortality because your people have such faith in the world of spirits and in the life beyond." They have agreed with me that such is the fact and that we should preach the supernatural more.

UNDER FIRE AND IN THE FIRE.

Daniel 3:19-25.

When Nanking was looted by the soldiers March, 1927, all the hate and looting and destruction was directed at the "foreigners." All missionaries practically lost their all. Orders were, "loot in the day, kill at night." All the missionaries who could be found were gathered in the Standard Oil building and on top of the highest building a U. S.

Marine is wigwagging to the American gunboat on the river. Consul Davis holds off to the last moment before giving the signal to the gunboat to fire. When efforts fail to frustrate the purpose of the soldiers to loot and kill, Davis gives the word and in a moment a shell bursts over the head of the Marine. The U. S. gunners threw their shells on two sides of the building thus furnishing a barrage and forming a lane down which the missionaries were led by Vice Consul Paxton (son of a missionary) to the gunboat and to safety. Many of the missionaries were hid by faithful Chinese friends and servants and came through the fire unhurt though they lost all they had in property and goods.

Fire has a purifying effect and in this fiery trial that came to the Christians at Nanking God has blessed it to the good of Zion. Dan. 12:10 says, "Many shall be purified and made white and tried."

Many Chinese Christians are feeling the sweetness of the prophet's words these days: "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people saith your God. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem and cry unto her that her warfare is accomplished, that her iniquity is pardoned."

The war is over, peace reigns, church doors are open wide; the gospel is being proclaimed and the work of the kingdom going on under clearer skies.

Our train to Nanking stopped at ———. A Presbyterian missionary said to me: "Here is where the big ——— University turns out so many modernists." I said, "Well, is not this a Christian school?" The reply was, "They use the church's name and money to turn out . . ." I hesitate to write all that was said. I shall not finish the quotation. One of the greatest tricks the devil has played upon the church of the last century is that thing which we call "Modernism," "New Theology," "Liberalism," etc., but the greatest tragedy of all is seen in exporting this to the mission fields. So many of the schools are in the grip of it and alas, it is sad when you find missionaries committed to it. Of course the inevitable happens when some missionaries turn modernists—they can carry on schools, social service, uplift movements, but they have no revivals; they never know the joy of soul winning and the work of the gospel is hindered more than helped. Then these modernists are sometimes given the best, best homes, good salaries—they live quite comfortably in foreign lands; they know none of the agonies of soul travail and the foreign field gives them plenty of romance. Servants are cheap who do all the work and chores for a song and the modernistic missionary can have lots of time to read the latest literature, have social gatherings and a good social life and draw the church's consecrated money for work that does not advance the kingdom work. Think of John Wesley when he came to Georgia as a missionary. He felt it his first duty to make a call on the Moravian pastor and seek advice from him as to how he should start his work. The pastor said, "Mr. Wesley, may I ask you a few questions first?" Wesley assented. Then his first question was this: "Have you been born again? Do you know yourself to be a child of God?" Mr. Wesley's frank reply was: "I hope so." This did not satisfy the pastor and he gave Mr. Wesley a talk on personal Christian experience as a great essential in missionary work. So in missionary candidates to the foreign field. Only those should be sent to the field who have a vital experience of divine grace. They should be endued with power from on High. Education is not sufficient. They must be people of prayer and power.

QUANTITY VERSUS QUALITY.

A missionary told me that once in the interior he wanted to change ten dollars into cash. He went to an exchange. (China is full of exchange places "Money Changers" as the Bible tells about when Jesus drove them out of the Temple). He had to hire two wheelbarrows to take the change home as the proceeds weighed 280 pounds!

I have often noticed when they took a collection in Chinese meetings that baskets came back full and heavy—but it is mostly coppers, and when one recollects that it takes 3 of these coppers to make one cent the collection may be heavy and weighty but amount to very little in real value. Money is viewed as to its ultimate value in its relation to gold.

Then again we are reminded that size does not count so much when it comes to real value and service to the Kingdom of God. We are so prone to put the emphasis upon the size of a man's education, the number of degrees he carries, etc. We see this so much in the mission field. The Missionary Boards insist that candidates for foreign work must go through all the schools, colleges, theological seminaries, etc.—they must be versed in philosophy, psychology, etc., etc., and they give them no training in the great essentials of soul winning. A Baptist missionary complained to us recently that when she went through her courses in the school she was taught nothing in the art of soul saving—no emphasis was laid upon soul winning. She was supposed to pick that up and here she was doing little else than school teaching. To me it is a waste of men, women and money to put so many missionaries into school teaching—of course some must do this work to a certain extent, but as far as China is concerned it would be infinitely better if American missionaries were trained and drilled and baptized into the art of soul winning. In a recent revival we had some missionaries present who seemed as out of place in an altar service as a Unitarian would be in a camp meeting, and why? They were trained in schools where no revivals were held and their Seminary gave them no training in soul winning.

Now let nothing that I have said give anyone the impression that I am underrating the great work of missionaries in China. The influence of missionary work in this country has been immense and in these days of turmoil and reorganization we are constantly seeing the effects of Christian missions. The present government in Nanking—the new Capital—has many men in it who are Christians or who have been brought up in mission schools in their preparatory days. I was talking with a veteran missionary recently who has been in China nearly thirty years. He is alive to every issue and acquainted with every turn of the tide in the history of China for the past thirty years. He has seen the Empire, the Emperor and the Empress totter to their fall and he saw the birth of the Republic—during the throes of the Revolution he passed through all kinds of perils and stress. He now thinks that the unification of China is assured and a steady and reliable and central government is nearer a reality than ever. Contending armies are breaking up and the two greatest generals and strategists, General Chang Kai Sek and Marshall Feng—both Christians, have crushed and defeated insurrectionists and communists and now the one as President of the Nationalist Government and the other as Vice President are using all their powers in bringing order out of chaos and reshaping the great Republic. Now this experienced missionary says that he believes that the present condition of things is in answer to prayer. Devout men and women of God driven out of their stations found time to pray and intercede. God in Heaven has heard and a better day is dawning and a new page is being written in China's history and a new and better day is dawning for Christian missions in China. The day is opening for a deeper type of gospel preaching and work. A missionary of one of the big churches said to us in a recent conversation, "When you go into the interior, see how much money has been put into brick and mortar—we have thought that this kind of work would count but it hasn't. What is needed is a revival." He said, "Why up in _____, we have not had a revival in twenty years."

We are finding that the missionaries are getting tired of Conferences, Commissions, etc.; tired of programs, etc. They are crying out for a revival of religion—the outpouring of the Spirit of God.

Bishop Bashford, who did such a fine piece of work in China, was deeply impressed with Moody's work in Boston. When Bashford was a student there, writing about it he said: "Indeed, I was quite inclined at one time to devote my life to evangelistic work after the example of Mr. Moody." I have wondered what effect the great Bishop would have had on China if he had given himself to evangelism of the Moody type! His time as Bishop, of course, had to be taken up greatly with administration, but I believe the day has come when China would be mightily stirred if some great giant of a man would get the evangelistic passion and pour out his soul in calling sinners to repentance and believers unto holiness. But we must remember Paul's words to the Corinthians: "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things which are mighty That no flesh should glory in his presence." 1 Cor. 1:26-29.

PERSONAL NOTES.

I preached one Sunday morning in Shanghai at the Allen M. E. Church (South), of which the Rev. Z. T. Kaung is pastor. This is the largest M. E. Church in Shanghai, and the building was erected out of Centenary funds. Pastor Kaung has a fine reputation in Shanghai as one of the most evangelical and outstanding preachers in the city. He is an extremely busy man and holds one of the most prominent places in the church life of Shanghai. He is a graduate of one of the Chinese colleges, and is well worthy of the D.D. degree which Asbury College gave him last June. I have no doubt if the Chinese Bishop was to be elected, he would get many votes.

We have been busily engaged in revival services for some weeks in Shanghai, Ningpo and Nanking; and at one time with Rev. C. W. Troxel of the National Holiness Association, we were carrying on two revivals daily—one at Bethel and one at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. I have now become so used to speaking through interpreters that I feel as much at home preaching to the Chinese as to any other people; and I rejoice to say that the precious old Gospel of full salvation and holiness unto the Lord produces the same effect in China as in America. We have seen hundreds of souls seeking God and many have prayed through to victory.

Our readers will be interested in knowing that we are now undertaking some translation work of holiness literature, and Miss Betty Hu, who was one of our most devoted girls at Asbury from China, is heading up that department. She is showing wonderful faculty for this kind of work. We are now publishing my "Beauty of Holiness" in Chinese, getting a number of booklets translated and are about to issue the first number of the "Guide to Holiness" which will be the first holiness periodical published in China. This is quite a venture, but I am deeply impressed that if we are going to spread Scriptural holiness in China, we must have a holiness paper. The other night Dr. Mary Stone, Miss Hughes, Bro. Troxel and myself held a three-hours' conference on matters and prayed it through, and on January 1st, the first issue of the "Guide to Holiness" will come out.

JUST UNDER A HUNDRED.

G. ARNOLD HODGIN.

IN a quaint little Lincolnshire hamlet, which lies a short journey from Grimsby, and perhaps a score of miles from that point where the fens begin to make way for the wolds, lives an old man, ninety-nine years of age. He is a remarkable character, for at least two things: one is, that he is wonderfully strong and healthy for a man of his years, and the other, for the fact that he has been powerfully converted from the life of a rough and hardened sinner, to a gentle and Christlike man within the past five years.

While we were conducting a mission at Grimsby a short time ago, Mr. Harry S. Clark, a Christian merchant, suggested that we pay a visit to the home of the aged Christian, and kindly offered to take us in his motor car, to see him. So we went, and I must say that it was to me a never-to-be-forgotten experience. When we knocked at the door, we heard a hearty "Come in"; and, upon entering we found him before a mirror shaving himself without the aid of spectacles. I say shaving himself; he was only shaving part of his face, leaving the chin and side whiskers on, as was the style more than fifty years ago. He had the appearance of one of the old salts, one sees occasionally, sitting inside the doors of the fishermen's cottage by the sea side.

Looking us full in the face, the hearty old Christian greeted us warmly and said, "Take a seat while I finish shaving me sen." When his task was ended, he sat with us before the fire and talked with keen interest and great joy about the things of God.

When Mr. Clark suggested that I had come to hear about his experience of conversion, he said, "O, Aye? Weel then I'll tell tha." Then followed an experience, given in a dialect which I had much difficulty in understanding, wherein he told us how he had been a hard sinner for ninety-four years, thinking and caring nothing about God and religion, until at the age mentioned, he had been put under deep conviction, and had begun to pray for salvation. He said something like the following: "The Lord clammed me, (that is gripped me) and I was sorry for my sins and cried for mercy. I was sore troubled, for it seemed the devil would make me believe the Lord did not want me, I had been such a sinner, but finally I felt the Lord would tak me, and I believed, opened my heart and he bobbed in. I praised him for joy, and have served him ever since."

Just think of that for a moment. Here in a few quaint words, were given not only a whole volume of theology, but a description of those heart throbs and struggles that, universally, men feel when seeking God.

The unusualness of the age at which this man had found Christ, and the wonderful love of God, manifested in thus redeeming one who had sinned as he had done for ninety-four years, was a great stimulus to our faith, and a blessing to our hearts. We had seen the face of one who had sinned for more than a life time, and then had been transformed by gospel power. We had heard the testimony of one who had been born out of due time.

We remembered several matters, which we wish every minister would preach, every singer would sing, every personal worker would continue to tell, and that every sinner could know and never forget. One was, that Christ is the friend of sinners, and none ever come too late to be saved. Another was, that the blood of Christ can and does wipe out the sins of years, and one who has spent a life time serving the devil, may come to the fountain, have all the guilty past obliterated, and be, in the sight of God, as though he had never sinned. Another still, is the fact that there may be packed into a few years of the latter end of life, enough blessing to lift the spirits that droop and cheer the hearts that are sad, of all who pass by. Still another thing to remember is that God often passes by the cathedrals, and other great church edifices, with their damp sepulchral grandeur, and the meaningless mouthings of the priests and prelates performing a dead service, and goes to the out of the way places and saves the hopeless and unlikely when they hunger and thirst for righteousness. He is making up the jewels for his crown and the bridehood numbers, for the purpose of populating heaven, and, therefore, chooses for that purpose, the poor in spirit from all walks of life, rather than from the pomp and pageantry of a decadent religiosity.

The visit to the humble home of the old Lincolnshire Christian did me more genuine good than an entire service where I am unable to feel God. In that humble home that day I sensed the steps of Deity, and came away a better man for having gone with my friend to the little village so snugly tucked away down a pretty old-fashioned English country lane, not far from the fens and the wolds.

THE BABE OF BETHLEHEM.

REV. HENRY T. SCHOLL, D. D.

DECEMBER 25th is celebrated throughout Christendom as the day Jesus was born in Bethlehem, and cradled in a box-like feeding crib for cattle. In the early centuries, January 6th was celebrated as his birthday; and some of his followers settled, for obvious reasons, up a day in Spring. Just when he was born, no mere man knows. It is said that every month in the year has scholarly backing. It was not until about 350 A. D. that Dec. 25th came to be generally accepted as the birthday of Jesus; and the sources of this selection are manifestly heathen.

This date approximates the time of the winter solstice, the actual turning point of the year;—"the beginning of the returning life and activity of the powers of nature." At this season of the year the Northmen held their Yule-feast. At this season of the year the Romans held their Saturnalia. To this Roman festival the Christmas tree with its pendent gifts has been traced; and these are distinctly pictured in the Georgics (2:389) of Virgil.

The visit of the Shepherds to the babe of Bethlehem was made on the night of his Nativity; and, as the Greek puts it, they discovered the place of his Nativity by diligent search. The visit of the Wise Men to Bethlehem took place after the presentation of Jesus in the temple. The babe was then about six weeks old, and when the Wise Men worshipped him it was in the house, where the young child was then sojourning with his mother and Joseph.

The Nativity was at Bethlehem. Thus was fulfilled the prediction of Micah 5:2. Micah prophesied about 700 B. C., and under Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah. Then Assyria, under the mighty rulers Sargon and Sennacherib, was the destructive and dreaded world-power. Rome had not yet made its feeble beginning under the fratricide Romulus. Not till Hyrcanus and his brother Aristobulus quarreled for the Maccabean dominance did the Romans, under Pompey, get a lasting grip on Palestine; and not till after the defeat of Anthony and Cleopatra at Actium, B. C. 31, did Octavian, known later as Augustus, become potent in Palestine.

A decree by this Augustus for the enrollment of his subjects brought Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem. According to Roman custom the enrollment would have been made at Nazareth; but Herod the Idumean, a nominal Jew, then ruled as king over Palestine, (Continued on page 6, col. 3).

The Unlimited Offering and the Uncontainable Blessing.

Rev. Thomas C. Henderson.

"Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, 'wherein have we robbed Thee?' In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

"And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruit of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of Hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed; for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of Hosts."—Malachi 3:8-12.

THESE words with their meaning exactly fitted those to whom they were sent. God was speaking to a people who needed these very truths pressed into their conscience.

Ancient? Yes. But they are, strangely, as fitting today as in the long ago. The fundamental facts and principles involved are of the same value now as then—and with perhaps a larger application.

Truth is eternal. Doctrines may have to be adapted to the language of each generation, but principles are the same in all ages. Rules and laws can be made, and, of course, they can be broken or changed. Fundamental realities are timeless.

What God is here saying to the Hebrews of the ancient days has in it some truths which have timely application to us.

GOD IS NOT INDEPENDENT.

This truth is clearly shown in the Divine plea for the people to bring their tithes into the storehouse "that there may be meat in mine house." God's house would be without food and help for the needy, if his people failed to supply it with their gifts. It would seem that that fact would be self-evident, yet many of us seem to be totally blind to it. The ministry of God's house and the prosperity of his work among men is dependent on the co-operation of men, especially those who call themselves by his name.

This truth is startling. Most of us have thought that God was totally free and of unlimited resources—far above the necessity of depending on anything which we might do or fail to do. But the clear inference of this passage of Scripture is that God is not totally free nor independent. We have been mistaken. The honest man, when he ponders this truth, will be made very uneasy as he notes that the progress and efficiency of God's labors to lift a wandering and sagging world back to Holiness and heaven, for both today and tomorrow, are hinging measurably on what he puts into it.

The struggling church, the impotency of organized righteousness, the increasing wreckage and waste, and the sobs of sin-wounded folk all about one cannot but search and disturb one who is sincere. Why does God do no more than he does for the grievous conditions which exist? Can it be because of my failure somewhere? Clear it is that the contribution each one of us makes to the treasury of God has a very meaningful effect on the way the gospel is affecting this day and generation. That truth makes one gasp.

God is wanting to do and be more to his world than he can, and our lives are the explanation of that tragedy.

At the heart of the universe is righteousness, and the whole relation of God to men and of God to nature hinges on moral values. This generation which boasts of its superior and more accurate knowledge may laugh at the Hebrew prophets who believed that calamities came on their people and on their lands because of their sins; but there is much more truth in the position of the Hebrew prophets than this age may appreciate. Across the ages God has been dealing with the material world on the basis of man's relation to moral laws. Sometime even science may come to see that the woes of mankind are directly the consequences of the sins of men. We will yet come to recognize that God is compelled to permit tragic pain, misery and even war which brings suffering to the innocent among both men and beasts because this is a moral universe and moral laws when broken have inevitable consequences that reach out to the rim of all that is alive.

It is certainly true that movements which are essentially ethical and religious and have as their objective the helping of mankind are seriously aided or hindered by the character and conduct of those who compose their numbers.

This is not a haphazard world. Moral values are not accidental. The laws of God are as binding on the mass as certainly as on the man. Conscience is intensely personal, but it holds sway over the group as surely as over the private individual. When a group violates known obligations to God and righteousness, there are bound to be consequences that will affect all in that group and all over which that group has any influence. The organized church, for instance, cannot escape the effects of its own doings. It will reap what it sows as surely as will the vilest wretch in the world. The church of this day is exactly the kind of a church that it wants to be. It may blind itself to its moral obligations; it may mistake values, it may refuse to learn from its own history and repeat blunders of the past, but and even so it is bound to reap the harvest of its own sowing. We are making God's House today poverty-stricken or prosperous by our generosity or by our niggardly selfishness. It will not do for any group to refuse to face this truth.

We are living as we want to live. God is doing all that his wisdom and righteousness will allow him to do. We plaintively call for the "old times" and for the displays of God's power such as the fathers had; but we are stupid. We could have the same Divine enablements that the past had if we were as devoted and true as they were. We may know more as to the bulk of our knowledge than our fathers knew, but we do not seem to know the empowering truths which they knew. We know so much that does not make us godly. We know so much that robs us of faith and faithfulness. We know so much which does not increase our worth in the markets of moral values. We know more of science than our forebears knew, perhaps, but they seem to have known more of God. If they were ignorant, in comparison to us, they certainly did make good use of what little they knew.

That God, who is unlimited in resources, who is longing to release on us and on the world his sweetest and best, who sees with pitying eye the needs of a whole world, is morally unable to do what he would like to do and which needs to be done because we have failed to bring all the tithes into the storehouse—that is a thought to carry with one into the most sacred and secret house and place.

STEALING FROM GOD.

God accuses the Hebrews of stealing material things from him. Money, tithes, offerings. Moral values were attached to these things, of course, but the point is that they were actually stealing things from God. They were calling things their own which belonged to God. Would it shock us to be told that perhaps the money we have in our pocket is stolen, and stolen from God? That the happy vacation trip which we so much enjoyed was paid for out of money stolen from God? That the house we call our own, the automobile which we claim as ours, the reputation which we bear are ours because we filched from God? Suppose the public should get to know how much we have that is ours at the cost of keeping from God that which rightly belongs to him! Shocking? Even so, that is the very truth that is clearly hinted at in this passage of Scripture—that it is possible for men who claim to belong to God to withhold for their own convenience and use the values which should be given over to God for the helping of others and for the building up of the cause of God in the world. God is saying to us that a man may be stealing from God for his own career and success the time and talents which should be used for God and helping humanity. We are robbers when we fail to yield to God that which is rightly his.

A good way to test oneself out on this issue is to ask the question: "Am I giving my time and abilities and possessions to God and his service as I know I should?" Or, "have I recognized God's ownership and claim to my life in all its parts as I know I should?" "If God had his way with me, would I be living as I now live, and would I be doing what I now am doing, or would I have the influence and rank which is now mine?" To some of us an honest answer to such questions would reveal that for years we have been stealing from God.

I may refuse to believe in or recognize my stewardship to God for all that I am and have, but failure to recognize that fact does not release me from the responsibility and accountability which that truth implies. There is coming a day of revelation and settlement about all this. In that day some men will be branded as thieves to the surprise of all. Certain ones will have to confess that their earthly honors and rank and rewards came to them because they used that which should have been used for the glory of God for their own enrichment and enhancement. This serious charge is made against God's people. That is surprising. We are quite prepared to have the avowed sinner called a thief. But it is not so easy to think of professing Christians and religious leaders as thieves. But as surely as were the Hebrews—"even this whole nation"—robbing God, so, many so-called disciples of Jesus Christ are taking to themselves that which belongs to God. What else is a man doing when he professes saving faith in Jesus Christ and then does not let that faith control his life? Is it not robbery? What else is it when a man pretends to be fully surrendered to God's will and yet lives a self-centered life? Is it not robbery?

Just what is our attitude towards our money, our property, our time, our opportunities? When we receive money do we think of it and of ourselves as God's stewards and say, "just how should I disburse this?" If we have an increase in income, do we say, "now I can get the things which I have so long wanted"; or do we say, "now I can do more for God and his Kingdom"?

This sort of thievery is as criminal as any other kind. It is dishonest and unfair. It injures the cause of God and discounts the man who commits it. This sort of a thief will bear the brand of a thief sooner or later. In the long run the man who steals from God will get no good out of that which he has stolen, but the things stolen will become the bars of his prison of selfishness. It is impossible for this kind of a robber to forever keep his dishonesty from the eyes of others. Robbery of God will out!

This truth should be clearly seen by young folk. It will be wise for them to make such choices, relative to their careers, their companions and their religious life, as will conform to God's will for them. Sadness, remorse, unrest and darkness is ever in the offering of those who rob God of the love and obedience which is due him.

COMPLETE AND UNLIMITED OFFERING TO GOD.

In the imagery of the text, each one of us can bring all the tithes into God's storehouse. Each one of us can yield himself wholly to God and can know and do his will. We can be as good and holy as we ought to be. We can fully obey God. We can live a Christ-centered life and be free from a selfish tendency. We can as definitely and fully give ourselves to God as we can consent to the marriage vow and live up to it. We can give our body, our mind, our spirit, our property, our influence, our time, our enablements, our all to God as accurately and with as much finality as we can carry through a business transaction.

Others who were of the same nature as we are have lived lives of perfect devotion to God's will. Paul did. John Wesley did. George Fox did. William Booth and his glorious wife, Catherine, did. Likely each of us knows some one or more persons who are so living now. What others have done by the help of God we, too, can do. We can give ourselves to God to be holy, to serve him, to suffer for him, and to be his for all of our days and under any sky.

This sort of a complete self-surrender is the deepest longing of the truly converted man or woman. Many of us live so selfishly as to give the lie to this great truth, but our self-centered living does not crush out the passion within for full conformity to God's will. We were made for God and will not be satisfied until we have indeed brought all the tithes into the storehouse of God.

The Old Testament tells of offerings which were made to God on the altars of the temple, gifts of living things, things especially separated unto God. Gifts which were ceremonially purified and that were fully surrendered to God and would never be recalled. Thus we may give our bodies, separated from all that is low and selfish, to be the property of God and to be subject to his will.

What a glorious thing it is to be fully yielded to God. What rest of heart. What absence of fear about the future, what high satisfaction! To give oneself without delay to God, joyfully, completely is the finest achievement of any life. This is the opposite of stealing from God and this is the way to live without being a living robber.

A DIVINE BLESSING BEYOND OUR CAPACITY TO CONTAIN.

There is abounding life. There is grace that does much more abound. It is possible to be filled with the Spirit. One may know the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ. It is possible to be saved to the uttermost. It is possible to have something in one's life that is supernatural. God can become a fact of experience.

Again and again, in one form or another this gracious fact is promised to us by the Word of God. We are promised not only rain, but floods of grace. Not merely a wee spring of water, but rivers of life-giving spirituality. Jesus assures us that we may have the Holy Spirit within us "a well of living water springing up unto eternal life." We may not only have our own proper desires satisfied, but we may be so blessed and filled that from us may flow "rivers of living water." The struggling man may have triumph. The battling soul may have victory. The triumph which is promised over sin is to make us "more than conquerors." God's grace is unlimited and our privileges are limitless when it comes to having that grace in our lives.

It is feared that most of us are content with meager grace when we could have abundance. A wee hill suits us when we might have a mountain. We cross Jordan, but we settle down close to its banks, when we might have the whole land "unto the going down of the sun over the great sea." We act as though too much of God's rich grace might be injurious, when the opposite is the truth. God would be glorified in our being rich in all that pertains to the best and most holy living.

Some think that deep and great spirituality is fanaticism. It is because of the meagerness, the smallness of their own heart. The lad who has never been in love thinks the older brother, who is deep in the joys of his first love affair, is silly. He is perfectly normal, but the inexperienced younger lad is unable to see that. The fully saved, entirely sanctified Christian is not subnormal nor abnormal. Ours is the shame when we call him, who is burning with passionate devotion to God and the evangelization of men, a fanatic. He is right and normal, and we are wrong.

It is interesting to note that in the uncontainable blessing which God promised the Hebrews, on condition that they bring all the tithes into the storehouse, was assurance of special protection of their possessions. The devourer was to be rebuked, they were to be prospered. Their fruit trees were to produce mature fruitage. They were also to have a powerful influence over others and would attract them to God who had blessed them. Then, they were to be made joyful and contented. "Ye shall be a delightsome land." What a blessing! Some outpouring of God's favor on them so that they would be protected, prospered, empowered and pleasant! Such a blessing is waiting for any of us today who will give the unlimited offering of himself to God. To him will come the uncontainable blessing from God's heavens.

RAPID TRANSIT.

WM. S. BOWDEN.

"Many shall run to and fro." Dan. 12:4.

NE of the distinguishing marks of "the time of the end" is restlessness, hustle, bustle, running to and fro.

Many prophetic students believe that the beginning of the Time of the End period is the same in point of time as the close of the papal persecution of the church. This is the latter part of the 18th century. We know that the rapid transit began about this time or the beginning of the 19th century. If we go back before the beginning of the 19th century we find the world doing very much as it had done for the preceding 4,000 years. The most rapid travel on land was by horse; the most rapid travel on sea was with sail-boats. An adjoining county or state was so far away that even the closest relatives and friends seldom communicated with one another. Movement of troops was necessarily slow. Vessels driven with wind and tide held the record on sea; stage coaches drawn by horses held the record on land. So it had been for centuries.

Then there came a sudden change. In the course of a few decades marvelous facilities for travel and transportation were in use. During the past one hundred years men have wonderfully harnessed the forces of nature such as steam and electricity and made them minister to their desire to run to and fro on business or pleasure bent. Simultaneous with the beginning of modern mission work—also a feature of the time of the end—came in 1807 Robert Fulton's steamship, the "Clermont," making its first trip on the Hudson. In 1838 the "Sirius" and the "Great Western," under steam power alone, crossed the Atlantic. They came into New York from Liverpool a few hours apart, "fore-runners of the fleets that furrow all the seas today."

Back in 1825 the school board of Lancaster, Ohio, refused to permit the schoolhouse to be used for discussions as to whether railroads and telegraph were practicable. One of the old records says: "You are welcome to use the schoolhouse to debate all proper questions in, but such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossibilities and rank infidelity. There is nothing in the Word of God about them. If God has designed that his intelligent creatures should travel at the frightful speed of fifteen miles an hour, by steam, he would have clearly foretold it through his holy prophets."

In 1825 George Stephenson built his first railway passenger locomotive. It may now be seen in the Darlington Railway Station, in England. It was the beginning of the great revolution in land travel. In 1830 a railroad operated by steam was built in England. In 1835 one was built in America between Quincy and Boston. The modern railway system is something marvelous. It is more wonderful than it was forty years ago when Mr. D. T. Taylor wrote his book, "The Chariots of Fire and Iron." When he wrote that book there was no interurban travel by trolley car, and the automobile was a machine of the future. The submarine belongs to this generation. Bicycles, motorcycles and various electrically operated devices enable men to "get there."

Not content with travel on land and sea, man is competing with the feathery tribe for the supremacy of the air. Whatever may be said about our vastly improved methods of travel let it not be forgotten that it all is within that period of time just before the end of time known in Scripture as "The Time of the End." The last century has brought about all these changes. They have come suddenly. Men are now living who

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER III.

TO THE RESCUE.

At breakfast that morning John told his uncle, Mr. Brown, that he was going West, to grow up with the country. His uncle half guessing why this sudden change had come into his mind, tried to dissuade him from the purpose, but soon found it useless. The uncle and nephew made up the entire family with the addition of Uncle Joe and Aunt Sally, two of the most faithful and devoted colored people of the old days directly after the close of the Civil War. Mrs. Brown had died some years ago, and Aunt Sally had been cook and housekeeper for the family.

After breakfast John went down to the cottage in the yard to have some conversation with Aunt Sally about his western trip. She was on the front porch having served breakfast and waiting for the gentlemen to finish that she might clear away the dishes, and arrange the house.

As Huston walked up she gave him a quiet, serious look, and said, "Honey, what de mat-tah wid yo? Is yo sick? You looks like somepin was troublin' of yo." With a forced smile John told her quietly of what had occurred that was so disastrous with his happiness and future plans.

"Laws chile," said Aunt Sally, "Don't yo worry yoself, dey is jest as good fish in de sea as evah has been cotched out of it."

Huston replied, "You see, Aunt Sally, the sea has gone dry. And the fish are all dead as far as I am concerned."

"Now jest listen at that white chile talk," said Aunt Sally. "Why dis here world is des full of fine gals, and one of dem waitin' for yo right now."

"Well," said Huston, "if there is I guess she will get tired waiting before I show up. I am starting to the far west on the six-thirty train this evening."

"What do yo mean tellin' me dat?" said Aunt Sally. "I can't git along widout yo. I was wid yo mother when yo was born into this here world. I carried yo in these here black arms when yo was a little baby. I couldn't love yo no better ef en yo warn't my own chile. And now youse goin to pack up an go way off there by yoself. Is yo got any money? Case ef yo aint Uncle Joe and myself done save up some money for dat rainy day dey keeps talkin about. An I give it to you this minute ef you needs it."

Huston assured her that he had a few hundred dollars in bank, the remains of a small sum his parents had left him, but quite sufficient to take him into the west, and support him until he could secure employment.

Aunt Sally busied herself throughout the day, washing, drying, ironing and packing Huston's clothing in a capacious suitcase. She cried and talked, and prayed, begging Huston to write letters to her, insisting that he must not be discouraged, that his mother's prayers would be answered and he would make a great and useful man.

Volumes could be written about the integrity, faithfulness, and devotion of the old-time colored people. We have often thought that the south, with so many sacred memories, and so full of beautiful and tender sympathies, ought to erect two abiding monuments. One to the memory of the faithful black mammies of slavery days, who meant so much to the families they served, with a love and devotion hardly ever equaled, and never surpassed. We would suggest the historic city of Richmond, Va., for a monument of this character.

Then there should be another monument to the memory of the old colored men, who remained at the homes of their masters, protecting and laboring for their wives and children, while the husbands and fathers were on the battle fields. It is a most interesting historic fact that during the awful days of the Civil War in not one instance did a colored man lift his hand against a white woman.

Before train time Aunt Sally had Huston's suitcase well packed with clean clothing, and his grip with everything neatly arranged, and a roasted hen wrapped in a napkin, with well buttered slices of fresh lightbread, for him to lunch on as he went westward.

Huston had sent a friend to the bank to draw out his money, and had not been down town during the day. A little before train time, amid the tears and embraces of Aunt Sally and Uncle Joe, he left the house and was driven into town by his uncle. Just as they reached the village hotel, and were turning to the left to drive down to the depot, they heard a tremendous noise on the covered bridge in front of them, and looking up saw a horse hitched to a buggy with two occupants on the seat, emerge from the bridge, frightened, and running wild at full speed. As the horse dashed up the street people scurried for safety in every direction. The man in the vehicle leaped out of the buggy, turned a somersault and fell in a thicket of weeds, and rolled over several times. Huston leaped from his uncle's vehicle, ran down the street with uplifted hands, trying to stop the horse. Seeing that the animal was crazed with fright and could not be stopped he stepped to one side, and as the horse passed threw himself upon its head, got the reins close to the bit in his strong hands, and twisted down upon the lower jaw with all the strength in him.

The pain distracted the horse's attention from his fright, and after dragging Huston some fifteen yards he came to a full stop. Huston glanced at the female occupant of the buggy and to his amazement found it was Annie Gray Hendricks. She was pale with fright. He gave her the simplest glance, led the horse quietly over to the hotel, running the hitch rein through a ring on a post, tied it firmly, and started at once for his uncle's vehicle. It seemed that everybody in town rushed upon the street. Some gathered about Mrs. Hendricks, but the great throng gathered about Huston, and heaped their praises upon him for his bold act.

Meanwhile, the young banker had crawled out of the weed patch, and came limping over to the buggy. Annie looked at him, with a sort of sarcastic smile, and said, "Why George, didn't you break your neck?" The crowd laughed. George blushed, looked about the buggy and examined the harness. Meanwhile, Huston and his uncle, surrounded by the crowd, had gone to the depot. It was only a short distance from the village hotel. The big blacksmith of the town laughed heartily, walked up and patted the horse, looked over the buggy, saw that nothing was broken, and then fixing his gaze on young Hendricks said, "I believe you forgot to thank that boy for stopping the runaway, and saving your wife's life. We have a custom in this town that whenever a fellow risks his life to save a man's wife or child thanks are due him. Please step down to the depot and thank John Henry Huston for saving your wife's life."

Hendricks showed great embarrassment, busied himself about the buggy, muttered some sort of reply, when the blacksmith spoke up again, and said, with a chuckle, "I say, Mr. Bank fellow, there is a run for you to the depot right now or there is a run on your bank early in the morning."

Hendricks collected himself and said, "All of your talk is unnecessary. Of course I am going down to thank the young man for his courage and service." Assisting his wife out of the buggy, where she was taken care of by her friends, he got down to the depot just in time to seize Huston by the hand, and thank him in a rather embarrassed, dignified way, for stopping the runaway horse. Meanwhile, the college boys had gathered and swarmed about Huston with their cheers and praises. In the midst of it all Huston slipped through the gate, stepped upon the train just a few seconds before it pulled out from the station.

He was pleased to find that his heart, which had been so dead in him for the past night and day was throbbing with a bit of life, that there was some feeling left in him, and that he had had the very finest revenge that he could possibly have desired. There is no sweeter revenge than to render a noble, unselfish service to those who have wronged us. Huston had had his revenge.

and according to Jewish custom men and women went each to their home town to be enrolled.

According to Galatians 4:4, it was "at the fulness of time" that Christ came. A few years earlier there would be no enrollment decree to bring his parents to Bethlehem. A few years later, Palestine was in a political turmoil and revolt that culminated in the capture and destruction of Jerusalem, when its inhabitants, by the scores of thousands were put to death, and other scores of thousands were scattered into slavery.

We know not neither the exact month nor the year when Jesus was born in Bethlehem. We are, however, certified that he "was born in the days of Herod the king;" and Herod departed this life early in 4 B. C. The monk, Dinsyus Exiguus, who died in 556 A. D., was manifestly a learned man; but he assuredly made a confusing mistake in fixing the beginning of the Christian era at 1 A. D., when Jesus was evidently four years, or more, of age.

For the coming of the Christ, and for the start and spread of his kingdom both special and general preparations were made. Among special preparations, mention is made of:—A Chosen People, A Chosen Land, A Divine Revelation, A Messianic Prophecy and Expectation, and a Proof of the Inadequacy of the Law.

Included among the General Preparations are:—The Greek Language, disseminated by the conquests of Alexander, and by the generals who fell heir to his possessions; the Failure of Heathenism, socially and religiously; and the Empire of Rome. Under the last caption, some one has said:—"At the birth of Christ the whole civilized world was at peace under Augustus Cæsar. The Roman Empire, by its sway over all nations, by its uniform and effective laws, and by its magnificent roads not only gave protection to all travelers, even the humblest, but enabled them to pass with ease to the utmost points of the Empire. Thus an opportunity was given for the Gospel to spread freely among all peoples, which would have been impossible had the world then, as shortly before, been divided into jealous and warring nations among whom a stranger was an enemy. The spread of the Roman power, moreover, by introducing the idea on one central supreme authority, before which all other interests bowed, prepared the way for a universal religion and for the all embracing Kingdom of God."

Note, also, that the moral status of the Roman world, for which its philosophers and ethnic teachers offered no adequate solution, emphasized the need of a Divine Deliverer, able and willing to save unto the uttermost from the penalty, the pollution and the power of sin.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

THE EVENING SERVICE AT SYCHAR.

H. W. Middleton.

Already the great tabernacle is partly filled: and during the next few minutes the people continue to come until the great tabernacle is comfortably filled. In many instances it is filled to overflowing, particularly if it be Sunday evening. The singers take their places, the orchestra comes to the platform, the song leader announces a number and soon the place is filled with the Spirit-filled singing of the great congregation peculiar to holiness camps.

After the usual opening services of congregational and special singing, prayer, etc., the preacher of the evening advances to the pulpit. The people settle themselves for the sermon with great expectancy which is not disappointed. This evening let us listen to Rev. Joseph Owen as he brings us one of his masterful discourses. We listen as he says in part:

"My text for the evening is found in Luke 19:10, 'For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.'"

These are simple, easily understood words. Yet they are very profound. They contain at least three thoughts, namely: First, Jesus the Son of God is come; Secondly, his mission is to seek and to save; and Third, there is a lost race.

Jesus ever busied himself with important matters, ever did the thing worth while. Though a great teacher and a great reformer he came primarily as a Saviour. His mission is to seek and to save.

Our third proposition implies a lost condition of man. Our thought this evening concerns particularly this lost condition. The glaring evils of the day, highway robbery, crime of various kinds are not the greatest evil, but sin in the heart, the source of all these manifestations is the greatest. We shall not attempt the consideration of the effects of entailed sin, but the larger results of this lost condition in the life of man.

In the first place, let us notice that man has lost the favor of God. Not the love of God, for "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." Jesus came not because of our goodness, but in spite of our sin, even when we were needy, rebellious and sinful. And all because of his love for us. And that love is measured by the value of the gift. The love of God is infinite and unmeasurable.

But though we are still the objects of God's infinite love we have through sin lost his favor, his approval. The race very early began to excuse its sin. Adam's excuse, "the woman beguiled me," has found an echo down through the ages. This is but an attempt to take away the deep dye of sin. A modern expression is that we have sinned "under great provocation": or that we have been subjected to "special temptation." But nevertheless sin is sin and sinful. God cannot look upon it with any allowance. We have lost his favor because of it. And the only remedy, the only way back into his favor is to be separated from sin.

Not only have we lost the approval of God but we have lost the moral and spiritual image in which we were created. Nevertheless there are left holy longings in the soul, and which are proofs of man's holy and divine origin. Notwithstanding these he is a depraved being. Created in our spiritual natures in the image of God, we have lost that image. Adam though not as yet tested was pure. But because of the Fall man is depraved and does not conform to the divine image. Observation proves this. The facts of history demand it. Germany, industrious, educated, enlightened, became Germany materialistic. And many noted Americans have simply expanded notes taken at the feet of German teachers. And America may go to the same extreme of materialism and ruin. Truly we are a lost, depraved race.

Again, we have lost the home of innocence. Little is known of Eden: but the race lost the primal innocence of Eden. While all who are sick or disabled are not necessarily sinful, yet all physical infirmity of the race is the result of sin. And there are spiritual infirmities also. And all these lead to spiritual death. Sin is the cause of it all.

There is the story of the announcement of the coming of a "preacher of the old school." That preacher is death. He uses many texts: the young, the old, the rich, the poor. He cannot be avoided, or bribed, or shunned. He is a forceful preacher on sin. Man's condition is illustrated in the appearance of many old, poverty-stricken, dilapidated homes in the poorer sections of our land. Truly we are a lost, homeless race: and the tragic thing about it all is that so many are making no preparation or provision for home.

Then again we have lost in the opportunities of the now-time. So many people "do not know" when it comes to the vital things of life. So many purposeless folks in the world. General Sherman provided himself with valuable information during a summer vacation which afterward was of great value to him on his famous "march to the sea." Not so with many. We are not building against a day of future crisis, but are allowing our opportunities to slip by unimproved. We may allow our boasted "Old time religion" to be as empty as a last-year's bird's nest. Do we really believe what we believe? That is do we really appreciate what we possess or is it a sort of formal belief?

But the greatest loss to man is the loss of his soul. Words fail us here. We cannot weigh the value of a soul. The loss of life is so common as to be of little effect. There is a foolish glamour of romance about the sinking of the Titanic. But who can measure the awfulness of those moments to those poor unfortunate ones when the full realization of their lost condition broke upon them? What must have been the feeling of loss to those poor souls?

And the loss of soul is infinitely greater. All would earnestly seek the recovery of a lost child. The whole neighborhood would turn out en masse to seek and find it. Yet all about us are lost souls. People all over the world lost in sin and away from God. But now Jesus opens a window on this dark scene and gives us a beam of light in this promise of salvation. And now let us notice some steps in the process of man's salvation.

The first is when we obtain forgiveness of sins. "He shall save his people from their sins." The word from here means "to separate from." That means that Jesus was manifested to separate his people from their sins. Thank God, he can and will if we let him, separate us from our sins. They are gone forever.

The second step is seen in the cleansing of our natures. Not only have we committed sin, but the enemy through the fall has effected an entrance into the soul. There he becomes an artist: and dipping his brush into the paint of corruption, he paints on the walls of the soul pictures of lust, vice, greed, and the whole panorama of vice. Jesus enters and dipping his brush into the vessel of divine purity paints over all these horrible paintings of Satan, making the walls of the soul immaculate. Thank God, Jesus can undo all that Satan has done.

This is beautifully illustrated in the instance of the man who returned to his old home after years of absence to find things changed. He wanders over the old place, tender memories arising as he frequents the places of the joys of his boyhood. But it is not as "when father owned it." So he purchases the old home and at great expense and labor he rehabilitates it and restores it back to the condition it was in when his father owned it. Just so Jesus comes in and restores the soul to what it was in the beginning, does so at infinite cost and suffering because it was "Father's old home."

Yes, Jesus does come, seek, and save. Offers us our old home again. "I go to prepare a place for you." He is taking a long time to prepare it for us. But when it is ready he will not send a delegation even of angels for us, but will come himself to conduct us thither. And in his coming he will bring back all that the devil took away from us. To save all that was lost. Glory to his name!

In response to the altar call there come many who feel their need of restoration. Some as usual to be separated from their sins in pardon and others come for cleansing from defilement. There is to be heard the earnest penitent prayers of the seekers, the intercession and helpful word of encouragement of the saints who gather about the seekers to help to point them into the way. And now and again the triumphant shout of victory as some struggling soul comes into the light. And thus it continues. The congregation gradually disperses, some remaining to pray yet with some who have not yet come through to victory until the ringing of the Retiring Bell at 10 o'clock closes the services for the day.

Upon the ringing of the Retiring Bell almost immediately perfect quiet reigns and we retire to our cots joyful over the victories of the day, the blessing of God upon our souls, our faith increased and the "still small voice" continues to speak until we sink into unconsciousness, the unconsciousness of real rest.

And this is Sychar. Of course the days may differ in the personnel of the workers, in the character of the messages brought, and in the special events and developments of each day, but from day to day there is a continual round of victories, conquests and holy joys. It means hard work, expense, and a great deal of earnest praying but the results are more than a compensation for it all. Truly we feel the blessing of God upon the camp, and we come to its close glad of the privilege of attending, and looking forward to another year if God be willing.

We have described a typical day. Much yet remains to be said with respect to the special features and events of which more later on.

FORT RECOVERY, OHIO.

From December 2 to 16 we held revival services in the Nazarene Church, in Fort Recovery, Ohio. The church had been organized only about eight months, but in that time they had bought a lot large enough to build a church and parsonage on, in a fine location, and had the basement finished when the meeting began. Many of the members had been converted only a short time, and, while some of them had received the experience of holiness, we fear others who professed to have received that experience were only converted. The pastor of the church expressed the same opinion.

There was harmony among the members, they attended the services faithfully, prayed efficiently, sang heartily, and many of them shouted loudly the praises of God.

The work of salvation was confined almost entirely to the heads of families, some of whom were almost prostrated with conviction for their sins, while others were deeply convicted for the experience of holiness. One man rode around town the day he was converted, declaring to all he met that the Lord had pardoned his sins. He created quite a stir in the service when he testified to having been converted.

Another man who had sought the blessing of holiness at the altars in many special meetings, until he feared the people had become tired seeing him forward as a seeker, prayed through in his cellar at home one morning, and testified to having been sanctified at the public service the same night, which created great joy among the people. These were sample cases of how the people got through in the experiences of pardon and purity.

There was deep conviction for their sins upon some who did not yield, which we fear may never be saved. The pastor, Brother Oren, continued the meetings after we left, hoping that some who were so deeply convicted might yield to the entreaties of the Spirit and be saved.

We are home to remain till after the Christmas holidays, but invitations for other meetings are coming in, and we expect soon to be afield again. We have some dates not yet taken. Persons desiring to correspond with us relative to dates should address us, 1350 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

J. L. Glascock.

INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA.

Although it has been some time since last reporting to The Herald, I have been kept constantly busy singing the Gospel messages of song for the Lord and his work. I have seen a large number of souls pray through at an old-fashioned altar for conversion, and sanctification, and a score of people blessed through the singing of gospel songs. Also have had more calls than I could possibly fill up to the present time.

I am now engaged in a revival meeting in Second Friends Church of Indianapolis, Ind., Rev. Frank Stafford, pastor-evangelist. The Lord is certainly blessing our efforts to the good of the people, but there is a great need of salvation in this wicked city, but God is still on the throne, and his power is just the same today as in days of old.

I certainly enjoy The Herald and I am doing all I can to give it a larger circulation. I am sure I could never do without it. Those desiring my services as song leader, soloist, and cornetist for revival work the remainder of the winter and spring should write me at once, as I have a few open dates left. Can furnish reference, or good recommendation on request. Home address, Lynn, Ind.

ANNUAL REPORT.

This has been one of the most strenuous years of labors, and of the greatest of trials in all the history of my labors, and yet it has been a year of blessed victory in soul-winning, and in the preaching of a full salvation to lost men. I have travelled about sixteen thousand miles, and have held meetings in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Colorado, Kansas, South Dakota, North Dakota, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, and have preached in Minneapolis and Sioux City, and other places in my journeyings. I have seen hundreds kneel at the altars in our meetings and find God in pardon and purity, and we have seen some good cases of healing, and the work of God go forward on all lines. The people have been kind to me, and the pastors and evangelists that I have labored with have shown me every courtesy, and our fellowship has been the very finest, and sweetest that could exist between saints and brethren. In all the meetings whether church, or camp meetings, results have been satisfactory in quality, and quite large in numbers. The Lord has been with us in sickness, in health, in the home, and abroad, and his mercy we have been the happy recipients of though unworthy. Our victories have been largely the result of thousands of prayers that have gone up in our behalf that we might win souls, and be sustained by God's grace for which we are profoundly grateful, and very solicitous for the year 1929 should the Lord be pleased to let us live and labor for him.

Home burdens and ill health has hindered Mrs. McBride from being afield this year, and we ask the readers of these lines to pray especially for her that she shall soon be in the work with us again. We have tens of thousands of friends over the land and we have confidence in their prayers. God bless the saints everywhere. I am now almost ready to enter upon my 27th year in evangelism, and have not been idle one week only when sickness hindered. By the grace of God I shall press the battle more vigorous next year than ever for souls. J. B. McBride, 112 Arlington Drive, Pasadena, Calif.

THE COLLIER EVANGELISTIC PARTY.

Since the first of the year we have conducted thirteen campaigns and the visible results have been 1258 conversions and reclamations. The majority of these have lined up with the church. For fourteen years I have been in the Evangelistic work, and my motto has been to stand by the church and the pastor and in these fourteen years God has graciously crowned our efforts in the salvation of souls. There is talk today of pastors souring on evangelists, and I believe the reason a number of evangelists sour on the pastors. I sincerely believe if pastors and evangelists would co-operate more souls would be saved, backsliders reclaimed and the church built up in the most Holy Faith. We have some open dates for the winter and spring. Our terms are, expenses one way, free entertainment and a freewill offering of the people. My permanent address is 1917 Cephas Ave., Nashville, Tenn. J. A. Collier.

regenerating power of the Holy Ghost. They cannot give a glad testimony to conscious salvation because they have no such experience. Some pastors may have been gathered into the church in this same way and have no knowledge of anything better, but this is not true in your case. You have practically set aside the teaching of our Lord Jesus with reference to the new birth, and you are taking these people into the church permitting and encouraging them to believe that they have done what is necessary for salvation, when in your heart you are well aware of the fact that they have not experienced either conviction for, or salvation from, their sins.

I have always loved and had a genuine interest in you, but I can but ask myself in my thinking of your case, if you will be guiltless in the great day of judgment when you face God with this company of people whom you have brought into the church in an unsaved state, and allowed to believe themselves to be Christians, when you know so well, both by the teachings of the Bible, your own personal experience and your knowledge of the history and teachings of your church, that they are unregenerated, hence unsaved. I cannot understand how you can appear before God guiltless in that great day of judgment. With me, this is a most serious matter, and I feel strongly impressed to call your attention to the fact above mentioned.

There is another feature of the case worthy of our consideration, and that is that in bringing in these people in an unsaved state, you are bringing the world into the church, and producing a state of things that makes revivals of religion and the salvation of souls practically impossible. Let a number of pastors follow this same course of conduct, and do you not see that directly we have a great mass of unsaved people in the church. Out from among them come our teachers in Sunday school, our official members and our preachers, and as a result, within a few decades we have an organization of unregenerated people who are not at all the Church of Christ, his holy bride, reborn, created in Christ new creatures, and the productive bride of our Lord and Savior, bringing a lost world to repentance, regeneration, holiness of heart and righteousness of life.

These thoughts have been running through my mind for some weeks and I want to ask you to take them into serious consideration and it seems to me, that they ought to lead to prayer and a fixed resolution on your part to try the blessed way of your boyhood and earlier ministry—revivals of religion, conviction for sin, the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost, and a church made up of twice-born men and women who are in deed and in truth the children of God. It seems to me that the path you are traveling leads to the apostasy and loss of your own soul. You have known personally, the way of salvation.

There is another very important matter for your consideration: We are living in times of great skepticism; all sorts and phases of unbelief are being taught in the general literature of the times; frequently it gets into church literature. These unsaved people you are taking into the church will become the easy victims of modern liberalists who can lead them away into all manner of false and skeptical conceptions of the Bible, of the Deity and saving power of our Christ.

To me it seems quite probable that popular and influential as you are as a pastor, that you may be committing great sin, that you may be deceived by the enemy, flattered and carried forward on the wings of your own popularity, and at the same time, becoming unconsciously a most useful servant of Satan in the delusion and destruction of human souls. I beg of you to think seriously on this question. Call up the memories of the past and ask yourself if the way you are taking the unsaved into the church can possibly harmonize with the teachings of our Lord and Savior who insists so emphatically that each and every individual must experience a new birth in order to enter into the kingdom of God.

Faithfully, your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

GO TO GOD FIRST.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

IN the midst of life's perplexities, problems and sorrows, how natural it is for us to seek the sympathy and counsel of friends instead of going direct to the true source—the mercy seat. Then we realize that,

"Amid the toils and cares of life,
Amid the turmoil and the strife,
Rest to the weary soul is sweet;
'Tis found beneath the mercy seat."

While friends may be willing, yea, even anxious, to help us in our times of distress, they have not the power to bring relief from that which annoys and perplexes us. They cannot understand our heart needs, nor can they know what is best for our highest development. Human help is very circumscribed; but the help that comes from God is that which enables us to stand against all men and all obstacles. This is why we are admonished to "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might."

Paul, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, tells us to take unto ourselves the "whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand." So subtle is the enemy, and so artful in his attacks, that were a single part of the body left unprotected he would assail it; therefore, we are to "have our loins girt about with truth, to have on the breastplate of righteousness, our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." Nor must we forget the "helmet of salvation, the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." Nor is this all; after the furnishing, we must "watch in prayer with all perseverance."

The fact is, we do not realize what an enemy we have to contend with in the person of Satan, known as the "deceiver," the "accuser of the brethren," the "roaring lion," "adversary," "prince of the power of the air," "dragon," "god of this world," and other appellations that portray his diabolical character. When contending armies recognize they have a strong and mighty foe to encounter, they prepare for it; so should we who "wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against wicked spirits in high places." Nothing but the indwelling of the Divine One will enable us to be overcomers in this conflict with the enemy of all good.

Some one has said that there are two ways of getting help. The one is to go around to all your friends and get disappointed, and then go to God at last. The other is to go to God at first. This is the shortest cut. God can make your friends help you afterwards. Seek first God and his righteousness. Out of all troubles the surest deliverance is from God's right hand. Therefore from all troubles the readiest way to escape is to draw near to God in prayer. Go not to this friend or that, but pour out thy story before God.

"Were half the breath thus vainly spent

To heaven in supplication sent;

Our cheerful song would oftener be,

Hear what the Lord hath done for me."

Spurgeon knew the secret when he said to an audience: "I invite every troubled brother and sister here to cry for grace from God to be able to see God's hand in every trial, and then for grace, seeing God's hand, to submit at once to it, not only to submit, but to acquiesce, and to rejoice in it. 'It is the Lord; let him do what seemeth good.' I think there is generally an end to troubles when we get to that, for when the Lord sees we are willing that he should do what he wills, then he takes back his hand, and says: 'I need not chasten my child; he submits himself to me. What would have been effected by my chastisement has been effected already, and therefore, I will not chasten him.'"

The message I would lodge in your heart and mine is this:

"Do not look around when the way is dreary,
But lift up thine eyes, God's sun will cheer thee;

For the world may have many a cloud in view,

But in his heart of love it is always 'Blue',
Hide there when weary."

Dr. Morrison's Condition.

At this writing, we regret to say that Dr. Morrison has had a relapse, owing to the fact that pleurisy has set in and he is suffering the most acute pain since he has been sick. We are very apprehensive as to his condition, for with his weak heart and general weakness from his long illness, it will take close watching and expert medical skill to pull him through. He expresses himself as in the Lord's hands, to live or die, but we are asking that our readers pray the Lord to extend his life a few years longer that he may preach the gospel of a full salvation to the hungry multitudes. He is resting quietly today, but it is the result of hypodermics that relieve, for the time being, the pain. Let those who can lay hold of the promises of God claim his restoration.

Later: We are glad to say that Dr. Morrison continues to improve; sat up today and is hopeful of being able to go South soon.

have witnessed in their own lives the development of the steamships and the railroads.

Up to about one hundred years ago there had been since "the historic curtain first arose" absolutely no change in the methods of human locomotion. Why should these revolutionary changes in travel come so abruptly, and at just this time? Is it not because the Time of the End is here? Is it not because the prophecy that "many shall run to and fro" applies to just this time? Is it not because the prediction just cited does not refer to a gradual evolution in the methods of travel from the days of Daniel on, but rather to a revolution in the way of travel down in "The Time of the End?"

When the prophecy was uttered, many of the nations of the far East were locked up in their seclusion. Very little was known of them. India was secluded. China was secluded. Japan was secluded. Other portions of the inhabited earth were secluded, and peopled by roving bands of barbarians. The prophecy looked to a time when all the world should be brought together as one neighborhood, because of the existence or use of these inventions and improvements of which we have been speaking. They have brought the problem of internationalism to the front. These last day inventions have brought the nations into close contact with one another. With the control of power time has almost been eliminated and space annihilated.

The rapid transit of these days brings nations far apart closer together than contiguous kingdoms were a century ago. Washington is not so far from London today as was Edinburgh a hundred years ago. At the beginning of the 19th century it took two days by stage to make the ninety miles between New York and Philadelphia. Now automobiles make the trip in a little more than two hours and the Pennsylvania Railroad Express covers it in less than two hours. When the Continental Congress assembled, Boston was as far from New York as Oakland is now.

In 1800 it took three months by sailing vessel to go from New York to Liverpool. The steamship now makes the trip in five days. Then think of the airship. Continents and oceans are now traversed, and distant lands visited, with greater ease and comfort than a hundred mile trip with the old family horse was made a century ago. An hour now is the same as a day then, and in many cases the same as a week then. This is the age of rapid transit. There is something wrong with the man who says: "All things continue the same as they were from the beginning of the creation."

It was once considered a tremendous undertaking to go from Boston to New York on horseback or with wagon, then the only way to go. A certain preacher speaks in one of his letters which has been preserved of the "long and perilous journey from Boston to Rochester." Not long since a business man in Seattle in speaking of his desire to look after a certain matter of business said: "I concluded that I would just take a run back to London and talk the matter over with my partners." We are reminded that this included 3,000 miles across mountains, canyons, rivers, and plains of a continent, plus 3,000 miles across the ocean, involving less of time, less of discomfort, and less of actual danger, than the "long and perilous journey from Boston to Rochester" a century earlier.

We are told that in 1453 A. D. it required thirty wagons, sixty oxen, a force of 650 men, to transport Mohammed's huge cannon from Andrianople to Constantinople. The distance is 150 miles. Today a locomotive with one car and five men would do the work in ten hours. Illustrations might be multiplied. We acknowledge the facts. Do we get the significance? If we also take into account the modern means of communication—the telephone, the telegraph, the wireless—it will be seen that men not only can and do personally run to and fro, but that they communicate instantly with others thousands of miles away, whereas it used to take months to get a message the same distance. Communication by messenger or by signal from mountain top is altogether too slow for this fast age. Knowledge has been increased. Travel and communication no longer depend upon favorable breezes. Winds and muscles are no longer the propelling forces. Men have learned some of the laws of the forces of nature and have perfected vehicles for rapid transit.

"Many run." People have quit crawling and walking. They run.

"Many shall run to and fro." The masses are moving. Everyone is on the go. One would think so to stand for an hour on the main street or in the Union Station in any of our large cities and see the constant stream of people passing. It is surprising how many people travel almost constantly and how far they go. Americans tour Europe. Europeans tour America. Asiatics tour the world. Automobiles, railroad cars, and ocean liners can hardly be built fast enough to supply the demand. Passage across the ocean must be engaged some days ahead, although some of these liners can carry 3,000 passengers. Many run to and fro.

These things are harbingers of the coming, perfect, eternal age. The fulfillment of the prophecy tells us that we are living in The Time of the End and that we shall soon see the ushering in of the glad day of our Lord's return.

The Book Called The Bible.

DR. L. R. AKERS, President of Asbury College

In this age of "latest things" and "best sellers" it is the novel or bizarre that catches the attention of the masses. However, it is well for us to remember that the most modern news is not the last work of fiction, with the ink still damp from the press, or the night edition of the penny Post, lurid with headlines. The most up-to-date book in the world is one of the oldest books—it is the Bible. It is essentially a present-day Book because it contains every man's biography. Some one may say, "Biographies are written about poets and kings and statesmen, not about ordinary folks." Yet the story of every man's life is written and inscribed in the world's greatest volume; and it is told along with the lives of kings and priests, warriors and statesmen, prophets and patriarchs.

This Book is the mirror of the human soul. Each man finds his counterpart within its pages. As he reads its thrilling narratives of human life crowded with temptations, struggles, defeats, and victories, with its sobs of sorrow and shouts of joy, with its passion and pain, his own heart whispers, "This is the story of myself," and he wonders at the divine revelation which lays bare his innermost soul.

Over and over again the same tragedies of life occur. The morning paper apparently giving the latest information is in reality only a reprint of Moses and Elijah, or of Daniel and Paul. There may be a slight difference in incident and environment, but none in the moral meaning or substance. How much farther have we got than Adam and Eve, contentment and discord, innocence and guilt? Not an inch. Cain still murders Abel. Abraham still journeys to Canaan looking eagerly for that land of milk and honey. Men are anxiously trying to find their way back into Eden, to get by the cherubim and the flaming sword, to enjoy again its trees and flowers, fountains and perfumed bowers. How to get back to that garden has been the problem of the ages.

As the plumed knights of old journeyed forth in quest of the Holy Grail and found it not, so men vainly seek this elysium because sin has blinded their eyes to the vision of the true and beautiful.

No indeed! We have not outgrown the Bible. There are thoughtless and superficial folks who speak of this Book as being out of date. Even some in the ministry have become so progressive, as they think, that they must discard the Bible and seek newer and more sensational themes, but these men are only clever swindlers deceiving themselves. A diet of froth and fudge soon satiates, and if continued, nauseates. It is difficult to find a substitute for bread, and so far nothing has been discovered so satisfying to the human soul as this heaven-sent "Bread of Life." There are times when a congregation will even turn from such fascinating themes as Eugenics, Sociology, Socialism, Pragmatism, etc., to listen with interest to the story of the Cross, or hear a sermon on Sin and Its Penalty, or even to enjoy such an old-fashioned theme as Heaven and Its Blessedness.

The Bible has no revelation to make to unbiblical minds. There are some who have read this Book with their eyes, but not with their hearts; they have turned its pages, but missed its treasures. Approaching the volume with skeptical minds and irreverent hearts, it became a sealed Book to them, and there was no beauty in it that they should desire it.

However, to the lowly and contrite heart it is a well of water in a barren desert, or as bread and meat to the famished soul; to him in darkness it becomes a lamp unto his feet and a light unto his path. All the needs of human life with its complexity and perplexity may be supplied from this inexhaustible storehouse.

The Bible is the Book universal. Text-books are for the scholar, Blackstone for the lawyer, Materia Medica for the physician, theology for the minister, but the Bible is humanity's Book. It is not written in Hebrew, Greek, or English, but in the language of the human heart.

Islam has the Koran, China the sayings of Confucius, Greece her Plato, England Shakespeare, Italy Dante, America Emerson, but the Bible is the world's Book—belonging to all nations.

Not somebody's air, but everybody's air; not somebody's sky, but everybody's sky; not somebody's sun, but everybody's sun; not somebody's Book, but everybody's Book.

How shameful the teaching that the Bible should be accessible only to experts, how needful it is to king and peasant alike! This Book should be snatched from the hands of priests and put into the hands of people.

The Bible is the Book for all time. Not the "I was," but the "I AM," is the author of the Book, and because he is the changeless One, the same yesterday and today and forever, the Bible is not only the Book for today, but for tomorrow and forever. This Book is not out of date, but ahead of the times, and countless centuries must elapse before man can measure up to its standard of life with its fullness of blessing.

The trouble with society is, not that it has outgrown the Book, but that with flagging step it has failed to keep pace with this Great Guide to human progress.

Let us, then, with the Aladdin's lamp of study and the magic ring of prayer find in this Volume of volumes our treasures of mind and heart.

Let it also become our armory, and from its bountiful stores may we gird ourselves, putting on the whole armor of God that in the long and bitter struggle over the citadel of Man's soul the radiant angels of God, marching and counter-marching on the plains of Paradise, shall shout the paean of victory, and, catching up their sweet-voiced harps, like the sound of many waters, sing the song of Moses and the Lamb. And as the glorious symphony of praise swells and resounds amid the fretted arches and lofty domes of that heavenly city, God's battle-scarred veterans will come marching home bearing the trophies of victory, and there to meet them will be One like unto the Son of God, and he with his pierced hands will open wide the gates of his eternal city that they may have an abundant entrance in. "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter. I am in the second grade at school. I am eight years old. I have brown hair and black eyes. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with Y. It has three letters.

Dorothy M. Shaw.
Rt. 4, Paris, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. I am in the fifth grade at school. I am nine years old. I weigh sixty-one pounds. Mother takes The Herald and I like to read it, especially page ten. I have gray eyes, fair complexion and brown hair. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with B and ends with Y, and has six letters in it.

Georgia B. Shaw.
Rt. 4, Paris, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a stranger to you and the cousins, so I will introduce myself. I was eleven years old Dec. 1. Have I a twin? I go to school every day and am in the sixth grade. I also go to Sunday school every Sunday at a Methodist Church. I enjoy going very much. I am from the Eastern shore of Maryland where the ground is level and the country is pretty. The main crops are corn, wheat, and potatoes. I lived on a farm until about five years ago. I have been living in Baltimore. I wish I could live in the country, I like it so much better than the city. I have been rather unlucky this year. I was roller skating and fell and broke my right arm, was operated on for appendicitis, was in the hospital ten days and got along fine. On September 24 I fell and broke the same arm over in the same place. The doctor set it good both times. It is straight, but is still weak. I have to be very careful with it. I hope you cousins have better luck than I have. For pets I have a nice big cat and a big white rabbit. The rabbit weighs 13 pounds. We have only been taking The Herald about two months and I certainly enjoy reading the boys and girls' letters. I do hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this arrives. I hope Aunt Bettie and all the cousins are well. I would be glad to hear from some of the cousins. I will answer the letters I receive.

Kenneth O. Todd.

2730 E. Chase St., Baltimore, Md.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I come in again so soon for a little chat? Was very glad to see my last letter in print. Thank you Aunt Bettie. I received several nice letters from the cousins, but they were most of them from Eastern states. I can't help but wonder if there aren't any boys and girls near my age, who are readers of The Herald, living in Western states. I am quite anxious to know, so won't you boys and girls near my age, write to me? Would be glad to hear from any of you who care to write, of course, but especially from Western states. I am just twenty-three years of age. I attend the Church of the Nazarene with my parents. The church is located in a little town thirty miles from where we live, but they preach what we like to hear, so we're willing to go that distance as often as possible. I'm hoping you will kindly print this, Aunt Bettie, and that this won't be crowding the younger boys and girls out. Love and best wishes for a very Happy New Year.

Helen A. Walters.
Akron, Colo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have often read page ten but I have never seen a letter from Youngstown vicinity. The Herald is a lovely paper and mother has been taking it several years. There are just mother and me and I sell domestic and imported materials and ready-made garments from house to house and I find it very interesting. Lena A. Hanson, I guess your middle name to be Annie. Helen L. Bennett, I guess your name to be Lucile. Please remember your promise. My age is between 20 and 26 and by middle name begins with M and ends with A, and has four letters. I will write to the one who first guesses correctly. I hope all you cousins are living up to the blessed teachings of Aunt Bettie. It's a blessing to know there are some good holiness Christians that take an interest in the children. Just now we are attending a revival in the school-house in Columbiana held by Rev. Snyder, a man filled with the Holy Ghost. Thank God there are still such men going up and down the land convicting men and women, and children too, of their sins. God grant that we may have more of them. Doesn't it fill our hearts with joy when we see folks saved from their sins and shouting the victory. Aunt Bettie, forgive me for taking so much space. I ask the prayers of all you cousins that I might ever walk in the light. God bless you all.

Winifred M. Clabaugh.
Box 104, North Lima, O.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As I have written before I will write again. We take The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. How are you and all of the cousins? I go to school and am in the seventh grade. We have a good teacher. His name is Clarence L. Shadley. I am eleven years old. My birthday is June 21. I have two brothers and three sisters. My youngest sister is over a year old. My grandpa died March 17, and my grandma died May 27, and we sure do miss them. I go to Sherman Chapel Sunday school and church. Well, I will close. I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this arrives. I will answer all the letters I receive.

Laura Adella Munn.
Rt. 1, Belknap, Ia.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I take The Pentecostal Herald and enjoy very much reading page ten. I have one brother nine years old and a brother ten months old, and one sister. Helen Bennett, I guess your middle name to be Louise. I will be very glad to get the snapshot if I guessed the right name. I would like to have one anyhow, and if not the snapshot, the letter. I hope very much my letter won't be put in Mister Wastebasket. Some of you members of the happy band write me.

Dorothy Elaine Marshall.
Box 123, Kuttawa, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a South Dakota girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am in the fourth grade at school. I am nine years old. Tell Elizabeth Garrett I guess her middle name to be Laura. Am I right? If so, let me know. I hope Mr. Waste Paper Basket is drawing maps when my letter arrives. Who can guess my first name? It begins with R and ends with T and has six letters in it. I wish some of the boys would write to me. This is my first letter and I would like to see it in print.

R. Edson Crowd.
723 East 7th Ave., Mitchell, S. D.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Iowa boy join your happy band of boys and girls? My grandma takes The Herald and I like page ten. I am fifteen years old. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with H and ends with Y, and has five letters in it. I hope W. B. don't get this. I will write a little poem.

Be a Friend.

Oh, you'll not be any poorer if you smile along your way,
And your lot will not be harder for the kindly things you say.
Don't imagine you are wasting time for others that you spend,
You can rise to wealth and glory and still pause to be a friend.

William H. Stabe.
Redding, Ia.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your band of boys and girls? I am a boy of eleven years. Will be twelve the 10th of February. I am in the seventh grade at school. I have two sisters and one brother. I have dark brown hair, gray eyes, and light complexion. Lena Hanson, I guess your middle name to be Aline. Helen Bennett, I guess your middle name to be Louise. If right don't forget letter and present. As this is my first letter I would like for it to be published in The Herald.

J. W. Rains.
Rt. 3, Box 144, Georgetown, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I want my letter in print, but if you do not have room that is all right with me. I saw you down at camp meeting this year, and I told you I would write to The Herald. I have two sisters, Ruth and Amanda. Amanda is married. I am not writing much because I want to leave room for others. I am eight years of age and in the third grade. I am going to skip a grade.

Nellie Marie Cook.
Nicholasville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a Kentucky girl would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. I am about five feet tall, weigh 140 pounds, have blue eyes, dark brown hair, and am eighteen years old. I live on a farm with my father. My mother is not living. I would like for all the boys and girls to write me and I'll try and answer all letters I receive.

Alice King.
Rt. 4, Falmouth, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl ten years old. I have blue eyes and light hair. I am in the fourth grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My birthday is July 9. I hope to see my letter in The Herald.

Lucy Catherine Long.
Stanford, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. I have never written to The Herald before and I hope to see my letter in print. My sister takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I live in a yard of the Methodist Church. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am about four feet, two inches tall, and weigh about 59 pounds. I have black hair, blue eyes, and dark complexion. I am eight years old. Have I a twin? My birthday is August 28. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with D and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. The one that guesses my middle name I will send them my picture.

Vera Carter.
Sandy Ridge, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I am ten years old and in the fifth grade at school. I go to the M. E. Church. My father is the pastor of the Methodist Church at Midway, Ky. Any one who guesses my first name I will send them a letter. It begins with E and ends with A, and has seven letters in it.

Madalene Shelley.
Wilmore, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit a little South Carolina girl to your happy band of boys and girls? I have not read many letters from South Carolina so I thought I would write. I am twelve years old and in the fifth grade. I live on a small farm with my grandfather. My father is dead and I am very poor. I will be very glad to hear from some of my cousins. I will answer all letters received.

Hazel McKenzie. care J. N. Coker, Cades, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Although I am a stranger, and a lonely, sick girl, I believe you will make room for me in your happy band. I have been a shut-in most of the time for eighteen years, and I get very tired confined to bed so long. I do not know anything much to write about that is interesting, but hope my letter will be printed anyway. I want to say a lot, but I am not a gifted writer and can't write a good letter. Won't you Herald readers give me a card and letter shower? I would appreciate it so much. I do enjoy the good, cheering letters, and any little things to help pass away the long winter hours. Just to know that "someone cares" is a great consolation. If there's a good word we may say, or a good deed we may do, let us do it now, for we shall not pass this way again. My eyes are too weak to read, and I get very lonely. If I live I will be 37 years of age Jan. 24, 1929.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I like to read The Pentecostal Herald, especially page ten. Helen Bennett, I guess your middle name to be Louise. If I am right please don't forget your promise. I have fair complexion, red hair, am eleven years old and in the sixth grade. I weigh about ninety-one pounds. This is my first letter so I will close. Charles Allen Garnett.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you slip over and let a North Carolina girl join your happy band? I take The Herald but have never written before. I certainly do enjoy reading page ten. I am fifteen years old, weigh 116 pounds, have auburn hair, fair complexion, and am five feet and two inches tall. I belong to the Methodist Church and go to Sunday school most every Sunday and to preaching every second and fourth Sunday. My father is a singing schoolmaster and I sure do enjoy good singing. As this is my first letter I will stop. Will answer all letters received.

FALLEN ASLEEP

MRS. ETTA SADLER SHAW, NO LONGER WITH US.

No words can describe the language of my hearty in the great loss I have sustained of my devoted wife, who passed from labor to reward Dec. 4. We have labored together forty-seven years in revival meetings, camp meetings, and in special services for boys and girls and a dry nation. She believed and preached the old-time religion and the Spirit-filled life and the near coming of our Lord. All her life she was deeply interested in the W. C. T. U., and was a State and National Evangelist.

She saw the great hindrance to God's work caused by religious bigotry, and all her married life she was heart and soul with her husband in helping promote convocations of prayer in different parts of the country. The following Covenant of Prayer, written by her, has been unanimously indorsed in many meetings:

Covenant of Prayer.

Believing it to be the will of God that the love of Christians, notwithstanding their differences, should be so manifested that all men shall be compelled to say of them, "Behold, how these love one another."

Therefore, we do covenant together to call upon God for a more abundant fulfillment of His promises for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit than has yet been witnessed among us, and for a deep, general revival of pure and undefiled religion.

She was never strong in body but was always strong in the faith and has done more work than any well person we have ever known. Her great work and power of endurance was a miracle of faith. She was wonderfully healed of T. B. many years ago, and has always preached divine healing, and witnessed many remarkable cases of healing in answer to prayer.

A large number of ministers and religious workers attended the funeral which was conducted by the W. C. T. U. in the Burton Heights Methodist Church of which she was one of the charter members. Many telegrams came from many National and State officers of the W. C. T. U., and other friends. All of her nine children were with her before she passed away. Five of them sang one of her songs entitled "Loved Ones Gone Before." Pleading for the prayers of our friends, I remain your brother in Christian love. S. B. Shaw, 1904 Jefferson Ave., Grand Rapids, Mich. Her life work will probably be published in book form in the near future.

WILSON.

The first vacancy made by death in the home of John Taylor Wilson, of Stewartsville, Bedford Co., Va., occurred on Wednesday, Jan. 11, 1928, when he, the husband and father, passed away at the age of 79 years. Although he had suffered much for two weeks with double pneumonia, the end came quietly and peacefully. Much earnest prayer was offered for his recovery, but his family finally realized that God was calling him home.

He was born April 9, 1848, the son of the late James H. and Emily Smith Wilson, of Floyd Co., where he spent the first forty years of his life, being one of the prosperous farmers of that section.

In 1876, Mr. Wilson was married to Miss Octavia L. McNeil, and to their union were born five sons and three daughters. His last years were marked by great interest and zeal for preparations for the supreme moment, and before his departure he expressed his gladness to see the Lord. "When I Can Read My Title Clear," and "Saved Through Jesus' Blood" had been two of his favorite hymns for years. Patience in suffering and trial was one of the chief characteristics of his worthy life, as well as the remarkable degree of kindness which was demonstrated both at home and elsewhere. His friends of bygone years recall the high esteem in which he was held in his home community when a young man.

To mourn their great and irreparable loss, there survive him his widow and all his children: N. B., W. J., J. H., all of Roanoke County, Va., H. T., Norfolk, Va., R. O., Stewartsville, Va., Mrs. William Wheeler, Alabama, Misses Pearl and Lily Wilson, Stewartsville; also nine grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, and one brother, Charles Preston Wilson, of Salem, Va.

On Friday, January 13, his body was taken to Floyd County and laid to rest among his kindred in the Wilson Cemetery, near Simpsons, where he awaits the glorious morn of the first resurrection.

SAVAGE.

Mary E. Savage fell asleep in Jesus September 19, 1928. Mother was a devout child of God, her Christian experience was clear and unquestionable. She gave her heart to God very young. Mother was left a widow at the age of 39 years, with five little children depending upon her for support. The love she had for her family was so great that even her hardships seemed a joy to her. She often said, "It isn't hard to work for those we love." She was always ready and willing to sacrifice her comforts for her family.

After her hard day's work, mother would call us about her, read the Bible, pray with us, and taught each one to pray. Through the dark hours, trying times, or the fiercest storms, she was always the same calm, serene, believing child of God as though the sun were shining. Mother's life was entirely devoted to God, and intensely interested in the affairs of his kingdom. For her pure spirit the vanities of this world held no charm, but her chief pleasure was found in the fellowship of God's people. She was a diligent Bible student. Her memory was richly stored with precious passages from the word which she could always quote accurately. She loved the church, was always present when possible for her to be there, and always took an active part. She loved the prayer and testimony meetings. She took a deep interest in the Sunday school. She was a believer in the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification. For a number of years she attended camp meeting at Mt. Lake Park. She always looked forward with prayer to these meetings, as a time of "refreshing." She loved to read the holiness papers and literature, and was well supplied, and after reading she would pass it on to some one where she felt would do the most good. She was always busy working for the salvation of souls.

I nursed mother through her last sickness. She was so very patient and fully resigned to God's will. She would pray for all the sick and suffering and when pain would cloud her dear face it was soon cleared away with a smile. She always looked on the bright side of life, seeing beauty in everything and good in every person. She loved everybody and was loved by all. She had a kind word and smile for all she met. Mother remained conscious until the last. About thirty-six hours before her departure there was an unusual brightness came over her countenance. She remarked that she heard music and spoke of dear ones that had gone on before. She would raise her hand and smile as though greeting her dear ones. The presence of Jesus and Holy angels could be felt all about her. She always prayed "for a peaceful hour in which to die." God answered that prayer. At the last, she closed her eyes, and breathed as easy and peaceful as a babe going to sleep. SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IV.—January 27, 1929.

Subject.—The Holy Spirit. John 16: 7-11; Romans 8:12-17, 26-27.

Golden Text.—For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God. Romans 8:14.

Time.—The passage from John was spoken the last night before our Lord's crucifixion. Paul wrote the epistle to the Romans about A. D. 58.

Places.—Jerusalem and Corinth.

Introduction.—The two battle-grounds of Christianity have been the Deity of Jesus Christ and the personality of the Holy Spirit. Unitarians, as their name implies, deny both. The same is true of Modernists, as they are called. Although many of them hold membership in orthodox churches, they are in reality Unitarians. I would not be unkind; but their consciences seem to be seared as with a hot iron. Some of us cannot understand how one can preach what he does not believe, receive money from the people he deceives, and sleep comfortably in the same bed with his outraged conscience. Is that hypocrisy? If not, please name it.

For the doctrine of the personality of the Holy Spirit we must depend entirely upon the Bible. We look first at the Greek masculine pronoun applied to him. The Greek word for Spirit is pneuma, which is neuter gender; and when pronouns are made to stand for this noun they are, of course neuter. This fact has misled some students of theology. But the Master uses sometimes a synonym for pneuma, parakletos, which is masculine. When this word is used all pronouns and adjectives referring to it are likewise masculine. This is simply in accord with the usage of the Greek language. There are no masculine pronouns in John 14:15-18, as some have supposed. There the neuter word, pneuma, is used, and the pronouns are properly neuter; but in John 16:7-9 we find two masculine pronouns referring to the masculine noun parakletos, translated the Comforter. There is a strong passage in John 16:13: "When he, the Spirit of truth, is come." He in the Greek is a masculine pronoun, while the word translated Spirit is the neuter word pneuma. This is strong evidence of his personality. The same masculine pronoun is used again in verse fourteen: "He shall glorify me." In many cases where the English pronoun is used there is no pronoun in the Greek, it being understood. These masculine pronouns cannot be used of a mere influence or emanation, but of a personal being.

The relations into which the Holy Ghost is brought in Scripture signify his personality. Jesus commanded the disciples to baptize "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." In 2 Cor. 13:13 the names of the three persons in the Holy Trinity are again brought together on a ground of equality. In 1 John 5:7 we read: "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost." If the Holy Ghost be not a person, this language is absurd.

There is some clear evidence of both the personality and the Deity of the Spirit in Acts 13:2-4. Here he uses with reference to himself the two personal pronouns "I" and "ME", which certainly would not be the case, were he only an influence. In this passage he is commending the church at Antioch, and is sending forth missionaries to preach the Gospel to the outside world. Such acts can be attributed to a person only; and the work he is claiming to do could be done by no one but Deity.

In John 3:6-8 Jesus Christ twice makes the Holy Spirit the author of the new birth, which is certainly a divine work. In Hebrews 9:14 he is called "the eternal Spirit." None but God is eternal. In Psalm 139:7 omnipresence is ascribed to him. In Romans 15:19 we find words that imply his omnipotence. None but a person can bear witness with our spirits that we are the children of God. None other can possibly be our Comforter, or pray in us and for us.

I have been thus explicit in dealing with this subject because of the general denial of the personality and the Deity of the Spirit on the part of Modernists. They use our terms, as a rule, but force into them another meaning, thereby deceiving the people. If I may so use the expression, their teaching is a wolf in sheep skin. It might be both interesting and profitable to pursue the subject further, but both time and space forbid.

Comments on the Lesson.

7. I tell you the truth.—The Master is very emphatic in his utterance, speaking as if to convince the disciples. It is expedient for you that I go away.—No doubt that sounded strange to the apostles. What could be better than his own presence? He answers: "The Comforter," the blessed Holy Spirit, who would not come to them in his baptismal, empowering office while the Master was with them. He would send the Comforter as his coronation gift to the Church after that he had returned to heaven.

8. When he is come.—Here we find the office work of the Spirit. "He will reprove (convict) the world (sinners) of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." Mark you, this takes place when the Spirit is poured upon the Church. That is always true. It happened on the day of Pentecost, and it has been happening ever since. When sinners are not put under conviction, it is because the Spirit has not been poured out upon the Church. Any other sort of a revival is a failure.

9. Of sin, because they believe not on me.—Unbelief is the master-sin of humanity. Men will be punished according to other sins, but this is the sin that damns the soul. It "makes God a Liar."

10. Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more.—The Spirit shows us the way of righteousness, helps us to live righteously, and convinces us that without righteousness we can never see God in peace.

11. Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.—I am not sure that there is any reference here to the final Judgment. The Devil, the prince of this world, is condemned, and all his followers with him. Unbelievers are "condemned already, because they have not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." John 3:18. The word Judgment here rather carries the sense of condemnation.

Romans 8:12. We are debtors, not to the flesh, to live after the flesh.—Flesh means the carnal nature. Redeemed souls must live after (obey) the Holy Spirit.

13. If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die.—Not physical death, but spiritual. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." That could not be said of an unregenerate soul, for it is already "dead in trespasses and in sins." "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." Paul's contrast is powerful: "But if ye through the Spirit do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." The old man with his deeds must be put off forever.

14. As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.—Surely this should settle some things forever. How can one who denies the very being of that Spirit be led by him? He cannot be; neither can he be a son of God. How blind men are!

15. The spirit of bondage again to fear.—Paul is referring to the bondage of the law. The Jews realized that they had not kept the law, and constantly were in bondage through fear of death. Again the apostle teaches by contrast: "but ye have received the Spirit of adoption"—the Holy Spirit. Abba, Father.—Both words mean father; but Abba is rather a child's term of endearment. Abba is a Syriac word, while Paul used the Greek for Father. It is clear that the Hebrews after they learned the Greek language, had a custom of using a Hebrew word followed by its equivalent in Greek. Why, we know not. Thank God, we are not left to reason to prove our salvation, but the Holy Spirit comes directly into our hearts and bears witness with our spirits that we are the children of God. This we find in the next verse of our lesson. By the Holy Spirit we are made conscious of our Father's pardoning grace, and of our adoption into his family. The witness of the Spirit is the blessed consciousness within our hearts that the work is done, we are his and he is ours. Consciousness is the Supreme Court of the soul; and God himself could give us no stronger evidence of our salvation.

17. If children, then heirs.—That is so big that it staggers me. I do not know how to add anything by comment, unless I quote still further: "Heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ." We are rich beyond conception. But there is a condition attached to our inheritance: "If so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." Such rewards are not to be handed out to lazy, worthless cowards. They belong to such as follow in the footsteps of their suffering Master; and the glory comes after the suffering. Like him, we too must be made perfect through suffering.

26. Here is something good: "The Spirit . . . helpeth our infirmities." We cannot even pray without his help, "for we know not what we should pray for as we ought." How weak and ignorant we are. "But the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." O how he helps us. Thank God!

27. I am not sure that I can so comment on this verse as to help my readers. Prayer is so simple that a little child can understand it well enough to move the heart of God, but so profound that I feel sure that the wisest saints in glory have never yet touched its bottom. We know that Jesus is interceding for us in heaven, that the Holy Spirit is teaching us

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Tuttle, arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

BY MARTHA TARBELL, Ph.D.

New ideas, new light, new suggestions and new enthusiasm comes to the teacher who opens the 1929 edition of this favorite handbook to the International Sunday School Lessons. "A wealth undreamed of and almost passing belief" are the words used by one reviewer in describing it. The greatest triumph however that has come to "The Guide"—that it has won over all helps—is the reputation it now enjoys for "making teachers of all who use it."

"GOD'S SPIRIT WILL NOT ALWAYS STRIVE WITH MEN."

As a boy of ten years of age, I was under deep conviction for my sins under the preaching of the pastor in the old Presbyterian Church in our old home at Laclede, Mo. I shall never forget how my heart longed for some one to tell me how I might repent and find the peace that my young heart craved. My parents, while they loved the Lord, yet did not seem to know that a child could be saved and, after a few days this conviction wore off and I went on in sin and was not convicted of sin again until I was married and living in a home of my own. God saw fit to send into our happy home the Angel of death and take our little son, then five years of age. My heart was torn and bleeding and the Spirit worked with me again and I almost yielded to God, when the Devil brought to my memory that my son had been taken and that God was not a loving and just God to punish me in that way. I rebelled and went even deeper in sin than before. Wife had found the Lord as her Savior two months previous to this time and, while wrestling with her Lord in this sad hour, without ever hearing a sermon on Holiness, made a complete consecration to God and received the Holy Ghost as her sanctifier.

More than twelve years again went by and in the meantime I had so hardened my heart that I do not think that during that time that a single tear had ever dimmed my eyes. Not once had I felt the need of being a Christian. I would go to church with my wife and would even attend the camp meeting with her and had sat under some of the best preachers in the country, but nothing seemed to stir me in the least. Wife would talk to me and ask me when I would repent and give my heart to God, and I would usually put her off by telling her that in his own good time he would save me. I was one of the leading business men of the town in Colorado we were now living in and the people of this town had been praying for eight years that I would be saved.

God saw fit to send to the Baptist Church in this town an old-time Georgia evangelist that would dare to preach the truth and would hit sin as hard as he could strike. After being persuaded by wife to attend one Sunday afternoon, I went with her for the purpose of making fun of the evangelist, as I did not like the Baptists, thinking she would refrain from going back and would spend her time with me. I thank God he knows how to deal with the human soul. As I sat there that afternoon and God talking to me, being fully determined not to yield, when God spoke in a plain voice, "This is your last chance." At first I decided to hold out, when the Voice again spoke to me and I began to wonder and to think. While debating on what action I would take in the matter the Voice again spoke to me and I realized as I sat there that it was now or never. I saw a Devil's hell opened up and I was held over the pit for a period of time and I began to call upon the Lord, and if ever a man did a firstclass case of repenting, I did it that day as I talked to my Lord and told him if he would save my soul I would go out and warn a lost and dying world to "flee the wrath to come."

They had an old-fashioned Methodist altar in that Baptist Church, and the evangelist invited the sinners to come, and led the way. The meeting had been going on then about two weeks and not a single soul had yet found the Lord. As soon as I made the start, they began coming to the altar and over two hundred were saved in that meeting. About three weeks after the meeting closed I said the final "YES" to God and he sanctified me wholly. Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

I was cleaned up inside and out, quit the use and sale of tobacco and left the business in the hands of others and went out to carry the gospel and to do my part in rescuing souls. That has been over thirteen years ago and eternity alone will reveal the number of souls that have found God because I answered the call that day. I am going to put in the rest of my days in telling people that I am serving a God that is able to save to the uttermost. J. L. Carothers,

GOOD PEOPLE NEED STIRRING UP.

M. M. Bussey.

There is no clearer truth taught in God's word than that good people are in danger of settling down, cooling off, growing careless, and becoming lukewarm. Much of my intense ministry is given to stirring up good people, people who live clean lives, but are cold in their devotion; people who have been in the path of truth many years, yet there is no juice nor joy in their prayers and testimonies. What they say is truth, but cold, matter of fact statements, no fire in their words, no flash in their eyes, no freshness in utterance. My God help them to become stirred!

This class of holiness people will do more to defeat the cause of Christ than all the skeptics on earth. We can whip the devil with fire, holy fire, holy fervor, a mighty devotion to God, a complete sacrifice of ourselves and all we have. Nothing short of this will stand the test at the Judgment.

Many people who used to give out tracts and talk to the people about their souls have ceased. Now they are too nice, too dignified, too cold to care, too worldly to bear the reproach. Street preaching is a means of getting the truth to lost, careless souls. How few holiness preachers make a practice of preaching on the street once a week; yet Wesley and others preached much on the streets. Great God deliver us from the menace of popular holiness. There is no way to heaven but by the way of the cross. Paul wrote to Timothy saying, "Stir up the gift of God, which is in thee." Peter wrote, "I stir up your pure minds, Yea I think it meet as long as I am in this tabernacle to stir you up." 2 Peter 3:1, 2 Pet. 1:13.

Much more prayer and some fasting, more reading of the Bible, and a careful obedience, with an honest paying of the tithe, a forgiving of enemies, and a confessing of faults would bring mighty blessings to many hearts.

THE SUPREME MESSAGE.

By The Editor.

THE Apostle Paul never meant to teach that to preach Christ was to preach foolishness, but he meant to suggest that the world in its wisdom would believe the preaching of Christ to be foolishness; and what was true in his day is true today. We have many men in our pulpits who do not believe that the preaching of Christ will solve the world problems, redeem and uplift the race.

Over against this unbelief the Lord Jesus says: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." Jesus had infinite wisdom; he knew his own power, and he knew that in the creation of man God had put something into his constitution to which the preaching of Christ would appeal; Jesus knew that there was something in our nature, however fallen and depraved, that would awaken an hunger and thirst after the divine power he had within himself to save from sin, and to satisfy the longing of their discontented hearts.

The Apostle Paul was a learned man. He was acquainted with the profoundest philosophy, law and literature of his day. He could argue any question with the best of them; but he determined in his ministry to know nothing but Christ and him crucified. This is the most imperative need today—the preaching of Jesus—his atonement, his sinlessness, his power over men, the devil, disease, death, depravity, guilt—all, and everything that separates men from God and makes them wicked and miserable.

The people of this generation need to be brought back to Christ, and this can only be done through preaching the gospel of redemption from sin through his suffering, his groans and tears, his blood and agony. This generation needs to listen to ministers of the gospel who will put Christ on the cross before them until they see Jesus nailed there, with the blood in his hair, on his hands, on his feet, his body lean with sorrow and fasting and prayer, his frame white in the agony of the cross and silent in death. The people need to look at Jesus hanging there and to be reminded that he hung there, and died there, for their sins; that he paid their debt, and made pardon and cleansing possible for them. They need to be taught that he arose from the grave, walked among men, ascended into heaven and is at the right hand of the Father making intercession for them; that he is coming again to sit upon the throne of judgment, and that they must appear before him; that to accept his gospel is to appear before him with joy; that to reject the atonement is to be banished from his presence in the deep and endless night of woe. The urgent need of our times is to preach Jesus, from the annunciation angel to the cross; from the cross to the resurrection; from the resurrection to the ascension, and from the ascension to his second coming in power and glory.

Out of the faithful preaching of Jesus comes every good thing. The cross is the fountain from which the stream of all blessedness flows; along its banks civilization prospers, education flourishes, and social uplift makes headway. What the world needs is Jesus Christ in his divine power to regenerate, to sanctify, to illuminate, to inspire with new ideals, holy desires, and unselfish and sympathetic helpfulness. Shall we not have a revival of the preaching of Jesus? May we suggest to ministers who may read these lines, that they devote a few Sabbaths to preaching Christ and him crucified! Preach the exaltation of Christ as the Redeemer of men, mighty to save to the uttermost! Preach Jesus and see if the Holy Ghost does not apply the word, interest the people, increase the congregations, warm up the hearts, build up the kingdom, change the temperature of the church, and bless humanity. May it be truly said of each of us, "And he preached unto him Jesus."

An Open Letter to a Beloved Pastor

No. II.

My Dear Brother —————:

FOLLOWING up my letter to you in last week's HERALD, I am wondering if you have come to a place where you discount your early, bright conversion and very gracious experience of the new birth, and the joyful Christian life you lived, and the fruitful ministry and gracious revivals of your earlier life as a gospel preacher.

I can hardly believe that you would be willing to charge those past experiences up to ignorance, fanaticism, or mere human emotionalism. I am a bit curious to know by what process you have so completely changed from your original methods and ministry in soul winning. At one time you laid great emphasis on repentance, on the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit, and you saw that this gospel which you were preaching was the power of God unto salvation. People were saved under your ministry, large numbers of them. They were completely changed; the life they lived and the character developed so entirely different from that up to the time of their conversions, was a positive proof that it had not been with them a human decision or resolution, but they had indeed been made in Christ new creatures.

Now it seems you have entirely changed your method. You seem to lay no emphasis on the new birth. You may refer to it occasionally, but a mere reference to a thing is not preaching it with earnestness as a prime necessity. You evidently are not insisting that in order to salvation there must be a change so radical in the human soul, that our Lord Jesus calls it being "born again," and the inspired writer declares that we must be made "new creatures in Christ"—a new creation.

Has there been a radical change in your theological views? Have you given up your old faith? Do you discount your own conversion and the blessed scenes of power in the revivals of your early ministry? Have you concluded that some sort of a human vow or decision is to take the place of the Holy Spirit in the new birth?

Please do not think for a moment that I am seeking to embarrass you, or would be impertinent, but I must confess that I am uneasy, both with reference to your own spiritual status and the effect of your ministry upon the people you are bringing into the church without any experience of regenerating grace.

Do you hold on to the old faith? Do you still realize the genuineness of your own conversion? Do you believe that the great revivals held by you in your earlier ministry were genuine works of the Holy Ghost? Have you changed your method to adjust yourself to conditions in which you find yourself situated, and have permitted yourself to substitute these things entirely human, for the work of the Holy Ghost in order that you may hold your position in a large church with a congregation of worldly people at a very large salary, a handsome parsonage, and surroundings that are quite pleasant if a man can bring his conscience into a calm agreement with such conditions?

To be frank with you, to my mind there can be no doubt but you are preaching "another gospel" entirely different from that under which you were saved, and which you preached with such blessed results for several years. I have been wondering if you will be able to meet with our Lord at the judgment in peace. The Apostle Paul says, "If a man preach any other gospel, than that we preach, let him be accursed." There is one thing certain, a host of our brethren of the Methodist ministry who were soundly converted after deep repentance, at an altar of prayer, are now taking hosts of people into the church at Easter and on Decision Day, whom they well know show no signs of conviction, and have had no searching ministry on the importance of repentance, and the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit. Do you think that you brethren can either stand the test before these deceived people, or the Lord Jesus in the day of judgment? In all sincerity, I do not believe you can. I believe the Christ will condemn you on that day, and the people who have been deceived by you, and come to the judgment without salvation, will condemn you for having brought them into the church under the impression that they had complied with the requirements of the gospel, and they had entirely fallen short of the great essentials of salvation—true repentance, forsaking of the world, a gracious experience of regenerating power, consecration to Christ, a heart from sin set free, lives of sacrifice, of service, and of glad witness to the saving power of God.

LIGHTS FROM MANY WINDOWS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

When in Paris during the War frequently I went into the Church of the Madeline situated at a very central point in the city. One of the peculiarities of this church is that no windows are visible. All the light comes from above—the windows are in the roof. This fact typified to me the truth that all the light that comes to us from the Word of God comes from above. The Holy Spirit is the great Illuminator!

Preaching the other day to a Conference of Chinese preachers we urged them to first get the experience of full salvation and then read everything they could get about it. Too many read books on both sides of Holiness and never get settled, but when one gets the blessing the Holy Spirit gives them such a spirit of discernment that they easily discern between the wheat and the chaff.

How wonderfully the Wesley Hymns bring out the need, the attainability, the assurance of full salvation. Dr. Martineau (Unitarian) even went so far as to say: "After the Scriptures the Wesley Hymn Book appears to me the grandest instrument of popular culture that Christianity has ever produced." Dr. Chadwick recently in "Joyful News" has a very fine article on this subject and some very fine quotations are given such as:

"The thing my God doth hate
That I no more may do,
Thy creature, Lord, again create,
And all my soul renew.

"My soul shall then, like Thine,
Abhor the thing unclean,
And, sanctified by love divine,
For ever cease from sin."

"There is one thing very clear and definite, that original sin must be destroyed before Full Redemption is ours."

"Slay the dire root and seed of sin
The seed of sin's disease;
Spirit of health remove."

"Break off the yoke of inbred sin."

"Now, O my Joshua, bring me in,
Cast out Thy foes; the inbred sin,
The Carnal Mind remove."

"Saviour, from sin we Thee receive From all indwelling sin."

"Slay the old Adam with Thy breath."

This was not repression but elimination.

One thing stands out clearly, viz., Faith is the condition of reception and not growth.

"I cannot wash my heart,
But by believing Thee,
And waiting for the blood to impart,
The spotless purity.
Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees,
And looks to that alone;
Laughs at impossibilities,
And cries it shall be done."

Both John and Charles Wesley were very watchful against excesses and extravagances. In one of their meetings a brother gave a testimony which would lead to very false notions as to Christian perfection: he very foolishly said that he was as holy as God is—a very presumptuous and absurd statement for a mortal to make. Charles Wesley heard it and he wrote the following lines:

"Holy as Thou, O Lord, is none;
Thy holiness is all Thy own:
A drop of that unbounded sea
Is ours, a drop derived from Thee.

"And when Thy purity we share,
Thy only glory we declare;
And humbled into nothing own,
Holy and pure is God alone.

"Sole, self-existing God and Lord,
By all Thy heavenly hosts adored,

Let all on earth bow down to Thee,
And own Thy peerless majesty."

THIRSTING FOR SANCTIFICATION.

I have been greatly interested in reading the life of Hudson Taylor, of the China Inland Mission, to find in his early Christian experience in England how he longed for holiness of heart. In 1849, writing to his sister, he said: "I am seeking entire sanctification. Oh, that the Lord would take away my heart of stone, and give me a heart of flesh. Oh, that I could take hold of the blessed promises of God's Holy Word. My heart longs for this perfect holiness. I have read a very interesting paper on the beauty of holiness in the Wesleyan Magazine for November. What a happy state it must be!

"O for a heart to praise my God,
A heart from sin set free;
A heart that always feels thy blood,
So freely shed for me."

"I never can sufficiently praise God for all his mercies to me. He has striven with me times without number and I have resisted him. And yet after all, he has pardoned all my sins. The earnest desire of my heart is that he will sanctify me wholly and make me useful in his cause."

In preaching to a Chinese audience on Full Salvation a missionary who had recently come into a wonderful experience of sanctification said to us, "Make it plain. Give the steps by which we get the Blessing."

Recently in a good book we found the following steps set forth by Andrew Murray. They are all very good and clear.

1. There is such a blessing to be had.
2. It is for me.
3. I haven't got it.
4. I am hungry for it.
5. I am prepared to give up anything that clashes with it.
6. I do now yield myself to God that I may receive it.
7. By faith I do now receive it.

THE BELIEVER'S LIFE.

Over in Japan in the winter time when snow and frost are on the ground, travellers are surprised to find rich, luxuriant, sub-tropical growths so that the bamboo, the palm and the orange flourish in the midst of the cold. The secret is that volcanic action keeps the under ground warm; fires are burning underneath the arctic cold and these tropical growths have their roots in tropical heat.

So with the Christian; he may have to dwell 'mid arctic frosts of indifference, worldliness, criticism, opposition, etc., but his roots are in the tropical heat of spiritual fires.

TIDES OF THE SPIRIT.

How blessed it is when the tide comes in. Those words of Paul Rader are very striking:

"Let the tide come in, Let the tide come in,
Let Grace abound from Calvary,
Such precious blood, the price of sin,
He comes, He fills, from Calvary."

I looked out of my window in the Baptist Mission House and watched the boats as they came up and down the Ningpo River. I saw how often the boatmen had to row hard to make the boats go; but at certain times of the day, they did not row at all and how swiftly the boats went! Little boats, big boats, empty boats, heavily laden boats, no trouble for them to go. What made the difference? The Tide! The tide was strong in the River Ningpo and those boatmen know how to take advantage of those tides.

I thought what an illustration this is of us spiritually. What a terrible time we have rowing and pulling and tugging, when there is no tide on; everything goes hard, progress is slow, no souls are touched, nobody getting saved, no glory is on us, all because there is no tide on; but when the Tides of the Spirit begin to flow, how beautiful everything is! Prayer is easy, praise is jubilant, preaching is a joy, altar calls come easy, souls crowd the altars, and the revival forces are doing a great work.

PASSION FOR SOULS.

The one dominant purpose of the minister, the missionary and the Christian worker should be passion for souls. It is tragic to meet so many finely educated people—college trained,—numerous degrees, etc., yet totally devoid of soul passion and with no genius for soul winning, and no power and therefore, they know none of the joy that comes from seeing souls converted to God. The other night we heard the choir at Bethel sing in English. (All Chinese singers).

"Loved ones are lost and our friends are astray,

Lord give us souls, Lord give us souls;
Help us to win them while it is day;
Lord, give us souls. Lord, give us souls we pray.

"Seals to our labor and souls for our hire,
This, blessed Lord, is our one great desire;
Souls for whom Jesus his precious life gave;

Lord, give us souls, we pray, we pray."

One of the most prominent ministers of the Chinese church, himself a college graduate and carrying some of the highest degrees in learning, talked to me the other day of the need of the ministry in China today. He said so many of his men had college education, but they had no power; they were trained, but did not know how to win souls, they had no fire—and he wanted me to come to the convention and speak twice a day, in the morning to give Old Testament messages, and in the afternoon hold evangelistic services. He wanted his men to go home from the Convention with a new zeal for soul saving and to have revivals in their churches. Many of these never knew the joy of a revival, and such a thing as an altar service is totally unknown to them. I might add that it was my joy to meet this body of ministers twice a day and for my Old Testament work I took the great Prophets, Moses, Elijah, Jeremiah and Daniel, and emphasized their call and commission and their fire-touched lips. Then in the afternoon I was called to pour out my soul along the lines of revivals, soul winning, personal Christian experience. I feel sure God owned the messages, because at the close of our ministry they asked us to stay another four days more and continue these addresses. I gave them two additional days.

A SINGULAR CASE OF GIVING.

The missionary in charge of the music and the training of Evangelistic Singing at Bethel is Miss Alma Huppert, of Wisconsin. She felt keenly the need of a studio for her work because all the music work in Bethel has had to be done right in the school building. The pianos are there, the baby organs are there, the singing classes have to be held there and it has been difficult both for Miss Huppert and equally so for the other teachers. In desperation more than once we have taken our classes out onto the lawn or on a hot day in the shade of a tree to get away from the sound of the baby organs. Finally Miss Huppert said,

"I must have a Studio. The work is growing and demands it."

With the need of a new church and a dining hall, and a Bible School building, and an Isolation Ward for the all too-crowded hospital, we fear there was not much of a reply to this cry of distress. Then Miss Huppert commenced to pray and she announced to us in the family group that she was asking the Lord for money to put up a little studio. But nothing came in for the studio.

NOT TO BE USED WITHOUT COPYRIGHT PERMISSION

OF ASBURY THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

One evening Miss Huppert called us into her room and told us that the Lord had revealed his will in a new way to her. She said while she was on her knees that evening in prayer and asking the Lord for money for that new building—asking him to touch somebody's heart to send the amount needed—that a voice said to her, very clearly,

"Why don't you give your own money?"

She jumped from her knees and amazed, replied,

"Why, Lord, you don't mean you want me to give that?"

And then she told us that before she was a missionary she had laid aside from her teachings a little sum of money. She had just left it at home in the bank—not much, as the world goes—but it was all that she had "in case some day she might break down and have to go home," but joyously she said to the Lord,

"Yes, Lord, You may have that to start with." And from the time Miss Huppert wrote home for that little gift of one thousand dollars—her all—and commenced to make plans for the needed building, other gifts came in resulting in a nice, neat building for the music department. Now one very singular thing about this matter is this: After Miss Huppert had drawn out her thousand dollars in answer to the Voice divine, the bank failed and if she had not obeyed her whole thousand dollars would have been lost to her.

I have known many of the Lord's people to have lost money in investments. Frequently when I have tried to interest people of means in holiness education they have told me about their losses running into many thousands. I have often thought if God's people would invest more of their money in God's work and keep away from alluring, money-making schemes it would be a good thing for them as well as for the Kingdom.

Blessed are they who will listen to God's Voice instead of brokers, speculators, etc., and who will invest in never-failing stocks and bonds of the Kingdom of God.

Foreign Students in Asbury College.

C. A. LOVEJOY, Business Manager.

I have been writing now and then for the past few years concerning foreign students in Asbury College, feeling that the readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD who have furnished the financial support for these foreign students would be interested to keep in touch, not only with their progress in school, but to know what they were accomplishing after they had finished their college work and entered into service for the Master in the white harvest fields of earth.

You who have been following the missionary journeys of Brother and Sister Ridout will note with pleasure that in many places they are working with Asbury College students who have returned as missionaries to their own people, and of course it goes without saying and is well understood that a native of the Philippines, Mexico, China, Japan, or Korea who understands the customs of their own people knows at once how to present the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, in a way that will attract and win multitudes of souls.

For instance, there is Matias Vidal from Mexico who graduated from Asbury last June and is now laboring in his own country and is having large success in preaching the Gospel of the dear Son of God to his own people, and reports large numbers coming to Christ. Matias is a fine young man of deep convictions and a gracious experience of salvation in his heart, and one day while in my office and I had told him of some financial help that had come in in answer to one of my appeals through THE HERALD, he said, as he gripped my hand, with tears streaming down his cheeks, "Brother Lovejoy, you write them a letter and tell them that I mean to be true to Jesus and that I have the burden of my people on my heart and I am going back to Mexico to preach holiness without which no man shall see the Lord." And from letters which reach us we are convinced that he is pouring out his life in Mexico in prayer and personal work in order that his people in that Catholic-ridden country may know that there is life and liberty and hope through the shed blood of the dear Son of God.

Robert Chung, our Korean boy, who spent nine years in Asbury College, was with us recently. He is now some place on the wide Pacific sailing back again to his own Korean people. He brought us a message in the College chapel one morning and such a message, with his heart full and his soul burdened as he asked us here at the home base to hold him up to the Throne of Grace that God might again this year wonderfully use him in salvation work. You will recall that in one of my other letters to you I informed you that Robert, last year, saw something like 5,000 native Koreans bow at the altar of prayer in his revivals. Meetings were opened to him everywhere. He could not begin to fill the calls that came to him. He preached to thousands of his people in mass meetings who would stand for hours and into the night to hear him plead the cause of his blessed Lord and Savior, and then how they would rejoice as the Koreans would come forward and kneel at an improvised altar, and Robert says they just weep and moan and groan just like penitents do in America at our camp meetings. Robert has changed the words of "Bringing in the Sheaves" to a little chorus that he sings to the Korean people, and it goes like this:

"All the world for Christ,
All the world for Christ,
We shall come rejoicing,
All the world for Christ."

Did any of you ever hear Robert sing this song? The Spirit of God surely comes upon him as he sings with his soul for his Lord and Christ.

And then, there is Eugenio Fernandez, the Philippine boy, who was sent to Asbury largely through the sacrifice of the Rosebud Mission of Richmond, Va. Eugenio also graduated last June and is now in the Philippines working with his own people. He will give a good account of himself and we look forward with confidence to hearing some fine reports of soul winning as he goes in and out among his people.

Betty Hu, our Chinese girl, who was sent to us by Miss Jennie Hughes from the Bethel Interdenominational Mission at Shanghai, China, is now back in her home land. Dr. Ridout has just visited that Mission and finds Betty on fire for God and doing splendid service in the Mission School teaching and laboring with the little native Chinese children. You know, dear readers, she can help them so much because she, herself, was trained in the Mission before coming to Asbury and now returning to China to the same Mission from which she came she is able to do a work that an American missionary would be unable to do.

I could go on and tell you of many others who have been helped and supported financially in Asbury College by the gifts of the holiness people who read THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, but I must not take up any more space at this time, but I will write you again sometime during the year. You who have contributed to the support of these foreign students, won't you breathe a prayer for them now? Every dollar that you have invested in them will pay big dividends in souls here and now and go on bearing larger dividends throughout an endless eternity.

At this time, we are especially in need of funds for the foreign students who are with us this year. We take them on faith and depend upon the freewill offerings of Gods people to furnish the funds for their stay in Asbury. If you have a few dollars of tithe money on hand today, I do not know of any place where you could place it that would count more in soul winning than in our for-ign students in Asbury College. Send your check to C. A. Lovejoy, Business Manager, Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., and mark it for the foreign students' account and I will see that it is properly applied to that fund. God bless you and reward you for all that you do in the name of his dear Son, Jesus Christ our Savior.

THE ENORMITY OF SIN.

REV. E. E. WOOD.

Sin is no small thing. To live under its domination is slavery. Its power over humanity is far above the human for it is a monster of the most pronounced type. Sin is malignant and deadly. Some seem to think it is a little ignorance that proper training and education can remove. They forget that some of the worst characters in society are the most cultured and seemingly refined. Many of our worst criminals are graduates of colleges and universities. All they have gotten from greater knowledge is an increased cunning in the art of wrong doing. Sin is not merely an overhanging cloud shadowing the souls of humanity that an ascending sun will scatter. Rather it is a black cloud of impending wrath that will cover the transgressor through all eternity. It takes more than an operation on the skull of a bandit to cure his proclivities to evil. It cannot be cured by establishing a clinic and by a process of examination.

Some declare that to mingle with society will banish the evil or to enter into athletics or become a musician. It is evident that the advocates of these methods have never made an honest effort to get rid of it. You can train an animal, especially a monkey, to do some wonderful things, but you cannot change his animal nature. As soon as the period of performance is over he is a monkey still and will act out his nature. You can clean up a pig and make him look very respectable but when you take him for a walk you must not lead him near a mud hole or all your labor will be lost. Some try to locate sin in the nervous system. Oh, how much wrong doing is laid to a state of bad nerves! My friend, you cannot get rid of sin by taking a vacation. Sin will follow you to the most ideal spot and also home again. Sin is a disease that not even death will remove. As bad as they are sin is more than a brain storm or a nerve explosion.

Sin can only be located deeper down than any of these mentioned things. It lies in the very vitals of life and requires the combined strength of God and man to combat and destroy. In its inbred form it is like a deadly serpent coiled in the crib with your precious babe. It may be small but it grows in strength and size as the child develops. It may be suppressed and kept down to some extent, but one needs only to look at the most depraved characters to see something of its nature in those who do not curb its vicious tendencies. See the mighty struggle Paul had with this monster as recorded in the seventh of Romans. He speaks of his actual transgressions and adds—"It is no more I that do it but sin that *dwell*eth in me." Sin is treason of the most pronounced type both against God and his government. The sinner—whether in church or out—is a traitor to God and the kingdom. Sin is the only thing in the universe that God hates. His wrath is against it like a shoreless sea of vengeance. Sin is the extreme peril of humanity everywhere. It is far more to be dreaded and shunned than any contagious disease known to flesh. Disease kills the body and ceases its work at death but sin kills beyond the tomb. Sin is as old as the race and as universal. No tribe or nation has been found that was not suffering from this malady and in some form of faith trying to find release. The facts are sin bestrides the earth as an infinite and

SPIRITUAL LOCATION.

Rev. Joseph H. Smith.

"WHERE ART THOU?"

HERE has been placed upon my mind a text that was suggested to me a year or two ago by one of our quite young preachers writing to me for some suggestions. Have had a touch of what the prophets called a "burden" for this message. The old-time and the typical Friends' ministers speak of the same thing as a "concern"—"the Lord had given him a concern." He had a special concern as to a particular message.

"Where art thou?" You recall that is God's own question. You will be surprised when I tell you I was in a large church lately, and among the many happy results was the conversion of a deeply penitent man—a man in middle life, evidently in fair circumstances. He came as an humble penitent—almost ran to the altar. He was very happily converted and expressed a desire to unite with the church at once. The pastor, when receiving him, asked him where he lived? He could give him the street, but could not tell him the number. "Can't give you the number, but I will send you that tomorrow." On reflection, we will suppose this man was not receiving any mail. He knew just where his home was, but had never noted the number.

I went from there to another minister for a longer term, and I inquired one after another, and one after another came to me, personally, and told me they "did not know where they were spiritually." "I can't tell," "I don't know where I am now." Now which was the worse; that man who did not know the number of his house, or this one who could not tell where he was spiritually? I have not found many students that I have touched and that touch me here; in fact, I have not found one that, when I said where are you? that they did not understand I meant educationally, and answered promptly—"Freshman," "Sophomore," "Junior," or "Senior."

Now I ask, "Where art thou," spiritually? I ask you not the number of your room. I ask you not the grade you are in at the college, but I ask you, brother, I ask you, where art thou? Where art thou? I think it will not only require much reflection to settle in every one of our minds the importance of acquaintance with ourselves. Of our own location in the spiritual world or in relation to the spiritual world. I think that it will not weaken any one's faith if I declare that it is imperative that we have a certainty, an assurance, and full acquaintance, at least, with our location and our relationship to God in particular. This is not a mark of selfishness. It is not by some fancy of ours that we adopt geographical and historical references to illustrate spiritual things; they are so used by inspired apostles. Paul showed that in crossing the Red Sea they were baptized. That, in the partaking of the water that came from the rock, they partook of Christ. He uses the Experience of Canaan, by Joshua, as a type of entrance into the rest that remains to the people of God. So I stop at Egypt as I ask Where art thou? You remember that the experience of the Israelites in Egypt was at first an experience of pleasure, and according to their desire. There was given to them the land of Goshen. They had great plenty and were filled with pleasure and gratification; but directly there came a "Pharaoh that knew not Joseph" and their Egyptian experience soon degenerated into servitude—suggesting to us that though sin has its pleasure period, there soon follows bondage to appetite, bondage to pleasure, bondage to habit, till at length one comes under the cruel dominion of the world—torture of hardships, tasks that cannot be met and burdens that cannot be borne until worldly men and women over this land everywhere are coming to despair. In every day's paper are seen records of instance after instance of men and women that have spent their time and held their location in Egypt until life has become unbearable; the roll of the suicides, and the roll of the utterly desperate that have nothing to live for is appalling and enlarging. Where art thou?

But now we press on, over that cry, that murmur in their distress until the heavens were rent and God heard their prayers and sent deliverance. You remember the Paschal Lamb? You remember the night of Exodus? You remember the soon passing of the Red Sea? Then you remember the march with happy tread to the tune and time of Miriam's song resounding freedom from the dominion of sin. Here a Red Sea has separated us from the Pharaoh that sought to destroy or to bind our lives. Miriam's song seems always the echo to me of a "Happy day when Jesus washed my sins away." To rapid step they marched to Miriam's tune and soon it was not long until they came to Kadesh-Barnea. Where art thou? Are you in happiness of a soul set free? Are you marching to tunes and times of triumph? The distance between the Red Sea and Kadesh Barnea is short. The time between John's ministry and that of Jesus was short. The time between one's justification and one's sanctification is abnormal if it is long-drawn out. Now, Where art thou? Are you, I say, in the progress of justification? Are you in the joy and happiness of a soul delivered from Egyptian bondage? Hast thou come to Kadesh Barnea? Where art thou? We are now getting to where the question of our life-time's location. Very probably this is to be settled at this crisis and the forces seem arrayed against us ten to two. Ten to two of our people, then the giants of the land, and the walls and the doubts and the fears. I say much depends now on what answer we give as to our location from this juncture. Here are two faithful spies bidding us to go over and enter the land of promise, but alas, the great hosts have entered the wilderness. Where art thou? In the wilderness they lost a great measure of their power and the dominion that they had received in their Red Sea deliverance. They lost—one loses a great measure of resistance when he comes up to the call of a full salvation and draws back. And so we see them hankering after some of the old gratifications of the Egyptian life. Where art thou? Now murmuring, now sin, idolatry, fornication, etc. See!! But Oh, I see two men who followed the Lord fully though they are still with the wilderness crowd.

Heaven looked down and saw an apostle getting hurried, and as though he would seem to record that all the people did sin and follow their ways to death in the wilderness. But the Spirit held his hand and had him write: "Howbeit, not all." Caleb and Joshua were there with the wilderness crowd yet they themselves were following the Lord. Where art thou? Maybe following their teacher, etc., but there they are—two men that God can count on. They never did become come-outers. They stuck to the wilderness and the wilderness crowd until a new crop came and then they led them into the Promised Land. Where art thou? Taking your stand firm and faithful? Yes, you say, but I feel as though I were a needle lost in a haystack. But when Christ comes his coming is a magnet and will draw all needles out of the haystack.

I am looking next to where Moses is. Moses, representative of the law, is viewing the landscape. Where art thou? Are you where you see the prospect, you see the promise, you have a view of God's great beauties or bounties, and of the Canaan Land of full salvation, but stop with the view? Simply say how delightful and how alluring it is and all that, but you stop on PISGAH'S SUMMIT! Where art thou? Wait now a minute until we go over. Here is REUBEN and GAD and the half tribe of MANASSEH. They camp and settle and receive their lot on the other side of the Jordan, content with their own lot outside of Canaan. They are true to its doctrine, orthodoxy. They are theologically true, but are not actually and experimentally in. Where art thou? There are two instances in our New Testament where the name Jesus occurred for Joshua's name. Both mean Savior. And it seems rather happy that it is so. Our Joshua is Jesus. The Captain of the Lord of hosts is our JOSHUA, and he brings them "clean over." That is a scriptural expression. Where art thou? Clean over? Are you clean over this Jordan where you actually possess the Canaan inheritance of God's people, or are you back with Gad and Reuben and half of the tribe of Manasseh, or are you up with Moses on Pisgah's Summit, or are you down there with wilderness dangers and defeats? Where art thou? See CALEB! See him blazing his way, winding up to that mountain top, and see him when he has conquered all those alien forces. See him come proudly to Joshua, saying, "Give me this mountain." That is my ideal. Oh, not camping near the crossing, but aspiring to the eminence. Caleb comes giving God the glory and saying, "Joshua, here I am. My natural strength does not abate. I have come to claim the inheritance that thou didst promise me: Give me this mountain." Where art thou?

You said something about our spiritual location. Reason for that is that the objective has gained over the subjective; in our day civilization over salvation.

When God spoke the words of the text, you know to whom he spoke it. God came down and looked for Adam—and he had to call for him. ADAM, WHERE ART THOU? He said he was ashamed. Maybe that is the reason that you may not know for certain where you are in your relationship with God. Maybe something has made you ashamed to come too close to the presence of God. Another reason is that we may have gotten away from the word. Got something on a near equal plain. The word is the only thing that can locate us. It is sharper than any two-edged sword. It is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Then again the Holy Spirit when grieved, when quenched, leaves us to our own limited area of ourselves. Self-justification is not divine acquittal. Sins forgotten are not sins forgiven. Absorption in other things, neglect, keeps us from drawing face to face with God. You can get your location only from God. See where we are. If in Egypt, find deliverance. If across the Red Sea, let us shout his praises. If in the wilderness Church, let us stand true as Caleb and Joshua in our testimony. And say do I sense it right, that there are some who are on Pisgah's Summit who see the land but who, bound by your legalistic limitations, have not come into the full faith and liberty of the gospel? Get located and find a Joshua to bring you 'clean over.' Let us get the certificate up to date that we have crossed the Jordan and are now into Canaan, and happy art thou if you find that you are not only in Canaan, but are out scaling some mountain and, if so, let us file up and possess the land. Come to our Joshua and say, "Give me this mountain." For we are promised a deed to all the land we put our foot on here.

MR. DURANT'S PHILOSOPHY.

REV. W. G. BENNETT.

HE noted philosopher, Will Durant, has been delivering lectures to the Michigan State Teachers' Association at their different Assemblies over the state, in which he has exalted the French infidel Voltaire as the great liberator of independent thinking, and hinted that if Christianity wishes to continue to exist she must "hug up close to the theory of evolution."

I have not read Mr. Durant's philosophy; but I understand from some intelligent observers who have read it, that he has written a work on philosophy that entitles him to a place in the front ranks of modern philosophic writers.

Not having read Mr. Durant's philosophy, I will not attempt to criticise it; but, I understand that he tells of a conversation that took place between him and his little daughter that is both very touching and significant. The child is reported to have said to him, "Papa, is there a God? And are there angels that care for and watch over us?" The great philosopher replied, "Daughter, I do not know." The child was silent but busy scribbling on some paper. After she had gone about her play, Mr. Durant read what she had been writing. She had written down, "Well, if I were God, I would make a God and angels to watch over us."

Now, the significant thing about this incident is, that Mr. Durant's previous reply to his daughter's question would imply that he had left both the childlike faith of his little daughter, and had left or never had possessed the more intelligent faith of a child of God who believes in the God of divine revelation, who has spoken to man through the Holy Scriptures. And from this and other statements he made, to which we will now refer, we infer that Mr. Durant's philosophy belongs to that class of philosophic writings of men who groped their way in darkness without God, rather than to the class of Christian philosophic writers who believed in a personal God and divine revelation.

Mr. Durant refers to the noted French infidel, Voltaire, whom he exalts as an emancipator who struck the shackles from humanity, and taught men the art of independent thinking. But does this great man expect us to believe that, up to the time of Voltaire, all men were slaves and vassals, either too dumb or too cowardly to think for themselves? If he does, then he has implied that the intelligent, educated class of teachers he was addressing, were too ignorant to be acquainted with history before the days of Voltaire.

Mr. Voltaire was truly a man of courage, whatever else we may say of him. But he took the condition of the Catholic Church in the age in which he was living, sunk as it was at that time in superstition, divorced almost entirely from Christian ethics, selling men the privilege to sin, its ministry dictating to political leadership, and raved at these abuses of the Christian church, supposing he was flinging his javelins at Christianity itself. Right here, we would like to ask Mr. Durant whether it was the infidel philosophy of his hero, Voltaire, or the work of reformers like Martin Luther, George Fox, John Calvin, John Knox, and John Wesley that is responsible for the great change in the teaching of the church and the marvelous advance in Christian civilization that has taken place since the days of Voltaire. And, we might further ask, "Does it not seem passing strange that infidels like Paine, Hume, Bolingbroke, Ingersoll and many others we might mention clear down to modernists like Shailer Matthews, or Harry E. Fosdick, should declare themselves the only independent thinkers when they all have followed closely the ravings of Mr. Durant's hero, Voltaire?" These men, wide apart in some respects, have been a unit on the following:—There is no God other than man's own conception of God; the inspiration of the Bible is a farce; sin has no reality only in the conscience of men; the atonement of Christ is a mere figment of orthodox theology; conversion is a delusive notion of an excited imagination; immortality is only a delusive hope; and, the judgment day and future punishment are phantoms used to scare ignorant people into obedience to priestly dictation. On this creed of unbelief, they are all practically agreed. You will notice all of these statements are a negation, or, what they do not believe. "Where," we ask, "is the independent thinking here?" Or, "Where is there any call for thinking at all, except it be to attempt to meet the objections brought against their philosophy by orthodox theologians?" Constructive philosophy requires intelligence; but no intelligence is required to believe a negative philosophy, if it can be called a philosophy at all. "What is there in all this," we ask, "that can produce an intelligent conscience which is the basis of character and essential to civilization?" All the unbelief of all the ages has never contributed one iota of assistance to the building up of civilization.

We further note that this great philosopher advises Christianity to hug up close to the theory of evolution if she wishes to maintain herself under present conditions. Good advice, no doubt, for it fell from the lips of a great philosopher. But, will somebody please vouch for Mr. Durant before we are asked to receive his advice at face value on so important a question as he here proposes to give advice upon?

From the answer he gave to his little daughter relative to God, and from his apparent desire to hobnob with infidels and modernists in his teaching, we presume that Mr. Durant is an evolutionist. When great thinkers leave God out of their philosophy, it is perfectly natural for them to turn to the theory of evolution in attempting to account for the creation. Among the many theories by which men in all ages have attempted to account for creation and leave God out, there is none, perhaps, that has attracted the attention of scientific investigators as has the theory of evolutionary creation. So it is no reflection upon a man's intelligence to speak of him as an evolutionist. However, while there are some known facts which, to the minds of the investigators, seem to confirm the theory of evolution, there is not, in all the realm of investigation, one single, established fact of science that proves the theory to be scientific. And men of science know and generally acknowledge this to be true. When everything has been said in favor of evolution that can be said, it must still be admitted that it is only a speculative theory, and has never passed into the realm of an established fact of science. It is quite common for evolutionists to affirm that everything in scientific investigation confirms the theory of evolution; but when you ask them for just one fact that proves it, you have them badly embarrassed for they can not produce the fact. Their supposed proof is like the college professor who, when asked how they could tell the age of the rocks, said they proved it by the fossils embedded in the rocks. But when asked, later, how they proved the age of the fossils, having forgotten his former statement, he said, "By the age of the rocks in which they are embedded." Evidently, this professor thought it was a poor rule that would not work both ways.

Mr. Durant certainly must know that Christianity has gained her present standing, and brought the now civilized nations of the earth to their present condition of civilization, by her simple faith in the infallible Word of God. If Mr. Durant does not know that the teaching of the modern theory of evolution is directly contrary to the teaching of the Bible, then he had better stop his studies in philosophy sufficiently long to take a course in Bible study; or else, post himself in the teaching of evolution before he presumes to assume the role of prophet and instruct Christianity in what to do to preserve herself in the earth. Let Mr. Durant continue to instruct in philosophy; but, before he assumes the place of prophet, we would advise that he find an altar erected to the God in whom we live and move and have our being, and stay there until he becomes acquainted with the God who cares for us, and who created angels that watch over us. And then, study his Bible until he becomes intelligently informed as to its contents; by which time, he will know that evolution and the Bible can not occupy the same pulpit or sit in the same pew at the same time.

Mr. Durant, as lecturer to the faculties of our educational institutions, has one of the greatest opportunities to affect our civilization that any man could desire; but he has, also, a grave responsibility. Personally, I believe he desires only the good of humanity; but he has made the same mistake that many other great philosophers have made, the mistake of trying to reason out life's problems without the aid of divine revelation, and solve the question of God and destiny by the aid of the reasoning faculties. The Bible distinctly says, "The world by wisdom knew not God." Men find God like they find their wives and children, not by the light of reason, but by the way of the affections. Mr. Drummond said the whole agnostic literature was one long commentary on the statement of the Bible, that "The carnal mind receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." And, when Mr. Durant attempts to give religious instruction, he is entirely out of his sphere until he receives a knowledge of spiritual things through the experience of the "new birth." And, for him, wielding the mighty influence as he does with those who are to instruct the rising generation, to suggest that evolution rather than the Bible is to become the source of instruction in a Christian civilization, is a very dangerous venture.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER IV.

THE SERENADE.

HUSTON made himself as comfortable as possible, deposited his baggage about him, and drew from his side pocket the little Bible his mother had given him, and which he had pledged her on her death-bed he would read a portion each day. He had kept the pledge. Usually he read a chapter before breakfast every morning, but he had been so busy this day that he had waited until he pulled out of the little city toward the far west. Having read the chapter he closed his eyes and meditated. He had been sincere in his religion, but after all he had known nothing of self-sacrifice, or cross-bearing. His devotions had been regular, but very formal, his church life was a very pleasant social pastime. There had been nothing of a deep spiritual communion with Christ. In fact his religious thinking put Annie Gray first, a successful ministry second, Jesus being a sort of means to an end. He thought this over long and seriously, with not a little of humiliation. He began to realize that he had been trying to have God serve him, rather than giving himself to the service of God. And now, when his chief idol was broken he was about to throw away his faith, and refuse to have any God at all. A tear trickled down his cheek, as he reflected to himself that in Christianity Christ must come first, and that the misfortune and disappointment of life must bring us the closer to him, who must be Lord of all. That in the very nature of things Jesus cannot take the second place. He realized that while he had been regular at Sunday school, and Epworth League meetings, most always attending the preaching services, and ever ready to help and participate in the young people's entertainments, always having a delightful time because of the presence of Annie Gray; he had known nothing of a real consecration. He had never made anything approaching a supreme denial of self, for the sake of his Master.

It is quite possible that there is a very large per cent of church members much older than Houston whose religion is of the same character as his, who seek to use God rather than giving themselves to God for service, for witnessing, for cross-bearing, and if need be suffering for Christ's sake.

Canton, the little city where our story originates, was just the right size for a flourishing trade in gossip, and at every fireside and supper table in the little city, the one subject of conversation was the marriage of Annie Gray to the young banker, and Huston's leaving for the west. Practically everybody in the town had known for years that Huston and Annie Gray were lovers, and that it was only a question of time when they would be married. Now the feeling was very general that she had thrown Huston overboard in order to marry the young banker who was the son of a wealthy father. Nine out of ten of the people discussing the subject condemned Annie most heartily. And they all laughed with great glee over the runaway horse, the young bridegroom's leap for life, and Huston's bravery in risking his life to stop the frightened horse. Poor Hendricks was the subject of ridicule and amusement at almost every supper table in the town.

Hendricks turned the runaway horse over to Judge Gray's colored man, and he and Annie walked home in silence. He tried to explain to her that the frightened horse had jerked the reins out of his hands, and that he had leaped out of the buggy with the hope of catching the reins and stopping the horse.

Annie remained silent but appeared to be a bit skeptical with regard to his motive in leaping. When they got up to Judge Gray's mansion she went at once to her room and Hendricks went to the barn to look after any damage that had occurred to the horse or vehicle, and when he came back to the house he found his young bride with her face buried in her hands weeping bitterly. He tried to comfort her, but she insisted that they had become subjects of ridicule in the entire community. She said she wished that some arrangement could be made for him to get away from the bank, and that they could make a trip East, some place, any place, until the gossip about their marriage, the runaway horse, and Huston's going West could somewhat die down. It really did look like a pity that their honeymoon should have been so clouded.

The next morning every one who came into the bank wanted to know if he was badly bruised up by his leap from the buggy. They extended the conversation on the unpleasant subject by suggesting to Hendricks that at least nine times out of ten it was far better to remain in a vehicle when the horse drawing it ran away, than to undertake to jump out. It was remarkable at the number of his customers who had had runaway experiences, all of them had remained in the vehicle and escaped without hurt. One loud-mouthed man said, "Just look at your wife! She kept her seat and was unhurt, but my! she's the daughter of old Judge Gray. She is as brave as Julius Caesar. You never catch any of that family jumping out of a buggy when a horse runs away."

Groups of little school boys during the morning came in the bank and looked at Hendricks with keen and amused interest. They were not just positive that he was the hero of the "high leap," and Hendricks could hear them asking each other as they pointed their fingers at him, "Is he the guy that jumped out of the buggy and left his wife?"

We have gotten a little bit ahead of our story, and must go back to the evening of the runaway. There was silence at the supper table in the home of Judge Gray. After Annie and her husband retired to their room he failed after many efforts to draw her into conversation. Finally she picked up a book, one of Victor Hugo's novels, and gave her entire attention to the story she tried to get interested in.

Hendricks walked about the house, out into the yard, and came back to the room to find his young wife still engaged in reading.

At ten o'clock they were startled to hear at the front door of the mansion a burst of music. Several horns and violins. They went to the window and could discern in the starlight that the front yard was well filled with college boys, who had come up to give them a serenade. It was a real comfort both to Hendricks and Annie that the students thought enough of them to pay them this compliment. There were cornet solos, violin solos, beautiful old songs by quartette and sometimes the whole body of students joined in. They sang, The Last Rose of Summer, Carry Me Back to Old Virginia, Old Kentucky Home, Nellie Gray, and several other of the beautiful old songs. They were really coming to feel quite comfortable and pleased with themselves, when to cap the climax and close the entertainment of the evening a quartette commenced singing,

"A young banker came to stay,
It was just the other day,
And he married Annie Gray.
They went out to drive in the evening,
And the fool horse ran away,
And the banker leaped hay,
And he left his Annie Gray."

An old lover came along,
And his hands were good and strong,
And he seized the fleeting steed,
And made his jaw bone bleed,
But he saved Annie Gray
For the banker."

There was much more of this kind of jumble, frequently interrupted by loud cheering. Annie leaped up, closed the windows, broke into tears and insisted that she could not, and would not, remain in the town. Hendricks tried hard to comfort her, and assured her that this would all soon be forgotten, but she refused to be comforted. After his morning experience at the bank when Hendricks went up home to dinner he was quite of Annie's opinion that they should get out of town for the present. He told Judge Gray of some important business he had in New York City, and that they could kill two birds with one stone by making a honeymoon-business trip to New York. The Judge not only gave his consent, but handed to Hendricks a good roll of bills to pay the expenses of the trip.

The town thoroughly enjoyed the opportunity for an extensive and continued riot of gossip. They talked and laughed to their hearts content over the dropping of Huston for the young banker, the runaway, Huston to the rescue, and his flight to the far west. There were many prophecies that Annie would see the day that she would regret her course of action. Not a few of Huston's friends prophesied that he would some day be a Bishop. The mass of the people were not disposed to look kindly upon the young banker and bridegroom. They were of the opinion that he valued himself far above his real worth.

I shall not presume to bore my readers with any extensive philosophizing on love affairs in general, or hasty marriages in particular, but it is quite possible that first loves are the best, and most enduring. A large per cent of divorces are the result of short acquaintances and hasty marriages, without either of the contracting parties really knowing the other. When boys and girls in school growing up in the same community fall in love, attend school together for years, become thoroughly acquainted, cultivate and carry on their first love to happy marriages there is a foundation of confidence, of understanding, and of genuine affection which binds and cements two lives into one.

Many flirtations and a variety of love affairs is a waste of affection, it destroys confidence, and often leaves memories which contribute nothing to the genuine happiness of married life.

Huston's train was hurrying on toward Memphis and he was thinking deeply. He knew nothing of the gossip, the comment, the serenade, and the sudden arrangements for the eastern trip which were going on in the little city he had left behind him. He did know that his heart was wounded deeply. The wound might be healed, but the scar would remain forever. There was a little incident awaiting him in Memphis which would make quite a contribution to his happiness of which he knew nothing.

menacing spectra. Everywhere it goes it waves the black flag of open and defiant rebellion in a most open and defiant manner. Sin blasts and crushes every tribe and nation known. It is unspeakably awful to have any taint of sin. It is a dreaded leprosy of the immortal spirit. If sin is retained in heart and life it will eventually eat away every virtue, blight every beauty, and canker every faculty. Sin dwarfs every energy. It carries in its brain the unquenchable fire and in its heart the undying worm. But, "If we walk in the light as he is in the light we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." John 1:7.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

MRS. E. STANLEY JONES' LETTER.

Dear Friends:—I do want to thank you for the way you have been upholding us by your prayers and financial help this year.

There have been times when I felt that physically, I could not carry on. And then there would come an influx of strength that would carry me through the day and I knew someone had been praying.

There have been times when it seemed that money was an absolute necessity for his work's sake and the box was empty. Not only that, but there were bills unpaid and obligations that could not be met. And then the home mail would come with a check and I knew that he had put the burden on someone's heart even before I prayed.

What a reservoir of power there is in earnest prayer!

Mr. Jones is still out of India. He reports that his meetings in South America were greatly blessed of God. The pastor of the American church in Buenos Aires wrote me, "The work here will never be the same since your husband has been here. There has come a great enriching to all our lives. For this we are grateful."

Mr. Jones is now back in the States where he will be speaking under the direction of the Mission Board during the winter. We had hoped to have a family reunion at Christmas but it does not seem possible. If only the church knew the blessedness of giving there would be no need to be stirred up ever so often.

Some one wrote me recently, "I wonder what you do all day. Could you outline a day's work?"

Well, days differ: but as far as I can remember, today has been a rather typical day and it has been like this.

5 A. M. to 6 A. M. Awoke on the roof, looked up at the sky and asked the Lord for help and guidance for the day. Had my bath and a cup of tea and a slice of toast and read a little from the Word as I ate. Made some boric lotion for a village woman who brought me her baby with sore eyes. Showed her how to use it. Took some onion seed to the garden and told the men in charge where to plant it.

6 A. M. Took prayers with the boys. Inspected the boarding house. Wrote an order for rice and salt and sent a man to the grain merchant with it. Found two boys in the sick room and investigated cause and gave each a dose of castor oil. Went into class rooms to see who was absent and why.

7 A. M. Returned to the bungalow as the health officer was waiting to see if we wanted cholera inoculations. Mail came and I answered two business letters. Village man: "My baby has had fever for five days. What shall we do?" This reminds the blind man who pulls the pankah to keep me cool, or perhaps I should say cooler, when I have time to sit under it! "My toe pains me very much." I look and find the nail gone and a festering sore. Clerk, "Will you please take these fees from day pupils and sign the receipts?"

8 A. M. A woman who was baptized recently, threw her arms around my feet and begged me to let her come to school long enough to learn to read. A Mohammedan official calls and asks if I have anything as good to read as "The Imitation of Christ" which he has just finished.

9 A. M. Investigated a bad odour from a school drain. Took a sick woman to the hospital. Started to write out a new time table for school as we will soon change from morning school to day school. Matron came with complaints against a teacher.

10 A. M. Took the carburetor off the car to clean it. Had breakfast.

11 A. M. An English lady who was in great trouble called for sympathy and advice.

Noon. Hot and tired. Laid down. Got up three times and decided to stay up. The cook wanted money for butter. The sweeper wanted a new broom. The mail man brought a C. O. D. parcel.

1 P. M. A note from the doctor saying that he would examine all the boys at 4 P. M. A teacher reports that the chalk is all gone. A father who wants to put his boy in school but fears Christian influence came to talk it over.

2 P. M. The pastor came to ask about some affairs connected with the church. A Hindu called to borrow a book. He is a well educated man and getting interested in Christianity. He said, "After I read the gospel a while, I want to go out and help some one. I want to tell them of this good God. When I read the Vedas or the Puranas I never feel this way. Only the story of Christ affects me like this."

3 P. M. Cut out a dozen pair of pajamas and sent them to Class four for their sewing period. Had lunch.

4 P. M. The Indian doctor came and we went over the physical condition of each boy. Found one case of itch and various other minor ailments. Wrote out his recommendations and ordered medicine.

5 P. M.—Boy Scouts Commissioner called to see when I would have time to attend a meeting of the executive committee. He said the boys from the Mission school were the very brightest of all the boys who were enrolled as Scouts. He said, "What does your religion do to the boys? They have no business to be so superior, considering the fact that they are from our lowest classes."

An Indian Official called. He said, "I feel very discouraged over my country. Things change so slowly."

Discovered an Indian "holy man" going into the hostel. Ran after him and got him out and headed for the gate. He was dressed in a patch of cloth about the size of my hand, tied on with a string and his body was smeared with ashes.

6 P. M. A boy was brought to me for discipline for swimming in the river without permission. A man came to borrow 30 cents. A woman to beg for work. Grain merchant delivers rice and wants his pay. I make out his bill and get his signature and file the voucher.

7 P. M. An early dinner because I am alone and I want to get at the pile of unanswered letters on my desk and send a note to the little daughter away in Boarding School. And now I shall soon climb the stairs and look up at the stars and commit the day to him. Of course I have not got down everything that happened today but it is a rather brief outline of a day that is not unusual.

Someone asked me what U. P. meant in our address. It stands for the United Provinces (of Agra and Oudh.)

And now my evening is gone. As I fold these letters and put them in the envelopes it will be with a little prayer for each individual to whom they go. May his blessing be yours!

In his glad service,
Mabel L. Jones.

HARRODSBURG, KENTUCKY.

Harrodsburg is the oldest town in Kentucky. The Methodist Church there celebrates its one hundredth anniversary this year. Rev. E. K. Arnold, one of the outstanding pastors of the Kentucky Conference, is now pastor. This was our third time with Brother Arnold and we can say that we have never labored with any one who carries a greater burden for the salvation of souls and who prays more. He came to our room once and twice daily where he had long seasons of praying together. We were entertained in the parsonage home and had delightful fellowship with his splendid family.

The revival was a good one. The attendance was good, the fellowship and co-operation of other churches was good, the majority of our Methodist people stood nobly with us in the battle and the Lord graciously blest, which was best of all. The singing and music led by B. G. Grenfell, who was supported by a large chorus of singers and with pipe organ and piano presided over by Mrs. Alderson and Mrs. Arand, was good from the beginning to end. The young people, led by Grenfell, made big strides in numbers and interest and were of untold value to the meetings.

When the meeting was two weeks old—the time we expected to close—the church met with the Pastor and Official Board and requested that we continue longer. The third and last week was the best. Many souls sought and found pardon or purity at the altar and the whole spiritual tone of the membership was greatly lifted.

We found abiding results of the revival which Dr. H. C. Morrison held two years previous. There are some of the very "salt of the earth" spiritual folk in this church and they prayed and wept with us for victory. We had great times in our down-town store meetings, in the graded and high schools and at special services for both men and women. By running an extra week we lapsed into date for our next engagement so were delayed a day in starting. We are now in Youngstown, Ohio, in the Primitive Methodist Church where the fire is falling. Praise God for the best year in many in our revival work. We look to the New Year with hope and confidence.

O. H. Callis.

SCOTT CITY, KANSAS.

The Gaddis-Moser Evangelistic Party recently held a meeting at Scott County, Kansas, Methodist Church, Rev. O. R. Henderson, pastor. A fine people and good victory. 40 seekers the first Sunday, altar filled from that on closing with two full altars the last Sunday. We ministered to the High School and Grade School at their assemblies and had a good High School night at the revival.

At Hutchinson, Kansas, in P. H. Church, our second time there and best in attendance and conviction, Bro. Benjamin Brockman pastor. We found the church progressing nicely. Had some good victories here, closing with 17 at altar the last night and some seeking for the first time. We are called to the Calvary United Brethren Church in Hutchinson for next fall.

At Springfield, Mo., P. H. Church, Sisters Dice and Deardorff, pastors. God's Spirit was manifested in this meeting and, while not a great meeting in attendance, it was great in some outstanding cases of salvation and sanctification; 14 at altar the last night.

The last meeting for 1928 at Second P. H. Church, Cincinnati, Ohio, Rev. F. C. Sanholtz, pastor. A gradual increase of victory here, sprinkling now and then, climaxing in a downpour with 35 seekers the last night. Many new people came to this meeting, some of them getting to God and will be a permanent help to this growing work. This church has made a splendid record and is today in a healthy, growing condition. We ministered at the Sunday afternoon service at God's Bible School while in Cincinnati.

1928 was our best year, by far, in actual results, as well as in spiritual blessings, completing five years of labor as an evangelistic party engaging in 100 campaigns, among 16 religious denominations, entering 35 states, crossing the continent four times, travelling 90,000 miles, preaching 2250 sermons, singing over 5000 special songs, resulting in 10,000 people seeking God and 700 anointed and prayed with for healing of the body.

A folder describing our work from its beginnings, our progress and purpose with several pictures will be mailed on request. Let us look into the future with holy optimism. Revival fires are burning, Jesus is coming. We are in the most wonderful days of the age. Let us keep plenty of oil on hand and gather in all the sheaves possible for him.

COMMENDATION.

Here is a very interesting statement from the pastors of the eight co-operating churches in the Tioga Evangelistic Campaign in Philadelphia, Pa., last October.

"Having recently concluded a campaign of 'combination-method evangelism' under the leadership of the Rev. S. B. Goff, D.D., we are pleased to give this expression of our gratitude and to record our impressions of the effort. We found Dr. Goff a challenging leader and although most of the co-operating churches had used the visitation plan of evangelism in working their constituencies several times before, we were able to report a total of 386 decisions and church transfers as a result of the campaign.

May we call attention to what we consider to have been the strong points in our campaign.

1. Dr. Goff was exceedingly thorough in his plan and method of organization and was unstinting in his helpful suggestions as to advance work. In the visitation work especially, experience soon teaches one that it is what is done before the campaign begins that determines the eventual success. From this standpoint Dr. Goff left no stone unturned to give each church an opportunity to succeed to the fullest measure.

2. In his instruction of the workers, it would be hard to excel the wisdom, sanity and scriptural soundness of Dr. Goff's training. It made a deep impression and inspired some to attempt what otherwise they would have felt unable to do. While he laid the burden of responsibility upon the worker, he did not slight the work of the Spirit, but rather laid stress upon it, so that we were to feel that we were going where Christ's Spirit was opening the way.

3. In his handling of the matter of awakening the church member, Dr. Goff proved to be thorough and adroit. He emphasized decision through the Sunday schools, the renewal of vows and deeper consecration not neglecting also to launch a campaign of church attendance. Throughout the week of public meetings, this work was carried out upon a wholesome basis.

4. Eight churches of five denominations co-operated in our campaign, and it was widely advertised as being upon a community basis, with good results. In this interdenominational phase of the work, Dr. Goff left nothing to be desired. No denominational references were allowed to creep into the campaign and we were to lose sight of or divisions in working together to win souls and make Christ's influence felt in the community. We are left better able to work together than ever before.

5. Finally, reference must be made to the spirit of buoyant enthusiasm and the attitude of spiritual victory with which Dr. Goff led us in the task. They proved to be contagious. Because he worked with faith, we too were led to see visions of great good and to set our hearts toward victory."

In November we had another union campaign in Philadelphia with five churches co-operating in the Bethlehem Presbyterian Church. 232 were won to Christ and the Church; a large number of Christians were renewed and won to loyalty in church attendance through the home visitation and the evangelistic meetings. We are now in a fifteen-day evangelistic campaign in the Eighth Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Altoona, Pa. The home visitation is combined with the meetings and several persons have been won to Christ, and many non-attending members have been renewed and pledged to church attendance. In January we assist six churches in Williamsport, Pa., and will use the combined method of home visitation and evangelistic meetings.

Will be glad to send you a copy of the plan and terms. With best wishes for a good year,

Yours fraternally,
Samuel B. Goff.

Dr. G. W. Ridout's new book, "Revival Blessings" is full of matter of the most vital interest to soul winners. Do you want a history of the great Revivals? It is here together with chapter after chapter of the most vital matters on Revivals, Soul Winning and Evangelism. Dr. Ridout gave these lectures at Asbury College and there was a demand for their publication. Those who heard the lectures wanted the book. Here it is! We make this offer to preachers and evangelists. Send us One Dollar and after examining it if you do not want to keep it return it to us and we will give you your Dollar back.

Of course, you may resent the implications and exhortations of my letters to you; you can ridicule me if you choose, but I fear there awaits for you a fearful awakening when it will be too late to return to the life and ministry of your early days. It must be remembered that a church filled up with a membership of people who have not been regenerated are of the world, and the world will love its own. Worldly pleasures will be brought into the church; worldly ministers will get into the pulpit, lectures will take the place of gospel sermons, entertainments will take the place of revivals; all sorts of false teachers will come along, the seeds of skepticism will be sown broadcast and in the end, the hungry souls of a deceived people will go off after Christian Science, Russellism, Theosophy, and all kinds of false and deceptive speculations. They will be lost, and in the day of judgment God will require their blood at the hands of young men who have not been faithful in the proclamation of the saving gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation.

A Word from Dr. Morrison.

I asked Dr. Morrison what I should tell THE HERALD readers this week, and he said to tell them that he had gotten over the bronchitis, asthma and pleurisy, but the after effects had left his heart very weak, and it would take some time to recuperate sufficiently to be out of the hospital. He has been very patient and seems willing to wait until the physicians think it is safe to move him. He especially desires that prayer be kept up for his recovery, that his weak heart may be able to do its work properly. We sincerely appreciate the many letters of inquiry and solicitude that have come to us, and would have answered them but for the multiplicity of duties that devolve upon us at this time. Keep praying that he may soon be restored to his health and loved employ.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

"Thou art with me I know,
I feel the sweet flow
Of the sin cleansing wave's gladd'ning tide.
I am washed from my sin,
Made all holy within,
And in Jesus sweetly abide."

A SOLEMN OBLIGATION.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

WHEN two people have met, admired, and loved each other to the extent that they are willing to plight their lives to each other, the woman taking to herself the name of the man, and the man bestowing his name and all that it involves upon the woman, it is a transaction more serious and meaningful than the majority realizes.

Whatever may be the conduct of the woman the man has to share the stigma and disgrace, if the deportment be such as to result in such a calamity, and if the man fails in like manner to hold up his end of the contract, the wife has to suffer and face the embarrassment occasioned by his misconduct.

In the Bible we are compared to the bride of Christ; we take upon ourselves the name of "Christian," and it depends on our conduct, holy or unholy, whether we shall honor the name we have assumed, or bring upon it reproach. We have nothing to fear on our side, for the Christ who has condescended to own us as his bride, "knew no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." We may count on the One who was "tempted in all points like as we are tempted," to succor us when tempted, to sympathize with us in our perplexities, and to lift us up when we faint beneath the pressure of life's duties; but we need never fear that we shall be embarrassed by any failure on his part.

THE WORLD'S BIBLE.

Some one has said that Christians are the world's Bible; the ungodly do not read the Book, and all they know of the principles of our holy Christianity is from the lives of those who profess to follow Christ. If we fail to keep in the narrow way those who are watching us are not influenced by our lives and wonder, after all, if that is the best God can do for those who trust in him.

Annie Johnson Flint has the following poem which is apropos to the thought I have in mind:

"Christ has no hands but our hands
To do His work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in His way;
He has no tongues but our tongues
To tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help
To bring them to His side.

"We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's gospel;
We are the scoffer's creed;
We are the Lord's last message,
Given in deed and word;
What if the type is crooked?
What if the print is blurred?

"What if our hands are busy
With other work than His?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurements is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things His lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help Him
And hasten His return?"

Toward a Better World.

The above is the fascinating title of a book by Commander Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army. It is a volume of addresses that have in them the zest and fervor which have marked the heroic efforts of the Army in all its redemptive work for mankind. Ministers and teachers will welcome this wide variety of illustrations and ideas, and the laymen will find the sweet spirit of the book a genuine source of comfort, inspiration and interest. The book may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for $2.00.

The National Holiness Association

At a postponed meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness in Chicago in September some far-reaching changes were proposed for the purpose of making more effective the work of the Association for a greater extension of its influence. The results of the Committee's finding, looking to this larger program for the Association, were submitted for consideration to those in attendance and will be voted upon at the next annual meeting, May 7-12.

Asbury College is particularly happy in its plan for the entertainment of the National in May. We believe that this meeting should mark an epoch in the history of the organization and that all those who are interested in the promotion of Holiness throughout America and other lands will be glad to consider carefully the proposed changes which will be considered for adoption at this meeting.

The thought of the committee in drawing up the proposed changes was not in the least to alter the nature of the work of the Association, but rather open more avenues through which the plans and purposes of this time-honored body could be promulgated and made more effective.

It should be clearly evident to thoughtful Christian people everywhere that this age is anything but conducive to spiritual thinking and living. Never was there a more challenging opening for Full Salvation work than at this hour when the spiritual has been subordinated to the brazen and presumptuous claims of the material. If the National Association is to go forward to that high and lofty plane of service for which it was founded, there must be a re-awakening on the part of us all to the effect that only in united effort and unceasing endeavor can we hope to achieve that of which this age is so much in need.

We append the report of the committee for the earnest and prayerful consideration of our friends in the Holiness Movement throughout the nation:

"We beg to offer to the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness this memorandum proposing an important change in the modus operandi, with the petition that it shall be considered at the next annual meeting of the Association for adoption.

"Whereas, we are aware of the fact that the National under its present operation is failing to receive the hearty co-operation of certain factors quite essential to the Holiness Movement, and,

"Whereas, it is deemed desirable that every possible effort to maintain and promote interdenominational holiness, shall be better put forth by this association, we now therefore propose that a constitutional amendment shall be made embodying a committee of one hundred. This committee shall be made up of five sections as follows:

"Interdenominational holiness camp meetings, forty (40) committee men.
"Interdenominational holiness evangelists and preachers, twenty (20) committee men.
"Interdenominational holiness training schools and colleges, twenty (20) committee men.
"Interdenominational holiness missionaries, ten (10) committee men.
"Interdenominational holiness publications, ten (10) committee men.

"Whereas nominations of committee men by schools, publications, camp meetings, and missionaries are hereinafter mentioned, it is understood and agreed that such nominations must be ratified by the general committee, and if a name is presented in nomination that is not acceptable to the committee from the standpoint of personal character and reputation, or failure to align with the Interdenominational Holiness Movement, the committee shall refer back to the nominating body requesting that another nomination be made. It is specifically provided that each of the following schools and colleges shall nominate two representatives to serve on the committee of one hundred.

Asbury

Taylor University

John Fletcher

Chicago Evangelistic Institute

Cleveland Bible Institute

North Pacific Evangelistic Institute.

"Such other training schools and colleges that are strictly interdenominational in character, and place a major emphasis on holiness in accordance with the interpretation made by the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness shall be selected to nominate one or two, but not more than two committee men as heretofore provided.

"The following holiness publications shall nominate one representative each as a committee man:

The Pentecostal Herald

The Heart and Life

The Christian Witness

The Way of Holiness

God's Revivalist

"And such other publications as the committee shall determine.

"The Missionary Society of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness and any other missionaries that are under the control of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness, shall nominate not more than ten (10) committee men.

"The Camp Meetings that are strictly of an interdenominational holiness character and emphasis, a list of which shall be approved by the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness in regular session assembled, shall have the right to nominate one representative each as committee men. It is proposed that no camp meeting which does not place major emphasis upon interdenominational holiness preaching and teaching shall be included herein.

"The committee thereupon made up of not more than eight such committee men shall meet in executive session and nominate not more than twenty evangelists and preachers who place a major emphasis upon interdenominational holiness work. These evangelists and preachers are to be chosen from nominees who are not dominated by a single denomination, but who work in various churches, and who place a major emphasis upon scriptural holiness as interpreted by the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness.

"This committee of one hundred when its organization is complete, shall meet and elect committees to cover the various fields of activity for the promotion of interdenominational holiness. To the committee of one hundred shall be delegated all the powers now enjoyed by the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness.

"It is hereby proposed that the constitution of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness shall be amended to read as follows:

ARTICLE 5, SECTION A.

"The officers of this association shall consist of president, three or more vice presidents, executive secretary, treasurer, railroad secretary and auditor, all of whom shall be elected by ballot as provided in paragraph B.

Article D to be omitted.

ARTICLE E.

"The following words to be omitted, 'the officers of the association' and these words substituted therefore, 'the committee of one hundred.'

BY LAWS, SECTION 3.

"The word 'corresponding' to be omitted, and the word 'executive' substituted therefor.

"The words, 'the president, and secretary and treasurer, of the association with two other members to be nominated by the president and ratified by the executive council' to be omitted, and the words, 'the committee of one hundred' to be substituted therefor.

"The qualifications for membership as mentioned in Article 4, Section A, shall rule as a qualification for membership on the committee of one hundred. Membership in the committee shall cease and terminate upon failure to attend two consecutive meetings of the association save in case of disabling sickness, or absence from the United States.

"It is proposed that an amendment to the constitution shall be adopted as follows:

ARTICLE 5, SECTION B.

"Add the following sentence: 'The president shall not be eligible for office for more than four successive years.'

"All proper committees shall be selected out of the committee of one hundred.

"The plan of this memorandum and proposal is to make a working group who will attend the necessary meetings and be active in the promotion of interdenominational holiness.

"That all camp meetings which are now interdenominational and holiness in character shall be supported and encouraged in every possible way so to continue.

"That present evangelists in the field of the interdenominational type shall be supported and encouraged, and young evangelists entering this work shall be aided in finding openings and filling their slates.

"That the present publications shall be encouraged to continue their emphasis upon interdenominational holiness, and shall be aided in every possible way.

"That the present Missionary Society of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness shall be supported and built up and increased in its effective working.

"That the interdenominational holiness schools shall be endorsed and supported in every possible way.

"That these various activities shall be aided to co-operate one with the other.

"It is proposed that the president shall receive a purely nominal salary, providing, however, that all traveling expenses, and necessary expenses in the evangelistic campaigns shall be cared for.

"It is proposed that the executive secretary shall receive an adequate salary so that he can devote his entire time and effort to the work of the association. That he shall be provided with the necessary clerical assistance adequately to perform this work, and to maintain a central headquarters for the association.

"Committee men shall be elected for a term of one, two and three years respectively so that there shall be a continuing body of experienced committee men. It shall be provided that a committee man who shall for serious personal, moral, or doctrinal reasons become undesirable, to suspend such member and present to the committee of one hundred a proposal to terminate membership in the committee, which termination shall be effective when ratified by a two-thirds vote of the committee in executive session assembled.

"We submit this proposal for your consideration and request that you prayerfully study and discuss it and come to the annual meeting of the National next May ready to act. The Committee does in no way insist that this Plan must be adopted without changes. In fact individual members of the committee already have proposed alterations in detail and we trust all those interested will give their thought to such suggestions. We all agree, however, that the general plan should be adopted and ask that you make a conscientious examination of the Plan under the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

When William, late Emperor of Germany, came into the Emperorship, he immediately got in touch with the teachers in the graded schools. He imbued them with his dream of world rulership, and this was right on the theory of the survival of the fittest. When that generation grew to manhood, Germany was obsessed as a nation with the determination to rule or ruin the world. The most atrocious war of all human history was the result.

Mr. Nietzsche has worked out the philosophy that is inevitable if the theory of evolution were a fact of science. A philosophy directly opposed to the principle upon which our civilization is founded. The great fundamental of our civilization is that of individual rights. Our government exists for the protection and welfare of the individual. All this is said to be biologically wrong. According to the theory of evolution, the individual exists for the welfare of the state; that is the meaning of the survival of the fittest. Dog eat dog, and the strong are the fittest. This is the philosophy of evolution. The philosophy of Nietzsche is inevitable if the theory of evolution is correct. "Beyond the good and evil" means, that there is no good but the power to dominate and obtain whatever the will desires, no matter who dies in the struggle. And, that the only evil, is weakness that makes a man the under dog in the struggle for existence. If you doubt that this is inevitable to the evolution of the human race according to Mr. Darwin, read what he says on pages 149 and 150 of the "Descent of Man." If you think this is not up to date evolution, read "The New Decalogue of Science," a book fully up to date and widely read in scientific circles. The author describes Nietzsche who, according to Mr. Darrow made Babe Leopold a murderer, as the bravest soul since Jesus Christ. He says, "Evolution is a bloody business, but civilization has tried to make it a pink tea. Barbarism is the only process by which man has ever organically progressed. Civilization is the most dangerous enterprise upon which man ever set out." Lenine and Trotsky imbibed the philosophy of Nietzsche, and have given to poor half-civilized Russia a reign of terror. Dictator Mussolini is an evolutionist, and the world is breathlessly waiting the next move of Fascism, while in Italy, men who love liberty are cowed and subdued by his inhuman treatment.

Faith in the authoritative inspiration of the Bible gave to New England the kind of manhood that formulated the principles of Christian civilization upon which our government is founded. The theory of evolution taught in most of our schools and colleges is insinuating into the minds of our youth a philosophy of life and morals that, if allowed to go on to its consummation, will tear our civilization to shreds, pile our beautiful cities into heaps of debris, wreck our peaceful homes, and send our people fleeing to the woods and hills, to find a refuge in caves and dugouts where they can escape the knife of the assassin and the bomb of the insurrectionist. And yet, Mr. Durant would proclaim evolution as the savior of Christianity.

The noted historian Leckie, said, "What happened to Mr. Wesley in Aldersgate Street Mission, was of more importance in English history, than all of Pitt's victories on land and sea." While William E. Gladstone said, "The Wesleyan revival saved England from a revolution comparable to the French revolution!"

The great need of our times is not philosophers, proclaiming their unfounded philosophies, but prophets of God, proclaiming the verities of Divine revelation.

"Don't let it be said, too late,
For vain will your pleading be;
Be ready to enter the Pearly Gate,
While open it stands for thee."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

We are settling down for the duties of another year and I trust we have made resolutions for better living, and will be careful to keep them.

I came across the following "Seven Minds" the other day and thought it would be a good plan to give them to you, which, if observed, would help you to better living and more careful thought of those about you. The last one, especially, will lead you to a closer fellowship with the Master, which is the greatest thing in the world. Here they are:

Seven Minds.

1. Mind your tongue, do not let it speak hasty, cruel, unkind or wicked words.
2. Mind your eyes, do not permit them to look on wicked books, pictures or objects.
3. Mind your ears, do not suffer them to listen to wicked speeches, songs or words.
4. Mind your lips, do not let tobacco foul them; do not let strong drink pass them.
5. Mind your hands, do not let them steal, or fight, or write any evil words.
6. Mind your feet, do not let them walk in the steps of the wicked.
7. Mind your heart, do not let love of sin dwell in it. Do not give it to Satan, but ask Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour, to make it his throne.

Lovingly,

AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please sit over and let me have a little room in your band of boys and girls. This is the first time I have written to The Pentecostal Herald. Jewell Cline, I guess your first name to be Annie. Am I right? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E; it has five letters in it. If you think you have guessed it, please write to me and I will try to answer all letters I receive. I am a Christian.

Faonnie M. Tisdial.

Moark, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Iowa girl join your happy boys and girls? It has been a long time since I have written. I am still in the hospital and am being healed. The Lord will heal us if we only have the faith. I want all the cousins to pray for me. I see many letters from the dear old south. I am a Tennessee girl and like to see the letters from the boys and girls, not only from the south, but from everywhere. I will write a letter and tell you cousins about this place some time; it is a wonderful place. Would like to hear from all the cousins that care to write me, for I like to get letters as I am in the hospital, and the good letters mean so much to me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little country boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eight years old and live on a farm four miles from town. I go to church and Sunday school every Sunday. My school teacher is Miss Opal Smith. She sure is a fine teacher. Father takes The Herald and thinks it's a fine paper. I have two brothers and two sisters, one of my sisters is married. I go hickory nut hunting and sure do have some fun. I hope Mr. W. B. is out feeding his chickens.

Dulan Foster.

Rector, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I will write you a few lines for it has been about two years since I wrote to The Herald. There were a few who wrote to me, but could not answer them all. School started in September. I am in the eighth grade. My teacher is Alice Heath. She is a good teacher, I think. The other day in school she made two boys about ten to eleven years old stay in for smoking. I think that was the right thing to do. But she should have been a little harder on them for I do not believe in smoking for it is not good for you to smoke or drink. I belong to the M. E. Church. My teacher has us to give a Bible verse every Monday morning before school. Last year my sister Myrtle bought me a nice Bible, and I use it in school.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am seventy-four years of age now. I am an invalid. Some of you will remember I was wrecked and fell on the cab of an auto truck, Feb. 6, 1925. My back jerked in two. I have been in bed most of the time since. I am in a wheel chair from thirty minutes to two hours some of the days. Some of the cousins write me nice letters. I am a Christian and like to read The Herald. I endorse the piece, "Remember the Poor" on page 1, also Aunt Bettie's on page ten. Christian cousins who wish to write I will acknowledge same although I have to lie on my back to write. Please write me a big, newsy letter. I live in a small mining town which was dead till after Nov. 6.

Wm. M. Farley.

Rt. 1, Box 7, Granby, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you all by now? I love my Savior. As I was reading the cousins' page, I ran across Miss Helen McCulley's letter. Cousins, if we all were to try to do as the poem says, we would be ten times better off. It runs like this, I want to live in such a way, That when I'm dead someone will say, He was a friend to me indeed, And call to mind some kindly deed. I want to live a life so square, And treat my fellowman so fair, That all will be compelled to see The Golden Rule fulfilled in me. I want to live and bear in mind The record I shall leave behind, That every act of mine may prove That I tried to live and love.

This is my prayer:

Oh, heavenly Father, lead me in such a way that I may comfort some poor soul along life's way. Fill my heart with love divine, that I may live and love my fellowman, and that I may not lead some soul astray.

I try not to talk about any one, and when I do I tell them to their face and don't talk to their backs.

Ivan Harmon Hutson.

Box 636, Hamlin, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let the cousins move over and give a little space to a little Kentucky girl? I am twelve years old and in the fifth grade at school. I am four feet, four inches tall, have brown hair, brown eyes, and dark complexion, weigh 103 pounds. My birthday is June 8. Have I a twin? We have Sunday school at the Baptist Church at Preachersville, Ky. I go every Sunday I can. Mrs. Dave Anderson is my Sunday school teacher. As this is my first letter to The Herald I will not make it long. All of the cousins write to me and I will answer.

Stella Mae McQueary.

Rt. 4, Box 92, Stanford, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a boy from North Dakota join your happy band of boys and girls? Mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. We do not have a church here but we have Sunday school in the schoolhouse. I do not belong to any church but mother and two of my sisters belong to the Church of God. This state has cold winters and lots of snow and the summers are quite warm. I was fourteen years old June 27. Have I a twin? Can any of the cousins guess my middle name? It starts with H and ends with T, and has seven letters in it. As my letter is getting long will close, hoping to see it in print. I would like to receive letters from the boys and girls.

Arthur H. Smalley.

Rt. 1, Corinth, N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a reader of The Herald and enjoy it very much, and want to know if you would move over and make room for a little Illinois girl who would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. I have reddish golden hair and blue eyes. I have a very fair complexion. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E. I go to the

M. P. South Park Church and enjoy it very much. I see Mary Hudson most every Sunday. Will you and the cousins write to me?

Martha M. Dudley.

Rt. 2, Box 8, Canton, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a Carolina girl join your happy band? I am from South Carolina. I have black curly hair, cut the boyish bob, but I surely do hate it. I had so much hair until it gave me severe headaches. I have black eyes, weigh 87 pounds, height five feet, one inch, and am sweet sixteen. My birthday is May 11. Have I a twin? I will write a letter to the one who guesses my middle name. It begins with I and ends with E, and has five letters in it. My favorite hobby is corresponding and writing poems; oh yes, and going to church. I enjoy The Herald very much. I hope Mr. W. B. is having lunch when this arrives, as it is my first attempt. I have only one sister, five years old, and not any brothers. I would like to get letters from any of the cousins.

Gladys Britt.

Warrenville, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Colorado girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I live in Western Colorado, near Utah. I like to live in the mountains. This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. My mother takes The Herald. I am between nine and ten years old. My birthday is April 2nd. Have I a twin? I want you to guess my middle name. It begins with I and ends with L, and has six letters in it. I have three pets. My sister has been in bed since July.

Rt. 2, Grand Junction, Colo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for a Georgia cousin? I have been a reader of the dear old Herald for several years and to miss a copy I feel like I have lost something, and sure enough I have, for I do love The Herald and enjoy reading the cousins' letters. We should always try to please Jesus who gave his all to set us free. It is better to live humble and obedient to him here in this world than to find us unprepared and crying for mercy, only to find that he would not hear our cry. He has told us in his word that if we would humble ourselves in the sight of the Lord that he would lift us up. I want Aunt Bettie and all the cousins who know the Lord to pray for me that I may live closer to the Lord and love him more.

W. A. Bedgood.

Rt. A, Jesup, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you allow an eleven-year-old New York girl to join your happy band of cousins? My father and mother take The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald. Rev. T. H. Smith is our pastor, and he is full of the old-fashioned religion. During the revival meetings which were held here last winter my father, mother, sister and I were saved. Boys and girls, don't refuse God's call or he may leave you in sin. So do come to him now, you who are unsaved. Will some Kentucky girl or boy write me? Leaving you with this scripture, "Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrow or in the morning." Hoping that Mr. W. B. is sound asleep when this reaches Aunt Bettie, I am,

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you? I am just fine. I hope my letter gets in the paper. I am seven years old, and am in the third grade. This is my second letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. My father takes The Herald.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How is everybody? Do you have room for one more cousin? My last letter was printed so I thought I would write again. I enjoy reading The Herald every week. Aunt Bettie, you certainly do write fine letters, and the stories are very interesting. How many of the cousins can answer these questions? What is meant by the name Jesus? Who wrote the Book of Acts? Where is Jesus now? How many of the cousins of The Herald have Queen Esther Circles in their churches? We have a fine group of girls. I wonder if Bro. Albert E. Davis still reads The Herald? It was in his revival at Lone Star, Okla., that I was converted. I certainly would like to hear from him. He wrote a letter to my brothers a long time ago, and said he saw my letter in The Herald. I hope to hear from some of the boys and girls soon.

I live in a beautiful town situated on the great St. Lawrence River. I have two brothers and three sisters. I am the oldest girl, fifteen years old. My birthday is Feb. 7. Have I a twin? FALLEN ASLEEP

CLAIBORNE.

On Nov. 12th Mrs. A. S. Claiborne, of McRae, Ark., passed from this life to her heavenly home. If she had lived until January she would have been seventy-seven years of age. For a number of years she had been in failing health, but her faith in God kept her brave and uncomplaining through it all. About a week before her death she contracted the flu which developed into pneumonia and caused her death.

In one of her last conscious moments she said, "I'm bound for the Promised Land." What a comfort and inspiration it is to know that she is in that Holy City now beckoning us onward and upward. She lived a beautiful, consecrated life and has left an influence that will never die. Christ was real to her and she had been a faithful follower since girlhood when she united with the M. E. Church. It was her delight to tell others of Jesus. Many a little child at her fireside has heard her read from God's Word and has been instructed in the Christian way. Who can measure the influence of such a life?

There is left to mourn her loss, her beloved companion, A. S. Claiborne, two brothers, one sister, eight children, twenty-nine grandchildren and nineteen great-grandchildren. Funeral services were conducted from Lebanon Church by her pastor, Rev. J. J. Decker, assisted by Rev. J. M. Talkington, of Antioch, and Rev. Leroy, of Beebe.

May our heavenly Father's richest blessings rest upon the husband and children and may they all determine by God's grace that some day they will meet together around God's throne—one unbroken family circle.

A loving friend and neighbor,
Mrs. L. E. Sheridan.

WADE.

On Thursday evening at 7:45 o'clock, a shadow of great sorrow fell over the home of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Wade of near Endicott, W. Va., when the sweet spirit of their baby boy, Harley Ernest Wade, left the little body and took its flight homeward to the God who gave it, and who hath said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Harley was born May 9, 1927, and died Oct. 11, 1928, being at the age of 1 year, 5 months, and 2 days old. It was hard to see the dear baby suffer during his sickness which lasted one week, and to know we had to give him up so soon, but we feel our loss is Heaven's gain. Harley was a very bright, attractive child with a pleasant disposition and always ready and willing to greet his friends with a happy smile.

Although it makes our hearts ache and our eyes fill with tears to think our friends are taken away one by one, but to give up a dear little baby who has been the pride of the home for over a year seems to be the most trying of all. Yet we have this consolation, that he is at rest, safe in the arms of Jesus, and free from suffering and is waiting on the other shore to meet his loved ones there.

May those dear little hands call us ever onward so when our life here is ended we shall join the happy band with him to spend Eternity in that Celestial City where no sad partings ever come and no "good bye" words shall ever be spoken.

He was a lover of music and has left his playthings many times to clap his dear little hands when he would hear his friends begin to sing songs of praise. His favorite song was, "I am on my way to Heaven." Although he could not read he seemed to like his Testament above all other books and would go to sleep with it in his hands. He was loved by all who knew him, both by older people and children and it saddens our hearts at the thought of his going away, for he will be greatly missed not only in the home but in the community as well.

No more can we see him run and play; no more can we see those dear little blue eyes, nor the little arms reaching to go with the other children to play and swing as we have seen them. He was always anxious to see his papa come home from work, and would run to meet him with a happy smile and loving kiss.

But little Harley is gone, yes gone for ever from this world, and all we can do is to prepare ourselves to meet him in glory where there is no pain or sorrow, but all is beautiful and pleasant.

Besides his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Wade, he is survived by two sisters, Pansy and Inez Wade, one brother, Austin Wade, all at home, and a host of relatives and friends.

Funeral services and words of comfort were spoken by Rev. Sleeth, of Hundred, and Rev. Gail McGuffy, of Littleton, at the Kirk Ridge Church, Oct. 13, after which the little body was borne to the beautiful cemetery on Kirk Ridge and laid to rest to await the resurrection morning. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Ten ladies carried flowers from the church to the grave. Two little hands closed over the breast. Two little feet laid down to rest. One little voice that prattled in love, Sweet songs are now singing in Heaven above.

Cold in death is his dear form,
We have kissed thy marble brow,
And in our aching hearts we know
We have no Harley now.
We loved him, yes, no tongue can tell,
How much we loved him and how well;
Christ's love was strongest, he thought best,

To take dear Harley to heaven to rest.
Written by his mother,
Mrs. Archie Wade.

HIS GRIP WAS PACKED.

Rev. D. B. Sweat.

The other day I stood by the bedside of my good father-in-law, the Rev. C. C. Buchanan, of Waycross, Ga., as he breathed his last and his spirit went out from us to the God who gave it. For many long years he had been leaning on the Rod and the Staff and when the time came for him to go he was not afraid. He had his grip packed and was ready for the journey. During his last illness he quoted many passages of Scripture and told us there was not a shadow on the horizon. He was aware that the time of his departure was at hand and he knew where he was going. We went with him just as far as we could go and then he had to go alone; still he was not alone, for another met him in the shallow water of the river on the earthly side and escorted him to the other shore, up the Delectable Hill, to the pearly gates.

In less than a month from the time of his passing Father Buchanan would have been 88 years of age, and he might have been with us many years longer, but for a fall, in which he broke a hip and an arm. For something like 40 years he had been a preacher of righteousness and many souls were led into the light through his ministry. He had a remarkable record as a soldier in the sixties. He volunteered at the beginning of the war, was in every battle fought by his command, and at the end of the four years of struggle and strife, he returned home without a scratch.

We buried him in his uniform of gray and the ex-soldiers who wore the blue, as well as those who wore the gray, served as an honorary escort and his grandsons were his active pall bearers. His brother-in-law, Rev. J. B. Culpepper, of New Smyrna, Fla., preached his funeral. These details and many others were carefully planned by him during his sickness.

I felt toward Father Buchanan as a son would feel toward his father and when, one day, he requested me to get down by his bedside and pray with him, it was a hard thing to do. Twelve years ago I had a similar experience with my mother-in-law, Mrs. M. A. Buchanan, one of the best women who ever lived. She asked me to pray that she might have the spirit of complete resignation. Just before her translation she brought us a message from the other side. Rallying from a state of coma she gave the brightest testimony I ever heard fall from the lips of any one.

She said she had been right close up to the gate of heaven and had seen a great company that "no man can number." She affirmed that she had seen Jesus and that she knew him by the bright crown on his head. He told her she could not enter the gate at that time but he would come for her very soon and escort her through the dark valley of shadows, for she was not able to go alone.

These testimonies we cherish more than we would a fortune of gold. Having passed on so triumphantly and

IS THERE DANGER?

Shall America lose her power, fame and honor? She has claimed to be honored and blessed above all nations, because of her true worship, virtue, modesty, government, and obedience and love for God and humanity. It is said when a nation loses her virtue it is gone. How long will America stand, as things exist? Man has always been lower in principle than woman, so far as being chaste is concerned, but ages have rolled on and on, and it is said history repeats itself, and it must be true, for the wise man said there was nothing new under the sun. The things that exist now have existed in the past. In the days of the Kings the nations that set up idol worship and forgot God, God withdrew his mercy and they were delivered in the hands of other nations. Shall America go under a king or be ruled by some other nation? Does the destiny of our nation rest in the hands of pure womanhood?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson V.—February 3, 1929.

Subject.—The Holy Scriptures.
Psalm 19:7-14; 2 Timothy 3:14-17.

Golden Text.—Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law. Psalm 118:18.

Introduction.—The Bible is a library, whose writing ran through sixteen hundred years. It is the work of some thirty-five inspired men. It deals primarily with sin and salvation. But for these two matters, it need never have been written. It tells us all we know of the early history of our race. Heathen nations have their mythological accounts of creation; but that given by Moses in Genesis is the only one on record that comports with the dignity of a Supreme Being. The Bible is the one and only source of our knowledge concerning the origin of evil in any world. It is the greatest law-book that has ever appeared among men—so great that the laws of all civilized nations have been based upon its Pentateuch. It demands obedience of men to law, human and divine, and prescribes penalties for violations. There is no finer poetry than that found within the Old Testament. The twenty-third psalm has no parallel. Moses in the 90th psalm reaches heights of sublime poetic eloquence that are beyond the flights of uninspired men. The Scriptures display a few touches of science, as when Solomon tells us of the circulation of the blood, in Ecclesiastes 12:6. His proverbs are sufficiently wise to be applicable to men in all ages. The prophecies of both Testaments, with their fulfillment, put the Book clear beyond the categories of all mere human writings. Compared with this book, there are no other books that are worth while.

Touching the matter of sin and salvation, there runs through both Testaments a scarlet thread—a bloodstream. Take that out of the Book, and man's only hope dies; "For without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins." As one compares the consistency of thirty-five inspired men writing of sin and salvation over a period of sixteen hundred years with the inconsistencies of any group of uninspired historians, or philosophers, or theologians, or scientists, or of any other cult, his reason stamps the Bible as a book with but a single Author—The Almighty God. Uninspired men cannot do such work; and the proof of it is: They have never so much as approached it.

The writer has frequently interested himself by building the great fundamental doctrines of the Bible into an arch, buttressed at both ends upon Deity. Here are the stones in the arch: Jehovah created man; Man fell into sin; Jesus Christ was born of a virgin; He is Deity, the only begotten Son of the Father; On Calvary's cross he made a blood atonement for all men; He rose from the dead in the same body that died on the cross; In that same body he ascended to heaven after his resurrection from the dead; He sent the Holy Ghost to his church to be his vice-gerent on earth; "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven"; There will be a final resurrection of the dead bodies of all who shall have died before his return to earth; There will be a final Judgment of both the quick and the dead. Take out of this great arch any one stone, and the entire arch will fall. Leave it intact, and the pressure that may be brought to bear upon it the stronger it will become.

Perhaps no feature of the Bible stamps its divine origin any more strongly than that of its prophecies. Starting with the promise in the third chapter of Genesis, that the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, we read on to the last chapter of Revelation without ever losing sight of the promised Redeemer. The thought of his coming grows stronger and stronger till the herald angels announce his arrival in the manger at Bethlehem of Judea. The account given of the chosen people, the Jews, is made up largely of prophecy and its fulfillment. Leave that out, and the history cannot be understood.

The Bible claims to be an inspired book. Moses says that he wrote what Jehovah commanded him to write. The prophets declare that the word of Jehovah came to them. The New Testament says that "holy men of God wrote as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Paul writes to Timothy: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God." That these men were not mistaken is clear from the things they wrote, and from the manner of their writing. Mistaken men could not produce a set of books in harmony from beginning to end, and so far surpassing all other books as to leave no bit of room for comparison. For some centuries men have been busy denying the divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures. If they are honest men, it is high time for them to produce something equal to them, or may be a little bit better, or else "hush up." Surely all the advantages they have had in fine modern learning should enable them to do better work than that done by a "gang of ignorant Jews," as some of them are pleased to term the writers of the Bible. Thus far they have not even mastered so much as the alphabet of such writing. Boasting amounts to nothing. Let them do something comparable to the Book. But they must not draw therefrom. Plagiarism is in no sense admissible.

Comments on the Lesson.

7. The law of the LORD.—The psalmist refers to the Mosaic law. We can apply it to the entire Bible. Is perfect.—Absolutely so for the purpose intended in the giving of it; but all perfection is relatively so, except the absolute perfection of God. Converting the soul.—In a large sense, the law is still a schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. Unless it is preached in its fulness, conversions will be but "skin-deep." Men need its solemn warnings to turn them from sin unto righteousness. The testimony of the LORD.—All the truth taught in his Word. Simple men become wise as they study that Book.

8. The statutes of the LORD are right.—No man can improve upon the rules of living set forth in the Scriptures. If obeyed, they always lead to salvation that brings joy to the heart. The commandment of the LORD is pure.—I do not know that we can make much difference in our thinking between the commandments and the statutes of the LORD. They are both pure and right, giving joy and spiritual light to men.

9. The fear of the LORD is clean.—In another passage of the Bible we learn that "the fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom." No one can do any large things in character building until he is filled with a reverential fear of God. Built upon any other basis one's character is but a sham; but on this basis it will last forever. The judgments of the LORD are true and righteous altogether.—They must be so, seeing they proceed directly from the Divine Nature.

10. More to be desired are they than gold.—But most men prefer the gold—especially "much fine gold." The gold will soon perish, or the men who claim it will die and leave it; but the judgments of the LORD will endure throughout all eternity. Sweeter also than honey and the honey comb.—The pure soul revels in the Word of God—meditates therein day and night.

11. By them is thy servant warned.—The psalmist would hide the Word of God in his heart, that he might not sin against him. It pays to serve God diligently, for in such service there is "great reward." We should press this upon our pupils in the Sunday school.

12. Who can understand his errors.—Man left to himself can never know his own sinful heart. When Isaiah saw the Lord, he saw himself also. We must have the truth of the Word applied by the Spirit, in order to see our own wickedness. Cleanse thou me from secret faults.—Not only the sins we have hidden from men, but from some that we have not recognized in our own hearts. We need to have the full light turned into our souls.

13. Presumptuous sins.—Surely we need warning here. Even our Lord would not throw himself down from the pinnacle of the temple. We have no right to presume upon the mercy of God. The psalmist broadens out on this petition, showing its importance. If he could but be delivered from this sort of sin, he would be upright, and would be "innocent from the great transgression." One sin leads to another. He who presumes upon the mercy of God will soon lose respect for the law of God.

14. This verse is beautiful in its simplicity and its reverence. "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O LORD, my Strength, and my Redeemer." Comment can add nothing to that. Pray it for thyself, and out of thine own heart.

We prefer not to comment verse by verse upon this quotation from Timothy. Paul had led Timothy to Jesus when on one of his missionary journeys; and ever after that time there was a close intimacy between them. The aged apostle calls him his "son in the Gospel." The young man had been blessed with a Godly mother and a devout old grandmother who had taught him the Old Testament Scriptures from his early childhood. He possessed an intelligent basis for the building of a strong Christian character. Paul refers to these good things to stimulate his young brother to high things. Sound heredity and good environment largely make us what we are. Some children never have much chance in this world.

In verse sixteen Paul makes a tremendous statement to which I have already referred in my introduction to the lesson. "All scripture is giv-

YOUR GIFT WILL PURCHASE AN INCOME

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions produce an attractive income. The income is at the highest rate consistent with safe investment and, as a rule, higher than the average commercial investment of equal security.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions not only provide to the purchaser an income that will not shrink, but they bless others in that they make it possible for the missionary to interpret to humanity the love and mercies of God as revealed in the Gospel in healing the sick; in clothing the naked; in feeding the hungry, and in teaching and preaching the Gospel to all people and to all nations.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions will be issued in exchange for cash, bonds, stocks, lands and partial cash payments made monthly.

en by inspiration of God." Literally, 'is God-breathed.' The Greek will not bear the more recent translation that says "all scripture that is inspired." There is no word in the original that corresponds to our word "that." It is but a touch of the poison of Modernism, that has no respect for the Word of God. How Paul piles up the facts in these last two verses of the lesson. What mighty preaching we would have if men fed more upon the Word, and less upon the follies of the hour in which we are living.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Price: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

BY R. A. TORREY, D.D.

Fits the Vest Pocket. The Religious Telescope says: "Has proved a blessing to Sunday school teachers and pupils. In addition to the digest of the lessons, comments, etc., it contains attendance record, blank pages for names and addresses, calendar and the Ten Commandments. Price, 35c.

All Denominations Approve Its Use.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

BY MARTHA TARBELL, Ph.D.

New ideas, new light, new suggestions and new enthusiasm comes to the teacher who opens the 1929 edition of this favorite handbook to the International Sunday School Lessons. "A wealth undreamed of and almost passing belief" are the words used by one reviewer in describing it. The greatest triumph however that has come to "The Guide"—that it has won over all helps—is the reputation it now enjoys for "making teachers of all who use it."

$2.00 postpaid.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Jos. H. Lewis, conference evangelist of the Kentucky Conference, has some open dates during the winter months of the new year. He would appreciate a call from pastors desiring evangelistic help. His address is 508 Lexington Ave., Wilmore, Ky.

Rev. Wm. Kelley, Pastor: "I just wanted to report a meeting to The Herald at Wurtland, Ky., located four miles west of Greenup. We held almost four weeks. Dr. E. R. Overly was with me a week. Prof. H. C. Rayl, from Huntington, W. Va., led the singing. Dr. Overly is a fine preacher and Rayl is an up-to-date singer. There were twenty-six saved, six sanctified and twenty-four joined the M. E. Church. We are building a new church at Wurtland."

"The Musical Whites": "We are engaged in meetings in Pennsylvania. At present we are at Manheim, Lancaster county. In February and March we will be in meetings at York and Oil City. We will be glad to greet readers of The Herald in any of these places. We sing and play and do children's work. Our address is Box 204, Highland Park, Ill."

H. D. Knickerbocker: "This is to certify that as Presiding Elder of this district I grant Rev. W. T. Currie authority to evangelize, and, as an evangelist, he is privileged to preach throughout the Church.—Presiding Elder, Oklahoma City District."

Desar Herald: It has been a great year for me. I have preached the old-time gospel to men and women and many have been saved. I want to do more in 1929 than I have ever done before. I am open for calls. No place is too poor for me to go. Any pastor or people who want an old time meeting write me, 1616 West 30th St., Oklahoma City, Okla.—W. T. Currie.

The Dr. LeRoy J. Mitchell, of Mt. Vernon, Ill., with his party, just closed an old-fashioned revival at Knoxville, Iowa, Plattsmouth, Neb., Louisville, Neb., and Springfield, Neb. Church members were revived and set on fire for God. Many unsaved sought and found the Lord. A large number of young people consecrated their lives to God for life service. We are praising God for the manifestation of his presence and power in our service for him. Beginning the New Year our party will be at Diagonal, Iowa.

CORRECTION.

In report of my year's work, and death of my father-in-law, Rev. J. S. Lewis, and in speaking of his wife, (my wife's mother) who was Lillie Muchison, the subject of the chapter "Without Guile", by the author, J. B. Culpepper, the report made me say she was the Author, which should have been subject.

THE SECRET PLACE.

(91st Psalm.)

Are you dwelling today in the secret place,

In His shadow sweetly abiding?

Is He each day your sure house of refuge,

Your Rock and Fortress, your place of hiding?

No fowler's snare shall entrap your feet,

Nor noisome pestilence o'ertake you;

With downy feathers He'll cover you safely,

Beneath His wings, or ever forsake you.

His truth shall thy shield and buckler be;

No fear shall alarm thee by night, Nor even the arrow that flieth by day—

So precious art thou in His sight. Then fear no danger lurking in darkness,

Nor destruction at noonday wasting;

Though thousands fall at thy right hand,

To protect thee angels are hastening. Thine eyes shall behold the fate of the wicked,

Who heed not the warning voices Sounding forth from the walls of Zion, While the shining host rejoices.

Because the Most High is thy habitation,

No threatened evil shall thee befall; Nor any plague come nigh thy dwelling—

He'll fail not to hear thy call. Not even a stone thy foot shall injure,

For angels their watch are keeping; In all thy ways they shall hold thee up;

No cause then for sorrow nor weeping.

Then fear not the adder that lurks in thy pathway,

Nor lions that crouch at thy feet; Thou shalt trample them surely and safely—

Thy deliverance shall be complete. Because you have set your love on the Father,

He will therefore place you on high; And since His name you have known and cherished

All evil shall pass you by. He has promised to hear whenever you call:

He'll in every trouble be near you; With length of days He will satisfy And with full salvation will cheer you.

THE CRY OF THE BACKSLIDER.

By The Editor.

LETTERS are almost constantly coming to me from those who once had a gracious experience of salvation, but are now backslidden and in great darkness. The condition of the backslider is sad indeed. We often hear Methodist people making a joke of backsliding. They say, "We Methodists believe in backsliding and practice it." Backsliding is no joke; it is a very serious thing for one who has been born of the Holy Ghost and become a child of God to turn back into wilful sin. St. Peter uses a most suggestive and disgusting figure to indicate the condition of such persons. He says, "It had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn back from the holy commandment delivered unto them. But it is happened unto them according to the true proverb, 'The dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.'" These are strong figures of speech, but they suggest the miserable condition of those who have known the joys of salvation and who go back into sin against God.

* * * *

Young converts ought to be taught the very great importance of obedience to God. They should have impressed upon their minds the importance of careful, thoughtful, daily Bible reading. To live in the kingdom of God, one must know the laws and will of the King, and must carefully obey those laws and joyfully submit to that will. We are living in a lawless age. Disobedience to law is so common that one is almost surprised to find law-abiding citizens or officials who will promptly and positively enforce law. When the law is enforced and the guilty are punished pardons are handed out in the most reckless and I may say, criminal way. This is not only true with reference to the laws of the land, but it is sadly true with reference to the laws of God. Unfortunately people have come to think they can make a profession of religion, join the church, and live a sort of haphazard, indifferent life and yet retain a state of salvation. It takes the same spirit of surrender, obedience and faith to retain a state of salvation as it does to enter into that state.

* * * *

Here is a very important work for the minister. People need very plain, earnest teaching on this subject. They must be taught that the life of the Christian is the life of surrender, of obedience, and of service. There are not only sins of commission but sins of omission. Those who have been born of the Spirit and become the children of God have certain duties to perform, burdens to bear, and obligations and responsibilities to meet. The soldier who enlists in the army in time of war is expected to obey orders, to march, to fight, to suffer hardship, to risk his very life, and if need be, to lay it down cheerfully. Christians must learn "To endure hardness as good soldiers." It means something to be a Christian, to enjoy communion with God, to have victory over sin, to have abiding peace, to know the joys of salvation, and it pays tremendously to walk with God, to have no fear of death, to carry within the heart the assurance of eternal blessedness.

* * * *

How often we see people professing sanctification, and then going on and living about like the world around them; reading foolish fiction, dressing like the world, and seeming to forget that they have entered into an experience of holiness; that they have separated themselves from the world; that they have come up into a realm of constant abiding and communion with the blessed Trinity. Such persons soon awake to the fact that their joy is gone, their peace is departed and they must either return to the altar in bitter sighing and tears or cast away their faith and give themselves over to a worldly life and wake up by and by in a world of darkness and torment, to remember with bitterness through all eternity how they trifled with the most serious things and flung away the precious and beautiful jewel of perfect love which would have been the charm and joy through life and a passport to eternal blessedness hereafter. Let us speak an earnest word of warning to the Lord's people, to look upon backsliding as worse than death, to keep close to the Bible, to live lives of obedience, to separate themselves from all sinful worldliness, to find their delight in self-sacrifice and communion with the Holy Spirit.

A Kindly Word to Troubled Souls.

There is much sorrow in the world; disease, disappointment and death are abroad in the land. There is no promise in the Bible securing us against our share of the world's sorrow. There is a promise of a Burden-bearer, of a divine Comforter. But for our sorrows, we could not know the value of the Christ who has promised to be with us always.

The tempter seems to know when we are burdened and tried, and he makes it a point to accuse and ridicule us in the day of our grief, bereavement and disappointment. He insists that if God loves us these calamities could not have befallen us. Many poor souls have listened to his false arguments, given up their faith when they needed it most, and turned away from God when he was the only one to whom alone they could take their broken hearts for healing.

To souls in trouble we wish to warn you against the seductive voice of the enemy. Remember the words of the inspired apostle, "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth, every son whom he receiveth." God only knows our hearts, our deepest needs, the danger of pride and conceit, of selfishness and the many things about us that we do not know, and cannot understand. Many a poor soul can say with the Psalmist David, "It was good for me to be afflicted; for then thought I upon my ways, and turned my feet unto thy testimonies." "Let patience have her perfect work." Let nothing drive you away from God, or accuse him of lacking mercy. Life is short; the conflict will soon be over. Let us bow our heads to the mystery of sorrow and the chastenings of the Lord, and draw closer to him, who understands and who deals with us, ever looking to our eternal good and happiness.

Troubled souls, take courage; hold on faithfully until the clouds are lifted, and the sunshine of divine love breaks in its glory upon your humble heart.

The Most Important.

I am still on my sick bed at the close of my eighth week of confinement at the Deaconess Hospital, Louisville, Ky. From what the doctors say, and from my own feelings, I am making improvement. I still have a weak heart and will appreciate your prayers. My physicians, and they have had with me, not only one of the best doctors of the city, but three great specialists, who are all united in the belief that nothing can be better for me than to get away to Southern Florida. We trust at some time within the next ten days, under the care of my wife and a special nurse, in a drawing room compartment, I may be put to bed for Miami, Fla.

Lying here through the long weeks I have had much time for thought. The Lord Jesus has loomed up before me in the greatness and glory of his power to save and to sanctify from all sin. I have felt a very profound gratitude to him that it has been my privilege to have some part in the proclamation of a full gospel—a redemption that saves to the uttermost.

I do not believe that anything can be of more importance to mankind than the preaching of full salvation, of entire sanctification involving the baptism with the Holy Ghost cleansing from all sin.

Wife and I have covenanted together that if the good Lord spares me, we will work for the building up of a great Theological School at Asbury College. God's call of young men to preach is also a call upon his people to help these young men to prepare to preach.

Oh, that ten thousand readers of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD might become deeply interested in the upholding of this great school. Those of us who are growing older could leave behind us an abiding monument to our faith in the doctrine and experience of entire sanctification by building up this Seminary which already has a great faculty. What the world needs is the faithful preaching of full redemption from sin in Jesus Christ. Join with us in prayer and faith and gifts. Let's magnify our blessed Lord and Redeemer who is mighty to save to the uttermost. Any one who may feel interested may communicate with Mrs. H. C. Morrison, care PENTECOSTAL HERALD, Louisville, Ky.

A STORY OF RUINS AND REVIVAL.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Strange the Providences and leadings of God! Here we are holding evangelistic services in the very city where the Anti-Foreign uprising of China in 1927 against the missionaries, against the Bible and gospel, against the church and the Christian schools was at its worst. It was here in Nanking that the rioting and mobbing and looting and killing was at its height and did its deadliest. Today Miss Shaw, who has spent 40 years of her life in China, showed me the wrecks of things as we walked toward the Bible School campus. I was shown a cistern where three Quaker missionaries were hid by faithful Chinese Christians for 22 hours; and all about are wrecks, ruins and debris of fine missionary properties.

Yesterday—Sunday—I preached in the afternoon at a Community Center run by prominent Chinese Christian people. The Sunday afternoon service is sponsored by a fine Christian worker who is now attached to the office of Minister of Foreign Affairs. This man is responsible, largely, for our being in Nanking carrying on this evangelistic campaign. One of the wonders of Nanking today is that there is a church left! The soldiers and Communists of last year thought they were going to wipe Nanking clean of Christianity, that not a Bible or pulpit would stand the storm, but here in less than two years they are running schools and churches and missions and revivals, and after a while all will be restored. Christianity has gone through a tremendous baptism of fire but it has been a purifying fire. Many have gone away who will not come back again. Modernists are not needed in China though plenty of them are still here. Many of the missionaries have deepened in their prayer life; the trouble has driven their roots down deeper into God. The preaching of Holiness has been a matter of refreshment to them. As we have preached on Sanctification, The Clean Heart, Baptism of Fire, Enduement with Power, we have felt no opposition; the atmosphere has been clear, hearts have been hungry, seekers many. One missionary who has played and sung in many a holiness meeting for Caradine and others is unceasing in her work for the girls of her school during the revival.

Some people, after the Anti-Foreign uprising in China, have thought China should be abandoned as a mission field! No! No! A new day is dawning for China. I believe the greatest opportunity for Christian missions is right now. China has a hungry heart for the gospel. I never preached to more attentive crowds, never saw such hunger, never saw such crowds at the mourner's bench than I am seeing now. It is the hour for evangelism! The Chinese pastors and churches welcome revivals.

This afternoon I met the city pastors at the Community Center. Some of them are highly educated men. Some have been trained in America. The Boston man (Chinese pastor) who made the address, thanked God for our coming to Nanking and told of the blessing that had come to his own soul. One of the Theological professors (Presbyterian) was the most earnest worker in the revival, never failing to be at the front at every altar call and to encourage the workers of the revival.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

We snatched a few hours Saturday afternoon from a strenuous program of services, speaking three and four times a day, to make a visit to the Imperial City (that was—now it is scattered all over with ruins) just outside the city walls of Nanking. Here are buried the Emperors and great ones of the Ming Dynasty of 500 years ago. Strange what reverses the hand of Time brings about! Over from the hills where the Ming conquerors are buried, on another prominent promontory or hill, they are erecting the greatest tomb ever known in Chinese history—the Tomb of Sun Yat Sen, the man who brought on the Chinese Republic—the Washington of China. The Nationalists who are now in charge of the government are spending millions upon this Tomb, and they are cutting a great Boulevard 120 feet wide leading right up to this great mausoleum. True, the Chinese have strange ways of doing things; when they cut a street through where there are stores, dwellings, etc., they just go on doing it without paying for the property they take. Many people lose all their property and go bankrupt over these improvements, but the street goes through. The Mission Compound where I am staying has been cut nearly in two by the big boulevard but no difference what government says must go through.

But to return to the Mings Tombs. As one looks at the figures of horses, elephants, lions, etc., guarding the approach to the Tombs, one is impressed with the weirdness of things. On either side of the approach these big figures stand and they say they guarded the spirits of the Kings when they walked the earth. When the last of the Ming dynasty was buried some 500 years ago or more, there was not a Christian church or a Christian school or Hospital in China, nor was there a Bible or a gospel pulpit. Now hospitals, orphanages and schools are very many, the gospel is being preached from thousands of pulpits, and Bibles and Testaments and Gospels are published by the millions. Today, the Government of China has a goodly percent of men in it who were trained in Mission Schools by Christian teachers; the Anti-foreign feeling has died down. Missionaries are returning to the interior and the gospel is being preached again all over the land, and the Christian religion, tested by storm and fire, is destined to be mighty through God in the re-making of China.

Many years ago the Portuguese colonists in China built a massive Cathedral at Macao on the crest of a great hill in South China. A typhoon came along and nearly destroyed the building, leaving only the front wall upon the top of which stood a great bronze cross. Through all the stress and storm the cross still stood there. When Sir John Bowring, as Governor of Hong Kong, visited Macao, he was much impressed at the sight of the uplifted cross. This sight led him to write the hymn:

"In the cross of Christ of glory,
Towering over the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime."

So I see it as I write in Nanking to say The Cross conquers! The sword fails!

"Bane and blessing, pain and pleasure
By the Cross are sanctified."

THE REVIVAL.

We were called by the United churches and Missions to hold a series of meetings at Nanking, the capitol of the new Chinese Republic. It was in Nanking, March, 1927, that the dreadful riot against foreigners broke out. The Nationalist Army had been honeycombed with Communists and when they reached Nanking the soldiers began early in the morning to mob, loot, burn and murder.

Day by day we are passing the ruins of Mission property, ruined schools, churches, missionary homes, etc. Going over to the Theological school the other morning Miss Bowen, who was born of missionary parents in China, showed me the ruins of her former home. She said: "Here was where I played when a child; this place is so familiar to me; here is all that is left of it." The soldiers looted it, then burned it until now nothing but the walls stand. Next to it the ruins of another missionary home, next to that another, and up the hill the ruins of a school building.

Some of the Anti-foreign and Anti-Christian Chinese said, "This will be the end of the Christianity in Nanking. The Christians will never rise again. The missionaries will never come back." But many of the Chinese preachers and people stood true in the midst of the fire. Of course, all the foreign missionaries had to escape in the Gunboat, but God had a people among the Chinese who stood true. One pastor, at whose church I preached Sunday morning, Rev. Handel Lee, stood the storm and stress. Never did he fail to have a Sunday service, though the soldiers took his church, yet either in his home or in some hall he held his little flock together. Other pastors did likewise. Missionaries, of course, lost all. Some of them had been in China, 30, 25, 20, 15 years and less, and in the storm they saved nothing but the clothes on their backs. I shall put in diary form an account of our work at Nanking.

Nov. 20. Held a meeting of leaders at the Theological school. The house was full. Spoke on Isaiah 64. A precious spirit of prayer prevailed. Nearly all the praying was in Chinese from the China ministers.

At night in the M. E. Mission House, a meeting was held for missionaries only. Dr. Price (Presbyterian) presided. Among those present were 200 college presidents, one high school principal, theological professors, Bible teachers and missionary workers. I spoke on "Launch out into the Deep." Luke 5:4. Many of those missionaries had gone through the fires and they had deepened in their religious experience and they were deeply interested in a revival of religion.

Nov. 21. Spoke at the Theological Seminary where a number of young men are preparing for the ministry. I speak here every morning, 8:30 to 9:30. Message on "Moses at the Burning Bush," showing that his life was a failure till he met God at the burning bush. So their lives, no matter how fully they were educated, would be a failure if they did not get a burning bush experience, where they would meet God and get their call and commission from him.

Afternoon at 4:20, held revival meeting in Chapel of Girls High School. Chapel filled, audience made up of students from various schools, pastors, theological students, professors, teachers, missionaries, etc. Preached on Acts 2:17, and at the close made an altar call and soon there were about forty seeking the Lord, many of whom confessed Christ for the first time.

At night carriage called at 7:00 P. M., to take us, we knew not where. We went through narrow streets and lanes just barely wide enough for a rickshaw to pass us. As we went along the driver was yelling out all the time to prevent people from getting run over. We rode through walled up lanes, turned at the most unusual corners, rode for a while through streets lit up from the lamps and electric lights of shops, restaurants, homes, workshops, etc. Most of the streets cobblestoned, and the principal ones crowded with traffic—rickshaws, automobiles, carts loaded to the limit, dragged by coolies with long ropes. At last we came to a big, capacious Gospel Hall in the south section of the city right in the very heart of the crowd and among the non-Christians. This building was erected, I believe, through the influence of Dr. Price, with the money of a godly Southern Presbyterian woman of America. The idea is to reach the great unchurched and the unchristianized crowds of that part of the city.

This meeting introduced us to a new piece of evangelism in China. I thought as I looked out from the high concrete platform: "This is the place for a native Chinese preacher—some man who has the language. How can I preach here through an interpreter?" But the Lord helped us as we preached from Romans 1:16 on: "The Power of the Gospel." We gave an altar call, about a dozen men came forward and bowed at the altar, among them a Buddhist priest. We thanked God and took courage!

Nov. 22. 8:30 this morning we found the Theological Chapel filled and we spoke on Elijah, the man of fire. We wound up with all praying the prayer of 2 Kings 2:9: "I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me."

7:30 P. M. found us at the South Temple where a fine congregation awaited the service. We preached a gospel message and followed with an altar service with about twenty-five seeking the Lord.

The 4:30 revival meeting in the school chapel drew a full house, and after the message fifty or more sought the Lord; missionaries deeply interested in the revival. The women are working with the girl students and many side meetings are being held for instruction, testimony, etc.

Nov. 23. Another full chapel at Theological School where we spoke on "Isaiah and his Baptism of Fire." We first took a hasty glance through the book, suggesting subjects and texts for preaching, dwelt some on the "Highway of Holiness" of Isaiah 35th, and then put the main emphasis on Isaiah sixth and the Prophet's baptism of fire and his new commission.

4:30 P. M. At the Chapel Girls' High School preached on "Soul's Conversion." The altar service which followed had about 75 young people seeking the Lord and many testified to faith in Jesus.

At the noon hour today addressed the Nanking College (Girls). Spoke on Gen. 3:8: "They heard the voice of the Lord God." Only 30 minutes for the chapel service; no chance for altar work.

7:30. Again at the South Temple where we preached on Acts 16:30. Larger response, about 40 seeking the Lord.

Nov. 24. At Theological School we spoke on Ezekiel—His Preparation, Call and Commission, and put special emphasis on Ezekiel 37, "The graveyard of the Old Testament," and the greatest Old Testament chapter on Resurrection and Revival. God poured out his Spirit on this service. The young preachers in training there were moved by the Spirit of God.

At Noon. Spoke at Orphanage where many children rescued from starvation in the awful famine in North China are in a home of Christian training and industrialism.

Here I was shown sample of stone which they ate in the starvation regions. They ground it up with straw and grass, baked it and ate it. This good man, Mr. Nathan Ma, (Industrial Orphanage, 18 Tai Hsiang Lu Nanking, China) went up to Shantung to bring down twenty children; need was so great that he brought back sixty. He is doing a splendid work in training these girls and boys for Christ.

4:30. Revival meeting in school chapel again. Thought to rest this afternoon but the school people and Chinese principal are all so interested in getting the young people saved that they wanted a meeting Saturday also. We preached and again the altar was full of seekers; many who were converted praying to be filled with the Spirit.

Sunday, Nov. 25. Preached at 10:30 for Rev. Handel Lee, at the M. E. Church. This church is attended by the schools as well as a large membership. Preached on "Sanctification," and had an altar service at the close.

3:00 P. M. A big crowd came to Community Center where we preached on "The Promise of Power," Acts 1:8. Largely professing Christianity and their pastors present, and at the altar service we had many Christians seeking their Baptism of power.

7:30. At the South Temple where a big crowd of non-Christians, as well as church members were present. We preached on John 3:16. "A great love—a great sacrifice; a great Savior; a great salvation." Though our strength was well nigh gone after such a heavy day we gave them just the old-fashioned gospel. My Spirit-filled Interpreter, Andrew, followed with an exhortation and soon the altar was crowded two deep with all classes (including a blind beggar).

Monday, Nov. 26; 8:30. Theological Seminary message on "Jeremiah the man with the God-touched mouth." This was a service where God moved our hearts and the students are getting the vision.

At 3 o'clock met the ministers and missionaries at Community Center; gave a message on "Our Sufficiency is of God."

At 4:30, preached at the Chapel revival on "A clean heart." Many who have been converted are now seeking the second work of grace and at the altar there was much earnest prayer and pleading for full salvation.

Tuesday, Nov. 26: Addressed the chapel of Nanking University at 8 o'clock; spoke on Rom. 1:16: The gospel not a philosophy but a message and a dynamic.

At 8:45 A. M., gave closing address to the Theological Seminary on "The Apostle Paul, His Conversion, Call and Message."

At 4:30, held closing revival service; spoke on Heb. 13:1-3, and though we intended to have short meeting with no altar service pressure was so great that we had to open altar and about twenty sought the Lord. There was a shout of victory in this closing meeting.

Let me conclude this hastily written article with the following story:

Some missionaries were carrying on some gospel meetings in Chinese Turkestan. As one of them preached the gospel to the crowd one old man was heard to say: "Why it's just the same: there is no difference, it's exactly the same." The old man followed the preacher all day and at every service it was the same remark: "It's just the same." At night the old man came to where the preacher was lodging and told the story. He said that about eight years ago a foreigner passed through that town and gave him a book which proved to be John's Gospel. He took it home and read it and as he read it he became changed. He destroyed his idols, he cut loose from his secret societies and he worshipped God. And now he was hearing the gospel preached for the first time and he was saying: "It is just the same!"

Thank God, we are seeing it in China today. The gospel is just the same here as in U. S. A., only with this difference: there is more hunger on the people for the gospel, and after preaching we do not have to beg people to come to the altar—they come, they often rush to the mourner's bench. Often after an altar service have I seen tears on the altar rail and on the floor. I am writing this just after coming from the Nanking University where I addressed the students at Chapel on Romans 1:16. As God helped me to pour out my soul in a gospel message the attention was wonderful. They all seemed to be eager to get the Truth. Thank God, we have a wonderful gospel for the hungry multitudes of Asia.

Bethel Schedule for China.

The fight is on. We praise God we are in it. We would rather be right here in China at the front of the battle, pushing things for God, helping to tear down the strongholds of Satan than to be in any other spot in this whole world. Pray earnestly, having your expectation from God! That you may pray intelligently we give you the prospective line of march:

February—Dr. Stone, Miss Hughes and Band in tent meetings in Shangtung.

March—Dr. and Mrs. Ridout and Band in interior.

April—Dr. and Mrs. Ridout and Band in Kiangsi Province.

Next summer will see another Bible Conference. Already calls for a southern Bible Conference have come. Pray for us! Expect for us! Rejoice with us! And then,

"By and by, when the morning comes,
When the saints of God are gathered home,
We'll tell the story how we've overcome,
We will understand it better by and by."

J. V. HUGHES.

From the Address of Dr. E. Stanley Jones.

Someone has said that the seven deadly sins of society are these: policies without principles; wealth without work; pleasure without conscience; knowledge without character; commerce and industry without morality; science without humanity; worship without sacrifice.

As I understand the meaning of this meeting here, it is at least in one of its phases to fit this last of the seven deadly sins, namely, a worship that is without sacrifice, a Christianity without a cross. And I believe if there is any meaning to World Service it means this: that we are trying to put at the heart of our worship a cross, something for which we see no immediate return, asking for nothing save the privilege of giving, doing the thing not because we are compelled by a program but impelled by a person, something that we cannot escape because we are in fellowship with him and we must do it because we feel that inward compulsion.

This Church, and other churches, has taken upon itself a great World Service program to give the world a chance. It is the biggest business under Heaven.

This meeting here has a meaning too deep for tears and too wide for horizons; it stretches to the last man and to the last human need, and will not stop until they are all in, at home and abroad.

If we shall be tempted during these days that we are together here just to pluck some beautiful thought or some fine idea or some beautiful plan that shall be put before us to take the esthetics of Christianity, the beauty, art, literature, oratory, architecture, a sterner voice calls to us today as a great group representing Christianity and that voice says, "Turn a moment from the esthetics. Do something until it hurts." You laymen go down with that business until there shall be something else motivating it and Christ shall come down in the midst of it and hold it and use it, and you will turn toward it.

If out of this great meeting here, a meeting the undertone of which I sense as the very undertone that beats at the heart of Christianity, I believe if we deliberately, one by one, go and say, "I am going to take it on myself; it shall not end in a plan, but in the personal taking it on myself to see that my vision meets its obligation and its opportunity through this great passion of World Service," that we will accomplish.

That Arnold's Commentary.

I am just reminding those who have been using that wonderful Sunday school help, Arnold's Practical Commentary on the Sunday School lessons, that it is time they were sending in their order that they may have it for the very first lessons of 1929. The rapid sale of these books is a testimonial of their merit and the teachers who use them are multiplying every year. I have tried many other helps, but always come back for the final touch for spiritual help and general information on the lesson to what is indeed a "Practical Commentary." The Pentecostal Publishing Company can supply you with one at the reasonable price of $1.00.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

FROM EGYPT INTO CANAAN.

Rev. C. M. Griffeth.

Text: 1 Cor. 10:11. "Now all these things happened unto them for ensamples and they were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."

HE value of the historical account of the journey of the Israelites from Egypt to Canaan lies not only in its interesting narrations, authentic in themselves, but, for us especially, in the fact that their peculiar experiences throughout that journey set forth to us pictures and illustrations which enable us to understand the spiritual Christian life.

In the first place, a proper study of the journey of the Israelites will point out to us the actual road which we can take today and be absolutely confident that it will lead us to God and to that heavenly bliss which he has prepared for us.

In the second place the account pictures to us how to meet the emergencies that arise before us as we travel this road which leads out from the Egyptian Land of Sin, across over the Desert of Worldliness, and brings us into the Canaanland of Full Salvation wherein the soul finds completest satisfaction and heavenly joy.

There are really four periods of Israel's experience, namely, first, that of the Egyptian Slavery; second, that of the Pilgrim Journey; third, that of the Wilderness Wandering; and fourth, that of Possessing Canaan.

And each of these four periods sets forth a definite period in one's spiritual experience, namely, that of the Egyptian Slavery to sin; that of the Pilgrim Journey of the Victorious Life; that of the Wilderness Wandering of Rejected Light; and that of the Canaan Land of the Life Triumphant.

The first of these four periods was that spent in Egypt, a period of slavery. It is clear to all that Egypt has always been a type of the life of sin. And there are many who live in such an Egypt today, content to live on the garlic and onions of sinful pleasure but doomed to suffer in the near future the sorrows of sin.

The great thing that took place in the land of Egypt which is of supreme worth for us today is the institution of the Passover, which consisted in the slaying of a lamb and the sprinkling of its blood upon the doorpost, for it is the setting forth of the Atonement by which only is deliverance from the slavery of sin possible.

And the crossing of the Red Sea is also of significance to us for it pictures to us the deliverance which we have from sin by the blood of Christ. This Red Sea not only opened before them as they by faith stepped into it, but it also closed behind them, forming a complete separation from the land of slavery in which they had lived. In a similar way, when we dare to step into the flowing stream of Calvary, we will find that it will open before us and will close behind us, completely separating us from the life which we formerly lived, so that we can say with Paul: "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world."

Many are trying to do what Pharaoh himself suggested—to worship God without going out of Egypt to do so. But let us remember that if we will not definitely leave Egypt, we shall never arrive at Canaan! There must be this definite leave taking of all sinful living and a passing through the atonement of Jesus Christ before we can ever even start out upon the way that leads to life eternal.

To give up all sinfulness and worldly living is to be looked upon, some of us may fear, as being narrow-minded. But it is not narrow-mindedness. It is purposeful mindedness. When we come out of Egypt, we come out with a purpose. We come out with the purpose of reaching Canaan, a land flowing with milk and honey. We come out with the same purposeful mindedness which Paul expresses when he declares: "I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

As the Israelites stepped forth from the Red Sea they began their second period, the Pilgrim Journey which led them from the borders of Egypt to the entrance into Canaan. Did it ever occur to you that this crossing the desert from the Red Sea to the Land of Canaan is a type of our own Christian pilgrimage through the environment of worldliness which surrounds us everywhere?

One of the most remarkable things about this Israelitish Journey is that every emergency that arose was divinely met. When they came to the bitter waters of Marah, God showed them the wood that made the waters sweet. When they came to Elim, God provided them with a beautiful encampment. When they came to the Wilderness of Sin, God provided them with daily manna. When they came to Rephidim and found no water, God provided water out of the rock in Horeb. When they were attacked by Amalek, God provided victory.

All through their long journey it was God who supplied their every need and met every emergency with a copious supply! Oh, friends, what does this mean but that if we will come out of the Egypt of Sin and start for the Canaan Land of Full Salvation, and that during our journey if we will keep clean and separate from the worldliness through which we are passing, God will supply our every need. In every trial and in every temptation he will take us through victoriously! This is just what God promises us through Paul who wrote: "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

It is because of this promise of Divine Supply and because of the Divine meeting of every emergency in their pilgrimage across the desert, that we can see that God had intended that their journey should have been one of continuous victory day by day and hour by hour.

It is because the Spirit has shown me this fact in the historic account that I feel led to differ from those good people who teach us concerning the Victorious Life. They tell us that the Victorious Life is represented to us by the Land of Canaan. But I am convinced that the Land of Canaan typifies to us something far higher in Christian experience than the Victorious Life, namely the Life Triumphant—the life of Christian Holiness. The Victorious Life is represented to us rather by the Pilgrim Journey across the desert.

"But" you say, "their experience was far from being victorious."

And that is true. And that is just the confusing thing in our minds until we come to see that their experience was that of defeat, not because God had so intended, but because they failed through murmuring and faithfulness to live the victorious life which God had intended that they should have enjoyed. God had intended their march to be one of continual victory! And had they obeyed the promises given them and had they "let go, and let God," as our Victorious Life teachers tell us to do, they would have experienced the continuous victory which God had intended them to have.

The one sole cause of their defeats, however, was, as it is sometimes with us, a murmuring against God. It was that spirit of faultfinding and dissatisfaction. Had they trusted God instead of murmured, had they prayed instead of found fault, they never would have known defeat.

And now we come to the third period, the tragic period, the period which God never intended for them, that of the Wilderness Wandering of Rejected Light.

This period was caused by their refusal to enter into Canaan when the time came for them to do so. Before them lay the culmination of their long journey, the completion of God's plans for them. Their experiences through their journey gave them the light of God's care, provision, and protection. Yet when they came face to face with reports of giants and walled cities they rejected the light of God's will and of God's protection and refused to venture forth into the land, which resulted in their perishing in the Wilderness of aimless wandering, the Wilderness of Rejected Light!

What a great warning is their experience to us! Even the New Testament holds it up before us as a warning: "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God. . . Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it."

But thank God, at last that tragic period, at the end of forty years had an end, and the next generation had an opportunity to enter the Canaan Land by crossing the river Jordan. But this time, thank God, there was no doubting, no faltering, but a full yielding of themselves to the will of God. And under the leadership of a man who dared to believe and to trust in God, Joshua, they entered into and possessed the Land.

The Land of Canaan is looked upon by the New Testament as a land of rest, a type of the rest of soul. "There remaineth therefore." says the Book of Hebrews, "a rest to the people of God."

I like to think of the attainment of the Land of Canaan, this rest of soul, this fullness of God as the Life Triumphant, the life of Christian Holiness, the highest attainment this side of our coming glorification.

The Life Triumphant is a life much superior to that of the Victorious Life, however high and victorious that life may be.

The Victorious Life is a life which is characterized by a moment by moment victory over sin. In the Triumphant Life the inward conflict has given place to the controlling presence of a Love which is Divine. The Victorious Life is always on the defensive. In the Life Triumphant, the decisive crisis with inward sin has been met, fought, and won, the enemy routed, and Christ as conqueror, having met and forever defeated the enemy, reigns in triumph!

The "murmuring complex" which so disrupted the victory which God intended the Israelites to continuously have, is gone from the Life Triumphant. This outbursting of discontent is no longer found in the Life Triumphant, because its erupting cause, the carnal nature, has been purged from one's being when one became "filled with all the fullness of God."

In reviewing these four periods of Israel's experiences, that of slavery to sin, that of Victorious Pilgrimage, that of backsliding wanderings, that of Canaan Triumph, all of which typifies some phase of Christian experience, let me ask you, where along this route are you today? In which period is the Holy Spirit locating you at this present moment?

But wherever we are at this present moment, let us have the forward look and let us begin again our onward march, for there is for each of us much land ahead to be possessed!

A Duty Which is a High Privilege.

THOMAS CLARK HENDERSON.

WHEN William H. Huff died so unexpectedly last September it was found that he had been unable to provide any financial reserve to provide against the great needs which his death brought to his family. He had been paying on a small insurance policy, but, incident to his expensive trips to South America and Mexico and among negro churches in the United States, he had been compelled to borrow on it to the extent that it was seriously depleted. After many years of labor he had completed payments for a modest home in Sioux City, Ia. He placed on it a debt of two thousand dollars during his fourth and fifth missionary trips in order to carry on his missionary programs when some of the friends who were backing him were compelled through misfortune to withdraw their support. Friends in and about Sioux City have volunteered to raise five hundred dollars of that mortgage on the house, and under the leadership of Brother Walter P. Carr, University Park, Ia., there is a movement to raise the remainder—$1500.00—among the many friends of Brother Huff. It is hoped that before March 1st, 1929, the entire amount will be raised and the house can be presented to Mrs. Huff absolutely free from debt.

Fifteen hundred dollars is not a great amount to raise by the many, many friends of our honored and loved Brother Huff. There are many hundreds of us who will want a part in this tribute of love to him who has meant so much to us and to others. The plan is to have many people share in this high privilege rather than have any one person give a major portion of it. It will please those in charge of this matter if many will find it possible to give $25.00 each, while many more give $10.00 or $5.00 each, and by such gifts the entire amount will be provided for and maybe a surplus to be handed to the glorious woman who shared with Brother Huff the ministry that he so grandly and so fruitfully gave to the world. Here is a duty we owe to the memory of our friend and brother. It is more than a duty, it is a high privilege. The conditions of the mortgage are such that the gifts must be in sometime before March first. If you who read these lines can see your way clear to contribute to this fund will write to Walter P. Carr, Business Manager of John Fletcher College, University Park, Ia., immediately, this joyful labor of love will be consummated in good time.

Now let us consider some of the deeper involvements of this matter. Brother Huff was an evangelist. Had he been a pastor in an established denomination he would have had a regular salary and a claim on the retired minister's pension to provide against such an exigency as now presents itself to his family. He did missionary work, but he was not officially as a missionary else he would have had a steady salary, and a home provided for him with a pension to protect him and his family. As an evangelist he had neither a regular salary nor a claim on church funds to protect him in ill health or provide for his family in the event of his death. The true evangelist has a vastly higher living expense than either a pastor or the missionary. Most of the hard working evangelists have a traveling expense of from seventy-five to one hundred and twenty-five dollars each month. He is absolutely not able to work more than ten full months each year because of lost time between meetings and engagements. His income is fearfully uncertain and irregular. When illness comes to himself or family his income ceases and he must provide for lost time and income. There is a very real sense in which the true evangelist, as was Brother Huff, never takes a step that is not a step of faith. He gives time, his energy of body and mind, his ministry, his bodily health, his prayers, his patience, his all and knows not what shall be the consequence. He is so placed that he dare not refuse to give generously to a multitude of causes and movements which never get to his lay friends. If he sells books or tries to realize a bit of money on any side venture he is criticised and suspicioned and slighted. If one meeting pays him generously it is taken as a proof that all his offerings are large. Indeed, there is a quite general opinion that most of the evangelists are paid extravagant, if not enormous, amounts of money. That is a great mistake. I well know that Brother Huff did not receive the large offerings that are given to many of his brother evangelists. He was generous to a glorious degree. That fact can be testified to by individuals, schools, churches, conventions, camp meetings and missions. The tenth of his comparatively meagre income was never adequate to supply the wide scope of his gifts to God's work and its workers. It was not to be expected that this hard working, unselfish man would get rich from his ministry. The surprise would have been in his amassing any considerable amount of money. It is a magnificent tribute to Brother Huff's unselfish devotion to his task, to his generosity and to his honor that his unexpected death found him leaving the glory of an illustrious record, an unsullied name, an influence that can never die and which has reached to all quarters of the earth, but without any financial margin. He splendidly lived an unselfish life. He did not have anything which could not be cashed in for the service of God. The loan on his insurance policy and the mortgage on his home are proof that he always put God's work first. He did not ask for himself, but he gave all that he had. We will forever honor him for giving so much and keeping so little. We will always thank God for another example of true devotion to Christ at the cost of genuine self-sacrifice. We will be justly proud that one of our own men demonstrated so completely the spirit of Christ which was the subject of his last sermon. The best sermon that William H. Huff ever preached on what proved to be his last text was in his "laid-down life" for Christ Jesus and those for whom Christ died.

But we will not let those who gave him to us in a greater sense than we may ever fully know suffer needlessly for the necessities of life. We will see that some little bit of the price which he and they paid so nobly and so fully is paid back to them in their having a home that is free from debt. I am sure that hundreds who read this paragraph are saying: "Yes, I must have my wee gift in that larger gift to the memory of this premier preacher of the Word of God, glorious saint and lover of men."

YIELDED

P. R. NUGENT.

YIELD yourselves unto God" (Rom. 6:13). The command is unto Christians. The yielding is unto GOD. Not unto man, though it is often right to be subject unto those who are in a God-appointed place of authority, either of Church or State. (Eph. 5:21, 22; Heb. 13:7, 17; Rom. 13:1). Nor are we to be yielded to movements, or doctrines, however correct they may be; nor unto influences, emotions, feelings, manifestations, experiences, for such yielding easily exposes people to demons' delusions. Nor are we to be yielded to circumstances (though often we must yield to God about circumstances), for that may lead to despair, or bondage, or delusion. Of course it is not to be yielded to Satan, either as roaring lion or as an angel of light, or as a tempter on any line. Nor is it to be yielded to the flesh or the world.

Now, yieldedness, or surrender, if it is real is complete. A fort is not really surrendered until its defenders have surrendered the inner, as well as the outer, parts. As long as the defenders retain the smallest part of that fort it is not surrendered. So, as long as there remains any rebellion, or resistance, or argument or withholding, or questioning, or unwillingness toward God about anything, that person is not truly yielded to him. Such a person may be on the way to that condition of yieldedness (for God leads people to it step by step) but has not reached it.

True, and therefore, full surrender includes everything about which there is any controversy with God in our wills or affections; it includes ourselves. It means that we are to be like Paul when he saw the Lord, heard his voice and said: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" (Acts 9:6). There was no more resistance to the fact that Jesus was the Messiah. And, again, when he asked for the removal of the "thorn" and, instead, was told that Christ's grace was sufficient for him, he said: "Most gladly, therefore, will I rather glory in my infirmities, &c." (2 Cor. 12:9). There was no repining, no murmuring, about the Lord's will.

It is to be like David when Shimei cursed him and Abishai wanted to avenge the insult to his king. "Let him curse," said David, "for the Lord hath said unto him, 'Curse David.' Who shall then say, 'Wherefore hast thou done so?'" (2 Sam. 16:10). There was no disposition to vindicate his honor, or right, but a meek submission to what God had allowed to come from an enemy.

When Job was told of the loss of his possessions and children, he showed his yieldedness about it by the words: "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord" (Job 1:21). The same was noticeable about Eli when told of

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER V.

MOVING WESTWARD.

HUSTON had stretched himself in his reclining chair car, and slept soundly through the night. When he awoke in the early morning it took him a few moments to realize where he was. Then memory, like a dagger, stabbed him in the heart, and he found that while he had run away from the village of his tragedy he had carried his sorrow with him.

Poor Huston had lived in a very small world, but a good and beautiful little world. It was full of promise, confidence, and love. But he had now parted with that world, and entered into one much larger, more complex, and mysterious. A world full of uncertainty, disappointment, and tragedy. A world where one hardly knows who to trust, where there are untold millions of sad and broken hearts, who carry their secrets and their sufferings, often with a smiling face, with deep sorrows which cannot be healed. Huston was launching out in the vast world so full of strife, and disaster.

As he meditated and reasoned with himself he determined to hold on to his Bible, to keep his pledge to his mother, and to be the friend of humanity. He had suffered so keenly that he pitied the suffering, and hoped that he would never add a feather's weight of burden to anyone. He knew he had been converted, that for years he had believed that he was called to preach, but now there seemed to be a cold vacancy in his heart, he could not see how he could preach a sure message, and he determined for the present he would lay these things away for future thinking.

He arrived in Memphis early in the morning and bought a ticket for Texarkana. He stepped out on the street, as it was some hours before his train left, to look about the city. He had noticed a handsome boy, some sixteen years of age, looking at him, as if he desired to speak. Finally the lad walked up to him and said,

"Mister, could you help a fellow out of trouble?"

"It would be a great pleasure," said Huston, "if I could give a helping hand to any one."

"Well, sir," said the lad, "I am in the middle of a bad fix. My father lives in Fort Worth, Texas. He sent me to a Military school in Kentucky. They were hazing the boys there and handling them pretty rough, and I decided I did not want to stay there. I wrote father to send me a check, but I went to the postoffice last night and nothing had come for me. It took everything I had to get to Memphis. I had to lie around the depot all night last night. I have an uncle in Texarkana; if you could let me have the money to buy a ticket to that place I will telegraph my uncle to meet us at the train and he will repay you, and let me have sufficient funds to get home. It sure would be an accommodation to me if you can give me a lift."

Huston smiled and said, "I think I can risk a small investment in you." They went back to the ticket window, Huston bought the ticket, marked the price down on a piece of paper and handed it to the boy. He afterward learned that his name was Thomas Goodson. The boy was full of gratitude, rode at Huston's side and chattered the praises of Texas throughout the day.

Their train arrived in Texarkana a little after dark. They were met by a fine looking gentleman and his wife, the uncle and aunt of young Goodson. Their train was late, and the train for Fort Worth had left, so they hustled the two young travelers into their carriage and took them up home for the night, showing Huston every courtesy because of his kindness to their nephew.

Next morning, with an assurance to Huston that their house would ever be his home, he and the nephew took an early train for Ft. Worth. The boy sent a telegram ahead to his father. They were met at the station in Ft. Worth by Mr. Goodson and his wife, who would have no refusal from Huston but took him at once to their handsome home. Huston found that Mr. Goodson was running a very large mercantile business. It was before the department store came into being, but Goodson's big store had quite a variety of goods. There was a dry-goods department, men's clothing, then hardware, then all sorts of outfitting for cow-boys and men of many kinds going out on the frontier.

The next morning at the breakfast table Mr. Goodson asked Huston what his plans were in Texas. Huston told him he had made up his mind to become a cow-boy. Mr. Goodson suggested that he remain with them for a few months until he got the "hang" of things. He would give him employment in the store, he could buy him a horse, practice riding, learn how to throw the lariat, and pick up many ideas that would be useful to him on the range. With genuine gratitude Huston accepted the invitation. He was full of industry, a young fellow of unusual physical strength, charming manners, and at once won the admiration and confidence of the entire Goodson family.

Among Mr. Goodson's employees was a young Mexican, a very live, cheerful, handsome fellow. He, too, wanted to become a cow-boy, and at once there sprang up a warm friendship between Huston, this young Mexican, whose name was Morano, and young Thomas Goodson. They worked together in the Hardware Store, and every evening went out for a horseback ride, and practiced throwing the lariat. They all three were good riders, and learned very rapidly how to lasso a cow brute.

Huston wrote home to his old uncle, Aunt Sally, and a few other friends. And in due time the weekly paper from his little city back east came to him, with quite an interesting write-up of Annie Gray's wedding, of the runaway horse, and of young Huston's daring and splendid deed in saving the life of Mrs. Hendricks. There was also a paragraph concerning his going west, expressing the high regard felt for him in the community, and the good wishes that would follow him out to the wild west.

It may be that our readers would like to know something of the outcome of the Hendricks-Gray marriage. There is little or nothing to be said about them. They spent some months roaming about the country. In the meanwhile Hendricks father died and left him quite a fortune. A few years later Judge Gray and his wife passed away, and Mr. Hendricks and his wife established themselves in the old Gray mansion. Annie set to work to wear away any dislike for her, visiting the sick, ministering to the poor, helping forward all the church enterprises, and Mr. Hendricks, who had become the wealthiest man in the little city gave liberally to all worthy causes, and by this means they ingratiated themselves with the people. For some cause Mr. Hendricks became remarkably lean, while his wife became uncomfortably corpulent. They really presented an odd spectacle when they walked down the street together.

They never had but one child, that was a boy, and he had a very peculiar eccentricity. From the time he could toddle about the floor he was always jumping. He would jump over the broom handle, climb up on a chair, and jump off. Later on he would climb up to the roof of the coal house, and leap off at the risk of breaking his bones. As a school boy he could out jump any other boy in school. The people used to laugh and say he no doubt inherited that trait from his father.

There was a suspicion in the community that Mr. Hendricks and his wife did not get on very pleasantly together, and often the old women at quilting bees and other gatherings would say to each other in whispers, that they did not believe that Annie Gray's married life was a happy one at all. The wise old sisters would branch out into various comments and condemnation of sudden marriages, on short acquaintance. No doubt they were correct in their views on the subject.

One of the reasons why we are having so many divorces arises out of the fact that untold thousands of young people are living away from their homes. Girls are clerking in stores, living in boarding houses, and boys are working in factories, on telephone lines, and all sorts of employment that takes them from home. These young people meet in the cities and with almost no knowledge of antecedents, dispositions, or real character, they fall in love, and get married on a very short acquaintance, and often no doubt with an understanding in their minds if their married life does not bring them a satisfactory amount of happiness they will separate.

I wonder if, without making myself offensive, I might suggest to the young readers of this story that they carefully think over this matter, and determine not to marry until they know, and are well known.

We must now hurry out to western Texas, and see how Huston is getting on.

Crass Materialism.

Comes a news item that a wealthy man has paid a cash insurance policy of $100,000, to be insured a monthly income of $15,000 during the balance of his life. He is now 79, and expects to reach 90 or beyond, as did some of his ancestors. He anticipates that he will be ahead of the game, receiving perhaps double the amount he now invests.

What great good might one do with $100,000 in various ways! The American Bible Society, several colleges, etc., offer annuity bonds drawing as high as nine percent interest, according to the age of the donor, during his life. These are strictly scriptural colleges, where students are educated, not only intellectually, but spiritually, as well. Millions of Bibles could be donated where they are greatly needed. Or, thousands of young men and women could be equipped in mind and heart to preach the gospel of Christ. And at the same time he would receive $9,000 income a year, ample for all his needs.

Instead, he only enriches a great financial corporation, and draws an excessive income! Meanwhile, multitudes languish for the Bread of Life in the printed and spoken Word of God! This investment looks like another form of the folly of the rich farmer who said, "Soul, take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry! Thou hast much goods laid up for many days"! Apparently, he is not planning for treasure in heaven!

How many people are doing essentially the same, only on a smaller scale! Living only for time and sense, and forgetting God and eternity! Finding passing pleasure in their automobiles, fine mansions, etc., or in the vulgar movies and lustful dances! Without God now, and having no hope for the future! "The god of this world hath blinded their eyes"! A. S. H.

"For which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first and counteth the cost, whether he hath sufficient to finish it?"

It was united, persistent prayer based on the promises of God signed with the blood of Jesus Christ, the only price that passes the skies, that prevailed with him, who laid the foundation of "The Tower" over which is written, "Brooklyn Inter-Denominational Holiness Convention." To God be all the glory! Many through whom the Holy Ghost prayed for this glorious consummation, have "Crossed the Bar"; but not until they had sung unto us this song: "Salvation will God appoint for walls and Bulwarks. Open ye the Gates!" Year by year the Convention chants the refrain, whilst from the Glory-Land we seem to catch their joyous antiphonal, "Thou shalt call thy walls salvation and thy gates praise!" Thus the years roll on, and the thirteenth milestone has passed its record to the skies!

Out of the depths have we called unto him in many crises of this work, and never has he failed us, Hallelujah! On mountain top in each Convention have we seen his glory in greater power. Letters are still coming to us speaking of the marvelous oneness of spirit that pervaded the 1928 gathering, the conspicuous absence of any discordant note, the sweetness and tenderness of kindred minds, and, best of all the very marked evidence of The Presence in our midst.

It was from the hands of Bro. Morrison, after the Communion message had been brought by Dr. Shumann, President of the C. and M. A., that we received the bread and wine which do shew forth our Lord's death until he come again. The Communion service was as usual preceded by the "Sweet Hour of Prayer" led by Sister Thomas. Gratefully do we recognize the words of royal, carte blanche, welcome to his Church, given us in the evening service by Dr. Fox, to which Bro. Thomas responded for "the holiness folk," Bro. A. K. Lindsley following with prayer. Knowing that Bro. Morrison's time with us was limited, an earnest desire was voiced by Bro. Thomas, and echoed by all, that he should preach Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, which he did. There is but one Bro. Morrison, and no one loves him better or prays for him more fervently than his Brooklyn friends. We have his promise (D. V.) for the entire 1929 annual.

Commissioner Brengle brought his matchless Bible Readings daily. He had for many weeks been down in the valley, close to the water's edge, yea, in clear sight of the Celestial City, whilst we who love him prayed "leave him here a little longer," and the Father sent him back with added glory on his brow. God spare these warriors of the cross 'til the trumpet sounds!

Bro. Paul Rees was with us again to the great delight of all who heard him last year. Bro. Miner, of Rochester, was a new voice in the Convention; he is a sweet-spirited man, and many have said to us, "There was no uncertain sound of Holiness in Bro. Miner's teaching." Bro. John Thomas has been chosen, for life, as Presiding Preacher in this Feast of Tabernacle. His preaching this year was with mightier unction and greater sweetness than ever before. There was a greater variety in the daily program than usual this year for Bro. Thomas used some of the young preachers in the morning services. Bro. Gordon Wishart of Canada, Bro. Claude Fawns, graduate of Asbury College, now pastor of a church in Indiana, Bro. Dunster Thomas, pastor of Bro. John Short's old church in Cambridge, Mass. Bro. Dunster makes us think of Bro. Troxel when he was in the Convention a few years ago, in his willingness to "fit in" to all places where special help is needed.

Mrs. Fawns gave a message on the First Psalm one morning in her Mother's Fellowship Meeting, and a preacher in Connecticut wrote us that no more helpful message in all the ten days came to her, personally, than our little sister's talk on the trees, God's trees personified in the human family. It is always wise to let the Holy Spirit have his way. The "Tuesday Folk" have a great way of praying that he will smash any program that does not meet his perfect will. The Fellowship Meeting led by Sister Thomas, awakens the song, "Blest be the tie that binds," for in these heart-to-heart talks our Sister sweetly leads us through green pastures, "Down where the Living Waters flow."

The Sunrise Meeting, guided by the Holy Spirit through our beloved Sister Nellie Magee, grows in numbers and in power, and opens the windows of Heaven bringing "the poured out blessing" on all the services of the day. Bro. W. J. Wishart, of Canada, led the People's Meeting at 7:00 P. M., assisted by the very remarkable song voice of Mrs. Ellis, of Philadelphia, a guest of our Sister Norberry, who always presides so graciously at the organ. Bro. Norberry was here of course. Bro. John "Keeps on believing" for this work. Bro. Hodge, who made the opening prayer in the first Convention, has never missed one, and often assures us that he will be with us "Until Glory." These two brethren are charter members, having helped lay the corner-stone.

Who can describe music? Music so wondrously sweet and so in the spirit as that brought to us by Bro. Norris, his daughter Ruth and Sister Elsie Davies. Ruth's voice, a deep, rich contralto, and Sister Davies, a rare soprano, powerful and tender.

She carried with her the spirit of the Welsh revival, in which as a young girl, she was blessedly saved. All were blessed one day as she sang in her native tongue, and when she was joined by Bro. Thomas from the platform, Sister Thomas from the audience, Dunster from the piano, some of us who knew that Evan Roberts in that never-to-be-forgotten revival had added America to his prayer list, wondered if these Welsh song voices were not given us as "a token for good." Please pray to this end as they have promised, please the Lord, to be with us in 1929. "The man with the Silver Bells" and "Musical Saw," Bro. Crosby, made us feel like saying with the sweet singer in Israel, "let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." Hosanna!

It was a great joy to meet Sister Foth's class of San Blas Indian lads, some of whom were blessedly saved and sanctified in our last Convention. God is richly blessing our Sister's work with these Indian boys, who ring true every time. A Spanish young man connected with the Spanish work in Bro. Fox's Church was saved in our meeting this year. Sister Cooper who, for years worked with Indians in Panama, gave a marvellous testimony of God's power to heal bodies as well as souls. There was some marvellous work done in this Convention by the Great Physician based on James 5:14-15. Hallelujah!

Telegrams of "Brotherly Love" were exchanged with the Philadelphia Convention. Bro. Hogle and Sister Emily Haskins were the speakers at the Missionary meeting, presenting the needs of China, and the people subscribed $138.00. During the past summer one to whom the Brooklyn work was very dear, and who never missed a Tuesday meeting when in his Long Island home, has made the Harbour. A few days before his call he said to us in our home, "If you hear I have gone suddenly don't let any one mourn; just tell them Chase has seen Jesus." Rev. Wm. R. Chase of Sychar! You all know him.

Should we attempt to call the roll of out-of-town visitors, a special edition of The Herald would be required. Bro. and Sister Isos motored from Chicago. Bro. Gregg, the Wisharts, and Bro. Magee motored from Toronto. Bro. John Knapp was here from Ohio, and afterward led a mighty revival down on Long Island. Bro. John Gould, of the Eastern Nazarene College, came in the fulness of the blessing, and Bro. James Fitch from Moores, N. Y., where honey is found in the rocks, and where grapes of Eschol grow—of which truth, Bro. Fitch is a living proof. The midnight watch was kept by Bros. Hiskey, and Stickney praying over the nets the fisherman would cast the next day.

Letters of encouragement came to us from the Presidents of the Holiness schools, as they do each year, promising the prayers of their student bodies, in answer to our request. We believe that these prayers play no small part in the growth of the Brooklyn Convention; the holiness students of today will be the holiness preachers of tomorrow. Pray for them! The outdoor meetings led by Bro. MacLean, assisted by Bro. Ortlip in his famous "Chalk Talks," were richly blessed.

We have a splendid corps of active workers who look out for the temporal comfort of all, under the direction of Sisters Magee and Miller who believe that those who minister to the soul deserve all the care it is in their power to give them.

Were many saved, sanctified, and reclaimed? Yea, verily. How many? The record is Angel written! Some day the Books will be opened. In the thirteen years "Joy in the presence of the angels" hath oft been awakened. Many will point to the Brooklyn Tower saying, "It was there God spoke peace to my soul," or "There my prayer of years for my loved ones was answered." Eternity alone will tell the story. "Thou shalt call thy walls Salvation and thy gates Praise."

Listen ye who have prayed! Some day, some glad day, some day not so far away, for Jesus is coming soon, some day when the last trumpet sounds and the pearly gates of "the city of gold" swing wide, to close no more forever! Somewhere upon the golden strands of the River of Life, somewhere under the jasper wall, somewhere not far from the sea of glass, where the harpers harp, midst waving palms, and the Overcomers sing "The song of Moses and the Lamb," will be one from whose face all tears have been washed away, waiting for her only son, whose robes were washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb Nov. 8th, 1929, and who "Read his title clear to mansions in the skies" under the shadow of the Brooklyn Tower. A Mother, now twenty-nine years in "The City that lieth foursquare," whose light "is like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone clear as crystal." AND SHE IS MINE! Sister Cooke.

REPORT.

I recently closed a gracious revival at Vassar Church of the Nazarene, with Prof. C. C. and Margaret Crammond, of Lansing, Mich., as evangelists. There were a number of seekers and happy finders. Nine united with the church on the last Sunday evening, with more to follow. Twelve promised to erect family altars, and nine to tithe their income. Rev. Huggard, a man eighty years of age, ably assisted in this revival, preaching several times. We heartily recommend the Crammonds to our Nazarene pastors for revival work. The saints are encouraged in Vassar. Rev. F. Haughtaling.

REPORT.

As we reflect over the past year of 1928 and look forward to the New Year 1929, we are made to exclaim with the Psalmist, "Oh magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together."

The past year with its marvelous opportunities has come and gone with many a hard fought battle, but victories won. And now the New Year unfolds to us with its new obligations, privileges and unfought battles, for the devil is as much alive today as ever. The closing months of the old year were spent in battling against sin and Satan and for Scriptural Holiness in Pennsylvania and Alabama. Souls were saved and sanctified, the saints edified and we trust the Lord glorified.

The people and pastors for whom we labored have been courteous and kind and their fellowship we enjoyed as we labored together for the salvation of souls. We feel we have a host of friends who are praying for us as we help spread Scriptural Holiness over these lands. By God's grace and help we expect to push the battle this year as never before along full salvation lines.

We have some time not yet taken, and any one needing help may address us, 1353 Hemlock St., Louisville, Ky. We are slated for a holiness camp in Northeastern Arkansas, August 30th-September 8th, and would be pleased to give some one a meeting following the camp while we are in that section. Anyone concerned may write us.

A LETTER FROM THE TROPICS.

It is Christmas morning, and rather an odd one for me, for I am on the high seas enjoying tropical breezes between Panama and Guatemala. The first lap of my three months' tour in Latin America is over. I have had fifteen very wonderful days in Panama. I found friends whom I did not expect to meet and most interesting of all found many places for service.

My first message on the Zone was to a fine group of American young people in their Christian Endeavor service. I then preached in the evening service of the Interdenominational Union Church in Balboa, and for the next two weeks was kept very busy both in English and Spanish services.

On my second Sunday I had the privilege of again speaking to a fine crowd at the morning service in the Union Church; at 3:30 P. M. entertained with music at the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A., at 6:30 addressed the soldier and sailor boys in their Vesper Service, then hurried across the city to the Wesleyan Methodist Church to speak to a large waiting crowd of West Indians. Each of these services was crowned by the presence and blessing of God. On the third Sunday I repeated the same program in Cristobal and Colon on the Atlantic side. Those were happy hours.

Among the most interesting experiences were the chapel exercises at the Pan-American School in connection with the M. E. Church, known as the Seawall Church. There I came in contact with a cosmopolitan group of young people. They have the native Panamanians, Jamaicans, West Indians, Chinese and various mixtures. And there are some bright minds among them. A little Chinese lad, 13 years old, had just completed his test in a commercial course, writing 90 words a minute in English for five minutes without a mistake. There are wonderful possibilities for such a school under church supervision. This school has had to turn away 70 applicants, many of them from radical Roman Catholic homes, for lack of space to care for them.

I had four chapel periods and an evening social hour with them. Upon bidding them goodbye a Chinese girl arose and read a beautiful tribute and presented me with a Panama flag and a native musical instrument made from a large gourd. My heart was still more deeply moved when the whole group voted to pray that God would let me return to them sometime within two years.

Time and space are too limited to tell of various other services among the interesting natives. In 20 years of service I have never been more keenly aware of God's presence and approval than in these two weeks in Panama. My own soul is growing in this new atmosphere of service.

My first engagement in Guatemala is with the workers of the Friends Mission in the historic town of Quirigua where a five-days conference is to be held. Following that I will be journeying back to the interior, traveling by mule to the native Indian villages to get the closest contact possible with their lives. I will surely appreciate the prayers of my Herald friends. While the waves roll high this Christmas morning my heart is singing,

"On land or sea, what matters where,
Where Jesus is 'tis Heaven there."

Dr. Morrison's Condition.

Dr. Morrison seems to be holding his own, and we expect to start for Miami, Fla., tomorrow night, Wednesday, January 23. We will take our physician, Doctor Kenneth Hutcherson, with us, and Rev. W. E. Thomas will go along to nurse him until he regains his strength sufficiently to do without a nurse's attention.

We wish to thank our friends for the many kind letters of appreciation that have come to us, which we have been unable to answer owing to the arduous duties devolving upon us, and for the prayers that have been going up for him since he took sick. Continue to pray that he may soon be restored to the work of preaching the gospel he loves so well.

Sincerely,
 MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

The Heart of Things.

During Dr. Morrison's severe illness Rev. John B. Culpepper, the great evangelist, sent me the following letter which gives some idea of the fellowship existing between them. I am sure neither of them will object to my publishing this bit of correspondence.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 9, 1926.

Rev. J. B. Culpepper,
 New Smyrna, Fla.

My dear Brother Culpepper:

I am just in from a long summer campaign. My absence from home and my bad writing with a pen will account for my not writing you sooner. There is much excellent matter in your sermon, but I agree with you it will be better to boil down a little.

You are a wonder, a man of your age with such marvelous physical and mental power. I can only understand it that back of your body and brain there is a great soul and back of your soul is a great Savior. That's good backing.

If there should come to me a rumor that you are dead I will deny it on the spot. I would say that the house you have been living in has fallen down and that you have moved out, that the great preacher, lover of God and humanity, is alive and doing well, that he has gone into a larger house where he will live a larger life through all eternity.

As the years pass, God, His Son, His Word, His Heaven, His everything becomes greater and more glorious to me. I sometimes almost wish to get away into that larger and better realm. I judge there will be service over there,—enterprise, undertaking, work without worry, fatigue or failure. I engage you now to swap work with me on our different employments and contracts in that great eternal world. God bless you and then bless you again and then pour his gracious Spirit and undying love into you always.

With kind regards to your family,
 Faithfully,
 H. C. MORRISON.

"ALTHOUGH" AND "YET."

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE prophet Habakkuk closes his book of prophecy with a description of the severe judgments of God against Judah. It is indeed a gloomy picture, but out of the gloom there shines a picture of trust that turns the darkness into light, the desolation into glowing prospects.

The prophet goes on to say: "Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there

JUST A SUGGESTION!

Many are wanting a safe place to invest their money where moth and rust cannot corrupt, and where it will prove a blessing to others.

The Students' Loan Fund of Asbury Theological Seminary which provides for the education of young men preparing for the ministry, would be a safe and wise investment.

There are those who want their sacred tithe to bear fruit in the salvation of souls.

Why not help to educate Spirit-filled young men who, perhaps, after you shall have quit the walks of life, will be seeking God's lost sheep on the mountains of sin.

Could you do better with the money God has entrusted with you than to assist in preparing young men to preach his uttermost salvation to the world he came to redeem?

Had you ever thought that the only way to "lay up treasures in heaven" is to invest your treasures here in immortal souls?

Think on These Things!

shall be no herd in the stalls: Yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation."

No fig-tree blossom, no fruit in the vines, no olives, no meat, no flocks, no herds,—what a desolate and distressing situation, but this does not cause the prophet to lose hope, nor to cease trusting the Lord, for he says, "Yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation." That is to say, having the joy of the Lord will more than atone for the lack of these temporal things.

As some one has said, "There come times in many lives when the soul finds itself bereft of every comfort both outward and inward; when all seems dark, and all seems wrong even; when everything in which we have trusted seems to fail us; when the promises are apparently unfulfilled, and our prayers gain no response; when there seems nothing left to rest on in earth or heaven. It is at such times that we may say, "although" all is wrong everywhere, "yet" there is still one thing left to rejoice in, and that is God; the "God of our salvation," who changes not, but is the same loving, tender Father yesterday, today, and forever.

In the lives of many who read this there is, I feel sure, at least one of these desert "Althoughs," and in some lives there may be many. But remember there is also "Yet" left to you. Is not God enough for you? Can you not sing and mean it,

"Thou, O Christ, art all I want,
 More than all in thee I find?"
 Can you not say with the poet,
 "Though the rain may fall and the wind be blowing,
 And cold and chill is the wintry blast;
 Though the cloudier sky is still cloudier growing,
 And the dead leaves tell that summer is passed;
 Yet my face I hold to the stormy heaven,
 My heart is as calm as a summer sea;
 Glad to receive what my God hath given,
 Whate'er it be.

"When I feel the cold, I can say, 'He sends it,'
 And His wind blows blessing, I surely know;

For I've never a want but that He attends it;
 And my heart beats warm, though the winds may blow.

The soft sweet summer was warm and glowing,

Bright were the blossoms on every bough;
 I trusted Him when the roses were blowing,
 I trust Him now.

"Small were my faith should it weakly falter,
 Now that the roses have ceased to blow;
 Frail were the trust that now should alter,
 Doubting His love when the storm-clouds grow.

If I trust Him once I must trust Him ever,
 And His way is best, though I stand or fall,

Through wind or storm He will leave me never,
 For He sends all."

the coming judgment on his family (1 Sam. 3:18). When we are fully yielded we can "take joyfully the spoiling of" our goods. (Heb. 10:34).

And as regarded her good name among men, Mary showed a willingness to be reproached for the Lord's sake in connection with the miraculous conception of her Son. "Be it unto me according to thy word," she said (Luke 1:38). She was yielded to God about her reputation.

Full surrender means that you do not want your own way about anything at any time, but are utterly willing for God to have his way always; to act in his own way and time—no restlessness, no fret, no desire to hurry God up. You are contented to remain where you are, and as you are, as long as God wants you to. Nor do you want your own way about people being agreeable to you, or pleasing you. You are not "spoiled."

In this state of full surrender you are willing to be sick as long as the Lord (not the Devil) wants you thus; willing to endure anything the Lord allows to come upon you without resisting, or peevish questioning, contentedly leaving it to him to stop the trouble when he sees best; and willing to be not delivered if that is his choice. There is no holding on to any blessing, grace, or gift for its own sake, but as unto the Lord. In fact, you are willing to be unclean, or be damned if God decides it thus, for it is easily possible to be selfish about our salvation. In this yieldedness a person holds on to nothing—neither friends, family, money, possessions, home, ambitions, pride, organizations, religious work, habits, comfort, life, or anything else. Such of these as are wrong in themselves are dropped forever; those that are right are let go from all selfish holding and are held only as unto the Lord. The heart does not cling to them. There are no idols. You have "suffered the loss of all things." (Phil. 3:8).

Complete yieldedness means to be free from all selfish discontent, or fret, about food, clothing (even when you see others well clothed when you are not), lodgings, work, people who are a trial to you and

The Hughes' Memorial Auditorium.

L. R. Akers, President of Asbury College

The many friends of Asbury College will be glad to know that the new Auditorium is practically completed with the exception of the inside work, such as plastering, etc.

The building has been rushed to the end that it might be ready for the National Holiness Association Convention which meets early in May, and also provide for the large crowds which we expect at Commencement, May 31-June 5.

Pushing the construction of this building so that its completion may care for our imperative needs has meant a bit of financial hardship inasmuch as many pledges were given for a longer tenure of time than was required for the erection of the building. In other words, the costs of this structure must be paid at once whereas the pledges have been strung out over a period of a year or more. It was hoped when this building enterprise was launched that the sale of two thousand seats might be effected in order to cover the cost of the building. This does not mean that the seats themselves cost $50.00 each, but that the sale of two thousand seats (the capacity of the building) at $50.00 each trance, bronze tablets being placed here "In Memoriam." The vestibule has a tile floor and is finished in Cæstone.

"A balcony extends on both sides of the Auditorium and at the rear and provides additional seating space for six hundred people, making a total seating capacity of two thousand.

"The Auditorium is so arranged that the most remote auditor is within less than 100 feet of the speaker on the platform.

"The building is treated with special sound-absorbing material so as to produce the optimum accoustical condition, determined after carefully considering the requirements for proper speech and the proper reinforcement of musical sounds from the organ.

"The Auditorium is lighted by memorial art glass windows at the sides and by art glass skylights in the ceiling. A beautiful and harmonious ensemble of electric light fixtures are provided for the entire building.

"The great four manual fifty-six stop Austin pipe organ, the memorial gift of Mrs. James Magee, is located at the front end of val spirit is continuous throughout the year. The only pressing problem is that of adequate finance. Provision for this we feel can only be forthcoming from the friends of Full Salvation and of orthodox Christianity throughout our nation. No gift is too small to be of real assistance. We earnestly request those who love the school and appreciate the heroic work which it is endeavoring to accomplish to rally to our need in this time of pressure and thus enable us to go forward victoriously to the successful completion of the greatest year's program in the history of our beloved institution.

those who do poor work. There is no restlessness, nor impatience, in the midst of perplexities, but a patient waiting on God for him to make it all plain. No complaining, no grumbling.

There is a willingness, too, to receive, and profit by, advice, or reproof, or rebuke, without resenting such help. Even if rebuke is undeserved, or people expect of you more than God does, there is no resentment. You do not impatiently talk back, nor feel back when your advice, or authority, is disregarded, your wishes ignored, your good offers rejected, or even scorned, your rights denied, yourself snubbed, or avoided, or ridiculed. And God gives grace to reply gently, or not at all if that is best.

And you are entirely willing to stay at home while another is on the go. There is no inward disturbance, nor sorrow (but rather joy), when another is petted, caressed, praised, while you are not; and if you are misunderstood (and cannot explain), misrepresented, or treated unjustly, you are willing for it to be thus if that is God's choice. There is willingness to labor in a hidden way while others are honored—or even get credit for what you do; a willingness, too, to do drudgery, common-place work, while others have pleasanter, more honorable service. For Christ's sake, you are willing to help others get advantages you have not. Nor is there a desire to let it be known that something happened because you prayed. Interruptions do not cause impatience, and you are as willing, for Christ's sake, to scrub a floor or clean a stove, as to preach a sermon or lead a meeting. There is also a willingness, too, to yield the body to the flame (Dan. 3:28); and start the day equally willing to go to work or to go to be with Jesus.

What such a person wants is God's will only and always, and he is contented with it.

The Vulture's Claw.

By Dr. C. F. Wimberly.

One of his best. A new edition of this great book has just come from the press. It is a universal verdict, that this book has a message individual and pungent. Young people who do not read religious books at all will relish this great mountain story. All books have gone up in price, but Vulture's Claw will continue at the pre-war price, —$1.50—360 pages, and beautifully illustrated by an artist with original scenes taken from the story. Order this book from Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

would provide for the cost of the entire structure.

That the readers of THE HERALD may have a clear account of the building, we append a description as furnished by the architects, Churchill & Gillig, of Lexington:

"The new Hughes Auditorium, named in honor of the Rev. J. W. Hughes, D.D., founder of Asbury College, is designed in the Classical style and has a portico with six Tuscan columns, conforming with the other edifices on the Campus.

"The building consists of a ground or basement floor in which there is located seven classrooms of standard size, each accommodating fifty students, and a large hall 38x100 feet which it is proposed to use as an Exhibition Room or Museum, together with the necessary toilet accommodations and an office for an administrative officer.

"The main or auditorium floor is 83x90 feet and provides a seating capacity of twelve hundred. At one end of the Auditorium is located the Choir, or seats arranged amphitheater fashion, which will accommodate one hundred and fifty singers. The speaker's platform in front will seat comfortably fifty persons.

"The Auditorium is entered through a vestibule which is 14 feet wide and 48 feet long, which will be used as a memorial en-the building, back of the choir, and has special architectural treatment combining both tone openings with display pipes and is the principal architectural motive.

"Nine distinct and separate exits are provided so that the auditors may quickly leave the building after services.

"The entire first floor and all stairs are of fireproof construction, making for a permanent building and absolute safety from panic or fire hazard.

"The ground dimensions of the building are 142x89 feet.

"It is heated by steam obtained from the Central Power House and special provision is made for pumping fresh air into the building to provide at all times adequate ventilation."

All friends of Brother Hughes, the rugged and consecrated founder of Asbury College, as well as all friends of the school, should be represented in this worthy enterprise by seats in the new building at $50.00 each. The name of each donor will be placed on a brass plate and affixed to the back of the seat. Parents, whose children have attended or graduated from the school, could well afford to perpetuate their memory in subscribing to the building fund in this manner.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

This is the tenth day of the New Year on which I write this letter, but it will be some time before you read it, as it will not go to print for a while. I have been very busy during these past days, owing to the sickness of Dr. Morrison, who came home from Birmingham, Ala., the 13th of November quite ill, and has not been well since. He is now in his seventh week at the Deaconess Hospital this city, where he is having the best of care by faithful doctors and nurse. His weak heart makes it slow to regain his strength, but now that his bronchial trouble, asthma, and pleurisy are gone, he is beginning to relish his food and sleep better, and we are hopeful that ere long he will be ready to take the train for sunny Florida.

There is so much sickness everywhere that I suppose many of you boys and girls have been lassoed by that dread disease, "flu," and know something of what it means to have to lie in bed and abide the time of convalescence. I believe if it were to turn cold and stay that way awhile we would all feel better and there would be fewer germs to disturb us. No doubt the present scourge of flu will be the cause of many vacant chairs around some of our firesides, and I pray those who are bereft may know the comforts of God's sustaining grace. Take good care of yourselves, live close to the Lord, and make every day count for something that will be worth while. Lovingly,

AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I become one of your nieces too? This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. Father likes The Herald. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with J, and has five letters in it. I am ten years old. My birthday is March 26. I am about four feet high and I weigh 69 pounds. I am in the fourth grade. Have I a twin?

Ganover Country,

FALLEN ASLEEP

HIX.

Mr. G. A. Hix, of Red Boiling Springs, Tenn., passed from earth to heaven, Nov. 21, 1928. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn his departure. Brother Hix was 69 years of age; he was an elder in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, and Superintendent of the Sunday school for thirty years. He leaves a host of friends to mourn his departure. He will be in the first resurrection over which the second death has no power. He was well beloved by every one.
J. S. Moss.

BAXLEY.

Nov. 28, 1928, the death angel visited our home and took from us our dear father, Charles E. Baxley. He was born Dec. 28, 1850; was united in marriage to Lena M. Funk, June, 1878. To this union were born ten children, seven of whom survive, and all but one were at his bedside when he passed away. He professed faith in Christ at the age of twenty and united with the Clear Run Baptist Church where he remained a faithful member until God took him. He was a good father and devoted husband, and his many friends will miss him greatly.

He was laid to rest in the beautiful Sunnydale Cemetery to await the resurrection morn. We miss him, oh so much, but God had a better place for him and some day we expect to meet him where partings are no more.

His daughter,
Mrs. R. Norris.

CLACK.

This community was deeply saddened by the death of Mr. Jimmie Clack, who passed away Saturday P. M. Dec. 15, 1928. He would have been twenty years old Jan. 10, 1929.

Jimmie had lived in this community only a few years, but had made many friends, as he was of such a kind disposition that he made friends wherever he went for he often denied himself to help others less fortunate than himself.

Jimmie didn't belong to any church, but showed a Christian spirit all through his sickness; he was so appreciative to those who tended his bedside. He suffered much pain but bore it with Christian fortitude and patience.

It is so sad to give him up so young and when life seemed so bright, and his family so longed to keep him, yet he was submissive and said, "It is just with Jesus whether I live or die."

He communed with his Savior, and when his suffering wasn't so severe he sang songs of praise to his Redeemer. At the last when he could bear his suffering no longer, he prayed the Lord to be relieved, and his gentle spirit took its flight to await the coming of his loved ones on the other side of the River.

He was buried Dec. 15 at Bay Creek Church, in Walton County, Ga. His funeral was conducted by Rev. J. J. Stevenson.

Dear brother Jim has left us,
Left us, yes, for evermore;
But we hope to meet our loved one
On that bright and happy shore.
A vacant place, the empty chair,
We see them day by day.
And oh, it fills our hearts with care
Since our brother went away.
God needed one more angel
Amid his shining band,
And so he bent with loving smile
And clasped our loved one's hand.
Mrs. M. M. Kelley.

CARSON.

Little George Cleon Carson was transplanted to the fields of light on October 28th, after five days illness with infantile paralysis. He was such a bright boy for only ten years of age, easily carrying the seventh grade work at school. His sixth grade work all marked well into the nineties and hundreds. He had wonderful ingenuity and large understanding of all things about the farm, being wise far beyond his years. Sunday school and Bible stories he loved well.

During the afternoon of the 27th, he informed us that he was going and requested Bible reading and as we read he called for another chapter until we read six, and during this time he responded to the verses which appealed to him most "Amen" and "Yes", and as we finished the reading his little face was all lit up with a heavenly glow as he said "Mama that does me more good than anything else." He acknowledged that God had power to heal him and he would like to get well then said, "But maybe Jesus wants me now."

We explained how Jesus had died for him and that our departed would welcome him beyond the mists and as the little face beamed with joy, he said, "Oh mama I want to go now if I can't get well," and said, "Don't cry." He sang a line of the song, When the Roll is Called Up Yonder, then said, "I will be there too." He would occasionally say, "Jesus died for me." He said, "Mama wouldn't have anything to worry about after he was gone, or be afraid to wash him after he was dead," so we (being quarantined were alone with him) carried out the request and were alone with him until we took him to the tomb at Cheshire on October 29th.

NOTICE!

In a recent issue of The Herald there appeared a recommendation of Rev. John W. Waldron, whom we have since learned is not in the active ministry on account of some charges that have been against him. I suppose the brother who sent the recommendation was not fully acquainted with all the facts in the case, so we take this opportunity to state that we were not responsible for them.

ANSWERED PRAYER.

Abbie C. Morrow Brown.

Much that perplexes us in our Christian experience is but the answer to our prayers.

We pray for patience, and God sends tribulation; for tribulation worketh patience. Rom. 5:3-5.

We pray for submission, and God sends suffering; for we learn obedience by the things which we suffer. Heb. 5:8.

We pray for unselfishness, and God gives us opportunities to sacrifice ourselves by thinking on the things of others, and by laying down our lives for the brethren. Phil. 2:4; Matt. 27:42; 1 John 3:16.

We pray for victory, and the things of the world swoop down upon us in a storm of temptation; for this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. 1 John 5:4.

We pray for strength and humility, and some messenger of Satan torments us until we lie in the dust crying for its removal. 2 Cor. 12:7.

We pray for union with Jesus, and God severs natural ties, and lets our best friends misunderstand us and seem indifferent to us; and calls on us to walk "alone." Isa. 51:2; 63:3.

We pray for love, and God sends peculiar suffering and puts us with apparently unlovely people, and lets them say things which rasp the nerves and lacerate the heart, for love suffereth long and is kind, love is not impolite, love is not provoked. Love beareth all things, believeth, hopeth, and endureth; love never faileth. 1 Cor. 13:4-8.

We pray for likeness to Jesus, and the answer is, "I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction. Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong? Are ye able?" Isa. 48:10; Ezek. 22:14; Matt. 20:22.

And in the furnace he melts us into something of his own tenderness and gentleness, and teaches us how to bear one another's burdens, and how to live to make intercession for the sick and the sorrowful. Gal. 6:2; Heb. 7:25; Eph. 6:18.

But this is only the transitory side. There is an everlasting recompense of praise and honor and glory at the revealing of Jesus Christ. 1 Peter 1:7. "For the momentary lightness of our tribulation, in a manner yet more and more excelling, is working out for us an age-abiding weight of glory; so long as we are not looking out for the visible things, but the invisible; for the visible things are but for a season, whereas the invisible are age-abiding." 2 Cor. 4:17, 18. Rotherham.

"He answered prayer,
Not in the way I sought,
Not in the way I thought He ought,
But in His own good way, and I can see,
He answered in the fashion best for me,
And I am glad that I had such a share,
In His parental love and tender care.
That He thus answered me,
He answered prayer."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VI.—February 10, 1929.

Subject.—Repentance and Faith.
Luke 15:11-24; Acts 2:32-39.

Golden Text.—Repent ye, and believe the gospel. Mark 1:15.

Times.—A. D. 29 and A. D. 30.

Places.—Perea and Jerusalem.

Introduction.—Unless we deal solely with the two subjects of repentance and faith, our lesson is a bit complicated. First of all, it may be well to make a few statements concerning this parable—commonly termed "The Parable of the Prodigal Son." I wish it had been named the "Parable of the Forgiving Father." There are lots of such sons, but only one such Father. The "certain man" of the parable represents God. The elder son stands for the Jews who were trying to keep the Gentiles out of the kingdom of heaven. The younger son is a type of the Gentiles who had wandered far away from their Father's house, but were anxious to get back. Such being the chief points in the parable, it was, of course, thoroughly applicable to the people to whom the Master was speaking. But it has a broader application, because there are still many wandering prodigals all about the world, and no end of bigots who are ready to shut heaven's door in the face of all who do not bow to their special isms, and the forgiving Father lives eternally to bless his wayward sons and daughters.

One thought must not be overlooked here; some have contended that this parable teaches that God has no need of a blood atonement, in order to forgive sins. But we must remember that there are many other passages that do enforce the doctrine of such an atonement. "Without the shedding of blood, there is no remission" of sins. Jesus "tasted death for every man." "This cup is the New Testament in my blood, which is shed for you." The parable has no reference whatever to the atonement, but is dealing with the forgiving nature of our heavenly Father. The atonement has been made, and since that is true, the Father stands ready to receive and to forgive every returning prodigal; "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The preachers of a century ago had much to say about repentance; but it is rather a silent note in the present-day pulpit. If we go back into Old Testament times, we shall hear a good deal of real preaching on this subject. I suspect that Noah rang pretty clear on it for about one hundred and twenty years, what time he was building the Ark. One time when Israel had badly backslidden Joshua called the leaders of the people to meet him in Shechem, at which time and place he poured into their ears a red-hot message on sin and repentance. Elijah did not mince matters on Mount Carmel when he had Ahab call the people together for a test by fire just after the long famine that devastated the land. If memory serves correctly, Isaiah, Jeremiah and some of the Minor Prophets had no little to say to the sin-cursed Jews of their day concerning sin and repentance. Do you remember that repentance was the chief burden of the wilderness cry of John the Baptist? "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He let them know that they had to clean up, and get cleaned out, to get ready for the coming King and his kingdom. When our Lord began his ministry immediately after John baptized him and the Holy Spirit came upon him, his cry was "Repent ye." The subject must be of prime importance. Surely there is no salvation from sin and hell without it. I have a strong conviction that the same cry is needed throughout the world today. There are sinners by millions, and their sins are as black as the pit. O ye heralds of the cross, cry aloud and spare not, till this nation shall tremble and repent before God in sackcloth and ashes. Nothing else will ever bring a revival of salvation to our people. Lengthen out your mourners' benches; proclaim the whole counsel of Jehovah; call on Heaven for the Holy Ghost without whom you cannot preach; above all things, get the church members saved, and baptized with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven; never let up until a flood-tide of salvation sweeps the land, and brings in the prodigals from the ends of the earth.

Shall we preach about faith? Certainly; but let us remember that no man can exercise saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ until he has repented of all sin. Mind you, that means all. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Saving faith is the privilege of one who has forever forsaken all sin, but of none other.

Comments on the Lesson.

11 and 12. Some commentators tell us that under the old Jewish law at the time of Christ, when there were but two sons in the family, the elder inherited two-thirds of the father's property, and the younger son one-third. Living here means the father's property. Some have contended that this old father made a big blunder in giving the younger son his portion of the estate. That may be true from a human standpoint; but Jesus is showing us how God deals with men. He furnishes all we need for spiritual success, and leaves us perfectly free to work out our own salvation under the blood of the cross. He will never trample upon the free autonomy of a soul.

13. The far country to which the young man is said to have gone represents sin, which is always a long way from the heart of God. There wasted his substance in riotous living.—Whatever of decent manhood and character there was about him he sunk in the cesspools of lust, drunkenness, and general debauchery and lewdness.

14. When he had spent all.—When he was a complete spiritual wreck. Like many another sinner, he did not realize his ruin until he found himself on the verge of death and hell: "He began to be in want."

15. Joined himself to a citizen of that country.—Hired himself out to feed hogs—a pretty low job for a Jew. Did you ever notice how a sinner will try almost any sort of scheme for relief when he finds himself ruined by his debased conduct? Well, here you have a case of it.

16. He must have been hungry when he tried "to fill his belly with the husks that the swine did eat." Poor fellow! Just like lost sinners now are seen running after Mormonism, Eddyism, Russellism, and a host of other husks that will not even satisfy the hunger of hogs. "Husks—The pods of the carob tree, resembling the pods of the locust tree, used as food for animals and sometimes for very poor people." But genuine repentance is a bitter pill for men to swallow, for it includes reparation and restitution for wrong doing.

17. When he came to himself.—That was the best moment he had seen since he left the old home. A convicted sinner is on shouting ground, if he can but believe it. The poor boy was right: Father had bread enough, and some to spare for his wandering son. What a picture of the spiritual riches of our heavenly Father. He has enough for every perishing sinner, and some to spare.

18. I will arise and go to my father.—He is repenting beautifully now. Son, what will you tell Father? "Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee." That rings well. Will you tell him anything else? "I am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants." That was a fine repentance. But watch him act.

20. He arose, and came to his father.—I would like to drive home a real lesson. All our mourning will do no good, unless we arise and go to our Father. Judas Iscariot wailed over his sins, but failed to arise and go to the Father. The old father must have been watching for his boy, for "he saw him when he was a great way off." May I say that our Father, too, is watching for his returning prodigals; and, like this parable father, he has compassion and runs to meet them.

21. Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am no more worthy to be called thy son.—But Father hushed him up with a hug and a kiss of forgiveness, because he saw that his repentance was real. That was just like our Father.

22. The best robe.—Reserved for the finest guests. A ring on his hand. The mark of affection. Shoes on his feet.—Servants and slaves did not wear shoes much in those days.

23. The fattened calf.—When I was converted at ten years of age, I am sure that the heavenly Father killed the fattened calf, and that we had a merry good time down in my father's calf pasture under the young pines.

24. This my son was dead, and is alive again; was lost, and is found.—You cannot beat that picture. Just spiritualize it, and you have a picture of a repenting sinner falling into the arms of our heavenly Father, and finding full and perfect salvation.

I wish I had time and space to write another set of notes on that part of our lesson taken from Acts 2:32-39. In this we have God's conditions for all genuine revival work. The converted Church must be sanctified wholly through the baptism with the Holy Ghost, thereby receiving power to witness for Jesus Christ. When the Comforter has thus come to the Church, "He will convince (convict) the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." That is God's plan; and I make bold to say, that any other plan is man-made, and will produce shoddy results. This thing cannot be done by

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions produce an attractive income. The income is at the highest rate consistent with safe investment and, as a rule, higher than the average commercial investment of equal security.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions not only provide to the purchaser an income that will not shrink, but they bless others in that they make it possible for the missionary to interpret to humanity the love and mercies of God as revealed in the Gospel in healing the sick; in clothing the naked; in feeding the hungry, and in teaching and preaching the Gospel to all people and to all nations.

Annuity Bonds of the Board of Missions will be issued in exchange for cash, bonds, stocks, lands and partial cash payments made monthly.

THAT WILL NOT SHRINK

human might, nor by human power, but by the Spirit of God. Shall we ever learn the lesson?

The last verse of the lesson is of tremendous importance: "For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." What promise? The gift of the Holy Spirit in his baptismal office. Jesus says (John 14:17) that the world (unconverted people) cannot receive the Spirit in this baptismal office. This is his coronation gift to the Church. This is the meaning of Pentecost. We are crying for a revival. It will come through the sanctification of the Church, or it will never come at all. O for a new Pentecost! Master, send it speedily, for the world is perishing.

SEEING THE FUTURE.

The above is the title of a charming book whose author is Christabel Pankhurst, who has given some of her best thought to this production. "What is the world coming to?" is the question for which Miss Pankhurst seeks an answer. The signs of the times, including moral and social unrest, differences arising in the churches, international tension, the recent upheavals of nature, are examined from the standpoint of prophecy. Even modern science is called as witness, in a fashion perhaps unexpected but none the less illuminating. The present unprecedented world situation is represented as portending a new era of peace and righteousness.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

The Gist of the Lesson, 1929

BY R. A. TORREY, D.D.

Fits the Vest Pocket. The Religious Telescope says: "It has proved a blessing to Sunday school teachers and pupils. In addition to the digest of the lessons, comments, etc., it contains attendance record, blank pages for names and addresses, calendar and the Ten Commandments.

Price, 35c.

All Denominations Approve Its Use.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide

BY MARTHA TARBELL, Ph.D.

New ideas, new, light, new suggestions and new enthusiasm comes to the teacher who opens the 1929 edition of this favorite handbook to the International Sunday School Lessons. "A wealth of undreamed of and almost passing belief" are the words used by one reviewer in describing it. The greatest triumph however that has come to "The Guide"—that it has won over all helps—is the reputation it now enjoys for "making teachers of all who use it."

$2.00 postpaid.

No Bible worker or student can afford to be without it.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Attention Chicago Central District. —Our Preachers' Meeting will be held at Decatur, Ill., March 12th to 17th, 1929, Dr. R. T. Williams, Rev. W. G. Schurman, Special preachers. Others taking part: President, T. W. Willingham and Vice President A. K. Bracken of Olivet College; Dr. E. P. Ellyson, Editor of Sunday School Literature; M. Lunn, Assistant Manager of the Publishing House; Dr. J. G. Morrison, General Secretary of Missions; District Superintendents Rev. C. A. Gibson, of Ohio; Rev. R. V. Starr, of Michigan; Rev. J. W. Montgomery, of Northern Indiana; Rev. C. J. Quinn, of Indianapolis District; Rev. E. C. Dees, of Missouri; Rev. J. W. Short, of Iowa District. Pray that God may make this a great gathering to advance his cause and kingdom.—E. O. Chalfant.

By a recent decision handed down by the Common Pleas Court of Hamilton County, Ohio, the position of Rev. John F. Knapp as Trustee of God's Bible Schol has been maintained. The Court finds specifically, "There is no question of the character, fitness or ability of John F. Knapp to serve, nor of his call to the office of a religious teacher and minister." "The Court is therefore of the opinion that under the circumstances presented, the Court had the power to appoint John G. Knapp as trustee, and that he was and is a legal trustee of said Institution." The Hon. Thos. H. Darby was the Presiding Judge in this case.

Rev. D. L. Griffin writes that his wife has been in the sanitarium for over a hundred days and not expected to live. She has been seriously ill with cancer for three years, has had four operations. Special prayer is asked for her that God may undertake for her and heal her if it is his will.

Winfield Hemenway, of Ney, Ohio, is desirous to be associated with some one needing a young people's worker. Let those interested communicate with this party at the above address.

Mrs. Jonathan Kruger, Huntingburg, Ind., wishes us to tell our readers how much she enjoys The Herald. It was sent her by her niece, Mrs. Frank Kaetzel, who has blessed many homes with The Herald's weekly visits, all of whom appreciate what The Herald does for them.

Rev. W. M. McNeill is no longer connected with the Gospel Faith Mission at Cumberland, Md., but is open for calls to do evangelistic singing anywhere in the south. His address is Rockport, Ill.

L. N. Cooper: "I desire to express my great appreciation for The Pentecostal Herald; with the teachings and doctrine of which I am in such hearty accord and which so plainly and fully track the Word of God. I get great spiritual benefit from reading The Herald. May God bless all its attaches and friends everywhere."

The address of H. W. Galloway and wife, evangelists has been changed from University Park, Iowa to Del Norte, Colorado.

Any pastor or evangelist desiring experienced, consecrated help in the music of revival campaigns, please

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED THE LIFE ANNUITY BONDS OFFERED BY ASBURY COLLEGE, WILMORE, KY.? DID YOU KNOW THAT YOU COULD PROVIDE AN INCOME THAT WILL NOT SHRINK BY SUCH AN INVESTMENT?

Read what one of our annuitants writes us today who holds three Asbury College Annuity Bonds for $2,000.00.

"I feel I should tell you of the joy and pleasure that has come into my life because some years ago when I heard of the Asbury College Annuity Bonds I deemed it a privilege to have some part in this wonderful work by investing in several of these bonds. I believe this to be one of the best forms of investment there is for God's children in that the College has the use of the money to carry forward the Lord's work while the donor lives, and the donor has the satisfaction of knowing the money is used to further the cause of Holiness which they love and which, I believe, is very dear to the heart of our Lord.

"I have had the privilege of meeting some of the boys and girls who prepared for their life work at Asbury College and have had cause to lift up my heart in praise and thanksgiving to God because of the service they are rendering in His name.

"The Annuity Bonds are surely a worthwhile investment. How I wish that more of God's children knew about them. The dividends come, not only in the interest checks which come without fail at the stated time, but in the satisfaction which comes from knowing the money is used to His honor and glory. 'Praise His precious name.'"

NOTICE!

We wish to call attention to any one who may wish to buy choice pecans. Rev. W. W. McCord, Sale City, Ga., was kind enough to send us a bag for Christmas, and we take this opportunity to recommend them as the very best. I believe they sell for 70 cents a pound, postpaid.

NOTICE!

The National Association for the Promotion of Holiness will hold a Convention at the Emmanuel Evangelical Church in Beaver Falls, Pa., Feb. 19 to 24.

Dr. John Owen, of Taylor University, will be my co-worker. Rev. Robert R. Doverspike and Rev. Arthur W. Gould will be in charge of the music.

A SHELF OF RECENT BOOKS.

Chester E. Tulga.

God Used Sermons, by Rev. S. David Sikes. (The Glad Tidings Pub. Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind. $1.25.)

A volume of messages preached in revival campaigns in many cities. The style of the spoken message is used and consequently it lacks literary finish. The author is thoroughly loyal to the old gospel. One message, "Downing Old Nick," treats of the tobacco habit, a theme seldom touched by the popular evangelist. A good book for those who like good sermons.

HALLELUJAH SOLOS—THE YELLOW BOOK.

This is Jack Linn's solo book. The titles of some of the songs are: The mourner's bench for me, The Hallelujah Christian, Strike the bottom, brother, Clean out the Corners, That relative of mine, etc., etc.

Wings of the Spirit, edited by Gordon Hurlbutt, Th.D. (The Standard Press, Louisville, Ky. $3.00.)

Probably the best book of illustrations in print today. The compiler has gathered together the favorite illustrations of hundreds of preachers and given us the cream. Three hundred and sixty-five thrilling stories from the experience of three hundred ministers makes this a worthwhile book indeed. The author attempted a large thing and has admirably executed it. Every pastor and Christian worker should have a copy of this book of fresh, spiritual illustrations.

A Harmony of the Life of St. Paul, by Frank J. Goodwin, D.D. (American Tract Society, New York, N. Y. $1.50.)

A harmony of the life of Paul that will be of great value to all students of the Scripture. The author has woven the life of Paul from history as given in the Acts of the Apostles with selections from the Pauline Epistles. To this Harmony the author has added an Appendix containing comments relating to Paul's speeches—the occasion of the writing of each Epistle, his trials and imprisonment. The book also has complete indexes. Invaluable for all who preach and teach the Gospel.

WE MUST BE BORN AGAIN.

By The Editor.

IN all the teachings of Jesus, we never find him saying, "It is my opinion," or "I have come to think," or "I have an idea," or "It is my judgment," or "After observation I have concluded." No such language is found in the Gospels. He always speaks as one in authority. He never expresses opinions or ideas, but he speaks the truth. He is positive and clear-cut. The people were impressed that he talked as one in authority. He never spoke more positively than when he said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." He repeated this statement; he told Nicodemus not to be surprised at his teaching, nor at the positiveness of his statement: "Marvel not that I said unto thee, ye must be born again."

Proper emphasis is not being laid upon the importance of the New Birth—the regeneration of the individual soul—the impartation of that divine life and power which makes one a child of God, in Christ a new creature. Unfortunately, we have many men in the ministry who seem to think that Jesus was entirely mistaken in his statement with reference to the necessity of the New Birth. They think that eugenics, environment, training and education can take the place of the New Birth. There is no need for one to wear out his shoes these days hunting for heretics, but all men who preach these human theories against the teachings of our Lord are preaching heresy. They are doing incalculable hurt to the Church of God. Such men are not only wrong in their intellectual conception of divine truth, but they are not right in their hearts. Men who have been born of the Spirit, and retain the witness of the Spirit, will not be inclined to contradict the teaching of our Lord Jesus.

May I ask the reader of these lines, Have you been born again? Have you experienced that change in your spiritual being so radical, so strong, so blessed, which has made you such a different person that our Lord can find no figure of speech that so accurately conveys a conception of this change as that of birth, being born again? Have you sought repentance and faith that salvation that comes to the soul by the power of the Holy Ghost? Are you a child of God? Think soberly and deal honestly with yourself in giving an answer to this question. Answer it in your own heart. You are not being asked to stand up before an audience, or to kneel at an altar, or to lift up your hand in testimony in the great congregation; but answer this question in the depths of your own soul, hidden away from all eyes save the eye of him that searcheth the hearts of all men.

How did you come into the church? Did you come through the door? Christ is the only door. He says, "No man cometh to the Father but by me." Did you enter in through Jesus? Did you come up the steps of sorrow for sin, forsaking of sin, and confession

MY TESTIMONY.

I believe absolutely and without the shadow of a doubt in the Godhead, atoning death, resurrection and ascension into heaven of our Lord Jesus Christ. I trust him fully and implicitly for the forgiveness of my sins and the cleansing of my heart from all uncleanness. I can have no sympathy with any teaching that in any way questions the virgin birth, deity and blood atonement made by Jesus on the cross. I have found in Christ a personal Saviour; the Holy Spirit has revealed him to my consciousness. My Lord and Saviour is the Messiah of Old Testament prophecy, the Jesus of the gospels and epistles, the Son of God, the all-sufficient Saviour of men. My faith is fixed in him and I rejoice in his salvation, and the hope of his coming.

H. C. Morrison.

of sin? Did you exercise saving faith in Jesus? Did Jesus bring you to the Father? He says, "No man knoweth the Father, save the Son and he to whom the Son will reveal him." Did Jesus reveal the Father to you? Do you know in your heart that you have a place in the true Church of God by the renewing of the Holy Ghost, or did you simply walk up some Sabbath morning and join the church? Did some one persuade you that it was your duty to society to become a church member? Did you join the church in some great evangelistic revival with the crowd? Or did you on some Decision Day decide that you would join the church? Please think over this; there is much involved in it. It is of the greatest importance that you search your own heart and be satisfied with nothing less than a consciousness of sins forgiven, and the witness of the Spirit to the fact that you have been born again. Pay no attention to false comforters who would give you an assurance that is merely human, while you have no assurance from the Holy Spirit. Get the full assurance of faith in your own soul. If you haven't this, ask till you receive; seek till you find. Be satisfied with nothing less than a full assurance of salvation.

A Word of Caution and Counsel.

One of the greatest dangers confronting the Holiness Movement, is the hi-hurrah revival. Lively singing, shallow preaching and made up mostly of running up and down the platform, rapid talk, ranting, much of anecdote and incident with almost nothing of the word of God, human excitement and shallow altar work, which gives a penitent almost no time to think or pray, or enter into solemn and eternal covenant with God; but talks, talks, talks, confuses, proposes, banters, drives, drags, and somehow, pulls out of the people a profession of sanctification.

The tobacco-chewing, holiness-opposing pastor, will not do one-tenth the hurt to the Holiness Movement that will be done by the man who proclaims himself a holiness evangelist and goes from place to place, working the people up into a religious excitement and calling it entire sanctification, and persuading them to testify that they have been wholly delivered from sin. Such meetings will be followed with backslidings and fanaticism, and a condition of things that make it very difficult to preach and propagate the Bible doctrine of holiness.

Let it be remembered that entire sanctification involves a deliberate and entire consecration to God; it involves a crucifixion of the old man, the death and casting out of the sin principle from the soul, a fiery baptism and infilling with the Holy Spirit. Entire sanctification is not a human gyration; it is a divine act. The God of the universe is transacting business when a human soul is being sanctified.

The altar of prayer is no place for human smartness and joking and haranguing seekers as is sometimes seen. Let God have a chance at the immortal and hungry souls of men. Give them his word, kindly urge them to call upon the Lord. Answer their questions, remove their doubts with scripture proofs; explain to them what must be surrendered and what must be consecrated, what thrown away and what put on the altar. Do the simple human work that must be done and cast them upon the Lord and urge them to do the same. Stay with them, agonize and travail with them in prayer, give them a few words of encouragement, chock the slowly moving wheels of their chariot as they pull the difficult hill of entire consecration and faith with the word of God, so that there will be no rolling backward while the weary stop a moment for rest and to gather up their faculties for one more last effort to gain the goal.

How like a birth is the salvation of the Lord in a human soul. Forcing birth may kill mother and child; forcing premature professions may cause the loss of a soul. Let the Holy Spirit have his way with the soul; let him bring it into life, or uproot the carnal life from its domain. How powerless is man to save or sanctify, and how often he has interfered with and hindered the work of God.

It dignifies, enlarges and makes a mighty man of God out of the evangelist who exalts the atonement of Christ, recognizes the office of the Holy Ghost and keeps himself under the power and control of the Spirit, praying, believing and waiting on him to do his work in regenerating and sanctifying the souls of men.

"I Was Naked and Ye Clothed Me."

Jesus tells us that in the great day of judgment when the multitudes are gathered before him he will say to certain persons, "I was naked and ye clothed me." He also says that those persons will be welcome into everlasting blessedness. He explains that when he says this and those to whom he speaks ask when it was that they performed such office for him, he will say, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me." So we find that furnishing clothing to the poor is coming close to the Lord

GOSPEL LABORS IN AND AROUND HONG KONG.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Our evangelistic itinerary took us to Hong Kong early in December and I am writing this at Kowloon a kind of suburb of Hong Kong on the mainland.

As I write we are having summer weather and the sunshine and warmth suggest July more than December.

Hong Kong is a British possession. The length of the Island is approximately 10½ miles, its greatest width 5 miles, and an area of 30 square miles, resembling a huge cone-shaped rock, rising at the highest point (Victoria Peak) to 1,823 feet above sea level.

The Colony of Hong Kong includes the Island of Hong Kong and the Peninsula of Kowloon which lies on the mainland across the harbour opposite Hong Kong proper, and is generally termed Kowloon.

Hong Kong was ceded to the British in 1841, and the Peninsula of Kowloon was ceded in 1861; to this has been added the adjacent territory, stretching from Mirs Point to Deep Bay, together with a few islands under a lease of 99 years, which has been named the New Territory, and covers an area of over 350 square miles.

The principal industries are shipbuilding, cement manufacturing, sugar refining and rope making of which shipbuilding is the most important and their massive granite built docks are considered to be of the best equipped in the world.

The estimated population of the Colony in 1926 was 874,420. The non-Chinese population was put at 16,500 and the Chinese 850,920. The British of course predominate among the foreigners as the development of the Port and City of Hong Kong is due almost entirely to them. Before the British took possession in 1841 it was largely a desert island. Its population was about 5,000, mostly stone cutters, smugglers, pirates and vagabonds. Within twelve months the population increased to 20,000, now it is nearly a million!

In the early days of British occupancy pirates ranged the coasts and on the land the Chinese did everything to drive the foreigners out. In December, 1856, the foreign business establishments were set on fire and in January, 1857, an attempt was made to poison all the foreigners. The Esing bakery owned by a Chinese named Cheong Alum put arsenic in its bread that day but fortunately the dose was so large that it caused violent sickness instead of death. In spite of everything, the British held on until Hong Kong and all this section of South China became prosperous. Here is another case where the "foreigners" benefited China and brought business, prosperity, civilization, education, religion and many other good things.

Speaking of the British, let it be said to their credit that no nation has contributed more to China's civilization and enlightenment and advancement than has old "John Bull."

A story is told of Lord Amherst that he was sent out by the King of England in 1816 to induce China to play fair with British merchants which were operating in Canton and other points, and to request China to open other doors of trade and communications. When Amherst reached Tientsin he was informed that if he would see the Emperor he would have to conform with the ceremony of prostration which was a symbol of vassalage. This consisted of kneeling three times before the Emperor and bowing the head nine times to the ground. This was insisted upon not merely as a court formality but as an acknowledgment that the Emperor of China was the Sovereign of the universe, and this was demanded as a duty from all other potentates as the Emperor's vassals.

This Amherst would not submit to. At last he was permitted to come to Peking, but when he was hustled without ceremony into the presence of the Emperor it was only to find the Sovereign furious who ordered him to go back to Canton at once. Of course it would be a case of gross humiliation, almost degradation, for a high official of another Sovereign to acknowledge the corrupt and degenerate Kia King as "Sovereign of the universe." We cannot blame Lord Amherst for his refusal, though it meant failure of his expedition.

It is often said that the war of 1841 was an Opium war, but from the English point of view it was the tyranny of Lin Tse Hsi and his high-handed treatment of the foreigners. They were insulted, murdered, humiliated, degraded, etc., to the utmost limit. Men, women and children had to be hustled on board a warship for safety. Out of all this came the Battle of Chuenpi in which five British warships were engaged; later a larger engagement took place with more ships and in an hour and a half in January, 1841, the battle was over in favor of the British and by January 20th, the Treaty of Chuenpi gave Hong Kong over to the British entirely.

IN THE CROSS OF CHRIST I GLORY.

Hong Kong is so near to Macao, that Portuguese settlement in China that it makes me think of that great hymn of Sir John Bowring when, as Governor of Hong Kong, he wrote that famous hymn after a visit to Macao.

"In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story
Gathers round its head sublime."

Hong Kong is not at all noted for a devotion to the cross; like so many great centers here in the Orient it has Satan's seat there and though it has been beautified and enriched by the British yet the dragon of Buddhism has its hold on the multitudes of the Chinese; Christianity, however, has produced some wonderful changes, and Christian churches, schools and hospitals are many. The work of the faith missionaries certainly has borne a great harvest.

One needs to visit the mission fields of the Orient and behold the contrasts between heathenism and Christianity to get an adequate idea of the power of the Cross.

The Cross is the symbol of Christianity.

The Cross is the key to the doctrine of Redemption,

The Cross changes things,

The Cross transforms peoples, tribes and nations,

The Cross sheds light and blessing in every clime.

As we see these great contrasts and differences and transformations effected by the Christian religion we thank God for those who at the price of great sacrifice and suffering and blood came to heathen lands and laid the foundations of Christian missions; as a result all over the Orient it can be said in the words of Wordsworth:

"Today on weary nations
The heavenly manna falls,
To holy convocations
The silver trumpet calls,
Where gospel light is glowing
With pure and radiant beams,
And living water flowing
With soul-refreshing streams."

As we go through China evangelizing and meeting the multitudes with the old-time gospel in the name of Jesus, I think again of those lines afresh:

"I know a land that is sunk in shame,
And of hearts that faint and tire;
But I know a Name—a Name—a Name!
Can set that land on fire."
Wonderful things happen in this land because of this Name. I read recently the following story which gives another illustration of the power of the Name:

A soldier in China had heard the Name of Jesus for the first time, in his 34 years. The missionary had told him that Jesus loved him and would answer his prayer if he served him. This young man was captured one day by the opposing forces and with thirty other soldiers was put into one room awaiting execution. The day came and in the early morning they were led out to the block, one by one. This young soldier knew that it would only be a few moments till his name would be called and he would be led out. What could he do? There was no helper, no one to intercede for him. Just then he remembered the words of the missionary and he decided that he would call upon the Name of Jesus. How to pray, he knew not, as he had prayed to dumb idols all the days of his life, but he knew they could not help him, that he needed a living helper. In his desperation he began to repeat over and over again, Jesus, Jesus. This he did under his breath as he was not allowed to speak aloud. Somehow as he breathed that Name, peace stole into his heart and he felt that there was One at his side who would hear and help.

Man number thirty was led away, and this soldier lad, repeating the precious Name waited for the return of the executioner. Soon he came in. His name was thirty-one and he waited to hear it called, but instead, the executioner came into the room and said, "whom do you have at home?" He replied that his dear aged mother and wife were waiting there. "Go back to your home," were the words that he heard, and almost bewildered he walked out of that room, a free man.

The gospel seed has borne wonderful fruitage in China since the days of Morrison and Hudson Taylor, but as one touches the crowds in the busy streets and marts it would seem as though only the surface has been scratched; that still heathenism is entrenched deeply. Yesterday I passed the shop of the idol maker, he was decorating a ridiculous thing that would be called a god by some purchaser. This land is full of idols, household goods, etc. I was reminded again of those words of Bishop Heber:

"What tho' the spicy breezes,
Blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle,
Tho every prospect pleases,
And only man is vile.
In vain with lavish kindness
The gifts of God are strown
The heathen in his blindness
Bows down to wood and stone."

As we visited that most beautiful of all cemeteries—the Protestant cemetery of Hong Kong—we stood at the grave of many missionaries who died upon the battlefield of foreign missions and who made the supreme sacrifice for the gospel. We thought how different the circumstances of the missionaries of today compared with forty years ago. Those early missionaries endured things such as present day workers have no conception of. They laid the foundations at the expense of comfort and health and life itself. They laid down their lives for Jesus and the Gospel in days when there were no hospitals and no doctors to care for them. Everything was in the rough. They were persecuted, misrepresented, scorned, reviled and tormented, but they persevered and the missionaries of today have a goodly heritage. Out here on the mission fields as we think of the missionary fathers those lines have a new meaning:

"Faith of our fathers living still
In spite of dungeon, fire and sword;
O how our hearts beat high with joy
Whene'er we hear that glorious word."

Our present engagement in Yumati, Hong Kong, brought us to the Peniel Mission which has a fine plant here right in the center of things with several mission stations and the work is carried on by a band of earnest sanctified workers, among them being Rev. A. K. Reiton (now in U. S. A.), Miss Phoebe Pierce, Miss Rose Richey, Miss A. M. Myers, Miss L. F. Daniels, Rev. M. A. Grant and wife, Miss Southwick (Kowloon City), Rev. Wilbur J. Lee (Chinese) and other Chinese ministers.

This is a distinctly old-fashioned holiness work being connected up with Mrs. Mamie P. Ferguson Peniel Mission work of Los Angeles, Calif. This Hong Kong Branch of Peniel foreign missions is carried on on the mainland just across from Hong Kong Island and they have, I understand, five different stations the various missionaries above mentioned being distributed among the different missions. Mr. Fred L. Evans, who was at Yumati, has gone into the country opening up work there. All these holiness missionaries are living lives of devotion and sacrifice and working hard at their task. They make every missionary dollar go to the fullest extent. They are devoted to the main idea of spreading the gospel of pardon and holiness. Those good women dress and live and pray and labor like real gospel missionaries; they know what real burden of souls means, they are on the mission fields because of a clear call, they love the souls of the Chinese; the poor they have always with them, but they reach many of the better classes, business people, students, etc.

Peniel Mission of Hong Kong stands for Bible Holiness free from any of the modern attachments which so much so called "pentecostal" missionary work has about it. We have been preaching for a week—along the old lines of sin, repentance, pardon, regeneration and the Baptism of the Spirit. On Sunday morning we gave a teaching message to Believers on Sanctification using as our text 1 Thess 4:3: "This is the will of God our Sanctification" and we endeavored to set forth

1. What sanctification was not.
2. What sanctification would do for you.
3. How the blessing may be obtained.

At the close of the message we asked all those who confessed Christ and who wanted this work of sanctification done in them to raise the hand. So many hands went up that we doubted whether we were clear enough in our question so we had our interpreter put the question again. We found we had been fully understood and when we opened the altar upwards of fifty came forward for the blessing.

A rather singular request came to us to preach for the Council of Churches of Hong Kong in the Episcopal Church (Church of England) and this was followed by another letter asking us to preach on the deeper things of God. The letter was in Chinese but when it was read it indicated that they were hungry for deeper experiences of grace. This gave us a good opportunity to preach a full salvation message to a great number of people who did not get to many of our Peniel meetings.

As I work with this band of faithful missionaries standing here to represent the holiness people of America in this Southern section of China, and see the work they are doing among the millions of souls in and around Hong Kong, the seed they are sowing, the Bibles and tracts circulated, the open air meetings as well as the regular mission services, I thank God for those in the Homeland who made this Peniel Mission possible and who are making it possible for them to continue. I thank God for it. The work that real holiness can do in the foreign lands no one can estimate. In the Sunday School Times the following lines appeared: "You sent the money across the sea That bought a Bible for young Sing Lee And young Sing Lee, when he'd read therein,

Proceeded to turn his back on sin.
Then he rested neither night nor day
Till his brother walked in the narrow way;
And his brother worked till he had won
Away from their gods, his wife and son.
The woman told of her new-found joy,
And Christ was preached by the happy boy.
Some of the folks who heard them speak
Decided the one true God to seek.
It wasn't long until half the town
Had left its idols of wood and stone.
And the work's not ended yet, my friend.
You started something that ne'er shall end,
When you sent the money across the sea
That bought the Bible for young Sing Lee."

Peniel Mission picks up many young Sing Lee's, gets them converted and sanctified and some of them they send off to Bible School to train as pastors and evangelists.

China is a land of strange noises. Sometimes one would think they live on noise but not all street sounds and noises are objectionable. As I sat in my room this evening before going to the service I heard voices singing and the voice was sweet to my ears, and why? It was a gospel street meeting. They were singing such songs as: "I am coming Lord, coming now to Thee," "Coming Home," "Jesus keep me near the Cross,"

How true it is that the Christian religion is a singing religion! David cried out, "He hath put a new song in my mouth." In Revelation we read about "The New Song." So where the gospel goes

"New songs doth now our tongues employ
And dances our glad hearts with joy."

CONCERNING REVIVALS.

EVANGELIST P. P. BELEW.

ALL spiritual movements have been launched and promoted in a revival atmosphere. That was true of primitive Christianity, of the Quakers, of the Methodists, and it is true of the Holiness Movement. Therefore a discussion of the merits of revivals in this article is neither necessary nor intended. The writer simply wishes to point out some things concerning the "how" of revivals, which, it is trusted will add to the efficiency of this holy business.

I. THE SELECTION OF THE WORKERS.

This is a most important part. The salvation or damnation of souls, the making or the marring of the church depends largely on its ministers and other leaders. The evangelistic personnel affords a wide range of workers, and those responsible for making the selection, after prayer for divine guidance, will have to decide for themselves as to the particular type of workers needed at any given place or time. No hard and fast rule can be made. The writer desires only to make a few suggestions.

1. The workers should be competent. As specialists, they should be skilled in "rightly dividing the word of truth." There is great need of Bible preaching. Evangelists should "preach the word." The preaching of God's word is a divinely-appointed means for the salvation of men. Touching stories stir the emotions and move to action, but they do not convince the intellect and convict the spirit, both of which are essential to permanent results. Touching incidents have their place in preaching and should be used, but results that accrue from sermons that contain an unhealthy proportion of such material will be abortive and not lasting; and an evangelist's success is not to be determined merely by the number he gets to the altar, but by the lasting quality of his work.

2. The workers should be in hearty sympathy with the faith and work of holiness. To employ an evangelist who is not clear on eradication to gain prestige or publicity is to take a long step in the direction of undermining our holy religion.

3. The workers should be examples of the Gospel which they sing and preach. Regardless of his talent or ability, no person of doubtful piety or unsavory conduct should be employed in the sacred work of soul winning. We deplore the practice of any that would use those whose records are not above reproach because of their ability to "put it across." Such workers gain their apparent success through psychological manipulation, the reaction from which leaves the church in worse condition than it was before. Nay, verily, they stand condemned before Jehovah, who says, that such shall not come nigh to offer the bread of his God and exerts, "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord." We want no part in the encouragement of such pernicious practices.

II. THE PREPARATION.

It may sometimes be true that "a bad beginning presages a good ending," but more generally "well begun is half done." Especially is this true in revival effort.

1. The church should be thoroughly aroused as to the importance of the undertaking. And no preparation can be of such value as preparation of heart. Many times the immediate work of soul saving is retarded due to a lack of interest on the part of the church. Pastors should seek by personal visitation, by special emphasis in preaching, by special, general, and group prayer meetings to have the church in an evangelistic fervor, if possible, when the meeting begins. The results from such labors will be gratifying even from the beginning of the meeting.

2. The meeting should be given all due publicity in the town or city where it is held. Money spent in advertising is well invested. All things being equal, the most expensive of all meetings is the one that receives no publicity. The opportunity of the evangelist to promote the revival and build the church is limited commensurately with the time it takes him to get a hearing. The purpose of advertising is not merely to acquaint the public with the fact that there is to be a meeting, but to create in the people a desire to attend. To this end the work and the workers should be put in the best light that truth and right will warrant. There is possibly no way to kill a thing more surely than by "faint praise." People quite generally form their conceptions of a meeting through what those in charge have to say about it. It is almost better to undertake nothing than to impress the people that we are expecting only the mediocre. Put on a program that is worth advertising and advertise it. We have the best thing under heaven; let us boost it.

III. THE LENGTH OF THE MEETING.

What should be the duration of a revival effort? No iron-clad rule can be given. Circumstances differ and opinion varies. The writer prefers a meeting of medium length. Home missionary meetings, which frequently require a siege, will need to be longer, and camps should be shorter, but for the average church meeting three Sundays is usually ample.

1. The average church with all its other demands cannot adequately finance a longer meeting. We are aware that this is a delicate point and that we must speak with caution. Therefore, we desire to say that, as far as we know, we have never been accused of being a money-grabber or of being unreasonable in our demands. We have spent almost fifteen years in the ministry, seven of which have been given to the evangelistic work. It is our practice to accept the calls as they come whether the church is large or small; consequently our offerings range from splendid down to almost nothing, but we have never had trouble with any one. Our relations with the good men and women with whom we have labored have been most cordial. God bless them! Our observation has been that practically all holiness people do their best, and that is all that any evangelist should require or expect. But in all

BRINGING BACK THE KING.

Rev. W. E. Beiderwolf.

"Now therefore why speak ye not a word of bringing the king back?" 2 Samuel 19:10.

IT is impossible for any one to read this portion of Second Samuel, which deals with the rejection of King David and his coming again to the throne, and not see in it the typical history of another King whom the Scriptures call "The Son of David," and the prophecy which is yet to be fulfilled concerning him.

Among the sons of David there was one whose name was Absalom, the favorite of his father. Full of pride, ungrateful, headstrong, and wicked, he secretly resolved to usurp his father's throne. Certain conditions made the time especially ripe for the furthering of his unfilial and unholy scheme.

The great tribe of Judah had no doubt taken some offense at David's government. A merger had taken place which had placed the Ten Tribes on a footing of equality with themselves, and they were none too happy over it. And so when the king's magnificent son came along with his smooth palaver of a more partial and liberal rule the entire populace "fell" for it like the foolish angels fell for the program of another Usurper who conspired against the throne of the Eternal God himself.

And then, you know it was one of the chief duties of an oriental king to listen to the individual complaints of his people, and David in the latter years of his reign had sort of passed the people up on this proposition. Of this thing Absalom took advantage. He stood in the gate of the city and conversed with every one who had a complaint, and sympathized with him, and "put forth his hand and kissed any man who came nigh to do him obedience, and devoutly wished (out loud) that he were the king so that everyone who had a suit might have justice done to him.

And thus we are told that Absalom stole the hearts of the people.

This was all the easier because Absalom was a handsome fellow, and the people admired him because of his wonderfully luxuriant hair and his personal beauty. Then again, he impressed the people by the imposing splendor in which he always moved about. "He prepared himself a chariot and horses and fifty men to run before him," and thus with his prancing steeds and his troupe of glittering out-runners he became the observed of all the observing in Jerusalem. And this the people would contrast with the plain and simple style of David's establishment. And so Absalom had them all coming his way.

And thus when the hour struck Absalom raised the standard of revolt at Hebron. It was completely successful. David fled from Jerusalem and went to a city east of the Jordan.

Then came the counsel of Ahitophel, and had Absalom followed it and acted at once he might have been still more successful. But the counsel of Hushai pleased him better.

Hushai told him to wait, to gather together a mighty army and ride forth at its head as became a great conqueror, and Absalom was fascinated by the brilliant imagination. Hushai appealed to his vanity.

And thus the Devil outwitted himself. He had nursed in Absalom an over-weening vanity and pride intending by it to overthrow the throne of the Lord's anointed. And now this very thing becomes the cause of Absalom's downfall and ruin. How easily God makes the wrath of men to praise him. "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh."

And so while Absalom waited David rallied his forces and when they came to battle Absalom's army was utterly routed and Absalom himself was among the slain.

For a time consternation reigned everywhere. One suggestion after another was offered, until finally in the midst of the confusion one clear Voice rang out above the rest, "Now, therefore, why speak ye not a word of bringing the king back?" And then the line of march is taken up, and back to Jerusalem, back to the palace and back to the throne of David the people go.

Now, it has already been noted that this experience of King David looks down the ages to the world's rejection and the final coming again to his throne of another King.

Nothing is plainer than this, that Jesus was meant for a King. When he was born the angel said of him, "And the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the throne of Jacob forever." But "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." He was a King, but not the kind they wanted.

They told him to gird on his sword, but he said he preferred a Cross. They told him to mount his charger and thunder at the gates of Rome, but he said he would win and rule the world by love. Such sentiment they could not tolerate and they drove him away. Instead of a coronation they gave him a crucifixion. And now for two thousand years the One who was meant for a King has been an exile from his dominion.

And where has he gone? Well, we are told in one of Luke's parables (Luke 19:12) that the kingdom of heaven is like "a certain nobleman who went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return." That far country is "the land that is fairer than day," and standing there at the right hand of the throne of God the rejected King is pleading the merits of his atoning work on the Cross for you and for me.

You know, they tell us the story of a soldier who had lost both of his arms in battle and was, of course, maimed for life. His own brother, because of some misdemeanor was arrested and sentenced to die. When every other means to save the condemned man's life had failed this maimed and disabled soldier appeared before the king in his behalf and accomplished what every argument had failed to do. He made no eloquent speech but simply held up his maimed arms before the king's eyes and said, "For the sake of these pardon my brother."

And so he, we are told, "is able to save to the uttermost seeing that he ever liveth to make intercession for us," and the One who came to be a King, but Whom the spied, and Who was "wounded not, transgressions" is now standing by and bares his side that was thrust by the spear, and says, "For the sake of these pardon my people and pass over their transgressions." Isn't it glorious to have a Savior like that!

But the parable to which we referred says he has gone "to receive a kingdom and to return." Thank God he is coming again. And when he comes he shall indeed have received the kingdom, and he shall be King of kings and Lord of lords, and sit upon the throne of David, and he shall reign forever and of his kingdom and peace there shall be no end.

And God knows this poor, tired, troubled, and sin-cursed world needs some one to do for it just what will be done when the King comes back.

1. Think what the coming back of the King will mean for the poor Jew. How the Jew needs him. The Jew is a mighty character. He has given to the world many of its giants in every sphere of life. He sits in the council of kings and in the cabinet of presidents. He holds the purse-strings of the world. And yet the most pathetic page in human history holds the story of the poor, dispersed, persecuted and wandering Jew.

There has been no end of humanitarian schemes to ameliorate the condition of this unfortunate race of people. Jewish bankers have been lavish with their funds; land has been purchased; colonization schemes have been fostered; even the Parliament and the Congress of the world's two greatest nations have given sympathetic furtherance to the establishment of the Jews in the land which they feel is rightly their own. But "why speak ye not a word of bringing the King back?" For if I read my Bible aright there can be little, if any, hope for this dispersed and afflicted people until the King comes back in glory "to turn away ungodliness from Jacob." "For I will have mercy upon them, saith the Lord; and they shall be as though I had not cast them off."

2. Think what the coming back of the King will mean for the world itself! Surely the world needs him!

Even the inanimate world and the dumb brutes are calling to be relieved from the curse of sin which is to be lifted when he comes.

Some one has said that the sounds of nature are all in the minor key—the bleating of the sheep and the moaning of the winds; the lowing of the cattle and the murmur of the waves. But this is just what we are told in the Word of God—"The whole creation groaneth and travaileth together," and then we are told that it is "waiting for the manifestation of the sons of God,"—that is, deliverance on the morning of the First Resurrection.

With truer instinct than a careless, sleeping Church nature seems to know no other cure for her curse than the coming again of the King, and in that beautiful passage just quoted from Romans, out of which an artist might make a statue of Hope, she is pictured as watching with head raised and neck outstretched and attention strained toward some distant point in the heavens from which the Deliverer is to come.

But it is the world of humanity we have in mind. How it needs him!

When I think of all the Church has done in her earnest desire to evangelize the world, and face the painful fact that in all these two thousand years she has brought not more than one tenth of the world's people to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ; when I see the great apostasy going on today within the ranks of the Church herself, and find so few of the church membership who are really spiritual Christians; when I look down the columns of the newspapers and see every page crimson with the history of the broken jaws of God and man—I say, when I ponder these things I find myself crying, "Lord God, hasten the day of that mighty King, the King shall come back;" for as my conviction, with the record of centuries behind me and the Word of God open before me, that only the presence of the Son of God, himself, coming in power and great glory to bring this world into subjection to his authority, can ever stop the march of crime, or put a final check upon the sin and violence that threatens even today our boasted civilization with destruction, and usher in upon this earth the reign of universal peace we have sought so long but in vain to bring about.

I would to God that all the nations of the world might be brought into obedience to the Faith in this present age if that were the will of God, but I do not read anywhere in Scripture that such is to be the case before the Lord returns. I think we will all agree in this whatever distinctive view may be ours as to the time of that return.

And while I do not disparage Leagues of Nations, nor World Courts, nor the moral and social and political reforms, nor any of the other expedients for the bringing of deliverance to the nations of this earth, I cannot refrain from injecting into all this universal striving after human amelioration the question put to the Jewish people in the time of their trouble and distraction, "Why speak ye not a word of bringing the King back?"

3. And then think what the bringing back of the King will mean for you and me.

There is, of course, a sense in which the King is here now. When by faith the sinner opens his heart to Jesus Christ he takes him not only as his Savior from his sins, but as King, as Lord and Master of his life.

This being so, the doing of the will of one's Lord and King should be not only the governing principle but the sweetest joy of every believer's life. Jesus said, "I came down from heaven not to do my own will, but the will of him that sent me." This is what some one has called "The Rule of the Royal Life." There is no other life that a child of God can live and find the real worth of knowing Christ. And because this is true it is a glorious thing just to have a chance to do the will of God, no matter what else it brings us even though it be suffering and death.

When old John Brown of Osawatimie was captured Mr. Vallandigham said to him:

"Mr. Brown, who sent you here?"

And the old man looked up into Mr. Vallandigham's face and said with glorious composure: "No man sent me here; it was the will of God and the prompting of my Maker."

And just a few days before they led him out to die upon the gallows, he wrote that he was never more cheerful in all his life and that he felt unworthy of the great distinction that was placed upon him in permitting him thus to die for so holy a cause.

Oh, my brother, there are other things we can do, and they will fill our lives with envy, with discord and discontent. But there is a life of rest and sweetness unknown to the world that waits upon a willingness and a will to do the will of God. And this day I call you to witness that in so far as you have lived a life like this you have found the things which the world does not have and cannot give?

I shall never forget the sad look upon the face of a woman who had once given Jesus his rightful place in the throne-room of her life, who knew the sweet fellowship of walking daily with her Lord.

But she had gone away. Her life had been thrown, through no choice of her own, among those who knew not God, and others who were nominally Christian only, and the pull of the world dragged her down. She tried in vain this way and that to assure herself that all was well, but she knew it was not well. And she acknowledged to me her unrest and her spiritual poverty. She said, "When I think of my spiritual state a burden presses down like a millstone upon my soul. When I lie down it is with the thought always that if the night should usher me into the presence of God I would be unprepared."

My friends, is that you? Are you disappointed in what your profession has brought to you? Are you, like the Galatians, "Having begun in the Spirit, are you trying to perfect yourself in the flesh? Have you tried in this way and that to find the life that is buoyant and free?"

Why not let the King come back? Why not give him the throne and let him reign? Why not say, "Thy will be done in me?" In nothing else will that soul of yours or mine ever find rest.

"I have a dear Lord so precious,
He loves me with a tender love,
He loves me so faithfully.
He leads me in the paths of light,
Beneath a sunny sky,
And so we walk together,
My Lord and I."

And that may be true of you. Do you want it to be? Then let your Lord, your Master, your King come back.

They tell us that one of the soldiers of Napoleon had been wounded by a bullet entering his breast just over his heart, and while they were probing for it, he cried, "An inch deeper, and you'll find the Emperor!" He had his emperor, his King in his heart. Why not something like that with the King of kings and the Lord of lords!

But one day the King is coming back himself to visibly live, and rule, and dwell forever with us. And think what that will mean!

That will be your coronation day, and mine—the time of reward. "Henceforth," says Paul, "there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all who love his appearing."

It will be the time when you meet your loved ones again, and I, mine. "For them also who are fallen asleep in Jesus will he bring with him when he comes."

It will be the time when pain and suffering and disease and death will be at an end forever for the child of God. "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed."

But best of all it will be just to have the King himself. Mr. Wickersham, a noted Chautauqua lecturer, told us at Winona Lake that one time after seven weeks of absence he returned to his home in Des Moines one evening just in time for supper, and as they sat down he heard his little boy crying. The little fellow was up stairs in bed. They sent the nurse up but she came back and said she could not find out what was the matter. And the father said, "Here is some candy I bought for him; take this up to him." But that didn't satisfy him. He continued to cry, and the father said, "Here are some toys I meant for Christmas day tomorrow, but he might as well have them now." They took the toys up to the little fellow but he didn't care for them. Then Mr. Wickersham, the father, went up himself and said, "Jimmy, what is the matter?" And the little lad just reached out his arms and put them around his father's neck and said, "Papa, I just want you."

And so it is with Jesus. What a wonderful One he must be! He made the little children to love him. He charmed the woman's heart until no ointment was too costly for his head. The bereaved found comfort, and the oppressed found refuge when he was near. Strong men laid their head upon his bosom and were glad to die for him. What a wonderful One he must be!

Oh, yes, I know his gifts have been precious and plentiful—the gifts of his grace and his glory, which ever since he went away he has been shedding forth from his place at the right hand of his Father's throne. But how wonderful it would be just to have him! And if any word of mine could bring him back I would say, "Even now, come Lord Jesus." Not another instant on the dial of my watch. My Lord! My King! I want him to come. I wish he would come just now. "Why speak ye not a word of bringing the King back?"

And what can we do to bring him back?

Well, what did Peter mean when he said, "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted that your sins may be blotted out, and that there may come seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and that he may send the Christ, even Jesus, Whom the heavens must receive until the times of restoration of all things."

Out of the nations of the world—out of the Gentiles and out of the Jews—Jesus is gathering a people for himself—his Church! his Bride; his Body; and when that Body is complete he will come. And the one thing—the only thing—we can do to hasten that day is to help him fill out that number which is to make that Body and that Bride complete.

Who can tell when it will be? Who knows but that the next one to accept Christ, the next one to receive the Son of God, may be the last one, and then the numbering will be finished, and he will come! "Then look up, and lift up your heads, for the day of your redemption draweth nigh."

It is said of Queen Victoria that, after hearing one of her chaplains preach at Windsor on the Return of the Lord, she spoke to Dean Farrar about it, and said:

"Oh, how I wish that the Lord would come during my lifetime!"

And why does your majesty feel this way about it?" asked the great preacher.

And with her countenance illumined with deep emotion the Queen replied, "Because I should so love to lay my crown at his feet."

"Now, therefore, why speak ye not a word about bringing the King back?" Yes, he is coming again.

If you have ever heard a rendition of the Oratorio of the Messiah by a well-trained chorus, and most of you have, can you ever forget the thrill and the uplift of it all! How wonderful it is when such artists as takes the soprano, and the bass, and the tenor, and the alto, each supported by hundreds of skilled musicians. Caruso, and Shuman-Heink, and Journet, and used to take the principal parts, and it was marvelous indeed.

You know just before the Hallelujah Chorus a death-like stillness holds the throng in a few seconds of suspense. And then the deep bass rolls out, "For he shall reign forever and ever;" and then the alto lifts it higher, "For he shall reign forever and ever;" and then the tenors pick it up and lift it, as it were, to the very skies, "For he shall reign forever and ever;" and then the

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER VI.

ON THE RANCH.

WE have noticed there sprang up a very strong attachment between Huston, Tom Goodson, and Moreno, the Mexican. They worked together in Mr. Goodson's store, boarded at the Goodson home, rode out in the afternoons in cowboy togs, and practiced with their revolvers and Winchesters, shooting off the heads of rattlesnakes, killing jack rabbits and an occasional coyote.

Six months passed away in this very pleasant occupation. Huston was so courteous and kind to every one with whom he dealt at the store, or came in contact with in any business or social way, that he became very popular. He grew rapidly in his physical manhood. The western country agreed with him perfectly. He passed his twentieth birthday in splendid health and his mind was so occupied in this business and the great thrill of the marvelous west that he realized that he was outgrowing the sorrow which had brought him into that region. He argued with himself that he had but one life, and he could not afford to let the weakness, selfishness, or wisdom of one woman ruin that life; that he must put away from his thought and fancies all the aircastles he had built up for his habitation with Annie Gray.

At the end of six months our three young friends signed up with one of the big cattle men of western Texas to ride the range after his cattle for twelve months. The range covered a vast territory of land. It bore a little toward the Panhandle border and then almost due west. The country was full of a variety of game. There were rattlesnakes galore, jack rabbits by the thousands, prairie-dog towns, coyotes and wolves, with quite a number of deer of the various deer families.

Our bunch of youngsters left the delightful home of Mr. Goodson in Fort Worth and went out with great enthusiasm. Near the center of the vast territory over which they were to ride, was their principal encampment. It was by a little stream in a cottonwood grove near a considerable lake where the cattle could always find ample water. There were several log huts, corrals for horses, great wire enclosures for the cattle during round-up season, a big shed with many bunks for the cowboys, and an old westerner with his wife, two daughters and a son, with a negro man and his wife to cook and keep the bunking-house for the boys when they came in. The arrangements looked like rather rough living to an easterner, but to the cowboys it was a place of great comfort. Sometimes wagons would follow them out into the distances with cooking utensils and tents. The tents often were not used; the days were hot, the nights were cool, dry and delightful, and after the day's work was done the boys would lie on a little blanket or an old slicker and sleep comfortably under the stars.

Huston was delighted with his work. He owned a very fine horse; an animal with a dash of Spanish blood in him. He seemed to be almost inexhaustible in his strength and willingness to go. He could easily be encouraged to great rapidity of movement. He was a remarkable beast. He and his master became intimate and loving friends. Huston divided his apple and sugar with him, gave him most careful attention and Seelam would follow him around without being led, and nights when Huston slept in the open, the faithful horse grazed close to his master and always seemed to be pleased when Huston leaped into the saddle.

Huston soon became pleasantly acquainted with all the cow-men on the big ranch. He was so handsome, so strong, so willing, and so kind to everyone that he soon won the admiration and confidence of all the people connected with the big ranch. He studied hard, learned rapidly the secrets of the desert, atmospheric conditions, the movements in nature that indicated fair or foul weather. He often brought to the camp a fine fat deer. There was so much about him that was clean and kindly that he became sort of a magnet that drew toward him all the people with whom he met. There was not the slightest disposition in him to quarrel with any one; he always sought to be a peacemaker among his fellows and soon had a remarkable influence over the men about the chuck wagon, or at the central camp of the big round-ups. He drank no kind of intoxicants, he used no tobacco, he never swore an oath or used any of the many by-words which live next door neighbor to profanity, and never let a day go by without reading a chapter in the Bible his mother had given him.

At this time there was quite a bit of "cattle rustling," that is, stealing. Thieves would go about in considerable bunches and drive away large numbers of cattle up into Indian Territory, or over into New Mexico. Sometimes they would work them down into the extreme southern part of the state and get them into Louisiana. It was a difficult thing to keep watch over all the herds scattered over the great ranch, and not infrequently, bunches of cattle disappeared that could not be accounted for in any other way than that the rustlers had gotten them.

There was a very bitter prejudice against these thieves and, when captured, there was frequently short shift made of them without the delay that a court trial would bring about. In order that the ranch might have the dignity and protection of an officer of the law, Huston was made deputy sheriff of the county in which the ranch lay. At the end of the year when he was twenty-one years of age, he was appointed to that office, was well known and highly respected throughout the region in which he rode. People who knew of his conduct and fine character back in Fort Worth, held for him a very high regard. It was understood that while he was entirely free from any disposition to quarrel or have any sort of difficulty with his fellow-men, he was always ready to champion the right and defend the weak. He had now grown to be six feet and two inches in height. He was broad shouldered, with great muscular arms, tapering like a buggy whip, from top to toe. He was lithe and graceful as a willow, and tough in fiber as a piece of white hickory. No finer specimen of manhood ever walked the principal street of Fort Worth from where the depot now stands, to the courthouse, than John Henry Huston.

Mr. Goodson, the Fort Worth merchant, where Huston always found a welcome home, had a widowed sister, Mrs. Benson, who had come with her husband from one of the old southern states, and of the best southern families, to Fort Worth when it was little more than a village. Mr. Benson was a very able lawyer. He built up a large practice and made considerable money. He had one of the best homes, with considerable ground about his property, with a few cheaper houses for rent; but he unfortunately had invested the bulk of his money in steers. The price of cattle fell very low; the steers were ready to ship and could not be kept without destructive expenses; so they were forced on the market and sold at great loss.

Soon afterward, Judge Benson died and left his wife two children, one of them, the eldest, a son, who was also a lawyer, had been taken in as a partner in New York City. This famous New York City lawyer was an old classmate of Judge Benson; this was the influence which secured for young Harry Benson his position with the famous lawyer of New York, whose name was Harveygood. He had two children, and was a man of large wealth. Young Benson married the daughter of his old partner, who, not long afterward died and his son, Julius Harveygood, and Benson's wife fell heirs to a large fortune. He and his brother-in-law, Benson, had formed a very warm attachment for each other. They united into a very strong firm and practiced their profession with marked success for many years.

Judge Benson had only two children, the lawyer of whom we have spoken, and a beautiful daughter, Miss Ida Benson. It was the devout wish of her brother that she might become the wife of his wealthy law partner. She was attending school in one of the great female colleges, of the East. The lawyer had met her frequently and was deeply interested in her. That was true, however, of several young men in Fort Worth. When she came home the closing year of her college life for her Christmas holidays, she frequently met with Huston who had come in off the ranch to spend the holidays with Mr. Goodson. She was delighted with the handsome young cowboy. My judgment is, that there was a love affair brewing between these young people. We shall see what we shall see.

fairness, is it right to question the consecration of an evangelist or damage his reputation because he cannot see his way clear to conduct a siege that gives no promise of affording his family with even the bare necessities of life? He should trust God. True, but should he alone trust God? Would it not be more equitable for those interested in the meeting to trust God with the evangelist and prove their faith by their works? Unquestionably it would be less burdensome for a whole congregation, though it be a small one, to assume the financial responsibility than it would be for the evangelist to do so lone-handed. Obviously a church should not demand a longer period of the evangelist's time than it can properly remunerate him for. We believe that this is a fair proposition and one to which the good holiness people assent.

2. The success of revival meetings is not determined by their length, but by their intensity. A meeting may be dragged along for a month without accomplishing much; while, on the other hand, intense activity may precipitate a revival in a short time. Our contention is that, all things being equal, a three-Sundays' meeting may accomplish as much in actual soul-saving as a longer meeting. If the meeting is slated as a long one, the church will not work so intensely as it otherwise would, the evangelist can scarcely resist the temptation to "drive slower," and even the unsaved will not yield so readily. The great breaks that frequently occur the last night of meetings are sometimes used as an argument to prove that meetings should continue longer. This is no doubt true in some instances, but in many others the break would not have come, if the people had known that the meeting was to continue. The knowledge that the meeting is to close is one of the contributing causes that produce the break. With this knowledge in mind the church rallies to a more determined and desperate endeavor, the evangelist is inspired to put his best into the final effort, and the unsaved are moved to take advantage of the "last opportunity."

Give us holy and competent workers, who let themselves out to the last link, adequate preparation, meetings of reasonable length, and by the grace of the eternal God, revival fire will burn up to the skies and spread over the country. Amen and amen!

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

FLORIDA HOLINESS CAMP MEETING.

E. C. Wills.

Many watchmen upon the walls of Zion in these last days have been lulled to sleep and the enemy of Modernism and Atheism have crept up until their battering rams of unbelief are being boldly hurled at the blessed old truths of the Bible and only here and there is the sound of alarm heard and foes challenged. These warnings and cries of alarm are coming largely from our Holiness Camp Meetings and those contending for the Faith of the Fathers.

The Florida Holiness Camp Meeting calls upon every lover of and believer in the Doctrines of our original methodism from Maine to California and from the Lakes to the Gulf to meet us in our Fifth Annual Feast of Tabernacles on West Livingston Street at City Auditorium Park in Orlando, Florida, February 28th to March 10th for a great Holiness camp meeting and rally in defense of the church and against the deeply entrenched foe of the church and the Bible, to arouse the watchmen upon the walls of Zion until the church shall wake up and go forth as terrible as an army with banners, lest we die of our own indifference.

The Camp Meeting just one year ago was the greatest in the history of the Camp and yet we are claiming and believing for this coming Camp to surpass it in every way by the help of the Lord and plead with every true child of God to throw your prayers, sympathy and financial support into this gracious work so signally blessed of God. We must have large numbers of sinners blessedly converted and born again in the old time way, backsliders returning from the far away land to the Father's house and hungry hearted believers struggling with the inbred sin or carnal mind, wholly sanctified, men and women called to preach, go as missionaries, manna hard places at home or abroad. Folks from many different states attend this Camp and we want them to come from everywhere this year, a mighty host to pray, believe, sing, shout, testify and help win the day for the Lord God Almighty.

Our workers cannot be surpassed in the Nation and we are looking for the greatest Camp Meeting ever held in Florida in real definite spiritual results and you are urged to come and spend this ten days with us and God will so bless that you will never regret the time and money expended. Don't forget to come to the Florida Holiness Camp Meeting. We have ample Railroad facilities and Bus schedules should you not come in your car. Write for information as to details to Rev. E. C. Wills, Secretary, 1704 Dauphin Street, Orlando, Fla. See details on another page.

GLORIOUS VICTORY IN CANADA, PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW YORK.

Since the middle of October when I sent my last report to The Pentecostal Herald it has been my privilege to work in churches belonging to five different denominations as well as preaching incidentally in missions and other places by the way. The meeting in the Mennonite Church on Brunswick Avenue, in Toronto, Canada, was signally blessed of God to the membership of the Church. The last Sunday was like a mighty refreshing. The afternoon meeting commenced at about two-thirty and ran on with practically no intermission until one in the morning. Souls were seeking God all over the Church as well as at the altar and in the vestry. The meeting ran over three days beyond schedule and in the company of J. R. Good and Edson Crosby, "the man with the Silver Bells," we drove in a fast automobile to Buffalo catching the two o'clock train for New York so that the following night we could open in the Roosevelt Methodist Church on Long Island, a suburb of New York City, and but a few blocks from the Roosevelt camp ground where we labored in the summer. This Church is pastored by Dr. D. D. Norris, an old classmate in College and Seminary. A new building had been erected and was dedicated during the meeting. A Tithers' Association was organized, also a Pastor's Prayer and Witnessing Circle for visitation in the large constituency of about 6000 suburbanites. Many sought full salvation and quite a number claimed it. To quote from the pastor in a personal communication, "There is one room in the parsonage that will always be considered Holy Ground; that is the room where after the altar services were over and the congregation had gone home, the evangelist and workers gathered for prayer with those who were willing to seek until the victory came. No one needs to send for Dr. Knapp unless he is willing to have a revival prayed down from Heaven and to pay the price in genuine heart-searching and devotion." It was glorious privilege on the last Sunday morning to witness the show of hands in the large Sabbath School when all were asked to testify who had found the Lord. Some Heralds are going into this community.

The 38th Annual Convention of the Perkasie Holiness Association was our next appointment at Perkasie, Pa., in the First Evangelical Church. This lasted ten days and in prayer, seeking and breaking up and down before God was a glorious experience. The writer was led to preach much along the line of repentance in believers and God blessed the Word to many. The last Sunday night was especially glorious, when after the regular meeting closed, in the prayer room a man who looked to weigh about three hundred and fifty pounds got gloriously saved and shouted and praised God all over the Church. At Endicott, N. Y., in the Reformed Methodist Church, we had the privilege of splendid fellowship of the pastor with Brother F. H. Bailey, formerly President of the Greensboro Bible College. It was Christmas time but the saints rallied and God worked upon hearts so that some lasting good was accomplished. Arriving home Christmas eve we found a telegram cancelling our next date at Oakes, N. D., with Rev. Simeon Williams, an old Asbury boy, on account of flu conditions. We believe that "all things work together for good to them that love God," and in a few days the doors of the Central Nazarene Church were opened for a meeting where we are now preaching nightly in the company of the pastors, Washington Sherman and Harvey Galloway. Oh that God would mightily pour out his Spirit in this old sin-cursed city of Cincinnati. It is of interest that I am now preaching on the same street and within a few blocks of the same location where my father, Martin Wells Knapp, had a mission open day and night nearly thirty years ago. Brethren, pray for us.

I think it may be of interest to give you a little Indian history covering the Pichis region that shall give you a more definite prayer attitude, or at least, an idea of what we face down here.

Just opposite Cahuapanas and on the clearing are evidences that at one time the present site was fairly inhabited. Great trees have been felled and canoes partly dug out of their trunks, then apparently the work was abandoned. On hunting with our Indians at different times I have noted a well beaten path worn by many feet. On inquiry I found that the path led to the ruins of an old convent. Piece by piece we have the story of the exploitation of the Indians. The Cahuapanas of old days was a rubber base, a wedge shaped tract of land, flanked by the Pichis on one side and by the Apurukili river on the other, a strategic point on the headwaters of navigation. Thus, we have a unique responsibility to live down the record of those "Bad Whites."

The rubber gatherers were commonly sworn enemies inciting their peons to kill on sight any party of rubber gatherers other than their own company. Thus it was a common thing for two groups of Indians, members of the same tribe, to attack each other merely because they were employees of different companies of whites. Finally, the Indians arose against the whites and planned an attack on Cahuapanas. Some of the Indians on the station got wind of the coming attack just a few hours before, thus giving the priest and some of the whites an opportunity to escape. When the Campas swept down upon the clearing only a few whites were left, one of them being a neighbor who lives just below our station. This fellow fought the Indians until he ran out of ammunition. At the present time he is in league with the Indians. He has two Campa Indian women and children by both of them. He holds some strange power over them. We have evidence that this Peruana is an enemy to the work at Cahuapanas having turned one of the Curacas against us.

The result of the raid was that the Campas swept down on the settlement shooting flaming arrows into the palm-thatched dwellings driving the whites of the Pichis before them. The Peruvian government sent troops in to squash the uprising. Strange to say, the troops went up a river little known by the whites, even the rubber gatherers, and made an attack on Indians who were not implicated in the raid. These innocent braves fought like mad men. Even their women were armed with knives and machetes. There were three chiefs, real savage warriors, who led the attack. One of these was captured and held prisoner at Bermudez, but he finally escaped to the interior again. This all happened thirteen years ago, and since that time they have hated and avoided the whites. In fact, a white takes his life in hand when he goes up the Anakiali river.

Mr. Clark and a halfbreed Indian, Pautre (father a Frenchman and mother a Campa Indian) decided to explore the river. Pautre was going to secure peons, while Clark had as his object the spiritual benefit of the natives. Pautre gave Clark the impression that he knew the country, so with two of our own men, one being Miquel, a bright chap who recently professed conversion, and four halfbreed men, they started up the Anakiali paddling and tangoing against some fearful rapids. In the meantime Clark surmised that Pautre was keeping something back in the way of information. Clark finally pumped him with the result that Pautre confessed that the river was strange to him, but he knew that somewhere along its banks there were three warrior chiefs, and on a chance of meeting them in a friendly mood he had proposed the trip.

The result of the trip was that Clark returned to Cahuapanas and a few days later was taken down with malignant malaria through which I nursed him for three weeks. As soon as he was able to travel we started on our journey out. Two days up the Pichis by canoe we stopped at the house of Pautre. That evening as we sat around the table, our Indians stretched at our feet resting, Pautre accused our Indian Miquel of having lied to Vaca in telling Vaca that he (Miquel) knew the Indian who had shot Vaca's brother in Bermudez. Vaca is one of the war chiefs mentioned above and is very suspicious of the whites. Miquel was not aware of the fact that this very man was living with Vaca. After the party came back, Pautre doubled crossed Clark by sending one of his trusted Indians back to the council house of Vaca, accusing Miquel before Vaca and his men of being a liar, thus trying to put us in wrong with Vaca as well as destroying our confidence in our man Miquel. Thus you can see how we are facing enmity on every side. The whites are fearful that we might spoil the Indians and on the other hand the Indians are fearful that we might prove "true to color." The Indians constantly watch us. Miquel said: "I must watch you white men like snakes in the grass, I cannot help doing so." When Pautre made the accusation the Indians at once gathered their belongings and crossed the river, sleeping on the other side that night in the rain.

The next morning real early we started for Bermudez. Just before arriving at Bermudez I had the privilege of seeing a water boa. The Indians spied him first, shot and wounded him. At once he made an attack on the canoe, but the second shot did the work. We estimated his length at 20 feet, the body was fully as large as my head.

The fourth day we arrived at Yessup, the headwaters of the Pichis river. Early the next morning, the second of July, we saddled mules and started the long, long trail a-winding back to the town of La Merced. From this trail we could at one point look down upon Indian territory, the home of the braves, where no white man has dared to enter, except one man who has the name of the Chunchu blanco. This fellow has a wonderful history in this region which is intensely interesting. He is a German and has taken to wife a Campa woman. He speaks fluently both Campa and Amaxua, and is loved and respected by the Indians. In the early days of the Parane colony, which is below La Merced, this man was an important figure. When he married the Chunchu woman the colony dismissed him. The result was a big chief appeared on the scene from the Gran Pajonal with the threat that if they dismissed the Chunchu blanco every white in that section would be wiped out, so there he is today. He is a picturesque figure with a great forehead, large roman nose and flowing white beard. A unique figure, old Roosman, the only man to go into the Gran Pajonal unarmed on missions of peace—and return. Am happy to say that Roosman in his old age expresses the wish that he might go to Cahuapanas and pass the remainder of his days with us, having his children educated there. If the Lord works it out he shall be a valuable man with whom we can form a contact with the natives from the bush. He said to Clark, "You can go up there if you go in the right way." This "right way" is without arms of any kind. Pray that God may indeed use him. He gives the advice that we have very little to do with Indians other than those from the bush simply because the half civilized Indian is a product of the priests, spoiled and already full of the vices of the white man with very little of his virtues.

For five days we pressed on, sometimes thirteen hours in the saddle, starting in the morning by the light of the moon and arriving at the inn at nightfall. Days they were that seemed an eternity over winding trail just wide enough for the feet of the beast, sometimes over a hanging path of rock being able to escape the cliff with the foot, in some places but a slip on a rock between mule and rider and eternity, yet through those five hard days there was singing in my soul because I realized that we were on a campaign for the Master. While things look dark and almost impossible regarding the task before us, yet again, beyond the cloud lies a silver lining. We know that our Father is mindful of each detail of our lives, loves us and smiles upon us. Are we accomplishing aught? He alone knows. We are but happy to serve him in the seeming impossible.

We traveled that trail fully alert with ears and eyes strained ahead for Indians, animals or birds. Surrounding us was a plant life that represented a fortune if placed in the hands of a botanist. Overhead the scream of fully 500 parrots, representing a fortune if they were in captivity. Thus we poor missionaries were surrounded by unattainable wealth as we continued our journey praying for a chance to drive the thin edge of a Gospel wedge into the crevice of no man's land.

How mindful our Father was of us for we made the trip that usually takes eight days in five without mishap. O my brother! Our God who seeth the fall of the sparrow and numbers the hairs of our heads loveth us. Why should we not pray and press the battle? The victory is ours. We cannot lose. What seems to the world like defeat is but victory for us. Thank God for the hard places that form a contrast when we get back to the easy place, thus giving us a greater sense of appreciation for the mercies of God our Father besides developing our sense of observation of his care. Having spread our blanket on bare tree trunk we can better thank God each night when we lay our weary body to rest on a soft bed. Praise God forevermore.

and that such service will be remembered and rewarded in the great day of accounts.

We do not understand for a moment that the furnishing of food and clothing to the needy is the purchasing of salvation from sin and eternal reward in Heaven. Nothing can take the place of repentance, regenerating grace and sanctifying power. But these gracious works of the Holy Spirit are to bring us into a state of salvation and into such relationships with our Lord Jesus that it becomes our delight to minister in his name to our fellow beings. If our repentance, faith and the work of God's Spirit in our salvation has not brought us into a state where we delight in service, then we evidently need to do the first works.

All of this in the nature of introductory remarks. If you cannot afford to give a new suit of clothes to some poor person that will give a good degree of comfort during the coming weeks of winter blast, haven't you an old suit that can be nicely fixed up and passed along? Jesus is worthy of a new suit all wool, nicely creased, but he has a way of accepting, with pleasure and approval, even "two mites." I have no doubt that the readers of THE HERALD could gather up a vast quantity of partly worn shoes, partly worn garments, outgrown clothing for children and make a very large contribution to the comfort of suffering humanity. Shall we not do our best?

By all means, let being come first. First, the tree, then the fruits. First, the salvation by faith; then the proof that our faith has produced salvation by our works. It is possible that some one may read these lines who has some clothing, but there are no naked handy to whom they can donate the clothing. Then send the clothing to the Salvation Army, or to some mission.

Our Journey Southward.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Well, the long looked forward to trip southward has been made and we are happy to report that Dr. Morrison stood it wonderfully well. We left Louisville on Wednesday night and arrived in Miami Friday morning at 7:15. The ambulance was there to meet him and we brought him to our cozy bungalow, 353 N. W. 37th St., where he has been enjoying the Florida sunshine and balmy atmosphere. He already seems to have gained by the change of climate and we are hopeful of his speedy recovery.

Rev. W. E. Thomas, General Evangelist of the Methodist Church, South, accompanied us as nurse, while his attending physician, Dr. K. H. Hutcherson, of Louisville, came along to see that all necessary attention, medically, was given him. He could not have had two more faithful attendants.

We came over the Southern Railroad, and if Dr. Morrison had been an official of the road they could not have given him more careful personal attention. They had wired their representatives ahead to look after Dr. Morrison to see that every comfort was given him. We shall always be under lasting obligations to them for their kindly consideration.

Florida is still the "land of sunshine and flowers," and the people have been equally as beautiful in their kindness and solicitude for Dr. Morrison's comfort. It makes us feel that, after all, there is much of the "milk of human kindness" left in the world. The city of Miami is full of winter tourists. The people are especially favored by having President-elect Hoover as their chief guest. No northern city could have given him a more royal welcome, and a more hospitable reception.

Let our readers keep Dr. Morrison before the throne of grace that he may speedily recover and be able to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ as in days gone by. We have a profound and comforting sense of God's presence, and although the way has been dark at times, yet along with the testings has come the "sufficient grace" that has enabled us to stem the tide and make the landing. We have had another opportunity to test the grace that always comes in on schedule time.

We shall let you hear from us all along that you may know of Dr. Morrison's improvement. He hopes to be able to take his part in the Orlando Camp Meeting which begins February 28, continuing for ten days.

REAL FAITH.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HERE is no subject which interests Christians more than that of faith. It is the thing about which the Lord says it is impossible to please him unless we have it. Then, in order to please the Lord we should seek to ascertain what that imperative and indispensable thing is, and not be indifferent to its possession.

Some one has said that "Faith is the Christian's vital breath,

The Christian's native air."

It is evident that this should be the case, for the child of God should be in such close touch with the Father, and believe so fully in his promises, that our very life would be an outpouring of our confidence and trust in the Lord.

Faith is that which brings things to pass; that is, it lays hold of the arm of Omnipotence with a confidence that cannot be denied. It was faith that caused Abraham to, in heart and purpose, offer up his only son at the command of God. It was faith that impelled Moses to stretch the rod across the waters and they were divided. It has been faith that has urged the followers of the Lord in all ages to undertake, even the seemingly impossible, at his command.

Our supplies are based on the measure of our faith: "According to your faith, so be it unto you." This places all the responsibility upon how much faith we exercise in the Giver of all things. And we are told and encouraged to "ask largely," bearing in mind that God has limitless resources and is anxious to share them with his trusting children.

There are, however, some conditions upon which faith works. We are assured if we ask anything in Jesus' name we shall receive it. But we are also admonished to ask according to his will. John puts it very clear and emphatic when he says, "If we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us: And if we know that he hears us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him."

We give in this connection an article from George Mueller on this subject:

"First: What is faith? In the simplest manner in which I am able to express it, I answer: Faith is the assurance that the thing which God has said in his Word is true, and that God will act according to what he has said in his Word. This assurance, this reliance on God's Word, this confidence is faith."

"No impressions are to be taken in connection with faith. Impressions have neither one thing nor the other to do with faith. Faith has to do with the Word of God. It is not impressions, strong or weak, which will make any difference. We have to do with the written Word and not ourselves or our impressions."

"Probabilities are not to be taken into account. Many people are willing to believe regarding those things that seem probable to them. Faith has nothing to do with probabilities. The province of faith begins where probabilities cease and sight and sense fail. A great many of God's children are cast down and lament their want of Faith. They write to me and say that they have no impressions, no feeling, they see no probability that the thing they wish will come to pass. Appearances are not to be taken into account. The question is—whether God has spoken it in his Word."

"And now, beloved Christian friends, you are in great need to ask yourselves whether you are in the habit of thus confiding, in your inmost soul, in what God has said, and whether you are in earnest in seeking to find whether the thing you want is in accordance with what he has said in his Word."

"Second. How faith may be increased. God delights to increase the Faith of his children. Our Faith, which is feeble at first, is developed and strengthened more and more by use. We ought, instead of wanting no trials before victory, no exercise for patience, to be willing to take them from God's hand as a means. I say—and say it deliberately—trials, obstacles, difficulties, and sometimes defeats, are the very food of Faith. I get letters from so many of God's dear children who say: 'Dear Brother Mueller, I'm writing this because I am so weak and feeble in faith.' Just so surely as we ask to have our Faith strengthened, we must feel a willingness to take from God's hand the means for strengthening it. We must allow him to educate us through trials and bereavements and troubles. It is through trials that Faith is exercised and developed more and more. God affectionately permits difficulties, that he may develop unceasingly that which he is willing to do for us, and to this end we should not shrink, but if he gives us sorrow and hindrances and losses and afflictions, we should take them out of his hands as evidences of his love and care for us in developing more and more that faith which he is seeking to strengthen in us."

"When I first began to allow God to deal with me, relying on him, taking him at his word, and set out fifty years ago simply relying on him for myself, family, taxes, traveling expenses and every other need, I rested on the simple promises I found in the fifth chapter of Matthew. Read Matt. 5:25-34 carefully. I believed the Word, I rested on it and practiced it. I took God at his word. I've lacked nothing—nothing. I have had my trials, my difficulties, and my purse empty, but my receipts have aggregated thousands of dollars, while the work has gone on those fifty-one years. There will always be difficulties, always trials. But God has sustained me under them and delivered me out of them, and the work has gone on.

"I do not carry the burden. I have had my trials, but I have laid hold upon God, and so it has come to pass that I have been sustained. It is not only permission, but positive command that he gives, to cast the burdens upon him. Oh, let us do it! My beloved brothers and sisters in Christ, 'Cast thy burden upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee.' Day by day I do it. This morning sixty matters in connection with the church of which I am pastor, I brought before the Lord, and thus it is, day by day I do it, and year by year; ten years, thirty years, forty years.

"Do not, however, expect to obtain full Faith at once. All such things as jumping into full exercise of Faith in such things I discountenance. I do not believe in it. I do not believe in it. I do not believe in it, and I wish you plainly to understand I do not believe in it. All such things go on in a natural way. The little I did obtain I did not obtain all at once. All this I say particularly, because letters come to me full of questions from those who seek to have their Faith strengthened. Begin over again, staying your soul on the Word of God, and you will have an increase of your Faith."

A SPIRITUAL CRISIS.

Gen. 32:26-30.

REV. E. HILTON POST.

HIS combat of Jacob with the angel is one of the most famous on record. The diversity of opinion relative to this wrestling match among Biblical critics is hardly worth consideration inasmuch as the spiritual significance of this incident is the only real point of interest to us today. From Bethel to Peniel has become a proverb among the holiness people. It suggests the double phase of Christian experience. With this in view we will proceed to study this interesting wrestling match.

Jacob, called the "heel grasper," the dishonest man, became a "new creature," a changed man after God had bestowed upon him the blessing of forgiveness at Bethel and had entered into covenant relationship with him. Twenty years have passed and he is now about to pass through the country possessed by Esau, whom he had wronged so long before. That the conduct of Jacob on this occasion was wholly prompted by fear is questioned by some very eminent scholars. If he had met with a genuine change at Bethel no other course would be right for him to take. Dr. Clarke says, "He was not wholly prompted by fear, for he sends his wives, men servants and sons over the brook Jabok. He had confidence in the covenant promise God gave him at Bethel."

In the text he is determined to have a second blessing that would exterminate any of the old supplanter, heel-grasping nature remaining in him. His conduct in seeking that blessing may assist us in reaching the goal of heart purity. The incident suggests to us a great privilege. "There wrestled a man with him." This "man" was Jehovah. His wrestling illustrates the striving of the Spirit with believers in order that he might sanctify them wholly. How he wrestles! wrestles! Remember that this contention is supported by the fact that Jacob was a servant of God and a man of prayer. God was wrestling with his own servant for a purpose.

The Spirit of God strives with his servants in various ways. He strives by giving conviction for holiness. This conviction is seen in the heart longings of the Christian for uninterrupted peace. They have peace at times but their peace is frequently interrupted by moods, circumstances and environment. The peace is not "abiding" and triumphant. In conviction for holiness we have heart longings for rest from the disturbing presence of inward sin. What a disturber! There is the stirring of anger, of pride, of jealousy, of envy, of hatred and other manifestations of this inward foe.

In conviction for holiness there is heart longing for a consciousness of the constant presence of God. This consciousness is sometimes eclipsed by this inward foe. He strives by bringing the Christian under the influence of holiness preaching and testimony and by placing holiness literature in their hands.

This is not only a great privilege suggested here but the greatest privilege of the life. It implies the removal of the element of moral weakness and danger from our natures. It is the cure from the fatal disease of sin. The removal of the besetting (upsetting) sin. It is the greatest privilege because it implies the full equipment and empowerment for holy living and service. It is the added sufficiency for every emergency of life!

It is the greatest privilege because in this striving we are met by one who is able to bless us. All Scriptures point to God as the Sanctifier. Before He told Moses to remove his shoes he said, "I am the almighty God." Likewise to Abraham. The writer of the Book of Hebrews says that "He is able to save to the uttermost." After Paul had prayed for the entire sanctification of the Thessalonian brethren he said, "Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it." No one could thus meet God as Jacob did and not want holiness. When Isaiah had his remarkable vision of God he immediately confessed his depravity in order that he might receive the purifying touch of fire. The time of this great privilege may be short is suggested here.

"The day breaketh." What a suggestion! He may soon depart! Grasp opportunity by the forelock. The day will bring either deliverance or disappointment. Which shall it be? You will determine that by your attitude toward this great issue.

The incident suggests to us a great purpose. "I will not let thee go except thou bless me." The secret of this man's definite purpose was the fact that he was a desperate seeker. A desperate seeker always has a definite purpose! Remember that "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent taketh it by force." Jacob was not to be defeated in his purpose. If he lived in our day one of his favorite hymns would be, "I will not be denied."

He was a desperate seeker under painful circumstances. The Lord had put his thigh out of joint. He is now to learn that it is "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts." He formerly conquered by his own strength and cunning, now if he prevails it must be through the help of God alone. Only God can get us through to the conscious blessing of heart purity.

As a desperate seeker he was definite in his purpose. "Except thou bless me." Not another thing did he want but the blessing that would remove his heel grasping, supplanter, dishonest nature. He wants to meet Esau with a heart full of perfect love. How he prays for this one thing! "Bless me!" Definite prayer is always personal when it relates to experience. It is to the point. It is not "more" that such a seeker wants or needs, but "less." He needs to "Hear him"

Speak the second time, 'Be clean,'

And take away his inbred sin."

Too many are interested in more power or more love, or more faith, when they need above everything to be cleansed from this inward sin. Back of this man's desperate seeking was a profound conviction of his own need. He must not meet Esau as he is. He must have a changed nature and disposition. It was this conviction and desperate character of his seeking that made him conscious of his present opportunity. To him it was "now or never."

Because he was a desperate seeker he freely confessed his unholy nature. "I am Jacob." I am the supplanter, the heel grasper! It took him all night to come to the point of confession, but when he reached it he came to the point of deliverance.

The incident of the text suggests a definite result. "He blessed him there." It was not a case of gradual development but instantaneously receiving the answer to his prayer. There! He knew the place where the blessing came to him. Isaiah said it was "in the temple", and the time "in the year that King Uzziah died." He had it tabulated. He did not grow into the blessing but he received it "there." That he received the blessing he was after is seen in the fact that he readily separated the choicest of his flock as a present for Esau. How different from the past! He knew how to get the best of everything and practiced it until he received his Bethel covenant blessing and now he is unselfish and wants to give the best rather than keep the best. It always works that way. This man received a new name. He was no longer to be known as Jacob, (heel grasper), but Israel, a prevailer, a Prince!

This man was marked even after receiving this second epochal blessing. He was lame. He hitched the rest of his life. Such a lame man would not be wanted in some quarters because his hitch would spoil their programs. The sanctified are marked with a hitch. They hitch away from every unholy combination and practice. Blessed hitch!

Surely the spiritual significance of this incident is far more important than the various opinions of the great scholars regarding the character of this wrestling match. It should create in us a desire to see that this great privilege is not missed, to seek definitely for the one great need, the cleansing of the heart from inbred sin, and that the distinguishing marks of the sanctified life are seen in our individual lives. Amen.

sopranos, as if inspired, sing out, "King of kings, and Lord of lords;" and then as if from the four quarters of creation there came the anxious question, "How long shall he reign," with one accord they make reply, "Forever and forever," and then as if heaven and earth were joining in triumphant shout the whole Choir with mighty volume sings, "Hallelujah, hallelujah, hallelujah!"

Oh, it seems to me like a prophecy of the glad day when every knee shall bow and all the nations of the earth shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father. And from the teeming millions of Asia shall sound the anthem, "King of kings, and Lord of lords;" and the shout of Europe will give it power; and the deep undertone of Africa redeemed will lend it volume; and America, and far-away Australia, and the islands of the sea will join the refrain and pour their matchless music into the ear of Christ, and together, from the uttermost parts of the earth, breaking out in triumphant voice, the whole world shall sing, "King of kings, and Lord of lords; the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

While I am addressing both classes of you, yet my message this week will be especially to our boys for I suppose none of our girls would dare to put a cigarette into their mouth. One of the most abominable habits that boys and young men indulge in is that of smoking cigarettes and tobacco. They tell me that of the two, cigarettes are the most hurtful, as will be shown by the following little dialogue which I came across the other day. Take fair warning, my dear boys, and do not get in the habit of smoking, either cigarettes or tobacco of any kind. It is expensive, dirty, and useless, and often offensive to other people.

Lovingly,
AUNT BETTIE.

EFFECT OF CIGARET SMOKING.

"You smoke thirty cigarettes a day?"

"Yes, on the average."

"You don't blame them for your run down condition?"

"Not in the least. I blame my hard work."

The physician shook his head. He smiled in a vexed way. Then he took a leech out of a glass jar.

"Let me show you something," he said. "Bare your arm."

The cigarette smoker bared his pale arm and the doctor laid the lean black leech upon it. The leech fell to work busily. Its body began to swell. Then all of a sudden a kind of shudder convulsed it and it fell to the floor dead.

"That's what your blood did to that leech," said the physician. He took up the little corpse between his finger and thumb. "Look at it," he said. "Quite dead, you see. You poisoned it."

"I guess it wasn't a healthy leech in the first place," said the cigarette smoker sullenly.

"Wasn't healthy, eh? Well, we'll try again." And the physician slapped two leeches on the young man's thin arm.

"If they both die," said the patient, "I'll swear off—or at least I'll cut down my daily allowance from thirty to ten."

Even as he spoke the smaller leech shivered and dropped on his knee dead, and a moment later the larger one fell beside it.

"This is ghastly," said the young man; "I am worse than the pestilence to these leeches."

"It is the empyreumatic oil in your blood," said the medical man. "All cigarette smokers have it."

"Doctor," said the young man, regarding the three dead leeches thoughtfully, "I half believe you're right."—New Zealand Outlook.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Hold your dog till I get in. I have been reading the letters and like them fine. I have never written but will write one letter. I have dark complexion, dark curly bobbed hair, blue eyes, and weigh 123 pounds. We have not been taking The Herald very long. I go to church all I can. My mother belongs to the Baptist church and I the Methodist. I am in the eighth grade at school. I am thirteen years old. I have one brother six years old. My birthday is August 25. Have I a twin? My height is five feet. Who ever writes to me I will send them my picture.

Fawn Opal Wolfe.

Rt. 1, Hinton, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am from Dixie. May I rove through the gardens of page ten, greet and meet all the cousins? I will let you tag me, and I'll escape the rough hands of old Mr. W. B. Thank you very much, Auntie! Cousins, I am from Dixie, the land of flowers and alligators. Ha! Ha! Say cousins, when I was a lad still in my teens, I began life with high hopes. I will be a better man than my big brother; the stumbling blocks that trip others will never trip me. I felt my own expanding powers and was sure that they would carry me through to any goal I sought. In the fullness of time I become a sporting young man with this same ideal in view, but it isn't so easy as I had imagined. Life is more complicated than I thought. One by one I saw my towering air castles dissolve in the hard light of every-day experience, and at last, I had to admit that I had not gone as far as I once expected. But always, fortunately, we remember what we dreamed. Always we have in the back of our minds a picture of what life might be like if we had not failed. We are persuaded, thereby, that the world is potentially a better place than we have made it, and that we ourselves as young people, are, at bottom, better than we seem. We must be; cannot we dream gorgeous dreams of heaven? So, in the midst of our disillusion, there remains a spark of deathless optimism that persists quite irrationally. It makes us receptive; and now and then when some man greater than the rest of us comes along, shows us a great deal and demands that we follow it and stop worshipping Baal, we obey. And when it is over, although we have not followed as far as we intended, we find that after all, we made progress. Cousins, do you believe this? Do you understand me? Here is what made me park in the very center of this mood. When I was fifteen years of age, fate or failure crossed my path of dreams and left me paralyzed. For six long years I was a shut-in. I couldn't read or write to while away the time, but one day I found the "Friend of sinners," and I have been leaping, singing, and shouting the praises of the living God. I am from the depths, self-educated thus far. To God be all the glory for ever and ever. Cousins, are you happy or are you in the mood I mentioned above? Consecrate your lives to the Lord and walk in his spice gardens. I will be glad to hear from any or all the cousins. Will answer all inquiries. Can you guess my age exactly? It's between twenty and twenty-five. The one guessing right I will send them a picture.

Morris G. Lee.

Box 91, Queen City, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a New Mexico girl twelve years old. I live with my grandma. I go to Sunday school every Sunday, and belong to the Methodist Church. Grandma takes The Herald. Helen Bennett, I guess your middle name to be Lucile. Who can guess my first name? It begins with H and ends with N, and has five letters in it. I will write the one that guesses my name.

H. Lucile Johnson.

Box 155, Fort Sumner, N. M.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl ten years old and in the fifth grade. I go to Sunday school almost every Sunday. I hope to see my letter soon. I read your Happy New Year Greeting to the boys and girls, and I thank you for it. I have a bicycle and have fun riding it. I have two brothers. My big brother is fourteen years old. His name is John Charles. My little brother's name is Stanley Alvarado; he is nine years old. We have a Crosley Radio; it is playing from Louisville, Ky., right now. I had a fine time during the holidays and got lots of presents. My chum's name is Muriel Norlemann. She is our Methodist pastor's daughter.

Virginia Todd Benson.

Westby, Wis.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again. May I enter your happy band for a chat? I sure do enjoy reading The Herald and the interesting letters on page ten. Cousins, I think we all should be more interested in living for Jesus and doing what he would have us to do. Doris M. Swenson, the longest verse in the Bible is found in the Old Testament in Esther 8:9. Joseph's brothers sold him for twenty pieces of silver. The Ishmaelites bought Joseph. The men who bought Joseph carried him into Egypt where he lived until his brethren found him. Am I right? What is the longest chapter in the New Testament and the shortest? What are the names of the men that walked in the flame of the burning fiery furnace? What king had them cast into the burning furnace? All you girls and boys write to me. I will answer all letters received. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Bessie Childress.

Brookneal, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kansas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have blue eyes and dark brown hair. My birthday is May 23. I am eleven years old. Do I have a twin? I will answer all letters received. I hope Mr. W. B. is pulling weeds when my letter arrives. Now who can guess my middle name? It begins with A and ends with E, and has four letters in it. My grandmother takes The Herald which I enjoy reading very much.

Elizabeth Viles.

330 W. 13th St. Fredonia, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you move over just a tiny little bit, and let a little West Virginia girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I am four feet, seven inches tall, have brown eyes and auburn hair. I am ten years old and in the fifth grade. Father takes The Herald and I like it fine, especially page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald and hope that you will print it in The Herald, and surprise mama and daddy. I would like to hear from the cousins, and if they write to me I will be glad to answer them, and if they send photos I will send some also. I am sending my love to you and the cousins.

Juanita Grimes.

1205 S. Davis Ave., Elkins, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: The poem that you put in The Herald sure is a lovely one. I am going to learn it by heart. I am eleven years old and in the seventh grade at school. My teacher is Miss Arnold and she lives with us. I like her very much. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with A, and has four letters. I will write to anyone that will guess it and will answer every letter I get. I live on a farm, and the sport I like best is riding horseback. I have three brothers and one sister, but they are all away from home. Three of them are college students and one an instructor. My mother takes The Herald and I always like to read the letters on page ten. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print.

Pearl E. Voas.

Hitchcock, N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let me visit your page again? I have been a subscriber of the dear old Herald many years. I love to read Aunt Bettie's pieces and Dr. Morrison and page ten. Well, I just love it every bit. When I was sanctified about sixteen years ago I prayed the Lord to send me a good holiness paper, one that didn't have pictures on the first page or worldly ads in it. I wanted a paper that would be food to my hungry soul, and praise his matchless Name he sent The Pentecostal Herald. The Lord is still answering our prayers. He has sent us a pastor, Rev. G. C. Hesson, a Nazarene preacher. Everyone that reads this please pray that the Lord will provide him a gospel tent. I wish to thank all that sent me tracts and papers. If you have any of the Lord's literature send me some of it. I will give it out with a prayer. Pray for us folks here in the hills of middle Tennessee. May the Lord bless Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Mrs. L. J. Wallis.

Rt. 1, Carthage, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please, may I come in and sit in that big arm chair next to Aunt Bettie? I am just a plain, common, everyday girl so why the description. Anyway I think if lots of us would banish egotism from our hearts we would be better off. Isn't it wonderful what a wonderful Savior we have. I'm glad to tell you that I'm a saved and sanctified, old-time shouting Methodist. I know that there are many good people in this world who are not Methodists, but nine times out of every ten they are people who have had the blood of Jesus applied to their souls and have come out rejoicing in the love of Jesus. I have been living this life a little bit longer than a year and have never regretted it one minute. Sinners, I have a Saviour that will stand the test and I recommend him to you. I enjoy reading The Herald. We could not be without it. I have a dear grandmother living at Lexington, Ky., who watches page ten every week for a letter from me. I hope this is printed so her heart will be made glad. Cousins, I invite one and all to write to me. I'm not afraid of letters and will try to answer every one. I must leave now or Mr. Waste Basket may try to fill his always empty cavity with this bit from my pen.

Rt. 3, Cynthia, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes this Ohio boy again. The weather is cold today, so I would like to come in to your little room if you have any left. I'll try and be good, and not stay very long. Jesus sweetly saves, sanctifies, and satisfies my soul, for which I praise him. I still have the devil on the run. I have heard people say that as long as the devil was after them, he had not got them. Well, we do not want the devil after us, for all the armor of the Christian is made for the front; there is none for the back; so if the devil is after us, he'll surely hit us in the back. What we want to do, is to keep him on the run, going ahead of us. He may attack us at times, but like Christian in the Valley of Humiliation, when the devil attacked him, he raised the shield of faith, and the devil's darts were all broken. I am not going to tell you how old or how young I am, but see if you can find out in the following Bible references which I will give how old I was on my last birthday. Add the number of the children of Israel and Judah, as given in 2 Chron. 24:9; then subtract the number of Ethiopians in 2 Chron. 14:9; and divide by the number of Gideon's reduced army in Judges 7:6. Then subtract the number of men which Shamgar slew with an ox goad in Judges 3:31, and divide by the number of men whom Elisha fed with twenty barley loaves and roasting ears, in 2 Kings 4:43; then add the number of fingers and toes that the giant Gath had on his hands and feet, in 1 Chron. 20:6; then add the hour of the day when Saul was stricken to the earth as given in Acts 26:13. The answer will give my age on my last birthday. If Aunt Bettie or any of the cousins will send my correct age, I will send you a book of poems which I composed and printed; so hurry along and get your Bibles and search for my age. I will leave you for this time. God bless you one and all, is my prayer.

FALLEN ASLEEP

THE HOME-GOING OF MR. L. E. MATTINGLY.

At his home, Lexington, Ky., Dec. 19, 1928, between 6 and 7 P. M., our brother was summoned while sitting at his supper table, to spend Christmas with his elder daughter. He had been busy doing up Christmas presents and hanging emblems of the joyous season about the house, and had just finished, so he accepted his Master's invitation without a murmur or delay. Having made all preparations for his loved ones here on earth for a happy Christmas, it is no wonder a smile was on his countenance when he passed beyond to be with his loved ones on "the other shore" and celebrate the earthly anniversary of his Savior's birth, for there must be a happy Christmas in heaven.

His was a happy Christian home, consisting of a consecrated, loving wife and young daughter, three adult sons, and two other sons married but having their homes in Lexington. Three grandsons survive, the oldest bearing his name, has his home with his grandparents since his own dear mother said good-bye to him when departing for her heavenly home.

Bro. Mattingly was an outstanding Christian layman, an uncompromising leader in his church, believing in a strict adherence to the statutes given by divine inspiration. Kindly and courteous in words and manner, he was firm and unshaken in his convictions. His personality was humility itself, which made one of his greatest assets in winning his fellowmen to the Master.

The writer of these lines knew Mr. Mattingly for the past twelve years; sat with him in the "Men's Wesley" Bible School class; the latter half of these years, he was class instructor. In his expository teaching (which was his plan) the burden on his soul seemed to be, to help some one find Jesus precious to his life. His testimony at prayer meetings, at the Mission services, and wherever an opportunity offered in other churches, expressed his regrets that he had not been converted earlier in life, thereby having done more for his Lord in his service here on earth.

Bro. Mattingly experienced the second work of grace through the People's Mission, which is ministered to by the young theological students of Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. His greatest delight was to attend the annual camp meeting every year at Wilmore, led by Dr. H. C. Morrison, whom he considered among the greatest ministers of America.

Just recently Mr. Mattingly had been made superintendent of the little Mission, and it was with great faith he anticipated the future work, however glorious it had been in the past, such a institution could accomplish under the pulpit leadership of the talented young minister of Asbury College. Charles F. Cochran. Consistency in one's religion, coupled with an intense sincerity, are priceless jewels in a Christian character, but added to these patience and humility, and you partially describe our friend and brother. Obedience was another attribute stressed by him in his Bible school teachings.

The friends of this godly man considered him a miracle man. About six years since he had been raised up from a death-bed, through prayer of a devoted wife, Christian friends, and an holy evangelist traveling throughout the nation, and at the time preaching at the little Mission tabernacle.

This devout minister visited Brother Mattingly, prayed with him, and anointing his body, told him to take no more medicine or treatment from his physicians, as the Lord had made it known to him that he would recover immediately, which became true.

One of the greatest comforts to his associates of the Men's Wesley Bible school class, is the knowledge that its leader truly left them with the "Full Armor On." Sunday, Dec. 16, three days preceding Bro. Mattingly's home-going, he spoke with unusual unction on the lesson, which was "Paul's friendship to Onesimus." Bro. Mattingly mentioned his illness which prevented his attendance the preceding Sunday, and during his ten days confinement he had the very great pleasure of reviewing and studying the whole of Paul's writings, and that he failed to find a single word of complaint or murmur of the saintly apostle's sufferings. He said his illness had been such a dear blessing to him.

The life of this good man is a challenge to his community, and most particularly to his sons left to take his place in the home, church, and world. When he lifts up the torch in "passing on" may these sons of Bro. Mattingly "hold it high," comfort their mother and sister by emulating the Christlike character of their father.

Another comfort the family will have, is the knowledge that the father is with his daughter and sister so recently departed, as also other relatives, and how happy must be the waiting for the completion of the home-coming reunion that will take place in a few short years "On the Other Side." Christmas and the New Year were saddened here but we know it is a joyous, glorious awakening and hearty welcome to our friend and brother. May we meet again for the great home-coming so beautifully sung in Raymond Browning's "First Ten Thousand Years."

J. W. Newton.

GREEN.

J. F. Green has passed away. How sad to pen these lines, yet we know that our loss is heaven's gain. He was born March 31, 1849, joined the M. E. Church when twelve years of age. Was married to Miss Suffina Davis when nineteen years of age. To this union four children were born. All have passed away except an only daughter with whom he made his home for the last fifteen years. He will be missed most by those who loved him best.

That blessed sleep that he longed for through the many months of patient suffering and helplessness came to him on Sunday night at 7 o'clock, Dec. 9, 1928. He loved the beautiful and good; always enjoyed The Herald which he has read for a number of years.

Funeral services were conducted at Caney Spring Church by the pastor, Rev. Wade, and his former pastor, Rev. B. F. Ison. The beautiful words that were spoken, the sweet songs that were sung and the beautiful flowers with that sweetest poem, "Crossing the Bar," given by Bro. Isom, the sweetness, the quietness of it all was such a comfort to the lonesome loved ones.

While we bow our heads in sorrow we know that God is our refuge and strength and will help us bear our troubles.

One Who Loved Him.

THUMM.

Mrs. Catharine Thumm, of Pinch, W. Va., wife of Jacob F. Thumm deceased, was born in Wertenberg, Germany, June 10, 1849, and departed this life Dec. 29, 1928, age 79 years, 6 months, and 19 days. She was a wonderful mother having reared ten children, two of whom preceded her in death, a daughter, Lizzie, a son, Wm. Henry, who was murdered July 24, 1927. Her husband having left her a number of years ago she had the road to travel alone with some small children, but her trust was in God and her German Bible her daily guide, which her children can never forget. So often when asked by those at home "Where do we find certain things in the Scripture?" Soon in her weak voice she'd answer with its chapter. Her training will never be forgotten. She leaves to mourn her loss four sons and four daughters, J. G. and

Va., and Hilda Thumm, of Pinch, W. Va., and 41 grandchildren, 13 great-grandchildren, besides a host of friends to whom she was known as "Grandma."

She gave her life to God at the age of fourteen years and united with the German Lutheran Church. The last few years of her life being very feeble she gave a lot of time to the reading of Christian literature, but most of all her German Bible. A few hours before leaving her earthly home she bade farewell to her loved ones and seemed to embrace those gone before which we believe she is enjoying heaven with.

We miss your face, dear mother,
We miss your loving smile;
But if we're only faithful
We'll meet you after while.
The chair you used is vacant,
Your voice is hushed and still,
A place is vacant in the home
Which never can be filled.
No more treading round the fireside,
No more humming at your work,
Home is broken, loved ones scattered,
But your home you did not shrink.

"Boys, be steady, preach the gospel,
Never shirk your duty here,
Stand for God and wait his coming,
For his coming draweth near.
All is dark but not tomorrow,
Clouds will pass, the sun will shine,
Then we know a glad reunion
In the happy sunny clime."

By Elizabeth Prentiss.

A book that has never lost its charm though it has been in circulation for many years. It is written in diary form and can be picked up or dropped at any point. The book contains the varied experiences of a girl as she develops in the Christian life. Written in an interesting way that will hold the attention of the reader. Stepping Heavenward is considered by many a real classic. Especially is this book fine for girls from fifteen to twenty-five as it helps them in their problems and enables them to see the light.

We have purchased an entire edition of this book bound in blue cloth, that we are selling at 30c each or two for 50c.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VII.—February 17, 1929.

Subject.—Prayer. Matthew 6:5-13; Luke 18:9-14; I John 5:14, 15.

Golden Text.—If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you. John 15:7.

Introduction.

"O Thou, by whom we come to God, The Life, the Truth, the Way; The path of prayer thyself hast trod:

Lord, teach us how to pray."

Prayer and God's promises go hand in hand. No one can pray well, unless he knows the promises. Somewhere I have learned that John Fletcher was accustomed to lay his finger on a promise in the Word, and claim an answer to his petitions on its strength. I would as soon go hunting with no shells in my belt as to try to pray without the promises. One should always know what sort of shot he has in his shells; for should he meet a bear when he had nothing but bird-shot, the combat might be fatal to the sportsman. One who has some important praying to do should know the promises and where to find them without loss of time.

One's praying amounts to little, unless his life is devoted to it—he must give himself to prayer. Jesus says "men ought always to pray": St. Paul exhorted the Thessalonian Christians to "pray without ceasing." One great pressing word occurs in Scripture concerning prayer. Some of you read Greek. The word in that tongue is proskartereo, meaning strong, steadfast in the thing to which one devotes himself. You will find it in Acts 6:4, where the apostles said: "We will give ourselves continually unto prayer and the ministry of the word." Paul uses the noun form of the word in Ephesians 6:18; when in directing that church how to pray he says: "Watching thereunto with all perseverance." He uses the word again in Colossians 4:2: "Continue in prayer." His idea is, put your full powers into it, and stay on the job. If one is to pray well, he must be in unbroken touch with God. The publican could plead for the forgiveness of his own sins; but he was worthless as an intercessor. Intercessors must forget self. Abraham praying for Sodom; Moses pleading for idolatrous Israel; Daniel and Nehemiah on their faces talking to Jehovah about their people in captivity—these were real intercessors. John Knox refusing to live, if God did not give him Scotland for Christ, was an intercessor. But no recorded prayer equals that of Jesus in his High-priestly prayer in the seventeenth of John. That is beyond human effort or human comprehension. It is the agonizing outburst of the broken heart of the eternal Son on his way to the cross to die for the redemption of a fallen world. That great intercessory prayer may be but a sample of the sort of praying he has been doing at the mercyseat in glory during nearly two thousand years. He is our Advocate, our Intercessor, with the Father.

God has given unto us many "exceeding great and precious promises"; but they signify nothing without prayer. Prayer puts life and power into God's promises. What steam is to an engine, prayer is to the promises. The telegraph line may be all right; but no message can be sent till the electric current floods the wire. The kite may be well made; but it cannot fly without the breeze. The promises of God are as unbreakable as the eternal throne; but they are powerless until some praying soul puts into them currents of prayer that sweep up to the heart of God.

Real prayer is an all-consuming agony. God compares it to the birthpang. The soul is drawn into it by the Holy Ghost, and comes out of it limp and pale. The spirit is filled with glory; but the flesh is exhausted. In genuine prayer the soul forgets time and sense. Did not the Spirit help us, we could not endure the surge of the battle. Paul uses a tremendous word in Romans 8:26. He says the Spirit takes hold with us over against our infirmities. Our intercessions would fail, but he "maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered."

I once asked Dr. E. M. Bounds to tell me how to pray. He said: "Let the Holy Spirit conduct you into the throne room; kneel at the mercyseat before the Father, and pray in the name of the eternal Son." I have been scared ever since. That brings the praying soul into communion with the entire Godhead. Have you ever really prayed? In such an hour the soul is shut in with God. The rest of men, the angels, the Devil and his angels are shut out. One hears the thunder, feels the earthquake, sees the flashing lightning, that made Moses "exceeding fear and quake" on Sinai. "The cross all stained with hallowed blood" comes in view. One feels the dripping blood. His heart breaks as he hears the dying cry of the Son of God as it rings through the midnight gloom of that awful hour; but there comes a burst of glory when the angel rolls back the stone, and Jesus lives again, and lives for ever. O, praying is too big for me. I know little about it; but sometimes when I am all wrapped up with the Godhead, and Jesus is inspiring faith, and the Holy Spirit is intecreeding for me, and the Father is smiling and answering, I get so full that it seems to me that my poor little human heart will burst wide open for very joy.

Comments on the Lesson.

5. When thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are.—Jesus had small respect for hypocrites, especially for those Pharisaical fellows who stood at the corners of the streets and in the synagogues praying to show people how good they were. It is all right to pray in public to be heard of God, but not to be heard of men. Humility! That's it.

6. Enter into thy closet.—These are directions for our private prayers. One cannot pray his best in human company. The soul must be alone with God. One may, and often does, do good praying in the presence of others; but when an awful struggle is on, the dearest loved one should not intrude. Let the soul have it out with God alone. The Father will see about the answer and the reward.

7. Use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do.—Repeating the same words over and over like a parrot. There is no merit in that. One can often hear the heathen in their temple crying: "O merciful idol!" Vain repetitions. What avails it to repeat the Lord's prayer a thousand times, or to utter a thousand "Hail Marys"? Nothing at all in the light of this passage. That does not mean that one should never repeat his prayers. Agonizing importunity means something with God, but not mere repetition. This empty repetition is what Jesus condemns as much speaking.

8. Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him.—Then why must we ask? God demands it, because it is best for us. Sometimes he must withhold the blessings for which we pray, lest the giving should do us more harm than good. We human parents understand that in dealing with our children. Patience and faith must be cultivated.

9. Our Father which art in heaven. In contradistinction from our earthly fathers. The term is here used with reference to Christians only, as the prayer is intended for the use of Christians only. God claims to be the Creator of all men; but he is the spiritual Father of all who are begotten of the Holy Spirit. Hallowed be thy name.—"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain." Every useless utterance of the name of God, any of his sacred names, is profanity. Most bywords are profane corruptions of the names of Jehovah.

10. Thy kingdom come.—Some teach that the sole reference here is to the millennial reign of our Lord; but I am persuaded that the meaning is far broader: Salvation for lost men in its full import. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.—Upon earth is better. The two prepositions are different in the original. That is a high standard; but we dare not make it lower. Better pull up to it by divine grace.

11. Give us this day our daily bread.—Pray that petition while you do your best at your daily task, and trust God for bread. No laziness!

12. Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.—Forgive us our sins as we forgive those who have wronged us. Better be careful how you use that petition; for it is dangerous. Be sure to forgive before you ask for forgiveness, or you may get the opposite.

13. Lead us not into temptation.—Suffer us not to be led into temptation. We cannot stand very much. Deliver us from evil.—From the evil one—the Devil. Well may we utter this petition. The beautiful doxology here appended to this prayer was added long after Matthew wrote this book. But it is beautiful. It has become too sacred to be parted with. May no profane hand ever expunge it from the text.

Luke 18:9-14. Here we have a parable that should comfort the heart of every penitent sinner. However, it has no comfort for a proud Pharisaical soul. Some tell us that a sinner has no right to attempt to pray until he has been regenerated through an act of baptism; but this parable brands this teaching as absolutely false. In the estimation of his fellows, this man was one of the worst of sinners; but God heard his cry. The prodigal son was pretty vile; but the father heard his prayer. The thief on the cross confessed that he deserved to die, being guilty of the charge lodged against him; but Jesus heard and answered his plea for salvation. If such sinners as these could pray and find an answer, why cannot all sinners do likewise? The trouble

TWO TRAMPS.

By Amy LeFevre.

A story about a boy named Rollo, and his uncle, who find it necessary to tramp through the country in order to restore perfect health. To Rollo, Christianity is a very real thing. His conversations with his uncle and with the many people that he meets on his travels make an interesting and helpful story. Wherever these two tramps go they scatter sunshine, fresh hope and comfort.

Amy LeFevre has long been noted for her purposeful stories and this one is no exception to the many other books that she has written.

Read Two Tramps. It will be a real refreshment to you. The regular price of the book is $1.50, but we have listed it in our Special Sale at 60c, postpaid.

To be well prepared with your Sunday School lesson is to use A Daily Digest of the Sunday School Lesson by Amos R. Wells. is not with the praying sinner, but with the brother's false theology. It is the prayer of the Pharisee that nauseates God.

1 John 5:14, 15. These two verses give wings to the faith of an honest soul. Confidence grows strong, because we are asking "according to his will." No other sort of praying can possibly reach the ear of heaven. How certain the matter is. One is praying according to the will of God, and knows that he is hearing him, because he has so promised, and he cannot lie. Under such circumstances "we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him." Thank God, the assurance is certain and the answer must come. We would be rich in all spiritual graces, did we not ask amiss, or fail to ask at all.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.
A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Reading. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text. Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

EDUCATION AND RELIGION AND EDUCATION vs. RELIGION.

The following article is written with a view to the parents who have sons and daughters to educate, and by one who has so far seen and escaped the pitfalls of modern education by first having sought and obtained unto that grace that is able to keep from falling. May I say further, that since education is capable of turning fine, honorable young men from places of integrity toward God, to places of atheism and unbelief, it becomes highly advisable to see that that son or daughter receives the basic foundations of education in a school whose purpose is not only intellectual attainments, but whose vision is moral character, and God, and eternity.

Education and religion are peculiarly adapted to, and synonymous with, youth. Statistics bear out the fact that most educated men began and continued their education from minor years; those who attained it, having begun late in life, are the exception and few. Likewise, it is common knowledge of all churchmen that the majority of Christians received salvation before reaching the age of twenty, and those who obtained it later in life are the minority—that minority becoming more pronounced in proportion to advanced years. "THAT THEY MAY BE ONE."

By The Editor.

JESUS prayed for the oneness of his people. St. Paul laid great emphasis on the essential unity of the body of Christ, and had much to say about the correlation and harmony that should exist among the various members of this body. Evidently, this was in the mind of Christ and the great Apostle to the Gentiles, a matter of supreme importance. According to them the progress of the kingdom of God and the salvation of the world depend upon it.

Jesus prayed for his disciples that "they all may be one; . . . that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." Paul considered it a crime to disturb the peace of the members and to introduce schism into the body of Christ. He said to the Romans, "So we being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members one of another." Then again, "Be kindly affectioned one to another, with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another."

There can be no doubt but harm has come out of the bickerings, strife, and jealousies that have existed among professed followers of our Savior. Church has been arrayed against church, altar has been builded against altar; one part of the body has preyed upon other parts, often rejoicing more over one proselyte from a rival denomination than over the accessions from the world. Instead of helping one another and, like different regiments of an army, supporting one another in a concerted attack upon the strongholds of Satan, they have often fought each other more than they have fought the world, the flesh, and the devil.

When one church enters into a conflict with the forces of evil and tries to press the battle against sin, the others stand back without part or lot in it, and sometimes busy themselves in hindering the work, and trying to defeat the purpose of their sister church. This unholy rivalry and internecine strife have shaken the confidence of the world in the religion of Christ, prevented concerted action and left the world in wickedness to this day.

And it is safe to say that these divisions seldom arise over matters that are essential to the salvation of souls. Ordinances, church government, external forms and methods of doing things—these have been the occasions of nearly all the differences between the various religious bodies of the world. In proportion as men drift away from real spirituality and lose the spirit of Christ, do they magnify and contend for these externals and non-essentials. But as men and women get close to Christ, they get close to one another. Unity among themselves is secured by oneness with the Master.

It is folly to suppose that any sort of unity can be secured on the basis of general doctrinal agreement. On the essential doctrines of Christianity there is not much difference, but concerning minor matters men will not and cannot agree. All may be equally honest in their pursuit of truth, but where the Scriptures have left matters in obscurity, because of their nonessential character, men will differ in their opinions so long as they think for themselves.

Is unity among Christians, then, an impossibility? No. There may be unity in the midst of diversity. We can be one in spirit while each holds his own view concerning controverted points. We can agree to disagree about some things and stand shoulder to shoulder in pressing the battle against the powers of darkness. If Christians would quit trying to find out how many points of difference there are between them, and give themselves to an honest effort to find the points of agreement, they would be astonished to find how close they stand to their fellow Christians of other churches.

The Holiness Movement furnishes a practical illustration of this unity of spirit and work. The various denominations preach, labor and work side by side for the conversion of sinners and the sanctification of believers. Their differences are seldom mentioned. The matters upon which they agree fill their hearts and hands. We dwell together in sweetest fellowship and harmony. For the sake of the Christ who died, let's quit magnifying our differences, cease our petty rivalries and join forces in a determined effort to win from the world men and women who are perishing for the bread of life.

Establishing Faith in the Holy Scriptures.

I believe the most important item in the education of young people is that instruction which will establish their faith in the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures. This, well done, we may hope for every good thing to follow.

Unbelief in Bible truth makes an impassable gulf between the soul and God. Belief bridges this gulf and brings the soul into salvation and fellowship with its Maker. The supreme object of Satan and his emissaries is to lead the mind of the young into a state of unbelief; this means to destroy the fear of God and reverence for God. This produces in the soul a state of rebellion against the high standards of conduct set up in the Holy Scriptures, and breaks away all restraint and leaves the soul at the mercy of the deceived, who has no mercy.

Fix in the minds of the young a firm faith in the inspiration of the Bible and you have planted the seeds of reverence in that soul; you have laid the foundation upon which to build good character. Belief in the inspiration of the Scriptures leads to a wholesome fear of God and this leads to carefulness in ones conduct and a consciousness of responsibility. This fixes in the mind an attitude of generosity and kindly helpfulness toward ones fellowbeing. Faith in the Scriptures, and the fear of God, fixes in the mind a purpose to be honest, truthful, and virtuous.

Infidelity lifts the floodgates for the inflow of all manner of wickedness. It produces a state of reckless indifference and selfish indulgence in the minds of those who cast away the great moral laws contained in the Scriptures for the proper adjustment of the mind and conduct toward the Divine Creator and toward ones' fellowbeing.

If the schools of the land destroy the faith of the rising generation they will produce a generation of irreverent, selfish, lawless sinners. On the other hand, if the rising generation is trained to believe the Bible, to trust in the Christ of the Bible for salvation, to revere the God of the Bible and remember that there is to be a day of judgment when we must face the records we have made, this will produce in the young mind a state of holy fear, of reverence, of respect for law, the laws made by men as well as the laws written in the Holy Bible.

If we desire a reverential, industrious, generation of men and women who will fear God and keep his commandments, observe the proprieties of life, be industrious and economical, build up society and bring prosperity and blessing to the people, we must instruct that generation carefully in the great truths of the Scriptures, bringing it to see its responsibility, the sacredness of law, claims of society, to realize the presence of God, and you need not be uneasy for the future. "The fear of God is the beginning of wisdom." Give us a generation of young people who fear God and keep his commandments, and the safety and prosperity of the people are secured.

No soul can preserve the bloom and delicacy of its existence without lovely musing and silent prayer, and the greatness of this necessity is in proportion to the greatness of the soul.—Farrar.

Rev. C. E. Cornell's Home-Going.

A telegram from Mrs. C. E. Cornell, Pasadena, Calif., advises us that on Thursday morning, Jan. 10, at 10:30 o'clock, her beloved husband passed to his reward. Brother Cornell had been ill for many months, lingering between life and death, but notwithstanding this fact, his death will be a surprise to many of his friends. We know where to find him, for he lived with the Lord, and like one of old, "he is not, for the Lord has taken him." May the comforts of God's Spirit be with the bereaved ones, especially the lonely widow, as she longs for the touch of a vanished hand, and the sound of a voice that is still.

NOTES AND INCIDENTS FROM THE ORIENT.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

We are writing these notes on the China Sea on our way to Hong Kong and Canton where we have two engagements for evangelistic meetings. We are sailing on a French ship, the "Andre Lebon," which plies between Marceilles and Shanghai.

Besides our Bethel Evangelistic Band we have also some German missionaries who are on their way to Yunnan, a far-away province of China where, in the midst of fourteen millions of people there is not a hospital and scarcely a modern doctor. These godly women who have already spent many years in China have their faces lit up by light and fire that comes only from Heaven. They carry Bibles with them, worn and marked all over. They are not at all modern in their missionary ideas or ideals, but they are apostolic in the true New Testament sense. They go to tribes of far-off Yunnan carrying the same gospel as Paton carried to the Hebrides, and Thurston and Bingham carried to the Sandwich Islands.

Sunday on boardship is a dull day for me when no religious services are possible. In this case it seemed impossible as most of our ship's company is made up of French. I can talk a little rough French—enough to ask my way about, etc., but nothing to preach with, so the best we could do in the way of service was to hold a prayer meeting in one of our cabins and pray for our coming meetings in Hong Kong and Canton. But then on the other hand it was good for me that I could spend Sunday as an entire rest day. Our last meetings at Nanking used up my strength to the limit. Sometimes I spoke four times a day, and always three, and this, joined with altar services where scores would be crowding the altar, was a tax on an American in a tropical climate. The weather fortunately has been wonderful. It is so much like our Indian summer. One feels like working hard in such beautiful weather but they have warned me when heat comes then there must be a let up and a going slow; then in winter, they say, when it does strike China, you feel it keenly and as the houses are not heated, nor the churches, one has to wear very heavy clothing and just simply endure the cold.

Famine faces North China again, and it is feared that millions will perish for want of bread. At Nanking we visited one of the orphanages there carried on by Mr. Nathan Ma. He went up North to bring down twenty children, but when he got there and saw the condition of affairs he brought sixty children away instead of twenty. He showed me some stone bread which the starving people try to eat there. It is made of a pumice stone crushed, mixed with straw and grass and eaten. It satisfies the craving for food but furnishes no nutrition.

One beautiful thing about Mr. Ma's work is that it is eminently Christian. He takes those children who were brought up in heathen darkness, teaches them to read the Bible, seeks to get every one of them truly converted to God. Mr. Ma is a holiness man. He teaches them to sing religious songs—many of them American songs—he teaches them all a trade and trains them up for God and the gospel.

Miss Hughes, of Bethel, one day pointed me out a splendid looking young man among the Bible students at Bethel. She told me that he came to Bethel from the starvation section of China, that when he came he had the very scantiest clothing on and bare feet and he begged to be given something to do. She set him to work digging and doing odd jobs and he proved to have real worth about him. She inquired as to his schooling and he lacked one year finishing high school; he was put in school and is now one of the com-

From "Bethel Heart Throbs" 1928, Shanghai, China, we quote the following:

Something New!

"Holiness unto the Lord is our watchword and song.

Holiness unto the Lord as we're marching along.

Sing it! Shout it! Loud and long.

Holiness unto the Lord, now and forever."

The coming of Dr. Ridout God has used to bring about the launching of a new department at Bethel to meet a long-felt need. Bethel is interdenominational. We are not a separate church nor do we aim to open up churches or mission stations. We believe Bethel is to be, in the plan of God, a school of the prophets. Now we want the news of what God is doing in the various centers of activity to be known to all the churches of China. There are those who think the day of revival is over. There are some who are sitting by, dressed in the robe of righteousness, believing that the day is past for gathering in lost souls and are placidly waiting for the coming of the Lord, forgetting the implicit command, "Occupy till I come." God has proven, unmistakably, during the last three years of awful crises in China, with warfare shaking the nation, with a tremendous anti-Christian movement sweeping over the land, with the exodus last year of five thousand missionaries, that God is still on the Throne! "His Hand is not shortened that it cannot save!" "The things that are impossible with man are possible with God!" Last year, and amid most trying circumstances, God took little groups of young men and women, cleansed by the power of God from sin, and self, and fear, and clothed with the Holy Spirit and thrust them out to the most unlikely places of this country for revival and gave them revival! We want to make known throughout China the story of what God is doing! To this end, January 1st, 1929 will see (D. V.) the first issue of a monthly magazine in the Chinese language to be called "The Guide to Holiness." All of us here at Bethel live very full lives. It was not possible for anyone to take hold of this particular work. Dr. Ridout as teacher, and preacher, is also an editor and it did not take him long after his arrival to scent our great need here and help put in shape a skeleton copy of the first number. God Himself provided the Editor. Some years ago to our home God sent a very precious little girl to be our adopted daughter. Betty Hu, whose grandfather was Chancellor of Education in China, with an inherited gift for literary work and a most ready pen all consecrated to God, has just returned from Asbury College after two years of special preparatory work and has stepped into this office. Several others have already been added to the staff and it is hoped before this message reaches our friends that several helpful books will have been translated for distribution.

ing young men of the school. He is tall, has a fine appearance, a striking head, is well saved and is one of the most earnest workers in Bethel downtown Mission at night. As I look at him I always think—there is a coming Chinese preacher. One day he will go out from Bethel to preach the gospel to his native people. So much depends on the atmosphere in which one is trained. A missionary in Yunnan was badly in need of workers so she tried to train some. One young fellow of promise she sent away to a certain Theological school where evidently he did not have much spiritual help and inspiration; he stayed three years and graduated and then when he came back he was too big and too important in his own estimation to do simple gospel work himself. He did not want to do evangelistic work himself but wanted to direct others and stay at home himself. This missionary sent his intended wife to school for two years, thus spending five years on them both and then lost them to her own work. They went where they could get better pay instead of staying where they could do the greatest good to the greatest number. So goes unsanctified human nature. It is the same everywhere! These disappointing things take place in China as well as America.

Touching this matter of training, let me make a further remark. Our American schools have had a tremendous influence upon China but alas! alas! the kind of training so many of the Chinese students have gotten in America has been unchristian and the students have come back skeptics and infidels instead of Christians. Let me tell of one young man who was sent to one of our Methodist Universities in the middle states. He fell into the hands of the wrong teachers and when he came back to China he said, "When I went to America I had a Christian experience; I lost it. I left home a Christian; I have returned a Confucianist!" That young man was intended for the ministry in China; he came back and went into government employ.

The mission field naturally reflects the Homeland and its spiritual or unspiritual atmosphere. Many come to China not under any very strong gospel influence. Some come for adventure, romance, etc. Some are called to work here for religious organizations not noted for their piety or spirituality. The other day I attended Thanksgiving service in Shanghai. The preacher was a recent new arrival called to a popular church there not essentially missionary in character. He took his text from Dickens and Marley's Ghost. He had the ghost take him to England where the pilgrims were, then to Plymouth Rock and some other place! How true it is when people dismiss the Holy Ghost they go after other ghosts, which reminds me of an incident in the history of Bethel, at Shanghai. When Dr. Stone and Miss Hughes came to Shanghai to open up their work it was necessary that a large place suitable for hospital should be secured. Real estate men were busy trying to locate a place; at length a very large mansion belonging to the Minister of China to France was located. It was empty and nobody would buy or rent it because it was "haunted"—that is to say, ghosts visited the place at night and the Chinese are dreadfully afraid of ghosts and haunted houses. Now this place suited Dr. Stone just fine for her hospital. It was large, commodious, well situated, etc., and being "haunted" she rented it at a very small figure. Dr. Stone went in, cleaned up the place, drove out the ghosts (?) and brought in the Holy Ghost. No more trouble after that; prayer, Bible, gospel, salvation, healing, the joy of the Lord soon transformed that place and after Dr. Stone was through with it the owner wanted a big price for it.

Now there is a big difference between ghosts and the Holy Ghost. The wicked believe in ghosts; the true Christian says: "I believe in the Holy Ghost"; and since the Holy Ghost has been dismissed from so many churches and schools in U. S. A. other ghosts have come in—such ghosts as Unitarianism, Modernism, Liberalism, Skepticism, etc., but all of these may be summed up in one word—unbelief.

"Take heed," we read in Hebrews 3:12, "lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God." A. Paget Wilkes, that great Bible preacher of the Japan Evangelistic Band, in a writing of his, tells of some of the evils of this heart of unbelief. He says:

"The Word of God speaks of it as a state, an evil heart of unbelief, a spiritual entity, a poison is the soul, a twisted, warped and defamed nature, another name for the carnal mind which is enmity against God."

Unbelief does the following: It shrivels the soul, it wounds the heart of God, it paralyzes our power, it destroys love, it reveals the character of our hearts, it would destroy the whole fabric of society. (Bolshevism).

Well might we pray in the language of Wesley's hymn,

"Remove this hardness from my heart,
This unbelief remove;
To me the rest of faith impart,
The Sabbath of thy love."

While at Nanking one evening the Chinese were carrying on a big racket and noises with drums and all kinds of noise producing instruments. I could not tell the meaning of it. One of the missionaries asked me to step out on the front porch and see the eclipse of the moon. I had been so occupied with my mission that I gave no thought to the eclipse that was due that night. Sure enough there was the eclipse—the moon had quite a big slice of itself clouded and darkened by another heavenly body getting in its path. Now with the ignorant Chinese (educated and enlightened not so) their theory of that eclipse was that a big mad dog had gotten hold of the moon and they were making all that noise to drive that mad dog away from his attack of the moon. It was positively ludicrous, of course, and yet we see things just as foolish in religious realms today.

Modern philosophy in its handling of the sins of the day and the malady that is affecting the human race, offers almost as good a remedy as the noise of drums affecting the state of the man in the moon.

This is a great day for Conventions, Conferences, Commissions, etc. Every moral question has got to be handled through Conventions instead of the gospel, and now the missionary enterprise is passing through the Conference spasm. The more I think and read and learn about the Jerusalem Conference the more I feel myself developing a strong antagonism towards it and its "findings." By this time we are very well assured that the whole thing was managed by outstanding Modernists with Dr. Mott and Bishop McConnell as their chiefs. I venture to say that a great many who held places on the program know next to nothing of real soul winning and real missionary work in the sense that J. Hudson Taylor knew it, or Bishop William Taylor. These men did not spend their time attending conventions, etc., but they went in for real gospel preaching and getting people saved through the precious blood. Over here in China among genuinely orthodox evangelical people it is the opinion that the Jerusalem Conference is responsible more for spreading modernistic propaganda on the mission fields than the pure gospel of Jesus Christ. It is to be noticed that the China Inland Mission had no recognition on the program, and this Mission has had over one thousand missionaries doing absolutely nothing but real gospel missionary work in the hard places in the interior of China.

I have said in one or two addresses to missionaries and people that the kind of conference or convention we need next is one that will write another book of "The Acts of the Apostles."

Sometime ago I heard a very able address on "The Christian Message for Mixed Races." The learned Professor spent most of his time talking about the mixed races, their characteristics, etc., and the last few minutes on the gospel message in which he told us that it should be simple. From my observations and experience after these three months and more in Japan and China, I have come definitely to the conclusion that the human heart and human nature is the same in the Orient as in the West, and they need the same gospel and the same converting, sanctifying power of the Spirit of the Lord.

Some writer put the "Four great Universals of Methodism" thus:

1. That all men need salvation,
2. That all men may be saved,
3. That all men may know themselves to be saved.
4. That all men may attain unto Holiness.

The same thing exactly may be included in the gospel message for the mission fields.

Paganism Repeating Itself.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

In the first chapter of Romans, from the 18th verse to the close of the chapter, Paul gives us a silhouette of social conditions at that time, among non-Christians. He traces it from the early time of mankind—"the invisible things of him since the creation of the world, even his eternal power and divinity, are clearly seen, being perceived through the things that are made." He then shows how men, with the knowledge of God, as they had at first, "became vain in their reasonings, and their senseless heart was darkened." The picture grows darker and darker, as they turned to the worship of idols, "an image of corruptible man, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things." Three times, as he shows the plunge of man down into the moral depths he declares, "God gave them up!" one stage of vileness after another! A part of it was sex-immorality, including sodomy.

Such impurity was common in the Roman empire, and had been through all human history. Under Christian civilization, there was a great change for the better. There has never been a time or place when and where there was not lewdness; but where the power of the gospel unto salvation has gone, it has been exceptional, and has been outlawed by society. But now, here in the United States, we are returning to the practices of the old pagans! There is abundant and unimpeachable evidence that illicit sex relations are very common among supposedly respectable people, including young men and women of high school and college age. I refrain from citing many incidents that would prove this. It has become almost a science. Ways have been found which make girls immune from after results, so that they may indulge with impunity; and that very many do, is beyond all question! This does not refer to white slavery or houses of ill fame; but to society in the homes and schools.

This kind of conduct is fostered and promoted by several things. One is questionnaires sent to young girls, which openly suggest the practice. Another is the vile movies, and still another the licentious dance. Immodesty of dress also helps. To all these, add the behaviorist psychology which is taught in many, if not most, colleges. This psychology is an excrement of organic evolution which is now predominant. Beginning in the public schools, children are taught, indirectly if not directly, that we are but more highly evolved beasts, having yet numerous "vestiges," both physical and moral, of the beast stage. This psychology knows no "sin" in the Bible sense—that is merely "unripe goodness" or "missing the mark." This psychology says that it is entirely proper for one to gratify any and all animal instincts, as we satisfy the appetite for food. Its creed is, "Have a good time," and what has been mentioned are part of the good time. It is a return to Epicurean philosophy, "Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die." It is a revival of the standard of the rich fool, "Take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry." The outcome of it all, is what has been recited above. All of these factors constitute a unit of infamy; they cannot be segregated and cured separately.

We are harking back to paganism, to the standards and customs of two, three or four thousand years ago, before the gospel was known. It is moral statism. Christian civilization is at stake, more than it was in the World War. Babylon, Rome and other civilizations perished by their own moral rotteness, and the United States cannot survive as things are now going. But our civilization is a minor matter. The real concern is that millions of immortal souls for whom Christ died, are being eternally lost! This is what should stir every heart! It should move every Christian to importunate intercessory prayer, for a great, general, wide-spread, nation-wide, world-wide salvation revival. The near return of Christ is no excuse for not doing this.

Nothing else can cope with the situation. Legislation, civil or ecclesiastical, is impotent. With the natural passions being played upon in these various ways, with a lack of moral standards of character and conduct, with no fear of God before them; young people, and older people as well, will not be controlled by rules! The heart must be changed by Divine grace. There must be pungent conviction of sin by the Holy Spirit, thorough repentance for sin, and the new birth; before there will be a reformation of outward life. That it may abide, there must be sanctification, heart cleansing. "This is the will of God, even your sanctification (in order) that ye abstain from fornication."

A Change in the Headquarters and Secretaryship of the Evangelical Methodist League.

Owing to the recent serious illness of Dr. Morrison, he has requested that the work of the Secretary of the League be transferred from THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD at Louisville, to Asbury College; and he has authorized F. H. Larabee, Dean of the Asbury Theological Seminary to take charge of all the secretary work pertaining to the Evangelical Methodist League, and as well, charge of the tent work carried on under the League so that from now on any person who engages in the tent work of the League and making use of one of the League's tents will remember to take up this correspondence with the new headquarters at Asbury College, relieving Doctor and Mrs. Morrison of this part of their work.

F. H. LARABEE,

Secretary and Treasurer of the Evangelical Methodist League.

Mrs. H. C. Morrison,
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Sister Morrison:

The kind words of appreciation you have written me regarding the sonnet I sent you as a small tribute of love and admiration for your esteemed and brilliant husband have been deeply appreciated, I assure you. It is only a frail flower, as I have expressed it, but while I was endeavoring to squeeze into its small compass the real sentiments of my own heart, I was aware of the fact that, at the same time, I was voicing in a way they might not be able to do for themselves, the heart throbs of thousands of Dr. Morrison's devoted friends and admirers.

But, as is so often the case when delicate works of art pass through many hands, the unfortunate thing happened—the printer left out the seventh line, which resulted in a gaping defect in the poet's masterpiece. Hence, dear Sister, in order that Dr. Morrison's many friends, as well as my own, and the sister journals that might wish to copy, may have the sonnet in its correct form, I take the liberty of asking you to kindly republish it in your splendid paper.

Yours in his blessed service,

D. RAND PIERCE.

BY D. RAND PIERCE.

No laurel leaves are needed for thy brow,
To crown thy deeds and herald forth thy fame;
Upon High Heaven's scroll, long since, thy name
Was writ among faith's heroes; there to glow
When human monuments are dust! The snow
Of winter wreathes thy brow; but still the flame
Of youth eternal burns within thy breast,
As calmly glides life's glittering sun to rest!
Some lay their blooms upon the silent bier
Of friends, and sob into the death-sealed ear
The words that would have cheered life's trying hour;
But thou, O man of God, whose ministry
Hath myriads blessed, take this I offer thee
In friendship's sacred name—one humble flow'r!

THE GOSPEL OF PERSUASION

Rev. R. Heber Wightman.

"Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men." 2 Cor. 5:11.

HE design of civil government is to protect its subjects in the enjoyment of their rights and privileges and promote their social happiness and well being.

But such protection and happiness can never be afforded and enjoyed without the enactment of penal laws and, the execution of them, by proper official authority. Unless the civil government be guarded by the sanctions and penalties of law, it cannot be considered a wholesome and beneficial institution. It can offer no reliable security whatever to its subjects for the protection of their persons and property the preservation of their rights and privileges. The peace of citizenship would be in jeopardy every hour, and the bonds of union holding together the social compact would be snapped in twain.

Government, we repeat, to advance the weal and prosperity of its citizens must offer reliable guarantee that their person and property rights shall be shielded from the volition of the dissolute and vicious. But how is this guarantee to be given, but in the enactment and execution of penal laws? Its throne of authority must be girt about with terror. All the sanctions and penalties of law must be strictly observed and rigidly executed. Government, we are taught to believe, is the ordinance of God." Let every soul be subject to the higher powers. For there is no power but of God; the powers that were ordained of God; whosoever, therefore, resisteth the powers, resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resisteth shall receive to themselves damnation." We feel therefore, no hesitation in the declaration that, if there were no rulers and ministers of justice in authority in the land; if there were no tribunals of terror, before which to arraign convicts, and condemn the guilty, equal liberty would very soon be transformed into iron despotism, the rights and privileges of citizenship be down trodden and despised, and the most cherished hopes of society be swept away, as with the besom of destruction.

A government supposes rulers in authority and laws with sanctions and penalties. Its manifest design, according to the will of God, is to protect the virtuous and punish the vicious, and in this way advance the social prosperity of men. There is a divine government. God is the Moral Governor over all the intelligent and responsible creatures of his universe, "The kingdom is the Lord's and he is the Governor among the nations." The Lord hath prepared his throne in the heavens and his Kingdom ruleth over all." God is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords. But God is the lawgiver, as well as the Moral Governor over all his rational creatures. Isaiah declares, "The Lord is our king." St. James says, "He is able to save and to destroy." "He shall judge the world in righteousness and the people with his truth."

Now the intention of the divine government is to secure in all the provinces of his widely extended domain, the worship and love and service of Jehovah God, and the temporal and spiritual well-being of all his intelligent and accountable creatures. Is it not manifest, from analogy, that there must be in the divine government as in the human, not only the promulgation of laws, for the observance of moral agents, but also the enactment of sanctions and penalties? Hence when God made the first pair, and located them in Eden, he made them under law, and accountable to him. He not only gave them a law for their strict observance, as test of obedience, but he guarded its majesty and authority, by a corresponding penalty. As the civil government commands and requires all its subjects to be loyal and obedient, "rendering unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsars"; so the divine government commands and requires all its natural subjects to be loyal and obedient, "rendering unto God the things that are God's." As civil government is pledged by a fixed penal code, and the appointment of officers to punish all offenders proportionably to the demerit of their crimes, so, the divine government pledges by the institution of fixed penalty, to punish all transgressors of moral law, in whatever quarter of the dominion of God, they may be found. This striking difference, however, is discoverable between the operations of civil and divine governments. In the civil government punishment closely follows upon the heels of transgression. But in the divine government, though sentence against evil has been past in the High Court of heaven, that sentence is not speedily executed, in consequence of the riches of God's goodness, and forbearance and longsuffering. This delay of punishment is, however, no argument against the certainty of its execution. The hour is rapidly approaching when sentence shall be executed, to the overwhelming consternation of the enemies of the cross.

The punishment which is to be visited upon the wicked in the administration of the divine government, is not, as some have maintained, confined only to the present term of probation. How unreasonable and unscriptural is the bond system of diabolical invention, which disrobes the authority of God of its proper terror; which would fain make the world believe because God is merciful, he is all mercy, and because Jesus by the grace of God tasted death for every man, all men will eventually be saved, irrespective of moral character, which denounces the doctrine of a hell of future and everlasting torment as a chimera of its fancy, a figment of the imagination.

Now, it is a fact, patent and undeniable, that sinners are not punished in this life, proportionate to the magnitude of their sins against the moral government of God. As a general rule they receive their good things in this world, while Christians receive their evil things. The pious David seemed to be greatly perplexed in his mind, and almost overthrown in his faith when he contemplates the unmerited prosperity of the wicked (Psalm 73). Do objectors argue, that remorse of conscience is the only punishment which God inflicts upon transgressors, and that such punishment is confined to the present life. Let the conscience in the language of scripture become "seared as with a hot iron"; as it most surely shall be, by the frequent repetition of sin, and where we ask will be the punitive force of remorse. What moral sensibility has a seared and hardened conscience? The highwayman, who for years has lived upon the spoils of human butchery, whose hand is red—stained with human gore—sheds the blood of his fellowman with as little compunctions of conscience, as he spills water on the ground. There is no more feeling and sensibility in his conscience than there is in the nether millstone. It is perfectly indurated, utterly pulseless and dead, to all sense of pain and forebodings of the judgment and of future accountability. Where, we inquire, is the punishment of remorse? Is it not equivalent to no punishment at all? But is it maintained again that corporal afflictions, overpowering calamities, and heart-rending bereavements, constitute the penalty of transgression, to be visited upon the ungodly and wicked in this world? Who does not know that the righteous as well as the wicked are subjects of those afflictions and bereavements. Read the history of Job that "perfect and upright man," and you must be impressed with the truth of this observation. God in his inscrutable providence, many times allows the righteous to be subjects of deeper sufferings and more frequent losses and trials than the enemies of his government, who glory in their shame. We cannot then reasonably regard the afflictions, bereavements and trials of time, which may be visited upon the wicked, as judicially punitive, so as to exclude the necessity belonging to a mixed state of probation and are as fully realized by the good as by the evil. What then is the penalty of which the scriptures speak? To the law and the testimony. "The wages of sin is death." "The soul that sinneth it shall die."

The death here spoken of is not merely temporal, but spiritual, and eternal. That the death penalty of the Bible means something more interesting and important than the bare separation of the soul from the body, in the hour of dissolving nature, is made manifest from the whole analogy of faith. "The Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance upon them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." 2 Thess 1:7, 8, 9.

Again it is declared, "God shall rain upon the wicked, snares, fire and brimstone and an horrible tempest; this shall be the portion of their cup. Psalm (11:6). Oh, what a portion! Who shall deny that there is the sorest and most afflictive kind of punishment involved in these snares, and the horrible tempest of fire and brimstone. Says the Psalmist, "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God."

Eternal death, therefore, involving in its experience everlasting separation from God, and eternal endurance of suffering in hell, is the fixed and unalterable penalty of transgression. This with emphasis is the "terror of the Lord" which flashes from the pages of inspired revelation. How impressive and awful is the language of the Savior, "The hour is coming when all in the graves," etc. What does the resurrection of damnation mean? Does it not mean this, if it means anything plain and intelligible, that there is going to be a marked difference between the conditions of the righteous, and the ungodly in the resurrection; and that the wicked will be raised by the power of God to realize that punishment which their sins shall have justly merited? The phrase, "terror of the Lord," may be used by the Apostle to signify the threatenings of punishment that are denounced by the word of the Lord against all evil doers. The scriptures of the Old Testament and New Testament abound in these judicial and punitive threatenings; and marked and multiplied are the examples of the suffering of punishment, in consequence of repeated rebellion and disobedience. As the threatenings against sin are terrible, and as the threatenings are uttered by the mouth of the Lord, and recorded in his word, so the meaning of the terror of the Lord is sufficiently plain and obvious. Was not the terror of the Lord displayed in the direful plagues which were visited upon idolatrous Egypt in the olden time? Was not the terror of the Lord revealed when the heavens poured down floods of fire and brimstone upon the devoted cities of the plain? Oh, how awful did this terror gleam from the uplifted sword of the destroying angel that smote in one night in the camp of the Assyrians 185,000 of the enemies of Israel. In the case of the chosen but singularly idolatrous Hebrew people, we know that the heaviest punishment was denounced, in the overthrow and destruction of their civil and Ecclesiastical polity. Where now is their proud and glorious temple? Where now are their altars and altar fires? Where now is the line of their illustrious priests? Where now is their once noted and far-famed Theocracy?

Alas for Israel; they have been peeled and scattered, and they are to this day, a byword and a proverb of reproach among all nations. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God." "For God is the God of gods, Lord of lords, a great God, mighty and terrible, which regardeth not persons, neither taketh rewards." "The Lord hath his way in the whirlwind and in the storm; and the clouds are the dust of his feet." "The mountains quake; the hills melt and the earth is burned up at his presence; yea, the world and all that dwell therein." Who can stand before his indignation? "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ," etc. And could the Apostle present a more weighty and convincing argument to induce the impenitent and ungodly to turn to Christ and obey his Gospel, than the judgment to come, with its everlasting rewards and punishments? It is a grave and ruinous mistake big with unutterable woe, to suppose that because God is merciful, therefore, he is all mercy. A God all mercy is a God unjust. Is not justice as properly an attribute of God as mercy? Is not justice inseparably interwoven into the righteous administration of the divine government?

Is not the Almighty obliged from the very holiness of character to punish sin wherever found among angels or men? "Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men." The ministry of the Gospel is emphatically the ministry of reconciliation. "Now then we are Ambassadors," etc. But the ministry of reconciliation is the ministry of persuasion. We persuade men. All men are moral agents, and are therefore, free to embrace or reject the great salvation of the Gospel. Heaven and hell, life and death, happiness and misery are set before us, in the ministrations of the gospel, as commanding motives to induce us to "cease to do evil and learn to do well." But, at last the decision is to be made by ourselves, of our own free will and accord, in the untrammelled volition of the will. Milton represents the Almighty as saying—

"He had of me all he could have;
I made him just and right. Sufficient to have stood
Though free to fall."

"Such I created all the ethereal powers,
And spirits, both them who stood, and them who failed,
Freely they stood who stood, and fell who fell."

Man is a rational and responsible being. He is possessed of reason and judgment, and will and affections. The reason is to be enlightened, and the judgment is to be informed, by the lucid and faithful exposition of the doctrines and precepts of the Christian religion. The will is to be swayed to the act of choice, by the weight and influence of proper arguments and motives. Now the motives which in the preaching of the gospel are presented to the intelligent mind to induce and move it to choose the service of Christ, and to flee the wrath to come are as high as heaven, deep as hell, and vast as the immortality of the soul. If upon the earnest, and zealous and repeated presentation of them, from the pulpit Sabbath after Sabbath, they fail to induce any of you to prefer the service of Christ to the pleasures of sin, then remember your external destiny is fixed by the deliberate choice of your free will, and there shall be none to blame but yourself in the whole universe of God. The gospel uses no coercive measures. For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual." We would not if we could compel you against the deliberate choice of your will, to become the loving and ardent disciples of Christ. It is the duty and pleasure of the pulpit to persuade men to be religious. We would address to the judgment every forcible argument to convince of the reality and power and happiness of religion; we would appeal in all earnestness and solemnity to the hopes and fears of the soul, that cannot be bounded by the horizon of time; the visible and temporal. We would exhibit religion to your contemplation in the beauty and loveliness of its divine attire, in the excellence and blessedness of its felt consolations; we would direct your thoughts to the solemnities of the dying hour, when solitary and alone, you must pass through the valley of the shadow of death. We would unveil the great white throne before which you shall stand in naked moral character, to be tried by the righteous Judge for the deeds done in the body. We would bear you to the edge of the lake, storm swept and burning with fire and brimstone, and let the wailing of the lost fall in terrific peals upon your ears, as they curse God and curse the resurrection morn, and strive to die but cannot die; we would unfold to the vision of your intelligence the glorious city of God; the new Jerusalem with its gold-paved streets and gates of massive pearl; with its palaces and thrones and crowns and palms of victory; where "happier bowers than Eden bloom nor sin nor sorrow known." Reason urges you to become religious, by the exquisite fitness and adaptation of Christianity to your immortal longings, desires and aspirations. Conscience lifts her warning voice, and that voice is but the inward echo, responsive to the entreaties of God's Holy Spirit, as he strives with you to bring you in penitence and faith to the cross of Christ. "Knowing therefore the terribleness of the Lord's displeasure, we persuade men." (McKnight on the Epistles.)

It is evident that the word therefore connects the language of our text with what goes before in the context, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."

BUT GOD.

GEORGE B. KULP.

QUR sufficiency is of God." That fills my soul with gladness. I laugh out loud as I realize it. But one never sees this until he first sees his own insufficiency; never sees the capacity of God till he sees his own capacity; must realize his own weakness before he will take hold of God's strength. No wonder the English dramatist said, "What fools we mortals be." God places himself at our disposal and we ignore his bounty, and strive to meet his thought in our way and strength.

At the family altar this morning the lesson was from the Epistle to the Philippians; a letter written in prison, and yet all through it there is discerned an effort to help and bless others. This man in jail comforting others with his letter cries out, "I can do all things through Christ strengthening me." To get a good idea of God's sufficiency it is a good plan to sit down and take an inventory of stock, look one's self squarely in the eyes, see what a mistake we have made of it, get fairly disgusted with one's own selfishness—for all selfishness is sin—then turn to the Word and learn there that all this time God has just been waiting to get a chance to bless us, impart himself to us, and make us what he knows we may be, and ought to be, for his glory.

Dr. Gossip, of Edinburgh, has lately been a wonderful help to me, personally, under God, by his wonderful discourses on the willingness of God to reveal himself, give himself unto us, and yet all the time it was there in the Book, "If God spared not his own son but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things." And those wonderful soul-inspiring words of Jesus, "If ye being evil know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father in heaven give good things to them that ask him." O, I have been so blessed after seeing—in deep humiliation before God, lying low at his feet and letting him talk by his Holy Spirit—my own unworthiness, my utter worthlessness without him, and then to have him tell me that he wanted to be all to me; that he wanted to be my strength; that his life was to be my life. I grow weary; he never did. I am powerless; he was the Omnipotent One. The "I Am" of Abraham's day was the same yesterday, today and forever, and it is for me to trust and draw largely on him. He is rich towards all them that called on him.

Dependence on him alone means victory to the trusting soul. Get away from self; realize that he alone can bless, that in him alone is our strength; that we go forth yoked up with Omnipotence. The battle is not ours; it is ours only to do our part and leave results to him.

"What though thou rulest not,
Yet heaven and earth and hell
Proclaim, God sitteth on the throne,
And doeth all things well."

Are you weak? Are you conscious of your deficiencies? Have you made lamentable failures? You misused your opportunities; others are more capable than you, and you know this is all true? But God! Count him in, not out, and do not let the devil do it either. Fix your eyes on him. When an ancient king of Israel went out to battle he first set the pharisees in their place. He knew God was going to give victory, for he had promised it. You, beloved, are foreordained to be victorious. You were not born for defeat.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER VII. THE CHANGING TIDE.

IDA Benson, whom we introduced to our readers in the last chapter, was a most remarkable girl. Her father and mother were both of the best, most cultured and substantial families of the old South. She was tall, graceful, and extremely beautiful. She had large brilliant eyes, full of intelligence and kindness. Her lips, red with health, had no need of a lip stick. She had auburn hair, under some lights it was brown, under others a golden glow seemed to rest upon her long, beautiful locks. While she was modest, yet she had along with the fine old culture of the south and the added influence of an excellent education in the east, the independence and courage so noticeable among the aggressive western people. For physical beauty, for graceful manner, for a wide range of intelligence she was a most remarkable combination.

She and Huston meeting frequently at her uncle's, and Huston calling often at her home became at once mutual friends. They often rode out on the plains together. She was a fine horseback rider, and Huston was electrified with her beauty and charming intelligence.

A few days before she left for school in the east it was necessary for Huston, with Tom Goodson and Moreno, to leave for their central camp in the cow country. They would leave Fort Worth several days before she would leave for her finishing term in the college in the east. The afternoon before Huston's departure they took a long ride out on the plains. As they were galloping in home Huston laughingly said to Miss Benson, "If my social position and financial condition made me worthy I would ask you for a friendly bit of correspondence after you go back to your school. It would certainly be refreshing to a cow puncher on the far away plains to get an occasional message from so charming a girl." She blushed a little, and said, "Mr. Huston, I wish you to remember that there are some women in the world that are not looking for gentlemen of social position and wealth, but for men of heart and brains. There are some women yet in the world who cannot love a man's position or property, they love the man."

Huston rode quietly for a few minutes and then said, "That is a wonderfully interesting speech, and encouraging. I can make no claim to high social position, but I can make a claim to excellent parentage, and if I may say so I have faith in my ability to make a comfortable living. I know I can be a man of principle, character and conduct worthy of the confidence of my friends." To which she replied, "We have been acquainted only a few days but from what I have heard about you from my uncle and aunt, and my mother, and others who have known you much longer than I have, I do not hesitate to believe most sincerely in the high quality of your character."

A thrill shot through Huston like a dart. They galloped along, talked and laughed until they rode up to her mother's gate. He assisted her from her saddle and said, "I will ride early in the morning and will not have a chance of seeing you again until you finish your course in college and come home again next summer. May I dare hope for an occasional letter?" She said, "Should a letter be addressed to you in Ft. Worth, or some postoffice out on the plains?" Huston gave her the name of his postoffice far out in the cow country, they shook hands, looking each other in the eye, with reddening cheeks, wheeled and separated.

The next morning long before sun-up Huston, Tom Goodson, and Moreno were galloping away toward the bunk house of the great ranch. All day long they went forward on their tough Spanish steeds, with a few minutes for lunch. Coming into the grove of trees at sun down, where they had planned to camp for the night, the horses were well fed, watered at the clean pool, rubbed down nicely, the men had ample provisions in their rolls, they ate heartily, chatted, rolled up in their blankets, and directly Tom Goodson and the Mexican were sleeping out loud. But Huston was busy thinking. He reminded himself how foolish he had been about Annie Gray. He could remember now that she had always treated him as if he were her inferior. It was the rarest thing when she was in any group of company that they were not frequently reminded that she was the daughter of Judge Gray. That she assumed on any occasion to correct him and always to act as though it was a part of condescension on her part, the daughter of a Judge, to accept as her sweetheart and future husband an orphan boy, without family or fortune, from the country.

Now in direct contrast to this, Miss Ida Benson, who was of two distinguished old southern families, who had traveled all over the south, had the advantage of the progressive education in an eastern college and who had spent a long vacation traveling with her father and mother in the great cities of Europe, had from their first meeting treated him in every way as her equal, and sometime seemed to look up to him for suggestion and protection as if he was in some things her superior. Annie Gray had been born, reared and educated in the one little town, she had not traveled to any extent in her own state, much less the great nation. She had never been abroad and yet she had a way of assuming to be the intellectual and social leader of her town and community. As for beauty Annie had no real beauty. She did have a finely shaped head and an intelligent face, and was indeed by no means an ordinary woman. But for real culture, for breadth of view, for wide knowledge of countries and peoples, books and things she did not at all compare with Miss Benson.

Thoughts of this character entertained Huston late into the night. Moreover, he found that Miss Benson had been soundly converted to Christ when quite young and notwithstanding the circles in which she moved she preserved her Christian faith, and seemed all aglow with the thought of a life consecrated to the service of her Savior and her fellow beings.

Before Huston composed himself to sleep he admitted to himself the folly of giving up the faith of the divine Master, and going into rebellion against Christ because his sweetheart had treated him rough and married another man. A tear came into his eye, and he breathed a prayer and smiled to himself in the night as he realized he did not want Annie Gray. But if he could win the heart of Ida Benson he believed he would possess one of the most beautiful, intelligent, and remarkable women he had ever met.

The trio of cow punchers arose early in the morning, fed their horses, had their breakfast, and galloped away toward the principal camp. They rode in sometime before sun-down, and were warmly greeted by the cow punchers of the camp. Bye and bye the campers noticed quite a group of cow boys coming riding around a spring wagon, and when it drew up they found Bill Johnson, a famous old cow puncher, lying on a pallet of straw in the bottom of the wagon. A vicious steer had rushed upon his horse, overthrown him, and evidently broken

Johnson's back, besides stabbing him in several places with his broken bones. He was so paralyzed that he was not suffering. They hurriedly arranged for him the most comfortable bunk possible and sent one of the fastest riders to a little village twenty miles away for a doctor. The cooks and keepers of the camp with a dozen cow boys gathered around the sufferer with intense sympathy. His face was a picture of despair as he said, "Well folks, its no use sending for a doctor for me. My time has come, and I am in bad shape to meet it. I was an innocent sort of greenhorn boy, down in the hills of old Tennessee. And of course as a boy would do I falls in love with a girl. And she was a pretty creature, and I loved her like mad. And we was engaged to be married. We was together every Sunday and often through the week. But I was poor, and a walker, and along comes a feller with a hoss and buggy, and that was the end of me. It was't so bad that she threw me overboard, but the way she did it. I had a good deal of self-respect, my family was good, plain people, it did look like she might have treated me decent, but she treated me like a dog. She seemed to enjoy adding insult to injury. I couldn't stand it, I wanted to fight. Then I changed my mind, got drunk, fired off my pistol, and came west. Here I roamed in the wilds for many years, and tried awful hard to forget my Sally gal, but it seemed impossible, and none of you fellers will ever know how this old cow puncher has dreamed and grieved and suffered. But now the worst of it all is when the girl went back on me I foolishly gave up my religion, and now I am dying and not ready."

The cow boys and cooks had all gathered close about his couch. Huston was standing just at the foot of the couch and while he was talking he was looking Huston in the face. He paused for some time, then rallying himself he said, "Huston, can I ask you a question?" "You certainly can," replied Huston. "Well, it's this. Do you believe in Jesus Christ? Do you believe if a poor sinner will come to him with confession and faith he will forgive him?"

A dead silence fell on the place, and every one turned and fixed his eyes on Huston.

The Place.

Hebrews 4:14-16.

There is a place where thou canst touch the eyes
Of blinded men to instant, perfect sight;
There is a place where thou canst say,
"Arise!"
To dying captives, bound in chains of night;
There is a place where thou canst reach the store
Of hoarded gold and free it for the Lord;
There is a place—upon some distant shore—
Where thou canst send the worker or the Word.
There is a place where Heaven's resistless power
Responsive moves to thine insistent plea;
There is a place—a silent, trusting hour—
Where God Himself descends and fights for thee.
Where is that blessed place—dost thou ask "Where?"

O, Soul, it is the secret place of prayer.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

CENTERVIEW, KANSAS.

Just closed a meeting at Centerview, Kansas, and while it was not up to our expectation, yet we feel that a great good was done. We were in the midst of the blizzard that swept the middle west, and for five nights of the meeting the church was closed. Then on the last Sunday at the morning service the funeral service of one of the leading members of the church was held, and of course these things all hinder a revival. The past year was the best year of our ministry. We held meetings in the Methodist churches from Tennessee to Washington and were only permitted to be in our own home nine days in ten months, so you can see that we are kept busy.

I have just been reading the article of Rev. Andrew Johnson "Is evangelism in vain?" and I agree with him in most of the article, especially where he refers to the evangelist as being his worst enemy. I am persuaded to believe that more evangelists would be working today only that they become too much concerned about money matters early in the meetings and keep money in the "fore ground" instead of the background.

We have no reason to complain of the treatment rendered us by pastors in the various churches and we find that where a real revival of "Old Time Salvation" has taken place, that the money will take care of itself.

Another serious mistake that is made by many evangelists is, that the time of real revivals is past. I do not agree with them in this statement, as we find every place we go, a hungry bunch of church members in our Methodist churches that are anxious to have the truth preached to them and will stop here to say that they will stand stronger preaching than some of our Holiness churches. We do not have to compromise with the world in any way to preach the truth and when the time comes that it will be necessary to compromise with the worldly membership of the churches, then we will have to hunt for new fields as I have no use for a man that will compromise with sin in any form.

I am of the opinion that most evangelists and pastors are too "slip shod" in getting the penitents through to real victory at the altar. Most like to "catch" the fish, but few like to "string" them. Recently we were in a meeting where one of our Nationally known evangelists was conducting a meeting when one of the converts came to the altar to be sanctified. The evangelist, after two or three minutes came up to the man and attempted to pull him to his feet, telling him that he was all right. Not many get sanctified that easy. In my own case after weeks of consecrating, one day I said the last eternal YES to God, the fire from heaven fell and no one had to tell me that "The Old Man Died." I was there and knew when the work was done. That has been fourteen years ago and the Fire still burns. I think it a good resolve for this year, that we all resolve that we will not be seeking "numbers" this year, but that we will see how many penitents that come to our altars that we will stay with until they really get through. We will not have to tell them they are saved when they have really gone through and paid the price. Not many will pay the price. I pray that God will make us more determined this year than ever before to help souls to really pay the price and go through with God.

J. L. Carothers and Wife.

LOUISVILLE, TENNESSEE.

I am constrained by many reasons to send this communication if perchance you find it worthy of publication. I well remember many years ago when for the first time the full gospel was declared unto us, what a state of agitation was aroused in our community and the resistance thereto upon the part of our local churches through their leadership. As the storms of opposition beat upon the heads and hearts of those who by faith attained the blessing of entire sanctification it was then that the Herald came to strengthen, encourage and comfort the bewildered and unsheltered followers of Christ. So it seems to have been a messenger sent of the Lord to supply a lack not to be found in the churches as a rule where the doctrine of scriptural holiness was not taught. The significance of the work the Herald has done unto the flocks of Christ is only known by the great Shepherd and will be in due time revealed. Therefore I am constrained to believe that in like manner the same service is being rendered in hundreds of communities as was and still is rendered in our section and that trembling souls tried and tempted by fiery opposition to their faith are receiving comfort and support from its pages.

Our camp or tabernacle at Louisville, Tennessee, should, if for no other cause, be famous because of the godly and distinguished evangelists, workers and singers who for many years have from time to time labored there. Memory recalls among the number Charles Royster, Ferguson, Niles, Pickett, Johnson, Carradine, Yates, Morrison, Kersey, Adams, LaGrone, Ruth, Cluck, and perhaps this only includes half the number that comes to memory. Being a comparatively moderate community and death having taken many to glory, others moving to other sections has kept the work reduced to a slow growth and yet no year has passed without a gathering together for the annual refreshment from the presence of the Lord.

Perhaps the greatest surprise and shock that we who enter the experience of holiness secondarily to initial salvation is to be found in the attitude of the churches or believers in several who profess faith in Christ. But this has been the history of the advance of truth in all its past experiences on faith. The truth's enemies are to be found in its own household mostly and in its most deadly effects. Thus it is that believers in entire sanctification find their hardest conflict in the seat of authority as regards the visible church of Christ. A house, a church, a kingdom divided against itself cannot stand, and the divided state of modern representatives of the truth is the one great hindering cause blocking the advancement of the Church of Christ. The truth cannot be compromised and all who try to do so merely compromise themselves to their hurt and it is no use to try to make an impossible compromise as far as truth is concerned. There is only one way, only one divine way, that the world was to know that Christ was sent of the father and that was by their being sanctified through the truth and made perfect in one in a unity like unto the unity of the Father and the Son. There is no scriptural unity or peace except on the basis of holiness for it is first "pure then peaceable."

ORTING, WASHINGTON.

Began our meeting in M. E. Church, Dec. 31st. with four hour watch night service. Continued for two weeks. Pastor preaching assisted by Sergeant and Mrs. Smith of Camp Lewis as cornetist and song leader and soloist. They are great help to any pastor. They are very fine workers with the children and young people. Closing Sunday morning about twenty children made their way to the altar followed by their Sunday school teachers in prayer praying with them. It was a beautiful sight. The Church has been wonderfully quickened. Quite a number of adults definitely blessed until we have now a fine witnessing Church. The atmosphere is splendid. We praise him. Teaching and preaching on holiness. Old-time Methodist graciously received. We expect such seed to bear a harvest.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

The revival services conducted by the Second Primitive Methodist Church of Youngstown, Ohio, beginning Dec. 2nd and closing Dec. 16th with Rev. O. H. Callis of Wilmore, Kentucky, as the evangelist, were a sweeping victory.

The church membership say that it was one of the best, if not the best, series of evangelistic services that the church has had thus far in its history. Rev. Callis from the very first service emphasized the fundamentals of Christian faith and his sermons on restitution, reconciliation were presented in such a clear and forcible manner that the entire church membership was helped and many sought clearer experiences.

There were 26 definite cases of salvation, the majority testifying to the experience of a clean heart. Rev. Callis stressed the sanctified life and his presentation of the Biblical and practical sides of the life was so clear and reasonable that some of the most strenuous opposers recognized the possibility of living the life and yielded themselves as living sacrifices. Many of the people say Rev. Callis's preaching was the best they have ever heard.

The work done in the services seems to be of a permanent nature and the work of salvation still goes on. It hardly seems possible that two weeks could work such a change as it has in the lives of some of those who have entered just recently into the experimental knowledge of a personal Saviour.

The special music for the services was in charge of the Church Chorister, R. A. Anderson, with Miss Lelah Underwood as soloist; the singing was spiritual and inspiring. Mrs. Paul Murray was at the piano and her unusually fine ability was a great asset to the services. God has blessed us and we praise him for his wonderful grace and power.

REPORT OF BROTHER LI, SUWON, KOREA.

Brother Li is happy to report that the blessing of God has been upon his ministry during the past month and that he has had many victories. Since the experience which he had last month he says that his heart is overflowing with joy and praise constantly, and that he is realizing blessed victories in his efforts for precious souls. Every morning he goes to the church at two or three o'clock and while communing with God receives a fresh anointing of the Spirit upon his soul which fits him for the day's service. Praise the Lord!

The church continues to grow more and more and Bro. Li likens it to a city set upon a hill which cannot be hid, the light of which shines out to many round about. This month there were eighteen souls who sought the Lord and some of them prayed through to a definite experience, so for these especially Bro. Li held sun rise prayer meetings this month. The fire of the Holy Spirit was present in these meetings and there were many beautiful fruits. One of the converts during these meetings was a young man who was brought up in the Christian faith and baptized when only a child but who had gone on committing sin. He had even been a teacher in a certain Sunday school. He thought it was folly to repent of one's sins and at the beginning of the special meeting joked with a friend of his about the people who were praying and confessing their sins. He and his friend agreed that they would never confess their sins. On the fourth morning, however, the Holy Spirit brought conviction to his heart and which he could not escape. He went to his work but was unable to work so got away from everybody and poured out his sins before the Lord. He got a pencil and paper and made a list of all his many transgressions and then began to make them right with God and man. He came to Bro. Li with the paper, rejoicing because God had forgiven him of all these sins. On the next morning he gave a bright testimony in the prayer meeting, and since that time he is rejoicing in the Lord and is filled with great joy. Praise his name!

In personal work Bro. Li has preached to about forty individuals, and he has again found that it is usually the poor and ignorant who are receptive to the truth but the rich and learned reject the Gospel message. Bro. Li thought of the Word of God, "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called, but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise."

One day Bro. Li received an invitation to visit a woman believer in a village about five miles away and hold a cottage meeting. She is a Christian of a Methodist church but Bro. Li accepted the invitation and was accompanied by about ten of the believers. God wonderfully blessed the service and the unsaved members of the family all sought the Lord. Praise his name! There were five seekers that night and they are all coming to the church.

God is blessing the church financially and this month they were able to buy an organ for which they had been praying. An offering of about ten yen was also taken to be sent to the flood sufferers in Ham Kyung province. Bro. Li says he believes God will bless this money and look upon it as he did the widow's mite.

The Sunday school is also growing in attendance and increasing in interest. In a special meeting Bro. Li talked to the children and was much gratified by the interest manifested. Please remember the children also in your prayers.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

A retrospective view of 1928 gives me something to rejoice over. God permitted me to labor in fourteen different revival campaigns and camps. While some of the battles were hard and the visible results were meager, yet I find in summing up that well up toward a thousand souls bowed at the altars as seekers in my campaigns of 1928. I rejoice and take courage as memory recalls to my mind many of the blessed scenes of real definite victories around the altars in which seekers were blessedly saved or gloriously sanctified, restitutions made, old grudges settled, and shouts of victory made the welkin ring.

God permitted me to labor with fine, level-headed, Spirit-filled pastors, camp committees, and laymen that stood by me in every way, and my life is much enriched by their fellowship. I also want to thank God, that through thousands of miles of travel, and labor in various climates, he has kept me in almost perfect physical health, and free from any accidents.

We are starting out the New Year with a fine revival in Everybody's Mission in Pittsburgh, Pa. Earnest seekers and happy finders at the altar every service so far.

We are looking forward to 1929 as a busy year if Jesus tarries, and we live and keep our health. We cannot preach the gospel as big as many of our fellow preachers can, but we rejoice in the fact that we have just as big a gospel to preach as any preacher on earth. We are determined more than ever to work for clean, clear, definite results, rather than large numbers.

In deep humility, we bow our head and thank God for all he has been able to accomplish through our life and ministry, and as we face the tomorrows, feel confident that he who so graciously helped us in the past, will not forget us in the future. "I feel like traveling on."

W. W. Loveless.

NEW CASTLE, PENNSYLVANIA.

To all the saints:

Greeting. Under the leadership of the Holy Ghost we opened the battle at the First Free Methodist Church, Jan. 13. Have been here now for a week and can report victory. Bro. C. O. Whitford is pastor and we find him an excellent yoke-fellow. Crowds are good and are increasing. Quite a number have already prayed through to victory and the end is not even in sight. Tide is rising and we are looking for God to carry us through to real victory. Will probably remain for two more weeks.

Yours in Him,

H. P. Thomas.

BAY CITY, MICHIGAN.

We are enjoying the fourth year of our pastorate here in Bay City and the Lord is blessing and leading on to victory. From Oct. 21 until Nov. 4, we were blessed in having with us for our fall revival campaign. Prof. C. C. and Margaret Crammond, of Lansing, Michigan. Brother and Sister Crammond preached and sang the rugged gospel with no uncertain sound and as a result quite a number sought the Lord both for pardon and purity, and a nice class was received into church fellowship. The messages and methods of these godly workers are sane and wholesome and evidences of real revival power are increasing and instead of 'reaction' there is 'more action.' Truly the end is not yet.

A. W. Eastman, Pastor.

"VAPOR OF VAPOR, ALL IS VAPOR."

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE above is said to be the literal translation of the marvelous declaration by the wise man when he said, "Vanity of vanities, all is vanity!" It is said that this expression occurs 39 times in the book of Ecclesiastes; in fact, it is the theme of the book, the outburst of a soul that had tried to satisfy its longings for human happiness by drinking from all the fountains of pleasure this world can afford—to be disappointed and unsatisfied.

It were well worth our time to read the book of Ecclesiastes and note the lessons it has for us today. Some one has said that to those who study it, "They will find that it meets, and has been providentially designed to meet, the special tendencies of modern philosophical thought, and that the problems of life which it discusses are those with which our daily life brings us in contact. The questions of our day are those which vexed the minds of seekers and debaters in an age not unlike our own in its forms of culture, and while they recognize the binding force of its final solution of the problems, 'Fear God and keep his commandments,' on those who have not seen or have not accepted the light of a fuller revelation, they will rejoice in the brightness of that higher revelation of the mind of God, of which the Christian Church is the inheritor and the witness."

The fact that this wise man, supposed to be Solomon, tested everything under the sun to ascertain, if possible, the source of happiness, to find it empty and void of human satisfaction, should be a lesson for us not to depend upon things earthly and perishing for our happiness. It is fitly expressed in the language, "All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full." The preacher sought to secure happiness in wisdom but he gave vent to his disappointment by saying, "For in much wisdom is much grief; and he that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow."

He then sought to find the source of contentment in mirth and wine, house-building, vineyard planting, gardens and orchards, servants and maidens, great possessions of cattle, silver and gold, men singers and women singers, until he was great and increased more than all that were before him yet, "Behold, all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun."

Happy for the Preacher that he discovered the true source of contentment and happiness, that it was in remembering the Creator in the morning of life before the days of evil creep upon us, and we have not strength to resist the tests of the powers of darkness. As the wise man retrospects the devious paths he has travelled in search of pleasure and earthly good, he realizes the barrenness and emptiness of human sources and exclaims, "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man." Micah, writing in a similar strain, says, "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

We cannot recall all of the pursuits of the wise man as he sought for satisfaction by drinking from the streams of human pleasure, but we can remember the main thing—his exhortation in regard to our whole duty—to fear God, and keep his commandments. The human heart cannot find contentment in earthly things; it was created to fellowship with the Infinite, and in him alone, can true satisfaction be found. There is that within us that longs for happiness, and the world seeks it in pleasure, possessions and lustful indulgences but, like the Preacher of Ecclesiastes, they awake to bemoan the fact that "All is vanity and vexation of spirit."

How different is the experience of the psalmist, "For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness." Perfect satisfaction can only be found in him, the source of all happiness, in whom we live, and move, and have our being. May each reader of these lines learn the secret of abiding in the Lord at the beginning of the New Year, ever remembering that, "The utmost vanity is the wise man's conception of life unless we learn to put into life a quest, and from childhood to life's latest hour remember our Creator and live in his fear."

Excerpts From Dr. Clarence True Wilson's Address.

ROHIBITION will stay in America until the sun grows cold," said Dr. Clarence True Wilson, General Secretary of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals in addressing a gathering of seven hundred bishops, board members, editors, and district superintendents of that denomination at Evanston, Ill., January 2.

Dr. Wilson continued, "John Wesley was a prohibitionist 150 years ahead of his time. The American Methodists inherited his views that alcohol is not a food but a poison, that to manufacture it and to sell it is not a business but a crime. But our great founder said, 'I see no way of ending this evil but by making a full stop to the baleful habit of distilling.'

"The Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals is an evolution through those experiences that American Methodism has had in trying to make effective its convictions and its principles in every-day life. Our church took high ground on the subject first among the churches. It organized a committee for temperance and prohibition in every General Conference. In 1888 it made that committee a permanent committee on temperance and prohibition. In 1904 it organized it into the Temperance Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. When prohibition loomed large and the moral program of Methodism was to be presented to the world, it changed its name in 1916 to the Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals.

"Prohibition has come to stay 'til the sun grows cold and the stars are old and the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold. It went up against the foulest conspiracy that was ever perpetrated in this country this fall, when every agency for looseness and lewdness and lawlessness conspired and with their champion proposed to take this country and annihilate prohibition and all such moral movements. The people who thought the Methodist Episcopal Church and the other churches would stand still with their hands down and see that conspiracy against public morals put across must have thought the Church was dead.

"Politics we are not in; partisan politics we never touch. Church affiliations have nothing whatever to do with it. But a dry nation must have a dry executive and a dry Congress. A nation who is called of God to spread a new doctrine around the world cannot go back on that doctrine at its first chance. The people rose in their majesty and spoke in a solemn referendum and have put into the White House a total abstainer and prohibitionist and a law enforcement man.

"Do you think that Bishop James Cannon in Virginia, Bishop Mouzon of North Carolina, Bishop DuBose of Tennessee, Bishop James Moore of Texas, dragged the Church out of its legitimate sphere when they said to the enemy coming in like a flood: 'Thus far shalt thou come and no farther and here shall thy proud waves be stayed.' If you think the ministry is a successor of the priesthood to minister at altars, of course they did wrong, but if the Methodist minister is the successor of the prophets and apostles and evangelists who were sent out to make this a better world and who were called the militant hosts of the church, then you would expect them to act like modern prophets when morals are threatened, wouldn't you?

"If our body could stand still and see the bootleggers and the bill presenting looseness and lewdness to the youth, if we would see the theater disgrace civilization by nakedness on the stage and lewdness in suggestions, if we could see lewd pictures published by millions and sold to high school boys without a protest, the Church would say: 'That organization, that fighting organization that we maintain up there on the firing line is not worth anything. A conservative, an easy-going, cautious body cannot represent the militant spirit of the Methodist Episcopal Church.'

"Every once in a while somebody says the Constitution provides in this country for the separation of Church and State. Now the Constitution is my long suit. Next to the New Testament and the Methodist Discipline we go armed with the Constitution, and if you can find a better motto for the existence of our Board and a better program for it than this, let me have it: 'We exist to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure to ourselves the blessings of liberty and to our posterity.'

"No conflict so far. But how about the Bill of Rights which was designed to separate church from state and to say to the churches and to the peoples what they could do and what they could not do? Here is the article in the Bill of Rights: 'Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.' That is no restriction on any church or any individual. It is a restriction on Congress that they shall not prohibit the free exercise of the rights of every church under the flag or abridge the freedom of speech or the right of the press or the right of the people to assemble, which we are doing now, today, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. The exercise of free speech, free press, peaceable assemble, and the petition for the redress of grievances are the four things our Board is engaged in all the time. What is the matter with our friend the enemy? The battle is not yet over.

"There are several things we have to do and several things we ought to guard against doing. In the first place, as soon as the great victory of the fall was won, a lot of people who had not thought very thoroughly began to talk about changing the prohibition enforcement from the Treasury Department over to the Department of Justice. If there is anything that they have attempted to organize to death it is the prohibition unit. It has been taken down and built up four or five times already, and it is just now beginning to function. In the next place, we have one of the most efficient, pronounced, aggressive prohibition officers at the head of that Department we could ever have in any department, Dr. J. K. Doran, the son of the Methodist preacher.

"That Department has 10,000 cases now ready for trial and they are stalled in the Department of Justice. Just think of the proposition to take that live, aggressive and successful department and hand it all over to the Department that has stalled on our work.

"Let's nail that proposition down any time it comes up. We cannot afford another six months of changing. We want action.

But a more serious thing than that confronts us. Along that Canadian border they will spend $25,000,000 this year on booze to be brought across the border. There are three things you can do about that. You can let it alone and it will grow worse and worse, you can put gunboats on water and guns at every promontory; but we are proud of that 6,000 miles of peaceful border without a gun or a threat or an unneighborly feeling.

What we ought to do and what our Board has just petitioned for is to take up in the State Department of America with the State Department of Canada the proposition to give us a treaty against rum running between the borders or over the borders, just as we did three or four years ago in another instance. Cuba was a great embarrassment to us. Charles E. Hughes, the head of the Department of State, took up with Cuba the question, and an ironclad treaty was made, and today Cuba helps us enforce our laws in a neighborly fashion. There ought to be the same decent treatment of the United States on the part of our Canadian cousins that the Cubans gave us out of gratitude for what we had done for them.

"In the next place, we have a bill pending in Washington known as the Jones-Stalker Bill. Everybody knows that the Volstead Act was not perfect. It was the best law we could get through at the time, with so many of the Congressmen pulling on a cold collar. Nobody thought it was perfect. We knew that it was preposterous to call violating the Constitution of the country, trampling on American ideals, a mere misdemeanor. It ought to have been a felony in the first place, punishable not with $100 fine which a bootlegger can go out and make in one evening, but it ought to be a felony that you could punish with one to five years in the penitentiary and with $1,000 to $10,000 fine.

The suggestion came from the Assistant Attorney General of the United States, Mrs. Willebrandt, who never has said before any Methodist audience what she didn't have a perfect right to say and what ought not to have been said. The Stalker Bill is going through. Congress is with us. One of our wet Senators went around saying he could put all the dry Senators or Congressmen in a taxicab. Well, friends, they tried that and it wouldn't hold a fiftieth part of them, but we took those wets and put them in a taxicab and sent them for a long trip from which they may never return to public life!"

"NOT CONVENIENT."

Ephesians 5:4.

REV. JOSEPH H. SMITH.

WHAT is it to be "convenient"? What convenience is the apostle referring to here—convenient to whom and for what?

And what is it he speaks of as "not convenient"? We can best answer the last question first. At a glance, it would appear that he speaks of "foolish talking," or "jesting." And doubtless this has an emphasis. Paul was ever serious. He enjoined all men and women—even the young—to "be sober." He warns us against surfeiting and he himself practiced much fasting, and watching, and self-denying prayer. There can be no doubt that frivolity fritters fervor away from us.

Yet the verb here is plural, "which are not convenient." He has other things also in mind, and speaks of several. The sentence indeed starts with the disjunctive "But" at the beginning of the 3rd verse, and extends to the clause beginning with another disjunctive "but" at end of the 4th verse. But, we will observe, this all has to do with speaking. "Let it not be once named among you." And this is reinforced in verse 12 thus: "For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret." Hence this whole matter of "Inconvenience," for the present reflection, at least has to do with inconvenient speech. The talk of the tongue interfering with the testimony of our lives. See?! This simplifies it somewhat. It is not here presumed that the saints of God would practice fornication; but they might be betrayed into talking about it, especially if some fresh scandal appears in the paper, or was matter of 'neighborhood tattle.' They would not be guilty of Sodom's "uncleanness" or fleshly self-pollutions, but they might be drawn into curious or salacious conversation thereabout. Nor would they enter the covetous races of the speculating boomers, "get rich quick" money-makers; but they might be drawn into much talk about the markets, the prices, the "hard times," the big booms, the high cost of living, etc., and it is "naming" of these as well as the others which he said is "not convenient."

So too, as to "foolishness." It is hardly to be supposed that he would think of these "saints" soiling themselves with pictures or fashions that were filthy in themselves or in their suggestions, but because of the very prevalence of such filth on every side before the eye, and in their appeal to the baser passions, some might be incited to inordinate or excessive allusions to these things in their social conversations or even perhaps in the pulpit. But again we must be reminded, "It is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret." The fact is, "Evil communication corrupts good morals," and such conversation leaves a bad taste in the mouth.

But we must inquire and decide next: What or whose convenience the apostle has in mind in the matter? It must, in the very nature of the case, involve the convenience of a person. And the person ever in Paul's mind, and the person who has charge of us and of our affairs, and who has our life objectives in mind and hand is none other than the blessed Savior in the person of the Holy Ghost. Now of all our members none is meant or made of him to be so much of a vehicle of his pleasure and an agent of his purposes as is our mouth. And here he has served notice on us that the very naming of fornication, covetousness, uncleanness, or that foolish talking and jesting are not "convenient" with him; but rather the "giving of thanks," and has announced that it is a shame even to speak of those things that are done of them in secret. Our desire to please Christ and to grieve not the Holy Spirit will prompt us to guard our lips as hallowed, chosen models of purity, truth, and praise.

And not only so, but to our own exercises, functions and influences, such "talking" is not "convenient": "Not convenient" for prayer, and whatever indisposes us for prayer is even much more serious than what would indispose us for eating or sleeping or working. "Not convenient" for spiritual counsel or conversation. Should there be present a soul under conviction, or one needing light on the way of holiness or one whose sins needed to be reprov'd, our worldly or fleshly or frivolous conversation in their presence would seriously inconvenience our approach to them, and perhaps hinder their acceptance of such counsel or reproof from us.

Our influence, too, if in Public ministry is likely to be dignified or decimated by the character of the conversation in which our parishioners or the people have heard us engaged.

And before leaving the subject we should note that Paul is not supposing or implying a positive habit, but he is speaking of a single act. Hear him! "Let it not be once named among you as becometh saints." Eph. 5:3.

We must therefore set a guard upon our lips against the current foolish talking and jesting, as well as salacious and suggestive conversation, and the "fortunes," "wills," and "dollar" talk that sweep around social circles, even among church folks and which "politeness" seems to demand that we ourselves should have something to say on in response.

Happy the man or woman who has mastered the art of tactfully turning conversation into channels that are convenient to the Holy Spirit and to our own spiritual exercises. Then

"Down at your own fireside
With the evil tongue and the evil ear
For each is at war with mankind."

For

"It is better to fight for the good Than to rail at the evil."

When we are defeated it is our own fault. Because you have been defeated once do not lie down and spend your time lamenting defeat. God is still alive and the battle has just begun. The old Army of the Potomac, to which I belonged when a boy, was whipped again and again, but we kept on fighting and came to Appomattox, and peace came, and union came. I have been told by men of intelligence, real Southern men, that it is better as it is; a divided nation would have been a failure.

Fight on! All heaven is on the side of the man who is determined to go God's way, follow God's plan, do his will, with an eye for his glory. Joseph's brethren filled with envy, sold him down into Egypt, But God! Paul was in the lowest dungeon of the Marmatine prison, and went along the Appian Way to death, but God sees to it that he lives today and blesses the world with the words sent from the jail. Jesus went up Golgotha's rugged sides bearing his own cross, suffered thereon for six mortal hours, but God raised him from the dead and he lives today, alive forevermore. Peter was in prison, and after Easter they are going to behead him, but God, and he lives for years to bless the church, and his writings bless the World. No matter who you are, if you are his child you are to be victor here and an eternal victor hereafter. Praise the Lord! Amen!

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Boys and Girls:—

Only a short letter before going to the hospital to arrange for Dr. Morrison's journey tonight to Florida. We trust that we may make the journey all right and that he may soon be helped by the change of climate.

I am giving you a little story that I am sure you will enjoy.

Lovingly,

AUNT BETTIE.

The Lost Traveler.

It is related of a lost traveler that when he was near the point of perishing on the desert sands, he cast his eyes down and saw a small bag. Hoping to find water or dates, he quickly alighted from his camel, and eagerly seizing the bag tore it open. "God pity me!" he exclaimed, "it is only pearls!"

By nature all men are lost, wandering through the dreary, dangerous Desert of Sin. But there are fountains of Living Water, from which if they drink they will not perish.

One of the many Scripture passages representing man's lost condition is, "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way." "Gone astray!" Lost! But this glorious fact is also announced, that the good Shepherd came "to seek and to save that which was lost." Blessed intelligence indeed! But we must be willing to be saved on the good Shepherd's own conditions—to be led by Him out of the Desert of Sin.

His infinite concern for us is in a measure represented by the following incident:

A daughter wandered away from home and plunged into a life of sin and shame. But a loving mother traveled for many years all over the country, through dismal streets and dark alleys, in search of the lost one, sacrificing her all and life itself in the eager but fruitless search.

Thus Jesus forsook His all above, and sacrificed His life for the poor, lost traveler through the perilous wilderness of sin.

We are all either lost or saved travelers to the far-off country. To which class do you belong? Men need not be in hell to be lost. Millions are lost on earth. It is only a little time until a change of locality will take place. What you perhaps need most of all to realize is that you are lost. Until you do, you will evade the seeking Shepherd. Oh, begin to pray that God may show you your lost condition!

Many persons who are not Christians realize, however, in a degree, that they are lost. This ought to be sufficient to manifest some concern for their souls.

Just a little while before she died, a lady said: "If I had been as much interested in my soul as I was in the world, I might now be saved."

A young man with whom the Holy Spirit often strove, cried out, "The Spirit of God is leaving me, never to return! Oh, I am lost! forever lost!"

Dear lost soul, may you soon be able to say:

"Amazing grace! how sweet the sound That saved a wretch like me!

I once was lost, but now am found— Was blind, but now I see."

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? Come on, Ohio boys and girls; don't let the other states beat us. This is the first letter to The Herald and hope to see it in print. I am nine years old, and in the fourth grade at school. How many of you like to go to school? I do. My birthday is May 8. I live on a farm and like it here. My pets are two cats, a dog, and one calf. I hope Mr. W. B. is sick when this letter arrives. Will some of you children write to me. I like to get letters from people. I will try to answer all the letters I get. I must close now hoping to see this letter in print.

Caroline Moore,

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join your band of boys and girls. I am four feet, eight inches tall and weigh about seventy pounds. I am eleven years of age. I was born July 28. If anybody has my birthday please write to me. I attend the M. E. church and like to study the Bible. My Grandfather takes The Pentecostal Herald and I like to read page ten. If anybody can guess my middle name I will write to you every week. It begins with H and ends with D and has six letters. I am going to be a minister and have an air plane to ride to work in. Please print this letter for I want to surprise Mother and Dad.

Joe H. Schaefer,
Box 268, Racine, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Thanks Auntie for giving me permission to say hello once more. A longing came to me, as I gazed at the dying sun slowly sinking behind the great restless waves of a rolling sea, so an idea came for me to write the old "gang" again. I once thought my home state Arkansas had more than her share of beauty but as I see California it convinces me that Mother Nature did her part as she passed this way.

Yesterday we hurried into the machines and soon were speeding across the country, past beautiful homes: On either side were, groves of oranges, walnut, burdened with loads of sun-kist fruit; now and then we came to a point that offered us a grand view for many miles. The homes have a clean-shaven fresh green lawn arranged with gay blooming roses with many colors and different kinds of flowers. Think of such paradise! It was Christmas Eve on this occasion, the temperature twenty eight above freezing, sun so bright and warm, however many snow-capped peaks were visible in the distance at the time.

O yes, we saw a group of Hollywood movie stars doing some scenes that you Eastern cousins may see later on the screen.

The wheels of time are swiftly carrying us toward Eternity. Life seems only a dream at times—We should let the star of Hope point the way. In the splendor of the morning, in the dying glories of the evening, in the majesty of the mountains in the mystery of the sea, we find the mystical expression, "In the beginning is God."

Let us hope that civilization on its rapid onward march, will soon break the cross-barbed entanglements of ignorance and superstition, and standing on tiptoe with out stretched arms, to the East, looking to the beckoning horizon of Hope, and will receive the love-laden lips of the morning, that, "God is Love."

Let us thank Kipling, too, for those glorious lines, fit for the monument of a great soul:

"If I were hanged on the highest hill, I know whose love would follow me still;

If I were drowned in the deepest sea, I know whose tears would come down to me:

If I were damed in body and soul, I know whose prayers would make me whole.

Mother O'mine! Mother O'mine!"

All right California cousins, write a letter to Aunt Bettie and let her know what a bunch of boys and girls there is here.

Carthel Dold,
9706 Virginia Ave. Home Gardens,
California.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a North Dakota girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have dark brown hair and blue eyes. I was twenty-eight years old Sept. 23. Who is my twin? I belong to the Evangelist Church. Mother takes The Herald and it sure is a wonderful paper with so much good reading in it. I am making a "Friendship quilt" and would like to receive blocks for it from anyone anywhere. The material used for the blocks are unbleached sheeting, size of blocks 10 by 10 inches square, with the sender's name and address embroidered in the middle of the block in outline stitch with red floss. Dear Cousins, please pray for me that God may heal me of my rheumatism. I hope to see this letter in print. Will some of you cousins write to me? I will try and answer all letters received. May God bless Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Sarah E. Smalley,
Rt. 1, Corinth, North Dakota.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I again join your happy band of boys and girls. Do any of you cousins remember me? Well I am the same North Dakota girl that wrote on page ten over a year ago. I belong to the Church of Christ. Many thanks to Aunt Bettie for printing my other letter through The Herald I have found my twin. I love reading such wonderful papers as The Herald is. Who can answer these questions? How many chapters is the Bible divided into? What psalm consists of 176 verses? What 3 chapters of the Bible contain as many as 80 verses? What 2 chapters of the Bible are nearly alike? What is the middle verse of the Bible? What is the shortest verse in the Bible? What is the longest verse in the Bible? What are the 8 verses in the Bible each of which is connected with the verse succeeding it without punctuation marks of any kind whatever? What psalm contains 26 verses, each one of which ends with the words, "For his mercy endureth forever?" What is the longest chapter of the Bible? As this letter is getting rather long I will close and leave room for the rest of the cousins. I hope to see this letter in print. Dear cousins, pray for me to do whatever work that Jesus has for me to do. God bless you dear Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Albertha Mabel Smalley,
Route 1, Corinth North Dakota.

Dear Aunt Bettie and "Smiling" Cousins: How are you and the Cousins this fine day? It is cold but God made this day and why shouldn't it be just as fine as any other, cold or hot? I enjoy reading The Herald any day, be it cold or hot, cloudy or fair, and especially do I enjoy reading page ten. Of course there are many fine articles in The Herald but I do believe that the cousins' letters are the finest. Now don't all of you agree with me? There now, I knew some of you would. It fills my heart with joy when I read of young people accepting Christ as their Savior while in their youth, for "Those that seek me early shall find me," Prov. 8:17. Christ is the only one to whom we can look for sympathy. He will help us no matter what our trouble or trials may be, He is always near with a helping hand if we will only trust in him. I am a Senior in High School this year. I hope to graduate this spring, the last of May. Thus far it has been a rather trying year for me on account of the various social functions and other activities which the Senior class is expected to indulge in, but I just look to my Savior for strength and guidance. I want my life to count for Jesus. I have a desire and my heart longs to see men and women and young people saved through the blood of Jesus Christ. Although I have not made any definite plans, I am hoping that I may be able to enter Asbury College in September, 1929, to prepare myself that I may be a more efficient worker for Jesus. I have met a number of Asbury's fine students, it was under the ministry of two of her finest ministers that I found Jesus so precious to my soul. I'll tell you, you can surely tell an Asburian when you meet one of them, can't you, Aunt Bettie? I have often wondered why it was that you can tell one of Asbury's students from all the others, but when I began to study them I soon found the answer. I suppose it really must be that manly and womanly character that is built in each one that makes them all stand out from all the rest. I must be going before it gets too late, so all of you write me. I would like to hear from some one who is going to Asbury too.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come for the first time to join your happy band of boys and girls. I take The Herald and I love to read page ten. I have two sisters. One of my sisters wrote to The Herald and has corresponded with quite a few of the cousins. I am five feet, two inches tall, have dark brown hair (long) blue eyes and weigh about 128 pounds. I am twenty one years old. My birthday is December 14. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. Who can guess my first name? It begins with D and ends in a and has five letters in it. I go to Sunday School every Sunday. I belong to the Christian Church. I would like to correspond with some of the cousins. I will answer all letters I receive. I hope to see this in print.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Honk! Honk! Honk! I thought I would drive by and chat you awhile. May I? I am a farm boy, and I like farm life fine. We raise hogs, sheep and cattle. I prefer country life to the city, for the great out of doors air is good for us boys. I will leave my age for the cousins to guess. It is between eleven and sixteen. Also my middle name may prove a riddle. It begins with H and ends with y and contains seven letters. I go to school and like all my studies especially Maths. I'll give way to some one else.

FALLEN ASLEEP

GREEN.

On Saturday morning, Jan. 5, 1929, the Death Angel visited the home of Fred H. and Bertha Mae Green and took from them their darling babe.

Little Lola Louise was born, Aug. 26 1928 at Holcomb, Mo., and passed away at the age of 4 months, 10 days, at Clarkton, Mo. Death being due to Influenza.

Oh! what a short stay she had with us, but the Lord knoweth best. He doeth all things well.

How sad it is to give it up, but we know we shall meet it again up yonder where there is no more separation nor sorrow but where all is grace and joy and love for ever.

It won't be long until we shall see it and hold it again to our bosom.

Lola Louise was the only child, and is survived by her parents, her grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Ham, and her grandmother, Mrs. R. O. Green Waddell.

Funeral services were conducted at the Shumach M. E. Church, by the pastor, Rev. Wilmore. Singing was led by Mrs. Looney.

It was laid to rest in the Shumach cemetery.

Sleep on sweet babe,
And take thy rest,
In Jesus' arms,
Forever blest.

God be with you 'til we meet again.
Mother.

LINK.

On Jan. 5, 1929, at 4 o'clock, the bright spirit of Paul G. Link quietly passed from this earth into the life more perfect, and to hear the Saviour tenderly say, "Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

He was the son of Henry and Laura Link, of Hillsdale, being born Aug. 12, 1898, making him 30 years, 4 months and 24 days old.

At the age of twelve years he professed faith in Christ and joined the Baptist Church at Mt. Vernon, and in later years moved his membership to Hillsdale Baptist Church where he remained a true and faithful member until death. He was a member of the M. W. A., of Hillsdale and a true faithful member of his camp and will be greatly missed by his neighbor Woodmen.

Paul was a true, kind and obedient son; he was the life of his home, always cheerful and jolly, regardless of his suffering and affliction. Besides his father and mother he leaves four brothers and four sisters to mourn his going, Will Link, of Gold City, John Link, of Drake, Ky., Mrs. Ida Finn and Mrs. Emma Leake, of Franklin, Ky., George Link and Mrs. Nancy Chambers, of Nashville, Tenn., Jim Link, of New Mexico, and Miss Myrtle Link, who resides at the home with her parents; Robert Lee Link, Florence E. Link, and Charlie B. Link who preceded him to their eternal home.

The community was greatly shocked to hear of his passing away. He was one of the nicest young men of our neighborhood and he will be missed more than we can tell.

To his father, mother, brother and sisters we extend our sincerest sympathy in this sad hour and point them to the only One that can comfort them in a time like this.

We know it seems dark but somewhere the sun is shining.

Paul's chair is vacant in the home, His voice we hear no more,
But by the grace of God

You can meet him on that bright and shining shore.

Funeral services were held at the home on Sunday afternoon by Rev. R. H. Garrison, of Bowling Green, and burial in Green Lawn cemetery in Franklin, on Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Father and Mother.

SOWING AND REAPING.

Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap,

Whithersoever he goeth, his sins upon him leap;

No matter how he tries to cover up his track

Be not deceived—the sin comes leaping back.

However sure he feels fortified against results,

However he may resent Sin's terrible insults;

We never can eradicate Sin's un-gainly scars

No more than we can count God's heavenly stars.

We can never erase the sin stains on the heart,

Jesus can hurl away every evil intended dart;

He can repair the ruin, wrought upon others

Make us all, thru' Him, companionable brothers.

He can help us a blighted reputation to restore

God will forgive the errors, and upon us pour

Rich bounties of his grace—but Sin leaves a scar

So let the life be pure—it's beauty never mar.

Don't waste fields of Life in sowing Wild Oats,

Be numbered with the sheep, instead of the goats;

Tho' saved, you'll suffer much sorrow in time

So be sure you start right and stay on the line.

For God is not mocked—let no man be deceived,

According to what we've done, we'll be received;

Then give to the world the best, good and true

The best will surely come smiling back to you.

"A PANORAMA OF THE SPIRITUAL HARVEST FIELD."

Rev. J. N. Hampe.

After attending six camps and five conventions, I feel led to "Panorama the Field," with here and there an exception, as a green oasis in the picture.

1st. Dr. Radical has been called to diagnose the case, and after careless and prayerless investigation has prescribed a remedy for the "spiritually sick" patient, labeled, "When taken to be well shaken." A "loyal" Fundamental evangelist is chosen to "sit up" with the patient and administer the remedy prescribed by Dr. Radical—i. e.,—conduct a revival effort to put the "sick church" on its feet again, etc. The evangelist takes charge of the situation parallel with a case I heard of, of a man nurse without experience, that was employed to "sit up" all night with a sick man, and administer the remedy prescribed by the Doctor, which remedy was labeled, "when taken to be well shaken." So every time the nurse gave the remedy he would shake the sick man until he became unconscious, instead of shaking the flask that contained the remedy. The sick man would hardly regain consciousness before it would be time to give the remedy again, and in that way the patient, that still had some life, was kept unconscious nearly all of the time, and if the night had been long enough, would have died under that nurses' treatment.

Moral—When you employ a nurse for the sick, secure one that has had experience enough to "shake the remedy" instead of the dying patient.

The second act of the Panorama is a sick patient (church) "dead asleep" spiritually, with a "befogged brain" Modernist in the pulpit "sitting up" with the patient, prescribing

THE FLORIDA HOLINESS CAMP MEETING ORLANDO, FLORIDA.

February 28th to March 10th.

1. THE FLORIDA HOLINESS CAMP GROUNDS, believe in and stand for the Fundamental doctrines of original Methodism, which include the Virgin Birth, Deity, Miracles, Resurrection and Ascension of Jesus, the full and plenary Inspiration of the Scriptures, the Blood Atonement, the absolute necessity of Bible Repentance, Confession, Restitution, Regeneration, Justification, Adoption, Witness of the Spirit and Entire Sanctification as a definite second work of grace, properly so called, and contends for the Faith once delivered to the Saints.

2. BOARD OF TRUSTEES. Men of real piety with faith in and loyal to these vital doctrines of original Methodism so essential to the promotion of real revivals of religion and the spreading of Scriptural Holiness over these lands, holding to the doctrine of the Second Coming of Jesus to catch away His waiting Bride, have been chosen and put on the Board to insure that this Camp shall be held true to its Charter and original foundation.

3. THE PLACE OF MEETING. ORLANDO is one of the most beautiful cities in the entire State of Florida, easily accessible from any part of the State and all friends and lovers of holiness or heart hungry believers will find it right on their way into or out of the State and are cordially invited to come and spend this ten days with us. We ought to have friends from 40 different States this year. Location will be West Livestone Street at City Auditorium Park.

4. TIME OF MEETING. The Camp will open Thursday evening, February 28th, and close Sunday evening, March 10th. The weather will be just right, neither too hot or too cold but comfortable to enjoy the FEAST OF TABERNACLES with plenty of sunshine, citrus fruits along with the fruits of the Canaan Life and Experience.

5. OUR WORKERS. Every worker is a peer in his field. They cannot be surpassed in the Nation. They have walked through fiery furnaces and come out without the smell of fire upon them. Crossed swords with the arch fiend of hell on ten thousand battlefields and won many many thousands to the Lord Jesus Christ. Dr. H. C. Morrison, that prince of preachers, Editor of The Herald, lovable, tender, yet fiery and battle scarred, writer of books, challenger of Modernism of the day, will lift his voice in proclaiming the glorious doctrines of original Methodism. Dr. C. W. Ruth, of Indianapolis, author, unique, happy preacher of the Second Blessing, will interpret Holiness truth as a second work. Bishop W. F. Oldham, World Preacher and Missionary, Dr. C. P. Blackburn, of the Orlando District, Gospel singers of unusual reputation in the Holiness Movement and others mean the best to be had.

and giving no remedy whatever, saying, "if he sleeps he'll do well" so do not arouse or awaken him. Picture—Blind leading the blind.

The third view in the "drama" is a heap of "dry bones"—and as you scan them over you detect that the only thing to indicate that they ever were with anything that had life, is the label on them, i. e., Methodist, Lutheran, Presbyterian, etc., and a sprinkling of a few Nazarenes, Free Methodists, Wesleyan Methodists, and Pilgrim Holiness people. As you behold them with pity you are reminded of the "dummies" in the store windows—they never talk, testify, or pray, and then one remembers that the Prophet had a like vision regarding God's earthly people, Ezek. 37th chapter, and so dead were they, and dry, that when God asked the Prophet, "can these bones live"? And when Ezekiel looked at the bones he was afraid to say Yes, and when he looked at God he was afraid to say No, so he said, "O Lord God though knowest." Truth taught—Just like it took the "breath from God", to put life and action into the "dry bones" of Israel, equally so, is it true with the "dry bones" of the Church Age; and may God speedily breathe life into their dead souls. Amen!

When one thinks of what the Holiness Movement was thirty to thirty-five years ago, with sky-blue regeneration—overpowering baptisms with the Holy Ghost, and fire—overflowing the heart and life with the burning love of God, so that the holy flame would beam from the face—sparkle in the eye, and leap from the tongue in burning testimony—convincing, and convicting testimony, then we are reminded of the legend told of Adam, and one of his sons, after driven from Eden, going home from work—with faces wet with sweat—as they passed the Garden, the son said, "Father, is not that Garden nice and cool looking, and those apples, don't they make the saliva start?" "Yes, son, and that was all ours once, but your mother ate us out of house and home." Is it not a fact that compromise with the enemy, (the world) has robbed us of much, and some places, all, of the supernatural power of God we once had in the movement? Let us all, everywhere, return to the old time separation from the world, and have old-time power once more. Amen!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VIII.—Feb. 24, 1929.

Subject.—Christian Growth. John 1:40-42; Matt. 16:15-18. John 21:15-19; 2 Peter 3:18.

Golden Text.—But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, 2 Peter 3:18.

Introduction.—Dates are different in this lesson; although one might, in a measure, figure out the times when its different parts were either spoken or written—maybe both. Places are impossible.

Some one says that salvation is like riding a bicycle: One must keep going ahead, or fall off. This writer has found it true in his case. Neglect of the Bible and prayer tells on his running in a few hours.

The Golden Text says: "Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." It does not say: "Grow into;" that would be impossible. A fish may grow in a pool of water; but it cannot grow into it. God's grace does not grow—it is always boundless; but we grow in that grace from infancy to manhood, from spiritual meanness to spiritual strength.

The knowledge of Christ, the truth concerning Him, remains the same always: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today, and forever." It is both duty and privilege for us to gain more of that knowledge each passing day.

I am inclined to believe that this is a case of the "Dative of Instrument" used so frequently in the New Testament. If so, we may clear up the matter a bit by translating our Golden Text in accord therewith: "But grow by means of grace, and by means of the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." They furnish the possibility: the growth is ours.

It may be well to remember that growth is not volitional. No amount of effort, nor of fretting, can make me grow. It is ours to meet God's conditions; the growing will be as that of a flower—perfectly natural.

Arrested development is pitiable, in nature or in grace. A mother with a forty-year-old baby on hands needs help from Heaven. The little old one is a burden that grows no lighter. Paul must have had this in mind when he wrote in Eph. 4:14: "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." These "deceivers" have come abundantly during the passing centuries—especially during the last few decades. One may mention Mary Baker by Eddy, "Pastor" Russell, such as claim communion with the dead, and especially that gang known as modernists. It is sickening to see a pastor, who should be leading a militant host against sin and Satan, working his life out endeavoring to please and pacify a thousand feeding babies. If you have pity, time and money, ship him a car-load of toys—he has use for nothing better. Paul covers this ground manfully in Hebrews 5:12-14 and 6:1-3. In these verses we find a panacea against all backsliding. May be I should say the remedy is prophylactic. That word sounds big; but it means simply preventive.

Comments on the Lesson.

40. One of the two.—John is modest—"Andrew, Simon Peter's brother," was one of them; John the other.

41. He first findeth his own brother Simon.—John still hides himself. No doubt, he was with Andrew. We have found the Messias.—All the Jews were looking for Him, but failed to see him.

42. Brought him to Jesus.—We are not to suppose that Peter was an unsaved sinner. He was one of Jehovah's faithful followers. He must have been a disciple of John the Baptist. But the time had come for him to enter the new Dispensation and follow Jesus Christ. He must move to a higher class. Jona is a form of John. Cephas, like Peter, means a small stone.

15. Whom say ye that I am.—That is a momentous question, since one's salvation depends upon the answer he makes to it.

16. Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.—Peter was convinced of the Deity of our Lord. He seems to have answered for the group of apostles, not that Jesus Christ had selected him to be the first of the popes. Jesus intended no such thing; nor did Peter ever claim it. He was a sort of leader among his brethren, and made a good answer to the Master's question.

17. Simon Bar-jona.—Simon son of John. Flesh and blood.—Human wisdom had not made the wonderful revelation, "but my Father which is in heaven." "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghost." We can learn much by studying the Bible; but the knowledge of the Deity of our Lord and of the Fatherhood of God can come only through the direct revelation of the Spirit in our hearts crying "Abba Father." Unconverted persons may believe these truths, but cannot know them.

18. Thou art Peter.—A small stone. Upon this rock.—Jesus is playing upon two words in the Greek: Petros and petra. The latter word refers to himself, the great foundation rock upon which he is building his Church. Peter and the rest of us are but little stones built into the temple. No mere man, nor any human confession, can sustain the Church of God. Christ did not use the word for found, but the word for built. The Church had been founded upon himself for ages. Church here does not signify any one set or denomination, but the entire body of the saved of all ages, of our race. This Church shall never be destroyed. John 21:15-19. Space will not permit me to comment verse by verse on all this passage. I think Jesus intended to rebuke Simon Peter for some of his previous boasting, "More than these" is ambiguous, the best scholars being divided as to the Master's meaning. Some suppose that he meant to ask Peter if he loved him more than he loved his fishing tackle. Others contend that he referred to Peter's boasting, and wanted to know if he still thought he loved him more than the other disciples loved him. Take your choice. The force of the passage turns upon the word love. In his first two questions Jesus used a strong word for love, and Peter replied with a weak word. In the last question Jesus dropped to the weak word, and thereby "cut the grit" from under Peter. He realized that the Lord had read his heart; and, for that reason, was grieved. The Master also used two words for feed; one meaning to give them food, the other meaning to shepherd them.

The figurative language in the latter part of this passage, of course, refers to the fact that when Peter should grow old he would die on a cross. What strange words: "Signifying by what death he should glorify God." Well might he say: "Follow me." Yes, follow him to a cross, and die for him just as he had died for Simon Peter.

We have already discussed the Golden Text.

NOTICE

Evangelist J. L. Glascock closed the first meeting of his last Fall's Campaign September the ninth, and immediately after that he was called home by wire on account of his wife's having to undergo a serious operation for acute appendicitis. This necessitated his remaining at home till December two when he held another meeting December two to sixteen. At that time his wife was taken down with an attack of Influenza which required him to remain home till January twenty-five. Brother Glascock's wife has sufficiently recovered for him to take up his evangelistic work again, and he is now rearranging his dates for meetings. He has some vacant dates both for Spring and Summer meeting. Persons desiring to correspond with him relative to dates should address him 1350 Grace Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The "Anywhere" Evangelistic Workers (Incorporated) will hold their first week in February at the Headquarters, 2214 Hasper Ave., Los Angeles, California. All workers, members of the A. E. W. please send in your annual reports to Eric G. Bloomquett, 11257 Massachusetts Ave., Sawtelle, California, by the first of February.

THE RICH YOUNG RULER.

Rev. Edwin E. Hatfield.

Jesus, beholding him, loved him. First, the love of pity. Second, the love of complacency. Jesus looked down from the cross upon a lost world with the love of pity. He looks upon all men and loves them. He was pleased with what he saw. An army is a sequel to love. The Master saw in this young man the possibility of youth and he looked upon him with admiration. He was a Bible reader and a church goer.

There is a program in the Ten Commandments. A business without a system will fail. A church without a program will not do much for the Kingdom. We can have too much machinery, and also too little. Just enough, and this, baptized with love, will bring success. We, as a nation, have too many laws. Better junk many of them and hang up the Ten Commandments in our courts and homes. This young man had great ability. He was a money getter. He stood at the front of the business world and if he had obeyed Christ's teaching, he would have become a great church builder, a bishop no doubt, or a Stanley Jones. He was anxious to have the best. He comes hurriedly, also kneeling. We would naturally say that he was good enough. We would have taken him into our church membership and would have been pleased to have had him as an inlaw. In this age the most of the churches would have urged him to join.

Christ not only saw the possibility of this young man and the moral good in him, but he also saw the lack. The young man felt the lack, for he said "What lack I yet?"

There is a psychological moment in each life when we decide for all time, either happiness or misery, weal or woe. They tell us that up on Mt. Ridge the raindrops as snowflakes falling. One drop goes to the Pacific and the other to the Atlantic, and a breeze will change the direction of the rain drops. So with youth. Just a word or a talk from a godly father or mother, or teacher, will fix the destiny of children forever.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text. Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and the one who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

this moment, and Jesus loved him. There is a natural love, there is a Divine Love. Natural love should be encouraged, and if left to develop it will find a way. See cupid. Love visualizes itself. The mother's love sees in the child something we do not all see. So with God's love, the love that regenerates, the love that sanctifies. God's great love if unhindered, will bring us to the place where God wants us to be, also where we really want to be, if we would be honest with ourselves. It would bring us supreme happiness, here and hereafter. This young man had the power of choice, and when Jesus told him his lack, he made the decision. He lost everything, also happiness, for he went away sorrowfully and slowly. He is going yet. He might have been Dives, for all we know.

There is a legend runs like this: Where a man died and came to Heaven's gate and Peter asked him what he wanted. He wanted to be happy. Peter asked him what this would be. He answered, "Money," "fine clothes" and "a downy bed." Peter led him to a room where he had plenty of money and cots and fine linen. So the man wore the money out by counting it and also the clothes, and he lounged until everything became threadbare. Then he called, "Take me out of here. This is Hell." You cannot satisfy that spirit of yours with material things. If I were to choose a theme I would say "Service." This young man could have taken his wealth and served the poor and needy. Then God would have let him accumulate more, for the Book says "Give and it shall be given to you." It is not only what we give that God looks at, but what is left over after we have given. The widow gave of her living and she gave more than the rich men.

This is an age of search for place. Few are willing to sell all and give to the poor. When a man is willing to go the second mile and to give his cloak also, the blessing will fall upon such a one. The rich young ruler has time now to think it over, and the torture must be something beyond expression.

We all come to that place in life where we must decide for our life work, our happiness, our heaven. May we give our all to the Christ who made it possible for us to serve. He gave his life and went staggering into eternity and shouted "Finished" as he went, but he did not go where the Young Ruler went. There he sits on the throne, the chief advocate of worlds, greater than a general conference, greater than anything the human mind can conceive of. Let us begin to serve and in the end we will be led up and up where angel wings have never waved or feet have trod, but where those who have served will stroll over fields of glory, and, as Alexander sang, "Oh, That Will Be Glory For Me."

A SPIRITUAL OASIS.

Desert Oasis I have never seen, but I know something of what they are like, for recently I found a spiritual oasis in the mountains of Kentucky, within the borders of Breathitt Co., that far-famed county of feuds, moonshine and murder, where grudges are so persistent, where religious prejudice is so deep-seated, and where a premium is placed on ignorance by most of the mountain preachers.

Back in a remote section of this needy county, Mount Carmel (Baby Asbury) is located. This splendid Lead me always, or I stray.

Lead me when twilight falleth,
And the darkness gathers 'round;
Lead me always by thy power,
May I in Thee still be found.

Lead me when I feel the weakest,
When my strength seems nearly gone,
Lead me when I feel discouraged,
When I long for daylight's dawn.
Lead me, for I dare not lead the way
To that Land where all is Day.
Lead me in the paths of righteousness,
Let me live in thy holiness.

Lead me when I'm all alone,
When I long for friends and Home.
With no one to assist,
When the trials and testings come,
Clear away the gloomy mist.
Thou art near when others fail.
Safely guide to Heaven's vale
By thy Grace I shall prevail!

school was established, less than four years ago, by Miss Lela G. McConnell, a graduate of Asbury College, and under her very capable leadership, assisted by five splendid Christian workers, all college graduates, the work of educating the heads and hearts of about seventy strong-bodied, clean-minded, pure-blooded Anglo-Saxon boys and girls of the mountains is carried on. Added to this work Miss McConnell is the Appointed Parish Pastor of Breathitt County, under the Methodist Episcopal Church. Already thirteen mission stations have been established, seven of which have one or more full-time worker. Sunday schools have been established, regular preaching services are being held and hundreds of homes are visited and blessed by the touch with these consecrated ones, who are hazarding their lives for Jesus' sake.

The results already obtained in hearts and homes are very gratifying. One of the mountain boys now in his Senior year in Mt. Carmel, is preaching regularly at different places on Sundays. Others are planning a life in mission work. Many of these boys and girls do effective personal work and are capable in prayer and exhortation. Eighty-eight percent are Christian.

Some of the immediate needs of this great work are as follows:

1. $3,800 to clear the institution of debt.
2. Contributions toward the running expenses of the school and mission work.
3. Fifty people, who will each take the responsibility of the school expenses of one or more of these mountain boys and girls. Cost only $115.00 per year.
4. Financial and other aid in enlarging the administration building and the boys' dormitory.
5. A host of praying people to make intercession before the throne of God for this work.

Praying that The Herald will have an ever-widening field of spiritual service to the world, I am,

Jos. H. Lewis.

ENDURANCE THE PRICE OF SALVATION.

By The Editor.

WE find not a few people who are greatly distressed over the false teachings that are being given out in many schools and from not a few pulpits. There is genuine cause for anxiety. The Bible will stand the test. The truth will prevail, but the seeds of doubt which are being sown broadcast will result in a blasting harvest of lost souls. Human souls which can never die are precious in the sight of God. He loved them so well that he gave his Son to die for them. It is an awful tragedy that they should be lost.

* * * * *

The most dangerous enemies of God and man today are those men professing deep piety and claiming profound scholarship who are assailing the Scriptures and would, if possible, make the people believe that much of the Old and New Testaments is not inspired, that it really matters little what we believe provided we are honest and preserve an altruistic attitude toward our fellowmen. They speak lightly of our Lord, his birth, his deity and his death. One is shocked at their calm and suave audacity.

* * * * *

We are thankful that there is rising up a strong body of devout and scholarly men who are answering these skeptics. It is only a question of time when the people who desire to know the truth and who love the truth will refuse to hear the message of men who do not claim to have a message from God. They will repudiate and refuse to support false teachers who are bringing no prodigal back to the embrace of the Father, who are lifting no degraded human being out of the slums of sin, who have no message of deliverance for those who are led captive by Satan.

* * * * *

The time is coming when the chaff and the wheat must be separated, when there will be a lining up of those who stand for the Bible and the saving power of a pure gospel. For the present, the people are a bit dazed, many of them hardly know what to think; they can hardly believe their own ears; when preachers speak lightly of the inspired Word of God and of the sufferings and death of our Lord they are amazed and confounded, but the time is not distant when the mask must be pulled off of the deceivers of the people, when these pretended scholarly skeptics must be thoroughly uncovered and their wolfish spirit disclosed. We are coming to the time when God's people will speak plainly, when they will make themselves heard.

* * * * *

We are well aware of the fact that there are great churches sadly under the influence of unbelieving preachers who have tampered with the faith, who seem to have abandoned themselves to skepticism, who appear to be without the fear of God before their eyes, but a Judgment Day is coming. Even if they should seem to triumph for the present God has said, "My spirit shall not always strive with man." The day is hastening when the sheep and the goats will be separated, when the believers will stand upon the right, and the skeptics upon the left hand of the Great Judge. Some men are speaking very loudly now against the meek and lowly Nazarene, but the time will come when our Lord shall place all his enemies beneath his feet. It is a time for patience, for faithfulness, for watching unto prayer. Our Master has said, "He that endureth unto the end shall be saved."

A WORD OF GRATITUDE.

After almost nine weeks in the Deaconess Hospital in Louisville, Ky., my good physician, Dr. J. Kenneth Hutcherson, and a number of the famous specialists he had called in for consultation, decided that the one thing left for me to do was to come to Miami, Fla. The railroad people provided kindly a bed in a drawing room compartment. Dr. Hutcherson, my wife, and Brother W. E. Thomas, who assisted in caring for me, all came with me to Miami. The end of the journey found me quite exhausted, but the delightful warm weather soon proved very helpful.

Dr. Hutcherson remained with me long enough to secure a very excellent physician and give him all the details of my case and the means used in my treatment. He was very fortunate in placing me under the care of Dr. R. O. Lyell, a very fine physician and delightful Christian gentleman. I seem to be making rapid improvement and put on my clothes on the morning of February 3rd for the first time in something more than ten weeks.

I wish to thank with all my heart the readers of THE HERALD who have prayed for me, and I praise God that he heard prayer, and that I seem to be on the road to permanent recovery. I shall have to move slowly and guard against any attempt at strenuous work for some time.

Many kind letters of inquiry and assurance of prayer and friendship have come to me which it was impossible for me to answer, but those who sent them may be assured they were highly appreciated. Many brethren, ministers of different denominations, came to my bedside with kindly words of brotherly love, which were most highly appreciated.

I can say "It was good for me to be afflicted." I looked great facts squarely in the face, and the Lord Jesus was exalted high over all. It looked very much as if the end had come for me, and I felt no tinge of regret for the lines along which I had labored, but only regretted that the labor had not been more devoted and fruitful. Every fact and feature of the doctrines I had believed and preached, the experiences I have offered through the atoning merit of Christ held good in a most trying hour, without modification, change or regret. Jesus Christ was lifted up high over all. No question about his power to forgive sins and to cleanse human nature from all pollution. The great doctrines of regeneration and sanctification as the Bible teaches them, as Wesley explained them, and we have been preaching them stood out before me like mountain peaks, eternal as the word of God.

How my heart longed to exhort my brethren to go on preaching a full salvation in the atoning blood of the Lord Jesus Christ. If the Lord spares me to preach again I shall greatly rejoice to be permitted to offer our blessed Savior mighty to save to the uttermost.

I have heard today of the accident and sickness of two of my fellow soldiers. We see in a clipping sent us from an Indiana newspaper that, Rev. Joseph Smith fell on the street and was hurt, and is now in the hospital in Fort Wayne, Ind. We are greatly grieved and hope the injury is not serious, and that he will soon be again in his loved employ.

We also got word that Rev. John Hughes is confined in the Good Samaritan Hospital, Lexington, Ky. What a faithful old soldier of the cross he has been and is. We request the readers of THE HERALD to pray with great earnestness that these men may be spared yet awhile. It does seem that we need them. May God graciously bless them.

Let us all gird ourselves afresh to press the work of salvation, to lift up and exalt Jesus Christ high over all. To cry to God to give us a great awakening, to pour out his Spirit in mighty power upon ministers and people, and to bring in the standards of his majesty and truth and salvation against the floods of wickedness. Continue to remember me and my wife at the throne of grace.

Faithfully your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

More Laborers Into The Harvest.

THE reader will readily recall the exhortation of Christ that we pray the Father to send more laborers into the harvest field. There is one thing encouraging to those believers who are called the "holiness people." In their meetings, camps, conventions, revivals, where the power of God comes down in saving and sanctifying power, hosts of young people are being called to the ministry and mission field. If we gave ourselves to special prayer on this subject we would receive the answer from God in the calling of many other souls. Let us not forget this, but pray often that God may sanctify and raise up a mighty army of young men and women to preach through all the land a free and full salvation.

If the holiness people have a truth which, if properly preached and inculcated, will

THE GOSPEL AMONG THE CANTONESE.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

This article is being written in and around Canton, South China. It is only a four-hour ride from Hong Kong to Canton but the change is as great as from Medievalism to the twentieth century. In Hong Kong you meet the modern ideas of life—splendid roads, modern improvements, etc., with the English predominating. When you strike Canton you meet China with its teeming multitudes and its strange ways and customs. On the river you meet every conceivable type of boat and especially the sampans. Tens of thousands of people are born, reared, get married, raise families and die on these river boats. Our night services require our crossing from the island of Honam (where our day services are held) to Canton. Instead of having capacious ferry boats they have innumerable sampans boats, and several times as we crossed these boats have been operated by mother and daughter (or slave girl). They charge us a penny for the trip. Some one has said that the boats of China may be compared to the leaves of the forest in number, and their varieties are about as great as that of the foliage of China. Boats large and small, boats long and short, boats broad and narrow, boats for hawkers, boats for fishing, boats for pleasure, boats ready for anything and everything; boats for smuggling, boats for pirates, boats for lepers, boats for beggars, boats for passage, boats for ferries, for brides, for marriages, for feasts and for funerals. It has been said there are more boats in China than in all the rest of the world combined.

As we crossed the river the other morning we noticed one formidable, big, immense Junk ship—it was as ugly a thing as could be created by man. It was armed with numerous guns both fore and aft. We asked the reason. It was said these guns were intended for pirates. The rivers and coast around this part of China are infested with pirates, and the Ladrone Islands are inhabited by robbers, pirates, etc. A missionary who works in Macao told me this morning her sorrow that no missionaries were in those Islands where hundreds of thousands of Chinese live. She thinks that one of the reasons is that they dread the danger of living and working among pirates but she said that when these people are approached with the gospel they hear it gladly. Certainly, the Ladrone Islands are no worse than the savage New Hebrides where John G. Paton found the worst kind of cannibalism and midst the most terrific odds he got the gospel to these people and turned from idols to serve the living God. It is to be hoped that some Chinese missionaries will be raised up to start work in these needy Islands.

I was reading recently of Paton when he dug the first well ever known in those cannibal islands. The poor savages looked on with amazement as Paton dug. They said to him: "O Missi your head is going wrong; you are losing something or you would not talk like that," as Paton told them that he was going to sink a well deep enough to see if God would send forth water from below. They watched the digging and when water came and they drank of it they regarded it as a miracle and answer to prayer. Then they cried out: "Missi, wonderful, wonderful is the work of your Jehovah God! No God of Aniwa ever helped us in this way." The old chief and some of his people were so astonished that they brought their idols and cast them down at the feet of the missionary and they had a big time in the island destroying and burning their idols and worshipping the true God.

What is needed in the foreign mission fields today everywhere are men and women who will do some digging and dig on and on till the wells of salvation begin to flow. The extraordinary is needed to convince the people that there is a mighty God and a great Redeemer. Just natural things like schools, hospitals, orphanages, etc., are not sufficient for the heathen world. They need a demonstration of the God which answereth by fire.

It is simply wonderful the effect of the gospel in the heathen world when preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. It changes and transforms men and women and makes extraordinary Christians out of them. My interpreter was formerly a heathen. When he entered Bethel School he and three others signed an agreement that they would have nothing to do with the Christian religion. Today he is one of the most godly and Christlike men I have ever met. He is a mighty preacher and evangelist, a man of faith and prayer thoroughly sanctified, full of the Bible and the Holy Ghost.

Some one tells the story of the portrait of Dante which is painted upon the walls of the Bargello, at Florence? For many years it was supposed that the picture had utterly perished. Men had heard of it, but no one living had ever seen it. But presently came an artist who was determined to find it again. He went into the palace where tradition said it had been painted. The room was used as a storehouse for lumber and straw. The walls were covered with dirty whitewash. He had the heaps of rubbish carried away. Patiently and carefully he removed the whitewash from the wall. Lines and colors long hidden began to appear; and at last the grave, lofty, noble face of the great poet looked out again upon the world of light.

"That was wonderful," you say, "that was beautiful!" Not half so wonderful as the work which Christ came to do in the heart of man—to restore the forgotten image of God, and bring the Divine image to the light. He comes to us with the knowledge that God's image is there, though concealed: He touches us with the faith that the Divine image can be restored.

There is nothing like the gospel to transform the heathen world. God's grace can take a raw heathen and make a shining saint of him.

At the altar service last night, after preaching at the Presbyterian Church of Canton, all classes and conditions of people were forward for prayers. Bro. Munroe said to me as he pointed to a business man kneeling in prayer: "There is one of the prominent men of this church." Then at the same time there knelt a poor bare footed coolie boy, he was crying over his sins and trying to find God. Bro. Munroe dealt with him tenderly and remarked to me: "If that boy gets saved there may be another Sammy Morris." China needs some young fellows of the Sammy Morris type just now and I trust that the Spirit of God may find them in these revival meetings.

Let me stop here and tell a story to the children about a little girl of three years that sits at the head of the table with Bro. Munroe in the Missionary Home where we are staying during the Canton Convention. I inquired as to where she came from and Bro. Munroe told me that she was thrown out when a baby to die and maybe to be eaten by the dogs or hogs. Somebody came to the mission house to say that a little baby was thrown out on the lot. It was, of course, only a common occurrence in China as baby girls are not welcome in the homes. But Sister Munroe had some one go out and fetch it in and they decided to keep it, and now it is a fine, healthy, happy little girl and a singer of gospel songs. She is so bright and happy and is being trained up as a Christian, and some day she may be one of God's chosen workers among her own people. Little girls are sold all over China as slaves and very often you will see a little girl of five or six carrying on her back the baby all day long. I remember when at Peniel Mission from early morn till night came on I saw one little girl with baby fastened to her back. I presume she was a poor little slave girl whose father sold her for a few dollars, and slave she must from dawn till dark and never know any love or kindness.

Canton has been notorious during the last uprising against foreigners for the big grip that Bolshevism had upon it. For a time this dragon evil was sweeping everything before it and in some cases it carried some of the Chinese preachers off their feet. A missionary told me of the dreadful massacre that was fixed in Canton for last December. The Bolsheviks had all their plans drawn and everything ready for a wholesale massacre and looting and burning of missionaries and their possessions, but through the mercy of God the authorities got hold of the information and averted the disaster. The tide now turned against the Bolsheviks and they were arrested and beheaded wholesale. The city was scoured and bob-haired girls lost their heads and red neckties meant death. In one instance a thousand Bolsheviks were caught and generally there was no mercy shown them—they were shot or beheaded. For a long time girls with bobbed hair were afraid to go on the streets, because so many of the agitators had come from the schools and wore bobbed hair. Communism is being hunted down all over China and wherever found no mercy is extended to the offenders. Just recently thirteen were executed near here, among them a lad of fourteen.

It is believed by many missionaries that these great deliverances in times of great stress was in answer to special prayer. I think the December deliverance came after a day of prayer.

Touching the subject of prayer for missions, the following is told of Hudson Taylor's work in China:

Some years ago a wonderful work of grace broke out in connection with one of the stations in the China Inland Mission, where both the number and spiritual character of the converts had been far greater than at other stations and yet the consecration of the missionaries at the latter had been just as great.

This rich harvest of souls remained a mystery until Mr. Hudson Taylor on a visit to England discovered the secret. At the close of one of his addresses a gentleman from the audience came forward to make his acquaintance. In the conversation that followed Mr. Taylor was surprised at the accurate knowledge the man possessed concerning this Inland China station.

"But how is it," Mr. Taylor asked, "that you are so conversant with the conditions of that work?"

"Oh," he replied, "the missionary there and I are old college-mates and for years we have regularly corresponded; he has sent me names of enquirers and converts, and these I have daily taken to God in prayer."

At last the secret is found! A praying man at home, praying definitely, praying for specific cases among the heathen—this is the intercessory missionary idea. This man had become a real intercessory missionary.

I remember standing one day in Westminster Abbey, London, beside the stone that covers the last resting place of David Livingstone. On the stone there is an inscription part of which reads thus:

David Livingstone
Missionary, Traveller, Philanthropist
Born March 19, 1813
Died May 4, 1873

For thirty years his life was spent in an unwearying effort to evangelize the native racess, to explore the undiscovered secrets and abolish the desolating slave trading of Central Africa where with his last words he wrote: "All I can say in my solitude is, may heaven's rich blessing come down on every one—American, English, Turk—who will heal the open sore of the world." It will be remembered that David Livingstone was found dead upon his knees.

Let me exhort my readers to pray for China in this hour of supreme opportunity. China is giving up Bolshevism, also destroying her idols and temples. If the Gospel does not reach them and China drifts into Atheism the peril of the yellow race will be terrible indeed. China today has a hungry heart for the gospel. Pray that every missionary might get on fire for God and pray that the native church of China may catch the flame and become great centers of evangelism.

Our present campaign is in connection with the South China Holiness Mission established in 1903 by Rev. E. R. Munroe and wife. (A few months ago Mrs. Munroe was taken to heaven and Bro. Munroe is greatly bereaved but still carries on in the energy of the Spirit.) The Mission is at Honam, Canton, South China.

The South China Holiness Mission is located in the province of Kwong Tung which has a population of more than thirty-two millions and has 94 cities, scores at this time having no resident missionary. The language spoken is Cantonese. The provincial capitol, Canton, where the Mission headquarters is located, has a population of three million. The South China Holiness Mission stands for Scriptural Holiness—the pre-millennial coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; healing of the body and the Divine command to give the Gospel to the whole world.

The present work of the Mission is as follows: 1. A Bible School for native workers. 2. An Orphanage. 3. Chapel and Day School at Po Kong. 4. Two chapels in Ko Meng. 5. Chapel and Boys School in Kap Shui. 6. Chapel and Girls' School in Chan Chun. 7. Chapel and Girls' School in Lai Chun. 8. Chapel at Sun Chung Kai. The Mission is entirely supported by the free-will offering of God's people in different lands.

It is simply wonderful the work accomplished by these Mission stations when carried on by true and tried, experienced, level headed and thoroughly consecrated men and women of God. In the Convention now being held as I write, preachers, teachers, evangelists, pastors and Bible women are here from all over the Province, while some are from more distant places. My interpreter in this meeting is from Macao the Portuguese settlement near Hong Kong. These missionaries and Chinese workers have to toil in the midst of densest heathenism and it is a great privilege for them to come to a holiness convention and enjoy a week of gospel feast and fellowship. The American people who can attend revivals and conventions and camp meetings and have abundance of gospel opportunities can hardly appreciate what a holiness convention means to these Chinese Christians. It is an Oasis in the desert and a Feast of Tabernacles.

Two Opposing Views.

After the Chaldeans finally sacked and destroyed Jerusalem and carried the Jews away to Babylon, in the time of Jeremiah, the small remnant that was left behind, migrated to Egypt, despite Jeremiah's faithful warnings. There, they boldly said they would continue idolatry, in the worship of "the queen of heaven." Their reason was that, when they had sacrificed to her in their home land, they had enjoyed prosperity; but since they had neglected her worship, disaster had come upon them. On the other hand, Jeremiah told them that their troubles were because their idolatry was sin against Jehovah, which merited his judgments! Two opposite views of the same thing!

We now know that Jeremiah was correct, and the people were wrong! And still we are repeating the same folly! Statemen, educators, ecclesiastics, tell us that war comes of ignorance, and that education is the cure for it; and most people believe them! See what Education, with God left out, has done on that line! Science, which is education, has given us war agencies a thousand-fold worse than of old—the submarine, the airplane, poison gas, long-range artillery, rapid-fire machine guns, etc. Godless education, which most of it now is, leads TO war, not AWAY from it! The more of that kind we have, the more war and the more devilish! We are today worshipping at the shrine of brains, intellect, culture, with God omitted; instead of humbly bowing in reverence to God, we are imitating these old Jews, and making our offerings to human learning, as a panacea for all ills!

A BURNING AND SHINING LIGHT.

BY COMMISSIONER SAMUEL BRENGLE.

A HOMILY ON RED-HOT RELIGION.

ONE of the unsolved problems of science is to produce a physical light that is cold. The problem which religion has solved, and must solve, is to produce a spiritual light that is hot, which is nothing other than the old-time religion.

Jesus said of his forerunner, John the Baptist, 'He was a burning and a shining light.'

He shone until Jerusalem and all Judea and all the regions around about Jordan were startled and awakened by the light, and went out to see and to hear; and he burned into their hard, cold hearts until multitudes confessed their sins, and King Herod himself and his adulterous wife were so scorched by the heat of the burning herald of righteousness that Herod shut him up in prison, and at the request of his dancing step-daughter, urged on by his wicked wife, had John's head cut off to escape the burning, as though the loss of his head could quench the fire that shone and burned in John's heart and life.

Solomon said: "A man's wisdom maketh his face to shine" (Ecclesiastes 8:1); and the Psalmist said, "They looked unto Him, and were lightened ('were radiant,' margin), and their faces were not ashamed" (Psalm 34:5).

And we read that when Moses came down from the Mount, where he had met with God, "The children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance" (2 Cor. 3:7; Ex. 34:29-35). And again we read of Stephen, "And all that sat in the council, looking steadfastly at him, saw his face as it had been the face of an angel" (Acts 6:15).

Some time ago a Chicago multi-millionaire spoke at an Army meeting, and among other things said that the one thing which always most impressed him as he looked upon a company of Salvationists was the light in their faces. (May that light never go out!) This light is produced by that heavenly wisdom that comes from the knowledge of God through faith in Jesus, and by the peace of a good conscience and love to all men.

But those who most mightily move men to righteousness are not only shining but also burning lights. John burned his way into the dulled consciences of the men of his day, and stirred all Palestine. Stephen burned into the guilty souls of priests and rulers until their wrath knew no bounds, and they cast him out and sent him to Heaven in a shower of stones. The apostles burned their way into idolatrous cities and into a pagan civilization reeking with unmentionable lusts and unspeakable cruelties (Rom 1:22-32) until the world was transformed.

William and Catherine Booth shone and burned their way through immeasurable obstacles of vice and ignorance, of indifference and ridicule and contempt, of organized and stubborn opposition. And multitudes of lesser men and women have won their way and triumphed by the same burning.

I know an Adjutant of the Salvation Army who burns his way to victory in every corps he commands. He is an ordinary looking man, with but slender gifts, but he has the fire. He burns.

What is this fire? It is love. It is faith. It is hope. It is passion, purpose, determination. It is utter devotion. It is a divine discontent with formality, ceremonialism, lukewarmness, indifference, sham and noise, and parade and spiritual death. It is singleness of eye and a consecration unto death. It is God the Holy Ghost burning in and through a humble, holy, faithful man. It is the spirit that inspired young Queen Esther when she resolved that if it cost her her life she would go into the king and plead for her people, saying, "If I perish, I perish."

It is the spirit that inspired Jonathan and his armor-bearer to go up singlehanded against the mocking Philistine and rout his army; that inspired David to run out to meet the insolent giant and put to flight the proud foe; that emboldened Daniel and his three friends to face the lions' den, and the seven-fold heated furnace rather than be false to God and conscience and the old-time religion of their fathers; that led Peter and his friends to defy the threatening rulers and go to prison and glory in whippings and sufferings for Jesus' sake; that led Paul and Silas boldly to preach Christ to heathen mobs and Jewish bigots, and rejoice in stonings and stripes, and sing psalms in noisome midnight dungeon until the jailer himself was converted, and until saints were found in Caesar's household—that half-demon Caesar, Nero—he who murdered his own mother, stamped his wife and unborn child to death, fired Rome and fiddled while the city burned, then charged the Christians with the burning; had them covered with pitch and set afire, lighting the parks and streets with flaming saints, possibly the saints of his own household! It is the spirit that inspired John Knox to cry out to God, "Give me Scotland or I die;" that led Luther, in the face of almost certain death, to say to his friends, "I will go to Worms, though there be as many devils in the city as there are tiles on the roofs of the houses." This burning is the spirit that led the young men soldiers of a Salvation Army corps to come to the officers many a night and ask for the key to the hall that they might spend half the night in prayer, until their corps became the banner corps of a dozen states. It is the spirit that inspired an officer in a desperately hard corps in a city full of indifference and opposition to have an all-night of prayer every week with two or three kindred souls who shared with him the burden, until God moved the whole city, and the Mayor became his friend and protector, and the city officials and pastors attended his Sunday afternoon meetings in the City Hall, and the people gave him money for a new hall and instruments for a big band, while the platform was filled with soldiers who had caught the flame from their officer.

Do you ask, How can we get the fire? I answer, Not by feasting, but by fasting; not by playing, but by praying; not by sleeping and slothfulness, but by watching and by diligently seeking God and the souls that wander from him; not by reading newspapers and devouring the comic sections and sporting news, but by searching the Scriptures; by believing.

The men of fire have got acquainted with God. They have waited for him obediently in the way of his commandments (Isa. 26:8, 9, 64:5). They have not only repented of sin and turned toward him, but they have longed and watched for him more eagerly

THE RIVER, THE CUP, AND THE WELL.

Rev. R. P. Marshall.

"There is a river. . . ." Psal. 46:4.

"My cup runneth over." 23rd Psalm, 5 v.

"Anyone who drinks this water shall thirst again, but anyone who drinks the water that I shall give him will never thirst anymore; the water that I shall give him will turn into a spring of water welling up unto eternal life." John 4:4 (Moffat).

WATER is the symbol of life. A traveler, parched with thirst, seeks in vain for signs of the gurgling, splashing stream that his imagination pictures. As far as eye can see are the limitless stretches of interminable sand and sagebrush. Dying of thirst in the desert, his tongue parched and his breast on fire from the stinging air of the alkali dust clouds, he staggers and falls prostrate in the sand. But help comes at last and he is tenderly raised, and a sip of the life-giving fluid poured between his blackened lips. Lo, he revives, color comes back to his cheeks and the light into his dying eyes. He will live now. Why? Water gives life.

But in the scene described in John's gospel, Jesus offers to this outcast Samaritan woman a new kind of water. She was astonished. Why even the well need not be improved upon. Nor had it been in the hundreds of years since first Jacob cleaned it out and built around it the protecting ledge of rock. It was still the latest thing in rocks . . . and wells. We of our changing century, imbued with the idea of remaking and remodeling everything that has survived the ravages of a short six months of our hectic life, will always find it hard to understand the unchanging East. We would have installed a modern hoist, or at least a bucket pump, but not so these contented Samaritans and Jews. What was good enough for Jacob would do for them. So just as the old patriarch had bumped his venerable head on the projecting rock ledge over the stairs to the dipping place, countless thousands had followed him, and no one had ventured to improve the well . . . much less offer a new kind of water.

"I would have given you living water."

The woman looked at him in open-mouthed astonishment. He had taken her breath away with his very unconventional attitude toward the ever present barrier between Jew and Samaritan, and now he goes to unheard-of lengths of daring and proposes that she ask him for living water. What? Was not this clear, sparkling stream coming from a well so rich in religious memories and historical significance the very epitome of life itself? There were the thirsty camels drinking now, taking in new vigor and strength for the weary journey; there were the tired travelers resting beneath the welcome shade of the palm whose roots were nourished by the overflow. What more could one ask of water?

She was a good representative of her class. She has still her followers. The old seems ever to be the only good and true. The Jewish church, rich in its associations, its long line of prophets, priests and martyrs, seemed to be the best there was and not only that, but the best that ever could be. Similarly, her Samaritan faith, sprung from the same beginning, seemed the ultimate and best of all possibility.

Not only was she conservative, but she was afflicted with the ultra-scientific attitude. She was a materialist when it came to living water. How could such a thing be. Why, water is water. W-a-t-e-r. If she had known how, she would have told Jesus that H₂O was H₂O, no matter where you take it, and that to suppose it to be endowed with any supernatural powers would be to suppose that God would violate the laws of Nature . . . and that there was no room for supernaturalism in water or in anything else. Yet science fell down at the point of life, as it always does.

But she was missing the mark all the time. She had taken a different premise and had arrived at a totally unrelated conclusion. Jesus didn't stop to argue with her. He gave her the invitation and she met it with a plea that showed how far she was from a true understanding of the matter. "Give me some of this water; so that I won't have to come so far to get a drink. He offered her eternal life and she merely begged for an easy one.

I wonder if there was a spirit of mischief in her heart as she put this plea. Of course this man could not give her any living water. She would amuse herself for a moment with his conversation. But not for long. With a penetrating look that burned deep into the sordid soul of this careless woman, he launched a thunderbolt of conviction. "Go and call thy husband, and come hither."

There! No more quibbling about the nature of water. He had touched the hidden spot of sin and wretchedness in her life. The proud head bowed and the fluent tongue was hushed as Jesus told in measured tones the tragedy of her marital career. It was hard, but it was necessary. She could not carry the water of life until her soul was purged. She must not contaminate the stream. She found the living water as she found herself. Stripped of her robe of pretense, she was left to blush in shame before the eyes of him who sees our every thought.

Then the woman left her waterpot and ran into the city. I can see her as she passes down the dusty street, shouting to all the curious throng that are so ready to gather at the rumor of anything unusual. "The Messiah is come! The Messiah is come!"

What a queer forerunner of the Promised One! But how did she know him? By his word? No, she might have doubted that; but his insight into the depths of her hidden wretchedness settled the matter. It must be He.

Where is your waterpot, woman? "Why . . . Really, I had completely forgotten it." She had the reality. The thirst for spiritual water slaked, the physical seemed of no consequence. Living water bubbling in her soul, she was now understanding the saying, "You shall never thirst anymore." The physical is ever subject to the spiritual. Our childish crying for material blessing is soon forgotten when we get but a sip of the water of life.

But David said in his immortal 23rd Psalm, "My cup runneth over." Truly it did. Coming as a magnificent climax to the untold blessings of a life of following the Good Shepherd, it is not surprising that he should reach this point of seeming satiety. But we are in no condition to expect an overthrow until first we are filled. Some are satisfied with merely a taste of the wonderful water. Others have stood for years beside the flowing stream and watched its sparkling beauty with never a move to enjoy for themselves its life-giving flow.

Perhaps there is something wrong with the cup. You have stood by the side of the old springhouse in the sweltering heat of a midsummer afternoon and reached with anticipation for the old gourd dipper. A splash in the sparkling water and it came up to the lips, a grateful and refreshing sight. But before the dipper touched your lips the life-giving fluid had all leaked out and the old gourd seemed a soggy, useless thing. What was the matter? The water was all right, the stream was all right, the spring was all right, but the cup was full of holes.

God does not furnish the cup. It is your cup. You make it, you maintain it. Never blame a leaky cup on the well, or the keeper of the well, for you brought it with you, and are responsible for it. There are no common drinking cups in God's fountain. The cup is your soul. And the measure of your soul capacity is the measure of your cup. Small souls are soon filled. Those who would drink deep of the stream must first be sure of their capacity.

Have you ever seen a false measure? The kind used by dishonest merchants to give short quantities. . . . You will remember the pint measure with its false bottom. On the outside it is of regulation height and circumference. But let it be used to measure a liquid and you will see upon re-measuring, that there is a disparity of several ounces. What is the trouble? The cup has been filled with something else and a sham or double bottom inserted. The something else is nothing but air, but air is not water, nor milk, nor even light-giving kerosene. That is a fraud of a cup.

Then the cup must first be emptied of everything else in order that it may be filled with the Water of Life. It is an unalterable rule that one place cannot be occupied by two things at the same time. Jesus said it in another way when he said, "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." Yet we are still trying to do it. If you would be filled with all the fullness of God, then you must first be emptied of all the fullness of the world. There must be no false bottoms.

David not only had a full cup; he had an overflow cup. God had so wonderfully blessed him that not only did he have enough for his own use, but there was a sparkling, splashing stream of grace for all his acquaintances. And it is a peculiar trait of this marvelous water that the more that is lost by overflow, the more there comes into the cup. It shall be a well of water springing up . . . not just slowly sweeping through, but springing up.

In Alabama a few years ago, I stood beside a wonderful artesian well that was said to flow at the rate of ten thousand gallons a minute. Sounds rather large, doesn't it? Well the water was there and the power was there, but nobody had a cup big enough to confine the flow to their own personal use. When I last saw it, some enterprising fellow had attempted to use the warm water in a swimming pool. There was one drawback—too much water. The improvised dirt walls crumbled beneath the force of the powerful stream. It refused to be confined, and rushing on and on, carried its refreshing torrent for miles through the countryside.

Someone tried to put a cap on it, without much success. The experimenter was picked up and carefully dried. . . . No one has tried it since. You have seen that very thing tried in a great service, where God's mighty Spirit was upon the people. For fear of causing talk and unfavorable comment, many a good brother has choked down a hearty "Amen" and almost suffered the same consequences. Very often it is the lack of overflow that dries up the stream of Grace.

The cup must be filled, though, before it can run over. There must be a surplus. Then the blessed thing about it is that when your cup runs over we can come around and hold our little cup and have the benefit of your blessing. There need be no dry times in a true Christian Church. If it hasn't rained on your corn patch, go borrow a little water from your neighbor. Don't you see him over there just running over with joy and gladness?

The stream can never run dry. No need to worry. There are no drouths in God's mercy. Hot summer, cold winter, all is alike to him.

Again, the more that passes through the cup, the more benefit to us. I never heard a fountain complain of being dry. Luther Bridgers tells the story of the happenings of one cold, winter day in Atlanta. He was going home for a short visit, and the wait for a train out was getting tiresome. Stepping across the way to a splendid restaurant, he was entering the door, when he noticed a dirty little newsboy standing beside the window, looking with longing at the warm interior and the temptingly displayed food. The collar of his ragged coat was turned up against the biting wind, and he shivered incessantly. Noticing Dr. Bridgers, he rushed to his side. "Buy a paper, mister," he said. "No, sonny, I already have one." But he could not withstand the pleading look of that ragged urchin. A thought came. Well, why not?

"Are you hungry?" he asked.
"Am I? Jest try me."

The outcome was that he took the little newsboy into the warm cafe and set him up to everything that the boy desired. He ate until it seemed that he would not hold any more, and then finished off with a dozen sweet rolls, some in his mouth and the others in his pockets. It was a treat to see the look of uncomprehending bliss upon his streaked countenance. The meal was over, and after paying for it, Dr. Bridgers put his arm around the shoulders of the ragged little boy and told him of One who loved him and for whose sake he had been fed. Then with a word of encouragement and a cheery smile, he was gone and the little newsboy went back to his work. Will he forget? Not hardly. And as the preacher went down to the train and on to his own home and boy, he had perhaps the greatest blessing of the two.

Many of us have not hardly enough for our own use. We cannot carry any of it to our friends. We are not yet completely dry, but we are subject to long dry spells. Some are like the old pump: no good at all unless primed. Have we been filled? How long has it been since we felt the mighty surge of the river of life, as it filled to abundance our puny cup till it ran over and over? That is the ideal life. To dwell so close to the fountain that our soul shall only have to look up to the unquenchable stream and receive.

"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters."

He Walked With God—

He Pleased God.

By President L. R. Akers, Asbury College.

One of the briefest biographies in Holy Writ is that of Enoch. In the fifth chapter of Genesis four short verses give us a brief history of this early patriarch. Yet in this condensed record the statement is twice made that Enoch "walked with God." Leaping across the centuries to the writer of the Hebrews, we note one verse regarding this pioneer saint (Hebrews 11:5) closing with the testimony that "he pleased God."

What a terse, compact bit of information this is about one of God's anointed ones! Yet Enoch is known around the world, as well known as almost any man in the Old Testament. What is the explanation of this? Five short verses have immortalized a man. But may we not ask the question, "Brief though his history be, what more could be said of him than was said?"

First of all, he walked with God. There is no more stupendous fact in the universe than that expressed in these words. Finite man walking in perfect harmony and understanding with infinite God! The seemingly impossible is withal a fact.

Let us here consider man's relationship to man. Society is like a ladder, the successive rungs representing its various classes, in the ascent of which, we run the gamut all the way from the rags and mud hut of the yokel to the royal purple and ivory palace of the king.

"Enoch walked with God." This is all the more stupendous because of the difficulty man has in walking with his fellowman. If the finite is ill at ease and oftentimes inadequately fitted to walk with the finite, how can he hope then to walk with the Infinite? Let us note the frequent feeling of social inadequacy. Let us suppose, for instance, that any reader of this article might suddenly be transplanted into the heart of so-called "high society" (which, alas, too often is low society). An elaborate banquet is spread. There is the snowy damask and a profuse variety of gleaming silver,—knives, forks, spoons—in bewildering array. The words of a recent speaker would express the sentiments of the average man. Said he, "There were seventeen varieties of silver at my plate. I tried to follow the correct procedure, but found at the close of the dinner that in spite of my most valiant efforts I had five of the utensils remaining with which I knew not what to do." It is not too much to say that no matter how splendid the service nor how delicious the viands, such an occasion could hardly be called a pleasurable experience, the reason being simply that there was a lack of understanding due to an unaccustomed environment. Let us suppose again that Mr. "Average Man" finds himself placed in a company of the "intelligentsia." The discussion is on Einstein's Theory of Relativity, recent archaeological discoveries, the deciphering of Egyptian hieroglyphics, a discriminating exchange of opinion between the various schools of art, or upon the works of Browning, Emerson, Ruskin, or Wordsworth. His silence in this case is not that of wisdom, but proclaims him an ignoramus along the lines mentioned. In this instance, there is no communion of minds, of fellowship, of personalities.

If in life there are frequent occasions when our sense of social or intellectual inadequacy is so keenly felt, may we ask again how can we walk, then, with him who is King of kings and Lord of lords? How can we, owning a few acres or a small and unpretentious home, walk with him who swings the stars with his fingertips and whose blazing throne is amid the infinity of worlds above us?

Fortunately for us there is an answer. God is in love with man, and man, in surrendering to God, finds the "open sesame" to the Father's heart; and where there is love all other things easily follow.

The essentials of life are personal. Man walks with his fellowman, finite like himself, and understands them only in a measure. He walks also with infinite God, and, because of the inborn hunger for the Infinite, understands God and finds satisfaction in him, in a measure transcending his human relationships. Milton says, "Loneliness, which God names as the first thing not good, is provided for in every way." In the beginning, God said, "It is not good for man to be alone." Yet he knew that even a partner in life is not enough, so he went down himself in the cool of the day and talked with the man and woman whom he had made. There then was revealed an everlasting necessity—the companionship of God. Human fellowships may supply physical hunger and intellectual life may also be quickened thereby, but the deepest of all hungers, the hunger of the soul, can be satisfied with nothing but God. Life may provide many visible helps, friends, relations, people, work, books, all of which help some, but none of which can help always. The real presence of God in Jesus Christ, our Elder Brother and Savior, is the one real vital need of every life.

How are we to attain this fellowship? Undoubtedly it may be ours. The answer is, the way down is the way up. He that humbleth himself shall be exalted. The sufficiency of our merit is the knowledge of our insufficiency. A frank acknowledgment of our insufficiency gives God the opportunity to supply our every need according to his riches in glory. We do not have to have a dollar sign as our coat of arms in order to walk with God. Blessed are the poor in spirit for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven. Man's discontent with himself prompts him to seek a power over and above himself that can lift him out of himself into a larger realm of joy and victory. But the trouble with present day discontent is that man, instead of being discontented with himself is discontented with his possessions, with that he has rather than with what he is. The Apostle says, "I have learned with what things I have to be content." But in regard to himself he says, "I am determined to know nothing among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." Again, "Press on to the mark of the prize"—ever satisfied with his temporal state; never satisfied with his spiritual attainment. "I am the least of all the apostles," says the great soul of the centuries in his humility.

"Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God." Not only may we walk with him but we may behold him. How rich this life becomes in the glorious knowledge that we may walk and talk with God; that the created may understand the Creator! There is the story of a Hindu philosopher who was studying a hill of ants. The thought flashed into his mind, "I wish I could talk to those little beings." Again he thought, for he was an educated man, though not a Christian, "Could I understand their language, if they have a language, and are capable of expressing themselves, still I could not communicate with them in terms of speech for an ant is an ant and a man is a man. But if I could become one of them, take upon me their nature and at the same time retain my personality and consciousness, then I could talk with them and express myself to them." Like a flash came the thought to him, "This is ex-

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER VIII.

GOOD NEWS FROM HOME.

FOR a moment Huston stood with bowed head, gazing into the eyes of the dying man, a tremendous struggle going on within his breast. Every eye in all the group was fixed upon him. He somehow felt that he had come to a most important crisis in his life. He stretched himself to his full height, and said, "Yes, I do believe in Jesus Christ. And I do believe with all my heart that any penitent sinner coming to him for pardon will receive the gracious mercy of forgiveness that the Lord came to bring to a lost world." The dying man said, "That's good talk, Huston. That's the way the old Methodists preached it down in the hills of Tennessee. I had that once, but I threw it away when I lost my gal. But I did know the forgiveness of my sins. Huston, do you mind kneeling down here and praying for a man who is about to meet his God, and knows that he isn't ready?"

Perspiration broke out on Huston, but he stepped around close to the dying man's head and knelt down. All the cow boys, cooks, and workers about the camp fell upon their knees and Huston prayed. It was the first audible prayer he had offered since his flight from Canton. "Merciful God, we come to Thee, in great distress. We have a deep sense of our unworthiness, but we are encouraged by the word of Thy Son, who came down into this world and taught us that Thou dost so love sinful, lost humanity that Thou didst give Thy son to die for our salvation." The poor dying man said, "Amen. Huston, keep praying on just that way. That's the way they prayed down in Tennessee, when I was a believer." Huston laid his hand tenderly on the arm of the dying man and said, "Thy mercy is our only plea. Jesus died for the sinful, the lost and the unworthy." The dying man cried out, "That's the truth Lord, and that's me, and I believe in that Jesus who died for sinners. Pray on Huston, you are on the right line. I am the sinner, Jesus is the Savior, and I believe in him. I believe in his love and his power to save. The light is coming back on me. The good old light I had when I was a Christian boy down in the hills of Tennessee. Praise God, my burden is all gone. It's a clear case of mercy, of salvation by faith." He commenced to praise God, they all stood up, he reached out his hands, bade them good-bye and urged them to seek Jesus Christ. He gave a glad testimony and some thirty minutes later he passed away, the sunburned face wreathed in smiles and a peaceful beauty settling into his countenance. A number of the cowboys wept, and they all followed Huston around as if that group in the wilderness was a church and he the pastor. The stars lit up the heavens, a great quietness fell upon the plains, and some hours after Johnson's death the doctor rode into camp. He dismounted, walked up to the cot, pulled out his flash light and turned it full upon his face and said, "Hello, the old puncher is gone before I got here. And my, he has a wonderful pleasing look. Did he get some good news from home or something just before he died?"

Old Aunt Milly, the old colored cook, who had been having a hard time restraining her emotions, said, "Yas suh, that's jes what he did git. He got the best news what they is. Straight from home. Down from the Heavenly Father's house. Who could ever git any better news dan dat? His sins was forgiven. And dey was too, I felt the power when de Lord teched him. Dis here Huston man, cowboy, he is de messenger of de Lord, dat's what he is. I watch him aroun here, reading dat Bible of his. I knowed dey was sompin to him. He aint got no business lassoing cows, he ought to be lassoing sinners. You can't fool dis here ole nigger woman. Dis Huston man, he some Jonah. He's a-runnin away from de Lord and de Lord done cotch up wid him and use him spite of hisself. I done been watching him all de time. I believe long ago dat he name wasn't Huston, he name wus Jonah. Mr. Jonah better watch out too, a whale gona git him toreckly."

Then the old colored woman broke into a shout, and danced about the camp, the tears trickling down the cheeks of the doctor and a number of the cowboys.

They arranged a bunk for the doctor, the men quietly retired while Huston walked far out on the plains, sat down and leaned back upon the snag of a dead muskeet bush and looked into the heavens. It was a cloudless, moonless night, the vast blue dome of the sky was filled with stars that seemed to look down with wonder and pity upon the suffering human race. Huston looked back over his brief but checkered history, and the tears trickled down his cheek as he became conscious that his old faith, only a much better faith had all come back to him. God seemed so great, so present, and so gracious. All his skepticism had fled away. The old colored woman's exhortations had reminded him of what he had believed to be a call to preach in his boyhood. He thought of it seriously but was not fully convinced that it had been a divine call, but a boyish ambition. Later in the night he went to the camp, laid down upon his bunk and with the old glow of rest and peace in his soul he fell asleep.

Reader, friend of mine, do not forget about the stars on nights when your burdens are heavy and your faith is weak and doubts knock at the door of your soul. Go out into the silence, get away from any noise to disturb you or to distract your attention. Look up into the Heavens, gaze long and quietly at the stars, let them speak to you that "the hand that made us is divine." Calm yourself, rebuke your doubts, believe in the great Creator of the universe, and believe that he is deeply interested in you.

than shipwrecked sailors watch for the morning. They have hungered and thirsted for him, and they have found him. And when they found him they burst into flame. "Our God is a consuming fire," and holy fire kindles in every soul that lives with him.

In a town I was recently visiting a school-boy's cap was thrown up, and lodged on an electric wire. A friendly boy climbed up the pole, and, reaching for the cap, was smitten dead by the electric fire. So fire of holiness and love flashes through one who touches God, slaying the old life, leaving a new man in place of the old—a man with new desires, new passions and tempers, new hopes and affections, new ambitions and visions. But while the man is new the religion is old—old as Pentecost and Calvary; old as thundering, smoking, flaming Sinai, and the burning bush that Moses saw; old as Abraham and Enoch and Abel.

The men of fire are men of faith. They believe God, and they burn because they believe. They believe God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him (Hebrews 11:6). The men of fire have seasons of solitude for secret prayer. They get alone with God, as Jesus did in his all-nights of prayer, as John did in the wilderness, as Moses did on Sinai, as Elijah did on Horeb, and there in deep meditation and fellowship with him they see how small and transient is the world with its prizes and its pomp.

The men of fire love God. They love his people, his house, his service. They love righteousness and holiness, and they hate sin and every evil way. They turn away their ears from that which they should not hear. They stand on guard at the gateway of eye and ear and every sense, lest sin get into their hearts through unguarded ways.

The men of fire are self-sacrificing and self-denying. They do not entangle themselves with the affairs of this life any more than does the good soldier who goes forth to war. They do not mix with men of the world except to do them good and, if possible, win them to Christ. They guard the fire in their hearts as their sole protection upon earth and their passport to Heaven.

We Have An Altar.

Listen to God, dear friend: "We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat who serve the tabernacle." Is your spirit asking whether it is an "altar most holy?" sufficient to warrant the expectation that the altar will sanctify the gift which you lay upon it? Let the Holy Spirit answer: "We are sanctified through the offering of the body of Christ, once for all." (Heb. 10:10). The ancient altar was sanctified by modes of purification prescribed by the law; and now, "if the blood of bulls and goats, and the ashes of an heifer, sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who, through the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works, to serve the living God?" Christ speaks: "For their sakes I sanctify myself, that they may be sanctified through the truth." (John 17:19). Who can portray the guilt of that unbelief which prompts the offerer at the Christian's altar to doubt whether, when he lays his offering upon the altar, it will be sanctified?

God's Unbreakable Covenant.

"Thus saith Jehovah, 'If ye can break My covenant of the day, and My covenant of the night, so that there shall not be day and night in their season; then may also My covenant be broken with David My servant, that he shall not have a son to reign upon his throne.'"—Jeremiah 33:20. God's covenant of the day and night is this: "While the earth remaineth, . . . day and night shall not cease."—Genesis 8:22.

The rotation of the earth on its axis, bringing to us the succession of light and darkness, is God's ever renewed pledge of his faithfulness to his promise to David that he should have a son to sit on his throne forever. So long as this globe spins about its axis, so long as man cannot stop it, so long will God's covenant with David hold good! Of Jesus, as yet unborn, it was declared, "The Lord God will give unto him the throne of his father, David"—Luke 1:32. All of this is reassured to us in the succession of day and night. Not only has God promised, but he reminds himself and us of his promise, with every rising and setting of the sun! As certainly as we count on the sunrise each morning, so certainly may we count on the return of Jesus to earth, to take the throne of David at Jerusalem! And, linked up with this promise, are all God's promises to us, for both the present and the future, for time and eternity, for this life and the next. When the sun disappears in the west, and night envelops us, that only says to us that God's covenant with us is sure, it cannot fail! Amen! A. S. H.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS.

The watchword chosen for the revival meetings recently held in the First Evangelical Church of Lowell, Mass., was "Faith is the victory that overcometh." The promise selected was, "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in Heaven."

At the beginning of practically every service during the meetings this battle cry and this promise were repeated together by the pastor and congregation. And God answered believing, united prayer. There was real victory for the Kingdom. The Holy Spirit fell and salvation came.

Rev. Gilbert Laite was the evangelist. With his humble, Christlike spirit, with his affectionate earnestness, with his fidelity in proclaiming the fundamentals of the Gospel, he greatly endeared himself to his hearers. Emphatically a man of prayer, indubitably one who knows the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ, he declared with power the glad tidings of pardon and Pentecost.

An unusual feature of the ten-days' meetings was the results obtained among the young people of the church. A goodly number of them entered into the joy of salvation through the blood of Jesus. There is a winemess about the personality of Rev. Laite that is very evidently Christ-created. His messages were in demonstration and power of the Spirit.

Miss Helen Emery, a senior from Eastern Nazarene College, assisted in the singing and was a real factor in the meeting's success. This consecrated young woman, with a personality very winsome with the indwelling Christ, made ineffaceable impressions on the minds of those who heard her sing and testify and pray at the altar services.

The meetings meant much to the older members of the church, many of whom came to a richer and more glorious realization of their privileges in the grace of God. The membership has been greatly quickened. It is believed that the end of meetings will be the beginning of the greatest work of the Spirit.

The writer cannot commend Brother Laite too highly. There is a sweetness and saneness about him at the same time that he stands unqualifiedly for the tremendous truths of salvation and complete emancipation from sin which make him the ideal evangelist. His influence over young people is marvelous.

In the earlier part of the coming summer he expects to go to California to make his home there. On his way to the coast he will be available for revival meetings. Pastors can do a great thing for their churches in engaging him for such services. They should write him at once; his address is 12 Upland Road, Everett, Mass.

Minister and laymen of the First Evangelical Church, Lowell, and many others, will thank God forever that he permitted Rev. Gilbert Laite to labor among them. E. Wayne Stahl, Pastor.

A GRACIOUS REVIVAL.

First I want to say, there are three things in this old world I love; they have helped me so much in my Christian life: Asbury College, The Pentecostal Herald and Dr. Morrison. I have been in a Methodist Church for thirty years and did not get under conviction until an Asbury boy came to Lynch as our pastor and preached the old-time gospel of full salvation in Jesus. This Asbury boy was W. P. Davis, our pastor for three years. Every year he was here the Lord gave us a good revival. The Lord saved me the first year he was here. Six months later, July 27, 1927, I was sanctified wholly at Wilmore camp meeting. I was the first member of Lynch M. E. Church to be sanctified. Now we have thirty members sanctified. The last conference Bro. Davis was sent to Corbin First Church and Bro. P. F. Adams sent to Lynch, and the Lord gave us a glorious revival—46 saved, 25 sanctified, 21 reclaimed, and the saints edified; thirty united with the church. I never in all my life saw so many precious souls rising up from an altar of prayer with shining faces and the glory of heaven beaming through their eyes. It was truly an old-time, Holy Ghost, heaven-sent revival with old-time praying, old-time shouting and old-time victory. Some of the saints shouted most every service. Praise God the days of revivals are not past.

The pastor, P. F. Adams, did the preaching and Rev. Percy Brown, of Salem, Va., led the singing.

FORAKER, OKLAHOMA.

We have just closed our three-weeks' revival at Foraker, Okla., M. E. Church. There were thirty at the altar for conversion, all of whom have joined our church. But the greatest work perhaps was the revival of the church in the reclamation of backsliders.

Evangelist Alfred Sturgeon, of Macomb, Illinois, did the preaching. True man of God that he is, he plowed deep, showing the people what it meant to claim discipleship of Jesus Christ. He preaches the justice and judgment of God with love as few men can. The church here is in better condition spiritually than it has been for years. Enemies who had not spoken for a year made up and buried their grudges under the melting power of the Gospel. The pastor expects to win men to Christ who previously had not even attended church as a result of the revival. The entire village felt the power of the meetings. Indeed it was of the old-fashioned type, proving the efficacy of the Gospel of Jesus Christ even in this modern day.

Although the offering was very meager, Brother Sturgeon showed not the least sign of resentment or dissatisfaction, but manifested such a spirit that proved to the people he had the experience he preached to others. Praise God for an experience that really works when it ought to work.

G. C. Hutchins, Pastor.

NEW SMYRNA, FLORIDA.

It gives me great joy to write you that we have just closed a gracious revival in Harriman, Tenn. That church has one of the finest pastors we have ever assisted. He is rich in grace, wide-awake as a pastor, having made over one thousand visits last year. He is a real Christian and on fire for souls. A great asset to a revival. We ran three weeks. This gives time to organize, drill your forces and get sinners really saved.

We organized the whole church and say they were going day and night too. We preached six times a day: 8 o'clock at High, 9 o'clock in some store, 2:30 at church, 6 P. M. to Boosters, at 7:15 P. M. to all, and high noon to factories. One hundred were saved at the altar. Dr. Roe, District Superintendent, was with us most of the three weeks. Great crowds. Young people were saved right down at the altar. God was with us in mighty power.

Love wins. Love charms, rifts dark ugly clouds, dispels all fear, burns up worry. Love turns a choir of mockers loose in one's soul and those sweet bird notes of love turns night to day, sadness to joy, weakness to strength, ignorance to wisdom. Love fills one with a joy that is unspeakable and full of joy. Love puts that passion into us for lost souls and pushes us out into his great white harvest field, hunting earnestly the lost. Love puts a fellow feeling, warm feeling for the poor blind sinner. Love drives us hours to our knees, crying over the lost.

We had a great revival at Harriman, Tenn. That charming pastor, Dr. Cooper, and his most excellent wife did most all the work. My, how they went day and night. It is no wonder that people love and honor them. They really love the people.

We start well here; altar packed and aisles full second service. Think of it, people sitting—too without singing—make invitation—second service and over 65 at altar. God is here.

We go next with Dr. Ragan and our great college at Athens, Tenn. We had a revival at Jellico, Tenn., with Dr. Ragan; 151 saved and 151 joined the Methodist Church. String all fish as you catch them. We are expecting a great revival at Athens, Tenn. Begin there the last Sunday in February.

God bless the grand, glorious old faithful Herald. Bill Harney.

LONDON, OHIO.

We have just enjoyed a very great treat in the form of a two-weeks' revival meeting in our church at LaFayette with Rev. and Mrs. T. C. Henderson as evangelists. We have known these folks in other days but we never knew them to sing the Gospel more winsomely nor preach it more truly than during this meeting.

It was a rare privilege to listen to those great, thoughtful, searching, soul-stirring messages of divine truth. Our hearts are always made to rejoice when one exalts our glorious Christ as a mighty Redeemer from all sin.

While the attendance was somewhat affected by sickness and some severe weather, yet there were some very definite victories and the angels were made to rejoice over those who repented and found God's promises true. As Brother Henderson and I called and prayed in the homes, some confessed their need and returned to God. The good seed that was sown is continuing to bear fruit.

The church has received a spiritual uplift that is manifesting itself in the prayer meetings and in a new concern for the salvation of the lost. There was a deepening of the spiritual life.

May God continue to use and bless these precious people as they proclaim a full Gospel to a great needy, sin-cursed world. R. R. Weld, Pastor.

REPORT.

The LeRoy J. Mitchell Evangelist Party closed a very successful union campaign at Diagonal, Iowa, January 21st. The Lord graciously heard and answered the prayers of his children. Church members were revived and set on fire. Many souls were saved. Fifty young people consecrated their lives to God for life service wherever he shall lead. We praise God for his blessing upon our work. The Party went to Blair, Neb., for a campaign after closing the work at Diagonal.

REPORT OF BRO. YOON, KOREAN CHURCH, TOKYO, JAPAN.

Bro. Yoon is happy to report that there are marks of a revival and that he is encouraged to work more earnestly than before to see a real Pentecostal outpouring upon the church. God is working. Praise his Name!

In comparing the statistics this month with those of a year ago Bro. Yoon was blessed to note the marked progress. The attendance has increased, the offerings have increased and there are greater numbers of souls seeking the Lord. Several of the Christians left the church this month because of moving to other places on account of their work, and although Bro. Yoon said good-bye to them in tears he exhorted them to be true to the Lord, to attend a good Christian church and to preach the precious Gospel of Jesus Christ to others. He has since had good reports from them, that they are serving the Lord and have had many seekers as the result of their personal work. From one of these Bro. Yoon had an urgent request to come and preach the Gospel and in this letter there was money enclosed for his travelling expenses. Bro. Yoon prayed about this and felt led to go, so appointed another one of the believers to help Bro. Kim, the deacon, in the oversight of the work. He therefore left Tokyo on the 16th and visited Aijiken and Shonshu. In both of these places he preached the unsearchable riches of Christ and pointed men and women to Jesus, the Saviour of the world. God is blessing the work being done for him in these places and has given a number of very earnest believers.

One day while Bro. Yoon was doing personal work in Aijiken he went to a certain home and began to talk with the man of the house. He refused the truth and hit Bro. Yoon on the head. About that time Bro. Yoon saw the man's wife in another room of the house weeping so he asked her the cause of her sorrow, to which she replied, "Our family was once a happy Christian family when we lived in Korea, and my husband is a graduate of the Theological school at Pyeng Yang. After he graduated he was a pastor for nine years in South Ham Kyung and Seoul, but his position was taken away from him and he became discouraged and fell back from grace. After that we came here and for three years we have been unhappy and I have had pains both in my soul and body. A few days ago I heard that you were going to preach here so I went to the meeting without my husband's permission. When I returned home my husband beat me very hard and now he has just beat me again."

As Bro. Yoon listened to this sad story the tears came to his eyes and he began to preach more earnestly to the husband. The Holy Spirit sent the message direct to his heart and immediately his attitude changed. Soon he was seeking the Lord and Bro. Yoon had the joy of leading both he and his wife to the church. Bro. Yoon was only in Aijiken about eight days but during that time God gave him eighty-six seekers and nine definite converts. Praise his Name!

On the 16th Bro. Yoon was privileged to visit a silk mill and conduct an evangelistic service from 7:00 to 9:30 P. M. Four hundred and fifty-six factory girls heard the gospel preached in this meeting. Bro. Yoon sang both in Korean and Japanese, and throughout the service there was splendid interest. He told them about sin, repentance, eternal life and the power of the blood of Jesus Christ, and as he talked the Holy Spirit dealt with their hearts. After he had finished some one asked if this salvation was for everybody who would repent of their sins, so it was Bro. Yoon's joy to tell them of a free salvation which had been made possible for "whosoever will." An old woman then stood to her feet, confessed her sinful life and began to seek the Lord. Others followed until many of these factory girls were seeking the Lord in all earnestness. Bro. Yoon felt that work upon the hearts of these women and led many of them into true knowledge of himself.

GOVE CITY, KANSAS.

On January 13 we closed a very successful meeting at the Gove City M. E. Church of which Rev. Claude Scheuerman is the pastor. Bro. Scheuerman is an old Asbury boy of the class of '27 and stands for the ideals of Asbury. God bless him and his people. The meeting was a success because the altar was filled a number of times with seekers and many testified to being either helped in some way, reclaimed, regenerated or sanctified. A fine class of fourteen members were received into the church on the last Sunday morning. Twelve of these were baptized by the pastor. The altar was filled on Sunday night which was the closing service, and every seeker claimed to get through. We gladly give all the praise to Jesus who honored us by the gracious presence of His Spirit. Amen.

Yours in Him,

save the multitudes, and undoubtedly they have, the very doctrines being proclaimed in our camp meetings, conventions and revivals are the same truths that were preached by the founders of Methodism. God blessed these truths in producing the greatest revival in history. There never would have been a Methodist Church if a band of consecrated men had not preached these truths.

If the holiness people have these truths they are under the highest possible obligation to promulgate and preach them. We must seek to raise up, educate, and send forth through the channels of the churches, an army of wholly consecrated, entirely sanctified, Spirit-filled men to preach to the people the cleansing power of Jesus' blood, and the absolute necessity of that cleansing. Do we who profess this experience fully realize the importance of passing it on? Are we wholly consecrated? Does God own us and our substance? Have we consecrated in deed and in truth, and are we using our consecrated substance to the very best advantage? These are serious questions we would do well to consider.

If five thousand of the Lord's people could fully appreciate the obligations and opportunities which are offered us, directly, with the cheerful assistance of the Lord's sanctified people, we could build up one of the largest Theological schools on the continent. Drove of young men who have been called to the ministry are begging for admission to our halls. With the call of God upon them, and with the great need of such men throughout the nation, I am made bold to urge upon the consecrated people of God to re-examine their consecration. Some people will read these words who could give to this work ten thousand dollars; others could give five thousand, many could give one thousand, others could give five hundred, a host could give two hundred and fifty, a multitude could give one hundred, thousands could give fifty and twenty-five, a great number could give ten, five, and one. If the Lord's people could have seen what I have seen, and felt and suffered these past seventeen years, they would contribute the money to build halls, recitation rooms, and dormitories to house an army of young men and young women whom God has called into his service.

Sometimes I become very tired of pleading and begging. Sometimes I am tempted to turn aside from the battle and seek relaxation and rest, but I cannot, I dare not. We have the truth, the truth that will save, the truth that God will bless, the truth that, with a fair chance, will sweep our nation for God and the good of humanity.

Reader, please examine your consecration. See if you have really placed your all upon the altar. See if God can call upon you for practical help in this spiritual emergency of the nation. Cannot we hold faithfully to these old Bible truths, rise up with a new courage, with a holy zeal, and do something that will count and witness to the world after our task is done?

One of our greatest needs at this time is the increase of our Loan Fund for young ministers. This is of vital importance. Can you not contribute something, large or small, to this fund? Send same to Mrs. H. C. Morrison, care PENTECOSTAL HERALD, Louisville, Ky. This matter is of such vital importance that I cannot remain silent and fail to give opportunity to those who are ready and willing to give assistance in this great work.

H. C. MORRISON.

FAITHFUL UNTO DEATH.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

IN the race of life there are many who start out with fine prospects for a successful final outcome; and they really are sincere in the anticipations they have of being a victor when they come to the end of the way. But we are reminded that this race is beset with enemies of righteousness on every hand, enemies whose business it is to "deceive even the very elect, if possible." This being true, we are reminded of the words of the old hymn,

"How careful then, ought I to live,

With what religious fear;

Who such a strict account must give

For my behaviour here."

Our Master knew the power of the material over the spiritual when he used that striking illustration about the care of this life choking out the good seed of the word of life; and I dare say, that most of us are guilty at this very point, for it is easy to become so encumbered with the daily routine of life's duties that we neglect the more important, yea, the "one thing needful" which, Martha in her hurry and bustle to have the material in perfect order, neglected.

We are also admonished in the blessed Book to "take no thought for the morrow," for the morrow will take thought for the things that pertain thereto. If this were a timely admonition at the time it was first given, how much more is it today, when the world is rushing from morning until night, and even through the night, busying itself with that which they hope will answer the cravings of their hearts, only to be disappointed and sent in search of a new and untried source of pleasure.

When Christian, in "Pilgrim's Progress," set out on the Christian race, there were voices many calling him to stop and remain where he was, amid the gaieties and frivolities of life; but he put his fingers in his ears and started afresh, crying, "Life! Life! Eternal life!" The goal of his ambition was to secure eternal life, notwithstanding the voices of the world that sought to discourage him. If he had heeded the suggestions of the would-be friends who begged him to stay with them, in their pleasure and vain pursuits, he would have been of that number about whom it is written, "It were better for that man if he had never been born."

No! Christian did not sail to heaven on "flowery beds of ease," but through great tribulations he reached the goal of his ardent pursuit. He had to go through the "slough of despond," the temptations of "vanity fair," the deceptions of the "enchanted castle," the cleansing processes of fiery trials and keen sufferings, but he "endured as seeing him who is invisible" and ran patiently the race that was set before him, finally reaching the dark river whose turbulent stream did not frighten him, but as he waded into it, he found his faithful companion by his side to uphold and deliver.

This allegory of John Bunyan pictures the experiences of the man or woman who would set out on the Christian race for life and eternal glory. We are beset on every hand by the lions of destruction, but if we walk fearlessly on, trusting our never failing Friend to keep us, we shall find as we approach, what we counted our enemies, that the power of God had preceded us and chained them just the right distance to insure our escape.

There are times in life when we, apparently, see no way of escape from the arch enemy of our souls; when, like Jacob, we feel that "all these things are against me"; but if we will "trust and not be afraid," we shall come off more than conqueror through him who loved us and gave himself for us. It is at such times that "grace is a charming sound," and we are made to stretch out full length upon the never failing promises of our heavenly Father, and to prove that his word is equal to any emergency of life. We can then vouch for the truth of the statement that, "he is able to make all grace abound toward us, that we, having all sufficiency in all things, many abound unto every good work."

But the thought that I would impress upon each one who reads these lines, and upon myself as well, is that it is only to the one who endures to the end that the crown of life is given. It matters not how much speed we may have as we enter the race, but do we keep up our speed until the end is reached? It is to the "faithful unto death" that the crown is promised.

actly what the Christians have been telling us all the time: that God, who made the world and the universe, has become one of us, has taken upon himself our nature, has been made in the likeness of sinful flesh!"

And Jesus of history was tired out at the end of the day's march, weary from his labors, heart broken at man's rejection of him and the Father whom he represented. All the range of human emotions were felt by the Man in the seamless robe. Wherever poverty was found there was the Man of Galilee. Wherever human agony was felt there was the bloody sweat of Gethsemane. Wherever was seen the blighting hand of death there was the skull-shaped hill crowned by its gaunt, bloody Cross. God came into this world and stood in visible form before the crowds of men and in an audible voice cried from the depths of his breaking heart, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

So the glad message for humanity everywhere is that God may be found, that God may be enjoyed, that fellowship with him may be a daily reality, and eternal life with him a settled fact. Whosoever will may come. "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out."

Now for the second text: "He pleased God." This statement is also fraught with profound significance. Perfect fellowship must ever hinge on certain prerequisites. A harmonious home means not only love in that home but obedience as well. Ever the true test of sonship is found in unswerving obedience. Since every good gift and every perfect gift cometh from God, since we owe God everything, we must then first of all render unto him our perfect obedience and perfect allegiance. How then can we please God?

Should you be a parent, ask, "How can my child please me?" To encompass this result there must be the knowing one of another. The child cannot please his parent unless he knows him, his wishes, his desires. We cannot be well pleasing unto God and be ignorant of his nature, of his will, of his desires. How may we know? We may learn of God by reading his Word. Said the Psalmist, "His delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night." Many men are ignorant of God's will because they are ignorant of God's Word. Just as letters between lovers make for a better understanding and a more certain spirit of unity, so does God's love letter to a lost world reveal to the world his nature, his will, his desire, his love. We learn to know him by conversing with him through the medium of prayer. Effective praying consists not only in pouring out to him the desire of our hearts but in maintaining as well the listening ear so that he may also pour out to us the wealth of his heart. Perfect faith in him adds to this blessed fellowship. He knoweth our every need and hath promised to supply that need. He hath said, "I will be with thee." "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." To his heartbroken disciples Christ said, "Lo, I am with thee always, even unto the end of the world." With prevailing prayer and faith, then, it matters not that we do not see him for we can truly say,

"What though thy form I cannot see?
I know and feel that thou art near."

Andrew Bonar tells of a devout man, whom in his college days he often noticed walking the streets of Edinburgh and ever and anon he would lift his hat and walk bareheaded. When asked why he did this, he replied, "As I talk to Jesus, he comes so near to me that I am obliged to take off my hat in his holy presence."

Let us then sum up the secret of Enoch's ability to walk with God and to be well pleasing to him. "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanses us from all sin." Behold the golden trinity here implied: light, fellowship, cleansing. He who walks then in perfect accord with God must, like God, be holy. The prerequisite is a cleansed heart, for the pure in heart are to see God. "This then is the will of God even your sanctification." "Follow peace with all men and holiness without which no man shall see God." "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

The secret, then, is revealed. God hath in his Word laid down the terms by which we enter into this marvelous fellowship. Shall we in the noonday of the dispensation of the Holy Spirit live beneath the privileges and with a lesser life than that found by Enoch in the grey morning of man's history? God forbid. He who is the same, yesterday, today, and forever, is calling us today into that same blessed communion which Enoch and a host of other shining souls enjoyed in the yesterdays.

Back in the days of long ago,
In the age of primitive man;
When nations great and kingdoms famed
Were born in the tribe and the clan;
The sun-kissed hills of old Chaldee,
Like the waves of a billowy sea
Were flecked with white of flock and tent
In that land of the nomad free:

There Enoch walked with God.

Among strange peoples, rude and wild,
Where superstition reigned, and sin;
One soul was strong, one heart beat true,
One found the way and went therein;
Ah! slow the steps in that grey morn
When man assayed to walk with God;
O wondrous love, that condescends
To halt with them that only plod:

While Enoch walked with God.

There 'neath the vaulted star-decked sky,—
The awesome glory of the night—

In that calm hour when Faith leads on
To realms beyond the reach of sight,
There in that sweet communion time
No whisper from above was missed
By him of old, who loved to meet
With God alone in keeping tryst:

For Enoch walked with God.

O'er hill and plain and thru the vale
By waters still and pastures green,
Though years had come, and years had gone,
Yet Enoch walked with One unseen;
When with the setting of the sun
The gates celestial opened wide,
Jehovah led the man of earth
Within to join the glorified.

And Enoch walked with God.

If yonder in the early dawn
Man learned to follow all the way,
Then we by faith may walk with him,
For brighter shines the light today:
O may we from this man of old
The message read, so clear and plain—

That God is Love, and as of yore,
He walks and talks with man again.
As Enoch walked with God.

May we e'er keep the goal in view,
Nor falter in life's trying hour;
The crown awaits, friends on before
Behold his majesty and power:
The great are there—bright stars they shine
In heaven's constellations grand—
May we, O Lord, thy children here
Be worthy to possess that land

Where Enoch walked with God.

THE PLAN OF SALVATION.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

THE Philippian Jailer asked the greatest question ever propounded by man, "What must I do to be saved?" He wanted to know the way of life and salvation. He asked one who was an authority on the subject and received from him in plain and direct language the correct answer—"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." (Acts 16:31). Saving faith, as mentioned in this connection, is the final climax and culmination of conditions on the part of the seeking sinner. Salvation, according to the Scripture, is a personal concernment, an individual matter and a conditional affair. While salvation is of God nevertheless the sinner must meet the conditions laid down in the Bible upon which this free salvation is graciously bestowed.

The sinner cannot merit salvation by good works, but must comply with the gospel plan of salvation by putting himself in the proper attitude where God will be pleased to abundantly pardon and receive him into the kingdom. The sinner does not have to do good works in order to be saved, but he has to be saved in order to do good works. He does not have to keep the Ten Commandments in order to be saved, but he has to be saved in order to keep the Ten Commandments. Being comes before doing. Salvation, however, is conditional. The conditionality of salvation in the scheme of redemption is plainly seen from the following considerations: The government of God implies law; law implies sanctions; sanctions imply conditions. It is also deduced from the doctrine of probation. All men are in a state of trial. There is a test, an investigation and an appropriate reward. The very nature of the gospel proves the principle of conditionality. It comes to us in the form of a covenant and a covenant is a contract between two parties—God on the divine side and man on the human side. The words "if" and "except" as they occur in the Bible teach that there are conditions or requirements to be met by the sinner in order that he may be saved.

We will now sum up these conditions:

1. Intellectual or historical faith. He that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him (Heb. 11:6). Without faith it is impossible to please God. Faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the Word of God. (Rom. 10:17).

2. Intense desire. No one can be saved unless he earnestly desires to be saved. One thing have I desired, said the Psalmist, and that will I seek after (Psa. 27:4). The desire for salvation must be intense and all-consuming. It must be the strongest desire ever awakened in the broad realms of the human soul. The sinner must want to be saved more than he wants anything else in this world.

3. Decision. Multitudes in the valley of decision. The day of the Lord is near in the valley of decision. Choose ye this day whom you will serve. I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing, therefore choose ye life that both thou and thy seed may live. (Deut. 30:19). How often would I have gathered you, but you would not. Whosoever will, let him take up the water of life freely. I will arise and go to my Father. The sinner must make a definite choice and fully decide for Christ. This calls into play the voluntary exercise of the human will, the great mogul of humanity and the deciding factor of eternal destiny.

4. Repentance. Mere decision, as great as it is, is not sufficient. It must be followed and supplemented by true evangelical repentance. As soon as the sinner decides to be a Christian God puts the cup of repentance to his lips. It is the bitterest cup that the sinner has ever drunk. What then is implied in repentance? Three things:—a change of mind, contrition of heart and reformation of life. Repentance in brief means that the sinner must be so sorry for his sins that he will give them all up now, henceforth and forever. Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish. (Luke 13:3). Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. As ministers of the gospel we must ring the changes on the doctrine of repentance. There is absolutely no hope for the finally impenitent sinner. The penitent sinner, on the other hand, is very near the kingdom. In fact there is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth.

5. Surrender. This step is generally included under the head of repentance. The seeking sinner is supposed to surrender to God. There must be in every real case of salvation an unconditional surrender to the Almighty on the part of the penitent sinner. He must throw down his puny arms of rebellion against God.

6. Prayer. The real seeker after salvation must and will pray. Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. (Rom. 10:13). Ask and it shall be given; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you. (Matt. 7:7). The penitent's prayer is "God be merciful to me, the sinner."

7. Appropriating faith. The final phase of the condition of salvation is real, genuine, heart evangelical appropriating faith. He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life. (Jno. 3:36). According to your faith, so be it unto you. Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. (Rom. 5:1). Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved (Acts 16:31). What then must the sinner do in order to be saved? He must exercise head, historical or intellectual faith; he must have an intense desire to be saved; he must thoroughly make up his mind and definitely decide to be saved; he must truly repent of all his sins; he must surrender himself to God; he must earnestly pray to God for salvation; last, but not least, he must accept Christ as his personal Savior and trust him alone for present tense, here and now, salvation.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Can an Arkansas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I'm in the ninth grade. I am fourteen years old. My birthday is May 29. I have light hair and brown eyes. I weigh 95 pounds I go to Sunday school every Sunday and I sure do enjoy it. We only have Church once a month. I go most every time. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading all sermons and also page ten. As this is my first letter to The Herald I had better not take up too much room. I hope to see this letter in print. I will answer all letters I receive.

Audrey B. Smith,
Forrest City, Arkansas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am 10 years old and in the fifth grade. My birthday is August 31. I have blue eyes, fair complexion and red hair. I am four feet, three inches tall. I hope to see my letter in print. I belong to the Methodist church. Father takes The Herald. I enjoy reading page 10. This is my first letter to The Herald. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with M and ends with n. It has six letters in it. Morris M. Weir.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little West Virginia girl join your happy band of Boys and Girls? My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it very much, especially page ten. I am fourteen years old, and a Freshman in Spencer High School. My birthday is Oct 4. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I am a Christian, and I belong to the Methodist Protestant Church at Spencer. Who can answer these questions? How many words, verses, chapters and letters does the Bible contain? How many centuries did it take to write the Bible? How many books are in the Bible? How many authors wrote the Bible? The one who can answer these questions correctly I will write them and also send a snapshot of myself. I will answer all letters received from the cousins.

Verla Jean Rowe,
211 Spring St., Spencer, West Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl twelve years old join your happy band of boys and girls? I am in the fourth grade at school. I like to go to school. I have a good teacher, Miss Alma A. Murray. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I have been reading the Children's Page a good while and I like it very much. I have light hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I have only one brother, eleven years old. We go to Sunday School when we can.

Thelma Inez Parnell, Shuqualak, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading The Pentecostal Herald and am very much interested in it. I have been a Christian for about two months and do find it much harder to live than just a common ordinary person would, but I certainly do find much joy and happiness in living the way that Christ would like us to. I have found that friendship is the triple alliance—love, sympathy and help. Do you know what it is to live a Christian life? Well, I do. I also have a sister who tries to lead a life as a Christian would, and her name is Yolanda. She is thirteen years old. We are the only two Christians in our family and are praying daily that our parents might become Christians also. I am fifteen years of age and would like to answer any letters from those who find it interesting in writing to me. I am praying for the ones who read this letter that God may lead and direct you all in the right way.

Mary Beldina,
236 Line Street, Camden, N. J.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I am a Christian and belong to the Methodist Church. I go to Sunday school and preaching every Sunday I can. I am fourteen years old, five feet, three inches tall, weigh 105 pounds, have dark brown hair (long) brown eyes, and medium complexion. My birthday is Feb. 9. Have I a twin? I have no brothers or sisters, so you see I am lonely. I go to school, and am in the eighth grade. I received my diploma last year, but I am not going to High School. I will ring off. As this is my first letter hope to see it in print. I would like to correspond with you cousins. Will try and answer all letters received.

Jennie Miller,
Rt. 1, Box 36, Terra Alta, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Rap! Rap! Rap! May I join your happy circle of boys and girls? I am a little country girl between ten and fourteen years of age. Will some one guess my age? I am a reader of The Herald and like to read the Boys and Girls' Page very much. Do you boys and girls have pets? My pets are the broom, duster and dish cloth. I like to help mama with the housework. I'll leave room for some one else, but please print my letter as I'm very anxious to see it in print.

Julia Cheatham, Inroad, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Alabama girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I am nine years old and in the third grade at school. I have brown eyes and hair. My birthday is June 7. I go to school on a truck. We have four teachers. My teacher is Miss Jewell Huey. We live on a little farm; we have cows, chickens, and hogs and one mule, so I hope to help father work on the farm. I have two brothers and two sisters but I am the oldest. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My class is named "Busy Bee." I make handwork books in Sunday school. Father is superintendent. How long did it take Noah to build the Ark? And how long did it rain?

Bernice Lorene Williamson,
Rt. 1, Wedowee, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am an evangelist and someone subscribed to The Herald for me and this morning I read the Boys and Girls' Page for the first time. It is truly wonderful to find so many young people everywhere who are zealous for souls. I am sixteen and I want to say that in all the world there is no joy like being a soul-winner. Before my conversion, five years ago, I was studying to be a professional dancer and a brilliant future was predicted. Once I longed to see my name in the bright lights of Broadway, but now, thank God, my name is written in the Lamb's Book of Life and this is far more precious. I would be happy to hear from the cousins and especially those who have been on the field singing or preaching the gospel. This year the Lord has permitted my mother, eleven-year-old brother Bruce who is a child gospel singer, and myself to take the story of Jesus from Mexico to Canada on the Pacific Coast. I expect to go East next spring so perhaps I shall meet you, my new Auntie.

Halleine Smith,
2005 N. Bronson Ave., Hollywood, Cal.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little eight-year-old South Carolina boy have a space in The Pentecostal Herald to write a few lines? I go to school and I mind my teacher and study my lessons hard. My uncle was reading in The Herald. I asked him to write this for me and he did. I enjoy reading news from cousins all over the world. I go to Sunday school at the Baptist Church every time I can.

Martin Watford,
Rt. 5, Timmonsville, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Florida girl join your happy band of girls and boys? As you see I hail from the "land of sunshine and flowers." I am seventeen years old, have brown hair, gray eyes, medium complexion and weigh 108 pounds. I am a junior in LaBelle High School, and am a member of the Methodist Epworth League. I like outdoor sports and also like to read. Oliver Curwood is my favorite author. My sister has written several letters to The Herald, but this is my first one and I do so hope to see it in print. I would like to hear from some of the boys and girls about my age. I would like to hear from some, especially in Missouri. I will say good-bye to the cousins and Aunt Bettie, hoping you all have a happy New Year.

Ruby O. Bannon,
Box 191, LeBelle, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kansas girl join your happy band of girls and boys? We go to church every Sunday it is possible. I am six years old. I have two sisters and two brothers. The oldest is ten and the youngest is four years old. My oldest sister was eight Dec. 12; my youngest sister is one. This is my second letter to The Herald.

Eva A. McAleaster,
Tribune, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have written to The Herald once and Mr. W. B. didn't succeed in getting my letter so I thought I would write again. My little brother has been sick most all of this week and couldn't go to school on that account. I have two sisters and three brothers; one of my brothers is dead. I must leave room for others. Some of you cousins write to me. Will answer all letters I receive.

Maggie Belle Pouncey.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. I am thirteen years old. My birthday is June 9. I am four feet and six inches tall, have black hair, blue eyes, and have a dark complexion. We have just begun to take The Herald. I enjoy reading it very much. I like to read page ten best of all. I belong to the Methodist Church. My mother and father are living, also my grandparents, and I am very glad of this.

Cleo Taylor,
Farmerville, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been a reader of your page for quite awhile. I enjoy reading the letters and am glad to know that so many are Christians. I am a Christian and belong to the M. E. Church at Olive Chapel. Also I am a Sunday school teacher of the Primary Class. Teaching children the word of God is what I enjoy doing. My father is a Methodist preacher. I am a lover of music, especially piano music, which I can play very well. My home is in the country. I live on a large farm and enjoy raising flowers and love nature. I have two sisters and a mother and father. My age is eighteen years. This is my first letter and I hope to see it in print. My greatest desire is to win more souls to Christ.

Katherine Allen,
Rt. 8, Mt. Vernon, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a West Virginia girl join your band of boys and girls? This is the second time I have written to The Herald. I am ten years old, have fair complexion and blue eyes. My birthday is November 14. Have I a twin? Who can guess my first name? It begins with L and ends with A, and has five letters in it. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to Sunday school and school every day, and haven't missed Sunday school for a long time. I live close to the church and schoolhouse. I have twelve brothers and sisters, but one sister is dead. Four sisters and one brother are married. Well I must stop writing now for fear Mr. W. B. gets it. I would like it if some of the cousins would write to me.

Alice O'Dell,
Mt. Nebo, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a Texas girl to join your happy band of boys and girls. What's the matter with us over here? I am a Christian and belong to the First Nazarene Church in Tyler, Texas. I am so glad that most of the cousins are Christians. I was fourteen years old June 23. Who has my birthday? I am about five feet, six inches tall and weigh a hundred and five pounds. My hair is dark and hangs in curls. I have light complexion and brown eyes. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with R and ends with A, and has seven letters in it. I

FALLEN ASLEEP

DEAN.

William Dean, 85 years old, died Sunday morning at 3:05 o'clock at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George R. Laird of Youngwood, after a two weeks' illness. Mr. Dean had been a sufferer from asthma for some time. He was born November 12, 1843 in South Staffordshire, England, and came to America when a young man.

For nineteen years he was employed as mine foreman for the Heca Coke Company at Hecla. He was married to Mary Lowbridge in 1865, who died in 1910. In 1914 he married Helen Williams, of Los Angeles, Calif., who died in 1919.

Mr. Dean is survived by three daughters and one son. They are: Mrs. L. N. Armbrust, of Akron, Ohio; Mrs. George R. Laird, of Youngwood; Mrs. E. H. Wright, of Greensburg and Walter Dean, of Wilson. Two sisters and three brothers, as well as 34 grandchildren and 22 great-grandchildren also survive. Sisters and brothers are Mrs. Mary Flinn, of Florence, Colo.; Hannah in England; John, of Los Angeles; Thomas, of Sidney, Australia and George of Cleveland, O. Mr. Dean joined the Methodist Church when he was 10 years of age and has always been a loyal member as well as a regular attendant at church.

Funeral services were held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the Youngwood M. E. Church, with Rev. John Stewart in charge. Interment was in St. John's Cemetery.

LLOYD.

Mrs. Eula Mae Lloyd was born Oct. 10, 1880, at Breeding, Ky., and departed this life Jan. 12, 1929, at her home at Cloverport, Ky. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Montgomery Breeding. She was married to Rev. C. C. Lloyd, June 17, 1917. To this union was born three children: Robert Kline, Paul Cassius, and Mary Elizabeth. She also leaves three step-children to mourn her loss, Mr. Laverne Lloyd, Mrs. Josephine Birdsong, of Columbia, Mo., and Geneva Earl Lloyd. Sister Lloyd became a Christian early in life, and lived a devoted member of the Methodist Church until 1917 when she united with the Christian Church with her husband and continued to live a devoted Christian until the end. She is survived by her husband, three children, three step-children, a mother, two brothers and two sisters, and a host of other relatives and friends. She was a victim of the flu and pneumonia. All was done to save her earthly life, but alas, the Heavenly Father said, "It is enough, come up higher," and took her out of her suffering to be with him.

Her remains were brought to Milltown for burial. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Garrison, after which she was laid to rest in the Milltown Cemetery, by the side of her father. We would say to the bereaved ones, "Let not your hearts be troubled." The Lord has received her, and she has gone to be with him in that mansion which he had prepared for her, and he is preparing one for all who will trust and serve him. For with those who die in the Lord, "Death is only a dream," and there is glory beyond the dark stream, where there will be no more partings and sad good-byes. For all will be joy and happiness with all who are prepared to meet their Lord in peace. May the Heavenly Father comfort the bereaved ones, and ever be with the little motherless children, and that each one may prepare to again meet Sister Lloyd, and can again have one united circle around the great white throne.

There are loved ones in the glory, Whose dear forms you often miss, When you close your earthly story Will you join them in their bliss? You can picture happy gatherings Round the fireside long ago, And you think of tearful partings, When they left you here below. One by one their seats are emptied, One by one they are going away, Now the family is parted, Will it be complete some day?

Tavie Hatcher.

An Anxious Mother: "Please pray for a daughter who has had the flu, that she may mentally as well as physically regain health, and especially be converted."

Alice Carlton: "Please pray for my health to be largely if not wholly restored, that I make a complete surrender soon to God."

IS KING GEORGE V. A CHRISTIAN?

When bulletins on the fight with death of the King of England grew in seriousness and the world watched the physicians' reports with growing anxiety, there must have arisen in the minds of thousands of Christians the question, Is King George V a Christian?

Such a fight, whether won or lost, means that sooner or later even the most magnificent of monarchs must be summoned to render homage at a throne compared with which an earthly throne is no more than a footstool, writes P. W. Wilson in the December 15 number of the Christian Herald.

At such a moment it is not by the standards of time alone that even the most illustrious of monarchs has to be tested. Immortality itself must be the measure of his greatness. King George is a Christian; but in what sense is he a Christian? His faith is a fact; that is obvious. But is it also a fact?

"Can it be true," queries Mr. Wilson, "that amid the bewildering distractions and persistent routine of a glittering court, this man of modest demeanor and average attainments has been able to sustain that inner flame of a personal piety which, as we say to ourselves, is impossible for us? If it be so, then it may be that this King will influence more lives by his example than he rules by his prerogatives."

"That King George was well brought up goes without saying. Archbishops baptized him, confirmed him, married him, anointed him. Of course he goes to church. Of course he risks his life by standing bareheaded before the cenotaph in Whitehall. As a mark of consideration for the many millions of his Roman Catholic subjects he has been received in audience by the Pope. With Queen Mary he is not less attentive to the Salvation Army."

"How can a king be sincere when his faith is imposed upon him? By his accession oath, King George has solemnly to swear that he is a 'faithful Protestant,' and until he swears he does not receive the crown. Indeed, the law does not end there. Separated by the River Tweed, England and Scotland have each an established church. The law requires that north of the Tweed the King be officially a Presbyterian, while south of the Tweed he is officially an Episcopalian. His belief in bishops thus depends upon whether he happens to be residing at Windsor or Balmoral.

"For some years this quiet monarch was overshadowed, first by his father and then by his son. In their resistance to jazz, to bobbed hair and to absurdities of dress and in their rigid boycott of divorce and scandal, the King and Queen were unpopular with the smart set and a subject of smiles among others. It was said that Queen Mary had no conversation and that King George was under her tutelage. The Court was humdrum. It was the Prince of Wales and later the Duchess of York in whom the world was interested."

"But gradually a somewhat different estimate of the sovereigns began to pervade the nation and the world. The King was confronted by an extraordinary series of crises. Yet through all these difficulties and dangers, the King and Queen continued their throne, sympathetic, assiduous, tactful, and imperturbable. They began to be trusted and confidence developed into affection."

"Of the millions of words published about King George, I cannot pretend to have seen everything. Nor has anybody else. But I have a fairly full record of his career and I seem to find one positive personal influence. Some years ago he allowed it to be stated that, as a boy, he had promised his mother to read the Bible every day, and that he had kept the promise. That is the source of wisdom which has never failed him."

"If King George V. had been a Bourbon, living at Versailles, every courtier would have witnessed these devotions. But in London there is a home within the palace which is as private as any other Englishman's castle. It is in that home where the King and Queen breakfast alone that the Bible is read. It is he who sees in secret that rewards openly."

"If King George V. has retained his joy in service, his smile, his tenderness to children, and, in a word, his character, it is because day by day the world around him was excluded from a realm within him over which there has reigned Another than he.—Christian Herald.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IX.—March 3, 1929.

Subject.—The Christian Church.
Mark 4:26-32; Eph. 1:22-23; Ejh. 4:4-6; Eph. 4:11-16.

Golden Text.—So we being many, are all one body in Christ. Rom. 12:5.

Introduction.—Our English word "church" does not convey to us the Bible meaning of the Church. In the New Testament the Greek word ecclesia, which you will now find in our American dictionaries, is the term used. It means a called-out group. The Church is composed of all who have been called out from sin unto righteousness. Or I may make the thought a bit clearer by saying: All who have obeyed the call by forsaking sin and accepting salvation by faith in Jesus Christ. Paul says that all who passed for Jews in his day were not Jews. That is just as true of the present-day church. Many whose names are on church rolls are not members of the church. The church is composed only of those who are born of God. When you find twenty-five converted souls in a membership of two hundred, the church is very small compared with the membership. When the Scriptures speak of the church there is no reference to any particular denomination, as Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic, but to the body of God's children who constitute the Body of Christ. In this sense God has never had but one Church. Jesus Christ has always been its foundation stone. When he told Peter: "Upon this Rock I will build my Church," he was referring to himself, and not to Simon Peter. When he promised that "the gates of hell should never prevail against" his church, he did not mean to say that none of our man-made institutions that we term churches, would never become extinct. As a matter of fact, some of them are already dead and gone; and the world has several more that could bless humanity by ceasing to function.

The Church is the only worthwhile institution among them. Many other institutions are helpful as long as they are in harmony with the Church, but when they are, in principle and function, contrary to the Church, they are harmful. I am not saying that institutions must be in harmony with Methodists, or with Roman Catholics, or with any other sect, but with the Church. Satan is ever busy trying to substitute something for the Church; and he does not care how good the substitute may be, provided he can induce men to take it in place of the Church. I have no doubt that this will apply to much of our so-called education and culture, to much of our charity, to nearly every secret order on earth, and to a host of other things. If these things do not curse men, they must always be subsidiary to the Church and build with the Church.

To use the word church in the sense of denomination, may I say that a church that offers to men an inadequate religion is worse than no church at all? That question may need some qualification. I mean a church that does not offer full salvation from all sin to all men by faith in the blood of Jesus Christ. Such a church pre-empted the hearts of men, and renders it largely impossible to reach them with the gospel of salvation. Mexico is a lost nation, so blinded by false teaching, that most of her people are beyond the reach of salvation. Modernism seals the damnation of men by cutting off the last ray of hope. Better have heathenism than a false, perverted, inadequate Christianity. God has given several dispensations of grace in his Church. To that part of it called commonly, "The Christian Church," there belong properly two dispensations; that of the Son, and that of the Spirit. The second dovetails into and fulfills the first. The first lasted three and a half years. The second began at Pentecost, and still continues.

Comments on the Lesson.

26. The kingdom of God.—I suppose this to be identical with "the kingdom of heaven." The term has several applications. When Jesus said: "The kingdom of heaven is within you," he meant personal salvation; unless our translation is wrong. Some contend that he meant: "The kingdom of heaven is among," which I think is better. Sometimes the expression refers to the militant church; sometimes to the final reign of our Lord. The balance of this section hardly needs special comment. Just as a healthy seed planted in the soil will germinate and grow to maturity and full fruitage, so the Master is teaching us to expect the growth and fruitage of the Church.

Eph. 1:22, 23. This is what I tried to say in the Introduction. Jesus is the Head of the Church. To use another form of speech, he is the Corner Stone. There can be no church without him. Nor is any institution that denies his Deity a church. No more can one deny his Deity, and be a Christian. This is fundamental. Eph. 4:4. One body.—One Church, One Spirit. The one Holy Spirit.

5. One Lord.—Jesus Christ. One faith.—Faith in his blood alone can save from sin. One baptism.—The baptism with the Holy Ghost. Nothing can take its place.

6. One God.—Jehovah. Paul is combatting paganism. Father of all.—The Creator of all men. He is leaving no room for Diana or any other heathen God.

Eph. 4:11. These are gifts of the Spirit conferred by Jesus upon members of the Church.

12. Here we have the reason for these gifts. Leave out the comma after saints. We are worth comparatively little in God's work until we are led on into Christian perfection—entire sanctification. It is the business of all who have received any of these gifts to be hard at work leading the Church on to perfection. This is God's plan for winning souls.

13. Till we all come.—Read the verse and count it God's command to preach holiness. It tells us how long to keep at it. This is surely a picture of entire sanctification; but Paul has an end in view.

14. How tired he was of babies in the Church, who should be full grown men and women. There are thousands of them now, fit for nothing but to cry and fuss, and fret, and squirm. Have you gone on to perfection? What multitudes are being led astray by false cults in America. Church of the living God, do thy duty; and quit playing with these isms and semi-religious fads! Save the people!

15. Speaking the truth in love.—

"Declare the whole counsel of God, but do it in love. Only thus can we grow up into our living Head, Jesus Christ.

16. This last verse is a declaration of the settlement of all our church difficulties. Holiness will fill our church buildings, bring the lost to Christ, fill the churches with good members, and settle every financial problem. It is God's plan, and it will work for ever. I make bold to affirm, There is no other.

A COMMENDATION.

Rev. W. W. Loveless, of London, O., will be surprised to read these words, for they are written entirely without his knowledge. He is one evangelist who does not know how to blow his own horn. Obeying a call to preach later in life than most of us, he did not get the formal training of the schools, but he is a very earnest student of the Word of God, and his library indicates that he reads valuable literature. He is mature in years and cautious in his judgments. That he is a minister in the Church of the Nazarene attests his doctrinal loyalties, that many churches where he labors use him for repeated engagements indicates that this excellent evangelist be used in a very wide field. I have mentioned him to pastors and camp meetings, but am hoping that this more public word will get the eye of others who are looking for a reliable evangelist.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

Miss A. L. Williams, of Waco, Tex., desires to get in touch with some woman and her husband who need the assistance of a good soloist in their meetings. Address her care Mrs. W. S. Chambers, Waco, Texas.

If you are interested in helping boys and girls of Cumberland Mountains, Tenn., get an education, drop Rev. S. L. C. Coward, Penny Farms, Fla., a card and he will give you the desired information.

Rev. Cuthbert L. Elliott, of Sebring, Fla., after an enforced absence, has decided to re-enter the pastorate. He is an old-fashioned believer in the power of the Holy Ghost to regenerate and sanctify. If any presiding elder or district superintendent could use him for the glory of God, communicate with him at Sebring, Fla.

THE OLD SUNDIAL.

Clyde Edwin Tuck.

The quaint sundial stands near by
The deep-worn path and brown stone wall
And where the garden weeds grow tall,
Haunts of the bee and butterfly,
Surrounded by old-fashioned flowers;
The Latin legend on its rim
A century has failed to dim,
"I only count the sunny hours!"
Life is a garden wherein grows
Sweet-smelling blooms of fairest hue,
Where twines the laurel with the rose,
And weeds spring up beside the rose,
And thorns among the rarest flowers;
But blue skies always follow gray;
Then let us with the dial say,
"I only count the sunny hours!"

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Jean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

MREWA MISSION, RHODESIA, AFRICA.

Rhodesia is situated in the south central part of Africa and is under the administration of the British Government. Mrewa Mission is one mile from the office of the magistrate for the district and sixty miles from the capital city, Salisbury. The nearest railroad is forty miles away.

About twenty years ago, a doctor who was also a well-qualified surgeon and a great preacher, member of a New York conference, rode into the district on a little white donkey and asked for permission to open work among the natives. Up to this time the few white people in the district had congratulated themselves that there were two evils that the south had suffered that they were as yet free from: one was cattle sickness and the other was missionaries. So the former would have been as welcome as was this great missionary doctor. However he was given permission to go into the interior about twenty miles from the half dozen white settlers and there build a house of poles and mud and grass. Here he waited and prayed for an opportunity to preach Christ and to heal their many diseases. The white people despised him and the natives ran away in terror.

Today in that District, there are about one hundred schools manned to a large extent by natives converted since that time who were then skinned heathen or naked children. There is one large school under the Woman's Board and a well-equipped hospital in this district where Dr. Gurney was so unwelcome twenty years ago—all a result of his labor of love. When he died four years ago, this same magistrate and his family were real mourners.

Mrewa, the original station, is still but poorly equipped for school. We have a good stone church but small and not very well adapted for school work. The boys' dormitories are too small. Fifty girls are crowded into a space much congested with the thirty-two for which their one dormitory was built. Another house for teachers is needed. But the greatest need is for a school building. At present part of the school is held under the trees, the children with their teacher following the shade around till when the superintendent goes out to inspect the classes, she has to hunt them up in various parts of the campus and then go to the church for other classes and to the girls' dining room about five hundred yards away for others. Since she must also teach, her classes suffer as do the others with inadequate supervision.

A new building is an imperative need and will cost about a thousand dollars. The boys and girls themselves will do the work. They will dig into one of the many large ant hills, rake out the roots and stones, carry the water in buckets on their heads and mix the mortar with their feet. Then put into molds holding three or four bricks, empty them on the drying ground, turn them several times, cover them with long grass, pile them when dry and burn them after the wood has been chopped to keep the furnace going for about a week. Then the burnt bricks are brought to the place of building. Again water is carried and mortar is made of earth and water and walls put up by the boys of the school who are learning building along with their school work, Bible and Christian training. The girls will cut the grass or as much as they can of it for the roof. The boys will put the

WHY NOT BE YOUR OWN EXECUTOR AND INVEST YOUR CONSECRATED MONEY WHERE YOU WILL NOT HAVE TAXES TO PAY ON IT AND BE FREE FROM ALL FUTURE WORRY IN CONNECTION WITH THE SETTLING UP OF YOUR ESTATE?

Read carefully what two of our annuitants in California have to say about their investment in Asbury College Annuity Bonds. They now hold four bonds which represent $21,000 which they have invested with us.

"My wife and I are more than pleased with the annuities we have placed in Asbury College and we have great comfort in feeling that our money will still be working in the Lord's cause long after we have gone on to Glory. I certainly wish that many who have money might glorify God by putting it where it will give them a good income while they live and still keep on working for God in such a worthy cause as the upbuilding of Christian character in which Asbury College is so successful. May God bless you and give you great success in this work, is the prayer of our hearts."

THE FULNESS OF THE BLESSING.

By The Editor.

FOR this is the will of God, even your sanctification." This is a very clear and positive statement. It is in harmony with the whole teaching of the Bible. We could not conceive of God willing anything less than that his people should be saved and kept from all sin.

What is your will, my dear reader? Do you desire to be saved from all sin? Do you hunger and thirst after righteousness? Can you say with the Psalmist, "As the hart panteth for the waterbrook, so panteth my soul after thee, O God?" Are you striving to shun the appearance of evil? Are you using every means of grace to stimulate and encourage your soul to press on to know the Christ in all the fulness of his love and power to save?

Our attitude has everything to do with our spiritual attainments. What we desire, intensely, powerfully influences our thought, actions, and life; in fact, what we will, believe, desire, and do, makes us what we are. Acts repeated form habits, habits form character, and character fixes destiny. Is it our chief desire, our one great longing, to be saved from all sin, to be kept and guided by power divine into all righteousness?

There is no doubt but that our Lord Jesus "Is able to save to the uttermost." He said on one occasion, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." There is not, there cannot be, any lack in Christ. He healed the sick, made the deaf to hear, the blind to see; he walked the waves of Galilee, he raised the dead, he rebuked and cast out devils, he walked out of the sepulcher triumphant over death and all the powers of evil. He says of himself, "I am the resurrection and the life." Jesus Christ is supreme. He is almighty. Nothing is hard for him; he speaks and the waves of the stormy sea, legions of devils, and death at once obey him.

What is your desire concerning yourself? The Lord Jesus knows; he discerns the thoughts and intents of the heart. Those who commit themselves to him, believing in the merit of his blood, his death, his resurrection and his all-sufficiency, are absolutely safe for full salvation for this world and for all other worlds. Implicit, unhesitating faith in Jesus Christ is always safe. It is doubt that darkens, hinders and destroys. It is faith that laughs at impossibilities, that lays hold upon the omnipotent and compassionate Saviour.

Do you will to be delivered from sin? To be made strong against temptation? To be cleansed from all inward defilement, to have a heart from sin set free? Then quit all else and come to Jesus. His blood has marvelous cleansing power. His atonement reaches and covers all the needs of your soul. Come to Jesus. Make no other plans; do not hesitate. Be careful about any lazy scheme to get other people to do your praying and believing, but teach yourself to pray to Christ and to trust in him. Guard against reading books or listening to any one who would hinder you from the largest and most unhesitating trust in the Lord Jesus. Will to be saved from sin, to be cleansed from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit. Insist in your prayers at the mercy seat that you shall be made holy in heart and righteous in life. Be insistent; let nothing distract you from this one supreme purpose. And may God grant you the fulness of the blessing of the gospel, and make you to rejoice in our Christ.

The Inauguration of Mr. Hoover.

THE people of this nation look forward with eager interest to the inauguration of Mr. Hoover as President of these United States March 4. We doubt if any man has ever become President in whom the great mass of the people had more confidence than they have in Herbert Hoover.

Mr. Hoover's intimate knowledge of world conditions, and the peoples of many nations, his varied experience in the performance of most important and apparent, almost impossible, tasks, has given proof of his unusual ability. The man seems to be wonderfully free from selfishness, pride, or a quality of ambition which has often hindered great men in rendering large service to humanity which they might have done, but for ambitious and selfish motives. Mr. Hoover is apparently, wonderfully free from any such handicap or encumbrance.

However enthusiastic the people may be over the inauguration of Mr. Hoover, and the placing of him, so sturdy and true, at the pilot wheel of our great Ship of State, his inauguration will, by no means, bring in the Millennium. We need not expect any tremendous changes in human affairs in this nation, that will be especially visible on the surface immediately. The rich will still be rich, the poor will be poor, and the masses must eat their daily bread if they can get it in the sweat of their brow.

The coming of Mr. Hoover into the Presidency will not insure great sections of our farming country against drouth, and other sections against torrential rains, destroying harvests, and washing away the plowed surface of the earth. Even under the most favorable climatic conditions, rich harvests and good market for the products of the field, the prosperous farmer of the great West will have a bank account in reserve in proportion to the number of automobiles he buys for the younger members of his family to run into ditches and against telegraph poles on their way home at 4 o'clock in the morning from dances in the country villages.

No administration of the government can be such that indolence or extravagance can walk hand in hand with prosperity. It is generally believed that Mr. Hoover has in head and heart, both knowledge and disposition to do his best for each and every class of our citizenship, with their divers and, frequently, unfortunately, conflicting interests.

Mr. Hoover's inauguration will not change the hearts of men. Our biggest and most difficult problem, the problem that hinders most sadly our human progress, is human selfishness; the disposition to become rich by impoverishing others, to misrepresent, to take advantage, and by any means, fair or foul, to succeed in securing wealth and place and power, whatever such success may cost in the hurt and destruction of one's fellow-beings.

There is a very general and very great desire that Mr. Hoover and those placed in authority by him, may succeed in suppressing the violators of our prohibition laws. May merciful God grant that these desires may be realized. But it must be remembered that from the time the prohibition amendment was placed in our Constitution a large per cent, possibly nine-tenths, of the daily papers of this country have opposed prohibition, have done what they could to educate their readers to ridicule and trample upon the Volstead Act; have manifested a spirit and sent out a propaganda which has cultivated a disrespect for prohibition laws, and a contempt on the part of a very large and dangerous per cent of our population for those who have undertaken to enforce those laws. These papers will continue to be opposed to prohibition, and in a certain and dangerous sense, in sympathy with the violators of prohibition laws. They have fostered, and will continue to foster, opposition to prohibition and sympathy with the liquor traffic. They will not rally to the support of Mr. Hoover and those under his direction who undertake to suppress the murder, riot, and lawlessness that is going on throughout this nation by high and bloody-handed violators of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The inauguration of Mr. Hoover will have nothing to do with the corrupt police force of New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and many other cities that are in sympathy with the lawless, and are taking their share of the loot that is gathered in by those who are protected instead of captured and punished by representatives of the law. We regret to be compelled to say that the courts will continue, in all probability, to move slowly in the punishment of criminals, and governors, in spite of the protest of the people, will continue to pardon and turn loose upon society those who have been found guilty of heinous crime.

We would not appear to be pessimistic, but we are reminding our readers that we must not ungird ourselves in our war against evil, or suppose for a moment that the Kingdom of Heaven has come down to earth, because of the inauguration into the Presidency of the great, good man we be-

THE SONG OF THE LORD IN A STRANGE LAND.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

We think of Psalm 137:4 as we write the above title. Here the question is asked: "How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" In these days of missionary achievements the Song of the Lord is heard in many a strange land and no difference where you go you hear the familiar tunes of the old hymns and songs with the words in strange language.

Last Sunday I was deeply moved as I heard the songs of Zion sung by the Chinese. I was preaching in a big Baptist Church in Canton, China. The congregation was nearly one thousand. The gallery was full of students from the various schools, also Bible students from the Woman's Bible Training School, downstairs the theological students from the Seminary and the various professors and teachers, foreign and Chinese, and then the people from all walks of life. The choir was large and they sang beautifully.

The pastor was Chinese, the whole service was in Chinese. My interpreter was a missionary from Macao. I preached on Acts 26:19.

The opening hymn thrilled me as the thousand voices sang "Gospel Bells." I could hardly believe myself in a foreign city where just twelve months ago the "Reds" had deliberately planned to kill all the foreigners and loot and burn. Through the signal mercy of God their plans were found out by a great military leader just in time to thwart their designs and turn the tables upon themselves. I was thrilled indeed as the great congregation sang:

"The Gospel bells are ringing,
Over land from sea to sea:
Blessed news of free salvation,
Do they offer you and me.

"For God so loved the world
That his only Son he gave,
Whosoever believeth in him,
Everlasting life shall have."

"Yes thank God," I said, "The Gospel bells are ringing all over the world today and wherever they ring they proclaim good tidings." and they sang on:

"The Gospel bells invite us
To a feast prepared for all;
Do not slight the invitation
Nor reject the gracious call.

"I am the bread of life,
Eat of Me, thou hungry soul,
Though your sins be red as crimson
They shall be as white as wool."

China and India and Africa have been hearing those gospel bells and many thousands have come to the Feast and have been made glad and been saved through the precious blood.

The Gospel bells are joyful,
As they echo far and wide,
Bearing notes of perfect pardon,
Through a Savior crucified.

"Good tidings of great joy
To all people do I bring,
Unto you is born a Saviour,

Which is Christ the Lord and King."

Thank God that the religion of Jesus Christ brings joy and joyful songs. It is a singing religion. In that region of Canton where this great church is and all those Christian institutions they told me that the whole community is permeated with the gospel and that the voice of song or prayer or worship is always being heard there.

Then another song which they sang that Sabbath morning in China had another thrill for me. It took me back to Douglas, Mass., Camp, where 36 years ago I attended my first distinctly holiness camp meeting and heard for the first time that song that was so beloved by the "fathers" of forty years ago. It was Stockton's song, "Oh 'Twas Love." The voices rang out:

God loved the world of sinners lost,
And ruined by the fall,
Salvation full at highest cost
He offers free to all.

CHORUS

Oh 'twas love, 'twas wondrous love
The love of God to me;
It brought my Savior from above,
To die on Calvary.

Buddha has no song like that. Taoism has no message like that of love; Confucianism with all its ethics can't make the people sing. Oh no! It takes Jesus and God's love and redemption to put songs like that upon the lips of those born in heathen darkness.

They sang on:

Eternal praises Lord to Thee,
Thou blessed Son of God;
For thy deep love in cleansing me,
In thy most precious blood.

Even now by faith I know I'm thine,
'Tis in thy faithful word;
Oh height, oh depth of love divine,
In Thee the risen Lord.

Oh help me Lord, to spread thy fame,
And tell of all thy grace,
To all the world thy love proclaim,
Until I see thy face.

Oh 'twas love, 'twas wondrous love,
The love of God to me;
It brought my Savior from above,
To die on Calvary.

I thanked God that so many in that great congregation were singing their own experience in these words and that they were getting themselves ready to go forth and spread the good news to the many needy provinces of China. Everywhere I go now I find myself trying to stir the Chinese young men and women to catch the passion of soul saving and give themselves up to the work of preaching the gospel to their own people. The time is come when, if China with its 400 millions, are to be evangelized it must depend greatly upon the Chinese themselves who have the language and the traditions, and the door of entrance which is not open so much to the foreigner. I asked the President of the Theological Seminary what, in his judgment, the "foreign missionary" could do in China in these days when the Chinese were taking the leadership so much in their own hands and doing so much of their own evangelizing. His reply was somewhat on this wise:

"Oh, foreign missionaries to China would be needed perhaps more than ever to do pioneer work, to open up new territories, to go into places yet untouched by the gospel, to blaze the way as they did in other days."

I think this is so. The foreign missionary must do a good deal of initiative work. Morrison and Hudson Taylor and men of like courage and leadership will be needed as greatly as ever but of course the missionary of today has not to suffer the unspeakable hardships that the missionary of forty years ago endured. Others have labored to blaze the way and lay the foundations.

In China one meets with such varying contrasts. But I was not prepared at night to meet such a contrast to the morning. I was scheduled to preach at the _____ church (pardon me for omitting the name) on Sunday night, the closing service of a series of night meetings held there during the Convention week. We held services there each night despite a lot of opposition from the Chinese pastor. This man had been in America, was at one time a Methodist preacher and now held this big church because he had great ability. Time was, they told me, when he was quite an evangelist, but his ardor had cooled off and he had become worldly and selfish and fond of money and place and lost his passion for the souls of his needy people of his needy land, and he was now a Chinese Modernist.

When we arrived at the church we found the front doors closed tight and lots of people waiting about wondering what had happened. Facts were, the pastor made no announcement of night service though he knew that it was to be our last service, he had left no instructions about opening up the church and he was nowhere to be found. However, the Bible woman of the church ventured to open the doors and soon the church was half full. We hesitated at first preaching under such circumstances but Brother Munroe who had made the arrangements argued that so many people had come that it would not do to deny them preaching. A good song service preceded the sermon. Wife and I sang "I'm the child of a King," and I preached from Luke 15:10, and made an altar call and about forty souls sought the Lord and among them one or two who had heard the gospel for the first time so that we felt our text at least was verified: "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." The song that was sung that night as we made the altar call was:

Ring the bells of Heaven, there is joy today
For a soul returning from the wild;
See! the Father meets him out upon the way,
Welcoming his weary, wandering child.

CHORUS.

Glory, Glory, how the angels sing,
Glory, Glory, how the loud harps ring;
'Tis the ransomed army, like a mighty sea
Pealing forth the anthem of the free.

Ring the bells of Heaven, spread the feast today,

Angels swell the glad triumphant strain!
Tell the joyful tidings! bear it far away!
For a precious soul is born again.

Perhaps in Heaven bye and bye when the ransomed from all peoples and nations are gathered to join in that anthem of the redeemed "unto him that loved us and washed from our sins in his own blood" and I, by the grace and keeping mercy of God, shall be privileged to be there I may meet one of those Chinese men who that night sought and found Christ and he may say unto me: "It was on that Sunday night in Canton when the church doors were closed against you that I came to hear the preaching of the gospel for the first time and it was while you preached and the people prayed that I found Christ as my Savior and became a Christian." Ring on sweet bells of Heaven for multitudes yet shall hear the joyful sound.

Ring the bells of Heaven, there is joy today;
For the wanderer now is reconciled;
Yes, a soul is rescued from his sinful way,
And is born a new, a ransomed child.

“Philosophy,” or “Foolosophy”—Which?
REV. W. G. BENNETT.

WE have lying on our table this morning a pamphlet that we have been reading very carefully. It is written by one of our local pastors and, of course, must be of more than passing interest to every citizen of our city. The title is “Is Science the Enemy of Religion or the Ally?” This pamphlet has the appearance of being scholarly; the logic is inevitable,—that is, if we accept this man’s premise and take his statements relative to the teaching of science at face value; but, if we do this, we had as well discard Christianity and throw our Bibles into the scrapheap.

An aged, pious maiden lady had inscribed on her tombstone these words:

“As you are now, so once was I.
As I am now, you soon will be.
Prepare, my friend, to follow me.”

A miscreant wag scribbled beneath this beautiful epitaph,

“To follow thee I am not content,
Until I know which way thee went.”

We have some such feeling relative to the Doctor’s philosophy. We want to see where he is taking us before we consent to follow. Of course, we understand that to take brief statements from a man’s writings and criticize them puts him at a disadvantage, and we are confident that, if you read his treatise, the clear statements and the cunning sophistry will sound much better than our treatment of this pamphlet will sound. But when a man, having the standing of an orthodox minister—at least, pastor of an orthodox church—attempts to thrust upon an unsuspecting public a supposed treatise of Christianity which utterly destroys the creeds of his own church and, if true, would destroy the teachings of the Bible throughout the Old Testament and the New, he should be prepared to have his philosophy investigated.

On page eight the author says, “One of the major postulates of science is the intelligibility of the universe.” Of course, this must be true if we accept the theory of evolutionary creation. For, if the universe created itself with the orderliness that is so apparent in nature, it must have design or some form of intelligence and, if so, intelligent beings should be able to understand it. This our author both affirms and denies. On page ten he says, “What is this but a declaration that the physical world at its best is capable of producing the psychic, and thus we are in the presence of the psychic possibilities of the universe?” But on page nine, he says, “This confidence in the rationality of the universe cannot be proven.” And on page fourteen, he further says, “Matter has resolved itself into energy and what energy is no man can tell.” That is in plain English,—the universe can be read and it cannot be read. We think he is exactly right, for scientists have been saying the same thing in effect for centuries. That is, one has affirmed and another has denied his affirmation.

We are devoutly thankful for the very few facts that science has discovered by her patient and painstaking investigation; but, of course, we are not absolutely certain that they are facts, for we do not know that the last generation of scientists have completed their investigations. Consequently, we are still uncertain and must admit that it is possibly true that the universe is still a riddle. Personally, we do not believe the theory of evolutionary creation and see no reason why we should until it passes from the realm of a speculative to that of an exact science which we fear it never will succeed in doing, for it is certainly headed the other way at the present time. But we must not argue for we are writing a criticism, which is always so much easier than refutation.

We turn now to quote from page ten, “Observe that the whole cosmos, man included, is cut from the same cloth. Man is a part of the universe, bone of its bone and flesh of its flesh. Instead of making this confession reluctantly, we make it with joy; for let us assume with the extreme materialist that the psychic in man—mentality, memory, will, emotions with all their glorious products, faith, hope, love, goodness, and all the rest of responsible strivings of human nature—are the result of chemical reaction. What is this but a declaration that the physical world at its best is capable of producing the psychic? And, thus we are in the presence of the psychic possibilities of the universe.” This process of reasoning is faultless so far, that is, if we accept what the Reverend Doctor has assumed—the evolutionary theory of creation. For, if nature, unaided, produced the psychic or soul in man, then it is perfectly logical to assume that the universe has a soul. However, we will digress sufficiently to say that, if man is the result of chemical reaction, when disintegration takes place—as all human experience proves that it will—then the annihilation of the ego or soul is inevitable and Mr. Spencer’s declaration is appropriate, “The abyss is the only fatherhood to be found.” And the Christian conception of immortality is a farce.”

“FOREIGN STUDENTS IN ASBURY COLLEGE.”

I wish to express my appreciation to the many friends who have sent checks from $1.00 to $200.00 for the help of our foreign students. Considerable more money is needed which we are praying that God will prompt the readers of The Herald to send in. Please offer a prayer for these worthy children of God.

C. A. LOVEJOY, Business Mgr.
Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky.

Our author now proceeds very logically to prove that the age-long dispute between materialistic and idealistic philosophy has finally been settled in favor of the Idealists. Now, if this is really so, doubtless many of the great scientists will be glad to hear the news even though it may spoil many of their cherished materialistic theories. On page fifteen he says, “Recently science has unearthed one of the most startling discoveries in the entire history of the human race and that is the immateriality of matter.” This is startling indeed, if true; but don’t take this too seriously, for we might have a hard time to separate the electrons of which you and your auto are composed and the electrons of which the masonry of some of the beautiful buildings of our town is composed. I would advise that you wait for further demonstration of the truth of this philosophy before you begin to practice its application. However, this is only a little different statement of the philosophy that the late Mrs. Eddy affirmed years ago and that many of her highly educated and cultured followers devoutly believe, only they know better than to act as if they believed it in all practical matters.

But our author continues, “An atom is composed of electrons in rapid motion, with vast empty spaces in between.” Sir Oliver Lodge suggests this comparison; “Think of a building 80 feet long, 60 feet wide and 40 feet high; call this building an atom; within would be about 200 electrons, each the size of a pin point, in rapid motion. Obviously the larger part of the atom would be empty.” Now if this is the scientific explanation of what appears to be solidity or matter, we have no objection to it, for we have no evidence that it is not true; and, if this demonstrates the immateriality of matter, we will try to stretch our scientific faith to believe it. However, we still think it best for all practical purposes to believe in the materiality of matter. But our Doctor, true to his logical putting of things, says, “The electron is discovered to be just a swirl of electricity, nothing more, and the world has been defined as ‘electricity in an extreme state of agitation.’” And further, “Were electricity to be withdrawn from the visible world, it would become as unsubstantial as a pipe dream.” This again, we confess, stretches our faith, but if it is true, we will try to make the hill and believe it. But the author proceeds to his final conclusion, “That the universe discloses itself as a form of energy which is orderly, rational and purposeful;” that is to say, that the universe has law, mind and intelligent design. And he then says, “And these are the attributes we associate with the idea of God.”

Now this course of reasoning is perfectly logical if you accept the hypothesis of evolutionary creation, as all Modernists do. For if man is of nature’s making, it is perfectly reasonable to assume that his Creator has at least as high a state of intelligence as he himself possesses; and our author has reasoned out a philosophy that is just as reasonable as Pantheism, Christian Science or any other of the heathen philosophies. We congratulate him in doing as well as any other philosopher has done in the past without the aid of Divine revelation which we aver this author rejects.

But what are the inevitable results? The heathen simply clothes his idol with his own attributes and calls it God. This author believes that man is one with the universe and, therefore, the universe has order, intelligence and design, and he calls the universe God. I do not see how anyone can accept the theory of evolutionary creation and reject the conclusion that he reaches; but it is Pantheistic philosophy—God, or the soul of the universe, and the soul of man are all the same entity. Or, according to this author, just a “swirl of electricity.”

It is noticeable that our philosopher has not ascribed moral qualities to his deity. It is also wise that he has not done so. For when a man makes his own deity and gives him moral qualities, they are usually the reflection of his own fallen nature and murder or adultery are likely to be sanctified as acts of worship. Why not? Who can object? What right has one swirl of electricity to dictate to another swirl of electricity? There is and can be to this kind of philosophy nothing either right or wrong, and Mrs. Eddy’s theory, “that all is good,” is at least comforting even if it is a deception.

“Well,” but you say, “we have the ethics of Jesus.” No, you have not for you have no Jesus. From this standpoint there is no miracle and no special Providence. This God never comes to adjust the machinery of the universe for the machinery never goes wrong. He, with all the rest, is under the control of inexorable law. If man came down from God, he is a fallen being and needs the redemption that Christianity tells us about, but if he came up from lower forms of life or, as this author says, is the result of chemical reaction, he is not a fallen being but an evolving creature and needs no redemption. For men of this faith to preach the religion of Jesus is a farce and a delusion. Either they do not believe their theories, or else they do not believe in Christianity and only preach it to satisfy the poor ignorant dupes in their congregations that this author calls timid souls, because they are not willing to follow him out on to the bleak barren mountains of scepticism.

If modernism becomes generally accepted, all infallible standards of ethics or righteousness are gone and the world will drift back to heathenism. And why should this be objectionable from the standpoint of this philosophy? “On with the dance” and when disintegration comes, as come it will, “drop the curtain, the farce is ended.”

But let me say in closing that, from the standpoint of many of the world’s greatest

THE DISCIPLES, PRE-PENTECOSTAL CHRISTIANS.

Rev. D. M. Smashey.

HE chief object of this article is to expose two fallacies regarding the religious status of the disciples prior to Pentecost. One school which opposes holiness claims that the disciples were not converted until Pentecost, another assumes that the disciples were not "genuine Christians." This view is stated in the following words, "They (the disciples) were not post-Pentecostal Christians, when men pass from death unto life as we see them doing today, a transition which we as genuine Christians would quite easily understand, but were living under the Mosaic dispensation and were justified by meeting their age." We are living in a period of perilous transition, "Sound Doctrines" hoary with age, are being violently assaulted. The pulpit and press are overflowing with false doctrines. Multitudes are panic-stricken like a flock of sheep without a shepherd. In many quarters there is a growing and alarming indifference to the evils of false teaching. What is needed in pulpit and press is a thoroughgoing orthodoxy. The leaven of error be it ever so small will in time do its deadly work. The theory which we are opposing is exceedingly dangerous on account of its unavoidable consequences.

First, it misrepresents the practical realization of the Redemptive Purpose.

Second, it leaves no place in the Christian life of the disciples for a thorough-going regeneration, as a requisite condition for entire sanctification.

Third, it diverts attention from the real fact of biblical teaching.

Fourth, the theory that the disciples had not passed from death unto life as we see men doing today has for its background no true conception of the Savior-hood of Christ.

Fifth, there is absolutely no warrant for assuming that there was a less concrete spiritual regeneration in the hearts of the disciples than in the hearts of those after Pentecost.

Sixth, the chief purpose of redemption is to regenerate, and sanctify wholly and therefore the notion that the disciples had not passed from death unto life" is a gratuitous impoverishment of the practical work of regeneration. It is utter nonsense to speak of the disciples as Christians unless we recognize them as the true sons of God. We are not at liberty to thrust aside the doctrine of the New Birth, in order to establish some absurd notion. To be "Born of God," "Born of the Spirit" is fundamental in redemptive economy. It is utter nonsense to assume that Christ would set on foot an effective agency to rule out the New Birth in founding a spiritual church in which a common sonship must exist. The New Birth is God's method of dealing with the race, and not some select part of the race, and therefore no one can be self-consistent in his teaching unless he includes the New Birth.

Allowing that the disciples lived under the Mosaic dispensation, since the New Birth is essential to salvation, if the Old Testament saints were not "Born of God" they must have fallen short of being saved. Rev. John Wesley, one of the most astute theologians that ever defined Christian doctrines, held and taught that the Old Testament saints were "born of God." Mr. Wesley after duly explaining the privileges of those "born of God" says, "Thus David was born of God." The Methodist in its VI-Article of Religion says, "The Old Testament is not contrary to the New; for both in the Old and New Testaments everlasting life is offered to mankind by Christ, who is the only Mediator between God and man. Wherefore they are not to be heard who feign that the old fathers did look only for transitory promises." The notion that God held the Old Testament saints off from the practical benefits of the New Birth and entire sanctification is a theory that has no guarantee in Scripture nor support of common sense. The New Birth viewed as essential to salvation, it necessarily follows that the disciples were "born of God."

THE DISCIPLES SONS OF GOD.

The notion that the disciples had not passed from death unto life as we see men doing today is wholly without reason. There is no doubt about Christ sharing his Sonship with his disciples. On this point the Scriptures are clear. In John 1:12, we read, "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name." The disciples were believers in the true sense, and must be recognized as the true sons of God.

It is further to be considered, that Christ himself conceived his disciples to be the sons of God. Christ put this great fact in the clearest form, namely, "My Father and your Father." The pregnant choice of these words that Christ used to express the sonship of his disciples emphasizes their filial relationship to God. Moreover, the phrase "My Father and your Father" clearly expresses common sonship. That is to say Christ shared his Sonship with his disciples in the household of God. The fact is by virtue of discipleship it entitled the disciple to sonship in the household of God. The term disciple is pragmatic, or a new word used to express son of God. That is to say, the word disciple is equivalent to son of God. The overmastering impression of our Lord's own views of his disciples is that they were sons of God in God's household. A like order of common sonship is clearly expressed in Matthew 28:10. Then said Jesus unto them, "Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me."

The phrase "my brethren" is a recognition of the sonship of the disciples, which in its full-orbed expression would be "Sons of God." Evidently we are following the true meaning of this phrase, as Christ uses the same phrase in John 20:17: "Go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God and your God." These phrases warrant but one true exposition, namely, the Fatherhood of God, and the common sonship of Christ and his disciples, in the household of God. Every man unembarrassed by the entanglements of speculation, and unhampered by ignorance must see the fallaciousness of the notion that the disciples were not "genuine Christians."

WHAT CHRIST CONCEIVED HIS DISCIPLES TO BE.

After all is said, the most important thing is what Christ conceived his disciples to be.

1. Christ himself clearly reveals that the Christian character of his disciples was rooted in himself. Let us investigate more fully the spiritual relationship between Christ and his disciples. We read in John 15:4, 5: "Abide in me, and I in you." "I am the vine and ye are the branches." Here is an amazing revelation of the spiritual relationship between Christ and his disciples.

The depth and unsearchable wealth of spiritual life in Christ, is the basis of Christian assurance. Christ strikes the keynote of that mystical relation between himself and his disciples, for all time. "Abide in me, and I in you" expresses spiritual intercommunication between Christ and his disciples. Moreover, it expresses practical Christian character, abiding in Christ. Our Lord Jesus Christ here clearly reveals that he had identified himself heartily and abidingly with his disciples. Again as the branches of the tree live by the life of the tree that springs from its roots, so the disciples live by the life of Christ. The spiritual union and communion with Christ surely gave to the disciples an abundant supply of divine life. This blessed association with Christ must have been most satisfying to the disciples. They had not yet received the fulness of the Holy Spirit, but were partakers of the Divine Nature of our Lord and Savior. It becomes more and more evident as we go searching into the religious character of the disciples that they were "genuine Christians." In referring to the twelve disciples one has so aptly said, "The charcoal was changed into diamonds. They were far from faultless, but the faults were flaws in a jewel, not the crudeness of the charcoal."

The call of the twelve to aid Christ in his Mission is another evidence that the disciples were "genuine Christians." "And he ordained twelve," and Christ said, "I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit." John 15:16. They were Christ's first chosen representatives, of his religion. The disciples were the Nucleus of Christ's Church. It was the beginning of our Lord's organized Church. They were Christ's special trained workers, the first evangelistic workers, empowered to even cast out devils, and to heal the sick.

THE DISCIPLES IN PERSONAL ASSOCIATION WITH CHRIST.

The purpose and nature of discipleship is not only to be a learner, but to have conscious spiritual fellowship with Christ. The disciples of Christ were not simply his followers as were the disciples of Confucius, but that deeper significance, a permanent spiritual association with our Incarnate Saviour the source of Eternal Life. "I am the life," "I am the bread of life." "He that eateth of this bread shall live for ever." "He that believeth in me hath everlasting life." This language is very significant indeed. It is an unrestrained, unlimited expression of pre-eminent spiritual life and fellowship with the Fountain of Eternal Life. It is clear that Christ shared his possessions with his disciples. Evidently Christ considered his disciples as the true sons of God, else he would not have given to them the supreme place in his affection, and fellowship that he did.

The mutual relationship between Christ and his disciples is distinctively peculiar, in that he shares his glory with them. Of his disciples Christ says, "I am glorified in them." The glory of Christ in the first place has reference to the great work of redemption in his disciples. It is evident that the glory of Christ is the ultimate end of redemption, and for this reason, our Lord Jesus glorified himself in his disciples. It must be true that the glory of Christ imparted to his disciples issued from the result of his work of redemption in them. It is worthy of particular notice to observe the natural exegetical meaning of Christ's own words, namely glorifying himself in his disciples, thus making known his divine saving grace in them. It is evident had the disciples not been "genuine Christians," Christ would not have communicated his glory to them. It was from his value of their Christian character that caused him to communicate his glory to his disciples. "I am glorified in them" stands for saving grace, faith, and hope and all things good. Nothing short of extreme ignorance of the Scriptures or jazzy thinking would lead any one to assume that the disciples were not "genuine Christians" prior to Pentecost. The alleged ignorance and manifestations of carnality is no proof that the disciples were not genuine Christians.

To plead the ignorance of the disciples as something against their Christian character is another evidence of an uninformed mind. Sonship, however luminous it may be does not involve complete knowledge of Christ and his teachings. Perfect knowledge is not the basis of the New Birth, neither is it the condition of entire sanctification. To plead that one must have perfect knowledge of Christ and his teaching in order to be "Born of God" is an unwarrantable exaction. There can be no doubt but that the disciples were God's regenerate children. Who then is authorized to teach that the disciples were not "Genuine Christians" before Pentecost?

TRUE SUCCESS.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

EVERYONE who has anything worth while in him, desires to achieve success. There are different ideas, however, of what constitutes true success. As some one said, "A great part of our self-education depends on our ideals—we do not reach them, but they help to mould us."

True success is not a splendid career in the eyes of the world, although most every one is content with this achievement. There are those who have become the best in their profession or line of work, whose hearts are at variance with the law of God, and whose moral life has counted for nothing among their fellowbeings. There are those who have become world-known, perhaps for their brilliant thought, or genius in mechanics, invention or financial success, but their life, so to speak, ends with their achievement, and when they leave this world they go out into eternity a pauper—a lost soul!

The success which counts, counts for this world and that which is to come, is being and doing what God sent us here to be and do. When we fail to get into the channel of God's ordering we are out of the way of true and abiding success. There are those whom we consider failures from a worldly standpoint, but when the final reckoning comes their rewards will far exceed that of many who were counted a success in this life. Indeed, the humblest follower of the Lord Jesus who, through temptations and trials, has overcome the tempter and made a safe landing on the shores of sweet deliverance, is incomparably more of a success than the man whose millions are left behind to curse his posterity, while his neglected soul cries for the drop of water that never comes.

It would be a great thing if each of us could realize that even our little life is planned of God, and if we would fit into that plan how much better it would be for us and all concerned. Our catechism says that we were created to "glorify God," and if we miss the purpose for which we were created we have deliberately thwarted God's plan and purpose for our lives, and we shall inevitably fail of that which is highest and best in this life, and that which is to come.

We have been studying the wonderful life of St. Paul, who was Saul before he got into the right channel of activity. Imagine what would have been the outcome in his life had he not recognized in that voice which came to him on the Damascus road, the voice of God, and at once surrendered to the Man of Galilee, and asked for orders for his life. We have seen what it has meant to him, and to the world, that he met the defeat of his own plans that day, and fell into the divine order.

We may not have the capacity to become what Saul of Tarsus became, but we may be in the channel of God's will just as truly as was Paul, and our lives may have the smile of God upon them, though in some hidden way that the world may never know. The patient, godly mothers who have trained their children for usefulness in the kingdom of God will, when the rewards are given, receive the "Well done," as truly as the sons or daughters who have wrought more publicly in world affairs. "In the knowledge of God is the only true wisdom; in the service of God, the only true freedom; in the love of God, the only true felicity; and these are all so vast that though they have their seed-time on earth, room for the harvest can be found only in heaven and eternity."

May it be the fortunate lot of every reader of these lines to find God's plan for his or her life, and then surrender to that plan at any cost. Then we shall find that,
"If thou, my Jesus, still be nigh,
Cheeful I live and joyful die;
Secure, when mortal comforts flee,
To find ten thousand worlds in thee."

MY MOTHER.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Recently I wrote a letter to the Children's Page in which I said that owing to the scourge of sickness that was over the land there would probably be many vacant seats at firesides after this winter, little dreaming that it would be my own experience.

On January 20, just after midnight, my dear mother responded to the summons of the grim Reaper Death and went to the heavenly Father's home. She had been ill for a week, at first with the flu, later developing into pneumonia which proved to be fatal.

Dr. Morrison being in the hospital, I would spend the day with mama and the night with him, watching and hoping that each day would bring some encouraging news, but to the contrary, she gradually grew worse until the end came just as the Sabbath was being ushered in. She was 86 years and 5 months old, and had been remarkably healthy up to the time of her death.

When they phoned me she had left us, I knew she was spending her first Sunday in the house of many mansions, for no one who knew my mother had a doubt as to where she had gone. She lived with constant praises on her lips to her Saviour, and her life was one of prayer and simple faith. While suffering the agonies of her sickness she would quote from Fletcher, Wesley, and hymns she had sung so often, and quoted the words of that recent song, "It is Good Night Here, but Good Morning up Yonder." When I asked her if she loved Jesus, she responded with a smile, "I should say I do." At one time I heard her quote from that dear old hymn, "O love that will not let me go."

Mama lived a long, self-sacrificing life, always trying to do something for some one else. She loved her children devotedly, and divided their sorrows by sharing them, and multiplied their joys by joining in with them. She loved her grandchildren and great-grandchildren, and they in turn loved her with a beautiful and unchanging devotion. Her grandsons were her pall-bearers, and her five children, three daughters and two sons, were present at her home-going. No children ever had a better mother, nor one who went farther in sacrifice and suffering to make them happy.

Mama was an old-time Methodist, having professed faith in Christ in her early married life, and later entering into the experience of entire sanctification, which she exemplified in her daily life. She saw the good in every one and tried to cover up the faults of those whom others would criticize. She was in deed and in truth a follower of her Lord whom she loved and praised with every breath. I keenly feel the lack of her prayers, for she prayed by the hour, but I remember that we are told that the "saints' prayers are bottled up in heaven," and when our Father sees we need help he will pour the vials of his devotion upon us.

There comes to a motherless heart a strange loneliness which nothing in this world can heal, but we journey on realizing that she rests from her labors, and her works do follow her. God gave her to us for 86 and one-half years, and took her home in the triumphs of a living faith, so we say unhesitatingly, "Thy will be done," knowing she is forever with her Lord and Master. May grace be granted unto each of her children to follow her as she followed Christ.

Fasting and Prayer for Florida Holiness Camp Meeting.

The powers of darkness seem to be on a mighty rampage to overthrow the work of salvation and drive God from the earth. Deceit, intrigue, graft, greed, godless amusements, pleasure mad folk, rotten politics, gross immorality in the High School life especially of our young people and many other things that show the way the wind is blowing, almost staggers the faith of the true child of God these latter days.

For this reason the Florida Holiness Camp Meeting was launched to help contend against the powers of darkness and turn sinners from darkness to light and from the power of Satan unto God, that they might receive forgiveness of sins and an inheritance among them that are sanctified by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and God has signally blessed this institution to this good hour and from February 26th to March the 10th, we will begin another pitched battle against the foe of humanity, with the greatest array of help to be found in this country and sound just now, a clarion call to every believer in the whole Bible and the doctrines of original Methodism, to rally to the standards and on Tuesday, February 26th, fast and pray as you never have for the greatest outpouring of the Holy Ghost on us here in mighty convicting, converting, reclaiming and sanctifying power we have ever had. If you will do this, we shall see a mighty sweep of God's power and who knows but out of this may come a mighty leader to lead the hosts of God against the forces of darkness to blessed victory in Jesus Christ.

Throughout the State of Florida there is a movement on to foist upon all the people the Sunday moving picture show and thus help to completely break down the Sabbath. Preserve the Sabbath and you preserve the Nation, but let go the Sabbath and the Nation dies. Pray holy people, pray, yea fast and pray as you never have and call upon the one true and almighty God for help, mighty help, to stem the tide that will soon engulf us and damn us forever.

It is pray through to victory and secure the outpouring of the Holy Ghost in all his marvelous power and office work now or else a little later suffer the outpouring of God's judgment and wrath in sudden destruction. You dare not neglect this call. Be with us in person if you can, but if not join this praying band for Tuesday, Feb. 26th in a day of fasting and prayer and God will hear and answer.

We want everyone who will link your faith, fasting and prayer with us for this coming encampment, to drop me a postal card saying you will join us and giving your full name and address, so that we may report to you after the special battle is over. Whether you realize it or not my dear lover of holiness truth, the crisis is on and we are calling on every soldier in the ranks or in the reserve to come to the help of the Lord against the mighty and unite with us in an all-day of fasting and prayer as stated above.

Address all correspondence and requests for information about the camp meeting, with your card joining the fasting and praying band, to Rev. E. C. Wills, Secretary, 1704 Dauphin St., Orlando, Fla.

GOD'S WAY AND MAN'S WAY

A. H. DIXON.

Scripture Reading.—Prov. 16:25; Psalm 1:6; Isaiah 35:8.

THERE is a way that seemeth right unto a man but the end thereof are the ways of death." These words were spoken almost 3,000 years ago by the wisest of all men, but they are still applicable to millions of people today. And men and women are going on in their own way refusing to go God's way, going out into eternity without God. As we think and look back at some of the men that minded God, we find that God always took care of them and blessed them. While on the other hand the men that refused to go God's way always suffered.

When we think of Noah, we always think of him as being obedient and faithful to God. No doubt during those long years that Noah preached and labored and tried to convince the people that they were going to be destroyed, no doubt they scoffed at him and made all manner of fun of him, perhaps they said he was crazy, just as the world says today about Christians, but we see old Noah still working and preaching and praying, going God's way, until the Flood came and destroyed a sinful world, except Noah and his family. The way of the transgressor is hard.

Then there was Abraham, Moses, Elijah and Enoch, taking them to Heaven without seeing death. Just as God rewarded the thousands of patriarchs that obeyed him, he will reward the faithful today. We are thinking now of a man who had all the education that it was possible for one man to have, and no doubt Paul thought he was doing right in persecuting the Christians until one day God took charge of things and when Paul came to himself he was ready to go God's way. Thank God for Paul and for his "More excellent way" which is the sanctified way. We know that a sinner's way is not an excellent way and it may be possible for a justified state to be the excellent way, but we feel sure that the sanctified way is a more excellent way. We think of one of the Apostles, the one that said, "Lord, I'll never leave you nor forsake you" yet in just a few hours Peter denies that he ever knew Jesus, but the Scripture says that Peter repented very soon after he denied Christ, he went out and wept bitterly.

We must bear in mind that this was before Pentecost, before that mighty outpouring of the Spirit. If it had been after Pentecost, Peter would have died for his Savior just as he did die A. D. 67. Space will not permit us to enumerate all the saints that have gone God's way since the church was organized, but we believe that some day we will be permitted to join that innumerable multitude which no man can number.

Most of us know what the way of the Prodigal is, it seems, all right to us to leave our Father's House and go out to conquer the world, but when we come to ourselves after having spent our all in riotous living, we want to get back to Father's house. Thank God he can and does see us while we are yet a great way off and is always ready and willing to take us back into the fold.

God's way is the best way. Jesus said, "I am the Way, and no man cometh unto the Father but by me." If we go God's way it will be the way that Jesus went. It will be the way of sorrow and suffering of humility and death. The way of the Cross leads through the Garden and up Calvary's hill and at the top of Mt. Calvary is a rugged Cross on which the Prince of Glory died—There is a cross for every one.

"Must Jesus bear the Cross alone,
And all the world go free?"

No, there's a cross for everyone,
And there's a cross for me."
"If we don't bear the cross
We can't wear the crown."

Then Jesus went a little farther. He went farther in his prayer life, farther in his self-denial, farther in his love, and farther in his suffering, even unto death. So in this modern day, we find people trying every other way except God's way. They are joining churches having religious education, social salvation, Federation of Churches, ice cream festivals and even going so far as to have parties in the church. Now these ways may seem right but God says the end of such ways is death. I believe God and am going his way.

Isaiah says God's way is a way of Holiness, and that nothing that is unclean shall pass over it, and that the way shall be so plain that the wayfaring man, though a fool, shall not err therein. Isa. 35:8. Now this way of Holiness does not suit some people; they have a way of their own that seemeth right, but if they have had the light on Holiness and are failing to walk in it on account of their selfish, stubborn nature the end of their way will be death.

So we can see that man's way is a selfish way, a sinful way, a deceitful way, yet a lot of these men are trying to lead others into believing in false doctrines, such as Russellism, Spiritualism and many others of which the end will surely mean death.

God's way brings joy and peace and perfect love in this life and an inheritance incorruptible that fadeth not away in the life to come. God's way is also a narrow way. Thanks be to God, it is broad enough to lead us right through the pearly Gates, if we have Jesus by our side. He has promised us that he would never leave us nor forsake us, and he won't unless we forsake him. Let us never go any place where we can't take Jesus with us, for we need him every step of the way.

"There is sunshine as I journey
To the Land above,
When Jesus plans my way;
There is gladness of the morning,
In the Way I love,
When Jesus plans my way.
"When Jesus plans my way,
My onward, upward way,
There is joy and light,
And the end is right,
When Jesus plans my way."

Christ Makes Good.

A converted Jew (converted in his soul as well as in his head) tells of his conversion. He was induced to read the New Testament, and there found the fulfillment of the prophecies, the fulfillment of which he had so devoutly prayed and hoped for. Then he went to some Christian services. In a mission, he was persuaded to pray, and to make it "in the Name of Jesus Christ, Thy Son, who died for me on the cross." His prayer was lame and halting. It meant little to him. But, he concluded it as directed, using the Name of Jesus Christ. Whether heaven came down or he went up, he is not sure; but he met God right there, and became a new man! "The Name that is above every name"! Hallelujah!

What does the Name of Jesus mean to multitudes of non-Jews? Too often, it is only a by-word! In many of our formal prayers, what does it mean to us? How many professed preachers in pulpits cast reproach on the Name of Christ! Did we all but take the Name of Christ as seriously as did that Jew, what would it mean to us? Did the church, as a whole, take it so, what revivals there would be!

scientists, some of whom are themselves evolutionists, evolution is an unproven theory. Therefore this man's premise of evolutionary creation is the merest assumption and his beautiful diction and faultless logic is all a mere beating of the air. This philosophy is only foolosophy. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." He existed before he created them and when suns have cindered and moons have turned to blood, he will exist. "As a vesture shalt thou fold them up and they shall be changed, but thou art the same and thy years shall not fail." The God of the Bible understands mathematics, "Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand and meted out heaven with a span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance." I would like to see the "swirl of electricity" with an intelligence like that. The God of the Bible has character. He is holy. He has inflexible justice; he has a moral law and will call the wicked to an account at the great final assize. But he is also a God of love and mercy. He performs miracles to relieve the distress of his people and he has special providential care for his children. He will pardon and save the truly penitent and has provided cleansing for all our impurity.

"And God spake all these words." I would like to see the swirl of electricity that could formulate the Ten Commandments, or the Twenty-third Psalm or the Fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, or the Sermon on the Mount, or the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians, or draw the word picture of the coming kingdom and the final judgment as given in the twentieth chapter of Revelations!

Why a man holding to this kind of philosophy should want to retain his position as a minister in an orthodox church is a mystery; and why sensible laymen should continue his support is a mystery almost as great. You might just as well keep a sacred snake in your parlor, an African lion in the nursery, instruct your cook to put poison in the food and expect to raise a healthy family of children, as to retain a pastor teaching the foregoing philosophy, and expect your family to escape the desolating and destructive influences of such moral and intellectual poison. We think if a man is cultured, and friendly, and courteous, he is a safe teacher. But Jesus said, "He that entereth not by the door into the sheep-fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

BOISE FRIENDS CHURCH.

Albert J. Fryhoff was the evangelist in a revival from December 30, 1928 to January 13, 1929, in the Boise Friends' Church, Boise, Idaho.

Bro. Fryhoff is a man of prayer and faith in God for Holy Ghost revivals. He is fearless of man in declaring the truth of God. He emphasized the truth, that no one can be a Christian and continue in sin. "He that committeth sin is of the devil." "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." 1 John 3. He made it very plain that obedience to the command to live a holy life is just as important as to be saved, for without holiness no man shall see the Lord. Heb. 12:14. He taught that man must be justified then sanctified as a second definite work of grace. He hit sin hard, exalted Jesus, the Son of God, honored the blood, and preached salvation for a lost world, obtained only by faith in the Atonement made on Calvary.

About twenty-eight were reclaimed, thirty sanctified and six converted. Many of our own number were definitely helped, the church was strengthened and built up, friends and outsiders, besides some from other churches were definitely blessed. One girl fourteen years old was sanctified and says God called her as a missionary to Africa. One little girl ten years old and a boy thirteen were also sanctified. More visible results were seen and more definite work done than in any revival we have had for several years. The power of the Lord was felt and his blessing was on the services.

We are still praising the Lord for the revival and thanking him for sending Bro. Fryhoff our way. Our prayers and best wishes go with him as he continues in the evangelistic work. The cry of our hearts is, O Lord, give us more young men and young women with real backbone, who will teach and preach the truth, who will stand by the truth and firm in Thee, in these days of peril and apostasy.

Rosa Allen.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST JOHN E. HEWSON.

It has been a long time since I have reported to the "Holiness Family" so this morning I take this opportunity to extend greetings in Jesus' name to the Holiness folk over the country and hope and pray that all are out on the firing line and fighting the good fight of faith.

My first meeting of the fall and winter was at Kittanning, Pa., held on the third floor of Gruskin's Hall, near the Allegheny River bridge, with the Rev. O. C. Stitt, of Ford City, Pa., in charge, and while the congregations were not large at any time, we feel that there was some good work done, and the cause of Holiness was helped in that community by that meeting, quite a few of the members of the Armstrong County Holiness Association attended and added to the strength and power of the meeting, it was my privilege while in that meeting to preach one Sunday morning in the First M. E. Church, and also to address the Men's Bible Class of the same.

My next meeting was with the Rev. C. E. Wagner, pastor of the French Lick Circuit of the M. E. Church at a small place on that circuit by the name of Cuzco; it was a hard pull, and seemingly there was not very much accomplished, it rained quite a good deal, and the church sat off of the main road about a quarter of a mile, and a good deal of the time the people could not get there, however there were eight or ten at the altar during the two weeks' meeting.

My next meeting was in the East Columbus, Ind., M. E. Church, with the Rev. Marion Gatlin, pastor. We found Brother Gatlin a brother beloved. He is a young preacher, this being his first charge, but in his second year there. We feel that the Lord peculiarly blessed in that meeting in spite of the fact that there was an epidemic of chicken pox in the community at the time, the pastor himself being afflicted with it along with his two children, the last week of the meeting, but thirty-four prayed through at the altar and twenty-three united with the church. Quite a few neighboring pastors attended and contributed to the spiritual uplift of the meeting.

My next meeting was near Lindsey, Ohio, in the Bethel United Brethren Church of the Old Constitution, with the Revs. Willis and Viola Mills as the very efficient pastors. While the flu was raging in that community, which kept a large percentage of the membership away from the services, the Lord blessed with all of it, and gave us some eighteen or twenty seekers at the altar and there were four accessions to the church. There are some of the finest people there that it has ever been our privilege to work with in the Lord's work. Quite a few of them are connected with the Portage, Ohio, Holiness Camp Meeting. We found Brother and Sister Mills true blue in standing for second definite work sanctification, and enjoyed being in their home for those two weeks and laboring with them.

We were home for the holidays and then, on Dec. 30, we went to Marion, Ohio, in the Salem Evangelical Church, out nine miles from Marion, with the Rev. James E. Campbell as the pastor. Brother Campbell is not only a good pastor, but a fine singer, both as a soloist and also as a chorus and a choir director, and has had large experience over the United States in directing music in church revivals and camp meetings. He is pastoring that church in connection with his evangelistic work as a singer, and I can heartily recommend him to any church or camp meeting association anywhere. His wife is an accomplished pianist and sings too. After preaching one week there, the flu was so bad that after prayer and counsel together we thought best to close the meeting, Mrs. Campbell herself taking down with it, then Brother Campbell's father died which took him out of the meeting, so about all that was accomplished was sowing the seed of full salvation there.

At present I am in a Methodist Church out ten miles from Adrian, Michigan, the Rev. Robert Davies, pastor. There have been twenty seekers so far at the altar. The roads are covered with ice and very dangerous to travel, which keeps our attendance down to the minimum. I have some open time after March 3rd. Any one wishing my services may address me at 127 N. Chester Ave., Indianapolis, Ind. John E. Hewson.

KOKOMO, INDIANA.

The greatest revival from many angles that was ever held in Beamer Memorial Church, Kokomo, has just come to a close. The Rev. R. Lowell Wilson and his loyal people secured the Bennard Evangelistic Party to assist in this meeting. Dr. George Bennard, author of "Old Rugged Cross," and many other beautiful hymns, did the preaching. He brings the full gospel message in a sane and powerful way. There is no rant or fanaticism, but just the plain, compelling gospel of our Christ. He was assisted by the Rev. D. E. Reed, of Albion, Michigan, who is a specialist with boys and girls. In six after-school meetings there were 1,683 boys and girls present. Many of these boys and girls of the Sunday school made decisions for the Christian life. The church and community were greatly helped by these services. There were 181 reclamations, conversions, and sanctifications at an altar of prayer. Strong men came weeping to the throne of mercy. Many accessions to the church are a result of these services. The pastor is happy to recommend the Bennard party to any pastor or church that wants a real revival, the type that does not die out with the going of the evangelist.—Western Christian Advocate.

WHITE PIGEON, MICHIGAN.

We have just closed a very remarkable meeting here. In the first place, it was remarkable for the disadvantages under which we labored. To start with many were sick with the flu, then the weather was stormy, the roads and sidewalks a sheet of ice, and our crowds were small all the way through. But early in the meeting a child would break down under conviction, come to the altar, pray through, testify clearly, without urging, and then go after others. There was no great break at any time; they came in twos, threes and so on, until fifty seekers had been at the altar, and for the most part had prayed through definitely to a real experience.

Sixteen united with the church, and there are others yet to join. Twelve bore definite testimony to having been sanctified. We are not claiming the results as the result of our preaching, we have done just as good preaching many other places with no such results.

First, the pastor and wife, Brother and Sister Biegue, and their family, are faithful workers and consistent live-ers. Then in a meeting held a year ago, some few people got through good, testified clearly, and lived consistently, and this generally prepares a field for a good harvest. The notion that a revival makes another revival difficult is all wrong. However this may be true if the revival is spurious and the living inconsistent. Well, we believe a revival can be had most any place, under most any condition, if some one will intercede until they prevail. Personally I was never in better victory in my soul than now and never felt more like pressing the battle for souls. W. G. Bennett.

SEPTEMBER REPORT UNSAN AND YATBOWIE, KOREA.

Brother Peh visits a branch church and an itinerant point about six times each month but this work was made very difficult this month because of the heavy rains. The roads were very muddy and Bro. Peh several times had to take his shoes and stockings off and wade through the mud to get to his destination. He says, however, that this was not a hardship because he was always conscious of the presence of the Lord, and then too, the blessing which came to these believers through his visits was compensation for him. One night he had to sail across a mountain stream which was filled with an angry current. It was a very dark night and the water rushed down from the mountain a great noise. While Bro. Peh was crossing this stream he thought of the time that Jesus appeared to his disciples and stilled the angry waves and told them not to fear. As he thought of this the darkness seemed to become light with the presence of Christ and he began to weep tears of joy and praise. It was a very real and blessed experience to Bro. Peh.

An old man who is a very faithful believer of the church lives in a distant village. For some time he has been praying for the salvation of his unsaved son and daughter-in-law with whom he lives, but their hearts were very hard and they would not yield. Bro. Peh did not see this old man for sometime and so felt definitely led of the Spirit one day to go and visit him. Upon reaching the home he found the old man ill and received a very hearty welcome. He was so weak that he could scarcely sit up and had to support himself against the wall while Bro. Peh was there. As Bro. Peh read the Word, sang and prayed with him the hearts of the son and daughter-in-law were both convicted. To use Bro. Peh's expression he said that their hard hearts were melted as the snow before the spring sunshine. It was a very great joy to the old man to see his son and daughter-in-law repent of their sins and seek the Lord, and at once his physical condition began to improve. His new joy seemed to be the source of his healing.

One of the men in the church who had been a very devoted Christian was tempted by the enemy and gradually began to drift toward the world. Bro. Peh was anxious to meet him and deal with him again, but he lived such a long distance away that he had never gotten there. Therefore, when he met him one day in the market place he felt that it was a providence of God and began to talk with him about the condition of his soul. Bro. Peh preached to him for a long time and many people gathered around to listen, and as the people gathered Bro. Peh became more and more inspired and cried out boldly to the people to repent of their sins. The brother finally confessed that he had been very unhappy since he had turned away from the Lord and that he wanted to repent. He said that he had no special purpose in coming to the market that morning and so felt that it was the divine Hand of God leading him. Praise God!

Sister Cho was also somewhat hindered in her work this month by the heavy rains. She could not visit the village of Sukdongli at all and so confined her visiting to Unsan. She visited a total of forty-eight homes, dealing with both believers and unbelievers. Most of the believers she found happy and peaceful in the love of God with firm faith and praying diligently.

One of the new women seekers of the Unsan Church lives in a distant village but she does not mind the long distance which she has to walk to the church and is present at the services regularly. The weather has been very bad this month, but still she has come through the rain and mud to the place of worship. When asked by someone if it was not hard for her to come so far in bad weather to church she said that she does not think of these small sufferings for she remembers the sufferings of Jesus on the cross for her, and she wants to be faithful for him. One time recently she was taken sick and the neighbors tried to persuade her to practice witchcraft, but she rejected them and preached to them. She has a real concern for the salvation of souls about her. Praise the Lord!

In the Sunday morning meetings the Christians at Unsan have studied the Bible with much interest. God's blessing has been upon the meetings throughout the month.

The noted gospel song writer and soloist, Mrs. F. W. Suffield, writes as follows:

lieve Mr. Hoover to be. He will have to deal with many stubborn facts.

One of the difficulties in getting our nation safely onto the road of progress, and in good going, is the fact that we have in this country two great political parties. The one in power is deeply interested in maneuvering the affairs of State so as to keep in power. The party out of power is seeking to so interfere with and hinder the party in power that the public will become angered, demand and bring about a change of administration.

This nation is so vast in territory, so varied in products, industries and methods of livelihood, traffic and various lines of trade and commerce, that it is a difficult matter for any man who may be President to so guide and adjust his administration that all the people can be benefited and pleased at the same time.

George Washington, the great soldier, and a wise administrator, had a very small task as President, compared with what a President must face today, of tremendous organization, great monied combinations, and the conflicting interests of powerful and selfish corporations. It is quite probable that if George Washington were living today he would not be able to preside in the White House with the quiet deliberation and smooth administration which have characterized the seven years of Mr. Coolidge's presidency. The problems of today are entirely different from those of the days of Washington or Lincoln. Those days were indeed trying times, and they were masters of the situation, and well deserve the honors given them by their countrymen.

Our states are so many, with populations so numerous, cities so vast, business organizations so rich and powerful, with such great armies of laborers, with unions and combinations of men and of money, sometimes so antagonistic that the President who would administer wisely for the benefit and progress of all the people, must be all but a superman. He will need at least, to ask for the wisdom that cometh down from above, and he will need to have the combined sympathy and help of the best citizens of all classes of society, organizations and political parties.

Mr. Hoover is, and will be, a far more practical man than Mr. Coolidge has been.

Mr. Coolidge has lived a quiet, retiring life. He has not seen the country nor become acquainted with the people. He only knows of the great middle states, the vast southland and the glorious west, what some one has told him. He has not seen the country, touched elbows with the people, or looked our American citizenship in the eyes, or felt the warm heart beat of our American man and womanhood. Mr. Hoover is an entirely, and we think, most fortunately, a very different sort of man. His good-will trip to South America since his election, was most fortunate. There is nothing just now more important than a good understanding of these neighbors of ours to the south. At this time, Feb. 15, with the Governor of Florida, he is traversing the swamps around Lake Okeechobee in Florida, looking over the devastation of the recent storm and flood, studying first-hand, the best methods to prevent a repetition of such a disaster. To administer wisely the affairs of the nation, and let it be remembered that the nation is not some sort of a machine, its people, its men, women and children, to administer the affairs of the people, a man needs to come in contact with the people, travel through the country in which they live, to visit the cities where they gather their wealth, build their great schools, their temples of worship, their centers of commerce. If one would serve the people well he must know the people. Of course, no sensible person will suppose for a moment that I am insisting that the President of the United States can occupy his time visiting about and spending week-ends with Tom, Dick and Harry, but we want Presidents who are not sectional, but who are big, broad, warm-hearted, enthusiastic Americans who know first-hand, this great nation with its people and their interests. We believe Mr. Hoover is quite such a man, and that becoming President he will make it a point to become more and more intimately acquainted with the country, its people, their desires, capacities and needs, and to the best of his ability to administer to the same.

It is supposed that he will give much attention to the building of great roads, the construction of waterways, the drainage of the Mississippi Valley and protection against floods. This will give employment to millions of men, and will prove invaluable in travel and traffic and the protection of our country from flood disasters, and the cheap movement of the products of the country to the centers of population. Let the people of this great nation rally to the support of our new President, and do everything in their power for the administration of law, and best welfare of all classes, and the upbuilding of high moral standards, and a creation of a spiritual atmosphere where God will be recognized and revered, and the interests of our fellowbeings may become our sacred concern, and we may move forward to a better and brighter day in the history of our great republic.

One of the Most Pleasant Hours of my Illness.

Our beloved Bishop Oldham is spending some time this winter with a friend, Dr. Gray, a former Kentuckian, in St. Petersburg. The Bishop and Dr. Gray had occasion to motor to Miami and were kind enough to call to see me. To look into the pure, shining face of Bishop Oldham was better than medicine. I feel to place him in the very front ranks of all the saintly men I have ever known. My soul was refreshed, and my body helped with the delightful hour he spent with us, and his earnest prayer for us before he departed. We are thankful to know that he is to be with us for at least a short time, at our camp meeting in Orlando, Fla., February 28 to March 10. His presence is a benediction in any place. May the sun of his life go down very slowly.

Monthly Sermon.

REV. H. C. MORRISON.

AN UTMOST SALVATION.

Text: "Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." Heb. 7:25.

It is a good long journey from the ugly bulb to the beautiful and fragrant bloom, but if the bulb is brought in contact with the proper elements it will decay and pass away; but the bloom, waving its beauty, will scatter its fragrance on the wind. There must be soil, sunshine and flower transforming the bulb into the bloom. If the means are not used the end cannot be secured. The bulb will shrivel, decay, and there will be no bloom.

There is a wide difference between the sinner, in rebellion against God, and the saint in communion with him; and yet so certain as there are conditions that can change the bulb to blossoms, there are forces that can transform the sinner into the saint. "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

There was a wide difference between the young man, John Bunyan, so vulgar and profane, that sinners sought to restrain him from his extreme wickedness, and John Bunyan, the mighty man of God who trod the gloomy aisles of Bedford jail for twelve long years, imprisoned for Jesus' sake who, when they offered to release him on condition that he would not preach, gave answer, "I will stay in this dungeon until the moss be grown upon my forehead like my eyebrows; but you may turn me out of this prison today and I will preach Jesus Christ tomorrow." In his case the bulb of the blasphemous sinner had passed, and the saint was in full flower.

What was the secret of it all? What the transforming power? One day John Bunyan, in the depths of his sins, looked up and a wonderful vision was before his eyes; it was as if he beheld the Christ hanging in his blood and agony upon the cross. Bunyan gazed in wonder and alarm; the power of sin was broken; the mask was torn from him, and it appeared in all of its distortion and hideousness. He fought a long, hard battle with doubts and fears and Satan. He wallowed in the mire of "the slough of despond" but he finally struggled out and came to the cross. His burden fell off and the Sun of righteousness arose upon him, and the flower of faith and love burst forth into fulness of unfading beauty and fragrance.

What a transformation from the Jerry McAuley of the criminal row in Sing Sing Prison to the Jerry McAuley preaching Christ, and winning souls to Christ, bringing up men from the depths of the slums into the white light of the great salvation in a mission in New York City. Who wrought the change? It was Jesus, the same Jesus who made the blind to see, the deaf to hear, who caused the lame to leap for joy, and the dead to rise up and come forth from the tomb. He touched the dirty, decaying bulb of sin and it burst forth into the beautiful flower of salvation.

St. Paul, who writes himself down as the "chief of sinners," was a most unlikely convert to Christianity, a learned, proud, prejudiced Jew, full of self-conceit, so blinded in his soul that he believed himself to be doing the will of God when he hailed to prison and even gave consent to the death of the saints, is suddenly changed from the persecutor of the disciples of Christ to the powerful preacher of the gospel of Christ. What wrought this marvelous transformation? Approaching Damascus yonder he saw a light and heard a voice; the light was the glory of the Christ, and the voice was that of our Redeemer, and the persecutor becomes the champion of the cross and rejoices in the privilege to suffer for his Lord. The marvelous transformations wrought among sinful men by our Lord Jesus written down, would fill great libraries full of books.

It was the mission of Jesus in the world to seek and to save the lost. All power is given unto him; all devils flee at his rebuke. The thunder of the tempest is hushed at his command; the trembling harlot goes from his presence forgiven, in purity and peace. His mighty arm lifts the dying thief from the cross into paradise. In his hands a boy's luncheon is multiplied into a feast for hungry thousands. Why not? Those hands had laid the foundations of the universe. They had scooped out the beds of the ocean and piled the mountains to the clouds. They had unrolled the plains and stretched out the vast blue sky. The moon and stars were the work of his finger, the vast regiments of blazing suns had come into existence at his call and marched in splendid order at his command. He sits upon the throne of his glory; angels worship at his feet, but he is not content. He saw man in his original purity; he knew him before he had listened to the seductive voice of the tempter, ere sin had stamped its foul insignia upon his spotless spirit. He had loved him with a love that could not let him go. He came to redeem him from his sins, to lift him from his fall, to restore him to holiness, fellowship and communion with God. All the power of the eternal Godhead that had created angels, built the universe, set millions of circling suns in their unending course, had come down to rescue man from his captivity to sin. He came armed with all power over devils, disease and death; the very elements are obedient to his word; death is his submissive slave. He is able to save to the uttermost.

We must not think of Jesus simply as having come into the world and died for the redemption of souls, and returned to the Father, but we must remember that he is the same Christ; that he "ever liveth to make intercession unto God" for the souls for whom he suffered, the sinners, he redeemed in the agonies of the cross. We are in danger of looking back through the centuries and thinking of the Babe of Bethlehem, the young Carpenter of Nazareth, the wonderful Teacher on the seashore, the marvelous Preacher in the prow of the boat, with the multitude before him on the seashore, the crucified victim of the cross, and of forgetting that Jesus is alive forevermore, that he loves the souls of men with the same passion that characterized him when he prayed for those who crucified him, when he answered the prayer of the dying thief upon the cross. He announces his victory over death. He says, "I am alive forevermore." He declares that all power in heaven and earth is given unto him.

The inspired apostle assures us in the text that "He is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him." It must not be forgotten that the sinner's part is to "come." He must find the return road of repentance. The wicked must forsake his way; the sinner must give up his sinful thoughts, he must break with his godless companions, he must be glad to renounce his sins and he must realize that the only way back to God is through Jesus Christ. There is no way of salvation apart from Jesus. God has shut up redemption in his Son, and this redemption is ample. It meets all the needs of a fallen race. The Lord Jesus has "tasted death for every man." "Whosoever will may come," and we have the assurance that he who comes will in no wise be cast out.

Jesus did not only pray in the Garden of Gethsemane with the burden of lost humanity upon him, and on the cross of his agony, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do," but he continues to pray for us.

FAITH

I will not doubt though all my ships at sea
Come drifting home with broken masts and sails,
I will believe the hand which never fails,
From seeming evil, worketh good for me.
And though I weep because those sails are tattered,
Still will I cry, while my best hopes lie shattered,
"I trust in Thee."

I will not doubt though all my prayers return
Unanswered from the still white realm above,
I will believe it is an all-wise love
Which has refused those things for which I yearn;
And though at times I cannot keep from grieving,
Undimmed shall burn.

I will not doubt though sorrows fall like rain,
And troubles swarm like bees about a hive;
I will believe the heights for which I strive
Are only reached by anguish and by pain;
And though I groan and writhe beneath my crosses,
I yet shall see through my severest losses
The greater gain.

I will not doubt, well anchored is this faith,
Like some staunch ship, my soul braves every gale;
So strong its courage that it will not quail
To breast the mighty unknown sea of death.
O, may I cry, though body parts with spirit,
"I do not doubt," so listening worlds may hear it,
With my last breath.

—Anon.

Oh, wonderful thought! "He ever liveth to make intercession for them that come unto God by him." On the mediatorial throne somewhere in the vast depth of the universe there is a city, a place of habitation, a house of many mansions, a throne of infinite power, a God of love, and there in his presence is an interceding Saviour. He pleads for those he represents. He has borne the sins of a lost world in his body on the cross, and now on the mediatorial throne he remembers us; he reminds infinite wisdom, awful justice, and the great source of all blessing and grace, that he has paid our debt, that he has suffered in our stead, that he has made an atonement for our sins, and he never fails to secure forgiveness, justification, adoption, peace and eternal life for all those who come unto God by him.

Let us comfort our hearts that we have a living Christ before our Father; that he hears our prayers, that he joins his intercession with ours, that the Father hears him, and never will forget his covenant with his Son; that if he would take our sins and die in our stead, we should have forgiveness if we would repent, and return to God, trusting in the atonement made for us by his Son, our blessed Lord and Saviour. What more could mercy do? Where is there any room for improvement in this great scheme which offers a full and free salvation to all men?

Let us tell the good news to the whole world, that Jesus Christ has come and solved the sin problem, that he has made an atonement for the sins of the whole world, that he ever liveth to make intercession, that he can secure a hearing for us, and a full and free pardon. Oh, that all men would come to God by him, believing on him, trusting in him, accepting the atonement he has made, and enter by him into the presence of a reconciled God, come back into peace, and purity, and companionship with the blessed Trinity.

The Holiness Camp Meeting in Orlando, Florida.

This camp begins February 28 and closes March 10. We hope our Florida readers will make it a point to attend the camp. We always have a goodly number of tourists at this encampment. Let THE HERALD readers throughout the land, pray earnestly that the blessing of God may rest upon us with great power. The need of a gracious manifestation of the Holy Spirit is very great. Let prayer be made that the Holy Spirit may be present and graciously manifest himself in the conviction of sinners, the conversion of penitents, the reclamation of backsliders and the sanctification of believers, and that all of us attending the meeting may receive a fresh anointing of the Spirit, a confirming and settling in our faith, and in the blessed assurance of perfect love. Come, if you can, and if you cannot attend, pray that the blessing of the Lord may rest upon us.

H. C. MORRISON.

Bishop Henderon's Death.

We were greatly saddened to hear of the death of Bishop Henderon. Since coming to Florida I had received a beautiful letter expressing his sympathy for me on account of my recent illness. Before I had time to answer I see in the public press that he has passed away.

Bishop Henderon was a man of rare gifts and many excellent qualities. I have never seen a man preside better over an annual conference, with more consideration for the brethren and, at the same time, drawing from them more information, with regard to their work, the conditions and needs of the communities in which they lived. A few years ago I preached a series of sermons at an annual conference over which Bishop Henderon presided and heard him preach in the afternoon to the young people one of the most searching, clear and forceful sermons on Consecration I ever heard. He was one of the most evangelistic bishops in the church and will be greatly missed. May the blessing of God rest graciously upon his bereaved family.

Herald Readers:

Are you following from week to week the work of Dr. Ridout in China? His articles give us a most remarkable insight into conditions, the great need, and the wonderful opportunities for evangelism in China. The Lord is using our beloved Brother Ridout in a very gracious way, not only among the Chinese, but among the missionaries of many denominations. Let us follow him and his wife and their work in China with our earnest prayers. It does look like that China is just now offering one of the richest harvest fields for a full salvation evangelism. He went over in connection with Dr. Stone and Miss Jennie Hughes' great work in Shanghai, and from there his work has widened into a boundless field. May the Holy Spirit continue to guide and empower him and his wife for the great work in which they are engaged.

H. C. M.

The Hand of God.

From various sources comes the same word as to current events in China, namely, that God is "cleaning house"! In the past twenty or thirty years, much of the so-called missionary work there has become materialistic. First, we were told of "the by-products of missions," the general social and economic betterment of the people. Then it turned more and more from the true work of missions, that of gospel evangelism unto salvation in Christ, to the by-products only. Meanwhile, Modernism, with its beastly evolution, became the dominant note in many places. We were offering the Chinese our western civilization and education, instead of Scriptural salvation through the blood of Christ!

Now, while scores of missionaries are being "evacuated", and millions of dollars in mission property is being looted and destroyed by the incensed Chinese; some missionaries who have stood true to God and to his Word, are safe, and are continuing their salvation work with blessed results! The Chinese people believe in and want such! But the cry comes out of China, "Do not send the Modernist missionaries back to us"! China has had enough of that, and is spewing it out! Also, the wrath of God is sweeping it out with the beasom of war! Will the Modernist leaders recognize the handwriting on the wall, and take warning?

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room in the dear old Herald for two Tennessee boys? We have been reading The Herald for a long time, as our father takes the paper, and we all love the tenth page. We especially love Aunt Bettie's letters to the cousins. We both go to Sunday school and preaching every Sunday and both belong to the Methodist Episcopal Church. Our father is a local preacher in our church. Our pastor is Rev. W. J. Fesmire and we like him. He loves children and is kind. Well, the custom we notice with the cousins they tell about their sports. We like to play all games boys love to play and we also trap some. We catch some nice opossums and rabbits. We are in the fourth and fifth grades at school and we are nine and eleven years old. You Tennessee boys write and let us hear from you. We will close hoping Mr. W. B. will be on his vacation and not get this. We will close with love for Aunt Bettie.

G. B. and Rolland Vernon.
Rt. 3, Friendship, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I sure enjoy reading the letters to The Herald. I wrote once before and I want to thank Aunt Bettie for printing it. How many of us have a Bible? I have a little Testament. I hope Mr. W. B. is out feeding cattle when this letter arrives. Malda J. Twell, I guess your age to be 17, Hester Webb, I guess your middle name to be Anna. Eva Holloway, my birthday is close to yours. Mine is Feb. 10. If I am right I want to hear from you all. Aunt Bettie, I sure would like to see you. We have been having lots of rainy weather. I want all of you cousins to write to me, will answer every letter I receive. Elizabeth Henry.
Rt. 2, Hardin, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please allow a little Missouri girl to join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to church and Sunday school most every Sunday at the Methodist Church. My papa takes The Pentecostal Herald and I am so glad that we have a page for the children and young people. I like to read page ten. I am twelve years old and like to go to school. My birthday is December 14th. Who has my birthday? If so please write to me. I have light complexion, blond hair, and blue eyes. I have five birds for pets. This is my first attempt to write and hope it will miss the W. B. With love to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Hazel Pyle.
Bell City, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Can you make room for another cripple to talk a few minutes to all the cousins? The Herald comes to my home each week and I haven't words to express the joy that it brings to me as I read the sermons, page ten, and the entire paper. God wonderfully blesses me as I read his paper. Yes, I am a Christian and there is nothing gives us more pleasure than serving God. Am so glad to hear of so many of you cousins who are striving to do our Master's will. That is the only life that pays, isn't it? Can you listen a few minutes while I tell you some of my experiences? Perhaps it will help some one. I have always been in the habit of reading "True Story Magazines" thinking there was no harm in doing so. One day while praying I fell over in the floor and everything became dark for a long while, then the devil came crowding up behind me in the form of a lizard with great, long claws. I cannot begin to tell the terror that seized me. But I cried, "Oh Lord, what have I done?" The Lord said, "Read stories and neglected to read the Bible." I said, "Forgive me and I shall never do it again." Then the blessed light came. Oh, what a wonderful God we are serving, one who is always ready and willing to forgive if we will only ask. By the help of the Lord I expect to live such a true life the devil will never have another chance at me. Christians, our road is narrow, so watch and pray, that God may guard our footsteps each day. Sinner friends, remember the same devil that was after me is on your path, so listen to the pleading of our Father, turn from this awful sin that is leading you to destruction, and be a follower of Christ. If Mr. W. B. doesn't get this letter I will come again some time and tell you some of the blessing the Lord has given me. My birthday is Dec. 15, was twenty-three years old.

Lutie Miller.
Rt. 3, Paris, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have never written to The Herald before so I hope to see this letter in print. I have brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am fifteen years old. My birthday is Feb. 26. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with G and ends with A and has six letters. The one who guesses my middle name I will write to them. I will write to any girl or boy who would care to write me.

Ruth G. Cash.
Tye River, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a Virginia girl. My grandmother takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I like to go to school and take music. I study hard on both my school lessons and music lessons. I am ten years old and I am in the fifth grade. My birthday is August 9. Who has it? Emporia is a very pretty place. We have seven churches for white people here. One ice plant, coco cola plant, and an electric plant. The town is supplied with good water. My best friend is Frances Alyse Williams. She and I are Christians. We are also members of the Methodist Church. There are about 2500 people in Emporia. I hope Mr. W. B. is out deer hunting when this letter arrives. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Evelyn Bryant.
Box 267, Emporia, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Hello cousins! A Maryland girl between the age of nineteen and twenty-two wishes to write to The Herald for the second time in several years. I live near Washington, D. C. My family and I attend Open Door Church there. We had the privilege of hearing Dr. H. C. Morrison preach when he was in Washington at the Emory Methodist Church recently. Also the Rev. F. F. Bosworth and party held a revival in this city twice a day for over three months. Many were saved and healed.

How many of the cousins have read the little book, "Backsliding" by J. B. Culpepper? There is an excellent poem in it, entitled, "The Church Walking with the World." I have a cousin in Asbury College, Audrey Huntington, from Maryland. We love The Herald. Let each and every one of us make the coming New Year the best yet. Christabelle Miriam Long.

Rt. 2, Landover, Md.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been wanting to write to you all for so long. Tonight I finished my lessons and the first paper I picked up was the dear old Pentecostal Herald. This is one of the best papers we take; after reading what was on page ten I decided to quick write a letter. How many of you girls and boys live near the big city of Chicago? I hope to visit Mr. Rader, one of the greatest evangelists of the world. He certainly is a wonderful man. If anyone living near there and never heard him, they have missed some of the greatest services of their life. I hear him over the Radio every Sunday over Station WJBT. Do any of you take the "World Wide Christian Courier?" I think it is as wonderful a paper as The Pentecostal Herald. I guess this letter is a matter of asking questions, but I do want to ask one more before I close. Do any of you know Mary Roberts' address? I have written to her but the letter was sent back because of the wrong address. I am now leaving you in hopes that the dear Lord will keep and bless you all till I meet you again in my next letter. With love to one and all.

Carrie Carpenter.
Rt. 1, Perrysburg, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twenty-two years of age, five feet, five inches tall, have black hair and eyes. Who has my birthday, March 7? Have I a twin? If so, write to me. I would like to correspond with a Christian girl between fifteen and twenty. Virgil O'Bannon, I guess your middle name to be Alma. My middle name begins with C and ends with N, and has six letters. I go to Sunday school every Sunday that is fit. As I am taking up too much space I will ring off hoping to hear from some of the cousins. May God bless you all. I hope to see this letter in print as it is my first one.

Harry C. Merica.
Rt. 1, Box 70, Elkton, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Hoosier girl join your happy band? I am twelve years old. I have light hair, fair complexion, blue eyes. Jesus is my personal Savior. My sister takes The Herald. I like it so much. We also know the Editor; have heard him preach at camp, Oskaloosa, Iowa, and Ames, Ga. Sure is a wonderful man of God. Nettie Hart, King Og, of Bashan lay on a bed of iron. What man in the Bible fed his sweetheart on parched corn? My middle name is Ferne. What is my first name? It begins with L and ends with A, and has six letters. Saved and kept.

L. Ferne Rogers.
Rt. 3, Bluffton, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to get acquainted with the cousins; so I thought I would come in and chat with you a little while. As this is my first visit I will describe myself. I am five feet tall, weigh one hundred thirty pounds, have brown hair, blue eyes and medium complexion. Cousins, please write.

Lonnie Longate.
Lebanon Junction, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Ohio girl join your band of boys and girls? This is my first time of writing to The Herald. I enjoy page ten. I hope to see my letter in its columns. I go to Sunday school and church. Our preacher is Rev. Somerville. I have black hair, and brown eyes. My hair is bobbed. I am in the fourth grade. I am nine years old. I have two sisters and two brothers; one is a twin. My birthday is March 19. My first name has five letters in it. It starts with L and ends with A.

Lavone Phillips.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I enjoy page ten. I go to school and am in the fourth grade. I go to Sunday school and church. We have a class of boys and girls. Our teacher's name is Bertha Hines. I have blue eyes and brown hair. My birthday is March 19, and I am nine years old. I have a twin sister. I will look for this letter on page ten. Guess my middle name. It starts with L and ends with E, and has five letters in it.

Lemar Phillips.
Fredericktown, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a little North Dakota girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have been a reader of page ten for several years and enjoy reading all the letters of the cousins and Aunt Bettie's, too. Mother takes The Herald and dearly loves all the sermons. Mother is a Christian, and I want to be one too, and live for Jesus. I have brown hair and eyes. I am about five feet tall and weigh about fifty-seven pounds. I am in the sixth grade. Am eleven years old. My birthday is July 20. Have I a twin? If so, please write. I will answer all letters received. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print.

Ruby Levi.
Medina, N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl seven years old. My middle name begins with D and has three letters in it. The boy or girl who guesses it I will write a letter to them. In the eighth chapter of Ezra I found every letter in the alphabet. I even found J.

Ellen D. Bonfield.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little country girl and want to join your happy band of girls and boys. My grandmother takes The Herald, and I enjoy reading page ten. I am in the fifth grade and am eleven years old. I have dark brown hair and gray eyes.

Dear Aunt Bettie: After reading the Thanksgiving poem you wrote to the boys and girls I thought I would write and tell you how much I enjoy your good letters. I think the Boys and Girls' Page is wonderful. Every boy and girl ought to try to make it better by their good letters and testimonies. A revival has just closed here at this place. We had a good meeting. Rev. G. C. Hesson preached for us. Bro. Overstreet was the singer. Bro. Hesson preaches here every fourth Sunday. He is a good preacher. Mary Hudson, come again. I sure do enjoy your letters. You have corresponded with my mother and I like to read your good letters. I have one sister at home named Lulla. She was twenty years old Dec. 12. I was eighteen January 30. Have I a twin? I sure would like to correspond with any of the cousins near my age. I will send my picture to the one that would care to write. Who appeared with Jesus in the Transfiguration? What did the disciples know after that? Will close with all good wishes for a Happy New Year.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A. L. C.: "Please pray for a dear brother, living in a great city, who is under the influence of an evil person. Pray that this influence may be broken and his wife may have perfect confidence in him. Also, that his health may be restored and, most of all, that he will get back to God. Also, for two sons who are strict business men and treat their fellowman right, so far as I know, but pray for them to get a clearer vision of the Christ life and live closer to Jesus.

A Reader: "Please pray for someone to be forgiven and restored to peace and joy spiritually, and that one may be sealed if it's the Lord's will. Also for some others to be brought closer to the Lord."

FALLEN ASLEEP

DEATH OF MRS. REV. C. L. LEWIS AND DAUGHTER, MRS. GRACE SMITH.

Those who attend Camp Sychar and the many other friends and acquaintances of the Rev. C. L. Lewis, president of the Ohio State Camp Meeting Association will be pained to learn of the double bereavement of Rev. Lewis in the passing away of his wife and foster-daughter which occurred within ten days of each other, both the victims of pneumonia.

The daughter, Mrs. Grace Smith, was the first to be called, departing this life at her home in Coshocton, O., on January 5, the day following her 29th birthday. She leaves to mourn her early departure a brother and five sisters, her foster-parents and foster-brother, Rev. L. Chester Lewis, of Montezuma, Ohio, her husband and a ten-weeks' old baby boy. Mrs. Lewis responded to the last summons just ten days later.

Both Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Smith were well known to all Sychar people, and their faces were familiar to Sychar attendants and by whom they will be greatly missed.

But not only will the news of their home-going be a shock to Sychar people, but also to the many friends to whom they endeared themselves on the pastorates they served throughout their itinerant ministry of some thirty-three years.

Mrs. Lewis is survived by her husband, the Rev. C. L. Lewis, one son, Rev. L. Chester Lewis, one brother and three sisters. These have the sympathy of the many friends who share with them in this double sorrow, and whose prayers arise for the blessing of the God of all comfort upon them.

Funeral services for Mrs. Smith were conducted from the United Brethren Church in Coshocton, O., by Rev. C. W. Speckman, pastor of the church, and Rev. R. F. Mayer, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Mrs. Lewis was an active member of the Gay St., M. E. Church of Mt. Vernon, and her pastor, the Rev. R. F. Mayer, conducted the funeral services from that church Thursday afternoon, Jan. 17, and interment was made in the Bloomfield cemetery. A brief obituary of Mrs. Lewis follows:

Lula E. Mallory was born Feb. 24, 1867 and went to her eternal reward Jan. 15, 1929. In her girlhood she was converted and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church of which she remained a faithful and active member until her death. For several years she taught school; and on Sept. 10, 1890 was united in marriage to Rev. C. L. Lewis. Her life as the wife of a Methodist pastor was lived in a number of communities, in each of which she won warm and lasting friends.

She was for many years District as well as local officer in the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and was active in the Women's Christian Temperance Union and other women's organizations of the church. At the time of her death she was president of the Mount Vernon Women's Home Missionary Society, and a teacher of the Women's Bible Class.

She has gone from us to her eternal reward, but her works do truly live on after her departure.

RATCLIFF.

Hannah E., daughter of Francis and Susannah Stanton Coffin, was born July 22, 1841; she departed this life December 18, 1928, age 87 years, 4 months and 26 days.

On April 10, 1871, she was united in marriage to A. H. Ratcliff. To this union was born three children: namely, Mrs. Ella R. Doughty, Francis O. Ratcliff and Mrs. Ada S. Cochran. She leaves besides these, four grandchildren, four great grandchildren, a number of nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Ratcliff was brilliantly converted when just a child and joined the United Brethren Church which held their meetings in the "Old Freedline School-house." She has gone across the fields many and many a time to attend services at the school-house. Later she joined the United Brethren at Selma and remained a faithful member of that church until about twenty-five years ago, when she and her husband joined the Methodist Church at Windsor; of which church she remained a loyal member until her death. She was anxious to attend services and gave proof of her earnestness and love for the Master in her bubbling testimonies, for her's was a lively and overflowing experience.

Mrs. Ratcliff showed her faith by her works when she stayed home for almost five years and nursed her mother during her long illness. She liked to go to religious meetings, and often did so when it meant sacrifice and effort on her part. She attended all the services at the Windsor M. E. Church her last Sunday on earth and only missed one opportunity after that of attending a meeting before her departure, Tuesday morning, December 18, 1928.

It is needless to remind you of the life of her who is taken from among us for to know her was to love and admire her. She in her quiet way let her light shine so that all might see. Ah, hers was a character mellowed and sweetened by a long life with many experiences and a host of friends. Yes, there is one link gone out of our golden chain of friends here, but one added up there.

Practically all of Mrs. Ratcliff's life was spent on the farm where she was born and reared. Her children are fortunate to have mother with them for such a goodly number of years, yet there will be a loneliness because of her absence, for she liked to do what she could. Mrs. Ratcliff liked to help her daughters with their missionary lesson, for she retained her faculties of mind to the very last, just the night before her death she had been preparing her missionary lesson.

Mrs. Ratcliff filled her place as a mother exceedingly well. She instructed her children in the principles of Jesus Christ and gave them the wholesome influence of the family altar. Her influence as a mother shall live on.

Mrs. Ratcliff expressed no anxiety for the Homeland although she was preceded by her husband more than seven years ago. Still she had an assurance that was steadfast and sure. But they are again united never to be parted.

We might say in the words of the poet:

"Lord it belongs not to my care
Whether I die or live;
To love and serve that is my share
And this thy grace must give.

"If life be long, I will be glad
That I may long obey;
If short, yet why should I be sad
To soar to endless day?

"Christ leads me through no darker rooms
Than he went through before;
He that into God's kingdom comes
Must enter by this door.

"Come Lord, when grace hath made me meet
Thy blessed face to see;
For, if thy work on earth be sweet
What will thy glory be?

"My knowledge of that life is small;
The eye of faith is dim;
But 'tis enough that Christ knows all,
And I shall be with him."

DEW.

January 29 the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Dew at 5:10 o'clock Monday morning, taking as its reward their fair and lovely daughter Ruby Eunice. She had been in failing health for the past two years, being confined to her bed since Christmas. We know that she is out of her pain and suffering, yet that does not relieve the broken hearted family. Though yielding to God's will, they gave her up without a murmur or complaint, knowing that the rosebud was transplanted in the Father's garden for some purpose.

Ruby leaves behind, her father and mother, three sisters, Mrs. Silas Gorell, Toledo, Ohio, Mrs. Monroe Wilkins, Christian Dew, Green Ridge, Ky.; also six brothers, Lawrence, of Louisville, Fosh, Roy and Kenneth of Toledo, Ohio, Ernest, of Coshocton, O., and T. P., Jr., of Green Ridge, Ky.

There are a host of friends to mourn her death, especially the one who is writing this brief account. I was with her continually six months. I found her to be a true loving friend at all times. In her illness she was

Now we have this volume, his autobiography, giving an intimate recital of his experiences from early childhood to the present time. Pathos, humor, optimism, scathing rebuke, with an amazing memory of detail unite to give this volume the peculiar charm that characterizes all of Bud Robinson's writings. A TESTIMONIAL.

Truly, the Lord hath done great things for us whereof we are glad, and I want to testify to his healing power. On the 15th day of last October, I got a fall (due to dim sight) which rendered me unable to walk a step for two weeks, as one of my limbs was badly hurt. For another week I went slowly and cautiously about my room on crutches. Being seventy-nine years of age I felt doubtful of ever walking again without crutches unless the healing hand of God was laid upon me. We had been asking him to let me walk, and as we prayed my faith mounted upward until one afternoon while sitting quietly by the fireside and earnestly calling upon him his gentle voice said, You just lack one inch of faith, and praise his dear name, he enabled me to go "that inch"; I arose from my chair and, like the lame man who was healed at the beautiful gate of the temple, I came walking, leaping and praising God and have not used my crutches since. I cannot praise him enough for what he has done for me. I have been serving him a long time, but now feel under renewed obligations to give my very life for him if he wills it so, and am living in glorious expectation of an abundant entrance into that home which he went to prepare for those who are faithful to the end.

Yours in him,
Mrs. M. E. Barker.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson X.—March 10, 1929.

Subject.—Baptism and the Lord's Supper. Matt. 28:19-20; 1 Cor. 11:23-29.

Golden Text.—This do in remembrance of me. 1 Cor. 11:24.

Introduction.—It is generally understood that water baptism and the Lord's Supper in the New Testament dispensation take the place of circumcision and the Passover in the Old Testament dispensation; although baptism was in use in the Jewish Church previous to the coming of our Lord. This, however, was not Christian baptism; but, rather, a baptism unto repentance, with reference to the forgiveness of sins. Christian baptism may be termed a concrete oath of allegiance to the Trinity, administered "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Each Passover lamb was a type of Jesus, "the Lamb of God." It was a promissory sacrifice, validated through the death of the real paschal Lamb on the cross of Calvary. Otherwise it could have neither meaning nor merit.

In the Mosaic economy there was a close connection between circumcision and the Passover, the former giving right to the latter. Some Christian bodies take this view concerning baptism and the Lord's Supper, holding that one has no right to the eucharist until he has been baptized, although he be soundly converted. However, I seriously doubt the correctness of this position. Certainly there is no word of Scripture to substantiate it. If one has been born of the Divine Spirit, he is a child of God; and I do not believe that the Lord Jesus Christ would forbid his communing. Of course, this does not apply to such as believe in baptismal regeneration; for in their view one cannot be born again prior to baptism. Just as the Jews lost sight of the circumcision of the heart, and placed an overconfidence in the outward rite, so we lose sight of heart baptism in an almost idolatrous feeling regarding water baptism.

While there are many blessedly good people among the Friends, sometimes called Quakers, who have never been baptized at all, and I do not for one moment doubt their salvation, I am sure that water baptism is a New Testament rite, and that all Christians should receive it. But the outward rite is worthless without the regeneration within.

In the Lord's Supper the Church should always use unleavened bread and pure unfermented grape juice, they both typifying the purity of our Lord's sacrifice. We eat the bread and drink the wine in memory of his passion and death. Of course, none of our prayers change the elements. They are but symbols. No prayer ever yet changed the bread into his flesh, or the wine into his blood. The elements can be put to chemical test, and have been. It would be sheer idolatry to worship the elements. O, we must not lose the Lord in a mere scrap of bread and a few drops of grape juice. One does not really commune, unless he is in spiritual touch with the Master.

I may be pardoned for having some personal convictions concerning the Lord's Supper. 1. It should be celebrated in the presence of devout Christians only. The ungodly world has no right at such a feast. 2. It should not occur too often, lest its sacredness grow common. Four times a year would be sufficient. 3. Such occasions should not be cumbered with much preaching. Songs, prayers, testimonies and altar services for the sanctification of believers would all be in order. 4. There should be no hurry, no bluster, no formalism, but a season of deep heart-searching. 5. If there be any hard feelings, or any misunderstandings anywhere in the church, this should be the time for reconciliation and forgiveness. 6. This should be a day when the Holy Ghost hovers over the church, and burns in every soul. The occasion should be a foretaste of heaven.

Comments on the Lesson.

The two verses from Matthew need no explanation, but plenty of application. We call this "The Great Commission," but act as though it was of little importance. I am not sure that the Church has any real business outside of this command of her Lord. There is not a more pitiable sight in the world than a rich church pleasure-crazy and money-mad, while a lost world rushes to hell. But the Commission has never been revoked.

Paul had some trouble with the Corinthian church. They had been converted from heathenism to Christ, which was very blessed; but their habits were not all converted. In verses 23-26 the apostle tells the Corinthians how to observe the Lord's Supper, and explains its meaning; all of which is simple enough to us. I do not see that one's bodily attitude is material. When Jesus administered the elements to his apostles, they were reclining on couches, as the Jews did at their meals. Personally I rather like the kneeling posture, except that it is frequently uncomfortable for many who are old or infirm. But it is unsafe for such as would idolize the bread and wine. Sitting around tables is good, if the communicants are reverent in heart and form. The attitude of the heart is the thing that really matters. If this be right, other things are minor; but if this be wrong, all is wrong.

In the latter part of the lesson Paul deals with the wrong attitude of the Corinthians towards the Lord's Supper. Instead of making it a sacrament in remembrance of the Lord and Savior, they were eating and drinking to gluttony and drunkenness. In their beastliness they had lost the meaning of the feast. They did not "discern the Lord's body"—forgot his sufferings in their behalf. Paul says they ate the bread and drank the wine unworthily; and that they were thereby eating and drinking damnation to themselves. Is there any such danger now? Certainly. No Christian—not even a penitent seeking his Savior, could do such a thing; but any impenitent sinner, church-member or not, who approaches the Lord's table is in danger. There is but one rule: "Let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup." No one has the right to sit in judgment upon another.

NOTICE!

To the Members and Friends of the K. S. H. A.

That we may eliminate taking so much valuable time for collections on the two Sundays of our Wichita Camp Meeting, it is suggested by several of our staunchest and wisest supporters, that we secure the names of not less than fifty people who will obligate themselves for $100 each, payable any time between now and next August. This amount can be remitted in payments if desired. To adopt this financial plan will practically cover our annual budget bill. I already have the names of three who have gladly agreed to pay this amount. Brethren, this is surely important. Can we not have sufficient response at once and thus be relieved of this burden during the camp.

NOTICE TO THE HOLINESS PEOPLE OF AMERICA.

A great rally of all the holiness people of America is being planned, to be held from May 7 to 12, of this year at one of the great centers in our country, namely, Asbury College, Wilmore Ky. It will be the occasion of the Annual Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness.

We desire, however, that it shall be, in addition to this business feature, a great general rallying of representatives from every unit of the Holiness Movement and from every part of the country.

Let us have one of those general rallies that lends inspiration and impetus to the whole work of spreading Scriptural holiness.

We earnestly hope that all Associations and Camp Meetings, also holiness churches and missions, will plan to have representatives at this meeting.

A splendid program with a large number of the most representative holiness men of the country is already in preparation. C. W. Butler, Pres.

A TIME FOR CONFESSION AND PRAYER.

With this awful epidemic that is so rapidly spreading over the Nation, we should do the most important things in this life. Plead with God for mercy.

The right kind of prayer is the most important thing in this life. God's people in all ages and times of distress have cried to him for help.

When the Israelites were suffering under their cruel oppressors in Egypt, they cried to God and were delivered. In their journey through the wilderness, when they were dying as a result of an awful plague, they confessed their sin and cried to God for help, and deliverance came. When the ancient city of Nineva was doomed to be destroyed in forty days, they humbled themselves in sack cloth and ashes, confessed their sin, and prayed through to victory, and the city was spared.

This Nation is now suffering with an awful plague. Multitudes are sick and dying with the flu. The most important thing we can do is to humble ourselves before God, confess our sin and plead for mercy. All the churches of our city and state and nation should proclaim a day of prayer and confession for a speedy deliverance from this awful plague that is upon us.

My heart turns to God as never before for a revival of old-time religion. My own precious wife has passed away as a result of the flu. She spent her life contending for the orthodox and evangelical religion. We must love our neighbor as ourselves, and the best way we can help them now is to pray.

Your brother for a speedy deliverance.
S. B. Shaw.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Price: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

The Gist of the Lesson, 1929

All Denominations Approve Its Use.

ANNUAL MEETING WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The Nineteenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be held in Mt. Vernon Place Church, Washington, D. C., March 13-18, 1929.

The executive Committee is called to meet Tuesday afternoon, March 12, at two o'clock in the Hamilton Hotel.

On Wednesday morning, March 13, Retreats will be held for those who wish to attend: for Council Members at 9:30, for visitors at 10:00; for deaconesses and missionaries at 10:00 o'clock.

Wednesday afternoon, beginning at two o'clock, the Memorial Service will be held, after which the sessions committees will meet.

The opening session of the Council will be held Wednesday evening. At that time, Dr. Charles Clayton Morrison will deliver an address on World Peace.

Thursday morning at 9:00 o'clock, the Council will meet for the first business session.

The program promises much of great interest, and we hope that there will be a large attendance from all Conferences.

The Hamilton Hotel will be Council Headquarters. Reduced rates according to the certificate plan have been granted by all railroads within our territory, provided there are at least two hundred and fifty persons present who have traveled by rail to Washington and paid at least 67 cents for the ticket and that each has secured a certificate showing that such a ticket has been purchased. These certificates should be presented as soon as possible to the Secretary or the one delegated by her to receive them, as no one can secure the reduced fare of one half the regular price for the return ticket until there are two hundred and fifty certificates in hand.

The dates of sale for these tickets in the Eastern Divisions are March 9-15. From the most remote points of our territory, the date will be early enough for the purchaser to reach Washington by the 18th. Validation dates are March 13-18 inclusive (except Sunday). The last honoring date is March 21st.

Delegates are urged to come to the meeting by rail, for the minimum attendance guaranteeing the rate of one and one half fare for the round trip is two hundred and fifty persons; it is also true that the required number of certificates will not only secure the rate for those coming a great distance, but will enable the Council to secure the rates next year.

Mrs. F. F. Stephens, Pres.

Mrs. F. S. Parker, Secretary.

A DREAM.

Alice A Graydon.

This is the dream of a dear old lady in England, told me by her niece. So beautiful is it in thought and so rich in inspiration for helpful living, I pass it on to others that they may catch the vision and the inspiration from it:

"I walked one afternoon on a sunny path which led me on and on, and curious to know just what my destination might be, I followed the path until suddenly I found rich and beautiful flowers growing, while birds of brilliant plumage soared overhead uttering their sweetest notes of song. How beautiful was everything around me, and I gazed at the flowers and felt perfectly satisfied with myself and with my life in general. But alas!

ADD YEARS TO YOUR LIFE BY PROVIDING FOR YOURSELF NOW A REGULAR INCOME WHICH WILL RELIEVE YOU OF THE WORRY OF BANK FAILURES, LOSSES, AND RE-INVESTMENTS.

One of our annuitants writes us this morning who has invested $2500 in our annuity bonds, and says:

"You possibly have inquiries from many Christian people who have money they wish to safely invest where it will provide for them a safe income and at the same time be working for God's cause in saving lost souls, and so continue to do after they have gone home to be with Jesus.

"This was our situation and while we have no fear of trouble in the settling of our estate one cannot be sure of a will being executed as was intended by the donors. The court records showing far too many cases of broken wills, and by investing in Asbury College annuity bonds I know my money will be working as I desire now and after I am gone, and to this extent I become the executor of my own will while I live."

the beautiful path ended abruptly against a stone wall over which I could not see to what lay beyond. But directly my eye fell upon another path to the left, which I determined to follow, but it was choked with brambles and thorns and sharp stones, and now and then I stumbled and fell over obstacles in the path, and was scratched and torn by the briars. Large branches of overhanging trees seemed to impede my way, but with difficulty I brushed them aside, and stumbled on. Now and then came a steep ascent which I surmounted; by this time curious to find the end of the path, when suddenly I beheld a gate which opened to me, and I entered and found myself in the presence of my Master, Jesus Christ, and I knew then that the first path I had taken had been too easy for my feet, and I should never have reached my Father's House, on "flowery beds of ease," but that life had its obstacles, its torn and bleeding experiences, its hindrances to success, its burdens and its difficulties to overcome, and its testing times, before I could hope to gain entrance into the heavenly mansions, and while many times I had become discouraged and tried to turn back, something impelled me to go on, and find the end of the path, and by so doing I had conquered the hard places in life and had come into the presence of the King.

Not by seeking the beautiful and easy things in life can we hope to inherit the "many mansions" promised to us, for we shall find the closed door and the stone wall at the end of the path; but by overcoming the hard things, and lifting and carrying the burdens in the heat of the day will we find peace and the Open Door.

THE UNPOSSESSED LAND.

By The Editor.

IT is blessed to cross over into Canaan land; it is more blessed to march out into the hills and valleys to enjoy the altitudes of discovery and the fatness of the ever-increasing resources. It is not enough to cross over the Jordan into the goodly country, but the land must be subdued and cultivated; the rich fruits must be gathered and enjoyed.

* * * *

The baptism and incoming of the Holy Spirit to abide in the sanctuary of the human soul is one of the greatest events in the history of a personality; it is the restoration of a sort of Eden in the inner, hidden life of the individual. Jesus Christ is enthroned and glorified in the heart; and his atoning merit is appropriated. It is a most marvelous event, blessed beyond all power to describe.

* * * *

The inspired Apostle describes it as God speaking to us in these impressive words, full to the overflowing with profound and sacred meaning. "This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them; and their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; and having an high priest over the house of God; let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Heb. 10:16-22.

* * * *

One reason why Christianity has not made greater progress in the world and accomplished more for humanity, for civilization, for righteousness and peace, arises out of the fact that multitudes of people have had no proper appreciation of the greatness of Christ and the fulness of his salvation. They have somehow gotten the idea that the sacrifice and religion of Jesus was to save them at some future time, in some other world. They have failed to grasp the thought that the plan of salvation, the atonement made by Christ and the preaching of the Gospel, is to save us from sin, to save us now in this world. God wants to save people here and now, to live among men; a people healed from all the disease of sin and well throughout their souls, to move among their fellow-beings, to help the helpless, to bring the lost to Jesus. He wants them for samples of his power. He wants them to be witnesses of the wondrous grace and ability of the Lord Jesus to save, to sanctify, and keep in this life, in this world. If we are saved here, we need have no fears for the hereafter.

A Heart to Heart Talk With Young Preachers.

YOU should be careful to keep in mind the fact that you are the pastor and shepherd of all of your members. Do not permit yourself to make certain bosom friends of prominent and wealthy people in your church, and be constantly seen in the bank or office, or automobile, or on the front porch of Col. So and So, or of Mr. This or That. Distribute yourself well among your people. Of course, a preacher needs or wants some bosom friend, but you must be very careful and judicious in this matter. Make the poorest people in your congregation feel that you belong just as much to them as to the wealthy classes. Stray into the blacksmith shop and the carpenter shop, just as often as you do into the bank or counting room of the great merchant. The common people will pay you back in a beautiful and devoted love and gratitude for the attention and sympathy you give to them.

I believe the highest compliment I ever had paid me by a member of a church that I had served, was paid me by an honest, poor young man into whose place I went to say good-bye just before starting to Conference. He held my hand and with tears in his eyes, said, "Bro. Morrison, I am thankful that while you have been our pastor you have loved and paid just as much attention to the poor people of your church as you have to the rich people." I am not quite sure that his statement was wholly true. I earnestly hope it was. I do know full well that among God's poor, humble people, as I have visited, come in touch, and fellowshiped with them, I have received great help and blessing, caught inspiration, and gotten suggestions which have been of untold value, both in my personal life and pulpit ministrations.

On the other hand, more than once, I left the home of the rich and affluent after a fine dinner, or a bit of chaff and chatter in the parlor, with a feeling of emptiness and a fear that I had done no good and received no benefit. Fortunate indeed, is the pastor who keeps in sympathy and close personal touch with all classes of people in his congregation.

Almost everyone has some trouble, burden, or heartache, that they would like to confide to someone else if they felt they could do so safely, would be understood and helped. A pastor must be a strong spiritual character if the people have enough confidence in him to tell him their secret heartaches and troubles. These secrets should be absolutely sacred. Under no circumstances betray the confidence of one of your members who comes to tell you of his sorrow or trouble that they would have no one else know, but they sob it out to you to get sympathy, help, and prayer. Lock up the sorrows and sad secrets which are confided to you in your heart and you will become a tenderer and stronger man because of them.

I can scarcely think of anything more contemptible and unworthy of a pastor than that he should become the community gossip, carrying from home to home, and office to office, and peddling out the secrets and sorrows of his people who have trusted him. Guard against this as you would against a deadly plague; and you may be sure that you will have people in your congregation who will try to draw you out, and induce you to tell anything and everything which is none of their business. Chill such people with your silence. If they make it necessary, give them a gentle rebuke. Establish a reputation for silence on scandals, family and personal affairs which should not be hawked before the public.

There are no greater opportunities for a pastor to help families and individuals than in time of special trouble; and there is nothing that more endears the pastor to his people than visits, prayers, words of consolation, and tears of sympathy in their times of sorrow. These ministrations wonderfully open their hearts and minds to receive his gospel message in time to come. You will no doubt improve all such opportunities.

I have saved my most important suggestion and exhortation for the last item of this letter, and that is with reference to your attitude toward the women of your congregation. This is a delicate but most important subject. Be sure that you form your intimate fellowship and friendships among the brethren. Treat all women with the utmost kindness and courtesy, but guard against anything approaching undue intimacy. You will now and then find a sister who wants to confide more to you than is proper, with reference to matters between herself and husband, which should be kept entirely in the family. Under such circumstances practice reserve; be just a little cool; suggest that she talk to your wife. Never allow yourself to fondle the young women. Establish the habit of "hands off." Of course, you must be friendly, but no man of God can afford to be a coddling flatterer. Get in the habit of practicing courteous reserve in all of your association with the females of your congregation. That does not mean that you are not to be tender-hearted, sympathetic, a true friend and pastor; but it does mean that you are to be a spotless man of God, and to have a covenant with your eyes and hands, remembering the exhortation of the Apostle Paul, "Rebuke not an elder, but entreat him as a father; and the younger men as brethren; the elder women as mothers; the younger women as sisters, with all purity."

Your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." 1 Tim. 1:15.

THE BATTLE OF THE LORD IN THE ORIENT.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

As we view the work of God in different parts of Asia with its teeming millions we are reminded of that time of John Wesley and the Bishop of London. When the two Wesleys and Whitehead were stirring things in England the Bishop said:

"Those young raw heads, what can they attempt?" Wesley's reply was simple but significant: "We can attempt to be that in the hands of God that a pen is in the hand of a man."

William Carey in India, Livingstone in Africa, William Taylor in India and Africa, Hudson Taylor in China, Cowman, Kilbourne and Nakada in Japan. All these men were as pens in the hands of Almighty God to write the Word of God and the Gospel of Jesus Christ upon the fleshly tablets of human hearts, upon millions in these far away mission fields.

I have often thought of that scene in the early life of William Carey when he was trying to stir the Baptists of England up in behalf of India. In one of their sessions the Chairman said to Carey: "Young man sit down."

Thank God, Carey did not sit down, but he kept going, kept agitating, preaching and stirring up the people, and when at length his chance to preach came he took as his text, Isaiah 54:2, "Enlarge the place of thy tent and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations: spare not, lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes," and Carey said these words in that sermon.

*Expect great things from God.
Attempt great things for God.*

One of the things that characterized these men who accomplished such great things for the kingdom was their simplicity and faith. They had the faith that moved mountains; the faith that trusted absolutely in the Mighty God and his glorious Gospel. They could say each for himself:

"In thy strong hand I lay me down,
So shall the work be done;
For who can work so wondrously
As the Almighty One."

SCENES AND SAYINGS.

At Tokyo in the New Year's Convention we preached daily with Nakada and Kanamouri, those two veterans of Japanese Christianity. Brother Nakada is the "Bishop" of the O. M. S. in Japan and of the Japanese Holiness Church. Kanamouri is one of the most noted men of Japan. Converted in the early days when Neesima founded the first Christian College he was a Theological Professor there till through reading German Theology he swung off into Rationalism and became the first higher critic in the schools of Japan. He had the honesty to resign from both College and Church when he no longer believed the doctrines, for twenty years he was a critic, then he got back to God at the death of his wife and has given himself to the refutation of higher criticism and to evangelism. He now is with the Holiness Church of Japan, evangelizing all the time. His slogan is a "Million souls for Christ."

"Bishop" Nakada is the General Booth of the Japanese Holiness work; he knows no such thing as compromise with the world, the flesh or the devil, he preaches with great power the Gospel of Full Salvation. His son, Ugo Nakada, is the Sankey of the Japanese Holiness Church. He is a sweet singer, a musician, a poet and a translator. His revival song book is used all over the Empire. He has translated the best holiness songs as well as the revival hymns of America into Japanese and it is wonderful how they sing and get happy over those songs. Wife and I introduced a few songs they did not have and Ugo translated the choruses so that they sang them powerfully. They greatly enjoyed William Grum's songs with the chorus:

"Elijah's God still lives today
To take the guilt of sin away,
And when I pray my heart's desire
Upon my soul he sends the fire.

"Victory ahead! Victory ahead!
Through the blood of Jesus, victory ahead;
Trusting in the Lord I feel the conqueror's tread;
By faith I see the victory ahead!"

Sunday of the Convention was one of the greatest of days. From six in the morning till nearly midnight the voice of prayer and praise was heard. The offerings for Evangelization and Missions were the largest in their history, but the climax came at night when, after a message on Consecration, seventy men and women (mostly young) dedicated themselves to the ministry and the work of God. It was a notable scene. No doubt preachers and evangelists and soul winners were born in that service. The O. M. S. has missions in Caroline Islands, South America, Formosa and in many other points, and the chief work of the movement is the spread of Scriptural holiness throughout Japan and Korea and all its mission fields. Would that all Conventions were keyed up to the note of Wesley's verse:

"Lord we believe to us and ours,
The apostolic promise given;
We wait the pentecostal powers,
The Holy Ghost sent down from heaven.

"If every one that seeks may find,
If still thou dost on sinners fall,
Come as a mighty rushing wind;
Great grace be now upon us all."

SOME ALTAR SERVICE SCENES.

When you open an altar service in the Orient you don't have to wait long for response. In our meetings in China and Japan we have seen many rush to the altar until everything was jammed, including the aisles, and when they start praying the sound is as many waters (Rev. 1:15). They lift up their voices with one accord; they clap their hands, they shed tears and they pray through to victory. Yonder is a young man under deep conviction for holiness, a worker is trying to get him through as with open Bible he points out to him the promises of God. That young woman yonder with whom that sister is dealing is having a hard struggle; they pray together till victory comes. Frequently in the Japanese meetings you will see groups on the matted floor meeting in a circle praying through on some matter of special interest. During the altar service it is almost impossible for one voice in prayer to be distinguished. If one is called upon to pray, his voice is soon drowned in the united prayers of workers and seekers.

The other night a number of students were seeking in the Bible School revival at Osaka. All at once one of them held up his hands and shouted, "I believe!" Last night seven public school students professed conversion. At another altar service a man was an earnest seeker; he had gone through a deep sorrow. His wife had died and I was told he spent a whole night in prayer beside his wife's coffin. He was forward on Sunday morning when the call was made for those who would dedicate themselves to the Lord's work. Maybe out of his sorrow another holiness preacher was to be born. His case was quite different from a Christian woman in China whose husband was a tyrant and made her life one of unspeakable wretchedness. She had at length reached such a stage of desperation that she felt something had to end the wretched life she was consigned to so she went to God in prayer and told the Lord that she could not live any longer such a life and begged him to either take her or take her husband by death. Some days after they had a praise meeting in the Mission and everybody was asked to praise God for something. She was not long in rising with her face shining. She broke out jubilantly by saying, "Well, you all know what I have got to praise God for; my husband is dead, praise the Lord!" Poor soul, it was a case of deliverance to her! Over in the Orient girls have to marry the men selected by their parents, and many a girl's life is thrown away upon some wicked heathen to whom she becomes nothing but a slave. Oh, the women of America fail to appreciate the benefits of Christianity in many ways and many never offer a note of praise to God for their happy homes, their high privileges due to the influence of the Gospel.

It is said that in India over ten millions of women, yes, nearer twenty, seldom see the outer world from their marriage day till the day of their death. Thank God for Carey and Morrison, Thoburn, Taylor, Praying Hyde, Warne, Stanley Jones and Bishop Fisher and a host of other consecrated missionaries of the Gospel who have lifted high the Cross in the midst of India's appalling darkness and brought hope and faith and love and salvation to multitudes!

Around the Cross is glory!

A brightness from the sky;
As Heaven's closed gate flies open,

The Mansion Home on high;
Around the Cross are sinners!

I gather in that throng.

Redeemed and cleansed and pardoned,
To sing love's endless song.

PERSONAL NOTATIONS.

We are writing this at Osaka, Japan, one of the greatest cities of the Empire, with nearly three millions of people. It is an industrial city—principal manufactories are cotton mills with factories of all other descriptions. We are usually kept so busy in meetings that we never have any time for sight seeing. Before coming to Osaka we held a meeting at Kobe, one of the great port cities of Japan. We held first series of meetings in independent Presbyterian Church and the second in the Mission Hall of the Japan Evangelistic Band. In both meetings we had gracious visitations of power and blessing, many were definitely sanctified and saved. So many of the churches have become crystallized and formal that the holiness message and testimony, I believe, is going to be the life-saver to Japan, and it is worth noting that the churches having the largest number of converts in Japan are the holiness churches and those churches of Methodism which hold true to the old paths. The M. E. Church, South, has many good churches here whose Japanese pastors preach a full gospel. Revival meetings are frequently held in which there are good gatherings. We met at Kobe Dr. Hager, who has recently returned from U. S. A., and Rev. T. Kugimaya (a PENTECOSTAL HERALD reader) who is pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Osakafu. Our work at Osaka is with the Free Methodists who have one of the largest Protestant churches in Japan situated here at Osaka. The pastor, Rev. Kawabe, is a great preacher. The Free Methodists have their Bible Training School here of which Rev. T. Tsuchiyama is Principal. This brother is one of the best trained men; he took his Masters degree in theology at Princeton and he rings true to real old-fashioned Methodist doctrine. Day by day he was my interpreter and I had no restraint on me as I preached Bible holiness and the deeper things of God to the students preachers and people generally. The missionaries here, Miss L. O. Pickens and Miss Ruth Mylander, are of the real missionary type, they are here in Japan on real business for Jesus Christ, constantly keeping in front of them the winning of souls to Christ. They have formed some wonderful contacts with students of the public schools and it is their joy to see many of those for whom they prayed seeking God for conversion and holiness in our revival meetings. The Free Methodists have a splendid school property here at Osaka and the body of students— young men and women—preparing for the ministry and for Christian work in Japan—are as fine a lot of young people as I have seen anywhere in my travels. Rev. H. H. Wagner is the Free Methodist District Missionary of Kobe and this section. He is a busy man and rings true for holiness and old-time Methodism.

It is a splendid thing that there are Bible Schools scattered in various parts of Japan. I lectured at the Bible Training School in Kobe, conducted by the Japan Evangelistic Band. Here also is a splendid group of young men, most of them out and out for holiness, who are being trained to go out as evangelists. Among this J. E. B. group are two young men of the University who cut short their course there in order to enter a school where they would be trained for definite evangelism. While at Kobe we were entertained in the home of Rev. C. S. Wilkinson of the J. E. B. He and his good wife did everything possible to keep us physically fit for the arduous work of the Convention where we did all the preaching. It is a matter of regret that Rev. Paget Wilkes, the chief of the J. E. B., has been ill for some time in Switzerland. Mr. Wilkes has been stirring both China and Japan with his great messages on Bible Sanctification and other dynamic truths. Mr. Archie L. Dyer is administering the affairs of the Band in the absence of Mr. Wilkes and Mr. Culbertson. Bro. Dyer has spent many years in Japan and can talk and pray and preach in Japanese. He is a man thoroughly alive to the importance of the holiness message. Indeed, it has been a great joy to me to find so many missionaries as well as native pastors and workers who are clear and definite on the gospel of Holiness, and these men always have results in their ministry.

We are reminded in our observations in the foreign field of those words of John Wesley when he said: "Indeed this I always observe wherever a work of sanctification breaks out, the whole work of God prospers. Some are convinced of sin, others justified and all stirred up to greater earnestness for salvation."

And these words of Dr. Lovick Pierce of the M. E. Church, South, have as much point out here as at home, "Just so far as our church has ceased to believe in Entire Sanctification and to seek after it as the only phase of religion, revealed to us in the New Testament, that saves us from all sin, just so far we are a corrupted and a God forsaken church and it is useless to try to sustain ourselves by eulogies on what we have been."

The Vulture's Claw.

By Dr. C. F. Wimberly.

One of his best. A new edition of this great book has just come from the press. It is a universal verdict, that this book has a message individual and pungent. Young people who do not read religious books at all will relish this great mountain story. All books have gone up in price, but Vulture's Claw will continue at the pre-war price, —$1.50—360 pages, and beautifully illustrated by an artist with original scenes taken from the story. Order this book from Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

A Call to the Holiness

People of America.

Rev. C. W. Butler, National President.

Text: 2 Kings 3:16. "Make this valley full of ditches."

Subject: Preparing the way of the Lord.

N the days of Israel's prosperity under David, the Moabites had been subjugated and, with the exception of a brief period, up to the time of Ahaziah, son of Ahab, had remained tributary to Israel. During his reign they rebelled. Ahaziah died early and Jehoram reigned in his stead. Jehoram sought the help of Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, for the subduing of the Moabites. Jehoshaphat responded to Jehoram's call saying, "I am as thou art, my people are as thy people, and my horses as thy horses."

Those two kings decided to go by the way of Edom and engage the King of Edom who was tributary to Judah to go with them. "So the king of Israel went and the king of Judah, and the king of Edom. And they fetched a compass seven days journey; and there was no water for the host, and for the cattle that followed them. And the king of Israel said, alas! that the Lord hath called these three kings together to deliver them into the hands of Moab."

In the hour of their extremity Jehoshaphat, the king of Judah, said, "Is there not here a prophet of the Lord that we may enquire of the Lord by him?" One of the servants present answered that Elisha who poured water on the hands of Elijah was there. Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, said, "The word of the Lord is with him." So the three kings went down to him.

Elisha was much disturbed because of the idolatry of Jehoram, King of Israel. He bade him go to the prophets of his father and of his mother. The king of Israel humbly besought him because of the apparent judgment of God in bringing the kings of Israel, Judah, and Edom into this dilemma to deliver them into the hands of the king of Moab. Then Elisha said, "As the Lord of hosts liveth before whom I stand, surely if it were not that I regard the presence of Jehoshaphat, the king of Judah, I would not look toward thee nor see thee." The prophet then asked for the harpist to come and play the harp to quiet him and prepare him for direct dealings with Jehovah. The hand of the Lord came upon him and he said, "Thus saith the Lord, Make this valley full of ditches. For thus saith the Lord, ye shall not see wind, neither shall ye see rain; yet that valley shall be filled with water that ye may drink, both ye and your cattle and your beasts. He will deliver the Moabites also into your hand." "They obeyed the word of the Lord and it came to pass in the morning when the meat offering was offered that behold, there came water by the way of Edom and the country was filled with water."

The miraculous supply of their personal need became also the means of the complete defeat and downfall of the enemy, for when the Moabites looked upon the dry valley and saw it filled with what looked to them like blood, they concluded that the kings were surely slain and they rushed in disorder to the spoil. When they came to the camp of Israel, the Israelites rose up and smote the Moabites, so that they fled before them. The victory granted Israel was complete for they followed the Moabites into their own country, smiting them, beating down their cities, and casting stones on every good piece of ground, stopping all the wells of water, and felling all the good trees. Out of this bit of Bible record there are lessons by way at least of suggestion, which we purpose to emphasize for our helping in this hour.

The dry valley, with the Lord's hosts in danger of defeat, is surely capable of a spiritual application in this hour. We are come upon a time of awful dryness. We need a refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The whole nation is in the direst need of a divine visitation in mercy. No power in the world can ever check the fearful tides of lawlessness and sin but a revival of old-time Bible religion that will bring deep judgment day conviction upon sinners and plant the fear of God in the thinking of the masses of men. We need a revival that will turn new tides of life and power from God into the channels of church life, giving men deliverance from sin personally and convictions of right that will make them loyal to the true source of authority, the Word of God.

The absence of any deep sense of sin, guilt or demerit, the scoffing unbelief in eternal retribution, together with light and utterly superficial views of the atoning death of our Lord Jesus Christ and the resulting type of preaching which fails to call sinners to repentance and believers unto holiness and which places its emphasis upon the false doctrine of the universal fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man and leaves no place for regeneration, the basis for real Christian character, has already resulted in empty altars, and the utter absence of penitential tears in those churches which were once ablaze with the true fervor of the genuine Gospel. From the true Bible standpoint of a spiritual experience in personal salvation which makes us witnesses unto God, how dry we are. Oh, how dry our whole land is!

The Holiness Movement which has preserved a true spiritual emphasis and is doing much of the real old-time Gospel work, is nevertheless in very great danger today, and in far too great a measure is like the dry valley. Who can close his eyes to the deplorable fact that in much of our holiness work both denominational and interdenominational there is a fearful lack of depth and reality? How much of human and creaturely activity is substituted for the real presence and power of the Holy Ghost. We program things with an emphasis upon the secondary parts of worship that seems to suggest that we depend largely upon the presence of talent that is at best of the semi-entertaining class. We sing, we whoop, we joke, we have music, music, music, and plenty of the light weight noise, with oh, so little of real tarrying, so little real burden. We seem satisfied to count numbers and do a bit of warming-over of old material and threshing our old straw. Our praying in many of our meetings is relegated to a sort of complimentary basis. The result is that we are dry in our holiness work in a measure that ought to humble us and drive us to our faces before God.

There is much of levity and jesting and little of seriousness and burden. How seldom do holiness people pray together or show in their association together the depth of spiritual life which characterized the fathers in the Wesleyan revival. Mr. Wesley rarely, if ever, conversed more than one hour with anyone at one time without giving himself over to a season of prayer and heart searching.

We need a mighty going down in all of our work. We need a great spiritual revival,—a real visitation of God. The Holy Spirit has been grieved all over our land until there is, oh, so much of the human and oh, so little of the divine, in our work generally. The need is too apparent to call for arguing.

How shall this need be met? Surely a second great lesson from our narrative is expressed in our text. "Make this valley full of ditches." There is a human preparation for every divine visitation. They had to do spade work in obedience to the divine command and in preparation for divine blessing. We will have to do knee work. "Make this valley full of ditches." We need prayer,—prayer, fasting and prayer. We need to have concerted, united, persistent, intercessory

THE ABUNDANT LIFE.

Rev. Joseph H. Smith.

Text: "I am come, that they might have LIFE, and that they might have it MORE ABUNDANTLY." John 10:10.

IN his parables, the Master makes truth tangible. They are to Theology what flowers are to Botany. They invest the anatomy with the flesh facts we know, and clothe it with realities of life.

But we must not lose warp in the woof. The rhetoric should not lure us from the logic. The skill of the artist must not absorb us; so in his picture that we lose sight of what he has portrayed. Beneath her tasteful adornment, "the King's daughter is all beautiful within."

The advent of Christ was the greatest thing that had ever yet come to this earth. Heaven had anticipated it for aeons. Earth feels its reverberation increasingly as the centuries roll by. The apostle John in his first epistle has given a three-fold account of the design of this advent of the Son of God to the scenes and experiences of the sons of men, thus: "He was manifest to take away our sins." "The Son of God was manifest that he might destroy the works of the devil." And again: "The Son of God is come and hath given us an understanding that we may know him that is true."

Here we have their Pardon, Emancipation, Revelation. John the Baptist had summed it up in the one word: "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." And all of these find their place in what Christ himself has spoken variously of his mission, but they all three are found in this one utterance of the text: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it More Abundantly."

We will, of course, keep in mind that his coming also involved his doing while here among us and for us. Particularly so with respect to these two chief acts of his brought out by him in the discourse with the Parable:

"I lay down my life."
"I take it again."

"This commandment have I received of my Father." That is to say, God the Father in sending me into the world, has ordained my voluntary death and entrusted me with power of resurrection in order to the above named intent and design of my advent. In order that they may have life, and have it more abundantly, I have received commandment to lay down my life, and have power to take it up again. Then the incarnation of the Son of God was meant to involve his death, and to exert his power, as the new federal head of the race, to raise himself from the dead. We must not think of even the wonder of his marvelous birth or of the marvelousness of his teaching alone as the source of our life. He was made in the likeness of men for the suffering of death; and having died for our sins, he must rise again for our justification.

In this he differs from all other comers. The "stranger," the "hireling," the "thief."

Some of these flee. Some come indeed to kill and to destroy, "But I am come that they might have life, etc." These words imply that there is a life which man was without, and which he could not by any means obtain but for the advent and redeeming mission of the Son of God.

They also imply that Christ's coming with his involved dying and rising again in our behalf, opening the way to us of a life more abundant than any other that man has ever known, and of infinite and endless measure in its own kind.

We will therefore, consider first, our death in trespasses and in sins. Next our quickening unto newness of life by the coming of Jesus, and lastly the "Life more abundantly" that ensues from him taking his life up again and ascending to the heavens on high, there to appear in the presence of God for us.

Apart from Christ, the death sentence hangs over all our heads. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." And it is written: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." The slaying of the Lamb, in God's eternal thought and provision "before the foundation of the world" has unconditionally secured men a parole, or a deferred execution of sentence. And the short and uncertain tenure of life is simply of the nature of this respite to allow us a chance to seek the shelter of Calvary's Cross.

Christ came into the world that we might have life. In order to this, he, himself, must die in our stead. Hence we read that he was made perfect (as our Redeemer) by the sufferings. (See Hebrews 5:8, 9) For this sacrifice, "a body had been prepared him." He was "made in the likeness of sinful flesh for the suffering of death, that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man." (Heb. 2:9). The one taste by the sinless and divine Son of God of that second death which was due all mankind sufficed to secure for us a pardon and to sustain the moral equilibrium of God's government of the world. God's raising him from the dead is heaven's acknowledgment of the sufficiency and the acceptance of this satisfaction. Thus according to the Scripture he died for our sins and rose again for our justification. And thus our justification is unto life; that is to say, the death sentence is removed from us and we, once more, have a right to live.

But this is not all; not all of our death in sin; not all of our life in him. We were not only judicially doomed, but were actually dead. Dead we were unto God, and to the spiritual world. Our eyes were blind, our ears were deaf; our souls were still to all that exists of heaven and of eternity; and to all the merciful and loving appeals and goodness of God. Dead, too, to all the spiritual claims of men upon us. To even our own families, our country and our church we were impotent, inactive and insensitive concerning God's concern and interests. Dead to righteousness and to true love. It was to a company of cultured and scholastic, and even religious, persons that the Lord said once: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood ye have no life in you." Ah! That is it—no inner life. That without is but a sham of life—a sham of life now and a fast-moving shadow of the death within and beyond. But to as many as received him, he gave power to become the sons of God, and these were born anew. Born of God. New life throbs and thrills at once through the soul. Spiritual abilities, spiritual affections, spiritual aspirations at once possessed the being. The quickening power of his grace accompanied the pardoning love of his mercy. The Christian feels that this life is eternal. Christ emptied himself of life in the body that we might possess life in the Spirit. "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life."

Yet, there remain two offsets: We have this treasure in earthen vessels with many infirmities pertaining to the flesh; and we still hold life by a probationary tenure. Christianity is man's "second probation." "We are made partakers of Christ if we hold the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end." We have life, but not yet the crown of life. Our names are re-entered on the Book of Life but might yet be "blotted out" of the same. Some who had been purged from their old sins are now turned from the holy commandment; "and the latter end is worse with them than the beginning." There had remained within them an emissary of death in the form of the carnal mind. As Ishmael, born after the flesh, menaced the life of Isaac born after the Spirit, so this fleshly corruption of human nature wars against the new-born life of the Spirit in the soul of a believer. He has life, not only with the disabilities and disadvantages of the tabernacle of clay, but also with the dangers as well as the deficiencies due to the disease of sin within his members. He has dominion over them by reason of the life currents divine, now within him; but he has difficulties and detractors from a well-rounded, full-orbed, and manifold fruitful life in God. He yet needs the "Life More Abundantly."

To this end, Christ, who had laid down his life for our sins, now takes it up again for our righteousness; righteousness in the more abundant measure. Even the fullness of the righteous life, which is three-fold:

(1) In its freedom from the body of sin and death, with the drawbacks, the deflections, and the dangers of defeats in the spiritual life.

(2) In its resurrection life in type and measure, so that as our risen Lord lived above the world, and moved under a law of ascension rather than the law of gravitation, which higher law at length lifted him above the clouds to the right hand of the Father, so by the very same power of the Holy Spirit which raised him from the dead we are borne above earth's lamentations and our affections are set upon things above.

(3) It is at length a crowned life. The natural body raised a spiritual body in incorruption, in glory, in power, will crown the abounding life of our souls with immortality, and we shall reign with him in life forever.

This then, Beloved, is the "More Abundant Life" when the last enemy shall have been destroyed, when death shall have vanished before the face of him who is the Light of Life, and we shall forever be immune against mortality.

And an earnest of this we have in that risen life of our souls wherein the fullness of the Spirit of Life has expelled the seeds of sin's disease; and when the Spirit, too, quickens our mortal bodies for the performance of every duty and the fulfillment of every trust, and the meeting of every temptation. And for this, blessed be his name, he is come that we might have life, and that we might have it more abundantly.

THE GREATER FOE.

GEORGE ANSELL.

HICH is the greater foe of the church; the enemy without, or the enemy within? Strikingly clear is the answer as given in the story of the sin of Achan. (Josh. 6:17; 8:1).

Israel had crossed the Jordan. Before them lay a land whose people trembled for fear of them. Jericho, that great walled city, straitly shut up because of them, lay under the curse of God, doomed. The instructions for its taking had been given. The city was to be utterly destroyed. Only the gold and silver, and the vessels of brass and iron, were to be saved; and these were to be consecrated to the Lord.

So they compassed the city, all the men of war, one hundred thousand strong. On the seventh day, when the trumpets were blown and all the people shouted, and the walls of the city fell flat, they went up every man straight before him and took the city. "And they utterly destroyed all that was in the city, both men and women, young and old, and ox, and sheep, and ass, with the edge of the sword. And they burnt the city with fire, and all that was therein: only the silver and gold, and the vessels of brass and iron, they put into the treasury of the house of the Lord." On the part of Israel as a whole there was perfect obedience.

"But the children of Israel committed a trespass in the accursed thing." One man disobeyed. Achan saw the silver and the gold and the goodly Babylonish garment, and coveted, and took, and hid the spoil in his tent. No one saw the act; no one suspected. Unknown to all but Achan himself the accursed thing lay in the midst of the camp. "And the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel."

Why against all Israel, when but one had sinned? Because that one was part of Israel, and his sin not only defiled himself but destroyed the integrity of the congregation. The whole camp lay under the curse of his sin. God withdrew his presence from them, and they knew it not.

The sending of the scouts to view Ai, and the subsequent assault upon the city by three thousand men, was not of God. They were travelling under the momentum of the Jericho success. They mistook enthusiasm and emotion for the presence of God. Quite naturally they met with defeat.

Who was defeated? Not merely Achan the sinner. It is not stated that he was even among those who went up to the attack. He may have been all the while safely in his tent, gloating over his treasure. No. Thirty-six guiltless men were slain, and three thousand guiltless men were put to flight. Their only fault was that they went up to the battle without God's presence.

Was their defeat due to the superior strength of the men of Ai? No; for who can stand against God? Was it due to the fewness and inferiority of those who went

JUST A SUGGESTION!

Many are wanting a safe place to invest their money where moth and rust cannot corrupt, and where it will prove a blessing to others.

The Students' Loan Fund of Asbury Theological Seminary which provides for the education of young men preparing for the ministry, would be a safe and wise investment.

There are those who want their sacred tithe to bear fruit in the salvation of souls.

Why not help to educate Spirit-filled young men who, perhaps, after you shall have quit the walks of life, will be seeking God's lost sheep on the mountains of sin.

Could you do better with the money God has entrusted with you than to assist in preparing young men to preach his uttermost salvation to the world he came to redeem?

Had you ever thought that the only way to "lay up treasures in heaven" is to invest your treasures here in immortal souls?

Think on these things!

up? No; for the weakest become invincible when God is in the midst. They failed because God was not with them; and it was the gold and silver and garment in Achan's tent which deprived them of God's presence.

"Israel hath sinned." They have transgressed, they have taken, they have stolen, they have dissembled, they have put it among their own stuff. One man's wrongdoing unjust and uncondemned made all partakers of his sin. The whole camp was defiled. "Therefore the children of Israel could not stand before their enemies, but turned their backs before their enemies, because they were accursed; neither will I be with you any more, except ye destroy the accursed from among you." As God cannot fellowship with a defiled individual, no more can he have fellowship with a defiled congregation. The camp must be purged. "Up, sanctify the people."

So the children of Israel came by tribes, and the tribe by families, and the family man by man. And Achan was taken. And the children of Israel took Achan and his children and his possessions, and stoned them with stones and burned them with fire, and raised a great heap of stones over the remains. "So the Lord turned from the fierceness of his anger. . . . And the Lord said to Joshua, Fear not, neither be thou dismayed; take all the people of war with thee, and arise, go up to Ai; see, I have given into thy hand the king of Ai, and his people, and his city, and his land." The sin judged and put away brought back the blessing of God's presence.

But consider the enormity of this sin which could bring to a halt the victorious march of a nation of people and turn their victory into defeat. Armies had melted before that advance, cities had fallen, and the Jordan had divided to let them through. No enemy could stand before them. Yet Achan defeated them.

The strength of the nations before them meant nothing. For God was with them. He would shower great stones from heaven upon their adversaries. He would call the sun and the moon to the help of his people. "For the Lord fought for Israel."

Likewise the strength or weakness of Israel made no difference. For what matters the strength or weakness of man if an Almighty God is on his side? Israel's strength was the presence and power of God. As long as God was with her she could not be beaten. And since nothing that the enemies of Israel could do could affect the fact of God's presence in her midst, she could not be beaten by her enemies. She could be beaten only by her friends.

Sin in the camp could do what no power outside the camp could do. Sin in the camp means the removal of the blessing of God's presence. For God knows that sin will curse and damn and destroy the human soul. If God loves man he must hate sin. The more God loves, the more severe must be his condemnation of sin, and the more earnestly he must warn against it. He dare not seem to excuse or overlook sin. At all times and in all circumstances he must display his abhorrence of sin and his stern disapproval of every sinful action or tendency. If sin enters, God's approval must go. If man sins, he may expect to lose the blessing of God. Whether it be in the case of the individual or of the congregation, the entrance of sin must mean the loss of the approval and blessing of God. "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth"; and the more greatly he loves and cares the more severe and uncompromising his attitude must be.

Shall God bless a man in his efforts at soul winning if that man sins? Might not the blessing lead the man to think that after all his sin could not be so sinful, since God still continued to bless? Would not the love of God rather lead him to withhold his blessing until the erring one was brought to repentance? And will not the same principle hold true for the congregation? The blessing of God upon the efforts of the congregation will inevitably be construed as God's approval of the congregation. Might not an erring member take that approval to himself, and thus be confirmed in his sin? And might not one sin uncondemned be the seed that grows and multiplies until the whole congregation is destroyed? Will not God's love lead him rather to remove his blessing until the sinning one be either brought to repentance or put out of the congregation as a warning to others? And thus may not the sin of one bring defeat to the whole?

When God fights in the midst the church cannot fail. Unbelievers may scoff, sinners may oppose themselves, persecutions may arise; but the church filled with the power of the presence of God overrides all obstacles, and all the evil forces of earth and hell fail to check its victorious advance. Only when there is sin in the camp does failure come.

It need not be an open sin. It need not be a great crime. It need not be a leader of the people who commits it. The lowliest member of the congregation may bring about its defeat; and the sin which removes from the individual the smile of God's approval may be enough to remove the blessing of God from the congregation to which the individual belongs. One believer can prevent the blessing of God. One believer may cause the church defeat. One believer may cause the work of God to halt. One believer may stand between the God who so desires to bless and the dying world which so desperately needs his blessing. One believer may stand between God and the perishing souls he would save. A confirmed sinner cannot do it. The whole world of confirmed sinners cannot do it. Satan and all his angels cannot do it. But the believer may.

Let us look to ourselves. Have I failed in this matter? Have I allowed sin to creep in? Have I failed to keep the blessing of God upon my own soul? Have I, perchance, been the Achan whose sin has halted the advance of Israel? Have I stood in the way of God's blessing? Am I guilty of the blood of many who might have been saved if I had not stood in the way? If so, let me repent while yet there is opportunity, and let me determine that henceforth I shall fail no more.

Has the congregation met defeat? If so, the command to Joshua still stands: "Up, sanctify thy people!" Prayer will bring to light the cause of the failure; and in answer to persevering prayer God will bring to bear on those falling short all his powers of conviction and persuasion. And woe to the sinning believer if these means fail! For God will not always strive nor always be patient; and he will cast out and destroy all who stand too often in his way.

"There is none righteous, no, not one. For there is no difference: for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 3:10, 22, 23.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER IX.

THE FUNERAL SERVICE.

JOHNSON died on Saturday evening. The news of his wounding and death had spread rapidly among the cow camps, and Sunday morning by daylight cowboys were loping over the plains in every direction to the big camp where Johnson lay with a serene smile upon his his dead face.

Saturday night several big chuck wagons came into camp from the far-away railway station, loaded with provisions for the cow men. There were crates of cabbage, barrels of turnips, sacks of potatoes and onions, with boxes of canned goods, and all sorts of substantial edibles for the big, husky fellows who rode the plains. A fat steer had been butchered Saturday morning and hung up to drain.

Sunday morning, early, the fires were burning in the big stoves and the barbecue pit, and arrangements were being made to give ample feed to all who came to attend the funeral. A group of the older men asked Huston to take charge of the ceremony, read the Scriptures and make some remarks. Some carpenters among the boys worked pieces of plank out of discarded wagon-beds, got together scraps of lumber, and made a decent coffin; others dug a deep grave, while those not otherwise engaged, brought from the little creek bed a large number of stones to cover the grave and protect it from wolves, coyotes and other denizens of the plains. A couple of boys with an old chisel and a hammer pecked out Johnson's name on a slab of stone which was set up at the head of his grave.

A large table was improvised out of plank found about the camp, and the great feast was spread for the large company of cow men who had gathered from over the plains. After dinner the company gathered around the body of their dead comrade, who had been placed in his coffin, and Huston read a portion of the 15th chapter of First Corinthians. His voice sounded so much like a preacher that it frightened him. Frequently a tremor came into it, and he had to clear his throat and pause for a moment.

Having finished the scripture lesson, he lifted up his head, looked quietly over the company who stood still as death, and said, "Men, I am no preacher, but I do claim to be a Christian, and must confess that I am a very unworthy one. I have been asked to say a word to you boys here today. I can only say this: I wish that you all might have been here and seen our old comrade, Bill Johnson, die. He had been a Christian boy in the hills of old Tennessee; he had been crossed in love affairs, threw away his religion, and came west to try to get rid of the wound in his heart, as many other poor fellows have done. Many of you knew him. There was nothing mean about him. He was a kind-hearted, honest, brave fellow, but he had wandered about from his Saviour. When the boys got him in here he was very near death. A half dozen or more of us in this company heard his talk, his confession of his sins; we prayed with him and he received forgiveness. There isn't a doubt about it. I believe every man about the place believed that Bill Johnson found, before he died, the mighty Christ who died for a lost world, and is able to forgive transgressions and cleanse away all sin of any and all who come to him with a broken heart, trusting in his merit for salvation.

"Men, I am glad to say to you today that I believe that our comrade is now at eternal rest and peace, and for my part, I thank God that there is a Saviour, a Christ, to whom men can come with confessions and find forgiveness. It is a great mistake to postpone this until a dying hour, but thank God, for a Saviour who can be found in a dying hour. Boys, you will not think hard of me for suggesting, and urging, that we all give our hearts to this Saviour. There is no reason why that, because we are cow-punchers, we should live our short, uncertain lives in wickedness, and go to the devil in the end. If any one of you ever knew Jesus as a Saviour, and have wandered away from him, come back. If you never have known him, why not make dear old Bill Johnson's grave here your starting point to heaven?"

Huston's voice rose and trembled with emotion as, with uplifted hand, he pronounced these last words, and dead silence fell upon the place. Directly, four or five of the older men in the group stepped forward and shook hands with Huston. They then turned about, lowered the body, filled the grave, without a word, and arranged the heap of stones in order upon it.

Many of the cow-boys mounted their ponies and rode away to their distant camp. A few who lived very far away remained over for the night. As these sun-burned, hardy men galloped over the plains they thought seriously of the fact that they were not animals; that they had souls; that they were accountable to their Creator, and no doubt, in several instances, the funeral service was the beginning of a return to God.

Huston again sought the silent places and wondered at himself. His skepticism was gone, his heart was warm with the old faith, and the comfortable assurance that his sins were forgiven. The thought of preaching haunted him, but he hesitated. With an intelligent, thoughtful man, entering the ministry is a serious business, and Huston wanted to feel absolutely sure that his call to preach was not a sort of ambitious fancy of his boyhood back in the days of Annie Gray, but a divine call.

Times were lively on the plains; there were many cattle rustlers; cattle were being stolen and Huston, as deputy sheriff, was on the lookout, not only for the care of the cattle, but if possible, for the capture of cattle thieves. It was about two months after the funeral of which we have spoken, that Huston came in one evening a short time before sundown, and was in the act of unsaddling his horse when the old cook, who had been out hunting, rode into camp and said, that an hour before he had seen a group of five suspicious looking men riding with Tom Goodson and the young Mexican comrade, as if they were prisoners. He was some distance away, but he believed their cowboys were bound on their horses. They were going toward the Cottonwood Camp, a grove of trees near a little stream about fifteen miles away. He had hurried home to report matters.

Huston shoved a loaded revolver into each boot, threw his belt around him, grabbed his Winchester, leaped onto his horse, told two of the cooks who were present, to grab their guns and follow him, and ordered the women to tell any of the boys who might come in, to come at once to Cottonwood Camp.

He put Selam to the top of his speed. The plains glided under him with amazing rapidity. The two cooks on slower horses, followed as rapidly as possible. Two or three other cowboys coming into the camp were given Huston's orders and followed at once. It was after sundown when Huston, on panting horse, rode into Cottonwood Camp. When he arrived court was in session. Sure enough, there was a group of five as savage, suspicious looking men as one could want to see, sitting huddled together, with Tom Goodson and Moreno, the Mexican, tied, going through the form of a trial. They were accusing them of being cattle thieves.

Huston leaped off of his horse, walked up to the group and said, "Beg your pardon, gentlemen, this seems to be some sort of a court. I should like to meet the Judge. I am a deputy sheriff in this county, and am ready to offer him my service."

The men seemed a bit confused, but one of them shoved his hat on the back of his head and said, "We have the situation well in hand. We have been sent out here by the proper authorities to clean up cattle rustlers. We have caught these two scamps, red-handed. We have got the facts, and you just got here in time to attend a hanging. We propose to string them up right here."

Huston pulled back his collar, showed his star of office, and said, "Let's not be too hasty about this matter. I should like to look your prisoners over. I think I have seen these men before. The fact is, they are both in my employment. We have ridden together every day for the past ten days. We slept in the same bunk house last night, if I am not mistaken in their identity. You gentlemen certainly do not want to hang innocent men. There is scarcely rope enough in this country for the guilty, and it would be a great pity to string up the innocent."

He stepped forward, and with a quick movement, cut the raw-hide bands from the wrists of Goodson and the Mexican, at the same time, grabbing the revolvers from his bootlegs, thrusting them into their hands, saying, "Hold these for me a minute."

Just at that time, Huston's cook rode up and dismounted. It looked very much as if there was going to be a battle.

Huston very calmly said, "Now gentlemen, let's have no trouble here. It would be worse than useless to kill each other. I am an officer of the law; you have made a mistake in undertaking to injure these men. They are in my employment, and honest men, and I am here to protect them."

The men rose to their feet and were about to draw their weapons, when Huston and the rescued men presented their guns and insisted on "Hands up!" By this time several of the cowboys had ridden in from the main camp and the five strangers were arrested, their arms captured; they were kept at the main camp for the night, the next day taken away by Huston under guard, to the county seat, where they were held in jail until court, tried and found to be cattle rustlers, and were sent to the penitentiary.

This event gave Huston considerable prestige among the officials. Shortly afterward he was induced to give up his position as cowboy and deputy sheriff and accept a place under a United States marshal, and give active service in the enforcement of the government prohibition laws, along the border of Texas and Indian Territory. Considerable whiskey was being smuggled over the Texas border into Indian Territory. Huston had a year in this splendid service, made himself a fine reputation, both for courage and self-control. He captured many men without ever firing a shot, saw a number of lawbreakers safe in prison, and gave up the work because of the dangers and possibilities of being compelled to kill some one in the enforcement of law.

When Huston left his work for the cattle man there was a considerable sum of money due him. A change of administration in Washington City, and the coming in of a low tariff wrought havoc among the cattle people of the west, and Huston's employer was bankrupt. Through his attorney he arranged a settlement with Huston by deeding him five hundred acres of prairie land, which promised little, or nothing, in real financial value; but it was some comfort to a young fellow to know that he really owned five hundred acres of terra firma.

All through their acquaintance, young Moreno, the Mexican, had insisted that down

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

THE SYRACUSE CONVENTION.

The National Association for the Promotion of Holiness put on its first convention under the leadership of Dr. C. W. Butler, newly elected President, at Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 22-27, 1929.

The convention was held at the Nazarene Church with Rev. A. R. Brooke, pastor. The fellowship and co-operation of Brother Brooke and his good people was very gracious.

The writer was co-laborer with Dr. Butler in preaching. Rev. C. I. Armstrong, pastor Wesleyan Methodist Church, Bradford, Pa., was leader of song. The Convention was made possible through the fine co-operation of Rev. J. C. Long, Houghton, N. Y., President New York State Holiness Association, Rev. Cassius L. Myers, President Onondago County Holiness Association, Miss Florence Kunz, Secretary, Rev. C. H. Cox, Editor of The Way of Holiness, and others.

Features.

There were more than twenty-five preachers and Christian workers in attendance, as many as seventeen preachers in one service. Many of these Christian leaders were in a number of the services and made a large contribution to the success of the campaign. The churches and organizations prominently represented were the M. E. Wesleyan and the Free Methodists, the Nazarene Church, the Pilgrim Holiness Church, and the Holiness Work in Canada.

Syracuse being the Denominational Headquarters of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, a number of their best known leaders were in attendance. Among them were: Rev. E. D. Carpenter, Pres. Wesleyan General Conference; Dr. J. S. Willet, agent Publishing House and Syracuse pastor; Rev. I. F. McLeister, Editor Wesleyan Methodist, and Rev. C. H. Cox, editor Way of Holiness. Rev. Peter Wiseman, D.D., President Annesley College, Ottawa, Canada, was present a few days and was an inspiration to all. Rev. C. P. Hogle, Field Secretary of the Missionary Department of the National, and his wife were present the closing days—boosting the convention in every way.

There was a good spiritual tide in the meeting climaxing in the largest altar service of the convention at the closing service Sunday night under the preaching of Dr. Butler. We praise God for the assurance that the Convention was made a rich blessing to many of the Lord's anointed and a time of salvation victory for a goodly number of seekers for pardon, reclamation, or entire sanctification.

Appreciations.

The hospitality of Sister Kunz (wife of Brother Geo. J. Kunz, former President of the National) and her family; of Bro. C. L. Myers and wife, and of Bro. Grant who entertained without charge the engaged workers, was more than generous. God bless them for their labor of love.

Brother Brooke and his wife were royal hosts. Brother Armstrong sang in the Spirit and blessed the people. He is a successful pastor, an excellent leader in song, and a radiant Christian character.

Dr. Butler, President, is a good executive, thorough in attention to detail. He is a rugged preacher, an unusual teacher, a lover of men, and a lover of souls. Our fellowship was delightful. He has planned a great convention in connection with the Annual Meeting of the National at Asbury College, May 7-12.

Pray for the Beaver Falls, Pa., Convention for Feb. 19-24, and for the Williamsport Convention, February 26-March 3.

Yours in prayer for a great revival through the National and associated organizations ordained for the spread of Scriptural Holiness.

A GOOD REVIVAL IN RAYMOND, KANSAS.

This is my second year on Chase Circuit of which Raymond is a part, a small town on the main line of Santa Fee. I have felt for sometime these people needed a meeting because religion was at a very low ebb. I accordingly got in correspondence with my old friend, Rev. J. L. Carothers and wife of Colorado Springs. The meeting began Jan. 20 and closed Feb. 3. The roads were almost impassable and the weather cold, but the people came for many miles to hear the gospel. These people preached hard against sin, and held up Christ as a Savior from all sin. There were over fifty people bowed at the altar and prayed through in the old-fashioned way. Many hard sinners were saved, backsliders not a few, for which I praise God. The church is in a far better condition now than it has been in years. One poor lost man who had not been in church in fifteen years, was part of the time sick with the flu, was converted in his home after the meeting had closed.

Rev. Stewart, the local Baptist pastor, and people, dismissed all their services and rendered valuable assistance. You can see God will work where there is unity and harmony. Oh, how I long for this good work to continue, and I am sure it will. Rev. Carothers and his wife were both faithful in presenting holiness in a definite manner, and I believe many are hungry for it. There were thirteen accessions to the M. E. Church.

If any of the readers of The Herald need a revival in your church, however dead it may be, you will make no mistake in calling these good people.

I love the holiness people everywhere, love The Herald, have known Dr. Morrison for about thirty years and hope God will spare him for many years yet.

My heart was greatly grieved to learn of the passing of Bro. W. H. Huff; met him first in Peniel Holiness School, of Greenville, Texas, in 1900. I love to read the glowing reports from the evangelists from many different fields. Surely we should not settle down in despair saying the days are past for old-time revivals. God is the power unto salvation to everyone who believeth.

The old Southwest Kansas Conference, of which I am a member, is spiritual to be so large, and I am praying that God will give us a spirit of evangelism. I covet the prayers of God's saints.

God has visited Vancleave Community in a marvelous way during the past two weeks. We secured the services of the Butts-Cunningham party of Memphis to lead us in a revival campaign which resulted in a real old-time Holy Ghost revival and souls saved at the altar in the good old-fashioned way. Herman A. Butts is a mighty power in God's hands and is proclaiming the full gospel and God is honoring in a marvelous way. His helper, Moody B. Cunningham, is a very fine song leader and worker with young people. They make one of the best gospel teams in the field that I know of. There were something like one hundred who made profession of faith or reclamation or resecration. Business men were saved and now leading prayer meetings, high school students saved by the score and now leading public meetings and praying and the entire community is stirred.

These brethren are now at Biloxi, Miss., on a meeting. They have some open dates in June and July, and I want to commend them heartily to any pastor wanting the old-time Holy Ghost preaching and singing.

Dear Call to Prayer Readers and Praying Friends:

We have just reached San Francisco and are to sail on the 16th on the "Siberia Maru." But before leaving we want to write you a farewell note expressing our gratitude and praise to God for special marks of his leading as he hath wonderfully opened the way for our return to China. We go with hearts full of faith and praise. The parting with the three children left in the homeland has not been easy but God has taken the pain out of it and given us joy.

There are two burdens on our hearts of which we want to tell you and ask you to share with us in prevailing prayer. The first is for an ever fresh and abundant supply of grace and wisdom to meet the new, and as yet, untold problems facing us on the field as a mission, brought about by the new situation prevailing in China today. God has truly and wonderfully blessed our mission in the last two years, during the time of transition from the old to the new political order of things,—but so surely has it brought Satan's attacks, and we covet that you "stand by" in prayer. This morning I read these words which are a part of Jehoshaphat's prayer, and my own heart took them up and offered them anew, "Oh, our God, we have no might against this great company; neither know we what to do; but our eyes are upon thee."

The other matter that is in our hearts heavily is a deep conviction that God wants to make the "Call to Prayer" increasingly a spiritual power for the building up of the Kingdom by using it to raise up a larger army of intercessors. We believe God would use it to stir new groups to band together for prayer, and arouse multitudes of individuals to renewed importunity and regularity in prayer for the spread of Scriptural Holiness. We are greatly encouraged by the many letters which came in telling of the blessing the paper has been, but we believe that God intends to greatly extend its ministry. To this end we ask you to pray definitely and to send to the office the names and addresses of any to whom you feel the "Call" would be made a messenger of blessing.

Yours for Christ and China and the spread of Scriptural Holiness.

Woodford and Harriette Taylor.

P. S. To the Host of Lovers and Prayers and Givers:

Please let me add this postscript. We are exceedingly sorry that the Taylors could not have filled their expected engagements in the west and have made a farewell call upon their legion of friends, but they are soldiers. The cablegram read, "Crisis reached—return at once—imperative." With a hurried good-bye to his aged father and mother, whom they will never see again till they meet on the gold paved streets of glory, and a hasty affectionate good-bye to three lovely children, and without any good-bye to her brother and relatives on the coast, they hurried to catch the first boat. A little company gathered in the office in Chicago, and prayed—well, none of those present can describe the hour of prayer; we were melted before the Lord; the Holy Ghost was there in fresh anointing power; Jesus was there to say to them and to us, "Lo, I am with you always"; China was there with outstretched hands—"New China," with her multitude of new problems, saying, "We need you, Woodford and Harriette Taylor, HURRY," and being soldiers they hastened on the long road.

God bless and keep and give a restful voyage to our precious Superintendent and wife and two daughters, and let this be his appointment. Amen.

C. F. Hogle, General Secretary.

prayer. Only thus can we fill this dry valley with ditches. Only thus can we prepare the way for a great divine visitation.

Let all holiness churches and associations, together with all holiness people scattered throughout the land, begin to pray definitely for a deep, true revival. Let us set apart a day, a month for united fasting and prayer. It would be splendid if in every Association, School, Church and Mission in America, we would unite one day each month from now on until refreshing times come from the presence of the Lord, until we have a visitation that will so fill the ditches with water that our needs shall be abundantly supplied and through the abundant blessing there shall come fearful defeat to the enemies of God. Yea, until the Moabites shall be conquered and error and wickedness destroyed and victory that shall gladden all hearts and set heaven's bells to ringing be enjoyed. When our digging is well done I believe God will come. He is never behind with his part in the work.

The army obeyed and dug the ditches; they continued in the regular order of duty and devotion, for it was at the hour of the morning sacrifice that the ditches filled with water. The victory was sudden, and except for faith in God unexpected, that is, no visible signs were given, just a "Thus saith the Lord." They obeyed and worshipped. God came and fulfilled his word. It is ever so. No doubt God is now waiting for ditches to fill with the water that gives life. We cannot sing up the revival which we need. We must pray it down.

We must unite prayer with obedience and continuance in the order of God, never slackening the pace of our service nor lowering the flag of our complete loyalty to him. God has answered prayer in a marvelous way in our national affairs in the fearful rebuke to sin and evil doers administered by the American people in the recent election, but following this we will be little profited unless we further rebuke the stalking unbelief and lawlessness, both in and out of the church, by a genuine spiritual revival of Bible religion. We are in an hour when great stress is being laid on union, co-operation and federation of churches. May we not in a proper Bible way unite as holiness people, forgetting non-essentials and denominational lines and strike unitedly for God and souls in an effort that God can smile upon?

We need to humble ourselves and pray, confessing our faults and the sins of our people. The promise is, "If my people who are called by my name shall humble themselves and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and heal their land." We need the Daniel type of intercession. Dan. 9:3-9.

As President of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness, I call upon the holiness people of the land, of every name and station, to lift up your eyes. Let your vision reach beyond the horizon of your local work, and push the battle beginning at your Jerusalem, but in prayer and faith push on to the uttermost parts of the earth.

in Mexico, his father owned a goat ranch on which he believed there was gold, and he had urged Huston and Tom Goodson to go with him to investigate the claim of his father, and see if there was really a gold deposit that might be worked to advantage.

The young men, full of the spirit of adventure, finally consented to make the trip and, at least, see the country, with the possibility of finding a fortune.

A Kentucky Holiness Association.

During my long weeks in the hospital, I thought much of the work of the holiness revivals in Kentucky the past year, and of the faithful men who carried forward the good work, who have gone home to their reward. There was Rev. B. A. Cundiff, A. A. Niles, the Campbells, John Keen, T. C. Peters, C. W. Boswell, and a host of faithful men, strong, patient, full of love and good works, true to the church, and to every interest of humanity, who preached and witnessed to full salvation in our Lord Jesus.

I have by no means undertaken to mention the many faithful Methodist pastors who kept the holy fires burning which led to the conversion of thousands of sinners and the sanctification of many hundreds of believers. The work in Kentucky needs reviving. We have quite a number of camp meetings and perhaps several small associations which are not doing much in the way of holding conventions and promoting gracious revivals of religion.

We ought to organize a Kentucky Holiness Association. It ought to be entirely free from the promotion of any one denomination or other objectives than the revival of Holy Ghost religion; the holding of conventions and protracted meetings for the conversion of sinners, the reclamation of backsliders and the sanctification of believers.

I believe we could organize an interdenominational Kentucky Holiness Association made up of the two Methodisms, Nazarenes, Pilgrims, in fact, any and all people who are church members in good standing who accept the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification. We could call for and have at least one great convention each year. We could purchase several tents and employ evangelists in interdenominational revival work in neglected places. This undoubtedly could be done, and ought to be done. It would mean the salvation of multitudes of souls. It would mean the development of strong, earnest soul winners, both men and women, who would help keep revival fires burning. I am confident there are many county seats in Kentucky where we could bring together great numbers of people for such conventions. What times of refreshing such conventions would be! What times of prayer, of testimony, of waiting upon the Lord, of scattering tracts, of awakening communities, of great spiritual refreshing in our own souls.

Tell me, my friends, do we not very generally feel that we need afresh a gracious and a mighty manifestation of divine, supernatural power in our midst? Oh, how I should like to see a great gathering of our brethren and sisters who believe with all their hearts in the sanctifying power of Jesus' blood, who have received, or long to receive, the baptism with the Holy Ghost in its cleansing and keeping power.

I wish those who feel alike with me in this matter would join with me in prayer, and drop me a card. We can select a place, set a time, get together somewhere, organize and bring together the Lord's people and rekindle the fires of full salvation in old Kentucky. It would mean so much for us; it would mean the salvation of many precious souls; it would mean the raising up of men and women to carry forward the great work of full salvation after we have gone. It ought to be done! It can be done! The Lord will be with us if we will rise up and rekindle the fires that used to burn so brightly in Kentucky.

Faithfully your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

A Worthy Undertaking.

We see in a recent issue of The Herald of Holiness that our Nazarene brethren are making a drive for forty thousand subscribers to their church paper, The Herald of Holiness. We wish them great success. It is an excellent paper. We almost begrudged Dr. J. B. Chapman to the General Superintendency, he was such a capable editor, but Dr. H. O. Wiley is keeping up the high standard of the paper. It is a strong, clear-cut, practical, full salvation religious weekly.

Theological Seminary Extension Department.

A host of our readers will be glad to know that Asbury Theological School is now prepared to give a number of very fine courses of Bible study by correspondence. Great numbers of people have been asking for just such a school for years. This Extension Department of the School of Theology at Asbury gives you a most excellent opportunity for instructive Bible study under great scholars who are devout, Christian men, and who will be able to assist you to a comprehensive understanding of essential Bible truth. The expenses of these courses of study are very small. Write at once to Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for full information.

H. C. MORRISON.

The Evangelical Methodist League.

My long illness prevented our get-together meeting of the tent workers at the close of the campaign the past year, and I have not been able to summarize the gracious results of the tent work, although we have had most encouraging reports from many of the workers. There were 33 tents in the field, extending from New York to Florida; one tent got as far as California. One tent did splendid service under the direction of several pastors in Arizona. The Lord graciously blessed the work; no doubt several hundred thousand people heard the gospel of full salvation, and thousands were converted, reclaimed or sanctified.

This tent work of The Evangelical Methodist League is one of the best movements in the Holiness Movement. It is nonsectarian, makes no war on the church, whatever, but makes a vigorous war against sin, and goes with a heart full of love to win the lost to Christ and to bring the saved into deeper and sweeter fellowship with him. God has signally blessed the work and we are longing to place it on a firmer foundation, and to make it a more powerful movement in the Movement for the salvation of sinners and the sanctification of believers.

This coming spring Dean Larabee, of the Theological School of Asbury College, will look after the distribution of tents. Students and others desiring to go out the coming summer should get in touch with him. Monies for the purchase of new tents, should be sent to Mrs. H. C. Morrison, care PENTECOSTAL HERALD, Louisville, Ky.

We know of no better way to bring the gospel right home to the lost multitudes, than through the extension of this tent work. Plant a tent in a village; begin to sing and pray and preach, and the people will come, and the Lord will save. Let's gird ourselves afresh and keep the good work going.

Faithfully yours,
H. C. MORRISON.

THE HUGHE'S MEMORIAL.

W HILE laid aside from active service I have been thinking of the large auditorium now being erected at Asbury College in memory of John Wesley and Mary Hughes. Going backward some thirty-eight years ago—I cannot be exact as to date—it was the year that Bishop Hargrove presided over the Kentucky Conference in Lexington, Ky. THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, then named "The Old Methodist", was then in the second year of its history.

Rev. John Wesley Hughes and myself, then young men, after much prayer, many tears, and not a few discussions and arguments with our friends, went up to that conference with our minds made up to locate, he to build a college with the supreme purpose of spreading scriptural holiness. There was much leading up to this, but the great aim was to bring human souls under the cleansing power of Jesus' blood, and to give to the service of humanity men and women with hearts from sin set free.

I was locating to change "The Old Methodist" from a monthly to a weekly religious journal with one great desire to herald to mankind that the Lord Jesus Christ is mighty to save to the uttermost; that all men may not only be born again, but may receive a cleansing baptism with the Holy Spirit and be set free from indwelling sin.

Brother Hughes and I were drawn very close together at that conference, talking over the task ahead of us, the purpose in it, and the opposition we were meeting. We were full of enthusiasm. We were happy. We believed that the Spirit of the Lord was leading us. We felt the thrill of a divine power in our souls. We had no conception of the bigness of the task we were undertaking, of the burdens we were shouldering, of the obstacles that lay ahead of us. We were counting on help and sympathy from sources from which it never came. Countless surprises and disappointments were awaiting us, but we were happy in the belief that we were in the will of God, and that we were undertaking something that he would bless. I do not believe that either of us dreamed of the growth that awaited the two enterprises and wide and powerful influences that these institutions were destined to wield. We both had a bare-fisted fight, tooth and nail, with poverty. We soon exhausted our financial resources, the work grew, and somehow, we got on. God helped us, good men and women gave us their prayers and a helping hand in many times when we knew not which way to turn; the revival fires spread, opposition to THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD carried it forward, the circulation of the paper increased and the college grew; and we lads worked, we knew nothing of idleness, nothing of luxury; it was economy, hard work, day and night, and God blessed us with health and courage and persistence; and I judge in the midst of it all, we had about as much genuine happiness as any two soldiers on the battlefield.

We are old men now. It has been my privilege from the very first to take an active part in the struggles with Brother Hughes and the upbuilding of Asbury College. I am just out of the hospital and I am sorry to learn he is just in. I hope he may be recovered before this gets into print. There are two memorial buildings to myself at Asbury College, one a large hall for students, with lecture rooms, and the other a beautiful library which the people gave on my 65th birthday; now the splendid auditorium is going up in honor of J. W. and Mary Hughes, his wife at the time of the founding of Asbury College. Nothing could be more appropriate. The faith of the man, his love for divine truth, his holy zeal for the spread of a pure gospel, his untiring energy through the years of struggle, and the success with which God crowned his labors, call upon us to honor him, to keep the memory of him; his faith and works among men after he has gone to his reward.

Who can ever calculate the breadth of the contribution he has made to the spread of scriptural holiness in the revivals he has held, in the students he has taught, in the central fires he has kindled at Asbury which has sent out its influences to the ends of the earth. We want to honor and keep sacred in our memory the faith and fortitude of this man. All of his labor, all of his purpose, love, and sanctified energies have clustered about the blessed Lord Jesus. John Hughes was a sinner, and Jesus saved him. He knew the uprisings of indwelling sin and Jesus sanctified him. That started him, that put a holy go into him; out of that came the beginnings of Asbury College, and we have set ourselves to honor his memory in a great building for Holiness Conventions, religious revivals, and the promulgation of an intellectual and spiritual life that will carry the torch of a full salvation gospel into all the world.

We want thousands of good people to join us in this enterprise; in this abiding monument. Many hundreds, even thousands, of people who never saw and never will see John Wesley Hughes, ought to take one of the chairs at $50.00, while the thousands who cannot invest that much should send in their smaller donations. This is a worthy object, a great, good cause. The money is needed now. Send your donations at once, or as soon as possible, to Rev. Guy Wilson, Wilmore, Ky., and it will be gratefully received and go into a most worthy memorial to a man good and true who must pass eventually from us to his reward.

Faithfully, your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

THE SECOND BIRTH.

JOHN THOMAS.

ITS NECESSITY.

THE importance of the New Birth is seen at once, if we remember that Jesus Christ did not say, "Ye must be born again," to a murderer or to an adulterer, but to a religious leader, a member of the Sanhedrin, a master in Israel, a man of high intelligence, an instructor of others, and what Jesus said to that man, He is saying to all men, "Ye must be born again!" It would have been far better not to have been born at all, than to miss the second birth, because, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." One may have knowledge and learning, be highly cultured, and yet be a stranger to the things of God.

The New Birth is more than church membership, more than baptism, more than reformation, more than accepting certain creeds and dogmas, more even than partaking of the sacraments: it is a new life. "The kingdom of heaven is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." There is only one way by which we can enter the Kingdom, and that is by this New Birth of which Jesus spake to Nicodemus, we must be born into the Kingdom. There is a tremendous difference between a child born into a family, and a child adopted into it. A little girl ran sobbing to her mother, saying, "Mama, am I really your little girl?" The mother assured her that she was truly a member of the family, and inquired, "Why do you ask such a question?" The little girl replied, "My sisters have been telling me that I am not truly your little girl, but that I was 'dopted, that Daddy found me on the doorstep, and you took me in and 'dopted me!" The mother continued to comfort the little child, and finally the little one said, "Mama, was I really born to you?" It is a sad fact that thousands have been taken into the church without having been Scripturally Born Again: they are only "dopted" into the church family, and as a result do not understand spiritual things, having no real heart experience.

Mr. Whitefield was once asked, "Why do you preach so often on the subject, 'Ye must be born again?'" His answer was, "I preach on that subject often because our Lord has said that ye must be born again. An eccentric old Methodist preacher had many sermons, but repeatedly used the same text, 'Ye must be born again,' so that the people got tired of listening to the same topic over and over again, and complained to the Superintendent minister that they did not like the old man's preaching, with the result that the Superintendent threatened to take his name off the Quarterly plan, but the old man pleaded to be allowed to preach again, so he was given one more opportunity. The hour of service arrived, and the people who had complained were anxious to hear what the text would be. To their amazement he thundered out, "ARE ye born again?"

The New Birth is the impartation of a new life, it is a translation from darkness to light—it is a passing from death unto life—it is receiving a new heart—it is beginning life anew. The analogy that Jesus used is still true—"That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." It is impossible to understand spiritual things by mental philosophy or reasoning; nevertheless, sinners in all lands coming to God, confessing their sins, receiving Jesus Christ as their personal Savior, have the knowledge of sins forgiven; have peace with God; feel their burdens lifted, and go on their way with an assurance in their hearts, a shining face, and a testimony on their lips that they have been born again. An Irishman was converted, and when asked to give his testimony, hesitated for a moment, and then blurted out, "God has given me a new inside!" On one occasion the writer was crossing the Pacific Ocean, and some Orientals asked if he would be willing to teach them the English language; so we began to do so, using as our text-book the First Epistle of John. A young Siamese was in the class, and when we came to 1 John 5:12, "He that hath the Son hath life," he stopped, smiled, and said, "That was the verse which God gave me when I was born again."

THE MANNER OF THE NEW BIRTH.

There is a false doctrine being preached today; that, if a child is well trained and has a good education, there is no need for the New Birth, if the environment is what it should be, that the New Birth is not a necessity. This is a fatal error, contrary to Scripture and experience. God's method of regeneration is clearly seen in 1 Peter 1:23, "Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by (through) the Word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever." The Word is the seed of the Kingdom (Matt. 13:19), and, just as every seed has life in itself, so the Word of God sown by the Spirit in the soul has life. But often after the seed is sown, Satan comes and snatches it away, lest the sinner should be converted. An old Korean woman went to visit a relative in the city, and was invited to go to the church. She had never seen a Christian meeting before, and, being very dark, nothing seemed to enter her mind. She returned to her home in the country, and her friends came to ask her what she had seen in the great city. She recounted her experiences, but said, "The most remarkable of all was a 'Jesus' meeting." When asked what they did, and what was said, she answered, I don't know what they said, but they sang over and over again, 'Yasu aye pe patke umnay'—Nothing but the blood of Jesus. The seed had entered her heart, and a few weeks later a colporteur of the Bible Society came to her little village and began to sell the portions of the Scripture. A little lad, hearing him calling "Gospel of Mark, Jesus books, come buy, come buy," ran home to the old lady to tell her the good news. She said to the boy, "Go fetch the man here; I want to see him, and hear more about the song, 'Yasu aye pe patke umnay.'" The Korean colporteur came to the house, and soon had the joy of leading a seeker to Jesus. She earned her living by making native wine, which, when the preacher noticed, he told her, "You cannot be a Jesus woman and sell that wine." She did not wait for a temperance lecture, but the same day poured all the wine into the gutter. Now, there is a little church in that village. It is not enough to pray with the penitent, but we must give the Word of God, as a basis for saving faith. Such Scriptures as the following have been tested and proved to be very effective: John 6:37; John 1:12; Romans 10:10, 11.

THE EXPERIENCE OF THE NEW BIRTH.

"Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away, behold, all things are become new." This is the Scriptural foundation of the New Birth, —a new creation, a new life, a new heart, a new aspiration, new ambitions,—new outlook: in fact, everything is new.

Old habits, old things, old hobbies are passed away, and the soul now finds that a remarkable thing has happened—that he now loves that which before was distasteful to him, and that he hates the things which he once loved. The real proof of the experience is that you now love God, you want to keep his commandments, for Jesus said, "If a man love me, he will keep my words." Another proof of the New Birth is that he is able to overcome temptation, not that we are exempt from temptation, but that "he that is born of God overcometh the world." The New Birth makes us victorious over sin, "He that is born of God doth not commit sin." He could sin, if he so desired, but his desires have been changed, he is now saved from his old evil habits. Moreover, salvation is something far more than being saved from wrong-doing; the New Birth gives one power to do that which is right. "He that is born of God doeth righteousness." He now associates with the people of God. He reads the Bible. His reading matter has been changed. His library is converted, the old books and periodicals have lost their charm. The songs of Zion have taken the place of worldly music. There is peace with God and a gladness of heart which was unknown before. The experience of the New Birth is just a foretaste of that heavenly life which is unending. What a calamity it would be to miss it! To miss the New Birth is to miss Heaven, to miss seeing your loved ones again, to miss seeing the King. How, then, can one be born again? The way is simple: Turn from every known sin, call upon God with all your heart, confess your sins, receive Jesus Christ as your personal Savior; promise that you will obey him, serve him, confess him, and live for him, "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: I come for the first time asking admittance to your happy family of boys and girls. I am eighteen years old, have light hair and brown eyes, am five feet, three inches tall, and weigh about 105 pounds. Mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it very much. I am a member of the Methodist Church. I went to Sunday school most every Sunday this past summer. My teacher is Miss Ludlea Waller. I love her very much. She is a dear Christian girl. We have cottage prayer meeting every Saturday night. We had a revival here this fall and four were saved. Rev. G. C. Hesson was the preacher. He will teach a singing school here in the near future. He is a good preacher and singer. He is a Nazarene preacher. I will enjoy hearing from all who care to write. Please pray for my gray-headed father who is far away from God; also my brothers. I will close with love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Vassie Givens.
Rt. 1, Carthage, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again but I promise not to stay very long. This is my second letter to the dear old Herald and would very much like to see it in print. I am a boy of seventeen and live on a farm of 202 acres. Marguerite Lucile Ward, I think I can answer your question. Cornelius was the man of the Italian band. You will find it in Acts 10:1. I had better go before Mr. W. B. gets me.

Ward May.
Rt. 1, Box 20, Terra Alta, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your band of happy girls and boys? I am glad to know that so many girls and boys take interest in writing to The Herald. I sure enjoy reading page ten. I have never written to The Herald before so hope to see this letter in print. I have light hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am fourteen years old. My birthday is Jan. 20. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. I am a Christian and belong to the M. E. Church and go to Sunday school and preaching every Sunday. I would like to correspond with some of you cousins. I will answer every letter I receive and try to send a picture of myself.

Geraldine Mayhew.
Rt. 2, Adolphus, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and the cousins? As this is my first letter I will describe myself. I have blonde hair, blue eyes and light complexion and am between ten and twenty years old. I would like to hear from any of the cousins who care to write. I will answer all the letters I can.

Doretha Dabney.
Mannsville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Colorado girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My grandma takes The Herald and I like page ten fine. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I am eight years old and in the third grade. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking a walk when this letter arrives.

Geneva M. Rice.
Rt. 1, Cortez, Colo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. I go to Sunday school. My teacher is Miss Venson. I go to school to Miss O'Donnell. I am in the fourth grade. I go to the Emerson school. If that Montana girl sees this letter she forgot to send her name and address in the letter to my mother. Woodrow Ezell has my little brother's birthday, Nov. 6. He is seven years old. I will be ten years old May 6. Whoever has my birthday write to me. I hope Mr. W. B. is out fishing when this letter arrives.

Dearest Aunt Bettie: How are you and all the cousins? This is my first letter to The Herald, so I'll try not stay long, just long enough to ask and answer a few questions. Nettie Hart, the giant who had an iron bedstead was "Og," king of Bashan. (Deut. 3: 11). Where is the Kingdom of God? What comes from the Kingdom of God? Does religion come from the Bible or the Bible from religion? What was the name of Adam's first child? There are 1,189 chapters in the Bible. I am a Christian. I belong to the Methodist Church. I am sixteen. Must sign off before I break my promise. The one that answers these questions I'll write to them. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Ethel Miller.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a little girl from Kentucky. Will you allow me to stop for a short talk with all the cousins from far and near? I am seven years of age. My birthday is September 7th. I am in the second grade. My teacher's name is Miss Edith Dalzelle. I like to go to Sunday school and used to go but as we moved the past year, it has been impossible for me to go. Hope Mr. W. B. has gone to meeting when this arrives, so I can have a chance. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Madeline Miller.
Rt. 3, Paris, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for another Kentucky girl to join your happy band of boys and girls? I was seventeen Dec. 13. I am five feet, six inches tall, have light brown hair and blue eyes. I am a Christian and belong to the Baptist Church. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am a Sophomore in High School and like to go to school fine. I would like to correspond with all of the cousins that would be interested in what I have to write. I would also like to correspond with a boy and a girl as old or older than myself.

Bee Bratcher.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter. I am six years old and in the second grade. I like to go to Sunday school. I love both of my teachers. My mother and father are Christians and they teach me about the life of Jesus, Samuel and the little shepherd boy. I am trying to be good. I wish Aunt Bettie and all the girls and boys a happy New Year.

Burford Jewell.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald, so hope to see it in print. My birthday is July 10. I am now eleven years old. Daddy takes The Herald and I like it very much. I am in the sixth grade and like school very much. I live very far west in Washington.

Mary Greene.
Rt. 1, Custer, Wash.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How do you and the cousins like this cold weather? Everybody down here has had the flu in the last two weeks nearly. We have had ice down here a few times this winter, if it is in the South. I got a letter from Elsie M. Meads who lives in Elizabeth City, N. C. I answered it the other day. I was glad to receive the two letters from Herald friends.

Maggie Belle Pouncey.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I live in Kansas. I am happy today in Jesus. My father and mother are serving Jesus. I go to the Nazarene Church. I have blue eyes, light brown hair and fair complexion. I am ten years old. Beulah Blanchard, I guess your middle name to be May. I hope Mr. W. B. is out when this letter arrives. Some of you cousins write to me.

Irene Williams.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We take The Herald. I enjoy reading it. I don't see very many letters from Texas in it, so I will write one. I am fourteen years old. I am in the ninth grade, and ride four miles to school on a bicycle. I live on a farm, and we have many chickens, hogs, cows and calves which I help to look after, and I enjoy it very much. During the summer I worked in the field. I broke about fifty acres of oat land. I also helped to make and haul about two thousand bundles of cornops. I also helped to gather some corn just before school opened. You know here in good old Texas some people begin gathering corn about the middle of August. I am a member of the Methodist Church, and am trying my best to be a good Christian. I attend Sunday school every Sunday. Helen Robertson, I guess your first name to be Verna. Since this is my first letter I will close hoping to see it in print.

Stanley L. Mumme.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is the first letter I have written to The Herald and hope to see it in print. I could not bear to not see any Stuttgart boys and girls' letters so I thought I would write. Dr. H. C. Morrison held a meeting here last fall. It was a feast to my soul to hear him preach after having read his sermons in The Pentecostal Herald. The one who can guess my middle name I will write them a letter. It has five letters and begins with M and ends with E.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl from McComb, Miss. I was nine years old on June 3. I have a sister seven years old and a brother three years old. I go to the Methodist Sunday school every Sunday. We have a population of 12,000. We have six schools and ten churches. I am in the fourth A grade at school. When I finish here Daddy wants to send me to Wilmore, Ky. I think now I will be a teacher. Our schools have been suspended a week on account of the flu epidemic. Betty B. Jouncey, I guess your middle name to be Belle. Am I right? I hope Mr. W. B. doesn't get my letter as I want to surprise my grandmother.

Annie Linelle Wilson.
McComb, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading page ten and enjoy it. I have written to page ten twice and haven't seen my letter in print but once. I had better describe myself. I have fair complexion, blue eyes and blonde hair. I am four feet, six inches tall and weigh about eighty pounds. We take The Herald and I enjoy reading it. I have a good Christian father and mother and two sisters and two brothers. We live at the edge of town. Who can guess my first name; it begins with M and ends with Y, and has four letters in it. The one that guesses it I will write to them. Beulah M. Blanchard, I guess your middle name to be May. If so, don't forget your promise. Maggie B. Pouncey, I guess your middle name to be Belle. If so, don't forget your promise either. I had better be going before Mr. W. B. comes in from feeding the chickens.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Mississippi girl join your happy band of boys and girls? Thanks. I have been a Christian for nearly two years. I sure do like to serve the Lord, he is so kind and good to me. I have light brown hair and dark brown eyes and am in the sixth grade at school. I am thirteen years old. My birthday is Dec. 16. Have I a twin? The one that can guess my middle name I'll write them a long letter. It begins with B and ends with E, and has five letters in it. How many of you have a hobby? I for one. My favorite author is reading God's word and his great and noble books. I hope Mr. W. B. is out chopping housewood when this letter arrives. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print.

Arie B. Reeves.
Rt. 3, Gloster, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a North Carolina girl join your band of happy boys and girls? I have blue eyes, blonde hair, fair complexion. I am sixteen years of age. Who has my birthday, Jan. 9. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Who can guess my first name? I will send them a pretty card. It begins with C and ends with A, and has four letters in it. This being my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print.

FALLEN ASLEEP

LANDRUM.

A. B. Landrum, age 75 years, 9 months, departed this life Jan. 10, 1929. He has been a devoted Christian for over fifty years, and a member of the Methodist church, and a reader of The Pentecostal Herald for a number of years. The Herald has been a great blessing to the family and he always enjoyed reading H. C. Morrison's books. He leaves a companion aged 81 years, three sons, three daughters, a number of grandchildren, and friends to mourn his loss. I ask The Herald readers to pray for the family.

His daughter,
Mary Taylor.

DOWNARD.

Bertha E. Downard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Carter, was born at Mill Shoals, Ill., Jan. 6, 1900; departed this life at her home near Barnhill, Ill., Jan. 22, 1929, aged twenty-nine years and sixteen days. She was married to Murray Downard, June 16, 1917. To this union six children were born, four boys and two girls. Besides these six children she is survived by a loving husband, father and mother, six sisters, four brothers besides a host of relatives and friends.

Bertha gave her heart to Jesus in 1914 at the age of fourteen years and lived a faithful life until God called her home. She died trusting in him who doeth all things well. She called her loved ones to her bedside and told them she was going home. What sweeter word could she leave behind? Although everything that loved ones and friends could do was done, God knew best, his will be done.

No one heard the door open,
So gentle was the call;
Like the falling leaves of roses,
One by one our loved ones are falling.

Bertha dearest, we will miss you so,
Our hearts are torn with grief,
But the Savior whispered come,
And your dear soul found relief.

Funeral service was conducted by the pastor, W. E. Lamp, at the M. E. Church at Mill Shoals, Ill., after which her body was laid to rest in the old Schewsberry cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

CORNELIUS.

Rev. Barton Cornelius fell asleep in Jesus Jan. 14, 1929. Father was a devout child of God, his Christian experience was clear and unquestionable. He gave his heart to God reasonably young. He served as a soldier in the Civil War and came out without a scratch. He had been married three times and to the three unions were born nine children, eight of which have already gone on to try the reality of the world beyond. He was a minister of the gospel for about fifty-four years, after which his health was so broken he could not go to the gatherings of the Lord, but would exhort all whom he saw at home to turn from the terrible ways of sin. He was ready and willing to sacrifice anything for the blessed Master, and also for his family.

Father taught us how to pray and trust in the Lord at a very young age. Through the dark hours, trying times or the fiercest storms he was always the same calm, serene, believing child of God, as though the sun were shining. Father's life was entirely devoted to God and intensely interested in the affairs of his kingdom for his pure spirit. The vanity of this world held no charm but his chief pleasure was found in fellowship of God's people. He was a Bible student. His memory was richly stored with precious passages from the word of God which he could always quote accurately. He loved the church and was always present when possible. He was a believer in the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification. He was always busy working for the salvation of souls. He loved everybody and was loved by all; he had a kind word for God to all whom he met. Papa was helpless for over four years and bore his afflictions like a good soldier. He was conscious up to the very last and told us he was ready and anxious to go. He had always prayed for a peaceful hour in which to die and God answered his prayer and wafted him away in peace to be with his Lord and to meet again his dear ones that had gone on before.

He left to mourn his death a wife, one daughter, Mrs. Armour Coward, of Pitts, Ark., three grandchildren and two son-in-laws, and a host of friends.

He is gone, our precious father,
Gone to that celestial shore,
Gone to be at home with Jesus
Where we'll never part no more.
Oh, be faithful, all you children,
Do your duty, do not shirk,
Then when troubles are all ended
Go where partings come no more.

Mrs. Armour Coward.

CLAIRBORNE.

Mrs. A. S. Clairborne was born in DeSoto county, Miss., in 1852. Her parents moved to Arkansas when she was about seven years old. She was converted in 1869, under the ministry of Rev. James Talkington, deceased. In 1893 while the writer was pastor of the Old Lebanon Church in White county, Brother Talkington assisted me in a gracious revival. During this meeting Sister Clairborne sought and obtained the blessing of sanctification, and for all these thirty-six years her life has been one of the most beautiful, consistent, constantly growing lives I have ever known. She was wonderfully blest in the companionship of Brother Smith Clairborne for their long, happy life together. Their home has been the pastor's home ever since I have known them, and before. Sister Clairborne was equal to any trained nurse in her ministries to the sick. In her quiet, loving manner she brought comfort and often life and health to the suffering. It is impossible to estimate the value of such a life in a community. Her children rise up to call her blessed.

Sister Clairborne passed to her reward Nov. 12, 1928. She enjoyed The Pentecostal Herald next to her Bible. They have been taking The Herald since 1893.

It was my privilege to visit them in their quiet home two years ago. The presence of the Lord was so manifest that our words were remarkably few, but we did not need to talk so much as we knew each other's minds. I feel richer for having known her. The memory of her holy life is a rich heritage to her children and grandchildren.

Luther C. Craig.

BARRETT.

Rev. W. D. Barrett, of Ocean Springs, Miss., passed from earth to heaven Jan. 21, 1929. He was forty-eight years old. He was stricken with paralysis at 5:00 A. M. His wife heard Brother Barrett making a peculiar noise, supposing him to be dreaming, began shaking and calling him; he never answered. On turning on the light she saw he was about gone, he didn't know anything. She called for help; in a moment of time all the good neighbors and the doctor were by his bedside. His wife and an old Confederate soldier knelt by the bed and prayed. In a little while he came to himself and knew everybody and could use his paralyzed arm, and talked with them, but in a short while he began growing worse, and at 5:00 P. M. he was a corpse.

He was united in marriage to Miss Florence Westbrook, of Auburn, Miss., Aug. 24, 1921. To this union was born one daughter, little Mary Sue, now three years old.

Brother Barrett's parents were Christians and he was brought up in the fear and admonition of the Lord. A more zealous Christian would be hard to find. He followed peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. He not only believed in the second blessing but he had it and lived it. Sacrifice and self-denial were to him a joy to advance the cause of Christ on earth.

No one who went to his door asking food, went away hungry. The writer knows one time a poor sick, hungry man went to his door asking for food and a bed for the night. Not having a spare bed he took his car and placed the man in it and carried him to a hotel and got a bed and food for him and paid for it out of his own purse.

He had only been stationed at Ocean Springs three months. During this short time he had made many admiring friends. Just to know him was to love him. He had such a sweet and uncomplaining spirit. He had the secret of keeping the sacred fires aglow, and knew the deep principles of experimental religion. He was a royal-hearted man carrying the riches of God within himself. He was one who ministered so carefully and tenderly God's word. He was a man that always persisted in keeping mind and spirit on the sunny side of life however hard the trials and difficulties. His sterling qualities of character will leave an indelible impress on those with whom he associated.

It was hard to part with this man of God. His name will long linger in our household. We are sometimes called to sow in tears, but the harvest will be a series of everlasting joys; this blessed hope softens the trials of life.

Brother Barrett's death was such a shock and the grief is sapping the heart of his wife, but one great consolation she has is God's word teaches that they that wait upon him shall renew their strength, and the Lord shall be thy everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended. Their soul shall be a watered garden, and they shall not sorrow any more.

AN APPRECIATION.

Believing it far better to bring flowers before one dies, rather than placing same on his or her casket, we the undersigned wish to express our heartfelt appreciation of Rev. W. W. McCord and family, and what he has meant, and tried to mean to our town and surrounding country for many miles since locating in our midst. For his untiring efforts as founder and president of The Sale City Holiness Campmeeting Association for fourteen years, and when it became somewhat burdensome for him to carry the heavy load longer, he succeeded in interesting the Ohio District of The Church of the Nazarene, in our city and our people and in taking the camp ground off of his hands, to continue it on the lines of its establishment, namely, to propagate and promote the doctrine of Bible Holiness according to the John Wesley interpretation of the Bible.

We also appreciate his continuing to reside in our community, and his efforts from time to time to interest people from the cold north in taking up their abode here in our salubrious climate.

We further desire to express to him our sincere sympathy in the continued illness of his faithful wife, which is preventing him from carrying on his much loved work of evangelism, as has been his custom since becoming a citizen with us and we hope that she may improve and be able to be up again.

In full confidence, love, and highest esteem, we ascribe our names.

MY EXPERIENCE.

I want to tell you my first experience with The Pentecostal Herald. We were living at that time at Cordell, Okla., and everybody knows what a windy state that is. I went to my front door one morning, opened it to go out and found a paper had blown against it. I picked it up to go burn it when I noticed the headlines, Pentecostal Herald. I thought well, that sounds good and shook the sand out of it and began to read, and found so many good things all through it, and found the man's name who the paper belonged to, Rev. McCombs. We met him after that at a cottage prayer meeting, found he was a holiness preacher and a fine man. The Herald has been a weekly visitor in our home ever since, over thirty years. It has been a blessing to us and also to others. After we read them we pass them on. May God bless the entire staff and all the readers. I am living for my Lord's second coming.

P. S.—I always felt that God had a hand in the wind blowing such a good paper to our door, and have thanked him so many times that I found it and read it. If any of the readers read this that remember me write to me. I will be glad to answer and tell you all about my husband's death. A. L.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XI.—March 17, 1929.

Subject.—The Christian Sabbath.
Exodus 20:8-11; Matthew 12:1-8; John 20:19; Rev. 1:10.

Golden Text.—For the Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath day. Matt. 12:8.

Introduction.—Some months ago I published in The Pentecostal Herald a short, but somewhat critical, study of the Christian Sabbath under the caption, "Sunday and the Facts." If you have the paper on file, read that article, as I have neither time nor space to repeat its contents in this lesson.

I do not like far-fetched conclusions. Some writers seem to think that a good many rather obscure passages in Genesis refer to the Sabbath. Maybe so; but we gain nothing by assuming more than we can prove. However, we have a clear statement in Gen. 2:3: "And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made." This is the statement concerning the origin of the Sabbath; but we have almost no information of the keeping of the day between the time of its origin and the time when Jehovah gave the Ten Commandments to the Jews through Moses. We do not even know that the day was observed at all. But the word remember that begins the fourth commandment indicates quite plainly that Israel knew something about the sacredness of the day. It is hardly probable, or possible, that they had kept the day holy during the years of their slavery in Egypt.

It is remarkable that some heathen who wrote in the long ago, make reference to a sacred day of rest. I note two quotations in Arnold's Notes. This is from the Greek poet Homer: "Afterwards came the seventh, the sacred day." Hesiod is emphatic: "The seventh day is holy." Some knowledge of the origin of the Sabbath must have been scattered by tradition among the nations of ancient times.

It is well to remember that the word Sabbath simply means rest, without reference to any particular day. This will avoid some confusion into which many have inadvertently fallen. The Jews, and a few others are great sticklers for keeping what is termed "the seventh day;" but no living man knows what day they are keeping. It may be the seventh, the fourth, or some other day.

We Christians are making some pretense at keeping sacred the day of our week upon which our Savior rose from the dead. As far as I am able to investigate, the evidence is pretty clear as to our having the right day; but a mistake would amount to nothing. The important thing is to keep a rest day holy during the seven days of the week. The apostles started the keeping of our Sunday (rest day) on the day of our Lord's resurrection, and he endorsed their action with his personal presence. As far as I can learn from church history Christians have kept the day holy from that hour to this.

There is a plea made that Roman Catholics changed the day; but there is no semblance of truth in the claim. Long before Roman Catholicism ever existed, Constantine set apart the Christian Sunday as a rest day for the Roman Empire; and not far from the same time a great convention of bishops declared that the old Jewish Sabbath had been repealed, and that Sunday was the Christian Sabbath. This corpse should have been buried long ago, but it is hard to keep a lie under ground when so many fanatics keep yelling that the thing is still alive. There is not enough meat left on the old skeleton to feed a hungry microbe, but some folks are very fond of fossils, no matter how old, nor how dry.

Comments on the Lesson.

I wish to say just a few things concerning the fourth commandment as taken from Exodus 20:8-11.

1. Man is so constituted that he needs one-seventh of his time for rest and special worship. Without this he cannot attain unto his best manhood, physically, mentally, or morally.

2. We must work six days in the week. This is as imperative as resting on the seventh. Wealth excuses no one.

3. The hired man or woman must have the rest day. One dare not try to ease his conscience by shifting burdens. I once met a strict Jew who would not kindle a fire on Saturday, but hired a negro man to do it for him. Nonsense! One's hired man's act is his own.

The second section of our lesson, Matt. 12:1-8, is a revelation of the fanaticism of the Jews concerning the Sabbath. Their teachers had multiplied laws and traditions until it was almost impossible for one to properly observe the day in keeping with all their requirements. Both law and custom permitted a hungry man to eat from a field in passing; but the rabbis said: "You must not pluck the heads of wheat and rub out the grain on the Sabbath day. They could lead an ass to water or pull a sheep out of a pit on the Sabbath; but Jesus must not heal a sick man. The Levites could do the work of the temple on the Sabbath, but one dared not step on the grass, as it resembled threshing out grain. Jesus rebukes all this man-made foolishness, and declares himself, "Lord even of the Sabbath day." When he came the Jews had turned the Sabbath into an impossible burden: he made it a blessing. It was he who taught that "it is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day."

In our quotation from John 20:19 we have the origin of our Christian Sabbath. The Jewish Sabbath commemorates a finished salvation. Theirs was the shadow of ours. That is dead and forever gone: this will outlast the ages.

"The Lord's Day" mentioned in the last section of the lesson is different from "the day of the Lord." The latter refers to the time when he will come again; the former refers to his day of resurrection from the dead.

AN OLD-TIME REVIVAL.

Joseph B. Seay.

What we need today is not great churches costing hundreds of thousands of dollars or men with a college degree as much as we do Spirit-filled men; men who know how to pray until the powers of darkness give way, and the churches are made up of men and women who are willing to hold on believing that God will convict and save from sin. We do not need numbers so much as we need souls fully baptized and born again.

The great trouble with most of the churches is they are after numbers rather than men fully qualified for life's battles by the witness of the Spirit. No man is safe until he is able to say, "I know that Jesus Christ has saved me from sin." Nothing will be satisfactory to a pilgrim on the way to heaven, short of the ability and knowledge of the Holy Ghost, and can readily say I know that I am born of God. The danger now to be shunned is that willingness to be overpowered and led to deal with numbers, drawn into the membership of the church on Decision Day, and gathered from the Sunday School rolls by manipulation, rather than by conviction for sin, and conversion, by turning away from sin, by repentance and faith in Jesus Christ.

The great mass of church members when asked the positive question, "Have you ever had the witness of the Holy Spirit to your conversion?" The answer from the honest heart will most always be, "I joined the church at a certain time." It really seems that the church needs to go back to Pentecost to get back to the old-time revival, the revival that makes men give up their bad habits and turn away from their ungodly deeds and live a new life, so much changed that men "Take knowledge of them that they have been with Jesus." Men who pray with their families around the fireside and can be relied on in the work of the church of God. Men, who when they pray, souls are convicted with a sense of their needs of deeper repentance and greater love. Men who are students of the Word of God. Men who are not satisfied with a mere name to live, but are filled with the spirit of yearning and hungering for righteousness, and will not be satisfied until they are powerfully saved from sin. Men who hold on to the altar of God and cry, "Come, Lord Jesus, and save the purchase of thy blood." Men who are willing to pray until heaven is moved and the dead heart is strangely warmed, until men cry out, "Men and brethren, what must I do to be saved?"

God help us to get back to Pentecost in humility and prayer and weeping over our sins. We do not need education of the mind so much as we do conviction for sin and faith in Jesus Christ, and that will not be satisfied with a mere name of Christian. We must have God in the heart, a giving up of sin, and a dying to self, and fully waked up to a sense of a salvation that makes us want God in all our work whatever that is. We need the kind of witnessing that Peter gave to those who wanted to know how he had such a power to witness at that time, and he said, "Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand before you whole." Acts 4:10. And able to witness to the fact, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

The peculiar thing is, Jesus chose not so much college men but holy men. "Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled: and took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." Acts 4:13.

Oscar B. Lyon, Erin, N. Y.: "I have just closed a revival meeting where God graciously blessed, and twenty-two souls were saved and eighteen sanctified."

"MODERNISM WITH THE MASK OFF"

By W. G. Bennett

Is a clear, concise statement of Modernism, and has been written especially for the information of the common people, who have not the time to read the fuller and more exhaustive treatment of the subject.

The quotations on evolution have been selected with great care from the very best authorities on scientific subjects. What modernism is, is shown from the writings of modernists.

It is commended by such scholars as the noted author and theologian, Leander S. Keyser, editor of "The Bible Champion."

Rev. J. W. Goodwin, General Superintendent of the Church of the Nazarene, says of it: "A fearful blow at modernism."

Dr. S. A. Danford says: "You have certainly taken the mask off of modernism." A neat booklet of forty-seven pages, neatly put up and sells at twenty-five cents. Order from The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday-school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Price: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

B. C. Gamble: "Rev. C. L. Wireman, whose address is 717 Scott S., Covington, Ky., has recently united with the Taylor St. Church, Newport, Ky. Brother Wireman is a strong gospel preacher and has some open dates he would be glad to give to any who might need revival help."

I. W. Napier: "To any pastor or camp meeting committee that needs a good song evangelist, I want to recommend Messrs. S. H. Prather and O. M. Womack, both in Henderson, Ky. They are members of my church and so I feel that I can give a first-hand recommendation. They are kind, brotherly, unassuming, and best of all, are consecrated, untiring workers in the Kingdom.

Frank Hopkins, 417 N. Stewart, Norman, Okla.: "I have some open dates the latter part of April, during May and June, the early part of July, and beginning the 18th of August. Member West Oklahoma Conference, M. E. Church, South, regularly appointed Conference evangelist; was pastor seventeen years, and evangelist nine years. I have held 150 revivals in eleven states. I believe in and preach the Wesleyan doctrines. I refer you to Bishops Boaz, Moore, or Mouzon, and to all the presiding elders of my Conference. Write or wire me. Will go anywhere."

Flossie Haines, a graduate of Cleveland Bible Institute, is free for calls for young people's and children's evangelistic work. The time can be anywhere from 1 to 15 days. All open dates after May 2nd. References, free-will offering. Home address, 13708 Claiborne Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

Rev. and Mrs. Jack Linn report a busy winter and the blessings of God upon their work. They have just closed a meeting in a large Garage Tabernacle at Coconut Grove, Miami, Fla., in which the spirit of God was manifested. "We had the best children's meetings we have had for a long time. God did bless the little ones. Night after night from 40 to 50 were present and the Lord was in the midst." Bro. Linn informs us he has two open dates for camp meetings this summer, and invites correspondence concerning same. Address him at Oregon, Wis.

A SHELF OF RECENT BOOKS.

Chester E. Tulga.

Christ at the Round Table, by E. Stanley Jones. (The Abingdon Press, New York and Cincinnati, $1.50).

A new book by the author of "The Christ of the Indian Road." Like the former book this book has become the center of religious controversy. However, the author denies that he is a modernist and evidently means it. But regardless of the view one takes no student of religion can afford to neglect reading this book.

Modernists have been saying many shallow and sentimental things about the non-Christian religion. Mr. Jones shows conclusively that only the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ brings

A BETTER WAY TO DISTRIBUTE YOUR CONSECRATED MONEY. INVEST YOUR SAVINGS NOW IN ASBURY COLLEGE ANNUITY BONDS AND BE RELIEVED OF ALL FUTURE WORRY.

Mr. W. H. P., Los Angeles, California, who holds two Asbury College Annuity Bonds for $1000 each writes us the following letter:

"I am acquainted with Asbury College and the splendid work being done there for Christian education the past thirty years. I was once a member of its Board of Trustees and I have no hesitancy in saying that I believe it to be one of the best Christian schools in America and have felt it my obligation to assist it financially through the years and when, due to my age, I could no longer give outright as I had formerly done, and needing the income on my consecrated money for my personal needs I felt it not only a duty but a privilege to put some of my money into annuity bonds. I receive my interest regularly and promptly when due. It is a real gratification to me to feel I have my money in a safe investment while I live and also to know that when I have gone to be with Jesus the money will go on glorifying God in educating young men and women to preach the Gospel of full salvation to a lost world."

spiritual certainty. His idea worked out in the round table discussions might profitably be employed in this country. What does your religion mean to you in terms of personal experience? This question is the key to the book.

Shoddy, by Dan Brummitt. (Willett, Clark & Colby, Chicago, Ill. $2.00).

Dan Brummitt, the author of this book, is the editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, one of the official organs of Methodism. He has given us in this book a picture of the inner workings of the Methodist ecclesiastical machine. As a novel it is interesting. As a criticism of the Methodist ecclesiasticism it will provoke controversy. Bishop Bonafede and Peter Middleton are the leading characters. Bishop Bonafede is a functionary with no aim in life but to advance his own ambitions. Peter Middleton is an idealist, living an unselfish life. A fine character but liberal in his theology.

It is doubtful whether this book will accomplish its end. The greatest trouble in Methodism today isn't its bishops but its liberals—men like Dan Brummitt and others who have imbibed "shoddy" religious views.

The Miracle of the Ages, by George P. Rutledge. (The Standard Press, Cincinnati, Ohio. $1.50.)

A book on the deity of Jesus. Without appeal to Scripture this book arrays historic fact with convincing argument proving the deity of Jesus. The reader's faith will be strengthened as he reads this convincing argument. The deity of Jesus does not rest upon the Scriptures alone but is well attested by the facts of history. Every man must account for Jesus not only in the light of the Word, but also in the light of his after influence. A unique presentation of the subject. Order of Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

A GREAT RALLY.

A great rally of the holiness people of America is being planned to be held from May 7 to 12, 1929, at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. It will be the occasion of the Annual Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness. A splendid program with a large number of the most representative holiness men of the country is already in preparation.

STEPPING HEAVENWARD

By Elizabeth Prentiss.

A book that has never lost its charm though it has been in circulation for many years. It is written in diary form and can be picked up or dropped at any point. The book contains the varied experiences of a girl as she develops in the Christian life. Written in an interesting way that will hold the attention of the reader. Stepping Heavenward is considered by many a real classic. Especially is this book fine for girls from fifteen to twenty-five as it helps them in their problems and enables them to see the light.

THE SOURCE OF POWER.

By The Editor.

TO be baptized with the Holy Ghost is to be made pure in heart. Peter says, "Our hearts were purified by faith," that is, their faith in the promise of Christ and their obedience to his commandment kept them waiting in the upper room and the Holy Ghost fell upon them, entered into them and purified their hearts.

To be baptized with the Holy Ghost is to have the love of God shed abroad in our hearts. This is a very wonderful, indeed a marvelous experience. The Holy Ghost takes the love that is in the heart of God and sheds it abroad in our hearts. Then we love with the love of God. God so loved the world that he gave his Son for its redemption and when this love of God is shed abroad in our hearts we partake of the divine nature and we give ourselves for the salvation of the lost.

The baptism with the Holy Ghost is the great need of the church of today. Let him come in his divine power, purging from sin and shedding abroad the love of Christ in our hearts and we will easily find the solution of many problems and be able to answer accurately many vexing questions. If the various Christian denominations could bring bishops, editors, secretaries, college presidents and professors, Sunday school superintendents and teachers, the great rank and file of our American church membership into some upper room of prayer, consecration, faith and waiting until the Holy Ghost comes down in his purging and filling and empowering what a tremendous change it would make in this world of ours. What a marvelous spiritual awakening would follow. How revivals would break out. Contributions for missions would come pouring in. Modern skepticism would be swept away like chaff before the wind. Within ten years we would have a new world.

Such a baptism with the Holy Ghost as we have spoken of above would bring such revivals, such a sweep of divine power into the world that labor and capital could adjust their difficulties; our social problems would be solved; there would be economic adjustment, politics would be purified, the law would be enforced, drunkenness would disappear, the illiterate would become educated, the poor would be made comfortable, the sick would very largely be healed, sanitary conditions would prevail, orphans would be protected, old age would be cared for, and peace would come on earth. The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation. The Atonement Christ has made and the revelation he has given is adequate. The trouble is the church is sadly neglecting the great power of God. The third person of the Trinity is not recognized and called upon for leadership, for cleansing and empowering. Would God that we learned how to appropriate the resources that are provided in the Gospel of Christ, in the revelation that God has given us. Receive the Holy Ghost and the church is an invincible power. Reject the Holy Ghost and we drift at once into great spiritual dearth. The adding on of machinery will only make us the more helpless. Without him the church becomes utterly powerless to perform her task in the world.

Heart Talks With Young Ministers of the Gospel.

IT has occurred to me that in writing to you on the subjects in which you are so deeply interested, it might be well to publish the letters to you in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. You will receive just as much benefit, and other young preachers may receive some suggestions that will be of value.

First of all, I congratulate you on your call to the ministry. I take it for granted that you have not thrust yourself into this sacred office without being fully persuaded in your own mind that the Lord Jesus has called you to this high and sacred position. It is a serious matter, indeed, to be the messenger of the Lord. It would certainly be a bold and impudent thing for any man to assume to be the Lord's messenger when he had not called him into that office, or given to him his message.

There is a class of men in the Church today who have worked themselves into position, and who would not hesitate to call young men into the ministry, fill their minds with their notions and theories, and send them forth with the propaganda of heresy. If you are not absolutely certain that you are called to preach, if the Spirit does not powerfully impress you that such is the will of God, by all means leave the pulpit.

In Methodism, through the years, it has been understood that our ministry is a God-called ministry. Our people sit in the pew and listen to the preacher with the distinct understanding that he has heard within his soul, like the Apostle Paul, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." And you may be sure that in the stress and conflict of the times to come it will be a great stay and comfort to your soul, when calling upon the Lord for guidance, for illumination, and for the message he would have you deliver, to be able to say to him in humble reverence, "Lord, I am in this office at Thy call and command, and as Thou hast placed me here I shall trust Thee for direction, and for that spiritual illumination which shall enable me to declare Thy truth in the demonstration and power of the Spirit."

It may occur to you that I am saying more on this subject than is necessary, but I am not, for the times are now upon us when certain modern would-be leaders are going to undertake to select, equip, and send forth among Methodists men whom God has not called, and who know nothing of the mighty power of the Holy Spirit in his dealings with human souls. Such men will be blind leaders of the blind, and both will fall into the pool-room and moving picture show, amidst the whooping and clapping of games of basket-ball in the sanctuary of God. These advocates of a new religion must have preachers to propagate their notions, and carry out their programs, and they will not hesitate to call them. I am writing you these letters with the understanding that you are called of God, that you are to be his messenger, that you will seek diligently to interpret the meaning of his word to the people; and that you will, with all possible earnestness, press home upon the minds of men the great truths of the Bible with an unhesitating faith that God's word is quick and powerful, and that it will not return unto him void.

Now with reference to your reading. Let me suggest that a preacher is liable to a strong temptation to appear scholarly, to be quite up with the times, to have read the latest books on philosophy, socialism, political economy, fiction, and a dozen phases in the tangle of modern thinking and movement. Many preachers instead of giving the Lord's message to the people, give them a sort of "hash" gathered out of such literature as suggested. My candid opinion is that you will do well to read the great old books. As you are a Methodist read the old Methodist books. Acquaint yourself with Richard Watson, Adam Clarke; by all means read Wesley's Journals. You can scarcely find anything more entertaining and interesting, and they will always leave in your mind a sediment of devotion and an increase of faith. Frequently, read Wesley's Sermons. Every young preacher should read Tysman's "Life of Wesley." Of course, you have read "Pilgrim's Progress." If not, get it at once. It is the finest allegory ever printed, and will furnish you many fine illustrations. By all means, keep on your shelf Charles Finney's Autobiography. It is a great spiritual tonic as well as a most interesting biography.

I am well aware that some of the "moderns" would smile at these suggestions, but nevertheless, these dear old books will make fine material in the foundation work of your Christian character, in your faith, your intellect, and your preaching. You should have a number of the best books on Homiletics. Dr. John A. Broadus' "Preparation and Delivery of Sermons" is excellent. Bishop Brooks', Bishop Simpson's, lectures before the Divinity students of Yale University make excellent reading. You should not fail to get these books.

Of course, you read the church papers and will see advertised, and keep up with the new books that are of real value. I simply suggest some of these older books because they make good foundation work beneath your literary structure. Do not waste your time

MEN AND MATTERS IN THE LAND OF SUNSHINE.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Japan is a land of sunshine. Its name, Nippon, means the "Origin of the Sun."

The total area of the Japanese Empire is 260,000 square miles with a population of 83,000,000 (of whom 63,000,000 reside in Japan proper, the extent of which is 147,000 square miles). Her nearest neighbors, China, Russia and the United States of America, presenting an area of 4,279,000 square miles and a population of 400,000,000, while the corresponding figures for Russia and the United States of America are 8,186,000 square miles and 140,000,000 people, and 3,738,000 square miles and 118,000,000 people, respectively.

Japan Proper is a mountainous and volcanic country; thus the area of arable land is greatly restricted. Its rivers are short and generally rapid. Only three in Japan Proper are 200 miles in length, and are mere streams by comparison with the mighty Yangtse-kiang in China which flows for more than 3,000 miles and is navigable for steamships for a distance of 1,400 miles.

The islands are subject to frequent earthquakes and typhoons and floods are of annual occurrence. Japan is a land of earthquakes. In the 1923 Tokyo earthquake about 100,000 people were destroyed. Since then Tokyo has been almost completely rebuilt.

Earthquakes are always to be feared. In the newspaper the other morning I read the following:

"Kumamoto, Jan. 12.—People in the city are much alarmed at the frequent earthquakes and the activity of Volcano Aso which is regarded as the most violent eruption during the last 25 years. Today the city was severely rocked again for a whole minute, the nature of the earthquake being horizontal. It was the 60th quake since the beginning of the year. The citizens feel as though they are sleeping on top of a quake."

America and Japan have had a unique connection because it was American strategy and skill joined to a strict integrity that woke Japan to the wonders of the Western world and the advantages of Western civilization.

Daniel Webster was Secretary of State and Admiral Perry went about his Japanese enterprise with deliberation and great care. There was nothing sudden about it. Someone writing about it says:

"Perry studied the situation carefully and his recommendations had great weight in the drawing up of a new treaty with Canada leading to a settlement.

"Perry must have had a vision of the vast possibilities growing out of the opening of Japan to the outside world, for it was owing to his persistence that the enterprise was kept alive through the regimes of three Secretaries of the Navy. When permission was finally given him to embark on the venture, he entered into it with characteristic thoroughness. He studied all available books on Japan and personally interviewed whalers of the New England coast who had worked in Japanese waters. One thing he found out was that seventeen million dollars of American capital was invested in the whaling industry off the coasts of Japan and China. The fact that many shipwrecked Japanese sailors were picked up on the American coast and cared for and that shipwrecked American sailors drifted to the shores of Japan gave Perry one of the pretexts for the expedition.

"It was desirable that a treaty be made providing for the mutual care of these men. As another opening wedge, he loaded his ships with seeds and mechanical appliances for farming that would open the eyes of the Orientals to the achievements of the Western World.

"Daniel Webster, then Secretary of State, was too busy at the time of Perry's departure to write out his instructions. Perry was told to write them himself, and Webster made practically no change in them. The Secretary of the Navy was particularly liberal in writing his instructions, saying:

"In prosecuting the objects of your mission to Japan you are authorized to employ dispatch vessels, interpreters, Kroomen, or natives, and all other means which you may deem necessary to enable you to bring about the desired results."

"London soon got wind of the proposed venture. The Times remarked sarcastically in a leading article, 'It was to be doubted whether the Emperor of Japan would receive Commodore Perry with most indignation or contempt.'

"How Perry succeeded in his mission is well known to every schoolboy. He construed his instructions strictly and brought to bear in his negotiations his wide reading, his fine knowledge of the Japanese people, and his insight into human nature. The Japanese, being an impressive people, were greatly influenced by the show of power made by his men-of-war, anchored in the harbor of Yeddo. Knowing them to be lovers of mystery, Perry secluded himself in his cabin, showing his face only on the rarest occasions, when meetings had been arranged with the shogun or with the Emperor.

"Of Perry's diplomatic stroke, Griffis, in his biography of the Commodore, very prettily estimates his achievement in these words:

"Perry went forth like the fair prince to open the barred castle of Thornrose. It was with a kiss, and not with a blow, that the sleeping maiden of the eastern sea was won. Perry could strike from the shoulder, but he chose rather to out-Chesterfield these oriental Chesterfields in the minuteness, severity and suavity of his etiquette. With time, with patience, with firmness, with delicacy equal to that demanded in a first-class flirtation, with sublime attention to details, with a terrible earnestness that brooked no trifle, Perry succeeded. Thornrose awoke, her warders drew the bolts and opened the doors."

It was a fortunate thing for Japan that it had a live Emperor at this time, and after his dealings with Perry and the opening of his ports to America and other nations he proceeded to broaden his government along all lines. In 1868 the feudal system was abolished and the Great Emperor Meiji took and proclaimed the Oath of the Five Articles:

1. Public councils shall be organized and all Governmental Affairs shall be decided by public officials.

2. All civil and military officials shall with one heart devote themselves to the advancement of the national welfare.

3. All antiquated customs of former times shall be abolished, and justice and equity, as they are universally recognized, shall be followed as a basis of action.

4. All civil and military officials, as well as common people, shall be allowed to realize their aspirations.

5. Knowledge shall be sought throughout the world, and thus the Empire shall be placed upon more solid foundations.

We have preached and held revivals in Japan both in September of 1928 and again in January of 1929. I am writing this article in Kobe where we have just held two series of meetings. The Japanese go into religion with all their souls when it takes hold of them under holiness preaching. They sing with great spirit and pray with power and in the after meeting they make a rush to the altar, and they pray and work with the seekers in a tireless manner. I have been told of some Japanese pastors of the holiness work who are powerful in their prayer life, one of them rising every morning at 4:00 A. M. to spend hours with God. It was our joy to see many souls definitely sanctified and sinners and backsliders saved in these Japanese revivals.

SOME NOTABLE MEN OF JAPANESE CHRISTIANITY.

I met in Tokyo Paul M. Kanamouri. He is known in America for his book called "The Three Hour Sermon," on God, Sin and Salvation. Mr. Kanamouri was a Congregationalist for many years, but is now with the Japanese Holiness Church with whom he has thrown in his lot and is dedicating his life to evangelism on pure holiness lines. He has had a unique career. He was one of the first Professors in Neesimas, first Christian College in Japan. He was Theological Professor there when through reading German Theology he became Japan's first higher critic. He told me this himself, for twenty years he continued in propagating higher criticism in Japan, but let this be said to his credit, as soon as he lost his faith he resigned from his professorship and membership in the church. He was more honest than many such higher critics in Methodism today who eat the church's bread and teach and preach in her institutions while at the same time destroying the faith.

For twenty years Kanamouri continued in his unbelief till his wife died. In the dismay and darkness he cried to God and through the Salvation Army he eventually got back his faith and now for fifteen years he has traveled through the world, lecturing against Higher Criticism and preaching the gospel. He felt he could not continue in his own church because of its modernism and has joined Bishop Nakada's Japanese Holiness Church where he is being wonderfully used in evangelistic work. His cry is "A Million Souls for Christ."

NEESIMA THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATOR.

Neesima was born at Yeds, 1843. He has been known to Americans because of his great work as one of the pioneers of Christianity in Japan and the founder of the first distinctly Christian College in Japan. Hon. Alpheus Hardy, of Maine, became his friend when he landed in the U. S. A. as a poor boy. Strange that from the first Hardy recognized Neesima as a young man of promise and power and said to him, "God has sent you to be a Savior to your people." Mr. Hardy was one of those men who did not enjoy much of an education himself, but he resolved that he would make money for God and educate others. He said in his address at Amherst College in 1893, "I have felt myself to be as much appointed and ordained to make money for God as if I had been permitted to carry out my own plan and had been ordained to preach the gospel." It was Mr. Hardy who made possible the education of Neesima and who afterwards helped him in founding Doshisha University in Japan.

Speaking of his conversion he said, "I date my conversion some time after my arrival in this country; but I am seeking God and his light from the hour I read his Word. With my new experience was born a desire to preach the Gospel among my people. The motive in offering myself to this work is my sympathy with the need of my country and love for perishing souls; and above all, the love of Christ has constrained me to this work."

He held true to the fundamentals of Christianity. He said, "In my view the leading doctrines of Scriptures are: the existence of one true God, inspiration of the Scriptures, the Trinity, the Decrees, the Freedom of the will, the Total Depravity of Man, the Atonement, Regeneration, Justification by Faith, the Resurrection of the dead, the Final Judgment."

Neesima wrote much. Permit a few quotations from his pen:

"The divine fire. Many Christian ministers may have highest culture and may write their sermons with much skill and thought—beautifully executed work like a Grecian marble statue. Alas, there is no heat in it. Heat must be caused by fire; if there is no fire in the sermon to heat the hearer's heart it is a serious affair. This fire can only be got by daily seeking. Those who depend very much upon their talent and knowledge are very apt to forget to seek this much needed divine fire for themselves as well as their hearers.

"To preachers: Suppose the future Judge of the moral world comes down now and summons each of us to appear before him, and uncovers all our past deeds before the congregation, how many of you will dare to step forward and get all your deeds eternally penned upon the walls of the sacred edifice, to be read by each of you?"

Since Neesima went to Heaven there has been an awful departure from the faith on the part of the Japanese schools and colleges.

A TRAGEDY OF HIGHER CRITICISM.

A Buddhist priest, graduate of one of the universities, came to an evangelist in Japan to talk about his soul. He was an earnest seeker after truth and spent many hours with the evangelist. They read the Bible and prayed together and after many interviews on a Thursday afternoon he found Christ and peace to his soul. Buddhism had disappointed him, he found no peace to his soul and at one time decided to commit suicide. Now that he had found peace in Christ he was very happy and did not hesitate to testify openly what Christ had done for his soul. His father was a Buddhist priest and when he heard what his son had done he hastened to him, talked with him and gave him a beating. The son had nothing to do now but put aside his priestly robes which he did and walked out to face the world alone with only some cheap clothes on him covered with a kimona, he went to a Christian home where he was kindly received. One day he heard his father's voice downstairs; he went down to find his enraged father demanding of him what he had taken from the Temple. All that he had taken were the common clothes upon his back—these the father demanded. He went up to his room and stripped himself, tied all his clothes into a bundle, left it outside the door and called on his friend to hand it to his father. Some of the Christian men gathered up some clothes for him and with these he went to the meetings where his testimony and exhortations were powerful to the unsaved.

Time went on—he was being used greatly, when a clergyman was impressed so much with the man that he urged him to prepare for the ministry and go to their Theological School for training. This he decided to do and he entered a Theological Seminary. This is a modernistic school and there he lost his faith in the study of modernistic theology. He had his faith shaken in the Virgin Birth and the Resurrection and with these gone he lost his joy and confidence and testimony. He left the Seminary, got a position teaching school and latterly went into journalism, and today is an editor of a magazine in Japan.

No doubt God intended that this man should have been a flaming evangelist in Japan and if he had trained in a school like the O. M. S. Bible School in Tokyo, or in the J. E. B. Bible School in Kobe, he would have developed into a real soul winning preacher, but alas! Modernism makes wrecks of many converts and destroys preachers and evangelists.

The Prayer of The Psalmist.

REV. B. F. DURLING.

HE prayer to which we invite attention, is that one so full of pathos and of a penitent spirit, "Create in me a clean heart O God, and renew a right spirit within me." He was evidently under conviction following a dark defeat in the Christian warfare. He probably felt the disadvantage of fighting the battle against sin, with some of the enemy lurking in his heart-fortress. Then came that prayer, "Create in me a clean heart."

If that was a fitting prayer for the Psalmist in his day, is it not pre-eminently one that is proper to us in our time of increased light?

That he prayed for a possible experience is made manifest by the words of Jesus, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." That it is important and should be desired greatly, is evident from the words of Jesus saying that such are blessed, and that to them would be given the vision of God. Its importance is emphasized greatly by the words, "Follow peace with all men and holiness without which no man shall see the Lord." In this passage the holiness referred to is undoubtedly that of the "Pure heart."

The benefits spoken of in these passages are those of blessedness and the vision of God. All that is implied in these expressions it is impossible to conceive. What manifold suggestions of future felicity are here comprehended. Even now we may enjoy the beginnings of that glorious life.

Perhaps some one is ready to ask, "In what sense may we see God?" In relation to this it may be replied, that there are in man spiritual senses. Before conversion, these are dead in trespasses and sin. When touched by divine grace they are brought to life. The eyes of the prophet's servant were opened so that he beheld the mountain filled with chariots and horsemen. These could be seen only by spiritual eyes. Again it is said, "Oh, taste and see that the Lord is good." In another place reference is made to the prophets as hearing "the still, small voice." These things were brought into consciousness certainly, by a deeper way than through the physical senses.

Thus the pure in heart in a spiritual sense, may behold God, revealed in the person of Jesus Christ. The more perfect fulfillment of the promise no doubt, is reserved for the future. Yet even here, one may walk in the very early dawn of that eternal day of the perfect vision.

Again, we may reply, the pure in heart may enter into this spiritual vision of God by prayerfully studying his word; by communion with him; by faith looking up into his face, and talking with him. Those two disciples meeting Jesus upon the way soon after his resurrection, at first did not recognize him, as their eyes were closed to the "Heavenly vision." As their association continued however, their eyes were opened to recognize the Master.

Thus we in our communion with him, may realize the opening of our eyes to behold the beauty of the Lord being spiritually revealed in the person of Jesus. How beautifully is this thought revealed in the words "Beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, we are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord."

It may be said also that the Lord may be seen in his works. Amid the fields of nature upon every side, the divinely cleared eye may behold God. From the flower blossoming in the crannied wall, up to the majestic movement of the constellations, he sees God. The lilies of the field; the forest; the surge of ocean; the towering mountain; the Pleiades with sweet influence, all to the pure heart speak of God. Yet, as it has been said, it requires a pure heart to behold the beauties of Dante's "Paradiso," so also it is required to behold God in his works. It may be said truly, that the more of the divine there is within, the more of God is seen without.

Again it may be asked, in what sense are the pure or cleansed in heart blessed? They are so in the first place, by having hearts "from sin set free."

As the gold or diamond becomes pure by being separated from base alloy, so the heart is made pure by being purged from sin. From such a heart shines forth the image of God.

It is a transformed heart. A marvelous change has been wrought therein by the Holy Spirit. Through a fullness of consecration and a faith which claimed his coming, that Spirit, the promised Comforter, has taken possession of the heart. He brings the transforming love in a satisfying fullness. This removes the old love for and delight in sin. The new-found love permeates and controls the life. The expulsive power of this affection causes the taste and hunger for the evil things of the old life to wither and fall away. Thus, in the spring-time the late-clinging leaves are pushed away by the expanding life of the advancing season. Soon the young, swelling leaves clothe the forest with beauty. So in the spiritual life, the blight of sin having been removed, the fair graces of the spirit appear adorning the character.

Another great benefit comprehended in this blessedness, is the sweet fellowship with God. It is deeper and more sensibly abiding than has been known before. The spiritual life has risen higher into him our living Head. There is greater assurance that one is being kept by the power of God. Hence it is a life of greater spiritual safety.

Again, it abounds with greater revelations of divine love and blessing. As from a higher outlook amid the "heavenly places" in Christ, one may look with clearer vision into the fields beyond. Realizing the gentle breezes as from a higher realm, his soul is regaled. Indeed in that higher sky of a deep, heartfelt consecration and of a higher-grasping faith, as never before, he becomes conscious of God. Although severe trials may come; sickness may prostrate; cherished friends may go home, yet he knows that "All things work together for good to them that love God." He is walking homeward with the divine Companion. Indeed he is assured that his life is hid with Christ in the Father-heart of God. In trial or in the most intense activity in the promotion of the kingdom, he rests in the great calm of God.

The close of the Psalmist's prayer, "And renew a right spirit within me," can be answered only as the promised Comforter abides within the heart. The full meaning of this promise of Christ scarcely can be grasped. The idea of God dwelling within man, or may we say, becoming incarnate within his being, is almost overwhelming. But is it not the teaching of Christ? Yea, his promise? Then it is an experience not only possible, and one in which we certainly believe man should be ever advancing, growing in his consciousness of God. Thus will he see God and dwell in the eternal blessedness.

The Vulture's Claw.

EMMAUS TRAVELLERS DISCOVER CHRIST.

Rev. W. B. Turner.

"And they drew nigh to the village whither they went: and he made as though he would go further."

"But they constrained him, saying, abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them."

"And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave to them, and their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight."—Luke 24:28-31.

OUR opinion of Jesus fixes his value to us. All fellowship is mutual. Fellowship with Jesus is no exception to this rule. Our behavior toward him determines his behavior toward us.

Public opinion can drive Christ out of a community, or out of a nation. Public opinion shut up Nazareth against Christ, and drove him out of Gadara. The people in these communities needed him and he was yearning to help them, but public sentiment eliminated him.

Our own decision concerning Christ is a referendum on salvation which we are allowed to exercise. Inquiry after divine things engage the attention of Christ. Christ is not a recluse who must be slyly tracked into the mountains by those who would discover him. He presses his way into the company of those who earnestly seek information on the major interests of the soul, and his arrival is the entrance of light.

Christ did not join with those travelers because he was overcome by pity for his perplexed disciples. He was bidding for their time, their confidence and their eyes. He wanted them to see him and desire him.

He joined them because he overheard their conversation. Our meditations cannot be muffled to keep them from crossing the vast spaces between earth and heaven.

It was dangerous for these terror-stricken men to divide their grief with a stranger. He might be a detective trailing them to stamp out all supporters of the insurrection against Cæsar, of which Christ was accused of being the leader. But without expecting the stranger to turn out to be one whom they knew and loved, they did not fail to entertain him, and thereby entertained more than an angel.

They were sadly reflecting the stories, and were dismayed by the rumors surrounding the resurrection of the Hero of Calvary. In their minds had accumulated the conviction that Christ was alive again. The matter was more than they could explain, but they had traced the strange sayings to a reliable source.

But the rumors did not encourage them much, for they did not fully believe what they heard. But with prophecy, the stranger built a bridge between life and death and spanned the chasm of Calvary. They eagerly welcomed the revelations which fell like sunshine upon their bewildered minds. The intelligence of the Stranger bore such a likeness to their Master, who had been crucified, that they listened attentively while he traced the line of Messianic prophecy through the Scriptures.

Their grief had been caused, not by Calvary, but by their shortsightedness. His vision set aglow a wonderful hope in their hearts. The assurance that all would be well, stimulated their confidence. It was the processes of salvation which issued in the death of the Savior. All their dejected spirits and surrendered anticipation grew out of their failure to understand the meaning of Calvary. But the unusual teaching of their companion in travel was convincing to them. The success of redemption demanded a verdict from Christ's enemies; the trial of Jesus could not be endless.

The supreme authority of God could not be revealed until the enemies of Christ had done their worst. The whole fabric of opposition to God must be woven and bound about his omnipotence before it could be torn to shreds by his power. The shroud and the head bandage left in the tomb was magnificent evidence of the impotence of Christ's enemies. They could bind him, but they could not restrain him. Christ must be imprisoned by his enemies before God could show his power to emancipate him.

God does not need helmets and shields and spears to protect his throne. The world has overestimated the worth of war. Christ's program is too definite and too earnest to be hampered and befuddled by the slow moving judgments of men. His opinions are swift and final and free from the errors of mortal wisdom.

It takes more than a dog fight or a boxing match to unveil the power of God. An oil boom will not redeem a town. A 25c stogie costs as much as a quarter in the collection plate, but it does not make light enough for the people to find God. Men who would rise to where they can see God need more than stilts. God alone institutes the powers that reveal him.

Christ did not borrow from the world his power to live, therefore his movements were untrammelled by his enemies. While Jerusalem's whole underworld of kidnappers, murderers and bootleggers were celebrating the victory of the Friday before, Christ was out showing himself to his friends.

Jesus was back to continue his mission. The light was shining, but the darkness failed to comprehend it. People must be passionately committed to the Messiahship of Christ before the silence of Divinity will be broken and the rich, satisfying teachings of the Holy Spirit discover God to us.

After Jesus was invited into the home life of those Emmaus travelers, he quietly pulled back the curtain and showed them the hearth-side of heaven. Christ begins to live in us when he begins to create our emotions. When we can let him go with no sense of loss, his presence does not make us happy. We can have him only when his presence does not mar our delight. If the loss of Christ would strip the world of its beauty for us, and life of its hope, then the boldest request we can make of him for his companionship will be amazingly rewarded.

Christ is not cold and impersonal like great corporations, nor is he merely a congenial atmosphere; he is a gentle, sympathetic lover who misses us as much as we miss him when separated. His nature is as sensitive as ours, and he would endure any exposure, make any sacrifice to win our love. He was willing even to go to the cross to turn our love back to him again.

He stood dumbfounded as a sheep is dumb before her shearers, while those he loved, hated him. He could not say another word. All he ever could say about it was, "Father, forgive them." He exceeds all others in his ability to forget injury and love the wrongdoer. "God commendeth his love toward us, in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." If there is anything obscure about salvation, it is not the love of God.

But in his effort to win us he is not discourteous. He does not intrude beyond the threshold. He will not come in unless we invite him. Those Emmaus travelers were attracted to Christ three years before, when they knew little about him, and now they are attracted to him while they think he is a stranger. There was such a blending of their interests and natures that they desired to perpetuate their fellowship with the divine Sojourner whose presence made life seem to them, less desolate.

He was as intent on pointing them further along the path of truth as they were to be instructed; but they had not only come to the end of the road, but also to the end of prophecy, and he could say nothing more to them until they would give him opportunity to reveal himself. They must do something for him before he can do more for them. They heard such a clear setting forth of the meaning of prophecy that their hearts burned as they walked and talked, but Christ himself, escaped their notice until they put a portion of their earthly possessions into his hands that he might bless it all. "And as he brake the bread and blessed it and gave to them, their eyes were opened."

Christ's blessing blends riches and righteousness in such a natural way that Heaven is reflected in the material substance we possess, like the whole sky above is reflected in a little pool at our feet. There is no beauty in a pool or a lake if you shut the sky out; and a pint of water can reflect as much of the sky as the ocean can.

We sin as much to shut our poverty away from God as to shut our wealth away from him. What is property worth anyway except to help us to discover God? God has never surrendered his title to this world, and we are shutting ourselves away from a fine view of him while we fail to give practical recognition to that fact. As long as we treat him as though his claim on our possessions were outrageous, and prefer that he would not fall in with us, he will go on and allow us to get only earthly dividends from our investments of time and strength and possessions.

If we want to play square with ourselves, we will do more than struggle for an earthly existence. We will trust God as far with our wealth as with our souls or our health. God has not invaded this world to drive the natives into the sea, but to present to us his Word and to deal with us as sons, and to bestow the Father's blessing. Motives are the soul's lenses through which we focus our vision. By a swing of the head the whole sky will rush in to paint its beauty upon the retina of our physical eye, likewise when we turn our motives toward God, he will fill our souls with his beauty.

Despite the madness raging in Jerusalem, and the disaster and confusion caused by hate, the victorious God was revealing himself through the material world which seemed confederate against him. He proclaimed his Messiahship by the manner in which he handled the bread which they were to eat.

The widow of Sidon found God in an empty barrel of meal, not in a full one. But she did not find him until she gave the one handful she had. Job found a fuller revelation of God through the loss and recovery of his wealth and health than he had dreamed of. We will not find God by withholding our possessions. The men of Emmaus found Christ by dividing their evening meal with him. But the magnificent glory which came so near them would have passed by unrecognized if they had not enlarged their hearts toward him.

How hopeless is a house without Christ! How remote is God so long as we banish him from a practical share in our possessions. How blind shall be the eyes of those who refuse Christ the privilege of taking their property into his own hands. But when we ask him into our house, and invite him to share our living, he will, by some significant gesture, make himself seem so natural to us. Unless we invite him to share what we have, he will let us go on and use it without his blessing. We then have only food with which to fill our stomachs. If we invite him in to have a share of our living, we will still have all the food we need and will also have our souls flooded with truth and glory and God.

Christ is revealed through the Bible. Until people know something of the Bible and follow its instructions they do not find Christ. It is the change which is produced in us through hearing and believing the Scripture that enables us to see Christ. Christ did not change while he sat at meat with the men of Emmaus; the change was in them.

Then he vanished out of their sight again. How tenderly Christ teaches his church to live by faith. A proper appreciation of any good we possess arises from our sense of need. That appreciation is sometimes difficult while our desires are satisfied. It is often said, "We do not appreciate good health until we do not have it."

The absence of Christ's physical body creates a keen sense of our need of him, and faith supplies that need. So we always have a full sense of our need and at the same time the full satisfaction of his presence and blessing. Though we cannot see him we know he is alive, and we go on with the same assurance as though we did see him. In that way divine power is transported into our lives so we can do our work by a divine force within us, instead of being urged by a divine presence outside of us.

When the men hastily returned to Jerusalem to tell their companions of their experience, they went by faith. They were acting by reason of a power that was their own. Christ was in them, not outside of them. When he vanished from their sight, he entered their souls; he did not depart from them.

Our spiritual visions are spiritual experiences sighted on their way into our makeup. The vision may then disappear, but the experience remains. It has become a part of our nature. Our most glorious spiritual visions may never be repeated, for they have such a powerful transforming effect upon us

JUST A SUGGESTION!

Many are wanting a safe place to invest their money where moth and rust cannot corrupt, and where it will prove a blessing to others.

The Students' Loan Fund of Asbury Theological Seminary which provides for the education of young men preparing for the ministry, would be a safe and wise investment.

There are those who want their sacred tithe to bear fruit in the salvation of souls.

Why not help to educate Spirit-filled young men who, perhaps, after you shall have quit the walks of life, will be seeking God's lost sheep on the mountains of sin.

Could you do better with the money God has entrusted with you than to assist in preparing young men to preach his uttermost salvation to the world he came to redeem?

Had you ever thought that the only way to "lay up treasures in heaven" is to invest your treasures here in immortal souls?

Think on these things!

that we are made into their likeness, and we cannot see that which has become a part of us, as we cannot see our own life.

We do not believe that our spiritual vision will cease, but we should not be disappointed if any such vision is not repeated. Travelers do not cease seeing things, but as their journey takes them on they have new visions. These two men were journeying when they saw Christ on the Emmaus road. They journeyed on to Jerusalem where they saw him again, but this time their vision of him was a new vision: they saw his wounds.

In subsequent visions they heard the great commission, and saw him ascend, and were told of his coming again. Christ was the central figure in each of the incidents in which he revealed himself to his friends. But he can reveal himself to his friends, only so far as their inner feelings are arranged to admire and welcome him. At first they saw Jesus. Later they saw their duty. Then they saw him ascend. Next Stephen saw Christ standing on the right hand of God, and the heavens opening to receive him that he might ever be with the Lord.

THE BIBLE AND SCIENCE.

W. M. YOUNG, D. D.

WHEN any attempt is made to reconcile the Bible and Science, two sciences are involved, that of Biblical exposition—hermeneutics, and that of the physical world—both human sciences—both incomplete—both growing. Of the two, Biblical interpretation is far more mature, and has advanced with far slower steps as the ages have rolled on.

The riches of the word of God are not exhausted. There are passages which require for their complete comprehension a knowledge of external nature which is not yet possessed and may not be ours for long years to come. Our knowledge of physical science is very immature; we are not yet well acquainted with nature. The unknown seems vaster to us than it did to our fathers. As we painfully climb the steep, our horizons widen. Science advances largely by the process of "trial and error." The next age will use the knowledge of this age, and then largely abandon it. Our theories help us forward and are forgotten.

APPARENT CONTRADICTIONS.

Apparent contradictions between the Bible and Science should not alarm us. Such contradictions occur in other sciences. Geology needs 500,000,000 years and physics can grant only a tenth of that time. Apparent harmonies between the Scriptures and science need not elate us; the reconciliations of a former generation seem puerile to us now.

The Bible becomes richer in meaning as our knowledge of the world grows. In its inner and higher life the Bible has to do with that which is independent of time and space. The rapid change of views with regard to science may well make us humble and modest in our assertions regarding it. We are willing to see our present views of science succeeded by better knowledge.

There are two kinds of statements with regard to science in the Bible. One kind is positive and fundamental, and must be accepted if we are to believe the Bible to be the word of God. The other is illustrative, as when writers used the science of the times in which they lived and the current philosophy. There are occasional sentences where reference to nature is not apparent—or if suggested now, was not understood until perhaps the progress of science revealed in them the meaning not seized by those who first heard them, nor by any reader in a long line of centuries since, and are seen only by us in these days of advanced knowledge. The prophets who wrote these passages may not have fully understood them themselves. Divine inspiration is the only explanation of such things.

LIGHT BEFORE THE SUN.

The first chapter of Genesis contains a statement that has always seemed strange. God is said to have created light before he created the sun. This statement was out of accord with what was known of nature for a long time. The candle precedes the light of the candle. Now we know that light is energy, and the ether of space is not energy, but merely its vehicle. Modern science teaches us that light does not come from the sun as its source. The energy we receive from his rays did not originate with the great orb. The sun and the stars, like artificial lights on earth, merely give us that which they did not create. The power contained in light was in the universe before the sun began to shine.

Light is the highest and subtlest form of the great treasure of potential energy when it passes into activity. The wisdom of the statement is four thousand years in advance of the times when it could be fully understood scientifically by the advance of the knowledge of nature.

GEOLOGY AND THE BIBLE.

The first chapter of Genesis tells us of the origin of matter and energy and also of the beginning and development of life on the earth. The interpretation of this was literal up to recent times. Emanuel Swedenborg held that the early chapters of Genesis were merely allegorical. The geological discoveries of the nineteenth century were hailed as wholly inconsistent with the Biblical account. These accounts in Genesis are so different from popular thought even in later times, and certainly in the days in which these documents were written, and so like the teachings of present day science, that it is inconceivable that they could have been written by unaided human wisdom. The only way it can be explained is by admitting divine inspiration.

THE ORDER OF CREATION.

The sacred writer affirms that the first life on the earth was vegetable, the next marine, the next birds, then beasts, and closing with man. This corresponds with what we now know of geology. Geologists affirm that the earliest stratified rocks contain no animal fossils, but the graphite, iron oxides and limestone they contain are evidence of plant life.

Palaeozoic rocks contain evidence of marine life, the simplest forms coming first; later appear amphibious forms, and then some terrestrial reptiles; then come forms of birds intended for flight; then four-footed beasts appear, and last of all comes man. Thus the writer of the book of Genesis shows a correspondence not with the science of his time, but of that of more than three thousand years later.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER X.

HUNTING GOLD.

AS the months had passed, Huston had developed in a remarkable way. He had changed from the tender, rather overgrown youth, to a strong, stalwart man. He had become a leader of men. The broad plains of the west, the strong, aggressive spirits with whom he had associated, his position as an officer, his close touch with attorneys and judges in the courts, and men of place and power, had put the strength of iron into him. He had come to look men squarely in the eye and had developed a manly courtesy that would pass him in good society everywhere. He was easy and unafraid among his fellowmen. He had become one of the finest types of the great, wide west in which he had lived and moved.

Meanwhile, a constant correspondence had gone on between Huston and Miss Ida Benson. She had graduated from the Eastern school; her lawyer lover, a brother-in-law of her brother, had come home with her after her graduation and had visited her frequently, and done everything within his power to win the beautiful girl for his wife. He had failed. She had told him frankly that for more than a year a constant correspondence had gone on between her and John Henry Huston; that they were lovers, and that no amount of wealth could draw her heart away from her splendid cowboy on the plains.

She had secured a position as school-teacher in Fort Worth, and there was a sacred promise between Huston and herself that when he became financially able to care for a wife, they would be married. He was yet quite young, buoyant with hope, and happy beyond all words in the outcome of his disappointment in the village back East, and his flight to the West for the healing of a love-broken heart.

Throughout the acquaintance of Huston with Moreno and Tom Goodson, Moreno had been dinging into their ears the story of a gold mine on his father's large goat ranch down in Mexico. Now that the boys had suffered loss through the bankruptcy of their cattleman, they took a notion to investigate the gold mine in Mexico. Gathering some equipment and outfitting themselves with good strong horses, a couple of pack mules, an abundance of ammunition for game and protection from the Indians, they started on the long journey down to, and over, the border of Mexico.

The father of Moreno did not live so far from the border, and they were able to reach his ranch in about five days' ride, after crossing the border, where they received a most hearty welcome and were entertained with a degree of comfort. The old Mexican gentleman showed them the gulch, washed out by a mountain torrent after heavy rains, where he had found gold nuggets; he also showed specimens which had been examined by those who knew gold, and had been proven to be the real metal.

After heavy rains there was a very considerable torrent that came off the mountainside and brought down sand and gravel, and the supposed gold which lodged in a basin of tough clay and stones which had washed out during the centuries. There was quite a little stream from some springs up in the hills which flowed through the gulch constantly and furnished water for the families and animals on the ranch.

The basin in which the debris had accumulated was some five or six feet deep, eight to ten feet wide, and twelve or fifteen feet long. It would be necessary to dig a trench and put in some wood work to convey the water around this basin and remove the sand and accumulation in order to find the gold which was supposed, because of its weight, to rest at the bottom. This called for considerable labor. After looking the situation over carefully, our three gold hunters were convinced that the indications were sufficient to justify the undertaking.

They built a camp, secured some tools and provisions from a Mexican village some forty miles away, and drew up a contract specifying that any gold secured should be divided equally among the old gentleman on whose ranch the mine was located, and the three laborers.

We shall not undertake to follow in detail the arduous labor for some months which it required to remove the sand. They found sufficient gold to encourage them which increased as they approached the bottom of the gulch, and finally resulted in a considerable quantity of yellow wealth; not enough to make any one of them rich, even if one of the party had possessed it all, but amounting to several thousand dollars for each one of the four engaged in the enterprise.

Soon after they commenced the work they realized that they were watched by certain worthless fellows who lounged about the community, and often visited the mine and tried to find out if they were securing any gold. They did everything possible to keep secret their success, but these loungers were convinced that they had secured considerable riches.

They discovered a cave in the mountain-side, which they had been able to keep secret from those who were spying on them, and in this they had carefully hidden their wealth, had also concealed some rations and horse feed for use, if it became necessary for them to flee from their place of labor.

There were roving bands of Mexican bandits and robbers in the neighborhood of the little town from which they secured their supplies. Their fear was that the loungers who were spying on them, would communicate with these robbers; and their fears were fully justified.

Just when they were about to finish up their work, and while Tom Goodson and Moreno were out of the camp hunting game for fresh meat, a band of some twenty or thirty robbers galloped up to the camp, arrested Huston and the old Mexican, with one or two boys who were giving some assistance in the work, and demanded their treasure. Fortunately, both Huston and the old Mexican had on their persons in rawhide sacks, a small amount of gold nuggets. This seemed to satisfy the robbers that they had secured the entire amount of gold gotten out of the gulch. They ransacked the premises of whatever they could secure; fortunately, the horses and mules of the miners were beyond a hill in a little pasture and were not seen. They released the old Mexican and boys, but took Huston with them and hurried on their way, for it was well known to them that a large body of Mexican troops had been sent out to comb that region, round up and destroy the bandits.

Directly after they left the camp Goodson and Moreno came in from their hunt, secured their horses and arms, and followed the bandits, hoping to render some aid to Huston. Frequently from high elevations they came in sight of the bandits, but kept themselves from being detected. Late in the afternoon, in fact just before sundown, they heard firing and, galloping to an elevation, they saw where the bandits had ridden into an ambush of government troops, and were engaged in a brisk battle, the bandits firing as they fell back. Our lads concealed themselves as the retreating bandits dashed by, followed in hot pursuit by the government troops.

Huston, who was tied on a little mustang, was captured and taken back to the camp of the troops. Several bandits were killed, others captured and shot down without ceremony; three or four of the troopers also were killed and, for the time, left lying where they fell. One trooper was shot not far from where Goodson and Moreno were concealed. Moreno, unobserved, slipped out and secured the dead soldier's body and brought it into their hiding place where he stripped it, in order that he might have the uniform, if it would be available in any way, in the rescue of Huston.

The battle being over, the Mexican troops went into camp and Huston was at once brought before the Colonel and a group of officers for examination. He explained, through an interpreter, that he was in no way associated with the bandits; but he had no papers of identification or of legal admission into Mexico; his explanation that he was there on a mining expedition, without permission from the government, only made matters worse. Without hesitation he was sentenced to be shot the next morning at sunrise, and was bound and placed under guard in a little tent at the foot of a hill some two hundred yards out from the camp. An officer was sent to his tent who offered to take a message for his people, or to convey anything he might have on his person, to his relatives.

More than Perfect.

Do not those who go on to perfection arrive at a point where they stop? for how can one be more than perfect? No! Do you remember that Paul speaks of perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord? Or, I do not know why we may not take a simile we have before used, and ask, Must not a child stop reading, because he has learned to read perfectly? whereas his having learned to read perfectly only introduces him to higher and yet higher branches of study, till his mighty soul goes on grasping knowledge while life endures. Or, to use another figure, Holiness is a way cast up for the ransomed of the Lord to walk in. If you were in the way to a given place, would it be necessary for you to stop because you were in the way? The fact is, your only aim in getting into the way was that you might progress in the way until you reached the destined point. Well, heaven is our home. In this way our goings must be established, if we would reach our heavenly destination. "The redeemed of the Lord shall walk there," and thus reach their destined home.

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00. GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

AFRICA IN THE MAKING.

Up to the beginning of the World War, Central Africa was still, comparatively speaking, an unexplored territory. Our Southern Methodist Church, through our much beloved Bishop Lambuth, opened work in the very center of that continent in February of 1914. The good Bishop started in with three missionaries and their wives to help him begin the work. They had to start in by clearing the grounds and staking off places for their mud houses. They were fortunate in having several willing natives to help them. The willing natives are not to be found, in large numbers today since so many European whites have come and are furnishing employment for a great many of them.

In Wembo Nyama's land was planted the leaven, which we trust by the grace of God will prove effective in leavening the whole of that great Otetela tribe. The missionary has to organize a mysterious language and speak in that language, create a moral sentiment and then appeal to it. We are to preach the gospel to all mankind. The command is to "Preach the Gospel to every creature." The great commission is not to preach civilization, but the "good news." It has ever been so, that civilization with its mingled good and evil, follows in the trail of the missionary.

A code of laws prescribing the way of life is not gospel. A perfect life and example is not gospel, but the gospel expresses God's attitude toward man; in other words, the Good News is this, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." This shows that behind all events, and governing the world, changing it from a prison house into a school of faith and hope, there is a God of love. Cried a heathen woman in Africa, at her first hearing of the "good news," "Oh Mr. Lapsley, if we had known that God loved us we would have been singing to him." The peoples of Central Africa are rising up as never before and asking for the One who came to heal the broken-hearted and give life more abundantly.

Our ministry in Central Africa is necessarily threefold, or, I might say, fourfold. We have the Evangelistic Department, the Educational Department, the Medical Department and the Industrial Department. All four of these are necessary to meet our own and the needs of the natives. To my mind, one of the most effective ways to reach the people is by the ministry of healing. The need for medical attention in central Africa furnishes us our greatest opportunity in that field, and yet, for the past three years, we have been saying to natives who walk thirty and forty miles to Wembo Nyama for operations, "You will have to go back and wait until we get a surgeon." We ought to make good this opportunity, as it is the greatest we have of planting the gospel under the crust of heathenism. As one has wisely said, "I had rather plant one seed of the life of Christ under the crust of heathen life than to cover that whole crust over with the veneer of Western civilization." For that divine life implanted and nurtured by the divine Spirit will progressively and resistlessly express itself in strong Christian character, fruitful Christian churches, happy Christian homes, the Christian training of the young, the care of the orphan, the aged, the blind,—a purified and ennobled social order. "Behold I make all things new."

In all of our work we are trying, as St. Paul stated the case, "to be all things to all men that we by all means might win some." We are seeking to present Christ to the people so intelligently and effectively that they will accept him as their Saviour and Lord, conform their lives to his teachings, and aid in extending his kingdom; and second, to organize these believers into churches, and train them to self-propagation, self-support, with a view that they will ultimately take over the evangelization of their own land. Some of the young men are already showing signs of leadership and marked ability. These people are capable and worthy of our careful consideration at this time of the church's greatest missionary opportunity.

If the Southern Methodist Church ever intends to give the gospel of Christ to the Otetela tribe, which is in the center of the Belgian Congo, she has the greatest opportunity today that she will ever have. The population of the tribe is estimated to be between two hundred and fifty and three hundred thousand people. According to a mutual understanding the other mission boards have left the responsibility of this tribe with us as the Southern Methodist Church. If we fail these people in this generation, they will not be saved. They might ask us this very pointed question, "If you refuse us the gospel, to whom shall we go?"

Many of the natives seem to delight in asking the missionary many varied questions. Many times I have had groups of men to gather around me and start their questions thick and fast. They are just as curious to know how we live in this country as people here are to know how they live. They can ask almost as many questions as the people here. They expect the white man to answer all their questions. One day sitting on my veranda in Central Africa, after they had asked me many things, one man looked up into my face and asked me this straightforward question: "How long have you known Jesus, the Saviour that you are telling us about?" My answer was, "I have known of him ever since I was a small child." Then he came back with this, "Why didn't you come to us sooner and tell us about the Saviour?" For a few moments I hardly knew how to answer him. Then I said, "Why others have not come before now, I cannot say, but as for myself I can say that I came as soon as I was prepared." Then he said to me, "My father and I used to sit together in the moonlight and wonder about the moon and stars and all creation; and he would tell me that he believed that there was a Supreme Being or a Creator behind all these things that we can see. But then he said to me with a very sad look on his face, 'My father died and went out into the dense darkness, without ever hearing of Jesus the Saviour that you are telling us about.'"

My friends, my heart was made sad and my mind flashed back across the ocean and I thought to myself, if the Christian men and women of America could hear this man's story, surely they would be willing to make some real sacrifice to speed the gospel light to these poor benighted people that are looking up with hungry faces and hearts for the bread of life. For some time the thought remained with me and I was impressed with this thought: If the church does not wake up and get a vision of the great missionary needs and opportunities and speed the gospel on much faster than we have been doing for the past half a century, that perhaps fifty years from now, not more than a hundred miles from where I was questioned, some black face man will probably be looking in the pale face of a missionary and asking the same embarrassing question, "Why did you not come to us sooner and tell us about Jesus the Saviour of the world?"

I think that we are all agreed that eventually the Kingdom of our God shall cover the earth as the waters cover the seas, but that which is of greater importance to us, is whether or not we as the Christian men and women of this generation, will have the part that it is our privilege to have in helping to extend this Kingdom to the last dark corner where Earth's heathen races are found. To the desire of all human hearts, wherever found around the world, Jesus Christ stands out as God's answer. In him we find all that our hearts crave. J. J. Davis.

LETTER FROM GUATEMALA.

Since arriving in Guatemala, December 26th, I have seen more of human need, heard more heart cries and shed more tears than for many previous years. This is the land of "The Christless Cross," where there is a multitude of hungry souls waiting to know the power of the Gospel.

The first night after arriving in port I spoke through an interpreter to an audience of 25, mostly believers, but one fine young man gave his heart to God. It was an encouraging beginning for my work in this republic.

Then I joined five workers from the Friends Mission at Chiquimula for a five-days' conference at Quirigua, sixty miles inland in the banana growing area. A strange environment it was, among native huts with cane or bamboo stalks for walls, roofs thatched with palm leaves, floors of dirt, and the people most primitive in all their ways of living. But they have souls and hungry hearts. Such a conference is a big event so there were nearly 300 people who came from far and near, like a camp meeting in the States. They were fed under a large shed, and slept wherever they could stretch a hammock or unroll a grass mat.

I have not seen such a time of spiritual power for many a day. Some of these brown, half clad, barefooted saints know the power of prayer and the results were continually in evidence. Many sought the Lord, and there was confession and repentance of the truest sort. It was a great privilege to preach (through an interpreter) to these people so simple and ready to accept the gospel message. Their ringing testimonies and songs of rejoicing will long be remembered.

My next experience was a week of travel by muleback through the mountains into Honduras. We stopped at some village for a service each night, and saw some interesting results. The trip was a varied combination of joyful service and perilous travel with entirely too many sidights to write in detail. We had expected to proceed into Salvador, but a revolution was on in Honduras and we were advised to turn back as soon as possible.

Back in Guatemala the next trip was with two American missionaries and two native workers down the country's largest river by canoe (real dug-out) into an interior section, and then back into the mountains to visit a village. It was the first time an American missionary had visited their colony so it was a great occasion for them. A group of men and boys had worked hard to prepare the trail for us, for eight miles cutting away underbrush, removing logs and boulders to make our passage safe. God rewarded their labors and our efforts by a most wonderful service the first night. Two souls were saved and a beautiful spirit of praise and rejoicing followed. The service was held in a primitive hut home of one of the believers. It is wonderful to see the faith and loyalty of some of these natives living in such crude conditions far removed from the world of affairs.

After three nights in the mountains we took our dugout again down river to a little railroad station in a banana plantation, expecting to return to a mission branch by rail. But found that a revolution had broken out in this country and all train service was stopped. Continuing on further by canoe we came to a little town where there was a chapel and some native Christians, where we could find a place to swing our hammocks for the night and get something to eat. It was a time of considerable suspense. But next day we were able to get a train and returned to the mission post.

Men reported for duty from every quarter to take up arms against the rebels, and things looked very serious for awhile. After three days of anxious waiting, shut off from communication with other missionary friends we heard the proclamation that it was all over, and the men came joyfully home.

Every day of my stay in this country has been fraught with interesting events and our service is being crowned by God's richest blessings. I have felt the confidence and assurance of the prayers of the friends in the homeland.

I still have three weeks in this country, and then two weeks in Cuba, and home again March 1st,—2912 Meadowbrook Drive, Ft. Worth, Texas.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLORIDA.

Greetings to The Herald Family. It has been some time since reporting to you, but I have been busy, and the Lord has been blessing. Held two revivals here since November, and the third one under consideration. Souls have been pardoned and sanctified gloriously in these meetings and truly Florida, as all other places, needs real salvation. Sin is rampant on every hand, bootlegging and debauchery is seen and known to exist without much interference, and the entire realm seems to be demoralized and truly brethren, these things have a demoralizing influence over the entire community. Officers are bribed and courts are influenced and lives of the people are endangered through these things, and it behooves us as evangelists to attack these things, as the churches won't stand for their pastors to get too bold on these things. One pastor here had to resign because he made a vigorous attack on these evils and held up a righteous standard for the people. It's known that some of the church people are engaged in this nefarious business, and of course they won't stand for their pastors to be harsh on these things.

I am ready to assist you and make dates with you brethren for your meetings. I am untarnished and not influenced by the theological confusions of the day. I was sanctified twenty-three years ago and have not backslid a bit. God is honoring full salvation preaching now as he did then and my soul is made to rejoice in seeing his Word honored in these days of distress and confusion. Write me here in general delivery. I am ready to work anywhere and with anybody that wants a full gospel preached. You know what I have always stood for, and I am not compromising in the least. W. L. Shell.

RIVERSIDE, NEW JERSEY.

Ray Johnson, the "Red-headed, freckled-faced boy preacher from Texas" has been with us in a two-weeks' meeting in the First Methodist Church here in Riverside. And what a boy he is. Tall and straight, manly and fearless, full of grace and truth, he proclaimed the unsearchable riches of the grace of God to us in a way that has never been equalled in our church. Johnson is a product of Asbury College, but he is more a product of the Holy Ghost and of divine power.

Our people, or at least some of them, were afraid that the Modernists were right when they said that the days of revivals and mass evangelism were over. We had seen so little of the power of the Spirit demonstrated throughout this section, that we believed that revivals were a product of the past, when men were a little more sentimental and emotional than they are in this modern day.

But praise the Lord, we began to pray for the meeting for a week before it came. A few Christians gathered together in the church every evening and prayed for a real, heaven-sent, supernatural outpouring of revival power. And the Lord answered prayer. Some of our people confessed that they were not right, and before the special meetings came, a number of our people had surrendered to the Lord, and the revival was on.

Ray began to preach on Sunday night, Jan. 27th. The Spirit's power was felt from the first, and our faith increased. On the third evening an altar call was given, and some people were converted. As the meeting progressed the interest increased, and more people got saved. On the last week of his stay with us, our twenty-one-year-old "boy preacher" began to preach holiness, or entire sanctification. Some of the people had never heard of it before, and they began to seek it and many found the blessing of a clean heart. The fire fell, and many were the slain of the Lord.

On this last week the church would scarcely hold the people. There must have been in the neighborhood of 200 people at the altar. We did not keep track of the number, so great was our enthusiasm and praise over what the Lord had done for us. By a unanimous invitation of a church which was crowded to the very doors, with not even standing room, Ray Johnson was invited to return to Riverside for another year.

South Jersey is waking up spiritually, and we hope and pray that God will give the preachers and laymen of this section a vision of a lost and dying world which is hungry for the real Gospel of the Grace of God. Some of our preachers have this vision, but let us pray that "the Lord of the harvest will send more workers" like our beloved brother Ray whom we shall follow with our prayers and very best wishes. Henry Miller, Pastor.

with trashy reading, and do not saturate your mind with literature tainted with destructive criticism. Do not let those unbelievers who know nothing of how to lead a soul to Christ, and who have been constantly writing question marks over the pages of the Holy Scriptures, breathe into your spiritual and intellectual life the poison of their unbelief. But this letter is long enough. I will write you again next week.

Bob Shuler Arrested.

We see from the press that the Knights of Columbus have arrested Bob Shuler and cited him to trial, because of something he has published in his monthly magazine. By the way, if you are not a subscriber to Bob Shuler's magazine send for it today, care of Trinity M. E. Church, South, Los Angeles, Cal., enclosing $1.00 and you will get one of the most interesting periodicals published on the continent. It will be fortunate for the Knights of Columbus when they bring Bob to trial if he is pronounced "not guilty." We Protestants of this country do not intend to let that Catholic organization run roughshod over Bob Shuler or any other Protestant preacher in this country. They ought to know better than to stir up strife, especially just at this time, between the Protestants and Catholics of this country. The simple fact is, the intelligent Protestants of this country are indignant over the Pope becoming Emperor over a little patch of ground in the City of Rome and the Catholic people of the world. It would be wise if the Knights of Columbus kept a little quiet until the indignation of the Protestant people of this country cooled off a bit.

The Knights of Columbus at this time could kindle a fire that would spread with a rapidity and be very difficult to extinguish. My judgment is, that there are a million or two of red-blooded American citizens in these United States who will not be at all satisfied to see Bob Shuler persecuted by the Knights of Columbus. Write to Bob today, enclosing a dollar at above address, and get his magazine for a year.

Yours, for Prohibition, Protestantism, and Prosperity in these United States.

We Have Fallen Upon

Strange Times.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HERE is in the atmosphere of social and religious conditions a feeling that we are on the eve of a great crisis in the history of the world. There are secret, invisible powers at work which cause one to fear the unfolding of the coming years.

Efforts have been made to define the spirit of unrest; books have been written to explain our world conditions; preachers whose spiritual discernment is not keen, have been trying to give the people a gospel "adapted to the times," while a thousand anxious hearts are wondering what the outcome shall be.

Philip Mauro, author of "The Number of Man," has in his book tried to locate our trouble, and perhaps has thrown some light upon existing conditions, but have we found the remedy and, if so, have we applied it? Mauro emphasizes the fact that "human society is stirred the world over, as it never has been before." The simultaneous activity is but the rumbling of human machinery trying to solve its social, political, and religious problems by human energy and ingenuity. In other words, there is a growing disposition in the present generation to save itself, socially, politically, and religiously.

The writer expresses his conviction that "the affairs of humanity are approaching a crisis of the first magnitude," or what another has designated "a world crisis." What is the cause of the conditions which invite this impending doom? We have but to note the drift of the educational and ecclesiastical teachings of today to ascertain, somewhat, the source of our restlessness, for when a nation finds anchorage in any other than the Rock of Ages, her anchorage is insecure.

We were amazed, grieved and excited with jealousy for our Christ, when we read the class poem of Harvard University quoted in the book above referred to. The last verse is a sample of outright blasphemy:

"O holy spirit—O heart of man!
Will you not listen, turn and bow
To that clear voice, since time began
Loud in your ears, and louder now!
Mankind, the Christ, retrieved—
Recrowned, recrucified;
No god for a gift, God gave us,
Mankind alone must save us."

Note that the "heart of man" is substituted for the Holy Spirit, and instead of the only begotten Son, we have "No god for a gift, God gave us;" Christ, the world's Redeemer is discarded and "Mankind alone must save."

Let us give you another quotation to show the trend of thought in high places, and for which man in his blindness and stupidity is grasping as a drowning man catches at a straw.

"O world, grown, pitiless and grim!
O world of men, had you but known
Your brother is your Christ, through him
You must be saved and him alone.
Love for his sorrows—Love—
Love alone can lift you above
The pain of your misgiving,
The doom and horror of living.

"Within ourselves we find the light
And in ourselves our Gods to be,
Not throned beyond the stars of night;
Here in America we must see
The love of man for man,
The new republican—
A heaven, not superman,
Reborn in man and woman."

We have written the most startling declarations in italics in order to draw your attention to the glaring thoughts of man-contrived redemption. You will observe man is all while the One whose blood alone can save, is not mentioned save as we are reminded that man is our Christ.

It seems to us that such advocates of human redemption are bordering perilously near the precipice of the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost; perhaps, nearer than they think. If, as they contend, the heart of man is the "holy spirit," then the avenue of salvation through faith in the Crucified of Calvary is cut off, and they are without God and without hope in the world.

Our hearts are stirred when we see the drift of things in educational, social and ecclesiastical circles. "Preach the Word" is the message that should sound long and loud to our ministers. Christ is the world's magnet to draw men unto himself, and if the ministers of the gospel do not hold him up as the one mighty to save to the uttermost, the blood of earth's deceived and deluded multitudes will appear in judgment against them. This prodigal world still has the heart-cry of the Greeks, "We would see Jesus," and will not be satisfied with the husks of man-contrived salvation, nor the superficialities of social service. The body can get along with temporalities, but the heart needs God. This world has made no provision for the heart; it was made for God, and he alone can fill it.

While the adverse winds whistle their stinging blasts around us, may they but drive us closer to the heart of him who has said, "Come unto me, all ye that labor, and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Let us magnify and exalt him who has thrown out this world-wide invitation to a restless, hungry world, and prove to them that he is the panacea for all life's ills. He is the strength of our life, of whom shall we be afraid?

Let those who may choose to sail over life's tempestuous and uncertain sea in the little man-made canoes of self-righteousness, do so, but those of us who have the Captain of our salvation as our pilot, will stick to the Ship of Zion, and drown the siren voices of a God-forgetting world by singing,

"Jesus, the name high over all
In hell, or earth, or sky!
Angels and men before it fall,
And devils fear and fly."

A Great Treat for our Readers.

We shall soon begin the publication of a series of articles on "Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is the Very Word of God," by Rev. W. E. Biederwolf, D.D., a man of profound scholarship and evangelistic spirit, who has devoted much time and pains to the preparation of these articles. Thousands of good people believe the Bible without knowing why. We are publishing this notice before the beginning of these articles in order to call the attention of our readers to them, and insist that they read them. In these days of such widespread skepticism, and such vigorous attacks upon the Holy Scriptures, it will be the part of wisdom for all Christians to make sure of the scriptural foundation upon which they build for time and eternity. Your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

Special Notice!

Frequently, we shall have in this paper special messages to those hungering and thirsting after righteousness. It will be a short, pointed bit of instruction on how to enter the experience of entire sanctification. Send THE HERALD to your friends who need this instruction. We shall also have messages on "How to Win a Sinner to Christ." We shall have instruction to a seeker on how to find Christ. Help us to sow THE HERALD broadcast everywhere. H. C. MORRISON.

UNCLE BUDDIE ROBINSON.

BY RAYMOND BROWNING.

The people of this land ne'er saw a person half so quaint
As Uncle Buddie Robinson our weeping, smiling saint.
He weeps a bit and laughs awhile then says some searching thing
As keen as any surgeon's knife, yet never leaves a sting.
A log house in the Cumberlands of Eastern Tennessee
Is where his boyhood days were spent in direst poverty;
And when his drinking father died and friends laid him to rest,
That mountain widow took her brood of children and moved West.
Far out upon the Texas plains where life was hard and rough,
Our Bud grew up a cowboy and the toughest of the tough.
You've heard him tell how he was dressed when first he sought the light,
Trousers and shirt, pistol and boots, ready to swear and fight.
But God had sent across those plains one of his brave good men,
A circuit-rider who would beard the lion in his den;
And where he found these reckless men out on the wild frontier
Like Christ's ambassador he stood and bade them come and hear;
'Twas such a man that Buddie heard, poor, crude, unlettered boy.
I've heard him tell the story and have wept, then laughed with joy.
Bud said "That preacher preached on hell until I feared its woe,
And then he preached on heaven until I surely longed to go."
Down in the altar straw he fell and stammered out a prayer,
Then heaven broke upon his soul and Jesus met him there.
And such a miracle of grace this world has seldom known,
For not a letter did he know and he a man full grown.
But after work of day was done out on the moon-lit plain
He learned to read his Bible first, and through and through again
He read that Book, devoured it, until his memory
Was stored with truth. His mind became a royal treasury,
And when that lisping tongue turned loose in sermon, speech or prayer
His sayings and his epigrams were jewels rich and rare.
The Methodists were cautious when he asked the right to preach.
The licensing committee listened to his uncouth speech,
And one good, sympathetic soul said, "Don't turn Bud away.
He hasn't sense enough to use the license anyway.
He cannot hurt the church a bit and maybe 'twould be wrong,
If we should not encourage him. Let's help the boy along."
Another said, "Some kind of test must show in our report.
Let's ask some simple questions and be sure to make them short."
One said, "Buddie, tell us have you studied Geography?"
"I didn't know there's such a thing," said Bud, "It's news to me."
"Now what's the longest river in the world?—of course you've heard?"
"River of life," came the reply, "I've read that in the Word."
"And what's the highest mountain peak?" (This question was the last.)
"Mount Zion," came the answer,—and the brethren said he passed.
Some years went by. There came a time when Bud was sanctified.
The camp meeting was all aglow and as the rising tide
Swept sinners to salvation and saved ones to second grace
Our preacher hungered after God and wore a troubled face.
He knew he had been brightly saved and yet within his breast
The carnal mind would stir and rage and would not let him rest.
He sought the blessing, prayed for peace, yet still the fight went on Until next day when in the field he prayed while thinning corn,—
But let him tell the story in his ever-thrilling way
Of what took place in that cornfield that memorable day,
"All of a sudden tassels on the corn were turned to gold
And Jesus in his chariot through that old cornfield rolled.
His great hand took out of my heart the last remains of sin
And flung them into Adam's grave and then the joy came in,—
A hog's head full of honey in my soul and, don't forget,
There's just a lot of beehives that I haven't robbed as yet."
No matter where this preacher went he set the folks on fire.
The crowds turned out to hear him preach. He stirred the devil's ire.
Among the Texas ministers there was a mighty host
Who little knew of Wesley and less of the Holy Ghost.
Some ministers of carnal mind and much of worldly pride
Had fits and spells and nearly died when folks got sanctified.
Of course they knew 'twas in their creed and so they kept professing
That they "believed in holiness but not a second blessing."
Now to the simple trusting souls this matter seems quite plain
That the "first blessing" is that grace by which we're born again
And then the Holy Ghost must come to cleanse from inbred sin.
This is that "second blessing" when the Spirit dwells within.
However these blind leaders called poor Buddie to their court
And tried him for such heresy and made proceeding short.
They took his license, turned him out, their Pilate-hands washed clean
And that is why Bud Robinson became a Nazarene.
He's met the beasts of Ephesus and never lost a fight
For years he's buffeted the storms and now the port's in sight.
He's nearing three score years and ten and still he preaches on.
We'll never see his like again when this brave soul is gone.
Young men and women clothed and fed from his own meager store
And trained in school to teach and preach have gone to foreign shore.
The sun ne'er sets on these his wards who number sixty-three,
And preach salvation from all sin with holy liberty.
His books are sold by thousands and his sayings never fade.
When Bud got on God's altar then a genius was made.
The final word on lodges by this humble man was said.
'Twill be retold a thousand times long after he is dead.
"Some folks always follow the Lamb," (his lisp I cannot quote),

"And these folks are too busy then to ever ride the goat."
The chariot of the Lord will come for this good man some day
And tens of thousands will be sad to know he's slipped away;
But heaven will seem nearer and my soul with glory fills
When I think of Buddie shouting on those everlasting hills.
The scars of battle will be gone, the loneliness and pain.
The tears he wept for all the lost will never come again.
No more he'll wander through the land like one who had no bed.
Earth's sorrow is forgotten and eternal joy's ahead.
And I can hear him saying in that concourse of the blest,
"I didn't save them all, dear Lord, but I have done my best."

The Preachers of Tomorrow

Are the young preachers of to-day. It is these young men who will fill our pulpits, conduct our revival meetings and wield a religious influence over the young generation.

Are you interested in these young ministers, whether or not they preach an uncompromising gospel—a gospel that saves all men from all sin? Men change and quickly fall, but Christ remaineth forever, and we want preachers who preach this changeless Christ; so do you.

In this fast modern age when there are so many things to detract and interfere with one's religious life, there isn't anything quite so helpful as good reading matter from the pen of men and women in whose hearts the Holy Spirit abides. We try to keep the pages of The Pentecostal Herald filled with just such matter.

We have set the month of March apart as preacher month, and although $1.50 barely covers the cost of printing and mailing The Herald, we are gladly making a concession by giving a reduction of 50c, and are offering to send it to preachers, young preachers especially, for $1.00 per year. We have had folks tell us that it is easy to discern the preacher who reads The Pentecostal Herald because of his unctious sermons, his deep spirituality and his zeal for souls.

We believe you see our purpose, and that you realize the need, and are asking that you send us the names of young ministers of your acquaintance with $1.00 for each subscription; if you cannot furnish the names, send us the money for as many as you can, and we will furnish the names. If you cannot furnish the money, send us the names.

Enclosed you will find $..... for which send THE HERALD to the following ministers for one year on your special introductory offer of $1.00 per year.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a Tennessee girl enter into your happy circle. I have been a reader of The Herald for several years but this is my first time to write. I think it is a wonderful paper. I am a Christian and belong to the M. E. Church. I go to church and Sunday school most every Sunday. I am a Sophomore in high school, and was sixteen years old August 9. Have I a twin? If so, please write me. I would like to hear from all you cousins who care to write. I will try to answer all letters received.

Elzada Wimberley.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please open your door and let a little Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls. I am a girl twelve years old and in the seventh grade. I go to Adkins Porter School. I am a Christian. I belong to the M. E. Church. As this is my first letter to The Herald I will go before Mr. W. B. comes. I would like to hear from any of the cousins who would care to write.

Bidie Mae Lax.
Rt. 9, Paris, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Just a few lines. I have been reading The Pentecostal Herald for twelve months and I sure do enjoy reading its pages. I ask the Herald family to pray for me that I might be what the Lord would have me be, for if I know my heart I want to do his will that I might exchange my cross for a crown some day. Pray for me.

Jennie Harrell.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years of age and in the fourth grade. My birthday is April 13. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I will answer all letters received. I have brown hair and brown eyes. I wonder how many of you enjoyed Christmas. I did. I go to Lone Star Consolidated School. I hope Mr. W. B. is out fishing when this letter arrives, for I hope to see it in print.

Sybil Logan.
Rt. 2, Box 123, Adel, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a big girl seven years old, four feet and one inch tall and weigh 65 pounds. This is the first time I have written to The Pentecostal Herald, which I like very much, especially page ten. Can any one guess my name? It has eight letters in it. It begins with C and ends with E. If you can guess it I will write to you. I am a Christian and love Jesus very much. I go to school and am in the second grade. My mother is sick and I am living with my aunt. I read about W. B. in your paper. Will you please tell me about him? I hope to see this in print.

C. Struza.
532 Madison Ave., Bellevue, Pa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wonder if you will make room on your page for a Dixie girl to enter? This is my first letter to The Herald, but I enjoy page ten. My grandfather takes it, so I get every issue. I live on a sunny farm in Tennessee. I like farm life very much and intend to be an up-to-date farmerwoman one of these days. I'm five feet, three inches tall, have hazel eyes, Chestnut hair, olive complexion, and weigh 130 pounds. I try to be honest with my fellowmen, and not take the easiest job; let my sisters have the hardest. I belong to the M. E. Church, South, where I go to Sunday school and meeting. Down here on the farm we have many pleasures and many trials and temptations tending the soil which old Mother Nature provided for us. But with our work we have lots of play-hours of fun and frolic. We go chestnut and hickorynut hunting in autumn, fishing and picnicing in spring and summer. I have four brothers and two sisters. I am sixteen years of age. My birthday is September 8th. Who is my twin? Write to me. I am the fourth and the middle child. I love reading and music, that's my hobby. My father is a vocal music teacher, so therefore all the children sing. In the winter we sit by the fireside and sing the songs of old and new books, all gay and happy in our snug living room with the big fire throwing out its warmest welcome to cheer us. Who says country people can't be happy with the lot that God gave them. Girls and boys, did you ever stop to think just how much we owe our parents. Think of the heartaches and pain we cause them by our folly and neglect. Let's let it enter our heads for a moment and study. Just see if we can't find something to do that will please them. Watch their eyes sparkle with happiness. Oh, I'm afraid Mr. W. B. will wake up so my letter can't pass him. Cousins, one and all, write to me and tell me of your state.

Tommie Lou Simpson.
Rt. 6, McKenzie, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I enjoy the letters so much I'd like to have a little room and then I'll go. Oh yes, I have long brown curly hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I was twenty-one September 13. Have I a twin? I am a Christian and belong to the M. E. Church in a little town four miles from where I live. I sure love to go to Sunday school, League, Church and prayer meeting. We have had two revivals there the last year; many souls were saved and sanctified. Besides the regular prayer meeting they are having cottage meetings with many people filled with the Holy Spirit praising God. I want to speak a word for our preacher, Rev. E. C. Phillips. He sure preaches the full and free salvation right from his heart. Thank God for sending such a good man to us. Our S. S. class is talking of educating a foreigner. And I am asking God to help us, for all things are possible with him. Praise his Name. I certainly get a lot of pleasure from serving God and have no time for worldly pleasure. I ask the prayers of the cousins that I will be always on duty for Jesus. Write to me. God bless you all.

Pearl Stoncipher.
Irington, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I come in again for a visit? I wrote to The Herald some time ago and was glad to see my letter in print. I am a young girl twenty-three years of age. I have taken The Herald for over a year and think it's a fine paper. I would like for the boys and girls near my age to write to me.

Edna Carlson.
Clark, S. D.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Ohio girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter, and I hope to see it in print. I am thirteen and am in the eighth grade. I have blue eyes and light hair. Dorothy Shaw, I guess your name is Mary, and Georgia Shaw, I guess your name is Betty. I must close since this is my first letter. I have a pekingese dog; her name is Ming Toy. Can any one guess my first name? It begins with I and ends with A; it has three letters. The one who guesses it will get a letter and my picture. I will pray for Lena Evans.

I. Elizabeth Dunn.
Alliance, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Indiana girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old. I have dark complexion, brown eyes and black hair. I am in the fourth grade at school and I like my teacher very much. Dorothy M. Shaw, I guess your middle name to be May. Am I right? This is my first letter to The Herald and I wish to see it in print.

Alice Guernsey.
Memphis, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Ravenden Springs girl join your band of boys and girls? I am ten years old and my birthday is October 30. Have I a twin? I am a member of the Methodist Church and go to Sunday school and church every Sunday I can. William H. Stahl, I guess your middle name to be Harry. Am I right? If I am please let me know. E. Madalene Shelley, I guess your first name to be Evalena. Am I right? If I am please write me a letter. I sure do like to read The Herald, especially page ten. My aunt, Mrs. J. R. Edwards, takes The Herald, and has been taking it for about five years. She thinks it a noble paper. I also like it well. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with T and ends with A, and has five letters in it. Those who guess my middle name I will write them a letter. Aunt Bettie, this is my first letter and I would like to see it in print if my letter isn't too long. I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when my letter arrives.

Bessie T. Griffith.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Is there a welcome awaiting an old cousin? I hope so, for since I've been a member of The Herald family I have learned to love each one of you that I have heard of. There are two vivid pictures in my mind that linger. I can see myself a child at mother's knee as she teaches me passages from the Psalms. The other she is reading me an article from The Herald entitled, "It's a short, short way to soul salvation." I don't remember how long ago this was—not so long I am sure—for I am just eighteen years old now. I live "down South in Dixie" where 'tis summer time a larger part of the year. Like every state Florida has its good and its bad features, but we all believe that the wonderful climate, scenery, bathing beaches and all the year-round supply of vegetables and fruits are so desirable that an occasional hurricane is soon forgotten, for we are lovers of our state, and we are trying to build its reputation. Despite the common belief we do not have very warm summers. If you doubt my word come down here for a month next summer when the mercury starts soaring. I'm often a victim to the wander lust for I delight in travels, especially by auto when we camp outdoors. How many of you folks enjoy outdoor sports? To me it's the most splendid way of showing God our appreciation of our bodies, that of making healthy the temple of our souls. I am a Sophomore in College. I still intend to attend Asbury sometime in the near future. I like to read very much. I have a number of favorites in the modern author list. Among them Gene Stratton Porter is the one I prefer above all. I admire her knowledge of nature, and the skill she showed in portraying her ideas. We should all study and learn to love the great outdoors, for each twig breathes of life given by the Creator. I would be delighted to receive letters from all of you girls and boys of all ages, and from my old friends as well as new ones. I will try to make my replies worthy of your time spent in reading them, and I'll answer all.

Best wishes to all, especially our beloved Auntie.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wonder if you would enjoy hearing from a shut-away from Iowa. I do love to read page ten, and learn of all the cousins. Would you accept another cousin into your family circle? If so I surely will be delighted to hear from many of you dear cousins for the time is so tedious and hours seem long these cold winter days. There is just my dear old mother (age 74 years) and myself in our home since father left us for the Eternal Home thirteen years ago. We are Christians, and love The Herald and read God's comforting word. I wonder who can guess my first name, which begins with M and has just four letters. And my birthday is in the good old summer time, July 14. Have I a twin? If so please speak up real quick. We in Iowa are having lovely, cold, snowy weather, though today is warming up. We are so thankful. It won't be so many weeks now until farmers will begin to think about seeding time. We raise corn you know, Iowa is known for its corn. They also raise other small grain, all kinds of vegetables, etc. I am not able to do any kind of active work, only hand work, read and write. Have a Victrola which was given me by a friend. I do enjoy hymns and if any one has any they no longer use I'd be delighted to receive some, or any other good music, as I'm a lover of music. The birds are dear little friends who never forget us shut-ins. I wonder if you'd enjoy hearing about two little girls living across the street? If so, I'll tell you about them. Their names are Hellis and Jeane. They never forget grandma and Aunt Maybelle, as they call us. Always wave their little hands from their window every time they catch me looking, then each tot bobs up for me to see. I call them "Joy bringers" for they truly bring joy in their bright little faces. Then when warm weather comes always they are so delighted to come over and to share their nuts, candy and etc. I love to treat them when I chance to possess the goodies, though it's not often I have such for our means are limited. My letter is too long and I've not said half I started to say, but I will know Aunt Bettie will cast me off, perhaps I'll land in the waste paper basket and you'll never see me in print, but if so I've had a lovely thought with each one of the cousins. We trust for God knows, he loves, he cares. Nothing this truth can dim. He gives the very best to those who have their trust in him.

I'll be very glad to have letters, card or gift and I'll answer all if envelope and postage are supplied. Anything to help pass away lonely hours and help my darling mother to get through the long winter season, will be appreciated by your shut-in cousin—and shall I say your dear old Grandma Stafford.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope it will be in print. My father has taken The Herald for about three years. We live on a farm very close to a lake and in winter this affords much fun for skating. I am a boy eleven years old, five feet in height and weigh 94 pounds. Who can guess my second name? It begins with C and ends with S, and has seven letters in it. All the cousins please write to a Canadian cousin.

FALLEN ASLEEP

HARNED.

Mrs. Henry Harned, a reader of The Herald for more than forty years, passed to her reward Jan. 27, 1929, at Guthrie, Okla., in the home of her oldest son, Delphas Harned. She was 77 years, 4 months, and 20 days old. She united with the Methodist Church when sixteen years of age and lived a consistent Christian until death.

March 27, 1871, she was united in marriage to Henry Harned, with whom she lived a long and beautiful married life, having a number of children to rise up and call her blessed.

She made her home with her oldest son, Delphas, at whose home she passed away. Her former home being at Walters, Okla., she was buried there Jan. 29. She leaves to mourn her departure a husband, three sons and three daughters, three brothers and one sister.

Sister Harned passed away just one week after my own dear mother left us, and it is a comforting thought to know that they are now enjoying the House of many Mansions prepared for them.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved family and cause them to so live that they may make an unbroken family in heaven.

Mrs. H. C. Morrison.

HERRON.

Whereas, It has seemed good to the Almighty Ruler of the Universe to remove from our midst, a fellow member and co-worker, Brother John W. Herron.

Whereas, the intimate place he held in the Gardendale Mission with members of this body, we deem it proper that we should place on record our appreciation of his services. Therefore,

Resolved; that we deplore the loss of Bro. Herron, softened only by the hope which is within us.

Resolved; that we tender the family of the deceased our sincere sympathy in their bereavement, and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Herald of Holiness, The Pentecostal Herald and the Potters Herald for publication, a copy sent to the bereaved family and a copy spread on the minutes of the Gardendale Mission.

Mrs. Nellie Reed,

KING.

Mrs. Sarah King was born Sept. 25, 1851, and fell asleep, after an illness of only a few days, on Jan. 27, 1929.

Mrs. King was the daughter of Rev. John Flurry, a local preacher and pioneer of Jackson county, Miss., where she grew up with the rest of the family under pioneer conditions. This meant few of educational advantages; but what was lacking in this respect was made up by home training in the principles of character and of faith in Christ. She was early converted and united with the church. She later embraced the Wesleyan doctrine of entire sanctification and, together with her husband, gave testimony to that experience.

At the age of twenty she was happily married to Rev. James King, another local preacher in the Southern Methodist Church. To this union were born eleven children, eight girls and three boys; one girl and one boy preceding the mother to the grave.

Sister King and her husband loved the Lord and were true to him, sparing not themselves in order to be true to their convictions. They were consistent witnesses to the experience of holiness, regardless of how unpopular it was. They cared little for the opinions of men so long as they had the approval of the Master. The Lord blessed them and they were known far and near as definite Bible Christians. The influence of their lives went out far beyond their own neighborhood because they attended all the camp meetings and revivals within reach. Many were the souls they helped to pray through to a definite experience in Christ Jesus. When they testified conviction came to the hearts of hardened sinners.

Sister King and her husband were such close and constant companions that it is almost impossible to speak of one without including the other also. She was a worthy helpmeet for a worthy husband. Together they attended the revivals as long as they were able to go at all. For several years Bro. King has been practically an invalid, and during this time she tenderly and patiently nursed him and sought to cheer his last days.

Late in life Brother and Sister King united with the Pentecostal Church, where they felt that their testimony to holiness would be more acceptable.

Sister King was one of God's noblewomen. She was faithful, conscientious, patient, and always even tempered. Those who knew her best feel that her name cannot be too highly praised. Her children and relatives loved her devotedly for her Christian character and kindly disposition. Her sister said, "I feel that she has been true to God and was only waiting to hear his call, 'Come home my child.' She was a loving mother, a devoted wife, a kind neighbor, and a faithful friend. Our prayers ascend for the bereaved ones and especially for the husband who doubtless expected to be the first to cross to the New Jerusalem. May the comforting grace of God be with them all till they shall be reunited in his glorious presence forever more."

Murray Cox.

HORTON.

Whereas, the Lord of the harvest in his infinite wisdom has taken out of this world the soul of our beloved pastor, the Rev. Claud Horton, be it

Resolved 1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of the great head of the church who "Buries his workmen, but carries on his work."

Resolved 2. That we have lost a true pastor whose burning zeal and labor for lost souls, and to lead men into higher heights of holiness never tired.

Resolved 3. That with bowed heads and hearts lifted to God we remember and appreciate, as no tongue can tell, his earnest prayers, and fervent messages; also the sacrifice he made for us in serving this charge. He was indeed a man of God, and walked with God.

Resolved 4. That we will ever remember in our prayers his wife and children who were so near to his heart, and who shared in the sacrifice he made in serving the people committed to his care.

Resolved 5. That our secretary be instructed to furnish a copy of these resolutions to his beloved wife and children, and a copy also be furnished the Wesleyan Christian Advocate and The Pentecostal Herald for publication.

TO A PRIMROSE SENT TO A SICK-ROOM.

W. Montgomery Young, Sc.D.

I am sitting alone with my primrose
And thinking of all that it means
Of love in the hearts of the donors
And cheer amid sick-room scenes.

These flowers are the blossoms of kindness,
The fruitage of love and good will;
They are tokens of all that is dearest
To one who is weary and ill.

Theirs, indeed, is a costly perfection;
To plant them and bring them to light
Cost the culture and care of the gardener

And warmth by day and by night.
The wisdom of God made the water,
With hydrogen not over much,
And oxygen just in proportion
To give them a delicate touch.

It required the great law of cohesion
To hold them together in space,
And the powers of a great gravitation
To secure their most elegant grace.

The great orb of heaven did labor
From morning till night, in his turn,
To give them the robes of the royal
And stamens of gold in their urn.

The scientists say that the starlight
Is part of the mass of the stars,
And electrons they hurl through the ether

Have made them as lovely as Mars.
Should I name all the chemical products
Which built up their stems from the ground

And the chlorophyll heaven provided,
How erudite my knowledge would sound.
But I know that the carbon dioxide
Came floating to them in the air
And that nitrogen never was lacking,
For God gave supplies everywhere.

Why their leaves are so green and so charming,
Their petals of purplish hue
No scientist yet has discovered,
For nobody ever yet knew.

The scientists say it is chlorophyll
We see in their color in spring

And xanthophyll later in autumn
Which decks them with gold like a king.

With words they would darken our knowledge,
For all that their deep statement says

Is that green is the color of spring-time
And gold of the late autumn days.

Come, tell me thy secrets, O Nature,
Come, open thy doors to my knock—
Say, why is thy beauty so fragile,
So brief by the hours of the clock?

Reveal to me once and for ever
The cause of thy purple and green—
Just speak to me once, pretty primrose,—

I hearken the voice of a queen.
Say, why have you calyx so handsome,
Like Liberty Bell swung on high,
And why do you last but a moment?

And why do you wither and die?
Will God clothe thy short life with beauty,
More gorgeous than kings of the East,

And leave me to perish for covering,
Less protected than birdie or beast?
Inspire me again, little primrose,
And tell me thy secrets of grace;

The care of the Father in Heaven,
The beauty that shines in thy face.
Oh, could I conserve all thy beauty,
And could I but gather thy charm,

No power would swerve me from duty;
No evil accomplish my harm.
My faith, like the rays of the morning,
Would penetrate darkest recess,
And the light which is heaven-adorning
Would fall upon others to bless.

Come, teach me thy lesson, O primrose,
Breathe out of thy joy in my soul;
My heart shall attend at thy portals,
To learn of thy purpose and goal.

Sweet lessons of faith shall support me,
When tempted to doubt and despair;
I shall trust in the Father of mercies,
And accept with thanksgiving his care.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XII.—March 24, 1929.

Subject.—Stewardship and Missions. Acts 1:6-8; 2 Cor. 8:1-9.

Golden Text.—It is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful. 1 Cor. 4:2.

Introduction.—A steward is one who acts for another—handles and cares for the goods or property of another. Paul's statement that he must "be found faithful" requires no comment. In the Bible sense, God's stewards are not hirelings, but bondslaves—love slaves, purchased with the precious blood of his own Son. This makes us stewards in person, in service and in substance.

St. Paul took pleasure in calling himself the slave of Jesus Christ. He claimed not to count even his life dear unto himself. Jesus paid the price—his own life's blood; and Paul delivered the goods, himself soul and body without a reservation, for time and eternity.

A good steward must have associations that honor his Master. He cannot make companions of the wicked and lawless elements among men. He must not forget that he cannot be God's friend and the friend of the world at the same time; "for the friendship of the world is enmity against God." A good steward must have such habits as will honor Jesus Christ. He dares not to defile and injure his body, "the temple of the Holy Ghost," with such poisons as alcohol, cocaine, opium, nicotine, etc. He must use clean speech. Never must he use God's name in vain, not even in his prayers.

A good steward must so dress as to honor his Lord. He must be neither fop nor slouch. A Christian should be known by his personal appearance, and especially by his deportment.

A good steward must always remember that he owns nothing. He is acting for his Master; and that he must handle all money, and all other wealth that may fall into his hands, for the glory of God in blessing men. This is no less important than many other matters in our stewardship; nor is it more important. It is true that in emphasizing the faithful use of the dollar we have lost sight of the steward himself. Permit me to stress this: Without good stewards there can be no good stewardship. We understand this in all business affairs; but here the churches fail. No one gathers good fruit from inferior trees. We get little milk and butter from scrub cattle. If the church wishes better stewardship, she must improve her stewards.

It is hardly possible to find two other phases of church interest more intimately related than stewardship and missions. Missions in foreign lands cannot live without stewardship in the home lands; and churches in homelands cannot live without missions in heathen lands. Men call the sea at the mouth of the River Jordan the Dead Sea because no other name would suit it: It receives all it can get, and gives out nothing; wherefore it is "dead." But that sea is no deader than a church that gives nothing; and a stingy man is no better, though he may profess to be a Christian.

Christianity is a revelation of God to the human soul, a guarantee of personal salvation to every one that believeth, and the possibility of salvation to all men. Some one has said that the first two will damn the soul through selfishness, if the third is neglected. The soul that tries to achieve personal salvation without saving others, will become a spiritual cesspool—a dead sea. I suppose that Jesus meant something like this when he said: "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it." To put the matter in short form, There can be no successful missions without good stewardship, and no good stewardship without missions. They are Siamese twins that no surgical operation can separate without death to both.

Comments on the Lesson.

6. Lord, will thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?—They were expecting Jesus to become their earthly ruler—a Jewish king. Men never rise above this until they meet Pentecost. The church is now striving to establish an earth king.

7. This verse should teach us all, that God has some unrevealed things that we have no right to know. They will come when he sees fit to reveal them to his children.

8. Ye shall receive power.—The word for power is the Greek for dynamite. It means working force. This was to come with the baptism with the Holy Ghost. God has no other source of spiritual power for his church. It is Pentecost, or spiritual weakness. This is God's process for making witnesses for Jesus Christ.

1. We do you to wit.—Awkward. "We make known to you," is more modern and clearer. Grace of God.—This was the God-given grace of Christian liberty. Men are stingy by nature.

2. A great trial of affliction.—Deep poverty brought on by persecution and the degradation of surrounding heathenism. Wonderful that, under such direful circumstances, their liberality abounded toward the poor Jewish Christians in Jerusalem.

3. Beyond their power.—Their willingness exceeded their purses.

4. Praying us . . . that we would receive the gift. Paul seemed to feel that they were going too far in their giving. They wished him to have some fellowship with them in the gift by ministering it for them. That was beautiful.

5. First gave themselves to the Lord. The only foundation for Christian service of any sort. And unto us by the will of God.—They would serve the apostle as far as the will of God would permit.

6. Desired Titus.—He seems to have first broached the subject to the Corinthian church; and to have done it so successfully, that Paul wished him to complete the work.

7. This is shrewd. See how Paul backs up his plea for liberality by complimenting their other good graces.

8. Still he compliments; but watch how he enforces his plea by reference to the liberality of others. Paul was a master. He fairly challenges them "to prove the sincerity of your love" by giving.

9. If anything can surpass this verse, I have never seen nor heard it. He pits the assumed poverty of Jesus Christ against their poverty. By his poverty he would make them rich. What would they do for him. That challenge cannot be surpassed.

WEARY ONE SEEK JESUS.

Mrs. W. P. Fenlason.

Weary one, seek Jesus,
He will comfort give,
Tell him all your heartaches,
He will help you live.
Tell him you are weary,
And that you want rest;
He will gently fold you
To his loving breast.

Tell him you have sorrows,
He had sorrows too;
Put your trust in Jesus
He will guide you through.
If you do your duty
Faithfully each day,
He will safely lead you,
Up the narrow way.

Up beyond all heartaches,
Sorrow is not there,
All is joy and gladness

Where the angels are Singing songs of glory
With the happy throng,
Waving palms of victory
As we march along.

Chorus.

Home, Home, sweet, sweet Home,
With Jesus my Saviour,
For ever at home.

TWO TRAMPS.

By Amy LeFeuvre. A story about a boy named Rollo, and his uncle, who find it necessary to tramp through the country in order to restore perfect health. To Rollo, Christianity is a very real thing. His conversations with his uncle and with the many people that he meets on his travels make an interesting and helpful story. Wherever these two tramps go they scatter sunshine, fresh hope and comfort.

Amy LeFeuvre has long been noted for her purposeful stories and this one is no exception to the many other books that she has written.

Is a clear, concise statement of Modernism, and has been written especially for the information of the common people, who have not the time to read the fuller and more exhaustive treatment of the subject.

The quotations on evolution have been selected with great care from the very best authorities on scientific subjects. What modernism is, is shown from the writings of modernists.

It is commended by such scholars as the noted author and theologian, Leander S. Keyser, editor of "The Bible Champion." Rev. J. W. Goodwin, General Superintendent of the Church of the Nazarene, says of it: "A fearful blow at modernism."

Dr. S. A. Danford says: "You have certainly taken the mask off of modernism."

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topics and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to get at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Price: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

The Gist of the Lesson, 1929

BY R. A. TORREY, D.D.

Fits the Vest Pocket. The Religious Telescope says: "Has proved a blessing to Sunday school teachers and pupils. In addition to the digest of the lessons, comments, etc., it contains attendance record, blank pages for names and addresses, calendar and the Ten Commandments. Price, 35c.

All Denominations Approve Its Use.

No Bible worker or student can afford to be without it. Price, $2.00 Postpaid.

WHO WILL SPEND THE MONEY WHEN YOU ARE GONE?

We have reached an age when a man's value or worth to the world is computed in dollars and cents. This is the way the world weighs a man's worth, but is this God's way of estimating values? God said, "Noah was a just man and perfect (or upright) in his generations, and Noah walked with God." Gen. 6:9. God valued this man as one worth while, because he was just and upright, or perfect. How did Noah reach this exalted and much coveted position in the estimation of Jehovah? Was it not his sacrificing, whole-souled service to God? Yes, it was his GIVING OF HIMSELF AND ALL THAT HE POSSESSED WITHOUT A RESERVATION. He really made a New Testament consecration to God.

Eternal Rewards.

I wonder if we believe in our hearts that our consecration, sacrifices, gifts, and donations to the Lord's work will bring us an eternal reward? How firmly do we believe that a cup of cold water given in his name will not go un-rewarded? Are we thoroughly convinced that with what measure we mete, it shall be measured to us again? If we really are, then why do we not invest more of our money in godly, young men and women, whom God has called into his vineyard—students who are struggling to get an education in one of our holiness schools? Send in some of our Liberty Bonds, they can be used to great advantage. There is no investment in the world that will pay the eternal dividends that an investment in young people will bring. Why not invest where you are sure you are safe and your money will be accruing interest and accumulating a reward for you after you are dead? Thousands of dollars have been lost to the Holiness Movement because some of our people would not obey the Holy Ghost, but put their money in "get-rich-quick" schemes while the work suffers. Scores have invested in oil stock and silver mines, and have lost their money, but no one has ever yet lost, who invested in a godly, sanctified soul, one who is consecrated to the whole will of God. There are several very talented, godly young men and women in our holiness institutions who are struggling to work their way through. If someone would pay $100.00, $50.00, or even $25.00 on their account it would be a great encouragement to their faith, a help to the school, and you would not only be blessed here but rewarded in eternity for the same.

God Dishonored.

If you do not invest your money in God's work, or give to the support of the Lord's cause, who will spend what you have left? Will it be invested in immortal souls and Heaven's Bank Stock, or be squandered by unsaved children or ungodly friends? Will it be used to honor God or dishonor his name and cause? Have you ever stopped to consider how much more you might do for the Lord's cause than you are now doing? What kind of a reward do you think you will receive for the money you have out on mortgages and on interest for your own personal gain while the cause of Christ suffers? If you could assure one soul of Heaven by a gift of $1,000 to a deeply spiritual school would you try to raise that amount? How much are you sacrificing, or are you REALLY sacrificing? Is it not a fact you are living just about as you wish,

ARE YOU BOTHERED WITH TAXES AND INVESTMENT PROBLEMS? WORRY LESS AND LIVE LONGER BY INVESTING IN ASBURY COLLEGE ANNUITY BONDS. SCORES OF OUR FRIENDS ARE INVESTING THEIR CONSECRATED MONEY THIS WAY.

A. E. P., Kentucky, writes, "To persons desiring to give their money to one of God's Holiness institutions I desire to most heartily recommend the annuity bonds of Asbury College. I have invested more than $8000 in this manner and my only regret is that I haven't more to invest. After personal experience I believe this to be one of the best forms of investing consecrated money there is to be found anywhere. We not only receive a good rate of interest while we live and need the income but we have the joy of knowing that after we are gone our money will continue to be in the Lord's work."

without much thought of giving and sacrificing for the Lord's work and lost souls? Why not have a treasure that moths and rust cannot corrupt and thieves cannot break through and steal?

Dead Men's Money.

Do you not know that your investment now will determine your reward in eternity? It's not so much a question of what you would like to do, as it is what you ACTUALLY do. Nor is it a question of how much you give, but how much you have LEFT that will trouble you when you are dying. Don't forget the man in Matt. 25:24-30, who buried his talent, then lost his soul. So many plan to give when they die, but millions of souls are perishing while you wait. If you wait thirty years to give your money, four hundred million souls will have died. When you are dead they will be dead and your opportunity to help them will be gone forever. The dead cannot help the dead. Let us do our best NOW for the living.

Double Value.

Nearly all of the holiness schools are suffering because the holiness people are not standing behind them as they should. They are in great need of money and it is needed now. Anybody can give money after the work is fully established and out of debt, but it takes saints with a burden and a vision of the need to get under things and lift financially when our holiness schools are struggling to get on their feet. A thousand dollars TODAY will perhaps be worth ten thousand dollars in ten years from now. Your gifts will have double value now because they are so much needed, and you will be rewarded accordingly. If you give your money now, you will have the joy and satisfaction of seeing it work for God and souls as long as you live. It will be a great source of pleasure to you as your gift wins thousands, or even hundreds to Christ as a preacher, missionary or Christian worker. Let us put our money to work NOW for God and souls.
