OUR HEARTS ARE PURIFIED BY FAITH.

By The Editor.

YES, John Wesley taught that there is a second work of grace, a distinct and powerful work of the Holy Ghost, subsequent to regeneration, wrought in the believer's heart, sanctifying him from all sin. Any one who teaches you to the contrary is either not posted with regard to the teachings of Mr. Wesley on the subject or is willfully misrepresenting plainly written and positively established facts. Mr. Wesley's diary shows that up to the close of life he was a firm believer in entire sanctification as a second work of grace, nor is there one particle of evidence that he ever changed his views on this subject.

Methodist history, theology, and hymnology are very clear on this subject. Mr. Wesley and his followers insisted that all preachers coming into the conferences should express their faith in Christian perfection and should pledge themselves to groan after the blessed experience until it is obtained. These are plainly written facts. Why should men be constantly denying them? If a man does not believe in the doctrine of entire sanctification subsequent to regeneration, very well. We think he is out of harmony with the Scriptures, but he ought not to contend that this doctrine was not the faith of the early Methodists and, thank God, it is held onto by a great cloud of witnesses not only in the Methodist Church, but in many evangelical churches to this good day.

God unquestionably commands holiness and has made abundant provision for the same in the agonies of the cross; the inspired apostle declares that "the blood of Jesus cleanseth us from all sin." St. Paul says, in Romans 6:18, "Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness." The same chapter, 22nd verse, "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." There can be no question but that the atonement made by Jesus provides for a full deliverance from sin. According to Paul, this is made very plain: "For it pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell; and, having made peace through the blood of his cross, by him to reconcile all things unto himself; by him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven. And you, that were sometime alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works, yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unblameable and unreprouvable in his sight." Col. 1:19-22. Thank God, we may be saved from sin, the guilt of it, the pollution of it, the practice of it, and the love of it. Most people, all I have ever known who claim to be regenerated, were conscious of inward uprisings and emotions of sinful tendency and character, of something the Apostle called, "the carnal mind." Many of them have sought and obtained such a mighty baptism with the Holy Ghost that they were able to say with joy, in the language of the Apostle Peter, "Our hearts were purified by faith." There is no doubt that the average Christian, after regeneration, is conscious of indwelling sin, of a carnal nature, of a root of bitterness, and multitudes have sought and obtained a baptism with the Holy Spirit which has cast out this carnal nature and made them fully whole through Jesus' sanctifying power.

Heart Talks With Young Ministers of the Gospel.

I am glad to know that you are so deeply interested in a revival in your church. So far as preparation is concerned I know of no better way than that you should visit the most spiritual and prayerful people of your church, talk and pray with them very earnestly and get them fully enlisted, burdened with you, for a revival in the church and the salvation of souls. This, you should do, many weeks before the time set for your protracted meetings to begin.

If some dozens of your most godly people are engaged with you with burdened hearts before the Lord, for several months in earnest prayer for a great awakening, it will certainly bear fruit. You should preach several Sunday morning sermons on revivals of religion; their place in the church, the need of them, and what revivals have amounted to and brought to pass, the reasonableness of them, and their place in the economy and progress of the Church of Christ. Bring all of your people to feel friendly to the revival proposition.

Two or three weeks prior to your revival organize a series of cottage prayer meetings. There is nothing better. Distribute them well over the whole territory of your church, and appoint a number of persons to help rally the forces in each one of these prayer-meeting districts. Let them move from house to house, and go to the homes where you are needed most; the homes of your most worldly and inefficient members. It may prove a great blessing to them. Appoint good leaders and break in as much new material as possible. In these prayer meetings have the people give lists of names of those in whose salvation they are especially interested.

As the time for your meeting approaches call together a number of times the teaching force of your Sunday school, talk and pray together, and get each teacher to name the number in their classes who do not give positive evidence of having experienced the regenerating grace of God. Some teachers will hesitate in the discussion of these matters because, unfortunately, some Sunday school teachers have not experienced the new birth. But these conferences for prayer, and the discussion of the spiritual state of the various classes will help every way.

Some days before your meeting begins appoint a publication committee. See that placards are printed, that every member of the church is supplied with neat invitation cards to hand out to their friends. Select someone to keep attractive notices in your town paper, which is read by almost everyone. Appoint special ushers and give the instruction to seat the people well to the front, to place those having babies at the end of pews convenient to exits so they will not be embarrassed in getting out with a crying child. Also have a special committee to give careful attention to the heating and ventilation of the church. It seems to me there is hardly anything more stupid than that a church should be so lighted that there is a painful glare in the eyes of the congregation. That is quite out of the question. You must have a good light on the preacher so the people can easily see his expression, but this light should not dazzle and make their eyeballs ache. Then he must have a good light on the people so the preacher can judge of the effect of his message. It is difficult, almost impossible, to have a good revival with bad ventilation, poor heating arrangements, and interior lights. These may seem to you small details but they are very important, and contribute more to the success of your meeting than you can image.

Before your meeting begins, make a call for personal workers and select the wisest and best of your people who love God well enough, and have enough care for human souls to take time to visit from house to house; to go into stores, shops and offices and speak to individuals with great seriousness, about personal salvation. If at all possible, you should arrange for a number of meetings outside the church to catch the non-church-goers. Have short services at foundries, factories, shops, anywhere and everywhere you can get groups of men together for a short, earnest, direct message.

I have frequently preached for pastors who seemed to put forth very little personal effort during revival meetings. This is a very great mistake. Let me exhort you to make it a point to visit frequently during the revival. You are not likely to have preaching both morning and afternoon, and you should put in half the day calling upon people who most need your presence and exhortation. To call and pray with a family somewhat backslidden or at ease in Zion, is almost certain to produce a good effect.

I believe it is wise and well to have special meetings for children, many of them. Do not hurry them into a profession of religion, but teach and guide them into salvation. Get them soundly regenerated. I think it wise to have special meetings for men only, and several special services for women only. Such meetings bring out persons who otherwise, would not come at all. It certainly should be one of our great objects to reach this very class. As converts begin to multiply, arrange a special service for young converts.

JOHN WESLEY--MISSIONARY AND EVANGELIST.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

John Wesley went to Georgia as a missionary. As such he was a failure and he failed just where many modern Missionaries fail. He had education, he was an Oxford man, he had the very best moral and religious training but he had no vital Christian experience. He says himself: "My chief motive (as a Missionary) is the hope of saving my own soul. I hope to learn the true sense of the Gospel of Christ by preaching it to the heathen . . . I am assured if I be once converted myself God will then employ me both to strengthen my brethren and to preach his name to the Gentiles."

When Wesley arrived at Georgia he went to seek advice of the Moravian pastor. August Spangenberg the pastor was very frank and definite in talking with the man of Oxford. He said "My brother, I must first ask you one or two questions: Have you the witness within yourself? Does the Spirit of God bear witness with your Spirit that you are a child of God? "I was surprised" Wesley says "and knew not what to say. He observed it and asked, "Do you know Jesus Christ?" I paused and said, "I know he is the Saviour of the world." "True," he replied, "but do you know he has saved you? I answered "I hope he died to save me." He only added: "Do you know yourself?" I said "I do." But I fear they were idle words."

Again Wesley the missionary speaks: "I went to America to convert the Indians but O who shall convert me? I left my native country in order to teach the Georgian Indians the nature of Christianity; but what have I learned myself in the meanwhile? Why, what I the least of all suspected; that I who went to America to convert others was never converted to God."

Thus we see Wesley the Missionary was a failure.

Note a few things more about Wesley.

Wesley the child. "I was carefully taught that I could only be saved by universal obedience."

Wesley the school boy. "I still read the Scriptures and say my prayers night and morning."

Wesley at College. "I still said my prayers both in public and private."

Wesley Ordained. "I began to aim at and pray for inward holiness."

Wesley at Holy Club. "I carefully used both in private and public all the means of grace at all opportunities. I could not find that all this gave me any assurance of acceptance with God."

Wesley the Mystic. "A contemplative man recommended mental prayer and the like exercises as the most effectual means of purifying the soul and uniting it with God."

Wesley the Missionary. "All the time I was in Savannah I was thus beating the air."

Wesley the Converted Man. "I felt my heart strangely warmed. I felt I did trust in Christ, Christ alone for salvation and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death."

Wesley the Holiness Preacher: "I have continually testified (for 25 years) that we are sanctified as well as justified by Faith."

John Wesley's conversion was a matter of great perplexity to some of his friends and to some it was an annoyance. One wrote "If you were not a Christian ever since I knew you, you were a great hypocrite, for you made us all believe you were one." Samuel Wesley his brother said his brother was suffering from an attack of enthusiasm, he wrote, "Falling into enthusiasm is being lost with a witness. I pleased myself with the expectation of seeing Jack; but now that

PERSONAL NOTE.

This article was written in snatches right in the heart of the Mission field, preaching twice a day followed with overflowing altar services. We were reading in odd moments Fitchett's great book, "Wesley and his Century," and we saw Wesley as Missionary in a new light. We have no hesitation in saying that Wesley's experience as missionary is reproduced on many a mission field today. There are many sincere people who give themselves to missionary work from the best of motives but their work is totally devoid of success because of the lack in their own souls. We said to a Missionary seeking her pentecost in one of our Chinese revivals that the church expects her missionaries to be people of the deepest and highest type of religious experience, that the work itself demands that all missionaries be men and women of God in the intensest sense. She regretted that in her years of training (she was a college woman) that nothing was taught to them on the matter of soul winning and that no emphasis was laid upon that subject. Imagine physicians being sent to the mission fields with no practical knowledge as to how to handle the diseases of the Orient!

Let me recall in this connection those words of Thurston one of the first missionaries to Hawaii (Thurston was a Yale and Andover man). He said when calling for missionary help in 1822:

"We want men and women who have souls, who are crucified to the world and the world to them, who have their eyes and their hearts fixed on the glory of God, in the salvation of the heathen; who are willing to sacrifice every interest but Christ's; who will cheerfully and constantly labor to promote his cause."

It would be a great day for the foreign mission field if only those were sent out who would conform to this ideal.

is over and I am afraid of it. I heartily pray God to stop the prayers of this lunacy. What Jack means by his not being a Christian till last month I understood not. Is baptism nothing . . . He must be either unbaptized or an apostate to make his word true." (Evidently Brother Samuel believed in baptismal regeneration.)

In the same way some people nowadays view some Christians when they fall into the "enthusiasm" of holiness. They cannot figure it out and therefore they cannot refrain from attributing the whole thing to mistaken notions, to fanaticism or false theology. We have in mind now a Missionary who spent twenty years in the interior of China giving herself up to a life of the most absolute sacrifice and hardship and yet without any conscious salvation. At Bethel Holiness Convention, Shanghai in 1928 she was restored to God's favor and then gloriously and triumphantly sanctified. The change in her life was as great as that of John Wesley's. Her friends both in China and at home have been very much worried about it. Some of them are asking her to withhold her testimony, others think she totally underestimates her previous experience of grace while others are advising her how not to emphasize her experience of Sanctification as perhaps she may not be rightly understood but all the same she goes right on shining, glowing, testifying, burdened with a greater passion for souls and for China's salvation than ever in her whole experience. She is a wonderful exemplification of that verse in which the sanctified soul cries out:

Jesus, full of love divine,
I am thine and thou art mine;
Never shall the altar fire
Kindled on my heart expire.

John Wesley as Evangelist, Revivalist and the great Awakened of the 18th century was all due to his having met God in vital conversion and sanctification of soul.

John Wesley the Man of Oxford and Missionary minus the Holy Ghost was a failure.

John Wesley the Man of Oxford plus the Holy Ghost becomes the great Revivalist and Theologian of modern history.

In the light of these things all of us ministers might well pray with Charles Wesley:

"Come Holy Ghost all quickening fire,
Come and in me delight to rest;
Drawn by the lure of strong desire,
Oh come and consecrate my breast.
The temple of my soul prepare
And fix thy sacred presence there."

The Wesleys, as Evangelists, became desperate in a desperate age. Charles Wesley just before going to his first open air preaching wrote in his diary after Whitefield urged him to take the step: "If I do this I shall break down the breach and become desperate." He did become desperate and preached to "ten thousand helpless sinners waiting for the word in Moorfields." He used as his text: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

In preaching that sermon a surly landowner sued Wesley for trespassing on his field. It cost the Wesleys about $100. A man named William Gaston was the lawyer for the farmer. It will go hard with that farmer and lawyer at the Judgment!

English Deism helped to produce the French Revolution.

The Wesley Revival saved England from a fate perhaps as great as that which befell France.

Fitchett says: "If Wesley had been an English Voltaire corroding all belief with the acid of his wit and distilling the gall of his bitter spirit into the blood of the nation there might have been a Reign of Terror in London as well as in Paris."

Wesley the Evangelist, not Wesley the Scholar, became the great dynamical man of the 18th century.

Just a glimpse or two at Wesley in action as an Evangelist. Here are a few quotations from his Journal:

"At eleven I went into the main street and began speaking to a congregation of two men and two women. These were soon joined by twenty children." [He despised not the day of small things.]

"At seven I walked down to Sandgate, the poorest and most contemptible part of the town and, with John Taylor, began to sing the 100th Psalm . . . I suppose there might be 1200 to 1500 before I finished preaching."

"I never before saw the hand of God so plainly as shown here at Falmouth. I received some blows, lost some of my clothes and was covered over with dirt."

When he was eighty-three Wesley wrote: "I have entered into the eighty-third year of my age. I am a wonder to myself. I am never tired either with preaching, writing or traveling."

Wesley preached his last sermon in the open air October 7, 1790 from the text: "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand, repent and believe the Gospel." "The tears of the people flowed in torrents" said an observer. In 1791 he died: In his old age he closed many services with this verse:

"O that without a lingering groan,
I may the welcome word receive;
My body with my charge lay down,
And cease at once to work and live."

The Vulture's Claw.

By Dr. C. F. Wimberly.

One of his best. A new edition of this great book has just come from the press. It is a universal verdict, that this book has a message individual and pungent. Young people who do not read religious books at all will relish this great mountain story. All books have gone up in price, but Vulture's Claw will continue at the pre-war price, —$1.50—360 pages, and beautifully illustrated by an artist with original scenes taken from the story. AN OPPORTUNE PROPHECY.

THIS prophecy by James touches our times. It has had a partial fulfillment in the past, and is still in process of fulfillment. It is sometimes difficult to say how ripe conditions must be to completely fulfill a given prophecy. In the passage before us some of the characteristics of the last days are given, and while we would not deny that the prophecy may admit of a larger development we have no right to say that it is not sufficiently fulfilled to be a witness of the coming of the Lord.

Many excellent books have gone forth from the press in the last few years upon economic and industrial questions. Some of these would have been still better had they been written in the light of the fifth chapter of James. We rejoice that a few of our greatest capitalists recognize the stewardship of wealth, and act upon the conviction that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." But we fear the majority are included in the photographic picture of our times given by the Apostle James. Here we have:

1. An Avaricious Hoarding of Earthly Treasure. Vs. 1-3.

"Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days."

There have always been rich people in the world and stingy people too, but there has never been such a heaping up of treasure as in these latter days of the gospel age. Abraham Lincoln said: "A time is coming which alarms and unnerves me—when all the wealth will be in the hands of the few. I have more anxiety for my country now than during the war." How true a vision, and in what complete harmony with the words of James! Just before the Civil War there were only eight millionaires in this country; today they are numbered by the thousands. Then there was only one millionaire in the senate; now there are close to forty. The wealth of the country is increasing by millions of dollars a day: and it is being controlled by the great trust-companies. No less an authority than Chauncey Depew stated a few years ago that fifty men control the finances of this country. In Lincoln's day the laboring man owned more than fifty per cent of the wealth of the country; now it is a much smaller percent. The honorary pallbearers at the funeral of Mr. Spencer, the railroad magnate, represented one third of the wealth of the U. S. A. During the Great World War fortunes were made in a day. The accumulation of heaped up treasure in the hands of the few has now become world-wide because of the international ramifications of business.

There is no use denying, in the face of stern facts, that there is an avaricious hoarding of money. In their desire to be rich or to get rich quick, men have left God out of the account. They have "heaped treasure together for the last days." Instead of saying, "If the Lord will, we shall live, and do this, or that" (Jas. 4:15), they go ahead with their own plans, with their godless secularism. They are like the rich fool of whom we read in the twelfth chapter of Luke.

"But God said unto him, Fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."

2. Injustice and Oppression. V. 4.

"Behold, the hire of the laborers who mowed your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth out: and the cries of them that reaped have entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth."

The greed for gain has led to injustice and oppression. The sin of human selfishness is back of the graft. We see that the treasure has been heaped up by robbing labor, and we understand why in the second verse the treasure is said to be "corrupted," "cankered," or "rusted." If James were living now he might speak of "tainted" money. No matter how it may be secured, industry must have money.

Money! Money! Money!

Hustle day and night—

Toil and save

And scrimp and shave

And scheme with all our might."

And so it goes. Every newspaper tells the story of oppression and extortion. Much of it is kept out of the papers, but God is not an indifferent spectator and the cries of the oppressed reach his ears.

In some ways conditions are better than a few years ago, but the spirit and trend of the age remains the same. This spirit has been marked throughout the whole period designated in Scripture as "The Time of the End." Slavery has been abolished from the U. S. A., but everything indicates that injustice will continue to mark the age till the Great Emancipator shall "proclaim liberty to the captives and the opening of prison doors to them that are bound" (Isa. 61:1). The covetous rapacity of unprincipled capitalists is set forth in these satirical lines:

"Let us corner up the sunbeams

Lying all around our path,

Get a trust on wheat and roses,

Give the poor the thorns and chaff;

Let us find our chiefest pleasure

Hoarding bounties of today;

So the poor will have scant measure,

And two prices have to pay."

We are not trying to discuss the question of Capital and Labor. We are simply making suggestions helpful in a more exhaustive study of the passage before us. We notice that over against heaped-up treasure there is defrauded labor; over against immense riches there is intense poverty. It is capital on one side and labor on the other; money on one side and muscle on the other; pomp on one side and poverty on the other; stately on one side and starving on the other; fame on one side and famishing on the other; greed on one side and groans on the other. How true is this of our times! Is it not an indication that the gospel age is drawing to a close?

3. Self-Indulgence and Luxurious Extravagance. V. 5.

"Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter."

Albert Barnes makes this comment: "The meaning is that they appear to be fattening themselves, like stall-fed beasts, for the day of slaughter. . . . They do not work; they contribute nothing to the good of society; they are mere consumers."

When the apostle James speaks of avaricious hoarding we can imagine him looking down upon one of the scenes in our Stock Exchange; when he speaks of injustice and oppression we can see him looking down upon the sweat-shops of our manufacturing cities; when he speaks of high living we can imagine him watching the carnival of pleasure at a big society banquet. Not only are vast treasures heaped together by robbing the deserving producer of his "hire" but the money thus secured is used for gluttonous gratification. The needy poor may starve; but the social functions of the rich, with their shameful accessories, must go on. Innocent children may die of want, or grow up in ignorance; but monkey dinners must be served by the rich, and costly funerals held for worthless poodles. Tens of thousands of dollars are spent every night in our cities upon sensual indulgences among the rich. What must our Heavenly Father see as he looks down from yonder throne of heavenly light? Social conditions today constitute a sign of the coming of the Lord.

4. The Christian's Attitude in view of these Things. Vs. 6-12.

"Be patient therefore."

Patience is a much needed grace. It is essential to our steadfastness in the faith. It is especially needed under trying circumstances. When revenge boils in the blood, and envy would rule the life, then there is a call for the exercise of patience. God has said: "Vengeance is mine." We are not to take the matter into our own hands.

Nature teaches us the need of patience. James calls to our attention the fact that the farmer patiently waits for the day of harvest. Impatience will not hasten the harvest time. In harmony with the illustration used by James, the Apostle Paul writes, "Let us not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

The patriarch Job is also cited as an illustration of the need and practice of the virtue of patience. We are to take "the prophets" as an example of being patient under persecution and in suffering. Verse 6 reminds us of the example of our blessed Saviour, who was of all men patient under provocation. "Ye have condemned, ye have killed the righteous; he doth not resist you." The apostle would seem to say to the suffering ones, whose wrongs he has already mentioned: "Follow in the footsteps of your Master. The patience which you are expected to manifest was shown by him who stood amid the shame and suffering of the judgment hall and the cruel cross of Calvary. He was unresisting. He was patient. Consider him."

The Christian's attitude is that of trust. If time does not right all things, eternity will. Be patient. Luther saw in the exhortation of verse 12, "Swear not . . . by any oath" an expressed desire of God that his people stand aloof from all oath-bound organizations. They are to possess their souls in patience even though they suffer because of the strikes and the defrauders. The Christian's weapons are spiritual and not carnal.

The little girl didn't give a bad idea of patience: "It means, Bide a wee and dinna weary." Do not hastily judge that God has forgotten you. "Men ought always to pray and not to faint." "Why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God; for I shall yet praise him, who is the health of my countenance and my God."

5. The Great Incentive to Patience. Vs. 7, 8, 9.

"The coming of the Lord draweth nigh." "The Judge standeth before the door."

The coming of the Lord! It means the righting of all our wrongs. It means the payment of the long-deferred hire. It means just punishment to all oppressors and workers of iniquity. It means the vindication of the Divine character. It means the eternal reign of right. The Judge is at the door. "Be ye therefore patient, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord."

The coming of the Lord! His coming is not only the remedy for suffering and wrong; it is also the great incentive to patience under suffering and wrong. There can be no greater incentive. He is coming.

"He's faithful that hath promised; he'll surely come again."

APPROPRIATING THE UNIVERSE.

Rev. W. M. Young, D. D.

"For all things are yours; whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come, all are yours; and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's."—1 Cor. 3:21, 22.

THE world is God's magnificent gift to us. In the beginning God ordained that man should have "dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth on the earth." But sin fettered his body, mind, and spirit in such a way that he was hindered from entering into his rich possessions, and thousands of years elapsed before man obtained education and wisdom and spiritual insight enough to appreciate in any large way his inheritance.

When the fulness of time was come Jesus Christ came preaching and teaching the supremacy of the spiritual; with his pierced hands he lifted the doors of wisdom and knowledge and power from their hinges, and rent the veil of the temple in twain, so that man might enter into all his inheritance and get a large and true conception of his privileges and destiny. For this reason, the Christian nations have been the first to subdue the earth by education, and science, and invention. Christian intelligence alone has proved competent to unlock the treasures of earth and air and ocean.

ENJOYING WHAT WE APPROPRIATE.

However great God's gifts to us, we can enjoy only that which in some way we can use or appropriate. What use could an animalcule make of a mansion? It can live its little life on the wing of a housefly; to it a dewdrop is a shoreless ocean. What enjoyment can a grasshopper get out of a palace? To him a sunflower is a botanical garden, and a blade of grass a sumptuous feast. If you could own the whole world, you could enjoy only that which in some sense you could use or appropriate. There are people who are wearing themselves out to get more possessions, and yet they are getting but little out of what they now possess. They fail to enjoy that to which they have legal title. Which of us enjoys all that he has?

"ALL THINGS ARE YOURS."

Appropriation and use may be larger or smaller than legal title. A man gets a deed to a piece of property; it may be an acre or a thousand; he fences it off, and calls it his own. But who can use the produce of a thousand acres? Can a man conserve the beauty of the field and the forest to feast his own eyes alone? Can a man inhale all the perfume of the Orient? The tramp by the wayside may share in the beauty and fragrance of the rich man's possessions. Rich men hold the deeds and pay the taxes for God's forest, field, and lake, but his children smell the perfume of his flowers, and the balm of his forest, and the ozone of his ocean. As God's children we may appropriate the oxygen of the air, the fragrance of the earth, and the sublimity of the heavens, for God says: "All things are yours."

CLEON'S POSSESSIONS.

Cleon hath a million acres, not a one have I:
Cleon dwelleth in a palace, in a cottage I;
Cleon hath a dozen fortunes, not a penny I;
Yet the poorer of the twain is Cleon, and not I.

Cleon, true, possesses acres, but the landscape I;
Half the charm to me it yieldeth money cannot buy;
Cleon harbours sloth and dulness, freshening vigor I;
He in velvet, I in fustian, richer man am I.

Cleon is a slave to grandeur, free as thought am I;
Cleon fees a score of doctors, need of none have I;
Wealth-surrounded, care-environed, Cleon fears to die;
Death may come, he'll find me ready, happier man am I.

Cleon sees no charm in nature, in a daisy I;
Cleon hears no anthems ringing in the sea and sky;
Nature sings to me forever, earnest listener I;
State for state, with all attendants, who would change? Not I.

—Charles Mackey, in Home The Saviour of Civilization, by McCullough.

POSSESSION OFTEN ONLY PHANTOM GOLD.

Daniel Guggenheim and J. Pierpont Morgan tried to get possession of the coal, and copper, and gold, the salmon fisheries, the steamship lines, and the facilities of Alaska, it was alleged. But they could not eat all the fish in the Pacific, nor burn all the coal, nor appropriate all the wealth of Alaska.

A little later, J. Pierpont Morgan starved to death in Italy; his digestion refused to act, and all his wealth could not nourish his starving body. His faith in God expressed in his last will and testament was worth more to him than all his worldly possessions; he said: "I commit my soul into the hands of my Savior, in full confidence that having redeemed it with his most precious blood he will present it faultless before the throne of my heavenly Father; and I entreat my children to maintain and defend, at all hazards, and at any cost of personal sacrifice, the blessed doctrine of the complete atonement for sin through the blood of Jesus Christ, once offered, and through him alone." He left millions of dollars to his son, but that dying testimony was worth more than all he had.

DANGER OF SCIENCE WITHOUT RELIGION.

Education and religion help us to appropriate that which God has provided for us, but more than ever in the history of the world do men need spiritual insight. The scientific discoveries and the forces which have recently been put within our possession, have increased man's responsibility more than ever. The old dykes of holy law and reverent custom have been broken away, and we are in danger of being swallowed up with a deluge of materialism and love of pleasure. The airplane and the automobile have become engines of war. Material progress has been going so fast that civilization is liable to tumble into a sunken road, like Napoleon's army.

EDUCATION AND RELIGION.

We have great enthusiasm for education in the United States. We believe that educated people get more out of life than others. The geologist gets more out of the rocks than the quarryman. The botanist sees more in the flowers than the plowboy, for he has a trained mind. The astronomer sees more in the starry heavens than the stargazer. Educated people read histories in rocks, philosophies in trilobites, infinities in stars, "tongues in trees, books in running brooks, sermons in stones, and good in everything." But religion must be added to education to make it complete. You go into a modern safety-vault of a bank where private parties keep safety-boxes, and you find that it takes two keys to open them. The patron puts in his key and turns the lock half way, and then the banker puts in his Master-key and opens the box of valuables. It is so with education and the new birth. Education is the private key that opens the box part way, but it requires God's Master-key of the new birth to open the door to his treasures. "Learning must be kindled by the torch of inspiration." The world's seers were those whose eyes first God opened. The eye that is enlightened by the Spirit of God can see more of earth than the microscope reveals and more of the heavens than the telescope discovers. The mind that is enlightened by the Holy Spirit sees God.

"Enthroned amid the radiant spheres,
He glory like a garment wears;
To form a robe of light divine,
Ten thousand suns around him shine."

REGENERATION IS THE DOOR TO THE SPIRITUAL UNIVERSE.

Chesterton, the English journalist, says: "The supreme adventure is not falling in love. The supreme adventure is being born. There do we suddenly walk into a splendid and startling trap. There do we see something we had not dreamed before. Our father and mother do lie in wait for us and leap out on us, like brigands from a bush. Our uncle is a surprise. Our aunt is, in the beautiful, common expression, a bolt out of the blue." Our natural birth makes us capable of enjoying the glories of the natural world: our spiritual birth makes us capable of enjoying a great spiritual world of light and glory.

The little larvae goes into the cocoon state, and is born anew. The little creature might have remained in the caterpillar state and died without taking on the new form. He might have gone on groping amid the darkness of earth with little of sight or feeling, subject to the dangers of his lowly state; but, by the new birth he became a beautiful butterfly; he put on the colors of the rainbow and gained the power to fly away over fields of living green and suck the nectar of the flowers amid the wonders of light and air and celestial frame. It is only by way of the new birth that man can come to his best. Without the new birth, his horizon will be circumscribed, his feeling will be benumbed, his hearing will be dull, and his sight will be dim. If you would share the great world of light and life and joy, and make the most of life, "Ye must be born again."

FAITH SAVES FROM MATERIALISM.

The four-footed animals with two feet in the air and two in the dirt, discontented, and roving over the world seeking self-gratification, will one day find a melon that will surfeit him to extinction. Attila the Hun drowned himself inward with honey-water on his wedding day. Alexander the Conqueror died after he had conquered the world during a spell of dissipation. Men who walk in the quagmire of unbelief and materialism are doomed to small enjoyment in this life and the life to come. Education needs a spiritual uplift and outlook. Without divine inspiration science will run into materialism and militarism. Germany was a nation of scholars with only one percent of illiteracy in her armies, but ran amuck in materialism and militarism.

It is a stupendous mistake to invest all one's powers of mind and body, heart and brain, culture and friendship, influence and wealth, in this world only. It will not pay while it lasts, and it will not last long. Why spend one's life adorning a vessel of clay which is soon to be broken and crumble to dust? The life that does not invest in spiritual values is a failure.

BY FAITH MEN APPROPRIATE THE UNIVERSE.

"Without faith it is impossible to please God." But, more than that, without faith it is impossible to make the most of life and appropriate all that God has for you. Unbelief never inspired a great inventor or discoverer. It is not disbelief, but the overplus of belief that leads men to discover new principles in science and invention. There were thousands of men who disbelieved the theory of Copernicus, that the earth is round, but Columbus believed it, and, acting upon his faith, he discovered a new world. The man who smothers his faith is like the man who puts out his light at midnight. If blind Bartimeus had smothered his faith, he never would have seen this beautiful world nor the face of his Saviour incarnate. You might as well try to explain the beauties of a peach orchard in bloom to an Esquimaux or a Rocky Mountain scene to a blind man, as to try to describe the mysteries of faith to a man devoid of faith. The degree of your faith will limit the bounds of your world. "Have faith in God."

WEALTH OF GOD'S CHILDREN.

The soul that is the storehouse of the knowledge and love of God cannot be robbed by burglar or thief. When the Roman Emperor threatened Chrysostom with banishment if he continued to be a Christian, Chrysostom said: "You cannot banish me, for the world is my Father's house, and you cannot banish me from that." "I will slay you," said the Emperor. "That you cannot do, for my life is hid with Christ in God. 'I will take away your treasure.' 'That is impossible, for my treasure is in heaven.' 'I will drive you from men, and you will not have a friend left.' 'Nay, you cannot, for I have a Friend in heaven, from whom you cannot possibly separate me.'" Chrysostom had learned the secret of an opulent Christian faith. He had entered into the kingdom of God and appropriated the universe; he knew what Paul means by saying, "All is yours: and ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's."

FIRE FROM THE BURNING BUSH.

The great flambeaux of earth are lighted in the Sun of Righteousness. Moses was educated in the court of Pharaoh, but he never set the world on fire till he drew near to God's burning bush. Saul was still caring for his father's asses till the Spirit of God came upon him, and then he went up among the prophets and became a king.

JUST A SUGGESTION!

Many are wanting a safe place to invest their money where moth and rust cannot corrupt, and where it will prove a blessing to others.

The Students' Loan Fund of Asbury Theological Seminary which provides for the education of young men preparing for the ministry, would be a safe and wise investment.

There are those who want their sacred tithe to bear fruit in the salvation of souls.

Why not help to educate Spirit-filled young men who, perhaps, after you shall have quit the walks of life, will be seeking God's lost sheep on the mountains of sin.

Could you do better with the money God has entrusted with you than to assist in preparing young men to preach his uttermost salvation to the world he came to redeem?

Had you ever thought that the only way to "lay up treasures in heaven" is to invest your treasures here in immortal souls?

Think on these things!

Mrs. H. C. Morrison, care Pentecostal Herald, Louisville, Ky.

David found God among the sheepcotes, and then he sang himself into the king's palace and changed the scattered tribes of Israel into a great nation. After Isaiah's lips were touched with a live coal from off God's altar, he set the world agog with the gospel of the coming Christ. Saul of Tarsus was educated at the feet of Gamaliel, but he was a negative personality till he saw a vision of Christ and was baptized with the Holy Ghost, and then he turned the world upside down, and carried the gospel far hence to the Gentiles.

THE SLACKER'S MOTTO.

Some years ago I was asked to preach the baccalaureate sermon to a graduating class, which had on the invitation cards a German motto, which evidently was intended to read: "Heute abend wir schleudern, we werden wir ankern?" (This evening we launch, where shall we anchor?) But, by some mistake, the card actually read: "Heute abend wir schlendern, we werden wir ankern?" (This evening we saunter, or lounge, where shall we anchor?) It will make a great difference whether we lounge in the face of our opportunities or launch out by faith in the promises of God to conquer the world and self. If we lounge, we shall anchor in the Dead Sea of Oblivion, but if we launch out by faith in God, we shall anchor in the heavenly harbor by and by.

STUDENTS SHOULD SACRIFICE TO GET KNOWLEDGE.

Agonize to enter in at the strait gate of knowledge as well as righteousness. Rittenhouse studied astronomy, making the diagrams on his plow handles. Lincoln studied law by the light of the kitchen fire. Burke read "Look on the Understanding" in a tallow chandler's shop where he had light. Jeremy Taylor, the son of a barber, was at his shears when the heavenly vision fell upon him. Elihu Burrett studied language at the blacksmith's forge, and finally mastered eighteen languages and dialects. William Carey studied foreign missions at the cobbler's bench, and went out to India as a missionary. He finally became professor of oriental languages in Forth William College, and succeeded in translating the Bible into twenty-four languages and dialects in India. No man should ever consider himself too old to learn. Michael Angelo created the device of an old man sitting in a gocart with an hour glass bearing the motto: "Anchor Impare," still I am learning.

STRIVE TO ENTER INTO FELLOWSHIP WITH GOD.

To know things is good, but to know God is better. Paul was getting out into a large world when he cried: "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death." Phil. 3:10.

"In as Much, . . ."

Send THE HERALD one year to some one in prison or hospital and pray that it may prove a blessing.

Recent Literature on Evolution.

REV. PERCY F. ASHER, B.D.

ONE is almost led to believe that there is an attempt at humour in the much-quoted statement of Francis Bacon to the effect that, "Of the making of books there is no end." For some of us certainly are impressed with the perennial truth of his observation as we watch our waste-paper baskets flow of books from the press dealing with the subject of Evolution. Some of us cannot but help wonder what would be the condition of the world in five or ten years from now, if all the presses which are grinding out paraphernalia about Evolution and "missing links" were instead, turning out the like quantity of copies of the only guide to faith and God—"The Holy Bible."

This fact is impressed upon my mind as I find resting on my study table two books, very recently from the press, which have been sent to me for perusal by the authorities of the local Public Library. Both of them deal with the matter of public interest and discussion, viz., "Evolution," but each author is diametrically opposed to the views of the other. A few quotations from both books will convince the reader as to this.

The first volume to which we will give brief attention is that by John Langdon-Davies and is entitled, "The New Age of Faith." I regret to state that the contents are not worthy of such an exalted title. There is not space here to discuss this book at any great length so we will turn to the chapter entitled, "The plain truth about evolution." In referring to the "Missing Links" (how many links are there missing we would like to know; originally we generally heard about "the missing link." The plural form is now used, "missing links." Why?) the writer says:

"When Darwin wrote the Descent of Man he had practically no evidence of human fossils upon which he could work, no sub-human forms had been discovered to lessen the distance between man and his nearest relatives, the apes. Since Darwin, his work, and theories have been corroborated by the discovery of several such links."

"First, there is the famous skull of the Java ape-man, Pithecanthropus Erectus, as he has been called. The remains are of a being who lived half a million years ago and walked upright; he had a brain two-thirds that of man and he was very low-browed; he was not our direct ancestor but a distant uncle, sub-human, yet higher than the apes and a link, though not a direct one between the two."

"Next there is the Heidelberg man who lived rather more than three hundred thousand years ago. . . . The absolute certainty that the remains are human is based on the form of the teeth."

"Besides these there are numbers of other remains. . . . Their combined testimony is as strong or stronger than that already given of the evolution of the horse, and there can be no reason at all for excluding man from the general theory of common descent."

So much then for the "plain truth about evolution" according to Mr. Davies. One thing is very clear. Here is another apostle of Mr. H. G. Wells, endowed not only with his leader's imagination, but also with an unwarranted dogmatism.

Now let us turn our attention to the second volume. The author is the one and only Mr. G. K. Chesterton, and the title of the book is, "The Everlasting man." It takes Mr. Chesterton only a short while to dispose of the theories of Evolution in the opening chapters of this brilliant work. In the chap-

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XI.

A SUPREME SURRENDER.

OUND until the rawhide thongs almost cut into the flesh, Huston lay in his tent with a sentinel tramping in front of same, looking gloomily into the future.

The troopers having ridden hard through the day, and fought at the setting of the sun, tired and exhausted, ate their meager rations and were soon wrapped in their blankets and sound asleep around their smoldering camp fires. Huston was left in the deep silence to thoughtful meditation. His brief life, with its several chapters, passed rapidly before him. He saw his parents again in the simplicity of their Christian character, their death, with his promises to his mother, his conversion, his profound conviction that he was called to preach, and how that conviction had grown and rooted itself through the years, his first love affair with Annie Gray, its tragic ending, the doubts that had crowded his mind, his flight for the West, the good fortune that had opened hopeful doors, the meeting with Ida Benson, the love affair, the engagement, the trip into Mexico, the remarkable success at the little gold mine, and now the tragic ending of it all in the morning at sunrise.

He turned with the warming of his heart to the incident of the wounded and dying cowboy, and how his faith had come back to him and how since that time he had lived a Christian and realized an experience of peace with God in his heart. There had only been one question, and from this he constantly turned away. The thought of becoming a preacher of the gospel had come up to him again and again, but as often he had thrust it aside as a mere boy fancy; now it looked him square in the face and his heart throbbed and pounded in his breast, and he realized that selfish ambition had come to him, with his new love affair, and that he had not wanted to submit to the will of God, if that submission meant he must preach the gospel.

The girl he loved, and whose heart he had won, had turned down wealth and high social position for him, and he found that he had a growing ambition to give her wealth and a position in society equal to that she had surrendered for him.

I shall not stop to philosophize here what a powerful influence is exercised over men by women; an under-surface influence, something unseen and unknown by the public, and frequently scarcely admitted by the men themselves; and yet, from boyhood men's lives and ambitions are wonderfully influenced by the women with whom they are associated and, especially, by the woman they love.

Huston meditated: Am I to die in the morning at sunrise? Is this short life to be brought so suddenly to an end? Is the heart of the beautiful girl I love to be broken? Are the air-castles I have been building never to go into permanent material? He shuddered at the thought! And then he prayed. He begged God to save his life; then he asked himself if he had a right to ask God to save a life which he had refused to consecrate to God? He saw the inconsistency of his prayer. Would it not be best to offer his life to God if he had any use for it? If it was worth saving in order that it might be invested in the service of the Saviour.

He meditated. The minutes passed. He thought deeply. Would it not be better to commit himself entirely into the hands of the All-wise? Could he not afford to take the risk of letting the God have him who had loved him well enough to redeem him with his own Son? Would he not be safe in the hands, and under the direction and control of that all-wise and all-merciful Being who could direct all things to the best possible results, both for this life and that which is to come?

There came to him a profound feeling that there was one of two things before him: a complete committal, an entire consecration of himself with all his future, to his Maker and Redeemer, or the facing of a firing squad in the morning at sunrise. Possibly, both! It may be that he can make the consecration, commit himself for all time and eternity to his God, a consecration complete, without reserve or question, and face the firing squad.

But would it not be an excellent condition of mind and heart to become a target if the worst must be, in a state of complete surrender of his own will to the divine will, and the consecration of his entire being to the divine purpose, whatever that might be—life or death, firing squad or gospel ministry.

He made up his mind, and murmured out an earnest prayer: "Merciful God, if thou wilt spare my life, I will devote all of my energies to the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ. I pledge thee, whatever opposition I may meet, or whatever inducements or hindrances that may be offered, if my life is spared I will at once begin preparation for the ministry and give all of my life to the preaching of the gospel. If thou dost not choose to save my life and use me as a witness for Christ, then save my soul, have mercy on those I love, and help me to meet my fate with a brave, strong heart in Jesus' name."

A great relief and peace came into Huston's mind. He stretched himself as best he could and tried to arrange his body as comfortably as possible for sleep. He dozed, but dreamed and started, wondered where he was, recognized the situation, meditated and prayed again.

Huston did not know that Moreno, dressed in the dead soldier's uniform, and with the arms of the same soldier on him, had attended his trial, was perfectly acquainted with all of the conditions, had stolen out of camp after dark, notified Tom Goodson, and had him secure their horses and bring them up within half a mile of the encampment. Moreno had returned and, when the guard was changed at 1 o'clock, he walked up and took the place in front of the tent, just before the sentry who was sent up by the officer, to relieve the guard on duty.

When the regular sentry came up Moreno told him some mistake had been made; advised him to lie down under some bushes and take a nap, which he gladly did. At once, Moreno slipped into the tent, cut the thongs that bound the prisoner, directed him to slip out at the rear end of the tent, told him where the horses were in waiting, and that he would soon follow.

He tarried some fifteen minutes until the regular sentry had fallen into a deep sleep, then went over and shook him, asked him if he intended to sleep all night, told him a mistake had been made, and that he had better come at once on guard duty before the tent.

When the soldier had mounted guard, he strolled quietly away into the dark, followed Huston rapidly; they soon met Tom Goodson with the horses, mounted and galloped away to their mining camp, went into their cave, secured their treasure, some food for their horses, provisions for themselves, crossed the spur of the mountain, and got their bearings by a compass with a flashlight, and rode away as rapidly as possible toward the American border. By sunup they were many miles from the camp where Huston was to have been shot, and Huston, choking with emotion, told his rescuers that all the plans he had formed had been shattered and now he had the one great purpose in life, and that was to answer the call that had come to him in his boyhood, had haunted him over the plains, had been tremendously re-enforced by the old colored woman in their cowboy camp, and had been settled forever that night in the little tent while he waited the firing squad which he did not face the next morning at sunrise.

Huston's heart was overflowing with a great gratitude, and through the coming days as they rode toward the American border, he talked but little, but thought deeply and gladly of his plans for the future. They were very grateful when they crossed the border into New Mexico and steered their course to El Paso, Texas, where they arrived in due time, exchanged their gold for currency, which they deposited in bank, sold their horses and firearms, bought citizens' clothing and took the train for Fort Worth, where they received a glad reception, and told to thrilling hearts the story of their adventure. Huston, in confidence, told Ida Benson if she married him she must do so with the distinct understanding that she was becoming the wife of a minister of the gospel. She greeted this information with joy, told him it had been her conviction from their first acquaintance, that he was destined to be a preacher and, that since their engagement to be married, it had been her earnest prayer that he might become a Spirit-filled herald of the Cross.

He'll keep his tryst wi' me; at what hour I dinna ken.
But he bids me still to wait an' ready aye to be
To gang at any moment to my ain countree.

For the soun'ing' o' his footfa, this side the shinin' gate.
God gie his grace to ilk ane wha listens noo to me

Note. A one-sided view of a great subject is presented above. What has not been said about the workingman ought to be included to balance the subject. Perhaps something along this line may be presented later.

Delay Perilous.

If you delay presenting the sacrifice, from any cause whatever, you make food for repentance. God demands present holiness. Every earthly consideration dwindles into insignificance in comparison with this. Resolve, beloved, from this moment, that this command of your God shall be met. Say to every minor object, "Let the dead bury their dead." Remember, the offering must touch the altar before it can be sanctified. This is God's unalterable decree. With him there is neither variableness nor shadow of turning. The act, on your part, must necessarily induce the promised result on the part of God. But do not forget that all is not laid upon the altar, until that will that requires signs and wonders preparatory to believing is also resigned. This seems to be the last point about which the heart lingers. Trust the matter with God, and he will give you just the amount and kind of emotion that will best fit you to glorify his exalted name; and this is all that you are now to live for. Your God is now saying to you, "Bring all the tithes into the store-house, and prove me herewith."

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

MRS. E. STANLEY JONES' LETTER.

Dear Fellow Workers:

I have been re-reading some of the lovely letters that have come the last few weeks and wishing with all my heart that I could write a special letter of thanks to each of you for the Christmas greetings, the personal gifts, the gifts for boys and the scholarships for boys. How it warms our hearts to feel that you are standing back of us in this work!

Dozens of letters in Hindi and Urdu are on my table, written by boys who want to send their thanks to those who have remembered them. I am trying my best to get a stenographer for a week or so who can translate them, or write them as I translate, but there seems to be no one available.

Christmas was a happy time for the boys. Their gifts were useful—mostly things to wear or use; but they were very happy over them. Pencil boxes, tablets, shirts, coats and blankets were their special joys.

I am so thankful that many friends added a little for the boys who might get nothing. Because of these extra gifts every child got something. And then they had a glorious pillau dinner. Pillau is made by cooking little chunks of meat with rice and plenty of clarified butter and spices. How they did eat! One new little boy patted his little tummy with great satisfaction and said, "It never felt like this before."

Early Christmas the older boys came to the bungalow to sing Christmas carols. Then, after gift giving, we all went to church. The room was beautifully decorated with potted crotons, poinsettia and palm leaves. In the afternoon all the Christians of Sitapur gathered on an open lawn in front of our bungalow for games. Towards evening we sang hymns and had prayer and then each one was given a piece of Indian candy and some fruit as he left for home.

Eunice and I were not happy to have the other member of our trio still absent in America. We feel that as a family, we are paying rather a big price. Still, it is for him who gave all.

During Christmas week, Dr. Belle Allen, of the Mission Hospital at Ludhiana and Miss D. W. Caffray, who has been spending a year in India in evangelistic work, were our guests. It was a joy to have these dear, helpful friends with us.

Miss Caffray held a series of meetings in the church which greatly helped our Christians. I think we sometimes take too much for granted. Being baptized and a member of the church does not always mean that one has a heart experience.

After one of the meetings, a young woman who was baptized after she had reached womanhood, said to me, "As a girl, I went on long pilgrimages with my parents and worshipped in many temples, hunting for God. Then, I fasted and prayed and worshipped my idols, always hoping God would reveal himself to me. Because someone told me that in Christianity I would find peace and happiness, and lose that fear that was always in my heart, I became a Christian. But my heart always stayed hungry and I said, 'I have only changed Gods.' But a new light has come to me! The next day she ran to me, her face all aglow. "Oh," she said, 'Christ is different from the other gods. He came into my heart last night and I am not afraid of anything. There is such peace and happiness! Oh, I did not know Christ was like this.'

She went to her village for Christmas and when she returned I saw that she had a new shawl. When I remarked about it she said, "I went home because I wanted to tell all the people what Jesus had done for me. And one day when I was telling some women about it an old Mohammedan woman went into the house and brought out this shawl. She put it around me and said, 'This is because your words have brought me the first hope or comfort I have ever known.'

This woman has never had a chance to learn to read but I am letting her go to school and pick up what she can, in any way that she can. She sits on the floor with the boys and gets them to help her, and follows the teachers around after school asking them things.

Last week the old orthodox mother of one of our Mohammedan Officials, came to see me with several of her daughters and grand-daughters. As we had tea together she said, "This is the first time we have ever eaten with Christians. I don't know what our relatives would say." A little later as they were getting into the carriage all covered up with huge sheets so no man could get a glimpse of them, she turned to me and said, "I want to tell you something. This is the first time in all my life that I have ever been in a home not my own." How one's heart goes out to these dear women! Recently I was at dinner with two highly educated Indian men. One of them—a doctor—said, "We do not put our women in purdah (shut them up) until they are about eleven." The other replied, "Our family would consider that cruel. We put our girls in purdah when they are five or six. It is the bird that has known freedom that frets and is unhappy when put in a cage."

A friend in a recent letter wonders why I spoke once of the Indian boy finding it hard at first to have women as teachers. She says, "I thought most teachers were women." Not in India! There is little mixing of the sexes here. Until I started this school and tried having women teachers for the little boys, such a thing as having a woman teach in a boys' school was unheard of. There are always separate schools for boys and girls and all boys' schools, Christian and non-christian, were run and taught by men. This school of mine is the only Christian school for boys in two large districts numbering over two millions of people. We have a Boarding School for girls, under the W. F. M. S. on the other side of the road in charge of Miss Haberman of Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Titus also live here and are in charge of the evangelistic work of the two districts, a job big enough for a force of several missionaries!

Mr. Jones is still in America. He was to sail in February but because of the pressure that has been brought to bear on him, he is now waiting until after Easter. We trust it is the will of our Father, as well as that of the Mission Board and insistent churches.

As I think of each one to whom I send this letter, I pray that the New Year will be one of blessing to you, and "that ye may stand perfect and complete in all the will of God."

Yours in United Service,

Mabel L. Jones.

NEW CASTLE, PENNSYLVANIA.

We have just closed out a good meeting at the First Free Methodist Church, New Castle, Pa. We held there for three weeks and can say that God was with us from start to finish. A goodly number prayed through, backsliders were reclaimed, believers were sanctified, and the church was built up. We found Bro. Whitford, the pastor, a fine co-laborer, while his consecrated wife was ever ready in the services to do her best, and in the home was untiring in administering to our comfort. The church prayed, believed, shouted, paid, and saw results. One thing there that commended itself to us was the continuous prayer. Time was divided off into half hour periods and from half past five in the morning till seven at evening some one was in prayer. Small wonder such a church sees results. We had a fine time with them and believe that they have a great future as a holiness body.

H. P. Thomas.

HUNTINGTON, WEST VIRGINIA.

It has been sometime since I have reported a meeting to The Herald. I have been awful busy. My first meeting after Christmas was with Rev. R. L. Hall, pastor of Jefferson Ave., M. E. Church, Huntington, W. Va. We began Dec. 30. It was a hard pull at first, but we held on to the Lord in prayer until he answered by fire. Something like sixty prayed through to victory either for pardon, or reclamation or sanctification. Some services the power of God fell in a marvelous way. The pastor was sick most of the time and was not able to be with us. The responsibility fell on the writer.

Rev. H. E. Crowder led the singing to the delight of the people. He endeared himself to the people of Jefferson M. E. Church in a marvelous way. I find there are many hungry people all over the country who love a full salvation.

Your brother in Christ,

W. A. Grogg.

REPORT OF R. P. MARSHALL AND WIFE.

Since our last report, we have been in Florida for one meeting and are now in the state of Pennsylvania.

We held a short meeting at Georgetown, Fla., the last of January. It is a small church on the Crescent City charge. One woman secured all the money to build the church, travelling all over the state of Florida, soliciting, spending I am told, eight hundred dollars of her own money for carfare. It stands as a monument of her industry. The community is very small and a large part of our crowd came from Crescent City, twelve miles away. The visible results were not large in numbers, but out of the meeting came one young man who was saved and called to preach. That is indeed a victory.

Leaving sunny Florida, we came to Tarentum. Our church is the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church. It is another monument to the industry of an individual, this time the pastor. With three hundred members he has built a church that is the best in the Allegheny Valley, a magnificent Gothic building with splendid provision for the good Sunday school. The greater part of the membership are enthusiastically religious. Full salvation is preached every service and the church grows and blossoms.

The pastor is preaching, holding his own revival for the third consecutive year. We are leading the singing and Mrs. Marshall is playing the piano, assisted by Mr. Lessig at the $9,000 pipe organ.

Here is one big church where there is no iceberg. It is full of the fire of the Holy Spirit. Rev. Laurence A. Stahl, the pastor, has had three years experience in the evangelistic work, and knows how to hold a revival. During the first week there were twelve saved or sanctified, and the interest grows.

From here we go to the First M. E. Church of Tarentum. We move just a mile further down the hill. The Lord blesses and keeps under the blood.

WELLSVILLE, OHIO.

January 20th to February 13th our church had arranged for a two-weeks' revival campaign. Several neighboring pastors assisted in the meeting for two nights each. Rev. Freeze, of Newell, W. Va., and Middleton, of Irondale, Ohio. Their services were helpful and much appreciated both by the pastor and congregation. Rev. W. H. McLaughlin, presiding elder of the Canton District, rendered very valuable service over Friday, Saturday and Sunday of the first week; under his faithful ministry the work went forward with increasing interest and much conviction. In fact there was such a steady increase of interest manifested that by the end of the second week the church was filled with eager listeners, some thirty souls had already responded to the altar call. The entire audience agreed that the meeting should go on another week and as a result there were seekers at the altar every night, until forty-seven souls bowed at the altar. The meeting continued on until the middle of the fourth week. Twelve out of the forty-seven seekers prayed through for heart purity, a number were reclaimed and a goodly number were converted. The church in general has been revived and built up in the faith. A splendid spirit of co-operation was manifested. Nineteen have united with the church within the conference year, with others to follow. We wish to thank all the members and friends who have given their co-operation in making possible this splendid success in soul saving. And especially do we glorify our Heavenly Father who has visited his people with an old-fashioned, sin-killing revival of religion.

Rev. E. L. Zachman, Pastor.

CAMPAIGN AT WILKINSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA.

Rev. John F. Owen, of Taylor University, Upland, Ind., conducted a very successful series of special meetings in The Union Gospel Church, Hay Street, Wilkesburg, Pa., from Feb. 3rd to 17th, inclusive.

Dr. Owen is a man of God, mighty in the Scriptures, fervent in the Spirit; he spoke and taught diligently the things of the Lord and helped them much which believed through grace. The messages of full salvation through the cleansing and sanctifying baptism of the Holy Spirit were presented in nearly every meeting with convincing proof from the Word of God.

A number of souls sought the Lord at the altar of prayer, for salvation and full salvation; the church was much edified and brought face to face with the provision of the gospel of an uttermost salvation.

The church shall always thank God for the privilege of hearing the stirring messages of Dr. Owen, as he fearlessly defended the old gospel of grace through the shed blood of the Son of God.

May heaven's richest blessing accompany our beloved brother in his labor of love throughout earth's harvest field.

John T. Mobberley, Pastor.

NEW PHILADELPHIA, OHIO.

We just closed a four-weeks' revival at the Gospel Mission, New Philadelphia, Ohio, with Mary Ellis evangelist and Tillie Albright song leader. The crowds filled the Mission Hall to hear the splendid song services in charge of Tillie, and to get blessed as Sister Ellis played the piano and harp and sang the beautiful songs of Zion.

The entire town and surrounding communities were awakened and about seventy-five bowed at the altar for either pardon or purity.

The last week of the meeting Rev. Raymond Bush, a returned missionary from Africa, was with us one night and related many interesting experiences which he had on the field. The altar was filled at the close with those who fully gave themselves for service.

The last Sunday was a great day of victory. The Mission was filled to its utmost capacity, and thirteen joined the Mission Band. Mrs. Ellis and Tillie are coming back in June for a tent meeting. We certainly have great reasons to praise God for answered prayer and revival fire.

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00. Have your evangelist, or assisting pastor, to make them short, earnest talks, and then you assure them of your great joy over their salvation and your solicitude and sympathy, and your willingness to assist them in every possible way, and insist especially, that they call upon you in time of temptation or distress.

A last word: Make it a point to watch the cloud and follow. Do not dictate to the Lord how your meeting shall begin, where it shall break out, or who shall be your first convert. Be happy over the conversion of the very humblest boy in the community. Welcome home the most unworthy prodigal. Bring the converts into the church. May God guide you in all things.

Theological Seminary Extension Department.

A host of our readers will be glad to know that Asbury Theological School is now prepared to give a number of very fine courses of Bible study by correspondence. Great numbers of people have been asking for just such a school for years. This Extension Department of the School of Theology at Asbury gives you a most excellent opportunity for instructive Bible study under great scholars who are devout, Christian men, and who will be able to assist you to a comprehensive understanding of essential Bible truth. The expenses of these courses of study are very small. Write at once to Dean F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., for full information.

A Good Suggestion.

Dr. Ridout sends us the following proposition which we regard as a very good suggestion. We will be grateful to anyone who will send in $2.00 or more for subscriptions to be sent to foreign missionaries. We will secure names and addresses from Dr. Ridout. I hope all of THE HERALD family is reading the wonderful letters from Dr. Ridout. The following is Dr. Ridout's note:

"Wherever I go on the mission fields I meet numbers of missionaries who take no holiness paper. I wish you had a fund by which you could send THE HERALD to about 100 missionaries who need just this type of holiness paper. Could you not put this before your readers and see if you could not get volunteers to send THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD to a missionary for one year, at $2.00 a year? Wherever THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD goes holiness goes, and many a missionary might be led into the blessing of entire sanctification through reading THE HERALD. See what can be done. I am sending you a list of ten to start with."

Send contributions stating its object, to Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky. If you know of some missionary you wish to send it to, send the name and address with order for same.

Faithfully yours,
H. C. MORRISON.

The Fulfillment of Prophecy.

THE devout and thoughtful Christian could not ask for a better proof of the inspiration and trustworthiness of the Holy Scriptures than that which we find in the fulfillment of prophecy. Many Christians read the Bible but little, and that little in the New Testament. Very well, the New Testament should be read but it wonderfully fulfills and dovetails into prophecies contained in the Old Testament.

Any one who reads the Old Testament will see that the Lord's prophets, Moses, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, all repeatedly prophesied that Israel would be scattered, would be led captive, would be sifted among the nations of the earth, would be a hated and persecuted people.

That these prophecies have been fulfilled no reasonable person will deny. Nothing is plainer in the history of the world than the captivity of the Jews, their dispersion, persecution and cruel treatment among the nations of the earth. It is only among the great Protestant peoples that they have found any sort of safety, rest, or just treatment; and often among Protestants they have had to suffer contempt and ridicule. This the prophets foresaw by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost and wrote down plainly in our Bible; and these prophecies have been fulfilled. There is no denying this by any reasonable person.

These prophets who spoke so plainly of the dispersion and scattering of the Jews, also promised their gathering from the ends of the earth, and restoration to their beloved Palestine. These inspired prophecies are being fulfilled before our very eyes. The Jews are returning to the Holy Land.

It need not be expected that this restoration shall be the work of a day, or a year, or of ten years. The land has been fearfully wasted, and it will take time and labor to surmount many obstacles and oppositions, but no Christian believer need for a moment doubt that the Jews will again inhabit Palestine. It is the promise of God, and he is almighty. Working through human instrumentality, and against human opposition, God in the accomplishment of his purposes often moves slowly, but surely, and finally his prophecies are fulfilled; his promises are kept. It will be so in this case.

The Zionist Movement is a powerful organization. It has brains and heart, money, purpose and perseverance. It is a human instrument; it has made mistakes and blunders but do not forget that God is in this Movement for the restoration of the Jews and it will be accomplished. What has been done in the last decade is quite remarkable. Fifty years ago it would have been believed practically impossible; twenty-five years ago, when we were preaching on this subject, we were ridiculed by Christian ministers who said that such a thing could never come to pass.

What about the Bible! Read prophecy; here it is in the Word of God: "Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, the Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, the Lord liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land." Jer. 23:7, 8.

This is one of any number of plainly written pledges of our God that the Jews shall be brought back into Palestine. Of course, this does not mean that all the Jews of all the world will return to Palestine, but it does mean that Palestine, the home of the ancient people of God, who were punished and driven out because of their sins, will again become their home and abiding place. These scriptures right now are being fulfilled.

We want to suggest to our HERALD readers that they become thoughtful students of prophecy; note how God keeps his promise. The messages which he gave to his prophets were of divine authority, have been, and will be, fulfilled. This is a powerful proof of the divine inspiration of the Scriptures.

Leaning Upon His Everlasting Arms.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

IN his First Epistle, fifth chapter and seventh verse, Peter tells us to do a wonderful thing: "Casting all your care on him, for he careth for you." It would be a great relief when pressed by the enemy of our souls, if we could cast part of our burden on the Lord, but the Lord does not do things by parts; he undertakes to do a complete work, so when he tells us through his inspired apostle to "cast all our care upon him," we may be sure he means it, and it pleases him for us to accept his proposition.

The majority of us have not learned how to avail ourselves of this gracious privilege; we flounder around, chafe under the galling yoke, and complain that we have a harder time than any one else in the Christian life, simply because we have failed to apply the remedy of a childlike trust in Jesus' promise to bear our burden, provided we have faith enough in him to cast it on him. We find ourselves at the foot of the cross, pleading for help, at the same time keeping our burden on our shoulders, when we should lay it down and, by faith, go on our way rejoicing.

"Casting all your care on him, for he careth for you." The latter part of this sentence gives us the reason why Jesus threw out such a startling challenge—because he careth—not for the men and women who have wrought well in life, those whose names are heralded as the "great of earth," yes for them, but not for them only, but for every one of us, no matter how undeserving and insignificant, only if we dare to meet the condition of casting, or throwing, our care on him. He will not throw it back, but will bear the burden and pour in the oil and wine of his consolation to heal the wound that may have been made by the pricking thorns of life's cares. Let us read together the following beautiful lines which tell better than I can what is in my mind:

THE FATHER'S CARE.

"Child of my love, lean hard,
And let me feel the pressure of thy care;
I know thy burden, child; I shaped it,
Poised it in mine own hand, made no proportion
In its weight to thine unaided strength;
For even as I laid it on, I said:
'I shall be near, and while she leans on me
This burden shall be mine, not hers.'

So shall I keep my child within the circling arms
Of mine own love. Then lay it down, nor fear
To impose it on a shoulder which upholds
The government of worlds. Yet closer come—
Thou art not near enough; I would embrace thy care
So I might feel my child reposing on my breast.
Thou lovest me? I know it. Doubt not, then;
But loving me, lean hard."

The Great Revival at

Asbury College.

BY PRESIDENT L. R. AKERS.

Asbury College is a great believer in revivals. Every effort is made throughout the year to keep the evangelistic fires burning on the altars of the school. There are two series of services of special importance: the first, which is held in the College Chapel at the beginning of the school year, usually lasting ten days; the second series of special services is held in the church at the beginning of the spring semester, in which both college and town participate. In addition to the services mentioned there is usually a week's special service preceding the Christmas holidays and another about the middle of the spring semester, the latter usually being conducted with a view to indoctrinating and establishing the faith of the student body.

To speak at the regular services of church and community this year, the Rev. T. M. Anderson, of Wilmore, Ky., was chosen. Brother Anderson brought to the college and town a ministry of exceptional merit. His is pre-eminently an expository preacher. He reads and meditates upon God's Word continually and is steeped with the atmosphere of its sacred pages. His efforts were unusually effective and the results widespread and far-reaching.

Brother Anderson does not make the mistake so often made in specializing upon certain manifestations of worldliness and evil, but attacks boldly the source of sin, showing that the common sins of society are but symptoms of a deep and exceedingly grave spiritual malady. After pointing out the devastating effects of sin, the awful condition of servitude which it entails, he then clearly and forcefully reveals the source of emancipation from this bondage which so distressingly prevails.

Brother Anderson is an evangel of scriptural Holiness. From God's God, he brings a message of hope to those who are discouraged and despairing. "Sin shall not have dominion over you" is emphasized and he shows that it is the will of God that not only should men forsake and receive pardon for their sins, but that the inward guilt or natural depravity also should be removed and man be made every whit whole in the image of his Maker and dwelling in perfect harmony with him.

One of the features of Brother Anderson's preaching that commended itself most strongly to his hearers was the fact that while pointing out the hideousness of sin and the deplorable condition ensuing from its indulgence, there was no unseemly exhortation of certain foibles and failings nor abusive references toward personalities. Brother Anderson stayed on the main line. He refused to be side-tracked. He pointed out sin and its remedy. God honored his truth. The altars were crowded each night and scores of students found joy to their souls in the saving and sanctifying power of Jesus Christ. The results of this meeting will be felt not only during this year, but through years to come and it will have a lasting effect in the fashioning and empowering of the young life that sweeps out from the portals of this school to minister to the needs of humanity in the home field as well as in the countries beyond the seas.

We believe it to be entirely consistent with the best educational standards to emphasize, along with the training of the mind, the development and enrichment of the heart. Asbury College stays squarely in the middle of the road. It holds its banners high, refusing to countenance or approve many customs and organizations common to most institutions. On the other hand, it also avoids an extreme and abnormal religious attitude.

We believe that the full Gospel of Jesus Christ is sane and workable, that it is sufficient to grapple with and overcome the problems of human society, that those who have met the conditions and have received the baptism with the Holy Spirit shall be indeed witnesses, whose words and whose lives shall speak with power wherever they may go.

Fortunate indeed are the students who have had the privilege of sitting under the wise and powerful messages of men like Henry Clay Morrison, Joseph Smith, Commissioner Brengle and many others who have ministered so successfully in times past.

The school year is well on toward its close. Thus far it has been a year of spiritual achievement and of sound and thorough educational work. No division has come to faculty or student body. There is a tender and sympathetic tie that binds students to each other and to their teachers. Happy indeed is that institution in which a student feels free to go to his professor in the matter of counsel concerning his soul as readily as in things pertaining to his studies. Asbury possesses a rare and happy combination in the personnel of her faculty. Here are men with graduate degrees, who are able to sit with calm and discriminating judgment and meet the intellectual problems of the hour. Yet these same men are able to work with the zeal of an evangelist at the altars of prayer in leading through to victory the struggling souls of those who are reaching out after God. All indications are that this year will close as victoriously as last year, which recorded an unbroken period of splendid educational accomplishments and spiritual endeavor.

Never was the need of schools like Asbury College more pronounced than in this period of widespread materialism and sweeping worldliness. We firmly believe that this great institution fully merits the continued prayers and much larger financial support of God's faithful children who believe in free salvation for all men and full salvation from all sin.

ters headed, "The man in the cave," and "Professors and Prehistoric Men," the following passages appear:

"The Professor produces his little bone, or little collection of bones, and deduces the most marvellous things from it. He found in Java a piece of a skull, seeming by its contour to be smaller than the human. Somewhere near it he found an upright thigh bone, and in the same scattered fashion some teeth that were not human. If they all form part of one creature, which is doubtful, our conception of the creature would be almost equally doubtful. But the effect on modern science was to produce a complete and even complex figure, finished down to the last details of hair and habits. He was given a name as if he were an ordinary historical character. People talked of Pithecanthropus as of Pitt or Fox or Napoleon. Popular histories published portraits of him like the portraits of Charles the First and George the fourth. A detailed drawing was produced.

No uninformed person looking at its carefully lined face and wistful eyes would imagine for a moment that this was the portrait of a thigh-bone; or of a few teeth and a fragment of a cranium. . . . Those bones are far too few and fragmentary and dubious to fill up the whole of the vast void that does in reason and reality lie between man and his bestial ancestors, if they were his ancestors."

Referring to the numberless details which have been supplied in recent times regarding the manner of living of the Pre-historic Man, Mr. Chesterton continues:—

"Today all our novels and newspapers will be found swarming with numberless allusions to a popular character called a Cave-man. He seems to be quite familiar to us, not only as a public character but as a private character. His psychology is seriously taken into account in psychological fiction and psychological medicine. So far as I can understand, his chief occupation in life was knocking his wife about. . . . I have never happened to come upon the evidence for this idea; and I do not know on what primitive diaries it is founded. Nor have I ever been able to see the probability of it."

"People have been interested in everything about the Cave-man except what he did in the cave. Now there does happen to be some real evidence of what he did in the cave. And it will be valuable to our sense of reality to consider quite simply what that real evidence is, and not to go beyond it."

Mr. Chesterton then reminds us how a priest and boy found in a subterranean passage records of the Cave-man. These records consisted of drawings or paintings of animals; and they were painted or drawn not only by a man, but by an artist. And the writer of the work we are at present considering asserts that the true Cave-man portrait is that which represents him painting or drawing pictures, not with club in hand. The latter representation is utterly fictitious.

After reading this book—unorthodox in parts but yet striking in its vindication of Divine truths—we are convinced of the wildness of the imaginations of some of the popular writers of so-called Science. Especially is this patent when the Prehistoric man is under scrutiny. From the nature of the case pre-historic man was before historic records. Yet a recent writer commences a chapter on Prehistoric Man with the statement, "The Cave-man wore no clothes." But how do we know that, since there are no records of the period regarding which the writer is dogmatizing. If we had a stone hat we could refute the argument. But because there is not a stone hat, it does not follow that there never was a hat.

One can readily see to what absurd lengths this guesswork has been carried. The other day I read in the paper that a certain man had three sets of teeth. Supposing in 100 years a Professor goes to a public library and in searching the old dusty files, discovers this record of the man with three sets of teeth. Supposing he uses the same indiscreet methods that are used today. Then in one hundred years from now the popular writers of science will be claiming that all the people who lived in the year 1926 were endowed by nature with three sets of teeth! The absurdities of such methods are obvious even to the lay mind.

Strangely enough, Mr. Davies is a Protestant, but Mr. Chesterton is a Roman Catholic. There is food for thought in this!

Dr. Ridout's Book, "The Beauty of Holiness"

This book has now been translated into Japanese and Chinese and is circulating throughout the Orient. "Beauty of Holiness" sets forth the fact that in real Bible holiness there are such beautiful things. This book is intended for holiness people, to help those who are in the experience of full salvation. It will make a beautiful gift book as well as a devotional book for God's children.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

You have seen in The Herald that we are down in Florida, the land of sunshine and flowers. It is truly a beautiful country, and Miami is overflowing with visitors. There are nearly 500 cars come here every day loaded with people running from the cold weather up north. It is great that people can get away from the rigors of winter and spend the time where it is like June all the time.

Dr. Morrison and I have a little bungalow apartment and feel quite at home housekeeping to ourselves. We get fresh vegetables right from the wagon and have vegetable dinners and lots of fruit. It seems nice to have Dr. Morrison at the table with me again, after so many long weeks of illness. He eats everything he can get hold of and is hungry all the time. He seems more like himself than he has for a long, long time. It is cause for gratitude after long weeks and months of suspense and waiting, to have one's loved ones restored to them.

We shall stay here until it is perfectly safe to go back to Kentucky, which will probably be some time in April. We meet many of our old friend here, which makes it very pleasant for us while we are away from our home.

I have gained some in weight and am feeling well, notwithstanding the long strain I have been under during Dr. Morrison's sickness. You know it is said that "It's a long lane that has no turn," so there is hope for us when we are passing through the dark places to know that they cannot always last.

Well, I hope this will find all of you getting along nicely and making good in your studies. I'll write again soon. Lovingly,

AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl of Kentucky join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old. Anyone who guesses my middle name I will write to. It begins with E and ends with H, and has nine letters in it. Tell R. Edson Crowl I guess his first name to be Robert, and tell William H. Stabe, I guess his middle name to be Harry. I hope Mr. W. B. is drawing pictures when this arrives. This is my first letter to you and the cousins, and I hope very much to see it in print. I hope some of the members of the happy band will write me. I will answer all the letters I receive.

Mary E. Grinstead.
Glasgow, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Mississippi girl join your happy band of girls and boys? My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I am glad that most all of the cousins are Christians. I was saved on the 28th of June, at a tent meeting, conducted by Rev. Walter Cross and Rev. Norris Loper. My mother, father, one of my brothers and my sister were saved also, last summer. We had good revivals last summer. Pray that there will be better revivals this coming summer. Dorothy M. Shaw, I guess your middle name to be May. Am I right? I hope that Mr. W. B. does not get this until it is printed, for this is my first letter to The Herald.

Leona Cavin.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl nine years old join your happy band of boys and girls. I attend the Millry Consolidated School. I am in the third grade. We have nine teachers and there are 270 pupils in school. We have just erected a fine brick school building. I love to go to school. I am a member of the M. E. Church, South and go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. There is a lot of the flu in our community. I have just gotten up from the flu myself. I live on a farm. My father is a rural mail carrier and farmer. I have two cats for pets. I live near the famous "Healing Springs." Many people come to these springs for their health; they have produced some wonderful cures. They are especially fine for the kidneys and stomach troubles. Would love to hear from any of the cousins. I will close for this time. This is my first letter and I hope to see it in The Herald.

Lois Moseley.
Millry, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a boy from Washington, Ind. I have found many happy hours reading the Boys and Girls' Page in your Herald. I enjoy reading the story that has just started. I spend many hours making airplanes. I have won for my nickname (Airplane John). I go to church every Sunday morning and every Wednesday night. I belong to the Methodist Church in Washington. I have looked for letters from Washington but have not found any. I love my city which I think is very little. It has about 12,000 people in it. I have lived in it for twelve years. I am a lover of music. I spend my money for good books. I have several Bible story books which I read at night. I want every boy and girl that reads this Herald to give yours to some little girl or boy who does not take it. This may mean a reward in heaven and it may bring some boy or girl to Jesus. I hope I will see my letter in print. Remember what I said about giving your Herald to some boy or girl.

John Austin Hand.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May you let an Ontario girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My father takes The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. I am eight years of age and weigh eighty-one pounds. My birthday is Jan. 15. Whoever guesses my middle name I will write to it. It begins with I and ends with L, and has six letters. I will close hoping to hear from some of the cousins.

Dorothy Armstrong.
Rt. 1, Zurich, Ont., Can.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I live in the beautiful little city of Owasso, the home of the late James Oliver Curwood. Tourists coming through Owasso usually visit his castle on the Shawassee River. Our population is 16,000. I have been in many larger cities but like my own city best. There are several camp meetings near hear in the summer, one at Gaines where I saw dear Bro. Morrison, and I love his sermons. I got a letter from a girl called Dorothy, and I forgot her name. If she will write me again I will send her my letter I had ready for her.

917 E. Main, Owasso, Mich.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you move over and let a little Alabama girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother takes The Herald, and I enjoy reading it very much. This is my first time to write you and the cousins. I am four feet and nine inches tall, weigh 75 pounds. I have dark brown hair, brown eyes and fair complexion. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with H, and has nine letters in it. I will write the one who guesses it. When Dr. and Mrs. Morrison were here at the First Methodist Church, my mother went to the missionary meeting and heard Mrs. Arthur Moore tell who Aunt Bettie was. I'm so glad I know. I wonder if the other cousins know. I won't tell who she is as she may not want me to. I will answer all letters received.

508 18th Ave., W., Birmingham, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a North Carolina girl join your happy band of boys and girls. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I am eleven years old and am in the fifth grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. Who guesses my middle name I will write to you. It starts with M and ends with Y, and has three letters in it. Beulah Blanchard, I guess your middle name to be May. If I am right don't forget your promise.

Elsie M. Meads.
Rt. 1 Box 156, Elizabeth City, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me join your band of girls and boys? Aunt Bettie, please print my letter this time. I am eight years old and in the third grade. My father is an M. E. Minister. I have three sisters and one brother. I love to read page ten. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. Try to guess what my middle name is. It starts with D and ends with N.

Laura Holman.
LaCrosse, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you this lovely winter morning? Hope Dr. Morrison is improving. A snow is lying on the ground; our extreme cold weather is setting in. Near Polsgrove where I now reside, has a rural setting. I live in the valley; two great rolling hills, one in front of the two-story brown house, one at the back. The new Methodist Church stood upon a high elevation on the banks of the Kentucky River. We had our largest congregation at Polsgrove where the Methodists and Baptists worshipped together in beautiful fellowship. Owing to the mud, big rains, high winds, snows, we do not have Sunday school during winter. Our pastor, Bro. Marvin Richerson, holds monthly meeting here. Our Quarterly was last month. Bro. Pierce was taken on trial as preacher at Polsgrove, two of the finest, young, Asbury College students I have met in a lifetime. Bro. Morrison, no doubt, when you read this letter you will come back, retrace those happy days when you and Bro. Cooper, two young men like the two boys above mentioned, crossed the river in ferry boats. Just across was a fine bottom land in which lived my grandfather James Harrod, a man in fine circumstances, owning a beautiful farm in the bend of the river and stopping up the hillside into the forest. With great pleasure I often recall the pleasant hours I have enjoyed Pa, Mitch and Uncle Henry tell how grandfather welcomed you and Bro. Cooper into his home and did not charge anything for your entertainment during the entire conference year. Of course, much of the time you and Cooper were out riding the circuit, visiting among the people. You were welcomed everywhere. The heartiness with which they received you boys was wonderful; you stayed as close together as possible. After a long absence from grandfather Harrods, you would come back to Polsgrove, cross the river on the ferryboat, ride around the bend to the long stretch of road that led to grandfather Jimmie Harrod's home, lay whip and gallop up to the house at top speed. The family would rush out to meet you two boy preachers, and receive you all as beloved prodigals. If there was no calf handy there was a good fat hen.

Grandfather's family, his wife having died some years before, consisted of himself, Mitch and Henry, his sons, Curtis Harlan, an old crippled soldier, and two colored men, with their wives who lived in a cottage in the yard. Aunt Lot, one of the very best of black mammies, kept the house, did the cooking, and being member of your church paid her quarterage by washing your clothing. It would take a book to contain my memories of these kindly boys. One time when the services were in school-house, you did not want Pa and Henry to hear you pray. You left them in the house and went into the woods and they heard you praying. They both had genuine love for Morrison. Once I attended one of your arbor meetings near grandfather's home; all at once you stopped preaching, looked all over the large mass of people like one disappointed, called and called, "Mitch, Mitch, Henry, Henry, my blood kin?" You could have heard a pin fall. Dr. Morrison was so disappointed he was expecting to see them both. I wanted to tell him I was there after services, but such a mass of folks, I couldn't see the preacher. Still I wanted to tell him I was only one there. Soon I looked up into his sweet face and felt his arm around my shoulder and he looked into my eyes and called me "little Mitch." That was in my childhood. I saw a shadow on Dr. Morrison's face and the tears came beating in his eyes. I did not think of the tears so much but of the trouble in his heart as he had a keen disappointment not seeing the two boys, back of the tears. And when I see the agony of the cross with the blood beating through the wounds I think of the abyss of love—suffering back of all that brings these wounds and blood to view. Back of the wood, the nails, the dying form, back of all is another and deeper suffering makes itself known through the cross. In what sense are we partakers? Not that we are to do any such impossible thing as to feel the pains of holy sensibility and the burden of humanity in any such degree as he felt them. Surely not; we are not to suffer all he suffered, but simply partake of his sufferings, not the muchness of character, nor the muchness of sensibility, nor the muchness of moral suffering, but the likeness of all these. We are to be "like him." Pure enough to feel and suffer something for the sins of others. Dear sinner, is there nothing in all his sensibility and suffering love to which your heart responds? Your response to this love is your hope for time and eternity. It will decide your final doom. I beg you respond to it today.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Illinois boy join your band of boys and girls? I am seven years old. I am in the second grade at school. My teacher is Miss Thelma Nichols. I go to Sunday school almost every Sunday. With love to Aunt Bettie, and all the cousins.

A. Wayne Nottier.
Patoka, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We are two girls who wish to join your band of happy boys and girls. We live on farms and are first cousins, and board at the same place to go to school. We each enjoy reading The Herald very much, especially page ten. Now for a brief description of ourselves. I, Chesnie, am five feet, five inches, weigh 126 pounds. I have brown hair, brown eyes, and fair complexion. I am in the eleventh grade. I, Lucille, have blue eyes, brown hair and fair complexion. I am in the ninth grade. Helen Robertson, I guess your first name to be Verna. If I am right don't forget your promise. Please write to us for we enjoy writing and reading letters.

Lucille Slusher,
Chesnie Saylor,
Crab Orchard, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me join your band of girls and boys? I am twenty years of age, have brown hair and blue eyes. I enjoy reading page ten very much. Have been taking The Herald for some time. How many of you cousins are saved and sanctified? I was two months ago, and also healed. The Bible is my favorite book. Would like to hear from some of you cousins. I will make this letter short as this is my first attempt to write.

Katherine Boone,
103 Ash St., Ludlow, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a little girl ten years old. My birthday is Sept. 18. I'm a Christian. I go to Sunday school every time I can. I went to Sunday school one year without missing a Sunday. I have a mother, father, and two brothers. My father is a preacher. He has taken The Herald for eighteen years. Joseph is five years old. Paul will soon be eight. We have Bible names. My oldest brother and I read the Bible every day. We love to read the Bible. We have family prayers. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A Reader: "Please pray for a young father and mother that they will be saved and their little ones will be kept from evil associates. Will you also remember me in prayer that victory will come."

Mrs. J. W. G. asks prayer that her family may live a more consecrated life and that she may live a pure and humble life before them.

I. C. H.: "Please pray for us that my husband will sell his farm, that me and my daughter and all of us shall meet again and live a good Christian life. Pray for my sick daughter, that God may spare her life for her four small children."

Please pray for a father who is a sinner and has the drink habit.

A Reader: "Earnest prayer is requested for a sister who is greatly oppressed of Satan and is losing her mind."

A reader requests prayer that her sister may be saved from Catholicism. Pray for me that God will answer my cries for help.

W. J. B.: "We want all the readers to please pray that God will give us an old-time, Holy Ghost revival in this place."

FALLEN ASLEEP

COLLINGWOOD.

Mrs. Kate Collingwood, for thirty-seven years a member of the M. E. Church, and an aggressive worker for righteousness in many lines, died of pneumonia on Feb. 7. She was a sympathetic reader of The Pentecostal Herald and stood for purity of heart and temperance in all things.

During the last election she was much concerned lest the wet forces get in power. When news of Hoover's victory reached her at her sick bed she endeavored to sing the Doxology and finding herself too weak to sing she repeated the words. The constructive influence of such lives as hers goes on forever. She was lovingly known by every one as "Aunt Kate."

HOWES.

Mrs. Gladys (Hall) Howes, the daughter of Elvan and Rebecca Hall, was born on March 27, 1904, passed away peacefully as one who was tired and weary of labor, closed her eyes and went to sleep at her home in Alliance, Ohio, on Thursday, Jan. 24, 1929. She spent her girlhood life in Moundsville, W. Va., and attended Moundsville school. At the early age of fifteen she was baptized and united with the Baptist Church of that place.

In 1920 she was united in marriage to Floyd Howes. To this union were born four children, namely, Helen Marie, Harry Wilbur, Richard Floyd, and Kenneth Eugene, infant born and died a few days before the death of his mother. Gladys was of a sunny, cheerful disposition. She leaves to mourn their loss a host of friends and relatives besides her father and mother, also one sister, Mrs. Georgia Chambers, husband and three little ones. May the Lord of love who understands it all keep his hand on the lives of those little ones, that they may early in life seek his love and guidance with no loving mother to guide and help them over the hard places of life which comes to every child.

Friends, seek God, his love and comfort, who does save, comfort and love during the hours of sorrow. Funeral services were held at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jas. Chambers, near Colerain, Ohio. Interment was made in Cadiz Cemetery. Rev. Grose, of Martins Ferry, Ohio, had charge of services. The funeral was largely attended considering everything. Several were present who were her childhood friends and playmates from Moundsville.

By and by when the morning comes,
When the saints of God come marching home,
We will tell the story how we overcame
And we will understand it better by and by.

BISHOP DOBBS TO DEDICATE MARLOW M. E. CHURCH.

On Sunday, March 17th will be a Red Letter Day in the Church annals of Baldwin county. On that date Rev. Hoyt M. Dobbs, Bishop of the Alabama Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will dedicate the beautiful new church at Marlow. It is rare for as strictly a rural community as Marlow to possess as fine and complete a church and Sunday school plant as does this lovely little village, so beautifully nestled on the banks of Fish River. It is also rare for a Bishop, the busy man he is, to spare the time to officiate at any service out in the country where the attendance is necessarily smaller than in the cities.

Therefore, in view of the fact that the Bishop will be there, and on account of the interest taken in the erection of this church by folks generally for even quite distances round about, it is assured that there will be a very large attendance to celebrate this Holy Service. The good folks of Marlow will welcome all.

MY LIFE'S STORY

The Autobiography of Bud Robinson

This is the book for which thousands have been waiting. It is years since "Uncle Bud" has written a book dealing with his life and experiences. Now we have this volume, his autobiography, giving an intimate recital of his experiences from early childhood to the present time. Pathos, humor, optimism, scathing rebuke, with an amazing memory of detail unite to give this volume the peculiar charm that characterizes all of Bud Robinson's writings. Just as there is only one Bud Robinson so this is the only volume giving the complete story of his life up to the present.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XIII.—March 31, 1929.

Subject.—The Future Life. Luke 24:1-12; John 14:1-6.

Golden Text.—Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.—Rev. 2:10.

Introduction.—A few days ago I was conversing with an aged infidel who was, of course, a much troubled man. He was trying hard to force himself to believe that death would be his annihilation; but there was in him a something that he could not annihilate; and that something was crying out for immortality. That something must be the same thing that leads all races of men to believe in a future existence. I have talked with many heathen, but have never found any of them so degraded that they did not believe in a hereafter. That sort of degradation belongs to such as have killed their spiritual natures by a forced unbelief—if there be any such.

It is interesting to the ethnologist to study this conviction among non-Christian peoples; but the Bible is our only source of definite information concerning a future life. Of course, it can mean nothing to those who deny its inspiration; but to us who accept it as the inspired Word of God it is a sure word of testimony. Jesus was in no doubt concerning the matter. He knew that he would die on a cross at Jerusalem; but he knew just as well that he would rise again on the third day, and that he would live forever. He knew that he was Master of both life and death. To us who believe in his Deity, this is an immovable foundation. We accept his word as a certainty. Our faith is unmingled with doubt.

May I go a little further? There is a consciousness of our personal salvation. Consciousness is the supreme court of personality. Deny that, and nothing is left. But I make bold to say that with that consciousness of personal salvation there comes also a consciousness of immortality. Explain it? I cannot, but it is no more mysterious than the consciousness of being saved from sin. For that matter, it is no more mysterious than a thousand other things that we know to be true, but cannot explain. Tell me how a stalk of wheat grows from the grain and produces more wheat. Tell me how some yolk and albumen can be turned into a living chicken in three weeks by coming in contact with a certain amount of heat and moisture. You had just as well try to explain the Divine Trinity. But I affirm that the consciousness of immortality lives in the soul of a faithful Christian (perhaps in all souls), and that it grows stronger with the passing years. With Stephen, the first Christian martyr, it became a vision in his last hour. With John Wesley, Dwight Moody, and an unnumbered host of other dying saints, it became a glorious realization that drove the fear of death into everlasting oblivion, and brought into full view the shining gates of eternal glory. Live again? Yes! We shall live and reign with Jesus Christ forever.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. The first day of the week.—Our present Sunday, or "Lord's Day." The spices.—The woman prepared them to be placed around the dead body of Jesus, but had rested during the Jewish sabbath—our Saturday.

2. They found the stone rolled away.—They had been wondering among themselves as to who would roll away this heavy stone that had been used to close the hole leading into the cave where the body had been placed on the afternoon of the crucifixion; but the angel had beaten them to the tomb.

3. Found not the body of the Lord Jesus.—We do not know the hour of the Lord's resurrection, but it was yet dark when the women visited the sepulchre.

4. Two men stood by them.—This is a bit hard to understand. The same expression occurs in Acts 1:10. They may have been redeemed men, as Moses and Elijah, on the mount of Transfiguration, or the term may apply to angelic beings.

5. They were afraid.—That was natural. Bowing down was an act of worship. Why seek ye the living among the dead?—Jesus was alive again, and the cemetery was no place to seek for him.

6. Yet in Galilee.—Jesus had informed them fully of all these matters before going up to Jerusalem for the last.

7. The third day rise again.—So much is said in the Bible about his resurrection "on the third day," that it seems strange that there has been such an effort made to prove otherwise. In trying to get out of one difficulty in interpretation they only create greater difficulties. To term the time Jesus lay in the sepulchre three days, is simply to use a Hebrew form of speech. I refer readers to Clarke's Commentary for a full explanation.

8. The eleven.—Judas had hanged himself. All the rest were other believers.

10. Mary Magdalene.—Why men have termed her a fallen woman, I am unable to say. There is no such evidence. The name means simply Mary of Magdalene. Mary the mother of James.—Sister of Mary the mother of Jesus and wife of Clopas or Alphaeus. The matter is not quite clear.

11. Their words seemed as idle tales.—Passing strange. Jesus had told them all these things; but still they believed not. What doubters we are.

12. Peter. . . . wondering.—We call Thomas the doubter, but Peter leads him a very close second. It is not easy for most men to get a good grip on the supernatural. But for ought we know, what we call the supernatural is only the natural.

John 14:1. Let not your heart be troubled.—How often Jesus endeavored to calm the fears of his disciples. "Perfect love casts out fear." True faith in God the Father and in Jesus Christ will quiet men.

2. In my Father's house are many mansions.—Our Lord refers to the temple in Jerusalem with its many chambers. The language is no doubt figurative. He will provide room for all his followers. I would have told you.—He will not deceive us. I go to prepare a place for you.—That is good: A prepared place for a prepared people.

3. I will come again.—Then how say some that he will never come back for us? Folly! He will come for his own in due time; and they will be with him forever.

4. Ye know.—Had they not been so spiritually blind, they would have known both him and the way to everlasting glory.

5. We know not whither thou goest.—Doubting Thomas cannot understand him. He seemed in the dark.

6. I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life. I have put capital letters at the beginning of these three great words. The entire statement should be in blazing letters. No man cometh unto the Father but by me.—Write it in letters that burn. No man can approach the Father, except in the name of Jesus. If we pray at all, we must pray in this name, and under the blood.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS WANTED.

I would like to hear from some spirit-filled Christian workers that would be interested to work in a large tent this coming season. A married couple preferable, the wife a pianist and her husband a capable song director and musician, playing some instrument to assist in the singing. Must have experience and willing to sacrifice for the Lord, believe in the old-time gospel and able to deal with the souls at the altar, and pray for the sick. Or some young men who would like to get in the front line trenches, that are able musicians and baptized with the Holy Ghost and fire. Let me hear from you. We expect to work in South Dakota, or anywhere the Lord may lead. Last summer we had as high as two thousand people attend our services on Sundays, some of them coming for sixty or seventy miles. This prairie country is not so well settled.

But the revival fires are burning. Just closed a meeting at Redfield, S. D. Very severe weather, yet the place was filled each evening and about fifty saved and reclaimed.

At Tolstoy there were over one hundred converted, and the best of all they still stand true to God, and this was over one year ago. The moving pictures and the dance went out of business. Remember no modernist need apply.

H. J. Anderson,
The Soldier Evangelist,
Aitkin, Minn.

REVIVAL MEETING.

The Board of Stewards of the Hyde Park Methodist Church, Tampa, Fla., voted unanimously for Dr. Holcomb, pastor, to conduct a series of revival services the last two weeks in March. Numbers of prominent preachers were recommended by the pastor for this Pre-Easter revival but after much discussion the Board decided to have their own pastor do the preaching.

Dr. Holcomb requests that pastors, parents and friends who have relatives or friends now residing in Tampa to write him giving their local address that he may get in touch with them for this revival campaign. He also asks that ministers unite in earnest prayer for this revival occasion.

A GREAT RALLY.

A great rally of the holiness people of America is being planned to be held from May 7 to 12, 1929, at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. It will be the occasion of the Annual Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness. A splendid program with a large number of the most representative holiness men of the country is already in preparation.

Can Make the Dream of a Lifetime Come True

This summer you can make a study tour of the Holy Land with Bible scholars, archeologists, and historians.

OF COURSE you have dreamed of some day visiting the land where the Saviour dwelt while He was on earth. But to most of us the realization of that dream has seemed far, far away. The distance, the cost, the inconvenience of travel always have been hindrances.

But now you need delay no longer. The dream of a lifetime can be made a reality this summer—the greatest education a Christian man or woman can get—the supreme travel inspiration can be yours.

The Travel Institute of Bible Research is now organizing a series of study tours of the Holy Land and the other Mediterranean countries. Its sole purpose is to make it possible for you to study the Holy Scriptures in the Land that gave them birth.

Six parties will leave between April 17th and October 21st. You can select the date that suits you best.

While you are away, every travel care and problem will be solved for you. Congenial friends will make every hour a happy one. And the cost has been reduced to a minimum because the Travel Institute of Bible Research is a non-commercial organization that is not conducted for profit.

Send the Coupon

Send the coupon today and find out how you too can visit the Holy Land this year. A catalog will be sent to you that gives many interesting facts about the land where the Redeemer lived. It should be in the library of every Christian man and woman.

Send the coupon now. Do not say, "It is beyond my reach." It has already proved to be within reach of many in moderate circumstances.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text. Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Price: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

The Gist of the Lesson, 1929

BY R. A. TORREY, D.D.

Fits the Vest Pocket. The Religious Telescope says: "Has proved a blessing to Sunday school teachers and pupils. In addition to the digest of the lessons, comments, etc., it contains attendance record, blank pages for names and addresses, calendar and the Ten Commandments. Price, 35c.

All Denominations Approve Its Use.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1929

BY AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.

Sunday School Workers' Best Friend. Indispensable.—As an up-to-date Commentary on the Uniform Lessons for 1929. Help, guidance, inspiration, and satisfactory preparation all can be found in it.

Comprehensive.—It contains everything necessary to a teacher's preparation—explanatory notes of the text, topics for discussion, illustrations of all kinds, suggestive methods to develop the lesson, maps, charts, etc.

Inspirational.—No teacher can use this wonderfully selected material without gaining a spiritual inspiration as to how it may best be imparted.

No Bible worker or student can afford to be without it. Price, $2.00 Postpaid.

OUR HOLY GUEST.

E. E. Wood.

The day of Pentecost has come,

A day of power and love,

The Spirit fills the sons of God,

A fullness from above.

He comes to purge by holy fire,

To make us free from sin,

The church shall now his temple be,

And he shall live therein.

A Paraclete divine he comes

To stand right by his side,

When Satan's power is like a flood,

He spreads his banners wide.

Into all truth he comes to guide

Our hearts and minds in love;

The deeper things of Christ impart,

The wisdom from above.

He comes to all whom Christ obey,

A gift from God is he—

To all that Christ's commandments keep—

Thank God he comes to me!

REV. W. W. McCORD ILL.

The following clipping was sent to us from one of the Georgia papers, which we insert in The Herald that Brother McCord's friends may know of his illness.

"The many friends of Rev. W. W. McCord, of Sale City, will regret to learn that he is ill. His physicians have advised that he take a complete rest for several months as he is suffering from a complication of troubles including a heart affection. His son, W. W. McCord, Jr., has been called home to look after his affairs. Dr. McCord is a well known minister. He has conducted revival services, camp meetings in 38 states, also Columbia, Canada and Mexico. He is the founder of the Sale City Holiness Camp Meeting Association of which he was president and owner for fourteen years. Two years ago he decided to give it a wider scope so deeded same to the Church of the Nazarene."

We trust with a time of rest Brother McCord may be restored to his health and labor for the Master.

RECOMMENDATION.

Miss Lelah G. Underwood and Miss Elsie F. Anderson are a happy combination of natural ability and spirituality. They have proven themselves helpful and inspirational to a large degree in the special meetings which we have conducted in the home church. We recommend them to all pastors and evangelists as young ladies who are qualified to meet all the requirements of a truly spiritual evangelistic service.

Rev. Evan P. Thomas,

Pastor Second Primitive Methodist, Youngstown, Ohio.

NOTICE!

My services will be available for one or two revival meetings yet this year. Any one who may be interested will address me at Gladbrook, Iowa. I have had considerable experience in revival work, and it is my greatest joy to be thus employed.

S. A. Fisher.

REVIVAL.

There will be an old-fashioned Revival meeting conducted in the Pilgrim Holiness Church at Lewistown, Pa., March 31st to April 14th. The engaged evangelist and singer is Rev. Alvin Young, of Northville, N. Y., who is well known to the Holiness people. We extend a hearty invitation to all. Come and enjoy the feast

ASBURY COLLEGE ANNUITIES OFFER YOU EVERYTHING TO BE DESIRED IN THE WAY OF A SATISFACTORY INVESTMENT OF YOUR CONSECRATED MONEY AND IS WORTHY OF YOUR INVESTIGATION WHEN YOU HAVE FUNDS AGAIN TO RE-INVEST.

The following letter just received from the holder of annuity bonds to the amount of $2500 with Asbury College:

"Having watched the growth and progress of Asbury College and the very marked evidence of God's blessing upon the institution for many years I was desirous of assisting it financially. I investigated how I could invest and assist the College and yet have an income for my own needs. The annuity bond solved this problem for me and I am very happy over my investment as the interest has been met promptly semi-annually and in a business like way. I have grown to love the College and its co-workers and delight in this fellowship. It comforts me to know as I have no heirs that my money is safely invested and will work for Jesus when I have gone home."

THE CREDENTIALS OF CHRIST.

By The Editor.

IT is not to be supposed that God, the Great Creator of the vast universe and mankind, would reveal a plan of salvation and not make it so clear that we can understand, believe, seek and find without doubt; a foundation upon which we can rest our trust with a full assurance of faith.

* * * *

Our Lord Jesus Christ brought with him credentials that put him entirely beyond mere man, the very best man possible. His credentials furnish us a firm foundation for our faith in his Godhead. Skeptical preachers are attacking the miracles. They are claiming that the account of miracles is forgery. The simple fact is, that, in a sense, they were, and are, necessary. There was no better way for Jesus Christ to demonstrate his Deity, than by the performance of miracles.

* * * *

Jesus himself appeals to his miracles as proof of his Godhead "Believe me for my works' sake." He claimed that his power to perform miracles is a proof that he is the Christ, the Son of the living God, with power to save them who come to him for redemption. If the modernistic skeptic could destroy our belief in miracles, he could destroy your belief in the Deity of the Lord Jesus. He could compel us to believe that he was a mere man. He could destroy our belief in the integrity and trustworthiness of the gospel. It is no small matter that a man claiming to be a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ should teach the people that Jesus of Nazareth never performed any miracles. With such teaching he makes the writers of the gospels entirely unreliable, mere forgers, instead of divinely inspired men, to tell us of the wonder working power of our glorious Redeemer.

* * * *

The climax of all miracles was the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. That settles all controversy with reference to all of his claims; that proves him indeed able to give his life and to take it again. That justifies his assertion that "all power is given unto me, in heaven and in earth." The fact that he died, was buried, that he arose, revealed himself, appeared to his disciples and more than five hundred witnesses, and visibly ascended into heaven, gives us a firm foundation upon which we may rest an unshaken faith in his Godhead, his pre-existence, his incarnation, his teachings, his sacrificial death, and his power over all the power of men, devils, death and the grave. The salvation he has given us, and the manifestation he has made to us, enables us to sing and shout in the face of every foe, and to go on our way rejoicing in him as our Redeemer, and in the firm and abiding faith and hope that we, too, shall have a resurrection morn; that, after death, we shall live again.

It is because of the resurrection of Christ that we can, and do, believe in him as our Emmanuel, God with us, mighty to save to the uttermost; that through faith in him we have the forgiveness of our sins, and cleansing from all unrighteousness; that after all the conflicts here, and death has done its worst, and we are sown in corruption, we shall be raised in glory; sown in weakness, we shall be raised in power; sown a natural body, we shall be raised a spiritual body. Easter brings to us the joyful thought that our crucified and risen Lord is all that he claimed to be, and that we can rest our faith in him, in his saving, redeeming, and resurrection power, and that by and by in his glorious presence we shall meet again with the redeemed hosts who have gone on before us and shall follow after us. How wonderful, how blessed it all is! May God help us to be faithful until, amidst the mysteries of the resurrection and that eternal life beyond the tomb, we meet again where there is no sin, no death, but eternal life amid scenes of glory that are entirely beyond our finite conceptions here. Amen!

Monthly Sermon.

REV. H. C. MORRISON.

THE CLIMAX OF REDEMPTION.

"And being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. . . . But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Acts 1:4, 5, 8.

With this text we reach a climax in the unfolding of the plan of human redemption. The long-looked for Messiah had come and fulfilled in minute detail the prophecies stretching through the centuries concerning himself. He has finished the great work of atonement in his sufferings on the cross. He has won a decisive victory over death and the grave for himself and his redeemed people. He has revealed himself to many witnesses. He has walked and talked with his disciples. He has assured them that he will come again and receive them unto himself.

He is holding his last conference with them immediately before his ascension into heaven. Previous to this, he had commanded them to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. This is one of the greatest tasks that has ever been committed to human beings. He now commands them to tarry in Jerusalem until they receive power qualifying them for the performance of their task. Several chapters in the history of the scheme of human redemption have been written; they have all been looking to, and preparing the way for the opening of another chapter which shall mean most of all. Up to this time preparation has been going forward; now we have reached a climax; the doors of mercy henceforth are to be flung wide open and the gospel of salvation by simple faith in the Lord Jesus Christ is to be proclaimed to all people.

One great event, however, must take place before the messengers of this glad good news set forth upon their world tour. They must be baptized, filled with the Holy Ghost, the third person of the Trinity. Without this baptism the mission of spreading the gospel to the whole world cannot be accomplished. They must be constantly accompanied by, and empowered with, an invisible supreme Presence.

In the proclamation of the gospel, so that it will prove effectual in the regeneration and saving of human souls, there must be a power entirely above the mere human. The religion of Jesus Christ is a supernatural religion. In order to save men, God must reveal himself to them; in the person of his Son he must redeem them, and in the person of the Holy Ghost he must enter into them.

No subject can prove more interesting and helpful to the devout mind than the contemplation of the unfolding plan of God for the redemption and restoration of a prodigal race to himself. It must be kept in mind that God could not use his omnipotent power in the salvation of souls; that is, human souls could not be saved by mere physical force. To save men they must have revelation and instruction; they must be made to recognize their origin, their sinfulness, their duty and their destiny. God reveals himself; he illuminates the minds of men, he reveals his law, his will, his love. He reveals to man his own deep need and the ample provision made in Christ for his redemption, and he then says, "Choose ye, this day, whom ye will serve." Man's free agency is involved. His well being here and his destiny hereafter must be a matter of his own choice.

In the beginning, the Father revealed himself. He took into his counsel a few devout souls and communicated with them. A large part of this first revelation was in the nature of prophecy. He confided to these chosen men the plan of redemption. He unfolded to them coming events. He focused their gaze on the coming Messiah, his own well beloved Son. The pages of Old Testament Scripture are radiant with the promise of a coming Redeemer. Gazing into the future, prophet after prophet beheld a coming King. The people listened with rapture and delight while the ancient seers told of the unparalleled power and glory of the redemption which their Messiah should bring; of their deliver-

GOSPEL TRAVELS IN THE FAR AWAY LANDS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

The last two days of January found us traveling toward Korea where we arrived in time to begin our work which had been mapped out for us by Rev. M. B. Stokes of the M. E. Church, South. It is a journey of 703 miles from Tokyo to Shimonoseki where at eleven o'clock at night we take steamer to Fusan one of the principal ports of Korea with a population of over 70,000 of whom 33,000 are Japanese. The trip to Fusan covers 122 miles and you arrive at 8 A. M. in the morning and take train for Seoul, Korea at 9:50 A. M., where we arrived at 7:40 at night, after a journey of 280 miles on a Korea train made up of three classes of passenger cars. We traveled second. These trains are always well filled because this is the line to Manchuria now proving to be the richest agricultural country in the far East. The development of Manchuria is one of the wonders of the age. In 1908 the soy bean was shipped by only a few hundred tons. In 1920 over one million tons were shipped and the growth since then is enormous. The soy bean has forty per cent of protein—the oil is used in oleon, glucose, sharin and other things. The silk industry amounts to seven billions cocoons. Stock raising is great, the forests are immense, producing over 300 varieties of trees. Coal and salt yield big business and wealth. Along the line of the South Manchuria Railway one sees collieries, steel mills, waterworks, electric plants, gas works, building prospects, experimental stations, etc. It is said that the South Manchuria Express is the finest train in the Far East. In view of these things it is small wonder that Japan wants to hold fast Manchuria and hesitates giving in to China on the many questions which now are agitating both nations.

Returning now to Korea with which we started out we observe that in area it is about the size of our State of Minnesota, having about 84,738 square miles of territory. Its population is 17,452,918. The Koreans are different in so many ways from the Chinese and the Japanese. We have spent so much time with the Chinese and the Japanese that the Koreans are a matter of interesting study to us at the time of this writing. As we have promised the whole month of February to Korea we think by the time we are through the month we shall come to know them well and learn what an important relation Korea has to the Orient.

Korea is in the same latitude as Boston, New York, Philadelphia, etc. At its back is Manchuria on its right, China, on its left, Japan. East it is bounded by the Sea of Japan where Russia's great fleet was destroyed in the war, west—the Yellow Sea South—the China Sea with its typhoons and water "dragons." Korea is a land of rice, though various other cereals grow there in abundance. The Korean likes with his rice a pickle made of garlic, onions, cabbage, salt fish and other ingredients. The odor left by this outranks limburger cheese and follows the native wherever he goes. The Korean men dress very strangely in white, their long white gowns in winter time covering their heavy attire. The hat worn by the men is the oddest in creation, impossible to describe. Fortunately it will soon be a thing of the past—the modern head-gear is coming in. Politically Korea was slow in admitting the Foreigners. She wanted to remain a hermit Nation but could not. Now she is a great thoroughfare between Japan and China.

When we arrived at Fusan we found at the station a young man whose work seemed to be to look after foreign passengers, he directed us to our car and then took me to the telegraph office and helped me to get my message off, he helped me in getting the

FEATURES OF THE KOREAN REVIVAL.

1. Prayer and the descent of the Holy Spirit.
2. Much opposition to it by church members, some pastors and missionaries.
3. It came at a time of great political ferment. Russian-Japanese War in 1904. Japan takes over Korea, the Emperor abdicates and Japan in complete control 1907.
4. Great Conviction for Sin.
5. Notable confessions on the part of church members.
6. Scenes of great mental agonies resulting in many prostrations. "Men all over the church were stricken to the floor as though hurled there by thunderbolts. They literally writhed in their agony while the house was filled with cries for mercy."
7. The fire spread, great amazement fell upon cities and villages.
8. Universal cry for heart cleansing.
9. Great awakening among students. "In one school prayer broke out. The Spirit fell, cries and sobs of anguish filled the room and continued until the students were overwhelmed and prostrated by the sense of their guilt."
10. Physical Distress. "Penitents beating the floor with hands and head and their screams and outcries were as though the demons whose name is legion, were tearing them; then following sobbing confessions of sinful and unclean lives."
11. Intercessory Prayer. "Prayer became a real business with them—the main business of their life. They went about it with the same definite purpose that they brought to all their tasks."
12. Remarkable Growth of the Church. The Methodist Church increased from 7,796 in 1905 to 24,244 in 1907. The Presbyterian Church increased from 9,756 in 1905 to 19,654 in 1907.

necessary tickets and in every way was a most courteous guide, he spoke excellent English. I handed him the usual tip which he declined saying "No, this is my duty!" The thing struck me as very unusual because in the East tips must always be in evidence if you would get service. Afterwards he came in the coach and sat down and we talked. When I handed him my Asbury College card it interested him greatly and he asked many questions about the American colleges. I asked him about his schools; he graduated from middle school in Korea, took his college in Japan and had four years schooling in China, and taught in one of the Missionary schools. He could speak Japanese, Korean, Chinese, German and English and he was a Christian. The thing that impressed me about him were those words of his: "It is my duty." This young man was a Korean and two things they say distinguish the Koreans—they have great memories and are great linguists. Hear this story:

One day there came into one of the mission stations a sturdy Christian from the North. He was asked the purpose of his visit. His reply was, "I have been memorizing some verses of the Bible and have come to recite them to you." He had come over a hundred miles and had walked all the way spending four days and nights on the journey. He recited without a verbal error, the whole Sermon on the Mount. The missionary told him that simply memorizing the Scriptures was not sufficient, he must practice its teachings. His face lighted up and he said, "That is the way I learned it. I tried to memorize it but it wouldn't stick so I hit on this plan. I would memorize a verse and then find a heathen neighbor of mine and practice the verse on him. Then I found it would stick."

The Koreans when they become Christians make a complete sacrifice; he becomes a tither and gives of his poverty to further the gospel. Listen to this story told by Dr. W. A. Noble, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission. It is a story of a Korean who became the first Christian in his town. After a while the village church grew too large for its quarters and put up a chapel of its own.

Then there was a debt which had to be paid. There was no money with which to pay as the people were poor. This leader had one thing he could sell—his ox, with which he did his plowing. One day he led it to the market place, sold it and paid the debt on the church. When next spring came and plowing had to be done the missionary came around to see our friend. He went out in the field and found the old father holding the handles of the plow while the good Korean Christian brother was hitched to the plow and doing his best to do the work that the ox had previously done.

The Koreans are poor and have not much money to give, they make up for this by offering their time to do soul-saving work among their people. In one place they offered their time amounting in the aggregate to 8,000 days. In 1906 when this kind of offering was made the church in Syen increased in one year from 6,507 to 11,943 and only $72 was spent in cash for evangelistic help.

One of the fruits of the great revival of 1907 was the origin of what the Koreans called Nal Yumbo. On the last day of the meeting a subscription paper is passed around and each man and woman is asked instead of giving their money (of which they have but little) they pledge so many days to house and house and village to village preaching. In one church they pledged over 1,000 days, and one woman pledged six months of the year to the work. One man preached definitely from house to house to two hundred people and fifty believed. Such sacrifice is a lesson to all of us.

The way of the Cross means sacrifice,

As to God you yield your all:

To be laid on the altar, the place of death,
Where fire will surely fall.

As the voice of song and prayer we raise,
How easy to say: "We give all,"

Till some rougher cross lies just before
And sterner is duty's call.

The history of Christian Missions in Korea is full of the heroic and the tragic. Long before Protestants entered, the Roman Catholics were there and a wonderful story of Bishop and priests, who went to their martyrdom are among the missionary records. They practically blazed the way for missions. In 1865 Rev. R. J. Thomas, B.A. (of London) came to Korea for a while, then went to Peking, China. In 1866 he offered to join a French expedition to Korea but the ship being delayed he embarked on an American vessel the "General Sherman." This vessel grounded in one of the Korean rivers. The crew and passengers were captured and put to death, Mr. Thomas being one of the victims. Of the first missionaries to Korea it might well be said:

"They climbed the steep ascent to heaven

Through peril, toil, and pain
O God to us may grace be given

To follow in their train."

The Korean in religious matters may be a Buddhist, a Taoist and a Confucianist all at the same time. (The same is true of the Chinese). Christianity has made a deep impression upon Korea.

In 1885 Missionary Underwood landed in Korea, he was followed by Appenzeller; since those days Korean missions have grown until now there are 500 missionaries, 1,700 paid church workers, 15,000 Sunday school teachers and over 200,000 Christians.

The great Korean Revival broke out in 1906. Dr. Hardie of the M. E. Church, South, Wonsan, came to Pingyang and told of the grace of God which had wrought such wonders in his own soul. Prayer—mighty prayer prevailed. They believed the hour to favor Zion had come. In January, 1907, a great meeting was held at Pingyang. A Pentecost broke upon the house; man after man arose and confessed his sins, broke down and wept. The meeting continued till two o'clock in the morning.

One writing about the conviction that prevailed, said: "There were no fashionable church joys in this gathering but strange intimations of death and terror. The flashings of Sinai were over and above them. There was no escape, God was calling. An awful fear of sin not experienced before settled over us. How to shake it off and escape was the question. Some did run away but only to come back in more intense distress than before, with death in the soul and written deep-lined on the face. 'O God what shall I do? If I make my bed in hell thou art there; if I take the wings of the morning and flee, even there dost thou follow me.' Hundreds fell under the fearful pall of conviction. They would cry out, 'I am undone. I am a lost man. It will defile the ears of the hearers if I confess. It will socially ruin me. It will hurt the church. I'll die but I can't confess.' Some struggled to get up but fell back in agony; others would rise as though to shake off some long covered sins. If some confessions were unwise nobody could help it. A mysterious and awful power pervaded all, prayer would follow confession in which all would join at once, then would follow cries of agony. Conviction for sin was at times so terrific that they would cry out, 'Was there ever a sinner like me. My God! My God! Have mercy on my soul!' The penitent beat the hard floor till his hands bled, he shrieked and cried for mercy. 'Is this what sin is? We never knew it was so awful? We had thought it a trifle, but behold here is what God thinks.'"

Pingyang where the revival had such mighty power, was considered to be the most hopeless part of Korea. It was the vilest of the vile, but the revival turned it into a praying, singing, rejoicing community. In the schools for two weeks studies were laid aside and the time given up to prayer. A blind Korean preacher named Keel was greatly used of God in this revival. He seemed to be God's mouthpiece to his fellows in the same sense as Evan Roberts in the Welsh Revival. Of Keel one said: "I watched him, was in his room with him. He seemed to pray all night, and speak three and four times a day, led here and there by the hand and never seemed tired. His words were like a prophet risen from the dead. None could withstand them."

At this writing we are not in a position to write very much of the Korean Mission field from personal observation as we have just arrived. We came to it however, with the feeling that it was one of the most spiritual of all mission fields, and that the type of missionaries were strongly in line with the New Testament ideals. We have not yet begun our work. We start tomorrow, Sunday—thus far we have met some of the leading missionaries who are out and out for God and full salvation. We have met several who took their school work in holiness institutions and they are very zealous and happy in their work.

We were reading in the "Korean Mission Field"—the missionary monthly magazine, a number of articles on the present situation by the missionaries. In his article on "A New Year's Meditation," Professor Harry A. Rhodes (Presbyterian) of the Faculty of Chosen (Korean) Christian College, says the following significant things:

"In a country where the gospel has been preached as it has been in Korea, where the church is as well established, and where as yet scarcely two out of a hundred are professing Christians, it is not too much to expect that multitudes will be saved each year. Why is it then that 500 missionaries, 1700 paid church workers, 15,000 Sunday school teachers and over 200,000 Christians spending each year over 5,000,000 yen (about $2,500,000) and owning mission and church property worth a billion yen (a rough guess) can make so little headway during the last fifteen years in what is admitted to be one of the most promising of mission fields. There are various answers to this question. Some think that political changes have blighted the hopes and aspirations of the Korean people, that new regulations have hindered the freedom of propaganda, etc., etc. . . . But we too often over-emphasize external conditions as hindering the growth of the church and think that the remedy lies in making external conditions more favorable. Certainly conditions in the Roman empire did not seem favorable to the progress of the gospel. Paul was continually establishing in the midst of very adverse circumstances."

THE SPENDTHRIFT BOY.

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

WE want to notice why some boys never get ahead financially. Of course it is better to put money in the bank than in the bank, but eventually a boy ought to be able to take care of himself, plus help someone else. We read of King Uzziah that he was sixteen when he began seeking the Lord, "And as long as he sought the Lord, God made him to prosper."

The writer well remembers when he began seeking God at sixteen. He was so poor that up to this time he had not worn fine shoes, underwear or a white shirt. He was eighteen when he had his first ride on a street car and first bath in a bathtub. He had less than five dollars for a years' schooling, when one of the professors inquired if his father could not help him? His reply was, "Yes, father would sell the last horse or cow to prepare me for the ministry, but if a boy of eighteen cannot work his way through college, he is not worth an education."

The faculty gave him a chance to earn fifteen cents an hour sawing wood, trimming trees, whipping carpets, mowing lawns, unloading freight cars of coal and lime until the fingers bled; but it was good for him to be thrown upon his own resources. He passed every examination, came out in the spring with two new suits of clothes and ten dollars in cash. How did he do it? Got up at five, cooked his own mush, pressed his own clothes, blacked his own shoes, ate little or no candy, never drank cocoa, never loafed, kept two or three jobs ahead and worked with such a relish that people seemed to take pleasure in giving him something to do. This experience laid the foundation so that later he got ahead a little and during the past forty years has spent nearly $50,000 in publishing clean cut literature and has given away about as much. This is mentioned to inspire other poor boys. And now let us notice how you can do as well or better.

1. Live within your means. Never get behind. It is better to go hungry or poorly clad than live beyond your income and be humiliated by owing others. Better be shut out of gay company while young, that you may have a place among men when old. Benjamin Franklin once said to his son, "Pay as you go." The boy replied, "What if you can't?" Then said his father, "Don't go."

2. Be content with common things. Some people are born on the rich order. They do not know how to economize. Their favorite expression is, "It is the cheapest in the end." Yes, sometimes this is true but not always. Some boys lack good judgment and buy a great deal that they could get along without. They cannot resist the oily tongue of the salesman and wish afterwards that they had been more positive. It seems as long as they have money in their pocket they feel that they can afford anything they desire. This spendthrift spirit will grow upon one and weaken him in various ways.

3. Don't think you must have new clothes because others have them. Some boys look like sons of millionaires when if all the debts were paid they might be in overalls. It is hurtful to spend money as fast as one can get it for eats, clothing, then later for furniture and musical instruments even if they must be paid for in installments. Many quarrels and divorces can be traced to extravagance. One or both parties spent money faster than it could be earned and this brought about friction. It all began in childhood when there was no thought of saving.

How different with the Jews. Perhaps the go too far, but it is drilled into them to save. Give that bow-legged Jewish boy a nickel and instead of spending it for candy he will waddle off to his mother and tell her to put it in his bank. Later on he owns a downtown block.

4. Do not borrow money. It is easy to become loose in this respect. Some preachers have ruined their influence and hurt the cause of Christ because of this. At times one miscalculates and thinks he will make a sum here or there and thus pay his pledge. But an unforeseen thing hinders, then when the debt comes due there is no money. The next step is to dodge or disown the obligation. If this fails then he may steal or gamble in order to meet the bill. There are thousands of boys and men who are well dressed and appear to be honorable, but who owe a string of debts all over the country. Better go hungry or shabby rather than get such a reputation.

5. Do not buy expensive presents for girls. If a girl cannot be won by pure love she is not worth a costly ring or necklace. The right kind of a girl would rather have common comforts and true manhood, than modern conveniences and expensive furnishings that cause anxiety, wondering how the payments can be made. Better walk, or ride in a poor car that is paid for than sail around in one that has a mortgage plaster on it.

6. Do not go out to high-toned restaurants. If you will inquire a little you can find good, wholesome meals for less. It is the food you want, not style, music, or half-nude women. We have known poor boys and even preachers to spend more for one meal in a diner, or "swell" cafe than the family at home spent in two days. This was detestable—just for the sake of showing off. Better have a nice little roll left than spend all for fear you will be called a "tight wad."

7. Don't try to keep company with two or three girls at a time. This is expensive, besides it is not honorable. Some boys boast that they have several "on the string" and if one fails others are left. This is trifling with another's affections and is wicked. To give gifts and make a girl believe that she is the only one in the world, when you have another one in mind is insincere and will surely bring the curse of God upon you sooner or later.

8. Insist on saving a little each week, if nothing more than a few cents. The habit itself may be worth more than the money. Later on when you make as much as fifteen dollars per week you ought to save something like five. You can do this and not be cheap or grasping. It is worth a great deal to have ready cash on hand when a special bargain presents itself.

9. Never speculate unless you have enough so that you are able and willing to lose the investment. The spirit of gambling is in the air. If you are not careful you will try to get something for nothing. The other fellow knows the game and in the end will beat you. "Get rich quick" schemes have ruined more than they helped. Plodders may not get there so quickly, but they make better students, better husbands and better citizens than the overly bright money-getters.

10. Above all take Jesus Christ into partnership and consult him in everything.

An Open Letter to the Millionaires of the United States.

Rev. W. G. Bennett.

Notice in a recent issue of The Literary Digest that the millionaires of the United States gave the magnificent sum of $2,330,600,000.00 to various educational and eleemosynary institutions.

First, I wish to commend the Spirit of beneficence manifest by the men who have amassed vast fortunes in our times. They are a very different class from the general run of millionaires of a former generation. The inventive genius of our times has enabled men who had the ability to harness and direct the wheels of industry in a way that enables them to accumulate large fortunes, and at the same time to be the benefactors of humanity in general. The automobile and like industries, the prohibition of the liquor traffic, the captains of industry, etc., have been an untold blessing to the temporal and social life of the great mass of the industrious common folks.

One can hardly study conditions in our great cities, see our working classes living in comfortable little homes, riding in automobiles, enjoying many of the comforts, and some of the luxuries of life, without thanking God for our national life, and for the great advantages of our advanced civilization. When we remember that our present civilization is the outgrowth of Christianity, and that the constitution of the United States that protects the rights, lives, and property of our citizens was founded by men who believed in a personal God, and that the Bible was his inspired message to men, and now that many of our great educational institutions are teaching philosophies founded on speculative scientific theories exactly contrary to the teaching of the Bible, and to the great fundamental principle of individual rights upon which our government is founded, and then sees our millionaires putting their millions into the support of these same institutions, one cannot help wondering if these benefactors of society, in the rush of their commercial life, have not failed to investigate what these institutions of learning are teaching or else have failed to see where their philosophies will finally land the civilization we prize so highly, and which the fathers have won for us at so great a sacrifice. Personally, we fear that the millionaires by putting their money into the support of institutions that teach the theories of evolution, and the various philosophies of life that are the inevitable outgrowth of that theory, are very much like the man who sat on the limb of a tree and sawed the limb off between where he was sitting and the tree. Of course, you know what happened.

The theory of evolution and the philosophy which is the outgrowth of this theory is fast becoming the philosophy of life, not only of our educational institutions, but of the rising generation, and if this is a correct philosophy of life, our present civilization must be discarded.

The teaching of evolution is exactly contrary to the teaching of the Bible and to the principles of our present civilization in the following particulars: Evolution teaches creation by evolution from a lower to a higher order by a process that is intrinsic to evolving matter. (God is not required.)

The Bible teaches direct creation by the act of an omnipotent God. Evolution teaches that man evolved from a lower order of animate life, by a process of natural selection. (The survival of the fittest.) And that man is an ascending creature.

The Bible teaches that God made man in his own image and that man is now a fallen being. Evolution teaches that God is a distinct person, manifest both in nature and revelation, but that he existed prior to creation and will exist when all we know of creation has passed away. Evolution teaches, that man is under the control of cosmic or natural law, and that sin and righteousness are alike inevitable, in the development of the human race.

The Bible teaches that man is subject to natural law in most respects, but that he is under the direct control of statutory law inspired by God; that he is personally responsible for his conduct and must render an account at the great final assize. This is sufficient to show that the teaching of evolution is directly contrary to the teaching of the Bible.

At this point we expect our modernist to inject the statement, what does it matter how God made man anyway? What is the use of all this controversy about questions that are unsettled? Very well, why does the modernist persist in writing books by the carload to keep up the controversy and to unsettle the faith of the common people if it does not matter? And why have great scientists like Mr. Darwin, Huxley, Spencer, Fairfield Osborn and many others labored for years, speculated, supposed and in some cases pervaricated to try and make the theories of evolution hang together, if it does not matter. It does matter, and these men have recognized that between the teaching of the Bible and evolution there is a difference world wide and heaven high. And their frantic efforts to prove the theory of transmutation of species to invent missing links, that would span wide spreading breaks and chasms in the order of their theory of natural selection, only prove the statement of the Bible that, "The carnal mind is enmity against God," and that they were attempting to invent a theory that would prove the Bible false in its statements and that God was not necessary to account for creation.

If we admit that the theory of evolution now being taught in our higher institutions of learning, imbibed by our teaching faculties who in turn are teaching it to our children, is correct, the statement of H. G. Wells that the Bible is unreliable must go "without saying." But if this statement of Mr. Wells is correct, then the question "whither are we bound?" is a pertinent question.

If evolution is correct, then the principle of individual rights that is fundamental to our present civilization is biologically incorrect. The survival of the fittest requiring that the weaker and inferior members of society shall be eliminated, and that only the superior members of society have a right to survive and propagate their kind, because this is for the best interests of the state. The statement in the Declaration of Independence, "That all men are born with certain inalienable rights, among which, are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," is all wrong according to the theory of evolution. If the Revolution soldiers, whose reposing dust has made sacred the hillslopes and valleys of the Eastern states of the Union, could suddenly rise from the dead, methinks every one of them would again grip his flintlock musket, and say, "God forbid." And yet the sons of many of these noble sires are teaching philosophies in our institutions of learning that are certain to rob us of the liberties for which these men died, if these philosophies become dominant in our country.

If, as evolution teaches, God is only the animating will or directing force of the universe, there can be no authoritative inspiration, no law, no code of ethics, that men feel bound by conscience to respect and obey. Statesmen, judges, sheriffs, police officers, in fact everybody but the modernist preachers and evolutionary professors, are alarmed at the moral breakdown and widespread disregard for law that is so apparent throughout civilized countries. The modernists and professors are not alarmed because they are wise enough to know, and foolish enough to believe that this widespread anarchy is fundamental to the best interests of evolving humanity. But some of us who are not quite so highly evolved, still have some regard for the civilization that protects the lives and persons of our wives and children and the rights of our property interests; and we are not quite willing, just for the sake of giving you an opportunity to develop your philosophical theories, to follow you back into the jungles and to allow you the privilege of turning our civilization into barbarism.

Now my friend millionaire, lest you think my fears unfounded, let me call your attention to the fact that Mr. Darwin thought barbarism far more conducive to the evolution of the human race than civilization. On page 149 and 150 in "The Descent of Man," he says, "With savages, the weak in body or mind are soon eliminated; and those that survive commonly exhibit a vigorous state of health. We civilized men, on the other hand, do our utmost to check the process of elimination; we build asylums for the imbecile, the maimed and the sick, we institute poor laws, and our medical men exert their utmost skill to save the life of every one to the last moment. There is reason to believe that vaccination has preserved thousands who from weak constitutions would have succumbed to smallpox. Thus the weak members of society propagate their kind."

Our modernists say that Darwin is not up to date on evolution, but most of them are sticking close to the trail: "Evolution is a bloody business, but civilization tries to make it a pink tea. Barbarism is the only process by which man has organically progressed and civilization is the only process by which he has organically declined. Civilization is the most dangerous enterprise upon which man has ever set out. Mr. Nietzsche, whose writings are in all our college libraries and text books in some of them has written a philosophy that is inevitable if the theory of evolution is correct. He says, "To be obsessed by moral consideration presupposes a very low grade of intellect. We should substitute for morality the will to our own end, and consequently to the means to accomplish that."

To Mr. Nietzsche there is no evil, but to be the under dog. And the good consists in ability to trample the weak beneath our feet. This is the philosophy of evolution; the theories of the survival of the fittest.

The moral breakdown so nearly universal at the present time is due to this philosophy. It is significant that most of the criminals at present are boys scarcely out of their teens, many of them from wealthy Christian homes and not a few of them college graduates. And there is not a thing in the modernistic teaching to check or restrain this crime wave. If God has not spoken in Divine revelation, if the Bible is not an authoritative, authentic, inspired book there is no moral standard and moral chaos is inevitable. If the world breaks down morally, then every man's safety depends upon the prowess of his body or his ability to wield weapons of defence.

In 1800 ninety-seven per cent of the population of the United States lived in villages or on farms; at present forty per cent and, in some states fifty per cent, of our population is crowded into our great cities. We are building immense churches, but the great masses pay little or no attention to them, and when they do they are for the most part places of entertainment. There is, generally speaking, no message of authority from the pulpit of modern times, and this is true because most ministers have ceased to believe the Bible is an authoritative book.

We need nothing so badly at the present time as we need a great revival of Bible preaching by men who believe that the Bible means what it says and says what it means. I would suggest to you men that have accumulated large fortunes, that if you want to do something for the betterment of humanity, something to preserve your domestic and property interests, that you finance a great preaching campaign throughout our American cities, preaching campaign by men who believe in and preach the law as well as the gospel; who believe in a personal God who will some day hold court where every culprit must appear for a final settlement. Who believe in a hell where the finally impenitent must suffer for their sins. This kind of preaching may make some of you feel a little uncomfortable, but suppose it does, you ought to be men enough to face it. This is the kind of preaching that gave us our civilization and the only kind that will preserve it.

Already the bombs thrown by Chicago's gangland are intimidating men who would enforce law and check their nefarious practices. Suppose Chicago's gangland opens up on Chicago's skyscrapers, factories and millionaire residences how long would it take to pile that beautiful city in heaps of debris and send her inhabitants fleeing anywhere to escape the bomb of the insurrectionist and the knife of the assassin.

The President of Yale College in a speech delivered at a Y. M. C. A. banquet very recently is reported to have said: "There is a dreadful slump in religious faith." He compares it with the days before the French Revolution: "Now we find ourselves again confronted, in part no doubt as the result of another war, with much such a chattering of ancient faiths and much such a restless and rebellious attitude on the part of our younger generation as characterized the post-revolutionary period. To be blase, to have at one's tongue's end all the catch phrases of the nihilistic and blasphemous writers of the day, is counted good form, and as an evidence of intellectual up-to-dateness, is regarded as almost as essential as the wearing of the correct cut of clothes, the proper shape of hat, the accepted collar and tie, which, taken together, are the obvious marks of the socially sophisticated."

Mr. Green, the English historian said, that "Mr. Wesley with his converts brought about the greatest reformation in England that had taken place for the space of three hundred years."

The late Mr. Garry, former president of the American Steel Corporation, said shortly before his death, "The only hope for the world morally or economically, is a return to the preaching of the Bible just as it is written."

AN EASTER MEDITATION.

BY H. H. SMITH.

At this season when our thoughts turn to the glorious life beyond the grave, let us recall the words of the seer of Patmos: "And I heard a great voice out of the throne saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his peoples, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God: and God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more; neither shall there be mourning nor crying, nor pain, any more; for the first things are passed away. And he that sitteth on the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he saith, Write: for these words are faithful and true. And he said unto me, They are come to pass. I am the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit these things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." The authorized version reads, he that overcometh shall inherit "all things." But the sense is the same, for to inherit "these things" means to inherit all the blessings just named, and these include everything that is necessary for the happiness of a human soul.

The Christian thinks of heaven, reads of heaven, dreams of heaven, but God in his wisdom has not seen fit to reveal to us fully just what that life is. Perhaps it would be impossible for him to do so while we still dwell in the flesh. But we may comfort and cheer ourselves with this thought: heaven will mean to us the full satisfaction of all our desires: "we shall inherit all things." Some long to be released from physical infirmity, and they shall be: "there shall be no more pain." When Robert Hall, whose body was continually racked with pain, was asked his idea of heaven, he replied, "My idea of heaven is rest, rest." We all long to be wholly delivered from sin and serve God perfectly, and we shall have this yearning satisfied, for no sin can mar that life. We long to draw nigh to the blessed Savior, and look upon him who has redeemed us and saved us, and so we shall, for "we shall see him as he is." We cannot look beyond the veil and see what God has prepared for those who love and serve him, but we can comfort ourselves with this Scriptural thought: Heaven will mean that nothing will be lacking for our complete happiness. This should be an answer to some questions that we ask in perplexity about the future life. "I shall be satisfied, when I awake with thy likeness," says the Psalmist. A few lines from one of Horatius Bonar's poems are impressively appropriate:

"When I shall awake in that fair morn of morns,
After whose dawning never night returns,
And with whose glory day eternal burns,
I shall be satisfied.

"When I shall meet with those whom I have loved,
Clasp in my eager arms the long removed,
And find how faithful Thou to me has proved.
I shall be satisfied.

"When I shall gaze upon the face of Him
Who for me died, with eye no longer dim,
And praise Him with the everlasting hymn,
I shall be satisfied."

The Psalmist's Beulah Land.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HERE is no portion of Holy Writ that engages the attention of Bible readers more than the twenty-third Psalm. It is the favorite reading for the evening prayer time, the cup of consolation in times of distress, and the elixir that resuscitates the drooping spirit after having been in hot pursuit by the enemy of souls. In the sick room it is the ever welcome message that never fails to bring comfort to the suffering and sorrowing; and as the weary pilgrim is called to pass through the chilly waters of death, it is read to stimulate faith and hope for the city of God just on the other side.

We were reading such a helpful comment on this beautiful Psalm recently, that we are going to give it to our readers, that they may share its blessings. It is written by Professor Milton S. Terry, D.D., and is most helpful. He says:

"The twenty-third Psalm is one of the most exquisite lyrics in all literature. It has sung childhood to sleep in blissful dreams; it has encouraged and strengthened the heart of noble manhood; it has been an oracle of joy to devout old age. It has been a channel of exultant worship for three thousand years, and may well be lauded as a deathless nightingale of holy song.

"It presents Jehovah as the Good Shepherd and as a royal host. To appreciate its various allusions one needs to be familiar with the life and usages of Syrian shepherds. But the imagery transcends the range of shepherd life, and portrays the lavish bounty of some generous king. The joyful guest exults amid royal bounties, which seem an earnest of everlasting residence in the temple of the Lord.

"This psalm portrays a veritable 'Beulah land' provided for faithful souls. Let us observe some of the unspeakable gifts which the Good Shepherd and Royal Provider lavishes upon the sheep of his pasture, the people of his grace.

"1. He makes them repose in green pastures. The imagery presents to us the thought of peaceful hearts in the midst of delightful scenes contented and happy. Like the 'delectable mountains' of Bunyan, these green fields inspire serenity and holy hopes.

"2. He gives manifold experiences of rest. The margin of our common version reads, 'waters of quietness;' that of the Revised Version, 'waters of rest.' The Hebrew word translated 'still,' and in these margins 'quietness' and 'rest' is in the plural number, and seems to indicate an effect produced by the waters rather than a condition or quality of the waters themselves. Thus Alexander observes, 'We are not to understand still or quiet waters, a sense which the Hebrew word has nowhere else, and which would here suggest the idea of stagnation, or, at least, that of silence, which is far less agreeable than that of an audible flow. The idea really conveyed is that of waters by or at which rest may be enjoyed. The repose is not that of the waters themselves, but of the flocks reclining near them.' The plural then would suggest the rich and varied experiences of the rest of faith. The rippling waters and living fountains of God's pastures beget in holy hearts many, many restful assurances that all things work for good to them that love the everlasting Father.

"3. He revives the fainting soul. There comes times when wearied nature sinks, and heart and flesh fail; a sense of exhaustion takes hold upon the child of God. Then he will give new life and power. The wrestling and exhausted Jacob becomes a prince of God, and sings:

"The Sun of Righteousness on me
Hath risen with healing in his wings;
Withered my native strength, from Thee
My soul its life and succour brings."

"4. He magnifies in them his name and righteousness. This tender Shepherd is no modern sentimentalist, who in admiration of Divine love forgets Divine justice. He exhibits the eternal truth that God's holiness is a consuming fire to the sinner. Heavenly love and compassion always move in the plane of Divine righteousness.

"5. He comforts in the valley of the shadow of death. The rod and staff of the Good Shepherd are emblems of the presence and guidance of one who holds the keys of death; nay, has 'abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light.' (1 Tim. 1:10). Hence the redeemed may cry in holy triumph, 'O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?' (1 Cor. 15:55. Revised Version)."

"There Was a Great Calm."

The noted gospel song writer and soloist, Mrs. F. W. Suffield, writes as follows:

"Last Sunday I sang in the Presbyterian Church here in Los Angeles your beautiful song, 'There Was a Great Calm.' It was very beautiful and God used it for His glory. It is so hard to find songs with a message. I appreciate your publications."

This song arranged for low voice can only be had in our "Special Sacred Songs No. 3," containing 129 unusually strong and effective special songs, most of them new.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XII.

OFF TO COLLEGE.

HUSTON selected one of the leading church schools of Texas for his college, and, as the reader will recall, having had one year in college, he determined to select a strong course and by putting in his time in the summer school, to put the three years' course into two years' study.

When he arrived in the town where the college was located he was fortunate in securing an excellent room and board in the home of a very devout, highly cultured superannuated Methodist minister who had a large and well selected library, which was accessible to him, with wise suggestions with reference to any side reading that he might have leisure for when not engaged with his course of study.

It was Huston's thought to prepare himself for the Methodist ministry. His people for generations had been Methodists, and Methodist teaching appealed to his intelligence, spiritual conceptions and needs. He was in no sense sectarian to the degree that he questioned the sincerity and salvation of people of other denominations.

He was very fortunate in his association with the aged minister with whom he boarded, as he was a man of wide experience, had served important charges, been presiding elder, was thoroughly acquainted with Methodist history, sound in Methodist doctrine, and had gone deep into the spiritual life, and now in his declining years, lived in the solar light of a perfect love that radiated in blessing upon all who came within the circle of his benign influence.

His family was small, consisting of a saintly wife and a widowed daughter who had passed the meridian of life, and was also a highly educated and devout woman. The atmosphere of the home was most helpful in its influence over Huston.

Just at this time there was arising much discussion and considerable controversy over, and about, a doctrine which had been very prominent in Wesley's teaching, i. e., entire sanctification. All persons acquainted with the early history of Methodism will recall at once that this great religious movement originated among a few devout and intellectual young men who formed themselves into a "Holy Club," and who, in reading the Scriptures, prayers, visiting the sick, ministering to the poor, and in a word, regulated their lives with such careful discipline in their devotion to God, the cultivation of their lives, and the service of their fellowbeings, that in dirision they were called "Methodist."

These young men, it seems, laid special emphasis upon Holiness. They conceived the idea, which most people will grant that, logically, if the heart was pure the life would be correspondingly clean and in harmony with the will of God. They may have had some crude, illogical and, in fact, unscriptural notions with reference to how holiness of heart should be obtained. But no one who has read of the correctness of their living, and their zeal in pursuit of their goal, will question their sincerity.

It is understood by those who have read Methodist history that it was quite a while after these young men left Oxford University, before they entered into a radiant spiritual experience and formulated their doctrine of entire sanctification, organized their Bands and commenced to urge the people converted under their ministry to seek an entire cleansing from all remaining sin, which they were promised they could receive as a second, distinct blessing of God's grace.

It is by no means my purpose here to go into any sort of discussion of Methodist history, with which I am not so well acquainted, but a very large percent of the religious public understands there has been a very lengthy and, at times, quite a vigorous discussion among Methodist people on the subject of entire sanctification, as a "second blessing," to be sought and found subsequent to regeneration.

This discussion was just beginning when Huston went to the school we have mentioned, and found lodging in the home of the elderly Methodist preacher. Huston was quite interested because he had become a man of strong conviction and was full of a great purpose to be a very thorough-going and earnest minister of the gospel.

His religious experience had been anything but satisfactory, and he was feeling the need of a larger and deeper spiritual life. He confided this fact to the wise counsels of the aged minister with whom he boarded, who assured him that Wesley and all of his leading co-workers had taught the early Methodists the doctrine of entire sanctification, and that it was their privilege to be fully saved from sin; that the blessing was received by those who were wholly consecrated, through simple faith in the Lord Jesus. The old minister also bore humble witness to the fact that he, himself, had for many years enjoyed the experience of perfect love.

Under his direction Huston, in addition to his college course, took up a careful study of John Wesley's sermons and notes on sanctification, also Charles Wesley's hymns, along with Watson and Clarke on the same subject. He saw very clearly that these men who laid the foundation on which the Methodist structure had been erected, were in perfect harmony with each other with reference to the teachings of the Scriptures leading to a second, definite work of grace, a cleansing baptism with the Holy Spirit.

Huston was not only thoroughly convinced that there was a gracious blessing possible to all of those who are regenerated, but he realized that these teachings of the Scriptures and the early Methodist Fathers harmonized perfectly with his own experience. He knew that he had been regenerated; that he had been restored from the great lapse in his experience, and had the witness that he was now a child of God, but was conscious of an inward sin principle, or uprising, that was out of harmony with his Christian intelligence, his Christian conscience, and his desires with reference to his Christian character and devotion to his Lord and Saviour.

As he associated with the aged minister, read the teachings of the founders of the Methodist Church on the subject, he became thoroughly established in his intellectual conceptions, faith and desires with reference to the doctrine and experience of entire sanctification, and while, as a rule, he remained quiet on the subject, in the midst of discussions that were going on in the pulpits, in classrooms, and among the college students, he was in his private devotions hungering and thirsting after righteousness and praying earnestly that he might be cleansed from all sin, and filled with perfect love.

He heard of some of the holiness camp meetings being held at that time in Texas, and determined at the close of the summer school term, to attend one of these camp meetings, to see and mingle with the people who professed full salvation.

The Bible is not a faint and distant echo of an uncertain voice, but the authentic and authoritative message from the great Mind that made and controls the universe. It therefore is the most essential guide-book ever given to men, and the neglect of it leads to spiritual shipwreck and disaster.

—Presbyterian Standard.

Practice tithing from the start. Colgate and many others did this and became independent. One should not save or tithe for the sake of gain, but with an object to bless others and help evangelize the world. Be an out-putter rather than an in-taker, a producer, rather than a consumer.

The Preachers of Tomorrow.

Are the young preachers of today. It is these young men who will fill our pulpits, conduct our revival meetings and wield a religious influence over the young generation.

Are you interested in these young ministers, whether or not they preach an unpromising gospel—a gospel that saves all men from all sin? Men change and quickly fall, but Christ remaineth forever, and we want preachers who preach this changeless Christ; so do you.

In this fast modern age when there are so many things to detract and interfere with one's religious life, there isn't anything quite so helpful as good reading matter from the pen of men and women in whose hearts the Holy Spirit abides. We try to keep the pages of The Pentecostal Herald filled with just such matter.

We have set the months of March and April apart as preacher months and although $1.50 barely covers the cost of printing and mailing The Herald, we are gladly making a concession by giving a reduction of 50c, and are offering to send it to preachers, young preachers especially, for $1.00 per year. We have had folks tell us that it is easy to discern the preacher who reads The Pentecostal Herald because of his unctious sermons, his deep spirituality and his zeal for souls.

We believe you see our purpose, and that you realize the need, and are asking that you send us the names of young ministers of your acquaintance with $1.00 for each subscription; if you cannot furnish the names, send us the money for as many as you can, and we will furnish the names. If you cannot furnish the money, send us the names.

Enclosed you will find $..... for which send The Herald to the following ministers for one year on your special introductory offer of $1.00 per year.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

REVIVAL MEETING AT M. E. CHURCH, HERRICK, ILLINOIS.

We have just closed a very successful and helpful revival. We were handicapped on account of an epidemic of measles in our town, nevertheless much good was accomplished.

The pastor, Rev. Orin H. Young, did the preaching, being greatly assisted by Rev. M. V. Lewis, song evangelist, of Wilmore, Ky.

The result was a goodly number of conversions, several came forward for consecration and the church revived and strengthened.

I wish to say concerning the efficient leadership of Bro. Lewis, that he is a very capable man possessing unusual talent. His solos are very effective and carry a real gospel message. His work in directing the choir and congregation is very acceptable.

While Bro. Lewis did not come to do the preaching, he conducted four afternoon services which I am sure our people will never forget. He presented a very earnest appeal to the church to diligently follow Christ. Both old and young gladly responded to his leadership.

Words and space will not permit us to express our full appreciation of his work here. Our people are very anxious for his return next year. We feel that no pastor will make a mistake in securing his help. Orin H. Young.

A GOOD MEETING.

May I have space in which to report a meeting recently held on the Marion charge at Bald Rock Church, and lasting for twelve days. There were some 23 conversions and reclamations, and the church was greatly revived. There was a time of great rejoicing, and of demonstration of the power of God in the reclamation of backsliders and the conviction and conversion of sinners. The question may arise in the minds of some, how did this come to be? Something like a year ago there was a meeting held at this place, and after the close of the services the prayer meeting was continued till the next meeting began, the Word of the Lord was honored and the Spirit was given right of way.

The altar of prayer was given due emphasis, and the "message" was a "thus saith the Lord" one, consisting of repentance, the New Birth, and seeking the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness. Such subjects as Sin, Hell and Judgment were not overlooked. It is the judgment of the writer that the secret of the matter is in the fact that the Holy Spirit was allowed to work unhindered. It was my purpose in conducting the services to follow his leadings, and the results justified the course pursued. Since the meeting closed the prayer meetings are good, referred to by those attending as wonderful.

The services were more like the history of the Welsh Revival than anything in the way of revival services, that it has been the privilege of the writer to attend. To put on paper all that occurred in those days would be impossible, it could only be felt but not expressed. Those assisting in the meeting were Bro. Baker, of Grant, Va., who did part of the preaching; one or two local preachers rendered valuable assistance in the services. To the Lord be all the praise. Remember us in your prayers as we work and labor for the Lord.

H. W. McDonald, Pastor.

WILMORE, KENTUCKY.

To the Saints Scattered Abroad, Greetings:

Having not sent a report in for some time thought I had better give an account of myself. I have held some meetings and have had some revivals, there is a difference, you know. We have just closed a good revival at Pittsburg, Ohio, with thirty-five or forty bright professions, some of the clearest work we have witnessed in years.

This was a three-weeks' campaign and it was indeed a battle. We did not have the altar full the first or second services, nor did we have folks running to the altar in the first week of this battle. I seldom ever witness this in any of my meetings. I find it takes prayer, faith and straight, old-fashioned preaching to get results that abide. I seldom ever give an altar call for the first week. I find, as Dr. Morrison says, it does not pay to beat and thrash off the green fruit. It soon decays and dries up, but we wait until it is thoroughly ripe and ready for gathering then you do not have to beat and thrash, just shake the tree and branches and down will come the ripe and ready fruit. This was the case at Pittsburg. Some of the finest folks of the town went over in Canaan. My! What this will mean for the church and pastor for folks like this to get the fullness of the blessing of Christ.

Rev. O. S. Severs had charge of the singing and to say he did the job well puts it mildly. There are few singers who can sing like this sweet singer of Israel. He sang over WLW as he went to Pittsburg and a number of cards and letters were sent from different states saying his singing blessed their hearts and homes. Some ask me if he could hold out through a meeting. I said he had been with me five weeks, two last year, three this, and it was something new every time. He is my pastor and I am proud of him.

Brother E. E. Cole, the pastor, is one among the truest souls I ever helped in a meeting. He prepares the way for a meeting then stands by the evangelist until the job is completed. We were entertained in the parsonage, going out for dinner every day among the people of the church. They knew how to take care of their workers. Rev. Cole has a lovely family. I do not believe they can be surpassed in the State of Ohio. Well, may God bless and preserve the work there.

We were made to rejoice when we saw the results from our last year's revival. People coming through all kinds of weather from Gettysburg about 18 miles as many as thirty-eight at a time with the fire burning on their hearts as when we left them a year ago. After all it is not the number of professions, but the work that abides that really counts.

I want to say to my brethren throughout the breadth and length of the land. I am back again in the evangelistic field. Will be open for calls until September. So if any one wants an old-fashioned revival prayed down not boosted up when God witnesses to their salvation and not man. I am ready to go regardless of pay or place. So if you want a date write me at once. Direct to 321 Bellevue Street, Wilmore, Ky. We want all who know how to pray clear through to remember us and ours.

Your little brother,

T. P. Roberts.

CARDINGTON, OHIO, REVIVAL.

On February 10 we closed a stirring revival meeting in the Nazarene Church with Rev. F. S. House, pastor. Bro. House had the meeting going on for several days when we got to the meeting, delayed because of the serious illness of my father at Chesapeake, Ohio, which resulted in his death Jan. 26. This revival continued right on with a wave that was felt throughout the city and scores were saved and sanctified, who came out of their lodges, gave up tobacco, laid off their jewelry, etc. Two or three young people felt a call to the work of the Lord. This was surely a real refreshing time from the throne of God. Methodists, U. B., and the Friends people who love holiness came in and got refreshed. A goodly number united with the Nazarene Church.

We are now in a good revival at Shelby, Ohio, looking forward to the organizing of a church of the Nazarene in a few days that the cause of Holiness be furthered in this city. I have some open dates could give any church or camp this spring or summer.

Rev. Perry Rood, Evangelist.

Middleport, Ohio.

MACON, GEORGIA.

The epidemic of flu has seriously interfered with my slate as I am sure it affected others engaged exclusively in revival work. I have only held two revivals since January 1st, and am now in a meeting with Rev. G. R. Tomlin and his people at Centenary Church, Murphysboro, Ill. I go from here to Florida, Atlanta, Ga., Brunswick, Ga., Forsyth, Ga., and Richmond, Va. I then take up my tent campaign beginning in a tent revival with Rev. J. A. Cook at Pooler, Ga., in May. I have a tent with folding canvas benches, electrical fixtures, etc., and am making out my slate for the summer and fall, planning to use the tent almost exclusively. Hundreds are reached in this way who could not be persuaded to attend a service when the revival is held in the regular church building.

There is no chance to reach the unsaved and unchurched thousands until they are brought into contact with the preached word and a revival atmosphere. This problem is largely solved by the tent meetings we hold. People sometimes drive fifty miles to be present, and a spirit of enthusiasm and power is felt that only comes when God is moving upon a community in an unusual way through his people. Any pastor who feels his town and surrounding territory are in need of a great spiritual awakening please write me at Box 226 Rivoli, Macon, Ga., and I will be glad to co-operate with him and his people to the end that a real, abiding, soul-saving revival may be realized.

Harry S. Allen.

General Evangelist, Methodist Church, South.

REPORT OF BRO. S. K. MA,

Tongshan Road Mission, Shanghai.

Bro. Ma has realized the presence of the Lord with him this month. He will not let us fail if we put our trust in him, and let him lead us. The Lord has helped in the work this month and there has been victory in all things. Bro. Ma says that his heart is filled with inexpressible joy and victory. Praise the Lord!

The meetings held in the mission this month have been as usual. Four evangelistic meetings are held every week. At seven o'clock the Christians meet with Bro. Ma for prayer and then they go out on the street with their drums and instruments and announce the meeting and invite the people to come to the mission. Many people follow the workers back to the mission and the hall is usually full. The students and the Christians help in the services in giving their testimonies and doing personal work and the Lord has blessed them mightily.

The Lord has helped Bro. Ma in learning the Shanghai dialect. The people who come to the mission do not understand the Mandarin and so the Lord in his great power enabled Bro. Ma to secure the language that was necessary to reach the people.

A theater was opened next door to the Tongshan mission a few months ago which has caused a great deal of disturbance. The noise made work at the mission very difficult for Bro. Ma. One night after an evangelistic service Bro. Ma was reading the Bible and it seemed as though a voice said to him, "You must pray." So he closed the Bible and began to pray. First he prayed that the Lord would undertake in the matter of a location for the mission for the theater was causing such a disturbance that it seemed almost necessary to move to another place. So Bro. Ma prayed, "Lord, if it is your will that we move to another place, prepare a place for us. If it is your will that we stay here, defeat the devil and close the door of the theater." When Bro. Ma had finished praying a great light came into his soul and the burden was lifted and he knew that the Lord had heard and would answer. Before three days had passed the theater was closed and a sign, "For Rent" was placed on the door. Praise the Lord for answered prayer! Bro. Ma's heart was filled with joy and his faith was strengthened and he knows that you will rejoice with him.

Since the Bible Institute opened, the first part of September, the students have again been coming each Sunday and helping with the Sunday school work at Tongshan Road. The Lord is blessing that work very much. The attendance every Sunday is very good and the children are learning to understand the Gospel and many of them really love Jesus. The Lord is helping the teachers in bringing the lessons to these little ones in a way that they can understand so that they might really accept Jesus as their Saviour.

Bro. Ma asks that you continue to pray for him that he might live a victorious life and bear much fruit for the Lord.

A RECORD YEAR IN BIBLE DISTRIBUTION.

By Rev. George William Carter, D. D.

General Secretary of the New York Bible Society. The Bible is still popular; it is still the world's best seller. More than thirty million copies are circulated every year throughout the world, and the Book has been translated into more than 800 languages and dialects. At the annual meeting of the New York Bible Society, just held, the announcement was made that during the year 1928, 965,671 copies of the Scriptures in 71 languages were circulated in the City and Harbor of New York, the largest distribution ever made by the Society. No other book has had such a circulation in the metropolitan area.

The New York Bible Society has completed 119 years of Christian and patriotic service. In the year 1809, the year the original Society was organized, 923 Bibles were circulated. That was a day of small beginnings. The territory of the City of New York at that time extended from the Battery to Chambers Street, with a population of 90,000 inhabitants, while the total population of the area now covered by the five Boroughs of Greater New York was less than 120,000. City Hall was then in process of construction. Its front and two sides were built of white marble, while on the north side of the building sandstone was used from motives of economy, it being thought that the material on that side was of little consequence, as few citizens would ever reside north of the spot. The present Canal Street was so low and marshy that often during high tide the waters of the East and Hudson Rivers met in the center of Manhattan Island. An interesting fact is recorded of a Lutheran Church which was involved at the time in financial difficulties. Contributions being solicited, one friend offered to donate a tract of six acres of land near the stone bridge at the corner of Broadway and Canal Street. After much deliberation, the trustees refused the gift, declaring the land would not be worth the trouble of putting a fence about it. It is interesting to note that just one week after the New York Bible Society was organized, the building of the first free school in New York was dedicated. This free school, later growing into our public school system. In the year 1809 there was in the city a public library, two free schools, a hospital, a medical college, one Roman Catholic church, one Jewish Synagogue, and forty-nine Protestant churches or places of worship.

After one hundred and nineteen years of service, New York Bible Society has reached a place of large influence in the religious life of a city and nation. The large distribution of the Scriptures during the past year was made through missionary societies, pastors of churches, accredited volunteers workers, and employed agents who carry the Word of Life to the immigrants, the seaman, and the multitudes of many nationalities. The workers go into the hospitals, the prisons, and other institutions for the helpless and poor. The Society has placed, within a few years, nearly 100,000 Bibles in the guest rooms of New York hotels. Its work for the blind is national in its influence, as the Society publishes Portions of the Bible in the Universal System of raised type for the blind, called Revised Braille, Grade 1½. Hundreds of Volumes in raised type are donated annually to the blind.

The Society has only one work, that of circulating the Holy Scriptures. It handles no literature of any kind excepting the Bible. The Society never goes into debt and never borrows money, the amount of the work being determined by its income. The large number of friends in every state who are interested in the free distribution of the Scriptures make possible the continued activities of this historic Society, which is located in its Bible House at 5 East Forty-Eight Street, New York.

ance from oppression, and of the blessing that should be poured out upon the inhabitants of the earth.

The Old Testament scriptures in sacrifices, offerings, the construction of the tabernacle, the building of the temple, the promise of the prophets and songs of the psalmist all pointed to the coming of our Lord Jesus to offer himself a living sacrifice for the sins of the people. First, to suffer for the redemption of the people, and then to reign in triumph and blessedness over his redeemed people.

When Jesus came to live before us, to teach us how to live, and to die for us that we might be redeemed and lifted up into a life of holiness, no small part of his work was to reveal the Father to us. Men knew that God existed, but they did not know Him. They knew that he was the creator of all things but they did not know his nature. They knew something of his power; they had seen something of his indignation against sin, but they had no sort of comprehension of his love. They had never conceived of addressing him as Father until Jesus came and taught us that blessed and high privilege of saying, "Our Father, which art in heaven."

Men knew that God could create a world. David had sung of his handiwork in the creation of the stars, but men had never dreamed that he would take upon himself the form of a man and carry a kit of carpenter's tools upon his shoulders, and go down an alley and fix the broken window in a poor man's cottage, that he might teach men his compassionate love. Until Jesus came, they did not understand that "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." The parable of the prodigal son gave men a conception of the great God of the universe they had never had, and never could have had if Jesus had not come and told the wonderful story of how an unworthy son should waste his living, go into the depths of sin and shame and then come home to the open arms of compassionate mercy, of glad forgiveness and joyful feast. In this parable our Lord Jesus is saying, let me tell you about the mercy of God. Let me explain to you to what depths of sin a soul may fall; how far it may wander away and yet return and all heaven be glad; the God of the universe is represented as running to meet the vilest wretch with the arms of mercy open wide, and the kisses of love and forgiveness planted with joy upon the polluted cheek of a wanderer who comes back in bony hunger and ragged ruin.

We had caught glimpses of the love of God from the prophecies of Isaiah and the psalms of David, but we would have had no conception of this wondrous love had not Jesus come and revealed the Father. Take the case of the woman caught in sin, who was brought to Jesus on her way to be stoned to death. Such a woman is utterly outcast. All society turns from her with disgust, but Jesus gives her mercy. His word is not in fierce condemnation, but "Go, and sin no more." Let it be borne in mind that in this wonderful illustration of compassion, Jesus was revealing the Father. The same is true of that marvelous revelation of compassion on the cross when he caught the dying thief from the very mouth of the pits of torment and lifted him to the glories of paradise.

We must not forget what our Lord said to the anxious Philip, who said, "Show us the Father and it sufficeth us," and the answer of the Master was, "Philip, have I been so long time with you, and yet sayest thou, show us the Father? He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father." In Christ the very heart of God is revealed. In every stroke of his carpenter's hammer, in every song of his saw, through all the humble toil of his life the tender words that he uttered, the sins he forgave, the sick that he healed, the dead that he raised up, the death upon the cross, his resurrection from the grave, the Lord Jesus Christ was revealing the Father; he was emphasizing that saying of the inspired apostle, "God is love."

In the text our Lord is promising the coming of the Holy Ghost, and we learn that a large part of the work of the Holy Ghost is to reveal Jesus, to remind us of what Jesus said; to take the things of Christ and reveal them unto us. To lift up and glorify the Son of God as the Redeemer and Savior of the world. I wish to suggest to this great audience that as Jesus revealed the Father, so the Holy Ghost reveals the Son. He makes Jesus Christ not only the Messiah of prophecy, the Son of the Virgin Mary, the historic Christ of the gospel, but he makes him to the believing heart a living person, a present conscious Savior. The baptism with the Holy Ghost clarifies the entire spiritual atmosphere of the soul receiving that baptism. Such a soul has in the baptism with the Holy Ghost a personal revelation of Jesus Christ and the wonders of his love, the completeness of his redemption and deliverance from, not only the consequences of sin, but sin itself.

The coming of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost marked the high noon of divine revelation. There was a sense in which all else had been a preparation for this climax of divine power and mercy. The prophets revealed God to men. Jesus Christ came and explained that God was a Father, that he loved men. The Holy Ghost in his coming gathers up these past revelations and brings the blessed Trinity into men. He makes them in Christ new creatures. He makes of man a temple and into that temple the Holy Trinity comes to dwell.

In John 14, where the Lord Jesus promises the baptism with the Holy Ghost, and promises to pray the Father to bestow him upon us, he says, "At that day ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you." He further says, "If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him."

The widespread skepticism that has broken out in the church and is being heralded abroad from many pulpits in this nation, is not the result of mature scholarship or any recent discovery in archaeology; it is a brand of skepticism and unbelief which comes as a logical result of ignorance of Christ as revealed by the baptism, incoming and abiding of the Holy Ghost. He is the conservator of the faith. His coming, illumination, abiding and witness confirm and establish all true believers. He plants the feet of the children of God upon the impregnable Rock of Ages. No man who has received the baptism with the Holy Ghost, subsequent to his regeneration, the baptism which Jesus instructed his disciples to wait for and receive at Jerusalem will ever question the divine authority of the Holy Scriptures. He has received a supernatural proof of the supernatural power of God in the world. He does not question the Virgin Birth, the fact of miracles, of the atoning merits of Christ's sacrificial death upon the cross. All of these things become to him glorious realities. He has been divinely initiated into the mysterious secret of the Trinity. He has come into oneness with Father, Son and Holy Ghost. He is made profoundly and blessedly conscious of the truths of the Scriptures, the will of God, the redemptive work of Christ and the sanctifying, keeping and witnessing of the ever blessed Spirit.

One reason, in fact, the main reason why unbelief is abroad and working havoc in the church, arises out of the fact that the Holy Ghost and his office work in the Church have been sadly neglected. That there has been fanaticism and extravagance no one informed will deny, but not only has the Holy Ghost been neglected but in many instances he has been ridiculed. Many men of large learning have never sought after the baptism with the Holy Ghost. They have never received that power which alone can illuminate their minds and prepare them for true gospel teachers, for holy evangelism. They really know nothing of the great power of God. The Holy Ghost has never been permitted to take the things of Christ and reveal them unto them. They are in doubt and have wandered away into darkness.

It is now almost two thousand years since our Lord commissioned his disciples to preach the gospel to every creature. How sadly we have failed! Had the church and ministry, from the very first, kept in mind the commandment of our Lord contained in the text, and had there been a Spirit-filled ministry and people, a Spirit-baptized and empowered evangelism, we would not have a vatican at Rome and untold thousands of vast cathedrals with worldly multitudes in their finery, in pampered preachers drawing immense salaries while they disseminate skepticism and drive the true faith of the Gospel out of the world, but we would have carried the gospel to the ends of the earth, we would have brought peace and co-operation among the various nations, and untold millions who have gone out in darkness would have gone up into eternal life and blessedness.

The leaders of the church may run to and fro in the earth; they may call conventions, set on foot great financial schemes, erect churches, endow schools, send forth armies of people to life service, but if the Third Person of the Trinity is neglected, if the Holy Ghost is not sought and received; if those who undertake leadership and those who go forth to spread the gospel have not had imparted to them the wisdom and power which the Holy Ghost alone can give there can but be failure. The heathen will continue to sit in darkness, divisions will multiply, and eventually the church and agencies which should have sent out the gospel will become, as in many places it is becoming, channels for the dissemination of unbelief and the destruction instead of the salvation of the people.

If the church would save the world she must come back to pentecost; she must tarry in prayer for that cleansing, illumination and power which only the baptism with the Holy Ghost can give. Will she heed the commandment of her Lord and tarry? If so, she will find him a living, present, personality able to save to the uttermost. If she refuses to heed his commandments, she will drift into darkness; she will deny his Virgin Birth, his godhead, and the atonement he has made upon the cross, and in the end, she will crucify the Son of God afresh and put him to an open shame before the world to whom she should have lifted him up as a great and gracious Savior, King of kings and Lord of lords.

Passed Another Milestone.

YESTERDAY, March 10, was my 72nd birthday. I did hope to have spent this anniversary at Orlando Camp Meeting, but when the time came I found that I had not gained sufficient strength for the undertaking. I was quite disappointed, but submitted to the situation without complaint. Wife and I walked to a near-by church for the morning service, the third time I have been in church in some four months. My soul was refreshed.

Looking backward, there is one view of life that makes it appear a very short period. It seems only a few weeks ago that I was a boy on the farm, then a circuit rider, then a station preacher, then evangelist, then 72nd birthday. Another view makes it appear quite a long period of time. Fifty years since I was licensed to preach; forty-one years editor of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, six years of 365 days each in tents and cabins on camp meeting grounds; in fact, it is more than six years, as I have put in three months in camp meeting work every year for at least thirty-five years. The Lord has blessed me with wonderful health. This outdoor life in the summer time, notwithstanding the arduous camp meeting work, has been good for my body as well as my soul.

Up to four months ago, I was in remarkable health and very active service. The past four months have been a severe test of my physical powers. The Lord has been gracious, and since coming to Florida, I have made gratifying improvement, but the asthma and bronchitis hold on. I am hoping with the coming of spring and summer to get entirely free of these troubles and be ready for the camp meeting campaign. God's will be done in me, and with me.

I feel inclined to a little heart-to-heart talk with THE HERALD family. We have a great family of readers, people to whom THE HERALD has been going for five, ten, fifteen, twenty, twenty-five, thirty, thirty-five, and some for forty years. This is THE HERALD family. We have visitors, some for three months, some for six months, and others for twelve months, who leave us, but the family who stay with, pray for us, and help us, make THE HERALD a possibility and a messenger of full salvation to a vast multitude of readers.

I may safely say that thousands of letters come to us from those who assure us that they receive great spiritual help from THE HERALD. This thrills us with joy and strengthens us for the good task. Propped up in bed throughout my long illness, with the exception of a few weeks, I was able to dictate matter for THE HERALD, and to keep my pages fairly well filled. I rarely write anything for these columns without going first to my knees and asking for divine guidance and help to send out something that will prove a blessing to many members of our great HERALD family.

We are living in perilous times. We are amazed and startled when we think of the skepticism that is creeping into the churches, and the wickedness and worldliness that it is producing among professed Christians. If there ever was a time when those who believe the word of God, and love the Son of God should pray and labor for the spread of the saving gospel and the power of the Holy Ghost among men, that time is now. We need a great quickening and revival in the revival of full salvation. All of us who claim the sanctifying grace ought to put forth renewed effort to spread the good news of full salvation in our Lord and Saviour. This is no time for discouragement, for the lowering of our flag, the abatement of our zeal, of silencing our testimony. The encroachments of infidelity in the world, and unbelief in the church, and wholesale wickedness everywhere cannot be met with the spirit of compromise or timidity; it must be met with a fearless declaration of divine truth in a clear testimony to the saving and sanctifying power of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The people believe what they are taught. If we get the saving truths of the gospel into the minds and hearts of the people these truths must come from the men in the pulpit. You have perhaps seen the appeal in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD for assistance in placing THE HERALD in the hands of young ministers. You can make no better investment of a small sum of money. Send a list of preachers and one dollar for each one for THE HERALD one year. My poor health and distance from THE HERALD office brings this message to you a little late, but we extend the time into April and beg of you to think of some one to whom you can send THE HERALD, with an earnest prayer that it may prove a blessing.

Looking back over these 72 years I see that it has been a battle all the way. First the battle of an orphan child with poor health; then the battle of a delicate boy with poverty; then the battle of a young preacher with very small remuneration. The first three years and six months of my ministry I received, all told, $535. With this I purchased a horse, saddle and bridle, a watch, scant clothing, ate among the people and frequently went to bed without supper because all the numbers in my meal ticket had been punched at my dinner hour. But they were happy years! The Devil tempted me, but the Lord blessed me. I look back upon those years with an undying love for the people with whom I came in contact, and a fond hope that I shall meet many of them in the Father's house.

Then the war on the Wesleyan interpretation of the Bible teaching of sanctification broke out, and thank God, through his mercy I found myself on the side of the Bible, of the cross, of the Holy Spirit, of full salvation. It has been a great period in the history of the religious life of our country. As I approach the setting sun I had rather have been a preacher of full salvation than to have had all the honors and all the wealth of all the world. I only regret that this ministry has not been with greater spiritual power and larger results. I must admit a deep longing for at least a few more years to proclaim the Lord Jesus Christ mighty to save to the uttermost. May God bless you all. Remember me in your prayers, and please, when you go to the throne of grace for me, do not take up the Lord's time with bragging on me, or intimating that he cannot get on wonderfully well without me, but pray for a poor, weak, old servant who loves the Lord and longs for a little more time to preach the blessed gospel which is the power of God unto salvation. He knows best. His wisdom is unlimited, his mercies are boundless. His will be done in you and in me. Amen!

Your brother in the Lord Jesus Christ,
H. C. MORRISON.

The Passing of Rev. C. E. Cornell.

I was very sick in the hospital in Louisville when my beloved Brother Cornell passed to his reward in Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 10. I had known this brother for many years. He was one of the most delightful, whole-souled Christian gentlemen you would meet in a lifetime. He was intense, enthusiastic. He thrilled with the love of Christ and the love of humanity. He never trifled; there was seriousness in him, but he was full of good humor and cheerfulness.

He was completely absorbed in the great work of preaching the gospel, all the way from conviction for sin to entire sanctification. He was clear, accurate, forceful. There was no hesitation or sidestepping. He was not ashamed of the gospel which offered full redemption from sin, here and now, by faith in our Christ, mighty to save to the uttermost.

He was dynamic. He moved straight forward and created agitation, thinking, action. The pool was stirred where he went, and those who stepped in were healed. What a company of souls redeemed under his ministry he must have met when he entered into Paradise! He was a great pastor, a powerful evangelist, a brilliant writer, a tender, compassionate, loving brother. He has gone from our world, but he has not gone from us. His ministry and the influence of his life abide. Let us be faithful as he was faithful, and by and by we shall meet him at the Master's feet. May the blessing of God rest upon his church, and his family.

Your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

"SYSTEMATIZING ERROR."

Rev. A. S. Hunter.

RIN Ephesians 4:14, Paul says, "Be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Another translation of the last phrase is, "with a view to systematizing error." The Greek word is "methodian," method or system.

How exactly that describes Russellism, Eddyism, etc! Note Paul's terms: "wind of doctrine" (or doctrine of wind, without substance, "hot air;" "sleight of men;" "cunning craftiness." And all this "with a view to systematizing errors." Both Russellism and Eddyism are elaborate systems of teaching. Each claims to be based on the Bible. However, it is the Bible as interpreted by "Pastor" Russel or Mrs. Eddy; not the Bible as you and I read it for ourselves. Their systems of doctrine are not drawn from the Bible, but are human ideas of Satanic origin; and they twist Bible, words and statements so as to seem to support their theories. "Systematizing error."

Those same words are not inappropriate to Modernism, or "theistic evolution." Raw evolution, with its denial of the Bible record of creation, did not take well with people who had been brought up to regard the Bible as God's Word. Therefore, later evolutionists revised their method and made a place for God in their theory, calling it theistic evolution. They now say that evolution was or is God's way of creation. People trained under that, will soon be ready to drop God and the Bible out.

But, apart from that, the Modernists have taken Bible and Christian words and phrases, emptied them of their real meaning, and refilled them with a different meaning of their own. Unsuspecting people listen to them, and suppose they are hearing sound Bible truth; and all the while they are being given something unscripural and erroneous. If the Modernists stated their ideas in other than Bible words and phrases, if they used words which convey the real thought in their own minds, people would detect the error, and would not be misled. They do as they do, "with a view to systematizing error." Only those who know the Bible by careful and prayerful reading and study, are immune from this poison.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a Kentucky girl, have black eyes, dark hair, am five feet, one-half inch tall and weigh 148 pounds, and will be sixteen April 11. Have I a twin? My sister takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it very much. I have been in Illinois four months and I like it fine. We live on a farm where I can have a jolly time. I go to Sunday school almost every Sunday. I am the Junior class teacher. I sure do enjoy it. I am not a Christian, but would like to be. I don't go to dances or shows or anything that's wrong. I want you cousins to pray for me. As this is my first letter to the Cousins, I hope to see it in print. Darleen Hamshire, I guess your first name to be Ruth. Am I correct? If so, please write me. I will hush and let some one else talk a bit.

Lavada Kirby,
Rt. 2, Arrowsmith, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy crowd of boys and girls? I am a girl fifteen years old. I like to read books, especially the Bible. I belong to the M. E. Church. I have been reading The Herald and like page ten. My birthday is Oct. 10. Have I a twin? I go to school and am in the eighth grade. I guess I had better close before Mr. W. B. comes in. Please write to me boys and girls. Darleen Hamshire, I guess your name is Ruth.

Erna Meeks,
Rt. 2, Smith's Grove, Ky

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years of age and am in the fifth grade in public school and second grade in piano. I like my teacher very much. Aunt Bettie, I saw you in 1927 at camp meeting here. I saw you with Dr. Morrison. We have a kodak picture of you two, too. Dr. Morrison baptized my sister and I. He went to our house and did it. He preached at the college, too. He remembers me, I suppose. My daddy is a professor in Abury College. He takes The Pentecostal Herald and I always look for page ten. Here is a poem that I composed. I like it, do you?

Jesus Christ,
Jesus Christ, Jesus Christ
Loves the little ones,
Jesus Christ, Jesus Christ,
Best man under the sun.
Jesus Christ, Jesus Christ,
Loves the grown ups too,
Jesus Christ, Jesus Christ,
Not a man he slew.

Darleen Hamshire, I guess your first name for Ruth. If I am right send me a letter. I hope Mr. W. B. is making ice cream when this letter arrives. And as this is my first letter I hope to see this in print.

Margaret Jean Nofcier,
Wilmore, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading page ten. My mother takes The Herald. I thank God for a good Christian mother and father. When I was eight years old I was saved. This is my first letter to The Herald and hope to see it in print. The one who can guess my middle name I will send them something. It begins with F and ends with A, and has five letters. Helen Robertson, I guess your first name is Viola. Now don't forget what you said you would write a long letter. I hope Mr. W. B. is out riding when this letter arrives.

231 Glenwood Ave., Pawtucket, R. I.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Now children, I have a little story to tell you this morning. It is of a little girl whose home was with her grandmother and who, when she went to Sunday school, had to cross a railroad which passed along a lake of water. She was always afraid in that place and she always felt a need of higher power and clung to her grandmother's hand till they passed that crossing. Her grandmother was trying to learn to run the auto so they could ride when they could not walk, but she was afraid for fear of an accident as she heard of so many being killed or hurt with terrible accidents. So she resolved to ask the Superintendent to pray for her grandmother not to be caught in a crash and killed. So after her class was over she came up from the primary room to find him. But where the altar was not occupied with seekers but it was filled with flowers. She looked around to see him and some one seeing whom she was looking for pointed to the pulpit where he was arranging for the choir where he led the singing. She went up the steps to him and told him what she wanted. Do you think he said, "Yes, sometime, I will, run on down?" No, he said, "Yes, we will do it now," and he knelt down with her there in the pulpit and they together prayed for God to save them from the danger she so much feared. She came down looking so happy. Her little prayer, she was sure, would be answered for she had a helper of one she felt like was next to God in her mind. How much we love to have some one stronger to lean on in time of need. A few Sundays after that the little one came and took her hood and coat off and sat down by me as she was to stay for the preaching service that time. I put my arm around her and as she leaned up to me I whispered, "Does your grandmother drive the car?" She said "no" and told me with her "finger speech" about it. Dear children, when duty calls you to a service answer, "Yes, we will do it now."

Sincerely yours,
Mary Hudson,
1204 E. Walnut St., Canton, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a little girl from the part of Illinois that is called "Egypt." Can you guess which part that is? We live near a holiness camp ground and get to go to camp meeting quite a bit. I go to school every day. I have light hair, fair complexion and brown eyes. I go to church and Sunday school every time I can. Can you guess my first name? It begins with an E and ends with an A. It has five letters. The one who guesses it I will write to them. I weigh 125 pounds. I am thirteen years old. My birthday is August 28th. Have I a twin? If so write to me. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print.

E. Juanita Lewis,
Rt. 1, Enfield, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May another Mississippi reader be admitted, just to drop a rosebud? You have been a constant visitor in my home since first I became interested in Christian literature. I feel that I could not be without the weekly visits of The Pentecostal Herald. The comments on the Sunday school lessons, Dr. and Mrs. Morrison's writings, the Junior's page are fine. Last but not least the write-up on "Faith" in the December copy, every word of it is excellent. Give me three things and the rest may go: Faith, when all glow is gone; Love that hides all faults, and Hope to make us anticipate.

"I'll not wait till the death dew has settled on your brow,
To tell you that you've helped me,
Please let me tell you now."
You must keep me on your prayer list,
And pray for me each day,
Pray that I may never falter,
In this world so full of sin.
To me you've been a blessing,
You've remembered me in your prayers.

You may look for me in heaven,
I'll meet you over there."

Your Friend.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As I enjoy reading the tenth page of The Herald since we have been taking it, and I haven't seen many letters from North Carolina, will you make a little room for me? Dorothy M. Shaw, I guess your name to be May. Georgia B. Shaw, I guess your name to be Bettie. A. Edson Crowd, I guess your name to be Robert. If these names are guessed right will be glad to hear from you. I would be very glad to see my letter in print. Wonder who is in my grade at school, the seventh, and as old as I am, fourteen? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with H. Who ever guesses my name I will write to them.

Maxine E. Williams,
Rt. 2, No. 47, Roseboro, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wish to join your happy band of boys and girls. I hope you will publish this little letter in The Pentecostal Herald. I am ten years old and in the sixth grade. I have brown hair and blue eyes. I am four feet, five inches tall and weigh 71 pounds. My father takes this paper. My mother is dead. I have four brothers and two sisters. We have quite a few pets. We have six rabbits, three dogs, and one cat. I know a girl that goes to the same school I do, her name is Vera Carter. I will stop because I know other children want their letters published too.

Emily Rozema,
Box 36, Slater, Wyo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little West Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a little orphan girl eight years old. I have no brothers or sisters. I am in the third grade at school. My grandma takes The Herald. Guess my middle name. It begins with R and ends with S. I have brown hair and eyes. This is the first letter to The Herald. I hope to see it in print. I will be glad to get letters from the cousins.

Florence McVey,
Edmond, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky boy join your group of cousins? Grandmother takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I especially like to read the letters of the Kentucky boys and girls. I go to Lexington Junior High, and am in the 7-A-4 class. I have about six teachers. I was born on March 9, and am ten years old. I am a Christian and glad to read that so many of the cousins are. As this is my first letter to The Herald, I hope to see it in print. I will not take up any more room, and hope Mr. W. B. is taking a stroll when this letter arrives.

Lewistine McCoy,
468 Maple Ave., Lexington, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: A little Texas boy wants to join your band. I am nine years old. I live on the farm, but I go to school in town. I am in the third grade. My mother wrote to The Herald when she was about my age. My grandmother enjoyed reading the paper when she was living. If any of you would like to know about Texas write to me and I will tell you about it.

Darinn Farquhar,
Whitney, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let as small a little girl as I am join your band of boys and girls? I am seven years old. I go to school at East Marion, a cotton mill village, where about five hundred boys and girls go. I am in the second grade. My teacher's name is Mrs. Tate McCurry. I like her fine. Darleen Hamshire, your first name is Ruth.

Grace Moore,
P. S.—I cannot write much yet, so I asked papa to write for me.
Rt. 1, Box 75, Marion, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls. This is my first letter and I would like to see it printed. I like to read page ten. I have light complexion, black hair, blue eyes. I am five feet and three inches tall and weigh about 135. My birthday is August 17. Have I a twin? If so I wish they would write to me. I am fifteen years old. I live two and one half miles from Bethel, Ohio, on a farm. I wish all the boys and girls would write to me. I will try and answer every letter I get.

Velma L. Daugherty,
Rt. 1, Bethel, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band? I live in the country on a farm. I go to school most every day and love my teacher. Her name is Miss Nora Johnson. My age is ten years. I am in the third grade. My father takes The Herald and how I love to read it, and page ten is delightful. Oh, how I love to hear the cousins say they are Christians; it makes me want to be a Christian. My father and mother are Christians, they belong to the M. E. Church, South, that is my choice church. To avoid errors write or print clearly is my first letter to The Herald. I hope to see it in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is out feeding his chickens. I will close by asking Aunt Bettie and the cousins to pray for me that I may become a Christian. Ida Walters, Julip, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As I saw my other letter in print I thought I would write again. I have received lots of letters from the cousins. I received so many it would take a secretary to answer them all, but I would like to answer them. We all enjoy The Herald. We have had the coldest winter we have ever had in years, but we are having fine weather now in California. Love to you and all the cousins.

Leo Alexander,
Rt. 1, Box 25, B, Novato, Calif.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to you and I'd love to see it in print. I love to read page ten, it is of much interest to me. Have I a twin? I would like so much to write to my twin sister or brother. My birthday is June 9. I haven't seen any letter from Massachusetts in page ten and I thought I would write to you. I hope to have a twin so that we may be friends. There is great pleasure in reading page ten. If I have a twin I would write to my twin brother or sister, even though they are not my twin, I would like to have any of them write to me. Ruth Dias Monteiro,

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little North Carolina girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eleven years old. I have three brothers and no sister. I go to school every day. My teacher's name is Miss Randie Manuel, and I like her just fine. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. My Sunday school teacher's name is Mrs. Mannie Smith, and I like her fine. My father takes The Herald and I like it. I like to read page ten. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print.

FALLEN ASLEEP

GOWEN.

Henry C. Gowen died at his home, near Donansburg, Ky., of a complication of flu and bronchial catarrh. The subject of this notice was born at Charlotte, North Carolina, June 12th, 1856 and on the early morning of Jan. 16, 1929, he peacefully laid his armor down and yielded to the divine will of the Lord, to whom he had been a professing follower for the past fifty years. He was a strong believer in the old time Methodist faith, and at the time of his death was a member of the Ladies Chapel M. E., S., Church. He emigrated with his parents to Kentucky when about six years of age, and settled in Adair county near Price's Creek, where he remained with his parents until about the age of twenty-four when he moved with his young family to Green county, and there remained a resident until his death. For a number of years he followed farming as occupation, but in 1906, entered the Milling and Lumber business under the firm name of H. C. Gowen and Son, and formed many friends and acquaintances throughout Green, Hart and Metcalfe counties.

On December 22nd, 1877, he was united in marriage to Miss Martha Jane Patton, of Breeding, Ky., who preceded him to the grave about five years ago. To this union were born seven children, five sons and two daughters, all of whom survive to mourn their loss, except the oldest son, Robert N. Gowen, who died April 18th, 1901. Besides his immediate family, he leaves other relatives and a host of friends to mourn his death.

Short services were conducted in the old home by Rev. A. A. Bonta, and on the 17th, his mortal remains were tenderly laid to rest by the side of his beloved companion in the little cemetery, where he awaits the glorious morn of the first resurrection.

Although it makes our hearts ache and our eyes fill with tears to think our friends are taken away one by one, yet we have this consolation, that they are at rest, safe in the arms of Jesus, and free from suffering and are waiting on the other shore to meet their loved ones there, to spend eternity in that Celestial City where no sad partings ever come and no "good by" words shall ever be spoken.

May our heavenly Father's richest blessings rest upon the bereaved children and may they all determine by God's grace that some day they will meet together around God's throne, one unbroken family circle.

His devoted son,
W. E. Gowen.

ARMEL.

We loved her, yes, we loved her,
But Jesus loved her more,
And he has sweetly called her
To yonder shining shore,
The golden gates were open wide,
A gentle voice said "Come"
And with farewell unspoken
She calmly entered home.

Beatrice Opal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Ross of Rushville, passed away Jan. 21, 1929, at Spencer Sanatorium in Canton, where she was taken three weeks before when stricken with influenza pneumonia.

Beatrice was born in Buenavista township, Sept. 28, 1902. Here her girlhood days were spent. She attended the country school. Later was a student in Rushville high school. Her sweet, sunny disposition won the friendship of all who knew her.

In 1914, in her youth, she gave her heart to God, and united with the Methodist Episcopal church at Ebenezer. Those who knew her best found a personality, with a likeness unto "The Rose of Sharon," always gentle and kind with such a firm belief in her Savior, that nothing shook her faith. In her last illness she said to loved ones, "When pains are most severe, I bow my head and pray harder." With her parents she removed to Colorado in 1919 and here, too, she found her place in the church, where she taught a class in Sunday school, was active in Epworth League and also assisted in the choir.

Oct. 4, 1925, she was married to Warren Armel, later moving to Canton, Ill., where he engaged in mercantile business.

Besides her husband and parents she is survived by three brothers—Winfield, John D. and Samuel Ross and three sisters—Mrs. Geo. H. Young, Mrs. Ernest Bartlett of Rushville and Mrs. Raymond Whitehead of Canton, Ill. Many other relatives and a host of friends.

On Thursday, Jan., 24th, funeral services were held at the First Methodist Episcopal church. The service was conducted by Rev. T. W. Rippey, assisted by Rev. E. K. Towle and Rev. O. T. Thomas. Interment was made in the Palm cemetery.

Angels have taken her out of our care,
She has gone to that home so peaceful and fair

Gone for the seasons to come and to go

Wreathing her grave with blossoms and snow.

SIGMON.

On Tuesday morning at twelve minutes past twelve, February 12, the spirit of Lorenza Dow Sigmon departed from this world into that more perfect home, to hear his Savior say, "well done thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Just before his death Mr. Sigmon spoke to his children bidding them farewell and asking them to meet him in Heaven. He repeated, "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

He was the son of Mr. J. W. and Mrs. Minerva Sigmon being born in Catawba County, June 30, 1860, making him 69 years, 7 months and 11 days old.

Mr. Sigmon had been a faithful church worker and devout christian from his youth. For years he was a member of New Hope Church in Lincoln County, N. C. He later moved his membership to Mount Holly Methodist Church, Mount Holly, N. C. Mr. Sigmon had an unflinching interest in the church and Sunday school, as long as he was able he attended both services regularly. He will be greatly missed both in the church and Bible class, by those who knew him, for to know this fine old man was to love him.

The writer has been a close neighbor of his for years and being one of his many friends among the younger generation has learned great lessons in patience and cheer from talking to him and from hearing him read from his favorite book and magazine, the Bible and The Pentecostal Herald. Mr. Sigmon had read The Herald for ten years. When he became too weak to read it himself he asked some one to read selections of it to him. Mr. Sigmon is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ida Loftin Sigmon, seven sons and two daughters: Messrs. Verdine, Edgar, Russell, Clarence, Curtiss, Frank, and Holliss Sigmon, Mrs. R. H. Grice and Miss Jessie Sigmon.

The following brothers and sisters also survive. Messrs. James and Pink Sigmon, of Alexes, Route 1, Mesdames France Cook and Richard Lawrence, of Catawba County; Mrs. A. K. Loftin, Altavista, Va., and Mrs. B. V. Lowe, Alexis R. 1. Several grandchildren also survive.

To his wife and children, brothers and sisters we extend our sincerest sympathy in this sad hour, and point them to the only one who can comfort them at a time like this.

Funeral services were held at the home on Wednesday, February 13, 1929, by Rev. J. W. Coombs of Goodsonville assisted by Rev. J. C. Cornett of Mt. Holly and J. O. Cox of Lowesville, and burial at the New Hope cemetery in Lincoln County.

Edith E. Davenport.

BRESHEARS.

On Wednesday evening at 2:15 o'clock a shadow of great sorrow fell upon the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Breshears when the sweet spirit of their darling son left the little body and took its flight homeward to the God who gave it. Earl Eugene Breshears was born January 22, 1923, and died January 9, 1929, at the age of 5 years eleven months and seventeen days. It was hard to see the dear one suffer during his sickness and to know we had to give him up so soon. But we feel our loss is Heavens gain. Earl was a very bright and attractive child with a pleasant disposition and always ready to greet his friends with a smile. It is hard to give up our loved ones yet, we have this consolation, that he is at rest safe in the arms of Jesus, and free from suffering and is waiting on the other shore for his loved ones. But little Earl is gone, yes, gone from this world and all we can do is to prepare ourselves to meet him in Heaven, where there is no pain, nor sorrow, but where all is beautiful and pleasant. He leaves to mourn his loss his father, mother and little brother and a host of relatives and friends. Funeral services were held at the Methodist church at Concord and burial was in the Concord cemetery beside his little sister.

Written by his Aunt,
Miss Ione Tipton.

CARTER.

Sarah Helben Guthrie Carter was born July 10, 1863, was married to Joel J. Carter, 1882, died July 1, 1928, age 64 years, 11 months and 21 days. To this union was born one daughter, Mrs. D. J. Wood and one son, James Walter who departed this life Jan. 4, 1914.

Her husband died Sept. 27, 1884, and left her to raise these two children alone, she remained a widow till death. She was converted at the age of sixteen and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church at Cole Schoolhouse now Lee's Chapel and lived a consistent member of the same till death. She consecrated her life to God and was sanctified in the early part of the year 1893 and was always ready to testify to the sanctifying power of the Holy Ghost.

She was afflicted for thirty one years with a cough contracted from Lagrippe which terminated in T. B. She bore her affliction with patience. It was the writers good fortune to form her acquaintance just after she was sanctified and it was through her and her sister and others the writer was led into the experience of sanctification, then a teacher in the public schools at the age of twenty-one. The writer held his first revival at his home church at Lee's Chapel in August, 1910. Sister Carter and one or two others were the only ones that would pray in public. Her mother, Mrs. Emily Guthrie, was living with her, and an invalid. She would remain with her mother till just time to ride to the church for the morning altar service, missing the morning sermon, and then remain for 1:30 afternoon service, and then hurry home to her mother whom she had left on the front porch in her rocker with a bucket of water beside her.

Sister Carter went through many dark trials, the darkest was when her son was killed on the railroad, near Wild Horse, Colo. Through them all she never swerved from the faith and was never fanatical. It was my good fortune to be her pastor for a number of years, the last one being 1928. I visited her often during her last illness and always found her trusting in the Lord.

She leaves a daughter, a son-in-law, four grandsons, and a little granddaughter, a brother and one sister, and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

Her daughter is badly afflicted with rheumatism and has to walk on crutches. Let all who know the worth of prayers pray for her.

G. H. Shelley.

The Pentecostal Herald:

For the glory of God I should like the readers of The Herald to know that, shortly after entering upon my 90th year, I was operated on for the removal of a cancer, and suffered the loss of the right arm above the elbow, and after two weeks' confinement in the hospital, came home with renewed health, and a spiritual sky radiant with divine glory. God has been so good to me, in giving me an abiding faith that I shall have ten

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson 1.—April 7, 1929.

Subject.—The Ministry of Isaiah.
Isa. 6:1-8; 20:1-2; 38:1-5.

Golden Text.—Then said I, here am I, send me. Isaiah 6:8.

Time.—B. C. 758-698. This is not absolutely certain. He may have prophesied till a later date.

Places.—Juda and Jerusalem.

Introduction.—The name Isaiah is an abbreviation of the Hebrew name Zeshazahu, meaning Jehovah's help or salvation. His father's name was Amoz, which must be distinguished from Amos, the name of one of the minor prophets. The common belief is, that Isaiah belonged to the tribe of Juda and that he was connected by blood with the family of King David; but there is no positive proof of this. The notion that he belonged to the Davidic line possibly arose from the fact that he seems to have been on social equality with royalty.

The first verse of his book gives a fairly good outline of the period of time through which Isaiah prophesied, and the region of his ministry. His vision was "concerning Judah and Jerusalem"; although he does touch other regions at times. He prophesied during the times of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah; but we find almost nothing in the book concerning Jotham, or his reign. Excepting the first chapter, which is a sort of foreword to the entire book, the prophet deals with the time of Uzziah until we come to the sixth chapter where we find a mere reference to the death of Uzziah as occurring in the same year wherein Isaiah had his great vision in the temple.

I see no valid reason for supposing that a second Isaiah (a Deutero-Isaiah, to use the term of the destructive critics) wrote the latter part of the book. The notion (opinion it cannot be termed) does not rest upon a solid basis, but bears every evidence of a covert effort to get rid of the supernatural element in prophecy. One thing is certain: some one wrote the latter part of the book; and as far as we can discover, there lived no man in that period of history, except Isaiah, who was capable of doing it. That second writer has never yet been found, except in a guess, and that amounts to nothing.

The time of Isaiah's death is not known. Nor do we know how long he lived. If he began prophesying when he was as young as 20 years and lived as late as B. C. 698, he must have been about 90 at the time of his death. There is no authentic history concerning his death, but rabbinical tradition says that he lived as late as the reign of Manasseh, and that he was "sawn asunder in the trunk of a tree by order of" that cruel monarch. If this tradition be true, it is possible that his life was lengthened to the century mark.

There is nothing in Hebrew equal in diction and sublime imagery to Isaiah's prophecy. It is, indeed, a masterpiece in the literature of the world. Such chapters as the sixth, thirty-fifth and fifty-third take rank with the sublimest productions of human thought in all ages. If I may express my own conviction, they out-rank human thought, and bear within themselves unmistakable evidence of supernatural inspiration.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. In the year that King Uzziah died.—This fixes definitely the date of the vision. Previous chapters tell of things that took place during that king's reign. We know not how much of it coincided with the early part of Isaiah's ministry. Let me warn my readers against a far-fetched, foolish interpretation of this sixth chapter, that calls it Isaiah's conversion. I do not suppose that there was a better man in all Judea than this young prophet. Whatever happened to him on that particular day in the temple was for his spiritual cleansing. I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne. This language is sublime and mysterious. In John 12:41 we find these words which must refer to Isaiah's vision: "These things said Esaias (Isaiah), when he saw his glory, and spake of him." Manifestly Isaiah had a vision of Jesus Christ in his glory.

2. Seraphims.—The Hebrew plural has no S attached. This word occurs nowhere else in the Bible. Dr. Clarke derives it from the Hebrew word, seraph to burn. They must belong to a very high order of spiritual beings whose offices is to wait upon Deity. The use they make of their wings in covering their faces and their feet indicates humility and worship.

3. Holy, holy, holy, is the LORD of hosts.—It would be impossible to worship in sublimer language than this. How men do belittle the word of God when they undertake to do away with the Deity of Jesus Christ.

5. Woe is me.—Isaiah's vision of God was threefold: He saw Jehovah; he saw himself; he saw his people. It is ever thus. The preacher who has had no vision of the holiness of God is unfit for the pulpit; for he has no vision of himself, or of his people. Because of his uncleanness Isaiah could not stand in the presence of "the King, the LORD of hosts."

6. A live coal.....off the altar.—Figurative. I suppose it represents the New Testament baptism with fire. It is the cleansing power of the Holy Ghost.

7. Hath touched thy lips.—Isaiah calls himself "a man of unclean lips;" but we find his trouble deeper down in his being, as is indicated by the statement of the ministering seraph: "Thine iniquity is taken away, and thy sin purged." His heart was made spiritually clean.

8. Whom shall I send?—God is ever calling for suitable men for his work. Here am I; send me.—God is calling for holy men. If they will but let him, he will sanctify them for his service. The prophet was not brazen when he cried: "Send me." He knew that Jehovah had fitted him for the needed service; and, therefore, he was ready to go. We are worth little without the vision and the burning coal.

The second section of the lesson, Isaiah 20:1, 2, is a prophecy against Egypt. The prophet walks barefooted and almost naked to show the fearful degradation that would come upon that land.

The third section, Isaiah 38:1-5, is enough for an entire lesson; but my space has been used up, and I can go little further. We have in the healing of Hezekiah in answer to his earnest prayer one of the finest cases of divine healing on record. God in his wisdom added just fifteen more years to his life. I wish some one could so understand divine healing as to give us an explanation free from foolishness and fanaticism. It certainly is a great Bible truth; but no one seems able to get a clear, sensible understanding of it. I have seen many sick people anointed by some who professed to know something about the subject; but most of them did not get healed. Some of them appeared to be in worse condition than before being anointed—the failure killed their faith and hope. Most people are afraid of the subject; and well may they be. But in spite of all our blundering, divine healing is a Bible doctrine. Hezekiah was healed in answer to his prayer.

MORGAN COUNTY HOLINESS ASSOCIATION.

We have recently,—i. e., Friday, March 8-29, effected a temporary organization for our holiness folks, viz., Morgan County Holiness Association for Morgan County, Ohio, as follows: Pres.—Rev. Edgar B. Dean, Chesterhill, Ohio.

Vice-Pres.—Miss Pearl Wilcox, Stockport, Ohio.

Vice-Pres.—John Palmer, Chesterhill, Ohio.

Vice-Pres.—Harvey A. Morris, Roxbury, Ohio.

Secretary—Treas.—Miss Goldie Lane, Stockport, Ohio.

Program Com.—First two named above with the Rev. Robert L. Derrick, Roxbury, Ohio.

We now have fifteen members and hope to double our membership soon. Will anyone living in this county, desiring to join with us, please communicate with the secretary.

Rev. Edgar B. Dean, Pres.

MATANZAS, CUBA.

The Rev. James V. Reid recently, on a tour through Central America, spent twelve days with us in Cuba. The greater part of his time, while in Cuba, was spent in Matanzas. By song, music as well as some fine evangelistic messages he touched the lives of many.

In the Centro Cristiano and in Colegio Irene Toland, he officiated in a number of services—to the joy and spiritual uplift of the students and friends of these two institutions.

He spent one day in Havana in Colegio Buenavista, our Methodist Girls' School.

One evening a very effective Union Service was held at the Baptist Church. This meeting was attended by the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian congregations of Matanzas.

On the last Sunday night of his visit in Matanzas he preached to a well-filled auditorium in one of the Presbyterian Churches in Matanzas. The theme of his sermon, on this occasion, was "The Characteristics of Jesus."

He won the hearty appreciation of many people of different classes in Matanzas. We think it would be well if the Home Church could more often send to the Mission Stations such messengers of inspiration and good will as Mr. Reid. It would mean much to the missionaries as well as to the native Christians. Bertha Tucker, Directora de Centro Cristiano.

A GREAT RALLY.

A great rally of the holiness people of America is being planned to be held from May 7 to 12, 1929, at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. It will be the occasion of the Annual Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness. A splendid program with a large number of the most representative holiness men of the country is already in preparation.

TWO TRAMPS.

By Amy LeFevre.
A story about a boy named Rollo, and his uncle, who find it necessary to tramp through the country in order to restore perfect health. To Rollo, Christianity is a very real thing. His conversations with his uncle and with the many people that he meets on his travels make an interesting and helpful story. Wherever these two tramps go they scatter sunshine, fresh hope and comfort.

Amy LeFevre has long been noted for her purposeful stories and this one is no exception to the many other books that she has written.
Read Two Tramps. It will be a real refreshment to you. The regular price of the book is $1.50, but we have listed it in our Special Sale at 60c, postpaid.

A SURE WAY.

To be well prepared with your Sunday School lesson is to use A Daily Digest of the Sunday School Lesson by Amos R. Wells. It contains a helpful thought on the Lesson for each day in the week throughout all the year. The book is handy in size. It can be carried in the vest pocket. Price 35c each, postpaid.

THREE TIMES THREE.

By Pansey.
A story especially appropriate for boys. It shows clearly the evil of drink and the importance of the right kind of companionship. Listed in our Clearance Sale at only 35c postpaid.

"MODERNISM WITH THE MASK OFF"

By W. G. Bennett
Is a clear, concise statement of Modernism, and has been written especially for the information of the common people, who have not the time to read the fuller and more exhaustive treatment of the subject. The quotations on evolution have been selected with great care from the very best authorities on scientific subjects. What modernism is, is shown from the writings of modernists.

It is commended by such scholars as the noted author and theologian, Leander S. Keyser, editor of "The Bible Champion." Rev. J. W. Goodwin, General Superintendent of the Church of the Nazarene, says of it: "A fearful blow at modernism." Dr. S. A. Danford says: "You have certainly taken the mask off of modernism." A neat booklet of forty-seven pages, neatly put up and sells at twenty-five cents. Order from The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

A FUNERAL MANUAL.

Containing Scripture Selections, Topics, Texts and Outlines, Suggestive Themes and Prayers, Quotations and Illustrations, Forms of Service, etc., etc. Beautifully bound in black leather and printed on India paper with gold edges. Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to set at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Jean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

JESUS IS COMING.

W. E. BLACKSTONE

A simple, thorough textbook on prophecy and the return of Christ, and the widest distribution for a generation. An exceedingly instructive and complete book for Bible classes as well as individual study. One of the features of great importance in the new edition is the printing in full of all Scripture texts,—not references only.

Cloth, 75 cts.; paper, 50 cts.

PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING COMPANY Louisville, Kentucky.

JESUS IS COMING.

Rev. J. T. Larsen.

Jesus is coming, I know it for sure! Coming to translate all who endure. Let us rejoice in crowning him Lord, Why doubt his own precious Word?

Jesus is coming, the prophets declared!

Coming for saints who are fully prepared.

Why not be ready in service and prayer;

Joyfully meeting him in the air?

Jesus is coming, the apostles proclaimed!

Preaching his Gospel where he was not named.

Telling to lost souls that Christ only saves;

Raising his own from their graves.

Jesus is coming, our Glorious King!

Coming our loved ones with him to bring.

Let us believe and rejoice evermore; Looking to him all things to restore.

Jesus is coming, let scoffers deny!

Christ will in person from Heaven reply.

"Lo, I come quickly, hold fast that thou hast;

Soon will thy sorrows be past!"

Jesus is coming, let's labor and pray! Seeking to please him each passing day.

He will our labors richly repay; We'll reign in his Kingdom for aye!

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

The Rev. J. B. Kendall, General Evangelist, of Lexington, Ky., is in the midst of a great evangelistic campaign in the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Wessington Springs, S. D. His messages are drawing large crowds, the interest is deep and we are expecting a sweeping revival with gracious results.

Dr. Kendall conducted one of the greatest meetings ever held in this Conference for us last year at Milbank, S. D. As a result of the meeting a new $6,000 parsonage was built and paid for.

This church in Wessington Springs was built a few years ago during the pastorate of Dr. I. M. Hargett who is now pastor of Grand Avenue Temple, Kansas City, Mo. It is one of the best equipped plants in Dakota Methodism.

H. W. Blackburn, Pastor.

Rev. T. P. Roberts, of Wilmore, Ky., will be in Roanoke, Va., to visit his son who was injured in an accident, for several weeks and will be glad to hold a revival meeting for any of the brethren while there. He will be there about April 1st. Write him at Wilmore, Ky., or 515 Dale Ave., Roanoke, Va. C. L. Wireman.

Again we are out in the battle—opened in the Free Methodist Church, Sharon, Pa., last night. Expect to stay here for three weeks. Crowd was good for a first night service, and God was there. We are looking for an old-time meeting, and believe that God has it for us. Would like to have help in prayer.

H. P. Thomas.

Miss Winifred Hemenway desires to spend her summer doing work for the Master by conducting Children's or Young People's meetings in connection with camp meetings or summer revivals. Just began last summer. For reference to her work done last year write to George Egbert, Findlay, O.

Rev. Arthur C. Zepp has just closed an excellent four-weeks' meeting at Franklin Park M. E. Church, suburban to Chicago. The Lord gave testimony to the word of his grace and many were blessed. Prayers of The Herald family are desired.

For satisfactory reasons Rev. T. P. Roberts has been released from the charge to which he was appointed at the recent session of the Conference. Thus Bro. Roberts is free to accept invitations to hold revival services. He is an experienced and successful evangelist. Pastors desiring evangelistic assistance may communicate with Bro. Roberts whose address is Wilmore, Ky. J. L. Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kinsey, evangelistic singers, are now engaged in a meeting with the M. E. Church, Sharonville, Ohio. Please pray for souls to be saved. We recently had the pleasure of broadcasting the gospel in song for seven nights over the Springfield, O., Radio Station, WCSO. We have some open dates for summer for camp meetings. If in need of some one to take charge of music for your campaign write us, Richmond, Ind., 450 So. West 2nd St.

The Kinseys.

WESTERVILLE, OHIO.

Recent inauguration by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," of a total abstinence pledge, which the celebrated pastor has successfully promoted as one of the steps toward making prohibition effective, is declared by Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, director of the department of education of the Anti-Saloon League of America, to be the best plan yet appearing to enroll the people of America in a great abstinence program. Dr. Cherrington said today that it is expected that there will be millions of signatures.

"For a long time," Dr. Cherrington's statement says, "We have been planning a nation-wide campaign for abstinence pledges. Hundreds of thousands of such pledges have been signed and filed with the League through the Lincoln-Lee Legion. Dr. Sheldon first presented his pledge plan to the congregation of the Central Congregational Church in Topeka, and obtained a one hundred per cent signature. In the junior department every boy and girl enrolled. Since that time a number of notable men, including William Allen White and Professor Thomas Nixon Carver have signed Dr. Sheldon's pledge.

"The educational department of the Anti-Saloon League of America is having Dr. Sheldon's pledge printed and will circulate it nationally among church and civic groups, colleges and university officials, faculties and students, high schools, assemblies of young people, governors of states, Congressmen, United States Senators, members of state legislatures, pastors, Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. workers and others.

"Dr. Sheldon's pledge not only calls for abstinence from the standpoint of personal benefit because of such abstinence, but also because a large majority of the citizens believe alcoholic indulgence harmful; because prohibition is the law of the land; because to purchase liquor encourages the maker and seller of liquor to violate the law; because prohibition has brought social, moral and economic benefits, and because such abstinence will make the enforcement of the law less difficult.

"Success of prohibition depends not only on law enforcement, but also on law observance. If the bootlegger is to be punished and suppressed by law, a long step toward his suppression will come when he finds few or none who will buy his wares.

"Prohibition was not intended to do away with abstinence pledges. Prohibition makes abstinence easier, and abstinence, on the other hand, contributes greatly to the success of prohibition."

SEEING THE FUTURE

BY CHRISTABEL PANKHURST

A book that evangelical believers will read with keenest interest. The Sunday School Times says it "is her greatest work, one of the conclusions of a brilliant mind, a devout Christian, a famous authority on social and political problems, and one who writes under the mastery of a great conviction."

Be sure to read these discriminating studies of prophecy and the signs of the times, giving a satisfying and Biblical solution to the problems of this troubled world and of the individual Christian.

Fine Oxford Bible

Here is good news for all who are looking for a really fine Oxford Bible at an extremely reasonable price. We have been fortunate in securing a limited quantity of these beautifully made Oxford India Paper Concordance Bibles.

The Type is large and clear so as to be comfortably read by almost anyone. It is self-pronouncing.

The Binding is Pin Seal Grained Lamb-skin, a leather which is as pleasant to the touch as it is to the sight. The grained calf lining also adds to the beauty, flexibility and durability of this Bible. An additional feature is the silk sewing.

The Paper is the famous Oxford India paper conceded to be the thinnest and most opaque used in Bible making. The print does not show through the page and the pages can be easily turned.

THE END OF THE AGE.

By The Editor.

IN the restoration of divine order and righteousness in this world, God planned that his Son, our Lord and Saviour, should come twice into the world: First, he was to come in great humiliation to suffer and die for our redemption. Second, he was to come in great power and glory to reign over his redeemed people.

* * * *

Reading Old Testament prophecy one constantly meets with the promise of a King of supreme power reigning in righteousness, bringing in a warless age of peace and happiness into our world. This King, promised so constantly by the prophets of the Old Testament, is the Christ of the New Testament. He has come and suffered to redeem; he will come in power and glory to reign.

* * * *

It was Micah who wrote, "But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." Micah 5:2. A part of this prophecy has been fulfilled. Our Lord was born in Bethlehem of Judea. The remainder of the prophecy will be fulfilled; he will become ruler in Israel.

* * * *

There is no way to intelligently understand and interpret the prophecies of the Old Testament Scriptures concerning our Lord, without dividing them into two groups: One group speaks plainly of his first coming, his humiliation, his suffering and death. These prophecies have been fulfilled in the minutest detail. The second group speaks again and again most positively of his glorious reign; these are yet to be fulfilled, and they will be. The Word of God cannot fail. The actual fulfillment of the prophecies concerning the humiliation and death of our Lord is a positive guarantee of the fulfillment of those prophecies promising his glorious reign in a warless world of peace and blessedness.

* * * *

The Jews failed to understand and properly interpret those prophecies that referred to the first coming of our Lord. They did not rightly divide the word of truth. This failure led them to the fearful crime of the crucifixion of Christ. Had they interpreted correctly the prophecies with reference to the two comings of the Lord, the first to suffer, and the second to reign, they would not have failed to identify him; they would not have sought his crucifixion. With their minds fastened on the prophecies concerning his second coming and reign, they were looking for a king to reign in great power and not for a preacher of righteousness to give himself on the cross a holy sacrifice for the redemption of the world.

* * * *

We have many professed Christians today who are failing to consider those prophecies that promise us a King reigning in righteousness, and they are very bitter against the thought of his coming in glorious power to reign over redeemed humanity. There is no way to get away from the prophecies about the coming King in his glory, with any sort of an intelligent, honest interpretation of the Scriptures. "This same Jesus shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen him ascend into heaven." The opposition to this great Bible truth, the ridicule and hatred of it, is a perfect fulfillment of prophecy.

* * * *

There is nothing more consoling to the devout Christian in the midst of the riot of wickedness and unbelief about us everywhere, than that our Lord will surely come. The enemies of righteousness shall be overthrown. The very same Christ who rode into Jerusalem on a cloud of glory to sit upon the throne of righteousness and govern the world with peace and blessedness. We are not looking forward to the end of the world, but to the end of an age, a great period of history, and the coming in of a new age under the government of a King who loved us well enough to die for us, and who will reign over us in a kingdom broad as the earth, stretching to the limits of human population. What a comforting thought! How zealously we can labor and how patiently we can wait when we know, without a doubt, that out of all the confusion, the strife, and wickedness, there is come order, peace, and righteousness. That God will overturn, overturn, overturn, until he comes, whose right it is to reign.

* * * *

Let the Lord's people press with all possible vigor the evangelization of the world; the saving of the lost, and in all their conflict, remember with joy that our Lord will come; that there is a glorious day ahead, and that those who fall upon the battlefield of faithful service will awake and arise at the sounding of the trumpet on that blessed morning when our Lord shall appear with angels and saints to inaugurate the Kingdom of Heaven on earth; when the prayers of united Christendom, "Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth, as the angels do it in heaven," will be answered.

A Heart to Heart Talk With a Young Preacher.

I have read with interest what you say about the school teacher on your circuit, who says the doctrine of sanctification is a new fanatical heresy, and not a doctrine of Methodism.

You should be very patient with this young man. Do not get into a heated argument with him. Give him a copy of "Wesley's Plain Account." There are fine pamphlets by Clarke, and Fletcher on the subject. Furnish him with this reading matter free of charge, and ask him to read them and tell you what he thinks of them. Get him interested. Lend him your copy of "Wood's Perfect Love." It would be a fine thing if you would scatter "Wesley's Plain Account," the Clarke and Fletcher pamphlets well all over your circuit.

Get your people to reading on these deep, spiritual themes and they will come to church better and listen to your message with more interest; once they get to thinking on the subject of full salvation, they will be glad to hear you preach on those deep, spiritual themes.

I can quite understand the attitude of your young school teacher's being educated where he was. He was not only taught that "second blessingism" was a dangerous heresy, but that only the ignorant and fanatical believed in it.

You should find it quite interesting to get him to reading on the subject. Do not permit yourself to get up in the pulpit and rail at him, saying harsh things of all who do not believe in, and profess, full redemption from sin.

You claim the blessing of perfect love, so manifest it toward him in a way that he will be compelled to believe you have a gracious experience of divine love in your heart.

Holiness should be preached in the spirit of holy patience. Let the perfect love in the heart be manifest in the message to the people. This does not mean that you are to be a tame, easy-going, indefinite preacher. The apostle expresses the thought I have in mind, with these words, "Speaking the truth in love." Use great earnestness, clear statement and emphasis, but always as the messenger of God, and the devoted, unselfish lover of the people. The people can easily recognize the attitude of the preacher toward them. If you carry them in your heart and prayers, and have a deep solicitude for their salvation and growth in grace, they will soon recognize and appreciate the fact. Of course, there are some dead, proud, selfish souls who know nothing, and can know nothing of spiritual things. You can't expect much from them, or hope to do much for them. Yet you can be patient with them, pity them, and pray for them. If they try you severely remember they most likely will soon be suffering the sorrows and tortures of hell, and that will move you to bear and forbear, and to do your utmost to awaken and bring them to repentance.

I do not believe you will do any good by turning loose your anathemas upon your people, because they do not understand the doctrine, and profess the experience of sanctification. Remember the false teaching they have had through the years. Be patient with them; lead them into a good state of justification, find out any dear soul that is hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and lead them on and in.

Preach on the baptism with the Holy Spirit for all of God's children. It is plainly written in the word. Preach on a pure heart; give them the word of Christ for it.

HOLINESS NOTES AND REPORTS FROM THE ORIENT.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Let me begin this article with the following from Hudson Taylor that man of God who did such wonders in China on pure old fashioned gospel methods. It is a good story and applies to the homeland as well as to the foreign field.

A young man had been called to the foreign field. He had not been in the habit of preaching, but he knew one thing, how to prevail with God; and going one day to a friend, he said, "I don't see how God can use me on the field; I have no special talent." His friend said: "My brother, God wants men on the field who can pray. There are too many preachers now and too few pray-ers." He went. In his own room in the early dawn a voice was heard weeping and pleading for souls. All through the day, the shut door and the hush that prevailed made you feel like walking with God.

To his home, hungry souls' would flock, drawn by some irresistible power. In the morning hours some one would call and say: "I have gone by your home and have longed to come in. Will you tell me how I can be saved?" Or from some distant place another would call saying: "I heard you would tell us here how we might find rest."

Ah, the mystery was unlocked. In the secret chamber lost souls were pleaded for and claimed. The Holy Ghost knew just where they were and sent them along. Mark this: If all hold upon God, with holy violence and who read these lines would thus lay unconquerable persistence of faith-filled prayer, a good many things would give way, against which we have been beating with our puny human wisdom and power in vain. The prayer-power has never been tried to its full capacity in any church. If we want to see mighty wonders of Divine grace and power wrought, in place of weakness, failure and disappointment, let the whole church answer God's standing challenge: "Call upon me, and I will answer, and will shew thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not."—Jer. 33:3. We must pray more.—

The Bible is suited to every age and every race and Nation. The Epistle to the Romans in first and third chapter gives the greatest photograph of sin to be seen in any literature.

There is a story told of when the Bible was first being translated into Chinese that a Chinaman refused to continue the work of writing of the first chapter of Romans. He said: "This is a picture of the Chinese people and I will not have the story sent out to the world."

A very prominent woman preacher and Evangelist in China has put out a work on theology in which when she comes to Sanctification she is positively Anti-Wesleyan, Anti-Armenian, Anti-Scriptural. In the chapter on Sanctification she says that through "Sanctification the defiled sinner is accounted holy."

Now our study and preachings and experience of Sanctification lead us to say:

1. That Sanctification is not for the "defiled sinner."
2. That Sanctification is only for the Believer.
3. That the "defiled sinner" needs pardon.
4. That the "saved sinner" needs Holiness.

It is a hard matter to improve on John Wesley and old fashioned Methodist theology on the question of Sanctification.

John Wesley said, "Sanctification in the proper sense is an instantaneous deliverance FROM ALL SIN, and includes an instantaneous power then given always to cleave to God." In Pope's Theology, Vol. 2, page 64, we read, "Sanctification in its beginnings, process and final issues is the full eradication of the sin itself, which, reigning in the unregenerate, is abolished in the wholly sanctified." Pope was a Wesleyan Theologian and an accepted authority on Christian doctrine in Methodism. The Standard Dictionary declares Sanctification is "the gracious work of the Holy Spirit whereby THE BELIEVER IS FREED FROM SIN and exalted to holiness of heart and life." The Apostle Paul testified to this deliverance when he said, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. 2:20. He that is dead is freed from sin.

"Author of faith, eternal word,
Whose Spirit breathes the active flame:
Faith, like its finisher and Lord,
Today, as yesterday, the same.

To him that in thy name believes
Eternal life with thee is given:
Into himself he all receives
Pardon, and holiness, and heaven."

HOLINESS AND HOLY MEN.

Dr. Daniel Steele, preaching in Boston some years ago, said that the best setting forth of the Atonement in the New Testament is to be found in Romans 3:24-26. Meditating upon this subject recently we came to see that the Atonement centers in the Holiness of God.

Holiness in God cannot allow sin with impunity.

Holiness in God cannot forgive sin without an expedient for penalty.

Holiness in God can only forgive sin consistent with the interest of his moral government.

Holiness in God enables him to forgive sin only when a sin offering and an expedient for penalty has been provided.

This offering was made by Christ, "who was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities."

It was purchased by blood.

Finished on the Cross.

Its benefits are conferred by the Holy Ghost, experienced by the Believer with joy, and eventuates in personal holiness.

The great objective of the Atonement is likeness to God in holiness. God does not want us like him in wisdom, nor in power, nor in greatness or majesty. He only desires that we should be like him in Holiness. Hence the command: "Be ye holy, for I am holy."

The devout believer aspires after Holiness!

"He wills that I should holy be;
That Holiness I long to feel;
That full divine conformity
To all my Savior's righteous will."

HOLY MEN.

We have been reading of late some of the great "Masters in Israel." Their words, like the clouds, drop fatness, and moreover are like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." Listen to these words concerning the man of God, McCheyne of Dundee, Scotland: "He was so reverent toward God, so full also in desire toward him. He never seemed unprepared. His lamp was always burning, and his loins always girt. His forgetfulness of all that was not found to God's glory was remarkable, and there seemed never a time when he was not feeling the presence of God."

The following words were penned concerning Rev. John Summerfield of early Methodism—one of the most eloquent and holy of ministers:

"Holy in life, ardent in love, and incessant in labor, he was to the church a pattern, to sinful men an angel of mercy, to the world a blessing. . . . His element was not the breath of fame but the communion and favor of God."

FOR THE PREACHER.

The preacher, said Jowett, is sent into a "wolfish environment." "I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves." "In all genuine callings to the ministry there is:

A sense of the Divine initiative.

A solemn communication of the Divine will.

A mysterious feeling of commission."

"Possible to be fussily busy about the Holy Place and yet to lose the wondering sense of the Holy Lord. . . . Our studies may be worship instead of upper rooms. We may be professors but not pilgrims. Our besetting peril is to go after the showy, to strive and cry, to let our voice be heard in the streets, to follow the glitter instead of the 'gleam.'

"Of all pathetic sights on God's earth there is none more pathetic than a preacher of the gospel who, by the benumbing power of custom or by the wiles and guiles of the world, has been separated from his God."

"We may pass multitudes of resolutions but nobody quakes."

"We are great only as we are God-possessed."

W. Robertson Nicoll, the eminent writer preacher of England, says: "Whenever preachers cease to give the earnest service of the intellect to Revelation—when they resort to lazy spiritualizing, to anecdote, to clever tricks for tickling jaded ears, they have 'fainted.' The lust for flattery, for popularity, for wealth is a sign of fainting."

"Is there a drearier sight in the world than to witness a poor worn-out creature sparring on fellow beings equally jaded to work more and give more?"

"Has the Church succumbed to narcotics and ceased to feel her wounds?"

We need a revival to overcome our "jaded ardour," "fatigued spirit," "a tame and ineffectual life," "monotony and decay," "intellectual indolence" and "hopeless defection."

"Surely," said Chalmers, "it were a sight to make angels weep when a weak and vapouring mortal, surrounded by his fellow-sinners and hastening to the grave and the judgment along with them, finds it a dearer object to his bosom to regale his hearers with an exhibition of himself than to do in plain earnest the work of the Master, and urge on the business of repentance and faith by the impressive simplicities of the Gospel."

HOLINESS ON THE MISSION FIELD.

First let me say it works! In fact the great need of Missions today is the gospel of holiness. In Japan the greatest demonstration of the effectiveness of holiness work is seen in the Oriental Missionary Society (Cowman and Kilbourn's and Nakada's work). In 28 years the whole Empire is seeded down with holiness churches, holiness preachers and holiness revivals. In a recent Revival in Tokio for six nights they had over 800 souls enquiring the way of salvation. We were called by Brother Kurumada the Pastor to close up the special meetings over the week end, including Sunday January 27th. and we would have about fifty seeking holiness every time an altar service was held.

Then in China Holiness is the distinctive feature in Bethel work, Shanghai under Dr. Mary Stone and Miss Jennie Hughes. In their January Meetings (1929) hundreds sought God in their three Mission Halls in Shanghai. One day while in Tokyo, Japan, we received a telegram from Miss Hughes which read as follows: "Fire falling here, hundreds saved and sanctified."

In January we were called to Japan to give a month of holiness evangelism among the O. M. S. people and the Japan Evangelistic Band and we divided our time between the three cities of Tokio, Kobe and Osaka. through the good providence of God our work in Osaka was arranged by Rev. H. H. Wagner of the Free Methodist and greatly to our delight the meetings were to take place on the grounds of the Free Methodist Theological Seminary of Osaka. We have had so much work in the various Bible schools and Seminaries since coming to Asia that we now hail it as a special opportunity when we can preach to students-bodies out of whom come the preachers and Evangelists of the future. We opened the series of meetings January 16, and closed January 23. Rev T. Tsuchiyama President of the Seminary was our interpreter and he being so thoroughly versed in English as he studied in America and holds his Master degree from Princeton and then in addition, he being a straight-out and out holiness man, thoroughly acquainted by experience and training with holiness doctrine etc., made it a real easy thing to preach to the Japanese through him.

Rev. T. Kawabe, pastor of the largest Methodist Church in Japan, ably assisted in the meetings and presided several times in the afternoon.

From the start to the finish the Revival was owned of God to the Salvation and Sanctification of souls. Very often after preaching the whole front of the chapel would be crowded with seekers and seldom were there less than 50 seekers at any of the services which were held twice each day. It was a glorious sight to see so many students praying through and to the theological students the Revival was one of great blessing and power. Many students from the public schools and colleges came also, with whom the missionaries, Miss Pickens and Miss Mylands, have been faithfully working for many months. Many of these got converted and some sanctified. Among the women and young women there was a blessed work done as well as among business men and the working classes. Brother Wagner said he had been praying for this Revival for nine years. One of the Conference men said "It will be easier now to make the appointments". We believe the school and churches which participated all are going to be permanently helped by this gracious visitation of the spirit of God. The Free Methodists ring true on holiness in Japan and they have a splendid work in Osaka. I think their Bible school as fine a property and work as I have seen any where in Japan. The students seem ideal. The buildings are splendid, the whole Compound is a credit to the Free Methodists. There was a fine group of students for the Ministry! God bless them and keep them constantly in a revival spirit!

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

SOME INTRODUCTORY CONSIDERATIONS.

HERE are a lot of puzzling questions, but the puzzlingest question of them all is the question of the hereafter.

Buddhists and Mohammedans, followers of Confucius, and of Zoroaster, Theosophists, Spiritualists and Christians; infidels; men of every faith and men of no faith at all will sit around the table for hours and discuss this one all-important question that Job had something to say about 4000 years ago,—“If a man die, shall he live again?”

“Are the Dead alive? Shall we write over our cemeteries as they did in Paris in the days of the French Revolution, “Death is an eternal sleep,” or shall we believe with Tennyson, “There is no death; what seems so is—just going somewhere.”

It makes all the difference in the world to me whether my life is one day to go out like a snuffed candle, or whether that will be the hour,

“When the tree of life will burst into flower,
And rain at my feet a glorious dower
Of something grander than ever I knew.”

It makes all the difference in the world to me whether when I die it is going to be, “all up with old Dog Tray,” as a fellow out in Kansas put it to me one day, or whether that shall be the time when I shall begin to reap the consecrated harvest of my stubborn disobedience to the holy ideals that struggled for the mastery here in the days of opportunity which will then be gone forever.

You say, “Mr. Preacher, do you mean to tell me that blear-eyed gutter-bum-of-a-drunkard ever thinks of the hereafter? Do you mean to say that that old rubber-souled rascal of a candidate for office, all tangled up in twentieth century, boodling, machine politics ever thinks of another world when this one is over?”

“Do you mean to tell me that that money-hearted gambler, with the flip of the cards, the click of the poker chips and the whirr of the roulette wheel buzzing in his ear; that rabid, raging, rampant Anarchist crying “To hell with law and order and all government!”; that shouting, yelling, gesturing Stock Exchange; that fashion-worshipping, pleasure-seeking specimen of degenerate womanhood given over absolutely to dress and ornament and social function; that stoop-shouldered, serious-faced business man who toils from early morning till late at night the year through to make financial ends meet; that student and that professor absorbed in art and literature or tangled up in the mysteries of mathematics and the secrets of natural science—do you mean to tell me, Mr. Preacher, that such people ever have any time or disposition to think of what shall be when the end of this life has come?”

Yes, just that thing I mean to say. More than any other one thought is the thought of old Job, “Man dieth; he giveth up the ghost, and where is he?” In the midst of sin and excitement and pleasure and business that question goes, but it comes back again. Like Bancho's ghost it will not down. You know, as everybody knows, that “the pale horse with his rider” is on his way. Two men die every second. Your turn is coming.

What about this thing they call “The Eternal Future?” Is there such a thing? A number of things seem to say there is. It is an instinct of the human soul.

They that in barbarian burials,
Killed the slave and slew the wife;
Felt within themselves the sacred burning
Of the Second Life.”

The soul certainly needs another life. The principle of justice seems to demand it. The analogies of nature seem to call for it. Science and philosophy say, “It looks that way to us.”

But when all these things and others have spoken with their most emphatic testimony, still there is that figure floating before your eyes that ever shapes itself more or less definitely into the form of an eternal interrogation point, and you would give the world, if it were yours, for a sufficient and satisfying answer to it.

It is all right to philosophize with Plato, and his proofs of immortality are not without their value; It is all right to muse with Tennyson, “Thou hast made us, we know not why;

We think we were not made to die.

Thou wilt not leave us in the dust;

Thou hast made us, and Thou art just.”

But when you are through with the speculations of philosophy and the deductions of science and the musings of poetry and all that human reason can bring to your relief, the question mark is still there and for the life of you you cannot rub it out.

And then someone comes and hands me a Book, a Book that professes to know, a Book that speaks with no uncertain sound, not only as to the fact that there is a future life but as to the way and the only way a man may be sure as to the share he is to have in that life; a Book that professes to be from God and to speak with all the infallible authority of the Most High. And now if I can only be sure that this Book is all that it professes to be, that it really speaks with divine authority, that I can depend absolutely upon what it says; then, Sir, indeed, I would say,

“This little Book I'd rather own

Than all the gold and gems

That e'er in monarch's coffers shone

Than all their diadems.

“Nay, were the sea a chrysolite,

The earth a golden ball,

And diamonds all the stars of night,
This Book were worth them all.”

Yes Sir, Men are a good deal more concerned about this matter than many times we give them credit for.

One evening at dusk I was going down the streets of Portland, Washington, with one of the great lawyers of that great city. I was pressing upon him the claims of the Christian religion. Presently he took my arm and drew me over to one side within the shadow of a huge column at the entrance of the building, and he said, “Biederwolf, the thing that worries me is; “How do we know it is all true?”

Say, do you know there are men by the thousands who feel just as that lawyer felt, and who would write out their check for many thousands of dollars if they could only feel absolutely certain about the thing we are considering just now.

Now the thing I want to talk with you about in these short addresses is whether we really have any reasonable guarantee that this Book actually is the very Word of God Himself to you and me.

One thing is sure and that is that millions of people have taken it as such; men of great and profound learning, and men of little or no learning at all.

One of the most profound thinkers of the age, holding in his hand a Bible, said, “I am a man; I am going somewhere; I am twenty four hours nearer that somewhere today than I was yesterday. I have read all that infidelity and unbelief have to say. They have not shed one solitary ray of light on the darkness, and they shall not take away the only guide I have and leave me stone blind.”

On the other hand here is an ignorant old Indian with gray hair and wrinkled face but with the light of God's peace shining in his countenance, and his hand upon the Bible he loved so much. And when asked why the “Big Praying Book,” as he called it, was so dear to him, he answered, “Big night! All dark! No light! Dark night! Above dark! Inside, big dark night! This Book, rising sun. Make light for feet; words sweet. I keep Big Praying Book near.”

I quite well understand that there are some things in connection with this Book that are mysterious and beyond the smartest of us—beyond human ken. Just another evidence that a mind greater than ours produced it. Indeed a religion that has no mystery is its own best refutation.

But there is something after all about a simple faith like that of the old Indian before which one can well afford to stand with uncovered head, and I am reminded of the words of that great scholar and statesman of Holland, Abraham Kuyper.—What remarkable words they are. He said.

THE ARRESTED CHURCH.

Rev. Joseph Owen.

Text:—"And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high."—Luke 24:49.

THE writers of the synoptic gospels unite in giving reports of the last meeting of the disciples with their risen Lord before his ascension to the right hand of the Father from Mount Olivet.

Matthew and Mark are alike very brief but deal with somewhat different phases of the Master's message. Mark records the Lord's commission to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He puts into the record the promise of salvation for those who believe and the warning of condemnation and doom for those who doubt and reject. He preserves for us the promise of a miraculous accompaniment of the gospel's reclamation wherever it is preached.

Matthew, in addition to the record of the Lord's command to disciple the nations, tells us of his assumption of divine power and authority when he said: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," and of the promise of his presence and companionship with the Church of every age that goes busily about her work of teaching the nations to observe the things he had commanded, when he said: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

The passage from Luke, which we have made our text, with the containing passage, adds a few more salient features to the Ascension message. Jesus showed to the disciples from the scriptures the necessity for his suffering and the promise of his resurrection on the third day. He gives more in detail the content of the gospel message they were to bear to the world: it was the preaching of repentance and remission of sins in his name. He very definitely pointed out to the disciples their own mission of witnessing to the realities back of such a gospel proclamation. He repeated to them again the "Promise of the Father" which he must have made over and over during his ministry. Then, we have the distinct addition found at the heart of the text. The disciples are commanded to tarry. The Church is halted on the threshold of what has been given to her as a world-wide mission and ministry.

Before we attend to the immediate suggestions of the text, let us seek to grasp the situation as it must have appealed to the disciples. First, there had appeared unto them the risen Christ. There was no mistaking that fact. The tomb had not been able to hold him. The grave was not the death of their hopes. Second, with his appearance had gone their own doubt and discouragement. Hope and enthusiasm were kindled again and they faced toward the world with the entrancing news of a risen, a triumphant Christ: One who had shown himself not only victor over disease and sin but conqueror of the grave as well. Third, we have the disciples restrained in the midst of the wonder and glory of such a message. It is as though Jesus said: "Let this awakening truth lie unspoken on your lips. Let this wonder lie hidden in your hearts. Not yet, not just yet must the flame of this truth leap from the smoldering embers of your own burning hearts. The world can wait to hear even such a message as you are commissioned to speak till there shall come upon you the divine endowment."

Postponing to a later consideration the deep spiritual necessities back of the Master's command to tarry, let us notice that without such a command the disciples would not have waited. That would have been true for other reasons than that they had no sense of need for such equipment as was offered in the "Promise of the Father." Give attention to some of those reasons.

1. They had, as the passages quoted above clearly show, the Lord's positive command to go. The call of the Man of Galilee had come to them in other days with persuasive meaning and power. They had heard his voice in that early day of their discipleship, when he walked past where they were mending nets on the shores of Galilee's inland sea, and had followed him. As the days wore on his commands had come to them with an increasing power and meaning.

If that were true before his resurrection, how much more so now, when the Conqueror of the grave faces out toward life's demands and gives orders or assigns commissions. Some one has called attention to the fact that the solicitude which breathed in the pre-Calvary messages of Jesus has given place to the calm of positive and absolute authority. The Lord of life looks out on a world in its need and back on his disciples and says: "Go! Lo, I am with you!"

2. The disciples' knowledge of the world's need for the gospel would have prompted them. They had listened to the teaching of Jesus through the three and a half years of their companionship with him. Not in vain had he spoken of himself as the Light of the World, the Bread of Life, the Way, the Truth and the Life. They could not fail to see at least something in the spiritual content of such parables as the Lost Sheep and the Prodigal Son.

But in our context we are told that Jesus "opened their understanding that they might understand the scriptures," and showed to them how it behooved Christ to suffer. It was not, we must believe, a discussion of Christ's sufferings as an abstract and solitary occurrence but a connecting of his sacrifice with the need and offer of redemption. A vision of such need would have inclined the disciples to go.

3. Their past failures were a motive for their doing. Did you ever disappoint love? Did you ever have an opportunity to, in some sense, retrieve such a disappointment? Such a possibility as that now faced the disciples.

They had forsaken him. He tells them now that whatever may be the vicissitudes of life, he will be with them and with them to the end. As they compared their own past of discouragement and even unfaithfulness with the constancy of his love and care, their motives for undertaking world evangelization were greatly strengthened.

Individual reasons for ready and implicit obedience to his commands were present. Peter had followed him afar off on the eventful night of his betrayal and then had denied him altogether. Restoration to confidence and the assigning of a new mission were sufficient to send him out to any undertaking. John had gone with him from Gethsemane's garden to the palace of the high priest but had been speechless. Thomas had doubted his triumph over the grave until he should behold the nail prints and touch with his own hands the scar the spear had left. What a multiplicity of reasons they had and how weighty they were!

4. The message they were to bear had in it inspiration and incentive for seeking to disciple the nations. It was a gospel of release from sin on the simple condition of trustful confidence and faith. But back of a proclamation like that was the glory of a transformed cross and the promise belonging to an empty tomb. Was there ever such a message entrusted to man? It would seem to us that the feet of men everywhere and in all ages who have had even a partial conception of the meaning of such a gospel would be swift in the way of its proclamation.

II.

Our paramount interest, however, lies in the spiritual necessities back of the command to tarry. It is important to remember that this command was just as positive as the general command to repent or the more definite command given to the disciples to preach the gospel to the whole world. In fact, the Master gives to it a precedence over the command to go. "You are to go, but you are to tarry first." Why the command to tarry? Why the arrested Church at the very doorway of a world-wide ministry?

1. He wanted them to know in their own experiences the fullness of the blessing of the gospel they were sent to proclaim. In that way alone could their preparation approach completion. There are truths in the gospel and therefore in the Scriptures, that are so transcendent as that the last generation of believers shall be laboring to express them. There are applications of the truths of the gospel that each generation could and did standardize the experience of the gospel for all succeeding generation. They knew Christ in the fullness of salvation. That was typical and illustrative. The upper room experience has become the norm for all the Christian centuries.

Sin is essentially the same in every age. Whatever may be the particular practice of wrong doing which one generation may accent, sin itself remains the same. Guilty practice springs up out of the same carnal condition as generation follows generation. It follows that a complete deliverance from sin takes on the same meaning in the twentieth century that belonged to it in the first. Pardon is full and complete. Cleansing is entire and unto the uttermost. That is just as true in that room where disciples waited for the first Pentecost as in some splendidly appointed church today where well-taught, intelligent believers wait for the sanctifying flame.

The same is true of the fullness of joy. Such an experience always waits on a right heart state. It is not to be found in the superior advantages of our day. It cannot be purchased with gold. It does not come to dwell in a house simply because there is culture and refinement there. We have fullness of joy when every disturbing element has been removed from the nature; when the heart is free from sin. And that sort of an experience could as really be standardized in Jerusalem nineteen hundred years ago as in New York or London in 1929.

Jesus wanted that the disciples should preach the gospel to the people of their own age in the power and unction belonging to a full salvation and that they should become examples to Christian believers in every age of both the possibilities and endowments of Grace.

2. The Church was commanded to tarry in order that a whole Christ might be taken to the world. We do not mean to imply that the person of Jesus may be "ensmalled" by the opinions of men. We do mean to say that one's own conception of Jesus in his mission of Savior is vitally related to one's experience of Grace and that the impression one's life and ministry make is in large way determined by such an experience. The influence of the disciples before and after Pentecost fully illustrates that.

The world needs Jesus; needs him in all his offices; needs him as a Savior from sin; needs him to comfort, defend and keep. The heart of humanity cries out to be like him, longs for his fullness. The soul of man was built for his indwelling and is restless till he is formed within, the hope of glory.

The most effective way for Jesus to move upon the nations of the earth is through the lives of those who have crowned him unrivalled and supreme in their own hearts. His representatives may take messages concerning him in many ways, but the only way to take him is to take him in one's own life. He cannot thus be taken in fullness until he has come in all his saving fullness to the hearts of those who go out as his representatives. This necessity was back of that command to tarry.

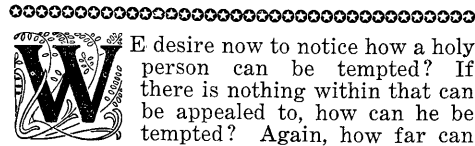

3. Jesus commanded his disciples to tarry in order that they might be supported by a sufficient motive. I have already dwelt at some length on the reasons the disciples had for going out in obedience to Christ's command. We are stressing now that Jesus not only wanted them to go, he wanted them to have staying qualities as well.

It is interesting to remember how the Scriptures connect the deepest experiences of grace with the demands of an effective ministry to the ends of the earth. After Isaiah had received the touch of the live coal, he was called to a mission in which there was little recompense and less of outward evidence of success. It was successful from the divine standpoint nevertheless.

The promise given by Jesus to his disciples that they should receive power after that the Holy Ghost was come upon them was preparatory to their becoming "witnesses in Jerusalem and in all Judea, in Samaria and unto the uttermost part of the earth." The demands of a witnessing ministry near by and an evangelizing ministry on the far-flung battle lines of the Church in that day and in every day were such as to require the dynamic of pentecost. God places within the keeping of a Church that has waited for the divine endowment the world's evangelization and salvation. In that alone can sufficient motive and equipment for such a task be found. His message today as in that long ago time is, "Tarry ye until ye be endued with power from on high." God grant that we may not fail him.

TEMPTATION AND HOLINESS

REV. E. E. SHELHAMER.

We desire now to notice how a holy person can be tempted? If there is nothing within that can be appealed to, how can he be tempted? Again, how far can one go without losing his experience?

1. God permits temptations, either to remind one afresh what grace has accomplished in his case, or to reveal some defect. He tempteth no man, though his fiery trial detects and exposes the dross.

It is quite easy to see how one could be tempted while carnal principles remained within, because as long as a carnal tendency remains, it can be appealed to. But now we come to one who has not only been saved from sinful desires, but from the very germ that would hatch out a desire. There is nothing but love filling such a heart.

If this be true, how can such an individual be tempted? We answer, just the same as Adam and Eve, (who were holy) could be tempted. Just the same as Jesus, who was not only human, but Divine, could be tempted.

"Power to commit sin is essential to temptation. Man is a moral being, he is therefore capable of moral action. A moral action is the voluntary act of an intelligent agent; and the volition or action must be right or wrong according to some moral standard in the universe. If power to do the contrary does not exist in the agent at the time the violation is put forth, there is no moral merit in the act; therefore power to sin is requisite to all moral merit. Power to sin is not a vice nor even an imperfection; but a virtue of a very high quality. If God gave me the power to do wrong that I might have the power to do right, (which he surely did), then I am to recognize that power as a Divine gift and act accordingly."

We must discriminate between a possibility to sin and a tendency or bent toward sinning. Jesus could have sinned, but that is no proof that sinful propensities existed in him. The same can be said of all who are pure in heart.

The possibility of sin must be presupposed in any individual before we can conceive of his being tempted. But because he is subject to temptation, that does not necessarily imply the existence of any sinful tendency. God is the only being who is absolutely perfect. It is impossible for him to sin. "He cannot be tempted." It is contrary to his nature. If it had been impossible for Jesus to sin, then he would not have been human. The possibility in Jesus to sin, never became an actual fact. Thank God! Through grace, the same may be said of redeemed man.

But if there remains no tendency to sin why are even the pure in heart directed to "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation?" Even Paul felt the need of saying, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection lest that by any means when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." We are on probation. All human needs and desires, though in themselves lawful and innocent, become sources of danger unless steadily guarded.

2. How far can a person go without losing his experience? Holiness is not such an ethereal thing as to slip away under every test and unpleasant circumstance. One may do or leave undone things that call forth a reproof of the Holy Spirit. Perhaps on some lawful point, he rashly said or did something; afterwards he looks back and feels that he did not do the best thing. His conscience is very tender and he feels badly about it. The Spirit (and sometimes the devil), magnifies it and makes it look still more serious. The erring one is very sorry, and solemnly promises God that it shall never be repeated. God takes him at his word and passes the thing by as a fault. As time goes by perhaps the same thing is repeated. Again the Spirit reproves him but after a time of fasting, weeping and praying, confidence regains her former strength and God excuses the thing as before.

Clean souls suffer more remorse from wounding their conscience once, than backslidden souls do in yielding time and again. We are not prepared to say how often a sanctified soul can call forth a reproof of the Spirit on the same point and not lose his experience. We would not like to say more than twice. It largely depends upon the amount of light the person has. One person might lose his experience much more easily than another. However, no conscientious soul is anxious to experiment. He wants to keep as far away from the precipice as possible.

Some people are continuously harrassed and tormented for fear they might lose their experience. Their time is largely occupied in praying over their old weaknesses, or examining some of the devil's scare-crows. This is dishonoring to God, and often opens an inlet to unbelief—the first carnal principle to enter a holy heart. "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment: He that feareth is not made perfect in love." Has God not said: "If in anything ye be otherwise minded" he will "reveal even this unto you?" Let God's responsibility alone!

It is his business to let light shine, and your business to walk in it. It is his business to make duty very plain, and your business to quickly obey. It is his business to convict you on any line that is for your good, and it is your business to keep yourself open and glad to receive such conviction. It is his business to upset your plans, and reprove you when you are about to do, or already have done something that would injure your experience, and it is your business to move so softly and conscientiously that he can easily carry out his own blessed designs. Such souls never need lose their experience.

This is rest of faith. This is letting God fight his own battles. This is being "hid with Christ in God." Few have ever dug deep enough to find this place; and a less number have lived holy long enough to retain such an inheritance; but, thank God it is a glorious possibility. Grace is enabling the writer to prove it. Hallelujah!

What one Subscription Did.

Frequently members of THE HERALD family send it to some of their friends under some one of our special offers. We have here a testimonial of the good results of one of these small investments for the spread of Bible holiness. We will give the brother's words as he gives them to us.

"A friend made me a present of a one-year subscription to THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD about seven years ago which I considered a very great favor. I have sent it on to about 500 or more since that time to others; some for one year, some six months and many for three months. If it does these people one-tenth as much good as it has me we will all be benefitted on the strength of THE HERALD. I realize the importance of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. I think it has done me more good than all else combined."

The party who sent THE HERALD to this good man certainly made a very fine investment. "Behold, what a great fire a little matter kindleth!" Aren't there a great many persons who would be glad to make a like investment? Ask God to direct you. Send in the name and address of some one in whom you are interested. Cast your bread upon the waters and you may be able to gather it after many days. H. C. M.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE HOLINESS CAMP MEETING.

TEXAS has had a remarkable history. It was once a part of Mexico; it then became an independent state. Those were stormy times. The early Texans fought for their lives against Mexicans and Indians. The immigrants from other states, mostly from the south, took their lives in their hands when they went out upon the broad plains of Texas.

In the struggle and the strife of this vast new empire country, it was brought into the Union, the gates were thrown wide open to immigration, and on to its fertile plains and warm, inviting climate, thousands of hardy pioneers made their way in their prairie schooners.

There was much wild life in Texas; broad-brimmed hats, high-heeled boots, rattling spurs, and six-shooters belted around slender waists of daring men who were full of adventure and quick on trigger. Traveling in Texas it was a common thing to see a group of several big wagons with high white covers over them, horses and mules hitched to the scrub oak trees, with boxes nailed up against them for feed troughs, a cooking stove sitting in a convenient place, the wife busy preparing the meal, and a number of tow-head children riding with delight on the wagon tongue.

These campers would frequently stay for several weeks in the same place, hire to pick cotton, or do other jobs; they would hear of some opening for labor or prospect for better conditions farther west and, living on wheels, it was easy for them to load up their plunder, hitch up their teams and move away.

These early settlers were thoroughly respectable people. They knew themselves to be such and, if necessary, insisted that you should understand and recognize the fact. If they were poor they didn't know it; they lived a free, adventurous, independent life. They settled on land, gathered a bunch of cows, drove them over the plains while they accumulated, sold off the steers, became well to do, built good homes, were substantial citizens and the most democratic, independent, self-respected people in all the wide world.

Those early Texans in a cottonade shirt, pair of overalls and brogan shoes, could look any man, or all men, straight in the eye and speak their mind without hesitation or reservation. In those days democracy was in full flower in Texas.

They were intense people. They had emotion. They had inherited religious faith from the southern states from which they came, and while perhaps, they had not cultivated the spiritual life, there was in them certain qualities of soul that responded readily to the earnest preaching of men on fire who carried the torch of full salvation on the plains of Texas in the early days of the Holiness Movement.

With their covered wagons and families who were used to such travel, they were fully equipped for the holiness camp meeting which made a strong appeal to their enthusiastic natures, and to drive a hundred or two miles in order to attend one of these great religious gatherings was to them a delightful pastime.

Being a traveler, wandering about the earth, and a writer of various journals, and also an occasional book of fiction, it was my great delight as a student of my fellow-beings, to attend a number of these great Texas gatherings which met under the name of Holiness Camp Meetings.

Thousands of people came to these meetings. The women slept in the covered wagon and the men on a piece of canvas, slept under the wagon. There would always be some one with a big barbecue establishment roasting meat where these campers could supply themselves with provision, and for ten wonderful days they would abandon themselves to the cultivation of their spiritual natures.

The preachers at these meetings were mighty men before the multitudes. They believed the Bible. There were no question marks in their minds with reference to the inspiration of the Holy Book. God did not only exist, but he filled the universe. He was present. He was in the midst of the people. All the New Testament said about Jesus Christ was true. He was the Son of God, the crucified and risen Lord, mighty to save to the uttermost. The Holy Ghost was a person. He had come down to administer the kingdom of heaven among men. He was present to use the Word as a sword. He could make men to see and feel their sinfulness, their need of repentance and cry to God for salvation. There was no question in the minds of these camp meeting preachers with reference to these great facts. Hell was a certainty and horribly hot. Heaven was a place, and the saints were gathering there. Sinners must repent and believe for regeneration; believers must consecrate and believe for sanctification. The work of the Spirit in the new birth and sanctifying power was instantaneous, and the person operated upon was supposed to know without doubt or question what had taken place.

This was the burden of the preaching at the great camp meetings in Texas, and it was preached with an earnestness, a fervor, and an unction which powerfully moved the multitudes and could hardly be resisted. No one interested in their fellowbeings could attend as an onlooker at one of these meetings, and not be deeply impressed.

The altars were filled with people. There were tears and prayers and loud cries for mercy, and glad shouts of triumph. As something of a student of human nature and the movements among the people in their upward struggle and outreach for God, and the higher and better things, I would not for any consideration have missed attending upon some of these great Texas camp meetings.

It was into this vortex of religious enthusiasm and spiritual power that Huston found himself when he came to his first camp meeting. He had become a strong, intellectual, self-possessed, calculating man. For a few days he stood on the outskirts, or sat far back and looked on with some mental misgivings and questions. But as he saw the simplicity, earnestness and joy of the people he became thoroughly convinced that they were devoutly sincere and that the Christ who had moved with such gentle, patient love among the multitude, was there in the camp forgiving sinners, healing backsliders, and sanctifying believers. His heart cried out within him for a consciousness of purity. Above everything in all the world, he longed to be cleansed from all sin. His tall, handsome figure was seen moving rapidly down the center aisle from a seat near the back of the large shed, and he fell upon his knees and cried to God who had created him, and the Christ who had redeemed him, to make him holy.

He had read the doctrines of the Methodists, as we have observed in a former chapter, his intellect was convinced, and it did not take him long to make his consecration and, under the urging of the people who gathered around him, to trust as they taught him, the cleansing power of Jesus' blood. He arose with a shout of praise, embraced a few of the old brethren and hurried away to a distant grove of little scrubby trees where he lay prone upon the ground, laughed and wept, and loved his Lord, and pledged himself with all his heart to be true and loyal as a minister of the gospel, whatever obstacles or oppositions might present themselves.

"If then, after all legitimate examination and explanation there still remains in the text seeming inexplicables, cruces interpretum, before which, not I—for that implies nothing—but all confessing theologians stand, even then I do not hesitate a moment to say in the hearing of the whole scientific world, that facing the choice between leaving this question unanswered, and with the simple minded people of God confessing my ignorance, or with the learned ethical brethren from scientific logicalness rejecting the infallibility of Scripture, I firmly choose the first, and with my whole soul shrink back from the last."

Have these wizards of science like Kelvin, Lodge, and Tesla; giants of statesmanship like Webster, Lloyd George, and Roosevelt; master poets like Tennyson, Milton, and Longfellow; mighty philosophers like Bacon, Newton, and Romanes; world renowned artists like Angelo, Murrillo, and Rubens; world historians like Macauley, Bancroft and Redpath; and uncounted thousands of other stupendous intellects, as well as the countless millions of humble-minded folk of God who have trusted in this Bible as the veritable Word of God to them—have they all been deceived?

Are these intellectual Titans justified in their estimate of this Book,—this Book which has been subjected to the furnace heat of trial and keenest critical investigation through all the centuries gone? A fire which has contemptuously burned up the cosmogony of the Shaster, the Ptolemaic system of astronomy, the absurd fables of the Koran and the authority of science and philosophy on scores of contested points,—this Book whose pages are still stained with the tears of silver-haired saints, whose promises are still the widow's stay as she sits in poverty with her fatherless children, whose pledge of a resurrection is still the only lamp that shines for the dying child of God through the dark valley of the shadow of death? Or have these millions leaned and are these millions leaning today upon a weak and rotten reed which gives way and breaks beneath the slightest test?

There are other Bibles in the world today; the Koran of the Mohammedans; the Eddas of the Scandinavians; the Tripitakas of the Buddhists, the Zendavesta of the Persians and the Scriptures of the Christians. What evidence have I that this Book, this Bible of all the Bibles in the world is alone the word of God in the sense that the holy men of old, who wrote it, wrote as they were inspired in a special way by the Spirit of God for the distinct purpose of revealing His will concerning us and the plan by which He is to redeem the world unto himself?

It is to the consideration of just this that I want you to give yourself earnestly and thoughtfully in the pages which are now to follow.

Dr. Ridout's Book, "The Beauty of Holiness"

This book has now been translated into Japanese and Chinese and is circulating throughout the Orient. "Beauty of Holiness" sets forth the fact that in real Bible holiness there are such beautiful things. This book is intended for holiness people, to help those who are in the experience of full salvation. It will make a beautiful gift book as well as a devotional book for God's children.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

SYCHAR TESTIMONIES.

All thoughtful Christians are ready to concede the value of Christian testimony in the work of bringing men to Christ. It is unnecessary to enlarge upon this subject. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so" is sufficient to reveal the Father's will upon this line of Christian activity. Most of us at least look back upon the testimony of some dear old saint of God as having a great and lasting influence upon our lives, and contributing much to our having sought the Lord in the beginning.

The testimonies at Sychar, as elsewhere, have always been an outstanding feature of the camp; and allowing for any extravagances we are forced to admit that the influence of these testimonies for good cannot be calculated. The praise services in which witnessing for Christ has the right of way is always a season of great blessing and encouragement not only to those who participate, but to those who perhaps have come into these meetings for the first time, and especially to those who may be seeking the Lord. The happy, triumphant testimonies cannot but inspire hope in the hearts of those who are yearning to know the Lord or to enjoy him in all his fulness.

It would be impossible to repeat all these testimonies, or even to try to give a summary of them. They usually bear witness to the saving, cleansing, keeping, or healing power of God, and it is blessed to hear them. Let us note just a few sample testimonies.

"For three hundred and sixty-five days in the year I answer 'Here' to the roll-call of my name."—Lafayette Anson.

"Saved as a beardless boy, I have been on the way ever since. Never went back on it for a minute, and am none the worse off for it. Am happy on the way."—Bro. E. G. Chambers.

"Have been under a burden for several months. I came to Sychar where I could pray through to victory in the company of people who know God; and thank God he heard me and I am free this morning."—Sister.

"The bulletin board this morning is suggestive of my experience. For I first saw my sin and when I came to God and he DUNAWAY with my sins and then I saw I was OWEN the Lord everything, so I came and consecrated all to him and he made me his PETTICORD-ing to his promise."—Brother.

"I praise God that he keeps me all the way. He saves and sanctifies me right now."—Hungarian Sister.

"I am so glad I came out of Egypt 21 years ago, and that God sweetly saves and sanctifies me right now."—Mother Patterson.

"I gave my heart to God when I was thirteen years old. Many are praising God for what they have been saved from, but I am praising God for what I have been kept from."—Brother.

"The Lord saved me in Scotland, and sanctified me in America. I drove in here last night at 5 o'clock and found my boy at the altar and this morning he testified in the children's meeting. Praise the Lord!"—Brother.

And thus they go on, lifting us up in our faith and encouraging our hearts. It will be impossible to introduce more. We will call attention to one more outstanding testimony of this year's camp. That will be the testimony of Bro. O. F. Skeen, of Mount Vernon, Ohio, who for many years has been connected with the camp, being one of its officers, the present Superintendent of the grounds, and has had charge of erecting the tents for many years.

Bro. Skeen met with an accident in which he was injured so badly that he was not expected to live. But through faith he was healed so miraculously it was deemed profitable by the Board of Directors to hold a special service at which Bro. Skeen was permitted to give his experience in detail. It was a blessed service and called forth several other testimonies to definite healing that were very inspiring and helpful. A stenographic report of Bro. Skeen's testimony was taken and printed in the daily papers and also in the October issue of the "Christian Worker" published by Rev. Frank A. Doty, 63 E. Lakeview Ave., Columbus, Ohio. It may be possible to obtain the complete stenographic report by addressing Rev. Doty at his Columbus address.

The outstanding facts of Mr. Skeen's accident and healing are as follows: On March 28, 1928, while working in a cesspool 13 feet deep a heavy bucket filled with sand became dislodged and fell into the cesspool upon Mr. Skeen. He was hurried to the hospital where an X-ray revealed a basal fracture and concussion. His jaws were set and he was thought to be unconscious though he knew all that was transpiring. The physicians thought his case hopeless and he was placed in a ward with the worst cases.

He prayed a little for himself but was led to pray for the hospital force. That the whole force might be convicted and shown the power of God. At the same time his temperature arose and the hospital physicians thought he would not live 24 hours. The church which he attended betook themselves to prayer on his behalf and at 9:30 a sensation as if a heavy hand had pressed down upon his head and then released and with the release went every pain. While praising God for his healing a nurse came in and was told the Great Physician had been there and that Mr. Skeen had been miraculously healed.

The news spread like wild-fire throughout the hospital and he was visited by every nurse and physician in the hospital. The head surgeon came and subjected Mr. Skeen to every conceivable test and he was found to be healed.

The rules of the hospital forbade his being released for some days, but finally on his promise to remain in bed for a few days he was permitted to go to his home. While they were preparing to carry him to the automobile in which he was to be taken he arose, dressed himself and was ready to go when the man came to get him. Though compelled to be wheeled in a chair to the street he arose and walked to the waiting automobile and was taken home where he was visited the next few days by hundreds of people who had heard of the wonderful event and had called to verify the report.

It was truly a marvelous healing and Mr. Skeen's prayer concerning the hospital was answered. His recital of this wonderful experience at the camp aroused great interest, and all who were privileged to hear it went away feeling that indeed God had manifested his power in an amazing way. We went to our tent with the scripture "What hath God wrought?" ringing in our heart.

BELSANO, PENNSYLVANIA.

A three-weeks' campaign of special evangelistic services conducted in the Belsano M. E. Church has just closed and at the time of scribbling this report the writer is traveling toward his old Kentucky home.

This meeting was indeed one of great victory for God, and the salvation of many precious souls. The real break came after most two weeks of strong bombardment against popular sins, worldly conformities, and gross indifference toward the things of God. On the night of the break the fountain of heart depths was broken up as many came tumbling to an altar of prayer and cried unto God for mercy. This was followed by souls at the altar and many praying through as the meetings continued through the third week. Not a few received that glorious work of entire sanctification and leaped and praised God for full deliverance of all sin. Perhaps as many as fifty were definitely blessed.

The pastor, Rev. W. E. Siess, has served the church at this place for now most five years and his labors there have been greatly blessed of God among the people. He is a man of God who believes and preaches a full gospel and undertakes, annually, by means of an evangelist for a revival in his church. He has conducted in his church the old-time Methodist class meeting which serves to hold a spiritually-minded folk in his church.

The town of Belsano is favored with a new camp meeting enterprise which is yet in its infancy, but starts with every appearance of a strong and healthful child. The fine bunch of godly men upon their board of directors have erected, some two years ago, a splendid and spacious tabernacle which will easily seat fifteen hundred people. Dr. Ridout and other worthies have been with them and have gotten in some splendid service.

We shall not soon forget this hard-fought battle and victory gained for the Master. It pays to preach the blessed truth of a full salvation to the people everywhere. God saves us evangelists, one and all, from ever stooping so low as to preach a popular gospel. God honors the truth. "I hope Brother C—," said Wesley, "is not ashamed to preach full salvation. This is the doctrine which God will always bless and which the devil, peculiarly, hates; therefore he is constantly stirring up both his own children and the weak children of God against it."

REPORT OF TILDEN H. GADDIS AND THE MOSER SISTERS.

Our first campaign of 1929 in Ft. Wayne, Ind., in a centrally located building, sponsored by the P. H. Church. A Sunday morning service in the First Nazarene Church, noon service in auditorium of General Electric Co., afternoon service at Irene Byron Sanitarium and on the air over WOWO. The blessing of the Lord was upon us and some good cases of salvation resulted.

At Columbus, Ohio, with Parsons Ave., Nazarene Church. Our second revival with Bro. Zimmerman, the good pastor. The attendance was good filling the building again and again and near one hundred sought the Lord. A Sunday school rally the second Sunday was a great success and help to the school. Were at the Hocking Valley R. R. shops for noon service and broadcasted several times over WAIU. This church, which is but a year old, is growing rapidly, well located. The presence of the Lord was there and we expect to return in the future.

At Newport, Ky., in Taylor St. M. E. Church, South. Rev. B. C. Gamble, the good pastor, is a great spirit and a delightful yoke-fellow. This church which is 100 years old shows the line where the slave gallery was, and Daniel Webster, Henry Ward Beecher and other noted men have ministered there. We had good attendance throughout and at first call a dozen sought the Lord. From that on good seeking, closing with 25 at altar the last night. We were favored with the presence of District Superintendent Maxwell on several nights. Through the kindness of "Dad Kershner", who is so well known in Radioland, we ministered to the "Monday Night Club" at Central Y. M. C. A., and broadcasted several mornings over WLW, the Crosley Radio Corporation, one of the strongest stations in America. It is estimated over one million listen in at the devotional hour, and our correspondence proved that hundreds of our friends from Coast to Coast tuned in. The Cincinnati Enquirer reporter kindly gave a helpful part of our ministry through the press.

During this meeting we conducted the funeral of a mother saved six years ago in one of our campaigns at age of 73. We learned that others also from that meeting had stood true, and another had recently gone to Heaven. After all as evangelists of the Cross it is our work not only to get people saved from sin but saved to an experience that will empower them to live victorious here and fit them to enter Heaven.

We are now on Tilgman Island in Chesapeake Bay, our second time here, and with the attendance and spirit better than before. We are expecting a great revival. We find some standing true from the other meeting and want to add some to the Bride of Christ at this time.

DELAND, FLORIDA.

In March, 1928, Evangelist Jack Linn and Mrs. Linn, of Oregon, Wis., held a two-weeks' revival meeting in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Rev. R. F. Hodnett then pastor, with good results. This spring, on their way north from Miami, they spent three days in DeLand. The present pastor, Rev. J. S. Purcell, asked Bro. Linn to preach on Wednesday evening, at the prayer meeting hour. Although there was time for but a day's newspaper notice of the service, the auditorium was half filled. Bro. Linn gave a comprehensive gospel sermon from the words, "Jesus Christ, the same, yesterday, and forever." He had five points: Jesus saves, Jesus sanctifies, Jesus heals, Jesus supplies all our need, Jesus will come again to receive his own. Because he is the ever changeless One, what he did when he was here, he does now. Some wildfire and fanaticism connected with the doctrines of sanctification and healing, is no reason for not believing and teaching what the Bible says about them; any more than counterfeit money is a reason for not using good money.

When Bro. Linn was here last year, he mentioned starting a whole Bible camp meeting, if a site should be available. Since then, a five-acre tract has been donated and deeded for that purpose, just north of the city limits. It is readily accessible from all directions by hard paved roads, lies high, has city water and light at hand, and is less than two miles from the center of town. While Bro. Linn was here this time, the site was plotted and a committee selected to carry forward the enterprise. It is hoped to have it ready for a camp meeting next winter. Charter membership is ten dollars. Contributions of a dollar or more received. Send to Rev. A. S. Hunter, Box 563, DeLand, Fla.

I read many reports of wonderful victories from many parts of the country, but very seldom does your paper report anything from this part of the United States.

Perhaps this is our fault, because we have not reported, or perhaps, had nothing worth while reporting. However, I thought that you might be glad to hear the news of our victory of last night. We have about thirty High School students in our Epworth League, with whom we have been working hard since serving this church (last November).

Last night God answered in a mighty manner. Twenty-three of this group, including eleven young men, came forward and, after prayer and personal dealing, accepted Jesus Christ as Savior, and two sought and found cleansing, and baptism of the Holy Ghost. Praise God for his love.

We ask prayers of all interested that we may have many more such experiences. Henry D. Gough.

A GREAT VICTORY AT MONROETON, PA.

This is our second year at this place and ever since we came here we have been praying that God would give us an old-fashioned, Holy Ghost revival. The people here have been dead in their sins, the old devil has had right of way, and at times we felt it would be impossible to move these people for God, but praise the Lord, "Prayer changes things."

We called Brother Carnes from Wilmore, Ky., to come and help us, and he came. For three weeks he preached, prayed and labored with us until God in his infinite mercy heard and answered.

About fifty people were definitely blessed. A great many of our church members were reclaimed, about fifteen were sanctified and then a number who were not members of our church were saved. A few of these were saved in their homes and it will no doubt be interesting to you to learn that one old woman a hundred years old was sweetly saved in her wheel chair. Thank God!

Some people are saying that the day of revivals are past. We find that if we dare to preach the truth and pay the price, God will bless. Our faith is firm in Jesus. He is blessing beyond our expectations and we have a firm determination to be true to the Old Book and preach a full salvation gospel.

The Herald is proving a great blessing to our people. God bless our dear Dr. Morrison. We thank God that we were privileged to sit at his feet for several years at Asbury College. We shall never forget his godly counsel and advice.

Preach on holiness. This doctrine stands out in Old and New Testament like a mountain upon a plain. The Holy Spirit will help, empower and guide you and you will see gracious results.

Preach sanctification from all sin through the cleansing power of the precious blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in it all be dominated with the spirit of perfect love. A unique old preacher said to me once, "Morrison, I do not believe in your doctrine of entire sanctification, but I have some people in my church who have the experience, sure as you are born." Not long after I heard that this same preacher had entered into Canaan, and was rejoicing in full salvation. Live a holy life. Prove by your living all the week, that what you say in your pulpit on Sunday on this subject of full redemption from sin is the truth. May God who is Almighty, bless and keep you.

Your brother,

H. C. MORRISON.

Our President Means Business.

ANY of our readers never see the good old Courier-Journal, of Louisville, Ky., for that reason we are publishing in full, an article from the front page of this famous paper, which appeared Monday morning, March 11.

This article leads us to believe that our President means business in the enforcement of prohibition laws. It is interesting to note that already his influence is having a most gracious effect in Washington City. It is a great comfort to realize that we have as Chief Magistrate of this nation, a man of clear-cut convictions and of action. We shall see what we shall see.

DETERMINED EFFORT TO ENFORCE ACTS SEEN IN NEW ADMINISTRATION.

Washington, March 10 (UP)—President Hoover will devote his attention this week principally to formulation of his prohibition plans.

He will consult with jurists and leading lawyers regarding the personnel of his law enforcement investigating commission and will go over with congressional leaders and Treasury and Justice Department officials details of legislation he will ask from the extra session of Congress for transfer of enforcement activities from the Treasury to the Justice Department.

Prohibition has assumed the spotlight at the outset of the Hoover Administration. The new President is responsible for this, not only by the emphasis in his inaugural address, but by the reiterated emphasis in his first week in office. He has left no doubt about his intention to use every available means to enforce the law and to carry out, in as satisfactory manner as possible, the proposed investigation into law enforcement, which will touch very minutely upon the "abuses" growing from enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act.

To the disappointment of wets, he has made it plain that this investigation will not go to the fundamentals of the law, itself, as they hoped, and as some of them believed.

The President has several men in mind now for the prohibition commission. As in every similar circumstance, Mr. Hoover selects a list of eligibles, and then makes a careful investigation. He still is collecting eligibles for the list. It will include one Federal Judge and one eminent lawyer because of the minute study it will make of legal procedure. He wants a commission that will command the respect of the country. It is expected to be small, perhaps with five members.

Likewise, he is proceeding carefully with plans for transfer of the prohibition bureau from the Treasury to the Justice Department. This is a move not altogether acceptable to some dry leaders, but they have acquiesced. It will take general control of enforcement from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. The transfer is not a simple matter. Enforcement of prohibition is bound up with Internal Revenue, because of various liquor taxes, and this function must be left in the Treasury.

The prohibition color of the new Administration is apparent in numerous directions. The cast is so pronounced that it has become the gossip of the capital.

Under auspices of the new Jones law, there is a vigorous move to make the capital as dry as possible. There has been a reaction in official life, and a very decided reaction of another sort among foreign diplomats quartered here.

Liquor has disappeared from dinner tables here where it was seen not many months ago. A drying-up in homes of some few officials who served liquors occasionally and who had prospects of continuing under the new Administration was apparent some weeks ago.

The talk that was caused when it was discovered Mr. Hoover's Secretary of Commerce, Robert P. Lamont, had been a director of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment is indication of the dry atmosphere prevailing here.

With the advent of President Hoover, there was originated in the Prohibition Bureau an advertising program for prohibition which recalled the slogan program used by the new President, himself during the war.

An appropriation of $50,000, part of the $2,775,000 increase for prohibition enforcement recently provided, will be used to buy posters for billboards and offices for the "educational campaign." The posters will be similar in form, though differing in text, to those used by Mr. Hoover in the "meatless" Monday and "wheatless Sunday" campaign of war years.

Sample posters now are being examined by the Prohibition Bureau staff. They will be sent to law enforcement officials throughout the country. Copies also will be distributed through leading dry organizations.

"This is not a propaganda campaign, but distribution of purely factual matter to give the public the facts about prohibition and seek their co-operation," Dr. James M. Do-ran, prohibition commission, explained.

Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews, former director of prohibition enforcement, conceived the idea for an educational campaign, but Congress failed to appropriate for it.

THE WAR IN MEXICO.

WE deeply regret the recent rebellion and war in Mexico, and we are hoping by the time this matter gets into print it will be practically over. It seems now that the government is at great advantage over the rebel armies, and the outlook for an early peace is encouraging.

The first time I went across the continent to California I held a meeting in El Paso, Texas, and at that time spoke through an interpreter in one of the Mexican churches. Quite a number of the Mexicans were graciously blessed. On my return trip I preached in several places in New Mexico where I came in touch with a number of Mexican people. I found these people so courteous, so modest, so devout, so appreciative that I came to admire and love them.

In my association with missionaries who have labored in Mexico, I have found them all deeply in love with the Mexican people. You take the very poor, illiterate Mexicans and there is a courtesy about them that is remarkably attractive. We have had a number of Mexican students in Asbury College; they have been studious, industrious, quiet, and courteous in a way to command respect and admiration. Any one acquainted with the Mexican people will tell you that there is something about them remarkably fascinating.

Of course, there are bandits, kidnappers, robbers and murderers in Mexico. They are plentiful in these United States. I suppose there is more murder in the city of Chicago than any three or four of the largest cities in Mexico, and I judge the rebellion against law and order in Chicago is far better organized and will be going on after peace is declared in Mexico. We must not judge the Mexican people by the worst of them. There is no doubt that the past few years in this our neighbor republic, they have made more progress in education and a general upward tendency in agriculture, social and moral conditions, than had been made in that country previously for a century, perhaps, a longer period than that. That country has been for several years under the domination and leadership of intelligent men, who are determined to break the iron yoke of illiteracy and superstition which has rested upon their bowed necks and made their progress practically impossible, for centuries.

We have no doubt that these aggressive leaders of the people have been a bit too radical in their attitude toward the Roman Church. We can understand something of why they should become desperate in their determination to rescue their people from the fearful ignorance and degradation into which a vast proportion of their population have fallen; but it is a very serious matter to interfere with a people's religion, to undertake to dictate to them anything about what they believe, how they shall worship, or who shall be their religious teachers.

Those who know, will be quite ready to testify to the tremendous progress which has been made in India under the domination of Great Britain; the thoroughfares that have been built, the railroads that have been constructed, the powerful dams across streams for the irrigation of farm lands, the courts of justice that have been organized, the schools that have been built, and the many industries which have been introduced into India that are of incalculable benefit to the people. The British people would doubtless admit that they have made mistakes, and that the development and progress have not been what it should have been; but they have wisely been careful to avoid any antagonism or dictation to people about their various religions. The peace they have maintained in the country has opened the way for education and evangelical preaching which has brought untold thousands of idol worshippers to the foot of the cross, to faith in Christ, and the worship of the true God which has lifted them into a new realm of life, activity, and happiness.

Mexico needs the administration of a strong hand and a tender heart. She needs roads, railways, great water dams for cheap light, heat and power, along with irrigation. She needs to be dotted over with good schools; she needs a religious freedom that will permit Protestantism to go in with less plaster Paris images, with worshippers kissing their toes, and a true conception of the Lord Jesus, who is able and willing to save, with the Holy Spirit to dwell in the hearts of his disciples. It will take time to lift Mexico out of centuries of a species of idolatry and ignorance into the great reforms, enlightenment and spirituality which she so much needs, and for which she is so capable.

We always look with grief upon rebellions, wars, and bloodshed in that beautiful country. We feel that our Government should always hold out a helping hand and, under no circumstances, should our capitalists be permitted to take advantage of a people in their upward struggle, but whatever forces we have for uplift and helpfulness, should be extended without selfishness to the remarkably interesting people of our sister republic. Join us in prayer that this war may close without any great battle, the destruction of life, waste of property, and that out of it, may come a better understanding and a long continued peace of widespread improvement in everything that makes for the uplift and betterment of our Mexican neighbors. Let's cultivate the spirit of respect, courtesy and helpfulness toward the Mexican people, everywhere.

THE CATHOLIC STATE.

THE public press of February 7th tells us that "a pact between the Pope and Italy creates a Vatican State." "The terms," the press says, "provides for only a very small rectification of the present boundaries of the Apostolic Palace. . . . The new Papal State will include a plot of ground on the southeastern side of the Vatican, as far as the Colonnade of St. Peter. St. Peter's Square and both Colonnades will be given to the Holy See. . . . The official name of the new Papal territory will be," the press says, "The Vatican City," or "The Vatican State."

We judge the latter will be the name, for that is exactly what it is, a little miniature state established in the center of Italy. The press goes on to say that "The Pope will have the right to erect his own railway stations, telegraphs, telephones, postal and wireless stations. He will be privileged to have an aviation field, and will enjoy the right to coin money, issue bank notes, print postage stamps and exercise other official prerogatives."

Some one tells us that this new kingdom embraces about 140 acres of land. This arrangement makes, the Pope, not only the head of the Catholic Church in all countries, but it makes him the actual king, not only over this 140 acres of territory, but of the Catholic Church throughout the world; more properly, he is an emperor and his vast empire embraces, under the rule of his scepter, all Roman Catholic churches, schools, monasteries, and property of every kind, and his loyal subjects are the Catholic people in all countries.

Aren't we correct in our belief that when our Catholic neighbors recognize and accept the Pope as king, or emperor, their king or emperor, do they not curtail their rights to American citizenship? Should they be recognized as qualified to assist in legislating or enforcing the laws of this nation? "No man can serve two masters." In taking the oath of citizenship in this country, an individual must renounce any and all allegiance to kings, emperors, and rulers of all other countries. This is necessary before he follows this renunciation with an oath of allegiance to this government.

It is well understood that in the Catholic Church the Pope is regarded as infallible; all members of the church including cardinals, bishops, priests and private members must and do submit loyally to his government and control. His will and word to them is as the will and word of God. Any cardinal, bishop or priest who should make any objection to this present arrangement which constitutes him a king and emperor, would at once be brought to trial and, if he did not recant, would be put out of the church. Not only so, but all loyal Catholics suppose the Pope to have power to consign such rebellious parties to eternal torment.

We have powerful Roman Catholic organizations in this country which have always, and constantly, used their political influence to the limit, and when Protestants have suggested that the Romish Church was not only a religious organization, but a powerful political party, they have been quick to deny the charge. Now that the Pope has become a king, with power to coin money, print postage stamps, and, if he chooses, to organize an army and build a navy, our Catholic friends can hardly deny the charge that their church is a powerful political organization, seeking and demanding recognition as such.

You will find that they will now require representatives from all nations at the court of their emperor, and they will insist in sending the representatives of their emperor to the various nations of the world. The time has come when the Protestantism of this country ought to take a very positive stand against the political influence of this foreign ruler and his subjects. No man who is a loyal subject of Emperor Pius has any right to a seat in any law-making body in this country, neither ought he to be entrusted in any office for the enforcement of the law. The loyal subjects of a foreign king is disqualified for enjoyment of the full privileges and benefits of American citizenship.

It is an interesting fact that immediately after the Roman Catholics of Mexico became the loyal subjects of King Pius, they go into rebellion against the government of Mexico. If the tyrant, Mussolini, and the Pope Pius had not created this new empire and made the Pope an emperor, extending his power over all Catholic property and Catholic people of the world, we do not believe that Mexico would now be in civil war with every probability of being drenched with blood.

After years of degrading bondage to the superstitions of Catholicism, which has kept the Mexican people in fearful ignorance and starving poverty her enlightened citizens have determined to make an effort to break the iron yoke of Rome and set their people free. They have made marvelous progress in the building of schools, and making education possible to the multitudes of their people. It is quite probable that outraged against what they have seen and suffered, the Mexican government has gone a bit too far in their opposition to Romish domination; but they must now suffer war, bloodshed, the torch, and the ruin of a great rising republic because they have sought the liberation, education, freedom and prosperity of a most interesting and capable people, because they have determined to break the iron yoke of the king, not over the small territory of 140 acres, but over the whole Roman Catholic Church of the world.

The time has come for every Protestant in these United States to gird himself in earnest opposition to the domination and dictation of this foreign king over his subjects, absolutely obedient to his will and word, throughout the world. There should be no fostering of a spirit of hatred or persecution against any class of our fellowbeings; I came very near saying our fellowcitizens, but the obedient subjects of Emperor Pius are not in the best sense, our fellowcitizens. But we should determine at once, and for all time that the subjects of Emperor Pius are not qualified to sit in the lawmaking bodies of this nation, or to enforce the laws, after they are made. No man can be farther than myself for any sort of desire to persecute a man because of his religious faith, or to interfere in any way, with his method of worship. But now that the Pope has become an emperor over a vast empire his loyal subjects are no longer fitted for the high privileges of citizenship in the countries in which they live, unless they wholeheartedly renounce all allegiance to Emperor Pius and avow themselves loyal subjects to the government of the country in which they desire to reside. No man ought to be sworn into the Senate or Congress of the United States, or the legislative body of any state, who does not, first of all, in a solemn oath renounce all allegiance or loyalty to Emperor Pius.

The Prayer Battle.

Rev. Henry Ostrom.

Out into the battle-field of life! Nay, child of the convent. Your battle-field is not journeyed into, from the secret inner place; rather it is journeyed from, and the inner secret place is the place of the struggle. Would you point to your spiritual Yorktowns and your Waterloos, then go behind closed doors and extend your fore-finger toward the chair or the couch or the bedside, but remember that they who look at your bidding will require to be possessed of considerable insight to reckon what is meant when you say, "There are some of the real battle-fields of my life."

For, it is with us as it was with our Master. Going out to the task, his step was even and his restful poise of soul manifest, almost always. Did he cure the man of Gadara? It was with one word "go." Did he calm the storm? How easily done. But it is in prayer that you find him "in an agony." It is in prayer that he falls on his face. It is for prayer that he rises "a great while before it is day." "Who in the days of his flesh poured out his soul unto God with crying and tears." There was the Savior's battle-field and there is yours.

Out from behind closed doors "openly" there is the rewarding, the harnessing the soul-leisure which active occupation helps to nature. It is in the secret place that men faint. The decision to pray more is scarcely ever met with a calm conclusion that it would be better to pray less but rather it is met with fainting of spirit. Why tell God? Why seek to affect a holy government? Why fight for your ground where so many have become absurd fanatics? Why? And we faint. The battle is lost. We lost out not through pronounced opposition, but through the absence of "coming boldly" and coming clear through to the throne.

So here are your two fields of observation. On the one hand you have the daily rush and tug and toil; on the other hand you have the hour of prayer. The one is out in the open; the other is in the place of secrecy. Where will you go most heavily armed and where will you most contend at first-hand with hell? Which place shall find you keenest and most watchful? If you are to win life's eternal trophies gird yourself, watch at the right hand and the left, wash your lips and pray through. Claim your right upon your knees to win God's answer in his Son's name. Victory there, the rest is "easy."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

I know you are all happy that the long, long winter has passed and the birds are singing, the leaves are putting forth, and the plows are turning the dirt for gardens and planting time. From what I read in the papers it has been a very severe winter up north. I knew something of it before I left Kentucky in January, but it seems the most severe weather was in February. It is good to have a heavenly Father who gives us change of season, or we should become very tired of cold weather all the time.

We have had a beautiful winter in Miami. They say there were 300,000 tourists in this state, and there has been no winter when more celebrities have visited the state than this year. Our Vice President, Mr. Curtis, is visiting here at this time, and all along we have had distinguished guests who have gone away to sing the praises of the land of sunshine and flowers.

Dr. Morrison and I do not see the gaieties of the city, as we keep close to our little bungalow, reading, writing and entertaining the friends who may call upon us. We have to keep The Herald matter going, and have many letters to answer, which makes our days quite full of service.

I was invited to speak to the young people in one of the Baptist churches here Sunday evening, and had the pleasure of meeting a young woman who had labored with Miss McConnell in the work in Kentucky. I also found that a young man from that church was in school in Asbury College, so I soon felt that I was among friends of like mind. The pastor, Mr. Gam-mage, was absent and his wife took the service and gave us a splendid sermon. How fortunate a preacher who has an helpmeet who can "carry on" when he is absent.

Well, this leaves Dr. Morrison and myself feeling very well and we are hoping to improve more and more as the days get warmer.

Lovingly,
AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little boy nine years old. I have red hair and gray eyes. I am in school at Franklin Spring; haven't missed a day in two years. I am in the fourth grade. I have the best teacher of all; some may know her, Miss Della Gaines. If this escapes the W. B. I will come again. I have a Bible name, the first letter D and last L.

D. Hampton Martin.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am an Iowa boy nine years old with blue eyes and brown hair, and live on a farm. I have three brothers and one sister. My grandpa and grandma live with us, and grandma takes The Herald. Papa reads page ten to us. I like to ride a horse and go coasting. Am in the third grade, walk a mile and a quarter to school. I went to Sunday school four miles from home until the winter got so bad. Have lots of snow and awfully cold here. My middle name begins with C and ends with S, and has seven letters. Hoping W. B. is out when this arrives so I will see it in print as it is my first. Those who guess my name write.

Albert C. Johnson.
Brandon, Ia.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter. I am in the second grade at school. I am seven years old. I have brown hair and blue eyes. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with P and ends with E, and has seven letters.

Mary P. Stone.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Alabama girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My father has been taking The Herald. He sure does enjoy reading it. I was twelve years old June 13. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I am a member of the C. M. Church. My father is the pastor. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. I have three brothers. We all like to go to Sunday school. Will you guess my middle name? It begins with H and ends with L, and has five letters in it. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope Mr. W. B. is out hunting when this letter arrives.

Oma H. Craft.
Rt. 1, Wedowee, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Illinois girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eight years old and in the fourth grade. My birthday is Jan. 28. Have I a twin? Who can guess my first name; it begins with G and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. My grandmother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I hope Mr. W. B. is ill when this letter arrives, as this is my first letter to The Herald.

G. Verdine Carter.
Thompsonville, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Little Willie will write a little letter, if you see it to print as fit, next time I may do better.

Some cousins say, "Write me today, You're sure to get an answer;" But everyone should falsehood shun like leprosy and cancer.

When faith is strong I don't go wrong, delight to do my duty;

Good health I seek to paint my cheek, Good thoughts to paint true beauty.

For Christ I live, to him I give my heart with all its sorrow;

I live today, not yesterday, nor fret about tomorrow.

My soul's at rest, I know it's best to walk as God has told me,

So I do see God leadeth me, his strong right arm uphold me.

This race begun I'll help some one love life which God has given;

It will be sweet some day to meet the soul I've helped, in heaven.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Kentucky boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I am seven years old, and in the first grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. Mother takes The Herald and I like to read it, especially page ten. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with R and ends with Y, and has three letters in it.

James R. Berry.
Coral Ridge, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter. I am in the fourth grade at school. I am ten years old. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with Y and has six letters in it.

Frieda L. Berry.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please, Aunt Bettie, let a preacher's little daughter from Illinois join your happy band of boys and girls. I'm twenty-two years old, rather small, weight 100 pounds, five feet two, eyes of blue, that's me. My birthday is April 4. Have I a twin? If so I'd be glad to have a letter from them, and I will send my picture in return. I'm a member of the M. E. Church, of which my father is pastor. We take The Pentecostal Herald and we think it is a very fine paper. I enjoy reading it very much. I'd love to hear from some of the Colorado cousins as I am thinking of taking a trip out there this summer. I hope Mr. W. B. is out walking when this arrives, as it is my first attempt. Just a little Illinois girl.

Myrtle Mays.
Sarento, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. This is my second letter to The Herald. I have been taking The Herald for several months and enjoy reading page ten. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. I only missed three Sundays last year. I have a fair complexion, blue eyes, dark hair, weigh 113 pounds, and am five feet, two inches tall. Both my father and mother are living. I only have one sister and one brother, and he is married. I go to prayer meeting most every Sunday night and preaching on the second Sunday morning and fourth Sunday evening, and I enjoy going to church better than anywhere else. I have an uncle that is a local Methodist preacher, and my mother and father are Methodists and I guess I will be too. My age is between twelve and sixteen, and the one that guesses my age I will send them my picture. I will answer all letters received.

Lola Carter.
Sandy Ridge, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little Oklahoma boy. I am nine years of age. I go to school. My teacher's name is Mrs. Burnett. I like to read page ten in The Herald. Can some of the cousins guess my middle name? It begins with D and ends with E, and has four letters in it. This is my first letter to the cousins. I hope to see it in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is out milking his cows when this arrives. I must close.

Earnest D. Paul.
Cline, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little Maine girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old, in the sixth grade at school. My teacher's name is Miss Julia Small. I go to the Evangelical Sunday school. My Sunday school teacher's name is Mrs. Sylvia Beane. I like both of my teachers very well. I am 51½ inches tall and weigh 65 pounds, have dark brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. One of my friends takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I have five sisters and one brother. Will some one please write to me. I will try and answer all the letters I receive. Hope W. B. is out.

Nancy Boyce.
Kingfield, Maine.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl nine years old. Mother is a Christian. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My Sunday school teacher is Mrs. G. Miller. I love her and I love to go to Sunday school. I love to read page ten. I like to go to school. My teacher is Miss Simpson. I like her. I hope you will pray that I will get saved. My hair is red; I have curls and blue eyes. The one that guesses my name I will write to them a long letter. It starts with M and ends with A, and has eight letters in it. I hope I will see it printed. I go to the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

Sara Bryson.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Michigan girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I enjoy reading page ten. I have blond hair and brown eyes. My birthday is on October 4. Have I a twin? Can you guess my second name? It begins with A and ends with Y. It has six letters in it. Whoever guesses my second name I will write them a long letter. I go to Sunday school every Sunday and I have earned a Bible. I also know Jesus Christ. I wish all the cousins would write to me and I will answer them all. Hope to see my letter in print.

Virginia A. Scheel.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been a long time since I wrote to you and all the cousins. When I wrote before I was a pupil in high school. Now I am casting my lot with teachers who are trying to impress on young minds the proper health, moral and spiritual idea. I find lots of room to serve God as a teacher, and always try to take advantage of these great opportunities, giving God the best there is in me. I have been a Christian for four years, and the life is sweeter each day. I ask the prayers of all Christian readers. I would love to hear from just lots of the readers and will gladly answer all letters received. I have several lovely correspondents that I gained before.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Greetings in the precious name of our sweet Savior Jesus Christ, our soon coming King. "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth," this year 1929. I am glad indeed if you let a California boy join your happy band of boys and girls. I am twenty years, and five feet, three inches tall. University law student, but thanks be unto God for he has called me to preach his saving grace and the power of his precious blood. Praise his Master's name. Please pray for me all

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please give me a small space in your paper for a few lines of poetry. They express my heart's desire for the salvation of my loved ones.

My heart in sacred love for them
It's something no one else now knows,
And while I am here in this secret place alone with God,
My heart with love and grace overflows.

And for the little ones so dear,
My love goes up in secret prayer
That God will bless and keep them,
And be with them any time and any where.

And as long as thou remaineth with me,
And with a comforting hand to lend,
I pray, they will seek the Holy Spirit,
And God will be the same to them.

And for the good of their little souls
In sacred love to thee, my time I lend,
My prayers, God will return to me some day
In their coming happy day they will spend.

May their souls waiteth for the Lord,
Delivereth them from the crooked ways,
When in the slippery paths of youth,
There shall our lips in endless Praise.

REQUEST FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. L. M. C.: "Please pray that God will heal my body that is sore afflicted."

NOTICE TO THE HOLINESS PEOPLE OF AMERICA.

A great rally of all the holiness people of America is being planned, to be held from May 7 to 12, of this year at one of the great centers in our country, namely, Asbury College, Wilmore Ky. It will be the occasion of the Annual Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness.

We desire, however, that it shall be, in addition to this business feature, a great general rallying of representatives from every unit of the Holiness Movement and from every part of the country.

Let us have one of those general rallies that lends inspiration and impetus to the whole work of spreading Scriptural holiness.

We earnestly hope that all Associations and Camp Meetings, also holiness churches and missions, will plan to have representatives at this meeting.

A splendid program with a large number of the most representative holiness men of the country is already in preparation. C. W. Butler, Pres.

FALLEN ASLEEP

AT HOME WITH GOD.

Mrs. J. T. Wilson.

On Tuesday, March 20, 1928, the sadness of death darkened the Wilson home at Stewartville, Bedford Co., Va., where God called away the gentle mother, Mrs. Octavia McNeil Wilson, at the age of 74 years. She was born September 5, 1853, was the daughter of the late James I. McNeil, of Simpsons, Va., and widow of the late John T. Wilson, of Stewartville, Va.

She had been seriously ill for nearly three months, and at times her suffering would become most excruciating. But all her physical agony was borne with the greatest patience and submission.

Her grieved and anxious children prayed so earnestly that she might be healed and spared, but the time comes when medical aid will not prolong a most precious life, when faith and prayer will not unite, because the Almighty refuses to lengthen the life cord in this world, when yearning and sorrowing hearts can do no more than stand by and watch their loved ones take their flight, although they know that no future bereavement will ever again be so piercing.

Mrs. Wilson was converted early in life, was sanctified about thirty years ago, and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. She possessed a wonderful degree of faith, and was much used of God in intercessory prayer. Described by a peace-making disposition, lamb-like spirit, fervent charity, and great devotion to her family and her God, her consecrated life shone as the beacon light of her home and community. The memory of her beautiful angelic face, comforting voice, and patient spirit will long be the "golden thread" to lead her children to that home of which she ever thought, and for which she ever lived. It was her delight for the family to sing "Home of the Soul" when gathered about the fire-side for worship.

All her children, eight in number, "still linger on Time's troubled shore" to suffer the loss of all the great blessings which can be comprehended in that sweetest and most precious word MOTHER. Also there survive nine grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, four brothers and three sisters.

On Thursday, March 22, her body was taken to Floyd, her native county, and interred in the Wilson Cemetery, near Simpsons, by the side of her husband, who preceded her by two months. They walked together down the pathway of life for 52 years, and "in death they are not divided." Reunited on the other shore, they await the swiftly approaching time when those now sorrowing here will rejoice with them there.

HORTEN.

In memory of our beloved pastor, Rev. Claude Horten, who passed from labor to reward January 11. Six years he has labored in the Master's vineyard. It makes our hearts ache and our eyes fill with tears to give up our pastor who has been our spiritual guide for four years.

We have this consolation, that our loss is heaven's gain, safe in the arms of Jesus, free from all suffering, and waiting on the golden shore to meet his loved ones there.

His entire time here on this earth was devoted to God and intensively interested in the affairs of his kingdom. For his pure spirit the vanities of this world held no charm. His chief delight was to help some poor sinner find Jesus precious to their life.

In the sphere he lived and by precept and example taught the true way of holiness. He was uncompromising and believed in going to the top where beauty could be seen, and where the warmth of God could be felt. He preached more and more that religion of every human well being and as the years came and went he grew in grace and the knowledge of the firmer conception of a genuine Christian.

Just as he started on his great work for Jesus as an evangelist he came to our church and helped in a revival. He preached the old-time gospel, and many were saved and reclaimed under his preaching. Our church grew from then on, and hope to meet him some day as an unbroken church.

May those dear sermons we have heard him preach be an inspiration to our lives, and call us ever onward, so when our life is here ended we shall join the band with him to spend eternity in that Celestial City where no sad parting ever comes and no goodbye words ever be spoken.

He was loved by all who knew him, both old and young. It saddens our hearts, his going away, for he will be greatly missed, not only in our church, but in his home. For those years he had been leaning on the rod and staff and when the time came for him to go he was not afraid, but prayed, "My Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name; thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. If it can be thy will spare me to my dear wife and children. Not my will, but thine be done." As his wife stood by his side she heard his dying words, "Hallelujah! Hallelujah!"

We went with him just as far as we could, then he had to go alone, still he was not alone for another met him in the shallow waters of the river on the earthly side and escorted him to the other shore, up the delectable hill to the pearly gates.

We miss your face dear pastor,

We miss your loving smiles;

But if we're only faithful,

We'll meet you after awhile.

The pulpit you used is vacant,

Your voice is hushed and still;

A place is vacant in the home,

Which never can be filled.

No more treading around the altar,

No more humming at your work;

Home is broken, loved ones scattered,

But your church you did not shirk.

Boys be steady, preach the gospel,

Never shirk your duty here.

Stand for God and wait his coming.

For his coming draweth near.

All is dark but not tomorrow,

Clouds will pass the sun will shine;

Then we know a glad reunion

In the happy sunny clime.

Ozell Carter.

SO NEAR AND YET SO FAR.

Will O. Scott.

Dr. Curry says, "Let the pulpit be silent on any doctrine a single generation and that doctrine will be exterminated from the faith of the church."

I am fully convinced that we need a revival of Holy Ghost, hell-fire preaching in these days to arouse the people to a sense of their personal responsibility to God and awake the churches from their sleep of indifference toward the fearful consequences of a life of sin.

I also confess that the ministry need to be aroused to a sense of their duty in warning the people to flee from the wrath to come. Flattered by the compliments and favors of the world and, occasionally, by their attendance at our services, we are too apt to follow the line of least resistance and prophesy smooth things.

Even the funerals of worldly, ungodly men of times reach the high water mark of eulogy and adulation from every quarter including the clergy. Faults, at such times, are written in water and virtues in brass and marble. The question of a little girl might set us all to thinking, who, after reading many inscriptions on the monuments in the cemetery, inquired, "Mama, where do they bury bad people?"

I have often wondered whether St. Paul (2 Tim. 4:3) meant that the teachers whom the people "heaped to themselves" had itching ears or whether it was the people themselves that had the itch; also, what length the ears had to be to conform to the standard.

But I am certain of one thing and that is, the churches in some places are heaping to themselves agnostics, as pronounced in some ways as Bob Ingersoll in his palmist days. But all there was of that famous infidel's teaching through a wind-mill and when the chaff is blown away all that remains is the one sentence, "I don't know." Ask any number of church members today whether they have a clear evidence of their conversion, not to say anything of their Pentecost, and who does not know that the answer in most cases will be, "I don't know."

If Paul were here today he would find in many churches an altar with this inscription, "To the Unknown God." And the wonder of it would be, it might be found where the "amen corner" used to be. God forbid that it should ever be found in the pulpit.

How sad the truth that words spoken by Jesus to Philip, John 14:9, on the eve of his Passion should so aptly apply to multitudes who are counted as his disciples, "Have I been so long time with you and yet hast thou not known me?" Will my readers all join in singing a verse by Mrs. Morris—

"Nearer, still nearer, while life shall last,

Till safe in glory my anchor is cast;
Thro' endless ages, ever to be,
Nearer, my Savior, still nearer to Thee."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson II.—April 14, 1929.

Subect.—Hezekiah Leads His People Back to God. 2 Chron. 30:1-9; 25-27..

Golden Text.—The LORD your God is gracious and merciful. 2 Chron. 30:9.

Time.—About B. C. 726.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—Hezekiah was the thirteenth ruler over Judah after the nation separated into two kingdoms, sometimes called the Northern and the Southern Kingdoms. It had been some two hundred years since the ten tribes rebelled against Rehoboam, and set up the kingdom of Israel. Things had gone from bad to worse in both kingdoms. Israel was in almost utter ruin; and Judah was only a little better, having reached its worst condition under Ahaz the father of Hezekiah. He was an idolater, and led his people away from the worship of Jehovah.

Hezekiah ascended the throne of Judah at the age of twenty-five, as well as we can now determine, beginning his reign about the year B. C. 726. Everything seemed against him. He had been reared by an idolatrous father amid the luxury of the Jewish Court. The people had forgotten God and the temple was filled with rubbish and filth. But fortunately for him and his people, the old prophet Isaiah who had lived during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham and Ahaz, was still living and prophesying in Jerusalem; and Hezekiah had the good sense to heed his wisdom. Maybe he was thinking of the foolishness of Rehoboam who rejected the advice of the older, wiser men of his realm, and listened to that of certain hot-headed young fellows of his own age; thereby losing ten of the tribes at one blow. This modern age needs to learn a lesson just here.

There must have been a large bit of righteous indignation in the heart of young Hezekiah. He was determined to make a clean sweep of all the accumulated dirt and idolatry that had piled up during the reign of his wicked father. It took two weeks to clean the filth out of the temple, and to deposit it in the valley of the Kedron; but the work went on to completion. The people had become so degraded that they were worshipping what was supposed to be the old brass serpent that Moses had hoisted on a pole during the forty years in the wilderness. To the people who were given up to idolatry this thing had become sacred, just as many people nowadays are ready to worship any little trinket that they think Jesus might have touched while in the world. If one had the napkin that was wrapped about his head what time he lay in Joseph's tomb, he could sell it for millions, or he could make millions showing it to sick folk who wished to be healed of their ailments. The human race is prone to idolatry. It must have required some courage on the part of Hezekiah to grind that snake to powder; but he did it. It took courage also to destroy the High Places, in order to stop idolatry. The heathen will sell their gods, but it is not safe for one to desecrate them. The Ephesians would die for Diana and her temple; but the city's jewelers grew rich making and selling replicas of them.

When Hezekiah was preparing to keep a great passover according to the law, he found that the priests were so corrupt that they were unfit to serve in the temple. In addition to the physical cleansing of the temple, it was necessary to have a moral cleansing of the ministry. If ever a revival was needed it was needed in Jerusalem. Hezekiah prepared the way of the Lord, and the revival came in due time.

May we not learn a lesson from this? We are living at a time when there is sore need of a revival of Bible religion. Many nostrums are being offered as cures for the sick patient. One brother calls for the Church to discard old methods, and line up with the age. Another would save the world through education. Still another declares that the only hope is to be found in social service—give men good environment, and they will soon all be saved. Another brother thinks salvation will come through better organization, as if the Church were not already organized to death. Meantime men are dying without salvation, and some of us preachers are trying to preach them into heaven to comfort the loved ones left behind. After all, there is but one remedy: The Church must clean out, and clean up, and call for the Holy Ghost to come in his Pentecostal power. Anything else is a sham. Results will not last. Satan does not care how much we organize and piddle around. He will endorse anything short of real salvation.

How about personal work? By all means do all of it possible. Plead with souls in season and out of season. There are hungry hearts everywhere. But let us remember that none of our methods can succeed without the Divine Spirit. We are prone to forget his office work, but without him we can do nothing.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. All Israel and Judah.—The invitation was to both kingdoms. Ephraim and Manasseh.—I can find no special reason why these two groups should have received a special invitation, as none is assigned. Hezekiah was acting with some degree of boldness in inviting the kingdom of Israel up to his own capital. But his doing so may be attributed to the fact that Hoshea, possibly the best king the Northern Kingdom ever had, was then on the throne. Besides, their enemies had already carried away the golden calves from both Dan and Bethel, and the kingdom was in ruins.

2. In the second month.—The fourteenth day of Nisan, their first month, was the proper time for the passover; but there was a provision in the law, Numbers 9:10, 11, that permitted the keeping of the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month, Ijar, in case something rendered it impossible to keep it at the regular time.

3. There were two special reasons for postponing the passover till the second month in this case: (1) "The priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently"; (2) The time was too limited for the people to gather at Jerusalem.

4. Pleased the king and all the people.—There is no difficulty about having a revival when the preacher and people can pull together. They must be of "one accord in one place."

5. From Beersheba to Dan.—This was a colloquial expression used to describe the entire land. Hezekiah wished all the twelve tribes to join in keeping this great passover. It had been years since the people had kept this important feast according to the law.

6. The posts.—This is rather an old use of the term. It meant the men sent out by the king to bear the invitation to the people. Note that they carried the message to "the princes throughout all Israel and Judah." The presumption is, that these princes, important men, sent the messages broadcast to the people around them. The king's message is interesting, but too long for quotation. It indicates that the people in general were sorely backslidden, and that Hezekiah is calling them to repentance. He does not mince his words. Their fathers had been stiffnecked, had turned away from Jehovah their God, and had met their doom. Hezekiah entreats them to turn back to God. Since he is "gracious and merciful" they will be received, forgiven and restored to his favor. His message would be good revival preaching in any age. It would suit ours perfectly.

25. All the congregation . . . rejoiced.—This was glorious. The revival had already begun. Would that our nation would rush to God after this fashion. Shall we ever see it?

26. So there was great joy in Jerusalem.—As the ten tribes were flocking to the city it was like a resurrection from the dead. For long decades they had been scattered, and were frequently at war with the two tribes; but now they were coming home with hearts of love for the old city and the worship of Jehovah in the sacred temple.

27. Then the priests the Levites arose and blessed the people.—The ceremonies that usher in the feast are beginning. Such enthusiasm is arising that it will be impossible to separate the people for sometime to come; wherefore the passover will continue for fourteen weeks, twice the ordinary length of time allotted for its observance. Never since the days of Solomon had such a time been known in Jerusalem. There must have been deep sincerity, for we read in the last verse of the lesson that "their voice was heard, and their prayer came up to his holy dwelling place, even unto heaven."

GRADUATION GIFT.

What could be better than a worth-while book at the graduation season? "Ideals for Earnest Youth" by A. T. IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE THE HERALD.

I have been a reader of The Herald for several years. I have been a pastor in the M. E. Church for seven years. Was in the mission field some time. I have held many revivals and I have always urged new born souls to read The Herald. It is very necessary that babes in Christ have the proper food. I have noticed that the people who read it are loyal to the church, have a passion for souls, regular attendants to all services of the church. They are earnest in their prayers, and as general are the best prayers in the church, and it will pay any minister to advertise The Herald.

HALLELUJAH SOLOS—THE YELLOW BOOK.

This is Jack Linn's solo book. The titles of some of the songs are, The mourner's bench for me, The Hallelujah Christian, Strike the bottom, brother, Clean out the Corners, That relative of mine, etc., etc.

Price, 25c each, postpaid.

TWO TRAMPS.

A story about a boy named Rollo, and his uncle, who find it necessary to tramp through the country in order to restore perfect health. To Rollo, Christianity is a very real thing. His conversations with his uncle and with the many people that he meets on his travels make an interesting and helpful story. Wherever these two tramps go they scatter sunshine, fresh hope and comfort.

Amy LeFevre has long been noted for her purposeful stories and this one is no exception to the many other books that she has written.

Read Two Tramps. It will be a real refreshment to you. The regular price of the book is $1.50, but we have listed it in our Special Sale at 60c, postpaid.

A SURE WAY

To be well prepared with your Sunday School lesson is to use A Daily Digest of the Sunday School Lesson by Amos R. Wells. It contains a helpful thought on the Lesson for each day in the week throughout all the year. The book is handy in size. It can be carried in the vest pocket. Price 35c each, postpaid.

THREE TIMES THREE.

A story especially appropriate for boys. It shows clearly the evil of drink and the importance of the right kind of companionship. Listed in our Clearance Sale at only 35c postpaid.

"MODERNISM WITH THE MASK OFF"

By W. G. Bennett
Is a clear, concise statement of Modernism, and has been written especially for the information of the common people, who have not the time to read the fuller and more exhaustive treatment of the subject.

The quotations on evolution have been selected with great care from the very best authorities on scientific subjects. What modernism is, is shown from the writings of modernists.

It is commended by such scholars as the noted author and theologian, Leander S. Keyser, editor of "The Bible Champion."

Rev. J. W. Goodwin, General Superintendent of the Church of the Nazarene, says of it: "A fearful blow at modernism."

Dr. S. A. Danford says: "You have certainly taken the mask off of modernism."

A neat booklet of forty-seven pages, neatly put up and sells at twenty-five cents. Order from The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

A FUNERAL MANUAL.

Containing Scripture Selections, Topics, Texts and Outlines, Suggestive Themes and Prayers, Quotations and Illustrations, Forms of Service, etc., etc. Beautifully bound in black leather and printed on India paper with gold edges. Small enough to slip into the pocket. Listed in our Clearance Sale at only $1.50, postpaid.

184 SERMON OUTLINE FOR 60c.

These are simply thought starters. They will give you fresh ideas for sermons and addresses. The book is complete with subject and text indexes. Send us sale price of sixty cents today for your copy of "Sermons in a Nutshell." Regular price 75c. Useful for all Christian workers.

Arnold's Practical Commentary

BY REV. BURTON J. VINCENT, A.B.

A commentary for the masses. It has four clearly printed pages on each lesson, as much as most teachers have time to peruse. It contains: 1. Home Readings. 2. Lesson Text. 3. Golden Text, Practical Truth, Topic and Outline arranged as a responsive exercise. 4. Time. 5. Place. 6. Introduction. 7. Commentary. 8. Plain Teachings. 9. Questions. 10. Discussion Topics. 11. Lesson Illustration. 12. One Missionary Minute. 13. Sidelight from Science. 14. Practical Applications. 15. The Lesson in Picture. 16. Lesson Plans for the Adult and Senior, Intermediate, Junior, and Primary Classes. 17. Maps. 18. Bible Dictionary.

Arnold's Practical Commentary has a field all its own. It is orthodox. It is reverent in spirit. It is an exponent of evangelical faith. It is practical in its comments. It is pedagogical in its teaching principles. It is spiritual in its influence. Its plans and suggestions are not so verbose as to be a temptation to the teacher to become mechanical, but rich enough in suggestions to point the way for the teacher of vision and originality to get at the Master's feet with his class.—Bishop G. W. Griffith.

Arnold's Practical Lesson Commentary is deservedly one of the most popular Sunday-school Commentaries upon the market today. It presents in convenient form choice material upon the lesson. The concise and suggestive teaching plans for each department of the school are a valuable feature.—Dean Olmstead.

Arnold's Practical Sunday School Lesson Commentary is a favorite among Sunday school workers. The issue for 1929 fully sustains the splendid reputation it has enjoyed in the past, and those who purchase it will find that it ranks with the more expensive lesson commentaries on the market.—The Free Methodist.

Price: Cloth, $1.00, postpaid.

BY R. A. TORREY, D.D.

Fits the Vest Pocket. The Religious Telescope says: "Has proved a blessing to Sunday school teachers and pupils. In addition to the digest of the lessons, comments, etc., it contains attendance record, blank pages for names and addresses, calendar and the Ten Commandments. Price, 35c.

All Denominations Approve Its Use.

Peloubet's Select Notes for 1929

BY AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.

Sunday School Workers' Best Friend. Indispensable.—As an up-to-date Commentary on the Uniform Lessons for 1929. Help, guidance, inspiration, and satisfactory preparation all can be found in it.

Comprehensive.—It contains everything necessary to preparation—explanatory notes of the text, topics for discussion, illustrations of all kinds, suggestive methods to develop the lesson, maps, charts, etc.

Inspirational.—No teacher can use this wonderfully selected material without gaining a spiritual inspiration as to how it may best be imparted.

No Bible worker or student can afford to be without it. Price, $2.00 Postpaid.

EVANGELISTIC AND PERSONAL.

H. J. McNeese: "Need a work among the youth, or dispensational teaching? Need a revival? If so, write me. I combine all three. Leave church in fine shape to go on for God and souls. Write me at 634 13th Ave., New Brighton, Pa."

W. A. Grogg: "I am now making up my slate for the summer. I will go anywhere the Lord leads, to hold meeting. I have a good tent of my own and would like to have a few tent meetings this summer. Any pastor who wants an old-time revival, would be glad to date him for a meeting. Can furnish good reference. Willing to hold tent or church meetings. Write me at 418 24th St., West, Huntington, W. Va."

Evangelist J. L. Glascock will hold a camp meeting at Kearney, Neb., Aug. 16 to 25. He has two vacant dates immediately before that meeting that he would be pleased to give to some camp meeting, church, or convention, between Cincinnati and Kearney, and thus save time and expense in travel. Persons desiring to secure his services should address him, 1350 Grace Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Rev. L. Gaugh is at present stationed at Lima, Ohio, at 140 S. Main St. They have a hall where services are held every night in the week at 7:30. He would be delighted to have any Herald readers or friends who are passing through the city or visiting there, to attend these services. They will surely receive a hearty welcome.

"MOTHER" A SERMON FOR MOTHER'S DAY.

BY REV. H. E. CORBIN.

A little book to put in the hands of boys and girls who are away from home. It will remind them anew of Mother and Mother's God. Neatly bound in attractive paper cover. Price, 20c each or 6 for $1.00. PENTECOSTAL PUBLISHING COMPANY, Louisville, Kentucky.

AN INTERESTING REPORT.

(The following letter is from my Native Preacher.—Mrs. H. C. M.)

Dear Patron:

After my greetings I wish you to know that I am well and hope the same for you. I also thank you for being so mindful of our spiritual and physical needs and for giving the right help we need, and I pray that God may pour his heavenly blessings on you and strengthen you physically and spiritually for his service.

Now I want to tell you something about my family. I have five children, three boys and two girls. Three children are in a boarding school and two read at home. My desire is that they may be brought up so that they may serve their heavenly Father when they grow up. I think you will also want to know a little about my work. I live in Pihani, a small town in Hardoi, and here I try to be a true witness of my Lord Jesus Christ. I have two other Christians who help me in spreading the gospel, one of them lives about ten miles away from me. My work is within the area of ten square miles. There are seventeen small villages in which Christians live and I try to visit some of them daily. Through your kindness and that of my District Superintendent, I now possess a bicycle that helps me to visit two or three distant villages a day.

Dr. Titus has also written a book that helps us very much in teaching the Scriptures to village Christians; young and old, children grown up can all learn from it. It makes them get acquainted with Christ. We also speak to them on temperance. There are three hundred and forty-five Christian people in my area. I started five Sunday schools among them in different places. There is also a small day school for children; twenty-five of them come to it, some learn hand work. Everything is going on nicely, and I hope that through your prayers and with help of God I'll be able to do more and better work this coming year. My work is among people of all caste and creed and people are accepting Christ. Twenty-five people were baptized during the year, distributed 500 tracts and 150 gospel portions were sold.

I request you to pray for me and my work so that whatever I do may be for his glory.

With best wishes,

Your obedient servant,

Isaac Samuel.

BACCALAUREATE AND CONVOCA-TION SERMONS.

BY E. V. ZOLLARS.

Himself a college president, Dr. Zollars has the happy faculty of knowing just how to appeal to young people of college age. The book contains thirty-four suggestive sermons on such subjects as "The Character and Work of the Prepared Man," "The Sheltering Rock, or the Highest Type of Character," "The Conditions of Successful Life," "The Highest Definition of Man," etc. 321 pages, neatly bound in cloth. Price, postpaid, $1.75.

RAVENSWOOD, WEST VIRGINIA.

Here comes my first report to The Pentecostal Herald. In the beautiful, homelike town of Ravenswood, W. Va., we just closed our last revival meeting. Quite a number were soundly converted, and three joined the church and five more plan to come in next Sunday.

In the afternoons we held services for the children and saw sixteen of them sweetly converted. During this revival different ministers delivered forceful sermons, none of which did better than the pastor, Rev. Robt. L. Greynolds, of Asbury College, who put his heart and soul into the meeting and preached like a second Sam Jones. We never will forget the kindness shown us in this meeting. The people and pastor and family are very near one hundred per cent pure gold. They surely can testify, shout and shine and put the devil on the run. Praise the Lord for another victory won.

From this meeting I go to my old home town, Howard, Pa., to preach in different churches and schoolhouses for the next two months. On May 2-19 I have an open date. I would be glad to come to your home church and pull on the skies for an old-time revival, the only kind that makes the devil mad. I am out for souls and will go anywhere. Terms are entertainment and free will offering. Write for references. Flossie Haines. 13708 Claiborne Ave., Cleveland, O.

SEEING THE FUTURE

BY CHRISTABEL PANKHURST

A book that evangelical believers will read with keenest interest. The Sunday School Times says it "is her greatest one, the conclusions of a brilliant mind, a devout Christian, a famous authority on social and political problems, and one who writes under the mastery of a great conviction."

Be sure to read these discriminating studies of prophecy and the signs of the times, giving a satisfying and Biblical solution to the problems of this troubled world and of the individual Christian.

HOLD A REVIVAL MEETING.

By The Editor.

TRUE revival work is hard work. It calls on a man for the exercise and investment of all his resources, body, mind, and spirit. What can be better for a pastor than to set his heart to have a revival of religion in his church, and to make this the burden of his prayers, of his conversation, as he visits his members, of his discussion with his board of stewards, deacons or elders; to get his people to thinking about the need of a revival, and the vast possibilities involved in a gracious visitation and awakening of the Holy Spirit in his church, and among his people, and in the community.

The pastor who tells you that the days of revivals have passed is making a public confession of his own spiritual poverty. He is no longer a conductor of divine life; he has no powerful message for the lost. He doesn't feel the need of a time of united fasting, prayer and assembling of his congregation in earnest effort to bring the wicked to repentance and saving faith in Christ. He believes in united effort to raise money, to get up entertainments, to put on a pageant. He thoroughly believes in rallying the forces to make a festival in the basement of the church a great success, but he does not believe in rousing his church to unite itself in prayer and faith and song, message and exhortation to bring a powerful impact upon the unsaved in his community, awaken and bring them to Christ.

I believe any congregation ought to rebel against and refuse to have and support a pastor who teaches them that the days of revivals have passed. He shows such an ignorance of the needs of the times, of the condition of his own congregation, of the divine plan of awakening, stirring, and reviving Christian people, and the creating of religious zeal and enthusiasm that sends the saved out to seek the lost. Such a pastor is ignorant and evidently, blind and dead to the divine method and human needs. Every preacher of the gospel should not only believe in revivals, but pray and preach, visit and exhort, and plan for revivals. The true man of God ought always to be longing for the deeper spirituality of the members of his church, and the winning of souls from the power of Satan and sin to our Lord and Saviour.

Who can calculate the rich and enduring blessing that has come to cities, towns, village and country churches in times of revival. From a village of a few hundred people, surrounded by a thickly settled community, mightily stirred by a gracious revival of religion, there have gone out influences that have touched the rims of the earth; the church has been spiritually renewed, family quarrels have been settled in peace and love; neighborhood feuds have passed away and been forgotten; young women on the way to the most utter ruin have been captured and become the handmaidens of the Lord. Young men whose faces were turned to the far country of a criminal career have been rescued and become mighty preachers of the gospel. Backsliders drifting into sin have been reclaimed and become consecrated missionaries carrying the message of God beyond the seas.

We ought not to have any man in charge of a congregation as a minister of the gospel who is opposed to revivals of religion; who does not want to see showers of divine grace falling upon the spiritual drouth in his church, reviving and bringing forth renewed and vigorous spiritual life, religious energy and earnest effort for the upbuilding of the church and the ongoing of the kingdom, and the rescue of the perishing. Oh, pastors of the people, let us not only believe in revivals, but let us preach the need of them, the blessing of them, the good that comes from them. Let's wait before God in prayers and tears for revivals. Let's set apart seasons for special efforts, combine attacks upon sin, and the united forces of the entire congregation to bring a revival into our own hearts, into the church, and into the community, that may, by the grace of God, be widespread and enduring in its good results throughout eternity.

Let There Be No Modification.

THERE has come to me from many quarters rumors to the effect that some preachers who were once very earnest messengers of full salvation are suggesting that, in order to go forward with our work, it must be a bit popularized to meet the new conditions in which we are living, by the modification of some of our expressions or terms; that we must try to dress up this great old doctrine in a new form of words, less objectionable, than the plain language that has been used the past half century of the Holiness Movement, in order to convey to the people correct conceptions of the Bible doctrine of full salvation from sin.

It was not my privilege to hear David Updegraff, John Thompson, William McDonauld, and many of the mighty men like Lovic Pierce and others who might be mentioned, who were the chosen men of God, who helped to kindle the revival fires of the Holiness Movement which has swept over this nation and belted the globe. But I think it would be difficult to produce a group of men who will surpass them as God's messengers of full salvation. They were men of education and culture; they were masters in the pulpit. People of all classes flocked to hear their message; the divine fire burned within their hearts, and in the spirit of holy love, unafraid of opposition, and indifferent to criticism, with the courtesy and dignity that ought always to characterize the messenger of the Lord of hosts, they preached full salvation in a way that convinced the intellect, touched the heart, aroused the conscience, brought sinners to repentance and untold thousands of God's children into the Canaan of perfect love.

It was my great privilege to hear Dr. Pepper, one of the most cultured gentlemen and illuminated saint, a great city pastor, and a powerful evangelist. I doubt if we shall be able to make any improvement on him in the use of words, in the framing of speech and message, plain and biblical, strong and clear. You never heard from him any hint of modification in order to popularize the cross that crucifies the carnal nature.

Reader, did you ever hear Dr. C. J. Fowler preach? I knew him well. I have labored with him on a score of battlefields. He was one of the most perfect gentlemen I ever knew. There was nothing put on about him. He was cultured, heart, soul and body. In the pulpit, in the sitting room, at the dining table, on the train, everywhere, always dressed with perfect neatness, every movement about him revealed a man of refinement and good taste.

I rode with him once in his own roadster automobile from Mooers, N. Y., to Old Orchard, Maine. It took us four days to make the trip. We stopped at the village hotels along the way, ate together at the same tables, slept in separate beds in the same room, conversed on the deep, gracious theme of the salvation wrought by our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. He loved the Bible. He worshipped God. He loved and adored the Lord Jesus. He opened wide his heart for the reception of the Holy Ghost. He breathed the spirit of prayer. Those were four of the most gracious days of all my life. Blessing on his memory. Preach—what a preacher he was! His mind was as clear as an appellate Judge on the bench. His divisions were accurate and easily understood. His illustrations were illuminating. His message was convincing. I see him now, as I write, his face illuminated and his beautiful, delicate hands uplifted. Gracious God, I hope to meet him on the other shore! What a man he was! It is not pleasant to me that those who in no way approach the man and his ministry, who enjoy the fruits of his life of toil, should reflect upon him, and the mighty men who went before him, to begin making pleas for the lowering of the holiness flag, and the readjusting of the work of the revival, in order that it may be a bit more popular, that we may perhaps, get into larger and wealthier churches and receive larger compensation for our services.

Take Joseph Smith, for example, a member of the great Philadelphia Conference. What man is more beloved by the brethren of his conference! He is known throughout the nation as a great preacher of the Bible doctrine of entire sanctification, as interpre-

NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIONS FROM THE EAST.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

As I write this in Korea it is New Year's Day (Feb. 11). China and Korea observe New Years the same time and they keep it up for two weeks. (Japan keeps the Western time.)

It is a great time for the children and the women—they all appear with some new clothes. The children are decked out in all the colors of the rainbow—the outstanding colors seem to be yellow, green, purple, red, etc.

Usually on days like this bells would ring and the streets would be filled with gay flags, etc., but there seems to be a lamentable absence of these things because Korea is now under Japanese domain and the situation is now a bit different from the old days.

Let me fill my page in this issue with some comments, notes and illustrations gathered from our many journeys here and there.

1. The Silent Bell. In Zech. 14:20.

In Seoul they have a big bell called "The Big Bell." It was cast in 1396, and it has hung in its present location for 450 years. The bell is said to be the largest in the world (perhaps not). It is nearly 12 feet high and nearly as wide in diameter. There is a legend about this bell which says that when the bell was cast and taken out of the molds it was found to be cracked; the second time it was cast with the same result. A priest came forward and said the bell only could be perfectly cast if some mother would consent to throw her baby into the molten mass as a sacrifice to the spirits. A woman was found willing to make the sacrifice and the terrible deed was done with the result that the bell came out perfectly, and from the first people say the tones of the bell are like the cry of a helpless baby calling Amame, Amame (Mother! Mother!) The bell has no tongue but is made to give out its sound by means of a log swung by two chains and being drawn back several feet is allowed to swing forward and strike the outside of the bell.

This bell though now is silent. Since Japan has taken control of Seoul it is forbidden to use the bell. It hangs there right in the center of the city but it is silent.

As I look at that silent bell I have thought of so many big churches which occupy conspicuous places on the big city centers which fail to give out any gospel notes having salvation from sin as their message!

How many silent preachers on the great plan of Redemption!

How many silent pulpits on the great subject of Holiness!

Then again, how many like the historic bell has history and tradition behind it but is of no present use or value.

Knowledge and zeal and gifts and talk,
Unless combined with faith and love,
And witnessed by a gospel walk
Will not a true profession prove.

2. "The Word of God is quick and powerful and sharper than any two edged sword." Hebrews 4:12.

Among my interpreters in the College Evangelistic services in Seoul, Korea, has been Professor Pak. The story of the Pak family is wonderful as it is related to Christianity in Korea. It all began in one of the sons, then a young farmer, buying a penny Testament. The story is as follows:

It is a summer's day in 1898. The village people of 'South View' are gathered around a couple of merchants just arrived from the city of Pyengyang with a new stock of hats and belts and Korean gentlemen's haberdashery. The people are having a good time buying little jimcracks from these two peddlers. 'By the way,' one of the merchants said. 'Anybody want to buy this little book? I bought it yesterday from a bookseller who preached a queer kind of doctrine. I paid two sen (one cent) for it, and it is worth nothing to me, I'll sell it to anybody for cost. Here's your chance to read something new.'

A tall young farmer stepped out from the crowd, and bought the little book. He took it to his house and read it. It was a gospel. The young man was greatly impressed. He showed it to his parents and to his neighbors. They all told him to have nothing to do with that doctrine newly brought in from the west. They all said, 'No man can be a dutiful son and worship his ancestors, and take up with such a strange religion as that.' But the young farmer had read the gospel carefully. He kept thinking about the new religion, and he had a longing to know more about it. There was only one way to find out. He had no near Christian neighbors. He would go to Pyengyang, to the source of this thing, and make enquiries direct. So a few days later found him looking for the compound of the American Mission in Pyengyang. He found his way to the home of Dr. Moffett, and there he eagerly listened to the story of the Gospel, as it came from the lips of this strange looking foreigner.

The young man stayed in the city several days and from the foreign missionaries and from newly made Korean converts, he diligently enquired the way of salvation through the Son of God. Here in Pyengyang he first bowed before his Lord and learned to pray to God in the name of Christ his Saviour. He was filled with a new joy and he thought, 'How fine it will be to go back to the country and tell the home folks all about it!' So he bought Scriptures and a hymnal, and went back home. On the evening of his arrival he gathered his parents and brothers about him and in detail explained the Gospel story as he had learned it, and urged them all to accept Christ as their Saviour, as he had done. To his surprise, his parents could not see things as he did at all. They were filled with wrath. His father, a towering Korean giant stood over him threateningly. He must give up the faith at once before he brought down curses on the whole family. He must destroy those books. He must never tell that story about the blood again.

But the young man kept true, mid all the persecution and after two years he had the joy of seeing father and mother come to Christ—then the whole family became Christians. When the mother became baptized her name was given as "Gracious Thanksgiving Pak." Her persecuted son is now an ordained minister after being trained in the Pyengyang Theological Seminary and another son graduated from the Los Angeles Bible Institute and Princeton Seminary and is now one of the leaders of the Korean Church. What wonders a penny Gospel can do!

I hear ten thousand voices singing,
Their praises to the Lord on high;
Far distant shores and hills are ringing
With anthems of their nation's joy;

"Praise ye the Lord! for He has given
To lands in darkness hid, his light
As morning rays light up the heaven
His word has chased away our night."

Hallelujah for the triumphs of the Gospel!

3. The Unsearchable Riches of Christ. Ephesians 3:8.

Many years ago, so the story goes, there was a section of Korea where the people used to go out in the mountains and get what they thought was copper to make into vessels of various kinds. They were really using gold though they did not know it, and many a poor Korean ate and drank out of golden vessels.

Many there are who profess the name of Jesus who know nothing of the riches of his grace. They are poor by birth and poor by practice. They seem never to have obtained the inheritance of faith.

They never have materialized on the gold of the promises. They know nothing of gold of Rev. 3:18. They toil on and plod on without any enrichment of soul.

Our God will every want supply
And fill our hearts with peace;
He gives by covenant and oath
The riches of his grace.

The story is told of one of the unfortunate kings of Persia who when the Moslems overran his empire and made him prisoner he was left to starve in his own treasury. All around him were diamonds, emeralds, topazes and other precious stones. Wherever he turned he saw gold and silver and precious stones, but he himself was perishing from hunger and thirst.

So it is with many people today in our churches, their souls are starving, they are perishing from soul thirst. They know not that the rich promises of God are things to be turned into food for the soul, drink for the thirsty and into a full supply for every need of the soul.

Dr. Jowett calls Phil. 4:19, 20 "The Apostles Exchequer." "My God shall supply all your need." Paul's poverty had a glorious plus, his earthly bank was empty but he had another exchequer which was overflowing full. . . . He could not boast of "my money" but he was most joyfully proud of "my God."

4. "A Waiting Miracle." Acts 10. Peter and Cornelius, their dream and strange miracle reminds us of a Korean event.

Some one said that in the Renaissance, Greece arose from the dead with the New Testament in her hand. Almost may it be said of a certain event in Korea. When it came time to translate the New Testament into the Korean language a remarkable Providence characterized this movement. It was on this wise: In 1445 A. D., the Emperor desired the scholars to invent a method by which his people could learn to read without their having to learn the Chinese characters which is almost a hopeless job for illiterate people. In obedience to the Emperor's decree the scholars devised a native script which is the simplest language in the world. By means of it an ordinary person can learn to read in two or three weeks. Of course it did not come into common use. Scholars viewed it with contempt because it was so easy. In consequence it fell into disuse and was almost forgotten. After a long sleep of four hundred years at last God's clock struck and it rose from the dead and the Bible was put in a language by which the Korean of no education can read the Bible. In India and China one among a thousand can read, but in Korea reading is almost universal. This enables the Missionary Societies to publish the gospels, epistles and the whole Bible as well as gospel tracts, booklets, etc., so that the multitudes can read. Of the Bible it has been written:

Here may the wretched sons of want

Exhaustless riches find;
Riches above what earth can grant
And lasting as the mind.

Here the fair tree of knowledge grows,
And yields a free repast;
Sublimar sweets than nature knows
Invite the longing taste.

5. Casting out Devils. Matt. 8:16.

The Korean lives a life under the dominion of fear; he is a fatalist by nature—his birth year, birth month, birthday, birth hour are all in possession of the spirits, and he lives at their mercy. Dr. G. Heber Jones says: "Earth, air and sea are peopled by demons. They haunt every tree, ravine, spring and mountain; they are on the roof, ceiling, fireplace, kang and beam, they fill the kitchen and are in every vessel; they are numbered by thousand millions. This keeps the Korean in a perpetual state of nervous apprehension and surrounds him with indefinite terrors."

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER I.

THE TESTIMONY OF JESUS CHRIST

HERE are Ten Reasons why I know the Bible is the very Word of God.

The First and the chiefest reason of them all is The Testimony of Jesus Christ.

There isn't the least doubt in the minds of people who have eyes to see but that Christ regarded the entire collection of Old Testament Books as divine, authoritative and infallible. He distinctly and emphatically says that the Law of Moses is the Word of God. He told the Pharisees and the Scribes in Mark 7 that they were guilty of laying aside the commandments of God and substituting for them their own traditions. He then went on to quote from the writings of Moses and wound up by saying to them, "And ye do make the Word of God of none effect through your traditions."

If the testimony of Christ Himself is of any value, then you have here the stamp of His authority upon the Books of Moses at least, leaving no doubt that in His mind it was Moses and none other who wrote the Pentateuch.

Then again in Matthew 5, He says that not one jot or tittle of the law or the Prophets shall pass away without being fulfilled. A "jot" is the smallest letter of the Hebrew alphabet, and a "tittle" is the little line or projection by which Hebrew letters similar in other respects are made to differ from each other, and Jesus here says that down to the smallest letter of the alphabet and to the smallest part of a letter, the Law and the Prophets are absolutely infallible in their authority.

There is no good reason for not referring this expression to the entire Old Testament Scriptures. If however the Psalms are not to be included in it, there is no good reason for not believing them to be equally authoritative and irrefragable. But in Luke 24 He settles this whole question by plainly declaring that "All things must be fulfilled which were written in the Law of Moses, and in the Prophets and in the Psalms."

These are only a few out of the many references where Jesus quoted from the Old Testament and put the stamp of His authority upon them. Indeed in this same 24th chapter of Luke it is said that "Jesus beginning at Moses and all the prophets, expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning Himself."

If the teaching of Christ is to be received, it is as clear as daylight that the Old Testament as the Word of God must be received with it.

Of course the New Testament was not as yet written when Jesus lived and the only way He could verify it as God's own Word was in something of a prospective way. In other words, He anticipated it. This He plainly did by declaring in John 14 that the Holy Spirit would bring to the remembrance of the writers of the New Testament the things He had said, and would guide them into all truth (John 16.), even communicating to them things He had not told them because as yet they were not prepared to receive them.

But you say, "Hold on; there are two difficulties in the way of all this. First, How do I know the words recorded as those of Jesus are really His? Second, What right had He so to speak and why should I be asked to receive His words even if they can be proven to be His?"

In answer to the first question, we need to remember that the New Testament writers heard Him speak and would quite naturally, especially in view of their relation to Him, remember what He said. They no doubt took notes of the same. But we need to recall the fact that He told His Disciples that they were not to be left to their own unaided memory of what He said, but that the Holy Spirit would bring to their remembrance all things whatsoever He had said unto them. And so after all, it is not the recollection of the Apostles upon which we have to rely, but that of the Holy Spirit of God Himself.

If therefore we can prove that the words recorded are the writings of the Apostles, of the men whose names they bear, the probability that they are not the very words of Jesus is reduced to a minimum. And of this thing we are absolutely certain. They are not the words of some modern inventor.

It would be most interesting indeed to take a trip to Rome and St. Petersburg and London and see the three oldest Greek Bibles in the world, and then trace their history backward through the centuries gone until you come to the early Apostolic Fathers, who lived, some of them, if not in the very time of the Apostles, then immediately after. Clement of Rome died in 95 A. D.. And in their writings every verse in the whole New Testament, except eleven, can be found; thus showing without the least shadow of a doubt that the words we have today are the very words of the original writers themselves.

Some of the strangest ideas as to the origin of the Bible have been circulated by infidels themselves. An article written by an infidel in a Marlboro, Mass., newspaper, stated that the Council of Nice in the year 325 compiled the New Testament. And this is the way they did it. They had a lot of Gospels and Epistles, genuine and spurious, and no one could distinguish between the two. So they put them all on the floor and prayed that the good ones might get up on the Communion table and the bad ones stay on the floor: and that was the way the present New Testament was compiled. The writer said this account rested on the authority of Papias, an early Christian Bishop.

Of course there is only one difficulty about that story, and that is that Papias was dead and buried at least 150 years before the Council of Nice was held. And yet this story originated no body knows when, where or by whom, is swallowed and published by infidels as an account of the origin of the New Testament, and yet they call a Christian a fool for believing the Bible.

In answer to question number two as to the value of Christ's testimony, there is only one or the other of four replies that must be given to that question.

1. He knew better but deliberately falsified about the matter, and so conspired "to fasten upon the Jewish nation and upon the world a fraud and a lie." But did He? It seems like sacrilege to ask the question. Was Jesus a fraud? Was He a fourflusher? Was He a scamp and a liar?

The greatest and most notorious unbelievers of this world have tried to go each other one better in their praise of Jesus Christ without ascribing to Him the divinity given to Him by the Words of God. They have called Him "The regenerator of humanity," "the highest pattern of virtue," "the youth with God in his heart," and given Him many other such flattering encomiums, but the more such fine things they say about Him, the less I think of Him if at the same time He was a rascal, a rogue and a liar.

I do not believe that a good man tells lies and I do not believe that a man who tells lies is a good man. Jesus a good man, and not able to tell the truth; The Bible a good book and yet packed with lies! I believe neither the one nor the other. A man's claims and his character usually stand or fall together, and I credit you with too much intelligence to believe that you would for a single moment think of accepting this first answer to the question now under consideration.

2. The second answer is that Jesus in speaking of the Bible of his day simply accommodated himself to the method of expression current among the Jews, and the people of his day. This is what is called "The Accommodation Theory." The current belief of his day would sometimes be right and sometimes wrong, but Jesus allowed himself, even when the common belief was wrong, to speak in accordance with it.

But whenever Jesus knew better than he taught it becomes exceedingly difficult to reconcile such a procedure with his perfect integrity. Such statements of his as we have quoted are direct and in independent declarations and rest entirely on the speaker's own credit, and if Jesus said anything that gives countenance to opinions that stand athwart all genuine scholarship of his own day or of ours, he certainly becomes guilty of an accommodation for which it is hard to find any justifiable ground.

3. The third answer as to the value of Christ's testimony we have just mentioned, and indeed have already answered. It is that explanation which preserves his integrity by claiming that he did not know any better. He was ignorant. And consequently his testimony is without value altogether.

Without entering into the discussions as to whether Jesus was competent to enter judgment concerning questions of scholarship, historical and critical, it must at least be conceded that his knowledge was entirely adequate to the discharge of his office as the permanent Teacher of the Church.

If it is found that Jesus taught things historically and scientifically untrue, and if in the interests of religion, if in order to retain the confidence of intelligent and truth-loving men in the Bible as in any sense the Word of God, it becomes necessary to revise such teaching, his authority as a Prophet of God must at once be relinquished.

But we have found ourselves asking if this can be true of him to Whom "the Spirit of God was given without measure," Who spoke as never man spake," Who was "with the Father from the beginning" and whom we call Lord and Master; and we have found ourselves wondering if there is not some other answer to the question of the value of Christ's testimony that will bring to us a satisfying degree of assurance that what Jesus said must have been true, and is to be accepted by us today as the one great ground and reason for our faith.

4. the other, and the only other answer to the question as to the value of Christ's testimony, must therefore be found in the fact of His divine personality. If He was the Only Begotten Son of God, then He knew whereof He spoke and had the full right and authority of God Himself to so speak, and His testimony must therefore be received as worthy of the most complete and unqualified acceptance.

That the writers of the Bible attributed such divine distinction to Christ and that Christ claimed it for Himself there is absolutely no doubt whatever, and this claim is surely substantiated by credentials sufficiently strong to satisfy any reasonable and fair-minded man.

(a) It is substantiated first by the wonderful life that He lived. You can search the whole world through for all the uncounted years it has stood and you will never be able to find another life like His; never be able to find any other man who could say, "Which one of you convinceth me of sin?" His God-like life was His answer to every doubting or uncertain soul.

(b) It is substantiated secondly by the wonderful words that he spoke. No man

THE MAGNETISM OF THE CROSS.

Rev. J. Heber Wightman.

And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.—(John 12:32).

IN these words our Lord foretells the manner and the result of his death, though in a dark prediction, to be fully comprehended only after the event, for the confirmation of the faith of his disciples. The Apostles themselves did not appear to clearly understand their import, and the common people, as is evident from what follows, understood the expression, "lifted up from the earth," to signify only a removal from earth to heaven, either by natural death or by bodily translation. Our Lord indicates, though obscurely, the means by which the great plan of human redemption was to be consummated, namely, by his crucifixion, and conjointly his resurrection and exaltation to the right hand of the majesty on high.

The particle "if" may be rendered when or, as soon as, as it sometimes is rendered in the Greek of the New Testament. We are not to suppose that Christ Jesus entertained any doubt in reference to the mode of his death, for in his conversation with Nicodemus he explicitly taught—"And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, etc."

We notice, first, that Christ has been lifted up from the earth, on the cross, a vicarious and sacrificial offering for the sins of the whole world. Was there a cause of such magnitude and importance as to demand and justify this vicarious and sacrificial offering of his body on the cross? There was. The law of God, imposed as a test of obedience, had been broken in the Garden by our first parents. This transgression of the law involved not only the loss of the divine image and their fall from a state of felicity and holiness, their exposure to the penalty; it involved their posterity also, by entailing upon them a moral nature totally corrupt and inclined to evil continually, the prolific source of all actual transgression. On account of the transgression of the law of God, the fountain of spiritual life forsook the soul of Adam, now polluted by sin, unfit for his residence. He therefore became morally corrupt, and as that which is born of the flesh is flesh, this is the natural state of his descendants.

After the fall Adam begot a son in his own image, after his own likeness. What was this likeness? Not facial and material simply, but intellectual and spiritual. As he by transgression lost the image of God, in which he was originally created, so the son, begotten in his likeness, resembled him mentally and morally, in the loss of the divine image, and alienation from God, and proneness to evil. That which springs from depravity is and must be depraved in the will, the conscience and the affections. "By one man (Adam) sin entered the world and death by sin," etc. But have infants sinned or can they sin? Surely not for "sin is the transgression of the law"; infants are incapable of such transgression. When St. Paul affirms that "death passed upon all men," etc., the meaning is not, that death has come on all, because all have sinned actually; for infants who have not sinned actually, die; but that they have sinned in Adam, as their Federal head; that is, are involved in the consequence of his sin, by the inheritance of a morally depraved constitution. "By the offence of one, (Adam) judgment came upon all men to condemnation," for all men were in Adam, seminally, as the head and representative of his race. Now as the law could not be broken with impunity, as the dignity and righteousness of the law-giver were to be maintained in their integrity, and manifested before all his rational intelligencies, as the toleration of sin without the stern infliction of punishment might have culminated in anarchy and rebellion among the heavenly principalities and powers, so it was indispensable that God should either punish sin, or require its equivalent, in the vicarious sacrifice of one possessed of infinite dignity and merit. "For die man, or justice must, unless for him some other able and as willing pay the rigid satisfaction death for death."

Death, in the Scripture, is the punishment of the soul in a future state by the loss of happiness and separation from God, and also by a positive infliction of divine wrath. "Sin is the transgression of the law"; this is its definition; "The wages of sin is death," this is its penalty.

Now to avert this punishment in the death penalty, to make atonement for original and actual sin, to reconcile the offended God, and offending man, was the great design of the incarnation and death of the Son of God. As the evangelical prophet had predicted, so was it exactly fulfilled in the person of Jesus Christ. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." (Isa. 53:4, 5). The literal rendering is terrible; So marred from the form of man was his aspect that his appearance was not that of a Son of Man—that is not human. "In whom we have redemption through his blood," etc. Over the cross on the bloody ground of atonement, "mercy and truth could now meet together, righteousness and peace kiss each other," and God could be just, in the maintenance of the integrity of law, and yet the justification of all the ungodly who believe on the name of his Son.

Second, Christ has been lifted up from the earth, in his resurrection from the dead, his ascension, and exaltation to the right hand of the Father. The resurrection, ascension and exaltation of Jesus Christ may not be separated from his vicarious sacrifice, so far as the effects of his atonement are concerned. If he was delivered to the death of the cross for our offences, he rose again from the dominion of death, for our justification. If the obedience of Christ unto death, even the ignominious death of the cross, was indispensable as an atonement for the sins of the whole world; so his resurrection from the dead was necessary, "that he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil, and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage." Christ conquered death in his hideous domain of skulls and bones, rose triumphant in all the power of the Godhead and flung the banner of the resurrection to the breezes of immortality. The resurrection of Christ is the keystone in the glorious arch of human redemption. Remove that keystone, and the arch must fall and crumble into ruins. His resurrection is the first sheaves of the ripening harvest of an universal resurrection, to be gathered from all the regions of the dead, in the end of the world.

The lifting up of Christ from the earth involves likewise his exaltation to universal dominion and glory. Paul declares, "God hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow of things in heaven and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father."

I will draw all men unto me. How does Christ draw all men unto him? He draws them first, through his ambassadors, by the invitation of his gospel. "We are ambassadors for Christ." Every evangelical preacher is a representative of Christ; he stands in the place of Christ when he beseeches men to be reconciled to God; it is as if Christ did beseech them, for he is the mouthpiece of Christ. The gospel is full of invitations, addressed to all men, invitations to reconciliation and peace with God. Surely these invitations should fall in accents of more than angelic sweetness and grace upon the spirit ears of men, drawing them to Christ the loving Savior, as by the loadstone of a heavenly attraction. But Christ draws men to him by the influences of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit proceeding from the Father and the Son, the promised gift of the Son, after his resurrection, has come into the world, one of the divine agents in the consummation of human redemption. It is his office work by the illuminating power of truth to enlighten the minds of men, to wake them from the sleep of spiritual death, to excite their hopes and fears, to reveal to them their danger as sinners, in their exposure to the wrath of God. It is also his office work to influence men to turn from their evil ways, and to turn to God, to receive the forgiveness of sins and the adoption of sons. The Spirit says come, drawing the hearts of men to Christ the Redeemer mighty to save. "The wind bloweth." The invisible spirit, like the wind, can be felt in his supernatural influences, awakening, convicting, converting and sanctifying the soul. Let it be remembered that the magnetism of the cross, however powerful in its attractions, is not irresistible. In the sovereignty of their moral freedom, men may haughtily refuse to bow in penitential grief at the foot of the cross, and in willful unbelief they may perish in their sins. There has never been a period in the world's history in which the gaze of the nations has been so steadily and earnestly fixed upon the crucified, risen and ascended and exalted Lord of glory, as the period in which we live. Millions of the race, once walled in and secluded, priest-ridden and debased, are now accessible to the missionaries, and lend a listening ear to the teachings of true religion. Every sea is plumed by the missionary ship freighted with the glad tidings of redemption, for the far-off regions, shrouded in darkness and full of the habitations of cruelty. The great heart of humanity throbs with ardent longings for the world's millennium of peace when men shall "beat their swords into ploughshares," and their "spears into pruning hooks"; when "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Theists and infidels themselves, with pens dipped in gall to write against Christ and his religion do but acknowledge that the Christ whose name they blaspheme, occupies their thoughts, and employs their time. Christ Jesus the crucified is drawing men to him, enemies as well as friends; enemies who deny his Messiahship, and deride his religion; friends who advocate his cause, and are furling his banner, to earth's remotest bounds. The press, that tremendous agency for the advocacy of virtue or vice, religion or irreligion, is throwing off as it never did before, volumes from Philosophy and Science and Theology, that are full of Christ, either in praise, or condemnation, of his name and work. Christ is the sublime central truth of Bible revelation. He is the grand colossal figure in the world's history, and to that figure the world's eye is attracted with wondering gaze. It is through the attractive power of the gospel, in the preaching of the cross that the knowledge of the true God, and the resurrection of the dead, and the immortality of man, is to overspread the earth as the waters cover the sea. The cross, the cross, all stained with hallowed blood. O, the magnetism of love that is in the cross; the power of faith in a crucified Savior.

I rejoice in the second advent of Christ to the world. O, how different from the form and surroundings of his first appearance. Then he was the Babe of Bethlehem, the Man of sorrows. Now he is the Lord from heaven, the Judge sitting upon the throne of his glory. Then there was no parade of bannered hosts and flourish of trumpets and tramp of martial Cavaliers to welcome his advent into the world; now he comes by Angel guards attended and in his cloud chariot rolling along the flaming pavement of the skies; and the trumpet of God loudly proclaiming his Epiphany and breaking upon the cold, deaf ear of death wakens into resurrection life all the pale sleepers under ground. "He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus." (Rev. 22:20).

TEN REASONS WHY.

ever spoke as He did. The infidel comes along and sets up the teachings of Confucius and Buddha over and against that of Jesus Christ, but I challenge the comparison. Do you suppose the light of a thousand candle Mazda could suffer in comparison with the bright flame of a gas-jet? No more can the masterly teachings of Jesus suffer in comparison with the profoundest precepts ever uttered by any of the founders of these various earth-made religions.

(c) It is substantiated thirdly by the wonderful works He performed. Jesus said, "The works that I do bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me." Look at His miracles and like Nicodemus you will have to say that God was incarnate in the man who did such wonderful things.

An infidel tells me that Jesus was a medium and that we have mediums who have done equally wonderful things and are doing them today. Well, that does remind me that I have heard something about an Ouija Board, and something about so-called slate-writing and table-tipping and certain other ghostly stunts. It may be however that I am not well informed, but I have never heard of any of these professional mediums quieting the waves and stopping a storm at sea, or of giving a public dinner to a hungry crowd of 5000 and getting the whole thing out of five small loaves and two little fishes.

Of course I know too that some people don't believe this. Jesus, like some preachers, they would have us believe, had gone over his time limit. Some people are woefully deficient in terminal facilities. Much like the preacher I heard of who prayed for the healing of a sick woman. The woman got well of her disease but died from old age before he got through praying. Or much like the man who prayed for twenty minutes and asked God to forgive his short comings.

And the Disciples said, "Jesus, you have preached these people out of their supper; there's nothing to eat out here in this desert." And Jesus said, "Well, there are a lot of us here who have some lunch; let us divide up as it goes." And when an old Jew saw Him starting in, he said, "Well, that's the first preacher I ever saw who practiced what he preached," and shamed by his example he brought out his lunch basket, and this inspired another Jew, and this another and so on until the whole crowd brought out their lunch and they had a basket picnic right on the spot. Something like that we got from one of our pulpits sometime ago. There's no trouble for an inventive genius like that to explain anything on natural grounds.

There always has been a tendency to doubt the miraculous, to accommodate our theology to what is called the scientific spirit. Some preachers and some professors must be modern or nothing.

There are professors even in some of our Theological Seminaries who today seem to have forgotten, if they ever knew, the truth of what Henry Drummond said, namely, that "a religion without miracle is an absurdity." But when such intellectual giants as Strauss and Renan and Harper and President Eliot have brought to bear against the supernatural in the Word of God all the strength of their brilliant genius and utterly failed to make out their case, these lesser intellectual lights can well afford to leave the subject alone.

The miracles of Jesus are invulnerable to attack. You might as well shoot boiled peas against the Rock of Gibraltar and expect to see it crumble down as to expect to see the miracles of Jesus fall under the fire of infidel criticism such as has been levelled against them through all the ages since He lived and wrought His wonderful works.

(d) It is substantiated fourthly by the wonderful influence He exerted upon the life and civilization of this world. What man in his right mind can look at what the religion of Jesus Christ has meant to the world in which we live and think for a single second that it could have come out of the teaching and the life of a man who deliberately tried to foist a fraud upon the world, or of a man who was so hopelessly demented as to imagine himself to be the only begotten Son of God when in fact he was but the poor, deluded son of a Jewish peasant.

How could He have been other than He claimed to be and at the same time touch this world with the transformation which has come to it by reason of his presence and mission in it. And what Jesus Christ always has been, He is today; the transformer of the world's life, the reconstructor of the human society, the animator of human progress, the one Master Moulder of the world's civilization.

And thus we have the credentials of Jesus Christ, that He was the divine Son of God as both Himself and the Bible writers claimed Him to be. These credentials are His Matchless Character, His Masterly Teaching, His Mighty Works and His Marvelous Influence. And all this being so, we have the unmistakable evidence that He was a Teacher sent from God with the full right and authority of God Himself to speak, and therefore we are under the obligation of common honesty to accept His word and if we accept His word we must by very reason of it accept the Bible as the Word of God which He declares it to be.

And what a Book it is! A Book which the Son of God Himself does not disdain to quote. A Book for which century after century warriors have fought and martyrs have died. A Book that "fits into every fold and crevice of the human heart," and gives answer always to its deepest hunger.

"God's World is like the treasure hid,

Or finest wheat in shock:

'Tis manna from the skies above,

And honey from the rock."

It is a lamp to our feet and a light to our path. And how true it is, as George Herbert wrote,

"The Bible? That's the Book. The Book indeed:

The Book of books,

On which who looks,

As he should do, aright, shall never need

Wish for a better light

To guide him in the night."

For as Pollok says:

"This lamp, from off the everlasting throne,

Mercy took down, and in the night of time

Stood, casting on the dark her gracious bow.

And evermore beseeching men, with tears

And earnest sighs to hear, believe and live."

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XIV.

TWO YEARS IN COLLEGE.

HE two remaining years of Huston in college were most interesting. He was careful to avoid any sort of debate or religious quarrel on the subject of sanctification. On all proper occasions he gave his testimony, but so worded the statement of the gracious experience that had come to him that he drew, rather than repelled, those who heard him.

To any student or other person who made thoughtful inquiry of him, he was fully prepared to give the doctrines of the Methodist Church as taught by its founders, and to show very clearly that the doctrine and experience of entire sanctification, as a distinct second work of grace, was as old as Methodism, as old as the New Testament; that the disciples were regenerated Christians, good witnesses for Jesus, with power to cast out devils and heal the sick, before they received the fiery, cleansing baptism with the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost.

Huston never became excited; never ranted or wrangled with any one, but was so consistent in his life, so friendly in his spirit, so accommodating and helpful to his fellows, so studious in his habits, so prompt in the fulfillment of engagements, so regular in his recitations, and so thoroughly prepared in his lessons that every one was compelled to respect and admire him. He was so utterly free from any sort of fanaticism or foolish eccentricities that his life and character became an argument for the experience of Christian holiness that it was difficult to answer.

He had been licensed to preach his first year in college and was frequently invited to go to the country and fill some appointment for some of the students who had circuits within reach of the college. On such occasions the people crowded to hear him. If not too far, numbers of persons would go from the town where the college was located, and often a spring-wagon load of students would drive out to be present at his preaching services.

As an officer in early days in the courts, he had learned self-possession and deliberation. He moved quietly and with confidence in the pulpit. He never undertook to preach great or eloquent sermons. He selected plain texts and always lifted up Jesus Christ with unlimited power and immeasurable love to save those who came to him for pardon or for purity.

Without an effort on his part he would become eloquent. His voice was strong and mellow, his periods well rounded and fell with power upon the people. His appeals were tender, and frequently some one would come to the altar at the close of his message for pardon or for purity; and often he was gratified at seeing some one graciously saved.

Huston was most fortunate in having a very excellent science teacher, a graduate of one of the great universities, a man of travel and wide reading. He had given protracted and diligent study to the whole theory of Evolution. He had not only read Darwin, Huxley, and other strong advocates of the Evolution hypothesis, but he had kept up with the writings of all men of any consequence or rightful claims to scholarship, both for and against, the evolutionary hypothesis. He was fully convinced that there were so many missing links that no chain of scientific facts could be made up out of all that had been written on the subject by the advocates of Evolution.

Huston became very fond of this professor. The admiration was mutual. The professor frequently had him to dinner in his home; they had long walks and talks together. He offered to let Huston have his books on Evolution, but Huston preferred to buy the books under the professor's direction, in order that he might study, mark and keep them for future reference. He soon became the best posted young man in the college on the subject of Evolution. He was a rapid reader, with a most retentive memory, which gripped facts, dates, books, pages and paragraphs.

This science professor was a devout Christian; while he did not claim the experience of entire sanctification, he was quite ready to agree that the doctrine was upon a firm foundation of good reason. Why should not God, if he furnished a plan of salvation, provide that it should save from all sin? He was a serious, thoughtful man, and encouraged Huston to hold steadfastly to the wonderful experience that had come into his heart.

There is nothing finer for a college student than the warm friendship and close association with a professor of broad education, thorough acquaintance with his subject and, at the same time, a devout Christian who has not allowed himself to fall into the narrow groove of his one subject which he teaches, and to become dry and dogmatic, shut up within himself and the theme which interests him, but is a broad, warm-hearted Christian gentleman as well as a college professor.

The friendship and association of this man were invaluable to Huston. Among other things, it taught him to cultivate the spirit of moderation and courtesy toward those who differed with him in their opinions and convictions.

This was characteristic of Huston through life, and while he never lowered his flag for a moment, or surrendered his belief of great truths, he learned how to be kind in his attitude toward all men; to hold unswervingly to his established beliefs and principles, but at the same time, to have a generous, kindly heart toward all his fellowbeings, with their diversity of beliefs, creeds and teaching, and always to try, with courtesy and kindness, to win them to the saving truths of the gospel of Christ.

Huston graduated with honors at the close of his third year in college, attending, as we have said, summer school, and left behind him in the community and school a feeling that there was a man who lived a consistent, holy life, and manifested a spirit of perfect love toward his fellowbeings.

There had been an understanding between Huston and Ida Benson that during the summer after his graduation, they would be married and make their arrangements to secure a modest apartment in one of the Eastern cities where they would both take up their studies in the Theological Department of one of the great Eastern Universities.

Their wedding was a quiet, but very happy affair. For their honeymoon they took their trip to the East, secured their apartment and made their arrangements to enter the University at the opening of the fall semester. They then traveled considerably about the East, up into Canada, returning home in time to register and enter school.

Huston and his wife took the same course in Theology, studied together and sat together at recitation. She was a brilliant woman and during her years as teacher, under the suggestions of Huston, had made quite a study of Methodist history and Theology and was mentally and doctrinally remarkably well trained to become the wife of a Methodist minister.

Their intellectual equipment, fine personal appearance, refinement and courtesy to professors, students, and every one with whom they came in contact, soon won for them high standing in University circles. In recitation, they gave evidence of having thoroughly mastered the subject under discussion.

Their attention was soon attracted to a rather young professor who had graduated from one of the noted German Universities, and was not able to conceal considerable egotism with reference to his scholarship and opinions. He was a bit dogmatic and not very reverential in his attitude toward the Scriptures.

Early in the school term the professor said to the students, "I do not want us to put in the hour of recitation in this classroom in mere questions and answers, but rather in discussion. I want you to feel perfectly free to ask questions and express your own opinions with regard to any subject or phase of truth that may come up before us."

Huston made note of this suggestion of the professor and while a number of students asked questions, and expressed opinions, Huston was quiet and said nothing at all, only to answer, lucidly, questions put to him with reference to the lesson. But as he noted the professor's attitude toward the Scriptures, and that of a number of students, righteous indignation burned within him, and he waited patiently for an opportunity to express himself and, in due time, the opportunity came, and he expressed himself.

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00. Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

The Vulture's Claw.

By Dr. C. F. Wimberly.

One of his best. A new edition of this great book has just come from the press. It is a universal verdict, that this book has a message individual and pungent. Young people who do not read religious books at all will relish this great mountain story. All books have gone up in price, but Vulture's Claw will continue at the pre-war price. —$1.50—360 pages, and beautifully illustrated by an artist with original scenes taken from the story. GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

A GOOD REPORT.

I have only sent in one brief report since my election as President of the Missouri State Holiness Association, yet I have been busy all the time.

God has smiled upon my work to a great extent. He has been very near and dear. The way has not always been smooth or easy but he makes the rough places seem pleasant.

I have held some revivals and opened up some new fields, have seen some souls saved and some have professed sanctification under my ministry, for which I praise God and give him all the glory. However, most of my time and efforts have been spent in and with the Ozark Holiness Academy, Mt. Zion, Ava, Mo., which is a greatly needed school in a needy field. Rev. O'Brien and Rev. F. L. Spindler got the vision of a full salvation school for the Ozark region some fifteen or sixteen years ago. They prayed and God answered their prayer. Many have been the storms and battles. There have been many come and gone. But through it all God has been near and we are still going on the old-fashioned holiness lines.

At present the school has taken on new momentum. We have secured Rev. B. F. Wininger, a graduate of Asbury College as president. He is a young man of vision and courage and of a sacrificing spirit. Many feel he is God's man for the place at the present time.

The first thought for the school was to train local boys and girls who understood the people of the mountains that they might take the gospel of full salvation to this region. That is still the passion of the constituency of the school. Here is one of the most fruitful fields we know of for the true gospel of God. The workers are few. The school is needed greatly and must be maintained if we expect to spread holiness to any desirable degree in this region. This being a mountainous country, money is not plentiful. Finances are small for all workers. We had to put in equipment this year in the school and as a result our teachers have gone thus far without a cent of salary. May God bless them for their great sacrifice. They are indeed making a great investment in building character that shall stand the test.

We want you to put O. H. A. on your prayer list and pray for the needs of this region. We have so many calls to come we hardly know where to go next. We could stay out in meetings all the while and never see the family and home and yet not be able to fill all the places. This school is maintained on interdenominational lines and we suppose it will continue thus, D. V. We will meet you at the National meeting of the Association and perhaps be able to tell you more about this great missionary cause and mission field. R. A. Kisee.

NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA.

After three months evangelizing in Central America and Cuba I arrived in New Orleans, March 1st, and started my first meeting at Salisbury, N. C., March 10th.

What a wonderful three months those have been among the people of other lands. After my last letter to The Herald I visited the Cakchiquel Indian town of San Antonio Aguas Calientes, in Western Guatemala. It was a wonderful privilege to speak to those Indian boys and girls of the mission school and play with them in a recreational way. Their little brown skins encase some wonderful talents. One of their graduates is now in California helping to translate the Bible into Cakchiquel dialect.

From there I returned to Chiquimula for the annual revival of the Friends Mission. That is a great place and they are a great people. They teach holiness in all of its beauty and the results are seen in a most convincing way in the lives of their converts. In the meeting it was my happy privilege to give a series of messages on Christian Character Building to the boys and girls of the two schools, besides speaking in the general services once each day. There were large crowds in attendance from many parts of Guatemala and Honduras. God's presence was marvelously manifested in every service and there were many who sought God and found pardon or purity of heart. The life stories of some of these people would make a wonderful book. The Book of Acts is being rewritten and relived in Latin America continually.

Pianos in that section of Guatemala are scarce articles. For the first time for their annual meeting the Mission was able to secure a piano, borrowing it from a well-to-do Catholic family. It was old, tiny and out of tune, but it was a piano. And how those natives enjoyed it! I never played for a more appreciative people. There were some present who had never heard a piano before. I thanked God as never before for the ministry of music.

I am praying God to let me find someone who will put a piano in that Mission for the benefit of the school children, as well as their great annual revivals in which they reach hundreds of people each year.

There are so many needs in these various missions and schools I have visited that my heart aches when I see the wasteful extravagance of the church people in the homeland. I feel as though I would like to spend my years pleading for the under privileged children of Latin America.

My last ten days were spent in Cuba. That visit was a glorious climax to the whole trip. The interesting contacts with those fine Cuban young people is too long a story to write.

God's leadership and blessing throughout this whole trip has been a marvelous revelation to my own heart. I have returned with my soul uplifted, more convinced than ever of the mighty power of the Gospel to transform human lives. Latin America is open to the Gospel and hearts are hungry. Already my heart yearns to return to those wonderful fields so white unto the harvest.

RELAY M. E. CHURCH.

The Lord has graciously permitted Relay M. E. Church to see its first real revival in twenty years. From February 10 to March 3 the church received a real outpouring of God's Spirit upon it. Again, the Boy Preacher of Texas, Rev. Ray N. Johnson, was on the firing line. His gospel message of full salvation, delivered in sincerity and under the directions of the Holy Spirit, stirred the hearts of those who listened. About one hundred souls bowed at the altar for regeneration or heart purity. Especially did the young people respond to the leadings of the Spirit. It seems that the youth of our land are truly hungering for something besides the temporal pleasures of the world to satisfy that inner craving for a true knowledge of the Infinite. They realize that a soul is never satisfied until it comes to Christ for forgiveness of sins and a pure heart. Ray is a Spirit-baptized young man with a message that searches the soul. May The Herald readers pray that God's blessing shall continue on the work at Relay.

LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY.

I am now in meeting in Lexington, Ky., in Union Gospel Mission. The people are attending in goodly numbers, and the interest is increasing with every service. The Mission was established five months ago by Rev. E. L. Sanford and wife, and bids fair to become one of the most lively and influential religious centers in the city. It is one of the best located missions I have ever seen. It is right down town, about one square from Main Street on Mill. The room is spacious, well lighted and easy to speak in. People of all denominations and of no denomination, attend, and get blessed. The Mission stands for a full gospel. Bro. Sanford, under whose ministry hundreds have been saved and sanctified, is a Spirit-filled, level headed man, and will see that everything goes straight. Bros. Little and Cassidy, and many other men and women who love the cause of holiness, are giving the work their hearty support. During the five months of the mission's "life," more than five thousand people have attended. I don't know of anything Lexington needs more than a center of this kind. Jordan V. Carter.

LANSING, MICHIGAN.

Potter Park Methodist Episcopal Church, Lansing, Michigan, has just been the beneficiary of a gracious revival which lasted from February 10 to March 3, under the leadership of Prof. and Mrs. C. C. Crammond. The nightly services have been discontinued, but the spirit and inspiration goes on.

The song service which so often is a problem in a revival, was a real delight the way it was conducted by Brother Crammond. It took no effort to sing. We all just wanted to make a "joyful noise unto the Lord."

Sister Crammond never preached better than in this meeting. And while there were some who held it to be "shockingly old-fashioned," those who have spiritual discernment sensed the presence of the Holy Spirit throughout the meeting, and witnessed 79 seekers at the altar. Many of these seekers were sanctified.

Some of the results which ought to be noted were: five whole families were converted, leaving worldly amusements (and the men forsaking their tobacco); ten families established an altar in their homes; seventeen receiving light on t'ing, took up this bit of Christian stewardship willingly; twenty-eight persons united with the church the last evening; old differences were, of course, buried, and the once sad faces are now shining witnesses for the Lord.

Brother and Sister Crammond are members of this church, and the fact that they were able to conduct so successful a revival in their home church is a good recommendation to any pastor, or church, desiring help in a revival. They belong to us, but we gladly loan them out to preach the "unsearchable riches of Christ."

Byron A. Hahn, Pastor.

THREE REVIVALS.

Thus far during the year it has been our good pleasure to have held three revival meetings. The first was at Zeigler, Ill., in the M. E. Church with Rev. C. F. Williams, pastor. Mr. John Olive, brother of the lady evangelist popularly known as "Little Mary," led the singing with marked success and loyally stood by the work. A number of souls were blessed and some united with the church. All told, it was a good revival, yet much more land remained to be possessed. Rev. Williams has done a fine construction work in that town.

Our second meeting was near Zeigler at West Frankfort, Ill., in the Central M. E. Church, with Rev. C. S. Tritt, pastor. We had a good revival inside the church with some wonderful day services among the Christians, but the great outside world was hard to reach. There was a general indifference on the part of the public so that it was difficult to get people to attend the services. Yet there was some good fruit as a result of the revival campaign. Rev. Tritt is a whole soul worker who was always on the job. The Lord bless him and his faithful constituency.

Our third revival was at Athens, Ohio, in the Central M. E. Church with Rev. Ira P. Day, pastor. We had no trouble about crowds here. The only difficulty we did not have room enough to accommodate the large audiences. Rev. Day, who is a student at the Ohio University which is located in Athens, is an all-round, real pastor with evangelistic gifts combined. We had a good revival. Souls prayed through at the altar. There were twenty-seven professions and twenty-six accessions to the church. Rev. Day has the ability, the resources and fine prospects for building up a great church in Athens.

We are now in the far away Northwest at Roundup, Montana, in the M. E. Church with Rev. F. C. Fulford, pastor. Montana is a wonderful state but it furnishes hard sledding for evangelism and religious work in general. We are praying and preaching and expecting victory from the skies.

Andrew Johnson.

BOSCOBEL, WISCONSIN.

We have just closed a very successful revival at Boscobel, Wis., in the M. E. Church. Rev. E. J. Satchjan, the efficient pastor, is loved very much by his people, over whom he has and is wielding a great influence for a full gospel. I have never seen people more responsive than those in Boscobel, and it is very clear that the cause of this has come about by the preaching of their pastor.

A pastor has a tremendous influence over his flock. In a few years' time a modernistic preacher can wreck the faith of a great amount of his people, but if the pastor is a straight-out holiness messenger it's possible for him to lead many of his people into Canaan in a few months.

Rev. Satchjan believes, preaches and claims entire sanctification, therefore it was easy for me to get the truth over. In the three full weeks we saw many scores seeking God and if I made no mistake seventy-eight found him in reclamation, pardon or purity. A few children were at the altar but most of the seekers had passed middle age.

A good amount of those who found God were high school students. I have a few dates for April and May open, also some summer dates I can give to camp meetings. My terms are free will offering. I go anywhere.

L. E. Williams.

Wilmore, Ky.

WEST MAIN STREET CHURCH, GRAFTON.

I closed a three-weeks' meeting in the West Main Street Church, Grafton, Sunday night, March 3, Rev. F. H. Hughes, pastor. The Lord was with us in a marvelous way. The church was down spiritually, to begin with; they say they have not had a revival for fifteen years.

We began to shell the woods on sin and restitution. Some got mad and stayed away for awhile, then came back and came to the altar for prayer. The great break came the second Friday night, we had set for Sunday school night; the writer preached from the one word, Jesus. The Lord honored his word in a marvelous way. When we made the altar call, something like fifty young people came to the altar, many of them praying through to victory.

Some very hard sinners came forward and prayed through to victory. In all there were something like eighty saved or sanctified, or reclaimed. We find people all over the country hungry for full salvation, if we will preach it in a sane way and put it where it belongs. We give God all the glory and praise. Quite a number joined the church.

W. A. Grogg.

WILLIAMSPORT, PENNSYLVANIA.

God has given us a wonderful victory in Newberry, Williamsport, Pa. Six churches united in three weeks of combination evangelism. 528 were won to Christ and the church, 200 decided in home visitation week. 253 united with the church on Ingathering Day, and many more will come by Easter. Large numbers were renewed and won to church attendance. 302 joined the Pocket Testament League. Many joined the Christian Home League for daily family worship, grace at every meal and Christian conversation in the home. A large number of consecrations were recorded and several volunteered for Life Service. A permanent soul winning organization was formed by the visitation workers. Overflow meetings were held.

We conducted Week of Prayer Services in Williamsport Dickinson Seminary. There were conversions, renewals and consecrations for life service. March 4, we began in Pine Street Methodist Church, Williamsport, which has a membership of 1424. Large crowds are coming. There have been several conversions and renewals; the personal workers are winning folks to Christ on the outside.

Palm Sunday we begin a union campaign of combination evangelism in Berwick, Pa. We have some open dates in April and May before we go to Ocean Grove in June for our eleventh year in the Tabernacle Evangelistic Meetings.

Yours in him,

ted by John Wesley. Calculate, if you can, the multiplied thousands to whom he has preached full redemption in Jesus. He has never found it necessary to lower the flag, or modify expressions, or hunt about in the Dictionary for words that mean nothing and meet with no objection from the carnally-minded. He has preached in hundreds of the greatest churches in Methodism. He has been recognized as a great man, a true messenger of God, and has been very largely given right of way throughout the nation. There is no way to estimate the spiritual contribution he has made to the spiritual life of this nation. All Protestant denominations have been benefited by the large numbers of their membership who have sat under his ministry.

The names of a host of men of education and refinement in the pastorate and in evangelistic work rise before me, like Reid, Haney, Baker, Oliver, Keen, whose names are not only written in the Book of Life, but who have ascended to the Father. What men they were! They blessed the multitudes, not only with their pulpit ministrations, but with their consistent and beautiful lives.

There was Bishop Key, of the M. E. Church, South. What a majestic man! What a beautiful, consistent life, who not only preached, but exemplified the doctrine of perfect love. Bishop Joyce, one of the great souls of his century, preaching a mighty sermon on full salvation to an audience of thousands of eager listeners, was stricken and fell into my arms to linger a short while, and died in triumph, ascending to meet the countless hosts who had been blessed under his ministry.

Where will you find more cultured gentlemen, finer spirits, and men of wider range of vision, travel and service, than Bishop Oldham and Bishop Warne, both for many years preaching and enjoying the experience of perfect love.

This mighty movement of the Holy Spirit among men has not been confined to a corner; it has not been committed to illiterate ranters. There is no occasion to feel ashamed of what God has been doing in the earth in this great revival.

It is quite probable that those brethren who are suggesting some modification and a bit of readjustment and change in order that we may suffer less reproach and accomplish greater ends, need a bit of change within themselves. It may be that almost unconsciously, they have made such readjustments that, without intending to do so, they have somewhat compromised and lost a bit of faith in the plain old Bible doctrine of the carnal nature, and the fearful wreck that it may make of a human soul. The clarion call to consecration, the cross of death to self, and the waiting in prayer until the divine fire falls in sanctifying power, may have to some extent been left out of their ministry; possibly, they have fallen into the unfortunate habit of preaching their eloquent declamations and making no altar call. Is it possible that they have fallen into a mistaken state of mind and imagined themselves too scholarly, and preachers of too large ability, to be associated with the holiness people, and to be known as holiness preachers. If there are such men running at large among us, may God help them to remember the pit from whence they were digged.

If there ever was a time when the people needed plain, earnest, powerful preaching on sin, "the sin that doth so easily beset us," the indwelling sin out of which flows the stream of wickedness, that time is now. We are in great need of men who have been crucified with Christ; men in whom the carnal nature has been destroyed; men who are not seeking popularity or ambitious for wealth, or places of power and influence in ecclesiastical organizations, but men who are seeking lost souls, men who are striving to bring the church into true bridehood with Christ, that time is now. Let there be no modification, no lowering of the flag, no eloquent, skyscraping sermons without altar calls, no holiness camp meetings without the power of the Holy Ghost upon preachers and people.

The whole Bible is God's proclamation against sin, and call to holiness. Every drop of blood and sweat and tear that Jesus shed was a mighty plea for cleansing from sin, for lives of righteousness, wholly consecrated to God.

Time would fail me to speak of the scholarly Godeby, the tireless Pickett, the unique Bud Robinson, the saintly Henck, the triumphant women, whose names and pictures have never appeared on the front pages of the phant Rinehart, the inimitable Ruth, the saintly McLaughlin, and the countless hosts of devout pastors, humbler evangelists, men daily papers, but whose names were written in the Lamb's Book of Life, and who are now worshipping at the feet of the Master in glory. They were not ashamed to witness to the power of the cleansing blood. They were willing to be ridiculed as "the holiness people." They were a part of the salt of the earth and the light of the world. Let those who would lower the standards, change the language, "prophecy smooth things," and avoid the reproach of the cross, speak their unbelief so plainly that the committees of camp meetings and conventions will not be deceived, and pay their sacred money for services that hinder, instead of promoting, the great, good work of sanctification.

There is no way to calculate the powerful and gracious contribution that the modern Holiness Movement, with its preachers, pastors, evangelists, conventions, camp meetings, schools, rescue homes, orphanages, and missionary enterprises has made to the spiritual life of our times. It has been like the great Gulf Stream sweeping through the midst of the Ocean warming up and making habitable and prosperous vast areas of land which, otherwise, would have been frozen and worthless. So this Holiness Movement has been a spiritual Gulf Stream pouring through humanity from the throne of God and the heart of our blessed, glorified Lord Jesus, warming the hearts and lives of untold millions of human beings.

Let us cry out to God for a fresh anointing of the Holy Ghost. Let us press the battle with new vigor. Let the whole line of spiritual evangelism move forward for the spread of scriptural holiness throughout the world. May God raise up a host of young men as consecrated, cultured, capable, fearless, and mighty with the sword of truth as that host of noble souls who have gone before us.

H. C. MORRISON.

A Distinguished Visitor.

Some time ago we told our readers of a delightful visit by Bishop Oldham; since then Bishop Warne, of the M. E. Church, many years in India, was a few days in Miami, sought out our humble home far out in a sparsely settled part of the city, and came to see us. What a delightful and saintly man Bishop Warne is! Apparently, his health is much improved since I saw him last. He is looking well.

I was with Bishop Warne much of the time I spent evangelizing in India. He is one of the most genial and devout Christian men I have ever known. He exemplifies the doctrine of full salvation and walks in communion with his Saviour and Lord. One can but regret that Bishops Oldham and Warne are growing old. Neither of them has the appearance of feebleness, but the years are piling up. They have taken the supernumerary relationship to the church, but neither of them is superannuated; their services are in constant demand and they are a blessing to any congregation to whom they preach, and every home they visit. Both are in the enjoyment of the perfect love that Jesus came to bring to men, and that John Wesley, founder of Methodism, so earnestly proclaimed. May the blessing of God attend these beloved Bishops everywhere. May the sun of life go down slowly, and when its rim touches the horizon, turn to a golden gate admitting them into the presence of the Christ who saved them, whom they have served so earnestly, and where they shall meet and dwell forever with those to whom they have ministered so graciously.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, after two months in Japan and Korea, has returned to China where he will be engaged in evangelism, both South and North. His address will be care Bethel, Box 533, Shanghai, China. This is his permanent address while in China.

Russellism.

We have a letter from one of our readers making inquiry about the literature of the International Bible Students' Association. This association is made up of the followers of Pastor Russell. They are a very zealous people and just now are making a vigorous and widespread canvass for the circulation of their literature. The great danger of buying and reading their printed matter arises out of the fact that they mix much Bible truth with most dangerous and unscriptural error. My advice to all HERALD readers is to have nothing to do with them or their reading matter. Their errors are so very dangerous that it is best to let their literature entirely alone. No one would want a bushel of meal from the best corn ground at the best mill, well mixed in rough on rats.

Unfortunately, our Protestant churches have sadly neglected the study of prophecy and the careful instruction of the people of the purpose and meaning of the prophetic writers in the Holy Scriptures, leaving our Christian people largely ignorant of this most important part of divine revelation. The Russellites have taken advantage of this fact and have been able to delude and lead astray many devout people. Leave the literature alone and become a prayerful student of prophetic books of the Bible on your account.

The What and Why of Asbury College.

LEWIS ROBESON AKERS,
President of Asbury College.

Asbury College is distinctly a holiness school. Not only was John Wesley in the eighteenth century sent of God to reaffirm the mighty dynamic, "Justification by faith," which ushered in the Lutheran reformation, but also to rediscover the scriptural doctrine of Entire Sanctification as a second work of grace subsequent to regeneration which ushers one into a state of Holiness or Christian Perfection, and which brings to humanity, sin-enslaved, weak, and despairing, the glorious message, "Sin shall no more have dominion over you."

In the latter part of the nineteenth century, when Christian education was limping along with a slow and halting gait, ever becoming more and more secularized, when an inner knowledge of vital and heartfelt religious experience was more the exception than the rule, an evangelistic Methodist minister bearing the name, John Wesley Hughes, and at that time without money or even a collegiate degree, felt definitely led of God, to found a school which would be distinctly different from any existing contemporary institution in that, along with the careful training of the mind, it would stress also the fullest development of the soul along spiritually experimental lines. With two teachers and eleven students in the two upstairs rooms of a plain four-room cottage, this insignificant Gospel acorn was planted by faith in the heart of the beautiful blue grass region of Kentucky, already dotted by almost a dozen denominational colleges.

Today that school is a mighty oak seen from afar, and its influence is felt around the world. Its development was through the crucible of adversity and trial. After its founder had carried alone the ever-increasing burden of its support for fifteen years, until it had grown to have an enrollment of almost three hundred, it was taken over by a board of trustees. In the hour of its greatest financial need and when the outlook was darkest the Board prevailed upon that white-plumed herald of Full Salvation, virile editor and princely preacher, Henry Clay Morrison, to assume the leadership, and under his skillful guidance its material development and influence grew until it became in truth a world institution. For fifteen years also he carried the burdens and, wrote for himself an imperishable record of spiritual achievement.

Asbury College today is more widely known in religious circles than any school of similar enrollment in our country. It has a cosmopolitan student body of more than eight hundred from forty states and several foreign countries, but it owes its phenomenal influence and growth mostly to its continuous and unfailing emphasis upon the two cardinal Wesleyan and scriptural truths of Full Redemption, namely, Regeneration, pardon from sin; and Entire Sanctification, deliverance from the principle of sin. The first a birth, a new birth; the second a death, the death of the carnal nature which is always enmity toward God.

Asbury College from its inception has made revivals of religion a part of its yearly program and once at least in each semester holds special evangelistic services during which an earnest effort is made to lead every single student into a definite knowledge of justification or entire sanctification by faith in the atoning merit of Jesus Christ our Savior.

Asbury College has always stood unflinchingly for the integrity of the Scriptures, for the fundamentals of the Christian faith, and for a full redemption. On the front of the new Hughes Memorial Auditorium, just erected in honor of the founder of the institution, are two large marble slabs; on one side, the words, "Free salvation for all men and full salvation from all sin"; on the other, "Follow peace with all men and holiness without which no man shall see the Lord."

Asbury College, because it has never faltered nor ceased in its thirty-nine years' history to uphold the highest standard of New Testament experience, is increasingly enjoying the confidence and support of an ever-enlarging circle of God-fearing and devout Christians throughout America and other lands. Particularly do the earnest and consecrated people making up the Holiness Movement feel that Asbury College is peculiarly their own school, and while on every hand they behold church schools, once established in prayer and erected by sacrificial giving, departing from the faith once and for all delivered unto the saints and going out into skepticism and to the worship of the strange gods of fashion, wealth, pleasure, and materialism, they turn back to Asbury College with a prayer of gratitude and thanksgiving to God for a school which changes not in its steadfast determination to lead its youth into the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ.

Asbury College goes forward on its knees and this indeed is the truest progress. While all over our nation this year marks a decided slump in college attendance, why is it that Asbury College alone in Kentucky reports a material increase in enrollment?

Why is it that despite an almost continuous building program for several years its dormitories are still overflowing and a number of students must be housed in the homes of the community?

Why is it that, although there is a tidal wave of worldliness sweeping the nation and an appalling spiritual dearth widely prevalent, Asbury College closes its year's work with less than a score of its eight hundred students unsundered to Jesus Christ?

It means simply this: that God honors those who honor him. Asbury College is true to its trust and to its high calling. It is keeping the faith. Its teachers are splendidly educated, many of them possessing or seeking doctor's degrees from the leading universities of our nation, yet every one of her half hundred professors must ring true and continually uphold the ideals which alone furnish a valid reason for the school's existence.

Modernism finds no place in Asbury College. As a futile, man-made program, it has already revealed its weakness and utter failure to grapple with and successfully solve the sorely pressing problems of society and to provide a remedy for the sin-sick of the human race.

Asbury College ever points its students to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. It ever exalts the cross of Christ as the one and only emblem of the world's redemption.

*"Through all depths of sin and loss
Drops the plummet of His cross.
Never yet abyss was found Deeper than that cross can sound."*

Asbury College has proven its worth to the world. By its fruits do ye know it. Though yet a young institution it has made a contribution of inestimable value to the Kingdom of God. It has sent out close to a hundred Spirit-filled missionaries to the far corners of the earth. It has given Methodism five college presidents, while two graduates have been elected bishops, one a General Secretary of the Board of Missions, and another Editor of an outstanding church periodical. Hundreds of pastors have entered conferences in many states, many of them occupying pulpits of great influence and power. Scores of evangelists are preaching with the largest success and ministering to crowded altars, while many others have become teachers, doctors, lawyers; yea, the stream of human life on this planet has been enriched and made purer by this continuous infusion of fine and consecrated talent devoted to the service of human need.

Will you stand by? Will you help it carry on for God and for the redemption of a lost world?

Asbury College merits your support, solicits your prayers, and is worthy of your heartiest approval.

NOTES FROM THE EAST.

With the coming of the gospel and the mighty Christ thousands of the Koreans are saved from this spirit of fear and are set free with the liberty—the glorious liberty of the children of God.

Jesus in commissioning his disciples gave them power to cast out devils. Matt. 10:8.

6. Cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days.—Eccles. 11:1.

A young man was admitted as a free or charity patient in the Presbyterian Hospital in one of the Korean stations. The doctor did real Christian service to the poor young fellow who had no money to pay, but when he came out his influence told for Christ. As a result Po Suk Church with twenty members and four kan tile roofed building stands as a testimony to his devotion. Dr. Lankester, of India, has said: "If we want to write the teaching of our Lord Jesus Christ in very big letters so that those who cannot read theology or science or philosophy start medical aid for the poor."

7. Conviction for Sin. John 16:8-11.

Yesterday we passed a Korean funeral. It was a grotesque affair as the mourners dressed in sackcloth followed the coffin contained in a large, many colored affair carried on long poles borne by about twenty coolies. When one dies wailing goes on for a time in open mouthed howlings. In four days the members of the family are dressed in sackcloth with ropes tied about the waist and head. The mourner wears string shoes, never leather. He eats no meat, holds no office, goes about with an immense straw hat in which the face is completely hidden from view. His view of the death of his parents could be written on this wise, "Because of my sins my parents have died," and when he writes a letter he might sign it: "Kim Chang Do, Sinner."

In the Orient one does not have to argue for the fact of sin. They know what sin and wickedness is and when misfortune befalls them they attribute it often to their sins, but where the difficulty comes in is their unwillingness to confess sin and repent of it. Then again, in the Orient conversion means much more than in the West. To confess Christ may mean persecution, sacrifice and suffering. But when the Spirit of God moves in a revival confession of sin becomes intense and terrible. In the Korean Revival of 1907 the meetings would often break out in confessions of sin in which both church members as well as non-Christians would confess their wrong doing in the open meeting. In one instance a missionary tried to stop it but he afterwards found that it was best to let the confessors have their own way and the Holy Spirit came down in great blessing and power. The penitent soul cries out,

When I concealed my guilt,
I felt the festering wound,
Till I confessed my sins to Thee
And ready pardon found.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

There are many ways we can express our love to others. The boy or girl who is careful to obey their parents, will be just as obedient out of their sight as when their eye is upon them. It is the heart obedience that counts with God, and it is that kind out of which we get the greatest joy.

The following little story tells how one man was willing to give his service, and later his life, for the man whom he loved and for whose family he had great concern. It is wonderful what hearts some people have, and what it may mean to others when we are willing to take their place in time of stress and strain. The story reads thus:

More Than a Friend.

I was deeply interested lately in hearing of an incident that took place at a soldier's grave in one of the Southern States. A person was seen decking it with flowers; and a stranger observing him asked, with a tone of sympathy, if a son were buried there. "No," was the reply.

"A brother?"—"No."

"Some other relation?"—"No."

"Whose memory then, may I ask, do you thus so sacredly and tenderly cherish?"

Pausing a moment from emotion, he replied—

"When the war broke out, I was drafted for the army; and as I was unable to procure a substitute, I prepared to go. Just as I was leaving home to report myself for duty, a young man whom I knew came to me and said: 'You have a large family, which your wife cannot support when you are gone. I am a single man, and have no one depending upon me—I will go for you.' He went. In the battle of Chickamauga the poor fellow was dangerously wounded, and was taken to the hospital. After a lingering illness, he died and was buried here. Ever since his death I have wished to visit this place, and having saved sufficient funds, I arrived yesterday, and today have found his grave."

The touching story concluded, he planted the rest of the flowers; then put a heavy board at the foot of the grave, on which were written these simple words,

"He Died For Me."

Reader, does not your heart glow as you think of that noble fellow's generous, self-sacrificing love for his friend? And, oh, does it glow when you think of Jesus who died for you? Does His wonderful, self-sacrificing love awaken tender feelings of love towards him in your heart? Whatever you have been before, receive him, welcome him now into your heart, and say to him,

"My Jesus, my Saviour,

"My Lord and my King!"

As truly as that generous soldier died to save his friend, so truly did Jesus die for you;—yes, far more so. The soldier might have returned safe, but Jesus knew he went forth to death for you.

Lovingly,
AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a little boy nine years old. My first name begins with L and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. If anyone guesses my name write to me and I will write to you about my trip to Mt. Baker. My brother takes The Herald. I live on a farm in Washington. We have Chinchilla rabbits. Hope to see this in print soon.

L. John Klein.
Rt. 1, Box 99, Bellingham, Wash.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been a long time since I have written to your happy band. I hope this finds you and the cousins enjoying the richest blessing of life. This leaves me feeling just fine. I enjoy reading The Herald. I read it from cover to cover. My mother had The Herald sent to me. I have married since I have written to The Herald. I have been married over a year. I guess you cousins are wondering who this is. Kathleen Rash, before I married. I married a Cunningham. I am staying with my husband's people. How many of you cousins are living for the Lord? I am a Christian. The Lord has wonderfully blessed me. Praise his great name. It is so sweet to trust in Jesus. He is always ready to help you when you come to him and believe him. I want to live closer to my Savior each day, and be a soul winner for him. If he wants me to be a missionary across the water in China, I am ready to go. I am anxious to see you cousins living for the Lord. Before I got saved, I went to dances and to parties. I have no desire for that now the Lord has taken that out of my heart. I have my hair bobbed but I am letting it grow out. I promised my Lord I would let it grow out. I want the cousins to pray that God will give us a true Christian Government. Aunt Bettie, I want you and the cousins to pray for me that I may live closer to my Savior and be a soul winner for him. I will be glad to hear from some of you cousins. I will answer all letters I receive.

Mrs. U. C. Cunningham.
Rt. 2, Box 20, Gilbertown, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten very much. I am thirteen years of age, birthday Sept. 15. Have I a twin? If so please write to me. I have dark brown eyes, brown hair, and weigh 93 pounds. I am in the fifth grade. I go to school at Lone Star Consolidated School. Wonder who can guess my middle name? It begins with W and ends with E, and has six letters in it. As this is my first letter to The Herald I will promise not to stay long. Hope to see this letter in print.

Jewell W. Logan.
Rt. 2, Box 123, Adel, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a Hoosier girl ten years old. I have blue eyes, dark hair and am in the fourth grade at school. I have a fine teacher, he reads us the Bible every morning and has us to memorize verses from it. We live on a large farm. I have a brother nearly twelve years old and a sister seven years old. For pets we have a little puppy and a buff cat that weighs almost ten pounds. Who can guess my middle name? It is the same as Timothy's grandmother's.

Elma L. Caley.
Markle, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Sistersville girl join your band of girls and boys. I am ten years old and I am in the fifth grade. This is my first letter to The Herald. My birthday was March 9. Can anybody guess my second name? It begins with W and ends with D, and has five letters in it. Whoever guesses it I will send a picture of myself. My grandmother gets The Herald and I like to read page ten very well. I go to the M. E. Church. Lois Ladorff, I guess your name to be Lois.

Helen Bowers.
517 R. R. Ave., Sistersville, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come just a little girl five years old but I go to school every day and I love my teacher, Mrs. Martin. She is good to me. I have read about the three bears and Chicken Little, where he was in the garden and got choked on a seed. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My teacher is Mrs. E. R. Kendall and I sure love her. Mother takes The Herald and she reads the Children's Page to me. I have one sister; she is older than I and has written a letter to The Herald, and as it is our first attempt we hope to see them in print.

Lois Evelyn Barlow.
Rt. 5, Carlisle, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you and the cousins please move over and let me sit down for a chat with you? I visited you about a year ago but I don't expect you remember me. Well, the Yuletide season is over and I expect most of the cousins are back in school again. I am and glad to be. I wonder if all the cousins are glad to be back. I would be glad if some of you would write to me. I like to get letters. Audie Ruth Brown and Kenneth Thompson, I believe that is your name, please send me your addresses and I will write to you. I misplaced your last letters and that is the reason I have not written. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. I will send a card to the one who guesses it. I guess I had better move on and give some of the other cousins room. I hope Mr. W. B. is down town shopping when this arrives.

Mayme Hope.
East Street, Delmar, Del.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Carlisle girl join your band of happy girls and boys? I'm a stranger to you all but I read page ten in The Herald and like it very much. I go to school every day. I'm ten years old and in the fifth grade. My birthday is August 25. Have I a twin? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with T, and has eight letters in it. I'll write to the one who guesses it. As this is the first time I have written The Herald I hope Mr. W. B. will be taking his vacation so I can see it in print.

Sue M. Barlow.
Rt. 5, Carlisle, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Although I am a stranger I want to write to The Herald, as my father and mother take The Herald. I like to read the letters on page ten. I belong to the Methodist Protestant Church at Morning Star. My birthday was Jan. 24. I was thirteen. I am in the sixth grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I hope to see this letter in print soon. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with E, and has seven letters in it.

Lois Hogue.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am ten years old and in the fourth grade. My birthday is the 14th of June. I have one sister and one brother. My mother and father take The Herald. This is my first letter to The Herald. My father is a preacher. I like to read page ten. Who can guess my first name? It begins with V and ends with A, and has five letters in it. I have dark brown eyes. I hope my letter comes out in the paper.

Elinor Hogue.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Pennsylvania girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Pentecostal Herald. We have been taking The Herald for some time and think it's a fine paper. I enjoy reading the letters on page ten. I think they are wonderful. Tell William Stabe I guess his middle name to be Harry. Am I right? If so please write to me. Who can guess my middle name. It starts with H and ends with L, and has five letters in it. If any one guesses it I will answer all letters I receive. I am five feet, two, and weigh one hundred and fifteen pounds. I have long brown hair and gray eyes and have fair complexion. I was eighteen March 26. Have I a twin? If there are please send me a snapshot of yourself. I hope Mr. W. B. won't get this letter as I would like to see it in print.

Helen B. Cashdollar.
Box 125, Callery, Pa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little Kentucky girl join your jolly band of boys and girls? I am going to introduce myself first. I have blonde hair, fair complexion, dark blue eyes and am ten years of age. My birthday is May 12. I am in the sixth grade at school. I also take music. I am in the third grade music. Have I a twin? If so will you please write me? I am a member of the M. E. Church. I go to school at Williamsburg, Ky. Someone guess my middle name. It begins in F and ends in S. It has only seven letters in it. The one who guesses it I will write them a letter. My mother and father take The Herald and I like to read it all, but I most enjoy reading the Boys and Girls' Page. I guess I had better close as it is time for me to go practice my music. I hope Mr. W. B. reaches his office about an hour late so that he will not get to tear up this

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me join your happy band of boys and girls? I was ten years old the 20th of January. Who has my birthday? I have black hair, black eyes, and dark complexion. I weigh 85 pounds and am four feet and ten inches tall. I have a good father and mother and one little brother three years of age. I wrote two years ago. Do you remember me? Darleen Hamshire, your first name is Ruth. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Our pastor's name is R. T. Wilson. We like him fine. Well, I will ring off now and let some one else have room. Hope Mr. W. B. is out taking exercise. Josephine Dunn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twelve years old. I have dark hair, dark brown eyes and fair complexion. My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten very much. A reader of The Herald, Mr. and Mrs. Craddock, if you read my letter please write to me. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with F and ends with N, and has seven letters in it. Who guesses my name I will send a card. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is out when this arrives.

Doris F. Sink.
805 Morrelle Ave., S. E., Roanoke, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: My mother has been a reader of The Herald for eight years and I always enjoy reading page ten. We liked Dr. Morrison's articles so much that we had his picture framed and have it hanging on our wall. The story, "The Mills of the Gods," was especially fine. I was fifteen years old the 19th of October, and am a Junior in high school. My favorite subject is mathematics. I am most interested in music, art, and penmanship and would like to specialize in these three things. I play the violin and am a member of several orchestras. I am a member of the United Brethren Church, Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor and attend most every service including the mid-week prayer service. We have a fine Sunday school orchestra of about fifteen instruments which plays for Sunday school every Sunday morning and for special occasions such as commencements, etc. Pleasant Lake is a small town in Steuben county. I suppose some of you cousins have been reading about the terrible crime in this county and perhaps heard it announced over the radio the other day that "Steuben county is the most corrupt county in the United States." Nevertheless, there are some good people here and it is a good place in which to live. The county is noted for its many beautiful lakes—about one hundred in all. Also for the unusual musical talent.

I would like to receive letters from any of the cousins who would care to write to me and I will try to answer all letters received. I will close with my favorite Bible verse: "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little girl from the sandhills of Nebraska join your happy band? My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to Sunday school every Sunday, at the Assembly of God Church. I am twelve years old and in the sixth grade. My teacher is the principal of the grade school. Who can guess my first name? It begins with L and ends with A. Please write to me, boys and girls. I will try and answer all letters received.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my second time to write to The Herald, and I hope to see it in print. I am sixteen years of age and study the eighth grade at school. I go to Sunday school every Sunday at the M. E. Church. Who has my birthday, October 22? Have I a twin? If so write to me. I will answer all letters I receive. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with C and ends with E, and has nine letters in it. I hope Mr. W. P. B. don't get this, and it will be in print soon.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join the happy band of cousins. I wrote to The Herald two or three years ago and my name was in the paper, and I would like to see it in print this time. My age is between twenty and twenty-five. My birthday was December 5. I should like to hear from all the cousins that wish to write. Well, I will close before Mr. W. B. gets this.

Florence Blanchard.
Kingfield, Maine.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Wonder if you will let a blue-eyed Tennessee girl join your happy band? I sure enjoy reading letters on page ten. I wonder how many of you cousins like to go to Sunday school? I sure do, and I also like to go to church. I go every time I can. I am still blessed with father and mother, one brother and two sisters. I was seventeen years old Nov. 15, and have long dark brown hair. Have I a twin? If so, write and send me your picture. Winifred M. Clabaugh, I guess your middle name to be Mona. If I am right remember your promise. William H. Stabe, I guess your middle name to be Henry. If I am right you write and tell me something about your state. Wonder who can guess my middle name, beginning with O and ending with A, and has seven letters in it. The one who writes me first I will send them my picture. Will try and answer all letters received. Well Aunt Bettie, I don't want to take up so much space for I sure do want to see this in print as it is my first. Lena Evans, I wish you much joy and happiness and many a birthday. My prayers will follow you. Everyone write to

FALLEN ASLEEP

UPCHURCH.

Mr. J. F. Upchurch was born April 27, 1860. He was a devoted Christian I know for twenty years. He departed this life March 6, 1929. He left to mourn his death four sons and four daughters, and one brother, his wife, Susie Upchurch, and one child outstripped him in this narrow lane of life. I have lived close by him for ten years and he has made his life an example for me to want to walk like him. I visited him in his illness for 65 days and the Lord was there in real. I would not take $500 for what experience I had there just before he left for his home in glory. He called his children to his bedside three times and told them not to worry about him, he was going to a better world than this and to meet him in Heaven. He was a member of the M. E. Church and he was a Christian. He said just before he left he did not have an enemy in this world and wanted to meet everybody in Heaven.

O. C. Leffew.

SPAULDING.

Pearl Byer Stoner Spaulding, daughter of S. B. and Mary A. Stoner, was born Jan. 31, 1888, at Hamlin, Brown Co., Kansas. She was married to A. S. Spaulding, Sept. 16, 1909, at Huntington Park, Calif. She was not for God took her at 6:30 Monday morning, March 24, at her home at Navelencia, Fresno Co., Calif. After convalescing from thirteen days of Spanish influenza her heart suddenly ceased to beat, and in a moment of time this beautiful, devoted child of God was with her adorable Savior. She moved from Kansas to Glendale, Ariz., when a child, and from there to Ashland, Ore., where she completed her Grammar School education. Later she was a student in the Deets Pacific Bible College on 28th St., Los Angeles, Calif., now the Pasadena University. Here she completed the biblical course of study.

She was converted when but a child, and at about the age of fifteen she consecrated herself to the Lord and obtained the glorious experience of entire sanctification. At this time she consecrated her voice to the work of the Lord, and was abundant in labors, not only with her beautiful voice, but in evangelistic endeavor. Her first devoted labors were at Ashland, Ore., where she sang in the Mission at this early age. Many were brought to the Lord through her evangelistic labors and her ministry in song.

Up to the time of her marriage, her friends testify that they never heard her sing anything except those songs that lifted up the kingdom of God. This she strictly adhered to the remainder of her life. She did not enjoy or participate in light and worldly singing, but sang the songs of Zion with an holy unction and inspiration that went straight to the hearts of those who heard her. She freely responded to frequent calls to sing by the Holiness Association, camp meetings, and so forth. The saints will never forget the inspiration and blessing her singing brought to all who listened. In more recent years she was heard in our churches and was a member of the Big Four Ladies Quartette; the other members being Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Nerry, and Mrs. Prater. They sang in many places.

By unmistakable Providence, she was divinely led into her trust as wife and mother, which she nobly and beautifully discharged under God's guiding hand. She was devoted to her family, patient, considerate and strong.

Sister Spaulding was a prime favorite with her neighbors. Scarcely one but fell in love with her at the first introduction. She was always planning for their welfare. She was especially interested in Foreign Missions and contributed of her earthly substance frequently and liberally. She was a staunch friend of the Pasadena University, and often carried it to the throne of grace.

She leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, ten children, of whom six are from a former marriage, also father and mother, one brother and two sisters who live in Oregon. One boy is now in France, namely, Irving Montgomery.

A multitude of friends are shocked and saddened by her early demise, but all know that she was a devoted follower of the Saviour, and that she is now singing in the great Hallelujah Chorus about the throne of God. Heaven is richer and earth is poorer.

HARRELL.

David Houston Harrell was born in Holmes Co., Fla., Nov. 8, 1846, and departed this life at the home of his son in Bowling Green, Fla., Aug. 29, 1927. He was converted at the age of twenty-two and joined the M. E. Church, South, and was ever faithful to his church and God. He was a good Bible student and spent much of his time reading and studying God's word. He loved to talk religion and was never in conversation with any one long before he would be talking of God's goodness. His last illness was long and painful, but he bore it with Christian patience and faith. He enjoyed having his loved ones and friends read the scripture and sing and pray with him, and always added his testimony as long as he was able. He often told friends or loved ones who came to see him, "If I am not here when you come to see me again you will know where to find me." and we are looking forward to that happy meeting. He was married Dec. 28, 1876 in Alabama to Emma Jean Palmer and she, and four daughters and one son were left to miss him, a son and two daughters having preceded him.

Funeral services were conducted from the Methodist Church by his pastor, Rev. L. P. Driscoll, and his body laid to rest August 31, 1928.

Death again entered our family circle and took our precious mother, Jan. 3, 1929.

Emma Jean Palmer was born Aug. 19, 1854 in Chambers county, Ala. She was reared in a godly home and was brightly converted at the age of fourteen, and united with the M. E. Church, South, and she lived a devoted Christian life as long as she lived. She was married to D. H. Harrell, Dec. 28, 1876, and they came to Florida to live in 1890. Seven children were born to them. Two who have preceded her to glory and five who are left to weep but rejoice. Weep because of our loss but rejoice because we know her sufferings are over and she is safe at home. Hers was a self-sacrificing life, always trying to do something for some one else. Her life was also a life of faith and prayer. How her dear voice will ever sound in our memory as she carried each one of her children by name to the throne of grace; and the lessons she taught by precept and example will be cherished through life by her children and grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. L. P. Driscoll, in the Bowling Green, Fla., Methodist Church, of which she was a faithful member. While we bow our heads in sorrow we know that God is our refuge.

One less on earth
Its pain and sorrow and its toil to share,

One less the pilgrim's daily cross to bear;

One more the crown of ransomed souls to wear

At home in Heaven!

One more at home,
That home where separation cannot be,

That home whence none is missed eternally,

Lord Jesus, grant us all a place with Thee,
At home in Heaven.

A Daughter.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson III.—April 21, 1929.

Subject.—Comfort for God's People. Isaiah 40:1-11.

Golden Text.—As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you. Isaiah 66:13.

Time.—About B. C. 700.

Place.—Supposedly in Jerusalem.

Introduction.—"The course of prophecies which follow, from hence to the end of the book, and which taken together constitute the most elegant part of the sacred writings of the Old Testament, interspersed also with many passages of the highest sublimity, was probably delivered in the latter part of the reign of Hezekiah. The prophet in the foregoing chapter had delivered a very explicit declaration of the impending dissolution of the kingdom, and of the captivity of the royal house of David, and of the people, under the kings of Babylon. As the subject of his subsequent prophecies was to be chiefly of the consolatory kind, he opens them with giving a promise of the restoration of the kingdom, and the return of the people from that captivity, by the merciful interposition of God in their favor. But the views of the prophet are not confined to this event. As the restoration of the royal family, and of the tribe of Judah, which would otherwise have become extinguished, and have been irrecoverably lost, was necessary, in the design of Providence, for the fulfilling of God's promises of establishing a more glorious and an everlasting kingdom, under the Messiah to be born of the tribe of Judah, and of the family of David, the prophet connects these two events together, and hardly ever treats of the former without throwing in some intimations of the latter; and sometimes is so fully possessed with the glories of the future and more remote kingdom, that he seems to leave the more immediate subject of his commission almost out of the question." Clarke.

As in dealing with nearly all prophecies, so in dealing with this, it is of paramount importance that we do not lose sight of its two-fold nature. The great tribulation that is to come upon the world in the last days of this age was foreshadowed in the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans. The coming millennial age was foreshadowed by the Jewish year of Jubilee. And so in the lesson of today the return of the Jews out of Babylonian captivity foretells the coming of our Lord to call the human race out of the captivity of sin. What pictures. Many of the Jews did not return to their native homeland, but preferred to remain in the land of their captivity; and multitudes of men will never heed God's call to come out of sin unto salvation. We make our own choice.

Some have made the mistake of supposing Old Testament priests to be types of ministers of the gospel in the New Testament dispensation. This is not true. The priesthood in that sense has gone forever. The prophets of the Old Testament were the types of ministers of the gospel. They were the preachers of that day; and they preached a gospel of salvation. Without contradiction, Isaiah was one of the greatest gospel ministers the Church of God has ever known. In truth, he is a model for all ages. Listen to his tremendous denunciations of sin, his awful warnings to his people of coming doom; then hear his entreaties backed up by the promises of Jehovah. Measuring them by the divine law, he would lead them to repentance, in order that he might show to them the boundless mercy of God. Hear his exhortation: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money, and without price." Who ever preached the truth of salvation more finely than this? "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the LORD, and he will have mercy upon him: and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." His picture of the crucifixion of our Lord, portrayed in the fifty-third chapter, has never been surpassed.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Comfort ye my people, saith your God.—I rather like the etymological meaning of the word comfort, it being derived from two Latin words, con, together, and fortis, strong. It literally implies strong together. The Holy Spirit is our Helper. Like Jesus with the lad and his barley loaves, he uses what we have by putting with it his might. Isaiah meant to say that Jehovah was coming to the help of his people.

2. Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem.—Remember that this prophecy was uttered almost a hundred years before the Jews were carried away to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar. The prophecy portrays their return at the end of the seventy years of captivity, which captivity had not yet begun. In his vision Isaiah saw the end of the captivity and the day of their pardon. Double for all her sins.—Two interpretations are given by scholars: (1) Jerusalem, meaning the Jews, shall have double mercy—abundant mercy, bigger than all their sins; (2) The Babylonian captivity and their present exile from their homeland. I prefer the first.

3. The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness.—This is a prophecy concerning the coming of John the Baptist. You will remember that the latter part of this verse is quoted in the New Testament. This verse and the fourth verse give us a picture of an eastern monarch on a journey. As in the march of Semiramis to Ecbatana, great companies of men were sent ahead to build a suitable highway for the journey. The rough places were made plain—smooth; crooked roads were made straight; bridges were built over water courses; great embankments were thrown up in low places. John the Baptist was sent to build a highway through the backslidden Jewish church for the coming of the King. This figure is carried out in both this verse and the following.

5. The glory of the LORD shall be revealed.—This verse is a portrayal of the coming of Jesus Christ bringing salvation to lost men. The prophet makes the declaration strong by saying that "the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it."

6. All flesh is grass, and the goodness thereof as the flower of the field.—All flesh includes the entire human race, as perishable as grass. Its beauty fades as the beauty of the flowers. Here today, but gone tomorrow, is true of all of us.

7. The Spirit of the LORD.—The wind is here spoken of as the breath of Jehovah. The writer saw this a few years ago in the Panhandle of Texas when the hot wind so dried up the corn in tassel that it looked like fodder. It made nothing but leaves.

8. Here is a contrast worth while. Although the grass withereth and the flower fadeth, "The word of our God shall stand forever." Thank God! That is a sure foundation, and a glorious consolation.

9. O Zion, that bringest good tidings.—Dr. Adam Clarke supplies the word daughter, and translates the clause: "O daughter, that bringest glad tidings to Zion." The Revised Version translates the passage: "O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion." Undoubtedly either of these translations is an improvement on the King James version. Behold your God.—Isaiah is calling upon Jerusalem, all the Jews, to recognize the Christ when he comes; but they failed in this; for "He came unto his own, and his own received him not."

10. His arm shall rule for him.—In Scripture hand and arm denote power. His reward is with him.—The blessings he will bestow upon all who come unto him for salvation. His work before him.—I can get no definite interpretation of these words. Dr. Clarke says: "This he has ready at hand with him, and holds it out before him, to encourage those who trust in him and wait for him."

11. He shall feed his flock like a shepherd.—This figure of a shepherd caring for his flock seems to be a favorite one with our Lord. In the New Testament he calls himself "the good Shepherd." David said: "The LORD is my shepherd." What a charming picture he paints in that twenty-third Psalm. He confers unmeasured honor upon some of us in making us to be his under-shepherds over the flock.

GRADUATION GIFT.

A TESTIMONY.

I thank the Lord for he is my Savior and wonder Healer. I am thankful that he saves me from this worldly pleasure; that I can find pleasure in him, and that he becomes more precious to me each day. I do love him more each day, and I do know that he will never leave nor forsake me. It was his great love that saved me from sin. He went for me on the cross of Calvary to die for me. I want to go all the way with him.

Mothers.

ON THE AIR—AN ADDRESS—
Subject:—"Mothers."

From far and near they wrote for a copy.
One said: "Never heard anything like it."

Another: "I will pay any price for it."

Another: "I want two copies to frame for my boys."

Another: "I want to be a better mother."

Another: "I have a higher conception of motherhood."

Order a copy today, read it and tell your friend about the good you received. 25c per copy. Order from Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

"Conversations on the Tongues."

This announces the publication of "Conversations on the Tongues," by Rev. H. L. Crockett, as an attractive paper-covered book of about 160 pages; price 50c each, or three for $1.00, postpaid. It is now off the press and your orders are solicited.

To make sure of your copies, order at once; for the edition is limited. The usual discount from the 50c price will be granted to book dealers. The book is a great antidote for the modern "Tongues Movement."

BOYS ENJOY

Out-of-the-ordinary stories—stories of adventure. One of the most interesting stories we have read recently is "The Two Tramps." It would seem to be a book for boys, but really it is a book every one would enjoy. The tramps in this story are not beggars or men of low ideals, but tramps for Jesus. Order one or more copies to place in the hands of boys, at the special price of 60c.

"GEORGE WHITE McDANIEL" by his wife. Douglass Scarborough McDaniel. Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist Convention. 255 pages. $2.00.

This book is something different. George McDaniel thrice President of the Southern Baptist Convention was an outstanding man and everywhere. The author, a woman of culture and grace, who for thirty years walked by his side as his wife, multiplying his joys and dividing his sorrows, has given us a unique biography. We read the book practically at a sitting. Once into it you will find it difficult to lay down. It will stir your risibles and get your lachrymal glands into operation. As you read you will want and determine to be better. This great preacher was also a great sportsman. Dogs, horses and negro servants had a big place in his life. Next to his pulpit, he delighted in the fox chase. To him the hounds made the finest of music. He was an outstanding champion of the right in every civic combat. He loved righteousness and hated iniquity. He was no middle of the roader. He could not be. He was a man who despised a dodger. If you want a thrill for the right, the high and holy, get this book. Though the writer had known the subject since his student days, yet in many ways this story of his, humanly speaking, all too brief life of fifty and two years, was a revelation. To know him better is to appreciate him the more. The printer has done his work well.

BREAD OF LIFE BOX.

Contents: 115 slices, made of the finest of Wheat, mixed with the Water of Life and enriched with the sincere Milk of the Word. Unleavened, buttered on both sides, and richly spread with honey out of the Rock. Will not get stale. Good for your spiritual health. Try one.

A box containing 115 small cards, with a choice scripture neatly printed on each side. 230 texts in all. Beautiful box, stamped in gold also printed directions how to use. Excellent for a gift box.

Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it is received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer. 1 Tim. 4:4, 5. Alas, how few meals eaten by Christians are thus sanctified. Some of them ask a blessing on their food, but very seldom do we find one who reads the Word at meals. The Bread Box is an excellent way to introduce obedience to this precept.

Pass the box around at the beginning of a meal. Let each person take out a card. Then let each in turn read the verses. It will be noticed that the two verses on each card bear a definite relation to each other and teach an important truth. The order in which they are read often brings out this truth more forcibly. As each person reads their verses it is profitable that the others present tell where the verses are found.

Another excellent way is for each person to read one or two words of the text and let some one else quote it from memory.

Let one read a verse and another quote a verse on the same subject.

Let each person memorize the two verses during the meal and quote them at its close.

Pass the box around in your Sunday School class the same as at a meal. And as the verses are read discuss the truths contained in them.

Explain that it is just as important to feed on the Word in order to grow and be strong spiritually as to eat our daily meals in order to grow strong physically.

Most interesting and profitable young people's meeting may be had by using the Bread Box in some of the ways suggested.

In the home when friends and neighbors are gathered together pass around the Bread Box. How much better and more profitable than a "cup of tea!"

Keep one in your bedroom. Eat a slice for your meditation while dressing and going about your daily duties. Eat another slice before retiring to quiet your worries and give you a good night's rest.

Use the Bread Box freely but do not let it displace the Bible. You need the whole Word of God, for all was given that you might "Acquaint now thyself with HIM, and be at peace."—Job. 22:21.

BELLS OF EASTERTIDE.

Ring out! ye Easter bells with joy,
For Christ our Lord has risen.
Peal out the message loud and clear,
That the music may reach to Heaven.
Ring out! ring out, ye bells of peace,
Chime forth the Easter story,
The triumph of our Savior tell,
Oh! give Him praise and glory.
The Christ who suffered such anguish,
Who died on Calvary's Cross;
Still lives with the Angels, in Heaven
All hail Him; our conquering Lord.
He broke the bonds of the grave asunder.

He arose from the rock-hewn tomb.
And in grandeur and splendor He's coming again

To gather His children home.
Where is thy victory oh grave?
Oh death where is thy sting?
The victory's ours through Christ our Lord,

Loud let His praises ring!
Peal forth the tidings, oh ye bells!
That the world may know our God;
For Jesus, our Savior has risen,
All hail him our conquering Lord.

PROHIBITION SENTIMENT

The ninth anniversary of the going into effect of the Eighteenth Amendment finds the temperance sentiment throughout the world stronger and more confident than ever before, believes Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, a statement made by him says.

"The amendment became operative nine years ago," Dr. Cherrington's statement says, "after the most Herculean and intense efforts on the part of the liquor forces to prevent its adoption. Obviously its enforcement has not been all that might be desired, yet despite imperfect enforcement, and despite the continued assaults upon it by the foes of prohibition, the results of the national prohibition law have been so beneficent and so generally recognized that every effort to weaken the law or to make the amendment null has been met with by defeat.

"The Congress which will sit March 4 is the driest deliberative political body ever elected in the history of the world. The gentleman who will be inaugurated president of the United States on that day is fully pledged to and wholeheartedly in favor of prohibition and its complete enforcement. The incoming vice president, as president of the Senate, is bone dry. The people of the United States have the right to expect not only that the national prohibition laws will in no wise be weakened by Congress but also that they will be rigidly enforced by the incoming executive.

"There is no civilized nation on earth where temperance sentiment is not organized and alert, and where it is not making itself felt. Rapidly this world-wide temperance sentiment is being translated into local and national laws and into the habits and customs of the people."

TWO FUNERALS.

By Evangelist P. P. Belew.

Strong impressions have been made upon the writer by two recent funerals that were widely separated geographically and vastly different in circumstances.

The first was that of a noble missionary, Esther Carson Winans, who died in South America. She was buried in a coffin that her own father had improvised from a soap box, on which was laid one small flower that her little boy had gathered, and her own husband conducted the funeral. But the sad story was immensely brightened by the hope which God's word promises of a glorious meeting on the morning of the first resurrection.

The second was that of my own brother, who fell unexpectedly the victim to the wrath of an infuriated man, and died unsaved. He was buried in an expensive steel casket, which was covered with the most beautiful flowers, while scores of sympathizing friends stood by with tear-dimmed eyes. But the whole scene was darkened by the lowering clouds of black hopelessness which hanged like an awful nightmare of unspeakable and eternal gloom.

Fifteen years ago he was deeply convicted by the Holy Spirit. It seemed for a time that he might yield, but he did not. The years following his rejection of God have been spent in dissipation and sin, and how completely does his sad demise demonstrate that "the wages of sin is death!" He loved me, defended me when others opposed me, befriended and gave me assistance, but did not give his heart to God. We bow in submission to this act of providence and willingly confess that God's ways are just and equal, but how depressing is such a tragedy! The minister tried in vain to cheer our gloom. I shall never forget the wail of a broken-hearted mother, who totters beneath the weight of seventy-four years, "My Lord! Shall I never see my boy's face again!" I held her up and tried to encourage her as best I could while she wept out her burden over his cold form, but how empty are words in such an hour! A few minutes later the casket was closed and he was lowered, as it seems all too certain, into a Christless grave to await a Christless resurrection. With a broken, bleeding heart I turned from the melancholy scene to him who has been my comfort and stay for fifteen years and said: "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my last end be like his."

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS.

By The Editor.

THE Scriptures very clearly declare that God wills us to be holy, and that Christ was sent into the world to save his people from their sins, and that the blood of his sacrificial death upon the cross cleanse from all sin.

That God wants us to be saved from all sin and brought into harmony with his will, and into fellowship with himself, there can be no doubt. This is the plain teaching of the whole Bible, Old Testament and New; and that Christ has all power in heaven and in earth is plainly taught in the Word of God. We read that "he is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think." This promise covers a vast realm of possibilities in the saving grace of God.

There should be no question in the mind of any one about the will of God, or the power of Christ in the matter of our sanctification. Of course, unbelief and indifference cut us off from all the benefits of the atonement, but faith, coupled with desire, brings all things within our reach. "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled."

I doubt if any theologian or religious thinker has ever yet sounded the depths of human depravity. The depths of sin! who can measure or conceive of it! The pride, the envy, the malice, the hatred, the lust, the covetousness, the spirit of deceit—all of this breaking out from the heart into thought, desire and action leads to robbery, seduction, murder, and an endless catalog of crime. When the Scriptures declare that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked," it is not speaking of some individual heart, but the universal heart of humanity. The great need of the cleansing out of all of these seeds and roots of sin cannot be exaggerated. God would have the heart made pure, from sin set free. Jesus has provided for this purifying on Calvary, and the Holy Ghost stands ready to purge with his fiery baptism all sin from the nature that is entirely committed to him.

We are not going to preserve a spiritual church or evangelize the world without a full recognition and a glad submission to the will of God, and a triumphant faith in the Son of God. Obedience, submission, consecration, hungering and thirsting for purity, panting like the hart for the waterbrook—this is the highway that leads up to the cross of crucifixion to self, the application of the precious blood, the cleansing baptism and incoming of the Holy Ghost to abide and keep that which we have committed unto the Lord.

Oh, for a revival of the revival of full salvation, for a time of mighty refreshing from the presence of the Lord, for the powerful demonstration of the Holy Ghost among the people. Let us pray for this, wait upon the Lord, expect, believe and do our part, make our contribution toward a mighty outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and a powerful fresh impetus to the Holiness Movement. We do not need some new discovery, the chattering of some crank; we simply need to hold steadfastly to the word of God on the subject of entire sanctification, as interpreted by John Wesley and the founders of the Methodist Church. Wherever this gospel is faithfully preached sinners are convicted, backsliders are reclaimed, believers are sanctified, and the whole work of God goes forward.

It Is Not a Question of A Glass of Beer.

A reporter, writing for The Courier-Journal, of the inauguration of President Hoover and his speech at the time of his inauguration, makes this comment on the President's reference to the enforcement of prohibition laws.

"Thus did Mr. Hoover disclose that, despite the fact that the prohibition issue was uppermost in his contest with Alfred E. Smith, he is unwilling to set the question apart as the all-engrossing concern of the Republic. In a word, he could not see that a glass of beer, or the lack of it, is cause for so much uproar."

Thus the newspaper reporter, as usual, makes a fling at prohibition and undertakes to interpret the mind and attitude of the new President on this very important question. To the reporter, it seems very trivial, a mere matter of a "glass of beer" or the lack of it." This is not the question at all.

Some time ago, after I had preached a sermon, a young man who evidently believed himself to be a brilliant thinker, came up to me with a serious, hard face and said, "Do you mean to tell me that the mere plucking of an apple started all the sorrow, tears, bloodshed, and ruin we have in this world?" "Oh," I said, "it might have been a gooseberry. It was disobedience to a divine law that lifted the floodgate of sin and sent the river of death and ruin through the human race. It is not the question, my dear sir, of the size of the thing involved, but when a man wilfully violates the law of the God who has created and redeemed him, and has given him laws for his protection and guidance, he commits a fearful sin, regardless of the size of the mere material that may be involved in his acts of disobedience."

The young man dropped his head, thought for a moment, and walked away. The newspaper reporter may congratulate himself that he has said something brilliant when he would settle the prohibition question by suggesting that the matter of "a glass of beer, or the lack of it, should not cause such uproar."

Quite a number of millions of the best citizens of these United States, the sober, law-abiding people who build the good homes, carry on the big business, support the churches, pay the great amount of taxes, look upon the prohibition question as a very vital one, and voiced at the polls at the recent presidential election their detestation of the liquor traffic and their unwillingness to trust a man as the chief magistrate of the United States, who is a friend and advocate of that traffic.

The recent Congress looked upon the violation of our prohibition laws as a very serious matter, when they passed an act providing for a fine of $10,000, imprisonment and, better still, the sending of alien violators out of the country. This was a magnificent step in the right direction. A very large part of the violation of our prohibition laws is carried on by foreigners. It is to be hoped that the courts will at once begin shipping a stream of these violators of our laws to their home beyond the seas. This would go very far toward cleaning up bootlegging.

When men in open violation of the law build distilleries, manufacture intoxicants and sell them broadcast over the country, arm themselves heavily, and shoot down the officers of the government who undertake to enforce the law, that is not a mere matter of "a glass of beer, or the lack of it," but that is a matter that ought to "cause an uproar." It ought to have sent a tremendous roar out of the quiet occupant of the White House for the past several years. This quietness has been most unfortunate, and while not so intended, has had a powerful psychological effect upon those who are criminally inclined.

Throughout the ages of the past nothing has been more destructive to physical health, mental development and spiritual life, than strong drink. It has carried on an incessant war against the human race from its infancy. It never lets up. Its ravenous appetite can never be glutted. It feasts upon human bodies, brains and soul. The liquor traffic is the devil's own. It not only destroys life and property, but it damns into eternal perdition the souls of men. Untold millions of human beings have been dragged into wreck and ruin and eternal night through drunkenness; all of them, perhaps, moderate drinkers, to begin with, going from bad to worse until they made the final plunge.

There is good reason to believe that the attitude of the incoming President will be very different on this subject from that of the outgoing President. No intelligent person can expect Mr. Hoover, in his administration to give his entire attention to the enforcement of prohibition laws, and we do not expect the laws against the manufacture and sale of liquor can be so enforced that there will not still be newspaper people with such low moral conceptions that they will continue to ridicule our prohibition laws, and thus cultivate and encourage a spirit of

TIDES OF SALVATION IN KOREA.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Permit me in this article to put the events of the last week or so in diary form.

Sunday, Feb. 10. New Year's Day in Korea (Chinese also). This is a day given over to social activities greatly. The children out in their fancy dresses in all the colors of the rainbow—yellow, red, green, blue, pink prevailing.

Preached in the morning at Central M. E. Church. Pastor intimated that crowd may be small because of New Year's, but they came in groups and soon the church was nearly filled. Great number of students attend this church. Many preachers were present and some presiding elders. Preached on Acts 1:17, setting forth "The Spirit's Outpouring," showing that this promise is

(1) To all nations and races.
(2) To all ages—"Your sons and daughters."

(3) It brings a new language—"Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy."

(4) It brings new visions.

At night preached at Dr. Hardie's church (M. E. Church, South), and again emphasized the need of the Holy Spirit for the forthcoming revival meetings.

At both of these meetings we called upon the Christians to come forward and pray for the Holy Spirit. Many came and prayer was poured out, tears were shed, and the presence of God was assured.

February 12. The "Big Meeting" opened tonight at the Sung dong (Presbyterian) Church. One of the coldest nights of the winter, but a big crowd came out, largely of men. Preached on Acts 1:8. Professor Billings of the College interpreted—he threw his whole soul into it as I preached with the Spirit's help on the Promised Power. I endeavored to show

1. That this was the last promise of Jesus.
2. That it was given to his church.
3. What this power was which Jesus promised.

(a) It was not intellectual power.
(b) It was not social power.
(c) It was not financial power.
(d) It was not political power

But on the other hand this power was

(a) Witnessing power
(b) Prayer power
(c) Sanctifying power
(d) Revival power.

This was followed by audible prayer all over the church. It was indeed a case of praying in tongues—Korean and English, then followed a specific call to those needing sanctification, restoration, conversion; a number came forward.

February 13. Preached at 6 A. M. on Prayer for a Revival. Psalm 85:6.

Koreans are good people for early prayer meetings. Often they have 5 A. M. meetings—about 150 were present at this meeting and at close of the message a deep spirit of prayer prevailed.

11:30 A. M. Preached on Acts 7:4. Pentecost. A Korean Missionary Secretary interpreted. He had been partly trained in U. S. A. In this message I showed what Pentecost meant to the early Christian church and the need today of another Pentecost personally as well as collectively. The whole meeting turned into a prayer meeting; all over the house voices were raised in prayer calling on God for pentecostal power.

7:30 P. M. Church crowded, some standing. Preached on Acts 2:38, showing what Peter's sermon at Pentecost produced. Not compliments on its eloquence and thought, but people crying out of the depths of conviction: "Men and brethren what shall we do?" This is a pattern sermon for all time. Peter's answer announced three things necessary to full salvation.

1. Repentance, which means sorrow for sin, confession of sin, forsaking of sin.

2. Remission of sins.

3. The gift of the Holy Ghost.

This implies:

(a) The gift of Purity.

(b) The gift of Full Assurance.

(c) The gift of Power.

(d) It is the promised gift. Luke 11:13.

February 14, 6:00 A. M. Preached on "How to receive the Holy Ghost." Text: Luke 11:13.

1. Believe the promise.

2. Confess your need.

3. Give up every known sin.

4. Make a complete consecration.

ASK, SEEK, KNOCK.

11:30. Preached on Sanctification before a full house.

7:30. House packed. Many preachers and presiding elders present, some of them sitting on the floor on straw mats. Preached on "Holiness as an experience of grace."

Rev. M. B. Stokes interpreted. He is one of the finest interpreters in Korea, Presiding Elder of the M. E. Church, South, and a Revivalist through and through; has the gift of prayer to a wonderful degree.

Such a mass of people raised their hands for holiness that it was impossible to invite them forward because we had no space, so we had to turn the whole church into an altar, and when they all began to pray together it was like the sound of many waters. The Koreans believe in praying through.

February 15. Preached three times today with increasing crowds involving difficulty when it came to altar services. So many seeking that it is simply impossible to do anything but turn the whole meeting into an altar service. At the 11:30 A. M. service preaching on "Hindrances to Holiness," Heb. 12:1, and at night Rev. M. B. Stokes interpreted for me as I preached on Rom. 7th and 8th, chapter 2. "Freedom from Sin by the Spirit of Life." Again at the close the crowd wanting the freedom of the Spirit was so great that everything was turned into an altar and all through the house and in the galleries men and women with strong cryings and tears and prayers were seeking God.

February 16. Again the 6 A. M. hour brought out about 300. At 11:30 I preached on "A Clean Heart," Psalm 51:10, with the usual response. At night the church more crowded than ever and I preached on "Jacob wrestling with the Angel." This service reached points of intensity never before reached. Many stayed in the church all night. One young fellow went out to South Mountain and prayed there all night and came back to the 6 A. M. meeting reporting victory. Another young fellow testified that he prayed till 4 o'clock in the morning and the blessing came then.

Sunday, February 17. Began the Lord's Day by preaching at 6 A. M. on Acts 2:4, Bro. Stokes interpreting. Testimonies given by those who had entered in the blessing. Several old people told of visions and dreams they were having. It seems a fulfillment truly of Acts 2:17: "Your young men shall see visions and your old men shall dream dreams."

11 A. M. Preached on "The Wonders of Sanctification." Joshua 3:5. Altar service followed. Presbyterian preacher interpreted.

2:30 P. M. Mrs. Ridout preached at a Woman's Mass Meeting on "Being Filled with the Spirit." Nearly 100 women came forward seeking the blessing. A Korean woman interpreted and another Korean woman presided. This kind of a meeting was unique for the women of Seoul.

At 7:30 went to the Presbyterian Church and found everything packed to the limit, galleries and all. Many standing both upstairs and down. Many preachers present. Helen Kim, of General Conference fame, sang a gospel song. What an example that little woman was as with the most modest and becoming attire she sang from her heart an invitation message. I preached on "The Baptism of Fire," Professor Billings of the Chosen Christian College interpreting the message with force and fire. Some one said to me, with such a crowd better preach to sinners tonight, but no, it was clear that the message must be to the church, and God gave me great liberty as we set forth the two baptisms—the baptism of Repentance and the baptism of Fire. So great was the crowd that to attempt an altar service was an impossibility, so had to turn whole meeting into an altar of prayer, and just at this point something happened. One of the Korean presiding elders—a real Samson, both physically and spiritually, was on the platform and he was asked to pray. He began and in a few minutes he struck fire. Not knowing the language I could not tell whether he was praying, exhorting or preaching. He was so under the Holy Ghost that he stormed the very gates of heaven; he strode back and forth on the platform, sat down, praying all the time, got up again and stormed again and all over the house the fire was scattering. Oh, how I thanked God for that man's prayer! My strength was all gone in preaching and I had none left to direct things; so the Lord put forward that mighty man to pray the thing through. I was too exhausted to get out to the 6 A. M. meeting in the morning but they told me the crowd was so large that some had to go in the gallery.

One of the songs the Koreans sing in their meetings is: "Weeping will not save me."

"Weeping will not save me,
Tho my face were bathed in tears,
That could not allay my fears,
Could not wash the sins of years,
Weeping will not save me.

CHORUS.

"Jesus wept and died for me;
Jesus suffered on the tree;
Jesus waits to make me free;
He alone can save me.

"Working will not save me;
Purest deeds that I can do;
Honest thought and feelings too;
Cannot form my soul anew.
Working will not save me."

Wednesday, February 20. This was students' night at the revival and the church was packed upstairs and down and scattered throughout the audience were the young fellows with the blue suits and brass buttons. All the students in this country are distinguished by their special attire—all foreign clothes. None of them go to school in the old-time Korean clothes. I thought it best not to preach any special sermon to students, but preach the gospel so that all classes could get a message, so preached on Saul of Tarsus, his conversion and the Heavenly Vision. Acts 26:19. In this message we endeavored to show that Paul's conversion was the most remarkable in the history of the church, that prior to his conversion he lived the most moral and ethical life, so much so that if ethics and morality would admit a man into the Kingdom of God, certainly Saul of Tarsus would have succeeded. His conversion was sudden, was from Heaven and he was a preacher with a live testimony, and here in King Agrippa's presence he was giving his experience of salvation with the utmost courage and boldness. The heavenly vision Paul had was,

(1) A vision of himself and his sin.
(2) A vision of Jesus.

- (3) A vision of the Gospel and of salvation which involves, as set forth in Acts 26:18,
 (a) Opening of the eyes of the blind.
 (b) Turning from darkness to light.
 (c) From power of Satan to God.
 (d) Forgiveness of sin.
 (e) Sanctification by faith.

The Koreans are great listeners. They seem to enjoy gospel preaching. We confined the altar service to the unsaved at this time, else the crowd of church members who would have come forward for sanctification would have made no place for the unconverted. Soon seekers began to come from various parts of the house, students and other classes, and workers began to deal with them, and the business of getting them through went on faithfully.

At a Korean altar service, at a given moment, all break out praying together, and not only at the altar but all over the house people are engaged in audible and sometimes violent prayer.

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER II.

THE SUPERIORITY OF ITS TEACHINGS.

WE hear a great deal about comparative religion. It is all right so far as the Bible is concerned because the more it is compared with the sacred books of other religions, the more it will be seen to contain not a comparative religion, but as Joseph Parker once said, "the superlative one."

The Korean teaches that the mountains were created to keep the world from moving. The Hindoos are taught that the earth rests on the back of an elephant and when the elephant moves the result is an earthquake. The Chaldeans were given to understand that Bel, the Supreme Deity, cut off his own head and from the drops of his blood men were formed.

But what a contrast is all this with the simple and yet sublime words of Moses, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth?", and the surprising statement of Job that God "hangeeth the world upon nothing?" How did the Patriarchs find out that the stars could not be numbered for multitude? Ptolmey said there were only 1026, Christ said that at His coming some would be sleeping and some working in the field. It looks like He thought the world was round.

But when we spoke of the superiority of Bible teaching, it was the ethics of the Bible we had in mind. While the Bible makes many remarkable statements which the latest science has shown to be in closest harmony with actual fact, the Bible nevertheless has not been given to us as a treatise on Geology or Astronomy or any other science. But it has been given to us as an authoritative and exhaustive teacher of ethical and spiritual truth.

And just here there are two songs the skeptics always sing. One is that the Bible contains statements that cannot with delicacy be read to a mixed audience. Well, this is true, and Bob Ingersol used to go around reading a few verses from the Bible and then stop abruptly and slam it down and apologize to his audience by saying, "I don't dare to insult your intelligence and decency by reading further," and of course every man in the crowd living a licentious life would applaud him to the echo.

But the things referred to were never intended for a mixed audience; just as there are many things in books on anatomy and other books that you find in the library of any physician which were never written to be read to a mixed audience. But this is no evidence that the books do not contain the truth and therefore be cast out as misleading and corrupt.

Indeed, one of the strongest evidences that the Bible, unlike these other books; is from God, is this very fact. When a man writes his own biography he leaves out of it all of the mean tricks he ever did, and he puts into it all the good things he thinks he ever did, and when you read it, you say, "What a fine man he must have been." About the same thing is true when somebody else does the writing.

You tell me that Noah got drunk and that David committed adultery. Yes, but what of that? Did no one else ever do these things, or curse and swear like Peter did? If you expect to read only about angels in the Bible, you must remember that even they have been known to fall.

But do you suppose that if the histories of these men had been written by some noted biographical expert and revised by a committee of ecclesiastical literati, that ever a word would have been said about Noah's drunkenness and Abraham's lies and Peter's profanity? No. Human biographies are not written that way. But when God tells the story of a man's life He lets the world know the truth about him. And so the very record bears witness that the Bible came from God.

The other song of the skeptic is that ethnically considered there are other books just as good and in some respects better than the Bible. And when you ask him to name them, he begins to tell you at once and of course, of Buddha, Confucius, Zoroaster, Mohammed, Socrates, Seneca and other pagan philosophers.

There are however a few things to be noted just here.

First.—That a good part of the Bible was written centuries before these men ever lived, that every ethical truth known to the world today may be found in germ at least in the Hebrew Scriptures, that these men were to some extent familiar with the same and that without doubt got much of the better part of their teaching from it.

Second.—We have conceded too much. I know that great truths fell from the lips of the ethnic seers, and that the non-Christian religions have many ethical utterances worthy of profound admiration. But take the teaching of Jesus about the great fundamental ethical conceptions, such as love and truth and purity and duty, and where in any non-Christian religion or when on the lips of any non-Christian teacher did the world ever see or hear moral philosophy so profound, so radiant with divine glory, and so God-like as that which came from the heart and mind of the marvelous Man of Galilee?

Third.—The Bible contains all the moral and spiritual truth there is, while no other one book contains more than a fractional part of it. 4000 years have rolled away since much of the Bible was written and nearly 2000 years have gone since the pen that wrote the last word dropped from the hand of John in the Isle of Patmos, and yet there is not a single moral precept in possession of the world today that is not to be found in its essence at least upon the leaves of that Book.

You can gather up all the truth found in all the moral philosophies and ethical disquisitions outside of the Bible since the world began, and if you destroyed every page from which a single such truth has ever gleamed, we would still have in the Bible all the truth of this character which God Himself could impart to the human soul. And if there is any exception I have never heard of it or known it.

Fourth.—In the Bible, nothing but the truth is found. But in these other writings there is a lot of untruth.

I know that Aristotle had many fine things to say about benevolence and duty, but I also know that he urged upon the state the duty of throwing the unfit infants to the wild beasts out on the mountain sides.

I know that Marcus Aurelius discoursed fine about fortitude, temperance and justice, but I also know that he held it right to feed people to the lions for no other offence except that they were Christians.

I know that Socrates taught us much about submission to the will of providence and showed us in his own martyrdom something at least of the spirit in which a man ought to die, but I also know that he had some things to say about the propriety of public prostitution, great and glorious a soul as he was.

I know that Confucius finely emphasized a man's duty to his fellowmen, but I also know that he taught that under circumstances a lie was justifiable and did not hesitate to acknowledge that he sometimes practiced what he preached.

I also know, that Mohammed's heaven was little more than a Turkish harem, a sensual feast of sparkling wine and still more sparkling eyed and finely figured young women.

And so the gems of truth in these ethnic religions and philosophies are like diamonds in a bucket of pitch, and one is apt to get his fingers dirty going after them.

But the Bible contains not only truth but truth only. Science has turned its critical, microscopic eye upon it, but it has never yet been convicted of essential error. Its ethical code has undergone the closest scrutiny of moral philosophers and not a flaw has been discovered in all its matchless precepts. How can you explain this in any other way but that the Bible is the Book of books, the one divine Book that comes from God, while these other books have come from men? It is the one great Book of Truth. No better definition has ever been given of it than the one given by Locke. "It has God for its Author, salvation for its end, and the truth without any mixture of error for its matter."

And the Bible is its own best commentator. Of course,

"The owl Atheism,

Sailing across the sky with obscene wing,
 Drops his blue fringed lids,

And hooting at the glorious sun
 Cries, 'Where is it.'"

And so the man who comes to this blazing sun of light and truth with eyes that are blind with prejudice and a heart calloused with unbelief can never find the glorious things revealed upon its blessed pages; but any man who comes disarmed and with the humility which becomes the honest searcher after God, such a man can no more doubt the divine inspiration of that Book and its consequent infallibility than he can doubt his own existence in the universe round about him.

When Alexander the Great stood before Diogenes, as he sat by his tub, the general asked the philosopher what he could do for him. And Diogenes rather grimly replied, "Simply get out of my light." And so leave a man alone with this Book without any intruding shadow of suspicion or doubt or destructive criticism and he will know that what is before him comes from God.

And perhaps a bit of advice like this may not be amiss for the man who scoffs and

BLOOD ATONEMENT.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

"When I see the blood, I will pass over you."—Exodus 12:13.

IF all that was written in the Bible concerning the blood should be compiled, there would be a volume as large as a book of popular fiction, but it would not make a literary "hit" on the market as a "best seller." The philosophy of a Blood Atonement is a profound mystery—it is rank foolishness to the world.

Bishop Candler said recently, that the trouble with the modern gospel was, that it was bleached out. The crimson wave no longer flowed out from the up-to-date pulpit message. Bishop Morrison said, when giving his final address at the General Conference, that a great peril faced the church, in that the blood was being left out by every preacher. Over against this statement Beecher once said, "Away with your slaughter-house religion." But his sad ending does not commend him to us as a fit character to lead even immortals, to say nothing about salvation and holy living. Human opinions do not count. God says: "The life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it to you upon the altar to make an atonement for your soul: for it is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul." (Lev. 17:11).

If this language has any meaning, it is that whoever tries to climb up some other way is a thief and a robber. The fight against the Blood is not from the spawn of modern theology. It is as old as the race. Blood rejecters today who think they have hit a new trail are 6000 years behind, six millenniums behind time. They are the followers of Cain. Much has been said about the irreligious character of Cain; but none of it is recorded against him in the Word. He preferred to set aside the principles of a Blood Atonement, and offer a beautiful sacrifice before the Lord: one of his inventions, the firstfruits of the garden and field. We are persuaded that God had taught him in the primer class, that all sacrifices must have blood; but Cain ignored this injunction. The offering of Abel was accepted because it had the one element in it of saving merit—blood. From that day until Calvary's dark Friday God has accepted no offerings that did not remind him of the shed blood of his Son who was to be. He will accept none today that leaves out faith in the merits of a Blood Atonement.

Satan has trained his heavy artillery on the blood, for it alone can save a soul from sin. No wonder he has injected into the world's theology that blood was a hoax of barbarous days long ago obsolete. The fight has never changed base. When we ignore this plan of human redemption, we fling our challenge into the face of God. "For as much as ye know, ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold—but with the precious blood of Christ as a Lamb offered without blemish, and without spot." (1 Pet. 1:18-19).

1. Reconciliation and propitiation are wrought by the blood. Sin has made a crevasse into the world. God's government had been set aside by disobedience. Doom hung over the race like a black chasm. There remains for him neither propitiation nor reconciliation. No salvation for blood rejecters. God will drive them on a damp, dark, dismal swamp filled with miasma and germs of death. God will drive them from his presence, as he did Cain in the long ago.

2. Forgiveness, or justification, is wrought only through the blood. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God." (Rom. 5:1). But peace is impossible without pardon; the one presupposes the other. He who is justified is pardoned. What saith the word? "Without the shedding of blood, there is no remission of sin (Heb. 9:12). What does it mean? It does not mean a nice, cultured, fastidious, ritualistic ceremony—a Decision Day—First Communion—Confirmation—Easter—Church joining performance, Baptism or what not does not meet the demands for a pardoned sinner. Satan has put a lot of hocus pocus presto business in all this soul travail (and we mean no irreverence to ordinances) but we do denounce as a make-shift, a delusion, and a doctrine of devils, when any of these solemn ceremonies are made to take the place of salvation by the blood, through repentance and faith in Jesus.

3. The soul is purified by the Blood. "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." (1 John 1:7) "Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate. (Heb. 13:12). "For if the blood of bulls and goats and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit, offered himself without spot unto God, purge your conscience from dead works." (Heb. 9:13, 14).

There is no limit to the power of the blood. "Let us go into the holiest by the blood." (Heb. 10:19). There is power not only to save, but there is power to sanctify and purify.

"Oh for a heart to praise my God

A heart from sin set free;

A heart that always feels thy blood,

So freely spilt for me."

4. We find that the church has been bought with blood. Think of the tremendous, awful responsibility resting on those who are given charge over the flock. The Holy Ghost has made us overseer of the church. We are bishops by his direct authority—and woe to the man, when the flock cries for food and gets stones. Christ's blood was the purchase price, and now the Holy Ghost places men in authority over the church. We are to give careful heed unto ourselves and to the flock. "Take heed unto yourselves and to all the flock (little ones as well as big) in the which the Holy Ghost hath made you bishops, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Acts 20:28.

5. Again, another phase of this question is the tremendous warfare of the Christian life. When we begin to move up the hill Godward, every devil in the land of despair gets awake to crush us, and kill our influence. Paul found it so, "We wrestle not with flesh and blood, but with principalities and with powers, with the rulers of this dark world, with spiritual wickedness in high places." Ah, there is the fight. But say some, "I don't find the Christian life any trouble." That is the best evidence in the world that you are not in the fight yourself. Every man who means business, and is going his length for God and heaven, will find that Satan will give him anything but a dull time. He is a great fallen archangel with almost omnipotent powers. No man can match with him but God. Hear John, who beheld a great company of overcomers: "They overcame the beast by the blood of the Lamb, and the word of their testimony." Rev. 12:11. Here is omnipotent power in the blood. Let us apply its merits. There is no other hope for our fallen race.

6. Still another gracious benefit through the blood is Redemption. You say, salvation means that, but salvation is not finished until we get up out of the grave. "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus who was made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption." Acts 1:30. It was on the cross that the redemption price was paid that will change our vile bodies into the glorious bodies like unto his. It is no wonder that the devil trains his guns on the blood. It is the conquering power that is to finally defeat him in his work of ruin. He wants men to preach a bloodless gospel—one of a beautiful, wholesome truth. Oh, how Satan revels in the good, the beautiful and the true. Just so that we keep away from the blood. Away with the humanitarian, chautauqua, uplift gospel; it is nothing less than the doctrine of devils. Listen to them prate about the "Fatherhood of God, and the 'brotherhood of man.'" There never was more heresy crammed into one sentence than that. "But as many as received him to them gave he the right to become the sons of God: even to them that believe on his name." John 1:12.

7. The final function of the blood! It will be the one and only badge of honor in the "Dies Irae." In the day of wrath. All the prizes and honors of earth, the appointments high or low, the smiles of kings and the seats of chief places will all vanish. Hear these words: "I beheld when he opened the sixth seal, and there was a great earthquake; the sun became as black as the sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood, and the stars of heaven fell to the earth, and heaven departed as a scroll, the mountains and islands were moved, and the kings of the earth, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bondsman, etc., hid themselves in the dens and rocks of the mountains—For the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand." Rev. 6:12-17. Brother, you may wear the "white lambskin," which is more honorable than the golden fleece and more ancient than the Roman eagle, but it will not be a passport in that day. You may wear The Square and Compass, the triple link, the Woodman's Axe, but none will answer in that day. If we refuse the blood, we shall be dumbfounded in "The Dies Irae." "They have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." The Blood will help us in tribulation times. Made White—that means purity—holiness. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord."

"There is a fountain filled with blood
Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
And sinners plunged beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains."
"When I see the blood, I will pass over you."
Amen.

DOCTRINE AND THEOLOGY.

REV. A. S. HUNTER.

DOCTRINE and theology are practically synonymous, and the modernists are scared of both. They often knock on "doctrine," as though it was death in the pot; and they repudiate "theology" only a bit more. Perhaps part of this is a reaction from an excess of technical theology in the past, the lifeless, dry-as-dust kind; but that does not justify this opposite extreme. This discounting of doctrine is more a revolt against the Bible, an unwillingness to be definite. "Adventure" is a popular sport with many; they jauntily cut loose from all anchorage, and give free reign to their imagination. "Current thought" is much in vogue, and it is fancies in flux.

The word "theology" is not in the Bible, but its substance is very much there. It is from two Greek words, theos, God, and logos, word; as "geology" is from ge, the earth, and logos, word. In each case it is the word or truth about something—God and the earth, respectively. The only truth we have about God is in the Bible. Outside of that, all is speculation. Essentially, the Bible is the Book on theology, the Book about God. It is God's Word concerning himself. All our knowledge about God is theology. There is a speculative theology, which is not knowledge, but guess work. It comes a small part from the Bible, and much from the soft heads and hard hearts of men. It is first cousin to myth-ology, the word about myths.

"Doctrine" is from the Latin root, doceo, I teach; and means teaching, the thing taught. A teacher must know or believe something. The Greek word dedaksa means the same. It is the root from which both teaching and doctrine are translated many times in the New Testament. It is used concerning Jesus 33 times; "teach" 7 times, "teaching" 12 times, "doctrine" 14 times. Paul used it 46 times; "teacher" 14 times, "teaching" 3 times, "doctrine" 29 times. A grand total of 79 times. It is also used several times by John. There is no dread of either the word or the thing in the New Testament. And, teaching or doctrine, as understood in the New Testament, being about God, is theology.

Jesus warned his disciples against the doctrine of the Pharisees (not against "doctrine"), traditions of men which set at naught the Word of God; likening it to "heaven." Paul warned Timothy against allowing "any other doctrine" than what he had taught; and against any conduct among the Christians "contrary to sound doctrine"; that God's "doctrine be not blasphemed." He exhorted Timothy to "give thyself to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine." He declared that the Scriptures are "profitable for doctrine." Timothy was to "preach the Word . . . with all longsuffering and doctrine."

If we preach or teach the Bible, the Word of God, we must preach or teach doctrine, theology. It is unavoidable, inevitable. When we shy off from "doctrine" and "theology," we get away from the Bible. Much of the so-called preaching now is but human theorizing, moralizing. Long ago, God said, "My people perish for lack of knowledge," and it is so now. Instead of the knowledge of God from his Word, the present trend is to substitute book knowledge through the secular schools. Multitudes of people do not know enough about God and sin, to realize that they are sinners and need a Savior. Time was, and within the memory of many now living, when ungodly people trembled at the thought of meeting God. It is seldom so now, because there is so little sin-consciousness; and that is because of the lack of doctrinal preaching, with the unction of the Spirit.

Paul foretold a time "when they will not endure sound doctrine, but, having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers (doctrines—dedaskalous) after their own lusts; and shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables." Both Peter and John spoke of "false prophets" or teachers, who then were and would be later. That has always been so, and it is now especially acute. Very many people do not know enough Bible to distinguish between false and true doctrine.

This state of things has come about, not through too much doctrine, as some claim, but from lack of true doctrinal teaching and preaching. "The carnal mind is enmity against God," and only as the Holy Spirit can operate on it through the medium of the Word of God, can the natural heart be changed and kept true. There is needed a great revival of definite doctrinal preaching, under the anointing of the Holy Spirit.

A Fearful Warning to the Ungodly

M. M. BUSSEY.

IN 2 Peter 2:4-6, we have three examples of the wrath of God upon three different occasions for three different kinds of sins.

First: All of the angels were created pure and holy, but the Bible says they sinned. It does not say one angel sinned, nor that one was cast down to hell, but we are told that one third of the angels fell. If we could have beheld one of these angels before he fell his glory would have overawed us, but now imagine all this great multitude of angels lined up under the wrath of God awaiting the last word, and while they wait in dreadful suspense let a careless sinner from the earth take his stand beside them; let him hear the final sentence, and behold them thrust from the presence of God, and see them go crashing down to hell. While the wrath of God is executed upon angels for sin let the sinner ask himself the solemn question, "If God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to hell, what hope have I if I remain in sin?" Let the sinner carefully compare himself with the splendor of the angels, with their might, their power, with their great number, and behold the wrath of God burn against them, then let him fear and tremble to come into the presence of God a sinner. This is the first example of God's wrath against sin.

Second: God "spared not the old world—bringing in the flood upon the world of the ungodly."

The world of the ungodly, a world full of people were ungodly, were unlike God in nature and behaviour. This refers to the people living before the flood. "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." Gen. 6:5.

The deep-seated root of sin in the human heart brought on the flood.

It was carnality let loose. The wicked heart urged wickedness in conduct. The wicked heart overflowed through the lips and spit out profanity in the face of God. It was a profane generation, the tongue swayed by the movings of their wicked hearts let forth a continual stream of vile and evil words. Their minds were given over to plan and plot whatever wickedness the unrenewed heart prompted. Their bodies were ruled by the continual outflow of inward wickedness. It was unrestrained, unbridled, unchanged inward wickedness that run the world to ruin, and brought on the flood of destruction.

If God spared not the old world who gave themselves over to live after the cravings of carnality then he will not spare this present world if they live after the same carnal nature. The crime wave, the utter lawlessness, the fearful divorce evil, the shameful nakedness in dress, the love of money, the love of pleasure, the profanity, and vilest of the tongue are all natural streams outflowing from wicked hearts. Take heed, beware! If God spared not the world then because of their sins what hope can there be that he will spare this present world of ungodly men and women? If God punished an entire world of sinners, what hope is there for one sinner who remains ungodly?

Third: "Turning the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah into ashes condemned them with an overthrow, making them an ensample unto those that after should live ungodly." These cities had become a hot-bed of iniquity. Men and women had left God out of their plans and shut him out of their hearts. Their carnal hearts brooded wickedness, it burned, and fanned, flamed and frothed, and overflowed through all manner of misconduct. God rained fire and brimstone from heaven upon these wicked cities, and destroyed them, making them an example to sinners for all time. God who spared not these cities who gave themselves over to sin will not spare the present day cities if they live in like manner, the sentence may not be the same, but the punishment will be certain. And if God will visit his wrath upon entire cities for sin how may the individual sinner hope to escape?

If it were possible for one sinner unforgiven to enter heaven, then if it were possible all of the fallen angels in hell might pull themselves loose from their chains, and in wrath fly back to the throne of God and say, "We were cast into hell for sin, and behold a sinner is let into heaven. O Justice arise in our behalf!" Or the old world might wallow themselves out of the mud of the flood, and cast the same in the face of God. Or the men of Sodom might pull themselves out of the fire, and with liquid damnation dripping from their eyebrows, a mad mob, surge along the pavements of glory until they find the guilty sinner and surrounding him say, "Come, thou guilty one, for we are damned in hell for the same sins which thou hast committed, Come with us, hell shall be thy doom!"

WHAT IS SIN?

Sin may be defined under three manifestations, and this may include all the sin of all the world. The first, and by far the greatest of all sin, is that which is inherited. That sinful nature born in the heart, that proneness to evil, that bent to sinning, that root of bitterness, that carnal nature, that law of sin, that sin principle, that poison of the asp, that nest of vipers, that germ pocket of all misconduct and wickedness—that nature comes with the heart as the heart comes into the world. And from this sinful nature springs forth all committed sins.

The second manifestation of sin is transgression; doing that which is forbidden by God. God has given laws to direct the conduct of the human race. O think of the broken laws of God! And remember that all must be accounted for, and met at the judgment, if not repented of here in this life.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XV.

A CLASS-ROOM DISCUSSION.

IN our last chapter we spoke of the fact that Huston was awaiting an opportunity for a discussion with one of the theological professors who had invited questions and discussions.

One day after this professor had talked at some length on Evolution and its scientific basis and solution of many problems that had been difficult up to the discovery of the evolutionary process of creation, Huston said, "Professor, may I ask you a question?"

"Certainly," was the reply of the smiling professor.

"I should like to ask," said Huston, "why it is necessary in the study of theology to give so much of the time of our recitation to the discussion of Evolution?"

"I thank you for that question," replied the professor, "and I think I can answer not only to the satisfaction of yourself, but also to the class. It is necessary in the study of theology that you should be well informed on the scientific theory of Evolution, because our information on this subject makes it necessary to make many changes of wide significance in our theological views which had their origin, and have for their foundation, our misconceptions of the method that God used in the creation of the material world in the human species, which we got out of the mythical teachings of the Old Testament Scriptures. We must have a scientific basis upon which to rest our religious faith and teaching. The intelligence of our times demands such a basis, and we can no longer go to the people with the old theories and ideas of divine inspiration of the Bible, which our fathers believed and preached. For this very reason I feel it my duty to inculcate into the minds of you students correct views of Evolution and the importance of awaking your minds for a thorough study of the scientific facts which the evolutionary discoveries and teachings have revealed to the modern mind."

Huston rose quietly to his feet; after looking the professor straight in the face for a few moments, until the pause became painful, and the eyes of the entire student body was fixed upon him, he said,

"Professor, I hardly think that you mean to make the impression that the evolutionary hypothesis rests upon confirmed scientific basis. I have, for some years, been a student of the theory of Evolution. I have carefully read the masters and their followers, and I have failed to find any scientist who is friendly to the hypothesis of Evolution who claims that this teaching is an established scientific fact. Most all of them agree that there are many missing links, and the profound scholarship friendly to this theory, is now searching as far as they can, the entire globe, and into every realm of nature, as well as the history of the human race, for these missing links, and for facts which they can assemble to form a scientific basis for the evolutionary theory of the creation of material universe and the human race. No scientist who has any regard for his reputation as a thoughtful and thorough scholar on the subject would dare to claim that all grounds for doubt or question have been cleared away, and that the theory of the evolutionary process of creation is an established scientific fact.

"I beg your pardon, professor, but I have devoted some years under a most excellent teacher, to quite a bit of study on this subject, and while I do not regard myself as an authority, I am ready to discuss this entire matter of Evolution before this class with any man or before any body of students in this University, and prove from the writings of the most scientific advocates of the evolutionary theory, that none of them have proven, or undertake to claim, that Evolution is an established scientific fact. As for your remarks about the Old Testament being mythology, and that we, as preachers, will have to discard it in order to meet the intelligence and culture of the times, the most devout scholarship and the discoveries of the archaeologists do not sympathize with or support your statements."

Huston stood looking at the professor for a moment, then quietly took his seat. Several students clapped their hands. The professor's face was red with confusion. He finally stammered out, "Mr. Huston has taken up so much time with his lecture that it is about time for the class to adjourn, and we shall discuss this question at some other time."

He was in the act of dismissing the class when Huston arose, quietly, and said, "Beg your pardon, Professor, but I wish to notify you that having been assured that it is our privilege to ask questions and enter into discussions, I shall not sit here in silence and hear you make attacks upon the Holy Scriptures as you have done this morning, without demanding proof of your statements."

The class was dismissed. There was tense excitement. Quite a number of the skeptical students hastened to the professor to express their indignation that Huston had spoken as he had, while others gathered about Huston, a number of them merely shaking his hand without a word, others patting him on the shoulder and say, "Stand up to him, Texas. We are with you. We did not come here to be taught the Bible is a myth, to be discarded, and Evolution is a gospel to be preached."

Huston and his wife went away to their apartment wondering what the outcome might be, and fell upon their knees in earnest prayer for divine guidance. Huston's wife assured him of her enthusiastic sympathy with the position he had taken, and he assured her that he had restrained himself as long as possible, and that he intended from this time on to call the professor's hand every time he made an attack upon the inspiration of the Scriptures.

The incident in the class-room of which we have just given an account, created much interest among the entire body of theological students, and was talked very generally in the University and among a number of professors, some of them claiming that Huston's remarks were insulting and should not be tolerated in any department of the University.

Huston and his friends were wondering what the outcome of the matter would be, when fortunately, for all parties concerned, the professor got an urgent call to the far-away Orient. The call was such a nature that he hurried away without attending another class, and secured a brother professor to take his place.

Some boys at play in the bed of a dry branch at the foot of the mountain border of Afghanistan, had picked up a tooth and, without any thought of its possible value, had taken it to school where a young missionary with modernistic tendencies, had noticed one of the boys playing with a tooth, and had asked him for it.

He became quite interested in its formation and showed it to several scientists who were at that time in the vicinity searching for some of the missing links in the theory of Evolution. They took great interest in the tooth and were convinced that it had come out of the mouth of a prehistoric man on his way up from the ape state.

Our professor, with whom Huston had had the bout, had been devoting his summer vacations to travels in the East and had become quite a specialist in the study of teeth. This group of scientists were so thrilled and encouraged with the finding of this tooth that they could not wait for the completion of their tour of research, but cabled at once for the professor to come and examine their wonderful "find."

His hastening away on this important mission relieved the tense situation in his class-room. True, it was quite an expensive journey, but various millionaires who had accumulated their fortunes by many questionable processes, were pouring the money into the University to be used for research in all important subjects, and our professor was abundantly provided with funds for the journey.

He was a bit stunned and humiliated with Huston's attack upon him, but the call of these distinguished scientists to examine this tooth and give his opinion flattered his vanity and healed his hurt. No man ever strutted the deck of a ship with more self-importance than our professor, who comforted himself with the thought that a man could be large enough in his intellectual powers to be a thorough Bible scholar, an honored professor in a theological seminary and, at the same time, so well versed in science that the most distinguished scientists would call upon him to examine with care, and give them the benefit of his opinion with regard to this great and important discovery, this peculiar tooth picked up by thoughtless boys at their play, who little dreamed of the possible outcome of their "find."

thinks it an evidence of superior intellect to criticize what God has revealed for the man's own good.

It is said that on a certain occasion a young member of Parliament was at the same house as the giant-minded Carlyle, and supposing Carlyle to be an unbeliever like himself, made some flippant remark about the Bible and the Christian religion. "Young man," said the giant-minded Carlyle, "I recommend you to retire to your chamber without delay, there to open your Bible, to go upon your knees before God, to ask for a better understanding of these matters, and not to rise until your prayer is answered. I believe you will then find yourself a happier and a wiser man."

"Within this awful volume lies,

The mystery of mysteries.

Happiest they of the human race

To whom God has granted grace

To read, to fear, to hope, to pray,

To lift the latch and force the way.

And better had they ne'er been born

Who read to doubt, or read to scorn."

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

MEDICAL MISSIONS IN AFRICA.

J. J. Davis.

Without doubt one of the greatest needs of Africa today is that of Medical missionaries. There is so much physical suffering among the people that we cannot hope to accomplish as much with these people as we could if we were in a position to minister to their physical needs. It was no truer more than fifty years ago when David Livingston spoke it, than it is today. "Africa is truly the open sore of the world." Wherever the well trained doctor has gone, the confidence of the people has been quickly won in great numbers. Especially is this true of a well trained surgeon.

Dr. Charles P. M. Cheffey arrived at Wembo Nyama station, in November of 1922. He is of Lynchburg, Va., and is an expert surgeon. He had not been on the field many weeks before he was operating, and natives were coming in. Walking five and ten miles to be operated on by this man who knew how to cut you open and take out the diseased part and sew you up and you would still live. It was not long until they were coming from a distance of forty and fifty miles. And before he had been there two years, his fame had so spread that one man walked over one hundred miles for an operation. He was greatly pleased when the doctor sent him away a well man.

To my mind the one great secret of this man of God's power lay in the fact that he believed much in prayer and prayed about each operation. One day after they had operated on a man it looked as though the man was dying. The doctor called the nurse and helpers to prayer, and said we cannot afford to let this man die. They sought the Lord in great earnestness and he has been spared to a life of usefulness. This man always claims that the doctor raised him from death by prayer. This missionary gave himself, perhaps more completely than any other man towards relieving this suffering humanity. I have known him to travel at times for hours in the intense heat of the noonday and sometimes into the hours of the night, traveling with a bicycle or walking in order to get to a man or woman and relieve them of their suffering. We can truly say of him, "He went about doing good."

It has been my privilege to visit a number of the hospitals in Central Africa and see something of the splendid work that is being done. One of the most interesting ones it has been my privilege to visit, is located at Bibanga, which is under the supervision of Dr. Kellersburger of the Presbyterian Mission. He has a splendid brick building with modern equipment. His staff of native workers are well trained. They can give inter-muscular and inter-venous injections as well as a Johns Hopkins graduate can. It was of special interest to me to notice how skillfully one of his boys could make a spinal puncture. These punctures are made in connection with treating a person for sleeping sickness. Sometimes the germ is not very easily found in the blood, but may be found in the spinal fluid. Dr. Kellersburger is held in high esteem by the Belgian Government, principally because he has studied so intensely this dreadful disease of sleeping sickness, and has treated thousands of cases. While visiting him in June of 1927, he told me that he had treated something over 6,000 cases the previous year. The germ which causes this sleeping sickness is carried by a fly known as the "Tsetse Fly." It is about the size of a house fly, but has a little longer wing and folds its wing when it lights. While a person is making a journey on the river, he may come in contact with several hundreds of these flies, and may be bitten a few times and never be infected with the germ. This fly has to suck the blood of a person who is infected with the germ before they can infect another person. This doctor showed me two women who were in the last stages of sleeping sickness, and they were almost raving maniacs. In fact, he said at times he had to keep them in stocks in order to keep them from hurting themselves and others. The signs of an infection usually show up in about three weeks after the person has been bitten by the infected fly. They may have the disease for four months before getting the medicine and then have a reasonable chance of being cured, and in some cases they have been cured after they have gotten into the last stages of the disease. In fact, he told me of one case that he had cured there at Bibanga. Usually three or four doses of the medicine will effect a cure. There are at least three different formulas that have been worked out by the doctors in England, Germany and Belgium. The German formula which has proved very effective, is known as "Bayer's 205." I have known three or four of the Presbyterian missionaries who have had the sleeping sickness and have been cured. So far we have been fortunate in our mission, as no missionary has yet been infected with this germ.

One morning while in charge of the Hospital at Wambo Nyama, there was a native woman who came in with a note. In it the man told me that the woman had been acting very strange for a few weeks, and would like for her to be examined. I felt of the glands on each side of the neck and noticed that one was slightly swollen. I then proceeded to prepare a blood stain to be examined by the microscope. When I was in the act of putting the slide in place to be examined, I noticed that the woman who was sitting in a chair, was in the act of going to sleep. Of course this was of encouragement to me to search the slide very diligently for the germ. I had not searched perhaps more than five minutes until I discovered the unmistakable germ that causes the sleeping sickness. Then we were in a position to treat her and effect a cure.

The Government seems to be very much interested in this particular disease and is giving quite a bit of aid to each medical missionary who is willing to treat the natives with this disease. Wherever there is a mission with a hospital, having a properly registered Doctor in charge, they will give 12,000 francs to be used in the hospital work. This amounts to something like $350 or $400 and is given each year as long as the Doctor is willing to co-operate with them in trying to stamp out this disease.

Shame on us as Southern Methodists, for though we started a Hospital in 1923, it was still unfinished when I left the field in 1928. Of course, I have reference to a brick Hospital that we had planned would be adequate to take care of the natives who come to us for treatment. We have a temporary Hospital with mud walls and grass roof, but this is not sufficient to take care of the large number of natives who come to us for help. In addition to this, we have what we call a leper colony where the lepers are cared for.

SPARTA, NEW JERSEY.

It was my good pleasure to assist a former student of John Fletcher College, the Rev. Neal R. Vanloon, Master of Theology, in his church at Sparta, N. J., Feb. 17 to March 3. He is pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He has a beautiful church and parsonage. Sparta is located among the hills and mountains of Northern New Jersey, some forty miles from Newark. It has a new artificial lake several miles in length at its feet. Its head is crowned with lofty hills and peaks and a few beautiful valleys. I was entertained in the Pen-Y-Bryn Hotel, with Mr. and Mrs. Perine, and their genial household. If one wanted to spend a few weeks in summer, or a week end there, even in winter, I could think of a no more picturesque spot than their hotel, which looks out upon valleys and hills and mountains.

Brother Vanloon, who is an artist and poet in his soul, revels in this natural beauty, but more than his delight in scenery, is his passion for the salvation of the people. Every matter of detail was looked after by him. There wasn't five minutes spent in raising funds. He did that quietly; and not only made up the expenses of the meeting, but succeeded in paying off the church's indebtedness for recent improvements. It was a great triumph and showed him to be a man of execution and organization. The meeting was unique; the attendance was not large in numbers as some meetings are, but unusual for that territory. It increased steadily, for two weeks, in attendance. The aggregate number of the people at the altar exceeded the number of persons present at any one service. I consider that very unusual.

A number were definitely blessed in conversion and sanctification, and the whole church refreshed. It is a good start for a greater harvest. His people are intelligent, appreciative, reverent, and receive the word with thoughtfulness and prayer. We had the pleasure of meeting, not only Brother Vanloon and his wife, both graduates of John Fletcher College, but our own son and his wife, pastor at Arcola, N. J., Rev. Forest Good and wife, pastor at Califon, N. J., Mrs. Esther Williamson, (who led the singing) from Cleveland Bible Institute, and Rev. E. A. Lacour, Evangelist from University Park, Iowa, all former students of John Fletcher College. It was a great joy to meet them again. The meeting was owned and blessed of God and its results are under the painstaking care of a real pastor. The people are hungry all over the land. Let us press the battle.

J. L. Brasher.

GEORGETOWN, ILLINOIS.

Since last reporting the writer has conducted meetings in Georgetown, Ill., Sidney, Ill., Colling, Mich., Port Huron, Mich., Racine, Wis., and State Line, Ind. The extreme weather hindered at some of the places, but God gave some victory in all of the meetings and good success in some of them. The good people treated me royally and my fellowship with the pastors was delightful. I am now at home a few days before leaving again for the field. I praise God for the privilege of laboring in this great movement and am enjoying his service. Pray for me.

P. P. Belew.

REPORT.

This has been the greatest year of my life, but I am expecting to do more for God in 1929.

The Lord has let us work with some of the best pastors and churches in the nation. Have seen many weary, sin-sick souls born at an altar of prayer, and stay until God came upon the scene and performed a divine miracle, and then saw them come up with a new heart and the stamp of divinity on their faces, a shout on their lips and they will have the change in their lives.

I have worked this year in the M. E. United Brethren, Friends, and Nazarene churches and camps, but we all act alike when we get old-time salvation. Am slated up until June 1st in Kansas. Then we expect to spend a few days at Cincinnati Camp. We hope, by God's help, to spend the next year in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky, pushing the battle for lost souls.

I just closed a revival, a hard fought battle, at Ingersoll, Okla. God gave some real victory but some did not pay the price. I am now at Johnson, Kan. God is on the scene in convicting power; good crowds, and souls praying through. We are looking for a real landslide. Amen.

My wife and daughter will be with me in the last. Mrs. Allen is a personal worker; also has charge of the children's work. My daughter has charge of the music, solo worker and leader in song. I am the preacher. I am of the old-time class. For reference I refer you to Rev. James Miller, Indianapolis, Ind., Rev. Stella B. Crooks, Chicago, Ill. If you need us give us a call.

Evangelist Ernest C. Allen.
714 N. Monroe St., Hutchinson, Kansas

GREENUP, KENTUCKY.

Just wanted to report a meeting to The Herald. We had the best that had been in Greenup for many years. We had only twenty-two saved and four joined the church, and all the rest reclaimed. We had more than thirty to testify in the prayer meeting following the revival. It was altogether unpopular for a man or woman to testify in any of the churches in Greenup before the revival. I had Prof. R. E. Frost and daughter singing for me. They are alright; anyone wanting good help in a revival could not beat them. Their address is Salvisa, Ky. God bless The Herald family is my prayer.

A special meeting was held for two weeks in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and thirty or more were gloriously saved. The weather was cold, we had to close for a few nights during a storm, but conviction seem to spread and folks were hungry for the truth. We were assisted by a layman, Mr. Olson, and his wife, who is a fine musician. This church has had no genuine revival for twenty-five years or more. This is a surprise to many church members and the modernist who thinks it will take years of training and culture for young converts to pray and testify. Some are very much alive since they have found salvation.

Rev. E. E. Hatfield, Pastor.

CORYDON, INDIANA.

On October 8, 1928, we began our revival services at Heidelberg Methodist Church, a rural church, about four miles from the old State Capitol, Corydon, Ind. The first week seekers began to come to the altar, but the real break in the meeting did not come until the beginning of the fourth week. The meeting lasted six weeks and during the time 71 were reclaimed, saved or sanctified. I have attended several camps and revivals but I have never witnessed greater victory—people prayed through in the old-fashioned way. I never saw people accept the preaching of holiness as readily as they did in this revival. About 35 were sanctified during the meeting and 16 have been saved or sanctified since the meeting. There were not so many that joined the church—about 25 in all for this was mostly a revival within the church.

Rev. C. L. Rice.

That Old Person

Would appreciate a weekly visit of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD, and Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto them ye did it unto me."

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00. Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

"In as Much, . . ."

Send THE HERALD one year to some one in prison or hospital and pray that it may prove a blessing.

IF YOU WANT SOMETHING

Convincing on the tithe, something that tells you what God says about it, send 10c and get a copy of "Will A Man Rob God." It is a splendid little book to hand out to members of your church who do not believe in tithing. We will send one dozen for $1.00.

violation of those laws. There will be men so low and selfish that they will manufacture and sell intoxicants for the ruin of their fellowbeings. There will still be people so governed by their physical appetites that they will buy and drink their own destruction. We have laws against theft of every kind; but stealing goes on, from bankers to porch climbers, and our prisons are pretty well filled. We have laws against murder, but murder is committed all about the nation every twenty-four hours. We have laws against reckless driving, but thousands are run down by automobiles every month, the year round. We thank God that in spite of the devil, the newspapers, Will Rogers' poor wit and Brisbane's wisdom, prohibition is making headway and will continue to do so.

Every preacher in this country ought to thunder against the liquor traffic. Every schoolteacher from the college platform and in the classroom ought to point out the dangers of drunkenness and the blessing of sobriety. Every county in every state of the nation ought to organize for the enforcement of our prohibition laws, and no man ought to be elected for the legislation or enforcement of laws who is not in sympathy with sobriety, who is not the enemy of intoxicating drink. This is a great, vital, moral question that has to do with the welfare and happiness of untold millions of human beings in this world and the world to come. It is to be hoped that our new President will speak plainly and act wisely and make the people to feel throughout the nation that he is in full sympathy with sobriety, with the enforcement of our prohibition laws, the happiness and prosperity of our people.

Tent Meetings.

It is quite remarkable the peculiar interest people take in tent meetings. Go on a vacant lot in a village, commence driving stobs, stretching ropes, lifting poles and putting up a tent, and the boys gather about and begin to ask questions; the loungers come down and make inquiry; lazy fellows that don't care to find a job will jump in and work with a hearty good will and help to put up the tent, and by night the whole village, or the population of a small town, will be talking about "the tent meeting that is to begin this evening."

The tent is its own advertisement. "What's that tent for?" people will be asking. "Some boys are here from Asbury College and they are going to hold a revival meeting." "Is that so? Well, I must go home and get supper and bring wife and the children down to hear those boys. They say they are very earnest fellows. This town needs warming up." "Well, that's the truth," is the reply, and so it goes, and in a few evenings, for twenty miles around, the automobiles are coming in and the tent is filled.

The singing is lively, the people join in, the children enjoy it; you can hear their little voices ringing out a joyful song. Impressions are being made on them that they will never forget. If the young fellows preach well, the folks say, "That's wonderful for one so young." If he doesn't preach so well, they say, "Oh, he's young yet. He'll make a preacher. Give him time." That's the way people talk about young preachers. It seems everybody likes to hear young beginners preach. There is a freshness, earnestness, and sincerity about them that awakens peculiar interest, sympathy and appreciation.

It will not be long until a little army of Asbury boys, with a number of older evangelists, will be out in the tent work preaching to multitudes of people. We want all THE HERALD readers to become interested in these summer campaigns and to pray earnestly that God may bless the workers and bring in a host of souls. We want the members of The League, especially, to pray, and send your annual dues, $1.00, to Rev. F. H. Larabee, D. D., Wilmore, Ky. We are in need of more tents. Numbers are asking for tents and cannot be supplied. This work has been wonderfully fruitful. Already thousands of souls have been converted, reclaimed or sanctified in these tent meetings. We must press this work with vigor. After all, the salvation of souls is the big thing, the all-important thing. Let's press the battle for souls.

A Remarkable Career.

We were surprised and delighted some days ago, when Judge Porter, of Glasgow, Ky., walked into our humble little domicile in the suburbs of Miami. The Judge, with his family, is spending the winter in Miami; he found our address and came out to see us. Judge Porter is one of the most interesting and delightful gentlemen in all my knowledge. Glasgow is the county seat of Barren county, lying in Southern Kentucky. It is a large and prosperous county. Glasgow is one of the most beautiful and prosperous little cities in the State. I grew up in that county four miles from Glasgow. It has been my privilege to hold a number of revivals in the town since I entered the evangelistic work. I have often thought if I were not vitally connected with THE HERALD and Asbury College I would delight to make my home in Glasgow. There is something so very "homey" in that beautiful old city. The remarkable thrift and growth of the city have not destroyed their good will and the fine spirit of hospitality so characteristic of old Kentucky.

Judge Porter is one of the very finest type of the old time Kentucky gentleman. He has practiced law in Glasgow for sixty years; is now 78 years of age, as straight as the proverbial Indian; he has no need of a walking cane, looks as robust, ruddy and healthful as the best of men at sixty. He has accumulated quite a fortune and is full of the milk of human kindness and generosity.

Judge Porter is one of those men whose presence gives you a fresh courage and a hopeful outlook for life. He takes away unpleasant anticipations of the possibility of a very old age. It is a fine thing to grow old gracefully, to ripen with tenderness, love, and good will toward one's fellowmen. His visit made my memory to turn back to the scenes of my boyhood, and to long to roam again the woods and fields, to swim and fish in the beautiful clear waters of Boyd's Creek and Falling Timber Creek. Those were happy days! I am planning, if I receive sufficient strength, to go back and visit Glasgow. I have a few near and dear relatives and many friends in that town and community.

Rev. J. L. Piercy, on whom I have some very strong claims of love and friendship, is pastor of the Methodist Church in Glasgow. He is one of the finest outputs of Asbury College. He has been asking me to come down and preach for him at the first opportunity, and I am planning to go down, shake hands with the old time friends, ramble through the woods and look upon the beautiful streams that so charged and blessed the days of my early boyhood. May God graciously bless Glasgow and the surrounding country, give them grace and salvation, and bring a host of them home to the Father's house.

With more love than words can ever express to the famous Judge Porter and those dear people, I am, Faithfully,

LAWLESS LAWYERS.

WE clip the following from one of the daily papers. We do not know just how much truth there is in this, but it sounds quite like New York City; it seems to us rather a serious situation when a group of lawyers unite themselves to teach jurors to clear a class of dangerous criminals. It occurs to us that this is open rebellion against the Government, and that Congress ought to be able to pass a law for the punishment of all such lawyers.

We are not surprised at this action of the liquor interests. This country is quite used to lawlessness on the part of the liquor traffic and all classes of men connected with it. It is generally understood that bootleggers have no respect for the law, and are ready to slaughter the officials appointed by the law to arrest them in their criminal career. When men publicly set out to corrupt the courts in order to protect this large class of law violators, it seems to us time for the President of the United States, or his representatives, to take quick action.

We herewith publish the clipping from one of the daily papers:

WORLD SAYS COMMITTEE OF LAWYERS WILL SEEK ACT'S NULLIFICATION.

New York, March 14 (AP).—The New York World tomorrow will say that a committee of lawyers, including four former Assistant United States Attorneys, whose avowed purpose is to educate New York juries so that they will refuse to convict under the Jones law, was organized today. Frederick R. Coudert, Jr., is chairman.

Frederick C. Bellinger, who was an assistant under former United States Attorney Buckner, explained that the Coudert committee hopes to "nullify" the drastic Jones law in the same way this was accomplished to all practical purposes when the Government tried to obtain convictions of night club owners charged with conspiracy.

Federal juries invariably refused to convict in these conspiracy cases and Bellinger said his committee hoped to "educate juries to do the same thing when citizens are tried under the Jones law," which provides a possible penalty of five years in prison and $10,000 fine for all prohibition law violations except possession.

The time has come when all law-abiding citizens should become aroused against the liquor traffic, its emissaries and defenders. Is it possible we have come to a period in our history when we have lawyers who do everything in their power to save from punishment all sorts of criminals, but they boldly declare that they have formed an organization to so corrupt the court that one of the most dangerous classes of criminals shall go unwhipped of justice!

Satan Sentinels the Gateway of Prayer.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE above declaration is verified by every devout soul who seeks to hold communion with the heavenly Father. Satan is not disturbed by the slipshod professor of religion who spends more time with the world than with the Father; but "Satan trembles when he sees the weakest saint upon his knees."

The way to make progress in the kingdom of God, and to count for something in the world, religiously and morally, is to travel on your knees. There is where our moral conflicts are fought out, and where the weakness of the human is made strong in the Divine.

It is said that Andrew Bonar affirmed that he never entered into a season of pure prayer without a fierce battle at the threshold. There is nothing that Satan so dreads as to see the child of God on his knees imploring divine guidance and help. The portal of the prayer chamber is where he stations his strongest forces, not in open attack, but simply diverts the mind and heart from its source of divine strength. We read of a church in Revelation that lost its Christ while busy about the things of the kingdom. It is possible that we become so busy turning the wheels of the machinery of the kingdom that we lose sight of the homage due the King.

Some one has said that "Activities are multiplied that meditation may be ousted, and organizations are increased that prayer may have no chance. Souls may be lost in good works, as surely as in evil ways. The one concern of Satan is to keep the saints from prayer. He fears nothing from prayerless studies, prayerless work, and prayerless religion. He laughs at our toil, mocks at our wisdom, but trembles when we pray."

Dr. Andrew Murray has declared that, "Prayer is the strategical point where Satan watches. If he can succeed in causing us to neglect prayer, he has won, for where communion between God and his people is broken, the true source of life and power is cut off. In how large a measure he has succeeded in causing the Church of Christ to neglect prayer, faithful, constant, prevailing prayer. Prayerlessness shows that we do not value communion with God."

Praying is the one thing we are told that should be the constant habit of the Christian. Luke says, "Men ought always to pray, and not to faint." Prayer is the channel through which divine supplies are furnished. If we cut off the supplies of divine nourishment we shall utterly fail in the race we have undertaken, and the light that is in us shall become darkness.

Daniel valued his prayer habits more than he dreaded the king's decree, for when forbidden to pray to his God he went as aforetime to his house, opened his windows toward Jerusalem, kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God. Why should he fear decrees of an ungodly king when he was in communion with the Father of all creation!

Alexander Whyte, the author of that most excellent book, "Lord, Teach us to Pray," admonishes us not to be in a hurry to get through with our prayer. Take time till you are sure you have the ear of God. Be still before the Lord until you have something to say, then breathe it into the ear and heart of Jesus Christ. Is it true, as S. D. Gordon says, that "Prayer changes things?" Then, whatever your perplexities may be, whatever your disappointments, burdens and heartaches, tell your heavenly Father about them, believing that he hears you, and with the assurance that the "effectual, fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much," rise from your knees to thank God for having undertaken for you. How true it is that, as Emerson says, "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of!"

Dear reader, remember you have not exhausted the promises of God. As some one has said, "In this respect there are trees full of fruit, yet untouched, and fountains flowing copiously, yet untasted. Faith should grow stronger as life goes on, and every day should make us richer from the all-sufficiency of the Forerunner."

Worth Reading.

A few days ago we found in The Herald of Holiness the following contribution which we think is most suggestive and deserves a wide reading. We copy same below:

PAUL SEEKS AN APPOINTMENT.

The following selection was sent to us by Rev. Carleton D. Jones, of Everett, Washington. It is a burlesque upon the application of a modern minister seeking a place of ease rather than a place of opportunity. But underneath the irony, there is a truth which needs to be carefully guarded by the ministry of the Church of the Nazarene. We are not to be place seekers. Some of us have listened to our sainted founder, Dr. Bresee, preach about Garibaldi so often that we were forever spoiled for place seeking. Our business is to preach the truth with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, and to count it our privilege to put as much into the work as possible—not see how much we can draw out. The article is selected and the name of the author is not given. It reads as follows: "Dear Sir and Brothers:

"Doubtless you will recall the invitation you extended to me to come over into Macedonia and help the people of that section. You will pardon me for saying that I am somewhat surprised that you should expect a man of my standing in the church seriously to consider a call on such meager information.

"There are a number of things I should like to learn before giving my decision, and I would appreciate your dropping me a line, addressing me at Troas.

"First of all, I should like to know if Macedonia is a circuit or a station. This is important, as I have been told that once a man begins on a circuit it is well nigh impossible to secure employment in station work. If Macedonia embraces more than one preaching place, I may as well tell you frankly that I cannot think of accepting the call.

"There is another item that was overlooked in your brief and somewhat sudden invitation. No mention was made of the salary I was to receive. While it is true that I am not preaching for money, there are certain things that need to be taken into account. I have been through a long and expensive course of training; in fact, I may state with reasonable pride, that I am a Sanhedrin man—the only one in the ministry today.

"The day is past when you may expect a man to rush into a new field without some idea of the support he is to receive. I have worked myself up to a good position in the Asiatic field and to take a drop and lose my grade would be serious. Nor could I afford to swap 'dollar for dollar' as the saying is among us apostles.

"Kindly get the good Macedonian brethren together and see what you can do in the way of support. You have told me nothing about Macedonia beyond the implication that the place needs help. What are social advantages? Is the church well organized?

"I recently had a fine offer to return to Damascus at an increase of salary, and am told that I made a very favorable impression on the church at Jerusalem. If it will help me with the board at Macedonia, you might mention these facts, and also some of the brethren in Judea have been heard to say that if I kept on, in a few years I might have anything in the gift of the church. For recommendations write to the Rev. Simon Peter, D.D., at Jerusalem. I will say that I am a first class mixer and especially strong on argumentative preaching. If I accept the call, I must stipulate for two months' vacation and the privilege of taking an occasional lecture tour.

"My lecture on 'Over the Wall in a Basket' is worth two drachma of any man's money. Sincerely yours,

"PAUL."

Radiant Living.

REV. C. M. GRIFFETH.

SUBMERGED IN GOD.

Hearts become radiant when they live in the presence of God.

Some conceive of God as a glorified Being living far away upon some throne in the high sky. But to a radiant heart there is no farawayness about the Infinite Spirit. "He is within and without and around about."

God, as Spirit, is infinite.

There is no place where God is not. From beyond the vast boundaries of the most distant universe down into the electrons of an atom, is the presence of the Infinite. As the Psalmist in his realization of the everywhere-ness of God sang: "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit, and whither shall I flee from thy presence?"

Like a fish living in the vastness of the Pacific, so are we living in the midst of Infinite Spirit. The Apostle Paul very forcefully expressed the fact that the realm of our life is God when he exclaimed: "In him we live and move and have our being."

We speak of God within the heart. And we speak correctly. But we should also be aware that we are in the midst of him as we are in the midst of a bright, warm, sunny atmosphere when walking through a field of daisies under the beaming sun of a summer's day. Oh, how I have felt the presence of God on every hand!

Early one morning, as I stood out in a field under the vast expanse of the vaulted blue, I lifted up my hands, not as we sometimes say, "toward" God, but, as I felt, "through" God. Surrounded and submerged as I was in the fragrant atmosphere of the early morning I was impressed with the everywhere-ness of God. As far out as eye could reach, as far up as mind could pierce, was the unseen, yet vitally present Infinite Spirit—and there was I, submerged in him!

Then there is the sin of omission, leaving off the things we should do. "He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not to him it is sin."

THE REMEDY FOR SIN.

Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." 1 Tim. 1:15.

"As many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God." John 1:12.

"If we confess our sins he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

"In whom we have redemption through his blood the forgiveness of sins." Eph. 1:7.

"Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood." Rev. 1:5.

"Jesus—that he might sanctify the people with his own blood suffered without the gate." Heb. 13:12.

Forgiveness of sins deals with the sins we have committed either by transgression or omission, and sanctification deals with the sin which we inherited, removing and cleansing away the sin principle, making the heart clean and holy.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." Matt. 5:8.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Greetings to the cousins one and all from the land of ice and snow. Have been getting The Pentecostal Herald for a few months and think it a very good paper. Now what I want to say to the cousins is this, I have a quantity of tracts written by Bro. Geo. W. Fuller, of Asbury College, Ky., entitled the Second Coming of Christ, or The Eleventh Hour Gospel. Now I will gladly mail one of these 10-page tracts to the first 50 of the cousins who write me giving name and address. Of course a friendly note along with it will be very much appreciated as well; so come on now, who will be the lucky ones? I know of nothing more important than being ready for the coming of Jesus, and this tract is the best on the subject I have ever read.

Christian love to all.

Paul Gardner.
Rt. 1, Bellaire, Mich.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a girl from Michigan and would like to join your happy band of boys and girls. My grandmother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to the Church of the Nazarene almost every Sunday. I am about five feet, two inches tall, and my weight is 111 pounds. I have blue eyes, dark wavy hair and am fourteen years old. I am in my first year of High School. Dorothy M. Shaw, I guess your name to be May. William H. Stabe, I guess your name to be Harry. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with J and ends with E, and has four letters in it. I will write to any one who guesses it. I hope Mr. W. B. isn't home when this letter arrives. I will answer all letters received from the cousins.

Wilma J. Whitlock.
40 Mechanic St., Pontiac, Mich.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How are you and the cousins getting along? Thank you for printing my other letter. One of the cousins wrote to me. I am ten years old. My birthday is April 29. Have I a twin? If so please write to me. I see lots of letters from Kentucky. There aren't many letters from boys. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My teacher is Miss Erma Blades. I go to Woods School. It has been closed two weeks on account of flu. I will now close, hoping Mr. Wastebasket is out visiting when this arrives.

Ina Cummins.
Rt. 4, Box 54, Falmouth, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Ohio girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am writing for the first time. I am twelve years old and in the sixth grade of school. My hair is brown and my eyes are gray. My father is a Methodist preacher. We take The Pentecostal Herald. Page ten is the one I like. Can any one guess my middle name? It begins with V and ends with A, and has eight letters.

Alice V. Guiler.
Dorset, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Ohio boy join your happy band of boys and girls? I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My hair is brown and my eyes are gray. I am nine years old and in the fourth grade. I weigh eighty pounds. This is my first letter to The Pentecostal Herald. My father is a Methodist preacher.

Halford R. Guiler.
Dorset, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I am again and hope my letter is printed. I have written twice before and only one of my letters was printed. How are you and all the cousins? I have been sick and wasn't able to get out for a week. I still love Jesus with all my heart. Pray for me that I may do his will. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with H, and has nine letters in it. I sure am glad so many of the cousins are Christians and hope the rest will come to Jesus before it is too late. I want to say a few words to the ones that are not saved. Why don't you come to Jesus now? You will have a great many excuses, but dear friend, did you know not one will count on judgment day? If you are not saved at that day you will cry for the rocks and the mountains to fall on you and hide you from the face of him that sits on the throne, but no power can move them and you will hear those awful words, "Depart, I never knew you." Oh, how sad that will be. Please give Jesus your heart, is my cry. Cousins write to me.

Hildred E. Cummins.
Rt. 4, Box 54, Falmouth, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? My parents take The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I have light brown hair, blue eyes, light complexion, am five feet one inch tall, and am fourteen years of age. Can any one guess my middle name? It begins with O and ends with L, and has four letters in it. As this is my first time to write to The Herald I will close with love to all of the cousins.

David Dawson.
Attus, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little Kentucky boy fourteen years old. I have been reading The Herald for quite a while. My father takes it. Just as soon as I see it I hunt up page ten to read the letters of the boys and girls. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am a member of the First Baptist Church. My initials are J. C. W. Who can guess my middle name? I am in the seventh grade, going to school every day. I have no mother. My mother died two years ago and I am working hard to stay in school. I would love to get some of the boy and girl letters. Every one I get I will answer them. I am sending a prayer: O Lord our heavenly father, we are down before thee with bowed head and uplifting hand asking you to have mercy on us. Go with us and stand by us for ever and ever. Amen.

Jessie C. Wickliff.
Greenville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I thought I would take a little chat with the cousins. Slip over and let me in. Thank you very much. How are you, Aunt Bettie? I am fine these days. I have had the flu and I sure hated to miss school on account of it. I am well now. I hope you cousins haven't been sick any this year. Who is my twin? My birthday is September 6. I am in the fifth grade and like my teacher fine. My teacher is Mr. Wilbur Hoskinson. I like to go to Sunday school fine but hardly ever get to go. My Sunday school teacher is Miss Kincheloe. Dorothy M. Shaw, I guess your middle name to be May. Am I right? R. Edson Crowl, I guess your first name to be Robert. Am I right? My age is between eleven and fifteen. Aunt Bettie, I would like to see you. I will close before I take up too much space. I hope Mr. W. B. is milking when this arrives. With love and best wishes to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.

Hilda Olena Lockard.
Woodrow, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My father takes The Pentecostal Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I am eleven years young, and in the sixth grade at school. I go to Sunday school every Sunday, if I am not sick. Darleen Hamshire, I guess your first name to be Ruth. If I am right don't forget your promise. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with an R and ends with F. Who guesses it I will write to them. This is my first letter and I would like to see it in print.

Ella R. Johnson.
Rt. 2, Greensboro, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been wanting to write for a long time but I have been sick with the flu for four or five days; also busy with my music and expression. I am a girl twelve years old and in the seventh grade. I have brown hair, blue eyes, and am five feet and three inches tall. Who has my birthday, Nov. 23? I went year before last to the State field meet and won second in the declamation contest. My father takes The Herald, and as soon as it comes I always read page ten first. It certainly is a fine paper. I hope very much to see this letter in print as it is my first one. I will close with a riddle. What was the president elect's name twenty years ago? Whoever guesses it I will write them a long letter.

Mae E. Wells.
Mt. Olivet, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Ohio girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I was nine years old September 22. I go to the Pleasant Hill M. E. Sunday school.

Wava Irene Miller.
Rt 1, Box 50, Stanleyville, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: How do you do? I'm from Iowa. I am sixteen years old and a junior in high school. I am saved and sanctified through the blood of Jesus. I want to live for him. I go to the Church of the Nazarene and am the president of the young people's society, and like my work very well. I love music, and never did hear enough. I wish the girls around my age would write to me. In the following poem I have written my testimony. Pray for me that I may live it.

My Jesus I Love Thee.

My Jesus I love thee
I know thou art mine,
For thou hast been crucified
To save all mankind.

Oh Jesus I love thee,
To thee I will prove
To do my best all the time,
To cause thy work to move.

I will try to be cheerful
To cheer up all sadness,
Pleasant at all times,
For that's the cure for madness.

Oh, Jesus I love thee,
To thee I give my life,
And if thou will help me
I'll serve thee with my might.

Oh, Jesus I love thee,
Thy holy commandments keep,
All stirred up for holiness,
And not to go to sleep.

Marie Jahnke.
1122 N. Lodge St., Iowa City, Iowa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little Ohio girl; was twelve years old Jan. 21, 1929. I love to read page ten in The Herald. I go to school nearly every day. This is my first letter and if I see it in print I will write again.

Eloise Winifred Clark.
Rt. 1, Warsaw, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been a reader of The Herald for about two years and have at last decided to write to the cousins. Wake up, North Carolina boys and girls. I do not see many N. C. letters in the dear old Herald. I am a member of the Elm City church. How do you cousins like the story of "The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston"? I like it fine. I like to read page ten also. As this is my first letter I must close. I hope that Mr. W. B. is working his plant-bred when this arrives. Some of you cousins write me and I will answer all letters that I receive.

Edna G. Robards.
Rt. 1, Elm City, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: It has been a long time since I wrote to The Herald. So I thought I would write again. We take The Herald and I sure do enjoy reading it. I have a little book here that my Aunt gave me for Christmas. The name of it is "Come to Jesus." I wish some of the cousins could read it. I am a member of the Missionary Baptist Church and have been since I was twelve years old and I am fifteen now. I wish some of the cousins would write to me. I would answer all letters received. The first one that writes to me I will send my picture. I hope Mr. W. B. is milking the cows when this letter arrives, as I wish to see it in print.

Gladys Robards.
Rt. 1, Elm City, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I was fourteen years of age Jan. 17, 1929. Who has my birthday? I go to Sunday school every Sunday and prayer meeting every Tuesday and Friday nights, and every Sunday night when there isn't preaching. Our pastor is Bro. Charles Johnson, of West Virginia. Some of you cousins ask what was our favorite book. I think that everybody's favorite book ought to be the Holy Bible. Mine is the Bible and "Beautiful Girlhood." I am a Christian. I got saved October 7, 1928, and sanctified October 8, 1928. Esther Minor I sure did enjoy reading your letter. Some of you say you belong to the church, but are not saved. How can you belong to the church and not be saved? I wish you would please read Hebrew 12:14, then read John 14, where it says, "In my Father's house are many mansions." Glory. I now own a mansion in the sky, and you will wish you had one by and by. I hope Mr. W. B. is out riding. I would like to hear from any of the cousins and will answer any letters I receive.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old and in the fifth grade. I have brown eyes and brown hair. I am a preacher's daughter and go to our church every time we have a meeting. My mother is my Sunday school teacher. I am an evangelical. We take The Herald and I read page ten. Who has my birthday? July 2. If you have, please write to me. How many of you have a hobby? My favorite hobby is reading and orthography. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. Wayne L. Warrior, I guess your name to be Lovelle. If I am right, do not forget your promise. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with R and ends with A. Whoever guesses it I will write a letter to them. I hope Mr. W. B. is gone to camp meeting when this arrives.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I seldom see a letter from New York State in the good old Pentecostal Herald. I have been wondering if you haven't room for a little northern New York girl. I am twelve years old and live on a farm only a few miles from the foot-hills of the Adirondack Mountains and the Canadian border. The M. E.

Church is only about a half mile from our home. Brother Kirkness is our pastor. We like him very much. We have a Junior League and he gives a fine talk to the children every Sunday morning. We had a revival in our church in November. The report was published in The Herald a few weeks ago. Father and mother take The Herald and think it is the best paper published. Daddy sent in about twenty new subscriptions a few weeks ago. I go to day school and am in the sixth grade. Miss Miller is my teacher and I like her fine. I have two sisters and one brother. One of my sisters and my brother are twins. Their names are Gerald and Geraldine. My other sister goes to high school, also teaches a class in the Sunday school. We go to Mooers and Brushton camp meeting every year and enjoy the good old fashioned gospel preaching. I want to grow up to be a worker for Jesus. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope Aunt Bettie will have room for it. I will close hoping to hear from some of the cousins soon.

REQUEST FOR PRAYER.

A. Burgess: "Please pray that God may give us a great outpouring of his Spirit upon our meetings."

JESUS HEARS OUR CRY.

One by one we cross the river,
One by one we are ferried o'er,
And the boatman still is watching
For some one along the shore.
Some are ready for the lifeboat,
And as they launch out in the deep,
They are beckoning to their loved ones,
"May angels o'er thee their loving watch keep."
Some are drifting, idly drifting,
And the lifeboat passes by,
Far, far out in the deep water,
Who will hear their faintest cry?
When the sailors gave up hope,
And their boat began to fill,
Jesus walked upon the water
Saying, "Peace, Peace be still."
So it is upon life's Ocean,
With the billows dashing high,
And our little craft is sinking,
He will hear our faintest cry.

GOLDONNA, LOUISIANA.

Editor Pentecostal Herald:

I will write you good folks a letter to let you know how I stand in this world. I was converted at a camp meeting over in Atlanta, Tex., this last August the 13th, 1928, and have been trying to live a Christian life ever since. The people out there got hold of an evangelist to carry on the meeting for them and help them in it. His name was J. E. Aycock, and he is the best minister I believe that I ever heard preach in my life. And I think he will be with them again a year from this coming summer. I have some good Christian kinfolks out around Atlanta and Queen City, Tex. One of my aunts named Synthia Baker, who lives out from Queen City was the woman that sent in a subscription for my father, O. A. Morgan. I like the paper just fine and think it is the best paper that I have ever read, and I like the Cousin's Page too, because there are a lot of interesting letters in it. If you want to you may publish as much of this letter as you want to. I will close wishing you all the best of luck in your line of work—Christian work, I guess would sound better.

FALLEN ASLEEP

BAYLEY.

On Nov. 28, 1928, the death angels visited our home and took from us our dear husband and father, C. E. Bayley. He was born Dec. 28, 1850, died Nov. 28, 1928, age 76 years and 11 days. He was married to Lena W. Funk, June 14, 1871. To this union was born ten children, three preceding him in death, seven living: Cleve and Chas., Jr., Hartford, Mrs. W. F. Gates, San Gabriel, Calif., Mrs. Jacob Hoover, Rockport, Ind., Mrs. B. H. Bartlett, Mrs. M. B. Foster, Rumsey, Ky., Mrs. Beat Norris, Narrows, Ky., and his widow, all left to mourn his death. He professed faith in Christ at the age of 20 and joined the Clear Run Baptist Church, where he remained a faithful member until God called him to his home he has prepared for those who love and serve him. He was a kind husband and loving father, and will be missed by all who knew him, but our loss is heaven's gain. We do not mourn as those who have no hope. Some day we will meet him on that happy golden shore where no more tears nor heartaches will ever come. Our heart aches to think he is gone, but only a few more days and we will see him.
His daughter,
Georgia Norris.

A CONVERTED JEW.

Nearly twenty years ago the hand of God fell upon me in an unusual manner and yet in a most usual manner, like most "lukewarm" seekers, I had to be "forced" into the vineyard. I can best compare my case with that of the Apostle Paul who fought God by fighting God's chosen people. Paul was in public life and so was I. It had not quite appeared to me that one cannot serve two masters and do justice to any. I had not considered the admonition to "Seek ye first the kingdom of God" and consequently I went on day by day seeking to amass for myself "riches upon earth" where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but God is not slack, neither is his hand shortened, and no matter where I went or what I did the Almighty kept close at my heels as he always does when he has a place for us in the kingdom or some particular work for us to perform.

Like Jonah I tried to dodge my duty as I was still "in the world," and they lured me on and on until God got tired of waiting for me to get busy and he naturally let the whale swallow me by taking virtually all I had—my home, business and close to forty thousand dollars slipped through my fingers over night. It humbled me and I began to see that God was truly Almighty. I was helpless and, like most folks, I turned to God after all other sources failed. I began to realize how little man is and how great God is. The weapon was so powerful and the job so complete that it could not be compared to the accomplishment of man. It wasn't a half job in the slightest sense of the word. You know that God does not do things by "halves." "He spoke the word and it was so," and I quickly realized that "man doth not live by bread alone," but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Like most earnest seekers after the truth I got busy running from pillar to post in a vain effort to get connected up with the right church. It had not then occurred to me that "this is the temple of the living God" and that the word is very nigh unto them that will "hear and do" it. I went first to this church and then to that one—each claimed to be the only church recognized by God, and each time the guardian angel led me away unsatisfied, and still seeking for that well of "living waters" that springeth up into eternal life, the water that is so satisfying that whoso drinketh thereof shall never thirst.

Finally in my frantic effort to "join" a church I was persuaded to be baptized in Bill Jones' church by "sprinkling," and later on Sam Smith induced me to be "buried" under the water and join his church. This was all a novelty to a new beginner and the enemy had his eye on me. Every once in a while some "sanctified" saint would appear and endeavor to prove to me that I was lost unless I joined his church and became baptized by a "Commissioned servant" of God. I was truly in the wilderness. I had crossed the Red Sea; I tried to leave Egypt behind but in that sandy, dry wilderness I continued to ask for the "water out of the rock." I read every tract and Bible that came my way. I read the Catholic Bible. I read what was considered the Protestant Bible. I read the Koran and also the Greek. One particular faith specialized on this thing and another would specialize on that thing. What was I to do in my bewilderment? The Book of all books says that "he who runs might read" and that it is so easy that a fool need not err to walk therein. I would have been alright but the enemy kept on sowing "tares" and I became confused until one day while strolling down a busy thoroughfare in a large city I saw a banner displayed over a mission entrance which told me that a Big Revival was going on inside. Somehow I picked up enough courage to enter. It wasn't the form of a church I had been used to patronizing. There was no colored glass in the windows, no tall spires on the roof, no bells to toll church chimes and no lobby to receive one upon entering, no awe-inspiring images within the vesture and no formal ushers to accompany me to my seat. It was just a "place to meet" in a large store with "ram-shackled" windows and doors; the atmosphere inside was not incensed with perfume and the patrons within were clad in simple garments. They wore lines of wearied life. Some spoke of former successes with the usual tell-tale failures that come from lives of debauchery and crime. They were tired, some were dirty and still others were under the influence of liquor and drugs. It was pathetic and yet disgusting to note this mass of human wreckage. I at once wondered how any human being could fall so low as some of these, and yet Christ said that he came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance. The passage kept running through my mind, "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh on the heart." I felt fully convinced that this Bible verse was being fulfilled right there in that scrubby looking old mission hall. It proved to me that God is no respecter of persons but will acknowledge all who diligently seek him. At that meeting God literally spoke with man. It was my last step to the true light that "lighteth every man that cometh into the world." Before things had gone very far real pentecost prevailed. New light continued to follow and I at last became a "Converted Jew."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IV.—April 28, 1929.

Subject.—The Suffering Servant of Jehovah. Isaiah 53-1-12.

Golden Text.—With his stripes we are healed. Isaiah 53:5.

Time.—About B. C. 700.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—Isaiah 53 stands alone in the literature of the world. However, the chapter should begin at the thirteenth verse of the preceding chapter. This is the opinion of the best critics. The chapter stands out by itself in bold relief as a picture of the suffering Savior of men. The unbelieving Jews have tried hard to make this chapter refer to the sufferings of their people in Babylonish captivity; but they attempted the impossible. It would be easier to believe with the Chinaman that whoever wrote that chapter was an eye-witness of the things he describes. The poorest and best Bible critics for ages have been unanimous in ascribing this chapter to the suffering Christ. It belongs to him, and cannot refer to any other being who ever walked the earth.

But how did Isaiah come to know about this 700 years before it happened? The destructive critics who deny all things supernatural can give us no explanation. They say that it was written by a second Isaiah three to four hundred years later; but how did that other Isaiah know about it two or three hundred years before Jesus was born? They would outdo the unbelieving Jews, make it history, and with the Jews apply it to the suffering Jews in Babylon; but, again, it is impossible to make the application. There is no similarity between the captivity in Babylon and the description given by Isaiah of the suffering Christ. But how did Isaiah find out about it? Deny the supernatural, and you may guess as long as "the lamp of life holds out to burn"; but you will never find a solution that solves the problem. Admit the supernatural, and all is clear to him that believeth. This fifty-third chapter is "God-breathed," inspired by the Holy Spirit. Or, if you like it better, Isaiah was inspired by the Holy Spirit. He writes as though he saw the entire transaction in a vision that to him was as plain as reality itself. Thus it had to be, or he could never have so written.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. Who hath believed our report?—Read Chapter 52:13-15 as introductory to these notes. This question is prophetic. The Jews did not believe that the prophecy of Isaiah referred to Jesus Christ; nor did they believe the preaching of John the Baptist concerning him, or his own words concerning himself. No doubt the words refer to the Jews of Isaiah's day, and to those of the time of Christ.

2. The arm of the LORD.—This means Jesus Christ himself. The expression is figurative.

3. For he shall grow up.—He stands for Christ. As a tender plant.—As a wee babe. A root out of a dry ground.—He sprang out of Judah when the nation was, religiously, as dry as a parched desert. He hath no form nor comeliness.—Isaiah pictures him at the time of his passion. No beauty that we should desire him.—The thorn-crown is on his brow; his face is beaten and swollen; his beard is matted with blood and spittle.

4. He is despised and rejected of men.—"Let him be crucified, let him be crucified: away with him; it is not fit that such a fellow should live." So cried the unbelieving Jews. A man or sorrows, and acquainted with grief.—He was the most broken-hearted man that ever walked the earth—died of a broken heart on Calvary's cross. We hid . . . our faces from him.—This must refer to the grief-stricken mother and other loved ones who could not bear to look at him in the hour of his torture. Despised.—It seems almost impossible that men should despise such an one as he was; but they did then, and do still. I was conversing with a miserable, dirty old sinner some little time ago, whose face assumed a nasty snarl every time the name of Jesus was uttered. Why? Echo answers, Why? Because his heart was as vile as the heart of a sinner could be; and the very thought of the "Crystal Christ" condemned him. We esteemed him not.—Referring again to the Christ-rejecting Jews of his day.

4. Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows.—I would not like to confine this to bearing our little illnesses—our physical ailments. I think Isaiah saw him burdened with the griefs and heartaches of the entire human race. This is a sad, heart-broken, bleeding world: Jesus came to carry its woes. It was he who said: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Peter says: "Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you." Stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.—Well might Isaiah add the two words did esteem. Men in his day thought the wrath of God was upon them; some warped theology so teaches in our day. But the Father was never angry with the Son; nor did He ever punish him. Men afflicted him. He suffered for our sins. Of his own he had none for which to suffer. He suffered, the just for the unjust, the innocent for the guilty.

5. The prophet piles up his language: He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities.—Vicarious suffering, one suffering in the place of another. The chastisement of our peace was upon him.—"The chastisement by which our peace is effected," "that by which we are brought into a state of peace and favor with God." With his stripes we are healed.—Let it refer to physical healing, if you so wish; but its meaning is far deeper and better: Herein is soul healing, salvation from sin.

6. All we like sheep have gone astray.—That pictures the entire race of mankind. We are as foolish and as stubborn as sheep. We have gone our own way. Thank God, help has been laid upon him who is mighty to save even unto the uttermost all who come unto God by him.

7. He opened not his mouth.—Amid all the torture of scourging and crucifixion he never complained, but went to his death as quietly as a lamb to the slaughter. He made no more fuss about dying for us than a sheep makes about being sheared—none at all. It was a glad sacrifice of himself.

8. He was taken from prison and from judgment.—This translation is very obscure. The Revised Version seems better: "By oppression and judgment he was taken." There was a mock trial, but there was no show of justice in it. Who shall declare his generation?—This passage is difficult. Some have translated it: "Who can describe the wickedness of the men of this time." No doubt they were desperately wicked, but the translation seems far-fetched. Dr. Clarke thinks that the reference is to the custom of that time, that some one should precede the one going to his execution, crying out for some one to declare the innocence of the culprit, if such could be found. This Jesus did not have. The interpretation seems reasonable; but I cannot vouch for the truth of it.

9. He made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death.—That looks like a contradiction; but Bishop Lowth's translation may help us: "And his grave was appointed with the wicked; But with the rich man was his tomb: Although he had done no wrong, Neither was there any guile in his mouth."

No doubt, the Romans expected to have him buried among others whom they crucified; but in the providence of God he lay in Joseph's new tomb.

10. It pleased the LORD to bruise him.—The Father willing gave up his Son to be a sin-offering for the salvation of men. His soul.—His life. His seed.—Those whom he shall redeem from sin. He shall prolong his days.—In his followers. His Church shall live.

11. Shall be satisfied.—His atoning sacrifice shall not be a failure, but he shall be satisfied with the results.

12. This verse hardly needs comment. No matter how the great and the strong may oppose his kingdom, he is going to succeed in winning men to himself. He was crucified between two thieves. When he was being crucified, he cried to his Father: "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do."

This great chapter is a portrayal of nearly the entire "incarnation, preaching, humiliation, rejection, sufferings, death, atonement, resurrection, and mediation of Jesus Christ."

BREAD OF LIFE BOX

Contents: 115 slices, made of the finest of Wheat, mixed with the Water of Life and enriched with the sincere Milk of the Word. Unleavened, buttered on both sides, and richly spread with honey out of the Rock. Will not get stale. Good for your spiritual health. Try one.

A box containing 115 small cards, with a choice scripture neatly printed on each side. 230 texts in all. Beautiful box, stamped in gold also printed directions how to use. Excellent for a gift box.

Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer. 1 Tim. 4:4, 5. Alas, how few meals eaten by Christians are thus sanctified. Some of them ask a blessing on their food, but very seldom do we find one who reads the Word at meals. The Bread Box is an excellent way to introduce obedience to this precept.

Pass the box around at the beginning of a meal. Let each person take out a card. Then let each in turn read the verses. It will be noticed that the two verses on each card bear a definite relation to each other and teach an important truth. The order in which they are read often brings out this truth more forcibly. As each person reads their verses it is profitable that the others present tell where the verses are found.

Another excellent way is for each person to read one or two words of the text and let some one else quote it from memory.

Let one read a verse and another quote a verse on the same subject.

Let each person memorize the two verses during the meal and quote them at its close.

Pass the box around in your Sunday School class the same as at a meal. And as the verses are read discuss the truths contained in them.

Explain that it is just as important to feed on the Word in order to grow and be strong spiritually as to eat our daily meals in order to grow strong physically.

Most interesting and profitable young people's meeting may be had by using the Bread Box in some of the ways suggested.

In the home when friends and neighbors are gathered together pass around the Bread Box. How much better and more profitable than a "cup of tea"!

Keep one in your bedroom. Eat a slice for your meditation while dressing and going about your daily duties. Eat another slice before retiring to quiet your worries and give you a good night's rest.

Use the Bread Box freely but do not let it displace the Bible. You need the whole Word of God, for all was given that you might "Acquaint now thyself with HIM, and be at peace."—Job. 22:21.

Price, 50c each; 3 for $1.00.

THE BUSY SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER

Needs a lesson help that will enable him or her to teach the lesson effectively, and at the same time not have to spend hours getting these truths together. You will find such help in Arnold's Commentary. The deep, sacred truths of the Bible are emphasized in every lesson, and there is help for the adult, the intermediate, junior and primary teacher. We have a few copies of this most excellent commentary left; the net price of it is $1.00, and we are offering to close these out at 75c each. There is just one quarter of the Sunday school year gone, and you can avail yourself of this valuable lesson help for the remainder of the year at the remarkably low rate of 8 1/3c per month. Where can you obtain anything else so reasonable, and at the same time half so good. Send your order by return mail so as to get the full benefit of this commentary, the most spiritual on the market, for the next nine months.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM.

A few years ago, a pastor of a large Methodist Church in the North, who is noted for his evangelistic success, gave this incident: "Among the 213 received into the church was a man 79 years old. He was won by my walking into his house on his 79th birthday and telling him God had sent me for his soul. All a-tremble, he called out, 'Mother, mother, the preacher says he has come for my soul. Mother, you know our house has always been the home of Methodist preachers, but this is the first one that ever come for my soul.' God got it that day. A few weeks ago the phone announced this man was dying and urged me to come quick. Standing by his bed he pulled me down and whispered with his failing breath, 'I could not die without thanking you again for coming after my soul that day.' A million people are waiting for us to come after their souls this year. We can have them if we will go after them. 'Where there's a will, there's a way.'"

But don't let us forget that personal evangelism is a matter that concerns laymen as well as preachers. The early Methodists were all evangelists in practice. After hearing Billy Sunday preach, a prominent banker said to a friend, with deep emotion: "Last night I went to hear Billy Sunday. He said there were some people who considered themselves Christians, but if they should get to heaven they would have a mighty lonesome time of it. They would not find a friend or other person there to welcome them for whose salvation they had been responsible. I am one of that class. If I should go to heaven today I could not find a person there whom I had asked to become a Christian. But if God will permit me to live another week I promise you there will be those whom I have asked to accept Christ and to meet me in heaven."

A rich banker, but a spiritual pauper! Alas! how many are there like him! But this man was true to his pledge, became an enthusiastic personal worker, organized a band of workers, and many heard the call to a Christian life.

REGARDING PROHIBITION.

Declarations of President Hoover in his inaugural address regarding prohibition and its enforcement and observance, and his implications in favor of total abstinence, form, in the opinion of Dr. Ernest C. Cherrington, general secretary of the World League Against Alcoholism, the greatest pronouncement ever made by the head of a nation on a moral reform movement.

"Inauguration of Herbert Hoover as President of the United States means," Dr. Cherrington says, "that prohibition has been put by the chief executive of this nation among the most important considerations in his official program. Not only may one say that President Hoover is dry, or that he favors prohibition. His declarations go much further than that, and commit him to the making of prohibition's success a major consideration."

"The President has gone to the fundamentals. He upholds the principle of prohibition; he insists that the Federal Government shall enforce it; he wants to find out why it has not been better enforced, and what steps may be taken to obtain that better enforcement; he reminds certain recalcitrant states that they are neglecting their responsibility in common with the Federal Government for enforcement; he urges good citizens not to align themselves with the criminals who buy, sell and consume illegal liquors."

"One could hardly ask more of this executive who was elected in a campaign where prohibition enforcement was a definite issue. But Herbert Hoover volunteers even more. He emphasizes the obligation of the citizen; he also stresses education as a means of informing the people as to the evils that exist and the ways by which such evils can be removed."

"The churches of the United States, who have always been prime movers in moral and social reform, and under whose direction the prohibition fights of the past have been staged, may well rejoice over the present situation in regard to American prohibition. The great victory of prohibition here means that ultimately all the nations of the earth will banish alcoholism, which is the chief foe of all the things which the church stands for."

Mothers.

There is just off the press a little booklet, the title of which is "Mothers," by Rev. B. C. Gamble. Hundreds far and near heard it just as a radio address. Many wept as they listened. Some wrote: "I will pay any price to get that message." The result of insistent demand was its publication.

Mothers, fathers, you should send your children a copy. Sons and daughters why not send mother a copy? Price, 25c each. Write The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

IT WILL HOLD YOU SPELL-BOUND.

We miss many of the rich things in life because we don't know about them. "Remarkable Conversions," by H. C. Morrison, is one of the great books—full of rich things. The chapter on "My Arrest and Rescue" is the story of Dr. Morrison's conversion. You will weep and rejoice when you read it. Every sentence in the book is interesting and helpful, but for the good it will mean to your own soul, order a copy, if you don't read anything but the chapter mentioned above. The price is only $1.00, and after having read the book we believe you will say it is the best $1.00 investment you ever made.

"MODERNISM WITH THE MASK OFF"
Is just what the title suggests. This booklet ought to be read by every preacher, every school teacher and by every high school scholar in the land.

S. A. Danford, D.D., says: "You certainly have taken the mask off, I agree with all your findings and pray the Lord's blessings upon the book and upon you."
Rev. J. W. Godwin, D.D., says: "I have read the Booklet by Rev. W. G. Bennett entitled 'Modernism with the Mask Off.' Rev. Bennett has surely torn the task off from modernism so the common people can see and understand the issue. His book is filled with facts, clear and convincing arguments, backed with common sense. It will please the ordinary reader and prove a great blessing to all."

NOTICE TO THE HOLINESS PEOPLE OF AMERICA.

A great rally of all the holiness people of America is being planned, to be held from May 7 to 12, of this year at one of the great centers in our country, namely, Asbury College, Wilmore Ky. It will be the occasion of the Annual Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness.

We desire, however, that it shall be, in addition to this business feature, a great general rallying of representatives from every unit of the Holiness Movement and from every part of the country.

Let us have one of those general rallies that lends inspiration and impetus to the whole work of spreading Scriptural holiness.

We earnestly hope that all Associations and Camp Meetings, also holiness churches and missions, will plan to have representatives at this meeting.

A splendid program with a large number of the most representative holiness men of the country is already in preparation.

Board and room will be furnished by the college for the nominal sum of $1.00 per day to all guests.

AFTER THE ELECTION, WHAT?

Julia Moore Evans.

Three months since our great victory for the forces of righteousness. I wonder how many of us are just basking in this triumph. We are exhorted to "forget the things which are behind and press forward to the mark for the prize of the high calling which is in Christ Jesus."

I feel assured that God gave the victory, largely in answer to prayer. However, I believe many Christians went to the very water's edge in moulding public sentiment against the evils of rum and Romanism, but God was there to part the waves and allow us to go over dry-shod to a mighty triumph.

But now, three months later, what are we doing to make our nation really Christian? It seems to be the very stones are crying out for a mighty revival. Even secular authorities agree that we are on the verge of a dire something, which they can neither analyze nor define. And in their blindness and groping, they suggest "old-fashion Revival." It seems to me that it is a case of "the children of this world being wiser than the children of light."

Our country is prosperous beyond the dreams of the most optimistic. Learning has increased and all over the land church spires point toward the sky. It seems to me the Church is organized within an inch of its life—and I would not away with organization—but Paul's word "having a form but denying the power" might apply. Possibly every atom of our machinery is necessary, and I am praying not to be censorious—but without power from on high it is just machinery.

If there is a love in my heart, next to those nearest and dearest, it is for the Methodist Church and our branch of it. My whole nature has thrilled with the very name since I learned my A B C's from The Nashville Advocate when each copy was held too sacred for the flames. Even now when printing has increased, and family funds too, I swallow hard every time I consign one to the fire.

Now this Church—the authorities—have called us to "protracted meetings" closing at Easter. Their order is not arbitrary, for each pastor seems to have large freedom, and I believe a great door has opened to us. But Paul can plant, Apollos water, yet only God can give the increase. Only God can make these 'meetings' real revivals. The veil of the temple was rent, a new and living Way to God and his mercies! We can enter the very Holy of Holies with our plea for a great spiritual awakening, pleading nothing but the merits of our Savior, who is at God's right hand interceding for us! If my home and my Church and my nation are revived, I believe the Great Commission will be fully obeyed in my life-time. Let us gather all these into our hearts and bear them to a throne of grace in importunate, faithful and forgiving prayer, and as sure as God is living he will give the increase. I am willing to covenant with any to pray clear through to victory at any hour of the day or night. May we bring our country to a mightier salvation through prayer and meditation in God's Word.

The Choruses, Solos and Duets you are looking for. "Crown him King of the Ages," and "He Arose, Hallelujah." Two great Lenten and Easter DISREGARD OF THE COMMANDMENTS.

By The Editor.

For one, do not believe in the building of million dollar churches. No Protestant church ought to cost $500,000. I know of a beautiful church in the city of Louisville costing about $200,000 with very excellent and ample provisions for a large Sunday school.

Jesus Christ did not say "go into a part of the world and spend vast sums of money on expensive cathedrals and church buildings," but he said, "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. The Methodists and other religious denominations who are erecting these expensive churches while the heathen go unevangelized, and the poor all about us are neglected, are not pleasing God. You need not tell me that the meek and lowly Christ who walked the earth among the poor, is pleased with this expenditure of money fostering denominational pride.

We have congregations building great churches costing hundreds of thousands, sometimes up to a million dollars, laying heavy burdens of debt upon the people, that will largely shut out appeals, for missions and charitable purposes for years. Sometimes the yearly interest on their debt would build a chapel in neglected city districts, or in needy mission fields. This is all wrong, and is out of harmony with the teaching and spirit of our Lord. In many of these cathedral churches there is almost no saving gospel preached, and not a few of them are centers of modern skepticism and extreme worldliness, with their large halls for entertainment, and stages for theatricals. They are an abomination to God. It is a waste of time to pray the blessing of the Lord upon some of these great structures turned over to the propagation of skeptical teaching and worldly amusements.

The bishops, editors, and officials of the church ought to faithfully warn the people against this waste of money, while the vast millions of the world have never heard the gospel, and our missionaries plead in vain for chapels, hospitals, orphanages, doctors and surgeons, teachers and evangelists among a naked, diseased, perishing multitude who have never heard of a compassionate God and a Christ who can save their lost souls. Their appeals are largely ignored, and many congregations have piled up debt in the building of churches to please their own vanity, that makes them believe it is impossible for them to make any large and adequate contribution for the cause of missions.

It is quite remarkable what is being preached in some of these great cathedral churches, the Rockefellers contributing vast sums of money to erect an immense cathedral in which Fosdick is to comfort the deluded souls of his followers by denying the virgin birth of Christ, by teaching them that the miracles recorded in the New Testament never took place, but are forgeries, and all the rest of those "damnable heresies" that go with this sort of infidelity. This is worse than the idolatry of heathendom who do not know there is a Bible, who never heard of a Christ. What is more disgusting than the vast cathedrals of Romanism in the midst of populations of poverty, rags, ignorance, dirt and sin; the poor people have had their substance taken from them to pile up cathedrals and palaces for their ecclesiastical masters, while they have been left in ignorance and desolation of soul and body.

The time has come for the Church of Jesus Christ to become more practical, as well as more spiritual. There is no need for vast memberships of thousands of people in any congregation. The membership should be smaller so the church edifices can be cheaper and some work for every individual member to perform; and the church everywhere, ought to awaken to the fact that their highest duty and greatest privilege is to give the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to the entire world, and to do it NOW.

NATIONAL SYMPATHY.

IT was very encouraging to note the widespread sympathy in this country for King George of England, during his serious illness. Prayers went up for him from churches of all denominations and all public occasions where prayers were offered. Best of all, from ten thousand family altars and closets of secret prayer, our people joined their earnest prayers with the people of the British Empire, to God to spare the King and raise him up for further reign over his devoted people. This spirit of sympathy and prayer cultivated an attitude of good will which should always be maintained between the people of the United States and the British Empire.

It gives us a thrill of hope for humanity when the peoples of two of the great nations in the world meet together at the feet of our Father in heaven, and unite their earnest petitions for an individual man. It is an indication that, amidst all the doubt in this poor world of ours there is a widespread common faith in the existence and compassion of a great God, a Father in heaven who hears and answers prayer.

The sickness and death of Marshal Foch, the great French Commander of the united forces during the World War, is another evidence that the oceans which separate peoples, are narrowing down and that whatever differences there may be in tongues and tribes of people, there is a sense in which the human heart and tender sympathies are being enlarged, and taking in nations, with their peoples, leaders and interests into a closer fellowship. One can but wish that this spirit might increase and overflow all bounds until wars disappear.

Marshal Foch was a Roman Catholic, but he was a man of prayer. He seems to have been a man of excellent moral qualities, wonderfully devoid of offensive pride, conceit, harshness or selfishness of any sort. We earnestly hope that his faith reached out and appropriated the atoning merit of the Lord Jesus. Being a Protestant does not send men to heaven; being a Catholic does not send men to hell. The Lord Jesus Christ is the Savior of all who break through hindering obstacles of every kind, and lay hold upon him with a saving faith.

Friends have laughed at me because I have expressed a hope that Napoleon Bonaparte exercised saving faith in Christ. I cannot understand why the thought of this great genius being lost would be a subject of mirth. Napoleon was one of the greatest men of his class and profession that has ever lived. In the long, weary months that he lived on an unhealthy, storm-swept prison rock he had his priest, he took the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, uttered some of the most eloquent and beautiful truths with reference to the character and teachings of our Lord Jesus. Why not hope that he exercised saving faith? We are taught, and have taught, that the Lord Jesus is seeking to save, then wherever a heart feels its burden of sin, and in humility and humble trust the best it knows, from the teaching it has received, may we not hope that the trembling hand of faith has touched the hem of the garment of him who is mighty to save to the uttermost? It at least, is not an evidence of deep piety and the true spirit of Christianity, to laugh at the thought of any one being lost to all eternity. It helps to mellow the heart and bring us deeper into the spirit of the Master, to hope for the future of those who have gone before, committing them and all things to the compassionate mercy of him to whom we say "Our Father who art in heaven."

There are two more of the great leaders of the World War to pass away—Von Hindenberg and Pershing. We are hoping and believing that when the famous old German leader of the powerful hosts of Germany shall lie down, draw the drapery of his couch about him, and depart, that the whole civilized world will send its sympathy to Germany. He was, and is, a great man. As for the effect of the conditions and atmosphere in which he grew and acted, their reaction upon him in what he was, and what he did, we shall not now philosophize, but he proved his tremendous force of character, and his military prowess by the powerful forces which were united against him.

There is plainly written in the teachings of our Master, the Christ in whom is our only hope, the doctrine of forgiveness. We must learn the importance of this teaching; we must train ourselves in the practice of forgiveness; the spirit of forgiveness and

TRAVEL NOTES AND GOSPEL ECHOES.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I am writing this article after having just passed another milestone on life's journey—my spiritual birthday. I was preaching in Sundo, Korea, where the M. E. Church, South, has a very wonderful plant and work going on, just on the eve of this anniversary of my spiritual birthday (Feb. 23), and I was dealing largely in my message with the absolute necessity of being born again and the fact of my own conversion, its definiteness, the time and place, and hour when it took place, all served to emphasize the truth as I bore testimony to it.

I have often thought how striking are those words of the Lord Jesus to Saul of Tarsus at the time of his conversion as recorded in Acts 26:16, "But rise and stand upon thy feet for I have appeared unto thee for this purpose to make thee a minister and a witness both of these things which thou hast seen and of those things in which I will appear to thee."

This certainly states two things as absolutely necessary to the preacher: he must have a testimony as well as a sermon. It was once said of the old time circuit riders that they went out with a double barreled gun, one contained the sermon the other the testimony; when the sermon failed they fired out their testimony. They could say:

"I know in whom I have believed,
Who when this precious faith he gave,
My soul into his hand received,
And bade me trust his power to save;

His spirit doth my heart assure,
That what I still to him commend
His constant love shall keep secure
Till faith filled up in sight shall end."

It seems a bit strange that my 1929 anniversary should be spent away so far from home, but I think I can say with the poet:

"O Lord, how full of sweet content,
Our years of pilgrimage are spent!
Where'er we dwell, we dwell with Thee,
In heaven, in earth, or on the sea."

"To us remains no place nor time,
Our country is in every clime;
We can be calm and free from care
On any shore since God is there."

Another thing that marked my anniversary was an illness that sent me to my bed for rest and recovery. The strain of work had been great and arduous and then gripe came around and I had to contend with it for several days, preaching three times a day nevertheless, at last I had to give in and go to bed and strange, so strange, that the Doctor who came to see me was the son of my Sunday school teacher in the years long ago when I was a boy. It was a peculiar providence indeed that sent him to Seoul, Korea, to minister to the sick in body and to preach to sin-sick souls. Thanks to Dr. Martin's good treatment I was enabled to get out and about and carry out the program Rev. M. B. Stokes (who was both my Bishop and Presiding Elder while on the Korean circuit) had marked out for me.

AN APOSTOLIC MAN.

Bishop W. R. Lambuth was the greatest missionary leader and statesman of the M. E. Church, South. He was associated with every mission field in which his church was represented: China, Japan, Korea, Africa, all felt his magic touch.

His mother had been a school teacher in Mississippi before she became the wife of Rev. J. W. Lambuth, one of the first M. E. Missionaries to China. Her name was Mary Isabella McClellan. At a Conference in Mississippi when the collection basket was handed around she put a card in the collection basket which read, "I give five dollars and myself."

I wonder can the annals of missionary offerings beat that one of Miss McClellan!

When Bishop Patterson was consecrated Bishop of Melanesia, Bishop Selwyn said to him:

"May every step of thy life dear brother be in company with the Lord Jesus. May you feel his presence in the lonely wilderness, on the mountain top and on the troubled sea."

"May you sorrow with him in his agony and be crucified with him in his death, be buried with him in his grave, rise with him in newness of life and ascend with him in heart in the same place whither he has gone before and feel that he ever liveth to make intercession for thee that thy faith fail not."

The same words exactly could be said of Bishop Lambuth—the greatest missionary Bishop ever produced by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. When he died in Kobe, Japan, a great man went to his reward. At his own request his body was buried beside his mother at Soochow, China.

To Bishop Lambuth may be applied these words of David Brainerd:

"This I saw that when a soul loves
God with a supreme love, God interests and his become one; It is no matter when, or where, or how, Christ should send me, nor what trials he should exercise me with, if I may be prepared for his work and will."

THE GOSPEL VERSUS CUSTOM.

God invites us to call upon him. Jeremiah 33:3.

Many Oriental countries have a law forbidding any common citizen to attempt to petition the Emperor or King—in fact such a thing was to be punished with death. A poor peasant of Japan is now in prison and his mother recently committed suicide because her son attempted to make a direct personal appeal to the Emperor to pray to the gods to dry up the floods. As the Emperor rode forth the poor fellow, a burly farmer from Saitama Province burst through the cordon of Imperial police and groveled sinfully before the Son of Heaven.

"The floods!" cried the farmer. "Save us from the waters, Divine One! The floods are rising in Saitama. Save our farms! Speak only a word to Amaterasu-O-Mikami, that She may dry up the floods!"

As the simple, believing rustic was dragged away, the "Son of Heaven" looked down compassionately through spectacles, from his great Louis XIV State Coach. Above the gorgeous vehicle a golden phoenix perched with wings spread—symbol of divine and inextinguishable Radiance.

Presently, as the State Coach clattered into Parliament Square and drew up, Emperor Hirohito stepped nimbly down, as though nothing had happened, and was received by members of the Kizokuin and the Shugun. The poor peasant was rushed off to prison and his prayer was not regarded.

This "Son of Heaven" as the Emperor is supposed to be, is so different from the Son of Man of whom it is written, "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out."

Jesus, Son of God, invites us to come to him.

Though his Majesty is great,
His mercy is no less;
Though he thy transgressions hate,
He feels for thy distress;
Yield not then to unbelief,
While he says, there yet is room;
Though of sinners thou art the chief,
Since Jesus calls thee, come."

It is wonderful the progress that the Gospel of Christ has made in former hermit nations like Japan and Korea.

In Japan at one time of persecution signboards appeared bearing these words:

"So long as the sun shall warm the earth, let no Christian be so bold as to come to Japan; and let all know that the King of Spain himself or the Christian's God, or the great God of all, if he violate this command, shall pay for it with his head."

Hundreds of years have passed since that sign appeared. Empires and nations have changed to great republics where free speech and religious freedom prevails. Everywhere you go now in Japan and Korea you meet the products of the Christian faith, schools, orphanages, hospitals, churches, revivals and salvation. In Japan it has been our privilege to see glorious displays of saving and sanctifying grace.

To any who still doubt the wisdom of Foreign Missions and who has no faith in the gospel for heathen countries we might apply these words of Judson. Some one said to him, "Dr. Judson, what about the prospect of the conversion of the heathen?" Judson replied, "The prospects are just as bright as the promises of God."

A Correction.

In the issue of January 30, my article on "A Story of Ruins and Revivals," a serious error occurs in describing the meeting held among the missionaries in Nanking, China. It is said that "200 college presidents" were there. What I intended to say was, "Some ex-college presidents" were present. How the 200 got in I do not know. Mistakes will occur of course. I hasten to make this correction as I do not believe in exaggerations or misrepresentations. G. W. RIDOUT.

CHILDHOOD TRAGEDY.

E. M. SMITH.

AFTER over a quarter of a century of pastoral labor I am frank to say that the great Tragedy of Childhood is found where parents fail in a united effort of training.

Parents who are not Christians often send out to the world better children, better citizens, more highly respected than others who come from Christian homes, and for only one simple reason, i. e., united effort in training.

Parents may have high ideals for their children, but unless there is a united effort to carry them into effect, failure will be their reward.

In these fearful days of which St. Paul speaks "perilous times" when children will be disobedient to their parents, we as common, everyday Christian parents (much more so holiness parents) must see that our children are not disobedient law breakers. This cannot be done unless parents unite in their efforts to avoid the tragedy which will be very sure to follow if they don't. Out of the rough sometimes comes a diamond. Out of a divided home sometimes comes a great saint, but God has given laws that will avoid the tragical sequences of childhood.

Everything that has power in it must be directed by wisdom's laws in order to achieve greatest results.

Childhood has wrapped up in it hidden powers as mighty as the Hand who created

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER III.

ITS POWER TO TRANSFORM HUMAN LIVES.

IT was over in New Zealand that one day an unbeliever was sneering at the Bible to a native chief. The chief pointed to a great stone and said, "My father and I were once blood-thirsty cannibals. On that stone we slaughtered and roasted and devoured our human victims. We are Christians now. What raised us from what we were to what we are? The Bible at which you scoff."

I want now to give you a third reason why you may accept the Bible as the veritable Word of God, and that is Its Transforming Power. I am referring not now to what the Bible has done for the world in general, but to its power to bless and brighten the individual life, to lift it up to God, and in fact to make it completely over when it has been broken and ruined and lost. It has done this not for a few men but for millions.

There are other books in the world. Most of them worthless. It's a good thing to write a book yourself, just to see how few of them you can sell. But there are books that are useful and enlightening in many ways. There are books on philosophy, astronomy, geology, botany, and mathematics, but did you ever hear of any of these books restraining lust, curbing sinful propensities and lifting foul and unholy men to a place of purity and respectability?

Did you ever hear a man say, "I was a miserable sinner, a wretched outcast, a disgrace to humanity and a nuisance in general until I read one of these books, and ever since that time the old life has been past forever, the shackles of sin have been broken, happiness has come into my heart, peace into my soul, health has come back and prosperity, and my home has been changed from a place of strife and quarrel and desolation into a little foretaste of heaven itself?"

Did you ever hear a man say, "I was a sinful brute of a husband and a worse father until I took up the study of Geology. I got me a little hammer and commenced to break off the corners of a few stones and blessed be that wonderful science, my brutality has been changed into kindness, my cruelty into love and I have had a song of joy in my heart ever since?"

Did you ever hear a man say, "I was a thief and I learned the multiplication table, and thanks be unto Mathematics, it put honesty into my heart?" Did you ever hear a man say, "I was impure and I read a book on Geometry and there I learned the definition of a parallelopipedon and discovered that the square of the hypotenuse of a right angle triangle is equal to the squares of the perpendicular and the base, and it put virtue and purity into my heart?" Did you ever hear a man say, "I was a drunken inebriate until I read something about the stars in a book on Astronomy, and I have been on the water wagon ever since?"

Did you ever hear a man say, "I was lost and on my way to eternal perdition until one glad day I took up a book on human anatomy and I read there that the auditory and optic nerves were two tiny filaments so alike in color and structure that for one's life he could not tell them apart, and yet one of them will lay hold of certain vibrations in the air and through the tympanum of the ear will record them on the brain in strains of sweetest harmony or notes of wildest discord, while at the same time the other unmindful of the sound vibrations beating on every side will lay hold of a more delicate set, imperceptible to the first, and through the retina of the eye paint them on the brain in all the bewildering colors of nature's panorama, and when I had learned this, the burden of my sin rolled away, my soul was redeemed and I have been singing on my way to heaven from that day until now?"

No, you never heard any one say any of these things. But you have heard hundreds, and you know there are millions, who have ascribed all these things to the reading of the words of this blessed Book we call the Bible. As they have read they have borne witness to a new power working for righteousness in mind and heart and to the thrill of a divine life in the very quick of their being.

I was conducting a series of evangelistic meetings in Newport News a short while ago, and one evening a letter was handed to me written on a letterhead of The Hotel Chamberlin at Old Point Comfort. I would like to have you hear that letter. Here it is: My dear Mr. Biederwolf:

Eleven years, six months and six days ago, after I had been kicked out of the back room of the lowest three-cent stale beer dive in New York City, dressed in an old suit of clothes that I had fished out of an ash-barrel several weeks before, I went to the old Jerry McAuley Mission for a sandwich and a cup of coffee. You were one of the first ones to shake my hand that night after I got up off my knees at one of the old benches. I am at this hotel and would be more than pleased if you could find it possible to have dinner with me some night while you are here.

B. F. ALEXANDER.

I found him there a guest in that high-class hotel, a spiritually minded Christian gentleman, traveling in great comfort and holding an honored position at a handsome salary. Now such an effect demands a cause efficient and sufficient to produce it, and that cause can be found only in the fact that when the words of John 3:16 fell upon his ear, and "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest" was whispered into his heart, God was in those words "by the breath of His inspiring, quickening, regenerating, transforming Spirit."

Don't get an idea that this Book is only for men like that. It has done the same thing for the most intellectual and cultured.

Have you ever read the experience of George John Romanes? I mean his mind experience. I suppose that some of you have not. You have been so busy reading infidel books you haven't had time to read anything on the other side. It has been said that Romanes had the most brilliant mind of any man for three generations past. He is the author of the book, "Darwin and After Darwin," as well as many other master works.

He graduated from the great English University with highest honors and he was a sincere Christian. He wrote books about God and about the laws of prayer. But in the speculations which were natural to a mind like his he began to see, as he said, that Christianity was unreasonable. He studied long and hard before he announced himself but finally he declared his unbelief to the world.

For twenty-five years Romanes did not utter a prayer, because he said his mind would not let him pray. He said it was "with utmost sorrow" that he felt compelled to accept his atheistic conclusions. In the soul-darkness into which his syllogistic reasoning had led him he confessed that the universe to him had lost the soul of its loveliness.

He said, "When at times I think, as think at times I must, of the appalling contrast between the hallowed glory of that creed which once was mine, and the lonely mystery of existence as I now find it,—at such times I shall ever feel it impossible to avoid the sharpest pang of which my nature is susceptible."

How the sneering sceptics laughed, and how some of us in the church trembled, for Romanes was the leading scientist of the world and one whose sincerity the world had never doubted.

But George John Romanes is in heaven today. He died a member in good standing in the Church of England. While his reasoning was absolutely logical he discovered in after years that he had laid down a wrong premise with which to begin, and reasoning from it had reached his conclusions so fatal to his faith. He changed his premise and later wrote, "The doctrines of the Incarnation and the Trinity seemed to me most absurd in my agnostic days, but now I see in them no rational difficulty whatsoever." And what was true of these doctrines was true of the others.

No man ought to lay any claim of intelligence and at the same time call himself a sceptic or an infidel until he has read "Thoughts on Religion" by George John Romanes.

To the list of such men might be added the names of Edward Everett Hale, Jr., Richard O. Waggoner, Dr. F. J. Woitishek, and more recently Papini, Joseph Parker and Thomas Cooper and names innumerable of other such men in whose mind and character similar moral revolutions have been wrought by the power of God in his written Word. Certainly a Book that has such power to lift men up to God must itself have come down from God.

Ralph Norton told us some time ago at the Winona Lake Bible Conference of two young Belgian soldiers. Maurice was visiting Robert in the Belgian trenches. The boys were cousins. And Maurice said:

"What is the matter with you? You are different from what you were when I saw you before?"

"No, I am just the same Robert," he said. "But you are different," said Maurice, "there is something about you that is different."

"Well," said Robert, "the only thing I can say is that it must be due to this little Book," and he pulled out a little Testament. "That is the only thing that has made the change if there is any change in me."

And Maurice got the address of my friend Mr. Norton, and wrote him, and said,

"Dear Sir: I am a sceptic. I have answered to my own satisfaction every argument in favor of Christianity, but there is one thing I cannot get over, and that is the change in my cousin Robert's life. I would like you to tell me how that change took place, and if you think there is a similar experience for me."

And Mr. Norton simply sent him a Testament and told him to forget for the time what people have said about it and to read it thoughtfully for himself. Later Mr. Norton got a letter from Maurice telling him what the Book had done for him.

And I say again that a Book which has such power to lift men up to God must itself have come down from God, and I am reminded of what H. L. Hastings one time said. He said, "If you have any other book that will do such work as this, bring it along. The work needs to be done, and if you have any other book that will do it, for heaven's sake bring it out. But for the present, while we are waiting for you, as we know this Book will do the work, we mean to use it until we can get something better."

The infidel may assault it, he may blaspheme it and laugh it to scorn, but it is God's Book, and as God's Book it is God's lever and it is moving the world.

FORGOTTEN.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

IN Longfellow's immortal poem—the "Psalm of Life," is one stanza that has been quoted more often, perhaps, than anything else this sweet singer of Cambridge ever wrote.

"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime;
And departing leave behind us,
Footprints on the sands of time."

The sentiment and the rhythm are as sublime as the thought expressed; but if the true philosophy of life were interpreted, as it is being lived among us, another stanza should have been written. How often have we watched children and beach bathers building fantastic designs on the sands of the ocean, or on sand dunes. Yes, but one swash from the ocean flow-tide obliterates them all; one hour of wind changes the whole aspect of sand dune fantasies.

Another stanza should have been written for the special benefit of those impressed with the hyphenated ego, as touching their impress upon the big world. Something like this—pardon the poetry:

Lives of faithful, toiling millions,
Who have made their lives sublime;
Now with footprints scarce a memory,
Lost upon the sands of time."

How insignificant we are; how little can we project ourselves upon the big teeming world. Yes, it is big—our planet—but with a diameter of 8,000 miles, is but a mite floating in the infinitude of space, and each of us but a living, moving cell, as it were, in the body politic of teeming millions. One writer has told us, that only about one hundred men have withstood the ravages of time. The few empire builders live. Sir Christopher Wren lives because St. Paul's stone and mortar have stood the test of centuries. If London should be destroyed by fire or storm, the great architect would soon live on printed pages. Men who have crushed and slaughtered nations live. General Grant was a towering figure in the world for some two decades; but today, to the millions who have not seen his monument on Riverside, New York, he is but a name, known only to school children. Who cares for the name of Gen. W. T. Sherman? He would be lost but for the memories of his atrocious "March to the Sea." The swash of the incoming tides soon destroy the footprints of the biggest and the best.

Not long since we knelt at the unmarked grave of a beloved brother. When living he was loved and admired by thousands; his voice in the ministry of song had thrilled and blessed multitudes from coast to coast, and from the lakes to the gulf. Not only so, but the thousands loved him devotedly. As we gazed upon the silent mound above the sleeping dust of the one we loved, with nothing to tell the story of who and what he had been, there was a sense of ingratitude we felt, not only for ourselves, but all the rest who knew and loved him. We at once sent out an urgent call for a small contribution from his friends scattered over the nation, publishing the same in four periodicals, three of which covered the United States. One editor gave emphasis to the proposition. We were so certain for the success of the undertaking, that we selected the monument, never doubting but that a surplus would come in above the price, to be given to the lonely widow. A prominent name was announced to receive the one dollar offerings, which we thought, would swamp the mails.

Two months later we called to ascertain the amount contributed, and the revelation was a genuine shock. Exactly eight dollars had been sent in. We walked from the room with a sinking sensation, that could not be expressed in words. The irony of it was sickening. Forgotten! In one year forgotten by thousands who had actually rejoiced and shouted under the charm of his voice and personality. This experience brought a depressing consciousness of how little, in the last analysis, our lives mean in the thinking and affection of the age—even while living.

No class or profession is exempt. Great churchmen—even some who were exalted to the high office of the episcopacy—and there will doubtless be others, within one or two decades after crossing the Bar will live only in the historical archives of the church. Forgotten—that is the end—except for the few names in each century.

Why should it be a great task for two and a half millions of people, every one of whom have given holy vows to certain ends—why, we say is it a big task for them to lay aside a few millions of dollars asked for, that the toil-worn men of that organization—the Church—we mean, and a Methodist Church—that the aged ministers may be saved from the terrors of pauperism? Why should those in "age and feebleness extreme," beg with tears for one more chance to serve in the active ministry? It is the tragedy of being forgotten. We are spending millions today in architectural glories—churches, not a few, that are costing hundreds of thousands of dollars—even millions; and at the same time ninety percent of the aged ministers would be on the "bread line," but for children or relatives. Forgotten!

When our country entered the World War we shouted ourselves hoarse over the boys who went into that titanic struggle; we feasted them; loaded them down with luxuries. Actually gave them social recognition never heard of before. They went "over there," into the hell of war: mud, barrages of bursting shells, blood, and death. When the tornado of fury was over, and the Armistice signed, the warring nations again went wild with joyous enthusiasm. We had "kept the home fires burning," as it were, buying Liberty Bonds (which was a good investment) drawing wages that were staggering, and making money "beyond the dreams of avarice," adding some thirty thousand millionaires to our rostra of big rich. The boys in khaki drew something over a dollar per day, while "going over the top," in the Argonne, and Chateau Thierry. The boys returned, many of them bruised in body, mind, and soul—shell shocked, with empty sleeves and sightless eyes. Such human wrecks, with many, attract neither attention, nor sympathy. Thousands of the physically strong, swarmed the land, jobless, seeing the "slackers" in their old jobs and positions, drawing big pay. Should we be surprised that many of them are thugs and criminals?

These are the same boys, that when the troop trains passed through our towns and cities, we greeted with cheering crowds, brass bands, and the young women in long rows, standing ready to hand through the car windows, luxuries, tobacco, and cigarettes. What is the explanation of this slump in patriotic fervor? The big war touched the psychology of the crowd, rather than the soul of the nation. We have forgotten, not only now, but the confetta had scarcely been swept from the streets after the Armistice Jubilee, than we began to forget. The boys of the American Legion are trying to keep faith with those who sleep in Flanders Field; but their effort arouse little or no interest from the same populace that screamed and waved their good bye as our boys departed for "Over there." Forgotten!

Thus is life in our good America—"the land of the free, and the home of the brave." We are obsessed with our passion for pleasure and personal objectives, until things so worthwhile are crowded out. We can more and more appreciate the swan song of the sage of Israel: "Vanity, all is vanity." So shall it be with us all; we should keep in mind, or before us in exalted moments, that a time will come when "desire shall fail, because man goeth to his long home; and the mourners go about the streets: or the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Those who seek to build stately monuments for the tomorrow are doomed to a desire that will perish.

The Temple of Diana was one of the "Seven Wonders," and required two hundred and twenty years in building. The roof of white marble tile was supported by one hundred marble pillars, fifty-five feet tall, twenty of which were sculptured. Thirteen marble steps from the four sides marked the approach. The interior outshone in splendor the exterior. The sea has withdrawn from Ephesus, and nothing remains but a marshy swamp, where once great wharfs received the wealth of the world. Gone, except a few broken pieces of marble. Forgotten. We are told that six successive cities have been built on the site of Nineveh, and not one even knew of the existence of a former city.

We shall now turn from these somber reflections to a brighter perspective. A promise comes to us from the pages of an Old Book that should cheer our hearts. Yes, it is Hebrew poetry, but some of us still believe it inspired. "The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance." The swash of human tides; the back-wash of revolutions will not and cannot destroy our puny doings—though unheralded and unsung—if the life is clothed in the garments of righteousness. "He shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light"—"Thy righteousness shall flourish as the palm tree."

The impress of man is easily lost and forgotten in the mad scramble of a pleasure-intoxicated world. The cemetery gates will scarcely be closed after the requiems for the great and near-great, before the successor steps in, the program taken up, and there is neither time nor desire to perpetuate what they may have been or done. "In the morning they are like grass which groweth up; in the morning it flourisheth and groweth; in the evening it is cut down and withereth."

The one and only comforting thought for us all is, that God promises the righteous an everlasting remembrance. Righteousness will some time, some when, come into its own. Other than this hope, we shall go the way of all the earth—and be Forgotten.

Resurrection Life and Power.

The above is the title of a book just off the press by Col. S. L. Brengle, D.D., of the Salvation Army. He is one of the most saintly and beloved men in all the land. This is a well bound, attractive book, really a very beautiful volume. It contains 208 pages. It is condensed cream of spiritual truth. It is a book for every Christian home. You can cut into it anywhere and find food for your soul. We do not know when we have seen a book with more real, deep, spiritual teaching than this by the scholarly, devout and saintly Brengle. Price $1.25. It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. Do not fail to get this book and read it. If there ever was a time when we needed the deepening of the spiritual life of the people, that time is now. We ought to take time to feed our souls on good spiritual literature.

Your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

God in his mercy has given you a few days wherein you may obtain pardon.

WHAT HOLINESS IS NOT.

C. V. FAIRBAIRN.

AND the Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart to love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul." (Deut. 30:6).

Many objections to holiness are due to false notions of what the term really implies. Some people fail to understand; others misunderstand. Some of us, the holiness folk, may be to blame here. Possibly we have, in a measure, obscured the real issue by teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

HOLINESS IS NOT DRESS REFORM.

It is first of all, the crucifixion and destruction of the inbred sin of the heart. God's great quarrel is not with colors, frills, buttons, meats and drinks. Some people seem to think that holiness deals chiefly with such things as these. We verily believe that when God renews the heart, our attitude towards such things will be radically affected; but God's great quarrel is with sin. His great purpose is to get into the heart, and there, at the seat of the whole trouble, cure the very corruption of our nature.

HOLINESS IS NOT MEMBERSHIP IN A HOLINESS CHURCH.

If membership in a worldly church is not a saving factor, no more is membership in a holiness church. We believe in belonging to church; but affiliation with a holiness church is not an indispensable factor in the entire sanctification of the believer. Therefore, the merely being a Mennonite, a Nazarene, a Free Methodist, one of the Pilgrim Holiness brethren, or a member of a Holiness Association, does not imply nor involve entire sanctification.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION IS NOT MERE DEMONSTRATION.

There have been demonstrations in abundance where righteousness of life was wanting. Real Holy Ghost demonstration is not associated with such lives. Demonstration, in itself, is no evidence whatsoever of heart holiness. Some dear souls have actually failed to find the blessing through looking for some physical manifestation, or wonderful thrill, instead of being willing to receive the blessing God's way, by faith.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION IS NOT MERELY BEING BLESSED.

Blessing is not the evidence of the second work of grace. The justified man is a blessed man; yet he is not entirely sanctified. We are persuaded that the only man who is a candidate for holiness is the justified man who is as well blessed as it is possible for a regenerated man to be blessed.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION IS NOT REGENERATION.

Regeneration is the birth of the soul into the kingdom and includes pardon, justification, impartation of eternal life, adoption, and the Spirit's witness thereto. Regeneration is sanctification begun; entire sanctification is heart-cleansing completed. It is subsequent to regeneration. It is the destruction of the indwelling corruption of the heart.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION IS NOT CONSECRATION.

It includes it, but is greater than it. Consecration is a work which man does for himself. But not all that we can do for ourselves can touch and cure the sin of the heart. We cannot be entirely sanctified if we are not entirely consecrated; but there is the danger of folk, even after consecrating, failing to wait for, and receive by faith followed by the witness, the experience which God alone can work in the soul.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION DOES NOT IMPLY FREEDOM FROM TEMPTATION.

"We shall always be open to attacks of Satan; for in no other way could our allegiance to God be tested, proved, and perfected, than by trials and temptations."

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION DOES NOT INTRODUCE A STATE FROM WHICH YOU CANNOT FALL.

But it does reduce the danger of falling to a minimum. You will be kept from falling as you walk in the light. You are not unable to sin, but with the help of the power of God you are able not to sin. We are able to stand, yet liable to fall, our standing being conditioned upon continual obedience; for "He became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." (Heb. 5:9).

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION IS NOT ABSOLUTE PERFECTION.

Absolute perfection belongs to God alone; the perfection of man is relative. Nor is this blessing angelic perfection. According to the Lord's prayer, angelic performance of divine will is exemplary, the model for human obedience. Evidently angels make no mistakes; we frequently do, always will: our service is very faulty. It is not Adamic perfection. That was only possible in the unfallen, unblighted, Edenic state. It is not physical perfection: that awaits the touch of glorification after the resurrection. It is not physical perfection, i. e., perfection of knowledge, judgment, etc. It is perfection of heart, not head. Not many "wise and prudent" find the experience; yet hundreds of the humble poor and simple hearted have enjoyed the fulness of the blessing. It does not imply freedom from infirmities. The Holy Spirit "helpeth our infirmities," but he never helps our sins. "Paul gloried in his infirmities; for they even helped the power of Christ to rest upon him; but he never gloried in his sins." Holiness admits of many infirmities, but not of sin. And yet, entire sanctification is not (as many opposers of the doctrine assert that we teach) sinless perfection. Sinless perfection is one with absolute perfection, which is God's alone. Many of our faults, foibles, failings, mistakes, etc., have the complexion of sin, but since we do not will them,—nay, rather will against them,—they are not intentional, and therefore are not essentially sins. Holiness is, thus, an unsinning though not a sinless perfection.

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION DOES NOT IMPLY PERFECTION OF CONDUCT.

The world sees our faults, mistakes, etc., and we ourselves are certainly conscious of them; but our kind Heavenly Father, understanding our frame, remembering that we are but dust, looks upon the heart and sees there, back of imperfect action and faulty accomplishment, perfection of love toward him and perfection and sincerity of motive even in our conduct.

Entire sanctification is not that perfection or maturity which comes with the ripening years of steady, Spirit-filled, confidence-in-God, holy living. You may not be so mature as to comprehend the deep things of God, and yet you may be in heart as clean as the precious blood can wash you, even "whiter than snow."

ENTIRE SANCTIFICATION IS PERFECTION OF LOVE.

God commands us to "love the Lord our God with all our heart, and with all our soul, and with all our might," (Deut. 6:5). Jesus called this the greatest commandment. It is the work of God, through the Spirit, to implant this love in the heart. "And the Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart to love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live," (Deut. 30:6). "The expulsive power of a new affection" (Dr. Chalmers) will purge from the heart all that is contrary to the pure love of God. "God . . . hath chosen us in him (Christ) before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." (Eph. 1:4).

The most important thing for you to think about, is your salvation.

HUGHES' AUDITORIUM.

REV. J. W. HUGHES.

THE following reasons cause me to make an appeal for the means to complete the above named building, which is rapidly coming to a completion, and has wonderfully impressed all who have seen it, both with its capacity and appearance, interior and exterior.

1. The Executive Board have insisted for some time that I would make an appeal to my old constituency, both in the pastorate and school work, and I may also state my many years of evangelistic work, for my students, both of Asbury and Kingswood Colleges, have always had a profound interest in the kind of work they got while in the institutions and have gone around the world preaching a full gospel. This is to say, free salvation for all men and full salvation from all sin, wrought through the Holy Ghost in instantaneous regeneration followed by instantaneous entire sanctification always received instantaneously in answer to complete consecration and faith.

2. The absolute need of a large auditorium to accommodate the student body and also of course to accommodate the public on special occasions; thousands now are looking this way to get accommodation when they come from the four quarters of the earth to be taught to spread full salvation to the ends of the earth.

3. I state for the information of all, that this school was organized Sept. 2, 1890, with two teachers and eleven pupils, and under my fifteen years of administration for several years before I gave it up the enrollment ran in the neighborhood of three hundred students.

4. Its record of thirty-eight years, now closing the thirty-ninth, is well known throughout the United States and in many portions of the missionary world. One of the best known missionaries in the world said to me sometime ago, "In all the missionary fields he had visited in the last thirty years, one of the common questions asked him was, 'What was the peculiarity that seemed to differentiate them from the average missionaries in our general work?' His answer to that question was, 'They have been taught all lines of culture belonging to the average college, but have specially emphasized the subject of the whole Bible for the whole world, believing in and teaching all of its fundamental doctrines out of a know-so salvation.'"

5. It is interdenominational, hence all denominations that believe the whole Bible and are in sympathy with spreading Scriptural holiness to the ends of the world, feel absolutely free in sending to this safe and sane line of teaching that makes real Christians, irrespective of denominational line, both students and money.

6. As an old man, having spent fifty-nine years in preaching the full gospel, both in the pulpit as pastor and evangelist and at the teacher's desk, twenty-five years of that time having come in contact with many of the leading preachers and evangelists of the United States, and especially those stressing the full salvation gospel, I have no hesitancy in saying that I regard John Wesley with his six coadjutors, in my judgment for scholarship, piety and evangelism, have never been surpassed, and I do not believe they have been equalled in the history of the world at any one time. Of course, I refer to John Wesley, under God, the human leader and organizer of the great Methodist movement; Charles Wesley, the greatest hymnologist in the world; Richard Watson, who wrote the greatest work in the world on Systematic Theology; Adam Clarke, commentator, has

CHAPTER XVI.

THE WONDERFUL TOOTH.

TO return to the tooth, which had been discovered, and had so confirmed the group of skeptics that the Bible was not an inspired book, and that they had made another long stride in the direction of scientific truth of the evolutionary hypothesis; said tooth had been brought with great care to Bombay and committed as a sacred relic to a group of scientists who had locked it carefully in a vault, with other precious fragments of bones and teeth and claws, which they were gathering, out of which to build a foundation solid enough to sustain their views of the evolutionary process in the creation of the universe, and all it contains, embracing the human family.

When our professor arrived at Bombay he was met at his ship with a most cheerful greeting, and conducted at once to a comfortable lodging which had been secured for him where, with the culture and poise of all great scientists, he assured his friends that he wished to take a day and night of quiet rest after the sea voyage, before he entered upon the important study of the wonderful tooth.

After a quiet rest of some twenty-four hours he was taken by his scientific friends to their laboratory, and in an elegantly furnished room, the tooth was brought out in a little ivory box carefully wrapped in a bit of cotton. He was provided with several glasses for close inspection, and courteously left alone for a number of hours.

By and by, one of his group of friends knocked upon his door, was invited into his room, when he arose with shining face and assured them that, without doubt, they had made a most wonderful discovery; that this tooth was doubtless several millions of years old.

He and his friends used many terms, supposed to be scientific, which we shall not give here because of our lack of knowledge how to spell or to pronounce the words, and no doubt would not be understood or appreciated by one-tenth of our readers. These scholars who were so eager to establish beyond all question their theory of Evolution, were very happy. They prepared a fine banquet for our professor who was so broad in his scholarship, and so liberal in his views.

One of the English daily papers published quite an account of the discovery of the tooth, the coming of the professor from the United States, and his decision of its vast age and almost positive certainty that it had once done service in the law of a prehistoric man just emerging from apehood.

Unfortunately, for the reputation of our professor as a great scientist, there was an old Mohammedan in the city who some years ago had graduated at Oxford University. He had mastered in science and, in a quiet way, had been a most diligent student of Darwin, Huxley, and the rest, and had gathered a very large collection of stones and bones which he had arranged in very scientific fashion in a large room in his private residence.

He was deeply interested in Evolution, and was eager to find facts which would make this theory an established fact of science. He read the article in the paper and called upon the group of scientists and asked for the privilege of seeing the tooth. He looked at it for a short time, arched his eyebrows, puckered his lips and said, "Gentlemen, I have quite a collection at home, and believe I can show you a tooth exactly like this one you prize so highly."

They were surprised and delighted at the prospect of having two teeth that, in the mouth, so to speak, of two witnesses, they could establish their theory.

Our old Hindoo friend had been famous for the gathering of the skulls of a vast variety of animals found in India; also had some he had brought from other countries. He had skulls of cows, horses, water buffalo, lions, tigers, wild hogs and many of the smaller animals.

He returned after a short absence with a package carefully wound up, which he unwrapped with the skill and affection of a scientist for his sacred treasures, and held up to them the upper half of the skull of the pig of a wild hog. He placed his long, skinny finger on a certain tooth, which lay loose in the skull; holding it there for a moment, he looked carefully at the frightened group, lifted the tooth out, and laid it down alongside their precious treasure. They were absolutely identical. He picked up one of their magnifying glasses, looked at them scrutinizingly, and invited our theological professor to do the same, which he did reluctantly, and tried hard to find a difference, but was unable to do so.

The entire group scanned the teeth with great care and, while they hesitated to admit it, it was perfectly clear that the tooth found in the bed of the dry branch by the boy, and handled with such great care, and at such considerable expense, was nothing but the tooth of a wild pig.

The professors would have remained quiet on the subject, but unfortunately, a young reporter from the daily paper that had published such a favorable account of the discovery, had come in to get additional news. He was amused and delighted at the confusion the old Mohammedan had brought to the scientific group.

They suggested to the reporter that, for the present, he say nothing on the subject and wait for further investigation. But he took the glass, examined the teeth and saw there was not the slightest difference between them, and being a Johnny-Bull-headed newspaper man, the next morning he had large headlines and a full column on the front page, stating that it had turned out that this wonderful tooth, some millions of years old, and out of the jaw of a prehistoric man, was the tooth of a wild pig and was probably not more than four or five years in existence.

Our theological professor was deeply humiliated, but saved his face somewhat by getting an extended leave of absence to make some scientific investigations in Asia Minor.

Unfortunately, for the professor, the newspaper containing both of these interesting front page reports, were sent by a missionary to Huston, whom he had known at the college in Texas. Huston laid them away quietly for future use at an opportune moment.

The new professor, who had taken the place of our tooth investigator, moved with a bit of caution; but the sheepskin of orthodoxy which he wore over his true character, was not large enough to hide the wolf of unbelief, which he was.

One day he dwelt at some length on the prophecies of the Old Testament Scriptures, showing the students that they were not divinely inspired, but that they were the great statesmen of their times, and looking into the future from the standpoint of a careful study of the past, they warned their people of the dangers to come, if they did not regulate their conduct in harmony with these prophets' conceptions of the God of the universe.

"They believed God," said the professor, "to be a sort of big man, with no little conceit with regard to his authority and power to rule mankind; that he was subject to fits of anger and if they did not live in harmony with his laws and rules, which the prophets claimed to know, he would destroy them."

The professor insisted that these prophets knew nothing of a coming Messiah, and that we could not base our faith in the Virgin Birth and Deity of Jesus of Nazareth on what these men had to say in their exhortation to, and their threats against, their people.

Huston's heart burned with indignation, but he sat quietly and determined not to speak until he was well prepared and could speak without excitement and with cool deliberation. It was not necessary for him to wait long. The entire class, which had come to look upon Huston as the champion of Fundamentalism, waited with eager expectation to hear what they were quite sure, Huston would have to say.

them but they are placed in the hand of the parent to direct. If they fail, childhood fails, and they make God's purposes to fail. United effort under the wisdom of God will avoid the tragedy.

"Eli's sons made themselves vile and he restrained them not." Samuel's "sons walked not in his ways, but turned after lucre and took bribes, and perverted judgment."

These two great men of God left on the records of sacred history childhood tragedy. Failure to restrain, to correct, to control, to enforce God's laws for the home.

We all acknowledge with some trembling that the task of directing over the tragical period of childhood is no holiday affair. It cannot be done with promises, threats or sweetmeats. The only sure plan that can be safely depended upon is a united effort upon the part of parents. "A house divided against itself will fall."

Parents must be united, first, in their desire to have children in their home and by prayer bring them forth.

Second, there must be an agreement as to the number they should have and intervals between.

Third, a settled conviction that the task of rearing them belongs to both alike, according to opportunities afforded.

Most of the tragedy I have seen is where parents disagree as to how to control them. The father is away most of the time at work and when he comes home tired he sends the children out so he can be quiet, forgetting the mother has been with them all day, correcting, directing, punishing.

Sometimes he interferes with the mother as she seeks to direct them, by taking the part of the child. If so the child will soon learn the father is a safe retreat in times of disobedience.

Then the father often leaves the whole matter of correcting, advising, punishing to the mother, little realizing his place of responsibility in these matters and as a result the children know they need have no fear of correction from him and the mother, broken under the constant care of the home loses her hold on the children and they become disobedient, uncouth, rude and reckless.

Let parents unite hand and heart in the task of rearing their children and if there is failure, both will share it alike, but if they succeed, (which God assures them they will) then both will share the honor, God will be glorified and the world will lay at their feet wreaths of honor to repay them for their effort.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

I want to thank you, too, who have sent parcels of postcards and Christmas cards and scrap books. I had such a splendid lot to give out—and one of these gay scrap-books you sent is now in the home of every worker, while hundreds of cards were given out by the workers the Sunday preceding Christmas—these cards, the only gifts which hundreds of village Christian children received for Christmas. As always, we could have used many more cards than we had!

We were exceedingly busy right up until the 24th, in "getting Christmas ready" for so many different places and people. Then on the 24th we went to Budaun, as we were urged to do, so as to become acquainted with the Christmas customs of that big station with its several hundred local Christians, while Dr. and Mrs. Core were still there. And as we saw the crowds there on Christmas day, of eager, earnest Christians, truly that in spite of their ignorance and poverty, we found ourselves hoping that Budaun District has the same loyal lot of friends and patrons in America, for next Christmas, as you have been to us here, this year!

Our co-workers here in Sitapur, Mrs. E. Stanley Jones, Miss Margaret Haberman, and the pastor, Rev. Lorenzo, carried on the activities of Christmas day without us, in order to enable us to go to Budaun. Early on the 26th Mr. Titus started to far-away Madras to attend the biennial meeting of the National Christian Council, at which he represents the Methodist Church of this area. Our little Carol and I came on home to Sitapur, bringing with us the little orphan boy who was willing to us seven years ago, and who is now studying in the Boarding School at Shahjahanpur, supported there by one of you to whom I am writing. So he came home for his vacation with us, and has been a very happy little boy the seven days since then. We have just seen all our guests off this afternoon. Little Gilbert broke down and wept bitterly when the good-byes had to be said at the station. For he has no "folks" except us.

Our other guests included a missionary from the Isabella Thoburn College, who is a friend of many years; and also a retired American W. F. M. S. missionary, now 76 years old, who lives up in the Himalaya Mountains. She has two adopted sons—Indian boys—whom she has brought up from babyhood, now fine, strong Christian young men, one a Junior, the other a Sophomore, in our College at Lucknow. They, too, are friends whom it is a joy to have in our home, and having the three of them together enabled the boys to have a visit with their "mother." These boys are just as full of fun and energy as any 19 and 22 year old college boys in America, so we haven't been exactly quiet while they were here. The younger of the two is a good musician, and he has made our old American organ pour out volumes of music these days. Both boys are planning to enter the ministry and to give their lives to Christ's service in the territory of their birth, in the Himalaya Mountains.

It has been such a real joy to share our home this Christmas week with these friends of varied age and race. My husband has been so sorry to miss their visit for he will not be home until Jan. 7th.

I wonder if any of you know Miss Willia Caffray the American Evangelist who has been in India this past year. Her life and her message alike radiate power. Some one who had formerly opposed the central message of her preaching, the doctrine of holiness, said of her, "She makes holiness attractive." She has been greatly used of God in bringing new life into scores of our churches in India, during the 30,000 miles she has traveled on the Indian Road. Some of us were so greatly helped through her ministry during special meetings in Lucknow in October, that we were eager to secure her, and did so, for a week of meetings in early December in our local church here. And God did great things for our church, through her, many of our teachers and workers were brought to a realization of sins forgiven, and of Christ's presence and power, that they had never known before; while many of the girls and boys of the two Boarding Schools, only nominal Christians till then, were really converted. We are a different church since then. I, personally, am glad to testify to a joy which abides, since the mountain-top experience of October.

Miss Caffray has been in Sitapur again, for Christmas week, with her friend, Mrs. Stanley Jones. Night before last was the "Watch Night Service," held here in our living-room, when the little company of "grown-ups," the leaders of our local church, after coffee and doughnuts around the fire, listened to another wonderful message from her of courage for the coming year. She quoted that little poem, "It isn't the wind, but the set of the sail, that determines where to go." And so she urged a "set of the soul" which shall make every wind that blows, every new problem or burden, every sorrow, even, just a means of bringing us nearer our goal, that of living a life hid with Christ in God.

We do thank you, each one, for being our helpers and co-workers in the great task of making Christ known and loved and followed, in India.

Yours in His glad service,

Olive G. Titus.

P. S.—January 7th. I had just completed copying this letter this afternoon, when a cable from my father brings the news of my mother's death—yesterday—at our home in Seaman, Ohio. It is an hour of bitter sorrow—when home and the loved ones there seem far away. During the eighteen and one half years we have been in India, my mother has not once missed a week in writing to us. I thank God again today for her beautiful Christian life. O. G. T.

NATIONAL CONVENTION—BEAVER FALLS, PA., FEB. 19-24.

Beaver Falls Convention was held in Immanuel Evangelical Church, Rev. Robt. R. Doverspike, pastor. Bro. and Sister Doverspike, assisted by Bro. Arthur W. Gould and wife, led the convention music. Their untiring singing was blessed of the Lord. Bro. Gould was at one time a member of the Convention Party of the National, and maintains a keen interest in its program. He is now pastor First Nazarene Church, New Brighton, Pa.

The Evangelical, M. E., Free Methodist, Nazarene, Christian and Missionary Alliance and other bodies were prominently represented in the attendance of both ministers and laymen. A gracious fellowship in the Spirit and a rising tide of power made possible a definite fruitage in the regeneration and the entire sanctification of souls.

We are convinced that the "National" has a mission and a ministry to and through the various groups committed to the work of spreading Scriptural Holiness. It brings together these groups in a fellowship and in a united ministry that promotes their mutual confidence and understanding and inspires and girds them for an aggressive work in their respective fields.

Dr. Jere M. Glenn, of Young Harris, Ga., was with us for most of the Convention and preached one time—a strong, searching sermon. Brother Glenn is now giving his entire time to evangelism. Through long years of distinguished service in the South Georgia Conference M. E. Church, South, and through his official relation to the great Indian Springs Camp Meeting he is recognized as a true and tried leader in the ministry of a full gospel.

Pray for, and if possible, attend the Annual Meeting of the National, Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., May 7-12.

Faithfully yours,

John F. Owen.

REPORT OF WINTER CAMPAIGNS BY THE MUSICAL WHITES.

Our first campaign of the fall season was held in the First Evangelical Church, of Elgin, Ill. We had fine crowds, and a good meeting, about 25 penitents kneeling at the altar of prayer. In this meeting we had the unusual co-operation of a fine choir and orchestra. They stood by us in all the special music and many of our song services were accompanied by the orchestra, pipe organ, and piano. The choir of 40 voices, under our direction, learned the great "Hallelujah Chorus" and sang it at the closing service of the campaign.

On December 2, we commenced a campaign in the Delaware Ave. Tabernacle, in Buffalo, N. Y., with Bro. R. J. Kunze, the Nazarene pastor as the preacher. This campaign was not marked by any great numbers, but we sang and played and the pastor preached with great liberty and some new friends were won to the church.

Our next campaign was at Manheim, Pa., with the Evangelical Congregational Church. We commenced on Dec. 30 and continued for four weeks. This was a very spiritual meeting as the church was ripe for a revival and were carrying a burden for the lost. The first week of this campaign was observed as Prayer Week in Union with three other churches of the city. Then in the second week we began an old-fashioned revival with souls praying through and people getting blessed. This meeting under normal conditions should have been a landslide for God, but the "flu" worked against us and hurt the meeting very much. However, we did not close but kept on and there were about 14 converts.

After closing at Manheim on Sunday night, we opened at York, Pa., on the following night. This was also a three-weeks' campaign with the Evangelical Congregational people and their pastor, Rev. F. G. Yost. During this campaign we had the assistance of a fine choir and orchestra. During the three weeks there were 73 conversions in the old-fashioned way. On the closing Sunday the pastor took 37 into the church, and there will be some 30 more to follow. The pastor and officials agree that this was the best campaign their church had ever witnessed. This slogan was adopted as a campaign slogan "Prepare to meet thy God; tomorrow may be too late," so we set it to music and used it to great advantage.

On Feb. 24 we commenced a meeting with the Evangelical Church of Oil City, Pa. This was also a three-weeks' meeting. The first week was devoted to the church, but the last two weeks we drew the net every service. God blessed this meeting and gave us 77 conversions and some seekers after sanctification. Rev. Carmany, the pastor, preached some powerful sermons and God honored the truth and put old-time conviction down on sinners. There was many a shout in the camp as some wanderer came home.

It has been our pleasure and privilege to bring the Gospel in song into scores of sick-rooms, to aged shut-ins, to hospitals, schools, etc., both by our personal visits and over the radio. We have conducted children's meetings and have seen many of those children accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour. We have seen homes re-united and family altars established. Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

At present we are assisting Rev. Dewitt Tyler at the North Side Nazarene Church, Chicago, Ill.

ATHENS, OHIO.

We have just closed a revival which is very significant in this college town. The revival was held in Central Avenue M. E. Church. The pastor, Rev. Ira P. Day, was assisted by that great gospel evangelist, Rev. Andrew Johnson, of Wilmore, Ky. The whole city has been stirred. Other churches are reaping great benefits from the revival. The church was far too small to accommodate the large crowds, great numbers being turned away. We had 40 conversions besides a good number of reclamations; also several were sanctified. Praise the Lord. Thirty-two united with the church, several more to be taken in later. The church is in the best condition spiritually and financially it has ever been in its history. Old-time revivals will fill the church treasure and get people saved.

FWLER, KANSAS.

We have often heard it said that the day of revivals is past. Various reasons have been given for this. The writer wishes to take variance with them. It has been well demonstrated here at Fowler, Kan., that if the church will pay the old-time price for a revival the revival will come.

This is our second year on the Fowler charge. Last fall we secured the service of Bro. and Sister J. L. Carothers for a meeting to be held February 6 to 24. Two weeks previous to the opening day we began a series of cottage prayer meetings. The Holy Spirit began to search hearts and from the first the work was deep.

Brother and Sister Carothers are certainly consecrated to God and used of him. They preached the old truth with real power, held close to the doctrine of the Methodist Church and deep conviction was manifest from the first. The last week saw the great move when young and old knelt at the altar and poured out their soul to God in penitent prayer for pardon and purity.

This was truly a great meeting; our church was much stirred. People sought out one another and asked forgiveness. A large number of students from both the grade school and the high school were saved and sanctified and gave definite testimony. A goodly number have been baptized and taken into the church; others are to come in.

We were greatly blessed by the co-operation of the other churches. On each Sunday evening other services were dismissed that all might attend, and the house was well filled. Rev. Levi Johnson and his good people of the Friends' Church, gave us blessed help and encouragement throughout the meeting. Over one hundred were at the altar during the meeting. Weather and road conditions were sometimes against us but people came in spite of all.

If the church will prepare their heart and pray old-time conviction will come and men and women will fall upon their knees and seek God.

We wish to recommend Bro. and Sister Carothers to any who wish old-time truth preached so as to stir a modern people.

J. H. Stoughton,

Pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Fowler, Kansas.

REPORT OF R. P. MARSHALL AND WIFE.

After closing our meeting at Tarentum, Pa., we hurried to Enfield, Ill., and began another battle. We were blessed with splendid co-operation from the pastor and people of Enfield M. E. Church. Rev. Loren E. Page, who is in charge of the work, did the preaching at night and labored faithfully with us, holding cottage prayer meetings for the shut-ins and boosting the meeting in any possible way. We did the preaching in the afternoons and conducted the music.

The second Sunday night of the meeting found 12 young men and women at the altar, and all claimed the blessing. They were members of the Epworth League. No special interest was manifest until the next Sunday. That afternoon we presented our illustrated sermon on "Home" to a large congregation, and at night closed with the temperance sermon, "Serpents Tracks." No one sought the Lord, and we were ready to leave, when a woman who had been interested during the meeting started home, and turned back to the altar saying she was afraid to go without Jesus. She was brightly saved and with her, her two daughters.

The next day we began our meeting at Kuttawa, Ky., with the M. E. Church, South. The pastor, Rev. C. F. Allen, preached every night and again we held the afternoon services. Here we found a wonderful people and splendid results. The schools co-operated and came in a body at two services. We made no effort to count noses, but there were in the neighborhood of forty who accepted Christ. Many of these were children from our very large Junior choir. These the pastor is instructing before taking them into the church, which is a very good plan.

We have never found a more delightful place than Kuttawa. Through the enterprise of one man, as we understand, quite a number of people are subscribers to The Pentecostal Herald. One can always tell the people who have been "brought up" on the "Herald."

During the meeting at Kuttawa, we had the privilege of singing and playing for the convicts at the State Penitentiary at Eddyville. I took my consecrated accordion down to the Death House and sang and prayed with the four young men there. The oldest was 26. It was a sad time for me.

We closed the revival Sunday night with 26 members for our church and others to go to the other churches. To God be the glory!

mercy must be woven into the very fiber of our lives. Like the candles burning about the altars of great cathedrals that are carefully guarded and never allowed to go out, we must keep the holy glow of forgiveness burning with inextinguishable brightness in the very center of our souls.

H. C. MORRISON.

The Harvest Field.

The boys are getting eager for Commencement and to get out into the tents. How interesting it will be! How anxious they will feel about the growing crowd, the attitude of the community. It will drive them to real prayer to God; it will be a wonderful means of grace.

The tent meetings are a very fine item in their education and training for the ministry. The way to learn how to preach is to preach. The way to become a soul winner is to win souls. The young man preparing for the ministry who, during his college and seminary years, puts in the summer vacation in tent revival work, graduates a preacher. He is ready for an important charge; he has learned much about people; he has met with opposition and overcome it with patient kindness; he has met with discouragement, wept and prayed at the mercy seat, and won victory out of defeat. He is leagues ahead of his brother graduate who has had no such experience.

I earnestly wish that every young minister sent out from Asbury College could have at least two or three summers before his graduation in tent revival work. Most of all, and best of all, it is soul-winning work. The winning of souls to Christ is the most important thing in the world. It is a good start for a preacher early in life to become a soul winner, to feel the joy and thrill of bringing the lost to Christ. Some ministers seem to almost forget this, and they are contented to go along year after year without seeing a soul converted. That certainly cannot be pleasing to God. It seems to me that such a ministry would become an almost unbearable burden.

Some of our tent workers get out in May; the great body of them will not be able to begin tent work until after Commencement, but then with great eagerness, they'll strike out into many communities with a holy enthusiasm to seek lost souls for the Lord Jesus, and to help the wanderers in the wilderness of discouragement and doubt, into the Canaan of perfect love.

Let's begin praying with great earnestness that God may bless the tent workers this summer beyond anything yet known in the work of The Evangelical Methodist League.

Monthly Sermon.

REV. H. C. MORRISON.

LOOKING UP FROM HELL.

Text: "And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torment."—Luke 16:23.

From the early history of the race, men have believed in a future state; that death does not end all; that there is a hereafter for the soul. They have been eager to look into the future and, if possible, to discover what awaits them beyond death.

"If a man die, shall he live again?" was the thoughtful inquiry of the devout Job, and has been the subject of profound thought, not only of the philosophers of all ages, but of the very common people. Where human souls exist there is a profound feeling that the body is the temple in which it dwells, that the body may perish, but the soul, with its consciousness and powers for joy, or remorse, will continue to exist.

This seems to be a universal and firmly fixed belief among all men, pagan as well as Christian, heathen as well as civilized people. Where and how shall we spend eternity, is a serious question that thrusts itself into the thinking of all intelligent beings.

If Jesus is what the Bible claims for him, if he is what he claims for himself, it is to be expected that in his teaching he will give us some positive information with regard to the future life. It could hardly be supposed that God would send his Son into the world to redeem it from sin upon the terms which we have laid down in the gospel, those of the repentance and faith of the individual, and that he would not plainly lay before us the results of a wicked and impenitent life refusing to accept the salvation which his compassionate mercy offers.

Jesus speaks very definitely with reference to the future punishment of the wicked. His language is plain, positive and descriptive of a very fearful state of torment, to those who reject divine mercy and die in their sins. He tells us of those who "go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." He repeats this fearful language in his denunciation of the scribes and Pharisees when he says, "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell!"

We recall, and would impress upon the minds of our readers, the language of our Lord with reference to the guest who came to the marriage of the King's son without the wedding garment. "Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall he weeping and gnashing of teeth."

We could quote other scriptures of like kind, but this should be sufficient to impress upon the mind of every one the fact that our Lord Jesus taught plainly and repeatedly that those who enter into the life beyond without securing salvation, will go into an existence of torment. It is not worth while for any one to claim to believe that our Lord Jesus is all that the Bible claims for him, and he claims for himself, and at the same time, undertake to question or doubt the fact that there is a place of future punishment for the impenitent wicked.

We take our text from a most remarkable teaching of our Lord. Some people call this account of the sinner in robes and the saint in rags a parable. Jesus does not call it a parable. He gives us to understand that these things occurred, and no doubt in this particular, history has repeated itself many tens of thousands of times, and millionaires have died and plunged into hell, while paupers have struggled out a starving existence and risen into heaven.

Let it be understood that our Lord is not teaching us that all rich men go to hell, or that any man loses his soul simply because he is rich. He certainly does teach us that great riches do jeopardize the soul. Neither is Jesus teaching us that all poor men go to heaven, or that any man goes to heaven simply because he is poor.

I have no doubt that our Lord does seek to impress upon us the fact that the greatest good to be desired in life is not riches; and the greatest evil to be shunned in life is not poverty. He would fix and fasten upon our minds the fact that life does not consist in the things which a man possesseth, whether it be robes of wealth, or the rags of poverty. That salvation from sin does not exist in outward conditions; it is the hidden things of the heart. It is something that dwells within the man, regardless of the palace of wealth, or the out of doors of poverty. Whether a man be surrounded by courtiers and flatterers, in splendid robes and magnificent feasts, or whether he be struggling for a mere meat rind, or a refused bread crust amidst snarling dogs.

In order to attract our attention, and fasten our thought upon the central truth, Jesus hangs about the real picture that he would have us carry in our memory, the purple robes of the rich man and the rags of the beggar. They are both human beings; they are at the opposite extremes of existence. One is robed and feasted every day. Of course, residence, furniture, companionship and honorable and influential place in society, goes along with his robes and feasts; the other is a poor outcast. He is lying on the cold stones at a rich man's gate. In the chilly winds his fluttering rags uncover a bony skeleton covered with sores because of blood, impoverished for lack of ordinary nourishment. He has no human associate or friend to alleviate his sufferings or comfort him as his starving body prepares itself to release his captive soul. He is surrounded by the hungry, mangy, ownerless dogs of the East that prowl and fight like wild beasts for whatever they can snap up of refuse they may find about the street.

A greater contrast can hardly be conceived; but there is a sudden and tremendous change and, mark you, it is a change for all eternity! At sundown Dives is a millionaire. He is in the midst of a luxurious feast, and ere the evening star appears, his body lay stretched and cold in death, and his soul is in eternal torment. The contrast is fearful! The abyss is impassable. An angel on wings of lightning, through the eternal ages, could not carry across the vast regions of the abyss which separates this man, once so rich, so pampered with luxury, robed in such fine linen, one drop of water to alleviate his tormenting thirst. Poor Dives! He is doomed and damned to all eternity. This is the teaching of the Lord Jesus Christ. Let those who will, reject and ridicule, but they will doubtless find to their horror, that Jesus spake the truth.

Now turn to Lazarus. Here he is in the very depths of helpless poverty. No place with even the meagerest comfort in which to lay his starved and diseased body. He is out of doors, under the shining stars exposed to the chilling winds and biting frosts; no friends, but prowling dogs lick his famished body and wait for the spark of life to go out, that they may gnaw his lean bones. But in his heart there is a triumphant faith; a faith like that of ancient Job that will trust, though slain; that poverty, disease, extreme sickness and suffering cannot destroy. It burns in brilliant triumph in all the darkening hours of his suffering. It stays as an anchor to his soul, when his relatives cast him out. It holds firmly when society turns from him and leaves him to his fate. It burns brightly in the darkening night; the pelting rains cannot extinguish its holy flame. Death may lay its icy hands upon his starved and perishing body, but that steadfast faith leaps into a brilliant blaze, as he mounts the chariot of God's divine love and rides in triumph beyond the starry skies.

When the sun went down he was poor and physically miserable, beyond all hope, but by the time the stars came out to watch over a sinful, suffering world, he is safe at home in Paradise, and he is there for growth, progress, enlargement and glorious discovery for all eternity. Wonderful contrast! Sudden change! Amidst the splendors that surround him, he almost forgets the sufferings out of which he came. They seem but a moment, and now, "the exceeding weight of glory!"

How could the Lord Jesus have brought before us with greater emphasis and in more startling fashion, the facts of sin and death, and hell and heaven.

Here it is in his own words. Men cannot change his words any more than they can drag the eternal Christ from his throne, and change his nature. They abide forever. The preacher may leave them in silence; he may flatter, if he will, the wicked and worldly in his congregation, but he and they, if they will stop to think, may be sure that a fearful and certain damnation awaits those who live and die in sin. Fashionable choirs may strut into the altars of God's church on Sunday morning in their brazen immodesty, and show their plump legs to the delight of the sinful, and the shame and disgust of the saintly, but as sure as God is true, and his word is true, they are hastening to a hell of awful woe.

The modernistic preacher may deny the inspiration of the Scriptures, the Virgin Birth, the Deity, the miracles, and the saving power of the Lord Jesus Christ; he may be pampered and flattered by his wealthy, worldly, unbelieving congregation, but he will come to repentance, acknowledge the untruth he has preached, will cry to God for mercy or he will die and go down into eternal torment, where the people he has deceived will meet him and heap ten thousand curses upon him, because he deceived and comforted their deluded souls.

No! This is not harsh language. This is plain, simple truth. The drunkard, the libertine, the highway robber, the bootlegger, carrying his poisonous drink to his victims, armed to the teeth to shoot down the representatives of the law, is not half so dangerous and destructive a creature as the man in the pulpit attacking the inspiration of the Scriptures, and the Godhead of our Lord Jesus Christ. His scholarship, his culture, and the refining and elegant way in which he utters forth his false and deceptive doctrine, only makes him the more dangerous, and in the end, will sink him deeper into the pits of doom.

It is time for the ministry to awake and to warn the people, to speak with earnestness and urgency to the wicked men and women about us everywhere, in high places and in low, to startle and alarm them, if possible, to make them to feel and know that they are hastening to a fearful doom. If we are to have the revival we need, the revival we must have, or have a still more fearful condition of immodesty, lewdness, dishonesty, and lawlessness, it must begin with repentance, and repentance must be brought about by the fearless preaching of God's servants who will assure this generation, young and old, that they cannot live and die in sin and escape the damnation of hell. You let the American pulpit have the courage to preach the plain teachings of Jesus on the subject of future punishment, and to insist that his words are true, and that they apply to all people now living, and there will be a great stir, a loud protest, no doubt, but let the men in the pulpit be true to God, and there will be a deep repentance and a great revival, and the salvation of a countless multitude of immortal souls.

My fellow beings, who are reading these words, what about the state of your soul? Are you honest? Are you truthful? Are you faithful to wife, to husband? Are you obedient to parents? Do you fear God and keep his commandments? Have you saving faith in Jesus Christ? Search your heart in the light of the word of God and by all means make your salvation sure through true repentance and saving faith in our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The National Holiness Convention.

The National Holiness Convention will meet at Wilmore, Ky., May 7-12. A large attendance is anticipated. Rev. C. W. Butler, D.D., President, has called attention to the fact that it is to be hoped that the holiness people, generally, who are not members of this organization, will be present at this meeting. There will be important business to transact, but most of all, we are hoping for a very gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

I am reprinting a notice of the President which has previously appeared in THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD.—Editor.

NOTICE TO THE HOLINESS PEOPLE OF AMERICA.

A great rally of all the holiness people of America is being planned, to be held from May 7 to 12, of this year at one of the great centers in our country, namely, Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. It will be the occasion of the Annual Meeting of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness.

We desire, however, that it shall be, in addition to this business feature, a great general rallying of representatives from every unit of the Holiness Movement and from every part of the country.

Let us have one of those general rallies that lends inspiration and impetus to the whole work of spreading Scriptural holiness.

We earnestly hope that all Associations and Camp Meetings, also holiness churches and missions, will plan to have representatives at this meeting.

A splendid program with a large number of the most representative holiness men of the country is already in preparation.

Board and room will be furnished by the college for the nominal sum of $1.00 per day to all guests. C. W. BUTLER, Pres.

had no superior, if he has had an equal; Joseph Benson, as a commentator, was easily among the best; John Fletcher, as to scholarship and piety, perhaps, was equal to any other man of his day, and wrote a work on the "Lostness of Man," superior, in my judgment, to any other man; George Whitefield was easily the greatest sacred orator in the world.

This line of versitant teaching enables us to send out a student body well equipped in head and heart to spread scriptural holiness to the ends of the earth.

7. Asbury College knows no south, north, east or west, but welcomes every earnest, faithful, conscientious student to her halls of learning to be taught by a splendid faculty well equipped in heart and head. To train this student body on all fundamental lines ready to take up the great commission, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." They are also taught by their teachers to obey the Master's injunction, Luke 24:49, "And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you, but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high."

8. My final reason for the appeal to all the friends of Asbury College and special friends of the founders of Asbury College, which includes of course all former students of both Asbury College and Kingswood College and the souls that have been, under God, led to Christ, is that you give something in memory of the founders. My final appeal is that when you read this note get on your knees and ask God what he would have you do as to prayer for the institution, and the contribution that God would have you make for the building that is to be dedicated June 4, 1929.

A Timely Book.

"Why I Believe It" is the title of a well bound, well printed, neatly gotten up book of 176 pages. It is written by D. L. Pierson, a scholarly man of genuine devotion and unhesitating faith in the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures. Mr. Pierson is editor of the Missionary Review of the World.

At this time, when attacks against the Bible, as the inspired Word of God, are coming from so many sources, this book is especially timely. While it is scholarly, it is, at the same time, perfectly adapted to the common people who need just such a book. Fathers and mothers ought to read it so they may be prepared to instruct their children. Young people ought to read it so that their faith may be well founded, and they can give an answer to skeptical teachers and friends who ridicule the Word of God. Preachers ought to read it because it is full of valuable information and good sermon material. By all means, get this book and keep it handy for reference. It is invaluable. How I do wish I could have carried it in my saddle-pockets when I was a young circuit rider and poured over its contents in times of devotion. It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. Price, $1.50. H. C. MORRISON.

Preachers Preach

What they read. Don't you want to send THE HERALD one year to one or more preachers at our special offer of one dollar for the year? Good for April only.

Collapse of Evolution.

This book has been on sale for some time. It was written by Prof. L. D. Townsend, D.D., S.T.D., M.V.I. Dr. Townsend was a profound scholar and he went deep into the subject of Evolution. He has produced a little volume of 125 pages of clear, reasonable, powerful argument and proof against the whole theory of Evolution. It should be in the home and read by the people all over this nation.

It is well understood that the prominent evolutionists have been infidels, or at least, skeptics. No modern theory introduced among men has had such tendency to destroy the faith of the people in the inspiration of the Scriptures, in fact, in the existence of God, as has Evolution. It undertakes to account for the universe, as we find it, without an intelligent, personal Creator. This book by Dr. Townsend is invaluable. We wish THE HERALD readers would buy it, read it, circulate it, advertise it, broadcast it, and help to save the young people of the rising generation from the blight of the infidelity that is being produced throughout the land by the teaching of Evolution. The book may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for $1.00.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Florida girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old and in the third grade. I have two sisters living and one dead, and two brothers. We go to Sunday school every Sunday we can. Our grandmother died the 3rd of January. We miss her so much. She took The Herald and mama reads the letters to us children and we enjoy them. Bro. Driskell is our pastor and we like him fine.

Doris May Harrell,
Bowling Green, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a little Mississippi boy join your jolly band of cousins? I am twelve years of age and in the sixth grade. I go to school at Sulphur Springs. I am very fond of school. Our school is improving yearly. We got our stage scenery and library the past year. We got our pump well this year. We have our campus cleaned neatly. We have see-saws, swings, etc. We are striving to accomplish more things in the future. My father is a farmer and we live out in the country. I have two brothers and six sisters. My mother is dead; she died on my birthday. My birthday is April 11. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with B and ends with N, the middle letter is T.

Herbert Turner,
Conehatta, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Hello folks! How are you all enjoying this weather? I live close to the Mammoth Cave. Wouldn't you like to see it? I aim to go through it soon. If the cousins will write to me I will tell them all I can about it. I am five feet, three inches tall and weigh one hundred and four pounds. I have a fair complexion, gray-blue eyes and light brown hair. I am fifteen years old. My birthday is October 23. Have I a twin? Orene Carter, I guess your first name to be Minnie. If I am right don't forget your promise. I always watch for The Herald to come and I certainly like to read the paper, especially page ten. I am sending a few Bible questions. Here they are: Who was David's father? Where was Samuel when God first called him? Where was Moses when he received the Ten Commandments? What two chapters in the Bible are alike? Well, I am hoping to see this in print and receive many letters from the cousins.

Mae Evelyn Whitworth,
Rocky Hill, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just finished reading page ten in your wonderful little paper. I wonder if you will admit an Arkansas girl into your circle. I have been a silent reader of page ten for some time and I have thought several times that I would write but Mr. W. B. always frightened me away. Now Aunt Bettie, I hope you will give me just a little space. I enjoy reading page ten so much as I like to know what the cousins of our neighboring states are doing. I have always lived in Arkansas and of course I think it is a wonderful state. Bentonville, my home town, is located in the northwestern part of the state where we raise the big red apples. I am a member of the Church of The Nazarene. I noticed several of The Herald cousins belong to same church. Our pastor, Brother Cluck, has been with us about two years now and we think he is a wonderful man. He helped conduct the Noon-Day Camp Meeting at Noon-Day, Texas, this year. Probably some of the cousins met him there. I am so glad so many of the cousins are Christians and trying to live as our Master would have us live. I have been a Christian for several years and think it is the only life worth living. I really do not care for the picture shows, card parties, or the dance hall; in fact I think they are a detriment to the human race. I wonder how many of the cousins are striving to get an education. I am a Senior in high school this year. However, we are not having school at present because the schools, churches and all public gathering places are closed down on account of the flu. As it seems to be the custom for the new cousins to describe themselves guess I had better tell you what I look like. I am five feet, two inches tall, weigh one hundred and twenty pounds, am a semi-brunette, have had bobbed hair but am letting it grow out at present. As this is my first letter I must not take too much space so will close but before I go I would like to ask all the cousins who care to, to write to me. My age is between eighteen and twenty. I would like to hear from every state in the Union.

Mildred Herman,
Bentonville, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Lagro girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have one brother and one sister. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I am seven years old. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with Y. My sister's name is Betty Jane.

Rosella Koehler,
Lagro, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please let an invalid come in for a short talk. I have been a shut-in for four years. I can use my hands and I am making flowers for sale. I make sweet peas and roses. Sweet peas 25c a bunch; roses 35c a bunch. So if any one cares to help me out by sending me orders for flowers I will thank you. Aunt Bettie, please print this for me. I thank you for it.

Mrs. A. A. Guins,
Rt. 3, Raeford, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have been a reader of the dear old Herald for some time. I sure enjoy reading page ten. I wrote some time ago but failed to see it in print, but hope to see this one. I have brown hair, fair complexion, weigh 116 pounds, and am fifteen years old. I am a Christian and belong to the M. E. Church. I would like to hear from some of you boys and girls. I will answer all I receive.

Geraldine Mayhew,
Rt. 2, Adolphus, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We receive The Pentecostal Herald in our home, and I enjoy reading it all, but am always interested in reading the letters of the cousins, especially those near my age, but have never ventured to write before, so I am a total stranger to you. I will introduce myself a little by description. I am twenty years old, five feet and a half tall, have clear complexion, brown hair and gray eyes, and weigh one hundred and thirty pounds. My father is a minister and also prints thousands of gospel tracts. This requires much writing and addressing envelopes in sending them out. I am glad I can be of service in the Lord's work by the use of my typewriter. Music is a specialty of mine. I have two sisters at home younger than I. We all love music. Winifred Clabough, you write a very good letter. I wish that I might meet you. I guess your age to be 23 and your middle name to be Meta. Hope I have guessed correctly and shall have a letter from you soon. My middle name has eight letters and begins with A. The middle letter is E, and the last one is E. I will write a letter to you who ever guesses it correctly first.

Florence Ohmart,
Rt. 1, Box 2, Emmet, Neb.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Won't you move over and let a girl from the Blue Grass region join your happy band of boys and girls? As this is my first attempt of writing to The Herald I guess it will be best for me to describe myself first. I am fourteen years young, have brown hair, gray eyes. My birthday is Nov. 23. Have I a twin? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E and has five letters in it. The one that guesses my middle name I will write you. I go to school at the Buena Vista High School. I am a "green" freshman, as we are often called. My favorite sport is basket ball. How do the cousins like that? I take music on the clarinet. I am aiming to make a musician some day. How many of the cousins are reading the story in The Herald? I am. It sure is interesting. I am a member of the M. E. Church, South. Our pastor is Rev. R. S. Mann. He surely is a fine preacher. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. I am a great lover of good books. How many of the cousins like to read? All of the cousins write and I promise to answer every letter received. I would like to see my letter in print.

Katherine Ward,
Rt. 3, Cynthia, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please let another North Dakota boy have a little room in your band of boys and girls. I was twelve years old the 16th of March. Have I a twin? I am in the seventh grade at school. I am a Christian of the old Wesleyan type. As there is no church here we attend the M. E. Church. Arthur H. Smalley, I see you are a North Dakota boy also. I have not guessed your middle name yet, but will tell you what I will do, you guess my first name and write to me and I will work on your name till I hear from you. My name begins with G and ends with N and has seven letters in it. Iola Bannister, I saw your letter in The Herald and was glad to see it; as you did not ask anyone to guess your age, which is sixteen, and I will make another guess about you too, and it is this, I guess you are my real cousin, and was so glad to hear from you through page ten of The Herald. My mother takes The Herald and we all sure like it. I am so glad to see so many of the cousins are Christians. I must not get my letter too long as it is my first letter to Aunt Bettie, and I shall like to see it in print. Will answer all letters I get.

G. John Roberts,
Rt. 3, Cogswell, N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a girl from the State of Sunflowers, so will you let me come in with a sunflower and sit down by all you cousins? I am twelve years old and am in the seventh grade. Miss Blanche Danner is my school teacher and Sunday school teacher too. I wish you would guess my middle name; it starts with L and ends with A, and has five letters in it. I was converted two years ago. I claim the Lord Jesus as my Saviour and I hope the rest of you do too. I have a pet cat, and love her very much. I don't ever scold her because my conscience hurts me. I have one sister, her name is Lottie C. I did have two but one passed into the arms of Jesus. I loved her very much. I go to church every Sunday to the M. E. Church. My mother takes The Herald and I love to read page ten. As I just read how Mrs. Wm. M. Farley has to suffer, I think we ought to get down on our knees and thank God we are healthy. I will be glad to see my letter in print. I hope Mr. W. B. is making such a racket on the piano he won't know when my letter comes in.

Cleo L. Childs,
Buffalo, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Hello Cousins! How many of you know where to find in the Bible the prophesy of the automobile? It reads thus: "The chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fire trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad way, they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings." What better explanation could be given? This reminds us that we are living in the last days of perilous times. Let's all try to be ready to meet him, be it morning, noon, or night. I will be fifteen years old July 22. Who is my twin? I have light wavy bobbed hair, blue eyes and round face. I am a Christian and a member of the M. E. Church, and would be glad to correspond with any of the Christian cousins, and exchange photos. I hope W. B. is out skating when this arrives.

Bonnie Jean Rickard,
Rt. 3, Box 18, Pekin, Ind.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you admit a Kentucky girl to your merry band of boys and girls? Father takes The Herald, and I enjoy reading page ten. I am fourteen years of age. My birthday is Dec. 1. I have brown hair,

FALLEN ASLEEP

RABE.

My father, T. F. Rabe, departed this life and went to Heaven, Dec. 30, 1928, at 5:40 P. M. He had been a subscriber to your paper for many years. He was a devout Christian man, saved and sanctified, and was always interested in the salvation of others.

For many years he has attended Sebring and Hollow Rock Camp Meetings and will be greatly missed as he always took an active part in both. He was leader of the "groaners" meeting at Hollow Rock.

October 27, 1928 he met with an auto accident at the corner of 4th and Market streets, in his home town, Steubenville, Ohio, receiving a bad fracture of the right hip, from which he could not recover, so God in his mercy took him home out of his intense suffering, after a long and useful life, he being in his 81st year.

Funeral services were conducted in the First M. E. Church on Wednesday, Jan. 2, 1929 at 4 o'clock. Rev. E. C. Lewis chose for his text, "Enoch walked with God; he was not, for God took him." If ever a man walked with God in this life my father did.

We miss him, but our loss is his gain, for he has gone to be with Jesus, whom he talked so much about.

"Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my father's house are many mansions. I go to prepare a place for you that where I am, there ye may be also."

Mrs. Clara Rabe Kelley.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sister V.: "Please pray for the salvation of my dear husband."

A Reader: "My father is an aged man, not well—has organic heart trouble. He is not a Christian. I would be so glad if you would join me in prayer that God will save his soul."

Mrs. I. L.: "I desire you to earnestly remember my son, who is an addict to drug and drink; once saved and a business man, but now adjudged to the State Hospital."

M. H.: "Please pray for a ten-day meeting to be held in the City Rescue Mission at Binghamton, N. Y."

Rev. C. A. Calhoun: "Please pray for the success of the Revival Campaign that we have scheduled for the summer. VICTORY OVER DEATH.

Rev. W. Edmund Smith.

The year begins to die so soon as born. Time smites with fatal sting days, weeks and months

Till only little of the whole is left.

When the last minute of the last days is fled

Then we grow pensive for the year that's dead.

And death is with us all in stubborn mood;

We pay him toll with every beating pulse.

Gray hairs and wrinkles mark us for the tomb;

Reveal our fellowship with monster death,

Who laughs in victory at our parting breath.

A higher value would we give to Time If we lived more in days and less in years.

Yea, buying up the hours and moments we May build ourselves into Eternity, When calendars shall no more Time record;

Our days be those of Time's all-conquering Lord.

No year is dead that has borne us on in God:

Made possible our entrance on the new

With vision clear and bright: Made possible the more discerning sight.

The life of the old year I feel in me: Heir am I of its immortality.

And I am not of death: my soul protests.

Time cannot write its wrinkle on my heart,

Nor quench its flame of love.

I have a kingdom that cannot be moved,

I die to live, to live and never fear.

A dying body, or a dying year.

LOUISVILLE, TENN.

Some days ago I sent some incidents connected with the Louisville Holiness Camp which you were kind enough to publish. There is no agency so potent for good or evil as the newspapers. When devoted to the glory of God there is no limit to the good it may do and a paper published with that end in view should receive first consideration from the followers of the Lord. We are living in a time when the utmost care must be exercised in the kind of religious paper we have in our homes. It may be said that among the select number to be had The Pentecostal Herald is one of the best. Especially is this true with all those who are of like faith in the truths taught therein.

Christ Jesus could suffer for us, could die for us, could forgive us, could obtain the glories of Heaven for us, give us eternal life, but he cannot and would not compromise the truth or favor sin in any sense or degree. He expects his church to follow and interpret truth as he did, and nothing short of entire sanctification can meet the demands of scriptural truth. Among sincere seekers after truth there have been and are different views and interpretations of what real Scriptural holiness is, as taught in the Bible, and of how and when experienced. Herein is the need of much patience and of consistent teaching and living upon the part of all who, by the grace of God, have come into the light of the truth. It is needful however, that speaking the truth in love we contend for the faith that saves to the uttermost, being ever mindful to take heed unto ourselves and unto the doctrine as therein lies the safety both of ourselves and others. When we consider that the world has moved and advanced in the material discoveries and things of life more within the last half century than in all its past history, and the Bible and the truths of revelation are being subjected to the fiercest criticism by so-called wise leaders of the blind, along with the pleasures of sin made possible by the immense wealth of our day—With all this and more to overcome we can well see the need of being established in standing grace. "In the last days perilous times shall come," and they have come. We are facing them now in every direction. In so-called science, business and religion and except to anointed eyes, the way is dim, cloudy and uncertain. But there never has been and there never will be a time in which one who keeps in touch and harmony with God will fail.

There may be many errors of judgment, many mistakes, much ignorance to be enlightened, but the heart holds true, and as the compass points to the Polar Star, it is fixed on the Star of Bethlehem, the Cross of Calvary, the ascended Lord who "shall appear a second time without sin unto salvation."

We must "fight the good fight of faith," lay hold on eterna life," for the enemies of our soul are ever alert by day and by night—"but thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory."

When around our bed in night time, The goblins come and hover, Bringing troubles of a life-time For us to rediscover.

Our soul they would distress,
Our life they would dishearten,
And there would be no rest,
If we should hear and hearken.

These birds that bide the night,
And roost so near our head,
Take wings and with the light,
Of another day go dead.

When the summons comes at last,
Though the darkest night of all,
It will vanish with the past
As the light of Heaven falls.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson V.—May 5, 1929.

Subject.—What Hilkiah Found in the Temple. 2 Chron. 34:14-16; 29:33.

Golden Text.—Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path. Psalm 119:105.

Time.—About B. C. 41.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—When Josiah came to the throne at eight years of age, he found the kingdom of Judah in a deplorable condition. Three of the worst of kings had preceded him, with good king Hezekiah sandwiched between Ahaz and Manasseh; but, although he reigned 29 years, he was not fully able to cleanse the nation. Bad rulers are a curse to any people. Judah's kings had debauched her. They led her away from the worship of Jehovah, and that meant immorality and idolatry. Judah had learned no lesson from the ruin and downfall of Israel, but went headlong into her folly and sin against both herself and her God.

It is almost unbelievable that the chosen people of Jehovah should have lost his Word. Jewish tradition claims that Ahaz, Manasseh and Amon had destroyed all copies of the divine law, except the one found by Hilkiah, which was securely hidden away in the temple. At least, this is the teaching of some of their learned men. But this is not probable. God always has his children among men, as he did at the time of Elijah when he thought himself the only one left. It is probably true that there were other copies of the sacred Word kept hidden by faithful lovers of Jehovah. That has always been the case when wicked men have attempted to destroy the Bible.

No one knows just what part, or parts, of the Pentateuch Hilkiah found. For aught we know, it may have been the entire five books. I notice that Dr. Adam Clarke in his commentary expresses the opinion that this was, perhaps, the original copy of Jehovah's covenant with Israel, written by Moses; but it can be little more than conjecture, there not being sufficient evidence to establish the point.

This old Jewish history furnishes a tremendous lesson for America. Neglect of the Word of God brought ruin to the nation. Our own nation is paying little heed to the Book. One finds it in most Protestant homes, but even there it is but little read. It is wide of the fact to say that it is studied. Professing Christians run roughshod over many of its solemn commands. Who feels that it is much of a sin to fail to love God with all his soul, mind, heart and strength? Multitudes profess to be Christians, but never even dream of being under obligation to love their neighbors as they love themselves. There is quite a serious command that says: "Whether ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." I knew an old preacher who said that he smoked his old pipe for the glory of God; but some of his neighbors said he was a liar, and the truth was not in him. Did it ever occur to you that you are under a solemn obligation to be filled with the Holy Spirit? (See Ephesians 5:18). You do not believe in holiness? All right; but you are commanded to be perfect as your father in heaven is perfect. (Matt. 5:48).

In homes other than Protestant in America the Bible is almost an unknown book. Here is our danger. In the absence of the Word of God people run sooner or later into idolatry. We may not set up very many idols for worship; but covetousness, which is idolatry, is growing in this nation at a fearful rate. We are money-mad. Scarcely less dangerous is our craze for pleasure. There is not sufficient seriousness left among us to give ballast to the nation. We remember a ship some years ago that started out to sea with insufficient ballast; but it had to return to port, and reload to make it seaworthy. This nation needs ballast, or something of that sort. We are reminded of the congressman who, in repartee, remarked that if the gentleman from blank state would pull some of the feathers out of the wings of his imagination and stick them into the tail of his judgment, he would be a better congressman. We have too much craving for the thrills of high flying. Back to the Word of God, is our only hope.

Comments on the Lesson.

Before going definitely into a study of the verses assigned for today's lesson, one should read and ponder carefully the preceding verses of the chapter. Josiah was a mere child when he was made king, being but eight years of age. In his sixteenth year "he began to seek after the God of David his father." We would not call David his father, but one of his ancestors. Four years later he began the work of purging out idolatry from Judah and Jerusalem, and carried the work beyond his own kingdom into some of the tribes of the kingdom of Israel. From the reading of this chapter one would suppose that all the Jews in both kingdoms had, in large measure, gone into idolatry. Josiah must have been a young man of great courage and determination. He cut down the groves of the idol worshippers, smashed their gods to dust, burned the bones of the false priests upon their own altars, and cleared the way for better things. In the eighteenth year of his reign, and the twenty-sixth year of his age, he began to arrange for the repairing of the temple and other sacred buildings that had been so wickedly desecrated by his predecessors in office. Money was gathered, not only in Judah, but among some of the other tribes. This brings us to the lesson proper.

14. Brought out the money.—The money that had been collected and stored in the house of God. Hilkiah the priest found a book of the law of the LORD given by Moses.—The Revised Version is better: "Found the book of the law... given by the hand of Moses." The language indicates that it may have been the original copy written by "the hand of Moses." If so, it was certainly a very precious document.

15. Hilkiah delivered the book to Shaphan.—That was proper. Hilkiah was the high priest; but Shaphan was the scribe, or writer, who was supposed to be versed in the law of God.

16. Shaphan carried the book to the king.—Here is a matter of some interest. One would naturally expect Shaphan to speak first concerning the book found in the temple; but he first informed Josiah as to the progress of the work that was being done. Surely he did not realize the importance of that volume, for it was the foundation of the kingdom.

The lesson will not be well understood without a careful study of verses 17-28. Herein we find the reading of the book of the law to king Josiah who rent his clothes in grief, because of the sin of his people. Immediately he sent for some prophet who could interpret the future of his people. Zephaniah and Jeremiah were both living at that time; but they were not found, or not called. The voice fell upon Huldah, a prophetess, who depicted in fearful terms the awful future that awaited the people of the kingdom; although there was in her words some consolation, in that the blow would not fall during the lifetime of Josiah. Jehovah would respect the king's goodness, and spare the kingdom until he should be gathered to his fathers. Nations must receive their just reward in this world, since they cannot be punished, or rewarded, as nations in the world to come. As individuals we shall receive retributive justice at the judgment.

29. Gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.—This is for the second reading of the book of the law. The first was to the king in private, but this is to the assembled leaders of the kingdom.

30. The king went up into the house of the LORD.—Here by the king's order were assembled all his leading men, the priests, with all the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and "he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant that was found in the house of the LORD." They were on the borderland of a gracious revival. Such revivals do not come by "whooping up things," but by getting down to bedrock, where the fire flies at every stroke of the pick.

31. The king stood in his place.—In the place set apart for his royal presence. Made a covenant before the LORD.—Some people object to making promises to God; but why? One never gets anywhere at all without promises. Bishop Geo. F. Pierce used to say that religion was a garment hemmed in all around with sacred promises. It would do the Church good today to enter into such a covenant with God as Josiah made, "to walk after the LORD, and to keep his commandments, and his testimonies, and his statutes, with all his heart, and with all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant which are written in this book." Take in the New Testament, and that will bring Christian perfection.

32. To stand to it.—That is good, strong English. It means that Josiah caused Jerusalem and Benjamin, all his people, to obey the terms of the covenant made that day with Jehovah.

33. This verse leads beyond the bounds of the kingdom of Judah. Josiah not only purged idolatry from his own kingdom, but went into "all the countries that pertained to the children of Israel, and made all that were present in Israel to serve, even to serve the LORD their God." Why he went beyond the borders of his own kingdom in his good work is not stated; but the kingdom of Israel could hardly claim to have existed in his day; it was so debauched and lay in such hopeless ruin. "Sin when it is finished, bringeth forth death." "The wages of sin is death." "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." "But he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

BREAD OF LIFE BOX

Contents: 115 slices, made of the finest of Wheat, mixed with the Water of Life and enriched with the sincere Milk of the Word. Unleavened, buttered on both sides, and richly spread with honey out of the Rock. Will not get stale. Good for your spiritual health. Try one.

A box containing 115 small cards, with a choice scripture neatly printed on each side. 230 texts in all. Beautiful box, stamped in gold also printed directions how to use. Excellent for a gift box.

Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer. 1 Tim. 4:4, 5. Alas, how few meals eaten by Christians are thus sanctified. Some of them ask a blessing on their food, but very seldom do we find one who reads the Word at meals. The Bread Box is an excellent way to introduce obedience to this precept.

Pass the box around at the beginning of a meal. Let each person take out a card. Then let each in turn read the verses. It will be noticed that the two verses on each card bear a definite relation to each other and teach an important truth. The order in which they are read often brings out this truth more forcibly. As each person reads their verses it is profitable that the others present tell where the verses are found.

Another excellent way is for each person to read one or two words of the text and let someone else quote it from memory.

Let one read a verse and another quote a verse on the same subject.

Let each person memorize the two verses during the meal and quote them at its close.

Pass the box around in your Sunday School class the same as at a meal. And as the verses are read discuss the truths contained in them.

Explain that it is just as important to feed on the Word in order to grow and be strong spiritually as to eat our daily meals in order to grow strong physically.

Most interesting and profitable young people's meeting may be had by using the Bread Box in some of the ways suggested.

In the home when friends and neighbors are gathered together pass around the Bread Box. How much better and more profitable than a "cup of tea!"

Keep one in your bedroom. Eat a slice for your meditation while dressing and going about your daily duties. Eat another slice before retiring to quiet your worries and give you a good night's rest.

Use the Bread Box freely but do not let it displace the Bible. You need the whole Word of God, for all was given that you might "Acquaint now thyself with HIM, and be at peace."—Job. 22:21.

Price, 50c each; 3 for $1.00.

THE BUSY SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER

Needs a lesson help that will enable him or her to teach the lesson effectively, and at the same time not have to spend hours getting these truths together. You will find such help in Arnold's Commentary. The deep, sacred truths of the Bible are emphasized in every lesson, and there is help for the adult, the intermediate, junior and primary teacher. We have a few copies of this most excellent commentary left; the net price of it is $1.00, and we are offering to close these out at 75c each. There is just one quarter of the Sunday school year gone, and you can avail yourself of this valuable lesson help for the remainder of the year at the remarkably low rate of 81-3c per month. Where can you obtain anything else so reasonable, and at the same time half so good. Send your order by return mail so as to get the full benefit of this commentary, the most spiritual on the market, for the next nine months.

THE HEM OF HIS GARMENT...

Dear Readers of The Herald:

I have been reading in this paper of so many afflicted people and so many of them ask of God's people to pray for them. There are those who are shut-ins from helpless in motive powers of action who would rejoice if they could be healed. I am going to tell of what I know about present day healing which so many do not believe in.

There was a camp meeting held near Steele City, Neb., some years ago. The principal leader was named Henderson. My husband, who was marshal of the grounds, had to be there till everything was closed for safety, came home very late one night and awoke me to tell me that after the services were over and the crowds dispersed a few of the ministers remained to pray for a woman who had been for many years an invalid from a hurt while she was a teacher in a country school. I knew of this woman as a good Christian and, though much beloved and visited by praying people, was very helpless and bedridden, was still in that condition when she was brought in her chair to the meeting. The preachers and my husband came together "with one accord in one place" to petition the Lord for her healing and while they were praying she sprang from her wheel chair shouting praises to God for her healing, and walking around still shouting "Glory to God, I am healed."

Some time after this I was walking in the city with a friend when a woman I did not know was walking in front of us, and when she turned off to another street I said to my friend, "Who was that lady?" When she told me I said, "How come she is walking?" She said, "She claims she was healed by prayer." Many months after I was at a tabernacle meeting in a chatauqua and I was sitting with a strange lady and when there was a recess in the services I asked her name, and when she told me her name I said, "Are you the woman who was healed at the Steele City camp meeting?" She said, "I am, and I have been walking and am walking yet, and have good health."

I hear of so many people who say the day of miracles is over and the many cases of people have been under some excitement or delusion of the mind and not a permanent work. I have been thus explicit to show it has been a real work of God in answer to a prayer of faith. This woman is well known and I often read of her in the activities of her surrounding country. Let those who may read of this case of Divine Healing trust in the power of God to do for them according to their faith.

I am rejoicing that our new President just inaugurated is pledged for the enforcement of the laws of our beloved country and the upholding of the Eighteenth Amendment. I was not afraid of losing my vote when casting it for one who had been working for the many duties for the good of our country and helpfulness of the needy of other lands. "In God we trust." Mary Hudson.

IN THE FIELD AGAIN.

Five years ago the writer had a severe nervous breakdown, and was forced to give up all active work, and for four and one-half years was out of the regular work. Last summer I was strangely and marvelously led to go to Camp Peniel, at Conneautville, Pa. Had for years believed in Divine Healing, but never had faith for my own healing. On Wednesday it was announced that on Friday there would be a healing service, and immediately I knew. Friday afternoon I was there at the altar on my knees, with my Bible open at Matt. 7:7, 8. Brother and Sister Thomas, of Wilmore, Ky., and Brother Anderson, of Erie, laid their hands upon me and all glory be to Jesus it was so. Made four trips from Cookman Hall, which is at the base of the hill to the dining hall on top of the hill, and whereas it had made me puff to climb that same hill before I was prayed for, it did not disturb me at all. Had been examined on June 20, 1928, and the three physicians declared my heart had moved one and a quarter inches and that there was a very pronounced murmuring of the valves. Was not able to sweep the floor and climbing stairs was sure to make me gasp for breath, but praise his holy name he did it. Instantly. How can I praise him enough, or serve him effectively. God called to the Evangelistic field; am not happy if idle. Am so situated that I can truly say, "No place too weak, or small. Returning to Oklahoma soon and now booking meetings for summer and fall in that region. Preach the old-fashioned, four-fold gospel that fed the old amen corner of fifty years ago. HOW TO GET THE BLESSING.

By The Editor.

WE frequently receive letters from persons who are deeply concerned for the entire sanctification of their hearts from all sin. They are evidently "hungering and thirsting after righteousness." They want to know just what to do in order that they may appropriate the gracious promise that "the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin."

First of all, we would say that those who would be cleansed from inherent sin—the carnality of their natures—should be quite sure that they are the children of God. They should have the witness of the Spirit that they are the children of God. They should have the witness of the Spirit that they have been regenerated, that their actual sins have been blotted out; that they have saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. If they have any doubt on this subject, these doubts should be cleared away in earnest prayer, and they should come into a clear and gracious experience of sins forgiven. The blessing of sanctification is not for the unregenerated or the backslidden, but for those who can say, "I know that my sins are pardoned, and that I am a child of God."

A gracious state of justification is a very blessed state. It is a state that calls for a careful life of obedience, both to the Scriptures as we find them, and to the admonitions, warnings and leadings of the Holy Spirit, which are always in harmony with the Scriptures. We think it is quite possible for persons to be soundly converted, and without proper teaching, or helpful spiritual surroundings, to drift away from a conscious experience of grace, and become backslidden in heart, while their outward lives, perhaps, are that of a very respectable church member. Such person needs to be reclaimed and to come back into a state of conscious salvation before they can expect to enter into the experience of full deliverance from sin.

Having settled the fact that you are a child of God, I would suggest that the next step is to assure yourself beyond doubt, that you do believe that Jesus Christ has power to save you from all sin, that his precious blood can cleanse away any, and all, remaining carnality. That your old man can be crucified, "that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth you should not serve sin." That through the virtue of the blood, and the power of the Holy Ghost, you will not "let sin therefore reign in your mortal body, that ye should obey it in the lusts thereof." You can never receive the blessing of entire sanctification from sin so long as you doubt the power of Christ to cleanse. I have known persons who were able to believe that Jesus could cleanse, but they could not see how they would be able to keep the blessing. You must strengthen your faith and comfort your heart with the inspired prayer of the Apostle Paul, who says: "And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it." Here we have a most gracious assurance that the same divine power that can cleanse, can, and will, keep.

You have now settled two important questions: First, you are sure that you are a child of God. Second, you have no doubt but the Lord Jesus Christ is able to save to the uttermost. His precious, atoning blood can cleanse you from all sin. It can eradicate and wash away all that strange and hurtful thing—pride, ugly temper, sinful ambitions, lustful desires, resentment, or whatever you have found rising up within you that greatly hinders your spiritual development and Christian activities. The "root of bitterness" can be plucked up. "The body of sin" can be destroyed. The "old man" can, and ought to be, crucified.

Have you determined, with these facts before you, that you will press on without doubt, with earnest concentration of mind and heart, for the blessing? Please to remember that you cannot "grow" into this blessing. Just as your regeneration was a divine work of the Holy Spirit, creating in you a new life, your sanctification must be the work of the Holy Spirit destroying an old carnal life. The inspired writer calls it a "crucifixion." It is a death. "The old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts," must die. Now will you resign yourself into the hands of the great Physician, for this blessed and all-important surgery? This resignation is, in fact, a consecration. It recognizes the fact that you are a child of God; that you are bought with a price; that you are not your own; that you yield yourself to God, past, present and future, entirely submitted to his will, that what you are, and what you have, belongs to him, and that with glad obedience you give yourself for him to work in you, and with you the fulness of his will and purpose, without objection or complaint. Be sure that your consecration is complete; that there are no reservations.

The next, and last step, is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. You believe that he can, now believe that he will; go a step farther and believe that he does cleanse you from all sin. Do not postpone the sanctifying work of the Holy Spirit to some future time, but remember that the disciples waited until. Claim the blessing by faith, but hold steady until the Spirit witnesses that the work is done. I cannot suggest that you make any public confession of your faith until you receive the witness of the Spirit that your heart is purified. Wait in consecration, prayer and trust, with earnest, expectant pleading until the Holy Ghost certifies within you that your consecration is accepted of God, and that your faith has appropriated the sanctifying power of the precious blood of Christ. Then, what he has witnessed within you, without doubt or fear, you can, with joy, witness to your fellowbeings. Do not fail to witness.

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

MODERATE drinkers make drunkards. Drunkards make criminals. Criminals murder, rob, burn, destroy. The moderate drinkers of today are the drunkards of tomorrow, and the drunkards of tomorrow are the criminals of the next day. The bootleggers, newspapers and officials who sympathize with them, foster violation of law, breed contempt for good order, peace and happiness among men, the sobriety and prosperity of the community and nation.

Bootleggers, the whole fraternity, those who manufacture, transfer, and sell intoxicating drinks, who are comforted and encouraged by a certain class of publishers, writers, officials and drinkers, not only trample upon the law, but they go armed to the teeth; they are ready to murder and do often kill, without hesitation, the representatives of the law.

The people of the United States have written into their constitution a law against the manufacture, transformation, or selling of intoxicating liquors for any use, except for scientific purposes. This is known to all the world. The people of this nation are the most prosperous people in the world. There is more employment at better wages, than anywhere else on the face of the earth. Hundreds of thousands of laboring men own their homes and cars; they live well, their children are educated; other hundreds of thousands are buying and paying for their homes. Out from among the poor, industrious and thrifty people come college professors, legislators, governors, senators, and presidents of the nation. Never in the history of the world have the great common people had the opportunities that they have in the United States.

In spite of the devil, and all his allies, we have countless tens of thousands of homes where intoxicating drink is unknown. Multitudes of our children are growing up who never saw an open saloon, a drunkard, or smelled the odor of strong drink.

It is a well known fact that ships from Canada and Great Britain loaded with liquor hang about our coasts constantly to assist in the violation of our laws in the degradation of our people; they are high handed criminals against the laws of our land, the welfare and peace of our people. There is no more honesty, honor or truthfulness in them than the old sea pirate of other years. It would be to the honor of England and Canada if they refused clearance to any ship

SOME INCIDENTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

CHRISTIANS of other days had a type of hymns and songs with deeper notes of seriousness in them than those of the present day. Here is one:

"Assure my conscience of her part
In the dear Redeemer's blood,
And bear thy witness with my heart,
That I am born of God."

Another example:

"Let others in the gaudy dress
Of fancied merit shine,
The Lord shall be my righteousness,
The Lord forever mine."

A further example:

"Lord, I cannot let thee go
Till a blessing thou bestow;
Do not turn away thy face,
Mine's an urgent, pressing case."

MAKING MONEY FOR GOD.

When in Osaka, Japan, we expected next to go to Kyoto, the great city where is located Doshisha University—the first Christian College in Japan which I wrote about in a previous article in connection with that great leader, Neesima. Our plans for Kyoto however fell through and we went to Tokyo instead. The following incident is very suggestive. I could wish that more business men would make money for God.

"The Hon. Alpheus Hardy, the princely benefactor of countless good causes, who educated the great Japanese Christian, Dr. Joseph Hardy Neesima, once told the following thrilling story of his experiences to the Psi Upsilon Society at Amherst College of which he had just been made an honorary member:

"I am not a college man, and it was the bitter disappointment of my life that I could not be one. I wanted to go to college and become a minister; went to Phillips Academy to fit. My heart broke down, and in spite of my determined hope of being able to go on, at last the truth was forced on me that I could not.

"To tell my disappointment is impossible. It seemed as if all my hopes and purposes were defeated. 'I cannot be God's minister!' was the sentence that kept rolling through my mind.

"When that fact at last became certain to me one morning, alone in my room, my distress was so great that I threw myself flat on the floor. The voiceless cry of my soul was, as I lay, a vision, a new hope, a perception that I could serve God in business with the same devotion as in preaching, and that to make money for God might be my sacred calling. The vision of this service and its nature as a sacred ministry, was so clear and joyous that I rose to my feet, and with new hope in my heart, exclaimed aloud, 'O God, I can be thy minister! I will go back to Boston. I will make money for God, and that shall be my ministry!'

"From that time I have felt myself as much appointed and ordained to make money for God as if I had been permitted to carry out my own plan and been ordained to preach the gospel. I am God's man, and the ministry to which God has called me is to make and administer money for him, and I consider myself responsible to discharge this ministry and to give account of it to him."

It was largely due to Mr. Hardy that Neesima became the great Christian leader to Japan in the early missionary days. Probably had not Hardy put Neesima through school and stood by him he never could have done such work for God.

BUDDHIST THEOLOGY VERSUS CHRISTIAN.

The Rev. E. S. Waterhouse, M.A., D.D., in the Methodist Times writes:

"In a Buddhist book there is a story of a Buddhist boy converted to Christianity, who,

A LEAF FROM JOHN WESLEY.

In Wesley's Journal the following is given. J. H. was a man of regular life and conversation, one that constantly attended public prayers and sacrament and was zealous for the church and against dissenters of every denomination. Being informed that people fell into strange fits at the societies he came to see and judge for himself. But he was less satisfied than before; inasmuch that he went about to see his acquaintances one after another until one o'clock in the morning and labored above measure to convince them it was a delusion of the devil.

We were going home when one met us in the street and informed us that J. H. was fallen raving mad.

It seems he sat down to dinner but had in mind first to end the sermon he had borrowed on Salvation by Faith. In reading the last page he changed color, fell off his chair and began screaming terribly and beating himself against the ground.

The neighbors were alarmed and flocked together to the house. Between one and two I came in and found him on the floor, the room being full of people whom his wife would have kept without but he cried out aloud, "No, let them all come, let all the world see the just judgment of God." Two or three men were holding him as best they could. He immediately fixed his eyes upon me and stretching out his hand cried: "Aye, this is he who I said was a deceiver of the people. But God has overtaken me. I said it was all a delusion. But this is no delusion." He then roared out, "O Thou devil, thou cursed devil! Yea, thou legion of devils! thou canst not stay. Christ will cast thee out! I know his work is begun. Tear me to pieces if thou wilt, but thou canst not hurt me."

He then beat himself against the ground again, his breast heaving at the same time, as in the pangs of death, and great drops of sweat trickling down his face.

We all betook ourselves to prayer; his pangs ceased and both his body and soul were set at liberty.—John Wesley.

seeing a peasant letting his wife carry a burden whilst he did nothing, remonstrated with him. Both lost their tempers and the man, to prove he could do as he liked, put more upon the woman's load. Flaming with indignation the boy told his old Buddhist father, who quietly replied, 'Yes, that is what you do! Lose your temper! Is that good? Made the man lose his! Is that good? Add to the woman's load! Is that good? How much better not to interfere trying to make people do right, but simply contenting yourself with setting a good example. That is all you can do.'

Buddhism knows no Sermon on the Mount.

It has no John 3:16.

It has no Pentecost.

It has no good Samaritan spirit.

It has no Cross and cleansing blood.

It leads to fatalism.

Buddhism knows no victory in the soul such as Christ gives.

The following story shows the contrast:

Bishop Taylor told us of a black man, recently converted, who was kneeling at the altar for communion, and presently the Bishop saw him looking intently and wildly at the man by his side and then in great agitation he arose and fled into the forest. Presently he came back and quietly taking his place at the altar, finished the communion, eating from the same loaf and drinking from the same cup with the man from whose presence he had just fled. After the service Bishop Taylor inquired the cause of his strange conduct, and the man told him that in the one by his side he recognized the one who had long ago slain his father and that he had sworn a great oath of revenge. But in the meantime he had been converted, yet when he saw the man there he remembered the murder and his oath and the old hatred awoke within him, and so great was the temptation that came upon him that it drove him out into the wilderness where the Evil One assailed him, but upon his knees he conquered through the power of a will renewed by the Spirit of God.

Should all the forms that men devise

Assault my faith with treacherous art
I'd call them vanity and lies,

And bind the gospel to my heart.

LOOKING INTO ETERNITY.

The story is told of Filippo Neri, founder of a great school in Italy, that while at one of the universities, a young man whom he had known as a boy, ran up to him with a smiling face, and told him that his long-cherished wish was now gratified; his parents had given him leave to study law. He had entered the law school, and meant to spare no pains in pursuing his studies.

After he had spoken for some time in this strain, the holy man, who had listened patiently and kindly, replied:

"Well, when you have completed your studies, what do you mean to do then?"

"Take my doctor's degree," said the youth.

"And then?" said Neri.

"Then," said the youth, "I shall have a number of hard and knotty cases to manage, and by my eloquence, learning, zeal, and acuteness, I shall draw notice and gain fame."

"And then?" repeated Neri.

"Why, then?" added the youth, "I shall be promoted to high office, and shall make money and grow rich."

"And then?" continued Neri.

"And then," said the young man, "I shall live comfortably and honourably, in health and dignity, and shall be able to look forward quietly to a happy old age."

"And then?" continued Neri again.

"And then," answered the young man, "and then—and then—I shall die."

"And then?" once more asked Neri with deeper emphasis.

The young man made no answer. He hung his head and walked thoughtfully away. He took a look into "eternity," and it changed the course of his life.

Salvation changes the vision of many students in the Orient. One young man graduated an honor student in the Christian College of Seoul, Korea. He was entitled to go to America for further studies but he preferred being a holiness preacher, and is now one of the pastors of the O. M. S. of Korea.

SAYINGS.

The kingdom of God cometh not by committees, conferences and commissions. It suffereth violence!

A preacher complained that attending his Annual Conference gave him a headache. And why? Because too many conferences are made up of statistics, wire pulling, "findings" and reports. We want another conference like that of the Acts of the Apostles when Pentecost came upon the meeting.

If the kingdom could be brought in by social power, it would be in long ago. Too much time spent at the dining table, not enough in the Upper Room.

The Korean Christians can teach us all how to pray. I have met them at their 5:30 A. M. meetings with 300 present. They never run their meetings by the clock. Three hours is easy with them.

One thing that keeps progress of the kingdom back is wrong training of Christian workers. What can you expect of a worker who is trained in Modernism and who has no spiritual experience?

It takes more than money, program, buildings and schools to save the heathen. You need the power of the Holy Ghost and Spirit-filled missionaries.

"Expect great things from God. Attempt great things for God" was William Carey's motto when he went to India. In this age of unbelief we do not expect things from God, and where there is a lack of vital compelling faith nothing of any consequence is attempted for God.

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER IV.

ITS MARVELOUS INFLUENCE ON THE WORLD.

Iwonder if Queen Victoria was right when she said, "The Bible is the secret of England's greatness."

I wonder if Mr. Green in his "History of the English People," was right when he said, "The effect of the Bible on the character of the people at large was simply amazing."

I wonder if Canon Farrar was right when he said, "It was the Bible that made America what she is."

Let us frankly ask ourselves the question, Which went first into China and India and Africa and South America, the steel plow and the twine binder or the Bible? Which went first, such measure of law and order and decency as now obtains, or the Word of God?

We have not forgotten that infidel Ingersoll said, "Wherever the Bible has been read, men have immediately commenced cutting each other's throats. Wherever that Bible has been circulated, men have commenced hating each other with all their hearts." But let us turn from infidel oratory at $200.00 per night to cold-blooded, indisputable facts.

In England, a Bible land, there is only one murder to every 178,000 inhabitants. In Holland, a Bible country, there is only one murder to every 100,000 of the inhabitants. In Spain where there is no Bible, there is one murder for every 4,113 inhabitants. In Rome there is one to every 950 inhabitants.

Once more, in London, a Bible city, there are four illegitimate children for every 100 legitimate ones. In Paris, where the Bible is scarcely ever read, there are 48 for every 100, and in Rome, where this Book is suppressed for every 100 legitimate children there are 243 illegitimate ones.

France burned her Bibles and she has had fifteen governments in less than a hundred years. Poor Mexico, deprived of the Word of God through priestcraft, has gone through baptism after baptism of riot and bloodshed and death. She has had sixty revolutions since 1820 and is at it yet.

What Victor Hugo said to Spain and Italy may well be said to any nation that has never known God, or has repudiated and turned away from His Word: "There is a book," said he, "which is an emanation from above—the Book, the Bible. You have proscribed it. Now let us see your pupils." I have just been giving you a few samples as between the pupils of Bible lands and otherwise, and the contrast can speak for itself.

Charles Darwin was strongly prejudiced against the supernatural, but he frankly confessed that the Bible had done for the Terre-del Fuegos what he thought was impossible.

What did Darwin mean when he said, "A man about to be shipwrecked on some unknown coast will devoutly pray that the lesson of the missionary will have reached that far." He meant that where the Gospel had not gone, civilization had not gone, and that a shipwrecked man under these conditions might eventually find himself headed for the soup tureen of a tribe of husky cannibals.

The infidel has kept himself busy berating the Bible, but we note amusingly that he always manages to hang around where its shadow falls. He knows that otherwise he would get into embarrassing circumstances with regard to his scalp.

We cannot help but repeat the story of the two infidels, an uncle and a nephew, who were shipwrecked on the shores of a wild island known to have been inhabited by cannibals. They hid under the bushes in the daytime and scoured about a bit in nighttime for a few herbs and other means of living. One morning the nephew said, "Uncle, I'm getting tired of this and I have made up my mind that I would about as leave furnish a meal for the cannibals as to lie around under these bushes and starve to death, and I am going on a reconnoitering expedition."

On a little hill a bit in the distance was a large tree and he climbed up into its branches and looked about in the different directions. All at once he let loose, came tearing down the tree and bounded down into the presence of his uncle so fast that his uncle thought the whole cannibal tribe was after him.

"Uncle, Uncle," he exclaimed, "we're dead safe; we're dead safe! I saw the spire of a church!"

And profane, unbelieving infidels though they were, they knew that where the church pointed its spire toward the sky there the Bible had gone, and there the Gospel had been preached, and there human life was held in due regard.

It's strange that these infidels who don't like churches and Bibles and Sunday Schools and preachers and deacons, and so on, don't move, they can still find a few places that are without them.

Everybody knows that where the Bible has gone it has made things safe. Have you ever seen a rogue's museum? If you have, you have found there guns and dirks and sandbags and brass knuckles and skeleton keys, but you never found a Bible in the whole kit.

If you know the history of human liberty and civil government, you know the place the Bible has held in it all. One of the most significant monuments in the world stands on the village green, the battlefield of Lexington. It is a massive pulpit with an open Bible lying on it, cut from the everlasting granite.

If you know the history of education, you know the Pilgrim fathers build first the church and then the school house and that all the way from this humble beginning to the great university the work was conceived and carried on by men who loved the Bible and whom the Bible inspired with a love for learning.

If you know the history of jurisprudence, you know the Bible is the foundation of law in all the civilized nations of the earth.

If you know the history of literature, you know that Mr. Green in his History of England, declared that "as a mere literary monument the English version of the Bible remains the noblest example of the English tongue."

You know, also, that Ruskin said of himself, "I owe to the Bible the best part of my taste in literature."

You know also, that Hall Caine said of his own writings, "Whatever strong situations I have in my books are not of my own creation, but are taken from the Bible." "The Deemster" is the story of the prodigal son, "The Bondsman" is the story of Esau and Jacob, "The Scapegoat" is the story of Eli and his sons; and "The Manxman" is the story of David and Uriah.

You know also that in Shakespeare there are 187 actual quotations from the Bible and 551 allusions to it; that in Tennyson there are 400 references to the Old Testament alone, and that in Browning there are more than 500 allusions to the Word of God.

If you know the history of Music, you know that the great masterpieces, which have thrilled the souls of millions, cannot be appreciated apart from a knowledge of the Bible. What of Handel's "Messiah" and Mendelssohn's "Elijah" and Beethoven's "Mount of Olives," and scores of others time will not permit to mention.

If you know the history of art, of painting and sculpture, you know that the canvas of Raphael and Murilla and Michael Angelo, Rubens, Dore and Tissot and literally scores of the master painters of the world speak with a dead language, and that the sculpture of Angelo and Donatello and Pisaono and Thorwaldsen stands mute in one's presence if he does not have an acquaintance with what is found on the pages of the Book of books.

Indeed there is no other book, there are no other hundreds of books, to which the advance of civilization, social betterment, philanthropy, literature, art and culture in general owes even the smallest fractional part of the debt it does to the Bible.

It was a great cartoon that Kaulbach painted of the Reformation, but he became the exponent of a mighty truth in doing it. He represented Martin Luther standing with an open Bible in his hand, while around him are grouped all the explorers and investigators and scientific and literary leaders of the age.

In view of all this what are we going to say to these men who want to deny to such a Book an equal place alongside of other books in our public schools.

At a meeting in Washington years ago Indian chiefs from the reservations had come to see the President, Mr. Harrison. The peace conference was being presided over by John Wanamaker, then Postmaster General. One of the Indian chiefs arose to speak through an interpreter, and he said:

"Our homes are not like your homes; our wives don't dress like your wives; our children don't live like your children; we don't live in any way like our paleface brother, the white man. Our homes are not like your homes. Our manner of living is not like yours. What makes the difference? What medicine must the poor Indian take? Tell me, great father, that I may go back to my people and tell them."

Major General O. O. Howard, who wears the empty coat sleeve to the honor of his country, jumped to his feet, rushed to the platform, seized the Bible, and raising it above his head, he said:

"Mr. Speaker, tell the poor Indian that this is the medicine. This is the medicine that will make the world's wrongs right. This is the medicine that will close every grogshop in this country. This is the medicine that will make capital and labor shake hands. This is the medicine that will reduce to a minimum the difficulty between classes and masses and drive misery and sorrow, and corruption, and intrigue out of life and make out of this old sin-cursed world a paradise of blessing."

And I commend it to you because of this as the very Word of God Himself.

When Edward Douglass White, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, took the usual oath administered he kissed the Bible. And yet there are those, thousands of them, who shove it aside as if it were an offense to their culture and an insult to their intelligence to even look upon it.

I do not mean to say this is all because of ignorance; but a large part of it is, and as a rule the people who criticize the Bible most are the people who know the least about it. This is especially true when a man goes out of his way to criticize it.

A self-styled sceptic once said to a noted divine who was reading his Bible:

"It's time you stopped reading that book. The scientific world has long since repudiated it."

They were on the train and he said it for the benefit of a few who were listening.

"It would be better for you, sir, if you knew more about this old Book," replied the clergyman.

WORSHIP.

Rev. H. A. Coffman.

Text.—“Worship God.” Rev. 19:10 and 22:9.

WORSHIP God,” was on two occasions the command of an angel to the Beloved Apostle. John was no slacker in worship. In fact worship was such a fixed habit with him, that on both occasions referred to by the text, he was about to worship; before he paused to consider, what was to be the object of worship. When he was about to worship the messenger, instead of the source of the message, he was told on both occasions: “see thou do it not: for I am thy fellow servant, and of thy brethren the prophets, and of them which keep the sayings of this book; worship God.” If worship was the condition of salvation, all men would be saved, regardless of character; because all men worship. By nature, the principle is so fixed in us, that it is impossible for man to live and not worship something; but all do not worship God.

WORSHIP DEFINED AND ILLUSTRATED.

Worship is to adore, to reverence, to fear, to cling to, to fall before, to honor and to obey. The growing vine illustrates worship, as it clings to the mighty oak; or to the arbor, built to keep it above the earth. If no oak is in reach and no arbor is provided, it will cling to grass and weeds, or will re-root itself in the earth. The growing plant will turn the face of its blossom to the sun and stretch forth its leaves toward the light. The plant and vine reach upward and outward toward their source of life, beauty and fruitage in a natural way which they cannot prevent, while they live. Likewise man was created to worship. It is not the fact of worship that decides his destiny, but what he worships. The importance of what we worship is very forcefully brought to our notice in the “first” and “second” commandments:—“Thou shalt have no other gods before me—for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God.” If man does not worship upward and outward, as illustrated by the plant and vine, he will worship inward and downward, thereby bringing “the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation.”

WHY WORSHIP GOD?

Any other worship degenerates the soul below beast life and character. Worship implies two orders of intelligent beings; a higher and a lower order, i. e., the Creator and the created. When the creature worships the Creator, the lower order is developed by becoming “partakers of the Divine nature.” By reaching outward and upward in worship, at a time when “it doth not appear what we shall be: we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.” All forms of worship that reaches after God in the name of his Son our Savior is Christian worship. Much, however that passes for Christian worship is the worst form of idolatry the world has ever seen. A few Christian adornments, such as church membership, baptism and even hearing a sermon occasionally that has been sensationally advertised, may be the means of soul delusion and not the worship of God. “Thus they change their glory into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.” (Or a sheep, that sheareth ten pounds of wool, or a gusher, that is hard to control, producing both gas and oil). “Hath a nation changed their gods, which are yet no gods? But my people have changed their glory for that which doth not profit.” “Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools, and changed the glory of the uncorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, and to birds, and four-footed beasts, and creeping things.” In the light of these and other warnings and the fact of present conditions, do we dare profess ignorance when we ask the question “Why”? The reign of modern Paganism, instead of the worship of God, is the reason.

A second reason why we should worship God is, “That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit.” In the first creation, i. e., the creation of material things, God did it alone, by his wisdom and power, having no assistance outside his own spiritual personality, the Trinity, which is God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. There was no material form or substance to assist him. Created things are the shadow of his creative power and glory. When the wreck of the race came by the “fall” of man, God began a new or second creation; i. e., “A new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.” The “new creation” is no less by the power and wisdom of God than was the first: but it is being done by and with material agencies, viz:—“God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself.” When Christ was about to go away, he said: “He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father.” Our Saviour having gone to the Father, we are to do what he would have done, had he remained. He is waiting until we make his enemies his footstool. He also said: “As the Father hath sent me, even so, send I you.” What God is getting done now in the building of his Kingdom on earth, is “according to the power that worketh in us.” “For it is God that worketh in us to will, and to do, of his good pleasure.” Paul witnessed to his part in the New Creation, when he said: “I also labor, striving according to his working, which worketh in me mightily.” The super-human task that is given the Church to do; can only be done according to the Divine plan and wisdom, which are only given to worshippers of God. “The secret of the Lord is with them that fear (worship) him.” “If any man will do his will (worship him) he shall know of the doctrine.”

HOW, SHALL WE WORSHIP GOD?

God's twin laws for time and substance give us the means for worship. Therefore two grand divisions, or two elements, enter into the worship of God: otherwise it is only idolatry or modern paganism. One seventh part of time gives us the Sabbath Day, that we may have time to know his will: and the Law of the Tithe designates one tenth part of acquired substance, that we may have material for Kingdom building. The “Time” element in worship may be divided into three parts—praise, prayer and meditation.

(1) Praise is largely emotional. It is that Joy, which is the Christian's strength, and may be expressed by songs, shouts, and testimony.

(2) Prayer is conversation with God—it is supplication and intercession. “Prayer is the heart's sincere desire, uttered, or unexpressed.”

(3) Meditation is more dependent on the intellectual nature and includes instruction and being instructed. Public worship usually begins with praise, in song and responsive reading. The prayers are a part of the worship. Scripture read, the discourse by the speaker, and meditation by the congregation on what is said comprises the third part of worship for the hour.

The Substance division of Worship, is divided into two parts: Self and Acquired Substance.

(1) Self, or our own bodies:—“I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.” It is the purpose of God to abide in the earthen vessel, if we will permit him. If it pleases God that we have faith in him, how much more it must please him, if we present our bodies in worship; “a living sacrifice.” Paul bears witness of the grace of God bestowed on the churches of Macedonia, who “first gave their own selves to the Lord, and unto us by the will of God.” When their personal consecration had become “a living sacrifice” it naturally followed that their “liberality in ministering to the saints,” would require a special agent to deliver.

(2) The second part of “substance” to be offered in worship, is the tenth part of material things acquired by the labor of our hands. It is the Tithe of all earthly goods that we acquire by any honest means, as “good stewards of the manifold grace of God.” Therefore the admonition—“Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the firstfruits of thine increase: so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine.” The sacred portion that was not to be even touched, called in the beginning the “tree of the knowledge of good and evil,” is now known as the Tithe, which is holy the Lord's. This is to be brought into the “storehouse” by the worshipper as an act of worship; and to be used by the Church to maintain and develop the Kingdom of God on earth.

WHERE, SHALL WE WORSHIP GOD?

Jesus said to the woman:—“The hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet in Jerusalem, worship the Father”; meaning that designated places, geographically speaking, were no longer to be considered (the place, might be worshipped, instead of God). But said he: “the hour cometh, and now is, when the true wor-shipper shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth."

There are three places where all true worship is performed:

(1) Within the personality of the worshipper: wherever the attitude of the soul is in communion with God, "in spirit and in truth": where the individual soul is shut in with God. It may be in the secret closet, where God hears in secret and rewards openly. It may be on the highway, in the workshop, in the kitchen of the busy housewife, between the furrows in the field—anywhere on earth where the worshipper communes with God.

(2) The second place is the family circle. The simplest form of the Church, against which the gates of hell shall not prevail; is where "two or three" meet together in the name of him, who is always the unseen guest "in their midst." Every family is either, Bethel, a house of prayer, or Bethaven, a house of idols. If this be true, it reveals the cause of this nation rapidly becoming Pagan. (Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God").

(3) The third place of worship is in the public congregation. If the Church is in the home, there is no lack of the Church at church. Having to eat bread by the "sweat of our face," and not having sufficient time to worship during the days of labor, God by his own example and then by commandment gave us a holy day, wherein all individuals and families might unite in public worship. "Upon the first day of the week ("Time") let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, ("Substance") that there be no gathering when I come." The "collection for the saints" was to be observed as a part of worship by the congregation on the Lord's Day. According as God had prospered, (much or little) the saints would receive the sacred portion which was wholly the Lord's.

All things are God's. We however recognize three things wholly and holy his; our bodies, "holy, acceptable," the Sabbath Day and the Tithe. The acknowledgment of these in consecration, observance and use, is worship, "in spirit and in truth." Without this recognition and acknowledgment we have idolatry, which may, in many respects resemble Christianity but in reality, is only modern paganism. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of My Father, which is in heaven."

How to Fall in Love with the Bible.

REV. A. W. ORWIG.

It ought to be taken for granted that every Christian loves the Bible and delights to read it, also that he more or less searches it and meditates upon it. But with some persons the precious Word of God is a dry or dull book. The fault, however, is not with the Bible, but with those who do not faithfully use it. A good and useful man once said, "The Bible is dull when I am dull."

Every real Christian does love his heavenly Father's Book. It has been called God's love-letter to his children. And no doubt many of us know the fascination of a genuine love-letter. Why should we not be charmed with God's sweet love-letter to us? One may believe and respect the Bible and yet not deeply love it; the Psalmist speaks of the one whose "delight is in the law of the Lord," or the holy Bible.

I believe our love for the blessed Word of God may be largely gauged by our love for its divine Author. A young woman explained her love for the Bible thus: I receive letters from a certain gentleman which I usually read a number of times because I am devoted to the author of those letters. And just so it is when I read the Bible, I am devoted to and love its Author."

When God's Word becomes a sweet and personal message to us our love both to him and his holy Book will grow stronger and stronger. And that love will be developed by giving less time to some other literature, especially such as merely entertains and does not really profit, but destroys a relish for the Word of God. If we are pliable in the hands of the divine Spirit, letting him control our reading, even to crucifixion, he will cause some old passages to glow with new meaning and beauty. Yes, beloved, it is quite possible that we need to discard even some good books, and read only the best, and thus produce a more joyous Christian experience and greater efficiency in holy service.

A pious college professor startled his class by saying, "Young gentlemen, do not waste your time over good books!" The young men wondered how there could be such a waste. But on proper reflection they saw that time given even to so-called good books, at the cost of neglecting the best, is indeed time wasted. It is well to heed the divine admonition, "Give attention to reading," but also, "How (what) redest thou?"

TO THE BATTLE—O ZION!

REV. TILDEN H. GADDIS.

HE times are terrible. We are hearing from the oratory of statesmen and the pens of our literary genius of the "Crisis of Civilization," and that it is "Christ or Chaos." We are camping on the edge of impending and tremendous events. The old planet on which we live is shaking and rending its rocky ribs, mountains are sliding and seas are roaring and cities are tottering. The tempest is raging in new quarters and strange worlds of fire are rolling in the heavens about us. Perilous times have fallen on history until the startling headlines of the dailies thrill the minds of men and we wonder what is next on the program. Murders, suicides and gruesome tragedies picture the decreasing value of human life and morality is fast becoming a joke with the rising generation. Pleasure is the passion, extravagance the price, and wrecked homes and souls the awful and eternal cost. Science is civilization's god; unbelief in all things divine is the goal of modernism. In quest of truth our feet have wandered from the old paths and from a faith in the Pilgrim's God; from the Bible of those who blazed the trail of religious liberty through the woods of a new world and fought and bled and died that the Stars and Stripes might float over a Christian nation, into strange by-roads of germs and cells and hairy brutes, to ocean's depths and twinkling stars and molecules until many are more concerned about finding the composition of the electron than they are of finding God.

Satan behind the scenery has mobilized his heavy artillery on a new battle front. The fight is on and there is a peculiar and subtle warfare being waged in Zion. The manner and occasion of temptation is such a surprise that many do not understand their own souls and in the midst of the conflict many are losing the glory and hanging their harps on the willows, bragging on their yesterdays and losing interest in whether we win or lose the war of the ages. Blood ceases to boil against sin and the passion of the pioneers like Luther, Wesley, Booth and Inskip has degenerated into oratory, ethics and ease. While philosophers and theologians abound, and rightly so, warriors with fighting blood and martyrs' blood in their veins are scarce and we are becoming restless and uneasy and running to and fro from this location to that as though it was a matter of where we fought rather than how. We are sitting around mending nets and calking boats and telling how many we will catch next time when Jesus promised to make us fishers of men. We seem to feel that it is a matter of getting in the right hole or discover some new tempting bait and we fish up and down the shore and take little. I am told that a good fisherman patiently stays put, believes in his art and comes home with the meat.

All this moving around and lack of faith is probably a mark of the apostasy and, in getting our eyes on the work rather than the results, we have brought about a situation which calls for such questions as "What is the matter with Protestantism?" "Is the Holiness Movement moving?" etc. It is possible for a people to know that something is wrong and yet not be able to tell altogether what it is or what the remedy. After all the many attempts by beaming headlights to solve the problem, diagnose the case and prescribe the remedy in a single article in a holiness weekly, far be it from this humble scribe who is neither prophet, priest or king to put "finis" at the close and walk off amid the laurels of a conquering hero! We only care to add this bit of exhortation to those who may read.

Amidst all the changes of religious history, God stands sure and his plan and objective is the same. We are still obligated to carry the Gospel news to the ends of the earth and "Go Ye" implies more than a few plans and some machinery and a little organizing. Unless we get the passion and go we will find ourselves expecting the hungry multitudes to come and see the wheels go round, and unless there is some fallen, dirty, ragged, depraved, dark, damned humanity going in the hopper and some clean, pure, white, redeemed grain coming through the screen and into the till of God they will not be able to tell why we are shoveling coal and blowing the whistle.

Let us get it on our hearts and ground into the fibers of our minds that we are to save souls and that any ministry that does not have for its objective the winning of the lost is a stench in the nostrils of God. Let us lose no time countermarching and criticizing and running to and fro looking for better fishing holes and easy places and see that we get back to Pentecost for the fire and power and passion that put the "Go" in the early apostles, until we cannot rest so long as there is one unenlightened soul under the blazing sun of the heavens.

We may need many things, but let us put first things first, and if we get the power and vision like Robert Morrison we will get to China somehow, even if there seems no way. Of course, if you just wanted to take a trip it doesn't matter so much, but if you get the world on your heart God will divide the seas and you can walk over to a thousand million that don't know God even has a Son Jesus much less that he died for them. God needs men today who can handle concrete, for you can't build skyscrapers with adobe blocks. If God could get a few riveters and some iron workers and some draftsmen whose vision and plans would stir men's blood he could get up a building that would stand when the winds blow.

Co-operation is an essential to any work and without it the best engineering fails. Let us appreciate the gift of every man and know some are called to one part of the work and some to another, but as in Nehemiah's day, wherever we work on the wall, be it opposite our own house or that of a neighbor's, let us all have a passion to get the city in shape for the Coming King.

To me there is a peculiar cast on the horizon as we look at the western sky of time. The sun is setting for this age, the day is far spent and we must be gathering in the sheaves and get the threshing over for harvest is already late and millions are in eternal despair because the work of God has been hindered. The muttering of tribulation thunders are rolling through the clouds of apostasy and the forked lightning of wrath and judgment is touching here and there and unless we are up and about our Father's business the storm of eternal night will overtake us.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XVII.

HUSTON DEFENDS THE PROPHETS.

OUR readers will recall that the new professor in Huston's class had been teaching that there were ancient prophets whose messages are recorded in the Bible, who were not inspired messengers of God, but that they were simply the statesmen of their times and, having studied the past, they expressed their beliefs with reference to the future and warned the people of the destruction that would come upon them if they were not obedient to a god who was largely the creation of their own imagination.

Huston determined to reply to the professor before the matter should pass out of the memory of his classmates; so the next week he said, "Professor, our former teacher whose place you have taken, very graciously permitted us to ask questions, and invited discussion. I should like to know if it is your intention to follow his method in this particular?"

The professor assured him that he certainly would; that it was his object to encourage independent thinking and a full and free expression of the thought and opinion of his students.

"Well," said Huston, "last week you gave us quite a lengthy discussion of your views with reference to the ancient prophets, whom you claim are not inspired men of God, but simply the statesmen of their times, exhorting and warning the people, and prognosticating the afflictions that would come upon them if they failed to obey the commandments of a god who was largely the creature of their own imagination.

"I have been thinking quite a bit on the subject since your remarks. You will understand that it was quite natural that I should do so, having been raised up to believe that the prophets were divinely inspired, and that they were able to look into the future and describe with accuracy events that would come to pass centuries, even millenniums, after the prophets had passed away.

"Now if they were simply uninspired prognosticators, without any knowledge of Christ, what meaning are we to get out of Micah 5:2, where he says, 'But thou, Bethlehem Eph-ra-tah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting.'

"You know, professor, that the ancient Jew believed this to be prophecy and that it referred to the country and village where the Messiah was to be born, and when the Wise Men came from the East to Jerusalem they got this prophecy of Micah, some hundreds of years old, out of the sacred archives and, on the basis of the statement contained here, told the Wise Men that the Messiah was to be born in Bethlehem. It does seem to me rather serious business to tear out of the Old and New Testaments this ancient prophecy with all of its connections and fulfillment.

"There is another prophecy that I would like to mention for the benefit of the thinking of the class, found in Isaiah 7:14: 'Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name immanuel.'

"Isaiah has had very good standing in the Christian Church, and it has always been understood that he here is foretelling that our Lord Jesus will be born of a virgin. Matthew and Luke give a most interesting and beautiful description of the birth of our Lord of the Virgin Mary, which has been very generally accepted by the church, and is nowhere questioned or contradicted by any New Testament writer.

"I could quote at length from many of the prophets, but must not take up the time of the class; but what are we going to do with the 53rd chapter of Isaiah where he gives such a graphic description of the person of our Lord, his rejection by men, his sorrow, his cruel beating with stripes, his painful suffering between malefactors, and his burial in a rich man's tomb? It does look like a long stretch of a vivid imagination to deny that this is prophecy which was literally fulfilled in the betrayal, sufferings, crucifixion and burial of our Christ.

"Then, I cannot see how we are to overlook that remarkable conversation of our Lord as he walked with the two disciples to Emmaus. May I read you his words? You all remember that the disciples were greatly troubled over the crucifixion of their Lord, and had heard rumors of his resurrection which they could hardly believe; and not knowing they were walking with the Christ, they told him of the startling event which had taken place in Jerusalem. But here are the words of our Saviour: 'Then said he unto them, O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to have entered into his glory? And beginning at Moses, and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning himself.'

"There are two facts that stand out very clearly: The prophets believed themselves to be speaking and writing about the coming Messiah, and our Lord Jesus believed himself to be the Christ of whom the prophets had spoken. For myself, I do not believe the profoundest scholarship, reverent or otherwise, will ever be able to find any sort of reliable data or convincing proof that the prophets were not divinely inspired, that they did not know and speak of the coming Christ, and that Christ did not fulfil the prophecies concerning himself, and thoroughly understand and know that he was fulfilling these prophecies.

Of course, if time permitted I could go into the Psalms and prophets at great length and find any number of predictions concerning the Christ of whom the prophets spoke, without any sort of doubt in their own minds, that they knew exactly of whom they spoke. I beg your pardon for taking up so much of your time, but I came to this University a firm believer in the inspiration of the Scriptures, and I shall not surrender my faith on bald and sweeping statements against the inspiration of the Scriptures without any proof that these statements have any shadow of foundation in facts."

Huston took his seat and encouraged by the ease, freedom and accuracy with which he had spoken, quite a number of students who had been silent listening to professors tear up the Scriptures, clapped their hands vigorously. The professor was quite confused and after saying that we shall discuss this question at length at a later date, asked a few questions and dismissed the class. A few days later he was attacked with a severe cold, was confined to his room for several weeks, and on a partial recovery went with his wife to visit his mother-in-law in Florida, and was so benefitted he got permission to remain for the rest of the school term in order to build up his health.

No doubt some of our readers will question the propriety of Huston's action; personally, we endorse his action without question. The devout and godly students who attend the theological seminaries where well paid, conceited skeptics sit in the chairs of instructors, ridicule the inspiration of the Bible and tear it to tatters, ought constantly, without hesitation or fear, to stand up for their convictions of truth, for the Word of God, and demand proof, and point out, right in the class-room, right in the teeth of these skeptics, the fallacy and shallowness of their arguments, confuse and shame them into silence.

I do not believe there is any better way to remedy the false teaching that is going on in our theological schools, than that brave, resolute men like Huston should stand up in their classes, contradict these skeptical professors and show the emptiness of their false statements and attitude toward the Word of God.

"Oh, I know all about it; I have studied it from one end to the other."

"Well, what is your idea of the Book of Jehoiachim?" said the minister.

"The Book of Jehoiachim, sir," replied the sceptic, "Why it is the best book in your Bible, but it is full of contradictions and historical inaccuracies."

"Well," said the old clergyman, much to the amusement of the listeners, and to the total squashing of the sceptic, "there is no such book in the Bible."

A professor in Yale said, if he had his way he would make as an entrance condition to the college an examination in regard to the Bible. But I fear it would be rather hard on the attendance if one has to judge from the knowledge of the Bible possessed by the average college student of today. Ninety-six of them took an examination once. Thirty-six couldn't tell what the Pentateuch is; forty put the Book of Judges in the New Testament; sixty-five couldn't recite a single verse of the Book of Romans; among the prophets were Matthew, Mark, Luke and John; Sodom and Gomorrah were husband and wife; the Epistles were wives of the Apostles; while Herod and Ananias took the role of kings of Israel. Among the Beatitudes one fellow put, "Blessed are the hungry, for they shall be fed."

Some one has said, and said it truly, "If you will get all of the undergraduates of the colleges and universities of this country together in one building and examine them upon their knowledge of the Word of God, the result would be the most magnificent contribution to humor and foolishness that you have ever read."

The Bible is a mine of truth, and like the mines of Cornwall, the deeper you go the richer the treasure.

The Bible is not a Book to be skimmed over; it is a Book to be digested. It is an extensive garden with fruits and flowers for every need and delight of the soul, but it is not to be fluttered over like the gaudy butterfly darting here and there and sipping elegantly wherever it finds a drop of ready nectar, but it is to be searched the rather like the plodding bee who goes down to the bottom of every flower cup he meets and either finds honey or makes it. The one dies in November, while the other is warm and well-supplied in his hive the whole of the winter through.

"We search the world for truth; we cull

The good, the pure, the beautiful,
From graven stone and written scroll;

From all old flower-fields of the soul;
And weary seekers of the best

We come back laden from our quest
To find that all the sages said

Is in the Book our mothers read."

No wonder when Sir Walter Scott was dying the great literary genius surrounded by a library of forty thousand books said to Lockhart, his son-in-law, "Bring me the Book." And when asked what book he meant, he replied, "There is but one book; bring me the Bible."

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

Just closed at Fort Worth, Texas, a great revival with my dear friend, Rev. Ralph Gray, Pastor. Bro. Gray has done a blessed work there, and they were expecting victory when the evangelist arrived. We had a twelve-weeks' siege at Mobile, Ala. It was terrific all along the line; but God gave victory. We should have continued four weeks longer, but the writer was knocked out by that dread Southern disease, Pellagra, followed by neuritis.

Had two splendid meetings with my old friends, Rev. O. L. W. Brown and Rev. Hervey Brown, of New York District. It is the most difficult field outside of Northern California, in all the United States. Hell bent, and they do not care who knows it. I am to return in July for a real siege, meeting near Jamaica on Long Island, New York. Will rest in California all of April. God bless The Herald family!

NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Williamsport, Pa., February 26-March 3.

The Williamsport Convention was unique. It was held under the auspices of the Billy Sunday Brotherhood of the city, a body of splendid men from various churches who are dead in earnest in their effort to lead men to Christ.

President Butler and the writer preached regeneration and entire sanctification by faith with definite doctrinal emphasis. The leaders of the Brotherhood backed the preaching with prayer, with personal work, and with generous appreciation of the gospel of the sanctifying fullness of grace and salvation in Christ. There were fruitful altar services, and some displays of the power of God through the Spirit that were beyond the ordinary.

The attendance was good. The leading churches of Williamsport and nearby towns and Hughesville camp meeting were well represented. The convention was held in Pine Street Methodist Episcopal Church, a church with a magnificent plant and with a membership of more than 1400. Rev. John H. Daugherty has for a number of years been pastor of this church. He is a rugged, stalwart man of God who believes and preaches historic Christian faith with evangelical interpretation and emphasis. This church has had a marked growth under his able leadership. His hearty support of the convention was a strong factor in the success of the campaign. Much is due also to some leaders of the Billy Sunday Brotherhood.

W. J. Dale, President of the Brotherhood, a Presbyterian, a man of prayer, and of zeal in his quest for souls, a Christian of heroic mould, was outspoken in his appreciation of the gospel of Christ's power to save from all sin and unto all righteousness.

H. T. Ames, mayor of Williamsport, wielding the scepter of civic righteousness against the enemies of the 18th Amendment and every type of criminal, while nearing his eighty-fifth birthday, is indeed a most remarkable man. Brother Ames is a layman of Pine Street Church distinguished in his services in Methodism of more than half a century. He recalls the days of power when the people were so mightily moved under the preaching of such men as Bishop Foster and Bishop Simpson. He is fervent in spirit, mighty in intercession, and carries a great burden of longing for just such a thorough New Testament revival as brought Methodism into existence. He is indeed bringing forth fruit in old age.

The Williamsport Convention was the largest of the three in which I was co-laborer with Dr. C. W. Butler, President, and the last one to be held, before the great Annual Convocation of the National at Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., May 7-12.

Your brother in Christ,

John F. Owen.

MEETING REPORT.

We spent last summer in tent work in the cities of Albert Lea, Austin and Clarks Grove, Minn. During the summer's campaign we saw many people saved, a few sanctified and many, we have reason to believe, "built up in the most Holy faith." To him be the glory.

At the close of the summer's campaign the brethren in Albert Lea prevailed on us to hold a meeting in Albert Lea in a hall which they secured. Before that, however, the Lord had been talking to us about that very thing so when the door opened we had to enter or run away from duty. By his grace we entered in. The meeting began the last of September and continued through October. At the end of that time it was thought best to continue on as a Mission, which we did. The first of March we thought was the time for a special revival effort. Rev. Aiken, Dist. Elder of the North Minnesota Conference, was with us as evangelist for one week and Rev. Miss Ida Helgen, pastor of the Free Methodist Church of Glenville, Minn., was evangelist for one week. Rev. Aiken not being able to remain longer. Although the number of seekers at the altar was not so large we felt that the effort was not in vain as we all felt a definite drawing nearer to the Lord. At the end of this meeting we transferred the management of the Mission to Rev. Helgen that we might engage in evangelistic work.

From the time the meeting began in September on through the winter we witnessed the mighty workings of God in the hearts of people. There is one conversion of striking interest that we feel may be told with advantage. A young man came into the hall under the influence of drink and showing the effects of sin in his face. The first two nights he hurried out as soon as the meeting was over, but the third night when the altar call was given he made his way forward and plead for mercy with intense earnestness. In his confession and plea we kept hearing him mention his mother and how he had trampled her prayers and her God under foot. Afterward when asked where his mother was he said that he had been accused of her murder and been acquitted because he was drunk and poisoned at the time so that he did not know what had transpired. His gun was found on the scene and was evidence against him. We were overjoyed to see this sin-burdened soul plow through to victory.

We expect to be in evangelistic work from now on through the summer and have open dates in May. We can be reached at Albert Lea, Minn., general delivery.

SOME REAL REVIVALS.

On November 30 we started a campaign in the Garfield Street Evangelical Church, Johnstown, Pa. This was our first meeting in that city of churches and historic note. We soon learned that we had come to a great holiness center where many of the great evangelists had been holding forth in other years. Brother G. W. Wilson, with whom we tarried, is truly a great war horse for God. There was no compromise with him. He, with many others, became a mighty force against sin and unrighteousness.

Our attendance was very good. People came from the Missionary Alliance, adjoining churches, Methodist and United Brethren. On the last night of the meeting they of their own accord all rose up and said they wanted us to come again. One sister said, "Well, this was a real revival."

We then got a sudden call to come to Elmira, Ontario, with Rev. E. D. Becker. This meeting was preceded by a brief visit at Wellsville, Ohio, the old historic place to us, where we started to preach the Word of God. Elmira church also had been praying for a revival. They, with their splendid and God-fearing pastor, are being greatly used of God. Their magnificent choir and pipe organ was not in the way of the revival. Their able leader was at his best to marshal the forces to get the worldly element to fall in line. The devil fought hard to defeat us. Satan put on the "King of Kings" show to draw away some of the young people. One man who went got so under conviction, after the pastor had given some warning and heart-breaking remarks, that he ran down stairs, after which he came to the altar and confessed. Sunday school night will not soon be forgotten. We hope that God will let Brother Becker live a long time and permit him to enjoy many more such meetings.

Our itinerary homeward was unique. We tarried at a number of places where God led us to go: Niagara Falls, Buffalo, Dunkirk, Niles and Warren, Ohio. We found the Nazarenes at Warren, Ohio, on fire for God. We tarried with Brother and Sister Bliss. It was surely blissful to be there. We had a good time at Akron. We heard the Johnston's sing. At the North Hill Evangelical Church we heard Bishop Seager. Then on to West Salem for one service and one night only with Rev. D. Elmer Bailey at Mansfield.

The last Campaign was held at Six Points Mission Church, a few miles from the village of Wayne, O. Some real work was done there. The people came from Gibsonburg, Helena, Bowling Green, Jerry City and Rudolph. Bro. Dan Harmon was the originator of this place of worship. He shows great talent in stirring people to greater religious activity. This people wanted to hear what God had to say. As a consequence wrongs were made right. One man came to a neighbor's home and paid for a sack of corn that he had taken. People asked forgiveness and wrongs were righted. One woman, known as Aunt Maggie, who had been at the altar in the first of the meeting, got sanctified. She ran all over the church, greeted the folks and praised the Lord.

Rev. Gilbert Goins and wife had charge of the singing. They are some of the best singers that we have ever had. We hope to hear them sing many times more. We shall be pleased to hear from any who might want a God-sent revival. We are open for some dates for the summer.

ASHBURN, GEORGIA.

The revival services at the Wesleyan Methodist Church continues with accumulating spiritual force and power. Two of the three services last Sunday were attended with spiritual manifestation of joy and victory that were common in the early days of Methodism and that attended the ministrations of Wesley and his co-laborers.

It is announced, these services will continue over next Sunday, if not longer. For there are those in our town, not members of this particular church, who have an inkling that perchance this is God's set time to again visit Ashburn as he did in former days when revival fires burned brightly in November and December as they did in either May or June, while others looking at it from the material side, who remember those halcyon days and the remarkable business prosperity that existed then, are of the opinion, though Turner County has a vaunted and superior farm program, yet, that substantial prosperity will be withheld until our people return to the old paths of sincere, humble and heartfelt worship of God as against church activities or as some one has put it, "playing at churches" and commence again walking in the light that once shone across their path. This does not refer to any denomination, but speaking in a general sense. The present meeting going on in the Wesleyan Church is purely interdenominational, for though the Wesleyan pastor is giving direction to it, yet the evangelist is a Methodist Episcopal, as is his wife who presides at the piano, while Mr. Hutcheson, who makes that rare violin of his shed out that soul-stirring sacred music, is a member of the Baptist Church.

As stated above, Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Hysell, who are doing such wonderful preaching and singing are members of the Methodist Church, a lovable couple who have won their way into the hearts of all who have met them. He is a former student of Asbury College, Ky., one of Rev. H. C. Morrison's young preachers and products.

Ashburn owes much to Henry C. Morrison, a man whose name will go down to posterity alongside that of Wesley and others of the fathers. He deserves the credit in the hands of God of in former days putting Ashburn in the front ranks of the Spiritual towns of the South. Who knows but God in his mercy has sent this young disciple of his to restore to Ashburn that blessed heritage. Give him a chance at the job and come out to hear him. An invitation is extended the citizens of the other towns as well as our country friends to attend these meetings.

SOUTH MANCHESTER, CONNECTICUT.

This city has been mightily privileged during the past ten days in having in its midst a mighty man of God in the person of Rev. Gilbert Milton Laite, of Everett, Mass., who has been holding forth the word of life with power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit. The stage for the great battle was in the old historic Corps of the Salvation Army, which has a splendid membership of blood-washed, sanctified and Spirit-filled soldiers. The meetings were well attended, although the number of unsaved attending was rather small and somewhat disappointing, nevertheless, God greatly blessed in the meetings, and a number of souls came for the blessing of full salvation and the baptism of the Holy Spirit. A number of backsliders were restored, and some sinners saved. Over 30 bowed at the altar during these meetings. Prayer meetings were held and favorably attended every morning at 6:15 A. M. Two souls came to God at those meetings. Noon-day services were also held, at which one backslider was restored. The Nazarene Church, with the pastor, Rev. Bro. French, gave some loyal support to the campaign, and the saints worked and shouted the victory and prayed the Lord in great fashion. The Evangelist worked hard and left no stone unturned to produce for the Kingdom. The time was all too short and the whole crowd would have been glad if his stay could have been extended. Bro. Laite certainly gives himself unstintingly to the work, presents the message with force, fervor and faith, fearlessly uncovers sin, and lovingly and persuasively points folks to the Lamb of God. He is an adept at presenting the claims of God upon the saints for full salvation and the blessing of holiness. Any church privileged to get the services of this good brother for revival meetings or camp meetings are mighty fortunate. He has endeared himself to the people of this place, young and old alike. He can be reached at 12 Upland Rd., Everett, Mass.

Adjutant Jos. Heard.

ELDRED, PENNSYLVANIA.

We closed out our meeting at Sharon, Pa., March 31. Can say that God was there all the way through. The preaching was easy for we had a crowd of folks who were eager for the truth. The meeting was held in the Free Methodist Church and I believe that I have seldom met a finer crowd of Pilgrims. Holiness, death of the old man, eradication of depravity was our theme, and we found an amen in the church all the way through. Eternity alone will reveal the good done.

We found the pastor, Rev. F. W. McClelland, a fine work-fellow, and his good wife surely knows how to entertain the evangelist. A goodly number prayed through to both salvation and holiness, and the experiences were as clear as I have ever seen. We surely appreciated the good folks at Sharon.

H. P. Thomas.

S. H. PRATHER IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

I have had Bro. Prather with me in many meetings, and I thought enough of his work to bring him all the way to the Old Palmetto State. He is doing fine work among us, and I wish the brethren would use him more. He has some open dates during the summer, and a letter to him at 1310 Clay St., Henderson, Ky., will get him. He can get more people to sing than any song evangelist I ever knew, and I have been with the best of them.

C. F. Wimberly.

WHITESBURG, KENTUCKY.

Our revival started out good at Whitesburg last night, April 4, Evangelist C. P. Gossett, in charge of the singing. A great leader of song. The meeting is being conducted as a union for all churches and the towns and county. We are having the revival in the court-house. Looking for a great meeting. We will ask The Herald family to pray for our work here and at home in the Mission in Lexington, Ky.

loaded with liquor for this country. It would be still more to their credit if they kept some of their warships along our coast to intercept, capture and, if need be, sink the ships of these liquor pirates.

Are we to understand that these great peoples, our neighbors with whom we have had peace and harmony for a hundred years, are going to wrap the folds of their honored flag around these lawless pirates of the sea who have given themselves to disobey our laws, and to encourage disobedience, riot, drunkenness and bloodshed among our citizens? For What! The dirty dollar, reeking with the spew of the drunkard, and dripping with the blood of the murdered.

Is anybody so ignorant as to suppose that the commander of a schooner along our coast, trying to land liquor, would make such a blunder, and get so far away from his real character and habit of thought and action, as to tell the truth? What is the value of the testimony of such a man in the courts! It is to be hoped that our government will stand very firmly by the officers and men who followed the rum ship which refused to stop for investigation, and sank her in the sea. Of course, we want peace and harmony with all nations, and all peoples, but it is time that our neighboring nations knew that we are becoming thoroughly tired of their aiding and abetting their people in the violation of the laws of these United States.

It would seem that some countries that are wallowing in the dirt and filth of drunkenness are a bit jealous of our sobriety and prosperity. They appear to sympathize with, and assist the lawless element of our people. It is no time for the newspapers of this country to chime in with the lawless element and foreign countries against law enforcement, sobriety and peace of our own people. We have certain newspapers in this country that are a constant and abiding menace. If some representative of the law in defense of his life, is compelled to shoot a bootlegger, they raise a tremendous clamor; but the bootlegging gang can carry on unrelenting war among themselves, and can shoot down for mere pastime, the representatives of the law and little, or nothing is said about it.

All sober-law-abiding people of this nation ought to rally with enthusiasm to the support of the Anti-Saloon League. We ought to make it a still more powerful body and aggressive force for the battle against the devil and all his cohorts of the liquor traffic. If the judges of the land will apply the Jones' Law and hand it to the bootleggers good and strong, it is remarkable how rapidly this country will go dry. The bootleggers are not in their lawless business for their health, but for money. The Jones' law can be so enforced that the possibility of profits in the nefarious business will disappear, and then the bootlegger will cease to exist.

H. C. MORRISON.

A Word to My Friends.

Quite a number of letters and cards have come to me recently making inquiry with reference to my health. I am thankful to say that I have been gradually improving since coming to Florida. In the last two weeks I have regained considerable strength and am hoping, by the blessing of the Lord, to be able to meet my camp meeting engagements this summer. I very highly appreciate the prayers which have been offered in my behalf. May the Lord graciously bless every one of you who have manifested such kindly interest in me during these five months that I have been kept out of the ministry.

For fifty years I have preached the gospel in the enjoyment of remarkably good health. I have had no complaint to make during these months of illness. I am grateful to God for recovering strength, and with his blessing, I humbly hope to continue for a while yet, to preach a full salvation through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

Faithfully yours,

H. C. MORRISON.

Bishop Berry in Miami.

Bishop Joseph F. Berry, of the M. E. Church, was chosen by the Protestant ministers of Miami, Fla., for the pre-Easter messages delivered in one of the large theaters of the city. My strength was not sufficient to be present at all of these meetings, but I had the great pleasure of hearing him on three of these occasions. Bishop Berry passed the age limit and was retired from the active work as Bishop at the last General Conference in Kansas City, last May.

It has been my privilege to know Bishop Berry for more than a quarter of a century, and I have never seen him, apparently, in more robust health than at the present time. I can hardly conceive of his ever having preached with more vigor than that which characterized his ministry here in the pre-Easter services. I do not know when I have heard more Bible truth proclaimed with greater emphasis and clearness packed into thirty minutes, than these messages from Bishop Berry. Great audiences crowded into the theater and they were thrilled with both the matter and manner of the preacher, who lifted the Lord Jesus Christ high over all, and insisted that he, and he alone, was able to bring peace out of our war, rest out of our weariness, joy out of our sorrow, holiness out of our sin, and eternal blessedness to a race which had wandered away from God. I have not heard our blessed Lord more graciously magnified than in Bishop Berry's sermons. They were not merely intellectual addresses, but they were a powerful presentation of gospel truth. "The world cannot be saved by education, or by legislation; it must be saved by regeneration," said he. The Lord Jesus Christ must reach down his mighty arm and lift men up out of the wreck and ruin of sin.

It was our great pleasure that the Bishop sought out our humble little bungalow and paid us a most delightful visit. We were refreshed and comforted with his Christian fellowship and his earnest prayer for us before his departure. I suppose at no time in his many years of ministry, has he been more active than at the present time. Pastors are calling him for eight-day meetings, beginning on Sunday and closing on Sunday, from many quarters. He is quite unable to respond to anything like the many calls that are coming to him. May he be kept in excellent health and his ministry extended for many years.

Among many friends who called upon us during our recuperation here in Miami, the pastor of Trinity M. E. Church, South, Dr. Burgin, well known throughout the church, has been so kind among his pressing duties, to call upon us frequently. Dr. Hardin, presiding elder of this district, a most delightful brother, has been in to see us and greatly refreshed us with his presence.

I am under promise to preach for Dr. Burgin in Trinity Church at the morning service, April 21. I am asking the Lord to give me strength and a message for that hour. I have never realized more fully in all my life the blessing and comfort of Christian fellowship. The love of the brethren brings a joy close akin, I should think, to that of Paradise. Pressing on and praising God. Amen!

H. C. MORRISON.

SAFETY FIRST!

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HE above is a very familiar sign that we see posted in public places to remind the passing throng to be careful, lest some hurt befall them.

No doubt this sign has done much good in preventing accidents that, otherwise would have occurred. Then it is a good thing to be taught to think of other people, and to give them some rights in life's busy marts as well as being centered on one's personal interests and privileges.

If this admonition—"Safety First"—has been the means of lessening accidents, of dividing rights with others, and schooling us to "think", as the apostle tells us, "upon the things of others," is it not infinitely more important that we practice this suggestion in the spiritual realm of life's higher and more important living?

We are admonished in the Bible to "let each esteem others better than themselves." It is an undeniable fact that, no matter what our state of grace may be, we shall always have to guard against the disposition that would think of ourselves first, and, unless overcome by grace, be better to ourselves than we are to others. It is a fortunate provision of grace that enables us to be so filled with the mind of Christ that, as he "made himself of no reputation," so we may be content to take the second place, preferring that our brother or sister enjoy the honor or blessing that we, naturally, would have sought.

Jesus taught us that when we were bidden to a feast, not to place ourselves under future embarrassment by choosing the high seat, but to seek the lowly place, and in due time, we shall be invited to enjoy a higher seat.

The secret of this disposition to "esteem others better than one's self," lies in the fact that Christ has taken out the old carnal nature that likes to be pampered and humored, and has given us of his Spirit, that came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

It seems that, if we really knew ourselves as Christ looks upon us, and if we realized the pit from whence we have been digged, it would puncture our inflated ambitions and make us to realize that anything is more than we deserve. And a good way to avoid the chagrin of disappointment when we are not "esteemed" as highly as we think we should be, is not to count on any honor, or the reception of any demonstration, then, if none comes, you will be saved the embarrassment of being overlooked.

What a joy it is, however, to keep low at the feet of Jesus, desiring only his love and smile; then if earthly honors come, and you are asked to assume responsibility, you are the better prepared for that leadership, and have learned the sweet lesson of "counting all things but loss, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus." Mary was content to sit at the feet of her Master until she was bidden to arise and go forth to other duties. But, in answer to Martha's complaint, that she did not serve with her in domestic matters, the Master defended her by saying that she had chosen that "good part" which should not be taken from her.

It is a very strenuous life, that of living with an ambition to be complimented and honored! How many disappointments it subjects one to, which they otherwise could avoid. But that is the price of not observing the spiritual "Safety First" signal, of not "esteeming one's self more highly than they ought." The "Safety First" retreat for every one who would avoid the dangers along life's crowded thoroughfares, is lying low at the Master's feet, and, to be content to sit at his feet, we must first have met him "face to face."

I MET THE MASTER FACE TO FACE.

I had walked life's way with an easy tread,
Had followed where comforts and pleasures led,
Until one day in a quiet place
I met the Master face to face.
With station and rank and wealth for my goal,
Much thought for body, but none for my soul,
I had entered to win in life's mad race
When I met the Master face to face.
I met Him and knew Him and blushed to see
That His eyes, full of sorrow, were fixed on me;
And I faltered and fell at His feet that day,
While my castles melted and vanished away.
Melted and vanished and in their place,
Naught else did I see but the Master's face,
And I cried aloud, "Oh, make me meet
To follow the steps of Thy wounded feet."
My thought is now for the souls of men,
I have lost my life to find it again.
Ever since one day in a quiet place
When I met the Master face to face.

Graduation Time is Near.

And no matter how many presents a boy or girl receives, we believe it is rare that they appreciate anything more than an attractive Bible. It is a gift, that if properly taken care of, will last almost a lifetime, serving as "a lamp unto the feet and a light unto the pathway."

Just at this time we have a limited number of copies of one of the lightest, thinnest, most convenient sized Bibles for a young person it has been our privilege to obtain. The size is about 4 $\frac{3}{4}$ x 7 inches, a fraction over $\frac{1}{2}$ inch thick, bound in genuine leather, overlapping edges, silk sewed, India paper, a clear, readable type, chapter numbers in figures, references, maps, red under gold edges, and has the nonbreakable back feature. It also has the silk marker.

So appropriate is this special Bible for a graduation gift, it would seem that it was made for this purpose. It's a book that even the unsaved would appreciate. The net price was $4.25. We are closing out these copies at a special price of $2.40 each. Don't miss the opportunity.

What Is a Christian College?

DR. L. R. AKERS, President of Asbury College

The thirty-ninth year of Asbury College is coming to a close.

A few weeks ago I received a letter from my oldest son who is in Europe preparing himself for the teaching of the Germanic language and literature. In this letter, he made the statement that he had just attended the 642nd anniversary of old Heidelberg University and described this very interesting occurrence which attracted widespread attention.

I could not but compare in point of time the two institutions: the one which has stood through the centuries with their many changing dynasties, rich in historic and cultural influences, yet making no apparent spiritual impress upon its student body; the other a mere infant as to years, born amid adversity and cradled in hardships, every red brick building upon its campus representative of rigid self-denial and sacrificial giving.

After all, the question may be well asked, what elements constitute a Christian college? It is easy to find many institutions that are making every effort to put beautiful buildings over the heads of their students. How many are striving to put beautiful ideals within the hearts of their students? I hold it that the latter is far more important than the former. Brick and mortar and cut stone, no matter how beautifully arranged, can never make a college. The indispensable element in the making of a successful institution must ever be a "golden personality." This was sensed many years ago by the thinker who exclaimed, "Mark Hopkins on one end of the log and a student on the other make a university."

If we may trust the evidences of our eyes and ears in modern day education, it is appalling apparent that institutions are springing up on every hand immensely rich as to endowment and physical resources and yet bankrupt in the ideals of Christian character. One would not go far afield in saying that most of these institutions can be listed as semi-pagan and almost utterly devoid of those restraining, conserving, and constructive influences which were so marked in the formative stages of our American educational system.

In those days college athletics was a by-product. Now the side-show threatens to swallow up the main tent. The leading structure of the campus, once the administration building or the library, is now the many-tiered stadium, rivaling in its immensity the Coliseum of ancient Rome. Not head culture, but toe training; not the sheepskin, but the pigskin; not the three R's, common to the early school, but the modern three R's, namely, "Rah! Rah! Rah!" The leading man no longer the college president, but the athletic coach; the old fashioned literary societies with their social and cultural proclivities are passe and now it is the fraternity dance and prom. The special religious services which were the rule at some time during the college year of the Christian college of our yesterdays are now almost as extinct as the dodo. A superficial psychology has superseded regeneration and a veneering of culture is the substitute for a sanctified heart.

Modern America is extremely well satisfied with itself and because of this self-satisfaction (inevitably followed by moral stagnation) it is at a fearfully low ebb in its lack of spiritually vitalizing ideals. The worth of an individual or a community can never be measured by financial or social yardsticks. Figures and dollar signs are absolutely futile in this realm. The greatness of a community can never be gauged by the noses which the census man counts nor by the bank deposits contained therein.

Some days ago I passed through Chicago, a modern Babylon, and noted its tremendous material expansion. With this extraordinary physical development there seems to have come a corresponding spiritual impoverishment. This city is great as to its millions both of men and of money, but how poor in spiritual achievement. As one has well said, "its population is worth billions; what is its personality worth?" After all, in the ultimate only that which is of spiritual value will endure. Our towering cities are great in material values, yet almost destitute in spiritual attainments. How pitiable and mean was Nazareth of Galilee, both as to the number of inhabitants and material assets, yet who can estimate the golden stream of power, influence, and blessing that has come from its lowly estate?

America, to save her soul, must be emancipated from the thrall of material bigness, and enslavement to gold, and find her life in a joyous captivity to the teachings of the inescapable Christ and in the humble and reverent worship of God.

Back to the thirty-ninth anniversary of Asbury College. What through these years has the fruitage been? What contribution has been made by this institution to the enrichment of society and the upbuilding of humankind?

A review of the years reveals practically one hundred Spirit-filled missionaries on the firing line for the Kingdom all around the world. Hundreds of pastors, evangelists and special workers at home and abroad, living evangel of a great, full, and complete Gospel. An enrollment at the home base exceeding eight hundred, swept by the power of God through personal and evangelistic efforts throughout the year; unimpeachable educational standards not transcending, but supplementing, the work of life building; a spiritual atmosphere pervading classroom, halls, and campus, impressing deeply all who visit it from afar; a Faculty possessing that rare and desirable combination of scholarship and piety; an institution in which the things of the Kingdom come first; a school faithfully and fearlessly proclaiming the mighty dynamic of historic Methodism, Wesleyan and scriptural, emphasizing regeneration as an absolute necessity for the salvation of all men and the experience of entire sanctification as the blessed privilege of all believers; a school which holds that the blending of the finest culture with the highest spiritual attainments is not incompatible, but possible and most desirable.

Commencement time is dawning. Much the greatest Class as to numbers will graduate from these halls on June 5th. A hundred and twelve picked youth from many states, almost a small college in itself, marching forward in cap and gown to receive the coveted diplomas and to take their places in the ranks of those who shall mould the destiny of America tomorrow. High and holy is the mission which has been entrusted to Asbury College. Many are the prayers ascending in her behalf. Thousands of devout and consecrated men and women throughout our nation are thanking God for an institution which is true to her calling and which sends from her doors youth, not depending upon the ever-shifting currents of popular thought, but with positive convictions reinforced and stabilized by a "Thus saith the Lord."

The supreme need of the moment is "a changeless Christ for a changing world." More and more it is apparent that for the American melting pot it is "Christ or chaos." Asbury College keeps the faith, exalts the Cross, and proclaims continuously a full and free redemption. She is worthy of your continued prayers and your larger financial support. Will you join her in carrying on for God and a lost world?

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

I am looking forward to the time when I can start for old Kentucky, and I suspect by the time you read this letter I shall be home at my desk, where I feel more at home than anywhere else. Dr. Morrison is feeling much better every day and hopes to be able for his summer camp meetings. We are so thankful for his recovery, as it has been a long siege. I am giving you a splendid story for this week. It shows the power there is in faith and prayer, and I hope it may be the means of stimulating our faith, to a closer walk with God.

Lovingly,

AUNT BETTIE.

A Drummer's Dream.

"I am not a strong believer in dreams," the drummer remarked as he drew his chair closer to the stove, "but I can tell you a little circumstance that happened a few years ago, which has remained a mystery to me to this day.

"I have been traveling for a large wholesale drug company in St. Louis for a number of years, and I have many patrons. On my run in the southwest, I had one very particular old friend whom I will call Brother Benton, because everybody in this section calls him by that name. He nearly always has an order for me, but whether he did or not I always felt better after having made my call, on account of his cheerful ways and pleasant words. I could only see my customers twice a year at best, and I looked forward to my visit to this old customer as one of my best days.

"On one visit I sold him a much larger bill than he ever made before, but I did not hesitate to recommend the house to fill the order. I had learned that he was universally loved and respected in his town as a sincere Christian. He would not keep ardent spirits nor would he hear for one minute of giving space in his house for tobacco in any shape. 'My Bible,' said he, 'condemns both whiskey and tobacco, and I will have nothing to do with them.' No amount of persuading or liberal terms and discounts could induce him to deviate from this rule.

"About six months after I had sold him the large bill I was notified by the house that the bill was unpaid, and that I should call as soon as possible and collect it. I hastened over my territory and called in person to see after the matter. I found a new face behind the counter and I learned that a short time after I sold the bill my old friend had taken the smallpox and he and his family had been under quarantine for a long time. His sickness had lasted several months, and he was still confined to his home. I did not see him, but he sent me word that the matter would come out right in the end.

"To make a long story short, he had suffered more losses than he thought, and six months went by and still the bill was not paid. I wrote to the house and told them the condition of affairs and they were holding up all proceedings against him.

"Six months went by again, and I was ordered to go at once and collect the bill or enter suit. I had but one thing to do, though I confess I had some rebellious thoughts. The night before I arrived at his town I spent several weary hours rolling and tossing in my bed, trying to contrive some plan to avoid closing out my old friend. He lived some eight miles from the railroad, and I should see him on the morrow. I knew if I brought suit that in all probability others would do the same, and a good man would go to the wall for no fault of his own. While tossing on my bed I must have fallen asleep. I thought that I had called upon my friend, and we were sitting in his family room, with all his family about him. He turned to me and said: 'We are just about to have our morning prayers, and we shall be glad to have you join with us.' I replied, 'With pleasure.' He announced that he would read the twenty-third Psalm. He began to read, but I was astonished at the words I heard. I had learned that psalm in Sunday school when a boy, and while I had not read my Bible as much as I should have done, still I will never forget that 'the Lord is my shepherd.'

"The words were read in a round, clear voice, and my heart rejoiced, though I had not heard it that way before. He read:

"The Lord is my banker; I shall not fail. He maketh me to lie down on gold mines. He giveth me the combination of His tills. He restoreth my credit. He showeth me how to avoid lawsuits for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk in the very shadow of debt, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; thy silver and thy gold they rescue me. Thou preparest a way for me in the presence of my collector. Thou fillest my barrels with oil; my measure runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will do business in the name of the Lord.'

"Having read his Scripture he knelt down and prayed. I thought I had never heard such a prayer in all my life. He fairly took my breath from me when he asked his Heavenly Father, to bless me, his friend.

"With his amen I awoke with a start. I concluded I would call on my old friend early in the morning at his own home. I arose in time to procure a team and was knocking at his door just as the sun was coming over the eastern horizon. He met me at the door with a hearty handshake and said: 'Come right in. We are just going to have morning prayers, and we will be glad to have you join us.' He took me into the room and introduced his wife and children. He took up his Bible and said, 'We will read the twenty-third Psalm.' He read it in a clear voice, but read it as it is written in the Book. I cannot tell you my feelings and thoughts while he read. We then knelt in prayer, and he humbly made known his wishes, but it did not sound like the one I had heard in my dream, though he appeared to go over the same thought. He told the Lord that he owed some money, and that it was past due, and he asked that a way might open for him to pay it that very day. He then prayed for me, and while on my knees I resolved that for one time in my life I would disobey orders.

"After prayers we both went direct to the drug store and as we entered the door a young man met us and said: 'Brother Benton, father sent me over here this morning to tell you that he would take that house and lot you spoke to him about a few days ago. He told me to hand you this money and that he would pay the balance on delivery of the deed.'

"The old man received the roll of bills and tears began to roll down his cheeks as he turned away. He wrote the young man a receipt for the money and gave it to him. He then turned to his ledger and began to figure. He turned to me and said, 'Will you please receipt this statement?' I saw that he had added all the past interest on the bill. I told him I was ordered by the house to remit the interest. He declined to receive it and said he desired to pay all of his just debts. I took the money and sent it in. The house wrote him a very complimentary letter, thanking him for the remittance. In a great measure my dream came to pass.

"At the time I was tossing on my bed my old friend was on his knees in his closet pleading with his Banker for a loan. I am very much gratified to know that he got it, and ever since in all discouragements I apply the twenty-third Psalm as the remedy."—Selected.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Our school reopens today, after two weeks of suspension on account of influenza. We have two pretty school buildings; one of which is where vocational education is taught. I take Home Economics. We had clothing the first half of school, and we are now taking foods. I am a Senior this year. I shall tell a little of our English course. We have two note books, a small one which we keep our English notes in, then one for our literature. The latter, we put pictures of authors and write a sketch of their lives. Following this we select pictures to represent three or four of each man's writings, or sketches of them. I live in the edge of a small town in the northern part of the state, on the Frisco Railroad about one hundred miles from Memphis. I suppose we all have quotations by famous authors that are inspirations to us. I am very fond of: "The heights of great men reached and kept,

Were not obtained by sudden flight; But they while their companions slept Were toiling upward in the night."

Longfellow.

Cousins, I hope that the remainder of this school year will be pleasant—not easy—pleasant.

Ruby L. Akers.
Sherman, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a new cousin. I would like to join the happy band of girls and boys. I have never written to The Herald before, but I am like to see my letter in print. I am ten years old, have dark hair and brown eyes. My birthday is March 13. Have I a twin? If so, I would like to hear from them. I have four sisters. My middle name begins with J and ends with A, and has seven letters. The one who guesses my name, to them I will send a picture of myself.

Thelma Rutherford.
Box 66, Pax, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Maine girl join your band of happy girls and boys? My Aunt Mary takes The Herald which I enjoy reading. My birthday is March 27. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I am seventeen years old, five feet and eight inches and one half tall, weigh 120 pounds, have titan hair (long) blue eyes. I go to the Nazarene Church and Sunday school. Mrs. Poole, the pastor's wife, is my teacher. She is awfully nice. As this is my first letter I will not stay long. Hope W. B. is out skating when this arrives, as I want to see my first letter in print. Rosamond Danforth.

Union, Maine.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little California girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eight years old. My birthday is July 29. I am in the third grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I go to the First Church of the Nazarene. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E, and has six letters in it. The one who guesses it I will send them a picture of myself. Laura Munn, I saw your letter in The Herald. I am so sorry about your grandma and grandpa. You can go to see my grandma and grandpa now. This is my first letter and I hope Mr. W. B. doesn't get it for I want to surprise my grandma and grandpa in Iowa. Marian M. Burris.

Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little girl from the State of Washington join your happy band of boys and girls? I take The Pentecostal Herald and enjoy reading page ten. I was saved at the age of six and am still working for Jesus. I go to the Free Methodist Church. My birthday is May 27. Have I a twin? This is my first letter. I hope to see it in print. I wish some of the cousins would write to me.

Virginia W. Buckholz.
Tacoma, Wash.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Alabama girl join your band of girls and boys? I am a little girl eight years of age, am in the third grade at school. My teacher's name is Miss Calhoun. I go to Sunday school most every Sunday. My mother has eight children, four girls and four boys. Maggie Ruth is my oldest sister. Well Aunt Bettie, I don't want to take up too much space, but I hope to see my letter in print as this is my first letter.

Mary Woodham.
Coffeeville, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Don't get angry, cousins, if I ask you all to move over and let me have a little space to sit down, to have a chat with you. I would love to sit next to my friends Marie Jahanke and Marian Wiedmaier. I am a girl sixteen years old, and would like for some cousins to write to me who are interested in India, I would be delighted to get your

Help Some Young Girl

By presenting her with "Beautiful Girlhood" at graduation time. Girls have need of guidance and a helping hand all along the way, and because of this need, "Beautiful Girlhood" was written. It is an inexpensive gift, and $1.00 thus invested may bring large returns, as we do not believe any girl can read the book without aspiring to high and holy things. FALLEN ASLEEP

ROBERTS.

Rev. Mrs. Minnie L. Roberts, wife of Rev. J. P. Roberts, of Pilot Point, Texas, passed on to her eternal reward on Friday morning at 2 o'clock, March 22, 1929, at her home in Pilot Point, Texas. She was afflicted with cancer and suffered many weary months but with great Christian fortitude and sweet resignation. She was born in Sweden and came to America when she was fifteen; and was converted when she was sixteen and was sanctified wholly when she was seventeen. Immediately she entered into gospel work. For three years she was a missionary in Africa, but was stricken with African fever and was compelled to return home. She did rescue work in Providence, R. I., in Chicago, St. Louis and Pilot Point, Texas, for over thirty-five years. She was a strong preacher, mighty in prayer, full of faith and good works. She, with her husband, founded Rest Cottage of Pilot Point, an institution which has cared for over three thousand girls and women, and twenty-five hundred babies and children in the last twenty-five years of its illustrious history. She was a woman of rare gifts, versatile, original, a genius to create, executive to lead, administrative to protect, judicial to defend, and commanding to lead. Her closing up of life was peaceful, her death was beautiful and her funeral was most wonderful. The attendance was large, the funeral message by Dr. R. T. Williams was profound and appropriate, the floral offering was large and lovely, the committal was solemn and she was laid away amid flowers and evergreens in the hush of the Pilot Point cemetery to wait the trumpet of resurrection glory and immortal youth. "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

Allie and Emma Irick.

CHILTON.

Nov. 18, 1871—March 12, 1929.

C. W. Chilton is dead. This message was flashed over the wires on Tuesday morning, March 12, 1929, following his sudden death in a St. Louis Hospital, where he had undergone an operation for appendicitis, and from which he was apparently well on the way to recovery.

Death came instantly and was a shock to all, even the attending physician, who was dressing the wound when the end came. Mrs. Chilton arrived at the hospital for her daily visit with her husband, to learn that death had preceded her only a few moments.

Mr. Chilton was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rolla Chilton and was born at Bruno, Mo., Nov. 18, 1871, being past 57 years of age. When about four years old his father died. His mother then married Robert Huff, who also died in a few years leaving a large family of children.

The result was that early in life he was forced to hustle for himself, about his only asset being a strong character and the prayers and influence of a saintly mother. He finally managed to enter a St. Louis business college. While there he was converted under Dr. Carradine's ministry, at about twenty years of age, uniting with the Methodist Church, of which he was an active member and loyal supporter until death. He was married to Jennie Sloan, of Otter Creek, in 1898. A few years later he moved to Williamsville, Mo., where he entered the mercantile business, and eventually became manager and a heavy stockholder in the Williamsville Supply Co. there. He was also a stockholder and director in the Williamsville State Bank, which was organized in 1905. He was recognized as one of the foremost citizens of the town and county, and stood behind every progressive movement. He was a member of the Board of Education for several terms and it was largely due to his efforts that Williamsville has its present high school housed in a good brick building. He was also one of the main supporters of the Methodist Church there, and assisted greatly in the remodeling of the church and the building of a new parsonage. He was Sunday school superintendent for many years also. Had been a subscriber to The Pentecostal Herald for 37 years, and was also a reader of the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

His success in life was proof of his sound judgment, and many sought his counsel and advice. His mother (who passed to her reward three years ago) and the younger children in her home relied upon him almost as a father for counsel and guidance. He was ever ready to help those who were willing to help themselves, and his home was always open to friends from far and near. Many a minister found shelter and encouragement beneath his roof. Taken as a whole, his life and influence was an inspiration to higher and nobler things.

After nearly twenty years in business, he disposed of his interests in Williamsville and moved to his farm near Granite Bend, where, with the exception of a short time in Texas, he spent the remainder of his life. After moving to the farm he was a regular attendant and supporter of the Baptist Church, while continuing to contribute to every phase of the work of his own church in Williamsville, which he could seldom attend on account of bad roads. He was the father of an excellent family of children, who were brought up around a family altar. One died in infancy. Those surviving are Carl S. Chilton, supervising principal of a group of schools in Harlingen, Texas; Mrs. H. S. Chiswell and Mrs. Geo. S. Potts, also of Harlingen, and Miss Maideen Chilton, who is in school in Cape Girardeau. Besides the wife, there is also one sister, Mrs. S. L. Leeper, of Mill Spring, Mo., and four half brothers, E. W. Huff, of Williamsville, Mo., C. A. Huff, of St. Louis, Henry Huff, of Flat River, and W. F. Huff, of Chicago, also one half sister, Mrs. L. C. Cartee of Chicago, and one grandson, Carl Chilton, Jr.

Funeral services were held March 14, in the Williamsville Methodist Church, in charge of the pastor, Rev. D. B. Kazee, with burial in the Sloan cemetery on Otter Creek.

Mrs. May Julian.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

M. W. D.: "Would appreciate it greatly if my husband and I could be included in your prayer list, for relief of severe neuritis which is hindering our work for our Lord."

Mrs. S. Rusk: "Please to pray that I may be healed of the malady if it is the dear Lord's will."

SATAN'S SILVER SCREENS.

Are theatricals sinful? asks an innocent, angel-faced young lassie of culture and refinement. How shall we answer the innocent? Exaggerations of the evil influences of the movies are impossible. We could candidly state that of the twenty million in the United States who attend the movies daily, not one is a true follower of Jesus Christ and hence has not attained to the highest standard of morality, yea, rather is debased daily in mind, soul and body by the evil influences of sin impressed by the fiery pen of Satan from so-called educational pictures.

Theaters rob God of your time, money, and service. It ruins operators, aids insanity, promotes crime, consumes all that is beautiful and lovely in human character and implants in its place hideous passion. It steals rest, overtaxes the imagination, breaks home ties. Who can tell the whole story of its woes? The mind is limited to portray its evils, not one bright page is upon its records.

Upon the canvas no shades can be produced to portray the evils as dark as the truth—countless miseries of its victims, everything conceivable that is terrible and revolting, health in ruins, hope destroyed, affections crushed, prayers silenced, home deserted, shame a tyrant, poverty a child of vice, all crimes of every hue, murder, valley of death, living slaves. Let us view the landscape with trees the fruit of which is poison and its shade death, mountain torrents emptying into an ocean with waves of fire. Cheeks furrowed by burning tears wrung by anguish and agony from a broken heart.

And now light this picture by the glares of the infernal fires and it falls far short of the dreadful reality of the sinful influence in the present day motion picture theaters.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VI.—May 12, 1929.

Subject.—The Early Ministry of Jeremiah. Jer. 1:6-10; 26:8-15.

Golden Text.—We ought to obey God rather than men. Acts 5:29.

Time.—B. C. 629 to B. C. 607.

Place.—Judah and Jerusalem.

Introduction.—Jeremiah, as we learn from the first chapter of his prophecy, began his ministry at a very early age. When his call to the sacred office came to him he protested to Jehovah: "Behold, I cannot speak; for I am a child." He seems to have begun his ministry in the thirteenth year of the reign of Josiah, of which we studied in a previous lesson.

Jeremiah prophesied in Judah during one of the most sinful periods of all that people's sinful history. He prophesied during the last eighteen years of the reign of good king Josiah, and was, no doubt, present at the great passover that was kept by his order. When Josiah lost his life in his foolish war against Necho, king of Egypt, and Judah fell into the hands of wicked rulers who debauched her once more, Jeremiah continued to prophesy against the sins of his people. His office called for great courage; but he never quailed.

The untimely death of Josiah was a bitter grief to the young prophet. The record says: "He lamented for Josiah." The people put Jehoahaz, a son of Josiah, on the throne, but he reigned only three months. The king of Egypt dethroned him, and placed his brother, Eliakim, in his stead, changing his name to Jehoiakim; but "he did that which was evil in the sight of the LORD his God," and met Divine wrath; for Nebuchadnezzar conquered him, and carried him to Babylon in fetters. Jerusalem, of course, was overthrown, and the nation's doom was in sight.

Jeremiah has been called the "weeping prophet"; but it would be quite as appropriate to designate him as the persecuted prophet. He wept because of the sins of his people, and because he foresaw the fearful captivity that awaited them. But all his preaching and weeping and prophesying failed to lead the nation to repentance. They stiffened their necks, and hardened their hearts, and hurried on to their ruin. Jeremiah felt what every minister of the gospel must feel: heart-breaking grief, because he must preach to multitudes who will never be saved. God offers them salvation in all sincerity; but they will not come to him that they might have life. It is an awful thought, that, although he has done all that infinite love and mercy can do to save men, multitudes of them seem determined to damn themselves.

Jeremiah was a severe preacher. He told the people plainly and candidly of their sins. But he told them the truth in love. He was a broken-hearted preacher—a compassionate preacher, who wept bitter tears over his fallen Israel. But instead of heeding his message and his tears, they persecuted him and hounded him to his death.

Notes on the Lesson.

6. I am a child.—How old, we do not know, but he must have been very young for the prophetic office. He shunned the work, and made this excuse to God. Do not blame him. Many of us preachers have had a similar feeling when first conscious of our call to the ministry. The responsibility is fearful.

7. Say not, I am a child.—Thank God! Jeremiah did not have to go alone. God would go with him as long as he delivered his message. How like his promise to us: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

8. Be not afraid of their faces.—God knew what was ahead of Jeremiah, but he would be with him through it all. Preachers must not be afraid of men. Of all pitiable creatures below the stars, the coward in the pulpit is the most pitiable. A preacher remarked that he was afraid to tell his people the whole truth, lest he should tear the church to pieces. This writer replied: "That is your only hope. Besides, you cannot hurt the inhabitants of a graveyard." His church(?) was so dead that neither pastor nor people knew it.

9. The LORD . . . touched my mouth.—That is the one thing needful. Without the Divine call and the Divine touch, no man can preach. He may lecture very learnedly, but preach he cannot. But this will not take the place of hard study. The preacher must be learned in the Word of God, and in all else that he can gather from men and books. God will fill neither empty heads nor empty mouths.

10. I have set thee over the nations and over the kingdoms.—That was a big circuit, but not too big for a big man. Many preachers dry up nowadays, because their fields are too restricted. They need to feel the touch of the multitudes. Read the remainder of the verse, and learn the purpose of Jeremiah's call. He was to clear the ground, and then build and plant. No use for the latter until the former has been well done. The work will not stand.

26:8. It is always interesting to see the effect of the preaching upon hearers. When Jeremiah finished "speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people," there should have been a great altar service and a large ingathering of souls; but not so. Even the priests and the prophets turned against him, "saying, thou shalt surely die." When the truth is preached, the people will either receive it, or curse the preacher. It is ever thus.

9. This house shall be like Shiloh.—The place where once rested the tabernacle and the ark of the covenant. Jerusalem would be a desolation. It was too much. All the people turned against this pessimistic prophet of evil. It was the truth; but it did not suit the crowd. They wanted an optimistic preacher, even though the nation had forsaken God, and was headed for seventy years of cruel captivity in Babylon.

10. The princes of Judah.—Her chief men went to the temple, and joined the assembled mob in their condemnation of God's prophet. Surely the people were mad against Jehovah. Read the latter part of the first chapter of the Epistle to the Romans for an explanation of the matter. God is "the same yesterday, and today, and forever."

11. This man is worthy to die.—This from the priests and prophets, who should have led the people aright, but had led them astray. How passing strange that this thing should be true in all ages. All persecution of true religion comes from the clergy; and, whenever possible, they appeal to civil rulers to carry out their diabolic schemes, just as the Jews did in the case of our Lord. The only charge against Jeremiah was, that he had "prophesied against the city." They learned later that he had told the truth.

12. The LORD sent me to prophesy against this house and against this city.—That is sufficient authority for any conscientious preacher. When he fails, he is either a coward or wanting a conscience.

13. Amend your ways and your doings.—Jeremiah is still pleading for repentance, pleading on the ground that Jehovah "will repent him of the evil that he hath pronounced against you." God's mercy is everlasting.

14. I am in your hand.—The prophet knew he was friendless and helpless in their hands.

15. If ye put me to death.—This was an awful warning; for the Jews knew that he who shed innocent blood might expect to meet the wrath of God. In this case the scope of destruction was wide: it would be upon them (the rulers), upon the city, and upon its inhabitants. There is nothing more terrible than the wrath of God against those who insult his love and mercy.

BREAD OF LIFE BOX

Contents: 115 slices, made of the finest of Wheat, mixed with the Water of Life and enriched with the sincere Milk of the Word. Unleavened, buttered on both sides, and richly spread with honey out of the Rock. Will not get stale. Good for your spiritual health. Try one.

A box containing 115 small cards, with a choice scripture neatly printed on each side. 230 texts in all. Beautiful box, stamped in gold also printed directions how to use. Excellent for a gift box.

Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer. 1 Tim. 4:4, 5. Alas, how few meals eaten by Christians are thus sanctified. Some of them ask a blessing on their food, but very seldom do we find one who reads the Word at meals. The Bread Box is an excellent way to introduce obedience to this precept.

Pass the box around at the beginning of a meal. Let each person take out a card. Then let each in turn read the verses. It will be noticed that the two verses on each card bear a definite relation to each other and teach an important truth. The order in which they are read often brings out this truth more forcibly. As each person reads their verses it is profitable that the others present tell where the verses are found.

Another excellent way is for each person to read one or two words of the text and let some one else quote it from memory.

Let one read a verse and another quote a verse on the same subject.

Let each person memorize the two verses during the meal and quote them at its close.

Pass the box around in your Sunday School class the same as at a meal. And as the verses are read discuss the truths contained in them.

Explain that it is just as important to feed on the Word in order to grow and be strong spiritually as to eat our daily meals in order to grow strong physically.

Most interesting and profitable young people's meeting may be had by using the Bread Box in some of the ways suggested.

In the home when friends and neighbors are gathered together pass around the Bread Box. How much better and more profitable than a "cup of tea"!

Keep one in your bedroom. Eat a slice for your meditation while dressing and going about your daily duties. Eat another slice before retiring to quiet your worries and give you a good night's rest.

Use the Bread Box freely but do not let it displace the Bible. You need the whole Word of God, for all was given that you might "Acquaint now thyself with HIM, and be at peace."—Job. 22:21.

BOYS ENJOY

Out-of-the-ordinary stories—stories of adventure. One of the most interesting stories we have read recently is "The Two Tramps." It would seem to be a book for boys, but really it is a book every one would enjoy. The Tramps in this story are not beggars or men of low ideals, but tramps for Jesus. Order one or more copies to place in the hands of boys, at the special price of 60c.

STOCKWELL, INDIANA.

The Methodist Church at Stockwell, Ind., was recently visited by a gracious series of revival meetings, closing Easter Sunday, March 31st.

The pastor, Rev. Leonard E. Watson, was very fortunate in securing the services of the "Bennard Evangelistic Party" who most ably conducted these meetings. Rev. George Bennard, of Hermosa Beach, Calif., author of "The Old Rugged Cross" and many other gospel songs, is a most efficient song leader and a splendid, sweet spirited preacher of a full gospel. We learned to love him during his stay with us and gladly give him our unqualified endorsement to anyone looking for an efficient song leader and preacher of the old-fashioned gospel.

Rev. David E. Reed, evangelist of Michigan Conference, Albion, Mich., had charge of the work among the boys and girls and is widely known as "The Friend of Children." These afternoon meetings with the boys and girls were largely attended and with splendid results. Rev. Reed is especially gifted in dealing with boys and girls and will be a wonderful help to any church securing his services.

A great number came forward during the meetings a majority of whom were church members. There were a goodly number of conversions and a quickening of church life. Eleven united with the church on Easter morning and others will be coming soon. Leonard E. Watson, Pastor.

NOVEMBER REPORT.

Bro. K. Y. Zhen, Chapei Mission, Shanghai.

Bro. Zhen sends in a report of victory, praising the Lord for his help and blessing in the work. The Holy Spirit has been working in a wonderful way in all of the meetings and souls are being brought into the Kingdom.

Not far from Chapei mission lives a man who has a crippled wife. The man's eyes are poor and he could hardly see and so was not able to work and earn a living. They lived in a little straw hut and were very poor. They were often hungry and cold and had nothing to eat or wear. They had no friends or relatives to help them or care for them and were pitiful indeed. They sometimes made money in sinful ways. Someone would steal something and then this man's wife would go out and sell it and the thief would divide the money with them.

Thank the Lord he is Omnipotent and he was kind to them. One evening when Bro. Zhen and the workers went out on the streets to invite people to the evangelistic meeting at the mission, they passed by this man's home. Just as they were passing by, one of the workers called, "God can save all those in trouble." This man heard and the Spirit of God touched his heart. He came and followed the workers to the mission and there heard the Gospel of Jesus Christ preached. He came to the altar that night and confessed his sin and repented and accepted Jesus as his Savior. He testified that he knew that Jesus had saved his soul. Afterward his wife was truly saved also. They left their former life of sin and then they did not know how they would be able to live. But the Lord cares for his children and they were not forsaken. The Lord touched this brother's eyes and they were much better and he could see well enough to go to work and earn his living. He rented a ricksha and pulled the ricksha every day to support his wife and himself. He left his old sinful life and has fellowship with the Lord. Although he makes very little money, each week he saves some and gives it to the mission. If there is some special need for money, he sacrifices and makes a special offering.

Formerly his wife was possessed with devils. Often she would be in bed for several months. After she believed in the Lord, the evil spirit came back again. That time Bro. Zhen, Bro. Wang and Miss Deng went to their home and prayed with her. They went to see her three or four times and trusted in the power of God to heal her. The Lord answered the prayer of faith and touched her and made her whole. The evil spirit has never returned and this brother and sister are living victorious lives in the Lord. Praise his Name!

"Seeing the Future."

I have just finished reading this book written by a scholarly English woman, Miss Christabel Pankhurst. It is a publication of this year, published by Harper & Brothers, for sale by Pentecostal Publishing Company, $2.

Miss Pankhurst shows a broad study of prophetic interpretation, and shows how the movements of political units are fulfilling the words of the prophets spoken long ago. And her incursions into science and her familiarity with works of the great scientists like Newton and Pasteur make the book unusually fresh and interesting.

There are places where one might wish the book were a bit more expository for the benefit of those who have overlooked many passages that underlie the author's conclusions. For they are Scriptural. And Miss Pankhurst has thought her facts into a consistent philosophy.

The five chapters on the "Signs of the Times," including "Upheavals in Nature," "Moral Conditions," "Wars and Rumors of Wars," "The Jews in Palestine," and "The Modern Policy of Nations" are well worth the price of the book.

There are many scholarly men today, who, if they would take the time to sit down and compare prophecy and its fulfillment would greatly change their minds regarding their eschatological preconceptions. It does seem that men somehow get an early bias and spend most of the rest of their lives trying to square the universe with it. With hundreds upon hundreds of prophecies accurately fulfilled, and world movements outlined centuries in advance, and describing the nature of the advance of the kingdom of Christ from its spiritual beginning to its final consummation, many have regarded the prophecies as little more than the effervescent, florescent, vaporings of Oriental prophets. And in spite of the fact that the Scripture says that religious scoffers would come in the last times saying, "Where is the sign of his coming," our Universities and religious schools have many teachers that would intellectualize that doctrine to a dead Judaism, written for the purpose of comforting people in distress. The literal return of Jesus is taboo today because it is not reasonable. On the same ground the first advent of Jesus is tabooed by medical science because it is biologically unreasonable. But people forget that God is able to do the unreasonable. And if he chooses a literal second coming in the clouds of heaven as the Scriptures teach, who am I that I should deny his Word?

Miss Pankhurst has added a book of much value on this subject and one that should be in every preacher's library. It may start a line of research that will cause some former opinions to be changed and some sermons to be re-written; but that might be a good thing. At least it will furnish food for some mature thought.

Now Ready.

The memorial edition of Dr. W. G. Nixon's sermons is off the press. We are sure that his friends and the reading public in general will be interested in this series of gripping messages by one of the great pastor-evangelists of the day.

This book has ten messages from the pen of Dr. Nixon and a closing chapter which includes the messages delivered from the pulpit of his old church at his funeral held in the city of Detroit.

The many thousands who have listened to Dr. Nixon up and down the country will remember some of the themes presented here. Noteworthy are the messages on "Covenant Breakers," "The Benediction of Jude," the great sermon on Pentecost under the title of "Afterwards," "The Roadway to the Gates of Pearl," and the remarkable commencement message on "Character Building."

These messages are characterized by Dr. Nixon's terseness, his ability for striking utterance, and are accented by the spirit of conviction which always controlled the man in building the gospel message.

The book is clearly printed, has an attractive binding, contains one hundred forty-nine pages, and is sold at the very reasonable price of $1.00 per copy.

Mothers.

There is just off the press a little booklet, the title of which is "Mothers," by Rev. B. C. Gamble. Hundreds far and near heard it just as a radio address. Many wept as they listened. Some wrote: "I will pay any price to get that message." The result of insistent demand was its publication.

Mothers, fathers, you should send your children a copy. Sons and daughters why not send mother a copy? Price, 25c each. Write The Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Ky.

IT WILL HOLD YOU SPELL-BOUND.

We miss many of the rich things in life because we don't know about them. "Remarkable Conversions," by H. C. Morrison, is one of the great books—full of rich things. The chapter on "My Arrest and Rescue" is the story of Dr. Morrison's conversion. You will weep and rejoice when you read it. Every sentence in the book is interesting and helpful, but for the good it will mean to your own soul, order a copy, if you don't read anything but the chapter mentioned above. The price is only $1.00, and after having read the book we believe you will say it is the best $1.00 investment you ever made.

Graduation Time is Near

And no matter how many presents a boy or girl receives, we believe it is rare that they appreciate anything more than an attractive Bible. It is a gift, that if properly taken care of, will last almost a lifetime, serving as "a lamp unto the feet and a light unto the pathway."

Just at this time we have a limited number of copies of one of the lightest, thinnest, most convenient sized Bibles for a young person it has been our privilege to obtain. The size is about 4 1/4 x 7 inches, a fraction over 1/2 inch thick, bound in genuine leather, overlapping edges, silk sewed, India paper, a clear, readable type, chapter numbers in figures, references, maps, red under gold edges, and has the nonbreakable back feature. It also has the silk marker.

So appropriate is this special Bible for a graduation gift it would seem that it was made for this purpose. It's a book that even the unsaved would appreciate. The net price was $4.25. We are closing out these copies at a special price of $2.40 each. Don't miss the opportunity.

A LEGEND OF THE EASTER.

Supposing him the gard'ner, Mary said,
"Tell me, Oh, Sir, where thou hast laid my Lord,
And I will bear his body straight away."
He spoke her name; her tears of joy o'erflowed,
And from the sod, on which her tears drops fell,
Pure lilies sprang.

Oh soul, take heart and live; this lesson learn:
From out the depths of sin and pain and strife
Shall spring the blooms of hope, or faith, of love,
And grievous sorrow blossom into joy.
An emblem of the Trinity you'll find
In the lily's bell.

HOLINESS AND THE LORD'S HOLY DAY.

Alfred C. Spencer.

The likeness or relation of holiness to the Sabbath day is found in the idea of rest. Also, both holiness and the Sabbath are things that are set apart and are sacred, and both come from God. The rest that we have in holiness may be termed the "rest of faith." Other names for it are full salvation, sanctification and perfect love, and it is obtained by believers when they make a full consecration and take hold of God for it. Then it is that the carnal nature is destroyed. At that time there is "soul rest," when there is nothing inside the heart to disturb the peace of God.

The comparison of the rest of the soul with that of the Sabbath rest is given in Hebrews, fourth chapter. We read in the ninth verse: "There remaineth therefore a rest (marginal reading, Or, keeping of a sabbath) to the people of God." It is then that we are kept in perfect peace. "For he that is entered into his rest, he also hath ceased from his own works, as God did from his" (Heb. 4:10). How restful, how sweet this abiding in the Lord is, when the heart is cleansed from impurity. The struggle with "inbred sin" is gone. This is a work that God does for us.

When we consider the Sabbath day, can there not be something that unnecessarily disturbs the rest and quiet and holiness of the Sabbath? The Lord gave to the children of Israel a commandment which gives light on the question of doing urgent work on the Sabbath as follows: "Six days thou shalt work; but on the seventh thou shalt rest; in eaning time (meaning, time of plowing) and in harvest thou shalt rest" (Exodus 34:21).

Public worship, or resting in the Lord and adoring him, is very appropriate and fitting on the Day of Rest. The word of the Lord in Leviticus 19:30 and 26:2 is: "Ye shall keep my Sabbaths, and reverence my sanctuary: I am the Lord." Is not the state or deepness of one's piety shown by the way in which the Sabbath is kept? Should not the Sabbath of this age mean as much to Christians as it did to the children of Israel? We read: "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you" (Exodus 31:12, 13).

How dreary, how monotonous it must be without any day of rest for the tired body, or without spiritual light for the soul. Great is the reward for the holy keeping of the Lord's rest day.

Righteousness and holiness are very closely related. Righteousness is the natural outcome of holiness. A holy heart brings forth righteous acts. "And the work of righteousness shall be peace; and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever" (Isaiah 32:17).

Let us cease from our own works, our self-righteousness, and obtain the rest, the joy and the peace that the Lord has for his people.

HOW TO KEEP THE BLESSING.

By The Editor.

IN the closing chapter of Paul's First Epistle to the Thessalonians, we have this very gracious prayer and promise: "The very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it."

We find here that we are not only to be sanctified, but we are to be preserved blameless by him that calleth us, the God of peace. It is understood that it takes an entire consecration on our part, and a faith which appropriates the merits of the atoning blood of Christ, to sanctify us wholly. To retain this blessed experience, we must maintain the same state of consecration, and the same degree of faith that it required to obtain the blessing.

However graciously sanctified we may be, we are still human beings. The blessing of sanctification is not intended to destroy our human nature, but our carnal nature—"the sin that dwelleth in us." The human nature that God gave us remains, with its various needs and propensities. There is the physical, the mental and the spiritual personality; these qualities of human nature have their various needs to be supplied.

The only safety for the sanctified, that they may retain purity of heart and the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, is to keep the lower nature under the mastery and control of the higher nature. The mere physical must be dominated by the intellectual; the intellectual must be dominated by the spiritual, and the spiritual must be under the blessed guidance and mastery of the Holy Ghost. This is safety.

Perhaps we will be more easily understood if we say that the sanctified man's intelligence must control, watch over, and dictate to, and rule his physical appetites and propensities. He must govern his physical being in the selection of food, drink, raiment, exercise and various appetites and trends; in a word, the lower nature must never be permitted to break away from control of the higher nature. The Apostle Paul speaks of "keeping the body under." Any man who allows the physical to govern the mental may easily become little less than a dumb brute, a glutton, a drunkard, a libertine. How many persons following the fashions and foibles of our time, so yield to their lower nature that they destroy body, mind and soul in excessive pleasures, night carousals, improper and unhealthful dress, and in innumerable ways let their physical propensities and desires run riot, destroy the body, wreck the mind and plunge the soul into outer darkness.

The sanctified life is a life of mastery over the body, so that it is kept under control by the intellect, and the intellect is controlled by the sanctified spirit that will not allow the mind to indulge in improper thoughts, vain imaginations, reading and study which produce doubt, unbelief and irreverence toward God, his Word, and his Son. Many a sanctified soul has cooled its ardor and sown the tares of unbelief in the midst of the wheat of its faith, by reading modernistic literature, cultivating intellectual pride, coming to desire the praises of men rather than communion with the Holy Ghost, and a close fellowship with the Lord Jesus.

The spiritual life must have care, cultivation and stimuli as well as the physical and intellectual. It is hardly probable that any one will be able to keep the sanctified life in a holy glow, who does not become a careful and thoughtful reader of the Holy Scriptures. The soul feeds and grows when nurtured with the Word of God. The spiritual life also calls for exercise. Those who would retain the blessing of sanctification, must witness among their fellowbeings to the saving and keeping power of the Lord Jesus. Any one so graciously saved from sin, in the nature of things, must be seeking to save others. The sanctified soul has received the impulse of a holy go; it cannot endure idleness, inactivity, and at the same time, keep the divine flame burning brightly.

Along with searching the Scriptures and active service, there must be prayer. Perhaps, there is no greater means of grace than that of prayer. We have the inspired injunction to "pray without ceasing." Those who walk with God in righteousness and true holiness, live in attitude of supplication, trust and praise. This is not a burden; it is like breathing. It is a life. This is the beauty and charm of salvation from all sin. It brings a divine life into the human life; by the power of the Holy Ghost, the divine nature is brought down into our human nature. The Son of God became a man, living and walking among us, eating, drinking, sleeping, weeping, loving, and saving men. By the power of this same Holy Ghost we are lifted up by sanctifying grace into the divine nature. Paul expresses the thought with great clearness and force in Galatians 2:20: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

President Akers at Asbury College.

In THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD of April 10, I read with interest an article headed "The Why and What of Asbury College," by Dr. Lewis Robeson Akers, President of that institution. It is clear, strong, emphatic and written in fine spirit. It leaves no question with reference to why Asbury College exists.

It is well understood that an institution of this kind has many difficulties with which to contend. First of all, it has no church organization for support, and must be carried forward in its development and progress by the freewill offerings of those who are deeply interested in the great Bible doctrines, Christian principles and experiences for which the school stands. This means self-sacrifice and extra effort on the part of consecrated men and women who long to see the doctrine of Christian Holiness preached through this nation and around the world.

As one who has greatly loved and labored long for the upbuilding and progress of Asbury College, I have read Dr. Akers' article with real comfort and pleasure. It has the right ring throughout. Dr. Akers has been able to do a great work at Asbury College. He has gathered a very strong faculty of most excellent men and women. Under his administration the educational standards have been very much advanced and strengthened, and the spiritual life of the school has kept step with its educational progress.

During my long, extended illness I have been refreshed and delighted with the letters that have come to me from the various members of the faculty with reference to the great revival held under the leadership of Brother Anderson, and the fine spiritual tone that has characterized this school year.

Dr. Akers has been highly honored by being elected President of the American Association of Conservative Colleges. This is an association of a number of colleges which repudiate the modernistic, liberal tendency and hold steadfastly to divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, the Virgin Birth, Deity, the redemptive death and sufferings of our Lord and Savior. He has also been elected President of an association of fundamental ministers. This organization is composed of a large number of ministers of many denominations who stand opposed to every phase of modern destructive criticism, and heroically defend the Holy Scriptures as the inspired Word of God against the popular skepticism so prevalent in these times. These honors were bestowed upon him without any sort of solicitation or seeking on his part, and clearly reveals the confidence that his brethren of many denominations have in his ability and faithfulness to the Word of God.

Dr. Akers recently was offered the presidency of a very large church school, with considerable increase of salary, which he refused in order that he might go forward with the upbuilding of the great work going on at Asbury College. With the excellent faculty, the large student body, and the dire necessity for such an institution, with the thousands of people who are looking to Asbury as the safe place for the education of their children, there is every reason why the loyal friends of this institution of learning should rally to its standards and press, with vigor, the work for the advancement of this school, which has made such large contribution to spiritual forces which have been sent out from its halls.

Faithfully your brother,
H. C. MORRISON.

FROM THE LAND OF THE MORNING CALM.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

We said "goodbye" to Korea on March 5th. It was a parting not soon to be effaced from our memory. The Koreans are all heart. They have a genius for religion; they love meetings. They can run all day and all night if necessary. Imagine a church in U. S. A. full of people out to preaching at 5:30 A. M. in the morning! But to the Koreans this is no strange thing.

After a month's labor which ended with the Annual Conference of the Oriental Missionary Society at Seoul, Korea, we began our farewell at the Compound of the O. M. S. and finished it at the Railroad Station where a big crowd of missionaries, pastors, evangelists, Bible women and students had gathered to see us off.

Rev. M. B. Stokes, that man of God, missionary, linguist, evangelist and presiding elder of the M. E. Church, South, was there with Mrs. Stokes, Rev. Harry Wood and other missionaries of the O. M. S. and many of their workers. Mrs. Cowman, who had come from America to attend this Conference, as well as to visit the work in Japan and China, and Mrs. E. L. Kilbourne, were in our party and of course the O. M. S. people were all keenly interested in the farewell.

One of my favorite songs in Korea was: "Weeping will not save me." That song seems to have in it the sigh and the sob of the seeking soul. I find it singing itself into my soul and then singing its way out. We asked them to sing it at the station and they took it and sang verse after verse till the railroad station rang with the song. The crowds looked on and the police seemed a trifle excited as though they were wondering what it was all about. We spoke a few parting words and offered prayer and then the bell sounded and off we were—leaving Korea for China—a journey of a thousand miles by rail and water before we reached Shanghai.

We shall never forget Korea! I believe there are more potential revivals in Korea than in any land visited if the five hundred missionaries there would get on fire. The Koreans are most susceptible to real religion; they love the full gospel. Let that country be swept by an intensive evangelism and revivals would break out all over. Let a Pentecost break out in Korea and Japan and China will feel the impact.

Before finishing my notes on Korea let me mention some brethren and sisters with whom we had precious gospel fellowship: Rev. M. B. Stokes, of the M. E. Church, South, who arranged our schedule; Dr. Noble, of the M. E. Church (North) and Mrs. Noble, Dr. Billings, of Chosen Christian College, who interpreted for me in some of my College messages, and also did most of the interpreting at our night services in the Union meetings at the Presbyterian Church; Bro. Young (Korean P. E., M. E. Church, South) who interpreted the 11 A. M. messages, Miss Edwards (M. E.), Miss Kinsler (Presbyterian), Brother Peters, devoted young missionary from Los Angeles (M. E. Church, South) who never missed a meeting, and Rev. H. F. Woods, Rev. Paul E. Haines, and a host of Korean brethren of the Oriental Missionary Society. God bless them all!

Though Korea is regarded as one of the best mission fields, yet evidently many of the workers are dissatisfied with the progress made along spiritual and evangelistic lines. We do not feel that we were in Korea long enough to write our own personal opinions upon these matters as we were mainly in one city and lack of time prevented our reaching other points of great interest. (Pyeng Yang, for instance, one of the finest pieces of missionary work to be seen on earth). We will therefore reproduce a few things from an important article recently published in Korea. This from the field itself is worth infinitely more than any casual visitor could write.

A thoughtful Presbyterian missionary and professor of Chosen Christian College (Seoul, Korea) in the January number of the "Korean Mission Field," has an article entitled "A New Year's Meditation, Why Are We Standing Still?" Professor Rhodes says: "In the last five years there has been a loss of 39,000 or 15%. Since 1914 the Korean population has increased from 14,300,000 to 18,600,000, or 30%. During that time the total constituency of the churches has increased from 196,000 to 219,000, or 12%. We cannot expect Korea to be evangelized unless the percentage of growth of the Christian constituency continues much higher than the percentage of increase of population which has not been true the last fifteen years except in the increase of baptized membership. In ten years the missionary force of missions has increased 16%, and the number of the Korean paid workers has increased 35%. Of the latter number of ordained Korean pastors has increased from 222 to 471, or 112%. Likewise the gifts of the Korean church have increased from 243,000 yen in 1912 to 1,246,000 yen in 1927, or over 500%. . . . Greatly increased gifts to the work of the church have not resulted in an increased adherence. . . . nor does it indicate that the use of more money would help the growth of the church. . . . A sum of 5 million yen or more is spent annually by the missions and churches and yet we are marking time and seem to be unable to make headway. Both missionaries and Korean church workers admit that during the last number of years there has been a let up in the evangelistic drive of the church. . . . At all costs evangelism must be the life of the church."

Let the people who read this put Korea on their prayer list and pray much that revival fires might break out among that devoted people.

Traveling from Seoul to Fusan, thence by boat to Moji and thence to Nagasaki to catch the boat to Shanghai takes us through some intensely interesting country. Traveling through Japan is like going through a veritable picture gallery with Old Nature herself as the artist. I have thought of Japan as the flower garden of the Orient. The Japanese are artists. They can turn a little plot of ground into a picture as well as the bearer of rice, flowers, etc.

Coming on the train we were rushed along through valleys with the hills terraced by rice plots and the gardens with their orange trees and cherry blossoms and flowers of all descriptions almost ready to burst forth.

We have had a chance to sample homes in three countries—in China, Japan and Korea, and they are all so different! Recently we took dinner in a Korean parsonage; we sat on the floor and ate at a low table laden with the various dishes that go to make up a Korean meal. The other night some of the preachers wanted to give us a farewell feast and they took us down to a Korean restaurant. The Koreans have a unique way of heating their houses—best of all the Oriental people we think. They run flues under the floors and they have nice warm floors in cold weather to sleep on and also to eat on—this restaurant was an immense place and allotted off into a number of rooms. We were ushered into one of these rooms—our company including Mrs. Ridout, Mrs. Cowman, Mrs. Kilbourne and other lady missionaries and brethren, both American and Korean, consisted of about fourteen. We sat upon cushions on the warm floor and when the meal was brought in it was all completely set on low tables from which we ate. Chop sticks and rice were in order, and many dishes the contents of which I could not describe. These feasts give me quite new notions of the customs in the holy land in Jesus' day. Looking at that famous picture of the Lord's Supper the other day in which the artist shows Christ and his disciples sitting up at a regular table, Western fashion, gives a decidedly wrong impression of how the Supper was eaten. I am quite sure they sat on the floor, Eastern fashion, not on chairs at a regular table. In China when they invite you to a feast you sit close together at small tables.

The Japanese home is different from anything we have in the homeland. Let me insert here a bit of description of the Japanese dwelling.

All the floors of a Japanese house, except the porch or "engawa," are covered with "tatami," made of a plant like straw, and the size of a room is calculated according to how many "tatami" are used. Two mats makes a unit of land measurement, being equal to six square feet, or "tsubo." The aesthetic nature of the Japanese nation is pointed out by a certain Japanese writer, who has spent the best part of his life in America. He says that the Japanese always sit or sleep on the grassy-green floor.

Most Japanese would be surprised if they heard that many Europeans live in rooms with only two or three windows, if not only one. Their surprise would be natural. In a Japanese house, one side of a room can be opened to the azure sky. The typical Japanese house is built so as to face the south—it is warm in winter because of the sunlight, and cool in summer because of cool breezes.

Life in Europe and America hinges upon a number of handles in every room. Nothing of the sort exists in domestic life in Japan. The doors in a Japanese house are generally opened or shut by sliding, not pushing as in a foreign-style house. "Gara-gara"—an onomatopoeia of rattling sounds—is heard when the door is opened; then the guest is met by one of the family. After removing his shoes, the guest enters and is ushered into the parlour.

"Osamuku nari mashita" (it is getting colder), "oatsuku nari mashita" (it is getting hotter), "Haru rashiku nari mashita," (spring is here), or "Aki rashiku nari mashita" (autumn has come),—some such expressions are exchanged between the guest and the host, in accordance with the season. The Japanese are very fond of nature and are much concerned with it in their daily lives.

Nowhere is the changing of the seasons so remarkably perceptible as in a Japanese house, where the atmosphere changes in the four seasons. Needless to say, the garden of a Japanese house is resplendent with seasonal change, each room is full of the effects of the time of the year.

When we preached at Kobe we lived with an English family in a Japanese home. It seemed really ominous to us when it came time to come in or go out we did not use doors but moved the sides of the rooms by sliding the panels of the partitions back and forth as we desired, but everything is constructed of such light stuff that in case of an earthquake one could go through the sides of the room without the least effort.

I have noticed when in Japan that the Buddhists are displaying a great deal of energy in propagating their religion. Shintoism is being used a great deal by the government as a vehicle of patriotism—they are saying that it is not so much a religion as a fellowship and an educational cult. I think on the whole Christianity has not got the grip on Japan that it ought to have because of modernistic tendencies which have been operating in Japan for some years. A very prominent Japanese—one of the foremost educators and at one time a theological professor, told me that the Japanese Theological Seminaries are largely to blame for the present type of Japanese preachers. They are trained in modernism and when they are sent forth as pastors of course they have no revivals and their work becomes formal and worldly. I venture to say that a lot of good missionary money is put into bags with holes in them when it is used to further modernistic Christianity in the foreign field. One of the greatest blessings which could come to Japan would be a revival of the supernatural power of God in converting grace. I cannot help feeling that somewhere along back in the years Christianity lost its grip on Japan in its spiritualizing power—it turned intellectual, philosophical, aesthetic. Such a thing as a revival of religion in some of the institutions would be as unlikely as a revival in Smith or Wellesley or Harvard. One of the great redeeming features of the Japan situation is the remarkable growth of the work of Cowman and Kilbourne and the Oriental Missionary Society. This has grown and grown until it has swept over Japan like a gulf stream of salvation. Over two hundred churches and as many preachers are preaching salvation full and free throughout Japan—a great holiness work has been carried on throughout the years and revivals of religion in which thousands are brought to God are constantly going on. The work these people are doing is nothing but "old-time Methodism" pure and simple. I have been in their meetings when college professors, educators, bankers, business men, professional men as well as the common people shared in the blessings of this great salvation movement.

Let me stop here long enough to tell another story of John three sixteen—this is a Japanese story. A poor fellow addicted to drink tried all the religions going to save himself from his dreadful habits—he tried Buddhism and Shintoism and Christian Science (the Japanese kind) but all to no avail. At last one of the holiness preachers of the O. M. S. met him in one of the missions—he told him of Jesus the mighty to save and as he was leaving gave him John three sixteen. The poor fellow tried to memorize it. At night when the attack of the evil one came on and his whole being was crazy for drink he began to say: "God so loved the world that he gave"—he forgot the rest, he went over the part time and time again, but could not remember the rest of the verse. In desperation he hunted up the preacher and got the rest of the verse, which he began then and there to claim for himself; he believed on the spot and instantly he felt something leave him; he was cured and saved! On his way home he had to pass the saloon where he drank so often, but all desire had been taken away and when he got back home his poor terrified wife and children who always dreaded his return came from their hiding places to find a husband and father completely changed and redeemed. From that time he became known as John three sixteen. He does a lot of street preaching in Tokyo and his one and only text is John three sixteen.

And now as I close this article I look out of my cabin porthole of the S. S. "Nagasaki Maru" as we are approaching the Chinese coast and the bosom of the old ocean is dotted with fishing crafts of all descriptions and Chinese Junks. We are saying "good-bye" to artistic Japan and the "morning calm" of old Korea and in another hour or so will be in Shanghai again, that city of all nations and all flags where the Bund and the streets are filled with teeming multitudes of people (mostly Chinese of course). We come back to China to take up burdens there and go forth first South then North to preach and evangelize in the name of Jesus, preaching nothing but the old, old gospel full and free.

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER V.

ITS WONDERFUL STRUCTURE.

HEY tell us that every piece of rope in the British Navy has a red thread running through it, so that if anybody helps himself to a piece of it he knows and everybody who knows him knows that he is a violator of the eighth commandment. And do you know that something like that is true of the Bible.

We have already seen four reasons why this Book is the very Word of God, and I want now to commend it to you as being that very thing for a fifth reason; its Wonderful Structure; the Unity and the Harmony of it all.

Wherever you cut into a piece of the British Navy's rope there you will see the red thread running through it, and so whenever you open up the Bible, whenever you look into it and examine it you will find a thread running through it from beginning to end, the Unity and the marvelous Harmony of it all.

The Dome of St. Peters is a marvelous piece of work. It was fifty years in building, and its architect was dead thirty years before it was finished. How then do you account for its symmetry and all that goes to make it the wonder that it is? Simply by the fact that Michael Angelo, who conceived it, left behind him such complete plans that no mistake could enter in to mar its beauty and perfection.

The temple first built on Mt. Moriah was an architectural paragon such as the world had as yet not seen. It was seven years in building. Not a sound of hammer or saw was heard in its construction. Every stone was cut and squared and polished in the quarry, and every beam and board was wrought into its proper shape before it reached the temple site, and yet every timber and every stone fit into its place with finest ease. But we do not wonder at this because we know the builders built wiser than they knew and only put together the idea wrought out in wood and stone by the one presiding brain that planned the whole.

The time came in my earlier experience when I had opportunity to realize one of the ambitions of my life to see the Cathedral of Milan. As I traveled across the mighty Alps and through that longest of tunnels in the world, I thought of it by day and dreamed of it by night, and at last I stood one day before it, the mighty masterpiece of the world's architecture. I walked around it and climbed its tallest, dizziest steeple. I read its history and found in its building five centuries had come and gone, during which time nations had fallen and new continents had been discovered, but at last it was finished, stone upon stone until its mighty turrets had pierced the skies, and so perfect is the work that poets have called it "A poem in stone," and others have spoken of it as "frozen music." We wonder, of course, but one controlling architect explains it all.

Now I ask you in all candor, What would you expect in any case where no superintending genius rules the situation?

Let us suppose that forty builders of various types, living 1500 years apart should each one in his own land hew and chisel out a number of stones, each utterly ignorant of the other's work, and in after years when these stones were brought together what would you expect to find? Just a pile of stones, of course.

But suppose that out of these stones there arose a cathedral as glorious and perfect as any that Angelo ever built, or a statue as artistic as any that ever came from the chisel of a Phidias or a Ghiberti! Then what?

Well, just this last is true of the Bible. The Bible is composed of sixty-six separate books written by at least forty different writers, living at periods of time in some cases 1500 years apart, and in countries hundreds of miles apart.

They wrote in three different languages.

Some of them were skilled in the wisdom of Egypt, educated in the schools of Babylon and trained at the feet of Jewish Rabbis, while some of them were ignorant.

They wrote, some of them, in the palace and some of them in the tent.

Among them were doctors, farmers, fishermen and tax-gatherers.

They wrote without any preconceived plan or collusion, for by the nature of the case such a thing was impossible.

Now, in after years when these writings were brought together what would you expect to find? Just a pile of books, of course.

We would expect under such circumstances, as I have said, total discord and utter lack of unity. But instead of this we find the Book to be one harmonious whole, symmetrical in all its proportions, and one dominant, ever expanding thought running through it from the beginning to the end, until, speaking in terms of the cathedral once more, there rises before you this matchless temple of God's truth, every stone fitting into its place, so complete, so perfect and so divine that no one must presume to add a stone to it or dare to take one from it.

I know this is an old argument, but it's a mighty strong one, and no man can be honest and fair who does not meet it and either refute it, if he thinks he can, or acknowledge it, if he can't.

Well has Dr. Joseph Kyle said, "Gather out of a like stretch of years a like company of men and assign to them the task of producing a treatise on any subject that has to do with morals and religion, leaving them to the guidance of their own unaided powers and native sense of propriety, and what a jumble would result! Let forty of the high priests of the critical schools of our time, who reckon themselves the scholars of the world and profess to know exactly what the Bible is not and what it ought to be, furnish us with a volume dealing with like lofty themes to take the Bible's place, and we shall see whether or not a unity such as is a crowning distinction of the Word of God is possible without the supervision and control of the God to whom the Bible owes its claim to be believed. This is a challenge which destructive criticism dare not accept."

Indeed, if this Book is only human, then by every law of progress and by every rule of development the centuries that have gone since its production ought to have produced a better one. It is not a bit remarkable to me, but it ought to be to an unbeliever, that among the many men, brilliant in other respects, who have made so much noise about the human origin of this Book, some of them have not done it.

Why didn't Celsus do it, or Porphyry or Paine or Ingersol? There is fame and fortune in it.

The destructive critics of this day talk glibly about modern scholarship, as if wisdom is to die with them, and to hear the noise they make you would think that the consensus of scholarship was all their way. But their noise is a good deal like that of the frogs in the Wisconsin ponds. They made so much noise that a man wanted to contract

THE WILL OF GOD.

Rev. J. C. Boone.

"Thy will be done." Matt. 6:10.

RAM going to speak of this petition in two ways, first, of the permissive will of God, or that which God does not immediately and directly want. You will see as we go on that in God's permissive will there may enter a good deal that is not directly from him. I want you to notice before we come to the close that the examples I give you of the permissive will of God all show that the desire of God was not fulfilled, but he permitted things to be carried out that were not fully according to his will.

I. GOD'S PERMISSIVE WILL.

I shall give a word in connection with every Scripture that I am going to use.

1. The spies. Turn to Numbers the 13th chapter. This will illustrate the permissive will of God. "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Send thou men, that they may search the land of Canaan, which I gave unto the children of Israel: of every tribe of their fathers shall ye send a man, every one a ruler among them." The Lord told Moses to send the spies. "And Moses sent them to spy out the land of Canaan, and said unto them, Get you up this way southward, and go up into the mountain: and see the land, what it is; and the people that dwelleth therein, whether they be strong or weak, few or many: and what the land is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad; and what cities they be that they dwell in, whether in tents, or in strongholds; and what the land is, whether it be fat or lean, whether there be wood therein, or not. And be of good courage, and bring of the fruit of the land." Wasn't that explicit? They had the Word of God that they were to go. Moses put his endorsement upon it. He said over in Deuteronomy, "The plan seems good to me." Then the Lord told him to send the spies, and we see how definitely he gave directions as to the investigation of the land, people, and houses and all about it. What more could you ask than that, and yet that wasn't the highest will of God. It was the permissive will of God, only. I hope you will see the difference before we finish. God sometimes says to his people, you do thus and so, but he says it because he knows they want it. This is a very solemn truth, beloved. You make up your mind what you want to do and God may let you do it. If it was sinful that would be different—if it was positively wrong to do it—but it is something that is allowable, morally, and something that you have chosen, something that you thought about, and you say, that looks good and desirable and then you go and ask the Lord about it and he says, do it. What more do you want? Haven't you got the fear of God upon you, and you go out and say, I am doing what God told me to do, but he told you to do it because you wanted to. God didn't lay this before you, he didn't think it out. In Deuteronomy we see the whole thing was born in unbelief. God had searched the land. God had given them the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night. They didn't need anything more, but they chose this way and God accommodated himself to them. I have known some parents sometimes to let their children have their way. The son becomes set in his way, the father says, all right, go ahead and do what you want to, and the son has gone out in his own way. It would have been a whole lot better if the boy had never thought at all except in line with his father and said, father your will be done. As far as the general course, the great purpose of life is concerned, God's people always say (unless they are rebellious and backslidden) "Thy will be done." What I want you to see is that it not only ought to be the current of our lives, but we ought to pause by the way and say it and say it particularly at every point of the way, "Thy will be done."

2. Turn to Exodus the 2nd chapter and 11th verse: "And it came to pass in those days, when Moses was grown, that he went out unto his brethren, and looked on their burdens: and he spied an Egyptian smiting an Hebrew, one of his brethren. And he looked this way and that way, and when he saw that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and hid him in the sand. And when he went out the second day, behold, two men of the Hebrews strove together: and he said to him that did the wrong, Wherefore smitest thou thy fellow? And he said, Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? Intendest thou to kill me as thou killest the Egyptian? And Moses feared, and said, Surely this thing is known." Moses wanted God's will done, but was he in the will of God? God permitted it and it may be that that act delayed the deliverance of the children of Israel. God permitted Moses to kill that man, but there is no interpretation of the Bible or any school of teaching or belief whatever that would say that it was God who had led him to do it. Isn't that plain? There is a permissive will of God. Moses didn't get rebellious and out of God's will. He meant to go right on, and did go right on aiming to do God's will in spite of his mistake. Be careful beloved, about getting God's will—not only praying in a general way over the whole of life, but be careful to pray at every point before you do this thing or that. Ask if it is his will, or will he only permit you do it and have to crush you for it—have to discipline you all your life.

3. In the third place, in first Samuel, the 8th chapter, notice the 5th verse: "And said unto him, Behold, thou art old and thy sons walk not in thy ways: now make us a king to judge us like all the nations. But the thing displeased Samuel, when they said, Give us a king to judge us. And Samuel prayed unto the Lord. And the Lord said unto Samuel, Harken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee: for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me, that I should not reign over them." Who did that thought originate with about having a king, beloved? You read so much about the kings of God's people and how he selected and chose kings for them, and you would say, surely that is God's system, God's plan. But, beloved, this originated in the hearts of the people, it was not born of the Spirit of God, but of themselves. That is very plain, for they said, we want a king like the nations about us. Young people, be careful about telling God what you want. You better ask God what he wants, for very likely he will give you what you want, and you may be sorry for it all the rest of your life. I hope you will go on and pray the prayer, "Thy will be done," even while you are being chastised. Take the rod and go on.

4. Turn to 2 Samuel, the 24th chapter. Again we have an example of God's permissive will. In the first four verses it says, "And again the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel, and he moved David against them to say, Go, number Israel and Judah. For the king said to Joab the captain of the host, which was with him, Go now through all the tribes of Israel, from Dan even to Beer-sheba, and number all the people, that I may know the number of the people. And Joab said unto the king, Now the Lord thy God add unto the people, how many soever they be, an hundredfold, and that the eyes of my lord the king may see it: But why doth my lord the king delight in this thing? Notwithstanding the king's word prevailed against Joab, and against the captains of the host. And Joab and the captains of the host went out from the presence of the king, to number the people of Israel." So David had his way. That was pride, that was ambition. He wanted to boast about the number of people they had. David was a man who prayed, "Thy will be done." God said he was a man after his own heart. If he had listened to Joab at this time, got down on his knees with Joab and prayed about it and said, Oh, God, is this your mind? God would have said, No, that isn't what I want at all. But he didn't do it. This particular time, he said, I want to do this thing. I want to make the people know what a great army we have. Joab said, Don't do it, king, don't do it, but his argument didn't avail anything. God let them number Israel. I am speaking, beloved, about the permissive will of God.

5. One more example, Psalm 106:15, "And he gave them their request; but sent leanness into their soul." God granted their request. He sent the quails and they feasted on the quails for a month till quails came out of the nostrils, but they had leanness in their souls. They didn't care any more for the manna, for the spiritual bread that was sent from heaven. Young people it is a solemn thing to make up your mind what you want and then ask God for it, for likely he will give it to you. What came after it? Look at the leanness that came to God's children because they had their way and yet all the time prayed, Thy will be done, and meaning it too, but making a mistake. That is the permissive will of God. Let us look at the other side a little.

II. THE DIRECTIVE WILL OF GOD.

Turn to the book of Acts, the 8th chapter and the 26th to the 40th verses, for an example, "And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert," and so on. I am sure Philip never thought that out. He was in a good place, having a great revival, having great crowds of people, and the city of Samaria was moved at the preaching of Christ, and this trip never originated in his mind. He was startled when it came. He said, I wonder if this is from God. Then I think he called some of the committee together and said, here, Brethren, I heard a voice. Some way God spoke to me it seemed and told me to go down to the desert, and I imagine those men said, if they were not deeply spiritual, why, man, that is foolish. I expect they said, Why, the desert! there is nothing down there, there is nobody there. What do you want to make a trip like that for? Philip listened to it all, weighing the matter fully, every side of it, from every standpoint, and finally it was borne in upon his soul that God had told him to go. The permissive will of God originates on the human side, and God lets you have your say, but the directive will is his best for you.

Now I am going to give a conundrum. I was going to Omaha the other day. There are two railroads that are parallel, the Chicago Northwestern on one side and the Illinois Central on the other. It happened this day that two trains came along at the same time, and I said I wonder who is going to beat, and watched the train I was on and wished they would hurry up and get ahead of them and let those fellows know we were beating them. It was quite interesting. This is the conundrum: one train was running fast, the other one was running slow and the slow train beat the fast one, the slow train got ahead and got there first. Who can answer that? Well I will tell you. The fast train stopped every once in a while, and the slow train went right along. Don't stop in the will of the Lord and get behind. In the Christian life don't stop to have your own way. Just keep at it, keep going on. Surrender to the will of God and then keep surrendered at every point. Don't stop to have your own way.

THE REVIVAL.

REV. ROBERT L. SELLE.

REVIVALS do not come by chance or unexpectedly. They come unlooked for and unexpectedly to some people, but are always looked for and expected by others, the ones who have prevailed with God in fervent effectual pleadings and intercessions for an outpouring of God's spirit and power. Any church or neighborhood may have a revival of the Pentecostal type as recorded in the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. But in order to have such a revival, now as then, the necessary conditions for such a manifestation of God's presence and power must be met, and they can be met as easily now as they were then. When revival conditions are met the revival cannot be prevented.

If we knew the history of revivals as it is recorded in the Book of God's Remembrance we would see that every spiritual awakening had its beginning in the heart of some saint or saints who were near enough to the heart of the Savior for him to place the burden for souls upon them. He did it. They willingly took it. They worked together under the same yoke.

Earnest prayer; soul cry to God for the salvation of the lost; continuous intercession for the one thing; fastings mingled with prayer as the Spirit led; refusing to be comforted except in seeing souls converted to God with faith in the people in the Bible, and in God, and with travail of soul for the salvation of the lost, was the path of revival preparation traveled by some child of God preceding the revival. The pastor or evangelist gets credit for a revival when it really belongs to some one whose name may never be connected with it at all except in the record on the pages of the Book of Life.

Some of the most successful pastors and evangelists are men and women who have no ecclesiastical credentials, no advertising matter for distribution telling what they have done and what they can do but are quiet before God, shut-ins it may be, who have a passion for souls inspired by the Man of Gethsemane and it is their daily meat and drink to plead with God in intercessory prayer for the salvation of the lost. It will be interesting "when we shall know as we are known" to see the history of the revivals we have known and to see the saints who touched the hem of God's power in prevailing prayer which started the revival.

May some one in every state in the Union, in Canada, Mexico and other countries who read these lines catch the vision of opportunity to be a co-worker with Christ in bringing about the revival that is most needed in the community to save lost souls; and seeing the opportunity, it may be that they will be willing to yoke up with him for the task. He is ready. He is waiting and calling for help. "Here am I; take me," is the reply he lingers to hear.

People are not too busy to be reached and moved by the power of God; sinners are not too hard to be moved by the power of God's grace; the world is not too indifferent to divine things to be won by the love of God as revealed in Jesus Christ. The door for a national and an international revival is now open wide before the Lord's people who want to line up with Christ to help him finish his work upon the earth.

His call to this task is personal to me and to you. What will my answer to him be and what will yours be? Think! Pray!

"The Light of the World" or The Electric Light, Which?

COMMISSIONER S. L. BRENGLE, D. D.

OUR thousand friends and neighbors, children and grown-ups came to visit Mr. Edison and help him celebrate his eighty-first birthday. Among the number were reporters, of course, plying him with questions, for his opinion on all sorts of subjects is eagerly sought and listened to with great respect.

A survey of the churches recently disclosed the fact that 11,344 churches in the United States gained no converts last year. He was asked to comment on this sad fact. His reply was: "People are drifting away from superstition and bunk; increase in scientific knowledge is responsible."

Asked if he believed in "eternity, or any sort of life after death," he replied:

"Fifty-fifty—one way or the other is my present belief."

I can remember when Mr. Edison began to startle and enrich the world with his amazing inventions. He is well dubbed "The Wizard."

Once an idea for an invention comes to him, he is tireless until that idea is clothed with a body. With unwearied patience he pursues his experiments. He hardly takes time to sleep or eat. He will make thousands of experiments, testing, proving, until he is rewarded. He is not baffled by failure. He tries and tries yet again. He seeks with his whole heart. He seeks till he finds. But it is the things that can be seen and handled, the things that perish, the material things, that appeal to him. To them he gives his whole mind. The things of the spirit do not interest him. Religion does not concern him. Whether or not he has a soul is to him a matter of indifference. He may live after death, but the chances are equal that he will not, is his opinion. There may be a God, a wise and loving Creator, but he feels under no moral obligation to him, makes no effort to find him, has no ambition to know him.

He is an intelligent man, vastly intelligent, but all his thought is of this world. His opinion about the things to which he gives his thought and splendidly disciplined powers is very worthwhile, and, because this is so, many young people who do not discriminate will attach an importance to his opinions about religion and the future life that they do not possess. When he talks about electricity, about light and power and a hundred other things about which I have given no thought and am utterly ignorant, I shut my mouth and bare my head and listen to him with wonder and reverence; but when he talks about religion, I know he is talking out of abysmal ignorance when he should be silent. When he calls conversion "bunk" I pity his spiritual poverty and wonder at the conceit which permits him to talk of something about which he knows nothing.

He is now studying and experimenting to find a substitute for rubber, and he says it will probably require six or eight years to solve the problem. To this end he will give his fullest thought, but to find his own soul, to find God and the secrets of eternal life in Christ, he will not give an hour. Why should I listen to him about a matter concerning which he is confessedly ignorant and to which he gives no time nor study?

As I thought of his marvelous record of invention it occurred to me what a catastrophe it would be to the world if his inventions should be destroyed overnight! It would utterly demoralize the economic and social life of nations. What would we do if all electric lights were suddenly destroyed?

But then I thought how infinitely greater would be the loss if all Bibles and religious books, churches and Christian schools, missions, The Salvation Army, the Young Men's Christian Association, hymns and songs, were swept away and the knowledge of the Cross of Christ forgotten overnight, and there were no more Heavenly Father to which the sinful, the suffering, the sorrowing could pray. It would wreck civilization! We should sink back into barbarism. Black spiritual night would wrap us round and freeze our hearts, and all that is finest in our civilization would perish.

I admire and give thanks for Mr. Edison. He has ministered measurably to my pleasure and physical comfort and convenience. But if I must choose between him and Isaiah, Paul, Savonarola, Luther, Wesley, William Booth and those who have ministered to the spiritual needs of my soul and of my fellowmen, then I choose the saints and soldiers of the Cross before the inventor and scientist.

"Man cannot live by bread alone," said Jesus; neither can he live by electric lights, phonographs, power plants and synthetic rubber. Science can supply physical wants, but it has no balm for the guilty conscience, no pardon for sin, no comfort for the sorrowful, no great Companion and Friend for the lonely, no light for the valley of the shadow of death, no Heavenly Father's House with many mansions beyond the grave.

Don't rob me of the electric light, for I shall greatly miss it, but leave me Jesus Christ, the "Light of the World," or I die. Leave me my Lord and Redeemer, leave me the Bible, and the Psalms and songs of Zion, and the knowledge of "life that shall endless be," the fellowship of saints and the Everlasting Father, else I shall wish I had not been born.

"These shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal."

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XVIII.

HUSTON BEFORE THE DEAN.

few days after Huston's defense of the prophets in the classroom, the Dean of the Theological Faculty met him on the campus and asked him to come to his office at a certain hour next day for conversation.

Huston was on hand promptly at the hour designated and was very cordially received. After some pleasant conversation the Dean said, "Mr. Huston, I have had a very high esteem of you, of your abilities and the fine grades you have made in your studies; but it occurs to me that we should have an understanding about the discussion with your professor in which you have indulged in your class-room.

"I am sure you understand that in order to preserve the morale of our school there is a certain deference that must be paid to our professors in the class-room, in fact, on the campus, and everywhere. I quite admire your sincerity and spirit of earnestness, but I cannot endorse the freedom with which you express yourself to your professors at the time of recitation. You not only absorb the time, but thus deprive other students of the privilege of asking questions and expressing their opinion. Your attitude and freedom are very confusing, and is not only improper, as we think, toward a professor, but is very offensive to a large number of your classmates. I think we should have an understanding that this offensive attitude of yours will not be continued."

Huston sat for a few moments looking thoughtfully at the Dean, and then replied: "I fully understand the propriety of your remarks, and admit that I have been perhaps, a bit unwise and indiscreet in the freedom I have taken; on the other hand, I think you will agree with me that the situation is a serious one. Everything that I have been taught and have believed, and on which I have rested my faith for the salvation of my soul, has been attacked and ridiculed by our professors. May I speak to you a few moments freely about conditions here, which have driven me to the action which I have taken?"

"Certainly," said the Dean. "I will always be glad to hear from you or any other student any complaint you may wish to make where we can talk matters over freely, in the privacy of this office."

"Very well," said Huston. "I have been graciously saved by the grace of God through faith in Christ, and have had a profound and deep conviction which could not be thrown off, that I had a divine call to preach the gospel. I came here to this school for instruction, how to wisely divide the word of truth, and preach that gospel which St. Paul tells us is 'the power of God unto salvation.'"

"One of your professors tells us that Moses did not write the Pentateuch; that these books contained facts gathered by unknown authors from Egyptian laws, legends and folklore; that they are not of divine origin and will not be received as such by the modern mind. So we are entirely deprived of any sort of gospel use of these five books of the Old Testament.

"Another professor tells us that David did not write the Psalms; that they are by unknown authors, the poets of the times in which they were written, and of no more divine inspiration and authority than any of the songs we have in our hymn books of today; so that in our preaching we are deprived of the use of the Psalms with the idea of their having any sort of divine authority.

"Another professor tells us that the prophets were the statesmen of their day, with exaggerated and false notions of the character of God; that they know nothing of the coming Messiah and that they are not to be relied upon or preached as men inspired by the Holy Spirit to accurately prognosticate the future and tell with any certainty of coming events.

"Another one of our teachers tells us that our Lord Jesus was not of virgin birth; that these wonderful chapters of the gospel by Matthew and Luke were evidently forgeries, or folklore, sort of camp rumors, so to speak, that had gotten into the hands of a superstitious and fanatical people. If these professors are correct, how can we have any faith in anything written by Matthew and Luke? If they were mistaken about the advent of our Lord into the world, how can we trust their accuracy with reference to anything connected with his character and conduct? This same professor boasts that there is not a hint in the Gospel of John, or the teachings of St. Paul with reference to the virgin birth, all of this in spite of the fact that John begins his Gospel with 'In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life, and the life was the light of men. . . . And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth.'

"Now my dear Dean, we all know that John is here writing of the Christ just as if he had said, 'In the beginning was the Christ, and the Christ was with God, and the Christ was God, and the Christ was made flesh, and dwelt among us. All things were made by the Christ, and without the Christ was not anything made that was made. In the Christ was life, and the life was the light of men.'

"John comes to the close of his gospel with this statement: 'But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye might have life through his name.' And yet you have a professor in this seminary to teach the young preachers that are to go out, supposedly with the gospel message, that there is not a hint in John's Gospel of the virgin birth. Would he have us believe that the son of Joseph or some other man, was in the beginning with God, and was God, and was the only begotten Son of God?"

"My dear Sir, this is not reverential scholarship; it's skeptical drivell. It is enough to arouse righteous indignation in the soul of any honest man. The same professor tells us that there is not a hint in the writings of St. Paul of the virgin birth. In the first place, Paul and St. Luke were intimate yokefellows and co-workers. Paul knew Luke's teaching and he nowhere contradicts it, but everywhere recognizes 'the mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ.' He tells us that 'In Christ dwelleth all the fullness of the godhead bodily.'

"Paul in Colossians, first chapter, tells us that God 'hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son: In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins, who is the image of the invisible one, the firstborn of every creature: For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: All things were created by him, and for him: And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.'

"My dear Sir, do you for a moment believe that a man of Paul's intelligence would write thus of the Christ if he had believed him to be a mere man, the son of Joseph, or some one else? Paul wrote these inspired truths with a full understanding and perfect endorsement in his own mind and heart, of the incarnation and virgin birth of the eternal, all-creative Son of God.

"One of your professors makes out the Epistles simply the thought and wisdom, counsels and exhortation, of men, without any sort of divine inspiration or authority. So here we are come up to this distinguished school of Theology to be taught how to preach, and your professors take away from us the writings of Moses, the Psalms, the Prophets, the Gospels, the Epistles, and the Christ, making him a mere man, believing and affected in his teaching by the superstitions of the people among whom he lived.

"My dear Sir, what is left for us to preach? Nothing with any sort of authority. We haven't a 'Thus saith the Lord' left for our ministry."

Huston paused, and the Dean, after clearing his throat several times, said, "My dear Mr. Huston, you have not been here long enough to catch and correctly interpret the spirit of this seminary. We are trying, with great patience, to adjust the thinking and teaching of our students for the ministry to the spirit of a new age, to the thinking of the modern mind."

"Yes," said Huston, "I understand; that has been explained at some length by some of your professors in our class-room. May I tell you that you have in this city quite a number of ministers, pastors of large churches, with big salaries, who are preaching just what is being taught here, to which I so seriously object. They have wealthy and fashionable congregations at their Sunday morning services; their churches are closed in the evening most of the year. Their people are among the most fashionable and worldly in the city. We students have been making a careful survey of the situation. The people under the pastorate of your modern thought preachers make no pretence at harmonizing their lives by the New Testament standard, at the same time, we have in this city several great preachers of a pure gospel, the seating capacity of whose churches has been enlarged, and are packed with multitudes of eager, devout people twice every Sunday, always with evangelistic services in the evening where sinners are being converted. Your modernistic brethren ridicule these evangelistic services and call them 'mob psychology.'

"My dear Dean, there is another phase of this subject that is well worth your consideration. This school is supported by the church; godly people give their money to pay the salaries of these skeptical professors. If your financial agents went out and told the facts as they exist here, they would not get the financial support of the church. The money given by devout people for this institution is secured by misrepresentation. May I say to you, that there are some fifty of us who are ready not only to rebel, but to publish to the church and the country at large, the conditions that exist here, and the false teachings that are poured into this student body.

"Please to excuse me for taking up so much of your time. I cannot apologize for speaking plainly, but I have not, in a single instance, exaggerated existing conditions."

With this, Huston arose and left the room.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

THE MISSIONARY SPIRIT AT SYCHAR.

It is a platitude among Christians that all really saved folks possess the missionary spirit. One of the first desires begotten in the heart of the newly converted is the desire to tell others of his new-found experience. Many, many times have we seen the new convert, rejoicing in the possession of a new joy and peace, arise from his knees and go back into the congregation to tell his friends of his salvation and urge them to come and accept his Savior.

This is characteristic of our "first love"; and as we go on with God to deeper, richer experiences of grace our missionary zeal and interest increase in proportion. There is no body of people on earth who are so zealous for the missionary enterprise as the full salvation folks.

Recognizing this fact, and knowing the high spiritual tone of Sychar, we would naturally expect to find there a high degree of missionary zeal and activity. And we are not disappointed. For in almost every service we are able to detect this spirit in the sermons, prayers, songs, testimonies and exhortations. The spirit of gospel propaganda is emphasized in every service of the camp. The great commission to the church, to go into all the world and preach the gospel finds a ready response in the hearts and minds of the fully saved.

Moreover, Sychar not only recognizes the duty and privilege of the Christian in this direction but takes definite steps to encourage and to foster this spirit. It has long been the custom at Sychar to set apart one day of the camp as Missionary Day. Upon this day a special service is held in which the missionary obligation of the Christian is specially set forth by some one appointed for that important work. All returned or prospective missionaries on the grounds are given a place upon the platform, and if at all possible a place on the program, at least some time to represent their work in their particular field of labor.

These services are particularly inspiring as they bring the news direct from the field, not cold statistical tabulations which make little or no appeal to the average individual, but living, inspiring reports warm with the life and Christian personality of the worker himself. Truly these occasions are encouraging and uplifting and do much towards developing and encouraging the missionary spirit in the minds of those who hear.

It were a pity though if these services should only contribute to our inspiration. But Sychar takes a step farther, and not only provides inspiration and encouragement, but also furnishes opportunity to actually participate in the carrying out of these ideals. For some time past Sychar camp has been organized to do some definite work upon the mission field.

Rev. Woodford Taylor and wife who have been laboring in China under the National Holiness Association Missionary Society, was selected as the immediate and direct work of the camp, and their support was undertaken. Each year a free-will offering for this particular work is taken, and the results thus far have been gratifying. At this year's camp Rev. Taylor and his wife being home on furlough, were present at the annual Missionary Day service and spoke on their work in China.

In his address Rev. Taylor spoke upon the subject of prayer and the part it has played in the evangelization of China. The year before, he declared, China was in the grip of Communism from Russia. A movement was on to expel all churches and associated work; but in answer to prayer, though China was torn by internal strifes and wasted by famine, these conditions have ceased. The past year had been one of great evangelistic success, the greatest in many years. He reported two hundred converted in a meeting of four days, and fifteen hundred since. The getting of people saved however, is the small part of the work. The training of native missionaries and the teaching of the new converts is the real task and calls for great faith and consecration on the part of the missionary, and of great prayer and giving on the part of those on the home field.

Rev. Taylor cited many cases of conversions among the natives which are bringing forth abundant fruit for the kingdom of God, and stated that these were representative of the great work in progress. His address was received enthusiastically and a generous offering was received to carry on the work for the coming year.

A circular letter recently received from Rev. Taylor announces the fact of his having received an urgent telegram to return immediately to the field, and after a hurried preparation and leave-taking he and Mrs. Taylor had embarked on the "Siberia Maru" from San Francisco, Jan. 16, and are now on the field carrying out the good work assisted by the support of the Sychar family. The prayers of the friends of Sychar follow them.

At the Missionary Day service this year Sychar attendants were accorded the additional privilege of hearing two more missionaries from the foreign field. Margaret LaBarre presented her work in Africa in which she stated that the great question confronting us today concerning Africa is whether Africa is to be Christian or Mohammedan. She gave many interesting and inspiring incidents of her work which were thoroughly appreciated.

Bro. Amie, missionary to Ecuador under the Christian Missionary Alliance, also gave an interesting description of his work, outlining the three main fields of labor, and saying that the best way to evangelize Ecuador is by means of the native missionary. All in all the program this year was very interesting, instructive, and inspiring; and Sychar people not only feel a deeper interest in the missionary enterprise as a whole, but are stimulated to greater effort by having a definite part to perform in this great work.

THE GREAT WORK OF DR. JERRETT IN DETROIT.

Having just closed one of the greatest revivals of my life with the Detroit Church of the Nazarene where Dr. Jerrett is pastor, I am writing a little article to let the people know how God is working there, through Dr. Jerrett. Dr. Jerrett came to us five years ago from the Presbyterian Church, and he says God led him into the Nazarene Church and he is with us to stay. He took charge of our work in Detroit five years ago with nothing much to start with, and today has a beautiful new church and as fine a lot of people as I have ever worked with. They have much holy fire, without any wild fire, as I have seen for some time. He has a fine auditorium which seats about one thousand people, with Sunday school rooms in basement. He is one of the holiest of men and prays as much as any man I have ever labored with. He constantly keeps the anointing of God upon his soul, and I consider that one reason why he keeps his church free from getting into ruts. Has something new and fresh on all the time. I was entertained in his home and there is no finer pastor's wife than Sister Jerrett.

We had a most wonderful meeting with between six and seven hundred people at the altar seeking God. We took in sixty-five new members, all adults except three or four. Also had baptismal service, in which thirty were baptized. Raised about six thousand dollars on the church, and on Friday night raised five hundred and fifty dollars to pay the difference on Dr. Jerrett's present car and a new one. Dr. Jerrett was opposed to this but the church and Board was back of it. So he was driving his new car Saturday before we closed on Sunday.

Bona and I are called back to this church in October. D. V. We will do our best to go there. May the blessings of God be upon the church at Detroit, and Dr. Jerrett.

OLD TIME REVIVALS.

For three weeks in March Evangelist S. B. Shaw, of Grand Rapids, Mich., conducted an old-fashioned revival in the Third Street Gospel Mission at Greenville, Ill. The following is clipped from the Greenville Advocate:

"The old time revival meeting at the Third Street Gospel Mission has resulted in much good in bringing about closer fellowship among Christians. Those who have attended the meetings have been greatly helped, sinners have been converted, backsliders reclaimed and many of God's children have received a greater vision."

The work opened up in Indianapolis at the Missionary Bands Tabernacle, 719 E. St. Clair St., March 31st, and will continue every night for a month. Sunday afternoon, April 7th, eight visiting ministers were present and took part in the service.

Brother Shaw spoke at the Methodist Preacher's meeting Monday morning, April 8th, and was unanimously endorsed by that association. All other pastors who have been consulted promise to co-operate. The most spiritual people of various churches in Indianapolis are looking forward to a revival in this city. We request prayer for this campaign.

F. B. Whisler, Pastor, Missionary Bands Tabernacle, Indianapolis, Ind.

A GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT WESSINGTON SPRINGS, SOUTH DAKOTA.

Thank God the days of real revivals are not over. "Wessington Springs has not seen a revival like this in fifteen years," was the word on the lips of many of the old residents of this community. Every night for three weeks the church was filled and on Sundays great crowds attended. Two great special services were held, one for women and girls only, and one for men and boys only. Dr. Kendall delivered two wonderful addresses at these services which had a telling effect for good upon everyone who attended.

Dr. James Burton Kendall, of Lexington, Ky was our evangelist. He gripped his audience at the very first and they grew to love him more until the very close.

Great crowds came forward in penitence and bowed at the altar repenting of their sins and accepting Christ as their personal Savior. Many Christians were reclaimed, others reconsecrated their lives to God and some sought the Baptism of the Holy Spirit. More than 150 conversions were seen at the altar. At the closing service Dr. Kendall asked all who had been definitely blessed, not simply felt good or received a blessing, but those who had either been converted, reclaimed, or had reconsecrated their lives to God, to stand, and more than three hundred in that great congregation stood. We received a fine company of new members into the church, and the entire membership was truly revived and built up by those meetings.

H. W. Blackburn.

POMPAÑO, FLORIDA.

Report another good meeting at Pompano, Fla.; hard fought battle but the victory came. There was no landslide, but God gave us some gracious services and a number of souls were pardoned and sanctified. There was no worked up enthusiasm as we had no one to work it up with. As I had to play the piano, lead the singing and do the preaching there was not much place for enthusiasm with so much to do.

Fifty bowed at the altar and ten prayed through and testified that God had come into their hearts. Florida is a hard field and many sacrifices have to be made in order to keep going, but we mean to be true to holiness and not compromise in the least. God gives me souls every place we go. We go in and rent a house and put up our tent and feed ourselves, and preach and sing and get as many souls through as we can, and take what the people are a mind to contribute, so you see many times we need money that we don't get, and we need your prayers all the time.

Any church wanting me for a meeting may write me at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., as I am making that headquarters for my mail now. I go anywhere that my service is wanted, on full salvation lines. Brethren, I have been preaching this for twenty-three years and I don't mean to quit now. I am convinced more and more of the need of fiery gospel preaching, and holiness is the only thing that really puts the fire in the soul, and shining faces and ringing testimonies look and sound better to me than mere joining. It means something for a soul to pray through and get the glory.

I am still pressing the battle for holiness and God is honoring his Word. May the Lord give us a fire-baptized Church. Pray for me that I may keep in the center of his will and win every soul I can.

W. L. Shell.

GIBBSBORO, NEW JERSEY.

This is our first report to The Pentecostal Herald, and our second year in this place where we have been waging a battle with the forces of darkness and endeavoring to get light and salvation to as many souls as possible. God is still on the throne, answers prayer and sends Holy Ghost revivals when conditions are met and the price paid. A few folks got under the burden for a real heaven sent, Holy Ghost, sin-killing revival, and the God that answers by fire moved in the midst of his people, answered prayer, and graciously sent us one. Ray Johnson, the boy preacher, from Texas, was engaged as evangelist, and the meeting began March 4th. Brother Johnson's earnest, uncompromising, unctuous messages gripped people from the beginning and brought conviction. He emphasized the truth that no one can be a Christian and continue in sin, that man must be justified then sanctified as a second definite work of grace. The church was filled nightly and practically every evening the altar was filled with seekers, there being times when they were unable to find kneeling space at the altar. We believe it would be safe to say that it was among the best, if not the best, meeting that has been held in this church for years. About sixty knelt for either pardon or purity, and we believe many of that number prayed through to victory. Many of our own members were definitely helped, the church strengthened and built up, and some from other churches were blessed. We praise God for sending Brother Johnson our way. Our prayers and best wishes go with him as he continues his work. We purpose to keep humble, pray more, and trust God for greater things. We ask an interest in the prayers of The Herald family.

with the hotel at the summer resort to deliver a carload of frog legs. He knew he could do it. The ponds were teeming with batrachians. He could tell it by the sound. He fulfilled his contract with a single pair of legs from one huge frog.

The proprietor said, "I thought you were going to bring me a wagon load of them."

"Well, this old fellow made so much noise down there I thought there was a wagon load of them, but when I went to hunt for them I found there was only this one."

No, gentlemen, when you stand face to face with the argument for the divinity of the Book as founded upon the marvelous unity of its structure, you are not dealing with the "fine spun speculations of cloistered theologians," but with plain, patent and indisputable fact.

I say again, therefore, that the only fair and rational way to explain it is to admit, as honesty compels one to do, that back of all the workmen that wrought upon this structure there was one all-controlling, all-directing supernatural Architect, and at the same time to acknowledge, in the light of what has been said, that this Bible, despite all that men and devils have done to defame and destroy it, stands forth yesterday, today and forever, as the Book of books, the marvel of the ages.

A READER OF THE HERALD.

OME friend, who signs himself "A reader of your paper," sends me a page torn from The Christian Herald, containing an article by Rev. George C. Pidgeon, who was the first Moderator of the United Church in Canada. On the margin of the paper my friend says, "Dear Doctor, be candid and confess your fault. Your fears were needless, and your predictions have all failed."

This friend, name unknown, no doubt is referring to the fact that some years ago when the modernistic members of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches were uniting in Canada, I predicted that no spiritual good would come to the Dominion of Canada because of this union.

The article which I have just read, does not change my opinion in the least. Mr. Pidgeon gives a very brilliant and encouraging account of the advantages that have come out of this union of the churches. I have no doubt that he is perfectly sincere in his statement, and probably, there are certain economic and social advantages in the union of little churches in villages and other places, by which they are able to economize in the matter of pastors and financial outlay, but the question arises, Have these united churches been delivered from the destructive criticism and modern liberalism which were destroying their faith before the union? Were these modernistic Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists "baptized by the Holy Ghost into one body?" or did they drift so far away from the beliefs of the fundamentals of our Christianity, did they surrender so much of divine truth, and did they come to agree so perfectly in their modernistic views, that there was no longer any reason why they should live separate?

There is such a thing as a holy union of faith in the Word of God, and the Son of God, and his power to redeem from sin, that there is union and oneness of heart in devotion and aim for the salvation of souls among people who represent various denominations. Today, we have ministers and people who believe so little in the inspiration of the Word of God, the Virgin Birth and Godhead of the Lord Jesus Christ, in the inherent and natural sinfulness of mankind, and the real need of regenerating grace and sanctifying power through virtue of the sacrificial death of Christ, that it is quite easy for them to unite in one church organization; and they may be zealous in the propagation of their ideas, and in the social service of humanity, and they may get a bit of joy out of their abandoning the old, strong, straight standards of divine truth, along with their service for the fellowbeings, and yet be utterly without regenerating power and lives of true consecration to the Christ of prophecy, the gospels and the epistles, who alone can save.

The Catholic Church is very tenacious in its faith, its devotion to the Pope, its adoration of certain wrist and ankle bones, and very active in the upbuilding of its institutions and certain services to humanity, but at the same time, communities and nations under its domination perish, spiritually, and furnish needy mission fields for a saving gospel. We could mention a church that, some years ago, made remarkable headway in the matter of securing members, building churches and schools, preaching baptism for the remission of sins, and ridiculing the Bible truth of regeneration. The supposed prosperity of the united skeptical churches of Canada does not prove anything to this writer with reference to the true spirituality and the real contribution to the salvation of human souls.

There is one statement in Mr. Pidgeon's article that is quite suggestive: "A movement like this may lack the dramatic features and emotional flights of revivals of other days." I do not like this sort of reference to the old-time Methodist revival, where sinners fell down at the altar and cried out for mercy, and finding Jesus as their Savior, rejoiced and gave praise to God for salvation.

This is spoken of as "emotional flights." I recall that, when the Holy Ghost fell upon the upper room company at Pentecost, certain destructive critics reported that this group, so cleansed from sin and filled with divine love, were "drunk." No doubt these critics thought the whole thing was "an emotional flight" which would pass away when they got over their drunken spree and sobered down into reasonable beings.

The fact was, however, that the Holy Ghost had made a most remarkable advent into the world, to enter into God's children, cleansing them from sin, abiding, to be their Comforter and to empower them for service. Their critics were so dead in their souls that they were incapable of any accurate judgment with reference to what had taken place.

In union there is strength, and I certainly have no disposition to object to the union of various Christian denominations, provided, they unite in a firm faith in the inspiration of the Word of God, of the Virgin Birth and Deity of the Lord Jesus, and his redemptive sufferings and death upon the cross, his resurrection and mediation in the Holy Ghost, one and equal with the Father, in our midst to reprove of sin, of righteousness and judgment to come.

It is belief of these great truths—regenerating and sanctifying power—which brings people to true oneness in Christ. This may easily exist among persons of separate denominations. This should exist and, where the Holy Spirit has right of way, it does exist. Personally, I have not a doubt that if a number of preachers in this United Church should begin to preach boldly and insist that the church should stand for the divine inspiration and absolute authority of the Holy Scriptures, for the Virgin Birth of the Lord Jesus, that he did perform miracles, that he died a vicarious death for our sins, that he arose and ascended into heaven, and that there is no such thing as salvation without a positive, individual, personal, new birth, and that, "without holiness no man shall see the Lord," it would disrupt this Union.

I do not believe in the destructive critics, the modernistic liberals, who discount the inspiration of the Scriptures, who speak lightly of the Virgin Birth, the Deity and atoning death of the Lord Jesus, who would substitute the training of the child for the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost. I don't believe in these people. The greater success they have, the more enthusiasm they develop, the larger numbers they gather into their membership, the greater the spiritual apostasy and wickedness of our times will become.

I am hoping that my friend who sent me the page from The Christian Herald may read these words. I do not insist that he shall do this, but I wish him to know that my opinion about the union of the churches in Canada has not changed; I can say further, if this union should result in these rank modernists coming back to faith in the Bible, and the doctrines of the atonement made upon the cross, the regenerating of sinners, the cleansing baptism of the Holy Spirit upon believers, I should greatly rejoice.

MICAH'S NEW RELIGION.

AMY N. HINSHAW.

N the days of the early Judges of Israel, perhaps a score of years after the death of Joshua, a man named Micah dwelt in the hill-country of Ephraim. His mother was a woman of wealth and social prestige. She was an ardent champion of advanced scholarship, a devotee of progress, actively interested in social service and ecclesiastical reforms. She was formulating ambitious plans for improving the existing order of public worship, and had devoted a large sum of money for the financing of the work. Eleven hundred shekels of silver—almost $60,000—were, as she thought, safely stowed away for this worthy purpose.

But one day the money mysteriously disappeared. When her son, Micah, observed his mother's frantic grief over the loss of her treasure, he penitently returned the entire sum, confessing that he had himself purloined it, with a view of appropriating it to his own use. Overjoyed at this happy turn of affairs, the fond mother freely forgave her son. She also took him into her confidence, and made him the chief executive of her cherished enterprise.

"God bless you, my son," she exclaimed. "That was consecrated money. I had dedicated it all to the Lord, and was intending to turn it over to you, so that you might make a graven and a molten image to be used in Jehovah's worship."

So Micah took two hundred of the consecrated shekels to a founder who cast them in moulds and turned out two magnificent images. These were elaborately decorated by the skillful hand of the engraver, and when finished, were duly installed in places of honor in the house of Micah. Other images were placed beside them—a large and varied collection, including a number of the little household teraphim, until Micah's house was filled with gods.

Next, Micah, with his mother's approval, constructed an ephod in imitation of the holy garments worn by the priests who ministered in the Tabernacle at Shiloh, and he consecrated one of his own sons to perform the priestly offices for the household.

In this manner Micah and his mother introduced into the public worship of the Israelites a number of startling innovations. In the beginning these new features were designed to reflect honor upon Jehovah through new and up-to-date methods, even though they were in direct opposition to the requirements of the established system which Jehovah Himself had dictated to Moses on Mt. Sinai. That ancient system emphasized ONE GOD, and prohibited images of any kind. It restricted the priesthood to the sons of Aaron, and the holy ephod, which was the medium of communication with Jehovah, was to be worn only by the High-Priest. The priests were required to perform all their ministrations in the one place designated by Jehovah, which in Micah's time was the Tabernacle at Shiloh. In fact, every detail connected with the worship of the sanctuary had been clearly defined by Jehovah in the mount, and duly recorded by Moses in the Book of the Law.

Micah and his mother were both well acquainted with these facts, but they reasoned that times had greatly changed since the Law was given on Sinai, and, while the appointments of the Mosaic system had served a useful purpose in the primitive times of Moses, yet, in the light of the more advanced civilization of the Judges, some of its restrictions had become archaic, even "anti-quarian," hence the need of a new and improved system—one more in keeping with the new environment, and better adapted to the age in which these people were living. The strict requirements of the Law had become too narrow for the advanced thought of their times, which recognized no authority save that of human reason. "In those days there was no king in Israel, but every man did that which was right in his own eyes." Tolerance and progress were popular slogans in the days of the Judges. Jehovah was still recognized as the God of Israel; the Tabernacle was still standing at Shiloh, with all the sacred furniture intact; and the priests were officiating in the sanctuary, but in a perfunctory and very imperfect manner. The entire congregation of Israel were in danger of losing interest in the religion of their fathers.

On the other hand, the religions of the neighboring Canaanitish nations presented many attractive features which merited the consideration of thoughtful and progressive minds. The Jehovah God of Israel was a God of power, mighty and terrible in battle. That was conceded. But he was an austere God, dwelling apart from men, hidden in the mysterious shadows of the inner sanctuary. Not so the gods of the Canaanites. They were sociable beings, of like passions with men, dominated, like them, by petty ambitions, jealousies and rivalries. They were found on the battlefield, but also in the banquet hall, with their wine-cups and their paramours. The worship of Israel, like its God, was stern and exacting. It required separation from the world, while the shed blood of innocent animals was always conspicuous in its ceremonies. In fact the emphasis placed upon the shedding of blood was so strong as to become repugnant to people of sensitive nerves, and the smell of the shambles was distinctly annoying. In sharp contrast, the religious ceremonies of the Canaanites were marked by joy and gladness and freedom from restraint, with feasting and gaiety and revelry conspicuous in all their worship. Evidently social features similar to these should be introduced into the worship of Jehovah in order to keep the younger generation in the Israelitish fold. Hence the images and the teraphim and the costly, luxurious appointments of Micah's establishment, because the new religion must compete in attractiveness with those of the Canaanites; it must impress these other nations favorably, and, if possible, win their admiration and their co-operation. In the interest of efficiency and convenience, the new system was installed in the house of Micah, for the trip to Shiloh was both tedious and inconvenient.

The appointment of Micah's son to the priesthood was a glaring irregularity which, no doubt, called forth the sharp criticism of the more conservative Israelites who still held to the belief that the priestly office should be confined to the Divinely appointed Aaronites. So Micah was well pleased when a wandering son of Levi from Bethlehem-

Judah drifted into his house at the psychological moment. The young man in question was seeking more lucrative employment than he could find at home. So when Micah offered him a tempting wage, he gladly consented to undertake the priestly functions of Micah's modernistic enterprise. Although the new religion was in reality a system of cleverly camouflaged idolatry grafted upon the pure religion of Jehovah, and although the priest was only a hireling, nevertheless the presence of the clerical Levite contributed an atmosphere of sanctity to the combination that deceived many, leading the unsophisticated to believe that the movement was sanctioned by Jehovah.

The new religion quickly became popular, for Modernism in any age appeals to the carnal nature through its freedom from restraint, its disregard of Divine authority, and its deification of the human creature. So the degenerate Israelites paid homage to the molten images in the house of Micah; they worshipped Baal and Ashtoreth after the latest and most approved mode, and they even sacrificed their children to the Moloch of fashion! The young people, with their elders, made merry and danced and sang around the altars of the golden images. They staged their entertainments in the house of worship, and decorated it with sensational pictures of Canaanitish design. They gathered about the festal board in banquets and feasts. Frivolity and worldliness prevailed in the sanctuary, and the flowing bowl was in evidence everywhere. It soon became impossible to distinguish the worshippers of Jehovah from their Canaanitish neighbors. Micah's new religion became a sad travesty upon the pure religion of Jehovah, just as a worldly church which is tinctured with Modernism is always a travesty upon the spiritual worship of our Lord Jesus Christ.

But since the modernized system of Jehovah was popular, and since it met with the approval of the advanced scholarship of the period, it prospered financially, and all was merry as a marriage bell until the Danites came. The Danites were not foreigners. They were degenerate sons of Israel who had failed to take possession of the territory allotted to them in Canaan. They had been too indolent to drive out the original inhabitants, who continued to dwell in their old locations, crowding the Danites into cramped quarters in the sterile mountain regions. Just as the Christian who compromises with the world, and fails to press on to the richer experiences of grace which are the heritage of God's people, drags out an impoverished spiritual existence, always in jeopardy from his spiritual foes, so the poor Danites eked out their scanty living in the rocky fastnesses of the mountains, always in semi-subjection to the lordly Amorites.

But one day the gravity of their situation excited a flurry of enthusiasm, and the leaders sent out a delegation to reconnoitre the territory in search of a possible opening for conquest. In the course of their journeys the searchers passed the house of Micah, where they encountered the hireling priest whom they at once recognized as a Levite from Bethlehem-Judah. In response to their persistent questioning, the priest told them of his contract with Micah, and politely conducted them through the establishment. The visitors beheld the massive golden images, and the embroidered ephod, and they were duly impressed with the magnificence of all the appointments. They made mental notes for future use, and proceeded on their journey northward. They soon discovered the city of Laish which they reported to headquarters as a suitable point of attack. Six hundred soldiers were immediately dispatched to the scene. They captured the city without difficulty, and at once began to plan for its reconstruction. Hearing of Micah's establishment through the spies, the leaders of the small army determined to visit the place to see if it would suit their purposes, for of course, in their new quarters the Danites must needs set up a religious system of some kind.

They found the place deserted, except for the hireling priest who had been left in charge while Micah and his family and friends were absent on a pleasure trip—or perchance were they enjoying their mid-day siesta? The men of Dan were delighted with what they found. Here was a magnificent ecclesiastical outfit—ready-made and complete—with costly images and teraphim and ephod and complicated machinery of great value, all of which they could secure, by a little clever manipulation, without the expenditure of a single penny! The hireling priest offered little resistance, for a ministry which will cater to a worldly church becomes a willing tool for the destructive critic. The remuneration offered the Levite priest was a tempting advance over his present income, so he cheerfully assisted the plunderers in the task of dismantling and packing. Soon the company were well on their way, carrying the priest and the precious loot with them.

Too late, Micah woke from his slumbers, to find his house dismantled—golden images gone, gods gone, teraphim gone, ephod gone, priest gone—only the shell of the house remaining to mock him with its emptiness! In like manner, some sad day, many a so-called Christian church will wake to a realization that Modernistic Danites more deeply dyed than themselves in modern infidelity—destructive critics more radical than they themselves have ever dared to be—have stolen a march on them, and carried away all their treasures, and that they have only an empty house remaining, with no God, no Redeemer, no Holy Spirit, and no Bible save a mutilated fragment from which has been cut the Cross and the open Tomb, and with them the Divine redemptive plan upon which depends the Christian's hope of eternal life and a home in heaven. But the costly man-made "machinery" which has served a worldly, materialistic Church, together with its time-serving ministry which has bartered God's Truth for gain,—all these will be pliable tools in the hands of the Modernistic free-booters!

Micah assembled a few friendly neighbors, and started in pursuit, but to no avail. In response to the frantic cries of the pursuing party, the soldiers of Dan turned about and coolly demanded,

"What aileth thee, that thou comest with such a company?"

"What aileth us?" cried Micah. "Haven't you taken away all my gods, and my priest, and what have you left for me?"

With the cool impudence of assurance, the Danites flung back the taunting reply,

"Even so! It won't pay you to raise an unseemly clamor about it, for if you so much as lift your voice in protest, some angry fellows may come upon you and take your head, and your families will suffer!"

Alas! Poor Micah! Alas! Alas! Sadly he returned home to meditate at his leisure.

But the Danites went their way with the priest and the loot. They rebuilt the conquered city of Laish and renamed it Dan. In the midst of the city they set up Micah's ecclesiastical outfit entire—graven images and all, and appointed the hireling priest to superintend it. So it came to pass that the money which Micah's mother had consecrated to Jehovah was eventually employed to establish a system of idolatry in Dan which persisted until the Captivity, and all the while in opposition to the true worship of Jehovah at Shiloh!

Is it possible that some of the Lord's money in modern times is being deflected into similar channels? "Take ye heed! Watch and pray!"

There's a big difference between "good will" and the Will of God. If we send missionaries out to spread "good will" our ideal is insufficient. The real God-sent missionary says: "Lo, I came to do thy will O Lord!"

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for a Maryland girl to join your happy band of boys and girls? I am thirteen years old and live in the country. I have two brothers. Mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with A, and has five letters in it. I go to church every Sunday I can. As this is the first time I have written to Aunt Bettie I will close.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wonder if you have room for one more? I suppose ere this you are in the Sunny South enjoying the balmy breezes and basking in the Florida sunshine. We hope to hear Dr. Morrison is gaining rapidly. I love to read your encouraging letters on page ten to "Our Dear Boys and Girls." I wonder if they all have Christian parents.

I never can forget the hours
I knelt by mother's side,
Listening to the Bible stories
Of the Christ who lived and died.

Oh those pictures on memory's wall,
Time can never, no never efface,
Grow dearer to me every time I recall
Those hallowed seasons of grace.

Years, long years, have passed since then,
And dear mother has gone on before.

I can see her beautiful, beconing hands with an M and ends with E. Well, I guess you will get tired of me. I will answer all letters I receive.

Ruby M. Bumgarner.
Troutmans, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I enjoy reading page ten. I am a little girl eight years old. My birthday is March 10th. If anyone has my birthday please write to me. I am in the third grade at school. My teacher's name is Mrs. A. S. Minton. She is a good teacher. I go to the Methodist Church to Sunday school. The one that guesses my middle name I will write to them. It begins with L and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. I hope Mr. W. B. has not get this as I want to see it in print.

Edna L. Roberts.
Rt. 4, Summit, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wonder if you will let me in again? I have written once before but the good letters you write and the other cousins write makes me want to write again. How I wish I could see you and all the cousins. I wonder if all the cousins are Christians. I can truthfully say Jesus is mine and I'm his. I mean to live for him, for what is life without happiness, and where is happiness if one can't find it in Jesus? I hope that all the cousins that are not Christians will give their heart to Jesus before it is too late. I am your friend in Christ.

Maggie Moore.
Rt. 3, Box 5, Queen City, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Texas boy join your happy band of boys and girls? My mother gets The Pentecostal Herald and I always read page ten. I go to Sunday school every Sunday at the Nazarene Church. I go to school and am in the fourth grade. I am nine years old. I have light brown hair and brown eyes. My birthday is in January. The one who guesses the correct date I will send them my picture. Please, Mr. Waste Basket, don't get my letter for I would sure like to see it in print.

STEPPING HEAVENWARD

By Elizabeth Prentiss.

A book that has never lost its charm though it has been in circulation for many years. It is written in diary form and can be picked up or dropped at any point. The book contains the varied experiences of a girl as she develops in the Christian life. Written in an interesting way that will hold the attention of the reader. Stepping Heavenward is considered by many a real classic. Especially is this book fine for girls from fifteen to twenty-five as it helps them in their problems and enables them to see the light.

We have purchased an entire edition of this book bound in blue cloth, that we are selling at 30c each or two for 50c.

THE LORD'S CENSUS.

Evangelist W. W. Loveless.

Text: "And of Zion it shall be said, This and that man was born in her: and the highest himself shall establish her. The Lord shall count, when he writeth up the people, that this man was born there." Psalm 87:5 and 6.

Every decade of years "Uncle Sam" takes a census of his people. It costs lots of money, and takes an army of workmen to count all the inhabitants, but "Uncle Sam" must think it pays. He is very careful to note the sex, age, occupation and nationality of each individual. In the language of my text, "Uncle Sam" "shall count, when he writeth up the people, that this man was born there."

If a person was not born within the domains of "Uncle Sam," he is not counted as a citizen, until he meets certain rigid requirements, which includes living a certain number of years in our country, learning our language, swearing allegiance to our government and flag, and giving up his citizenship of his native country. "Uncle Sam" when fully satisfied that he has met the requirements will then issue him his naturalization papers and adopt him as a citizen, and give him the privileges of a native born citizen.

Let us take note of this outstanding fact. That the easiest, quickest and surest way to become a citizen of the United States, is to be born within her borders. "Uncle Sam" will not give you one minute's trouble about your citizenship if you are native born. However, if you are a foreigner, you might have rank, title, wealth, education, talent, moral worth, physical soundness and beauty, but these will not make you a native born citizen of the United States. The important and big question is, where were you born?

I would that we could all see the importance of this same question in regard to Zion. "And of Zion it shall be said, This and that man was born in her: and the highest himself shall establish her. The Lord shall count, when He writeth up the people, that this man was born there." Alas! that in these days of lukewarmness, many who have social rank, wealth, education, talent, moral worth, physical beauty, etc., are admitted into the churches as members without giving any evidence whatever of being born again.

The Lord does not count how many shook hands with the evangelist; how many bowed at the altar; how many joined the church, or even how many professed salvation; but he counts how many were born in Zion. I have often wondered, when reading reports of great revivals, in which "the oldest inhabitant never saw anything like it," and in which "the whole country was stirred as never before" if the reports will tally with the Lord's, "when he writeth up the people, that this man was born there." I wonder how some revival reports and church registers will compare with the "Lamb's Book of Life." Holy Writ says, "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." Rev. 20:15. "And there shall in no wise enter into it anything that defileth, neither worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they which are written in the Lamb's book of life." Rev. 21:27.

The fact that the great and impartial Lord takes this census has both despair and hope in it. It has despair for all but genuine Christians. All shams and imposters will be counted out by the Lord. You may be like Belshazzar; have a multitude of friends, social standing, wealth, power and prestige, and when weighed in human balances, not be found wanting; but when you are weighed in God's balances, and he "writeth up the people," will your record be "Tekel," or will it be "This man was born in Zion, and the highest himself shall establish" you.

On the other hand, because the Lord takes the census, gives hope to many, who, because of lowly circumstances, humble position in society, limited education, and poverty in the wealth of this world, are counted out in the eyes of men. But it is not so in the eyes of the Lord. In his balances a pure heart outweighs all the crowns of the kings of the earth, he looks at a pure heart and spotless character, instead of a fine reputation, wealth, or social position. Many a poor, oppressed heart may well rejoice in the fact that this great Census Writer can see through prejudices of social standing, the oppressions of selfish men in power, or rags of poverty, and recognize the gold of righteous character under the disguise of whatever adverse circumstances it may be placed.

We next notice that a church whose members are born of the Spirit, is an established church. "And of Zion (The Church), it shall be said, This and that man was born in her, and the highest himself shall establish her." A church whose membership is made up mostly of unsaved people, is weak, vacillating and worldly. Worldliness and godliness will not mix any more than oil and water will mix. Someone has said, "that a ship in the ocean is all right, but when the ocean gets into the ship it is all wrong; so the church in the world is all right, but when the world gets into the church it is all wrong." Pastors are committing a crime against the church whenever they receive unsaved members into the church in order to make a big showing at the conference or assembly.

Another thing we notice about this census, is that each individual is counted on his own merits. Notice what the text says, "And it shall be said of Zion, this and that man was born in her." Each soul is examined by itself. Each of us will stand or fall on our own merits. We are too prone to divide the world into great classes, such as races, tribes, nations, denominations, etc. In many ways our minds become clouded as to our personal responsibility to God. Lots of folks will stifle their conscience, and do as their church does, or as their associates do, and try to forget their personal responsibility to God. They get into the broad, deep, swift current of custom and style and follow the crowd, and "do as Rome does." Ever since Adam tried to lay the blame of his sin on Eve, and Eve on the serpent; man has tried to lay the responsibility of his sins and failures on somebody else. I once talked to quite a number of prisoners in a penitentiary, and they all without exception told me they were innocent, and somebody else was to blame for their being there. While it is true that many a soul has been ruined and lost because of the influence and bad example of others (and they will have to answer for their bad influence), yet we cannot get away from our personal responsibility to God. "For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." Rom. 14:11.

Graduation Time is Near

And no matter how many presents a boy or girl receives, we believe it is rare that they appreciate anything more than an attractive Bible. It is a gift, that if properly taken care of, will last almost a lifetime, serving as "a lamp unto the feet and a light unto the pathway."

Just at this time we have a limited number of copies of the lightest, thinnest, most convenient sized Bibles for a young person it has been our privilege to obtain. The size is about 4 1/2 x 7 inches, a fraction over 1/4 inch thick, bound in genuine leather, overlapping edges, silk sewed, India paper, a clear, readable type, chapter numbers in figures, references, maps, red under gold edges, and has the nonbreakable back feature. It also has the silk marker.

So appropriate is this special Bible for a graduation gift it would seem that it was made for this purpose. It's a book that even the unsaved would appreciate. The net price was $1.25. We are closing out these copies at a special price of $2.40 each. Don't miss the opportunity.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VII.—May 19, 1929.

Subject.—Jeremiah Calls to Obedience. Jer. 7:1-11; 7:2-23.

Golden Text.—Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people.—Jer. 7:23.

Time.—About B. C. 629.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—These lessons will be worth little to us unless we apply them to our age and to ourselves. Judah's great sin was disobedience to the law of God. America's sin is of a like nature. It will be well for this nation to remember that all God's laws have penalties attached to them, and that we can no more escape punishment than Judah could escape it. I have no patience with the antinomian doctrine that, because we are not under law, but under grace, we may live as we please. Read Paul a little further: Romans 6:15.—"Shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid." No license there for sinning. "Who-soever is born of God doth not commit sin." "He that committeth sin is of the devil." "Sin is the transgression of the law."

Idolatry is the great sin that sent Israel into captivity in Nineveh; and the same sin was eating the very heart of Judah. Soon she must follow her sister kingdom, and be led away in chains to Babylon. Shall covetous, money-mad America escape the wrath of God? Does he ever change? He calls our national sin idolatry. Will he condone it? Not if he loves us; and I believe he does.

Jeremiah foresaw Judah's doom, declared it with the voice of a God-sent messenger, and begged the nation to repent and obey Jehovah; but they cursed him and persecuted him. Call me a pessimist, if you like, but as a minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ, I declare to you that this American nation has never needed to hear the thunders of Sinai more than she needs it now. She needs some fearless "sons of thunder."

Brethren, in the name of the eternal God, and for the glory of Jesus Christ our Savior, let us double our efforts, and save our nation, or have a funeral in every preacher's home in America. Go as Christ's ambassadors to men. Warn them; persuade them; compel them; let them know that we mean business. If they will not come to us, we must go to them. It took persecution to scatter the old Mother Church in Jerusalem—to send the gospel into the regions beyond. Many of our big city churches ought to be blown to pieces, and sent out to evangelize the lost in the by-ways and hedges. Preach in churches, in halls, under tabernacles, under brush ar-bors, in school-houses, on the streets—anywhere, everywhere; but cry aloud and spare not. Rebuke, exhort, uncover sin. Preach the BLOOD as the one and only remedy for sin. Preach the gospel with "the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven."

Suffer this one question: Shall America have a revival of saving religion, or a bloody revolution? One or the other awaits her in the near future. We can pay the price, and take our choice.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD.—The prophets do not pretend to speak through their own wisdom. They were inspired by the Spirit of God. They spoke as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. Their messages were "God-breathed." Away with the blasphemous nonsense of modernism.

2. Stand in the gate of the LORD'S house.—Go where you can meet the people. That is a good lesson for preachers. Some of us need to go out and hunt the multitudes. John Wesley, George Whitefield, Dwight L. Moody, and a host of great soul winners did that. Let's revive the plan. Go down and preach a red-hot sermon on the street corner on Saturday afternoon, and more people will come to hear you on Sunday. Mind you: "Red hot."

3. Amend your ways and your doings.—First class repentance. Nothing else will do. I read a book some days ago, in which the author requested preachers to stop telling people to quit their meanness. He thought the time had passed for that sort of preaching. Well, I shall not stop. The time is ripe for that sort of preaching. And I will cause you to dwell in this place.—God's blessing always follows genuine repentance; but there is no salvation without repentance. No one can accept Jesus Christ as a personal Savior until repentance is complete; and it is foolish to ask him to take that step. He is not ready for it, and could not take it.

4. Trust ye not in lying words.—Is it not strange that people will lie about eternal things? Some of those Jewish leaders were trying to make the people believe that the temple was so secure that they themselves were safe. Here was old Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy declaring that she had received wonderful light from Heaven, when she didn't do a single thing, but steal an old doctor's manuscript, and teach the "Hindooism of India." But people love to believe full-grown lies; so they are still believing the yarns propagated by such characters as Mrs. Eddy, "Pastor" Russell, and Joe Smith the daddy of Mormonism. The temple could do the Jews no good, unless Jehovah were there. Our church edifices are worthless and useless without God.

7. Then will I cause you to dwell in this place.—Verses 5 and 6 both deal with repentance. The word thoroughly is the old form of thoroughly. It is a bit stronger and more impressive than our corrupted form of the word. One is amazed that the people of Judah would not heed Jeremiah's warnings; but we see the same thing today. Most of America's citizens are paying no attention whatever to the warnings and the promises given to us in the Word of God. They are doing no better than did the Jews. Many have a form of Godliness, but are utter strangers to saving grace.

8. Ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit. This verse and the three following ones give us as fine a comment on antinomianism as one can find in a lifetime. Would you expect to hear such teaching as this in our day? Just keep your ears open. Not long ago I was conversing with a very profane man. Upon being rebuked for his cursing, he declared with no little emphasis that he was under no obligation to obey God's law, because Jesus had already kept it for him. "Why," said he, "I was converted twenty-five years ago, and I am just as sure of heaven as if I were already there." This is but a sample. Such stuff is being proclaimed from prominent pulpits in this land. There are many who are doing exactly what Jehovah charged against Jerusalem; but they are pretending to serve God. When they die some preachers comfort their loved ones with the same false teaching. In a cemetery at Savannah, Ga., on the tomb of a notorious drunkard who died in delirium tremens, I read these words: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors." No comment needed.

7:21-23. Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people.—Here we have the sum and substance of God's will concerning men. Sacrifices and offerings are nothing without obedience to his will. Tithing is a good thing; but it will not save men from sin. We must get under the blood, or damnation will be our fate; for we belong to a race of sin-cursed beings who can be reconciled to God only through the Lamb of God, who bled and died on the cross of Calvary.

NOTICE!

"I desire a young man just launching into his life work who has ability to lead Sunday night singing for a great congregation and be a general assistant to the pastor in his work. I want to use this means of thanking one and all for your many letters of cheer and encouragement; of assurance of your prayers, which I feel that God is hearing for wife and myself (she is sick in one room and I in another) and for the many substantial tokens of Christian love and fellowship, which we have received. I have been in bed nine weeks, which has been the sweetest of my sanctified experience.

With much love to all the great Holiness Brotherhood, I am yours in Him. Prayed up, paid up, wound up, and ready to go up.

Worthy Walstein McCord.

Evangelist Arthur C. Zepp recently closed a three weeks' meeting with the Ionia, Michigan Holiness Assembly. The sermon on "The Antichrist" was followed by extraordinary intercession and over twenty were forward. The service closed at 1 A. M. The deep, awe-inspiring, solemn, yet glorious divine presence abides with this people. They are the most fully consecrated, consistent in life and powerful in prayer of any people I know.

Rev. Ernest J. Haerr, of Springfield, Ohio, has just held a three-weeks' meeting in my home church at Lynn, Ind. Brother Haerr has had seventeen years' experience as a pastor and evangelist. He preaches a straight gospel message and has a passion for lost souls and as a result, almost the whole community has been blessed with conviction, backsliders have been reclaimed, sinners saved, believers sanctified and the church strengthened. I am surely glad to recommend Brother Haerr to any church or camp meeting desiring a real revival.

TWO TRAMPS.

By Amy LeFevure.

A story about a boy named Rollo, and his uncle, who find it necessary to tramp through the country in order to restore perfect health. To Rollo, Christianity is a very real thing. His conversations with his uncle and with the many people that he meets on his travels make an interesting and helpful story. Wherever these two tramps go they scatter sunshine, fresh hope and comfort.

Amy LeFevure has long been noted for her purposeful stories and this one is no exception to the many other books that she has written.

Read Two Tramps. It will be a real refreshment to you. The regular price of the book is $1.50, but we have listed it in our Special Sale at 60c, postpaid.

BREAD OF LIFE BOX

Contents: 115 slices, made of the finest of Wheat, mixed with the Water of Life and enriched with the sincere Milk of the Word. Unleavened, buttered on both sides, and richly spread with honey out of the Rock. Will not get stale. Good for your spiritual health. Try one.

A box containing 115 small cards, with a choice scripture neatly printed on each side. 230 texts in all. Beautiful box, stamped in gold also printed directions how to use. Excellent for a gift box.

Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer. 1 Tim. 4:4, 5. Alas, how few meals eaten by Christians are thus sanctified. Some of them ask a blessing on their food, but very seldom do we find one who reads the Word at meals. The Bread Box is an excellent way to introduce obedience to this precept.

Pass the box around at the beginning of a meal. Let each person take out a card. Then let each in turn read the verses. It will be noticed that the two verses on each card bear a definite relation to each other and teach an important truth. The order in which they are read often brings out this truth more forcibly. As each person reads their verses it is profitable that the others present tell where the verses are found.

Another excellent way is for each person to read one or two words of the text and let some one else quote it from memory.

Let one read a verse and another quote a verse on the same subject.

Let each person memorize the two verses during the meal and quote them at its close.

Pass the box around in your Sunday School class the same as at a meal. And as the verses are read discuss the truths contained in them.

Explain that it is just as important to feed on the Word in order to grow and be strong spiritually as to eat our daily meals in order to grow strong physically.

Most interesting and profitable young people's meeting may be had by using the Bread Box in some of the ways suggested.

In the home when friends and neighbors are gathered together pass around the Bread Box. How much better and more profitable than a "cup of tea"!

Keep one in your bedroom. Eat a slice for your meditation while dressing and going about your daily duties. Eat another slice before retiring to quiet your worries and give you a good night's rest.

Use the Bread Box freely but do not let it displace the Bible. You need the whole Word of God, for all was given that you might "Acquaint now thyself with HIM, and be at peace."—Job. 22:21.

ALL-DAY DECORATION DAY MEETING.

The Miami Valley Holiness Association of Dayton, Ohio, will hold its All-Day Decoration Day Meeting in the Wesleyan Methodist Church on Naurth Ave., Belmont, Dayton, Ohio.

Let the holiness-loving people who may find it convenient to meet with us look forward to this meeting expectantly and let us by the grace of God and prevailing prayer make it a great occasion. The association has reorganized its working system and many friends to holiness are now taking membership in it and we are looking forward to bigger and better things, including a great camp meeting the last ten days in July, further announcement of which will be made later.

Our Decoration Day meeting will open at 9:30 A. M. and a continuous feasting on the good things of the hills of Canaan will be the order of the day up to about 4 o'clock P. M. Rev. and Mrs. F. C. Saneholtz, of Cincinnati are the engaged workers and a host of visiting ministers and singers will be with us. All are requested to come without lunch, as a light lap lunch will be served, and everybody is invited to come. Address J. L. Kennett, 69 Gramont Ave., Dayton, Ohio.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

It is with genuine pleasure that I say to the ministers who may chance to see this notice that, I have used Rev. and Mrs. D. W. Cox, of Ohio, in revival meetings and do not hesitate to say that they are both clean, clear cut, Godly people, and wonderful help in meetings: they sing well, play musical instruments of several kinds, hold wonderful children's and young people's meetings. They do all these things and yet they are safe and sane in every way. Keep them busy, brethren. They are here in the South and they are filling up their slate for the year. At this time they are at Monford Ave., Ashville, N. C., in meetings.

G. M. Spivey,
Pastor M. E. Church, South, Macon, Ga.

HAZARD, KENTUCKY.

Our town and community has measurably recovered from the effects of the calamities that have befallen them. The coal industry, our main dependence, is moving very slowly at present which affects our commercial interests and, reflectively, certain of our church finances. By determined effort, the last installment on the parsonage debt was met promptly, and other interests have received attention and response, though not 100 per cent. Seven trees have recently been planted on the parsonage lot that will add much attractiveness to the property.

Sunday night, March 31st, we closed revival services that were started the 17th, under the leadership of Rev. O. H. Callis, evangelist, assisted by C. P. Gossett, song leader.

Brothers Callis and Gossett are not to blame that all that might have been was not. They were tireless and efficient laborers. The one is a great song leader, gets the people to sing and ingratiate himself with the children. The "Booster Choir" of children did fine work and was a distinct addition to the services. The other, if not the best, is one of the very best of evangelical preachers. He is strong, resourceful, versatile, diplomatic and, last but not least, fluent.

He has my hearty and unqualified endorsement as an evangelistic helper. An intimate fellowship has been established between us. In my humble judgment, the pastor was not to blame.

Twenty united with the church during the revival, eleven of whom were children, and three adults, on profession of faith, six by certificate. As to the net results of the revival we cannot say. There have been a number to unite with the church at Easter, from year to year in response to pastoral effort and appeal.

J. W. Crates, P. C.

REPORT.

Many times I have wondered what has become of the students I met at John Fletcher College during those first days of that school. My life has been a varied one, not always in harmony with God's will. However, about ten years ago God most wonderfully reclaimed me and afterwards sanctified me wholly. God called to the ministry and I have been obeying his call. This is my third year here in Rosholt, S. D., as pastor of the Nazarene Church. We are gaining ground. Easter we received six new members. June 18 to 30, Theo. and Minnie E. Ludwig will be with us to hold our annual camp. Will you pray for us.

Lee C. Bates.

GREATEST GIFT OF ALL.

Dear Brother: I am a shut-in here in the Home for the Aged, and it is through the loving kindness of a very dear Christian lady that I am enabled to be a subscriber to your wonderful Herald. She sent it to me as a gift at Christmas time, and I must say, of all the gifts I received, it has been the greatest gift of all.

My lonely soul has obtained such an uplift from reading its pages and I find I am living a much better life since I have had this opportunity.

May God's richest blessings attend you and the dear ones everywhere.

Yours in Christ,
Mrs. H. Phillips,
1776 E. Broad St., Columbus, Ohio.

RECOMMENDATION.

I take this privilege to recommend, without her knowledge, Miss Audra D. Williams, Wilmore, Ky., to any who may be able to use her to assist in camp or church revivals. She has had much experience in revival work. She is a good song leader, soloist and pianist. She is a graduate of Asbury College, and is now finishing her second year as teacher in the High School at Tolesboro, Ky. She is looking for a place in some High School this fall. She can furnish the best recommendation.

Rev. E. G. Kaetzell.

NOTICE!

J. R. Parker, Wilmore, Ky., will close a meeting in South Carolina, August 18 and would like to get another meeting somewhere in the South August 19-September 1.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

I am available to any pastor or church, or camp meeting committee, which might need an experienced Gospel Singer for your Spring or Summer revival. Address C. V. Spell, Box 813, Wichita Falls, Tex. Telegraphic address, 709 Burnette St., Wichita Falls, Texas.

MUSICAL EVANGELIST

Gospel music on the vibra-harp, piano accordion, and saxophone. Spiritual and uplifting for your revival meetings. If interested, write for information and references.

Now Ready.

The memorial edition of Dr. W. G. Nixon's sermons is off the press. We are sure that his friends and the reading public in general will be interested in this series of gripping messages by one of the great pastor-evangelists of the day. This book has ten messages from the pen of Dr. Nixon and a closing chapter which includes the messages delivered from the pulpit of his old church at his funeral held in the city of Detroit. The many thousands who have listened to Dr. Nixon up and down the country will remember some of the themes presented here. Noteworthy are the messages on "Covenant Breakers," "The Benediction of Jude," the great sermon on Pentecost under the title of "Afterwards," "The Roadway to the Gates of Pearl," and the remarkable commencement message on "Character Building."

These messages are characterized by Dr. Nixon's terseness, his ability for striking utterance, and are accented by the spirit of conviction which always controlled the man in building the gospel message.

The book is clearly printed, has an attractive binding, contains one hundred forty-nine pages, and is sold at the very reasonable price of $1.00 per copy.

IT WILL HOLD YOU SPELL-BOUND.

We miss many of the rich things in life because we don't know about them. "Remarkable Conversions," by H. C. Morrison, is one of the great books—full of rich things. The chapter on "My Arrest and Rescue" is the story of Dr. Morrison's conversion. You will weep and rejoice when you read it. Every sentence in the book is interesting and helpful, but for the good it will mean to your own soul, order a copy, if you don't read anything but the chapter mentioned above. The price is only $1.00, and after having read the book we believe you will say it is the best $1.00 investment you ever made.

FALLEN ASLEEP

HALL.

God, in his infinite love and mercy, visited our community March 8th and very unexpectedly gave Mother Hall a summons to come up higher. Although she was permitted to live with us for a period of seventy-five years her life was such a value and splendor, we were not ready to have her go from our midst. Hers was an example of true Christian living, comforting those whose heart ached and the discouraged, pointing, always to a higher life; administering not silver and gold, but the more worthwhile necessity. As God had so entrusted her with his word and revelation she was so willing to advise and had at different times ministered through different congregations, and on Tuesday, before her departure had given a very profitable talk on Stewardship of prayer, at the missionary meeting.

The writer called on her on Thursday afternoon before she passed away Friday and her conversation was ever on the coming revival. She was ever planning some way to bring folks into the proper relationship with God. We believe that her devout Christian life and her prayers will continue to have a great influence in our community. May God give us more with such complete consecration as was hers.

Mrs. Rev. N. C. Pfeffer.

A YEAR IN HEAVEN.

Mary H. Ellis.

In Memory of Brother Jack Sanders.

A year in heaven, the one we love,
Has made the landing now,
He sings the songs with choirs above
As angels round him bow.

A year in heaven, our brother Jack
Has looked upon his Lord;
He feels no pain, he knows no lack,
Enjoying his reward.

A year in heaven, what has he done?
What heav'nly shouts of praise,
What hallelujahs just begun,
Have filled his heav'nly days?

A year in heaven, what has he heard,
What has he seen and known,
What revelations of God's word,
What glories round the throne?

A year in heaven, his gain our loss?
No, we too here have gained,
For we have felt it was no cross,
Our work has never waned.

A year in heaven, the will of God
Our will has now become,
And Jack the gold paved streets has trod,
While we are trav'ling home.

A year in heaven, oh glorious year,
And for the mission through
It seems almost his voice we hear
In message and in song.

A year in heaven, Jack Sanders' shout
Of triumph fills our hall,
And we shout back we're holding out,
We're trusting Christ for all.

A year in heaven, and lo, behold,
With Christ he's standing by
The upper window, where we're told
To look with eager eye.

A year in heaven, oh some glad day
When Jack with Christ returns,
May we be caught up there to stay
For that day each heart yearns.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. F. B.: "Please pray for me that I may get well and strong if it is the will of my blessed Father."

Mrs. J. H. B.: "Please pray for my grandson, fifteen years old, who has sugar diabetes. Since he has had this disease, he has lost Jesus entirely. Pray for the saving of his soul, and the healing of his body."

O. R. N.: "Please pray for my wife who is suffering from a nervous breakdown with loss of mind. We are both saved and love the Lord Jesus."

A Reader: "Please to pray that my brothers and sisters may be led into the experience of full salvation, and that my health may be recovered. Also, that we may have a real outpouring of the Spirit of the Lord in our town and community, that when it is God's will we may have a real revival of real religion."

T. E. H.: "I earnestly desire the prayer of all The Herald readers that the Lord may heal all my backslidings and give me a burning desire to see souls saved."

THE HUNGER OF THE SOUL.

By The Editor.

BLESSED are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."—Jesus.

* * * * *
The words of our Lord Jesus in the above paragraph are clear, positive and full of promise. He tells us that it is blessed for the soul to be longing for righteousness. When a person's spiritual nature is reaching out after purity, longing to be right in thought, desire, word and act, it is a very gracious state.

* * * * *
The Psalmist speaks of panting after God as the hart panteth for the waterbrook. Such a state of mind is to be strongly fortified against sinful desires and actions; longings for holiness and desires for wickedness will not dwell together in peace in the same soul. Sinful desires will feel ashamed in the presence of holy aspirations and heartcries for purity and the indwelling of the great Purifier.

* * * * *
Thoughts kindle desires, desires lead to action, repeated actions form habits, habits fix character, and character fixes destiny. This suggests that it is unfortunate for one to practice thinking, teaching and insisting that holiness of heart and life is an impossibility. Blessed are they that believe Christ is able to save to the uttermost, who pray to him for purity of heart, who wait upon him, hungering and thirsting for the fulness of salvation which he has promised.

* * * * *
What if the membership of all our churches in this broad land should begin to long after purity of heart; should begin to search the Scriptures for the provisions made in the atonement, and the promises made by our Lord and his inspired writers for deliverance and freedom from sin? Think what the effect would be! Think what a time preachers would have explaining away such texts as "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." "This is the will of God, even your sanctification," "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin," and "According as he hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." And hundreds of other passages of Scripture with the same tenor which promise us that Jesus can, and will, save to the uttermost.

* * * * *
I can think of nothing which would be more embarrassing to our preacher brethren who tell us that the days of revivals have passed, and especially those who have wandered off into the dark wilderness of modernism, than that the church members of all churches of all the land should begin to hunger and thirst after righteousness, should begin to cry to God for purity of heart; should begin to abstain from all appearance of evil; should begin to love the Word of God, read it, believe it, obey its commandments, believe its promises and rejoice in its

A CORRECTION.

In a recent issue of The Herald I wrote something of the remarkable career of Judge Porter, of Glasgow, Ky. I said that the honored Judge was 87 years of age, which is correct. In the article the proof reader got it 78 years of age, which is a mistake. I doubt if there is another man living in the nation 87 years of age, who has the physical vitality, the mental vigor, and the genial youth of our beloved Judge Porter.

H. C. M.

abundant provision for filling those who hunger and thirst after righteousness. How lonely and desolate those poor messengers of unbelief and advocates of sin would become.

* * * * *
If somehow the men in the pulpits of this nation of all Protestant churches could preach on sin and its ruin, redemption and its power, purity of heart, and its peacefulness of salvation and its joy, until all the people, rich and poor, big and little, educated and illiterate, should, with one accord, begin hungering and thirsting after righteousness, should forsake sin in all of its forms, should crowd the church at prayer meeting, should erect family altars, should begin to worship God in spirit and in truth, what a change it would bring to this world of ours. How empty the show houses and dance halls would become. What a falling off there would be in the receipts at the places of worldly pleasure. What an increase in missionary collections, what wonderful revivals would break out, how bootlegging would die a natural death, what an increase there would be in justice and honesty, happiness and good fellowship among men. Hungering and thirsting after righteousness on the part of the church would lead to a divine outpouring of the Holy Ghost that would awaken the world and bring in the kingdom of God among men. There is no lack in divine power; there is no deficiency in the atonement made by the Lord Jesus. God only cannot when we will not. The human will can resist divine love and power to save from all sin. "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."—Jesus.

Things We Need Not Give Up.

WE hear much talk and no little preaching about the things we outgrow; the readjustment of our faith and creed to the times; the childish and premature views about God and life that, with more mature age, have passed away as mere myths. All of this leads us to think of the things that abide, that we need not, and cannot, part with.

My parents died when I was very small, in fact, a mere baby, and I fell into the hands of my grandfather who moved from Virginia in the early history of Kentucky.

He lived in a log house, but wore a long broadcloth coat and stovepipe hat. He was a quiet, serious old gentleman, and I can say I had the good fortune to be raised fifty years behind the times. To tell the plain truth, my grandfather "raised me" frequently. He taught me some things that I have never found necessary to give up or modify.

Among the things my grandfather impressed deeply upon my mind were absolute honesty and truthfulness, regardless of consequences. If I have not remembered and practiced these precepts it was no fault of his. I hope I have. He also taught me that idleness and wastefulness were wrong; that industry and economy were necessary to a successful and happy life. I believe these were very fundamental truths, and I do not believe that any generation of young people can develop good character and get the best out of life, who do not practice all four of these fundamentals.

We had at our house an old leatherback Bible. My grandfather and all the members of the family taught me it was the inspired Word of God; that in this book God revealed his laws, his will, his love; the plan of salvation through the gift of his Son Jesus Christ. These truths gripped my childhood heart; they are imbedded in my brain and soul to this good day. I know the arguments of infidels. I have seen the effect of their teaching upon our fellowmen. I have had opportunity to note skeptical thought and attacks upon the Holy Scriptures by professed Christians and preachers. I have seen the deadening effect of it upon the church, and the rising generation, the irreverence and lawlessness and indecency that come out of such teaching; and I do not, for one moment, question the eternal verities of the great truths of the Bible that were planted in my childhood life.

I was taught that Christ was begotten of the Holy Ghost, born of a virgin, the Son of God. That in his teachings, one of his great credentials to his Godhead, were the miracles which he performed. I was taught that he went upon the cross and died for the redemption of a sinful world; that he rose again, walked among men, established his identity beyond doubt or question, and ascended into heaven. I know the arguments of skeptics and modernists against these fundamental truths, but I believe them to be false and without foundation. I repudiate them. I cling tenaciously to these Bible doctrines that were ingrained into my childhood life. I have found no reason to surrender them, and rejoice in their possession.

I was taught in my early Christian life that "There were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken

THE CHRISTIAN MESSAGE.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

(Editorial Note.—This is the first part of an article by Dr. Ridout which was published in the "Chinese Recorder" of February, under the head of "The Christian Message for the China of Today." We believe our readers will be interested in the discussion as what Dr. Ridout says regarding the Chinese pulpit might be said also of the home pulpit.—Editor).

Sometime ago I listened to a very learned address on the "Christian Message for Mixed Races" by Prof. E. M. Poteat. It was given at the Shanghai Missionary Association, and I see that in its December issue the Recorder published a summary of the address under the head of "The Race Mind and the Religious Message." I was impressed by the eminently scholarly discussion of such a difficult subject; but I was sorry that the professor gave so much time to the race question as to limit himself to the merest minimum of time when he touched the subject of the Christian Message. One outstanding thing which he mentioned in that connection, as I think of it now, was that the Christian message should be characterized by simplicity. I have thought a great deal upon this matter of the Christian message during the past few months while I have been traveling and lecturing and preaching in various parts of China. I came to China with the conviction that the Christian message was fixed away back in the Apostolic days—in fact that the contents of the Christian message was fixed once and for all by Christ and his apostles and so far, instead of changing my opinion upon that subject, I am more and more impressed that no age, whether it be old or new, needs any change whatever in the Gospel message. This message, like its Divine Author, is the same today, yesterday and forever.

I observed in reading the Proceedings and "Findings" of the Jerusalem Conference, that they issued a document which sets forth ostensibly their corporate idea of what the Christian message for our present missionary age should consist of. I read it with a great deal of interest; but I could not refrain from thinking that such a document was unnecessary and, therefore, was not entirely free from the element of presumption. It seemed to me that after nineteen centuries of preaching and nearly two centuries of definite missionary work on the part of the modern church in all lands that it was rather late in the day for any body of men, no matter how august, to inform the church as to what its Christian message should be.

Now, it might be thought a bit presumptuous on my part to attempt to indicate in this article what the Christian message should consist of; but I am taking the queue from Prof. Poteat and shall set forth a few thoughts upon the subject purely from the standpoint of conservative thinking—I mean that kind of conservatism which characterizes the thinking of such missionaries as Carey, Bowen, Morrison, Duff, Hudson Taylor, William Taylor, etc., who "through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens."

At the outset, I might call attention to the attitude of the Apostle John on the subject of the Christian message. In his first Epistle, 3:11, he says: "This is the message that ye heard from the beginning." Also in 1st John 2:7, "I write no new commandment unto you, but an old commandment which ye had from the beginning"; and then in 1st John 1:5, "This then is the message which we have heard of him," and the opening words of his first Epistle says, "That which was from the beginning which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon and our hands have handled, of the Word of Life". It is understood generally that John was a very aged man when he wrote this epistle, possibly half a century had transpired since he first heard the Gospel message, and now in his old age, there is not a particle of difference in his thinking or in his doctrine. John never changed his message or his convictions with regard to the Gospel. What he believed in and preached from the beginning he held to tenaciously in his old age. It is a thing to be regretted in these modern days that there are ministers and missionaries, who once held to the Gospel message in all its New Testament and Pauline hearings, and who preached it with zeal and whose ministry was once characterized by the zeal of the Lord, that in their older and maturer days have been carried away by another Gospel whose message and interpretation may be modern, but not redemptive.

In discussing the matter of the message, we would say:

First. That the Christian message must be more than intellectual. We have to admit that we are living in a very intellectual age; our schools, universities and seminaries have produced a thinking mind; but too often the thinking mind is not the Christ-like mind, and many a deep thinker does not think after the Divine Christ and his apostles. The twentieth century is not without a considerable degree of the arrogance of intellectuality and possibly we are burning too much incense at the altars of the intellectual. We are too prone to forget that by falling into the Grecian type of mind in our theological thinking, the Cross becomes foolishness and the Gospel a philosophy which may be accepted or rejected. This was the bane of the Corinthian church—they were willing to be saved by philosophy, but unwilling to be saved by the Cross, and it landed them into speculations, worldliness, carnality and disturbances generally. Paul would not treat them philosophically. He resolved that he would preach to them only Christ and Him crucified. It has been remarked by McIntosh of Scotland that there is a good reason for supposing that Paul considered his sermon on Mars Hill as a failure. That sermon is a beautiful oration, it is an intellectual treat, but it has not the heart of the Gospel in it—it is without Calvary and the Cross! Paul, going to Corinth resolved that he would make no such mistake in Corinth—the Cross and atoning blood would be central in his preaching and his Gospel message would be intensely vital. Too often we men of the schools preach to men as intellectual, not as sinners needing Redeeming Grace. There is a story told of a preacher in England who, after graduating from the university, resolved to preach philosophy to his people. He started to give them a series of sermons on the Incarnation. A good woman, but poor, came to him in tears and said, "Oh, pastor, you are talking to us as if we had university training; why don't you talk to us as Jesus talked?"

Last year while in Europe, I stood at the tomb of Bishop Butler in Bristol Cathedral. Butler was one of the intellectual giants of the Church of England in those perilous days of English Deism. He produced a great book which has been known for two centuries as "Butler's Analogy" but only a few people in Butler's day could read it and, therefore, it did not meet the need of the English people in their depravity, darkness and illiteracy. John Wesley, a man of Oxford, with an intellect possibly as great as Bishop Butler's, after his conversion and his obtaining the burning heart of evangelism through the Grace of God, preached not to the head but to the heart of England, the burning truths of the Old Gospel. He preached the New Testament doctrine of sin and redemption, and drew around him a band of mighty preachers of the Gospel like himself, and he aroused the British Isles from the sleep and stupor of centuries. A great religious awakening came on and the revival of the eighteenth century has been regarded by the most conservative of historians as the one great Divine event which saved England from dropping into an abyss.

It was said of Bernard of Clairveaux that no "doubts fettered his powers," but with brain and heart aflame with a Holy passion for souls, he preached a mighty Gospel; and a story is told of him that he preached once in Paris in the School of Philosophers where men were too busy with engrossing disputations to give any particular heed to his words, and the discourse apparently produced no effect. He went home to pray with sobs and groans, with deep searchings of heart and a passion of tears because no one was converted. He was in anguish of soul lest God had forsaken him. The next day he preached again with the unction and energy derived from this Divine communion, and large numbers were converted and gave themselves to God at the hand of his servant.

John Bunyan, the great Gospel preacher and dreamer, who has deeply influenced the Christian Church for over two centuries said, "I never went to school to Aristotle and Plato, but was brought up in my father's house." So I think in the Gospel message we make a big mistake in thinking that the sermon must be profoundly intellectual, or else we shall be considered not to be men of letters.

The Christian message, to be effective, must have about it more of a passionate zeal for souls, than an intellectual sweat.

Secondly. The Christian message must be more than Social. Again we must admit that we are in a day of the "Social message"—so called. Professor Royce of Harvard in his Oxford lectures on the "Problem of Christianity" has a good deal to say about the "Beloved Community" and we have frequently seen where some young men have been so carried away with that idea and the new social order—so-called, that they have centralized the Kingdom of God in the Social more than in the Redemptive. They have put more emphasis on Amos than on the Apostle Paul. I think it was Dr. Jowett in his Yale lectures who said that when ministers are carried away by these social things, they are living more in a realm of Old Testament "Reformation" than in New Testament "Redemption"; and not a few ministers and missionaries have been carried off their feet by the "Social Gospel" and after years of a fruitless ministry have wakened up to the fact that they have made a great mistake, and have retraced their steps back to the Cross and its redemptive message, and have changed from "Program" to "Prayer" and have repented and received a new interpretation of their Gospel commission. I think history bears us out in the statement that the social Gospel never promotes any great religious awakening, but religious revivals beget a vastly different social life. We see this in connection with the great Wesleyan revival of the eighteenth century, and I think the history of the Gospel work in China reveals the same facts that where missionaries approach the people with the Gospel of Jesus Christ and get them regenerated by Divine Grace, that at once a change begins in their intellectual and social life and habits and customs. In reading the life of Pastor Hsi we note that he was one of the greatest of China's Confucian scholars. His scholarship, however, could not save him from the dreadful bane of the opium habit. Though an eminent scholar and mighty man of intellect, he was fast sinking down into the depths of the average opium slave. When he became converted, a change took place in his habits and in his home. After he had complete victory over the habit himself, and received a wonderful anointing of the Holy Spirit for his ministry, he was influential in saving a multitude of souls, and the social work which he did for the poor opium slave is one of the outstanding social developments of the Church of God in that section of China! Suppose Pastor Hsi had begun at the other end and had set his mighty intellect to work for social uplift without conversion, would we have ever heard of such a man, or would his biography have ever been written?

We think of the testimony of such an eminent man as Thomas Chalmers, one of the greatest of Scotland's preachers, who for a number of years ran his ministry on the social and reformative idea. He testifies himself as to its futility and said that he preached morality to his parish until there was hardly a moral person left; but after he received himself the awakening of the Spirit, and the new creative life of the Holy Ghost, he witnessed the most marvelous transformations among his people as he preached to them the vital Gospel of saving grace.

Bishop McDowell in his Earl Lectures has well said, "Our Social Christianity has in too large measure ceased to be effective because it has got off its only real center."

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER VI.

ITS UTTER INEXHAUSTIBILITY.

AND now we come yet to another, a sixth, reason why I commend this Book to you as the very Word of God; and that is because of its Utter Inexhaustibility.

Spurgeon once said, "The flowers in God's garden bloom not only double but sevenfold and are always pouring forth fresh fragrance."

The Bible is like a perennial spring; new truth is always gushing from its hidden depths. In the Dresden gallery of royal gems there is a silver egg and when you touch a spring it opens and discloses a golden chicken. And when you touch the chicken it opens and discloses a crown studded with glittering gems, and when you touch the Crown it opens and discloses a magnificent diamond ring. Just so it is with the Bible. The more you study it the more you touch its successive springs and as you go down into it you find ever increasing revelations of beauty and wonder richer than the gems that any royal gallery ever furnished.

Some books are fit only to be tasted; some you can swallow with a gulp, but the Bible is to be chewed and digested. Study this Book, gentlemen, and you will find its one great fascination to be that it has within itself heights you can never reach and depths you can never fathom. It is a book you can never finish with. There is scarcely a piece of it that can be exhausted with a single explanation.

If man had made this book it would have been exhausted long ago and laid on the shelf as have all other century-worn volumes that have come only from the brain and heart of man. Infidels have written books, but where are they? Where is Porphyry? Where is Julian? Fragments only are left, and for these, it has been truly said, we are indebted to Christian criticism. Where is Celsus, and Hume, and Tom Paine, and Voltaire and Bolingbroke? "It requires a world's reprieve," as someone has put it, "To bring them out of their darkness."

But this Book has endured: it has stood in history, the New Testament for 2000 years and the Old Testament for nearly 4000 years, and this is a fact with which the thoughtful man must reckon.

"The indictments lodged against the Bible yesterday," as Riley says, "are all dead issues today." The Pentateuch still outshines all twentieth century deliverances; the Proverbs still hold the wisdom and the wit of the ages; the Psalms still provide the inspiration of all soulful song, and in the teachings of Jesus the world has found at last the Himalayan mountain peaks of justice and righteousness and moral perfection in general.

Whittier has well sung in his "Mirian":

"We search the world for truth; we cull
The good, the pure, the beautiful
From graven stone and written scroll,
From all old flower-fields of the soul;
And, weary seekers of the best,
We come back laden from our quest,

To find that all the sages said,
Is in the Book our mothers read."

One of the most learned men of recent times was Charles Elliott. He was a close and life-long student of the Bible. When in his seventy-seventh year, and just a month before he died, he read the Old Testament through, the last of scores of times, and one morning when his daughter asked him what he was reading, he said, "I am reading news." Something new and fresh every time you pore over its pages!

It is amusing to hear these infidels talk about the Bible being worn out, emptied, effete. Why, there were 28,000,000 of them printed last year. It is the only book with which the publishing companies can never get overstocked.

When the New Testament was revised in 1881 men offered $500.00 to get a copy of that little book a few hours in advance of its publication, and on the morning it was published the streets of New York City were blockaded with scores of express wagons waiting for the copies of the Book which these infidels had exploded and refuted and killed and buried so many years before.

The longest message ever telegraphed, a message containing 118,000 words was that Book from the first of Matthew to the last of Romans, wired all the way from New York and Chicago, for the sake of getting it there a few hours faster than the mails could bring it, so it might appear in the daily newspapers. An exhausted Book! A dead Book! They wouldn't pay for telegraphing from one station to another the greatest infidel speech ever made on this side of perdition.

Only a quarter of a century ago out in Peoria, Ill., where Bob Ingersol lived he told the people there that in twenty-five years the Bible would be a forgotten book, and that the church would be a played-out institution. Over in a little wooden church on a side street was a humble Methodist minister of the itinerant sort, and Bob referred to him as "the half-starved preacher," and compared his own lucrative law practice and his elegant home yonder on the hill with the insignificant salary and the humble cottage of the humble minister.

The next Sunday this same obscure minister entered his pulpit and said he would do a little prophesying himself, and he said, "In twenty-five years from now the Methodist Church of Peoria will be one of the most influential institutions in this city and will occupy one of the most important corners with its imposing structure; and as for this vaunting Goliath, who dares defy the armies of the living God, he will be well-nigh forgotten."

And now the quarter of a century is about gone, and today the First Methodist Church of Peoria has one of the finest church building in the whole state; the site where Ingersol had his law office is now occupied by a magnificent Young Men's Christian Association Building, and the handsome home on the hill where Ingersol lived has given way to a large tobacco factory where they manufacture the meanest and stinkiest and rottenest five cent cigar in all America.

Worn out! Exhausted! If all the University professors in the world, and all the Scientific Literati and Philosophical Savants, or any other sort of academically distinguished Dignitaries, oozing odors of musty tomes and mouldy parchments—if they sat side by side and deliberated a thousand years they couldn't sound, as Henry Ward Beecher once said, "the shallowest depths of the Gospel of John."

Men, broad and deep in scholarly attainment, men of keenest analytical culture, the wisest men of earth have lingered among its pages and pondered over its sayings since first it was given to the world. Together as collaborateurs they have searched among its hidden veins of truth, and yet none has ever been found who has presumed to say he has sounded the depths which in very fact are unfathomable.

I have a friend, a great preacher by the name of Williams, and he tells me of an experience he had one day up on beautiful Geneva. He said, "I stood upon the prow of a little skiff in the clear waters of this beautiful, blue lake. My eye followed the bending path of a sunbeam through its crystal way, until far down below the surface it grasped a shining pebble in its close embrace, as though it were a pearl."

"I'll have it," said I.

"It's too deep," said my companion.

"I can get it," I answered.

"And taking a deep breath I plunged in. Down, down, down, and ever as before my pearl gleamed in the distance. Down, down, on down, till the crushing weight of many waters roared and thundered in my ears; yet the speck seemed as far away as at first. 'You have failed, and now back, back to air and life with all your strength,' and suffocated, strangled, at last I reached the light and air."

"It's too deep," I cried.

"I told you it was," he said.

And so men have tried to reach the depths of this Book, but after nineteen centuries of earnest, persistent effort, diving deep and diving long, they have all returned to say, "It's depths are past finding out; we have found treasures rich and rare, but we come back conscious of divine deposits of truth just a little deeper than we could go." How are you going to account for this on any other theory but that in this Book are hidden the infinite treasures of the wisdom and the knowledge of an omniscient God?

It is proven to be the Word of God by its utter inexhaustibility.

And say, my friend, if this Book is a dull and an uninteresting one to you, do you know I can tell you the reason why. There is a Man in the Book, and you need to know Him, or perhaps to know him better than ever you have before.

Dr. Moorhead one day gave to his children a puzzle map, one of those made out of variously shaped pieces of wood and told them to put it together. They worked patiently, but at last they said we can't do it, and said the great Bible teacher, "It was an awful jumble." They had a part of North America in South America and were mixed up every way. Suddenly the larger child discovered that on the other side of one piece of

WORSHIPPING THE GOD OF PLEASURE.

Rev. Wm. S. Bowden.

"Lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God." 2 Tim. 3:4.

THIS is a pleasure-loving age. Amusement, rather than religion, seems to be the chief concern of the masses. This characteristic of the age was foretold by inspiration through the Apostle Paul in language quoted at the head of this article. The common version reads: "Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." The revision is quoted above: "rather than lovers of God." God is not given first place. Sometimes he is given no place at all. Men must worship something. It is to be supposed that Christians worship Christ and God the Father. The fact of the matter is that many who bear the name "Christian" worship the god of pleasure rather than the God of heaven. "Lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God."

We shall point out a number of ways in which it is quite evident that men are worshipping pleasure instead of God. And let it be understood that we refer to sinful, worldly pleasures. A certain amount of recreation is all right. Newman Hall has well said: "Rest as well as labor is from God, laughter as well as tears, recreation as well as toil." There are legitimate amusements. A proper amount of time should be given to these. Christianity does not aim to make men gloomy. It is not misanthropic. It does not seek the cloister. It recognizes the social life of man. It has no place for sinful pleasures, and it forbids an inordinate pursuit of pleasures not in themselves sinful or expressly forbidden. It is an evidence of a corrupt state of mind that leads to indulgence in unsatisfying, transitory, sinful pleasures rather than worship of the Creator.

The need of amusements receives undue emphasis these days. It is a morbid symptom when men think life dull without a continual whirl of fun, frolic and frivolity. It indicates an unhealthy tone in society when people run their recreation into dissipation. The entertainment craze has always led to family and national decay.

What are some of the indications that we are worshipping the god of pleasure?

1. The Church Becomes an Entertainment Bureau.

God never instituted the church to amuse people; this is outside of her commission. There is true pleasure in Christ—the highest kind of pleasure; it is something infinitely superior to worldly pleasure. The church should not endeavor to provide entertainment for those who find "pleasure in unrighteousness," who "count it pleasure to riot in the daytime," who are "deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures," who "enjoy the pleasures of sin." 2 Thess. 2:12; Titus 3:3; Heb. 11:25; 2 Pet. 2:13.

The church that provides worldly entertainment to win members is under the condemnation of God. There are many such these days. They offer that which appeals to the natural man. They are busy providing amusement for a flock of worldlings who have no appetite for spiritual food. The church that is converted into an amusement house is indifferent to the vital thing.

"The Twentieth Century Church" provides for dancing, card-playing, billiards, smoking, theatrical performances. It advertises, "Tom Thumb Weddings," "Bridge Whist," "Donkey Social with Misses Frolicker, Flirt and Tattle in charge." This is not a church which Christ established, it is not the church of which he is the Head. It may draw a crowd, the same as any other worldly institution, but it does not lead souls into the saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. Church levees, fairs, festivals, whist-parties, lawn parties, lantern parties and kissing parties may draw a larger crowd than the missionary meeting or the quiet prayer meeting, but they do not plant the divine life in the heart.

Those who are charged with the solemn responsibility of preparing a people for impending judgment must answer a holy God in the soon coming day of reckoning for the sin of placing the church as a competitor with the institutions of the world for the entertainment of the people who in these last perilous days believe that they must be amused.

A young lady who recently committed suicide wrote a letter a few days before her death. It has been printed in tract form. She despaired of life. She wrote: "I am going to take a plunge into hell. I will give a note of warning which I trust will save others." Then she told about her life. She said she used to be a good girl, that she belonged to the church, that she was a Christian, and that she had enjoyed the Lord's service. "But," she added, "the beginning of my downfall was in the church. They started a dance under the pastor's patronage and favor; it was there when I was fourteen years of age that I was enticed out for a walk, and on and on to the very depths and dregs of sin." This is an illustration of running the church of God by pleasure.

The pastor of a Kansas church is quoted in the "Literary Digest" as saying: "If I had my way, half of Chanute's fifteen church structures would be turned into dance-halls, community centers, gymnasiums, reading-rooms, and billiard-rooms. For worship we would have one auditorium for the entire town, would have a gifted minister, a man in every sense, fill the pulpit." Many utterances of the same nature could be quoted. This indicates the amusement craze that is sweeping the country.

2. The Lord's Day Becomes the Day of Sports.

The Weekly Memorial Day of the Christian Dispensation is not the day of rest and worship that it once was. In the Jewish dispensation God provided for all needed pleasures and enjoyments in the giving of various rest days. There was the weekly Sabbath. It was a day of rest; not of work and sports. The Jews had also a number of days annually when they were free from work. They then found recreation in worship.

Sunday, the weekly memorial of the resurrection of our Lord, should be for the Christian a day of holy worship. What is it for many, many professed Christians, as well as for the people of the world? It is the day when people worship the god of pleasure more than at other times. The day is given up to feasting, automobiling, theatre going and ball games. The Sunday newspaper takes the place of the Word of God, and the Sunday excursion trips are substituted for trips to the house of God. We rejoice that Sunday is a great day for the proclamation of the blessed truths of God's Word; however, it is sadly true that the times are perilous because many are enticed away from the sanctuary by the worldly pleasures which are offered especially upon the Lord's Day.

A certain young lady was engaged for several months, including Sundays, in a round of frivolities, utterly forgetful of her covenant with God. One Sunday morning, upon being asked by a gay companion to accompany him to a place of amusement, she declined on the ground that it was communion Sunday at her church. "Are you a communicant?" was the cutting reply. The arrow went to her heart. She felt that she had denied the Lord who had died for her. The keen rebuke brought her to true repentance. It is sad to think that many forget the church and the Lord entirely, and never do repent.

The day of the Lord and the house of God afford "rivers of pleasure." The open theatre and moving picture concerns are in our midst and running full blast on Sunday as they were not a generation ago, but it is our privilege to find such true joy in God that these worldly pleasures shall have no appeal. We may be lovers of God rather than lovers of pleasure. Some one has well said: "The sin is to love pleasure more than God; the cure is to love God more than pleasure, and pleasure only in a moderated sense in him."

3. Life is Sacrificed on the Altar of Pleasure.

Men live for pleasure, and die as a result of fast living. What a pity for a man to give the strength of his manhood to pleasure when there are such noble causes for which to live! What a shame for a man to boast of his willingness to give his life for some fool cause which is selfish gratification, pure and simple! Men nearly kill themselves with work that they may get time and money to spend in frivolity. The recoil from excessive labor is an equally excessive indulgence.

Sinful pleasures interfere with piety. We should be lovers of God for he has redeemed us with the precious blood of his dear Son. The life that is not filled with the love of God is sacrificed on the wrong altar. When an unwillingness to embrace the Savior and live a Christian life is seen it is often due to an unwillingness to renounce the pleasures of the world. An inordinate love for pleasures which are not essentially sinful leads to excessive indulgence, and this indulgence leads to death.

A roll call of those who sacrifice their lives in pleasure ought to convince us that today it is true of the masses that they are "lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God." Pleasure is constantly taking a mighty toll of death. Sinful pleasures are opposed to peace and purity. "Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul." 1 Pet. 2:11; 2 Pet. 2:19; Prov. 7:22.

4. Vast Sums of Money are Wasted on Pleasure.

It has been well said that if you know for what people spend their money you will know what they worship. Apply the test and confess the sad truth that people are worshipping the god of pleasure. There are just as acceptable worshippers of God today as there ever were. There are generous Christian givers, but when we talk about "Christian America" and stop to think that we are giving less than twenty cents a head for the evangelization of the world we pause to ask what the people of this Christian land worship. We are giving three times as much per year for chewing gum as we give to Christian work. We are giving twelve times as much for soda water. We are giving twenty times as much for candy, thirty times as much for moving pictures, and forty times as much for automobiles. Sometime ago when the average amount that Christians in America gave for world evangelization was thirty cents apiece, some one wrote this little satire on the collection boxes of the churches:

"Christians, have you ever heard the story,
How the meanest man of men,
Threw his vile accursed silver,
In abhorrence back again?
Thirty pieces was the purchase
Of the world's Redeemer then.
Now, 'tis thirty cents in copper,
For the Master has grown cheap,
And the cursed Judas money
Is the money that we keep."

I doubt if there is any credit given in heaven for some of the money that is supposed to be put into the "treasury of the Lord." People go to a church bazaar "to help out a good cause." In reality, most of them go to fill their stomachs. They are pleasure lovers; they are not moved by an appeal to generously support the work of the Lord. They hand the money over to pay the expense of a religious frolic or picnic, for the fun there is in it. It is the love of pleasure and not the love of God which rules the heart.

People will pay to be amused. I pass on an item that was recently printed in a secular paper: In twenty-six weeks one lady of fair face and damaged reputation drew $256,000 from the pockets of the public, and in twenty-four weeks another of similar character drew $390,000; a singer in her first tour drew $226,000 and another singer in twenty-eight concerts drew over $200,000; an actor drew $230,000, and another actor $315,000. Here are six "stars," averaging to work twenty-four weeks, who in one season drew from the public one million, six hundred and sixty-seven thousand dollars ($1,667,000). I like to write it out in full, and when people tell me of hard times, no money in circulation, and all that sort of thing, I want to just quote this fact, that in one season the American pleasure-seekers paid six men and women over a million and a half of money! For what? Amusing them for two or three hours with music or acting, and in the first case it was neither—only just to see a world-renowned beauty. And the worst part of it is that a goodly part of this money comes from the people who claim to be Christians. Pleasure is their god.

5. Much Energy and Time are Spent in Seeking Pleasure.

If as much energy and time were put forth in seeking God there would be more "joy unspeakable and full of glory." Among professed Christians much time is spent in seeking after wealth that there may be something to spend in worldly amusements. Twenty attend the church fair where one attends the church prayer meeting. There are more church members attracted to the preacher with the large stock of wit, humor and foolish stories than to the messenger who brings in tenderness and solemnity the truth of Almighty God. Those who must take time for sleep on Sunday morning can get up early when the circus strikes town. They can stay up late for a dance but do not believe that they should get enough interested in a revival meeting to be out at "an unreasonable hour." They can find time for pleasure but not for praise and prayer.

If half the time which church members devote to recreations which positively do harm were spent in quiet communion with God or in practical service for God there would be multitudes of people who would begin to drink of the rivers of pleasure which are in God, pleasures which are satisfying.

We recognize the importance of true recreation. We rejoice that God has provided many innocent pleasures. Let us beware of the pleasures of sin which are only for a season, and let us remember that lawful pleasures are, as J. Henshaw has said, "good sauce, but naught for a meal." People of the world recognize that certain pleasures are not for the Christian. A young lady introduced the subject of religion to her partner at the dance. He recognized the incongruity between the two and instantly said: "For goodness' sake, don't introduce that subject here."

I ask you to choose between worldly pleasures and the fulness of joy that there is in the God of our salvation. We are living amidst the predicted Last Day Perils. We need not be overcome by them. The house of pleasure leads to perdition. The house of God leads to glory. In the soon coming day the lovers of pleasure will be separated from the lovers of God. Those who have loved worldly pleasures rather than God will then be banished from the divine presence; those who have been lovers of God rather than lovers of worldly pleasure will inherit eternal glory. They will then realize the meaning of the prophetic words which apply to Christ and those who are united to him by a living faith:

"Thou wilt show me the path of life; in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore."—Psa. 16:11.

Spiritual Life Suggestions

Of Pauline Prayers.

REV. JOSEPH H. SMITH.

PAUL'S aspirations for God's people are the Spirit's inspirations of God's will for the saints. Nothing he asks for is beyond our apprehension. With the apostle's petitions as telescope lenses, if not as eye glasses, we can see what is in our Bridegroom's wardrobe for us, and what is in our Father's cupboard and in our King's treasury. Paul was a vehicle, a channel, an agent of the Spirit's intercession for us according to the will of God; and this for things which we ourselves in the infirmity of our ignorance "know not how to pray for as we ought." For once, at least, it will be permissible to use a Prayer Book. Let us, then, make use of Paul's prayer as our own.

Not all of his epistles to the churches contain records of prayers in their behalf. (Save only as we may class his benedictions—like Romans 1:7, 1 Cor. 1:2, and Galatians 1:3 with his prayers). Besides these, there are sometimes ejaculatory prayers as in Romans 15:13—and 2 Cor. 13:7, etc. But in several of the epistles there are full records made of his prayers for those in the state illustrated by such churches. And it is notable that in every such instance these prayers are found offered for those in an already good, praiseworthy and progressive experience. It is evident, then, that the spiritual life has an ascent in, rather than a graduation beyond, the prayer life. Those for whom he praises most he prays for the more.

In Ephesians there are two Pauline Prayers. That famous one in Chapter 2 we shall waive in deference to the too often overlooked prayer in Chapter 1:15-20. See the occasion of this: note some discouraging news about their backsliding or lukewarmness, and what he had heard of their "faith" and "love." This gave wings to his prayer for he did not "cease to give thanks for them." Nor was his prayer simply the soul's sincere and unexpressed desire; but he made mention of them in his prayers. What a pattern for us in behalf of those already doing well in the Christian life!

See his mode of address in the prayer: "The God of our Lord Jesus Christ", for our Lord, too, was a man. And he prayed. I address his God in your behalf. The prayer-answering God of the Son of man. "The Father of glory." Let us not be surprised, then, if we run into some "glory" before the prayer is through. For God who is all glorious, begets glory in the Christian's soul. This prayer, you will note, is for a gift. And has the Father gifts in store for his good children? This seems probable. This is a gift of a priceless treasure. The spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him, that is light from above. Light to shine for us on the face of our beloved. Under its effulgence we may see his beauty, his bliss and his bounty more clearly, completely, and constantly. That is a wondrous gift! Not of a glass, nor of a view point, but of a light. And that the light of Revelation!

And here he suggests three things in Christ for them to see. "The hope of his calling." The riches of the glory in the saints. And "the greatness of his power to usward." To sum it up this is a prayer that by the light of revelation they might know what is before them to hope for, what is within them to rejoice in, and what is behind them to sustain them. Wonderful knowledge that!

We will turn next to Paul's prayer for the Philippians, Ch. 1:9. These, like the Ephesians, were already in a gracious experience, so that he says in verse 3: "I thank my God on every remembrance of you." And in the third chapter, verse 15, he addresses them as having among them "many perfect." This, like the former, is prayer for "knowledge." Though while for the Ephesians, he traces this to a gift of revelation, for these Philippians he would account it to the light of love; "that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge, and in all judgment." But there is no conflict. God's light on the face of Jesus is ever the manifestation (and the impartation too) of the love of God. And, see, there these three effects, or results of this Light of Abounding Love prayed for in their behalf. (1) That ye "approve things that are excellent." Many things are good. Some are "excellent." Things spiritual excel things that are charitable, humanitarian, and material. (2) "That ye may be sincere and without offense until the day of Christ." This is prayer for blameless reservation without and within a holy, happy life. "Filled with the fruits of righteousness." Prayer for a useful and fruitful life to the fullest measure of capacity or opportunity. We can think of no higher state of Christian manhood—(though there may be endless degrees in the same) than these three qualities embrace. And let us keep in mind that Paul prays for nothing here that is out of reach of those in the Philippian state of experience.

Turn now to Colossians chapter 1:8-12. Let us note first their present state. (For we assume that this prayer would have been

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XIX.

HUSTON LEAVES THE SEMINARY.

WHEN Huston returned home from his visit with the Dean of the Theological Seminary and told his wife in detail of their conversation, and what he had said to the Dean, she gave him her hearty approval, and agreed that all he had said was true.

"But dear," she said, "I have been thinking that our situation here is a peculiar and rather unpleasant one. I believe you have done exactly right in speaking out in defense of our faith. In the first place, you do not believe in this institution or its teachers, and you feel duty bound on occasions to speak your mind. You are an embarrassment to the Dean and his faculty. They, of course, do not feel very kindly toward you. There is quite a body of students here who are in sympathy with the faculty, it matters not to what extent they may go in their destructive criticism of the Holy Scriptures. They are very antagonistic to you, and I find they are expressing themselves quite freely. The University itself, apart from the Theological School, is a powerful center of skepticism, I may say, infidelity. Their unbelief manifests itself in almost a rabid antagonism against evangelical Christianity. Is it wise for us to remain here where you do not expect to receive any help in your preparation for a soul-winning ministry, and where you cannot conscientiously remain silent and see the Holy Scriptures torn to tatters in a spirit of irreverence that is most startling?"

Huston responded that he had been thinking along the line of her suggestion. He had found in the city a most profound scholar who gave private lessons in Hebrew and Greek, and who had spent a number of years in archaeological research in Palestine and adjoining countries, and was one of the best informed men on the recent discoveries substantiating the historical veracity of the Holy Scriptures, and he was now thinking of quitting the Seminary and for the remainder of the school year, taking private studies under this great teacher.

Huston informed his wife that he had also been requested to preach Sabbath evenings at a People's Tabernacle, where a large band of devout persons had organized themselves into an evangelistic enterprise; they had rented a handsome hall and were holding very successful evangelistic services.

He and his wife agreed that it would be a capital thing to take studies under this great scholar, and for Huston to accept the offer of this evangelistic organization.

The next day Huston looked up the proper authorities, paid all bills, and withdrew from the Seminary. He then went to the great scholar to whom we have referred, and made arrangements for himself and wife to take special studies in Hebrew, Greek and Archaeology. They at once entered upon their work with great zeal, found their teacher a most delightful Christian gentleman who took special interest in them.

This professor had spent many years in archaeological research, spoke many languages and dialects, and was well known and acknowledged to be one of the great scholars of his time. It was of deep interest and a real comfort to Huston to find that it was quite possible for a man to be a profound scholar and, at the same time, an unhesitating believer in the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures, the virgin birth of our Lord Jesus, and his complete atonement made upon the cross for our sins, and not only so, but at the same time, to be in the enjoyment of a gracious experience of grace and devout fellowship with the Holy Spirit.

Huston had heard the sneering insinuations from numbers of persons who were assuming an intelligence which they did not possess, that no real scholar could any longer be a devout believer in the inspiration of the Scriptures, the deity of our Lord, his vicarious sufferings upon the cross, and his appearing again in glory and power. He found that this great scholar was a contradiction of all this irreverent and skeptical claim of the modern church infidels who are sowing broadcast among the people the seeds of unbelief, that must eventually bring forth a harvest of wicked lawlessness and outbreathing crime.

Huston found his fellowship and work at the People's Tabernacle most delightful. It was a spiritual feeding place for many persons who were no longer receiving the bread of life from the skeptical pastors, but were hunting for some place where they could be fed and refreshed in their spiritual natures by a pure gospel.

The soul of man is a living thing. It has a marvelous capacity for hunger; it is in greater need of spiritual food than the body is of physical nourishment. When our Lord Jesus Christ said, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled," he was making no reference to physical hunger and thirst, but to the needs and longing of our spiritual nature.

It is sad indeed, to think of the number of preachers to which hungry people go in vain, for spiritual nourishment where, instead of receiving the bread of life, they are fed upon the stones and serpents of skepticism, and are sent away with questions in their minds with reference to every essential truth of Christianity, and when they should have been gathered into close fellowship with the blessed Trinity, they are made to doubt the inspiration of the Bible, the Deity and saving power of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Soon after Huston commenced preaching at this Tabernacle it was packed with eager listeners. Every seat was occupied and many people stood; frequently, late comers were turned away for lack of standing space. Huston was not only a man of unusual attractive personality, with a fine voice and a clear, positive way of speaking, but he was an orator. His heart was aflame with a great faith in the Christ, a holy love for him, and the people he had died to redeem. This faith and love amounted to a passion. It illuminated his face, it stimulated his intellect, and poured forth from his lips with an eloquence that stirred and electrified his hearers in a remarkable degree. Those who came to hear him urged others to come, and it became necessary for him to preach both in the afternoon and evening to separate congregations in order to give the eager multitudes an opportunity to hear him.

The news of his antagonism to false teachings in the seminary and his forsaking the place, got abroad in the city, aroused the skeptical preachers against him and rallied many devout laymen to his support, and entirely without his seeking, he became quite a center of attraction.

It takes a man of real strength of character, especially while he is young, to thus become noted for his faith, his devotion to principle and truth, and unusual eloquence, to remain humble and to seek, not his own, but the glory of his Lord and the salvation of the people. Huston was strong enough to hold steady and keep low at the feet of his Master in the midst of this sudden popularity which had been thrust upon him.

With the full endorsement of the Board who controlled and directed the affairs of the Tabernacle, he arranged for a holiness meeting every Friday evening, where he explained the doctrines of entire sanctification, and where many who were longing for something, they knew not what, were brought graciously into the Canaan life where the milk and honey of full salvation from sin flowed in abundance.

The afternoon and evening services were times of gracious revival, and there was scarcely ever a service without from two or three, or twelve to fifteen, sinners converted to Christ at an altar of prayer.

Come to think of it, it is quite remarkable at the number of great church buildings, a large membership, and highly educated ministers, that go along through the years without any sort of revival effort and, so far as we can see, not a single salvation. Of course, there is church joining, but no evidence of regeneration by the power of the Holy Spirit.

The people who crowded the Tabernacle offered, with eagerness and liberality, to build an independent church in the city and employ Huston at a large salary, if he would become their permanent pastor. This, he refused to do, but he was forced to believe that the spiritual condition in many of our Protestant churches is such that there is a place and need in almost every city of considerable population, for a People's Church adhering strictly to the Holy Scriptures and urging the necessity of the new birth, and offering the gracious privilege of entire sanctification from all sin.

THE BIBLE THE VERY WORD OF GOD.

the map there was part of a man's hand, and then she turned over another piece and there was part of a man's face, and she cried to her sister who had given up in despair and gone away. "Come back; there is a man on the other side," and almost instantly they completed out the figure of the man, and when the map was turned over every river and lake, mountain and plain was in the proper place.

And this is the secret of Bible study. There is a man in the Bible. Every Scripture is full of Christ and from Genesis to Revelation everything breathes of Him. Put Christ together first. Come to know Him and as you know Him you will love Him.

I have heard of a young woman who was given a book by a friend and told she would find it interesting. But it was not. To her it was most awfully dry and dull. Several times she tried to read it but at last gave it up in disgust. A few weeks later she met a young man who became very much interested in her and she likewise in him. One day she discovered his name to be exactly like that of the writer of the book, and when he came next time to see her she told him about it. Very modestly the young man acknowledged himself to be the author of the book. And that night when he went away she took up the book and she began to read and read until the early hours of morning and wondered how she ever could have found a dry line in it. She was in love with the author of the book.

Help Some Young Girl

By presenting her with "Beautiful Girlhood" at graduation time. Girls have need of guidance and a helping hand all along the way, and because of this need "Beautiful Girlhood" was written. It is an inexpensive gift, and $1.00 thus invested may bring large returns, as we do not believe any girl can read the book without aspiring to high and holy things. Order a copy and help build character in some girl. Price, $1.00.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

ASBURIANS IN MEXICO.

The question of modern missions in Latin America is a question that, although somewhat discussed, has been sadly neglected and almost avoided. 'Tis true evangelical churches have been working for about sixty years in the larger cities of Mexico and some of the other countries, and though they have been felt in the hearts and lives of these countries, yet it seems the people as a whole in the homeland know very little of the situation here.

There have been books written from time to time about "The Neglected Continent," "The Continent of Opportunity," and so forth, and many articles have been written about the social uplifting of these countries, but comparatively little has been done among the ranks of Holiness people.

It was our privilege last spring after having spent some time in the Spanish department of Asbury College, to graduate from the said institution. Of course, we were anxious to get to the field, but as is so often the case, we could find no Holiness board that was able to send us out.

We have found that it pays to step out on faith when the Master says "Go ye," for he also says, "Lo, I am with you always." He has wonderfully fulfilled his promise and supplied every need since we started out August 18th, our wedding day. We arrived in Mexico in November after being in missionary meetings across the country, during the intervening months.

We started to work here in a well established Holiness work, though, as I said, without a penny of support promised from any Board or Church, for now when the fields are so white and the laborers so few, it is no time to be running around starting something new.

This work was started in 1920 by a consecrated young couple and has been singularly blessed of God from the very outset. Though there is a thriving church here in San Luis Potosi, which is the headquarters, our most extensive work has been among the Aztecs and Otomis, the Indians of the Great Huasteca. Men have been talking about the decisive hour of Christian Missions for years, but when we made a month's tour of the Great Huasteca last December and saw how these people were literally starving for the gospel and where opportunity was given them were literally turning to Christ by the hundreds, we thought, if ever now is the decisive hour for Mexico.

As you all know, close on the heels of the cruel Spanish conquerors came the Spanish priests, and the result has been that these wonderful countries of such great possibilities have been kept in ignorance and superstition for these hundreds of years only to be exploited by the rich and heartless.

Thank God, Mexico is finding herself and is slowly throwing off the yoke of Catholicism. About two years ago the government passed a law demanding that all the priests and preachers register in the city halls of the cities where they were officiating, but the pope said no, and the result has been that the government has permitted no priest to officiate in any capacity for these two years. We feel this has had a great effect upon the people, for without the priests' influence the people are more ready to accept the gospel, and there is now no priest to stir up the terrible persecution which some of our first converts suffered.

As before stated these people have literally turned to Christ by the hundreds. In one place we visited they have turned to Christ almost unanimously since 1925, there being about three hundred believers and only eight families not yet converted. Perhaps someone says, if they are turning to Christ in such numbers are they truly converted? Are their lives really changed? Our answer is one glad "yes." Thank God they became new creatures. If you could only see one who a few years ago lived a life of sin and drunkenness changed into a life of purity and Christ-likeness or a treacherous coward changed into a true witness for Christ, willing to go through fire and sword for the Gospel, I'm sure your doubts would be forever swept away.

The logical result of so many finding God has been the need of a good school where the youth could get a Christian education and those called to Christian work could thoroughly prepare themselves for service. The vision of a school of this kind is at last being realized. Last summer the Lord touched the hearts of some friends who sent $3,000 which was the first payment to be made on this fine property including between six and seven acres of land almost in the heart of the city. The location is ideal. The school, this its first year, has between thirty and forty students.

We covet the prayers of the Holiness people over the land that this may become a real holiness training center for Latin America as Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky., is for the United States.

GARFIELD, KANSAS.

Sunday night, April 7th, we closed one of the most fruitful revivals that Garfield has had in many years. We began the meeting March 17th, with a discouraging outlook, as some said, "it seemed that a revival was not intended for this place; others had tried it and failed and some of the people did not believe in revivals, and only a few church members would attend, and the other churches in town did not believe in revivals." Some said one thing and some another. However the official board voted for the pastor to hold his meeting and thus he opened the battle. Some wanted a revival and prayed and believed. Instead of a few church members coming the church was fairly well filled most every night. For two weeks there were no visible results, only increasing crowds and intense interest with people testifying that "if no one was saved the meeting was well worth while for the great good it had done for the church," but we were expecting results. On Sunday night, the close of the second week the altar was full and all were saved. Every night during the week except one there were many seeking at the altar.

We closed on Sunday night with a full altar. There were fifty conversions and reclamations. Several whole families were saved and begun family worship in their homes. A wonderful spirit of harmony prevailed throughout the meeting and the people responded to every suggestion offered that would in any way help the meeting. The junior choir added much to the interest of the revival and many of them were saved. On Wednesday evening following the close we baptized twenty-seven and received forty-six into the church. There are several to be baptized and received yet. We also baptized several on Easter Sunday. The church is rejoicing in the new life. We have not found a more kindly people with which to work. They are most appreciative of every work. By permission of the officers we can give some time to revival work this spring, summer or early fall.

OUT IN THE GREAT NORTHWEST.

A trip to Montana gives one a thrill long to be remembered. We were invited to Roundup, Mont., by the Methodist pastor, Rev. F. C. Fulford. For two weeks we preached the old-time gospel. Snow and sweeping winds cut down the crowds, but those who attended the revival were greatly helped. A letter from the pastor indicates the success of the work. He says:

"On Easter Sunday we had between 400 and 500 people out in the morning. I preached on the Logic of Easter, 'If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain,' etc. We received $513.00 on Easter Sunday, $50.00 for World Service, $300.00 to clear away all indebtedness on the church, and $163.00 came into the church budget. Including Sunday and Monday I baptized 36 persons, and received 30 into the church. We have had a great time, God has been very gracious to us and we desire to give him all the glory."

We went from Roundup to Billings, Mont., for a week just preceding Easter. We held forth during the day service at the Liberty Theater in the city and preached at the Presbyterian Church in the evening. The services were under the auspices of the Ministerial Alliance, the Fundamentalist wing of the city churches. Rev. W. D. Shelor, pastor of the Nazarene Church, is president of the Alliance. He has a very live and active church in Billings. He and the other ministers of the Alliance stood by us. We found some fine spiritual people in Billings. Dr. A. J. Movius, a noted surgeon of the city, attended a number of the services. He is a fine Christian gentleman as well as a skillful physician.

On our way back we stopped at St. Louis and spoke one night at the Light House Mission which has been organized into the Flower Memorial Nazarene Church. Here we met Rev. M. G. Socton, Mr. L. O. Salzman and Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Box. The latter are lay evangelists and great workers in camps and conventions.

We are now in a revival meeting in Wakarusa, Ind. There is a sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees.

Andrew Johnson.

CAMDEN, NEW JERSEY.

One year ago, in the providence of God, we came to the pastorate of Bethany Methodist Episcopal Church, of Camden, N. J. The very first Sunday of our pastorate, we told them of our belief in the word of God and the doctrines of the Methodist Church regarding the conversion of sinners and the entire sanctification of believers, etc. Also that we were not in sympathy with questionable methods of raising money to support the pastor and church, such as Church Suppers, Cake Sales, Church Bazaars, Fairs, and the like, but that God would supply all our financial needs, if we would walk with God. We are glad to report to the glory of God that the church promised to stand by the pastor in all his spiritual leadership and give up all their church suppers and all other questionable methods to raise money to pay the pastor and other church debts. God blessed us the first conference year; souls were at our church altar and tent meetings, seeking pardon and cleansing, and thus the church moved on full salvation lines. At the close of the conference year we closed up with all money in to pay all bills, and money in the treasury besides, and as Dr. Brooks says, "With no dishes to wash!" To God be all the praise. Amen.

We never served a better church; they are a fine and willing people to serve. Our official board monthly meetings are places of delight and holy fellowship, with no church quarrels, etc. By unanimous vote from the board, we were returned to serve them another year. Already blessed signs of spiritual, financial, and numerical increase are plainly seen. For over thirty long years these people have needed a new church building. Several preachers have made the attempt to build, but every one sadly failed, until these dear, but poor people, gave up in despair. Since our coming here the people have taken fresh courage and believe God will now give them a new church building. But, I too, of myself, will prove a sad failure, unless God leads and brings us through. God is able to give us the building, as the church has promised to follow us on the lines of full salvation. I have pledged my support, under God's help and leadership, to build them a new church building this conference year. Will the holiness people who read these lines mightily pray God to give us a new church building. What a blessing it would be to build a Methodist Episcopal Church in the New Jersey Conference without the aid of church suppers and church entertainments, and all other such methods! Any person who may feel led to write us, that you are praying for us in this matter, would be gratefully appreciated. Any persons who may feel led to send in financial aid, we shall be grateful to hear from you also. Address all letters to writer, at 1001 Cooper St., Camden, N. J. John Norberry.

THE FLORIDA HOLINESS CAMP MEETING.

The camp meeting opened in Orlando, Fla., on the morning of February 28th with a good crowd and interest, but with none of our regular workers present. Rev. E. C. Wills, secretary, was asked to bring the opening message and spoke on intercessory prayer, after which the people of the Lord gathered around the altar and cried to God for a gracious manifestation of his presence and power, and surely he heard and answered and gave us in every way the most fruitful camp meeting of our history.

The early morning prayer meetings were times of heart crying to God and the outpouring of his Spirit in answer and keyed the whole day as God came in the person of the mighty Holy Ghost in saving, reclaiming, and sanctifying power.

Dr. H. C. Morrison, who was one of the workers and who has been a father to this camp since its organization, was unable to be with us and was missed as few men have ever been missed.

Satan did his best in hindering but finally our helpers came and in spite of wind, some rain and cold, the work went forward and most every service witnessed some precious souls get to God in regeneration, or entire sanctification.

Dr. C. W. Ruth, of Indianapolis, was with us and as he presented the truth of entire sanctification as a second blessing "properly so-called" as he alone can present it, the truth fell upon fertile soil and resulted in many seekers at the altar, many of whom obtained what they came for.

Brother John F. Knapp, of Cincinnati, was the other preacher, and brought stirring messages on the Bible doctrines of original Methodism that blessed many hearts.

Prof. Kenneth Wells and wife had charge of the singing and made this feature of our camp the best in our history. They sang the old Bible truths till the saints shouted, the burdened and well nigh hopeless hearts began to look up and souls caught new visions of the mighty power of Christ to save.

The climax came on the last Sunday morning in the offering. Never in any offering has the writer seen the presence and approval of God so signally manifested or sensibly felt. One friend said, "No use to take an offering this morning, as you will get but little," but this scribe remarked, "We still have God," and as we proceeded the giving really reached the point of hilarity and while we did not get much actual cash, yet the pledges and cash amounted to a good sum and the Lord set his seal upon this great work. More than one hundred souls prayed through to real victory.

The Board elected Rev. E. C. Wills, Treasurer, thus combining the offices of Secretary and Treasurer, and anyone desiring information about details of this work may obtain same by addressing him at P. O. Box 1944, Orlando, Fla. Several permanent sites are being considered by the Board, and we expect to have some important announcements to make soon regarding this camp, and we urge every lover of holiness and holiness camp meetings to join us in prayer for God to lead us on in this great work.

I must not fail to mention the prayers and tireless work of our President, Rev. H. H. McAfee, who spared no effort to make the camp count most for God and literally poured himself out that God might have right of way.

The holiness camp meetings today are fast becoming the main salt that keeps the nation from rotting. Pray much, friends, and let's keep the fires burning upon God's holy altar till Jesus comes.

E. C. Wills, Secretary.

REVIVAL AT SOUTH HUTCHINSON METHODIST CHURCH.

The Pre-Easter revival held in the Methodist Church in South Hutchinson, Kan., was a source of strength and advancement to many who attended.

The children were organized into a junior choir. They enjoyed singing special choruses in the services. Rev. R. E. Dunham did the preaching. He is a preacher of great ability. He expounds the Gospel to the delight of those who hunger and thirst after righteousness. Many were helped by the meeting and some found the Lord for the first time.

To any church wishing an evangelist who knows the Lord, and who preaches the Word without fear or favor, and in a scholarly manner, we recommend Rev. Dunham very highly. The offering does not affect his sweet spirit or his preaching.

We secured thirteen new subscribers for The Herald. Address Rev. R. E. Dunham at Hutchinson, Kan. This man should be kept busy in the evangelistic field.

H. G. Grosdidier, Pastor.

of. And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you: Whose judgment now of a long time, lingereth not, and their damnation slumbereth not." 2 Pet. 2:1-3. These infidels and modern skeptics in the pulpit and out of it, fulfil this prophecy. By the grace of God they shall not make merchandise of this old preacher. I do not believe in them, I cannot fellowship with them and I am indifferent to their criticism and ridicule.

I was taught in my childhood that the violation of any of the commandments of God was sin, and most dangerous and destructive to character, peace and happiness in this life, and that which is to come. I was taught that there are powerful, intelligent, evil influences and forces in this world that head up in a being called the Devil; that he goeth about seeking whom he may devour; that he has no pity on little children, no respect for the strength of middle life, and no sympathy with the decrepitudes of old age, but he hates God, sneers at holiness, and is set for the destruction of all human beings. He is a vile tempter, has great power and has had marvelous success in the ruin of men. Nothing in life, literature, travel, and my long and varied experience with myself and human beings, has, for one moment, led me to doubt the plain teachings of the Holy Scriptures and our Lord Jesus Christ with reference to the existence of the Devil and his numerous activities. I am of the opinion that he will eventually have complete control over those persons who are denying his existence.

As to future punishment, I was taught in my childhood to believe the plain teachings of the Lord Jesus Christ on the subject of hell, and I was fully convinced that if I lived in rebellion against God, died impenitent in my sins, without accepting Christ as my Saviour, I would go into eternal torment. I have not changed my views, and I can't change my views with regard to Christ's teaching on this subject without changing my views with regard to Christ himself. This I shall not do. I believe he was pre-existent, that he knows the facts, that his word is as impeachable as his character is holy. In the nature of things, I cannot believe that an unholy being loving sin, and in rebellion against God could enjoy heaven if, by some mistake, he got in there. Whether the teachings of Jesus on this subject of the future torment of the wicked were literal or figurative, it makes no difference, and does not affect the facts with reference to the future state of the lost. Christ never exaggerated. If he had used figures of speech out of harmony with the facts as they exist, he would have been guilty of falsehood. This is unthinkable. Those people who are comforting the wicked with their doctrines of no hell, have no Bible basis for their heresy, neither have they any sound philosophy for their skepticism. To enjoy a heaven that is holy, men must be saved from sin and the love of sin, and brought into harmony and fellowship with the holy God of the universe.

I was taught in my childhood the necessity of repentance, of forsaking sin, of sorrow for it, of confession of it, of trust in Christ for forgiveness, the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost, of a consciousness of pardon, the joy of salvation, the necessity of church membership, of attending church and prayer meeting, of a careful use of the means of grace, the great help of the family altar and the testimony meeting, the importance of revivals of religion—all these things I steadfastly believe to this day, and no combination of modern skeptics can shake me loose from this faith, these beliefs. Later in life, I learned the Wesleyan interpretation of the Bible doctrine of entire sanctification, I believed it, experienced it, have held to it, and will die without a doubt that the precious blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sin.

I must confess that a few of the teachings that came to me from the community and the colored people I have had to surrender. For instance, I was taught that Friday was an unlucky day. I have had to part with that belief. I was taught that if a rabbit ran across the road in front of you to the left hand, it was a bad sign; that if you started somewhere and forgot something and turned back after it, without making a cross mark in the road, and spitting in the cross, you would have bad luck. This superstition I gave up many years ago. I might name several other things of like character, I have surrendered, but I have never had the least occasion or inclination to give up any of the fundamental teachings of our holy Christianity founded upon the plain teachings of the blessed old Bible, and by the grace of God, I shall hold to them and, if permitted, will preach them without hesitation or apology to my dying day.

The Collapse of Evolution.

I have a great desire that a book with the above title shall have a very large circulation and thoughtful reading by the general public. I have very good reasons for this desire. Let me tell you briefly, several reasons why this book should be broadcasted, read, studied, circulated and quoted among the people.

First, nothing has done so much to destroy evangelical saving faith among the people as the evolutionary hypothesis. It has suggested and undertaken to teach and prove that the physical universe, the animal world, and human beings can be produced and come into existence without an intelligent, personal God. The carnal nature of man, which is at enmity against God, and would love to get rid of him, was quite ready to receive this strange, unscriptural, unreasonable and false teaching. Nothing in the history of Christian civilization has contributed so largely to a destructive skepticism, which leads to every sort of evil. It makes animals out of human beings; then why not seduce them, destroy them with drink, deceive, cheat and wrong them in any and every way. The whole tendency is to destroy reverence for parents, true affection for children, the bonds of pure matrimony. It lifts all the floodgates of evil, does away with the reverential fear of God and the spirit of prayer and worship.

Second, the theory of evolution has been taken up and adopted by a large percent of the public press. It's a rare thing that you will find the editor of a daily paper who is not friendly to the theory of evolution, and he sows the seed of this destructive teaching broadcast among the homes and in the minds of the people. A very large percent of the presidents and professors of our universities and colleges are either believers in this evolutionary doctrine, friendly to it, or quiet about it. Our schools are plant-beds in which the seeds of evolution are diligently sown in the minds of our young people. The popular fiction of the day is largely written by men and women who have swallowed the theory of evolution. Many of them are without reverence for God, and some of them without respect for decency. Much of this fiction is mental poison and hurtful to all the spiritual life of its greedy young readers.

Third, the average Christian, the majority of devout parents, a large percent of the Christian ministry, have no intelligent answer to evolution. It is one thing to say that you do not believe in evolution; it is another thing to be prepared to give your reason for it. It is one thing for the ministry to grow red in the face, beat the Bible, and cry out against evolution; it is another thing to be able to stand up and give the people intelligent instruction on the subject.

Fourth, this book, "The Collapse of Evolution," is concise, clear, reasonable, instructive, interesting and conclusive. The price is one dollar. It ought to be in the homes of the people. The preachers ought to study it and get sermon material out of it. Parents ought to read it carefully. High school students ought to study it. Boys and girls will find it interesting. The intelligent, religious thing to do is to get hold of such literature, make a careful study of it, and be prepared to give answer to the enemies of the Bible, faith in, and reverence for, God and a saving trust in the Lord Jesus Christ. This book can be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. The price is mentioned above. Get it. Read it, and be prepared to give an intelligent answer, wise instruction and the reason why you have a true, restful, reverential faith in God and his Word.

The question of evolution is a live one. It is a growing and deadening paralysis. It is like a leech of Satan and sin fastening itself upon our humanity and sucking away the very lifeblood of all true evangelical religion. It is a viper's nest for the hatching of all sorts of unbelief, irreverence and lawlessness. It is almost criminal to remain, willingly, ignorant and unconcerned on this subject. Send and get this book. We do not begin to say that it is anything like a library on the subject, but it is a most excellent treatise, written by a devout scholar. The reader who does not find this book interesting should condemn, not the book, but his own lack of proper appreciation of a serious, and scholarly discussion of a live and most vital question.

H. C. MORRISON.

Taylor University Commencement.

Taylor University closes its eighty-third year with the commencement exercises, June 9 to 12. Dr. Ernest C. Wareing, of The Western Christian Advocate delivers the commencement address, and Dr. H. C. Morrison, of Louisville, Ky., gives the baccalaureate sermon. Besides other graduates, forty-seven young people representing twelve states will take the Bachelor of Arts degree. Virtually all of this class are earnest Christians and many of them will be teachers, preachers or missionaries.

During this school year Taylor has consolidated its endowment in harmony with the requirements of the North Central Association and continued to improve its standards. Many talented young people of limited means come to Taylor for their education. Because of this demand a special fund of half million dollars known as the William Taylor Service Endowment is now being sought. It is expected that a new gymnasium and auditorium combined will be erected for the coming school year.

Go To Indianapolis Seven Thousand Strong.

Each person who reads this appeal is requested to be one of that Biblical number to invade the Capital City of Indiana and attend the World's Christian Fundamentals Convention in the Cadle Tabernacle, May 26-June 2. Already there are abounding evidences that this will be the greatest convention thus far in the history of the rapidly growing Fundamentalist Movement. The great Fundamentals of Christianity will be emphasized by such world-renowned speakers as Dr. Mark Matthews of Seattle, Dr. T. T. Shields, of Toronto, Dr. Harry Rimmer, of Los Angeles, Dr. Herbert W. Bieber, of Bala-Cynwyd, Pa., Dr. W. B. Riley, of Minneapolis and others of equal ability. Bible Study, Missions, Christian Education, Sound Doctrine, Sunday School Work and True Evangelism will have very prominent places on the program. Mr. Harry Clark, one of the greatest choir directors and soloists on the American Continent will direct the music while that famous composer of gospel songs, Mr. Robert Harkness, will preside at the piano. You cannot afford to miss the most important and inspiring convention of Christian people ever to assemble in this or any other state. So plan to go and go with your plans to stay during the entire convention.

Never were the men who deny the great Fundamentals of Christianity more determined to capture and control all the Churches, Sunday schools, Public Schools, Denominational Colleges, State Universities, Social Clubs, Fraternal Orders and Industrial Organizations than they are today. Such men deny the God-given inspiration and infallible authority of the Bible, the Virgin Birth, Deity, Blood Atonement and Physical Resurrection of Jesus Christ, the experience of personal salvation by the grace of God, the personality of the Holy Spirit, the reality of Heaven, the endless punishment of the impenitent. Because of their presumptuous scholarship, flattering manner, deceptive language and political methods, the faith of thousands of young people in the Fundamentals of Christianity is being completely destroyed. Modernists say: down with dogma, scrap the creeds, avoid controversy, stay in the middle of the road and unite all the churches while they continue to sow the seed of infidelity, provoke controversy, divide churches, boss the schools and deceitfully demonstrate their intolerance toward those who refuse to accept their destructive dogmas. In the midst of such treacherous rebellion against the Bible Authority of God and increasing lawlessness among men, it is high time for each believer in Jesus Christ to awaken to the danger of "these perilous times" and take a definite stand for "the Faith once for all delivered unto the saints." Hence, we count on you to be at Indianapolis to take your stand.

God raised up the leaders of the Protestant Reformation to meet the crisis of ecclesiastical corruption in that day; even so, he has now evidently chosen the leaders of the great Fundamentalist Movement to lead the children of God as they unitedly combat the doctrinal depravity which abounds in many churches and educational institutions. Very significant developments within some of the largest ecclesiastical organizations in recent months reveal exact conditions and make it evident that the Indianapolis Convention of Fundamentalists will be the most outstanding and influential thus far in relation to the future course of events in this God-sent Movement. The time has come to rally unitedly to the support of the sacrificing leaders of Fundamentalism. The utmost sacrifice must be made in order to accomplish the purpose of God in this Movement and go forward to victory. Let intercession be continually made for the leaders, speakers, singers and all who have great responsibilities for the success of this Convention. Tell all of your friends who believe in "The Good, Old-Time Religion" about the rich things in store for them at Indianapolis and arrange for a large delegation to attend from your community. In the name of Jesus Christ and as a testimony for our Saviour; for the glory of God, the good of the Church, the real unity of believers and the faith of young people; to honor the Holy Spirit, the Holy Bible and our Coming King; all the readers of this appeal and their friends are most earnestly requested to be counted among the seven thousand registered delegates present at the World's Christian Fundamentals Convention at Indianapolis, Ind., May 26-June 2, 1929.

Yours for the Victorious Faith of our Fathers,
J. C. MCCASLIN,
Executive Secretary, Indiana Christian Fundamentals Association.

unappropriate to the Corinthians, at the time he wrote to them, or to the Galatians, or even yet to the Thessalonians). These Colossians are credited in the 14th verse with the "forgiveness of sins," in verse 13 with having been "delivered from the power of darkness and translated into the kingdom of his dear Lord." In verse 12 with being "made meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." And in the 8th verse their pastor has declared "their love in the spirit." And this was the "cause" of this prayer of the apostle in their behalf. The proofs of their genuine conversion are cumulative even to a demonstration. Hence, this prayer will be found of deepest interest to any who have like proof of conversion. Again! as in the others, we find all its petitions center in and radiate from knowledge. This time it is "that ye may be filled with the knowledge of his will." And this in order "That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing" (That is, pleasing the Lord in all our ways).

And this (as in the Philippian prayer) for "being fruitful in every good work." See! There is "Will," "Walk," and "Work." His will and our walk and our work.

But he goes farther for these in his prayer and compasses their probable sufferings and trials. He asks that they may be "strengthened . . . unto all patience and longsuffering with joyfulness."

And withal a constant "increasing in the knowledge of God" (himself). Have you noticed, beloved, how much of all this illumination is inward? Is it probable, that our present emphasis on the objective may be causing us to slur or slight the subjective in Christianity? Are we giving enough attention to the upper light and the inner life? Let us emphasize the mystical in Christianity.

Now, for the Thessalonians, we find two prayers of the apostle Paul recorded. Both are in the First epistle. We may note them in inverted order, as they possibly apply to two different classes in that same church. Some "lambs." Some "sheep." Please note that 1 Thess. 5:23 is a prayer of two petitions. But observe the title of address. "The very God of peace." There is probably always some relation of what he is about to ask for with what he ascribes to God. And all Scripture shows there is a very intimate relation between God's "peace" and the subject matter of this prayer.

This is

(1) Sanctification.

(2) Preservation.

In preparation for and anticipation of these they have already experienced a good work of salvation. He now prays this may be completed and that they may be continued in this state all the days of their lives. Such a conversion as is recognized in the first chapter of this epistle involves and includes their separation from the world, the washing away of their guilt, and the ceasing of their practices, and the implanting of the seed of God in their souls. And these three—separation from the world, the washing from guilt and sin, and the imparting of spiritual life to the soul, is sanctification well begun. And to be "sanctified wholly" is to have everything unlike this life of God purged from the soul. This makes possible continual and endless growth up into God. Like the cleansing of the weeds from the garden where the flowers have been previously planted, makes possible their bigness and bloom and beauty. Paul's faith assured them that He that calleth them to this experience will do it. And he also prays they may be blameless after they have received it.

Turning now to 1 Thess. 3:10-13, we are inducted more fully into Paul's prayer habits: "Night and day praying." This with other similar references suggest that, though he did ever: "pray without ceasing," he nevertheless had regular "night and day" seasons of prayer. Not only so, "praying exceedingly," for his many subjects, but with becoming fervor and earnestness for each case. For these Thessalonians, (1) That God might direct his way unto them to perfect what was lacking in their faith.

(2) That the Lord himself might stablish their hearts unblameable in love.

And that by making them to "increase and abound in love," both toward one another, and toward all men." That is abound in Christ's love of the church and his love for the world of sinners lost.

Light and Love, these two, we find, figure most prominently in the apostle's prayer for the household of faith.

For the Ephesians that the eyes of their understanding might be enlightened, that they might know the hope, riches and power of God.

For the Philippians, that their love might abound in knowledge and in all judgments.

For the Colossians, that they might be filled with the knowledge of his will.

And for the Thessalonians, he asked first for the perfecting of their faith, and then the abounding of their love.

And all these are to contribute to their walk, work, and worship in a state of established heart holiness, which is none other than Christ's love flowing ever through the purified channels of our being upon the fields about us to a fruitful life work.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you allow a girl from Peniel, Texas, to join your happy band? Some one is having The Herald sent to mother and I always read page ten and sure do enjoy reading it. I am fourteen years old. I go to Sunday school at the Nazarene Church. I go to school. I will write to any one who can guess my middle name. It begins with V and ends with N, and has six letters in it. Fannie M. Tisdial, I guess your middle name to be Marie. Also Martha M. Dudley's middle name to be Marie. If I am correct you write me. I think it is fun guessing the names, don't you? As this is my first letter I will close, hoping to read it later in print. Please, Mr. W. B., have pity on a new reader.
Edith Vandenberg,
Peniel, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I hope that you will permit me to write a letter to you and the cousins. I am thirteen years of age. I have brown eyes, dark hair and fair complexion. I am ashamed to admit my weight, but I weigh 103 pounds. I am in Junior High School. My birthday is September 13. Have I a twin? I am a member of the Baptist Church. I go to Sunday school, B. Y. P. U., Epworth League, and Church. I have a neighbor who takes The Herald. She is an old lady, so I spend many happy hours reading The Herald to her. I have four sisters and three brothers. My mother is living, but my father went to occupy his mansion above when I was only eight years of age. Forgive me for disobeying Aunt Bettie, but who can guess my second name? It begins with A and ends with A, and has four letters in it. Any letters will be appreciated. Love to all.
Hasseltine A. Coaker, Milby, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I certainly enjoy the Herald because it constantly points to Jesus and contains so many soul-inspiring messages. I was thinking too, how similar our life is to our radio today. In the evenings there are things broadcasted to interest all types of people—jazz orchestras, the latest popular songs, classical music, good plays, religious songs, etc. All we must do is to turn the dial to the desired entertainment and it is ours to enjoy. Thus it is in everyday life. We must determine from whence the source of our joy shall come; from God or the world. Of course there is no real pleasure except that which comes from God when our hearts are in tune with Christ's will. We live ten miles from our state's largest operating coal mine. The track from it crosses our farm. During the cold weather seventy-two box cars of coal are mined every day. It is a surface mine and all the work is done by electricity. The shovel which digs the coal picks up one ton of coal at a time and places it on a flat car. The shovel which removes the soil from the coal is much larger. I would appreciate hearing from any of the cousins twenty to twenty-five years of age.
"A Song of Praise."

In God we find our strength,
A rock and refuge dear;
Preserved are we in truth
So whom shall make us fear?

For God's sun and shield,
Salvation and our hope;
If all to him we yield
We'll ne'er in darkness grope.

Oh blessed be the Lord
Who daily gives to us
Rich gifts; be thou adored
Oh thou so marvelous!

Bernice Moore,
Velva, N. Dak.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I become one of your nieces too? This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. Mother takes The Herald and we feel that we couldn't get along well without it. I am nine years old. I go to the M. E. Church. I love Jesus and am so glad that he loved me so, that he died on the cross for me, and for every one whose ever would get under the blood by faith, and would it not be very unfair to rejoice in his cruel death unless we surrender all unto him, that he can have his own way with us for he knows best. Sure hope Mr. W. B. is out walking, as I would like to see my letter in print. I am a blond. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with L and ends with N. Aunt Bettie, sure hope Dr. Morrison has fully recovered.

Martha L. Whiteside,
702 Limestone Ave., Mart, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald, and I hope to see it in print. I am twelve years old. I go to school every day. I am in the sixth grade. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. I have light hair, blue eyes, am four feet, eleven inches tall, weigh ninety-five pounds. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with C and ends with E, and has seven letters in it.
Neta Cross,
Shipley, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you for the last time on earth, allow me to say a few words to all the dear readers of the good old Pentecostal Herald? It has been about seventeen years since my health gave way and I was laid down on my bed of affliction to work no more. We are in a strange country and acquainted with but few people. I once had many dear friends who were readers of the dear old Herald, and I humbly ask all who will to write to me once more and cheer me on my dark journey through this world.

Once I had a home so lovely,
Most to me was joy and rest,
But now 'tis pain and misery,
That fills my aching breast.

Once I had a father and mother,
And four brothers I could see,
But they have crossed the border,
All watching and waiting for me.

I am old and feeble now,
My head is bending low,
Soon I shall leave this world,
And expect to glory go.

Your old brother,
A. McClintock,
Shirley, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you move over please, and let an Ohio girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am thirteen years old. I have brown eyes and black hair and fair complexion. I live on a farm with my parents. I am the only child and sometime I am lonesome. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with E, and has three letters in it. Mother takes The Herald and I like to read page ten. I will answer letters that any one sends me. I will close and make room for some one else. Will tell more of myself next time.
Edna M. Hoover,
Rt. 2, Waterford, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I am again wanting some pen pals from everywhere, especially Canada and New York. I am a girl almost eighteen years old. I belong to the Nazarene Church and am saved and sanctified. I feel the call to the Evangelistic field as pianist and with God's help I am going to Vilonia Holiness School in the fall to prepare for the work. Our church here is just a few months old but we are doing fine. We have a good Sunday school and young people's society. I am secretary of the S. S. and vice president of the N. Y. P. S. We have bought us a lot and are planning on building a tabernacle sometime this spring. All cousins write me.
Bonita McDaniel,
220 N. 6th St. West Helena, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. I am sixteen years of age and weigh one hundred pounds. I have brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. My birthday is September 12. Have I a twin? My mother does not take The Herald but a friend of ours does and they let us read it. I enjoy reading page ten very much. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with R and ends with H, and has four letters in it. I go to Sunday school and church every Sunday I can. I belong to the Presbyterian Church. Write me. I will answer all letters received.

Gladys R. Weatherford, Porterdale, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my second letter to The Herald and I wish to see it in print. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I have blue eyes, light sandy hair, and fair complexion. I was fourteen September 11. Have I a twin? H. Lucile Johnson, I guess your first name to be Helen. Am I right? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with F and ends with S, and has seven letters in it. I have a small sister who is four years old, and I have a large sister who is sixteen years old. I also have a grown brother, he is eighteen years old. I am in the eighth grade at school.
Hazel F. Whitehurst, Back Bay, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. I have brown hair, light blue eyes, am five feet, ten inches tall and weigh 120 pounds. If anyone can guess my age I will write to them and send my picture. It is between ten and sixteen. Will some of you cousins write to me? I will try to answer all letters I receive. I will close hoping to see my letter in print.
Dorothea Mae Elrod,
Rt. 1, Oakland, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls. Here I come from the state of old Virginia once more. Come on, Virginia boys and girls, don't let all the other states beat us. This is my second letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. As my other one wasn't printed I will give a little description of myself. I have brown hair, light blue eyes and fair complexion. I am fifteen years old. February 26 is my birthday. Have I a twin? If so please write me. I get to read The Herald every week and I sure do enjoy reading it. My grandmother takes The Herald. I would like to correspond with some of the cousins, both boys and girls. Best wishes to Aunt Bettie and the cousins.
Ruth G. Cash,
Rt. 1, Box 97, Tye River, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you allow a girl from the state of North Carolina to join your happy band of boys and girls? I have blond hair, blue eyes, light complexion, height about five feet, and weigh ninety pounds. I am thirteen years old. My birthday is December 21. I am in the sixth grade and my teacher's name is Mr. Spencer Norman. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My teacher's name at Sunday school is Mrs. Dorcas Gray. This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. I hope to see this letter in print. My middle name begins with W and ends with M, has seven letters in it. Have I a twin? If so please write to me.
Emelis W. Gray,
Avon, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you accept an Avon girl? I read page ten and I sure do like it. I have dark hair and eyes, light complexion, height five feet, one inch, weight one hundred pounds. I am thirteen years old. My birthday is March 30. I will be fourteen. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. My teacher's name is Mrs. Dorcas Gray. I sure do like her. Can you guess my middle name? It begins with G and ends with Y, and has four letters in it. Have I a twin? If so, write to me. I hope Mr. W. B. is out for an evening ride when my letter arrives. Love to you and all of the cousins.
Thelma Austin,
Avon, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Another one of your cousins is knocking at the door. Will you please open the door and let her in? My mother takes The Herald and I sure do enjoy reading page ten. I am a girl fourteen years of age, five feet, two inches tall. I have fair complexion, have brown hair and blue eyes, and weigh about one hundred and sixty pounds. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with A and Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading the letters on page ten in The Herald and thought I would write. I am not going to school now but will go next year to High School. I'm fourteen years old, have light brown hair, and brown eyes. I'm five feet, seven inches tall. Mother takes The Herald and I sure enjoy reading page ten. I have five brothers and three sisters, but not all at home. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with H and ends in Y, and has five letters in it. I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when my letter arrives, because I want to see it in print.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I come into your happy band? I am a Louisiana girl. Although I have had all kinds of trials along the way, I am happy to say that I love our Savior, and am serving him every day in my feeble way. I realize that the Christian life is the only real, happy, peaceful life on this earth. I am teaching school and feel I have a great opportunity for doing good. Every day I do my very best not only with the literary work, but instructing the children along the way of Christian living. May each one be fine, physically, and happy in God's love, is my prayer. Charley H. Faulk's age is 63, last birthday.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a Louisiana boy ten years old. I live with my grandfather and grandmother. Daddy died two years ago, so my mother teaches school. I am in the fifth grade, and go to the Methodist Church to Sunday school. I guess that Lucile Johnson's first name is Helen. Grandmother takes The Herald. It is fine. Who can guess my first name? It begins with H and ends with N, and has five letters in it. I will write the one that guesses my name. I entered a contest and am expecting a Shetland pony in May.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VIII.—May 26, 1929.

Subject.—God's Law in the Heart.
Jeremiah 31:29-34; John 1:17.

Golden Text.—Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee.

Time.—About 600 B. C.

Place.—Jerusalem.

Introduction.—No lawless nation can either last or prosper; for without obedience to law chaos reigns. Blessed is that people that has a just conception of the dignity and worth of law. England's obedience to, and her respect for, her laws has made that nation strong. Mexico is weak, because she will not obey law. Her revolutions arise from disrespect for government. America is in danger because of disrespect for law. Not only is this true of what we term the criminal class, but of many who claim to be good citizens. On Sunday, March 24, I was in Crawfordsville, Ind. I walked through the business part of the city, and saw a number of stores wide open and doing business. The same thing can be seen in many of our cities. Shall I make that burn? Those men are criminals against state and national law. If a man violate one law, will he obey another law? Not if it suits his convenience to break it. Such lawless persons add nothing to the nation's well-being. They breed criminals and crime. Their absence would be preferable to their presence. For their own sake, and for the sake of the nation, they should be made to obey law.

Much of the Mosaic law is dead. When Jesus Christ died on the cross, the ceremonial law died also. In the offering up of himself he fulfilled forever all the Old Testament sacrificial laws. Paul (Col. 2:14) was referring to this system of laws when he said that Christ nailed it to his cross.

Inasmuch as the Jews were under a theocratic government, Moses gave them many civil laws that are no longer binding on any man or nation. For instance the law of the Sabbath. The penalty for its violation was death. Take the law of retribution: "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." Christ repealed this law when he said: "Resist not evil." We are no longer to avenge ourselves, but leave that to God. He says: "I will repay." But why were such laws imposed upon the Jews? Because they had just come out of Egyptian heathenism, and were themselves semi-heathen. In order to control and to civilize them it was necessary to place them under stringent laws. We hear much about cultivating sentiment in favor of a law before it is passed; but that is the sheerest folly. God's plan promulgates law first, and then forces men to obey or suffer. That is far better. His plan sets up a standard: ours gives nothing to work to.

When we come to the Ten Commandments we reach the moral code, something that will last through the ages. The first three are everlasting. Since they concern our conduct towards God, they will be binding forever. We shall possibly have little use for the fourth in the world to come. These four constitute the first table. Jesus Christ summed up this table in what he termed the greatest commandment: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind."

The other six constitute the second table, and are comprehended in what Jesus termed the second commandment: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

In our Golden Text the Psalmist, no doubt, meant to include all three tables of the law, as he was living when they were yet in force. For us the case is quite different. We need to hide these two tables of the Decalogue, with all other moral laws of the Bible in our hearts, that we may not sin against God. May I impress this one thought: "Ignorance of the law excuses no man" who has an opportunity to know the law. A man said not long ago: "I would not have done what I did, had I known that it was so strictly forbidden in the Bible." That was no excuse, for he could read.

Comments on the Lesson.

29. In those days.—Read the previous part of the chapter for an explanation. It is full of prophecies. Some of them were fulfilled in the restoration from the captivity in Babylon. That in verse fifteen was fulfilled in Bethlehem when Herod slew so many babies in his effort to kill the infant Jesus. The first ten verses of the chapter have not yet been fulfilled, but will be when the Jews return to Palestine just prior to the second advent of our Lord. That was a strange proverb in Israel: "The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge." Ezekiel (18:2) uses the same expression. See the second commandment. (Ex. 20).

30. Every one shall die for his own iniquity.—The time seems to be coming when God will no longer visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children. That will be a blessed day.

31. A new covenant.—This new covenant came through Jesus Christ. The text says: "With the house of Israel, and the house of Judah"—both kingdoms, all the Jews; but the covenant is yet broader; for it includes also the entire Gentile world.

32. Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers.—Referring to the covenant made through Moses at Sinai. This was to be a better and an everlasting covenant sealed with the blood of God's own Son. I was an husband unto them.—Had cared for them, and cherished them, as a good husband cherishes and cares for his wife.

33. This shall be the covenant that I will make.—Mark you, a covenant is two-fold—conditional. Jehovah's promises in this verse have meant little to the Jews, because they have refused to meet their side of the covenant. Jehovah met his obligations in the gift of his Son; but the Jews broke the contract when they rejected him. (John 1:11).

34. They shall teach no more every man his neighbor.—While the Jews rejected Jesus when he came to them in his humility; God says they will at a day yet to come receive him. This is in exact accord with Paul in Romans 11:26: "And so all Israel shall be saved." Not all the Jews who may ever live, but those who are living in that future day when that people shall return unto the Lord. Sinning Jews have no better chance of being saved than sinning Gentiles. John 1:17. For the law was given by Moses (through Moses), but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.—This is a glorious contrast. The law made slaves of men: Grace and truth set men free. The law led men to Jesus Christ. It was only a pedagogue. Jesus Christ saves men and teaches them the way of truth and eternal life. The law bound men: He makes men free; for "if the Son shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For the coming summer months I wish to obtain work as an evangelistic pianist for holiness tent meetings, camp meetings, or religious services. I am graduating from Asbury Conservatory of Music and have had two years of college work. I have had some experience in evangelistic work in playing for meetings, in special singing with my autoharp, in children's work, prayer meetings, etc., in personal work, in accompanying soloists, and in leading singing. The Lord has called me to preach and I have done some preaching. I am praising Him for the experience of entire sanctification. For reference write to Dr. W. E. Harrison, Professor in Asbury Seminary, or Miss Nina J. Ridgell, Director Asbury Conservatory, Wilmore, Ky. Open dates from June 5th to September 10th. Ada E. Shutts. Wilmore, Ky.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kinsey, song evangelists, can give some camp a date in July and August, should there be any who have not engaged their singers. They have had eight years' experience in evangelistic work and are very able helpers as singers and pianist. Address them, 450 S. W. 2nd St., Richmond, Ind.

THE GIRL WHO FOUND HERSELF.

By C. H. Jack Linn.

Here is a book from the pen of this gifted writer that will make a choice graduation present. It will be a gift that will be honored of God and may win a soul to Christ.

Hundreds of testimonies about this book have been received. The mail just brought this one from a young lady in Florida:

"Reading back over the introduction of your book, 'The Girl Who Found Herself,' I discovered your note asking for a word from anyone who found it to be a blessing.

"I can truly say, that in all my reading, your book was one of the sweetest I have ever read. It was surely a blessing to me, and I shall recommend it to others. After reading it I, too, feel that I would like to give just a word of testimony to his glory.

"Being a young convert of just a year, I have not walked very long in the 'way,' but there is glory there, and I will go on. I would like to say that your book has inspired me to a more open walk before the Lord. One of its revelations to me was the result of being a fearless example for him."

This book can be purchased for 50 cents from The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky.

TWO TRAMPS.

By Amy LeFeuvre.

A story about a boy named Rollo, and his uncle, who find it necessary to tramp through the country in order to restore perfect health. To Rollo, Christianity is a very real thing. His conversations with his uncle and with the many people that he meets on his travels make an interesting and helpful story. Wherever these two tramps go they scatter sunshine, fresh hope and comfort.

Amy LeFeuvre has long been noted for her purposeful stories and this one is no exception to the many other books that she has written.

Read Two Tramps. It will be a real refreshment to you. The regular price of the book is $1.50, but we have listed it in our Special Sale at 60c, postpaid.

SEEING THE FUTURE

BY CHRISTABEL PANKHURST

A book that evangelical believers will read with keenest interest. The Sunday School Times says it "is her greatest one, ... the conclusions of a brilliant mind, a devout Christian, a famous authority on social and political problems, and one who writes under the mastery of a great conviction." Be sure to read these discriminating studies of prophecy and the signs of the times, giving a satisfying and Biblical solution to the problems of this troubled world and of the individual Christian.

BREAD OF LIFE BOX

Contents: 115 slices, made of the finest of Wheat, mixed with the Water of Life and enriched with the sincere Milk of the Word. Unleavened, buttered on both sides, and richly spread with honey out of the Rock. Will not get stale. Good for your spiritual health. Try one.

A box containing 115 small cards, with a choice scripture neatly printed on each side. 230 texts in all. Beautiful box, stamped in gold also printed directions how to use. Excellent for a gift box.

Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it is received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer. 1 Tim. 4:4, 5. Alas, how few meals eaten by Christians are thus sanctified. Some of them ask a blessing on their food, but very seldom do we find one who reads the Word at meals. The Bread Box is an excellent way to introduce obedience to this precept.

Pass the box around at the beginning of a meal. Let each person take out a card. Then let each in turn read the verses. It will be noticed that the two verses on each card bear a definite relation to each other and teach an important truth. The order in which they are read often brings out this truth more forcibly. As each person reads their verses it is profitable that the others present tell where the verses are found.

Another excellent way is for each person to read one or two words of the text and let some one else quote it from memory.

Let one read a verse and another quote a verse on the same subject.

Let each person memorize the two verses during the meal and quote them at its close.

Pass the box around in your Sunday School class the same as at a meal. And as the verses are read discuss the truths contained in them.

Explain that it is just as important to feed on the Word in order to grow and be strong spiritually as to eat our daily meals in order to grow strong physically.

Most interesting and profitable young people's meeting may be had by using the Bread Box in some of the ways suggested.

In the home when friends and neighbors are gathered together pass around the Bread Box. How much better and more profitable than a "cup of tea"!

Keep one in your bedroom. Eat a slice for your meditation while dressing and going about your daily duties. Eat another slice before retiring to quiet your worries and give you a good night's rest.

Use the Bread Box freely but do not let it displace the Bible. You need the whole Word of God, for all was given that you might "Acquaint now thyself with HIM, and be at peace."—Job. 22:21.

BOYS ENJOY

Out-of-the-ordinary stories—stories of adventure. One of the most interesting stories we have read recently is "The Two Tramps." It would seem to be a book for boys, but really it is a book every one would enjoy. The tramps in this story are not beggars or men of low ideals, but tramps for Jesus. Order one or more copies to place in the hands of boys, at the special price of 60c.

THE PARABLE OF THE GOOD GARDENER.

There was a good gardener who decided to propagate the Delicious apple tree because he was a lover of its luscious fruit. He therefore procured a thrifty young tree represented to be of this variety and planted it with great care in his fine garden of fruits and flowers.

He cared for it and it grew rapidly and became a beautiful tree of promise. By and by it bore fruit and when it had ripened the time came for testing the quality of its fruit. But alas! the fruit was not that of the Delicious apple tree but proved to be of a worthless variety. The good gardener was bitterly disappointed and turned from the tree in disgust and blamed the man who had deceived him as to the variety of the tree. The bad fruit on the tree remained ungathered and fell down and rotted upon the ground. The next season he cut the tree down that it might not encumber the earth. By and by the seeds of the bitter apple sprouted and came up from the ground in large numbers. The gardener at first was disposed to cut them all down but finally concluded to leave one of the young trees and to destroy all the others.

The young tree thus left made a beautiful growth and the gardener, a few years afterward, examined it and said: "You little offspring of disappointment, I can't destroy you utterly. I will give you another chance to make good and to bear me a good Delicious apple and to propagate a fine variety of fruit."

He thereupon procured a cion from a proved Delicious tree, cut off the top from the young tree and grafted upon its stalk a new life. He watched it closely and soon was delighted to see that the graft had taken hold upon the stem and was opening its buds to growth. It soon developed rich leaves and begun a vigorous growth. But a few months later when the gardener inspected it he found, to his dismay, that some of the buds on the old stem below his graft had developed into long branches that reached above his graft, were already overshadowing it, and were threatening its very life.

The gardener said: "This will never do. The old nature is re-asserting itself and will kill the new life in my tree unless I act quickly." So he cut off the threatening branches on the old stalk below the inserted graft and thereupon the new life engrafted upon the old took on new vitality and grew unhampered by the old tree.

In a few weeks the gardener returned to inspect his engrafted tree and found that other suckers had sprung from buds on the stem lower down and were outgrowing the graft by tapping the source of supply of sap before it reached the graft above. The poor graft being cheated of its supply of food, was starving and was making but feeble growth. Seeing this, the gardener said: "I see the old tree is seeking to kill the new one and I will have to disarm it." So he cut off every growing sucker that appeared and in addition he searched the stem for every bud and cut them all out down to the roots of the tree. "Now," said he to the graft, "you will not be hindered or molested any more. Hurry up and bear me some fine fruit."

Several years rolled by and it grew into a fine apple tree and bore a crop of fruit. And, behold! it was the luscious, juicy, Delicious apple that the gardener had desired from the first. It had no taint of the old bitter apple tree upon whose stem it grew and it bore the same variety each year but the size of the crop increased with the larger growth of the tree. And the gardener rejoiced that he had redeemed his tree.

This is the interpretation of the parable. The good gardener was God. The beautiful garden was the Garden of Eden. The fruit tree was Adam. The testing time was the day of his temptation and fall. The bad fruit was Adam's apple or his fruit of disobedience. The man who put the false fruit upon the gardener was the Devil. The cutting down of the tree was the death of Adam. The crop of bad fruit trees destroyed by the gardener was the human race destroyed by the flood. The one allowed to remain was the stock of Noah. The stalk upon which the graft was placed was a growth from Adam's posterity. The graft was a tender twig given by God from his tree of Eternal Life and in his own image. The new engrafted tree was man redeemed. The growths that hindered the life of the graft were the troublesome sprouts of depravity coming from the buds of the old stock of sin. The fruit produced was the fine delicious apples of Love. God, to redeem man, had to give a branch of himself, Jesus Christ, his Son, to be engrafted upon the old fallen nature of man that he might grow into a new creature.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH METHODISM?

Statistics do not prove everything, but they do reveal some things. I well remember, not so many years ago, when, as a church, Methodism could point with pride (maybe too much pride) and thanksgiving to her evangelistic fervor and revival success. Not all Methodists were even then what they should have been; far from it. But they did have revivals, and grew numerically at a goodly pace. I have been scanning the Church statistics for 1928 as released by Dr. H. K. Carroll and published in the Christian Herald of April 20, 1929. Below are some of the things thereby revealed, given in the percent of gain in church membership.

|---|-------------|
| Baptists, National Convention (colored) | 7.4 percent |
| Church of the Nazarene | 7.35 " |
| Disciples of Christ | 3.7 " |
| United Lutheran Church | 2.6 " |
| Baptists, Northern Convention | 1.9 " |
| Presbyterians, U. S. A. | 1.7 " |
| Baptists, Southern Convention | 1.5 " |
| Methodist Episcopal South | 0.5 " |
| Methodist Episcopal | 0.48 " |
| Roman Catholic | 2. " |

Thus we see that the Methodists, North and South, have done about one-fourth as well as the Roman Catholic. About one-third as well as the Southern Baptists. About one-third, minus, as well as the U. S. A. Presbyterians. About one-fourth as well as the Northern Baptists. About one-fifth, minus, as well as the Lutherans. About one-seventh as well as the Disciples of Christ, and about one-fifteenth as well as the colored Baptists and the Nazarenes.

Doubtless many will come forward with divers and sundry explanations, but after all has been said, there is just one thing that will really explain. Methodism has lost her passion for the salvation of sinners.

And that holy passion cannot be regained by means of Conferences or Conventions, or Surveys, or Religious Education, or Institutes, or Lunch-eons, etc., etc., etc. But only by Prayer and Fasting, together with Repentance. To your knees, oh ye Methodists.

Now Ready.

The memorial edition of Dr. W. G. Nixon's sermons is off the press. We are sure that his friends and the reading public in general will be interested in this series of gripping messages by one of the great pastor-evangelists of the day.

This book has ten messages from the pen of Dr. Nixon and a closing chapter which includes the messages delivered from the pulpit of his old church at his funeral held in the city of Detroit.

The many thousands who have listened to Dr. Nixon up and down the country will remember some of the themes presented here. Noteworthy are the messages on "Covenant Breakers," "The Benediction of Jude," the great sermon on Pentecost under the title of "Afterwards," "The Roadway to the Gates of Pearl," and the remarkable commencement message on "Character Building."

These messages are characterized by Dr. Nixon's terseness, his ability for striking utterance, and are accorded by the spirit of conviction which always controlled the man in building the gospel message.

The book is clearly printed, has an attractive binding, contains one hundred forty-nine pages, and is sold at the very reasonable price of $1.00 per copy.

IT WILL HOLD YOU SPELL-BOUND.

We miss many of the rich things in life because we don't know about them. "Remarkable Conversions," by H. C. Morrison, is one of the great books—full of rich things. The chapter on "My Arrest and Rescue" is the story of Dr. Morrison's conversion. You will weep and rejoice when you read it. Every sentence in the book is interesting and helpful, but for the good it will mean to your own soul, order a copy, if you don't read anything but the chapter mentioned above. The price is only $1.00, and after having read the book we believe you will say it is the best $1.00 investment you ever made.

PREPARE TO MEET THY GOD.

One billion eight hundred and four million souls plunging, dashing, in a terrifying mad throng rushing toward and over the precipice only to gain that keen, piercing, clarified sense of those tormenting and everlasting relationships of a damned soul which eternity alone can reveal! Awake! a human landslide of one hundred thousand souls leap into the tormenting flames of hell each day. A glacier of humanity moving rapidly as the nations rush toward the wail of despair. An avalanche of flesh in sin soon to be under the direct fiery wrath of a just God! Why will you join this spirit-suicidal stampede who are hell bound with no hope of ever gaining freedom from the boiling moulten mass of sulphuric waves dashing and breaking upon the fiery gates of hell, reverberating the intensified wail of despair in undying agony of sin.

Millions of earth with stiffened necks, brazen wills, rigid souls, petrified conscience, going on at lightning pace toward the rockbound coast just beyond the padded cells of the insane asylum. Watch them in their mad fury for self-gratification leap over truth, span eternal light, vault verities of future relationships, spring over conviction, sail over conscience, beckoning hell, blasting faith, casting away hope, plunging into darkness, destined fate, selling to Satan.

Look! thousands trapped, hell's coast enlarging to receive another million souls every ten days. Eternity! What will eternity reveal? The covering of sin drawn back from this panic of souls in its terrifying mob lurching, mad concourse of insane, adulterous, malicious, deceived and doomed souls driving seventy heart beats a minute toward this pandemonium of abused, passion hammered, hell awakened, damned humanity. Souls plowing, furrowing, coursing their lives to the threatened hazardous, chained seat of the hell-bound train as a prisoner, outcast and mocked by Demons, while in this tornado of sin and corruption, this cyclone of pollution, and iniquity, this whirlwind of black, defiled, revolutionized, organized maelstrom of sin. Prepare to meet Thy God.

FALLEN ASLEEP

COLEMAN—MOON.

On the afternoon of February 22, 1929, a very sad and fatal accident occurred in East Liverpool, Ohio. While coasting, two little boys, Robert, age twelve, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Coleman, and Curtis, aged eight, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Moon, were killed, the sled colliding with a passing automobile. The impact was so great that they passed away instantly.

They attended the Sunday school of the First Church of the Nazarene and a double funeral was held there on the afternoon of February 25, 1929. Rev. O. L. Benedum, pastor of the church, and Rev. R. M. Ball, pastor of the Anderson M. E. Church, had charge of the services. In memory of the deceased their Aunt, Martha J. Coleman, offers the following tribute:

And the boys "were not for God took them."

The Master walked down the pathway
Of his beautiful garden above,
He looked and beheld all the lilies
So perfect, just like his great love.

The zephyrs of evening were passing
The perfume of flowers along,
The children, the glad, happy children
Were humming the sweetest of song.

The Master stood, bent on listening,
Then said, "To complete all the joys
This chorus must have before morning
The voices of two little boys."

So down to the earth sped his angel,
And straight to the coasting track flew,
He took Robert and dear little Curtis
Our darlings so manly and true.

To us who are left so heart broken,
He speaks in the gentlest of tone,
"Dear heart, you may think it cruel,
To leave you so sad and alone."

But along this life's rugged pathway
These boys would have been rudely pressed,
So I took them to shield them from danger,
So happy they'll be with the blest."

"Have faith, precious ones; trust the Master,
Their leaving seems so hard to bear,
But think of the one great home coming
You will meet in the land over there."

"There'll be no more bitter partings,
No more sorrows, no tears and no sighs.
But God in his wonderful goodness
Shall wipe all the tears from your eyes."

"Enter in blessed child, to the city,
Like the boys, how precious thou art.
I gave up my life to redeem thee
And from me thou shalt never more part."

SIT IN THE GATE, KING DAVID.
II Sam. 19:1-8.

Manie Payne Ferguson.

Sit in the gate, King David,
Tho' thy heart is breaking.
Thou art the servant of the rest,
They do not feel thy riven breast,
Thy presence may to them be blest.
Sit in the gate, King David.

Pour out thy song—sweet birdie,
Lovely nest lies scattered.
Yet this world needs that little throat,
A ring of cheer in every note.
The ache is hid 'neath feathered coat,
Pour out thy song, sweet birdie.

Wear well thy mask, lost mourner,
While the heart keeps bleeding;
For others have their sorrows, too,
No time to sympathize with you,
The lonely wail will soon be through.
Wear well thy mask, lost mourner.

Keep smiling on, dear mother,
When the loved are failing.
Keep smiling on thy little brood,
Nor let one blast of care intrude,
Weep to thyself in solitude.
Keep smiling on, dear mother.

Finish thy task, tired worker,
Tho' thou art so weary.
None knows but God the panting breast,
With cares and burdens long oppressed,
With Him in heaven thou shalt rest,
Finish thy task, tired worker.

THE PRESENCE OF GOD.

By The Editor.

Wonce read a tract with this title: "The Practice of the Presence of God." The central thought in this tract was, that we should always keep in mind that God is in the midst; that we are ever under his all-seeing eye.

Many years ago I read in an old book of sermons this paragraph: "A remembrance of the presence of God is the best preventive against sin. Choose that place to sin, where God is not." It profoundly impressed me. That, of course, meant that if God is everywhere we would find no place in which to sin.

Really, the thought of God, his mighty power, his holiness, his presence, his wisdom and mercy, his right to rule over us, and the fact that our glad submission to his will, and obedience to his commandments, always means our good and happiness here, and hereafter, ought to put a powerful restraint upon us in times of temptation.

When tempted, think of God, that he is present. Fix your thought upon him, his word, the gift of his Son, the presence and ministry of the Holy Ghost. Take time for thought, for meditation, for counting the cost, for figuring up the present, continued and final results of a wicked action. Never be in a hurry to commit sin. Think it over well and, remembering God, resist the tempter, repudiate sin, and go forward in the peaceful pathway of obedience and righteousness.

I have often preached from the text found in First Chronicles, 28th chapter and 9th verse. It reads thus: "And thou, Solomon, my son, know thou the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind: For the Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thought. If thou seek him, he will be found of thee; but if thou forsake him, he will cast thee off forever." David was approaching the end of his career. The words quoted may be regarded as his dying charge to Solomon. Where, in all the literature of the world, can you find more profound truth expressed in the same number of words! Let us remember that God searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts." What a restraint it would be to keep in mind the fact that God is present everywhere.

Somewhere in his writings, I think I have read where John Wesley said he would as soon curse and swear as to complain and grumble at his situation, conditions and lot in life. I take it that his thought was, having committed ourselves to the Lord, we are to feel that being in his will, our place and service are chosen by him, and that complaint against our conditions and work is to find fault with God who is controlling and directing our lives. To get some conception of the vastness of the universe, which is entirely beyond the grasp of the finite mind, and to remember that the God who created it has his eye upon us, knows our very thoughts, and that he is deeply solicitous for our welfare and happiness, and grieved because of our sins, our disobedience, and our failure to be at our best, that we may do the best, and get the best, ought to fill us with the holy awe; it ought to separate us from any desire for sin; it ought to create in us hungering and thirsting after righteousness; it ought to stir our souls with a holy passion to be at peace with God, to walk with him, to do his will, to have blessed fellowship with the holy Trinity. Let us live and labor with a profound sense of the divine Presence.

The Growth of The Churches.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH METHODISM?

DR. H. K. Carroll, in a lengthy article in The Christian Herald of April 20, gives us the net gains of the various churches in the United States in the year 1928. It is a most interesting array of figures, and well deserves a bit of prayerful study. We shall not undertake to give a full report as set down by Dr. Carroll, but wish to call attention to the fact that during the past year the Roman Catholic Church had a net gain of 360,153 members. The various bodies of Methodists had a net gain of 45,144 members. The various bodies of Baptists had a net gain of 375,842 members. The Nazarenes had a net gain of 5,445 members. Dr. Carroll's report shows further that the Roman Catholics have 17,214,844 communicants. Of course, it is understood that all children born in Catholic homes are baptized and are Catholics from their infancy; but they are well trained and comparatively few of them backslide from the faith. A Roman Catholic baby grows into a devoted Roman Catholic man or woman.

There are sixteen bodies of Methodists, with 9,164,720 communicants. There are fourteen bodies of Baptists with 9,088,449 communicants. These figures reveal the fact that there is not a hundred thousand members difference between the Baptists and Methodists of these United States, and yet, the Baptists have a gain of 375,842 in membership during the year 1928, while the various Methodist bodies numbering some 75,000 members more than the Baptists, have a gain of only 45,144. It appears from these figures that the Baptists gained something more than eight times as many as the Methodists. Dr. Carroll's figures show that the Baptists had a gain of 3,422 ministers, while the Methodists had a gain of 231 ministers. The Baptists had a gain of 1,868 churches, while the Methodists had a gain of 206 churches. These facts are given by Dr. Carroll, who is supposed to be the last word in accuracy in making up his reports of the growth of the churches.

It is my understanding, and I think it is generally supposed, that the Baptist and Methodist minister to the same classes of people. It is understood that these denominations do not seek people because of their wealth or educational standing, or neglect people because of their poverty or lack of educational opportunities. They carry their message to the whole people. They seek to make converts and bring into the church people of all classes. They claim to have a gospel message for the masses of humanity without any specializing for any one class. The question thrusts itself upon us, How is it the Baptists win eight times as many people to the church as the Methodists? Why do they have an increase of 3,422 preachers, while the Methodists have an increase of only 231? How is it that the Baptists during 1928 have an increase of 1,868 churches, and the Methodists have an increase of 206 churches? There is a reason for this very marked difference between two bodies so very near in numbers of communicants. Perhaps, there are several reasons. Will some one arise and tell us why the Baptist bodies in these United States are so far outstripping the Methodist bodies in increase of members, ministers and churches?

There is one other item in this report of Dr. Carroll's to which we wish to call attention. He tells us that the Church of the Nazarene has 3,054 preachers, 1,700 churches, 74,057 communicants; that for the year 1928 they had an addition of 119 preachers, 117 churches, 5,445 communicants. The Southern Methodist Church has 7,883 preachers, 16,743 churches, 2,580,885 communicants, a decrease of 54 ministers and 16 churches, with an increase of 12,923 members.

Will some one explain how it is that the Nazarenes with only 3,054 preachers, 1,700 churches and 74,057 members had almost half as many additions to the Nazarene churches for the past year, and Southern Methodism, with almost three million members, had a little more than twice the number of additions that the Nazarene Church has with only 74,057 members? The M. E. Church, South, has nearly thirty members to one Nazarene member, and yet this church so recently sprung up, and laboring at tremendous disadvantage, has almost half as many additions in the past year as the great Southern Methodist Church. It should be remembered that a very large percent of the people converted in the revivals and camp meetings of the Nazarene Church are already unconverted members of some other church, or unite with some other church.

The columns of THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD are open for an explanation of these remarkable inequalities. As we have said, there is a reason; perhaps a number of reasons, why these inequalities exist. Let some one, or several persons, arise and tell us why they exist. This subject is entirely too interesting and vital to be passed by without investigation and intelligent discussion.

THE CHRISTIAN MESSAGE.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Editorial Note.—In last week's issue we gave the first part of Dr. Ridout's article as published in the Chinese Recorder, Shanghai, in which the writer showed the following:

1. That the Christian message was fixed once and for all by Christ and his apostles.

2. That the Jerusalem Conference in setting forth what the message should be, evidently forgot that fact.

3. That the message must be more than Intellectual.

4. That the message must be more than Social. The Kingdom of God must find its center in Redemption more than Reformation. Editor.

THE MESSAGE MUST BE REDEMPITIVE.

Viewing our subject now from the more positive aspects, we would say:

First: That the Christian message must be more theological than philosophical, more redemptive than social, and therefore we must handle vitally the great truths of sin and redemption. I think it is a fact that in these modern times we are prone to preach to people as though they belong to every class except sinners. I was approached after preaching one evening at the Y. M. C. A. by a navy man who said that it made him angry when some preachers preached to him and his fellows as though they were all sinners and wicked! Now, I was not so sorry to hear the fellow express himself that way, because I really think that is our business—unless we make people feel and realize that they are sinners before God, they will be utterly devoid of any sense of need of a Savior. It is when people are stirred and cry out, "Oh, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me," that we have our best chance of pouring in the Gospel message.

It was a saying of Jerome that "he that hath slight thoughts of sin never had great thoughts of God." We must confess with Jowett that "We do not like some of the stern, bare, jagged words which our fathers used in their description of sin. There is a kind of psychology around today that is inflicting death wounds to our theology and a lot of thinking and teaching that would interpret human need 'as though it were a skin complaint and not a heart disease;' as a result of this expunged and devitalized theology 'the consciences of the people are being stroked with feathers dipped in oil.'"

It is a noteworthy fact that the preachers everywhere in every age and time who have been the most evangelical, the most successful in winning souls and whose ministry has blessed their age and generation have all been men who have held a vigorous Pauline and Johannine doctrine of sin. From Augustine down to our day this is so. The man whose doctrine of sin is defective will be defective all along the line of his theology, and undoubtedly one of the troubles of our age is a sadly defective theology of sin. Damage the doctrine of sin and you damage the doctrine of atonement; damage that and your Christology becomes impaired; damage that and the inspiration and authority of your Bible suffers also, and thus it goes on until all goes and faith suffers complete wreckage.

Thus are the words of Jowett: "You cannot expurge the theology and retain the morality; a devitalized theology creates a disabled and dispirited morality; impoverish your creed and you sterilize your morality."

Matthew Arnold has very powerfully said that "Sin is not a monster to be mused on, but an impotence to be got rid of. All thinking about it, beyond what is indispensable for the firm effort to get rid of it, is waste of energy and waste of time. We then enter that element of morbid and subjective brooding, in which so many have perished. This sense of sin, however, it is also possible to have not strongly enough to beget the firm effort to get rid of it; and the Greeks with all their great gifts, had this sense not strongly enough; its strength in the Hebrew people is one of this people's mainsprings. And no Hebrew prophet or psalmist felt what sin was more powerfully than Paul."

Again the Christian message must have in it a strong element of the supernatural. Isaiah the prophet is heard to cry out, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; He hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, and proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord and the day of vengeance of God; to comfort all that mourn." (Isaiah 61:1-2).

An ancient writer in one of his letters admonished his son to "think magnificently of God, therefore, my child, fear and worship and love God first and last." This thought should characterize our every attempt to present the Christian message. It should begin, continue and consummate in God. When was there a greater preacher of the Gospel and revivalist than Jonathan Edwards? He was one of the most magnificent combinations of metaphysician and evangelist that the history of the modern church records, and his power in preaching was that he thought magnificently of God and experienced the most extraordinary manifestations of God in his own soul. He gives a glimpse of some of his experiences in the following words: "I had a view that for me was extraordinary, of the glory of the Son of God. The person of Christ appeared ineffably excellent with an excellency great enough to swallow up all thought and conception, which kept me in a flood of tears and weeping aloud. I felt an ardency of soul to be what I know not otherwise how to express, emptied and annihilated; to lie in the dust and be full of Christ alone; to love him with a holy and pure love; to trust him, to live upon him; to serve and follow him; to be perfectly sanctified and made pure with a divine and heavenly purity."

The Apostles preached the Gospel message, as Peter states it, "With the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven" (1st Peter 1:12) and the annals of the Christian pulpit constantly reveal the fact that the most mighty and influential preachers of the Gospel in any land have been those whose utterances have been characterized by the supernatural. Too often we take those words of the Apostle Paul—"first the natural" out of its connection and we emphasize the natural and leave no place for the supernatural. It has been well said that when the Holy Ghost goes out, other ghosts come in, and too often this is true of the pulpits of our century. The Holy Ghost is lacking and there is a consequent absence of power and no manifestations of the Spirit of God in His Redemptive energies. One of the greatest needs I believe today in the homeland as well as in the foreign fields, is the opening up of channels by which the supernatural can flow. Too many are "Christians minus"—minus answered prayers; minus divine manifestations; minus special anointings; minus outpouring of the Spirit; like the Church at Ephesus (Acts 19:2)—minus the Holy Ghost!

Then again the Christian message must have about it the dominant note of faith. Somebody defining "faith" says, "By faith we mean that faculty by which we rationally discern divine things that lie beyond our present life and fixed natural reason."

If we are to be vital ministers of the Gospel, we must be great believers. David said, "I have believed, therefore have I spoken." When our thinking or preaching is fettered with doubts, we will never achieve anything in the spiritual realm. Paul said (Hebrews 11) "By faith we understand," and John in his Epistle speaking of the Christian faith says that, "God hath given us an understanding that we may know him that is true." When faith grows dim, the spiritual man wilts. There is no vision and no passion and when this condition of things seizes the minister or the missionary, things are going to become barren; the Gospel loses its charm and the harvest is nothing but leaves. A revival of faith in a real New Testament sense is one of the greatest needs of our time. An old writer has said: "Faith in God conciliates his favor, engages his protection, calls for his aid."

"Faith alone is the Master Key,

To the straight gate and the narrow road,
The rest but skeleton pin locks be

And you never shall pick the locks of God."

"Faith in God promotes the highest exercise of reason because it rests upon the most substantial and durable foundation. Faith takes in the sublimest truths and the widest circle of thought. Here are mines flashing with gems of richest lustre; here is a paradise where the tree of knowledge luxuriates with perennial fruits, and truths are budding now that shall effloresce in the sunny clime of heaven. Guided by the philosophy of faith we shall not stumble at mysteries nor at alleged contradictions between science and revelation. (Philosophia quaerit, theologia invenit, religio possident veritatem). "Philosophy seeks truth, theology finds it, religion possesses it," said Picus of Mirandola.

In conclusion: An eminent Bishop of the Church of England once said: "Our chief medicine for the spiritual diseases of the nineteenth century is a bold and unhesitating inquiry for the old paths, old doctrines and the faith of the days that are past."

What need is there today of the Christian message in China in this new age? Let me answer the question with the following:

At the Edinburgh Conference, 1910, (eighteen years ago remember!) a Chinese Professor made this startling statement: "The people of China are giving away the old, but they have not yet grasped the new. The minds of the Chinese are now empty and this is the time for Christ to step in. If you wait four or five years, or even three years, you will find such a change in China that the minds of the people will be blocked. I beseech you to take immediate steps. In five years it will be too late! Do not wait until it is too late as was the case with Japan. Take steps now."

Graduation Time is Near.

And no matter how many presents a boy or girl receives, we believe it is rare that they appreciate anything more than an attractive Bible. It is a gift, that if properly taken care of, will last almost a lifetime, serving as "a lamp unto the feet and a light unto the pathway."

Just at this time we have a limited number of copies of one of the lightest, thinnest, most convenient sized Bibles for a young person it has been our privilege to obtain. The size is about 4¾x7 inches, a fraction over ½ inch thick, bound in genuine leather, overlapping edges, silk sewed, India paper, a clear, readable type, chapter numbers in figures, references, maps, red under gold edges, and has the nonbreakable back feature. It also has the silk marker. Net price was $4.25. We are closing out these copies at a special price of $2.40 each. Don't miss the opportunity.

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER VII.

ITS ABSOLUTE DESTRUCTION.

WHEN the castle of Heidleberg was captured the enemy afterwards blew up its walls. But if you will go there today you will find the castle tower standing there in the weedy moss practically as strong and secure as in the days when it graced the castle walls. In the splendid joining of its stones and the hardening of the ancient mortar it had become such a solid structure that "instead of descending in a shower of rubbish it came down superbly a tower still."

Here is, therefore another reason, a seventh, why I commend this Book to you as the very Word of God, and that is because of its Absolute Indestructibility.

Said Arthur T. Pierson, "Nothing more marvelous in history can be found than the continued preservation of the Word of God despite the persecution it has encountered. It is at once the miracle of history and the history of miracle."

It was Spurgeon who told us of two little boys, one a very bad little boy and the other a very good little boy. The bad little boy went out to throw mud at the moon and the good little boy took a basin of water and went out to wash it off. But, what do you suppose the moon was doing all the time? Just shining on as usual and shedding its light over the darkened earth while the little boys were throwing mud and splashing water.

And so the Word of God, unharmed by assault and unaffected by the bitter blows that have meant to annihilate it "survive infidelity, outlive criticism and stands immortal, indestructible and imperishable," and sheds its benign influence upon a world still dead and dark in trespass and sin.

What other book has ever stood so impregnable amidst such storms of persecution and surrounding disaster and such hostile attempts of man and devil to destroy it? If it had been man's book it never could have survived.

All that human ingenuity could contrive, all that human scholarship could suggest and all that inhuman brutality could accomplish has been done to annihilate it, but it still endures, and stands unmoved amid the ages. It is exactly what William E. Gladstone, the great statesman of England called it, "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scriptures."

Every dart of criticism has fallen blunted and broken at its feet. They tell us that the birds in the harbor of New York beat themselves into insensibility against the glass from which the light streams in the Statue of Liberty. We can well understand how that is true. And so, as another has said, the creatures of darkness have assaulted this Word and sought to put out its eternal light, but they have only fallen stunned and defeated at its base, while it rises still from its rocky pedestal immovable and serene.

It seemed at times to its enemies as though they were about to triumph.

Tom Paine said, "I have gone through the Bible as a man would go through a forest with an axe to fell trees. I have cut down tree after tree; here they lie; they will never grow again."

Voltaire said with curling lip, "Another century and there will not be a Bible on the earth." But the century has gone and the circulation of this book would be one of the marvels of the age if we did not know that God was behind it.

More than 400,000,000 copies have been issued. It is printed in no less than 600 languages and dialects spoken by man. Twenty-seven different Societies are devoted to the task and more than 20,000,000 copies are issued every year. Three of these Societies send forth twenty Bible volumes for every minute of every working hour throughout the year.

It seems, indeed, as though the Bible has thrived and prospered on the hard treatment it has received at the hands of its enemies. You are doubtless familiar with the well-known story of the way the Irishman built his fence. When the time for settlement came the man he built it for asked him how high it was.

Pat said, "Four feet, sir."

"Well, what assurance have I got," said the man, "that it won't fall over?"

"Well, Sir," said Pat, "I made it five feet thick and if it falls down, it will be higher than it was before."

You can make your own application in this case.

"Every little while," as Hastings says, "somebody blows up the Bible; but when it comes down it always lights on its feet, and runs faster than ever through the world."

If I had to classify the different forms of persecution, the storms of which the Bible has had to weather, I would do somewhat as follows:

I. PAGAN PERSECUTION.

Celsus in the second century threw all the force of his mighty genius against it. Porphyry in the fourth century lent his keen, philosophical mind to the unholy attack. And Julian and Lucien and scores of others tried to drive it out of existence.

But what philosophy and satire and genius in general could not do, imperial and political power sought to do by other means. Javus Diocletian, the emperor of Rome, made famous, or rather, infamous, by ordering all Bibles to be burned, and because some Christians like John of Egypt could repeat whole chapters and sections of the Word, he further issued his bloody edict that all who owned the Book should be put to death. But the Book, it seems, had come into the world to stay and all the batterings of pagan powers of every kind made about as much impression as if you were shooting paper wads at Gibraltar.

II. PAPAL PERSECUTION.

This, of course, is of a different kind. "Papal Rome," says Saphir, "became the jailer of the Word of God." She locked it up from the common people and put the keys in the hands of the priests.

In England in the time of Henry the Fifth Bible reading was made a crime. A law was enacted saying, "That whosoever they were that should read the Scriptures in the mother tongue, they should forfeit land, chatel, life, and goods from their heyres forever; and so be condemned for heretics to God, enemies to the crowne, and most errant traitors to the lande."

We do not need to go back to the time of Diocletian to find the Bible consigned to the flames. We have had an Auto de Fe in the Twentieth Century. Two Thousand Bibles were burned recently in the plaza of Vigan, the largest and most important city of northern Luzon. These Bibles had been distributed in connection with a moving picture exhibit of Scriptural films. The Roman Catholic authorities in turn gave a similar exhibit, exacting as an admission fee one of the thousands of Bibles that had been distributed. About 2,000 gave this strange fee and then these Bibles were publicly burned on the plaza by the Catholic authorities. The result however was that on the day after the bonfire 3,000 additional Bibles were distributed by the representatives of the American Bible Society. Wide attention was attracted to the event, and what is going to be its possible outcome of this unique advertisement thus furnished the Word of God other than the furtherance of the Gospel in the Philippines. Yes, the Bible is here to stay and you might as well try to brush the spots off the sun as to try to sweep the Bible off the earth.

III. SCIENTIFIC PERSECUTION.

Then we must not overlook the fact that there has been the antagonism of Science; that a certain species of Science has stalked into the pulpit and sought to set aside the Word of God.

We know full well the debt we owe to Science, but Science should know its place and above all should learn a little humility from its own failure to solve the many riddles that have forever been laughing in its face.

Modern Science tells us it would take 250,000 years to count the atoms in a pinhead and that these are sweeping about each other like so many revolving worlds. It's an interesting piece of information, but will Science tell us anything about the mystery of matter itself that Plato or Aristotle did not know. Will Science explain motion to us and tell us how these molecules or electrons, as they call them now, ever began to move in the first place. Will Science tell Charles Darwin what life is and where it came from? Will it unravel the mystery of thought and resolve the riddle of self-consciousness? And if it renders a verdict, how does it know but that later Science will prove it false?

Science after all is but little more than the history of discarded theories. In 1806 the French Institute of Science had no less than eighty scientific theories on record every one of which was hostile to the Bible, but today there is not a respectable scientist in the world who will lend his name to a single one of them.

And so when these learned men of scientific method come running breathless into the pulpit and tell the startled crowd that this, that and the other thing can't be true because of what they have discovered, we are not going to be in a hurry to lay on the shelf the Old Book our fathers and mothers taught us to believe came from God.

The Bible puts the creation of light before the creation of the sun, and Science grinned sardonically and said it couldn't be so. But science in those days knew nothing about radium and helium or pitch-blende and perhaps other substances which glowed with radio activities that even in this day have not been discovered; nor did it know that light came from vibration caused by the cooling of heated bodies, and that therefore this seeming contradiction can find full explanation in the process through which the earth in its formative period had necessarily to pass.

They said that Exodus claims that the name Jehovah was unknown to the patriarchs. That is not so; but if it is and Exodus is a forgery, as they could have us believe, then the author of the forgery must have been a brilliant one indeed to have given himself away like that. The argument refutes itself.

They said no whale could ever have swallowed Jonah; its throat is not big enough. But I heard Frank T. Bullen, who knew as much if not more about the deep sea than any many of his day, say he helped to capture a whale more than 86 feet long in whose stomach, when they cut him open, they found a shark fourteen feet long and four feet in diameter. It may have been a whale that swallowed Jonah, but the Bible doesn't say it was.

They say that Moses could not have written the Pentateuch because at the date assigned writing and such literary excellence was unknown. And then some inconsiderate archaeologist dug up a whole town over there and found a library filled with books

THE DYNAMITE OF GOD.

Rev. Paul S. Rees.

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."—Acts 1:8.

LT was an intense and crucial moment—that moment on the green-clad Olivet slope immediately preceding the ascension of the Lord Jesus. Highly significant was the answer given to the query of the disciples regarding the restoration of the literal kingdom to Israel. Their eagerness for temporal power through the re-establishment of the Davidic throne had dulled the minds of this apostolic company to the spiritual nature of the kingdom that "cometh not with observation." It would seem that Jesus regarded their last-moment appeal as an uncalled for attempt to pry into the secrets of the Divine Mind. His reproof was not harsh but it was emphatic. "It is not for you to know," he declared, "the times and seasons, which the Father hath put in his own authority. But (what a glorious, compensating 'But'!) ye shall receive the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you." (R. V.)

Thus over against the authority of the Father, Christ sets, by way of distinction, the power to be communicated to the Church. That authority will take care of Israel's future as a people, and of all other prophetic interests, but this power must in the meantime become to the Church of the living God the dynamic of her success, enabling her to fulfill her appointed destiny in the world. A most remarkable pronouncement and pledge is this utterance of our departing Lord. It is the earthly valedictory of the Church's one and only Vicar. Analysis reveals three conspicuous facts upon which we may profitably fix our attention.

I. A DIVINE PERSON PRESENTED.

The Holy Spirit is a person; not "it," but "He." If that sounds dogmatic, it will have to stand. It will not sound thus to anyone who accepts the authority of Scripture. The Spirit's Deity and Personality are consistently assumed and implied in the teachings of Christ concerning him, as they are also in the references which New Testament writers make to him. He is "another Comforter," Jesus himself being the first; he is a "guide," a "teacher," a "witness," a "reprover;" he may be lied to, resisted, quenched, grieved, vexed, blasphemed; he illuminates, inspires, appoints, restrains, anoints, attests, empowers, possesses. In the scheme of salvation he has a distinctive role: an agent of conviction, regeneration, sanctification and preservation. No one, it would seem, but a hopeless twister of words and blinker of facts can escape the conclusion that the Scriptures assign to the Holy Ghost all the essential capacities, dignities and prerogatives of personality.

Now it is quite possible to acknowledge this in the field of theological discussion without having any vital grasp of the fact that the Spirit is a Presence rather than an influence. How real is he to you? That is the question. Or, if you prefer, how real is he making Christ to you? Dr. Daniel Steele, who combined the mental breadth and acumen of a scholar with the spiritual sensitiveness of a mystic, is reported to have said not long before his death: "I observe a growing feebleness of grasp upon the Holy Ghost as a reality." He was making a general observation touching Christendom. Let us be candid: that grasp, so far as large numbers are concerned, has been getting feebler and feebler. As a result, the Spirit is given small opportunity to work in our lives, manifest himself in our exercises of worship and give energy and direction to our programs of service. Would we see men seized with conviction of sin? Would we have the people catch a vision of the Christ as we minister to them? Would we witness displays of the glory and goodness of God in our sanctuaries? Would we have our churches inflamed with evangelistic passion and missionary fervor? Then we shall have to begin afresh to recognize and magnify the Spirit of God in the personal office which is his in this dispensation. If the ascended and enthroned Lord Jesus is the Head of the Church, the outpoured Holy Ghost is the Administrator of the affairs of the Church, sanctifying its membership and presiding over its various blessed activities.

II. A DIVINE POWER PROMISED.

Significantly linked with the presentation of the Person is the pledge of the Power. The two cannot be separated. The Holy Ghost is power. Pentecost is dynamic. But what kind of power have we here? Contrary to an exceedingly popular notion, it is not merely "power for service." This may be seen from two or three plain facts. To begin with, these disciples were already in possession of a generous measure of such power. I cite you to Matthew 10:8 and Mark 6:13 and Luke 10:19—passages dealing with extraordinary successes in the arena of religious conflict and service. The Master's Paschal discourse, moreover, and his High Priestly prayer (John 14, 15, 16, 17) made clear that these men had need of an enablement to be as well as power to do. We moderns need a deeper reading of the meaning of Pentecost. The view that the Baptism with the Spirit is simply an endowment for conquest on the field of Christian service overlooks the believer's need of a power working inwardly, purging his affections, slaying "indwelling sin," submerging self in full and final submission to God and spiritualizing his entire outlook upon life.

The disciples had power to perform; they needed power to be pure—internally, abidingly pure. They could heal the sick, cast out devils and even raise the dead, but they lacked sufficient grace of character to rule their own spirits without jealous bickerings, narrow intolerance and cringing fears. What they needed, indeed, what Jesus insisted they should have, was power to live on the lofty level of His "new commandment"—love to God and man flowing uninterruptedly from a pure and perfect heart.

"I knew Christ," said George Fox, "and he was very precious to my soul. But I found something within that would not always keep patient and tender and kind. I did what I could to keep it down but it was there. I besought the Lord to do something for me, and when I gave him my all, he came in and cast out all that would not be patient, tender and kind. Then he shut the door." George Fox had the power of purity which cannot, and must not, be dissociated from the Spirit-filled life.

Then there is the objective phase of Pentecostal power. Fairness in exposition of the Master's words and in recognition of the facts of experience compels the conclusion that with this power of a holy character and life there comes a new and mighty equipment for doing the work of God. If ever a company of men needed to be girded and panoplied with strength above the mortal, it was this group out of the midst of which Jesus was about to be lifted. Behind them a Cross, symbol of shame! Around them a bitterly prejudiced Judaism and a proudly pagan Romanism! In front of them the staggering task of world evangelization! And upon them, in the presence of these tremendous odds and obligations, a crushing sense of their limitations! At just such a critical moment and into just such trembling hearts breaks the pledge of power from on high. The indwelling Spirit of God, under Whose governance they shall go forth, will make them masters. He will give teeth to their testimony, might to their ministry, life to their labors, power to their prayers, energy to their enterprises, soldierliness to their struggles and a coronation to their conquests. And he will do this for us, for the "promise is to you, and your children, and to them that are afar off." Oh, beloved friends, he, the Spirit of Holiness, is the Spirit of Power! Not to have him in fullness is to be inadequately equipped to meet the exactions of life.

III. A DIVINE PURPOSE PROCLAIMED.

Mark well the march of the Master's thought. The Holy Ghost having come, "ye shall be witnesses unto me." Let me put it this way: The purpose of the Baptism with the Holy Ghost, as regards the internal state of the heart, is to purify, to create Christ-likeness. The purpose of that baptism, as regards the external projection of the Gospel, is to make competent and convincing witnesses for Christ—competent because they know whereof they speak, and convincing because they speak so gladly and so glowingly that which they know.

Witnesses to Christ must know him. They must know more than the historic or theologic facts about him. They must know him personally, vitally, intimately, by knowledge that is born of experience, self-evident and undoubted. They must know him in his indwelling of the heart and his complete mastery of the affairs of that heart. And how? He has told us: "At that day (the day of the Spirit's outpouring) ye shall know that I am in my Father, and ye in me, and I in you. (John 14:20). Obviously it takes the Baptism with the Holy Spirit to reveal Christ within us—Christ the Savior, Christ the Sanctifier, Christ the Conqueror—and thus qualify us in the Pentecostal sense as “witnesses.”

In his excellent little booklet entitled “Back to Pentecost,” Dr. C. J. Fowler relates an incident that is much to my point. A gracious revival was in progress in the Methodist Church of a New England town. In that church was a lady whose conversion was doubted neither by herself or by others. Concerned for the success of the meeting and the spiritual well-being of the towns-folk, she devoted a certain amount of time from day to day to house-to-house visitation. One afternoon she was impressed to go up to the office of a young lawyer with whom she had only slight acquaintance. It was with great trembling and reluctance that she climbed the stairs and knocked at his door. The young attorney invited her in and courteously offered her a chair. She declined. In brief words she told him why she had come to see him. At once she found herself under the cross-examination that she had feared, though she had not dreamed that the questions would be of the character they proved to be.

“Madam,” he asked, “aren’t you a Methodist?”

“Yes, sir.”

“Do not you Methodists believe in sanctification?”

“Why—y-y-yes,” came the embarrassed and hesitant reply.

“Excuse me, madam, are you sanctified?”

“No.”

“Well, madam, I can’t talk longer with you. When you get what you ought to have, you may come and exhort me.”

With that almost rude retort, he bowed her out.

It was a bitter blow. Humiliated and yet convicted of her need, she went directly to her home. She decided to do no more personal work until her own soul was brought into full conformity to the will of God. In great earnestness she threw herself before God, confessing her lack and praying for immediate sanctification. She soon made the glorious discovery that the God Who calls his dear children to entire sanctification is faithful to perform the work and impart the grace. In the first flush of her great joy she did not think of the lawyer, but soon his face came before her. At once she set out for his office, climbed the stairs with a glad heart, opened the door without the formality of a knock, and greeted him with the glowing announcement: “I’ve got it.”

The effect was electric. The bright young fellow broke down completely and gave his heart to God.

The story may have the stamp of the extraordinary upon it, yet it illustrates the order of our Lord: the Church sanctified that the world may be led to believe; the Church filled with the Spirit that it might be a vital and a virile witness.

I conclude by sounding a very personal note. Have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed? The Pauline question is still a valid one. Has your inmost being been subjected, voluntarily, to the purging fires of some “upper room” with God? Have you passed from weakness to strength? Have you a heart set aflame for the winning of souls. Have you learned the blessed secret of abiding spiritual victory? If not, will you now receive the gracious fulfillment of the Savior’s words? Do you now welcome the heavenly Guest he presents and the mighty anointing he promises? Let the Spirit of God take possession of your entire being. Let him have you and hold you in storm and in calm. Let him guide and guard you and gird you—guide you in the moment of perplexity, guard you in the hour of danger and gird you in the day of battle. He will do all this. He will do immeasurably more.

Five Signs of Clear Leadings.

E. E. SHELHAMER.

WE are living in an age when the air is charged with evil spirits and it is difficult at times to know the difference between the voice of God and the “angel of light.” When a leading or impression is from God it will harmonize in at least five respects. There will be five sign-boards pointing in the same direction—five beacon lights all in a line.

First, the plain teaching of the Word—not merely a single passage here and there but the general teaching and tenor of the entire Scriptures. It is wrong to pick out a word or verse here and there to make it confirm a certain notion or teaching. This is what is called “wresting the Scriptures.”

Second, the clear direction of the Spirit. The Holy Spirit never contradicts any portion of the Word. He harmonizes now with what he originally dictated thousands of years ago. He never repudiates former leadings that were once clear and satisfactory. He never leads one to become agitated or in a hurry when making a decision. If confused he will give one plenty of time to hold still until the clouds clear away.

Third, Providences. John Wesley said that “God was in his providences the same as in his grace.” Circumstances will often help one in going in the right direction. Dear reader, you will not need to knock a door down or pry it open to do the will of God. He says, “I will guide thee with mine eye.” If a door of usefulness does not open gently do not batter it down but wait, yes, wait! It may be that a better and larger field will open up.

Fourth, Christian Counsel. When God is leading, you are always safe in conferring with and seeking advice from those who are spiritual and faithful to your soul. But it is a bad sign on your part if you avoid those faithful leaders and prefer to keep your plans hidden, or go to those who will pamper and humor you. Remember, “in the multitude of counsellors there is safety.”

Fifth, Good common sense. God never leads one to do indecent and outrageous things. All that he demands will appeal to sound reason, purity of life and honesty with your fellow creatures. You have reason to doubt your leadings if they bring a reaction and make you feel cheap afterwards.

Duty calls in but one direction at a time. When there is confusion and uncertainty as to which course to take, the proper thing to do is to hold still and do nothing, absolutely nothing. A faithful God will not require you to decide or act until the mist clears away. When there are but two things left to do, do not pursue either course until you feel equally clear to abandon one or the other. To insure Divine Guidance always be sure of aiming at just one thing—the glory of God. When there is no unsanctified ambition or self-interest at stake, the soul can afford to wait God’s time and then unhesitatingly move forward. As one has said, “Be sure you are right, then go ahead.”

Blood Atonement.

One who has been a missionary among the South American Indians, tells of their pitiable state. They speak only their own language, not Spanish or any other, and the gospel has not yet reached them. They know nothing of Christ and his atoning death. But they believe in a blood atonement! When there is a drouth, a pestilence, or some untoward condition, they say, “Blood must be shed!” Perhaps they go to war, and shed blood that way. More likely, they make a sacrifice of their own. Probably the most beautiful girl in the tribe! But, blood must be shed to appease the wrath of their deity! Knowing nothing of the love of God which gave his only begotten Son to die for their sins, they resort to these things! And, without any outside knowledge to suggest it to them. Something tells them that sin calls for blood atonement! It takes the intellectual, educated, scientific sinners to repudiate the blood of Christ, and talk about “a slaughter house religion!” As between the two, which is farther from God?

He is Risen.

REV. ROBERT L. SELLE, D. D.

Christ has risen from the dead;
He is risen as he said.
Angels rolled the stone away
From the place where Jesus lay.
He came forth, the Living One,
With his greatest work well done.

The early morning found his tomb
Opened wide and shorn of gloom.
He who is the Prince of Life
Reigns supreme and without strife
Over death the grave and grief—
Without rival he is Chief!

As he rose so we shall rise,
Taking from death its only prize;
And as he lives so shall we live,
Everlastingly to give
Praises to the Matchless One
For the power of his Son.

Collapse of Evolution.

This book has been on sale for some time. It was written by Prof. L. D. Townsend, D.D., S.T.D., M.V.I. Dr. Townsend was a profound scholar and he went deep into the subject of Evolution. He has produced a little volume of 125 pages of clear, reasonable, powerful argument and proof against the whole theory of Evolution. It should be in the home and read by the people all over this nation.

It is well understood that the prominent evolutionists have been infidels, or at least, skeptics. No modern theory introduced among men has had such tendency to destroy the faith of the people in the inspiration of the Scriptures, in fact, in the existence of God, as has Evolution. It undertakes to account for the universe, as we find it, without an intelligent, personal Creator. This book by Dr. Townsend is invaluable. We wish THE HERALD readers would buy it, read it, circulate it, advertise it, broadcast it, and help to save the young people of the rising generation from the blight of the infidelity that is being produced throughout the land by the teaching of Evolution. The book may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for $1.00.

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XX.

HUSTON TAKES UP WORK IN THE CONFERENCE.

At the end of six delightful months Huston severed his relationship with his Tabernacle congregation, bade his old professor good-bye, went with his wife for a visit to her people in Fort Worth. He spent the vacation period in revival meetings and, in the fall, returned to the East, to the bounds of the old conference in which he had been raised, and went up to the meeting of the Annual Conference. He was urged to join, but hesitated; in his counsels with one of the district superintendents, or presiding elder, I am not sure which, it was understood that he should take quite an important charge for the year as a supply.

On going to the charge he found it the second church in a wide-awake growing little city by the name of Goodwill. In a few years, because of some important stone quarries, it had sprung up from a village to some fifteen thousand population. In addition to the two railroads touching the place, two others had been surveyed, some large factories were being built because of the excellent facilities for distribution when the four trunklines should lead out from this center.

Huston found a congregation of some three hundred people, poorly organized, in a very inferior and neglected church building, who had for several years had for their rapidly moving pastors young men of small experience and little adaptation to such places. The people were quite discouraged and greatly pleased to receive for their pastor a man of such fine appearance, kindly disposition, and unusual preaching ability, as Huston proved himself to be. They responded readily to assist in repairing and refurnishing the parsonage. Huston's wife, a woman of remarkable tact and adaptation, soon had the women well organized, and the church with new courage and zeal, rallied its forces and moved forward full of hope for better days.

It is remarkable how a man full of life in the ministry can impart something of his faith and enthusiasm to his people. Huston soon had his congregation alive, aggressive and reaching out for larger things in usefulness among the common people where the church was located.

The matter of a new church was directly under consideration; many of the people of small means and large desires, were eager for the erection of a larger and more modern church for the care of the Sunday school and the accommodation of the constantly increasing congregation.

In this congregation was one of the leading bankers of the city. His father, a prominent and wealthy citizen, had been the chief factor in the building of this church, and for years had been its principal supporter. It was because of this fact that the banker, although one of the wealthiest and most important citizens of Goodwill, still held his membership at Bethel, the name of the church.

Mr. Belser, our banker, comparatively a young man, had graduated a few years ago from one of the eastern universities, and had readily and eagerly taken up with the theory of Evolution. He was intensely modernistic in all of his views, with reference to the creation of the universe, including mankind, and had no sympathy with what was known as fundamentalism. He looked upon the people with whom he associated in his church relations, as a bit too ignorant to involve themselves in modern thinking, and remained with them simply because of his father's relationship with that church and, at the earnest entreaty of the people, and one or two young manufacturers who promised to become very important men in the business life of the city, and at the suggestion of the leading men and officials of the conference who admonished him to take up the work of his father, support old Bethel, and nurse it into an important second charge in the city.

The banker was not at all pleased with Huston, his spirit of independence, the frank and easy way in which he met men of wealth, his devotion to Bible truth, his insistence on experimental religion, his apparent fondness for the more spiritual members of his church, his deep sympathy for, and careful interest in, the poor, along with his powerful preaching of holiness of heart and righteousness of life, did not appeal to Mr. Belser. He had been used to the pastors of Bethel church approaching him as if he were some superior being. He generally outlined to them his views of how they should conduct the affairs of the church, and had found them quite ready to respond to his suggestion and wishes. When he undertook to express himself in this way to Huston, the new pastor arched his eyebrows, smiled at first and, as the banker proceeded, he became amused and laughed aloud. This was very offensive to the banker. He was not at all friendly to the idea of enlarging the old, or building a new church, as he felt sure he would be expected to make a very large financial contribution to such an enterprise.

Early in the Conference year Huston held a great revival, preaching twice a day, excepting Saturdays, for four weeks. The church was crowded at the evening services, and frequently large numbers of people were turned away for lack of standing room in the church. Numbers of persons were converted, others professed to be wholly sanctified; there were 147 additions to the church at the close of the meeting.

One of the unpleasant features of the revival to several of the leading pastors of the city, who had been telling their people that the days of revivals were passed, was the fact that quite a number of the members of various churches attended Huston's revival, went to the altar, received a great blessing and annoyed their pastors by telling them that the days of revivals had not passed, pointing to the wonderful meeting at old Bethel church as proof of the fact that it was possible to have gracious times of refreshing from the Lord, and a widespread, deep interest among the people, if you had a faithful preacher of the gospel in the pulpit.

Huston's Sunday school grew to such proportions that when the springtime came on he ordered a number of tents which he placed under the shade of the trees at the back of his church, for rapidly growing Sunday school classes.

Our wealthy banker was outraged when Huston announced a five-days' holiness convention to be held in Bethel church. He had with him in these meetings several old-time Methodist preachers who were famous heralds of a full salvation gospel. People came from far and near; cots were placed in the Sabbath school tents to accommodate the brethren, and the spare rooms of the community were filled with visitors. It was a time of great grace. Many of Huston's members entered into the Canaan life, while others from each of the several churches of the various denominations in the city witnessed to being cleansed from sin.

The convention, with its glad songs, its happy shouts, and powerful sermons on the full redemption from sin made by the Lord Jesus, greatly disturbed some of the dignified pastors, at the same time, aroused real indignation among the rich, dancing, card-playing, theater-going members of the various churches, who felt outraged that any one should preach such a heresy as that, the blood of Jesus Christ could cleanse from all sin, or anyone should claim that they had experienced a full cleansing of their hearts by the atoning merit which Christ had wrought upon the cross.

The tall, strong, scholarly, unafraid Huston moved calmly and kindly among the people with head erect, with friendly grasp and helping hand to all of his fellowbeings, especially those who were in need.

The banker had a quiet counsel with the elder, or superintendent of the district, which ever it happened to be, and it was definitely understood that Huston would not be returned to old Bethel the next conference year to disturb the peace, not only of that church, but to interfere with the quiet, religious life of the entire city.

Just at this juncture, oil was discovered in vast quantities in Texas, and Huston had a most liberal offer for the lease of the five hundred acres he had received from the bankrupt cattleman, with an additional arrangement that he should have a generous percent of all oil that might be found on his land.

He made a hasty trip to Texas and closed a contract with the oil men that furnished him with a handsome sum of money. These operations were unknown to the people of Goodwill, who were not aware of the fact that Huston owned any land in Texas, and they were greatly surprised when he purchased five acres of beautiful land just outside the city limits, fronting on the main street, for which he paid cash.

Huston was not a pulpit ranter; he made no attack upon churches or church officials, was hardly ever heard to refer to the unbelief and worldliness in the churches; he preached the Bible, the wisdom of it, the truth of the Word of God, the greatness of the Creator of the universe, his deep and abiding concern for mankind, the wondrous love that provided a scheme of salvation; of a Christ who had come into the world, his love for the sinful and outcast, his gracious spirit of forgiveness, his power to redeem the lowest and most degraded in sin, and lift them into sainthood; the presence of the Holy Ghost, and his wonderful work among men.

He preached on the importance of regeneration, righteous living, love for fellowmen, entire consecration, the gracious cleansing and sanctifying power of the blood of the Lamb slain for the redemption of men from sin.

Huston was not given to antics in the pulpit. There was dignity and ease and wonderful unction and glow about him that drew, held, fascinated and convinced his hearers. Is there anything in the world more interesting than the preaching of the gospel by a man who knows and feels, and is filled with the power of the gospel?

Isn't it strange that anyone should rise up with prejudice, hatred, and determined opposition to such a man, and yet, human nature is so depraved, the heart can become so bitter against the very thought of complete consecration and purity that, in almost every congregation, and all communities, there are those who will antagonize and, if possible, close the mouth of such a messenger of God.

By the time of the meeting of the annual conference, arrangements had been quietly made and definitely fixed that Huston should not be returned to old Bethel church; but a bright, young modernist, recently from an Eastern Seminary, conspicuous for its dissemination of skepticism, a man quite up with the times, should be appointed to Bethel, and under the leadership and, with the assistance of our wealthy banker, they would try to "save" this dear old church from the supposed fanaticism into which it was drifting.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

WONSAN, KOREA.

Greetings from far away Korea! In the kind providence of God I have been brought safely back to my native land, my family and my friends, in Korea. Our journey across the Pacific was not without its tempest-tossed seas, for several days the old boat rolled and rocked with an awful storm. We were all sick and longed for the sight of land. But through the comforts and the discomforts of the journey I was continually conscious of the presence of the Holy Spirit, guiding and protecting.

Landing in Yokohama, I made my way almost directly to Wonsan, where my wife and our six months old baby were waiting for me. Everyone says our boy is a fine baby, and I don't disagree with them, wish you could see him. My wife is spending some time each day teaching music in the Southern Methodist Girl's High School here in Wonsan, and is enjoying this bit of service.

I have found a glad welcome back home, and before I had reached my home was getting calls for meetings. I have already held two meetings and would be busy right now if I hadn't decided that it was best to take a little time off before beginning the spring campaigns. I begin meetings again April 9th, and already have dates made through June. The Lord has most graciously blessed in the meetings we have held; am enclosing some brief accounts. I take no credit whatever, to God be all the praise! I am sure, dear friends, that your prayers have helped to bring about these gracious results, and I am looking to you to continue to work with and through us in this way. If you pray more, God will be able to do more for Korea.

I am not forgetting what you friends have meant and do mean to me. I love you, and often I get real homesick to see my American friends. Still I am very happy out here. I covet your prayers for my people, and for the work that I am trying to do. I want to be so true to my Master that my every effort will count for Him, and that I may be found faithful and busy till Jesus comes.

Yours in His service,

Robert Chung.

ST. GEORGE, SOUTH CAROLINA.

Revival services, which have been in progress in the St. George Methodist church, for the past two weeks, were concluded Monday evening. The services were conducted exclusively by Dr. C. F. Wimberly, the pastor, and Mr. S. H. Prather, of Henderson, Ky., had charge of the singing.

Great crowds attended the meeting, seating space being almost unavailable in many instances, and much good was accomplished. Many renewed their allegiance to the church and, as a result of the meetings, the membership was materially increased. During the last week business houses and offices were closed for the afternoon services.

Recently Dr. Wimberly conducted a series of meetings in Tallahassee, Fla., which were very successful. His services in this line are very much in demand, and he is constantly receiving calls to conduct meetings in different states.

Monday evening, Dr. Wimberly delivered his famous lecture, "Radio in Prophecy," and many who came to hear it were disappointed because the church was so crowded that they could not get in. This lecture is a classic in thought, learning, eloquence and application to the principles of the Christian religion.

Although Dr. Wimberly came to St. George as pastor of the St. George Methodist Church less than four months ago, his church has grown by leaps and bounds in interest, co-operation and attendance. Not only is he constantly striving to advance every department of the church, but his timely, scholarly discourses are attracting wide attention, and causing his hearers to think of the higher things of life. Members of his own church flock to hear him in great numbers, and many come from a distance to swell his congregations.—Orangeburg (S. C.) Times-Democrat.

REPORT OF EVANGELIST W. W. LOVELESS.

I have not reported any of my revivals so far this year, but I have been just as busy as I could be, and am now engaged in my sixth revival since New Year.

It would take too much space to give a detailed account of all these revivals, so will just give brief mention. My first was with Everybody's Mission in Pittsburgh, Pa. We had a number of cases of genuine salvation, and wonderful manifestations of God's presence. This was our second engagement with Rev. O. O. Watson, the Superintendent, and we found him and his people fine folks to work with.

Our next was in Celina, Ohio, with the baby Church of The Nazarene. Rev. Robert Goodwin is the pastor, and he is all that his name implies. He is good and bound to win. We had a fine meeting. Altars crowded several times, and a fine number saved and sanctified, and ten new members received into the church. We are to go back again as soon as we can give them a date.

Next we went to Lancaster, Ohio, with the East End Nazarene Mission. Rev. Flossie Smith has charge of this Mission, and Rev. J. W. Steen was my preaching partner. The place was far too small to hold the crowds some nights. Altar services were fruitful with many praying through. Some hard cases sought and found the Lord who had never been at an altar before. Praise the Lord for this!

Next we went to The Church of The Nazarene at The Plains, Ohio. We served this church as pastor from 1919 to 1922. Rev. A. J. Laird is pastor now. We renewed old acquaintances, and enjoyed the fellowship of these dear folks very much. We had a hard battle, but some real definite victory at The Plains.

Our next was with Sunshine Mission No. 2 in Columbus, Ohio. This is a new Mission, and God did certainly bless our labors and fellowship with the people there. A goodly number prayed through at the altar.

We are now just beginning with The Church of The Nazarene in Walbridge, Ohio. Rev. John Crider is the efficient pastor. The Holy Spirit put his seal on the first service, and the outlook is good for a revival.

We are not seeing great multitudes at our altars. We are not out on the line of worked up, high pressure, emotional, sensational stuff that dies out about as quick after the evangelist leaves, as it flared up while he was there and leaves the pastor with a problem on his hands that is discouraging to say the least.

More calls are coming in than we can fill. There is no place too small or humble for us to go and give them our very best; neither is any place too large for us to tackle by the help of God. We are ready for service anywhere and expect to keep busy and redeem the time that God has given us.

Yours for a clean, definite, small work, rather than a large, spectacular, shallow, frothy work that is a fizzle and a disappointment a month after the spasm is over.

GOOD MEETING.

The readers of The Pentecostal Herald will rejoice to hear of the Lord's mighty workings in the Pittsburgh Third Primitive Methodist Church. A revival campaign was opened in this church on the 17th of March to continue for two weeks with Evangelists Rev. Mary H. M. Ellis and Tillie McNutt Albright as special workers. At the very beginning it was evident that a big battle was on hand. The church was spiritually paralyzed with but a few faithful souls who had been holding on to God in prayer for a revival. Open sin on the part of several former members, and gossiping on the part of others had done their work in sucking the spiritual life blood from the body. For days it seemed as if this campaign would end as several of our last campaigns had ended, without accomplishing its desired end. The word was preached and sung in mighty power but did not seem to get in. Then a move among the young people was seen. One young man, who had been to Cleveland Bible School, but who had backslidden made the first move. What a battle he had to get deliverance but God wonderfully met him. His problem was a young lady who had taken the place of Christ in his life. He left the altar twice in an effort to persuade her to join him at the altar. But God wanted him to come through alone. Sister Ellis and several others went to deal with the young woman and what a vixen she proved to be. With her fiery words, her flashing eyes, and stamping feet she left the church unconvinced. But the young man was gloriously saved. The next evening he was at the altar again for sanctification. This was about all the move seen until during the Saturday night meeting. The real break came in this service when the young woman mentioned above had a glorious conversion about 1:30 Sunday A. M. That the break came at this time was noticed at the morning service when 53 souls were at the altar ranging from 8 to 45 years of age.

That evening the altars were crowded again. Seekers for both justification and sanctification filled altar and first row of pews. While the writer was dealing with souls at the altar he became aware of the fact that little groups of people had gathered in various corners of the room, and in little rooms at hand, and in the choir loft for prayer. Then he heard singing and praying in the basement. A few minutes later shouts of victory were heard and five young men walked into the auditorium. Four of them had taken a friend to the basement to pray him through to God (there being no room at the altar). From here on we lost count of the seekers.

The next week found seekers at the altar at every meeting. One service found a young, self-righteous disputer in the meeting who openly boasted of his goodness. He left the meeting unsaved. But at midnight there came a rap at the parlor door and when the door was opened here stood this young fellow under terrible conviction. He had been unable to sleep for fear he had received his last call. What a time he had to get through to God. Great beads of sweat covered his body, he pulled his hair until it seemed it had to come out. Once he left the study to throw out a package of cigarettes but came right back to begin to pray. Finally he was gloriously saved about 1:30 A. M., and the next service was wonderfully sanctified.

The last Saturday evening of the campaign Rev. Raymond Bush, returned missionary from Africa, came to speak to us. What a great altar service was held at the close of his marvelous message cannot be described. The altar was just crowded with souls, mostly young people laying their all at the Savior's feet for his disposal. The next day the evangelists departed from our midst, but the revival still goes on. The shouts of victory are still heard and we expect to hear the same voices shout the victory around the throne of God in the glory.

Yours in Jesus,

J. Edwin Zoch, Pastor.

"EVANGELIZING AMONG THE SCANDINAVIANS."

Evangelist H. O. Jacobson.

It has been my happy privilege for the past year or more to devote my entire time among my own people, (the Scandinavians) in traveling up and down the Pacific Coast preaching the Gospel of a full and free salvation in all of the Norwegian and Danish Methodist churches. God has given us a very blessed time, and souls have been saved and sanctified practically everywhere I have gone. Campaigns have been held in Vancouver, B. C., and Westminister, B. C., Everett, Wash., Seattle, Tacoma, Aberdeen, Montesano. In Oregon, we have held campaigns in Portland, my home town, after the holidays I have spent considerable time in California, holding meetings in San Francisco, Oakland, Eureka, and Los Angeles; in all these places with the exception of Eureka, we had gracious revivals, real old-fashioned Methodist times, with people praying through at the altar, and souls getting through to real victory.

Our Scandinavian people hold mostly to the old-fashioned faith, and both preachers and people have treated me kindly. In San Francisco, where Rev. M. L. Olson is pastor, they have had a continual revival since he came there last fall. He has had a fine ingathering of souls into the church. In Oakland, Rev. R. B. Langness is pastor, also superintendent of the California district. He and his family are delightful people and are doing a blessed work. In Los Angeles, Rev. J. G. Bringdale is pastor. I had a most wonderful time in his church and with his people. He has had crowded church services since he came there last September, and God is surely in the camp. Brother Bringdale is a firm believer in the doctrine and experience of the Wesleyan doctrine of full salvation and preaches it in the power of the Holy Spirit. He has a loyal people who stand right by him pushing the battle.

I must say just a word about the great field among our Scandinavian people up in Canada. After holding two campaigns up there during the past year, I am convinced as never before that no field offers such a marvelous opportunity. Thousands upon thousands are streaming in there from the Scandinavian countries, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, as there is no restriction for immigration. Very little is being accomplished for the salvation of these great numbers of our people. I could have large audiences of foreigners who could not speak an English word, naturally, I would have to speak to them in the Norwegian language. All these people have a good background in religious training, having been indoctrinated in the teachings of the Bible from their native lands. They are not as hard to reach as many others who have been deprived of those privileges.

I am feeling more and more a strong pull to devote myself to this great field. I believe God will somehow open the way both financially and otherwise to evangelize in this fertile field. In Westminister, B. C. I went in not knowing a single person in the city, rented a hall in the center of the city, put on a meeting, held every service for two weeks in the Scandinavian language, and the interest grew until we had a good hearing and some souls were saved.

At present I am in Kalispell, Mont., holding a meeting for Brother Hilmar W. Hanson, whom I had the privilege of leading to the Lord in 1917 in Lake Lillian, Minn., on my father's charge, at that time. He has a wife and a fine little child, his wife being the daughter of Rev. C. A. Anderson, the present editor of the official Methodist paper among the Norwegian Methodists. We have had a very fine meeting here for the past two weeks, large crowds and a wonderful time. Souls have sought the Lord for both pardon and purity. A large number of Lutherans have come and how eagerly they have listened to the Gospel of a full and free salvation.

This vast state of Montana is another fertile field for work among our Scandinavians. What we need in this day of ease and carelessness, is for God to raise up a crop of preachers who have a passion for the souls of men and women, who are willing to go out and rough it for Jesus; souls are dying and going to perdition because of a lack of a real vision. Settlements are to be found all over this state where the people are absolutely without the Gospel. I have never worked harder in my life and I can also say, I have never had a more blessed consciousness of God's presence that I am just in the work God wants me to be in, for so few are doing it. I covet the prayers of The Herald readers, that God may continue his blessing upon me in this great and most important work. Should there be any Scandinavians who live in places where the work of real evangelism is sorely needed, let me know, and I shall be glad to get in touch with you.

Help Some Young Girl

By presenting her with "Beautiful Girlhood" at graduation time. Girls have need of guidance and a helping hand all along the way, and because of this need "Beautiful Girlhood" was written. It is an inexpensive gift, and $1.00 thus invested may bring large returns, as we do not believe any girl can read the book without aspiring to high and holy things. Order a copy and help build character in some girl. Price, $1.00.

Fifty Thousand a Year for Dress.

Notice in one of the daily papers, the statement that the woman who aspires to be the best dressed woman in London, England, must spend at least $50,000 a year for her clothes.

It hardly seems possible that any human being could be so foolish and so vain as to spend so vast a sum of money in one year upon her clothing. But there is no limit to the folly of fashion.

I suppose there are no human beings more selfish and indifferent to the needs of others than those women who live only to gratify their vanity and pride in their own personal appearance. Dress, jewelry, display, and waste upon themselves seems to be their one thought and delight.

Thinking of this class of persons we are reminded of an unfortunate man who arrayed himself in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day. His end came suddenly. His robes and feasts, it seems, did not prolong his days. He could not build the windows and doors of his house in a way to keep disease and death from entering. "The rich man also died."

Jesus Christ spoke of this man and tells us that he "lifted up his eyes in hell." Poor man! He begs for a drop of water that he cannot receive. He has crossed the line of all possible hope. He is beyond help.

We frequently think of this man as we see the devotees of extravagant dress about us everywhere. From the wives and daughters of the very rich, to the poor working girl, striving to keep up with the changing fashions, to at least mimic the rich in their attire, seeking to satisfy their restless souls with costly apparel. Perhaps there are few things more ludicrous than the struggle of proud poor people striving to dress and prance and appear to be rich.

The soul is so constituted that it cannot be satisfied with elegant clothing, jewelry, feasts, travel, palaces, and excessive display of wealth. The soul must have the truth of God, which is the bread of life. Thomas Carlyle wrote almost like inspiration when he wrote, "The soul of man still strives against ignorance, misery and sin; still lacerates itself like a captive bird against the iron bars which necessity has drawn around it; still follows false shadows, seeking peace and good on paths where no peace, no good is to be found."

As we see the devotees of fashion on the streets, in the stores, yea, and in the Church of God, apparently given up entirely to worldliness and its shallow, deceptive pleasures, we recall the teachings of the Lord Jesus with reference to the future state of those who are not saved from sin. We reflect on the suddenness of death and the certainty of it, and we think of the contrast, the fearful change from robes and palaces and feasts to outer darkness, to the headlong plunge of a lost soul into the hell that Jesus Christ pictures in plainest speech.

Thinking on these things, we ask ourselves if we of the ministry are doing our duty? Are we faithfully warning the people? Do we lay the emphasis in our sermons at the proper place? Do we think more of the souls of the people to whom we preach than we think of ourselves, our financial receipts, and our reputation and popularity among our fellows? Are we ministers of Jesus Christ faithfully proclaiming the word of God, warning souls of the future state of those who trample upon God's laws and reject his mercy? Are we willing to bear criticism, to offend the rich and the wicked, to suffer, if need be, for the sake of the gospel and the souls of those to whom we preach? Are we making converts? Does deep repentance seize upon those who sit under our ministry? Do people frequently cry out when we preach, "What must I do to be saved?" Shall we be able to stand innocent and approved in that great day in the presence of our final Judge? Let us think on these things. The multitudes about us everywhere, need earnest warning of a faithful call to repentance, the forsaking of all sin, and saving faith in Christ. Will we dare to preach the word of God? H. C. MORRISON.

Asking for Bread, Given a Stone.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

THIS is a day in which one needs to be a discerner of spirits in order to select that which will be for his good, physically, intellectually and spiritually. Man is a trichotomy, his nature being divided into body, soul and spirit. It is given unto each of us the responsibility of caring for these several parts of our being, and we need to be on our guard that we select the very best mediums through which they are to be developed.

Physically, many of us treat our body as if it were an old worn-out, cast-away machine, good for nothing but the junk pile. Indeed, some of us treat these bodies worse than a machine, for we pour all sorts of food into them, and many are debauched with strong drink, others are mutilated by indulgences that not only destroy the body, but destroy the mind and soul. We are reminded that our bodies are the "temples of the Holy Ghost," and that they should be used only as the Spirit dictates. What a world of contentment and happiness we should have if everyone would only use their bodies as they were intended, but alas!

It is the duty of every parent to give their children the best opportunities for improving the mind, as one's capacities for doing good and ministering largely to his fellowmen are greatly increased by thorough intellectual training. One of the most interesting experiences that has come to me, has been to watch the unfolding of youthful possibilities as they sought to prepare themselves by diligent application to the courses of study that develop and prepare them for the largest usefulness.

But, by far is it of the utmost importance that the physical and intellectual training be given where the soul will have an equal opportunity to be brought into the full bloom of Christian manhood and womanhood. It is astounding that the large majority neglect the most important part of one's being, indicating how deep-rooted the enemy of all good has planted within us the bent toward an independence that feels it can get along without super-human assistance. Truly, God is not in all their thoughts, consequently not in all their ways.

But, I started out to caution us against becoming influenced by the new bill of fare that is being served from many of our pulpits today. Yes, there is good and not so good, and we must discriminate between that which will make us more spiritual, and that which would make us more skeptical. To give a concrete case of what I mean, I shall give some excerpts from a letter recently received from a friend who gives her experience in a large city where she recently attended church. She speaks of attending a service in which the preacher lifted her above things earthly, into the heavens.

She comments thus: "Oh, what a sermon! The preacher preached on the epistles of Peter and showed us what there was in the man that led to his being able to make the great confession, 'Thou art the Christ.' He said Peter has what every builder of the church must have—loyalty, vision, love. He said Peter's natural capacities were very great, but that human as he was and full of faults, his power for development in the hands of Jesus and through the power of the Holy Spirit was unlimited.

"Last Sunday I was tired and so took the easier course of dropping into the church next door. I heard an address on evolution—very learned—very modern, but absolutely empty. He spent most all the time in ridiculing W. J. Bryan, and citing famous scientists to prove man's descent from the lower forms of animal life. I saw a very intelligent appearing man sound asleep—and no wonder! Dry as dust! And why be a doubter like that? Who is benefited by this modernist theory? I could find no one who seemed to be inspired by the address—all looked as cold as the grey stone of the walls.

"Today the same man advertised to talk on 'The Truth in the Bible Narrative of Man's Origin.' I wondered what he would say, but really, I could not bring myself to waste another Sunday on him. I could almost believe that such men, in spite of all their wisdom, are closely related to lower forms of life, but I would say, since they are so lacking in spiritual insight, that they were brothers of the mud and stones of earth. For what is man minus spirituality—a handful of dust—no more!

"I hear in the educational world where specialists make intelligence tests, that we are socially burdened with morons, those people who never get to be over twelve years old mentally no matter how old they grow. Well! How about our spiritual morons? That is my question! Are they not a greater menace than the mentally incapacitated? And only God can work the miracle of their salvation—for with these there is hope—for, as Canon Mallett said this morning, 'With God there are no outcasts from salvation.' If a man will, he can be redeemed, and his life made to blossom like the rose, even though mentally, morally, and physically, he is a victim of sin—his own or inbred (of course both.)

"Some difference between the sermons of today and that of last Sunday! I thank God for the remnant of the faithful! I bless his name for the long list of ages past, and for men like your dear husband, the standard-bearer of our own age."

I have given quotations at length for they serve so concretely to illustrate the difference between asking for bread and receiving bread, and asking for bread and receiving a stone. To any minister of the Word whose eyes may chance to fall upon this, allow me to ask you in all candor, which of the above preachers represents your case? I think it is more than likely that a minister who enjoys THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD will not be found in the second class, whose auditors "ask for bread but are given a stone." It might be well to remember that, bread nourishes, but stones kill. And who shall be responsible for the killing!

showing that writing had been a known art hundreds of years before Moses had ever been born, and that a splendid literature existed long before Moses ever put his pen to the writing of the Pentateuch.

Again they come running to tell us that Genesis 14 is a false record because the king mentioned there never existed, and once more this same ridiculous archaeologist pushed his persistent spade a little too deep down and uncovered some relics bearing the very name of this king Amraphel, and "covered with the very dust of the age in which he is said to have lived."

For a hundred years now, and especially during the last fifty, wonderful discoveries have been made in Babylonia, Egypt and Palestine, and not one of them has disproved a single line of this old Book, and many of them have lent to it the strongest confirmation.

It might be well just here to remind you of the paper drawn up by the British Association for the Advancement of Science in 1865. This paper was signed by nearly 600 recognized men of Science and among other remarkable things it contained the following:

"We, the undersigned students of the natural sciences, desire to express our sincere regret that research into scientific truth is perverted by some, in our times, into occasion for casting doubt upon the truth and authenticity of the Holy Scriptures. We conceive that it is impossible for the Word of God as written in the book of Nature and God's Word written in the Holy Scripture, to contradict one another, however much they may appear to differ, and we confidently believe that a time will come when the two records will be seen to agree in every particular."

No, we have nothing to fear for the old Book from many of the supposed antagonisms of Science.

IV. RATIONALISTIC PERSECUTION.

There is another antagonism the Bible has had to meet, and this is known as Rationalism. It is only another name for the deification of human reason. Everything it finds in the Bible above the reach of reason it rejects as false. Of course all miracles must go, can't understand them. The Deity of Christ, the Incarnation, the Resurrection and all other supernatural events suffer the same fate.

It would be an endless task to go into details here. Only three things need to be said.

1. Men believe everyday things they can't understand. And if you were to appropriate in your experience only the benefits of the things you can explain, you would be travelling on high gear the surest road to death in every sense of the word.

2. If God can't perform a miracle, then He ceases at that moment to be God, and if He can perform a miracle of any kind He can perform miracles of every kind.

3. The things denied by Rationalism furnish the Word of God and the Christian faith in fact their strongest credential.

You will recall that when Lepaux got up his new religion, Theophilanthropy, it made little headway among the people. He complained to Talleyrand about it and the shrewd old statesman replied,

"I am not surprised at the difficulty you find in your effort. It is no easy thing to introduce a new religion, but you should not be so easily discouraged, for I can tell you how to succeed."

And Lepaux eagerly asked, "What is that I must do?"

And Talleyrand said, "It is this; go and work miracles, heal all manner of diseases, raise the dead and cast out devils, and then go on and be crucified and be buried and then rise again on the third day, and it is possible that you may accomplish your end."

And the philosopher went away silent.

V. HIGHER CRITICAL PERSECUTION.

Here is another form of antagonism to the Bible, the modern so-called Higher Criticism, which after all is only a more polite name for Modern Destructive Scholarship. Much of the criticism already mentioned of course belongs here, but I am referring now in particular to Literary Criticism, as it is sometimes called, or that criticism which deals more especially with the text of the Bible.

This Criticism comes as a rule with a pious air, as if loathe to believe the Bible is not all that it claims to be, and after examining the text much like a physician tests a diseased lung or a weakened heart, it turns away with a sigh of disappointment, shakes its head and with an air of profound wisdom pronounces the patient beyond hope of recovery.

It claims to be engaged in an effort to improve the Bible as though it had not come already perfect from the hand of God. You might as well expect to go out and touch up a golden sunset with a charcoal pencil. You might as well expect to improve on the glorious notes of a yellow-throated roller from the Hartz Mountains by offering it a tin whistle! As well pour red paint on the blushing beauty of a rose!

As if the inspired Word of the eternal God needed mending at the hands of man!

"The critic stood with scornful eye

Before a picture on the wall:

You call this art? Now see that fly,

It is not natural at all.

It has too many legs; its head is far too large—

Whoever saw a fly like that, so limp and dead

And wings that look as if they—pshaw."

And with a gesture of disgust

He waved his hand, when low! the fly

Flew from the picture. "Ah! some dust,"

The Critic said, "was in my eye."

Practically every part of the Bible has come in for its share of dissection and expurgation at the hands of these hypercritical gentlemen, and their work is well represented by the story of the man who always listened to his preacher with a penknife in his hand and every passage to which his "liberal" pastor objected he cut from his Bible, and finally he one day handed his preacher the two lids of the book as all he had left after listening to his learned dissertations for a little less than two years.

They claim by certain tests to resolve one book into the work of a dozen different authors. In the book of Genesis God is called both by the name of Jehovah and Elohim. Therefore, each section has its own author according as the names appear. One they call the Jehovist and the other the Elhoist, or J. and E.

They next found a part for D. and P. Then in their extremity they call in two other J's, and so forth, until at last they have three Js, three Es, four Ps and three Qs, and finally a Redactor, R, which last ingenious gentleman made the whole of what these various authors had written into one crazy-quilt sort of a narrative, supplying himself whatever he thought best as he put the work together.

Indeed Kuenen can furnish you with 16 different authors for the five books of Moses. Wellhausen can be satisfied with no less than twenty-two. And if this is not enough, help yourself!

Canon Cheyne, the noted English critic, has torn the book of Isaiah into one hundred and sixty fragments all by different and unknown writers.

But Prof. G. Anderson, once said in an address at a Commencement of Chicago University, "When a man says, taking for instance an account like that of Rahab and the spies, that the one who wrote that took three lines out of one manuscript that he had in his hand, and then six words out of another, and then two or three verses out of another, and then half a verse out of another, and shows all this to me by letters of different colors on the page, and I look it over; I say to myself that no mortal man who ever put two ideas together ever wrote in that way since the foundation of the world." Considering the place it is significant that ringing applause followed his utterance.

The Higher Critic sweetly assures us that the consensus of modern scholarship is all in favor of the new view. Which view? They have furnished us by actual count with no less than 747 theories of the origin and authorship of the books of the Bible; and until they can come to at least some small semblance of agreement among themselves, we can well afford to pause.

After all as Dr. Torrey has said, "A book that has successfully withstood eighteen centuries of assault of the Devil's heaviest artillery, is not going down before the air-guns of modern so-called Higher Criticism."

VI. INFIDEL PERSECUTION.

There is a sixth and last form of Bible Persecution that hardly deserves any mention other than to give it a passing contempt, and that is a certain form of cheap infidelity; the kind of infidelity that travels about the country and lectures on "The Mistakes of Moses" at $200.00 per night; the small-bored sort of infidelity, which gathers its inspiration out of its own hot, sinful hatred of Bible doctrine and which as a rule gathers all its criticism out of pure, unadulterated ignorance.

As a single instance take the quail story that seemed to worry Bob Ingersoll so much. An infidel newspaper published in Boston has figured the whole thing out for us. It gives an estimate of the number of quails that were piled up over the country, and show that according to the Bible story, the quails when divided would give to each Israelite a monthly allowance of 2,888,643 bushels of quails, and this of course means that every poor Jew had 69,620 bushels of quails to eat at each meal for thirty days, and therefore the Bible was not true.

If you told me you saw geese flying as high as a church steeple, I suppose you would expect me to believe you meant they were piled as thick as cordwood from the ground up. Would you? Well, all the Bible says is that God let them fall "as it were two cubits high upon the face of the earth," or as the correct rendering is "above the face of the earth." And to such argument they expect honest, intelligent people to give heed!

We recall the fact that the seal of a certain Scottish Bible Society is a Bible in the shape of an anvil, with men swinging hammers upon it; the ground is covered with hammers broken; and underneath are the words:

"Hammer away, ye rebel bands;

Your hammers break; God's anvil stands. "Last eve I paused beside the blacksmith's door,

And heard the anvil ring the vesper chime; And looking in I saw upon the floor

Old hammers, worn with beating years of time.

"How many anvils have you had," said I, To wear and batter all these hammers so?"

"Just one," said he, and then with twinkling eye,

"The anvil wears the hammers out, you know."

"And so, I thought, the anvil of God's Word, In ages, skeptic blows have beat upon,

Yet, though the noise of falling blows was heard,

The anvil is unharmed, the hammers gone."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

Well, I greet you from dear old Kentucky this week! Kentucky has been called the "Dark and bloody ground" but with all of her faults, I love her still. She has been humiliated over her race track gambling, her distilleries of former days, and the mountain feuds, but over against these discouraging features we have the thousands of churches that lift their spires heavenward, the wonderfully improved schools, excellent highways which stretch far into the mountainous sections of the state, and hundreds of industries which employ thousands of people who make up the rank and file of our commonwealth.

Louisville, the city in which I live, is growing by leaps and bounds; it is only a matter of a few years when her population will number 400,000. We are stretching out in every direction, except the northern direction, which is bounded by the Ohio River that turns the tide of progress to the other points of the compass.

Real estate men build beautiful homes and allow the buyers to pay a small sum down, and the balance like rent, thus enabling many who could not otherwise own a home, to secure one without any financial pressure upon them.

I am glad to tell you that Dr. Morrison stood his trip home remarkably well and is feeling better than usual. He hopes when the warm weather comes to improve even faster than now. Let the friends continue to pray for him, that he may be fully restored to health and service.

With love to all of you cousins, and assuring you of my deep and abiding interest in each one of you, I am,

Lovingly,
AUNT BETTIE.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you move over a tiny bit and let a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a reader of The Herald, and sure do love to read page ten. I saw my first letter in print, so I thought I would write again, and I hope to see this one in print. I have light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, weigh 95 pounds, am five feet tall. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with E, and has six letters in it. I go to Hutchison Methodist Episcopal Church. I sure do like my Sunday school teacher; her name is Mrs. Myrtle King. Morris M. Weir, I guess your middle name to be Miriam. Am I right? If so, please write to me. I hope Mr. W. B. is fishing when this letter arrives. I will answer all letters from the cousins.

Maggie L. Smart.
Rt. 1, Box 32, Hutchison, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to The Herald and hope to see it in print. I am twelve years old and in the seventh grade. My school teacher is Mr. Hix Dildy, and my Sunday school teacher is Miss Lela Graves. I like them very much. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking his vacation trip when this letter arrives. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Veatch Hobson.
Rt. 5, Nashville, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As I have written once before I promise not to stay very long. Cousins, I have a question to ask you. Who can answer Samson's riddle? It is in the Bible. How old was David when he began to reign? Well, I had better be going before Mr. W. B. wakes up from his nap. With love for the cousins and Aunt Bettie.

Ethel Martin.
Riversville, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Texas girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I would so like to. Grandfather has been taking The Herald and I sure like to read it. I am ten years old, have brown hair, blue eyes and my name is Loye Fey O. Henderson. Who can guess my middle name? It starts with O and ends with A, and has three letters. Who guesses it I will write a letter and send my picture. Bessie L. Griffith, I guess your middle name Treva. Am I right? Please write me a letter with your address. I am a Christian, I belong to the Baptist Church. I love Jesus with all my heart. I pray for each one every night, and read my Bible nearly every night. Aunt Bettie, this is my first letter to write. I will write again if this is printed. Write me. God bless you all. Loye Fay O. Henderson.

Grapeland, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little West Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? C. Allene Reid, I guess your name to be Cora. Don't forget your promise you made. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I go to Sunday school and have never missed a Sunday. My Sunday school teacher is Mrs. Nellie Brock. Our pastor is Mr. Rev. Wakefield. My mother takes The Herald. I will ring off and give some of the cousins a chance.

Wilma Martin.
Riversville, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Texas girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I sure would like to. Daddy has been taking The Herald for four years and I sure do enjoy it, especially page ten. I. Elizabeth Dunn, I guess your name to be Iva or Ima Elizabeth Dunn. Don't forget your promise. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I have read in the paper about Mr. W. B. Tell me about him please, Aunt Bettie. My birthday is July 12. Have I a twin? If so, please write to me. I have dark brown hair, gray eyes and fair complexion. I try to be a Christian and love Jesus very much. I would like to write to any of the cousins who would care to write to me.

Annie Rainey Skidmore.
Grapeland, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a Tennessee girl. Will you allow me to stop for a short while with the cousins? Who has my birthday, October 22? I am sixteen years young. My middle name begins with C and ends in E, and has nine letters in it. Who can guess my name? I am going to write to the one who guesses it. Catherine Andres, I guess your name to be Mary. If I am right don't forget your promise. I live in the country near Shiloh Park, near Tennessee River, on a new highway which has bridged the river; it sure is a wonderful place. I have two brothers and one sister, and I am still blessed with mother, but my father departed from us about four years ago, and is missed very much. I had better go before Mr. W. B. comes in from feeding the pigs.

Lucile Gillham.
Crump, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Virginia girl join your happy band of cousins? I wrote you one letter but I failed to send it in so I thought I would write again. I hope you will print this. I have fair complexion, dark brown hair and dark eyes. Who has my birthday, July 21? If you have it please write me. My age is between ten and sixteen. I live in the country and like it fine. I have one sister and two half brothers. My weight is one hundred and four pounds. Love to Aunt Bettie.

Nellie Merica.
Rt. 1, Elkton, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a girl of Kentucky, your own state, join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old and in the fifth grade at school. I have fair complexion, dark brown hair, and my birthday is June 6. I belong to the Methodist Church. I am a Christian now. Brother Weldon is holding a revival meeting here. He certainly saved my soul. With me it has been like in "Amazing Grace."
"Amazing grace, how sweet the sound
That saved a wretch like me;
I once was lost, but now am found,
Was blind, but now I see."
I go to Sunday school and church every Sunday. Can anyone guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with H, and has nine letters in it.

Anyone who guesses it I will write to. Mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it very much, especially page ten. As my letter is getting long, I will stop, hoping to see it in print. I will be glad to receive letters from all the cousins, and will answer all I receive. At first of the year I made a resolution that I would read at least one chapter in the Bible. So far I have lived up to this resolution.

Mary E. Grinstead.
Glasgow, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let two little cousins join your happy band of boys and girls? We are at our grandma Miller's; our ages are between five and nine, and nine and fourteen. We have dark hair, blue eyes, light complexion and weigh eighty-five and sixty pounds. We hope Mr. W. B. is out feeding his goats. We wish to see this in print. Love to cousins and Aunt Bettie.

Martha B. Miller,
Willye M. Miller.
Rt. 3, Narrows, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come again for just a little chat with the cousins. Just now I am spending a few days with my grandparents. They take The Herald and when I visit them I always read all the back numbers because I love to know how all of the cousins are. I want to thank you for printing my other two letters, Aunt Bettie. I am glad that you cousins are still following the steps of the lowly Jesus, for it really does pay to serve Jesus and stand true in these last days. Praise God for the wonderful promises that he has given us. And not a one has he lifted from us, although he sometimes withholds them to see if we will stand true to him. V. E. Burnett, do you think that Deut. 18:15 was the first Scripture given, prophesying of the birth of Christ? Just turn a few pages back to Gen. 3:15. It says: "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head and thou shalt bruise his heel." It seems to me that the Saviour of the world is promised there. It shows us plainly that the woman would sometime have some one to defend her, a Savior who would not only be a helper but a Redeemer. One who would span a straight and narrow path from earth to glory by the shedding of blood for the remission of our sins. He has come and suffered untold agony on the cross for you and me. Have we fully accepted him? Have we consecrated our lives to him? If not, let's begin just now because the night is coming when man shall work no more. Oh, are we going to stand empty handed with nothing to show that we have worked for the Master. These warm, sunshiny days bring to my mind a scripture: "Now learn a parable of the fig tree; when her branch is yet tender and putteth forth her leaves ye know that summer is near: So ye in like manner when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh even at the doors." (Mark 13:28, 29). And as each green bud springs forth into leaves, and flowers begin to bloom all over the fields and woods through the green grass and the first signs of spring begin to appear, wouldn't it just be grand if Jesus would come and take us away to the mansion which he has prepared for us. And now dear cousins when the trials and afflictions come we should not murmur, because the word says: "But he knoweth the way that I take: when he hath tried me I shall come forth as gold." Job 23:10. Cousins, watch, pray and wait for Jesus is coming and coming soon. I would like for you cousins to give me a letter shower. A letter from every state in the union. I would especially like to hear from gospel workers and singers or any one who intends to be in the gospel work this summer. I must close now as this letter is growing rather lengthy. I will be eighteen next fall. May God bless you all. Ruby Nell Choate.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old and am in the fourth grade. My brother and I have a pet dog; its name is Curly. I love to go to Sunday school and learn Bible verses. I am four feet, five inches tall, have dark brown hair and light complexion. My sister is writing this letter for me. I would like to receive

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you make room for an Alabama girl to join your circle? As it seems to be the rule to describe themselves I guess I had better start out. I am a girl five feet and four inches and a half, have light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, and weigh one hundred and fifteen pounds, and graduated from high school in April. I attended school at Meek H, and I think it is a fine school. Well, I'll be glad to hear from any of the cousins between the age of fifteen and twenty years. The one that guesses my middle name I will write them a letter. It begins with L and ends with A. Esther L. Mauldin.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Knock! Knock! I'm asking for admittance for the first time. I have been a silent reader for several years. I think The Herald one of the grandest papers printed. We have a fine Sunday school in our community. I attend every Sunday. Mother died when I was eighteen months old and I live with Daddy. I get lonesome and read lots to pass away the time. I certainly enjoy reading page ten. I'll describe my ugly self. I am five feet, five inches short, and wear a roof of brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion, and weigh one hundred and forty pounds. I was eighteen years of age July 8. Have I a twin? I would be glad to receive letters from any of the cousins who would care to write. I promise to answer all letters I receive if it takes me till Gabriel blows his trumpet. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I like to read page ten very well. I am eleven years old. I go to school and am in the fifth grade. My birthday is February 10. I have two sisters and two brothers. My father, mother, sister and I are Christians. We go to Sunday school and church almost every Sunday. It is four miles and a half to our church. Leo Duval.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IX.—June 2, 1929.

Subject.—Later Experiences of Jeremiah. Jeremiah 38:4-13.

Golden Text.—Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Matt. 5:11.

Time.—605 B. C. His persecutions ran through a long period.

Place.—In Jerusalem and some other places.

Introduction.—It was no easy task to be Jehovah's prophet in the latter years of the time of Jeremiah. Nebuchadnezzar was king in Babylon; and he had turned his forces against the kingdom of Judah. Matters in Jerusalem reached the climax of sin and chaos during the reign of Zedekiah. After the first siege of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, when Daniel and his three friends were carried to Babylon in captivity, the city was under the heel of Nebuchadnezzar. He placed Zedekiah on the throne of Judah as a vassal king. About the time of our lesson Zedekiah rebelled against Nebuchadnezzar; and the Babylonians again laid siege to Jerusalem. Nebuchadnezzar heard that Pharaoh, king of Egypt, was coming against him; whereupon he broke off his siege against Jerusalem, and turned his army against the Egyptians.

The Jews thought their enemy had departed; but Jeremiah prophesied that they would return and burn the city. About this time he left the city and went into Benjamin where he was accused of falling away to the Babylonians. He was brought back into Jerusalem and thrown into prison—put into the dungeon; but the king had him taken out. Then came more warning and prophesying; and again the prophet was arrested, and his death demanded; for his enemies declared that he was not fit to live; wherefore he went into the dungeon again. His persecution was severe; but he never quailed before his enemies.

It is strange how the wicked hate the righteous. They not only hate good men, they hate God. They hate all spiritual good. The heathen have often persecuted the children of God; but some of the most terrible affliction that has ever been heaped upon them has been the work of pretended Christians. Take the Spanish Inquisition under the Roman Catholics. For sheer devilry, nothing can surpass it. What could be more diabolical than Rome's effort in the 12th century of our era to blot out the Waldenses. Those people did not fight against Rome in any manner. They were simply trying to save their souls; but for that reason degenerate Rome thirsted for their blood, and persecuted them even unto prison and death. Persecution is not yet dead. Pure Christianity will never persecute any one; but an impure type of it will always persecute the true saints of God, if it ever gets in power.

If you think religious persecution is dying out, read the current history of Italy, and see how every effort is being made through the Vatican to drive Protestants out of Rome, and out of Italy. Where Rome is in the minority and weak, she pleads pitifully for religious toleration; but where she is in the majority and strong, she neither pleads for nor practices toleration. Such abominable duplicity should open the eyes of this American nation. Nothing is truer than the fact that Rome cannot be trusted.

While I am on this subject of persecution I will unburden my soul a bit. It is high time for some Protestant church people in America to cease persecuting good men and good women because they believe in and preach holiness. Some little time ago I was in a church in which there was a little group of these "holiness" people. The pastor denounced them from the pulpit and accused them of splitting the church. They held a little prayer meeting of their own every Friday evening; but the pastor demanded that they stop it, because he said that it militated against his mid-week prayer meeting. I attended both meetings, and found that the entire Friday evening crowd was at the Wednesday evening meeting, and that there were not enough others there for any sort of a prayer meeting. I went to the Sunday school, and found those same holiness people and their children out in full force. I made some inquiry, and learned that that little abused group paid nearly one-half of all the expenses of the church. What is it that makes these "holiness" people so offensive? I have found a number of parallel cases to the one just described; but I can find no sensible answer to my question. If these people are sinful, turn them out of the church and get rid of them; but if they are good people, even though you think they are mistaken, for Christ's sake quit persecuting them. Persecution may be a good thing for them; but it will damn the man who administers it. Beware!

Comments on the Lesson.

4. The princes said unto the king.—Not necessarily sons of the king, but chief men among the people. He weakeneth the hands of the men of war.—Jeremiah's prophecy would frighten and discourage them. "Let this man be put to death." Nothing strange in this. In time of war a nation must protect itself against traitors; and I suppose the leaders in Judah thought Jeremiah was such a character. Our own country did the same thing during the late "world war."

5. He is in your hand.—That statement from the king was almost equivalent to a death sentence. The princes hated Jeremiah; and Zedekiah virtually said: "Kill him, if you so desire. I shall not interfere, nor object, no matter how you may treat him."

6. They . . . cast him into the dungeon.—I wonder what sort of diabolism it took in men to invent a dungeon. It was just a hole in the ground like a dry well; although that of Malachiah did have soft mud in it into which Jeremiah sank. It was the acme of cruelty. The dungeon was so deep that "they let Jeremiah down with cords," or ropes.

7. Ebedmelech the Ethiopian.—I suppose he was a black man; for all the Ethiopians I have ever seen were black. There is in the heart of the negro a vein of mercy and tenderness that cannot be surpassed among men. This poor mutilated fellow's heart broke when he heard that Jeremiah had been cast into the dungeon; and he resolved to get him out.

8. Spake to the king.—That was not a safe thing for a captive slave to do.

9. These men have done evil.—"What you miserable black slave, how dare you accuse the princes of the land of wrong doing?" Courage now, Ebedmelech, for you are in danger. He is like to die of hunger.—The dirty imps were not even feeding their prisoner. That was a light matter to them; "for there was no more bread in the city." That is, bread was very scarce on account of the siege of Nebuchadnezzar.

10. The king commanded.—The Ethiopian had won out against the princes. 'Call thirty men to help you, and take Jeremiah out of that dungeon before he dies.' I wonder if there was really and truly some good in Zedekiah. Some one says: "There is so much good in the worst of us, and so much bad in the best of us, that it ill becomes any of us to condemn the rest of us."

11. This verse displays the tenderness of Ebedmelech. He would not hurt the prophet in pulling him out of the dungeon. Clouts and rotten rags were poor stuff, but put under Jeremiah's armpits they would keep the ropes from cutting him. Possibly the cruel princes used no such protection when they let him down; and, therefore, the poor man had some bad sores to contend with.

12. Ebedmelech . . . said unto Jeremiah.—He could not reach him, but spoke to him from the mouth of the dungeon.

13. Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.—He was not a free man, but had the liberty of the prison house above ground.

TRUST, BE NOT AFRAID.

George B. Kulp.

The hour will never once be seen,
When Thou art not close by,
The darkness it may intervene,
But we shall know Thee nigh.
Friends may forsake when trouble comes,
Forget the time to call,
But Thou wilt very present be,
Our Lord and all in all.

The promises exceeding great,
Can ne'er be discounted be,
We cash them in at heaven's rate,
And rich toward God are we.
Partakers of His nature, too,
Indwelt by power Divine,
He speaks, and listening, we hear,
"Fear not, my child, I'm thine."

"As thy days thy strength shall be,
Sufficient be thy grace,
Acquaint thyself, O soul, with Me,
With patience run thy race.
Of brass and iron thy shoes shall be,
Fitted for any road,
And every step leads nearer home,
To thy Divine abode.

Press on, fight on, the victory shout,
The Captain goes before,
The battle is not yours, but His,
The Lord's a Man of War.
As Captain of the hosts of God,
He still is on the field,
And more than conqueror thou shalt be,
Thine enemies shall yield.

Then when the last grim monster lies
Prostrate beneath thy feet,
And heaven's gates shall open wide,
Prepared thy soul to greet,
Thou too shalt sing, the new song raise,
Upon the glassy sea,
Honor and power, eternal praise,
To God the victory.

TWO TRAMPS.

By Amy LeFevre.

A story about a boy named Rollo, and his uncle, who find it necessary to tramp through the country in order to restore perfect health. To Rollo, Christianity is a very real thing. His conversations with his uncle and with the many people that he meets on his travels make an interesting and helpful story. Wherever these two tramps go they scatter sunshine, fresh hope and comfort.

Amy LeFevre has long been noted for her purposeful stories and this one is no exception to the many other books that she has written.

Read Two Tramps. It will be a real refreshment to you. The regular price of the book is $1.50, but we have listed it in our Special Sale at 60c, postpaid.

SEEING THE FUTURE

BY CHRISTABEL PANKHURST

A book that evangelical believers will read with keenest interest. The Sunday School Times says it is her greatest one, . . . the conclusions of a brilliant mind, a devout Christian, a famous authority on social and political problems, and one who writes under the mastery of a great conviction. Be sure to read these discriminating studies of prophecy and the signs of the times, giving a satisfying and Biblical solution to the problems of this troubled world and of the individual Christian.

BREAD OF LIFE BOX

Contents: 115 slices, made of the finest of Wheat, mixed with the Water of Life and enriched with the sincere Milk of the Word. Unleavened, buttered on both sides, and richly spread with honey out of the Rock. Will not get stale. Good for your spiritual health. Try one.

A box containing 115 small cards, with a choice scripture neatly printed on each side. 230 texts in all. Beautiful box, stamped in gold also printed directions how to use. Excellent for a gift box.

Every creature of God is good, and nothing to be refused, if it be received with thanksgiving; for it is sanctified by the Word of God and prayer. 1 Tim. 4:4, 5. Alas, how few meals eaten by Christians are thus sanctified. Some of them ask a blessing on their food, but very seldom do we find one who reads the Word at meals. The Bread Box is an excellent way to introduce obedience to this precept.

Pass the box around at the beginning of a meal. Let each person take out a card. Then let each in turn read the verses. It will be noticed that the two verses on each card bear a definite relation to each other and teach an important truth. The order in which they are read often brings out this truth more forcibly. As each person reads their verses it is profitable that the others present tell where the verses are found.

Another excellent way is for each person to read one or two words of the text and let some one else quote it from memory.

Let one read a verse and another quote a verse on the same subject. Let each person memorize the two verses during the meal and quote them at its close.

Pass the box around in your Sunday School class the same as at a meal. And as the verses are read discuss the truths contained in them.

Explain that it is just as important to feed on the Word in order to grow and be strong spiritually as to eat our daily meals in order to grow strong physically.

Most interesting and profitable young people's meeting may be had by using the Bread Box in some of the ways suggested.

In the home when friends and neighbors are gathered together pass around the Bread Box. How much better and more profitable than a "cup of tea!"

Keep one in your bedroom. Eat a slice for your meditation while dressing and going about your daily duties. Eat another slice before retiring to quiet your worries and give you a good night's rest.

Use the Bread Box freely but do not let it displace the Bible. You need the whole Word of God, for all was given that you might "Acquaint now thyself with HIM, and be at peace."—Job. 22:21.

BOYS ENJOY

Out-of-the-ordinary stories—stories of adventure. One of the most interesting stories we have read recently is "The Two Tramps." It would seem to be a book for boys, but really it is a book every one would enjoy. The tramps in this story are not beggars or men of low ideals, but tramps for Jesus. Order one or more copies to place in the hands of boys, at the special price of 60c.

ON HIS JOB.

A rooster is in line for a prohibition officer's job. An unusually vociferous vocal demonstration by Chanticleer led California law enforcement to a hidden cache of liquor recently. At a well known roadhouse the raiders were unable to find the liquor supply. A rooster, sitting atop a barrel began to crow violently. He was so active that he attracted attention to the barrel which contained bootleg liquor. The Portuguese keeper of the roadhouse was arrested and fined $350.

The names of the lawbreakers in nearly every such case indicate an overseas origin in an area severely discriminated against in the Quota Immigration Restriction Act. The product of Protestant Sunday Schools cost American taxpayers practically nothing in crime upkeep.

CHRIST'S REVELATIONS.

It is well to remember some of the ways in which the Lord Jesus Christ reveals himself to those who love him.

"To the artist He is the One Altogether Lovely.

To the Architect He is the Chief Cornerstone.

To the Astronomer He is the Sun of Righteousness.

To the baker He is the Living Bread.

To the banker He is the Hidden Treasure.

To the biologist He is the Life.

To the builder He is the Sure Foundation.

To the carpenter He is the Door.

To the doctor He is the Great Physician.

To the educator He is the Great Teacher.

To the farmer He is the Sower and Lord of the Harvest.

To the florist He is the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley.

To the geologist He is the Rock of Ages.

To the horticulturist He is the True Vine.

To the Judge He is the Righteous Judge, the Judge of all men.

To the jeweler He is the Pearl of Great Price.

To the lawyer He is the Counselor, the Lawgiver, the Advocate.

To the newspaperman He is the Good Tidings of Great Joy.

To the philanthropist He is the Un-speakable Gift.

To the philosopher He is the Wisdom of God.

To the preacher He is the Word of God.

To the railroadman He is the New and Living Way.

To the sculptor He is the Living Stone.

To the servant He is the Good Master.

To the statesman He is the Desire of all Nations.

To the student He is the Incarnate Truth.

To the toiler He is the Great Giver of Rest.

To the sinner He is the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world.

To the theologian He is the Author and Finisher of our Faith.

To the Christian He is the Son of the Living God, the Saviour, Redeemer and Lord.

THE PATHWAY TO PARADISE

"How shall I find it, and which way lies

The pathway leading to Paradise?" For dark and long is the road I tread, And its end is lost in the mist ahead:

I met a man with a heavy load Toiling along on the dusty road; He answered my question in mild surprise:

"Hard work is the pathway to Paradise."

I met a group with laughter and song, Passing the woodland ways along; They sang their reply: "This way it lies,

And joy is the pathway to Paradise."

I met a woman with a little child, To the question asked, the mother smiled,

And looked down into her baby's eyes—

"O, love is the pathway to Paradise."

True: "Work, Joy, and Love must be, What need else the soul of me?"

"Just this"—I turned to One all-wise, "I am the way to Paradise."

Now Ready.

The memorial edition of Dr. W. G. Nixon's sermons is off the press. We are sure that his friends and the reading public in general will be interested in this series of gripping messages by one of the great pastor-evangelists of the day.

This book has ten messages from the pen of Dr. Nixon and a closing chapter which includes the messages delivered from the pulpit of his old church at his funeral held in the city of Detroit.

The many thousands who have listened to Dr. Nixon up and down the country will remember some of the themes presented here. Noteworthy are the messages on "Covenant Breakers," "The Benediction of Jude," the great sermon on Pentecost under the title of "Afterwards," "The Roadway to the Gates of Pearl," and the remarkable commencement message on "Character Building."

These messages are characterized by Dr. Nixon's terseness, his ability for striking utterance, and are accented by the spirit of conviction which always controlled the man in building the gospel message.

The book is clearly printed, has an attractive binding, contains one hundred forty-nine pages, and is sold at the very reasonable price of $1.00 per copy.

IT WILL HOLD YOU SPELL-BOUND.

We miss many of the rich things in life because we don't know about them. "Remarkable Conversions," by H. C. Morrison, is one of the great books—full of rich things. The chapter on "My Arrest and Rescue" is the story of Dr. Morrison's conversion. You will weep and rejoice when you read it. Every sentence in the book is interesting and helpful, but for the good it will mean to your own soul, order a copy, if you don't read anything but the chapter mentioned above. The price is only $1.00, and after having read the book we believe you will say it is the best $1.00 investment you ever made.

FALLEN ASLEEP

RHEA.

On the morning of April 16, 1929, our Heavenly Father took from our midst Mrs. Amanda Rhea to be with him in that place prepared for those who love him.

Mrs. Rhea was born at Powder Mills, Hart county, Ky., August 20, 1848. She was converted when nineteen years old and united with the Southern Methodist Church, of which she was a consistent member to the end. Her church was her greatest joy and she was always found in her place at the services if she was able to attend.

The Missionary Society and the Woman's Bible Class of the Spurgeon Memorial Church will miss her greatly and will hold in precious memory her gentle spirit and Christian example.

She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Mary Mudd, of Greensburg, Ky., and one son, Wm. Blakeman, of Santa Ana, Calif., in whose home she lived the last ten years of her life.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Moffett Rhodes, and the body was laid to rest in Fairhaven Cemetery, Santa Ana, Calif.

"Servant of God, well done!" Thy glorious warfare's past; The battle's fought, the race is won, And thou art crowned at last."

Mrs. Henry Donan.
1133 West Pine St., Santa Ana, Calif.

Arnold's Practical Commentary only 75c. A beautiful Scripture Text Calendar free with each order.

NOTICE!

There is a needy family in Floydale, S. C., who would be glad to get any cast-off clothing from those who may have it. She mentions shoes especially, for herself, size 5, and for her brothers, size 6, 7. If any of our readers have such articles of clothing send to Mrs. Lula F. Rowell, Floydale, S. C.

H. J. McNeese: "Closed short revival on Marion Hill, New Brighton, April 29 with big children's meeting. The attendance each evening and Sunday afternoons was good, everything considered. I have been pastoring this work since March. Have few open dates for tent work during summer. Wire at once if you desire date. Address, 634 13th Ave., New Brighton, Pa."

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

"Please to pray earnestly that God may save my dearest friend."—M. D.

Pray for a woman afflicted with a very painful disease, that she may be healed.

Pray for a sister who is suffering from chronic pellagra; also for four brothers and a nephew to be saved.

Will The Herald family pray that if it is the Lord's will he may heal me of a disease of long standing, in order that I may do some work for Jesus.—Miriam C. Comeford.

Please to pray for my niece, that she may be saved from an operation, and for her conversion.—A. W.

Pray for me that my health may be restored and for my sister to be saved.—A Reader.

Graduation Time is Near

And no matter how many presents a boy or girl receives, we believe it is rare that they appreciate anything more than an attractive Bible. It is a gift, that if properly taken care of, will last almost a lifetime, serving as "a lamp unto the feet and a light unto the pathway."

Just at this time we have a limited number of copies of one of the lightest, thinnest, most convenient sized Bibles for a young person it has been our privilege to obtain. The size is about 4 1/2 x 7 inches, a fraction over 1/4 inch thick, bound in genuine leather, overlapping edges, silk sewed, India paper, a clear, readable type, chapter numbers in figures, references, maps, red under gold edges, and has the non-breakable back feature. It also has the silk marker.

So appropriate is this special Bible for a graduation gift it would seem that it was made for this purpose. It's a book that even the unsaved would appreciate. The net price was $4.25. We are closing out these copies at a special price of $2.40 each. Don't miss the opportunity.

THE ESSENTIALS.

By The Editor.

IN the prophecy of Jeremiah, 8th chapter and 11th verse, we find this complaint against the teachers in Israel: "For they have healed the hurt of the daughters of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace."

The prophet is complaining here that the work of the teachers is more formal than spiritual; that God cannot be satisfied with mere forms and religious pretenses, but wants the souls of men thoroughly healed from sin, and peace to rest upon a firm foundation of a clear knowledge of sins forgiven, and the witness of the Spirit to one's acceptance with God.

This question comes back to me again and again: How can a Methodist preacher who has been a deep penitent, who has wept and mourned at the altar of prayer, who has been graciously regenerated by the Holy Spirit, and had the joyful witness in his heart that his sins were forgiven, that he is a child of God, be content to take people into the church on Easter Sunday and Decision Day, without any plain teaching on the new birth, on repentance, on forsaking all to follow Jesus, and without any sign of repentance, of separation from sinful worldliness, or any sort of testimony to a consciousness of sins forgiven?

Is not such a man "healing the hurt of the people slightly," and saying "Peace, peace, when there is no peace?" If we go forward discarding revivals of religion, substituting Sunday school training for regeneration, the giving of money and rendering of service for holiness of heart, and righteousness of life, and ignore the supernatural power of the Holy Ghost in the salvation of the people, will we not take the unregenerated world into the church, and will the church not become a woman of sin instead of the chaste and fruitful Bride of Christ? These are serious questions and should be taken into thoughtful consideration.

Is God content with mere ordinances and forms of religion without salvation from sin and lives of joyful obedience? The Lord Jesus came into the world and gave his life to teach and to make possible the new birth; to make us new creatures in Christ. He plainly declares that without this radical change of heart we cannot see the kingdom of God, much less enter into it. We believe the time has come when Methodist bishops, superintendents, elders, pastors, evangelists and Sunday school teachers should lay tremendous emphasis on the new birth, the absolute change of heart, which can only be wrought by the Holy Spirit.

Is there any prospect or hope that we are going to turn away from merely gathering people by thousands and tens of thousands into the church without repentance and regeneration? That we are going to turn back to real revivals of religion? That we are going to insist on repentance and separation from sinfulness? That we are going to exhort the people to self-denial, purity of heart, and holiness of life? Do the signs of the times in our ecclesiastical organizations indicate anything of this sort? Can we be hopeful that there is going to be a tremendous insistence among our leaders that we shall be regenerated; that the church must be made up of the true children of God, born of the Spirit? We can trifle with ourselves and each other but we cannot trifle with God. There is no house so desolate as that from which the Spirit has departed. There is no church so void of spiritual life and power, as that with its beautiful temple, its unregenerated and godless membership, with their feasts, and shows, entertainments and frolics, without any thought of, or care for, the presence of the Holy Ghost, who do not desire, and never see the regeneration of a soul at their altars, hastening forward in their blindness to the abyss of hell. The Church of God must be a "born-again" church. It must be obedient to the Word of God. It must, with watchfulness and prayer, abstain from sin. It must hunger and thirst after righteousness and press on to higher attainments of spiritual life.

Monthly Sermon.

REV. H. C. MORRISON.

HUNGERING AND THIRSTING AFTER RIGHTEOUSNESS.

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled." 5:6.

You at once recognize the text as taken from our Lord's sermon on the Mount. Jesus is here speaking of the longing of the human soul after a state of purity and righteousness before God. He uses strong figures of speech which are easily understood. There are few persons, from small children to maturity, who have not at some time, felt intense hunger and thirst. Under some circumstances they have been cut off from their regular supply of food and drink, and they have forgotten their other desires and feel that, first of all, they must refresh their bodies with food and water; after that, they can give attention to other matters that must be postponed until these intense demands of their physical nature have been supplied.

In the text, our Lord is speaking of the soul and its capacity for intense longing. The soul is a living being. My body is not

I; it is the house in which I reside. It can grow old, decay, perish into dust beneath your feet, but the real person—the soul—lives on forever. The body is no more the real man than the cage is the eagle which it confines. Open the door of the cage and the eagle then, and only then, feels his powers, puts them to use; uncaged, he mounts upon his pinions and soars beyond the reach of his captors.

What we call death is not the end of man; it is the uncaging of the soul; untrammelled from the body which hampered its higher powers, the soul rises into the vastness of the unlimited universe; free from the captivity of the body which caged it here, it soars up to heaven, to God, to associate with saints and angels in fellowship and joy commensurate with its Godlike capacity.

The nature of the soul is such that it must feed upon things entirely apart from those substances which satisfy the body. The body feeds on meat; the soul feeds on thought. The body refreshes itself with bread; the soul nourishes itself on truth. The body slakes its thirst with water: the soul drinks deep at the fountain of love. The body will perish with hunger, if deprived of food and drink; the soul drifts into leanness and starves into poverty if it is not nourished with communion with its Creator. It has been so constituted that it cries out for righteousness and fellowship with God. Those souls that are dead in trespasses and in sins never have any longing for holiness. As the new-born babe hungers for the milk of its mother's breast, so the human soul, born of the Spirit, hungers after righteousness and communion with God.

How lean and empty must be the professed Christian who never longed for purity; who never prayed to be saved from all sin; who never had an intense hunger after righteousness; who never waited and wept with eager desire, and stretched himself out for cleanness from all corruption, and the abiding comfort of the Holy Spirit.

I would deal gently and cautiously with my fellowbeings, but I am forced to conclude that where there is no longing, intense and earnest, for righteousness, there has not been imparted the new life by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit. To find Christ as a Saviour, is to love him and serve him as Lord and Master, and to long for fellowship with him; it is to hate and separate one's self from all of those things that bring separation from him. To walk in the light as he is in the light, is to long for cleansing from all that is unChristlike. You cannot keep company with Christ and fail to hunger and thirst after holiness of heart and rightness of conduct. The new life that Christ has imparted is intended, among other things, to create in the soul an urge, a panting after God, a hatred against sin and all the defiling influences of sin.

Our Lord Jesus in his teaching tells us that it is a blessed thing to be longing for MARY STONE.

Rev. G. W. Ridout, D.D., Corresponding Editor.

CHINESE EVANGELIST AND PHYSICIAN.

Two little Chinese girls were born in Kuikiang, China, in the same year, 1873. One was born of Christian parents, her father a Methodist preacher. The other was born of heathen parents. One lived in heathenism, and died and was buried. The other was brought up a Christian and was trained in a Methodist Mission school and became one of the most renowned Christian women of China. She was one of two Chinese women to get their medical training in the United States and come back to China as one of the first women doctors of China. She dedicated her life to medicine and salvation; to healing and evangelism. The other little girl, born in heathenism, lost her father when she was young and her mother became a Taoist nun. She also became a nun. Their home became a shrine and a temple, and the daughter spent sixteen years of her life in periods of three years each in one room of the house living in the most absolute seclusion, not seeing her mother, speaking to no one, hearing no voice for three years at a time. In the ardor of her devotion she even made offerings of pieces of her own flesh to the idols. Her arms and face were covered with the ugly scars caused by this self-mutilation. When she was thirty-two she developed tuberculosis and visited the Stone family and there heard about Jesus and eventually found salvation. When she was dying she said to her heathen mother, "Mother, there is nothing in this life of ours. Nothing. We were all wrong. I'm so glad it is over and now I am not at all afraid, for I am going to that beautiful place." Though she died saved, yet her life contributed nothing to the service of God or of humanity. "Nothing but leaves."

So different was the life of Dr. Mary Stone. Early in life she knew Jesus as her Saviour and dedicated her all to the glory of God, the healing of the masses, and the salvation of souls. And her name is written deep in the history of modern China. She is known, not only in China, but all around the world as one of the great Christian women leaders of the Orient.

Dr. Stone's parents were the first Christian believers of the Methodist Mission in Kuikiang. Her father became a Methodist preacher and virtually died a martyr's death because of injuries received in performance of his Christian duties and his fidelity to Jesus. The mother still lives in the cozy home of her daughter and has had the delightful experience of seeing three of her daughters become great Christian leaders of China, chief among them being Dr. Mary.

When Mary was born in 1873, she was baptized with the name "Maiyu"—"Beautiful Jade."

The Chinese name was "Shih," meaning "stone." When she was a student at the University of Michigan the professors had difficulty in pronouncing her name. One morning in the class-room as her name was called she announced, "I have decided to change my name, Professor." The burst of laughter with which the class greeted this simple statement was most bewildering to her; but after she had seen the joke she often declared that she was "one of the products of Christianity, an old maid," for, as she pointed out, an unmarried woman is practically unknown among non-Christians. Her new name was Mary Stone.

When she was born cruel foot-binding of little girls' feet was the custom all over China, but Mrs. Stone made a promise that if God ever gave her a girl she would not bind her feet. This caused great opposition and much suffering to mother and child but Mrs. Stone was destined to become one of the pioneers in the movement against foot-binding. Today, thank God, the custom is going out and the little feet of Chinese girls are allowed to grow in nature's own way. When she was about eight years old her father took her to Dr. Kate Bushnell and announced, "Here is my little girl. I want you to make a doctor of her." Ten years of her life was spent in Miss Howe's girls' boarding school of the M. E. Church. There she got her training in English as well as Chinese and when she was nineteen Miss Howe took her to America where she successfully passed the entrance examinations of the medical department of the University of Michigan. There she mastered the science of medicine, and laid the foundation for her medical career in China which has made her a most distinguished physician. When she returned to China she worked for many years at the head of the Danforth Hospital at Kiukiang and where she used her influence as a medical woman also to promote the Kingdom of God, and there was a time in that section of China where she and Miss Jennie Hughes forged ahead so fast in developing new work and new churches that at one of the Annual Conferences some of the Chinese brethren passed a resolution stopping them from going so fast. Bishop Bashford humorously remarked that the brethren had better get up more steam and try to keep up with these women.

The death of her sister, Anna, who was one of the most saintly women of China, brought a great sorrow to Dr. Stone and in that same year, 1906, Miss Jennie V. Hughes and Dr. Mary Stone came together in a union of soul that seems to have been registered in Heaven and all through these twenty-three years those two women have been linked together in the missionary history of China.

Dr. Stone, being a native Chinese lady, is a remarkable character in the sense that her Western education, vision, and progressiveness dominate her whole career. She has touched her nation at many angles and she is known everywhere educationally, professionally and religiously. When a woman of vision and influence is needed to represent China Dr. Stone is often the woman called on, and wherever she goes her Christ and Gospel go along. She never hesitates to take an uncompromising attitude for the old-time Gospel. Sometime ago she was one of the invited speakers at a distinguished gathering of ladies to welcome to China some social workers from England. Dr. Stone was called on for an after-dinner speech. All of the speakers already heard from had expressed their views as to the best policy politically, socially, internationally for the bringing about of "peace" for restless China. And then Dr. Stone arose, earnestness marking her ever smiling face, and fearlessly she referred to the recent Christmas season, reminded the gathered assemblage that from heaven itself had come the angel message that with Christ's advent would come "peace." And with glorious boldness the Chinese Doctor asked the group of social welfare workers, "Do you come in His Name, He who is the Prince of Peace? Is it with the intent to make known the wonders of His grace and power among our people? If so, then, dear friends in the name of our great needy China, I welcome you."

At the recent Pan-Pacific Congress at Honolulu, the Governor of Honolulu wired for Dr. Stone to come to represent China. When she learned that a Bazaar and an Exhibition of Dancing was the plan to raise money for the delegates' expenses, she refused to accept this honor.

In her medical practice in Shanghai, no matter where she visits, whether in the homes of the humble poor, or of the Chinese rich, she never fails to testify to her Christ and often leads her patients to the Saviour. And no matter what high circles she may be invited to share in, it is always expected of Dr. Stone that she will bear an unhesitating testimony to her religion. Her hospital at Shanghai has the largest Nurses' Training School in China. Her students come from all over China—some of them from the homes of high officials—some of them pay tuition and all of them pay their own board for the privilege of getting their training under Dr. Stone. Among the conditions of their coming are: they must study the Bible, they must attend daily chapel, they must attend the Sunday services of the Tabernacle, and they must learn English as far as possible. At present there are two hundred and ten nurses in training. Frequently I have preached at the Tabernacle and one side of the building would be filled up with these nurses. Many of them come from heathen homes and at the Bethel revivals they get saved and sanctified and then go out as Christian nurses, not only to carry healing all over China, but salvation also.

Dr. Stone is a woman of the most unusual leadership and gifts. She is very ingenious. She has a unique knowledge of human nature and particularly of the Chinese. All through the various crucial bits of history of the last seventeen years, with China torn up by a revolution and strife, and wars, and riots, etc., Dr. Stone has handled every emergency with the most unusual skill. During the uprising against the foreigners of 1927, when the soldiers wanted to come into the compound and occupy the buildings she steadfastly held her ground and so skillfully engineered things that not a building was taken and everything was held in tact. When the war raged around Shanghai and they wanted to take her hospital she said, "No. But send all the wounded soldiers that our hospital can take in and we will nurse them, and take care of them." And so, for a while the hospital was filled to capacity with wounded soldiers.

One evening as I was walking through the compound I looked into the Tabernacle and up in a corner by the platform the servants had gathered and there was Dr. Stone teaching them the Bible. It is a rule at Bethel that all servants must read their Bibles and must attend religious services. This rule helps to solve the labor question and a happier group of servants perhaps cannot be found anywhere than at Bethel. Most of them have found the Lord since coming here. On one occasion some thieving was going on and Dr. Stone called the servants together and held up her stethoscope and told them she was going to find the thief. One by one, they were examined and the thief was found. His heart beat betrayed him!

Dr. Stone lives the busiest kind of life. Her buoyant and optimistic disposition helps her through. Her laugh is wonderful. She sings her songs of faith and trust no matter how dark the day is or how trying the circumstance. She scatters sunshine wherever she goes. She has a way of carrying tremendous responsibilities without worry. She knows no matter how stormy Galilee might be that Christ is on board, and he will save her from sinking. Dr. Stone is thoroughly in love with life and duty. She never whines or whimpers. A triumphant faith is her glorious challenge to all sorts of trials and difficulties which appear upon the horizon. She is no half-believer of a casual creed, who never feels deeply and who hesitates and fritters life away. She can say with Browning,

"This world's no blot or blank;

It means intensely and means good.

To find its meaning is my meat and drink." And she can say in the language of the Scriptures,

"Lo, I come to do Thy will, Oh God."

When Dr. Stone visits America she exerts a profound influence. Doors open wide to her on every hand. Some of the biggest pulpits are open for her to speak in. Crowds want to hear her message because she is a burning and a shining light, a herald of a godly passion, a child of God and a Kingdom worker filled to the brim with a Heaven-given enthusiasm. Dr. Stone is pronouncedly orthodox. She is a great believer in her Bible, from Genesis to Revelation. She lets her Bible criticize her. She has never descended to the petty job of being a Bible critic. She is sound in the faith, and she could not stand the increasing flow of modernism that was invading the mission fields of China. She has been a Methodist all her life and believed with all her soul the glorious old doctrines of Methodism as they have come down from John Wesley to the fathers. When she saw these doctrines set aside by modernistic teachings her soul was roused. She felt that what China, the land of her birth, needed was not critics, but evangelists; not criticism, but a vital Gospel; not program but more prayer; not the modern spirit but the Holy Ghost. In 1920 she and Miss Jennie V. Hughes resigned from the W. F. M. S. of the Methodist Episcopal Church and they were providentially led to open up a new page in their life history at Shanghai. And Bethel appeared upon the map. In eight years the growth of this mission has been phenomenal in the history of Christian missions in China. The name Bethel has become widely known and when people come to Shanghai they want to visit Bethel, of which they have read and heard so much.

Without any Missionary Society or Board, or Association back of them, but with a faith in a mighty God they started Bethel. Just here I am reminded of those words of Browning in "Paracelsus" in which he says, "Are there not two points in the adventure of a diver; one when, a beggar, he prepares to plunge, one when, a prince, he rises with his pearl? Festus, I plunge."

Both Dr. Stone and Miss Hughes are "plungers." They plunged, and a Hospital, a Nurses' Training School, a Bible School, a Primary and Middle school and Gospel Tabernacle, four Gospel missions and a city Dispensary and clinic, appear upon the map.

Here at Bethel, Chinese preachers, evangelists and pastors are trained and Christian workers developed to go out all over China carrying the Gospel of a free and full salvation. Bethel is one of the holiness centers of China. In its special meetings, in its revivals and conventions the great doctrines of entire sanctification and the second coming are preached, and in the annual summer convention people from many parts of China come to this feast of Tabernacles and they get the fire to go home and spread it.

The calls for workers from Bethel are constantly coming in. Several weeks ago a band of Chinese workers were sent to far off Yunnan and as they went they preached the gospel and saw people saved. The demand for workers is greater than the supply. As soon as workers are trained they are sent forth into the harvest field.

At the present moment of writing three evangelistic bands are in the far field, one in West China, one in Yunnan, near Thibet, while a third is in warring Shantung, and as this article goes to press, still a fourth starts with the writer and wife for the interior of Fukien for seven weeks of meetings.

Ten Reasons Why I Know the Bible is The Very Word of God.

Dr. W. E. Biederwolf.

CHAPTER VIII.

ITS FULFILLED PROPHECY.

MARSHALL Wade one time laughed at the alleged proof of Christianity from the fulfillment of prophecy. He said the predictions were of course all written after the events. But when Bishop Newton reminded him that several of the prophecies were not fulfilled until recent times, and showed him beyond all doubt that some were written many centuries before the events took place, the Marshall was startled and said he must acknowledge that, "if this point could be proved to satisfaction, there would be no argument against such plain matter of fact; it would certainly convince him, and he believed it would be the readiest way to convince every reasonable man of the truth of Revelation."

It is just this that we wish to commend to you as an eighth proof that the Bible is the veritable Word of God, namely, the proof from the Fulfillment of Prophecy.

The destructive criticism of the Bible of course denies the possibility of prophecy. They say it can't be done. Well, it is quite true that so far as human agency alone is concerned no man can unlock the future. But it is quite another thing when holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Spirit of God and made known to the world in advance the things that God would have us to know were surely coming to pass.

But higher criticism says, It can't be done. Therefore any book containing predictions of things which have really come to pass must have been in the very nature of the case written after the events transpired. I heard of a Frenchman once who was so wedded to his theory that when some one told him the facts contradicted it, he replied, "Well then, so much the worse for the facts."

There is a verse I read somewhere that goes like this:
"The owl atheism, sailing on obscene wing across the sky,
Drops his blue fringed lids and shuts them close;
"And hooting at the glorious sun in heaven, Cries out, 'Where is it?'"

There are men just like that, and of course if a man is going to be so owl-eyed, so bat-eyed as to shut his eyes whenever he comes into the presence of light, he will keep company of course with the Frenchman mentioned above.

There is no use talking to a man like the one I read of the other day, who said he was willing to be convinced but he would like to see the man who could convince him.

Look for a few moments at some of the prophecies concerning the Gentile world.

No critic has ever been so rash as to deny that the book of Ezekiel was written at least 200 years before the time of Alexander. Well, in chapter 26 the downfall of Tyre is predicted. Her walls were to be destroyed and her towers to be broken down. God said, "I will also scrape her dust from her and make her like the top of a rock." More than 240 years rolled on and Tyre built on an island of the sea still stood as the proud mistress of the waters.

Then came Alexander, and the words of prophecy which had seemed like a vain menace, found their fulfillment. He marched his army to the sea, built a solid causeway for one-half mile across to Tyre and literally fulfilled the words spoken concerning her fate 250 years before.

If any one, determined not to believe, should say this prediction was added to the book after the fall of Tyre, what will he say to that part of the prophecy which says, "And thou shalt be built no more?" What answer has the ages to this challenge from Almighty God? Nothing but silence. The site of Tyre is today, before your very eyes like the top of a barren rock without even a mound to mark the place of her former glory.

In Obadiah 18, it was predicted that the race of the Edomites should become extinct, and who does not know that centuries later with the Mohammedan invasion this thing has come to pass and there is not an Edomite to be found in all the world so far as anybody knows.

Concerning Babylon Isaiah said, "Babylon shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah. It shall never be inhabited; neither shall it be dwelt in anymore from generation to generation; and wolves shall cry in their castles and jackals in the pleasant palaces." Ask the traveller today who journeys there whether these seem to be the idle words of a man or the veritable prediction of Him whose "word shall not pass away."

Take old Thebes, the ancient capital of Egypt, the hundred-gated city with her pillars so large that six men standing with meeting finger tips could barely span them. She presents today the most magnificent ruins the world has ever seen. Pococks said that without some extraordinary accident such magnificent and solidity must have lasted forever. Well, if you will read Ezekiel 30, you will find that prophecy has something to say about the extraordinary accident. God said, "I will execute judgment upon her, and she shall be broken up."

Look at Egypt herself, the once proud mother of science and letters and art. She was unique in her greatness among the nations. But Jeremiah said, "O virgin daughter of Egypt; in vain dost thou use many medicines; there is no healing for thee." Ezekiel said, "She shall not any more lift herself up among the nations." She was to be a "base kingdom." How surely indeed has all this come to pass. In Ezekiel 30, it is said, "There shall be no more a prince out of the land of Egypt," and from 350 B. C. down to the present moment there has been no native prince to rule the land and there never will be.

So daring are the prophecies that they extend even to the details in the general calamity that was to overtake this proud nation according to the prediction of the Word of God. The fisheries were to fail; and they have. Their industries were to perish and they have, and the land and all that was therein was to be made waste by strangers. Indeed there are a score of prophecies relating to the land of Egypt, referring, as we have seen, to the very details of her history, and all of which have been literally fulfilled.

Let us grant that one prophecy, and perhaps two, might by accident have turned out to be true, but could any one be so foolish as to think this of them all? And if not, then whose is this Book upon which such a seal is set, if it is not the Book of Him whose "thought grasps the ages and before whose eyes the future holds no veil?"

We have mentioned only a few out of the many prophecies relating to the Gentile nations of the world. Now look at a few concerning the Jews and the land that God once gave them, and has promised shall be theirs again some day. If there could be any more overwhelming proof that this Book is the very Word of God you will find it in these predictions.

When Frederick the Great asked his court Chaplain to prove in three words that the Bible was a book inspired of God, the Chaplain replied, "Sire, the Jews."

Take the land of Palestine—a veritable commentary on the assurance that heaven and earth shall pass away but that the word of the Lord endureth forever. Thousands of years ago God said concerning Israel, if she continued in disobedience: "I will bring the land into desolation and you will I scatter among the nations." Lev. 26.

And what has Israel done but stubbornly resist the will of God from that day until now, and therefore if this prophecy was ever to be fulfilled it ought to be now. And what a sight has this land, once flowing with milk and honey, presented for all these centuries! Dean Stanley says, "Above all other countries in the world it is the Land of Ruins."

The details are too many to mention. Speaking of a certain district Mark Twain says, "There is not a solitary village throughout its whole extent," and after quoting the prophecy just mentioned, Mark Twain says, "No man can stand here by deserted Ain Mellahah and say the prophecy has not been fulfilled."

Concerning the city of Bethel, Amos 3 says, "Bethel shall come to nought." In the days of Josephus it was still a city; in Jerome's time it was but a hamlet and now for centuries later travellers have passed over the site without remark. The Bethel that once was has been completely erased from the map.

Micah prophesied the same thing of Samaria (Micah 1), and it became "a heap of the field," its stones were poured down and its very foundations were laid bare, even as God through His prophet said would be the case.

Jesus Christ Himself said of Capernaum, "And thou, Capernaum, shalt go down unto Hades." Capernaum was still a city as late as 800 years after Christ's time, but it has now gone down as Christ said it would and today, as Urquhart says, "Men are unable to point with absolute certainty even to its grave."

And then read those remarkable prophecies about the city of Jerusalem. You who have gone as tourists to the Holy Land stand up now and tell us whether or no this Book has proven itself to be the very word of God.

Among other things tell us, you who have been there, whether the temple is still standing; the temple of which Christ said, "Not one stone shall be left upon another," and concerning which the Roman conqueror in his siege of Jerusalem commanded that it should be spared. Tell us why it was burned and its blackened walls thrown down in defiance of the express command of Titus that it be spared.

The history of the Jews for ages past even to the present time has been foretold over and over again by their own prophets. Their sojourn in Egypt and their later captivity in Babylon were both prophesied.

It is most interesting to note concerning the Babylonian Captivity that it was announced 200 years before Cyrus the Persian king was born that it was to be none other than himself through whom the deliverance from Babylon should be brought about; and Josephus the great Jewish historian, tells us that when Cyrus read this prediction and saw his own name written in the book of Isaiah he was laid hold upon by an earnest desire to see that the prophecy written about him should be fulfilled.

Read the 28th chapter of Deuteronomy and you will find a series of remarkable prophecies concerning the history of the Jews whose fulfillment down through the ages furnishes a testimony for the supernatural origin of this Book such as no infidel has ever been able to refute.

The fact that the Jews are even today scattered like grain among all the nations of the earth is only the fulfillment of prophecy and another mighty proof that God, who "inhabits eternity" and sees the end from the beginning, has spoken in this Book.

It was all written before hand. "And you will I scatter among the nations," it is said in Leviticus; and again in Deuteronomy, "And Jehovah will scatter you among all the peoples from one end of the earth even unto the other;" while in Numbers it is said, "The Jews shall dwell alone and shall not be reckoned among the nations."

And yet it was just as distinctly prophesied that the Jews should be preserved and that among whatever people he dwelt he was to remain the Jew just the same.

And today you find them everywhere. The proverbial cat when thrown in the air always strikes on its feet. So handle the Jew as you will; drive him out or make him welcome; persecute him or honor him with high position, whether you find him among the sledged Pollocks on the ice or in the tropics of Africa, whether he rests in peace beneath the Stars and Stripes, or whether under the oppressive heel of a foreign tyrant, he is a Jew still.

Herder calls the Jews, "The enigma of history."

Milman, in his History of the Jews, says, "Their perpetuity, their national immortality is at once the most curious problem to the political student, and to the religious man a subject of profound and awful admiration."

Other nations have passed away, but the Jewish nation, scattered throughout the world, oppressed and down-trodden and massacred by the thousands, still lives on, springing up ever again from its undying stock. But what did God say in Jeremiah? "Though I make an end of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee."

People of intelligence, I ask you how an honest inquirer can doubt that this is in very fact the Word of God in the presence of a testimony like that?

But even more wonderful than all this, if such a thing is possible, is the fulfillment of prophecy concerning the Christ Himself.

The Jews looked upon the crucifixion of Jesus as a chastisement from God which utterly disproved his claims to be the Messiah. But 700 years before the blood of Jesus ever stained the sod of Calvary it was foretold that they would so regard Him; for Isaiah had said, "Yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God and afflicted."

The fact that he was rejected by His own people might seem to be an argument against Christianity, but the prophecy of this very thing turns this fact into Christianity's strongest defense. Likewise, if they had accepted Him it would have proven that He was not the Messiah foretold.

You can bring the prophecies down to the lowest date the most daring destructive critic ever presumed to assign them and still they would bear a date hundreds of years before Jesus was ever born.

The Greek translation of the Hebrew Scriptures is known as the Septuagint, and is so-called because it is the work of seventy learned Jews, and this we know was accomplished at least 250 years before the Christian era. We know this as well as we know anything. And so while we might argue from the standpoint of the Hebrew Bible and claim thousands of years, it is enough for our purpose to argue from the smallest interval which can be assigned; for the man who can look through 200 years and see with accuracy the things that are to be, can look through 200,000 years and do the same thing.

The fact is that there are more than 250 distinct prophecies in the Old Testament, written from 400 to 1500 years before Jesus was born and every one of them has been fulfilled in the most minute way in His birth, death, His resurrection, His ascension and in the events of His life in general.

We are told in Genesis that he was to be the seed of a woman, and it was so.

It was foretold that He was to be a Jew (Gen. 12:3), and He was.

It was said in Isaiah that He was to be born of a virgin, and so it came to pass.

Micah tells us that He was to be born in Bethlehem, and in Bethlehem of Judea He came into this world.

It was foretold that He was to be of the tribe of Judah, and so He was.

He was to be of the Family of David, and so it came to pass.

His flight into Egypt, His residence at Capernaum, His lowliness and His poverty, all were clearly foretold.

His rejection by the Jews Isaiah clearly predicted, and even the manner of his death was set forth (Ps. 22:14-16). Yet death by crucifixion was unknown in the time of David who made the prophecy.

The casting of lots for His garments (Ps. 22:18), the fact that His legs were not broken as was the case with ordinary criminals (Ps. 34:20), and even the cry of the Forsaken One was foretold in the very words that fell from His blessed lips in the darkness that gathered around the cross.

In Isa. 53 his burial is mentioned and in Acts 2, we are told explicitly that His resurrection had taken place in fulfillment of the prophecy recorded in the sixteenth Psalm.

In Ps. 110 His ascension was most clearly predicted. He was to sit at the right hand of God until his enemies became his footstool, and seven years after Jesus had taken His exalted place in the heavens Stephen in the time of his martyrdom, "Being full of the Holy Ghost looked up steadfastly into heaven and said, 'Behold I see the heavens opened, and Jesus the Son of man standing at the right hand of God.'"

What human mind could possibly be capable of such stupendous wonders? The future is an open book only to one mind, and that is the mind of God. Well indeed, has the wise man said, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth." It is the unexpected that happens. A man may stand before the approaching days and command them to reveal the secrets they contain, but he will stand there just as powerless and just as foolish as did old King Chanute when he stood on the serf and bade the ocean waves stay out.

The anticipations of the wisest of men and the surmises of the most far-seeing have been mocked again and again by the bitter irony of events. Malte Brun in his history of Prussia said that because of its proximity to Russia it must be in many respects a secondary power. He knew in his time little more if any of what the future held for Germany than did the Kaiser in his.

Some of you gentlemen are level-headed business men, and you demand facts. Well, you have had them, and I ask you candidly, what are you going to do with them? They demand an explanation.

There are other Bibles in the world, but not a one of them contains a single prophecy. They would not dare to make a prophecy; for to claim to be divine and then to make a prophecy that never came to pass would be to brand this claim with the stigma of incontrovertible fraud.

The Bible, the Christian Scriptures, is the only one that has ever made a prophecy, and it has made hundreds of them, and not a one of them has ever failed in any respect of all that this Word has said should come to pass, and this is one of the great reasons why I know this Book is the work of Him whose Word endureth forever.

"Almighty Lord, the sun shall fail—
The moon forget her nightly tale;
The deepest silence hush on high
The radiant chorus of the sky."

"But, fixed for everlasting years,
Unmoved amid the wreck of spheres,
Thy Word shall shine in cloudless day,
When heaven and earth have passed away."

Facts For The Consideration of The Holiness People.

Rev. J. L. Glascock.

IN writing this article I shall substitute for the editorial we, the personal pronoun I, and trust that by so doing I may not be thought egotistical.

For some time I have had a strong impression to write some things that I believe would be profitable for the holiness people to consider but have hesitated to do so lest I might be misunderstood and regarded as a pessimist.

I entertain a love for the holiness people like the love I have for my own kin, and every day I pray for them and every department of the work for the promotion of an uttermost salvation. My whole life has been devoted to the work that they are called to do and so we have much in common, and because of that fact I feel more at liberty to write as I am impressed to write.

I regard myself fortunate to have been associated with so many of the leading holiness preachers and people in my evangelistic work. This has given me a wider vision of the work than I could otherwise have had, and enabled me to see the pressing need of some things that some of the holiness people are neglecting. Among those I have been associated with in the work of holiness are Revs. John Thompson, E. I. D. Pepper, Joseph H. Smith, David B. Updegraff, Dugan Clark, C. J. Fowler, P. F. Bresee, E. F. Walker, Bud Robinson, H. C. Morrison, C. W. Ruth, George J. Kunz, C. E. Cornell, M. W. Knapp, G. A. McLaughlin, S. A. Danford, J. G. Morrison, W. H. Huff, William H. Hoople, M. G. Standley, C. H. Babcock and a host more whose names cannot be recorded for lack of space.

Also my extensive itinerary with so many of the different organizations of the Holiness Movement, has enabled me to recognize the crying need of the holiness people in not a few things.

I have conducted Pentecostal meetings in some of the largest churches and camp meetings in this country, and in many of the holiness schools and colleges. My itinerary has taken me into every state of the United States but four, and into four of the provinces of Canada, having crossed the continent eight times in all, traveling a distance equal to more than one hundred and nineteen times across the United States, and more than fourteen times around the globe. Have conducted about six hundred revival meetings, held about eleven thousand religious services, delivered as many sermons and religious addresses, and more than twenty-five thousand people testified to having been converted, reclaimed or sanctified in meetings in which I have labored. God knows I give him all the praise and glory for these things.

My observation convinces me that many, I was about to state most, of the holiness people are lacking in intercessory prayer. Prayer is a fine art and with most of the people it is a lost art.

It ought to be an inspiration to more diligently pray when one reads of the wonderful feats that have been accomplished by the people in Old Testament times, in New Testament times, and in modern times.

In answer to Elijah's prayer no rain fell upon the earth for three years and six months, and again he prayed and the heavens gave rain and the earth brought forth her fruit, and James declares that he was a man subject to like passions as we are.

Paul and Silas, imprisoned in the Philippian jail at the hour of midnight prayed and sang praises to God and suddenly there was a great earthquake which shook the foundations of the prison and immediately all the doors opened, every man's bands were loosed, and the jailer and his whole family were saved.

Pentecost was prayed down and not worked up, and after that the disciples went everywhere preaching Jesus Christ, and when they were brutally beaten and forbidden no more to speak in his name, they held a prayer meeting and the place was shaken where they were assembled together.

George Muller's biographer was visiting at Mr. Muller's home in Bristol, England. As they were about to retire at night, Mr. Muller informed his biographer that there was no food in the orphanage for the children's breakfast, and suggested that they pray for a supply. The result was that sufficient food was sent in for the children's breakfast and supplies sufficient to feed them for six weeks in addition. Mr. Muller once declared that he had received so many remarkable answers to his prayers that he believed that mortal man could receive anything in the will of God through the means of prayer.

The one outstanding characteristic of the Wesleyan revival—the revival in North Ireland, the Welsh revival, and all genuine revivals of religion was intercessory prayer. Nothing can be substituted for this to produce pentecostal results.

There is great danger of holiness people neglecting this potent factor in the work of salvation. When they come together to conduct meetings for the promotion of holiness, there is great danger of their being betrayed into an undue amount of social visiting to the neglect of importunate prayer. This course is certain very seriously to militate against the work they are supposed to accomplish in the salvation of the unsaved and the entire sanctification of Christian people.

We all understand that the holiness people are like one large family and when they meet in their various gatherings it is perfectly natural for them to exchange experiences and enjoy Christian fellowship, and this is proper as well as natural. But this should not degenerate into levity, jesting, or anything else that would grieve the Holy Spirit and cause them to miss the spiritual blessings they should receive, but at the same time, contribute their part to the work of soul-saving and the advancement of the work of holiness. There is no better way to destroy the good influence even of the Holiness Movement than to pursue the course I am warning people to avoid.

Holiness preachers should guard against the same snare that is laid for the feet of the laymen, lest they should come to their pulpits trusting to their innate ability and intellectual preparation without the Shekinah of God upon them due to their not having waited upon God in importunate prayer until the anointing of the Holy Spirit came upon them and thus failed to accomplish the end of all preaching—the salvation, entire sanctification and edification of souls.

And this other thing may well be observed if they are lining up with the holiness people and professing the experience of holiness and preaching it in Holiness Camp Meetings, they should do no side-stepping, shilly-shallying or soft-pedaling in church meetings and especially in large union meetings, but stand four-square and preach holiness as a second work of grace subsequent to regeneration. Not preaching about Holiness, but preach the doctrine of Holiness, the experience of Holiness, the life to be lived. Preach it with authority, preach it with power, preach it with faith.

It will be imperative for him to pursue this course even if he is laboring with a people who profess not to believe in it and will not accept his preaching. Or if he should not have so many calls for church meetings, or large union meetings, or if his offerings should not be so large, failing to pursue the course I have indicated, the Rev. Raymond Browning has declared that the proper name to be given him would be chameleon preacher.

Facts warrant the contention that while some people have entered the work of special evangelistic singing upon their own initiative, others have been called to the work of Pentecostal singing as much as some have been called to pentecostal preaching. Indeed they have become a valuable asset to the Holiness Movement. Because of that fact, great responsibility rests upon them. They should be clear in their experience of holiness, and have a passion for soul saving, laboring in the different exercises of the services for the salvation and sanctification of souls. Their singing should bless and edify the people instead of entertaining them as they sing salvation songs under the anointing of the Holy Spirit. They should feel that that is the part that they should contribute to the service, and not furnish amusement or entertainment. Some singers can sing the songs correctly and lead a large chorus choir properly but they have no unction in their singing and no one gets blessed by it. Maybe they have not waited on God in earnest prayer before the service for the unction to sing as the preacher should wait upon God before he comes to his pulpit to preach.

The singers should not occupy more time than is proper for their part of the service. Recently, Dr. Chapman, in an article in The Herald of Holiness, declared that some of our song leaders are professional and that frequently the song service is ninety-five percent entertainment and practically without spiritual values.

For a singer to be smart and say cute things and perform, swinging around on one foot with the other held high may amuse the silly people, but it will never contribute anything to the success of the meeting in the salvation and edification of souls.

The character of the song has much to do with the success of the meeting in soul-saving. Plantation melodies may amuse and entertain a class of people but no one has ever been known to be saved or spiritually blessed by their singing. The manner in which the songs are sung has much to do with the effect they have on the people. John Newton's song, "Amazing Grace," if properly interpreted and sung in the spirit in which it was written, may prove a great spiritual blessing to the people, but singing it in the manner in which it is often sung may amuse the giddy and thoughtless people but it is not calculated to save or edify a single soul.

But it will not suffice for people to pray and preach and sing unless these means eventuate in the regeneration of sinners, the reclamation of backsliders, the entire sanctification of Christians, and the edifying of the saints of God and that, too, in large numbers.

When distinguished statesmen, able editors of daily secular papers, and eminent authors of magazine articles are declaring that no substantial and enduring government can be built upon any foundation but the Bible, and that Christianity must be the Conservator not only of the Church, but also of civilization as well, it were high time that the holiness people were meeting the challenge and setting about anew to do exploits for God and sin-cursed humanity in the conversion and entire sanctification of multiplied hundreds and thousands of precious souls. God has not saved and sanctified people for spectacular display but for service, and, if the Christian people fail him, he has no other instrumentality which he can employ for this laudable work.

We are living in an age of discovery, in-

The Crucifixion of John Henry Huston

By Alice Hollander.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

WHEN Huston closed out the conference year old Bethel church, in building and congregation, had been thoroughly revolutionized. The church had been painted inside and out, the parsonage refurnished, the attendance trebled, the membership almost doubled, the pastor's salary increased, all the conference claims paid in full, and a very eager and, almost universal, demand for his return.

Of course, our banker, Mr. Belser, was dead set against his coming back to old Bethel. The pastors of the city, generally, were hoping for a change and a quiet brother who would not disturb the spiritual life of the city.

Sometime ago I was visiting in a certain city and through some friends became acquainted with a prominent Methodist minister. We had several conversations and, for some reason, I think he was a bit displeased over his appointment; he said to me that a rich banker in an annual conference had more influence with the appointing power than a half dozen earnest, consecrated preachers, whose usefulness, comfort and welfare of their families were at stake.

I do not claim to know anything about the correctness of this statement, but it occurs to me that somewhere in the writings of John Wesley, I have seen something to this effect, that, if you built fine churches you will have to have rich men to support them, and these same men will so dominate and dictate the church life, that the spirituality will be destroyed. We can understand how that any man who puts a large amount of money into a church enterprise will be disposed to have his say about who shall preach, what he shall preach, and how the church shall be conducted.

Frequently, I have sat in the gallery, or somewhere in the back pews of a church building, and looked for a time on the work of an annual conference, and it has occurred to me that large attention was given to matters concerning finance—money, assessments for money, collections of money, distributions of money, insistence and exhortation that more money shall be secured. The great need of the times is money. Money for education; money for missions; more money for churches to support church officials; money for numberless enterprises and, I suppose this is quite necessary. but it seems unfortunate that it should have such a prominent place and such urgency. Sometimes we hear almost nothing of the salvation of souls, little or no exhortation or urge for the holding of revivals, and the seeking of the lost. One is made to feel that the dominant objective is the raising of money, and that preachers rise into fame and influence, and into the securing of large appointments and increase of salary in proportion to the amount of money they may secure from the people during conference year. In fact, a mere onlooker would sometimes be led to believe that the main thing, the one great thing for a preacher to do in the course of his ministry, would be to search after, and secure money, rather than to seek for the souls of the lost and bring them back to a gracious Saviour.

But enough; I fear I shall be misunderstood. It takes money, of course, to build churches, schools, to keep up mission work and to carry forward the various enterprises of the church; but as a casual onlooker I should be glad to attend, sometime, a great gathering of the ministers of the gospel, who in their reports, addresses, the appointment of committees, and the whole spirit of the assembly has the appearance of a tremendous enthusiasm for the rescue of the perishing, the saving of the souls of the lost, the bringing of the church into the secret place of power, her separation from sin, and her consecration to her Lord and Master in a beautiful and prolific bridehood for the salvation of humanity.

Soon after Huston arrived at the seat of the conference he was called aside for a quiet interview with the overseer of his district and informed that his removal would be necessary. Huston demanded to know why. He called attention to the growth of the congregation, the gracious revival, the number of accessions, the improvement of the church property, and the general desire for his return. He finally got the answer that the wealthy banker and two or three young manufacturers under his influence, insisted that a change should be made, and that a young graduate from an eastern Seminary, noted for his modernistic views, should take his place. Already, the young seminary man had been put down for, and would go to, old Bethel.

Huston said, "You are well acquainted with Mr. Belser. You know he is a man of no spiritual life. His family are leaders in all kinds of worldliness; they have dances, card parties and theatrical parties at his home as much, or more, than any other family in Goodwill. You also are aware that old Bethel Church had stood for years almost inactive. The older members dying off, the younger people of the neighborhood uniting with other churches, and under my ministry we have had a most prosperous year; and now I am to understand that the appointing powers in the church will listen to the objection of a young man of no piety, a strong evolution modernist because of his wealth and prominence, that he has not made for himself, but inherited from his father, and disregard the wishes of a large congregation of devout people, move me out and put in a young skeptic who is announcing that the days of revivals have passed, and whose chief business will be to destroy and quench the fires of divine grace that have kindled under my ministry."

"Very well," said Huston. "I came up expecting to join the conference, but if this is what I am to expect from the 'powers that be', I think I shall wait a while. I am receiving many calls for evangelistic work and I feel that my great mission is to win souls, and I shall give myself at once to this work."

His superior in office insisted that he join the conference, and that this sort of thing might not happen again, but Huston, in perfectly good humor, insisted that he would take no chances, but devote himself to soul winning as an evangelist.

Many of the preachers begged him to come into the conference, but Huston's face was set like a flint. He stayed with the brethren until conference closed, received but few calls to hold meetings. Many of the brethren would have been glad to have him, but for some reason, they were a bit intimidated. To invite him, they feared, would be a bit disrespectful to the 'powers', and they had learned to move cautiously.

We are not endorsing Huston's decision and his course of conduct; we are simply relating facts. It is a risky business to take issue with the firmly established ecclesiasticism. The church cannot very well afford to encourage any sort of rebellion or disregard of her authority. She must hold herself together in a very compact and united organization, in order to properly function in carrying forward her various enterprises; and this thing of an independent man, with education, a clear head, a warm heart, and a determined mind may prove a disturbing element, interfere with what is called "conference rings," that comparatively small body of men who direct, arrange, control, and know exactly where they are going next conference year, weeks and, perhaps months, before the convening of the body.

Let it be remembered that I am not saying these things are true, but there are rumors which come to us who know comparatively little of the real facts. But, to use an old proverb that is quite outworn, "Where there is so much smoke, there is bound to be some fire." Anyhow, Huston bought a large tent, secured a good singer, and entered the evangelistic field. His fine personal appearance, his brave, independent, kindly spirit, his wide knowledge of things, his remarkable eloquence, and his deep devotion made him irresistible. Wherever his tent was pitched it was packed with eager listeners, his altars were filled, hundreds of sinners were converted, scores of believers were sanctified, and numbers saved in his meetings united with the various churches.

He was frequently called by pastors; he occasionally held union meetings, but he found some difficulty, as he insisted on preaching full salvation from sin, and the importance of guarding carefully against backsliding, and the possibility of falling away and being lost after regeneration. He had many calls to camp meetings, and met with gratifying success.

For three years he went forward with his evangelistic work with remarkable blessing. He saw multitudes saved. There were demands for his services in every direction. He had several times received earnest petitions from his devoted friends in old Bethel Church at Goodwill to come and hold revival meetings, but he hesitated to go for fear of bringing disturbance in the old church he had served so successfully, and from which, he had been removed so arbitrarily.

Finally, he determined to go and look over his old field of labor, see what the city had been doing, and talk with some people who desired to buy five acres of land he had purchased while pastor in the city.

Help Some Young Girl

By presenting her with "Beautiful Girlhood" at graduation time. Girls have need of guidance and a helping hand all along the way, and because of this need "Beautiful Girlhood" was written. It is an inexpensive gift, and $1.00 thus invested may bring large returns, as we do not believe any girl can read the book without aspiring to high and holy things. Order a copy and help build character in some girl. Price, $1.00.

A Timely Book.

"Why I Believe It" is the title of a well bound, well printed, neatly gotten up book of 176 pages. It is written by D. L. Pierson, a scholarly man of genuine devotion and unhesitating faith in the inspiration of the Holy Scriptures. Mr. Pierson is editor of the Missionary Review of the World.

At this time, when attacks against the Bible, as the inspired Word of God, are coming from so many sources, this book is especially timely. While it is scholarly, it is, at the same time, perfectly adapted to the common people who need just such a book. Fathers and mothers ought to read it so they may be prepared to instruct their children. Young people ought to read it so that their faith may be well founded, and they can give an answer to skeptical teachers and friends who ridicule the Word of God. Preachers ought to read it because it is full of valuable information and good sermon material. By all means, get this book and keep it handy for reference. It is invaluable. How I do wish I could have carried it in my saddle-pockets when I was a young circuit rider and poured over its contents in times of devotion. It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky. Price, $1.50. H. C. MORRISON.

GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD

SAP KYO, KOREA.

Bro. Han blesses God for the wonderful seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord during this month, for the progress of the work and for the precious souls who have come to the feet of Jesus for pardon.

For one week during the month sun-rise prayer meetings were held from three to seven o'clock each morning, and the grace of God was richly outpoured. One of the women who lives in another village came to each one of these meetings and received rich blessing upon her soul. The Holy Spirit dealt with her bringing to her remembrance some things she had done before her conversion which she had never made right. She had stolen some rice at different times, and once she had killed a chicken belonging to one of her neighbors and ate it secretly. She walked in the light which came to her and was blessed in making confession and restitution, and the man to whom she returned the hen was brought under conviction and sought the Lord at once. He had been a very wicked man with real hatred in his heart for the Christians, and had often beat his wife for going to the Christian church but the Holy Spirit was faithful and brought conviction to his heart. With real contrition of heart he confessed all of his sins boldly and opened his heart to Christ. One of the things which he confessed was that five years ago when he had bought rice from a certain man the man gave him back five yen too much. He confessed it, however, with tears and said he was going to return the money. He now attends all of the meetings and is very earnest. Praise the Lord!

One of the new seekers is a Mr. Kim who was known as one of the most wicked men in the district. Eight times he had been held at the police office and once he had been in prison. Because of the wickedness of his heart neither the law or punishment of any kind had made him any better only the love and grace of God could reach him. The Gospel message gripped his heart and caused him to seek the Lord earnestly at once. Bro. Han told him that Isa. 1:18 was for him, "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool."

Sr. An, the Bible woman of the Keum Tong Li church, came and helped Bro. Han several days this month. She visited the women in the community and found many hungry hearts so that between forty and fifty expressed their desire to become Christians. Praise God for these who are hungering and thirsting for the way of salvation, and we would ask you to pray with us that they may be led to know Christ as their personal Saviour.

Four very blessed cottage meetings were held and in these meetings a number of souls found the Lord. Praise His Name! The cottage meetings are held in the different villages round about, and often when the Christians start out over the steep mountains through the snow and ice, singing, praising God and talking together of the goodness of God, Bro. Han's heart leaps for joy and he joins with them in praise unto God who has redeemed them. They never seem to mind the long distances or any of the difficulties but think only of the joy they have in serving the Lord. As they go along singing many people have been influenced and some have thus been led to seek the Lord. Praise His Name! One of these seekers has led all of his family to the Lord and they all attend the church together.

In one of these cottage meetings the believers stayed until midnight and listened with interest as Bro. Han preached to them. The Holy Spirit was very manifestly present. On the next day Bro. Han visited about fifty homes in that locality and had four earnest seekers. One of them had been a famous gambler and another was a murderer but God got hold of their hearts, convicted them of sin and brought them to repentance. Bless His Name! The man who had been a murderer has been wonderfully saved and is giving a bright testimony to the power of God to save to the uttermost.

Another cause for praise to Bro. Han is the marvelous answer to prayer in behalf of the husband of one of the women believers. For about a year this faithful woman has prayed day and night for the salvation of her husband and in spite of seeming defeat she continued to pray. He was a Chinese scholar and worshipped the idols devotedly. He had no use whatever for the Christian religion. He spent much of his time in drinking and sins of all kinds, and his case seemed almost hopeless but the love of God reached him. Praise God! Conviction of sin came and his life is now completely changed. His drinking, smoking, gambling and idolatry have all ceased for he has become a new creature in Christ Jesus. A short time after his conversion about two hundred of his friends and relatives came and wanted him to join them in a special idolatrous fete but he refused them and wanted to preach to them. He went and got Bro. Maing, pastor of the Keum Tong Li church, who is near him, to come and preach to them, and as a result ten souls definitely sought the Lord at once. Praise God for blessed blood-bought victory!

ABBYVILLE, KANSAS.

A gracious revival was held in the Abbyville Methodist Episcopal Church, Abbyville, Kan., beginning Easter Sunday and closing on Sunday evening, April 14. The meetings were preceded by a week of prayer during Passion Week. The revival services were begun by the pastor, Rev. Ernest D. Bartlett, on Easter Sunday evening and on Monday evening, Rev. Royal E. Dunham, Evangelist of the Nazarene Church of Hutchinson, Kan., came to us.

The week of prayer was a fine preparation for the revival and conviction was on from the very start. In the morning services Brother Dunham presented the great doctrine of entire sanctification clearly and lovingly and in the directness and power of the Holy Spirit. While the attendance was not as large in these day services as we wished, the interest was good and a number of the people pressed in and sought and found the blessing. Their testimonies were clear, and they expressed their deep determination to go through with Christ.

The evening services were rich in the presence of God, and deep conviction was upon every service. Brother Dunham's preaching was owned of God and we can truthfully say that we have never had a revival in which more deep and searching preaching was done. The battle was hard. Satan was aroused, but God gave victory and several earnest seekers found pardon. The spirit of conviction is still on, and we are encouraged to press the battle for souls. In this day of much superficial preaching the thing that is needed is the direct, uncompromising preaching of the Word in love, and in the power of the Spirit. It was just such preaching as this which we had in these services, and we rejoice that it was so. We have heard many of the noted and great evangelists of the Holiness Movement in the past ten years in camp meeting and revival services, but never have we heard a man preach greater or deeper spiritual messages of full salvation than those preached by Brother Dunham. He is a man of prayer and deep devotion and a great student of the Bible. To anyone looking for a Spirit-filled man of God for revival or camp meetings we most heartily recommend Brother Dunham.

Yours in Christ,
Ernest D. Bartlett, Pastor.

BRISTOL, TENNESSEE.

Beginning the fourth week of the revival being held at Anderson Street Methodist Church with interest increasing at each service, the meeting last night was conducted with an overflowing congregation in attendance. The pastor, Rev. Charles H. Williams, is pleased at the results being accomplished. The Rev. M. V. Lewis, who is leading the singing with his talented wife at the piano is playing no little part in the splendid outpouring of the Spirit.

Rev. and Mrs. Lewis came here from Wilmore, Ky., to assist in the revival. Mr. Lewis has been highly complimented for the work he and his wife are doing with his large chorus choir and much enjoyment is felt by the singing of the old hymns. Mr. Lewis has also taught the children many new choruses.

The pastor, Rev. Williams, is a strong believer in the old-time religion, sought after and obtained in the old-fashioned way. He has no sympathy for what he terms "membership drives" where people hold up their hand and sign a little card indicating a willingness to become affiliated with some church. The pastor declares that "The Lord has made himself manifest unto the people. Strong men have broken down and wept like David of old and have given up their sins to become followers of the Nazarene. Many who had not known God in the pardon of their sins have been converted, back-sliders have been reclaimed and Christians are growing stronger in the faith."

TWO GREAT REVIVAL MEETINGS IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

We have just closed two great meetings in South Dakota. The first was held in the First Methodist Church, at Westington Springs, S. D., with the Rev. Harry Blackburn. Brother Blackburn is one of the hardest workers and one of the greatest men to prepare for a meeting of any man I almost ever helped. He had had cottage prayer meetings, visited and gotten in touch with the whole community and had been preaching evangelistic lines in all of his Sunday night services and of course the people were prepared and expected and thanks be to the Lord he was not disappointed.

Over one hundred and fifty definite conversions, scores reclaimed and many made a full consecration to the Lord. The revival swept through the High School and over one hundred of the High School boys and girls were blessed and three young men called to preach. Mrs. Blackburn was a wonderful help in the meeting as she is a great leader for the young people. Many united with the Church the last Sunday, and on the following Sunday (Easter) many more prominent people united and among that number was the cashier of the Bank.

Our next meeting was at Woonsocket, S. D., with the Rev. A. W. Thurston, and Brother Blackburn, wife and some of his good people did much to make this meeting a success. The revival reached a high point and had a wonderful influence in the High School as well as in the city. The High School Superintendent was reclaimed and he and his wife united with the Church, as well as many others. Rev. Thurston is a most excellent man, a hard worker, and is in high esteem among his people.

We are at this writing assisting Rev. J. O. Benson at Edgemont, S. D., and we are having a great meeting.

Fraternally, J. B. Kendall.

HUNTINGTON, WEST VIRGINIA.

On the tenth day of March I began a series of services with Rev. George Thumm, at Kanawha City. This is a small church, but it has some choice people. The Lord blessed in a marvelous way; there were something like fifty or sixty came to the altar and prayed through to victory for pardon or reclamation, or purity of heart. A number joined the church. The power of God was manifested in a great way all through the meeting.

Closed at Kanawha City Easter night and began at Louisa, Ky., April first. This was a union meeting between the two Methodist Churches; the meeting was held in the M. E. Church, South, Rev. Porter pastor of the M. E. Church, South, and Rev. Fryman pastor of the M. E. Church. This was a hard battle; the powers of darkness were manifested in a fight against anything that was holy, or for the upbuilding of God's kingdom. The people would come and sit and listen, but would not move. The Lord helped the writer to preach the truth in all of the fullness of God's redeeming power. The church moved up towards the close of the meeting, and took quite an active part; some were reclaimed, some saved, and the church built up, spiritually. To Christ be all the glory.

Revs. Porter and Fryman are fine young men. Rev. Edwin Grant, who is a student in Asbury College, led the singing, and did it well.

These are appalling times when the Devil is deceiving the people in regard to their religion, or Christianity. People seem to think all they need is to join the church, and then run to picture shows, Sunday baseball and all kinds of worldliness. May there be a great revival to sweep over this old world, that will cause folks to quit sinning and get right with the Lord.

A HALF-DAY AND A HALF-NIGHT OF PRAYER

The half-day and half-night of prayer held in Merritt Place M. E. Church, Indianapolis, Indiana, April 20, in charge of Evangelist S. B. Shaw of Grand Rapids, Michigan, was a meeting never to be forgotten. The presence of God was there in power. Many of the most spiritual people from the various churches of the city, especially the holiness churches were well represented. It was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and love and Christian fellowship prevailed. Many wept and cried to God for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit in all the churches and missions of the city. The most spiritual people of all churches are led to pray for a great revival in these last days. The Lord greatly helped the congregation to sing in faith, "A might revival is sweeping this way." Fifty-four pastors, evangelists, and other religious leaders were present. The altar was filled with many weeping, and crying to God in the old-fashioned way for closer fellowship for a thorough revival. Many pled for a revival that will sweep away sectarian lines.

A unanimous vote was taken that all were drawing nearer to God, and to each other.

REPORT OF MEETINGS.

Since our Conference met in Corbin, Ky., Sept. 26, 1928, we have held revivals, one at Wesley Chapel, East Maysville Charge, also at Trinity on the East Maysville Charge, Rev. A. W. Insko pastor. We found Bro. Insko a man of God who believes in old time revivals. There were twenty-three professed to being saved or sanctified and four additions.

Our next meeting was held at Garrison, Ky., Rev. N. G. Griswold, pastor. The Lord was with us and gave the victory; thirty-four professed to be either saved or sanctified; thirty gave their names for church membership, and twelve additions to the Methodist Church. Our second meeting with Brother Griswold was held at Fullerton, Ky., beginning January 16. Brother Griswold had prepared the way by pastoral visiting, praying in the homes, and having cottage prayer meetings for several weeks preceding the revival. In spite of the snow, and sleet, flu and pneumonia, the house was crowded at almost every service, conviction was deep and conversions bright; there were eighty-five saved or sanctified in this meeting, and fourteen additions to the Methodist Church.

Our next meeting began at Mt. Tabor, Tolesboro, Ky., charge. We had snow and mud to contend with, and much sickness, but the church was blest and ten either saved or sanctified. Bro. Hill is a fine Christian gentleman with a brotherly spirit, and very helpful in a revival.

Mrs. N. H. Young.

COVINGTON, KENTUCKY.

We recently closed a good meeting in the Methodist Church at Mannsville, Ky., in which God poured out his Spirit upon his children, and saved a number of souls. Rev. E. L. Hilburn is the good pastor of these good people, and is one among the best collaborators it has been my privilege to labor with, and his good wife and her sister know just how to take care of a tired evangelist.

We are now in the midst of what bids fair to be a good meeting in the Methodist Church at Petersburg, Ky., with Rev. Peter Walker as pastor. The crowd is fine and people are attending for twenty-five miles around. The John Robinson String Band is playing in this meeting, and they are hard to beat. Coveting the prayers of all God's people everywhere, I am your little brother seeking the lost.

freedom from sin; to be hungering and thirsting after righteousness. He assures us that such shall be filled. Filled, of course, with that for which they hunger; emptied of sin and filled with righteousness. Thank God, the promises of Jesus are safe and sure. Oh, hungry souls, press on! With the Word of God, prayer and faith, kindle your desires for purity of heart into a holy flame of longing. Let this passion for righteousness consume all other desires. Want purity of heart so intensely that you want but little else.

In this state in which Jesus says we are blessed, the soul masters the body. Your spiritual desires rise up, and your physical appetites and passions shrink down, and for the present, go out like fires that, unfed with fuel, cease to exist. To such persons the divine flame will come. We have the word of One who cannot lie, or forget his promises. He says that those who "hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled."

Refuse to feed your hungry soul with anything less than the righteousness which the Lord Jesus Christ has promised. If he tarry, hold on to your purpose and press on with ever increasing desire. He is mighty to save to the uttermost. "He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us."

The Bible doctrine of full salvation exalts the Lord Jesus. It lifts him high above all the powers of sin and Satan, and everything that can contaminate and destroy the soul. It crowns him Lord of all evil powers, master of all situations, equal to all emergencies, superior to all other influences. It worships and adores him as fully sufficient to meet all the needs of our poor fallen natures, and lift us up, saved from sin, into humble and blessed Christlikeness and fellowship.

One can become so hungry for food for the body that they forget other things; they care for and desire nothing else. Food is their one intense objective; so it must be with the soul that would be filled with righteousness. You complain, perhaps, that you have hungered and prayed and trusted, and have not been filled. Possibly, there have been mixed desires. Some hunger for wealth, for honor, for place and power over your fellows. Search your motives carefully. St.

James says, "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts." Your desires, ambitions, selfish pride. You would have the power of God upon you in order that you may use that power toward selfish ends. That, of course, means failure.

May I suggest that in seeking entire sanctification of the soul, in hungering and thirsting after righteousness, you must not seek to make it simply a means to some personal end. Of course, it is supposed that you will have much greater power for service, if cleansed from all sin and filled with righteousness; but for the time being, leave this feature in the background. Long for a pure heart because sin is so hateful to you; because it means fellowship with Christ; because you would rather be holy than be great, or wealthy, or to have any sort of power over your fellowbeings.

In this quest after a clean heart, holiness of life, righteousness of conduct, Christlikeness must be the supreme desire, the one great end and object; the better equipment for service, the larger usefulness will come along, no doubt, but now let an abhorrence against sin, your own corrupt nature, and a great cry to be free from it, to be cleansed in the precious blood of Jesus, to be holy, to walk with your Lord in the sweet fields of purity, master you so completely that other things are forgotten; that no thought of exalted self is entertained. You are hungering and thirsting, not for a great place in the ecclesiastical body of which you are a member, or for large success in any enterprise in which you are engaged, or for any sort of saintly pride among your fellowbeings. The thing you want, for which you hunger and thirst, and pant after, is righteousness. You long for freedom from sin. You want to know that your immortal soul, through the atoning merit of Jesus Christ, is made whiter than the snow.

How blessed it is for the human soul to be thus stripped of all earthly ambitions, and on a passionate stretch, a holy hunger, a burning thirst, which cannot be quenched with anything less, or fed and satisfied with anything short of being purified and filled with the righteousness which Jesus Christ alone can give. Press on! His word cannot fail. His love is drawing you. The Holy Spirit is stimulating and stirring within you these holy longings. You shall be filled. Amen!

The National Holiness Convention.

The National Holiness Convention closed a most gracious session at Wilmore, Ky., May 12. Many of the members of this organization came from a number of states. The new president, Rev. C. W. Butler, of the Bible School in Cleveland, Ohio, presided with great efficiency and kindness. The people were constantly rejoicing over the harmony and unanimity with which the business was transacted. It really was an epochal occasion.

The evening services were evangelistic and quite a number went forward for prayer. The preaching was done by Rev. L. R. Akers, who was most fortunate in inviting the Convention to Wilmore, Rev. John Paul, president of Taylor University, Rev. John L. Brasher, of Boaz, Ala., Rev. Paul Rees, of Detroit, Mich., Rev. John Owen, of Upland, Ind., the writer preaching once. The congregations filled the great auditorium of the Methodist Church. On Sunday morning Rev. Joseph H. Smith preached with such clearness and power that our hearts were not only rejoiced with his gospel message, but with gratitude to God that he has been so wonderfully raised up from his serious hurt, with every appearance of strength to go forward in the Master's service. Dr. Butler preached in the afternoon with his usual force and vigor. Brother Seavers, pastor of the church at Wilmore, was full of courtesy and kindness looking after the interests of the visitors. It was really a very great convention, and it looks as if the National was taking on new life and power in these trying times when a gracious manifestation of God's redeeming grace is so necessary.

The Convention will be written up at greater length.

Faithfully your brother,

VACATION RELIGION.

A. W. ORWIG.

THAT is a very superficial kind of Christianity which is left at home during vacation time. And yet it seems to be the kind some people have. They are something like the little girl who was so greatly taken up with a visit she expected to make with her parents that in her last prayer at home she ended with, "Good-bye, Lord; I'm going to Boston!" Or they may be like the little boy who had gone with his parents on a vacation trip. On the first morning after arriving at their destination, his mother asked him if he had said his prayers, to which he replied, "Why, no, mama; I didn't know that God had come here, too!"

At this season of the year, when many people go away from home on a vacation, some seem to forget to take their religion along. For weeks and months in advance they think and talk and plan as to how to get the most out of the proposed trip. The tent, the camp chairs, the hammock, the fishing tackle and the like are taken along to minister to their physical and social natures. But, alas, in not a few cases, the blessed Bible and all religious literature are forgotten. To a great degree Christianity is left behind.

"We got to have a good time," say some, "and what's the use of being so very religious anyhow? Can't folks have a little fun sometimes, and still be Christians?"

It all depends upon what people consider "a good time" and "fun." If thereby they mean needed rest, profitable recreation, and the enjoyment of really innocent amusements, there can be no objection. But if by "fun" they mean less prayer, little or no Christian conversation, absence from public worship, the neglect of God's Word, and general indifference to their spiritual interests, they would far better remain at home. For it is vastly less a loss to be without a "summer outing" than to throw off the whole-some restraints of Christianity. The professor of Christianity who does not take his religion with him, on leaving home, whether for rest or business, has already suffered spiritual declension; and unless he is more careful and conscientious concerning the little that he has is likely to go home without any.

It is always well, when contemplating a season of absence from home, to prayerfully resolve that the change shall not affect our souls unfavorably. We usually expect it to result in increased physical and mental vigor. Why not also plan for and expect spiritual profit? Surely the former is not more important. The realization of the latter need not involve any strain upon us, not the sacrifice of any healthful and elevating amusements. Be it known however, that merely so-called amusements should be the least consideration. Strength and vigor of body, intellect and spirit should be desired above all else, especially by the Christian, that he may the better fulfill his high and holy mission.

The best way to have a real "good time" during a vacation, is to take Jesus along. Have a glad and joyful fellowship with him every day. Have the same sweet little talks with him in the tent, or grove, or hotel, or boarding house, as you have at home. Why not? And let him speak to you every day though his blessed Word and Spirit. There need be nothing hard and wearisome in the whole affair. But it will rest us all the more, and add very greatly to our pleasure and profit.

Yes, have your "good time" in a manner that will develop and strengthen all the powers of your being; and when you return home you will feel more inclined and better prepared to resume life's duties, and your work in the vineyard of the Lord as well.

vention, and appliance, and almost incredible things have been achieved along those lines, but the Church has not kept pace with the world in her achievement in spiritual things.

For inspiration the holiness people need to take a retrospective view of what God's people have accomplished in their past history. On the same day that the Apostles received their Pentecost, under the unctuous preaching of Peter, there were added to them, about three thousand souls and soon after that, five thousand.

Charles G. Finney entered a factory in a New England state and at once a strange influence took hold of a young woman as she sat at her loom near the door. That influence became contagious and reached to the whole factory force so that they were unable to perform their work, so much so that the proprietor shut down the machinery and requested Mr. Finney to conduct evangelistic services with the factory force, and the proprietor and everyone, except one person, were saved.

Upon reliable information it has been stated that in the pioneer days of Methodism in this country in an eastern state, at one camp meeting, one thousand souls were converted and thirteen hundred wholly sanctified.

It is a fact founded upon reliable history that in the revival at Cane Ridge, Ky., probably the people saved ran into many hundred, and likely many more hundreds would have been saved had the meeting not been closed because the people in that place could not furnish entertainment for the hosts who attended it. The history of other similar revivals might be recorded but for lack of space.

The holiness people should have a greater love for one another and if one organization seems to be having a larger measure of success than the other, that other organization ought to rejoice over that fact because that is a contribution to the same cause they are seeking to propagate.

If one preacher can preach more effectual messages than another, and through his preaching throngs of people crowd the altar, that other preacher ought to be as happy as if it were the result of a message he delivered.

If one singer, under the anointing of the Holy Spirit, should sing the power on the people so that they shout and praise God, the other singer should be as happy as though that manifestation were due to his singing. Only really dead people can measure up to the standard set by what is written above.

One more thing is mandatory upon the holiness people, and that is to live what they profess, at home, in the church, and everywhere. This is the acid test of one's holiness. People may sing and pray and profess and preach, but their real standing is measured by the lives they live. There is nothing that will cause people to hunger for the experience of holiness, so much as to see it exemplified in the lives of those who profess it. In order to measure up along this line one will need to make it a daily business to live a holy life and allow nothing to prevent him in his laudable endeavor along this line. It is a great encouragement to those professing the blessing of holiness to remember that the blessed Holy Spirit will come to one's rescue in every time of need and bring him off more than conqueror.

Dr. Ridout's New Book on Revival Blessings.

Before sailing for the mission fields Dr. Ridout put out his new book, "Revival Blessings" containing the History of the great revivals as well as stories of great evangelists and chapters on soul winning, etc. This book should be read by all evangelists, ministers and laymen who are interested in revivals of religion. Also, it is a fine text book for the class room where evangelism is being taught. There are many things in this book not found in any other book on evangelism. Dr. Ridout has dug out a lot of gold nuggets from his wide reading. This is a fine book for soul winners in the Sunday schools and among young people, and no one can read the book without finding it full of wonderful information and inspiration. Price, $1.00. Indian Springs Holiness Camp.

The greatest southern camp will hold its thirty-eighth meeting, August 8-18, on the beautiful grounds in "The old red hills of Georgia" just one mile from Indian Springs with its life-giving waters.

The leaders for this year are Rev. H. C. Morrison, D. D., Rev. John Paul, D. D., Rev. John F. Owen, D. D. Rev. Jere M. Glenn will have charge of the work with young people and children. Brother Sewell will direct the music, and the Woman's Quartet of Taylor University will render special music.

Mr. R. F. Burden, Macon, Ga., the honored President of the Board of Trustees, says that arrangements are being made to take care of the multitudes who always attend these meetings. The camp ground hotel, two large annexes and other boarding houses will furnish entertainment at reasonable rates. Hotel reservations may be made by writing Mrs. Inez Sappington, care Murphy Hotel, Bradenton, Fla. For rooms in annex, write Mr. F. C. Benson, Macon, Ga.

Many of the friends of this camp are uniting to make it better and greater than ever, and we urge upon the friends of holiness everywhere the importance of joining heartily in this most worthy undertaking. Three things will greatly help to achieve it: First, write Jere M. Glenn, Young Harris, Ga., for literature giving all needed information about the camp and its work, and send it to your friends with a personal letter urging them to meet you there this year. Second, with this literature before you, write an attractive article about the approaching meeting and secure its publication in your local paper; and repeat this occasionally between now and the meeting. Third, join in daily prayer that the meeting this year may be the beginning of a mighty nation-wide revival of pure religion. Surely the sore need of such a revival should stir our hearts to prevailing prayer until the fire from Heaven is falling all over this nation in Pentecostal power.

JERE M. GLENN.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

My Dear Boys and Girls:—

I suppose all of us remember of some scrape we got into when we were growing up, and if there was punishment to be meted out we were inclined to throw it off onto some other person. It's always best to be frank and acknowledge our faults when caught, even if we are not altogether to blame, for we shall feel better after it is all over and have no regrets for having imposed upon an innocent party. I am giving you a little story which shows how much better it is to share the blame when we get into wrong, and how much better we shall fare by confessing and being frank about the matter. I hope after you have read "The Better Way" you will conclude that you will never be found guilty of adding insult to injury by throwing blame on some one else that you might escape.

Lovingly,

Aunt Bettie.

THE BETTER WAY

Cousin Rosalie and Aunt May had come to stay overnight with mother and Lydia. Bedtime came, and Rosalie and Lydia were both in their little white gowns. Rosalie came creeping into Lydia's room with her pillow in her arms. Her bare feet did not make a bit of noise, and she was almost near enough to clap the pillow over Lydia's head when Lydia saw her. Lydia gave a little squeal.

"No, you don't," she laughed, jumping into bed. She pulled Grandmother White's gay patchwork quilt up about her ears.

"Here it comes," Rosalie warned, and let it fly.

"You'd better run," Lydia called back. "Here's your pillow. I don't need it," and she threw it back.

Rosalie did not run a step. She dodged down at the foot of the little brass bed and let the pillow go over her head and plump down beyond her. In a moment she had caught it up and thrown it back—and then something dreadful happened.

The big pillow struck the knob at one end of the bed. There was a ripping sound, and as the pillow fell, a lot of feathers puffed out and floated about a frightened little girl.

"Oh, Lydia, the pillow's busted!" Rosalie cried.

For a moment Lydia sat very still in bed, and was glad it was not she who threw the pillow when the accident happened.

"Rosalie began it, too," she thought quickly, "and Rosalie is company, and will not be punished. Let her go tell about it."

She looked again at the scared little face of her cousin and sprang out of bed.

"I threw it back at her. I was ready for the game, too," she owned honestly to herself.

"Come, I'll tell mother how we did it," she said bravely, and led the way.

Mother listened to the story. At its end Rosalie said:

"It was my fault, auntie; I threw the pillow first."

"But I helped to keep it up," said Lydia.

"Well, well," said mother. "I'm afraid I'll have to punish you both. Suppose I send you straight to bed to stay until morning?" And, somehow, both knew they were forgiven because they had not tried to blame each other.—The Sunbeam.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a Kentucky man to join your happy band of boys and girls. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope Mr. W. B. will be out for lunch and will miss this one. My aunt takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it. I am five feet nine inches tall, weigh one hundred thirty-five pounds. Have hazel eyes, dark hair, light complexion. Here is part of my life story. When I was eight years old we lived in Corbin, Ky. My father was in business and very wealthy and had a real home and anything I wished for. But somehow I left home on a freight train and only eight years old. Going south in a few days I was in Mississippi so I picked cotton and found work here and there. So I began to drink and gamble, going wild, riding freight trains at the dead hour of midnight. I did every thing but steal. So I tramped the world over. I made a wreck of my life. But I learned several trades and can say I was lucky to never be in jail. Now I am real good looking and go by the name of a sheik in the large city. I am greatly admired by both sex. Now one year ago while visiting the mountains of Kentucky 20 miles from railroad, a town east of Somerset, Kentucky, the Church of God was holding a two weeks' meeting. So I go out about half drunk, thought I would have some fun. But somehow I was warned because God had stepped on my mind. So I came back. I did not have any fun for I was studying about God. I could not sleep or rest for thinking about God for I knew he had knocked at my heart. So I began to pray for I was uneasy about my lost soul. So I began to study. I had no one in life to advise or teach me how I must live so I made up my mind the sure way was to get right with God. The next night I went back to church. When they began to call for lost souls I made a break, six others followed me. I gave the preacher my hand and got down on my knees, I knew I had no time to lose. I began to cry out for I was not ashamed and I gave over everything right then forever and I was saved. The next day I was sanctified. That night God filled my soul with the sweet Holy Ghost. I spake in tongues and I leapt, sang and shouted and I am still living for God and praise him for his sweet name. I like the Church of God because I can leap and sing and shout when I get ready and praise him for his sweet name. God has given me gift to see wonder things and I am going to pray him as long as I have breath. My birthday is April 21. I would like to hear from all the cousins who are trying to live a true Christian life. My age is between 21 and 29. I will answer all letters received. May the Lord bless Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Oscar Sears.
Sears, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Georgia girl join your happy band of boys and girls. I am sixteen years old, my weight is one hundred ten. I have gray eyes and red hair and fair complexion. My father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it. I belong to the Methodist Church. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. My birthday is September 26. Have I a twin? Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with H, and has nine letters in it. Will some of you boys and girls write to me. I will answer all letters received. This is my first letter to the Herald and I hope to see it in print.

Dear Cousins:

Just a little Florida girl,
Who craves admittance to your band

Of happy children, great and small,
O'er all this sunny land.

My mother takes The Herald,
And o'er page 10 I always pore,
And when I come to the end,
I always wish for more.

I am only thirteen years of age
Am in the 9th grade at school.
I like my teachers very much
And try to mind the rule.

I have light hair, blue eyes,
Am five feet, two inches tall,
I like to go to Sunday School
And do not miss at all.

I try to be a Christian,
And do the best I can,
In winning all my playmates
To Christ's own happy band.

So goodbye for the present, Friends,
I hope you've enjoyed my rhyme,
And if Mr. W. B. does not get this I'll try another time.

Your cousin,
Cornelia Clark.
Waldo, Florida.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have brown hair and blue eyes, fair complexion. I weigh one hundred five pounds. I am five feet eight inches tall. I am in the 7th grade. I am fifteen years old and my birthday is June 28. Can anyone guess my middle name? It begins with F and ends with E. It has six letters in it. I will write the one a letter that guesses my name.

I hope to see my letter in print. Mr. Britting takes The Herald. I sure enjoy reading page ten. I have been at school every day this year. My school teacher's name is Estelle Grant, she is a good teacher. My letter is getting long and I will close.

Elda Hilton.

R. R. 1, Box 8, Barboursville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Virginia girl join your band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald. and I hope to see it in print. I have dark complexion and long black hair and brown eyes. I am fourteen years old and am in the fifth grade at school. My teacher is a crippled man. I like my teacher and all of my schoolmates. I live on the farm and like it best. Among my pets I like my sheep best. I am a lover of music and flowers. I will answer all letters received.

Minnie Lowe.
Bandy, Virginia.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls. I have brown hair and blue eyes and light complexion. I weigh sixty pounds, and I am three feet and 6 inches tall. I am seven years old and my birthday is April 12. Can anyone guess my middle name, it begins with an F and ends with an E, and it has eight letters in it. I will write the one a letter that can guess it. So I want to see my letter in print. My dad takes The Herald. I sure enjoy reading page ten. I go to school every day and I am in the fourth grade and we have a good school teacher, her name is Estelle Grant. My letter is getting long. I guess I will stop.

Helen Brittain.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a girl from Ohio join your happy band of boys and girls? I am nine years old. My birthday is the sixteenth of June. The same day as Howard W. Perrin's, I think. Vivian E. Griffin's middle name is Elsie. One of the Sunday school teachers at our church gives a pin to any one who goes to Sunday school every Sunday for a year. I am trying to get a pin. I hope to see this in print. Lovingly,

Nancy E. Fisher.
Box 116, Flushing, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie and Cousins: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? My grandpa takes The Herald and I sure do enjoy reading page ten. I live on a farm of about one hundred acres and have light brown hair, brown eyes, a dark complexion and weigh ninety-two pounds. My age is thirteen and my birthday is May the eighth. Who has my birthday? H. Lucile Johnson, I guess your first name to be Helen. If I am right please don't forget your promise. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with an E and ends with an E and has six letters in it. Well, I will go before Mr. W. B. comes home.

Lovingly,
Ruth E. Steely.
