This time last year I was in the holiness camp meetings of U. S. A. I am trying to carry a holiness camp meeting spirit and message to two Republics—yes, three: Chili, Argentina and Brazil. I am appalled at the vastness of the field. For one lone evangelist to cover much ground is next to impossible. Everywhere we go they want more time, more meetings. "Come for six months, not six weeks." I have frequently had to move dates two and three times because of these meetings desired in new places. I think often of the overcrowded condition of things at home, evangelists in abundance and many of the best spending their time on burnt-over territory, and in churches grown fat like Jeshurun with their privileges and their feasts of fat things. What it costs to run one of those camp meetings for ten days (and often with empty altars) a holiness evangelist could spend a whole year carrying the holiness message to the foreign fields where in many places the holiness gospel is seldom heard. If the holiness people had the vision, and did not spend so much time and money on themselves, it would be possible to send a man to India for a year, another to Africa, another to China, another to Japan, another to South America, and thus bring help, inspiration, confirmation and blessing to the missionaries as well as preaching through interpretations the message of full salvation to thousands of people. When this has been done it has had to come about through personal sacrifice and individual venture. Thus did William Taylor start out and girdled the globe with salvation.

Often as I go out on itineraries in various sections of Argentina, preaching in a strange church and among strange people, every third day or so I think of those words of the song:

"I am a stranger here within a foreign land,
My home is far away upon a golden strand,
Ambassador to be of realms beyond the sea,
I am here on business for my King."

But it is wonderful how fellowship with God brings one into fellowship with his people everywhere.

The human heart is the same throughout the world, and the needs of the soul are everywhere the same. As I preached last night a man sat in front of me seemingly drinking in every word, responding with various expressions all through the sermon. The gospel to him was the power of God. It was neither Spanish or English, but of God. As I preached this afternoon on 1 Thess. 5:23, I had the witness of the Spirit that the word was having effect: probably it was the first sermon they had heard for a long time, definitely, on sanctifying grace; in the after service the whole meeting was turned into a seeking meeting.

VI.

Brother Preacher, I hope you feel the thrill of preaching the gospel that I often feel as I go from city to towns and preach in churches where the people are hungering for the Word of God, especially, the deep things of God. I was told by some who wished to discourage me from coming to South America that, in Argentina, they resented foreigners coming preaching through interpreters. They said to me (by letter) that evangelism would have to be carried on through native evangelists. I am glad to record the fact there is no difference. I have discovered none, the churches of Argentina are as hungry to hear the Message by the sent-messenger even if it comes through interpretation, as any part of the world. Some of our missionary leaders are so carried away with and by their psychological reasonings that they permit these things to obscure their vision of the supernatural. It would be a good thing if a few of them would become desperate and tear down their fences and pitch into the battle of the Lord, clad with the power of the Holy Ghost, throw to the winds all their intellectual handicaps and take to the battle in the name of the Lord God of Hosts. A good man once said to a brother preacher, "Brother, I have made a study of psychology for six years, but I am going to give it up." He found it took more than psychology to do God's work in South America. I often think of that striking definition of a missionary by Bishop Oldham as, "That abiding experience of the presence and power of the Holy Spirit which transforms an educated man into a messenger of God."

VII.

Sundays are always busy days. Last Sunday I preached at Gonzalez Chares in the morning, took dinner and rode about thirty miles in auto to another town where nearly a full church awaited us at 3 P. M.

My interpreter this time was a German missionary, though he got his theological training in England and married an English where he preached in three languages—Spanish with freedom. For awhile he had a church where he preached in three languages—Spanish, German and English. This country is very cosmopolitan, and happy the man who can speak various languages. I often can make out a conversation by using the English, French and Spanish. Happily I can sing the Spanish hymns with ease and it helps me immensely in enjoying the services; and often when the people hear me sing in Spanish and quote Scripture in Spanish they wonder why I do not preach in the language; but one wants to have at least half a year of the most intense study and practice of the language before attempting to preach in it, and then it will take several years before one feels at home.

VIII.

I heard of an ex-priest of the Catholic Church who is preaching among the evangelical churches. They say he is learned and eloquent, but he deals too much in abstractions; he lacks definiteness in his message. If he had some of Moody about him, and in every sermon would aim at the heart and conscience, preach Christ and repentance, pardon, personal salvation through the blood of Jesus, it would greatly add to the effectiveness of his message. After all, what the multitudes want is not the intellectual, but something that speaks to the heart. That's the trouble with some missionaries; they work on an intellectual basis and wonder why they don't get results. I was reading recently a story of Professor Huxley, great sceptic scientist of England, of fifty years ago. A Christian friend of his was travelling with him and Sunday came. Huxley said to him, "I suppose you are going to church?" "Yes." "Well, suppose you stay at home with me and tell me of your religion?" "No," said the friend, "for I am not clear enough to refute your arguments." "But, what if you simply told me of your experience—what religion has done for you?" This was agreed to and the Christian man told the scientist what Christ had done for him. With tears in his eyes Huxley said, "I would give my right hand if I could believe that."

IX.

"I am in his right hand." Speaking one Sunday morning at Santiago, Chili, before 500 people out to early prayer meeting at 7 A. M., my message was based on Revelation 1:10-16. The seven stars were in the right hand of Jesus. This suggests the security of the believer. If we are in his right hand we are safe. A story is told of Luther when the Pope's ambassador came to try to win him back to the fold; not succeeding by entreaty and appeal, he tried threatening and storming, and told Luther he would be thrust out—excommunicated from the true church. Then he said to Luther: "In whose hands will you be then?" Luther, the man of God, replied: "I shall be where I am now—in the hands of God." When hell rages, Oh child of God, recollect thou art in the right hand of Jesus. When everything and everybody is against you say to thy soul—"Soul, thou art in his right hand." When temptations fierce, and trials terrific, assail the soul say, "I am in his right hand!"

Now as I was exhorting along these lines a poor, distressed man rushed up and fell at the altar and called me to him. He told me that he was now passing through a terrible assault of the enemy and he wanted me to pray for him. Wonderful how the Spirit leaps over the barriers of language, and how the language of the heart can be understood. I am preaching now by interpretation in the Spanish tongue but often the people catch my meaning before the interpreter gets the words out. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of Witness and Fellowship and among the saints one soon feels as much at home as though you had known the people for years.

LET US TRY SOMETHING.

Rev. T. C. Henderson.

RUE Christian evangelism will never die out. It is of God. To the work of evangelism God still calls men and women. Humanity needs to be evangelized.

Churches which cease their thorough evangelistic work for any reason lose divine leadership and blessing on their activities. But evangelism is hard labor. It is hazardous, it is costly, it meets great and delicate opposition and today finds the leaders of the older sects deliberately opposing and condemning it. It is quite easy for the pastor and the church which cares for the approval of the world and for the support of the world to substitute something less embarrassing for genuine sin-killing, soul-saving revivalism. We are face to face with a most challenging array of facts relative to soul saving. Revivals which major on spiritual transformations and which produce pentecostal fruitage are rarer than they should be in the larger denominations. There are sections of our large cities and communities to which there will not come any definitely evangelistic ministry unless it is brought by some one outside of the regular leadership and general activities of the established churches. There are thousands of young folk in our Protestant churches who have not been converted, and they have never seen any one else converted. The noted leaders of religious thought and work boldly discount the old type of evangelism and it is folly to look to them for leadership in any form of revivalism. Churches are officered by men who have no sympathy with passionate, soul-saving activities, and the rank and file of the membership of too many churches are so worldly as to quite disqualify them and their church for sincere work of winning the lost to Christ. One may go to hundreds of our city churches and never be given a call or an opportunity to seek and find salvation. The churches are ministering to young folk with great energy and ado, while the masses of folk who have reached middle life are without any message or ministry of personal salvation from moral wreckage. Most of the preachers act as though there were no lost men and women any more. There are many preachers, of whom I know, who wish that they could promote a genuine revival in their church and community, but who have an impossible situation within their own fold.

On the other hand, there are evangelistic workers wanting a chance to invest their time and energy in this greatly needed work. They are ready to give their best, their all to the most needy place and situation. However they do not, they cannot know where they are most needed. They have been used to going where the churches or other organizations called them, rather than finding the needy fields. These workers—and they are not all irresponsible nin-wits—should be connected with these neglected and unworked fields of human need. Many God-called evangelists are greatly concerned about this situation and have an inner protest against going only where they are wanted to replenish the membership roll of the churches or to do the work that some pastor will not or dare not try to do for his church. These workers want to go where the need is great and the laborers are few and there to pour out their best ministry for the salvation of lost men and women.

Now how can these needy fields in town and country be connected with these ready workers? We need not wait for the answer. It is being answered gloriously in England, Canada, and in certain sections of the United States. Laymen are answering this question by opening mission halls, "Gospel Centers," "country crusades," tent meetings and evangelistic services in rented halls and sometimes in churches. I know, for instance, of one group of laymen who got together on a plan for promoting passionate evangelism without a lot of side issues throughout their county. They have engaged one or more evangelists at a time and over a period of months have carried on what has proved to be most fruitful revivals throughout their own and adjacent counties in their state. If the churches invite them they use the church building but they prefer to use other places. I know of other groups of earnest men and women who have undertaken the "Gospel Hall" type of work. That is, they have rented a well located and suitable building or hall to be used for public services, hiring some evangelist as a "superintendent," and then by constant public evangelism and the holding of various kinds of meetings and through works of charity have found a very ample support for their work which meets a definite need. In England there is a reviving of outdoor and wayside evangelism. Groups of young men go out for week-end trips, or for longer time, and in the open air, in halls or homes, or churches they sing, testify and preach and distribute Gospel literature. The fruitage of this work in the Old Country is blessed and generous. All over the English-speaking world the laymen are seeing that they cannot wait on the regular ministry to carry on aggressive evangelism.

The thing that I am trying to say is, that there are yet many great, white, neglected fields that must be entered by godly laymen and devout, self-sacrificing evangelists regardless of what the organized churches may say or do. I have letters ever and anon from men and women, especially in the cities, asking for help in meeting this great need. That is encouraging, and I am always glad to be able to help such folk find some sensible worker who will join them in the high adventure of doing what so many other groups seem afraid or unfitted to do. The godly laymen of America must not let the people of this day go to hell because they are not preachers. They must share with these ready workers in the investment, of time money and thought and prayer to do something definite for the salvation of this generation, especially the unchurched, the unreached and who yet are reachable.

There is peril and problem in this sort of independent evangelism, of course. Such work can very easily become piracy—divisive, ruthlessly projecting itself at the expense of other forms of Christian activity, with no regard for the rules of the game. This independent evangelism must never fail to be courteous, brotherly and humble. Then, such evangelism can easily become unbalanced. Bunk can take the place of balanced truth. There must be prudence as well as passion in this sort of thing. Ranting and raving with religious tomfoolery must be shunned or else such work will run into the ditch. The great problem which such independent evangelism faces, perhaps, is that of caring for its converts. That, however, is not an unsolvable problem.

Danger there is, but the multitudes of Christless folk in our cities, towns and rural sections of every type, caste and color must be reached by a saving message. Let us try something!

DARE WE BE CHRISTIAN?

T. RICHARDSON GRAY.

T. PETER once said, "I am not." And for centuries, to be Christian was dangerous. But in this day of safety, dare we be Christian? for in any age it is an adventure. Abraham dared, going forth, "Not knowing whither he went." Paul dared the Damascus mob: even the rope-holders were adventurers. He dared the ocean and was ship-wrecked, their very escape was hazardous. "Some on boards and pieces of ship." God delivered them, but he quelled no storms, nor smoothed no roads for those early Christians who dared: to have done so would have taken the worth and thrill out of their adventure. King Agrippa was frank enough to locate himself as only an "Almost." An honest merchant labeled a brilliant stone—"Almost a diamond, $3.50." Abraham Lincoln said, "When I went to Washington I was not a Christian: when I went to Gettysburg I was." Many today would be surprised at their location to the Bible standard of Christian. Thousands of fine people miss much by not daring to be Christian of the Christ type. Let us notice—

A Modern Brand:—Composed of good citizens, but whose religion won't bear transportation. Removing to some new locality, they fail to transfer their religion; they will not stand transplanting. Again they may be pretty fair church folk at home, but absent to city or country, forget whose children they are, whose day it is, and breaking from their Sunday moorings, they join the world

THE MAGNITUDE OF SONSHIP.

Rev. Neal B. van Loon.

"He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." Rev. 21:7.

THE Lord tells us here of an unspeakable inheritance and of an unspendable portion. Only one condition is laid down for its possession—overcoming. God does not have very much for the person who heartlessly surrenders to habitual defeat. That is not so because he has planned it so but because he can't help it. There is no limit to what he can and will do in, for, and through a man who is wholly given over to him and it does not matter about the ruined yesterdays with their violated covenants and abrogated vows. He has a wonderful way of passing over all that. On the other hand, there is comparatively little that he can do for the man who is satisfied with himself and who has settled down to a lazy contentedness and; it does not matter very much what his capabilities are.

The tragedy of this day lies not so much in the fact that people are not being godly and Christian, but in the fact that they are not trying. Sin presents a smaller problem to God than our love of it. The hurt in his Father-heart is there less because of our stumbling than because of our lack of resistance.

God does his utmost to conquer through his love the hearts of men but so many will not let him. There are successful salesmen on the field selling thousands of tons of goods. Some of them would make great soul-winners if they would obey God, but they go on in disobedience and they live fleshly lives of selfishness and wanton pleasure and in the prime of life some of them go on the scrap-heap. Then to fill the ranks, God calls many of us ordinary men—who ought to be farmers and mechanics—to do his work and he gets along with us after a fashion. But this we certainly do know, whatever our state, place or station, God has bankrupted heaven for us. He has loosed his last bolt. His quiver is empty. His Son has come and died, and lo, he has risen again. No one need sin any more!

The Christian way is so beautiful, because it is so simple and, it is simple, because he has made it so. The race furnishes the sinners and God makes them over into saints wherever he has the chance. But if we are not overcomers of self, sin and environment, we are living beneath where he wants us, and we rob ourselves of a rich inheritance and God of a son.

THERE IS A HERITAGE OF MEMORY.

Note the noble triumphs of the great souls of yesterday. Remember their final sublime victories and take courage. Peter and Paul went to their death after fruitful lives of unselfish service, as though they were going to a banquet table. Huss prayed for his enemies while God comforted him with heavenly comfort as he burned at the stake. The Wesleys marched straight ahead and won signal victories in the very hey-day of the bold Deists. The Booths and their heaven-born movement took root and flourished like a palm tree in a time when unbelief was daring and blatant.

What a wonderful feeling it is to succeed in the face of powerful opposition. What a thrill comes when we have faced the most insidious temptation, unafraid, and have come off more than conquerors. To have the memory of some great soul strengthen us, when everything goes dead wrong, is to have a precious heritage indeed. The dough-boy in France appropriated this principle over and over again as Bliss Carman illustrates:

"When promise and patience are wearing thin,

When endurance is almost driven in,
When Angels stand in a waiting hush
Remember the Marne and Ferdinand Foch."

Foch was a most devout man. He lived on faith. He prayed much. Doubtless he, too, found memory a rich heritage.

THE HERITAGE OF UNHEARD OF POSSESSIONS.

Material possessions are actually all ours if we need them. But in the economy of God's administrations they hardly figure at all. Only a few insane people find any pleasure in vast possessions. They do not possess. They are possessed. Even sinners know about this and they seek gain because of what it buys them. Gold is so cheap in the city of God that they pave the streets with it. Pearls are so plentiful that the gates and the minarets are incrustured with them. Friendships, knowledge, sentiments and service are priceless.

All beauty is ours. No man can get a monopoly on that. All men can possess for their very own all beauty—forever. The beauties of God are as permanent as himself. His colors are fast. They can pass into the heart of a man and make him something, for even God to behold. In this old world you will never see anything so beautiful as a good man whom God has wrought upon.

The prodigious bounties of nature are all ours; the mountains, the clouds and the sea. Carlyle said that the only ownership that existed was the ownership of appreciation. The Isles of Greece, the waters of Palermo, the cascades of the Andes, the streams of New England, the glories of the Yosemite—all are yours if you can see, and seeing, appreciate. Bishop Quaye could see them and appreciate them. They were all his. They are all his and now, a magnificent galaxy of heavenly glories besides. And then there are the flowers—oh, the flowers, the silent music, the unwritten poetry fashioned by the hand of God!

The things mentioned tax one's mental powers to grasp, and yet they pale into insignificance when compared to that larger possession that may become personally ours here and now—all mortalities, all immortalities, all intelligences! Oh God, help me to realize that they are all mine; all people are mine! What riches, what opportunity, what an inheritance! Millions can be reached by the arm of prayer, thousands by personal contact. Every one is capable of enrichment and of enriching me. Even the unlovely can bless and enrich me if I will but open the door by blessing and enriching them.

THEN THERE IS THE HERITAGE OF HOME.

"I will be a father to you." A father means a home. What precious words those are! I know a fine young man of means. He built a magnificent home on a prominence above a deep blue lake. What furnishings! What lawns! What walled gardens! A good sized hill was in the way of the proposed large garden. He had it moved away. It was all for the wife and children. Those two children are only babies yet and do not even know what it is all about. But Jesus said, "I go to prepare a place for you." Who can comprehend that? "When it is ready for you I will neither call, nor send, nor beckon—none of these is good enough. I will come after you myself and we will live in Father's house."

When the prodigal came back he received a robe, a pair of shoes, a ring, forgiveness and home, but none of these things could compare with the joy of having his father close again.

THE FINAL HERITAGE RICHER THAN ALL.

I mention one more heritage, the heritage of royalty. If the thought of home does not move you, think upon the possibility of blood and character sonship. Have you not always wanted to be somebody? You can be and easier than you know. Unconditional acceptance of Jesus, the Son of God, will bring it to pass. You can be a royal prince in the household of God—here, now? Yes, a prince of the King. You can be a perpetual scion of the beautiful soul of God and exercise with him, jointly, everlasting domination over the whole of creation!

"He shall be my son." We shall become increasingly more like him until, at last, we are lost in his love and in his glorious presence, for we are Christ's and Christ is God's.

Up in New Hampshire the "Old Man of the Mountain" still gazes down across the hazy valleys. Hawthorne told us one time how the story went around that countryside years ago that, some day a young man would grow up in the community that would be a veritable personification of that great stone face, and that he would be noble and good and, eventually, be a great benefactor to his people. A certain farmer lad pondered this story day after day and his stout but wistful little heart was filled with noble longing. Going out to do the morning chores he would look at the face and wonder. On his way to the fields he would look again and, time after time during the day, and even in the twilight, he would gaze wistfully at the Great Stone Face. Hawthorne has it in his story that the lad's mind and longings were so wrapped up in the Good Old Man of the Mountain that he actually grew up to be a very good man and that he became a most blessed benefactor to the community and, thus the prophecy of the story was fulfilled.

We can talk so much with God, and look so often and so long in his direction, that we actually become like him. In kind, the spiritual life in his soul and ours are exactly alike. When we shall be in his likeness our souls shall be satisfied. We shall inherit everything—everybody. He shall be a Father and God to us and we, as children, shall learn, labor, and live together, basking in the sunshine of his eternal presence. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

THE ONE BOOK.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

A doubtless many of our readers know, a few years ago the three hundredth anniversary of the King James Translation of the Bible was celebrated. There has been much written upon this subject and yet it does not seem to be exhausted, by any means. In fact the Bible is a book which cannot be exhausted, for it is the best gift God ever gave to man containing all the good from the Savior of mankind to a lost and dying world.

The world can never know just what this Book of books has meant to the countries of the world. Its permeating, leavening influence has reached almost to the ends of the earth, and wherever its track of sacred truth has been left, the standard of the people has been lifted to a higher plane. We are sorry to admit that we, as a Christian nation, have not put the emphasis upon the teachings of God's word that we should. There is a tendency in these last days to relegate this code of moral laws to the rear, even forbidding its use in our public schools. Rev. Isaac T. Headland, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission in China, said, "Look out, United States, how you put the Bible out of the public schools."

There are a few people who are shallow enough to think they can get along without God and his Book, and in this way are endeavoring to impress the world with their wisdom, but this only betrays a weakness in their make-up which undermines the foundation which may uphold some virtues they may really possess. Such men as Edmund Burke, who made a habit of reading a chapter in Isaiah before going to speak in the House of Commons, and Danied Webster who did not feel prepared to deliver his immortal orations in the United States Senate until he had taken as a tonic the eighth Psalm and the fortieth chapter of Isaiah, should cause these lesser lights of modern times to hie away to some secret retreat and be ashamed that they ever lifted up a hand against the Book upon which the very foundations of our constitution were founded.

John Adams said, "Suppose a nation should take the Bible for its only law-book, and every member should regulate his conduct by its precepts. Every member should be obliged in conscience, to temperance, and frugality, and industry; to justice, and kindness, and charity towards his fellowmen, and to piety, love and reverence towards Almighty God. In this commonwealth no man would impair his health by gluttony, drunkenness or lust; no man would sacrifice his most precious time at cards, or any trifling or mean amusement; no man would steal or lie or in any way defraud his neighbor, but would live in peace and good will with all men; no man would blaspheme his Maker or profane his worship. I have examined all, as well as my narrow sphere, my straitened means and my busy life would allow me; and the result is, that the Bible is the best book in the world." When we hear such testimonies as the above from men whom the world considers leaders, and who speak from experience, we should be very careful how we tamper with the grand old Book which has stood the persecution and hatred of centuries.

There is no other book which contains so much to acquaint man with himself as the Bible. It contains all that we need to make us fit to live and fit to die. Any life which is patterned after its rules and precepts, will be a life that will leave its impression upon humanity. The following paragraph gives its worth in a nutshell.

"This Book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, doom of sinners, and happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decisions are immutable. Read it to be wise, believe it to be saved, and practice it to be holy. It contains light to direct you, food to support you and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword and the Christian's charter. Here Paradise is restored, heaven opened, and the gates of hell disclosed. Christ is its grand subject, our good is its design, and the glory its end. It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and guide the feet. Read it slowly, frequently, prayerfully. It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory and a river of pleasure. It is given you in life, will be open in the judgment, and be remembered forever. It involves the highest responsibility, rewards the greatest labor, and condemns all who trifle with its holy contents."

"How precious is the book divine,
By inspiration given;
Bright as a lamp its doctrines shine,
To guide our souls to heaven.

"It sweetly cheers our drooping hearts,
In this dark vale of tears;
And life, and light, and joy imparts,
And banishes our fears.

"This lamp through all the tedious night
Of life, shall guide our way;
Till we behold the clearer light
Of an eternal day."

The Oriental Conflict.

The newspapers have had much to say with reference to the recent difficulties in Japan and China. We find in the Bible a statement like this: "Where the treasure is, the heart is also." Japan's treasure is in Manchuria; her heart is there; her body will be there. Her armies are there, and quite likely to remain and be increased. Japan does want, and will want a big share of Manchuria. She has no ear to hear the protest of China, and the nations composing the League, against war and those encroachments upon the rights of other peoples that bring on war.

China is in no condition for any sort of united defense against Japan. With floods, famine, banditry and civil strife, with all sorts of incompetent and selfish leaders, battlefields, with the well trained and scientific armies of Japan, would simply be slaughterpens. It is bad enough for the Chinese to be barbarously killing each other. It would be horrors beyond description for Japanese armies, warships and airplanes to be turned loose upon the Chinese people. They could hardly make a show of defense.

There are indications that Russia might join with China against Japan. This would make a different situation; but if the Russian army is not much better trained—which perhaps they are—than formerly, Japan might have the advantage of such a tremendous aggregation of second and third rate soldiers; the probabilities are that the Russians under the new regime would fight at the present time as never before.

The nations, through their representatives, are doing, and should do their utmost to prevent war, but if it cannot be done, let these three nations fight it out among themselves. The other nations ought not engage in any sort of bloody conflict in this matter. We understand that war spreads like a plague, but the peoples of the various nations who are doing everything in their power to avert this war, may shed all the tears they wish, but should not shed any blood, if these nations should decide to fight to the bitter end. It is time to call upon God for interference and deliverance from such a catastrophe.

At the same time, we must not forget that man is a free agent. He can trample upon the laws of God; he can reject the mercy of God; he can despise the warnings of God, and have his own way in his sight, and when he does, it is a way of blood, darkness and death. Human beings can become, in their spirits and rebellion, selfishness and hatred, almost demons. The other nations of the earth ought to have it understood, with the exception of physicians, medicines, nurses, and all the Red Cross could do under such fearful consequences, should be "hands off!" The United States is evidently done with overseas war until another generation grows up with remarkable capacity for forgetfulness.

Don'ts For Preachers.

BY REV. F. LINCICOME.

Don't leave the highway of your thought to chase a butterfly, be it never so beautiful. Macaulay said of Burke that he "Almost always deserted his subject before he was abandoned by his audience."

Don't be carried away by applause, it is the spur of able minds and the aim of weak ones.

Don't bow as if you had hinges in your neck.

Don't let your voice become inaudible toward the close of a word or a sentence. Nathan Shepherd gives this advice for the care of the throat. If you awake in the night and find your mouth open get up and shut it.

Don't permit the skeleton of your address to parade its bones. Clothe it with flesh so vital that it would bleed at the prick of a needle.

Don't think that any amount of talent can atone for a habitual lack of preparation. Milton conceived Paradise Lost at thirty-two, but did not compose it until he had added twenty years of further preparation to his already stored mind.

Don't wait to dive for pearls of thought until you mount the platform. It might be painful to the audience. Don't let your words be bigger than your ideas.

Don't use a gallon of words to express a spoonful of thought.

Mrs. J. H. Douglas writes us as follows: "Received the book, Faussett's Cyclopaedia of the Bible last week. Thanks for sending it so promptly. Am enjoying it." Any one who is interested in Bible study, in making plain the truths in a Sunday school lesson, or any line of religious teaching, will find this book invaluable. It is the largest value we have ever been able to offer for $1.00. Order a copy for the personal benefit you will derive from it.

DARE WE BE CHRISTIAN?

in joy-rides, picnics, amusement parks, shows, games, eating-places, leading their children in a Sunday frolic. What a spectacle. They readily side-track spiritual duties to entertain Sunday visitors, forgetful of their solemn duty to God, their visitors, and to themselves—on the Holy Day. Instead of strength to the weak, they make weaker. Leading others astray, when they should lure to higher worlds and lead the way. These are likable, pleasant folk, but strangers to the Heaven-born life of power, they win no souls to Christ. They know John's Baptism, but not Christ's Baptism of the Holy Ghost.

My friends, "If the good were better, would the world be so bad?" Why dwell in such powerless, unfruitful state? But not all are so; note example of those saints whom Sunday visitors leave alone, for the reason, these will not suspend Sunday duties for visitors. And having to spend a Sunday away from home, they are invariably found "about the Father's House." Dear reader, which of these represents your life? the former, who cannot hope for the saint's reward; or the latter, who dare be Christian? How unsatisfying the one, how full of comfort the other. Another Brand is the Christian of Custom:—It is so easy to fall in with custom, it takes the adventure out of life, by demanding so little of one; just blend with the herd. No abstainers: no objectors: no out-standers. Zachæus was a product of custom, of his community, not unlike his fellows; but when he went up with Christ, the contrast was evident. Job was a good citizen till he beheld God, then he said, "I loath myself and repent." Isaiah rose to honors, but in the presence of God, he cried out, "I'm a sinful man." Today, many are Christians of custom, who, in the light of Christ or his Word, reveal a humiliating contrast. Whole communities have no religious contacts, seemingly content to remain so. Upon inquiry as to the reason, the reply is, "O, it's just the custom here." Friendly, sensible folk these, but without spiritual urge. They need outstanding leaders who dare break from custom, and will love them into the kingdom.

Members of Dr. Sheldon's church, in response to "What would Jesus do," decided to demonstrate it in daily living. But they were amazed at the adventure of it. One had to close his Sunday news-stand; another his Sunday show; one his soft-drink parlor; a man felt he should cut out his Sunday pleasure excursions; another his occasional drink; another thought Jesus would not use tobacco, so he must quit it. Long-standing debts must be settled; misused funds replaced. They must all attend worship. Some had ceased prayer. Indeed, all this was a break from custom, and was surprisingly daring. But need one expect to be Christian apart from it? To those bound by custom it seems hard, yet is demanded of God, and is the price to pay in the making of a Christian. Heaven knows we are weak, but try it in Christ's strength, and you will find you need not remain weak. Well, let's go—

Dare Be Christian:—Millions have dared, and if it meant twice the daring, there would be millions still; you are not alone. To some, influenced by daily Press reports, the whole world is adrift, with God powerless to stay the tide. Alas, sin and human weakness are evident on every hand. But be careful; they who oppose righteousness, also underestimate the forces that make God their Ally. He has reserved unto himself a mighty host, in whom is suspended the spirit of their Leader, and of the early Christians, and which holds back the world from chaos.

Thus two things should decide us in daring to be Christian, viz., it is God's side, and the winning side. The opposers are fighting a losing battle, a cause condemned of God already, and are destined to pull down their house upon their own heads. Beloved, let's be done with the age-old failure of a religion yoked up with the world. Its rewarding falls far short of what was intended. But disengaging therefrom, and cheered by the assurance of a better, let us form a part of the only Force to whom God has given promise of victory, a people who dare be Christian, "according to Jesus Christ."

Meeting Individual Responsibilities

attended mid-week service at the First Presbyterian. The text interpreted by Pastor Kirkwood was Galatians 6:1-10. Two verses, 2nd and 5th, were apparently conflicting in the A.

V. In the Greek original, however, there is manifestly no conflict, for the nouns translated "burden" are different and distinct. That of verse 5th, directs attention to the load, for which we are individually responsible. For the way we bear it, we must each answer directly to God. Paraphrasing the passage we read, Every one has a life-load of responsibility, for which God holds him individually answerable.

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

"Prohibition has been of great benefit to American agriculture through the increased use of dairy products and increased standards of living of the consumer. It takes more grain to make a quart of milk than a quart of beer." —Walter H. Lloyd, editor Ohio Farmer, Cleveland, quoted in The American Issue, April, 1931.

At the battle of Trafalgar, Oct. 21, 1805, Lord Nelson ran up the signal, "England expects every man to do his duty," and a smashing victory was won over the combined forces of France and Spain. The Captain of our salvation expects you and me to do our individual duty in the current conflict with evil and devil; do it as it is done by the host in heaven, do it every day, everywhere, and in everything. (Matt. 6:10).

What is our duty and responsibility in the matter of the Eighteenth Amendment? The Middletown Times Herald informed us, editorially, that prohibition has passed its peak, and that we are approaching the day when alcoholic beverages, of small and larger percentage, may again be legally sold and purchased. The Christian Herald, now a monthly, has, in the June issue, an editorial on: Our Declining Wets. We are informed that: "The year 1930 marked the peak of the anti-prohibition drive. Henceforth wet momentum will wane. . . . The unexampled unfairness of the wet press has aroused a normal American reaction."

M. A. N. spells man; and MAN, the word, means etymologically a person who thinks. The ideal man, accordingly, is the one who thinks accurately, and acts accordingly. We therefore meet our individual responsibility in the matter of the Eighteenth Amendment by looking discriminately on both sides of the question, and by basing our judgment upon salient facts. It is a lazy and dangerous habit to let others do our normal thinking in matters political, social or religious. And knowing what is right on this prohibition question it is a shame and sin if we neglect to avail ourselves seasonably of the opportunity to endorse our righteous opinion with the ballot. (James 4:17).

As a credible member of the church you are meeting your responsibility by concerning yourself discreetly and diligently in the following and other problems of the present age. There is the matter of training children in Bible doctrine and duty. For a series of years my mother was my teacher in Scripture subjects, and a good start had been made when I was six years of age. We are certified that:—"More than 17,000,000 of America's childhood and youth are growing up with practically no religious instruction." "The wave of lawlessness, of immorality, of irresponsibility that is sweeping the country today is directly the result of taking the Bible from the schools and neglecting it in the homes."

Crime has increased ominously. The reported increase was 400% from 1912 to 1921. It is stated that "The crime wave in the U. S. has decreased 35-40 per cent. since the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted." Withal, according to President Hoover, "more than 9,000 human beings are lawlessly killed every year in the U. S. . . . Life and property are relatively more unsafe than in any other civilized country of the world."

Divorce is markedly increasing, "in some communities one fourth as many divorces as marriages." According to a recent press item, there were 331 divorces at Reno during May last, and the rake-off of the lawyers was $100,000.

While the Church stands for the increasing freedom of all its membership from the pollution and the power of sin, it is menaced by a modern education that "trains for material efficiency irrespective of morality or religion." Evolution as taught today is inclined to leave God out. Modern psychology is largely materialistic, and seems to deny the existence of an individual mind as separate from an anatomical brain. According to a sometime editorial in the Reform Bulletin:—"The automobile, the road-house and certain commercialized amusements make easy wreckage of many young lives, while youth is seeking to express itself and to have a so-called good time."

"To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin;" and for willing sin God has no excuse whatsoever. (James 4:17; Romans 1:20). At the mid-week service above mentioned, a verse of one of the hymns selected, runs:—

"Use me, O Lord, use even me,

Just as thou wilt, and when, and where;
Until Thy blessed face I see,

Thy rest, Thy joy, Thy glory share."

As we habitually transmute these petitions into loyal practice, we are approximately meeting our individual responsibility, in line with the charge of Galatians 6:5. So may it be.

REVIVAL AT PROVIDENCE.

Sunday night, October 18, we closed a revival at Providence Wesleyan Methodist Church near High Point, N. C., with Bro. E. W. Jones as pastor. We had a few gracious services, with the interest increasing until the last. A few souls prayed through at an altar of prayer in the good old-fashioned way. One night after we had preached on hell a man came to the altar under deep conviction, and as he prayed he kept telling us we preached the truth. We realize that Russellism is so deceiving people today in regard to hell that thousands of our preachers need to sound the note of warning. We don't need to be timid about it. It's a serious thing when the devil deceives people, making them believe there is no hell so they won't prepare to escape it.

Bro. Jones and his consecrated wife are faithful and loyal workers. They have their work at heart. And we have never seen people who seem to appreciate their pastor and his wife more than these people. They have the confidence and love of different denominations, also their co-operation. Sister Jones came near getting killed in an automobile wreck a few months ago, but God saw best to spare her life, so she is going strong again in his service. We spent our time mostly in their hospitable home, and shall never forget their kindness to us.

Providence Wesleyan Methodist Church is about five miles from High Point on Highway No. 610. The church, a little wooden structure, is in a beautiful place in the midst of a grove. An oak tree stands in front of the church that has a decayed place in it caused by bullets shot from rifles about fifty years ago when men had great shooting matches on this spot of ground. This is rather a historic place. About fifty years ago a man ran a distillery here, when some Christians talked to him about his soul. They had services with him and he was converted in his bar room and gave up the dirty business. The place became a scene of revival. A brush arbor was Scriptures, take off their hats to the faultless Man of Galilee. Those who claim that he was only a man, claim that he was by far the highest type of man that ever lived among men. Those who have believed in his deity, and yet have rejected his gospel, would fight to the death for the sake of the truths he taught and the church he has set up in the world.

Christ's life and teachings have, in a most wonderful way, affected architecture, art and literature. His Spirit has permeated, to some extent, all civil government, social and commercial life. Jesus is the most familiar name in history; his sayings are repeated in courts, senates, congresses, cabinets, and about the camp-fires of the armies of the world. His life, and the precepts which fell from his lips, are thrilling the race with a new conception of duty and happiness and lifting the multitudes to a higher life.

If Jesus should come back to the earth in such a manner that there was no question as to his identity, so that all men could know, without doubt, that he was the Christ of Bethlehem, Nazareth, Gethsemane and the cross, the whole intelligent world would be thrilled and startled as by no other event that has occurred or could occur in all human history. As suggested at the outset, it is interesting to ask one's self, What institutions in our civil, social and religious life, would he overthrow and what would he perpetuate?

If Christ should return to reign on the earth it would seem that Jerusalem would be the most suitable and appropriate place for his headquarters. Above all other cities in the world, it is in human thought the most sacred. It is the religious center of the world's geography. Jews, Christians and Mohammedans alike, cherish for Jerusalem a reverence and love unknown for any other spot on earth. Abraham offered Isaac there, the ancient Jewish kings reigned there and made it famous throughout the inhabited world. Christ taught, suffered and died there. It was from Mt. Olivet, in full view of Jerusalem, that he ascended to heaven.

The Mohammedans associate Jerusalem with the most sacred things connected with their devotions. The location would be about equally convenient for the eastern and western world. The Suez Canal opens up a highway from all the East to Jerusalem. It would be a splendid triumph for truth and righteousness, if Christ, who rode into Jerusalem on an ass's colt, to suffer upon a cross for a lost race, should ride into Jerusalem upon the Shekinah cloud and sit upon a throne of universal power to govern a redeemed race.

UP IN THE NORTHEAST.

WE had a very delightful week at Boulevard Methodist Church in Binghamton, N. Y. The pastor, Dr. W. S. Crandall, and his assistant pastor, Rev. Dodd, are as delightful Christian brethren as one could wish to meet. They have a great church building; although the auditorium was very large it was remarkably easy to speak in. The membership is about 1700, is well organized, and is said to pay one of the largest budgets in the conference. The people remind me much of old-time Methodists, and I greatly enjoyed the privilege of preaching to them.

One of the delightful features of this meeting was the coming of a drove of old Asburians; there is a large number of Asbury graduates preaching in this region. They came down one day, preachers, their wives, and a few children amounting to thirty in number. One of the preachers came a distance of two hundred miles; others came later. Mrs. F. H. Haskins, of Binghamton, gave us an evening dinner; there were about forty of us who sat down in one of the beautiful tea rooms in the suburbs of the city. We had a very enjoyable evening; the two pastors of Boulevard Church were with us, and after the dinner the dear old Asbury boys told how they had been blessed at Asbury College, and how the Spirit had kept the fire burning in their hearts. It was well worth the trip of 800 miles to meet this young consecrated life.

It was a real pleasure to meet two of our fine young men, Cantrell and Phillips, radiant with divine grace. Cantrell came to Asbury from California and Phillips from Ohio, the latter being pastor of a wide-awake, growing Nazarene Church in Binghamton. He and his people attended our services. He has a clear, joyful testimony, and I am told he is making a good impression in this city. Cantrell is the picture of robust health and cultivated manhood. He is pastor of a Nazarene Church in Syracuse, N. Y. These dear young men are carrying the white banner of full salvation and are winning many souls to Christ. Many of the pastors of the city came to our services, and a number of out-of-town visitors, beside this big Asbury family. We found here Rev. Robert Williams, pastor in this city. He is a graduate of Taylor University and thoroughly loyal to his Alma Mater. He is a splendid young preacher and is doing a fine work here, attended our revival regularly, and his presence was always an inspiration. He found his good wife at Asbury College; married Miss Polly Haskins who is proving a most worthy helpmeet in his very active ministry. It would be impossible to tell what a delight it is to meet these devoted young men who are carrying the torch of evangelistic fire and winning many precious souls to Christ. Not one of them believes that the days of revivals are past, and in their ministry they are proving that "they shall not pass." God is mighty to save. The sinful are carrying a heavy burden of discontent and unrest; whenever God's people gather to sing, pray, preach, invite, warn, exhort and entreat the lost to come to Christ, there will be among them an invisible and mighty One to endue with power and to bless their efforts in the salvation of souls. Many were at the altar during the meeting and a number claimed definite help. There is every reason to believe that if these services could have been protracted three or four weeks, instead of one, we could have had a widespread revival. There were from twenty to forty seekers at the altar in the evening services.

We were entertained in the very comfortable home of Mrs. F. H. Haskins, where every attention was given that could rest and prepare the preacher for the strenuous services. Good people, are the Haskins.

From Binghamton, wife and I went to Elmira and was with our good and worthy friend, Rev. L. E. Otter, pastor of Epworth M. E. Church. He and his wife are Asburians, and are doing fine work, holding revivals and winning souls. We had five fine days with him and his church. After the first evening service, the Sunday school room was opened and well filled, in addition to the auditorium in all of the evening services. A number attended these meetings from quite a distance. I met several who told me they had been led into the experience of sanctification by reading THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD. This is a source of real comfort and encouragement.

We hurried back to Louisville, and after two nights rest commenced a few days' meeting of the Methodist Holiness League Convention in Trinity M. E. Church. The second night of the meeting a number of people expressed their desire for entire sanctification, and one very devout brother prayed through to victory at the altar, and claimed full salvation from sin in Christ.

The membership of the League is growing; names are coming in from many states and we are devoutly hoping and praying for a gracious revival among the Methodists. We love and rejoice in the good work of the Naz-arenes, the Pilgrims, and all Christians, but we have a great longing to see an awakening in Methodism. There are thousands of people in the two Methodisms who have not bowed their knee to the Baal of modern liberalism. They are holding on for the faith and longing for a baptism with the Holy Spirit upon themselves and a great revival to bring the lost to Christ. Join us in prayer.

Faithfully yours,
H. C. MORRISON.

Get 'Em Young.

We print below a clipping from the Alabama Christian Advocate which ought to create righteous indignation. When men of prominence devote themselves to the destruction of the young people of our country it is time for a high tide of indignation. Read the following, think on it, and see if you don't feel like crying to God for help, and determine to do what you can to down the liquor traffic.

"A recent newspaper dispatch says that the Crusaders, an anti-prohibition organization, is planning an 'immediate drive to boost its membership among college students,' and further says that Nicholas Murray Butler, the president of Columbia University, had suggested this course, adding that Dean Mendell of Yale and President Hibben of Princeton 'had urged their students to join.' If the wet New Yorker is correctly reported, it is nothing short of a shame. Not being able to win the wet-dry fight on a clear-cut basis of merit, the wets are now invading the ranks of our youth, going into the classic halls of colleges that once stood for 'God and home and native land,' seeking out young men who never saw a saloon with all of its horror, and seeking their support in bringing back to this nation the most damnable traffic that ever darkened its history's pages. We are not surprised at the tactics of the wets. They want liquor and they know they can never get it back by the votes of men who lived in the old liquor days. They will have to depend upon the votes of young men and young women who never saw a saloon, but whom they are trying to deceive into believing that imperfect enforcement is worse than no law at all. The trustees of some of the colleges in this country ought to look very carefully into the kind of men who constitute the faculties."

Asbury College Opening.

Asbury College opened the new year with a splendid student body and practically the same enrollment as last year.

According to the annual custom, the school opened with the fall revival conducted by the beloved president emeritus, Dr. H. C. Morrison. For ten days the services continued with increasing interest. The altars were filled and the student body was profoundly stirred by the mighty messages on Full Salvation brought by this outstanding holiness preacher of America. Despite the fact that Dr. Morrison had suffered some from physical illness, he preached with unusual strength, clarity, and ardor. Those who were present will testify that the old-time power was manifested in the gracious results which ensued, and that, while on all sides the widespread financial depression is matched by a similar spiritual lethargy, yet in this institution the old-time revival methods and results are still used and seen.

The Asbury College administration, faculty, and students are continually keeping in mind that the school has a high and holy mission; that its only excuse is to be proclaiming continually the message of Scriptural Holiness to the world; that without the widespread emphasis upon this doctrine and experience the school would have no excuse for existence. Because of this emphasis scores throng to the altars experiencing the saving or sanctifying grace of God in their hearts.

At the close of the last school year at Commencement, a most striking incident occurred. Dr. Morrison, previous to preaching the baccalaureate, called upon the graduating class, number in all about 125, to testify, by standing, to the saving and sanctifying power of God; and practically the entire class stood as a unit on this occasion. This scene mightily stirred the hearts of the people. It is the purpose of the president of the senior class this year and his co-workers, as well as that of the faculty, to present at next Commencement another graduating class which shall be one hundred percent for Jesus Christ. If Asbury College can continue to send out year after year an unbroken army of Spirit-filled graduates, only eternity can reveal the tremendous impact which this stream of consecrated young lives will make for the extension of the Kingdom of God.

Asbury College is carrying on faithful to its high calling. We desire the prayers and support of all who are interested in the building of well-rounded young life which will glorify God and serve most effectively humanity at large.

Your Opportunity

to share in one of the most wonderful "hard-time" purchases it has been our privilege to make. The book is the "Beautiful Story of the Bible," in simple language, containing nearly three hundred stories from the Holy Book. It is a fascinating, inspiring and instructive historical narrative of the Old and New Testament times, including the lives of the prophets, of the rulers and the beautiful story of Jesus and his disciples. The book is designed as a course of instruction for the fifty-two weeks in the year, or for daily reading followed by a series of questions which simplify the stories and emphasize their important truths. Durable cloth binding.

There are about 200 illustrations in the book many of them full page in colors. There are 468 pages of double-column, intensely interesting reading matter, besides the fifty-two sets of questions. While we are writing this notice, a distinguished author and minister comes into our office, picks up the book and remarks that it is the finest child's story book that he knows of.

If you want to furnish your own child with one of the best Bible story books to be had, now is the time; if you want to furnish a relative or neighbor's child, now is the time; if you want one for your own use to help you in simplifying and teaching a spiritual Sunday school lesson, now is the time; if you are looking for something inexpensive, and something that will bless, in the way of a birthday or Christmas gift, now is the time.

When this remainder of the edition is exhausted, the book will not be reprinted. It was published to sell at $2.00, but the circumstances under which we bought these copies enable us to sell them out at $1.00 per copy, postpaid. Don't let this opportunity pass, but send The Pentecostal Publishing Company $1.00 worth of stamps, a money order, or currency right away, and get your copy.

Mrs. H. C. Morrison,

our Office Editor, will be glad to help you by going to our book store and selecting just the Christmas gift or gifts that will be suitable for the person or persons you may name. Give the age and state how many, also about what you want to pay. Address Mrs. H. C. Morrison, Box 592, Louisville, Ky.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

THE VALUE OF PERSEVERANCE.

Mildred Gray tossed the bag which she had been beading on the table with a sigh of disgust. "I'm tired of that. I don't intend to finish it. It is tedious and it takes too long."

"Mildred, the things you begin and never finish would make a great pile. I know one drawer in your bureau that is full," remarked her friend, Daisy Warren, who was busy with a bag similar to the one Mildred had just tossed aside. "Mother always insists that I finish what I begin. She says that is the way to learn perseverance."

"I will be persevering when I am older," returned Mildred carelessly, forgetting that in the time to learn perseverance is in youth.

Perseverance is the ability to keep working at a task, after the first glamour has departed. It marks the difference between failure and success. It is stubborn, for it hangs on to an undertaking, and gets it done. Perseverance is a virtue. It is an indication of strength of character and of will power to keep on and on in any right course of action.

There are evidences of lack of perseverance all around. It may be unfinished fancy work, as in Mildred's case; it may be the youth who did not finish the college course; the girl who started to improve by attending night school, then dropped out after the first few weeks; the young woman who is only a commonplace musician, because she lacked the will to practice faithfully.

Girls, how many unfinished things have you that testify to your lack of perseverance? Perseverance means sticking to a task until it is completed. It was the perseverance of God-year that produced rubber; the perseverance of Burbank gave to mankind better vegetables and fruits, and more beautiful flowers; the perseverance of Edison has made electricity the servant of man; that of the Wright brothers gave the airplane to the world. The perseverance of David Livingstone opened up the continent of Africa. Perseverance develops faith, and hope goes hand in hand with faith. The men mentioned had enough to discourage them; they might have given up, but perseverance refuses to be discouraged; it refuses to look at an undertaking as hopeless, it refuses to quit, and it starts anew after each failure.

Cultivate the habit of perseverance.

Dear Aunt Bettie: My father is an evangelist. He takes The Herald. I enjoy reading page ten. I am eleven years old and have brown eyes and dark brown hair. I am in the sixth grade. Who can guess my middle name. It begins with A and ends with E. It has five letters in it. I would like to receive letters from the cousins. I go to the Pilgrim Holiness Church. I live right next to it. This is my first letter to page ten. I would like to see it in print.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a new writer. Will you give me a little space so I may join your band of youngsters? I'm fifteen years of age and am a Sophomore of Big Rock High School. I love to go to school and am especially interested in music. I go to Sunday school each Sunday and also attend the Epworth League. Write, anyone who wishes to correspond with me, and I'll answer each letter.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a girl from California join your happy band? I live on a farm in Imperial Valley where it is quite warm. Here it is greatly different from the East; we irrigate and have canals and ditches; although Imperial Valley is a pretty place. I am fifteen, with light curly hair, grayish eyes and a fair complexion. I weigh 112 pounds and I am five feet, four inches tall. I am in the second year in high school. My grandmother sends us The Herald and there is nothing I enjoy reading as The Herald, especially the Boys and Girls' Page. It seems to me letters from California are very rare. I will try and start the beginning of the California letters, if there is room for them all. I love the Lord and it seems to me there is always something to do for him, though I can't do enough to be worthy of his love and care. Many nights the family and I gather around the piano and sing songs for the Lord which we greatly enjoy. I am sending my love to all the cousins and to you, Aunt Bettie. I would like to see this letter in print as it is my first one. All the cousins please write to me and I will answer all the letters written to me.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a lonely girl from Elkhorn, Ky., be admitted into your crowd of happy boys and girls? I was thirteen years of age Aug. 29. My weight is 102 pounds, and I am five feet, two inches tall. I have brown hair and grey eyes. I am in the eighth grade. I like music. I never go to theaters, dances, or shows. This is my first letter and I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep because I want to see my letter in print. B. Louise Williams, I guess your name to be Betty. If so, please write to me. My middle name begins with M and ends with E, and has three letters in it. Whoever guesses it write to me. Pearl M. Benningfield.
Elkhorn, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I am again asking for a place in your happy band of boys and girls. I wrote before but I guess it got misplaced or Mr. W. B. got it. I hope this one will miss him. I am a girl sixteen years old, and have been in bed for nearly ten months with lung trouble, but am improving and hope to be up soon. Aunt Bettie, I'm glad that so many of the cousins are Christians. I am a Christian and belong to the Pilgrim Holiness Church. I enjoy living for Jesus and I'm sure everybody else does that is a Christian. I guess I had better describe myself. I have dark brown hair, blue gray eyes and a fair complexion with a few freckles. I would like for the cousins to write to me. I will try to answer all letters received. I like pen pals. My birthday is Feb. 8. Have I a twin? If I have please write to me. A friend sent The Herald to me and I enjoy reading it, especially page ten. Lucile Lambert.
203 E. Iredell Ave., Mooresville, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As this is my second letter to The Herald I would love to see it in print. I had the pleasure of seeing my first letter in print so I hope Mr. W. B. is out when this arrives. I am an Arkansas girl and am proud to be called one. I am five feet, five inches tall, have brown eyes, black hair, dark complexion and weigh 115 pounds. My age I will leave for someone to guess. It is between sixteen and nineteen. Whoever guesses my middle name I will write them a letter. It begins with B and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. How many of you cousins like to read books? I certainly enjoy reading them. My favorites are The Ten Dreams, Billy Whiskers and Lady of the Lake. I suppose I had better tell you something about our State. I live in the wonder State; of course, I think so. Arkansas is noted for several good things—good roads, fine schools, fine churches and friendly people. I have said enough for one time. Aunt Bettie, please be kind enough to print this letter, won't you? Evelyn Swann.
Beebe, Ark.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am coming again as you were so nice to print my other letter. I got so many good letters from the cousins it encourages me to write again. I thank God for all his people. I feel more determined to make it to the City of God today than ever before as I am nearer the journey's end today than I have ever been before. I just came home from Camp Free camp meeting near Conly Springs where I met so many of my big brothers and sisters in Christ. Rev. Raymond Browning will be one of the preachers for next year. I never have heard him preach but if I am not in heaven I expect to hear him next year. I want to tell all that wrote those good letters encouraged me to travel on God bless you all. I love every one of you and would be glad if you would write again. We are expecting to have an old-time class meeting at our church soon and I wish all God's people could meet with us; it would be heaven on earth. I am a Wesleyan Methodist, as we have such large crowds we have a large harbor to worship in in the summer. Mrs. Arthur Leasure, I would be glad to visit your camp at Toronto, Ohio, as I know it is beautiful to behold. I am glad for all the holiness people the world over. I thank God for The Herald. It brings food to my soul. I am so glad that God's people can meet at the camp meetings where they can praise God for a full salvation. I am glad my church stands for holiness and we can tell what God has done for us. If he has sanctified us we can tell it. I don't like to be in meetings where you have to be careful or you will tell too much. Dear cousins, how thankful we should be for having a privilege to tell what God has done for us.

Mrs. Horace Dagenhart.

Stony Point, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Tennessee girl join your band? I have never written to The Herald, and am anxious to see my letter in print. I am twelve years of age and in the seventh grade, and go to Big Rock school. I have light brown hair, light blue eyes, and have fair complexion. My middle name begins with F and ends with E, and has eight letters in it. Anyone who will answer my letter I will write to them and tell them more about myself and home. I hope Mr. W. B. is not at home when my letter arrives, for I do wish to see my letter in print. Mary F. Lee.
Big Rock, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Is there space enough for a Tennesseean to join your happy band? Each week I enjoy reading the Boys' and Girls Page. But I think if the boys don't wake up you'll have to change it to the girls' page. Come on boys, let's don't let them beat us. We can write as well as they although we do not have as much time to write. I have noticed but very few letters from Tennessee. So if there is room please print this one. I hope the cousins will not fail to write to me. I will answer all letters I receive, and will exchange snapshots if desired. I was born March 24, have I a twin? Guess my middle name, which begins with an E and ends with N, and has five letters in it. Please write to me, cousins.

Thomas E. Pickle.
Rt. 3, Columbia, Tenn.,

Dear Aunt Bettie: I desire to have a word to the young folks if there be room on page ten for my letter. I have enjoyed very much the letters of the Christian boys and girls, and hear them testify to the power of holiness. It means a lot for a young man or woman to be absolutely and wholly consecrated to God's will. And it is ours as Christians to hold the blood-stained banner high always, and in every sense of the word make our lives shining testimonies for our blessed Savior. There are many opportunities for the Christian to glorify God in his daily life, and sad to say we pass many by without utilizing them. It takes grace to do many of these things for God, but he will give us that for the sincere asking. Let us realize and wake up to the fact that God needs and requires our testimony in deeds many times as well as words; and this is truly a day when the blinded world needs the light of the Christian to shine. "Walk in the light, as he is in the light." Indeed this is a blessed thing to do, and if we are in the light, we are sure to have a desire to see souls brought to Christ. I have many suggestions which I am sure would prove helpful and blessed to the folks who will do something for Christ. God has blessed

Dr. H. C. Morrison says of "My Hospital Experience" by Bud Robinson: "It will stir your heart, strengthen your faith; it makes the Lord Jesus more real and blessed. my labors, and I know he will yours, too. I think we all have a part in this great work! Let's assume something as our duty for Christ. Can't we realize what it will mean! I am only a boy myself (18 years) and have not been saved but something more than a year, but I have a vision of what these things mean. If we did no more than give out a dozen Gospel tracts, or sold a couple religious books, or something, look what it might mean to God's kingdom! I am now going to give my entire time most unreservedly to the ministry of book-selling and tract distribution. And such work done in the Spirit can't help but bring forth good fruit. Of course, we aren't all called to be preachers, but we can do our part, and it is sure to receive God's richest blessing. I want to hear from all God's children who will write, and especially the young folks, and will answer your letters. May I hear from some young preachers or missionaries, or folks preparing for same?

Dear Aunt Bettie: Could you sunnifaced boys and girls slip over a little for a little Kentucky girl. It won't take much room for I am not large. I'm four feet, seven inches in height, have hazel eyes, light, slightly wavy hair, and fair complexion. I am eleven years old and in the ninth grade. I've just finished reading The Pentecostal Herald. Mama has taken this paper for about a year but I hadn't noticed it much until I heard Dr. Morrison preach at Glasgow, Ky., back in the summer. I then became more interested. We are staying in Scottsville, Ky., going to school and we got our mail late so I may be answering questions from a back number. Frances Hill, I guess your first name to be Myrtle. Marie Neal, I guess your name to be Nina. Am I right about either? Can anyone guess my name? It begins with J and ends in A, and has seven letters in it. My birthday was Feb. 6. Have I a twin? If so please write and send a snapshot. I started one letter to this paper and it got lost so I hadn't tried again until tonight. Now I said it wouldn't take much room and yet it seems I can't stop. I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this arrives, and I also hope to see this in print as it is my first letter. J. Mayhew Hinton.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am nine years old and in the fourth grade. I like to go to Sunday school. I go to Pratuna school. This is my first letter to The Herald. I enjoy reading the letters from the boys and girls. I would like to receive letters from the boys. I live on a farm and for pets I have two kittens. I will watch for my letter. Norman de Vries.

FALLEN ASLEEP

HUNTER.

Andrew Smith Hunter, son of John Hans Hunter and Mary Ann (Smith) Hunter, was born in Brooks County, W. Virginia, June 26, 1855. His general education was obtained in the public schools of that county and at West Liberty State Normal School; his theological training at the Boston University School of Theology.

In 1882 he was received on trial in the Pittsburgh Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church and, except for one year as a Supernumerary, continued in active service until 1904, since when he has been on their retired list.

Brother Hunter was married January 2, 1883, to Miss Sarah Elizabeth Brennenman, daughter of Keziah Allison and Richard Brown Brennenman of Hancock County, W. Va., who served with his through his active ministry. When he retired they made their home in Beaver, Pa., where their children were educated, until late in 1917, when they moved to DeLand, Fla. Here Mrs. Hunter was laid to rest, having died Thanksgiving morning, 1923, and the writer of this sketch conducted her funeral service.

During his residence in DeLand Brother Hunter was as active in the work of the Lord as strength and opportunity allowed, preaching from time to time, teaching in Sabbath school, preparing notes on the Sabbath School lessons for local papers and writing for various religious publications. He was loyal to his convictions, positive in his advocacy of Scriptural doctrine, faithful to his Christian testimony.

His health gradually failed. For a year he suffered from angina pectoris, the attacks increasing in frequency and intensity until, after four weeks' confinement to his room, the end came on the morning of October 10, 1931. His daughter Eunice, who was his home-keeper these last years, gave him the tenderest possible care during his last illness and deeply mourns his passing away. Four other children are also left in sorrow: Richard, residing in Milwaukee, Laura, of LaGrange, Ill., Herman, of Orlando, and James of Chicago.

Rev. J. W. Cain.

North Indiana Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church.

FERGUSON.

Mrs. Sarah Jefferson Ferguson went to glory May 26, 1931. She was born in Cherokee Co., Ga., Jan. 28, 1846. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church at the age of eight years. She was one of the charter members of Fairview Church organized 1857. She was married to Daniel Ferguson July 17, 1872.

She was the mother of five children, Edna, W. D., Charlie, Virgil, (deceased), and Mary, who died in childhood. She nursed her sister (Maria Williams) in her own home, during her last illness, raised and educated her four orphan children. She sent two orphans to our Home at Decatur, Ga., where they were given the best of home training and education. When her daughter (Mrs. Tate) was left a widow, she took charge of the children, relieving Mrs. Tate, as much as she could of that responsibility. They attested their appreciation, when they were grown by rendering to her the same reverence and honor, as to their mother. Mrs. Tate said during her mother's life, "Whatever my children amount to the honor is due my mother."

She graduated from Asheville Female College. She taught school several years in the mountains of North Georgia. Her daughter took her mother's place many years, teaching children in grammar and high school, and adults in Bible study. Two of the grandchildren are filling very desirable positions in high schools of their State.

We feel her grandest work was in the Sunday school. She started the first Sunday school in this section, by gathering the children in her home and teaching them the Bible. When there were too many for the room, she moved them to a vacant house on the farm. After Fairview Church was organized about a mile from her home, she moved there, soliciting and receiving help, until it numbered about a hundred. In 1896 she moved to Waleska, Ga., and was always helpful in church work, encouraging and assisting the students, and administering to the wants of the needy. In 1911, she again changed her home to Fairmount, where she continued her good work, teaching an old folks Bible class, leading in missionary work, etc. When her eyes were dim, her hearing dull, and her body too feeble to attend church, she would send flowers to the sick, letters to the distressed, supplies to the needy, and bestow a benediction on those who visited in her home. At the Home-Coming at old Fairview, 1930, she was given the seat of honor and extolled as the "Mother of the Church."

Like Paul, years before she left us, she was permitted to visit heaven and come back to tell of its glory.

When her work on earth was done, She lay her tired body down to rest. Her spirit took its flight,

To the home of celestial light with the blest.

An old friend,
Cornelia Sewell.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

H. H. McAfee: "We earnestly request that our friends of the Holiness Movement join with us in definite prayer for the healing of Mrs. C. P. Hogle, of Ann Arbor, Mich. On July 28, while Brother and Sister Hogle were on their way to Eaton Rapids Camp Meeting, they had the misfortune of an automobile accident, in which Sister Hogle sustained a fractured spine and other serious injuries. She spent five weeks in the hospital, and is yet confined to her bed, in her home in Ann Arbor. She has improved, but still suffers greatly. She has faith for healing, and we know that God answers prayer. Sister Hogle is a devout and useful woman in the Lord's work for the spread of scriptural holiness. Let us pray and expect God to restore her to health, active service and the blessing of a lost world."

T. W. Brendle: "Earnestly pray for me that I may be healed of stomach trouble and other ailments. Also pray for three friends that they may be healed."

Please pray with all the fervency of your souls for two families who are in dire distress and spiritually blind.

Please pray earnestly that a young man and woman may be saved and the young lady to get well and find employment.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson VIII.—November 22, 1931.
Subject.—Paul in Rome. Acts 28:
16—24:30, 31.

Golden Text.—I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. Philippians 4:13.

Time.—A. D. 60 to 61.

Places.—Cæsarea and Rome.

Introduction.—Last Sunday's lesson closed just as Paul was asking for the privilege of speaking to the Jews who were trying to kill him. At the end of his speech they threw dust into the air, and cried: "Away with such a fellow from the earth: for it is not fit that he should live." Under a strong military escort he was sent to Cæsarea to prevent his enemies from killing him. His accusers followed him there, and hired one Tertullus, an orator, to plead against Paul; but they failed to convict him of any wrongdoing. While a prisoner at Cæsarea Paul used every opportunity to preach Christ to all comers. "As he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee." Miserable wretch, he hoped that Paul might bribe him, "that he might loose him."

When Festus came into the governor's office that Felix had held, Paul appealed to Cæsarea, and thereby forced Festus to send him to Rome for further trial. But before Paul was sent away King Agrippa made a visit to Cæsarea to see the governor; and being curious to see and to hear the strange prisoner, the opportunity was granted to him. Paul's great speech, delivered before the king, and recorded in Acts 26, is one of the most eloquent utterances that has ever fallen from human lips. Festus concluded that he was crazy, and declared: "Much learning doth make thee mad;" but Paul affirmed that he was speaking "words of truth and soberness." And then to Agrippa he said: "King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest." King Agrippa's reply has been the occasion of what seems to me a very foolish controversy. I quote Dr. Adam Clarke on the passage, believing that he is correct. "Thou hast nearly persuaded me to embrace Christianity. How it could have entered into the mind of any man, who carefully considered the circumstances of the case, to suppose that these words of Agrippa are spoken ironically, is to me unaccountable. Every circumstance in the case proves them to have been the genuine effusion of a heart persuaded of the truth; and only prevented from acknowledging it by secular considerations."

Following the foregoing matter we have Luke's minute account of the perilous journey to Rome, during which their ship was wrecked and lost with all its cargo; but the passengers escaped with their lives to the island of Melita, now called Malta. Paul used the occasion to heal certain sick ones and to preach the gospel while on the island. After some time they embarked on board another vessel which landed them on the Italian shore at the town of Puteoli, whence the journey was completed to Rome on foot. This brings us directly up to the text of today's study.

16. When we came to Rome.—At last Paul has his long cherished wish fulfilled; but how differently from all his expectations. But never mind about that; God will see to it that his work shall be done through Paul. The centurion.—This was the same Roman officer into whose charge Paul was committed at the commencement of his voyage. He seems to have been a faithful soul. Captain of the Guard.—This must have been the officer whose job was guarding prisoners in Rome. Suffered.—Permitted. To dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him.—I wonder if our faithful centurion did not suggest this to the captain. There was some kindness, even in heathen Rome.

17. Paul called the chief of the Jews together.—Paul meant business, and wasted no time. This call for his Jewish brethren was made immediately after a rest of three days. Paul's speech needs no exposition. Read it carefully, and note the utter absence of any ill feeling against his persecutors. Although he had appealed to Cæsar in order to save his life, he had nothing to accuse his nation of. It is a manly speech. One expression may call for explanation: "For the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain." The Jews hoped for a Messiah and for the resurrection of the dead. Both of these blessed hopes had been the theme of Paul's preaching. Of course, the Sadducees believed nothing—they were Jewish infidels; but the Pharisees believed in both these hopes that had so long sustained Israel. Strange that they should have cried for the blood of him who proclaimed the very things for which they were hoping.

21. Their reply was rather cautious, but clear and kind: "We neither received letters out of Judaea concerning thee, neither any of the brethren that came shewed or spake any harm of thee." They must have been so glad to get Paul out of Palestine, that they forgot to send some evil word after him to Rome. But it was Satan's job; and he would soon have things going his way at the Roman Capital.

22. But we desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest.—Paul must have said much that Luke has not recorded. He had opened the way for a future discourse. The remainder of the verse shows quite plainly that they were not in total ignorance concerning the apostle's faith and teaching. They had heard something about Christianity before Paul's arrival in the city. Concerning this sect, we know that everywhere it is spoken against.—The church in Rome had been spreading the good news, and the devil and hisimps were on the warpath. He never lets a soul go without a battle. Without question, all the forces of hell are arrayed against Jesus Christ, and against all who are true to him. Separate the Church from the world, and the battle will be as hot as it ever was in Jerusalem, or in Rome. America would seethe like a boiling cauldron. We would witness spiritual cyclones and spiritual earthquakes on every hand.

23. There came many to him into his lodging.—God seems to have provided that he should have ample room for his work. I wish to call attention to the ground-work of his teaching. There was no New Testament at the time. Some of its books had been written; but they were not yet formed into the New Testament Canon as we now have it. Note that Paul "expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses, and out of the prophets." He believed in Moses, and found that Moses testified concerning the coming Christ. His sermon would have been too lengthy to suit some of our modern church folk who never carry anything bigger than a halfpint tin cup to service; and when they get that full, they are ready to trot home for dinner, or to abuse the preacher who is endeavoring to help some really hungry soul into the kingdom of God. That little fulmination is free to all who need it. Paul preached "from morning till evening." Not too long when he had something to say.

24. Some believed, . . . and some believed not.—Men are the "same yesterday, and today, and forever." One of the hardest things that any true minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ has to face is the fact that he must preach to many who will be lost in spite of all that God and good men can do. This thing broke the heart of the Son of man when he cried to the Jews: "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life." He weeps over Jerusalem, because she would not let him save her from temporal and spiritual ruin. I suppose that he is still weeping over many modern cities as they revel in sin and shame.

Be careful to read the five verses that are not included in our lesson. In them you will find why so many souls are lost forever. They close their own eyes, stop their ears, harden their hearts and stiffen their necks, lest they should yield to the wooings of the Holy Spirit and be saved. It is their own doing that results in their everlasting undoing. The Spirit of God is constantly ceasing to strive with such souls, and turning his ministers to those who will hear and believe the gospel.

30. Two whole years in his own hired house.—We know not where the money came from to pay this rent. Some have supposed that the apostle had property; but that is only a guess. Others have supposed that some of the churches that he had founded furnished the money. That is more reasonable, but just a guess after all.

31. Preaching the kingdom of God.—I take off my hat to Paul. Nothing could stop him. He had sworn everlasting loyalty to his Master, and everlasting defiance to the devil, and the war was on to the hilt. No man forbidding.—Good. Chained to a Roman soldier; but still crying: "This one thing I do." He had no other business in the flesh but to preach Christ's gospel to a dying world; and he so finished the work that when Nero's axe was ready there was nothing left to do but to die and receive his crown.

Four Thousand Questions and Answers

ON THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT

Size, 3 1/4 x 5 1/4 inches.

The plan of this "Aid to Bible Study" is universally accepted as most effective. It invites to inquiry and encourages to answer. It opens up Scripture, in all its phases to teacher and reader, and proves an unequalled source of mental and spiritual light.

As a means to an end it is direct and strong. In pulpit, class-room or home, who asks, is given power to question briefly and distinctly; who answers, is provided with intelligent and satisfactory expression. The real educative and comforting force of the method needs but a trial to be convincing. In every devout life, in every Teacher's career, how many hundreds of questions arise as to Bible History, rules of conduct, meanings of text, or matters of faith? Here this "Aid" becomes a ready Directory, a satisfactory Evangel, an invitation and inspiration.

No. 101. Cloth Binding, Stained Edges, Gold Titles. (Former price, $1.00), reprint price now 35c.

Preparing To Preach

By David R. Breed, M.A., D.D.

The young minister could not ask for safer or more enlightening tutelage than he will find in this inspiring volume from the trenchant pen of Dr. David Riddle Breed. Nor could the experienced minister find a better bellows to keep alive the flame of his interest in the work to which he has consecrated his life. Preaching, to Dr. Breed, is one long period of unceasing preparation. It is a romance which never grows old.

Dr. Breed suitably lays chief emphasis upon the basic spiritual duties of the minister; yet he devotes his attention also to an innumerable host of practical details which plays so large a part in determining the success or failure of a preacher. The great bulk of his book is of course given over to the various kinds of sermons, suggesting the advantages of expository sermons, the special features of the evangelistic sermon, the importance of the doctrinal sermon as the culmination and crown of all sermonizing, the skill required for constructing sermons in courses. There are rules and material for the illustrated sermon. 455 pages. Original price, $3.00. Our special price $1.00.

Prof. Fred E. Bennett has recently closed a successful meeting in the Free Methodist Church in Wichita, Kan. He is now engaged in a meeting in Seattle, Wash. Prof. Bennett gives most interesting addresses on "Science Lectures and Sound Evangelism," and can give splendid references. His home address is Suite 1008, Chicago Bank of Commerce Bldg., 7 I. Dearborn, Chicago, Illinois.

Under the call of God into his vineyard as a gospel singer and pianist, I should be glad to accept calls as he may lead. Terms—expenses and freewill offering. Miss Edna Moyer, Boswell, Indiana.

Rev. W. B. Summers, pastor of Garfield Charge, Dodge City District, has just been returned for the fourth year with an invitation from all the officers and a cordial welcome from the laity. He has held his revivals for three years in succession being his own evangelist. The first year fifty souls were saved and forty-seven united with the church. The following years were not as fruitful, but a goodly number were gathered into the Kingdom. An Epworth League was organized which numbers forty-five, and they have an average attendance of thirty to thirty-five. Thirty per cent of the membership are praying people and there is an average attendance at the mid-week prayer service of twelve per cent. The second Sunday following conference there were several infants baptized and four adults received by letter. They are now planning for their fall revival beginning Nov. 15.

To Any and All:

I was holding evangelistic meetings Wardsville, W. Va., the Rev. J. Russell Corron assisting. I can say he is one of the best preachers I ever heard; filled with the Spirit, he preaches the whole gospel, for the whole man right up to the plumb line. With command of words, he is instructive, interesting, logical and clear in thought. The messages he gives the world needs. Any one in need of a preacher or evangelist will do well to secure him. Mrs. W. A. Barron, Evangelist, Somerset, Pa.

A UNIQUE ENTERPRISE.

Knowing the interest in and sympathy with Christian and philanthropic efforts felt by The Herald family, I am giving the following facts that may be interesting to any of your readers who have friends suffering from the handicap of physical blindness.

Here in Richmond, we have a rather unique work, a library of devotional literature printed in Braille, grade 1½, the books being mailed daily to numbers who make application for them. One of the ministers of this city recently visited the library and questioned the librarian, Miss Louise H. McCraw, concerning the work. The following Sunday the bulletin of his church contained the following:

"Did you know that we have in Richmond a most wonderful work devoted to the blind people of the world? In the Central Y. M. C. A. there is an office from which books printed in Braille are sent to all parts of our own country and beyond. This work is supported by voluntary offerings, and I never knew until I visited the office, that the United States Postal Department franks all such literature for the blind. Uncle Sam has a bigger heart than I thought. It will do you good to hear Miss McCraw tell of this work."

These inspiring books will be mailed free to any blind person whose name is turned over to the librarian.

Address Rose Henry Redd, 313 W. Roberts St., Richmond, Va.

INTERDENOMINATIONAL EVANGELISTIC ASSOCIATION.

The second National Convention of Evangelists and Christian workers will assemble at Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 27th to Jan. 3rd, inclusive. The meetings will be held in the Municipal Auditorium seating 12000.

The first Convention of this kind ever held, met last January in the Moody Memorial Church, Chicago, and was a most outstanding success with more than 6000 in attendance and delegates from practically every state and some foreign countries.

The Convention is under the auspices of The Interdenominational Evangelistic Association of Winona Lake, Ind., and the International Federation of Christian Workers, of Siloam Springs, Ark. George T. Stephens is president of the former and John Brown of the latter. Elmer C. Miller, of South Bend, Ind., is Convention Director.

Millions of devout Christians everywhere are praying for another mighty revival to sweep over the Nation and world and it is most significant that a great Convention of the leading evangelists and soul winners of the Nation will be held at the beginning of the New Year, for the purpose of discussing the problems of evangelism and seeking endowment of greater power.

This Association was organized by J. Wilbur Chapman and his associates in 1904 for the purpose of promoting sane, thorough, scriptural and deeply effective evangelism among the churches of the Nation and numbered among the active membership and officers are Billy Sunday, W. E. Biedewolf, Chas. Reigh Scoville, Harry W. Vom Bruch, Homer Rodeheaver, J. C. Massee, Bob Jones, Elmer C. Miller, John Brown and George T. Stephens.

A great program is being arranged with a different outstanding evangelist and gospel song director in charge of each service, afternoon and night. It is expected the great auditorium will be filled to overflowing at the opening session when Billy Sunday will deliver one of his famous addresses.

NEW BOOKS JUST RECEIVED

The Christ of the Mount
A WORKING PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE
BY E. STANLEY JONES

In this volume Doctor Jones interprets the Sermon on the Mount. Having written so vividly on the inner life, this most famous of religious writers has felt constrained to apply the Christian gospel to the difficult and disturbing conditions obtaining today. It has often been charged that the imperishable mountainside discourses of Jesus are superb ethical precepts, but impracticable idealism. Doctor Jones insists the Sermon on the Mount can and should be applied to the actual everyday living of the Christian.

The Christly Life

A STUDY OF THE CHRISTIAN GRACES
BY W. Y. FULLERTON, D.D.

Dr. Fullerton is careful to show that the life that is Christly is something more than a life lived in the mere imitation of Christ; it is the manifestation of a living Presence, of a Lord who dwells within. It is, moreover, an attitude of Christian experience not reached by asking, "What would Jesus do?" but a life without a question mark, in which the Lord of life is given full right of way to will and to work within the heart, of his own good pleasure.

TO THE CHILDREN OF THE LORD.

By The Editor.

PEOPLE who have been regenerated, born of the Spirit, who are able to say from their hearts, "Our Father who art in heaven," need have no fear of men or devils. The Word of God standeth sure; the foundation of your faith is the Rock of Ages. It will abide when the stars have burned to cinders.

* * *

All sorts of false teachers are ravaging the country and destroying the faith of those who can be moved, but their teachings fall to the ground when they attack those who have on the whole armor of God, and the blessed indwelling of the Holy Spirit. The Lord Jesus Christ is a reality to you, and the Word of God is spirit and life. "Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might."

* * *

This is a time to remember that teaching of our Lord Jesus in the 24th chapter of Matthew, which reads: "And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, shall be saved. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached to all the world for a witness to all nations; and then the end shall come."

* * *

The big business of God's children at a time like this, is to "endure," to hold fast to the faith, to feed their souls with the Word of God, with prayer, and witnessing. It is not only a duty, but a blessed privilege to speak to one another words of encouragement, testify to the grace of God, the witness of the Holy Spirit, and the cleansing power of Jesus' blood. Speak words of warning and exhortation to the unsaved; keep the holy fire burning within our souls, and encourage ourselves with the thought that there will be an end to these strenuous times of wickedness, unbelief, and the uniting of all the forces of evil to trample under foot everything that is true and holy.

* * *

There are powerful spiritual movements in the earth for righteousness. Let us not forget this fact. If God's people will assemble themselves, preach the truth, sing the praises of our Lord, and besiege a throne of grace in prayer, there will be an invisible Presence to move upon us, to bless and renew our strength, to give us comfort and courage in the midst of the diabolical forces that have combined themselves to drive God out of the world, to bring in an orgy of liquor and lust and ruin.

* * *

We are by no means dependent upon a church building, or some great preacher, or splendid choir, or a multitude of people; all of these may be a gracious means of grace, but there is a promise to two or three that gather in his name, and our blessed Master does not scorn or fail to meet with one who humbly enters the closet of prayer, or goes into the secret place of the woods; the garret, the barn, the kitchen, anywhere and everywhere, our

A LIFE AND DEATH STRUGGLE.

One of the peculiar phases of the present depressing situation is the fact that people, everywhere, are uneasy. They are mystified. They hardly understand how the country has gotten into its present condition, and they do not know what to expect, or how to prepare for the immediate future.

A Few Things Are Certain.

Satan and his hosts are taking advantage of the bewildered state of mind; they are uniting all of their forces. The distressed state of the people offers those diabolical forces an opportunity for aggressive onslaughts against everything that makes for the peace, prosperity and happiness of the people. Never in the history of this nation have the evil forces been so united, so aggressive, so determined and hopeful to destroy prohibition, destroy evangelical faith, destroy the family, hinder revivals of religion, bind the preachers with the cords of fear, silence and stifle the voice of every man who dares to cry aloud against the domination and rule of the Devil and his emissaries.

It Is Time To Work.

At a time like this every Christian, from the strongest to the weakest, ought to gird themselves for battle. Now is the time to press revivals, to seek the salvation of souls, to do everything within our power to counteract the influences of the aggressive hosts of the Devil, to call on God in prayer, to call upon our fellowbeings with warnings and entreaties. There has never been a time when it was more important to broadcast religious literature than at the present time. If fifty thousand readers of The Herald would send in at least, one 25 cent subscription, for a three months' visit of The Herald to some family who has never received it, it would greatly increase the power of this warrior of truth, salvation and righteousness. Let every one who loves God and humanity be up and doing something for the cause of righteousness.

H. C. Morrison.

own bodies may become a temple, and our very souls an altar at which we may meet our Lord. Take courage, ye children of the great God. Sing and make melody in your hearts to the Lord, and go on your way rejoicing in the Christ who will come to us, or to whom we shall go, and return with him to a world brought into harmony with the holy will of the God of the universe.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

IT appears that a certain class of men in Southern Methodism who are invited to lecture for our Summer Schools for young preachers, delight to take their opportunity to give vent to their modernistic, liberal views with reference to the teachings of the Holy Scriptures.

I am informed that at the Summer School for young preachers at Winchester the past summer, one of the instructors in an address, said that, "Jesus Christ could have chosen to be a philosopher; he might have chosen to be a carpenter, but instead, he chose to be a teacher." That sort of thing is not scholarship, reverence, or true in any essential particular.

Jesus Christ was God manifest in the flesh.

He was pre-existent, and as a lamb slain from the beginning of things, his great mission in the world was the redemption of men from sin. God would never have created the race with free will, and the possibility of a fall, had he not been able to provide a gracious and mighty Redeemer for man in case he did fall.

Why should any green-horn preacher come around this late in the day trying to put into the thought of young preachers low ideals and false conceptions of Jesus Christ. The great need of the church is a ministry that will lift up and exalt Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord, mighty to save to the uttermost. The Christ of prophecy, of Bethlehem, of Galilee, of Bethany, of Jerusalem, and of Calvary, as we have him in Old Testament and New, is exactly the Christ the world needs—the Saviour of sinners. If there ever was a time when, above all things else, the preacher should preach Jesus, that time is now. Any self-respecting young preacher should not hesitate to stand up in the class and protest against any such drivel.

We understand that there was another teacher in this same Summer School, by an illustration, spoke very disparagingly of a God who would send a flood to destroy wicked men. The fact of the flood is too plainly written in the Old and New Testaments to make it a subject of skeptical ridicule by any man who is permitted to stand up and pretend to instruct young ministers how to go out and preach to a sinful world.

There can be no sort of just, equal, and progressive organization for the protection and advancement of intelligent beings in this, or any other world, without law, and law amounts to nothing without penalty, and the lawless care for neither law or penalty if the laws are not enforced and its penalties inflicted.

Is the Governor of a state supposed to be a good governor, and fit to occupy his office, if he is indifferent to violation of law? Or if he is disposed to protect criminals, rather than society? The people are justly indignant when a governor issues pardon to incendiaries, cut-throats, robbers and murderers, and turns them loose upon society to repeat their crimes.

God cannot govern his moral universe without law, and God's law would amount to nothing without penalties and, in the nature of things, those penalties must be enforced. In his divine mercy God has provided an atonement so gracious and sufficient that he can remain just in the justification of the ungodly. But when men trample upon the laws of God, refuse the mercy of God, and persist in rebellion, which not only destroys themselves but their fellowbeings, in the nature of things God must and will punish the impenitent sinner. There is great need in this country that faithful men in the pulpit should call attention to the fact, and impress upon the people the important truth that there is nothing arbitrary or tyrannical in the laws of

REVIVAL TIDINGS FROM BRAZIL.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Not since I left Chili has it been my privilege to witness such workings of the Holy Spirit as we are seeing now in Brazil. Rev. W. G. Borchers, missionary of the M. E. Church, South, has been with me from the beginning as interpreter and co-worker. We are now in our fourth meeting. We have certainly seen the "old time power" as in old time revival days. Rev. Guaracy Silveria, of Central M. E. Church, Sao Paulo received the baptism of the Spirit early in that meeting and has been greatly used of God. God has been pleased to answer prayer in many churches and praise God the fire is spreading in churches and schools.

II.

We are having most extraordinary experiences with the realities of Christian experience in Brazil. I have just closed the third meeting and each one has had happenings in the spiritual realm which can be attributed to no other agency than the Spirit of God. Now my plan is, when I open a meeting, to begin preaching the Acts of the Apostles and put the Holy Spirit central. I never talk "topics;" I hold no "round tables," I take up no "intellectual problems." I never discuss "modernism or fundamentalism." As God helps me I pour out the truth on sin, repentance, conversion, sanctification, the baptism with the Holy Spirit and, on the second night, make an altar call. I am sure it is nothing that I have said or done that produces results like the following cases: A woman who lost a night's sleep the first night of the meeting; a missionary who spent three hours in prayer after a meeting, wrote letters home asking forgiveness for things done and said; a teacher who made a renunciation in her love letters; a man who made up with a fellow with whom he quarrelled eleven years ago; a teacher who had to forgive and make reconciliation; a woman who asked forgiveness of her mother-in-law and others for temper and hot words; two sisters-in-law embracing and forgiving each other after getting the blessing at the altar. A woman getting the blessing in the meetings in the M. E. Church, going back to her own church (the Baptist) and asking the people to forgive her for things wrong she had done and said; a gambler who has several killings on his record (converted some time ago) now at the altar with tears and prayers seeking a clean heart; an official of the church having a fight over his tobacco and valuable pipes he thought so much of. When he made the renunciation the fellow got filled with salvation; a woman who said the past four days she had experienced more in religion than in twenty years before; a young preacher and his wife who left the ministry getting right with God and willing now to obey the Spirit. A wayward boy who had run away from home, with money stolen from his father, brought by the pastor to the meeting and at the altar confessing his sins and getting converted; young people from the choir coming from the gallery to the altar and night after night seeking until they got the blessing good; a theological professor confessing that they had been too cold and lifeless and that henceforth, he was going to put the Holy Spirit more in his teaching and preaching and adopt more of the methods employed in the revival meeting.

III.

When the Spirit of the Lord begins to work in a revival meeting there always ensues some cleaning up in the lives of people. The Holy Spirit produces the same results among all nations and people. Psychology, nationalism, temperament—all these things are pushed to one side when the Spirit brings on conviction. It is painful to witness how some workers permit themselves to be trammelled and handicapped by a foolish philosophy on these matters, which prevents them from doing their utmost for souls. Here in Brazil I see the same things occur as in the old-time revivals. At Campinas a young man was seeking full salvation for a week; he got no victory till he made things right with a man with whom he had a quarrel. Yesterday in our meeting a woman got blessed who had a violent temper and had estranged herself from her friends because of tongue and temper. She had a lot of making up to do. Next morning she was at the altar with her husband who was now earnestly seeking the blessing which had changed his wife's life so wondrously. Now this little firebrand of a woman who used so often to get filled with temper and the devil has got so marvelously changed that she is a firebrand for God. She is full of prayer and testimony and good works. She gets after souls like an old timer. I noticed her the other night after meeting closed. It was past ten o'clock; a young woman came down from the altar with a look of distress upon her face, wiping her eyes of tears; this little woman met her, talked with her and then got her on her knees in one of the pews and was trying to pray her through to victory. The last Sunday night of the meeting she and her husband were sitting up in one of the side seats near the pulpit and during that entire service that woman was bowed down with such a burden of prayer for the meeting that she scarcely looked up during the sermon. I asked her husband about it; he told me she had a great burden of prayer. The Holy Spirit comes on some people in such a matter as to make them electrical for God—"quick and powerful" would be a good biblical term to apply to such a worker.

IV.

There is a lot of cheap foolish talk today about reality. A lot of young graduate preachers with the ink hardly dry upon their college diplomas, get into the pulpit and talk a lot of pretty things about this thing they call reality. They say they are after realities in religion; the day is past for dogma and doctrine. Medieval theology has spent itself and the religious beliefs of our forefathers must be put among the superstitions of the past and so they talk! But how to lead their people to realities in religion they do not know any more about than the man in the moon. Trouble with them, they have scrapped the Bible way of salvation. Every preacher to see straight has to have two eyes—the spiritual and the intellectual, but so many are like the negro in Brazil who was blind. The doctor said he could cure him with a couple of operations—the fellow had one operation performed and it was a success; he was so proud of the fact that he could see with one eye that he never came back to get the other eye fixed. Now the land is filled with one-eyed preachers; they have been to college, possibly to the theological seminary, and they have several nice looking diplomas hanging in their study. They have the intellectual eye but not the spiritual. Observe how much the spiritual has to do with vision in the words of Jesus: "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see." "Except a man be born again he cannot see."

V.

Problems! How often that word is used today and it is so frequently used in spiritual matters. Rev. W. G. Borchers, the faithful Spirit-filled missionary of the M. E. Church, South, who has been my interpreter and co-worker in all these four meetings, often has his hands full in dealing with individuals who have problems facing them as they struggle for victory in the meetings. Brother Borchers has the Portuguese language in splendid fashion; he speaks it like an educated native born; of course they want to talk over their difficulties to one who has the language and one whom they know is a man of God. But how wondrously the Holy Spirit helps people over their problems. "I have written four letters," said one of the seekers to me in English; letters making things right that stood between the struggling soul and God. When there is a willingness to straighten things out the Holy Spirit never fails to help.

After all, the "mourner's bench" of the revival meeting is a great place to settle soul problems and, as for intellectual and theological problems, no better place outside of heaven.

"You ask me, brethren, how I know
That Jesus is Divine;
The rather bid me tell how I know
That yonder sun doth shine:
Or bid me tell you how I know
That ocean billows roll,
That winds sweep on from north or south,
Why, friends, He's saved my soul!"

VI.

A theological professor in one of the Seminaries in Brazil asked me the other day about how Pentecost year came on in the U. S. A. Did we have any great results from the observance of Pentecost? Now that was a kind of unique question but eminently practical. We know that there were many things going on relative to Pentecost in the home churches; a great many books were written on the Holy Spirit, Pentecost, etc., but what did the Methodist Church have to report for the year 1930? I think it was a loss of over 43,000. This was serious and a very grave reflection indeed. Not much Pentecost about that!

Pentecost comes to the church and the individual only when certain conditions are met. No amount of brilliant preaching and writing will make up for repentance and getting right with God, and it is hopeless to expect a Pentecost to come upon a church when that church, from the preacher down to the janitor, is run on worldly lines and no vital gospel of repentance and free and full salvation is preached. Then it is vain to hope for a Pentecost upon the Methodist Church, as a whole, when, officially it is committed to the modernistic theology and propaganda.

The Methodist Episcopal Church (North) holds its General Conference in 1932. It will abound, as usual, with a lot of pious declarations. We Methodists are fine at being religious in our declarations and resolutions!

When we read the books and papers put out now-a-days by the Methodist press we are tempted to ask the same question John Wesley asked when he preached that sermon at Oxford which gave such offence to the professors that they decreed that he should never be asked to preach again; his sermon was on Scriptural Christianity; his text was Acts 2:4: "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." As John warmed up in exhortation he cried: "In the name of the Lord God Almighty what religion are you of?"

VII.

I like to read Wesley. Now and then in my travels I see his Journals. What a wealth of suggestion and instruction there is in them. Wesley was a great surgeon of the soul; he knew how to deal with the vital questions of soul experience. He says: "I preached at eight on that delicate device of Satan to destroy the whole religion of the heart—the telling men not to regard frames or feelings, but to live by naked faith; that is, in plain terms, not to regard either love, joy, peace or any other fruit of the Spirit; not to regard whether they feel these or the reverse; whether their souls be in a heavenly or hellish frame."

Methodist theology and hymnology furnish some of the richest feasts for the soul in the realm of experimental religion. Naked faith that Wesley speaks about may at times be a matter of momentary experience, but it is a poor thing to live by. Better go after the realization as suggested by these verses of Wesley:

"Saviour, to thee my soul looks up,
My present Saviour thou!

In all the confidence of hope,
I claim the blessing now.

"'Tis done! Thou dost this moment save,
With full salvation bless;
Redemption through thy blood I have,
And spotless love and peace."

DRY FACTS FOR DRY FOLKS.

Rev. T. C. Henderson.

FIRST. The Prohibition situation is just now a very grave one. Not since the day when the whole issue of national Prohibition awaited the decision of the voters has the cause experienced a more menacing and anxious hour. Binding ourselves to the facts of the present situation is stupid. This is no time to live on fancies and fair hopes. The urgent need is for a very honest consideration of facts. Hon. Carl Voorman, of Illinois, recently said that "Prohibition has reached the place where it has to go forward or backward." There can be no drifting now. The tides are not dependable at this date. The challenge is to the dries to make a new advance or lose the costly-won achievements of long years. If the facts can discourage us and demonstrate to us that our case is hopeless, then let us have all the facts, for there is no use living in a fool's paradise of ignorance and false hope. Never did the cause of Prohibition more truly need a strong and fearless force of supporters who are dries because they are intelligently convinced of the rightness and wisdom of the idea; and not supporters simply because it is respectable and easy. Be it said that the facts are on the side of the Dries, but we are on the defensive, and there is no room for a trembling coward in the ranks of those who battle against rum and its friends.

Second. It is a fact that the forces which are against Prohibition are strongly manned and amply supported with numbers and money. The Wets are not all a lot of low-browed, bleary-eyed, skulking scums of society. Intellectual aristocrats and social leaders and individuals of national and international influence give leadership to the battling of the Wets. Wealth that is of great size and prestige is joined with skill and genius in organization to boost the battle against the Eighteenth Amendment. Prominent statesmen, noted molders of public sentiment, great newspapers and widely read magazines join in scoffing Prohibition. Even churchmen, in some instances, oppose or straddle this issue. If this disheartens us, it is inevitable, for facts are facts and one cannot destroy them by smearing them over with brilliant "japalac." There is no advantage gained by discounting the enemy. Better face this fact and quit the fight like an honest coward than to fool oneself into thinking that pop-guns will frighten the enemy.

Third. It is a fact that the one and only issue in the present fight is the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The Wets want just one thing—repeal. Anything short of this is only one step in that direction for them. Their more frank leaders admit this, and the fact that they have no substitute for Prohibition on which they can unite betrays their objective more clearly than words could do. It is not modification nor any substitute which the Wets desire, but the actual nullifying and repealing of the constitutional hindrances to their thirsts. And, glory be! this is the very issue on which the Dries want to fight. It is basic to all our thought about Prohibition. We Dries believe that the only way that intoxicating liquor can be controlled is before it is manufactured. Once it gets on the market there is no way that it can be managed. We have committed ourselves to the proposition that the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor must be nation wide. We are glad for the chance to fight for that definite issue. The Amendment to the Constitution and the laws framed for its application must be maintained and enforced.

Fourth. It is a fact that thirteen years is not long enough to prove that national Prohibition is a failure. Especially is that true when one knows that these past thirteen years have not been normal years with our national thought and action. The war left us nervous and confused about almost everything in our nation's life. It has been hard for the nation to think clearly about such things as our international relationships, our inter-racial connections, and national and world finances. It has been much more difficult for the nation to clearly see the finer moral values involved in these and other problems. No responsible mind will deny that the lawlessness which has so distressed us, is measurably due to the psychology of these post-war years.

Then, it takes more than thirteen years of even normal times to complete the conversion of the political machinery of our nation to any major change. Men have been voting in this country for one hundred and fifty years. They have trained men, and men have trained themselves to run the machines which make the political mill of our country. These men have been trained in politics and are politicians more than they are statesmen. From politics they get their living and their power; and to politics they dedicate their genius. This whole issue of Prohibition is to the political leaders a matter of political interest first. Even these eleven years of woman suffrage have not measurably affected the machinery of the major political parties, for it is evident that the woman who gets a ranking office in any party is one who is known to be a safe and dependable partisan.

It is altogether too early to make an adverse judgment about Prohibition since the conditions of the national mind has been what it was during these thirteen years and since it is inevitably a slow process of making such a moral and revolutionary issue as Prohibition regnant in party politics.

Fifth: It is a fact that Prohibition laws are a success. There are leaks in the dam of enforcement, but they are only leaks. Why all this poignant wailing against Prohibition if it is utterly failing? Our cities being what they are, our molders of public thought being of the stripe they are, our political parties being manned by the sort of men they are, and our issue being the kind of an issue it is, and its enforcement being as intimate and personal and righteous a thing, the wonder is that there has been such development in prohibition law enforcement as we have. The wets are not all fools, but they act stupidly when they think that we Dries cannot see that their loud begging for pity and their public nursing of their pains is absolute evidence that the Prohibition shoe is pinching.

Sixth. It is a fact that we dare not trust the liquor gang. They have always been pirates and without respect for laws of any kind. To have a change of heart they would have to come forward to a mourner's bench and "beware their manifold transgressions which they have so grievously committed from time to time." The Dries know that the long black robes of President Butler, or the soft voice of a Dupont with his millions, or the pious name of "Crusaders," cannot sanctify the unclean hearts of the outfit which has never shown one iota of respect for law and honor. This fact should be remembered and acted upon lest we be fooled by the seeming respectability of the personnel of the Wet leadership today.

Seventh. The liquor business is morally wrong. It has been associated with evil throughout its history, but, and more, it has been evil in its nature and working itself. The young voter needs to be told and retold this truth. The liquor business has never been the friend of righteousness. Intoxicating liquor is made by outraging nature to begin with, and its traffic deals in human weakness and death. It is basically and essentially an outraging of life, liberty and righteousness. No one claims that it is morally right, perhaps, but that being true it can never be socially, commercially or legally in harmony with the laws of God nor the enlightened conscience of honest men. There is only one thing to do with evil—outlaw it and prohibit it. We have done that. There is no other course open for us than to refuse to retreat from the position we have taken—not one inch.

Eighth. It is a fact that the Dries welcome an open fight. We are not begging for an armistice. We are sure of our facts; our eyes are open to truth; we have no doubt of the ultimate, and we gain strength in conflict for righteousness. Fighting for such a cause clarifies the issues and cleanses our ranks and will make the final triumph the more conclusive and glorious.

The Little Fellow Who Has

barely learned to read, as well as the child up to 12 years old will treasure "Bible Stories and their Pictures." The first story is Abram Going to Egypt and just opposite the story is the picture in beautiful colors, showing Abram mounted on his camel making this journey. There are 50 of these stories and pictures, the last one showing John on the Isle of Patmos. It is impressive and beautiful. On the last page are printed the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and The Lord's Prayer.

The type is large and clear, printed on a fine enamel paper, the cover is illustrated and attractive. Really, this is one of the most attractive books of the kind we have seen. Start the child with the right kind of reading matter, and give at least one of these for Christmas. Price 60c. The above statements modestly express the qualities of this book.

St. Francis of Assisi—The Little Poor Man.

The above is the title of a book by James O. Dobson. It gives the very fascinating story of this wonderfully saintly man. It is unusually interesting. It gives one a good insight into conditions in the twelfth century in the church and spiritual life in Europe. It is a spiritual tonic, and we commend the book to all classes of readers. It ought to be especially interesting to ministers. It is neatly bound in cloth, on good paper, clear type, easy reading, and contains 149 pages. Price $1.00. Can be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Co., Louisville, Ky., for 50c. The number of copies is limited. Write at once.

PATRIOTS versus SLACKERS.

Rev. W. S. Bowden.

(Armistice Day Sermon)

*"The people willingly offered themselves."
"Curse ye Meroz." Judges 5:2, 23.*

OUR text is part of a wonderful song of triumph, reciting a glorious victory over Sisera and his host of Canaanites, who were sworn enemies of God and Israel. The previous chapter tells graphically, and with some details, the story of this victory. The chapter in which we find our text contains a song written and sung by Deborah and Barak, the Israelitish leaders in this patriotic war in which the land was delivered from a most oppressive bondage.

Upon this anniversary occasion as our minds go back a few years to the signing of the Armistice, and our hearts become exultant again over the victory of the Allies over military autocracy, as we live over those days once more, we can appreciate this little bit of history of the olden time.

HISTORICAL.

This song recites in some of the finest poetry ever written, the story of the previous chapter. The spirit of the song is seen in such expressions as these: "The stars in their courses fought against Sisera," and "The river Kishon swept them away." The song recounts the tribes that had patriotically done their part in the conflict and therefore shared in the glory of the fight. Deborah warmly commends those who had done their part toward winning the victory. The Ephraimites, the Benjamites, the governors of Israel, the princes of Issachar, and Barak all come in for a good measure of praise. "Zebulun and Naphtali were a people that jeopardized their lives unto the death in the high places of the fields." It is heart cheering to have one's efforts appreciated. Those who were lauded by Deborah must have greatly rejoiced.

But in the midst of the torrent of song there comes a strain of fiery indignation. Deborah utters true scorn for those who were inactive at a time when the nation was in its throes for liberty; for those who proved false in the hour of their country's need. She fiercely rebukes Reuben for indecision and cowardice. "Why abodest thou among the sheepfolds, to hear the bleatings of the flocks?" Gilead was too cowardly to cross the swelling Jordan. Dan remained in ships. Asher continued on the seashore, and sought refuge in the little creeks and inlets where he could be safe from the invading armies.

Meroz had hung back, therefore Meroz is severely blamed. With bitter scorn Deborah denounces Meroz. Evidently something great was expected of Meroz. A certain contingent was demanded for the army, which it failed to send. Meroz was impassive, useless. Meroz did not turn traitor. Meroz did not play the spy. Meroz did not succor the foe. Meroz simply stood neutral in the strife; it struck no blow for the freedom of the tribes in the north of Palestine; it furnished no soldiers for the battle of Kishon. Meroz did nothing, therefore Meroz was cursed.

We know nothing of Meroz aside from the record of this verse. Meroz might have been hidden away in some safe valley and selfishly refused to heed the call. I would sooner suppose that Meroz was a tribe contiguous to the scene of battle; and for Meroz, therefore, to assume an attitude of indifference amidst the very crash of conflicting armies, with its own interests involved in the issue, was altogether inexcusable.

Meroz kept back its sword from blood (Jer. 48:10) at a time when others jeopardized their lives in the field of battle. Therefore the withering curse, not only of Deborah, but of Jehovah fell upon it. "Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof; because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

How joyful the faithful must have felt in the glad day of triumph, to know that they had rallied around the standard of Jehovah; and how ashamed the recreant ones must have felt in that same great day when they were held up to public scorn for their faithlessness, indecision and cowardice!

APPLICATION TO ARMISTICE DAY.

May we not make an application of this incident to the present? Our thinking today takes us back to the days of the World War. There has been a great fight. As a nation we had our part in the warfare. The oppressing power, like Jabin, king of Canaan, who had nine hundred chariots of iron, was apparently well prepared for the campaign, and like the oppressing power of old went down in defeat. A great and glorious victory was won by the allies, to the inglorious defeat and humiliation of the boastful foe.

We feel that those who helped to win the war are deserving of honorable mention. The patriots were many. Great principles were involved. National honor was at stake. The church did not take a back seat. Various organizations came to the help of our country against the forces of the oppressing power. In the struggle of old which we have been considering the triumph of Israel's pure faith, her national existence and material prosperity depended upon her freedom. So the majority of our people considered that much depended upon the triumph of a just cause in the more recent conflict.

Many men took their lives in their hands to repel the enemy. Some made the supreme sacrifice. Many gave of their time and money that the shout of triumph might be heard. How people at home worked and economized that the victory might be won! They sacrificed personal comforts to buy Liberty Bonds and War Saving Stamps. Victory did come. And how the people shouted for joy! They were mostly patriots, and had a right to shout.

But how about the slackers? There were some. They virtually said: "Yes, win the war, but let the other fellow do it." They were lacking in patriotism and absorbed over much in business and pleasure. Victory was won, but they had no right to share in the glory of the victory. No thanks to them that we were not defeated. If all had done as they did we would have suffered defeat. How ashamed they should have been!

The slackers in our country during the progress of the World War are mirrored forth in this picture of the slackers in the days of Deborah and the war of Israel against the Canaanites. To characterize the sin of the former slackers is to set forth the sin of our country's slackers. It was the sin of attempted neutrality, self-complacency, lukewarmness, unbelief, selfishness. To put the matter plainly, some of the slackers were simply cowards. And cowardice is about the most contemptible of the vices. The slacker is the opposite of the patriot. The slacker neglects the duty and the opportunity which the patriot seizes. The slacker may not be aware of any enmity toward his country, but failure to respond to the call of duty makes him guilty. The sin of omission is no small sin.

With grateful hearts we remember today the host of patriots of which our beloved nation is justly proud, but we recognize the fact that when our country's call to action came some preferred to stay among the bleatings of the sheep, some thought the Jordan of difficulties too deep and too dangerous. Patriots or slackers—which?

THE SPIRITUAL SIGNIFICANCE.

Our text suggests the thought that there is a greater battle on hand. It is the battle of the ages. It is not fought with carnal weapons. It is being fought "against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." It is no sham fight. It is most real. It is against the mighty. God calls all to help fight the battles of the Lord against the mighty forces of evil.

It is not well to underestimate the power of our adversaries. The enemies of the Lord are neither few nor feeble. For a soldier to underestimate the strength of his foes is to invite defeat. The devil is not dead. He has many helpers. The soldiers of Jesus Christ are called upon to put on the whole armor of God, and go forth under the Captain of their salvation to fight the good fight of faith.

"The battle is the Lord's." "Only be thou valiant, and fight the Lord's battles." "Come to the help of the Lord against the mighty," is the thrilling summons which comes to us. Are we heeding the call? Are we responding with the same loyalty and enthusiasm that has been shown in the answer to our country's call to the colors?

We thank God for the grand response from some quarters, but take note that as of old, and as in our recent great conflict, so now among those summoned to the help of the Lord against the mighty there are those who disregard the call, those who are guilty of the crime of trying to be neutral. Slackers! Self-interest keeps some out of the Lord's army. Paul said of such who lived in his day, "All seek their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's."

Some today would claim part in the victory they have done nothing to secure. Meroz stands for the shirker; for him who is willing to see the other fellow fight the battles of life, while he simply comes in to take the spoils. There are people in our churches and communities today who are to their churches and communities just what Meroz was to the Israelites. They lack a sense of responsibility. They offer excuses for holding back. In false humility they say that the Lord does not need their help. The charge hurled at the temple builders, or those who should have been numbered with the temple builders in the days of old in Jerusalem, is applicable to them. "The Tekoites repaired, but their nobles put not their necks to the work of the Lord." (Neh. 3:5). Those who are slackers spiritually need to hear this rebuke of the olden time: "Curse ye, Meroz, curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof, because they came not to the help of the Lord, to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

The sin of omission is no small sin. The barren fig-tree was cursed because it failed to produce fruit. In the parable of the talents it was the one who did nothing with his talent who was under the curse of the Lord. "Inasmuch as ye did it not," are the striking words in the parable of the Judgment which the slackers should heed. Do we not read in God's Book: "There is that which withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty!" Did not Jesus himself say: "He that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad!"

Today God is calling for patriots to serve in the church and to let their influence tell for God in municipal affairs. God is calling for helpers in the work of world evangelization. Only those who share in the fight are to share in the victory. Let us be patriots rather than slackers!

The fight is on! We'll be patriots. We'll come to the help of the Lord against the mighty. We'll be good soldiers in the fight, and when the warfare is over we'll share in the eternal victory, and enjoy the promised everlasting peace.

Dr. Wilson and The American Legion.

(The following is a copy of a letter addressed by Dr. Wilson to a Western newspaper).

AS your paper has had several references to a supposed attack on the American Legion by me, and as I have never in a single word attacked the Legion, will you permit me the privilege of reporting exactly what I have said, in order that your people may compare the very careful statement I have issued with a very garulous report that reached many millions of American readers. The following is an exact quotation as published by the only papers that took pains to find out what was said:

"There are a million men who went across to France from dry cantonments where they had been taught to let liquor alone, and that they were going to Europe as the representatives of American civilization. They went over and did their part bravely and well, and came back as clean in mind and body, as firm and loyal to the American standards of the United States, and as fit to be decent American citizens as when they went away. All of them were covered with the halo of American patriotism and heroism, but some of their number dropped their Americanism on arrival in France, their Christian standards of decency and dropped readily into the French customs, and came back to import these customs into the United States.

"They are not a majority of the American Legion; they are only a small fraction and their looseness and drunkenness displayed at certain conventions disgraced their fellow members and all ex-soldiers. The fact is that this patriot's organization has been put at the mercy of a loose element, and some of its officers have used this organization both through the editing of the "Stars and Stripes" while over there, and the exploitation of the Legion conventions since, to attack the constitution of their country and to show that they have no moral sense of loyalty to support the Eighteenth Amendment, until it has had a fair trial in our American life."

This is what I have said and nothing but this. The attempt of certain newspaper writers to make it appear that I have attacked the American Legion or soldiers in general is the attitude of wet newspapers. Every dry's statement is warped into something ridiculous or preposterous.

Of course, no one would attack the American Legion as such. It contains too many noble and true citizens. But we have a perfect right to say of the crowd who opened up Detroit for a big carouse and practically established Legion headquarters over in Windsor in a government liquor store and let it be known that liquor would flow freely, that these men will be condemned by their own members who think the American Legion ought not to be used for an attack on the constitution of their country or to exploit rum sales even across the border. The Methodist Conference was in session in Detroit. I was in attendance. On Saturday, a loud speaker was set up just across the street and pointed toward the Central Methodist Church, where the Conference was in session. A committee waited on the management to tell them that on the Sabbath the program of this church would require quiet, and asked if the loud speaker could not be placed on one of the other corners of that great square so that the Conference could go on with its session. The request was refused, and the annual Conference, representing half the Methodists of the state, had to move its Sunday sessions to Dr. Rice's church out in the residence section of the city. No other conventions in this country so conduct their fun on Sundays as to close the churches of the neighborhood.

But let me say again, this does not represent the rank and file of the American Legion, patriotic, sober, decent citizens. Many protest against the exceptional rowdy who hangs on the skirts of these conventions and misrepresents the moral sentiment of the ex-soldiers and of the vast membership of the American Legion. As to their voting wet, I have only to say that if that is their sentiment, they have as much right to vote wet as I have to vote dry; although they did not have a right to do it in that convention, directly in violation of the Constitution of the Legion itself; but they should not wear that uniform while flaunting a company of lewd companions in drunken orgies, and they cannot do it without arousing the indignation and protest of the American citizens, including the members of the American Legion who do not wish to disgrace or to see their uniforms disgraced. Many of them remember that they took a solemn oath to uphold the constitution of the United States and the laws of the land. When a man takes a soldier's oath to uphold our laws whether he is wet or dry his neighbor has a right to expect an orderly citizenship from him even though he is voting for the repeal of a law that he does not like. I have said that an officer who holds up his hand to God and swears to protect, defend, and uphold the Constitution and laws of our land, and then patronizes bootleggers, perjures himself and is an unworthy representative of a free Christian government.

A Precis of the Address of President William Lowe Bryan of Indiana University.

President William Lowe Bryan at the Taylor University inauguration of Robert Lee Stuart as president, spoke on Paradise, using for his theme the story of the Three Distances from Materlinck's Life of the Bee, condensed and paraphrased. He quoted: What one thinks of life as a whole depends upon whether he sees it from far off in the glow of romance, close up to its ugly worst, or inside where life makes its upward flight; and added, Paradise is the first estate of man. Paradise of children, paradise of poets and paradise of those who expect at once the Age of Gold; this is the land where "God's in his heaven, all's right with the world." So centuries ago thought the captive Jew in Babylon. So thought the French Republican in 1880, erecting his altar of liberty on the field of Mars. So in 1865 thought our liberated blacks, singing, "The good time's coming, it's almost here." And so thought the world of warring nations on Armistice day, 1918.

But alas, it is hard to stay in Paradise, and our text will not do for the social physician who finds in one Indian township more than half the children imbecile as a result of vice. Nor can it meet the world's wholesale starvation, no less dreadful than war. This is Paradise lost. How can it be regained? The scholar answers this question by his own undertakings without fear or surrender. He destroys the conditions which cause plague, disease and poverty, giving to the world food, fuel and medicine, and without fear, without haste, without rest goes about destroying the physical hells and making, not a new heaven, but a new earth. Still greater is the service of the poet and prophet, who teach us how to meet the meanness, cruelty, treachery, uncleanness and hate. You can never go high enough alone to reach Paradise. You must go down with the Son of Man into the thick of the struggling multitude. You must march in the grim pageant which goes to Golgotha. It may be to hang there between thieves, and it may be to find victory when you can say to one of them: Brother, this day together we enter Paradise.

The Sixth Ecumenical Conference.

BY REV. C. K. DICKEY.

HE sixth Ecumenical Conference, composed of twenty-three bodies of world Methodists, met in decennial session in Wesley Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Atlanta, Ga., October 16-25. Thirty thousand dollars were spent on interior decorations in this church for this occasion. Georgia is the state John Wesley worked as a missionary before he felt his heart strangely warmed a quarter before 9 o'clock on Aldersgate Street London, England. The state of Georgia now has two conferences with 235,000 church members. Judge Jno. S. Candler, of Atlanta, the brother of Bishop Warren A. Candler, says he believes that if the center of Atlanta were circumscribed by circle fifty miles from the center, one hundred miles in diameter, more Methodists would be found there than in any other spot in the world. Columbus, Ohio, is the only city that disputes the statement.

Five hundred and fifty delegates were in attendance, two hundred and thirty of whom were from the Eastern section. The delegates from across the waters were given free entertainment in the Atlanta hotels, six thousand dollars being donated by the hotels and nine thousand being paid by local Methodists and friends. The other delegates were from the Western section of the countries of the Western hemisphere, Canada, United States, Mexico, Cuba, the West Indies and the Central and South American countries.

Rev. C. Ryder Smith, B.A., D.D., London, England, President Wesleyan Methodist Church, preached the opening sermon Friday evening to a large and an appreciative audience. Rev. Luke Wiseman, B.A., Wesleyan Methodist Church, read a review of the decade of Methodism in the Eastern section. Among other things, he said there are two million Methodists in the Eastern section with a gain in membership for past ten years of 70,000, and 675 new churches have been built costing 3,000,000 pounds.

Bishop Jno. M. Moore, B.A., B.D., D.D., LL.D., Ph.D., who presides over the Episcopal area where the conference was held, gave a "Review of a Decade of Methodism in the Western Section," viz: We have over 10,000,000 church members and a constituency of 25,000,000, an itinerant ministry of 45,000 preachers, led by 75 bishops; preaching in more than 70,000 congregations; one hundred and fifty universities and colleges with plants valued at $130,000,000.00; an endowment of nearly $150,000,000.00, with a total student body of 75,000; sixty orphanages worth $15,000,000.00, caring for 6,500 homeless children; ninety hospitals that cost $65,000,000.00 serving every year 325,000 patients. "That is American Methodism and its combined task," said the Bishop.

There are more than 100,000 churches, located in twenty-five different countries of the world, in twenty-three different denominations of Methodists, with more than 12,000,000 members and 30,000,000 adherents, holding property values of more than $2,000,000,000.00. There was a gain of 400,000 in the Western section of the membership of the churches which is about the same as the average gain reported at the last several sessions of the conference. The past ten years on this side of the waters have been given in a large way to reconstruction and building of many new churches to meet the growing demands of religious education with modernly equipped plants for this purpose. Millions have been spent in America this way which, perhaps, to some extent has clouded the missionary vision and has curtailed this income, not because it did not need to be done, but because it was selfish and saving ourselves, which means losing ourselves in the larger gains had we devoted more prayer, money and service in saving the world. Perhaps there would not be the spiritual decline among us that is bewailed in failure to bring in an increase of new members on the scale of other decades in proportion to our population.

A criticism also has been offered in American Methodism that in her eagerness to have a well educated ministry, she has had more concern for "credits" than for "conversions." A plea was made in No. 1 Afternoon Group Meetings on the topic of "Personal Religion" that the church again re-emphasize the value of conscious, satisfying reality of a personal, experimental knowledge of God in Christ and religious experience; that testimony in the congregation and family worship in the home be restored. The movement in England known as the "Cambridge Group Movement" and some similar movements are founded on this very fact of personal testimony.

Our British brethren report that the union of the Wesleyan Methodist, the Primitive and the United Methodist churches shall have fully completed their plan for union into one Methodist body in 1934. One speaker from across the waters prophesied that by the time the next Ecumenical Conference met in London, England in 1941, there would be one united Methodism in America as in England. However, he said it may be American Methodism has been waiting on the "Mother Country" to set the example first, as other at-

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dregs do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

In New York the total number of arrests for intoxication for the wet years 1910 to 1915 inclusive averaged 26,599 per year. The total arrests for the first six dry years, beginning with 1920, averaged 11,332. In 1930 arrests for drunkenness were only 9,408.—New York City police court records, World Almanac, 1931.

tempts had failed. The sentiment expressed by speakers on both sides of the waters for the union of the Methodist bodies in America was often referred to in their addresses and loudly applauded by the audiences, often rising to their feet in prolonged applause.

Another high point of the conference was the sentiment expressed by all the speakers for world peace and a warless world. Nothing brought louder and more prolonged applause than that there shall be no more war.

The third high point of the conference was reached on Thursday morning and evening when each one of the subjects was discussed by the following speakers: "Christ and Society," by Rev. Ivan Lee Holt, Ph.D., M. E. Church, South; "The Church and Industrial Relations," by Mr. Justice Chas. Wass, Primitive Methodist Church, England; "Marriage, Home and Family," by Rev. J. C. Broomfield, Pittsburgh Methodist Protestant Church; "The Church and Public Affairs," by Rev. James Alley, Irish Methodist Church; and the addresses in the evening of Hon. Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture of the United States; Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., LL.D., Toronto, United Church of Canada; Mr. John R. Mott, LL.D., the world's leading layman, New York Methodist Episcopal Church. All were of the highest order. At the close of the morning session the time was extended to hear the report of the Committee on Temperance by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, D.D., LL.D., one of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on the findings of both the sub-committees and the general committee on the question of Prohibition in America, Canada and the whole world. The British brethren gave their sanction to this report of a sweeping declaration for the continuance of the Eighteenth Amendment in the Constitution of the United States, the evil of Government liquor control in Canada and for a dry world. No one can express on paper the high tide, the sentiment and the enthusiasm expressed by the entire Ecumenical body, which resolution, read by Bishop Ainsworth, was unanimously adopted.

Some Striking Points About Prohibition.

We hear it most everywhere that the Eighteenth Amendment is a failure and that there is more drinking and crime since prohibition came into force than there was when we had the open saloon. Please remember, when you read such statements, it not only comes from the wet element, but they cannot prove such things to be facts. Here are some pointed facts:

1. The crime wave in the United States has decreased from 35 to 40 per cent. since the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted.

2. The leading economists, such as Samuel Crowther, Irving Fisher and others, say that prohibition has been a great economic success. Mr. Crowther states that $15,000,000,000 has been saved from drink for the purchase of necessary things and better living.

3. Dr. William Mayo, of the Mayo Clinic, says: "The great middle class in America is no longer drinking. The class at the top and the dregs at the bottom are still at it." The middle class is the class that turns the wheels and molds and shapes the life of America. Personally, I have not seen a drunk in my travels in years. How does that sound?

4. Listen to this. The late Judge Gary said: "I am the head of the United States Steel Corporation, which employs more than 300,000 people." Hear what he has to say about conditions. "In the last two or three years the improvement of conditions among the people is one of the most remarkable chapters ever written and it is attributable to prohibition."

5. The national income under prohibition has increased more than 45 per cent., an unprecedented increase.

6. Here is one of the most remarkable things ever published. All the 148 institutions for the cure of inebriates before prohibition, except one, have closed their doors for the lack of business, or been made over into general hospitals.

No one need to be afraid to quote the above facts.

I am indebted to H. F. Henricks, of Litchfield, Ill., for the facts above.

The wets are dying and are dying hard, and they are doing all in their power to fool the unthinking part of the public. To the preachers and Christian workers, listen: A victory has been won for the Church and home over the liquor forces, but it is no time to relax or lay the armor down. If anything, we need to buckle the armor on a little tighter and press this fight to the very gates of the enemy. As for one, I am an out-and-out prohibitionist from head to foot and from January to January. And if the Democrats put out a wet candidate in 1932, and Mr. Hoover will accept the nomination by the Republican party, he will not only come in with 6,000,000 majority as he did in 1928, but it will be nearer 10,000,000.

Yours for everything that tendeth to righteousness,

----GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD----

CAMP SYCHAR NOTES.

Calvin R. Poulson, Reporter.

On the Day of Pentecost, in his sermon, Peter quoted from the prophet Joel who had declared that, when the dispensation of the Holy Spirit was ushered in, "Young men should see visions and the old men should dream dreams." The following poem gives evidence of how, even supernaturates who keep in touch with our holiness camps, are inspired to write both of their dreams and visions.

God's Out of Doors.

(Sychar)

"Into the woods my Master went";
And so go we sometimes;
"For-spent" with toil and sorrow,
And sick of the jazzy rhymes.

"Out of the woods" we come refreshed,
With song and prayer and sermon;
We have met our Lord at Sychar, Transfigured from Mt. Hermon.

The fountain is not "blind to us";
And the Maple trees are kind;
And hungry souls are greeting us,
And seeking our Lord to find.

This "garden of prayer" is sacred;
We are "listening in" to Him;
The groaning of our Master,
Has had no in-ter-im.

"The Spirit makes intercession,"
Through every prayerful soul;
The cry of souls at the altar,
Is for Christ to make men whole.

No vain, modernistic doctrine,
Is sounding beneath these trees;
It is Pauline, Gospel preaching;
Pentecostal, if you please.

We cry, with voices pathetic;
We grope in the "wilderness,"
They tell us of Evolution,
But never "evolve" holiness.

There are memories of Sychar,
Running back for fifty years;
There were shouts of holy triumph,
Bursting through the veil of tears.

Such men as Sheridan Baker,
George Dennis, and George Ball;
Such preaching and such praying;
And their wondrous "Altar Call."

It was Mansfield, and then Orville;
And then the well of Sychar;
I developed from my boyhood,
Into a camp-meeting hiker.

My father found the Saviour,
In eighteen thirty-nine;
He did not leave a penny,
That I could say was mine,

But he found a holy "nugget,"
At the camp at "Hollow Rock;"
And so I have a Birth-Right,
Sealed up by Heaven's lock.

E. L. Smith.

HARRISVILLE, NEW YORK.

Contrary to our usual custom, this year we closed our camp meeting campaign and without any interval began our fall meetings. Our first meeting was held in Harrisville, New York, with a church only thirty years old, and one that consisted of a number of pastoral charges, superintended by the Rev. Frank Jones and his wife. The meeting was intended to be an annual meeting of all the pastors and their members, and Harrisville was chosen as the place of meeting as it was the most important church. Not as many of the pastors and their people attended the services as the superintendent expected, but a goodly number, and many from other denominations, some driving nearly a hundred miles, while others came on the railroads.

The church was organized and promoted by a woman said to have been one of the most godly and efficient, but was taken by death at a time when the work needed her most. Schism got into the church and, for a time, the doors were locked and the windows nailed down, and of course no services were held in the place for a time. By and by the services were resumed, but some of the old sores were not healed.

Our meeting resulted in those estranged coming back to the church, confessing their sins, and receiving pardon and cleansing. Among those were some of the most competent and influential people in the town. It was said that the work accomplished among those classes was worth the holding of the meeting, but in addition to that the church was greatly helped and built up; according to count not much less than fifty people were at the altar as definite seekers of pardon or purity, and most of them professed to have received what they sought, a number of fine young people being among the number. We learn that the church is seeking a pastor who will give his whole time to the work of the church.

The next meeting that we held was in Everybody's Mission in Homer City, Pa. This meeting was certainly the day of small things. We had been led to believe that there was a fine field there for evangelistic work, in which large crowds of people would attend, and that we would have a strong support from Christian people. We found that the very contrary was true. They had had two separations, one part organizing a church in Homer City, and the other part organized a church in a town only a few miles away, and one of the officials of the Mission in which we held the meeting told us that they did not have more than half a dozen persons upon whom they could depend for assistance. However a goodly number of Christian people and others from other towns and the country attended the services, and some were converted, reclaimed or purified.

We gave them fifteen days of the best service we are capable of, and many people declared that they were blessed and helped, and there was pretty good evidence that the Word preached had the desired effect, for some of the officials confessed to us that they professed what they did not have, and they were forward for prayers.

If any evangelist is looking for a hard field where there is hard work with but little opportunity for success in soul saving, and absolutely almost no support, Everybody's Mission in Homer City, Pa., is the place they can find it. We were greatly blessed in our ministry as we preached the Word, and some told us that they got great spiritual help out of our ministry, for which we give all the praise and glory to our Heavenly Father.

We have some vacant dates for fall and winter meetings, and those who desire our services should address us, 1350 Grace Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

IN LABORS ABUNDANT.

For sometime we have intended giving a report of our work, but camp meeting season being on, we have been very busy. The Lord has kept our souls and renewed our strength, enabling us to stand the strenuous work of the season.

The first of June we joined Rev. G. M. Rainey, Alexandria, Ky., for his church meeting. It has not been our privilege to work with a more devout, scriptural and scholarly Christian gentleman than is Brother Rainey. The church was built up in a marked way.

Fletcher Grove Camp Meeting, Delanco, N. J., was our next field. There we joined Warren C. McIntire and Deaconesses Hazzard and Richardson as co-laborers. The camp began with manifest power and continued with increasing momentum as the meeting progressed, resulting in a great host of seekers and confessions. One cannot tell how the Holy Spirit visited the camp. Never have we seen a group of workers more divinely led. The directors of the camp caught a new vision of greater possibilities and good they can do in the future. They are inviting one hundred young people to the camp in 1932 to be entertained free. The entire group of workers were invited back for next year.

Our next meeting was in the Methodist Church, South, Bluff City, Tenn., with Rev. Keener Cox, pastor, and Dr. W. M. Morrell, pastor of the First Methodist Church, South, Princeton, W. Va., evangelist. This was the community in which Dr. Morrell was reared, and this his first opportunity to preach to his kinsmen and friends since his early ministry. His heart was filled with gratitude to see many renew their covenants with God. Dr. Morrell is a great preacher and is loved not only by his own congregation but by all the people to whom he ministers. This was our sixth meeting with him. A fine group of young people were converted and received into the church.

From here we went to Kampsville, Ill., camp, to join E. G. Grimes and E. C. Allen. We were welcomed by a fine group of devout people. Driving up on the grounds and seeing a great group of citizens preparing for the hearing of a full gospel refreshed our souls. How they prayed! Brother Grimes and Brother Allen were true to the Word, preaching with unction and power. The fellowship between workers never was sweeter. Truly the scripture, "in honor preferring one another," was exemplified here.

En route to our next meeting at Salem, Va., a distance of 1200 miles, we were privileged to stop over at Fig. N. C. Ashe County camp meeting where we met our good friends, Rev. E. J. Westfall and Professor J. J. Carruth, together with my brother, W. H. Lewis, of Bristol, Tenn. Brother Westfall is pastor of Seventh Avenue Methodist Church, Huntington, W. Va., where it was our pleasure to assist in a meeting some months ago. He and my brother were preaching the Word. The citizens acclaimed Brother Westfall's messages some of the best they had ever heard. The music and young people's work were in charge of Prof. Carruth, who won for himself many friends and admirers. Many people were blessed at the altar, and the directors of the camp were greatly encouraged.

At Salem, Va., we joined as co-laborers, Rev. and Mrs. E. O. Rice, Rev. R. A. Young, and Rev. and Mrs. R. O. French. The Lord blessed and honored his truth in the salvation of many souls.

To Greenville, Tenn., we went next to be with Rev. John F. Owen, one of God's devout and faithful men. There is no ego in Brother Owen's message, but Christ and his love are exalted. The camp meeting took on new life under his ministry, and gracious results were obtained at the altar. These devout people who were under the leadership of W. B.

Yates for 24 years knew how to sing. This group of workers were invited back for next year.

Requesting your prayers, we remain,

Yours in His service,

M. V. and Mrs. Lewis.

BROOKLYN, NEW YORK.

Praise the Lord for the good meeting he gave at the Beulah Church of the Nazarene in Brooklyn, closing October 25. There were some services when the shouts of praise and the tide of rejoicing were so numerous and high that the pastor could hardly stop it when it came time to "change the order of the meeting."

Several sought the Lord, among them being some who had never been saved before. A nice class was taken into the church the last Sunday morning and another person added to that class Sunday night.

The last day the people gave $234 in a special offering on some pressing debts of the church. Another peculiarity about this revival is that we had a missionary service and address right in the middle of it. This certainly did no damage though I do not at all recommend it as a practice. It shows, however, that there are sure to be surprises in a good meeting. In two meetings and one five-day convention in this immediate vicinity the last two months, the income for special things for the church has been much more than I received out of it for the work, which goes to show that it is folly for a church to leave out the special evangelistic meeting in order to save money.

Praise the Lord for victory in my own soul and liberty in the service of the King of kings.

U. T. Hollenback.

NEW ALBANY MISSION.

We are in a meeting in New Albany, Ind., with the Sunshine Mission at 520 State St. This Mission, under the leadership of Evangelist Harry Long, is doing a great work, feeding over one hundred and twenty poor needy people daily, mostly children who would otherwise go hungry. The Mission gives clothing to the poor and any other help they can render. There isn't a salaried worker connected with the institution; all food and clothing are given, not sold.

The Mission has services three nights a week with three Sunday services. Evangelist Long is a live wire, a good, sane, Spirit-filled speaker full of "pep" and action. He is a preacher that draws a good crowd. He goes out for a few revivals and gives satisfactory service. He will bless a church spiritually and build up the attendance. Any holiness church will do well to book him for a meeting. His terms are entertainment and freewill offering. He desires to work some this winter in Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia. His address is 520 State St., New Albany, Ind.

My next meeting will be in St. Marys, Ohio, beginning Nov. 1st. From there I go to a camp in Sanford, Fla., beginning Nov. 19. I am a converted Hebrew and go where called. I preach salvation, sanctification, divine healing and the second coming of Christ. I will be open for calls in Florida this winter. Please pray for my meetings. Address

Evangelist Samuel Thomas,
117 Eagle Drive, Indianapolis, Ind.

BLOOMSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA.

As it has been some time since we have reported through The Herald feel it would not be out of place to just say a few words regarding our work a few months back. Our camps were times of refreshing. The first one was a new camp at Oglesville, Ind., where we had a great time and organized a holiness Association. A camp is to be held each year. Rev. M. F. Reynolds, of Indianapolis, was the engaged preacher. The Lord blessed in a wonderful way. Rev. U. T. Hollenback came in the last of meeting and took our place as we had to leave for Sherman, Ill., camp where we had a great camp. Rev. C. B. Fugett was the evangelist. Sister Della Stretch was the children's worker. Mr. Grover Williams is the president of this camp and a good man.

We next went to Normal, Ill., camp. Sister Stretch is the president of this camp and handles every detail of the camp in a wonderful way. Rev. John Paul, of Chicago, Ill., and Rev. J. S. Long were the preachers. Miss Mary Vennard was the children's worker. Miss Vennard is well adapted for this work. Miss Ruth Ludwig, of Springfield, Ill., was pianist. She is one of the best we have ever met.

We next went to Moultrie, Ga., with Rev. Oscar Hudson, where we had a great tent meeting. Bro. Hudson is a wonderful preacher and a congenial brother. Our next meeting was at Canton, Ohio, with Rev. C. J. Farcey, pastor of First Nazarene Church, and Rev. James Rogers, as evangelist. We had a good meeting and a number of seekers.

We are at present at Bloomsburg, Pa., with Rev. John Fleming as evangelist. The pastor states it is the best meeting, so far, they have had in their church since he has had charge of it. We have been kept busy practically all the year. We have some open time the first of December, also a date the latter part of January and February, and one camp date last of June and first of July. Any desiring my services as song leader and musician, as I play guitar, musical saw and trombone, can reach me at my home address, 527 East 3rd St., Seymour, Ind.

God. The shalts and shalt nots in the divine laws come out of an infinite heart just as full of love and compassion as the atoning Christ. When God says "Thou shalt not," he is building barriers between men and the brink of the abyss of darkness. When he says "thou shalt," he is building ladders on which men may climb to pluck the fruits of righteousness and peace.

One gets tired, and righteously so, of the drivell of modernistic pretenders who come around to our Summer Schools and try to put the virus of their unbelief into our young ministers. Who is responsible for this sort of thing? Who selects these men and turns them loose, like wolves, in the sheepfold of the Lord? The time has come for widespread and positive protest by the annual conferences against anything and everything of this character.

These religious highbreds are preparing the way for the destruction of faith in the Scriptures, and reverence for the Godhead. They are plowing and harrowing the ground for the infidelity and atheism that are overflowing the land. They, perhaps, unconsciously, are getting the minds of the people ready for the sowing of the seed of Bolshevism. The Bolshevik enemies of God and humanity are abroad in the land.

It is high time that we call the people to faith in the Word of God, and trust for salvation in the Son of God, to repentance, obedience and reverential fear. It is time these modernists, who do not believe the Bible, and are constantly injecting their doubt and unscriptural teachings into the people, got together and organized a church of their own and drew their salaries from the lay people who are in harmony with their views and convictions, if they have any. Let the modernists in Methodism organize a church which they might name the Modern Liberalistic Messers. They could find a name.

Somebody ought to be responsible for what is taught our young preachers. No organization has a right to claim to be a church of God without a system of doctrine resting upon a firm foundation of Holy Scripture, and no church has a right to ask for the financial support of its membership that turns loose all sorts of men with teachings entirely contrary to its established doctrines. If Methodism in these United States had held strictly to her original doctrines, preached them faithfully, and loved them joyfully, this nation would be aglow with righteousness, prohibition could be enforced and the blessing of God would be resting upon us with gracious power.

If Christ Should Come to Jerusalem

CHAPTER II.

WHEN we begin to think of the evils in the world that Christ would overthrow, if he should return to reign on earth, the liquor traffic rises first in our minds. Undoubtedly he would sweep it out of existence. It is the cause of more crime and disease, gaunt poverty and human suffering, than any other, and some people believe, than all other evils in the world. Think what a change the destruction of the whiskey traffic would bring to the world. If the millions of money wasted in drink every year, was invested in comfortable homes, food and clothing, it would go a long way toward relieving the world of its present state of suffering.

Put into bread, the grain that goes into intoxicants, and think of the mouths it would feed. How much sickness would disappear, how many prisons would stand empty, how many desolate homes would become happy, how many idle hands would seek useful and remunerative employment, how the earth would ring with songs of praise and shouts of joy, if Christ should come and sweep away the liquor traffic.

If Christ should come back to earth to reign, he would disband all of the armies of the world. There would be no more war, no need for soldiers; under his reign of love men would cease to kill each other. There would be millions of happy home-comings and glad reunions; the military bands would all come playing, "All hail the power of Jesus' name"; the warships of every nation would steam homeward with the marine bands playing "Marching to Zion" and "Home Sweet Home."

The vast amount of steel in rifles, cannon, warships and fortifications, would be thrown into furnaces and melted into ore and manufactured into useful materials for building homes, railways and ships for travel and commerce. The men who have wasted their lives in army camps, would go singing to the harvest fields, the earth would blossom like the rose, want for food would become unknown, and "the nations would learn war no more."

If Christ should come to reign on earth, he would overthrow the great trusts and combines that have cornered and placed exorbitant prices upon the necessities of life. The vast resources of fuel, oil, water, timber, foodstuffs and materials for clothing, would no longer be under the control of a few greedy men, but would be reduced to reasonable prices and placed within reach of the industrious poor and all men would come to live in comfort.

Under the reign of Christ, the white-slave traffic would disappear, the brothel would be unknown and peace and purity would come back to wretched multitudes who have become embroiled by the cruel lusts of men; there would be home-comings, reunions, happy hearts and singing in many homes made desolate by sin.

The coming of Jesus to earth would put an end to all sectarianism, and denominational strife. No longer would there be waste of time and resources, building altar against altar. Such an event would mean peace on earth and good will among men. People would forget what churches they had been members of in their fraternal love and harmony. Such an event would change the whole economy of our present state of civilization and society. The very thought of Christ in Jerusalem, would paralyze all the work and ways of Satan and vice and thrill the world with new conceptions of life and love for holiness. It would mean the casting out of all that is evil and the lifting up of all that is good.

If Christ should come back to Jerusalem and set up his kingdom there, misrule would disappear and political corruption would cease, the conditions that foster and produce poverty, disease, crime, sorrow and sin would vanish away and the knowledge of the glory of the Lord would fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. We can but wish that Jesus Christ would come and say to this stormy human sea, "Peace, be still" and hush all the harsh noise and cruel strife and give the tired old world a long, sweet rest. Go search the Scriptures and you will find that they teach Christ will come back to earth again.

The reader will understand that we are not claiming, or that the Scriptures teach, that the coming of Christ to Jerusalem would mean exactly the events we have mentioned, in detail, but in the aggregate, his coming would mean the end of war, and of misrule, of selfishness and greed in the political, economic and social world. The coming of Christ to reign and rule among men would mean the destruction of all evil forces, a wonderful readjustment, rehabilitation and bringing in of peace and good will. In the meditation in the first, and this the second chapter on the subject under discussion, we are not undertaking to be theological, but simply thinking of the blessings that will be sure to accrue if Jesus should come to reign in Jerusalem.

The Bishop's Statements Are False.

The caption at the head of this article may sound a little strong, but the office of bishop cannot protect a man from severe criticism when he allies himself with the wet forces of the country in an effort to break down the prohibition laws and bring back the liquor traffic.

There has recently been a celebration at Yorktown, Va., of a battle fought there during the American Revolution. It was a great gathering; on October 18, Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington City, preached a sermon, taking for his text: "God sent me before you to preserve you a posterity in the earth." The daily press reports him as saying:

DECLARES DRY LAW HAS FAILED.

"Any departure from the ideals that rendered our ancestors invincible," he said, "must issue in peril to our most cherished institutions. The coarse and vulgar estimates of these ideals, all too common in our later day, are danger spots in our corporate life that need to be repudiated and condemned by all true citizens of State and nation.

"With confusion and shame," he continued, "we admit that our day has witnessed the most wanton and flagrant violation of law we have ever known. We had in our folly come to believe that we could legislate a people into ways of virtue and sobriety, and we have miserably failed. Our conceit in this respect has wrought shame and confusion in our Commonwealth and made us a byword among the nations of the world.

"Something has broken down, the machinery of our corporate life shows friction and needs the application of new lubricants. We appeal for a reaffirmation and a practical demonstration of that faith that we solemnly believe has made and preserved us a nation."

The liquor traffic has been one of the most serious blights upon humanity; from time immemorial it has caused more crime, tears, bloodshed, ruin and loss of human souls than any other invention that Satan has thrust upon mankind. The prohibition of the liquor traffic has been invaluable in its contribution to the health, prosperity, peace and countless blessings to hundreds of thousands of our American people. True, in many of our great corrupt cities, with the aid of the daily press, and such traitors to sobriety and righteousness as Bishop Freeman, bought up policemen, and officials who are disgrace to the bench, with regiments of heavily armed racketeers, prohibition laws have been trampled under foot, but in countless towns, county seats, villages and communities it is the rarest thing that you see one under the influence of strong drink.

It is shocking to think of a bishop of any church aligning himself with those enemies of God and humanity who, for any reason, would bring back the legalized liquor traffic for the degradation and ruin of their fellow-beings. Any bishop or preacher who allies himself with these forces in favor of the saloon, with all it means, deserves the contempt and rebuke of good people everywhere.

OUR TENT WORKERS.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

We are glad to hear good reports from our young men who have been engaged in tent work the past summer. Those who contributed to this work will see that their investment was wisely made, and fruits are being seen in the salvation of many precious souls. The following taken from the "Collegian," Asbury College's weekly paper, is most encouraging.

GOD BLESSES SERVICES OF ASBURIANS THIS SUMMER.

"Throughout the summer in twelve different states, Asbury Ministerial students have been engaged in evangelistic work and other forms of special Christian service. These young preachers have brought back commendable reports of their work.

"Kenneth C. Fraser and Ronald J. Smith held several successful meetings in Ohio, New York, and Michigan under the auspices of the Christian and Missionary Alliance. Approximately one hundred and fifty received definite blessing.

"Ralston Smith assumed the pastorship of his home church, the Emmanuel R. E. Church of Philadelphia.

"Robert Akutagawa, a Japanese student, reports success in the fifty meetings which he held this summer. His 8,600 mile itinerary led him into eleven states.

"Wayne Lamb, who was graduated from the Seminary last June, has been in evangelistic work throughout the summer. In a recent letter Mr. Lamb stated that during the five weeks previous to the letter he preached twice daily. His fourth meeting was well under way at the time. He reported one hundred and sixteen conversions and several sanctifications.

"Wherever these students have been, they have found that souls are hungry for the true gospel of Christ. Eternity alone will reveal the good that has been accomplished through the efforts of these Asburians."

We shall need to purchase several new tents for next summer, so those who have not sent in their League dues, please do so as soon as convenient, as the orders for tents have to be placed during the winter that they may be ready when the workers get through school. Send dues to Rev. F. H. Larabee, Wilmore, Ky., who has charge of the tents. He will credit you, and the good work will go on. You will note that one of our foreign boys is doing missionary work in America.

People are not, as a rule, given the opportunity to be saved in the churches, so it seems the Evangelical League Tent Work has "come to the kingdom for such a time as this." Thousands have heard the gospel of full salvation through our League workers, and many have found the satisfying portion to their souls. "In His Name," is the spirit in which we do this work, and "For His Sake," the lost sheep are gathered in. It is the Lord's work, so we leave it with you.

"Must I go, and empty-hand,

Thus my dear Redeemer meet?

Not one soul with which to greet Him—

Lay no trophy at His feet?"

There Are Many People

who are looking for some way whereby they may help some one else, and they would do so if they only knew how. I am suggesting some simple, inexpensive tokens that can be used to great advantage.

First: We have a package of six cards called "Bible Prescriptions," which contain warranted remedies for six very common and distressing maladies, namely, Worry, Sorrow, Anger, Trouble, Failure, Doubt. They may be given to persons in sorrow, worried people, doubting people, and the like. Send them to the sick; give them as rewards in your Sunday school class; use them as book-marks, etc. The six only cost 15 cents, and what a world of good they may do—and what a reward awaits you!

Second: We have what is known as "Popular Bible Memory Helpers," for individual class or society. They present a method of familiarizing one's self with the greatest passages of the Bible which is perfectly simple, but results in a considerable amount of Bible knowledge, and a taste for still more of the fascinating pursuit. Use them as rewards in Sunday school, as gifts to Bible-loving friends, mission work, and as guides to new converts desiring to become familiar with the Word of God. There are six in a package which will cost you only 15 cents.

Third: We have an assortment of twelve beautiful, Christmas Scripture Text post-cards that will solve your problem of remembering that friend in a simple, inexpensive way, and the message it carries will linger with them all the year. You will not be ashamed to have them receive this card from you. This year will be a "Postcard Christmas," for there are thousands of loving friends who cannot send costly gifts, but they can express their love and good wishes through a friendly postcard. I have read these assortments and, take my word for it, you will be highly pleased with all three of these packages if you order them. The entire lot will cost only 50 cents for 18 beautiful cards. Better order early to avoid delay.

Yours to help,

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Don'ts For Preachers.

BY REV. F. LINCICOME.

Don't fail, if possible, to arrest the attention of your audience. To preach the gospel effectively, you must first arrest the attention of your hearers. The mind of every man, woman or child you meet is preoccupied.

It avails nothing for you to arise before an assembly and say "Please to give me your attention." They can't do it; not one in a thousand has sufficient mental discipline to give you undivided attention, till you arrest it.

On the back seat sits an architect, criticizing, not your sermon but the style of your church. In the next seat is the physiognomist, scanning the faces of his neighbors, and by his side the phrenologist, counting the bumps on their heads. Further back is the young lover, casting his glances toward his sweetheart.

Some of the sisters on the other side are also engaged; some examining bonnets and ribbons, some taking patterns of the new styles of dresses. Another imagines she can see her boys stealing neighbor Jones' apples; another remembers that she forgot to return the clothesline that she borrowed last week; another wonders if poor Jimmy might not get into the well before she gets back home.

These cases of inattention are not rare cases. I have given you only a glimpse of the mental workings, or rather wanderings, of every congregation you address, and of every congregation that assembles anywhere, till their attention is arrested. You have no right to complain of their inattention, and it will do no good to scold them about it. It is your business to arrest them, disperse their thoughts and reveries and, sweeping them away, insert your theme into their minds and hearts.

To do this you must wake them up and, for you to wake them, you will have to be thoroughly awake yourself.

In the early part of my ministry I used to feel like appointing a committee to wake up the people who went to sleep when I preached, but of late years I have changed it and want a committee to wake me up.

A Pleased Customer.

Mrs. J. H. Douglas writes us as follows: "Received the book, Faussett's Cyclopaedia of the Bible last week. Thanks for sending it so promptly. Am enjoying it." Any one who is interested in Bible study, in making plain the truths in a Sunday school lesson, or any line of religious teaching, will find this book invaluable. It is the largest value we have ever been able to offer for $1.00. Order a copy for the personal benefit you will derive from it.

Settle The Question

of baptism by obtaining a copy of "Baptism" by Means. It is thorough and convincing. Special price, 30c a copy, or 4 copies for $1.

The Last Word in Bible Making.

The largest makers of fine Bibles have produced what we consider the last word in Bible making. It is an Oxford Bible, printed on their very fine, exclusive India Paper, valued at 90c per lb., such a fine piece of printing that the type doesn't show through thus making the large Long Primer type easy to read. It is bound in the finest of Levant leather, which will wear a lifetime; it has the necessary helps such as references, concordance, subject index and proper names. Any owner of this Bible will always love it, enjoy it and feel proud to own such a book. The size is 5 1/2 x 8 1/2 x 15-16 in. thick, weight 26 ozs. It is a handsome book, pleasing to the eye and touch. We have just 25 copies. We are offering them at $10.00 each, the regular net price is $15.00. A choice Christmas present for your pastor, Sunday school superintendent, teacher, or a member of your family. Order of this office.

Believing that a Divinely-called, wholly-sanctified, well-equipped, Spirit-filled ministry is one of the greatest needs of our times, and for all time to come, I am glad to make a donation for the upbuilding of the Asbury Theological Seminary at Wilmore, Ky.

For this great work, I promise to give $..... per year for five years, first installment due September 1, 1931. I will join all who are helping in this good work in prayer for the blessing of the Lord to rest upon it.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

OUR FAMILY.

There are just five of us in our family. Of course, Father comes first. He is big and strong and wise. He earns money to care for us all. Then there is Mother; she is doing things for us all day long, making little dresses and baking the good brown bread and gingerbread boys, and at night she tells us beautiful stories about Jesus—then we sit very still. I have a big brother. Father calls him Paul, but Mother calls him "my son." He chops the kindling for the kitchen fire and sweeps the yard and goes to the store.

I can't do much yet. I brush the crumbs off the table and hold the clothes-pins for Mother and keep quiet when Father is reading. Mother says that is a good deal, but I shall do more some day.

Lillian is my sister. She is big enough to wash dishes, and that is her work; but one hot day, after she had eaten her last bite of blueberry pie, she ran out on the lawn and began to play croquet. It was lots cooler than the kitchen. Paul saw her and ran after her. This is what he said, "The dishes are not washed!" Sister said, "I know it—it is too hot now."

"Well, what do you think of poor Mother? Do you remember the verse we talked about last night?"

"Oh, yes, 'By love serve one another'—and Lillian ran to the kitchen as fast as she could go and washed the dishes. You see, she forgot for a minute that we serve one another by love at our house.—Sel.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I join your happy band? This is my first letter and I would love to see it in print. I am twelve years old and am in the eighth. I belong to the Mt. Vernon Avenue M. E. Church. I attend Sunday school every Sunday I can. I enjoy page ten very much. My mother and father take The Pentecostal Herald. My birthday is Nov. 8. N. Marie Neal, I guess your name is Nora. R. Clinton Strassburg, I guess your name is Robert. Hubert P. Amock, I guess your name is Paul. Am I right? If so, write me a letter.

Margaret Mattox.

1493 Brierwood Ave., Columbus, O.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Alabama boy join your band of boys and girls? I am eight years old and go to school. I am in the second grade. I like school fine. My birthday is July 16. I like page ten. I love to play at school. I have two little kitties. I think they are fine. As this is my first letter I will close. If I see this in print I will write again sometime. I hope W. B. is asleep when this arrives. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Robert M. Capps.
Womack Hill, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: My mother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. Our pastor is Rev. Paul Craft. We like to hear him preach. He preaches every second Sunday. I am twelve years old, have brown hair and brown eyes. My birthday is June 7. Have I a twin? If so, write to me and I will answer your letters and send my picture. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with L and ends with E, and has six letters in it. If Mr. W. B. doesn't get my letter I will come again.

Bernice Williamson.
Rt. 1, Wedowee, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I come in for just a little while? I'll try not to stay too long. I am a stranger to you, but you don't seem like a stranger to me. I live in dear old Louisiana where there is plenty of water and oceans. I live on a farm, you might say, just a farmer girl. But I'll let you guess at the rest. I am nearer thirty than thirteen. Ha! Ha! Aunt Bettie, please excuse my writing and spelling as my schooling was limited. Father died when I was a wee tot; my oldest brother was small; it took all mother could do to raise us, but she did the best she could for us. Thanks to the Lord she is still with us. I have one brother and one sister living; have one brother and three sisters gone to the great beyond. I haven't any uncles, only one aunt. She subscribed for The Herald for me, which I read with great pleasure. I know you and the readers of this paper have heard of Mrs. Mary L. Corbett, of Colfax, La. I spent a week with her last spring and had the greatest time of my life. They would sing and pray and have lots of music. We have church here once a month; Sunday school and prayer meeting. Brother Will Sherwood is our pastor whom we love to hear preach. I wonder if any of you boys and girls have favorite songs? I have. They are "Hide you in the blood," "They won't have to wait long for me," "His yoke is easy." My hobby is piecing quilts. Has anyone my birthday, Dec. 17? I am so lonely; I still miss my dear old Bud who died last year with T. B. God gives and he can take away.

Your devoted friend,
Florence Corbett.
Rt. 1, Colfax, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let an Oklahoma girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am a Christian. I love to read the Bible and learn about all the blessed things the Lord has for us. One of our neighbors takes The Herald, we get it from them. I love to read page ten fine. I am eleven years of age, I have blue eyes, brown hair, and weigh about 70 pounds. I will answer all letters received. This is my first letter to The Herald, and I hope to see it in print.

Ruth Thompson.
Carnegie, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to The Herald and I would like to see it in print. I am eleven years old and in the sixth grade. I have two brothers and one sister all younger than I. Father died last October. My name is Mary Elizabeth Casler. They call me a name beginning with B and ending with Y, and has five letters. Can the boys and girls guess what it is? I went to a Nazarene camp meeting this summer and Jesus saved and sanctified me. I go to a Presbyterian Church. I ask all the cousins to pray for me and write me. I will answer all letters.

Mary Elizabeth Casler.
Merrifield, N. Y.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl six years old and just started to school. This is my first letter to The Herald. I have brown curly hair and blue eyes. I have an older sister eight, and a baby brother. I have a little dog and some kittens for pets. My middle name begins with E and ends with E, and has six letters in it. Who can guess it?

Neva E. Chamberlin.
Rt. 3, Berry, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will the cousins allow me a seat in your midst for a few minutes? I enjoy reading page ten. I am sure that some of the boys and girls have felt calls to definite service and they are able to render a service, in a small way, by contributing helpful thoughts to be read far and wide. Perhaps the one book in all the world that commands the attention of thinking men—Jew or Gentile, white, black or yellow—is the Holy Bible. Many are anxious everywhere to hear of its wonderful promises. We learn from the missionaries, wherever they go, that people want to know about the book of all books. The agnostic may doubt it, the infidel may criticize it, the Christian may adore it; yet each in his own way is interested in it. Some one has said: "It is a mine of wealth, health to the soul, and a river of pleasure. It is given to you in this life, will be opened at the judgment, and is established forever. It involves the highest responsibility, will reward the greatest labor, and condemns all who trifle with its contents." We speak of there being seven great wonders of the world—the sphinx, the Temple of Karnak, the pyramids of Egypt, the Colossus of Rhodes, the Parthenon of Athens, the Parthenon and Coliseum of Rome—but greater than all these is the Holy Bible! The strongest proof that the Bible is the greatest wonder of the world is the Book itself. Read it and be convinced! I am five feet seven inches tall, weigh 142 pounds, have black hair, brown eyes and a medium olive complexion. My age is between fifteen and twenty-five. I will appreciate all letters.

Viola B. Tutt.
1921 W. Ashby Pl., San Antonio, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading The Herald for a number of years and derive a great deal of enjoyment from it. I am a member of the M. E. Church at Santa Fe, Mo. I am nearly through high school. I would have graduated last year but was held back on account of my mother's illness. However, she is much better now and I am going on with my work at school. I would love to receive letters from the cousins. I will try to answer all I receive. Wonder why some of those who wrote for pen pals didn't answer? How many of the cousins read your Bible daily? My favorite chapter, if it is possible to have one in so many wonderful ones, is John 14. I think I have read this more than any one chapter in my Bible. I live on a farm in Missouri near a little village. We have Sunday school every Sunday morning and preaching twice a month at the M. E. Church the third Sunday and the Christian church the fourth. I hope to see this letter in print as it is my first, and on looking it over I see it is becoming quite lengthy so I had better give some one else some of the room.

Mariam Snyder.
Santa Fe, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a South Carolina girl join your happy band of girls and boys? I am a brunette and eleven years old. Who can guess my middle name? It begins in F and ends in A. I hope all the cousins will write to me.

Maxine F. Alexander.
1209 E. Whitner St., Anderson, S. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have just been reading page ten of The Pentecostal Herald for October 2, 1931, and think it interesting. I am writing you to place this letter in The Herald as I have something interesting to send those who write me letters from a distance. Particularly I am interested to receive letters from orphan children and others who are lonesome. I like Mabel Adams's idea of The Round Robin Club of letter writers. Please enclose stamp for drawings to give to children who like to draw pictures and draw them. Hoping Mr. W. B. will not be looking for this letter, I am,

Lawrence Grauel.
16 Rosedale Ave., Greenville, Pa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please take pity on a poor preacher's girl from Ohio? I am fourteen years of age. I had a birthday, Oct. 21. If anyone has a birthday at the same time I do let me know. Here are my guesses on some of your middle names. Marion Hardy, your middle name must be Louise. S. Ruth Jones, your name is Sally. Ina Zell, your name is Edna. If I have guessed any of your names correctly, please, girls, write to me if I have. Who can guess my middle name. It begins with M and ends in E. It has seven letters in it. I think that this is a sticker. Send me all suggestions.

Lucile M. Smith.
Ney, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been going about praising God in my heart today and as I want every one to know I love Jesus I thought I would write. Oh, he is a wonderful Saviour to me. He healed my eyes a year ago May 3 when I was going blind. Oh, that was a wonderful night. It seems as though I cannot praise him enough. Oh, the Lord is good to me, I cannot love him enough. It says to lift him up and I will draw all men unto me, and in James 4:8, "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to you." Oh, I want to ever get closer to my precious Saviour for he saves me and keeps and heals me with his blood.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a Providence girl. My name begins with C and ends with E, and has six letters in it. This is my very first letter to The Pentecostal Herald. I like to read page ten. I read it every Sunday afternoon. I go to church every Sunday. I like to go to school. I am in the third grade.

Connie Robinson.
Rt. 1, Providence, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Greetings in the precious name of Jesus. In reading page ten of The Pentecostal Herald of October 14, I read two letters of two of the cousins in which they wanted some Bible questions answered, so here they are. 1. Eve was the first woman. 2. Cain's youngest brother's name was Abel. 3. Abram went to the land of Canaan. 4. The Lord and two angels came to visit Abraham in his tent. 5. Isaac the son of Abraham, I think, is the son that is referred to, as Abraham had eight boys. Gen. 16:15-21, 23 and 25:1, 2. It's in Prov. 6:28, about walking upon, or in fire and not be burned. It shows that God will forgive a murderer. David said in the 51st Psalm and the 17th verse, after being guilty of killing Uriah, and Isa. 1:18 and about swearing in Zech. 5:3. I noticed in another letter Gipsy Smith is mentioned, and that brings to my mind of the time I was on the train going from East Liverpool, Ohio, to Pittsburgh, that I started to give out tracts to the passengers that would take them, and the conductor came and told me I was not allowed to give any of those papers out on the train, then I went and sat down and the Lord started to send the waves of holy love flowing over my soul and I began to sing a spiritual song, and the conductor came and told me there was no singing allowed on that train, but after he had gone I felt led to give two tracts I had made to two girls, and when they read them, one of them asked me if I was Gipsy Smith, as he was having a revival meeting in Rochester, Pa., but I was just Charley whose soul had been saturated with the oil of the Holy Ghost. May we all meet at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

FALLEN ASLEEP

IN LOVING MEMORY OF JOSEPH
HAMON,
Departed This Life Dec. 5, 1928,
Age 87.

Dear precious one, from us you have gone;
That voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
That never can be filled.

You have left us broken hearted, Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That is in our hearts concealed.

You wove here, a modest web of life,
In beautiful threads of gold,
A thread of joy, with some strands of strife,
As ever such hands will hold.

You fashioned them in patterns, rare,
And designs of beauty, new, and fair,
Till our Master-Weaver, found them
there,
In beautiful threads of gold.

You wove memories, lasting, and sweet,
In beautiful threads of gold,
Entwined with care, even, and neat,
Till a beautiful life they unfold.

You wove 'mid smiles as you passed along,
Such wonderful threads, so fine and strong,
Around the good and over the wrong,
Those beautiful threads of gold.

KONECNY.

Complications following a mosquito bite resulted in the death of Leo C. Konecny, 34, a farmer living twelve miles south of Garden Plain, Sunday in a local hospital. He was bitten on the arm and infection developed. When his condition became serious a week ago he was removed from his home to Wichita for treatment for blood poisoning.

Mr. Konecny is survived by his widow, Katherine; three sons, LeRoy, Raymond and Leo Charles, Jr.; his father, Joseph, 206 South Millwood; two brothers, J. E., Oatville, and L. F., Wichita, and two sisters, Anna of Cheney and Josephine of Bayneville. The body was at the home of the father.

CRAFT.

Mrs. Nancy W. Craft, wife of J. J. Craft, formerly Miss Nancy W. Thompson, who was born in Benton Co., Ala., March 14, 1848, and who was a member of Pleasant Hill Methodist Church, Raleigh charge, Mississippi Conference, Rev. B. W. Ware, pastor, went to be with her God in her long home, on July 3. Sister Craft was converted and joined M. E. C. So., in 1863. She made a faithful and loyal member. She raised five children to be members. She leaves 35 grand-children and 10 great-grand-children to follow in her wake. Most of these have already made their profession and are now members of the same church she left.

Her husband, J. J. Craft, a faithful member of the same church, is patiently awaiting the summons from on high, to join her on the other shore. Funeral services were held at the church of which she had been so long a member, on July 4. Rev. B. W. Ware, pastor, officiating. She is gone, but not forgotten. Pastor, husband, children, grandchildren, great-grand-children, and friends are united in saying,

"When we asunder part
It gives us inward pain,
But we are still joined in heart,
And hope to meet again."
B. W. Ware, Pastor.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Mrs. E. B.: "Pray for my son who has been led away by drink and I fear his home will be broken up; also pray for me to be healed of a nervous condition."

E. H. S.: "Pray for a young woman who is having a battle to give up a young man with whom she has been going. Help her to say, 'Thy will be done.'"

A Mother: "Pray that my husband may be saved and that we may have a happy home in which to rear our children."

Will the readers of The Herald pray for a reader who is in bad health and is especially confused and discouraged. Pray God to heal her mind, soul and body and make her a blessing to all with whom she comes in contact.

M. B. B.: "Please to pray for the healing of three afflicted ones; also for help in financial matters, and for guidance in a very important matter."

Mrs. L. B. H.: "Pray for my husband who is addicted to strong drink, that the Lord will save him and bring him back home. Pray that I may hold out faithfully unto the end of the way."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson IX.—November 29, 1931.

Subject.—Paul's Letter to Philemon. Philemon 4-20.

Golden Text.—There is neither bond nor free. . . . for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. Gal. 3:28.

Time.—About A. D. 62.

Place.—Paul wrote to Philemon while a prisoner in Rome.

Introduction.—"It may be thought strange that a short letter, written entirely on a private subject, without reference to the proof or defence of any doctrine of the Gospel, should, by the general consent of the Church of God, from the highest Christian antiquity, have been received into the sacred canon, not only as a genuine production of St. Paul, but as a piece designed by the Holy Spirit for the edification of the church. However, such is the fact; and we may add, that this very piece was held so sacred that even the ancient heretics did not attempt to impugn its authenticity or corrupt its matter, while making dangerously free with the four gospels, and all the other epistles." Clarke.

Philemon, to whom this epistle was written, was at the time of St. Paul's writing, a citizen of the town of Colosse. According to the historian Eusebius, Colosse was destroyed by an earthquake about the tenth year of Nero's reign. It was afterwards rebuilt and is now known as Honos, or Konos. As you will find by consulting a Bible atlas, it was located near Laodicea and Hierapolis. It was a city of some importance in Philemon's day. Whether or not it was Philemon's birth-place is not definitely known.

We know from the epistle that Philemon was converted to Christ through the ministry of St. Paul. He claims this in the 19th verse of the epistle. For this reason, and maybe for others, Paul and Philemon were devoted friends. Where they met is unknown. Some contend that the apostle was never in Colosse; but I find no reason for such belief. As he preached throughout those regions, it is probable that he planted the church at Colosse. It may also be true that Philemon visited Paul while he was evangelizing in Ephesus; for the two cities were not far apart.

There is possibly no other personal letter in all literature, that equals this one in beauty and friendliness. The subject matter was delicate; but Paul handled it with masterly kindness. Some have been surprised that the apostle does not condemn slavery. It has been thought strange that he did not request Philemon to release Onesimus. I think, however, that Paul was dealing with the matter on higher ground than emancipation. It would have been a small matter to set Onesimus free. Paul would bring him and his master together in the sacred bonds of Christian love and friendship. On that high ground master and slave would be brethren in the Lord. Under such conditions Philemon and Onesimus might be mutually and blessedly helpful to each other.

It would be interesting, had we time and space, to study this entire letter. The salutation, contained in the first three verses, is beautiful. Paul is careful to include Timothy along with himself in the writing. He terms

Philemon "our dearly beloved, and fellowlaborer." I suppose Apphia was Philemon's wife. Some good authorities add: "And to Apphia our beloved sister." Archippus is supposed to have been their son; and, perchance, the pastor of the church in their house, which church Paul includes in his salutation. Then follows the little invocation that we so often find in his epistles to other churches.

4. I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers.—I have quoted this verse in full, that we may note how cautiously and delicately Paul approaches the subject of the epistle. He was a wise man, a good master of the weaknesses of human nature. As we sometimes say, he would get on the good side of Philemon before broaching the subject about which he was going to write. That was not hypocrisy, but good sense.

5. Hearing of thy love and faith.—That seems awkward. How could love precede faith. "Several excellent MSS. and some versions put faith before love, which makes a more natural reading." That change will clear the meaning of the verse.

6. The communication of thy faith.—The Greek word translated communication means Christian charity, helping wherever help is needed, feeding, clothing, and caring for the poor persecuted saints of the Church. Paul desired that every good quality that God had planted in the heart of Philemon should be wrought out in good, concrete deeds. However, I am far from certain that this is correct. The Greek that lies before me says, "In us" instead of in you; and, if you wish to be critical, I will say that this is the reading of "all the best MSS." This reading simply renders the passage in a broader import.

7. We have great joy.—Conybeare and Howson translate this verse thus: "For I have great joy and consolation in thy love, because the hearts of God's people have been comforted by thee, brother." This seems better, as the verb translated have is in the first person singular in the original.

8. Though I might be much bold in Christ.—This verse is delicately written. Again I give the translation of Conybeare and Howson: "Although in the authority of Christ I might boldly enjoin upon thee that which is befitting, yet for love's sake I rather beseech thee."

9. Paul the aged.—Why should Paul use this expression, when according to the best calculation, he could not have been more than about fifty-six years old? Some of the best critics take the stronger meaning of the original word, and tell us that Paul called himself an ambassador of Jesus Christ; and that for that reason he had authority to command, if he had wished to do so.

10. I beseech thee for my son Onesimus.—Now for the first time Paul ventures to bring forward the real matter about which he purposes to write. Whom I have begotten in my bonds.—We are left in doubt as to how Paul came in contact with Onesimus, the run-away slave of Philemon, in Rome. He may have known the apostle during some of his visits in the home of his master in Colosse. No doubt he had heard much about St. Paul. We can only guess.

It may be that the poor fellow was in want, and heard of the good apostle. If so, it was but natural for him to go to such a man for help. Of course, Paul made use of the opportunity to win him to Christ.

11. Which in time past was to thee unprofitable.—The language seems to indicate that Onesimus was a worthless sort of a slave. But his conversion to Christ made him profitable to both Paul and Philemon. He became trustworthy. After his conversion he was a help to the apostle in prison.

12. Whom I have sent again.—Sent him back into slavery? Yes; slavery was common in those days, and for long years thereafter. From our standpoint it seems terrible; but we cannot view it from the standpoint of those days. Mine own bowels.—The Orientals believe that the soul of man dwells in the abdomen. When Paul used this expression he was, in a very blessed sense, identifying Onesimus with his own soul—both dear alike to him.

13. Whom I would have retained with me.—As one reads between the lines he feels that Paul kept this young slave in his own hired house as a sort of valet. He ministered to Paul in his bonds that hindered him from freedom, as he was chained to a Roman soldier.

14. But without thy mind (consent) I would do nothing.—Paul had the highest regard for the rights of other men. He would not take advantage of Philemon in dealing with his slave, but preferred that any kindness from Philemon toward himself should be willingly rendered. Otherwise it could have had no merit.

15. How delicate this is. Perhaps bursts with meaning. Departed for a short spell, in order "that thou shouldst receive him forever"—should possess him forever.

16. Not now as a servant.—This agrees with what I wrote a few moments ago concerning receiving him back on a basis of brotherly love. Under such circumstances slavery would be a joy forever. I witnessed something of this sort among the slaves of my grandfather during the days of my childhood. He personally led most of his colored people to Christ, and taught them to be good Christians. After the civil war ended, those former slaves were frequently back on the old home place, fishing and hunting with my father on the most friendly and brotherly terms. They loved one another to the end. One very old man, whom I saw and rejoiced with not long ago, still lives. We played together in the long ago beneath the shade of the great oaks in father's yard.

17. If thou count me therefore a partner.—Ah, Paul, you are getting very close to the heart of Philemon now. He will admit your plea. How tender you are. "Receive him as myself." Make no difference between us. Fine!

18. If he hath wronged thee, or oweth thee ought.—Paul is not assuming that Onesimus was guilty, but writes in this hypothetical way to enforce his plea in behalf of his spiritual child.

19. I will repay it.—He leaves Philemon without an excuse. He must receive Onesimus back, or reject the overtures of the dearest friend he had on the earth; and the apostle backs himself up in just that fashion: "Albeit I do not say to thee how thou owest unto me even thine own self besides." Paul was also his spiritual father; and that meant about every-

Fragrance, Sweetness, and Power.

Four Thousand Questions and Answers

ON THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT

Size, 3 3/4 x 5 1/4 inches.

The plan of this "Aid to Bible Study" is universally accepted as most effective. It invites to inquiry and encourages to answer. It opens up Scripture in all its phases to teacher and reader, and proves an unequalled source of mental and spiritual light.

As a means to an end it is direct and strong. In pulpit, class-room or home, who asks, is given power to question briefly and distinctly; who answers, is provided with intelligent and satisfactory expression. The real educative and comforting force of the method needs but a trial to be convincing. In every devout life, in every Teacher's career, how many hundreds of questions arise as to Bible History, rules of conduct, meanings of text, or matters of faith? Here this "Aid" becomes a ready Directory, a satisfactory Evangel, an invitation and inspiration.

No. 101. Cloth Binding, Stained Edges, Gold Titles. (Former price, $1.00), reprint price now 55c.

Preparing To Preach

By David R. Breed, M.A., D.D.

The young minister could not ask for safer or more enlightening tutelage than he will find in this inspiring volume from the trenchant pen of Dr. David Riddle Breed. Nor could the experienced minister find a better bellows to keep alive the flame of his interest in the work to which he has consecrated his life. Preaching, to Dr. Breed, is one long period of unceasing preparation. It is a romance which never grows old.

Dr. Breed suitably lays chief emphasis upon the basic spiritual duties of the minister; yet he devotes his attention also to an innumerable host of practical details which plays so large a part in determining the success or failure of a preacher. The great bulk of his book is of course given over to the various kinds of sermons, suggesting the advantages of expository sermons, the special features of the evangelistic sermon, the importance of the doctrinal sermon as the culmination and crown of all sermonizing, the skill required for constructing sermons in courses. There are rules and material for the illustrated sermon. 455 pages. Original price, $3.00. Our special price $1.00.

thing that could be counted as worth while.

20. Yea, brother, let me have joy of thee in the Lord.—Note how Paul associates Philemon and himself with the Lord. This fellowship is closer and more precious than most of us have ever believed. Refresh my bowels in the Lord.—Again the apostle is dealing in Oriental psychology that puts the soul and mind in the abdomen. We would say my heart.

Do not fail to read the remaining verses of the epistle. They are filled with love and tenderness.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Amid a scene of rejoicing, 21 persons joined the First Presbyterian Church of Miami, Okla., Nov. 1, at the close of a 12-day meeting led by Guy W. Green, layman of Kansas City, Mo. All but three of the new members were adults. The children who made confession of faith during the meeting will enter the church at Easter after a period of instruction in a catechism class. On the first Sunday of his stay in Miami Mr. Green taught a union men's Bible class numbering 350, a record-breaker for Miami. On one night the entire teaching force of the Miami schools, numbering more than fifty and headed by the superintendent, attended the meeting in a body.

Rev. C. R. Crowe, whose address is 2725 Victor Place, Louisville, Ky., did well last conference year selling Bibles, Mottoes, and Christmas cards. He is recovering from a long illness with an afflicted limb, but has not laid down on his job. He has sold more than fifty copies of "The Herald of a Passion," by Dr. Goodell. He will mail 19 beautiful Christmas cards, with envelope to match, for $1.00. Let Brother Crowe's many friends remember him and give him an order.

Rev. J. F. Craig, of Statesville, N. C., will be open for engagements Dec. 1. He stands for the old-time gospel of full salvation. He also has a tent and will conduct tent meetings when desired. He can furnish the best of references should such be desired.

AMERICA'S LATEST GOD.

"And it shall be, if thou do at all forget the Lord thy God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, I testify against you this day, that ye shall surely perish." Deut. 8:19.

A new god has appeared in America, or to be more exact he has only recently developed to such colossal proportions. At his altars millions of dollars worth of property is burned every year in preventable fires. One would think that among a nation of mammon worshippers like the American people such a god would be unpopular; but this is far from the real situation. The best of all our land is given up to this god. Those who preach and defend him and succeed in increasing the number and enthusiasm of his devotees are exalted and enriched above almost everybody else. We pay our President of the United States the paltry sum of $75,000 a year. But the chief high priest of this god would consider such a salary only small pocket change, contemptible indeed if offered to him as remuneration for his vast services.

But this is not all. Not only are billions in money spent to supply incense for this god every year, this is the smallest consideration. Health, brains, energy and even human life are liberally offered to him. Thousands of boys and girls each year blast their health, dwarf their brains; renounce ambition and mortgage life in loyalty to this great god. Fathers poison thousands of their own children every year because of their devotion to him. And late years thousands of mothers when faced with the necessity of choosing between the highest good of their own babes and faithfulness to this god choose to burn incense to him. By so doing a mother lessens her babe's chance for life by half, poisons his liver, heart, kidneys and other vital organs before he is born, cuts off his natural food supply after he is born, weakens his body, shortens his life, cripples his brain, paralyzes his moral sense and robs him of his hope of life eternal.

Many a father is too poor to supply his children with milk, meat, and eggs. He permits organized charity to do that and even stands in the bread line himself. But he is not too poor to make his daily offering to this god. He cannot find money to buy coal to keep the home fires burning. His children neither have clothes or books to attend school. But he does find the price of incense for this god every day.

This is a very shrewd god too. He is not exactly all-wise. But he is able by some means to persuade men that he is only a little thing, and that loyalty to him is in no way inconsistent with loyalty to Jehovah God. Multitudes of professing Christians sing lustily, "I am bound for the promised land," or some other similar falsehood while they contribute from two to ten times as much to this god as they do to the Christ they pretend to serve. They sing, "I know I love Thee better, Lord, than any earthly joy," repudiate their pledge to their pastor because times are hard, plead that they must as Christians provide for their families because "He that will not provide for his own is worse than an infidel," but always have money to buy incense for their daily worship of this god. The writer knows of a "devout" old "saint" who has "belonged" to the good old Church for "forty years," who this last winter went to his pastor greatly grieved and between sobs asked the pastor to drop his church "because we are simply too poor out here to pay you. We can't even buy groceries any more. I've sold badly needed stock this winter in order to live." And yet his mouth was at that moment full, his chin stained magnificently, and his face beautifully deformed from his constant paying homage to his favorite god.

De we go to extremes to call tobacco a god? No! Anything that has first claim on all a man has all the time; anything for which he will sacrifice his health, his strength, his reason, his conscience, his fortune, his property, his own children, his soul's salvation and the salvation of those about him is his god. Verily, America is prostrate at the feet of the great god Tobacco. The Master said, "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon," and it has been exemplified that people cannot serve both tobacco and Jehovah. Let us have a revival of old-fashioned, heartfelt, sin-killing religion and we shall have a wholesale destruction of these heathen altars and the priests of tobacco will be slain as were those of Baal under Ahab of old.

NEW BOOKS JUST RECEIVED

The Christ of the Mount
A WORKING PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE

BY E. STANLEY JONES

In this volume Doctor Jones interprets the Sermon on the Mount. Having written so vividly on the inner life, this most famous of religious writers has felt constrained to apply the Christian gospel to the difficult and disturbing conditions obtaining today. It has often been charged that the imperishable mountain-side discourses of Jesus are superb ethical precepts, but impracticable idealism. Doctor Jones insists the Sermon on the Mount can be and should be applied to the actual everyday living of the Christian.

The Christly Life

A STUDY OF THE CHRISTIAN GRACES
BY W. Y. FULLETON, D.D.

Dr. Fullerton is careful to show that the life that is Christly is something more than a life lived in the mere imitation of Christ; it is the manifestation of a living Presence, of a Lord who dwells within. It is, moreover, an attitude of Christian experience not reached by asking, "What would Jesus do?" but a life without a question mark, in which the Lord of life is given full right of way to will and to work within the heart, of his own good pleasure.

REVIVAL NOTES FROM BRAZIL.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

I

Wonderful how the Holy Spirit witnesses to the Acts of the Apostles. It is a wonderful book. I am preaching from it greatly these days. I believe the trouble with the church today, and the cause of so much barrenness is, that we have gotten too far away from Acts of the Apostles. Every great religious revival swings the church back to Pentecost and the Acts.

Pentecost and the Acts.

For a week I was preaching in Juiz de Fora where the M. E. Church, South, has a fine church and Granberry College, including School of Theology. The Spirit of the Lord has moved greatly in all the meetings and many were saved and others received the baptism of the Spirit.

I preached the other night on "Wrestling Jacob," Genesis 32:26: "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me." On Sunday night Dean Chaves wanted me to meet five young men of the Theological School. They went from the meeting Saturday night determined to seek and pray till they got the blessing. They went out doors and up to the hill-top and there prayed and wrestled till past midnight. I think it was one o'clock Sunday morning when they got through. Sunday was a high day for them because they lived it in their new experience of the Spirit's baptism.

Sunday morning was a time of great blessing for the children and the young people; about a hundred knelt at the altar and many were converted. One little girl got truly converted and told her mother she was converted and wanted to be a missionary. She is the child of a missionary, born in Brazil, speaks the language and I have no doubt when she grows up she will graduate from one of our colleges and then be sent by the Mission Board as a missionary to her native land—Brazil.

At one of our meetings a young woman was struggling and praying for victory. She spoke English and said to me, "I must get delivered from this self life; I cannot go on as I have been going and do the work I ought to do." She made me think of those lines of Wesley,

"Expel the fiend out of my heart,
By love's almighty power;
Now, now command him to depart,
And never enter more.
Thy killing and thy quickening power,
Jesus in me display;
The life of nature from this hour,
My pride and passion slay."

I left the College City for our next meeting in Rio de Janeiro. After six hours railroad journey I came into the great city, was met at the station by a number of brethren, including the pastor of the Methodist Church. His people had been meeting in prayer at six o'clock in the morning, and last Sunday 116 people were present at that early prayer meeting! What a sure token of revival! I went to the home of Dr. H. C. Tucker where, the next day at noon Mrs. Tucker had as her guest at luncheon Commissioner Booth Hellberg, (Lucy Booth, daughter of General William Booth). I had been recently reading the life of General Booth and it was a pleasure to meet a member of his family.

The opening meeting at Rio was in many respects most remarkable; church was crowded to the doors and many standing. We usually do not make altar call first night, but the Holy Spirit was so manifestly present that we felt moved to give an altar call. As we sang, "Spirit of the Living God fall on me," the altar was crowded and then people knelt all around in the aisle and front. One of the pastors rushed to the altar and, when prayer began, he poured out his soul in an intense prayer for the baptism of the Spirit. It was nearly eleven o'clock before we got out of that meeting. May God pour out his Spirit abundantly upon this dry and thirsty city.

PEN SKETCHES FROM RIO THE BEAUTIFUL

It used to be said of old, "See Naples and die," but they say that Rio de Janeiro may well be classed with the Golden Horn of Constantinople and the Bay of Naples. I did not come into Rio by steamer, thus losing the enchanting view which sea and bay afford, but they tell me that travellers from all around the world say there is nothing can compare to the beauty, sublimity and charm of this magnificent bay and harbor. Bryce says, "In Rio, mountains and sea combine to make a city unlike anything in the world. The grotesqueness of the shapes is lost in the splendor of the whole—a flood of sunshine, a strand of dazzling white, a sea of turquoise blue, a feathery forest ready to fall from its cliffs upon the city in a cascade of living green." Tennyson sings of "Summer isles of Eden lying in the dark purple spheres of sea." Such is Rio.

III

Dr. H. C. Tucker, of the M. E. Church, South, told me when he came to Rio over thirty-five years ago, it was proverbial for its filth and squalor and smells and yellow fever, but Rio arose and shook off the slumber and sloth of centuries and said, "I will be clean and healthy and beautiful." Dr. Tucker himself became obsessed with the idea that yellow fever could be conquered, and he and a noted Brazilian doctor got busy and the great Brazilian called to his aid all the allies of science, cleanliness and sanitation and a great battle ensued in which General Yellow Fever and his deadly hosts were annihilated. In 1904 the city went through a process of reconstruction and the most beautiful avenue in the whole world was opened up in front of the great Bay, and open at both ends to the sea and the sea breezes. At the north it opens on the inner harbor, with Petropolis and Niteroy on the further side; it stretches around Gloria Hill to Botofogo, and then on and on to the open Atlantic under the head of mighty Corcovado Mountain. Bryce, in describing Rio de Janeiro, uses this comparison: "Suppose the bottom of Yosemite Valley filled with water and the effect would be something like the Bay of Rio."

IV

Brazil has been called the "World's Coffee Cup." Three-fourths of the coffee of the world comes from Brazil. Brazil, in size and resources, is almost boundless; it is one-fifteenth of the habitable globe, one-fifth of both Americas, and three-sevenths of South America. I rode through a coffee country and the trees were in bloom with white flower. Some of those coffee plantations are immense in extent. Dr. Clark, describing his visit to a coffee plantation, asked the owner how many coffee trees he had; he replied, "Four hundred and thirty thousand." In the state of Sao Paulo over seven million coffee trees are growing. The full-grown coffee tree is about twelve feet high, of bushy and rather dense growth.

Brazil was discovered by the Portuguese and Portuguese became its language. In 1822 it shook off the yoke of Portugal and became independent. No doubt it owes its growth and development greatly to this fact. If it had adhered to Portugal it would have suffered constant handicaps. There is a legend that runs to this effect: "Once upon a time Adam requested leave to visit the world; permission was granted and an angel commissioned to conduct him; on wings of love the patriarch hastened to his native earth; but so changed, so strange, all seemed to him that he nowhere felt at home till he came to Portugal. 'Ah now,' exclaimed he, 'set me down; everything is just as I left it.'"

When Henry Martyn, the great missionary, was on his way to India his ship stopped in Bahia in 1805. He was charmed by the natural beauty he beheld, but distressed by corrupt Romanism, he wrote: "What happy missionary shall be sent to bear the name of Christ to these western regions? When shall this beautiful country be delivered from idolatry and spurious Christianity? Crosses there are in abundance, but when shall the doctrines of the Cross be held up?"

In 1835, Rev. Fountain E. Pitts, of Tennessee, came as first Methodist missionary to Brazil, but permanent work did not begin till about 1876, when Rev. J. J. Ranson was sent out by the M. E. Church, South. About 1882 other missionaries came, including Rev. J. C. Kennedy, who is past his fiftieth year as a missionary to Brazil. In 1886 The Brazil Mission Conference was organized by Bishop Granberry, and three of the members of this Conference still live—Bishop Tarboux, Rev. J. C. Kennedy, and Rev. H. C. Tucker. The work has grown until, in 1930, it was deemed best to organize a National Church to be known as "The Methodist Church of Brazil," of which Bishop Tarboux is the first Bishop.

Some things cling to one's memory. The last thing I saw as I left the Methodist Church of Piracicaba, Sunday night about eleven o'clock, was the Missionary Directress of the Girls' College on her knees with one of the young women whom she was trying to lead to saving faith. All day long a work of salvation was going on in which many of the students had found Christ; many had prayed through at the Sunday night altar service and now the last one was being dealt with. After all is said, is not this the chief work of the missionary, and should not the great objective of all our mission school work be that of winning souls to Christ. I have been in cities where the revival fires never touched the schools, because those in charge were not interested; but all around the world where we have held revivals when the missionaries threw themselves into the work of evangelism there was always a precious work of grace.

Speaking of things that linger how often a song or a chorus will linger! Since I have left Chili a chorus in Spanish has sung itself so often through my soul, and how often have I wished for the music and words for those Portuguese meetings. One night in Santiago Chili, where I was preaching to about 2500 people in the Methodist Pentecostal Temple, the choir sang in the Spirit a selection with a chorus that has clung to my memory and heart ever since. I did not catch the words, but there was something in the song and the music that often touches my memory and my heart like the sensation intimated by the author of that wonderful poem—"The Lost Chord."

"It flooded the crimson twilight,
Like the close of an Angel's psalm,
And it lay on my fevered spirit,
With a touch of infinite calm."

I think it was Father Faber, of England, who sang of Jesus in those endearing words:

"I love Thee so I know not how,
My transports to control;
Thy love is like a burning fire
Within my very soul."

And Charles Wesley sang so beautifully:
 "Thee I can love and thee alone,
 With pure delight and inward bliss;
 To know Thou takest me for thine own,
 O what a happiness is this!
 Nothing on earth do I desire

But thy pure love within my breast,
 This only this, will I require,
 And freely give up all the rest."
 John Wesley was once asked to give his own personal testimony in one of his conferences; he did it in the words of the hymn:

"Jesus confirm my heart's desire,
 To speak and think and work for Thee,
 Still let me guard the holy fire,
 And still stir up Thy gift in me."
 Wesley at another time expressed his wish—"To cease at once to work and live."

THE THANKS-GIVING DAY AMERICA NEEDS.

Harold Paul Sloan, D. D., LL. D.

HERE are two very high values in human affairs, namely, a great popular attitude or bearing, and an institution in which this attitude is effectively expressed. The wide-spread sense of the common spiritual dignity of all men, which gave birth to American Liberty, is an instance of a high common bearing. The Declaration of Independence and the institution of free government is an instance of its noble expression. Standing thus as the utterance of a deeply felt and willed popular attitude, this Republic has the value of a poem. It is not only a practical thing, it is the forth-uttering of the soul of the American people. It is to the nation what his master canvas was to Michael Angelo, what his "Crossing the Bar" was to Alfred Tennyson.

Nothing is truly great which is only a utility. The sublimity of everything, if indeed it have sublimity, lies in its power to express some deep inner pressure of man's soul. Only as we nobly feel and think and purpose, and then effectively express our life bearing in a poem, a work, an institution, can we know it sublime. America with its modern wealth may be poorer than America in its primitive penury. We must greatly feel and think and will, or life inevitably withers, and all its values perish about us.

There can be no true greatness in outward things alone. Tolstoy, the privileged Russian aristocrat, living in the midst of refinements and pleasure, found everything meaningless because it violated spiritual out-reachings within him. He turned from refinement and pleasure with disgust. He felt an actual aspiration toward death—to hang himself or drown himself—that in destroying himself he might express his abhorrence of the littleness of his way of life.

In the beginning America was not a mere utility. It was instead the uttering forth of the high spiritual bearing of a people, but America has drifted from its first greatness. There is, however, preserved to us in our national customs one institution that both expresses the spiritual glory of yesterday and calls the Republic back to its forgotten faith and surrendered ideals—Thanks-giving Day. The passion of this land was not originally mere wealth and pleasure seeking: it was spiritual, moral, idealistic. Our fathers came to these shores in the name of ideals. They laid the foundations of our civilization in dependence upon Almighty God. They saw a definite connection between sin and adversity; between piety and prosperity. When their affairs did not go forward, not only did they seek a wiser course, but they sought it in humility before God, whose perfect wisdom and almighty power was ever their stay; and when their efforts were crowned with success they did not forget to return thanks to God for his evident mercies.

The point of view is the rise of the national institution of Thanks Giving Day. It did not, as is so often supposed, originate in one instance of national mourning or thanksgiving. Rather it originated in the deep Godward set of our whole national point of view. The Pilgrim Fathers met their early famine with a day of fasting and prayer; their deliverance with a day of rejoicing and thanksgiving. Continental Congress, during the Revolution, similarly proclaimed days of waiting upon God. Benjamin Franklin reproved our national convention for having undertaken its work without prayer, and introduced a motion to correct its practice in this matter. Abraham Lincoln, during the Civil War, proclaimed no less than nine days of national humiliation, prayer and thanksgiving. The evident turning of the tide of war for the Union from defeat to victory at Vicksburg and Gettysburg, during the summer of '63, so moved both Lincoln and the nation that two days of thanksgiving were proclaimed. The last of these, which was published Oct. 3, 1863, is the immediate historic beginning of our present national institution. We quote it in full:

FIRST ANNUAL THANKSGIVING DAY PROCLAMATION.

No human counsel hath devised, nor hath any mortal hand worked out these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the Most High God, who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy.

It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently, and gratefully acknowledged as with one heart and one voice by the American people. I do, therefore, invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, and also those who are at sea, and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father who dwelleth in the heavens. And I recommend to them that, while offering up the ascriptions justly due Him for such singular deliverances and blessings, they do also, with humble penitence for our national perverseness and disobedience commend to His tender care all those who have become widows, orphans, mourners or sufferers in the lamentable civil strife in which we are unavoidably engaged, and fervently implore the interposition of the Almighty Hand to heal the wounds of the Nation, and to restore it, as soon as may be consistent with His divine purposes, to the full enjoyment of peace, harmony, tranquillity and union.

Published October 3, 1863.

Lincoln thought of the war as a Divine judgment upon the Nation for its sins; and he saw all the people alike involved in the condemnation. North and South were both guilty. The war was God's moral requital upon both. He even felt that his own anticipated death stood in the same relation. He said:

It seems to me that the Lord wants today, as he wanted in the days of Moses, another victim—a victim which he has himself chosen, anointed and prepared for the sacrifice . . . I cannot conceal from you (he was addressing Father Chiniquy) that my impression is that I am that victim.

Lincoln felt he was dealing with a moral equation: the Divine requital of a Nation's guilt for the sin of slavery. He saw himself as one who had connived with it. He felt that God's moral judgments upon the Republic were "still far from the complete expiation" which his righteousness requires. This was intensely real to Lincoln; it was intensely real to the American people; and it was out of such convictions that the Republic rose. It was because Lincoln felt such things, because men generally felt them, that we have the institution of a national Thanks-giving Day. How morally searching, how exaltedly sincere is that sentence,

And I recommend to them that while offering up the ascriptions justly due him for such singular deliverances and blessings, they do also, with humble penitence for our national perverseness and disobedience, commend to his tender care all those who have become widows, orphans, mourners or sufferers in the lamentable civil strife in which we are unavoidably engaged!

The call of Lincoln in another relation is the present need of the American people. We need to be called to penitence for our national sins. We need to be made aware that there is a just Providence, whose almighty power rules and over-rules in the affairs of men. Our neglect of God must inevitably bring judgment. We have denied him in our philosophy. We have neglected his worship. We have repudiated his Truth. We have broken his Day. Our vain self-sufficiency has been sin in his sight. We have forgotten humility. God is grieved with us. We must repent. Our behavior in relation to the temperance reform has been a mockery of our national ideals. We have violated law for selfish indulgence. We have encouraged the most dangerous of criminals, patronizing them regardless of their bloody assaults upon human life. We have put our personal indulgence above the good of the Nation. We have desecrated the Christian ideal of home life, allowing petty differences and small infatuations to blind us to the binding obligations of great loyalties. We have sent little children out into life handicapped by our own false examples, and robbed of the tender nurture in which they should have been privileged to grow up. We have failed to carry forward fully the great truth of the equality of men, embodied in the organic law of the land, into the social and economic institutions of our day. We have not realized that a just distribution of the increased wealth, due to the progress of science and invention, is necessary to the very soul of America. Doubtless the men of superior endowment are great producers. A thousand men can work; but one man out of the thousand can conceive, direct, relate. The genius of such leadership enriches the whole people; and it is just that it should be proportionately rewarded; but we must bear ever in mind that superior endowment is the gift of God, and that God wills its dedication to the good of all. America's conscience cannot be clear while we have the double circumstance of over-production upon the one hand, and multitudes suffering the bitter pinch of want upon the other. If the masses were receiving their fair share of the returns of industry, there would be no over-production. The present economic confusion and the present break down of ideals must be seen as a Nation's sin. With high devotion we must face again the duty of a national repentance.

This is the Thanks-giving Day we need. This is the nation's line of hope. We must make the Republic once more the expression of a people's spiritual passion. The President must call the Nation's business leadership into conference and urge upon them the high responsibility of their position and endowment. He must show them their duty to lead American industry in apportioning a definitely larger percentage of the profits of business to those who toil in it. He must call the people together in their places of worship, urging them both to give thanks to God for their privilege as the inheritors of the Republic, and to repent for their departures from the spiritual idealism which made it.

Civilization is at the cross-roads. We may be at the dawning of a new Reformation. The future will inevitably become something nobler than has ever been, or else it must collapse. The tyranny and confusion of Russia discloses the futility of a corrupted ideal. It is the tragic consequence of a nation's spiritual failure. Its Church had become cor-

THE WOUNDED CHRIST.

Rev. W. M. Young Ph. D., D. D.

"But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." Isa. 53:5.

HE gospel of Jesus Christ is a continued story, beginning before the creation of the world and running through all the ages. It is like the scarlet thread which is woven into the cordage of the British Navy. A scarlet thread runs through every cord, and rope, and hawser, so that wherever you find a bit of British cordage if it were only an inch long, you would know where it belonged. In like manner, you can find traces of the gospel wherever you look in divine revelation. St. Paul says: "The scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all the nations be blessed." Gal. 3:8. The prophet Micah tells the identical place where Christ should be born: "And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not least among the princes of Judah: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Matt. 2:6; Micah 5:2.

THE CHANGELESS GOSPEL IN A CHANGING WORLD.

That God might prove to the world the Deity of his Son, by divine foresight, he had the gospel written before as well as after the Advent. We have the gospel records as written by Matthew, Mark, Luke and John; we have much gospel in the epistles, but this text is from the gospel as written by Isaiah probably as much as seven hundred years before Christ came. The gospel is like the graceful rainbow which hangs in the midst of the spray at Niagara Falls; it is beautiful, symmetrical, changeless, while built in the changing. It is hung in a mist of falling spray, but it does not fall. The mist is ever changing, but it does not change. Human life and thought are ever changing, but the facts concerning Christ and salvation do not change.

"BUT HE WAS WOUNDED."

This world has never been friendly toward Jesus Christ. He was wounded or bruised by the hard bed of straw upon which he was born; his hands were blistered by the draw-knife and the plane which he plied in his trade as the Carpenter of Nazareth; he was bruised by the stony roads of Galilee and Judea over which he traveled with sandalled feet.

He was wounded by his friends; his brothers said to him: "If thou doest these things, show thyself to the world. For neither did his brothers believe on him." John 7:4, 5. The taunts of his friends must have cut more deeply than those of his enemies. It was the dagger of Brutus that broke the heart of the great Cæsar when he said: "Et tu, Brute!" "Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me." Psal. 41:9. Perhaps the hardest things Christ has to bear today are the wounds that he receives in the house of his friends. Is he not wounded by our littleness of faith, by our unforgiving temper toward others, by our stinginess and slowness to send the gospel to all nations? Is he not wounded by preachers who deny his miraculous birth, his miracle-working life, his atoning death, and his triumphant resurrection?

HE WAS WOUNDED BY THE CHURCH.

The great leaders of the Jewish Church were his most bitter enemies. They said he was a Sabbath-breaker, because his hungry disciples gathered and shelled a little grain in their hands on the Sabbath. They said he was a winebibber and a friend of Publicans and sinners because he went among those who needed him and were willing to receive his message. They said he cast out devils by Beelzebub, prince of devils. They referred to his mysterious birth, and said: "We were not born of fornication." John 8:41. They ran amuck on the doctrine of the Virgin Birth like later churchmen.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD WOUNDED HIM.

The Church and the world combined to wound him. A crown of thorns was placed on his brow, spini Christi, those sharp, stinging thorns. They were beaten down upon his head with a heavy reed. He was wounded by those who buffeted him and smote him with their hands and spat upon him. He was wounded by the cruel Roman rods with which he was scourged. He was wounded or bruised by carrying a great heavy cross up Calvary's brow. He was wounded by the rusty spikes that were driven into his hands and feet. He was wounded by the scoffs of those who said: "He saved others; himself he cannot save." Mark 15:31.

"HE WAS WOUNDED FOR OUR TRANSGRESSIONS"

Being wounded for our transgressions makes his wounding exceedingly significant to us. The wounds which struck deepest into his soul were not the wounds of the thorns and the nails. He died with a curse on his soul. "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on the tree." Gal. 3:13. It was not simply the fear of physical suffering that made him to sweat blood on that cold spring evening in Gethsemane; it was the crushing weight of the world's guilt. In some way the Son of God took the place of the sons of men in punishment. He took the full crushing weight of the world's sin into his own soul. He felt the full curse that rests on the souls of the damned as they pass out into eternal night. He felt it all as he prayed: "O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." Matt. 26:39. "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Matt. 27:46.

Dr. P. T. Forsyth, in his great book on "Positive Preaching," says: "I never knew my sin so long as I but saw Christ suffering for me, never till I saw him under judgment."

He knew the woe of our crushing guilt and made a propitiation, or rather became the propitiation for our sins. By the death of his Son God brought about a changed relationship between God and man; "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." 2 Cor. 5:21.

"THE CHASTISEMENT OF OUR PEACE WAS UPON HIM"

By that chastisement Christ became a propitiation for our sins. Many theories of the atonement are advanced; none of them seem adequate. All of them together do not seem adequate. It may be that human thought and language are too poor to do justice to that divine act of God in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. "Which things the angels desire to look into." 1 Pet. 1:12. Doubtless the angels are more intelligent than we are, but who can say that even they can grasp the fullness of it?

Sin is an ugly fact in man's history and experience; sin had separated man from God; there is no use denying that outstanding fact. Some modern teachers are trying to heal the hurt slightly, trying to cover up the ugly fact of sin. There had to be some way to bridge the gulf between man and God. "Without shedding of blood is no remission." Heb. 9:22. A reconciliation had to be brought about; Christ made that reconciliation. "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins." 1 John 4:10. A propitiation is that which brings us into a state of happy and holy reconciliation with our heavenly Father.

RECONCILED ALSO TO OUR FELLOW MAN.

Our reconciliation brings us also into a changed relation to our fellow man. A gold coin is one thing, but it has two sides: there are many aspects to the atonement; it relates us to God, and it relates us to our fellows. It brings us into fellowship with God and also with man. "But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John 1:7.

"WITH HIS STRIPES WE ARE HEALED."

One day a little girl asked her mother, who had a deformed hand, how she came to be deformed. The mother replied, "My dear, when you were yet a little one, your crib took fire, and, to save you, I burned my hand. For you, my dear, my hand is thus deformed and ugly." If we should ask what mean the print of the nails in his hands and feet, the answer would come to us from Isaiah: "He was wounded for our transgressions."

"Brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you . . . by which also ye are saved. . . how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the scriptures." 1 Cor. 15:1-4.

"Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed." 1 Pet. 2:24.

CAN WE SAY WE ARE HEALED?

My friend, what are you depending on for salvation? Is it on a good, moral life? Is it that you went forward in a meeting and joined the church? Is it the tears you shed when you repented, or the faith you exercised? Are you depending solely on Jesus Christ, his atonement, his merits, his intercession. Is it literally true what Billy Sunday says, that, "God is blind, deaf and dumb to every one who doesn't come to him for salvation and mercy through faith in Jesus Christ?"

Yes, some of us are healed; we can remember the very day and hour in which we were healed, and we still feel the healing power of Christ and the witness of the Holy Spirit.

It is very important to know that we are healed.

LET US GIVE THANKS.

DR. L. R. AKERS, PRESIDENT OF ASBURY COLLEGE.

RATITUDE has been called the memory of the heart. A heart without gratitude is like a grate filled with fuel but unlighted, a cold and dead thing. A cardinal sin of our modern life is ingratitude. The golden gate of speech too often is barred and bolted to the angel of praise. But in this Thanksgiving season, in particular, it should be vocal with music of gratitude and praise.

Memorial Day, Independence Day, Washington's Birthday, and Armistice Day inspire us to patriotism and devotion to our country, but Thanksgiving Day calls not for the praise of national heroes but for profound gratitude to Him who is the giver of every good and perfect gift. Next to Christmas, this day should be the most joyful of all the 365 days of the year. It is supremely a family day, a day dedicated to home, home memories, and home ties; a day when father and mother and all the children can sit around a common board; a day for the reunion of families from the oldest grandfather to the youngest toddler. Yet withal the most honored one should be the Unseen Guest. No chair may be set for Him, but there should be prepared a Throne Room in the soul in which he may reign supreme.

Thanksgiving that does not translate itself into thanksgiving makes a mere mockery out of one of our great and hallowed days. Ingratitude is the twin sister of selfishness. Let us have nothing to do with this pair of odious twins. There are three common forms of ingratitude. The first we may designate as thoughtless thanklessness, an illustration of which is seen in the example of the ten lepers cleansed by the Great Physician and only one returning to thank him for the new life of health and vigor. The second phase is that of denial, revealed in the instance of Simon Peter who, after months of finest fellowship, failed to acknowledge his Lord and Master. The other and basest form is that of treachery and is manifest in the instance of Judas Iscariot. The danger of ingratitude is that it is not a difficult thing for one who has fallen into the first form to run the gamut of all the phases of this despicable sin.

Let us recognize continually the beneficent hand of God in all of our blessings. With Maltie Babcock shall we say:

*"Back of the leaf is the snowy flour,
And back of the flour is the mill,
And back of the mill is the sheaf and the shower,
And the sun and the Father's will."*

What a heritage is ours, we self-satisfied Americans, as we luxuriate amid the bountiful abundance of our temporal blessings. But our heritage is blood-bought, for, from the pine-clad hills of Maine to the sunny orange groves of California stretches a mighty empire almost every square foot of which has been sanctified by the red blood of our heroic forbearers. Mighty men were those Pilgrim Fathers, through whose daring and faith we now enjoy our Canaan land of blessings. Men of iron were they with dauntless souls, overcoming almost insuperable obstacles, because, as one has well said, they landed first on their knees, then on the aborigines.

*"Amidst the storm they sang
And the stars heard, and the sea,
And the sounding aisles of the dim wood rang
To the anthem of the free."*

*"And the ocean eagle soared
From his nest by the white wave's foam,
And the rocking pines of the forest roared—
This was their welcome home."*

BE YE THANKFUL!

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

HROUGH the manifold mercies of our heavenly Father we are spared to see another Thanksgiving Day. During the past twelve months many have gone to try the realities of the unknown world, prepared for a better world, while those who rejected God's offers of mercy are reaping the harvest of their sowing.

The daily press recently carried an announcement that the Atheistic Society was going to appoint a "Blame-giving Day" in opposition to our annual Thanksgiving Day which is ordained by the President of our nation. This group was represented by its head, Mr. Smith, who wrote to President Hoover requesting him not to proclaim a National Thanksgiving Day, in view of the fact that America, as a nation, did not have any cause for gratitude.

OUR HYMN OF PRAISE!

Great God of nations, now to Thee
Our hymn of gratitude we raise;
With humble heart and bending knee
We offer Thee our song of praise.

Thy name we bless, Almighty God,
For all the kindness Thou hast shown
To this fair land the pilgrims trod,
This land we fondly call our own.

Here freedom spreads her banner wide
And casts her soft and hallowed ray;
Here Thou our fathers' steps didst guide
In safety through their dangerous way.

We praise Thee that the gospel's light
Through all our land its radiance sheds,
Dispels the shades of error's night,
And heavenly blessings round us spreads.

Great God, preserve us in Thy fear;
In danger still our guardian be;
O spread Thy truth's bright precepts here;
Let all the people worship Thee.

—Alfred T. Woodhull.

We could not expect our President to do other than he did—pay no attention to such a request, but he did as our Presidents have done for years, proclaimed a Thanksgiving Day on which our people should attend the house of worship and render unto God their praise for his countless mercies that have followed them through the past year.

It is true, we have had a year of hardship and much to test us, but it is not the first time we have been called upon to pass through a period of depression, but we always came out and soon forgot our "lean year." During such times, we should not give ourselves to grumbling, but carry a spirit of thanksgiving for the good we enjoy, and the calamities we have been saved from. Think of what other nations are suffering—China, Japan with their conflicts, Europe with her times of sure-enough depression, accentuated by her enormous drink drainage, Russia with her suffering and revolution, Mexico with her turmoil and spiritual darkness—and many others who are putting up a hard fight for existence.

If the blessings which our heavenly Father has showered upon those of the Atheistic Society should be withdrawn, they would not be living to flaunt this insult in his face by appointing a day in which they would blame God for the seeming ills of the past year. It seems that they believe there is a God or they would not go to the trouble to appoint a "Blame-giving Day" in which their program shall consist in censuring God for present conditions. It were a wonder they would dare such a thing! They evidently do not recognize God's power, and the fact that he holds their lives in his hand. But justice is not meted out to evildoers on the spot, otherwise we might expect some terrible results of such procedure.

The Psalmist said, "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." That includes you and me, and may it be our inward inclination to "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and make this a real day of thanksgiving to him who has allowed us to live in the land of the free and the home of the brave. Let us count our blessings, name them one by one, and it will surprise us what the Lord has done. May the coming year, not only have one Thanksgiving Day, but may all the days be filled with gratitude to our heavenly Father for his unspeakable mercies and never-failing love.

Righteousness Exalteth A Nation.

REV. W. EDMUND SMITH.

America! Immortalized by Pilgrim's faith
And Patriot's glorious deed:

Chosen of God in paths of peace to lead

The nations of the earth,

Drop not thy banners to a lower creed

But lift them high to God who gave thee birth.

Selfishness, pride, and greed bid for thy soul:
In home, and church, and business mart and state

These seek control,
To dig thy grave mid nations crumbling back to dust;

Who put their trust in arm of flesh,
And crushed the soul in worshipping at pleasure's shrines.

Lost vision of the higher and divine,
Their tombs are marked along the shores of time,

And testify that God doth never sleep;

That as a nation sows so shall it reap.

And shall America sow to the flesh

And quite forget,

That reverence, faith, and love are regnant yet,

Though oft despised,

By those who in their passion and their pride
Are on their way to moral suicide?

Who boast of freedom;

Cry "In self we trust!"

Nor feel the chains of arrogance and lust.

America! give not thyself to proud and frivolous mood:

Sell not thy heritage, the price of blood

That gave thee double liberty.

Washington and Lincoln taught thee to be free,

But high and over all our Christ must be.

He brought to birth; can make the nation whole;

His freedom is the freedom of the soul.

What if thou gain the world

And lose thy soul,

For lack of virtue, grace and self-control!

The conquering Greeks drained their full cups in glee;

Their emperor died a drunken debauchee.

Wealth, learning, power may all intoxicate;

Leave righteousness to die without the gate.
"Wild tongues" and foolish pride, O Lord, forgive:

In faith renewed America shall live.

Order your Christmas cards and books early so as to avoid the rush.

rupted. Its government had become tyrannical. The masses were wronged and abused. And then one day the Red Terror swept suddenly down. Lincoln would have called it a Divine judgment. And is there not inevitably a judgment upon corrupted sanctities, neglected ideals and the failure of brotherhood?

Awake, America! Back to your knees, to your faith, to your spiritual ideals! The God who sent food ships to your starving Pilgrims in 1621, succor to your exhausted patriots in 1778, and freedom and peace to all your people in 1865; the God who gave you Washington to be the rock of your independence and beginnings, and Lincoln to be the brooding spirit of your blood-wrought unity,—this holy God still rules the ages. The future is yours if you walk in his ways. He has for you a higher glory than yet your flag has known. But if you become perverse, if you turn aside, if you become proud, if you forget righteousness, brotherhood, mercy and truth, he will judge you. He will cast you off, and your beauty, too, like that of the nations before you, will become only a memory. Awake, America; before it is too late! Back to your knees, to your faith, to your spiritual ideals!—Christian Faith and Life.

Making Thanksgiving Day Real.

THOMAS CLARK HENDERSON.

THANKSGIVING Day is an opportunity and not a mere duty. It is a day for the soul more than the body. The popular way of celebrating this day is with the emphasis on the physical to the neglect of the spiritual. I am offering some suggestions for the observing of this day which may aid in making it an event rich in rewards to the soul.

First. Plan for the day long in advance of its coming. Have a list of your personal blessings well in mind for pondering on that day. Fill your mind with the idea of gratitude. Lay by a bit of money for use in helping more needy ones to enjoy that day. List those who are unfortunate among your acquaintances so that if possible you may give some cause for thanksgiving on that day. Arrange your work, if possible, so that you will be perfectly free to give that day to God and the comforting and helping of others.

Second. Begin the day with early private prayers. Blend much praise with your praying. If you have not formed the habit of arising early for private prayer and Bible reading, then I urge you to try it on this coming Thanksgiving Day. Find a place of solitude, where you will not be interrupted, and there in God's presence give voice to your sense of indebtedness to God and his kind providences.

Third. Make the morning meal an occasion for uniting the whole family in the spirit and thought of the day. Let the morning meal be concluded by the singing of some hymn of gratitude, the reading of some praiseful portion of God's Word, and the whole family kneeling in thankful prayer.

Fourth. Share with your neighbors in heeding the call of the President of our nation by meeting in some church or hall for a community service of thoughtful worship and praise. Every member of the family should be privileged to share this service.

Fifth. Beside giving something to organizations which dispense charity publicly on this day, make your own home table the scene of a happy gathering of not only your own family, but in addition have some one share the noon meal with you—someone who may not have such a feast if you do not give it to him. Do not delegate all your charity to some impersonal organization, but get the thrill of actually indulging in it for the benefit of some less fortunate friend or relative. There are hosts of children who will never forget such a delightful and Christian thing as any of us might do for them in giving them the freedom of our homes and the romance of a grand Thanksgiving Day dinner. Be sure to make the dinner time cheerful and not like the gift of a professional dispenser of charity. The more the merrier, so do not exclude from such an event your own relatives and loved ones. Exclusiveness and pride must not have any place in our gatherings on this grand day.

THE SECRET OF GRATITUDE.

By Rev. Edmund Smith.

Thanksgiving is a state of heart
In which love is the major part.
All discord quelled, the soul in tune
To all the will of the Triune.
And music swells in notes of praise
To him that measures out our days.

Thanks unto God, his name we bless
His power and love and holiness.
Creator of the rolling spheres,
Who feels no strain of countless years.
The eternal "I Am" is his name,
From Everlasting he's the same.

Give thanks to him, his name applaud—
The high and Everlasting God!
So great in might and majesty,
His love doth fill immensity.
The bird, the bee, the springing flower,
The tempest wild and gentle shower,
The forest grand and harvest plain
His loving Providence proclaim.

But sometimes where these most abound
A meagre gratitude is found.
Grace is the mainspring of the frame
That magnifies Jehovah's name,
And puts above all creature good
The saving power of Jesus' blood.
The empty fold, the barren field,
The withered vine with scanty yield,
Inspired no plaint in prophet's voice;
Still in the Lord he would rejoice.

When troubles press the weary soul
And sorrow's billows heavy roll:
Even under the afflicting rod
That soul has gratitude to God.
He praises him for bitter food
Who worketh all things for our good.

In fruitful years, in time of drouth
Let praises still be in our mouth.
In sickness, weariness and pain
Give praise for all the soul may gain.
An evil beast barred Samson's way:
The strong man did the lion slay.
Weeks after he that way came round
And honey in the carcass found.

In trials that would our souls distress
Is sweetness and no bitterness.
Lead turns to gold with lustrous shine
By wondrous alchemy divine.

If we will learn this secret well
The earth shall blossom where we dwell.
In desert place a fount will spring:
In darkest hours our hearts will sing.
Our faith shall soon be lost in sight:
Hope find its end in "Mansions Bright."
Our days of praise for aye shall be Throughout a vast Eternity.

Sixth. I strongly urge that, instead of spending the afternoon hours in participating in or observing mere physical contests and games, you sanctify the hours by writing grateful letters to loved ones and friends, or in visiting those who would appreciate a friendly and happy chat and a season of prayer with you.

Seventh. Let the end of the day find you physically tired, but spiritually exultant and worshipful in the quiet of your own home with your own family.

Encouraging News!

Published in November, 1931, Edition of The Methodist Layman. Article by Atticus Webb. In part as follows. (Verified by Minutes).

The Masonic Lodge has been most worthily energetic in clearing out such membership from their lodges. On October 22, 1924, the Grand Lodge of the State of Kentucky, adopted the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That any man who obtains, by purchase or otherwise, intoxicating liquors or narcotic drugs from an illegal vendor of the same, or in violation of the laws of the United States, is hereby declared to be ineligible to be received into a Masonic Lodge of Kentucky; and any Kentucky Lodge knowingly electing such a person shall forfeit its charter.

"Resolved, That the Grand Lodge of Kentucky hereby declares it to be a Masonic offense for any Mason within its jurisdiction to purchase or possess intoxicating liquors, or narcotic drugs, except in accordance with the laws of the United States of America. Any and all Masons offending shall be proceeded against by his Lodge."

"The Grand Lodge of the State of Oklahoma, in its seventeenth annual communication to its membership adopted practically the same rule."

Your Opportunity

to share in one of the most wonderful "hard-time" purchases it has been our privilege to make. The book is the "Beautiful Story of the Bible," in simple language, containing nearly three hundred stories from the Holy Book. It is a fascinating, inspiring and instructive historical narrative of the Old and New Testament times, including the lives of the prophets, of the rulers and the beautiful story of Jesus and his disciples. The book is designed as a course of instruction for the fifty-two weeks in the year, or for daily reading followed by a series of questions which simplify the stories and emphasize their important truths. Durable cloth binding.

There are about 200 illustrations in the book many of them full page in colors. There are 468 pages of double-column, intensely interesting reading matter, besides the fifty-two sets of questions. While we are writing this notice, a distinguished author and minister comes into our office, picks up the book and remarks that it is the finest child's story book that he knows of.

If you want to furnish your own child with one of the best Bible story books to be had, now is the time; if you want to furnish a relative or neighbor's child, now is the time; if you want one for your own use to help you in simplifying and teaching a spiritual Sunday school lesson, now is the time; if you are looking for something inexpensive, and something that will bless, in the way of a birthday or Christmas gift, now is the time.

When this remainder of the edition is exhausted, the book will not be reprinted. It was published to sell at $2.00, but the circumstances under which we bought these copies enable us to sell them out at $1.00 per copy, postpaid. Don't let this opportunity pass, but send The Pentecostal Publishing Company $1.00 worth of stamps, a money order, or currency right away, and get your copy.

---GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD---

SUMMER CAMPAIGN.

The summer campaign in Northern Maine ended with the Riverside camp. This camp is owned and directed by the Reformed Baptist Church, which is a straight-out holiness church, thoroughly Wesleyan in its presentation of the doctrine. I have never been with a people more zealous for this great truth than the Reformed Baptists. I was told that the camp was larger in attendance and results this year than for many years. The Lord was graciously with us and many souls were blessed in pardoning mercy and sanctifying grace.

The meeting at Fort Fairfield, Maine, which took up the month of July, was one of those meetings which make history. The last Sunday night saw the largest crowd of the series and more people at the altar, and all who came were blessed. One man past eighty, and his wife, not much younger, found the Lord that night. I haven't been in a meeting in years where there were more men and women "up in years" who sought and found the Lord, than there. A prominent Methodist woman, who has lived in Fort Fairfield almost a life-time, told me that the town had never been so stirred as during this meeting. The tent was filled night after night, and many times overflowed "far and wide," and yet there was the most perfect order. The hush of God seemed to be on the people. This meeting, one of a summer's campaign, was sponsored by some Christian laymen of that section, along with some preachers, lay and otherwise, who threw themselves enthusiastically, soul and body, into the services. Thank God for such faithful men as Revs. E. E. Crabtree, Fred Wright, Lee A. Good and some other preachers whose names I cannot recall just at the moment. And there were Brother and Sister Hutchins, the Kinneys, the Andrews, and, O my, others too numerous to mention, who helped make the campaign the glorious success it was. The pastor of the Fort Fairfield Reformed Baptist Church, gave us hearty endorsement and support. I have never, in all my ministry, been associated with more honorable laymen and preachers. There was no whining about finances, nor did I see a "poor mouth" among the supporters—they just simply raised the money and met their obligations like men! They didn't "weep on the shoulders" of the evangelist and singer, and say, "Alas, brethren, we would do this and thus if times were not so out of joint and etc.," no, indeed, they just went ahead and did it! I never saw money raised easier. When the tent came down every obligation of the campaign had been met and everybody was happy. If that is a "Yankee Trick" I heartily endorse it, and wish it might become a raging contagion.

At the close of the campaign an organization was effected through which other campaigns will be carried on during the summer months. There are multitudes of people in this country who need salvation, and can be reached if somebody will go to them with God's message, and will die in their sins unless somebody does go, and something ought to be done about it. Why should not Christian laymen, everywhere, as these laymen in northern Maine, make it possible for God's Word to be sounded in the ears of the people of their town or community. And that doesn't mean running in opposition to the churches, but giving the people whom the church does not reach a "chance." Are there places in your town, city or community which could be secured for meetings? Why not look around, find out, and start something! I know evangelists who will gladly accept invitations to these places, and will gladly join in the risks involved—financial and otherwise. Speaking for myself, my address is Wilmore, Ky. Selah!

I had the pleasure of being one of the preachers at God's Bible School, Cincinnati, Ohio, at the opening of the school term. The convention lasted ten days, and they were days of power and blessing. Rev. Charles Stalker, Columbus, Ohio, was my collaborator, and a mighty preacher he is. We had blessed fellowship. This school, under the wise guidance of Rev. M. G. Standley and wife, is accomplishing great things for God. The enrollment this year is the largest in the history of the school.

The meeting at Milton, Ky., with Rev. S. L. Moore, was fair. The crowds were large, and the last Sunday night reminded one of "Ye Olden Days" when people made it a business of going to church. The people just simply "overflowed" into the yard, and had to stay there. We needed another week. Ten days are not enough for a meeting to get the best results; three to six weeks are better.

Truly yours,

Jordan W. Carter, Wilmore, Ky.

SOME REMARKABLE CAMP MEETINGS.

Rev. Allie Irick.

To the great and good Pentecostal Herald:

It has been on my heart and mind for some weeks to furnish The Herald readers a brief, but comprehensive report of some of the great and outstanding camp meetings of this past summer which came under my personal, immediate observation. Truly the year of 1931 has been without question one of the greatest soul-winning years for more than a decade. The consensus opinion of pastors and evangelists is that this year has eclipsed any other year for many years in attendance, interest and success in salvation work in all the great camps and centers of holy evangelism all over the states.

In our thirty-five years of evangelism up and down the lands, and around the world, this year has been our best. Praise the Lord. The camps at Phoenix, Ariz., and Portales, New Mexico, were times of salvation and general uplift to church and community. Then came Tilden, Ill., camp, a young camp, but one of gracious power and widespread interest and support. Many pastors of various churches and denominations were present and gave glad assistance to the camp. Many souls found God in pardon and cleansing in these gracious gatherings.

Next, we went to Eldorado Camp, with that prince of writers, great preacher, noble pastor and congenial Christian gentleman, Rev. C. F. Wimberly, and Prof. Harry Blackburn to lead the host in song. This proved to be a very great and fruitful camp. We had many pastors, evangelists and workers from different churches, who were refreshed and went away glad in the Lord. This was the best camp in over twenty years, so said the officials and campers. The crowds were great and appreciative and the results were gratifying to all.

The Southern California District Camp of Church of the Nazarene, was one of the outstanding camps of our life. The crowds were immense, the interest thrilling and the fruitfulness inspiring to pastors, churches and the cause of Christian Holiness. Uncle Buddie Robinson was my co-worker in this camp. How he did preach and cry and shout! Prof. John Mandtler was our successful song leader. We had many hundreds of preachers, pastors, workers and noble saints from many towns, churches and various denominations present at this feast of fat things. Some services were beyond human description for joy, power, altar scenes and holy pandemonium. In one service over one hundred found God. We met many dear saints and noble preachers at this camp from all parts of the nation whom we had met in other days.

The next, and perhaps the greatest camp yet, was at Denver, Colo., which is the Nazarene State Camp. This was held in a mammoth tent with a city of white tents all around, only four miles west of Denver on the Golden Highway. Uncle Buddie and Rev. C. B. Fuggett and Prof. Mandtler were my happy, joyful, congenial companions in the preaching and singing of the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ. This camp went beyond all expectation for crowds, salvation work, supplying of every need and preaching of scriptural holiness.

In all these camps and among all these hosts of holy, happy people we find the noble footprints of Dr. H. C. Morrison, the blessed influence of The Pentecostal Herald and the powerful chain of power and holy ministry of Asbury College. Long may each live to proclaim and promote the glad story of full and free salvation over the earth.

I am making out my slate for winter and next spring, and for camps for 1932. Any pastor, church or camp desiring our service kindly communicate with us at Box 918, Bethany, Okla.

AN OLD-TIME REVIVAL.

According to the oldest saints in the city, the greatest revival in the history of Corbin, Ky., came to a close Oct. 18th. This was a union Methodist tent meeting. Rev. B. O. Beck, Rev. Burdin, Rev. Johnson, Rev. E. L. Griffy, Rev. Hamilton and many other preachers were in attendance at these meetings. Rev. C. M. Mourer and Rev. J. V. Siberal were in charge of the music and they can't be excelled. Old grudges were settled; sisters who hadn't spoken for years were reconciled. One step-mother saved in the meeting traveled over two hundred miles to be reconciled to her step-son. Restitutions were made by many. One man had to make restitution to two Jews who were business men. He told them he met another Jew at the tent meeting and he told him to confess and right things with them. When they asked him who, he told them, Jesus of Nazareth. One man drove a number of miles and confessed to stealing chickens from a Baptist preacher, and paid for them. Many gave up their tobacco, cigarettes and snuff. The entire city was stirred; over one hundred souls were wonderfully saved or sanctified. Many united with the different Methodist churches, some joined the Baptist and some the Presbyterian churches. I will be glad to help any of the brethren, as my entire time will be given to revival work. Address me 304 S. Main Street, Somerset, Ky. C. L. Wireman.

JAPAN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

Greeting to you in the precious name of Jesus Christ. Mrs. J. K. Aita had been sick from last summer, and about three months ago she was operated on for cancer. From that time she became worse and on the 21st of last month went to be with her Lord. While we feel keenly the separation, we rejoice that her departure was joyful, and we believe she had an abundant entrance into the kingdom of heaven. She spoke very much in her last days of the second coming of Jesus, to cheer our hearts with the thought that at that time she would see us again. We shall be separated for a short time, to be united when our Lord returns.

The funeral service was July 24th, afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock, and many came to pay their last tribute to my faithful wife and good and faithful servant of our Lord Jesus Christ. But we sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. Please read 1 Thess, chapter 4, verses 13 to 18, and comfort one another with these words.

A short time before my wife's departure, she asked me to read at her funeral service, these two passages: Revelation, chapter 2, verse 10, last part:

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." The other is 1 Cor., chapter 7, verse 29, first part: "But this I say, brethren, the time is short." She also asked that we sing three songs, "O that will be glory," "There'll be no dark Valley," and "We'll work till Jesus comes."

The doctor told me that she might die on Friday night, so our family gathered together and she gave us goodbye. But God permitted her to live until Monday night. Before that time many of our workers and members gathered at her bedside and she faithfully preached to them and prayed with them.

On Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock we had the Lord's Supper with my faithful wife. About fifty of our Christians gathered together and after that she preached a powerful sermon in her weakness. Her voice was very low, but many tears fell when she took each one by the hand and prayed for them. There was praise and shouting and tears and sorrow and joy mingled together. She led in the song, "In the New Jerusalem." Then she asked us, "Please sing together, 'We'll work till Jesus comes,' and 'I am redeemed.'"

In her sermon she said that the pain in her body was very great, but the pain of lost souls was greater. She said you must preach more earnestly and with a burning heart. On Monday afternoon she had great pain, and I said, "You have great pain in your body, but how is it with your soul?" Immediately she said, "My soul is victory! victory!" almost with a shout. Monday evening she repeated many times, almost shouting, "Jesus! I'm ready to go to heaven."

I beg you will excuse my negligence. It was my intention to write to you before this, but because I have been so very busy, I could not do so. The reason I have not written is because of my wife's long sickness. Another reason is the growth of our work has given me so much more work.

Now we have ten fields in Japan. I must have the control of many young workers. Also I am preaching for un-Christians and Christians. I am editor of the Gospel monthly magazine and paper. I am teaching in the Bible School of Japan Missionary Society, with an enrollment of twenty-six students, and we thank the Lord that they all are going to be workers of J. M. S. We are thankful for many young workers and that the work is growing and in such good condition. I believe that good came as the result of your prayers and your helping with money.

We have seven gospel meetings every week, one holiness meeting, four Sunday services, eight children's meetings. Our fields are real battle grounds, but hundreds of souls have there surrendered to Christ.

We are making Mrs. Aita's memorial offering for special missionary work. May the Lord richly bless you.

Your brother in Christ,

J. K. Aita, Tokyo, Japan.

HOLLOW ROCK CAMP MEETING.

The fifty-eighth Annual Hollow Rock Interdenominational camp meeting is now history. Hollow Rock is situated between two large hills, back several miles from the Ohio River, and about six miles from Toronto, Ohio. It is said by many evangelists to be one of the most picturesque camps in the country. The camp is well prepared to care for a very large crowd of people, with its three large dormitories. It has two never-failing springs of pure water, is well lighted, having their own electric light plant. There are almost one hundred cottages, and a large tabernacle seating about two thousand people. The Hollow Rock road is now an improved road and easy of access.

Our workers were Revs. Pettitcor, Sweeten, and Andrew Johnson. Prof. James Campbell led the music very acceptably. Our workers for next year are Revs. Heslop and Shelhamer; the singers, Kenneth and Eunice Wells, and Janie Bradford, young people's worker. Hollow Rock is a historic camp, over one hundred years old, probably the oldest in the world. We invite all who read this account to come visit us.

T. P. Hamilton.

GREEN COVE SPRINGS, FLORIDA.

We left Green Cove Spring, Fla., July 12, bound for White Haven, Pa. My first meeting was at Tower City, Pa., in a tent. People came for fifty miles to the meeting. These Pennsylvania Dutch know how to pray through to God. I hastened to Easton, Pa. We organized a class of forty members; Sunday school went up to 118. We went to Lebanon, where we found an old vacant church. The third Sunday I organized a church of twenty-five members, a Sunday school of 159 and a young people's society of twenty members. It is great to see how those Dutch people are rallying to the call of the gospel. I met C. W. Ruth, the first time in fourteen years. I could not help but say, "Oh, what a change!" I was sanctified under his preaching forty-five years ago at Philadelphia.

I will start for Green Cove Springs, Fla., Nov. 16. Will hold several meetings on my way down. Preaching holiness always brings a revival. Amen!

A. D. Buck.

automobile is not a remarkable invention. It has led to the construction of good roads, easy and rapid travel. Many people have taken advantage of these facts who were somewhat shut up in their home community and have toured the country, visited historic places, and have doubtless enlarged their intellectual and social life; but the subject under consideration is, the spiritual life of the people, that life of deepest and highest meaning which makes largest contribution to the building of character, and putting into the national life those elements that make for genuine progress and assurance of peace and prosperity, which secure the well being of all the people of our great nation.

The question which we now raise, Has the automobile proven an economic asset? Has it been a financial benefit to the people at large? It certainly has not. It has been the means of the accumulation of vast fortunes for the few. It has furnished employment at living wages for a large number of people; at the same time, is it not a fact, or at least quite probable, that it has impoverished millions of people, and had much to do with the present nation-wide depression.

It is well known that the automobile has made multi-millionaires of a few men. At the same time, hundreds of thousands of people in these United States have mortgaged their homes, in many instances their household furniture, in order to purchase automobiles. It seems that the car gliding swiftly over smooth roads creates a sort of reckless disposition to spend money freely. A man with a mortgaged home for a fine automobile pulls up to a filling station and hands out his money as if he were a rich banker, or receiving an immense income from a skyscraper which he owns without any mortgage attachments.

Mother Earth furnishes us with our living; our food and clothing come from her generous bosom. We clothe ourselves with the wool, the cotton, the linen, the silks, in fact, everything we wear is given to us by generous hand of Mother Earth. The cereals, the nuts, the fruits, the vegetables and the animals upon which we subsist all come from Mother Earth. If the earth fails because of drouth or other reasons, to yield her increase, there is suffering, famine, death; when the earth pours forth her abundance want disappears and there is health and happiness.

The farmer, the tiller of the soil, that element of society that brings forth out of the earth the fundamental supplies of human life, forms the most important factor in human society. When the farmer prospers all trades and business prosper. When the farmer fails all branches of business, in the nature of things, must suffer. If rain ceases to fall the spring cannot run, the streams cease to flow, river beds are dry; the boats of traffic are tied up, weeds grow between the cross-ties of the railroad, and commerce comes to a standstill; gaunt want is abroad in the land, unrest, revolution, blood and fire. The farmer is to the whole of our commercial life what rain is to the springs and streams that make the rivers that carry the commerce.

In the present depression the farmer is the great sufferer. His problems, it seems, cannot be solved. He cannot sow his seed or plow his furrows with hope; his products accumulate upon his hands; the earth brings forth abundantly, but he finds no market for his surplus, the result is, he has no money to deposit in his town bank, and the bank closes. He has nothing with which to purchase products of the factory and the factory closes. Merchants make assignment, bankruptcy spreads on every hand and millions of idle workers are searching in vain for a job, after which they become hungry, their families are suffering, they become desperate; finding nothing to eat, and no employment for their willing hands, they become thirsty for blood; the tools of toil refusing to yield them a competency, they seize upon the implements of destruction. The implements of destruction can never produce an abundant supply for the needs of men, they can never bring peace and plenty and contentment.

Is there no remedy for the present depressed condition in these United States? Yes, there is a remedy, but the people will never consent for its application. Suppose some friendly genii at the setting of the sun should wave a magic wand over the nation that would destroy every gasoline propelled vehicle of travel, or road and farm machinery; suppose this same genii at the rising of the sun could wave this same magic wand over the nation and bring into existence fifty millions of good strong horses, what a transformation that would be! One splendid result—the people would stay at home for a while and get acquainted with each other. At once harness makers would be compelled to employ two millions of men to make harness for these horses; those building and keeping roads in order would need to employ a million men to take the place of road machinery; the wagon, buggy and carriage factories would call for three or four millions of men to build vehicles.

These fifty millions of horses would eat a hundred millions of bushels of corn in less than a month; within one week, after they appeared on the scene, wheat would shoot up to $1.50 and $2.00 per bushel. All farm products—corn, wheat, oats, hay—and everything that grows upon the farm would be valuable; the millions of the capitalists would begin to flow back to farm populations, the town bank would be prosperous, the thrifty farmers would flock to the stores to supply their needs, the factories would be compelled to put on a full force of laborers and work day and night to supply the demands of prosperous people. There would be a call for farm labor at good wages; there would not be an idle man in the nation who was willing to work. It would become necessary for Congress to widen the doors of emigration that the demand for labor in this country could be supplied. The demand for horses would be urgent; the half of this fifty million horses would produce colts. Figure out $50.00 per head for twenty-five million colts every year, for ten years, and then on and on, and you will find hundreds of millions of dollars flowing into the pockets of the farmer. There will be no need for a farm board of a government bank taking mortgages on farms.

We understand that there are two sides to every proposition. Some one can easily argue that doing away with the automobile would put a vast number out of employment, but we can safely answer that would be a trifle compared to the tremendous demand that would accrue from labor, should horse power be substituted for gasoline power. Some one may insist that cattle, sheep, chickens and hogs can consume the products of the farm, but the fact is, they do not do so. The farmer hauls his products to town, sells what he can for almost nothing, often for less than it costs to produce same, and returns home heartsick with the products of his labor for which he finds no market.

Of course, we understand that the genii with the wonder-working wand will not appear; and the automobile, with its reckless drivers, will continue its history of rapid movement, leaving its thirty thousand dead every twelve months in its trail, with its two hundred thousand cripples, many of them for life. A relentless war will continue to be waged against humanity. We have not written this chapter with any thought that it will bring the changes suggested, but people are constantly asking with befuddled brains and mystified looks, What's the matter with the country? What has brought about present conditions? The thoughts expressed here will be at least, a partial answer to this question which is being asked by distressed millions of American people.

We have no doubt the labor-saving machinery will increase; through its inventions and use the few will become immensely wealthy, while the masses, who support themselves by the labor of their hands, will become dangerously poor. Will the reader please to note and ponder the word dangerously.

Would it not be better for the nation, commercially, morally and socially, for twenty millions of laboring people to own their own cottages and receive a living wage, than that twenty selfish men should be billionnaires, while millions of idle, homeless men with suffering families stand in lank hunger listening to the revolutionary speeches of communists? Progress along lines of invention can achieve and pass the limit of economic safety. Our scientific age can break down human civilization with its own weight.

In the following chapter—The Menace of the Millionaires—we shall call attention to the fact that the urgent problem of this nation is, not how shall we make more millionaires, but how shall we secure employment for the millions of people who labor for their daily bread, so they can live with a good degree of comfort, and the peace and prosperity of the nation be secure.

If Christ Should Come to Jerusalem

CHAPTER III.

THE Bible student should observe that there are two very distinct groups of prophecies concerning Christ's coming into the world. One of these groups foretells his first coming in humiliation, sorrow and suffering to die for the redemption of the people. The other group is pointing to his second coming in glory and power to reign over his redeemed people.

In the prophecy of Micah we read: "But thou, Bethlehem, Ephrathah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting." Note that the prophet is speaking of the pre-existent Christ "that is to be ruler in Israel." It was by this prophecy of Micah that the priests and scribes called together by King Herod at the coming of the Wise Men following the star, identified Bethlehem as the divinely-appointed place for the birth of the Christ, Redeemer and Ruler. Herod "demanded of them where Christ should be born." And they said unto him, "In Bethlehem, of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet. And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the princes of Judah: for out of thee shall come forth a Governor that shall RULE my people Israel." It was the promise of the rulership of Christ that "troubled" Herod. It is now troubling some ecclesiastical rulers. The first part of Micah's prophecy has been fulfilled—he was born in Bethlehem; the second part will be fulfilled—he will rule in Israel.

Nothing seemed to so enrage the enemies of Christ as his assertion that he would return in glory to this world. It was when Jesus at his mock trial admitted that he was the Son of God, saying, "I say unto you, hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven," that the high priest rent his clothes. Certain high church officials continue to rend the air, and their brethren, if they dare mention the coming of Christ.

We shall give the reader a sample of the two groups of prophecies we have mentioned. The one with reference to his first, and the other with reference to his second coming. In the 53rd chapter of Isaiah, we read:

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of a dry ground: he hath no form nor comeliness; and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our faces from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not.

Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted.

But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisements of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.

All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.

He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth: he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers, is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

He was taken from prison and from judgment: and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living: for the transgression of my people was he stricken.

And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; because he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth.

Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him; he hath put him to grief: When thou shalt make his soul an offering for sin, he shall see his seed, he shall prolong his days, and the pleasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand.

He shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my righteous servant justify many; for he shall bear their iniquities.

Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong; because he hath poured out his soul unto death: and he was numbered with the transgressors; and he bare the sin of many, and made intercession for the transgressors.

The reader will see at once, that this is a wonderful description of Christ's coming the first time to suffer and to save. Isaiah depicts his humble person, his rejection by the Jews, his patient suffering with transgressors, the two thieves, his burial in it all, and then a glimpse of the glorious victory when "He shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied."

We shall now give the reader from the same prophet, a picture of Christ's reign, Isaiah 11:1-10.

And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots:

And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord;

And shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears:

But with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked.

And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins.

The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fating together; and a little child shall lead them.

And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox.

And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den.

They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea.

And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious.

Read from Isaiah 32:1, 2 again:

Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment. And a man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as a shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

How different the tone and revelation of this prophecy from the 53rd chapter so remarkably fulfilled at the first coming of our Lord. The second will be fulfilled when our Lord comes to RULE in Israel, and over all the earth. Isaiah breaks forth again and again in a pean of praise as he catches glimpses of the grace and glory of the reign of Christ. Read the 19th chapter, verses 23, 24, 25: "In that day shall there be a highway out of Egypt to Assyria, and the Assyrian shall come into Egypt, and the Egyptian into Assyria, and the Egyptians shall serve with the Assyrians. In that day shall Israel be the third with Egypt and with Assyria, even a blessing in the midst of the land: Whom the Lord of hosts shall bless, saying, Blessed be Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel mine inheritance."

We note that these countries once wasted and desolated with war with each other, are now not only living in peace among themselves, but in the love and praise of the Lord. There is a triumphant song in Isaiah 35:1, 2, 8, 9, 10: "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom like the rose. It shall blossom abundantly, and rejoice even with joy and singing: the glory of Lebanon shall be given unto it, the excellency of Carmel and Sharon, they shall see the glory of the Lord, and the excellency of our God. And an highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those: the wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein. No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon, it shall not be found there; but the redeemed shall walk there: And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away."

It is quite safe to say that Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel in their prophetic visions foresaw the restoration of Israel and the glorious reign of a King that, according to their description, can be none other than Christ our Lord. We read in Jeremiah, 23rd chapter from the fifth to the close of the sixth verse: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute justice and judgment in the earth. And in his day Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his name whereby he shall be called, THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS."

The King spoken of is, without doubt or question, the Babe that was to be born in Bethlehem, who was to RULE in Israel. There should be no difficulty in identifying this Babe of Bethlehem, this RULER in Israel, from the King just spoken of by Jeremiah, "The Lord our righteousness." Let men say what they will, and let Satan oppose with all of his power, but let the children of the Lord rejoice in the fact that the Christ who came in humiliation and suffering to die for our redemption, will come again to reign in glory over his redeemed people. "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on whom the second death hath no power."

When Jesus came the first time, John the Baptist, that rugged wilderness preacher, came before him to prepare the way for his coming. Is it not probable that what is called the Holiness Movement, a great spiritual awakening that has been touching the nations of the earth, is a sort of second John the Baptist warning and admonishing the people to be arrayed in the white robes of righteousness, that holiness that will enable them to meet their coming Redeemer and King with joy. Let those who love his appearing keep their wedding garments unspotted, the oil of holiness in their vessels, with their lamps, wait with patience and labor with holy zeal, nothing doubting. Jesus promised that he would come back to earth. He will keep his promise. He cannot fail.

Gifts For All.

Of all times, the coming Christmas should be one when money is most carefully and wisely expended. You want to remember your friends with something that will bless and abide. Where could you get twelve handsome, appropriate gifts for so small amount. If you wish to see one, order one for 60 cents, and if pleased, order the remaining eleven for $5.40. I am sure you will be pleased to the fullest. To be sure you get the right Testament, mention the fact that Mrs. Morrison recommended it, or cut out this notice and send it with order.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

AM I THANKFUL?

"I wonder if I'm thankful for the blessings that God sends,
Am I thankful for my health, my home and loving friends?
Am I thankful for the food I eat, and raiment that I wear?
Am I thankful for the joys of life and happiness I share?
Am I thankful for the work I find that weekdays must be done?
Am I thankful for the hope that's mine for honors to be won?
If I am not, oh, grant, dear Lord, that in Thy holy way
Thou wilt impart into my soul a real Thanksgiving Day!
Oh, teach me how to show my thanks for all which Thou dost give,
That I may in the future years a thankful spirit live." —Sel.

THANKSGIVING.

I've been countin' up my blessin's.
I've been summin' up my woes
But I aint got the conclusion some would naturally suppose:
Why, I quit a-countin' troubles fore I had half a score,
While the more I count my blessin's, I keep a findin' more and more.
There's been things that wasn't exactly as I thought they'd ought to be,
An' I've often growled at Providence for not a-pettin' me!
But I hadn't stopped to reckon what the other side had been—
How much o' good and blessin' had been thickly crowded in
For there's been a gift o' sunshine after every shower of tears,
An' I found a load o' laughter scattered all along the years.
If the thorns have pricked me sometimes, I've good reason to suppose
Love has hid 'em often from me, 'neath the rapture of the rose!
So I'm goin' to still be thankful fer the sunshine and the rain,
Fer the joy that's made me happy; fer the purgin' done by pain;
Fer the love o' little children; fer the friends that have been true;
Fer the Guidin' Hand that's led me every threatenin' danger through!

—Lewis A. Tubbs.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a lonesome Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I like very much to read The Pentecostal Herald. I love to go to church. I have blue eyes, brown natural curly hair that reaches my shoulders. I weigh one hundred and ten pounds, five feet and two inches tall. I have a medium complexion. My age is between eighteen and twenty-four years. To the one that guesses my middle name I will send a picture of myself. It begins with W, ends with G and has nine letters in it. Please everybody write to me and I will answer. I would like very much to see this in print. Erma W. Ross.
Rt. 1, Box 40, Flemingsburg, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been reading letters from the cousins for sometime and enjoy it very much. I have received great inspirations from them which helped me in living a Christian life. I am glad to know that so many young people, and especially of my own age are standing four-square for the gospel of the Lord Jesus. For sometime I have been wondering if you would accept an orphan for a cousin. I have only seen one letter from Lincoln. I know it is a small town, but I see no reason why it shouldn't shine as much as any other place, so I am trying to polish it up a tiny wee bit if you will only help me to do so by rescuing my letter from Mr. W. B. I suppose you are wondering what sort of a person is doing all of this spluttering so I will endeavor to tell you a bit about myself. I, for one out of a hundred, have long nut brown hair, dark brown eyes, am five feet five, and weigh one hundred and fifteen pounds. I am seventeen years of age, was born in the month of brides. Who can guess what month is my birth month? And I have one of the longest days of the year to celebrate my birthday. I have been teaching in the M. P. S. S. for nearly two years. I first had charge of the kindergarten but am now teaching the primary boys. I will finish Lincoln high school this year and think I have enough education to tell anyone about my home town, and the state of North Carolina who would be willing to cheer up a sad and forlorn orphan by writing to Ruth Johnson.

Box 202, Lincoln, N. C.

P. S. Don't forget I'll be expecting to hear from you whether boy or girl.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twenty years old, been out of school for six years. The one who will guess my middle name I will write to them. It begins with L and ends with E, and has six letters in it. I have blue eyes, golden hair, fair complexion, am five feet, six inches in height, weight 120 pounds. My birthday is March 3. Have I a twin? My hobbies are taking snapshots, writing, reading, hiking. I have never been guilty of using rouge and lipstick. I go to Sunday school quite often. My teacher is Mrs. Vivian Hurst. I have a father, mother, brother and two sisters. I hope to get letters from all of you. All who will send snapshots I will be glad to exchange with them. I am hoping to see this letter in print soon, and if anyone can't guess my middle name write and I will tell you anyway. Andrey L. Ross.
Rt. 1, Box 40, Flemingsburg, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am sending my first letter although I am a regular subscriber to The Pentecostal Herald. I am a graduate male nurse thirty-six years of age and hope to receive letters from nurses of both sexes who lead Christian lives and desire to serve the Lord.

Sincerely yours,

Harold L. Stallard.
1333 S. First St. Louisville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Nevada girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eleven years old and am in the sixth grade. I have blond hair and blue eyes. My birthday is August 28. Have I a twin? Please write to me. I like to go to Sunday school when I can. I have two brothers in high school. I hope Mr. W. B. won't get this letter, for I want to see it in print.

Dorothy Hardie.
Smith, Nevada.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Louisiana girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I live with my grandparents and they have taken The Pentecostal Herald for nearly a year, and I surely enjoy every page of it, especially page ten. I have never tried my luck in seeing my letter in print, but I hope to this time. I am nineteen years old, will be twenty Jan. 7, 1932. I have black hair, dark brown eyes and a fair complexion. I am five feet, four and one-half inches tall, weigh 111 pounds. I graduated from high school this past May and I get mighty lonely staying home. Mescal Smith, I guess your first name to be George. Edward Gregg, I too, am without a mother and can sympathize with you. I wish to gain friends through The Herald, both boys and girls, so write me, girls and boys. My middle name begins with M and ends in T. Can anyone guess it? It has eight letters in it. I will look forward each day for a letter from a pen pal and hoping I'll see this better in print. I'll close.
Emily M. Kennedy.
Gilbert, La.

P. S. I will try to answer all letters received.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I desire to have a chat with you and the dear cousins. Husband and I had the wonderful privilege of being in dear Asbury. Thank God for the foundation that was laid there in our Christian experience. We are in a little mountain village near Ashland and feel that God surely sent us here. Husband is teacher in the new high school here and also pastors a small Nazarene Church near here. We have just closed a meeting with Rev. Sharpe of Nashville as evangelist. Three souls saved. I watch page ten closely and especially make it a point to write to all saints. I do love to write and to get letters. All who desire to please write me. This is a strong whiskey place and it has been my privilege to organize a Woman's Christian Temperance Union here. We have thirteen wide-awake members and seven honorary members. Pray for us that we will do God's work here. I am President of the Union and love the work. I took the Youth's Roll Call leaves to school and twenty-two out of the twenty-eight high school pupils signed the pledge. I feel so happy over it. I am distributing tracts and papers by the thousands. The Russells have sowed this place down with the literature so why not spread full salvation tracts the same way?

Mrs. Paul E. Nelson.
Carter, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Pennsylvania girl join your happy band of girls and boys? Marian Hardy, I guess your middle name to be Louise. Dee Jones, I guess your name to be Mary. Ina Zell, I guess your name to be Emma or Etta. Am I right for any of them? Who can guess my first name? It begins with D and ends with S, and has five letters in it. I will write to all who guess it. I have an own Aunt Bettie who is sick. I am seven years old and am in the fourth grade. I hope Mr. W. B. is asleep when this letter arrives.
D. Marie Lewis.
Ulysses, Pa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May I come in for just a minute? Yes, I knew you would let me. I am fifteen years old and a sophomore in high school. Won't someone near my own age please write to me? I have traveled quite a lot and am sure that if any one cares to write to me I'll answer their letter right away. I live in a small town but oh, we do have such good times. We live near a lake which is nine miles long and varies in width. In the winter we skate, play hockey and go sliding, while in the summer we fish, swim, go canoe riding and lots and lots of other things. I know this letter is short but I'm saving my paper to answer those letters I'm expecting to get. Just one more favor please, Aunt Bettie, print this for me as I want to hear from lots of boys and girls. Come on, one and all, write to Helen Harwood.
Millersport, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: After reading some good letters I feel it is my duty to write. This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I am twelve years of age; my birthday is April 5. I am a few inches over four feet, and have light, wavy hair, fair complexion, and in the sixth grade. My teacher is Mr. Lloyd Stallens; I like him fine. How many boys and girls can say they have never been at a theater, dance or card parties? I have not been to any of them. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with M and ends with D; it has four letters in it. Well, I had better give some one else room. Cousins, let the letters fly to Ina M. Gray.
Carrollton, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I live near the President's camp in Madison county. I am a girl fourteen years old and I sure do enjoy reading the letters on page ten. I have blonde hair, fair complexion and blue eyes. I belong to the Methodist Church. I have a little sister that can't hear nor see. We are eight in the family. I go to the Hoover school, and it is a wonderful school. My teacher is Miss Christine Vust. I like her fine. I am in the sixth grade at school. I will answer all letters I receive. My middle name is Virginia. With much love to all the boys and girls and Aunt Bettie.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a little Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am fourteen years of age, five feet and three inches tall, weigh one hundred and eight pounds, have red hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, and in the sixth grade. I go to Daddy School and like my teacher fine. I am not a Christian but hope to be some day. My father is a General Baptist minister, and is away now, in a revival meeting. Dear Aunt Bettie: We are living in a time when more than ever we need to heed the admonition of the gospel: "Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus." (Phil. 4:6-7). Only be concerned with how you spell peace. Does peace to you mean ease? If you spell it rightly, it means—

e—eternal a—atonement (at-one-ing)
c—Christ
e—everpresent.

Spell it otherwise, it means,— p—pitiful e—empty a—arid s—selfish
e—existence.

Think it over. And may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.
Elizabeth Spickler.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first time to write to you, because we haven't been taking The Pentecostal Herald long. If Mr. W. B. is out cutting grass, I will write again. I am a little girl eleven years of age. My birthday is Feb. 25th. I wonder if I have a twin? I have dark eyes and hair and I weigh one hundred and one pounds. I want some of you pals to toss a little ink over my way; if you haven't got ink use a pencil—and I will gladly answer your letter. See if you can guess my first name? It begins with an E and ends with an R; it has seven letters.

FALLEN ASLEEP

BAIRD.

Benjamin Wilson Baird was born April 21, 1860; departed this life at Porterdale, Ga., Oct. 9, 1931, aged seventy-one years, five months, and fourteen days. He had been ill for more than a year. He was saved in early youth and wholly sanctified at the age of twenty-one in which blessed estate he lived until his death. His life was a glorious witness to full salvation. He indeed lived the way of the Master—a life of sacrifice, love, and service.

Surviving him is a devoted wife, nine children and a host of relatives and friends. It is not for them to weep as those without hope, for a life like his can never die; he lives on in the memory of all who knew him, and awaits their arrival in the land where death never enters. He has gone to be forever with the One he loved and served with a perfect heart.

A nephew,
Howard B. Simms.

LEE.

Mr. T. J. Lee, of Sulligent, Ala., was taken seriously ill about August 10th, and was unconscious the most of the time until Aug. 27, when he quietly passed to his final reward, to be with Jesus and his loved ones who had preceded him. He was patient, agreeable and talked about going home while he was sick. All of his children were at his bedside, except the writer.

He was born April 6, 1856; died Aug. 27, 1931. He was a very active old man and worked his farm and made a good living for his family. He did not believe in going in debt, and when he passed away he owed no man a cent, but had enough saved up to put him and mother away nicely.

He was converted early in life and joined the Methodist Church, South, and was a loyal member always helpful in church expenses. He loved the Lord and his cause, although he was not given to loud praying or much speaking but would express his religious feelings by smiling and the free flowing of tears.

He was a steward for many years, a teacher in the Sunday school at Wesley Chapel, where he held his membership when his children were small.

He was married at the age of twenty to Miss Nancy Ann Whittle; to this union were born six children, three boys and three girls. They tried to bring them up in the way they should go and from childhood the family always read the Bible at night and had prayers, all praying around.

He leaves to mourn our loss a precious wife and mother that is eighty years old this 10th day of November, 1931. She has lived a blessed Christian life, and her children can call her a blessed saint of God. She has moved a little ways to spend her remaining days with her only brother, Alex Gilbert, as her children are all scattered so far from her home.

Our loved ones are passing over one by one. Let us be faithful to our Lord and meet them in the sweet by and by.

The funeral services were conducted at Wesley Chapel, and his remains were laid to rest in the cemetery to await the resurrection of the just. No one can fill the vacancy left in the home or church, but the separation can only draw us closer to him who doeth all things well. May the peace of God and the fellowship of his children always be ours.

A daughter,
Mrs. Valeria Lee Hammond.
Rt. 1, Ringling, Okla.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Prayer is asked for a man and his wife that they may be filled with the Holy Spirit.

A reader asks prayer that she may live a Christian, and that her home may be blessed of the Lord.

A woman asks prayer that she and her husband may be sanctified.

Pray for a ministerial student who is having a hard time, spiritually. Pray for his wife who is in the insane asylum, that God may heal her.

A. C. T.: "Pray for the salvation of a certain man; also that my boys may be saved and live Christian lives."

I. B.: "Pray for a dear friend to be healed of bladder trouble; also that my hearing may be restored. Remember a friend who wants to more fully realize God's presence in her heart."

Prayer is requested for a revival in Whitney, Neb. This is an earnest request.

B. E. S.: "Ask The Herald readers to pray that I may be restored to health, and back into the Lord's fold."

Pray that there may be a revival in Pleasant Valley Church, O.

Mrs. H. E. W.: "Pray that I may be reclaimed, for my father to be saved, and for my husband that he may find employment."

Mrs. C. H. S.: "Please pray for the forgiveness of my sin. And that I may be saved."

HE CARETH FOR THEE.

Arise my friend, though on thy path

A shadow lies,
Though all the world looks dark to thy
Now blinded eyes.

Arise and in thy sorrow pray
And light will shine
Into thy sad and weary heart,
Aye, even thine.

The way looks dark tonight—thine eyes

No stars can see.
But pray and wait, poor weeping soul,
He cares for thee.

Though slander's vulture in thy heart
Has fixed her beak,

O wait awhile, my friend, be calm,
Thy God will speak,
His promises are true and sure,
They cannot fail.

Light out of darkness He will bring,
Truth will prevail.

Though scorned, forsaken by the world,

Still joyful be.

Thy Savior is a changeless Friend,
He cares for thee.

He was despised, and scorned, condemned,

Misjudged, unheard,
And yet amid the rabble throng

He spoke no word,
Meekly He wore His robe of shame,
His mocking crown.

He prayed for them as from His brow
The blood dropped down.

Oh, think of His forgiving love,
His mercy see,

And let thy faith be firm in Him,
He cares for thee.

Art thou in poverty, my friend,
Art thou oppressed.

Oh, fly to Him—He promises
To give thee rest.

The silver and the gold are His;
The cattle stand

Upon the thousand, thousand hills
Owned by His hand.

He hears thy cry, His watchful eye
Thy wants doth see.

Oh, go and tell Him of thy need,
He cares for thee.

Matilda Edwards.

CARL F. PRICE

An intensely interesting book for hymn lovers. To know the circumstances under which a hymn originated puts the stamp of individuality upon that particular hymn. The story of "When Peace, Like A River Attendeth, My Way" as related in this book will make an impression upon the reader, and this song will always be more meaningful, as well as many others.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson X.—December 6, 1931.

Subject.—Rome and Beyond. 2 Timothy 4:6-18.

Golden Text.—I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. 2 Timothy 4:7.

Time.—About A. D. 66.

Place.—Rome.

Introduction.—After Paul had been in prison in Rome for some two years, he was finally brought to trial before Nero, and was acquitted and released. Roman courts were slow. The heathen cared little for the welfare of an accused prisoner. Our American courts seem to have swung too far in the opposite direction. We are forgetting the safety of the State in an overweening sentimentalism for the criminal. It took Roman courts four years to try Paul; and then they found nothing against him.

Paul was acquitted in the spring of A. D. 63. It is strange that we have such a full account of his life and work almost up to the time of this acquittal, but almost nothing from that time till the day of his death by martyrdom some five years later, for he was beheaded in the summer of A. D. 68. (I am relying on the figures of Conybeare and Howson.)

Those must have been great years in the apostle's life. After wearing a prisoner's chain for four weary years freedom was sweet. But there was no playtime for Paul. He had preached the gospel throughout all his prison days, and had won many souls for his Lord—some in Caesar's household; and now that he was free, he threw himself into the work with renewed energy and zeal. In A. D. 63, immediately after his release from prison, he went to Macedonia and on into Asia Minor visiting the churches he had established in former years. It was a glad time for him and his beloved brethren in Christ Jesus. Of course, you may put a question mark after all I am now writing; and I shall not object. I am simply following the light of the best tradition we have, with here and there some little light from Paul's epistles. It is generally supposed that he went to Spain in A. D. 64 (and this rests upon fairly good authority), and that he remained there till the summer of A. D. 66, when he returned to Asia Minor. We date two of his epistles A. D. 67: 1 Timothy written from Macedonia in the summer, and Titus written from Ephesus in the autumn. If our conclusions are correct, he spent the winter of A. D. 67-68 in Nicopolis. In the spring of A. D. 68 we find him again a prisoner in Rome, at which time he writes his last epistle to Timothy, from which we get today's lesson.

Comments on the Lesson.

It would be a good thing for every minister of the gospel to read carefully and frequently the first five verses of this fourth chapter of 1 Timothy. Here we have Paul's last charge to his beloved son in the gospel. How closely his words fit these modern times, when congregations have "itching ears," and call for men who will preach to suit their lusts. People rush by thousands to hear some sensationalist who happens to "tickle their fancy," while some powerful bishop who preaches the eternal verities of God's Book preaches to a few hundred on Sunday morning.

6. I am now ready to be offered.—We do not know whether Paul had been sentenced to death, or was satisfied that he would be. The language used here rather indicates the former, and that he was awaiting the hour of execution. The Greek word used here for offered signifies to be offered up as a sacrifice. The time of my departure is at hand.—Paul's word for departure is almost poetic. It is nautical. "The time of my sailing is at hand"—I am about to cut loose the ropes that bind me to these earthly shores. If you have ever gone to sea, you will feel the force of the word.

7. I have fought a good fight.—But Paul is more definite: I have fought the good fight. Paul is here referring, as he often did, to the Grecian games. Dr. A. Clarke translates the passage, "I have wrestled that good wrestling, which is quite literal. I have finished my course.—I have finished my running, or race—a reference to another one of the Greek games. I have kept the faith.—You will remember that Paul states somewhere that one "is not crowned, except he strive lawfully." The Grecian games were conducted according to rigid rules; and a contestant could not win the chaplet of evergreens, unless he obeyed strictly. So Paul represents himself as having contended lawfully for his crown of righteousness.

8. A crown of righteousness.—Note the contrast between this crown and the withering chaplet of evergreens with which the Grecian victor was crowned. This is an everlasting crown: that was but for a few days at most. The Lord, the righteous Judge.—The reference here is to the judge at the Grecian games who handed the crown to the winner in the game. At any day.—The day of final judgment when Christ will crown his victorious children. Unto all them also that love his appearing.—There is a serious thought in those words. Do they mean to imply that there will be no crowns for such as have no longing for the Lord's return? If they do not mean that, what do they mean? It is blessed to know that there will be no pets in that day.

9. Do thy diligence.—Make all effort to get here as quickly as you can.

10. Demas hath forsaken me.—There is a note of unutterable sadness here. Just at the critical time when Demas should have stood by the apostle, he departs for Thessalonica, because he loves this present world more than he loves God. Crescens and Titus were away on important work for the Lord's people; and there is no criticism of them. It is a mean, cowardly thing to forsake a good man in the hour of dire need.

11. Only Luke is with me.—In one place Paul calls him the "beloved physician." Perhaps the world has never seen truer friends than Paul and his travelling doctor. We shall never know how much we owe Dr. Luke for his care of the great apostle. Take Mark, and bring him with thee.—These are blessed words. There was a time when Paul lost confidence in Mark, and did not wish him to go on that second missionary journey. But he found out later that he had misjudged the young man, and

JUDGES, 16

And they answered, To his son are we come up, as he hath done to us.

11 Then three thousand Jū'dah<sup>2</sup> went to the top of E'tam, and said to Sām'soi est thou not that the Phi now says that "he is profitable to me for the ministry." Paul had good sense to get over a prejudice; but some men are "sans gumption" in this regard.

13. The cloak...bring with thee.—Roman jails were not built for comfort; and the old coat was needed. Parchments.—Skins prepared for writing. Just why Paul was in a hurry to secure these things when he had but a short time in which to live has called forth some conjecture. Some have supposed, Dr. Clarke among them, that he wished to commit them into the hands of some trustworthy person for safe keeping after his departure.

14. Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil.—This verse is a puzzle. It does not seem in harmony with Paul's usual temper. It sounds a bit off when he prays: "The Lord reward him according to his works." However, the best Greek Mss. come to the rescue by giving us the future tense of the verb reward, making the sentence declarative instead of imperative: "The Lord will reward him according to his works." That is far better.

15. Of whom be thou ware also.—That is rather an ancient form of expression; but the meaning is clear. It is never safe to trust a treacherous man. He may do thee much harm.

16. At my first answer.—Answer here stands for the Greek word apology, from which we get our word apology. Just before Paul was arrested the second time Nero had burned down the city of Rome, and had charged it up against the Christians. So great was the hatred against them, that, had the apostle tried to hire an attorney to plead his case, it is doubtful if he could have secured one. He stood alone in the Roman court and made his own defense. He says: "No man stood with me, but all men forsook me." Where was Luke? Surely he had not forsaken Paul in such an hour.

17. The Lord stood with me, and strengthened me.—"I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." By me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentiles might hear.—What an hour that was for preaching the gospel. The courthouse mob would tear him to pieces; but he stood with consummate courage and preached Christ unto them, the only hope of salvation. I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion.—He was not torn in pieces on the spot, but allowed a few days' respite before the axe would fall. We do not know whether Paul was making use of an every day proverb, or referring to Helius Casarinus prefect of the city, who was possibly the trial judge. Nero was in Greece at that time; but he had given this official power of life and death in his absence.

18. The Lord shall deliver me from every evil work.—Paul does not mean that his life is going to be spared; he knew the time had come when he must die. The next words in the verse explain his meaning: "And will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom." He ends the thought with a shout of joy: "To whom be glory for ever and ever.. Amen."

NEW BOOKS JUST RECEIVED

The Christ of the Mount
A WORKING PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE
BY E. STANLEY JONES

In this volume Doctor Jones interprets the Sermon on the Mount. Having written so vividly on the inner life, this most famous of religious writers has felt constrained to apply the Christian gospel to the difficult and disturbing conditions obtaining today. It has often been charged that the imperishable mountainside discourses of Jesus are superb ethical precepts, but impracticable idealism. Doctor Jones insists the Sermon on the Mount can be and should be applied to the actual everyday living of the Christian.

Sermon Hearts

BY WILLIAM H. LEACH

The gist of 150 of the world's best sermons, each reduced to 600-word outlines. The preachers are from Wesley down to and including our own day. The texts range from Genesis to Revelation. There are many sermons for the special days of the year. The uses of the book are manifold, chief among them that of aiding the busy preacher in the preparation of his sermons.

Price, $2.00.

The Christly Life

A STUDY OF THE CHRISTIAN GRACES
BY W. Y. FULLERTON, D.D.

Dr. Fullerton is careful to show that the life that is Christly is something more than a life lived in the mere imitation of Christ; it is the manifestation of a living Presence, of a Lord who dwells within. It is, moreover, an attitude of Christian experience not reached by asking, "What would Jesus do?" but a life without a question mark, in which the Lord of life is given full right of way to will and to work within the heart, of his own good pleasure.

Price, $1.25.

WHAT IF? By The Editor.

AFTER all, what if there should be a judgment day, a time of careful examination into the life record of each and every individual? The Bible plainly teaches that such a day will come. We believe the Bible. To those who do not believe the Bible, what if it should come?

What if it should turn out to be true that, "without holiness no man shall see the Lord?" That, in order to enter heaven, a soul must be cleansed from all sin by the precious blood of Jesus Christ. You understand that, if it should finally be positively proven, a pure heart and sanctified life are required of every one who enters into eternal blessedness.

What if the preaching and teaching of John Wesley and his followers with reference to the second work of grace, the destruction of the body of sin, the crucifixion of the old man, is Bible truth, a part of God's program for the salvation of the soul? Not only the forgiving of one's transgressions, and the blotting out of the handwriting because of sin, but the purging out of the sinful nature, should be actually true and an essential qualification for the entering into glory.

What if all the teaching opposing entire sanctification from sin should prove to be unscriptural, contrary to the will of God, the work of Christ, and the witness of the Holy Spirit? What if all ministers and people who have derided and ridiculed the doctrine and experience of entire sanctification have been wrong, have been defending sin, have been preaching against the will of God, the cleansing blood of Christ, and the fiery baptism with the Holy Ghost?

What a time of consternation and confusion judgment day would be! How in the world could these opposers of the cleansing blood make reconciliation, readjust themselves and bring themselves into harmony with the divine requirements, and the divine provisions, after the sounding of the trumpet, and the great Judge is seated upon his throne, and from the greatest to the smallest, we are all assembled there. It would certainly be embarrassing if our brethren of the ministry who have contended that sin must remain in us until death, and that no soul can be sanctified and made holy while it abides in the body, should be made to realize that they have been absolutely and disastrously wrong; that God has required holiness in his divine law, and provided for holiness in the gift of his Son, and in the day of judgment will insist upon holiness, and take no sort of excuse from those who have persistently refused to believe that Jesus' blood can cleanse from all sin.

There is no doubt but a day of judgment will come. Death is ahead of us all; we must stand before God. This writer believes, without doubt or hesitation, that God intends

THE CHURCH AND PROHIBITION.

If the preachers and laity of the Protestant churches of these United States stood solidly for prohibition, no political party would dare nominate a wet candidate for the President of the United States. But they won't do it, and the politicians know they won't do it, and there's the rub!

Take the Nazarene Church just a few years old, almost a hundred thousand strong, and not a wet vote in all its membership. While you are criticising the Nazarenes, remember that there is not a man or woman in that church with cigar or cigarette stuck in his or her mouth, and not a wet voter among them. What if that were true of the Protestant membership of all the churches of this nation; that would settle it forever with the wets. The liquor gang would go out of politics at once and forever. It is hard for this old man to have much faith in a preacher who will vote a wet ticket. Merciful God, get us ready for that great Day! Amen!

to keep heaven free of sin, of any and all sin. Sin has brought such tragedy, tears, bloodshed, war, and ruin upon this earth that God intends to have a world into which no sin can come, a world for those who have been redeemed from sin, saved from the love of it, the power and stain of it, washed and made whiter than the snow, and presented unto him through the saving power of Jesus Christ without spot or wrinkle. Well, may we learn of the Bible. May the Holy Spirit guide us into all truth. May the precious blood of Jesus Christ so cleanse and purge us that there shall be nothing left in us that may hinder our entrance into that sinless world amidst that holy host of redeemed, intelligent beings that shall praise God forever.

If Christ Should Come to Jerusalem CHAPTER IV.

WE are well aware that there is not only a spirit of ridicule against this whole doctrine of the coming of the Lord, but it amounts to a bitter hatred. St. Peter foretells of what we have all about us today: "Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming?"

You can find any number of modernists in our pulpits who fulfil this prophecy perfectly. They say, "Jesus thought he was coming back, but he was mistaken." In other words, "Where is the promise of his coming?" They admit it is there, but they claim it is worth no consideration. They are not aware that they are fulfilling prophecy. Prophecy means nothing to them. They flatly deny that the prophets were inspired. These same unbelieving preachers are fulfilling Paul's prophecy of the "falling away first," that shall precede the coming of the Lord.

We rejoice to know that throughout the world there is a happy host of God's devoted people who believe we are rapidly approaching the end of the age of fearful wickedness, injustice, riot and bloodshed, and the glorious appearing of our Lord. We commend to our readers the words of St. Paul in his first epistle to the Thessalonians, 4th chapter, verses 16-18:

For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words.

It is very evident that the apostle would have the children of God think and talk about the coming of their Lord, and comfort one another with encouragements to be steadfast, and to wait patiently for his glorious appearing. I know of nothing that gives more courage and joy, and that awakens interest and zeal in missionary effort and evangelistic service than the belief in, and the anticipation of the appearing of our Lord in his glory.

The apostle goes forward in the fifth chapter with these words:

But of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober.

Many thoughtful people believe that prophecy is being rapidly fulfilled, and that we are approaching the end of the present age, and the dawn of that glorious age of the coming and reign of our Lord, when peace and good will among us shall prevail.

We can hardly understand why any class of men, especially ministers of the gospel, should be prejudiced against the doctrine of the second coming of Christ. To believe that St. Paul was inspired, ought to mean that we believe that Christ will come again in glory. The great apostle writes enough on this subject to make quite a pamphlet. In the second chapter of his second epistle to the Thessalonians, beginning with the first verse, we read: "Now we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand."

It is a bit amusing that some religious teachers are so prejudiced against the coming of Christ, that they have endeavored to twist the above teaching of Paul, and make it appear that he is offering a sort of apology to the Thessalonians for what he previously had said or written them on the subject of the Lord's coming. There is no foundation for such supposition. He is comforting and establishing them in the faith of the coming of the Lord, although in their distress they become over-anxious.

Paul does not stop here, but goes forward

THE SPIRIT'S OUTPOURING IN BRAZIL.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Truly have my eyes beheld strange and wondrous things in the last two weeks in Rio de Janeiro, the great Capital city of Brazil, and said to be the most beautiful city in the world!

When the fire began to fall in our first meeting in the M. E. Church, South, our difficulty was the church was too small for the crowds who wanted to come; second week we moved to the large Congregational Church, but the second night this was crowded and the other nights overflowing; on Sunday night pews, aisles, doors and side rooms were packed to the limit. We needed a building to hold 2,000 people. We began at 8 P. M., and closed about 11:30 P. M. How to hold an altar service midst such a mass of people was a problem. Our only chance was to dismiss the audience at ten o'clock and ask all who wanted to seek the Lord to stay for the second meeting, but the people did not want to go. This was a revival meeting of a new kind for Rio de Janeiro. The Holy Ghost was being poured out in every meeting! In the eighty years of its history this old church never had altar services before, but the pastor got his pentecost at the Methodist altar at our opening meeting and he was agreeable to any method that would bring salvation and the power of God to souls. Our workers got to work among the crowds and cleared the way for about a hundred chairs round about the pulpit, and immediately they were filled with seekers. What a sight! Over yonder was a professor of one of the colleges helping a young man to pray through; here was a congregational deacon seeking the Spirit; here were preachers' children seeking salvation and the Holy Spirit; here were scores of men and women from all the churches seeking their pentecost; here were officers of the army in uniform seeking God. When testimony time came a business man testified to victory and asked forgiveness of some members of the church that he had differences with. A very remarkable testimony was given by a woman who had a paralyzed arm; like Jacob at Peniel, she wrestled for the blessing and when it came, healing came also, and she stretched forth the palsied arm and praised God for both cleansing and healing. Yet nothing had been said about healing.

On this Sunday night I got back to the Mission home after midnight. In the three services we had crowds morning, afternoon and night, and at every service scores seeking God and wonderful deliverances all day. The day of Pentecost had come to Rio de Janeiro. We spent our ten days in the meetings. We retired to rest about 1 A. M. to rise at 6 A. M. to take 7 A. M. train for other points where we spend a week with three Presbyterian churches, and our interpreter will be a Baptist minister.

II.

When the fire falls upon a believer some one else is sure to catch the flame. A Sunday school man received his pentecost one night; the next night he brought six of his family to the meeting and his father was among the seekers. A young theological student (grandson of a great preacher) had a hard struggle; day after day, he came to the altar for the baptism of the Spirit. I did my utmost to help him along faith lines; he believed the promise, he had made the full surrender and, sometimes he would resolve to believe for the blessing, but he would come to the next meeting with no look of victory on his face. We exhorted all seekers to seek and pray till their hearts were satisfied and the Spirit witnessed to the blessing. (This matter of taking it by faith and by a process of spiritual syllogism is not always the best method; we make very little of it in Brazil). At last in one of the afternoon meetings my theological student struck fire and he was transformed from a haggard, solemn-faced fellow into a joyous, exultant believer; he verily leaped into liberty and victory. He came to me and gripped me and told of his victory. Then he became one of our best workers; the light of heaven was on his countenance, testimony was ringing and triumphant and unctuous. In every altar service he got into the midst of the battle and for hours spent himself in aiding souls into the liberty he had possessed himself. He soon will graduate from the Seminary and enter the regular ministry (Presbyterian). I think the struggle he went through to get his Pentecost will add greatly to the permanence of the blessing. Sunday night I found him dealing with a young man who was once a theological student and had lost his faith. It was a difficult case to handle. The seeker understood English, so I tried to help him all I could. His young lady, a college graduate, knelt with him; she entered into victory Sunday afternoon with abounding joy. The young man's chief difficulty was unbelief; his faith had been shattered, but before the meeting closed I could see he was making progress, and I have been praying for him that he might get back to faith in Christ.

III.

Last week the Roman Catholics had a big time in Rio de Janeiro dedicating an immense statue of "Christo Redemptor" on one of the great hill-tops of Rio harbor. It is one of the largest statues in the world. It is lighted up at night by electricity and presents a wonderful sight, suggesting Christ as the light of the world. But the Catholics are making it a great opportunity for their propaganda. I heard, recently, that the Cardinal and his hosts are doing their best to get Brazil to restore the Catholic religion as a State Religion. Considering what Spain has recently done with the Catholic church, it is hardly probable that the Cardinal will succeed. Nearly all the South American Republics have repudiated Romanism as a State religion. Argentina is the one exception, and it is not likely that Brazil will drop back.

IV.

Our meetings in Rio de Janeiro opened on a week when the city was full of Bishops and priests of Rome. Nearly 1,000 came to the inauguration of the Christo Redemptor Monument on the summit of Corcovado. Then, the Salvation Army under Commissioner Booth Hellberg (General William Booth's youngest daughter Lucy) held their Congress in the city. It was a busy week for all. Commissioner Booth has a warm place in her heart for Methodists because her wonderful father came from the Methodists; among them he got religion; there he learned his theology and how to hold revivals, and when they wanted to tie him down and harness him with Saul's armor he broke away and started what eventually became the Salvation Army. Commissioner Booth came over with her officers to our headquarters at the Institute Central do Povo, and they gave us some wonderful singing. The Commissioner spoke, she called on us to address the officers. It was no cross to do so, as William Booth and Catherine Booth—father and mother of the Commissioner—have had no small part in our life's training and inspiration. We had a good time together at that Salvation Army-Methodist gathering and we all felt it was good to be there. At our final meeting in Rio the Commissioner was in the audience; we would have gladly given her a place in the pulpit, but the church was so packed with people, and the pulpit filled with preachers that it was impossible. God bless the Salvation Army! We are using in our meetings a Portuguese translation of General Booth's remarkable book, "Seven Steps to Holiness."

V.

After closing at Rio de Janeiro our next schedule took us to Rio Claro, Sao Carlos and Araraquara, where we preached on Pentecost in the Presbyterian churches, our interpreter being a Baptist minister. The Presbyterians in Brazil do not build altar rails in their churches, and at all our meetings we use the altar, so we had to improvise an altar with chairs; and as soon as we gave the invitation every chair had a kneeler and over fifty people were seeking the Lord for the baptism of the Spirit. Such a thing as an altar service was never known in many of the evangelical churches of Brazil. One wonders how they did any revival work, or how they got people converted to God. Too long the method has been a confession of faith after training in membership classes; among the Methodists the method was hand-shaking. This, I think, is a very superficial method. Rev. W. G. Borchers, my interpreter, was impressed so much with the effectiveness of the altar method as he saw it at Asbury College that when he returned from furlough he resolved he would use that method in his work as pastor and presiding elder. He made a fine success of it and has seen many people saved and blessed in the altar services; we believe many others will follow this method in Brazil as a consequence of these revivals of apostolic power and blessing.

I was reading recently of the moving of the Spirit in England. What the writer says I think may be applied to those meetings in Brazil.

"We are daily hearing of men and women, young and old, gathering themselves together with the one articulate object of discovering anew the secret of the saints."

"A new efflux of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of men has already begun. Christ and him crucified is drawing the weary and the heavy laden back to God."

"Hark, what a sound, and too divine for hearing,

Stirs on the earth and trembles in the air! Is it the thunder of the Lord's appearing;

Is it the music of his people's prayer?

Surely he cometh, and a thousand voices

Shout to the saints, and to the deaf and dumb;

Surely he cometh, and the earth rejoices—

Glad in his coming who hath sworn 'I come'."

RADIO IN PROPHECY.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

PART I.

IN the discussion that we shall undertake, with its many startling facts beyond the realm of the human mind to explain, we will have an objective, a prophetic message. Prophecy is the strangest credential of our revealed Word. The students of the Bible or Christian workers that do not major in prophecy will have missed the greatest dream and inspiration that is possible in the study of this inexhaustible Book.

That we may arrive at exactly what is meant by prophecy we shall examine two. One must be listed as an uninspired prophecy, because it is not found in the Book of inspiration, although Isaiah never wrote a line more prophetic. About ninety years ago Alfred Tennyson, the English poet, wrote these words; and he wrote them without one single item or data upon which to base such a vision. Such inventions were then never dreamed of. These are the lines:

"Men, my brothers, men the workers,
Ever reaping something new,
That which they have done the earnest
Of the things that they shall do,
For I dropped into the future,
Far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world
And all the wonders that would be;
Saw the heavens filled with commerce,
Argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight,
Dropping down their costly bales;
Heard the heavens filled with shouting,
And there rained a gasly dew
From the nation's airy navies,
Grappling in the central blue.
Far along the world-wide whisper
Of the south wind blowing warm,
With the standards of the peoples,
Plunging through the thunder storm,
'Till the war drums throbbed no longer
And battle flags were furled
In the parliament of man,
The federation of the world."

Now, let us examine these lines:

"Saw the heavens filled with commerce,
Argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple skylight
Dropping down their costly bales."

Today there are mail routes by air touching every large city in America. There are passenger routes, station ticket offices and aeroplanes flying on schedule time. Passengers may breakfast in San Francisco and at eight o'clock dinner in New York. Valuables are now being sent by air and "pilots" are stirring the ships in all directions, "dropping down their costly bales." Then notice:

"Heard the heavens filled with shouting,
And there rained a gasly dew
From the Nation's airy navies,
Grappling in the central blue."

All this is now a horrible reality. Battles ten thousand feet in the air, shooting airships to pieces, scores dashing at each other like vultures of the air. Then flying over cities, forts, battleships—dropping tons of explosives, dealing death and destruction by the "gasly dew." All this we now know to be a reality, and woe to the warring nations that may engage in war again. But let us examine further—

"Far along the world-wide whisper,
Like the south wind blowing strong,
With the standards of the peoples
Plunging through the thunderstorm."

World-wide whisper sweeping around the world, giving news, events, markets, riots, storms, casualties, discourses—yes, "standards of the peoples"—all that is going on and the things they stand for in every nation under the sun. But what process, "plunging through the thunderstorm." The whisper travels at a velocity of one hundred and eighty-six thousand miles per second with an invisible power unknown which plunges through the thunderstorm. In thousands of homes all over the world they are getting the "standards of the peoples." At this moment there are being sent those whisperings through the air from thousands of power stations, filling all the world about us with sermons, market reports, music, grand operas, athletics, news items. They are going in every direction without conflict or jam. These whisperings, because they are silent in the air above us, are plunging, not only through stormclouds, but through great mountain ranges, as though they did not exist.

Yes, the poet saw all this marvelous vision with no more data upon which to base his vision than the great seers of Israel as they foresaw the march of the ages in the dim yesterday. But the vision is not finished. He saw all this until he reached the climax.

"Till the war drums throbbed no longer,
And battle flags were furled
In the parliament of man,
The federation of the world."

Is the vision so true, so realistic, to fail in its last couplet? We do not believe it will fail, for the mysteries and marvels of visions of commerce in the skies, battles above the clouds, dash not on the ragged brow of Look-out Mountain but five and ten thousand feet in the air; "grappling in the central blue." The poet saw the reign of universal peace and brotherhood, when guns would be moulded into tools to make all the waste places—even the wilderness—blossom as the rose.

Now, let us examine a prophecy given by divine inspiration. Back yonder in the long ago lived a minor prophet whose contribution to the world, world literature consisting of but three short chapters, but the blaze of eternal illumination was upon him. By that strange process, known only to our Creator, this humble seer was lifted from the obscurity of that long pass and was dropped down into the milling centers of twentieth century life as it is now being lived among us. Hear him—

"The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet; the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken."

"The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways; they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings."

Here is a picture of great military leaders; fields red with blood; it is a picture of war. But observe the vision—thirty years ago the automobile was a toy and an expensive experiment. They would run sometimes but not as a permanent means of transportation. Today these chariots, with their bright lights flaming against the dark skies, rage in the streets, jostle one against the other in the broad ways. There are in America more than twenty-six million licensed motor vehicles. Every man, woman and child in America could ride at one time. They are jamming against one another in the broad ways. More than thirty thousand annually are killed and many more are maimed, raging on the broad ways, as it were. In two decades our land has built between three and four million miles of these broad highways. These chariots are running like lightning, with flaming headlights.

Then observe further: "The fir trees shall be terribly shaken." Canadian woodsmen tell us that the finest timber of their great forests is the fir tree; but within the past decade or so the fir tree has become so wind-shaken that there can scarcely be found a tree that can be used for lumber. "Terribly shaken," says the prophet. But listen to these startling words—"All these things happen in the day of his preparation." Yes, events are mobilizing, preparing for greater events. Were we to get a glimpse of prophecy in the great march of civilization God is preparing for disclosing gigantic portions.

We are living in strange times. The secrets of the universe are being so rapidly uncovered that each day brings for us some staggering accomplishment. A gentleman who was an official of the Canadian-Pacific R. R. was coming from Montreal recently in his official coach which was equipped with all the devices for outside communication. This gentleman got in touch with the office of this railroad company located in London, England. The train was going sixty miles an hour, and connection was made easily and without interference.

Yet, Solomon declared, "There is nothing new under the sun." Rather a hard blow to the scholasticism of modern times, but when we examine it closely the truth of the Hebrew sage is quite evident. There is not a new thing in the universe. The marvelous laws and the formulas of chemistry, the facts of astronomy were just as true when Abraham journeyed to the land God was to show him. Or, to be more exact, there is not a single organism or element of which we are now whispering around the world which was not just as accurate as when the stars sang together in the dawn of time. Chemistry has no new law; the forces of the air have no new combinations. We now whisper across the stretches of sea and land. Of course, that is new; yet it is not new. God has butterflies endowed and equipped to communicate with each other through some medium, as our marvelous doings with what we call the Radio. We call it Radio because we have no better name. There were large butterflies that communicated daily with each other. Anyway, they do it now, and they could do it as easily then, so Radio is not new.

There is a large moth much larger than the ordinary butterfly, with wings that are from six or seven inches from tip to tip. They have a large proboscis on their heads which curls up when not engaged in the broadcasting business. When this proboscis is opened up there may be seen small black points on each side. Under the microscope they are like tiny hairs and can be unfolded to a standing position. The German scientist was the first to discover the strange powers of these butterflies. They were used by the German armies, so we have been informed. These moths go in pairs. The female would be kept in one part of the sector and the male in another far-away part of the army. Codes written on tissue paper would be wound around the bodies of one or the other, and one would be released and find its mate bearing the message across some dangerous sector.

An experiment was tried out in one of our large cities. The male was put in a glass jar at night, and the female placed in another, and both were covered. She was then taken eight miles across the city and turned loose inside a screened porch. She at once opened up her proboscis and extended her antennae—the antennae are the little hairs mentioned before—which curled up on the screen and made a scratching noise. Later in the night the male was released. The next morning he was on the outside of the screen bearing marks of identification. By some kind of radio process they got in communication with each other. So, even the Radio is not new.

THE TRIUMPH OF THE HOLY.

Rev. L. S. Hoover.

"Many shall be purified." Dan. 12:10.

HOLINESS is the very essence of God's nature. It is the blazing white light purity of him who is a consuming fire. It is the life power of the moral world. It is the eternal moral power, invincible. If there were any other power in the universe that could, for a moment, endanger it, confusion would reign, the race would be in despair, ruin would be complete.

But holiness is supreme; it sits enthroned in majestic glory and beauty impregnable and eternal; therefore the race has hope. It was the original nature of all created beings. It is not merely the atmosphere of heaven, but the essential of heaven. It is the moral order of the universe, from everlasting to everlasting.

Before time was, it was; the same yesterday, today and forever. It is essential to the good of all rational creatures that this order prevail. As the power supreme, it is equal to all emergencies and shall prevail. It goes forth conquering and to conquer. History proclaims its triumph in the past; experience proclaims its triumph in the present, and prophecy proclaims its triumph in the future. Let us notice:

(1) THE NATURE OF THIS TRIUMPH IN HISTORY AND EXPERIENCE.

In history, it is not merely the victory over all opposing forces. If it were Omnipotence conquering, just because it could, we might get the idea that "might made right." But here the order is reversed; right is might. God is omnipotent because he is holy.

The triumph of the holy in history is then, the triumph of virtue over vice, of holiness over sin, of moral law over spiritual anarchy. The first record we have of this is the archangel's rebellion. An archangel aspired to rule and dared to challenge the authority of Infinite Holiness. Jesus was an eyewitness to this conspiracy, this first clash between virtue and vice. He declares that quick as a flash of lightning holiness triumphed, moral order was restored, and the archangel and his cohorts were ruined in defeat.

It is the nature of holiness to overflow in love until it fills the universe. It is glorious, creative energy which must create and spread until it be found everywhere. This was the purpose of creation. God did not create because he was lonely for fellowship, but rather because life had holy worth or, the possibility of spreading holiness from heaven to earth. So man was created; holiness spread from heaven to earth and all was beautiful and glorious.

Satan disturbed this order. Sin entered the world. It seemed that holiness was defeated, but not so. He who gave us our freedom of will did not do so without holding in reserve enough power to save us from any abuse of it. Immediately holiness triumphed and the "masterpiece of Omniscience was reached in the plan of salvation."

We have also the record of Noah. Jehovah threatened to blot out the race by judgment. This holy man found grace in God's sight, saved the day for humanity and God destroyed the wicked but preserved the "Holy Few." Elijah's victory on Mt. Carmel was another glorious victory for holiness. This holy prophet challenged four hundred false prophets and the God that answered by fire was declared by the populace to be supreme.

The greatest moral battle of the ages was fought on Calvary. It was decisive for holiness, for all time. Jesus was victor. Holiness was made a universal possibility of grace and the atoning cross exalted as the sign of the conqueror. Ever since then Satan's forces have been in retreat. Though stubbornly counter attacking at times they are being driven steadily backward toward the pit by the ever advancing holiness hosts.

God's chief concern is the restoration of holiness to the conscience of the race. Therefore holiness as a second work of grace must be the ruling idea in a ruling religion. It is so in Christianity. Holiness is its central idea.

Jesus taught heart purity by faith alone in his atoning blood. He taught it to his disciples as a second definite work of grace. (John 17:17). Evidently he considered this experience so important that in his last prayer, he left the world out of his thought while he prayed for the regenerated, but unsanctified chosen eleven.

So we see that the nature of this triumph in experience is an obtainment of heart purity by faith alone (Acts 26:18; Acts 15:9). Daniel saw it in the vision, and pentecost made it real as an experience for the ecclesia and also started the movement for its continuity. It is this that makes Christianity the moral absolute among religions. It is the only religion that purifies from all sin. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin." (1 John 1:7). This is a cleansing act of the Holy Spirit whereby the consecrated believing soul is made pure. It is an endowment of power for the church and a glorious triumph in experience, once it is ours.

The great Holiness Movement is but in its morn. It is but on the threshold of its greatest victories. Sometimes it seems quite the contrary. That is because we view the battle-line from our narrow little sector; we do not have the whole or kingdom vision.

To illustrate: During the World War many of the soldiers saw only how the battle raged on their little sector. General Pershing saw the whole line every day. Viewing it from one sector it might have seemed that the battle was lost, as the Americans were frequently driven back. But viewing it from all sectors, as the General did, he could see a steady advance to victory along the whole far-flung battle line.

The need of the hour is a kingdom vision. A vision that will help us to see that our church, whatever may be its title among the clean holiness churches, is but a very small sector of this world battle-line. The great Holiness Movement girdles the globe with salvation and holiness unto the Lord. If we could have hourly reports from the whole line a great shout of victory would go up as we realized the progress of this movement. Let us catch the vision and remember that hourly the prophecy of the text is being fulfilled. Thousands join the ranks of the sanctified conquering host every day. This brings us to the consideration of

THE CERTAINTY AND MAGNITUDE OF THIS TRIUMPH IN THE FUTURE.

When the clock on the walls of time strikes the prophetic hour, holiness shall triumph in the earth. The statement of the text, "Many shall be purified," makes this certain. At the coming of Jesus the kingdoms of this world become the property of Christ. Under the severest tests of human experience a new humanity shall stand forth, a blood-washed throng of sanctified people, while from all the race is forced the confession that they are "The Holy People."

Then God shall say, "It is enough; come up higher." Then for the first time we shall realize the magnitude of this prophecy. They shall come from the East and the West, and the North and the South, yea from every tribe and nation, from the uttermost parts of the earth shall return and come to Zion. Behold this gathering of saints; precious souls revel in the glory and magnitude of the vision and rejoice.

Marching up the highway of holiness the greatest crowd ever seen by human eyes approaches. The marching column of the soldiers of the cross extends far down the highway stretching even beyond the range of faith's telescope. What a company—Abraham and Isaac, Moses and Elias, Daniel and Job, Paul and Silas, patriarchs and apostles, saints and martyrs, behold them arriving at the eternal city. The banner of the cross floats in the breeze as they march through the pearly gates accompanied by angelic escorts and led by the "Captain of Our Salvation." They have reached their goal. They halt before the great white throne. They have passed to their genial native land. The perfect day has dawned in all its glorious splendor. It is Coronation Day! Jesus is to be crowned King of all kings. Environment is perfect. Public opinion is all harmonious in the Holy Ghost. Prophecy is fulfilled in all its magnitude. The blood-washed millions stand around the throne. Silence is tense. The archangels are crowning Jesus. Holy love sits enthroned as the eternal ruling power. Sin is vanquished! Satan is destroyed! All heaven is in jubilee! The shouting breaks out louder than thunder, as the great company whom no man could number, shout the praises of Jehovah. The holy war is won. The triumph of the holy is proclaimed at last. Time is no more. The saints possess the kingdom forever, and the shouting shall never cease. Holiness is supreme forever!

Wanted: Colleges That Are Christian.

By Lewis Robeson Akers, LL. D., Litt. D., L.H.D., President of Asbury College,
Wilmore, Kentucky.

(Taylor University Inauguration of Dr. Robert L. Stuart.)

HE inauguration of a new president at any institution of learning is a memorable day in the life of that institution and marks a milestone in its march to progress. As we assemble on such an auspicious occasion, we bring to Taylor University the hearty congratulations and sincerest good wishes of her sister college, Asbury, amid the bluegrass fields of old Kentucky.

Notable are the traditions which cluster around this institution of learning as it commemorates the eighty-fifth year of its life. Illustrious are the names of those who once gathered in its halls and who are now upon the far-flung battle lines of Christian endeavor. Incalculable is the value of the consecrated man power which this school has given to the intellectual and moral enrichment of our country. In fact, I am emboldened to say that the founders of both Taylor University and Asbury College builded more wisely than they knew; and their wisdom is justified in a stream of golden personalities which have gone out from these schools to bless humanity with devoted and sacrificial service.

"Properly to plant and nourish a Christian college is one of the highest privileges of Christian men and women. There is no soil so productive as mind, and he who wishes to do the greatest possible good, and for the longest possible time, should nourish the fountains of learning and help thirsting youth to the water. Beating hearts are better than granite monuments." Thus spoke the late President King of Cornell College (Iowa).

But what is a Christian college? That is the question that a host of thoughtful people are asking today. Our answer to that would be in the words of Bishop Ainsworth, that, "A Christian college is just like any other college—plus—and in this plus is its distinguishing characteristic. Up to a certain point all standard colleges are alike. They all teach language and literature and history and science and mathematics and economics and psychology and sociology, and they all have buildings and laboratories and libraries and faculties for the thorough and scholarly pursuit of knowledge. These things are essential in the building of a college; but, given these, here is where the plus starts in the building and maintenance of a Christian college."

Without apology or compromise the Christian college must be committed to a Christian philosophy of life as a guiding principle in all of its instruction. The supreme test of an educational institution is not the knowledge that it imparts, but the view of life that it inspires. And the Christian view of God and the world is the only one element in education. Whetted knives are good or bad as they are used usefully or to destroy. Keen intellects may save us and again they may destroy; and the keener the quicker. Education that ignores God and the soul, which is his offspring, are pagan and will paganize any people that propagate it. "The process of education in this country must be Christianized until the Christian view of God and the world obtain in every realm of the world's life. We must do it with the alternative before us that to do it is to live and not to do it is to die. All teaching must be administered with this end in view." All our college subjects need to be appraised in terms of a Christian interpretation of values. It makes a big difference whether or not history and sociology are taught by one who sees the hand of God in the affairs of men; whether or not the teacher of geology is deciphering God's writing in the rocks; whether or not the student of astronomy is made to exclaim, "Oh God, I think thy thoughts after Thee"; whether or not the instruction in biology makes us realize that our bodies are temples of the Holy Spirit.

Just as there is a great body of church members who are nominal Christians only, so there are schools which call themselves Christian, but bear not the gracious fruits of Christianity. Many colleges there are who once were aflame with evangelistic fervor, but today have drifted from the "faith of our fathers." In some schools the big business of life would seem to be chasing the pigskin; in others the quest of the sheepskin is encouraged; in a lesser number the crown of life is emphasized and soul culture is stressed along with the training of the mind and the development of the body.

As I have stated before, true education cannot be defined in such academic terms as credit hours, class periods, courses of study, and text books. These things are necessary, but other things are of supreme moment. Dispositions must be disciplined, attitudes must be tested, motives must be purified; there must be the refinement of personality, and the continuous fashioning and development of character. True education, if it means anything, means daily schooling in the art of right living, and right living means living as nearly as possible the life of Jesus Christ in harmony with, and in service for, our fellowmen. Service above self; Christ over all; and his Kingdom triumphant in the hearts and lives of men: these should become the dominant forces in thought and life.

There is no virtue in ignorance as there is no excuse for it. Yet to be ignorant of educational standards is not nearly so dangerous nor so inexcusable as to be ignorant of, and indifferent to, the moral values of life which make up the very bulwarks of our civilization. The "low brow" at the edge of the jungle is far less to be feared than the "high brow" among his test tubes, with a masterful knowledge of chemistry in his brain, but with a void in the heart where only love should be enthroned. There may be a menace in the yellow peril, but the greater danger is in the white peril,—the peril of white men whose ideals are yellow. The supreme peril is the man with the 10x12 mind and the 2x4 soul, the man with the keen mind and dull heart.

Thinking minds appreciate the fact that America's present estate dates back to the three R's—Reading 'Riting, and 'Rithmetic; to the Bible; and to the little church that was the center of the early community's activities, serving as a means of spiritual life on the Sabbath and as a place of training for the minds throughout the week-days. Just so long as the church and the school were wedded our country's ideals were kept untarnished and wholesome, but when education began to depart from the guiding and restraining influence of the Nazarene then it entered upon dangerous paths and today we are suffering the effects of our departure from that path which always has led to the fullness of life. We still exalt the three R's as the basis of our national pre-eminence, but we have well-nigh forgot the fourth "R," Religion, without which neither education nor national life can long endure. If we would bring any arraignment against the so-called religious school of today, it would be this: that its religion is the religion of languor and relaxed ideals. It was a significant indictment of the average college that appeared in a recent issue of the Nation under the caption, "The Languid Generation." The youth of today are lolling about on velvet cushions of high-powered automobiles, victims of an enervating age of luxury. Yet history clearly teaches that luxury is the spade that has dug the grave of every empire which has ever perished.

This death stupor toward the finer things of life should be broken, and only the challenging appeal of a dynamic personality leading a new crusade for the moral emancipation of sin-enslaved humanity can arouse the drugged minds of twentieth century lotus eaters. Is not the promise of the Galilean, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me," sufficient stimulus to send forth Greathearts to salvage society? Bring this contagion of the personality of Christ into the classroom and inane topics will give place to serious conversation; world redemption and international brotherhood will occupy the thought of America of tomorrow and a fresh lease on individual and national life will be insured.

This age is at the crossing of the roads between a science that is well-nigh godless and an education that focalizes about the person of the world's one Great Teacher. Which way will America go? Her choice means that either she will follow in the death trail of Nineveh and Tyre and the forgotten nations of yesterday, or that she will utilize her central position among world powers to further the principles of peace and make the mind of Christ prevail in the councils of the world.

The colleges and universities of America not only hold in the hollows of their hands the destiny of America, but, in a fearful sense, the destiny of all civilization. Whether we will acknowledge it or not, we have become our brother's keeper, and this means the keeping of all men everywhere. "Let the rest of the world go by," must no longer be our national lullaby. This is the golden age of America's opportunity. The nations of the world are sitting on our doorsteps. We have been feeding them with the bread of wheat. Shall we feed them the Bread of Eternal life as well? Today the eyes of the world are focused upon us for moral leadership. This leadership is impossible unless it is created in thoroughly Christian schools. What shall it be? The triumph of the test tube or the New Testament? Science can utterly destroy civilization. Shall our schools be sufficiently Christian to restrain science from the will to destroy it?

This indeed is the age of progress, and we have gone forward with the stride of seven league boots in commerce, science, and invention, but, alas, we fear to the detriment of the spiritual power and consuming passion that made the heroic forbears the mighty moral force of our yesterdays. We must go back to the source of power, back to the Bible, that Book of power; we must make the spiritual values for which the Bible stands a part of the very breathing of our students. We must break away from this complacent contentment with things material and strive, as a man who runs a race, for the supreme good.

But epigrammatically, the concern of a university is with the riddle of the universe. Put religiously, the university is responsible for a right understanding of God and of religion so that both its faculty and students may study in perspective their own aspect of his truth, beauty, and goodness.

The tragedy of the college of today is the army of graduates who leave its halls of learning with a man's idea of the universe and a child's idea of the God who created the universe. The creator is ever greater than the thing created. It is quite important that a man should know what he believes, but it is even more important that he know whom he believes. For the "being who faces the sky," whose feet tread the terrestrial while his soul grasps the celestial,—for this bi-world creature to be enswathed by the Lilliputian bindings of a material world which makes secondary things primary and the things eternal secondary, this is a disaster unspeakably sad.

The New Bible

BY GOUVERNEUR MORRIS.

Did you ever hear of J. P. Powis Smith or Edgar J. Goodspeed? Neither had I until just now. Why should one hear of them? Because combined they have the most colossal nerve of which there is any record during the whole of the Christian era, or error as the Russians spell it. Well, have you guessed? Of course you have. That is just what they have done. The King James version of the Bible didn't satisfy them and they have written another, which, presumably, does.

If it had nothing to do with religion (and it has too much) the King James version of the Bible would still be a sacred book. When painting, sculpture or literature soar to a certain height, they acquire a certain sanctity. There is a holiness about them. The Sistine Chapel, the Victory of Samo-Thrace, the King James version of the Bible.

The rewriters "hoped" to make their version American in the sense that the writings of Lincoln, Roosevelt and Wilson are American. Roosevelt coined some wonderful phrases, but his writings are negligible as literature. Wilson could write, but when he said that he was too proud to fight, he knocked himself clean out of bounds as an American. Lincoln at his best touched the heights. His foundations were laid upon the works of Shakespeare and the King James version of the Bible. But the oration at Gettysburg doesn't belong to America any more than the Sermon on the Mount belongs to the Jews. They belong to the world.

Messrs. Smith and Goodspeed open their book of Genesis like this:

"When God began to create the heavens and the earth, the earth was a desolate waste, with darkness covering the abyss and of tempestuous wind raging over the surface of the waters."

What abyss? And if they were really trying to be American, why not take a short cut and call a tempestuous wind a tempest? The dictionary (the very American and excellent Webster) says that tempestuous means very stormy, and that tempest means a violent storm. Not enough difference to justify a waste of eight letters. Not when you are trying to write literature. Worse, the Smith-Goodspeed opening lacks an element which is inseparable from great English prose—rhythm.

Here is the King James opening:

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

"And the earth was without form and void; and the darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters."

And of course that opening sounds like trumpets. If you can't hear them you are deaf.

The King James scholars believed that they were translating a book that could not be improved upon. They approached their task with the reverence and faith of little children. Perhaps they did make some mistakes of translation and missed a trick here and there. But their phrasing will thunder for the ages of ages, and there never has been and there never will be any great English prose that is without debt to their Book of books.

But the new Bible will doubtless find admirers and purchasers. There are people who think that the late Doctor Frank Crane was a greater philosopher than Aristotle and Kant. There are people who never heard of these foreigners, and according to our blessed Ted Cook there is at least Moronia who thinks that Harper's Weekly is a musical journal. It takes all kinds of people to make a world. One of these has written of the Smith-Goodspeed Bible:

"It is distinctly American. The style is on a high literary plane. The poetry of the story of God has been preserved."

That is such good criticism that it contains only three trifling errors. The new Bible isn't American. The style isn't on a high literary plane, and the poetry of the story of God has not been preserved.

Try Christianity

Horace Greeley is said once to have received a letter from a woman stating that her church was in distressing financial conditions.

They had tried every device they could think of—fairs, strawberry festivals, oyster suppers, a donkey party, turkey banquets, Japanese weddings, poverty socials, mock marriages, grab bags, box socials and necktie socials.

"Would Mr. Greeley be so kind as to suggest some new device to keep the struggling church from disbanding?" The editor replied, "Try Christianity."—The Christian.

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

"It is my observation that prohibition has been of great benefit to the army. It has improved the environment of the soldier, and has made it possible to deal more effectively with those who are inclined to use alcohol immoderately."—Major General Frank Parker, U. S. A., in an interview in the Christian Science Monitor, April 6, 1931.

Resolutions

We, the Trustees of the Good Samaritan Hospital of Lexington, Ky., as an expression of our deep and lasting appreciation and gratitude to Mr. Henry L. Ott for his wonderful donation of the Mary A. Ott Memorial Building, and by reason of the warm personal regard borne by each and all of us for Mr. Ott himself, do hereby adopt the following resolutions, to wit:

1. For his erection and gift of the Good Samaritan Hospital of the Mary A. Ott Memorial Building, a hospital building or rare beauty of design, an ornament to the city and state, and a distinct and lasting addition to the hospital and the church, unsurpassed in completeness and in the actual quality and materials going into its construction,—we desire to express our unbounded thanks and appreciation.

2. For ourselves, and for our successors, in the guidance and direction of the activities and services of the institution, we cherish the hope that the fine Christian spirit of the donor, Mr. Ott, may be reflected in the work of the entire hospital staff so that the relief afforded and the ministrations to the sick, may come not only from the skilled hand of the physician and nurse, but, what is oftentimes more important, may be felt in the sympathetic and understanding heart of those seeking to relieve the suffering, inspired, as we hope they may be, by the spirit of the Great Physician.

3. We are glad that this beautiful building is a living tribute and monument to the mother of our beloved donor. May the love and devotion borne by him for his saintly mother make of us better men and better trustees, and may the hospital carry into the activities and services which it seeks to promote and provide, all of the fine, personal and higher things which the name Mother implies.

We hope that Mr. Ott may carry with him throughout his life, the re-assuring and comforting knowledge that the memory of his mother and all the reverence and respect which he bears for her and her name are being fittingly and nobly carried on by the services rendered by the hospital.

4. These resolutions would be incomplete without an expression from us as Trustees of the Good Samaritan Hospital of our very high regard and personal esteem for Mr. Ott himself. The unflinching interest and zeal which he has chosen in the construction of the Mary A. Ott Memorial Building, the ability which he has shown in attending to the details of the work from time to time, have closely commended him to us. Our association with him, however, during the progress of the work has given us an appreciation of him as a man, as a fellow worker of whom we are personally proud and warmly devoted,—a feeling of warm companionship which we will be privileged to carry with us, not only in the activities of the hospital but in those which engage our personal affairs.

5. We desire to spread a copy of these resolutions on the permanent record books of the hospital, to present a copy to Mr. Ott and to give them to the press.

J. OWEN REYNOLDS,
W. P. FRYMAN,
GEORGE W. VAUGHN,
Committee.

Your Opportunity

to share in one of the most wonderful "hard-time" purchases it has been our privilege to make. The book is the "Beautiful Story of the Bible," in simple language, containing nearly three hundred stories from the Holy Book. It is a fascinating, inspiring and instructive historical narrative of the Old and New Testament times, including the lives of the prophets, of the rulers and the beautiful story of Jesus and his disciples. The book is designed as a course of instruction for the fifty-two weeks in the year, or for daily reading followed by a series of questions which simplify the stories and emphasize their important truths. Durable cloth binding.

There are about 200 illustrations in the book many of them full page in colors. There are 468 pages of double-column, intensely interesting reading matter, besides the fifty-two sets of questions. While we are writing this notice, a distinguished author and minister comes into our office, picks up the book and remarks that it is the finest child's story book that he knows of.

If you want to furnish your own child with one of the best Bible story books to be had, now is the time; if you want to furnish a relative or neighbor's child, now is the time; if you want one for your own use to help you in simplifying and teaching a spiritual Sunday school lesson, now is the time; if you are looking for something inexpensive, and something that will bless, in the way of a birthday or Christmas gift, now is the time.

When this remainder of the edition is exhausted, the book will not be reprinted. It was published to sell at $2.00, but the circumstances under which we bought these copies enable us to sell them out at $1.00 per copy, postpaid. Don't let this opportunity pass, but send The Pentecostal Publishing Company $1.00 worth of stamps, a money order, or currency right away, and get your copy

Imps of Hell Inc.

"Imps of Hell Inc." is an organization to fight prohibition. They have organizations in Nashville, Knoxville, Chattanooga, Chicago, New York and even as close as Memphis and other nearby towns. Certainly these organizations have in them the "Imps of Hell." This is a brand they can truthfully wear.

The Bible says the devil is a liar but we were surprised that his children would organize and one time publish the truth that they are the "Imps of Hell."

----GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD----

ON THE WAY.

G. Arnold Hodgins.

"They that go down to the sea in ships." That is exactly what we are doing. Tickets have been purchased. Our cabin on the ocean liner has been located. We stand on the spacious deck of our sea-worthy craft, and, when the lines are lifted, and the gang plank pulled in, we wave good-bye to those who have come to bid us God-speed. One look around and we are aware that some of our fellow-passengers are wiping their eyes. They are vigorously trying to stop the flow of those tears that insist on dimming the vision. We do some mental reflecting, and begin to ponder the absence of tears from our own eyes. There are two reasons that arise before us: First, we have bidden loved ones farewell, afar up in the interior of the land. Second, we are so eager to be off to the field of our future labors for a time at least, that the going fails to give sufficient heartaches to bring the tears.

We are on our way to lands where men hunger and thirst for living waters and the bread of life. The sublimest moments of our prayer life have been when we were pleading with our Lord to let us get to those who do hunger and thirst. There have been those in yonder far off land, who have loomed high in our vision as the ones to whom we are now off to point to the Lamb of God. We may, therefore, be forgiven for shedding no tears. The roar of machinery, the churning of propellers in the brine, and the slash of waves, are music, which to us has no sad refrain. We are on our way.

We steam out of the harbor, after a brief stop in Boston, we get a glimpse of the transient luster of the lights along the shore. Then there is the light-house that sheds its radiant beam across the waves and warns us where the rocks are. We think of the old-time honored song about the lower lights; and breathe a prayer that we may never permit our ray of gospel message of warning and hope to grow dim.

Our path stretches back toward that land, where perhaps there are no roads like them for scenery. The purple morns and blue distances, that shimmer and hover over the valley of a thousand hills; the fields of cane and the woods of native trees, which grow into the thickness of a jungle, all tied into one inextricable mass by myriads of massive vines, on which monkeys cavort, and around and through which giant python slithers, and under which the wild beast of prey slinks to his native lair. All this and a thousand times more, goes to make up the land where dwells the sons of Ham, to whom we go to preach Christ. Here indeed, to the European or American, after all the uses of the surveyor's compass and the ceaseless activities of Geographical Societies, lies a land of things unknown, or half known and dimly suspected. For under this riot of color and light lies the poison of plants that deal in death, delirium, and madness. Here too, are the old superstitions that make of the witch doctor, a demi-god, to be feared and half worshipped. Here in his brain, foul and cruel, is the ruthless hatchery and roost of murder plots, in close relation to crude attempts at healing human maladies. Here in this land of strange things—this place of close juxtaposition of wildest superstitions and European palaces, there dwell, yet many millions who have not heard and do not know of a cure for sin. These are they who listen eagerly to the words of the messenger, about the love of Christ. Their poor weary hearts need a balm, for they are torn with sin and sorrow. They yearn for the rest of God, for they are weary. They cry for deliverance, for they are bound. They call for a cure, for they are filled with the hurt of soul malady.

The question is often asked, "Is there physical danger in going to those lands of disease, war, and the ravages of beasts?" Not if one stops at the edge of the jungles, and lives in plenty in well ordered homes. There is no danger for him who refuses to part the tall grass and go in where death lurks and danger lies. There are places in Africa, where one is as safe from dire disease and deadly serpents and roaring lions, as in London or Los Angeles. There are places where the Malta and Black Water Fever lay no one low. But there are places where "white man's grave" would be a true and typical epithet. There are whole areas, yet, where cannibalism is practiced, and the poisoned arrow is a common weapon. Those regions are off the beaten track, to be sure, and not easily accessible. But there is where dwell millions of men, for whom Christ died, and who wait for some bold messenger of the cross to come and tell them about One who can undo the heavy burdens and set them at liberty. There they are today, with their sores, superstitions and sins. If we as the Church of God, carry out the great commission, we must get to them. Some are going, thank God. A Methodist minister told us that his daughter and her husband are missionaries in the midst of a cannibal tribe; and that they have lately been subjected to grave danger by internal and the hate and fear of the foreigner. A few such brave spirits are undaunted by dangers that stalk forth both in daylight and the dark. There ought to be an army of such missionaries.

We have been lately asked, if we are intending to enter the dangerous places. Our answer is, We hope so. There is no reason why we should do that which cowards do; simply stay out of danger. Not that we desire to court danger. That would have no special merit. It is no mark of holiness to do a foolhardy thing. But, our eyes have caught the vision; and the valleys of the flame trees, the jungles, and mountain sides, and the myriads of Kraals, with their smoke-stained huts, beckon us on; not simply to go and see, nor to merely have something to tell about, but to carry the glad news of complete and lasting deliverance from the guilt, stain, and inbeing of sin. Will you now pray that the Lord will give us souls.

REPORT.

I am glad to say that God still lives. Some think that the days of revivals are over, but the old-time fire is burning and the world is hungry for a gospel that will save.

I have been on the go for God, and in all my twenty years as an evangelist, without a break, he was never nearer than now. It is so great to know that our sins are forgiven and the blood of Jesus covers our soul.

At this writing I am with our pastor, Rev. M. R. Bishop, in Iola, Kan. My next meeting will be with our pastor, L. T. Corlett, of First Church, Dallas.

I am for everything that is right and against everything that is wrong. I want to live holy, be sane, and stay in the middle of the road.

Lum Jones, Evangelist.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S GOSPEL LEAGUE.

Five representatives from Asbury just returned from the Young People's Gospel League, held at Marion College, Marion, Ind. There were eight schools represented from various points over the country, some eight hundred miles apart. But distance was no consideration, for the inspiration given by the Holy Spirit remunerated all who attended. God truly was present shedding his blessing on not only the delegates but also the visitors.

The Y. P. G. L. sponsors the only gathering at which representatives of Holiness forces among young people may meet for a time of united planning, discussion and fellowship. Rev. Paul Rees, evangelist; Alma E. Doering, Secretary of the Un-evangelized Tribes Mission (Africa); Prof. Henry A. West, Acting President of Marion College; and Dr. Robert L. Stuart, President of Taylor University, were the speakers of unusual ability who brought messages of great value to the convention. Love feasts, discussion groups and business sessions completed a well-rounded program of Christian interest.

To those who are unfamiliar with the Y. P. G. L., it is an undenominational organization of young people, with chapter organizations in colleges, training schools, camp meetings and local communities. It stands squarely for Scriptural Holiness. It purposes to bind Holiness groups together into a strengthening unity and to carry a message to others, through the encouraged activities of its members.

The chairman of the convention stressed that in this day of sin and doubt that young people should be more dogmatic concerning Holiness. It is a clear, definite, experience taught by the Scriptures. I am sure that all who attended the convention have gone back to their schools and communities to be truer than ever to Holiness. I am praising God for the privilege of having been present at this gathering where sanctification was upheld. Praise the Lord. Pray for the Y. P. G. L.

Yours in His service,
Clayton S. Luce.

CONTINUES IN EVANGELISTIC WORK.

Let all my friends take note of the fact that I am still engaged in the evangelistic field. It is the work to which the Lord called me and in which he has signally blessed and honored my ministry in the salvation of a multitude of souls. It is necessary as never before to definitely press the distinctive work of genuine evangelism. The church must be revived in order to stand the storm and hold its own in this present evil age.

It was our privilege recently to address the Methodist Preachers' Meeting in Washington, D. C., on the subject of Evangelism. God greatly honored the message. A number of our evangelists and Asbury men happened to be in the audience, among them were Rev. Warner P. Davis, pastor of the Wilmore Church; Rev. John Owen, well-known evangelist; Rev. J. R. Parker, splendid young evangelist; Rev. Barnes, pastor; Rev. Nelson, pastor. Dr. Clarence True Wilson and Deets Pickett were both present. The Washington District is waking up on the question of evangelism. It looks like a better day is dawning for the cause. The writer is ready to spend and to be spent in red-hot revival campaigns. Let no one for a moment think that he has forsaken the favorite field of evangelism. It is first, last and all the time.

Let us rally and pray for God to sweep the nation with a great revival wave. While it is difficult to reach the masses yet the truth is mighty and will prevail. On with the revival!

Yours for evangelism,
Andrew Johnson.

BRADFORD, PENNSYLVANIA.

First Wesleyan Methodist Church in this city was the scene of a real religious awakening during the month of October. Rev. George Bennard, noted hymn writer and evangelist, of Hermosa Beach, Calif., was the evangelist from October 11th to 25th. Rev. David Reed, of Albion, Mich., had charge of the daily young people's meetings at the church which often ran to nearly two hundred in attendance. Both these men spoke in the various schools over the city during their stay in Bradford. The music was ably directed by Miles Wagner of this city, assisted by Mrs. Wagner at the piano and Mrs. Armstrong at the organ.

The writer is finishing his tenth year as pastor here and it is our opinion, as well as many other folks, that this has been one of the very best meetings held in our church and in our city during the past decade. More backsliders were dug up and dug out during this series than we have ever seen reached in any one meeting before. Often the long altar was lined with earnest seekers after God. From three to five group prayer meetings were on every day all over the city during the campaign. This surely helped much in the meetings. We moved our meetings the last Sunday afternoon to the large First Presbyterian Church. That place was filled with folks. It was a delight to see the entire front of that staid church lined with seekers after God.

George Bennard is one of the sanest, most deeply spiritual men we have ever known. We have never met a man truer to the doctrine of Bible holiness than he. Also, he leaves the church ready for work instead of requiring the pastor to take a year fixing things up that the evangelist tore to pieces. A number have joined the church and now one month after the meetings, the revival is still going.

Rev. C. I. Armstrong, Pastor.

REVIVAL AT HICKORY, NORTH CAROLINA.

We have just closed a revival at the Wesleyan Methodist Church, Hickory, N. C., which we enjoyed very much. There were quite a number at the altar during the meeting either to be saved, sanctified or reclaimed. We enjoyed our stay of nearly two weeks among these good people. We had a midnight prayer meeting at the church one night, and a man drove eight or nine miles from the country to be with us. We had a good time. This man's wife was healed of tonsillitis during the meeting and did some faithful work in the congregation and at the altar. She is a most wonderful pray-er.

Rev. William J. McDaniel is pastor, and a most congenial man to work with. We dearly love him. He is known all over the country by the name of "June." People who knew him years ago and know him now have great confidence in him. God graciously saved him from drunkenness, sanctified him wholly, and has made of him a wonderful preacher of full salvation. He fought in the World War and helped to break the Hinderburg line. It is very marvelous how he fought in this dreadful war and came out without a scratch. God was good to him. He told me more about the war than any soldier I ever talked to. May God bless June McDaniel and make of him a great soul-winner; in fact, he is almost a modern miracle of divine grace. He is a great pray-er. God can use any man who wrestles mightily in prayer. We need real pray-ers now as never before, it seems to me. If we would lay as much emphasis on "kneology" as we do theory I'm sure we would go far ahead of what we are now accomplishing. Great revivals would break out throughout the land. God give us mighty men and women in prayer.

Yours in soul-winning,
Rev. Walter E. Isenhour.

REPORT OF BECK BROTHERS.

We have just closed a great revival in the courthouse at Campbellsville, Ky., where twenty-seven souls prayed through to God. Crowds and interest increased until the last service, many being turned away, while all standing room was taken. This was our fourth meeting in this little city, two being in the tent and two in the courthouse. We had some fine services at the jail; three men prayed through there. The different denominations stood by the old-time gospel and prayed and worked for souls. Some got the blessing of holiness; some of the leading Methodists; one fine Baptist lady consecrated all and God filled her with the Holy Ghost.

We did not have the backing of any church or minister but, thank God, the Holy Ghost is our backer and guide. What is needed is Spirit-filled men to preach. We had as many as 1500 people at a service, with two other revivals on in the city. The world is starving to death to hear holiness preached. A. E. Minnick, of Bowling Green, Ky., was with us and did some wonderful preaching. God has been good to us this year. We hope to have a tent to seat 2000 people next year.

Happy in the service of the Savior,
A. S. Beck.

in this same epistle in direct connection with what he has said above, with the following: "Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things?"

To show that the apostle is by no means intimating that the Lord is not coming, but is explaining that certain things must transpire before his appearing, he goes forward in the same chapter and says: "And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming; even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness in them that perish; because they receive not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusions, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believe not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

In this part of Paul's epistle to the Thessalonians he is comforting his people, teaching them patience, assuring them that before Christ comes there will be a falling away, a spiritual decadence. He is pointing out that there will arise the man of sin, spoken of in the scriptures, a great deceiver of the people, and that those who do not love the truth will be deceived and lost.

Most people, whether Christians or not, will certainly agree that we are living in perilous times. What statesman, philosopher, poet, or thinker will undertake to forecast with any certainty, the immediate, or more distant future. The world is in turmoil and distress. There is a fearful decadence of spiritual life. False teachers are on every hand. It is generally admitted that we are in great need of a spiritual awakening, that there is absolute necessity of a higher standard of morals, and a very general restoration of confidence among men in the business world. What person now possessed of any considerable sum or money, feels absolutely secure in depositing that money in a bank, or investing it in stocks, bonds or real estate. There is a sense of uneasiness and insecurity prevailing, and many thoughtful people believe we are approaching some tremendous event in the history of the world. They are quoting thoughtfully the words of Christ found in Luke 21, beginning with 24th verse: "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are come upon the earth: for the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh. And he spake to them a parable; behold the figtree, and all the trees; when they shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

To many, it appears that we are near the close of the Gentile age. The crucifying of Christ marked the close of the Hebrew age. The present Christian church is composed of Gentiles. The denial of the virgin birth, God-head, sacrificial death and resurrection of Jesus Christ is a recrucifixion of Christ. This thing is going on in a most startling fashion in the church today. Say what you will, modernism is a dominating power and influence in Protestantism. Before God, the modernists who deny the deity of Jesus, are just as wicked, if not more so, than the Jews who crucified Jesus.

Let the Lord's people remember that there is to be a catching away of the Bride of Christ before the tremendous tribulation that will characterize the end of this age; and let all who love his appearing, see to it that they have on their wedding garments of heart purity, and the oil in the vessels and lamps. The vessel, no doubt, is the heart, and the oil signifies the Holy Spirit.

With all the prophets, Christ and the apostles have to say with reference to his second coming, it certainly appears that it is not a subject for the ridicule and sarcasm so characteristic in the church in the times in which we are living. Jesus taught that he would come, that he would appear suddenly, and that the unprepared would be filled with horror. Think of the popular, pampered pastor, with his great audience of worldly people who sneer at the idea of a sanctified heart, or a holy life, running with the world and finding their pleasures with the unregenerated. They attend church on Sabbath, their pastor stands up, ridicules the idea of the inspiration of the Scriptures, of the virgin birth of Christ, of the blood atonement, of the second coming of the Lord. He pronounces the benediction, his people gather about him and flatter him; they move out in their finery, glittering gold and flashing diamonds in front of the church, plan for their bridge parties, Sunday excursions, pageants, and various methods of gratifying their carnal natures, and at once, quick as a lightning flash, the heavens open, the trump of God shakes the earth, and Jesus appears with angels and saints in a glory that eclipses the light of the sun—What consternation! THINK ON THESE THINGS! And while you work and wait—WATCH!

AN OVERSIGHT.

What I mean is, that in writing up the camp meeting at Pentecostal Park, I forgot to mention the fact that Dr. Wimberly was with us a few days and preached twice; both sermons were good; one of them was a remarkable message on the atonement Christ made for the sins of the human race. Bro. Wimberly has many friends in and about Glasgow who always give him a glad welcome.

THE FATHERS OF OLD TIME.

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

Someone in speaking of the heroes mentioned in the 11th chapter of Hebrews, calls them "The Fathers of Old Time." One cannot read this list of Old Testament worthies without receiving an inspiration to their faith, and a deep desire to take hold of the promises of God with firmer grip and persistency than ever before.

Reader, if you are like the writer, you find it more difficult to withdraw from the crowd, to 'steal away with Jesus,' as the colored people so pathetically sing, than ever before. This has been denominated an 'age of speed,' and it well deserves this discrimination, for everything seems to be moving with lightning velocity, and if you cannot keep pace with the fast-moving procession you are not in the race.

But, as we contemplate and meditate upon the saints of old who have run the race that was set before them, although they did not have an automobile, nor an airship to travel in, yet they reached that City which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God, in due time. We are moving too rapidly to halt at the secret place of prayer. We almost forget to grace our meals, as there is some important duty awaiting us just after we are through eating. We are kept up so late at night with the crowding, pressing duties of the day that we languidly kneel for a few moments of prayer before retiring. In the morning the phone is calling us to urgent tasks, and we hardly have time to think of, much less perform that act of morning worship.

Just so the world moves on, and we, if we are not very careful, will move with it. much more rapidly than it is best for us to go. "Take time to be holy," is an injunction that we would do well to heed at this fast-moving period in the world's history. God is a jealous God, and wants us to give him the first golden moments of our new days. These are fast days, days full of happenings, startling and surprising, and if there ever was a time when we needed to halt on the threshold of each new day and ask for guidance and grace for that day, it is now.

I often think of that old saying, "We do not know what a day may bring forth." I have felt such strange and strong drawings to the mercy seat these last months, before I ventured upon the duties and responsibilities of each day, that I prayed that God would make me sufficient for whatever that day might hold for me. Sometimes there would come a strong test of my patience, a coolness from a friend, a misunderstanding where I least expected it, a disappointment that crushed the heart, a sad letter telling of the home-going of a loved one, of wrecks, accidents, sickness, and the many things that go into the making up of one's life.

O, if we only knew what was behind the curtain for us! How we should wait before him, who alone can make us sufficient for these things. I recall that one day I was subjected to very insulting remarks and accusations that I never dreamed would come my way, and which were wholly without foundation, and all the while the Lord kept me as calm and sweet in my soul as if I had just arisen from my secret prayer. I rejoiced for the grace that God let flow into my heart in this time of need, and really found out that I had that sufficiency that caused me to triumph in the moment of unexpected trial and false accusation.

What is the secret? That faith that we read of in Hebrews 11, of the worthies "who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens," and made their way to the city where they now rejoice before the throne, saying, "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, the whole earth is full of Thy glory." Are you a sufferer for Jesus' sake? In the language of Peter I would remind you to "commit the keeping of your soul to him in well doing, as unto a faithful Creator." "Be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer," for the end of all things is at hand.

Seeking to Entangle Uncle Sam.

We clip the following from the daily press. It is quite significant.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The League of Nations council delegates and Ambassador Charles G. Dawes were thunderstruck tonight by news of the Japanese occupation, twenty-four hours after Tokyo had assured the American government that Tsitsihar would not be taken.

That Tokyo had made such assurances was disclosed by a high authority here. The diplomats, astounded at Japan's breach of faith, are frantically laboring in an attempt to save a desperate situation.

League adherents are hoping that Washington is sufficiently angered to take prompt measures to show Japan that the nine-power treaty cannot be regarded as a scrap of paper, and the council is now ready to place itself completely in America's hands.

America's Only Hope.

Members state openly that America is the only hope of keeping balance in the Far East; that the United States understands the situation better than the Council, and that she is the only nation in the past that has been able to bring Japan to time.

It is plainly the duty of our government to use all the good offices, possible, to prevent a devastating war between China and Japan; at the same time, the administration at Washington should keep us clear of any sort of responsibility in the matter, more than to seek to be a peaceable peace-maker.

How gladly the European powers would be to see the U. S. A. mix up in this foreign quarrel. Note the statement in what we have quoted: "League adherents are hoping that Washington is sufficiently angered to take prompt measures to show Japan, etc." Exactly! How pleased the League would be to have Washington show Japan. Further, it states, "The Council is now ready to place itself completely in America's hands."

That would be fine, no doubt, to put the whole matter in America's hands and then back off. There has never been a time when this nation needed to keep more carefully free from entangling alliances with any foreign powers than at the present time. This country was unwise enough to go into one foreign war where she had no business. She gave her money by the billion, and her men by the million, and piled up a debt to stagger under for at least two generations. What thanks has she gotten! What good has she accomplished for it all!

Europe is in far worse condition every way than she was before the war. The Peace Council at the close of the World War cut, slashed and carved Europe up in a way to make peace impossible. The nations with whom we fought are the worst enemies we have in Europe. An American traveler will meet with far more consideration and courtesy in Germany than he will in the British Isles. Thousands of tourists and travelers will bear witness to this strange fact.

The indications are that there is a bloody struggle on for the Orient. Having done all she could to prevent war, let Europe keep out. But that is her business. Hands off for these United States! If we do any fighting over this unfortunate affair in Manchuria, it will be giving a well-deserved thrashing to any American who undertakes to draw us into a foreign conflict. Let all the people say Amen!

H. C. MORRISON.

WANTED: COLLEGES THAT ARE CHRISTIAN.

The Christian college has an alluring future. The goal of history is the mastery of the world by Jesus Christ. The leaders in this mastery must come out of the Christian college. They must be men and women who have learned to bear the cross of Christ in business, in politics, and in all the social order. These are the prophets and pioneers of a new heaven and a new earth.

No piecemeal Gospel will suffice for the needs of this tremendous age. Only a message of full redemption, which provides for man's emancipation from sin here and for his eternal life hereafter will be sufficiently virile to commend the thinking and acceptance of this generation which is so quick to appraise and weigh the various philosophies and interpretations of life's values. The twentieth century Gospel must continually emphasize the fact that an earnest, yea even reverent search for the truth is not high enough motive to keep society sweet and safe, but that the rule of righteousness in the world is imperative for its continuance.

Not flaming youth in a world of folly, but youth aflame for a world's redemption is the hope of our tomorrows. Unless young America today becomes definitely Christian America of tomorrow is definitely doomed. Youth is intense. We must catch and direct this passionate intensity in a new crusade for that service of humanity which can be rendered only through the fullest development of the intellect and the spiritual life.

May we not say "Truth and the finding of it; beauty and the making of it; goodness and the doing of it; are not these the great unifying pursuits?" All these are embodied in the wisdom of him who said, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." After all, there is only one alternative before us; it is "Christ or Chaos."

Bishop Moore's Great Revival.

We print below from the Alabama Christian Advocate, a report of a great revival held by Bishop Arthur J. Moore, in Huntington, W. Va. This is another splendid proof that the days of revivals have not passed. Great pity that just such revival meetings could not be held in all of our great city churches, in fact, in all of our churches, everywhere. If we believed in God for such revivals, and went to work for them as if the salvation of our souls depended upon the success of such revivals, we could have them.

"My dear Dr. Lazenby: In attempting to report the wonderful revival meeting just closed in Johnson Memorial Church under the leadership of Bishop Arthur J. Moore and Mr. Harry P. Armstrong, it might sound and seem somewhat of an overdone boosters' campaign to tell the plain truth. Bishop Moore captured the city, made plain and irresistible the Gospel, illumined the Word of God, awakened the public and the private conscience, and brought scores of men and women to a saving truth in the blessed Redeemer. For fifteen days Bishop Moore preached to from one thousand to twenty-five hundred people daily. 'He is the most toning up preacher I have ever listened to,' was the expression of a very wise man. 'I have never heard one who could make sin so hateful and at the same time religion so lovely,' was the verdict of another.

"The revival began one week after the closing of our conference, and I was on the jump from the conference session to the opening days of the meeting. The entire church caught step from the first service and marched to victory as one great army of the Lord. Our new conference year sets out from the mount of transfiguration and it is the united prayer of the pastor and this great church that we shall pass on to the valley of spiritual need. In the language of Bishop Moore it is the burning passion of my heart that we shall reach 'the least, the last and the lost' and bring them to Jesus Christ and his church. 'This is an age of power but not spiritual; this is an age of science but not Christian; and this is an age of daring but not Godlike. But it is the business of Christ and his Church to capture all the intelligence of the age and bring it to the will of God.' These words fell from the lips of a great preacher now living in this country, and it sounds the bugle note that should awaken the dead and send forth the living to mighty conquests for the Master.

"Bishop Darlington was here only a few days during the meeting on account of duties elsewhere, but his presence was a benediction and a great help to us all.

"It is always a joy to read the news of men and things down in Alabama. Every week some one comes along and says, 'I am from down in old Alabama,' and then this preacher takes the hand with a greater grip and we hold sweet communion for old time's sake.—With best wishes always, I am, cordially yours, J. W. Pearson, Huntington, W. Va."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

"I'M GLAD YOU'RE MY MOTHER"

Mother, did you see that woman ahead of us on Boston Avenue jerk her little girl along and tell her to 'shut up'?"

"Yes, I did, Jerry, and I felt sorry for both of them."

"For both of them? Why I just felt sorry for the little girl. I wonder what she was crying about?"

Jerry and his mother were resting on the lawn under their favorite tree after their trip to town. Although only six years old Jerry was learning to think reflectively.

Both were silent for a while, then the boy continued, "You wouldn't have done that way if something had bothered me until I cried, would you?"

"I hope not, Son, but a mother gets quite nervous and upset sometimes. What do you think I would have done?"

"Well, I believe you would have said, 'What's the trouble, Jerry boy, can't you stop crying and tell me about it?' Then I'd have tried to stop and if I couldn't you would have stood still and talked it out with me. Then everything would have been all right. But I'm too big to cry on the street though. . . . I'm sure glad you are my mother and that we can talk together the way we do."

"That is sweet of you, Little Man, and I appreciate it very much. I'm just as glad you are my son as you are that I am your mother."

"I guess we are chums," the boy said as he smiled up at his mother. Then he scampered off to meet his dog.

The mother sat wondering about the woman who had impressed her son so unfavorably. Why had she not tried to discover the source of the trouble and to remedy it instead of being so rude and unkind.

"Why, is it," she thought, "that mothers so often forget that children are persons and should be treated with respect? How humiliating to a little girl to be handled so roughly and spoken to so rudely in public!"

"I wonder if the child will ever feel like going to her and talking over her troubles. Will she tell her mother they are chums and she is glad to be her little girl? Why I'd almost have halted traffic, I believe, if necessary to see what caused the child to be unhappy enough to cry like that. Why didn't the woman lead her gently to one side where they could have discussed the matter quietly until unhappiness was erased from the sweet young face? Then this child, too, could have said, 'I'm glad you're my mother.'—Sel.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please move over and let a little girl from North Carolina join your happy band of boys and girls? As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print. I am fourteen years old, and in the ninth grade. Have brown eyes, dark hair, and have a dark complexion. I am very small for my age. My birthday is April 27. My middle name begins with M and ends in N, and has six letters. Can anyone guess it? Hazel A. Elam. I guess your middle name to be America. Beverly V. Droste. I guess your name to be Veranda. If I am right please write and tell me. I go to Sunday school and also League. We have prayer meeting each Thursday night. My father is the superintendent of our Sunday school. He gets The Pentecostal Herald, and I enjoy reading page ten. I want all the cousins to write me. Pauline W. McGimsey. Table Rock, N. C.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is about my fourth letter to you and the cousins, but nevertheless please slip over and let a Virginia girl join your happy band. I think we Virginians had better get to work and write more letters, for the other states are about to get ahead of us. I am a member of the Methodist E. Church, South, and I am trying to lead a Christian life. I have blue eyes, brown hair and light complexion; am five feet, one, weigh 97 pounds, and am fourteen years old. My birthday is July 7. Do I have a twin? If so, please write to me immediately. But write to me any way, twin or not. Now for some guess work. Answer the following: How many letters are there in the Bible? How many words are there in the Bible? How many verses and chapters are there? If any one can answer one of these let me know and I will give them some more to think about. Guess my middle name; it begins with P and ends with E, and has four letters in it. It means the "head." I hope Mr. Wastebasket has gone on a 'possum hunt when this arrives. Please, every one write and you will be answered from Varina P. Britt.

702 N. High St., Franklin, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let me join the happy group of boys and girls that I take a peek at every week? I know it's happy because they're nearly all living for God. I belong to the Free Methodist Church and am saved, sanctified, blessed and doing all I can do for the cause of our blessed Redeemer. A thirteen-year old is usually considered un-lucky, but I consider myself very lucky; with all the blessings the Lord gives me I guess I hadn't better say unlucky. Mr. W. B. is due at the Dentist's office to get his tooth filled now, isn't he?

Dorothy Stuve.
Humbird, Wis.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here I come with my first letter. My parents take The Herald and I enjoy reading our Boys and Girls' Page. I am nine years old, my birthday is Nov. 30. I am in the fifth grade. I go to Bean Vista school, I have brown hair and blue eyes. I was saved in Bro. Jessie Cosby's tent meeting at Rose Hill. We think he is a fine preacher. I will close, hoping to see my letter in print.

Opal C. Herrington.
Rt. 3, Cynthia, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We surely enjoy The Herald. I am not able to work and it is a lot of pleasure to me as there is such good advice and sound doctrine in the good sermons I read every week. If we all would take Dr. Morrison's advice it would be a better place to live and we could be sure of a home in heaven which means so much. I have a nagging pain in my chest all the time which keeps reminding me we do not live here forever. I would be glad to get well if it would be for God's glory as I have a little bright-eyed boy seven years of age. He is a sweet, lovable child in many ways. What causes me great sorrow and tears many times is I do not know what will become of him if I should die. But there is a life after death to those that love him. Will the Christians pray for little Robert and myself? I know God does answer prayer and I hope many will pray. Those that feel led to write to me please do so as letters help me lots. Days that I suffer and almost despair of everything a good letter means so much. May I hear from many? Please enclose stamp.

Mrs. Daisy Meador.
Rt. 7, Varnell, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I will write for my first time. I sure do enjoy reading The Herald. I don't have the opportunity of going to preaching and it gives me refreshing showers of divine grace to help me keep pressing on towards that celestiad city. I want every Christian that reads this to pray for me and my family that it will be an unbroken family around that great white throne.

Mrs. Ada Pridgen.
Rt. 1, Samson, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I haven't seen many letters from Louisiana so I decided I would write. I have light hair, light complexion, and weigh 70 pounds. I have gray eyes and am eleven years old. I like to go to school. My grandma takes The Herald and we get it from her. I like to read the letters and stories on page ten. I go to the Nazarene Sunday school every Sunday I can. I would like to hear from all the cousins who would care to write. I hope Mr. W. B. is milking the cows when my letter arrives.

Donald Boulet.
Indian Bayou, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie. Here I come again to you and the cousins. I can't say much but I do want to say that this surely is a wonderful Rio Grande Valley I live in. Ruth Jones, I guess your first name to be Sally. Am I right? Ina Zell, you guessed my middle name right. It is Jeanne. Please, cousins, write to me. I will answer all letters I receive. Oh! look who's coming! It is Mr. W. B., and he looks very hungry, so I will close.

Reba Jeanne Eby.

1102 E. Filmore, Harlingen, Tex.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Since this is my first letter to The Herald, I would like very much to see it in print. I am a little girl eleven years old. I have light hair, gray eyes and fair complexion. I am in the fifth grade and my teacher is Miss M. Falk. I have two brothers and two sisters. I hope Mr. W. B. is out swimming when my letter arrives so he will not eat it up. We don't get The Herald, but my Aunt gives it to us and I enjoy reading the Children's Page. I go to Sunday school every Sunday I can. I would like to hear from all cousins that would care to write. I hope that this letter will reach you in the very best of health.

Lillian Boulet.
Indian Bayou, La.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I want to join your happy Christian band of boys and girls. I am a little girl ten years old. I like to read The Pentecostal Herald, especially page ten. I go to the Cripple school. We get The Herald from our neighbor, Rev. W. T. Currie. I have three brothers younger than myself. Father died five years ago. Mother works every day. We live with our grandpa and grandma. We go to the Wesley M. E. Church. My middle name has six letters and starts with V and ends with R. I love Jesus better day by day. I should like to hear from any of the boys and girls, and will try to answer each letter.

Frances Osborn.

1614 W. 30th St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I want to thank the Editor for not letting Mr. W. B. get hold of my other letters. I received several nice letters and tracts to read as I do so enjoy reading and writing. Sometimes the time goes slow, not being able to walk, but Jesus helps me to smile even when things go wrong. I certainly enjoy reading page ten, to see so many nice testimonies for what Jesus has done for all who would let him. We know not how soon Jesus may come. Don't delay; if Jesus calls, say yes to the Spirit and defeat the devil as he will frame all kinds of excuses. Get your eyes on Jesus, one who is able to save and keep. I know what he has done for me he can do for others. By his grace I am going all the way with him and make heaven my home. Pray for me to be faithful.

F. C. Ritchie.
Heuvelton, N. Y.

Dear Annt Bettie: Here I come after an absence of several months. I trust I shall receive admittance. I am just the same little Kentucky girl that lived in Campton last fall, and Aunt Bettie was kind enough to print two letters for me. I am here to thank all of you cousins for writing. I am so sorry I did not get to answer all the letters. I am not living in town but on a farm. I enjoy it so much more. It surely is wonderful to live where we can enjoy the beauties of God. I am not in school this year because I was not strong enough to go. Yes, I get lonesome and blue sometimes. Dear saved cousins, let us pray much for God's help in this great fight for prohibition; we cannot do anything without his help. Shame on the men that want open saloons for their boys to meet their doom. I think everyone of them should read Ten Nights in a Barroom. The enemy is busy trying to tear down the work of the Lord, the Bible and the faith of our fathers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XI.—December 13, 1931.

Subject.—John's Vision on Patmos.
Rev. 1:4-18.

Golden Text.—I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth. Rev. 1:17, 18.

Time.—Not definitely known. Probably about A. D. 95.

Place.—The vision was given on Patmos; but no one knows where the book was written. However, it is supposed to have been written on that island.

Introduction.—The title of this book is a bit mystifying. The oldest Greek Testament to which I have access calls it A Revelation of John, but adds this foot note: A Revelation of John the Theologian. This footnote agrees with a later Greek text. King James' version says: The Revelation of St. John the Divine. The puzzle comes in the first verse, where it is termed "The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass." The book is a revelation of things to come, given by Jesus Christ, and revealed to the Church through St. John as the human medium.

The third verse cuts diametrically across the notions of some modern critics who claim that the entire book is too full of mystery to be understood. If that be true, why have this verse in it: "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep the things which are written therein?" While I must confess that I understood little of its meaning as I heard my father read this book at family worship, it made an impression upon my mind that has remained through all the passing years, and has been a continual blessing to me. There is no question that "there is a general impression that the book of The Revelation is exceedingly hard to understand, because it is full of signs and symbols." But this does not prove that the book cannot be understood, since nearly all the symbols and signs used in it are explained therein, or in some other book in the Bible. If we are going to reject this book because it is full of mysteries, we shall have to reject nearly everything in the universe; for no matter in what direction we turn we are confronted with inexplicable mysteries. Bishop Atticus G. Haygood, what time he was college president, used to tell some of his students that he would explain for us the Divine Trinity, if we would explain to him the "how of the growth of a blade of grass." He declared one as great a mystery as the other. There are, no doubt, some things in The Revelation that will not be understood until they are fulfilled; but most of the book has been explained, and can be understood through the help of the Holy Spirit.

The Revelation is largely prophetic, the only book in the entire New Testament of that character; although there are many prophecies to be found in several of the other books. If one wishes to understand it, he must approach it with an open mind, and under the direct leadership of the Holy Ghost who inspired its writing. He will need some quite accurate information concerning signs and symbols. He must be familiar with much of the history of the Jews, of the Greeks, and of the Romans. The Spirit of God will not open this book to an ignoramus, nor to a dullard, nor to one who is too lazy to study for information. I recommend as a study on the meaning of this great book Dr. Iva D. Vennard's little exposition. That is quite clear, and within the reach of almost any one. Those wishing a more exhaustive study of the book might read Dr. Seiss's lectures on it. It will not do to read any and everything one may find concerning The Revelation; for much that has been written concerning it is mere trash—wild, and misleading. Be careful, is the best advice I can give.

Comments on the Lesson.

4. John to the seven churches which are in Asia.—The first three verses of this chapter constitute the prologue to the book. With the fourth verse begins John's salutation to the seven churches. Asia here refers to the western part of Asia Minor. Grace be unto you, and peace.—That sounds like one of St. Paul's salutations. John may have been reading his epistles. From him which is, and which was, and which is to come.—Here we have the Deity of our Lord clearly set forth; for such things cannot be said about any finite being. The seven Spirits.—Seven is a symbolic number signifying perfect. The expression means the Holy Spirit which proceeds from the Father and the Son.

5. And from Jesus Christ.—The three persons of the Trinity are clearly revealed here. The word Trinity (Triunity) is not a Bible term for the Godhead; but the fact is plainly set forth. The faithful witness.—The word for witness in the New Testament is martyrs, whence we get our word martyr. Primarily it means simply a witness; but as the years passed, and many were dying for their testimony, it came to take on the modern import. The first begotten of the dead.—The Revised Version is far better: "The firstborn of the dead." The word begotten is misleading. Jesus raised several persons to life from the dead; but they were resurrected to physical life, and died again at a later date; but Jesus rose to die no more forever. His was the first resurrection of this type. Prince of the kings of the earth.—Ruler of the kings of the earth. (R. V.) Washed us from our sins in his own blood.—There are two readings here. The Revised Version says: "Loosed us from our sins by his own blood." I have lying before me two Greek versions, one using the word for wash and the other the word for loose. By is much better than in.

6. And he made us to be a kingdom, to be priests unto his God and Father. (R. V.)—This tracts the original far closer than the King James Version. But I see no reason for the use of to be. As the black face show, to be has been added by the translators. The two little words change the tense of the passage to the future; but the work has already been done. To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.—It is a mystery how any one in his senses can read such words as these, and then deny the Deity of our Lord, while pretending to believe the Bible. If Jesus is not God, John was guilty of rank idolatry while penning these words of praise and worship.

7. Behold.—An interjection calling attention to something. He cometh with clouds.—I do not think that this refers to his return for the Rapture of the Church, but to his coming, after the Marriage Supper, with myriads of his saints, to begin the millennial reign. Every eye shall see him.—If I am not mistaken the full sweep of this verse takes in the Millennium and the final judgment. The wailing of the kindreds of the earth points in that direction. The words are big with meaning. Even so, Amen.—That expression looks as though it might have been interjected by the apostle just as the Master was about to speak.

8. I am Alpha and Omega.—The first and the last letters of the Greek language. The following clause explains their meaning, "The beginning and the ending," yesterday, today, and forever. Which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty.—If these words from the lips of Jesus Christ do not forever stamp him as very and eternal Deity, then words have no meaning. Were he not God, such language would mark him as the arch-impostor of all the ages.

9. The isle that is called Patmos.—Situating south-west of Asia Minor. John was banished to this lonely island because of his loyalty to Jesus Christ. It was severe punishment; but it gave us this wonderful book. Life in a prison is not altogether bad. Paul wrote some of his best epistles while chained to a soldier in Rome; and Pilgrim's Progress came out of John Bunyan's jail cell when he was locked up for preaching the word of God.

10. I was in the Spirit.—In communion with the Holy Spirit. On the Lord's day.—The day of the week on which our Lord rose from the dead—our Sunday. This expression is quite different in meaning from that used in 1 Cor. 1:8, "The day of the Lord," the time when he shall come to set up his kingdom on earth, and to judge the quick and the dead.

11. A great voice, as of a trumpet.—Jesus Christ was speaking to him. Again Jesus states that he is Alpha and Omega. What thou seest write in a book, and send it unto the seven churches which are in Asia.—Daniel was commanded to seal up his vision; but John must make his public. We have the names of these seven churches; but there comes a serious interpretation of the passage that concerns them. No doubt each message went direct to the church for which it was intended; but good expositors tell us that these churches are types of seven ages of the Church at large, and that we are now in the Laodicean period of lukewarmness. The charge certainly fits the day in the which we are now living. Is this the last age?

12. I turned to see the voice.—Voice put for the speaker. I saw seven golden candlesticks.—Lampstands is better. You will learn from the last verse of the chapter that the golden lampstands were the seven churches to which John was to write.

13. One like unto the Son of Man.—I shall attempt to give no commentary on this matchless description of our Lord Jesus Christ as John saw him in his heavenly glory. Words from me would only blur the picture.

16. In his right hand seven stars.—In verse twenty we learn that the seven stars were the angels, or ministers, of the seven churches.

Light on the Child's Path

BY Wm. A. BIXLER

Knowing that pictures shown to young children and stories told to them make a strong impression, the author was very careful in making a selection that will leave the child with better thoughts, higher ideals, and nobler motives. Many of the pictures show children and older people doing good deeds, being kind and considerate to birds, animals, and pets, and showing respect to the aged, blind, and unfortunate.

There are pictures of Mother, home, birds, animals, pets, childhood amusements, children praying, the blind girl, cripple boy, by the seashore, visiting Grandma, the poor old man, lost in the snow, the shepherds, the Christ-child, Christ's life and the peace he gave, and many others. Written in simple language. No fairy stories or fiction. 93 pictures. 52 chapters. 50 cents.

Men Who Played The Game

BY ARCHER WALLACE

Archer Wallace has selected the unusual stories of fifteen men who made good by playing the game and never recognizing the possibility of defeat. Apart from the interesting circumstances surrounding the lives of Toyohiko Kagawa, Chinese Gordon, Golden Rule Nash, and the others, there is the still more interesting fact that these men made a fascinating game of life, stayed by the rules, fought courageously but cleanly against all obstacles, and felt the joy of triumph in the end. As a book of genuine appeal to boys this one cannot be surpassed. Price $1.00.

Forgotten Children

BY JULIA FLEWELLYN

Nell, and Squinty, and Brandy, are waifs of the great city of New York. They are the "drift-wood of humanity"—thrown out on the streets—nobody's children—Forgotten Children.

She gives one thrills all the way through by her under the influence of her expected outbursts of savagery. Yet, under all the dirt and grime and seeming "good-for-nothingness" of these outcasts are tender chords waiting to be "touched by a loving heart, awakened by kindness." Something new for your young people. 189 pages. Price $1.00.

The Christ of the Mount

A WORKING PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE
BY E. STANLEY JONES

In this volume Dr. Jones interprets the Sermon on the Mount. Having written so vividly on the inner life, this most famous of religious writers has felt constrained to apply the Christian gospel to the difficult and disturbing conditions obtaining today. It has often been charged that the imperishable mountainside discourses of Jesus are superb ethical precepts, but impracticable idealism. Doctor Jones insists the Sermon on the Mount can be and should be applied to the actual everyday living of the Christian. Price, net, $1.50, postpaid.

LOVE'S TRANSFORMING POWER.

By The Editor.

THE Master in seeking to draw out a confession from Peter said, "Lovest thou me more than these?" to which Peter responded, "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee." Jesus said unto him, "Feed my sheep."

I would rather be girded of God with power to preach the gospel that kills sin and makes alive to Christ and holiness, than to have all the honors and wealth of all the world. What a privilege to be an under shepherd of the great Shepherd!

A conscience void of offence, a clear witness that one's guilty past is under the atoning blood of Christ, that one's sins are lost in the depths of the sea of God's compassionate forgetfulness, is of more value than all the gold and silver, and gems of the world.

Weak and feeble as human nature is, yet man is capable of a very intense and unselfish love. This has often been manifested in the patriot, the friend, the father and the offspring. If Christ can get hold of a man and produce in him a hatred for sin and a longing for holiness, and transform the man into his own image, he will be able to kindle in that man a wondrous love and devotion for himself. This loving Christ with all the heart, is the thing most desirable on earth; all else will be well, or at least endurable, if one but loves Christ supremely.

Love is a great transforming power; it is at the root of all contentment and happiness. True love reconciles one to his or her lot in life. It is a real blessing and fruitful source of enjoyment, if one loves flowers, trees, brooks and birds; it warms and lifts the soul to love the domestic animals and fowls about the barn and yard. To love one's fellow beings is a great means of elevating one's character, but to love Jesus Christ is the highest good. Nothing is so elevating, refining and enlarging to the soul, as a genuine love for Jesus Christ. To have one's heart burning with a holy glow for the Savior, how blessed! What contentment and rest it brings to the soul. Let us seek, by every possible means, to increase our love for Christ.

Mr. Wesley's admonition was, "Let love not visit you as a transient guest, but be the constant temper of your soul. Let it pant in your heart, let it sparkle in your eyes; let it shine in all your actions, and let there be in your tongue the law of kindness." If this disposition be in us to abide, the commandments of the Lord will not seem grievous, but the natural outflow of the heart will be good will to all mankind and a longing desire to help them Godward. The same writer has said, "Love is long-suffering." "It endures not a few affronts, reproaches, injuries; but all things which God has pleased to permit either men or devils to inflict. It

THE MAKING OF THE MAN.

Ghandi would not wear pants when he was presented to King George. That little Hindu has got some sense. His bare legs and little spinning-wheel are a very large part of his capital. How impossible it would be for the poor, ignorant people of India to worship a man with breeches on. Ghandi's bare legs are just as important to him as Pastor Russell's big whiskers were to him. Shave Russell and pants Ghandi and they would be like Samson when his hair was cut, weak as other men. Ghandi's power over the Asiatic mind of the Hindus gives him power with Great Britain. If he should put on a suit of clothes, dispense with his spinning-wheel, and give up his faith in cow worship, he would lose cast with the Hindus, and Britain would brush him aside. Ghandi has a worthy cause, but woe be unto him and his cause if he should put on breeches. Ghandi's bare legs are just as important to him as Whiskey John Raskob's money is to him, and as Tammany Hall is to Liquor Al Smith. If Raskob should lose his money, and Tammany Hall could be sent to the penitentiary, Raskob and Al Smith would have no more influence with the Democratic Party than Ghandi would have in India with breeches on. It is wonderful about the psychology of big whiskers, bare legs, money, and Tammany Hall!

arms the soul with inviolable patience; not harsh, stoical patience, but yielding as the air, which, making no resistance to the stroke, receives no harm thereby." This love is not natural to the human heart, but must be shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. It is a gift which may be had for the asking; but the request must be accompanied by an unfaltering faith which rises above all the difficulties which might oppose us in our search for that love which emanates alone from the heart of God.

It has been truly said, "That the love of our neighbor is the only door out of the dungeon of self." The human heart is never at its best until it emerges from its own shell of self-congratulation and reaches out to help another. It has been suggested that the secret of success in public performances, either in speaking or playing upon an instrument, is to be oblivious of self; to lose self-consciousness. This was demonstrated in the life of Rubenstein who, on one occasion, was playing for a company of musicians, when they with one accord, began to applaud him at the close of a brilliant improvisation. "Friends," exclaimed the great musician, "Please do not applaud! Your applause directs my thoughts from the music to myself, and I cannot play." It is not difficult to see the application in this instance. If our attention is fastened upon ourselves the other fellow will be forgotten, and we will have missed the opportunity of rendering our sweetest music. Remember "love is the door from the dungeon of self."

"O Love that wilt not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in thee,
I give thee back the life I owe,
That in thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be."

Fortunate For Civilization

IT is fortunate for civilization that the people of China have not been a warlike people. That is one reason why the great warring pagans passed away and China remained and grew. The Babylonian Empire ceased to exist; the Russian Empire passed away, old Egypt was destroyed; these all drew the sword, and perished by the sword. Meanwhile China built a great wall, shutting her enemies out, and shutting herself in, living in peace with the world.

It will be unfortunate for any nation to drive China into militarism, provoke, harass and cuff her about; at length she will develop the spirit of resentment and will learn how to fight. There has been a very marked change in the Chinese soldiers within the last two decades. He no longer wears skirts and pigtailed; he evolves slowly, but he is a far better fighting man than he was a very few years ago. The wars among the Chinese people have been remarkably fine military schools, in which they have learned the use of modern implements of war. The quickest way to develop the soldier spirit is to provoke, mistreat, rob and abuse them until they come to have a deep-seated hatred, drive them to anger, put them thinking of, and longing for revenge. Get fight in their blood and you create a psychology that will give birth to soldiers; babies will be born with the powers of military geniuses, leaders will rise up who will know how to organize, train and lead men to battle and to victory. It would be the part of wisdom for those who would impose upon China to remember that there is a hereafter.

In 1870 Germany marched triumphantly into France; in 1918 France marched victoriously into Germany. Forty-eight years is not such a long period of time, but it is long enough for remarkable changes to take place. There are fifty millions of young Chinese mad today who will make fine soldiers within a decade from now. Put hatred deep into them, feed them on the spirit of revenge, make them drunk with a determination to pay their enemies back with compound interest, and woe be to those who have humiliated and robbed them.

The Chinese have remarkable intellectual powers, great physical strength and patient persistence and endurance. It is the height of folly to make a warlike people out of them; drive them to training, and arm ten, twenty, thirty, forty or fifty millions of soldiers with all the modern implements of war, with thousands of airplanes and skillful pilots, and they can blow certain islands into the sea.

The world is like a floating island, and as sure as we anchor to it we shall be carried away by it.

NOTES ON VARIOUS THEMES.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

When I was in Edinburgh, Scotland, one day I went down to the house of John Knox and had the pleasure of seeing some wonderful pictures, books and other mementoes of this great man of Protestantism, John Knox! What a preacher he was, and what a man of prayer! How he believed his Bible! He was not like so many weak-kneed, doubting, Protestant ministers of today who do not know what they believe, or where they stand. The following story tells of a struggle he had with Satan up to the last. He said:

"I have before this sustained many assaults from Satan, but at this time that roaring lion hath most furiously attacked me and put forth all his strength that he might devour and make an end of me at once. Often before hath he placed my sins before my eyes, often tempted me to despair; often has he endeavored to entangle me with the allurements of the world; but these weapons being broken by the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, he could accomplish nothing. But now he has attacked me in another way; for the cunning serpent has endeavored to persuade me that I have merited Heaven itself and a blessed immortality by the faithful discharge of the ministerial office committed to me. But blessed be God who suggested to me those passages of Scripture by which I was able to grapple with him and extinguish his fiery dart! Among these Scriptures were these, 'What hast thou which thou hast not received?' and, 'Not I, but the grace of God in me.' Being thus vanquished, Satan went away; wherefore I give thanks to my God by Jesus Christ who was pleased to grant me the victory."

John Knox was firmly persuaded that this was Satan's last assault, and so it proved. Again he said: "These last two nights I have been in meditation on the kirk (Church) of God, the spouse of Jesus Christ, despised of the world, but precious in His sight. I have called to God for her, and committed her to her spouse, Jesus Christ. I have been fighting against Satan who is ever ready to assault; yea, I have fought against spiritual wickedness in heavenly places and have prevailed. I have been in Heaven and have possession, and I have tasted the heavenly joys, where presently I am."

When the time of his departure came, after commending his wife and children to the care of a friend, and listening to some of his favorite Scriptures, including the seventeenth chapter of John where he "first cast anchor," he quietly entered the heaven of eternal rest, without pain or any distress of mind, as God had shown him.

II.

In these days when they write so much about John Wesley it is a matter of amazement that the Methodist preachers do not return to the theology of John Wesley which wrought such wonders in England in the Eighteenth Century. I have been reading, lately, John Wesley's Journals. What a rich treasure house! What a theology is found there, and what experiences are related of preaching and soul winning. Listen to Wesley on some important matters:

"There is no satisfaction for sin but that which Christ has made by his precious blood."

"Do you mean by an enthusiast," he asks of one who had attacked his doctrine, "one who maintains the antiquated doctrines of the new birth and justification by faith? Then I am an enthusiast." John Wesley was not ashamed to stand by the old-time "antiquated" religion. He writes: "But if Methodism, as its opposers pretend, be a 'new discovery in religion,' this is a grievous mistake; we pretend to no such thing. We aver it is the one old religion; as old as the Reformation, as old as Christianity; as old as Moses, as old as Adam."

"The whole ingredients of Methodism, so-called, have been discovered in print over and over; and they are enrolled in a public register, the Bible, from which we extracted them at first."

"To sum up the whole," writes Wesley, "the whole ingredients of our religion are love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, fidelity, meekness, temperance; against these I think there is no law; and therefore, I still apprehend they may be tolerated, at least in a Christian country."

"While a poor woman was speaking a few artless words out of the fulness of her heart, a fire kindled and ran as flame among the stubble through the hearts of almost all that heard. So when God is pleased to work it matters not how weak or how mean the instrument."

"All this week," Wesley wrote, "I endeavored to confirm those who had been shaken as to the important doctrine of Christian Perfection, either by its wild defenders or wise opposers who much availed themselves of that wildness. It must needs be that such offences come; but woe unto him by whom the offence cometh."

"After deep conviction of inbred sin of their total fall from God, they have been so filled with faith and love (and generally in a moment) that sin vanished and they found from that time, no pride, anger, desire, or unbelief. . . . Now whether we know this destruction or suspension of sin, it is a glorious work of God, such a work we never saw in these kingdoms before."

III.

In these days of big salaries and luxuries (even in poor times) it is well to think of the simplicity of John Wesley touching personal and practical religion.

John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, was a generous soul. The only use he had for money was to give it away. "I gain all I can," he wrote, "not wasting anything—not a sheet of paper, not a cup of water." When his income was 30 pounds a year he lived on 28 pounds and gave away two pounds. When it reached 60 pounds, and even 120 pounds, he still lived on 28 pounds, and gave away the balance. A wealthy lady left him 1000 pounds in her will, and he gave it all away, by fifties and hundreds, counting himself simply "God's steward for the poor." In later years when he might have amassed a fortune by the sale of his books, he lived on a small amount and gave the rest away. When eighty years of age, he tramped through the streets of London that he might save money to distribute among the poor. For years he gave away 1000 pounds annually, and taken as a whole, he gave away not less than 30,000 pounds during his life.

Kagawa, of Japan, and Gandhi, of India, are both notable examples of self-abnegation and sacrifice for the sake of their people. It is shocking, sometimes, to observe the hold that money has on the ministry. Grades and salaries are of greater import to some preachers than the salvation of souls. No wonder the work of God does not prosper more in their hands. This money love and craze has done intolerable hurt to evangelism, also putting price upon evangelism has robbed it of its purity and power.

IV.

They have a great habit in South America of calling their streets, and sometimes the towns, by the dates of important events in their history. One of the towns in Argentina where I preached was called "9th July." Over across the street from where I write this, in Sao Carlos, Brazil, the sign tells me that the name of the street is "7th September." They commemorate these great events in many ways. Now I notice some of the prophets record their religious experiences in a very definite manner. Read Ezekiel 1:1-3, and he tells us of a notable experience he had when (1) the Heavens were opened, (2) He saw visions of God, (3) The Word of God came expressly to him, (4) The Hand of the Lord was upon him, and this happened in the 30th year, fourth month, fifth day of the month. Isaiah's baptism of fire occurred the year that Uzziah died. Bishop McConnell, who turns everything into philosophy, said, "In Methodist theological usage, conversion is supposed to lead us to sanctification—and the present-day Methodist aim, according to the Delaware program, is that the Christian is to sanctify everything he gets his hands on."

One writer says, "This amounts to a gratuitous double slur on two fundamental teachings of the Gospel and on which the Protestant Reformation and Methodism were founded."

It is undoubtedly true that the leaders who broaden the Wesleyan doctrine of Sanctification so as to include everything, never know the joy of leading a soul over into the definite experience of sanctifying grace. They socialize everything and rob it of its personal application to personal experience. Speaking of the Delaware Conference, judging by the make-up of its speakers as I read about it in one of the Advocates, there was not much likelihood of an altar service there with anybody seeking either conversion or sanctification because the speakers were all men of decidedly modernistic doctrines, some of them Unitarians and the majority of them broad men of Methodism who are trying their utmost to broaden the narrow way. The way of modern Methodism is to call for Conferences, not mourners. When we had the mourner's bench revivals were the order of the day and Methodism grew and multiplied. In these days our leaders are trying to make Corinthians out of us; they want us to get saved by philosophy, not by repentance and faith. More books are published now on the philosophical way of finding God than ever and as a result nobody is finding God. They are lost in unbelief!

V.

John Wesley was a great revivalist and truly a teacher sent from God to reveal to the Church the deeper things of God. What wise words are these of Wesley on Justification; he says:

"I believe that three things must go together in our justification: upon God's part, his great mercy and grace; upon Christ's part, the satisfaction of God's justice by offering his body and shedding his blood; upon our part, true and living faith in the merits of Jesus Christ. So, in justification there is not only God's mercy and grace, but his justice also. And so the grace of God does not shut out the righteousness of God in our justification, but only the righteousness of man, that is, the righteousness of our works."

"The very foundation of Christianity is that a man can merit nothing from God; that we are justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ; not for any works of our deservings, but by faith in the blood of the covenant! But papists hold, that a man may by his works merit or deserve eternal life; and that we are justified, not by faith in Christ alone, but by faith and works together. This doctrine strikes at the root of the Christian faith, the only foundation of true religion."

How different is the teaching of the modern pulpit from Wesley's on the Sin question!

How can I be cured of the sin-plague? is the universal inquiry. The answer is not uniform, coming as it does, from the darkened mind of man.

"Develop him," argues the materialist.

"Let him alone," growls the atheist.

"Worship him," suggests the pantheist.

"Polish him," adviseth the broad school man.

"Church him," shrieks the ritualist.

But what says the Word of God? "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

PART II.

RADIO in its present working developments, is one of the many subtle forces of electricity. We are learning something of its marvelous powers; yet no scientist can explain what it is; the knowledge of its manifestations are being discovered, and its powers harnessed, but human knowledge can go no further. It is a mystery as unfathomable as life; life remains an essence of the Infinite and the Absolute. Even Mr. Edison did not know exactly what electricity is. We once heard this line of reasoning: the lowest number of vibrations which will produce a tone is twenty-seven per second. Tone continues to reach a higher pitch as vibrations increase. The highest number of vibration discernable to the human ear are about fifty thousand per second—said to be the voice of a bat. Beyond that there is heat—then light—then electricity—then, last—Life. But like all other analysis into the realm of the supernatural—it is only conjecture. We do know that the strange force, which is called electricity, exists, and those who are in a position to speak, say we have scarcely touched the circumference of its possibilities.

The existence of this strange force, or substance, had been observed by scientific minds centuries before Christ. Thales of Miletus, 640 B. C., caught the first gleams of it by means of friction, and some others through the years, also record their observations. But not until the 16th century did scientists arrive at tangible facts about electricity, and then in a very crude manner. Robert Boyle and Sir Isaac Newton made some substantial contributions to its development. Stephen Gray and Hawksbee early in the 18th century added much to the fund of knowledge; but it was Benjamin Franklin in 1750 that discovered the big fact that the lightning which illuminated the heavens, followed by roaring thunders, was the very thing the scientists had been seeking for more than two thousand years. With his kite experiment Franklin found out that the earth was a gigantic magnet, affecting tremendously the discharges of lightning. Whereupon, lightning rods for the purpose of conducting bolts from buildings into the earth came into general use following his discoveries.

So the experiments continued with renewed interest. In 1832 B. F. Morse invented the apparatus for sending electric discharges through wires, making dots and dashes, and with that, the Morse code was worked out, which gave to the world telegraphy—meaning to write at the end. Then the astonished world appropriated this new method of communication, with an ever increasing distance; it soon became known, that with sufficient storage batteries and wires distance did not affect the accurate sending of messages. Telegraphy became a fixture in world activities.

The experiments continued until in 1875 Alexander Graham Bell discovered, that through the medium of wires, not only dots and dashes could be sent, but also the human voice. From the beginning of crude, unsatisfactory mechanism there has been developed the telephone, which also continues in its use without regard to distance. Here the world gasped again. Today the telephone is a fixture in the homes of the nation, and so common that no one ever thinks of it any more as belonging to the marvels of the age.

Then, as the experiments continued through fifteen years after the telephone became a practical asset, Mr. Marconi devised an instrument which discharged currents of lightning between positive and negative poles, which by so doing sent impulses, or waves through the air, as dots and dashes without the medium of wires. Then, we had the Wireless Telegraphy which gave the world a decided shock, and then it was felt, that the last word had been said in world wonders. So now, wireless telegraphy has put both sea and land in instantaneous communication. No ocean liner can sail beyond the touch of all the world by wireless messages, traveling with the velocity of light—a rate of speed which will circle the globe seven times in a second.

Wireless telegraphy is a marvel of efficiency. In the early stages of its development a ship was sinking on the high seas; unknown to the world, but an obscure operator on this sinking vessel, sat calmly at his post and sent out S.O.S. calls for help. At once vessels steamed to the scene of the disaster, and one thousand passengers were rescued, and young Jack Bins became a world hero. Not until the story of this shipwreck became known, did the indifferent world appreciate the inestimable value of wireless telegraphy. There were five ships within reach of the Titanic when it was lost at sea. Of the five only one ship's wireless was functioning. Something seemed to be wrong with four of the vessel's wireless equipment; either the operators were loafing, or the instruments were out of repair. One vessel heard the S.O.S. call from the ill-fated Titanic. That one rushed to the scene and saved over seven hundred souls. Had the other vessels been in like condition, the greatest ocean disaster of the century could have been avoided, the sixteen hundred and sixty that were lost, could have been rescued.

A story was told which happened during the World War, and has been vouched for by good authority: a soldier boy had been shifted about from various camps and then overseas, until the parents lost communication with him. For months nothing had been heard of his whereabouts. The father became uneasy, fearing his son had been killed, and somehow the War Department could not furnish any certain information. Remember there were four millions in the service, scattered among the camps of America, in France, England, Belgium, and in other countries of the Orient. Detachments were in the Philippine Islands, China, and Hawaii. The father went to Washington, D. C., and interviewed his congressman, and they went across the Potomac to Arlington Heights, where the largest wireless station in the world is located. Through the congressman, access was gained to this government station. Then, this is what happened. A full description of the boy was sent out over the air—"world-wide whisper," as it were. It went bounding over land and sea amid four million soldier boys—many, perhaps having the same name. It was not long until a reply was received from far away Hawaii, a colonel from the city of Honolulu, "whispered" back that this Kentucky lad was in his regiment, safe and sound. The call was made, and a reply came back from ten thousand miles away in less than thirty minutes.

But now the great Italian genius, in co-operation with others, has discovered, as did Mr. Bell, concerning the human voice, that by means of powerful electrical discharging forces, the human voice may be sent over the same wave processes as the wireless telegraphy. This new achievement we call Radio, as there seems to be no better name for it; the "whisper," the actual intonation of the voice can be carried world-wide. In the presence of this marvelous fact—seems too wonderful to be fact—we sit dazed, overwhelmed, dumbfounded.

There is something akin to the uncanny about Radio; those who know the most about it do not hesitate to express a feeling that the doings of the Radio are even beyond the borderland of the supernatural; its mysteries are hidden from experts in such matters. The great laboratories are daily doing some unheard-of feat; they get results, but there the matter ends. As to the why and how, they are still in the dark. A feeling of awe steals over us—not because of the pleasure of music, or lectures—in fact, every kind of human accomplishments, which now may be given to the humblest citizen in the land—but the thing itself can scarce be taken in. Out from perhaps over one thousand broadcasting stations, there is every moment of the day and night, passing through the air sermons, lectures, grand operas, jazz, vaudeville, politics, and charity appeals. They are passing through buildings, piles of masonry, and mountains as though they were not there; passing in every direction with the speed of light. Why do they not mix and jumble—produce a chaos of harsh sounds? They do not, and somehow they are ever present. The same wire antenna that catches the grand opera in New York, by a delicate adjustment of the receiver, will get the prize fight in Chicago. Those messages not only "plunge through the thunder storms," but plunge through a half dozen mountain ranges: the Rockies, the Cascades, the Kentucky, and the Blue Ridge mountains—mountains far above the clouds, and timber line, and will penetrate by this invisible "whisper," without the loss of even a grace note, or a harmonic from the soft tones of a violin. Place a receiver on the top of Mt. Baker, then dig a tunnel under the same mountain, and tunnel any distance—place another receiver, and the same message will come bounding across land and sea, ten thousand feet high on the peak, or ten thousand feet under the mountain, without the loss of a word, or whispering tone. Yes, is it any wonder we feel that all this is beyond the borderland of the supernatural? Besides all that we have now accomplished, there still remains, so say the experts, undiscovered continents of possibilities waiting to serve us, or destroy us. Beyond all this what may we yet expect but a further unveiling or him who has so organized the elements for some mighty cause, yet to be revealed.

Your Opportunity

to share in one of the most wonderful "hard-time" purchases it has been our privilege to make. The book is the "Beautiful Story of the Bible," in simple language, containing nearly three hundred stories from the Holy Book. It is a fascinating, inspiring and instructive historical narrative of the Old and New Testament times, including the lives of the prophets, of the rulers and the beautiful story of Jesus and his disciples. The book is designed as a course of instruction for the fifty-two weeks in the year, or for daily reading followed by a series of questions which simplify the stories and emphasize their important truths. Durable cloth binding.

There are about 200 illustrations in the book many of them full page in colors. There are 468 pages of double-column, intensely interesting reading matter, besides the fifty-two sets of questions. While we are writing this notice, a distinguished author and minister comes into our office, picks up the book and remarks that it is the finest child's story book that he knows of.

If you want to furnish your own child with one of the best Bible story books to be had, now is the time; if you want to furnish a relative or neighbor's child, now is the time; if you want one for your own use to help you in simplifying and teaching a spiritual Sunday school lesson, now is the time; if you are looking for something inexpensive, and something that will bless, in the way of a birthday or Christmas gift, now is the time.

PENTECOST: ITS MEANING AND SIGNIFICANCE.

Rev. W. Edmund Smith.

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." Acts 1:8.

RECENTLY, the Christian Church has been commemorating Pentecost, and it may not be amiss for us to consider the significance of that event. Pentecost, literally, means fifty, and was a name given to one of the great feasts in the Jewish calendar. Just fifty days after the Israelites had eaten the Paschal lamb, in the house of bondage and had been led by Moses out of Egypt, across the Red Sea, they came to Mount Sinai, where God called Moses to the top of the mountain, and gave him the Ten Commandments graven on tables of stone. Note now this coincidence: Just fifty days after God's Paschal Lamb had been sacrificed on Mount Calvary, the Holy Ghost was outpoured upon the hundred and twenty disciples assembled in the upper room at Jerusalem. This event has been called the birthday of the Holy Spirit.

True, the Holy Ghost had ever been in the World. He was the active agent on creation's morn. He had been converting and sanctifying prior to Pentecost. But all of his work had been in anticipation of the redemptive work of Jesus, and so the Spirit's working was limited, and religious experience could not be as full and complete in anticipation of Calvary as it would be after Jesus lived, suffered, rose and had been glorified.

Someone has called Pentecost the birthday of the Church. True, the Church existed in nebulous form when Jesus called his disciples, but with the coming of Pentecost the Church began to assume organic form, and received her commission to evangelize the world. We must believe that Pentecost was the glorious climactic event in the plan of redemption. It gave significance and efficiency to all that had gone before. It took away from Jerusalem its religious prestige, and by sanctifying and exalting common things and common people, took from the special days and feasts, and the priesthood of the Jews their glory and exclusive claims. Pentecost made possible a Holy Land anywhere. It gave the humblest believer the privilege of becoming a king and a priest unto God, to offer up spiritual sacrifice, more acceptable to God than the blood of bulls and of lambs. Pentecost broke down forever the walls of separation between the Jew and the Gentile, giving to the latter repentance unto life. Pentecost disclosed God's great plan for world redemption, he having made the Jews the channel of revelation.

WHAT PENTECOST MEANT TO THOSE DISCIPLES AND APOSTLES.

Firstly: Their hearts were purified. There was a subjective work accomplished in them. Peter referring to the Gentiles receiving the Holy Ghost said: "He put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith." We must believe that grace had done something for the apostles prior to Pentecost. They had left all to follow Jesus. Jesus had told them, when they came back from a preaching expedition rejoicing in their success, not to rejoice so much in those things, but rather to rejoice that their names were written in Heaven. Jesus declared that he was the vine and they were the branches. In his high priestly prayer he declared to the Father that they were not of the world, but that he had chosen them out of the world. If they were of the world, the world would love its own. He said, "They have kept my word, and none of them is lost but the son of perdition." How any candid person can fail to believe that these disciples were what we might call "converted" persons, I fail to see.

But Jesus did recognize the fact that their religious experience was very defective. And so he said, "Father, for their sakes I sanctify myself that they might be sanctified through the truth. Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth."

Jesus did not need any subjective cleansing. He was pure and holy. Sanctification to him, meant that he set himself apart to accomplish the complete redemption of men. But these apostles and disciples did need a subjective cleansing, and sanctification meant this to them. They were in a measure spiritual, and yet they were carnal. Even in the presence of Jesus they would get into carnal controversy as who would be the greatest in the Kingdom. John and James wanted to call down fire from Heaven to consume those that followed not their band. This brought upon them the condemnation of Jesus for their narrow bigotry. Peter, who had boasted that he would follow Jesus even unto death, denied him in the presence of a little maid. Thomas doubted, and in the presence of danger, they all forsook Jesus; these very ones whom Jesus said had kept his word.

Truly they needed something more than they had received, and at Pentecost it came to them. Their hearts were purified from carnal fear, ambition and all sinful affections. Their spiritual nature was unified, and thus they could become worthy representatives of their risen and glorified Lord.

Secondly: Their vision was clarified. Under the immediate instruction of Jesus they failed to understand the spiritual character of his kingdom. They looked for a temporal kingdom, in which they were to hold conspicuous and important offices. The question with them was, Who will be greatest? Even after Jesus had risen and appeared to them, the first question they asked was, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore the Kingdom to Israel?" Then it was that Jesus told them that they should receive power after that the Holy Ghost was come upon them. It was the power of a purified heart and a clarified vision.

How true it is that spiritual things are spiritually discerned. God hides things from the wise and prudent and reveals them unto babes. A multitude of the worldly-wise fail to see the benefits of Pentecost because the veil is over their spiritual eyes. An interpreter of the New Testament told out, with positive emphasis, that there is no such thing as a second crisis in religious experience. An old colored mammy who knew the indwelling presence of the Comforter was told what he said. She replied: "That professor put that too strong. He ought to have said, not that he knows on." After Pentecost those apostles never doubted the deity of Jesus and the full redemptive character of his death and resurrection. What Jesus could not make plain to them in the days of his flesh the Holy Ghost revealed to their consciousness. They were united in heart and purpose in a common cause to make known the saving grace of the blessed Son of God.

We honor education and mental discipline, but these can never rightly interpret the Word of God. The same Holy Ghost that clarified the vision of the disciples, must clarify our spiritual vision, so that we may rightly understand the plan of redemption and all our privileges in the covenant of grace. Amanda Smith, the colored washer-woman, with the Holy Ghost, was a better interpreter of the Word than the profound scholar who can read the ancient tongues, but has not the indwelling Comforter to illuminate his understanding.

Finally: This Pentecostal baptism energized their wills and enabled them to do. Think of the task before them. Jesus had commissioned his disciples to preach the gospel to every creature and they went forth against a hostile church, without the prestige of ecclesiastical endorsement, the support of governmental authority, the resources of material wealth, or the confidence of educational equipment, to win the world for Jesus, who had lived the life of a tramp preacher and had died like a malefactor between two thieves. At first, Roman power was tolerant, and saw in those Christians only another form of Judaism. But when they began to multiply and declare that there is no salvation in any other but Jesus, Rome began to persecute. Had they been less radical the Christians could have gained for Jesus a place in the Roman Pantheon, where the gods of all the nations Rome had conquered were honored. Paul might have become the high priest of Christianity. All would have gone smoothly, but Christianity would have been the same compromising, lifeless thing it is today in the mouths of proud and polished rhetoricians, who praise all forms of religions and preach another gospel, and another Christ.

The Christians endured ten terrible persecutions in the first three centuries, but these were the means of keeping doctrine and life pure. The most fatal time came when Constantine gave toleration to Christianity and made it the religion of the State.

But what is the explanation of the achievements of those early Christians? It is the baptism of the Holy Ghost. They lost all fear of men; they were dead to selfish interests; they had confidence in the power of God, as revealed in Christ; they filled up that which was behind in the sufferings of Christ; they counted all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of God in him.

And we contend that this is what the Holy Ghost does for God's children today. He makes them invincible in their battle against the world, the flesh, and the devil. He takes the humblest and makes him a wonder to men. Some of these have been the greatest inspiration to my life and ministry.

I have in mind a man who lives in a little New Brunswick town. He was stricken with blindness early in life, but in spite of that handicap acquired a good business, married a beautiful woman and the home was blessed with two lovely daughters. Long before he had known the blessing of Pentecost, and was a great blessing to his church and community. But a fire came and swept that little town and our brother's business went with little or no insurance. For a good many years we have seen that brother struggle on against most adverse circumstances. Sickness in his home, called for a number of surgical operations. God has allowed him to go through the fire. But in it all he has maintained a most triumphant faith. He has been a shining light to that community and many hearts and hands have been opened to him. He is a great spiritual asset to that town, and even those who do not agree with his theology, see that he has a wonderful faith and experience. That man has been a splendid inspiration to my faith.

This is what I mean by a will energized by the Holy Ghost. We cannot stand without this strength. God will never hitch us up to a load too heavy for us to draw. He gets under the heavy end of the burden. The Comforter does not exempt us from trials, tribulation and temptations, but he does give more grace. He does enable us to see the superior value of spiritual things, and brings us into fellowship with those who through faith, "subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, escaped the edge of the sword, waxed valiant in fight and turned to flight the armies of the aliens." He does enable us to say "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." He purifies our hearts and enables us to be. He clarifies our spiritual vision and enables us to see. He energizes our wills and enables us to do. Have you received your Pentecost?

Radiant Living.

REV. C. M. GRIFFETH.

HIS LARGER PURPOSE

God has a wonderful plan—divinely inspired—for your life.

It is a plan that is complete, beautiful, practical and successful. A plan, which, if we willingly hand ourselves over to him, he will work out for us, notwithstanding all the agencies and powers and devils who would try to thwart it.

And why not? Would God provide a perfect salvation for a man and then be utterly indifferent as to what became of that man's life? Would God save a man's soul from sin and not have a provision to save his life from a purposeless existence?

Did not God have a plan for Joseph's life? His jealous brothers in an effort to thwart God's plan might cast him, if they will, into the pit, or later sell him to the Ishmaelites. It will be hard indeed on Joseph, but it will only hasten the working out of God's plan.

And Joseph in one of the sunset days of his life, looking back across the years to that early morning hour when the sun seemed to rise so slowly behind a drapery of portentous clouds aflame in threatening scarlet as he, a slave boy, was being hurried away from home and homeland to distant Egypt, he saw in it all that God has a larger purpose for his life than he could ever have had for himself if he had remained unmolested in fair Canaan.

"But," you say, "that was for Joseph. We cannot all be Josephs."

But is God unmindful of you just because you may occupy a very small corner in life? Would God who notices even the fall of a sparrow have no interest, no purpose, no beautiful plan for lives that are limited? Is not a tiny violet, growing in an out-of-the-way place along the edge of a field as perfect and as beautiful a flower and as much the handiwork of God as some highly prized lily or cultivated rose?

In that very calling in which you are engaged, God has a plan for your life, which if faithfully followed by a continuous yielding to Divine control, God will work out for you that divine aspiration for your life—"His larger purpose."

One of The Greatest Organizations In The World.

THE Woman's Christian Temperance Union is one of the greatest organizations in the world for social uplift, in fact, for the saving of the souls and bodies of human beings. We doubt if any organization on earth except the church, has such a body of noble, praying lovers of God and humanity, as this great organization of the best women of this nation, for the prohibition of the liquor traffic. We print below a communication from Mrs. Ella A. Boole, President of the National W. C. T. U. It must be understood that the Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform has a deceptive name. It does not mean a reform from drunkenness to sobriety; it is just the reverse—a reform from sobriety to drunkenness—an aggregation of selfish women to break down our prohibition laws. The liquor people have always played the role of deception and misrepresentation. The name of this wet organization of women is undoubtedly intended to deceive. It sounds quite respectable, but its whole object is the breaking down of prohibition and the bringing back of the legalized liquor traffic. Read what Mrs. Boole says:

"The Association Against Prohibition Amendment, supported mainly by seven millionaires, says it no longer takes money from the brewers and distillers. It denies receiving the money the European liquor interests claim they spend in the United States.

"Can it be that the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform is the beneficiary of these funds, refused by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, but which have been spent so lavishly in the past in opposition to every effort to restrict or curtail the liquor traffic?

"As for women and prohibition, as long as the 19th amendment stands the 18th amendment will stand also."

"Many organizations now supporting the 18th amendment were pioneers in the demand for constitutional prohibition, when the wet argument was carried on by the Retail Liquor Dealers Association, and the United States Brewers Association. The church denominations represented by various commissions in the conference of organizations supporting the 18th amendment, comprise twenty million Americans.

"It should be remembered that the W. C. T. U. is organized in nearly ten thousand local communities, and that its membership today is more than double its membership in the twenty years that Frances Willard achieved her great results. The W. C. T. U. educational program today is reaching ten times as many students as it ever reached in the height of the saloon era."

"Commenting on the charge of Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, president of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, that the wet organization has more members than the W. C. T. U., Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the National W. C. T. U. makes the following statement:

"The Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform endeavors to magnify its importance by claiming it has enrolled more members in some states than the W. C. T. U. Suppose it has. All the dry women are not members of the W. C. T. U.; but it seems that all the wet women are in one group.

"The W. C. T. U. is only one of the bona fide organizations committed to the observance and support of the 18th amendment. We find standing with us the Women's Missionary Societies; the Federation of Women's Clubs; the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Women's Enforcement Organizations. These organizations contain more than 12,000,000 women who, by resolution and conviction, are supporting the 18th amendment.

"In addition, the National Education Association—the large majority of whose members are women—by resolution and conviction favors law enforcement and is conducting an active campaign in support of the 18th amendment.

"The Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform spends huge sums of money. It is reported that as much as a quarter of a million dollars is available for its work in a single Southern state. Yet this organization asks no dues and makes no financial reports.

"Where do they get it?"

Ten Good Reasons Why Ladies Should Not Smoke.

BY C. W. RUTH, EVANGELIST.

Because it leaves a bad taste in mouth, and an offensive breath.

Because it is certain to leave stain on finger nail, and give a sallow complexion.

Because it is an exceedingly bad example for children; no worthy parent wants their children to smoke—especially not while small.

Because all cigarettes contain opiates, and nicotine, which is said by all physicians to be poisonous, and injurious to health.

Because it is an expensive habit and a needless and extravagant waste of money in the aggregate of years.

Because it creates an unnatural and abnormal appetite, and thus enslaves the user,—so that it becomes almost impossible to quit the habit.

Because it lowers womanhood, in the esteem of men,—even though they do not say so; especially is this true of Christian gentlemen.

Because it exposes ladies to especial temptations,—in that it associates them, with such as have low standards of morals, and men take liberties with women who smoke they would not take otherwise.

Because no real good true Christian lady smokes cigarettes; they would not wish to meet Christ—at the Judgment with a cigarette in their mouth.

Because it is utterly needless, useless, and incongruous, and in no way adds to the modesty, charm and beauty of womanhood. While a few may admire her when she smokes, more will admire her when she does not smoke.

No, we do not insinuate, nor believe that all ladies who smoke cigarettes are of low morals, but we believe they would be better if they did not smoke.

STRIKING RESEMBLANCES.

J. E. NORBERRY.

HERE are some remarkable and striking resemblances, between the Impotent Man's disease and his divine healing at the Pool of Siloam, by the only and great Physician, as recorded in the 5th chapter of St. John's gospel—to that of man's sinful condition and his divine salvation by Jesus, the Savior of the world, who is able to save to the uttermost.

This man's disease was evidently caused by sin, as implied in the fourth verse. So all mankind has been spiritually diseased, because of one man's sin. "As by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, so death passed upon all men, for that all men have sinned." Rom. 5:12, 17, 19.

The man's disease affected his whole being, as he lay helpless for a long time at the Pool. So sin made man totally depraved. "The whole head is sick, the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot, even unto the head, there is no soundness in it, but wounds and bruises and putrifying sores. They have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment." Isa. 1:5, 6. See also Jer. 7:9.

As this man's disease robbed him of much of the happiness and pleasures of life, so sin has robbed man of much spiritual joy. "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Rom. 3:23.

This man's disease may have been that of palsy, which is a good type of the sinner in trespasses and sins. This man confessed to Jesus, his inability to heal himself. "Sir, I have no man when the water is troubled, to put me into the Pool." Well may the sinner cry, "Helpless I am, and full of guilt, but yet for me thy blood was spilt. And Thou canst make me what thou wilt, O take me as I am." "In my hands no price I bring, simply to Thy cross I cling." Jesus says, "Without me ye can do nothing." See Jer. 13:23.

Humanly speaking, this man's disease was incurable. If cured at all, it must be a supernatural cure, as we read, "It was Jesus, that made him whole." So every sinner, if he is ever saved, must be supernaturally saved. "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God."

This poor man's disease was of long duration, 38 long years, so that it was deep-seated, but that was no hindrance to the healing power of Jesus, he was made perfectly whole. So with the worst sinners of the world. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow. Though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." "Let the wicked forsake his ways, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord—and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Mark 5:2-13. Luke 8:2; 1 Timothy 1:12-15.

After this poor man turned his back on all pools and the angelic troubling of the waters and all dependence upon others to help him into the troubled waters, and ceased his trying in his own feeble way, and looked to Jesus alone for healing and salvation—Jesus was then ready to heal him, and asked, "Wilt thou be made whole?" "It was Jesus that made him whole." So with every sinner who gets saved. He must look away from everything and everybody, and look to Jesus alone. "Look unto me and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God and there is none else." "Neither is there salvation in any other name. For there is none other name under Heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved." "Salvation is of the Lord."

When this man tried to get healed, he found others getting in his way hindering him, "While I am coming, another steppeth down before me." So with every sinner seeking Jesus, and his divine salvation, will find opposition from the world, the flesh and the devil, and needs to press through, like the woman of old, who pressed through the crowd until "she touched the hem of his garment."

This diseased man wanted to be healed above everything else in the world, and was thus willing to be carried anywhere so he could be healed, so with every sinner, who desires salvation above everything else in the world, will say, "I'll go where you want me to go dear Lord" or "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

This diseased man's faith in Jesus to heal him was demonstrated in his prompt obedience to the divine command, "Arise, take up thy bed and walk." "And the man took up his bed and walked," so must every sinner obey the divine command and meet the conditions of salvation, "Repent and believe the gospel." "Repentance toward God and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

As this healed man publicly glorified God by taking up his bed before all the people, so must every saved soul let his light "so shine before men that he may glorify his Father which is in Heaven."

As the healing of this man made a new

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dries do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

In 1922 nearly all of the Canadian Provinces were under some form of prohibition. The official record shows 202 convictions for drunken driving. "Government sale" has been substituted, and in 1929 convictions for drunken drivers were 2,106, or an increase of over 942%.—Report of Minister of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, Canada, 1931.

man of him in every way, so when the sinner gets saved to God, he is a "new creature in Christ Jesus, old things pass away, and all things become new."

As every sinner seeking divine salvation, receives the forgiveness of his sins instantaneously, so this man his healing, "And immediately the man was made whole."

Like every soul receives the divine witness to his sonship, as in Rom. 8:14, so this man received the divine attestation to his healing, "Jesus saith unto him, Behold, thou art made whole."

As every saved soul must confess before men the work of divine salvation wrought in his heart—see Rom. 10:9-11, so this man was not ashamed to confess that Jesus healed him. "And the man departed and told the Jews that it was Jesus that had healed him." See also, Luke 12:8, Rom. 1:16, Rev. 3:5.

As all saved persons soon find their way to the house of God, for worship, so this healed man found his way "in the Temple," that he might worship God. "Afterward, Jesus findeth him in the Temple." Was it not said of the early disciples, "That being let go they went unto their own company?"

As this man's healing and salvation created quite a stir and much opposition among the ungodly in the Synagogue, so it ever will be found where God is saving and sanctifying precious souls, great opposition will be manifested among the ungodly in and outside the church. Amen!

As in the case of every saved person whom God takes out of the sin business, he expects them to ever remain out, so with this man, "Jesus saith unto him, Behold, thou art made whole, go and sin no more, lest a worse thing come upon thee."

The likelihood was that if this crippled man had let this golden opportunity pass by unheeded, he may never have been healed, for Jesus may never have passed that way again. So there is a time for every sinner to be saved, "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found. Call upon him while he is near." "Behold, now is the accepted time. Behold, now is the day of salvation." "My Spirit shall not always strive with man." "Again, he limited a certain day, wherefore the Holy Ghost saith, Today if ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts as in the provocation." Heb. 3:7-11, 4:7, 8. See also St. John 12:35, 36.

Thackeray tells of one who kept his pockets full of acorns, and wherever he saw a vacant place in his estate he took one out and planted it. In like manner he exhorts his readers to do with kind words as they go through life never losing a chance of saying one. In our book, "Ideals for Earnest Youth" every phase of life and how to make the most of it is discussed. If a young man or young woman did not aspire to the highest and noblest things in life, he or she could not read the 61 chapters in this book without being inspired and purposing in their heart to be a power for good in the world. The chapters are brief, intensely interesting and to the point. Anyone from 12 to 25, and even the older folk, would enjoy and get a blessing from this book. # ----GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD----

REPORT OF THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S AUXILIARY OF THE LONG ISLAND HOLINESS CAMP MEETING ASSOCIATION.

"Camp Roosevelt," Freeport, N. Y.

For the second time in the history of the Long Island Camp Meeting Association, the young people carried on a five-day camp meeting entirely under their own direction from July 11-16. This proved to be even more blessed than its initial one and the Lord was very present from the first service to the last when the reins were once again handed back to the adult organization.

Rev. James Jones, who was with us last year as one of our Young People's evangelists, again brought some very helpful and heart-searching messages. His co-laborer, Rev. Wayne Lamb, also gave most faithful service and his Spirit-filled messages endeared him to the hearts of all. God most graciously blessed their efforts for there was scarcely a service without one or more seekers and altogether about forty souls knelt at our altars and found glorious victory. Praise the Lord!

We believe God honored our efforts in answering the many prayers that ascended in behalf of the camp. Each morning before the breakfast hour found a group of earnest, faithful young people gathered at the Family Altar beseeching God's blessing on the day. Following the afternoon preaching service, a street meeting was held daily on one of the business corners of the city and through song, prayer, testimony, and Brother H. Willard Ortlip's chalk talks, the gospel was given forth to many who perhaps never enter the doors of a church. We thank God that some also followed us back to the Tabernacle from the invitation given there. Between services, the young people voluntarily made a house-to-house canvas of the neighborhood communities, giving out personal invitations to the meetings and advertising matter in hopes of winning some soul to Christ who might otherwise be lost.

Our friends may be interested to know that during the year our young people are held together by two "Auxiliary Letters," compiled by our director, Robert L. Simpson, from the personal testimonies which are sent to him by the members of the Auxiliary. The notes of victory present in these testimonies encourage our hearts and help us to realize that God can keep the youth of today and is doing it when they will let him.

Young people, remember to set aside the date, July 10-25 next year, for your vacation and spend it with us at Camp Roosevelt. We are trusting the Lord for even greater manifestations of his power next summer and know our faith will be rewarded for "Jesus never fails."

Evelyn J. Duryea,
President Young People's Auxiliary.

REPORT OF WACO PROPHETIC BIBLE CONFERENCE

Pastor A. Reilly Copeland

Tabernacle Baptist Church, Waco, Texas.

The Premillennial and Prophetic Bible Conference held at Tabernacle Baptist Church during the Texas Baptist Convention was said to be one of the greatest meetings of its kind in Texas Baptist History. Many of the visitors attended on different nights. Pastor Dale Crowley, of Denton, delivered in splendid fashion the opening address on Sunday night, November 8, to an unusually large audience which great attendance was maintained throughout the entire period. Dr. J. Frank Norris was the main speaker Monday night and held his audience spell-bound from beginning to end as he spoke on THE PROPHETIC MESSAGE. Evangelists Joe Jeffers and John Rice, and Pastor Sam Morris were introduced to the audience, and each made short addresses, and Evangelist Joe Jeffers captivated the audience, as he did the next night, Tuesday, as the main speaker for two hours, with unabated interest, as he told of his experience with one of the outstanding denominational leaders, and then gave the history of his work at Jonesboro, Ark., and told how the pastor of the First Baptist Church, the Mayor, and the Roman Catholics, and the lawless element, and the state militia and the devil, all tried to bluff him, and stop the greatest revival meeting Arkansas has ever known. He closed his message with a startling exposition of Prophecy as related to the end time, and a number of souls were saved at the close of service when he had the entire audience on its knees. Pastor Sam Morris delivered a great message Wednesday night and several souls were saved while a large group of Christians consecrated their lives to God in service. Dr. Norris again held a large audience in rapt attention on Thursday night as he expounded the prophetic teachings of Scripture as the verbally inspired Word of God. Perhaps one of the greatest addresses was delivered Friday night by Evangelist John R. Rice who swept his audience from scenes of laughter, applause and tears, to a thrilling climax, as he exposed the modernism of one J. M. Dawson as recorded in his book, "THE BIBLE INSPIRED," as published by the Baylor University Press. Following this address Dr. J. Frank Norris spoke on the subject "THE VERBALLY INSPIRED WORD OF GOD." People say they never heard such a message, as it came to a thrilling climax with the entire audience voting to repudiate the modernism of J. M. Dawson and stand by the verbally inspired word of God. Pastors Earl Anderson, Bob Cunningham, Scott Hickey,

W. C. Majors and other preachers and visitors were introduced during the Conference. Waco and Tabernacle Baptist Church will never forget this great Bible Conference, and will ever remember it in loving gratitude and deepest appreciation of the untold blessing brought.

LONG ISLAND HOLINESS CAMP MEETING FREEPORT, L. I.

The Annual Camp Meeting held at Camp Roosevelt, N. Y., July 16-20 inclusive, was a season of victory and blessing to all who attended. The weather was excellent and a cheerful, happy spirit pervaded the camp throughout the meeting.

Dr. C. W. Butler, President of the National Association for the Promotion of Holiness, was one of the evangelists. He suggested that a good name for this camp ground would be the "Dustless Camp," for a fine cement floor and good coating of oil on the road made it a place very free from dust. The messages by Dr. Butler were forceful and brought conviction. His hearers were also much edified and strengthened in faith by his fine presentation of Bible doctrines.

Earnest and thoughtful messages were also given by Rev. Theodore Elsner, of Philadelphia, which resulted in much fruit for his labor. For some time, Bro. Elsner has held a daily Radio service for the advancement of the kingdom of God.

The daily Bible study under the direction of Rev. Paul Hill was very helpful, for if we ever needed to study God's Word, it is today. The singing throughout the meeting was led by Rev. Wayne A. Lamb who was also one of the evangelists for the Young People's Camp. Thank God for young preachers who bring a full gospel message!

Shouts of praise and victory were heard in the Ring Meetings which were held several times during the camp. While the older people were testifying in one, there was another being held for the young people. Also each morning, faithful groups gathered for family prayer and the spiritual results of the camp were largely due to these intercessors. For lack of finances, many were deprived of attending the camp for the full time, but the blessing of God rested on the meeting and not only did the spiritual tide run high but the finances came well without spending Sunday in a time of money raising.

On Wednesday afternoon, the Annual Missionary service was held, and Rev. John Moe, a missionary on furlough from the National Association Missionary field in China brought a message which resulted in sufficient money being raised to support a missionary and also two Bible women. To God be all the glory!

The Association is already looking forward to the 1932 camp meeting. Dr. Butler expects to be with us again and Rev. Paul Rees will also serve as an evangelist. The singing will be in charge of N. B. Vandall, of Ohio. Pray much and believe for a great camp meeting. Lay your plans now to attend throughout the entire meeting which will be held July 10-25 inclusive.

Jennie M. Duryea, Secretary.

TULLYTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA.

An eight-day revival campaign closed at Tullytown, Pa., Nov. 1, in the Methodist Church, the writer doing the preaching. It was a hard battle, pastor and evangelist doing intensive visitation work. Rev. H. W. Sanders and wife are looking after this part of the Master's vineyard. Brother Sanders has a three-appointment charge, and is pursuing theological studies as well, in Philadelphia. Twenty-five of the leading young people over his charge were soundly converted. One or two adults also found peace. The three churches were much encouraged to push the battle for souls, as a result of the meetings. The saints praised God as the seekers were converted, and the services ended with songs of rejoicing. Praise the Lord. We have one or two open dates for meetings near home.

H. J. McNeese, Evangelist.
New Brighton, Pa.

EPWORTH M. E. CHURCH, PATERSON, N. J.

With the able assistance of Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Lewis, of Wilmore, Ky., the pastor of the church and a small group of faithful workers put forth a concerted revival effort Nov. 1 to Nov. 15. Since the church is in the midst of a Catholic and foreign community the field proved very difficult. The attendance was erratic, signifying the lack of past effort in this direction with its attendant prejudice and lack of understanding. It seems that there is very little of the sense of guilt or lossiness among even church people any more. This greatly adds to the difficulty of any situation. We promised ourselves and God that we would sow the gospel seed and water it and let the results remain with God. We dug deep, we ploughed thoroughly. There will be results from this meeting, we are confident, for years. One night at least fifty young people and children knelt at our altar and a number of them gave their lives to the Lord. The last Sunday morning the whole Sunday school room was turned into an altar and that service certainly was like a great sacrament.

One thing we feel sure of. This is no time to let up on revival effort because of financial straits or complexes. What we want is more of the sacrificial prayer life and more and better planning for future crusades. We need to put on a new arrogance of the noble type that shouts defiance to the enemy and presses mighty offenses into the very camps of sin.

I should like to add a word of hearty endorsement of the help that the Lewis' can give. They are dependable, always, and worth a lot to any meeting. No pastor or committee looking for skilled children's workers or music and singing leaders could possibly make any mistake in calling them.

Neal R. van Loon.

OKLAHOMA MEETINGS.

Glad to have the good pleasure of coming to you with our brief report of recent labors in the kingdom of our Lord and Master. We closed a very gracious meeting at Lexington, Okla., with many saved and a goodly number coming into the church. We were called back for the coming year. There are many loyal souls in and around Lexington. From here we hurried to Britton, Okla., to join our good Brother Allie Irick and wife with the Church of the Nazarene. We had a most blessed revival on the old-fashioned order. Many found the Lord in pardon and purity, and a fine class received into the Church.

After this meeting we were more than delighted to join in a meeting conducted by Rev. Earl Wild in First Church (Nazarene) in Oklahoma City. Old Earl is some preacher and that fellow can sing. His wife is a power in song as well.

Wife and I began at Poteau, Okla., Nov. 8, in the Nazarene Church, with Rev. John Hogan as pastor. We ask an interest in all your prayers that we may have a great revival with many souls brought into the kingdom of our Master.

Yours in the Master's service,
Solomon Irick.

REVIVAL ON BROOKSBURG CHARGE.

We have just closed a wonderful meeting at Home Chapel on the Brooksbury (Ind.) Circuit of the Methodist Episcopal Church. There were about sixty-five souls at the altar during the meeting and nearly all of them found what they were seeking. Some were saved, some were reclaimed and others were sanctified. A few of God's saints have been praying for years that such a revival would come and they feel that God has heard them now.

The Rev. Roscoe Jenkins, a member of the Kentucky Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was the evangelist. His earnest, soul-searching messages seemed to strike the target each night, and God's people shouted and praised him, while sinners and backsliders prayed through about the altar. The pastor and people at Home Chapel recommend Brother Jenkins as a God-called Methodist preacher who holds to our good old doctrine of regeneration and entire sanctification. No Methodist organization will make a mistake in employing him.

CAMP SYCHAR NOTES.

Calvin R. Poulson, Reporter.

Mingling with the Sychar crowd year after year how frequently have we heard people remark of the continued growth of the camp, also of the large number of people who come from distant states and countries. To the writer it seems that there are three simple, yet important reasons why Sychar has had the continued smile of God through all the years.

First. It has a board of humble, sanctified men who give much time and prayer to the interests of the camp. This year with its depression brought a severe test to the faith of these men, but men of faith and prayer never know what defeat is, and Sychar closed this year as usual with victory along every line; especially in the matter of finance.

Second. Sychar's board of managers believe in and practice the gospel of liberality. The prices for tents, rooms, meals, etc., is kept at the minimum with maximum service aimed at. Nothing in the way of profiteering has ever crept into this camp. Also the management has always employed a full staff of workers for every department of the camp, so that no one will be overworked but can be at their very best in every service. It is needless to say that only the best talent that can be secured finds a place on Sychar's platforms.

Third. Sychar never spends needless time in any kind of sidelines. Believing that Holiness unto the Lord is the church's supreme message, and that when men come into the "fulness of the gospel of Christ" all things else will adjust themselves. This being true she has never had to spend much time in getting rid of illegitimate Ishmaels.

If Christ Should Come to Jerusalem

CHAPTER V.

HERE is not, and cannot be, a greater, more stimulating hope in the devout Christian's heart than that Jesus shall come again in glory. There is nothing more important to entertain and occupy the Christian life than to be ready for his appearing; a good steward who has occupied himself well in the development and increase of the talent which his Lord has entrusted with him while he tarries, to be required of him at his coming.

One of the reasons why the Christian looks forward with joy to the coming of the Lord is this: He wants the Lord Jesus to be vindicated. He wants him vindicated of the old charge of the Jews which has come down through the centuries that, his disciples came by night and stole him away. He wants him vindicated of the charge from infidels and atheists through the centuries that, no such person as Jesus of Nazareth ever lived, and if he did live, was a mere man. He wants him vindicated from the abuse of blatant blasphemers who have indulged their wicked souls in heaping their contempt and ridicule upon the Man of Galilee. He wants him vindicated of the misrepresentations of modernistic preachers who seek to strip him of his deity, minify his knowledge, and make him appear, as an ancient, oriental teacher unworthy of the adoration and trust of modern, progressive intelligence. He longs for Jesus Christ to come, all that he was, is, and ever shall be, Lord of lords and King of kings. All that the prophets predicted of him, all that he claimed for himself, and all that the inspired writers claim for him, and all that his worshippers, devoted followers, have witnessed him to be—God manifest in the flesh, crucified and risen Saviour, mighty to save to the uttermost.

There is not a hint in the teachings of Christ and the apostles that we shall ever reach a period in the gospel age when all of the people shall be saved, or that this world will be in a state of salvation before our Lord appears. The exact opposite is taught. In speaking of the end of the age, and the nearness of his coming, Jesus says: "Many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many. And because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure to the end, shall be saved. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations: and then shall the end come."

In the same conversation our Lord says: "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. Then shall two be in the field, the one shall be taken and the other left, two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Matt. 24:37-42.

In this same conversation our Lord gives the parable of the foolish virgins, and shows how that one half of them were unprepared to meet the bridegroom when he came, and were unable to go with him into the marriage feast. All through the teachings of Christ in the various parables of kings and householders who left their servants in charge of affairs and returning, found some who were not prepared, and who received his disapproval and condemnation, while those who were prepared received blessing and elevation.

All through the writings of St. Paul on the subject of the Lord's coming he shows us that some will not be prepared for that eventful day. Take the following, for example: "But of the times and seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you. For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day; ye are not of the night, nor of darkness. Therefore, let us not sleep, as do others; but let us watch and be sober." 1 Thess. 5:1-6.

It will be observed that the apostle draws the line very clearly between the saved and unsaved at the appearing of Jesus. Notice he says, "sudden destruction cometh upon them," that is, the unsaved, at the appearing of the Lord, those who have had their opportunity and have despised it.

There is nothing plainer, if you believe the Scriptures, and are guided by them, instead of by the notions, plans and programs of men who are out of harmony with the Scriptures, and have brought themselves to believe the appearing of Christ would be the most fearful catastrophe that could come into the world.

Not long since I saw where a very prominent minister, by the way, prominent because of his unbelief in the Scriptures, and his disloyalty to the Christ of the Scriptures, said, in his indignation, "Why the coming of Christ would put an end to our program." We do not know who his idea embraced in the "our," or what is embraced in his "program." It is evident that we have many groups of men in the churches today who have a program of skeptical teaching. They are seeking and working diligently to convince the rising generation that the Bible is uninspired; that Jesus is not God manifest in the flesh; that we can be quite indifferent to his virgin birth, whether or not he performed miracles, or whether or not he arose from the dead, or if he has any power to save men from their sins. No doubt they have a program, and no doubt the coming of Jesus would interfere with it very abruptly, and bring an end to their activities; nevertheless, Come, Lord Jesus.

We have some ecclesiastical programs that are out of harmony with the thought and teachings of Christ. It was the plan of Christ to set on foot a great evangelism, to hasten to the remotest bounds of earth with the good news of a saving gospel. He wanted men to know that God had so loved the world, that he had given his Son to die for its redemption; that he had arisen. He wanted the gospel of the forgiveness of sins proclaimed, shouted aloud throughout the earth by men who were empowered by the Holy Ghost.

In the nature of things, the one big business of the church was to get the gospel to all mankind just as speedily as possible. Unfortunately, the church inaugurated a program quite different from that of Christ. It organized an ecclesiasticism of human powers antagonistic to the whole spirit of evangelism. It went to building vast cathedrals, erecting splendid palaces, electing high officials at vast salaries, with retinues of servants, and conferring upon them power over their fellowmen; and while the centuries have passed these ecclesiasticisms have developed great wealth, have indeed, catered to men and women of wealth, humored them in their sins in order to get the support of their finance. All the red hats, rich robes and prancing prelates are an utter mockery. All of this pretence of forgiveness of sins, of human infallibility, is as foreign to the teaching and spirit of the Lord Jesus as Satan himself. It is not only true of Romanism, but it is true of much of Protestantism, that has its programs, its high priests living in their luxury and lording it over their fellows, building vast churches costing hundreds of thousands, in many instances, a million or more dollars, while missionaries are being called home leaving fields full of promise to desolation and waste.

But for human programs, had the church been true to Christ and followed his programs, long ago the gospel would have reached the remotest bounds of human habitation, and the sound of the church bell would have been calling the peoples and tribes of all the earth to worship the Christ who had redeemed them with his own precious blood.

Jesus foreknew human frailty, depravity, pride. He understood what would occur. He urged his people to faithfulness, and warned them of suffering, and encouraged them with a promise of his return. He will keep his promise.

You will find men, plenty of them, who will undertake to answer any argument you may give on the coming of the Lord, insisting that such teaching makes it appear that Christ's gospel having failed to accomplish its purpose, being unequal to the needs of humanity, finally he is represented as becoming angry with men, and descending in a fury to destroy them. No teaching could be more shallow and unscriptural mockery. The fact that men will not repent, and continue in their sins, is not a proof that the gospel lacks power to regenerate and save men. It must be borne in mind that men are free agents; that they have power to reject the gospel, and that they have done so, and will continue to do so. Select any place, city, village, town or community, in the best part of our nation where the gospel has been faithfully preached for more than a century, and you will find hundreds and thousands of people who have had the very best opportunities to hear the gospel, but they have resisted the truth, grieved the Holy Spirit and, surrounded with all the advantages of a Christian civilization, they have added to their guilt and the certainty of their destruction by grieving the Holy Ghost, their Christian friends, and refusing salvation.

One reason why much of the work of the church is failing arises out of the fact that the program of Christ, the great plan for the spread of the gospel has been neglected, and the church has set on foot plans of her own that have exhausted resources upon selfishness, and has let millions go without the gospel. There is one thing certain, all of the objections, false teaching, modernistic liberalism that is blinding the eyes and stumbling the feet of millions of deluded souls, cannot change the eternal purposes of God; cannot estop his onward movement toward a glorious epoch, cannot prevent the blessed Lord Jesus Christ from appearing in his glory. Blessed are they who have on the wedding garment, who love his appearing, and who shall be caught away with triumph to meet the Bridegroom when he comes.

Dr. J. C. C. Newton Passes Away.

Dr. J. C. C. Newton, 83, retired missionary to Japan of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Marvin Underwood, in Atlanta, Ga., Tuesday, Nov. 11, according to advices received at the Methodist mission board headquarters in Nashville.

Funeral services for Dr. Newton were announced to be conducted at St. Marks Methodist Church in Atlanta at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon.

Dr. Newton, after serving 35 years as missionary to Japan, where he was at the head of Kwansei Gakuin University at Kobe returned to America in 1923 and spent a year in Nashville, Tenn., as missionary lecturer in Scarritt College. A picturesque and forceful character, Dr. Newton was an outstanding personage in any group on account of his powerful physique, his scholarly bearing and dignified and benevolent manner.

The departure of Dr. Newton from Japan in 1923 was almost like the exodus of royalty for more than 2,000 persons, including practically all the faculty and student body of Kwansei Gakuin, assembled at the wharf to bid him goodbye. The occasion also marked the decoration of Dr. Newton with the order of the Blue Ribbon Medal conferred upon him by the Imperial Japanese government in recognition of his distinguished service to the youth of Japan.

Dr. Newton's ministerial affiliations were with the Virginia Conference which body he joined in 1886, having previously entered the Methodist itineracy in 1874 as a member of the Kentucky Conference. He was a deep student of philosophy and an author of notable distinction. He continued his literary work until the close of a busy, useful life and was at work on a manuscript for a book at the time of his death. Among the best known of his works was a history of Japan entitled Japan, the Country, Court and People. Dr. Newton retained his interest in all the affairs of the church and was a familiar figure at the important church gatherings. He was present at all of the sessions of the recent Ecumenical Conference at Atlanta.

Dr. Newton's late wife was formerly Miss Lettie E. Lay of South Carolina and their life together was one of singular devotion and companionship. Mrs. Newton died about a year ago.

The Last Word in Bible Making.

The largest makers of fine Bibles have produced what we consider the last word in Bible making. It is an Oxford Bible, printed on their very fine, exclusive India Paper, valued at 90c per lb., such a fine piece of printing that the type doesn't show through thus making the large Long Primer type easy to read. It is bound in the finest of Levant leather, which will wear a lifetime; it has the necessary helps such as references, concordance, subject index and proper names. Any owner of this Bible will always love it, enjoy it and feel proud to own such a book. The size is 5 1/2 x 8 1/2 x 15-16 in. thick, weight 26 ozs. It is a handsome book, pleasing to the eye and touch. We have just 25 copies. We are offering them at $10.00 each, the regular net price is $15.00. A choice Christmas present for your pastor, Sunday school superintendent, teacher, or a member of your family. Order of this office.

The Little Fellow Who Has

barely learned to read, as well as the child up to 12 years old will treasure "Bible Stories and their Pictures." The first story is Abram Going to Egypt and just opposite the story is the picture in beautiful colors, showing Abram mounted on his camel making this journey. There are 50 of these stories and pictures, the last one showing John on the Isle of Patmos. It is impressive and beautiful. On the last page are printed the Ten Commandments, the Golden Rule and The Lord's Prayer.

The type is large and clear, printed on a fine enamel paper, the cover is illustrated and attractive. Really, this is one of the most attractive books of the kind we have seen. Start the child with the right kind of reading matter, and give at least one of these for Christmas. Price 60c. The above statements modestly express the qualities of this book.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

KITTY'S WHISKER.

John is a sweet little boy, just past two years. He has big, bright blue eyes that shine like stars, and lots of golden curls all over his head. He is chubby and dimpled and quite lovely in every way.

Now John is a good boy, but of course like all boys and girls he has lots of things to learn, and much to find out about the big world and the things in it.

John has a kitten which someone gave him for a present, and he loves it very much. He loves to carry it in his fat arms, but he is always kind to kitty, and never squeezes it too hard so that it is hurt, or pulls its tail like some children I know would do.

Of course, the kitty knows that John loves him, so he loves John in return and purrs whenever John's fat hand is laid on his soft fur.

John has had a good look into Kitty's green eyes, and knows all about how the black spot in the center gets large and small and how kitty can pull back his ears or twitch them. He knows about his tiny white teeth and his bright red tongue.

But the other day John noticed kitty's whiskers for the first time. No doubt he thought these should not be there, for he took hold of them and what do you think? He pulled one out—and kitty, of course, let out a loud meow and ran away from John.

Mother came out to see what was the matter and there was John looking so surprised at kitty running away and John holding the whisker in his hand.

When mother explained to John how it hurt the kitty to have a whisker pulled, John felt very sorry, so he went over and stroked the kitten, and then what do you think he did? He tried to put the whisker back.

Of course, John couldn't put the whisker back, and you know, boys and girls, there are lots of things that happen like that. Perhaps you say an unkind word, and feel very sorry about it, but you can't take the word back.

Let us ask Jesus to help us to always do right, then we shall not need to feel bad.—Selected.

Dear Aunt Bettie. I hope W. B. is out cutting Christmas trees when this letter arrives. If this letter is not in print I will be lonely Christmas. I am in very poor health. Praise the Lord I am not a shut-in from our dear Savior. I am so glad to hear each week when I get The Herald that so many dear young folks are Christians; it's the only life to live for both young and old. We live in the country where the winters are long. My two daughters take care of me. Times are very hard here. I'll answer all letters of those who send stamps. May God bless you all.

Mrs. J. A. Krone.
Lanes Prairie, Mo.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I wonder if there isn't a little room left in the circle of boys and girls for an old-fashioned New Hampshire girl. I have never seen a letter from New Hampshire on page ten, and want the cousins to know that there are a few who live in the granite state that really love Jesus and are going through with him whatever the cost may be. We take The Herald and enjoy reading it to the fullest extent. We heard Brother Morrison quite a few times while in Orlando, Fla., a few years ago. I wish he would come up here in New Hampshire sometime. How we would like to see him again and to hear him in person. Now, for a description of myself. I am five feet, five inches in height, 148 pounds in weight, have long brown hair and eyes, also have a few freckles. Am seventeen years of age and a Senior in high school. Now you all know something of how I look, don't you? Well, cousins, let's keep our colors flying. We do not want to let the enemy discourage us, for he will try, but keep our eyes upon Jesus and do all we can to bring others to him. Jesus is depending on us to tell others,

In closing I want to say that I should very much like to hear from some of the cousins.
Eunice M. Sawyer.
Rt. 5, Lakeport, N. H.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I would like to join your happy band of boys and girls though I am a mother thirty-one years young. I surely do enjoy reading The Herald. I have a poem I composed after hearing a sermon from Matt. 27:22, and I hope you will print it as it might help some one to decide the matter.

A Personal Question.

Matt. 27:22.

What shall I do then with Jesus
Which is called the Christ, the Lord?

Shall I cry out, Crucify him
And reject his precious word?
Shall I nail his hands again to the cross,

And pierce his blessed side,
And drive him back to Golgotha's Hill

Where he once bled and died.

What shall I do then with Jesus,
As he knocks at the door of my heart?

Shall I refuse to open it
And let him from me depart?
Shall I cause him again to suffer
As they did in days of old,
And close the door of my heart to him
And shut him out in the cold?

What shall I do then with Jesus,
Who gave his life for me?
Shall I still reject his mercy
And his pardon so full and free?
Or shall I accept this Saviour
And crown him as my King,
And enjoy the peace and comfort
That his Holy presence will bring?

Dear Jesus, I now will open
The door of my heart, full wide,
I beg thee just now to enter
And ever with me abide.
For I need thy Holy Spirit
Each day, as I go on my way.
To help me resist temptation,
And keep me from going astray.
Amen!

Mrs. Serena Thrasher.
Dutton, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little boy eight years old. I am in the third grade. I go to Sunday school. I like to read page ten. My grandpa has The Herald sent to me. I have one brother and one sister six and two years old. As this is my first letter to The Herald I hope to see it in print.

Homer O. Dell.
Crichton, W. Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let me in with your girls and boys? I am a small boy eleven years old and have three brothers, Albert, Jesse and Alfred Lee. Jesse and I go to President Hoover's mountain school. We have a fine teacher and love her very much. Miss Christine Vest is her name. She's from Yosemite, Ky. I would love to correspond with any who care to write. I went on a trip not long ago with my teacher. I have been to the hospital for my right eye and was helped. I am in the third grade at school; would be further if my eye had not got bad last winter. I will answer all letters that send stamps. We live up in the mountains, so I will ring off for this time and give room for some one else. Pray for me.

Ray M. Meadows.
Syria, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Kindly move over a bit. As it has been some time since I have had a visit with you cousins I decided to drop in for a chat this rainy night. I have taken The Pentecostal Herald for a number of years and feel I would not like to do without it. I enjoy Dr. and Mrs. Morrison's writing, also the sermons, and page ten is very dear to me with so many children and grown up writing. I think it nice to get acquainted with nice people in other states. I wrote you about a year ago, signing my name a "Silent Reader," and it was printed, so am hoping this one will escape the waste basket. I have long auburn hair, fair complexion, blue eyes, am four feet, five inches tall, rather stout, age thirty-two years. I belong to the M. E. Church. I attend church, Sunday school, prayer meeting regularly, when not busy. My work is practical nursing when I can find it to do. I do not attend shows, dances or card parties. When not employed, I do fancy work such as crocheting, embroidering, piecing quilts, visiting the sick, reading good books, and have a few flowers. I live in a small town I would like to get in touch with anyone who needs a nurse; could give reference; also would like to receive letters from some of the cousins my age and older; would answer all letters received. With best wishes to Aunt Bettie and her family of cousins.

Elizabeth Story.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Please leave me in to tell what God has done, for I just got out of the Van Wert Hospital; had to be operated on for appendicitis. They operated on me Nov. 2, 1931. The Lord heard the prayers of his children for me. Rev. Good and wife, Rev. Lauer and Sister Minnie Woodruff and others prayed and came to see her. The doctors and nurses and all were so good to me. They said I sure got along fast. It was through prayer. It seemed God was so near me through it all. I sure had to suffer. Please pray that God will make me a soul winner. Pray for my father and mother and sisters and brothers who are not saved. Cousins, write to me. I shall look for a shower of letters. Aunt Bettie, please print this as I want the world to know how God helped to get me out of the hospital.

Your sister in Jesus,

Pauline Harner.

Celina, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Well, here I come back again from Texas. I wrote once before and it escaped Mr. W. B. I am a Christian and belong to the M. E. Church, South. I have dark hair, dark complexion and blue eyes. I would like to correspond with some of the boys and girls. Here comes Mr. W. B. I must run.

Evelyn Camp.

Rt. 1, Wellington, Texas.

Dear Aunt Bettie. Will you let another little girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eight years old and in the fourth grade. I have black hair, brown eyes and fair complexion. I wish to see this in print for this is my first letter. Can any one guess my middle name? It begins with J and ends with E. Pearl Benningfield, I guess your name to be Mae. If this is correct, write me, please. Do not let Mr. W. B. get me. I enjoy reading page ten very much.

Alice J. Froderman.
Willmore, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: May a little Florida girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eight years old and in the third grade. I love my teacher, her name is Miss Yarbrough. I live five miles from a church, but go to Sunday school when I can. I have two brothers and one sister. We all go to school except my sister, and she will start next year. My grandma and grandpa live with us. Grandma takes The Herald and I sure enjoy reading page ten. I live on the farm and love country life. Papa has three ponies and I sure do enjoy riding them. Papa has been grinding cane. It sure is lots of fun to be around the mill and see them cook the syrup. I sure would like to see this in print. Love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Virginia Bradley.

Miccosukee, Fla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Alabama girl join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I am nine years old and in the fourth grade. My mother does not take The Herald but our neighbor takes it and I enjoy reading page ten. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with N, and has six letters in it. Father is dead and mother is sick. I want the cousins to please pray for her.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XII.—December 20, 1931.

Subject.—The Supreme Gift of Love. 1 John 4:7-19.

Golden Text.—Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. 1 John 4:11.

Time.—Not known, but probably during the last decade of the first century.

Place.—Unknown. Some suppose Ephesus, because John lived there during his last year.

Introduction.—It is quite common to hear persons speak of the loving gentleness of the apostle John; and there is some reason for it; but it was the curbed mettle of a fractious steed. Jesus called him a "Son of Thunder." It was he who wished to call down fire from heaven to consume certain Samaritans who refused to permit Jesus to tarry for a night in their village. He and his brother James asked for the two best positions in what they thought would be an earthly kingdom of Jesus Christ. John was no weakling. I think Jesus rather liked manly men who were ready to do or to die. Peter and Paul were of that sort. God prefers good timber.

We know almost nothing of the early life of John. Some have supposed that he was yet in his teens when Jesus called him to be an apostle; but there is no proof back of such a guess. It is generally supposed that he was a few years younger than our Lord; but again there is no proof. But we do know that he was a son of Zebedee and Salome. Some persons are fond of guessing. They have conjectured that Salome was a daughter of Joseph by a former wife; but we do not even know that he was ever married before he and Mary became husband and wife. We know next to nothing about Joseph, the little revealed in the Gospels being the limit. The notion that he was an old man when Jesus was born has not even a semblance of proof. Jesus did have brothers and sisters, as we learn from Matt. 13:55, 56; but all indications lead to the belief that they were younger children of Joseph and Mary.

John stands out very clear to view during the earthly ministry of our Lord, and for a short time after Pentecost; but later the vision begins to be clouded; so that we have what might be termed a mixture of history and tradition. He possibly went a bit deeper into the riches of perfect love and Christian experience than any other one of the apostles; but his love was the robust kind that spent its force in activity rather than in mere sentimentalism. He was a great writer, his Gospel being the capstone of the other three Gospels. His epistles are love letters; but they are very severe. He does not argue; but, like his Master, he states truth so pungently and so clearly, that argument would be superfluous. The Apocalypse is too brilliant to have been the work of any unassisted human brain. As one reads it, he feels the sweep of divine influence from its Alpha to its Omega.

It is pretty well established that John spent the last years of his life in Ephesus; and that he took some fatherly oversight of the churches in the surrounding territory. We do not know the date of his exile to Patmos; nor how long it lasted. There is a touching tradition to the effect that when he was so old and worn that he had to be carried to service in his chair every Lord's day, he used to preach this little sermon: "Little children, love one another." There is no doubt that he lived almost, or quite, to the end of the first Christian century; but when or how he died is not known. Strange how many precious things are hidden from us.

Comments on the Lesson.

7. Beloved, let us love one another.—For love's sake God gave his Son to die for men; and for love's sake Jesus came to earth, and "the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth." There can be no Christianity without love. Love is of God.—From God. It is God-given. But we cannot understand the meaning of this, unless we get the meaning of John's Greek word. I believe the word does not occur at all in classical Greek, but belongs solely to the New Testament. Especially does it follow the Baptism with the Holy Ghost which came on the one hundred twenty at Pentecost. The word implies all the sacred sentiment of our word love, but goes further and puts one into benevolent action toward the object of his devotion. Every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God.—An unregenerate soul can not possibly love in this sense, or know God.

8. He that loveth not knoweth not God.—John is using tremendous emphasis. Love is the most terrible passion felt of God or men. We shall never be able to sound the depths of these glorious words: "GOD IS LOVE." Love is the great highway of holiness between God and man; and there is no other. Those who walk that highway enter it and walk in it under the shed blood of the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world. It is a blood-washed way upon which no unclean thing ever enters.

9. In this was manifested the love of God toward us.—This verse sounds like John 3:16. A Christian lives a love-life; "for the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." That we might live through him is the divine purpose in all of it.

10. Herein is love.—This is a marvellous sentence. Had God not manifested his love for us in the sufferings and death of his only begotten Son, we could never have known the meaning of the term; and even now the Divine Spirit that proceedeth from the Father and the Son, must regenerate us and shed abroad God's love in our hearts before we can ever reciprocate that love.

11. Beloved, if God so loved us.—There is irresistible logic behind this great statement of truth. If God so loved us, how can we do anything less than love one another. There is no negative to that.

13. Hereby we know.—Men may advance all sorts or arguments to prove that they are Christians; but all of them are worthless, unless one has the witness of the Holy Spirit that he is a child of God; but if one has that witness, the matter is settled. If led by the Spirit, he will have the fruits of the Spirit. See Galatians 5:22-26.

12. No man hath seen God at any time.—God is an invisible Spirit that cannot be seen by an eye of flesh. Many saw Jesus Christ when he was veiled in human form; but no one has ever seen God as a Spirit. It is in Spirit that he dwells in us, and perfects us in love.

14. We have seen and do testify.—John's positiveness is almost shocking; but he had a right to be positive. He had seen Jesus Christ, had handled his body both in life and death, he had witnessed his miracles; he had seen him die on the cross, saw his dead body laid in Joseph's tomb, and had associated with him after his resurrection from the dead. He had a right to speak boldly, for there was no room for doubt in all that he had seen and heard concerning the Son of God.

15. Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God.—Some have wrested this verse to their own undoing. This is not a head confession, but from the heart. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness." "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord but by the Holy Ghost" Such a confession means nothing, unless prompted by the indwelling, regenerating Spirit of God.

16. He that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.—There is no surface work here. Dig deep! You can find gold and diamonds in plenty at the bottom of the mine. It is in this region that the soul has constant communion with the Infinite. This is the inner circle of God's love. O that more of us might enter into its sacredness.

17. Herein is our love made perfect.—Referring back to the preceding verse. Mark the degrees in love, for all are not perfect in love. We reach that glorious experience when we walk with God, and his indwelling Spirit "makes to us the Godhead known." Boldness in the day of judgment.—I am inclined to believe that there is a double sense here. Such an experience made men bold before earthly judges who condemned them to death for the witness of Jesus Christ; and certainly it will be needed to enable one to stand with boldness before the Judge at the final assize. As he is, so are we in this world.—"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." The disciple must be as his Master. God never purposed that his children should be otherwise.

18. There is no fear in love.—A Christian has the deepest reverence for his heavenly Father; but, if he is filled with perfect love toward both God and men, there is nothing for him to fear in any world. Love lifts him above such passion as fear.

19. We love him, because he first loved us.—There is some great preaching in that verse. In some sense, it is John's climax.

The Christ of the Mount

A WORKING PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE
BY E. STANLEY JONES

In this volume Dr. Jones interprets the Sermon on the Mount. Having written so vividly on the inner life, this most famous of religious writers has felt constrained to apply the Christian gospel to the difficult and disturbing conditions obtaining today. Doctor Jones insists the Sermon on the Mount can be and should be applied to the actual everyday living of the Christian. Price, net, $1.50, postpaid.

THE BAPTISM WITH THE HOLY SPIRIT.

By The Editor.

THERE is no promise in the Scriptures more plainly written than the promise of the baptism with the Holy Spirit.

Our Lord Jesus promised this baptism in most positive language; in fact, he shut his disciples up in Jerusalem between a commandment and a promise.

The commandment was, "Tarry;" the promise was the baptism with the Holy Spirit, and having received this promise, they were to go preaching and witnessing. Their field and operations extended to all nations, and their message was to every creature.

The teaching of our Lord is very clear. The disciples were not prepared for their super-human task until the Holy Spirit had come upon them and endued them with the power which his coming and baptism alone could bestow upon them.

Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, immediately after receiving this baptism with the Holy Spirit, not only produced the most marvelous immediate effect, but it brings the assurance that not only the three thousand converted on that memorable day, were proper subjects for the baptism with the Holy Ghost, but the promise is to your children, to those who are afar off, and as many as the Lord our God shall call. The meaning is clear that this gracious baptism with the Spirit is for all of the children of God.

It must not be forgotten that Peter, in his witnessing about this outpouring of the Spirit, declares that in receiving him their hearts were purified. Here we are clearly taught that the baptism with the Spirit is for a gracious cleansing, as well as an empowering for witnessing and service.

It is worthy of note that there was a most remarkable change in the disciples after their pentecostal experience. Their weaknesses and fears were swept away, and they became bold, full of courage and aggressiveness; their timidity was all gone. There was no shirking, or running away from duty after this. They were ready for prison, or whatever persecution might be brought upon them. They even rejoiced at the privilege of being severely beaten for their witness for Christ and his mighty power to save the lost. There is no doubt but the imperative need of the ministry today, in fact, of all church members, is a baptism with the Holy Spirit. Such baptism would make the church, indeed, an army with banners, a mighty power to awaken and bring a lost world to Christ.

"Come, Holy Ghost, our hearts inspire,
Let us thine influence prove;
Source of the old prophetic fire,
Fountain of life and love."

A GREAT MISTAKE.

The church,—I refer to Methodism—never made a greater mistake than when she substituted a mere human decision for a divine regeneration.

Our Lord Jesus never spoke more positively on any subject than he did on the matter of that change of heart which is absolutely necessary to become a child of God. His language was emphatic and repeated—"Ye must be born again."

Through all history of the church we have had most wonderful examples of this new birth of which our Lord speaks. Many of the great leaders in the Church of Christ were notoriously wicked men; they fell under conviction for sin, repented, believed and were born again. The Holy Spirit wrought in them, instantly, a change so radical and complete, that it was nothing short of a re-creation. These men had been most wicked and rebellious against God, but were made indeed, new men in Christ. What they had hated, they loved, and what they had loved, they hated. The change wrought by the Holy Spirit in the regeneration of a soul is far more wonderful than the healing of the sick, or the raising of the dead. Jesus said, "Greater works than these shall ye do."

It matters not how well a child may have been reared or trained, it needs the new birth—the regeneration wrought by the Holy Spirit. No greater or more fatal mistake can be made than to ignore this gracious work of the Spirit, and bring into the church tens of thousands of young people who know nothing of the new birth. Already Methodism is showing the deleterious effect of this spiritual paralysis brought about by this unscriptural method of bringing people into the church who know nothing of Christ as a personal Saviour—and the worst is yet to come!

H. C. Morrison.

draw away from all sinful forms of worldliness and sectarian prejudices and draw nearer to each other.

It is an interesting fact that in these days of conflict between the faithful and the skeptical elements in the churches, while disruption seems quite probable in some of the large denominations of Christians, those faithful disciples of our Lord in all the churches who hold steadfastly to the apostolic faith, who believe in the inspiration of the Bible, the Virgin Birth, Godhead, sacrificial death and resurrection of our Lord and in all of the fundamental doctrines of our holy Christianity, are drawn together in a far closer union than that of mere church membership. They have come into a union of faith and love. It is oneness in Christ. It is an answer to the prayer of our Lord in John 17, "That they may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou has sent me."

It were a waste of time to talk about oneness between those who accept the Christ of the Bible, Old Testament prophecy and New Testament Gospel, and those loose thinkers who profess to admire Jesus of Nazareth as a mere human teacher, whose father was Joseph and who partook of the ignorance and superstitious notions of his times, who wrought no miracles and made no atonement for the sins of the world in his death upon the cross, and did not arise from the dead.

To worship this imaginary man, created in the minds of infidels and handed over to the modern destructive liberals would be to worship an idol. The Jesus of the modern liberalists is not the Lord Jesus Christ of the Holy Scriptures, who has redeemed us from our sins and by whose atoning merit and power we have become new creatures and have entered into the Kingdom of God. Those who have sought and found the blessed Christ of the Bible are ready to fall at his feet and cry out with Thomas of old, "My Lord and my God." They can have nothing to do with this modern creation of infidelity. There can be no sort of union between those who trust our blessed Redeemer as Saviour and worship him as Lord and those who refuse to do either.

The Apostle who wrote our text also wrote, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? and what concord hath Christ with Belial? and what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? and what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people."

The "dearly beloved" to whom Peter wrote were disciples of our Lord in deed and in truth. They were separated from the world and united in Christ. This separation and union made them "strangers" in the world.

ABSTAIN FROM FLESHLY LUSTS.

"Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, to abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul."—1 Peter 2:11.

It will be seen at once that the inspired apostle is addressing himself to the followers of our Lord. Such an expression as 'dearly beloved' were terms that belonged only to the household of Christian faith. The early Christians lived in a time of great persecution. The common faith they had in Christ, the peace and joy it brought to them, and the sufferings they were called upon to endure bound them together in the closest bonds of fellowship, Christian sympathy and love.

Love is the cement that binds the true church of Christ into oneness, regardless of sects, creed, or the outward form of religion. To love the Lord Jesus with a high and holy devotion is to love all those who love him. Jesus is the center of attraction to all his true disciples and as we draw close to him we

REVIVAL NOTES AND OBSERVATIONS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

Revivals of religion all over the world show the same movings of the Spirit of God in confessions, in soul struggles, in tears and prayers, in earnest, persistent seeking and in victory. In our meeting just at this writing we are witnessing some of the most extraordinary workings of the Holy Spirit among young and old. For a few days the meeting went hard; there were many seekers but not much victory; it looked at times very discouraging. Then the break came and oh, what a change! A professor of one of the schools was seeking for several days; Saturday he became desperate and reached his Peniel. Saturday night was a time of terrific struggle, and then about ten o'clock victory came. Oh, what a relief! What an expression of joy and peace was on his countenance. He was so full that utterance was difficult; while he was testifying his son was at the altar; he ran to him and helped him through. Another son in the audience was all broken up and when I left the meeting about 10:30 he was dealing with this son. The organist had a terrific struggle lasting for days. Friday night she prayed nearly all night and in the morning came to the church alone and prayed through.

II.

Many there are who say the day of revivals is over and we must employ other methods of getting people into the Kingdom of God. Over here in Brazil revival fires burn in the old-fashioned way.

III.

At this time of writing our meetings in Brazil are in a college town (Granberry College.) My program for the day runs something like this:

- 8:15—Address to School of Theology—students and faculty.
- 12:30—College Chapel address.
- 3:00—Preaching at M. E. Church.
- 7:30—Preaching and Evangelistic Service.

My interpreter is the Dean of the Theological School, an Emory man; he is a Brazilian and has a real passion for the evangelization of Brazil. His soul is deeply moved when he prays and he puts life into his interpretations. He wants to see his young preachers on fire. Yesterday, we had a wonderful time in the afternoon. Our subject was Sanctification. 1 Thess. 5:23. Seldom have I seen such a response to an altar call in the afternoon meeting as we had yesterday. Preacher, students, and men and women rushed to the altar and began praying intensely for sanctifying power. To many it was their first seeking along these lines, so we did not try to hurry them along—better give time to the working of the Holy Spirit.

IV.

I read in one of the home papers the following: "What may be termed a wedding celebration will take place in the auditorium, Atlantic City, on November 5. This is not one of the marriages 'made in heaven.' It celebrates the union of church and theater. The celebration will take the form of 'the greatest missionary pageant ever given in America.' There will be 600 'participants.' That's a good word and sounds better than actors, or performers, for a church function. The advance agent, Dr. —, has been in Atlantic City and 'completed arrangements.' Has Methodism forgotten 'The Wanderer' at Columbus, O.—the greatest missionary drama ever staged in America and the disastrous result?"

Now this pageant business in missionary work, I believe, is a delusion and a snare. It reduces the great work of Missions to a thing

COME WITH ME TO BRAZIL.

In your thoughts join me in a meeting in Piracicaba, Brazil, where, yesterday (Sunday) we spent over ten hours in the Methodist churches, and saw the salvation of the Lord in the most extraordinary meeting in which scores of people, young and old, were moved, saved, cleansed, restored and baptized with the Holy Spirit. Oh, what a day! It truly was Pentecost. The Girls' College shared wondrously in the blessings, and up to past eleven o'clock at night the missionaries and others were dealing with students seeking the Lord. One student who, for ten years, never showed any interest, was converted and a number of Roman Catholic students were saved. A professor of one of the public schools got the baptism of the Spirit Saturday night and on Sunday, saw nearly his whole family of young men and women blessedly saved. We preached three times and when altar service began the big altar was lined and side seats were crowded with seeking souls. It was remarkable when the power came upon the seekers how they rose with the glow of victory on their faces and testified to the saving or sanctifying grace of God. All ages were blessed. The Brazilians are not noisy in their meetings but they are deeply emotional; they express their sorrow and joy with tears. Often the altar was wet with the tears of seekers. Then the joy! It was beautiful to see the faces lit up with the joy of salvation. They have some very fine churches in Brazil with spacious altars, but they have not been used for revival purposes. Now a new use has been discovered for the altar, it is not only a place for sacramental services, but a place to get people through to God.

In different parts of the church people were seeking the Lord; down by the door a college professor was dealing with two of his boys; in the side room one of the lady professors was praying with a Catholic student; over in the choir corner souls were praying through. The organist who got through Saturday was so busy dealing with souls that she hardly had time to attend the organ. The saved girls of the college were dealing with girls who were unsaved and finally would bring them out to the altar; the missionaries had their hands full at all the meetings helping souls through. Look at that group of young men and women up around the organ singing "Dia Feliz" (Happy Day) and other songs. Nearly every one of them have been at the altar and prayed through and they are singing for very joy. These scenes remind me of "old-time Methodism" when the power of the Lord came down. The church at Piracicaba has entered into a new epoch in its history. In its fifty years of history they say this was the greatest revival ever experienced and it was all due to getting back to the Acts of the apostles and to Pentecost. Rev. W. G. Borchers was the faithful interpreter and co-helper in these wonderful meetings.

George W. Ridout.

spectacular and dishonoring to the Holy Ghost; and the inevitable tendency is to magnify the social and educational features of Christian missions and obscure the real evangelistic, soul-saving objective. Crowds of young people give themselves to missions today purely from the social uplift and educational viewpoint. They have no soul-saving passion and have had no experience in winning souls.

All these big shows and pyrotechnics about Missions are belittling and degrading to the New Testament idea of Christian missions. I went through Columbus fiasco which was the biggest thing every attempted in the way of the spectacular and bizarre. The Methodist Church sunk nearly a million dollars in it. I know intimately the man who was put in as Treasurer. One of the Bishops urged his appointment because they saw how things were going and they needed a man to watch the treasury who would be a kind of a guardian to the wreckless spenders of Methodism's good money; the treasurer had hard fights sometimes to hold up expenditures and with all his care and watchfulness the deficit was appalling.

This pageant business always lends itself to the world and worldliness. Theatricals have to be brought in and actors and singers from the stage to help out.

Especially in a time like this a Missionary pageant is in bad taste and ill timed. It was said of Napoleon that at one time things in Paris were looking ominous; in order to call off attention he ordered that the dome of one of the great Government buildings should be painted with gold! The church often resorts to the spectacular in order to cover up her defects but this is no time to do it. All the world is sick, the mission fields are suffering from depleted treasuries and much of the work has to be shut down. This is a time for sackcloth and prayer more than pageants and gilded shows.

V.

The Romans had a fear of thunder on the left. When they heard that it was an evil omen to them, they were afraid; sometimes terrorized. As we look at the church today we hear "thunder on the left."

Last summer we were talking to a District Superintendent. He was getting his reports in for the Fall Conference. Among the questions he asked was: "How many conversions have you had?" One preacher replied thus: If you mean by conversion an emotional experience we have had none, but we have had eleven decisions." Now a Methodist of the John Wesley School draws a very definite line of difference between conversions and decisions. A real conversion is both a decision and a decided emotional experience by which a sinner is translated from the kingdom of Satan to the power of God; he is redeemed by the precious blood and made a child of God.

In one of the summer schools a very distinguished educator told approvingly of a teacher who was training her children so that they would not need to be converted. This big gun was advocating religious education, of course, and deprecating Regeneration. Some of these learned gentlemen forget Methodist history. They need to remember that John Wesley had the best kind of religious education that any young fellow had. He graduated from Oxford, joined the ministry, became a missionary, but his real life-work did not begin till his conversion to God on May 24, 1738. That was an emotional experience in which he felt his "heart strangely warmed." Methodism needs today the mourners' bench and that emotional experience called conversion.

Though an Oxford man, a great scholar and reader, and a great writer of books, no man revered his Bible more than John Wesley. Hear him as he speaks:

"Here I am: I and my Bible. I will not, I dare not vary from this book in either great things or small. I have no power to dispense with one jot or tittle of what is contained therein. I am determined to be a Bible Christian, not almost but altogether. Who will meet me on this ground? Join me on this, or not at all." Sermon 120.

Hear Wesley on the sin question:

"But some men will say, 'True, whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin habitually.' Habitually! Whence is that? I read it not. It is not written in the Book. God plainly saith, 'He doth not commit sin,' and thou addest habitually. Who art thou that mendest the oracles of God? that addest to the words of this book? Beware, I beseech thee, lest God 'add to thee all the plagues that are written therein.' Especially when the comment thou addest is such as quite swallows up the text. So that by this artful method of deceiving, the precious promises utterly lost; by this tricking and shuffling of men the word of God is made of non-effect. O beware, thou that thus takest from the words of this book, that taking away the whole meaning and spirit from them, leavest only what may indeed be termed a dead letter, lest God take away thy part out of the book of life."

RADIO IN PROPHECY.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

PART III.

WE wish now to enumerate some of the amazing results that have already been attained in this new field of magic. When viewed from the critical viewpoint of cause and effect, the feats of the Radio seem not unlike the magic wand in the hands of a skillful conjurer—the wizard.

Sometime ago a receiver was placed in the tunnel under the Hudson River and a violin solo was rendered in a city twelve hundred miles away. In the passage from the studio to the receiver, the music passed through two high mountain ranges, then through thirty feet of water and thirty feet of earth, masonry and steel. Not one velvety note of the solo was lost, not even the soft harmonics. You may go into the largest bank of a city, down in the basement where are located the great steel vaults, and close the door and messages from the outside world will enter without even a jarring tone; they pass through brick walls and huge steel doors as though they did not exist.

Last autumn a great football game was played in the famous Rose Bowl at Pasadena, California. The game, play by play, was sent to the National Broadcasting Company in New York City by telephone. This was done for "hook up" purposes as it was a game of nation-wide interest. The game by plays was sent to the broadcasting station a mile from the big stadium where the game was being played; then it was broadcasted to New York, relayed and distributed by the big chain system to every part of the land. The whole process went across the continent three times, and was then sent to the homes of America—all done in less than one-fourth of a second.

Sometime ago the great H. J. Heinz Company of the "57 Varieties" fame, celebrated the eightieth anniversary of the old gentleman's birth, and at the same time, the fifty-seventh anniversary of the concern, when he opened a small business in Pittsburgh, Pa. The matter was arranged to have a simultaneous banquet for all the employees of the Heinz Company. They have sixty-four large factories; fifty-seven of them in the United States, four in England, one in Australia and other large cities outside of this country. The headquarters, or home plant, is located at Pittsburgh, Pa., and the time was so checked up through the day and the night with the banquet at Pittsburgh, which was eight o'clock in the evening, they were all to eat at exactly the same time. There was in the big hall at Pittsburgh a platform, and one set of speakers had been selected to deliver the message for the occasion. Promptly at eight o'clock the toastmaster at the banquet hall in Pittsburgh, sounded the gong and the banquet halls of the other sixty-four cities arose for the prayer and grace to be given for the meal. Each speaker stood before the microphone and spoke for all those in America, England, Scotland and Australia. The President of the United States was an invited speaker of the occasion, but he was unable to attend; whereupon he delivered his message by long distance telephone, which was relayed at the banquet hall in Pittsburgh, and by means of the powerful K.D.K.A. broadcasting station, he spoke to all the guests of the H. J. Heinz Company, scattered among the nations mentioned. This remarkable fact was published: "The diners in England and on the Pacific Coast heard the messages before those sitting in the rear end of the hall at Pittsburgh heard them."

This is no more strange than our last Christmas a gentleman in Berlin addressed a German friend in America, and the Pope of Rome spoke for all the world recently from the Vatican. Such things as these daze the brain cells, for the wonders of it are fast becoming so common that little notice is taken of them.

Now, from the big laboratories, which are, in truth, known as the House of Magic, they are prepared to tell us that before long, not only may we sit in our rooms and hear the football game in the Rose Bowl, but we may actually, by means of television, which is now an assured accomplishment, but not fully perfected, look upon the great grid-iron battle; or actually see the Giants and Athletics playing the world series in New York or in Washington.

We may not only hear the speakers of Berlin and Rome but we may see them as they deliver their messages, thousands of miles away, as if we were in their very presence. Sweethearts cannot only hear the words of love over the phone but they may see their smiles and flashing eyes each to the other. The young lady will have to fix up a bit before the conversation begins, however, rather than in the manner in which they may appear now at the telephone on "the morning after the night before."

Photographs have been taken of mob scenes occurring early in the morning in Europe, and these pictures can appear in the evening papers of America the same day. The Air Travel News tells us that a new device has been affixed to an aeroplane—a combination photographic lenses and radio equipment. By this device the plane may soar over the scenes in the jungle lands of Africa or the dead or forgotten cities of South America and not only photograph the scenes, but transmit the films thousands of miles away to the studios. Scenes of wild life may be gotten in the same manner without the danger of travel adventure entering these obscure places. The camera lens is mounted on the floor of the plane and the photographic eye pointing to the ground catches the scenes as a plane sweeps through the sky.

The powers of Radio are springing continual surprises on the world, and the shocks are so frequent and so terrific that the nervous system of the nations is becoming so adjusted to them that the shocks are scarcely felt any more. The experts tell us that soon static will be entirely eliminated and, also, that messages may be sent in one direction instead of the waves going out, not only in circles, but up as well as down. In other words, the radio communication can be private as is now on the telephone. Then again, imagine a six-hundred-word letter traveling to a destination a thousand miles away in one minute. This is said to have been made possible through the new radio photograph apparatus invented by one of the scientists in one of the laboratories in the Westinghouse Electrical Manufacturing Company of Pittsburgh. In one minute it can send a facsimile letter of six hundred and thirty words and will transmit a complete photograph in the same length of time. An ordinary photograph is placed on a cylinder and as the cylinder rotates slowly, and at the same time moves forward longitudinally, a beam of light plays over the photograph and the message and is reflected by a system of mirrors to electric cells. By this means the actual letter, as it appears from the hand of the writer, can be sent to the ends of the earth in one minute. Then, a man may sign his name to a document in New York and it will be exactly as the writer signs it.

But here is the most fearful revelation of all, and one that should scare, not only our nation, but all the world. Mr. Marconi, who is creating new wonders all the time, has invented a small radio set, built in Genoa, Italy, also on his private yacht, the Electra, so that he can touch a button and cut off electrical power thousands of miles away. He could darken any distant city. By the use of this little radio set Mr. Marconi can touch a button and stop the electric power anywhere on land and sea; he could darken a city at any distance; he could stop electrically driven machinery anywhere; he could halt the progress of one of the American Navy's huge electrically-driven super-dreadnaughts; he could darken New York City, stop every electric car going out from the Grand Central Station, and darken San Francisco and London, all in the twinkling of an eye. Mr. Marconi says: "It is very simple with my duplicate stand wireless set, which anyone may be able to have one of these days. It has a short-wave aerial fifteen inches high and is made entirely from materials of our own country."

Let the mind of the writer contemplate for one moment the consequences of this device, in the keeping of a nation that might be ambitious to rule all the other nations. Suppose Mussolini should put his scheme of Imperial Rome into effect one of these days. Not long since an Italian lady is said to have had a vision of Italy's future with the man of mysteries domineering all Europe and America. You say that is only a wild hallucination of a Mussolini worshipper—and he is being actually worshipped by many of his followers; but suppose this iron-fisted dictator should undertake to start something, knowing that one of his subjects practically held the world at his hands, helpless as it were. Just think of it. Yes, we are only surmising, of course, but when such powers are in the hands of one man it is indeed fearful to contemplate. God grant that such may never come to pass.

A Character-Building Christmas Gift.

Young people have resources that are priceless. God has endowed them with qualities, that, if rightly directed will lead them to the highest heights of accomplishment and usefulness. In our book, "Ideals for Earnest Youth" every phase of life and how to make the most of it is discussed. If a young man or young woman did not aspire to the highest and noblest things in life, he or she could not read the 61 chapters in this book without being inspired and purposing in their heart to be a power for good in the world. The chapters are brief, intensely interesting and to the point. Anyone from 12 to 25, and even the older folk, would enjoy and get a blessing from this book. The price is only $1.00, and the make-up is very attractive. Give it for Christmas. Pentecostal Publishing Company, Louisville, Kentucky.

SEEMINGLY A LITTLE THING

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

WE do not know but this idea of fancy post cards, has been a great blessing to the human family, for doubtless it has touched the ends of the earth. It is true a card seems a little thing, but is that all? What is there back of the card that caused it to be sent? Ah, there we strike the gem which shines with brightest luster—a thought.

Yes, I thought of you, and that so strongly, that I wanted you to know it, and so the post card was purchased, the stamp was placed on it and away it went to let you know you had not been forgotten.

There is something in the human heart which makes it long to be remembered; something which pleases us when we know some one is thinking of us, no matter in how small a way; it affords us a sense of pleasure to know we are not forgotten. The very thought of not being remembered, causes a feeling of sadness to steal over us, and saps the sweetness out of life.

We have had occasion to pass an abandoned cemetery where the headstones bear the mark of time so deeply that you can hardly find the outline of the graves. Decades have passed since the mourners stood around the open grave and hopes seemed buried with the loved ones, but now there is no one left to place a flower on the lonely spot, nor shed a tear for the one once loved and lost. This all reminds us that with the revolutions of time, we too, shall be lost to the generations who now love us. The players on life's stage in years to come, will not know those who are now making history on the world's pages; new scenes and faces will have taken their places, and the old ones will be crowded out—forgotten.

While this is all true, there is connected with it a glorious thought, and that is, there is One who never forgets his own, but the eye that never sleeps watches the resting place of every one of his children and at the last day, he shall call "Come forth," and they who sleep in Jesus shall burst the bands of death and the grave and rise to meet their Lord in clouds of glory.

How comforting it must have been to Peter's heart when the Master, in sending word by the women that he had risen from the dead, said, "Tell my disciples and Peter." It seemed that the Master knew Peter would need encouragement at this time, so he wanted to designate him in particular that he might be cheered with the thought that he was not forgotten. Methinks Peter's heart swelled with new hope and courage as he received this message. He doubtless said to himself, "After all, the Master loves me; notwithstanding the fact that I denied him; that I followed him afar off; that I slept when the burden of the world's sin was upon him; that I could not watch with him one hour when he was treading the winepress alone; that I forsook him when he most needed me; yes, in spite of all these failures and weaknesses on my part, the Master remembers and loves me still. How strong his love must be to forget all these things so unlovely in me, and remember only my declarations of fidelity and devotion which, in my days of strength, I sincerely avowed to him."

It was only this morning that we were gladdened by the receipt of post cards from two of the women in our Bible class. One of them was having a good, happy time, while the other was "passing under the rod," having buried a loved sister. They will never know how much we appreciated "this thought of me," nor how it put a sweetness into the day that made us glad to live. They impressed us so that we have given vent to our feelings in the reflections which we have given to those who may chance to read this column. Let us all be more thoughtful of each other and not be tempted to leave off the seemingly little things, thinking they will be of no value; remember just a thought expressed, may, like the ray of sunshine, dissipate shadows which hang low over some despondent soul. Let us cultivate a generous spirit in dispensing from the storehouse of our affection, those gifts of loving thoughtfulness which will mean the resuscitating of many a heart which is crying for that which only love can give. Let us seek for that friendship which Addison said was a strong and habitual inclination in two persons to promote the good and happiness of each other. This we can do by oft thinking of each other, and, with our thinking will come many ways in which we can minister to them.

We all need each other; none of us liveth unto himself, and whether we realize it or not, much of our strength for life's conflicts comes from the fact that there are those who get under the burden with us, who think often of us, who long for our highest welfare and who esteem us friends indeed. Truly,

"Life offers no joy like a friend:

Fulfillment and prophecy blend

In the throb of a heart our own,

A heart where we know and are known."

By the way, have you taken advantage of our wonderful offer of Christmas cards? There are twenty-one beautiful cards, with envelopes artistically lined for mailing; then twelve single cards, all beautiful in design and expressive of the Christmas greeting, are thrown in for good measure, making thirty-three cards by which you can send greeting to that number of friends. Yes, it may be only a card, but the good cheer it shall bring will be beyond computation.

Miracle Lives of China.

Here is one of the most remarkable books on the gracious power of God among the Chinese people that I have ever read. It tells the story of a marvelous power of God's converting grace under the ministry of Rev. and Mrs. Jonathan Goforth. I have read the book with increasing interest from first to last page. It should be read by hosts of people. It is a revelation, a spiritual tonic. It reveals the fact that the mighty power of God is in the world, moving among the people wherever he can find consecrated instruments through whom he can work. This book contains 157 pages, neatly bound, good paper, clear print. Each page contains considerable matter. You will be entertained, instructed and your faith quickened by the reading of this book. It may be had of The Pentecostal Publishing Company, for $1.50.

THE MOST INSIDIOUS HERESY

CLARENCE TRUE WILSON.

I am not a heresy hunter; it must strike me in the face to get noticed. It must attack my church, sidetrack it, or pervert its mission to put me on the warpath against it. The most subtle error of our church masks under the name of "Religious Education." It has had the whole machinery of the church for a score of years, its Book Concern, its colleges, its Theological schools, its money and ministers; and we are reaping the fruit of its planting now, 50,000 less in membership last year, $900,000 lost in benevolences, a World Service Drop! If we had had a holiness revival or an evangelistic crusade with these results, how our highbrows would have looked wise and said, "Revivals do not pay."

Will the facts show to all but the willful blind that Religious Education as a substitute for regeneration, crowding conversion into the background, obscuring our Methodist Mission to spread Scriptural Holiness over these lands, does not pay, but has devitalized the church.

The whole emphasis is false; it has made salvation a personal achievement, not the acceptance by faith of a gift from God. The difference between the religion of Jesus Christ and the modern substitute is, one says Christ came down from Heaven to bring a gift to man; the other teaches that religion is an achievement through religious education. The whole Gospel scheme is reversed. God so loved that he gave is changed to "Men must so work and study as to know and live."

I heard a college president of a church-supported school stand up and plead for money for the Board of Education, and say, "The future of Methodism is based upon their board. We used to get our members through the altar process, but now we are going to educate them into it."

We have teachers in our church actually teaching that a sinner can be transformed into a saint by an educational process; and one scholar has written a learned book to show how Christ became divine. He achieved it by a supreme sacrifice upon the cross! I asked Dr. Frank W. Collier, professor of philosophy in the American University at Washington, how to answer that false philosophy in a sentence. He replied, "You can never create a metaphysical entity by a moral process."

I remembered that my last horse was trained to open the box and bring me the mail. It could pick out the letters on blocks and spell, but it did not become a man or an angel. It was just a trained horse.

When Mark Twain saw two children looking with admiration at "The little old wobbly calf," he patted them on the head and said, "Children, take good care of that calf, feed it well and it will become a nice little pony." And under good treatment it would as surely as an educated sinner would become a saint or a human being a God by any moral process.

"Ye must be born again." "Be ye holy for I am holy." Neither birth, nor sanctification are educational processes. Give us converted and entirely consecrated Christians, and then a religious education to fit them for service.

A Treat of Good Things.

Asbury College, in the Chapel services and also in the evening hours of worship, has been enjoying a treat of good things during the school year thus far. Following the ten-day services by President Emeritus Dr. H. C. Morrison, in which a large number of our students were definitely saved or sanctified, the Rev. C. W. Ruth spoke for a week indoctrinating the student body in the meaning and experience of Scriptural Holiness. Then the Kentucky State Holiness Association met at the College and a week's services were held by the Rev. Joseph H. Smith, and Dr. C. W. Butler, of Cleveland Bible Institute. About the first of February, the Rev. Paul Rees of the Detroit Holiness Tabernacle will hold a two-weeks' meeting of the church and school. The latter part of March Commissioner Brengle will give a week which will be rich with the wisdom of his ripe and saintly life. The latter part of April Dr. Morrison will be with us again and at Commencement time the Annual Holiness Convention will be held with a number of outstanding speakers. Other addresses also have been or will be delivered throughout the year by various evangelists and ministers who experience and preach the gospel of Full Salvation.

In addition to these, several outstanding Christian business men of the nation have been secured to show that big business and the King's business are entirely compatible. Altogether, this year is to be an outstanding one in the many fine presentations of life and experience which will come to the student body from these inspiring personalities.

Both the administration and faculty of the school are of one mind in seeking to have the students who come to Asbury College find themselves religiously and go out from these walls to exemplify by word and experience the power of Jesus Christ to save from all sin. Ever widening is the influence of this institution and more and more are our young preachers and special workers registering in their efficient and helpful work for the extension of the Kingdom of God. We still believe that no safer place can be found for the youth of America than in the halls of Asbury College.

The Government Muzzles Dr. Shuler.

(Editorial in Baltimore Southern Methodist, November 28, 1931.)

We hold no special brief for Dr. R. P. (Bob) Shuler of our Trinity Methodist Church in Los Angeles—except that he is a Methodist preacher, and we like him personally. His ways are not our ways, nor his methods our methods, and he doubtless has broadcast statements over the Trinity church radio in California that have hurt more than helped organized religion. But with all that, we cannot but feel that when the Federal Radio Commission refused to renew the broadcasting license of station KGEF (Trinity Church) it engaged in an exceedingly high-handed piece of business. In spite of strong representation made in Dr. Shuler's behalf by reputable citizens, the men representing our nation's government have now ordered Bob Shuler shut off the air and his station closed. And why? They give many reasons, but perhaps "division 4" will tell the story. In this they affirm that "Shuler has repeatedly attacked the Catholic Church in his broadcast." In proving it they go back to the 1928 presidential campaign and quote at some length Dr. Shuler's radio attack upon Governor Alfred E. Smith. In other words, the official representatives of our government are muzzling a minister of our church now because of what he said then and at other times on what he considered a moral issue.

As hinted above, we are not of the Bob Shuler type. Most of our preachers in the east would shrink from undertaking to tell the world via radio night after night concerning civic officials, judges, politicians, preachers, movie actors and others who have failed to do their duty or have laid themselves open to a public reprimand. But Baltimore, Richmond and Roanoke are not Los Angeles. The west, even today, is the west, and virulent diseases probably need strong remedies. What is certain is that the underworld, the crooked politicians, the whole horde of racketeers, hi-jackers, bootleggers, gunmen and Chinatown opium eaters on the west coast hate and fear the Trinity Church pastor. They have done everything possible to hush him—even bombed his church and jailed him. But for all that, everyone knows that whenever a crooked judge accepts a bribe, whenever a man high in public life plays fast and loose morally, whenever a movie actor flaunts his or her immorality in the public face, whenever a woman, even though a "four-square preacher," slips a few cogs morally,—every one knows that that evening there will go forth a Voice from station KGEF that will be thundered from all the loud speakers on the coast. Evil men fear and tremble at it. Bob Shuler may be mistaken and doubtless often is, but there is something of the ancient prophet about the man and—the government doesn't like it. Governments never have.

The revolutionary nature of the Federal Radio Commission's ruling causes one to ponder who the next preacher will be to be shut off the air. And why does the government not hasten to censor the Roman Catholic priest, Coughlan, of Royal Oak, Michigan, while they are at it? We have heard this man attack the Constitution of the United States itself through the Eighteenth Amendment—not simply another religious body, but the fundamental instrument upon which our whole government stands. Why do they not let him hear from them? Or are Methodists alone to be censored for saying what they have to say?

We are not opposing the right of a Catholic priest or anyone else to speak as he pleases. We are demanding it for all. In our theory every American must enjoy the right to free speech, if our country is to endure, and every idea as expressed must stand on its own right. If there is any transgression of the decencies of expression over the air, or if anyone feels himself libeled, the courts are always open. But free speech is the essence of our national liberty and our ministers should enjoy it as much as anyone else. We are inclined to agree with Bishop Ainsworth that a systematic attempt is being made to intimidate and browbeat the preachers of the country by politicians and newspapers. To which there is only this to be said: It can't be done! We doubt very much if Dr. Shuler himself will be hushed very long.

EVANGELISTS C. C. AND MARGARET CRAMMOND.

We have just closed a very profitable meeting in the Nazarene Church at Grand Ledge, Mich., with Rev. Neal Hutchinson as pastor. This was one of those old-fashioned revivals brought on by prayer, where the people are visited with mighty conviction, resulting in genuine cases of conversion and sanctification. From the very beginning there was manifested a good interest and crowds filled the church, and at nearly every altar call seekers responded to the invitation. The closing night of the campaign was one of great victory, when Sister Crammond preached on the "Second Coming of Christ" and the altar was lined with seekers. There were about sixty professions of the two works of grace, also several new tithers and family altars established. Praise the Lord! We enjoyed our labors with Brother Hutchinson, and he surely knows how to take good care of the evangelists in a financial way. At this writing, we are in a Tabernacle meeting in Jackson, Mich., with Rev. W. W. Clay. The Lord is giving victory and a number of souls found the Lord last night, for which we praise him.

C. C. Crammond.

E. STANLEY JONES' LETTER

My intentions were that the six months between July and December should be spent in China and the Far East. But I could not get the consent of the Inner Voice to go. India seemed to demand all we could give at this critical period when everything seems to be in the melting pot.

I am really glad I did not go for the last three months have been among the finest I have spent in India. I put the finishing touches on my new book on the Sermon on the Mount while spending a couple of weeks with my family in Landour where Eunice is in school. By the time this gets to you the book will probably be issued from the Press under the title "The Christ of the Mount," "A Working Philosophy of Life." It will be issued simultaneously in England and America.

My first series was in Almora, a station in the Himalayas. This is rather a famous place for Hinduism. Several Europeans and Americans who have become Hindus are living there in Hindu Ashrams. The appeal of the mystic East has taken them past Christ to the vagaries of occult thought. They seem to be still on the quest. Everyone is until they put their feet upon the Way. The meetings here were not outstandingly great but they were good. Fine crowds filled the hall and gave real attention as Christ was presented—and responsive attention too. Here I came into contact with a Christian nationalist who had gone to jail and who had been beaten up with lathi blows during the last Gandhi movement. The people call him "The Gandhi of Almora." He is a very beautiful character and his Christian life is preaching Christ in a powerful way.

Agra had been the place of riots between the Hindus and the Moslems and one of the professors of the Christian college there sustained injuries in trying to separate them. We wondered how they would respond to our message. It turned out to be one of the best series I have ever had in India. Much prayer had preceded the meetings and much prayer pervaded the meetings. So there was grip in the whole of the series. Prayer does change things! The last night when I was making my appeal for personal surrender a Hindu who was very near the Kingdom of God spent the whole of the time I was speaking on his knees down in the chapel that my message might get hold. A Brahman on his knees praying that a Christian evangelist might be successful! The large hall in the St. John's College was filled to overflowing every night. It was hot beyond words. When I finished each evening after about two hours of speaking (sometimes more!) there would not be a dry stitch on me. And yet that crowd stayed with it and asked for more. Principal Holland, the Anglican head of the institution, wrote: "I have never in my life seen the power of God so manifested." It did seem that we had little to do with it. God was working and drawing the hearts of men. The last night I asked only those to come the next night who wanted to find God and wanted to find him through Christ. About three hundred came. Shall we ever forget the sense of Christ that was upon the meeting as we talked about finding God through him? We were face to face!

One day at Agra I was asked to speak to the college where the people are the disciples of a Guru who is supposed to be the Incarnation of the Word. He attended the meeting. The chairman, one of the professors, a disciple of his, began by saying, "Your Holiness, Ladies and Gentlemen." Could I address him as "Your Holiness?" Hardly! So I cut the knot by addressing no one when I arose. No one felt hurt! There is an American woman in this institution who has thrown her lot in with this sect. She feels that there is something above the ordinary in this Guru. Strange that we could not see what she saw. But perhaps it was because our eyes had rested on Another.

One day I had spoken in a Government college when a Hindu came up at the close and said, "But you didn't begin or close with prayer as you did in the other meetings at St. John's College." I told him my excuse was that this was a Government College, and I did not feel like pressing prayer upon them there. He replied, "But doesn't the Government College also belong to God?" He was right. All life belongs to God and we should claim it all for him.

The last night on my way to the station to catch a midnight train to the next appointment I went to see the Taj by moonlight. I was weary in every portion of my being, but as I sat for several hours and drank in the sheer beauty of that wondrous creation of man I dedicated myself again to the people who could create such a dream in marble. If men could make such beauty in marble, what couldn't Christ create out of men? He touched away the weariness and we went our way.

FACTS FROM THE FIRING LINE.

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge."—Hos. 4:6.

Prohibition has wrought miracles of moral, social and economic redemption, but thousands of dregs do not know it. Every pastor is urged to reprint the following Fact in the Church Calendar, or read it from the pulpit to offset the destructive wet propaganda which appears in many of the secular newspapers. A new Fact appears in this place in each issue.

Economists agree unanimously that prohibition has been largely responsible for the higher standards of living that has added 30,000,000 new savings accounts amounting to $3,000,000,000 (1) and increased High School attendance from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 and college registration from 350,000 to 1,000,000. (2) —(1) U. S. Dept. of Commerce. —(2) U. S. Bureau of Education.

Guntur is a Lutheran station, the center of a great mass movement among the low castes. I say among the low castes but it is now spreading to the higher castes. In this section among the Wesleyans, the Lutherans and the Baptists about 20,000 people of high caste have been baptized. And the reason is that they have seen the lives of the Christians from among the outcasts. The changed lives have converted the higher castes.

But here I was hitting at the very highest of all. Would the break come among them? It is slowly but surely coming! The meetings for the educated were twice as good as those I had in Guntur four years ago. The hall was so overcrowded that the students of the college who were in the Freshman and Sophomore years were asked not to come. Many had to stand for hours. The last night when I asked only those to come who wanted to find God there were about three hundred there. The Round Table Conference at this place was one of the best I have had. But as usual, even after the fine and best had been spoken from the Non-Christians, Christ was in moral command of the situation. The last night we sat down on the roof of a house and had dinner—both Hindus and Christians. Caste was breaking down and we were coming together.

Hyderabad is the capital of the largest Native State in India. Fourteen million people are under the rulership of this Mohammedan ruler. One would expect these Mohammedans to be bigoted and exclusive and impossible. Instead they were eager and friendly. When I first began coming to Hyderabad some years ago they were afraid to have public meetings. Christians refused to be chairmen for they were afraid of riots at the mention of the name of Christ. Now we simply could not accommodate the crowds that came. Some came an hour and a half beforehand in order to get a seat. And the atmosphere was not hostile—it was friendly and eager. The man who is next to the Nizam, a Mohammedan Nawab, asked this question, "Cannot a man be a good Christian if he does not accept the Incarnation and the Atonement, but believes in Christ as the best of men, on the principle that he who is not against us is for us?" Interesting that he should ask any such question at all. The Round Table Conference which was held in the leading Nationalist home was attended by the finest men of the State. Christ was gripping us at the close. The head British official, the Resident and his wife, attended many of the meetings and were very keen, so keen that one night at Question Hour they stayed through till 8:45 when they had a dinner engagement at 8:30! The last night in the after-meeting several hundred stayed for personal finding. One night a stone was thrown on the roof of the hall, the only disturbance I have had in fifteen years. And that was not very serious. Probably a mischievous boy.

En route to this place I stopped a day with Bishop Azariah, the first Indian Bishop. He is in charge of a mass movement. There are now 170,000 Christians in his diocese, of these 100,000 of them are in Church every night of the year studying the Scriptures. On Sunday 90% of them are in church. This is solid work.

Before I close this letter may I make a request? You, who have been our financial helpers, will you continue? Yesterday I received a letter from a missionary whom I have been helping in which he told of his continued "cuts" in the work until now, "I cannot even write a letter without borrowing a postage stamp." We must have you stand by at this time of very deep need. With my gratitude and my prayers for what you have done.

Yours in Him,
E. STANLEY JONES.

Your Opportunity

to share in one of the most wonderful "hard-time" purchases it has been our privilege to make. The book is the "Beautiful Story of the Bible," in simple language, containing nearly three hundred stories from the Holy Book. It is a fascinating, inspiring and instructive historical narrative of the Old and New Testament times, including the lives of the prophets, of the rulers and the beautiful story of Jesus and his disciples. The book is designed as a course of instruction for the fifty-two weeks in the year, or for daily reading followed by a series of questions which simplify the stories and emphasize their important truths. Durable cloth binding.

There are about 200 illustrations in the book many of them full page in colors. There are 468 pages of double-column, intensely interesting reading matter, besides the fifty-two sets of questions. While we are writing this notice, a distinguished author and minister comes into our office, picks up the book and remarks that it is the finest child's story book that he knows of.

If you want to furnish your own child with one of the best Bible story books to be had, now is the time; if you want to furnish a relative or neighbor's child, now is the time; if you want one for your own use to help you in simplifying and teaching a spiritual Sunday school lesson, now is the time; if you are looking for something inexpensive, and something that will bless, in the way of a birthday or Christmas gift, now is the time.

When this remainder of the edition is exhausted, the book will not be reprinted. It was published to sell at $2.00, but the circumstances under which we bought these copies enable us to sell them out at $1.00 per copy, postpaid. Don't let this opportunity pass, but send The Pentecostal Publishing Company $1.00 worth of stamps, a money order, or currency right away, and get your copy.

---GLEANINGS FROM THE EVANGELISTIC FIELD---

IN THE BRITISH ISLES.

It has been sometime since we wrote our friends at home, but we find that frequent reports are not good for our work. We have learned the truth of Rev. Chas. G. Finney's statement, that there is no surer way to kill a revival than to report it. So we merely wish to state that we are still evangelizing in Europe, and are now in a campaign in Birkenhead, England, for Rev. and Mrs. J. D. Drysdale, who are in charge of the "Emmanuel" Bible School and Missionary Training Home.

Brother and Sister Drysdale are wonderful people, and are doing a good work. Their students are very active in mission work in the city. The girls wear a navy blue uniform, which is very neat, plain and attractive. Their costume is composed of a dress ten inches from the floor, with long sleeves, high neck, and tan, dutch collar. They all wear black hose and deaconess bonnets with black velvet strings. Their appearance certainly appeals to the public, and is a rebuke to worldliness.

Something rather peculiar happened yesterday. Mr. Shelhamer started on his long, 23-day journey to South Africa, where he will hold conventions for missionaries of various churches. So that leaves our son Everett and daughter Esther with their mother to do their best to win souls alone in the British Isles. We should all have gone to Africa but for the expense; also the fact that we have so many calls for revivals here that we felt led to remain. We are lonely of course, but it is for Christ's sake, hence is all right.

In order to be a further blessing, as well as help down lonely feelings, I am indulging in the pleasure of writing a new book—this time on the subject of "God, Ghosts and Demons." Some other subject might require less reserve and prayer, but perhaps none could be more thrilling. If any of our friends can give us any information on the above topic, it will be appreciated.

Europe is a fine place to secure data on such a subject, because of her excellent libraries and her great historical background. The Highlands of Scotland are believed to be visited by apparitions. Ireland is ahead of Scotland in its simple faith in ghosts.

Recently I received a call to Ireland for a three-weeks' revival. This will give ample time and opportunity to look into the subject at hand. There is one thing certain, i. e., those people who believe in ghosts, believe also in the future state, and let us trust that they will be readily won to Jesus Christ.

Would it not be fine if all of our American friends could be with us on this tour! Will you not at least accompany me with your prayers? We hope if possible to finish our work here in time to get to New York before February, when we expect to evangelize in the East and Middle West. Our only object is to win as many souls to God as possible before Jesus comes. At times we miss the comfort of home, but life is too short to permit us to indulge in ease, and we feel like saying—

"The love of Christ doth me constrain
To seek the wandering souls of men,
With cries, entreaties, groans to save."
To snatch them from a gaping grave."

Our permanent address is 1810 Young St., Cincinnati, Ohio. Yours for others, Julia A. Shelhamer.

O. H. CALLIS BUSY SINCE REPORT.

We have not reported our meetings for a long time. Have been busy and happy in the work though silent. Been in three camp meetings and four church revivals, all of which have been good.

Our first camp—Scottsville, Texas—we joined Rev. and Mrs. Jarrette Aycock and their daughter. Mrs. Callis and I never enjoyed laboring and fellowshiping so much with any workers as we did the Aycocks. This was our third time at this camp and our best year there.

We then ran over to old Warnock Springs Camp near Magnolia, Ark., (our second year there) where great crowds gathered night and day. We were there only from Monday over following Sunday. Numbers were at the altar and the majority gave testimony to real experience. We return to this camp again in 1932. From Magnolia we went by and spent an afternoon and a night at Atlanta, Texas camp with the Aycocks. There we met Mrs. Perdue, the wonderful leader of this camp. We preached in the afternoon service to a fine audience. We are engaged as workers at this camp for next year.

Our next stop was at Hartselle, Ala., camp, where we have labored eight seasons in thirteen years. We return again in 1933. Our co-worker there was that prince of preachers John Owen. We had delightful seasons walking, talking and working together. Mrs. Callis and our little daughter, Laura Woodson, were with us in all the camps.

Since our Conference in early September at Winchester, Ky., we have conducted four church revivals. At London, Ky., we were with Rev. E. L. Griffy, one of the truest, full-salvation preachers Asbury ever produced. He and his wonderful wife and two happy children made our stay in their home a delight. Good crowds attended and there were fine results. Ed Mattingly, of Sue Bennett College, had charge of the singing and young people's work. We conducted chapel services at the college, spoke in down-town business houses, besides preaching twice daily at the church. Brother Griffy told the audience in the closing Sunday morning that it was the most wholesome revival he had ever held since becoming pastor. We were at London nine years previous in a great meeting.

At Old Taylor St. Church, Newport, Ky., we had one of the best meetings we have seen in some time and the people there stated it was the best they had had in some years. Rev. T. W. Beeler, the untiring and undaunted pastor, was a true yokefellow. He and his fine wife entertained us royally in their parsonage home. He had improved the church, gathered about him a force of young people that excel almost any place we have been. Numbers of them came to the altar and were converted, reclaimed or sanctified in a wonderful way. We secured a large list of subscribers to The Herald in this meeting; there were several at London also.

For the second time in two years we joined battle with Rev. E. L. Ockerman at Warsaw, Ky. Two years ago we helped him at Perryville, Ky. Mr. C. P. Gossett was with us in charge of the singing and it was well done. The local editor in reporting the meeting said he "is the best song evangelist ever in Warsaw." Crowds filled the church, all churches and pastors co-operating. Rev. Smith, of the Baptist Church, and Rev. Wilson, of the Christian Church, were abundant in labors and our fellowship was that "of kindred minds." Recent word from Rev. Ockerman says, "The people say the best revival in Warsaw in years."

At Yates Center, Kan., we joined Rev. E. F. Boehringer, of the First Evangelical Church, for our second time. From the very start crowds came. Times of great rejoicing and refreshing came upon the church. Old saintly German folk prayed and spoke in their native tongue and what liberty there was! Numbers came to the altar. We were ably assisted by Rev. T. J. Miller, pastor of Evangelical Church, Alida, Kan. He is a great choir director and one of the very best gospel soloists this writer has ever heard. To work with him is to love him wholeheartedly. This was our third meeting together in recent years.

The workers were entertained in the parsonage home where Rev. and Mrs. Boehringer made us welcome and our fellowship of prayer and counsel together kept us fit for the battle. Their lovely and comfortable parsonage home is graced with true hospitality and the spirit of true and genuine religion. We did hate to close this meeting and leave these fine folk. The Lord willing, we will return with them another year. Here we secured a fine list of "subs" to The Herald.

We are now in the beginning at Otega, Kan. Today, Thanksgiving, we are snowed in and have been unable to have any services. Our observations are that people are attending church better than in previous years, there is not the mean opposition to revivals and evangelistic meetings there was during those lean years, and it is a bit easier to get results. Wherever The Pentecostal Herald is read it is easier to present holiness and get the folk more readily into the experience. On with the revival with full salvation messages, altar services and the spread of holiness literature. O. H. Callis.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

Dear Herald Family:

It has been quite a while since I wrote you, not that I have lost interest in you, but because of the lack of interest others have in us evangelists which leaves us without anything much to write about. Sometime ago a pastor told me that one reason I didn't get any more calls was, that I was looked upon as a high-priced man. How such an impression could have gotten out I can't imagine, for if there ever was an evangelist who was working for almost nothing it is your humble servant; in fact, it's getting to where it is very much like the news butch who went home to see the old folks after he had been on the road a month. His father asked him if he was making anything. His reply was, "No, but I'm gettin' a heap er mighty good ridin'."

Seriously, I do have a plan by which my services can be had at a very small cost, and it will afford me great pleasure to submit this plan in case I should be wanted. My permanent address is Tillman's Crossing, Lee Street, Atlanta, Ga. I have a splendid tent. Charlie D. Tillman.

GOOD MEETING IN MARYLAND.

We had a good meeting in Laytonville, Md., with Rev. John A. Grose, pastor. The services were held in the Methodist Church. Three local congregations of the circuit joined in the campaign. A number were blessed and the entire charge greatly strengthened in the faith. We greatly enjoyed the privilege of speaking to the Baltimore Methodist Preachers' Meeting on the subject of Evangelism. Many of the ministers are taking a new hold for the cause of revival work. They see that it is the only hope for the church. Let us do our best to revive the revival and arouse the church to its great responsibility on this line. God can send the "sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees," and cause the dry bones of the valley to begin to rattle.

Sunday (Nov. 29) we spoke twice for Rev. Warner Thompson, an old Asbury boy, at Pinksburg, Md. Sunday evening we preached in the famous old Carolina Street M. E. Church in Baltimore for Rev. Harry G. Spencer, pastor.

The Asbury boys who have just returned from their trip around the world, are conducting revival services in the different churches in Baltimore. The people of this great city love and honor E. Stanley Jones who once lived here. Rev. Glen Gould, formerly of New England, is the pastor of the Nazarene Church in Baltimore. Several years ago we assisted Rev. Dan E. Higgs in a meeting in this church. Bro. Higgs is now the District Superintendent. He is one of the hardest working preachers we have ever met. He is always on the job—ever busy in the vineyard of the Lord. He has inaugurated and put over many great evangelistic campaigns in his church.

We attended a service in a new, neat little church near Washington, D. C., pastored by Rev. Clark Florr. He is doing a fine work in that community. We also attended a revival service in the Washington Nazarene Church of which Rev. L. B. Williams is pastor. Rev. Miller, of Ithica, N. Y., is conducting an evangelistic campaign in this church. He is known as the New York Miller in the Nazarene Movement and is one of the great evangelists of the denomination.

Andrew Johnson, Evangelist.

POTEAU, OKLAHOMA.

We are delighted to come to you with the report of victory in Poteau, Okla. We began our meeting with Rev. John A. Hogan, pastor of the Nazarene Church of that city, on Nov. 8, running over to and including the 22nd, with two services a day. It was our great pleasure on reaching this church to find everything in readiness for a great revival; a oneness of the saints, well organized, such unity of spirit; as many as 300 had attended the mid-week prayer meeting, getting ready for the revival. In our humble judgment this is one of the main secrets of revival success—godly preparation.

Great crowds came forward for prayer. The altar was full most every evening service; twenty forward for prayer the last Sunday morning, scores were gloriously blessed in the meeting, either in pardon or purity. A fine class was taken into the church during the meeting and many more to follow.

Rev. Hogan is a fine fellow; stands by the evangelist in every way. His church work is in fine shape. One thing remarkable about the Poteau Church, there is not a member in the church that will not pray if called upon.

The meeting was well attended by workers and preachers from Heaviner, Wister, Cameron, and other places. Met our dear old friend, Rev. Miller, whom we have known for 25 years, from Cameron. Our leader in song, a splendid leader in song and preacher as well, was Rev. Charley Higgan. A large choir, as well as a special quartet, rendered one or two valuable numbers each evening.

Wife and I were well entertained in the home of the pastor and wife; nothing short about their services. May God bless the good people of Poteau. Our stay there was very friendly with business men as well as church folk. We had the pleasure of lecturing to about 400 High School students in the school chapel. Those teachers and students know how to treat a minister.

Yours in the fullness of the blessing.

Solomon Irick.

CALHOUN, KENTUCKY.

I am now engaged in a good revival at Calhoun, Ky., with Rev. J. A. Collier, 1415 Forest Ave., Nashville, Tenn. This is the second revival I have had. Bro. Collier to help me. At Campbellsville, Ky., where he helped me in 1929, I received 79 members into the church that year. We are now in one of the most promising revivals in the history of our church at Calhoun.

I have never had better evangelistic help than Rev. J. A. Collier. He knows how to win men to Christ. He is a "live wire," an unusually good gospel preacher, sane, safe and sound. He is full of humor, which is consecrated to God. He will draw a crowd anywhere. He preaches a great gospel, using the most apt and telling illustrations. He is the people's man.

This year, 1931, he has held fifteen revivals in five states and has had 1100 professions of conversion. He tells me he has January and February open for 1932. He ought to be kept busy. He feels divinely called to the evangelistic field. He is a loyal Southern Methodist and knows how to help the pastor to promote the whole program of the church. All church work will be easier after he holds your revival. I give him my strongest endorsement. He is easy to pay and has nothing to detract from his work in the pulpit. C. K. Dickey.

Mr. W. E. Edie, of Toledo, Iowa, writes us to send him a copy of "Beautiful Story of the Bible," and says this is the seventh copy he has ordered. He further says he finds it to be a wonderful book and wishes there might be a copy in every home. The price of this wonderful book is within the reach of every one—only $1.00 for a large, beautifully illustrated, attractively bound story of the Bible. The Pentecostal Publishing Company has a limited supply of these books and hopes you will get your copy.

Our Lord Jesus has taught us "If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." John 15:18, 19.

The true Church of Christ is made up not of any one denomination of believers, but of regenerated souls in all denominations, of those who have passed from darkness into light through faith in Jesus Christ. The true church is the bride of Christ. She is separated from sin. She is in the world but not of the world. She is consecrated wholly to her Saviour and Master. He claims her for his own. He embraces her with the power of his salvation. He breathes into her his own spirit of forgiveness and zeal and devoted love which delights in service. She, like her Saviour and Lord, reaches out with a yearning heart for the salvation of the lost. Her delights and pastimes are not found in those giddy pursuits and pleasures of the unregenerated and sinful. She hungers and thirsts after righteousness. She presses on to know the fullness of the blessing of the Gospel of Christ. She travails in prayer for the birth of souls into the Kingdom of God. She nurses upon the tender bosom of her love and compassion the new-born babes in Christ. She is the "dearly beloved" of her Lord and Redeemer, to whom the inspired apostle is writing his admonitions.

"Pilgrims." Peter addresses these disciples of our Lord as pilgrims. He would have them understand that this world is not their abiding place, that they are "strangers" to the world and "pilgrims" passing through the world to their eternal abode in heaven. It were a great means of grace if God's people kept well in mind the fact that this world is not their home, that they are journeying to a home on high, that they must guard carefully about becoming too deeply interested in temporal things, but their chief interest must be in eternal things. It was our Lord Jesus who taught us that "where our treasures are there will our hearts be also," and that in order that our hearts may be weaned from the world and set upon the things that abide we must lay up our treasures in heaven.

In that wonderful faith chapter, Hebrews eleven, the Apostle reaches a climax after he has mentioned a great group of immortal saints, saying, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them, and embraced them and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city." Heb. 11:13-16.

The exhortation of the Apostle in our text that we as "strangers" and "pilgrims" seeking that better country with its Eternal City to "abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul" is timely, deserving special attention. It must be understood that the Apostle here in the use of the word "lusts" does not refer especially to the lower forms of vice. We will not do violence if we translate this word lust to, or at least suggest the word, "desires." We are to abstain from the desire of the things of this world. We are not to permit ourselves to become enamored of worldly possessions. We are the Lord's people, called out and sealed, and made "strangers and pilgrims," and must not covet the wealth of the world. We must not look with longing eyes and heart desires upon its palaces and mansions. We must not stand too long in front of the great showcase windows desiring the finery and gaudy robes of the godless, who have never bethought themselves that they should be arrayed in the white robes of righteousness. We are living in times when the world, with its wealth, its pleasure, its gaudy apparel, its magnificent entertainments, is making a powerful appeal and the children of God will do well to watch and pray as they pass through this vast "vanity fair" lest they be drawn away with those desires that "war against the soul," that seduce, capture, and lead back into bondage those who once found deliverance and victory through faith in Jesus Christ.

The early Christians were simple in their attire, humble in their demeanor, economical in their expenditures for themselves. They realized that they were the Lord's. The early Methodists, whose hearts were on fire with the anointing of the Holy Ghost, were very plain and practical in their lives. The systematic way in which they labored and dressed and ate their food and conducted their lives had in it such method and order of godly propriety that they were nicknamed "Methodists."

We can but believe that in the early days of the present revival of the Bible doctrine of Holiness as taught by Mr. Wesley and the founders of the Methodist Church, there was a beautiful simplicity and consistency in living, in dressing, in the order of the lives of those who claimed to have received the baptism with the Holy Ghost in sanctifying power, that has, to some extent, been lost sight of. We are no advocates of slouchiness, but if we are a sanctified people we are "strangers and pilgrims" in the earth. We are a peculiar people. Our treasures are laid up in heaven. Our hearts are not set upon the changing customs and indecent and suggestive fashions of the times, but we are passing through the world warning it of its sin, calling it to repentance, exhorting it to flee from the wrath to come and striving to bring sinners to repentance and saving faith and believers into the full salvation we enjoy. I can but believe the time has come for earnest words of admonition and warning and we beseech the Lord's holy people to abstain from all those desires that blind their spiritual eyes and fetter and hinder the glad liberty of their souls, war against a tender conscience and pollute a clean heart with the follies and fancies of our times.

We are living in times when the world all about us is eager for great wealth, longing for material possessions, when the multitudes are seeking after pleasure, when the vast majority of people believe if they had magnificent palaces, beautiful garments, rich feasts, splendid automobiles and the equipment and finery that can only be had by those who have large sums of money, that they could be happy. They are looking to material things for their happiness. They forget that the spirit of man cannot feed upon material things. It must have spiritual communion. It must know Jesus Christ as a Saviour. It must come into fellowship with God.

If the Holiness Movement have for its leadership prophets of smooth things, men who give no offense to the worldly sinners, who fail to call earnestly upon the people to deny themselves and take up their cross and follow Jesus, to go with him without the camp to the full crucifixion of the old man; if they fail to condemn, in the spirit of prophetic authority and compassionate love, the gaudy dress, the ambitious pursuits for wealth and pleasure, and if our camp meetings become places for the show of gaudy apparel; if we fill up our choirs with women dressed in harmony with a godless, gain-saying world, our revival fires will die out, the mighty power of the Holy Ghost will disappear, our altars will no longer be filled with penitents crying for mercy and eager Christians hungering and thirsting after righteousness, pouring out their souls for the baptism with the Spirit in his sanctifying power.

We will do well to give special heed to the exhortation of the inspired apostle and as "strangers" and "pilgrims abstain from fleshly lusts," the desires of the eye, the possessions of the rich, the beautiful robes of the affluent, the magnificent cars and equipage of those whose home is in this world, who have no treasures laid up in heaven. Have we not come to a time when we must renew our vows and separate ourselves in most earnest desire to be wholly the Lord's and to press forward with eager earnestness to know all of his divine fullness and find in him the satisfaction and delight of our immortal spirits. Let those who read these words of admonition search their hearts and ask themselves if desire for wealth and show and pleasure and many things that we do not need is bringing them into bondage, is blinding the eyes of their faith, is cooling the zeal of their hearts, is crowding the blessed Lord and Master out of their lives. And let us all most fervently pray that we may be delivered from this present evil world and press forward with renewed zeal and alacrity in the service of our Master and in the laying up of our treasures where thieves do not break through nor steal and moth and rust cannot corrupt.

If Christ Should Come to Jerusalem CHAPTER VI.

HE Scriptures nowhere teach that mankind throughout the world, will have been brought into a splendid state of civilization, harmony, peace and righteousness before the return of the Lord Jesus. There will be a holy bride, a separated people, who have accepted the atonement and its gracious benefits, and are prepared to be caught up with the Lord, and be with him in his glorious coming.

Any student of Daniel's prophecy will find that, as we approach the end of this age, there will be a fearful state of unbelief, wickedness and war. The same is taught by John, the Beloved, in the book of Revelation. Paul's teaching is in harmony with Daniel and John, all three of whom picture the anti-christ, a human being of great power bringing war and devastation upon the earth.

We are aware that devout men and women who love and worship the Lord Jesus, and are eager for his return, are liable in their longings and teachings, to get ahead of the divine program and expect the coming of the Lord before certain prophecies concerning the closing up of the age have been fulfilled. For many years such devout people have been finding the man of sin, who is to appear a short time before the reappearance of the sinless Man, Christ the Lord. Devout men believed that Napoleon was the man of sin when his armies were overthrowing the thrones of Europe. Back of Napoleon they saw in some of the great military despots, as they believed, the man of sin. For some years any man who looms up as a master leader among his fellows has been believed to be the man of sin. Quite a number of enthusiastic and devout people were persuaded that the dethroned Kaiser was the man of sin, and that the World War would lead to the battle of Armageddon, and the reappearing of the Lord.

A number of people are more than half way convinced that Mussolini is the man of sin. The probabilities are they are mistaken. We should be careful to distinguish between a man of sin and the man of sin. There have been many men of sin. We yet await the appearance of the man spoken of by Daniel, Paul and John.

It will be remembered that Satan, in the temptations he offered our Lord, proposed to give Jesus supreme government over the entire world if Jesus would fall down and worship him; that is, he proposed that Jesus should be second if he would make Satan first, by worshipping him. Jesus rebuked Satan and drove him from him. History convinces us that Satan has been making that proposition to many men, and a number have accepted it. Satan desires supreme rulership of this world. Driven out of heaven because of rebellion, on his way to the bottomless abyss of outer darkness, he is making his last stand and tremendous battle upon this globe. He undertakes rulership through ambitious and wicked men, and has doubtless promised universal rulership to a number of men, provided they will worship him and become his instruments. It is probable that these military chieftains who have washed the earth with human gore, have not understood that they were under the power, delusion and rulership of Satan. They all have failed to become masters of the world, but they have not failed to create war, desolation and fearfully impeded peace and progress among men.

No doubt Alexander the Great, almost a super-man, was the direct instrument of Satan. He received his inspiration from that powerful fallen angel. He had worshipped the false god of power; the same is true of the Cæsars, who came to a nearer approach of complete rulership of the world than any other men of sin, inspired by Satan. They brought the race to a climax of spiritual night of wickedness that crucified the Lord Jesus. While at heart it was the Jews who brought Jesus to the cross, it was Roman power that had given its soul to Satan in order that, wading through human blood, it could wield its scepter of authority over the world that nailed Jesus Christ to the cross and gambled for his humble garments while he died.

So we see there have been many men of sin, but the man of sin, the great antichrist, is yet to come. His rulership, according to the Scriptures, will be short, but terrible. It may be that the antichrist has been born. It is probable, however, that world conditions are preparing for his birth. We may be coming to a spiritual dearth, a lawlessness, a re-crucifixion of Christ by modern skeptics in the pulpits and schools of the world that will bring about a state of mind, of darkness of soul, of rebellion against God and lawlessness that will head up in this super-man of sin. It would seem that conditions were ripening in Russia for the production of such a man. Believe it or not, the spirit that dominates Russia is spreading throughout the world. There is much of it in every nation in Europe, and in those countries dominated by the dead forms of Catholicism, there is little, or no, spiritual life to erect barriers against the incoming flood of Bolshevism, which is saturated with hatred, godlessness and tyranny of the worst possible type.

Preparations are going forward and being pressed with vigor by many united and powerful forces in the nations which have had the advantages of a civilization graciously salted with Protestantism and the very general use of the Bible. This union of millionaires to break down our prohibition laws and bring back the liquor traffic, with all of its domination of our political life, debauch of the people, and general lawlessness, is a blinded preparation for the coming of a condition of things that will put the knife of the Communist to the throats of the people who are fighting God and humanity, to bring back the liquor traffic. All of that group of millionaires, and their bought politicians and blab-mouth women, laying themselves out for the restoration of the liquor traffic, are the deceived dupes of Satan who are preparing the way for the coming of the man of sin, that final antichrist who will be overthrown and destroyed when our Lord shall appear in his glory.

There are other groups of higher grades of teachers who are united and wielding a powerful influence, that are destroying evangelical faith and preparing the world to receive and worship the antichrist. We are thinking now of that vast army of highly educated men in pulpits, university and college chairs who are robbing the people of their faith in Christ; under the inspiration of the same Satan who has used rougher and more bloody methods with other classes, these modernistic liberalists move forward most graciously. They are full of flattery and deceit. They are spoken of in the Scriptures as those who will, if possible, deceive the "very elect." We doubt if there has appeared in the history of Christianity a more dangerous skeptic than the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick. How cultured, how suave, how religious, and yet he denies the virgin birth of our Lord and Saviour. He denies that the miracles attributed to Jesus in the New Testament ever took place, therefore, they were written by men who were so ignorant of the truth that they put to record things that never occurred, or men so devoid of truth and honor that they wilfully recorded falsehood. Either way, he makes the New Testament a worthless record of things which never transpired; and yet, thousands of preachers and people in this nation are ready to place this deceiver of the people at the head of the column of the religious teachers of our times. It ought not be difficult for us to conceive of the antichrist appearing and receiving the worship of the people, when we think of how millions have rallied under the banner of such a poor creature as Mrs. Eddy, and such a bunch of whiskers as those worn by the pitiful old pettifogger Russell; and now, hundreds of thousands who suppose themselves to be loyal disciples of Christ shouting the praises of Fosdick. And so the world goes forward in its rapid preparation to receive and worship the coming man of sin, the final antichrist.

I may be believed to be mistaken, but I am not mistaken when I write the facts that, when a group of Methodist preachers got together and arranged to establish a Decision Day for the bringing of the children of Methodism into the church on a certain day, without searching, gospel preaching, without repentance, and without regeneration, they took a long stride in the preparation for the coming of the antichrist. The way to get ready for the antichrist is not to do away with the church, or to cease to build magnificent cathedrals and great schools for the education of church people, but it is to do away with the essential, fundamental teachings of Jesus; to substitute membership in some organization for the new birth; substitute education for sanctification, and finally, to substitute everything Christian with Humanism, then out of the human to bring the antichrist and worship him as if he were God.

Any man, or group of men and women, who follow any preacher, college president, professor, or author of some skeptical book, accept his teachings which are contrary to the teachings of Christ, have made of such person an antichrist, and they are following and, perhaps, half unconsciously, worshipping an antichrist. And thus the race drifts forward in its preparation for that bold and powerful incarnation of that deceptive and wicked one who will set himself up as a god; in fact, as God, to the exclusion of the holy God of the Bible, and the blessed Christ who died and rose again for the salvation of the people.

Is it not true that some millions in the world today look to the Pope at Rome, whom they believe to be infallible, and to speak in the place of God as God, have made of him an antichrist; that knowing almost nothing of the Bible, they accept the words, the teachings and commandments of the Pope rather than of the Lord God. As the Radio is developed, with television, is it not probable that the Pope, speaking over the Radio, and seen by this wonderful discovery, will become the object of admiration and worship, not only by the millions of Roman Catholics, but also by multitudes of Protestants. It does not seem probable that the Pope is the man of sin. No doubt, he is a man of sin, but not the final tremendous person who shall appear as we approach the end of the age, and the coming of our Lord.

Dr. Morrison in a Revival at Glide.

Dr. H. C. Morrison is in the midst of a great meeting at Glide Church, San Francisco, where Dr. Julian C. McPheeters is the pastor. Dr. Morrison's bow abides in strength, and his preaching is as powerful as ever. It is a rare treat to hear him, and, more than that, it is an inspiration and a blessing. He preaches twice a day, and does it like a prophet. No man has served our Church more effectively than Dr. H. C. Morrison: Great preacher, great leader, great organizer, and great man. Blessings on him, and may he have physical strength to continue his mighty work for God. Splendid congregations are greeting him, and the church is feeling his strong presence.—Pacific Methodist.

WAG'S CHOICE.

"Get your young bantams in before that storm reaches us," father called to Horace. "It is getting very dark."

A rumble of thunder sent Horace flying to house his pets before the rain came. The first big drops fell as he reached the kitchen porch.

"Not a minute too soon," he said to his mother.

"No, and here comes some one else who doesn't want to be out in a storm," she said, pointing her finger down the long lane.

A half-grown collie was scampering toward them. The next moment he ran in at the open door and crouched in a corner.

"Poor fellow! He's afraid of the thunder," said father, coming in close behind the dog. "Let him stay until the storm is over. Then he probably will go home." He stooped to pat the dog's silky head. "He's a beauty. He must be a newcomer in the neighborhood. I never saw him before."

"I guess he knows where he belongs," laughed Horace.

When the storm was over the dog made no move toward going home. If he knew the way, he didn't seem in any hurry to go.

"He must be lost," said Horace. "He may have gotten out of a passing car," mother suggested.

"Or strayed from a new home somewhere around here and doesn't know the way back," said father. "We'll mention him to people and see whether we can find his owner."

The days passed and no one knew anything about "Wag," as Horace called him. The collie seemed left on their hands for good. He was a friendly dog, as collies are. He trusted father and mother instantly, but he was shy of Horace.

"He acts as if he were afraid of you," said father, when Wag shrunk away from the boy's friendly hand.

"I know why! Someone boy has teased him," Horace declared. "A boy who would tease a dog is a mean kind of boy."

Several days later a stranger called. "I'm a newcomer here," he explained. "We moved to a place near the village this Spring. When we came my brother gave me my boy a young collie. He has disappeared and I heard—there he is."

Wag and Horace came around the house. Horace had an arm about Wag, who looked perfectly happy. The stranger noticed that.

"I see the dog has chosen an owner who treats him right," said the stranger. "My boy didn't, and I told him that I would give the dog away if he didn't stop teasing and hurting him. Would you like to keep the dog, sonny?"

Horace's shining eyes answered for him. The stranger laughed.

"Take him, with my best wishes," he said. "I think he has made a wise choice," and, with laughing refusal of thanks or pay, he was gone.—Sunbeam.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kansas boy join your happy band? I was seven years old May 28. I am in the third grade at school. I have two brothers and one sister. We all go to Sunday school at the Methodist Church. My daddy gets The Herald and I like to read page ten. My daddy heard Dr. Morrison preach. He thinks a lot of him. I hope Mr. Waste Basket is visiting. I hope that my letter gets in print because this is my first one. Who can guess my middle name? It begins with W and ends with M. It has seven letters in it. Pearl M. Benningfield, I guess your middle name to be Mae. Am I right?

Freddy W. Meyer.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Western Kentucky boy minister join your band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald and I hope to see it in print. I am sixteen years old. My birthday is in April. I have been in evangelistic work for over a year now. Boys and girls, we should watch our step, for the devil is working in every way he can to make us lose sight of the One who died upon the cross for us. The preachers are preaching there is no hell but there is a hell as sure as there is a heaven. The rich man and Lazarus teach us there is a burning hell. I am praying for a great awakening among God's people and trust you boys and girls are also praying for this need. I would like to hear from boys and girls all over the country. Boys and girls, get your pens a-going and write and I will answer every letter, and I will send you a little tract written by myself on "Prayer and Christian Work."

Yours in his service,
(Rev.) Ishmael M. Ezell.
P. O. Box 362, Madisonville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes a new writer. Move over just a wee bit girls and boys and let a little Mississippi girl join your happy band. My brother takes The Herald and I enjoy reading it, especially page ten. I am ten years of age, and am in the fourth grade. This is my second year in music. I go to school at Bude, Miss. I have dark brown hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, and weigh 71 pounds. I go to church and Sunday school, and am a member of the Girls' Auxiliary Band. Can any one guess my middle name? It begins with E and ends with N, and has five letters in it. Mayhew Hinton, I guess your first name to be Juanita. Am I right? I hope Mr. W. B. is not at home when this arrives. Aunt Bettie, as this is my first letter I hope to see it in print as I want to surprise daddy and mother. Would be glad to hear from any of the cousins.

Dorothy Seale.
Monroe, Miss.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please give me room in your happy circle for a letter? I am at grandmother's and she gets The Herald. I like page ten. I am a boy thirteen years old and am in the fourth grade. I have dark brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion, am four feet, eleven inches tall and weigh 84 pounds. My birthday is May 2nd. Have I a twin? I am called by initials, but some of you cousins see if you can guess my name. My first name begins with J and ends with S, and has five letters in it. My middle name begins with P and ends with L, and has seven letters in it. Please, somebody, write to me.

J. P. Major.
Rt. 2, Orange, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you please let a little boy from Illinois join your happy band. I am three years old, have blue eyes, yellow hair, my birthday is March 24. So I am a twin to Thomas E. Pickle. I guess his middle name to be Edwin. My first name begins with W and ends with E, and has seven letters in it. I like to go to Sunday school and church. Father and mother take The Herald. I thank Jesus for a good father and mother. I am a happy, healthy, busy boy. Would be glad to hear from any of the boys and girls.

W. Fay Deck.
739 Buchanan St., Charleston, Ill.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a northern girl. I never see an Iowa letter in The Herald. I wish to see my letter in print. Mr. W. B., you had better be taking your afternoon rest when my letter arrives. I am just a visitor, for a lady sent mother The Pentecostal Herald. I enjoy the Boys and Girls' Page very much. Mother is a lover of religious papers and we both enjoy The Herald. I am fourteen years old, in the ninth grade. I have grayish-green eyes, fair complexion, brunette, with a permanent, and a few freckles. I do not use rouge or powder. My birthday is October 18. Do I have a twin? I have no middle name, but I have an initial which is E, but I shall try my luck and see how many of the cousins can guess my first name. It begins with G and ends with E, and has six letters. Anyone guessing it I shall write to them. I will try to answer all letters I receive. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. I go to the M. E. Church. I like my teacher very much. Her name is Mrs. Carrie Widney. I live one mile west of town in a little corner house. I have been baptized but have not been sanctified. I would like very much for you to pray for me. My letter is quite long but I have never seen any Iowa letters in The Herald so I would like to see my letter in print, even if it is long. I have guessed the following names. I hope they are right. Bertha Ammon's middle name to be Mae. As this name was in the paper of Oct. 14, I wish to hear from you, for I believe I have guessed correctly. I guess Sylvia Bossert's name to be Marie.

G. E. Ward.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We have the first issue of The Herald and like page ten very much. Hazel G. Snure's middle name, I think, is Grace. See who can guess my first name. It begins with J, and ends in E; it has four letters in it. Best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Morrison. I was ten years old on June 12, 1931. Remember me as your friend in Christ Jesus.

J. Hazel Dunn.
Whitetail, Mont.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I have been a silent reader of The Pentecostal Herald since a child of nine summers. I found new friends through page ten. Some of them I have not heard from for years. No words can ever explain the happiness I have found between the pages of The Herald. I am a happy mother yet my life becomes very dark at times and I long for a true friend. I want those who read this to pray that I may have a still happier home. Remember me as a friend. I hope you print this, Aunt Bettie, as I am a very lonely mother.

Mrs. A. W. Weatherford.
Rt. 6, Lexington, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Here comes the cripple girl from Georgia again seeking admittance. I thank you very much for printing my letter. I received some nice letters but not as many as I would like. I want to get letters from every state in the Union, especially from girls and boys near my own age, which will soon be twenty. I don't see many letters from Georgia. Why? I know all the Georgia girls and boys aren't dumb, so speak up Georgia, and show the other States you are on the map. I enjoy reading The Herald; the more I read it, the more interested I become. I especially enjoy reading page ten. I enjoyed Woodrow Wilson's letter and think he is undertaking a great work. Pearl M. Benningfield, I guess your middle name to be Mae. Am I right? Mary F. Lee, I guess your middle name to be Florence. Everyone please write me. I am an orphan. Mama and I live alone and I am lonesome most of the time. I would like to get letters from every crippled boy and girl who read this. I will answer every one if I can.

Ozell Hudson.
Rt. 2, Alpharetta, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Would you let a lonesome Georgia boy join your happy band of boys and girls? This is my first letter to The Herald since 1924. I secured a lot of friends through page ten at that time. Father takes The Herald and I enjoy reading page ten. I have fair complexion, blue eyes and have dark hair; am six feet tall, weigh 160 pounds, and will be twenty-one years old May 20. I live in the mountains and it gets mighty lonesome in the winter time, so come boys and girls from all over the U. S. and write to a lonesome boy. I will answer all letters received. Will exchange photos with any one.

John L. Galloway.
Box 54, Blue Ridge, Ga.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Move over a little, and let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls. I am a little girl, fourteen years of age, five feet tall, weigh one hundred and two pounds, have blond curly hair, brown eyes, fair complexion, and am in the eighth grade. I go to Daddy school and sure have a nice teacher. My parents take The Herald and I certainly enjoy reading it, especially page ten. I am a Christian, and hope to gain higher grounds every day I live. I sure am glad to hear of so many of the cousins being Christians. I would like to hear from anyone who cares to write, but would especially like to hear from anyone who has traveled lots, or anyone who lives in both the Blue Ridge and the Appalachian Mountains. I will answer all letters received or exchange snapshots. With love to Aunt Bettie and all the cousins.

Myrtle Marsh.
Rt. 1, Scottsville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am twelve years old, have black hair, brown eyes, medium complexion, weigh eighty-four pounds and am four feet, eight inches tall. My hobbies are horseback riding and skating. I am not a Christian but hope to be some day. My parents take The Herald, and I like to read page ten. I would like to hear from all the boys and girls who care to write. Will answer all letters received. I hope Mr. W. B. is taking a nap when this arrives; as it is my first letter I would like to see it in print.

Beatrice Marsh.
Rt. 1, Scottsville, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Tennessee girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am eleven years old, have blonde hair and brown eyes. I wish you would write me. I enjoy reading letters. I am a daughter of a minister. I have two brothers and one sister. This is my first letter and I hope to see it printed. Aunt Bettie, tell me who W. B. is, please. I don't understand what the cousins mean by him. Please, cousins, write to me. I will answer every letter I receive.

Buna Lee Thames.
Rt. 7, Maryville, Tenn.
Some of the cousins tell Buna Lee who W. B. is.

Aunt Bettie.

Dear Aunt Bettie: From time to time I have thought I would write a letter for page ten; not that I am a gifted writer, but as I enjoy reading the many good letters from various States. I especially enjoy reading those telling of their Christian experiences as it is an inspiration to me to read such letters. My uncle takes The Herald and I count it an opportunity to get to read the wonderful messages in it, especially those from Dr. Morrison and Aunt Bettie: I have had the privilege of hearing Dr. Morrison. I shall always remember his sermon and what they have meant to me. I am five feet, three inches tall, weigh 120 pounds, have black hair, brown eyes, dark complexion; was sixteen my birthday. My middle name begins with J and has four letters in it. Whoever guesses it I'll send them a snapshot of myself. Boys and girls, let the letters fly. As this is my first letter I hope to see it in print.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson XIII.—December 27, 1931.
Subject.—Review.

Reading Lesson.—1 Thessalonians 2:1-11.

Golden Text.—The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever. Rev. 11:15.

Time.—A. D. 51 to A. D. 66.

As this is review day, I feel inclined to chat with my Sunday school friends. You have studied the lessons, and should be able to handle your own review; so I shall not bother with it.

Let's talk something about having a revival. We are hearing much concerning that subject these days. Some new prophets have arisen, who declare that there is a "going in the tops of the mulberry trees." Some specially optimistic brethren are feeling the early drops of the "Latter Rain." It is encouraging to think they are correct; but just now we seem to be in the midst of a fearful spiritual drought.

I am just back in my study from a large Southern Methodist Conference. According to the daily press the conference suffered during the last year a loss of 2883 members, and a financial deficit of $213,946. Such a report should have started a long altar service, with heart-breaking cries to God for help. But it did nothing of the sort. Some faces were very sad as the brethren here and there were discussing the matter; but I saw no tears, and heard no cries. I am informed that in an adjoining conference of even larger membership, the falling away was much greater; although I have not the exact figures.

One hears strange talk here and there concerning revivals. Some of the chief brethren say they do not believe in revivals. They term them religious spasms that hurt the churches where they are held. No doubt certain forms of evangelism are injurious; but that cannot be said of all. We must not lose sight of the fact that the Church makes little progress without revivals. Pentecost was a tremendous revival with much excitement; but without Pentecost there would have been no Christian Church in the world. Methodism began in a revival, and did her best work while the revival spirit was upon her. Some good brethren tell us that churches should be in revivals all the time. That is ideal, and much to be desired; but one seldom sees it. One church dignitary says we are now in the midst of the greatest revival the Church has ever known. One does not like to discredit the learned brother's statement; but a plain man would like to know what he means. If one is walking through fast falling rain, surely he should be able to get his jacket wet a little bit. Crops do not wither and die when rain is abundant. When genuine revival work is going on in a church membership does not decrease; nor do finances lag behind. These things do not make revivals; but they are the fruits of revivals.

But what is a revival, and to whom does it come? The word means to live again. It comes through the Holy Ghost; and comes, first of all, to the very best people in the church. Thence it reaches out to such as are lukewarm and indifferent. A so-called revival that does not have its beginnings in this sort of a foundation is a sham and a delusion. "O," says one, "when a lot of people join the church, is that not a revival?" Maybe, and maybe not. It is possible, as is frequently the case, that numbers are brought into church membership by personal appeal, who are never converted. The personal appeal is good, if properly conducted; but it may become very dangerous. Whenever there is a real revival, the Holy Ghost manifests himself in the conviction and conversion of sinners and the sanctification of believers. Real work is done; and the Church which is the Body of the Lord Jesus Christ is built up in holy faith.

Let's verify these statements by the Word of God. Turn to John 16:7. "Nevertheless I tell you the truth; it is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." Here we have God's plan for saving lost men. If he has any other method, I am sure I know nothing of it. Some would save men through education; some through social service; some through imitation of the life of Jesus Christ; but God says we must come under the blood of the cross and by the Holy Ghost.

The one need of this hour is a genuine revival of Holy Ghost salvation. I mean salvation that comes through his office work. We have too much religion now; but salvation is rather scarce. Only about ten in a hundred of our church members claim to be converted. The other ninety do not know anything about the witness of the Holy Spirit, which is the birth-right of every converted soul. Comparatively few of our people have received the baptism with the Holy Spirit "since they believed." Mark the words: This is a baptism with the Spirit, and not of the Spirit. This is the gift of the Spirit in his baptismal office to a converted soul. Jesus is the one who does this baptizing. Multitudes of church members do not believe in the need of such a blessing, or even in the possibility of such an experience. But that does not alter the case. The fact still stands: There can be no Genuine Revival Without It. If I understand my good friend, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, this is what he meant when he said: "We must go deeper before we can go further." It is what Joseph H. Smith meant when he said: "The salvation of the world awaits the sanctification of the Church."

It is pathetic to listen to some of the preaching of the day. Some good men seem to be awaking from a Rip Van Winkle sleep. They admit that there comes a second crisis in every worth-while life, but cannot bear to hear it called a "second blessing." One bishop does not care whether the brethren preach it or not, but wants them to have it; although he does not believe in sanctification as a "second blessing." One vehement brother says: "Live it, but don't profess it." An old brother says: "It is not an experience, but a life." One prominent divine says: "The Spirit was given on the day of Pentecost; and we have no right to ask for him now." When the doctors disagree, what is to become of the patient?

Something is wrong somewhere. Have you noticed that most of our recently compiled hymnbooks have discarded nearly all the hymns about the Holy Spirit? Men professing holiness have done this thing. Some one says the Holy Ghost is the forgotten person in the Divine Trinity. Unless one is fortunate enough to worship with those who are sometimes contemptuously called "Holiness People," he seldom ever hears any preaching about the Holy Ghost. Sometime ago I was preaching in a well-to-do church, and merely mentioned the office work of the Spirit in the sanctification of believers, when a very rich woman in the nearby choir spit at me. Thank God, there were others in that church who were hungering and thirsting after righteousness—they wanted God's best, the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Beloved brethren, my heart aches within me as I write. Shall we have a revival, or shall we let our people perish? I am prone to alter my question—Can we have a revival under present conditions? The Church has compromised with the world and the devil in almost every possible way. God says: "Come out from among them, and be ye separate." But we are all mixed up with the doings of the world till no one can tell the one from the other. Modernism has filled our schools—even our pulpits—with doubters of the fundamental verities of God's word. What can be done?

Call me a pessimist, if you wish to—call me an old fogey, if that be your conviction—feed me on "cold shoulder," if you have no fear of the judgment; but I am going to write my convictions. God wants to save our people from sin; but he must have a clean, separated Church for the work. If God can get a Church that is cut loose from the world, he can save sinners; otherwise the case is hopeless. My conviction is, that God wants a Church that will not try to serve two masters. It must be forever free from all worldly amusements: Dancing, cards, theaters, movies, and such like. It must be delivered from the use of all injurious drugs: Tobacco, all intoxicating drinks, cocaine, and opium in all its forms. Much of the lodge life of this nation has become so contaminated with the wickedness of this age, that I am convinced that the Church must cut clear loose from it, before God can use her for the salvation of lost men. If you have different convictions, I shall neither fuss with you, nor condemn you. I am writing my own honest convictions about a serious matter.

But my article is growing too lengthy. Let us come to terms. If God can secure such a separated people who will unite their hearts as the heart of one man, and cry mightily and continuously for the fullness of the Holy Ghost upon themselves and upon the Church at large, I am convinced that we may have a gracious world-wide revival. But we shall have to scrap much upon which we are now setting great store. We are practically organized to death. Much of this machinery will have to go into the discard. But to swap all of it for one more Pentecost would be the most blessed bargain the Church could make. Organization and system have taken the place of prayer. We have no room left for God. Some little while ago I was sitting on Sunday morning in a rich, stylish church watching the movements of the service. It was beautiful, but as dead as a graveyard. I kept wondering what would happen if God should suddenly interject one of his movements in the shape of a penitent sinner crying for mercy. But there was no danger. God does not cast pearls before swine, nor give that which is holy unto the dogs. Is the application too plain? I mean to say that God is too good to send a poor, broken-hearted sinner into such a place to seek salvation. He believes in the eternal fitness of things.

My soul cries out for the Holy Ghost in this hour of spiritual death. If he will come to the Church, all will be well; but if he does not come in old-time pentecostal power, we are ruined. If he comes in answer to the Church's heart-cry, we shall see the "Latter Rain" in copious showers and a glorious harvest of souls. But if he come not, we shall be a nation scattered and peeled as Israel has been for many long centuries.

"Come, Holy Spirit, heav'nly Dove,
With all thy quickening powers,
Kindle a flame of sacred love
In these cold hearts of ours.

"Look how we grovel here below,
Fond of these earthly toys;
Our souls how heavily they go
To reach eternal joys!

"Come, Holy Spirit, Heav'nly Dove,
With all thy quickening powers;
Come, shed abroad a Saviour's love.
And that shall kindle ours."

Light on the Child's Path

BY Wm. A. BIXLER

Knowing that pictures shown to young children and stories told to them make a strong impression, the author was very careful in making a selection that will leave the child with better thoughts, higher ideals, and nobler motives. Many of the pictures show children and older people doing good deeds, being kind and considerate to birds, animals, and pets, and showing respect to the aged, blind, and unfortunate.

There are pictures of Mother, home, birds, animals, pets, childhood amusements, children praying, the blind girl, cripple boy, by the seashore, visiting Grandma, the poor old man, lost in the snow, the shepherds, the Christ-child, Christ's life and the parables he gave, and many others. Written in simple language. No fairy stories or fiction. 93 pictures. 52 chapters. 50 cents.

Men Who Played The Game

BY ARCHER WALLACE

Archer Wallace has selected the unusual stories of fifteen men who made good by playing the game and never recognizing the possibility of defeat. Apart from the interesting circumstances surrounding the lives of Toyohiko Kagawa, Chinese Gordon, Golden Rule Nash, and the others, there is the still more interesting fact that these men made a fascinating game of life, stayed by the rules, fought courageously but cleanly against all obstacles, and felt the joy of triumph in the end.

As a book of genuine appeal to boys this one cannot be surpassed. Price $1.00.

The Christ of the Mount

A WORKING PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE
BY E. STANLEY JONES

Doctor Jones insists the Sermon on the Mount can be and should be applied to the actual everyday living of the Christian. Price, net, $1.50, postpaid.

THE GREATEST EVENT IN HISTORY.

By The Editor.

THE greatest event in human history—up to date, was the birth of Jesus Christ in Bethlehem of Judea. He had long been promised of the Father, and at last he had come. How marvelous that God should manifest himself in the flesh! That he should come down from heaven in the form of a man, and live as a man!

Jesus Christ was, and is, the marvel of the ages; so human, that he works as a carpenter, hungers, thirsts, sleeps, weeps, and dies! So divine that he rules wind and sea, heals the sick, makes the blind to see, the deaf to hear; forgives sins, raises the dead, arises conqueror over his own death, and bodily ascends into heaven.

There is no one with whom we can compare Christ. He is in a class by himself, the one eternal Son of God; so much like ourselves that he lives among us as one of us. So like God that we fall with Thomas at his feet exclaiming, "My Lord, and my God!" He is high over all. We trust him for salvation from our sins, and worship him with glad, devoted hearts.

We have infallible proofs of the Godhead of Jesus. His fulfillment of prophecy, his personal sinless holiness, the miracles he performed, the comprehensiveness of his teachings, his resurrection from the dead, the saving influence of his gospel, the forgiveness of sins, and the baptism with Holy Ghost—all go to prove that he is the Christ of God mighty to save to the uttermost.

Jesus Christ meets all of the needs of all those who come to him for deliverance from sin, rest of soul, and a song of peace in the heart. The libraries of the world would not hold the books if all who have come to him in sin and sorrow and found pardon and joy, would write down what Jesus Christ has done for them, and what he is to them.

The highest duty of those who have found Christ as a personal Saviour, is to let others know what he can do for their souls. Jesus said, "Ye are my witnesses." We must tell all the world that Jesus has come to save from sin, to save here and now, from all sin, to make us free in himself; to give us joy for sorrow, victory for defeat, pardon for guilt, and holiness for sin.

Let us make Christmas a time of joy and praise. Do not forget there is gladness in the salvation of our blessed Lord and Saviour. Forgive anyone who may have wronged you; reach out a helping hand to the needy about you; make a joyful springboard out of Christmas week from which to leap into devoted, helpful service for the coming year. All praise to our glorified and coming Lord Jesus Christ!

THE HERALD FOR 1932!

With God's blessing and your help, THE PENTECOSTAL HERALD will publish and send to you FIFTY good gospel sermons this year. The sermons will discuss the great essentials of Christian experience and practical life.

Dr. Morrison will give our readers, D. V., one sermon each month on some vital subject.

THE HERALD will major on the Bible doctrine and experience of sanctification, and insist on the absolute importance of justification.

We will urge revivals of religion, the supreme need of them, the fearful effect of the lack of them, and something of the way to have them.

THE HERALD will continue some interesting discussions of prophecy, fulfilled and fulfilling.

We shall have plain things to say of the rapid growth of modernism in Methodism, and its paralyzing effect. We shall begin with, how to be a modernist.

We shall devote some attention to conditions in Russia, and the growth of Communism in this country.

We shall call attention to skepticism and immorality in some of our institutions of learning.

There will be much in THE HERALD this year on the signs of the time, and the Second Coming of our Lord.

We shall contend to the last ditch for Prohibition.

We shall warn the people against Romanism and Rum.

We shall discuss the blight of Calvinism.

We shall write on some of the big problems of Methodism.

We shall insist on religious controversy, a contending for the faith that lays hold upon Christ for salvation.

"Come thou with us, and we will do thee good."

in this life they may gather the thorns and thistles of their wicked actions which may prick and tear their hands and breasts. They must continue to reap in the world to come.

Blessed are those who have sown good seed of Gospel truth and kindly deeds through the year which is hastening to its close. It is quite remarkable and encouraging also that a very small deed—a few sentences, a word under the blessing of God—may prove to be good seed in good soil. It may bring forth a great harvest of blessing and can spread and reproduce itself until it grows a healthy harvest beyond the seas and into the vast eternities. Many a patient soul toiling in humility here and seeing perhaps but small results of their labors, will no doubt be surprised when they look upon the wide harvest field of blessing on the other side. Eternity alone will suffice to gather the rich fruits of faithful planting and diligent toil during this short life.

Whatever our lives have been, whether busy or indolent, whether dead to self and alive to the glory of the Master and the good of souls, or selfishly seeking our own interests, what we have written in 1931, we have written. It is in the hands of God; it belongs to eternity. May he have mercy on us. May the atoning blood of the Lord Jesus Christ cover all the past. However pure our motives, single our eye, diligent and unselfish our service, we would present it to him in Jesus' name covered with the red canopy of Jesus' atoning merit and mercy. Christ is our all, in all; only through him can we have hope. We can trust in nothing else. All our righteousness, apart from him, is as filthy rags, and the very best we can be or the most we can do in his name and for his sake must be placed under his atoning merit. There must be no boasting. There may be gratitude for the privilege of service and joy because of any good fruits or gracious results, but faith in Jesus only is the plea of our hearts.

Farewell to 1931! It has been a tragic year in the history of the world. There have been wars and rumors of wars. There have been much bloodshed, pestilence, earthquakes, floods, starvation, disease and death. The sickle of the great reaper has flashed through the earth. It would take a vast cemetery to cover those of our fellow-beings who have passed into the beyond. But in the midst of it all, there has been much blessing and good and hope and happiness. God has done the very best he could do with the material he has had to work with. Missionaries have broken the bread of life to hungry multitudes. Revival fires have burned like beacons in many valleys and on a thousand hills. Good seed have been sown that will bring forth a harvest for the granaries of society. We commit the year with all its toils, its prayers, its tears, to God in the great future into which, by his grace and trusting him for his leadership and blessing, we now must go.

What Shall The Harvest Be?

WE are coming to the close of the year 1931. We have been sowing seeds of some sort and there will be a harvest by and by. There are many who are busy scattering the seeds of sin, of unbelief, of wickedness. These seeds will come up and are bound to produce a harvest. It will ripen and those who have sown must reap. The Word of God is positive with reference to this matter: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Sins do not grow old and die. They live, grow and multiply. The seeds of evil reproduce themselves. The harvest fields of wickedness extend into the eternities. Men sow in this world and while

LIGHT DIVINE AND REFLECTIONS.

Rev. G. W. Ridout D.D., Corresponding Editor.

What is that strange light that is seen sometimes on a saint's face? I have seen it in many parts of the world. I saw it in China on the face of a Chinese woman who at five o'clock on Sunday afternoon got her baptism of fire. She came down to the Mission house to tell wife and me about it and as she told it, my wife avers that her face shone like an angel. I saw it on Sunday afternoon in Rio de Janeiro when a young man—theological student—obtained his liberty and pentecost after struggling with unbelief and other difficulties for ten days or more; he came over to me and embraced me and he had a joy unspeakable and full of glory. The transformation was wonderful; he was a young man of the Johannine type and when that strange light which saints enjoy lit up his face he was beautiful to look at. A young woman professor in one of the colleges was another case, when she obtained the blessing, a light, ineffable, seen neither on land or sea, shone upon her face; an angel could hardly have been more beautiful. She became one of the King's daughters during the rest of the meeting to conduct many of her girl students into the way of salvation and "paz completa."

I was introduced on the opening night to Rev. —, pastor of one of the churches. When I looked into his face I said, almost unconsciously to myself, "son of God"! Such he was, and his face told it; for two years he had been a spiritual explorer reaching out after the things of the Spirit and crying out: "Oh, that I knew where I might find him and the hiding of his power!" The Holy Spirit had been the subject of his study and meditation and heart cry and prayer, and that night when I preached on Acts 2:17, it was the message of light and liberty to him; in the altar service that followed he broke through in a passionate prayer, and the fire of the Lord fell; pentecost broke upon him; truly, the Comforter had come! "And he was there with the Lord forty days and forty nights. . . . When Moses came down from Mount Sinai . . . Moses wist not that the skin of his face shone." Exo. 34.

II.

Oh how wonderful what God can do with a preacher who is wholly given up to him and filled with a passion for souls. During the Great Awakening George Whitefield frequently preached in America. In his diary he records the following incident: "Sunday, November 2. Was much dejected a half hour before the sermon. Before I left Mr. Noble's house, I could only lie before the Lord and say, 'I was a miserable sinner' and wonder that Christ could be gracious to such a wretch. As I went to the meeting I grew weaker and when I came into the pulpit, I could have chosen to be silent rather than speak; but after I had begun, the whole congregation was alarmed. Crying, weeping, and wailing were to be heard in every corner. . . . After I came home, I threw myself upon the bed, and in an awful silence admired the infinite greatness, sovereignty and condescension of the love of God; divine consolations flowed in so fast that my frail tabernacle was scarce able to sustain them."

Dr. Gray, in a sermon on 1 Peter 1:10-12, asks; "And has the miracle ceased? Is preaching 'with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven' no longer known to men? Did the phenomenon end with the apostolic era? Ask the preachers of the Reformation period. Ask Wesley or Whitefield. Ask the French Quaker, Stephen Grellet. Read the life of Spurgeon, or of Charles G. Finney or Dwight

L. Moody. Familiarize yourself with the annals of nineteenth century missions. So full are they of illustrations of this same supernaturalism that A. T. Pierson aptly called them, 'The New Acts of the Apostles.'

"When ministers feel the special gracious influence of the Holy Spirit in their hearts, it wonderfully assists them to come at the conscience of men, and, as it were, to handle them; whereas, without these, whatever reason or oratory we may employ, we do but make use of stumps instead of hands."

III.

How absurd it is for us to send young men to college to equip them with intellectual store of classic and philosophic learning, and to send them out to teach without insisting upon it that, if Christ waited to be anointed before he went to preach, no young man ought to preach until he too has been anointed of the Holy Ghost.

THE INN THAT MISSED ITS CHANCE.

(The Landlord Speaks,—28 A. D.)

Amos R. Wells

What could be done? The inn was full of folk: His honor, Marcus Lucius, and his scribes Who made the census; honorable men From farthest Galilee, came hitherward To be enrolled; high ladies and their lords; The rich, the rabbis, such a noble throng As Bethlehem has never seen before, And may not see again. And there they were, Close herded with their servants, till the inn, Was like a hive at swarming-time, and I Was fairly crazed among them.

Could I know

That they were so important? Just the two, No servants, just a workman sort of man, Leading a donkey, and his wife thereon Drooping and pale,—I saw them not myself, My servants must have driven them away; But had I seen them, how was I to know? Were inns to welcome stragglers, up and down In all our towns from Beersheba to Dan, Till He should come? And how were men to know?

There was a sigh, they say, a heavenly light Resplendent, but I had no time for stars, And there songs of angels in the air Out on the hills; but how was I to hear Amid the thousand clamors of an inn?

Of course, if I had known them, who they were, And who was He that should be born that night,—

For now I learn that they will make Him King, A second David, who will ransom us From these Philistine Romans,—who but He That feeds an army with a loaf of bread, And if a soldier falls, He touches him And up he leaps uninjured? Had I known, I would have turned the whole inn upside down, His honor, Marcus Lucius, and the rest, And sent them all to stables, had I known.

So you have seen Him, stranger, and perhaps Again will see Him. Prithee say for me I did not know; and if he comes again, As He will surely come, with retinue, And banners, and an army, tell my lord That all my inn is His to make amends.

Alas, alas! to miss a chance like that! This inn that might be chief among them all, The birthplace of Messiah,—had I known!

John 16:23: "And in that day ye shall ask me nothing." The Greek word is "Ye shall ask me no questions." Before you have the power of the Holy Ghost you will be curious about many questions; but when the Holy Ghost shall come you shall know all things clearly with the heart. The pure heart of the believer (illuminated by the Holy Spirit) leaps to conclusions which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor the reason conceived. The faculty of knowledge is altered; we no longer seek it by the intellect but by the heart. The busy, intellectual disputant becomes the deep intercessioner.

IV.

It is said of George Fox that sometimes he would retire in the woods somewhere and continue to pray until he felt that God had given him some thought that would shake the country for nine miles around. God would answer his prayer and clothe him with the Holy Spirit so that he would make sinners quake.

Thoughts to shake things for nine miles around! Quite an idea! What a good idea for some circuit preachers. When I was in the pastorate I followed a preacher who, when he was in the pulpit, ought never to come out of it, and when he was out of the pulpit ought not to go into it. What was the matter with him? He was such a joker and treated everything with such lightness and frivolity that it was next to impossible for the people to take anything that he did seriously.

What is needed today are preachers so full of the burning truth and the Holy Ghost that they will stir and arouse and shake and revive the dead wherever they go. I read of one old-time preacher who had thrown all hell into a state of astonishment and put the devil on the lookout wondering what to expect next.

V.

Fanaticism and proselyting find their way to the Mission fields in every land. I was preaching in a city where years ago they had a flourishing church and work; now it is a small affair and growth is very slow. Fanaticism got in and tore it all to pieces; a missionary and his wife were swept off their feet with it and had to be recalled. People seem slow to forget these things and it makes the work hard and difficult.

Then there is a group of workers who seem to have their headquarters in U. S. A. somewhere, who go around two and two among the churches and sow the seeds of discord and dissension. I found these people in Chili and Argentina. They made out that they were the only true believers. They only had the truth—all others were wrong!

It seems to me a piece of mischief next to wickedness for people calling themselves Christians to come to the mission fields only to proselyte, when there are teeming multitudes of heathens and pagan that know nothing about salvation. Instead of stealing sheep from the various church folds, how much better to win souls one by one.

VI.

Stanley Jones said, "I was struck with the way my interpreters in Latin America would take my blunt Anglo-Saxon sentences with which I wanted to shake up the souls of the people, and would curve them out into the most delicately beautiful lines so that they would fall upon the people's souls like dew! I didn't like that, but the people did and that is the point. The Latin American needs our straightforwardness and love of truth, and we need his graciousness and love of beauty. Was Jesus in his temper of mind Latin or Anglo-Saxon? Certainly he was blunt and Anglo-Saxon when he talked to the Pharisees; they never forgot it."

George Whitefield in his day said the preachers were treating the guilty consciences of the people with feathers dipped in oil. The trouble with many preachers and missionaries is they are too smooth; many of them preach and teach so that the effect is like dew instead of a sword. The doctrine and truth of Holiness is obscured—seldom preached and, if mentioned at all, done so with the idea of giving no offence.

VII.

A certain poet tells of four ships that went out, but only one returned—her name was Faith. The names of the ships were Joy, Hope, Love, Faith. He sings:

"My gallant ships they sailed away
Over the shimmering, summer sea;
I stood at watch for many a day,
But one came back to me.

"For Joy was caught by Pirate Pain,
Hope ran upon a hidden reef—
And Love took fire and foundered fast
In whelming seas of Grief.

"Faith came at last, storm beat and torn,
She recompensed me all my loss;
For as a cargo she brought
A crown linked to a Cross."

VIII.

Conscience is depicted very powerfully in Genesis 42:21. Here is Conscience—guilty

Memory—we saw Reason—Therefore.
A good writer has written some tense lines in the following verse on Conscience and Remorse.
"Good bye I said to my conscience
"Good bye for aye and aye."
And I pushed her hands off harshly
And I turned my face away.

And conscience, smitten sorely,
Returned not from that day.
But the time came when my spirit
Grew weary of its pace,
And I said, "Come back" to my conscience,
"For I long to see thy face."
But conscience cried, "I cannot;
Remorse sits in my place."
The Bible represents Conscience as seared,
1 Tim. 4:2; defiled, Titus 1:15; purified,
Heb. 9:14.

RADIO IN PROPHECY.

Rev. C. F. Wimberly, D.D.

HERE is a statement in the Bible to the effect that for every idle word we shall give an account in the Day of Judgment. Again it is mentioned in the Bible, of a book being opened, and another book, in which are recorded the deeds done in the body. Here the mind becomes amazed when it is reminded of the millions now living and of the millions that have lived since the time probation began. Only infinite Omnipotence could ever devise such a stupendous conception, but in our new discoveries of this age-old organization of the elements and forces, we have found out that nothing is lost. We have long known the indestructibility of matter but now our experts of the air tell us that it is within the possibility of radio powers, and in the not very remote future, that we may penetrate the eternal archives of the universe and gather the voice of the Savior as he spoke by the sea of Galilee—hear his Sermon on the Mount, and his agonies in the Garden of Gethsemane; also, the orations of Demosthanes and Cicero, as they thundered their anathemas at crooked politicians. This thought gives scientific confirmation to the scriptural warning about words—"Nothing is lost." A staggering thought! We may not only have on the docket in the skies our words and deeds recorded, but as we may hear the record of Caruso's voice, though dead, we may hear our words and know them and remember them.

Life has always been a mystery, but as we delve into eternal truths of life as it is allied to the universe and conscience, it becomes more and more a reflex of what our Bible teaches concerning God. Once a sophisticated scientist has said that he studies God as he studies any other branch of knowledge, as he studied chemical formulas or the skum on the frogpond. Think of such blasphemy!

But let us continue our journey into the mystery of our theme. Sometime ago a friend of the writer gave us this little bit of air wizzardry. Coming into his home parallel with his telephone wire was the radio antenna, being a few feet apart. One day he tuned in as he rested after the lunch hour was over and caught three snatches of a conversation among neighbors, the voices of whom he recognized. Then he turned to his telephone and called up the first party and told him that he had been hearing his telephone conversation over the radio.

"What conversation are you talking about," answered the neighbor. "I have had no conversation with anyone today."

"Oh, yes, you did. I heard you and I caught enough of the conversation to get the gist of your friendly chat." There was a silence for some moments then the neighbor exploded:

"And what do you think of that—that sure is a knock-out. I did have a conversation with Jim yesterday about this same time of the day." Then my friend called up the other parties whom he had heard in the same manner and found out that they also had talked just as he had caught it over the receiver, but twenty-four hours before the time it had been picked up by the Radio.

Now let us do some conjecturing. Radio waves, they tell us, travel with a velocity of light one hundred and eighty-six thousand miles per second, traveling around the earth seven times while the clock ticks off one second.

Now, may we apply a bit of mathematics to this strange proposition and then we shall get figures that have no meaning when applied to such a calculation. The neighbor's little chat, according to what the scientists say—and we assume that they know what they are talking about—circled the globe six hundred and four thousand and eight hundred times before it was caught by the Radio. Then observe that there was no broadcasting machinery; no high-powered dynamos which are used by all broadcasting stations; the words simply jumped from the telephone wire; and with all their long journey seemed not to have lost anything of articulation or tone force, but they were clearly recognized. Here we may pause, remembering the words of our Master: "We must account for all our words." Record—here it is with an emphasis which overwhelms our brain cells. A man recently talked to himself around the world. The words had scarcely left his mouth before they had gone twenty-five thousand miles, a thousand times quicker than the rebound of an echo.

We gleaned this item from a Radio periodical: A man was flying in an aeroplane something like five thousand feet high and his speed, as he stated, was about one hundred and twenty-five miles an hour. He tuned in with his receiving set which was installed in the cockpit and heard a program from a studio seven hundred miles away. The music was fully enjoyed and the announcer's voice was distinct. We heard a gentleman not long ago from the Schenectady "House of Magic" tell of his greatest thrill one morning when he talked with a friend in far away New Zealand. He heard the conversation as distinctly as though it had been heard over the telephone.

It has been demonstrated far enough to assume the results are assured that aeroplanes equipped with fighting equipment can be sent out loaded with high explosives, directed to any distance, turned about in any way desired, and also made to drop bombs any second and upon any spot the director may wish; all this without endangering a single human life. War, therefore, is possible—the most destructive kind of war without the hazard of life to the offensive army.

So, as we go farther and farther into the magic of mystery it becomes more and more uncanny. It does not appear on "the borderland of the supernatural" but actually over there beyond.

This was done on the streets of one of our large cities not long since: A street car was loaded with the city officials from the Mayor to the members of the police and fire departments. To this car was attached three trailers and the crowd was invited to get aboard. They were filled by the spectators. Then the Radio man asked the motorman to disconnect the trolley pole so that no power could come from the wire above. Then with his device charged with invisible power he propelled this huge train of four cars loaded with human freight seven blocks through the main street of the city. This feat was next accomplished by driving an automobile through the same street in the same manner with the motor silent. It seems that there is no limit to the subtle powers controlled by Radio mechanism.

There are freakish things being done in the "House of Magic" mentioned before. Here is one: A container filled with pop-corn was placed between two large cakes of ice with the ice touching the container on both sides. Then with no connection whatever to any device, the heat was turned on by invisible waves and the pop-corn soon began to swell and the white popped corn flew all over the room. Then an egg was broken in a frying pan and the pan placed on a cake of ice, and by the same process the egg was fried as quickly as though it had been in a red-hot skillet.

This brings up a still more wonderful undiscovered part of this invisible continent of the air—the possibility of heat production. We may soon get our heat for all domestic use, or for all industries from one great power broadcasting station. How marvelous are the plans of the great Creator. We may soon be upon a time when fuel shall have been exhausted. Wood has already become a thing of the past in many sections; coal fields may soon be worked out, as well as oil and gas. All these sources of supply are but a gamble with nature and man is powerless to go beyond her supply. It is stated, on good authority, that we may not only get our heat from some great central power-house in a city but by the same process the entire nation may be furnished with heat.

Before the days of the Radio a scientist stated that with enough money he could build a power plant at Niagara Falls that would send heat and light to the whole nation; generate heat and box it up and ship it to South Africa in such quantities that the stored-up energy would be sufficient to run a flouring mill in Cape Town. A traveler could carry a sufficient amount in his handbag to cook his meals on the Sahara Desert. Such claims were regarded as phantasms of a hyphenated ego. But now things even more wonderful have come to pass and there is no end in sight. One thing is certain—the great God has anticipated our needs far ahead of man's visions.

We recently clipped this interesting news item on the Radio question: It is known that burglars often enter banks and drive the force of workers into the bank vault and close the door, after which they help themselves, undisturbed, to the contents of cash in the bank tills. But this no longer holds any terror. A small microphone can be installed in a bank vault ceiling and the moment anyone may be enclosed therein they can call for help and it is at once conveyed to police headquarters. Before the bandits can be aware of what is going on the bank can be surrounded by police officers. This little device has been tested in some cities and found to work perfectly.

THE CHRISTMAS PRESENT OF THE AGES.

Rev. W. S. Bowden.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

HE greatest gift that was ever made to any one on this earth was God's gift of his Son. At this Christmas season may we have a new appreciation of this Gift of gifts as we consider the marvelous declaration of our text!

Our text is one of the gems of the Bible. It has been called "a star of the first magnitude." The fact stated in this verse is the basis of the Christian religion. No grander message has ever reached the ears of men.

About nineteen hundred years ago the Master Divine talked with a man by the name of Nicodemus, and the world ever since has been listening to the wonderful words which fell from his matchless lips. The words of our text are among those to which Nicodemus listened on that memorable night long ago. The glorious truth unfolded here has been balm for many a troubled heart, inspiration for many a tempest-tossed, discouraged soul, and music in many an ear during the receding centuries. It is today grasped with eagerness by millions of people.

Many themes are suggested by this great text. As we seek to give an appropriate Christmas message upon God's Supreme Gift we shall concentrate our minds more especially upon these few words: "God—gave His—Son." If we rightly appreciate the gift of God's only begotten Son we'll cry out in the language of the apostle Paul: "Thanks be to God for his unspeakably precious Gift!" 2 Cor. 9:15, Weymouth's Translation.

All the gifts of God are good; but there is one which, in its intrinsic value and the importance of its blessings, infinitely transcends them all, so that, without exaggeration, it is "unspeakable." That gift is Jesus Christ. C. H. Spurgeon once declared: "Other gifts may amaze us, but this overwhelms us. If the stream be fathomless who shall find a plummet wherewith to measure the fountain!"

At this season of the year we are recipients of gifts and busy making and presenting gifts. Yet we sometimes forget that God is the greatest giver of all. We sometimes forget the greatest gift as well as the greatest giver. We are to think of Jesus Christ as a gift. God did not put Jesus Christ up for sale. The gift is not to be withdrawn, for the gifts of God are without repentance. The Christ of God was not loaned, but given. "Unto us a Son is given."

AN UNMERITED GIFT!

The recipients of this great gift were not worthy. The Psalmist asked: "What is man that thou art mindful of him?" (Psa. 8:4). Of the children of men it is written (Psa. 14:3), "They are all gone aside, they are altogether become filthy; there is none that doeth good, no, not one." In the book of Isaiah (64:6) it is written: "But we all are as an unclean thing, and all our righteousness is as filthy rags." And Paul, after quoting these passages, adds (Rom. 3:13-18), "There is no fear of God before their eyes."

There was nothing in man to merit this great gift. This gift was to man, not in a state of allegiance and innocence, but of rebellion and apostasy. When we truly grasp the fact that mankind had done nothing to merit this wonderful Bethlehem gift the value of the gift is more clearly perceived.

A VOLUNTARY GIFT.

People sometimes give to others because others have given to them. Not only did the loving Father voluntarily give this supreme gift, but we hear Jesus Christ saying: "I lay down my life; I lay it down of myself." Paul emphasizes the thought in such statements as these: "Who gave himself for our sins." "Who gave himself a ransom for all." "Who loved me and gave himself for me." "Who gave himself that he might redeem us from all iniquity." "Christ loved the church and gave himself for it." We commend highly the husband, the wife, the child, and the friends who give themselves in their entire nature and lives as gifts to those whom they love. Unselfish devotion secures the commendation of mankind. A consideration of the life of Jesus impresses us with the thought of his wonderful devotion to the unworthy and helpless.

A PRECIOUS GIFT.

"He gave himself." "Unto you therefore who believe he is precious." He is the "Bright and Morning Star," "the Rose of Sharon," "the Lily of the Valley," "the chief among ten thousand," "the Altogether Lovely." This gift is so precious that it is "unspeakable." A due appreciation of this gift arouses within us feelings which are too big for expression. This precious gift is satisfying. The world does not satisfy; Christ satisfies. This gift is eternal, praise the Lord!

The gift is most costly. It is a vicarious gift. "God hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him." He has borne our griefs and carried our sorrows. In the midst of giving and receiving of gifts let us bear in mind that the Heavenly Father gave the gift of his Son to be a sacrifice. A missionary gift! A sacrificial gift! An individual gift! He is proffered in completeness to every soul.

A GIFT OF LOVE.

"God so loved the world that he gave." Who can measure the depth of that love? "God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us" (Rom. 5:8). The story is told of a child who had been taught to think of God only as a stern judge. One day in her father's printing office she picked up a scrap of paper, and found on it these words, "God so loved the world that he gave—." The other words of the verse had been torn off. The girl had no idea of how the whole verse read. What she did read was quite a revelation to her. She did not know what God gave, but it made her think of God in a new light to know that he had given something. It brought great joy to her heart.

We know the gift of God's love. We know why God gave his Son. Love and grace are two words very closely related. The gift of love is also the gift of grace.

'Tis Grace! 'Tis grace! 'Tis wonderful grace!

This great salvation brings,
The power of rising evil slays,
And reigns supreme within.

'Tis Grace! 'Tis grace! 'Tis wonderful grace!

Its streams are full and free;
And flowing now for all the race—
They even flow to me.

THE GIFT OF LIFE.

"The gift of God is eternal life" (Rom. 6:23). "In him was life" (John 1:4). "Whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life" (John 3:36). "I am come that they might have life" (John 10:10). Christ is the Bread of Life, the Water of Life, the Way of Life, the Resurrection and the Life. The gift of Jesus is the gift of life. Over and over again did Christ declare himself to be the giver of life. "And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life." Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift of eternal life through Jesus Christ.

A COMPREHENSIVE GIFT.

God's great Christmas gift comprehends all we need for time and for eternity. All spiritual blessings are in Christ. Whatever we need we find in him. Jesus "is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption" (1 Cor. 1:30). The gift of Christ is the all-inclusive gift. In him is pardon, sonship, heirship, peace which passeth understanding, joy unspeakable and full of glory, victory over death, and life forevermore.

The sinner who refuses this unspeakable gift suffers an unspeakable loss. The one condition of receiving and enjoying this gift is faith. Oh, that we might more fully appreciate this comprehensive gift. "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" Rom. 8:32.

How are we to show our appreciation for this Gift of gifts? By ministering to others and bringing joy to them in the name and in the spirit of the Christ. This story is told of a Roman prince. He had heard from the lips of a missionary the Christmas story, but he didn't want to give his heart to Jesus. On Christmas eve he sat in his fine dining room at a table laden with delicious food. As he was about to eat he heard a tap at he window. Looking up he saw the face of a beautiful child and a sweet voice said: "The Christ Child is hungry." The prince became very angry. He ordered his soldiers to drive the child away. The soldiers did as they were commanded. Then the prince took up his food, but it turned to ashes. A second time he heard a rap. Looking up he saw again the face of the child and heard again the same voice saying, "The Christ Child is hungry." This time the prince became more angry. He again ordered the soldiers to drive the child away. When they did so the prince began to shiver. He had his servants pile logs on the fireplace. This did no good. The prince became colder and colder. It was freezing in the palace.

Then the prince realized that he had made a mistake. He sprang up and went out into the darkness to find the child. Wandering about the streets he passed a wretched hovel and heard the pitiful cry of little children. Opening the door he found a poor mother and five young children suffering. They had no food, no fuel, and were scantily clad. He took pity on them; brought them to his palace; fed, clothed, and warmed them. Again he heard the tapping at the window. As he looked up he saw the face of the Child; and the sweet voice said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Christmas is indeed a joyful day. Our hearts thrill with joy every time we hear the angelic announcement which came to the bewildered shepherds on the Judean hills the night that God's wonderful Gift to all the world came to Bethlehem: "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." I say our hearts thrill with joy. Yes—but we are sometimes so occupied with other gifts that we forget God's Supreme Gift!

Roads Down Which Jesus Came.

REV. I. M. HARGETT.

OWN what long and significant roads did the Bethlehem Babe come?

I.

First of all he came down the Road of Eternity. "Before Abraham was I am." "I am from everlasting to everlasting." "I am the first and the last." "I am Alpha and Omega." Yes, he came down the long Road of Eternity.

II.

He came down the Road of Time—the Calendar Road. From the Bethlehem Manger all history dates backward and forward from the beginning of time to the end of days. Is there not a vast significance in this fact which makes Christ's birth the most important event of all history? The birth of the Babe of Bethlehem changed the date on every letter, every legal document, every business transaction, and every calendar. He came down the Calendar Road.

III.

He came down the Road of Promise. He was a child of promise. In the Garden of Eden when man sinned God promised a Saviour. "The seed of the woman shall bruise thy head." He renewed that promise through Abraham, David and the prophets. It was fulfilled on the first Christmas morning when Christ appeared as the incarnation of God and the Saviour of man. He came down the Road of Promise.

IV.

He came down the Road of Prophecy. 750 years before the manger birth Isaiah said: "Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son and shall call his name Immanuel—God with us." Again the same prophet said: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." 700 years before that first Christmas morning the prophet Micah said: "But thou, Bethlehem, though thou be little, yet out of thee shall he come that is to be ruler in Israel."

Then one immortal day the archangel Gabriel appeared to a maiden in Nazareth and announced to her the coming of him about whom the prophet spoke. "And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name JESUS. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Yes, he came down the Road of Prophecy.

V.

He came down the Road of Sacrifice. That road led past every smoking altar and every burning sacrifice of the Old Testament dispensation to Bethlehem and the Cross. There is a red line of sacrifice that begins in Genesis and runs straight through the Bible over Calvary to the book of Revelation. Christ was not simply one of a long line of prophets, but the fulfillment of all the prophecies—the consummation of God's eternal plan and the one to whom every sacrifice and altar back through thousands of years had pointed. He came down the Road of Sacrifice.

VI.

He came down the Hebrew Road. From Abraham to Bethlehem is a long, long road, but well marked through the two thousand years. "Abraham saw my day and rejoiced." Coming down that road we pass Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Joshua, Gideon, Samson, Ruth, Boaz, David, Isaiah and the Prophets, and John the Baptist. He came down the Hebrew Road.

VII.

He came down the Gentile Road. When he came the Gentile world was sinking in sin and despair. Everywhere men were groping in ignorance and darkness. The world's wisest men had grappled with the sin problem trying to find a solution and had failed. The whole creation was groaning for a deliverer and a saviour. The three wise men coming out of the far East over the burning desert were representatives of that vast Gentile world crying for a saviour. The Babe of Bethlehem was God's answer to that cry. He came down the Gentile Road.

VIII.

He came down the Road of Divine Providence. According to the Old Testament scriptures the Messiah must be born in Bethlehem, but how could that be for Joseph and Mary lived away north in Nazareth. Leave that to God and to Caesar. A world language will be needed for telling and writing the wondrous story. God had been answering that need through hundreds of years in the preparation of the Greek language exactly fitted to tell the story of the Good News. Roads will be needed over which to carry the Good News to the nations. The Romans had already built them going out from Rome like spokes from the hub of a wheel into all the civilized world. Yes, he came down the Road of Divine Providence.

IX.

He came down the Road of Deity. Said the archangel Gabriel to Mary: "The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Says our Apostles' Creed that has come down to us across the centuries, "He was conceived by the Holy Ghost." Said the angel to the shepherds on the Bethlehem plains, "Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour which is Christ, the Lord." Said he, himself: "I and the Father are one." He was God's Son and our Lord and Saviour. He came down the Road of Deity.

X.

He came down the Road of Humanity. Says our venerable Apostles' Creed, "He was born of the Virgin Mary." Says St. John,

"He was made flesh and dwelt among us." He called himself "The Son of man." Says St. Paul to the Romans: "Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh; and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead." Yes, he came down the Road of Humanity. "He made himself of no reputation and took upon him the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of man." He was tempted in all points like as we are yet without sin." He came down the Road of our Humanity.

XI.

He came down the Road of Salvation. "He bore our sins in his own body on the tree." "He was wounded for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him and with his stripes we are healed." "Thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins." "The Son of man came to seek and to save that which was lost." "He is able to save to the uttermost them that come unto God by him." "If any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the whole world. He came down the Road of Full Salvation.

This coming Christmas day you will find him standing beside every congested highway and out on every lonely road in this wide world pleading with infinite tenderness, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." You will find him in places of business, in social circles, at political council tables, in homes, and standing by the door of every human heart saying, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him and he with me." Yes, he came down the Road of Salvation for all men and from all sin.

XII.

Where is he going? He is going up the Road of Eternal Life and, by God's grace, I am going with him. "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." Where is he going? Up the Road of Universal Conquest—up the Road of World Brotherhood—up the Road of Universal Peace and Good Will—up the Road of Universal Reign of Righteousness. We are not following a defeated leader. "He shall not fail, nor be discouraged, till he set judgment in the earth." "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun doth his successive journeys run."

A SANE CHRISTMAS.

BY O. G. MINGLEDORFF.

shall write for adult Christians. Others may care for the little ones; and I shall be happy to lend a helping hand.

Let's make this a "WHITE CHRISTMAS." This is a world of fearful want. I have travelled and preached much in the drought-stricken portions of our country during the last few months, where there are multitudes of little children who can have no Christmas presents this year. Many of them will need food and clothes to help them through the stress of the coming winter. Some of them will be cold when the earth is wrapped in ice and snow; for their loved ones will not be able to buy sufficient fuel to keep the fires burning, since the crops have failed, and money is scarce.

Have you read Mother India by Catherine Mayo? If not, do so. I have read it; and have been almost robbed of my desire for food. O, those hungry, starving multitudes who have never eaten one honest meal of good food in all their lives. Tramp! tramp! they go, generation after generation. Tramp! tramp! millions of them in sin and want—Tramp! tramp! in their blindness, without God and without hope in the world—Tramp! tramp! they face an eternity as black as midnight.

It has been more than nineteen hundred years since Jesus lay in Bethlehem's manger. Nineteen hundred years ago he died on Calvary's cross to redeem our world from ruin; but our race is still wracked with sin and suffering. There are more sinners on the earth than were ever here before this hour. How sadly we have failed him. One's heart grows sick as he lays all this want and woe beside the wanton waste of this nation's wealth. Meanwhile the sword of divine vengeance hangs over our people. If God should withdraw his restraining hand, if mercy should give place to justice, blood would fly, and anarchy would sweep the land. Like Jeremiah in the olden time, one feels like standing in the breach between America and God, with a cry on the one hand for repentance and reformation, and on the other for mercy. Will God smite America as he did Israel? Just as certainly as his sun shines in the heavens. With him is no variableness neither shadow of turning. Is he not a God of mercy? Yes; but he is no less a God of justice. Nothing pleases him more than to bless a God-fearing, God-serving nation; and nothing hurts him more than to destroy a wanton, God-rejecting people; but eternal justice must be satisfied.

Will some one fly into a rage, if I say that we have suffered human greed to commercialize our sacred festival? Then let him fly; for it is the truth. The unbelieving world has been toiling for months in its preparation to gather in the shekels from the gullible multitudes. During the next few days our people will be shopping, shopping, till they are sick of shopping; but who will even dream that he is God's steward, that he is spending his Lord's money, and that he must finally meet a day of reckoning?

I am writing for God's elect; for I am aware that others will only laugh at what I am saying. Beloved, we make our sacred festival too light and frothy. Our manner of celebration does not comport with the song of the angelic hosts above the Judean plains that night when our infant Saviour lay in his manger-bed in old Bethlehem. To them it was a holy night that filled their hearts with songs of glory and praise. They needed no Roman candles and fire-crackers. Their joy was far beyond all earth's foolish fireworks.

Now that Modernism is so bitterly denying our Lord's virgin birth and his consequent Deity, every true child of God should use this Christmas season to fight for these fundamental doctrines of our holy religion. Do not suffer Modernism to deceive you with its suave manners. It is substituting saccharine for salvation. It is a deadly upas tree with enticing artificial fruits full of deadly poison stuck on its limbs. It is using the very same form of temptation that Satan used when he overthrew the first pair in Eden's Garden! Eat the forbidden fruit, and you will be wise. And many a poor soul has tasted to his eternal damnation. I warn you; for these wolves in sheep's clothing are deceiving the very

A CHRISTMAS REVERIE.

Paul S. Rees.

"If I had not come!" What a hauntingly suggestive string of monosyllables! You know who the speaker is. It is Jesus. He pulls us up with a kind of stern mental jerk. He jars us thus out of the smug complacency with which we have come to accept Christmas and the countless benedictions that are implied by it. Suppose Christ had not come. What then? Suppose there had been no Manger Birth, no Star of the East, no angel Rhapsody, no hidden years at Nazareth, no calling of the Twelve, no Sermon on the Mount, no unveiling of the Father, no miraculous ministry of Mercy, no blood-sweat in Gethsemane, no uplifted Cross on Calvary, no empty Tomb, no ascension to the Glory, no promise of the Return. Suppose, in a word, there had been no Christmas for, lo, these two thousand years! One stands appalled at the mention of a conjecture so dark, smitten dumb in the presence of a fancy so horrible. Despite the strain and the pain of it, let us hold ourselves to reflect here a moment—you and I. Can you think of a world without the Four Gospels? Without the Epistles? Without an Atonement? Without an assurance of Resurrection and Immortality? Think of the sin that would crush us. There would be no sure and satisfying word of release and cleansing spoken to our burdened souls. Think of the sorrow and suffering that would embitter and overwhelm us. There would be no Comforter-Presence to sustain us. Our thinking about God, the universe and life would go halting and limping forever. For is it not Jesus Who invests God with love, the universe with meaning and life with infinitely glorious possibilities?

"If I had not come!" Dare we think of the gap, the vast void, that would have been created in the story of the race had He failed to come? History without its fairest figure! Literature without its sublimest passages! Music without its most spiritual creations! Eloquence without its loftiest flights. Philosophy without its most luminous thoughts! Morality without its flawless Exemplar! Theology without its Christology! Immortality without its Easter pledge! Sin without a conqueror! The world without a Redeemer! These are some of the conceivable and yet inconceivable possibilities that stalk in upon our meditative minds as we make this inverted approach to Christmas.

But He spoke another word. You remember it. "I am come!" How warmly different that sounds! What a world of change that makes! He has come! Wonderful tidings! He has come! And it's "Joy to the World." He has come—come to Mary's encircling arms and the shepherds' wondering gaze; come to a manger-cradle for His birth and a Roman Cross for His death; come to Jerusalem's pools and pathways and Galilee's hills and shores; come to teach, to reveal, to suffer, to die, to live again; come to redeem, to enlighten us who are children of darkness, to liberate us who are the bond-servants of sin, to bring us to God and righteousness and heaven at last. Once more then let us eagerly listen that we may catch anew the thrill of that first Christmas message: "Unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord."

elect. They have their stock in trade: "Keep sweet, keep sweet; and you will surely win the day, if you just keep sweet." Bandits and gangsters are bad people; but they are saints compared with Modernists. The former rob men of their valuables, and sometimes commit murder; but the latter murder souls, and damn them under pretense of saving them. They wear the garb of Judas Iscariot. I will not mince words; for I am writing the naked truth.

Dear hearts, this Christmas season will be a good time for us to examine the foundations of our faith in the Deity of our Lord.

Some little while ago I was conversing with a woman who declared that her foundation was solid rock; but when we dug into it a little, we found a bed of soft sand. Some miscreant had mined out a part of the rock, and packed in sand; and in that bed of sand was hidden a stick of dynamite capable of blowing out the entire foundation from beneath her soul.

There is one evidence of the Deity of our Lord, that no man can destroy: Every regenerated soul knows that he is God; and if he is God, he was born of a virgin—begotten of the Holy Ghost; for, if he had had a human father, he could have been only human. "Experience is the crowning evidence." When one denies these eternal truths, but calls himself a Christian, look for the cloven foot, for it is there. "O," says one, "have charity. Don't judge any one." Am I to tell men that they can deny the virgin birth, the Deity of Jesus Christ, and salvation through the merit of his precious blood, and be Christians? If so, I have taught and preached in vain these fifty-four years.

During this Christmas season we should study afresh the evidence of the virgin birth of our Lord. Let us linger about the manger-cradle, and worship with the shepherds and the wise men. Read anew Isaiah's prophecy concerning his virgin birth and its fulfillment in Matthew's first chapter. Peruse again and again Luke's wonderful story of the virgin birth, more beautiful than poet's idyl. Sing once more, and with holier zeal, the songs of his virgin nativity. Read the forty-fifth psalm and Hebrews one, and note how the Eternal Father calls his Son GOD. Hear him as he commands all the angels to worship him. Turn back into Jeremiah, and see how that inspired prophet calls Jesus JEHOVAH, a name applicable to none but the Supreme Being.

O, let's make this Christmas a time when we shall worship the King in his beauty, when we shall declare our faith in his virgin birth, in his Deity, in his atoning blood, in the power of his resurrection, and in his coming glory. Amen and amen!

A MAN COME FROM GOD.

REV. A. D. HOUGLIN.

Text: "And the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." John 1:14.

HE incarnation was an everlasting necessity for three reasons. First, man is lost to date. More highly created and endowed than any of God's creatures, man is lost, sinful, depraved and in the need of a Saviour:

"Thou madest man, he knows not why,
He thinks he was not made to die;
And thou hast made him, thou art just:
Thou wilt not leave him in the dust."

God sought in every conceivable way; by angelic warnings, through the voice of nature, by law and judgments to bring fallen humanity back to himself and giving up all other hope of ever saving a guilty race, he offered us his love! "Mysterious adjustment! Stupendous arrangement! To save man it became necessary that God, in one relation should overcome himself in another. Legal not less than moral barriers opposed the result, and both had to be removed so that 'The goodness and severity of God,' the divine justice and mercy might appear to equal advantage in the great transaction of the world's atonement." Being God he became a mediator, a Divine intercessor. "And we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." Being rich, he became poor that he might make us rich and bring many sons into his own glory. "While we were yet sinners; in due time Christ died for the ungodly," "that where sin abounded, grace might much more abound."

Second, the incarnation was necessary because nature does not properly reveal God. It is true that the invisible things of the creation of the world are clearly seen, being perceived through the things that are made, "even his everlasting power and Godhead." It is also true that the heavens declare the "glory" of God and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. It is true that many like Wordsworth

"Have felt a presence that disturbs—
With the joy of elevated thought; a sense sublime

Of something far more deeply interfused, Whose dwelling is in the round ocean and the living air, and the blue sky."

Yet at their best, the poets have failed to give to us a simplified version of the personality of God as recorded in the four gospels. Here we see God manifested in the flesh. The veil is withdrawn and we see him as he is, loving, sacrificing, speaking, healing, blessing, lifting, dying and rising again to make us at one with the Father; overcoming all difficulties and triumphing over man's worst enemy, Death.

Third, the incarnation was necessary for the simple reason that it was the best and only way that God had of reconciling us unto himself. There is nothing that has such magnetic appeal to the entire race of human beings as the story of a suffering Saviour.

"The Cross like a far-off beacon stands
In the midst of a world of sin.
And stretched out are his bleeding hands,
To gather the weary wanderers in."

"He died for me, the mighty fact!" A loving, dying, sacrificing Redeemer thoroughly satisfied the demands of justice, cleared the way for mercy, met the demands of a Sovereign ruler and rescued man from the depths of ruin!

Again, the incarnation has, and will, to a certain extent, remain an everlasting mystery. After Paul had spent three years in Arabia thinking through the great subject of redemption, he seems wonder struck over the stupendous work of reconciliation, and we frequently hear him speak of the great "mystery." "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God!" Language fails of expression and he exclaims "without controversy, great is the mystery of godliness; God was manifested in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles and received up into glory." Again, "God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles." To this day, only a small part of the Gentile world has been able to appreciate the atonement, and we know that though educated in the law and taught in all things pertaining to righteousness that when Jesus came unto his own, his own received him not. Regarding him as an impostor and a deceiver of the people, they crucified him, refusing to crown him Lord and King.

Jesus was a sufficient and successful revelation of the Godhead. He possessed divine titles and assumed divine attributes. The Old Testament prophet called him "Counselor," "Mighty God," "Everlasting Father," "Prince of Peace." One day Peter throws himself at his feet, saying, "Depart from me for I am a sinful man, O Lord." In his memorable confession he calls him "the Christ, the Son of the living God." The apostle Paul calls him "the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords."

Jesus was not only God. He was eternal. "In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God." Jesus testified to the Pharisees. "Before Abraham was, I am," signifying that he was the eternal, self-existent, personal God. He is also regarded as Creator. "All things were created by him; and without him was not anything made that was made." This not only makes him Creator but equal with the Father. He is not to be regarded as some special representative of Heaven for "he is before all things and by him all things consist." He is the fullness of him that filleth all in all. John recognized him as the "Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world" and said, "We beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father." Jesus revealed the power of God in casting out demons and in forgiving sins, in healing the leper, in raising Lazarus from the dead, in quelling the force of the tempest and in the words of his own declaration, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." He was omniscient, that is, he knew all things for he "knew what was in man and needed not that any man should teach him." The spies said "never man spake like this man" for he spake as one having authority. His divine titles, his omnipotence and his omniscience qualify him to sufficiently reveal the divine goodness, mercy and power. Infinite God! Victorious Redeemer! Prince of Peace! Pilate called him the faultless one. Thomas had to exclaim, "My Lord and my God!" To Tennyson he was the "Strong Son of God, Immortal love." To every devoted Christian he is the "One altogether lovely, the fairest among ten thousand!"

This Holy One became poor, divested himself of his former glory, was tempted without yielding, suffered without murmuring, lived miraculously and died divinely. He triumphed over death, hell and the grave.

A great historian said that before he came, the greatest power in the world was the militarism of Rome. Now Christ holds the scepter of power. The Cross is the greatest force now known. Before it "angels and men fear and fall." Christ became the world's greatest philosopher, its greatest Teacher, its greatest prophet, a complete revelation of the Father, the world's only hope of redemption. Nicodemus was right when he said, "we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him." And Jesus offered him the only formula for salvation when he said, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see God."

"As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." As we celebrate the birth of the world's only Redeemer, may we see beyond tinsel and Christmas decorations and behold him high and lifted up for the healing of the nations, the Saviour of all mankind, "the glory as of the only begotten of the Father."

"THIS TEMPLE"---John 2:19.

REV. HENRY OSTROM.

HOW epochal when Solomon announces the project of building a house for the name of Jehovah! With eighty thousand men cutting stone into proper shape, thirty thousand laboring in the quarries, seven thousand proselytes carrying burdens and three thousand overseas it was a host in action for seven years. How interesting to consider the timbers, the gold, and the many varieties of material for that one structure for all the earth for the name of the Lord! Also, to trace its history, its destruction and the rebuildings down to the time of Herod arouses great interest. It was a special, a singular building. It was one alone.

And now, our Lord Jesus speaks of his body as "this temple." Is it not, that, as the temple was the one building on all the earth for God's name, so, Jesus' body is the one body of all human bodies of all history unstained with sin? Was it not, that, just as the temple was an exhibit of great richness among buildings, so, his body enshrined the wealth of a perfect being and was accepted of the Father as an offering of perfect sacrifice—the fulfilled Burnt Offering? One is impressed that it is only in contrast with his PRECIOUS blood that silver and gold are called "corruptible things." And was it not that his body was to give man to see how near he would come, how far down from Sinai, to seek and to save that which is lost, as well as the full price he would pay to righteously save and consequently fully save the sinner?

But, we think it was more. "The heaven and the heaven of heavens" would be too confining, yet, that it should be for him to say, "A body hast thou prepared me" should remind us of how far down he came that he might take us up forever. However, I think it was still more. Was it not that man's body should be considered "the temple" as we read in 1 Cor. 6:19: "Know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit?" Not a hut, not a cabin, but "the temple." He who thus designates the body "this temple" has himself by his blood and by the descended Holy Spirit called his own to a recognition of the sanctity of their bodies. "Present your bodies," we are admonished. Ah, we know that "we wait the redemption of the body" and many infirmities may affect them but as temples of the Holy Spirit they are certainly not to be given to wastefulness, to vanity, to lawless tastes and passions. Surely hands and feet and ears and lips, and all the functions of the body should be presented a "living sacrifice."

We are considering the celebration of his having taken on that temple, passing by the nature of angels and coming for sinners in the flesh, what a fitting thing for us it is that we close in with its significance.

"Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood he also himself likewise took part of the same." Hebrews 2:14.

Is he not near? I may not feel free to call him my brother but he has condescended to speak of us as "brethren." Heb. 3:12. Yes, from the first hour of parental smiles over our baby faces, we can trace that condescending nearness, but as soon as we had grown old enough to know that the erstwhile Babe of Bethlehem declared his body as "This temple" it should have been ours to trust his cleansing blood and humbly consider our bodies temples of the Holy Spirit.

The consideration changes the entire estimate of our poor bodies. His Advent could not be without his Cross following, yet, we are in danger of too lightly considering the riches for us contingent upon his Advent. It is only when we have come to the Cross and received him as Saviour and Lord that we begin to learn the wonders also of his Advent. We go to Calvary to really see Bethlehem. It is thus we see his condescension, his sympathy, the "all points" for testing, his actual coming near. But, it is there, too, we begin to trace the sanctity of the Christian's body. Is it true? Then, one would think that every medical doctor would decide to receive him this Christmas time. One would think that all users of microscopes and students of the human body would break down in humble recognition of his holy recognition of a holy body. Surely they would do so but for the treachery of sin. And one would think that (barring insanity of the person) the widespread suicide and murder would cease among all who know about the Christmas meaning. But they must go by faith to "the place of a skull" to see "the Manger." It is a view by faith of the "marred face" that gives one to even begin fair lessons about "The Babe" in Bethlehem. It is to such that the words can be properly said, "I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

If Christ Should Come to Jerusalem CHAPTER VII.

ANTICHRIST means against Christ, or a substitute for Christ. Anything or person that opposes or undertakes to take the place of Christ. St. John in his first epistle, declared that, "even now there are many antichrists." All through the history of the church there have been antichrists, false teachers, and deceiving men and women who have led the people away from truth into error, from obedience to, and the worship of, Christ to subjection to themselves.

Our Lord Jesus, in connection with this teaching concerning the end of the age, says, "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect." The Lord goes forward describing conditions as they shall exist just prior to his appearing; he says, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: and then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

The Lord is not describing a world brought to repentance and salvation through the gospel immediately before his appearing, but he is describing a time of tribulation. St. Paul, in his letter to Timothy, writes in perfect harmony with the teaching of our Lord, when he says, "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away."

St. Paul in this comment on conditions in the last days, is simply holding up a mirror reflecting conditions of today. We might comment at length on this scripture and easily point out to our readers the greed and selfish covetousness of the rich, the combines, the trusts, the chain stores, the impoverishing of the multitudes, and the vast riches of the comparatively few; a covetous age; the profanity and blasphemy heard on every hand, by men and women. The "revolt of youth," disobedience to parents, without natural affection, birth control, the multitudes of educated, well to do people who have crucified their natural affection and substituted poodle dogs for babies. Mark you, it turns out that this aggregation of sinners are church members. The apostle tells us that they "have a form of godliness, but deny its power." They have made a profession; they are in the church; they have made some sort of meaningless decision, but have not been regenerated, and are the open enemies of the Holy Spirit, his sanctifying power and gracious manifestations.

We do not believe that Lenine, the dominating personality in Russia, is the antichrist, but he will suffice for a good forerunner. He has great power, and the antichrist cannot possibly be more godless, and hate more bitterly our Lord Christ, and all for which he stood, than Lenine. Recently, the Bolshevik government has passed a law that no Bibles shall be printed, imported into Russia, transferred, taught or kept by the people. That is an attitude of desperation in one of the great nations of earth which, in its heart, has declared war against all civil government and against the Lord himself.

In his description of the antichrist, the final man of sin, Daniel says, "And in his estate shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall give the honor of the kingdom; but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries. And with the arms of a flood shall they be overflowed from before him, and shall be broken; yea, also the prince of the covenant. And after the league made with him he shall work deceitfully: for he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people."

Daniel goes forward picturing this antichrist until he becomes a man of great power, in fact, a king, and then he says, "And the king shall do according to his will; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvelous things against the God of gods, and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished; for that that is determined shall be done. Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers, nor the desire of women, nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all. But in his estate shall he honor the God of forces; and a god whom his fathers knew not shall he honor with gold, and silver, and with precious stones, and pleasant things."

St. Paul speaks of this same antichrist in his second letter to the Thessalonians, second chapter, third and fourth verses: "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple as God, sheweth himself that he is God."

All of the scriptures we have with reference to this man of sin, the final antichrist, indicate that his fearful reign of perfect havoc and wickedness, will be short, and that it is at the close of his reign that Christ shall appear, or the coming of Christ will mark the close of his reign. Paul says in this same letter to the Thessalonians, "And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming."

For the convenience of the reader, I have been quoting from the 11th chapter of the book of Daniel. You will do well to turn and read that chapter carefully. It will be profitable to give careful study to the entire book of Daniel. We have many evidences of its trustworthiness and that it is divinely inspired. One of the strong proofs in favor of its divine inspiration is the fact that the modernists, practically all of them, deny its inspiration, which ought to have a wholesome influence with the devout children of God to believe that Daniel was an inspired prophet of God, and that he spoke truthfully with reference to the close of the present age, and the coming of our Lord God.

Turning to the twelfth chapter of Daniel we find a portion of his prophecy which undoubtedly has reference to the second coming of Christ. As the reader may not have a Bible convenient, we quote: "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of my people: and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book. And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever." Dan. 12:1-3.

Read also the tenth verse of this same chapter: "Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand: but the wise shall understand."

It is understood that a veil is over the mind of the Jews as they read the New Testament. It seems there is a cloud over the minds of those who fail to love the promise of the appearing of our Lord. It is remarkable how they would, if possible, delay the coming of the Lord. They seem to be able to misinterpret and discount every teaching of the Old and New Testament with reference to that glorious event, when Satan shall be bound and Jesus shall be crowned Lord of all.

The book of Daniel offers very suggestive study for the present period of history. We commend it to our readers.

ON THE PACIFIC COAST.

Came out to the Pacific Coast for a few short meetings in California. My first engagement was with Dr. J. C. McPheeters, pastor of the Glide Memorial Church in San Francisco. This church, as many of our readers know, was erected by Mrs. Lizzie H. Glide as a memorial to her husband, for a great evangelistic center, in one of the most pagan cities in the civilized world. San Francisco is a city entirely unlike any other—magnificent in architecture, one of the greatest harbors on any coast, ships coming and going, Golden Gate Park, attractive beyond description, art galleries, museums, aquariums, Japanese gardens, hot houses with marvelous varieties of plants and flowers, trees of many varieties, drives, walks, grassy lawns, wild thickets, the inrolling waves of the great ocean washing along its vast stretch of sandy beach, with huge walls of concrete saying thus far and no farther. The people of San Francisco do things on a big scale. They are now preparing to build two bridges across the Bay at a cost of many millions of dollars.

Glide Church had been operating for about ten months, at the time of my arrival for the meeting. It is a human beehive of religious activity. I never have seen anything quite comparable to it. Dr. McPheeters seems to thrive on hard work. They have, in this short time, received two hundred new members into the church, and gone forward every way, in a city that offers about as many obstacles to religious work as can be found anywhere in this nation.

I was happy to find Rev. Raymond Wilder leading the choir, speaking in the weekly meetings, and giving a good hand every way as the pastor's assistant. Raymond and his wife are Asbury College students, and Raymond took his degree in Theology in the Asbury Seminary. He is a young man of rare promise. Dr. McPheeters carries on, and does not seem to know anything about difficulties, but just keeps fighting and winning. He has a meeting in a large room every night in the week, except one, and souls are being converted right along. They frequently have street meetings and catch some fish for the Lord.

We had fine congregations on Sabbath morning and evening, and very good attendance at the week-day services. I preached twice daily, and souls were seeking at the altar almost every evening. The closing Sabbath evening of the first week, we had a splendid altar service, and Dr. McPheeters asked me to remain and press the battle another week, which I did, and we witnessed a number of souls blessed at the altar, some being converted and others sanctified. Mrs. Bishop Moore was our best altar worker, and saw a number of young women in whom she was deeply interested, blessed. Dr. McPheeters was greatly rejoiced over the conversion of his son, as fine a young lad as you could wish to meet. The closing Sabbath night of the meeting was very gracious. The long altar was packed with seekers from one end to the other. Dr. McPheeters was expecting quite a number of new members.

The sad feature of the meeting was the illness of Sister Glide. For some weeks she has been confined to her bed. We called on her twice, and in spite of her suffering, found her deeply interested in the salvation of souls and the ongoing of the evangelistic work at Glide Memorial. Let the readers of THE HERALD offer special prayer for Sister Glide, that the Lord may relieve her pain and give her great spiritual comfort and, if in harmony with his will, to lengthen out her days of service for her Lord and Master.

After preaching twice, daily, for two weeks, I was quite tired, came down to Los Angeles and rested until Sabbath, when I commenced an eight-day—Sunday to Sunday—meeting with Dr. Bob Shuler, in Trinity Methodist Church. We had large crowds on Sunday morning and evening. In the afternoon there were two monster protest meetings over the government putting Bob Shuler off the air. One meeting met in Shuler's church at two o'clock, and standing room was in demand. At three o'clock a great meeting was held at Trinity Auditorium some blocks away from Dr. Shuler's church. Every one of the 3,000 seats was taken long before the meeting was over at the church. Dr. Shuler spoke at both meetings, there being approximately 6,000 people at both meetings. It is entirely probable that the arbitrary act of the government in stopping Dr. Shuler's speaking over his Radio will have a very marked effect on the vote of California in the next presidential election. There are tens of thousands of people in California who love Bob Shuler for his fearless courage in battling for civic righteousness. One afternoon the past week he spoke in one of the large Methodist churches in this city, and it was packed from floor to gallery. The people believe in free speech, and they believe the government has been influenced by wicked millionaires, who do not want their wickedness exposed, to take Bob Shuler's Radio away from him. The people are righteously indignant, and they will be heard from.

H. C. MORRISON.

IMMANUEL—GOD WITH US!

MRS. H. C. MORRISON.

"All Hail Immanuel, heaven-born Prince of Peace!

Hail the Sun of righteousness!
Light and life to all he brings,
Risen with healing in his wings:
Hail the incarnate Deity!
Pleased as man with men to appear,
Jesus our Immanuel here,
Hark! the herald angels sing,
'Glory to the new-born King!'"

Marvelous, wonderful that, after two thousand years since the angelic host sang "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, good will to men," that we should be giving vent to that same joyous news—Christ is born—the newborn King!

Great men have been born, lived, passed off the stage of action and been forgotten, but not so with the King of kings and Lord of lords. He is the Divine Magnet that attracts men unto himself more and more, as the years come and are numbered with the past.

THE PRESENT CONGRESS.

The present congress will pass an act providing for a national vote on prohibition. It may not be a direct vote for the removal of the Eighteenth Amendment, but it will provide for the sale of intoxicating drink. The act will be so drawn that it will please the liquor forces, and they will rally to it with tremendous enthusiasm and millions of money.

The prohibition forces are in bad plight for the conflict. There is a lamentable dearth of spiritual life throughout the nation, which means it will be difficult to rally the moral forces of the country. The theory of evolution, as taught in the schools and literature and, in many pulpits, has had an appalling, deadening effect upon the religious life of this nation. A modernistic ministry has done much in their bewildering of the people, and their opposition to revivals of religion to paralyze all spiritual life. Godless laymen of influence in the churches have helped to close the doors of the churches to an earnest evangelism, thereby making a large contribution to the fearful state of immorality that pervades the nation. Evangelists, with an eager desire for big money for their shallow services, have helped to disgust and prejudice men against revivals of religion.

All of these things, and others that might be mentioned, have put the church in a state of weakness and hesitation that means great advantage to the enemy of sobriety and decency. There is a loud cry all over the land for license of all kinds of evil. There is widespread rebellion against the laws of God and man. Our nation is mad with intoxication of bold, defiant wickedness; the tides of sin are rolling in with increasing velocity to inundate and sweep away all of the barriers of righteousness.

Even now, if bishops, district superintendents, presiding elders, pastors, evangelists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Nazarenes, Pilgrims, and church members of every denomination, would rally for a great mourners'-bench revival, within three months we could have this nation ablaze with divine power, and kick the breath out of the liquor business. But what's the use of writing this! There has been fearful sowing to the wind—there will be reaping of the whirlwind.

H. C. MORRISON.

Jesus Christ—the Babe of Bethlehem—still rules the world with truth and grace, and makes the nations prove the glories of his righteousness, and wonders of his love. He comes to bind up the broken heart, to assuage grief-stricken, sin-bound humanity, and to set the captive free from his fetters of bondage to sin.

No one can begin to tell what the coming of Christ has meant to this world! What would be conditions if he had not come? How dark, and unbearable would be our condition but for the Light of the world that burst upon this sin-cursed earth two thousand years ago. Jesus the Light of the world is the Hope of the world! He comes to make his blessings flow far as the curse of sin is found. He is our Shield and Defender, the Ancient of Days!

Jesus came, spent about thirty years in this prodigal world, paid the price of our redemption by hanging on the cruel tree, went into a borrowed tomb, the third day burst the bands of death and came forth Conqueror over death, hell and the grave! Had Christ not come there would be no Christmas Day, no Calvary, no Easter Morning, no solace for the present, no hope for the future. Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ!

"Oh tell of his might, O sing of his grace,
Whose robe is the light, whose canopy space;
His mercies how tender! how firm to the end!

Our Maker, Defender, Redeemer and Friend!"

All hail thou once despised Jesus, but now the ruler of earth and hell and sky! Christ our Advocate with the Father ever liveth to make intercession for us, and is alive forevermore! What a heritage is this world's Christmas Gift. How it bespeaks the Father's love, and the Son's willingness to get beneath the world's burden of sin and lift us into life eternal. The world's hopes are wrapped up in the Babe of Bethlehem, who bids us lift up our hearts to him who rules above.

Jesus, thou conquering King, bearer of the world's shame, we adore and magnify thy wondrous Name this blessed Yuletide Season which still provokes the song of Peace on Earth and Good Will to Men.

"Worship, honor, power, and blessing,
Thou art worthy to receive;
Loudest praises, without ceasing,
Meet it is for us to give.
Help ye, bright angelic spirits;
Bring your sweetest, noblest lays;
Help to sing our Saviour's merits;
Help to chant Immanuel's praise!"

The Christmas Heart.

Christmas is within you, what you are, not what you receive. Thus we express our Christmas cheer from within. "Better deserve and not receive, than receive and not deserve." Yours will be the best of gifts,—if you can receive them: for, as friend gravitates to friend, "so flows the good with equal law, unto the soul of pure delight." To give, is to receive.

"To have won from Heaven God's favor,
Is riches beyond all treasure;
The sum of one's life and one's labor—
Is the sum one has given in measure."

In the race of life, the mind is made to outstrip the Heart, but Christmas brings the more precious things of the Heart to the fore, home-ties, kindred, friendships, recalling childhood's "All golden yes-ter-days:" of scenes that we had deemed no more, now hover round our humble door. "And memories come a-trooping through, with whispering hopes, and loves, and you." But the Christmas spirit within, will unfailingly manifest itself without,—in ministries of pity, comfort, and good cheer to one and all. For if, out of our heart treasures, we cease to give, we will cease to have: it is the Law of Love. Thus, as in Heaven's All-including Gift, we too, may share a limitless "Good will" to the whole round world,—and be the richer for the sharing.

"I'd rather trust and be deceived,
And weep o'er that deceiving;
Than doubt one heart, who if believed—
Would bless by that believing."

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

JOY TO THE WORLD! THE LORD HAS COME.

As the Christmas shoppers hurried in and out of the gift shops, their faces happy and smiling, little Mary watched them with just a little bit of envy and bitterness in her heart.

Mary was cold and a little hungry. At home was her sick mother, also cold and hungry. As she saw the gay colored packages the shoppers carried, she thought of how she would love to carry such a package home to poor mother, just to see her smile again. Mother was so very ill, and the doctor said that only the best of care and good food would make her well again. Mary did the best she could, but mother grew weaker each day and smiled less and less often. Those sad, sad eyes! "Oh," thought Mary, "if I could only do something to make mother smile tomorrow; I, too, would have a happy Christmas."

"I know," she exclaimed. "I'll get her a package out of my paper money." So she rearranged the papers under her arm, for Mary was the family wage-earner as well as mother's nurse. "P-a-per," she called, in her clear, high voice.

"Here, lass, keep the change!" A good natured old gentleman dropped a quarter in her cold hand. "Oh, thank you sir," cried Mary, "Now I'll get a package for mother." The good man hesitated—"What kind of a package for mother? Tell me about it." Somewhat shyly Mary related her story of their plight. "Come with me," he offered, "and I will help you pick out the package."

Into the splendid big department store he led her. He handed the sales-lady a little note, saying at the same time, "Mary, here, wants a pretty package for mother's Christmas. Make it look pretty, and use lots of ribbon, please." "A quarter package," chimed in Mary, her eyes sparkling.

Soon the lady returned. "I'm afraid this package will be too heavy for the little miss to carry home. We will deliver it for her."

Mary's heart beat high with joy as she hurried home. On turning one of the corners, she heard a sweet voice singing, "Joy to the world, the Lord has come." She tiptoed into the house and up to mother's bedside. "Mother," she cried, "you will soon be happy and well again, for as I came down the street I heard a voice singing, 'Joy to the world, the Lord has come,' and I remember you told me you would be happy and well again when he comes."

There was a knock at the door just then, and on opening it Mary found a beautiful package for mother and another one marked, "For the little lass." Beside these was a large basket of good things to eat for their Christmas dinner.

"Yes," said Mary's mother, with the sweetest smile Mary had ever seen, "The Lord has come."

"And he made you smile again," answered happy little Mary.

Peace and Good Will!
Peace and Good Will!
Hear how it rings over
Valley and hill;
Sweetly the music is Echoing still,
Peace! Peace!
Peace and Good Will!

(Daniel Batchelor, from Everyland)

Dear Aunt Bettie: I thought I would write another letter to the Girls and Boys' Page. I think The Herald is a fine paper. How many of you girls and boys read the Bible every day? I read two and three chapters in the Bible each day. The Bible is the greatest book in the world. I have written several letters to page ten. I am just sweet sixteen. That isn't very old, is it? Mr. Jackson, the one who gives us The Herald, is getting old. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson are good Christians. Girls and boys, don't be afraid to write. As my letter is getting long I will close and give room for others to write. Oh, I forgot! I hope Mr. W. B. is out taking a walk with a good Christian girl when my letter arrives. Boys and girls, let your letters fly to Hazel Cain.

Galax, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Greetings in Jesus our Saviour this holy season to Aunt Bettie and to all the cousins, especially those whom I have had the pleasure of hearing from.

"This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." (1 Tim. 1:15).

Once more God's children are looking forward with joy to that day on which is celebrated the first of the greatest events in the history of the universe: that act of God himself in taking unto himself a human body like ours, without its sins. On the first Christmas, over nineteen hundred and thirty years ago, God the Son, one with God the Father, and God the Holy Ghost in eternity, glory, majesty and power, became the Son of Man. He appeared first to human eyes as the dearest, sweetest and loveliest Babe that the world has ever seen or will ever see.

"He was little, weak and helpless. Tears and smiles like us he knew. And through all his wondrous childhood

He would honor and obey.
Love and watch the lowly maiden,
In whose gentle arms he lay,
For he is our childhood's pattern,
Day by day like us he grew."

The true meaning of Christmas is that God the Son came down from heaven, "became flesh and dwelt among us" (John 1:14) in human form, that he might, as God and man, die upon the Cross for the sins of the world.

"There was none other good enough
To pay the price of sin.
He only could unlock the gate
Of heaven, and let us in."

How God came down to earth to dwell and die, is far, far beyond the understanding of the saints of God. His coming through the Incarnation, the taking on of flesh, one of the most precious and sublime mysteries of the Christian religion, we, as God's obedient children, accept by faith.

I am very glad that in childhood's rosy and golden days, before I was eight years old, this precious truth, "He died for me," got hold of my boy heart and I accepted Jesus as my personal Saviour. For over forty-three years, without a break, I have been following the Christ of Christmas. My all is on the altar and I am living a life of separation from the world—its amusements, occupations, associations and fashions. In this beautiful life of separation, I find great pleasure, abounding joy and sweet peace. Jesus sweetly saves and completely satisfies me now. Hallelujah! I am proud to be a soldier of The Salvation Army and work for God in it. To all the cousins, who are followers of Jesus as their personal Saviour, I wish you a Christmas that will mark the deepening of your love for Jesus and the increased determination to follow him, whatever the cost. And to the other cousins, my heart's desire for you is, that you will at once "swing wide the door of your heart" and let God's Christmas Gift, Jesus, come in. And you will always be glad for having taken this, life's greatest, step. I shall be pleased to hear from any of the cousins at any time, especially those who are saved or have a desire to be. I shall do my best in my very busy life to answer, at least briefly, all letters and cards received. God bless you all.

Your cousin in Jesus,
Philip Mowry Smith.

New Jersey.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Time seems to fly when you are kept busy. Seems a long time since I chatted with you, but here we are right on the threshold of Christmas. How glorious to have a personal Savior who will stand by us as soon as we trust him. I want to hear from so many that used to correspond with me but have not the list with me. I am at my sister's sixteen miles from home. Remember us at the throne of mercy. Greetings in Jesus' name.

Lizzie M. Perry.

Dear Aunt Bettie: We are two little boys from Crosbyton, Texas. Our ages are six and four years. May we join your happy band of boys and girls? Our father has been sick a long time, and is in the last stages of T. B. My name is Jack and brother's is Kenneth. Our father is an old-time Methodist preacher. We used to go to Sunday school and church, but we have no clothes now and we can't go. Christmas will be sad for us, as there will not be any Santa Claus, as father is sick. Dear cousins, won't you remember us with some gifts? Mother needs shoes, and so do brother and I. Mother wears No. 6, I wear No. 1, and brother wears No. 9, children's size. We need some blankets very much, as father gets cold. We will ring off, hoping to hear from some of the kind cousins soon.

Jack and Kenneth Logan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a stranger to your page, but I hope to know it better. I will make my introduction short. I am trying to do God's will. I belong to a Shut-in Society and mean to reach all I can with a good, religious paper, just as God gives me postage or any one sending me an addressed envelope I will gladly send them the name and address of some shut-in, that they may help by stamping them out your Herald each week, after you are through with them. There are so many who are hungry for the Lord and would get real soul blessings from some good papers or tracts. I also believe there are many of you readers who would be glad to turn your paper over to some shut-in. Some of you who have boys cast-off clothes send them to my widowed sister's boys. Their ages are twelve, ten and eight. They have been out of school for lack of clothing; shoes and stockings are much needed too. Send them to Grandma Irwin, care Mrs. A. B. Dunn, Camden, Ark. My name is

Mrs. W. C. Ward.
Rt. 4, Dunlap, Iowa.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Am a reader of The Pentecostal Herald and have had one letter printed. Hope you will print this one as I am sick and would enjoy getting letters from folks who are about my age. I don't look sick at all. I read an article the other day in a Christian paper about the "Joy of the Lord making folk's faces shine." I am thirty-three years old. Would especially like to hear from folks from Arizona, California, Washington, Oregon, Wyoming. I'll go and leave room for others and I'll be looking for the mail man expectantly.

Madge M. Roads.
Rt. 4, Hillsboro, Ohio.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Kentucky girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I am ten years old. I live in the country and like to go to Sunday school and church very much. My birthday is March 25. I think the answer to Ruth Johnson's question is that she was born June 21 or 22. Audrey Ross, your middle name must be Louise. Emily Kennedy, your middle name, I think, is Margaret. Please answer and tell me if I am right.

Ruth Violet Jesse.
Rt. 1, Crestwood, Ky.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Just finished reading The Herald and sure enjoy every word of it. I wrote to The Herald about two years ago and through it I gained three pen-pals. I certainly enjoy their letters as well as the many letters I received, which finally dropped back. I am still saved and sanctified, and enjoy working for God. This summer I went to three great revivals. One was at Arpelar, Okla. Rev. C. B. Reed and Rev. W. E. Gifford (my father) did the preaching. There were 105 souls saved, sanctified and reclaimed. Everyone was blessed. There is an organized Nazarene Church there and each service is a blessing to all who attend. The next meeting was at Laura, Okla., in the eastern part of Oklahoma. There were fifty saved, sanctified and reclaimed, of which seventeen were men and boys. Three weeks later the people called us back and there were forty saved and sanctified. There were seventeen sanctified in one service. I certainly enjoyed the summer, working in the service of the Lord. I would be glad if all the cousins would write. I enjoy writing and receiving letters. I am twenty years of age. Since I wrote last I have changed my address from Centrahoma, Okla., to Tupelo, Okla.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a Virginia girl join your happy band of boys and girls? I have brown hair and eyes, dark complexion, my birthday is October 11. I am fourteen years old, five feet and three inches tall. I am in the third grade. Have I a twin? Write to me. I'll answer all letters I receive. As I am taking so much room I will close. I hope Mr. W. B. is out walking when this letter arrives.
Rillar L. Jenkins.
Rt. 2, Stanley, Va.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I am a little girl nine years old. I go to school at Asbury, near Albertville, Ala. There are seven children in our family. I am the oldest girl. I help mother with the house work. We like The Herald and sure like to read it. When we get through with it we give it to our cousin who has a large family. They like to read it. I hope W. B. is asleep. I would like to hear from the cousins.

Mae Belle Machen.
Albertville, Ala.

Dear Aunt Bettie: I want to know if I may join your happy band of boys and girls? I have light complexion, brown hair and brown eyes. I am eight years old. My birthday is Sept. 29. I am in the fourth grade. I have a sister fourteen years old; she is in the ninth grade. I go to Sunday school and church every Sunday that I can. I like to go because I like to learn more about Jesus. I hope to see this letter in print.

Myrle Dee Viles.
Fredonia, Kan.

Dear Aunt Bettie: As I think back over the different letters found on page ten I can only recall one letter from Washington state. I think the boys and girls better get to work and show them that Washington is awake. Bellingham, Wash., has many factories, mills, and also the largest Fish Cannery in the world. I hope the cousins will write to me and tell me about their states. I will answer all letters received. I am in high school, and like it very much. I have a birthday, December 26, 1931. I am five feet, five inches tall. Seeing this is my first letter to The Herald I'd like very much to see it in print.

Elda M. Quall.

Dear Aunt Bettie: This is my first letter to The Herald and it would tickle me pink to have it published. I am fifteen years old, have dark hair and blue eyes. I go to school at Big Rock and study the eighth grade. My home is about two and one-half miles west of the school and I have to walk all the way. My favorite pastime is reading; I like to write stories also. I want lots of folks to write to me. I would enjoy having pen-pals, so come on all of you, write me a great big letter. I will answer them all.

Rubye C. Taylor.
Rt. 2, Big Rock, Tenn.

Dear Aunt Bettie: Will you let a little Danville, Va., girl join your band of cousins? I am eight years old, weighing 67 pounds. I go to school every day and am in the third grade. I want to be a good student. I go with mother and daddy to Sunday school and church, which is Grace Methodist. I have many things to be thankful for that God has blessed me with, as well as health and happiness. Granddaddy, Daddy, and Uncle Berk are stewards in our church, and mother teaches in our Sunday school. God has blessed my soul and I am happy in his service. I read page ten in Granddaddy's Herald. The little cousins' letters I enjoy so much. I trust you may find room for this, my first letter, as I haven't seen any from Danville, Va. I would be glad to hear from some of the little cousins. God bless you and them every day. I am taking music from Aunt Grace and can play Jesus Loves Me, This I Know. I will quit so my letter will not be too long for you to print it.

AT HIS COMING.

In measureless might arisen
For His poor unalmsed, unfed,
For His saints who have perished in prison
And the faithful Abels dead.

He will come at the end of the ages,
As the prophets of God have foretold,
To award to His servants their wages,
And to shepherd the sheep of His fold.

And the armies led by devils
With their legions in battle array,
He will smite with the sorest of evils,
And break as a vessel of clay.

To the house of Israel hated,
Exiled, and bleeding and lone,
He will give, for she long has waited,
The high Davidic throne.

For the symbol of carnage is written
On the full-orbed moon tonight,
And the sun with darkness is smitten
And the stars give forth no light.

And the centuries past, swift speeding
To the Lord of the rolling spheres,
Have told to His ear all-heeding
A story of sorrow and tears.

Of the countless saints who perished
At the stake, in dungeon, by sword,
And the steadfast hope they cherished,
And invincible faith in His word.

Hark! the trumpet of God is calling,
To the saints, "Rouse ye, to the war!"

Smite Babylon! Smite! she is falling, Assemble, ye fowls from afar."

Lo! the powers of heaven are shaken.
In His wrath see the King arise.
All power to Himself He has taken,
And the host of Abaddon dies.

For her sins have reached unto Heaven,
And God hath remembered them all.

Let torment and sorrow be given,
Yea, double her potion of gall.

And the wealth of this proud despoiler
Who reveled in wine and blood,
And mocked at the prayers of the toiler,
Is swept away in the flood.

O sweet Bethlehem story,
O kingdom of love and light,
O Calvary dark and gory,
Thy Victim is Victor tonight.

W. C. Carter.

THE RELIGIOUS LIFE OF GENERAL J. E. B. STUART.

By H. H. Smith.

Jeb Stuart was a great soldier and a devout Christian. General Lee said: "A more zealous, ardent, brave and devoted soldier than Stuart the Confederacy cannot have." Capt. Thomson, of the U. S. Marine Corps, who has written a splendid biography of Stuart, says that Lee said of Stuart,

"the finest thing history records of any cavalry officer: 'He never sent me a piece of false information.'" When we remember that the cavalry is supposed to be the eyes and ears of the army, we see what a great compliment is implied in these brief words. Recording some of his great feats as a cavalry officer, his biographer says of him: "I know of no equal exploit in the cavalry annals."

He loved his men and his men loved him. "He put on no airs, pretence or remoteness of superiority, but treated them as man to man." "He was popular with his officers, and was constantly on the watch to do them kindnesses. . . . He would frolic with them—marbles, snowballs, quoits, what not?—like a boy with boys." And yet he was not lacking in discipline, even his favorites coming in for reproof when it was deserved.

General Stuart was devoted to his family. "His letters to his wife are beautiful, and tender and sad." When his little daughter was ill, and his wife urged him to try to arrange a visit home, he replied: "I must leave my daughter in the hands of God; my duty to the country requires me here."

He was a devoutly religious man. When a boy at Emory and Henry College, he joined the Methodist Church during a revival. Later, when there was no Methodist Church near him, he became a member of the Episcopal Church.

"His religion and his God were a part of his daily life," says his biographer. "Pray for me in the coming struggle," he wrote his brother in 1863; "with me, no moment of the battle has ever been too momentous for prayer." He gave active support to the chaplains, "encouraging them to ride with the cavalry, and giving them aid in the distribution of tracts, and the holding of meetings among the men. His letters, his remembered conversations, and even his official papers make it plain that his religion was an active force in everything he did, and he had a very simple, earnest faith in the wisdom and the goodness of God."

He was as merry as a boy, and they had lively music at the Cavalry Headquarters, with the famous Sweeny and his banjo; and when Sunday came there was music still, but it was sacred music. The great hymns of the Church took the place of the light airs and songs.

He was strictly temperate in his habits—a teetotaler, in fact. General Lee's camp servant said: "General Stuart was de only one uv dem big ginerals whut neveh did tech a drap." When he received his mortal wound at Yellow Tavern, they offered him brandy, but he recalled a promise made to his mother when a boy and refused it.

When death was a matter of but a few hours, he said: "I am resigned if it be God's will; but I would like to see my wife. But God's will be done." He asked that they sing a hymn and they sang, "Rock of Ages." He spoke of the joy of soon seeing his little Flora, who died while he was detained by the duties of the army. The end was rapidly approaching and he said: "I am going fast now . . . God's will be done. . . ."

It has been said that Stuart's best epitaph has been written by a magnanimous opponent (Rodenbough): "Deep in the hearts of all true cavalymen, North and South, will ever burn a sentiment of admiration mingled with regret for this knightly soldier and generous man."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

REV. O. G. MINGLEDORFF, D. D.

Lesson I.—January 3, 1932.

Subject.—The Son of God Becomes Man. John 1:1-18.

Golden Text.—He that hath seen me hath seen the Father. John 14:9.

Time.—B. C. 5 (corrected chronology).

..Time of writing this Gospel.—About A. D. 80 to A. D. 95. Not definitely known.

Place of Writing.—Probably Ephesus.

Introduction.—On December 13, 1931, we studied John's Vision on Patmos. Revelation 1:4-18. In that lesson I gave what I thought necessary concerning the apostle himself; wherefore I shall not repeat now, but confine my introductory remarks to the Gospel which he wrote.

You will discover some similarity between the Gospel by Luke and that by Matthew, in that they both deal with the virgin birth of our Lord and with his genealogy. Mark omits all reference to the human parentage and virgin birth of Jesus, and begins his narrative with the ministry of John the Baptist. Giving it but scant recognition, he tells in few words of the baptism of Jesus and of his being anointed with the Holy Spirit. He merely mentions the fact of John's imprisonment, but hurries on to tell of the work of the Lord Jesus himself. Strange how little they tell, when we wish to know so much.

John had some advantage over the other three evangelists in that they wrote their Gospels several years prior to the time of his writing. It is but natural to suppose that he had read all three of them, perhaps many times. He does not seem to draw much from them, but to supplement them. The fundamental purpose of his sublime composition was the setting forth the doctrine of the Deity of our Lord; but in so doing he brings forth his humanity in its richest characteristics. Only once does he definitely refer to the incarnation: "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us." Nevertheless, the proper humanity of the Lord is ever at the front, along with essential Deity.

John was especially fitted for the task of writing this Gospel. Being a devout Jew by nature brought him into sympathy with all that was best in the religion of his people—and that was much. He became a disciple of Jesus at a very early age, and followed him closely and devoutly until the day of the ascension from Mt. Olivet. He seems to have been especially qualified by nature to be deeply impressed with the wonders of the revelation of Jesus Christ—more so, perhaps, than any other member of the college of apostles. In another particular, though in that regard not different from his fellow-apostles, on the day of Pentecost he had received from his Lord the baptism with the Holy Ghost, thus clarifying his mind and giving him insight into all spiritual truth. In one other matter he was especially fortunate: He had lived to see more than half a century of Christianity; he had witnessed the impact of Jesus Christ upon both Jews and Gentiles; and by both experience and observation he was prepared to properly evaluate the dynamics of the new faith, and to portray the Christ in the fullness of his saving power.

John's argument for the Deity of Jesus Christ is cumulative. It begins in the first verse of the first chapter in the unqualified statement, that "In the beginning the Word, by which he means the Eternal Logos, was with God and was God." As he proceeds in the writing, he rises from tableland to tableland until he finally advances from peak to peak along the mountain heights of God's eternal truth; and the argument grows overwhelming when he portrays the supernatural dominance of Deity over humanity in the resurrection and ascension of our Lord. He caps the climax with the unearthly statement from the lips of Jesus Christ himself that he is coming back to earth for his Church. John believed in the Deity of Jesus Christ. Nor can any sane man doubt that Deity, unless he repudiates the authenticity of the fourth Gospel.

Comments on the Lesson.

1. In the beginning.—That expression is indefinite. No one can fathom its depths. The Word.—It is hardly possible that John understood the full import of the Greek word Logos. Certainly they could find no English word to translate it when our versions were made. It would have been far better not to have translated the word at all, but to have brought it over into English in its Greek form. (See Webster.) The Word was God.—John offers here no argument to prove the Deity of our Lord, but leaves that to be demonstrated by his deeds among men. But the statement as to Deity is clear and definite.

3. All things were made by him.—Creation can be attributed to none but Deity. It may surprise some, as it did me, to note that the only begotten Son was the chief agent of the Godhead in creation, and that he still "upholds all things by the word of his power." "In him all things consist," or stand together.

4. In him was life.—There is no reference here to physical life. All men have that. The reference is that indefinable something that comes into the soul of man when he is begotten of the Holy Ghost.

5. The light shineth in darkness.—Light here means Christ himself turning the powers of redemption into the sin-cursed blackness of men; but men did not understand him, because of the hardness of their hearts.

6. A man sent from God, whose name was John.—John the Baptist.

7. Come for a witness.—The sole business of the mission of John the Baptist was to testify concerning the coming Christ. It made no difference as to the manner of the work, its one aim was to set forth the coming One.

9. That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.—My old college president used to say that all the moral light in the world, even the moral codes among the heathen, was a reflection from Jesus Christ, and that we should have due respect for all truth no matter where found. "I rather suspect he was correct.

10. The world knew him not.—Mark the different senses in which world is here used. In the clause just quoted it means the men in the world.

11. He came unto his own.—The Jews, his chosen people.

12. As many as received him.—Let it be forever understood that no one is saved who does not personally receive Christ by faith. Some of the brethren have been very busy escorting the late Mr. Edison into heaven; but their work amounts to nothing. We all appreciate what Mr. Eddison did for the world; but if he is in heaven, he went in through faith in the shed blood of our Redeemer. Men are not saved by good works. Power to become the sons of God.—The word power, as here used means right or authority—privilege. The Revised Version says children of God, which is more in accord with the original.

13. Which were born.....of God.—This verse gives the deathblow to all human schemes for saving men otherwise than through the New Birth. "Ye must be born again" will stand true forever. There can be no blue-blooded, or educational route to glory. The road leads by way of the cross.

14. The word was made flesh.—I fear that our best explanations will turn no extra light on those words. If one may use some of the words of Bishop W. A. Candler, I recently heard Bishop John M. Moore "make an assault with attempt to preach" from this fourteenth verse; but it was "confusion worse confounded." No man can explain the metaphysics of the dual nature of Jesus Christ. When we state that he is the God-man—very God and very man—with a single personality, we have done our best, and maybe a little more than our best. Dwelt among us.—Tabernacled, as a visitor spending the night.

15. John bare witness....he was before me.—John was rising to sublime heights. He seems to have caught some vision of the eternal nature of our Lord. The day was dawning.

17. Grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.—God could give law through Moses; but he must deliver grace and truth by his only begotten Son. The matter was too sacred to be entrusted to a human mediator.

18. Read the verse. The oldest and best Greek has God in place of Son. With that substitution the verse speaks both the Sonship and the Deity of our Lord. For that reason I like the change.

THE RESURRECTION LIFE.

L. N. Cooper.

I know that now when leaves begin to fall,

And branch and bough stir russet on the hill,

That life with me as with us one and all,

Will soon be o'er and voice and pen shall be forever still.

And then I know that from yon casement old,

Where vine and other creeping thing sway listless in the air,

That I like them to dust shall shortly mold,

And in the tomb with them be mingled there.

Father of lights, to Thee in confidence I go,

And far beyond the star and earth and sea,

There comes a voice and this I know,

Which tells of resurrection life for leaf and bough and vine and me.

Dr. M. P. Hunt has published a volume of thoroughly practical and helpful sermons, with the title of "Paul's Superlative." I have found the volume quite interesting and stimulating. Those of us who know Dr. Hunt intimately seem to see him and hear him as we read these sermons.

It gives me pleasure to commend them as well worthy of a place in the library of both ministers and laymen.

CHRISTMAS INVOLVEMENTS.

Thomas Clark Henderson.

What is the meaning of Christmas? The Christian centuries have been pondering an answer to that question. It is quite probable that we never shall know all that is involved in the coming of the Son of God into human nature. It was an event of infinite involvements, and finite minds may not compass it all. However, nothing but good can come from a fresh consideration of the meaning of the event at Bethlehem in the long ago. One thing that Christmas proves is that God Is in History.

Not merely that the event is historic, but more, that historic event is evidence that God keeps his word with men and makes history serve his redemptive purposes. God had bound himself with a promise—He would send a Redeemer. That promise was repeatedly made to men; and in due time—right on time—God fulfilled his word with man and made history. That is an involvement of Christmas. We may boldly believe that God is still making history. He is still on the throne of all time and the passing days and years are still serving his redemptive purposes. He still interposes at the right time and holds the tides of time in his hand. That should comfort us. The God of Christmas is the God of today. He has not forgotten his world, nor his word, nor his workers. Another thing which is inseparable from the Christmas event is that of the ### Incarnation of the Son of God in Human Flesh.

God the Son came so near to us that he became our brother. Not God the Father, not God the Spirit, but God the Son became partaker of our common nature and thus bridged the distance between Deity and humanity. Job's longing for a "Daysman, who might lay his hand on us both," was made actual on that Christmas morning in the distant past. When Mary's babe was born there was not a new personality created, but a Divine person, who had always been, entered into and limited himself to the boundaries of living, developing human nature. God the Son came out of the Absolute, and out of the distance, and out of the mysteries of eternity, and made his home so near to us that we can know him as our Brother—God. The inborn longing for the heights—the heights of fellowship with the Father, for which fellowship we were made, can now be realized; not by the evolving of innate qualities or powers, but through him who was very God, but who stooped down to our place and made our redemption the supreme purpose of his life and death. Amazing truth! What a Christmas involvement that is! We celebrate the mystery, but the grand reality of God the Son taking on himself our flesh in order that he might suffer and die for our offenses and be raised again for our justification. "God with us" is a great reality, and Christmas brings that truth afresh to our hearts with clear accent. A third involvement of Christmas is that of the earthly and human and familiar Associations of This Event of Events.

Names are mentioned which are the names of the most ordinary and natural persons. Persons and places and scenes are recorded in connection with that first Christmas that are as historical as any fact could be. The name of the village is beyond question as to its existence; the time of the year, and the season are incontrovertible; the shepherds were real men and acted true to type; the occasion for Joseph and Mary being in Bethlehem is absolutely true. The cow-stable was lowly, but is a fitting part of the story. Christianity is not ashamed nor afraid of its historicity and its human-side origins. The incarnation was an amazing miracle, but its lowly and natural connections are so true to history and so probable as to make it easy to believe in the amazing miracle of which they were the earthly shell. Reality and honesty are evident in all the story. The picture does not distort our sense of the fitness of things. That mysterious Baby was human nature indwelt by the Son of God, but he was so human, and all connected with him so truly earthly that there is no great strain placed on our faith to believe the testimony of those who told us what they knew of the event. Yet another involvement of Christmas is that the Supernatural and the Miraculous abode only a short distance from the natural and the ordinary. That star, the angels, that child without a human father—how can we think of the event of Christmas without recognizing the Supernatural and the Divine in it? Christmas is boldly saying that Christianity is religion with God in it. Yes, God incarnate in human flesh, but in addition the event of the first Christmas was of such importance with God that the Infinite bursts into the finite, the heavenly mingles with the earthly, the Supernatural clothes the natural, and the ineffable companions with the ordinary and common. The Supernatural is not far from the natural—that is one of the inevitable ideas in the meaning of Christmas. God can and does tear aside the veil that separates the temporal from the eternal and lets human eyes see Deity at work, lets human ears hear heavenly music, lets human hearts be comforted by the evidence that the unseen, but friendly Supernatural, is very close at hand. Blessed and comforting truth of the Christmas event.

There are many more wonderful involvements of Christmas, but these four will suffice for this meditation.

CHRISTMAS.

By Rev. W. M. Zimmerman.

Christmas time has come again,
Bringing joy to all the world.

Flags at half-mast express sorrow;
O may they now be unfurled!

Joy to the world! the Lord is come;
Let choirs and congregations sing;
Christ the Lord was born today,
O crown Him your own "King of kings."

We hope snow will cover the earth
With a mantle of purest white;
An emblem of grace divine
In all who will be made right.

The Christmas tree that is so green,
Sparkling in all its decoration;
A memorial of his great Advent
Celebrated today by every nation.

Santa Claus, so the children hope,
Will surpass all their expectation.
Stockings will be hung by the fire-side;
Great indeed their childish anticipation.

Gifts will be exchanged among friends—
Cards of remembrance will be sent.
Miles of distance will be bridged—
Happiness will make many content.

O little town of Bethlehem
What honor has come to you!
The Virgin and her holy child,
A picture so pure and so true.

The Prince of Peace was born today—
He preached the "Sermon on the Mount."

Let every nation be at peace
For sin He is the world's true fount.

Many years have passed away
Since we had our first Christmas,
More precious does each one become
Though we may write it Xmas.

The "Season's Greeting" we send to all—
Merry Christmas! is heard everywhere;

When the world's celebration is held
May joy be in the very air.

Scrooge, the miser, had a change of heart;
Christmas became an opportunity to give,

Before this he only existed,
He now in truth began to live.

Some celebrate by getting drunk;
Shun booze as a falling ladder.

For it biteth like a serpent
And its sting is like an adder.

"One ship sails East and one sails West
While the selfsame breezes blow,
It's the set of the sail and not the gale
That bids them where to go."

Adam Clarke---Great Commentary

Dr. Clarke was one of a long succession of men who, in every age of the Christian Church, have applied the best energies of their intellect and heart to the study and interpretation of the Scriptures. The seven gifts which, according to Augustine, the true expositor of Scripture must possess—reverence, piety, science, fortitude, prudence, cleanness of heart, and heavenly wisdom—were his portions.

The studies of his earlier years always had a bearing on this great work. From the beginning he felt the need of being taught by God to understand his own word. Referring to this, he says: "No man ever taught me the doctrine I embrace; I received it singly by reading the Bible."

Sufficiently critical to aid the inquiries of the more serious student, and yet sufficiently popular to serve the purpose of general edification. He gives a lucid view of the several books of Scripture, as to their dates and authors, their scope and connection; he expounds the original text in a manner adapted to the deficiencies of the reader; he elucidates difficulties in chronology, history, and oriental manners; he develops the grand doctrines of revelation, and applies the whole to the great concerns of human salvation and duty.

One leading feature in its character is independence in thinking. While he availed himself of the labors of others, the great number of his expositions are emphatically his own.

DR. ADAM CLARKE'S COMMENTARY ON THE BIBLE

is one of the noblest works of the class in the entire domain of sacred literature. It is a thesaurus of general learning.

Its luminous expositions of the Law and the Gospel; its earnest and forceful appeals to the conscience of the sinner and the unbeliever; its rich counsels for the well-understood wants of the Christian's inner life; its endless exhibitions of general knowledge; and its valuable aids to the students of those holy tongues in which revelation took its first recorded forms—all will render this book the companion and the counselor of multitudes as long as the English language may endure. The man who accomplished it achieved immortality, his name having become identified with an indestructible monument of learning and religion.

We commend it as the most spiritual commentary published. Six large volumes, good paper, good binding, new type.

BY E. STANLEY JONES

In this volume Dr. Jones interprets the Sermon on the Mount. Having written so vividly on the inner life, this most famous of religious writers has felt constrained to apply the Christian gospel to the difficult and disturbing conditions obtaining today. It has often been charged that the imperishable mountainside discourses of Jesus are superb ethical precepts, but impracticable idealism. Doctor Jones insists the Sermon on the Mount can be and should be applied to the actual everyday living of the Christian. Price, net, $1.50, postpaid.
